Reagan aide, four others taken hostage

Charles R. Harris

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A man "brandishing a pistol" and demanding to talk with President Reagan was arrested Saturday after holding Reagan's personal aide and four others at Augusta National Golf Club. Reagan, who was spending the weekend here, was playing on the 16th fairway and Secret Service officials said he was never in direct danger.

The gunman, identified as Charles R. Harris of Augusta, rammed a pickup truck through the club's No. 3 gate at midafternoon. He was taken into custody two hours, 11 minutes later, with the hostages apparently unharmed.

U.S. Attorney Hinton R. Pierce said Harris, 45, was being charged under federal statutes for making threats against the president. He said there also would be state charges, likely for kidnapping and assault.

Harris, who was taken to the Richmond County Jail after being charged, collapsed in his jail cell late Saturday night and was rushed to University Hospital in Augusta. Hospital spokeswoman Delores McCullough said Harris was suffering from hyperventilation "probably caused by anxiety, which sometimes causes fainting." He was admitted for further tests.

The gunman's motive was not known, but there were reports he had been dismissed from his job in an Augusta factory several months ago and was distraught over the recent death of his father.

After crashing the gate, he drove up to the Augusta National pro shop, took hostages and indicated "perhaps someone would be killed" if he didn't get to see the president. This account came from White House spokesman Peter Roussel.

Roussel said the presidential party was informed of the incident soon after it occurred and that Reagan was held at the fairway under Secret Service guard.

Reagan's aide, David C. Fischer, was released soon after being taken hostage, after promising to contact the president. He found Reagan on the 16th hole, and Reagan then tried five or six times to call the man from a car phone. However, said Roussel, "They never communicated. The man hung up on him each time."

Roussel never gave Harris' name, leaving the identification to Richmond County Sheriff J.B. Dykes.

During the hostage incident, Dykes said, Harris asked for whiskey and food.

Reagan was taken off the course and driven under heavy guard to his nearby quarters on the club grounds. Roussel said later, "I would like to emphasize at no time was the president ever in danger." His spot on the course is an estimated 600 to 700 yards away from the pro shop.

One shot was fired, into the floor of the club's pro shop. Besides the five hostages, two persons hid undetected.

Dykes said Harris released most of the hostages one by one and that the last one "bolted from the room."

"Once all the people were out, police advised him to come out," said Roussel. "He voluntarily submitted." There were reports that Harris' brother and mother assisted in ending the incident.

