Howard County to join lawsuits to get out of its new District 31

By Danielle C. Belton-Pulliam
Assistant City Editor

BIG SPRING — More than a week after hearing state Sen. Teel Bivins announce his re-election plans during a Big Spring Rotary Club meeting, his soon-to-be new constituents in Howard County are taking legal action to remove themselves from the senator's district.

Howard County has joined state and federal lawsuits already in progress in hopes of keeping Howard County in its current Senate district — and out of Bivins' District 31, which is scheduled to include both Midland and Odessa. The county was recently removed from House District 70 and Senate District 28, and added to House District 85 and Senate District 31 by the Legislative Redistricting Board (LRB) in July.

Bivins, who was in Howard County last week announcing his plans to run for re-election in 2002, came specifically to Big Spring to help ease the tensions of its residents who were apprehensive — and vocal — about being placed in the same district with its larger West Texas neighbors. Howard County officials said they feared the smaller county would get neglected if it was placed in the same district as Midland, Odessa and Amarillo. Bivins attempted to assuage their concerns in his announcement.

"That makes you (Howard County's citizens) the people who can determine who the representative is going to be in the state Senate," Bivins said on Aug. 7. "That is why I came to Big Spring today to announce my candidacy."

While many Howard County residents and officials were in agreement the announcement was a sign of good faith on Bivins' part, it apparently was a gesture that failed to fully impress all.

After a 3-2 vote by the Howard County Commissioners' Court on Monday, the county was preparing to join four lawsuits currently contesting the new state Senate and House political districts.

Howard County representatives have been outspoken regarding the move since day one.

"We feel like we're losing a voice in Austin," Howard County Attorney Mike Thomas told the Reporter-Telegram on Friday. "Before we had a district office here. We were the center of the district. We were one of the larger counties in the district. Now we've moved down the political ladder."

Thomas said Big Spring is a "smaller city, on the border of the district." He said Howard County officials are simply concerned about the type of political impact they will have being a small county in a big district.

According to Thomas, Howard County is seeking to join three cases filed in state court — two in Travis County and one in Hildalgo County — and one federal case filed in Tyler. Howard County also may intervene in four other lawsuits filed in an effort to validate LRB redistricting maps. Two of the cases are in state court in Harris County and the other two are in federal court in Waco.

Thomas said Howard County is only looking to intervene in the cases if any of them lead to a judge redrawing the districts.

Despite some glitches, MISD police chief considers first week of school success

By D. Lance Lunsford
Staff Writer

When it came to traffic safety, the first week of school went off without a hitch.

That first week is always a hectic one with new clothes, supplies, and, of course, the often chaotic drive from home to school dodging other drivers while obeying traffic laws. And although the newness of back to school wears off by the end of the first week, adherence to traffic safety, especially in speed-reduced school zones, is imperative, according to officers.

Midland Independent School District Chief of Police Dan Walkenshaw said despite a few glitches, the week was considered a huge success.

"I know the first day there was an accident at MHS," Walkenshaw said. "But we did not see a rash of accidents per say or incidents."

Walkenshaw said awareness by MISD staff and

Sports complex another step closer to opening day

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

Almost nine months before the start of the 2002 season, the baseball stadium at the Scharbauer Sports Complex has completed a major phase of construction.

The interior walls on the perimeter of the field are in place, and the dugouts, batting area, lower restrooms, dugout training rooms and tunnels have all been constructed. Currently, the field is full of thick gravel, and the infield material and clay for the pitcher's mound are in place.

"I don't think Midland quite understands what it's about to experience," said Monty Hoppel, general manager of the RockHounds baseball team.

He also said he eagerly awaits community input from Midlanders.

"Please let us know," he said. "It's your facility, we're just the caretakers of it."

The Midland Football-Soccer and Baseball Complex Development Corporation on Friday hosted a tour of the facility.

On Monday, the group will have a special public meeting at 8:30 a.m. at the Midland City Council Chamber to select officers, discuss rental rates and to discuss naming rights and sponsorships for the complex.

Director of Development Services Chuck Swallow said it is still too early to say where the discussion about naming rights will lead.

"We're continuing to work on naming rights, but it's too premature to know," he said. But all of the details, he said, should be final by September or October.

The football and soccer stadium is also moving along nicely, Swal-

Winds loom as crews scramble to handle fires

By Brad Cain
Associated Press

MONUMENT, Ore. — Fire crews stripped flaming bark from trees and buried smoldering sagebrush outside this tiny town Friday as a wildfire crept within a few miles of homes after doubling in size overnight.

Fire officials feared a gusty cold front would send the 21,000-acre fire and others burning across the West racing toward homes.

"The whole name of the game today is to anticipate what the weather is going to do to the fires," said George Lennon, a spokesman at the Northwest Interagency Coordination Center in Portland, the regional fire management headquarters.

The fire season has exploded this week, with authorities putting the West on its highest level of alert and bringing in military troops to help fire crews toiling in sweltering heat and rugged terrain. There were some 22,650 firefighters battling 33 major fires burning on 584,541 acres in the West, the National Interagency Fire Center said Friday.

Two battalions of Marines and Army troops will be trained and sent to wildfires in Washington state, where residents in more than 150 homes have been urged to evacuate.

The big fires were in the high desert of northern and eastern Oregon, where tinder dry sagebrush and juniper fueled flames.

"It looks like a war zone out there," said Polly Wharfield, a fire information officer in southern Oregon, where the Quartz fire was burning across 5,600 acres near the California line.

A fire threatening Monument, a ranching town of 150, had grown to 21,000 acres and was just 10 percent contained Friday.

The town remained untouched. On its outskirts, some 800 firefighters were scraping and burning a perimeter — hoping to deprive the fire of fuel and keep it from getting close enough to rain glowing embers onto homes.

Some crews on rugged ridges ripped burning bark off trees and buried flaming sagebrush with their pick-like Pulaskis.

AP Photo
Firefighter Jesus Sanchez, of Salem, Ore., lights a fire to burn out an area along a ridge as smoke shrouds the entire area at the Monument Complex Fire near Monument, Ore.

Tanker trucks rumbled down logging roads to spray water onto the fire and twin-rotor helicopters buzzed overhead, emptying 1,100-gallon water buckets onto the flames.

Ten major fires were burning on 270,000 acres in Oregon.

The Bridge Creek fire, north of here, had nearly doubled in size to 6,200 acres by Friday. The Lakeview complex was at 179,400 acres and 25 percent contained. Some 250 members of the Oregon National Guard arrived at the Quartz fire, southeast of Ashland, to lend a hand to 2,000 firefighters and other personnel.

Pilot Paul Mavrinac surveyed the cow pasture where his chopper and 10 others have been based during daily air assaults on the Quartz fire.

"We don't put the fire out. The guys on the ground put the fire out. We just slow it down," said Mavrinac, who's been a chopper pilot for 25 years. In one six-hour shift this week, he dumped 62,000 gallons of water on the fire.

To the north, more than 70,000 acres have burned in Washington state this week alone.

Three separate fires have prompted evacuation orders for at least 153 homes near Okanogan and Leavenworth. In that town, authorities warned that nearly 2,000 other homes were in danger should conditions change.

There were some victories. In Nevada, where fires have blackened more than 290,000 acres, the 92,000-acre Buffalo complex was nearly contained. Northern California's largest blaze, a fire 50 miles north of Susanville, was contained at 67,700 acres and some of the 900 firefighters were being demobilized.

After a half-century, fallen Marines find final resting place in Arlington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen World War II Marines whose remains were discovered on a South Pacific island nearly 60 years after they fell in battle were buried under gray skies Friday at Arlington National Cemetery.

The sun broke through the clouds just after a Marine bugler finished playing "Taps" and the chaplain of the United States Marine Raider Association led a prayer with family members and others attending the service.

"Today really signifies how the Marine Corps takes care of their own," said Capt. Joe Kloppel at the end of the service. "This ceremony put a finalization on the sacrifice that the Marines made for their country 59 years ago."

It was a final homecoming for the Marines killed during a 1942 raid on the Japanese-held Makin Atoll in the Gilbert Islands.

An unsuccessful attempt to recover the bodies of 19 fallen Marines on Makin, now known as Butaritari, was made in 1949. The search was renewed in 1998 by relatives of men from the 2nd Raider Battalion and other World War II veterans.

The bodies, left on the small coral reef island after the two-day raid, were recovered and identified two years ago when searchers found an island resident who had helped bury the bodies as a young boy.

Six bodies were returned to families for burial. The remaining 13 Marines were flown Thursday from Hawaii to Andrews Air Force Base, where they were met by relatives and U.S. Marine Raider Association members.

Marines carried the flag-draped caskets to hearses bound for Arlington.

"They're finally home, which is where I want to be when I die," said 81-year-old Capt. Joe Griffith, the battalion's only living officer. "They were good men and volunteers who did something over and above the call of duty by attempting to further the progress of engagement."

Vernon Castle is one of the Raiders who will be buried on the 59th anniversary of the Battle of Makin, which was featured in the 1943 film "Gung Ho" starring Randolph Scott, Noah Beery Jr. and Robert Mitchum.

Top Bush aide on 'faith-based initiative' resigning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The embattled leader of President Bush's "faith-based initiative" is resigning after seven controversial months, leaving at a crucial time for Bush's effort to open government programs to religious groups.

A lifelong Democrat, John DiIulio had been a force for the compromise that will be needed to turn the legislation into law.

Last month the House approved a bill opening 10 programs to churches, synagogues and other religious groups. But the measure attracted little Democratic support, and no legislation has been introduced in the Senate, where Democrats are in control.

DiIulio, director of the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives, said he was leaving for health and personal reasons, and he said he had intended to assess his position after six months.

But he was also frustrated at times by the politics within the White House and worn down by the battering from liberal and conservative groups alike.

"At one level it's all the things the American people find distasteful. Things that should be bipartisan can turn partisan. Things that should bring people together divide them," he said. "The good news is that leadership ultimately trumps that."

Overweight and overworked, the 43-year-old said he's also exhausted from his commute several times a week from Philadelphia, where he is on leave from the University of Pennsylvania and where his wife and three children live. Since February, he's been a regular fixture on the 4:05 a.m. train from Philadelphia to Washington. "It can run you ragged," he said.

He said he was pleased to have completed a report assessing the barriers religious groups face, which was released Thursday. And he said he was satisfied that Bush's legislation is alive. "My goal was not to see it pass the Senate. My goal was to see it pass the House," he said.

He added that he has "total trust and confidence" in both Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., who is working on his own version of the legislation, and the president.

"I'm just a little teeny, tiny insignificant speck of a man." He then added with characteristic humor: "Well, I'm kind of fat."

Lieberman was one of many who praised DiIulio, who attracted affection if not support from many Democratic groups.

"John DiIulio was given a very difficult and complicated challenge in shaping and moving the president's faith-based plan," Lieberman said in a statement. "He leaves having done a remarkable job in advancing this critically important cause in a short time."

Officials inside and outside the administration said DiIulio was often frustrated by the politics within the White House. A religious conservative, Don Eberly, already had the No. 2 job in the faith-based office when DiIulio arrived, and the two clashed on a regular basis. And while DiIulio wanted to move the legislation slowly in order to build support from Democrats, others in the White House wanted to push it through the House to build momentum.

As he departs, conservatives are angry that the White House has compromised too much, but Democrats say it's still not enough.

The hope was that DiIulio's ties to Democrats would help win their support, said Marvin Olasky, an early Bush adviser on this issue. "But so far he hasn't been able to do that at all," he said.

The Bush initiative has been attacked by conservatives and liberals alike.

Liberals say government will wind up paying for religious activity, breaching the constitutional separation between church and state. Conservatives say government funding could lead to government intrusion on churches, and that tax dollars might wind up with non-mainstream religious groups.

DiIulio regularly complained that critics were focusing on the extreme cases and ignoring the good work that religious people can accomplish. And he hit back directly at some conservative critics, calling them "predominantly white, exurban, evangelical and national parachurch leaders" who should not presume to speak for all religious people.

Admitted child rapist Christopher Reardon, 29, center, is escorted from Salem Superior Court in Salem, Mass. after a judge sentenced him to 40 to 50 years in prison. Reardon, a former church youth leader, pleaded guilty to 75 counts of child molestation and rape.

Former youth ministry worker sentenced to 40 to 50 years for sexually assaulting boys

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — A former youth ministry and YMCA worker was sentenced to at least 40 years in prison Friday for raping and assaulting boys he had befriended.

Christopher Reardon, 29, had faced up to life in prison in the largest abuse case in state history. He had pleaded guilty last month to 75 of 130 counts against him, including child rape, indecent assault and battery on a child and disseminating pornography. The charges involved 24 boys ages 7 to 14.

Salem Superior Court Judge Isaac Borenstein sentenced Reardon to at least 40 to no more than 50 years in prison. Had the judge sentenced Reardon to life in prison, he could have been eligible for parole in just 15 years, but also could have spent his entire life behind bars.

"It is clear to me that unless you are in jail for most of your life, there is a serious risk to other people," Borenstein said.

The judge said Reardon caused more harm "than a sadistic stranger on the street."

Prosecutors had recommended 50 to 75 years in prison. Reardon's defense claimed he could be rehabilitated and asked the judge for a 10- to 15-year sentence, with treatment.

About three dozen family members of victims attended the sentence. Some cried as the sentence was read.

"Christopher Reardon should never be left in a position that would ever allow him to manipulate or abuse another child," the victims' families said in a statement read by Prosecutor Robert Brennan.

"I'm glad it's just all over," said one of the boys, who had testified earlier this week that Reardon ruined his life. "I'm glad he was sentenced to a long time. ... He deserved it."

Reardon's parents, John and Catherine Reardon, sat impassively in the courtroom. His sister, Kelly Kasprzak, cried.

"On behalf of Christopher Reardon and his family, we're all disappointed in the sentence," defense lawyer John Andrews said afterward.

Reardon admitted molesting boys he befriended through his job as the youth ministry coordinator at St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church in Middleton, about 20 miles north of Boston. He met other victims while working as a Boy Scout leader and a swim instructor at a YMCA.

According to court records, police confiscated at least two dozen pornographic videos, photographs of nude children, inflatable dolls and sex toys from Reardon's home and office.

Senator to target 'Black Belt' for economic development

By Jeffrey McMurray
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In the tiny south Georgia town of Lumpkin, residents consider themselves lucky if they land low-wage work at the local paper mill.

"The poor folks stay in, and the smart folks move on," said Ed Cannington, Lumpkin's mayor for the past 22 years. "It's just a mess, just no easy solution to it."

Stewart County, where Lumpkin is located, sits in the middle of an 11-state swath of counties with large black populations. Most share the same problems: high unemployment, poor access to health care, substandard housing, low high school graduation rates, high infant mortality rates and poor infrastructure.

Historians and demographers refer to the area as the Black Belt, a term first used a century ago by educator and ex-slave Booker T. Washington to describe a small section of Alabama known for dark soil ideal for growing cotton.

Cannington believes a federal initiative to boost the Black Belt could have results similar to the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), which has aided mountain communities.

"That was a desolate area," Cannington said, referring to the 13-state Appalachian region. "Now they've got all kinds of roads, resorts where people come in and spend the money, and lots of industry. We certainly need something like that down in our area."

When Congress returns next month, Sen. Zell Miller, D-Ga., will request a $250,000 feasibility study to look at how an agency modeled after the ARC could help the Black Belt.

"We want to help the Third World across the oceans, but we need to be looking at what has been called the Third World of the United States," said Miller, who comes from an area of north Georgia that has benefitted from ARC programs.

The Appalachian commission was created 35 years ago as a partnership between the federal government and states to boost economic development and improve the quality of life for residents. Since its inception, the ARC has helped cut the region's poverty rate in half, provide water and sewer services to some 800,000 households, and build more than 2,300 miles of new highways.

Miller's proposal has been churning in his mind for several years, fueled by frequent talks with University of Georgia demographer Douglas C. Bachtel.

Bachtel says the Black Belt never recovered from its slave-based economy of the 19th century and needs federal help to catch up with the rest of the country. Although the Appalachian commission covers some of the same states, no one agency is focusing on the needs of people in the Black Belt, Bachtel said.

Helping the Black Belt

The Black Belt is an 11-state swath of counties with large black populations and high poverty rates. Sen. Zell Miller, D-Ga., wants Congress to approve money to study setting up a federal agency similar to the Appalachian Regional Commission to promote economic development in the region.

UT System Chancellor Burck announces he's stepping down

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The head of the 15-campus University of Texas System said Friday he is resigning.

Chancellor R. D. "Dan" Burck was chosen last December to head the system. He said he will stay on until a replacement is found, or until Sept. 1, 2003.

Before December, Burck served as the interim chancellor after his predecessor William Cunningham retired after eight years on the job.

"I strongly believe it is time for the University of Texas System to plan for succession in leadership," Burck wrote in a letter to Charles Miller, chairman of the system's board of regents.

From Sept. 1, 2003, until Aug. 31, 2005, Burck will serve as a part-time special adviser to the regents and the new chancellor, the system announced in a statement.

Burck, 68, is the eighth chancellor since the position was created in 1950. Duties include representing the $5.8 billion system in legislative matters, advocating higher education causes and fund-raising.

Beginning Sept. 1, Burck will earn $386,198 in salary — about $72,000 of which is paid from the state and the rest from private contributions. Burck also will receive $100,000 in deferred salary and more than $100,000 in perks ranging from cleaning services to memberships at private clubs.

Burck was named the sole finalist for the job last fall after an eight-month national search ended with no other candidates.

Regent Woody L. Hunt of El Paso said the board would begin "an exhaustive search" for Burck's replacement.

Burck is a former system executive vice chancellor for business affairs. He came to the UT System in 1988 after a 33-year career in private business.

"I have nothing but the deepest admiration for the leadership and tenacity that Dan Burck has brought to the UT System over the past 13 years," Miller said.

SDO awaits Commerce's explanation

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Officials with the Commerce Department Friday said they would mail the U.S. Court of International Trade at New York a letter of explanation that would provide information sought by the trade court regarding the Save Domestic Oil (SDO) lawsuit.

The letter originally was to have been hand delivered by close of business on Friday. Now, it is being mailed.

A spokesman for SDO said it would probably be next week before the contents of the Commerce letter are revealed.

The judge of the U.S. Court of International Trade on Aug. 10 had federal marshalls arrest two Department of Commerce lawyers for contempt of court because they refused to name supervisors who approved an appeal that caused the department to fail to comply with the trade court's mandate.

After being taken into custody, the Commerce lawyers were released after several hours after agreeing to appear before the court on Friday to reveal the names of supervisors responsible for the contemptuous action that was filed in November 2000 during the final days of the Clinton Administration.

The contempt charges are the latest event in the 1998 petition of Save Domestic Oil (SDO), which charged Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Venezuela, Mexico and Nigeria had dumped oil in the U.S. at prices below the cost of production. In the petition, SDO asked the Department of Commerce for trade protection, but was a refused a hearing because the Department of Commerce said the group lacked standing in the matter, even though it represented every independent producer group in America except for one.

