Interest in SACROC...

Chevron announcement expected Monday

With bids opened Friday, Chevron is expected to make public Monday the operational future of Scurry County's largest producing field, the SACROC unit.

Terry Hurst, acting SACROC superintendent, said Friday that Chevron officials in Midland were to open bids for purchase of Chevron's interest in the unit. If the company's 20.84 percent interest in the unit is sold, Chevron will resign as unit operator.

Friday was also the deadline for a company-wide employee reduction program to begin. Chevron recently announced that it would cut back the firm's labor force by 28 percent, representing about 8,100 employees.

Some Chevron employees of the SACROC unit were offered early retirement packages, and those employees had until Friday to indicate if they would accept the offer. Friday was also the beginning of a company-wide phased layoff which would also impact SACROC workers.

The company restructuring comes some eight months after Chevron announced that Chevron's interest would be put on the market. The SACROC unit employs about 95 persons with average daily production of some 20,000 barrels of oil per day.

Also in limbo is the future of the Oryx Gas Plant. Oryx, with some 65 local employees, announced on Oct. 3 plans to divest of certain assets, including two gas processing plants and its 27.1 percent interest in the SACROC unit.

Oryx has also been accepting bids, and some prospective buyers have been on inspection tours of both the Oryx plant and the Diamond M plant.

Southwest Royalties announced on Friday that it had purchased the stock of Deminex U.S. Oil company, affecting producing properties in the Dunn and Ira areas, as well as the northern part of Mitchell County.

The transaction is believed to include more than 700 producing wells in Scurry and Mitchell counties, and a field force of some 20 employees. Last month, Anadarko announced a tentative agreement to purchase assets of Calley and Fowler, another independent oil producer south of Snyder.

Other major oil companies with interest in or near Scurry County have also announced work force reductions — including Mobil, Texaco, Exxon and Union Oil of California.

WTC branches out with nurse training

Western Texas College will begin a new extension center to provide advanced nursing training for staffers at Stamford Memorial Hospital.

Local college officials said the effort is due to the hard work from several Stamford citizens.

"We just encountered a real supportive atmosphere for the classes," said John Gibson, new director of the Continuing Education Division at WTC.

The impetus for the plan began at the request of Charlotte Arendall, an LVN at Stamford Memorial. She was put in touch with Gibson, who in turn talked with Paula Bennett, RN, and hospital CEO Ron Hopkins.

Bennett coordinated a meeting with the nursing staff to determine the need and interest in the classes.

"We were overwhelmed by the response," said Gibson, who noted the college was quickly in contact with more than 30 individuals interested in taking the advanced training.

Once the need for the class was determined, finding a location for classroom instruction was the next step. WTC officials were referred to Stamford ISD Superintendent Robert Damron, who approved the use of a high school classroom.

The classes offered this summer will be nutrition and diet therapy, and general psychology. Instructors will be WTC professors Mike Otto, teaching the nutrition class, and Dr. Gil Fleer, psychology-sociology professor.

Registration is Monday from 6:30-8 p.m. at the Stamford High School science building.

The first classes are set to start June 2. Two more classes will follow in the fall and spring.

Ira sacks playoff spot

WESTBROOK — The Ira Bulldogs moved into the Class A baseball playoffs with a 14-12 District 3-A victory over Westbrook Friday on the Wildcats' home diamond.

"It was a great game," Ira coach Lynn Cauley said. "These guys really did a good job. I just can't say enough about them.

"They've played hard all season and to be in the playoffs the first season they've played baseball is really more than we could have hoped for."

Ira, 9-5, 4-2, will meet Baird in their upcoming Class A bi-district battle. The game's site and time have yet to be decided.

Guide to historical markers is available

A guide for a walking tour of the historical markers on and near the courthouse square is available through a project of the Scurry County Historical Commission.

The brochure lists 21 markers on the square or in easy walking distance of the square. The markers call attention to various phases of the county's history.

The days when Scurry County was prime buffalo hunting territory are noted on the J. Wright Mooar marker near the white buffalo statue on the corner of the square. The First State Bank marker across the street to the west is a reminder of the business community that developed in later years.

A marker for the O.K. Wagon Yard, which served as a meeting place and trading ground when agriculture was the county's major industry, is located near the post office. A brief history of the Canyon Reef oil field is recounted in a marker on the west side of the courthouse.

There is also a listing of other markers in Snyder which can be seen on a longer walking or driving tour.

Copies of the pamphlet, titled "Around the Square," are available at the chamber of commerce office, the Scurry County Museum, and are free.

CPS salary request, park fee among county agenda items

Scurry County commissioners are to consider final decisions on the partial funding of a Children's Protective Services caseworker and fees for Winston Park at a 10 a.m. Monday meeting.

During an April 20 meeting of the court, Shalane Wesley of Children's Protective Services (CPS) asked the county to provide $15,000 to cover half of the $20,000 annual salary, retirement plan and other benefits for a caseworker. The state would provide the other half.

According to Wesley, the caseworker would work full time in Scurry County, but would be required to be on call once every five weeks for the other five counties served by CPS. The caseworker would be hired in September.

The court is expected to make a decision on a request by Snyder Men's Softball League President Chris Maxfield concerning a proposed $250 fee for weekend tournaments at Winston Park.

According to Maxfield, there has been no charge for tournaments up to now. He expressed concern that teams may stop holding tournaments at the local park if the fee is not set at a reasonable rate.

Commissioners tabled the matter at their May 4 meeting to study costs of upkeep on the park.

The court will consider a request from RUWCQ, an out-of-town survey company, to perform a seismographic survey in Towle Park.

Commissioners will accept the resignation of William C. Davies as a member of the Scurry County Area Foundation Board, and consider appointment of an additional member to the child welfare board.

Several budget amendments and line-item transfers face the court Monday.

Commissioners will consider a budget amendment of $11,000 for the child welfare department to cover expenses no longer refunded by the state.

Other budget amendments will include $13,000 to repair and replace water lines in Hermleigh,

Deleon trial set to begin

Jury selection begins at 9 a.m. Monday in 132nd District Court in the aggravated assault trial of 34-year-old Antonio Deleon.

Deleon, of 1409½ Ave. M, is charged with the Jan. 5 assault of 31-year-old Frances Medrano Silva.

At 7:40 p.m. on Jan. 5, police were called to the Ave. M residence by a woman who said her aunt had been assaulted with a knife.

According to police reports, a confrontation had occurred between Deleon and Silva, who is his sister-in-law. During the confrontation, Deleon allegedly assaulted the woman with a knife.

Silva was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by Snyder EMS where she was treated for a superficial cut to the neck. She was later released from the hospital.

District Attorney Ernie Armstrong is prosecuting the case. Deleon is represented by attorney Mike Brown.

Missing executive's wife issues appeal

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A new message from people claiming to hold a missing top Exxon executive led to another televised plea from his wife, who said she would do whatever is needed to have him returned.

"I'm making a personal appeal to some people who I want to believe have my husband with them," Patricia Reso said. "I want you to know that I have received your message."

Sources close to the investigation said a one-page note was found taped to a light pole in the parking lot of the Rockaway Townsquare mall after a telephone call to mall security officials tipped them off Friday afternoon.

The note, from a group claiming to have kidnapped Sidney Reso, president of Exxon Co. International, was the first communication from the supposed kidnappers in more than a week.

A source said the message appeared to have come from the same source as at least two other messages received in the first three days since Reso disappeared after leaving for work the morning of April 29. His car was found idling in the driveway of the couple's Morris Township home. Authorities have said they have been unable to determine whether he was kidnapped.

"I know in my heart that he is alive," Mrs. Reso said in her statement. "I pray that he is healthy."

"It is so important to me that my kids and I have assurance that he is safe and unharmed," she continued. "I am willing to do whatever is necessary to have him reunited with us. And I hope that he will be released very soon."

A source speaking on condition of anonymity said it was believed the latest message included instructions that Mrs. Reso make such a statement.

Authorities said that lacking hard evidence, they remain unconvinced that the note's author is holding Reso. Authorities said they have not received a photograph of Reso or a tape recording of his voice, which they requested more than a week ago as proof that Reso is being held.

A videotape of Mrs. Reso reading the statement was broadcast on WWOR-TV Friday night and made available to other television stations. The station said the Morris County prosecutor's office had contacted the station and asked that the statement be broadcast.

"Apparently she received a message, and her statement is in response to that message," said Exxon spokesman Jim Riley.

WWOR-TV said sources described ways Mrs. Reso could be assured that her husband is alive: A telephone call or a note from Reso in which he refers to a current event, or a photograph showing him with a current newspaper.

"I am asking the news media to stop any speculation as to who you may be and what your goals are," Mrs. Reso said. "I simply want my husband back with our family."

After Reso disappeared, a group calling itself "Rainbow Warriors" contacted Exxon and authorities about a ransom.

Judge Nowlin reprimanded about redistricting lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' redistricting battle between Republicans and Democrats has reawakened.

On Friday, U.S. District Judge James A. Nowlin, who ordered a controversial state Senate redistricting plan for this year's elections, was reprimanded by a panel of federal judges.

"It is imperative that Judge Nowlin exercise greater care in such matters in the future and he is so directed," said the order signed by Chief Judge Henry A. Politz of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said, "We are pleased that the federal judiciary has undertaken the painful task of cleaning their own house.

"We are saddened, however, that the panel finds what we have contended all along: That there has been an injustice in the process of redistricting with the people of Texas as victims."

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said, "This is a very sad situation because it confirms exactly what Attorney General Morales alleged all along. It's too bad for the voters the ruling couldn't have come at an earlier time.

"I am certain this ruling will have a large impact on further consideration of the court's interim plan," Bullock added.

"Texas voters have every right to be angry about voting in state Senate districts that were drawn by a federally-appointed judge who, in all likelihood, should have recused himself from the proceedings," he said.

Nowlin also was admonished for actions inconsistent with the code of conduct for federal judges and that "are deemed prejudicial to the effective administration of the business of the courts," Politz's order said.

In a separate action, a three-judge panel of the 5th Circuit asked the U.S. Supreme Court to decide which of the two courts should decide a bid by Democratic Party leaders to have Nowlin dismissed from the redistricting case.

The question remains, however, how this will affect the primaries that were held March 10 and future elections.

Assistant Attorney General Renea Hicks said he simply didn't know.

United States scales back plan to charge duty on lumber

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department is scaling back its proposal to tax imports of Canadian softwood lumber, but Canadian officials say they still intend to fight the duty designed to help U.S. wood manufacturers.

U.S. officials said Friday that a 6.5 percent tariff is needed to offset government timber subsidies in Canada, according to department spokeswoman Cheryl Crispen.

The issue returns to the U.S. International Trade Commission, which has 60 days to review the case before recommending final action to Commerce Secretary Barbara Franklin in July.

In preliminary action in March, officials set a 14.5 percent duty to put U.S. producers on equal footing with their competitors north of the border. The United States initiated the process last year at the request of American manufacturers who say the Canadians are undercutting their lumber prices.

"We feel vindicated," said Kip Howlett, chairman of the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports representing U.S. timber producers. "Even at 6.5 percent the Canadian lumber producer in a commodity market receives a substantial benefit."

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has warned that failure to retaliate against the alleged Canadian subsidies could cost the United States 15,000 jobs and $600 million in annual sales.

"If the steps taken today by the Commerce Department are intended to stop Canada from flooding our markets with cheap, subsidized lumber, they won't even leave footprints," said Rep. Rod Chandler, R-Wash.

Michael Wilson, Canada's trade minister, said his country would appeal Friday's decision under the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement.

San Francisco police chief fired over gay publication

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police Chief Richard Hongisto was fired Friday for allegedly instigating the removal of more than 2,000 copies of a gay newspaper from street racks after the newspaper ridiculed him.

The unanimous decision by the five-member Police Commission was a political embarrassment to Mayor Frank Jordan, who has weathered criticism across the city's political spectrum for several key appointments, including Hongisto's, since taking office in January.

"I think that Chief Dick Hongisto has made a positive impact on the police department of San Francisco. But I cannot condone what happened in this particular incident," Jordan said at a news conference Friday.

Hongisto was accused of suggesting to a subordinate that copies of the current issue of the free, twice-monthly Bay Times be removed from news racks.

The issue features a doctored cover photo of Hongisto holding a police baton in a lewd manner. The accompanying headline reads: "Dick's Cool New Tool: Martial Law."

Hongisto had ordered mass arrests during May 1 and May 8 sweeps of areas where demonstrators had gathered to protest the acquittal of most charges against four white Los Angeles policemen in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King.

The commission heard from Hongisto, police investigators and Officer Gary Delagnes, one of three vice officers who allegedly took 2,100 copies of the paper from its racks May 8.

THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE
By Homer Anderson

The Apostle Paul, in writing to a young minister, said, "Timothy, avoid oppositions of science falsely so called" (1 Timothy 6:20). Thus, Paul warned Timothy and all Christians who would follow that a falsely named science would oppose the will of God. Thousands, if not millions, of people have been led to believe that there is a contradiction between science and the Bible. Actually, there is no known scientific fact that contradicts the Word of God. The same cannot be said for theories. Theories change as scientists probe deeper into the mysteries of our world; the facts of science and the facts of the Bible have never changed. Truth is not opposed to truth, wherever it is found!

For example: The Encyclopedia Britannica lists twenty-three different theories of evolution. Obviously, not all of these can be right. As a matter of fact, if one of them is right, then twenty-two of them have to be wrong. Confusion of this kind is simply not a part of God or the Book He caused to be written.

Financial Focus

One of the most significant investment advances during the 1990's will probably occur in the global market. The international mutual-fund industry already exceeds $2.5 trillion. One of the most important aspects of this growth has been the issue of safety.

David Silver, president of the Investment Company Institute, the industry's national association, recently addressed the primary regulatory issues that apply to mutual funds offered to the public. Although most countries seek to address the same investor-protection concerns, they often conflict in their approach to regulation.

Silver identified seven principles to consider in any crossborder mutual fund transaction:

1. Prohibition of various forms of self-dealing or affiliated-party transactions.
2. Economic regulation of charges made to the fund.
3. Requiring a simple capital structure, preferably with one class of stock.
4. Disclosure of a fund's investment policies with a mechanism to give shareholders a voice in any material change.
5. Safeguarding a fund's assets against theft or misappropriation.
6. Valuation, issuance and redemption of shares or units.
7. Availability of material information to new investors.

These seven investor-protection concerns already protect U.S. investors. It is assumed they will automatically extend to the world markets, but this is not necessarily so. Progress in crossborder sales of mutual funds has lagged far behind similar efforts in banking, insurance and the primary and secondary securities markets.

One of the major reasons for U.S. investor confidence in the mutual-fund industry is the strict, protective securities regulations. If that same protection is not extended to the world markets, it will be investors who are ultimately hurt.

Silver dramatically pleaded the case of the industry before the International Organization of Securities Commissions. The complete text of Silver's remarks is available upon request from the Investment Company Institute, 1600 M Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036. It is an important question that should concern every mutual-fund shareholder.

Faculty report: Texas A&M lags in minority recruitment

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A report from faculty members at Texas A&M says the school lags behind other state universities in its recruitment of minority students and teachers.

The faculty senate study also says percentages of minorities at the school are far below the state's ethnic demographics despite efforts a decade ago to improve minority representation.

"The administration has its heart in the right place, but it needs to be challenged to make the extra effort," said Larry Hickman, chairman of the standing faculty committee that produced the report.