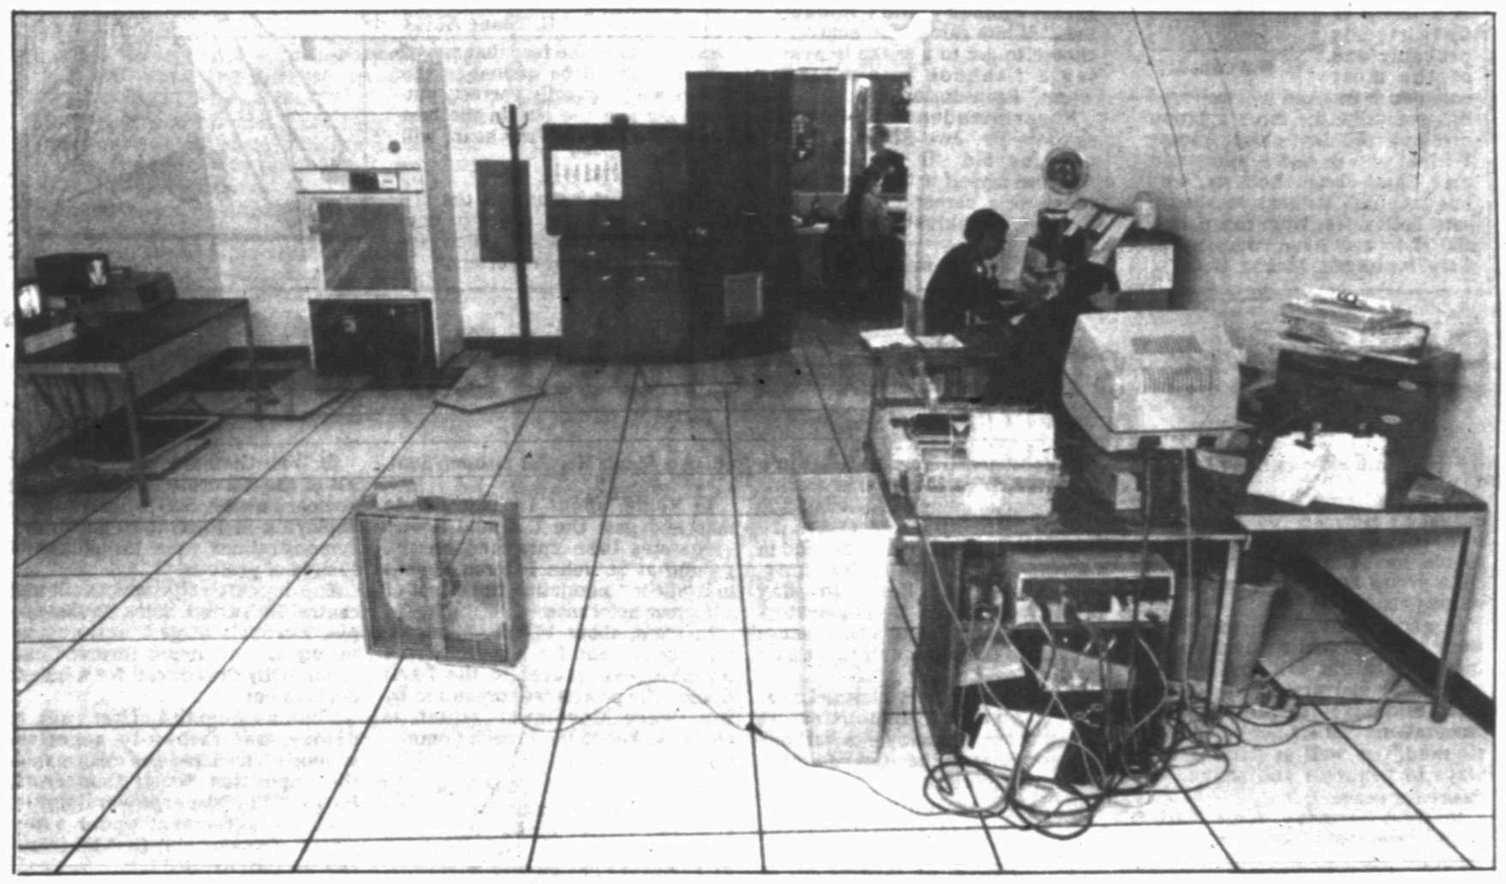

Harris is to be arraigned Monday morning. In the meantime, he was first held at FBI headquarters in Augusta and later transferred to the Richmond County Jail before being hospitalized.

The president congratulated his aides for their handling of the situation and said he is "sorry for whatever inconvenience this has caused the members of the Augusta National," Roussel said.

Bombs reportedly kill 15-25 Marines

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two car bomb explosions struck the U.S. Marine command center and a French command post early Sunday, killing between 15 and 25 Marines and eight French soldiers, the Lebanon state radio said.

The radio said it was quoting initial police reports that said the Marines and French troops were killed in two blasts went off within five minutes of each other. It said the first blast occurred at 6:20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. CDT).

The radio said moans and pleas for help were heard from beneath the rubble of the three-story Marine command center and the four-story French command post at west beirut's Verdun neighborhoods.

Lebanese troops sealed off the Marine area and police blocked all approached to the French center as firefighters and civil defense squads searched for victims.

Demonstrations staged across Western Europe

By The Associated Press

More than 1 million anti-nuclear demonstrators joined forces across Western Europe Saturday to protest deployment of new U.S. missiles on their soil. They formed human chains in West Germany, marched through London, Paris, Stockholm and Vienna, and staged a massive "die-in" in Rome.

About 6,000 people broke off from 200,000 marchers in the West German port of Hamburg, smashed windows, started fires, built barricades, hurled stones at police and burned an American flag. Rome police fired tear gas to disperse about 500 demonstrators who left a designated line of march in the Italian capital.

