Marriage penalty

'Living in sin' bonus draws fire

WASMINGTON (AP) — Experts estimate more than 13 million two-paycheck American couples are paying heavier federal income taxes simply because they're married. That means 26 million potential votes — and Congress is concerned.

The "marriage penalty" — or the bonus for "living in sin" — is not a new phenomenon. It was born 10 years ago when Congress tried to eliminate tax discrimination against single persons.

Efforts are made annually to reduce or eliminate the marriage penalty. Each time, it has failed, demonstrating the difficulty in keeping the tax laws fair while using tax incentives to reach social goals.

The latest attempt to reduce the marriage penalty is a bill by Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., and Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J. They say the penalty undermines the family concept and gives couples an incentive for divorce.

The marriage penalty hurts families in which both spouses earn an income; it decreases as one spouse's share of the family income drops toward 20 percent.

Two single persons earning $10,000 each and not itemizing deductions would owe $1,177 each, or $2,354 total. If they married, their taxes would jump by $391.

If one of the two single persons earned $15,000 and the other $5,000, they would pay total tax of $3,837. Marriage would cost them an additional $150.

The penalty rises with income. A $20,000 earner and a $10,000 earner pay $5,014 in tax. A wedding would increase their tax bite by $579 a year.

Two tax code provisions are responsible for the marriage penalty:

—The "zero-bracket amount" — which used to be called the "standard deduction" — is $2,300 for a single person and $3,400 for a married couple filing a joint return. Two single persons get a total deduction of $4,600, or $1,200 more than the couple.

—"Marginal" tax rates, meaning those that apply to the last few dollars earned, are higher for married persons than for singles. This reflects the underlying philosophy that the tax laws should be progressive — that tax rates should rise as income increases. When the two spouses combine their income, the marginal rate goes up.

For example, if two singles earn $16,000 apiece, each is taxed at a 30-percent rate on the last $1,000. The couple with combined income of $32,000 would pay a 37-percent tax on the last $5,000.

The marriage penalty poses no problem for what used to be the typical family — the husband earning all the money and the wife working only in the home. Such families benefit from the tax code's bias toward one-earner couples.

But two-earner couples now are dominant and, despite some modifications in recent years, advocates of change argue that the tax code has not recognized the trend.

Odds against being hit extremely slim

Skylab's break-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — At 100 miles up, Skylab will begin to glow — the first sign that it has begun its fiery death dive into Earth's thickening atmosphere. At 69 miles, it will begin to break apart.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says the space station's much-heralded and much-discussed return to our planet will happen this week, probably Wednesday. Tuesday and Thursday are the other possibilities, NASA says.

First to rip away will be the four windmill-shaped solar wings atop a telescope mount, followed by a single large solar panel on the side of the craft.

Then, streaming flames like a meteor, Skylab will lose its telescope mount at 60 miles. Next to fall away will be a section containing a control center and a spaceship docking port.

The largest part of the station, the 48-foot long workshop where three crews of astronauts once lived, will blaze into a fireball at 55 miles. Its aluminum skin will incinerate, and aerodynamic forces will tear away the laboratory, bedrooms, kitchen and equipment used by the spacemen.

As Skylab disintegrates, fragments will break down into smaller fragments. Most will burn up. But about 20 minutes after the plunge begins, the first of about 500 pieces expected to survive will strike the Earth.

Pieces of debris weighing from a pound to 2½ tons will continue falling for 40 minutes over an area 4,000 miles long and 100 miles wide. The space agency says that no more than three pieces will fall in any 100-square-mile zone.

The surviving debris will weigh a total of about 40,000 pounds. The largest parts expected to make it through the searing descent are a 3,900-pound lead safe used to protect the astronauts' film from radiation and a 5,000-pound titanium airlock shroud.

NASA officials have repeatedly tried to assure the people of the world that chances of injury or damage are extremely slim. They say the odds against anyone at all being hit are 152 to one. The odds against a particular individual being struck are 600 billion to one, they say.

NASA released maps Friday showing areas of the world which will be in the path of Skylab Wednesday. But they merely suggested what cities could be in the path.

No one will know until the final minutes when and where the behemoth will break up. And if it happens in a remote area where there is no ground radar tracking, the exact location may never be known precisely.

"It could appear on one radar screen and not be there when it passes over the next tracking station," said Richard G. Smith, head of NASA's Skylab task force.

Just in case parts of the station hit populated areas, several U.S. government agencies have made elaborate plans to deal with possible emergencies.

As the end nears for Skylab, a task force of about 20 people will man a command center in a windowless room at NASA headquarters here. Included will be representatives of the White House, the departments of State, Justice and Defense, NASA and the Federal Preparedness Agency.

Starting 24 hours before the predicted re-entry time, they will receive up-to-the-minute information on a hot line from the North American Air Defense Command, which is tracking Skylab from an underground base in the Colorado mountains.

Smith said a person inside a home or automobile would be safe from most of the Skylab debris.

The State Department will alert foreign countries which might be threatened. It is particularly important to notify the Soviet Union, so that its warning systems won't mistake a piece of Skylab for an incoming ballistic missile.

If NORAD's late predictions indicate Skylab might leave orbit on a path that would take it over heavily-populated areas, NASA may have a chance to send commands to the station's six nitrogen gas thrusters, tilting it slightly to increase atmospheric drag. This could delay the demise by several hours.

The move would be made only if Skylab's decaying control systems are operating and if the procedure would succeed in bringing the lab down on an orbital path with lower population.

Smith said that if anyone finds a hunk of Skylab, NASA would like to be notified by phone or mail where it came down. But the finder is welcome to keep it. However, if there is an injury or damage claim filed, the agency wants to examine the debris involved to verify that it is indeed a part of Skylab.

SOMETHING TO AIM FOR — A neighborhood near the Offutt Air Force Base in Bellevue, Neb., painted a huge target in its cul-de-sac street. It's just one of the ways good-humored Americans are taking the imminent fall of Skylab.

Hopes to break 'stranglehold'

Carter mulls energy, economy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Carter is drafting a series of executive orders and legislative recommendations to free the nation from the "stranglehold" of foreign oil producers and may make some "highlevel personnel changes," governors who huddled with him said Saturday.

The governors said Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, although never mentioned by name, came under heavy fire during their meeting with Carter at Camp David, Md.

"It was clear they were talking about Schlesinger," said Gov. Julian Carroll of Kentucky.

Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso said it was the governors who "did all the talking about Schlesinger," but James Hunto of North Carolina, talking with reporters after his arrival here for the National Governors Association convention, said, "I would certainly think there will be some high-level personnel changes."

Carroll, chairman of the National Governors Association and leader of the delegation that met with Carter at Camp David, Md., said he too expects "some personnel changes to be made."

Carroll said Carter will come out soon with an agenda of actions to attack the country's energy and economic woes.

"I understand that this is a meeting that has caused considerable anxiety throughout the nation," said Gov. Otis R. Bowen of Indiana, president-elect of the governors' association. "But I also feel that if the president feels the need for reevaluation of all the things that are causing our emergy and inflation problems before he makes a major statement on it, that we should afford him this luxury of the time that it takes to do this reevaluation and get the input from many, many people."

Carter had been scheduled to address the governors at their annual convention here on Sunday, but cancelled when he convened a domestic summit at Camp David. Vice President Walter F. Mondale and first lady Rosalynn Carter will substitute for him at the governors' meeting.

Arriving in Louisville, Mondale accused the oil-producing nations of brutality against America and promised that Carter will come up with a plan to unify the country.

"Over the past six months, OPEC has jacked up the price of oil by 60 percent, and this brutal action threatens unemployment for hundreds of thousands of Americans," Mondale said at a planeside news conference.

ENTERPRIZE — If you want to sell something, you have to take your message to the people and what better way to sell kittens than from a baby carriage pushed up and down the sidewalk. These two salespeoples are Dawn and James Hunt, who Saturday were operating in the 1800 block of Scurry. The children were asking ten cents each for the cats and said they 'planned to put the money in the bank.' One person who stopped for the sales pitch gave them a quarter but declined to take a kitten.

City fathers will revise law limiting truck traffic

The Big Spring City Council will consider an amendment to a city ordinance limiting truck traffic on city streets at its regular meeting Tuesday, scheduled to start at 9 a.m. in the City Council Room.

The emergency reading will be of an ordinance that will be added to the current ordinance regarding truck traffic making it illegal to operate trucks and commercial vehicles exceeding a gross vehicle weight of 10,000 pounds upon certain streets or designated parts of streets.

The council will also present ten year service awards to city employees Lesley Clawson of the fire department and Virgil Jennings of the parks department.

Other items on the agenda include:

Consideration of approval of city council minutes for regular meeting of June 26;

— Consideration of application for certificate of public convenience and necessity for the operation of a taxi transfer service;

— Consideration of appointment of First Southwest Company as financial advisor;

— Consideration of appointment of McCall, Parkhurst and Horton as bond attorneys;

— Consideration of amending the electrical code;

— Consideration of acceptance of Big Spring Airport and Industrial Park Steering Committee minutes for meeting of June 28;

— Consideration of acceptance of Big Spring Traffic Commission minutes for meeting of June 29;

— Vouchers;

— City managers report.

A consideration of limiting the use of city vehicles for personal use and out of city use was tabled.

The item was originally proposed for discussion at the June 26 city council meeting, but was tabled at that time to allow the staff time to obtain additional information for the council's consideration.

Also tabled at the June 26 meeting and for the July 10 meeting was a consideration of increasing the monthly car allowance for police department detectives who are using their own vehicles.

Other tabled items include:

— Discussion of lease agreement between Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center and city;

— Consideration of fishing dock at Moss Lake.

Houston family slain

HOUSTON (AP) — The slaying of a Houston family of three may have been the work of a professional assassin, Houston Detective Dave Collier said Saturday.

The bodies of John Wanstrath, his wife Diana and their 14-month-old son Kevin, were discovered in their home here Friday morning. Each victim died of a single gunshot wound at close range.

Collier said a growing team of police investigators is looking into the possibility that the murders were performed by paid killers. Collier said the positions of the bodies inside the home indicated the possibility that more than two persons killed the family.

Wanstrath was sitting in a wing-back chair in his den as if someone "had been holding a gun to his head," Collier said.

Wanstrath's wife lay dead on the floor near him and the child was lying face down in his crib in the nursery.

Ironically, Mrs. Wanstrath's mother met a violent death in 1975. Gertrude H. Zabolio, 60, was found strangled in the bathroom of her home, a pair of pantyhose wrapped around her neck. Authorities ruled the death was a suicide.

'Bite mark' evidence

MIAMI (AP) — With crucial "bite-mark" evidence and eyewitness testimony from a young art student still intact, prosecutors began efforts Saturday to prove that Theodore Bundy clubbed and killed two sleeping sorority sisters.

But Bundy won a point when Circuit Judge Edward Cowart said the jury would not be told he once said he felt "like a vampire" and feared that uncontrollable fantasies were taking over his life.

The prosecution's major weapons against the articulate former law student emerged unscathed from a week of debate. Cowart brushed aside Bundy's Saturday morning objections that his attorneys were not ready. The judge then ordered opening statements to jurors to begin.

Carter in trouble

Southern support gone with the wind

ATLANTA (AP) — The Southern support that helped Jimmy Carter gain the White House in 1976 is gone with the wind, and Sen. Edward Kennedy is now an equal contender for the votes of Dixie Democrats, according to a poll released Saturday.

"It is now apparent that the last stronghold of President Carter's support in the country has been broken," said Claibourne Darden Jr., president of the Atlanta-based Darden Research Corp.

Among all Southern voters, including Republicans and independents, Carter is now even with Kennedy and below former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, the pollster said. Among Democrats only, Kennedy outscored Carter.

Darden said his statistics are based on surveys conducted June 26-29 among 750 registered voters in 10 Southern states. Carter carried all but one of those states in the 1976 election.

The sample was split evenly between the sexes and weighted to approximate the racial composition of the region, he said. The poll is subject to a maximum margin of error of 3.6 percent either way.

The poll follows a Louis Harris survey showing Carter's approval rating among all Americans was at 25 percent, the lowest figure of his administration and the lowest for any president in the last 30 years.

In a theoretical matchup with Kennedy, a survey of Democrats, Republicans and independents showed 42.9 percent favored Carter and 42.7 percent favored Kennedy, Darden reported.

"There is absolutely no statistically significant difference between these two ratings," Darden said. "Kennedy has split Carter's hard-core support right down the middle."

Among Democrats only, Kennedy was the favorite of 50.9 percent with Carter the choice of 40.1 percent, Darden said.

Of those who said they voted for Carter in 1976, 46 percent said they would now vote for Kennedy and 43.1 percent said they would stay with Carter, Darden said.

He said his last poll of that type, conducted April 13-21, showed Carter the favorite of 45 percent, with Kennedy scoring 38.9 percent.

Carter has not formally announced for re-election and Kennedy has said he will support Carter if the president chooses to seek re-election. Nevertheless, many "draft Kennedy" groups have sprung up around the country.

Asked to explain Kennedy's support in a generally conservative region, Darden commented, "People are grasping for a feasible alternative, even if it's a limousine liberal from Boston."

"There is only one issue — the economy," Darden said.

For the survey, voters were sampled in 84 localities in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Tennessee. With the exception of Virginia, Carter carried each of those states in 1976.

Funnel cloud sighted near Texas City area

By The Associated Press

More thundershowers and slightly cooler temperatures were forecast for Texas Sunday, with cloudy to partly cloudy skies.

The Gulf Coast, East and South Central Texas and the Southwest Texas mountain areas especially could expect showers, the National Weather Service said.

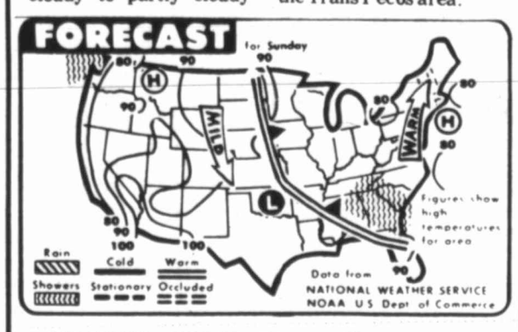

Thunderstorms rumbled along the upper Gulf Coast Saturday, with at least one funnel cloud sighted in the Texas City area, and other showers were scattered across the rest of the state.

Early afternoon temperature readings were in the mid-to-upper 80s in most areas under cloudy to partly cloudy skies. A few low 90s were reported along the Rio Grande, where conditions were clear.