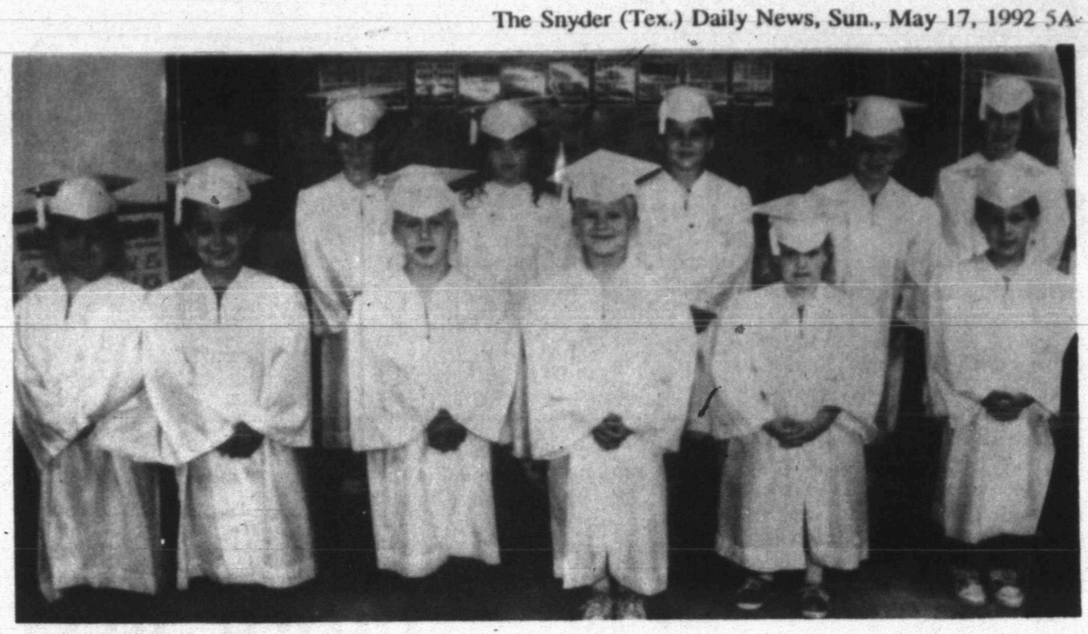

"Perceptions that A&M isn't welcoming to minorities die hard."

The report recommends that the school, which now spends $5.5 million on minority recruitment and retention, increase that expenditure by $2.2 million.

"The university would be penny-wise and pound-foolish if it cuts minority funding," Hickman said. "The exodus of so many black students these days to historically black schools shows how many are finding the so-called white schools hostile."

Faculty members also say A&M has implemented only 12 of 32 recommendations made a decade ago by a committee commissioned by former President Frank Vandiver.

Some university administrators agreed with the new study, but added that the school already is making rigorous efforts to recruit minorities.

Gifted students are invited to TIP event

Local gifted students, Troy Allen, Ryan Landes and Robert Nitsch, Snyder Junior High students have been invited to a recognition ceremony on June 15 at TCU in Fort Worth.

They received this invitation due to their academic achievement as seventh graders by the Duke University Talent Identification Program (TIP).

All students attending the ceremony scored as well or better than the average college-bound high school senior on either the Scholastic Aptiture Test (SAT) or the American College Testing assessment (ACT). These tests are administered as part of an annual Talent Search, which TIP has operated since 1980.

"Exceptional academic talent is a precious national resource that is often undervalued or ignored in our society," said TIP's executive director Dr. David Goldstein." For many outstanding young people, recognition from TIP is an important source of support and encouragement for their efforts."

TIP conducts recognition ceremonies in a 16-state region across the Southeast, Midwest, and Southwest. These ceremonies are the largest of their kind in the world with nearly 25,000 people attending in 1991.

Over 60,000 mathematically and verbally gifted seventh graders were identified by the Talent Search this year. As a benefit of their participation, TIP offers students a variety of educational materials and publications.

TIP is a nonprofit, educational organization. The program receives support from student fees and donations from individuals, corporations and foundations.

Jail guard resigns over drug incident

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland says he doubts a jail guard's story that he was pressured by threats from the Mexican Mafia to smuggle drugs to prisoners.

"These are people who are suppose to be working for us and not against us," Copeland said. "I do not buy his story. When you raise your hand, pin on a badge and put on a gun, that's it."

Copeland said the guard failed a polygraph test before admitting that he brought in the drugs.

Charges are pending against the guard, who resigned after admitting that he was responsible for the drugs found last Sunday on inmates who overdosed.

The 26-year-old guard, who had worked at the jail for three years, was identified in some television reports. The man said he feared for his life.

"It's dangerous to do," he said. "It's my life. Don't you think that it's my life?"

The Mexican Mafia is a violent prison and street gang that, along with other groups, controls the drug trade in prisons in the Southwest, officials said.

Texas politicians have always been a little different from those of other states. Governor W. 'Dogs grab playoff spot with 14-12 win

WESTBROOK — The Ira Bulldogs claimed the final District 3-A baseball playoff berth Friday with a 14-12 win over Westbrook on the Wildcats' home diamond.

"It was a great game," bubbled Ira coach Lynn Cauley. "These guys really did a good job. I just can't say enough about them.

"They've played hard all season and to be in the playoffs the first season they've played baseball is really more than we could have hoped for."

The Bulldogs scored six runs in the top of the seventh inning and held off a last-ditch Westbrook rally to take the win.

Junior Mike Hughes was Ira's big stick Friday, landing two opposite field two-run homers, one coming in the decisive seventh frame, on a two-for three night.

Senior Chris Haynes went two-for-four for the 'Dogs with a double and three runs scored. Younger brother Toby Haynes had two runs batted in and four stolen bases to cap a one-for-two game.

Junior Jason Hartley took the win, going 6 2-3 innings, scattering seven hits and striking out nine. Wyatt Webster came on for the final out to earn the save.

Left fielder Toby Haynes should have gotten partial credit for the save, according to Cauley, for his catch of a falling line drive for the game's final out.

"It was a great catch," said Cauley. "He made an incredible catch. The bases were loaded and if that ball had hit the ground they'd have at least tied the game.

"It was a real clutch situation.

"Our outfielders did an outstanding job Friday," Cauley continued. "They were backing up throws and cutting off the gaps and keeping guys to one base all night long."

Haynes played left, Ronal White was in center and Travis Goswick lined up in right for the Bulldogs against WHS.

Ira will battle Baird in their upcoming Class A bi-district battle.

Ponies down Steers in nine

Sophomore Terry Clemmer blasted a triple into the right field corner in Moffett Field Friday to drive in the go-ahead run as Sweetwater claimed a 5-3 win over Big Spring in a one-game playoff to decide the District 3-4A baseball championship.

"Terry's hit was a big one," said Sweetwater coach Bart Pursley.

"The whole team really showed a lot of character. They stayed in the game and they never gave up," he added.

Sweetwater took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Clemmer walked, stole second and was driven in on a Stuart Houston single.

Houston scored on consecutive singles by James Moore and Phil Haney.

Big Spring narrowed the gap to 2-1 in the fourth when Gerald Cobos, who walked aboard, came around on an error and an RBI single by Mike Ross.

The Steers tied the game at 2-all in the fifth when Cobos singled in Brandon Rodgers, who had doubled one batter before.

Clemmer's triple broke the tie in the top of the ninth. The Sweetwater sophomore, who was also the winning pitcher, scored on an error to Big Spring shortstop Sammy Gonzales.

Sweetwater's final run came when Houston scooted in from third on an error charged to Steer catcher Mike Oliva.

Big Spring scored one more in the last of the inning and had Abel Hilario on third base when Cobos grounded out to end the game.

Clemmer, who tossed the last 2 1-3 innings for the Mustangs took the win fanning five, walking two and giving up two hits in relief of starter Toby Stephens.

The Mustangs, now 15-6-1, will battle Lamesa in the area round of the Class 4A playoffs. The time and site have yet to be announced.

Lamesa, District 2 runner-up, claimed a spot in the area round by beating District 1 champion Dumas Friday, 6-4.

Big Spring, 12-14-1, will move into the playoffs as the District 3 runner-up, and will take on District 2 champ Frenship, an 8-2 winner over Canyon Randall Thursday in bi-district competition.

Cardinals top Houston, 7-5

HOUSTON (AP) — Felix Jose's go-ahead two-run homer off reliever Doug Jones sparked a four-run ninth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Houston Astros 7-5 Friday night for their sixth straight victory.

Jeff Bagwell, who hit a three-run homer in the third, had given the Astros a 4-3 lead with a run-scoring double in the eighth off Cris Carpenter.

Ozzie Smith led off the ninth with a single and Jose followed with a homer to right field off Jones (2-2). Brian Jordan added an RBI triple in the ninth and scored on Todd Zeile's single.

Bob McClure (1-0) pitched one-third of an inning for the victory and Lee Smith got the last three outs for his 13th save in 15 opportunities. Jones is 8 of 11 in save situations.

Driver killed in Indy qualifying

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie Jovy Marcelo of the Philippines was killed in a crash during practice Friday, the first driver in 10 years to die at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Marcelo, one of more than a dozen drivers trying to find enough speed to qualify for the Indianapolis 500, sustained head and chest injuries and was pronounced dead at 4:35 p.m. EST after being taken by ambulance to Methodist Hospital.

The accident occurred as Marcelo was accelerating after a warmup lap at 172.328 mph. He spun driving into Turn 1 on the 21/2-mile oval and smashed into the wall.

The 27-year-old driver didn't regain consciousness.

He is the first driver fatality at Indy since Gordon Smiley was killed instantly in a crash during qualifying in 1982. A spectator was killed by a flying tire during the 1987 race.

Marcelo is the 40th driver and 65th person to die from injuries sustained at the speedway since it opened in 1909.

Forces 7th game...

Bird leads Boston past Cavs

BOSTON (AP) — Thanks to Larry Bird, who let his on-court activities speak for him, the Boston Celtics got what they wanted, a seventh game against the Cleveland Cavaliers in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

With Bird scoring 16 points and 14 assists in 37 minutes, the Celtics beat Cleveland 122-91 on Friday night to force a decisive game at Richfield Coliseum Sunday afternoon.

"I wouldn't want anybody else in a big game than Larry Bird," said coach Chris Ford, one of many who spoke for Bird, who left Boston Garden without comment.

Bird, making his first start since April 3, had 10 assists by halftime, including four passes that led to Robert Parish's 8 points, helping Boston to a 34-22 lead after the first quarter.

"Larry has the great ability to pass the ball, and he got the Chief into the game early," said Kevin McHale, whose 16 points in the second quarter helped Boston to a 62-53 halftime lead.

Boston continued to build on the lead in the second half, pushing it as high as 35 points late in the game.

Getting to Game 7 is familiar territory for Bird, McHale and Parish, who have helped put the last three of 16 NBA championship banners into the Boston Garden rafters. Over the history of the franchise, the Celtics are 17-3 when they play a seventh game, including 3-1 on the road.

"I've been in a lot of do or die situations in my career," said McHale, who wound up with 22 points. "We're not ready to die. We're not ready to go home for the summer."

The only other Game 7 played by the Cavaliers was in 1976, a first-round victory over Washington. Cleveland then lost to the Celtics in the Eastern Conference finals. But most of Cleveland's current roster was playing in elementary or high school.

"We've done a lot of Game 5s in the first round, but this will be our first Game 7" as a team, said Mark Price, who had 14 points and five assists.

John Williams, who led Cleveland with 18 points, said he expected Sunday to be "a dogfight again.

"We know that if we lose, we go home, and if they lose, they go home," said Williams, the only player on Cleveland's front line who was close to his playoff average of 14 points.

Chalk it up to Boston's renewed defense, which limited the Cavaliers to 38.8 percent shooting, well off the 53-percent of the first five games.

"Our big guys did a good job clogging the middle. We did everything right," said Reggie Lewis, who led Boston with 26 points, including 10 each in the first and third quarters.

Boston's defense limited Brad Daugherty, who had 28 points in Cleveland's 114-98 win Wednesday night, to 11 in Game 6. Larry Nance, whose shooting hurt the Celtics badly in Games 4 and 5, was limited to 6 points.

"Their whole team played well defensively," said Craig Ehlo, who had 13 points, 11 in the first half. "When one guy plays D well, it rubs off and the others do it. They shot very well as well and they stopped us."

The Celtics-Cavaliers series has not featured the same physical play displayed in the other Eastern Conference semifinal between Chicago and New York, which is also headed for a seventh game on Sunday.

Stubbs homer beats Rangers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Franklin Stubbs, battling a 2-for-30 slump, hit the first grand slam of his career Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Texas Rangers 7-3 in 10 innings.

Robin Yount opened the 10th with a double off Jeff Robinson (4-3). Greg Vaughn followed with a broken-bat single and took second on left fielder John Cangelosi's throwing error.

Dante Bichette was walked intentionally and Kenny Rogers relieved and struck out Kevin Seitzer. On the next pitch, he allowed Stubbs' fourth home run of the season.

Darren Holmes (1-1) relieved with runners on first and second in the top of the inning and struck out Dean Palmer for the victory.

Texas starter Jose Guzman gave up two runs and 10 hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out six and walked two. Milwaukee starter Chris Bosio allowed three runs and nine hits in eight innings, struck out four and walked one.

Byron Nelson Classic...

Kite manages one shot lead

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The storm that washed out most of the first round and disrupted the Byron Nelson Classic turned out to be a blessing in disguise for Tom Kite.

"The only thing that would have made it better would have been for it to come a little earlier," Kite said Friday after he'd taken a one-stroke lead over old friend Ben Crenshaw in the tournament's uncompleted second round.

Kite, a winner last weekend in Atlanta, explained that he was suffering from a letdown and "was kind of in a funk out there" before the rains came Thursday.

"I was even par for eight holes and just kind of going through the motions," he said.

But when he and 77 others came back at daylight Friday to complete first-round play, he had his game back together, finished that round in 67 then returned for a bogey-free, 5-under-par 65 in late-afternoon second-round play.

"I was very fortunate to have had the storm come along," Kite said.

The comeback after the overnight delay gave him a 132 total, 8 under par on the still-damp TPC at Las Colinas, and a one-shot advantage over Crenshaw and Marco Dawson.

Dawson, a former mini-tour player now in his second season on the PGA Tour, had scores of 70-63. Crenshaw, a teammate of Kite's at the University of Texas more than two decades ago, shot 65-68.

Tied at 134 after 36 holes were Raymond Floyd, the 49-year-old who has been on such a tear all year, Robin Freeman, Dan Forsman and Phil Blackmar.

Blackmar and Freeman matched scores of 63-71, Forsman was 68-66 and Floyd 66-68.

Both Kite and Crenshaw agreed that their leading positions are meaningless at this stage of a tournament still behind schedule.

"All it means right now," Crenshaw said, "is that we have two good scores."

"It isn't a lead at all," Kite said. "Half the field hasn't played the second round yet."

Those 78 players, who got in one round during Friday's dawn-to-dusk competition, were scheduled for second round play Saturday morning, with the third round to follow in the afternoon.

Among the leaders in that portion of the field are Brad Bryant and Jeff Maggert, tied with 64s, and a group of four at 65 — Jay Haas, Hal Sutton, Jim Hallett and former Nelson winner Bruce Lietzke.

Davis Love III, a 3-time winner in the last two months, is at 67.

Masters champ Fred Couples, however, needs to improve from a 2-over 72 if he is to qualify for the final two rounds.

While Kite was thankful for the delay, Crenshaw was delighted with a glimpse of some of his old putting magic.

"I saw some putts go in the hole today," he said. "That's the whole difference, just making a few putts."

But it was his one lapse of the day that deprived him of a share of the lead.

He missed from about three feet for a birdie that would have tied him for the lead on his 16th hole of the second round.

"I guess I'd been out there too long; too long a day," he said. "My mind was addled. I just blanked out on that one."