About 450 protesters were seized in the West German city of Neu-Ulm and an old woman was knocked down and seriously injured by a car

Clark not expected to alter current policy

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a two-part special report exploring the controversy surrounding President Reagan's selection of William Clark as interior secretay.

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary-designate William P. Clark Jr., President Reagan's trusted troubleshooter, will be taking over a troubled department with a White House mandate not to make substantive changes — initially.

William Clark

The immediate goal of Reagan's longtime confidant, his close associates and friends say, will be to muffle the strident environmental debate and jettison the confrontational style of his predecessor, James Watt.

Numerous conversations with "Clark watchers" leave a less clear impression of the sort of long-range changes he might or might not make in the president's basic federal environmental and land-use policies, as interpreted so dramatically by the outgoing and highly contentious Watt.

If Clark follows his past track record as the president's "man for all seasons," whatever changes are made they will not alter to any large extent current policies. In all likelihood they will be patterned on the administration's recent movement toward greater concern for the environment in the development of new sources of energy.

That change, which Clark helped to draft, was contained in a recently unveiled National Energy Policy Plan which emphasized the necessity for conservation and renewable energy sources at the expense of fossil fuels and nuclear energy.

CLARK IS A staunch conservative whose environmental record and philosophy seem to be completely in tune with the agency's current pro-development stance as carried out by Watt. In a statement shortly after his selection, however, Clark said he would "do all I can to preserve and enhance our natural heritage."

President Reagan himself has not spoken very often on the environment. He did not mention it in his inaugural address. The Republican party's 1980 platform authored by Reagan supporters strongly reaffirmed his commitment to the "conservation and wise management of America's natural resources" as long as "it does not become a cover for a 'no-growth' policy and a shrinking environment."

The platform stated that too often regulations are "so rigid and narrow that even individual innovations that improve the environment cannot be implemented" and urged they be reformed "to ensure that the benefits achieved justify the costs imposed."

Community leaders not afraid to admit they have phobias

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Whether or not they're willing to admit it, everyone has certain fears. Even Real Men know better than to slap someone who has a cheekful of snuff.

Someone, somehow even came up with statistics — men have 2.21 phobias and women have 3.55. (Men probably have more but are afraid to admit it.) A complete medical dictionary may list more than 300 forms of this neurosis.

The capacity for human fear seems infinite. There are phobias of everything imaginable — food, skin, laughter, children, leather, sunlight, bushes, books, even words. Actually, the latter is probably not that rare. Words like "You're under arrest" or "The rabbit died" seem to have great capacity for inflicting terror.

Some people are even afraid of the air they breathe. A variation of that phobia is a fear of drafts — particularly among males between the ages of 18 and 21.

Gephyrophobiacs will go from Kansas City, Kan., to Kansas City, Mo., via Canada, just to avoid having to cross a bridge over the Mississippi. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Henry David Thoreau, Michel Eyquem de Montaigne and the Duke of Wellington were probably phobophobiacs. At one time or another all expressed the same thought: there's nothing to fear but fear itself. "Easy for you to say," is the response of the nation's panphobiacs. They fear everything.

Phobias transcend all economic, social and political classes, as many prominent members of the community are willing to testify:

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton confessed he has what is commonly referred to as Applephobia. "I have a fear that ultimately you won't be able to do anything without knowing how to work a computer, and I'm too old to learn how to work a computer." He also said he fears a migration of Yankees to Midland.

Midland school trustee Parker Humes admitted he has running-out-of-cigarettes-in-the-middle-of-the-night phobia. Another trustee, Joyce Sherrod, said her recurring nightmare is walking into Neiman-Marcus' during a half-price sale and discovering she left her purse in the taxi. Even board president Bill Jackson jokingly acknowledged a suspicion of anyone from Odessa.

Clark unlikely to alter current policy

The formal White House report on the administration's first year accomplishments also expressed the president's "belief that access to energy sources and strategic minerals can be encouraged without diminishing the quality of environmental protection."

Why was Clark selected?