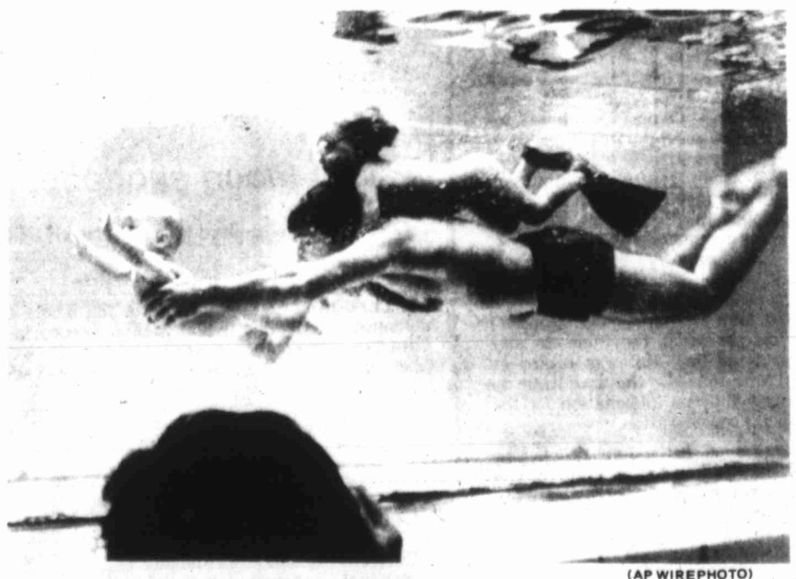

The funnel cloud reported in the Moses Lake area near Texas City Saturday morning prompted tornado and special marine warnings for Galveston County and Galveston Bay, but the storms dimished Saturday afternoon.

Other shower areas were near Midland in West Central Texas and in Northeast Texas and Central Texas, where Georgetown recorded 3.41 inches of rain since Friday.

Mostly light and variable winds blew across the state, but north to northeast winds of 10 to 20 mph were reported in the Trans Pecos area.

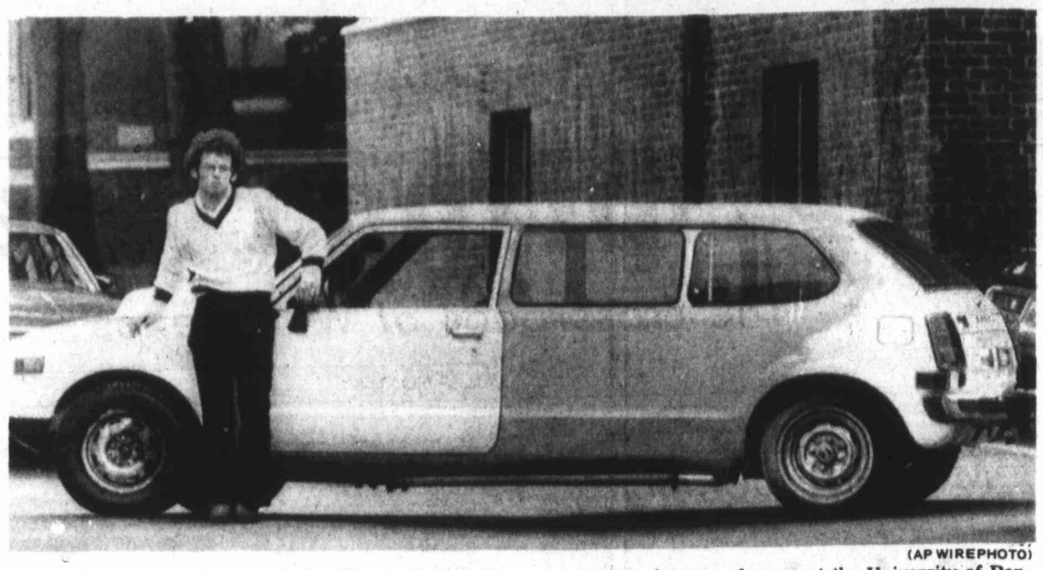

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are predicted today for Georgia and parts of North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama and Washington state, according to the National Weather Service.

Complaints are registered

ODESSA — Five more civil rights complaints against Ector public schools were under investigation Thursday in Washington, D.C.

Ector school officials were notified Thursday of the five new complaints of racial discrimination now being investigated by the U.S. Justice Department.

The additional five charges bring the total of racial discriminaion charges to 14.

Among the five charges mentioned was an individual's contention that school district officials took "intimidatory and retaliatory actions" against an individual because he filed complaints with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Deputy Supt. Lloyd McKee said Thursday, "We do not have specific details concerning these charges."

"However, we certainly do not and have not taken any intimidatory or retaliatory actions against anyone at my time here," he said.

The 14 racial discriminatory complaints were referred to the Justice Department because of the district's status under a 1971 federal court order.

The court order resulted from similar racial discrimination complaints made against the school district almost a decade ago.

Former neighbor charged with murder of girl, 6

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — A former neighbor has been charged with murder in the slaying of a 6-year-old girl who disappeared June 26 while playing alone outside her family's apartment.

An informant told police where to find the body of Tyra Christine Heath, whose badly decomposing body was discovered Wednesday in a wooded area about four miles from her home.

Arrested and charged Friday night was James Richard Harris, 25, a Mesquite city sanitation worker who had moved earlier in the day from the same apartment complex where the Heath family lives.

Police said Harris, married and the father of one child, did not know the Heaths.

Justice of the Peace Frank Berry ordered Harris held on $200,000 bond.

Mesquite Police Chief G.W. Grayson said Harris was not the caller who gave police information on where to find the body, but acknowledged Harris was the man questioned shortly after the remains were found.

Dallas County Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Charles Petty said decomposition of the child's body was so advanced it was doubtful the cause of death could be determined.

Accused rapist arrested here

Tony Marquez, 1105 E. 5th, was arrested on charges of forcible rape Friday night for the Friday morning assault on a 22-year-old woman at 1511 A. Sycamore. The victim told Justice of the Peace Bobby West her 13-week-old baby was injured by a man before she was attacked.

Marquez is being held in city jail pending setting of bond by West.

The alleged rape occurred at 9:30 a.m. Friday when a Southwestern Bell Telephone Company employee asked the woman to allow him to check the telephone lines at her home. When the man had examined the lines he pulled a knife and raped her, the woman said.

The rape was not reported until 12:30 p.m. Friday. The woman's baby was treated and released at Malone-Hogan Hospital with bruises and abrasions.

Bulls running in Pamplona

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — Hundreds of young men, the traditional red scarfs tied around their necks, scampered ahead of six bulls in the narrow streets of the old quarter Saturday in the first day of Pamplona's centuries-old running of the bulls.

The festival began without violence despite Basque separatist threats. The recent Basque separatist bombing campaign against Spanish tourist attractions has kept the bars here at half-capacity, a sign that foreign tourists were staying away.

Last year's festival was canceled after political violence broke out.

Davis trial: Test of judicial system

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — In an era of sequels, it might be called "Cullen II" or even "Cullen III." But many feel the murder-for-hire trial beginning Monday will be the final criminal proceeding against millionaire Cullen Davis.

Both sides say it will be a grueling ordeal, a supreme test of the judicial system. If a jury can be found here, observers say, the proceedings could run through Thanksgiving.

Davis, 45, is charged with masterminding a summer 1978 plot to kill the judge presiding over his divorce proceedings and a dozen other people on an alleged enemies' list. None of the people on the alleged list was killed.

The defendant maintains he was set up and framed by a greedy, vindictive ex-wife who insists he killed her daughter in a bloody 1976 shooting spree.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of the murder charge. A Houston jury failed to reach a verdict in the later murder conspiracy case.

Since the mistrial, Priscilla Davis has won a $3.4 million divorce settlement, and Davis has married his longtime girlfriend, Karen Master, and moved back into his $6 million hilltop mansion.

Prosecutors admit privately the new trial will probably be the final attempt to convict Davis on a multitude of pending charges. The state, not the defendant, is running out of money, at least as far as taxpayers are concerned.

The state already has spent more than $500,000 prosecuting Davis in three Texas cities. According to attorneys for his exwife, Davis has spent perhaps $7 million for his defense.

The Davis story — which has spawned two books, two records and millions of words in news coverage — dates back to Aug. 2, 1976. A man in black, wearing a woman's wig, invaded the Davis mansion and shot four people. Two died.

Killed were Priscilla Davis' lover, Stan Farr, and her daughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12. Mrs. Davis was wounded, and a mansion visitor, Gus Gavrel Jr., was crippled when a bullet lodged in his spine.

Priscilla Davis, now 37, Gavrel, 24, and Gavrel's date, Beverly Bass, now 21, identified Davis as the gun-wielding intruder.

After the longest, costliest murder trial in Texas history, an Amarillo jury deliberated a little more than four hours before acquitting Davis of murdering Andrea.

Eight months after the verdict — on Aug. 20, 1978 — federal, state and local officers arrested Davis and charged him with soliciting the murder of Judge Joe Eidson, then the presiding judge in the long and bitterly contested Davis divorce case. Eidson was not harmed.

The jury deliberated six days and deadlocked 8-4 for conviction.

After the mistrial, Davis was released on $30,000 bond and will remain free pending the outcome of the new trial. The jury will be asked to convict him on a charge of murder solicitation or conspiracy. Each carries a maximum term of life in prison.

TEXAS TYCOON ON TRIAL AGAIN — The next chapter in the continuing court battles of Fort Worth millionaire Thomas Cullen Davis, left, begins Monday in Fort Worth, Texas with his retrial on solicitation of capital murder charges. Davis is accused of trying to arrange the murder of District Court Judge Joe Eidson, right, who was presiding in Davis' stormy high-stakes divorce trial. Davis' first murder-for-hire trial ended with a hung jury in Houston early this year.

Billie Sol Estes' fate is in hands of jury

DALLAS (AP) — A decision on whether Billie Sol Estes remains a free man or returns to a federal prison could be decided Monday when a jury resumes its deliberation on the fate of the West Texas financial wizzard and convicted swindler.

Deliberations are to resume at 9 a.m. Monday following a weekend recess. The 8-woman, 4-man jury discussed evidence in the federal fraud and conspiracy case for 7½ hours Friday but failed to reach a verdict on any of the 10 counts contained in three indictments.

In the 1960s, Estes stockpiled a fortune by selling mortgages on non-existent fertilizer tanks to hundreds of West Texas farmers. He was convicted in 1963 of fraud and was assessed a 15-year sentence. He served less than half the term in federal prisons in Kansas, Minnesota and Texas before being paroled in 1971.

Now, the 54-year-old former financier and his co-defendant, Raymond K. Horton, 51, are accused of masterminding a similar scheme to raise money by selling $600,000 worth of non-existent oilfield steam cleaning equipment to leasing companies.

The government has also charged the two men with concealing assets so Estes would not have to pay $10 million in back taxes.

Estes and former secretary Sue Goolsby also are accused of using documents bearing the forged signatures of Tyler millionaire Billy D. Pyron to secure loans for various business ventures.

Ms. Goolsby, however, will stand trial after Estes and Horton.

In all, Estes faces 10 charges and Horton six.

Orginally, Estes could have been sentenced to 101 years in prison if convicted. But an indictment for tax evasion and two counts of mail fraud have been dropped since February. He now could be sentenced to a maximum of 80 years in prison and fined up to $82,000.

Meanwhile, the 51-year-old Horton could be sentenced to a maximum of 50 years in a federal institution and assessed $60,000 in penalties.

The government's case centers around records stolen from Estes' office by former Mississippi promoter Don Trull, who claimed Estes and Pyron owned him more than $1.3 million.

The records, including a document alleged to be a trust agreement between Estes and Horton, were shown to several newsmen more than two years ago by Trull, who boasted they would bring a second, hidden Estes empire to its knees.

The revelations resulted in investigations by almost every state and federal agency in Texas and culminated last February when the indictments were returned.

They itch but can't raise the scratch

The person responsible for the phrase, "the least of all God's creatures is still of Him a part," no doubt, was reaching for immortality but we wonder if he remembered the mosquito.

Mosquitoes might be very fond of each other but most other animals that walk this earth, be they biped or quadruped have very little use for the little winged creatures, though there are some birds — notably the Marten — which apparently have a great appetite for them.

If you're a mosquito hater, be thankful you don't live in Anchorage, Alaska, at certain times of the year. Man has walked on the moon and developed a preventive medicine for polio but in Anchorage he spends his summers swatting and swearing at the cheeky little zebra-striped pests that seem to take intense personal pleasure in raising bumps on anything that move — be it man, musk ox or a swinging door.

Man has made a valiant effort to contain the mosquito population around Anchorage but the mosquito has won. Furthermore, he knows he has won and "tends to lord" it over-man. In Anchorage, the victory has been so complete that humans have given up the fight altogether.

City officials there say an all-out war against mosquitoes — complete with aerial spraying — would cost $1.2 million a year, a sum city officials aren't exactly itching to spend.

After arriving at the final estimate, the manager of the city's environmental health division, one Rolf Strickland, was moved to say:

"At that rate, everyone in the city could take a bath in Cutters every day."

Health officials have advised victims to use commercial insecticide foggers or repellent sprays that can be applied to clothing and skin. Beyond that, the only answer is "to grin and bear it."

Two years ago, the mosquito problem was especially grave in Anchorage. Strickland's office was averaging upwards to 40 calls a week from people complaining about the pests.

THE JOB BECAME more complicated for Alaskans when DDT was outlawed. If you want to get your house sprayed in Anchorage, a private firm does it for as little as $5, provided enough of your neighbors go along with the idea to make it worthwhile. The spray the firm uses doesn't kill mosquito larvae growing in standing water. All you get is temporary relief. Apparently, the mosquitoes go out for reenforcements and come back to make sure they haven't missed anyone.

Dry weather, the kind we've been experiencing, is popular with neither farmer or the home owner who takes pride in his landscaping but it does control the mosquito situation. Be grateful for small favors.

Scarsdale gas diet

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — For people who are trying to save gasoline I would like to recommend a new book which will soon be on the best-seller lists entitled, "The Scarsdale Gasoline Diet." This time is essential reading for people who are trying to get by on less than 10 gallons a day. It tells you how to cut down on gas consumption without feeling empty. You take a short drive in the morning, then park your car and don't use it again until lunch time. At lunch you can have a spin around the block or practice parking.

IN THE EVENING, you're permitted a 15-mile trip in any direction. But late night driving is a no-no. If you get the urge to take a spin around 11 o'clock, call up a friend and ask him if he'll drive you in his car.

Dr. Seigfried Exxon, the author, has been treating gas guzzlers for 20 years. "The only way to lose mileage," he writes, "is to cut down on your driving. Most people don't like to drive that much, but they were taught when they were young that if they didn't burn up all the fuel in their tanks, they would grow up to be sickly American men and women. Mothers kept pouring gas down their children's tanks because they were afraid if they weren't full, the teenagers would have to walk.

"Most gas guzzlers suffer from guilt. They live to drive rather than drive to live.