SDO then appealed that decision to the U.S. Court of International Trade which ruled Commerce must give SDO a fair hearing. At that time, Commerce ignored the Trade Court ruling, choosing to file an appeal with the U.S. Court of Appeals.

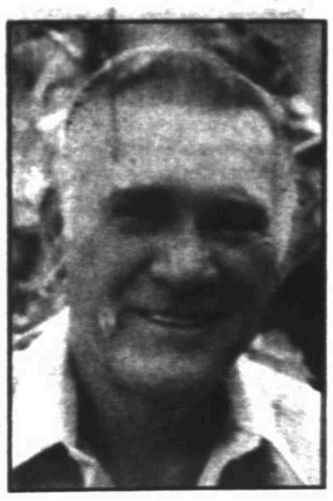
OBITUARIES



Dee Foster, Jr.

Dee (Bud, Deacon) Foster, Jr. was born on July 9, 1922 in Big Spring, Texas and was called home on Thursday, August 16, 2001, and now peacefully rests in the eternally loving arms of Jesus after a 2 1/2 year struggle with lung disease. He spent his last day with his wife, Lucille and among his friends at Polo Park Estate in Midland, Texas.

He was a longtime resident of West Texas and made many friends throughout his lifetime. Dee touched many lives and was always quick with a smile and a warm greeting. Friends and family were alerted to his arrival by the familiar whistling that seemed to be ever present and reflected the joy that filled his heart.

Dee loved the Lord throughout his life and shared that love with many. His walk with God earned him the nickname of "Deacon." He was a long-standing member of the Masonic Lodge and served in Baptist Churches throughout the Permian Basin as well as Corpus Christi, Kingsland and San Angelo. Although Dee put God first and foremost, his family was near and very dear to his heart.

Dee married Martha Applewhite on September 13, 1940 in Big Spring, Texas. Dee and Martha were blessed with two children, Kay Clifton and Dee C. Foster. Martha preceded Dee in death in 1951. Dee married Lucille Cathey in Lovington, New Mexico on June 26, 1953. They were blessed with two children, Pamela Wilson and Mark Foster.

Dee served his country during World War II in the Army Air Corps. He had the distinction of being the first to enlist in Howard County at the outset of war. He was discharged as a Sergeant in December 1945. The heavy-handed Sergeant had a reputation of allowing recruits to go AWOL to visit their mothers after dark.

Dee served the oil and gas industry for about 40 years, retiring from Tret-O-Lite in 1983. He had the distinction of being the first million-dollar salesman. Although this accomplishment may seem lofty, to Dee it was a labor of love. Dee made many of his life-long friends from having served in this industry, and he rarely, if ever, met a stranger. He loved people more that his work which is why he was so successful. He was widely known and respected throughout the industry and his footprints are still visible. Upon retirement the sentiments of his company were reflected on a plaque presented to him by his peers that read: "... blazing a trail for us to follow as one of Tret-O Lite's greatest men."

Dee went by many names during his lifetime, but to those of us who loved him, he was known as loving husband, loving father, loving friend. We're all going to miss him.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Dee and Kate Foster, and one sister, Anna Johnson.

He is survived by his wife of 48 years, Lucille; his sister, Mary Holland of San Angelo; his four children, Kay Clifton of Big Spring, Dee C. Foster of Austin, Pamela Foster Wilson of Snyder, and Mark J. Foster of Midland. He is also survived by his sons-in-law, Robin Clifton of Big Spring and Jimmy Wilson of Snyder, as well as one daughter-in-law, Elizabeth Foster of Austin, five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Sean Foster, John Foster, Jeff Clifton, Robin Clifton, Jimmy Wilson, Danny Hull, Bubba Dennis and Buford Parmer. Honorary pallbearers will be Otis Wilson, Herb Miller, Larry Falls, Herman Stokes and Webb Farrish.

Graveside funeral services will be at 2:00 PM Saturday, August 18, 2001, at the Peace Chapel at Trinity Memorial Park with Chaplain Skip Hedgpeth of Midland officiating. Family visitation will be held at the Family Gathering Room at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home on Saturday from 12:00 Noon until service time and after the services until 4:30 PM.

In lieu of flowers, please send contributions to the American Lung Association, P.O. Box 26460, Austin, Texas 78755-0460 or to the American Cancer Society, c/o Lucy Bonner, P.O. Box 2121, Big Spring, Texas 79721-2121

Randall Lance Etheredge

Randall Lance Etheredge died in Midland on Wednesday, August 15, 2001.

Graveside services have been scheduled for 2 p.m., Saturday, August 18, in Resthaven Memorial Park with Reverend Charlie Dodd officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Lance was born April 6, 1967 in Kermit, Texas to Rick and Louise Etheredge. He was reared and educated in Midland and was a graduate of Robert E. Lee High School.He was employed by St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Lance was preceded in death by his grandfather, Marcus Coker, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W.L. Etheredge.

He is survived by his parents; his sister, Kristi Clepper and her husband, Donnie, of Midland; his grandmother, Louise Coker, of Kermit, TX; his niece, Bailey Nicole Clepper; his aunts, Gretchen Noland of Kermit, TX, Jackie Butler of Hobbs, NM, and Gloria Erwin of Colorado City, TX; and numerous cousins.

J.C. Williamson

Born on 26 July 1912 to Ruby Rae Conwell Williamson and Ervin Williamson in Purdy, Oklahoma, near Lindsey, Oklahoma, where the family ranched, J.C. Williamson moved his family in 1917 to the area of Lubbock, Texas, and was raised on a farm near Wolfforth. He graduated from Lubbock High School in 1929 and from Texas Tech University with a B.S. in History in 1933 and an M.S. in Geology in 1935. He did doctoral work in geology at the University of California at Berkeley in 1937. Returning to West Texas to accept employment with Phillips Petroleum Company in May 1937, he stayed with Phillips until 1944. He then became an independent geologist and oil operator and finished a full day's work on the day he died.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 10 a.m., Saturday, August 18, at the First United Methodist Church with Reverend Jan Reed officiating. Interment will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He married the former Lois Geraldine (Jerry) Haskins on 9 August 1938, and had just celebrated his 63rd wedding anniversary on the Thursday before he died on Monday at the age of 89. J.C. and Jerry Williamson were first blessed with three children, Toni Williamson (Mrs. Chancy) Croft, a professor of mathematics and adult education at the University of Alaska in Anchorage; Charla Williamson, at home in Midland; and Ralph Ervin Williamson, an attorney in San Antonio and oil operator in Midland. The couple then adopted two other beloved children as their own, Margaret Williamson Hillin, employed at her father's Midland business, and Mary Jane Williamson Wilmeth, who assisted her father administratively for many years in Midland before moving recently to Duqueen, Arkansas.

Mr. Williamson was a well-known geologist specializing in well-sample geology, and a wildcatter and oil operator since 1944. When James Michener sought real-life wildcatter stories for his novel entitled "Texas," he came to Midland and consulted J.C. Williamson and gave him an autographed copy for his trouble. J.C. Williamson is credited with numerous oil and gas discoveries, including the Apple Creek field in Glasscock County, Texas, and more recently the Brushy Draw and Ross Draw fields in Eddy County, New Mexico. He personally drilled over a thousand oil and gas wells in West Texas, South Texas, Southeast New Mexico, Oklahoma and Montana. More than ten thousand oil and gas wells have been drilled as a direct result of his exploration activities. He worked a full day in his office in the Petroleum Building in Midland on the day of his death at home in the evening. Retirement, he said, was just for other people.

Mr. Williamson was a published author since the age of 12 when he won a contest conducted by the Denver Post with his short story, "The Secret Life of a Prairie Dog." He published a book, "Deep Treasure," in 1962. He had just completed his personal memoirs before his death, as well as a fictionalized account of his experiences in the oilfield. He relished the telling of Civil War stories learned at the knee of his grandfather, John Conwell, who fought in battles from Second Bull Run to Gettysburg and ultimately lost a finger to gunfire at the stacking of southern arms at Appomattox. For many years he sponsored a scholarship for an outstanding geology graduate.

Mr. Williamson is survived by his wife, Jerry, all five of his children, and 15 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren. An older brother, Silas Williamson, predeceased him in 1933.

The family requests that memorials be given to the J.C. Williamson Scholarship Fund at Midland College.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Cement-entombed body found

PHILADELPHIA — A corpse found entombed in cement in a Philadelphia basement was identified Friday as a New Jersey woman who had been missing for three months, authorities said.

The body of Kimberly Szumski, 36, who disappeared in May from her Cinnaminson, N.J., home, was identified through dental records, Philadelphia Medical Examiner's Office spokeswoman Carol Rogers said.

The autopsy will not be completed for several weeks and the cause of death was not immediately determined, Rogers said.

The corpse was found wrapped in canvas and plastic after workers ripped through cinderblock, cement and steel rods on Thursday. Neighbors had complained to police about a stench.

Szumski's husband, Thomas, had worked on the house as a carpenter from May through July. Thomas Szumski, 42, was found dead of a heroin overdose in the couple's home on July 4.

■ Three teens missing

ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK, Colo. — Park rangers and a helicopter searched through rugged terrain Friday for three missing teen-age backpackers missing.

The 16-year-old and two 17-year-olds have been missing since late Tuesday. They were on an Outward Bound mountaineering course when they were separated from their instructor and another teen in the North Fork area of the park, park spokeswoman Kyle Patterson said.

The 14-day course was scheduled to end Saturday and the teens had warm clothes, tents and food. The park was hit by thunderstorms Thursday and Friday.

The instructor, whose name was not released, searched for the missing teens Wednesday and notified park officials Thursday.

"We try to do as much as we can as early as we can to make sure it doesn't get this far," said Pete Mason, a spokesman for Outward Bound in Denver, where the mountaineering course is based.

About 25 rangers were searching Friday.

■ Mystery plant found

DENVER — It may or may not have been marijuana growing at the Governor's Mansion, but whatever it was, it's gone.

State workers on Thursday removed what appeared to be a knee-high marijuana plant from a bed of bluebells and clover after reporters asked about it.

The State Patrol tested the plant and said it was only a marijuana look-alike. A Denver Post reporter took a leaf of the plant to experts at the Denver Botanic Gardens, who said it was marijuana.

"This is obviously a planted story," joked Dick Wadhams, spokesman for Republican Gov. Bill Owens.

Wadhams suggested, tongue it cheek, it might be a conspiracy by three Democrats who are running or may run for governor.

"It's clearly a joint effort," he said. "We believe they're just blowing smoke."

If it was marijuana, it probably grew from a seed that blew in or was dropped by a pot smoker, State Patrol Sgt. N.A. Nathlich said.

The governor lives with his family in suburban Aurora and uses the mansion for official functions.

South Dakota Senate race could be highlight in 2002

By Christopher Thorne
Associated Press

AP Photo

Rep. John Thune, R-S.D., accompanied by his family, thanks supporters amid cheers at the Republican Party celebration in Sioux Falls, S.D., in this file photo. Although the 2002 election is 15 months away, Republicans believe Thune could offer a serious challange to Sen. Tim Johnson.

WASHINGTON — Sparsely populated South Dakota usually doesn't get much space on the national political stage. But with control of the U.S. Senate hanging by a single seat, that could change in the 2002 campaign.

Republicans are targeting freshman Democrat Tim Johnson, hoping to grab a seat that fellow South Dakotan Tom Daschle, the Senate's majority leader, is just as determined to keep.

A GOP victory could switch control of the Senate and embarrass the Democrats' top elected official. A Democratic victory in a state President Bush easily carried might be interpreted as a rejection of his policies.

Republicans believe Johnson is vulnerable after getting a bare majority — 51 percent — in upsetting GOP Sen. Larry Pressler in 1996. They are looking to Rep. John Thune, the state's lone House member.

Bush himself has lobbied Thune to take on Johnson, inviting Thune and the congressman's wife, Kimberley, to the White House for dinner.

Thune hasn't said what he'll do. Last year, he formed a committee to raise money for a possible run for governor and has said he wants to spend more time with his wife and two young daughters, who live in Sioux Falls.

But he also has kept his congressional campaign office open. And in a recent interview he sounded ready to challenge Johnson, the only Democrat in South Dakota history to win six consecutive statewide elections.

"I've become more convinced as time has passed of the possibilities of really accomplishing things, and really being effective for my state, as a senator working with a Bush administration," Thune said.

Recognizing the likelihood of a strong challenger, Johnson raised $1 million in the first half of the year. He also has hired a campaign manager, a full-time fund-raiser and a media consulting firm.

Johnson estimated the 2002 Senate race may cost a combined $10 million — an extraordinary amount in a rural state where broadcast and print ads are cheap.

"We're trying to put together a war chest that will allow me to respond to the attacks I know are coming," he said. "The Washington political establishment is focused on this race. They see a freshman Democratic senator from a state that gave a 22-percentage-point victory to Bush. I know there's going to be money flooding in."

Soon after taking office, Bush sought to pressure Johnson. He went to South Dakota in early March to push for his tax cut plan, which Daschle opposed and Johnson had yet to make up his mind about. Johnson ended up joining 12 other Democrats and supporting the plan.

Bush's victory in South Dakota last fall continued a streak for Republican presidential candidates that dates to 1968. However, South Dakota often sends to Congress "prairie populists" — Democrats whose platforms draw votes from farmers, Indians and union-populated manufacturing towns.

California's electricity conservation buoyed by incentives

By Jennifer Coleman
Associated Press

Dierdre Smith, right, looks over an energy efficient refrigerator that offers a $200 rebate as salesman Michael Cherin, left, offers assistance at Cherin's appliance store in San Francisco. Higher electricity rates and a slew of state-funded rebates on energy efficient appliances have induced Californians to conserve power this summer.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Kathleen Holder doesn't stuff her wet clothes into the dryer anymore, hanging them instead on a new clothesline outside. Her dishwasher is turned on only at night and her air conditioner isn't used quite as much.

Holder admits her espresso machine "still runs a lot" in her home in Davis, west of Sacramento, but she's taken some big steps to conserve energy in this summer of blackout fears.

Millions of Californians have followed recommendations to cut down on energy use this year. Along with unseasonably cool summer weather, the efforts have helped the state save electricity. The last rolling blackouts were ordered May 8.

In other states, people "think we're sitting out here in our hot tubs," said Susanna Garfield, spokeswoman for the California Energy Commission. "But per capita, we're very efficient."

In fact, per capita electricity use in the most populous state is the second lowest in the nation; only Rhode Island ranks lower.

That's no surprise to Robert Sanford, an appliance salesman at the Marin City Best Buy, who said customers now ask about appliances' energy use. Six months ago, it wasn't something anyone looked at.

"People are looking at these for the long haul now. They want to know the energy savings," he said.

Californians have apparently saved energy even more since the crisis began. Adjusted for weather, power use was down 5 percent in July over last year's use. In May, consumption dropped 10 percent over last year's figure and in June, it fell 12 percent.

Experts say there are several reasons for the decline, including education programs, rebates on power bills and energy-efficient appliances — and higher electricity bills.

However, state-funded programs may have had more of a symbolic effect than a practical one, said Severin Borenstein, director of the University of California Energy Institute at Berkeley.

Californians, he said, realize the crisis is serious. He said many have been moved by the perceived threat of higher electric bills, though recent rate increases were aimed at large, commercial power users.

"Flex Your Power," the state's education campaign, encourages residents to shift appliance use to the evening, when the danger of blackouts has passed. While not all customers are using less, shifting to off-peak times helps flatten out the peaks in energy use that can bring blackouts, Garfield said.

The state's biggest incentive is money — rebates for upgrading to energy-efficient appliances and on electricity bills, which state regulators recently increased.

State energy officials have paid out $60 million to utility customers in rebates as part of Gov. Gray Davis' 20/20 summer conservation plan, which offers a 20 percent rebate for cutting electricity use by 20 percent.

Nearly one-third of Pacific Gas & Electric and Southern California Edison customers qualified for the rebates in July, and about 38 percent of San Diego-area customers saw some relief on their bills.

Other state-sponsored efforts encourage long-term drops in energy consumption, from handing out compact fluorescent light bulbs and rebates for most any energy-saving gadget from insulation to energy-efficient air conditioners. The state has set aside $50 million in rebates for upgrading to energy-efficient appliances to supplement rebate programs already under way by utilities.

Sales of any appliance with the Energy Star label has tripled since last year at Cherin's Appliance in San Francisco.

"Everyone is energy-conscious now," said Lou Cherin, whose sons own the store. Plus, "the rebates bring the price down dramatically."

Upgrading appliances saves a lot of power, without forcing people to make a lifestyle change, Garfield said. A new Energy Star-labeled refrigerator uses half the electricity of a 10-year-old one, she said.

The rebates have spurred a run on new refrigerators, said San Diego Gas & Electric Co. spokeswoman Jennifer Andrews.

The utility is giving out 20,000 rebates of up to $200 for any new energy-efficient appliances.

In the last five months, PG&E has received 52,000 rebate applications for refrigerators, compared with 11,700 during the same period the year before. More than 15,000 PG&E customers have upgraded washing machines, compared with half that amount the year before.

Federal appeals court refuses to delay case against Microsoft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court Friday refused to delay the government's case against Microsoft, clearing the way for a new judge to decide what penalty the software giant should face for antitrust violations.

The Supreme Court, however, still may decide whether to take up Microsoft's appeal. That decision is expected as early as October.

Microsoft had argued that U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson was biased, and that his interviews given to reporters tainted the case. Microsoft said the case should have been taken away from Jackson at the point of the first interview — which would have eliminated Jackson's verdict.

Microsoft said that if the appeals court didn't put the case on hold, it would jeopardize public faith in the judicial system. The appeals court unanimously disagreed.

"Microsoft has failed to demonstrate any substantial harm that would result from the reactivation of proceedings in the district court," the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled.

"It appears that Microsoft has misconstrued our opinion, particularly with respect to what would have been required to justify vacating the district court's findings of fact and conclusions of law," the court wrote.

The court ruled that the case should be returned to district court in seven days, where a new judge will be picked at random. The judge will decide how Microsoft should be penalized for its anticompetitive practices.

The penalty, which is likely to come after a hearing process, could require simple changes in Microsoft conduct or a breakup of the Redmond, Wash., company. Jackson ordered the company split in two, but that portion of his ruling was overturned by the appeals court in June.

"We are pleased with the court's decision and look forward to proceedings in the district court," said Justice Department spokeswoman Gina Talamona.

Trade deficit widens to $29.4 billion in June as exports fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — The trade deficit widened in June as slumping demand in the United States and abroad pushed exports and imports down to their lowest levels in 16 months.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that the trade imbalance increased slightly by 3.3 percent to $29.4 billion in June. The drop in exports was larger than that for imports, causing the trade gap to expand.

