Skirmishes rattle truce

Yugoslav army warns of civil war

Milan Kucan

N.Y. Times News Service

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A fragile cease-fire in Yugoslavia's civil strife began to unravel quickly on Saturday less than 24 hours after it was hammered out with European Community mediators.

The command of the Yugoslav army put one of its senior officers on national television to warn that Yugoslavia stood "at the beginning of civil war."

Reading sternly from a prepared text, Col. Gen. Marko Negovanovic said that attacks were being carried out against units of the army and their families and that the republic of Croatia was mobilizing its military. He concluded by appealing to all Yugoslav citizens' "to stop driving the country into complete catastrophe."

The army's stern warning came after diplomatic efforts to resolve the crisis faltered badly, with a meeting of the eight-man collective presidency failing to take place on Saturday night as planned.

There were reports of continued skirmishes between Slovenian militia units and Yugoslav troops, with charges and countercharges that the other side was respecting neither the letter nor the spirit of the truce. Ljubljana television reported that the military set a 9 a.m. (2 a.m. CDT) Sunday deadline for Slovenia to stop hostilities, but the report could not immediately be confirmed.

Slovenia's President Milan Kucan and parliament met in an emergency session that continued early Sunday.

Yugoslavia's Deputy information minister, Mustafa Cengic, asked whether the accords were in danger of collapse, replied: "Yes, at several points we have a situation where there is fighting."

"Right now, at this moment, too many people are hotheads, not able to think wisely about the things they need to discuss," he said.

Under the accord brokered here overnight by European Community foreign ministers, the secessionist republics of Slovenia and Croatia agreed to suspend for three months their moves toward independence in return for a withdrawal of army

U.N. cooperative

BAGHDAD, Iraq — U.N. nuclear inspectors — who faced Iraqi bullets in their search for nuclear material — put their inspections on hold Saturday pending the arrival of high-level U.N. envoys to back them up. Iraq promised to cooperate with the inspectors from now on, but the head of the U.N. team said the Iraqis should have done so from the start. /10A

Habla music?

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn — Julio Iglesias knows music is the universal language, so he opened his performance here with 15 minutes of his greatest hits — in Spanish.

Iglesias

"How are we supposed to know what he's saying?" asked one young woman in line Friday night for a soft drink at the city's annual Riverbend Festival. To which the drink vendor — an older woman swaying in time to he music — replied, "It ain't the words, girl." Iglesias said he first heard of the city 26 years ago when he had to sing Glenn Miller's "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" on a television variety show. "I had to pronounce it about 20 times," Iglesias said. "Shat-too-noo-goo Shoo Shoo, Shat-too-noo-goo Shoo Shoo."

Victory sparks fireworks sales

Gulf War rekindles interest in 'Fourth'

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Fireworks vendors are anticipating a blowout July 4th, prompted by heightened patriotism following the Gulf War.

And that bursting spirit is reflected in the fireworks being sold.

Playing to the hearts of Americans are the likes of the "Patriot Missile," a more than 3-foot-tall rocket-shaped Scudbuster filled with an assortment of fireworks.

"We were counting that kids would want to keep that tube after the fireworks are shot," said Lee Gilder, owner of Plains Wholesale Fireworks, which manufactures and sells the product.

Gilder's company, which has fireworks stands across Texas and New Mexico, with about eight in the Midland area, also has the "Desert Storm," a camouflage-colored tube that shoots 37 blasts, and the "Patriot Defender," a rocket launcher shaped device capable of 20 explosions.

But fireworks of all sorts are expected to gain popularity because of the Gulf War victory.

"I think they (fireworks) are going to be more popular because of the high spirits now ... the patriotic feeling, people happy with the troops home," said Donna Reynolds, an operator at the Mr. W Discount Fireworks stand on State Highway 191, between Midland and Odessa.

And, fireworks remain popular because of that "little kid in everyone," Mrs. Reynolds said.

Among the big hits this year are anything colorful — such as red, green and blue sparklers for youngsters, and things that fly and pop, like "Texas Pop Rockets" and "Sky Monkeys" for teen-age

FOURTH FESTIVITIES

In Midland, the sky will light up above Angel Stadium Tuesday and Wednesday.

Fireworks displays will follow the Angels' games against the Wichita Wranglers each night. Each show will last about 25 minutes.

A 30-minute fireworks display sponsored by the Odessa Jaycees is set for 10 p.m. Thursday, Independence Day, on the University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus. A $3-per-car donation will be collected to finance next year's show.

In addition, the Jaycees will hold an Independence Day Parade, beginning at 10 a.m. Thursday from the UTPB campus to Permian High

Law enforcement and fire officials are planning to crack down on illegal use of fireworks within the city limits by issuing citations this July 4th.

"We will be actively enforcing the fireworks ordinance. It's the law and people need to know," said Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree.

City ordinance prohibits igniting fireworks within 5,000 feet of the city limits.

"It's against the law to even have them in the city limits," Petree said.

Those caught are subject to a fine not to exceed $2,000 and confiscation of the fireworks.

Bush says 'stay tuned' for nominee decision

Jones

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush said Saturday he hadn't decided on a successor to retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall but advised, "stay tuned."

Aides said Bush likely will announce his choice Tuesday, although there was some thought he could reveal his decision as early as Monday.

One official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the president had narrowed his Supreme Court list to "two or three individuals." But a second official said there were still four or five names, which included minorities, white males and at least one woman.

Texas justice draws heat in book on Randall Adams

DALLAS — Texas justice is sporting a new black eye, and it comes as no surprise that the target is the Dallas County District Attorney's office.

Unfortunately, the old regime is not around to face the heat.

Remember Lenell Jeter and Joyce Brown, convicted and imprisoned for crimes they apparently did not commit? Both were blacks caught up in an apparent rush to judgment.

Or worse.

City officials log many miles, $240,000 in expenses

■ Midland spends more per capita on travel than region's other comparably sized cities.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

They have traveled this year from coast to coast, hitting places such as Washington, D.C., Houston, Phoenix, Florida and Southern California.

But this was not a retired couple touring the United States in a recreational vehicle.

These were city managers, councilmen, other municipal employees — even the Odessa mayor — whose trips were paid for with city of Midland tax dollars.

City travel expenditures in 1989-90 were higher than in Odessa, Abilene, San Angelo and Amarillo but less than in Lubbock and El Paso.

However, based on 1990 census data, Midland spent more per capita on travel than the other six cities, reports from the cities show.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said trips made for professional development and required licensing and certification comprise the bulk of travel costs.

"Some of our employees hold state-mandated licenses and certifications," McGregor said. "They have to go to school to achieve and keep them."

Based on an 89,443 population, Midland City Hall spent $2.68 per citizen, well above the $1.49 per capita spending average among the seven cities surveyed.

Abilene, which has 106,654 citizens and spent $188,235, had a $1.76 per capita expenditure, while El Paso spent only 55 cents for each of its 515,342 citizens. El Paso's total travel budget was $285,738.

There was $1.67 spent for each of the 89,699 Odessans, with that city's travel budget totaling $150,000.

Richards backs budget cuts, lottery as deficit solutions

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said Saturday there will be no state income tax this year and that proposed budget cuts and a lottery will allow Texas to tackle most of its nearly $5 billion deficit.

"There is not going to be an income tax passed," Richards emphatically told the Texas Press Association at its annual summer meeting. "It just keeps coming back and keeps coming back like a song, and it is not going to happen."

Richards said a lottery, which is expected to generate about $600 million in its first year, has a better chance of passing in the upcoming special legislative session than it did earlier this year, when lawmakers rejected the measure.

"I cannot tell you whether it will pass or not. It will be a very, very, very close vote, though, if it doesn't pass," she said.

The governor said those opposed to a state lottery are more organized and vocal than those favoring it. She said without a lottery Texas is losing an opportunity for revenue because the state's residents buy lottery tickets elsewhere in the country.

"Certainly, the people of Texas ought to have an opportunity to vote on it," Richards said to applause from the group of about 300.

Meanwhile in Austin, a blue-ribbon committee appointed to study the state's revenue system said Saturday that Texas should adopt personal and corporate state income taxes and lower property tax rates by 1993.

The committee, named by Richards, narrowly voted to approve a proposal authored by state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, asking the Legislature to implement the income taxes and curb the state sales tax.

The Legislature is scheduled to convene in a special session July 15. Richards said lawmakers will first work on cuts and consolidation before coming up with a budget, appropriations and additional revenue.

Regarding the approximately $4 billion in budget cuts proposed by Comptroller John Sharp, the governor predicted there will be a lot of "squeals" from agencies and groups affected by the cuts. She asked the newspaper editors and publishers to help spread the word that "fundamental and systematic" changes are necessary in state government.

Trimming fat from state agencies is like going to war, she said.

"You have to go to war, and you have to go to war on the front pages of the newspaper and embarrass them so badly that they decide they want to change. It is a joke," Richards said.

State Comptroller John Sharp, right, defends the recommendations to save and raise revenues that his department has made to the Governor's Task Force on Revenue, chaired by former Gov. John Connally, left.

AP Laserphoto

Richards also predicted legislators will approve a revision in the state's franchise tax and possibly approve an increase in the gasoline tax, some of which the governor said she will insist be returned to local governments.

As for an income tax, Richards repeatedly said there will not be one.

"Here's what muddies the water," she said. "You have various people ... who come out and say, in their opinion, an income tax is the best thing to do. Well, I happen to disagree with them, and the difference is that I'm governor."

In her speech and in questions afterward, Richards also responded to critics of a private meeting on the budget that she, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, House Speaker Gib Lewis and other state officials held this week on Matagorda Island.

She said the meeting was similar to private office meetings the officials hold frequently in Austin. Richards said planning and coordination among top officials is necessary to handle the state's business.

"I thought that whole thing was a joke," Richards said of the criticism, adding sarcastically, "It's so much more fun to create controversy."

Among those opposing the private meeting are the Associated Republicans of Texas; the Texas Freedom of Information Foundation; and Texas Media, a coalition of seven news gathering organizations.

RATTLE: Planned negotiations fail to take place Saturday

troops to their barracks. The leadership of Serbia, Yugoslavia's largest republic, also said it would drop its objections to allowin Stipe Mesic, a Croatian, to assume the country's rotating presidency — a move that was supposed to have been ratified at the meeting of the presidency on Saturday night.

Slovenia and Croatia both issued independence declarations on Tuesday, after months of pressing in vain for a looser federation of Yugoslav states. The federal government responded by sending troops and tanks into Slovenia, attacking border posts, roadblocks, and Slovenia's main airport.

Dozens of people have been reported killed or wounded in Slovenia, while clashes in Croatia between Croats and ethnic Serbs have resulted in a handful of deaths.

Slovenian officials said on Saturday that in the t' ee days of fighting, 20 soldiers of the Yugoslav army were killed, plus 8 from the Slovenian side and 12 civilians. They said that among the wounded were 50 Yugoslav soldiers, 30 Slovene militiamen, and five federal police officers.

On Friday, the federal army put its casualties at 10 dead.

On Saturday, Kucan, said at a news conference that he had been termed a traitor for agreeing to suspend the republic's efforts to secede, and that he could not be sure whether the independence-minded Slovenian Parliament would approve the terms of the agreement. But he reaffirmed his support for independence, declaring: "There is no drawing back from what the Parliament adopted."

Slovenian officials on Saturday reported continuing efforts by the federal army to seize control of border crossing points, and there were reports of continuing movements of troops and tanks in the frontier region. There were no signs that army troops were returning to their barracks, as the truce required.

In Belgrade, Defense Ministry officials conceded that troops had not yet begun their withdrawal, but they said that that was because many units were still coming under fire from Slovenian militias without provocation. They charged that Slovenian militamen and civilians were hindering the evacuation of wounded soldiers and refusing water, electricity and supplies to federal army bases.

Early in the day, officials said the federal presidency was set to meet on Saturday night after the leadership of Serbia, under Slobodan Milosevic, the Serbian president, issued a statement dropping its opposition to the election of Mesic.

Serbia's refusal in May to accept Mesic was a major factor setting in motion the developments that led to last week's fighting.

But the Serbian statement said it could accept Mesic as chairman of the presidency only once Slovenia and Croatia gave evidence of good faith by a "real suspension of their unconstitutional decisions concerning secession." On Saturday night, the official press agency, Tanyug, reported that the meeting would not take place, saying that the Slovenian delegate, Janez Drnovsek, had refused to take part.

Feverish efforts were reportedly under way to hold the meeting later.

South Texas sends its regards

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for cloudy skies, with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms. The high is expected to be in the upper 80s, with winds from the southeast at 10-20 mph. Locally, heavy rain is possible in the afternoon.

Tonight will remain cloudy, with scattered showers and thunderstorms and a continued 30 percent chance of showers. The low will be in the low 70s.

Monday is expected to be mostly cloudy, with widely scattered showers and a few thunderstorms. The high will be in the low 90s.

Saturday's high was 89, 20 degrees off the record of 109 set in 1946. The low Saturday was 69. The record low for today's date is 56, set in 1982.

STATE

A disturbance in the upper levels of the atmosphere combined with tropical moisture Saturday to trigger showers and a few thunderstorms in Central and South Texas.

Heavy rains fell near the Gulf Coast with near 5 inches reported near Victoria.

Otherwise, skies were mostly cloudy but sunny in the West.

Winds were southerly at speeds of 10 to 15 mph.

Temperatures were slightly cooler because of the cloud cover and rain. Most highs were in the 80s. At mid afternoon, it was 80 degrees in Waco, 91 in Dallas and Fort Worth and 97 in El Paso.

Forecasters expect today to be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms, more numerous in South and West Texas. Locally heavy rain was possible over the Concho Valley and Lower Pecos Valley late tonight.

Associated Press also contributed to this report.

Midland statistics

MILES: Airport promotion adds to travel costs

(From 1A)

"Our council is real sensitive about travel, so we've cut back," said Peggy Hetzler, city of Odessa controller. "Probably for the last four years or so we've tried to keep that expense really low. The city doesn't feel that's an area where we want to spent a lot."

Here are the other cities, their population, total spending and per capita spending:

- Lubbock, 186,206, $273,370 and $1.47;
- San Angelo, 84,474, $105,869, and $1.25;
- and Amarillo, 157,615, $169,438 and $1.08.

At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth said that although most of Midland's trips were necessary, future travel needs closer scrutiny.

"There are times when we're sending a lot of people to a conference where we only need to send one," Faircloth said. "There's going to be some travel that is mandated, but you need to make sure you're spending your money more wisely.

"We're going to look real hard at travel. There are some things we could cut."

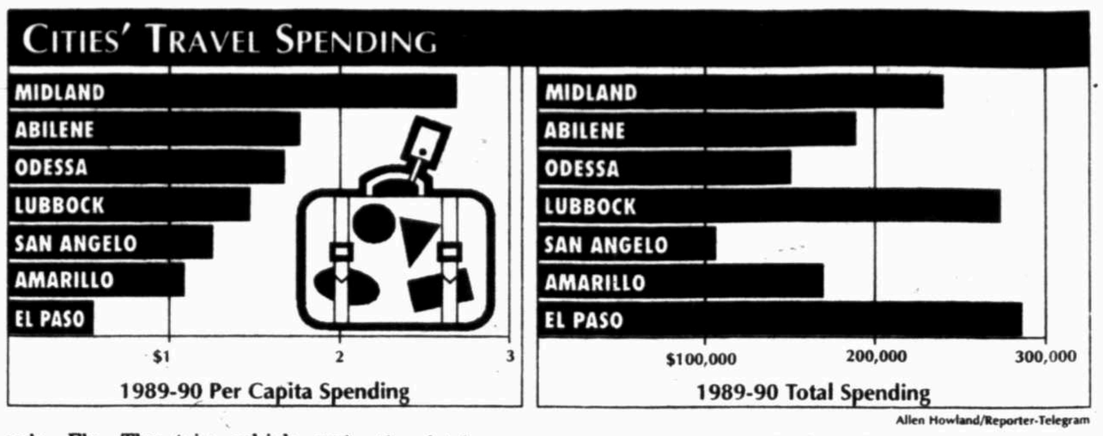

Although councilmen vowed to crack down on travel costs this fiscal year, the city spent $133,714 on trips in the first six months, city records show. About $120,000 was spent during the first six months of fiscal year 1989-90.

Trips made to promote Midland International Airport, lure new airlines and study the architecture of other airports added to Midland's increased travel costs in fiscal year 1990-91.

Almost $12,000 was spent from last October to March on airline tickets alone for groups of city officials and architects making visits to airports nationwide. They paid visits to airports in Southern California, Florida, Chicago, Atlanta, Phoenix, New Mexico and Washington, D.C.

Groups of up to 12 people made the trips, all but one of which did not require overnight stays.

In May, a group of six city officials toured airports in Chattanooga, Tenn., and Sarasota and Pensacola, Fla. The trip, which cost $6,900, required an overnight stay, which was spent in a Holiday Inn.

Allen Howland/Reporter-Telegram

Overall airport-related travel expenses this year also include $7,000 for training and registration fees for professional development of Midland International employees.

The airport's entire travel budget was $7,000 in 1989-90, when the city made fewer promotional visits and no trips to study designs of other airports.

Lubbock's total airport travel budget was $8,268 in 1989-90, while El Paso spent $24,721. Amarillo's airport-related trip costs were unavailable.

Midland's airport travel included promotional visits paid to American Airlines offices in Dallas. City officials also visited Phoenix-based America West Airlines officials in an unsuccessful attempt to keep the airline from pulling out of Midland earlier this year.

Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner made the trips to Phoenix, Dallas and Albuquerque, N.M., costing the city of Midland about $520. The Albuquerque trip was a promotional visit made to woo Mesa Airlines.

District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston said footing the bill for Ms. Bonner's trips was justified.

"Those trips were in conjunction with the promotion of Midland International," Johnston said. "I don't have a problem with that expenditure."

Faircloth also said he saw a need to include Ms. Bonner in promotional trips.

"I think it's helpful for the mayors of Midland and Odessa to do promotional things together," he said.

Ms. Bonner could not be reached for comment, but Ms. Hetzler said the city of Odessa has not paid for any trips taken by Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas.

McGregor said promotional travel is an essential tool in a quest to expand Midland International and recruit new airlines. More than $30 million in renovations, including a terminal replacement, have been planned for the next several years.

"You can't compare our airport travel budget to San Angelo's," McGregor said. "Their airport travel is not near what ours is."

Twelve travelers from Midland paid a one-day visit to the Orange County, Calif., airport. Thomas, three councilmen, two airport officials, architects and airport board members were part of the group.

"We identified that airport as one we really liked," McGregor said. "We took all those people, including councilmen and airport board members, because we wanted them to see it in person."

Total air fare for the trip was $3,096.

McGregor said all of Midland's travel for professional development, licensing and certification takes place in Texas.

During trips that require overnight stays, McGregor said, the travelers stay in moderately priced hotels and eat moderately priced meals.

During the first six months of this year, the city spent $85,378 on travel to maintain licenses or certification and another $36,591 for professional development. Trips for licensing and certification programs last year cost the city $142,396, while $61,738 was spent on professional development.

In 1989-90, city management trips for professional development cost $26,968, or about 11 percent of the year's travel budget.

The Midland Police Department has one of the largest travel budgets of all city departments. Almost all police travel expenditures went to professional development and state-required training.

The police travel budget was $61,162, about 25 percent of the city's travel costs. Another $13,897 was spent on training enhanced 911 dispatchers.

Travel spending for the city secretary topped $4,000, while municipal court, administrative services, legal and accounting offices each spent between $7,000 and $8,000.

Required training for firefighters cost the city $3,815, while another $2,690 went for training fire department dispatchers.

Planning and development officials spent $6,215, while information system employee travel cost $10,318 and engineering and traffic department trips cost $15,400.

About $12,000 was budgeted last year for community services travel, which included employees in parks, recreation, health and animal shelter operations.

NOMINEE: Announcement likely Tuesday, aides say

(From 1A)

Sources said among those on Bush's short list were federal appeals court judge Edith Jones of the 5th Circuit in New Orleans, a Texan; and Clarence Thomas, a black conservative federal appeals court judge in Washington who once was chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

If the president was anguishing over a choice, he didn't give any appearance of it as he bantered with reporters on the golf course.

Teeing off shortly after dawn, Bush told reporters he hadn't made up his mind.

"Not yet — 6 a.m. in the morning," he quipped.

Later, the president declined to say whether he would make his announcement this weekend.

"Remember the old expression, 'stay tuned?' Stay tuned," he said.

Asked if he planned to confer with anyone in Washington on his selection, Bush said: "Oh, I'm talking all the time to Washington, yes. But I certainly like being up here."

Deputy White House press secretary Judy Smith said Bush had no meetings on the matter planned in Kennebunkport through the weekend.

She said that didn't mean he wouldn't pick up the phone and make a few calls.

However, Bush went straight from playing 18 holes of golf to his speedboat to fish in the Atlantic. He also was having his boat safety inspected by the Coast Guard and planned to return to the golf course later in the day for another 18 holes.

Officials said the president discussed a few names Friday with White House Counsel Boyden Gray and Attorney General Dick Thornburgh before coming to Maine for his long weekend vacation.

Bush was scheduled to return to Washington on Tuesday, leaving again Wednesday for a two-day trip to the Midwest.

Bush had not ruled out an announcement here. But aides said that would require bringing the nominee to Kennebunkport and, while possible, would be a little more difficult to arrange in secrecy than doing it in Washington.

"But you know the president, he could do it at any time," one official said. "In fact, he's probably already decided on his choice."

Bush has said his decision "is near" and that he didn't feel under any pressure to name a black just because Marshall's resignation will deprive the court of its only black member.

However, sources said they thought it likely the president would name a black, a Hispanic or a woman to the bench.

The president has said he wants to make his selection quickly "so you don't get a lot of needless lobbying and pressure. And I don't want a lot of needless putting forward of names."

Bush has said he would start with names considered last year when he named David Souter to the court.

Some other jurists whose names have appeared in speculation are Ricardo Hinojosa, a federal trial judge in Texas, and Ferdinand Fernandez, a federal appeals court judge in Los Angeles.

Amalya Kearse, a black federal appeals court judge in New York City, also has been mentioned.

FIREWORKS: The big sellers are sky rockets, firecrackers boys, Mrs. Reynolds said.

"Adults want night shells, artillery shells — like they have at the shows," Mrs. Reynolds said.

But overall, the big sellers are the old standbys — sky rockets and "Black Cat" firecrackers, she said.

As fireworks become more popular, Mrs. Reynolds said she has noticed an increase in safety concerns by parents.

According to the Consumer Products Safety Commission, there were more than 12,000 people injured by fireworks last year in the United States.

Some tips to a safe Fourth of July for those who plan on using fireworks are:

- Do not allow fireworks to be used without adult supervision.
- Do not use fireworks in prohibited areas. Choose an open area away from homes, buildings, dry vegetation and flammable items.
- Place firecrackers on the ground before lighting them. Do not throw firecrackers.
- Do not put firecrackers in bottles, cans or under objects like clay pots.
- Rocket-type fireworks should be launched from the ground, not the hand, and pointed away from people.
- Do not throw sparklers in the air.
- Keep a bucket of water nearby in case of fire and to douse used fireworks.
- Do not handle or relight malfunctioning fireworks.

NO: City, county reported 75 fires from July 1-6 last year out for fireworks in the city, Cpl. James White said.

"We are asking for voluntary compliance not to use fireworks in the city and to use sound judgment in the county," White said.

Petree suggested an alternative to blasting fireworks.

"We encourage people to go see the public displays in lieu of setting them off," he said.

"But those that do use fireworks should go to a safe place and supervise their children," Petree said.

"Fireworks are something that need to be respected and used properly," he said.

The biggest danger of igniting fireworks is the threat of fire.

Last year, from July 1-6, 33 fires were reported in Midland and another 42 in the county.

In 1989, firefighters battled 144 fires in the city and county in the same period.

Nationwide, 51,600 fires are ignited by fireworks annually, resulting in about $36.4 million in property damage.

On the July 4, 1990, police received 98 fireworks-related complaints and issued 32 citations.

BOOK: Old regime is not around to face heat

victim of Dallas abuse, Randall Dale Adams, convicted of killing a cop and known to millions because of news accounts and the widely acclaimed film "The Thin Blue Line."

The book, "Adams v. Texas," appears this month but the case dates back to November 1976 when Adams, driving his brother's car, ran out of gas on a Dallas street.

Then 28 and a native of Columbus, Ohio, Adams was befriended by a 16-year-old misfit named David Harris. Harris was driving a car freshly stolen from a house he burglarized in his hometown of Vidor, near Houston.

According to Adams, the two attended a movie before Harris dropped him off about 10 p.m. at the motel where he shared a room with his brother.

Later that same night, a Dallas patrolman, Robert Wood, and his partner, Teresa Turko, stopped a car in west Dallas for driving without headlights. As Officer Wood approached the car, the driver rolled down the window and with no warning or provocation opened fire. All six bullets struck Wood.

Turko got off five shots as the vehicle sped away.

Wood, mortally wounded, was rushed to a hospital. He died in the same emergency ward where President Kennedy died 13 years and six days earlier.

Harris was back in Vidor the next night and watching television with two buddies when the station broadcast a news report on the shooting of Wood in Dallas.

The teen-ager boasted that he killed the "pig."

When his skeptical buddies challenged his story, Harris said: "I swear, man, really I killed him."

He took them outside, opened the car trunk, showed them a .22 caliber pistol and repeated his claim: "I killed the pig in Dallas."

A few nights later, Harris broke into a house trailer and then, at gunpoint, robbed a convenience store. He was arrested Dec. 5 by Vidor police and confessed to the crimes.

Some two weeks later, police learned that Harris had bragged about killing a Dallas policeman. Acting on a tip, they recovered a .22 pistol behind the home of one of Harris' friends.

Ballistic tests in Dallas identified it as the weapon that killed Officer Wood.

After questioning, Harris said the pistol was in fact one he stole from his parents and that it had been used to kill the policeman. But he said the gunman was a longhaired hitchhiker he knew only as Dale.

Through a pawn ticket dated Nov. 27, police tracked down and arrested Adams. Unlike Harris, Adams had a job, no criminal record and no motive for killing a policeman.

By contrast, Harris was driving a stolen car that night and carrying a stolen weapon.

It seems almost elemental that Harris, not Adams, would be the prime suspect. In fact, Officer Turko reported seeing only one person, the gunman, in the car that night.

But something went wrong.

"Hungry for a conviction, and hungrier still to enforce the death penalty, overzealous prosecutors and politicians seized upon (Adams) as the perfect suspect in a crime whose loose ends threatened to mar the reputation of a district attorney made famous for his prosecution of Jack Ruby," the publisher, St. Martin's Press, claims.

"With the help of a stacked jury, paid witnesses, and a judge of questionable impartiality, a prosecutor nicknamed 'Mad Dog' successfully argued that Randall Adams was a sociopathic murderer."

The district attorney was Henry Wade, a Texas legend now retired, and "Mad Dog" was Doug Mulder, his first assistant and heir apparent.

In short order, Mulder persuaded a jury not only to convict but assess the death penalty. Adams would remain on death row for 12 years while his lawyers, most notably Randy Schaffer of Houston, struggled to prove their client was railroaded.

"The Thin Blue Line" brought the case under national scrutiny and its producer got David Harris, now under death sentence for another killing, to all but confess to the Wood murder.

Adams was freed in 1989 after an appeals court set aside his conviction because of prosecutoral misconduct. Wade's successor, District Attorney John Vance, then dismissed the charges for lack of evidence.

With the help of a Virginia writing team, William and Marilyn Mona Hoffer, Adams tells his story painfully, if not artfully. And not always convincingly.

Overshadowing sympathy for Adams and his 12-year ordeal on death row is anger at a prosecutor who manipulated the judicial system to win a conviction.

It is a larger issue than Adams' guilt or innocence.

The appellate court found in effect that Mulder suppressed evidence, deceived the court and knowingly used perjured testimony.

"Trial courts," it observed, "must be able to rely upon the veracity of its officers. When deceit produces court rulings that have the effect of denying one a fair trial, then the conviction should be vacated."

Mulder, once the darling of the Dallas DA's office, is now in private practice, defending instead of prosecuting. And no doubt still denying any ethical malfeasance.

"It's a shame," he told D Magazine in 1989. "But Adams isn't the first murderer to beat the system."

Mulder certainly is entitled to his own view. But he didn't help his cause much when asked if the verdict would have been different had he defended Adams.

"Oh yeah," he said. "I'd have gotten him off. There's no doubt in my mind."

Vietnam wall opens Capitol troop salute

AUSTIN (AP) — The six-day Capitol Salute to Texas Troops began Saturday when about 300 people gathered at a replica of the Vietnam War Memorial.

"Although the recent Desert Storm conflict may be uppermost in our minds, the purpose of the Capitol Salute to Texas Troops is to remember and honor all Texas men and all Texas women who have served with distinction in our country's armed conflicts," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, organizer of the troop salute.

Mauro made the comments during a morning ceremony opening the memorial exhibit.

"To all those troops, to all the families ... we Texans offer our gratitude for doing a dangerous and a difficult job on behalf of all of us, and we mourn those who paid the ultimate sacrifice, and we welcome home those who returned, and we salute you all," Mauro said.

The Moving Wall, a half-size replica of the 500-foot-long Vietnam War Memorial, will be on display on the Capitol grounds through Tuesday. Volunteers will be on hand around-the-clock to help identify the names of the 58,175 Americans killed or missing in the conflict.

'The wall raised the conscious level that if you don't agree with the policy, you don't shoot the messenger, you take it up with the policy makers.'

— Rick Lenoir
Vietnam and Persian Gulf veteran

Rick Lenoir, a veteran of both the Vietnam and Persian Gulf wars, said it's appropriate to remember the monument's symbolism now.

"The wall is partially responsible for the reception Desert Storm veterans are getting," Lenoir said. "It raised the conscious level that if you don't agree with the policy, you don't shoot the messenger, you take it up with the policy makers."

A massive parade featuring military hardware, a tribute from Gov. Ann Richards and a fireworks display all are scheduled to salute the troops today, and a 320-foot yellow ribbon already embraces the Capitol dome.

Meanwhile, an Austin group that attempted to advertise against the troop celebration this weekend was rejected by a billboard company.

Austin Outdoor Advertising refused to display the message: "Why Celebrate? Feed Our Children. No More Wars," which the Foundation for a Compassionate Society sought to feature on a billboard along Interstate 35.

"What these people have attempted to do is attack the celebration," said John Brougher, owner of the billboard firm that returned the $200 fee to run the ad Saturday and Sunday.

Judge frees Biaggi from Texas prison

NEW YORK (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Mario Biaggi was freed from a Texas prison Saturday.

Biaggi left the U.S. Correctional Facility in Fort Worth at 10:30 a.m. CDT and flew home to New York where he was greeted by family and friends at his Bronx home, said his lawyer, James LaRossa.

U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley in Manhattan ruled Friday that Biaggi could be released for medical reasons.

Biaggi was forced to resign from office Aug. 5, 1988 after he was convicted on charges he took $1.8 million in stocks and cash from Wedtech, a now-defunct South Bronx defense contractor.

The 10-term congressman from the Bronx started serving an eight-year sentence on April 10, 1989, and would have been eligible for parole in December.

Biaggi, 73, has heart problems and a bad leg that caused him to fall four times in prison, breaking ribs and a wrist.

LaRossa said that when he spoke to Biaggi by telephone at 10:30 p.m. Friday, "his voice was stronger by the moment and happier by the moment."

State workers' health costs rise

AUSTIN (AP) — State employees' health expenses are rising this fall, but workers don't know how much they will have to pay until the Legislature determines the state's share, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Rates for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Texas are expected to increase an average of 14 percent statewide, while the 21 health maintenance organizations serving employees across Texas will average a 10 percent increase, the board of trustees for the Employment Retirement System has been told.

"We're disappointed it has to go up, but insurance costs are going up for everyone in public and private sectors," said Lane Zivley, executive director of the Texas Public Employees Association.

"We just hope the Legislature will see the pinch and have a contribution for the insurance," Zivley told the Austin American-Statesman.

The Legislature usually appropriates funds to cover part of insurance premiums for employees.

To continue its current practice, budget authorities estimate the Legislature would have to contribute an additional $200 million during the two-year budget period beginning Sept. 1, the Statesman reported.

"State employees are already paying too much for insurance," said Mike Gross, and organizer with the Texas State Employees Union. "The state should pay for the whole increase."

The state is faced with an estimated $4.7 billion shortfall between revenue and budget requests for the 1992-93 biennium. The Legislature is scheduled to convene July 15 to write a budget, and lawmakers will decide then how much of the increase the state will absorb for employees.

State Comptroller John Sharp — who unveiled a $5.2 billion plan to close the budget gap through savings and additional revenue — also suggested a 3 percent pay raise.

Without legislative action, "the insurance increase is so much it will negate the pay raise," Zivley said.

Belt buckle saves officer from bullet

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — A Garland police officer shot and killed an assailant after the officer's belt buckle slowed a .38-caliber bullet fired by one of two men he was chasing.

Officer Lanny Orman, 30, was shot in the abdomen early Friday by a man who was not immediately identified.

Orman was treated at Baylor University Medical Center, where he was in satisfactory condition Friday night.

"The bullet went right through the buckles and that's what prevented him from being seriously injured," said Baylor spokeswoman Lisa Wren. "The bullet was slowed down, so it really didn't go that far."

Police spokesman Allan Peck said the bullet destroyed the buckle on Orman's standard-issue "Sam Browne Belt," where officers carry their guns, handcuffs and extra ammunition.

The inch-deep wound would have been much worse if the buckle had not slowed it down, Peck said.

"That belt and the buckle spared him," Peck said. "It's quite a heavy belt and it has two layers of leather. I don't want to make it sound like he wasn't badly hurt, but the belt did contribute to minimizing the damage — greatly."

Orman, a 4-year police officer and a member of the special tactics unit, was shot about 4 a.m. after a half-mile chase, Peck said.

According to a police report, he was among officers investigating a call about attempted auto thefts. Police saw two men trying to break into a vehicle, and a chase began.

The men fled across a field in Garland, a Dallas suburb, and began shooting at officers. After Orman was shot, he fatally wounded the suspect, police said.

He has been wounded twice in incidents involving automobiles. He was stabbed in the back two years ago while trying to recover a stolen car, Peck said.

"Everyone knows Officer Orman to be very proficient in his duties," Peck said. "He is among the elite officers of our department."

Customs seizes $1.5 million in Colombian drugs

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Customs agents seized 70 pounds of cocaine, worth more than $1.5 million, off a Colombian vessel docked in the Port of Houston, officials said Saturday.

The ship, the Cartegena de Indias, arrived at the Houston Port from Buena Ventura, Colombia, and departed late Friday for New Orleans. The ship's legitimate cargo was coffee and yeast.

The 70 pounds of cocaine was found in a gym bag in the provisions elevator of the ship.

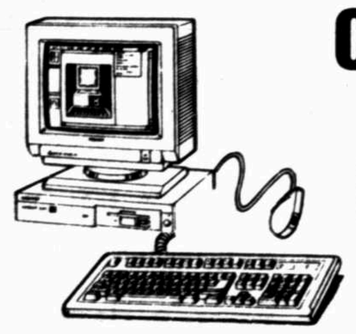

Customs spokesman Brad Veloz said officials had received information that cocaine was going to arrive on a Colombian ship, which led them to the Friday seizure.

For Southern Californians, life goes on in wake of 6.0 quake

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Merchants tacked up "Yes We Are Open" signs Saturday and a couple scrambled to move their wedding from a damaged church as Southern Californians cleaned up after a strong earthquake.

Two people died and more than 100 were injured Friday morning by the quake that registered 6.0 on the Richter scale. Hundreds of buildings were damaged. Property losses were estimated at $18 million.

In a geological rarity, there were no aftershocks through Saturday afternoon.

"Usually with this magnitude, the aftershock sequence goes on a bit," said Linda Curtis, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Geological Survey in Pasadena.

With other quakes, such as the 5.5 magnitude Upland quake of 1990, there were dozens of aftershocks.

Gov. Pete Wilson said the state likely will declare an emergency for damaged areas to provide homeowners some property tax relief. A decision was expected by Monday, after inspections by state authorities.

More than 300 buildings were damaged in Pasadena, Monrovia, Sierra Madre, Arcadia and other communities, authorities said.

An unrelated 3.6-magnitude earthquake shook the Barstow area Saturday morning, Curtis said. No damage was reported in Barstow, 100 miles northeast of Los Angeles, authorities said.

Foothill suburbs east of Los Angeles took the brunt of Friday's quake, which was centered 7½ miles northeast of Sierra Madre in the San Gabriel Mountains. Damage in Pasadena was estimated at $12 million.

A 34-year-old woman was killed when a steel beam fell at Santa Anita Race Track. Another woman, 68, died of a heart attack officials said was brought on by the quake.

Nearly all the reported injuries were minor.

It was the strongest quake to hit the region since the Whittier Narrows quakes of 1987, which measured 5.9 and 5.3, and killed eight people.

Outside Pasadena's damaged Westminster Presbyterian Church, where four weddings had been scheduled Saturday, Scott Hensley handed out maps to an alternative church chosen for the marriage of his friend Doe Hain.

"Last night she was pretty calm," Hensley said of the bride. "They're a very take-it-in-stride family. They deal with it. They don't panic."

Inside the 1927 structure, the quake had shattered giant stained-glass windows and sent an 8-foot stone turret plummeting from the spire, through the roof and 50 feet to the floor. The church was empty at the time of the quake.

The 100-year-old Sierra Madre Congregational Church also was badly damaged.

The temblor rippled out from a long-dormant fault seven miles beneath the San Gabriel Mountains.

Sununu draws from political fund to cover expenses

CONCORD, N.H. (NYT) — Money from a $230,000 political fund left over from John H. Sununu's tenure as governor of New Hampshire is helping cover his personal expenses as White House chief of staff, and payments from the fund have stepped up in the last eight months, public records show.

New Hampshire law allows money raised for state races, like Sununu's for governor, to be used for the personal expenses of a candidate or a candidate's family. When Sununu went to Washington in 1989, however, his aides said the balances in the fund would be used only for political purposes.

The Sununu Committee paid for a variety of political, personal, and official trips by Sununu or his family to Boston, Newark, New Hampshire, and Florida, among other places.

But now Sununu's financial disclosure report shows that, with much of Sununu's personal holdings of more than $1 million tied up in real estate, the New Hampshire fund, which is called the Sununu Committee, has been tapped.

A review of the Sununu Committee's records, filed here with the New Hampshire secretary of state, shows that money from the fund began covering Sununu family expenses in July 1990, when a $3,768.00 check was drawn to the United States Treasury for "travel and miscellaneous expenses."

Since November, there have been another four such payments to the United States Treasury, totaling $3,232.

According to Sununu's financial disclosure report, filed in May with the White House and released in June, the committee paid for a variety of political, personal, and official trips by Sununu or his family to Boston, Newark, New Hampshire, and Florida, among other places.

The treasurer of the Sununu Committee, Edwin D. Duvall, a longtime business and political associate as well as a neighbor of Sununu, said in an interview that the committee's disbursements were handled by Paul Collins Jr. Collins, who was finance director of the committee when Sununu was governor, is now a special assistant to the president for political affairs.

Collins did not return a phone call from a reporter on Wednesday seeking comment, but in an interview in February 1989 he discussed what would happen with the committee's leftover money.

"When the governor decided last May he would not be running for a fourth term, which is what he would have used this money for, he said he would let the public know whatever happened to the money," Collins said then.

Jury convicts La. federal district judge

NEW ORLEANS (NYT) — A federal district judge, on trial here on charges that he accepted a bribe, was convicted on Saturday at the federal courthouse where he has served since 1978.

A 12-man federal jury found Judge Robert F. Collins guilty of three counts of bribery, conspiracy, and obstruction of justice. His co-defendant, John H. Ross, 59, a well-known New Orleans urban planner, was also found guilty of the same charges.

Each man faces a maximum penalty of 25 years in prison and a fine of $750,000. Sentencing was set for Sept. 6.

The jury deliberated nine hours on Friday and Saturday. When the decision was announced, there was surprised silence in the courthouse.

"We were stunned at the speed of the verdict," said Kern Reese, Collins's lawyer and one of a group of friends and family who rallied around the judge at the courthouse on Saturday. "They had asked for a great deal of evidence to review."

Reese said an appeal was planned. In the meantime, "the judge will not hear any more cases," Reese said. Collins was not available for comment.

The case has attracted wide attention here, and particularly in judicial and political circles, because of the prominence of the defendants. A former civil rights lawyer, Collins was appointed to the federal bench by President Jimmy Carter. He is the highest-ranking black judge in Louisiana and was one of the first blacks to be named to the federal district court in the Deep South.

The judge's race, and that of his longtime friend, Ross, has been an issue in the case from the beginning. Defense lawyers asserted in pre-trial motions and in statements to reporters that the investigation and prosecution were tainted by racial prejudice.

The Justice Department has denied that race played a role.

The jury of nine women and three men was made up of nine whites and three blacks.

Federal prosecutors charged that Collins and Ross split $100,000 paid by Gary Young, a convicted drug dealer, to obtain a light sentence in a case that was pending in federal court. When he took part in an investigation of Collins, Young was facing a prison term on charges of smuggling marijuana.

Report: Mormon Church worth $8 billion a year

PHOENIX (AP) — The Mormon Church, which does not disclose its finances, collects at least $4.3 billion a year from its members and another $400 million from its many enterprises, a newspaper reported.

Nearly all that $4.7 billion is spent furthering religious goals, but the Utah-based church also invests several hundred million dollars a year in real estate and securities, and in expanding its businesses and investments, The Arizona Republic reported in Sunday's editions.

The newspaper said the figures were conservative estimates based on an eight-month investigation.

Accurately assessing the church's finances from the outside is impossible, however, because Mormon leaders in 1959 stopped releasing financial reports even to their own members.

Instead of a financial report, church officials assure members that their contributions are managed "prayerfully and with inspiration." Worldwide membership is 7.7 million, including more than 1 million in Utah.

The diversified corporate organization built by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is apparently free of financial fraud or personal wealth-building among top officials, the newspaper said.

Compared with sales of publicly traded companies, the church's $4.7 billion would place it about 110th on the Fortune 500 list.

The church's business subsidiaries generate an additional $4 billion a year in sales, which, if counted in the total, would make the Mormon Church an $8 billion-a-year corporation, comparable with Union Carbide and Borden Products, the Republic said.

The Republic said it was unlikely it had identified all the church's companies, business names or affiliated holdings. Financial data also are incomplete, partially outdated and sometimes contradictory.

But the newspaper said it was able to conclude that the Mormon Church:

—Controls at least 100 companies or businesses that generate about $400 million a year through direct contributions, dividends, trusts or investment income.

—Never borrows money to finance its acquisitions. It pays cash, using a portion of its members' contributions, called tithing, and its business income.

—Has become one the nation's largest private landowners with holdings in all 50 states.

—Has a stocks and bonds investment portfolio in excess of $1 billion.

—Appoints spiritual leaders who can double as business leaders to oversee real estate, communications, tourism, insurance and education operations.

2 die in air show re-enactment of Pearl Harbor

KEYSTONE HEIGHTS, Fla. (AP) — Two air show planes simulating the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor collided and crashed Saturday, killing both pilots.

At least 1,200 spectators witnessed the crash about 150 feet above Keystone Air Park, said Capt. Tim Martin of the Clay County Sheriff's Office.

The victims were part of the Valiant Air Command, a group of four pilots and planes that fly mostly in Florida and Georgia, Martin said.

The Beechcraft T-34 military training planes, painted with Japanese markings, were flying four abreast over the airport grounds and turning left when the two aircraft on the right side collided, Martin said.

Roh addresses Stanford campus

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — South Korea President Roh Tae-woo stole a line from President Bush Saturday, saying his nation will help the United States establish a "new world order."

"The bonds between our two countries have been so strengthened and solidified in all areas that we have now become indispensable partners," Roh said in a speech sponsored by the conservative Hoover Institution at Stanford University.

"Korea and the United States will combine efforts toward establishing a new world order," said Roh, scheduled to meet Bush Monday in the first official state visit by a South Korean president since 1965.

Contamination hampers U.S. plan to sell or lease shut military sites

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The need to clean up toxic contamination at military installations selected three years ago to be shut is causing serious trouble for the Defense Department's program for converting these sites to civilian uses.

These problems have emerged on the eve of a vote for a second round of military base closings.

The military industry has produced the most toxic pollution in the country and virtually every military installation has been extensively contaminated by the hazardous byproducts of activities like repairing aircraft and making weapons and by the disregard for safe practices for disposing of waste.

Military officials estimate it will cost more than $1 billion and take until the end of the decade to restore the environment at just the 86 bases selected in 1988 for closing.

Those costs will offset the $5.6 billion in savings over 20 years that the government had hoped to gain from turning over the bases to private companies or communities.

And the problems affecting the initial round of closings, which were scheduled to be completed by 1995, are virtually certain to become issues with the second round of bases selected on Sunday by the 1991 panel.

In addition to the expense, a thicket of legal and regulatory issues and the concern of potential buyers and managers that they may be liable for damage are emerging as significant barriers to the transfer of the properties and causing concern in the communities where they are situated.

"If we don't get these problems worked out, the base closure process will be a disaster for my community and 100 others," said Robert W. Holcomb, the mayor of San Bernardino, Calif., where Norton Air Force Base is scheduled to be shut in 1994.

The military industry has produced the most toxic pollution in the country and virtually every military installation has been extensively contaminated by hazardous waste

"The base will sit fallow, a no man's land, with no opportunity for our people to find employment."

The intent of closing military bases was to save the government the cost of operation and maintenance. The 1988 base closing commission also said the economic effect on communities would be minimized if the military hastened the process of transferring the properties for use in other enterprises.

Neither goal is working out as the panel envisioned. The problem at Norton and at every other installations is that the government left a mess.

The problems were caused by more than four decades of environmental neglect.

The haphazard disposal of toxic waste in lagoons, leaking underground storage tanks and dump sites caused acres of ground to become saturated with hazardous chemicals that also seeped into undergroud water supplies.

Among the toxic constituents are heavy metals from electroplating, deisel and jet fuel, solvents and degreasing agents from operating machinery and chemical byproducts from munitions manufacturing.

The three military services last week estimated that cleaning up more than 1,800 U.S. installations — including bases, depots, munitions plants and other military centers — will cost $30 billion and take at least a decade, and most experts believe it will take much longer than that.

The slow pace of restoration, though, is just one of the problems.

Another is that federal law prohibits the Pentagon from selling any property on bases until contamination on the entire site is cleaned up. The law also appears to cover leasing arrangements, say Pentagon lawyers.

Thus, even if only 50 acres of a 5,000-acre base are contaminated, the Pentagon is unable to transfer the pristine property until the polluted land is restored.

In Portsmouth, N.H., executives and military authorities negotiating the transfer of Pease Air Force Base are encountering the statute's affect. Pease was the first base on the 1988 list to be closed, taking with it more than 4,000 military and civilian jobs.

For months, state and community leaders, Portsmouth business leaders and a development agency have been negotiating with Deutsche Airbus, the German subsidiary of Airbus Industrie, which wants to use the base for maintenance operations that would employ more than 1,000 people.

But the deal is being hampered by the prohibition against selling, and perhaps leasing, property until all of Pease is cleaned up, which would take years.

Iraq agrees to cooperate with U.N. nuclear inspectors

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — U.N. nuclear inspectors who faced Iraqi bullets in their search for nuclear material put their inspections on hold Saturday pending the arrival of high-level U.N. envoys to back them up.

Iraq promised to cooperate with the inspectors from now on, but the head of the U.N. team said the Iraqis should have done so from the start.

On Friday, Iraqi soldiers fired shots in the air as U.N. inspectors filmed a truck convoy suspected of carrying the nuclear material and processing equipment.

The incident drew an angry response from President Bush, who raised the possibility of a military strike on Iraq's nuclear facilities.

Bush, speaking to reporters Saturday at his vacation home in Maine, accused Saddam Hussein of "cheating and lying" on the disclosure of Iraq's nuclear sites and material, and said he was skeptical of Baghdad's assertion it would cooperate with U.N. observers.

He also suggested the incident would set back Iraq's efforts to persuade the U.N. to lift an 11-month-old trade embargo. The Iraqi government had been hoping that growing humanitarian pressure on Bush and other allied leaders would force a relaxation of the embargo.

Meanwhile, a separate 21-member U.N. team was to travel to Baghdad on Sunday to begin destroying Iraq's ballistic missiles, mainly modified Scuds like those used against Israel and Saudi Arabia during the war.

The destruction of Iraqi missiles with a range of more than 90 miles was mandated in the Persian Gulf War cease-fire agreement approved in April by the U.N. Security Council. Under it, Iraq also agreed to fully disclose its nuclear and chemical weapons facilities.

The head of the U.N. team overseeing the missile destruction. U.S. Army Col. Douglas Englund, said Saturday in Bahrain that his group would proceed to Baghdad as scheduled despite problems the other U.N. team has encountered.