"The beauty of my gasoline diet," Exxon says in his introduction, "is that you can drive anywhere you want to, within reason, and always feel satisfied."

Here are some samples of the seven-day Scarsdale Gasoline Diet Plan:

MONDAY

Morning

YOU CAN TAKE the kids to school or drive to work. No substitutions. You can have all the free parking you want between trips.

Noon

A short spin to the supermarket. No detours. If you're at work, leave the car in the garage.

Evening

You are permitted a run to a drive-in movie or a visit to friends, providing they don't live more than 15 miles away. If you stay in for the evening, and no one uses the car, you get credit for the mileage and are entitled to an extra gallon of gasoline the next day.

TUESDAY

Morning

You can go to the tennis court or visit a friend's house, providing it is not more than five miles away.

Afternoon

One run to the shopping center and a hamburger at the drive-in of your choice. (If you take the kids to the doctor, eliminate shopping-center trip.)

Evening

You are permitted one cocktail party or dinner party with no dressing. (Note: Since you won't be doing this every night, you are allowed to drive the babysitter home.

If she lives more than 12 miles from your house, eliminate the drive the next morning.

The beauty of Dr. Exxon's gasoline diet is that it permits substitutions as long as you stay within your mileage limits. For example, if you work and you take the bus or the train in the morning, you can then go to a ball game or a concert at night. If you're at home and you don't have to carpool the children, you can treat yourself to the hairdresser.

Dr. Exxon's best advice is that if you feel tempted to take a long trip for fun or want to visit relatives for the hell of it, call up James Schlesinger at the Department of Energy and ask him to talk you out of it.

"Hey! You turkeys down there in Tokyo! From our summit to your summit!"

Bladder has automatic 'escape valve'

Paul E. Ruble, M.D.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I was discussing bladder problems (mine) with my smart-aleck husband last evening and he says the bladder has an automatic safety valve that relays a message to the brain when one must urinate. His explanation didn't entirely satisfy me. Can you elaborate? If you agree, I owe him a restaurant dinner. — Mrs. R.G.

Better pay off. He's basically correct. It is one of the more interesting "features" offered in all body styles. Although urination is normally a voluntary act, the mechanical process is pretty much as your husband describes it. The gradual filling of the bladder "stretches" certain muscles. When bladder capacity is reached (about 500 milliliters for a normal adult), pelvic nerves are activated, the brain "gets the message," and we leave the room at a party to relieve ourselves. Maybe he'll let you use his credit card.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is colitis always related to a nervous condition? Also, is a person with such a condition more apt to have loose movements or diarrhea? — G.M.

There are different kinds of colitis. One is called "nervous bowel" or "irritable colon." This can accompany a nervous personality. Other types of colitis are more serious and can occur in the calmest of individuals. You have to find which kind (if any) you have. Diarrhea is common in any type. You'll find the various forms discussed in the booklet, "Colitis and Kindred Complaints." If you need it, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of the Big Spring Herald and I'll mail you a copy.

Dear Dr. Ruble: My husband went completely blind in one eye for about 45 minutes, sort of a total eclipse. We were told this might be caused by a blood clot. What can you tell us about this? Is there a chance it could happen again? Is there medication he should be taking? — Mrs. T.L.

Temporary blindness in a single eye has two causes — migraine headache or lack of blood supply to the eye. You do not mention headaches, so I assume the cause was bad circulation. The medical name for this is "amaurosis fugax."

It is a serious warning. This loss of blood circulation to the retina (behind the eye) usually means arteriosclerosis (hardening), often in the carotid artery (located in the neck) on the effected side. The state of that artery can be checked easily, and other tests will show the status of the tiny vessels supplying blood to the retina itself. Sometimes, arteritis (inflammation of vessels) can cause a circulation disruption, and, of course, so can a blood clot.

Blindness does not usually last as long as your husband's (more on the order of 15 minutes or less). It would be difficult, in any event, to tell whether the stoppage of flow was from a clot or not. The need for medicine or treatment would depend on just what caused the stoppage. A second attack is entirely possible, so your husband needs a thorough examination of his circulation, specifically that in the head area.

Dear Dr. Ruble: What do you say about alcohol for a post-stroke patient? — Mrs. T.E.B.

No harm usually, if taken in moderation. However, because of vessel problems in the head, the post-stroke patient has less tolerance and may get more effect from a smaller amount. The doctor should rule.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Does constipation cause prostate gland trouble? — J.H.

No.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with this or other rectal problems, write to Dr. Ruble, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of his booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dear Editor:

The subject "Preventing an outbreak in rabies" is to be brought up at the County Commissioner's Court July 16 starting at 9 a.m. It is already on the agenda for that date.

Anyone having an idea of how to achieve that goal is invited to attend. If steps are not taken to prevent an outbreak of rabies, and soon, we in Howard County may find the price for apathy very high in human suffering and loss of animals. We must not let this happen.

Several counties, in Texas, have already had a serious problem with rabies. Let's try to prevent such a situation in this county. Meet with the commissioners, Monday morning July 16, and pledge your support for the preventive action. Remember: an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure.

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do you stress the Bible so much? After all, the Bible is just the opinion of various writers about their idea of God. — G.C.

DEAR G.C.: If this were all the Bible is, then you would be correct in suggesting it should not be emphasized very much. It would be the same as any other religious book and there would be no particular reason why we should pay special attention to it.

But I am convinced the Bible is not what you say. Yes, it is the product of human authors, and we can discover what they thought about God. But the Bible is more than that. The Bible is God's Word to us. The writers of the Bible did not simply dream up some nice ideas about God. God revealed Himself to them and guided them as they wrote. We may not fully understand how that could happen, but over and over again in the Bible we find expressions like "The Word of the Lord came to saying" or "Thus saith the Lord." The authors were convinced God was speaking through them. "Prophecy never had its origin in the will of man, but men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit" (2 Peter 1:21, New International Version).

I probably will not convince you just by stating my own convictions about the Bible. There was a time many years ago when I wondered, as you do, what the Bible really was and whether or not it was just the word of man. But one night I accepted the Bible as God's Word by faith. Since that time I have had its divine origin confirmed to me in countless ways.

There are many reasons for believing that the Bible is God's Word. You may want to get some books at your local Christian bookstore to help you think through some of these. But I believe the greatest proof for many people is reading the Bible and finding it come alive in their hearts and minds.

Have you ever really studied the Bible with an open mind? I invite you to take the Gospel of John and read through it carefully. I believe you will not only come away convinced of the divine origin of the Bible, but also will come to know the Living Word, Jesus Christ, who can save you and give you a whole new outlook on life.

Not friends

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union's heavy-handed attempts to win over satellite nations with bargain-basement arms deals don't always work. The Russian Bear proved too overbearing for the Egyptians a few years back, and the Soviets were unceremoniously booted out. Now the same thing may be happening in the small Andrean country of Peru.

The Soviets, shopping around for another Latin American foothold three years ago, made the Peruvian government of President Morales Bermudez an offer that was hard to refuse. Secret documents show that the Russians offered to sell Peru 36 supersonic jet fighters, promising "immediate delivery, two percent interest and a two-year grace period."

BERMUDEZ WAS IN the market for fighter planes, but hadn't received any offers outside the Kremlin. "Peru has contacted the U.S., France, Israel, the U.K. and the USSR," the documents disclosed. "But only the Soviets have provided substantive information about the kind of aircraft Peru wants."

So the deal for the 36 planes was made; last year, Peru purchased several additional planes from the Russians.

At the time of the first sale, Bermudez insisted the transaction was strictly business. "Airplanes have no ideology," his foreign minister assured local newsmen.

But the secret documents reveal that from the coutset Bernudez was under pressure from inside his own government to avoid identifying himself too closely with the Soviets. "The Peruvian government will have to weigh purchasing the Soviet aircraft against the political implications of a deepening military relationship with Moscow," one analysis states. "Lima is facing pressures from rightists in the army and some opposition within the air force has also surfaced."

Bermudez would seem to be an unlikely candidate for Soviet seduction. He emerged as head of state after a bloodless coup ended almost a decade of leftist government and led Peru onto a more moderate course. But the Soviets apparently hoped to get some political return on their investment of economic and military aid to the previous regime.

THE PERUVIAN president assured then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger that Lima was not turning away from the United States. "I know that you're a friend of our foreign minister and therefore anything I might say would be redundant," Bermudez told Kissinger in a private meeting in February 1976. "But I want to stress that the purpose of Peru is that its relations with the United States be the most harmonious possible."

Bermudez has kept to that goal. Peru and the United States have quietly negotiated an agreement on future arms deals. Bermudez has promised to make no new weapons purchases until after the elections scheduled for next year, when presumably his military government will relinquish power.

Meanwhile, the Soviet fighter-plane deal appears to have been frustrating to both parties. The Russians have failed to make any political headqay in Peru; the Peruvians have had trouble maintaining the Soviet aircraft and purchasing spare parts.

"We now have indications they might drop the Soviets altogether," U.S. officlas told us. Chalk up one goose egg for the Kremlin.

HALL OF HEROES: Fred B. is an FBI agent who has talked to Death twice on a time-bomb basis. As minutes ticked by like eternity, the spoke quietly and persuasively to demented men who threatened to kill themselves — and him — and succeeded in disarming them.

Because of unusual security requirements, the identity of Fred B. must be protected. On that anonymous basis, Fred B. is a worthy inductee into our Hall of Heroes.

A 34-year-old Midwesterner, Fred B. joined the FBI eight years ago. He was given intensive training in the handling of political fanatics and deranged individuals who try to further their goals by threatening to kill innocent hostages.

His first confrontation occurred at a military hospital, where a veteran, high on drugs, took two doctors hostage at gunpoint and threatened to kill them if he was not given his medical records.

Fred B. rushed to the scene and first succeeded in taking the place of one of the hostages. Aware that he was dealing with a hair-trigger paranoid sschizophrenic, Fred B. patiently listened to the man's litany of persecution, suffering and mistreatment. After an hour, the other doctor was let go.

At one point, the veteran told Fred B., "I can do anything I want with you, and that could mean blowing your head off." The agent spent another hour in gentle persuasion and talked the man into putting his revolver on a chair six inches away. Then Fred B. momentarily distracted the veteran, lunged across the desk and grabbed the gun.

Six months later, Fred B. raced to a major airport where a hijacker had taken over a commercial airliner by brandishing a package he said contained explosives.

Stenholm: 'You don't fill an Omar Burleson's shoes'

WASHINGTON (AP)- For U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, it hit him as he drove across the 14th Street Bridge the day of his swearing-in ceremony.

"You've got to make the decisions; the decision is yours," the congressman from Hunt said were his thoughts.

The final realization that he really was a congressman sank in a little earlier for U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas. He said that last December after an orientation dinner, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill suggested a stroll onto the House floor. 7 7"It was the first time I had actually been in the House chamber. That was the first time it struck me," Frost, of Dallas, said.

Now six months into their kirst terms as congressmen, the members of the Texau freshman class say they are making their adjustments to the pace and the puzzles of Washington.

And perhaps more importantly for a delegation which has newcomers filling a third of its seats, the freuhmen maintain the drastic drop in seniority has not put as much of a crimp into the delegation's clout as once had been feared.

"I can't imagine how much harder the job would be if I weren't a Texan. I've got people to go to to get help," said U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm.

The veneral concluuion was that the 24 members of the Texas delegation stick together on issues affecting the state, although they might not agree on every vote.

Gramm, a Democrat from College Station, said the freshmen have compensated for the loss of nine memberu who carried collectively 196 years of ueniority.

"What we lost was seniority and committee chairmanships. What we gained was a more active, aggressive class. So there was a gain and a loss," Gramm said.

"This is a place where change is the normal state of affairs. It's something I hope I always keep in mind- this place goes on without you," he said.

U.S. Rep. Marvin Leath said the retirement of four longtime members of the Texas delegation might have hurt more if it had not coincided with a time of growing influence for House Majority Leader Jim Wright, of Fort Worth.

"I think this filled a great deal of the void," Leath, a Democrat from Marlin, said.

U.S. Rep. Joe Wyatt, a Democrat from Marlin, made a similar observation.

"The influence that we lost is somewhat enhanced by the fact that we have the majority leader. He may have to work harder to save us," Wyatt said.

As an example, Wright and the other senior Democrats in the delegation helped their freshmen counterparts get their kirst choices for committee assignments.

The placement of Texans among the House commmittees has in turn helped the delegation's collective influence.

"I think on balance it is still the strongest delegation in the Congress," Wright, in line to be the next speaker of the house, said. "It has more committee chairmen; it has considerable influence in all committees."

Wright sai 8the Texas delegation's camaraderie- "a very precious thing"- is not found in the other large delegations like New York, California or Pennsylvania.

"They don't stick together to the same degree that Texas does," he uaid.

Wright said the state's freshmen "have come into the family and joined the family."

Almost every freshman mentioned turning to Wright, and a variety of other delegation members, for advice or help during the first six months.

"I would be glad to visit with colleagues from all over the country. It isn't a thing I confine to Texans at all," Wright said, laughing. "But the texans, I guess, come to me more krequently. Maybe they feel a little freer to do that and cultivate the habit."

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, who took the West Texas seat vacated by George Mahon, said his predecessor's name value as longtime chairman of the House Appropriations Committee has a lingering value.

The former state senator said he frequently finds other congressmen remembering him as the person who filled Mahon's seat.

"I feel like with a freshman a lot of times if they just remember who you are, it gives you a better chance," the Lubbock Democrat said.

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm also replaced a longtime Capitol Hill fixture, Omar Burleson. Stenholm as a result has developed a pat answer for those who ask about replacements.

"You don't fill an Omar Burleson's shoes. You don't attempt to," the Democrat from Stamford said. "I hope to wear out my shoes in the same direction."

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland's predecessor, Barbara Jordan, served only three terms but acquired a national following.

Leland, a Houston Democrat, said he is not worried about comparisons.

"I don't feel any pressure to fill Barbara's shoes," he said. "I've just decided people are going to have to look at me as my own example ... Barbara had her own act and I've got my own act."

Nixon gives Cancer Society $100,000

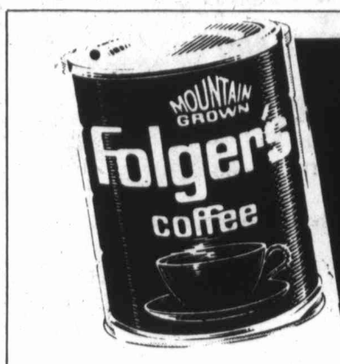

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon has given the American Cancer Society a gift of $100,000, the society announced today.

It said the contribution in the name of Nixon and his wife was given as a memorial to a number of cancer victims, including John Wayne and Hubert Humphrey.

The society said the contribution was made by check in a letter that Nixon sent to Paul Williams of North Palm Beach, Fla., a vice chairman of the society's board.