"Clark is family," says a White House aide attempting to explain the selection, which has been savaged by environmental groups and their allies. The critics look askance at his background and lack of experience in environmental matters.

THE AIDE explains, "The president is used to turning to Clark to take care of something he views as a problem. His new job is to salvage a key part of the president's domestic programs."

Clark himself volunteered an explanation in 1967 which applies as well now as it did then, when following his first appointment as the then-California Governor Reagan's chief of staff he said, "He (Reagan) values loyalty above competence."

Clark's wife, Joan, once explained the relationship between the president and her husband. She said: "Reagan and my husband are both Western men. They love the outdoors. They are at ease with themselves; nothing neurotic about them. No identity crises. Their feelings are genuine."

"The judge will not bring with him a vision of specific policies but rather a vision of order, coherence, discipline," a close friend says. "He has great trust in Reagan's basic judgments."

A White House aide feels Clark's selection is a sign of the importance the president attaches to having an intimate at Interior, an agency which under Watt's leadership has had a rocky ride on the front pages of the nation's newspapers.

Reagan may be especially concerned about avoiding controversy next spring when he may busy running for re-election.

CLARK'S NEWEST appointment not only reflects the president's deep trust in him but Clark's confidence in his own ability to overcome inexperience and vocal opposition. He faced down both problems in 1981 when he was appointed Deputy Secretary of State and a year later when Reagan asked him to replace the national security adviser, Richard Allen, who had been forced to resign because of allegations of improper behavior.

In both jobs, "the judge," as he likes to be called, quickly gained a favorable reputation as fair and judicious, a highly intelligent and effective manager, a willing learner, an invaluable conciliator and an efficient mediator.

Most importantly, however, he pleased the one person who counts: the president, for whom he has worked since Reagan became governor of California. He has mostly served as the chief troubleshooter, assigned repeatedly by the president to straighten out various floundering operations.

"The president values his cool style," a friend of both says. "Most of all, however, he knows Clark is attuned to his philosophy. With Watt you always had some questions whether Reagan wanted him to go that far. You won't have that with the judge. When he talks, you will know it's the president speaking."

Environmental policies are one of the president's latest problems. The critics contend that Watt and the president have set in motion land-use policies which have reversed decades of environmental progress and warn that Clark is likely to continue the thrust of Reagan's programs.

These critics insist that Clark has a slender record of involvement in environmental affairs and that Reagan — despite an earlier signal of intent to change direction in that field with the appointment of William Ruckelshaus as the new chieftain of the Environmental Protection Agency — has no similar intent at the Department of Interior.

RUCKELSHAUS HAS been working to develop a major Reagan initiative to fight acid rain, which aides hope will provide a plank for next year's campaign as the president attempts to show voters that he cares about environmental protection.

The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee expects to finish its confirmation hearings into Clark's nomination before Congress departs Nov. 17 for the Thanksgiving recess.

Congressional sources say the panel will examine "everything the Interior has been doing for the past two-and-a-half years" with members looking for a commitment from Clark on future policies so that from now on the agency "will be operating under a blinding light."

One of these issues will be whether Clark will replace Watt's appointees. Other questions may delve into what Clark intends to do about offshore oil leasing and onshore coal leasing programs that Watt initiated.

Defending his appointment of Clark, President Reagan said Wednesday he is satisfied that his closest aide, "a rancher, a fifth generation Californian with a lifetime history of interest in environmental issues, will do a fine job in carrying out the policies which I've advocated there."

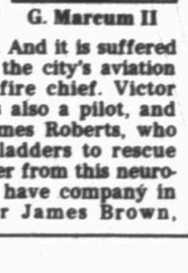

Close associates, friends and aides say that unlike Watt, Clark will succeed in implementing these policies without further ruffling the feathers of the environmental lobby which has savaged his selection.

Leaders not afraid to admit they have phobias

He admits to being afraid of his wife and hitting a hole-in-one, "because I'd have to buy everyone a drink."

G. Marcum II

City councilman Gordon Marcum II also has a golf-related phobia. "A 10-foot downhill putt, that's stark fear."