Injured Fields finishes 2nd in state long jump

AUSTIN (AP) — Sheddrick Fields of Dallas South Oak Cliff lost the long jump by one-half inch to LaMarque's Vincent Hypolite, but he came back later Friday to win the triple jump at the University Interscholastic League's state track and field meet.

The state Class 4A team championship was scheduled later Friday night. Team titles in classes 5A, 3A, 2A and A were to be decided in Saturday's competition.

Snyder's Trina Thompson, competing in the girls' 100 meter dash, did not place in the Friday night event, won by Austin Reagan's Donyale Canada with an 11.6.

Fields, who has a pending national record in the long jump, was second to Hypolite in the long jump but he won the triple jump in 48 feet, 41/4 inches. Hypolite finished third at 47-31/2 behind runnerup Brandon Craven of Kilgore in 47-63/4.

Fields limped through both events, troubled by a right heel bruise.

"I wish I wasn't hurt," Fields said. "I probably could have jumped about a good foot more. The weather was a setback but not as much as my heel."

Intermittent rain showers fell throughout the day.

In the long jump, Hypolite scratched on his first two jumps in the finals but leaped 24-8 to win the event on the last jump of the competition. Fields also scratched twice in the finals and was second at 24-71/2.

Fields set a national record of 26-51/2 at the district meet. It still must be approved by the National Federation of High School Associations.

"I usually scratch in every meet, it's a part of the competition," Hypolite said. "Today, I was charging the board on some of the jumps but for the last one I had to stay back and concentrate on my rhythm."

Hypolite won the Class 5A long jump in 1990 and placed second behind Fields in last year's Class 4A state meet after LaMarque dropped down one class.

"I came here looking for something like this," Hypolite said. "It's my last high school competition and it feels good to be the champion and have another competition with Fields."

Western Texas College Faculty Association has granted its first set of scholarships to two students planning to return next year for their sophomore year of study at WTC.

Each scholarship will equal $200. Recipients are Anita Brown of 2307 40th St. and Fred Sawtelle of 1004 21st Street. Both earned a 4.0 grade point average after their first college year.

The faculty association draws its income for the scholarships through the sale of aluminum cans collected on campus and from receipts of an annual golf tournament held at the WTC Golf Course. The second annual WTC Four-Person Scramble Golf Tournament is scheduled this fall.

The can project was begun two years ago as both an environmental concern and as a means to establish an ongoing income producer.

A cotton trailer is permanently parked on the college's south parking lot and individuals are encouraged to bring their aluminum cans to the site.

The can project is the responsibility of a sub-committee for the Faculty Association, the Environmental Concerns Committee. In line with its overall purpose, a criteria for selection for the scholarship was an essay using the environment as its theme.

In winning their scholarships, Mrs. Brown wrote "A Legacy to Our Environment" and Sawtelle wrote "WTC Students and the West Texas Environment."

BEST BAGGER — Chris Sosa, left, is shown receiving an award from Lawrence IGA owner Jack Lawrence for being the company's "best bagger." The win allows Sosa to advance to the Texas Best Bagger Contest to be held in Houston June 15-16. Sosa has worked at Lawrence IGA for two years as stocker/bagger. (Contributed Photo)

Astro-graphs By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

May 17, 1992

There are strong indications you might get involved in a venture in the year ahead that could open up a new channel of income. It's something you've been thinking about doing but never got around to.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have the ability today to tie up situations your companions left unraveled. If you use this talent for their good, you'll benefit as well. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Valuable lessons can be learned today by closely observing one you admire. This individual's techniques can be applied to arrangements affecting you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In order to be a good performer today, you must be properly motivated. You're likely to put out your best effort when there is some type of material compensation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your greatest asset today is your ability to inspire others who view life from a negative perspective. You'll know what to do and say to elevate their expectations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you've been wanting to change, but have been unable to influence, might suddenly come about today through circumstances initiated by another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) People you associate with today will have an enormous effect upon your attitude and behavior. Something substantial will result — if you're linked up with an enterprising ally.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your financial aspects are quite positive today, and you should be able to generate earnings from something you're able to do for others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could do quite well today in competitive situations that have elements of chance. However, if the rewards you're striving for are monetary, this might not be true.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Those you'll be involved with today will be responsive to your bidding; they'll realize that what you want them to do is not motivated by selfishness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Endeavors of a progressive nature will offer you the greatest gratification today. You're not likely to get a kick out of stodgy things.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An involvement that could be meaningful to you should be given top priority today. Your chances for working it out to your expectations look very encouraging.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Situations should develop to your satisfaction today — if you take the initiative rather than wait on others. Onlookers will be counting on you to set the example.

Your Birthday

May 18, 1992

Goals you establish for yourself in the year ahead can be realized, provided you don't bog yourself down with ineffective alliances. Strive to be your own person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Give-and-take is required today between you and the one with whom you're romantically involved. A lack of consideration could cause wounded feelings in either camp. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for Taurus' Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A friend who has been kind to you in the past is in need of your assistance. You're aware of this individual's plight but, for some reason, you might not respond.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful today that you don't put needless strains on a friendship by making unreasonable demands. If you are too inconsiderate, it could fray the bond.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll operate rather effectively in competitive developments today, but your achievements will mean little if you use tactics that don't instill pride.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who usually supports your position and endorses your ideas might be diametrically opposed to your way of thinking today. Forcefulness won't win compliance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This could be a trying day for you financially, so don't aggravate the situation by yielding to extravagant whims. Live within your means.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually, you strive to be considerate of those with whom you have direct dealings. However, you might put your self-interests above all others' today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There is a possibility you might not display proper gratitude today to an individual who goes out of the way to do a special favor for you. This could leave a scar.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Owing to an inability to accurately judge character today, you might form an association with an individual who has a questionable reputation. Don't make impulsive commitments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In order to reach a personal ambition today, you might knowingly step on the toes of someone who wouldn't use the same tactics on you if the roles were reversed.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Companions may not be as infatuated with your plans today as you are, so don't be disappointed if the reception you receive is much less than you anticipated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Some hotshot salesman might consider you an easy target today and, with a dazzling pitch, try to palm off some inferior merchandise on you. Be on guard.

The new cosmetology class will begin June 1 with instruction requiring one year to complete. The class involves 1,500 hours of instruction.

TV movie will portray abuse

HONOLULU (AP) — Former pro football player Nuu Faaola says he's happy ex-girlfriend Miss America Carolyn Sapp is starring in a TV movie about their relationship, even though it details his alleged abuse.

"I'm 100 percent behind it," Faaola, who once played for the New York Jets and Cleveland Browns, said Thursday. "I wanted Carolyn to play her part. Nobody else could do it.

"The only people who know the truth is me, Carolyn and God. I don't like it because there's going to be a lot of things about me. It hurts. But I hope people will learn from it."

Faaola has refused to comment on Miss Sapp's allegations, contained in court papers filed in 1990. She said he abused her and tried to throw her from a moving car.

Governor to sell first lottery ticket

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards plans to sell the first Texas Lottery ticket when the game begins at 6 a.m. May 29.

"I'm going to do the first ticket," Richards said Friday, although details about where the sale will take place haven't been worked out. She also said she plans to buy a ticket.

Andy Welch, spokesman for State Comptroller John Sharp, said Richards likely would sell the ticket in Austin but that could be changed if she wishes.

"If she wants to do it from Dallas or Houston or Corpus Christi, we can probably find a location," Welch said. "Nothing has been set yet."

Bill Cryer, spokesman for Richards, said the governor is making the sale at the request of Sharp, who oversees the lottery.

"She said she'd be glad to help publicize the beginning of the lottery, since she helped pass the bill and the amendment" approved last year by voters, Cryer said.

He also said Richards legally can buy a lottery ticket.

"I guess she could win a million dollars if she were lucky enough," Cryer said.

The first lottery event is a scratch-card game. The $1 tickets will offer prizes ranging from $2 to $10,000.

In addition, 1 million of the first 500 million tickets sold will qualify for one of 12 weekly drawings where winners receive $1 million.

Markers guide now available

A guide for a walking tour of the historical markers on and near the courthouse square in downtown Snyder is now available through a project of the Scurry County Historical Commission.

The brochure lists 21 markers on the square or in easy walking distance of the square. The markers call attention to various phases of the county's history. The days when Scurry County was prime buffalo hunting territory are noted on the J. Wright Mooar marker near the white buffalo statue on the corner of the square.

The First State Bank marker across the street to the west is a reminder of the business community that developed in late years. A marker for the O.K. Wagon Yard, which served as a meeting place and trading ground when agriculture was the county's major industry, is located near the post office. A brief history of the Canyon Reef oil field is recounted in a marker on the west side of the courthouse.

There is also a listing of other markers in Snyder which can be seen on a longer walking or driving tour.

Copies of the pamphlet, titled "Around The Square," are available at the Chamber of Commerce office and the Scurry County Museum and are free.

Hoss Clayton and his band will perform at 11 a.m. on Tuesday in the center's dining room. The Senior Saints will be performing at 11 a.m. on Thursday.

THANK YOU

The family of Hoy Hamilton takes this means to express our sincere thanks to our many friends who were so kind to us in our darkest hour of sorrow (when our loved one was called away). We deeply appreciate the kind words and beautiful flowers that were sent; also the food that was prepared. May you have just such friends if such sorrow ever visits your home. May Heaven's richest blessings fall on each of you.

with funds to be taken from the Hermleigh Water Works Fund, and a $1,500 budget amendment for the justice of the peace to cover required autopsy expenses which have exceeded the budgeted amount.

Commissioners will consider a line-item transfer which would separate the budgets of the parks department and Scurry County Coliseum. This would allow the coliseum advisory board and director/promoter Bernadette Stephens to operate the facility under a separate budget.

Five additional line-item transfers are on the agenda, including:

—A $2,800 transfer from medical care to supplies and subsistance for the child welfare office.

—A $300 transfer from supplies to repair for the county extension office to cover repairs on the county agricultural agent's pickup.

—A $200 transfer in the county attorney's budget, from telephone expense to law books.

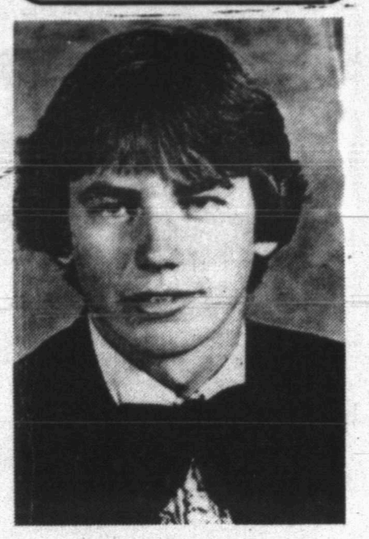

—A $1,515 transfer from machine hire to capital outlay for Precinct 4.

—A transfer of $22,000 in the county clerk's budget from Xerox copies and capital outlay to supplies, microfilm and miscellaneous expense.

Other business for the court will include the possible adoption of a no-smoking policy for the courthouse and advertising for bids on contract mowing for county roads.

Approval of minutes and bills payable are the only other items on the agenda.

MICHAEL LATHEM

National FFA gives Lathem scholarship

The National FFA Organization recently awarded a $1,000 scholarship to Michael Lathem of the Ira FFA chapter. The scholarship is sponsored by Louis Dreyfus Corporation as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.

Lathem will use the scholarship funds to pursue a degree in agricultural science and engineering at Texas A&M University-College Station.

Lathem, son of Robert and Jacqueline Lathem of Dunn, received notice of the scholarship after being selected by a national panel.

He is the grandson of Elwanda Stewart Nachlinger and the late James C. Stewart of Dunn and Lois Lathem and the late R.C. Lathem of Ringgold.

Judging criteria included evaluation of Lathem's supervised agricultural experience program in agricultural education, FFA activities, school and community involvement, high school grades and career plans.

Lathem's FFA advisor is Richard Long.

This year the National FFA Scholarship Program awarded a record total of $868,350 to 668 students.

FFA is a national organization of 382,748 members in 7,744 local chapters throughout the United States, Guam and the Virgin Islands preparing for leadership and careers in science.

Retiring congressmen can keep funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty departing House members are eligible to leave with leftover campaign money lining their pockets. Most say they won't tap the funds for personal use, although their pledges are not binding.

They're promising to pay for scholarships, contribute to charity, finance political campaigns and return donations to contributors.

This is the last year that retiring House members elected before Jan. 8, 1980, can pocket any remaining campaign money. In the future, they'll have to use it for charitable or political purposes.

There's no indication that decisions by 55 House members to leave the chamber were motivated by the chance for a money grab.

Many said they quit out of frustration with political partisanship and Congress' inability to grapple with the nation's problems. Some were hurt by a devastating check overdraft scandal at the House bank. Seven have lost primaries. Others are running for another office.

Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, is eligible to use nearly $200,000 for himself. Instead, he'll finance scholarships for students interested in working with the elderly.

"He's hoping corporations or foundations will be able to match the money," said Roybal aide Jorge Lambrinos. He said the scholarships will be for students attending California State College-Los Angeles, where a gerontology center is named after Roybal.

Rep. John Paul Hammerschmidt, R-Ark., will return recent contributions and is considering establishment of an educational trust fund. "I will also use some to try to elect Republicans to public office," he said.

Hammerschmidt could make personal use of about $403,000.

In a break with other retirees, 26-year veteran Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., has said he'll use the money for his personal retirement. He could take just short of $300,000.

And some lawmakers were not talking. Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., who could convert about $660,000, "has not made any kind of decision at all," said an aide, who insisted he not be identified by name.

Rep. Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, is "in no hurry to rush into any decision," said spokesman Mike Lewis. He has just over $300,000 in his campaign kitty.

Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., won't have to think too hard about disposing of the money. "I have no idea what he's doing with the $20 left in the campaign treasury," said legislative director Robin Traylor.

The list of 19 Democrats and 11 Republicans is likely to grow through November, as more members retire or are defeated. The Federal Election Commission says 163 current and 23 past House members are eligible for the conversion. The Senate does not allow personal use of leftover campaign money.

The maximum available for conversion is the amount in a member's campaign treasury on Nov. 30, 1989, when President Bush signed the law.

FEC figures show the approximate amounts eligible for conversion. The agency has not made precise calculations for the 30 currently eligible.

Rep. Brian J. Donnelly, D-Mass., "is going to be donating it to charitable organizations, scholarship funds and Democratic Party activities," said his spokesman, Gary Galanis. Donnelly is eligible to receive some $540,000.

Rep. Larry Coughlin, R-Pa., "said he would contact those who contributed during the current (election) cycle" but did not specify he would issue refunds, said spokesman Peter Holran.

Coughlin could convert about $260,000.

Reunion for former Dermott students planned on June 6

A reunion for those who attended the Dermott, Bookout or Light schools is planned for June 6 at the Dermott School building on the Scurry County Coliseum grounds.

Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. The Scurry County Historical Commission and Historic Scurry County, Inc., which had the building re-located to the coliseum area, will serve refreshments.

Those attending are asked to bring a basket lunch for the noon meal, which will be held in the building or under the arbor at the Cornelius-Dodson House nearby.

Dayton McCarter and Morris Joe Greenfield are serving as chairmen of the reunion committee. LaVerne Herring has sent letters to former students whose addresses are available and anyone having other names and addresses is asked to call her so letters can be sent to them. Persons planning to attend are asked to contact Katherine Elkins to help the reunion committee in making plans.

The two-room Dermott School building was completed in 1924 and housed students in grades 1-6 until 1947 when it was consolidated with the Snyder Independent School District. The Bookout School served the Dark Community in the same area in earlier days. The town named Light was the predecessor of Fluvanna and had a small school.