Late Friday, after Bush raised the threat of U.S military action, Saddam issued a directive late Friday ordering Iraqi officials to allow U.N. inspectors to see what they wished "without hesitation," the Information Ministry said.

Told Saturday of the reported directive, David Kay, deputy leader of the U.N. inspection team in Baghdad, responded:

"I wish they'd had that order yesterday. That's the kind of order that should have been issued in the first place under the Security Council resolution."

The inspection team said Hans Blix, the director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency, was scheduled to arrive in Baghdad on Sunday for talks on the team's problems.

Blix is to be accompanied by U.N. Undersecretary-General Yasushi Akashi and Rolf Ekeus, chairman of the U.N. Special Commission overseeing Iraq's weaponry.

In an interview with The Associated Press at U.N. command headquarters here, Kay said he did not know the whereabouts of the truck convoy the team tried to photograph on Friday. He said U.S. intelligence satellites probably were tracking it.

According to Kay and U.S. intelligence reports, the convoy of up to 100 trucks was believed to contain crates of material and equipment for manufacturing weapons-grade enriched uranium.

Kurds reject Baghdad's autonomy plan, say talks will continue

SARDAWA, Iraq (AP) — Kurdish leaders have turned down an Iraqi plan granting autonomy to their people, saying the proposed autonomous zone is not big enough and other conditions are not acceptable, officials say.

Massoud Barzani, head of the Kurdistan Front, an umbrella group of eight major Kurdish parties, said he would go back to Baghdad for more negotiations. He said the issue of control of the oil-rich city of Kirkuk was still open to negotiation.

Barzani had been authorized by the leaders to negotiate and sign an autonomy agreement that would end decades of Kurdish revolution and subsequent oppression by the central government.

"We will tell the Iraqis that the preconditions are unacceptable," said Jalal Talabani, leader of the second-biggest group in the front, the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

Both he and Barzani spoke Friday in interviews with The Associated Press.

The decision appeared to be a setback for Barzani, who had said after talks in Baghdad earlier this month that an accord was imminent. He said Friday that "it still needs further discussion."

It was unclear whether the Kurds' decision would slow the withdrawal of U.S. and allied troops from northern Iraq, where they have been providing security for Kurds who fled to Turkey and Iran in April after a failed uprising.

The coalition forces were scheduled to leave Iraq by mid-July. But allied leaders are discussing positioning a rapid-reaction force on the Turkish side of the border to discourage Saddam Hussein from striking at the Kurds.

Barzani, who is also leader of the dominant Kurdistan Democratic Party, said the Kurds mainly objected to the fact that an Iraq-proposed autonomous Kurdish zone would not include several Kurdish cities, notably oil-rich Kirkuk.

The Kurds already have agreed to let the central government handle the city's oil revenues.

"It may not be included in the autonomous region as such but I hope it will be run by a joint administration ... with the admission that it is a Kurdish city despite being outside of the autonomous region," Barzani.

Members of the Kurdistan Front also rejected Iraqi demands that the Kurds cut their ties with the West and side with Saddam's Baath Party against its enemies inside and outside Iraq.

The Iraqi proposal also keeps police authority in Saddam's hands, and requires anyone seeking political office to swear allegiance to the Baath Party, said Barahan Sali, a spokesman for Talabani's group.

"Such an agreement won't inspire the confidence of the Kurdish people. Unless they feel safe, it is not worth the paper it is written on," said Barham Sali, a spokesman for the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, the second largest Kurdish party.

Talabani said the Kurds were seeking greater autonomy and a new constitution to be drawn up by a freely elected parliament.

The eight parties met separately Saturday to discuss their own changes to the proposal. The Kurdistan Front leadership will meet again on Sunday to discuss a final draft, and when and with whom Barzani will go to Baghdad for new talks.

He said the rebels had sent word to Baghdad about their decision.

Ahmed Jaafari, an official of the al-Daawa Party, said Saddam was trying to contain the conflict with the Kurds so he can quiet the Shiite rebellion in the south. Then he likely will go after the Kurds again, Jaafari said.

U.S., Soviet accord proves elusive at strategic arms talks

N.Y. Times News Service

Amid fears that the nearly completed Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty may die stillborn, U.S. and Soviet negotiators resumed talks in Geneva last Wednesday on the resolution of some technical snags blocking agreement.

Unless a final accord is reached soon, some experts fear, a major opportunity will be lost.

The treaty would sharply reduce ballistic missile warheads — the Soviets' by 48 percent, the Americans' by 35 percent — and institute verification procedures that would include surprise inspections of missile warheads, bombers and storage sites.

After nearly a decade of sporadic discussions, the two sides reached almost complete agreement one year ago during the summit meeting of Presidents Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

But since then, Soviet domestic upheavals and U.S. preoccupation with the Persian Gulf have diverted high-level attention from the treaty.

Experts close to the negotiating process agree that impetus toward agreement has been lost, and as a result, a few technical issues have been allowed to bog down the final phase of negotiations.

A State Department spokesman said Friday that no cut-off date had been set for the Geneva meetings, but that continuation would depend on assessments of progress. Although many aspects of the talks are secret, U.S. officials say two technical problems are getting special attention.

The thorniest of these has to do with telemetry — the two-way radio linkage between a ground base and an intercontinental ballistic missile as it flies toward its objective.

This link allows operators on the ground not only to send instructions to the missile but to receive information from the missile's sensors that report on performance throughout its flight, including the ejection of its nose-cone "bus" — the platform from which up to 10 conical warheads are launched, one at a time, over test ranges or enemy cities.

For three decades, the two sides have tried to eavesdrop on each other's missile telemetry, which is a rich source of intelligence about the capabilities and mission of a missile in flight.

The treaty would sharply reduce ballistic missile warheads — the Soviets' by 48 percent, the Americans' by 35 percent — and institute verification procedures.

But U.S. intelligence specialists who rely on "National Technical Means of Verification" — information from satellites and intercepted Soviet radio transmissions — confront serious handicaps in interpreting Soviet missile telemetry.

One problem is that missile telemetry is usually encoded to a greater or lesser extent, denying intelligence interpreters crucial technical information.

Another is that Soviet telemetry links are often broadcast using such feeble radio signals that distant U.S. monitors are unable to listen effectively.

Richard R. Burt, who until his resignation last March was the chief U.S. negotiator for the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, regards the problem as one of "asymmetry."

"The Soviets can glean details about our missiles and tests from many open sources, including our unclassified technical literature," he said in an interview.

By stationing intelligence-gathering ships off the coasts of Florida and California during missile launch tests, and in South Pacific test range impact areas, Soviet experts can listen in on U.S. missile telemetry.

Soviet missile tests, by contrast, are conducted between launch and impact sites deep inside Soviet territory, relatively distant from U.S. monitors.

"We depend much more than they do on being able to monitor missile telemetry," Burt said, "so this is an important issue for us."

Some of the disagreement seems to stem more from pride than real security issues.

A scientific expert close to disarmament negotiations, who insisted on anonymity, said that telemetry data is broadcast in different "formats" by the two sides.

Soviet negotiators have balked at U.S. insistence on changing their telemetry formats "merely for the convenience of American snoops," he said.

A second disagreement centers on "downloading" — technical jargon for the removal of some of the warheads normally carried by an intercontinental ballistic missile.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Texas Rangers were trembling Friday morning in their Southern California hotel, but not in fear of the California Angels.

Huson

An earthquake registering 6.0 on the Richter scale shook not only the Anaheim area, but also the whole region.

"The first thing I did was put on my pants," shortstop Jeff Huson said. "I didn't really know what to do, but I wasn't going to be caught running out of the hotel in my underwear."

Pitcher Mike Jeffcoat had no idea what was going on.

"My first reaction was that Kenny (Rogers) and (Scott Chiamparino) had somehow gotten the key to my hotel room and they were shaking the bed just to mess with me," Jeffcoat said. "By the time I realized what was wrong, the worst part was over. I turned over and went back to sleep."

Manager Bobby Valentine and Vice President-General Manager Tom Grieve were in the San Francisco area when a 7.0 quake occurred during the 1989 World Series.

Sox scuffle

BALTIMORE (AP) — Left fielder Mike Greenwell and shortstop Luis Rivera of the Boston Red Sox nearly brawled in the dugout over who should have caught a fly ball during Saturday's game against the Baltimore Orioles.

Greenwell denied that punches were thrown, but an unidentified photographer quoted by The Boston Globe said he saw the two players shouting obscenities and attempting to fight in the dugout.

Greenwell and Rivera did not appear to be hurt by the scuffle, which reportedly started in the dugout in the second inning and spilled into the runway.

Texas high school officials have shaken up the Class 5A playoff picture for the second straight year, but once again, the best championship race will involve the state's smaller schools, according to Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine.

The magazine, now available, ranks the Huntsville Hornets as the No. 1 team in the state, followed by defending state champion Aldine.

Both should enter the playoffs in Division II, the new name for the Regular playoff bracket inaugurated last season,

Angels win 12-10 slugfest

■ Midland wins a 12-10 decision over Wichita despite being out-hit 16-13.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

It was an eighth inning that Wichita relief pitcher Howard Hilton will try to forget, but probably won't be able to for a long time.

Salmon

Hilton was sent in to protect a 7-5 lead with six outs to go Saturday night at Angels Stadium, but something funny happened on the way to the win column — the Midland Angels scored seven runs to go ahead 12-7 and eventually win 12-10.

Hilton gave up just three hits in the inning, but he walked four, two intentionally, threw two wild pitches that allowed runs to score and was called for a balk that moved Midland runners fron first-and-second to second-and-third.

What may have had Hilton rattled, though, was an Angel offense that has now scored 72 runs through the first eight games of the Texas League's second half. And despite being out-hit 16-13, the Angel offense scored the runs when it needed them, and in bunches.

After opening the first half with a abysmal 9-24 record on its way to a 30-38 finish, Midland now finds itself in the unfamiliar sutuation of being at least a .500 ball club. The Angels are 4-4 in the second half, while the Wranglers are also 4-4.

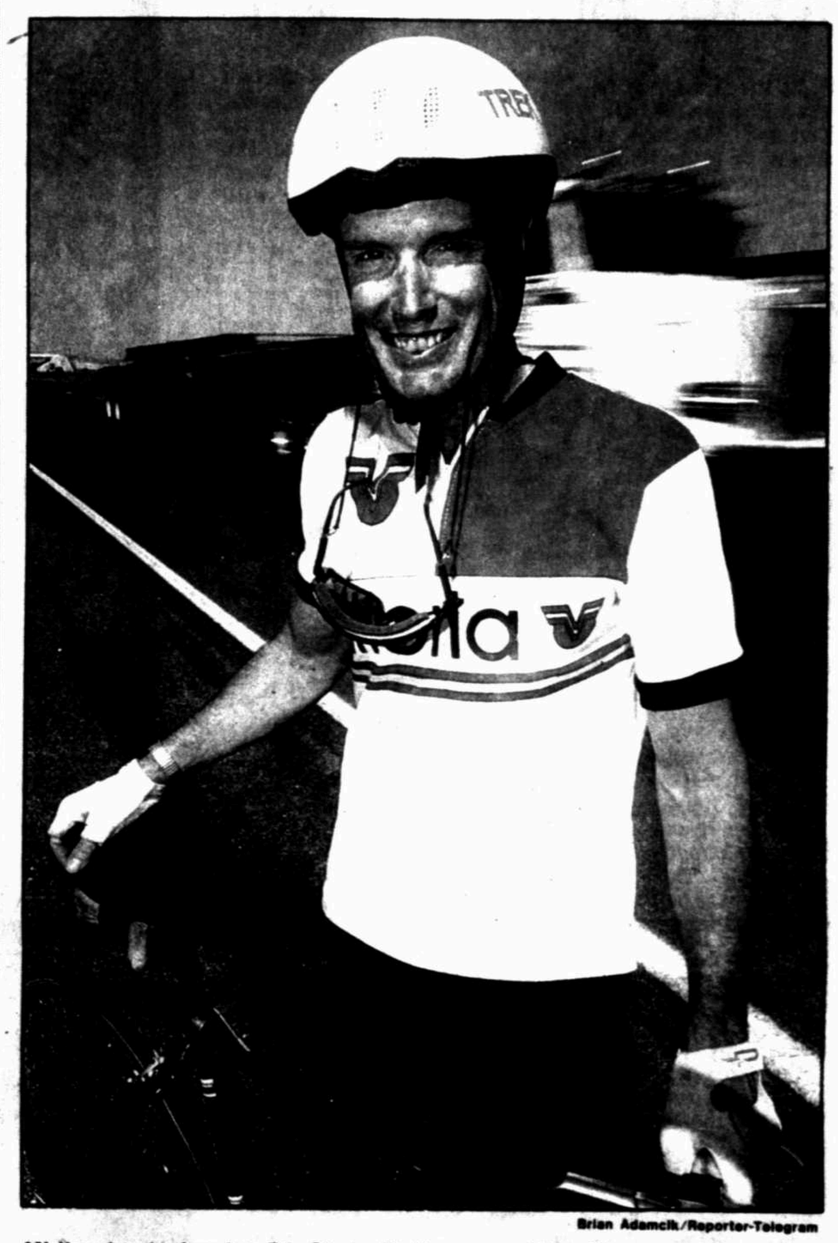

But according to rightfielder Tim Salmon, who hit a triple and double to go 2-for-3 and score three runs, the success is not rooted in fear.

"I don't think we're afraid to get off to a bad start, it's just that right now we're playing good ball," he said. "I feel with the guys we've got in there now that we are really a potent offense. Every game it's just a matter of when it (a scoring spree) is going to happen."

"We just decided we're not going to give up. We are hitting the ball right now and playing to the last out," said corner infielder Mark Howie, who manned third base Saturday and had two base hits in going 2-for-5.

And while the two offenses were motoring to double-digit scores, it became painfully obvious that pitching was neither team's strong suit, at least on this night.

Midland veterinarian Dr. Steve Betton sees bicycling as an invigorating, yet peaceful sport.

One with nature

■ The sport of cycling can be simultaneously invigorating and relaxing — just ask Dr. Steven Betton, who embarks this week on an 850 mile ride to Colorado.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Dr. Steven Betton leaves on vacation this week. And for the 43-year-old Midland veterinarian, it is the trip of a lifetime.

Betton will strap a small overnight-type bag over the back of his bicycle and take off for Colorado, cycling what he hopes will be up to 120 miles per day.

Betton plans to be in Colorado a week from today. He'll then be joined by several other Midland cyclists for several trips around the western part of the mountainous state before returning home in late July.

"Cycling gets you away from the hustle and the bustle," Betton said of why he enjoys his sport so much. "You can while away an hour or two on a bicycle before you even know it.

"And when you're done each day, there's always a sense of accomplishment, and achievement of a goal."

Betton, who took up cycling a mere three years ago after trying other forms of fitness training, said it is the first sport he's been involved in "where the actual pursuit becomes more of a goal than the physical fitness."

McEnroe

Nasty Johnny forges ahead

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe, raging at a linesman and at wasted break points, stormed to a second-round victory over qualifier Sandon Stolle today as the sun finally came out at Wimbledon.

Defending champions Stefan Edberg and Martina Navratilova scored straight-set victories, while Jimmy Connors lost only eight games to Aaron Krickstein for his 100th Wimbledon match.

Boris Becker, Andre Agassi and Jim Courier also won on the tournament's first rainless day, but men's seeds

Wimbledon '91

Pete Sampras and Goran Ivanisevic were upset. Women's sixth seed Jana Novotna also was ousted.

McEnroe, a three-time champion, blew 13 break points in the opening two sets of his 7-6 (7-5), 5-7, 6-0, 7-6 (9-7)victory over a player whose father he had met on court 15 years ago.

McEnroe vented some of his anger after two shots in the second set that he thought were out.

"Oh come on. That ball was clearly outside the line," he yelled after the first disputed point. "Which ball were you watching? That's a break point. It didn't hit any chalk, it didn't hit any chalk at all."

Connors, the winningest man in Wimbledon history, defeated Krickstein 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

Becker, a three-time champion and the second seed this year, defeated Peter Lundgren 7-6, 7-5, 7-5.

Agassi, the fifth seed, won 7-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 against Goran Prpic and fourth seed Courier, the French Open champion, struggled to a 6-4, 7-6, 2-6, 4-6, 6-3 victory in an all-American encounter with Jim Grabb.

Other winning men's seeds were Michael Stich, Karel Novacek and Guy Forget.

Stich defeated Diego Nargiso 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 6-2, and Forget finished off a 2-6, 7-6, 7-5, 6-7, 6-4 victory in a match suspended by darkness on Friday.

Karel Novacek defeated Javier Sanchez of Spain 6-0, 6-1, 7-6 (7-2).

Dykes, former players remember '64

COAHOMA — There is always an ending to every beginning, but Coahoma was celebrating beginnings Saturday with a special reunion that honored Texas Tech University head football coach Spike Dykes.

Williamson

You see, Dykes didn't start by coaching Red Raiders in the bright lights of the Southwest Conference. Beginnings for Dykes was Coahoma, Texas, a Class 2A school just 10 miles east of Big Spring.

Coahoma gave Dykes a chance to be a head coach for the first time in 1964. He was there for only two years before heading off to Belton, but they were two championship years that the Bulldog faithful still hold dear in their hearts.

Dykes had only two assistant coaches in those days. One was Don Fuqua and the other was Bernie Hagins, who is now an assistant coach at Midland High. Hagins became head coach at Coahoma when Dykes left and continued the new found winning tradition by winning three more titles in his six seasons.

Other Midlanders were on Dykes' first team. Eddie McHugh, now head coach at Lee Freshman, rushed for 1,800 yards in 1964 as a senior, scored 108 points, was named All-State, All-America and played in the Texas High School All-Star game.

Midland's Mike Hinsley was the middle linebacker in both of Dykes' seasons while Midland's Phil Cochran was just a sophomore in 1964. Big Spring state representative Troy Fraser was also on the team.

And I guess we can count Eddie Wolski as another Midlander. Wolski played under Dykes at Coahoma and coached under him at Midland Lee. He now lives in Austin, toiling with the Texas High School Coaches Association. He was an All-District tackle as a senior in 1964 at Coahoma.

"Well, we were in a weak district," is all Wolski will say about All-District honors.

But Coahoma wasn't weak. Thirteen of Dykes' Bulldogs went on to play some form of college football.

McHugh says that Saturday's gathering, which was put together by Hinsley, is the result of a team swimming party at a tank eight miles east of Coahoma after the 1964 season.

"We all went swimming and then we cooked weiners over a camp fire," McHugh remembers. "While we were around the camp fire, Dykes told us that we should do this again in 25 years in order to remember a special season. That's why we're here."

Nearly every former player at the reunion agreed that Dykes brought two things to the Coahoma Bulldogs — discipline and the absolute necessity that you believe in each other.

Dykes probably didn't have a coaching philosophy in those days. This was his learning experience, too. "Shoot, I was probably dumber than the kids back then," Dykes says. But it was going to be done his way.

Wolski remembers the first team meeting with Dykes.

"Spike came in the first day and sat us down. He told us we didn't have much time to get ready for the season. He started telling us how many sit-ups, push-ups, 100s, quarters and half-miles we were going to have to do.

"Shoot, I was one of the biggest guys on the team and that all sounded like a lot of work, I made some kind of snide remark, and Dykes looked at me,

Midland's Reggie Williams (1) throws his batting helmet in disgust after being thrown out at second base in Saturday's win over Wichita.

ANGELS: Howie goes 2-for-5, Angels come up to .500 on half

(From 1B)

Don Vidmar, he of the 7-2 record, started the game for the Angels but was chased after eight hits and five runs in 4⅓ innings. Mike Butcher was pulled after 1⅔ scoreless innings, then Clemente Acosta and Mark Zappelli struggled as each gave up two earned runs in 1⅓ and 1⅔ innings of work.

Even though Zappelli gave up four hits and three runs in the top of the ninth, he got the win to add a 2-2 record to his seven saves.

The Wrangler staff fared even worse. Between Hilton, who took the loss to go 1-1 for the year, and starter Kerry Knox, Wichita issued nine walks and tossed three wild pitches. Knox lasted five innings and left with the score 5-5. Rafael Chavez lasted two innings before the Wranglers scored two runs in the top of the eighth and Hilton was called upon to close the door.

Hilton started bottom of the eight by getting Kevin Davis to fly out to right field, but then the roof fell in. Reggie Williams drew a base on balls and Damion Easley singled to left to put runners on first and second. The as Hilton was readying to fire the first pitch to Howie, he was called for the balk. Howie singled to left-center to drive Williams in to make Wrangler lead 7-6, and moved to second while Easley took third as the throw was made to the plate.

Wichita decided to intentionally walk designated hitter and clean-up man Walt McConnell to load the bases and set up a double play, but the plan backfired when Hilton walked in the tying run with Salmon at the plate.

"It was a tough at-bat (the count was full on the fourth ball). But I figured the way he was throwing, nitpicking for the corners with his slider, it might be easier to walk. I just decided to lay off the ones that weren't strikes," Salmon said.

From there, it was downhill for Hilton. Don Barbara stood at the plate and watched an 0-1 wild pitch go by, allowing Howie to score and McConnell and Salmon to advance.

Once again first was open, and Barbara was immediately walked intentionally. Larry Gonzales followed with a sacrifice fly to center field that sent McConnell home and made the score 9-7. Then Bobby Jones hit a single to left with runners on first and second, but Wichita's Vince Harris let the ball get by him for a two-base error, allowing Salmon and Barbara to score and Jones to take third. The final run scored as Jones went home on another Hilton wild pitch.

DYKES: Coach feels at home in Coahoma

pointed his finger and said, 'Fat boy, you need to get out of this room if you don't like what you hear in here.'

"That got everyone's attention in a hurry," Wolski says. "I knew right then and there that I wasn't the head football coach at Coahoma. He has always been great at discipline. You just didn't realize what he was trying to do when you're a kid.

"But after we started winning early and had some success, his word was law. No one ever questioned him."

Hagins said, "Spike was a good disciplinarian. Every kid had his head shaved before the season without question. They did what you told them. In fact, Coach Fuqua told Hinsley once, 'What you need to do, Mike, is go home and eat raw meet to get mean.' The next day Spike gets a call from Hinsley's mom asking if he should be eating raw meet."

"Coach Dykes was a great coach," Hinsley said. "He was like a second father. He took me under his wings several times. I tried to do everything he asked of me, except maybe the required 1,000 push-ups a day on the training chart that Coach Hagins put out. I don't think I've done a 1,000 push-ups in my life. But I did try the raw hamburger."

But even Dykes' strict discipline had its dangers.

"In one game, we were deep in our own territory," McHugh remembers, "and Spike told quarterback Dewayne Allen to run a 55-dive and then give me the ball on the next play for a quick kick. Spike told him if he didn't run those two plays in order, he wouldn't play again that season.

"Well, I busted one for about 50 yards on the 55-dive and Allen called for the quick kick on the next play. I yelled, 'We don't have to quick kick now,' but Allen said Coach said to and that was that. I kicked the ball out of the stadium. Coach Dykes was furious, but Allen told him that he did what he was told to do."

Dykes, himself, doesn't think things have changed all that much since he was in Coahoma. This university coach knew every name and seemed to be in his own backyard.

"I've seen bigger crowds and been in games that drew a lot more publicity, but a game anywhere is big to the kids who play it," Dykes says. "Everything is relative in your life. It was a big deal to us in Coahoma to play in a playoff game in a stadium that had restrooms. It was great."

Morrison claims trapshoot championship

Staff Report

Mack Morrison scored an even 200 to capture the zone championship division Saturday at the Texas Trapshooters Association Zone II Singles Championships, and Andy Smith posted a 199 to top the open field at the Midland Shooters Association.

Other zone winners included Charlie Kirkpatrick with 194 in the AA division; D. Criag Smith with 194 in A; O'Brian Blakeney with 188 in B; Steve Haskell with 183 in C; Brandon Dickson with 177 in D.

Here are the divisions which required shoot-outs to determine winners at Saturday's Texas Trapshooters Association Zone II Singles Championships.

ZONE AA, 194s: Charlie Kirkpatrick, 25; Curtis Anderson 23; Skip Trammell, 22; Kevin Salcedo 22

ZONE A, 192s: D. Craig Smith, 25; Louis Kellett

ZONE B, 188s: O'Brian Blakeney, 23; Don Radtke, 22.

ZONE D & OPEN, 177s: Brandon Dickson, 23; Joshua Stelling, 22; George Leatham, 21.

OPEN AA, 198s: Harold Neely, 24; Noris Newberry 22.

OPEN C, 188s: Tommy Cantrell, 22; Lawrence Harmon, 20.

Ruidoso races rained out

Associated Press

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Heavy rainfall forced Ruidoso Downs to cancel its 12-race card Saturday because of unsafe riding conditions, officials said.

"It rained for at least an hour," said James McKnight, the assistant publicity director at Ruidoso Downs. "You couldn't even see more than 50 yards for a while."

About an hour before the first post time, the downpour flooded the track, and the jockeys refused to ride, officials said.

Racing was slated to resume Sunday at Ruidoso Downs with the first post time at 1 p.m. et and the third to a 32-team Regular bracket. Three teams will still advance this season from each district, but the largest team in terms of average daily membership, regardless of won-lost record, will go to a 32-team Division I bracket. The other two enter a 64-team Division II bracket.

Like last season, when Regular champion Aldine was the top-ranked team, many of the state's best teams will go the smaller-school route. Of the preseason top five, four teams — No. 1 Huntsville, No. 2 Aldine, No. 4 Arlington Lamar and No. 5 Dallas Carter — are likely to play in Division II. No. 3 Houston Lamar is the Division I favorite.

Huntsville returns three Super Team players — quarterback Chuck Clements, running back Edward Ordaz and defensive lineman Ceaser O'Neal. Aldine welcomes back quarterback Eric Gray, who set a Class 5A rushing record in last year's title victory, and defensive lineman Ervin Briley.

Regional favorites in the two divisions are:

Region I: Arlington Houston in Division I and Arlington Lamar in Division II.

Region II: Longview in Division I and Huntsville in Division II.

Region III: Houston Lamar in Division I and Aldine in Division II.

Region IV: Converse Judson in Division I and San Antonio Marshall in Division II.

Dallas Roosevelt, which split two games with eventual state champion Wilmer-Hutchins last season, is Texas Football's No. 1 selection in Class 4A. The Mustangs will be led by the blue-chip offensive line duo of Keith Chiles and Jonathan Price and wide receiver Gary Adams.

Austin Reagan, which went 12-1 in its first Class 4A season and returns veer quarterback Louis Hickman, follows at No. 2. West Orange-Stark, the last 4A team to win back-to-back titles, in 1986-87, follows at No. 3. Burkburnett, which went from 0-9-1 in 1989 to 10-4 last fall, is No. 4, with McKinney at No. 5.

Navasota gets the nod in what should be a tight title race in Class 3A. The Rattlers have one of the biggest lines in the state, led by 290-pound Ervin Bennett, and two fine linebackers, Brian Sauls and William Shiflett.

Gladewater, led by Super Team nose guard Stonie Clark, weighs in at No. 2, followed by Cuero, defending state champion Vernon and Fairfield.

Schulenburg, which lost a 41-36 thriller to eventual state champion Groveton in last season's semifinals, is Texas Football's preseason favorite in Class 2A. Versatile Marc Tidwell, who plays linebacker and quarterback, and wide receiver Kelvin Thompson are key faces for the Shorthorns.

Celina, coached by veteran G.A. Moore, is No. 2, followed by two-time defending state champion Groveton at No. 3 and Abernathy at No. 4. Perennial candidate Grand Saline starts at No. 5.

The brother combination of quarterback Shae Scott and tight end Jim Bob Scott returns at Garden City, Texas Football's preseason No. 1 team in Class 1A. James Soles, who rushed for 2,174 yards last season, also returns for the Bearkats.

Thorndale, the 1989 champion and last year's preseason favorite, begins the season at No. 2, followed by Wheeler, the 1987 champion, and Italy. Valley Mills, which lost in the 1990 semifinals to Munday, is No. 5.

Fort Hancock, which has won three of the last four state titles in six-man, is the preseason favorite to add a fourth championship. Covington is ranked No. 2, followed by Lazbuddie, Bynum and Meadow rounding out the top five.

Three of last season's preseason No. 1 picks — Aldine in 5A, Vernon in 3A and Groveton in 2A — went on to win state championships, the most in Texas Football's 31-year history.

For only the second time in more than 20 years, the annual Southwest Conference writers' poll conducted by Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine came up with a split decision.

The University of Houston received 15 first-place votes to seven for the University of Texas. But the Longhorns received 101 points to 94.5 for the Cougars on the magazine's four-point scale, which gives four points for a first-place vote ranging down to one point for fourth place.

The annual Texas Football poll also featured an airtight race for third and fourth places. Baylor received 72 points to 71 for Texas A&M, and both received six first-place votes.

Texas Tech polled one first-place vote and eight points while Arkansas totaled two points and Rice 1.5 points. None of the writers picked Southern Methodist or Texas Christian to finish in the SWC's top four.

Writers selected Houston quarterback David Klingler as the SWC's probable offensive player of the year, Baylor lineman Santana Dotson as the top defensive player, Texas running back Butch Hadnot as the top sophomore and Texas A&M running back Greg Hill as the best newcomer.

Crosstown foes Shawn Walters of Arlington Lamar and Jeff Godley of Arlington Sam Houston top the annual high school Super Team selected by Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine.

Texas Football, which is already on newsstands around the state, has rated the state's top high school talent annually since 1960. This year's magazine rates the Top 300 recruiting prospects in the state, topped by the 24-member Super Team.

Walters rushed for 2,264 yards last season as Arlington Lamar advanced to the Regular Class 5A title game, and Godley ran for 2,564 yards as Arlington Houston made it to the Big School semifinals.

They lead the Super Team first-team offense along with Huntsville quarterback Chuck Clements, the younger brother of Texas' Steve Clements. He threw for 2,919 yards last year.

The first-team receivers are Mercury Hayes of Houston Washington (31 catches for 597 yards) and Trency Clough of Regular 5A champion Marshall (59 catches for 1,292 yards). Michael Hendricks of Baytown Sterling (25 catches for 458 yards) is the first-team tight end.

First-team linemen are Desi DeLatorre of Irving Nimitz, Danny Wilson of Huntsville, Ronnie Price of Deer Park and center K.C. Jones of Midland Lee.

Lee head coach Earl Miller has called Jones, All-District 4-5A last season, the best high school offensive lineman he's ever coached.

Teammates Alton Maiden, a defensive lineman, and Sherrod Wyatt, a defensive back, of Dallas Carter lead the Super Team first-team defense selected by Texas Football. Wyatt picked off 12 passes last season.

Maiden is joined in the defensive front by Ceaser O'Neal of Huntsville, Ervin Briley of Regular 5A defending champion Aldine and Otis Grant of Fort Bend Willowridge. John Walters of Richardson Lake Highlands and LaRance Shaw of Waco are the linebackers.

Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini fires a serve to France's Karine Quentrec during their second round match at Wimbledon Saturday.

TENNIS: 10th-seeded Ivanesevic sent home

(From 1B)

The Frenchman won 7-5, 6-7, 4-6, 6-1, 12-10.

Gabriela Sabatini, Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, Mary Joe Fernandez and Jennifer Capriati were among 11 seeded women advancing to the third round.

McEnroe, who said the disputed line calls led to a loss of concentration that cost him the second set, defeated his second generation of the Stolle family. As a teen-ager, he beat three-time Wimbledon finalist Fred Stolle in a 1976 tournament.

"It doesn't get any easier, that's what you learn," McEnroe said. "You have to work even harder, and in most cases you get even less out of it."

The younger Stolle, whose father was doing commentary for an Australian TV station, said playing McEnroe at Wimbledon was a thrill.

"He's someone I've always looked up to," Stolle said. "I think the guy's just an unbelievable tennis player. To play and to be on Centre Court with him is something I've dreamed of."

U.S. Open champion Sampras, the eighth seed, lacked consistency in his 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4 loss to Derrick Rostagno. Sampras was overpowering on his serve at times, but also suffered through bouts of wildness.

Ivanisevic, the 10th seed and a 1990 semifinalist who had mocked British tennis before this year's tournament, lost 4-6, 6-3, 7-6, 6-3 to Briton Nick Brown, ranked 591st in the world.

Asked if the match had changed his opinion about British tennis, Ivanisevic said: "Not really."

Edberg breezed 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 over David Pate and Navratilova won 6-3, 6-1 over Briton Amanda Grunfeld.

Sabatini, seeded second, struggled in the early part of her 6-4, 6-2 victory against Karine Quentrec.

Fourth seed Sanchez Vicario defeated Amanda Coetzer 6-4, 6-1 and Fernandez, the fifth seed, won 7-6, 6-1 over Audra Keller.

Capriati, seeded ninth defeated Radka Zrubakova of Czechoslovakia, 6-2, 6-3.

Also winning second-round matches were Zina Garrison, Anke Huber, Amy Frazier and Judith Wiesner.

Garrison, the seventh seed and a finalist last year, defeated Elena Pampoulova 6-3, 6-1. Frazier, seeded 14th, beat fellow American Robin White 7-5, 6-4.

Thirteenth seed Huber defeated American Tami Whitlinger 6-2, 6-1 and Wiesner, seeded 16th, won 6-3, 6-0 against doubles specialist Larisa Savchenko.

Today's dry weather came too late to save a century of tradition.

Connors sets mark

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Jimmy Connors became the first man to play 100 singles matches at Wimbledon, and he celebrated by winning in straight sets.

Connors, 38, demolished fellow American Aaron Krickstein 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 on Saturday to move into the third round of a tournament he won in 1974, at age 21, and in 1982, when he was 29.

Connors downplayed the milestone.

"It was business as usual," he said. "If you start thinking about things like that you put extra pressure on yourself. You don't need pressure like that."

If it hadn't been for repeated rain delays, Connors probably would have reached the century mark three days ago. He waited five days to play his 99th Wimbledon match against Finland's Veli Paloheimo before beating him in straight sets Friday.

Connors, who had a wild card into the tournament, missed much of last year after an operation to repair a wrist injury and slipped down the ranking because of inactivity.

Reaching the third round of the French Open, he took 19-year-old Michael Chang to a fifth set but had to pull out because of exhaustion.

Players usually have a rest day between games but the rain delays have meant they are playing almost every day.

Putter abandons LPGA co-leader

Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — Ayako Okamoto has been an average putter this year, but not in the traditional sense of the word.

"Total, it's average because it's either real good or real bad," Okamoto said Saturday after experiencing one of those afternoons that brings the average down several notches.

One day after she could do no wrong on the greens, Okamoto had all sorts of trouble with her putting stroke. Missing at least a half-dozen putts of 10 feet or less, Okamoto shot a 2-over-par 73 to fall into a three-way tie at 6-under 207 with Pat Bradley and Meg Mallon after three rounds of the LPGA Championship.

Okamoto missed several easy birdie putts in parring each of the first 16 holes. While her steady pace allowed her to maintain the two-shot lead she started the day with, it didn't enable her to put some space between her and the field.

Then, on No. 17, she missed a 4-foot par putt. She followed that by three-putting on 18 — botching a 5-footer for par in the process — to lose the lead she established on Friday, when a sizzling putter helped her tie a course record with a 64 on the 6,246-yard Bethesda Country Club layout.

"I knew the bogeys were going to come in this round somewhere, but I also hoped there would be some birdies along the way," she said. "I had some birdie putts, but none went in."

Barb Bunkowsky fired a 70 to move within one shot of the leaders and defending champion Beth Daniel and Deb Richard were at 209. Amy Alcott shot a 71 and was three strokes back.

Betsy King had four birdies on the back nine for a 67 that put her in a group of four at 211. Shirley Furlong had a 73 for 212.

Okamoto's round was virtually the opposite of the one she played on Friday, when she made every makeable putt after experiencing trouble with her drives. On Saturday, her driver was hot and her putting was not.

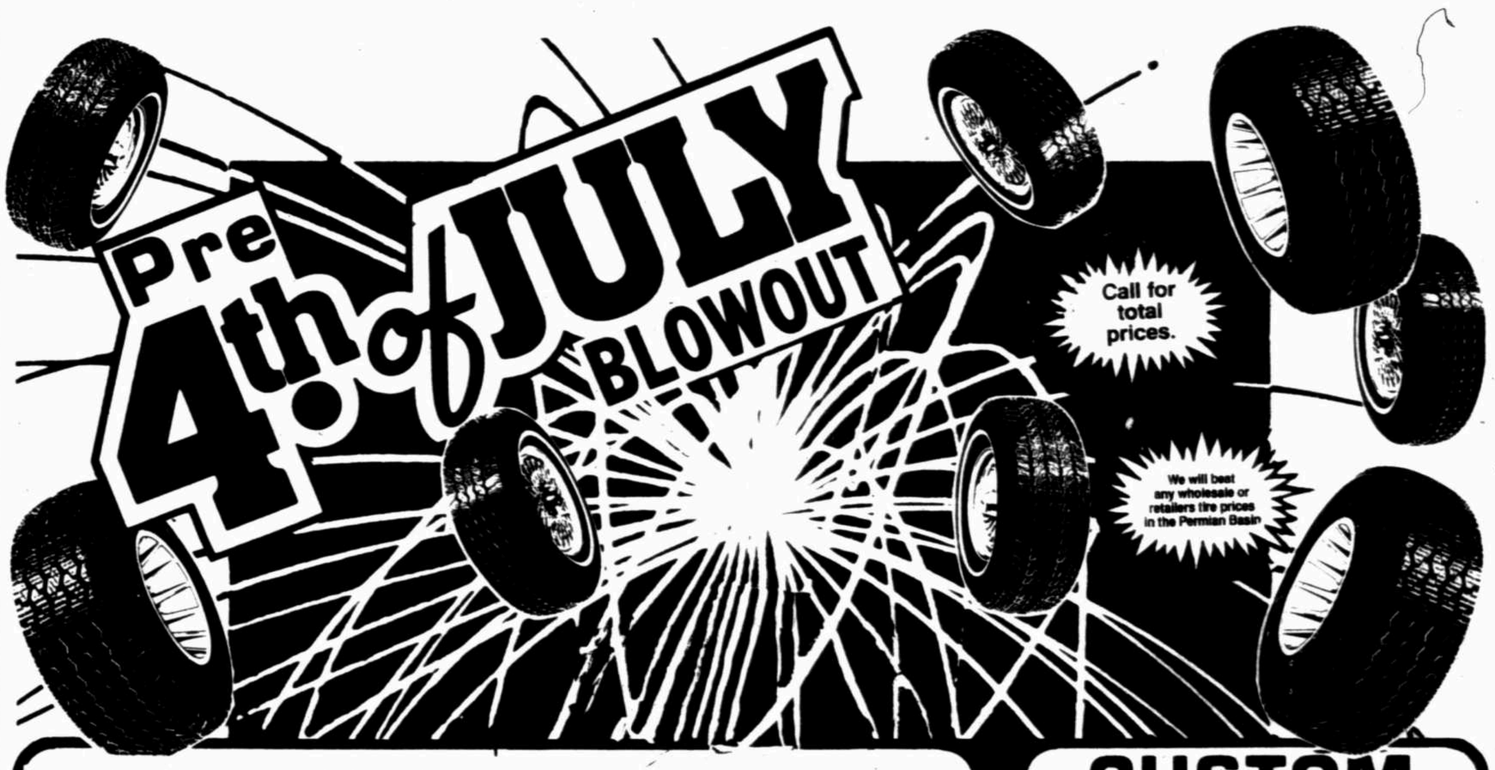

"The difference? I wish I knew," she said. "If I did, I could play under par every time."

Bradley birdied Nos. 2 and 4 to forge a tie atop the leaderboard with Okamoto, but she dropped back on the next hole after she put a ball in the trees and took a bogey. Bradley remained one shot back until she reached No. 9, a 365-yard par-4.

She put her drive under a tree and hit out onto the fairway. Her approach hit the front fringe, and from there she blasted her putt 10 feet past the hole. Two more putts left her with a double bogey and a three-shot deficit at the turn.

Bradley parred No. 10, but a bogey on 11 dropped her four shots back and in danger of dropping out of contention. But an eagle on 12, in which she hit a 4-wood within six feet of the pin, brought her back within two strokes. She then parred the final six holes.

"Sometimes you have days like today," Bradley said. "It just shows, even scrambling, you can stay in the hunt. That eagle on No. 12 gave me a little spurt of energy."

Older workers learn new tricks

American industry has long operated on the theory that the sooner aging workers are put out to pasture the better. Early retirement is considered not only humane but smart. It makes room for new people with new ideas. And, as everyone supposedly knows, older workers have trouble handling new technology, are not as efficient as younger ones and are inclined to balk at taking inconvenient assignments.

Now a study just published by the Commonwealth Fund demolishes that old saw "you can't teach an old dog new tricks." The fund analyzed three companies, two in the U.S. and one in Britain, that deliberately sought out workers over age 50. The results were myth-breakers. Older workers did fine on computers, rarely balked at assignments and stuck with the companies far longer than the younger workers.

In 1986, faced with recruitment and turnover problems, The Days Inns of America began hiring workers over 50 as reservation clerks. The demands sounded like an older worker's nightmare. The telecommunications equipment was sophisticated, 25,000 calls were logged daily and the offices operated 24 hours a day.

So what happened? Older workers took two weeks to master the computers, the same as younger workers. Training and recruiting costs averaged $618 per older worker, $1,742 per younger worker. The over-50 workers stayed on the job an average of three years versus one year for the others. Older workers spent a minute more on each call. But they booked more reservations.

In Britain, the results were even more startling. B&Q, a huge hardware and home appliance chain, hired only workers over 50 for a new outlet, then pitted its performance against five of its other stores. The over-50 store was 18 percent more profitable than the others. Employee turnover was six times lower.

In today's aging but healthier America, 50 is hardly over the hill. But the study emphasizes that even those over normal retirement age have less and less desire to ride into the sunset on a golf cart. Graying workers are ready to learn new tricks, and they want the opportunity to show off the old ones.

Court decision may activate time bomb

The U.S. Supreme Court may have activated a slowly ticking time bomb . . ., deciding that inmates must prove "deliberate indifference" about prison conditions before the constitutionally barred "cruel and unusual punishment" threshhold can be reached.

The 5-to-4 decision offers a blank check of sorts to unscrupulous or incompetent prison officials to exceed the bounds of punishment ordered by our courts and determined by our laws.

How — the court's dissenters asked rhetorically — can an inmate effectively prove that "indifference" to poor prison conditions is "deliberate"?

The answer is simple. Inmates won't be able to prove such cruelty. And, after a while, they will deem it futile to even try.

Prison inmates are human beings. That fact is inescapable no matter how we may feel about the crimes they committed or whether we feel incarceration should be rehabilitative or punitive in nature.

Most prison officials recognize their duty to protect those inmates behind their walls. Although no rose garden was ever promised, a sentenced inmate should be reasonably assured of his safety at all times.

Unfortunately, abuses do occur and they occur with disturbingnly regularity. Many of these grievances are settled amicably. Others are settled in class action lawsuits.

And some are settled — or at least addressed — by violence. . . .

In the case addressed by the Supreme Court, Ohio prison inmate Pearly Wilson sued the state for mistreatment and $900,000. While we won't address the merits of his claims, the court's majority failed to view the broad implications of allowing abuses to continue unless its ambiguous standard can be proven.

"The ultimate result of (the decision), I fear, is that serious deprivations of basic human needs will go unredressed due to an unnecessary and meaningless search for 'deliberate indifference,' " wrote Justice Byron White in dissent.

If White's fears are realized and such deprivations lead to violence, the five justices may look back at Wilson's case and realize that bars hold back people, not emotions.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, June 30, the 181st day of 1991. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Twenty years ago, on June 30, the 26th Amendment to the Constitution, lowering the minimum voting age to 18, was ratified as Ohio became the 38th state to approve it.

In 1982, the time limit for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution expired, with proponents falling short of the three additional states needed to ratify it.

Five years ago: In a 5-4 decision, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that states could outlaw homosexual acts between consenting adults.

One year ago: African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela visited Oakland, Calif., a day after receiving a star-studded welcome in Los Angeles.

Today's Birthdays: Actor David Wayne is 75. Singer Lena Horne is 74. Actress Nancy Dussault is 55.

Thought for Today: "Initiative is doing the right thing without being told." — Victor Hugo, French writer (1802-1885).

Black Berets attack unarmed Latvians

VECMILGRAVIS, Latvia — A Soviet private with a rumpled uniform guards a special base in this northern suburb of the capital city of Riga. He stands in front of an armored personnel carrier. The base is ringed with barbed wire. The sign out front says, "Stop or you will be shot." And you will be.

Anderson

This is the Baltic-region headquarters of the most feared shock troops of the Soviet regime — the Black Berets. They are run by the Soviet Interior Ministry that is skilled in covering their tracks so the trail of their thuggery never leads back to Moscow. These are the Soviet cowboys who, if they do their job right, eliminate any fingerprints of Mikhail Gorbachev on the operation.

The base outside Riga is home to 100 or so Black Berets who have been told they are fighting rebel fascists instead of the real enemy — unarmed Latvians who want restoration of independence through the peaceful means of the ballot box.

We made an unannounced visit to the base to talk to some of the notorious Black Berets. We were able to piece together a picture of these troops from interviews with half-a-dozen of them as well as access to debriefing reports of defectors, and U.S. intelligence reports.

The Black Berets answer to Boris Pugo, the hard-line Soviet interior minister who was appointed to that job last year to replace a more moderate minister. Pugo's previous assignment was to head up the KGB in Latvia. Since Pugo took over, the Black Berets have operated like a well-trained street gang, provoking confrontations in the Baltics while Pugo and Gorbachev deny ordering the provocations or even knowing anything about them.

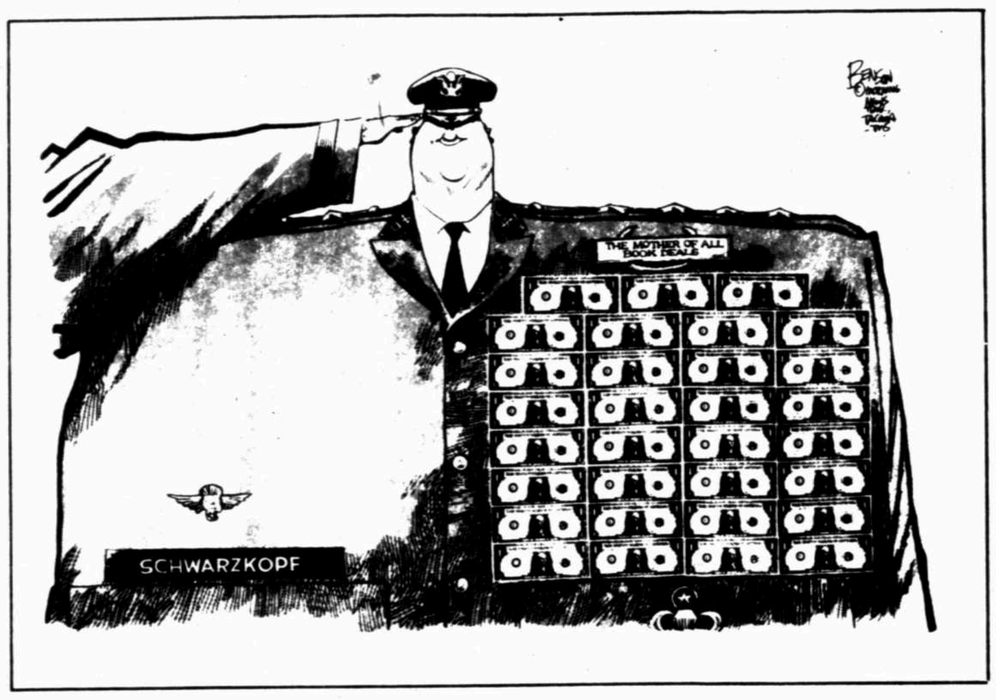

Shortly after Pugo took over, sources here say he lavished gifts and bonuses on the troops — new TVs, VCRs, furniture, Western clothes and other goods that are scarce on the Soviet market. Their bonuses were 1,000 rubles a month — five times the average Soviet salary. All they had to do in return was fight the evil fascists.

On Jan. 2, the Black Berets stormed the press building in Riga housing the offices of independent Latvian publications.

Then, on Jan. 20, they mounted their largest assault. Convinced that the Latvian Interior Ministry in downtown Riga was plotting to overtake their base, the Black Berets stormed the ministry building, shooting as they went.

The Black Berets eventually gave back the Interior Ministry building through negotiations, but Latvian Vice President Dainis Ivans told us that the January operations were no less than a coup attempt. "We have absolutely no doubt that in January it was an attempt here to overthrow the current government. At the same time, we have no doubt that the initiators of the action are in Moscow. But they learned it was not possible to fool an entire nation with these primitive methods." Ivans said the Latvians "set up barricades with concrete and their own bodies. They showed an unexpected demonstration of disgust at these Soviet policies." It also didn't hurt, Ivans said, to have an "unexpected quick and strong reaction from the West."

Ivans thinks the hardliners like Pugo in Moscow are setting up a "scenario where we could have more terrible action by the Black Berets while the leadership in Moscow would appear clean." But he and a growing majority of Latvians who have nothing to fight back with but their voices, are using those voices to accuse Moscow and rob the central government of any such Machiavellian victory.