Nixon said he was impressed with Williams' description of progress being made in the prevention and cure of cancer.

"Consequently, Pat and I would like for you to use the enclosed check for this vitally important work," he said.

Hospital official will attend THA sessions

NORMAN KNOX

Norman Knox, administrator at Malone-Hogan Hospital will be in the Austin area during the week of July 8-13 to participate in orientation and planning sessions for trustees of Texas Hospital Association. Knox was elected to a 3-year term on the board of trustees for THA in Dallas June 6.

The local administrator has been a member of the state organization since 1961. He has served as district advisor, a member of the pension investment committee of THA, the committee of 100, the committee on insurance, the coucil of public education, the council of hospital service plans, and the advisory committee to council on comprehensive health planning.

He served as chairman of the Permian Basin Hospital Division, president of the Northwest Texas Hospital Association, and as a delegate to the THA house of delegates.

Knox is presently a member of THA's committee on investor owned hospitals, the board of directors, Permian Basin health system agency of area 12, and a member of the project approval committee of PBHS. He is chairman of the THA council on administrative practice.

Knox came to Big Spring in September of 1969, as assistant administrator to S.R. Riley, then administrator of the hospital. He is orginally from Borger.

He attended Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. His first administrative post in the hospital field was in Snyder, where he was assistant administrator from 1959-1961 at Cogsdell. He became administrator at Stephens Memorial Hospital in Breckenridge in 1061, then moved to Lamesa to become administrator at Medical Arts Hospital there in October of 1962.

When Knox joined Malone-Hogan in 1969, the 65-bed hospital was owned by a foundation. In 1973, Hospital Corporation of America was approached to build a replacement facility for the old hospital. Knox was retained as adminstrator by the Nashville based corporation.

Knox is married to the former Jane Roberts of Abilene. They have three daughters, Kerrie Sue, Jean Alice, and Leslie Ann.

DI's charged with brutality

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — The Marine Corps has begun an investigation into charges that three drill instructors allegedly assaulted more than 100 recruits last month.

A spokesman, Master Sgt. Paul Thompson, said Friday the formal investigation, similar to a civilian grand jury hearing, would be conducted next week.

He said the allegations involve Gunnery Sgt. Charles L. Bryant, 28, of Nashville, Tenn.; Staff Sgt. Ricky L. Cross, 29, of Anadarko, Okla.; and Sgt. Joseph Lopez Jr., 23, of Fresno, Calif.

The men were immediately suspended with pay from drill instructor duty after the recruits at the Edson Range reported the assault June 27, Thompson said.

A fourth drill instructor faces a special court-martial on charges of allegedly assaulting 14 privates in a separate incident, he said.

The complaint also states that the drill instructors were "drunk and disorderly and communicated threats," Sweeney said.

Fatalities on highways down, deaths on city streets rise

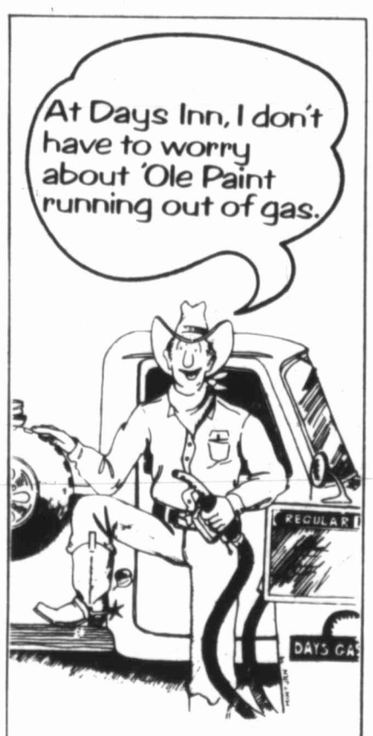

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It's safer to drive on interstate highways and farm-to-market roads in Texas than on city streets, the Department of Public Safety reports.

DPS statistics reported Friday showed that traffic deaths are up 13 percent in cities and towns and accidents in which fatal accidents occur are up 8 percent.

On the other hand, DPS said, fatalities on interstate highways are down 17 percent and deaths on farm and ranch roads are down 10 percent.

Overall, traffic deaths in Texas this year show an increase of 5 percent, or a total of 1,894, over last year. There have been 1,624 fatal accidents, compared to 1,555 in 1978, an increase of 4 percent.

Psychological barrier--the public's fear of the needle

Blood is in short supply in some parts of Texas

By The Associated Press

Like gasoline, blood is in short supply in some parts of Texas. But there is no question about the availability of reserves in this shortage. Blood banks are faced with a psychological barrier — the public's fear of the needle.

While banks across Texas reported tight blood supplies, Dallas and Fort Worth have been hit particularly hard.

Dallas' medical community requires 300 pints of blood from Wadley Blood Bank each day. In June, Wadley collected an average of about 175 pints a day.

Holidays and the summer are the worst times of year for blood banks. The number of accident and crime victims increases, requiring more surgery. At the same time, donations plummet because of vacations and summer activities.

This year there's a new factor — the gasoline shortage.

Regular donors are staying home because of empty gasoline tanks and carpools, said Bob Mahurin, director of Wadley's donor services.

"We're getting a lot of feedback from what we consider good donors," he said. "It's the first time we've experienced anything like this."

"If we have a deepening energy crisis, we'll have a real problem," said Dr. Norwood O. Hill, president of Wadley Institutes.

Four percent of eligible donors in the United States give all the blood, Mahurin said. Over the years, the number of donors has risen, but not in proportion to the increasing use of blood in hospitals.

"If everyone who used blood replaced it or had a friend or relative replace it, there would never be a shortage," he said.

Each day, a pool of employees calls previous donors from a computerized list of 35,000 names. Sometimes those who respond are the only source of blood.

"If the supply goes to nearly zero, we'll either have to cut oif surgeries or get more donors," Hill said. "We've always gotten out of tight spots by getting enough public response."

When a flu epidemic hit Dallas ten years ago, he said, Wadley's supplies dwindled to "15, 10, five units. When the public appeal went out, we were swamped with donors."

Now, he said, he doesn't know whether people are busier, but "we don't get the same response to a public appeal we used to. It takes more impact for people to give blood in a big city. What does it take to impress upon people that blood is the center of research opportunities that may have therapeutic use in a wide variety of diseases? Somehow our nation has this powerless attitude."

"What blood there is goes to the trauma patients and the accidents and just the absolute necessities," Mahurin said.

Getting the absolute necessities, he said, is "touch and go sometimes. But we've never had anyone die because of a lack of blood. That has happened in some of the larger cities. But I tell you what, we've sure traded blood around from hospital to hospital in a hurry to prevent it.

"The last two weeks it's been very grim," Mahurin said. "We service 43 hospitals, clinics and small hospitals. Here we're sitting with this amount today hoping there are no open hearts or really serious surgeries.

"Some of these things it's nothing to go through 20 or 30 units with certain types of surgery. Well, I don't know what's in the hospital, but 30 units sitting naked on the shelf is just nothing.

"Yesterday we went out to Hunt County. This blood collection was a very losing proposition for a non-profit blood bank. We took four people and a unit all the way to Hunt County, which is Greenville (50 miles north of Dallas). We do one unit of blood and we're expecting 35."

On the same day, Wadley hoped to collect 150 pints from a Dallas area construction firm, but received 88 pints. Wadley's goal is 200 units a day from its drives and its four stations in the Dallas area.

Giving blood is "not that hard," said Austinite Carole Geffen, a donor since 1977.

She said she donates because she can receive blood more readily if she needs it "and because I think it's a good thing to do. They check your blood pressure regularly, plus I know that blood is going to a good cause."

One time, she said, a large bruise appeared on her arm after a donation.

"We try to keep that to a minimum," Mahurin said. "Once in a while that's going to happen. It upsets people, it doesn't look good and probably sometimes it hurts. And this irritates people and they probably would say, 'Well, you're a bunch of butchers down there and I'm not coming back.' We try to see that this doesn't happen. It shouldn't ever happen."

When a prospective donor arrives at Wadley, he is questioned extensively about illnesses and conditions that might preclude him from giving blood. Even if he passes as a donor, hepatitis, venereal disease and several other tests are run.

Wadley's reject rate averages 17 percent, but not all of these "deferments" are permanent. Donors who were turned away because of such problems as colds or recent medication may return. Mahurin estimated the permanent deferment rate at one-fifth of total donations.

Donors who give a pint of blood are entitled to a credit of one pint, which they can use for any "account" they wish. Family blood plans also are available.

One way Wadley adds donors is through KTXQ radio's broadcast drive just before Labor Day.

In 1977, the rock station gave away T-shirts and stereo equipment in hopes of drawing 500 pints of blood.

In a week, 1,000 pints were donated by an overwhelming percentage of first-time donors, said Bud Stiker, president and general manager of KTXQ.

The second year, the broadcast was expanded to Carter Blood Center in Fort Worth, and the drive brought 2,000 pints in a week.

"They'll get us 1,000 pints of blood at least just by broadcasting," Mahurin said.

"I believe a radio station is obligated to do something for the communtiy, to try to raise its consciousness," Stiker said. "If you can sell blood on the radio, you can sell anything on the radio."

Mahurin still has doubts, however.

"I don't know how effective the radio is because it's just like the little boy who cried wolf — you know, they've heard it so many times. Pretty soon, they just don't respond," he said.

Another source of donations are Wadley's 850 blood clubs, made up of businesses, churches, civic groups and small communities.

One of the best, he said, is the Dallas Association of Life Underwriters.

Members of that group say their blood drive was successful because they personalized it by "adopting" a 2½-year-old boy with leukemia, Gregory Gossler.

After the boy and his parents attended an association meeting, "things just skyrocketed," said Keith White, an insurance agent and director of public service projects for the association.

Within a few days, 77 pints of blood were donated and earmarked for the boy's use, 120 more were pledged and about $1,800 was collected from persons who could not donate blood.

"We told them, 'Greg needs you. He needs your healthy blood. All he needs is one pint of your healthy blood and 20 minutes of your time,'" said Cheryl Fairchild, a brokerage manager and publicity chairman for the association.

Paid donations are out of the question for non-profit Wadley, Mahurin said. He stressed that Wadley and other blood banks that deal with hospitals have no link to plasma centers, which pay for donations and sell primarily to pharmaceutical firms.

"We wish they didn't exist, not that we couldn't live with them or live without them; it's just that they give blood banking a bad name," he said. "Some commercial blood banks are nothing more than catering to anyone that will come in and wants $10 bad enough.

"They probably run only tests they're required to run to stay in business, because they're in it for fun and profit. They're drawing this blood to ship somewhere else and sell it somewhere."

Ironically, pharmaceutical companies have a surplus of blood said Dennis Heverly, manager of the East Dallas Plasma Center. The center, which draws only plasma — the fluid part of the blood — has just lowered the donor fee from $10 to $8 because of the surplus.

Blood banks like Wadley share blood through the American Association of Blood Banks, a clearinghouse for credits.

The clearinghouse notifies banks of available blood, and sometimes banks compete for available units, Mahurin said.

Ultimately, he said, the bank that gets the blood is "whoever can present the best story...Sometimes it's friendship, sometimes it's stroke, sometimes it's politics."

Dallas and Fort Worth appear to be the only areas of the state hit with serious blood shortages. Other banks say that while they are going through the usual summer squeeze, they are coming close to meeting community needs.

"I'm sure a lot of people come close to getting surgery canceled," said Dr. W.R. Laughlin, a clinical pathologist in charge of Presbyterian Hospital's blood bank in Dallas. "We have not canceled any surgery here yet, although some may have been rescheduled."

At the Dallas Blood Center, "we crank up more mobiles, but that doesn't keep us above board," said lab technician Tommy White.

Dallas' Parkland Hospital even tried to collect blood outside a theater where a vampire show was playing.

"That did not work out well," Barbara Emmett of Parkland's adminiutrative staff uaid. "It worked in New York. But this was such a small theater group, and there's nothing else there but a couple of discos."

Fort Worth's Carter bank has issued its first public appeal in two years for O positive and O negative blood, said Richard Wilson, director of hospital services.

Merv Griffin and Mike Douglas are really the same person?

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seemed rather a farfetched suspicion, one I was reluctant to voice publicly. But now, I'm certain:

Merv Griffin and Mike Douglas are really the same person.

Oh, they (he) had me fooled for years, with Douglas (or was it Griffin?) taping in Philadelphia and Griffin (or was it Douglas?) taping in Hollywood.

This is one of several wrinkles in my theory that still need to be ironed out, along with the fact that Douglas and Griffin don't look exactly alike. I'll leave those small matters to television historians.

It first struck me that Douglas and Griffin might in fact be a single creature when I heard them (him) sing. Each sounded like ... well, like a talk show host singing.

A tiny clue, true. But think about it: Carson doesn't sing. Neither does Donahue or Cavett (at least, not in public).

A sleuth notices these things.

I began to pay attention to the two shows. I noticed the same faces popping up on both shows. The same corny humor. A distracting tendency by both hosts to interrupt guests at every possible opportunity. Hmm.

Then in the mail came the clincher — an announcement from "The Mike Douglas Show" that Mike and his troops were going to Monaco this week to tape some shows at the Monte Carlo Celebrity Tennis Tournament.

Wait a minute. Didn't I just see Merv Griffin bouncing around in Monaco? Wasn't that Merv's show at the Monte Carlo Celebrity Tennis Tournament, aired just a couple of weeks ago?

In fact, wasn't it the "Merv Griffin Celebrity Tennis Tournament?"

Aha! They (he) had blundered. The jig was up. Surely they couldn't explain this, two American syndicated talk show hosts with a tennis tourney in Monaco.

I called Douglas' people. I must admit they were quick with a response. Douglas, they said, had been asked (presumably by Princess Grace) to come to Monaco this year for the celebrity tournament. Monaco, they suggested, wasn't very happy with the way Griffin had handled things there, and Douglas had promised to do a whole week's shows there.

And the Griffin shows I saw from Monte Carlo were really just repeats, aired to take the edge off of Douglas' trip there.

It was a good story, but I doubted that a princess of even so small a principality as Monaco could bother over such things. I called Griffin's people.

Yes, they said, Merv's 1977 Monaco show was recently rerun. But Merv and his gang were about to leave for Venice. Who needs Monte Carlo? Let Douglas have it.

A squabble between competitors? I think not. Just part of the ruse, and I'm not buying it. Not until they explain the singing.

Clements to 'equalize' gas shortage in Texas?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' energy adviser says the governor wants to "equalize" the gasoline shortage but this doesn't mean automatically giving farmers' gas to city folks.

Ed Vetter also said Friday he hopes to have in place by July 14 a system that allocates 17 million gallons of gasoline this month for weekend sales in Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth.