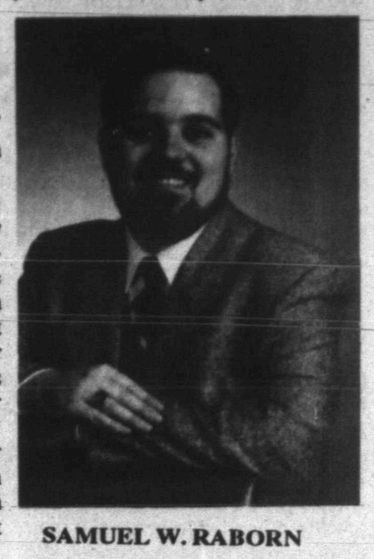

The Dermott School building was used as a community church after 1947. The building was re-located to the coliseum grounds in 1988. One room has been furnished as a school room and the other room has been equipped with a kitchen and tables and chairs for use as a meeting area. Historic Scurry County, Inc. operates the school and the Cornelius-Dodson House.

22 years later, woman earns nursing degree

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Shannon Collen Roach sat in her doctor's office dreading another chemotherapy treatment for her breast cancer when the rancid taste of the drugs filled her mouth.

"I started to cry because I knew I would be sick," said Ms. Roach. "Everything hit me all at once, having to pick up and leave, how hard it was to leave my husband and to take my four boys from their Daddy and I didn't want to face going back to school."

She pleaded with God to end her life, but a Bible verse she read in the small New Testament she kept in her backpack and the vision of her four sons alone forced her to confront the chemotherapy with same vigor that she has used to earn straight A's every semester since returning to nursing school.

On Friday, Ms. Roach, 39, lead her school at the University of Texas at El Paso commencement to finally earn the degree she first sought decades ago.

A 1971 UTEP alumi magazine featured the university's nursing school as its cover story. Ms. Roach, then a freshman was pictured on the cover, crowning her straight hair with a nurse's cap. A profile on Ms. Roach ended with the phrase, "... the only thing she lacks is the nursing degree, the earning of which, in her case, is certainly just a matter of time."

It was a matter of time — 22 years.

The same year she was featured as "Shannon Roach: Nurse-To-Be" in the magazine, Ms. Roach dropped out of school to marry and join her husband in traveling with a Christian singing group.

"I had this dream all my life to be a nurse and when I got married and did the gospel ministry I thought it would never be," Ms. Roach said.

For 11 years, including eight on the road, Ms. Roach used her talent as a pianist, composer and song writer to write musical dramas, perform concerts and record albums, including one that went gold.

But in February 1989, after 17 1/2 years of marriage, Ms. Roach said she made the difficult decision to pack up her four sons and leave her husband for reasons she didn't want to disclose to protect her children.

Less than three months after she returned, she was diagnosed with cancer and underwent a modified radical masectomy, which was followed by six months of chemotherapy and six weeks of radiation.

Despite the cancer, Ms. Roach enrolled in community college and was admitted to UTEP in the fall semester.

"Part of it was desperation, I had to do something for myself and my children," Ms. Roach said. But she also said it was a second chance to fulfill her dream of becoming a nurse.

Through her schooling she has been on welfare, food stamps and Medicaid. She has lived with her mother, an artist, and her mother has helped raise her sons.

"She really has been my angel of mercy," Ms. Roach said.

In June, Ms. Roach will begin working with postoperative patients on the surgical floor at El Paso's public hospital, Thomason Hospital. She'll earn an annual salary of $35,000.

She believes her experience with cancer already has helped her be a better nurse. She did some clinical work recently at Beaumont Army Medical Center with cancer patients.

"I was able to empathize with them," she said.

Bush speaks to grads on commencement day

HOUSTON (AP) — President Bush, in a pair of commencement addresses this weekend, is giving graduates a version of his re-election stump speech that highlights his new interest in urban problems.

Saturday, he was to tell graduates at Southern Methodist University in Dallas to concentrate on the positive.

Bush follows in the footsteps of his likely campaign rival, Texas billionaire Ross Perot, who spoke at last year's SMU commencement. Perot told graduates that "those folks in Washington belong to you and me."

"Democracy must come from us," Perot said then. "If something needs to be cleaned up, we have all got to do the dirty work."

Perot, although not yet an official candidate, has found strong support in Bush's adopted home state and could force the president to work harder than he anticipated to capture Texas in November.

A Texas Poll last month showed Perot leading both Bush and Democratic front-runner Bill Clinton in a three-way race, with Perot at 35 percent, Bush at 30 percent and Clinton with 20 percent.

On Sunday, Bush will deliver the commencement address at University of Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.

Bush planned to speak Saturday about economic issues and highlight the urban reform proposals he's been emphasizing since the Los Angeles riots. Those proposals include parental choice in education, welfare reform, enterprise zone incentives to lure businesses to the inner cities, job training and tenant ownership of public housing.

Bush also is returning to the theme of optimism he used last year when insisting the recession was not as severe as many believed.

He has accused the news media of overly emphasizing the negative.

"We are in times of pessimism out there. You don't have to listen about 20 seconds on the evening news to find out everything is wrong with this country," he told a political fund-raising luncheon Friday in Pittsburgh. "If some of these guys would just report some of the things that are positive that are happening in the community, it would inspire others.

Bush's Pittsburgh visit was the latest in a string of trips designed to show his concern for the plight of the cities and counter criticism that his administration failed to address problems that perpetuated the Los Angeles violence.

80-year-old finally getting her diploma

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Herbert Hoover was in the White House when Bertha Ludwig started high school. On Wednesday, the 80-year-old great-grandmother will finish.

Ms. Ludwig, who dropped out after getting married when she was 17, said she never gave up on her dream of graduating.

"You have to use your head for something besides a hat rack," she told the San Antonio Express-News.

Ms. Ludwig recently attended General Educational Development classes and will receive her diploma this week at Southwest High School.

She said she got along with her classmates, many of whom could have been her great-grandchildren.

"They thought I was the teacher," she said.

Her high school story sounds similar to those of a many teenagers, not considering the dates. She married in 1929 and lost interest in finishing school. Later she raised a family and worked as a nurse and waitress to provide family income during the years of the Great Depression.

Eleven grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren later, she decided to finish what she started 63 years ago.

Despite her ambition, Ms. Ludwig said she doesn't plan to attend college.

"You get tied down with studies and you don't have time to do a lot of things you want to do," she said.

But she has advice for those now working toward high school diplomas: "Just stay in school and finish — and don't give up."

Ray Courtney and North Elementary, the school he has helmed as principal for the past three years, have one thing in common. Neither will be back in the fall.

Ray has announced plans to retire and North will be closed as part of the school district's new reorganization plan. Courtney's wife, Betty, a Snyder teacher for the past 31 years, is also retiring. They have a combined total of 64 years education experience in Snyder.

Ray began his career in 1959 as the science and Texas history teacher at Travis Junior High School. He also coached for two years, helping out with basketball and track.

When Lamar and Travis were combined to form Snyder Junior High School, Ray taught there. He spent 18 years in the classroom before becoming an administrator.

Ray gave up coaching though, when he started to break horses, something he continued to do until six years ago. He also served as a judge for the American Quarter Horse Association for eight years, but quit that when he accepted his first principal's post at the high school 15 years ago. Prior to that, he had served as vice principal for two years.

Betty taught third, second, resource and fifth grade at Central for 10 years before transferring to East where she has taught fifth grade for the past 21 years.

Ray always liked working with students and their parents and enjoyed extracurricular activities. When the new fall term begins, Ray said he will miss "not being around the students," most of all.

He said his philosophy remained the same when he became a school administrator.

As a teacher, Betty always tried to treat her students fairly and "never held a grudge after taking disciplinary action," she said. As much as possible, she tried to provide a fun atmosphere in the classroom for the students because it helped them to learn. She will also miss not being around students.

Basically, Betty said students throughout the past three decades have remained the same. But Ray sees a difference in today's teenagers, who he believes have been exposed to too much sex and violence in movies and television.

Betty said teachers have not had as much time to prepare in the classroom in recent years, something which she missed very much.

The Courtneys value their years with the Snyder Independent School District. Each said that knowing families for years gave then insight into students that they might not otherwise have had.

In recent years, Betty has had an average of 28 students per class. During the oil boom days she often taught as many as 40 to 45 students in one grade.

A native of Snyder, Betty remembers attending junior high school before Snyder Junior High School was created.

Ray was born in Carbon, Texas and moved to Snyder with his family during the oil boom of the 1950s. Since his father worked in the oil field, Ray also lived in Odessa during the oil boom there.

Ray's first year of high school was at the old high school where the jail is located today. At one time, both the high school and elementary school were housed in the same building.

He was a member of the Class of 1953-54, which was the first class to attend the new school. However, his class was not the first to graduate from the new building. That distinction went to the class of 1952-53, which held graduation ceremonies in the new auditorium before the school was opened.

Ray also ran in the very first Canyon Reef Relays and he recalled "nearly freezing to death" because of a blizzard which swept through the city. He remembers working out on the high school track before construction was completed on the new building.

Snyder's population was growing so fast that its designation changed from Class A to AA and then AAA over a three-year period. At one time, Snyder was in a district which included Big Spring and Abilene, he said.

An avid football fan, Ray had only missed two games in 26 years until he left the high school for North Elementary. One game he was glad he missed was at Brownfield, because everyone got snowed in.

He and Betty still have the same two seats her father bought in Tiger Stadium. They are located "right up against the pressbox," he said. Ray calls his wife a "fair weather fan" because she doesn't like to attend games after the weather turns cold. He said he's a fan and doesn't care what the weather is like.

He is also looking forward to being able to attend more basketball games after he retires.

Ray earned his bachelor's degree at Hardin-Simmons University and his master's at Texas Tech University.

Betty earned her bachelor's degree at Hardin-Simmons and her master's at Sul Ross University.

When Betty graduated from high school career choices for women were basically limited to teaching or nursing. Since she knew that nursing was not for her, she chose education, a decision she has never regretted.

"Teaching is a good family occupation and it allows women to spend time with their families," she said.

The Courtneys met while in high school. Since her parents were all ranchers, Ray's interest in horses grew and he became involved with judging as well as breaking them.

At one time, the accepted method of breaking a horse was "to ride it until it didn't buck anymore," he said. A more gentle approach is used now, but Ray said the trick is "try not to get killed" when doing it.

The Courtneys have recently bought a ranch which Ray wants to fix up so they and their four grandchildren can have a place "to piddle," he said.

They also own thoroughbreds. One will start racing this fall and the other one will be ready next year.

Betty likes to read, garden, play bridge and take care of their dogs. Ray said his wife is "never idle" and "burns out a vacuum a year" doing housework.

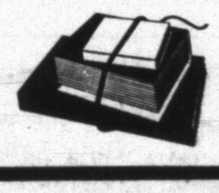

They have two children. A daughter, Connie Taylor, is married to a heart surgeon and lives in Auburn, Ala. Randy Courtney is married to Lynn, a former Snyder resident. She teaches and he coaches at Jayton.

READY FOR A BREAK — Ray and Betty Courtney will retire at the end of this school year. Ray is the principal at North Elementary and Betty teaches fifth grade at East Elementary. A special "Ray Courtney Day" is planned Thursday. Friends, colleagues and former students are encouraged to visit the school that day. Refreshments will be available. (SDN Staff Photo)

Ray Courtney Day planned

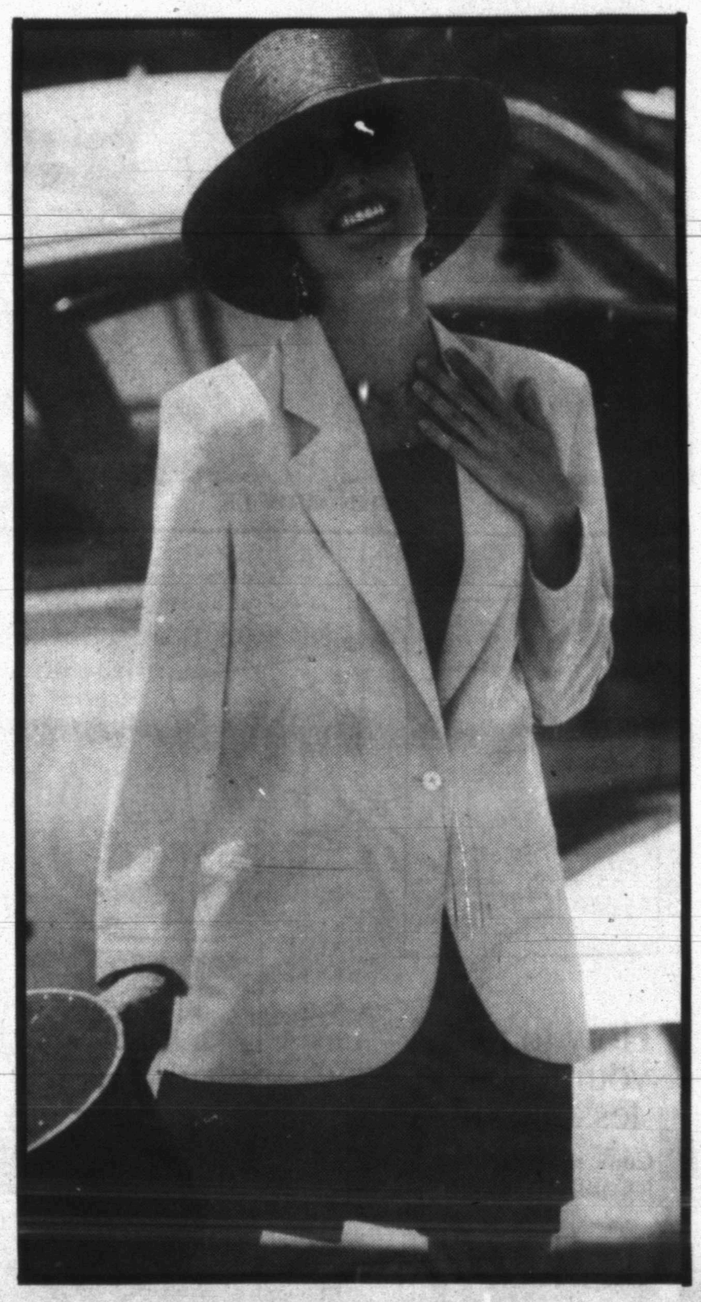

A special day to honor Ray Courtney, North principal who is retiring, is planned for Thursday. Refreshments will be available throughout the day. Everyone is invited, including former students. North will also be closed as the end of this school year.

Tips From Expert Hair Design by Gina Pierce

CONDITIONING VERY IMPORTANT

If your hair is dry, and especially if it has been permed or colored, you will need a conditioner, every time your hair is shampooed. If you have oily or long hair you may need conditioner only on the ends. After you've shampooed your hair, work in a little conditioner, leave it on for a moment and rinse thoroughly. The purpose of using the correct conditioner, is to coat the hair, filling in rough spots, making it smoother, thicker and shinier. It also prevents tangling, controls flyaway hair, reduces static electricity, adds body and seals in moisture. At least once a week, give your hair an intensive conditioning treatment if it's dry or damaged. We have a complete professional product line and professional advice.

Expert Hair Design is not an assembly line salon, where everyone performs the same. Our stylists are extremely creative which guarantees that every person is treated as an individual. Kids on a cruise

MIAMI (AP) — Parents planning to take their children on a cruise should ask if the ship has an exclusive playroom and meeting room, advises a cruise line executive.

Another question is whether the children's programs run year-round or just during peak periods and also if supervised programs will be canceled if there isn't a certain minimum number of children aboard, suggests Bob Dickinson, senior vice president of Miami-based Carnival Cruise Lines.

Paintings displayed in "TEXAS" program

Artist Martin Grelle of Clifton will display 42 of his paintings in the 27th full-color edition of the "TEXAS" Souvenir Program.

A different cowboy artist is selected yearly to show his work in the 82-page collector's edition. Each is selected for his national reputation and/or association with the Cowboy Artists of American.