Everybody can relate to 'anyculture' history

NEW YORK — Before long I'll probably manage to say something outrageous about "multicultural education," but the best I can produce right now is a small laugh. Here's why:

Just a few minutes ago a dear relative, the product of a pretty good — should we call it "monocultural" or "unicultural"? — education, consulted me about the crossword puzzle. Who was Scipio and what was his relationship to Hannibal, and what people were "Khartoum residents"? she needed to know, poor dear. Did I ever tell her!

Russell Baker

I had been waiting for years for somebody to ask me about Scipio Africanus, the Second Punic War and the great Hannibal, Mr. Super Carthaginian himself, who brought those elephants down the back route toward Rome after moving them up through Spain, over Pyrenees and Alps and down into Italy where he triumphed at Lake Trasimenus and Cannae before Scipio came to Rome's rescue.

I paid for that knowledge in agonies of mental toil in high school Latin while reading Livy's history of Rome. What a pleasure it was, having it finally pay off like this.

As for Khartoum, hadn't everybody known since high-school English history, the one the students always called "Wars and Whores," that it was in the Sudan and that its residents must therefore be "Sudanese"? Hadn't this monoculturally/uniculturally educated woman ever heard of the nutty Englishman Gordon at Khartoum?

Didn't she even know what the Mahdi Muhammad Ahmad had done to Gordon at Khartoum? Didn't she know that this led to Kitchener's expedition? And that Kitchener hung on as a great British hero into World War I? Didn't she know what stupid butchers the British generals of World War I had been?

"You do know there was a World War I?" I shouted, as one should not to a mature child who has demonstrated excellent motherhood skills.

"I have deduced its existence," she said, a mistress of crushing irony, "after reasoning that there must be a sound basis for referring to the war which has provided so much good entertainment for the American television, movie and reading audience as World War II."

She is smart, all right. I grant her that. But she doesn't know any history. Despite the usual American education of the sort we've had since that war which has provided so much wonderful mass-market entertainment, she meets Scipio for the first time in a crossword puzzle and learns, only because I am windier than usual this day, about Hannibal's military genius.

This family episode makes me laugh at the latest intellectuals' flare-up about how history should be taught in the New York schools. Should the approach be "multicultural"? "Monogendered"? "Ethnodynamic"? "Sexocentrifical"? "Euromaniacal"? "Nonsensidaisical"?

All this is enjoyable not only because it makes the blood pound, but also because it takes the mind off the real problem. The question is not what bias should be applied when teaching history, but why our schools seem incapable of teaching any history at all, biased or otherwise.

As now taught, history is neither multicultural nor unicultural; it is nocultural. At a time when any teaching of it would be a step forward, we ought to be able to agree that while either the multicultural or unicultural stuff would be splendid, in the meantime we could use some anycultural history.

This could be the start of something big. African-Americans, for instance, now complain that the present (nocultural) history does them dirt. With enough anycultural history to solve a crossword puzzle, however, they might boast that Hannibal, one of history's greatest generals, was one of their own and celebrate in myth and song the Mahdi for destroying Gordon at Khartoum and striking a mighty blow against European oppression.

GEORGE WILL

A new era of government is on the horizon

WASHINGTON — Bill Gray's departure from politics for admirable reasons, and the preposterous reasons John Sununu gives for lusting after the perquisites of power, intimate the end of an era.

Congressman Gray of Philadelphia, third-ranking Democratic leader in the House and the highest ranking black in House history, might have become Speaker, in time. But there are, he thinks, better uses of his time. He is resigning to become head of the United Negro College Fund.

Will

Washington — or, more precisely, the city's predominately white political and media sliver — is uncomprehending and aghast. Many liberals are particularly dismayed by this instance of self-determination by a black man.

Gray's decision, which gestated for two years, involves a mix of motives. True, he can make more money as a private citizen (and he has a handicapped child for whose future to provide). However, Gray also knows that not just political empowerment but social development — particularly enlargement of the black middle class — is the crucial challenge for the black community. In this, Congress can be at most marginally important.

Given the surge of their enrollments — up 17 percent in four years, twice the college average nationally — the 41 colleges served by the UNCF may educate close to one million students in the next decade. The students range from needy inner-city and rural blacks, who for cultural reasons do not test well but who are college material, to upper-middle class blacks (the Huxtable children) seeking an intensely black experience.

Gray, a preacher who values pastoral duties more than political duties, is a former teacher whose father was president of two black colleges. His career change, as an affirmation of fresh starts and of education, is quintessentially American.

Sununu's comportment expresses a dark side of recent American experience, the grotesque inflation of pretentiousness by presidential appendages. This has become a plague since 1945, as one presidential role, that of commander in chief, has come to predominate over all others.

Absurd notions of urgent haste, cockeyed obsessions with secrecy, delusions of indispensability — these have been pathologies of presidential aides during the era of the national security state in a hair-trigger world. They are ingredients in Sununu's insistence on grand travel arrangements even to political fund-raisers, stamp auctions, dentists and ski slopes.

But perhaps we may hope that the Sununu mentality will go the way of the Berlin Wall. Maybe the government will get off its tiptoes.

Campaigning in St. Louis for the League of Nations in September 1919, Woodrow Wilson warned of habits of mind that might be produced by perpetual high tensions among nations. We would, said Wilson, think of the president not merely as important temporary counselor but as commander in chief. Information and plans would be secreted. (In 1989, the year the Wall fell, the U.S. government, according to itself, created 6,796,501 new secrets.) In the world Wilson warned against, "We must be physically ready for anything to come."

We cannot restore the world in which President Jefferson said he had not heard from his ambassador in Spain for three years and if he did not hear for another year, he would write to him. We are a far piece from even the world of 60 years ago, when presidents elected in November were not inaugurated until March and Congress did not convene until the following December — 13 months after being elected.

But the 1990s are ripe for restoration of a republican — small "r" — sense of proportion regarding government. Conservatives, especially, should note that Gray, who is leaving, has it, and Sununu, who is staying, does not.

Citizens should try to enforce leash law

My 5-month-old pup was exposed to parvo but we hope I have caught it in time. Please tell your readers to try to enforce the leash laws to the best of their ability.

Two doors down, two pups died from the disease and no one let us know anything had happened for weeks almost. Parvo can live in a yard for months!

I feel the animal control people are a little lax or they would have been taking lots of the dogs in our area simply because they allowed to run wild.

I don't enjoy cleaning up dog piles that have been deposited in my yard the night before. I can't urge people strongly enough; stop dogs from running wild.

Call the animal control people more often, keep your neighbors on their toes about the dog problem. If you love your pet be more vocal.

Local citizens deserve entertainment choice

Lighten up, Kay McVeigh (in response to her letter of 6-23-91). The Chippendale Dancers are a classy act and require a classy place to perform. They do not totally strip and are a welcome release in this wasteland of entertainment. What would you have us do, attend Bible studies every night of the week?

I'm not objecting to church activities and, in fact, I'm opting not to attend the review. I do, however, uphold the right of citizens to have a choice. If Midland wants a diverse economy, that must include entertainment as well.

Employers can't bear workers comp fraud

On Wednesday, June 19, 1991, The MRT featured an article about the decline in workers compensation insurance subscribers in the State of Texas. Claire Korioth, chair woman of the State Board of Insurance, was quoted regarding her concerns for the State of Texas, the workers of the State and their employers.

Mrs. Korioth has never been an employer in this state or she would realize that Texas employers can't bear another expense in the growing fraud we call Worker's Compensation Insurance. Today the costs are escalating at a tremendous rate, and there is no letup in sight. The current worker's compensation program promotes the misuse of the insurance fund, and plaintiff's attorneys promote growing settlements to minimally-injured employees, in an ever-increasing "get rich quick" scheme. An evening watching the ads for attorney services on TV bears this point out well.

The abuse of the employee by some physicians specializing in workers compensation cases also bears investigation and peer review. There are many clinics and physicians who treat an injured employee only to the limit of his compensation benefits, clearly not until the employee is healed or on the road to recovery. Abuse of the system is rampant, as is its general effectiveness for the legitimately injured employee. The employers of the State of Texas can no longer be held wholly responsible for supporting a system which is bureaucratic, ineffective and, at its most usual, a scam.

As your other article directly above the compensation article suggests, the answer to some of the worker's comp problem is to have employers screen prospective employees to see that they are hiring healthy, uninjured people capable of doing the jobs for which they are hired. Screening is also the answer to seeing that current employees are monitored for health and injury preponderance.

Prisoner release should be condition

The headline of your June 18, 1991 edition, "Apartheid is 'History'," was read with keen interest by those of us who are aware that the United States depends upon the Republic of South Africa for 22 minerals and also the protection of their seas lanes. All of this spells "jobs" to people in the United States who are concerned about our unstable economy. Sanctions against South Africa should be removed now.

An Associated Press story in the Dallas Morning News on June 19, 1991, reported that deputy spokesman Richard Boucher of the State Department had said that the only condition remaining for the lifting of sanctions against South Africa is the release of all political prisoners. The Communist Party's ANC says there are still about 1,000 in jail.

How is it possible that President Bush and our State Department are encouraging active trade with the Communists in the Soviet Union where there are more than one million persons in their 1,000 slave labor camps? These 1,000 slave labor camps contain approximately one million slaves, most of whom are "political prisoners" because they cherish freedom. Why don't the people of the United States demand the release of all "political prisoners" in the 1,000 slave labor camps before we trade with the USSR?

I enclose a U.S. government map showing the slave labor camps. Each number represents a cluster of slave camps, as several defectors have explained in their books.

MARIANNE MEANS

What's in a name?

WASHINGTON — What comes immediately to mind when you hear the name Rockefeller?

Do you think of a serious-minded Democratic senator from West Virginia called Jay who may run for president next year?

Means

Or a former Republican vice president named Nelson who was dumped after two years by President Ford and later died under embarrassing circumstances?

Or Winthrop, a former frisky governor of Arkansas who was Nelson's brother Bubba?

Or John D., the legendary founder of the Standard Oil Company who gave away dimes — and kept the other 90 cents?

No, individuals don't surface. What comes to mind is this: WEALTH.

Money doesn't hurt in politics, and few politicians have so much of it as Sen. Jay Rockefeller (actually John D. IV), who is in a financial class by himself even in an exclusive body of mostly millionaires like the Senate.

How much Jay, 53, is worth is a secret. His generation, which includes nearly two dozen Rockefeller cousins, benefits from more than 100 impenetrable family financial trusts estimated to be worth about $4 billion.

He has never run from his identity as a rich boy. He lives in the style befitting a millionaire, but he has not expected political power to be handed to him. He began his political career as an anti-poverty worker in West Virginia, held several elective posts and eventually became governor, then senator, demonstrating that he is a politician who earns his keep.

Rockefeller says he will decide by August whether to seek the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination. He is busily consulting advisers, including his father-in-law, Charles Percy, former Republican senator from Illinois, and visiting key primary states to assess his prospects.

If he does run, he instantly becomes a serious contender because of his famous name. ("If I never had a cent, I'd be rich as Rockefeller . . . .")

The Democrats have not fielded a presidential nominee with an inherited family fortune since John F. Kennedy more than 30 years ago. In fact, the Republicans didn't produce one either for several decades until George Bush, the son of a wealthy former Connecticut senator.

A stunningly rich candidate in the Democratic party, with its emphasis upon helping poor folks, could have political image problems. He could be accused of being hoity-toity, distant from and unable to understand real people and real problems.

Rockefeller has anticipated this by becoming a champion of liberal domestic policy reforms aimed at voters with modest incomes. He advocates federally-mandated health care expansion. He was chairman of a commission that this week recommended a sweeping federal program to lift children out of poverty. He defends the free public school system by opposing Bush's demand that taxpayers pay for children to attend parochial and private schools.

As a presidential candidate, Rockefeller would have only about a year to get this message of compassionate leadership across to the entire country. In West Virginia, it has taken him a quarter century to overcome the taint of too much money and work up the political ladder.

His opponents will surely complain that he's trying to buy the election, if not the country. These days, however, many wealthy statewide candidates virtually finance their own campaigns (as Rockefeller himself did in his West Virginia races.)

Voters have become fairly sophisticated about the financial burdens imposed by the enormous costs of campaigning. Personal wealth can even be an advantage if it is seen as immunizing its possessor against the corrupting influence of big contributors and special interests.

In any case, if Rockefeller is to meet the standards of public financing in the general election he will have to play by rules that require him to raise substantial sums of outside money. He cannot pay for the campaign all by himself.

Furthermore, American history is replete with wealthy politicians who proved to be sensitive and progressive leaders, among them Franklin D. and Teddy Roosevelt. A wise philosophy of governing and great political skill are not necessarily a product of income level. Hearts of stone have turned up in log cabins.

Nor is it necessarily a disadvantage for a president to have the kind of comfortable relationships with the captains of industry and finance that are often developed through old school ties and years of socializing. It tends to improve straight talk between the worlds of politics and business and encourage compromise rather than confrontation.

But Rockefeller's biggest task will be to get past those dollar signs and convince voters that the man inside is a genuinely good fellow.

TOM WICKER

Democrats have crucial issues to debate

"The American taxpayer needs a rest," says Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Others may think the taxpayer — particularly the low-income taxpayer — needs relief more than rest, just as a lagging economy needs stimulation more than deficit reduction.

Wicker

Neither relief nor stimulation is in sight, and Rostenkowski is only one reason. He told Robert Hershey of The New York Times that "the practice of annually rewriting the tax code ... creates a tremendous uncertainty. We should not engage in political tax wars lightly."

Indeed not, but what's light about an economy in recession (machine tool orders, an important indicator, fell by a third from April 1990 to April 1991)? What's light about a school system that's not teaching, health care not provided, an infrastructure falling apart, and states and cities scrambling to balance budgets by closing libraries and swimming pools?

Why not a "tax war" when the wages of two-thirds of American workers fell 12 percent in the last 15 years, to the level of the late 1950s, while the rich were getting richer?

Rostenkowski's reluctance to tamper with taxes is not, however, as high a barrier to recovery as last year's disastrous budget agreement. That piece of collusion between the White House and Congress included, in the sacred cause of deficit reduction, a requirement that money saved in one budget area not be transferred to another area, and a second requirement that any tax change causing the government to lose revenue be offset by equal revenue raised elsewhere.

The first of these requirements means that money saved by cutting the military budget (after the collapse of Communism, there's no reason to call it a "defense" budget) may not be used for education or health care, etc., but only for deficit reduction or other military purposes.

Robert Reich, the economist, wrote in a Times article recently that a 15 percent annual cut in current and planned military spending over the next decade would save $450 billion. But the budget agreement, as it stands, would prevent any of that sum from being transferred to meet the nation's most crying needs.

Actually, Reich pointed out, a federal income tax with rates restored to the progressivity of 1978 would require "the top 10 percent of income earners to pay about $950 billion more than they'll otherwise pay in the 1990s."

Put more brutally, that's the amount the tax breaks of the Reagan years will profit the richest Americans in coming years, while the cities, the schools, highways and bridges and much of the remaining amenity of American life go to rack and ruin.

Getting back to the progressivity of 1978, however, would require undoing the Reagan tax breaks for upper-income Americans. Not only would that violate Rostenkowski's uncertainty principle; it would cause the mother of all "political tax wars."

Robert Hershey reported that for these and other reasons, little possibility for sizable tax reduction exists this year, and only innocuous and revenue-neutral technical proposals are likely to be considered.

Already in 1991, suggesting the prevailing atmosphere, the Democratic Congress has rejected a proposal by Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., to cut the onerous and regressive Social Security payroll tax, and to remove the $54,000 cap on income earners who have to pay it.

Nevertheless, the recession calls for economic stimulation greater than small interest-rate reductions by the Federal Reserve, and the Democrats desperately need a strong political issue to take into the 1992 election. If those aren't reasons enough to act, what would be?

Tom Wicker's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

LESLIE GELB

Congress funds more weapon research

Even as the administration moves to cut the nuclear weapons stockpile almost in half, Congress continues to vote billions annually to fund nuclear warheads programs. The program exceeds $7 billion, when the White House and congressional leaders are saying they have no new money for children and cities.

Gelb

And at the very time when extra Energy Department dollars should be going to clean up the dangerous pollution from past nuclear weapons production, a pivotal Senate subcommittee has taken $108 million away from cleanup programs and added these funds to weapons research and development programs already exceeding $2 billion.

To be sure, substantial sums are necessary to design new warheads, maintain production facilities, insure safety and hold onto scientific talent. But in the small community that follows these intricate affairs, the feeling mounts that perhaps billions are being squandered in what amounts to a full employment program for the nuclear weapons laboratories.

These labs, like many old cold war institutions, are scrambling to find new justifications to live and spend in the old cold war style. Lab leaders are particularly well connected in Congress to powerful figures like Sen. Pete Domenici, the top Republican on the Appropriations Committee, who knows how to protect New Mexico's weapons-making jewels in Los Alamos and Sandia.

Even a little probing will show that neither these legislators, nor many Pentagon officials (who determine nuclear warhead requirements) or key Department of Energy officials (in whose budget all these monies reside), have a clear picture of how these billions of dollars are being spent or why.

The U.S. nuclear weapons stockpile now totals about 20,000 missile warheads and bombs. The Joint Chiefs of Staff project reductions to about 12,000 — not counting further cuts from arms control treaties under negotiation with Moscow. That decline alone should be driving operation and maintenance costs way down, but the budget reveals no dramatic savings.

In years past the Energy and Defense Departments designed about 10 new warheads at any one time. Now about two new ones are under development. Yet the number of lab personnel is down by only about 20 percent from cold war highs. And the labs continue to resist designing standard warhead models to fit any new weapon. As John Tuck, a senior Energy Department official, told me, "Building each warhead uniquely has meant much greater expense than necessary."

One subcommittee justification was "weapons safety," without citing how many hundreds of millions are already devoted to that task. Another was to maintain "strong" labs without discussing how big and strong the labs need to be when new warhead development is sharply decreasing.

The third, and juiciest, justification is "new opportunities for strengthening (lab) support of generic precompetitive technology research deemed critical to future U.S. economic competitiveness."

Translated, that means federal help for private industry. But the report does not cite specific technologies or suggest what nuclear weapons labs might know about civilian market needs.

The weapons labs are understandably eager to divine new missions and bolster old ones. But billions of tax dollars are at stake, and it is far from clear that the administration and Congress have taken a hard look at what is going on.

Loss of beloved wife cancels usual column

NEW YORK — Austine, my beloved wife of 43 years and mother of my two children, Will and Austie, died after a long illness last Sunday morning.

I am so stricken with grief I don't find it possible to organize my thoughts on national and international affairs and write my usual column.

We were as much in love last Sunday as we were the day we married. I am not the same and will probably not be again. I feel so empty and sad at heart. I am sure you will understand.

Astros bully Reds to end three game losing streak

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds lost two more starting pitchers and their five-game winning streak as Casey Candaele, Jeff Bagwell and Craig Biggio homered to rally the Houston Astros to a 6-2 victory.

Candaele broke an 0-for-18 streak with a solo homer in the fifth off Don Carman (0-2) that tied it at 2, and Bagwell hit a two-run homer later in the inning, snapping Houston's three-game losing streak. Biggio connected in the ninth.

Rookie Darryl Kile (2-2) won his second consecutive start by scattering nine hits over seven innings and striking out a career-high six. Jim Clancy pitched two innings for his fourth save.

Carman relieved in the second inning when Gino Minutelli, making his first major-league start, injured his groin and had to leave after just 22 pitches. Minutelli was disabled for three weeks at Triple-A Nashville earlier this month by a groin pull.

The injury came just a few hours after right-handed starter Scott Scudder was diagnosed with tendinitis in his right arm. He's expected to go on the disabled list, joining Reds starters Jose Rijo (broken ankle) and Norm Charlton (shoulder tendinitis).

Minutelli gave up a first-inning run when Steve Finley walked, stole second and came around on Luis Gonzalez's two-out double.

Cincinnati went ahead 2-1 in the second with the help of a mental lapse by the Astros. Jeff Reed singled, Billy Hatcher doubled, and Reed continued home when nobody covered second base to take the throw from Gonzalez in left field. Carman grounded out to drive Hatcher in from third.

NL Roundup

Cubs 6, Cardinals 4

CHICAGO — Rookie Rick Wilkins' three-run homer capped a six-run first inning and the Chicago Cubs ended a three-game losing streak with a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Wilkins' homer was his fourth of the season since being called up from Class AAA Iowa on June 4, and all four have come in the last five games.

The Cubs, who have lost 12 of 14, snapped the Cardinals' four-game winning streak.

Les Lancaster (4-2) was the winner and Bob Tewksbury (6-4) took the loss, although five of the runs in the first inning were unearned.

With one out in the first, Mark Grace and Ryne Sandberg each singled. Andre Dawson bounced to third as Grace scored but Todd Zeile's throw for a force at second pulled Jose Oquendo off the bag for an error.

George Bell singled to score Sandberg and after Luis Salazar popped out, Shawon Dunston singled home Dawson. Wilkins followed with his homer into the center-field bleachers.

Pirates 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Gary Redus' run-scoring single with two outs in the ninth inning rallied the Pittsburgh Pirates over the Montreal Expos for their fourth straight victory.

The Pirates have won seven of eight games against the Expos this season, including all five in Montreal. The Expos have lost six straight.

Don Slaught led off the ninth with a walk from reliever Scott Ruskin (2-2). Gary Varsho pinch ran and was sacrificed to second by Jose Lind before scoring on Redus' single off Barry Jones.

Mets 5, Phillies 0

NEW YORK — The New York Mets came back after a 47-minute rain delay with a four-run fifth inning and beat Philadelphia, sending the Phillies to their sixth loss in seven games.

Terry Mulholland (6-8) held the Mets to just one hit in the first four innings, then got in trouble in the fifth as he fell to 0-5 lifetime against the Mets. Mulholland has lost five consecutive starts since beating Montreal on May 29.

Wally Whitehurst (4-4) allowed five hits and struck out four in five innings, then left after the rain delay with a slightly tight left hamstring. Jeff Innis and Alejandro Pena finished with two-hit relief.

Phillies manager Jim Fregosi and first baseman John Kruk were ejected in the first inning by home plate umpire Charlie Reliford after Kruk argued a called third strike.

Tom Herr and Rick Cerone opened the fourth with consecutive singles and then the rain came on a hot, humid night.

Dodgers 2, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Los Angeles overcame a controversial call that gave Atlanta the tying run to beat the Braves on second baseman Mark Lemke's throwing error in the 11th inning allowing Lenny Harris to score from second base.

The Dodgers got the winning run without a benefit of a hit.

Harris opened the inning with a walk from reliever Juan Berenguer (0-3). Kent Mercker replaced Berenguer and Alfredo Griffin sacrificed Harris to second. Mercker then struck out Chris Gwynn and walked Brett Butler. Juan Samuel grounded to Lemke, who made a diving stop but made a low throw to first base.

Mike Hartley (2-0) got the victory with 1 1-3 innings of scoreless relief. Kevin Gross picked up the save, his first of the year and second in his nine-year career.

The Braves tied it the ninth on a controversial base hit, resulting in the ejection of Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda.

Giants 6, Padres 4

SAN DIEGO — Rookie Mark Leonard, filling in for Kevin Mitchell, hit his first home run of the season and Robby Thompson and Terry Kennedy hit consecutive homers in the ninth inning as the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres.

Thompson hit a solo homer, his ninth, and Kennedy followed with his second home run of the year for a 6-3 lead.

Day has suspension lengthened

Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK — All-American Todd Day has had a month added to his suspension from playing basketball next season, Day's stepfather said Saturday.

But Ted Anderson said Day denied allegations of academic improprieties and may appeal the ruling of the All University Judiciary Board.

Day, who will be a senior this fall, already was ineligible to play for the Razorbacks in games through November for his involvement in a Feb. 27 sexual incident with a 34-year-old Springdale woman at the UA athletic dorm.

Anderson confirmed reports that a month was added to the suspension, which would make Day ineligible to play through December.

THE REAL VALUE OF LEASING AN S-CLASS SEDAN TODAY.

The rewards of driving a Mercedes-Benz. Of course you covet the magnificent S-Class sedan. But you wonder: Is leasing a Mercedes right for the times? Yes. Because right now, leasing can help make what may have been slightly beyond your reach within your means.

Higher resale value – Lower monthly payment. Since two factors that determine monthly payments are interest rate and resale value, and since the cars of Mercedes-Benz, as a line, have consistently had the highest resale value in America,* it could actually cost less to lease a 1991 Mercedes than you thought possible.

So How Do I Pay For It?

How can I say no to a smile like that? When our dentist recommended Hillary wear braces, there was really only one question I had: How do I pay for it?

She's gonna need a room of her own. I can see it in my head. Some kind of little-girl wallpaper. Stuffed animals.

I think we can add on over the garage. Maybe we'll need another bath there, too. The neighbors recommended a good contractor. Only thing is, how do I pay for it?

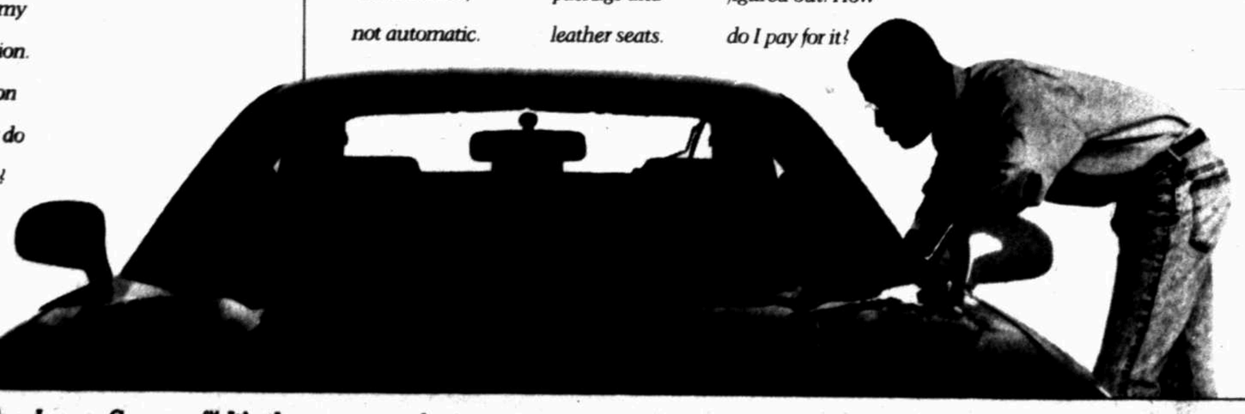

I started with a travel agent. Looked at all the brochures. I asked questions. And finally picked out the spot for my dream vacation. The question now is, how do I pay for it?

Just Ask.

Definitely red instead of blue. I think stick, not automatic.

Probably go with the optional stereo package and leather seats.

There's only one thing I haven't figured out. How do I pay for it?

We started with a list of almost 50 schools. Narrowed it down to a dozen or so. Then my son was accepted by a couple of his top picks. Now I just have one question. How do I pay for it?

Twelve-game win string ends for Twins' Erickson

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Erickson's streak of 12 straight victories ended when the Chicago White Sox rallied for five runs in the seventh inning to beat the Minnesota Twins, 8-4.

Erickson (12-3) took a 3-2 lead into the seventh, but singles by Matt Merullo, Lance Johnson and Ozzie Guillen tied it. Tim Raines hit a two-run double, and reliever Steve Bedrosian gave up Dan Pasqua's two-run triple.

Erickson was charged with a career-high seven runs, increasing his ERA from 1.39 to 1.83, still best in the majors. He allowed 11 hits, walked two and struck out one.

Erickson had not lost since April 16. He set a team record for consecutive victories after beginning the season at 0-2.

Chicago won its third straight and for the eighth time in nine games. The Twins have lost four in a row.

AL Roundup

Orioles 7, Red Sox 3

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken and Randy Milligan took advantage of the short porch in left field for home runs, and Roy Smith won his first game since June 7 as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Boston Red Sox.

Smith (4-1) got relief help from Kevin Hickey, Mark Williamson and Mike Flanagan as Baltimore won for the sixth time in eight games.

Ripken's homer, his 16th, was measured at 328 feet, and Milligan's, his eighth, at only 311. The distance to the foul poles at Memorial Stadium is just 309 feet, the closest left field fence to home plate in the majors.

Blue Jays 4, Mariners 0

TORONTO — Jimmy Key, who left after being hit by a line drive, and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter for Toronto's major league-leading ninth shutout as the Blue Jays beat the Seattle Mariners.

Key, who gave up five hits, was struck on the left hand by Omar Vizquel's hard liner in the fifth inning. Key was examined by team doctors who reported the injury to the fleshy part of his index and middle finger was not serious.

Mike Timlin (6-4) relieved and gave up two hits in two innings. Duane Ward pitched three hitless innings for his 14th save, fanning five.

The Blue Jays, first in the AL East, have won eight of their last 10 games.

John Olerud lofted a sacrifice fly to right-center off loser Rich DeLucia (6-5) to score Rance Mulliniks for a 1-0 Toronto lead in the second. Roberto Alomar's 24th double scored Devon White from second to make it 2-0 in the fifth inning.

Tigers 9, Indians 4

DETROIT — Alan Trammell's two-run homer capped a six-run second inning and Rusty Meacham won his major league debut as the Detroit Tigers beat the Cleveland Indians.

The last-place Indians have lost three straight games and 18 of thier last 21.

Meacham (1-0) gave up three runs and eight hits in seven innings. Mike Henneman finished for his 11th save, coming on in the eighth after Brook Jacoby's RBI single.

Meacham, 23, was picked in the 33rd round of the June 1987 amateur draft. He led the Class AA Eastern League last season with 15 victories and nine complete games. He was called up from Class AAA Toledo on Tuesday.

Yankees 9, Brewers 8

MILWAUKEE — Mel Hall hit a two-out, two-run double in the ninth inning, capping a three-run rally that led the New York Yankees over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Yankees scored three times in the eighth, then added three more in the ninth after Dan Plesac (0-2) relieved. It was Plesac's first blown save in six tries this season.

Singles by Steve Sax and Don Mattingly and a walk to Jesse Barfield loaded the bases with one out in the ninth. Kevin Maas grounded into a force play at second base, barely beating the relay, as a run scored. Hall, who entered the game as a pinch hitter in the eighth, doubled to the fence in right-center.

Lee Guetterman (2-1) pitched a scoreless eighth and Steve Farr pitched a perfect ninth for his ninth save.

Candy Maldonado, making his first start since April 10, hit his first homer and drove in three runs for Milwaukee. He broke his foot in the second game of the season and made his fourth appearance since coming off the disabled list Tuesday.

Athletics 6, Royals 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Harold Baines hit a grand slam off reliever Storm Davis and Dave Henderson followed with his 18th homer as Oakland scored five unearned runs with two out in the seventh inning to beat Kansas City.

Dave Stewart (5-4) allowed three runs and 10 hits in seven innings to win for the first time since June 6 as the A's snapped a four-game losing streak. Dennis Eckersley pitched two innings for his American League-leading 21st save.

Kevin Appier had a five-hit shutout going when he left after giving up a two-out single to Rickey Henderson in the seventh. With Davis (2-7) pitching, Ernest Riles walked on four pitches. Then Jose Canseco's grounder was bobbled by third baseman Kevin Seitzer for an error, loading the bases.

On a 3-2 pitch, Baines hit a line drive over the right-field fence for his ninth homer and second grand slam of the year.

Tyson still insists he's champion

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson wants to fight heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield, but he's not in any hurry to do it.

"Eventually, we'll fight for the title if we can get negotiations done," Tyson said after winning a 12-round unanimous decision in his rematch with Donovan "Razor" Ruddock on Friday night.

"It doesn't matter when. In reality, I'm the champion even if I don't have the belt."

The sense of menace and the raw power Tyson brings to a fight make him boxing's No. 1 attraction, with the possible exception of George Foreman.

But ever since his title loss to James "Buster" Douglas, Tyson hasn't looked like the same fighter who once dominated the heavyweight division.

Ruddock, however, might disagree after getting his jaw broken by Tyson on Friday night. Ruddock, who was knocked down in the second and fourth rounds, skipped the postfight news conference and went to the hospital to get his jaw treated.

"He wasn't a sore loser, he was just sore," said Ruddock's promoter, Murad Muhammad.

Tyson, who turned 25 on Sunday, also took some punishing blows in the foul-plagued fight. The former champion admitted he was shaken by several of Ruddock's punches.

"If his jaw was broken, you couldn't tell by the way he was fighting," Tyson said.

It was a dirty fight. Tyson was penalized two points for hitting low and one point for hitting after the bell. Ruddock lost a point for hitting after the bell.

"In the heat of the moment, we were just fighting," Tyson said. "As long as fighters are not gouging eyes, let them fight."

Besides breaking Ruddock's jaw, Tyson also bloodied his mouth and bruised him under both eyes.

Still, Tyson's performance drew mixed reviews. He didn't move his head as he once did, instead moving straight in while standing straight up. He virtually ignored the left jab and threw very few combinations.

Tyson did throw three or four punches at a time on several occasions, but instead of using one or two punches to set up another, each punch was meant to finish the job.

Eddie Futch, the veteran trainer of rising heavyweight Riddick Bowe, feels Tyson's lifestyle is catching up with him.

"After last night we are totally convinced that Holyfield will beat Tyson," Dan Duva, Holyfield's promoter, said by telephone from his New Jersey home. "Don King (Tyson's promoter) is afraid of that."

King said Tyson's next fight will be against Holyfield or Foreman.

"Whichever one signs first is the one we will fight," King said.

Duva, however, sees Foreman fighting an opponent of his choice for $5 million on Sept. 7.

Couples overtakes Persons, Sutton at PGA St. Jude Classic

Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Fred Couples shot a 5-under-par 66 Saturday to pass the leaders and take a 1-stroke advantage over Peter Persons and Hal Sutton after three rounds of the $1 million St. Jude Classic.

Couples began the day four strokes behind second-round co-leaders Fuzzy Zoeller and Russ Cochran before posting six birdies against one bogey over the 7,006-yard, par-71 Tournament Players Club at Southwind.

Couples' tournament total of 12-under 201 establishes a new Southwind mark for 54 holes, surpassing the 202 set last year by Tom Kite and John Cook.

Two strokes back is Mark Brooks, who is at 10-under 203 in the chase for the $180,000 winner's check.

Mike Hulbert, the winner of last week's Anheuser-Busch Classic, and Zoeller are at 9-under 204.

Couples combined a birdie at No. 2 with birdies on both par-3 holes on the front side to make the turn at 3-under for the day and 10-under for the tournament.

The four-time PGA Tour winner then posted back-to-back birdies at the 10th and 11th, dropping a 6-foot putt at No. 10 and a 10-footer at No. 11.

Couples, who finished tied for third in both the U.S. Open and the Tournament of Champions this year, found the rough off the tee and then a bunker by the green at the par-4 13th. He failed to get up-and-down from there for his lone bogey of the day.

A chip to within 2 feet set up his sixth and final birdie of the day at the par-5 16th.

"The course seemed to firm up and play shorter, but trickier, today," said Couples, whose most recent victory was in the 1990 Los Angeles Open.

Geiberger's 90-footer highlight at seniors classic

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Al Geiberger dropped a 90-foot birdie putt en route to a 5-under-par 65 on Saturday and moved into a tie with Jim Colbert at 133 after two rounds of the Southwestern Bell Classic seniors golf tournament.

"That might have been my longest putt ever," said Geiberger, who is looking for his first Seniors victory in almost two years.

Larry Laoretti, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Don January were at 4-under and three shots off the lead heading into Sunday's final round of the $450,000 tournament. Rocky Thompson, who shot a 3-under-par 67 Saturday, was tied with George Archer at 137.

The 90-foot birdie "felt like a hole-in-one," he said.

Planned release of son's killer concerns mother

■ The family of Dale Inskeep still deals with the shock and horror of his death.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Six years ago this month, Dorothy Shaw Inskeep shot her husband in the head at close range with a high-powered rifle.

Dale Inskeep, 28, was sitting in the living room of his trailer house in southeast Midland County when his wife pulled the trigger.

He died instantly. But his family still deals with the shock and horror of his death.

Facing a life sentence of sorrow and grief, Dale's mother finds it difficult to understand why the woman who killed her son is now scheduled for release from prison after serving only six years of a 20-year sentence.

"We fear for our lives as soon as she's released," Mrs. Inskeep said in an interview last week. "I did get it fixed to where she's not supposed to enter Midland County. It's in the parole papers."

Dorothy Shaw had been charged with first-degree murder, but jurors ruled that the shooting was provoked. They convicted Ms. Shaw of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced her to 20 years in state prison, where she began serving her term in November 1985.

Her release, scheduled for Oct. 16, is mandated by state law. She must be set free because the good time she has accumulated and the actual time she has served equals the number of years in her sentence, state officials said.

So Ms. Shaw will end up spending a little more than a quarter of her original sentence behind bars.

If not for the efforts of Mrs. Inskeep, she might have been out of prison years sooner.

"I have worked for six years solid of my life to get the state to do what they said they'd do," Mrs. Inskeep said. "I have worked with the governor, I've worked with the Attorney General's Office — if I can think of someone who can help, I give them a call.

"Everyone that I could ask to write in a letter, I did — everyone who knew Dale. Hundreds and hundreds of people did this for us."

Thousands of letters and petitions later, Mrs. Inskeep derives some satisfaction from knowing that her campaign to keep Ms. Shaw in prison was not entirely in vain.

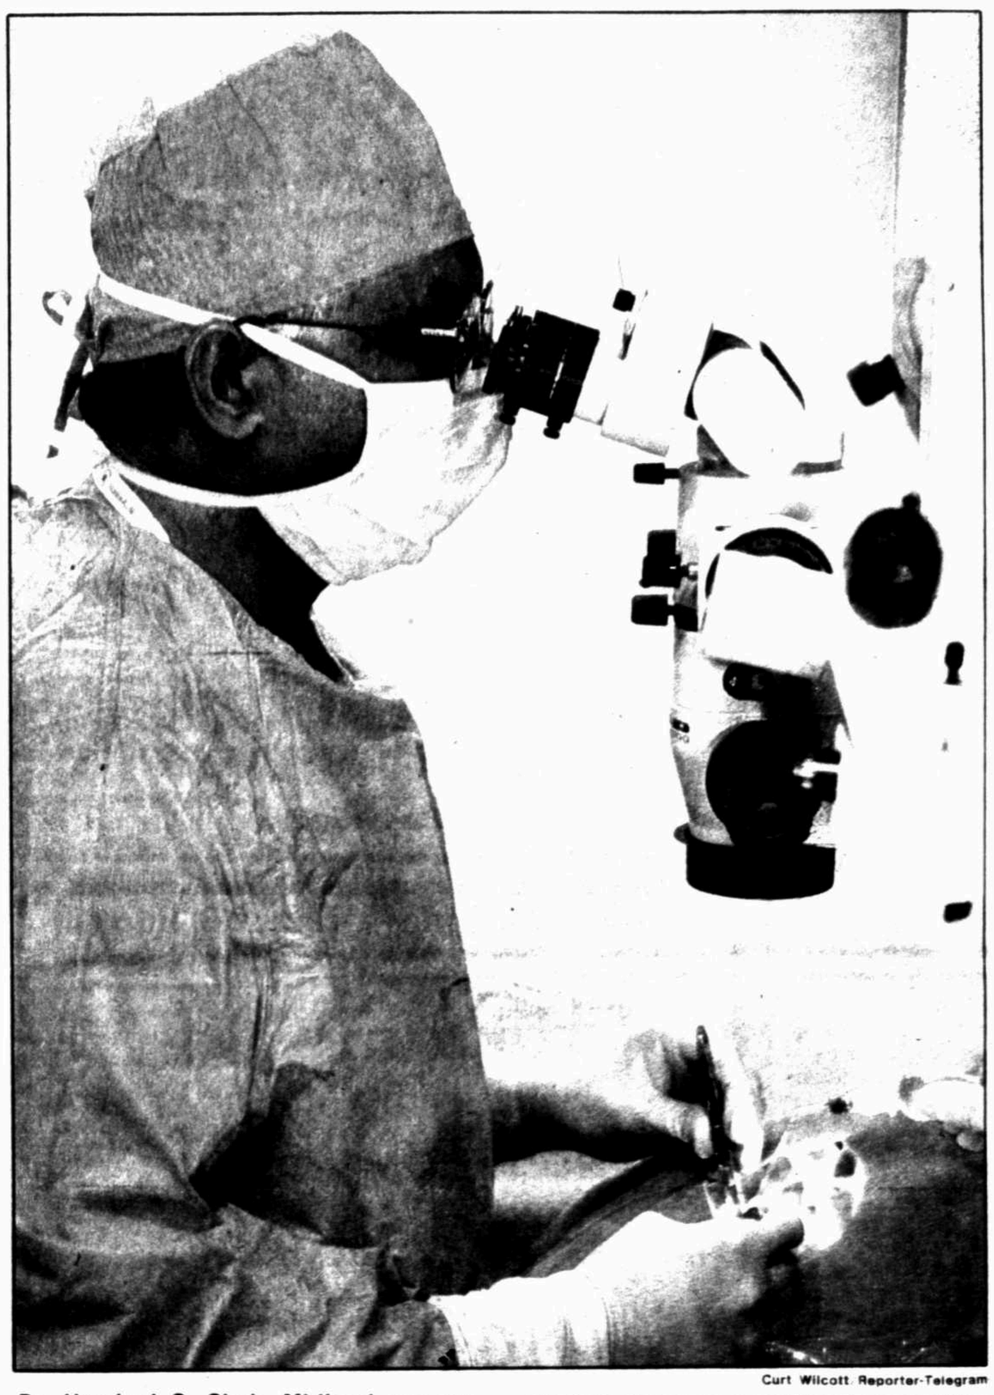

David Young, assistant director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Pardons and Paroles Division, said the state parole board denied Ms. Shaw parole no less than five times during her prison stay.

Young said the letters and petitions that Mrs. Inskeep solicited had a great deal of influence on the board's decision not to release Ms. Shaw.

"That kind of correspondence is very effective," Young said. "It is the best way for the public, and victims in particular, to have an impact on the process."

Young said Ms. Shaw, now 29, will have to report periodically to a parole officer after her release until the year 2005. And, largely due to Mrs. Inskeep's concerns, Ms. Shaw will be under a court order to stay out of Midland County unless she receives offi-

Dr. Harshad G. Shah, Midland eye surgeon, performs a cataract operation on Haskell Coker of rural Big Spring in Physicians & Surgeons Hospital in Midland.

Eye bank, surgeon repair man's sight

■ Dr. Harshad G. Shah takes center stage on a medical team that performs cataract operations.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The former cowboy — quiet, motionless and shrouded in white — was far from the wild, ol' bull that nearly did him in at a rodeo many years ago.

And he was a long way from the welding torch that earned his livelihood after he left the cowboy trail.

Haskell "Hack" Coker, now a patient at the mercy of medical technology, was being wheeled down the Physicians & Surgeons Hospital corridor en route to the bright lights, sharp knives, clean air, sterile room, and the doctor and nurses who would combine to help restore his clouded vision.

"Nothing to be nervous about," Coker reassured himself. "What's going to happen is going to happen."

And so it did — in about 40 minutes.

A medical team headed by Dr. Harshad G. Shah was on center stage, performing an eye procedure that Shah has performed hundreds of times.

Scrubbed down, in his hospital-green work uniform, Shah sat down to remove the clouded lens from Coker's right eye and replace the cataract with a plastic intraocular lens. In six weeks, Coker's left eye will undergo a similar surgery.

At 47, Shah is a surgeon comfortable in his environment — whether the operating room is in a traitional hospital or on a converted United Airlines DC-8 jet.

Shah, born in India and trained in the United States, sets aside time each year for Project ORBIS.

The project's flying hospital travels around the world, bearing doctors and nurses who perform eye operations and conducts ophthalmological classes to teach eye-surgery techniques.

"I grew up in India," said Shah, "and I have been to the Philippines for medical training. And I have seen so much poverty. And I have seen people go blind because of the lack of (medical) facility, or they just could not afford to go to the doctor or could not be accommodated because of the large number of people.

"I practiced here (in Midland) in the best medical environment with the best of equipment. I find myself fortunate to be able to do that. It is my way of saying 'thank you' and sharing some skills."

At home in Midland, Shah donated his talents in operating on Coker, whose cataract surgeries are being sponsored by the 25-county District 2A1 Lions Eye Bank. Shah is the bank's medical director.

Cataract surgery is one of the "most commonly-done operations" on the eye in the United States," Shah said," and is the "Number One cause of blindness in Third-World countries."

"People do not have to go blind because they have cataract," which is a vision-impairing clouding of the lens.

Cataracts may be associated with aging, trauma, diabetes, hyperthyroidism, arthritis and other conditions and illnesses.

While the development of cataracts may not be preventable, the impaired vision and blindness caused by cataracts can, in many cases, be corrected through surgery, the implantation of lens, or the wearing of contact or thick eye glasses.

But measures can be taken to counter the inroads of cataract: the wearing of protective eye glasses in sunlight, maintaining good nutrition, having regular eye examinations and seeking early treatment of eye problems.

In the operating room, Shah is as deft with his hands holding the surgical tools as is the conductor with his baton or the virtuoso with his violin.

Hovering over Coker, Shah looks into Coker's hazel eye through a microscope. There is a mesh of knowledge, sense, feel, touch, intuition even before surgical steel touches flesh and the wondrous sphere called the eye.

Shah is fascinated by optics and photography.

"They say the eye is the window to your body, and that is very true," he

Participants report gain in insight at Glenwood workshop

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"I learned some surprising things about my behavior. I also learned that it wasn't so scary sharing my feelings with others. This was a safe place to do that," said one of the participants at Saturday's codependency workshop.

About 60 men and women from the Midland/Odessa area attended the workshop "Enmeshed Relationships: The Need to be Needed" at Glenwood psychiatric hospital.

"We received more than 100 calls. Unfortunately, we had to turn some people away," said Marilee Kyler, Glenwood spokesperson.

"The response was tremendous. Originally we accepted 50 people, then we added 10 more," said Tamara Quain, Glenwood relations coordinator. "But 60 was all we could accommodate in the conference room."

Persons who attended the workshop said they gained insight into why they respond the way they do to people and certain situations.

"The message is: I am responsible for what has happened or is still happening in my life," said Teresa "Sam" Guyton, who conducted the workshop with Marion Kimberly, both licensed professional counselors.

Ms. Guyton discussed seven typical codependent roles which people may assume — the over-achiever, people pleaser, nobody, antagonist, perfectionist, caregiver or martyr.

"All these roles have positive aspects," Ms. Kimberly said. "But once you over develop them you become overbalanced."

For example, Ms. Guyton said people pleasers think "pleasing others will bring them love and self-worth."

"It takes tremendous energy and much denial of the self to stay in the role," she said. "It causes repressed anger. And the people pleaser must be hyper-vigilant in other to be assessing other people's needs."

Ms. Guyton said a certain amount of anger is healthy. "We need to have anger in order to have boundaries," she said. "And some people say: 'I feel guilty when I say no.' I tell them: 'There are worse feelings than guilt.'"

Ms. Kimberly said caregivers operate under the mistaken assumption "that if I give and give and give, sometime I will get something back."

"The sad lament of the caregiver is: When is it my turn?" she said.

Most adults assume their codependent roles in childhood, Ms. Guyton said. "The roles are usually taken on in the family of origin," she said.

Ms. Kimberly described a codependent as someone who "is looking outside to feel good about himself or herself, safe and lovable."

Workshop attendees made personal assessments to discover which role they had assumed, then broke off into groups with others who had assumed the same role.

The workshop conductors then lead guided treatment plans, followed with a question-and-answer period.

GARY OTT

At last, a movement for the typical American male

Ott

Blacks have had one. So have gay men. And lesbians and straight women and alcoholics and drug addicts and Hispanics and teenagers and adopted children and Asian-Americans and even transvestites.

What have they had?

A cause. A movement. An organization. An agenda, whether it be political or social.

All you have to do is tune in "Geraldo" some morning and you'll learn everything there is to know about these special interest groups. You'll learn about why they are mistreated, why "society" is responsible for their shortcomings, why they need better political representation and why life in general is unfair, particularly when it pertains to their little world.

Like most people, I grow weary of hearing about other people's problems.

"Dump on someone else for awhile," is what I'd want to say to them. "I'm really not interested."

Their causes are all valid, of course, but frankly I've got my own problems. The brakes are going out on my car. MasterCard has hired a hitman for me. I've been told I have a receding hairline and I'm approaching 40 and have no idea what the meaning of life is.

So don't come whining to me with your problems. I'm not interested.

Then out of the clear blue, like a bolt of lightning, the answer hit me between the eyes. It was right there in black and white on the cover of Newsweek magazine.

The headline said, "What do men really want? Now they have a movement of their own."

When I read the words my heart immediately began to race. Just think, a movement for normal middle-class working men. Take that, you weirdos. My people are finally getting their act together.

We're going to unite and demand what is rightfully ours. So step aside. Drastic changes are blowing in the wind.