Still, June's trade deficit was the second smallest deficit this year, behind May's $28.5 billion. June's trade shortfall was well below the record monthly trade deficit of $34.5 billion registered in September 2000.

Exports of goods and services fell by 2 percent to $86 billion in June as economic turmoil overseas sapped demand.

That decline comes as U.S. manufacturers complain that the value of the dollar is too strong, making their goods expensive abroad. They have been pressing the Bush administration to take steps to change that.

"Sluggish growth overseas coupled with the overvalued dollar will mean that exports will not likely be a source of growth for U.S. manufacturers any time soon," said National Association of Manufacturers economist David Huether.

Meanwhile, imports of goods and services, hurt by flagging demand because of the ailing U.S. economy, declined in June by 0.7 percent to $115.4 billion.

June levels of both exports and imports were the lowest since February 2000.

The latest snapshot of trade activity comes as President Bush seeks unilateral authority to negotiate any trade accord on behalf of the United States, something Congress refused to give former President Clinton.

Bush faces stiff opposition on Capitol Hill for such "fast-track" trade authority. Many lawmakers want to condition further trade liberalization on improving environmental and labor standards abroad.

Administration officials say fast-track authority would help the sagging economy by lifting tariffs that discourage other countries from buying American goods and services.

But organized labor and other critics contend jobs would be lost and the environment would suffer if Bush were given unfettered power to negotiate trade deals.

Sales of U.S.-made capital goods, such as semiconductors and drilling equipment, fell by $1.2 billion in June to $27.1 billion. Exports of consumer goods, including artwork, pharmaceuticals and jewelry, declined by $768 million in June to $7.4 billion.

RANK: MISD academically acceptable district overall scores and the exemplary rating.

"First of all, all of our teachers familiarize themselves completely with the (TEKS) for their grade level," she said. "Then we assessed every child individually in all areas with specific focus on reading, writing and math. Then our teachers provide instruction in the specific areas that each of those children needed, and we did this through small group instruction and through after-school tutorials."

Also scoring well on the TAAS, 10 MISD schools achieved recognized status, compared to two last year — Lee High, Lee Freshman High, Bonham, Elementary, Burnet Elementary, Fannin Elementary, Houston Elementary, Jones Elementary, Lamar Elementary, Emerson Elementary and Scharbauer Elementary.

Only one school was classified as low-performing — Washington Elementary, which started the new school year as a magnet school. Washington has been completely re-tooled and has an almost entirely different student body.

All other MISD campuses were listed as acceptable in the TEA report.

Overall, MISD is an academically acceptable district. The ratings are based on several base indicators, like dropout rate, TAAS scores, attendance, college admissions, TAAS/TASP equivalency and the percentage of students completing the recommended high school program.

In 2000, MISD reported a 1.3 percent dropout rate, down from 2.2 percent in 1999, and between 84 and 89 percent of MISD's students passed the TAAS.

This improvement, said MISD Superintendent Robert Nicks, is encouraging, but more work still needs to be done.

"I'm very encouraged," Nicks said. "We want to build upon the momentum that's already begun. We will do a curriculum audit during the coming year as well as a program analysis, whereby we will be looking at all programs in terms of cost/benefit relationship, so that we are, hopefully, maximizing student performance at the most effective cost to the district and to the taxpayers."

TEA rankings were up for most district in the state this year. The second-highest rating — recognized — was given to 463 districts and 2,326 campuses. Acceptable ratings were issued to 2,476 schools and 398 districts.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

LEGAL: Howard only Texas county so far to intervene in redistricting lawsuits

(From 1A)

"We're just going to tag along," Thomas said. "Main parties have already voiced their objections, we're just intervening so if the judge starts redrawing lines our voice can be heard."

Although Howard County Commissioner Gary Simer was one of the two commissioners to vote against intervening in the lawsuits, he said he hopes the outcome will be in Howard County's favor.

"I wish we would redistrict (back with District 28), but it's been time tested for the last 40 years — nothing's ever changed," Simer said about the county's action. When it came down to the county's chances of succeeding, Simer replied, "I don't know. There's a first time for everything. Howard County does have a right to voice our opinion, so we'll see what the outcome is."

Howard County officials have long contended the issue of being part of Senate District 31 is not a matter of not wanting closer relations with Midland, Odessa and other West Texas counties — and not a rejection of Bivins — but a matter of maintaining the relationships they have already developed within Senate District 28.

"Basically, we don't have any objections to the representatives that we've been assigned to. They're both very honorable people. And we're sure they would continue to represent us, but we have been very happy (with our current representation)," Thomas said.

Howard County has been represented by Sen. Robert Duncan (R-Lubbock) and Rep. David Counts (D-Knox City).

"Both have done so much for Howard County," Simer said.

Big Spring has been in District 28 since the 1920s. While the move has been troubling to Howard County residents, many believe it would actually help the Midland-Odessa region politically. Before the redistricting, both Midland and Odessa officials were hoping more Permian Basin counties would join their district providing more representation in the southern part of the district and more strength in numbers. Andrews, Martin, Howard, Midland, Ector, Crane and Glasscock are now all part of the southern region of District 31.

Previously, Midland County was in District 31 and Ector County was in Duncan's 28th District.

Howard County will be represented in court by Austin attorney Renea Hicks of the law firm Kator, Parks & Weiser. Simer said it's estimated the action will cost at least $10,000, but the commissioners have capped the costs at $20,000.

"We could use the money in Howard County in other ways besides attorney fees," said Simer, later adding. "It's just the way I feel."

Howard County is the only Texas county so far to intervene in any of the redistricting lawsuits. Parties in the bulk of the lawsuits included a number of individuals and at least two associations.

Although Simer said he doesn't think Howard County's intervening in the lawsuit will work in their favor, he said he hopes he is proven wrong.

"I hope it does change, but it never has. But a lot of people feel strongly that it will change this time."

SAFE: MISD police chief happy with first week of school officials helped the back-to-school week's efficiency.

"Dr. Nicks emphasized that everybody be very watchful, and I think that really had something to do with it," Walkenshaw said, referring to MISD's new Superintendent Robert Nicks.

Despite a few busing problems because of the differing schedule of magnet schools, where children were dropped at the wrong stop, the only other obvious problem was ticketing for seat belt violations.

"We really want to make sure everybody wears their seat belt," Walkenshaw added. "We will stop them if we see they don't have their seat belt on. Mainly, we want it for their own safety."

Midland Police Department Lt. Brian Bogart said few citations for speeding in school zones were issued.

But he said that may change on Monday.

"School zones, we're basically laying off of them for the first week. We're really trying to let people get used to school starting. We'll hit those next week. We've been working more of the hazardous situations," Bogart said. "We basically surround them (the schools) trying to make high visibility impact there."

And working the areas where teen drivers create havoc on residential streets during lunch and after school dominates his officers' time.

"We're working the areas between the schools and all the hot spots. We try to get in there and set a tone, so we don't get as many complaints as we have in years past. We get in there to keep them from playing the fool," Bogart said.

Meanwhile, work for police next week will focus primarily on buckling down on speed zones and those who violate the set speed in problem areas. And while police may never modify the driving skills of high school students, they will continue to issue citations and present a high-profile presence to deter dangerous driving.

NATO-deployed troops begin arriving in Macedonia

By Danica Kirka
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — NATO sent its first small detachment of advance troops to Macedonia on Friday to take a hard look at the precarious situation and prepare for the full deployment of a mission to collect rebel weapons.

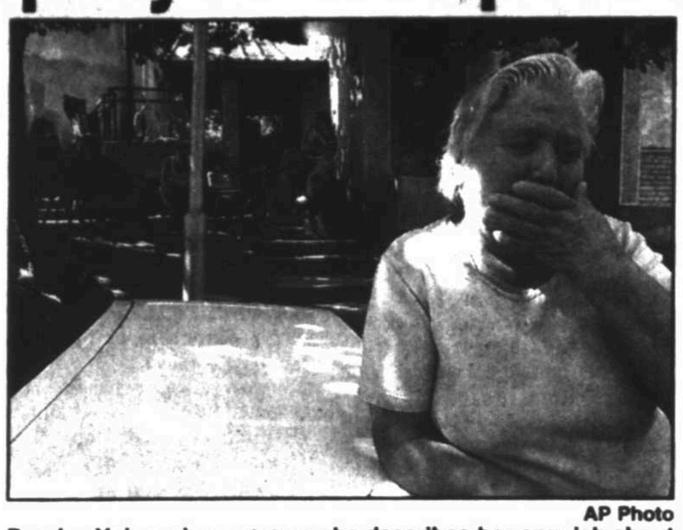
NATO has said a lasting cease-fire must be in place before its troops can deploy and insists its mission is not to disarm ethnic Albanian rebels, but to collect weapons voluntarily handed in.

On Friday, NATO's ruling council decided to defer until early next week a decision on whether to send in the rest of the troops. Gen. Joseph Ralston, the supreme allied commander in Europe, planned to travel to Skopje on Monday to take part in the assessment process.

A transport plane carrying 15 French support troops arrived in the capital, Skopje, followed by a contingent of 40 members of Britain's 16 Air Assault Brigade. Earlier, the Czech Republic sent in 120 soldiers to protect the advance party.

About 350 more British soldiers will arrive over the weekend to lay the groundwork for the British-led mission.

These initial troops, mostly headquarters and communications personnel, will study the military situation on the ground and complete plans for the eventual deployment of about 3,500 troops for the British-led Operation Essential Harvest.



AP Photo

Dragica Vojnovska weeps as she describes her anguish about the conflict in Macedonia, in Skopje, Friday. Vojnovska's 51-year-old son was kidnapped by ethnic Albanian rebels in her hometown of Lesok last month, and she has little hope that NATO peacekeepers coming to Macedonia will help find him.

The troops are likely to face an icy reception from Macedonians and a hero's welcome from minority ethnic Albanians — underscoring the deep divisions in the troubled Balkan nation after six bitter months of conflict.

"I think everyone is waiting to see what NATO will do," said Saso Klekovski, executive director for the Macedonian Center for International Cooperation. "Everyone is in a state of expectation."

Macedonian forces and ethnic Albanian rebels clashed sporadically in the northwestern corner of the country overnight and early Friday. Rebel spokesman Nazmi Beqiri denied the insurgents had started the attacks, saying they merely responded to army provocations.

"It's very serious, because from our side, we agreed to give up our weapons," he said. "We believe that after NATO comes in, none of the sides will react and cause cease-fire violations."

Macedonians like Dragica Vojnovska, who is certain the Western alliance doesn't have the interests of her people in mind, aren't hoping for much.

What army of soldiers, she wonders, is going to help her find her 51-year-old son, who remains missing after being kidnapped from the village of Lesok last month? Or help her leave refugee housing in Skopje to go home?

"NATO isn't going to help us," she said Friday, cupping her hand over her eyes and struggling to hold back tears. "They're only helping the Albanians."

Many Macedonians share her sentiments, blaming NATO for their troubles, in part because the alliance failed to choke off weapons and supplies widely believed to be supporting rebel forces. The insurgents took up arms in February, saying they were fighting for greater rights for ethnic Albanians, who account for about a third of Macedonia's 2 million people.

Ethnic Albanians don't think NATO is playing favorites, and most seem thrilled the alliance is coming to town.

Just across town in Skopje's old market, Mustafa Arifi, 26, sat with his uncle, Alush Mamuti, 75, in the cool shadow of the local mosque and gossiped about his suddenly bright future. Not only does he want NATO troops to come, he wants them to stay far longer than the 30 days envisioned by the alliance.

"I know the big powers are on our side," he said with certainty. "I would love for them to be here for 20 years."

Arifi credits the West for pressuring the Macedonians to grant the ethnic Albanians more rights under a peace deal that made the deployment possible, and he's counting on the West to guarantee that human rights are safeguarded.

Hotel fire in Philippines suburb kills at least 68

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A fire raged through a six-story hotel in a Manila suburb before dawn today, killing at least 68 people, firefighters said.

Many of the dead were packed into hotel bathrooms after apparently trying to escape the flames and smoke at the Manor Hotel in Quezon City, they said.

The fire broke out at about 4:15 a.m. and was extinguished 3 1/2 hours later.

Firefighters said they recovered 56 bodies in an initial foray into the hotel, then another 12 and were still searching more rooms.

Eugene Schwebler, a 60-year-old hotel guest from Wisconsin who escaped the blaze, said a contingent from the missionary group Missionary Evangelists Philippines-World were staying at the hotel for a convention.

"There were 160 people in our group," he said. "I don't know how many came out. The lights went out and we heard people screaming."

He said he tried to leave through the corridor but the heat turned him back to his room. He said he then pulled the air conditioner out of the wall to give him access to the fire escape.

Schwebler said he thought the fire started in a restaurant on the third floor.

An unidentified woman interviewed by DZMM radio said she was trapped in her third-floor room by metal bars on the window but firefighters using a ladder cut the bars from outside to extract her.

Bad weather forces balloonist Steve Fossett to abandon global quest

By Kevin Gray
Associated Press

BAGE, Brazil — Balloonist Steve Fossett knows something about luck, and when not to push it.

After bouncing between thunderstorms across South America, the millionaire adventurer set his balloon down in a cattle ranch in southern Brazil on Friday, abandoning his latest attempt to float around the globe halfway to his goal.

With more bad weather looming in the South Atlantic, Fossett aborted his flight — about 150 miles from the ocean. Going down in the water is far more dangerous than doing so on land.

"I did have a chance to make it to the end," the 57-year-old Chicago businessman said in a teleconference. "But you have to assess the risk, and the weather pattern was just plain shaky across the Atlantic, and if I were to miss South Africa I would be left out in the water."

Children play on top of American tycoon Steve Fossett's Solo Spirit balloon near the town of Bage, southern Brazil on Friday. Roughed up by bad weather and facing more, Fossett abandoned his latest effort to float around the globe and landed Friday in a cattle ranch in southern Brazil — just a day after reaching the halfway point in his trip.

Even so, Fossett did set a record in his fifth bid to become the first solo balloonist to circle the Earth. His flight lasted 12 days, 13 hours, making it the longest solo balloon flight in terms of duration. And he traveled 12,258 miles, making it the second-longest solo flight in distance.

Fossett also holds the record for the longest solo flight in distance at 14,235 miles, set in his third attempt in August 1998. The longest balloon flight ever was made by Bertrand Picard and Brian Jones, who flew around the world in March 1999.

The balloon went down in Espantoso — a Portuguese word meaning "astonishing" — about 30 miles from Bage, a city in Brazil's southern pampas near the border with Uruguay and about 900 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro, Police Sgt. Carlos Duarte Vieira said.

The landing was a bit rocky — the balloon wouldn't deflate and took Fossett along on a sleigh ride.

Fossett said the mechanism to deflate the balloon didn't work, and he was dragged along for about a mile, "bouncing along." Finally, he said, he used cable cutters to get the job done: "Then the balloon dragged along for another mile and caught on a line of trees."

Fossett's troubles began Thursday when he crossed the towering Andes mountains, enduring strong winds that bounced his Solo Spirit and had him donning a parachute as he passed the halfway mark of his trip.

Crossing Argentina and sailing into Brazil, he ran into deadly thunderstorms. Pilots in the region know the danger well — the storms routinely force even small jets to land.

"We thought it was just going to be some isolated thunderstorms and it turned out to be a minefield of thunderstorms and I thought my life was at risk all day long," he said.

The weather was so bad it grounded four planes the Argentine air force planned to send to accompany the balloon, spokesman Jorge Reta said. Fossett was 20 miles from the eye of one storm but managed to fly up to safety.

Otherwise, said Reta, "he would probably not be alive today."

U.S. paratroopers injured, hospitalized in Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Five U.S. paratroopers were to be discharged from hospitals Friday, leaving five still hospitalized after hard landings injured 32 soldiers during a training jump in southern Germany.

In all, thirteen soldiers were hospitalized during the jump Thursday evening at the 7th Army Training Command at Grafenwoehr in Bavaria. Three were released overnight.

The most seriously hurt soldier suffered head injuries. He was moved out of an intensive care unit Friday and was in stable condition in a regular ward, said Capt. Jeff Settle, a spokesman for the training command. Another soldier was hospitalized with a fractured pelvis.

"It wasn't that the equipment malfunctioned, it wasn't that they missed the drop zone, it was just hard landings for everybody across the way," Settle said.

A total of 382 soldiers from the 173rd Airborne Brigade — part of the Southern European Task Force of the U.S. Army Europe stationed in Vicenza, Italy — were involved in the training exercise.

They were dropped from nine Air Force C-130 propeller-driven aircraft at a height of 1,200 feet, a typical altitude for combat missions, Settle said, and were dangling 35- to 50-pound rucksacks on lines below them. During such jumps, the packs hit the ground first and the soldiers release them just before they land.

The parachutes, which are triggered to open automatically when the soldiers leave the aircraft, functioned properly, Settle said. The injuries were primarily leg, ankle and knee injuries. The 32 soldiers were evacuated by helicopter.

The weather was clear for the jump, and winds were light as the soldiers fell onto an area of rolling terrain with hard-packed dirt and little grass cover.

"From the standpoint of the paratroopers, it was a normal jump," Maj. Gen. Robert W. Wagner, the commander of the Southern European Task Force, said in a statement.

Settle said the soldiers were experienced, and some of the injured had done as many as 280 jumps. None of their identities were released.

No formal investigation will be launched into the accident, Settle said, but officials were reviewing the incident to ensure that safety procedures were followed.

"These guys are doing dangerous missions almost on a daily basis. When they come up here to train, they understand the risks," Settle said.

China tries Internet entrepreneur in effort to stamp out online dissent

By John Leicester
Associated Press

BEIJING — Defiantly flashing an "OK" sign to his family, the organizer of an Internet site that published writings about democracy has been tried in China in a case that highlights the government's determination to stamp out online dissent.

No verdict or sentencing date was announced for Huang Qi, who stood trial in a closed-door two-hour session Tuesday at the Chengdu Intermediate Court, said his father-in-law, who asked to be identified only by his surname, Zeng.

The completion of the trial, which was postponed in February in an apparent effort to avoid spoiling Beijing's winning campaign for the 2008 Summer Olympics, comes as China is tightening its already stringent controls on cyberspace.

Huang is the first Chinese Webmaster known to have been prosecuted for publishing political materials.

He was arrested in June 2000 after his site carried articles about an outlawed would-be opposition party, the Tiananmen Square protests, the banned Falun Gong spiritual sect and other topics deemed subversive by prosecutors.

Many government ministries have their own Web sites, but China's communist leaders are keen to harness the economic, educational and technological potential of the Internet.

Internet bars — called "wangba" in China and often just a few computers hooked up in the back rooms of mom-and-pop stores — have sprung up in cities and towns throughout the country. Many Chinese Internet pursuits are innocent; online computer games and chatrooms are popular.