"TEXAS" opens its 27th season on June 10, and plays nightly except Sundays through Aug. 22 beneath the cliffs in Palo Duro Canyon near Amarillo and Canyon.

Past "TEXAS" programs hosted such artists as Melvin C. Warren, James Boren, Frank Reaugh, Frederick Remmington, Charles Russell and G. Harvey.

Martin Grelle credits James Boren with his decision to dedicate his life to painting. It was Warren's influence at age 18 that drew Grelle into the world of art.

Born and raised in the foothills country surrounding his hometown of Clifton, Grelle knew at a very young age that he possessed a deep desire to capture on canvas the beautiful places and people that he had met.

After high school graduation, Grelle painted part-time and drove a truck for his father's gasoline distributorship. It was while driving that truck to the ranches and farms of central Texas that Grelle gained the knowledge and inspiration for his paintings.

Grelle works with a variety of media, especially oils, and characteristically paints with a moderate amount of detail, striving to emphasize color and texture as a means of creating a visual image. His dramatic light and shadow effects produce striking rain and fog paintings.

In recent years, Grelle has turned to doing what he calls "period" paintings, using actual locations and historical references to develop visual stories.

"I paint the West," Grelle said. "Whether it's the contemporary cowboy or the pioneering men and women of 150 years ago, there is something very exciting to me about people living, struggling and building their lives in the beauty of the American West.

"I've found simple things can become beautiful when you capture the moment and free it forever on canvas." he added.

Among the national and regional awards that Grelle has won are: Best of Show at the 1979 American Indian and Cowboy Artist show in San Dimas, Calif., and the Artist's Artist Award at the 1985 Texas Ranger Hall of Fame Show in Waco.

Grelle has held several one-man shows with his most recent appearance at Overland Trail Gallery in Scottsdale, Ariz. In 1984, Grelle was invited to exhibit his work at the Cowboy Artist of America Museum. He is listed in "Who's Who in American Art," "Contemporary Western Artists," and was featured in Art West and Southwest Art magazines.

Although most of Grelle's paintings reflect the beauty and serenity of the Clifton area, he has traveled the United States and Europe in search of new vistas for his brush.

Grelle and his wife, Kim, have two sons, Joshua and Jordon.

Recognized as the top outdoor drama in the United States, "TEXAS" has entertained over two million visitors. In 1991, the 100,208 travelers filled the theatre to 94 percent each night.

Tickets to "TEXAS" are $12, $9 and $6 for adults, and $12, $4.50 and $3 for children under 12 years old. "TEXAS" is produced by the Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc.

Wake up your partner

By Phillip Alder

One of the arts of defense is to wake up your partner when you need him to do something unusual. But how do you do this? You can't glare at him over the table or kick him under the table. You must do it with an abnormal play.

Today's deal defeated East-West, but they had their chances. Cover the West and South cards. Against four spades, your partner leads the diamond five: 10, ace, two. How do you continue?

North's response of three spades was a limit raise, showing about 11 points and at least four-card spade support. South overbid slightly — but understandably — when he raised to game.

If the opening diamond-five lead was fourth-highest, South was now out of diamonds. Hoping his partner had the heart ace, at trick two East switched to the heart king: three, eight, four. East continued with the heart queen: jack, two, nine. The contract could no longer be defeated. South's last heart loser went on dummy's fourth club.

How could West know to overtake the heart queen at trick three and give his partner a heart ruff? Well, if East were an expert and had started with K-Q-x of hearts, he should have led his low heart at trick three, not the queen. So West might have found the winning play. But East could have made life much easier for his partner with an abnormal play. He should have switched to the heart queen at trick two. Then, when East continued with the heart king at trick three, the layout would be obvious to West. He would overtake with the heart ace and give his partner the killing ruff.

DEAR POLLY — Here's a pointer for keeping potatoes: First, I buy potatoes on sale. I layer them in a cardboard box with crumbled newspapers on the bottom and between each layer of potatoes. The potatoes can breathe in the box and are protected by the paper. In a cool place, they keep very well. — CATHERINE

DEAR POLLY — Before you wear your nylon stockings, put them in a plastic bag in the freezer until they have frozen. I usually leave mine overnight. The hose will wear like iron. My nylons wear for weeks using this method. — PEARL

Arthritis hits children

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 20 cases of psoriatic arthritis in young children — rarely found in anyone under age 20 — has been diagnosed by a New York doctor, according to Arthritis Today, a publication of the Arthritis Foundation.

The ailment was recognized by Dr. Tom Lehman, chief of the division of pediatric rheumatology at New York's Hospital for Special Surgery, in children referred to him by orthopedists unable to find the cause of or relieve the swelling in the patients' fingers and toes.

Neighborhood residents proud of unique name

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Flour Bluff residents say their community is the only one in the nation with the word "flour" in its name.

That's not "flower" as in azalea. It's "flour" as in dough. And don't anyone dare spell it wrong, either. That would be like trying to rewrite history.

The unusual name for this part of Corpus Christi is the source of considerable civic pride, said Marie Speer, publisher of the community newspaper Flour Bluff Sun.

"Everybody is so used to it. They live in Flour Bluff USA. They are very much Flour Bluffians. They're not Corpus Christians. They've got pride in their own community."

The unusual name has a colorful beginning — originating in what local historian Dan Kilgore called a "comic-opera war" between France and Mexico in 1838.

"Forever, France had designs on Mexico," said Kilgore, who has researched the era and written articles on the farcical war. "By 1838, France had drummed up a number of claims of French citizens against the Mexicans."

Some of the claims were more than 10 years old, totaling about 600,000 pesos, Kilgore said. They included the demands of a French baker in Mexico, whose pastry shop was looted by Mexican soldiers during a celebration. Thus, it was dubbed the Pastry War, or "Guerra de los Pasteles," in Mexican history books.

By the spring of 1838, French warships had blockaded Mexican ports from Vera Cruz northward, cutting off commerce between Mexico and the rest of the world, Kilgore said. The blockade brought shortages and high prices on imported commodities, which in turn gave rise to the highly profitable, age-old craft of smuggling.

Corpus Christi Bay, then an untamed, unsettled part of the infant Republic of Texas, was a favored landing area for the devil-may-care smugglers who stepped into the black-market trade. Merchandise destined for northern Mexico was brought to shore here, Kilgore said, then transported southward across the Rio Grande.

The new Republic of Texas, meanwhile, was not an official participant in the war but coveted diplomatic relations with France. The nation was also still more or less at war with Mexico, Kilgore said, and Texas soldiers were dispatched to Corpus Christi Bay to interrupt the smuggling network.

As soldiers approached, the smugglers fled, abandoning a cargo of flour that forever labeled an area of beach now occupied by Naval Air Station Corpus Christi.

Kilgore's research uncovered a terse news report from the Sept. 8, 1838, edition of the Telegraph and Texas Register, the state newspaper: "Col. (Edwin) Morehouse has just arrived from the west. He states that the party of Mexicans that recently visited the Bay of Corpus Christi retired in a very precipitate manner, and have left about a hundred barrels of flour upon the beach at that place. Part of it is in very good order, and part much damaged; they have also left the boilers and other apparatus of a steam engine, apparently new."

Parolee rebuilds his life as probation officer

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Rolling up his shirt sleeve, Daniel Gonzales exposed the scars that needles left on his collapsed veins, proof of his own experience with heroin.

Gonzales is an ex-convict with a history of drug abuse. He's also a probation officer.

And in this particular instance, he was using his own experience to talk a 21-year-old Clute man into entering a drug rehabilitation program instead of risking having his probation revoked.

"I have to be careful how I use it," Gonzales said of the role his own past plays in his new position. "It's a tool. I use it when I feel it's appropriate."

Gonzales, Brazoria County's newest probation officer, has served 10 years in prison and is on parole until 2009. Originally, a condition of his parole was that he would not associate with other felons, but the condition was removed to allow him to work as a counselor.

The probationer who saw Gonzales' scarred arms said he first thought that Gonzales was lying.

"I felt that maybe he was saying all this to help me, but now I know that it's true," said the man, requesting anonymity. He was placed on 10 years' probation after pleading guilty to burglary. "To tell you the truth, I think it's great. I think he can read people really well."

A probation officer here since April 21, Gonzales, 40, says he just wants to make a difference.

"A probationer or a parolee needs structure" he said. "We need to find out what skills a person needs to cope with life. A lot of these people are just not able to cope."

Gonzales knows what that's like.

In 1979, he was sentenced to 30 years for an Ector County aggravated robbery conviction. He held up eight convenience stores at gunpoint to pay for his heroin habit.

In state prison, something clicked. Gonzales began coping.

The key for him came in ending his drug abuse, in getting an education and in benefiting from good role models. In his case, he said, the role models were his instructors.

Though he is from a large family, Gonzales said he lacked good role models as a youngster because his family was riddled with drug and alcohol dependency. He dropped out of school in the eighth grade in California and wound up in a youth correctional facility.

His problems as an adult, however, didn't start until he returned from Vietnam with a heroin habit.

Though he received treatment in a veterans hospital, he resumed his drug habit. As it grew increasingly expensive, he moved to Texas and began holding up convenience stores.

Gonzales said the Texas conviction was his first, but he received 30 years because prosecutors were prepared to charge him with seven other robberies.

Shaking his drug habit in prison, Gonzales enrolled in a high school equivalency course and earned his GED. State prisons offer college-level courses and Gonzales took advantage of the opportunity. By 1987, he had earned a bachelor of science degree in behavioral science.

When he won parole in 1989, he was nine credits away from a master's degree in humanities through a program offered at the Ramsey I prison in Rosharon by the University of Houston-Clear Lake.

He enrolled at the campus and finished his degree. Gonzales now is working on his second master's, this one in clinical psychology.

After leaving prison, Gonzales, a certified substance abuse counselor, began counseling state and federal parolees at a Houston halfway house.

He learned about an opening here through a college contact who knew that Adult Probation Department Director Larry Jablecki had expressed a desire to hire a parolee as a probation officer.

Jablecki thinks that while a few bad parolees get the attention of the press, the majority are just trying to make it in a world where the deck is stacked against them.

DHS students learn from acting out

DETROIT, Texas (AP) — President George Bush, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and possible independent candidate Ross Perot were at Detroit High School on a recent morning.

But when the class bell sounded at the end of the period, all three candidates headed for their lockers to get ready for the next class.

These weren't the real candidates, of course — George Bush was wearing a nice dress — these were three students acting the part for an eighth grade history project under the tutelage of teacher Tempie Johnson. The hopefuls and their campaign backers also had the encouragement of State Sen. Bill Ratliff at last week's rally.

Mrs. Johnson's class has turned their home room into a three-way campaign headquarters, complete with stickers, photos and all the up-to-date press clippings of the real campaign trail.

Instead of learning about the electoral process through a simple lesson, these students are living the experience in their scaled-down political world.

"I'd like to thank everyone for providing me with the delegates to again be the Republican nominee for the presidency," said "President Bush," also known as Mahona Brown. "I have some long-term goals that I still want to accomplish, but I'm a Republican president with a Congress full of Democrats. I'd like you all to remember Desert Storm, and know that I want to see improvement in the educational standards."

Sounds familiar?

Chad Gibson, filling the role of Ross Perot, may have been taller than the Dallas billionaire, but his campaign has parallels with the real thing. He had to collect 100 signatures to be placed on the May 15 ballot.

"I want to thank all of you for your support. Most likely, we will have enough signatures to get me on the ballot in each state," Gibson said. "I am the best man for the job. President Bush has done too little, too late."

"Gov. Clinton" — portrayed by Billy Vourskis — pledged to be the education president if elected and stressed commitment toward preserving the environment. The federal deficit and the creation of jobs was high on his list as well.

"There are more homeless and jobless people in America now than there were during the Great Depression," Vourskis said.

Not only are the three candidates getting election experience, but so is the remainder of the class. Each hopeful has a campaign manager and eight campaign boosters to help research three topics of the race — economics, education and the environment. Another student acts as the county clerk and has charge of registering all the seventh and eighth grade students for the election.

Besides the encouragements from Ratliff, students also have received assistance and tutoring from county officials on how the process works. Red River County Clerk Mary Hausler explained how county politics are decided, and Party Chairman Dale Halyard and Alton Kennedy provided background on their party's candidate.

On May 14, the candidates will gather one more time for a debate of the issues.

Ratliff gave them one bit of advice to take with them into the final days of their campaigns:

Pharmacist's discovery may end obesity

WASHINGTON -- After solving the problem of his own obesity, a pharmacist, now director of National Dietary Research, may have discovered the solution for others with the same problem.

Dr. William Morris, pharmacist, inventor and author has discovered a natural food tablet, aptly named Food Source One, that replaces some of the calories normally obtained from food. Food Source One replaces high calorie fats with other natural food ingredients with little or no caloric value so you can lose weight without giving up all your favorite foods, as explained in NDR's Lifestyle Maintenance publication, available where Food Source One is sold. "The secret to meaningful weight loss is not in decreasing the amount of food you eat, but in controlling the fat," says Dr. Morris.

According to Dr. Morris, weight loss results while using Food Source One will depend on how many pounds a person needs to lose. However some overweight people are experiencing extra-ordinary results with Food Source One. A Metairie, Louisiana nurse lost 71 pounds. She stated "I never had to sacrifice the foods I dearly crave!" "Food Source One is very easy and anyone could do it." says a Niagara Falls, New York woman who lost 26 pounds and 15 inches. "The results are great'" she added.

Food Source One is available at pharmacies without a prescription.

Chemicals may be causing illness

AUSTIN (AP) — Toxic chemicals in six East Austin fuel storage terminals may be causing chronic ailments among hundreds of people who live nearby, a survey by the Austin American-Statesman shows.

A survey of 304 households within 3,000 feet of the so-called gasoline tank farm reveals high percentages of recurrent respiratory problems, throat ailments, migraine-like headaches, rashes, nausea and nosebleeds.

The terminals cover several city blocks and include 43 tanks capable of storing more than 535 million gallons of fuel products annually.

Although the survey, published Sunday, does not establish a scientific cause-and-effect link between the chemicals and the illnesses, many residents said they believe the link exists.

Survey results are supported by a computer analysis of more than 5 million state Medicaid records and by doctors who say patients living in the area suffer from the same ailments.

"It sounds quite believable and quite consistent with exposure to toxins," says Dr. Richard Clapp with the Center for Environmental Health Study, a Boston-based consultant on contamination and public health issues.

"This information should be taken very seriously."

The unscientific survey was conducted door-to-door and by telephone in April using questions prepared by the state Health Department.

The survey shows that the closer people are to the terminals, the more acute their complaints.

Other findings:

—A total of 457 adults and children in those households were repeatedly ill: 35 percent with headaches; 30 percent with respiratory problems; 10 percent with nosebleeds; 9 percent with rashes and other skin problems; and 8 percent with stomach ailments. Many respondents said they suffer multiple medical problems.

—Residents in 141 households reported smelling gasoline odors in the area.

—Residents of 70 households — nearly one in four — directly blame the gasoline odors or soil and water contamination from the tank farm for family health problems.

Some doctors who treat residents of these neighborhoods say they have noticed patterns of illness.

"I know of one person in particular who over the past 12 to 24 months has had skin rashes, bronchitis and emphysema that I believe is related to the contamination," says Dr. Santiago Zamora, a general practitioner.

"In fact, that person was in here last week, sitting out in the office next to a gentleman who had gasoline on his clothes. He started wheezing and coughing just from the smell."

But Dr. Dennis Perrotta, director of the state Health Department's epidemiology division, said the information cannot be used to establish a direct link between health problems and environmental exposure to toxins.

Some researchers say that, if pollution is a source of these medical problems, it could come from heavy traffic or a nearby school bus garage and trucking terminal.