I grabbed the magazine and tossed a wad of bills on the counter. "Keep the change," I shouted to the clerk while dashing for my car. Beads of perspiration were forming on my forehead as the anticipation mounted. At last, a cause I could call my very own. No longer would I have to feel guilty for being a typical red-blooded American male. The excitement was almost too excruciating to bear. If I were the crying type, I would have wept openly.

Once home, I poured over the pages of the article.

Disappointment.

It never fails. Get your hopes up, and boom, they are shot down like a Scud missile. Cruelty knows no limits.

First thing I saw was a photograph of two men hugging. The words underneath it leaped off the page. They said, ". . . seeking comfort in the power of brotherhood."

Oh, terrific, I figured. More weirdos.

Still, I read on. It had to get better.

In a nutshell, this is what the movement is all about:

Men, who in many cases say did not get enough attention from their fathers during the crucial growing up years, are going on weekend retreats where they re-enact the sacred rituals of Indian tribes and pound goatskin-covered drums while raising their voices in supplication to west African tribal gods.

Weird?

You bet it is.

I mean, think about it. You've got a bunch of spoiled upper middle-class men, frustrated because they don't think their daddies loved them enough going on weekend retreats where they pound drums, sweat profusely and chant strange slogans.

They also tell each other about their problems.

One participant described it this way: "We were chanting and sweating and screaming and hollering. It was fun and uplifting because it involved prayers and a lot of affirmation. People talked about pain."

Oh, wow, sign me up! There's nothing I enjoy more than sweating and talking about my problems, especially with strange frustrated men who unashamedly use words like "uplifting" and "affirmation."

As you might expect, most of these retreats — or "workshops" as they are sometimes called — take place in California and the Northeast.

Which led Chicago attorney Tom Lubin to say, "Thank God I haven't spent any of the '90s on either coast."

Tell me about it, Tom. Tell me about it.

EYE: Eye bank restores vision

said. "A lot of diseases you can diagnose by looking into the eye.

"The front of the eye is like a window, and behind the eye is a lens, a natural lens, which is like the lens in a camera. It does the focusing of the picture on the back of the eye called the retina. And the retina is very similar to the film in the camera."

The retina, which is about a tenth of a millimeter thick, has about 10 layers of "very specialized cells," Shah said. "And each has a different function."

The retina's layers of chromogenic dyes process colors, contrasts, and brightness to "give you the total picture."

The million light-sensitive cells in the retina are primed for action. "And each one sends a signal by an individual nerve fiber to the brain, and the brain puts it all together. That's how we see.

"It's amazing," Shah said.

Before metal meets flesh, nurse anesthetist Marcia Kenyon of West Texas Anesthesia consults with the doctor and the patient. Except for a moment, Coker will be conscious throughout the operation. He will see light, but his eye muscles will be temporarily paralyzed during the operation.

Coker seems to take a nap; it lasts only a blink.

"Mr. Coker," Ms. Kenyon said, "you're missing your debut."

But not for long.

"Mr. Coker, how are you doing?"

"Fine."

Promptly, the anesthetist returns to her station, where she monitors Coker's heart rate, heart rhythm, and oxygen saturation on an electronic panel.

Except for his eye, Coker is covered in white with a touch of blue.

And except for his breathing, the slightest movement of his diaphragm, Coker is without movement.

Instead, it is the surgeon who moves. He cuts into the eye, opens the envelope, the sack, containing the eye's natural lens. It is cloudy. He inserts the plastic lens, and closes the opening.

It is tedious but familiar work.

"OK, Mr. Coker," said Shah. "Everything looks very good."

Ms. Kenyon, once again approaches.

"How are you doing, Mr. Coker?"

"Just fine."

With a patch over his eye, Coker returns to his room.

It is noon.

By mid-afternoon, he will be gone and will return to his country home near Big Spring and near the old Guitar Ranch where he once cowboyed.

The next day, the patch will be removed.

Soon, he will be back at work and then back in the hospital for a cataract operation on the other eye.

A couple of days after his cataract operation, Coker was "doing great.

"I had a good doctor," he said. "I really expected to have some pain. I haven't had a bit of trouble in the world. If everything went that easy, I'd be in heaven."

cial permission.

That is small comfort to Mrs. Inskeep, her husband J.D., and their three surviving sons. They believe Ms. Shaw is mentally disturbed and may hold a grudge against them for their efforts to keep her in prison.

"I'm sure she's going to come back into Midland County even though she's been told not to," Mrs. Inskeep said. "How can you be sure she's not going to? I'll always have the fear of opening a door and finding her there."

But Ms. Shaw's mother, Gloria Shaw, said she believes her daughter does not intend to harm the Inskeeps and is capable of abiding by the conditions of her release.

"She has no grudge," said Mrs. Shaw, who no longer lives in Midland.

Mrs. Shaw said her daughter, who testified during her trial that Dale Inskeep abused her, is genuinely remorseful about Dale's death. And, Mrs. Shaw said, it hasn't only been the Inskeeps who have suffered in the wake of the killing.

"My daughter has suffered greatly from this also," she said. "I can very well understand the hurt that the Inskeeps have suffered, but the Inskeeps don't think we have suffered any hurt."

Mrs. Shaw said her daughter has made the most of her prison experience and will be able to become a productive member of society.

"I do believe my daughter has spent enough time (in prison)," she said.

Dorothy Shaw's father, Durwood Shaw of Midland, declined to comment on his daughter's release.

GAIN: Sharing made it less scary, participants reported

(From 1C)

Several attendees said the self-assessment was "very helpful" and the confidential nature of the workshop made it easier to "talk specifics."

Some participants said the workshop "felt like a beginning."

Another attendee agreed saynext workshop?"

Ms. Klyer said more workshops may be planned for the fall.

Lutherans' open house set today

Staff Report

Lutheran Social Service of Texas will host a dedication and open house at 1:30 p.m. today at its adult day care facility, 2510 W. Ohio.

The Shepherd's Adult Day Care Center will officially open 7 a.m. Monday.

"We saw that this type of day care was very much needed for this area," said director and licensed nurse Debbie Shultz. "The main object is to keep the elderly as independent as possible. Many are prematurely admitted to nursing homes even though they still have a lot to offer."

Ms. Shultz said the center will offer respite care for caregivers of the elderly, disabled or persons with Alzheimer's disease.

Ms. Shultz said adults brought to the day care must "be able to transfer themselves — with minimum help — from a wheelchair to the commode."

The day care center will offer lunch and two snacks to its clients. It will feature guided activities such as oil painting and physical activities in a recreation area.

It is equipped to help adults who require day care as an alternative for remaining independent while receiving help with daily living skills. The center is designed for adults who don't need nursing home care.

"We will have a trained nurse, a state-certified activity director, social workers and a dietician on staff," Ms. Shultz said.

The director and nurse said she has 15 years of experience in elderly care. "And I spent much time directing nurses in nursing homes," she said.

The center will be open from 7 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Persons must stay a minimum of three hours. Beds are available and the center can accommodate about 30 clients, according to the director.

Cost of the day care is based on a sliding scale fee.

For information call 684-5166.

LLST also offers adoption, guardianship and emergency response services.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Three days remain to obtain time permits for Summer II

By H.A. Tuck

Tuck

Due to the July Fourth holiday on Thursday, prospective students have just three days remaining to obtain time permits for Summer II registration.

The college's Student Services Office in the Student Center will be accepting applications for Summer II this week, Monday through Wednesday, from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Persons who come in this week will receive permits which assign specific times to report for registration on Wednesday, July 10. Those who don't obtain time permits will be registered only during the last two hours of registration. Summer II classes begin on Thursday, July 11, and end Aug. 15. Summer II classes are conducted Monday through Thursday.

Information about classes being offered during Summer II is available by calling 685-4501.

The final registration count for Summer I, which ends July 9, was a record 1,743 students. That's an increase of 64 over the 1990 Summer I count. The registration for Summer II sessions usually is much smaller ... in the range of 850-1,000 students. In fact, the only time that Summer II registration has been more than 1,000 was in 1989 when it hit 1,143. That was the final period for students to register for college without having to take the TASP exam before earning 12 hours of credit.

The campus looks especially lush and green right now after a series of good rains. Earlier in the spring the grass was struggling, but the rain and timely applications of fertilizer have worked well together. The problem now is getting all the grass mowed as frequently as necessary. All the other flowers, shrubs and most of the trees are looking great, as well. One of the large flowering plums in the Occupational-Technical Building courtyard died this spring, but that seems to be a hazard with that particular type of tree.

There was a small negative aspect to the rain. Newly-planted areas around the north side of the Student Center had much of the grass seed washed away or washed into low areas. As a result, it may take most of the summer for the bald areas to get covered with grass. Those areas were neglected or covered with construction equipment while the Student Center addition was being built.

The Board of Trustees last week went through a tentative budget for the 1991-92 academic year. Since about half of the college's operating budget comes from state allocations, which haven't been made, it was a difficult process. As the Board noted during its meeting, it is possible that classes will begin this fall without knowing how much state funding will be available. The Legislature is faced with a shortage of $4-5 billion for the new biennium and has scheduled a special session in July in an attempt to adopt an appropriations measure.

You might have noticed that various Midland College advertisements for new or even replacement faculty and staff positions have included the statement "... subject to funding..."

Our hats are off to all the many folks who make Kids' College at Midland College such a success. It starts, of course, with program director Jan Reed. But she recruits scores of teachers, teenagers who serve as runners and guides, almost everyone on the campus who walks by her office. The results are 800 first through sixth graders are directed to classes all over campus, kept fortified with liquids, educated and entertained.

Another session begins July 15 and there are some vacancies in a few classes. If you are interested in registering a child or grandchild for two weeks of Kids' College, visit the Continuing Education office in the Administration Building not later than Thursday, July 11.

More information may be obtained by calling 685-4519.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Hilton evening to benefit Casa de Amigos program

Staff Report

New York-based Medallion Hotels, which manages the Midland Hilton & Towers, will host "An Evening at the Hilton" at 6:30 p.m. July 20 with proceeds benefitting Casa de Amigos, an east Midland non-profit organization which sponsors educational programs that serve low-income individuals of all ethnic backgrounds and ages in the community.

"The West Texas credo of people reaching out to help others achieve their own full potential is truly reflected in the philosophy of Casa de Amigos," said Fred Eydt, president of Medallion Hotels. "It's this type of community spirit — which we believe characterizes our own corporate philosophy — that led us to Casa de Amigos as the beneficiary of this event."

More than 400 people are expected to attend "An Evening at the Hilton," which also showcases the completion of the hotel's recent refurbishment program.

The evening begins at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, July 20, with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres in the new lobby of the Midland Hilton & Towers, located at 117 W. Wall St. in downtown Midland.

The event will feature a silent auction for services donated by community leaders — including rides in Mayor Carroll Thomas' Ferrari and Texaco's corporate hot-air balloon. Harp music by Kim Gorman of Snyder will accompany the auction. A dinner will follow at 8 p.m. in the ballroom.

"We are delighted for the opportunity to share in this event with Medallion Hotels," said Lael Cordes-Pitts, executive director of Casa de Amigos. "The dramatic styling of the hotel's lobby provides a perfect backdrop for business and community leaders to come together in support of our organization's programs for needy residents of the community."

Tickets for "An Evening at the Hilton" are $37.50 each, or $300 for a reserved table of eight. Area residents may call 682-9701 for tickets and additional information. Tickets are tax-deductible, as allowed by law, and proceeds from the event will benefit the educational programs of Casa de Amigos.

Robert G. "Bob" Kiker was installed as Worshipful Master for Masonic Lodge No. 623 Saturday. Other officers are Wayne D. Groce, senior warden; W. Dean Porter, junior warden; Dale Mansfield, senior deacon; Tommy Flud, junior deacon; Don Seed, treasurer; H.B. Walker, Jr., secretary; E.B. Compton, senior steward; Valente Chavez, junior steward; Bill Dormady, tiler; Russell "Rusty" Gifford, chaplain; and Price Robinson, trustee. Installing officer was Sam E. Hilburn, past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Texas.

DAVID WILLIAMS

Employee of the Quarter

Mike Lewis & Associates has chosen maintenance technician David Williams as Employee of the Quarter for the second quarter of 1991. David received this honor due to his professionalism in daily job assignments. He works full time as a maintenance technician at Bank One Plaza in Odessa. It is a pleasure to work with David on a daily basis due to his outstanding personality and his willingness to tackle any job assigned by his supervisor. He is liked and respected by his co-workers as well as the tenants of the building in which he works. David has been employed by Mike Lewis & Associates since December, 1990.

Besides a full work load each day, David manages to attend Odessa College full time. He is majoring in Electrical Engineering. David likes to spend what little spare time he has riding motorcycles, working with computer software, and test driving fast cars.

Although this is a combined Citation by Publication for the delinquent tax suits listed above, there is no consolidation of these suits, and each and every suit remains separate and is to be treated as such for all purposes.

The Midland Central Appraisal District, which collects property taxes for the City of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland College District, and Midland County Hospital District is Plaintiff, and which said property is delinquent to Plaintiff for taxes shown above, exclusive of any penalties, interest, and costs therein allowed by law up to and including the day of Judgment herein.

Listed in the caption above are separate suits, now pending, in which Petitions and Interventions have been filed to collect delinquent property taxes and to foreclose applicable liens. The listing for each suit sets out: (1) the suit number, (2) the Plaintiff Midland Central Appraisal District, (3) the Defendants cited by publication and personally served; (4) the date the petition was filed; (5) the return date of this Citation; (6) the property description; and (7) the total amount of base tax due the taxing units whose taxes are collected by the Plaintiff, exclusive of interest, penalties, and costs therein allowed by law.

IN THE NAME AND BY THE AUTHORITY OF THE STATE OF TEXAS, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN AS FOLLOWS:

TO: ALL DEFENDANTS NAMED ABOVE.

EACH SUIT IS FOR: (1) Delinquent property taxes owed to Plaintiff on each property described above, the amounts also shown above which is exclusive of any penalties and interest due to Plaintiff up to the day of judgment herein; each suit is also on file to establish and foreclose tax liens on each such property; and (2) All delinquent property taxes, penalties, interest, and costs which may be proved by any taxing units.

COPIES OF PLEADINGS: Filed with the District Clerk (Rule 72, Texas Rules of Civil Procedure). A copy of the Petition with citation is not required (Rule 117a, Texas Rules of Civil Procedure).

ADDITIONAL NOTICE: no further notice or citation to you is required on claims of Plaintiff including additional taxes which may be shown to be delinquent up to the date of judgment. Parties to this suit must take notice of and answer to all claims and pleadings filed by the other parties hereto.

This citation lists the Defendants in each separate suit whose names are known, the descriptions of the properties in each suit on which property taxes owed to Plaintiff are delinquent, due and unpaid and the amounts of such delinquent taxes now due on each property, inclusive of the penalty, interest and costs. When attached to any pleading in each suit, this citation is made a part of each such pleading for all pertinent purposes.

In addition to the Defendants listed by name above, whether the same be persons, corporations, trustees, joint stock associations or other legal entities or juristic persons, there also are made Defendants in each suit with regard to each property where applicable

GROUP 1: Any and all undetermined, unnamed, and/or unknown persons, proprietors, corporations, trustees, partnerships, joint stock associations and other legal entities or juristic persons owning all or any part of the properties described in this citation or having or claiming any interest, legal or equitable in or to all or any part of said properties, or liens thereon, including adverse claimants.

GROUP 2: Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown stockholders of all Defendant corporations.

GROUP 3: Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown members of all partnerships, joint stock associations and other legal entities which are Defendants.

GROUP 4: Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown spouses of all named individual Defendants and all individual Defendants designated in Groups 1 through 3; and

GROUP 5: Undetermined, unnamed and/or unknown successors in title of whatsoever nature and by whatsoever means, heirs, assigns, devisees and legal representatives of all named Defendants and Defendants designated in Groups 1 through 4, whether or not such Defendants be deceased or under some legal disability

For the purposes of citation, if and when the names of the foregoing designated Defendants can be determined and made certain, each such Defendant may be cited by name when such information becomes available, together with a brief description of the capacity in which each name had been made certain.

Defendants, properties, and taxes involved are listed separately for each suit in this citation under separate property numbers; the Defendants named under each property number being those who own the property described under that same property number or have or claim some interest, legal or equitable in and to said property or liens thereon, or interest in property comprising all or part of pooled and/or unitized tracts and mutations of such property

Taxes shown due under each property number are those delinquent on the property described under that same property number. All lot, block, survey and group numbers, etc. herein are inclusive of all numbers appearing. All property herein was located within the geographical boundaries of the Plaintiff at the time taxes were assessed. Where descriptions herein refer to Deed Records or other records, such references are to volumes and pages in the specified records of the County named in the citation hereof, and to such records referred to herein reference is made for all purposes.

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED To appear and defend such suit on the first Monday after the expiration of forty-two (42) days from and after the date of issuance hereof, the 20th day of June, 1991 same being the 5th day of August, A.D., 1991 (which is the return day of such citation), before the Honorable District Court of Midland County, Texas, to be held at the courthouse thereof, then to show cause why judgment shall not be rendered for such taxes, penalties, interest and costs, and condemning said property and ordering foreclosure of the constitutional and statutory tax liens thereon for taxes due the Plaintiff and the taxing units parties hereto, and those who may intervene herein, together with all interest, penalties, and costs allowed by law up to and including the day of judgment herein, and all costs of this suit.

Issued and given under my hand and seal of said Court in the City of Midland, Midland County, Texas, this the 20th day of June, A.D., 1991.

Vivian Wood,
Clerk of the District Court,
Midland County, Texas

Deputy, Cindy Thompson

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

TWO-CAREER FAMILIES PROVIDE UNIQUE HOUSING NEEDS

The changing dynamics of the workforce continues to increase the number of two-career families -- making it increasingly important that both financial partners be accommodated when making a new home selection, says Dene Kelly, President of Dene Kelly, Inc. Realtors.

"With more two-income families and greater emphasis on children, one of the greatest challenges facing the relocation industry today is convincing couples to move," notes Ms. Kelly

She adds, "Today's parents realize that it is important for children to have a high-quality family lifestyle, while economic pressure requires both husband and wife to seek employment in the workforce. Longer work hours and tighter schedules also make greater demands on the lifestyle of parents."

Kelly

Dene Kelly Realtors is a member of RELO-The International Relocation Network. Located in Chicago, the RELO network has approximately 1,400-member companies and provides transfer-related real estate services, including home marketing, home finding, rental services and commercial real estate services, to meet the relocation needs of transferees and their corporations in the U.S., Canada, and other countries.

"A recent survey indicated that RELO members are providing transferee services to the trailing financial partner in more than 50 percent of the two-career moves taking place across the country. In one out of every six cases, the husband is the trailing financial partner -- which can create a potential conflict due to the importance of the careers of both individuals, not just the husband's."

Ms. Kelly says that families deciding to take a transfer to enhance their career development can help ease some of the stress of both career and family life by choosing a home that works well for the entire family.

"Homes with extra bedrooms or an office can be ideal for both husband and wife. These work rooms can be outfitted by the family with all the conveniences of an office, allowing parents to spend their evenings at home, rather than at the office." notes Ms. Kelly. "Of course parents need to be careful not to "shut out" the family, but rather provide a setting in which members can be most productive, while being able to take care of family needs, such as cooking dinner, providing supervision and helping with homework assignments," she adds.

Ms. Kelly also emphasizes the key role of the location of a home in easing the burden of two-career families struggling with time constraints.

"Selecting a home with a short commuting distance creates more time at home, and quick response time to emergencies such as sick children. In addition, older children will need to have easy access to school, babysitters and recreational programs and facilities," says Ms. Kelly. She also notes that close proximity of home and work also gives parents more "peace of mind" knowing that children are only a short drive away.

Ms. Kelly says that today's real estate professionals are provided with special training and can assist the trailing spouse with job counseling and placement service referrals. In some cases, transferees are also being given the names of resume preparation services and yellow page and other directory listings to assist them in preparing for their job search.

"The important thing is to keep the family as happy and comfortable as possible during this time of transition -- by helping families find a suitable home and providing assistance to the trailing spouse, some of the issues of accepting a transfer can be reduced or removed," says Ms. Kelly.

Dramatic: master suite-separate retreate, tiled fireplace, luxurious baths and more separate storage room with ice maker is located in this room.

Adjoining the living room is the formal dining room which features custom designed carpeting, extra high ceilings, fabric covered walls, and a beautiful onyx fireplace.

The recently remodeled kitchen is a chef's dream, with tile floors and upscale appliances including a Garland professional stove, two dishwashers, two double ovens, two refrigerators, a built-in toaster, and a large walk-in pantry.

A large skylight as well as recessed lighting and track lighting add brightness to the room while the yellow, pink and orchid wallpaper add cheerful charm. Kitchen windows face the beautifully landscaped front yard.

The adjoining service area affords every convenience with an extra large utility room which accommodates two washers and two dryers, the area also includes a complete service bath.

The dramatic master suite features a separate retreat with a tiled fireplace, entertainment center, his and her luxurious baths, and spacious walk-in closets with built-in shelves and racks. The baths open into an adjoining atrium, with sauna, jacuzzi, and six skylights. The entire home, as well as guest house and cabana are serviced by a 300 gallon storage tank of de-ionized water. The master suite also features a beautifully decorated library and office, and large packing closet.

Other living quarters include a guest suite with separate bath and his and her dressing areas. The childrens' suite, which features a play room with Edwards Field commercial grade carpet, entertainment center, two bedrooms with shared bath, and a separte entrance.

The accommodations continue with a detached guest house offering three bedrooms, two baths, two living areas, complete kitchen facilities and separate heating and cooling units.

Other amenities include: state of the art security system, sound barrier fence, custom carpet by Edwards Field of New York, tapestry walls, sprinkler system and zoned heating and cooling.

Flagstone walkways. perimeter flowerbeds and an aggregate concrete drive complement the sophisticated appeal of this home.

This home is offered exclusively by Re/Max of Midland.

Don Harvey Realtors

Permian Basin Showcase of Homes

Shopping by television has seen a tremendous growth in popularity and success in recent years. Now, the real estate industry is beginning to write its own success story in the field of television marketing, according to Don Harvey, owner and President of Don Harvey, Realtors. Don Harvey, Realtors has itself recently entered the arena of tele-marketing blending real estate efforts within a TV program format.

Harvey

The Permian Basin Showcase of Homes is a show jointly hosted and produced by Don Harvey, Realtors of Midland and Trower Realtors of Odessa. The show appears every Saturday at 11:30 A.M. on cable Channel 3, KMID TV. There are usually 8 to 11 homes from each city appearing on each show.

The show is now entering its 17th week and the response has been tremendous. Those very positive responses have come from, buyers, potential buyers and sellers. The effectiveness of our marketing effort is something that can be clearly measured. For instance, our records show that of the 70 Midland homes which have completed our Telemarketing program, 44% are either sold and closed or are currently under contract.

Our participating sellers have all been very excited about having their homes appear on TV and are very pleased with the results. Since there is absolutely no additional charge or expense to the seller, this has proven to be a very welcomed marketing bonus which they've been able to benefit from by simply selecting Don Harvey, Realtors to market their home.

Mr. Harvey added, "We firmly believe in the future of tele-marketing and intend to remain at the forefront as it continues to develop in technology and scope. In our present show, we will continue to experiment with changes and innovations as we go. We hope the many existing as well as prospective residents of the Permian Basin will continue to view our show each Saturday and provide feedback that will help us further improve the scope of our services."

To obtain more information on our show, about specific properties featured on the show or how your home can appear on the show, just call Don Harvey, Realtors at 915-683-5333.

Don Harvey, Realtors would like to express sincere thanks to local sponsors who who support our show and are always available to further assist buyers and sellers with real estate associated needs such as financing, insurance, title policies and closings. These fine companies include David Tomlinson, State Farm Insurance, Lone Star Abstract and Title Company, ClayDesta Mortgage Company, Houston Copeland, State Farm Insurance, Ector County Abstract and Titlt and McAfee Mortgage Company.

The vine-covered Hatton Court (top) in Upton St. Leonards in Gloucester, England, is known for its attention to detail. In fact, it won the "Loo of the Year" award from the hotel industries trade publication for the most pristine and attractive bathrooms (inset) in the country. Covered in 150-year-old Wisteria, The Castle at Taunton, England, (left) has received visitors for more than 300 years.

Gloucester and Taunton:

England offers an entracing experience

Travelers have different reasons for their destinations: a friend to visit, a new country, a repeated experience or just for the scenery. My reason for choosing Gloucester and Taunton, England, was that the environs of these two towns were favorite places of two of my favorite authors: poet William Taylor Coleridge and children's author and illustrator Beatrix Potter.

Gloucestershire, set in the breathtaking Cotswolds, was a favorite visiting place for Beatrix, who enjoyed the view and the company of a cousin who lived there.

While visiting, the author heard the true story of a tailor in Gloucester who was to make a grand coat for the mayor to wear to an important event. But the tailor was so exhausted after cutting out the coat that the thought of sewing button holes and making seams was too much for him. So he went home to bed, leaving precious little time for accomplishing his task next day. When he arrived at his shop the next morning, the coat was already made, buttonholes and all, so he put a sign in the window urging visitors to come to Gloucester where the fairies did the tailoring overnight.

Beatrix Potter changed the fairies to mice. Then she turned the young tailor into an old and infirm one, and made the coat of cherry-colored silk lined in yellow taffeta, which the mayor of Gloucester ordered for his wedding. She titled her story "The Tailor of Gloucester," and children have enjoyed the tiny illustrated volume since it was first published in 1902.

If you really want to immerse yourself in Gloucestershire, you will want to stay at Hatton Court at Upton St. Leonards just three miles from Gloucester. I called ahead (0452 617412) and made transportation arrangements from the Cheltenham Spa train station.

Couple honored with pre-nuptial parties

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Tulsans Kate Lanford and Stuart Beal, who were married Saturday evening in the bride's hometown of Little Rock, Ark., were honored at a series of pre-nuptial parties.

McKnight-Harrison

The festivities began in Midland in May when the groom's parents, Nancy and Barry Beal, hosted an engagement party at Midland Country Club.

The following day Kate was honored with a coffee in the home of Patti (Mrs. Watson) LaForce. The other hostesses were Louan (Mrs. Glenn) Rogers, Wally (Mrs. Jerry) Fullinwider, Carole (Mrs. Johnny) Warren, Barbara Jowell and Marianne (Mrs. Wilbur) Yeager.

A "Barbecue Texas Style" honored the pair at the home of Pat and Dan Black. The other host couples were Suzy and Jim Boldrick, Caroline and Perry Bolger, Susan and Ron Britton, Sharon and Gene Floyd, Nancy Hull, Mary and Bill Kennedy, and Nancy and Paul Rea.

The groom's father hosted a bachelor party last weekend at Calamity Creek Ranch at Fort Davis. Guests included the wedding party and several close friends.

Stuarts parents hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening at Pleasant Valley Country Club in Little Rock.

A riverboat cruise and brunch for the out-of-town wedding guests was hosted Saturday by Jimmie and James Currie of Garden City and Eloise and Bob Davenport of Midland at Riverfront Park in Little Rock.

The bride's parents, Gay and Bob Lanford, hosted the wedding reception at Little Rock Country Club.

SEVERAL CALLIGRAPHERS seasoned with workshops at Ghost Ranch decided to have their own Calligraphy Camp in the cool pines of Ruidoso, N.M. Juanice (Mrs. Lloyd) MacDonald hosted the group for a five-day session taught by Herb Cooper, local artist and Lee High School teacher.

To maintain the camp traditions, there were duty lists and activity leaders, all of which were coordinated by the hostess.

Participants and activity leaders included Helen (Mrs. Allen) Spinks, Helen's sister-in-law, Ritz (Mrs. Simon) Hendershot of Gonzales, Mary Ann (Mrs. Steve) Blaylock, Georgia (Mrs. Carroll) Thomas, Martha (Mrs. Dan) Kallus, former Midlander Faylene (Mrs. David) Adams, of Mountainburg, Ark., and filling in for Norma (Mrs. Erwin) Baumann, a newcomer to calligraphy, Lisa (Mrs. Terry) Gray.

When not seriously involved in their calligraphy projects, the group enjoyed the wonderful restaurants of the area, relaxing on the deck of the MacDonald home and evening fireside chats.

Plans are already underway for the second annual event.

FIVE GENERATIONS of the family of the late Nancy and W.R. Rhodes of Pecos met for a reunion Friday and Saturday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa in Midland.

Mr. Rhodes and the former Nancy Fisher were married in Friendship, Ark., on Jan. 15, 1891. In 1908, they moved to Andrews County, where Mr. Rhodes was sheriff/tax collector from 1917 to 1920. They later moved to Pecos, where he was a wholesale oil distributor and an agent for Singer Sewing Machine Co.

Nine children born to this marriage. The one remaining first generation descendant, Elizabeth R. McCree, and her husband, W.S. "Creamy" McCree of Pecos, were celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary at the reunion. Family members joined in celebrating that milestone event, as well as the centennial anniversary of the Fisher-Rhodes wedding.

Relatives from Arkansas, Arizona and throughout Texas were present, along with two nieces of Mrs. Rhodes.

Two of the couple's grandchildren and their spouses, Alice R. and Maurice Cole of Midland and Ruth and W.D. Rhodes of Clarksville, were hosts to the group of more than 40 persons.

A REUNION and farewell get-together honoring Midland High School's retiring home economics teachers Darlene (Mrs. John) Hicks and Marilyn (Mrs. Calvin) Baker was held recently in the home of Martha (Mrs. Dan) Kallus. The invitation stated it was to be a "no white gloves" affair to extend best wishes to the two long-time home economists.

Other home economists present who have worked with Darlene and Marilyn since they started their careers in Midland included Pauline McWilliams, Olga Banks, Mildred Pope, Frances (Mrs. Durwood) Ratliff and Ruth (Mrs. Chuck) Holmstrom.

Others present who reminisced and listened to the treasured stories of Mildred Pope were Carolyn Hunt, present teacher and former student of Midred; Sara (Mrs. Bill) St. Clair, Hermine (Mrs. Gene) Erwin, Mim (Mrs. Ish) Curry, Linda Cranfill and the hostess.

The honorees were presented address books as a reminder to keep in touch with their Midland friends.

ENGLAND: Taunton is always lively

(From 1E)

I had heard that this was one of the most beautiful counties in the United Kingdom, but I still was unprepared for the sight of the 17th century estate 600 feet above sea level with an unparalleled view over the Severn Valley and the Malvern Hills.

The old manor house was covered in a red and golden mass of what we would call Virginia Creeper.

There was a wedding in progress in the large banquet rooms with vast windows that offered a panoramic view. Not one guest looked out the windows. They were locals accustomed to the beauty and their eyes were only for the bride and bridegroom and the celestial wedding cake that they were cutting.

Everything was peach colored, including the peaches in the champagne and peach-colored roses on the cake. Looking up at her groom adoringly, the bride leaned and whispered to him. I imagined that she said, "Who would have thought that I, a girl from Gloucester, would have a peach-colored wedding reception in Hatton Court, the grandest manor house in the county."

Later I looked at some of the chef's menus and I thought that Hatton Court must offer the grandest food in the county, with entrees like roast woodpidgeon with port and fresh cranberry sauce, appetizers of chicken liver parfait and dessert such as iced ginger meringue gateau. The British Tourist Authority has bestowed its highest commendation on Hatton Court's Carrington Restaurant.

PROBABLY THE most unusual distinction that Hatton Court has ever garnered was "Loo of the Year" awarded by the hotel industries trade publication. The publication set out to find the most pristine and attractive bathrooms in the country, and chose Hatton Court. This was quite pleasing to the staff who tidy them constantly.

Of course the award is just another example of British attention to detail. This everyday regard for the surroundings is never more evident than in the well-cared-for towns in Gloucestershire.

The Hatton Court is a wonderful headquarters if you want to visit Stratford-on-Avon, Oxford or the old Roman town of Bath.

I wanted to visit the old Roman town of Gloucester, which was an easy three miles away. I alighted to the sound of bells clanging in the Norman Tower of the great cathedral of Gloucester. It had the usual nave and a cloister with the oldest fan vaulting in the country. My favorite was the Lady Chapel with windows that look like a lady's fingers folded in prayer. In the Lady Chapel, all shape and form is well ordered grace and beauty.

I look at the docks, the Antique Centre which is the largest of its kind outside London, and save the best for last: the little street where the tailor of Gloucester had his shop and Number Six College Court at St. Michaels Gate, the tailor's house.

Here there is a Beatrix Potter shop and exhibition open Monday through Saturday. Unfortunately, it is Sunday so I look in the window that is overflowing with tea cozies and wedgwood lamps illustrated with Peter Rabbit, even though his favorite vegetable garden, which belonged to Mr. McGregor, was probably not in Gloucestershire but in Westmoreland County.

BACK AT THE hotel, I find that sometimes Hatton Court offers Beatrix Potter weekends complete with tours and a lecture by Keith Clarke, author of "Beatrix Potter's Gloucestershire." You may call 011-44-452-617412 direct or 1-800-727-2771. If you go, don't forget to take your magnifying glass in order to better see the fairies or the mice, and do be aware that there is a minute sign in Hatton Court which states, "Smart dress expected." I didn't notice it until leaving. When I said goodbye to the couples whom I had met in the lounge, I decided that they were indeed smartly, if tweedily, dressed.

I take the train for Gloucester and the Coleridge country in the West. I have made reservations at The Castle in Taunton and feel much like the bride. Who would have thought that a West Texas woman would be taking up residence in a castle?

The Castle at Taunton is all that I had hoped.

To begin with, it is covered in wisteria, and the delicate lavender color together with the scent makes entering its doors a heady experience. Once a Norman fortress, it has been a guest hostel for royalty, literary giants and the great statesmen of Great Britain for over 300 years.

Here Wordsworth and Coleridge discussed their lyrical works, Prime Minister Disraeli argued reform and the Queen of Portugal once swept in, her enormous skirts covering a boy on the Castle steps.

While the Gloucestershire countryside was lovely, the Castle offers the bustle of a busy town. Set in the city's center, surrounded by pedestrian shopping walks, wine bars and quaint restaurants, Taunton is always lively. I step out and see Clarke's Tap and Henry's Pub. I am told that the best drink in Taunton is cider made in the country and I try some. It is not at all like our pale version of the apple drink.

I VISIT THE county museum near the castle and am entranced with the colorful uniforms and medals issued for every possible act of bravery. I stroll the walled garden among some of the 12th century remains of the fortress: the ancient Keep, the inner Moat Wall and the highly unusual square well that the Romans placed there.

Then I decide to see some of the countryside. There are safaris to Exmoor, home of the Red Deer, in the comfort of a Range Rover, and tours of Glastonbury where the graves of King Arthur and Queen Guinevere are reputed to be. I am afraid that if I go to Nether Stowey in Somerset where poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge's cottage is, that I will never want to leave, so I choose the train which cuts across Devon and runs down to Cornwall. The train runs around red cliffs, sometimes splitting them in half. For most of the journey the train follows the English Channel.

There are fishing fleets and color-washed cottages up on the hills. As the train clicks by, the flat land is sliced by hedgerows. Particularly beautiful is the little village of Tiegmouth with its cottages of pink, pale blue, terracotta, cream and pale orangey peach that line shore.

The conductor's voice carries well. "Plymouth. Next stop Plymouth," he cries. Being a proud American, I, of course, get off at Plymouth. The place where the pilgrims set sail in 1620 aboard the Mayflower was not the biggest event in Plymouth to the local population. Still the city fathers were kind enough to set a stone plaque into the pier. It reads: Mayflower, 1620, Christopher Jones, Master, to colonize New England.

IT IS COLD and windy in the harbor so I walk a little way and find the Maritime Pub. I have a chicken and ham pie in the John Courage Bar. Warmed, I go out into the narrow cobblestone streets to see the Elizabethan homes that are open for touring. Alas, they are closed on Mondays. Having missed Beatrix Potter's museum and now the homes of Plymouth, I resolve next trip to do what all travelers should do: call in advance.

I content myself with some antique stores, art galleries and a shop that sells miniatures and dolls. I look at Lady Astor's residence high above the water. I wander the harbor again.

The townspeople have taken up contributions to restore "The Plymouth," the town's namesake battleship, which was damaged in the Falklands War and is now permanently anchored in the town. I go a little farther and come upon the Starcross Yacht Club, where boats are moored in the shallow water. A man is fishing from the shore and a heron alights beside him.

I take the train back and notice the tiny boats moored at the doors of little homes on the inlet outside Exeter. There are propeller boats, rowboats and motor launches, which remind me of the motley fleet that saved the British soldiers from Dunkirk during World War II. As I move across Devon back to the Castle, I think on this and how our countries' histories are so entwined.

All is relaxed elegance back at the Castle. This time I do notice the discreet notice: "A reasonable standard of dress is required." I dress for dinner. Everyone is smart. The food is divine, which I expected considering the number of accolades that the Castle has collected for its cuisine. I memorize the direct number 011-44-823-72671 and jot down the Prestige Hotels number: 1-800-544-7570.

When I return home, I remember the good times, and a line from Coleridge comes to mind, "A delight comes sudden on my heart, and I am glad as I myself were there!"

Interactive home computers help do-it-yourselfers improve

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's growing ranks of do-it-yourselfers are finding the presence of interactive computers in home improvement centers a big assist in making repairs and home improvement projects less intimidating, according to industry observers.

The percentage of householders who are do-it-yourselfers has doubled from 40 percent to 80 percent from the 1970s to the 1990s, reports researchers for New York-based Intermark Corp., a designer-producer of interactive units.

Company officials says the growth of the do-it-yourself movement continues to attract many non-professional shoppers, including women and the elderly.

With a reported decline of knowledgeable store personnel on retail floors, a growing number of home improvement centers are installing interactive units to provide amateur repair and craftspersons product information and guidance on necessary tools and application techniques.

The information is furnished on a liquid crystal screen in response to questions posed by shoppers who simply press a keypad.

The addition of easily accessible graphics, including diagrams and photographs, adjacent to the interactive unit, not only helps to tell shoppers how they can do the job, but is a confidence builder, convincing them it is something they can accomplish, the researchers noted.

Lender flood insurance policies could cost you more than need be

Associated Press

If you're one of about 8 million people who bought a home in a floodplain with the help of a federally regulated lender, you're required to have flood insurance.

But if you're like most of your neighbors, either you never purchased a policy or your coverage has lapsed.

An estimated 80 percent of those who fall under the flood-insurance law aren't complying.

That's about to change.

Lenders can now buy coverage for you if you don't have your own policy — and their policies will cost you more and protect you less.

You can buy your own coverage, under the National Flood Insurance Program, from local insurance agents at an average cost of $285 a year.

Coverage on a new $50,000 home, which might cost you about $225 a year, can run up to $625 when your lender buys it. The cost goes up dramatically for more expensive homes.

Insurance for a $185,000 home would cost $252 a year if you bought it yourself, but $2,312 if a lender bought it for you.

Lenders' policies offer less protection because they cover only the mortgage amount.

When you buy the insurance, you can cover both the mortgage and your equity up to the program's maximum of $185,000.

You can also insure your home's contents against flood damage up to $60,000.

Before your lender buys a policy, you'll get several letters demanding proof that you're covered and warning that if you have no policy, one will be purchased for you.

You'll then have time to buy flood insurance on your own at a more favorable rate.

Hong Kong should be seen before it is extinct

By Cheryl Blackerby
N.Y. Times News Service

Two friends have a choice of a half-dozen free stopovers on their way to Australia this summer, and they were considering Fiji and New Zealand.

I lobbied for Hong Kong.

No place in the world stands out in my mind as vividly as the tiny British colony.

And probably no place stands in danger of changing as much as Hong Kong might in the next decade. Go now, I told them, before it goes the way of the rhinos in Kenya.

The 410-square-mile colony startles and strokes the senses like no other place on Earth.

I can close my eyes and picture in brilliant detail the green and white Star Ferries crossing Victoria Harbour: The bells are ringing; the deckhands in blue sailor uniforms are manning the hawsers; and the army of commuters is taking advantage of the trip's seven minutes of quiet to read the papers.

I easily can bring to mind the mesmerizing activity of one of the world's busiest harbors — the fragile sampans maneuvering the chop between motorized junks, hydrofoils, tugboats, freighters and cruise ships.

I can hear the melodic songbirds in bamboo cages carried by their proud owners, all men, to Kowloon tea-houses. I can vividly picture the rows of tables covered with translucent jade at the outdoor market in Yau Ma Tei, the thousands of people doing tai chi at dawn in Victoria Park and the double-decker trams in Wanchai.

I LIKE HONG KONG even though I hate to shop, even though I generally don't like late-night discos, even though I'm not a gourmet — the Chinese invented haute cuisine. These are the three top reasons tourists go there.

And I like the colony even though my introduction to it was far from pleasant.

I went there the first time to write about the Vietnamese refugee camps — warehouses and ferryboats crammed with, at that time, more than 67,000 boat people.

To make my first visit even more troubling, I arrived three months after the Tiananmen Square massacre in Beijing. The mood of the British colony wasn't a happy one.

No one appeared confident about the colony's hand-over to China by the British in 1997, or China's pledge not to tamper with its new possession for 50 years.

Tourism immediately dropped 20 percent. It was testament to the colony's famous laissez-faire economics that Hong Kong weathered the bust.

During the months after Tiananmen Square, optimistic tourism officials pointed out the colony's building boom as proof of a bright future: 11 new hotels opened in 1990, including the 566-room Island Shangri-La Hotel on Hong Kong Island.

And the most promising evidence of continued development was the ambitious $16.2 billion airport to be built on Lantau Island, scheduled to be in operation by 1997. That, surely, was proof of the colony's continued prosperity.

BUT JUST WHEN a peak tourist season recovery seemed promising, the Persian Gulf War started. Recessions in the United States and Australia hit the tourism industry, particularly group tours, even harder. The number of American tourists in Hong Kong during January to March was down 12.2 percent from the same period in 1990.

And finally, what many people view as a bad sign indeed is the possibility the Chinese government may be prevailing in negotiations over the colony's proposed airport at Lantau.

"The airport is still under discussion over cost and scale," says Tom Rosenthal of the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office. "It's being reviewed as events occur. Everything's not in concrete yet."

The grand airport, some fear, may end up being much less grand. Beijing is exercising a voice over Hong Kong six years before the hand-over.

The last hurrah for this lush hotbed of capitalism and tourism, many observers believe, may be when the British contract expires at midnight June 30, 1997.

And my friends going to Australia? They decided on a stopover in New Zealand.

British colony of Hong Kong certain to change when in Chinese control

By Robin and Patricia Harris
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — As long-time travel writers, we inevitably spend time arguing about our favorite destinations — Paris, Rome, Rio de Janeiro, Acapulco, San Francisco and Hong Kong.

One of them, Hong Kong, deserves special attention because the inimitable British colony is certain to change after it is returned to Chinese control in 1997.

Actual control will not be transferred until June 30, 2047, although the first step is scheduled for June 30, 1997. During that first 50 years, Chinese officials will have to smooth over the problems a communist takeover of the bustling center of capitalism will entail.

Hong Kong now has more mammoth modern skyscrapers than anywhere outside of New York City. Many more are under construction and some are still being planned.

It is a city of striking contrasts. For instance, guests booked into a first-class hotel — such as the magnificent Regent — are met at the airport by a shining Rolls Royce — hardly a symbol of communist systems.

But the best way to cross the always-teeming harbor is by ferry where admission is just 8 cents. For an extra 3 cents you can sit on the upper deck and take in one of the most thrilling vistas in the world.

Hong Kong is also one of the greatest high-stakes gambling centers on this planet. There are two race tracks, which conduct alternate meetings.

But the daily handle — the total of all bets — probably approaches a staggering figure in the neighborhood of $40 million, thanks to the offtrack action. Every box has a direct line to the legal wagering office and just watching the activity is bewildering.

But unlike our own tracks, every penny of profit, after all expenses are deducted, goes to hospitals, orphanages, schools, and other worthy charities, and it amounts to the high millions. Income taxes are modest, too, with the biggest "bite" amounting to only 13 percent.

If you go to Hong Kong, be sure to take a day trip over the border into China by way of Macao.

Regardless of whether China does eventually assume control of Hong Kong, there are big improvements under way — such as a new airport soon and new piers for cruise liners.

During our last visit we constantly heard talk that the Chinese might not be able to re-establish control over Hong Kong. But if the transfer occurs, the city will likely change forever. That's a good reason to schedule a visit before 1997.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published.

For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event.

Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only for winners, not runner-ups.

These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office.

All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Prairie drama preformed

Staff Report

The Rio Blanco Heritage Foundation will produce the prairie drama, "God's Country," the first two weeks in August (Aug. 1, 2, & 3 and 8, 9, & 10). Community-based talent depicts the life and local history including both the joys and hardships faced by the early settlers. The setting for God's Country is the realistic atmosphere of the Blanco Canyon, where much of the original story took place.

Showings and tickets are limited and virtually every show will be a sellout. For ticket information, contact God's Country, P.O. Box 386, Crosbyton, Texas, 79322 or call (806) 675-2906.

Shoppers are reading

NEW YORK (AP) — More Americans before are making responsible choices in their drug and supermarket purchases by careful reading of product labels, notes a survey from a New York-based marketing services organization.

Adding importance to their extracurricular reading, says the Howard Marlboro Group, is the fact nearly two-thirds of the purchasers enter stores undecided about what product or brand they will end up buying, and the dearth of experienced sales people on retail floors to provide information and guidance.

Thus, the six major product categories — those purchases that consumers decide on in the aisles — are generally the ones that generate the most reading, according to the company's researchers.

Sun block products (38 percent); stomach remedies (34 percent); skin care products (32 percent); and cold and allergy remedies (31 percent) lead this list. Soap (9 percent); soft drinks (5 percent), and beer (4 percent) bring up the rear.

Cold and allergy remedies are the more confusing categories, particularly when less than half the shoppers know in advance what remedy they want.

Befuddled shoppers have been observed as spending as much as 30 minutes scrutinizing labels before they head for the cash register with their purchase.

DEAR ABBY

Child's disfigurement leaves friends without right words

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My friend and I read your column and discuss the letters and your replies. We usually agree with your answers. Now we have a question for you:

Van Buren

Let's say that "Mary" was shopping and ran into a young woman she had known in college — we'll call her Beatrice. Beatrice had her 2-year-old son in a stroller, and when Mary looked at the little boy, she wasn't prepared for the shock she got. The child's face was terribly deformed and disfigured!

What should Mary have said — if anything?

My friend said, "I would have ignored the abnormality and said something like, 'My, what a sweet child. How old is he?'"

I said, "I would have been more honest and said something like, 'I'm sorry about your baby, but I hear they are able to do amazing reconstructive surgery now.'"

Abby, what do you think a parent of a facially disfigured child would want to hear? My friend and I are hoping you will respond in your column. It would be helpful to many readers. — NO NAME OR CITY, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Just when I think I've seen everything, along comes a letter such as this one.

Only a person who has walked that path is qualified to answer that question. I hope someone who has will write and let me know. The answer would be helpful to many readers — as well as to this columnist.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who insists he is not addicted to tobacco because he doesn't smoke cigarettes — he smokes a pipe! He says, "I don't inhale, so a pipe can't hurt me."

Meanwhile, his wife inhales his secondhand smoke all day, and it must hurt because she has a respiratory problem and a chronic cough. This man claims he doesn't have a habit, yet he is never seen without some kind of pipe — which he constantly is lighting, packing with tobacco, tapping into an ashtray or fiddling with in some manner.

He has a very impressive collection of pipes as well as a variety of fancy blends of tobacco, so it's apparent that he is not just a casual smoker. He brags that he could quit his pipe tomorrow and never miss it because he really doesn't have a habit.

Abby, I wonder whom is he kidding? — AN OBSERVER

DEAR OBSERVER: Himself.

DEAR ABBY: The heartwarming letters you have published about people doing kind deeds impulsively for strangers prompts my first Dear Abby letter.

Every Saturday night, no matter what my husband and I did, we would always wind up at Baskin-Robbins for ice-cream cones. The same young girl always waited on Bob while I sat in the car — a '66 T-Bird.

One night, with no warning whatsoever, my husband died of a heart attack. Although we had been married for 45 years, I was devastated.

About two months after my husband's death, I stopped by Baskin-Robbins for an ice-cream cone. The young girl remembered me because of the car, and said, "I've missed you. Where is your nice husband?"

I told her that he had died suddenly. "Oh, I'm very sorry," she said. "Please, wait a minute." Then she hurriedly packed a quart of our favorite flavor and handed it to me.

"No charge," she said softly. "Your husband was such a fine gentleman."

I was so touched, I cried. — VIRGINIA DARE LUDWIG, TUSTIN, CALIF.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. AT WIT'S END

Just the fax isn't always enough

By Erma Bombeck

"Be not the first by whom the new are tried,
"Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."
— Alexander Pope

Art Buchwald is spreading rumors that I still use carbon paper. He assumes this only because I do not have an answering machine, a car phone, a word processor or my own phone credit card. For the past two years he has ragged me about a fax machine and how it could enrich my life.