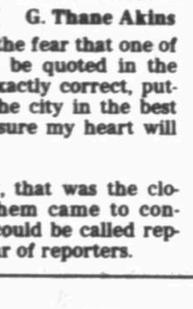

Acrophobia, or a terror of heights, is probably one of the most common fears. And it is suffered by, ironically, the city's aviation director and fire chief. Victor White, who is also a pilot, and Fire Chief James Roberts, who has to climb ladders to rescue cats, both suffer from this neurosis. They also have company in City Manager James Brown, whose children "all laughed at me at the Grand Canyon."

Victor White

White also shares ophidiophobia — a healthy respect for legless reptiles — with Midland Memorial Hospital president Ray Branson. "I can't even look at a picture of a snake without getting squiggly toes," White said. "The nearest I choose to get to a snake is weaving a fishhook into a large worm," Branson conceded.

Superintendent of Midland schools Dr. Joe Baressi fears growing old. "I just haven't resigned myself to that yet." Why he chose a career notorious for causing wrinkles is anybody's guess.

Only city councilman Tom Sloan refused to admit to any kind of phobia. "That's a sure sign of being stupid, I suppose," he laughed.

G. Thane Akins

Mayor G. Thane Akins felt it beneath his dignity to confess fear. "I was brought up not to fear anything," he boasted, but upon further consideration he amended that statement. "I have the fear that one of these days I'll be quoted in the news media exactly correct, putting me and the city in the best light. I'm not sure my heart will stand it."

Surprisingly, that was the closest any of them came to confessing what could be called reptophobia, a fear of reporters.

Protests staged across Europe

driven by German counter-demonstrators. Police in London seized 18 people, including six from an anarchist group heckling speakers and waving black flags.

In general, however, the rallies were peaceful and authorities said they were about half the size that organizers had predicted. Vatican Radio said this revealed "doubts and reservations that cannot be underestimated," as well as dissent over ways to "express and share" the desire for peace.

In West Germany, some 850,000 people protested. About a quarter of them formed a 70-mile human chain linking two U.S. military installations 70 miles apart. At one end, the Wiley U.S. army base in the southern town of Neu-Ulm, 450 demonstrators were dragged from the main gate and arrested.

A 79-year-old woman was seriously injured when she was struck by a car driven by a German counter-demonstrator along the route of the human chain, police said. The counter-demonstrators traveled in a convoy of about 20 cars that carried papier mache models of Soviet SS-20 missiles on their roofs.

But along the human chain, and in marches and rallies in Hamburg, West Berlin and Bonn, the day passed peacefully. Demonstrators waved placards, sang peace songs and enjoyed the crisp, sunny autumn day.

Protest organizers claimed that some 1.3 million demonstrators turned out in Germany — a half-million more than authorities and other witnesses reported.

In London, 150,000-250,000 demonstrators paraded along the River Thames and up Whitehall — Britain's main street of government — to a rally in Hyde Park. Banners, balloons and the strains of Scottish bagpipes floated above the throng. Demonstrators said 400,000 marched, but police estimated half that.

Shouting at the line of marchers in Whitehall was a group that included Tryggvi McDonald, son of U.S. Congressman Larry P. McDonald who died when a Soviet jet shot down a South Korean airliner Sept. 1.

In Rome, about 100,000 people marched past the U.S. and Soviet embassies then sprawled on the ground at St. John Lateran Square in a "die-in" simulating the effect of a nuclear holocaust.

In Paris, about 10,000 demonstrators turned out for a march from Avenue Jean Jaures to the Paris Opera. The protest was organized by the Peace Movement, which is closely linked to the French Communist Party.

In Vienna, after 5,000 people formed a human chain linking the U.S. and Soviet embassies, some 35,000 rallied at City Hall calling for an end to the "balance of terror ideology."

Yet another arm-linking demonstration joined the U.S., Soviet, British and French embassies in Stockholm in a 20,000-strong handshake. "With human warmth and our own hands we will show the two superpowers it is possible to reach one another," said Swedish disarmament leader Maj-Britt Theorin.

In West Germany, which is to get 204 of the 572 cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles NATO plans to start deploying in December, Saturday's demonstrations were the climax of 10 days of protests.