'Intruders' depicts UFO experiences

NEW YORK (AP) — "They are among us!" screams the hype for "Intruders," the four-hour CBS miniseries starting Sunday. It's based on "actual accounts" of human beings abducted by alien creatures in UFOs.

"This is the most significant development in the history of man!" shouts one true believer late in Hour Three, which airs Tuesday night.

If you feel UFO abductees are victims of psychic wounds so severe as to make alien abduction a pleasant alternative to their lives, "Intruders" may offend and even somewhat sicken you.

"They have thin little gray bodies, big heads, and big black eyes," pants one abductee.

And if, on the other hand, you believe in alien abductions, consider yourself warned: Take some cartoon dialogue and add some dubious plot tricks and you get "Intruders" — a really lousy television drama.

It has no ambiguity and no possibility of dramatic resolution.

"Intruders" opens with a general (G.D. Spradlin) at a NORAD-type establishment. He denies radar evidence of a spacecraft touching down in Nebraska.

Cut to Mary, a Nebraska housewife (Mare Willingham) wandering the highway in her nightgown, in shock, 30 miles from home. She becomes distraught at the sight of flashing blue lights. A policeman takes her home.

Cut to Venice, in Los Angeles, where four men descend from a van with flashing yellow lights in the dead of night. Inside, Lesley (Daphne Ashbrook) screams in sudden fear as they approach.

Oh, no! It's ... the cable TV company! (Just kidding, folks. It's really aliens who break in and take off her clothes and stuff.)

Richard Crenna stars as Dr. Neil Chase, a psychiatrist who treats Lesley. Under "regressive hypnosis," she breaks through the alien-induced traumatic amnesia and remembers dreadful details of her abduction.

Later, the actress discovers a crew of four men messing about in her side yard. "What are you doing?" she shrieks as they bundle into an unmarked van with — get a load of this! — a little rotating antenna on top.

"Geological survey," one says as they drive off.

Dr. Chase attributes her tale to the hysteric suppression of some other psychic trauma. Only when the case of Mary in Nebraska falls in his lap does he begin to believe. End of Part One.

Woman who forced doctors to remove breast implants says she is feeling better

AUSTIN (AP) — A 46-year-old woman says health problems and insurance difficulties led her to slash her breast in a successful effort to obtain implant-removal surgery.

"I feel better already," Marlene Hooker said at a news conference before leaving Seton Medical Center Thursday, one day after an operation to remove her silicone breast implants.

She said she had been trying to have the implants removed for four months "because doctors told me that I had illnesses that were related to it."

Ms. Hooker said she's been told her muscles and nerves are deteriorating. Her symptoms included joint pain, tiredness, chest pain and shortness of breath, she said.

She said her doctor in February advised implant removal, but that her insurance company refused to pay. She said at least one doctor was willing to work with her, but she didn't think any hospital would take her without insurance or a deposit.

After she cut her breast, the insurance company approved the surgery, she said.

The act was triggered by fear the implants had ruptured, Ms. Hooker said. She had woken up Tuesday with a swollen face and a rash resembling one that followed a 1989 implant replacement, she said.

"I thought that this is God's way of telling me, the time has come. They have got to come out," said Ms. Hooker, who lives in Houston but is staying with her brother near Austin.

Ms. Hooker first went to Brackenridge Hospital, where she said a nurse told her the surgery could not be performed in the emergency room. She said she asked if a surgeon could be called.

After about a half hour, Ms. Hooker said she went into a restroom and cut her left breast with a scalpel.

"I thought well, if I go ahead and do something, they'll go ahead and call a surgeon and get this show on the road," she said.

Immediately afterward, Ms. Hooker said one doctor told her she wasn't bleeding much. She said she waited three hours, only to have another doctor say her plastic surgeon had instructed that she be bandaged and sent to the surgeon's office. She said she left Brackenridge, without a bandage, and went to Seton.

Brackenridge spokesman Larry BeSaw said doctors determined that Ms. Hooker's cut was not life-threatening and were consulting with a plastic surgeon about her case.

BeSaw said Ms. Hooker was informed that the surgeon had agreed to remove the implants if she first had a psychiatric evaluation, but that Ms. Hooker left before anything further could be done. Ms. Hooker said that is not true.

At Seton, Dr. Richard Parker removed the implants in a two-hour operation Wednesday. He said he also suggested a psychiatric evaluation for Ms. Hooker because her act was inappropriate and she would need help to "get through all this."

"I don't think that Marlene has any psychiatric problems," said Parker, a plastic surgeon. Ms. Hooker said she has been on antidepressant medication since about 1990, but has no psychological problems besides depression.

Parker said the implants were intact at the time of surgery. They were silicone gel implants, encased in polyurethane, Ms. Hooker said.

The surgeon said the media has created a "hysterical situation" concerning implants. He said there's no proof implants cause health problems, and that more study needs to be done.

Ms. Hooker said she first got implants in 1975, after a doctor advised her to have her breast tissue removed because of fibrocystic breast disease. She said she was pleased with them for several years, but then they got firm, and she has since had them replaced several times.

Ms. Hooker's lawyer, Marian Rosen of Houston, said she planned to file a lawsuit against the implant manufacturers and distributors. She said she would release their names when the lawsuit is filed, likely next week, in state district court in Harris County.

Ms. Hooker is the second woman in as many months known to have mutilated her own breasts because of implants. Laura Thorpe of Bloomfield, N.M., last month used a disposable razor to slash her breasts. Mrs. Thorpe said her insurance company refused to pay for surgery, but the company said coverage was not denied.

"When I heard of the other lady ... I thought, maybe that's what I need to do," Ms. Hooker said.

Cops disciplined for dragging woman by hair

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Two officers have been suspended without pay by the Garland Police Department after investigators found a female prisoner was dragged by her hair, officials announced Thursday.

Lt. C.T. Payne, 32, was suspended for 15 days and Detention Officer S. Williams, 44, was suspended for seven days and placed on probation for 90 days, police Chief Terry Hensley said in a written statement.

"We cannot condone the use of excessive force under any circumstances," Hensley said in announcing the disciplinary action.

The department's internal affairs division investigated the complaint of the woman, who was arrested April 5 on a charge of public intoxication.

Williams dragged her by the hair and Payne, the jail supervisor on duty, failed to stop or report the treatment, police said.

Both officers declined comment.

Another officer received a written reprimand for failing to report the incident, police said.

Tarrant County sheriff indicted

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Tarrant County Sheriff Don Carpenter, already awaiting trial on weapons charges, has been indicted on two additional charges.

Two indictments returned Thursday charged Carpenter with aggravated perjury and theft by a public servant stemming from a 1987 incident in which Carpenter is accused of giving a gun to County Commissioner J.D. Johnson.

According to the indictment, Carpenter swore to the grand jury on Oct. 30 that he "never loaned any guns out to anybody, except law-enforcement officers."

The grand jury said Carpenter perjured himself because he gave a gun to Johnson.

Carpenter's attorney, Joe Brent Johnson, declined comment on the charges until he can read the indictment.

Lowly Marshmallow Can Deliver a Lethal Punch

DEAR ABBY: I am very concerned with young mothers giving their small children marshmallows. I read a disturbing article in your column years ago about a child swallowing a marshmallow whole, and how it expanded and blocked the child's airway. The child survived, but suffered permanent brain damage.

Could you please print that article again? I am running a home day-care center and would like to give out copies of that article to the mothers of small children. Some of these young mothers seem to think our experience and passed-on knowledge are nothing but myths or old wives' tales.

Thank you for all of your past ideas and thoughts.

A CONCERNED DAY-CARE PROVIDER

DEAR CONCERNED: The letter to which you referred was printed in 1988, and I agree — the warning should be run again for those who may have missed seeing it:

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this with the hope that the parents of small children will see it and be careful of what they give their little ones to eat.

My 3-year-old nephew, Chad, was eating a large marshmallow. Nobody paid much attention to him until he suddenly started turning blue! The marshmallow had become lodged in his throat and formed a gluelike seal.

The poor child could not breathe. They applied the Heimlich maneuver, but could not dislodge the marshmallow. Chad was then rushed to the hospital and was actually pronounced "dead," but they revived him by using a heavy suction pump to remove the marshmallow from the base of his trachea.

Chad is now severely brain-damaged. Abby, please print this. Until this happened, no one in our family ever dreamed that such a tragedy could occur because of a marshmallow.

CHAD'S AUNT

DEAR AUNT: Thank you for alerting others. Who would ever dream that the innocent marshmallow could harm (or kill) a child? The information I glean from writing this column boggles the mind.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your column in which you said: "May I toot my own horn a little? In my office stands a 24-inch-tall statuette of a skinny person holding a large OA insignia. On the base of this statuette is inscribed: 'Who cared enough? Who sent the suffering multitudes to recover in Overeaters Anonyrhous? Dear Abby did! 1973.'"

Abby, you are too modest; that award was given to you because of the 40,000 letters that poured into our office as a result of one of your columns.

Before plugging OA, you came to one of our meetings to personally check us out. I recall that you said you were impressed that as a nonmember, you weren't allowed to drop a dollar bill in the basket because Overeaters Anonymous is a self-supporting organization and it declines contributions from outsiders.

OA volunteers answered all those inquiries, and new OA groups sprang up all over the world! Today, we have 9,504 groups in 42 countries around the world!

I remember this all so well because I participated in presenting the Skinny Award to you in 1973. Like AA, the 12-step program works for a lifetime.

I will soon celebrate 23 years of abstinence from compulsive overeating, and am maintaining a 100-pound weight loss.

Thank you for your continued support, Abby. You made a difference. I am signing my name, but in this group we are all ...

ANONYMOUS

DEAR READERS: Anyone interested in finding out more information about this worthwhile organization can find a local group by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Overeaters Anonymous, 383 Van Ness Ave., Suite 1601, Torrance, Calif. 90501.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I attended a wedding followed by a beautiful dinner, after which the groom mashed a piece of wedding cake all over his bride's face! I turned to my two daughters and said, "I'll give this marriage two years!"

I wasn't being facetious, either. How could any woman ever trust a man who only hours before had promised to love, honor and cherish her — then turns around and hits her right smack in the face with a piece of cake?

Had I been the bride, the marriage would have been the shortest on record. A friend of mine attended a wedding last week, and she said the groom smashed cake in his bride's face. She slapped him not once but twice — then spent the remainder of her reception crying because she felt he had ruined her wedding.

I would like to know what lowlife started this tradition? Does this have some sort of sentimental value? I seem to have missed the train on this one. If the bride were my daughter, I would have started a new tradition. It would be: The mother-in-law burns the marriage license, kicks the groom in the behind, and then takes the bride home! Abby, what are your thoughts on this?

ROSALIE SARNELLI, LAS VEGAS

DEAR ROSALIE: I think the cake-in-the-face "tradition" should be retired. It's not funny — it's juvenile.

Readers, does anybody know the history of that obnoxious tradition?

DEAR ABBY: Nowadays, people no longer answer their telephones at home. There is a recording that says: "You have reached Donna and Mark. Sorry we can't come to the phone right now, but if you will leave your name and phone number, we will return your call as soon as possible. Please wait for the beep."

Doesn't anyone use a little imagination? There must be a more original message to accomplish the same mission. Any ideas?

BORED WITH SAMENESS

DEAR BORED: Funny you should ask. Only yesterday, I telephoned a friend and heard the following recording:

"Hello. I'll bet you called just to hear my voice. Now it's my turn. Let me hear yours."

DEAR ABBY: Living in Hawaii, we get hit with some really far-out geographical situations.

Recently I heard a sales clerk tell a tourist that the item he wanted was available at the mainland store. The tourist then calmly asked, "Where is the mainland?"

A local reservations agent got a call from a lady on the mainland who asked if the islands were completely surrounded by water.

But the all-time classic happened a couple of years ago on the beach. While watching the lovely Maui sunset, a lady tourist asked, "What ocean is this?"

I replied, "It's the Pacific."

She said, "Oh, I live near an ocean. I guess it must be the other one."

I asked her where she lived, and she replied, "San Francisco."

I said, "That's the Pacific Ocean, too."

She responded with frustration, "Oh, well, I was never very good at history."

DEAR ABBY: I enjoyed your column with all the information about the American presidents. However, in naming the presidents who had no children, you should not have included Warren G. Harding. It was rumored that Harding had an illegitimate daughter.

SBA loans help small firms survive recession

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A small lumber supply company in North Carolina saw a chance to export high-grade walnut and poplar to Italy if it could overcome one critical obstacle.

Credit.

Prime Lumber Co., like thousands of other young companies with big ideas, discovered it was nearly impossible to borrow enough money to expand its market.

"Our company was fairly new and it was pretty tough to get a loan," vice president Bill Graban said.

But that changed in February when company officials got a $200,000 credit line from Wachovia National Bank under a program through the Small Business Administration. The federal agency guarantees business loans much like the government backs loans for education.

"In our first two years in business we had virtually no exports," Graban said.

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

"SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Agricultural experts say South Texas residents should check for bees before mowing their lawns.

"At least half of the attacks attributed to Africanized bees, or so called 'killer bees,' may have been prompted by vibrations from lawn mowers or other yards tools, officials say."

I'll pass the news along to Harold.

Harold mows my lawn, if you can actually call the splotch of weeds a "lawn."

My yard, maybe. Harold mows my yard.

Harold mows it, not because I'm too lazy, as my wife might have you believe, but because it's mutually beneficial to both of us.

He gets a whole ten bucks — cheap — and I don't have to worry about constantly repairing a mower. In fact, I'd argue with anybody, that having Harold mow my lawn 10 times a year at $100 is cheaper than I could do it myself.

Anybody ever heard of one of those $99 lawn mowers — excuse, me, $129 these days — lasting more than one year?

I've got a refrigerator, an oven and a water heater that are all going on 15 years, but I've never, ever, owned a lawn mower for more than two. At least not one that worked.

Harold mows my yard, and I Weedeat it. I'm amazed at how a thin flexible line like that can slice up weeds without hurting the side of the house.

You get a sense of power from operating a Weedeater. You get sweaty from operating a lawn mower.

The reason I bring up lawns is because I was reading a chapter in a book my sister gave me a couple of Christmases ago called "Why Do Clocks Run Clockwise?" She figured it was worth a column or two. I guess she was right.

Anyway, I was glancing at a chapter called "Why Do We Grow Lawns Around Our Houses?" and wondered, why do we grow lawns around our houses, anyway?

At first thought, author David Feldman points out, it seems simple. Lawns are pretty.

But when you think about it, they are a waste of ecological resources. If you took the average home lawn and used it for growing fruits and vegetables, you could yield two thousand dollars worth of crops. Instead, we spend several hundred dollars a year to keep our lawns short and healthy.

In the Middle Ages, monarchs let their cattle run around their castles, not only to feed the animals, but to keep the grass short so that they could spot the enemy sneaking up on them.

Soon, lawns became a symbol of prestige.

There are a number of psychological speculations for why we keep lawns. Some say it comes from a genetically encoded preference, from when humankind can be traced back to roaming the grasslands of East Africa, to a way of mapping territory, just as other animals mark territory to let others know what property it is ready to defend.