But the government fears the Internet is also providing a forum for political dissent, giving voice to critics who otherwise have had few ways to make themselves heard. Falun Gong has used the Internet to publicize the deaths and torture of practitioners in custody. Online pornographers are also skirting government bans.

A senior Chinese leader, Vice Premier Li Lanqing, on Thursday ordered a crackdown on Internet bars he said are letting in minors and providing "electronic games with unhealthy content as well as other criminal activities," the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily reported Friday.

Huang and his wife started the Web site — www.6-4tianwang.com — in 1999 to publicize information about missing people. But the site's name also made it a magnet for information the government dislikes. In Chinese, "6-4" is shorthand for June 4 — the date in 1989 when China's military ousted protesters from Tiananmen Square, killing hundreds along the way.

"This is a bellwether case for the development of the Internet in China," Huang's father-in-law, Zeng, said Friday.

Zeng said he and his daughter — Huang's wife, Zeng Li — had learned from lawyers that the trial was underway and were only able to see him in a passageway leading to court.

Zeng said his daughter shot a photograph of Huang, but that bailiffs confiscated her film. "We wanted a picture," Zeng said, "because it could be a decade before we're able to see him again."

Huang, 37, appeared to have lost considerable weight, but smiled, flashed an "OK" hand sign and told them to "be at ease," Zeng said in a telephone interview from Huang's offices in Chengdu. "He was thin, but seemed to be in good spirits."

As the Internet has expanded in China, so have official restrictions. The government has issued at least 60 sets of regulations aimed at controlling Internet content since 1995.

Police seek 20-year-old Yale student

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police are searching for an American student from Yale University who disappeared in South Africa nearly three weeks ago after saying she feared for her life.

Natasha Smalls, 20, was last seen on the campus of the University of Natal in the coastal city of Durban on July 31.

Smalls' mother said she last spoke to her daughter July 26. In a phone call, Smalls told her mother she feared for her life.

She was supposed to fly home to New York City on Aug. 1, but she never arrived. Soon after, the U.S. Consulate in Durban reported her missing to police.

Police spokesman Vish Naidoo said Friday no progress had been made in the search.

Smalls, an African studies major at Yale, had been studying at the South African university for the spring semester. Her studies ended in June, and she planned to spend a few months traveling in the country before returning home.

Smalls' mother, Glory Smalls, said she last spoke to her daughter July 26. In a phone call, Smalls told her mother she feared for her life and had been locked up in a psychiatric hospital in Zimbabwe.

"She was in tears," the mother said. "She said she was in Saint Port, Zimbabwe, but she didn't give me the name of the hospital. We got cut off."

Glory Smalls said she told her daughter to fly home immediately. Natasha Smalls withdrew money July 30 in Johannesburg to pay for her plane ticket.

The airline said she never got on the plane.

Trial seeking $1 billion from tire company continues

By Lynn Brezosky
Associated Press

McALLEN — A South Texas man suing Bridgestone/Firestone Inc. told jurors Friday that his wife's eyes "no longer shine" after a rollover accident that left her brain damaged and paralyzed.

Dr. Joel Rodriguez, who is suing the tire maker for $1 billion, said his wife, 39-year-old Marisa, was a high school beauty queen who now "sits at a table all day or in front of the TV."

In March 2000, Rodriguez, his wife, son and brother were driving a Ford Explorer on a Mexican toll road when it blew a tire and flipped.

Rodriguez said his children, including 4-year-old Joel Jr., now fear their mother, who has an IQ of 79, requires a wheelchair and must be fed through a tube.

"He wouldn't even climb up to the bed or be near her because he was scared. He would tell me that 'my momma is dead,' " Rodriguez said.

Before testimony began Friday, Bridgestone/Firestone spokeswoman Jill Bratina told reporters that Ford Motor Co. was to blame for the accident.

"We've heard emotional testimony this week. While we all agree this was a tragic accident, the issue before the jury is what caused the incident. We will show evidence that the Ford Explorer was responsible for this tragedy," she said.

Bridgestone/Firestone Chief Executive John Lampe was expected to defend the company's tires in person later Friday in the first trial against the tire manufacturer to reach a U.S. court.

On Thursday, tire design engineer Robert Ochs insisted through hours of cross examination that poor design on tires marketed by Bridgestone/Firestone was a factor in Ford Explorer highway rollovers.

Defense attorney Scott Edwards presented highlighted testimony from Ochs in previous tire tread trials, in which Ochs said neither tread failures nor lack of certain nylon inserts equated defective tires.

Ochs said they did in the case of tires manufactured for use in Ford Explorers.

AP Photo

Marisa Rodriguez leaves the federal court pushed by her husband Dr. Joel Rodriguez Wednesday afternoon in McAllen. Mrs. Rodruguez was injured, left with garbled speech and an IQ of 79 when the sport utility vehicle in which she was a passenger blew a tire and flipped on a Mexican toll road. At right is family attorney Roberto Salazar, behind them are, left to right, attorney Mikal Watts, attorney Ricardo Garcia, and brother-in-law Jorge Rodriguez, who was driving the car at the time of the accident. Testimony was heard Wednesday in the third day of the trial of a $1 billion lawsuit on behalf of the Rodriguez family against the Bridgestone/Firestone Corporation.

Bridgestone/Firestone says its tires were made in accordance with specifications set by Ford and that tread separations do not cause rollovers.

Much of Edwards' questioning involved Ochs' testimony in previous cases involving nylon tire inserts that some tire engineers say improves adherence of tire components.

The information could prove important as testimony continues into the weekend.

Court documents show Bridgestone/Firestone knew that tires with the inexpensive nylon layer would be as much as five times less likely to fail than those without the caps.

The documents, which include internal company correspondence, may show the company knew years ago there were ways to reduce tread separations and make a safer tire.

In a memo dated Nov. 7, 1998, David Laube, executive director of Bridgestone/Firestone sales engineering, said the company compared tires with and without protective shoulder strips and found the "rate for tires with shoulder strips is three to five times lower."

Four months later, Bruce Halverson, the head of the company's quality assurance, wrote that a light truck tire known as the Dueler AT with nylon cap strips showed "tire and tread belt edge separations were reduced by more than 50 percent."

One memo shows that eliminating the strips could save the Decatur, Ill., plant some $225,000, or 90 cents per tire.

Cap strips are a layer of nylon between the tire belt and tread designed to help the tire keep its shape. Shoulder strips are a thinner version placed within the edge of the tire where most of the stress lands.

Bratina said the Dueler tire had other changes besides the cap strips and are a different design than the Wilderness AT tire involved in the trial and the company's recall.

She said the company's position is that nylon caps only make a difference when tires are going above highway speeds.

Ochs was an engineer at Michelin, the French tire maker, and Edwards noted that Michelin didn't use nylon caps on its own tires.

"They may have spent a few dollars on the quality of the rubber, and that's why they didn't have to spend 90 cents," Ochs responded during a terse exchange.

Last summer, Firestone recalled 6.5 million tires, many of which were standard on Ford Explorers. The recalled tires have been linked to at least 203 deaths and 700 injuries. In May, Ford Motor Co. said it would replace 13 million more Firestone tires.

Firestone has settled more than 150 cases, mostly involving tires on Explorers, for undisclosed sums.

Attorneys for Rodriguez have already settled their case against Ford for $6 million, according to court documents.

Appeals court refuses to free jailed writer

By Pam Easton
Associated Press

HOUSTON — A federal appeals court refused Friday to release a fledgling crime writer jailed for withholding notes from a grand jury, saying First Amendment protections for journalists are "far weaker in criminal cases."

"The district court did not abuse its discretion in ordering (Vanessa) Leggett incarcerated for contempt," said an opinion issued by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. "This court takes a narrow view of the journalist's privilege in criminal cases, particularly in grand jury proceedings."

Leggett, 33, is working on a book about a Houston society murder. She was found in contempt of court July 19 for refusing to turn over all of her notes, including originals and copies, to a federal grand jury. She reported to jail a day later.

The appeals court said "only when 'the grand jury investigation is not being conducted in good faith' is the journalist's privilege valid."

Leggett could spend up to 18 months in federal detention if she doesn't abide by the grand jury subpoena requesting all the information she gathered about the shooting death of the wife of a millionaire former bookie.

"They can keep me incarcerated. They can put me wherever they want to put me and they can change my environment, but they can't change my mind," Leggett told The Associated Press on during an interview Tuesday at the Federal Detention Center in Houston.

"There's a lot more at stake than one person going to jail," she said. "What is at stake here is a free and independent press."

The Department of Justice declined to comment on the appeals court decision Friday because the case is still being investigated, spokeswoman Norma Lacy said.

Leggett's attorney, Mike DeGeurin, did not immediately return phone calls to The Associated Press. His secretary said he was studying the appeals court opinion.

A federal grand jury is conducting an investigation into Robert Angleton, a millionaire former bookie whose wife, Doris, was found shot to death in 1997.

Robert Angleton told police he returned home from a softball game with the couple's 12-year-old twin daughters to find his wife's bullet-torn body. He told police she had gone home from the game to get a bat.

Robert Angleton and his brother, Roger, were charged with capital murder. State prosecutors alleged Robert Angleton hired his brother to kill his wife to prevent her from getting millions of dollars in a divorce settlement.

Robert Angleton was acquitted of his wife's murder in 1998. His brother committed suicide in the Harris County Jail in February 1998, before his trial. But he left behind notes confessing to shooting his sister-in-law. Roger Angleton wrote that he planned the murder and framed his brother to extort money from him.

During the investigation of Doris Angleton's slaying, Houston police detectives discovered millions of dollars stashed in safety deposit boxes in area banks. Harris County prosecutors said they traced the money to an illegal gambling operation run by Robert Angleton.

Leggett conducted interviews with both brothers and Roger's wife, Jennifer Manning, in preparation for her book. A grand jury subpoenaed her in December 2000 and then again on June 18.

"Even assuming that Leggett, a virtually unpublished freelance writer, operating without an employer or a contract for publication, qualifies as a journalist under the law, the journalist privilege is ineffectual against a grand jury subpoena, absent evidence of governmental harassment or oppression," the court wrote.

The opinion came two days after the case was argued before the three-judge panel of Grady Jolly, Edith Jones and Emilio Garza. The order was not signed.

Dozens of news organizations have come out in support of Leggett.

Leggett said under the threat of arrest, she submitted tapes of her interviews with Roger Angleton to state investigators. The tapes now have been given to federal prosecutors, but Leggett says they still want more.

"While perhaps not as narrowly tailored as would be ideal, the subpoena directing Leggett to produce her tape recordings and interview notes is not so overly broad as to be oppressive," the court said. "Leggett's efforts to invoke the qualified journalist's privilege with conclusory assertions fail."

AP Photo
Vanessa Leggett speaks during an interview in the Federal Detention Center in Houston, where she was being held on contempt of court charges. A group of news organizations filed a motion Monday seeking access to a hearing in the case of Leggett, who was jailed for refusing to give a federal grand jury her notes and tapes of interviews with a man accused of a 1997 society murder.

Odessa's Denise Flores won the Women's Texas Golf Association Amateur Championship at Midland Country Club on Friday with a 1-up after 19 victory over Lecia Alexander of Stafford.

Flores floors competition, takes women's amateur title

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Just call Odessa's Denise Flores the best amateur female golfer in Texas.

At least, she earned that title for one year on Friday by winning the Women's Texas Golf Association Amateur Championship at Midland Country Club, beating Stafford's Lecia Alexander on the first hole of a sudden death playoff.

"Now, they can wake me up. It's over," Flores said after gaining the Texas amateur championship in her first try at the event. "I signed up with absolutely no expectations. I thought it would be a good tournament for me if I last through Wednesday. And here I am with the championship. I never dreamed anything like that."

In fact, Flores and Alexander were the darlings of the week. Neither had played in the finals of a state title tournament like this one. And they gave a competitive 19-hole show even if neither one played the greatest final round of golf. After all, they were both new to this.

Errant drives by Flores and some faulty putting by Alexander kept things interesting throughout the day, but neither would give in.

"I think we were both struggling because this was new to both of us," Alexander said. "I just didn't putt great today and I missed two short birdie putts on (No.) 8 and 11 and missed a critical par putt on 14. That really hurt me in this match."

Flores took the first lead by winning No. 4 with a bogey. Alexander pulled even at No. 6 and took a 1-up lead by winning seven. Flores won No. 10 to put the match back at even and it stayed there until the 14th hole when Flores won both 14 and 15 to go 2-up with just three holes to play.

The 14th hole at MCC was the springboard for Flores semifinal win over four-time champion Toni Wiesner of Fort Worth on Thursday. It looked like it would be again against Alexander.

"I've played 14 and 15 good all week," Flores said. "I felt like those two holes were the turning point for me in this tournament. When I won those two holes, I never thought we would end up going to the 19th hole, but I think I got timid on 17 and 18 and that hurt me."

The pair halved No. 16 and the tournament then got interesting. Alexander won both 17 and 18 to force sudden death. It was the second time on the day when Alexander won back-to-back holes.

"Those last two holes (in regulation) got me going a little bit and back in the match,"

Rebels, Steers scrimmage today

■ Dallas Kimball backs out of scrimmage with Midland High.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's football Rebels will participate in their first of two preseason scrimmages today when they travel to Big Spring to face the Class 4A Steers.

Lee is ending its second full week of preseason workouts. Midland High is ending its first full week after going to pads for the first time on Friday.

Unlike Lee, the Bulldogs will have no scrimmages. MHS was allowed to have one preseason scrimmage with an outside opponent, but in June Dallas Kimball backed out of a scrimmage agreement with MHS.

So, the Rebels will have the only scrimmage stage this season and the Steers are first. Lee will host El Paso Riverside, another Class 4A school next Friday at Memorial Stadium.

Today, Lee will face Big Spring at approximately 12:30 p.m. in Big Spring. The schools' two junior varsities will scrimmage at 11:30 a.m.

"This won't be a traditional scrimmage for the most part," said Lee coach John Parchman. "We may have some one-on-one drills and some 7-on-7 work. Then we'll probably have a session of where each team has 30 plays, the more traditional type scrimmage.

"We're approaching this like another workout for us. It's just going to be against some new faces."

Next Friday against Riverside, the two varsities will scrimmage at 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. The two junior varsities will scrimmage at the Lee practice field around 5:30 p.m.

"We're trying to put as little traffic as possible at Memorial Stadium because the grass is pretty thin," Parchman said.

Meanwhile, Midland High's youthful team will get well acquainted with each other before they host Irving Nimitz on Aug. 31 at Memorial Stadium in the season opener.

"I really wish we had a scrimmage," said MHS coach David Browning. "I think it would do us a lot of good, but that just isn't going to happen this year.

"That first game (with Nimitz) ought to be a real adventure for us since we have so many new kids with no playing experience. That's the reason a scrimmage would have really been beneficial to us this year.

"Still, we've had a good week of workouts. There has been good retention from spring training in a lot of areas."

Rockets acquire Rice from Knicks in revised trade

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets accepted three-time All-Star forward Glen Rice from the New York Knicks on Friday, one week after they announced the deal.

It was part of a three-team trade that included the Dallas Mavericks.

The Rockets announced the trade Aug. 11, but then canceled a news conference to introduce Rice on Tuesday, saying team doctors needed more time to examine his medical records.

The Rockets had until noon Friday to finalize the trade.

"He is a Houston Rocket now and we are very happy to make that statement," general manager Carroll Dawson said. "From last week, everyone understands how happy we are to get him and to get this finalized now is a big thrill."

Rice was OK with the wait and happy with the result.

"I was fine with it," Rice said. "I understood what the owner's process was. He wanted an extension to find out about the injury and I didn't have a problem. Once I found out Houston really wanted me, I figured in due time the deal would get done."

Last week the Rockets sent Shandon Anderson to the Knicks for Rice. Howard Eisley went from the Mavericks to the Knicks, and Muggsy

Fischer takes PBO lead

Fischer shoots 63 to take lead from Campbell

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Five days ago, Todd Fischer didn't even have a spot in the Buy.com Permian Basin Open. By the end of Friday, however, Fischer was looking down on the rest of the field.

Fischer, who was the low qualifier on Monday at Ranchland Hills Country Club, must have found some momentum in his trip to West Texas. After shooting a 63 Friday at The Club at Mission Dorado, Fischer, of Pleasanton, Calif., led the PBO with a two-day score of 14-under par.

To Fischer, the reason he was leading wasn't exactly a mystery.

"I'm hitting the ball fine and I'm making a few putts," said the unassuming Fischer after the round. "It's pretty simple really."

It may or may not be that simple, but Fischer made it look that way over Dorado's par-72, 7,229-yard layout. Fischer's 9-under par score in the second round coupled with his 67 on Thursday gave him a two-day total of 130, one stroke ahead of John Patterson.

Midland College product Chad Campbell who led after the first round, was tied with two others in third at 132.

Fischer could be in an even better position if it hadn't been for the way he ended the first round. He started on the back nine on Friday, and bogeyed No. 9 to finish his round, keeping him from joining a logjam of 14 players at 66.

But Fischer put that disappointing finish behind him at the outset of the second round, by birdieing holes 2-4 to start the front side, and closing out his first nine with a 31 by birdieing No. 9, the same hole he had the rough finish on Thursday.

"I finished bogeying 18 (Thursday's final hole) so I spent today trying to get that shot back," said Fischer. "Once I got in a comfortable position the birdie putts just kept falling."

Playing in the morning, Fischer enjoyed cooler temperatures, but many of the players had to contend with midmorning showers which dampened the course. That made attacking the pins more important since the greens were softer.

Fischer appeared to take advantage of those softer greens when he came to the par three No. 17, having taken the lead two holes earlier. He hit his tee shot straight at the flag and it stuck in the green only three feet from the cup. Fischer tapped in for birdie, which provided the difference in his two-stroke advantage.

"At the pro-ams (Wednesday in hotter, drier conditions) the greens were firm but there wasn't that much difference in the greens the last two days," said Fischer.

Fischer didn't have an auspicious ending to his round, but it was still a lot better than the way his first round concluded. He sank a 10 foot putt to save par, which as it turned out was the reason he still led at the end of the day.

After shooting a 64 at Ranchland to make the PBO field, it could be said that Fischer is on a roll this week, but he doesn't see it that way yet.

"I think momentum will happen after the cut," said Fischer. "It's one thing to make the tournament but another to stay in it."

Right now, Fischer and Patterson are at the top of it. They both shot 67 in the first round, and Patterson's 64 was the next best score of the day after Fischer's. Patterson grabbed momentum by shooting 31 on Dorado's back nine.

Like Fischer, Patterson got off to a solid start by birdieing the first hole, and his round took off from there.

"I've hit the ball solid from tee to green here," said Patterson. "I hit 17 greens here so I had a shot at 17 birdies."

It was a bit of a roller coaster ride for Patterson over the final four holes. He took sole possession of second for the first time with a birdie on No. 15, but he missed a six-foot par putt on No. 16 to fall back into a tie for second.