The biggest rally was in Bonn's central Hofgarten. Some 300,000 people, Europe's largest anti-nuclear throng to date, heard former Chancellor Willy Brandt call for a halt to deployment.

"Let us demand, first, not to deploy, but rather to negotiate seriously," declared the chairman of the opposition Social Democratic Party. "The superpowers should reach an agreement under which atomic weapons will first be frozen and then dismantled."

It was under Brandt's Social Democratic successor, Helmut Schmidt, that NATO reached its 1979 decision to deploy the new missiles by the end of 1983 if the Soviet Union refused to agree to scrap its SS-20 missiles already in place.

The demonstrators argued that NATO's deployment would only escalate the arms race.

Gunman holds Reagan aide, others hostage

The president was expected to return to Washington after a morning round of golf today.

Reagan and his party, which included Secretary of State George Shultz, had played nine holes of golf at the course in the morning and were playing the back-nine of the famed 18-hole Masters course following lunch when the incident occurred.

The president and his party left the course at 4:04 p.m. in an armored limousine and went back to the Eisenhower Cottage on the grounds of the club. Moving past a crowd, the president waved as his car drove down a public highway and reentered through another gate.

Reagan's limousine was followed by a group of Secret Service agents, some holding machine guns, in a second car. Some of the agents stood on the car's running board and atop its trunk.

While the hostage incident was under way, Nancy Reagan was in Aiken, S.C., to visit The Racing Hall of Fame. The first lady was taken to the Holiday Inn West in Augusta, where the White House staff is staying.

A U.S. Secret Service spokesman in Washington, Jack Smith, said the Secret Service was "not directly involved" in the hostage situation, and that it was being handled by the Richmond County Sheriff's Department. He said the Secret Service, which is responsible for protecting the president, was standing by and would be prepared to lend technical assistance if requested.

After the man crashed the gate, police quickly moved in with cars to block the smashed gate and increase security around the club.

President and Mrs. Reagan were spending the weekend at the course with Shultz, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, former Sen. Nicholas Brady, R-N.J., and their wives. The wives of Shultz, Regan and Brady were with Mrs. Reagan in South Carolina when the incident occurred.

The golf course is the home of the Masters golf tournament. The group is staying on the golf course in the Eisenhower Cabin, a six-bedroom house named after the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was a club member and occasional visitor during his presidency.

Near the course, Bill Walker, 15, said he was playing video games at an arcade across the street when he looked outside just as a blue and silver pickup truck "came down Washington Road and turned in there, hit the gate, went over it and kept on going."

After the truck crashed the gate, known as gate No. 3, it traveled several hundred feet up a single-lane road to the pro shop, witnesses said. Walker said the pickup truck was driving "not particularly fast" when it hit the gates.

"I was just playing a game and looked out the door and it went through the fence," Walker said.

Wallace Taylor, 39, said he was driving immediately behind the pickup truck on the six-lane highway that passes by the club with the pickup truck crashed through the gate.

"It stopped (on the highway), made a right turn, obviously bumped the gate, backed up, rammed the gate," said Taylor. Then it drove on down the road, which Taylor described as an access drive to a parking lot near the pro shot and club. "I saw it happen," said Taylor, who was accompanied by his son, Wally, 12.

With that, Taylor said he put his car in reverse and drove about 100 yards backwards against traffic to where a policeman was stationed. He alerted the officer to what had happened and within minutes the area was flooded with policemen.

Inmate confesses to killing 6-year-old boy

Adam Walsh

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — An inmate who had calmly described killing up to 50 people broke into sobs and admitted to the slaying of 6-year-old Adam Walsh after confessed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas tipped off police, authorities say.

The 1981 abduction and killing of the gap-toothed little boy, who was decapitated, inspired a federal law and a television movie, "Adam," which was shown earlier this month.

Despite the confession, the boy's father, John Walsh, told a news conference Saturday that his nightmare is not over.

"My heart will be broken for the rest of my life," Walsh said through his tears. "We miss Adam more now than we did when he was first missing, because the reality hadn't set in yet.

"I'm just glad this individual is off the streets," Walsh said.

"I hope that (Otis Elwood Toole) receives due process...and I hope that Adam receives some justice," he said.