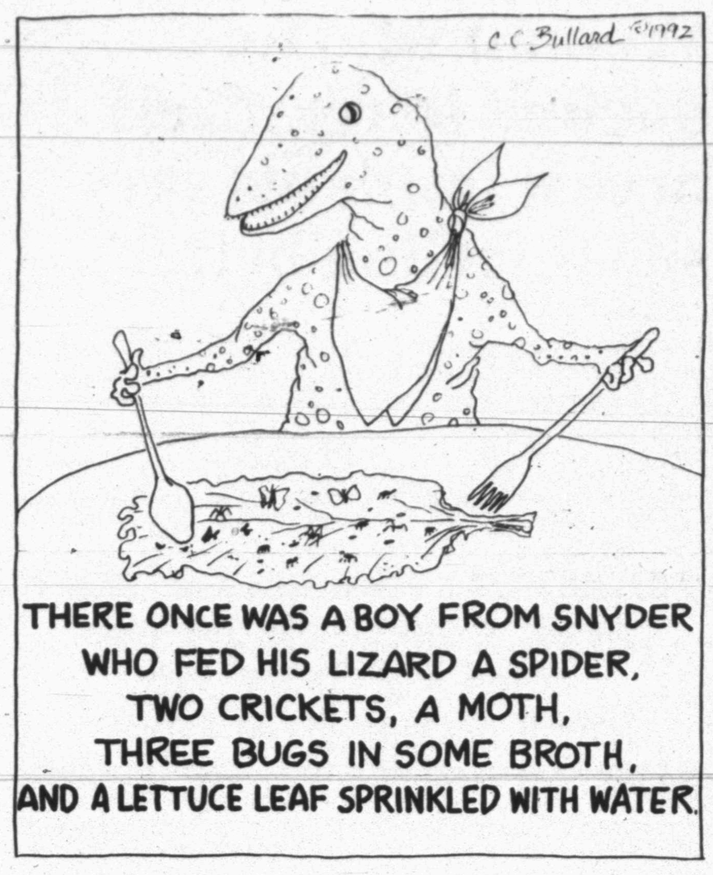

Out here in windy West Texas, lawns are important, if only to keep erosion down.

Another theory is that lawns are a status symbol. From the look of some, I wouldn't disagree.

"The most serious Africanized bee attack occurred April 13 when a Santa Rosa woman was stung more than 400 times while using a Weedeater on her Rio Grande Valley yard. She was hospitalized three days..."

A Weedeater???

Uh, listen Harold, for another five bucks...

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I'd probably get a lot more done around here if I didn't spend so much time hanging out in the hall, watching Chitter and Chatter through the screen door as they build their condo under the eaves of the front porch. After that unfortunate incident with Gizmo the cat, I thought they'd left for good, but they've been back the past few days, working bits of mud and straw into a nest with their beaks, just as if they were using a needle and thread.

The other night a storm blew up, and Kent stepped out to cloud-watch, but he was back directly. "Gotta move out back," he grumbled. "Somebody won't let me in the front yard." Who knew two little birds could be so bossy?

When I'm not birdwatching, I'm wandering the fields and pastures with a camera and notebook, photographing wildflowers before hot winds shrivel them, nibbling on plot ideas, keeping and discarding words like peanuts and their shells. At home, I clean compulsively, rounding up the flotsom and jetsom of several years of writing at home with two growing kids underfoot.

My publisher has two months to make a decision on my latest book, "Copycat," and they intend to use up every minute of that time. While my new agent and my old editor haggle, (I'm not even privileged to know how much money they're talking about); what can I do? Scrub the oven. Watch the birds. Wait for the phone to ring. Pretend that I'm actually able to concentrate on things like new books and newspaper columns.

I toss out plot ideas to my agent, but she's not a rubber stamp, like my old one. She's exacting, demanding excellence from her new client. I realize that if I want to play in the Big Leagues, I'd dang sure better make sure every hit counts. And just like any minor leaguer who's always dreamed of The Show and suddenly learns that there's a scout up there in the stands, watching him play, well, it's terrifying.

Like that old saying, "Be careful what you wish for, or you just might get it."

That bird nest didn't look like much in the beginning. Just a glop of mud under the eaves of the front porch. In just the past few days though, it's started to jut out like a dish-shaped platform. Those little birds work so hard and are so patient, building their new home one tiny glob, one teeny straw at a time. I wonder if they have a blueprint of it in their heads, if they know just how it will be once they finally achieve their goal.

Nope, it sure doesn't look like much right now. Not yet, anyway.

PRIVACY AT RISK:
A growing American concern

As the prospect of unemployment continues to threaten much of the American work force, there is a new way employees may risk losing their jobs. If they smoke, drink or overeat after work hours, they could join the ranks of the unemployed.

According to a recently released nationwide poll, an increasing number of Americans have found that their private lives, as well as their working lives, are being regulated by current or potential employers. The poll was sponsored by the National Consumers League (NCL), a private, nonprofit comsumer advocacy organization based in Washington, D.C.

The NCL's telephone survey asked 1,204 U.S. residents over the age of 21 if prospective employers should be allowed to pose questions about the private lives of job applicants. The response: Two out of three said they would not, but well over half of those polled reported that either they or someone they know have experienced such questioning by a potential or current employer.

In releasing the poll, NCL President Linda F. Golodner said it "shows conclusively that Americans believe that their private lives are rightfully none of their bosses' business, and that employers often fail to respect their employees' right to privacy."

"Hiring, firing and promotion decisions should be based on job performance, and not on what you do in the privacy of your own home," Golodner continued. "All the activities and behaviors tested in this poll — living arrangements, telephone conversations, hobbies, smoking, betting — are legal and common, yet subject to economic pressure. Clearly, the poll underscores the need to educate employers and to establish public policies that will check the erosion of personal privacy."

The poll, conducted in March by Penn & Schoen Associates, was the most recent of a series of surveys the NCL has commissioned to determine the American public's attitude toward, and knowledge about, individual rights of privacy in employment.

When asked about specific questions that may be posed by current or prospective employers, at least nine out of 10 respondents said employers should not have the right to ask if an individual dates someone of a different race, drives a motorcycle, participates in political demonstrations, gambles at a racetrack, supports or opposes abortion, drinks alcoholic beverages after work or smokes away from the workplace.

More than four out of five people oppose employment bias against overweight individuals, and three out of four of those polled say it is inappropriate to deny a job to or fire someone with an unusual second job.

Yet 17 percent of the respondents reported that they or someone they know had either been denied a job or fired for one of these specific reasons.

Some employment decisions based on individuals' private lives and not on job skills or performance have resulted in lawsuits.

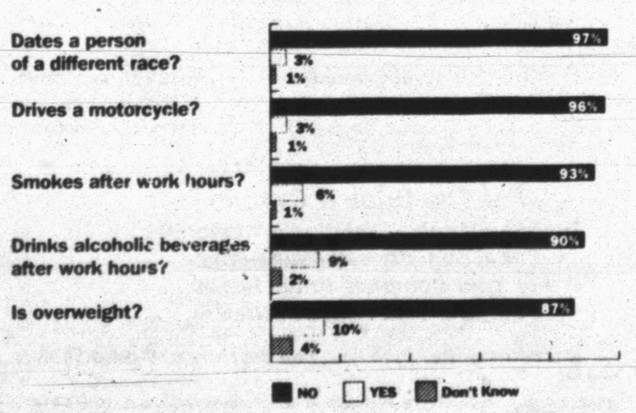

One suit was filed against a local chain of stores in California that required job applicants to complete written psychological tests asking detailed questions about political, religious, sexual, social and medical attitudes. Another case involved a long-term employee who was fired for refusing to end a relationship with a former employee who went to work for a competitor.

But perhaps the most publicized case to date is that of Janice Bone, who was given a test for illegal drugs by her employer as the basis for a promotion. Instead, she was fired when traces of cotinine, a marker for nicotine, were found.

She filed a lawsuit that later became a central issue in Indiana legislators' consideration of a measure to protect privacy.

Indiana is now one of 23 states that have enacted laws to guard employees' right to privacy and to present guidelines to employers. Similar legislation is being considered in 18 other states.

Should an Employer Base Hiring or Firing Decisions on Whether an Individual:

Dr. Gott

by Peter M. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm taking Tegretol for mild seizures. When I take 300 mg daily, I experience side effects of mental confusion, dizziness, double vision and I walk like a drunken person. My doctor wants me on 600 mg. a day, and I dread finding what that dosage would do to me. Any suggestions?

DEAR READER: Tegretol (carbamazepine), a drug for seizures, is useful therapy for many patients. However, the medicine may cause many side effects, to be outlined below, and patients must have periodic blood tests to monitor the level of Tegretol in the system, as well as to check for liver damage.

Furthermore, because the drug can affect the eyes, ophthalmologic exams are advisable. Tegretol should not be administered to patients with liver or kidney disease. The medication reacts adversely with other drugs, including Coumadin (an anticoagulant), calcium channel blockers (for heart disease or hypertension) and doxycycline (an antibiotic). Tegretol has occasionally produced psychotic behavior in patients predisposed to severe mental illness.

The major side effects of Tegretol are bone marrow depression, anemia, susceptibility to infection, dizziness, drowsiness, rash, heart failure, aggravation of high blood pressure, jaundice and kidney damage. Gait disturbances, confusion, headache, hallucinations, abnormal involuntary movements, and a host of other neurological problems can occur.

In short, while Tegretol is useful in treating seizures, it is associated with health risks. If you are having symptoms at 300 mg. a day, I would be inclined not to double the dose because such an imprudent decision could well lead to more serious consequences.

Your doctor has probably taken the position — and properly — that your symptoms represent a transient adjustment to starting Tegretol; many patients experience temporary problems at the beginning of therapy. However, I worry that your symptoms may 1.) mean that you are going to have a significant idiosyncratic drug reaction and 2.) so affect your normal life that you cannot function independently. This is for the birds. Other safer drugs, such as Dilantin, are available. Insist your doctor make a change.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips On Medicines." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

The skin is the most common organ injured during athletic activities. In addition to bumps, scrapes, abrasions and cuts, the skin is also subject to a variety of other stresses, according to Dr. Martin Reichel and Dr. David Laub (from the Department of Dermatology, University of California, Davis), writing in the February 1992 issue of the Physician and Sportsmedicine.

To begin with, sun damage may be significant or subtle; the end results are the same: accelerated aging of the skin, malignant lesions, thinning of the skin, wrinkles and alterations in pigmentation. Although most of us are familiar with acute sunburn, we mustn't forget that tanning, too, leads to actinic injury, notably skin aging and keratoses (scaly premalignant lesions). Fair-skinned individuals are more susceptible to sun damage. Furthermore, wind and reflection (off water, snow or sand) intensify the effects of ultraviolet light. Also, sunlight becomes more intense at high altitudes; for example, ultraviolet radiation is 20 percent stronger at 5,000 feet than it is at sea level. Sportsmen (and women) should bear in mind that reflected sunlight often strikes areas of skin, such as under the chin, that are usually not tanned. Experts recommend a 15 sunscreen for most athletes exercising in direct sunlight.

Cold injury is another common consequence of exposure to the elements. This usually occurs at temperatures below freezing and is classified according to the depth of injury: Frostnip involves freezing of the skin, whereas frostbite includes freezing of the skin and deeper tissues, sometimes down to bone. The majority of cold injuries occur at higher elevations, where the air is thin. The human body battles cold by burning more oxygen and shunting blood inward (to maintain core temperature) by constricting blood vessels in the skin. Since oxygen levels are lower at high altitudes, skin damage is exacerbated by this and by the vasoconstruction that removes heated blood from the skin. The accepted treatment of cold injury is rapid rewarming in heated water.

Weight lifters may experience a type of skin infection, called acne mechanica, marked by inflammation of the skin's pores. This is due to the friction and heat of bench pressing on vinyl-covered benches. However, this sports-related acne is also seen at points of contact from athletic equipment, such as pads, face guards, straps, sweat bands, back packs and helmets. Treatment consists of light, protective undergarments and vigorous cleansing of the skin after activity.

Herpes gladiatorum, a highly contagious virus eruption, affects wrestlers. The condition, which causes painful blisters, is treated with antiviral drugs, such as acyclovir.

Black heel appears in athletes who engage in sports characterized by sudden stops. Fairly common in basketball players, the condition may also affect the palms and fingers of rock-climbers. The discoloration is caused by traumatic petechiae, tiny hemorrhages in the skin. No treatment is necessary, although extra padding will help prevent this harmless affliction.

Jogger's nipples, painful chafing of the nipples, results from friction against coarse shirts. This is now more common in men than in women because the latter ordinarily wear exercise brassieres. Treatment consists of a smooth undershirt or covering the nipples with adhesive tape.

Corns and calluses are caused by pressure over bony prominences, such that the skin dies, thickens and builds up in layers. Calluses are Nature's way of protecting sensitive skin; they need treatment (paring or sanding) only if they crack and become painful. Corns, which occur on the toes, are caused by tight-fitting footwear. A change to more appropriate shoes (softer and looser) usually solves the problem.

The skin is a marvelous organ but, like any other part of the body, will become diseased when stressed.

Radon levels are acceptable

AUSTIN (AP) — A random survey of Texas homes shows that higher than acceptable levels of radon were found in about 5 percent of the homes, which "does not pose much of a problem for Texas," says the poll's coordinator.

Gary L. Smith said Thursday the survey of 2,692 homes identified the Panhandle and Big Bend areas of Texas as having a potentially higher radon level. He said the higher level probably is due to local geology.

Radon is an odorless, colorless radioactive gas that occurs naturally by being released from certain rocks and soils.

Outdoors, radon poses no problem. But radon can accumulate to dangerous levels if trapped indoors.

Elevated levels of radon over long periods of time can increase the risk of lung cancer, officials say.

Connally says he may break GOP ranks to support Perot

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally may break ranks with the Republican Party and support Ross Perot if the Dallas billionaire runs for president, The Houston Post reported today.

"I just think the country desperately needs shaking up," Connally said.

The veteran Texas politician, who was once a Democrat and close friend of President Lyndon B. Johnson, told the Post he wants to "wait and see how well he (Perot) staffs himself" and "how he handles himself" before officially signing on to the campaign.

Connally did not immediately return a telephone call today to The Associated Press.

Bush was scheduled to arrive in Houston later today and will also visit Dallas this weekend.

"I don't blame him," Connally said of Bush's weekend trip to his adopted home state. "He's in trouble here. Perot would beat him in Texas today."

Connally, who has known Perot for 30 years, said he has talked with him once since Perot indicated he might run for president.

"I initiated it," Connally said of the phone call to Perot. "Basically, I just said, 'You started something here. You can make something of it.' "

As a Republican, Connally served as President Richard Nixon's treasury secretary and he also ran for president in 1980 in a race that pitted him against Bush and others. Connally received only one delegate.

Clinton hopes informed voters will chose him over Bush

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Clinton is framing education as a major focus of his fall campaign, asking voters to compare his record and ideas with what he described as President Bush's broken promises.

"One of the major issues that ought to be on the front burner in this presidential election is who can be the real education president and how America can be the country that puts education first again," Clinton told students Thursday in Los Angeles.

From there, Clinton campaigned in Oregon — again stressing his education record — and then headed home to Little Rock for a weekend of meetings with senior advisers to begin to shape the expected fall campaign.

Due in Little Rock today were a dozen Clinton staffers, consultants and informal advisers. As they meet, Warren Christopher, the head of Clinton's vice presidential search, is in Washington meeting with prominent Democrats to interview potential running mates and get advice on how his search should proceed.

Former rival Bob Kerrey, a Nebraska senator who quit the presidential race in March, said Thursday he met with Christopher earlier this week.

"But it really was much more of me telling him who I saw as being good vice presidential candidates. I'm not running for the job at all," Kerrey said on a Nebraska public television program.