On No. 17, though, Patterson drained a 10-footer for birdie, which tied him for the low score in the afternoon session.

"I didn't look at the computer (displaying the leaders) before I went out," said Patterson. "I knew that if my putter stayed hot I'd be in it."

That's what happened with Campbell when he played the front side (he teed off on No. 10 to start the day) after shooting a pedestrian even par on the back side to open the tournament. The Andrews native birdied holes 3-5, capping his string by

Two-way tie for PGA Championship lead, while Woods barely survives

DULUTH, Ga. — The putt looked longer than his odds of making the cut.

Tiger Woods was just off the 15th green, 40 feet away from the hole. He was in dire need of something to happen to avoid taking the weekend off in a major for the first time since he turned professional five years ago.

Woods rammed the ball into the back of the cup for a birdie he needed just to have a chance in the PGA Championship.

"Luck hopped on my side," he said.

He'll need more than luck the rest of the way.

David Toms and Shingo Katayama were tied for the lead after two sweltering rounds at Atlanta Athletic Club. Their record-tying 131s put them in a position they had never been in at a major championship.

Ditto for Woods.

He usually spends the first two rounds getting into contention. His summer swoon has come down to this: He celebrated Friday by making the cut.

"I've always believed you've got to give it everything you have, and that's what I did today," said Woods, who despite the heroic finish remains nine strokes behind.

The long list of players ahead of him have other matters on

Athlete dies after football practice

Associated Press

LULING — A 15-year-old football player at Luling High School died Friday after returning home from a morning workout.

An autopsy was ordered in the death of Steven Taylor, but officials said they don't believe it was heat-related.

The team's morning practice consisted of noncontact walkthroughs in shorts and pads. Temperatures were in the 80s.

"If I find out that something that occurred at practice caused this, I would be really surprised," said David Creed, the city's deputy police chief.

Taylor was unconscious and not breathing when authorities went to his home Friday morning after receiving a 911 call from his mother. He was taken to Seton Edgar B. Davis Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Creed said he was told Taylor did not behave unusually at practice or after arriving home, where he told his mother he was tired. After hearing a noise from his room, she found him on the floor.

Luling is 50 miles northeast of San Antonio.

PBO: Campbell finishes round with four-under 68

(From 1B)

coaxing a beautiful backspin out of his second shot on No. 5, leaving himself with an 8-footer for birdie.

Campbell, who opened with a 64, finished the second round with a four-under 68, still leaving him in great shape for the final 36 holes.

"I just got off to a slow start," said Campbell. "I'm happy because you can't shoot eight under every day."

Fischer and Patterson will be the final pair to tee off today at 12:18 p.m., while Campbell will be paired with Mike Tschetter (also at 132) in the next to last group at 12:09 p.m.

"I'm definitely happy with the way I played," said Campbell. "I just started making putts (over the final nine holes). I had the some pretty good early opportunities where I just missed them."

Tom Carter, the tour's leading driver at 309.9 yards a pop, is also tied at 132.

MC Notables: Not only is Campbell not the only MC product to survive the cut, he's also not the only one who's in contention. Steven Young, who made the tournament via a sponsor's exemption, shot a 65 on Friday for a two-day score of 10-under par 134, only four shots off the lead. Brett Boynton, the other surviving ex-Chap, was at 68-68—136.

Going Home: On the other hand, some other locals didn't have such luck in making the cut. Former MC player Derrick Pursley's 71-68—139 was certainly respectable, but it missed by a stroke of making the cut. Another former MC player missing the cut was Shawn Savage (72-70—142).

Other Permian Basin players who won't return to Dorado this weekend are Big Spring's Larry Bryan (71-71—142), and a pair of Odessa amateurs, John Wine (70-73—143) and Austin Burk (77-76—153). In fact, Burk's score was the highest in the field.

A Qualified Success: Of the 64 players who survived the cut, 10 of them qualified during Monday's rounds and Ranchland and Green Tree Country Club. While Fischer was the top qualifier, Boynton and Tschetter weren't even guaranteed spots in the field after qualifying and made the field as alternates, as did Plano's Brian Madison (68-70—138).

After Tschetter, the next best Monday qualifier was Houston's Billy Tuten (68-65—133), who is in a four-way tie for sixth.

Bogues moved from New York to Dallas.

In the revised deal, the Rockets also get future considerations from the Mavericks and Knicks. Dawson wouldn't elaborate.

"They are just future considerations, that's what they are," Dawson said. "The main thing is Glen Rice is a Rocket. That's what we're here to talk about."

Rice, a three-time All-Star, was bothered by a left foot injury last season that limited his play.

"Right now he's not healthy to play today," said team doctor Walter Lowe, who added that Rice should be ready for the start of next season. "He's just got some more rehab to do before he should pound on it on a basketball court."

Rice has averaged 19.5 points over 12 NBA seasons with the Heat, Hornets, Lakers and Knicks. But his average dipped to 12 points in 75 games — with 25 starts — last season for the Knicks.

Rice is expected to be a starter in Houston.

"We looked at miles and miles of film with him even back to his Charlotte days and he's already had a very good, brilliant career and I think he's going to bring a lot to this team," Dawson said.

But even if he fully recovers, Lowe said the injury could recur.

"That's one of the reasons that this required a lot of study to get a feel where it was and where it's been and hopefully we have a read on how it will be in the future," Lowe said. "It's a problem for guys that are athletic and play on hard floors. It's something we have to worry about for the long haul."

Flyers, Rangers finalize deal for Lindros; await league approval

Associated Press

VOORHEES, N.J. — The Flyers and Rangers have finalized a deal that would send Eric Lindros to New York and are awaiting approval from the NHL.

The final sticking point — getting insurance on the contract — was solved Friday, a source close to the negotiations told The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity.

Flyers general manager Bob Clarke lifted the Friday deadline for the Rangers to sign Lindros, clearing the way for the Rangers and Lindros to work out the final details regarding the contract and the insurance

"I expect it to be resolved on Monday," Clarke said Friday.

Clarke had said Thursday night that another team was interested in trading for the restricted free agent.

The Rangers and Flyers agreed on the players involved in the deal earlier in the week. Carl Lindros, Eric's father and agent, and New York general manager Glen Sather also have agreed on a contract reportedly worth about $37 million over four years.

Lindros hasn't played since May 26, 2000, after a check from New Jersey's Scott Stevens in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference finals gave him his sixth concussion in 27 months.

Lindros took a physical in New York on Thursday and was in Montreal to see another neurologist on Friday. He saw Dr. James Kelly in Chicago on Wednesday. Clarke said Lindros has passed all his exams.

The Rangers would send forward Jan Hlavac, defenseman Kim Johnsson, young forward Pavel Brendl and a middle-round draft pick to Philadelphia for Lindros.

The Flyers also would give the Rangers a conditional first-round draft pick if Lindros failed to play a certain number of games.

Lindros, 28, sat out last season after rejecting an $8.5 million qualifying offer from the Flyers. He refused to return to the team because of a contentious relationship with Clarke.

A source said the other team Clarke said is interested in Lindros is the Los Angeles Kings.

The Flyers have come close to dealing Lindros to Toronto, the New York Islanders, St. Louis, Detroit and Edmonton. But each time the deal fell through.

Clarke had said he didn't care if Lindros ever plays again, and was willing to let him sit until he became an unrestricted free agent in 2004.

Prosecutors decline to file rape charges against Tyson

Associated Press

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — Prosecutors declined Friday to file rape charges against former heavyweight boxing champ Mike Tyson, saying the case could not be proved.

The San Bernardino County district attorney's office reviewed the case and conducted a follow-up investigation before reaching a decision.

"It's precisely because of Mr. Tyson's reputation for violence and his notoriety and his previous conviction for rape that we really, really looked at this case very careful," said Deputy District Attorney David Whitney.

"We concluded after reviewing everything we currently know about the case that it cannot be proven beyond reasonable doubt."

Whitney said it was unlikely charges could be filed in the future.

A 50-year-old woman maintains she was sexually assaulted by Tyson on July 16 at a home he rented while training in this resort in the San Bernardino Mountains east of Los Angeles.

Tyson, who said he was innocent, left Big Bear for Phoenix to train for a Sept. 8 fight with Danish boxer Brian Nielsen in Copenhagen.

"There was never a doubt in my mind that, when the authorities took a hard look at the case, the truth would serve to vindicate me," Tyson said in a written statement. "Now that this is behind me, I am just looking forward to fighting and regaining the heavyweight championship of the world."

The woman's attorney, Gloria Allred, said she had no immediate comment on the case. She said she planned to hold a press conference Monday.

The woman's attorney, Gloria Allred of Los Angeles, did not immediately return a telephone message seeking comment.

Although investigators were not able to interview Tyson, who declined through his attorney, they did interview three members of Tyson's entourage.

The 35-year-old Tyson served more than three years in an Indiana prison after being convicted in 1992 of rape and other charges.

Jones, Robbins top Canadian Women's Open

Associated Press

MARKHAM, Ontario — Don't tell Rosie Jones that golfers aren't athletes. Not after she fought her way through the windswept second round of the Canadian Women's Open.

Jones shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday at Angus Glen for a share of the lead with Kelly Robbins. Robbins also had a 69.

Jones, a two-time winner this year at age 41, had five birdies and two bogeys in her afternoon round as gusting wind — with some light rain — roared through the Toronto area at up to 35 mph.

"You've got to really be an athlete and use your athleticism when you're playing in wind like this," Jones said. "You have to trust your feel and trust your imagination and your calculations. And just go for it. That's exactly what I did."

Jones and Robbins, who opened with 65s to share the first-round lead with South Korean star Se Ri Pak, finished at 10-under 134 on Angus Glen's hilly South Course.

"I couldn't do anything wrong," said Jones, fourth last week in the Wendy's Championship for Children. "When I didn't hit great shots, I hit great putts. I would have been just as happy with an even-par round."

Robbins, winless since the first event in 1999, made a 25-foot eagle putt on the par-5 14th hole to reach 10 under and closed with four pars as the wind picked up.

"I'm very glad I'm not out there now. Very glad!" the nine-time tour winner said after her morning round. "It's a total guessing game with this type of wind situation."

Pak shot a 72 to drop into a tie for third with Sweden's Maria Hjorth (69) at 137.

"It was like another golf course it was so different today," Pak said. "This golf course is really, really hard. ... I'm happy to finish at even par."

Playing directly into the wind on the 367-yard 11th, the Women's British Open champion hit a 4-iron approach shot after using a pitching wedge in the first round.

Lorie Kane topped the 16 Canadians in the field, shooting a 69 to join Cristie Kerr at 6 under. Kerr also had a 69.

"Angus Glen showed its teeth today," Kane said.

Annika Sorenstam shot a 68 in the morning group to remain in contention at 5 under, and Karrie Webb had a 75 to make the cut by a stroke at 2 over. On Thursday, the two stars opened with 71s in relatively calm conditions.

"I was just trying to play smart, keeping the ball in the middle of the fairways and greens," Sorenstam said.

After opening with a bogey on No. 10, Jones birdied Nos. 13-15 to reach 9 under. She tied Robbins with an 18-foot birdie putt on No. 17 and took the lead with a 15-footer on No. 1.

Jones dropped back to 10 under with a bogey on No. 7, holing a 7-foot putt for a scrambling 6 on the par-5 hole. She hit her third shot over the green, and took two shots to reach the green from a difficult lie near a cart path.

"I was thrilled to get out there with 6," Jones said.

The 12-time tour winner was second last year at Royal Ottawa in the final du Maurier Classic, her ninth top-10 finish in 18 appearances in the event that folded because of Canada's restrictions on tobacco promotions.

The Canadian Women's Open, run by the Royal Canadian Golf Association and sponsored by the Bank of Montreal, took the du Maurier's spot on the tour schedule.

Divots: Charlotta Sorenstam, Annika's younger sister, shot a 73 to top a six-player group at 4 under. ... Kane was one of four Canadians to make the cut. Dawn Coe-Jones (74-142), A.J. Eathorne (74-143) and Carrie Vaughn (73-144) also advanced to weekend play. ... The RCGA also runs the PGA Tour's Canadian Open and Senior PGA Tour's AT&T Canada Senior Open. The senior event is next week in Mississauga.

Smith leads at Utah Novell Showdown

Associated Press

PARK CITY, Utah — Mike Smith used soggy greens to his advantage Friday, posting a first-round, record-tying 63 that left 9-under-par and leading after the first day at the Utah Novell Showdown.

John Jacobs was a shot back, with Bruce Lietzke and Bobby Walzel at 7-under.

"I had a lot of foot-and-a-half putts today," Smith said. "It's pretty nice when you have those. The greens held all the shots real well."

Hard rains earlier in the week made the course so soft that on most occasions, the ball stuck exactly where it landed.

Jacobs could have tied with Smith but missed a 7-foot birdie putt on the 18th to remain a stroke back.

PGA: O'Meara four shots off lead their minds.

(From 1B)

Phil Mickelson had his second straight 66 and was one stroke off the lead, another chance to prove he has what it takes to win a major. He'll play Saturday with Bob Estes, who had a 66 to join Mickelson at 132.

The half-dozen players another two strokes back include British Open champion David Duval (68) and two-time U.S. Open champion Ernie Els (67).

"It's hard to speculate what score will be needed to win," Duval said. "As long as it's mine, it's fine."

Woods went from nearly missing the cut to calculating his chances of winning his second major of the year. The answer is two low rounds, and it's hard to dismiss his chances after the way he finished his round Friday with back-to-back birdie putts and a 67.

Usually, such a flair for the dramatic results in a trophy. This time, it earned him a tee time Saturday morning.

He clinched it with an approach that easily cleared the water on the 490-yard closing hole and landed safely on the green.

Woods smiled and looked sideways at caddie Steve Williams and chatted with Duval as they walked down the fairway.

"I was telling David this is a lot harder ... than trying to win a tournament," Woods said. "I've been there more times on the other side."

Lost in the hoopla over Woods making the cut was more record scores on a steamy day outside Atlanta, where the heat index neared 100 and players draped towels over their shoulders so they could wipe the sweat off their faces.

Katayama, a 28-year-old player from Japan with a white cowboy hat right out of the "Howdy Doody" show, birdied the last two holes for a 64. Toms had a 65 to join him at 9-under 131, tying the PGA record for 36 holes last set by Els at Riviera in 1995.

Even 44-year-old Mark O'Meara joined the act. He became the oldest of 20 players to tie the major championship record of 63.

"I hope it will motivate him," O'Meara said of Woods after finishing his bogey-free round before Woods teed off. "I think when he sees me on the board he'll say, 'Man, I can beat that O'Meara guy with my eyes closed.'"

O'Meara was at 135, four shots off the lead.

Toms came into the PGA Championship in 14th place in the Ryder Cup standings. He no longer is motivated solely by making his first team.

"I'm playing well enough right now where I can win this golf tournament," said Toms, whose five PGA Tour victories include a come-from-behind win over Mickelson in New Orleans earlier this year.

Toms knows enough not to count out Woods, especially having played with him in the final twosome of the third round last year in the British Open, which Woods won by eight strokes to complete the career Grand Slam.

"If he makes the cut, with the game he has there's no reason he can't win the golf tournament," Toms said. "It would be nice to have him around. It would get some more people out there."

The large galleries saw quite a show Friday.

Fifty players broke par on greens that are not firm enough to get dangerous.

O'Meara, winless since 1998 when he became the oldest man to win two majors in the same year, led the charge and proved that no matter how long the course, the shortest stick in the bag is usually the best weapon.

It will have to work for Mickelson this weekend if he wants to shed that label as the best player never to have won a major. He's in contention again for the third time this year.

"I feel comfortable in this situation, being here a number of times now," Mickelson said. "However, having not won one, there could be doubts that creep in. That's something I'm overcoming now. I would very much love to win."

He has plenty of company.

Els, the most promising star in golf before Woods showed up, hasn't won a major since his second U.S. Open in 1997, and the Big Easy shot into contention with three birdies on his final six holes.

Duval survived a tough day with the putter and also is poised to win his second straight major. His best putt of the day was a 30-footer on No. 15 that came right after Woods holed his critical putt.

At least Mickelson will be spared some introduction. For a while, it appeared as though he would be paired with Katayama in the final group Saturday.

"The only thing I know about him is the hat he wears," Mickelson said.

That's OK, Phil.

Katayama was asked what he knew about Mickelson.

"He's left-handed," he replied.

Katayama warms up by hitting his shots left-handed to work muscles on both sides of his body, and he enjoys listening to the gallery wonder how he got into the field. His play on the course left no doubt.

He made seven birdies, including the last two holes, and is the first Asian player to be in the lead halfway through a major since T.C. Chen in the 1985 U.S. Open.

He was asked which surprised him more — to be leading the PGA Championship, or to be so far ahead of Woods.

"I would like to take a picture of the leaderboard," Katayama said.

Not a bad idea. With so many low scores, and so many players in the hunt for the final major championship of the season, it keeps changing.

And Woods still has a chance to make an appearance.

GOLF: Collins takes consolation title

(From 1B)

Alexander said. "I guess I came back with a couple of pars. Still, I think about all those short putts I missed during the match that could have made a difference."

But the Alexander comeback didn't last long. She found the bunker on the 19th hole. She got out of it, but not on the green. Flores produced a par to win the title.

"Going into the 19th hole, I was just thinking that I had to get my swing back. I couldn't be timid any more," Flores said. "My driver was giving me a little trouble this week, but when I hit it straight, I played pretty good."

Flores' game was great around the greens. Even when she found the sand, she was able to get the ball close to the pin. It saved her on at least three holes on Friday.

Flores played her high school golf at Odessa Permian and her college golf until 1995 at the University of North Texas where team play was important. But now her format may be match play. She won the Women's West Texas, the Odessa Women's City Championship and the club title at The Club at Mission Dorado this summer. And now she owns the biggest prize of all — Best in Texas.

The tournament moves to Bullard's Eagles Bluff course next summer. Alexander, at least, plans to be there.

"This sure does make me want to play in this again," Alexander said. "This was a great experience for me — even if I lost."

Tournament Notes: Midland's Lettia Collins won the consolation title with a 1-up after 19 victory over Mina Hardin of Fort Worth to keep the championship bragging rights completely within the Permian Basin. Hardin, incidentally, was last year's state amateur champion and has won this event four times... Midland's Sharon Michie beat Joanne "J" Berke of Dallas, 2-1, to win the second flight consolation title and Odessa's Pat Barton won the fourth flight championship with a 2-1 win over Colleen Feighner of Bartonville...

Blue Jays' Frye hits for cycle, Rangers lose fifth straight game

Associated Press

TORONTO — Jeff Frye became the second Toronto player to hit for the cycle, and four Blue Jays homered off Texas reliever Pat Mahomes in the sixth inning in an 11-3 victory Friday night over the Rangers.