Vetter also:

—Announced a 15th county, Matagorda, would enter the odd-even gasoline rationing program Wednesday morning.

—Said Texas will receive 821 million gallons of gasoline in July, 91.5 percent of what it received in July 1978. June's allocation was 91 percent of June 1978 sales.

He said that "generally speaking, the (odd-even rationing) program is working quite well."

Vetter said Clements would not immediately take advantage of his new authority to take 5 percent of the state's allocation — 40 million gallons — and shift it from areas with plentiful gas to those with shortages.

President Carter announced last Monday that governors could exercise that authority.

"Our attitude is most of the suppliers know where the shortage is, and we are asking them to document for us what they intend to do ... If need be, we'll take that step," Vetter said.

"Some of the publicity surrounding the president's announcement and Gov. Clements' press conference of July 3 suggests that this additional potential set aside of 40 million gallons will automatically move from rural areas of Texas to the metroplex areas of Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth.

"This is not the case," Vetter said.

He said farmers already hold a high priority for gasoline.

"There is nothing we are going to do in moving a product out of a rural area that is going to deny a farmer his basic federal priority," Vetter said.

Gasoline suppliers have been asked to report by July 11 on the shortage in rural, "metroplex" and other urban areas to help his office "equalize the shortage in July insofar as setaside flexibility allows," he said.

Service stations in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston can receive more gasoline from a 17 million gallon kitty set aside by Clements if they agree to remain open half the remaining weekend days in this month, Vetter said.

Fort Stockton Water Carnival opens July 19

FORT STOCKTON — The 1979 Fort Stockton Water Carnival will again captivate audiences with colorful musical acts taking place on stage and in the water. This years production is entitled "Cities", and is directed by Alice Duerksen. Dates for the annual show are July 19,20 and 21.

The 1979 show will be presented in the 43rd year following the founding of the Water Carnival in 1936. The show has been presented almost continuously since then and is centered around historic Comanche Springs Swimming Pool in Rooney Park.

The Fort Stockton Water Carnival Association, under the leadership of President Rob Dunagan, produces the annual show. The production includes a five-division beauty revue in which Miss Fort Stockton, Jill Peyton Price, will crown her successor on the evening of Saturday, July 21. Liz Eastup is this year's beauty pageant chairman.

A different beauty pageant division will open the show each night. On Thursday, the Wee Miss and Sub-Teen younger girls will compete; on Friday the Junior Miss and Miss Teen Divisions will be in view; and the crowning of Miss Fort Stockton will climax the Saturday evening performance. Jim Eastup will be the master of ceremonies for this year's beauty revue.

Theme of the production "Cities" is a variety of acts taking place on an elaborate stage surrounding the pool. A flashing outline of a city skyline highlights the theme of the show. The main speaker and lead character of the story is being played by Mike Dunagan, who has been hired by the Water Carnival Board to travel abroad to find talent and ideas for the Water Carnival production.

The gates will open at 7:30 p.m., with show time at 8:30. The beauty revues will precede the Water Carnival performances, and beauty winners will be announced at the end of each night's show.

Tickets are available now, at both Fort Stockton banks and the Chamber of Commerce. Gate tickets are $2.50 for children and $3.00 for adults for Thursday and Friday nights, and all Saturday night tickets are $4.00 each.

The annual Water Carnival Parade, scheduled for 10 a.m. on July 21, is again being sponsored this year by the Fort Stockton Jaycee-Ettes.

First bale of cotton harvested

COLLEGE STATION, texas (AP) — Hot, dry weather is maturing crops in South Texas and helping the North Texas harvest picture — but some West Texau pastures are beginning to need a little rain.

The nation's first bale of cotton was harvested in Hidalgo County the past week, according to Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton is maturing rapidly along the Coastal Bend as well as in the Rio Grande Valley. Sorghum harvesting also is in full swing in the Valley and the Coastal Bend and the corn harvest is about to start.

An above-average wheat harvest is almost complete in North Texas, except for the Panhandle and South Plains, where harvest operations still are in full swing, Pfannstiel said.

Freestone peaches continue to move to market in large quantities in Gillespie County. The crop is one of the county's best ever in quantity and quality, he said. Peaches also are being harvestsed in other parts of the state, with an excellent crop coming in in Far West Telas and the Trans-Pecos region.

cantaloupes, watermelons and honeydew melons are being harvested in South Texas, with some shortage of trucks for hauling due to the truckers' strike. Melons are late in other regions, with a poor crop in prospect in East Texas, Pfannstiel said.

7haying continues at full pace over the state, Pfannstiel, said with good yields and quality. Some second and third cuttings of alfalfa are being cut and baled for hay in West Texas.

Grazing continues good over most of the state although grass is short in parts of west Texas due to lack of moisture. Grasshoppers continue to ravage some rangelands and spray programs are under way.

Reports from district Extension agents showed the following conditions:

PANHANDLE: Most crops are doing well in the hot weather. Wheat harvesting is halfcomplete in southern counties and well under way in the north. Yields are above average. Second cuttings of alfalfa are being baled. Recent rains have boosted pastures, but grasshoppers are heavy.

SOUTH PLAINS: Crops are doing well but most plantings are late. Some spotted stands of cotton and have been replo29ed to soybeans and sunflowers. Wheat is half cut, with good to excellent yields. Some second cuttings of alfalfa are being harvested. Grazing is good but grasshoppers are a problem. Control programs are active.

ROLLING PLAINS: Wheat is harvested, with good to excellent yields. Most crops are doing well, though late. Heavy grasshopper infestations are causing widespread damage. Spray programs are active in some counties. Livestock and forage are generally good.

north central; small grains are almost cut with bestever wheat yields of 32 bushels per acre. Insects are heavy in cotton, late this year. Early sorghum is blooming and needs rain. The peach harvest is excellent and pecans continue to look good. Graushoppers are heavy in ranges.

NORTH CENTRAL: Small grains are almost cut with bestever wheat yields of 32 bushels per acre. Insects are heavy in cotton, late this year. Early sorghum is blooming and needs rain. The peach harvest is excellent and pecans continue to look good. Grasshoppers are heavy in ranges.

NORTHEAST: Most crops are doing well but need rain. Beans and peaches are being harvested, and haying continues. The small grain harvest is about complete. Liveutock are in good shape but pastures and ranges need rain.

FAR WEST: Irrigated crops are growing well with hot, fair weather, but dryland crops and korages need moisture. Third cuttings of alfalfa are producing good yields. Excellent peach and apricot crops are being harvested, and onion and cabbage harvesting continues. The small grain harvest is complete. 7

WEST CENTRAL: Hot, dry conditions are putting young crops under stress. Most small grains have been harvested, with generall6 good yields. Fceestone peaches 7continue plentiful and of good quality in Gillespie County. Peach harvesting is also active in other counties. Range conditions are suffering in some counties due to lack of moisture and grasshopper damage.

CENTRAL: Most crops are growing well, with early sorghum prospects good. Some earlq fields are starting to turn color. Most cotton iu squaring but fleahoppers are heavy and bollworms are increasing. Wheat harvesting is complete, with good yields. Peanut planting iu about complete. LIVEstock and forage conditions are good.

EAST: Crops are doing well although most are late due to the wet spring. Recent rains have boosted prospects for a good second cutting of hay. Most vegetables are producing good yields, including cowpeas, blackeyed peas and pinto beans. Peach harvesting continues. Livestock and forage conditions look good.

SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST: Cotton is setting bolls while sorghum and rice continue to head. Early fields of rice and sorghum are turning color. Corn is in the uoft-to hard-dough stage with crop prospects vood. Rain is needed to complete planting of peanuts and soybeanu. Hay making remains active, with some excellent yields and quality.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Most crops and pastures are beginning to need rain. Cotton continues to square while sorghum is heading and turning color. A good peach harvest continues. Rain is needed for a second cutting of hay o2 to boost forage conditionu.

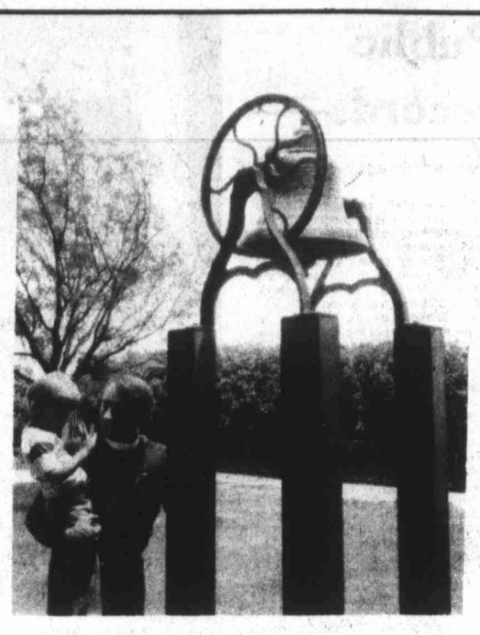

COASTAL BEND: Early cotton, corn and sorghum are maturing rapidly with the hot, drq weather. Some sorghum harvesting has begun. Planting of late peanuts and soybeans continues; planting moisture is short. hay making continues at an active pace. Livestock and forage conditions remain good although pastures and ranges need rain.

Borg captures 4th straight Wimbleton title

Makes tennis history in winning gruelling three-hour match against relentless Roscoe Tanner

(AP WIREPHOTO)

VICTORY KISS — Sweden's Bjorn Borg kisses his trophy on Wimbledon's Centre Court Saturday, after beating Roscoe Tanner of the United States in the Final of the Men's Singles Tournament. It was a record fourth-time in a row win for Borg.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg struggled for five sets today to beat Roscoe Tanner and win the Wimbledon men's singles title for the fourth year in a row.

The match seesawed continually before Borg pulled it out 6-7, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The 23-year-old Swede sank to his knees, his arms held high, as Tanner's final service return shot wide.

Borg is the only man to have won the crown four times in a row since the challenge round was abolished in 1922. Before then the defending champion only showed up for the final round. The last man to win such a string was Anthony Wilding from 1910 to 1913.

Borg stood up to relentless pressure by Tanner early in the match. And he lost three match points to him before the husky American swatted wide his final service return.

From triple match point, Tanner saved two points with winning returns, then Borg blew the third with a forehand volley into the net. But Tanner gave him another chance, dumping a service return into the net. And then came the last, deadly serve.

The fifth-seeded Tanner, serving and volleying with killing finality, took the battle to Borg from the time the first ball was hit and battled the heavily favored champion shot for shot until his mighty game finally came unhinged in the fourth game of the fourth set. Borg came back from a 2-1 deficit in sets.

The packed Center Court gallery of 17,000 roared wildly with every shot.

Borg was the favorite of the teen-age fans, who kept up a constant chant: "Borg, Borg, Borg."

But Tanner had his supporters — those who love the underdog — among them four English youths who camped at the gates for 176 hours with pro-Tanner signs waiting to buy tickets.

Tanner, from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., who attended Stanford University and later moved his residence to Palm Springs, Calif., was given little or no chance against the young Swede.

The legalized London bookies had him a 5-1 underdog in the betting, with Borg an odds-on 1-7 favorite. You had to bet 7 British pounds to get 1 pound in return in case he won.

The battle swung back and forth through the furiously fought firut set, which was decided in a pulsating tiebreaker when neither could break service through the first 12 games. Tanner won the tiebreaker 7-4.

In the final set, Tanner, after losing his service in the first game, fought back and had two points for a break in the eighth game.

But two bad errors by the American and a brace of whizzing passing shots by Borg allowed the Swede to survive the crisis. Borg then went to the line, serving for the match at 5-4.

Tanner netted a service return. There was a brief rally which reached close quarters at the net.

Borg scored on a well-placed volley, then went to 40-0.

Tanner refused to quit. He beat Borg on two subsequent volleys, deuced the game when Borg hit weakly into the net.

But Borg forced a Tanner error to get to his fourth match point, then closed the door.

The danger was over for Borg and he was never in the same danger again. But he needed four match points before clinching the first prize of $40,000. Tanner saved the first two with fine backhands, and the third with a cleverly angled volley.

There have been few more dramatic Wimbledon finals.

In the last few games the crowd was roaring after every point, and the umpire repeatedly called for silence.

Tanner, built like a football halfback at 6 feet and 175 pounds, refused to be cowed by Borg's reputation for both shotmaking power and unflappable temperament.

Borg had been able to intimidate Jimmy Connors in the semifinals, winning effortlessly with the loss of only seven games but Tanner looked him in the eye and engaged him in a howitzer duel at close range.

Attendance for the two-week tournament reached nearly 340,000 people, a record.

Bob Hewitt and Greer Stevens of South Africa won the mixed doubles title, defeating Frew McMillan of South Africa and Betty Stove of the Netherlands 7-5, 7-6.

Borg admits to nervousness in final Wimbledon moments

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg said he was so nervous as he neared his fourth straight Wimbledon title Saturday that he almost dropped his racket.

"Near the end of the match I had never been so nervous in my life. I almost couldn't hold my racket, I was so nervous," Borg said after beating American Roscoe Tanner 6-7, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 to make history. He is the first man to win four Wimbledons in a row since 1913, when the defending champions were only required to play the final round.

Borg said this was his most difficult Wimbledon final — more difficult than the one in 1977 when he defeated Jimmy Connors in five sets. It was certainly far more difficult than his three-set cakewalk against Connors here last year.

Borg said his ambition is to go down in the record books as the greatest player of all time.

Now, he says, he will shoot for Rod Laver's record of 31 match victories at Wimbledon. Saturday's final was Borg's 28th consecutive success.

"I shall be going after Laver's record next year," Borg said.

Laver's winning run of 31 matches was spread over 10 years, with a five-year gap in the middle because he turned professional and was banned from the old amateur Wimbledon.

Borg's 28 wins have been in consecutive years, starting with his first title success in 1976.

In the eighth game of the final set Saturday, Borg, a service break up, trailed 15-40 on his service.

"I was really nervous then," Borg said. "If he had broken me then, anything might have happened."

He noted that in the early part of the match Tanner won some of the big points. "In the fourth and fifth sets I won the big points, and that was what made all the difference," Borg said. "I have been winning those points all through the tournament. One of these finals I am going to lose all those points, and then. ..."

SWEET TRIUMPH — Billie Jean King is all smiles as she and Martina Navratilova hold the Women's Doubles trophy at Wimbledon Saturday. For King it was a record 20th Wimbledon title and for Martina it was her second championship win in two days. Applauding at left is Britain's Duchess of Kent.

Billie Jean King captures record 20th Wimbledon crown

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King finally won her coveted 20th Saturday, a record for tennis titles at Wimbledon, but she was in no mood for rejoicing.

"All I could do was think of Elizabeth — it took all the joy out of winning," the 35-year-old queen of the game said after teaming with Martina Navratilova for the women's doubles championship.