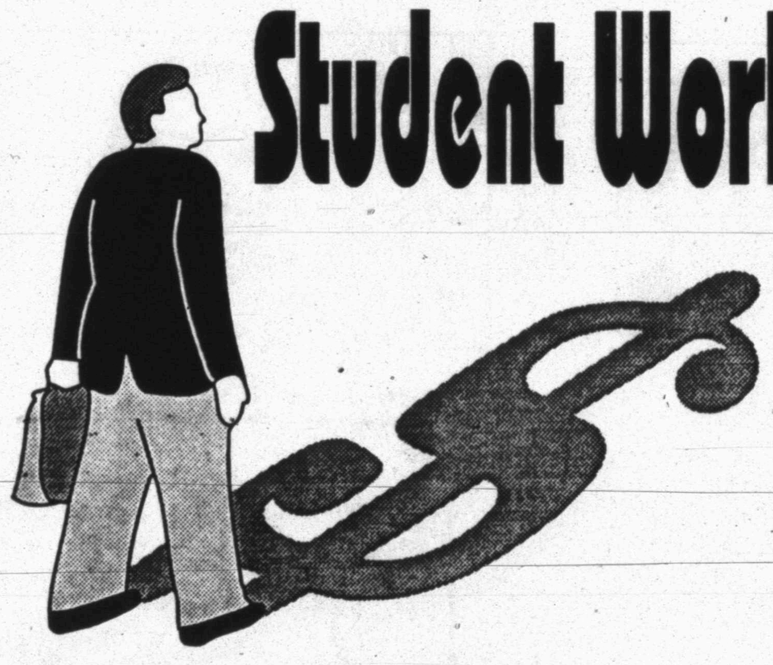

He said his being Clinton's running mate would "take something remarkable for that to happen, like him asking."

Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry was also contacted, according to Clinton aides who said Christopher is likely to contact many senators and House members, some as prospects; others for advice. A Kerry spokesman said the senator gave "general advice" to Christopher.

"America needs an education president who shows up for class every day, not just once every four years," the Arkansas governor told a crowded auditorium at East Los Angeles Community College.

Publisher swamped with ex-husband stories

NEW YORK (AP) — It promises to be an anxious weekend for the nation's cads, one of whom will learn early next week that an ex-wife's essay on his foibles has won "The First Wives Club Consumer Contest."

The stories range from the merely annoying — the rascal who bought his wife the Sunday paper for her 21st birthday — to the truly terrifying: A doctor accused of caressing his wife's face and telling her, "I know just where to press to break every bone in your face."

All are subjects of essays submitted to Simon & Schuster, publisher of "The First Wives Club" by Olivia Goldsmith, a novel about three women who are discarded by their powerful husbands for slim young "trophy wives."

The novel's jacket flap announced an essay contest on "just what a cad your ex-husband is." First prize is a $1,500 gift certificate to Cartier, the jeweler.

The publisher says it heard from almost 200 women, including one behind bars in Wisconsin for trying to hire someone to murder her ex-spouse.

Winners will be determined not by how bad their husbands were, but how literate their essays are. The prisoner, for example, wrote that she was enjoying her 14-month sentence "considerably more than my 18-year marriage."

There's apparently a lot of inspirational material out there, including a scoundrel who rented the basement apartment to his girlfriend and a boor who took back the ring he gave his first wife and presented it to his second one.

Darlene of Tucker, Ga., who raised the children and handled the details of innumerable moves as her husband completed his medical training, wrote that he would slap her on the chest at night and say, "If I'm not asleep, you're not asleep."

When she gained weight, her husband would "use his hands in a sawing motion against my thighs" and warn, "You could get diabetes and they'll cut your legs off right here."

Caroline of Raleigh, N.C., said she used cardiopulmonary resuscitation to save her husband's life one morning when he collapsed after jogging. Six weeks later, while still recovering, he announced their marriage was over. The next thing she knew, he had moved a young blonde from his office into their condo.

During the divorce, he reneged on promises of financial support.

"Had I not been able to do CPR, I would have been alone, but financially comfortable," she wrote.

Carolyn of Redwood City, Calif., related how she was sitting on the couch after an exhausting trip to Disneyland with the kids when her architect husband informed her they had "irreconcilable architectural differences."

As Carolyn told it, he left in the midst of a home renovation: "There was sheet rock stacked everywhere, dust filled every crevice. The roof was off, for God's sake!"

Carolyn, however, got her revenge, gloating about selling the now-renovated house to her husband at the peak of the market. "Oh, and one more thing," she wrote. "My ex-husband is now being laid off from his $95,000 job."

Sounds like material for the First Husbands Club Contest.

Wallace's shooting recalled 20 years late

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press Correspondent Tom Stuckey, who was at the scene when an assassination attempt cut short the presidential bid of George Wallace, looks back on the events of that day 20 years ago.

——— By TOM STUCKEY
Associated Press Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The crowd had been friendly, the reception warm.

Maybe that's why George Wallace decided to jump down off the platform in a Laurel, Md., shopping center 20 years ago today to shake the hands of his supporters.

That spur-of-the-moment decision would change his life.

Minutes later, Wallace lay on the parking lot, blood oozing from the bullet wounds left by a would-be assassin.

The shooting on May 15, 1972, ended the presidential bid of the Alabama governor, who had built a national reputation with his unyielding defense of racial segregation.

It left Wallace in a wheelchair, suffering from pain that continues to this day. Now 72, he lives in Montgomery, Ala., where he works as a fund-raiser for Troy State University.

The assailant was a thin young man named Arthur Herman Bremer, who had followed Wallace around the country as he campaigned for the Democratic presidential nomination.

To this day, Bremer won't say why he shot Wallace. The only clues come from a diary found after the shooting.

"I want to do something bold and dramatic...," said one of the entries. "A statement of my manhood for the world to see."

The man who wanted to be noticed initially attracted no attention that warm, muggy May afternoon as an approving crowd heard Wallace denounce liberals and intellectuals and promise a return to law and order.

The day had not begun well, recalls Billy Joe Camp, then the campaign press secretary and now Alabama's secretary of state.

At an earlier rally in Wheaton, Md., just outside Washington, hecklers had taunted Wallace and tossed tomatoes and eggs.

"Then we got to Laurel. It was a beautiful afternoon, a beautiful crowd," Camp said.

He remembers that the staff was surprised when Wallace shed his coat after the speech and plunged into the crowd to shake hands.

Camp was following behind his boss when he heard the sharp popping noises. "It sounded like a pack of firecrackers it went off so fast," he said.

Cornelia Wallace bent over her husband as if to protect him from further harm, blood staining her bright yellow outfit.

A few feet away, angry Wallace supporters pounded Bremer to the ground. Police and Secret Service agents moved in to arrest and protect the blond-haired, 21-year-old assailant.

Some people appeared stunned, others angry. Still others wept.

The next day, as Wallace lay in Holy Cross Hospital, Maryland voters gave him a big victory over Hubert Humphrey and Eugene McCarthy and eight other Democratic presidential candidates.

But the campaign was over.

Doctors kept Wallace alive, but they could not restore movement to his legs or end the pain.

Bremer was convicted and is serving a 53-year sentence in the Maryland Correctional Institution near Hagerstown.

A parole hearing was scheduled in June 1985, but Bremer turned it down. Unless he requests a hearing, he probably will not get out of prison until at least 2010, prison officials said.

Undocumented workers seized

DALLAS (AP) — One-fifth of the workers at a chicken processing plant were undocumented aliens, federal immigration officials said Thursday after a raid.

Of the more than 360 workers at the Pilgrim's Pride plant, 71 had forged documents, said Ron Chandler, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The company cooperated with the investigation, Chandler told The Dallas Morning News.

Aliens detained by the INS were taken to a facility in Euless to be deported to their native countries, he said.

German philosopher Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel was born in Stuttgart in 1770.

Cedar Bluff alumni to restore school building

APPLEBY, Texas (AP) — Over the rise, and across the road they came. There were the Irby children and the Hancocks. The Wrights, the Stanaland boys and the Brewers. There were Sparkses, Graveses, Stewarts, Scoginses and Lawsons, to name a few.

The path was well worn to the Cedar Bluff school.

The one-room schoolhouse, just past Appleby on Farm Road 2609 in Nacogdoches County, was built in 1911 on land originally donated for a school by W.A. "Bill" Wright. The land and the building still belong to the Wright family, according to Lavene Brewer, who said her mother-in-law was a Wright, and her husband, James, attended school at Cedar Bluff.

"Bill Wright was my grandfather," said James Brewer. "I had a cousin teaching here, and I used to come up here to play with the kids. My cousin said, 'If you're going to be here every day, you may as well go to school.' So I started school at age four."

Brewer said there were about 50 families in the school district back then, and everyone had a lot of children. Farming, especially raising cotton and peanuts, was the main occupation. School couldn't start in the fall until the cotton was picked and the corn was in.

There was no television, and only one radio in the community. People entertained themselves with communal activities that took place on the school grounds, Brewer said.

"There were soup suppers, and candy pulls, and debates where preachers of different denominations would come and talk. And of course each one would think he was right," said Brewer. "There was always something going on."

As you enter the Cedar Bluff school, there are two small rooms that served as the cloak room and library. Children in grades one through four sat on the left side of the main room, and grades five through seven sat on the right. A piece of the original blackboard is still on the wall.

Brewer said a curtain ran down the middle of the room to separate the space, and there were two potbellied stoves, one for each side of the room.

There was an outbuilding that served as a kitchen and a well for water. There were two outdoor toilets — one for boys and one for girls.

Mrs. Brewer said the building was used as a schoolhouse until all the small schools in the area were consolidated with Garrison in the early 1940s. After that the building served as a church for a while and then it became a community center. Wright family reunions used to be held there in the spring.

"We had county agent meetings, and home demonstration club meetings, and old harp singing where everybody would get together," said Mrs. Brewer. "We had dinners on the grounds. Picnics. Everybody would bring something that would make a table and we would spread a lunch."

But as time passed, everything changed. Many of the people who lived in the area, and went to school at Cedar Bluff, moved away. The building, left empty for the past few years, has fallen to ruin. The windows were all broken, the floor has rotted, and the back wall had bowed.

Squirrels had nibbled away at the wooden exterior, and somebody had stolen the school bell from its tower.

Then last October there was a Cedar Bluff school reunion. The classmates, the "old familiar faces," gathered outdoors on the school grounds.

"We couldn't have the reunion inside; it was too dangerous. People still went in to take pictures but the building was unsafe," said Mrs. Brewer. "That's when the idea came to restore the building. Everybody wanted to see it fixed up again. They hated to see it deteriorate."

Brewer said a hat was put on the table at the reunion, and people filled it with donations so restoration could be started. Three months ago the process began. Cedar Bluff graduates and their wives, who are all retired, are now returning every week and setting up camp on the schoolgrounds.

They arrive on Monday, stay through Wednesday, and work to rebuild the building so it can be used again as a community center.

Besides the Brewers, there is Fulton and Lily Irby from New Caney, and Ernest and Jean Wright from Trinity County. Tommy "Mutt" Irby and his wife, Mable, drive in from Livingston, and A.C. and Martha Wright come from Garrison.

The windows have been replaced, the bowed wall has been straightened up again, and the holes made by the squirrels have been patched. The group has plans for more restoration, repainting, and a new bell for the bell tower.

The graduates also want to do research and find the names of all the people who have taught at the Cedar Bluff school.

Brewer said people who are unable to do the physical labor have helped in other ways, like donating money. A garage sale will be held on the school grounds the last weekend in June to raise more money for the building. Donations for the sale are already starting to come in.

According to the Brewers, whose property connects to the school's, people have never stopped driving by to take a look at the old schoolhouse.

Over the years, the graduates have returned with grandchildren and great-grandchildren to show them what it was like in the past. To fill their heads with stories about a time when there was no television and people got together in the evening. A time when children walked miles to go to school.

Man and witnesses accuse police officer of brutality

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso police officer has been placed on administrative leave after a man accused him and two other officers of brutally beating him.

Sam Johnston, a black man, said in an interview with KDBC-TV on Thursday he was hit on the head seven times after he was stopped in what initially was a routine traffic stop.

"In the head, seven times, in the head seven times, I counted it. I can never forget that," Johnston said.

The allegations come after several days of riots in Los Angeles sparked by the acquittal of four officers accused of brutally beating black motorist Rodney King.

The El Paso officer placed on leave was veteran officer Ricardo Elias, who is Hispanic, police spokesman Sgt. Bill Pfeil said. Pfeil did not know how many years Elias has been on the force. The other two officers involved were black and white.

Johnston was stopped in northeast El Paso, at about 4 a.m. Thursday because his license plate light was out. He struggled with the first officer and two officers later drove up to assist.

Police later found Johnston was wanted on two felony warrants, including one accusing him of aggravated assault.

Witnesses at the scene told police Johnston resisted arrest, Pfeil said.

GOP planners hope traffic will not slow convention

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican National Convention organizers are banking on a network of bus routes to get thousands of delegates to the Astrodome through Houston's infamous rush-hour traffic.

Some party officials, however, already are complaining that they could spend several hours a day commuting between their hotels and the site of the convention Aug. 17-20.

"The key is they don't understand a convention," one out-of-state official told the Houston Chronicle. "You guys had the last one in 1928 when there was the horse and buggy."

Paul Klepper, transportation director for the convention, is confident his plan will provide fast and orderly movement of up to 600 buses between hotels and the Astrodome.

At a news conference Thursday, Klepper said officials plan to set up a central command center at the Astrodome to monitor and direct the two shuttle systems transporting participants.

Delegates can purchase a $35 pass to use on a locally operated shuttle system connecting the Astrodome with hotels and downtown.

Klepper said a special traffic management plan tested at a recent Genesis concert at the Astrodome also will be in place. The system includes electronic street signs, radio communication, one-way routes and extra police officers.

The command station will direct bus drivers to the least-congested routes, Klepper said.

Judge clears El Paso Electric of wrongdoing in civil lawsuit

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An Austin judge has ruled that El Paso Electric Co. broke no laws when it bought $70 million in annuities from a now-failed insurance company that is at the center of an insurance fraud indictment.

The ruling came in a 1988 civil lawsuit the electric company filed against First Service Life Insurance Co., which along with El Paso Electric is a defendant in a criminal indictment scheduled to go to trial in July.

The criminal indictment charges 11 prominent El Pasoans and several El Paso businesses with bilking investors in the insurance company's annuities of $9.6 million.

State district Judge Peter Lowry, ruling Friday on a motion from El Paso Electric attorneys in the civil case, said that the utility did not act illegally when it bought the annuities and demanded the insurance company put up collateral to guarantee the investments.

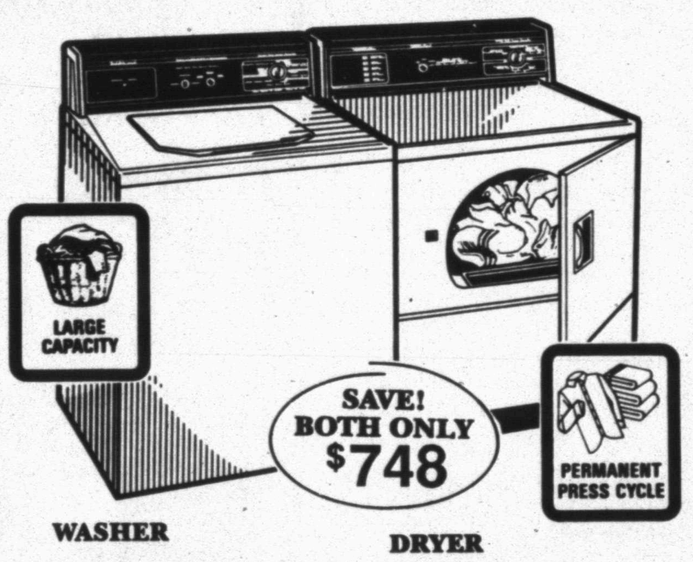

First Service Life was under conservatorship when El Paso Electric demanded payment and the conservator countersued charging the utility committed fraud because a former member of the electric company's board was a First Service Life board member, giving the two companies an insider relationship.

The civil case also is pending but utility spokesman Alan Bunnell said the company feels fully vindicated.