Bombeck

I surprised him last week by buying a fax. With the help of my secretary, Norma, I sent my first message to him: "Mr. Buchwald. Come here. I need you. Alexander Graham Bombeck."

The phone rang the next morning. It was Jeannie, Art's secretary, who said, "Turn on your fax machine. I want to send a response to your message."

When I didn't hear from her, I called Jeannie back and said, "There's nothing coming." She said, "Hang up and I'll try again." She called back in a few minutes and asked if we had received it. I said, "No, try again."

When nothing happened, I called her and she said, "Check the machine." I dialed her in minutes and told her the paper was jammed and to give it another shot.

She asked, "How will I know if you receive it?" I told her I'd call her back.

In minutes, Art called and said, "I don't think you have the hang of it." I said, "I do too. Try again."

When nothing was received by the next day, I called Jeannie and said, "Norma, my secretary, will be in Monday and she'll straighten things out."

On Monday, Jeannie called Norma four times to try and figure out what was wrong with our reception. It had something to do with manual and automatic. They finally gave up.

On Tuesday, Norma faxed Jeannie a message instructing her to send her message and she would let the fax ring nine rings instead of six. On the 11th ring, a message came through the fax from Art reading, "If you receive this fax, I will be amazed. Art."

Art called Thursday to see if we had received his fax. I begged him to send messages only on the three days my secretary works.

By express mail on Friday, I received a letter from Art. He said I was not fax material and that it was nothing to be ashamed of. Shakespeare never had a fax machine. He had already spent $930 trying to send a message.

Frankly, I think the machine is overrated. A week to send a message! Twelve phone calls and one express mail! Besides, it doesn't even have a clock!

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Disease threatens periwinkle

By Deborah A. Benge

It is a real shame that one of our most popular annual bedding plants is threatened by a very serious plant disease. Annual periwinkle, Catharanthus roseus, sometimes called annual vinca, is that great annual bedding plant that we've come to know and depend on for summer color.

Benge

The shame is two fold. Annual periwinkle is a drought and heat tolerant annual bedding plant that blooms it's heart out in our Permian Basin summers. It is available in bright pinks, purples, roses and shining whites and has beautiful green foliage. The plant is well behaved making a flower-covered neat mound of color. It will also bloom several exposures, making it especially useful in the home or commercial landscape. Shame number two, at this time nothing very practical can be done about the plant disease problem.

The main disease problem that we are beginning to see in annual vinca is a water mold fungus called, Phytophthora parasitica, or Aerial Blight. This soil-borne disease can effect a branch or two or bring down the entire plant. The symptoms of this plant often appear as a dying branch tip. The new growth will wilt, turn brown and finally the whole stem wilts and dies from the tip down to the main stem of the plant. Sometimes the entire plant will wilt to almost the soil line. If you pull the entire plant up, you will see that the roots often times look perfectly healthy.

A couple of other diseases that can make the situation more difficult are, Pythium spp. and Rhizoctonia spp. These two are soil-borne fungi that can cause stem lesions and root rot problems. The symptoms can be mixed but look for stem lesions and wilting of plants. Root rots may be the problem if your plants suddenly wilt. Pull plants up and examine the roots. Healthy roots are very obvious being white and plump, whereas rotted roots or diseased roots will cause the outside covering of the root to slip off leaving behind the root cortex.

All of these soil-borne pathogens can build up in the soil over a period of time if susceptible plants are used over and over. Just as you have to rotate your vegetables to avoid possible pest problems, you need to rotate your annuals with other non-susceptible flowering annuals. Instead of coming in and planting with your favorite summer annual — periwinkle — each year, you may want to rotate with petunias, lantana, globe amaranth, firebush or celosia for a change. This will help hold pathogens to acceptable levels and at the same time give you variety.

Pansies are another very popular bedding plant that seems to be sharing some of these same problems. Since pansies are the most favorite of fall planted bedding plants and so hard to resist, you won't have the choice of bedding plants to select from, but it is still important to rotate these fall planted annuals. There are other fall flowering plants that you can select from, like, calendulas, snapdragons, fall mums, stock, Marimims and fall petunias. Or many early spring flowering plants need to be established at this time, like bluebonnets, annual poppies, larkspur, bachelor buttons and several others.

To reduce risk of these disease problems without using fungicides, here are some cultural practices that will help. Perwinkles respond to being planted after the soils have become good and warm, so avoid early planting. After the initial planting, when the plant has become established, use deep infrequent watering practices, Phytopthora parasitica loves wet or free moisture situations. Mulching plants will help conserve soil moisture, but more importantly, it will reduce the chances of soil particles with the fungi from being splashed up on the foliage of susceptible plants, infecting them.

So to help protect your annual bedding areas from building high populations of soil-borne fungi; rotate annual bedding plants, avoid excessively wet soils, use deep and infrequent watering practices and use mulches to reduce soil splashing.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Experts say engineering is best passport to management

Associated Press

Engineering careers can be a passport to management, say experts in the field.

"Engineering graduates with broad-based degrees that encompass fields such as mechanical, electrical and industrial engineering, who have a background in the humanities and the ability to communicate, will be in great demand," says Dr. Harold J. Raveche, president of Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J.

"An engineering degree is the most useful undergraduate degree, whether the individual seeks a career in management, law, medicine, the ministry, or a host of otther professions," says Caleb B. Hurtt, former president and chief operating officer of Martin Marietta and a Stevens graduate.

AP LaserPhoto

Dr. Nuran Kumbaraci (left foreground), associate chemistry professor at Stevens Institute of Technology, leads a group of students in lab experiments. Technically sophisticated professionals, such as engineers, can look to careers in the executive suite, say industry experts.

AN UNDERGRADUATE degree in engineering, with course work in economics and engineering management, is a strong credential for a student whose sights are set on a management career, says Ruth Walton, director of career services at Stevens. The student will be well prepared for programs leading to a master's of business administration or master's of science degree. "The engineering program is tougher. Every engineering student I have know who went on to take an M.B.A. found the graduate program a piece of cake."

Raveche says that those in technical and engineering careers come to a crossroads about four to seven years out of college. They can choose to continue to serve in technical positions, or they can take on responsibilities such as budgeting, hiring and supervising other engineers.

Engineers commonly move into technical management positions. A study by the American Association of Engineering Societies in 1985 found that of those surveyed who said they had been out of college five years, 34 percent had supervisory responsibilities. Of those who had been out for 25 years, 70 percent said they had such responsibilities.

"Not many engineers start as supervisors, but within 10 years, 30 to 40 percent are in technical management, and a small percentage go into non-technical management," says Dr. William K. LeBold, director of information and eduational systems at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind. These engineers work at companies that depend on high-technology products or processes, including pharmaceutical, chemical, oil, automative, electronics and telecommunications firms.

ENGINEERS ARE sought not only for their technical expertise but for their management potential, says Dr. Donald N. Merino, professor of management at Stevens. "It's nearly impossible for a non-engineer to advance at these companies. And although each company may have a different corporate culture that emphasizes a different engineering specialty — electrical engineering at AT&T, chemical engineering at DuPont — the management is still dominated by engineers."

Hawaii to plunge into daytime darkness

By Jennifer Merin

BIG ISLAND, Hawaii (AP) — Skies over the Big Island of Hawaii are usually sunny and blue, with splendid sunsets and starry nights.

But at breakfast time on July 11, the sky will be black when, Hawaiians say, "pouli holo oko a o ka la," or "darkness sails across the sun."

It's a total solar eclipse. It will occur at 7:28 a.m., and for 4 minutes, 13 seconds will cut a swath of darkness 100 miles wide across the Hawaiian Islands.

The total eclipse is visible only from the Big Island. Other islands will experience a partial eclipse. Maui, for example, will be in 96.5 percent eclipse, while Kauai will experience 92 percent eclipse.

If you can't get to Hawaii, with its near-perfect climatic conditions, the next-best place for Americans to view the eclipse is along the path it follows through Mexico. For example, at LaPaz totality begins at 11:48 a.m. and lasts for 6 minutes, 20 seconds. In Guadalajara totality begins at 1:09 p.m. and lasts 6 minutes, 16 seconds. In Mexico City, totality begins at 1:21 p.m. and lasts for 6 minutes, 33 seconds. The last point in Mexico where a total eclipse can be seen is at Tapachula at 1:46 p.m. and last 6 minutes, 21 seconds.

But observers on the Big Island, wearing proper eye protection, will see — without the aid of a telescope — bright spots of sunlight called "Bailey's Beads," just as the moon covers the last sliver of the sun.

Totally blocked, the sun looks like the blackest hole you can imagine. It is surrounded by a blazing corona formed by million-degree Fahrenheit gasses escaping the sun's surface.

It's a thrilling, fascinating sight.

The moon will start to cross the sun at 6:30 a.m. and will be out of the way by 8:37 a.m. A total eclipse of such duration is not expected for another 142 years.

Despite the fact that the entire event takes just slightly more than two hours, thousands of tourists — astronomy buffs and curiosity seekers alike — are trekking to the Big Island's Kohala-Kona Coast, where totality is longest, to witness the uncommon phenomenon.

Big Island resorts catering to the eclipse report rooms are still available for the week of July 8. Most hotels require a minimum stay of five to seven nights.

The deluxe Mauna Kea Beach Resort, near Mauna Kea's five astronomical observatories, offers one of the island's best viewing sites. Special lectures for guests will be given by Dr. Hale Bradt, an M.I.T. physics professor, and by Olivier Le Fevre, staff astronomer at the Canada France Hawaii Telescope atop Mauna Kea Mountain.

"A total solar eclipse is one of the most beautiful and stunning events the human eye can witness," says Le Fevre. "During totality, you feel the overwhelming power of the universe for a few minutes."

The Mauna Kea program is filled out with week-long art shows and dance performances with eclipse themes. Mountain view rooms facing in the direction of the eclipse are still available, at $250 per night for two including breakfast and dinner and airport pickup. A minimum stay of seven nights is required.

The Hyatt Regency Waikoloa has rooms available beginning July 7, 8 or 9, with a five-night minimum stay. Room rates are from $265 per night, double. Lectures will be given by Eddie Mahoney, the hotel's astronomy manager. Several 9-inch reflector telescopes with special filters will be available to guests.

Other exclusive resorts have available rooms as well, but the less expensive hotel rooms on the Big Island are already booked.

Air transportation to Hawaii is also heavily booked, but there may still be some seats available. Delta Airlines, for example, still has seats on flights from Los Angeles and San Francisco to Honolulu.

Open flights from Honolulu to Kona on the Big Island are harder to find. Aloha Airlines still has some seats, but many flights are booked. If demand warrants, the airline may add flights for eclipse travel days.

Meanwhile, Aloha Airlines' spokesman Stephanie Ackerman says the airline will try to accommodate passengers at their preferred travel times. She advises travelers to wait-list themselves on their first choice flights and book flights that are currently open. That will help the airline to determine if and when extra flights should be added.

This total eclipse is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to marvel at the universe's majesty, but safety is of the essence. Experts warn that looking directly at any phase of the eclipse may cause severe eye damage unless you use the proper filter equipment. Tested equipment will be available at hotels with eclipse programs and at the Bishop Museum in Honolulu.

You just got to Fort Worth last night and you've got to go see a client this morning. Just off the Central Expressway by way of the first Richardson exit. But it's closer to Dallas. Figure out the interchange from the Dallas-Fort Worth Turnpike to Route 77, then Route 67 and finally into the Expressway. "The City to City Atlas" (American Map Corporation) is the traveling companion that will help you avoid the hitches in getting from one place to the next. Directed to the business traveler, the spiral-bound book has detailed maps of city centers, metropolitan areas, the state and interstate highway systems and other aids for the driving business person.

Many travelers these days prefer the comforts and economy of bed-and-breakfasts to hotels, and the "1991 Annual Directory of American Bed & Breakfasts" from Rutledge Hill Press provides nearly 4,000 listings in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Editor Toni Sorter includes brief descriptions of accommodations, along with prices, proprietors' names and other statistics.

Want to look at the prettiest or most dramatic scenery along your motor route? Rand McNally has mapped out the eight top scenic highways in the nation as part of its 1991 Road Atlas. The selections highlight scenic routes in Colorado, Glacier National Park in Montana, the Coastal Highway in Maine, Highway 7 in Arkansas, the Oak Creek Canyon in Arizona, California's Pacific Coast Highway and the Skyline-Blue Ridge Parkway of Virginia.

The 1991 Mobil Travel Guides have increased the number of maps in their seven regional editions, including more for popular-destination cities and airport maps for major terminals. Recommendations for eating and accommodations are ranked by the editors with a one-to-five-star rating system. The regions covered are California and the West, Southwest and South Central, Northwest and the Great Plains, Great Lakes, Northeast, Middle Atlantic and Southeast. Mobil also has the "Frequent Traveler's Guide to Major Cities" for the business traveler.

Del Rio to host three-day Fourth of July celebration

Staff Report

Del Rio will have the biggest Fourth of July celebration in its history this year. The festivities will stretch across three days.

The event will serve as Del Rio's official welcome home for veterans of Operation Desert Storm. This is in accordance with a request by President Bush that communities across the nation set aside Independence Day to pay tribute to these heroes, Mayor Dr. Alfredo Gutierrez Jr. said. In addition, it will honor veterans of all wars and for the third straight year will serve as Del Rio's salute to nearby Laughlin Air Force Base, he added.

The grand finale will be a free-to-the-public patriotic musical, laser light and aerial fireworks show, beginning at 7:30 p.m. on the Fourth of July.

This 19th annual "Red, White and Blue Revue" will be presented in a spacious amphitheater next to the San Felipe Creek, where an all-day celebration will be staged.

Featured for the first time will be the Tim Walsh laser light show, which has appeared coast to coast in the U.S. and in such foreign countries as Mexico, Canada, United Arab Emirates and the Soviet Union.

THE SHOW MATCHES lights to music and a special patriotic performance has been scripted for this occasion. The laser show will be coordinated with the aerial fireworks display which traditionally climaxes the show.

Also featured in the "Revue" will be some of the area's local talent in a patriotic musical.

A 55-piece band, the largest single unit ever to appear in "Red, White and Blue Revue," has been assembled especially for the show.

The day's activities start with opening ceremonies at 9:30 a.m. Bobby Barrera, named Texas' Disabled Veteran of the Year by Disabled American Veterans, will be master of ceremonies. The Laughlin Air Force Base Honor Guard will conduct the flag raising ceremonies, while trumpeters from the Del Rio High School Band play the naitonal anthem. There will be a fly-by of jet aircraft from Laughlin AFB.

Through the day, a variety of foods and refreshments will be available on the grounds, musical entertainment will be provided by several groups, and there will be old-fashioned Fourth of July games and contests for young and old.

IN WHAT IS becoming a unique Del Rio tradition, the Fourth of July will be ushered in with a midnight toast. This will take place at the Independence Eve Ball in the Del Rio Civic Center.

Originated in 1979, this formal ball includes a patriotic ceremony. Speaker will be Col. Willard Grosvenor, Laughlin AFB wing commander. Operation Desert Storm veterans and their spouses or guests will be guests of honor.

Music with a "big band" sound will be provided by the 12-piece Fletcher Goodman Band from San Antonio. This is the band engaged to play for the coronation ball at this year's Miss Texas Pageant. They were featured at the Anacacho Room of San Antonio's St. Anthony Hotel for New Year's Eve in 1989 and 1990.

As a prelude to the festivities in Del Rio, Laughlin AFB is having a July 2 ceremony at which its 47th Flying Training Wing will receive its sixth Air Force Outstanding Unit Award.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas), member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, will assist Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Ashy, commander of the Air Training Command, in presenting the decoration. Members of the wing will pass in review in a parade on the flightline during the military ceremony.

The wing continued to perform its full mission at Laughlin while a number of its members were deployed for service in Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Walking, biking tours available

Associated Press

Seeing the world on two wheels need not be grubby. Organized tours for cyclists often include vans and trailers to carry luggage and supplies — and the occasional tired biker — and accommodations at the end of the day that are far from spartan.

One of the largest organizers is Backroads Bicycle Touring of Berkeley, Calif., which is offering trips varying from two to 17 days in locations in the United States and abroad. Cyclists can see dramatic ocean-front scenery from Bodega Bay in Northern California or ancient Ming Dynasty temples and tropical forests in the Mt. Dinghu Nature Reserve in China.

Tours also are offered for the Northwest, the Southwest, the Rockies, the South, the East, New England, Hawaii, Mexico, Bali, Thailand, Australia, New Zealand, England, Ireland, France, and Italy.

Some are camping tours, and others have inn or hotel accomodations. There are combination bike-walking tours, and special interest tours for students, photographers, and connoisseurs of wine or art. Bikes can be rented, and helmets are loaned free.

For more information or a catalog, call Backroads at 1 (800) 245-3874.

■ Walking tours covering mountains, fords, and thermal geysers in New Zealand are offered by Nature Expeditions International.

A highlight of the 21-day tours, scheduled from November to February, 1992, is the Milford Track, a 33-mile scenic mountain walk that passes through dense forests and high passes in Fjordland National Park. Itinerary also includes the Whakatane River in Urewera National Park, home of the Maoris.

The firm also offers an Australian nature study tour to explore the Outback, the tropical North End and the Great Barrier Reef. The basic tour is 22 days, but it can be combined with additional expeditions to Tasmania and New Zealand wildlife reserves on Rangitoto and Stewart Islands and other spots for a 30-day tour.

For information call 1 (800) 869-0639.

Rodeo celebrates West Texas heritage

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Ranchers and their working hands will be moseying into town about sunup next Thursday, the Fourth of July, to celebrate the nation's independence by doing the customary things cowpunchers do on the ranch.

They will be showing how neighborly team work is done on the range.

But they won't be mending any fences or fixing any windmills.

They will be working cattle in an arena and showing townspeople what a working cowhand's life is like.

But first things first.

At breakfast time on the Fourth, many of the ranch hands will be feeding at chuck wagons and enjoying the cooks' handiwork: biscuits and gravy, steak and eggs, coffee and pitcher water.

Then, as the food is settling in their bellies, they will be saddling up for the fourth-annual Ranch Rodeo in and about the Midland County Rodeo Arena east of downtown Midland off the old U.S. Highway 80.

Rodeo events kick off at 10 a.m. Thursday.

The Ranch Rodeo is held to celebrate the West Texas ranching heritage.

Nine Midland Country ranches will be sending teams out into the arena to compete with neighboring ranch teams. Ranches sponsoring teams in the rodeo include the Half Circle C Ranch, Texas Ten, Mabee Ranch, Powell Ranch, Parks Ranch, C (Chicago) Ranch, Bird Ranch, Shannon Ranch and the Lazy Z Ranch.

Unlike professional rodeos which are spectator-sporting events not entirely representatives of the cowboy's life on the range, the Ranch Rodeo features events which reflect the daily cowpuncher's work. The professional rodeo events of bull riding, wild-bronc riding, steer wrestling, and barrel racing are hardly usual fare on the range. However, calf roping, team roping, and steer roping are.

Midland's first Ranch Rodeo in 1988 was organized by Midland ranchers Ralph Powell, Candi Cowden and Charlie Welch "to celebrate the ranching heritage of this country."

It was ranching that pretty

GREAT AMERICAN LEGENDS.
COORS AND RODEO.

Rodeos bring excitement and thrills to small towns and big cities. They create a yearning in the young cowboy's heart that won't cease till he rides his first bronc, ropes his first calf. Offering a glimpse into America's past, rodeo attracts the young at heart, the old of spirit.

For years, Coors, The Rocky Mountain Legend, has been a proud supporter of American rodeo. For over 100 years, Coors has been brewing the finest tasting beer in the West. Our commitment to quality has made Coors the first choice in beers... from cafes in Manhattan to campfires in Montana. The original taste of Coors and the thrill of the rodeo—two great American legends.

Nine local ranches to field rodeo teams

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Nine Midland Country ranches will be represented in the fourth annual Midland Ranch Rodeo on the Fourth of July, a Thursday, beginning at 10 a.m. on the Midland County Rodeo Arena grounds.

Ranches fielding teams in the rodeo include:

Half Circle C Ranch. Sisters Candi and Terre Cowden, who own and operate the Half Circle C Ranch, are fourth-generation ranchers. They are the great-great-granddaughters of Midland pioneer rancher William Hamby Cowden. He and his brother, George Franklin Cowden, came to the Midland Country in 1883 with "only the shirts on their backs and their many children." William Hamby Cowden fathered 12 children, including William Henry Cowden, great-grandfather of Candi and Terre. His son, Gilbert Hamby Cowden, left the ranch to his son, Billy Tom Cowden, who passed the spread to his daughters. The Cowden brand is the letter "C" covered by a domed crown.

Making up the Half Circle C Ranch Rodeo team are Candi Cowden, Ronnie Stewart, Lex Crawford, Jerry Allison and Shirley Naff.

Texas Ten Ranch. What is now the Texas Ten Ranch Ltd. was established by William Bryant, who bought his first ranch in Midland County in 1905. Bryant's descendants today own the ranching interests. Frances Wylie is in charge of the Texas Ten's Texas and New Mexico spreads. Hoot Leonard and Peck Hale oversee the Texas Ten daily operations. Hereford cattle are raised on the ranch in keeping with the Hereford tradition laid down by William Bryant at turn of the century. The Texas Ten cattle brand is the open "9" on the left rib cage.

On the Texas Ten Ranch Rodeo team are Rayford Calhoun, D.R. "Donald" Stroud, C.W. Garrett, Tommy Greenwood and Button Greenwood. Honorary team members are Hoot Leonard and Peck Hale.

Powell Ranch. Midland cattleman Ralph Powell heads up the Powell Ranch. Powell is the great-grandson of A.B. Powell, who came to Sterling County in 1891. The family raised horses, which they traded for cattle in Louisiana. Ralph Powell's maternal grandfather, Wadd Ellis, who was in the freight business from Galveston to San Antonio, bought a ranch in Frio County, where he caught wild horses and raised eight sons. In carrying out the family tradition, Ralph Powell deals in cattle and operates on part of the historic Nail Ranch in northern Midland County. He buys and feeds Mexican cattle in partnership with Cactus Feeders of Dumas. The Powell cattle brand is the "PL" on the left hip. The brand dates back to the 1860s.

The Powell Ranch Rodeo team is made up of Ralph Powell, Shelley Madeley, Severio Gutierrez, Bill Weston and Jim Ray.

* Parks Ranch: The Parks Ranch, which consists of 38,000 acres — more than 59 sections — in Midland and Ector counties, was founded by Roy Parks Sr. in the 1920s. Today, the ranch is operated by the Parks and Faudree families. Matt Faudree is general manager of the Faudree Ranches, and Stan Wallis is general manager of the Parks Ranch. The Faudree Ranches are in the Texas Panhandle, New Mexico and Kansas. The Parks Ranch is primarily a commercial cow-calf operation. The ranch maintains a select band of Quarter Horses. The Parks Ranch is one of the West Texas pioneers of holistic resource management (HRM), which serves to preserve the good grasses and to halt deterioration of the land and other resources. Without grass, the rancher is out of business. The Parks Ranch brand is the "P" on the left hip.

Rancher Candi Cowden of the Half Circle C Ranch is chairman of the 1991 Midland Ranch Rodeo.

RODEO: Events reflect work on the range much "opened up" this country to settlement by Anglos — gringos — in the 1880s about time the railroad was expanding though the Great Southwest.

Events in the Ranch Rodeo that reflect work on the range include:

Wild-Cow Milking: A mother cow that has lost a calf is milked out. A cowboy will rope the cow, two hands will "mug" her, hold her fairly still, and the fourth cowboy will milk the cow.

Ranch Cutting: The cowpuncher and his horse "work" a herd of cattle to "cut out" specific animals from the herd.

Calf Branding: A mounted cowboy ropes a calf, drags him to the campfire where two flankers hold the calf down, and the fourth hand brands the calf.

Team Roping: Two cowpunchers with whirling lassos chase a steer. The lead roper, the header, ropes the steer about the horns to gain control, stops him, and the other roper, the heeler, ropes the steer about the hind legs.

Team Penning: The cowpunchers cut out three head from the herd and pen them.

The concept of the Ranch Rodeo is "just all within the ranching heritage — promoting the true cowboy spirit of the whole ranch," said rancher Candi Cowden of the Half Circle C Ranch in Crane County.

Traditionally, men have dominated the range as working cowboys. And, all along, women have been there — out on the frontier.

"The woman was just as big a part of the ranch as the man," said Ms. Cowden.

"There have been women on ranches since there have been men on ranches. And more and more, women are playing a bigger part in the daily work of a ranch rather than just cooking for the crew or tending to the household chores."

Neighbors compete in rodeo

Staff Report

There's a certain flavor of neighborliness in the ranch life.

And that spirit is being promoted and hailed in the Midland Ranch Rodeo on Independence Day just east of town in and about the Midland County Rodeo Arena off the old U.S. Highway 80.

"The Midland Ranch Rodeo originated with the intent to preserve and promote our ranching heritage and to exhibit the true cowboy spirit," said rodeo officials.

Traditionally, from the early 1880's and well into the 1900's, "ranchers have helped their friends and neighbors when there was work to be done."

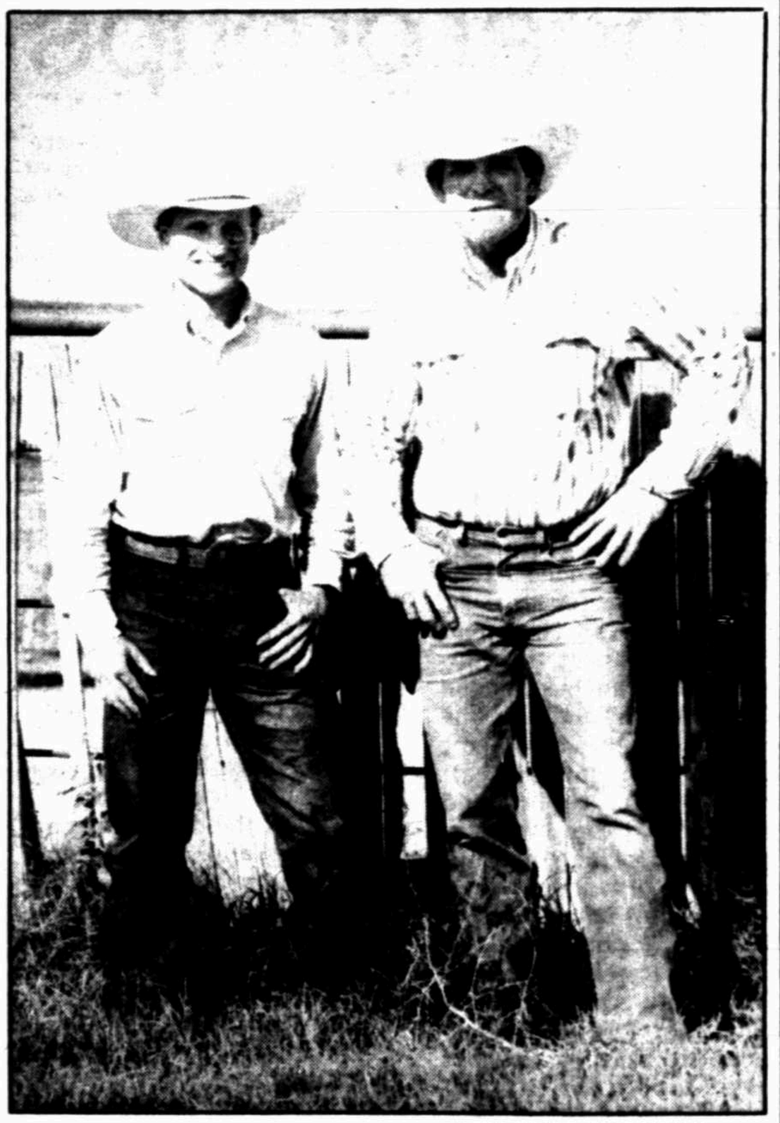

"Any doctoring, branding, or shipping of livestock was done by gathering of cowboys who loved the land and their way of life."

The skills of the working cowboys and cowgirls will be demonstrated in the Ranch Rodeo's events of wild-cow milking, ranch cutting, calf branding, team roping, and team penning.

Ranches entered in the events are actively producing or raising livestock.

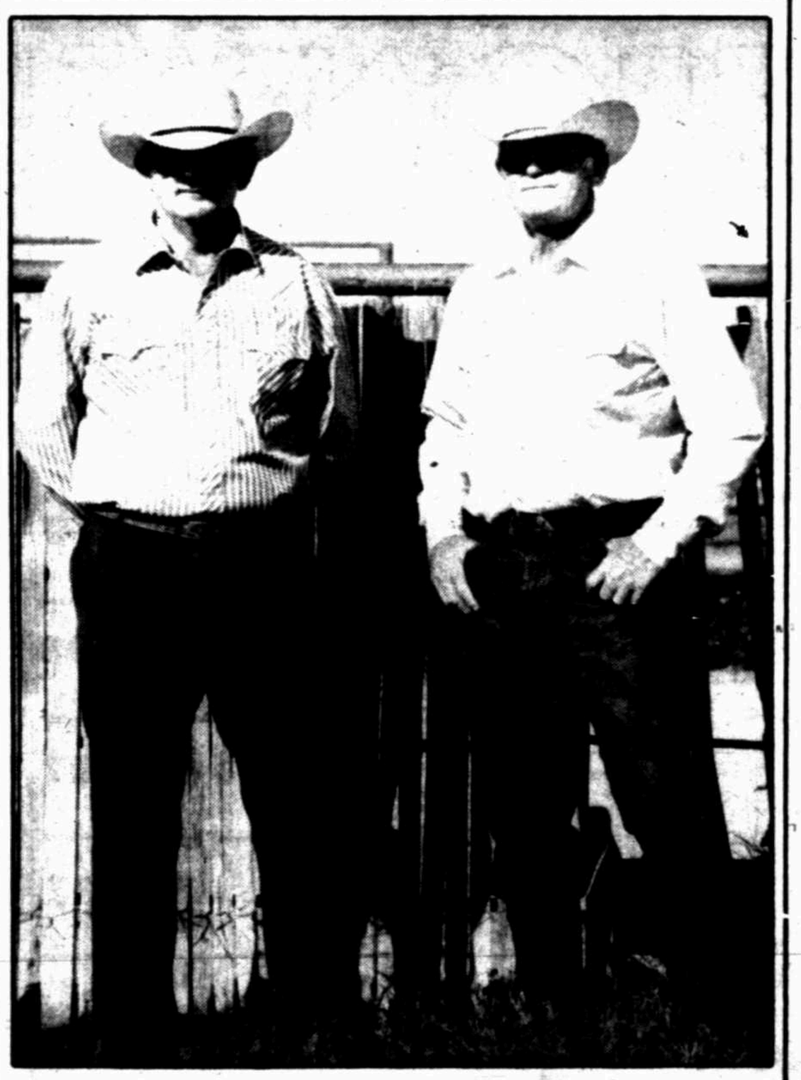

And in keeping with the ranching heritage and the "cowboy spirit," all team members from each competing team meet at least one of these qualifications.

- Be a neighbor to the participating ranch.
- Be employed by the participating ranch.
- To have been employed by the participating ranch in the last calendar year.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Braxton Glass, left, and Bobby "Sonny" Matthews will be among cowboys representing the Lazy Z Ranch in the 1991 Midland Ranch Rodeo on Thursday, July the Fourth, in the Midland County Rodeo Arena east of town. Ranch Rodeo events begin at 10 a.m.

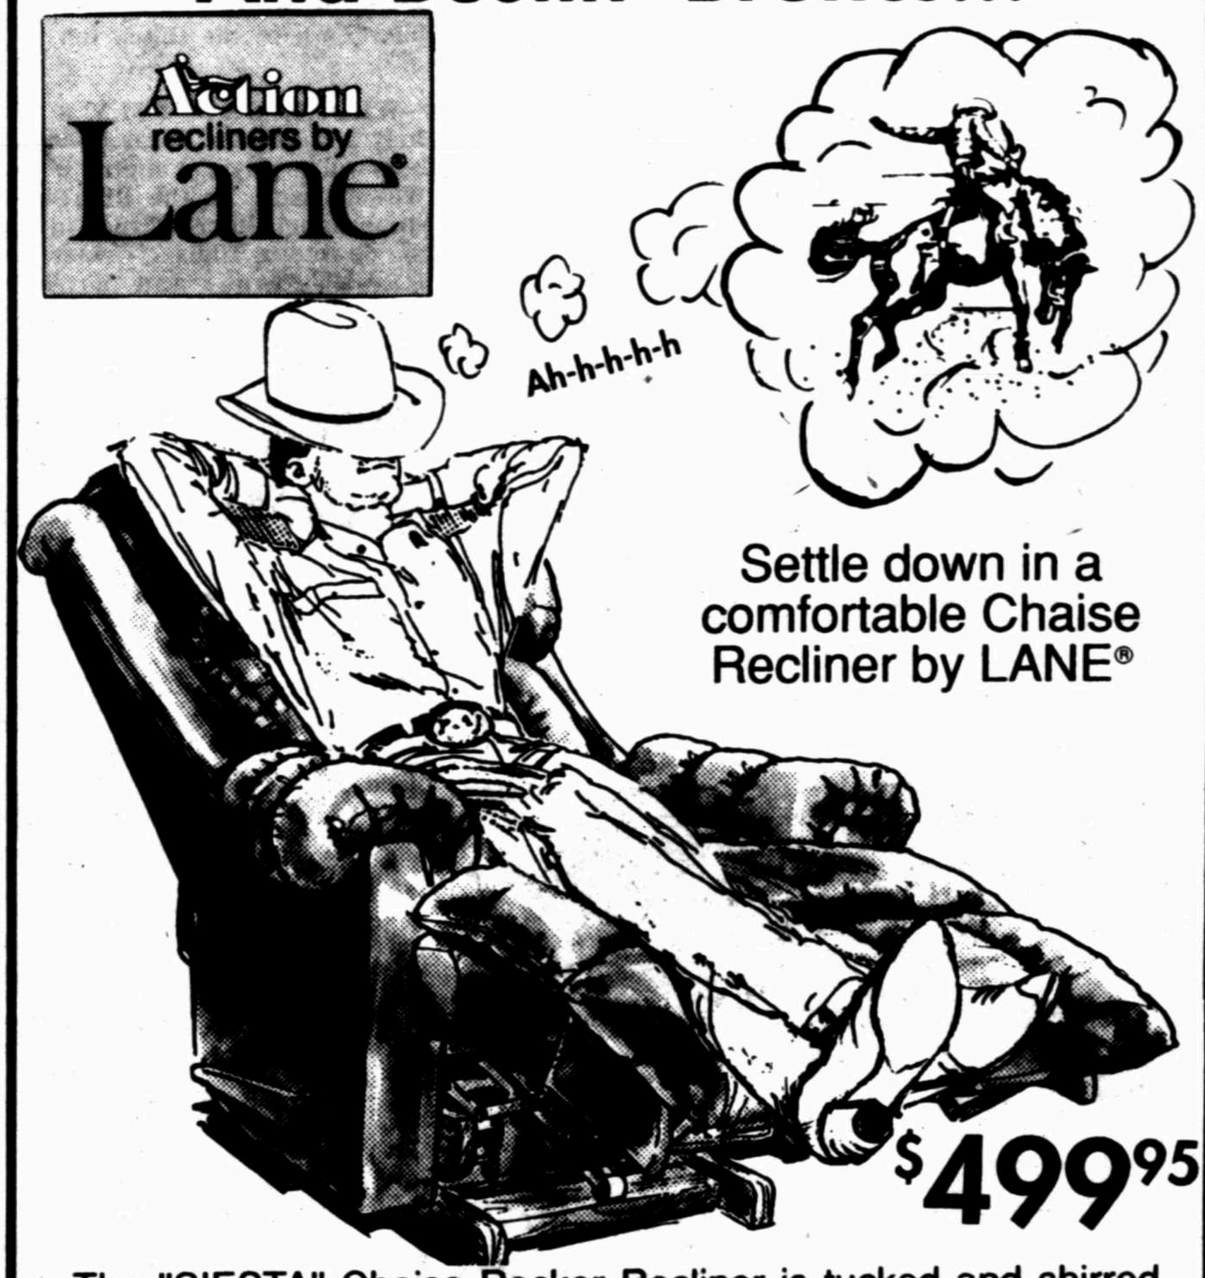

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Doby Johnson, left, of the Holt Ranch will be flagman in the 1991 Midland Ranch Rodeo. Cedar Nolan, Bird Ranch foreman, will be on the Bird Ranch rodeo team in the July the Fourth Midland Ranch Rodeo.

Ranch Rodeo benefits local groups

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Modern-day Old West events that try to tell just "how it was" back on the range when grass was tall and droughts, like today, were far more common than gully-washers are returning to Midland this week.

For the fourth time since 1988, the Midland Ranch Rodeo will draw ranchers and their hands into town for some fun times on the Fourth of July in celebrating the nation's independence from England back in 1776.

While the fun is going on, much of the dollars and cents being spent on the rodeo and related activities will be benefiting the 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America (FFA) youths in the Midland County Livestock Association annual livestock show each January.

"It's just one of my favorite youth programs," said Charles W. Green, a Ranch Rodeo supporter and long-time Midland County Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) agent, "because it does teach work habits — work ethics."

In taking on livestock projects, the youth learn that in order to accomplished "something, you've got to put out."

The 4-H Club and FFA youth experience the rewards, the disappointments, the setbacks and the challenges of raising livestock. They learn their responsibilities in taking care of the animals and in managing their time and budgets.

They learn their roles in taking care of natural resources, including grasses and grains and the land and the water, that are so vital to livestock, essential to their livelihood, and necessary for the economy.

And since the "economy kind of shattered when the oil boom crashed" early in the 1980s, noted Green, the livestock association has been sort of strapped for funds. The Ranch Rodeo proceeds have helped to keep livestock projects going from year to year.

Earnest Kiker, who is Green's successor as county agricultural agent and a Ranch Rodeo supporter, noted that the rodeo serves to preserve the West Texas ranching heritage by re-enacting working-cowboy and horse-cattle activities and showing how neighbors help neighbors in working cattle, in building fences and barns, in overcoming hardships and in sharing joys.

"They (ranchers and cowboys) all come in on the Fourth of July, and they all play together and have a big celebration in events that they are accustomed to," said Kiker.

"It's just a fun-filled day to bring out your family and enjoy the activities and see what's going on in the agricultural ranching community."

This year, the Ranch Rodeo has been expanded to parts of five days. Still, the "big day" is on the Fourth of July.

"We really are looking forward to it," said Midland rancher John Mabee. "We are not rodeo folks at all. It ought to be a sight."

In 1990, the Mabee Ranch team missed out on the rodeo.

"We meant to go out there last year," Mabee recalled, "but we had a big, old grass fire out here on the Fourth of July. Sure hope that doesn't happen this year. Still pretty dry up here."

Scheduled Ranch Rodeo events include:

SUNDAY, JUNE 30: Ranch Rodeo events kick off, befittingly, with an Old-fashioned Cowboy Church Service and Cowboy Breakfast from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. on the downtown Midland Centennial Plaza. Doing the preaching and playing gospel music will be cowboy-minister Leonard Cotten who grew up on the C (Chicago) Ranch northwest of Midland. He is the son of Melvin Cotten, who operates the old ranch.

Tickets to the Cowboy Breakfast are $5 each. And bringing in the food, which will include a variety of breakfast burritos, coffee and fruit juices, will be the Hilton Inn.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3: Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys will be playing Country 'n' Western music in the Rhinestone Ranch Rodeo Dance in the downtown Midland Center at Wall Avenue and Main Street. Admission is $6 per person. Doors to the dance open at 7 p.m., and dance starts at 8 p.m.

Cowboys, cowgirls and all of those "want-to-be" cowpokes may enter the Ugly Boot Contest at the dance. Boots, accompanied by their owners' identifying cards, may be entered in the contest by dropping them by Wells Boot City in Midland prior to the dance.

THURSDAY, JULY 4: The five rodeo events in the Ranch Rodeo begin at 10 a.m. in the Midland County Rodeo Arena east of town. Professional rodeo announcer Bud Townsend will be telling about the cowboys and their ranches and will be describing the action in the five rodeo events: wild-cow milking, ranch cutting, calf branding, team roping and team penning. Other events in the arena will include the Wild Horse Race organized by Eldorado cowboy Brant Ward, a Kids Boot Scramble and a Stick-Horse Race. In the arena and up in the grandstands entertaining the folks and watching over the working cowboys will be Bandy the Clown, played by Bob Burnes, who has rodeoed since he was 18. Burnes, 44, rode bulls and bareback broncs and did a bit of roping before he got into the clown business.

In the Wild Horse Race, the idea is to "rope the horse you are supposed to ride," then take him to the other end of the arena where the ground men are to saddle him up, Ward said. On the ride back, the rider "has to be on the horse," but "it don't matter whether he's on his head or on his tail as long as he's on top of him" and doesn't fall off the horse until he's past the finish line.

Earlier in the morning, West Texas ranch cooks will be entered in a Chuck Wagon Cook-off for the most tasty vittles — from beans and breads to beef steak and fruit cobbler. Throughout the day, a Bit and Spur Show and a Trade and Craft Show will be held in the Midland County Exhibit Building near the arena. Admission to the Ranch Rodeo is $2 per person. Grade-school children will be admitted free.

Ranch residents renew friendships at Midland rodeo

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Bringing the Ranch Rodeo to town does more than just impress townspeople with the Old West ranching heritage. The rodeo is more than just a medium to demonstrate the ways cowpunchers and their horses work cattle.

Ranchers and old cowboys and cowgirls get to visit with their near and distant ranching neighbors.

They "renew old friendships," said Midland Country rancher Candi Cowden, who is heading up the 1991 Midland Ranch Rodeo. And ranchers and cowhands get to ramble and amble with "guys we don't hardly ever get to see, like Bobby Matthews from the Lazy Z."

Matthews, who has been foreman of the Glass-Johnson Lazy Z Ranch for more than 20 years, reckoned that he was just "too broke to come to town but once a year."

"And," quipped Ms. Cowden, "he comes on the Fourth of July."

Matthews and his wife, Martha, mosey across the county line and come into town from the north country a bit more than once a year. Particularly since the mail-order business isn't as prevalent as it once was, they shop in town to fill their pantry and clothes closet and to buy some feed and ranch supplies.

From the looks of today's ranchers and cowboys, they don't seem to vary much from the way ranchers and old cowboys appears in old photographs and in old Western paintings, sculptures, sketches, and in Old West folk tales.

Most of them still ride their horses on the range. The pickup truck, in most cases, has replaced the team-drawn wagon and buckboard. Even so, cowboys seem to place their trusted mounts, such as Matthews' palomino horse, Rooster, right up there in importance with their spouses. Matthews' old dun horse, Sleepy, thought he was top of the herd and probably was.

RANCHES: Neighbors get together at rodeo

Before that, old Honky-Tonk was the Top Hoss among Lazy Z horses. But Honky-Tonk was carted off to the boneyard many years ago.

Horse or spouse, the cowboy, particularly the rancher and his foreman, couldn't get along very well without both. Cowboys, like some wild mustangs, often are free spirited and independent sorts who don't like to be tied down, hen pecked, or have to account for much of anything.

But they readily will take credit for their fence mending, windmill fixing, rounding up cattle, and branding, dehorning, vaccinating and cutting the young bulls and turning them into steers in anticipation of the cattle market.

Just like days of old, the steer is still the rancher's money crop. That's why the health of the mother cow-calf crop is so crucial to the rancher, his hands, and the banker. And the fatter the calf and the fatter the steer, the more money the rancher is going to get for his cattle.

And if cattle are bringing a good price, maybe the rancher can pay his bills, pay the banker, pay the cowboys, buy new windmills, maybe expand and improve his stock, which, in much of West Texas, was the lanky and tough Longhorn, then the hardy Durham Shorthorn, and the stocky Hereford, which became a tradition on many ranches.

Today, the English Hereford is a standard breed on many ranches, such as the Scharbauer and the Glass-Johnson Lazy Z. Others are moving in. The Black Angus, for example, is run on the Mabee Ranche. And Clayton W. Williams runs Brangus on his ranches.

Like their forefathers and old cowboys in their imaginations, today's cowboys wear high-heeled riding boots. Some are stove-pipe high; others are roper-boot tall. They sport the old wide-brimmed Western hat.

The old John B. Stetson hat is still around but is not as popular as it once was. Some hats are white, some black, some gray. Some sport a high-domed crown, while others are creased and have a deep pinch.

Long before blue bull-denim trousers became popular among city folks, cowboys, cowgirls, ranchers, farmers and most country and small-town boys and men were wearing those "blue jeans" by whatever name — Levi, Wrangler, Lee. They were wearing, and still wear, long-sleeved shirts throughout the seasons.

Many wore garments made out of flour sacks and chicken-feed sacks back when flour and feed was packed in calico cotton sacks. Not only shirts, but dresses, blouses, aprons, curtains and bloomers were made from the printed calico material.

Today, like "back then," cowboys wore leggings or chaps to protect their legs when riding through heavy brush and shrubs. Good chaps helped bond the rider with the horse.

Many cowpokes still wear the bandanna (neckerchief or wipe) more for practical reasons than for show. Similarly, aviators from the open-cockpit barnstorming days sported long silk scarfs about the neck.

Though the silk scarf became a symbol of the daring "hero" pilot, it was there to wipe oil, fuel, and smug from the pilot's goggles. For cowboys, the bandanna was for wiping the brow, eyes, nose and mouth.

But unlike the old cowboy portrayed in Westerns and in Old West lore, today's cowboy doesn't "slap leather." He no longer totes a six-shooter (sidearm or equalizer) in his leather "hawg leg" (holster) that is supported by a leather cartridge belt.

When they are not working, one of the things cowboys do best is "shoot the breeze," josh, "chew the fat," play practical jokes on one another, and tell tall tales. There is the buckaroo who "swallowed his whole head" when a wild horse bucked him clear to the moon.

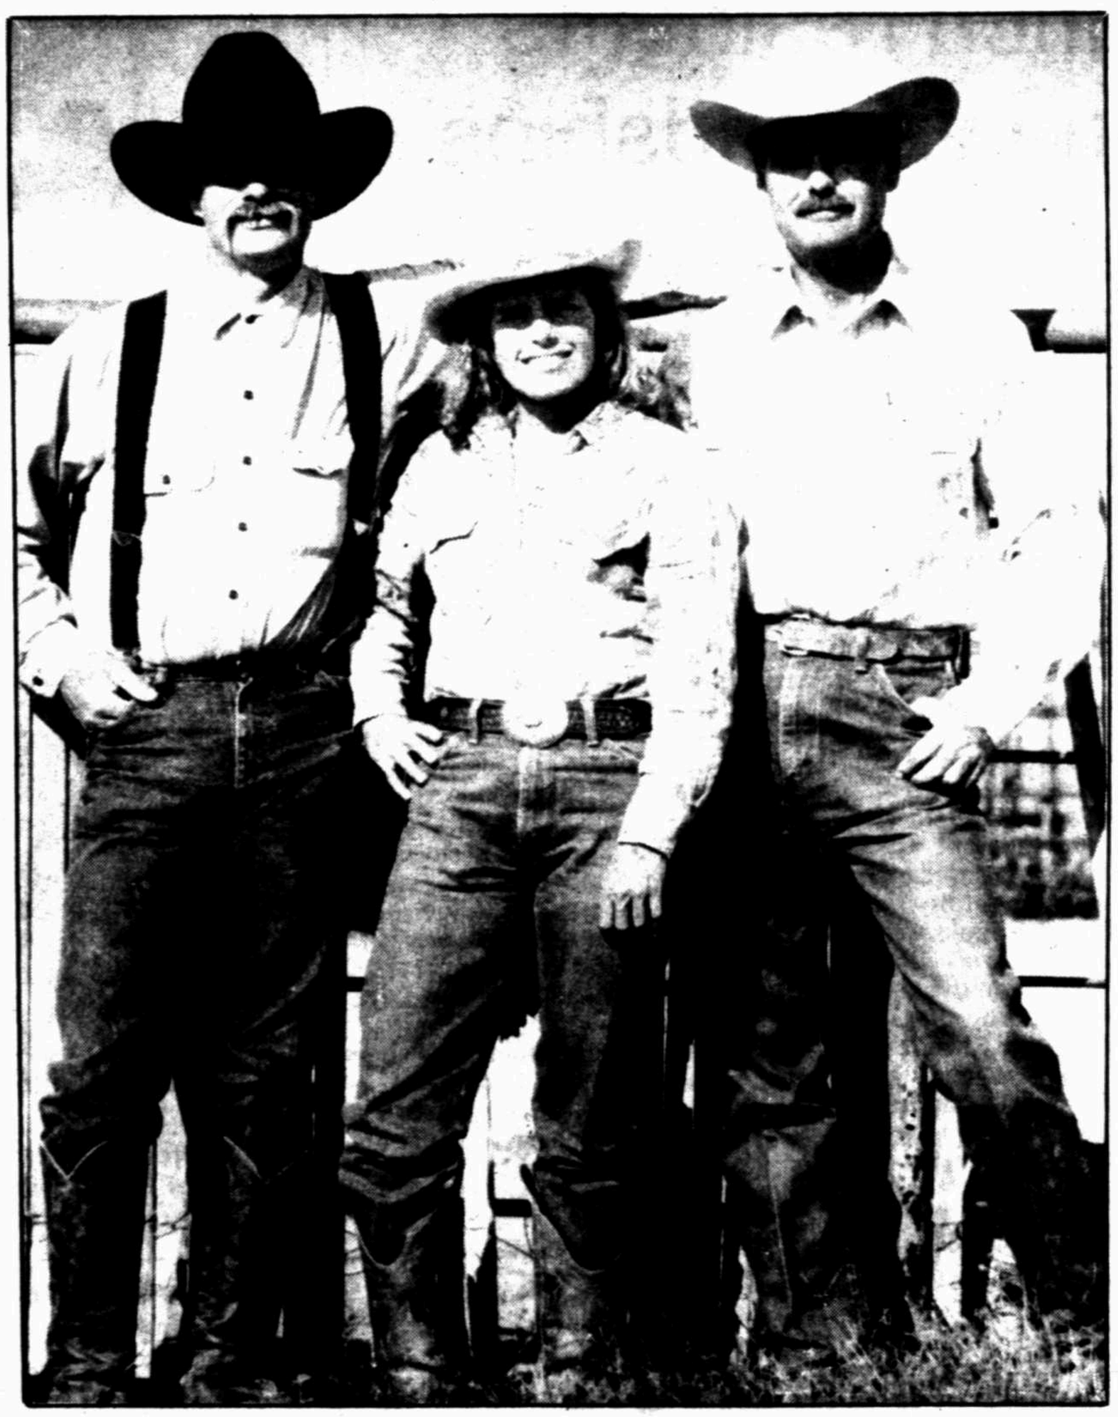

And there is the horseback cowboy who was so thirsty that he swallowed a whole mirage.