Only Friday, the 88-year-old co-holder of the honor, Elizabeth Ryan, California-born but in recent years a London resident, was sitting in her regular center court seat for the women's singles final.

Shortly after Navratilova beat Chris Evert Lloyd to retain the title, Ryan apparently suffered a stroke. She was treated on the grounds, then rushed to the hospital. She died en route.

"It was really bizarre," Billie Jean recalled after catching her breath following the historic triumph over Wendy Turnbull of Australia and Betty Stove of the Netherlands 5-7, 6-3, 6-2.

"We were both from the same area of California. When I was a teen-ager, just beginning, I would see her around the Los Angeles tennis club. Everybody knew her and knew her record.

"I thought of her during the match. I found myself waking up thinking of her."

Ryan was one of the leading women players in the era preceding and following World War I. Of her 19 Wimbledon titles, 12 were in ladies' doubles and seven in mixed doubles between 1914 and 1934.

"I talked some with her last year," King said. "She told me that she would like to keep the record but, if it had to be broken, she would be happy if I did it."

A newsman asked Ryan this week if she hoped Billie Jean would break her record.

"I hope she breaks her leg," the octogenarian replied, then laughed uproariously.

Billie Jean's 20 Wimbledon championships have been distributed among singles (6), doubles (10) and mixed doubles (4). In her 18 years at Wimbledon, beginning in 1961, King has racked up a record of 203 match victories while losing only 33.

King and Navratilova started nervously in their doubles match Saturday, which kept the packed gallery in their seats. But they rallied as the games of Stove and Turnbull deteriorated.

"Martina was so excited she could hardly talk," King said. "In the third — or was it the third? — we were down 0-30 on Betty's serve and Betty served what we thought was a double fault.

"The umpire gave her two more serves. We couldn't believe it when neither Betty or Wendy objected. We really busted our gut we got so angry. That made all the difference."

Cowboys open training camp

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys begin their first full pad workouts Sunday after opening training camp with a 2½ hour practice Saturday afternoon.

Eighty-four rookies and veterans worked out in T-shirts and shorts Saturday afternoon, capping the practice with a 1½ mile run. Rookie free agent Wade Manning, a defensive back from Ohio State, was sidelined with a reaction to an insect bite, but was expected back on the field when full uniform two-a-day practices begin Monday.

Three free agent rookies were released after failing their physical examinations. They are running back Jon Lazar of Iowa, offensive lineman Gerry Sheridan of Tulane and wide receiver Brad Wind of Northern Michigan.

Nelson holding slim lead over Watson

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Larry Nelson birdied the last hole with a 35-foot putt to shoot a 70 Saturday for a 6-under-par 210 and a one-stroke lead over charging Tom Watson after three rounds in the Western Open.

Watson, the leading money winner who would boost his season earnings by $54,000 to $431,674 with victory Sunday, had another adventurous round over the demanding Butler National course in perfect golf weather.

He opened with three straight birdies but settled for 35 on the front side before blazing back with a 33 for a 68, the lowest round of the tourney and the only score below 70 Saturday.

Watson's 54-hole tally of 211 includes only 23 pars. The rest is made up of 18 birdies and 13 bogeys.

"I used to play like that four or five years ago — a lot of bogeys and a lot of birdies," said Watson, who is pursuing his fifth tourney triumph of the year and his third Western Open.

Watson's back nine included a 25-foot birdie putt on the 11th after he had three-putted the previous two holes for bogeys. He dropped an 8-footer for birdie on 12, a 30-footer for another on 15 and holed a 60-foot chip for one on the 18th after a trap cost him a bogey on 17.

Nelson, No. 5 on the money list, and Bruce Devlin were coleaders after 36 holes. The 41-year-old Devlin sagged to 76 for even par 216. Nelson made one major mistake in an otherwise steady 34-36 round. He opened with two birdies, strung out nine pars before getting another birdie and then after a regulation 3 on the 13th he made his first double bogey of the tournament.

Four strokes out of the lead at 214 was young Dan Pohl who has missed the cut in six tournaments and failed to qualify in seven others this year. He fashioned a 71 that included birdies on the third and fourth holes and a 200-yard ace with a four-iron on the fifth.

Ben Crenshaw with a 71 was at 215 and Bobby Wadkins with a 70, Jim Simons, John Fought and Mick Soli were grouped at 217.

Defending champion Andy Bean still failed to get on the par route and cranked a 74 for a 220.

Medich, Kern hurl one-hitter in Ranger win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Doc Medich and Jim Kern combined on a one-hitter as the Texas Rangers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 2-0 Saturday night.

Medich, 2-3, was forced into action when John Matlack, originally scheduled to start for Texas, complained of tenderness in his left elbow after warming up before the game. The only hit for Toronto was John Mayberry's two-out single in the second inning.

Medich got relief help from Kern in the seventh after walking Rico Carty with two out. Medich had retired 15 straight batters before issuing the walk. Kern went on to pick up his 15th save.

Texas scored both runs in the sixth as Buddy Bell drove in one with a ground ball and Oscar Gamble raced home on a wild pitch.

Medich outdueled Toronto starter Dave Lemanczyk, 7-6, through five scoreless innings before John Grubb singled to open the sixth for Texas. Gamble followed with a single, and a sacrifice by Pat Putnam set up Bell's run-scoring ground ball. Gamble scored on Lemancyyk's wild pitch.

Cubs sweep two from Astros

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Vail drove in four runs with a homer and a pair of singles Saturday to lead the Chicago Cubs to an 8-3 victory over the first-place Houston Astros and a doubleheader sweep.

Scot Thompson, who sat out the second game in favor of Vail, drilled five successive singles and drove in two runs to back the three-hit pitching of Ken Holtzman for a 6-0 triumph in the opener.

Vail had a single in a four-run second inning featuring Tim Blackwell's two-run double, hit a two-run homer in the third and singled across two more runs in the fourth.

The Cubs struck for four runs in the second inning of the nightcap, two scoring on Blackwell's double, one on an error and another on a bunt single by Buckner.

Jerry Martin doubled to open the third and scored ahead of Vail's fourth homer. Two walks and a single loaded the bases in the fourth before Vail delivered a two-run single.

The Astros added a run in the eighth on a single by Jim Sexton, an error and a run-scoring single by Rafael Landestoy.

Rogers, Expos baffle Bums

MONTREAL (AP) — Steve Rogers held the Los Angeles Dodgers hitless for 7 1-3 innings before settling for a four-hitter and Andre Dawson drove in two runs with a sixth-inning double to power the Montreal Expos to a 2-1 victory Saturday night.

Rogers, 29, lost the no-hitter on a one-out single to center by Davey Lopes in the eighth inning. Rogers, 9-5, yielded a one-out homer in the ninth to Ron Cey.

The Expos, held to two hits over five innings by Los Angeles starter Burt Hooton, 7-6, scored twice in the sixth on Dawson's double off the centerfield wall. Warren Cromartie and Rodney Scott each singled to open the inning.

Giants overcome Phillies, Schmidt

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Consecutive seventh-inning homers by Jack Clark and Mike Ivie helped the San Francisco Giants survive three consecutive home runs by Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt and record an 8-6 triumph Saturday night over the Phillies.

Clark's two-run shot was his 16th homer of the season, and Ivie's 11th provided the three-run seventh that rallied the Giants from a 6-4 deficit.

The Giants scored once in the first, and Schmidt tied it in the second with a homer. Garry Maddox followed with his ninth of the season to make it 2-1.

San Francisco regained the lead in the third on Ivie's first homer of the game, a two-run shot. But Schmidt countered that in the bottom of the inning with a three-run shot for a 5-3 Philadelphia lead.

The Giants pulled within with a run in the fifth, but Schmidt made it 6-4 in the sixth with a drive over the center-field fence against reliever Pedro Borbon, 4-2.

Morgan sparks Big Red machine

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan drove in the winning run with a two-run single in the second inning Saturday to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Vic Correll and Ken Griffey started the second inning with walks off loser Don Robinson, 5-5. After Junior Kennedy's infield single loaded the bases, Morgan lined his single to left, scoring Correll and Griffey. Dan Driessen followed with a sacrifice fly to make it 5-0.

Winning pitcher Paul Moskau, 5-3, scattered seven hits and struck out seven.

Braves continue winning

ATLANTA (AP) — Charlie Spikes drove in four runs and Glenn Hubbard had two doubles and a single to power the Atlanta Braves to a 10-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night.

Three of Spikes' RBIs came on a three-run home run in the bottom of the third after Rowland Office and Joe Nolan singled. Spikes' blast, his third of the year, came off Silvio Martinez, 6-3.

Atlanta took a 7-1 lead in the bottom of the fourth on Gary Matthews' solo home run, his 18th of the year.

Atlanta pitcher Tony Brizzolara improved his record to 4-3 with the win.

Jackson powers Yankee win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Jackson knocked in five runs, one on his 14th homer of the season, and led the New York Yankees to an 8-3 victory Saturday over the Oakland A's.

Jackson has four homers and 11 runs batted in since coming off the disabled list June 28.

Jackson began his day by reaching first on an error in the second.

He drove in a run with a single in a two-run third. With the score tied 2-2, Jackson tripled in two runs in the fifth. He chased starting pitcher Mike Morgan, 0-3, by crashing a solo homer in the seventh and singled in the Yankees' final run in the ninth.

Padres explode by Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Turner's bases-loaded triple sparked a four-run first inning that moved the San Diego Padres to a 11-3 victory over the New York Mets Saturday.

Turner's hit drove in Ozzie Smith and Paul Dade, who had both singled, and Dave Winfield, who had been walked by New York starter and loser Dock Ellis, 0-2.

John D'Acquisto, 5-5, who was relieved by Eric Rasmussen in the sixth, got the victory, and Rasmussen notched his first save.

Indians pound past Twins

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians pounded out 14 hits including a two-run single by Cliff Johnson and a pair of RBI-singles by Bobby Bonds in a 9-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Mike Paxton, 5-4, yielded the Twins three runs in the first inning, but settled down to scatter 10 hits.

Despite loss to dominant Swede in Wimbledon finals

Tanner questions Borg's invincibility

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "I still don't believe he is invincible," Roscoe Tanner said of Bjorn Borg after bowing to the Swede in the final at Wimbledon Saturday.

"He just played better than I did today," said Tanner.

Borg beat the American 6-7, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 for his fourth straight championship.

The 27-year-old left-hander from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., was obviously proud of his fighting performance against the 23-year-old Swede, who won his fourth consecutive Wimbledon singles title.

"I played a very good match against a heck of a good player," Tanner said afterwards. "You have to take chances against Borg. If you play carefully he is better than anyone at that. I tried to keep him out of rhythm.

"I feel I made a few errors I shouldn't have and missed a few first serves. But against Borg you have to go for shots and take chances.

"I know that I bothered him, and that my strategy presented him a few problems. You have to adapt something against Bjorn that is a little out of the ordinary."

Tanner's decision not to play safe gave Borg plenty of problems. Tanner led two sets to one and had a chance well into the final set.

"If I'd won at 15-40 to come back to 4-4 it could have been different," said Roscoe. "That point comes down to the match."

Tanner also felt himself getting stronger towards the end of the match.

"I felt his serve getting a little softer," he said. "At the end I felt good, I didn't feel tired. When I got back from 0-40 to deuce in the final game I thought I had a chance. If I'd got the deuce point I would certainly have been a lot better off.

"I kept working at it, because I felt being a break down was not an impossible situation."

Tanner, in the Wimbledon final for the first time, was not awed by his opponent.

"I didn't feel nervous, tight or tense at all," he said. "I had no reason to feel nervous. There was no pressure on me.

"I was keyed up for the final, but being in a final isn't all that bad," he joked.

"I am sure I will feel worse tomorrow. I will start thinking and remembering my chances. You learn things in a five-setter."

LEAVING THE BURNING PORSCHE — Hall Shaw, Jr. of San Luis Obispo, Calif., runs from the burning Porsche 935 Turbo Saturday during the Six Hour Endurance Race. He had just been released from the car by co-driver Gary Belcher, right, of Miami, Fla. The Grand Prix Circuit doctor reported that three crew members and one pit marshal were treated.

YOUNG IDEAS

By DICK YOUNG

If 1+1 equals 3, he (Ali) must be the greatest

For a guy who flunked simple arithmetic in his draft board exam, Muhammad Ali can do some magical things with numbers. It is his contention that he goes out as the greatest heavyweight champ who ever lived because he is the only heavyweight champ who ever lived to win the title three times.

If you say that real quick, it almost makes sense. If you say it real quick, as he does, and real loud, as he does.

But let me ask you something. Who is the greater champion, the man who wins the title once, and wins every damn time he puts it on the line, and retires undefeated, or the man who wins the title three times?

Let me ask you something else: Which would you say is the better record: a fighter who went 49-and-0 in his career, with 43 kayoes, or a fighter who went 56-and-3, with 37 kayoes?

We're talking about Rocky Marciano and Muhammad Ali, as you might have guessed. The questions pretty much answer themselves. In order for him to win the title three times, he had to lose it twice. Losing the title twice is no particular advantage, that I can see, except that it sets up a nice, lucrative return match. Losing the title twice hardly makes his record better than Rocky Marciano's, does it? Therefore, winning the title three times is not such a great thing, because the prerequisite for winning it three times is losing twice.

I'm not including the time they took the title away from him when he wouldn't go into the Army. I'm talking about two defeats in the ring, with the title at stake. The first was the classic with Joe Frazier. The second was the unclassic against Leon Spinks.

If Ali had beaten Smokin' Joe that first time, if he had beaten Leon Spinks, Ali would have won the heavyweight title only once, but he would never have lost it. That would have made him truly great, as great as Rocky Marciano.

I'm not saying that Ali couldn't have beaten Marciano. I happen to think he would have, but who knows? Could Dempsey have licked Louis? Could Louis have licked Ali? These are nebulous things that made wonderful fantasies but certainly can't be proven. Comparing records is something else. Here, a certain amount of logic, of common sense, comes into consideration.

What Ali is claiming is that he is the greatest because he lost to Joe Frazier, and lost to Leon Spinks. I'm not gullible enough to swallow that. Are you?

Ali says he is quitting now because he wants to get out on top. He doesn't want to suffer the indignities of past champions, particularly past black champions, he says.

And yet, what is he doing? He is becoming a sideshow, a geek. He is fighting exhibitions against football players, against politicians. Last night, he went a few Ali Shuffles with Thomas Smith, the mayor of Jersey City. He should have called it a title defense, gone in the tank, and then beaten Mayor Smith in a rematch. That way, Ali could have said he was the only man ever to win the title four times.

Why is he doing these things? There certainly isn't much money involved, not the millions he is accustomed to dealing in.