Frye stopped at first base to complete the fourth major league cycle this season instead of continuing on for his second double of the game.

Frye decided not to take the sure extra base, electing to stay at first for a piece of baseball history — joining Kelly Gruber as the only Blue Jays to accomplish the feat.

Gruber was in attendance and came onto to the field to hug Frye.

Frye and Jose Cruz Jr. hit back-to-back homers off Mahomes, and one out later, Shannon Stewart and Carlos Delgado hit consecutive homers. The four homers in an inning were a club record, and marked the 10th time in AL history that four have been hit off one pitcher in an inning.

Alex Rodriguez homered twice for the Rangers, who have lost five straight.

Tigers 4, Royals 2

DETROIT — Jose Lima allowed two runs in seven-plus innings and Damion Easley scored twice as the Detroit Tigers beat the Kansas City Royals 4-2 Friday night.

The game was the first between the teams since the series that included a bench-clearing brawl Aug. 10, but none of the main participants played. Royals first baseman Mike Sweeney started serving his 10-game suspension Friday, while Tigers catcher Rob Fick had the day off and Jeff Weaver pitched Thursday against Anaheim.

Lima (4-4) allowed two runs, five hits and two walks before leaving after giving up a leadoff single in the eighth. The win improved Lima to 4-1 at Comerica Park.

Yankees 4, Mariners 0

NEW YORK — Derek Jeter and the New York Yankees didn't take long to show the Seattle Mariners who the World Series champions are.

Jeter homered on the first pitch and Mike Mussina pitched seven scoreless innings as the Yankees won the matchup of baseball's two best teams, 4-0 Friday night.

Angels 7, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Ramon Ortiz won his fourth straight start as the surging Anaheim Angels defeated the Cleveland Indians 7-2 Friday night.

Ortiz (11-7) allowed two runs and six hits in his first complete game since Sept. 24, 2000. The right-hander walked three, struck out three and got 15 outs on grounders in improving to 7-2 in 14 starts since the end of May.

Athletics 9, White Sox 2

CHICAGO — Eric Chavez hit a three-run homer and Jeremy Giambi added a solo shot for the Oakland Athletics, who beat the Chicago White Sox 9-2 Friday night.

Jermaine Dye drove in two runs and 30-year-old rookie Erik Hiljus pitched five-plus solid innings for the A's, who have won 15 of 18 and are 26-9 since the All-Star break, best in the majors.

Hiljus (2-0), who hasn't won since his first major league start June 30 — a span of four starts — allowed two runs on six hits and no walks. He struck out two.

Devil Rays 9, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Tanyon Sturtze pitched seven innings, and Russ Johnson drove in three runs with three hits as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays handed the fading Minnesota Twins their eighth straight loss, 9-4 Friday night.

Tampa Bay, the majors' worst team, is 5-0 against Minnesota this year and has outscored the Twins 26-10. Tied for first place in the AL Central just a week ago, the Twins are 4 1/2 games behind the Cleveland Indians.

The Twins — 9-25 since the All-Star break — have lost 11 of 12.

Cristian Guzman, activated from the disabled list before the game, did his best to jump-start a struggling lineup with a hit, a walk, a hit-by-pitch and a stolen base. But Minnesota's 3-through-9 batters had only three hits.

Orioles 11, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Jeff Conine drove in four runs, and Jason Towers beat Boston for the second time in a week as the Baltimore Orioles earned an 11-5 rain-delayed victory Friday night over the Red Sox.

The loss was the first for new manager Joe Kerrigan, who was given a two-year contract Thursday after Jimy Williams was fired. Boston beat Seattle 6-4 Thursday.

Brook Fordyce tied a career high with four hits and drove in two runs for the Orioles, who won for the seventh time in 10 games. The Red Sox lost for the seventh time in nine games and fell a season-high six games behind the New York Yankees in the AL East.

Towers (8-7) pitched 5 1-3 innings, giving up five runs and 11 hits, while striking out one and not walking a batter. He was lifted for John Bale just before the game was delayed for one hour and 48-minutes.

Astros escape with 6-5 win over Pirates

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Moises Alou and Richard Hidalgo homered, and Dave Mlicki scattered five hits in six innings to lead the Houston Astros to a 6-5 victory Friday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates lost for the fifth straight game, and for the ninth time in 11 contests.

Mlicki (4-0) gave up three runs — two earned. He walked one and didn't strike out a batter.

The Pirates closed to 6-5 in the ninth on a two-run homer by Gary Matthews Jr. off Billy Wagner. But Wagner finished with two strikeouts for his 28th save in 30 chances.

Pittsburgh starter Tony McKnight (1-3) allowed six runs — four earned — in six innings. He walked two and struck out four.

Houston scored three times in the sixth to take a 6-2 lead. Alou led off with his 23rd home run. A bases loaded walk to Craig Biggio scored Vinny Castilla, and Julio Lugo's sacrifice fly scored Brad Ausmus.

Brian Giles cut the Houston lead to 6-3 in the seventh with his 29th home run.

Brewers 5, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Jose Rijo pitched two scoreless innings in his first major league appearance in six years, but Jeromy Burnitz homered and tripled in another run as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-1 Friday night.

The 36-year-old Rijo hadn't pitched in the majors since July 18, 1995 when he left a Reds game against San Diego with a throbbing elbow. The 1990 World Series MVP, who had five elbow operations, allowed two hits and two walks. He pitched out of a bases loaded jam in the ninth, striking out Richie Sexson and Jose Hernandez.

Rockies 12, Marlins 5

DENVER — Jose Ortiz hit three home runs and Juan Uribe added a three-run triple as the Colorado Rockies erased a five-run deficit to hand the Florida Marlins their fifth straight defeat, 12-5 Friday night.

Ortiz hit a two-run homer in the fifth and solo homers in the sixth and the eight for the first multihomer game of his career. Ortiz became the ninth player in Rockies' history to hit three home runs in a game.

Todd Helton added a two-run home run for Colorado, which ended a two-game losing streak.

Diamondbacks 3, Cubs 2

PHOENIX (AP) — Reggie Sanders hit two home runs, one of them the third-longest ever at Bank One Ballpark, as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat the Chicago Cubs 3-2 Friday night for their seventh victory in a row.

Sanders' two-run blast that broke a 1-1 tie in the seventh sailed 460 feet into the eating area at Friday's Front Row restaurant beyond left field. Only Scott Rolen's 473-footer and Matt Willaims' 468-footer, both in May of 1999, went farther.

Cardinals 4, Phillies 3

ST. LOUIS — Placido Polanco made the most of his second chance to drive in a run with a sacrifice fly.

Polanco's bases-loaded fly in the ninth inning stretched St. Louis' winning streak to nine games, as the Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 Friday night.

Bootcheck frustrates 'Hounds bats

Staff Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Arkansas Travelers starter Chris Bootcheck pitched 5 2/3 innings of no-hit ball to frustrate the Midland RockHounds and lead his team to a 3-1 win Friday.

The RockHounds finally broke up the no-hit bid by Bootcheck (3-1) in the sixth inning with four consecutive singles. The third of which — by Mike Lockwood to left-center field — scored Caonabo Cosme to pull the 'Hounds to within 3-1.

But that was all the 'Hounds could get as Bootcheck closed out the sixth and the seventh, then gave way to Tony Milo, who recorded his second save of the season.

The Travelers got to Midland starter Aaron Harang (9-7) in the third as Shone Figgins had an RBI double and then Gary Johnson followed with an RBI single to give Arkansas a 2-0 lead.

In the fourth, the Travelers made it 3-1 when Midland left fielder Jacques Landry dropped a fly ball hit by Tom Gregorio, allowing Derick Urquhart to score from third base. The run later would be earned with a base hit.

It wasn't a good night for Landry as he struck out for the 167th time this season, breaking the single-season franchise record held by Tim Salmon.

The teams meet in a doubleheader today starting at 6:30 p.m. as Midland's Juan Peña (10-9, 3.40 ERA) goes against Arkansas' Dusty Bergman (7-12, 3.03) in the first game, and then in the nightcap, Midland's Eric Thompson (1-3, 4.94) gets the spot start against Arkansas' Radhames Dyhkoff (2-3, 5.02).

Cincinnati buys Rijo's contract, bringing him back to big leagues

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Jose Rijo returned to the major leagues after six years on the sidelines and five elbow operations, pitching two scoreless innings for the Cincinnati Reds on Friday night.

"I cannot describe with words how I feel right now. It's beyond anything in my life that I ever accomplished," an emotional Rijo said. "No moment could beat this moment today, until I die and go to heaven and meet Jesus. This feeling is that close."

Rijo pitched the eighth and ninth innings of the Reds' 5-1 loss to the Milwaukee Brewers. He allowed two hits and walked two but pitched out of a bases loaded jam in the ninth, striking out two.

How long had it been since the 36-year-old Rijo pitched in the majors? He received a vote on a Hall of Fame ballot this year.

Rijo — the MVP of the 1990 World Series, when the Reds swept the Oakland Athletics — became the first player to appear in a major league game after receiving a Hall of Fame vote since Minnie Minoso got six in 1969 and then played for the Chicago White Sox in 1976 and 1980.

"I'm not worried about the Hall of Fame. That doesn't mean anything," Rijo said. "It's more important to be here today."

The Reds bought Rijo's contract from Triple-A Louisville. He took the roster spot of third baseman Aaron Boone, who went on the 15-day disabled list Wednesday with a broken right wrist.

"He's the 12th man," said manager Bob Boone before the game. "I would like to get him in a non-stress situation."

Rijo hadn't pitched in the majors since July 18, 1995, when a throbbing elbow forced him to leave a game in San Diego. He gave up a single to pitcher Joey Hamilton, called the trainer to the mound, then walked off holding the arm as tears welled in his eyes.

"I guess he figured if I could get a hit off him, he was broke," said Hamilton, who was in the Reds' clubhouse Friday after signing a minor league contract and waiting to be assigned to Triple-A Louisville.

Hamilton, released by the Toronto Blue Jays on Aug. 3, said he and Rijo talked about Rijo's last major league appearance over dinner Thursday.

He came back too fast from the first operation, damaged the elbow and had to have four more operations.

At one point, he went two years without throwing, but he never abandoned hope of someday returning to the majors.

Titans beat Rams 23-10

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Even after spotty results in his first extensive playing time of the preseason, Kurt Warner was ready to start playing for real.

"No doubt, I think I could play next week," Warner said after the Tennessee Titans' 23-10 victory over the St. Louis Rams on Friday night. "I think I could have played two weeks ago.

"We made a couple mistakes that we need to correct, obviously, but I felt good with the way we moved the football."

The game matched the teams that met in the 2000 Super Bowl, a 23-16 Rams victory. The Titans (1-1) also beat the Rams 30-3 last year in the preseason in Nashville, when the wounds were much fresher from the big game.

"We have a couple of guys that have played for the Rams," Titans quarterback Steve McNair said. "It's good for those guys to come out and get hyped out there and make some plays."

Still, the Titans raised eyebrows when upback Donald Mitchell ran 34 yards on a fake punt to set up the game's first touchdown.

"I was kind of shocked," Rams coach Mike Martz said.

Overall, this one was a lot sloppier than the Super Bowl, with the Rams committing four turnovers and the Titans' two. St. Louis also had a kickoff return for touchdown by Aveion Cason at the end of the half called back because of holding.

Warner, who played only one series in the second preseason game, ran the NFL's No. 1 offense for a quarter and a half this time. He was 7-for-11 for 108 yards, but also threw two interceptions and lost a fumble while being sacked by Blaine Bishop to short circuit the Rams' first possession.

"You'll have to look at the tape, but it looked like the secondary really picked up things," coach Jeff Fisher said. "We were a little nervous going in with the potential that that they have offensively."

Dainon Sidney got both of the pickoffs, although he fumbled it right back on his first interception at the Titans' 10 late in the first quarter. Wide receiver Isaac Bruce was at fault on that play, letting the ball squirt through his hands.

The Rams capitalized eventually, scoring their only touchdown on a 2-yard run by Robert Holcombe that tied it 7-7.

Falcons defeat Redskins 27-6

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — If young quarterbacks learn from their mistakes, then a whole lot of learning took place Friday night.

Two rookies and a second-year player combined to throw four interceptions in the Atlanta Falcons' 27-6 victory over the Washington Redskins.

Michael Vick, the most watched and cheered of the group — even though he was playing for the visiting team — had a thrilling 28-yard scramble but completed just 3-for-7 passes for 22 yards. He put too much steam on his short passes and was intercepted on a desperate downfield heave at the end of a long scramble.

"Guys were four and five yards downfield and I'm throwing bullets," said Vick, the No. 1 overall draft pick. "You can't do that because it makes it tough for them. That's something I'm definitely going to work on this week."

And, of course, his interception was even more cause of learning.

"You can't take those plays back," Vick said. "All you can do is learn from them and continue to move forward."

Ray Buchanan had interceptions off both Redskins quarterbacks, Todd Husak and Sage Rosenfels, and returned one for a touchdown. Jamal Anderson scored twice, on a 1-yard run and a 5-yard reception, for the Falcons (2-1).

But it was Atlanta's defense that ruled the night, almost by default, because of the Redskins messy quarterback situation.

With Jeff George still nursing tendinitis in his shoulder, the Redskins (0-2) started second-year player Husak, who has a strained rib muscle. Husak had his second straight poor outing — a tentative 4-for-6 with an interception— and is in danger of losing his roster spot to Tony Banks, who was signed Thursday and will make his debut next week.

"It's going to take a lot more this to shake my confidence," Husak said. "I truly believe I'm going to be a good quarterback in this league. It's too bad I picked this time to miss that throw. I haven't missed that throw all camp."

Husak lasted about a quarter and was replaced by fourth-round draft pick Rosenfels, whose first play was a touchdown for the Falcons. Rosenfels tried to hit Michael Westbrook, but Buchanan stepped in front and took the ball 31 yards for a touchdown.

Vick, the No. 1 overall draft pick by the Falcons, played the third quarter. He completed his first two passes, but his last attempt was the downfield toss intercepted by safety Martavius Houston.

All the youthful quarterback errors made Falcons 35-year-old starter Chris Chandler look practically like an All-Star. Playing the first half, Chandler completed 4 of 7 passes for 76 yards, including a 46-yard pass to Shawn Jefferson that beat Pro Bowl cornerback Champ Bailey and set up a touchdown.

In addition to three interceptions and several more near interceptions, the Falcons also blocked two kicks. The Redskins wore their burgundy jerseys at home for the first time in 21 years, but their faces had to be red as the fans booed them off the field at the end of the first half.

"The most disappointing thing to me was our placement protection," coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "I'm going to fix it. I may have to send some people out of here, but I'm going to fix it."

The Redskins took the opening kickoff and drove to Atlanta's 29-yard line, but Shane Dronett blocked Brett Conway's 47-yard field goal attempt.

Washington's next drive ended with Husak's ill-advised, back-footed pass that went straight to Buchanan. The Falcons converted the turnover into a 43-yard field goal by Jake Arians, who is battling rookie Jay Feely for the kicker's job.

The Falcons made it 10-0 on Anderson's 1-yard run, one play after Jefferson's long reception against Bailey.

Buchanan's touchdown runback made it 17-0 before Rosenfels got the Redskins on the board with a 60-yard scoring drive capped by Ki-Jana Carter's 38-yard run. Conway's extra point attempt was blocked by Travis Hall.

But Rosenfels was intercepted again in his next series. Linebacker Matt Stewart tipped the ball, and safety Marty Carter came down with it. Five plays later, Chandler hit Anderson on a swing pass for a 5-yard score.

Arians' 44-yard field goal in the fourth quarter completed the scoring. That drive was led by second-year quarterback Doug Johnson, the game's only twentysomething passer not to throw an interception.

Craven knocks off Elliott to take Pepsi 400 pole

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Ricky Craven, the final driver to make an attempt, knocked sentimental favorite Bill Elliott off the pole Friday in qualifying for the Pepsi 400 at Michigan International Speedway.

Craven gave second-year Winston Cup owner Cal Wells his first pole with a lap of 188.127 mph, about 3 mph slower than Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s top speed at the track last year.

"I've always enjoyed it here," Craven said. "I just felt like this was a place where we could turn the corner. And actually the last month we've really run well. Every week, I get a car that keeps getting better and better."

Elliott, who dominated Michigan in the 1980s with seven wins, went out seventh and ran 187.857. He withstood challenges from Ricky Rudd, a surprising Elliott Sadler and John Andretti before Craven took the top spot.

Elliott, on his way to the interview room when Craven ran his lap, shrugged off losing the pole.

"We're on the pole, we're just on the wrong side of it," he joked. "Qualifying is over with and we'll worry about the race Sunday. That's the main objective now."

He's been a fan favorite at Michigan since his heyday driving for local business owner Harry Melling. The fans cheered loudly when Elliott's time was announced, and even louder when he exited his car on pit road after his lap.

Still, he got beat.

"I thought he was going to do it," Elliott said of Rudd. "Everybody's got good equipment. If you hit it just right and get the combination right, and anybody's got the potential to do it."

Rudd wound up third, followed by Sadler and Andretti. Point leaders Jeff Gordon, who has won two straight races, qualified 13th.

"I knew it was the best lap I'd run all day," said Gordon, who also won here in June. "It's the same car we had here last time, but it didn't seem like it was as fast."

Craven has slowly rebuilt his career since being released by Hendrick Motorsports in 1998. He was without a full-time ride the past two seasons and joined Wells late in the offseason. Although he sits 26th in points, Craven has two top-10 finishes in the past three races.

But he struggled in the 2-hour practice, posting only the 24th-best speed.

"The first hour of practice wasn't a lot of fun," he said. "The second hour was better, and then qualifying was perfect."

He was particularly happy with being able to hold on through the final two turns.

"I just knew 1 and 2 were fast," he said. "I jumped back on the gas in 3 and 4 and it kind of got away from me. But I really felt like it was top five because I had so much momentum."

NASCAR makes telemetry boxes optional at Pepsi 400

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — NASCAR made the use of telemetry boxes optional for Sunday's Pepsi 400, a week after one of the device's batteries failed in Robby Gordon's car and started a fire that put him out of the Watkins Glen race.

The box — which provides on-screen data for TV viewers such as RPM, speed and track position through the Global Positioning System — popped and burst into flames from its position on the floorboard of Gordon's car after he made his final pit stop last Sunday.

NASCAR previously ordered all teams to install the systems.

Stan Honey, president and chief technical officer of Sportvision, which produces the telemetry box for NASCAR, said Friday the fire started when the jostling of the battery pack caused one of three lithium batteries to fail.

"The fire started in one of the batteries, and it then spread to the other batteries," Honey said. "The pack is mounted on vibration mounts, which are rubber mounts intended to let the package move separately from the car and get a smoother ride than the car.

"In this case, the box was experiencing much more vibration than was intended."