Cowboys still brand their cattle the old-fashioned way: with red-hot branding irons heated by fire. Rather than coming from a campfire, the branding-iron fire today is fed by propane or butane gas in portable tanks.

The grub doesn't change. Coffee, beans, sourdough bread, steak, fruit cobbler and the such are staple items coming out of the chuck wagon on the range.

And when they get together at roundups, at fence- and barn-buildings, and at rodeos, ranchers and their cowboys can't help but talk about their range-land concerns, cast a few kindly barbs at one another, tell a few tales, eat good chow, maybe roll a smoke or chew some plug tobacco, and mention how dry the grassland has been and how they would appreciate a good rain.

Rain, after all, is the land's nectar. Without rain, there is no grass. And without grass, the rancher is out of business.

as mule men will show off their "work-horse" pet, the mule, in the rodeo's Mule Days from 8 a.m. until noon on Friday. The mule, the hybrid offspring of a mare and a jackass, is known for its strength and body lines, which it gets from the horse, and its sensitive, long ears and small, sure feet which it gets from the donkey.

Midland mule man Marty Golden and other mule fanciers will let their mules, at their own pace and in their own way, demonstrate the mule's prowess. And the mule men will show that the mule's legendary stubbornness is a reflection of the mule's studious ways and its (his or hers) instinct for survival.

The Trade and Craft Show and the Bit and Spur Show will be held throughout the day.

For an hour beginning at 7 p.m., Midland cowboy Angel Gamboa and his troupe of Mexican vaqueros (cowboys) will put on a Charro Roping Exhibition in the Midland County Rodeo Arena. Gamboa, 53, and his trick ropers, including Roberto Manriquez, Roberto Grimaldo, and Rufino Lopez, will demonstrate the techniques used by Mexican cowboys in handling cattle.

"I'm going to have a little show of my own," said Gamboa, who will be "bull-dogging Mexican style, by the tail," in demonstrating coleada, the Mexican art of tail pulling or tail twisting.

"Instead of bull dogging by the horns," said Gamboa, "we do it by the tail, running real fast."

Unlike the American way of bull dogging, the Mexican charro (rider) doesn't "jump from the horse." Rather, while astride the horse, which is running at full steam alongside the yearling, the charro leans over to the right to grab the young bull or heifer by the tail, does a quick tail wrap, and releases the animal on the hoof.

"You really need to know what you are doing," said Gamboa, who is foreman of the Mabee Ranch. "I've been doing this several years, and I haven't hurt one calf."

While doing their Mexican trick roping, reining and bull-dogging, the charros will be decked out in their Mexican vasquero costumes: from the sombrero to the chaps, boots and spurs. The horses will be outfitted in Mexico-made bits and saddles dressed up with silver.

Following the Mexican cowboy demonstrations, the Westwind band will play from 8 p.m. until midnight.

SUNDAY, JULY 6: The 1991 Midland Ranch Rodeo will wind up with Team Roping. The books open at 10 a.m., and the roping starts at 11 a.m. Midland stock producer Daryl Skiles is furnishing the steers roping.

The Number 5 progressive roping event is to bring in 300 to 400 teams of ropers — headers and heelers — from Abilene to Alpine and from Lubbock to San Angelo, said Ronnie Stewart, who is coordinating the roping.

Other than working cowboys, many of the ropers are "weekend ropers."

The header's role is to rope the steer about the horns and quickly position the steer for the heeler to, ideally, rope the steer about the hind legs.

Roping saddles will be awarded to the high-average ropers, and cash money will be awarded to the top ropers.

Rodeo spirit re-appears in Fourth of July events

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

For years, rodeos almost faded out of Midland's consciousness.

But that wasn't always the case.

From 1935 until the dawning of the 1960s, Midland was a hale and hearty rodeo community. The rodeo, sponsored by the Midland Fair Inc. which was backed by businessmen and ranchers, developed into a world-championship event.

"Back when I was a kid," recalled Midland rodeo booster Jean Conner, 62, "by golly, they had a fantastic rodeo. Midland businessmen put money up to build the facility and buy the land." Those old rodeo grandstands, the arena, the holding pens, chutes and stalls and other features east of town have long since disappeared.

Today, the rodeo spirit in Midland is re-appearing in the Fourth of July Midland Ranch Rodeo.

But the old Midland Rodeo, which attracted rodeo-circuit cowboys and cowgirls from the southwest, west, northwest and midwest, brought in "world's championship" stock from the corrals of Everett E. Colborn of Colborn & Knight out of Dublin, Texas. The bucking stock, promised the 1941 Midland Rodeo program, "is even tougher and rougher" than before. The broncs came out of the open ranges in Arizona, Montana and Colorado.

World-class championship rodeo performers competed in Midland as surely as they rode and roped for big bucks at the famous Pecos Rodeo and rodeos throughout the Southwest and into the West, Midwest and Northwest.

Big-time rodeo cowboys and entertainers, including Tex Ritter who was billed as "America's most beloved cowboy," sang at the rodeo in the 1950s.

Back in 1938, W. Lee O'Daniel, who was on the campaign trail for Texas governor, took in the rodeo. World championship cowboys, such as Oklahoma bull rider Jim Shoulders and Big Spring calf roper Toots Mansfield, competed in the rodeo.

The names are etched in rodeo circles, particularly in West Texas chutes and arenas: Dan Taylor and Walter Poage, calf ropers; Harry Tompkins and Charlie Bird, Brahma bull riders; Flop Roberts and Tommy Marricle, wild-cow milkers.

Bronc riders such as Freckles Brown, Guy Weeks, Ed Cole and Harry Tompkins mounted bucking horses wildly named Sling Shot, Crazy Legs, Dogcatcher, Drunkard, Too Late, Bootlegger, Clabber and Nightmare.

Those were the days Agnes Cafe was the eating place for common folks, businessmen, and high hatters, and the Ranch House and Diamond Horseshoe were popular eating emporiums.

Big Ed's was a downtown cafe "Where people meet to eat," and, in 1938, KRLH-Radio was "The Permian Basin Station."

The three banks in town were the First National Bank, Midland National Bank and Commercial Bank & Trust Company.

Most retail businesses were downtown. S&Q Clothiers had stores in downtown and out in the old suburbs, which today are deep into the city. As Midland grew from a town of fewer than 10,000 people in the late 1930s to almost 100,000 in the 1990s, the suburbs expanded into rich farm and ranch land.

The Hotel Scharbauer, built by ranching money, was the headquarters for cattlemen, oilmen and anybody else out to make a deal. The Scharbauer Coffee Shop was buzzing with deals and lingo.

Lone Star, Grand Prize, Southern Select, Pabst Blue Ribbon, Blatz, Coors, and Muehlebach beers were big sellers. Southern Ice Company sold block ice for cooling food and beverage.

And to get to Pinkie's Liquor Stores, people had to leave town and drive to Pinkie's Farm Store northwest of town or toward Odessa.

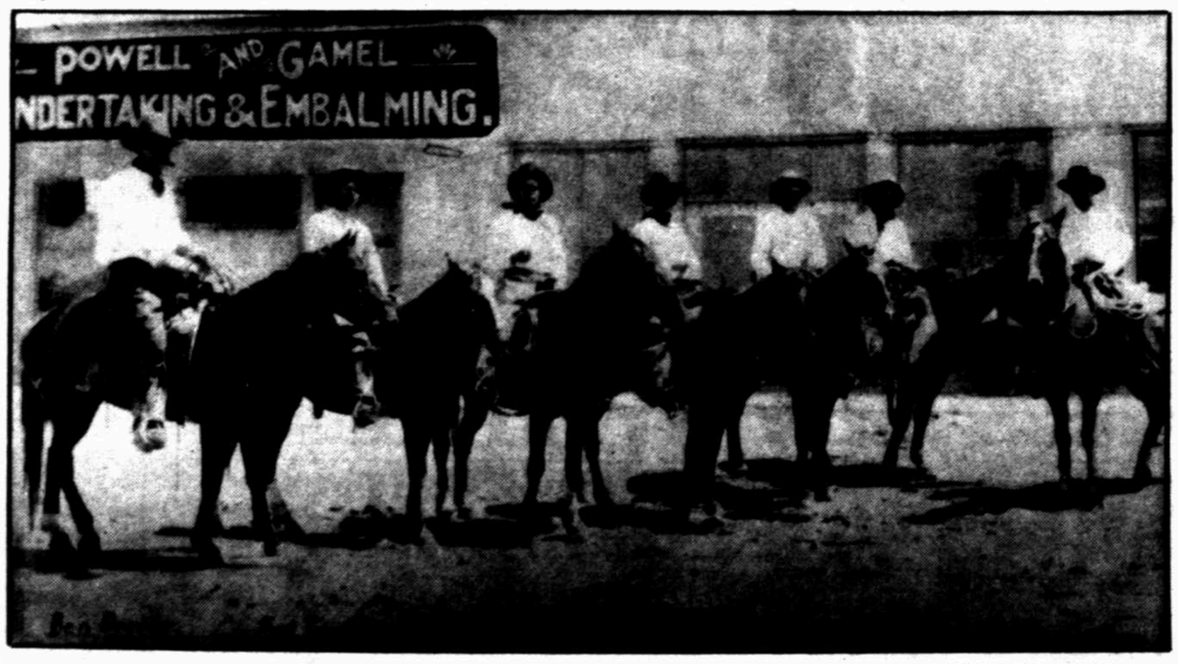

After the old Midland Rodeo faded in the early 1960s, Midland was without any community-wide rodeo for about 25 years. However, working cowboys and weekend riders and ropers often got together to try their hand at roping scampering steers and calves.

Then, in 1988, a group of Midland-based ranchers, including Candi Cowden, Ralph Powell, and Charlie Welch, got together. And with the help of like-minded people, they got the first annual Midland Ranch Rodeo underway.

TEAMS: Nine Midland County ranches will compete

(From 6F)

On the Parks Ranch Rodeo team are Stan Wallis, Doug Hardcastle, Mack Cook, Matt Faudree and John Belcher.

C (Chicago) Ranch. The C Ranch was acquired in 1883 by Nelson Morris, a prosperous Chicago meat packer, and covered 353 sections, or almost 226,000 acres, in Midland, Andrews and Winkler counties. The C, or Chicago, Ranch was the first West Texas Ranch to have a windmill and barbed-wire fence. In the 1910s, the C Ranch became known as the Midland Farms after it was sold to the Fasken family out of Canada. By then, Andrew Fasken was taking charge of a 370-section operation. Midland cattleman-rancher Foy Proctor operated the ranch from 1946 until 1984. Melvin Cotten, who went to work on the C Ranch in 1952 at the age of 18, managed the ranch until 1984.

The C Ranch Rodeo team members are Melvin Cotten, Leonard Cotten, Clay Cravens, Travis Bilbrey and Russell Bilbrey.

Charlie A. Bird Ranches. The Bird family settled in West Texas in the late 1920s, leased a ranch, and now operates spreads in Midland County and up toward Paducah. The Bird Ranch leases land from The University of Texas and from the Fasken Estate and owns other sections. Rancher Charlie Bird operates two ranches, managed by Cedar Nolan and Jerry Lee, in the Midland Country and one ranch up at Paducah.

Bird Ranch Rodeo team members are Charlie Bird, Cedar Nolan, Jerry Lee, Bobby Thompson, and Monty Elliott.

Shannon Ranch. The Shannon Ranch dates back to the late 1800s when J.M. Shannon ran his operation near the Concho River near San Angelo. J. Frank Dobie, the revered Texas folklorist, tells a tale about the frugal Shannon who, despite his wealth, had a penchant for looking the role of the poor rancher. He was a saver. Shannon wore worn and tattered trousers, which were torn by mesquite thorns, and a dirty, shapeless hat. He sported a beard and a full head of hair. An enterprising sort, Shannon in 1885 contracted to fence in the vast XIT Ranch. He built up a ranch of about 150,000 acres, or more than 234 sections, in Crockett County, Shannon Ranch Rodeo team members are Johnny Ferguson, Larry Don Clark, John Cowen, Charles Ferguson and Ricky Clark.

Mabee Ranch. The 100-section Mabee Ranch was established in the 1920s when John E. and Lottie E. Mabee settled in Martin County just north of Midland. Over the years, the ranch evolved into ownership of the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation, a philanthropic organization which sponsored "brick-and-mortar" building and equipment for universities, colleges, hospitals, YMCAs, and other human-services efforts. The ranch's primary stock is the black Angus breed. Following John Mabee's ranching days here, his nephew, Guy Mabee Sr., took over the operation. Guy Mabee Sr., who is still active in Mabee ranching, petroleum, and philanthropic interests through the J.E. & L.E. Mabee Foundation, passed on operation of the ranch to his son, Joe Mabee. Guy Mabee Sr. is chairman of the board of the Mabee Foundation, and his son, Joe Mabee, is a director. Joe Mabee, who continues his interests in the family enterprises, devotes much of his time to the Midland-headquartered Confederate Air Force and West Texas aviation. The CAF is a 8,000-member strong organization which locates, restores, maintains and flies those rare warplanes from the 1939-45 World War II era. Joe Mabee has turned the day-to-day ranch operations over to his sons, John and Guy Mabee Jr.

The Mabee Ranch Rodeo team is made up of the Mabee ranching brothers, John and Guy Mabee Jr.; Angel Gamboa, ranch foreman; Mark Nease and Jim Atwater.

Lazy Z Ranch. The Lazy "Z" is really a lazy "7"-and-a-half laid down to the left. What is now the Lazy Z Ranch once was among the holdings of an enterprising cowboy, trail driver, banker and church man — O.B. (Oscar Braxton) Holt Sr. Holt, then 25, drove a herd of 230 cattle from East Texas to West Texas in 1885. He was broke. So, the enterprising Holt, looking for a home for himself and his cattle, rode 30 miles west of Midland to the Clabber Hill Ranch. There, he "made do" for 2½ years in a dugout. Holt, a genteel and inventive fellow, fared well. By the early 1890s, when Midland was a small settlement along the Texas & Pacific Railway Company lines, Holt was the Midland County clerk. And by 1890, he had become one of the founders of Midland's First National Bank, which developed in the community's No. 1 corporate citizen. In 1892, he was married to Viola Josephine Bell, and the couple became founders of the First Methodist Church in Midland. In the mid-1920s, he had become bank president. All the while, Holt worked his ranch holdings in Martin, Andrews and Ector counties. Following his death in 1927, his widow, Viola Josephine Holt, in the early 1930s gave 7½ sections of the extensive Holt holdings to her daughter, Mabel Holt Glass, and her husband, George Washington Glass. The daughter was born in 1905, and Glass, in 1900.

George W. Glass, who was in the hardware and insurance business, became a rancher. He and the wife called their ranch the Lazy Z. Simply, they took the numeral "7," added a horizontal line at the bottom of the "7," and laid it down to form a lazy "Z." Since those early days, Glass expanded the ranch to 28½ sections and leasees additional sections.

Today, the Lazy Z Ranch is owned by George Holt Glass and Monta Jo Glass Johnson, children of the late George W. and Mabel Holt. Foreman of the ranch is Bobby "Sonny" Matthews.

The Lazy Z Ranch Rodeo cowboys are Bobby Matthews, David Matthews, Braxton Glass, Puncher Henley and Bobby Kelly.

Cowboys have their own lingo, too

The rodeo cowboy's lingo is chock with western flavor.

Bicycling: The act of scratching with first one foot and then the other.

Biting the Dust: Being thrown from a horse.

Blowing a Stirrup: Losing a stirrup.

Bogging Them In: When rider fails to scratch a horse.

Broncho: A Spanish word applied to native Mexican horses, meaning "rough" and "wild," now applied to any untamed range horse. Shortened to "bronco" or "bronc" in cowboy land.

Broomtails: Wild mares.

Buckaroo: A cowboy or bronco-buster.

Bucking: The gyrations of a 'bronc' trying to unseat his rider.

Bulldogging: The throwing of a steer by his horns in a rodeo event.

Cantle Boarding: When the rider scratches back the cantle of the saddle.

Cavvy: Saddle horses on a roundup.

Dogie: Weakling calf (motherless calf).

Four Footing: Catching an animal by the feet with a rope.

Grabbing the Apple: When a bronc-rider grabs the saddle horn.

Hooliganning: Causing the steer to fall on his horns in bulldogging.

Mail-Order Cowboy: A tenderfoot in cowboy regalia.

Man-Killer: A wild horse with a homicidal mania that strikes at mounted or unmounted men.

Maverick: An unbranded stray.

Outlaw: A horse that cannot be broken.

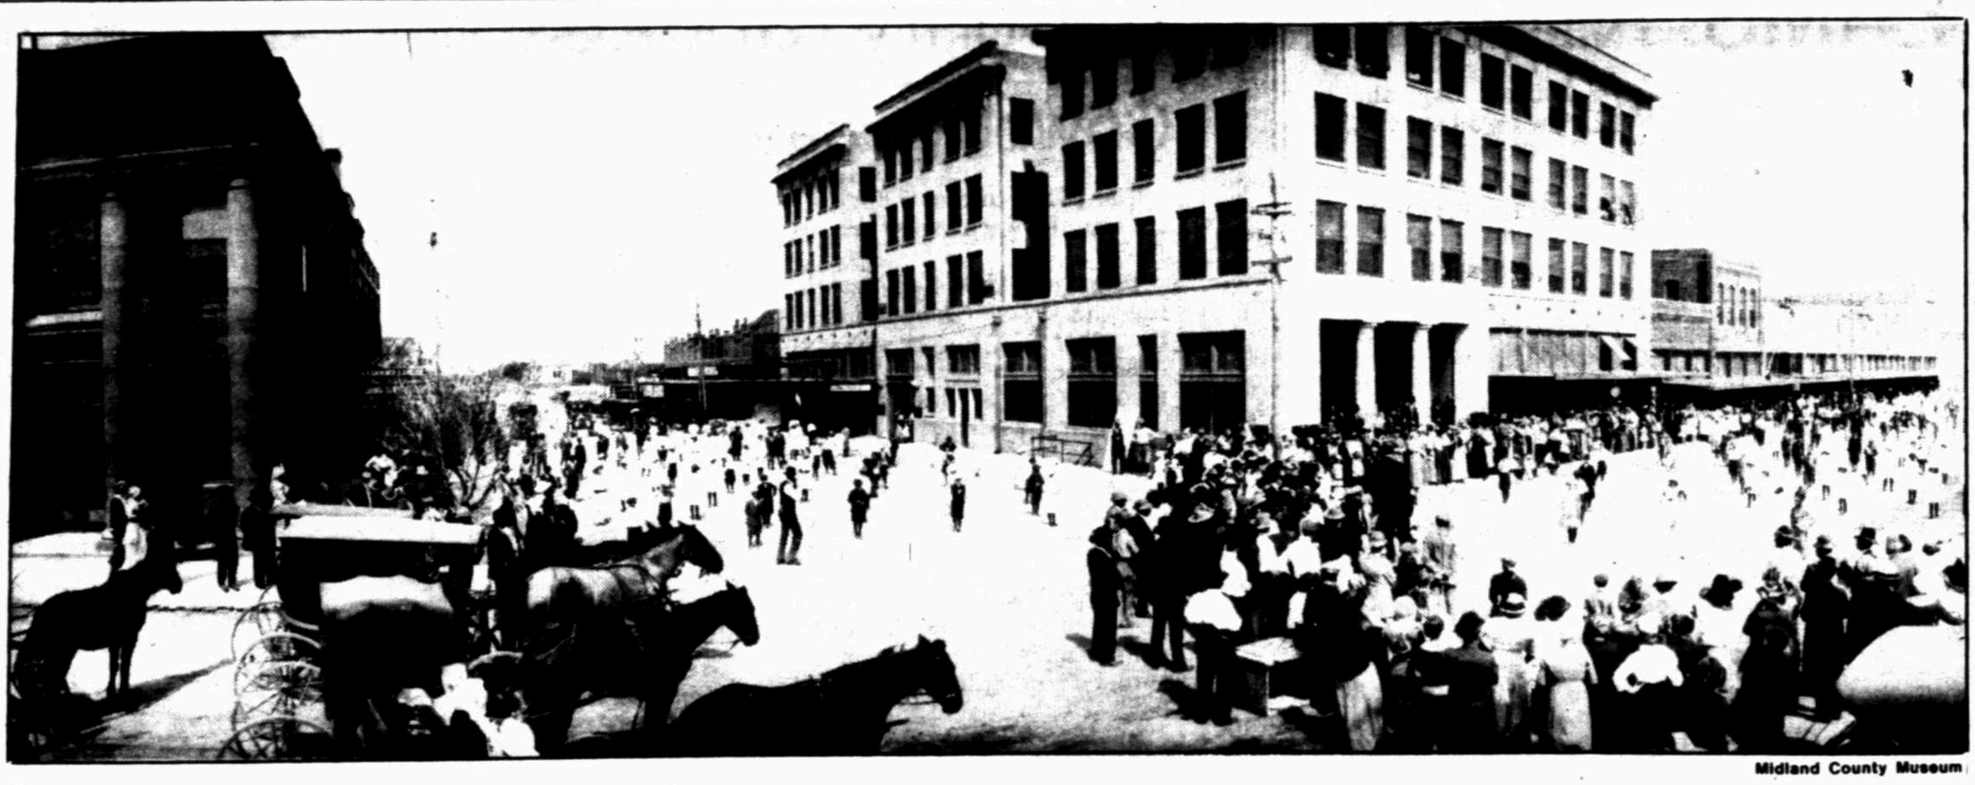

Pulling Leather: Holding onto the saddle.

Scratching: The act of keeping feet moving while riding bucking stock.

Wrangling: Rounding up, saddling, and riding range horses.

Western rodeo grew from cowboy activities

Staff Report

The oldest Western rodeo, which pits the skills of the cowpoke against the rambunctions wildness of the critter, "grew out of authentic cowboy activities, whether it be roping or riding," said Byron Price, a West Texas native who is executive director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City.

Rodeoing was a "natural outgrowth of competition between real cowboys on the ranch" back in the late 1800's, Price said.

"It was not until showmen like Buffalo Bill began to show the possibilities of creating a sport for the entertainment of the general public that it (rodeoing) became what it is today and evolved into more of a professional sport probably than a reflection of actual cowboy activities — except roping and riding is still involved."

Traditional rodeo sports include bareback bronc riding, saddle-bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling or bulldogging, team roping, steer roping and barrel racing.

But most of those sporting events, particularly bronc riding, bull riding, bulldogging and barrel racing, are not on the cowboys' or cowgirls' lineup of routine ranch chores.

Most likely, the cowpunchers will be mending fencing, repairing windmills, checking out the water tanks, rounding up the calves at branding times, and taking the steers to market.

The ranch rodeo, which reflects the routine chores of the ranch life, includes wild-cow milking, ranch cutting, calf-branding, team roping and team penning.

"I think that (the ranch rodeo) is a real positive development," said Price 41. "It brings rodeoing back to its original concept and has much closer affinity to the real life of a cowboy and the real cowboy skills than what you see produced in some of the larger arenas, like the Houston Astrodome."

Now, Price conceded it is indeed "wonderful" that the American West heritage is presented to a larger group of people by way of rodeo sporting events promoted by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

"But for those of us who grew up out in this part of the world," Price said, "It's comforting to see that they are paying a little bit of attention to the real working cowboy" through the ranch rodeo.

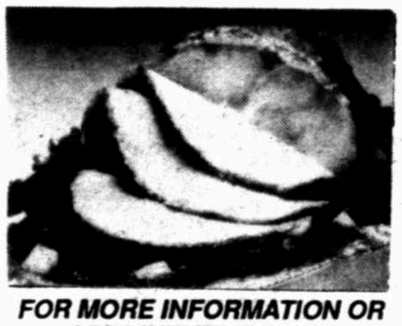

In recent years, ranch rodeos have been promoted in the Southwest. The Texas Ranch Roundup is into its 10th year at Witchita Falls.

In Abilene, there is the western Heritage Classic Ranch Rodeo.

"Some of the (ranch-rodeo) events are closer akin to actual things that happen on the ranch, such as team penning and team branding," Price said.

Midland became site of world championship rodeo in earlier days

Staff Report

Back in 1938 local newspaperman T. Paul Barron wrote that the old Midland Rodeo was "staged in a manner to curry your favor."

The rodeo, staged in the $60,000 Midland Fair Arena that was built in 1935 just east of Fairgrounds Road at its intersection with old U.S. Highway 80, played until the early 1960's.

Then it faded away.

The grandstands had seats for 5,500 spectators.

In 1938, according to the newspaper, the fourth annual rodeo was "pointing toward the world championship type of rodeo, such as is staged each year at Cheyenne, Penleton and Calgary."

Midland, in the middle of ranch country, became the site of a world-championship rodeo.

The Midland Rodeo purse and prizes in 1938 totaled $5,000. (By 1955, the purse was $12,000.)

"The 1938 Midland Rodeo is calculated to appeal to the pleasure seeker, the admirer of colorful pageantry, and the critic of professional Western sports," Barron wrote. Rodeo events included calf roping, saddle-bronc riding, steer riding, wild-horse racing, bareback bronc riding, bulldogging and boys' calf roping.

"The colorful cowgirl sponsors' contest, the competition of junior cowboys, the fun-provoking antics of oilmen 'gone Western,' the extaordinary special attractions of arena and ground stage all depict the strenuous efforts and elaborate expense to which Midland Fair officals have for your (the spectators') pleasure," Barron assured rodeo-goers.

Midland rancher Clarence Scharbauer was president of the Midland Fair Inc., sponsor of the rodeo, in 1938. A.C. Francis was vice president, Foy Proctor was vice president, and J. Holmer Epley was secretary.

Rodeo wouldn't be possible without community's help

A heartfelt tip-of-the-hat from to the 1991 Midland Ranch Rodeo Committee goes to the rodeo volunteers, staff of the Midland County Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) Office, Midland Reporter-Telegram, KCRS-Radio, Coors Brewery, and the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

With the support of dedicated sponsors, year-round work is shaping up a bigger-and-better Independence-Day rodeo to honor and preserve the heritage and living history of West Texas ranch life.

The committee thanks the thousands of visitors and exhibitors who come to Midland to "kick up their heels." Likely, many folks for the first time will be seeing real cowboys on horseback working cattle.

A big-time West Texas welcome is extended to all competitors, exhibitors, and entertainers who are part of the salute to the Midland Country's great ranch heritage. All folks are invited to celebrate the pioneer spirit of this magnificent land.

BRIEFING

Oil sees perk

Lighted pump jacks make busy motions as run checks improved slightly this week.

Oil prices climbed 25 cents over the week from $20.33 to $20.48. Posted prices bounced from $19 to $18.75 and closed at $19.25. Heavy buying of natural gas contracts were seen.

Rigs take dip

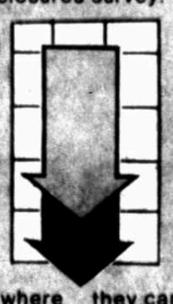

The rig count took another dip on its yo-yo trend. The rig count was 101 for the Permian Basin, down three. The national rig count dropped five to 866. The number of rigs drilling for oil was 485 and the number drilling for gas was 340.

Production off

HOUSTON (AP) — Domestic oil production in 1990 declined to the lowest points in five years, according to an oil and gas survey released today.

Meanwhile, spending for oil and gas exploration and development outside the United States reached a new high last year, said the 1991 Arthur Andersen Oil & Gas Reserve Disclosures survey.

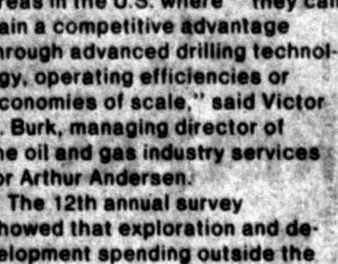

"Both the major oil and gas companies and independents are focusing their exploration efforts either on high-potential foreign prospects or on areas in the U.S. where they can gain a competitive advantage through advanced drilling technology, operating efficiencies or economies of scale," said Victor A. Burk, managing director of the oil and gas industry services for Arthur Andersen.

The 12th annual survey showed that exploration and development spending outside the U.S. reached $20.9 billion, with 53 percent of the total spent by publicly traded oil and gas companies to find new reserves and develop existing reserves.

Arthur Andersen said U.S. oil production declined for the fifth straight year, falling five percent to 2 billion barrels. At the same time, U.S. gas production increased for the fifth year in a row, reaching 10.3 trillion cubic feet, the highest level of the five years covered in the study.

Spending to acquire proved reserves continued to decline in 1990, dropping 45 percent last year to $4.9 billion — a level 72 percent below the 1988 total.

The additions to gas reserves increased 23 percent in 1990, while foreign gas reserve additions were up 26 percent. Independents accounted for more than two-thirds of the increase.

Analysts: no quick rebound

■ Despite record low prices for natural gas, analysts are not predicting a quick turnaround.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Natural gas prices are the lowest since the 1970s and show no signs of improving, prompting fears of more business failures among independent gas producers.

Analysts say they have little reason to predict a sustained price comeback soon.

Not everyone is disappointed. Buyers of natural gas are pleased that low prices have cut their expenses and helped the look of their bottom lines.

Houston utility customers will see a one-time fuel credit on their electric bills in July that will lower bills by an average 8 per cent. The power company has lowered its costs by buying natural gas in place of coal, said Geri Konigsberg, Houston Lighting & Power spokeswoman. The one-time credit also relates to the settlement of a lawsuit.

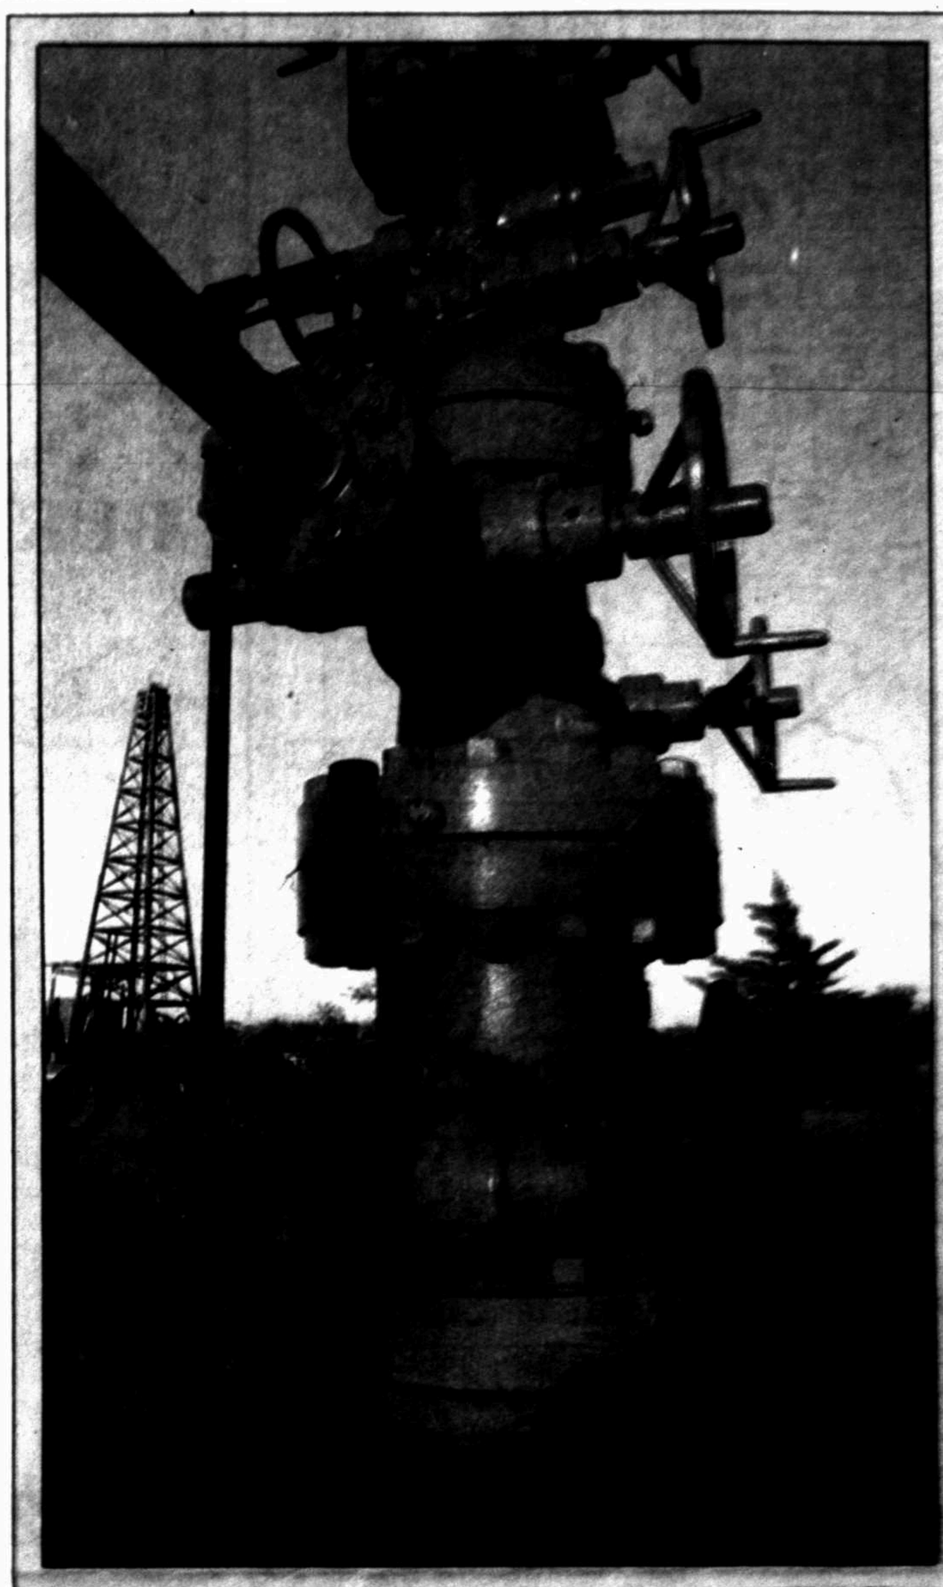

"I've never seen a more fundamentally bearish market," said one Houston natural gas trader who asked not to be identified. Producers can't even cry in their beer any more, he said, because they can only afford water.

Many independent producers are not earning enough from gas sales to pay the bills, he said.

"As a group, (independent natural gas producers) are struggling. ... It's 1986 all over again," said Paul Taylor, spokesman for Anadarko Petroleum in Houston. Until recently, the steepest decline in gas prices was recorded in 1986, but prices even then didn't fall as low as they are now.

Columbia Gas System, one of the nation's largest suppliers of natural gas, said last week it could be forced into bankruptcy because of the high prices

NATURAL GAS

Industry waits out gas dive

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Glowing predictions have made for the future of natural gas, but however optimistic local natural gas producers may be, they are having to live through a very rough present.

Last week natural gas prices fell to lows not seen since the 1980s, and one of the leading suppliers of natural gas to utilities in the Northeast, Columbia Gas System Inc., has begun talking bankruptcy. Robert K. Anderson, a local natural gas consultant, noted that "I've been taking bids for July delivery and spot gas prices on most pipelines are falling to $1 or less for mainline delivery. Prices are down 15 to 20 cents across the board."

For his part, Donald Evans, president of Tom Brown Inc., a natural gas producer, said his company will "continue to curtail where we can and beyond that, (low prices) certainly limit or reduce our plans. It simply means we'll do less." That includes less drilling, which is not good news for drillers.

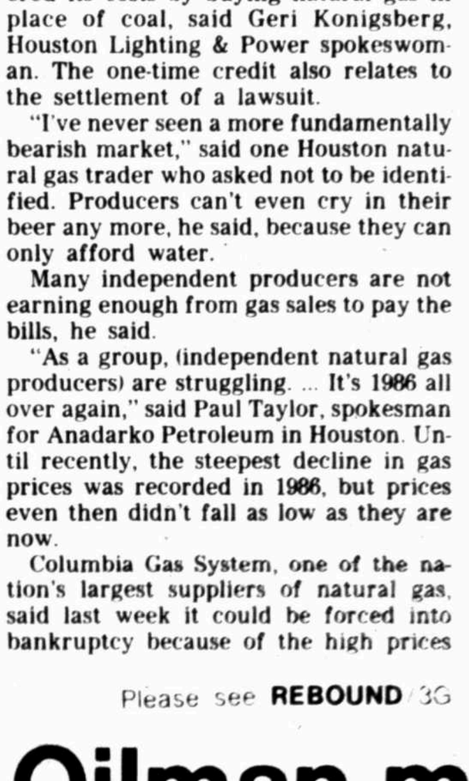

Evans and Anderson both cite two factors as sending natural gas prices lower: Unseasonably warm winters the last five years, and abundant supplies of natural gas.

"We've had five years of warm winters. This year we had 16 days less of heating days — where temperatures were less than 60 degrees," observed Anderson.

Another factor, he noted, is abundant supplies of natural gas already in storage. "We're already four months ahead of schedule on injecting (into storage); for the most

Oilman marches to different drummer

Curt Wilcott Reporter Telegram

Willie B. Wilson poses with letter from Prince Charles.

■ Think oilmen all come from the same traditional, conservative mold? Meet Willie B. Wilson.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

PROFILE

Born and raised on a West Texas ranch, a self-made multi-millionaire, lanky and drawling, William B. Wilson may fit the "Giant" stereotype of a rich Texas oilman in some ways, but Willie B. — as he is called by one and all — is not your typical Texas oilman.

"They tell me that I have always been a little different, even since I was a kid," says the Midland oilman, who admits to marching to a different drummer.

A working cowboy, almost from the day he could walk, he has traded his roping and bucking heritage for the eastern horse game of polo. He has also traded his Protestant roots for a controversial California-based self-help religion. And, long ago, he traded the greasy ways of Tex-Mex cooking for a strict health food diet and exercise routine.

Behind it all, says Wilson, is a guiding set of priorities that puts wealth behind health and knowledge, in that order.

"I go to a lot of trouble to stay healthy, because without health none of the rest of it means very much," Wilson explains. When he celebrated his birthday last weekend, he concluded the Texas-style bash by playing in a polo tournament.

At 77, he claims to have played polo longer than anyone in the game today. "I played my first game in 1933 as a student at the University of Texas, that's 58 years. Playing polo is what I like to do best, and I play it everyday."

Through the years he has thrashed mallets with an army of celebrity polo players, including Prince Charles, with whom he still corresponds, and has made it to the U.S. Open, U.S. Finals and Pacific Open. He is the only player to ever win all three tournaments of the U.S. Open.

In addition to playing polo everyday, he lifts weights three times a week and stopped wearing glasses after taking a course on eye exercise. Striving to lead a healthy, drug-free life, he hasn't smoked a cigarette since he was 17, hasn't drank a cup of coffee since 1960 and only on infrequent occassions like holidays will taste champagne.

Wilson says he doesn't even take aspirin or other pain killers. "I had a horse step on my face, they put in 100 stiches without a pain killer. I went home and made ice cream. Artificial pain killers destroy the body's natural pain killers."

While a stickler on drugs, he is less a stickler on foods. "I am not a vegetarian, I will eat pork and beef, but I try to maintain a 50 percent protein diet and eat only fresh vegetables — not canned." At his birthday bash buffalo kabobs and fresh fruits and vegetables were the main fare.

Behind health on his priority list, Wilson lists knowledge, and feels that vocabulary is the basis of knowledge and success. "Look at any successful business man and you will usually find he has a large vocabulary. If I have had a degree of success in life I attribute it to the fact that I have a large vocabulary."

The oilman says there are about 170,000 words in the English language and that he knows about 140,000 of them. "I carry a dictionary with me at all times

JOHN PAUL PITTS

America's first oil well was drilled in Ohio

Pitts

The oil industry was born when the first oil well in America was drilled by Col. E.L. Drake near Titusville, Pennsylvania in 1859 says the history books.

Wrong! says the residents of Caldwell, Ohio, who claim that the very first oil well in the nation was drilled in that part of Noble County, Ohio in 1814. Further, supporters of the claim say they have the well to prove it.

The Caldwell Ohio Historical Society claims that the first oil well in America was not the Drake well, but the Thorla-McKee well drilled near Olive, Ohio, which is now a part of Caldwell.

Today, 177 years later, interested citizens of Caldwell hope to make the site of America's first oil well, a national tourist attraction. Planned is a paved parking lot with a board sidewalk leading to the well site which is located near the junction of Ohio 78 and 564 just east of the city.

What makes the Caldwell well interesting other than the fact that is may be the first oil well in the U.S. is the fact that the 34 inch casing, a hollow sycamore log is still in the hole and visible.

Dr. Sherman Smith, a medical doctor in the town of 2,500 and head of the committee restoring the historical well, says the well was drilled by Robert McKee and Silas Thorla, who were searching for salt but were unlucky enough to hit oil.

However, the first oilmen saved the deal by bottling the oil and selling it as Seneca Oil — a medicine for colds, aches, pains and other ailments.

Surprisingly, the well is still producing saltwater, gas and trace of oil. "The actual depth of the well is 300 feet, but sycamore casing extends down about 26 feet through the surface," says Smith. He explained that when the saltwater is pumped off the well it will let out a "belch" of oil and gas about every 15 minutes. He said that in recent years a producing well had been drilled only 60 feet away. "In the last 15 years we have had a revival of the oil business in this part of Ohio, dozens of 300 foot wells have been drilled."

Unlike the Drake well, the Thorla-McKee well was drilled by a spring pole. The spring pole "rig" consisted of a 40-foot sapling, with a rope and drilling tools on one end and stirrups for two to three men on the other end. The drillers would put one foot in the stirrup and push the sapling lever down to lift the tool then let the drilling tool drop back into the hole.

"We don't have any argument with the folks over at Titusville," said Dr. Smith, "we each hold separate claims. We had the first oil well, but the Drake well was the first well drilled intentionally for oil. We get along beautifully with the folks at the Drake well museum."

Smith said the restoration committee also plans to install a replica of the man-powered spring pole rig to show visitors how it works, and also to build a small museum at the site.

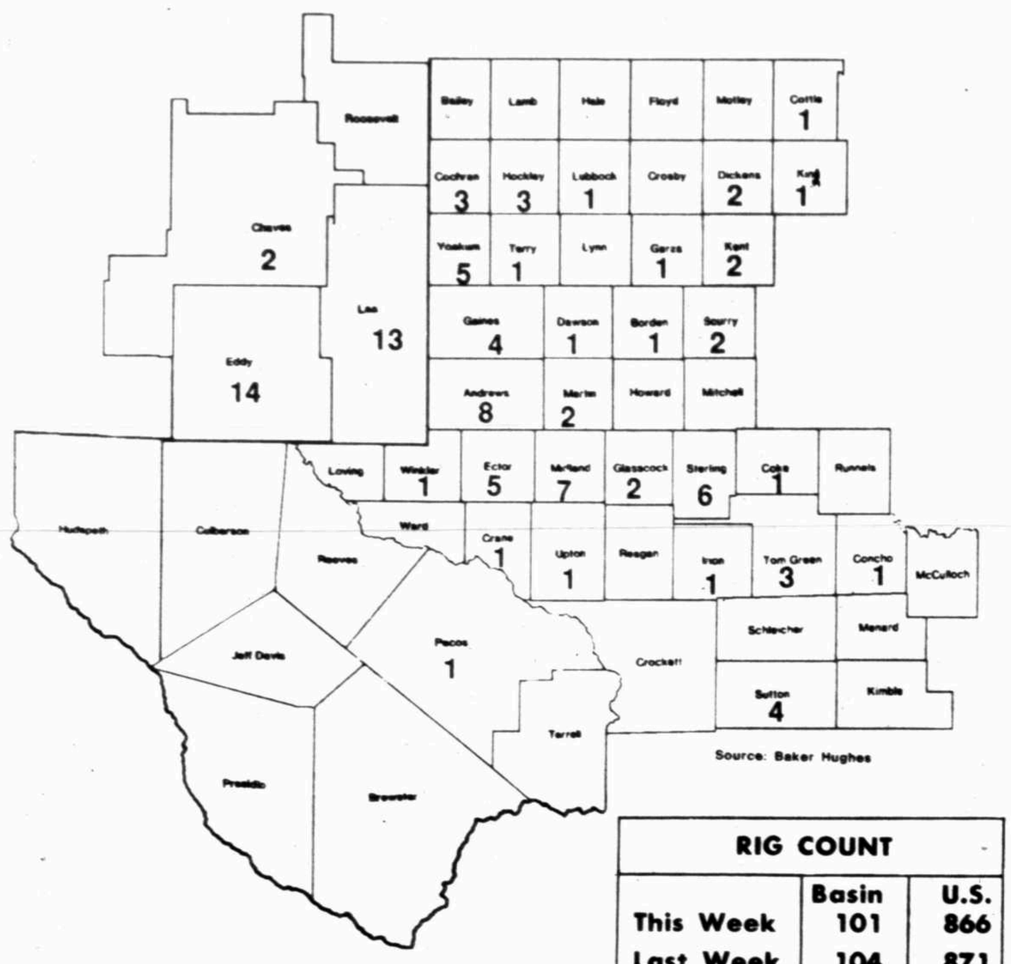

"We got the idea for a museum adjacent to the well when we dispatched a local citizen to Midland, Texas to view the Petroleum Museum there. We were thoroughly impressed," noted Smith.

He said BP (British Petroleum) was so fa the biggest contributor to the Horizontal well planned for North Texas

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. will try horizontal drilling in the Fort Worth Basin in North Texas, chairman George Mitchell said.

The company has about 100 vertical wells in the basin, northwest of Fort Worth, and has locations for several hundred more, Mitchell told shareholders at the company's annual meeting Wednesday.

The well near Rhome will go down 7,300 feet to the Barnett shale formation and then about extend 2,000 feet horizontally.

IOCC strengthens environment projects

Staff Report

CASPER, Wyo. — The Interstate Oil Compact Commission (IOCC) has launched a series of projects to strengthen environmental compliance by the oil and gas industry, governors and representatives were told at the organization's midyear meeting

"This effort is especially significant because it marks the first time that federal, state, environmental and industry leaders have come together to determine the best way to protect the environment while encouraging domestic oil and gas production," said IOCC Executive Director W. Timothy Dowd.

Founded in 1935, the IOCC represents the governors of 29 oil-and-gas-producing states. Current chairman is Utah Governor Norman Bangerter. The governors of Kansas, Montana, Oklahoma, North Dakota and Wyoming are attending the meeting in Casper, Wyo.

The series of new IOCC projects was announced at the organization's midyear meeting in Casper, Wyo.

In a cooperative effort with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the IOCC has initiated a review process to evaluate each state's regulations regarding exploration and production waste.

The first review was completed earlier this month in Wyoming, said Jerry Simmons of the IOCC. The review team comprised two state regulatory personnel and one representative each from an environmental group and from industry. Participating as observers were representatives from a local environmental group, local industry, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, the U.S. Department of Energy and the EPA.

The four-day review compared Wyoming's oil and gas regulations against what the IOCC and EPA consider to be the essential elements of effective regulation programs. These elements were developed by an IOCC-sponsored group.

"The purpose is to conduct a constructive review of each state's regulations and to make recommendations for improvement as needed," Simmons said. A report on Wyoming regulations will be issued by early fall, he added.

Also in conjunction with the EPA, the IOCC is developing a training program for state inspectors who check oil and gas wells to determine compliance with regulations. A committee is preparing a one-day program that will heighten inspectors' awareness of environmental regulation. The committee will then work with individual states to offer a state-specific second day of training.