These tawdry little things keep him in the public eye and make possible the bigger things. His TV miniseries, "Freedom Road," is due for release on the NBC network. The timing is good.

On last Dec. 2, the Daily News ran the following backpage headline:

This Time Ali's Really Through

The story announced his retirement. He was hanging up his gloves. More than that, he was through with boxing, period. He would have nothing whatsoever to do with it. He would not be party to a tournament to determine his successor. He would not even go to a fight.

He told me all those things and more. He was talking on the phone from a small town in Mississippi, where they were shooting "Freedom Road."

"I am going on to a new life," he said. "My lawyers are working on 25 deals and endorsements. That is why I want to announce my retirement in a few days. Let the young guys have it."

Then came the reaction. People involved in those 25 deals got on his case:

Hey, you can't retire. Not now. An ex-champion can't sell cockroach powder like a still-champ can. And what about the movie? Keep them dangling. You don't have to defend the title for another year.

And so Ali issued the denial, but he was lying. It was a little, you should pardon the expression, white lie.

Truth is, he was never to put on the gloves again, except against the likes of Mayor Smith and Lyle Alzado, the Orange Crush.

The story in the Daily News, that December day, ended with. "He has been magnificent."

Women's Tourney slated July 14-15

Black Sable favored in Rainbow Derby today

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Black Sable, a filly who's already earned over $55,000 this year, will be in position to triple that amount — with plenty to spare — on Sunday at Ruidoso Downs.

Black Sable looms as the probable favorite in the 15th inning of the Rainbow Quarter Horse Derby, the middle jewel in the Triple Crown for three-year-olds.

The gross purse is $542,000 — which makes the Derby one of the world's richest sophomore events. A paycheck of $187,950 awaits the winner of Sunday's 440-yard thriller.

Thirteen races are on tap with a starting time of 1 p.m.

So far this year, Black Sable has been to the races six times. She turned in three wins, a second and a third. Before shipping to Ruidoso Downs, she campaigned in her home territory on the West Coast, where she posted a neck win in the Debutante Handicap at Bay Meadows. Later, she qualified for the rich Golden State Futurity, and was made a 7-2 shot in the grand finale. She finished third, only a neck off the lead.

Then it was down to Los Alamitos, where her first engagement there put her against the All-American Futurity winner Moon Lark, in an elimination trial for the Los Alamitos Derby. Black Sable finished second, a neck behind Moon Lark, but traveled fast enough to make the grand finale.

Moon Lark continued to be a tough nut to crack when the Derby finale came up, and winged to an impressive victory. Black Sable ended up fourth, a length to arrears.

The filly's next task came in the elimination trials for the Rainbow Futurity at Ruidoso.

John Gary named Snyder AD

SNYDER — John Gary, assistant principal at Snyder Junior High School, has been named director of athletics of the Snyder public schools.

Gary, a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University, has been in the Snyder school system since 1964. He replaces Roy Carter, who asked to be reassigned as a high school math teacher.

Greg Losey takes honor in pentathlon

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Greg Losey, the 1978 national modern pentathlon champion, took top honors in the horseback riding event in the senior division of the 1979 U.S. Modern Pentathlon Championship here Saturday.

Losey, of Napa, Calif., and four other riders had 1,100 points for a perfect ride in the first of the five events.

The remaining top finishers were Mike Burley of Berea, Ohio; Ben Withers of Alexandria, Va., Larry Paulson of San Antonio; Neal Glenesk of San Francisco; Brian Driggs of Mesa, Ariz.; Ted Eckersdorff of Queens, N.Y.; Dale Brynestad of Puyallup, Wash.; John Fitzgerald of San Antonio and Harvey Cain of Sacremento, Calif.

The remaining four events continue this week at the U.S. Modern Pentathlon Training Center at Fort Sam Houston here. Fencing for the senior division will be Sunday, shooting on Monday, swimming on Tuesday and running on Wednesday.

The top three finishers and an alternate will travel to Budapest, Hungary, in August for the world championship.

Early phantom broadcasts paying off for Drysdale

By The Associated Press

When he walked into the Brooklyn Dodgers' dressing room back in 1956, Don Drysdale was 19 years old and hardly ranked as one of the Boys of Summer.

"They gave me a locker between Sal Maglie and Rube Walker," he said. And that's how Don Drysdale began to learn his craft.

"We'd talk pitching all the time, Maglie from the pitcher's utandpoint on one side, Walker from the catcher's standpoint on one Drysdale said. "When I went out to the mound, I'd be pitching to Roy Campanella, and that's not the same as pitching to some kid."

Those were the final days of the Dodgers' dynasty of the '50s, the last year in Brooklyn, and Drysdale remembers them fondly. "Being in that clubhouse was like being surrounded by walking baseball encyclopedias. Mr. (Branch) Rickey had put together a factory."

Drysdale feels he benefitted from being in Brooklyn. "I was 19 and that's unusual, to be coming up at that age," he said. "But I was a little farther along and that was a plus. They felt I was ready, so I came up. I was fortunate to be with a veteran club. They knew how to play and I learned plenty from them."

Drysdale pitched for 14 years in the major leagues, winning 209 games, earning the Cy Young Award in 1962, and setting a record for consecutive scoreless pitching of 582-3 innings in 1968.

Then, at age 33, it all ended quite prematurely. "I had one of the first rotator cuff injuries," he said. "Only then it was called a sore shoulder."

Sports medicine had not made the strides a decade ago that it has now and there was nothing the doctors could do for the pitcher they called Double D. His playing career was over, but his baseball career was not.

"When I first came up, I used to sit in the bullpen broadcasting games," he said. "They'd chase me out of there and I'd go to the dugout and do the same thing. Then the guys in the dugout would chase me back to the bullpen."

The phantom broadcasts paid off in 1970 when the Montreal Expos hired Drydale to air their games. After two years in Montreal and two more in Texas, Drysdale moved to the California Angels, where he has worked the last six seasons.

Drysdale also does some play-by-play on the ABC broadcasts, simply because he enjoys that aspect of the sportcaster's job. "I don't want to be stereotyped as strictly a color man," he said.

Or strictly as a pitcher whose pitching career ended too soon, and who hurried out of the clubhouse and out of baseball.

Rockets sign top pick to non-guaranteed contract

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Basketball Association Houston Rockets, who already have 10 players with guaranteed contracts, have signed No. 1 draft choice Lee Johnson of East Texas State to a non-guaranteed three-year contract.

Jim Paliafito, Johnson's agent, said the contract was for $253,000 over the three years but Rockets officials declined to confirm the figure. Paliafito said Johnson also received a bonus for signing plus assorted fringe benefits.

The non-guaranteed contract may explain why the Rockets passed over more established college stars to take a sleeper in the 6-11, 215-pound Johnson.

Paliafito said the Rockets told him before the draft that they would not sacrifice another no-cut contract on their first-round pick.

"They definitely informed us of that in a strong manner," Paliafito said. "I didn't exactly agree, I just told them at the time I wouldn't try to rob them.

"Obviously we would have preferred a no cut ... but again, we feel very confident of Lee's ability to make this club, so I don't anticipate any problem."

Houston General Manager Ray Patterson said Johnson would make the team only if he earns his spot during pre-season competiton.

"He'll have to show he's one of the 11 best guys," Patterson said. "If we were already committed, we would have given him a no cut. Johnson will have to meet certain challenges at certain stages and keep progressing.

"Right now, he's not a finished product. But I'm impressed with what he's gotten done so far."

Alabama's Reggie King and Mississippi State's Wiley Peck both were still available when the Rockets made Johnson the 17th player chosen in the NBA draft.

West Texas swimmers lead death list

LUBBOCK — Swimming in lakes in the Lubbock region leads the list of recorded water fatalities according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reports.

Over 49 water fatalities were reported during the past two years and 22 of the persons were swimming; seven were fishing; five fell into the water; and, four were in vehicles that went into the water.

The availability of water or high-use areas leads the way as the Canyon lakes in Lubbock claimed seven of the victims and swimming is not even allowed in the chain of lakes. Lake Meredith in the Texas Panhandle accounted for five of the victims and Lake Colorado City claimed three of the fatalities.

Texas Parks and Wildlife adds striped bass to Lake Spence

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission must plan on keeping the ball rolling at Lake E.V. Spence when it comes to striped bass fishing.

'Vera' wouldn't want her own show on TV

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Beth Howland, who plays Vera on CBS' "Alice," may be one of the few actresses around who doesn't want her own series.

She shook her head when asked about that. "I just want to work all the time," she said. "I wouldn't want my own show. I really want to do a play. There's a certain freedom in the theater. Like doing the runthrough for the special, 'You Can't Take it With You,' was so much fun."

"Alice," starring Linda Lavin in the lead, begins its fourth year on CBS Sunday. It was adapted from the Warner Bros. movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," which won an Oscar for Ellen Burstyn.

Miss Howland's Vera is different from the Vera played in the film by Valerie Curtin. In the movie, she was a little tougher and had a biker boyfriend named "Daddy."

"I took what was written in the pilot, but since the show's started, Vera's changed a lot," says Miss Howland. "In the beginning my feeling was that Vera was real dumb and inept. She was a kind of a joke. It hurt my feelings.

"First of all, I didn't think she could keep the job if she didn't work hard. I always felt she was the hardest worker there. She's more naive and misplaced than dumb."

Her big break came when she landed the role of Amy in "Company." It was while in "Company" she was spotted by someone from CBS, who brought her to Hollywood for a part in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

JUST WANTS TO WORK STEADY — Beth Howland, dressed here for her role as a waitress on the CBS series "Alice," says she doesn't want a series of her own. While she feels her character role is played too "dumb" in the series she says "I just want to work all the time."

It is magic of survival

The Pickwick Players present their second summer production of the season. It's the suspenseful tale of a boy and his worst fears in the swamps. "Wiley and the Hair Man" promises to be all this and more. Set in the mysterious Tombigbee Swamp, "Wiley and the Hairy Man" centers around a young fatherless boy, his conjure-woman mother, his faithful hound dog, and the Hairy Man who haunts Wiley's days and dreams.

Through rhythm and rhyme, a chorus creates the mystery of the swamp. The magic is of this play is not fairy dust — it is soil. This magic is of the earth and mud of the swamp; it is the magic of survival.

In an exicting duel of wits, Wiley learns to rely on his won resources and conquers two villians, the Hairy Man and his own fears. The cast includes: Joe White as the young, mischievious boy; Wiley. Robyn Rose is his Mammy, and the Hairy Man is played by Andy Kimbrough. John Dennett adds to the cast as Wiley's dog. The chorus is headed by Todd Weiler, with Debbie Guerry, Dee Ann Jones, Heather Dunbar, Nell Fullinwider, Rhonda Huxman, Drew Richards, Valerie Hochman, and Carrie Beck making up the rest of the chorus.

Choreography is done by Carrie Beck, with help from Rhonda Huxman, Valerie Hochman, and Kelly Patterson.

Books for beginning readers available

By CATHYE McCRACKEN
Children's Librarian
Howard County Library

"My son will be in the first grade next year and knows how to read a little bit. Do you have any books he can read himself?" Whether it is a son or a ddaughter, this is the most frequent request I have in the Children's Department at the Howard County Library. Parents are always wanting easy readers for their children to read. You have to be crafty, though, because a youngster who can finally read does not want to take home the average school-type book, but wants a book like all the "big kids" read. You know, Mom, a real story about real things, not about Dick and Jane who have been watching poor Spot run for years!

There are many books available for your beginning reader in our Children's Department. Your next question to me would probably be — "How can I find the ones that are easy enough out of all those books?" I would then step in and tell you about our newest addition. We now have a card file containing the names and short descriptions of all of the Juvenile Readers in our collection with a 200 word vocabulary or less. Each book is listed on its own card and has the number of vocabulary words found in the book. The patrons who have already used this file box have found it to be a very helpful tool in picking out books for their children.

For the very beginning reader, "Pickle, Pickle, Pickle Juice," with a 10 word vocabulary, by Patty Wolcott, about Peter who picks a million pickles which pop and form a pickle juice pond, will prove to be fun

Seymour's "Ann Likes Red," with a 16 word vocabulary, follows a girl named Ann as she buys all of her clothes in red. Or "Jumping" by Karen Stephens might be more entertaining to your child as he reads this 34 word vocabulary book about a boy who jumps everywhere.

If your young reader enjoys animal stories, Edward Dolch has written numerous books on the easy reading level that will appeal to boys and girls. His books include true stories about all kinds of animals from dogs and cats to monkeys, bears and rabbits, and mostly any other animal you can think of. The vocabulary ranges from the very few and simple words to a little harder and more challenging text.

Wheatever your child needs in an easy reading book, it can be found in the new card file box in the Children's Department. Encourage your youngster to come look through the titles and choose the one best suited to his or her vocabulary knowledge. Remember, there are books to entice even the most reluctant reader who is tired of reading about Spot chasing that same old ball!

Fiddlin' around

SMITHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Townfolks prepared to welcome an estimated 50,000 visitors to this scenic central Tennessee town this weekend — to fiddle around and watch those who do.

The community of 3,000, nestled next to Center Hill Lake, was tuned up for its 8th Annual Fiddlers' Jamboree and Crafts Festival.

About 200 or so amateuru were expected to enter a fiddlin' contest and related events, while another 200 signed up for the crafts show. The rest come to have a good time and be a part of what may be America's most rousing hillbilly hoedown.

A stage was specially built in the town square for the fiddlin' competition, which offered about $2,000 in cash prizes.

Garbage haulers to get $400 week

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Garbage haulers who serve a group of five San Francisco Peninsula communities have negotiated a contract that will pay them more than $400 a week within three years.

The agreement, ratified Friday by the Sanitary Truck Drivers and Helpers Local 350, ended a 16-day strike that affected Los Altos, Los Altos Hills, Cupertino, Woodside and Portola Valley. The garbage workers had been making $8.26 an hour.

PUBLIC NOTICE
REQUESTING PUBLIC COMMENT

Sid Richardson Carbon & Gasoline Company has requested authority to modify the operation of its existing carbon black plant at Big Spring, Texas. It has submitted an application to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), pursuant to the requirement for the prevention of significant deterioration of air quality in the Clean Air Act, 42 U.S.C. 7460, and regulations promulgated by the EPA on June 19, 1978, in the Federal Register. The EPA is proposing to approve this application and is hereby extending the opportunity for comment concerning the following proposed project:

1. Applicant:

   Sid Richardson Carbon & Gasoline Company
   Fort Worth National Bank Building
   Fort Worth, Texas 76102
   PSD-TX-151

2. Location of Proposed Construction:

   The proposed modification will take place at the applicant's existing carbon black plant which is reached by traveling 3 miles east of Big Spring, Howard County Texas on Interstate Highway 20, then one mile north of Interstate 20. This is a Class II area. Emissions from the proposed project are not expected to impact any Class I area.