Before the incident, Gordon appeared to have the fastest car, easily passing eventual winner Jeff Gordon at one point.

NASCAR spokeswoman Danielle Humphrey said teams would have the option this weekend of not running the system, and Honey admitted some teams probably would balk at using his product.

David Smith, team manager for the Richard Childress Racing car Robby Gordon drove at Watkins Glen in place of injured Mike Skinner, said the team plans to use the system Sunday.

"All I want to see is the thing fixed," Smith said. "We were the victims this time, let's get the thing fixed and go on. We want to work with (Sportvision). We'll run the thing this weekend."

Smith pointed to an earlier incident this year involving the telemetry box in Jeff Gordon's car. The batteries went dead and caused the box to shut down, which forced Sportvision to redesign the system.

"They said the two incidents weren't related, but I told them it was a battery issue," Smith said. "If that had been addressed then, maybe we wouldn't be sitting around talking about this. Maybe we'd have champagne all over us."

The box in Gordon's car was not given enough room to vibrate, causing it to hit one of the car's frame rails, said Danny Reichert of Broadcast Sports Inc., which provides and installs in-car cameras for NASCAR.

The batteries, which were used to power the telemetry box and the in-car cameras, won't be used the rest of the season, with Sportvision relying on a pack of 10 D-cell batteries.

Tracy returns to scene of stop-start victory

Associated Press

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. — Paul Tracy is hoping a return to the site of his greatest comeback will turn around a disappointing season.

A year ago, Tracy won the Motorola 220 at Road America even though his engine died seconds before the start. The remarkable victory propelled him to a fifth-place finish in the points race.

Tracy has yet to see a checkered flag this season and is ninth in points, 38 behind leader Kenny Brack.

A return to the 4.048-mile, 14-turn Road America course has been good for the soul, Tracy said during Friday's practice session. He called last year's victory one of the biggest thrills of his career.

"I don't know about the most satisfying. I think winning the two races in Canada (Toronto in 1993 and Vancouver last year) probably rank the highest," said Tracy, who's from Scarborough, Ontario. "But it was a great win for everybody on the whole team. It kind of jump-started our season again and got us in contention for the championship.

"We're in about the same position as we were last year coming into this race," Tracy added. "So, I hope we can have a good result here again and get a good finish."

And a better start.

A year ago, Tracy thought his day was done before it had even begun.

"I went for the start and started coming up the hill and the engine just died and the thing shut off," said Tracy, who fell from seventh to 23rd on the first lap after the sensor stuck open and killed the Honda engine in his Team Kool Green Reynard.

With his engineer directing the process, Tracy managed to shut down the sensor and restart the engine. By then, though, he was so far back he couldn't see any of the other racers.

Team owner Barry Green radioed Tracy and told him to forget about the field, just run the race as best he could.

"We were so far behind after the first lap that all I thought about was, 'OK, we've just got to get in the points,' " Tracy said. "So, that's what I concentrated on and guys kept falling out and having problems and I was passing guys."

Tracy steadily moved through the field, finally taking the lead for the first time on lap 38 when Alex Tagliani's car, which had been leading by nearly six seconds, coasted to a stop on course.

"I was surprised that I was in the lead, but I thought that some guys maybe had pitted and I was a little out of sequence," Tracy said.

The new leader made his final fuel stop on lap 45, giving up the top spot to Roberto Moreno.

When Moreno had to make his last stop on lap 51, Tracy reassumed the lead and pulled away to win by 7.450 seconds over Adrian Fernandez.

Spencer sets track record, takes pole for Busch race

Associated Press

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Jimmy Spencer set a track record Friday in winning the pole for the NASCAR Busch Series NAPA 250 at Michigan International Speedway.

Spencer, a full-time Winston Cup competitor who took over James Finch's Chevrolet five races into the Busch season, has two wins in nine starts with the team.

Spencer's lap of 184.824 mph Friday was good enough to beat Ryan Newman. The race is Saturday.

"I should have run a little faster because the track has got a lot of grip and it's really fast," Spencer said after winning his second Busch Series pole. "I was slower than in practice."

Newman had been the fastest car during the morning practice, but his lap of 184.644 came up just short of his fourth pole of the season. He's running a combination of Winston Cup, Busch and ARCA races this year in preparation of a move to Winston Cup in 2002.

"We've got a lot of history here with Penske racing," said Newman, still looking for his first NASCAR win.

Penske drivers "Rusty Wallace and Jeremy Mayfield have always run good here," Newman added, "and you've got to use all of your resources."

Mike Skinner, out since July with an ankle injury, will start third Saturday. Kevin Lepage and Larry Foyt rounded out the top five. Defending series champ Jeff Green will start sixth, while current points leader Kevin Harvick qualified seventh.

Skinner is also in Sunday's Pepsi 400 after missing four Winston Cup races with a broken ankle.

"I'm running the race Saturday to get my coordination back," Skinner said. "The doctor told me it would happen, and it sure did, that I'd lose the coordination between my left and right foot. I need to get that back."

Foyt, one of A.J. Foyt's sons, has struggled in his rookie year, failing to finish in the top 10 in 22 races. He said he often gets advice from his father, although it's not always current.

"My dad told me some things about getting around here, which helped out some," Larry Foyt said. "But we laugh sometimes, because we'll go to a track and he'll say, 'I won a pole here,' and then someone will say, 'Yeah, but it was a dirt track then.'"

ROCK THE DESERT

Organizers expect more than 100 churches to participate

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Rock the Desert is a week away.

The 12-hour Christian rock extravaganza is set for Aug. 25 at Beal Park, with more than 100 churches expected to participate in the event.

There will be a slate of Christian rock bands that includes nationally known artists Lane Oliver, Among Thorns, Aurora, Justifide, The Benjamin Gate, L.A. Symphony, Chris Tomlin and the Newsboys, as well as the local group 3000 Plus. In addition, there will be skateboarding, skateboarding demonstrations for participants by the Manna skateboard team, food and gift concessions and recreation provided by Texas Sumo Extreme Games.

In between the bands, Mayor Mike Canon, Odessan Joe Beene and youth speaker Matt Chandler will address the crowd.

This will be the second year for the Rock the Desert event, which began last year as a youth evangelistic outreach of Holy Trinity Church.

About 4,000 people attended last year's Rock, staged at the Holy Trinity parking lots on Illinois Avenue.

This year, the event has been moved to Beal Park in anticipation of a much larger crowd. Spokeswoman Marcie Tull said judging by the flood of responses she's received from churches and youth group leaders from around the state, the attendance could well increase tenfold.

The Manna Skateboard Team, including Brian Hutcherson, will perform at Rock the Desert.

Teens gather in New Orleans for youth conference

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

NEW ORLEANS — There are those who would argue mid-summer is no time to visit New Orleans, but the heat and humidity didn't seem to bother the more than 35,000 youths who recently gathered for the Missouri Synod Lutherans' triennial youth conference.

Among the youths — all between ages 15 and 21 — were 14 Midlanders — seven from Holy Cross and seven from Grace Lutheran.

With a theme of Higher Ground, taken from Colossians 3:1, the conference balanced worship, study and inspirational addresses with service to others and high-energy recreation.

The theme was carried out each day through events at the Louisiana Superdome that included singing, dramas, worship, Bible studies and concerts.

Speakers included New Orleans Mayor Marc Morial, Olympic diving gold-medalist Laura Wilkinson, 24-year-old Gianna Jessen, who survived a botched abortion attempt and has cerebral palsy as a result, in addition to synod officials, and by videotape, President George W. Bush.

The kids had Bible study — and gave 22,000 Bibles to the Concordia Gospel Outreach for distribution.

They made posters and created banners enough to blanket the massive interior of the Superdome — and donated untold thousands of pens for redistribution to needy school children.

They danced all over the city of New Orleans and donated 804 pints of blood to blood banks.

They consumed thousands and thousands of hamburgers and sodas — and donated 10 tons of nonperishable foods for the hungry.

They also stood in line for hours to sign up for servant events such as building a house for Habitat, painting New Orleans school buildings, cleaning litter from streets and rivers, reading to children and writing cards for the homebound.

And the city of New Orleans responded by opening its heart to them.

Midlander Becky Konz, who belongs to Holy Cross Lutheran, said the friendliness was something she hadn't expected.

"I was totally surprised by how hospitable the people were," she said. "I was also impressed by the sheer mass of all of us together in the Superdome."

Book questions C.S. Lewis' work published after author's death

By Sue Leeman
Associated Press

LONDON — Renowned Christian scholar and best-selling author C.S. Lewis died in 1963, but bitter arguments about his literary legacy continue today.

The latest comes in a new book by an American expert on Lewis, who claims the custodians of his literary estate posthumously published forgeries under the author's name.

Kathryn Lindskoog, an independent academic living in Orange, Calif., says the Lewis estate, including his editor, Walter Hooper, is cashing in on his fame by "drip-feeding" suspect and altered works onto the market for maximum profit.

Lewis

"C.S. Lewis' literary legacy is increasingly defiled by fraud, forgery and falsehood," she writes in her new book, "Sleuthing C.S. Lewis," that was published Wednesday in the United States.

Lindskoog has been making similar arguments for many years, creating intense debate in literary circles. The new book is also getting attention.

Maggie Shannon, spokeswoman for the publisher, Mercer University Press in Macon, Ga., said a second printing had been ordered after the first print run of 1,200 sold out in advance orders.

Hooper says Lindskoog didn't come to the project with an open mind, so it's difficult for him to defend himself.

"Mrs. Lindskoog has made me her life's work, but I couldn't do my job and ... reply (or even read) all that was coming from her," Hooper said in an e-mail to The Associated Press.

"I found myself in the position of Brer Rabbit trying to argue with the Tar Baby. Just when you imagine you've scored a point with the Tar Baby you find yourself stuck."

Lewis, author of the acclaimed Narnia chronicles for children, wrote prolifically about the spiritual quest that took him from atheism to robust Anglican Christianity.

A complex, pipe-smoking character with a powerful intellect, Lewis is still a phenomenal best seller; 29 of the books published before his death are still in print. His works have sold more than 115 million copies, according to HarperCollins, which last year signed a deal with the Lewis estate that made it the primary English-language publisher of Lewis around the world.

But in recent weeks, admirers have complained that Lewis is being commercialized — and even de-Christianized — by the Lewis estate, including licensing of Narnia paraphernalia, heavy promotion by HarperCollins publishers and alleged suppression of Christian

Priest plans to build Hispanic congregation by word of mouth

Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

La Iglesia Episcopal de Santa Maria Virgen, 3311 Andrews Highway, will have its official beginning with its dedication at 6 p.m. today.

The Rt. Rev. C. Wallis Ohl Jr., bishop of Northwest Texas, will preside at the dedication and the celebration of Holy Eucharist — in Spanish. This mission's mission is to serve west side Hispanic families who have no church they can call home.

Following the dedication and the Eucharist, which is open to all baptized Christians, the entire congregation and visitors will form a caravan and head west for a fiesta at the warehouse of South-Tex Treaters at 13405 Highway 191.

The Rev. Bernardo Martinez, priest at La Iglesia Episcopal de San Miguel Arcangel — the fastest growing congregation in the diocese — will serve as Santa Maria's priest as well.

The present congregation is tiny. There are no more than four or five families and a handful of Holy Trinity and St. Nicholas parishioners who attend the Sunday evening services after attending their regular morning services. But Martinez is confident this church building, like that of San Miguel, will fill in God's own time.

He said he and his wife and others will build the congregation by calling on Hispanic families in the neighborhood of Santa Maria.

"Many of these families have members who don't speak English," he said. "And many of them are not going to church.

"Those are the people we are interested in talking to first."

This was how Martinez filled the Odessa church. And once he got them there, he kept them by offering them access to the Holy Eucharist that, although Episcopalian in its fundamental form, includes important Roman Catholic elements. The entire service is in Spanish, with prayer books printed in English and Spanish on facing pages. The sermons are also in Spanish, in an easy conversational style, low-key and school-masterish, with Martinez drawing heavily on his Nicaraguan past for anecdotes and examples.

He was a teacher for five years after finishing his university studies in Nicaragua. Then he moved over to social work, serving as field director for CARE for five years. In 1983 he moved to Honduras to serve as director of social programs for the Episcopal Church. In 1989, he moved to the United States, where he started Hispanic missions in Abilene and Sweetwater. In 1992, he moved to Austin to attend seminary and to learn English.

Once ordained, and able to converse in English, he moved to Odessa. At first the Hispanic services were held at St. John's Church following the Sunday service in English, but within a year, the Hispanic congregation was ready for a church of their own.

Meanwhile, Martinez was looking farther afield. The first Hispanic Eucharist was celebrated two years ago on All Saint's Sunday following the evening Eucharist in English. Seven months later, Holy Trinity parishioners gave the church a building, the former Midland Montessori House, and the lot adjacent to it. Episcopalians built and refurbished pews and repaired and repainted the building.

Holy Trinity members David Daniel and Jay Siebens built a wooden cross to hang behind the altar. The Holy Trinity Altar Guild donated vestments and hangings.

They moved into the building at the beginning of the summer.

Martinez said this congregation will come by the same method the Odessa parish was built — by word of mouth.

"My wife, Lillian, and I, will call on families. Lillian is indispensable to me," he said, "and we will depend on the people who come to tell their friends and neighbors and invite them to come.

"That's the only way I know to build a congregation."

The church dedication and fiesta are open to the public.

AUTHOR: Lewis expert calls 'The Dark Towers' a forgery themes in a scuttled TV documentary.

(From 1C)

Christianity Today, an influential U.S. evangelical magazine, editorialized this month that a plan to produce further Narnia novels is "a categorically bad idea," but otherwise believers should be pleased when a major book house spends millions to promote "some of the best Christian writing of all time."

Lindskoog, meanwhile, is charging that "The Dark Tower," a time-travel adventure published after Lewis' death, is a forgery. She also argues that Hooper, a 70-year-old former U.S. Episcopal priest who converted to Roman Catholicism, changed Lewis' words and meanings in a 1976 American edition of "The Screwtape Letters," the famous dialogue between two devils, and has withheld some of Lewis' letters.

Hooper said "neither Mrs. Lindskoog nor any of those who profess to believe 'The Dark Tower' is a forgery have ever looked at the manuscript." Lindskoog says she wanted to look at the manuscript but was refused; Hooper says she passed on the chance to review it.

Reviewing Lindskoog's book, the U.S. book industry guide Publisher's Weekly says she "makes a powerful case that something fishy is going on in the affairs of C.S. Lewis."

Lindskoog also has supporters in academic circles. Dozens, including science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke and former U.S. poet laureate Richard Wilbur, have signed a petition calling for the Lewis estate to respond to the charges.

Robert S. Ellwood, emeritus professor of religion at the University of Southern California, says those "in the multimillion dollar C.S. Lewis 'industry'" ought to "take her well-documented case more seriously."

Lindskoog, 66, who has multiple sclerosis, has a long history of investigating Lewis and also wrote the 1988 book "The C.S. Lewis Hoax."

Lindskoog says since Lewis' death, about 40 more books have appeared including collections of his personal letters, lecture notes and childhood drawings.

All the posthumous publications, she says, "have been tightly controlled and rationed out year by year" for maximum effect.

In "Sleuthing C.S. Lewis," Lindskoog explores the origins of "The Dark Tower" fragment, supposed to be part of Lewis' series of space novels, "Out of the Silent Planet," "Perelandra" and "That Hideous Strength" featuring philology professor Elwin Ransom.

Lewis, with whom she corresponded, never mentioned the work, she maintains, nor did his brother, Warren, who acted as his secretary.

ROCK: Number involved growing

(From 1C)

"This year the vision of the event has exploded into an interdenominational event," she said. "Over 100 churches from all over Texas have chosen to share in this vision of evangelism and revival and that number is growing by the day.

"Youth groups, families and friends will come together for one day, with no denominational walls between them, praise Jesus together and give all the honor and glory to our heavenly father."

Although gates to the event are scheduled to open at 9 a.m., there will be a 24-hour prayer vigil and campout on the grounds for registered, supervised groups beginning Friday.

Ms. Tull said there will be no charge for the event, which is funded by donations, although participating churches and other organizations will be selling food and goods at the concession stands.

Attendees will be asked to fill out spiritual assessment cards before entering the park, and will be issued identifying arm bands that will entitle them to participate in periodic drawings for prizes.

Information from the assessment cards will be used to build mailing lists for follow-up and for other future use.

"Right under our noses, God is orchestrating a revival, unifying his church and raising up a generation of believers right in our own back yard," Ms. Tull said.

"Evidence of this will be seen on Aug. 25. Christ will be the focus of Rock the Desert."

Anyone wishing to participate in the overnight prayer vigil and campout must call to register no later than Monday.

For more information on Rock the Desert, call Marcy Tull at 697-4548, or visit the Web site at www.rockthedesert.com

YOUTH: Teens did many service projects

(From 1C)

Michael Gilmore and J.R. Orzts, both of Grace Lutheran, said they keep remembering the confirmation of five teen-agers from a Dallas church.

"I didn't expect it to be so much like our services," said Gilmore.

For Grace Lutheran parishioner Lauren Schneider, the memorable moment was when Ms. Wilkinson spoke.

"She said to have a plan, and to put it in God's hand," said Ms. Schneider. "She had wanted to be a gymnast, but she grew six inches, so she turned to diving instead."

Cindy Alvarez, a member of Holy Cross, said she also was awed by the size of the dome, and by the numbers. "I loved getting to know people from other states and from other countries," she said. "I met a girl who had come to the conference from China."

Debbie Ramsay, a Grace Lutheran youth leader who accompanied the group, said she was caught off-guard by good behavior of the kids.

"I was just amazed at how well-behaved 35,000 high school kids really were," she said. "And the city of New Orleans was just wonderful. We were staying in the Marriott, where the hamburgers cost $8 or $9, so the kids would go down the street to a Burger King or Wendy's and come back to the lobby with their bags and their drinks and sit in the chairs and eat and drink, and the hotel (staff) didn't seem to mind at all."

Chuck Gibson, a youth leader from Holy Cross, said, "The locals kept telling us how good the youths were, and how much they had impacted New Orleans.

"The mayor commented that he had been contacted by other local churches wanting to know how they could start up some of the service projects that the youth did while they were there."

Just this year, Prophetess Gloria Joy Van Johnson came to Lubbock and the miracles were so many that God kept her there for five weeks. Both in Amarillo and Odessa, the signs and wonders were so mighty and the crowds were so large, that both revivals had to be moved into larger facilities and extended for weeks.

Through God the lame have walked off of canes, deaf ears have opened, lumps and growths have disappeared, arthritis cured, bodies have been healed, many have had financial blessings, faith has been restored, backsliders and lost souls have come to know Jesus, and the word of knowledge is so accurate that it could only be God.

30-year-old rapper C-Murder faces first-degree murder charges

BATON ROUGE, La. — Rapper C-Murder, the brother of Master P, turned himself into police Friday and was awaiting booking for allegedly trying to fire a gun at a nightclub owner earlier this week.