In addition, the IOCC is developing a data-management program for state regulations governing exploration and production wastes. The database will be updated regularly and be accessible to the public, Simmons said.

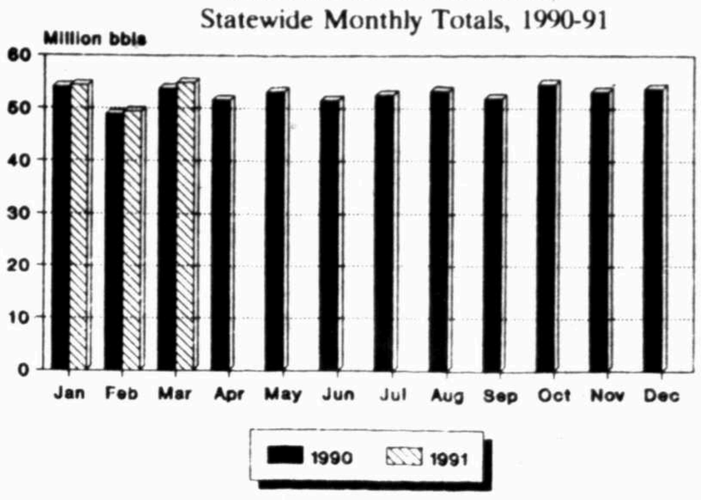

At the IOCC meeting, members of the Council of State Regulatory Officials, a peripheral organization, decided to enter into a cooperative effort with the U.S. Department of Energy to study domestic idle wells. The project will include conducting a census of inactive wells and studying the environmental, economic and legal impact of these wells on the states. The study is expected to require 18 months to complete.

The IOCC has also undertaken another project in cooperation with the DOE. The two agencies are sponsoring environmental compliance workshops that bring together state regulatory personnel and industry representatives.

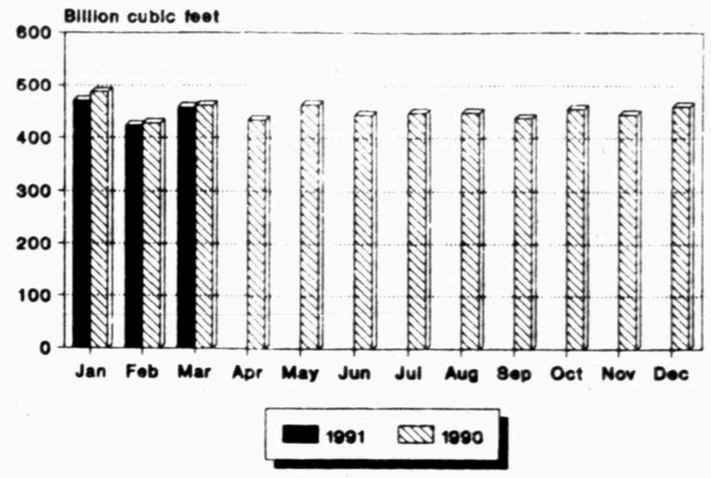

"The purpose is to open frank discussions," Simmons said. The first workshop was held last month in Pittsburgh and drew participants from seven Appalachian states.

"Thanks to the active leadership of the state governors, the IOCC is taking an increasingly high-profile role as a mediator for discussions among government, industry and environmental groups," Dowd said.

Production increases

The Texas Railroad Commission reports that state crude production and natural gas production both increased in March. Preliminary figures show oil production was 1,734,639 barrels daily, compared with preliminary February productio of 1,764,042 barrels daily. Preliminary oil production for March is set at 54,858,047 barrels, up from 49,394,721 in February. Texas oil and gas wells produced 457,250,107 Mcf of gas in March, compared to February production of 423,233,910 Mcf.

China discovers major gas deposit estimated at 3 billion cubic meters

BEIJING (AP) — A major natural gas deposit found in northern China will be developed quickly in hopes it will be an economic boon for the area, an official newspaper reported Monday.

The China Daily said the area includes parts of Shaanxi and Gansu provinces and the Ningxia and Inner Mongolia autonomous regions. It is one of the poorest areas.

Preliminary targets set an annual output of 3 billion cubic meters of natural gas for the field that lies in the Shaanxi-Gansu-Ningxia Basin.

The People's Daily newspaper said the 3,200-square-kilometer deposit is eight times the size of the country's largest existing onshore gas field.

Natural gas is becoming an increasingly important fuel in China.

The Changqing Petroleum Exploration Bureau, which oversees the project, said large-scale exploration in the area this year has produced encouraging results.

Bureau director Shi Xingquan said every exploratory well drilled in the field through May had struck gas, with an average daily output of about 200,000 cubic meters.

REBOUND: Prices offer no incentive for natural gas required in its contracts with gas suppliers. On Tuesday, it announced a salary freeze for some employees and pay cuts for others as the company struggles to get its finances in order.

With the low prices, there is little incentive for producers to find new supplies, said Carol Freedenthal, principal at Jofree, a natural gas consulting company.

Two consecutively warm winters have wreaked havoc on the industry. In addition, demand is growing slowly, and there is an oversupply of gas in storage, Freedenthal said. Tax incentives have served to increase production at hard-to-get-to wells.

Currently, gas is selling on the short-term market for between $1.10 and $1.15 per thousand cubic feet before it moves into a major pipeline, he said. But it costs about $2.15 per thousand cubic feet to develop gas reserves, he said. Gas from old wells is cheaper to produce, running as low as 30 cents per thousand cubic feet.

The big question facing the industry is when gas prices will go up again.

Freedenthal expects it will take two to four years before prices begin to climb. Instead of waiting, many gas producers are trying to get out of the business, he said.

But despite "fire sale prices," several companies are having trouble finding buyers, Freedenthal said.

Amoco is trying to take a long-term approach rather than responding to every price fluctuation, said spokesman Jim O'Leary. Amoco is the largest gas producer in North America.

The company is confident that prices will increase somewhat, O'Leary said, but is unsure when the recovery will occur.

Enron Oil & Gas has protected itself against low gas prices by signing long-term contracts selling 25 percent of its gas at fixed rate prices, said Enron spokeswoman Diane Bazelides.

GAS: Producers ride out low prices

part, companies have injected enough supplies to meet next year's demand, including winter. That's the predominant reason for low prices."

Charles Perry, a natural gas consultant and past president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said that, for his clients, "basically it's tuck your tail between your legs and look for a spot to hang onto until things get better."

He pointed out that "We added more reserves than we used — and a lot of that came from a re-evaluation of existing reserves; we found out there was more there than we thought. From the figures I've seen, we're probably staring at two trillion cubic feet more than we need. There's probably about a trillion more cubic feet in storage that we didn't need."

Anderson adds that "we entered this past winter with 3.5 trillion cubic feet of storage gas and came out of winter with about 3 TCF; typically supplies are down to 1.5 to 2 TCF after winter. If anyone needs to point a figure, it's storage; wintertime and storage go hand in hand."

Evans also points to the amount of gas in storage as part of the cause of low prices, and adds that the downturn in the national economy has also played a role. IN addition, he said, "We've also had an increase to the supply from Section 29 tax credit gas like coalbed methane. And the gas market is a much more efficient market than it has been before; there are thousands of marketers on the phone constantly, looking for the best price for an MCF of gas."

When the Iroquois Gas Transmission System announced plans to build a 370-mile pipeline to transport Canadian gas to the East Coast, it drew protests from some producers who feared Canadian gas would flood the market. However, Anderson and Perry both say imports of Canadian gas have not had any noticeable impact on the U.S. market.

On the other hand, Evans observed that "I think Canadian gas has had a major impact on the market because every incremental MCF of gas, that's what prolongs the bubble. So even though we import a minor amount of our gas consumption from Canada, any increment hurts."

Another problem, Anderson said, is that "Major oil companies are not willing or even able to shut in their natural gas production. They're concerned about the political fallout as well as the effect on their cash flow. The indications are the majors will flow gas at any price; that being the case, there's little small independent producers can do to stem the downturn in oil prices."

Despite the tough times facing natural gas industry, many remain bullish on its future, including Anderson and Evans, who expects an increase in prices down the road. "And because gas prices are extremely low right now, the price spike will seem even more abrupt," he cautioned.

Says Anderson: "I don't know what the future holds, but I'm still bullish on natural gas. I think the silver lining is (low prices) will force more and more producers to consider shutting in natural gas, and it will most definitely affect the spudding of new gas wells. The bottom line result being, by the mid-1990s, we should see deliverability being much less than demand. Demand should increase to 22 TCF per year by 1995, with the result being perhaps dramatically increasing natural gas prices. The other silver lining is that the utilities that primarily burn coal will consider gas, with it being so cheap, it can capture market share from coal and prove to utilities that we can supply gas on a reliable basis."

and I read it for pleasure like you would read a novel," he notes.

He adds: "You don't need a big vocabulary for speaking, but you do need one for thinking. A large vocabulary eliminates mental fogginess and misunderstanding."

The etymologist (one who studies the origin of words) creeps out in him as the speaks: "All languages originate from sanskrit of the Middle East." As a scholar, Willie B. has spent 10 years of his spare time producing a volume of tapes that he says are designed to increase one's vocabulary and understanding of words.

He formed a company to produce and market the tapes entitled "Wilson's Success Through Vocabulary," but says they have not been an outstanding success.

In 1976, Wilson became involved in Scientology, a religion founded by writer L. Ron Hubbard, and has since reached that group's highest level. "Scientology is more technology than theology," explains Wilson, a former Episcopalian. "It is human technology that works. We believe that God helps those who help themselves." Wilson says he has recently formed a company that will teach the Scientology technologies as management tools to better improve businesses.

It is only one of 30 companies, including two pipeline companies, the oilman has formed over the years for fun and profit.

Beginning with a $300,000 cattle inheritance, Wilson eventually managed to parlay that into an oil and gas fortune that gave him a net worth of $100 million. "I never gave wealth much thought until one day we took stock and realized I had a net worth of $100 million. After that I was willing to admit that I had achieved a degree of material success."

Among his oil and gas companies are two pipeline companies and an exploration company that drills approximately five wells each year and participates in ventures as big as foreign drilling concessions. "We are looking at a foreign concession now," says Wilson.

A current pet company, however, is his buffalo herd. "We have one of the biggest herds in the nation and sell everything from the meat to hides and heads."

He credits some of his business success to Scientology. "I don't waiver between intention and counterintention. I don't worry about failure or ridicule. We often allow others to invalidate us. I just think something through then do it."

PITTS: First U.S. oil well

move to restore the well and build a museum. "This is where Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, which was Sohio and is now owned by BP got its start."

Smith explains that the well promped an oil boom in Southeast Ohio in the early 1800s and that Col. Edwin Drake eventually bought Thorla-McKee well, which had been sold by Thorla & McKee back to the Indians.

"The entire community has gotten behind the project to restore this well which had been pretty much a secret until a couple of years ago, because it was on private land." Smith says the committee under the Caldwell Chamber of Commerce has purchased the land and well and are prepared to bring it to its rightful place of prominence in American history.

The Doodlebuggy is Western Geophysical's new all-terrain seismic vehicle.

Special seismic vehicle unveiled

Western Geophysical Exploration Products has introduced a specially-designed all-terrain seismic buggy to meet today's geophysical exploration needs.

The Doodlebuggy vehicle offers capabilities that extend beyond those of traditional service trucks in terms of curability, simplicity, flotation and power.

The truck can operate at the increased speeds needed to conduct surveys with larger geophone spreads and faster vibroseis operations. For information on the Doodlebuggy, contact Western Geophysical in Alvin, Texas.

Shell selling Los Angeles refinery

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. is searching for a buyer for its 68-year-old Los Angeles-area refinery in an effort to improve the performance of its sagging refining and marketing operations.

The Wilmington refinery in Carson, Calif., could bring an estimated $500 million and industry analysts said the most probable buyer was British Petroleum Co.

Shell said it would close the refinery if a qualified buyer were not found.

The Wilmington complex includes a complete refinery, lubricating oil compounding plant and refined product, solvent and propane storage and terminal facilities. If the refinery were to shut down, Shell would continue to operate the facility's other areas, the company said.

"We have examined may options for improving Shell's refining and marketing financial performance and bringing it more in line with the company's corporate financial objectives," said Steven L. Miller, president of Shell Refining and Marketing Co.

"The decision to sell the Wilmington refinery is among the options we are pursuing to improve performance," he said in a statement.

Miller said Shell plans to use its Martinez, Calif., and Anacortes, Wash., refineries to supply gasoline and other refined products to Southern California, the world's largest gasoline market.

Shell's refining and marketing profits have been lagging behind the rest of the industry's since the 1988 explosion at its Norco, La., refinery that killed seven people. Repairs are still under way. Without that crucial refinery, Shell has had to buy gasoline in the marketplace from other refiners and has missed out on record refining profits.

Miller told the Wall Street Journal the California refinery was profitable but its costs would rise, primarily for environmental compliance and to produce reformulated fuels.

Government reaches agreement on power generating systems

Staff Report

An idle powerplant near Des Moines, Iowa, will be transformed into a showcase for a highly advanced power generating system with funding from the federal government's Clean Coal Technology Program.

The Department of Energy has reached agreement with a recently-formed partnership of Des Moines-based Iowa Power Inc. and the Dairyland Power Cooperative of LaCrosse, Wisconsin. The partnership was formed to demonstrate an advanced clean coal power system at Iowa Power's Des Moines Energy Center. Under the agreement, the Energy Department will fund $93.2 million of the estimated $203 million cost of the project. Details of the agreement are outlined in a report sent by the Energy Department to Congress on June 18, 1991.

When the project is complete, Des Moines will be hosting the world's first utility scale version of a technology that is not only inherently clean — eliminating up to 95 percent of the sulfur pollutants and 70 percent of the nitrogen oxides without special add-on equipment — but also significantly more efficient than today's coal-burning techniques.

The project is part of the Energy Department's multi-billion dollar Clean Coal Technology Program, a joint effort by government and industry to demonstrate advanced clean-burning technologies in commercial showcase facilities throughout the nation.

The Iowa Power-hosted demonstration is the 33rd pioneering project to receive federal funds under the Clean Coal Technology Program. Government funding for the project will begin at the end of a 30-day congressional review of the agreement.

The joint government/industry project will feature a "pressurized circulating fluidized bed," an advanced combustion system being marketed in the U.S. by the Pyropower Corp. of San Diego, Calif. This system powers both steam and gas turbines in a "combined cycle" configuration that allows greater energy production from the same amount of coal. The output of repowered plant – about 15 percent more efficient than the previous unit – will be 70 megawatts of electricity.

Unique features of the project are the use of a circulating fluidized bed under pressure, integral hot ceramic gas filtration equipment, planned use of a topping combustor to improve gas turbine efficiency, and the ability to use commercially-available gas turbines.

Slurried coal will be burned in a specially-designed boiler operating at up to 14 atmospheres of pressure. A dolomite or limestone sorbent is injected into the vessel to capture sulfur pollutants from the coal gases. These sulfur-laden solids are carried by hot, high pressure gases through cyclone collectors and recirculated back to the boiler, a feature that enhances both combustion efficiency and sorbent collection.

Combustion gases leaving the hot cyclones are passed through hot ceramic filters to remove remaining ash and sorbent particles and expanded in a gas turbine. Heat recovered from these gases produce steam which, along with steam from within the furnace, generates additional power in the plant's existing steam turbine. Because combustion takes place at relatively low temperatures, formation of nitrogen oxides is limited. Solid wastes from the process are suitable for disposal in landfills.

At times of peak demand, a separate oil or gas fired "topping" combustor can be used to boost the temperature of the gases entering the turbine, resulting in up to a 50 percent increase in the turbine output.

Selected by the government in the program's third national competition in 1989, the project was originally planned for Dairyland's Alma plant in Wisconsin. When the Alma site became unavailable, Dairyland Power joined in a partnership with Iowa Power to relocate the project to the Des Moines site.

Funds will be provided by Pyropower and Black & Veatch of Kansas City, Missouri, as well as Iowa Power and Dairyland. The repowered plant is scheduled to begin operations in mid-1995.

Oklahoma governor named IOCC chairman

Staff Report

Walters

CASPER, Wyo. — Oklahoma Governor David Walters was elected chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission (IOCC).

Walters will succeed Utah Governor Norman Bangerter following the IOCC's annual meeting in December.

Other new officers are Wesley D. Norton of North Dakota, first vice chairman, and Philip Reale of West Virginia, second vice chairman. All officers were elected to one-year terms. Executive director of the organization is W. Timothy Dowd.

Walters was elected governor of Oklahoma last November. Prior to that, he served as president of The Walters Company, a commercial real estate investment and management company in Oklahoma City.

In addition, he has served as chairman of the governing commission for the Oklahoma State Department of Human Services and as co-chairman of the Governors Commission on Government Reform.

Walters earned a degree in industrial engineering at the University of Oklahoma and a master of business administration degree from Harvard University.

The ROTAFLEX*
Proof is in performance

The first proven application of 100% mechanical, long, slow stroke pumping technology. And from actual well performance data, the ROTAFLEX proves high volumes of fluid can be rod pumped from shallow wells and efficiently pumped from deep wells.

In a typical ROTAFLEX installation, torque demand reduces from 1,230,000 inch pounds of a 1280 sized conventional unit, to 190,000 inch pounds. And at 2 to 5 strokes per minute, the ROTAFLEX will prove you can produce more fluid from a wider range of wells, and lower equipment and long term work-over costs.

But the real proof of the ROTAFLEX is how well it can perform for you. Send us your well conditions and let's run a computer predictive. We know the ROTAFLEX can take you where no rod pump has gone before.

Nugent upbeat on natural gas

Staff Report

HOUSTON — An improving economy, given a boost by a North American free trade agreement, should mean expanding markets in Mexico for U.S. natural gas, according to Railroad Commissioner James E. (Jim) Nugent.

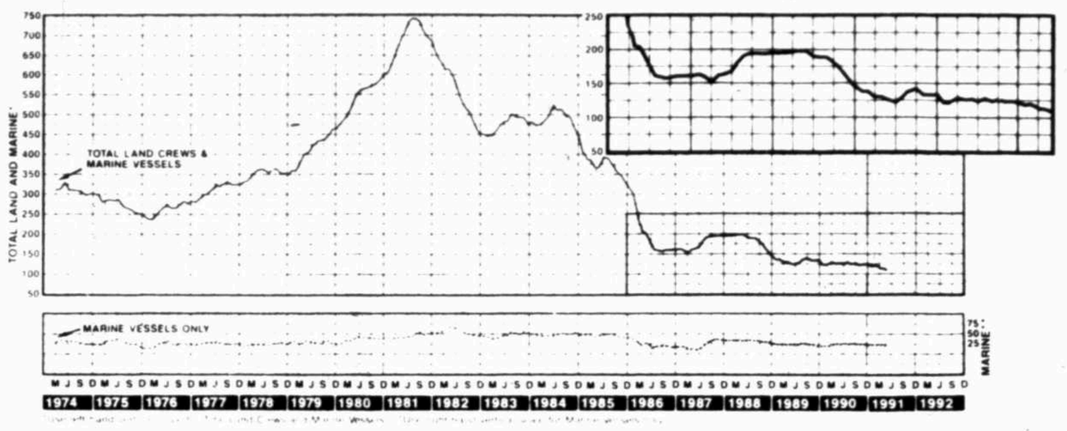

Speaking to U.S. and Mexico conferees gathered for the Natural Gas Trade Across the Border Conference here, Nugent said natural gas is one of the brightest areas for economic growth in both countries.

"Given governmental encouragement, there is definite potential for natural gas as a fuel for Mexico's industrial future," Nugent said. "On our side of the border, we have more than enough resources to provide stable, secure supplies to meet awakening natural gas demand in the U.S. as well as supply the needs of our neighbor to the south."

Nugent said the free trade talks now underway offered both countries the opportunity to move beyond the contention and disagreement that has too often characterized energy relations in the past. He urged delegates to the natural gas conference to begin their own energy dialogue focused on matching needs and resources.

"In Texas and the southwest, we have producers eager to tap our vast natural gas resources, but held back by weak U.S. markets, persistently low prices, and difficulty in finding or justifying the capital necessary to finance a drilling program. We also have pipelines, increasingly dependent on unpredictable spot market sales, which are looking for longer-term, more stable contracts," Nugent said. "Without significant increases in the PEMEX budget for exploration, our neighbors to the south face a continuing decline in natural gas production. Conversely, Mexico looks to a brighter economic future, spurred by increasing U.S. and foreign investment. There is potential for U.S. gas to aid industrial expansion while helping to address their environmental problems."

SEISMIC CREW COUNT
(The leading indicator of oil and gas exploration activity.)

Seismic count falls

The Society of Exploration Geophysicists reports that the number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters fell in May for the third consecutive month. The land crew total fell by two to 85, and the marine crew total fell one for a net decrease of three, bringing the total to 107. This total establishes a new low number of crews and vessels working in the U.S. since the SEG began its monthly survey in May of 1974.

Soviets to pay royalties

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – The Soviet Union is developing a system to pay oil royalties to local governments there, which may end some disputes between the central government and state and local authorities.

The Bush administration has been pushing the Soviets to increase foreign oil and gas development.

However, private property has not yet been recognized in the Soviet legal system.

And the struggles between the 15 republics and the central government have created confusion that has slowed development of resources.

Under new arrangements in the republic of Russia, local authorities will keep 10 percent of the royalties, said Vadim Dvurechensky, deputy chief of the Geology Committee of Russia.

Vagit Alekperov, deputy minister of the Oil and Gas Industry and leader of a Soviet delegation visiting Houston, said each republic will be able to set its own royalty payments. All regions will receive royalties, he said.

The royalty payments is sure to raise the price for oil in the Soviet Union, he said.

Soviet officials are in Houston for a three-day workshop on how to develop oil and gas joint ventures in the Soviet Union.

The workshop, which started Monday, is sponsored by MD Seis Joint Venture, which is a partnership between the Soviets and a Houston company, Professional Geophysics.

Alekperov listed several problems with oil industry joint ventures, including unresolved legal issues, tax questions and funding.

The most harmful, he said, is the confusion, misinformation and rumors in the foreign press involving the internal disputes between the central government, individual republics and local authorities.

So far, the Soviets have approved 20 joint ventures, including eight Soviet-American ventures.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Columbia Gas freezes salaries

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Columbia Gas System Inc. has targeted employee wages in a further effort to accumulate cash.

The nation's largest gas supplier announced Tuesday it was freezing wages for some workers while cutting others up to 10 percent. The move is expected to save the company about $6 million through the year.

The move follows last week's suspension of a dividend payment for the second quarter. The suspension is expected to save about $29.3 million, Columbia spokesman H. William Chaddock said.

"The system is not insolvent. What the system has is a cash-flow problem and that is what we are attempting to deal with," Chaddock said.

Beginning July 1, hourly worker salaries will be frozen, while non-hourly employees will see cuts of 5 percent to 10 percent. Those with higher salaries will take the bigger cuts, Chaddock said.

There were no immediate plans to tap into the company's employee benefits package to find more cash, he said.

About 8,000 non-union employees' salaries will be affected. About 3,000 employees are union members and Chaddock said the company plans negotiations with the groups. He would not say what those negotiations would involve.

Columbia, one of the nation's largest suppliers of natural gas, announced last week it could be forced into bankruptcy because its contracts with natural gas suppliers require excessively high prices for gas.

The company cited plunging gas prices due to a warm winter and a glut of supplies for the high costs. Natural gas is selling on the spot market for $1.30 per 1,000 cubic feet, while Columbia's subsidiary, Columbia Transmission Corp., is paying up to $6.70.

Columbia Transmission is the company's major pipeline subsidiary.

Columbia Gas said it could lose $1 billion over the next 10 years if it can't buy out the contracts and if banks refuse to restructure its credit lines.

Columbia officials began meeting with bankers last week to reestablish the company's credit. Chaddock said a formal proposal is expected to be made to the banks this week, but he did not know when it was scheduled.

Zapata unit sold to Tidewater

HOUSTON (AP) — A marine service company partly owned by Zapata Corp. has been sold for $300 million, completing a yearlong transformation of the wildcat drilling company co-founded by George Bush 40 years ago.

Tidewater Inc. of New Orleans said Thursday it plans to exchange 23.7 million shares of its stock for Zapata Gulf Marine Corp., the largest marine service company in the energy industry.

Zapata Gulf operates 284 vessels that service the offshore oil and gas industry. The company reported revenues of about $248 million as of March 31.

If Tidewater's stock price stays above $12.75 per share, the deal will be worth more than $300 million for Zapata and its two partners in privately held Zapata Gulf.

Zapata owns 34.7 percent of the boat company, with the remaining shares held by two investment partnerships.

Once the deal clears Tidewater stockholders and federal regulators, Zapata will own about 16 percent of Tidewater's outstanding common stock in a stake worth more than $100 million.

Zapata spokesman Barney White told the Houston Chronicle the company plans to use its Tidewater holding to pay for future acquisitions.

Last fall. Zapata sold its fleet of drilling rigs to raise cash and cut debt. President Bush sold his interests in the company when he was elected to Congress in 1966.

Maxus acquires Paraguay permit

DALLAS — Maxus Energy Corp. has acquired a one-year prospection and reconnaissance permit in the Pirity Basin of Paraguay in South America.

The permit, which covers approximately 6.8 million acres, provides Maxus the opportunity to conduct the technical evaluation of the area and gives Maxus the option of entering into a longer term petroleum exploration license.

"We have found the technical evaluation type of agreement to be a very effective tool for evaluating the prospectivity of an area," said Harvey Klingensmith, vice president of international exploration. "We believe this region of Paraguay offers the potential for significant hydrocarbon accumulation, and some new exploratory concepts will be evaluated under this agreement."

Parker & Parsley, Damson execute new agreement

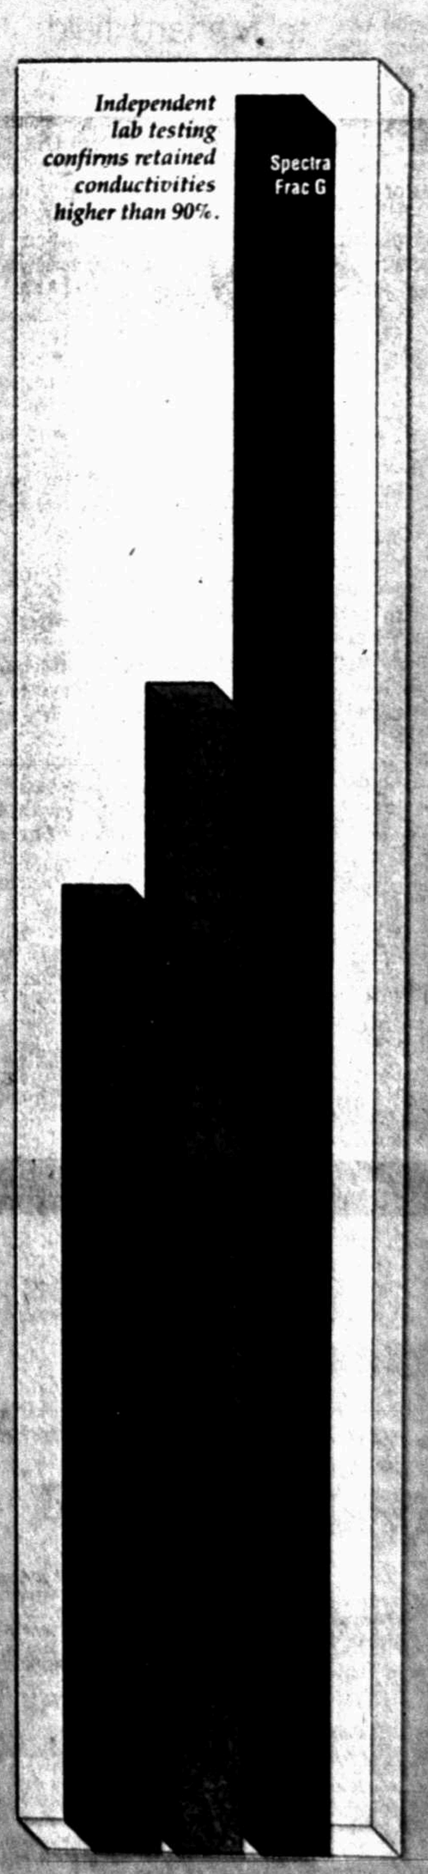

Staff Report

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. has entered into an Acquisition Agreement with Damson Oil Corp. of New York, N.Y. for the acquisition of substantially all of the oil and gas properties of Damson, including Damson's interests in gas processing plants in exchange for $100,000 cash and 1,532,846 shares of common stock of Parker & Parley assuming a September 30, 1991 closing. A significant portion of the oil and gas interests subject to the agreement was received by Damson during February, 1991 in the liquidation of its approximately 10 percent general and limited partner interests in certain partnerships affiliates of Damson. As of September 30,1991, it is estimated that the reserves attributable to Damson's interests will be approximately 1.1 million barrels of oil and 13.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas, and another 2.4 million barrels of natural gas liquids attributable to Damson's interests in natural gas processing rights.

The acquisition agreement provides that if the transaction is consummated at September 30, approximately 1,532,846 shares of Parker & Parsley common stock will be issued, which would represent approximately 7.2 percent of the total number of shares then outstanding. If the proposed transaction closes later than September 30, the number of shares to be issued will be reduced to reflect projected production from the properties to be acquired. In addition to the cash and shares of common stock to be delivered by Parker & Parsley at the closing, the agreement provides that Parker & Parsley will be required to pay additional consideration in the form of cash or cash and stock in the event that Parker & Parsley's common stock fails to trade at certain specified average price levels during a 15 trading day period to be selected by Parker & Parsley within the period commencing subsequent to the closing of the proposed transaction and ending March 31, 1992. This date may be extended under certain circumstances. No additional consideration is required in the event that the average trading price per share is $15 or more per share. Additional consideration will be paid if the trading price per share is less than $15, with the maximum potential amount of such additional consideration being reached if the average trading price is $10. The maximum potential amount of such additional consideration is $3 of cash for each share of common stock to be initially issued and an amount of additional shares of common stock equal to 2/10 of a share of common stock for each share of common stock to be initially issued.

The agreement supersides the existing Put Agreement between Parker & Parsley and Damson that was entered into in February, 1991 and which granted Damson the option to sell to Parker & Parsley all of Damson's interests in oil and gas properties — including interests in gas processing plants — in which Parker & Parsley and its affiliates also hold interests. If a closing does not occur under the acquisition agreement, then the put agreement will again be effective pursuant to its original terms and conditions.

Damson will file a voluntary petition for relief under Chapter. The obligation of Parker & Parsley to consummate the transactio contemplated by the agreement is contingent upon, among other things, a Plan of Reorganization of Damson becoming effective on or before March 31, 1992. This date may be extended under certain circumstances. The agreement also provides for Parker & Parsley's waiver of any claim in Damson's reorganization arising out of approximately $3.32 million of indebtedness from Damson to Dorchester Master Limited Partnership, and certain other indebtedness of approximately $300,000 from Damson to Parker & Parsley, a similar waiver of any claims arising out of any liability Damson may have to Dorchester with respect to certain legal proceedings in which a judgement of approximately $4.7 million, presently being appealed, was entered jointly and severally against Damson and Dorchester, and Parker & Parsley's acquisition of all of Damson's interest in and assumption of Damson's obligations with respect to certain proceedings relating to the alleged conversion of gas belonging to Dorchester. The obligation of Parker & Parsley to consummate the transaction contemplated by the agreement also is contingent upon the granting of releases by certain securityholders of Damson with respect to Damson, its officers and directors, and Parker & Parsley.

Introducing a new height in retained fracture conductivity.

Spectra Frac™ G

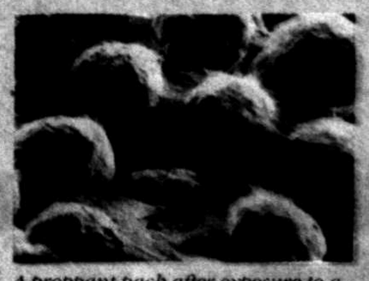

BJ Services' intensive research program has produced Spectra Frac G, a revolutionary adjustable delayed borate crosslinked system that produces the highest retained conductivity available in the industry today. In-house research data, third party lab testing results, and numerous field successes all support this bold claim. Other properties unique to Spectra Frac G are: impressive viscosities; a broad temperature capability; perfect proppant transport; and rapid, thorough clean-up.

80°F - 300°F

Spectra Frac G produces fractures with the highest retained conductivities in initial and extended production profiles in temperatures from the lowest in the Permian Basin to the highest in North Sea formations. Production increases in over 60 wells confirm its effectiveness.

Self-cleaning system

Unlike typical organometallic crosslinked fluids that leave high concentrations of residue in the proppant pack, Spectra Frac G's propriety internal break mechanism reduces fluid viscosity to near that of water, which results in outstanding clean-up. Scanning Electron Microphotographs clearly show the excellent condition of the proppant pack.

A proppant pack after exposure to a typical organometallic crosslinked fluid.

A proppant pack after treatment with Spectra Frac G.

Get the facts

Spectra Frac G is the only crosslinked fluid compatible with curable resin-coated proppants at elevated temperatures. It sets a new benchmark for high retained conductivity worldwide. Spectra Frac G is another example of BJ's value added technology. Call us today for a brochure that provides even more convincing data.

Amoco gets approval for deal with Soviets

CHICAGO (AP) — Amoco Corp. has received permission for joint development of an offshore oil field in Soviet Azerbaijan, the company said.

Soviet news reports two weeks ago said Amoco had been tapped to help develop the oil field in the Caspian Sea. The Chicago-based company said Tuesday it received official notification this week.

The oil field was discovered in 1987, but production has been delayed by financial constraints. Amoco's subsidiary, Amoco Eurasia Petroleum Co., will help develop wells and pipelines, but exacts details have not been arranged, Amoco Eurasia chairman Robert L. Blanton said Tuesday.

"We are prepared to move forward and to apply our financial strength and technical, operational and financial strength to develop the Azeri field," Blanton said in a statement.

Amoco Eurasia last September signed an agreement with the Soviet's state gas concern to tap the vast Siberian oil fields for their reserves.

Soviet reserves are said to total 58.4 billion barrels. The reserves represent a major new source for U.S. oil firms that have seen domestic production decline as world supplies have tightened.

Clearfork find tested for 198 barrels

Staff Report

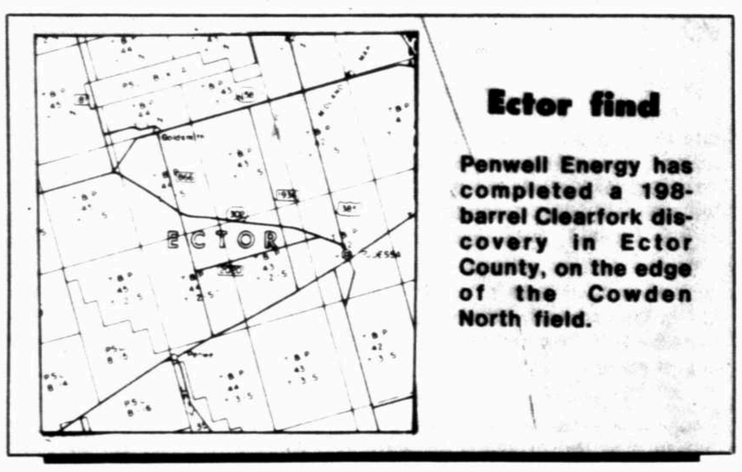

Ector County has gained a Clearfork discovery on the edge of the Cowden North field.

PENWELL ENERGY INC. potentialed the No. 1 Smith to pump 198 barrels of 50 gravity crude and 10 Mcfd from perforations 5,504 to 5,524 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid. Gas-oil ratiois 50:1.

Permitted as a 13,000 ft. Ellenburger test, the well was drilled to 13,710 ft.and plugged back to 7,020 ft. A 5 1/2 inch casing liner was hung from 4,582 to 9,934 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,022 ft., include the Clearfork at 5,500 ft., Atoka at 10,400, Devonian at 11,400, Fusselman at 12,780, and Ellenburger at 13,650 ft. Pay was topped at 5,504 ft.

Location is 500 ft. from north and 2,173 ft. from west lines of Section 6, Block 42, T-1-S, T&P, eight miles north of Odessa.

Ector find

Penwell Energy has completed a 198-barrel Clearfork discovery in Ector County, on the edge of the Cowden North field.

BTA Producers tests Morrow discovery

BTA OIL PRODUCERS has completed a Morrow discovery in Lea County, N.M., east of the Berry North field.

On potential test, the No. 1 Aline flowed 120 barrels of 58 gravity crude, 2.3 Mmcfd and no water on a 9/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 4,300 ft. The well flowed from perforations 13,671 to 13,675 ft., which had been acidized with 200 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio was 19,333:1.

Permitted as a 14,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 13,760 ft., wher 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 13,710 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,746 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 3,970 ft., Delaware at 5,560, Bone Spring at 8,587, Wolfcamp at 11,470, Atoka at 12,590, Morrow B at 13,423, and Morrow C at 13,351 ft. Pay was topped at 13,671 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and east lines of Section 36, T20s, R34e.

JOHN L. COX, Midland, has completed a Strawn discovery in Martin County, 1,000 ft. west of Devonian production in the J C field and three miles south of Tarzan.

On potential test, the No. 1 Welch "39B" pumped 42 barrels of 42 grvity crude, 179 Mcfd and 75 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 10,588 to 10,670 ft., which had been acidized with 5,250 gallons of 28 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 4,250:1.

Drilled to 11,928 ft., the well was plugged back to 10,690 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 11,297 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,820 ft., formation tops include the Redbeds at 250 ft., Spraberry at 7,530, Lower Spraberry at 8,152, Wolfcamp at 9,050, Strawn at 10,580, Woodford at 11,512, and Devonian at 11,590 ft. Pay was topped at 10,580 ft.

Proposed field name for the discovery is J C (Strawn).

Lea reentry nets San Andres strike

A Lea County reentry has yielded a San Andres discovery, surrounded by production in the Baum field.

CHARLES B. GILLESPIE JR. reentered the No. 1 State "Q", testing it to pump 30 barrels of 21 gravity crude and 130 barrels of water from open hole interval 4,940 to 4,965 ft.

Permitted as a 4,960 ft. wildcat workover, the well was cleaned out to 4,965 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,940 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,208.6 ft., include the Anhydrite at 1,497 ft., Salt at 1,599, Yates at 2,632, Queen at 3,429, and San Andres at 4,220 ft. Pay was topped at 4,940 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 660 ft. from west lines of Sectin 4, T15s, R33e.

The well was originally drilled as the No. 1 Falcon "WI" State by Yates Petroleum Corp. and abandoned at 10,360 ft.

Kent County gets 48-barrel strike

Kent County has gained a Glorieta discovery, 3/8-mile north of Canyon Reef production in the Cogdell field.

SPALDING ENERGY INC., Abilene, tested the No. 1 D.M. Cogdell to pump 48 barrels of crude and 13 barrels of water. The well produced from perforations 1,811 to 1,817 ft., which had been acidized with 4,000 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 1,999 ft., the well was plugged back to 1,855 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 1,902 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 1,435 ft. and Glorieta at 1,811 ft. on ground elevation of 2,125 ft. Pay was topped at 1,811 ft.

Dawson field gets southeast extender

The Tobacco Creek (Lower Mississippian) field of Dawson County has gained a 3/8-mile southeast extension as GREAT WESTERN DRILLING CO. completes activity in the area.

On potential test, the No. 1 Santa Fe Minerals flowed 157 barrels of 38.8 gravity crude and no water on a 20/64 inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 180 psi from perforations 9,996 to 10,050 ft.

Permitted as a 10,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,300 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 10,285 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and east lines of Section 31, Block 1, J. Poitevent survey, six miles northeast of Key.

Third well added to Menard field

A third well has been added to the Lela (Gunsight) field of Menard County, extending it north.

ENCINO OPERATING CO. INC. tested the No. 2A George Grandstaff "A" to pump 23 barrels of 28 gravity crude and 33 barrels of water from perforations 1,792 to 1,802 ft. The interval was acidized with 300 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,521:1.

Permitted as a 1,900 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 1,865 ft. and plugged back to 1,815 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 1,854 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,580 ft. from west lines of Section 66, John Gibson survey, Abst. 1765, nine miles northwest of Menard.

Hunt adds second well to Upton field

HUNT OIL CO. has added a second producer to the Corvette field of Upton County, 15 miles northwest of Rankin.

The No. 643 V.T. Amacker was completed to flow 506 barrels of 43.4 gravity crude and no water on a 15/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 9,202 to 9,339 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 10,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,296 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,295 ft.

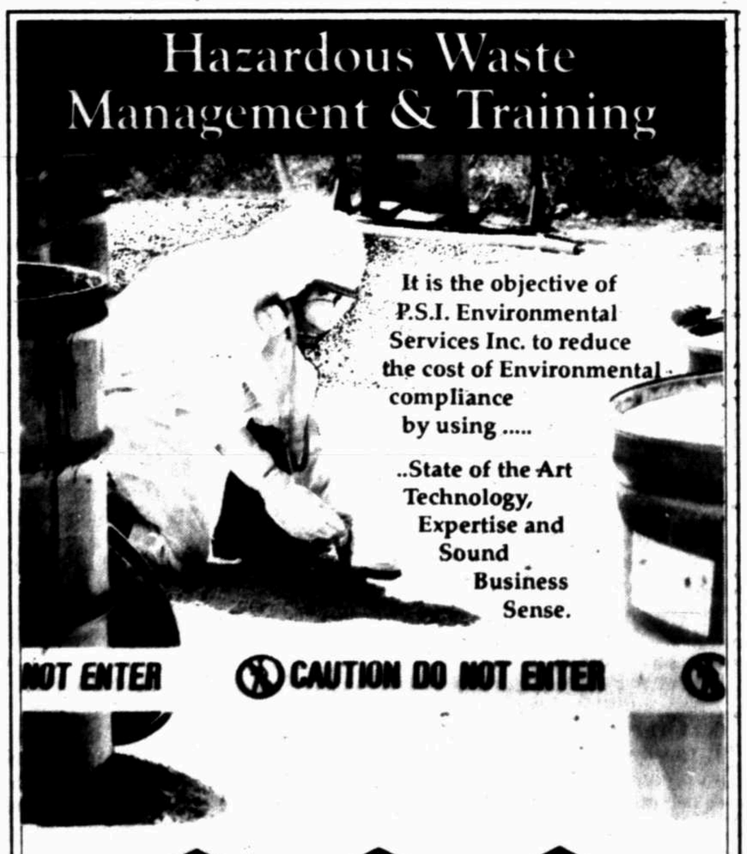

Location is 467 ft. from north and 630 ft. from east lines of Section 64, Block Y, TCRR survey, Abst. 577, 15 miles northwest of Rankin.

PETROLEUM PERSPECTIVES

Beware tax bills pending in Legislature

By Harry Spannaus

Spannaus

While the regular session of the 72nd Texas Legislature may be over, beware of what is to come with the first special session scheduled for July 8. Governor Richards has directional authority over what issues are to be addressed during any one special session and the odds for this summer's gathering will be the issues of redistricting and the writing of a state budget for the 1992-93 biennium which begins September 1.

Excluding the redistricting dilemma, our concerns must be directed to the state budget fiasco which will focus in on raising $5 billion in additional tax revenue to meet a planned projected shortfall of $4.7 billion. Please notice, this is a fabricated "shortfall," not a deficit as some would lead us to believe. According to Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts John Sharp, there is no budget deficit. It is a shortfall projected on the careless spending habits of the Legislature to fund the addition and expansion of programs which are not necessarily of necessity.

The regular session of the 72nd Texas Legislature was fairly kind to oil and gas. By kind, I mean that oil and gas did not take the usual abnormal beating in new fees, taxes and other costly obligations. Everyone in general shared the blunt of the process, but use caution, the sweet rose may turn into poison ivy before the special session is over.

The Texas Legislature will most likely attempt to revise or overhaul the state franchise and business tax system through revisions to the current franchise tax system or replacement of the current system with an entirely new system, termed "The Value Added Tax." Regardless of varied opinions, the current main business tax in Texas remains the franchise tax. It is a tax on invested capital and surplus. It is also onerous to a large segment of business since it taxes corporate businesses while bypassing other forms of ownership. It is doubly troublesome because it taxes only capital investment and does not tax business activities. It cares less if a business is successful or unsuccessful — it taxes both!

The result is the capital intensive industries such as the petroleum industry and supporting services have paid the majority of the tax burden of the state since the early 1900s. The tax is discriminatory against oil and gas.

Some legislative proposals of grave concern are:

■ House Bill 1274: The "Omnibus" Franchise Tax Bill would authorize radical departures from generally accepted accounting procedures (GAAP) and would, therefore, add confusion and difficulty to the current system as written in 1987. One of the most devastating features of HB 1274 is that it would add to taxable surplus the account for deferred federal taxes — a bad feature for oil and gas as a large portion of the deferred tax account reflects the future liability for income taxes arising from the current expensing of intangible drilling costs.

■ House Bill 1275: Inclusion of Debt in Taxable Capital Bill would increase the tax cost on already heavily-taxed industry. It would aggravate the existing inequities while doing little to promote tax efficiency or fairness.

■ House Bill 1276: Sourcing of Dividends Interest and Other Intangible Receipts Bill would punish corporations merely for locating their headquarters in Texas by allocating dividends and interest to a corporation's commercial domicile. This is truly an anti-Texas business bill. Conversely, it would reward corporations for not located their principal offices within the state.

■ House Bill 1277: Mandatory Use of Straight-Line Depreciation Bill would further defeat GAAP principles. The bill is not logical and it is not a reasonable basis for departure from current principles.

■ House Bill 1553: Business Franchise Tax Bill would extend the franchise tax to all business entities and reduce the rate from $5.25 to $4.00 per $1,000 of capital.

■ House Bill 1554: All Business Value Added Tax Bill would impose a tax of 1.5 percent on the adjusted tax base of corporations as determined by certain commercial, business and financial activities.

Well, there it is in a nut shell. Every one of the listed bills are anti-Texas business tax proposals. Some are especially devastating to oil and gas companies who finance their exploration drilling and production programs through "drilling fund"-type partnerships.

Adam Smith, a Scottish philosopher who published his treatise "An Inquiry into the Wealth of Nations" in 1776 when our Founding Fathers were attempting to secure the independence of this nation, wrote on establishing a philosophical basis for the market economy: "There are four principles of taxation, every system should be equitable, efficient, simple and certain." The Texas franchise tax fails in all four categories. It is not equitable, because it is not spread evenly over all businesses. It is not efficient because it does not reach the total marketplace where all business activities take place. It is not simple but unduly complex. It is not certain as the continuous litigation and proposed legislative changes indicate. The proposed bill, in fact, makes the tax more inequitable, more inefficient, more complicated and more uncertain.

All businesses should be aware of the threat of changes in severance taxation. Hopefully, we will all get involved by communicating with our Texas Senate and House members for taxation fairness and to defeat any such proposals as I have summarized.

A special acknowledgment to Mr. Donald M. Bishop, general manager, U.S. Tax Department, Texaco Inc., who provided a summary of significant proposed Texas business taxes.

Harry Spannaus is executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Oklahoma company to fight Kuwait well fires

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's only oilfield fire-fighting company is sending a crew to Kuwait.

Cudd Pressure Control Inc. of Woodward has signed a 94-page contract with the Kuwaiti Oil Co. to help fight oil well fires set by the Iraqis, founder and president Bob Cudd says.

His company has 21 days to build and ship equipment to Kuwait. But he said that could be extended if the Kuwaitis can't provide freight transportation.

Cudd said his crew of 12 will arrive about two days after their equipment. Others will join the crew later so the firefighters can rotate duties, he said.

Cudd said he cannot release financial terms of the contract — a provision required by the Kuwaiti Oil Co.

Early days come alive in musical

■ Nancy Jo Johnson directs the latest version of Odessa's history, 'Whenever It Rains', performed in honor of Ector's County's 100th anniversary.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

A musical history of Odessa returns to the Globe Theatre stage in honor of Ector County's 100th anniversary.

"It's lively. It has a lot of different kinds of people in it. It's music, and it's drama, and it's comedy all rolled into one," said Nancy Jo Johnson, director for the production. It's the people out here that make the city, and that's what the play is all about. Money comes and goes but you still have friends.

Written for the Odessa centennial and first performed when Odessa reached its 100th mark, "Whenever It Rains" runs at 2:30 p.m. today and at 8 p.m. July 5 and 6. The idea to incorporate it into the Ector County centennial celebration began with Mrs. Johnson, who served as assistant director of the Odessa centennial production of the musical.

"I just happened to be friends with the lady, Edith Libson, who is head of the Ector County Centennial Celebration, and last summer, when my daughter was working on a project for the Ector County Centennial, I just mentioned to her I'd like to see it done again," said Mrs. Johnson, who holds a master's degree in theater and speech from Baylor University. "I told her I would love to direct it."

Those who are familiar with the musical will find it changed somewhat.

"The music and the words are the same, but I've changed a lot of the blocking — where they are on stage — and I have added a couple of more dances. And, I have a much younger cast. Nobody who has ever been in it before is in it now, so they have no preconceived ideas."