3. Project Description:

   The applicant proposes to modify its existing carbon black production process to allow 42 to 47 percent of the tail gas formed to replace the natural gas now being used for carbon black drying. The process tail gas has previously been vented to the atmoshpere.

4. Best Available Control Technology Emission Limitations:

   The use of best available control technology (BACT) is required by the PSD regulations to control the emissions of sulfur dioxide. Taking into account such factors as energy, economics, environmental impact, and technical feasibility, the following BACT analysis is performed for the new emission sources.

   The maximum allowable emission rates, in pounds per hour, from the individual sources are as follows:

MAXIMUM ALLOWABLE MASS EMISSION RATES

Emission Point	Sulfur Dioxide (lb/hr)
a. No. 1A & B Reactors	160
b. No. 2A & B Reactors	89
c. No. 7 Dryer	378
d. No. 10 Reactor	108
e. No. 12 Dryer	179

EPA has determined that BACT to achieve these limitations for each emission point is no control.

5. Air Quality Impact:

   The Texas Climatological Model (TCM) and the Texas Episodic Model (TEM) were used to estimate ground level sulfur dioxide concentrations for short term and annual averaging times.

   The emissions from this proposed modification will not result in exceeding either the National Ambient Air Quality Standards (NAAQS) or PSD increments for sulfur dioxide.

   The proposed project is in a Class II area. Two other sources were included in determining the air quality impact of the proposed modification. Class II increments for sulfur dioxide, along with projected increment consumption, are as follows:

Pollutant	Allowed Increment (micrograms per cubic meter)	Increment Consumed
Sulfur dioxide (3-hour)	512	113.6
Sulfur dioxide (24-hour)	91	34.8
Sulfur dioxide (annual)	20	19.1

All projected increment consumptions are within allowed increments defined in PSD regulations. No Class II increment violations will occur as a result of the plant's emissions.

The emissions from this proposed modification will not cause significant air quality impacts in the Big Spring area as a result of growth associated with the modifications. There will be no impact no soils, vegetation, or visibility as a result of the proposed modifications.

A copy of all materials submitted by the applicant is available in the offices of Mr. Thomas D. Ferguson, Finance Director, P.O. Box 391, East 4th and Nolan Street, Big Spring, Texas 79720 telephone number (915) 263-8311 and in the Permits & Support Branch, EPA, Region 6, First International Building, 29th Floor, 1201 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas 75270, telephone number (214) 767-2765.

Requests for a public hearing concerning the above proposed project must be accompanied by the anticipated comments to be presented during such public hearing. Written comments and requests for a public hearing on the proposed project may be submitted to the Permits and Support Branch, EPA at the above address until July 30, 1979. It is requested that comments and hearing requests specify Permit Number PSD-TX-151 and that such comments be based on the requirements as set out in the Clean Air Act, and on the regulations published June 19, 1978. Public comments submitted in writing will be considered by the EPA prior to making the final determination on the proposed project.

The EPA will notify the applicant in writing of its final determination. A copy of such final determination will be available for public inspection in the Permits & Support Branch, EPA, Region 6, First International Building 29th Floor, 1201 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas 75270, telephone number (214) 767-2765, and Mr. Thomas D. Ferguson, Finance Director, P.O. Box 391, East 4th and Nolan Street, Big Spring, Texas 79720, telephone (915) 263-8311.

Tons of stolen meat recovered

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A 48-year-old Guilford man has been charged with the theft of more than 55 tons of New Zealand and Australian meat from a refrigeration warehouse.

John Cunningham was released on $50,000 bond after arraignment Friday in U.S. District Court. Three other men were being sought in the case on federal arrest warrants, authorities said.

The meat, worth an estimated $150,000, was stolen last March 22 from New Haven Cold Storage Corp. in New Haven. Four men drove away with the meat after loading it into three- truck trailers, according to federal investigators. The meat was recovered about a week later.

Drug dealers decision made

BOSTON (AP) — A bill setting mandatory 25-year prison terms for major drug dealers would not violate constitutional prohibitions against cruel and unusual punishment, the state Supreme Court says.

The advisor opinion was issued Friday. It was requested by the Legislature, which is considering a bill that would require a minimum 25-year sentence without chance of probation or parole for anyone convicted of possessing with intent to sell drugs with a street value in excess of $25,000.

A post mortem on 'the season'

By CAROL HUNTER

Soccer is being suggested as the up and coming sport. Football may be the great spectator sport, but in Howard County, nothing can equal the American favorites, baseball and softball, for involvement. For the masses, "the season" has just passed; although, some of the elite may be absorbed in playoffs and all star games.

Fun and sportsmanship are the lofty goals of each group, be it Little League, Miss Softball, Teen Age League, Church League or slow pitch. Linked with competition, learning how to win and lose gracefully, both goals are usually attained.

Vacations are planned around "the season". Meals suffer, and the family may survive on chili dogs, and fritoe pie for prolonged periods. There is undisputed evidence that some of our own residents experience a personality change upon entering one of our well-kept parks, whether as a player, spectator or coach. Amazing sagas of mild mannered citizens becoming aggressive, verbose, and even pugalistic have emerged. Feelings are never more intense than when the games concern the kids.

Cases are reported yearly about the athletically-inclined father whose offspring is first involved in Pee Wee League. The father is said to suffer from depression all season upon attending his first game only to find that his son, the great hope for family tradition, is picking wildflowers in left field instead of displaying the anticipated prowess. An innovation for the Pee Wee, ages 6 and 7, has lessened the lounging in the field, however. T-ball, actually hitting the ball off of a large tee instead of its being pitched, has been successfully tried this year.

Jack Barber, is the long-time Commissioner of District 3 Little League, but each of the four Big Spring, five Midland and one Lamesa leagues under his authority, has its own President. Serving in Big Spring this year are: American League, Bob West; Texas, Manuel Ramirez; National, Dearl Pittman; and International, Jerald Burgess. Not enough nice things can be written about these devoted men and others whom they can "con" into working and coaching. They spend hours doing everything from maintenance to umpiring. One can observe Wayne Basden, Bill Mims, Stuart Anderson, Ben Hitt, Wayne Henry, Freddy Rodriguez, Raymond Lopez, Charles Moore, Ron Roby or David Yanez out on a Saturday mowing and cleaning the fields, not to mention their wives who not only put up with the time spent, but who are also right there helping.

The Texas Little League has taken several All-Star teams to the State finals in Waco in recent years. Participation is stable despite the loss of Webb and decline in school population. Girls are welcomed if they choose Little League over softball.

Should anyone not be acquainted with the effects of Title IX on girls' sports, they are, suddenly, big business. Mulit-millions are now available for girl's scholarships where a few years ago there were zilch. Participation has expolded, and the class beauty now also plays basketball or second base. Girl's softball is a perfect example of this interest. Jane Upton has long been instrumental in the local program and has served as a State director. Under its new organization, United Girls Softball of America, Tommy Meeks serves as Persident, assisted by men like Jackie Thomason, Danny and Marvin Wise and Zeke Valles, who raise money and do the necessary physical work. The association is in the black financially, unusual in any ball program. Highlighting this year's activities will be our city's hosting of the National Tournament for ages 14-19. Big Spring will have an All Star team entered. 2500 people are expected from Virginia, Texas and New Mexico. Big Spring was selected for its excellent facilities at the Anderson Complex. Meeks gave special recognition to Paul Reazelle for the city's maintenance.

Don Spence is the Executive Director of the Teen Age League, whose highlight is its 1977 season State Championship. The senior division McMahon Indians was the victorious team, managed by Don and coached by Bill Battle; although, there have also been other Big Spring teams to get to the State Finals. After its inception in 1958, the Teen Age League built Johnny Stone Park on I 20 for its home. Through the work and dedication of men such as the late D.R. Gartman, Ray Weir, John Stone, R.J. Englert, and Don Newsom, the League has survived. Especially cited was Chairman of the Board and fund raiser, Al Valdes, without whom, according to Spence, there would be no Teen Age League. Meeks, Spence and Barber all verified a fact of life in any youth ball program, parent involvement is essential. Spence noticed regress when the League moved to the new complex, for although the facilities are beautiful, when the city maintains, volunteers diminish. Barber states that our Little League Parks are some of the best in the state because of the reliance on volunteers, specifically parents.

All of the programs depend on sponsors. Every director expressed great appreciation to the service clubs and local businesses, who year after year donate for the ever increasing costs of supplying equipment, uniforms, and upkeep.

Concession stands are another means of monetary support. This is a specialty of the mothers. Bless them! Laying aside their gourmet cooking for "the season" they become, instead, experts on filling coke orders with both hands and cursing the snow cone machine. What concession-working mother has not to a young one said, "If you let anyone see you eating that snow cone, I'll swear that you did not get it here."

Antoher money raising feature of "the season" is the Father's Game. It has to come at the end of the season, otherwise there would be no able-bodied fathers left in the stands to guide the umpires. It is interesting to speculate what transgressions coaches like Jim Baum, can possible prove against their team fathers to get them onto the field.

Were it not for the proven results which evolve from working with our youth, were it not for the fun that the kids have, one would have to speculate on the sanity of those who devote hours and months to "the season". However, Mike Faulkner typified the enthusiasm of all coaches when, at the last game of his first place team, he lamented," I wish we could play for another month." Seven well-known mothers rushed for the aspirin and a thermometer.

Gasoline costs $2.78 in Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The Spanish government has increased gasoline prices 29 percent, cut heating oil production by one-fifth and ordered half of all public lighting shut off in attempts to cut oil imports.

The government also increased electricity rates 21 percent and is studying gasoline rationing. Gasoline now costs about $2.78 a gallon for premium.

Hamburger prices might decline in 1984

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Families will find more chicken and pork on their tables in the next five years as the price of beef continues to skyrocket, a Texas livestock economist predicted.

But while the highest prices are yet to come, he said, the cattle industry is "bullish again," and should be able to offer lower prices by 1984.

"There's no way on God's green earth consumers will be paying less for hamburger until then," Edward Uvacek Jr. told the marketing committee of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association here this week.

Uvacek, a livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, also warned the group that attractive prices for pork and poultry products are persuading consumers not to buy beef.

Uvacek said the higher prices are to be expected as part of a growth movement in the cattle market.

"The real prices you received for calves increased 118 percent from 1975 to 1979," Uvacek said. "The best prices usually come in the second to sixth year. If this prospect holds, we're looking at better prices during the 1980-84 period," the economist said.

"If somebody ever comes up with a chickenburger, the beef business is in big trouble," Uvacek said.

1979-80 Presidential Classics chosen for Howard College

Official hostesses represent college

By MICKIE DICKSON

Ten young women signed scholarship agreements this week to serve as Howard College Presidential Classics for 1979-1980. This prestigious selection goes to students with outstanding high school records in both academic areas and extra-curricular activities.

These young women serve as official hostesses at various college functions and represent the college at many community events. Assisting with recruiting, conducting tours of the campus, and serving as student assistants during registration and interscholastic league events are some of their varied duties.

The young ladies chosen to serve the 1979-80 school year represent the best and brightest from the Permian Basin area high schools. They are Beth Boeker, Forsan High School; Clara Jean Brown, Big Spring High School; Patti Lynn Keune, Klondike High School, Lamesa; Lisa Ann McMillan, Forsan High School; Julie Miller,BSHS; Susan Parsons, Lamesa High School; Carie Marie Poynor, Forsan; Janene Shive, Coahoma High School; Julie Underwood, Forsan HS and Lisa Ann Warren, BSHS.

The Presidential Classics include one class valedictorian of her senior class, Beth Boeker of Forsan High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Boeker. Beth is one of five members of the National Honor Society out of the group. She served as president of the society her senior year. She served as secretary of the student council her senior year and was in informative speaking her sophomore and senior years.

Beth will be a freshman at Howard College majoring in Business management or marketing this fall. She was the Zales-Herald Youth Achievement award winner for 1979.

Dear Abby

He's Spokesman For Men's Glib

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 32-year-old woman, living alone, supporting myself, and respectable in every sense of the word. I'm nothing special to look at (a little on the heavy side) but I never was so hungry for a man I'd date just anybody.

Well, a salesman came into our office two weeks ago and came on to me immediately. He's 36, divorced (no children). We were really attracted to each other. I honestly thought I'd found the man I had been waiting for.

Then he asked me how much money I had in the bank. I told him, and he asked me if I could let him have $2,500 for 90 days. I was shocked since he had told me how "fabulously" he had been doing. It didn't add up.

I said I'd give him the money if he'd sign a note. He got very angry and said if he had wanted to sign a note he'd have gone to a bank.

Now I don't know what to do. Half of me tells me not to give him the money without the note, and the other half tells me to give it to him. I need some advice.

HALF AND HALF

DEAR HALF: Listen to the half with the brains and give him no money without a note.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too, Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Focus on family living

Good food buy takes knowledge

By JANET ROGERS
County Extension Agent

Getting a good food buy takes knowledge — and that takes constant study.

Food shoppers concerned about their responsibilities learn what makes a good buy — by learning signs of quality and by learning how to select food wisely.

It is a responsibility of the food shopper to spend the family food budget most effectively.

On the shopper's choices many things depend — the health, contentment and, in part, the economic status of the family.

In addition, most shoppers want the "most return" for the money spent.

That "return" is more than dollars and cents — it includes the quality and economy of the purchase and the family's eating satisfaction.

Food shopping is a major task — with a changing market and many hard-to-answer questions.

Shoppers face questions about new food products, quality and packaging changes — as well as economy questions in the face of constantly rising prices.

So, their study must be a constant process, too — in order to continue getting the best food buys.

Shoppers can get good food buys by knowing the major factors that make good buys — and then using them as a "shopper's guide."

These factors vary from one shopper to another — but only in degree and emphasis.

An informed "shopper's guide" has three basic parts — family preferences, food costs and wise buying practices.

Each part features major factors to consider.

Family preferences are "likes" and "dislikes."

Informed shoppers know the preferences of all family members.

They also follow them in planning menus and comparing different food choices.

A "bargain" is no bargain if it ends up in the garbage can.

Informed shoppers compare costs by comparing "unit prices," if possible — that is, the price "per pound" or "per ounce." But that is only part of cost comparing.

They also read labels for the other parts — nutritive value of a product, amount of "waste" in a product and the extent of preparation the product will need.

In comparing cost according to preparation needs, the shopper must consider the "cost of a convenience product" versus the cost of time and energy spent at home preparing a similar food item "from scratch."

Wise buying practices include several factors that informed shoppers must know. They are:

- signs of quality — to get the full benefit of its nutritive value,
- times of the year each food is most plentiful, has best quality and lowest price,
- how much to buy — to allow for planned-overs and avoid "throw-away leftovers."
- when special sales occur, and
- new developments in food — and in food markets.