Police said the 30-year-old rapper, whose real name is Corey Miller, faced charges of attempted first-degree murder and illegal use of a dangerous weapon in the Tuesday night confrontation at Club Raggs in Baton Rouge.

He faced separate burglary and firearms charges in an incident in June, police said.

Miller's surrender follows the filing of a lawsuit Thursday by night club owner Norman Sparrow, security guard Daryl Jackson and others who allege that the problems started when Jackson asked to search Miller for a weapon before he entered the club. Miller wanted to enter without being searched, but Sparrow refused.

The lawsuit alleges that Miller grabbed Sparrow by the arm and that Sparrow pulled away, at which point Miller is accused of pulling out a gun and trying to fire at Sparrow. The gun jammed.

Police spokesman Cpl. Don Kelly said Miller tried to clear the jam and fire again, but the gun would not discharge.

The lawsuit also names Master P's No Limit Records, Bout It Management, Bout It Inc. and their insurance company as defendants.

Roy Maughan Jr., an attorney for No Limit and for Miller, said he has not seen the lawsuit and could not discuss it.

DUBLIN, Ireland — Sinead O'Connor has married her journalist boyfriend Nick Sommerlad, the groom said Friday.

The Irish singer and Sommerlad, a Dublin-based reporter for Britain's Press Association news agency, were married three weeks ago, he said. He didn't disclose the location.

O'Connor, 34, rose to fame a decade ago with hits including "Nothing Compares 2 U."

She has two children from previous relationships: Jake, 13, from her marriage to drummer John Reynolds, and Roisin, 5, from her relationship with Irish Times columnist John Waters.

Sommerlad, 27, met the singer after he was posted to Dublin in February. He proposed a few months later.

LONDON — Andre Agassi said he and Steffi Graf, who are expecting a child together, will get married.

"The actual question has been dealt with. I have asked her to marry me and we are committed to our future together," Agassi said in an interview published Friday in The Daily Telegraph.

"We will definitely get married. Oh, yeah. Definitely. One hundred percent. It feels like we are married now, it kind of feels that way."

He gave no date for the wedding.

Graf, 32, and Agassi, 31, said in July they're expecting a baby — the first for both tennis stars — in mid-December.

"I would say that becoming parents definitely puts a time frame on getting married," said Agassi, who previously was married to Brooke Shields.

"In fact, in my mind, it wouldn't be right not to get married."

ATLANTA — Five months after Black Entertainment Television fired him, Tavis Smiley is busier than ever.

Smiley is a contributor on CNN, National Public Radio and ABC's "Good Morning America" and a correspondent for ABC's "Primetime." He's on the cover of Jet magazine and has signed a two-book deal with Random House.

Still, Smiley is upset about how he was treated after Viacom purchased BET and decided not to renew his contract.

"I was terribly disappointed the situation went down like it did," said the 36-year-old Smiley, who was the host of Wednesday's episode of CNN's "TalkBack Live."

He says his agent received a fax on March 23 saying he was fired "effective immediately." Eventually, he decided it was a "situation for revelation, the best thing to happen to me."

Smiley was the host of "BET Tonight" for five years. He will remain based in Los Angeles, but will spend more time at CNN headquarters in Atlanta.

"I'll be contributing to the network for a variety of shows on a variety of topics," he said.

NEW YORK — Woody Allen says he'd love to have stars like Tom Hanks and Tom Cruise appear in his films.

"Any of these guys would be great and would do, you know, a better job than I do. ... I'd have these charismatic stars in the picture. But it's hard to get them because they work 365 days," Allen said.

The 65-year-old director-actor says he can only do a few roles.

"I can play, you know, a sort of New York neurotic character close to what I am. I mean I could play a writer or a musician. ... And I can play a lowlife."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Aug. 18, 2001:

Your instincts guide you in deploying your assets. Your creativity and ingenuity will keep you at the forefront of whatever is important to you. You might be unusually self-absorbed. Be sensitive to others, or you might find the number of your friends dwindling. If you are single, no one will question your allure and desirability. Choosing the right person might be the challenge. You transform and change a lot about yourself this year. If you are attached, be more attentive to your sweetie, and your relationship will develop in new ways. LEO sometimes grates on you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ What seemed like a great plan last night falls to the wayside. Follow another's spontaneous lead. A friend might be looking forward to getting together. Make a special promise to a child or loved one. You put that relationship on a new footing. Tonight: Sprinkle some spice into your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Hang in there if you want to have a slow and easy day. You can count on a partner or friend to fill in for you. Browse through a favorite store or maybe buy a new item for your home. Check in on an older family member. Tonight: Your home is your castle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Both family and friends request your presence. Juggling is a specialty for the multifaceted twin. Don't put off an important call. You might not always be comfortable expressing your feelings. Press past your barriers. Tonight: Chit-chatting away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Use your sensitivity to express your deeper feelings. Help make others comfortable. Don't think your extra efforts to pitch in go unnoticed. By doing what you want to do, you soon will see the benefits. Tonight: Treat someone to dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Today's new moon highlights you. Make this your personal new year with an important resolution. Creativity knows no limits; you might need to sort through what is imaginary and what is real. Enjoy another's quirkiness. Tonight: Ask for what you want. It's another's pleasure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ A request could disrupt your plans to cocoon. You can't fight city hall! Your nerves need more quiet time. Vanish and take a walk later. You could be happy just reading under a tree, or even snoozing. Learn to disappear more often. Tonight: Don't push yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Calls force you to flex. A child also might require attention and time. On some level, you could feel like a chicken with its head cut off. Decide to honor more of what you want and not be at the whim of others so much. Tonight: Where the action is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Others make demands that you might choose not to meet. Though someone might act shocked, you need more time to yourself. An expenditure involving your work could be well worth it. Do a price comparison. Tonight: Everyone looks to you (again).

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Little did you realize that you were the spark igniting everyone's flame. You get others going. Enthusiasm is your middle name. An adventure lies ahead of you if you follow your own beat. Expect surprises. Tonight: You might want to never head home, but alas ... .

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Do exactly what a loved one asks you to do! Very nice, huh? Allow yourself more time away from responsibilities. What good is all the work and money if you don't maximize the joy of living? Thank a loved one for reminding you of this. Tonight: Let the good times go on and on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Sometimes your eccentric ways provoke strong responses. Accept that as part of your basic self. Discussions give rise to a new emotional beginning in a partnership. Just as you want another to understand you, try to do the same. Tonight: Share your celebrations with others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ You could decide to go to work or get into a project that demands your full concentration. Dealing with feelings could be uncomfortable, as so much is happening so fast. Check in on an older relative or friend later in the day. Tonight: Don't worry about plans.

Scott, a 5th grader with immune deficiencies, is worried the movie will create the wrong impression of his disease.

Boy worries new Disney film will bring him ridicule

By Ken Maguire
Associated Press

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Mass. — Scott McGuire, a fifth-grader with immune deficiencies, is worried the upcoming Disney movie "Bubble Boy" will create the wrong impression of his disease.

He doesn't want kids to start making fun of him.

While Walt Disney Co. says the comedy has nothing to do with the disease, the Immune Deficiency Foundation is calling for a boycott of the film, scheduled to open Aug. 24.

But Scott's family and a New York group founded by a couple whose son died of immune deficiencies are hoping to use the movie to improve public awareness of the illness.

"If just one child in the country could be diagnosed and treated early enough, that would be special because something good could come out of this movie," said Scott, seated at a picnic table outside his family's suburban Boston home.

A Texas congressman added his criticism of Disney.

Scott is among 500,000 Americans, mostly children, living with a primary immune deficiency disease, which can cause 70 types of disorders in which part of the body's immune system is missing or malfunctions.

Scott appears as healthy as any 10-year-old boy. But he was born without the ability to fight off even the slightest illness. He misses school frequently — 58 days last year — and his mom said he grows ghostly pale every three weeks when he receives intravenous treatments. He plays sports, but usually needs to stop early.

Rep. Kevin Brady, R-Texas, of The Woodlands, said he has asked Michael Eisner, chairman and chief executive officer of Disney, to cancel the release of the movie.

Brady invoked the memory of David Vetter of Shenandoah, Texas, who in 1984 died after a 12-year battle against the same ailment and who at the time was known as the "Bubble Boy" because of the protective plastic suit he was forced to wear.

In a letter Friday, Brady said:

"I am severely disappointed in Disney's decision to release the upcoming movie ... Purely placing a disclaimer on the film does not satisfy those of us who know Carol Ann Demaret, the mother of David Vetter, the real 'bubble boy.' "

Medical progress has eliminated the need for patients to protect themselves from germs with actual bubbles. But Scott thinks people will get the wrong idea.

"I'm not mad, but I'm sad and a little afraid that when I go back to school I'll be called a bubble boy even though I'm not a bubble boy," Scott said.

Just one year ago, Disney picked Scott as one of its Millennium Dreamers, one of 2,000 winners worldwide. Scott had put together a booklet, entitled "The Difference I Make," describing his illness and treatments.

Scott wrote a letter to Disney expressing his concern. "It would make me really sad to think that while I am at the hospital, lots of people are sitting in a movie theater laughing about a serious illness," he wrote.

Disney spokeswoman Andrea Marozas declined comment when contacted by The Associated Press. The film is described as a comedy in which a young man who has lived his life in a bubble ventures into the world when he learns his childhood sweetheart is engaged.

Disney executives have said the film is not about the disease.

Fred Modell doesn't believe it. He and his wife, Vicki, lost their son to immunodeficiency disease in 1987.

"It would be the equivalent of Disney doing a comedy about a woman with one breast and saying it's not because of breast cancer," said Modell, whose son Jeffrey died at age 15.

The 15,000-member Immune Deficiency Foundation plans a boycott.

The group contends the movie mirrors the story of David Vetter, a Texas boy known as the "Bubble Boy" because at birth he was placed inside a protective plastic bubble to guard against deadly infections. He was portrayed by John Travolta in a 1976 television movie.

David was the first child with his disease to live beyond age 2. He died at age 12. His mother, Carol Ann Demaret, is boycotting the movie.

"There are no need for bubbles because of what David helped science learn through him," she said. "(Disney) should have been more respectful of David's contribution to science and not make a mockery of him."

U.S. Rep. Kevin Brady, R-Texas, who represents the district where Demaret lives, wrote a letter to Eisner saying the company should cancel the film's release or donate some of the profit to fight the illness.

"I cannot believe a company that prides itself as being family oriented would poke fun at a tragic situation that affects so many families around the world," he wrote.

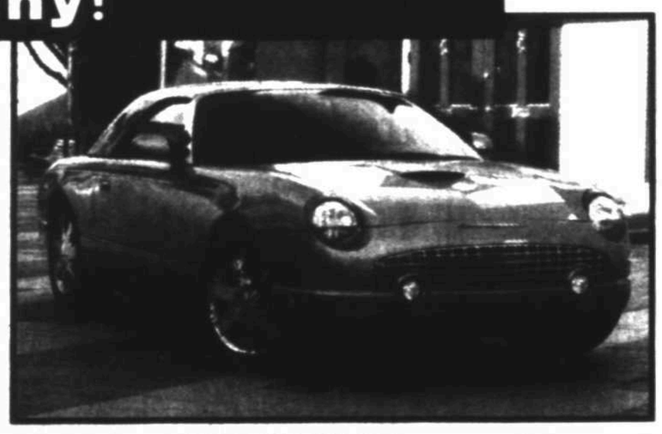
An American Icon Returns:

2002 Ford Thunderbird

RoadWorthy!



By Ken Chester, Jr.

As a modern interpretation of the classic roadsters of the '50s and '60s, the new rear-drive Ford Thunderbird pays homage with exterior/interior design cues and performance harking back to the first T-birds of the 1950s and early 1960s. The first dealer shipments of the vehicle took place during the week of July 22, 2001, from the Wixom, Mich., assembly plant where the T-bird is manufactured.

Commenting on the return of the Thunderbird to the Ford vehicle lineup, Jim O'Connor, Ford Division president said, "Today is the start of a new chapter in automotive history, as the first two-seater Thunderbirds in 40 years are poised to begin their journey to those who have been waiting for the return of this American dream car. This car, its style, the statement it makes, the feelings it evokes – all will make it an icon in its own right."

Available in Deluxe and Premium trim levels, the Ford two-door coupe offers a removable 83-pound hard top for an additional $2,500. The fast-acting rag top hardware features a novel quick release mechanism. Press the button, pull the latch and hit the power switch – with the vehicle in park.

Motive power is provided by a sophisticated all-aluminum 3.9L V-8 engine lifted from the Lincoln LS. A smooth-shifting five-speed automatic gearbox with overdrive transfers torque to the pavement. No other drivetrain options are available.

Returning to its roots planted almost 40 years ago, the new Thunderbird is available in five exterior colors: Inspiration Yellow, Thunderbird Blue, Torch Red, Whisper White and Evening Black. Interior colors include Midnight Black (standard), Torch Red, Thunderbird Blue and Inspiration Yellow.

On the road, the small V-8 delivers plenty of power. Shifts are smooth and seamless. Handling is predictable, and solid and assuring at speed. Starting with the underpinnings from the vault-solid Lincoln LS sedan, the Thunderbird features an integral 76-millimeter rear cross-car brace and three bolted-on X-braces to improve structural integrity.

The four-wheel independent suspension includes the following hardware: short- and long-arm front suspension with coil springs and tubular stabilizer bar. Rear hardware also includes a short- and long-arm suspension with coil springs and solid stabilizer bar, mounted on an isolated rear subframe. Twin-tube, single damper shock absorbers perform the duty at each corner. Standard Michelin HX MXM 4 P235/50R17 tires communicate power to the asphalt.

Inside the cabin, modern renditions continue. Displays and controls of today are easy to use – with a nod toward the first T-bird. The driver enjoys a good view of the road. Leather seating provides good support and comfort. The center console supports two cupholders and an armrest with storage. The interior boasts of two power points designed to support electronic equipment such as cell phones or laptop computers.

Brushed aluminum accents on the doors and dashboard add to the interior experience. There is 1.8 cu ft of interior storage with a small rear shelf behind driver and passenger for carrying small items. Even with the top down, the Thunderbird has a decent trunk capacity of 6.7 cu. ft.

Ratings & specifications

Engine specifications are 252 hp at 6,100 rpm and 267 lb./ft. of torque at 4,300 rpm. EPA fuel economy numbers are 17 city/23 highway using premium unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are easy to reach and very clearly marked.

Standard safety/security equipment includes automatic headlamps, perimeter anti-theft system, remote keyless entry with illuminated entry, dual front airbags with passenger deactivation switch, side impact airbags, four-wheel anti-lock disc brakes with electronic brake force distribution and emergency trunk release. Premium adds all-speed traction control. (A $205 optional for Deluxe).

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2002 Ford Thunderbird convertible starts at $34,965 for Deluxe and $35,965 for Premium. Destination charge adds $530. Ford has set an annual production total at 25,000 per year, so buying a new Thunderbird will take timeliness on the consumer's part.

Boldly Upscale:

2002 Isuzu AXIOM SUV

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Designed to turn heads and quicken the pulse, the new Isuzu AXIOM is based on the ZXS concept vehicle originally introduced at the 1999 Tokyo International Auto Show. Named by a private citizen as a result of Isuzu's "Ultimate Naming Challenge" conducted on the Internet, the word axiom means a self-evident truth as defined in mathematical terms. As the automaker's new flagship vehicle in the United States, the AXIOM is a unique SUV for those who have arrived and know what it takes to get there.

From its louvered grille and cat's eye headlamps to the asymmetrical windows and body sides, AXIOM brings a new perspective to crossover SUV design. Its tapered body profile delivers a unique shape that is more than skin deep, enabling better fuel economy while enhancing the overall driving experience. Despite an outward appearance that suggests a leaner and more athletic SUV than popular Rodeo, AXIOM 's interior architecture offers more space.

Built by Subaru-Isuzu Automotive, Inc. (SIA) in Lafayette, Ind., the AXIOM is available in base and XS models and two- or four-wheel drive configurations. The AXIOM is equipped with a high output DOHC 3.5L 6VDI engine coupled to an advanced electronically controlled four-speed automatic gearbox with grade-sensing logic. This is the only drivetrain offered.

On the road, the six-cylinder prime mover is powerfully responsive, delivering gobs of power at all times – outstanding! The AXIOM is built using a steel box-section ladder frame with eight cross members to increase strength and reduce chassis flex. This makes suspension development and tuning more precise.

An independent double-wishbone front suspension is complemented by torsion bar springs, gas shocks and a stabilizer bar. The rear suspension hardware consists of a five-link design with coil springs, gas shocks and a stabilizer bar. Goodyear Integrity P235/65R17 tires keep the AXIOM well grounded.

Suspension hardware is combined with Isuzu's second generation Intelligent Suspension Control (ISC). Using a dedicated CPU to monitor sensors receiving input on vehicle speed, engine rpm, brakes with a chassis-mounted lateral g-sensor and g-sensors integrated into the shock absorbers, the CPU directs step motors, controlling shock valve blow-off points to adjust one of 17 different rebound and compression rates tuned for an explicit ride and handling profile.

The result is that brake dive, acceleration squat and body roll rates can be tailored in real-time, to produce the best possible combination of ride quality and handling performance for the widest range of driving conditions. ISC also enhances the performance of the Torque-On-Demand full- time four-wheel drive system.

The sculpted exterior does not reduce the available space inside the cabin. In fact, driver and passengers alike enjoy ample space that will coddle four adults very comfortably. Soft leather seating is very enjoyable for long distances and amply supportive. The second row seats are of the split flip and fold variety, adding flexibility and cargo space to the 35.2 cubic feet of available with the rear seats up. With the rear seats folded, the capacity increases to 85.4 cubic feet. The cavernous cargo area also has a power point.

Good displays and controls greet the driver with decent outward visibility. The center stack features a screen display/trip computer/compass that provides at-a-glance information. Settings for the audio system, inside/outside temperature and climate control are also featured on screen. A versatile center console features cupholders for front and rear passengers, a storage compartment that also contains a six disc CD changer and two power points.

Ratings & specifications

Engine performance numbers are 230 hp at 5,400 rpm and 230 lb./ft. of torque at 3,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy numbers are 16 city/20 highway using regular unleaded gasoline. Properly equipped, the AXIOM has a payload capacity of 1,031 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 4,500 pounds.

Standard safety/security equipment includes four-wheel anti-lock brakes, full size spare tire, dual front airbags, front and rear towing hooks, anti-theft system with keyless entry, limited slip differential, underbody skid plates and side guard door beams. XS adds fog lamps.

The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2002 Isuzu AXIOM starts at $25,985 for the base two-wheel drive up to $30,785 for the XS four-wheel drive model. Destination charge adds $545. Dealers report good supplies of the new AXIOM and there are no rebates.