Mrs. Johnson is having as much fun directing this production as she imagined she would.

"I'm having a ball. It's a lot more work doing it as a director, but I'm thoroughly enjoying it. It's different from my teaching job."

Hubert Nelson (John Morris), from left, is listening as a reporter for an eastern newspaper (Stacy Whetsell) and Dora Edwards (Connie Ford) tell him about Odessa's first general store in this scene from "Whenever It Rains," now playing at Odessa's Globe Theatre.

Mrs. Johnson, who has taught seventh grade English and seventh grade speech and drama at Crockett Junior High for the past nine years, has taught in the Ector County School District since 1966. In addition to her teaching position and her current directing job, Mrs. Johnson is writing a novel, one which deals with her life when she was between the ages of 7 and 10. She believes the market for her book will be adults not youth.

"It will probably be more towards adults who like to reminisce about childhood days. I'm only on about the 10th chapter, so I'm not too far along. But I have in mind where I want to go with it. Hopefully, to a publisher.

"I have worked for magazines before and published articles, but I have never published a book. I write poetry also. I'm working on a book of poems, too."

Mrs. Johnson calls her writing "a sideline."

"I have two children, 8 and 10, and that keeps me busy. I do most of my writing real late at night or in my classroom when my students are writing."

She considers writing cathartic.

"I love it (writing). It relaxes me. It's like being in plays and working on plays. It's one of the things I enjoy the most. I think I'd eventually like to be a writer or a director in theater, but there aren't too many female directors."

All of the cast members of "Whenever It Rains" are from Odessa.

Singer climbs up with Columbia Records

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Larry Boone finds himself with one way to go — up.

Boone's latest album represents his debut with Columbia Records, the label Boone switched to midpoint in 1990. Boone, who performs at Twin Cities Speedway Wednesday night, said he's pleased with the move and the fact that it was accomplished with good will between all parties, which all too often is not the case.

"When you sever a relationship like that, it's somewhat like a divorce," Boone said in a recent interview."The emotional ties are not there as much, but it is like that.

"I'm proud of that fact that on their end and our end the move was done real amiably and with respect. We were able to preserve the friendships made over there. Those people were the ones that gave me the start."

In 1988, Boone was named one of country music's top 10 new artists for singles and albums by Billboard, and he was Cash Box magazine's Breakout Artist of the Year. The Academy of Country Music nominated him for "Top New Male Vocalist,' and he was one of the Amusement and Music Operators Association's rising stars.

In 1989, he was nominated as "Favorite New Country Artist" at the American Music Awards, an honor which is fan-voted. During those days, he was under contract with Mercury/Polygram.

"We had about two or three top 10 records in a row on Mercury at a time when the label was going through some transitions — vice presidents were changing and all the inter-structure within the label was changing."

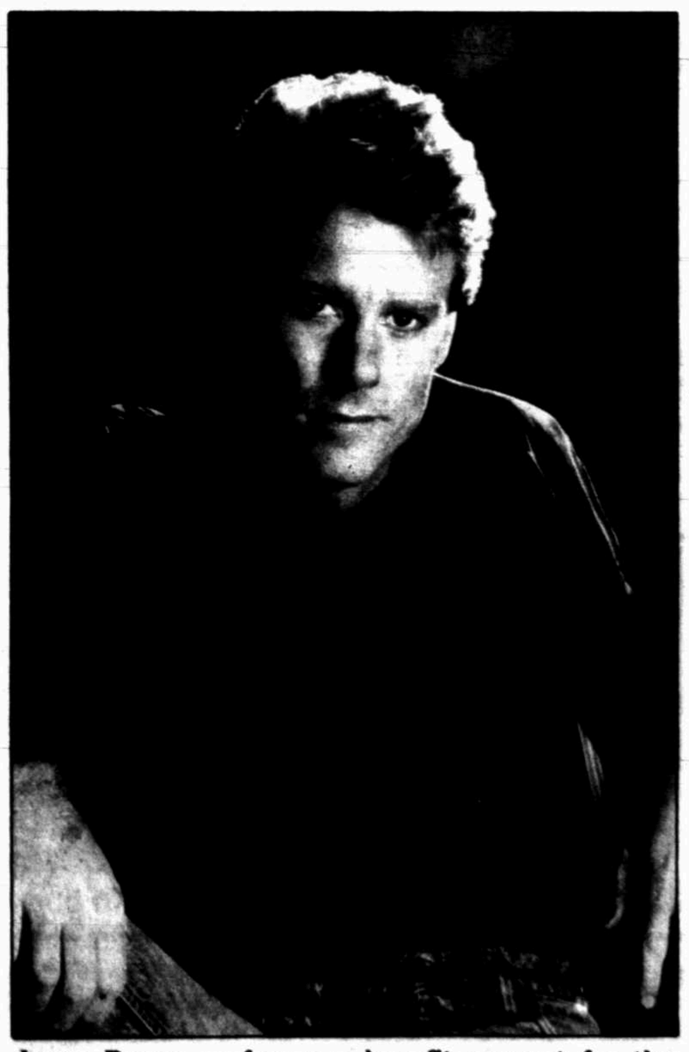

Good fortune and good records play a major role in the recording business, Boone said, adding that that time comes when the structure behind you becomes of paramount importance as well.

"We just weren't running on all cylinders at the label at that point," Boone said. "That down time was probably at a real crucial point in our career. So we ended up going almost a nine month period without a record. You start losing that momentum if you don't have another record out. When we came back nine months later, that momentum was lost."

The last album released by Boone on his previous label was "Down That River Road," which the critics applauded and the public almost missed. The album made it into the top 30.

"At that point we knew the label was taking a little bit different direction. We felt like we could have a new life. It's somewhat like a ballplayer changing teams. It sometimes rejuvenates their career.

"My manager went in and asked the executives there if we could in fact be relinquished of our contract. Legally, they didn't have to let us go. I believe from the bottom of my heart, they looked at it and did what they felt like was in my best interest. They could have just held me up and time could have elaspsed to the point I may not have been wanted anywhere."

Larry Boone performs a benefit concert for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Wednesday at Twin Cities Speedway, located between Midland and Odessa between Highway 80 and Interstate 20.

When the label released him, Boone was "scared." He knew his career was at risk.

"As soon as word got out that we were out of our contract, we had offers from almost every major label in town. We met with everybody and got great vibes from CBS."

Those vibes have added up so far to an album which includes a single Boone describes as "smoking up the charts." The album, "One Way To Go," took three and a half months to complete.

"We're back on track now," Boone said, the relief registering in his voice. Boone is among those he counts as fortunate because he's making a living doing what he loves.

"I do love music," Boone said. "I was talking to my wife about that it's not the money, and it's not the accolades or the ego or feeling like I'm really something, it's the music.

"As long as I can continue to make a living at something I love to do, that's a real treasure right there because my daddy worked hard for a living, worked with his hands for a living. I know there were days he didn't feel like going in to work, but he did," said Boone, who was raised a Southern Baptist in Cooper City, Fla.

"I think a lot of people are in that situation. You only go around in this world one time. You only have one life and to be able to pay your bills by doing something you love to do, that's a real blessing."

Actually, Boone had his heart set from an early age on playing professional baseball like his father had done before him. Thus, throughout high school, he played football, basketball and baseball. He attended college on a baseball scholarship until tragedy struck. He "blew" out" his knee playing pick-up football, ending his professional ball career before it began.

His mother, Marie, had taught him when he was young to play the guitar. He also knew how to play the piano, and he could sing. Thus, he used his playing ability to work his way through college at Florida Atlantic University, Boca Raton, Fla.

"I started realizing the more that I did it, that more than athletics or anything else, the good Lord had given me musical talent."

In Nashville, Boone first made his mark as a songwriter. His compositions have been recorded by artists such as Ronnie Milsap, Lacy J. Dalton, John Conlee, Southern Pacific and Keith Whitley.

"I'd always really loved creative writing — writing of any sort — so it was a natural evolution when I started writing songs."

Boone had a No. 1 hit when Kathy Mattea released "Burnin' Old Memories" and scored a top 10 when Don Williams recorded "Old Coyote Town." One Boone song, "Beyond the Blue Neon," became the title cut on a George Strait album, and his song, "American Faces," was the

Seely: Everyone who's 50 swallows some pride

By Joe Edwards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It sounds like a story enlarged by legend.

Four-year-old Jeannie Seely would flip the dial on her family's big console radio to the Grand Ole Opry broadcast.

You guessed it: years later, she becomes a star on the country music show.

"I kept turning the dial until I found what I liked," she recalled.

Seely is now approaching her silver anniversary on the program. But at age 50, she admits that most of the opportunities in country music are aimed at younger women these days.

She hasn't had a recording contract with a major label since 1973. Road tours became so scarce that she dropped her band four years ago and sold her bus. And her only Grammy was in 1966 for "Don't Touch Me."

Today, sought-after recording deals and lucrative concert tours go to younger, fresher singers such as Reba McEntire and Kathy Mattea.

But Seely insists she is not bitter.

"Everyone who's 50 swallows a little pride," she says in a burst of philosophy, interrupted by puffs on a cigarette. "By this time you're divorced and things in your career pass you by."

She's been divorced 10 years from songwriter Hank Cochran, and the agony appears to linger.

"It seems like it will never end," she says matter-of-factly.

Then there's career concern. She says the experienced performers like herself just aren't getting the rewards due them.

"It hurts. In the '60s, we paved some ways. We went to a metropolitan country sound (a mix of country and pop); my generation opened some doors. We had to be tough at times, and we were. But that era has been shoved aside."

At any rate, even at 50, Seely is still turning heads just like she did almost a quarter century ago. Not so much for her voice, but for her appearance. She's decked out again in miniskirts.

She was the first to wear miniskirts on the Opry where full, country-style dresses with plenty of gingham had ruled for years.

"I'll go down in history for changing the way female country singers dress," she said. "I caused quite a stir. If I broke that tradition, changes had to be made."

In 1967, Opry officials were concerned as her skirts kept inching higher and higher. She was summoned to the office of then-Opry manager Ott Devine. She was fairly new and not eager to seem defiant, but she stood her ground.

"I explained my side. I offered them a deal: If you don't let anybody in the front door wearing a miniskirt, I won't wear any coming in the back door."

The straitlaced Devine backed down. The feisty young performer won him over.

"He said, 'Go on, just try to keep it in line.'"

Seely was born in Titusville, Pa., the youngest of four children. At age 8, she entered a school variety show, singing the earthy country song "One Has My Heart, the Other Has My Name."

"It was real appropriate for an 8-year-old," she recalled sarcastically.

But the audience reaction changed her life. "I got applause and knew exactly what I wanted to do."

As a young woman, she worked as an executive secretary for Liberty Records in Hollywood. "I got a great education: I read every contract I could."

Press releases of that era described her as "the perfect blending of Hollywood high society and down home honesty."

Billy Deaton, her booking agent for 15 years, has another observation about her honesty: "She's outspoken."

But Seely also can be sentimental, and even motherly.

She wept during an Opry performance in May that was the last for a keyboard player she had known for seven years.

"I was trying to sing while crying," she recalled. "I sort of raised him."

Film erases most of book about cancer

By John Horn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the first things that perished prematurely in making "Dying Young" was the book upon which the film is based.

A thorny, challenging account of cancer and suicide, Marti Leimbach's novel has been converted into an upbeat movie in which death and a love triangle are supplanted by hope and monogamous devotion.

Starring Julia Roberts as Hilary, the nurse and lover of a 28-year-old leukemia patient (Campbell Scott), 20th Century Fox hopes "Dying Young" will be one of the summer's more popular releases.

That popularity may hinge on its palatability, partly the result of a series of creative choices made by director Joel Schumacher that preserved little more than the book's name — and even the name barely made it.

Fearing the title "Dying Young" might depress moviegoers and thus the film's box office, the studio hired an independent marketing firm to concoct a more cheerful name. The lighter "Terminal Love" was considered, as was "Forever Young," "Undying Love" and "What I Did for Love."

The name change, while never adapted, magnifies Hollywood's reluctance to engage dark and potentially depressing issues. Schumacher's revisions to the screenplay by Richard Friedenberg can be seen in the same light as well. Friedenberg declined to be interviewed.

"Dying Young" was once set for a May release, but its debut was postponed when an early test screening did not go well, according to a source close to the production who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

mie E. Sperry, Stacy Whetsell, Ms. McAhon, Audrey Moman, Erica Martinez, Mistry Gentry and Maija Johnson.

The townspeople are being played by Barbara Harrison, Kristen Harrison, Erin Harrison, Brandy Harris, Emily Harris, Kinberly Harris, Lorin Francell, Cody Francell, Sean McAhon, Cathy McAhon and Ariel Johnson.

The Coopers and the Johnsons are actually composites of the first families in Ector County.

"Kate Cooper is a composite of the founding ladies of Odessa. Daisy is the daughter of one of the couples who moved to Odessa, who also is kind of a composite of people. We have some of the original founding fathers names in the play, but most of the characters are composites of the founding families."

The two-act play covers from the 1880s to the 1930s.

"It starts with the families who first moved here, and they talk about the things that have happened since they moved here. Then it goes into scenes where they have certain things that happened to them. It's got flashbacks. I call them vignettes.

"The original man, Colonel Spangler, he sells them land in Ohio and convinces them to move to Odessa. Then, it goes from there and covers the first oil boom and one of the major droughts and just basically goes up to the 1930s — to the Depression Era. And it ends on the note that Odessa is going to continue to grow even though it has oil problems with booms and busts and droughts. It's the people that make Odessa and this area what it is, and not anything else. That's why most people stay.

"That's why my husband and I stayed, as a matter of fact," Mrs. Johnson said. She laughed. "We moved out here in '81 during the boom and bought a house, and we've lost our house, but we're still here. We've got a lot of friends out here."

Mrs. Johnson's husband, Harland O. Johnson Jr., currently works as a security guard at Permian Mall and has his own relic and ammunition business. The two are originally from Waco.

"We are native Texans and as the play says, 'Who would want to live any place else?' "

Mrs. Johnson recalls another line from the play, one which audiences enjoy laughing about.

"Where else would you want to live but Odessa because where else could you watch the top soil go by your house one inch at a time."

only country song played during the 1988 Olympics coverage on television.

"Most of the successful songs that I've written have been initiated early in the morning, especially melodies," Boone said. "The creative part of it to me more than anything is when the idea is being born and the whole thing is being formulated.

"When it comes to actually finding the right vowels and consonants that go together to make that magic happen, they never come off the tip of my tongue. I have to work on it. Personally, I've never had a song that I haven't really labored over have any success in the market. It doesn't sound very glamorous or romantic, but it's the truth."

When asked what he most wants to talk about, Boone said, "Fans. They mean a lot to me. Without them, you don't have a career.

"I try my very best when I go in to give the consumer the best I can. I don't try to ride any trends or capitalize on things in the world. I sing from the heart. I appreciate them and their support and making a living at what I love to do."

Denon has classical catalogue

Denon, the record label of Nippon Columbia, has a large catalogue of classical music, most of it recorded in Europe and a little in Japan.

Now the company has released its first disk recorded in the United States — Mozart's Requiem and "Little Masonic Cantata," recorded live at the Boston Early Music Festival in 1990, with Andrew Parrott conducting.

Checking Out the Libraries

Sandra DeFore Wegner

If you weren't at the County Commissioners meeting Monday or didn't read Tuesday's Reporter-Telegram, you may have missed the wonderful news. Midland came through for the downtown County Public Library at 301 W. Missouri in great style. You not only matched the Abell-Hanger Challenge Grant for library expansion and renovation but additional gifts will make it possible to add a larger addition. This should give good space for future growth. If you haven't had an opportunity to be part of the library renovation and expansion, you are not too late. There are many areas of need within the library and your contributions can make a difference. Gifts to the Friends of the Library for the library can be brought to the library or mailed to P.O. Box 1191, Midland, TX 79702.

We are looking forward to the construction phase this fall. The addition will be built south of the existing library on what is now the parking lot. The library will then be moved into the addition and continue to operate while the old building is sealed off and completely renovated. It is expected that work won't be finished until early 1993 or as late as spring. This is truly an exciting time for the library staff and Midland.

Summer time and the reading is easy. To help with your leisure vacation reading the downtown library offers six-week checkout for travelers. No renewals are available but that gives plenty of time to go out of town and take some good library books with you. Remember, reserves on current Best-Sellers, fiction and non-fiction, are at no charge.

While we are on the subject of travel, blame it on the Gulf War or the recession, but the new foreign travel handbooks are spending too much time on the library shelves. To assist with your planning, the downtown library has travel information for many stateside and foreign destinations. A complete set of Mobil Travel Guides and the latest Hotel and Motel Redbook are always available in the Reference Department. Old issues and a duplicate set of current guides may be checked out. States and many countries send up-to-date travel brochures annually for the library's vertical file that may also be checked out.

When did Great Aunt Matilda die? If she died in Texas after 1903 and before 1973 the downtown library can help you answer the question. The Redfern Genealogical Research Library has a set of microfilmed indexes to the death records of Texas. The names are in alphabetical order, divided by spans of years and include date of death, county of death and death certificate number. With this information, copies of death certificates may be obtained from the state. Forms to be photocopied for use in requesting birth, death and marriage records from all the states are in the International Vital Records Handbook. Ordering information is included.

The library staff looks forward to the July exhibit of the Midland Quilters Guild in the foyer of the downtown library. We appreciate the groups and individuals that grace our three public display cases with timely information, personal collections and crafts. Non-profit groups wishing to reserve any of out three cases, one in the foyer, a wall case in the main reading room and a round exhibit case in the same area, may call Mrs. Tillman at the library at 683-2708. The round case is often used to display personal collections of small items. Id addition to sharing their beautiful handiwork, the Quilter's Guild has donated quilting books to the library's collection for several years.

Don't sit under the apple tree (with anyone else but me) was a hit in World War II but is still available for sale in over 13 albums. How do we know? The library subscribes to Phonolog, a large loose-leaf service devoted to what is currently available in the recording industry. Covering many different recording formats: users of Phonolog have wealth of information available to them. Pop music is indexed by artist, title, song and albums. A special subject area is divided by sacred, children's, theme music, movie sound tract, bands, and Christmas. Next time you're wondering if you've for all of Willie Nelson's albums that are available or if you can replace that broken LP you loved so much, try Phonolog.

The listings below are based on computer-processed sales figures from 3,000 bookstores and from representative wholesalers with more than 28,000 other retail outlets, including variety stores and supermarkets. The figures are statistically adjusted to represent sales in all such outlets across the United States. In Advice and How-to, five titles are listed because, beyond that point, sales in this category are not generally large enough to make a longer list statistically reliable.

Firm seeks to revive old dime novels

By Nicholas K. Geranios

GRANDVIEW, Wash. (AP) — "The guy was an Elvis impersonator and his sister was more than a tad worried about his disappearance."

So begins "Dead Ringer," a novel by Greg Mandel that pits a private eye against the killer of Elvis impersonators. Subtitled "A Deep Fat-Fried Mystery," it's the first book published by Randy Byrd's DimeNovels, a Portland, Ore., company seeking to revive the old-fashioned dime novels.

Byrd is betting that readers are ready for the short, fast formula novels that thrived before the dawn of television. DimeNovels, plans to publish 12 novels a month, one per genre, and sell them for $1.99 at grocery and convenience stores.

DimeNovels are based more on great marketing than great literature. This is Doc Savage, not "Doctor Zhivago"; McDonald's, not "Macbeth."

"Dead Ringer" is 96 pages and 20,000 words, the standard DimeNovel format. The small book, the size of a cassette tape, can be read in about two hours.

"There's a market out there of people intimidated by larger books," Byrd said in a telephone interview from Portland. "They turn to shorter articles in magazines."

Byrd was raised in this Yakima Valley farm town, where he cut asparagus and raised Christmas trees as a youth. Later he owned a pizza parlor while in college at the University of Oregon, and had other business interests.

The 35-year-old bachelor says he was once Washington state's top poultry competition judge. His mother is a teacher who specialized in children with reading problems.

"I was my mom's best student," Byrd said.

Little in his background reveals a literary bent. That may be because there isn't one.

"The idea came together more in the beginning as a marketing idea," Byrd said. "This is more of a marketing program than it is publishing a miniature book."

DimeNovels has test-marketed a collection of 12 novellas in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Charlotte, N.C., and other sites. WaldenBooks will be testing them in 20 stores. Cost of publishing and marketing the first novels was $250,000.

"Right now the Portland test is finished and in convenience stores we outsold National Enquirer and People magazine," Byrd marveled.

Littered with shapely gams, heaving bosoms, brawny heroes, interplanetary warfare and walking dead, these books are likely the worst nightmare of the literary purist.

The initial 12 titles include:

— The horror story "Walk With the Dead," in which a "woman's corpse somehow has moved of its own accord and reasonable explanations are not to be found."

— The fantasy novel "The Hero Curse," in which a stableboy "is minding his own miserable business in a nameless Talian village when he falls victim to a most unusual curse."

— "Cowboy's Lady," in which buckaroo Dallas Roscoe "was the one man who had set Jane's heart on fire, a man who had seared her with his kiss, a man who had branded her forever with his love."

— "Exotic Love," whose hero Charley Parker was "a dangerously handsome man of mysterious lineage and questionable background, a man who would not reveal his true name."

But it is "Dead Ringer" that stands out in the first batch, featuring such characters as Dr. Enis Glands and private eye Roland Stone.

Lead vixen Grace Burrell is "about a hundred and ten pounds of curves and trouble packed into a black halter top" with a tattoo and legs like former football player Elroy Hirsch.

"She moved through the doorway and into my office as smooth as silk socks and said, 'I need a man,'" Mandel wrote. "I got my feet off the desk and watched her sit down."

The original dime novels had their heyday from the end of the Civil War to about the end of World War I, when the nation was moving into the industrial age.

"There was a new mass reading public that was working class," said H. Bruce Franklin, an English teacher at Rutgers University in Newark, N.J., who is an expert on science fiction books. "Many of them were young boys and young men who were hoping to be upwardly mobile."

The dime novel was the dominant mass entertainment form of its time, with the same impact television has today, Franklin said.

After World War I came a gradual transition to what came to be known as the pulps, which were magazines printed on cheap paper that often featured recurring superheroes such as The Shadow and Doc Savage, as well as private detectives and other characters.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JUNE 30, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Stand up for your beliefs or material success will have no meaning. Good luck will accompany those on the move in late fall. Foreign travel is favored in November. It may be time to take a giant step forward to romance. Family ties will grow stronger in early 1992. Do not let an unusual career opportunity get away from you next March.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: boxer Mike Tyson, actress Susan Hayward, singer Lena Horne, actor Martin Landau.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dreams are wonderful but it is time to face up to your responsibilities. Make domestic arrangements that will be satisfactory to everyone involved. Loved ones answer your questions. You make rapid progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your unpredictability works to your advantage today. A sense of humor helps you avert a confrontation with a family member. A single phone call could clear up any confusion. Plan a short trip.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Focus on projects that will bring you the greatest sense of accomplishment. Even an innocent flirtation could land you in hot water now. Be discreet around someone who likes to dramatize things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A powerful physical attraction could lead you to do something that is not in your best interest. Postpone a home improvement project until you can get some help.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be flexible and you can turn a disappointment into an advantage. A sermon gives you valuable new insights about a problem involving a loved one. Minor setbacks mean nothing. Victory is certain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You feel a new inner peace now. Devote more time to those projects that bring you the greatest satisfaction. Keep alive a loved one's memory by carrying on his work. New prestige follows.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get financial promises in writing, even when dealing with family members. A phone call from a neighbor brings glad tidings. It is time to make a tough choice. Remember your long-term goals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Your charm works miracles even with young family members. Someone gives you an idea that can be turned into cash later on. Surround yourself with people who know what is important to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Face reality. You need to set a good example for an impressionable young person. A change of lifestyle could improve both your health and your finances. Replace bad habits with good ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Start on a small scale and build up. Family members ask questions. Come out with the truth. Trust your intuition. Mate or partner is in a forgiving mood. Keep any promises you make.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Plunge into family festivities and make this a weekend to remember. Spur-of-the-moment decisions are fine if they do not involve a lot of money. A shopping expedition uncovers bargains.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trying to take the easy way out will only complicate matters. Make a firm decision and move quickly. You can no longer close your eyes to what must be done.

While we have warned against following bridge rubrics slavishly, there is one which is soundly based on mathematical principles. We refer to "eight ever, nine never." With eight cards missing the queen, take the finesse; with nine, play to drop the lady. But once in awhile even such sage advice should be ignored.

West's vigorous preempt did not prevent North-South from reaching a reasonable four-spade game. However, it should have had repercussions in the play.

West started with three top diamonds, declarer ruffing the third. There was no way to avoid losing a heart trick, so the fate of the hand hinged in finding the queen of trumps. A firm believer in bridge maxims, declarer banged out the ace and king of trumps to go down one trick.

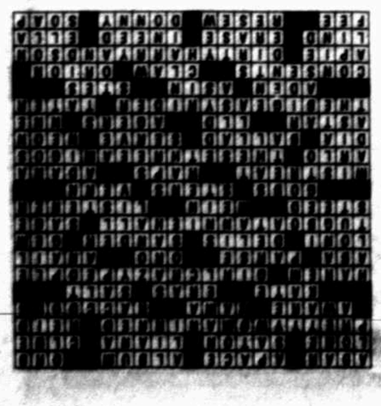

Much as we believe in going with the odds, if ever there was a hand on which to ignore the a priori percentages, this was it. After ruffing the third diamond, declarer should lead a trump to the king. Once West follows, nine of that defender's cards are known—eight diamonds and the trump—leaving only four cards unknown. However, only four of East's cards are known—the three discards on the diamonds and one trump. Therefore, East has nine unknown cards, so East is more than twice as likely to hold the queen of spades as West.

Based on that, declarer should continue with a trump from the table and finesse. When West fails to follow, the contract is home.

Knowing the pure odds is all well and good. Knowing when to temper such knowledge with logic is what makes the difference between someone who plays by rote and someone who understands the game of bridge.

PUZZLE ANSWER

New lines planned for classical labels

The bewildering selection of labels, repertory and prices has made the classical recording industry seem like a flea market. Now, another half-dozen series are being added to the scene.

All are from Elektra International Classics and intended to sell at budget prices (under $7 for CDs, under $4 for cassettes) or at mid-range (under $10 for CDs; no cassettes are planned).

The new series enter a fragmented and confusing marketplace in which all-digital disks can be found for under $3 and historical analog recordings sell for as much as $20.

Son discusses the Duke's legacy

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — As he has all his life, Michael Wayne was standing in the shadow of his father — the late, great John Wayne.

This time it was literally so.

Wayne was describing to a visitor the heroic statue of his father that stands outside the Great Western building at Wilshire Boulevard and La Cienega.

"It is a very impressive statue, and the family is proud that Harry Jackson sculpted it," Wayne said. "It's a big man on a big horse, a proud man, a dignified man.

"The base is almost as interesting as the figure on the top. On one side is a stampede, and that's life coming at you full-bore. There's a man who has lost his mount and is being dragged. On the other side of the base is the range burial. They're burying the man who was dragged in the stampede. So you have the circle of life and death as you walk around the base of the statue."

The sculpture portrays Wayne at the time he made the 1953 Western "Hondo," which is having an unusual release on syndicated television in 3-D with a new process called Natural Vision. It requires special glasses, which can be bought at retail stores across the country.

Sales of the glasses will benefit the Leukemia Society of America. The Wayne family actively supports cancer research. John Wayne died of lung cancer in 1979.

"In the early 1950s there was a whole rash of 3-D films, and the audiences were quite excited about it," Wayne related. "When we started filming 'Hondo,' 3-D was the rage. However, it takes a year to complete a film, and by that time the interest in 3-D had died down.

"So the film was only shown in 3-D in only three theaters in the country for about a week. Fortunately the film caught on without the 3-D and paid off its negative cost in about eight weeks. So the TV screenings will be the first time it has been seen in 3-D, except in three cities."

Based on a Louis L'Amour story, "Hondo" featured Geraldine Page in her Academy Award-nominated film debut and James Arness pre-"Gunsmoke." Filming on the rugged locations was difficult, because the 3-D process required two large cameras which often dropped out of synch.

"Dad wanted 3-D because that was the way things were going," recalled Wayne. "It was hard working in 110-degrees, but the hotter it was, the better he liked it."

"Hondo" was one of Duke's favorite films, said his son, "but he liked different films for different reasons.

"I think he really liked the way he looked in 'Hondo.' Because it was so hot and he was wearing those buckskins throughout, he went down to about 210 pounds. Not a lot of weight for a guy over 6 feet 4."

Wayne's Batjac Productions owns "Hondo," along with "The High and the Mighty," "Island in the Sky" and "McClintock." Distributing the films occupies Wayne's time, along with real estate, investing and other enterprises, as well as merchandising his father's image.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Summer exhibit set

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., is presenting as its summer exhibit "Hail to the Chief."

This exhibit features the larger than life sized portraints of the presidents from the Billie Trimble Chandler Collection of paintings of the presidents and first ladies. Several of the paintings have been featured in other exhibits, but this will be the first showing of all of the presidential portraits in this collection, from George Washington through Gerald Ford.

This collection of paintings was acquired by the Presidential Museum in September of 1989. The paintings were done by the Japanese artist Shoji Ohzawa who was commissioned by Mrs. chandler while she was a teacher at Itazuke Air Force Base, Kyushu, Japan. The paintings fo the first ladies were displayed at the museum for the first time last August.

The exhibit runs through Aug. 31. Hours at the museum are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. No admission is charged. For more information call 1-332-7123.

Event to honor historian

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., is hosting the 90th birthday celebration of ranch historian J. Evetts Haley on Friday.

The celebration also is in honor of the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library Trust and the 15th anniversary of the library's opening in Midland. The public is invited to all activities at the library Friday at no charge.

The 7 p.m. dinner Friday at the Plaza Club, Texas National Bank, formerly ClayDesta, costs $30 per person or $300 per table. Reservations are required.

The day's activities begin at the library at 11 a.m. Friday with an exhibit and reception honoring Western artist Tom Ryan, who is a member of the Cowboy Artists of America.

The reception honoring J. Evetts Haley's birthday will be from 3 to 4 p.m. Friday. For more information call the library, 682-5785.

4th of July events set

LAMESA — Lamesa's annual 4th of July Celebration will be held at North Park, North 22nd St., Thursday.

Featured will be food and all kinds of craft booths, entertainment, basketball, volleyball, fireworks at dark and free swimming from 1 to 6 p.m.

Any club, organization, church or individual wishing to have a booth needs to contact the Lamesa area Chamber of Commerce by noon Tuesday. Booth space is about 12 feet by 12 feet with a charge of $35 for booth space with electricity and $25 for a space without electricity.

To sign up for a basketball or volleyball team call the chamber, 872-2181.

Art show, sale set

STAMFORD — Plans are underway for the 18th annual Stamford Art Foundation Show and Sale, held in conjunction with the Texas Cowboy Reunion Wednesday through Saturday.

The preview party is set for Tuesday. The proceeds of the show benefit the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, Abilene.

The 1991 Art Show will be in memory of Shelly Smith, who died July 19, 1990. Smith was executive director of the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

At the present time, 42 artists are expected to participate in the show varying in media from oil paintings to bronzes.

Tom Ryan, now of Midland, the first art director of the Stamford Art Show and the winner of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame Gold Medal Award, the coveted George Phippen Memorial Award, will be exhibiting. Ryan is a member of the Cowboy Artists of America.

Ticket price for the preview party is $25. For more information call Ann Kinney of Stanford, or the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

For more information on the Texas Cowboy Reunion, which was first held in 1930, call Chandra Mathis, 1-773-3621.

Symphony gets grant

Texaco awarded a grant to the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale to sponsor several concerts for the upcoming 1991-92 season.

Texaco will sponsor a November performance entitled "A Mozart Centerpiece," an all Mozart classical concert in honor of the 200th anniversary of Mozart's death. Symphonies all around the world are focusing on Mozart in 1991 and Texaco wished to join them in paying homage to one of the world's greatest composers.

In February of 1992, Texaco will co-sponsor the Karen Beardsley Pops Concert, which will be an evening of Broadway hits. Ms. Beardsley will be in residence in the Midland-Odessa area for a week to perform with the symphony and in the schools due to Texaco USA. The concert will be held in the new Confederate Air Force Museum now under construction at the air terminal.

Texaco also will sponsor the Lone Star Brass Quintet Series, the Christmas and spring concerts.

"It is a pleasure to work with Texaco, a company which has long supported the arts on a local, state and national level," said Don Th. Jaeger, music director and conductor of the MOSC.

Performances set

Performances of the readers' theater production of "Flyaway Home," the winner of the 1991 McLaren Memorial Comedy Playwriting Competition, will be at 8 p.m. July 12 and 13 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The playwright, Bryan Williams of New York, will be honored at a public reception from 7 to 8 p.m. July 12 in the lobby before the first presentation.

Tickets to the readers' theater production are $3 and need to be reserved in advance. American Airlines and the Midland Hilton are sponsors of Williams' trip to Midland.

Readers' theater uses a minimum of set, costumes and equipment. The actors perform with scripts in hand and the audience is invited to stay after the show and make suggestions to the playwright.

"Flyaway Home" was selected over 113 comedies sent from all over the United States. Williams is also the author of "In This Fallen City," produced off-Broadway by Circle Repertory after being developed at the O'Neill National Playwrights Conference. He wrote the screenplay for "Night of Courage," which received ABC's New Drama for Television Award and has had other musiclas, comedies and dramas produced.

The Midland performances mark the first production of "Flyaway Home."

For more information or to make reservations call 682-4111.

Also, the final performance of Midland Community Theatre's production of "Inherit the Wind" is at 8 p.m. today at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Tickets are available.

In addition, art work by Mary Fish and David Layman is on display at Theatre Midland through July 12.

Hours for viewing the art are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The two artists' work may also be viewed during performance times.

Mummers are onstage

The 43rd annual Summer Mummers, is onstage at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

This year's production is the world premiere of "Misled Down the Mississippi" or "Just Say Neaux." The show runs Thursday through Saturday through Aug. 31.

Reservations may be made by calling the Theatre Midland box office, 682-4111.

The show features an old-fashioned melodrama complete with a black and white silent movieola as well as the traditional olio showcaing dancers, singers, magicians and skits. Curtain time for all performances is 8 p.m.

Drum corps contest set

ODESSA — The first of a planned annual drum corps competition at Ratliff Stadium is set for 7:30 p.m. July 12.

The event is sponosred by the Odessa Permian High School band booster organization, in conjunction with the Sky Riders of Texas Drum and Bugle Corps.

The show will involve competing corps from California, Velvet Knights; Colorado, Blue Knights; Indiana, Star of Indiana; Oklahoma, Black Gold; and the host corps, the Sky Riders of DeSoto, outside Dallas.

A drum corps is not a marching band. A drum corps marches in a football stadium, but not at halftime. Drum corps put on their own shows and perform only on silver bugles and assorted percussion instruments. The music is more likely to be by Duke Ellington or Camille Saint-Saens than John Phillip Sousa, and is specially scored in 11 1/2-minute arrangements.

For tickets or more information call Sky Ryders, 127 South Parks, DeSoto, Texas 75115, or call 1-214-223-8839. Tickets may be purchased locally through the Odessa Permian High School band booster organization.

July events planned

JUNCTION — The Kimble County Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring two special events in July.

The first is the Great Kimble County River Race set for 4 p.m. July 4. The race will include an open canoe class and will be for a distance of slightly more than four miles. Also planned will be a country class that includes any type of watercraft as long as it is propelled by paddles, any number, and will be held in the city park. The event includes food booths, games, a cake walk and fireworks.

In addition, the Kimble County Chamber of Commerce is holding its first annual Goal Roping and Dance at the fairgrounds in Junction, July 13.

The goat roping will begin at 11 a.m. At 1 p.m., a goat sacking event will be held for children 12 and under with cash prizes of $150. At 4 p.m., Jeff Waldrop of San Angelo, two-time World Goat Roping Champion, will have a matched roping with Billy Teague of Rankin, one-time Goat Roping Champion.

The dance begins at 9 p.m. at the fairgrounds' Outdoor Pavilion. Music will be provided by Whistlestix, a San Angelo band.

For more information and for tickets call the chamber of commerce, Junction, 1-446-3190.

Rodeo, reunion set

PECOS — The West of the Pecos Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo runs July 3-6 at the Rodeo Arena, South Highway 285.

Rodeo timed events for the 17th largest PRCA Rodeo in the nation will get underway at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

An old timers reunion is set for 8 a.m. Wednesday at the West of the Pecos Museum followed by the West of the Pecos Rodeo Parade at 10 a.m. Chairs will be provided in front of the museum for old timers to view the parade, which begins on West Highway 80.

The Reeves County Sheriff Possee will offer a noon barbecue Wednesday at the Possee Barn. The sheriff's posse also will sponsor a dance following the rodeo each evening at the Posse Barn. The dance will feature the Crystal Creek band.

The senior citizens also are offering a noon luncheon Wednesday at the Senior Citizen Building, 119 S. Cedar.

The West of the Pecos Western Art Show is set for Saturday at the Reeves County Civic Center.

In addition, the melodrama, "Pecos Bill: The Saga Continues" is being presented today through Wednesday at the old train depot on Oak and First Street.

For more information on prices and times call the Pecos Chamber of Commerce, 1-445-2406. For rodeo tickets call 1-800-588-7326.

Museum school set

Registration for the Museum of the Southwest's Summer Museum School is currently being conducted.

Eight one week sessions of classes for ages 4 through Grade 4 are being conducted through Aug. 16.

Each session is taught from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Classes are divided into three age groups: Age 4 through K; Grades 1 and 2; Grades 3 and 4.

The classes — Museum Explorers, Touting Our Totem and Strike a Structure — are being taught by Lisa Bedford Davis, museum education assistant, and Christi Branum, artist and former master-in-residence at the museum. Classes will be held at the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum.

Session 2 is June 24-28, Session 3 is July 8-12, Session 4 is July 15-19, Session 5 is July 22-26, Session 6 is July 29-Aug.2, Session 7 is Aug. 5-9, and Session 8 — Aug. 12-16.

For more information call 683-2882 or 570-7770.

Doub Bailiff, guitarist and singer, will perform contemporary music at today's Summer Sundays Lawn Concert at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The free concert, scheduled for 7:45 to 8:45 p.m., will be on the front grounds of the museum. Bailiff will present a variety of his own compositions in addition to such pieces as "American Pie" and "Rhythm of the Rain."

A winner in 1989 of a song writing contest sponsored by KNFM-Radio, Bailiff has won guitar competitions in Jacksonville, Fla. He has performed in the Midland-Odessa area and in Florida.

The next Summer Sundays Lawn Concert at the museum will be July 14 when Cornerstone presents contemporary Christian music.

The audience is invited to bring picnic suppers or refreshments and blankets or lawn chairs for seating.

The series, which continues through August, ends with the Dow Jones Average. In the event of rain the scheduled concert will be cancelled.

Regular hours at the museum are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission fee. For more information call 683-2882.

Nightclub, bar scene goes karaoke crazy

ARLINGTON (AP) — Jason Taylor slid the laser disc into a player and looked down upon the Elvis impersonators and Madonna look-alikes clustered beneath his DJ booth at Coconut Joe's nightclub.

"I am karaoke crazy," Taylor said with a grin, and these days, he's not alone.

If you haven't been near a bar or nightclub lately, you may not know that karaoke (ka-ROE-ke), a high-tech, video-laser disc combo that enables shower-stall Sinatras to sound like stars, is the latest thing to come out of Japan.

With about 1,200 songs in its catalog — matching musical tastes from Alabama to Zepplin, yodeling to doo-wop, karaoke is filling clubs from West Side Stories in Fort Worth to Dallas Alley's Bobby Sox.

"Karaoke is kind of like a giant wave, and we're all surfers," says Dallas television producer Terry Wilson.

Wilson and Dallas' KDAF-Channel 33 television station hope to ride the karaoke wave out of the nightclubs and into America's living rooms with a locally produced TV program called Karaoke Krazy.

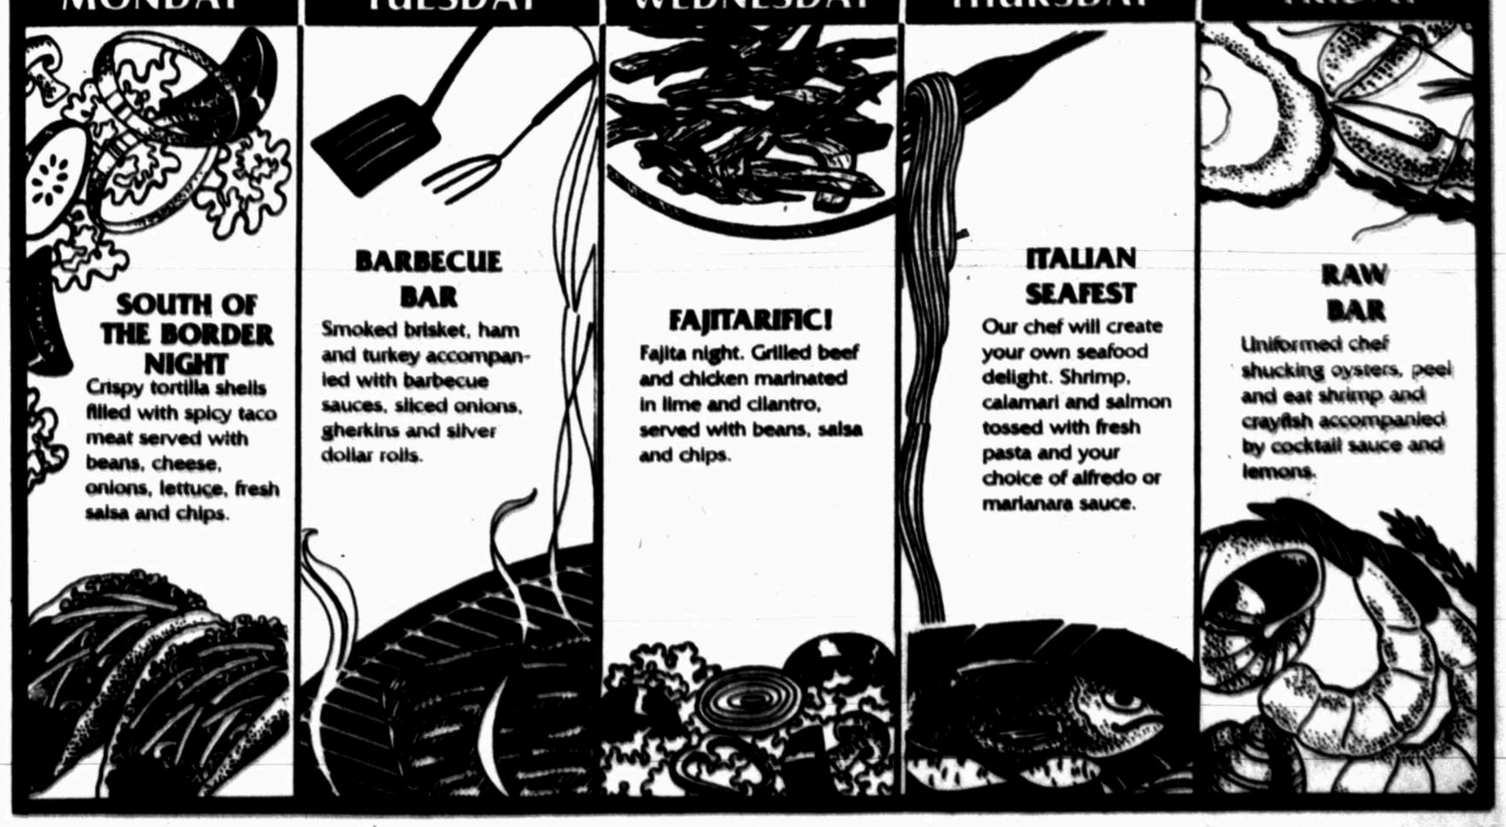

Roughly translated, karaoke is Japanese for "empty orchestra." What the six-time Emmy winner visualizes is a sort of a "Star Search-Gong Show" love child.

"I'm gonna be the Chuck Barris of karaoke," he said. "Have gong, will travel."

If the pilot episodes filmed recently at Coconut Joe's were any indication, Wilson will get his wish. Three to four hundred people, some previously auditioned as performers and others who just wanted to see the fun, packed the club.

The performers certainly weren't there for the money, since nobody got paid. But they were dressed for success.

Although a home karaoke unit was awarded by random drawing, most of the prizes were along the lines of the "Happy Polkas" album that Shannelle Aaron bagged for her Madonna performance in fake leopard skin.

Nat 'King' Cole's daughter pays homage to his memory

By Patricia C. Bibby

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time when Natalie Cole wanted so badly to shed her identity as Nat "King" Cole's daughter that she considered changing her name. So conspicuously his offspring, she fretted she'd never find her own voice as an artist.

Cole

She didn't change her name, of course.

But she did find her voice as a pop singer and, at the same time, another generation of listeners found joy in the voice of a Cole. In her latest album, "Unforgettable," she remakes 22 songs that her father made famous.

Instead of shunning her image as Nat "King" Cole's daughter, Natalie Cole now celebrates it.

When Cole died in 1964 from lung cancer, Natalie was just a teen-ager and far from embarking on a career of her own. She began singing in her 20s, but the specter of having to meet industry and public expectations of the golden tones of another Cole was daunting.

In the intervening years, however, she managed to win both the respect of industry skeptics and the adoration of fans. In 1977, her albums "Unpredictable" and "Thankful" went platinum, and she won three Grammy Awards for her efforts.

After 16 years, she's finally comfortable acknowleding her dad. But it wasn't always that way.

"For me, I didn't really feel like I was in his shadow until I chose (singing) as my career," said Cole, 40. "And then all of a sudden it loomed up as something pretty intimidating and overwhelming."

Natalie Cole wanted to be recognized for her own talent and not just for being the namesake of Nat Cole.

"For a long time I really wished I could change my name," she said during an interview last year just before her father was honored with a posthumous Grammy. "It's been since about six years ago that I really have been able to carry it gracefully and hopefully in a way that is proud and becoming to his flesh and blood."

The idea of doing a compilation of her father's best was not new. But record executives at her former label, EMI, apparently were not enthusiastic.

"Unfortunately, it starts getting political," Cole said in a recent telephone interview. "They seemed to be worried my image (would be) looked at differently. ... I started getting a little frustrated and a little sad that this wasn't considered to be a real musicial piece of work."

When she moved to Elektra Entertainment, however, it was suggested that she make her debut on the label with a nostalgic redux of Nat "King" Cole.

"I was please and surprised," she said. "There wasn't one person who said, 'I don't think you should do this,' or 'It's over your head.'"

When she got into the studio, the songs came back like a good memory.

"Some of this stuff I don't remember learning," she said. "When I stepped up to the microphone this stuff just came out!"

Still, those fears persisted that she wouldn't measure up.

"I did have to listen to some of (the songs) again. His phrasing was just unique. I wanted to capture that without making it sound stilted."

While making the album, Cole said she had to "throw out every r&b lick that I had ever learned and every pop trick I had ever learned. With him, the music was in the background and the voice was in the front."

The prevailing wisdom in covering a song is that you either improve upon the original or you change it enough to make it your own. Cole essentially does neither on "Unforgettable." But the album does sooth and stir a sweet nostalgic cord. One of the most eerie songs is the title cut in which her voice is spliced with her dad's, offering a delicate echoing of father and daughter.

When it was all over, she said she was "really proud" of the way "Unforgettable" turned out. Oddly, it was at the end of the production that she felt the most emotional.

"I didn't shed really any real tears until the album was over," Cole said. "Then I cried a whole lot. When we started the project it was a way of reconnecting with my dad. Then when we did the last song, I had to say goodbye again."

American Indian music inspires composers

American Indian music inspired compositions by many American composers of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. "Indian Music" (6821), a CD of such classical works for piano, played by Dario Muller, has just been issued by Nuova Era.

Composers represented are George Templeton Strong, Carlos Troyer, Harvey Worthington Loomis, Arthur Farwell, Edward MacDowell and Charles Wakefield Cadman. The romantic titles include "From an Indian Lodge," "Lyrics of the Red Man," "Ghost Dance of the Zunis" and "The Thunder God and the Rainbow."

New World music of a different order is represented by another Nuova Era release, the first recording of "La Purpura de la Rosa" ("The Purple Rose") (6936; CD only), an opera by Tomas de Torrejon y Velasco.

It was written in 1701, according to the liner notes, for performance at the palace of the viceroy of Spain in Lima, Peru, and was the first opera composed for the New World. The libretto, based on the classsical myth of Venus and Adonis, is by Pedro Calderon de la Barca.

The composer had lived in Peru for more than 30 years when he wrote the opera, and although some European operas had been performed there, Torrejon drew largely on his memory of the opera style of his youth in Spain.

Only the vocal parts of the opera exist; the instrumentals for the recording are the work of the conductor Rene Clemencic, who leads the Clemencic Consort and soloists in this live performance, recorded in Paris in February 1990.