Walsh said he would now work toward a nationwide system of tracking violent criminals and connecting seemingly unrelated abductions and murders.

"It's time that all people realize this is everyone's problem. The odds are overwhelming that that they or you could be the next victim," Walsh said. "These people range freely throughout society and prey on our wives, our mothers and our children."

Adam's mother, Reve Walsh, did not attend the news conference at Hollywood police headquarters and remained in seclusion.

Toole, 36, signed a statement saying he snatched Adam from the sidewalk outside the Hollywood Mall, headed north on the Florida Turnpike and later dropped Adam's head in a canal near Vero Beach, Hollywood police announced late Friday.

"It's a fluke we found out about this. There was no way we could have solved this case," said Assistant Police Chief Leroy Hessler.

Toole also allegedly told police about scores of other killings committed with and without Lucas, a 47-year-old drifter jailed in Texas who claims to have killed at least 165 people.

Police would not say how Toole claimed to have killed Adam.

"We feel quite confident that Toole is the individual who killed Adam Walsh," Hessler said, adding that Toole told them things only the murderer could know.

"I heard some of the details," he said. "... It made Charles Manson sound like Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn — very gruesome."

Adam's head was found Aug. 10, 1981, two weeks after he disappeared. The rest of his body is still missing.

Toole led detectives to a spot where he claimed to have buried the boy. Police were still searching the undisclosed area Saturday.

Toole, who is serving 20 years for arson, told of the slaying after detectives flew to Jacksonville to question him Wednesday, Hessler and Police Chief Sam Martin said. A Jacksonville detective had called them after Lucas told him Toole had abducted a child outside a Sears, Roebuck and Co. store and killed him.

Toole broke into sobs as he talked of the young victim, police said.

"Of all homicides he talked about, this was the only homicide that really bothered him. He can discuss other homicides and it doesn't bother him," Hessler said. "He was remorseful about hurting this young boy. He broke down and cried when he talked about killing Adam."

Police said Toole hadn't seen the NBC movie, which was broadcast Oct. 10, depicting Adam's disappearance and the Walshes' ordeal.

Lucas, who was in jail when Adam was killed and is now jailed in Denton, Texas, was convicted of killing his mother in 1960 and pleaded guilty to another slaying. He is charged with seven deaths in Texas and is charged with Toole in the death of a woman in Monroe, La.

On Friday, police in Monroe also charged Toole with killing a high school student there in 1982.

Police say the two traveled together between Florida and Texas. Detectives attending a Louisiana conference two weeks ago said the men are linked to 69 unsolved homicides in nine states.

Florida charges of kidnapping and first-degree murder against Toole should be filed within a week in Broward County Circuit Court, Hessler said.

Mrs. Walsh told police she left her son in the toy department at Sears on July 27, 1981, letting him play with the video games while she shopped for a lamp in the next department.

When she got back to the toys five to seven minutes later, Adam was gone. According to papers filed in the parents' civil suit against Sears and the mall, a security guard kicked a group of children out of the store after a fight broke out over the video games.

Missing bolt may be key to accident

DALLAS (AP) — A missing bolt may have led to last week's accident at the State Fair of Texas in which a gondola flew from a ride and crashed on the midway, killing one person and injuring 16, an investigator says.

James Greenawalt, safety standards director for the Oklahoma Department of Labor, concluded that one bolt was missing and another was broken after he inspected the car and the main frame of the ride Enterprise.

Greenawalt accompanied Dallas Morning News reporters Friday to the fairgrounds, where they were among 25 lawyers, engineers, reporters, fair officials, ride experts and private investigators to inspect and photograph the ride. The crowd included a team from the Consumer Product Safety Commission, which conducted its first visual inspection.

Greenawalt, whose employees inspected the Enterprise when it was in Oklahoma last month, said the missing bolt may be significant in determining the accident's cause.

Both he and Michael McDowell, an investigator for a man injured in Monday's accident, said passenger overload could have been a contributing factor.

"I think the big question is why there were three people in that car," said McDowell, an investigator for Johnny Hamilton, who was in the car adjacent to the one that flew off.

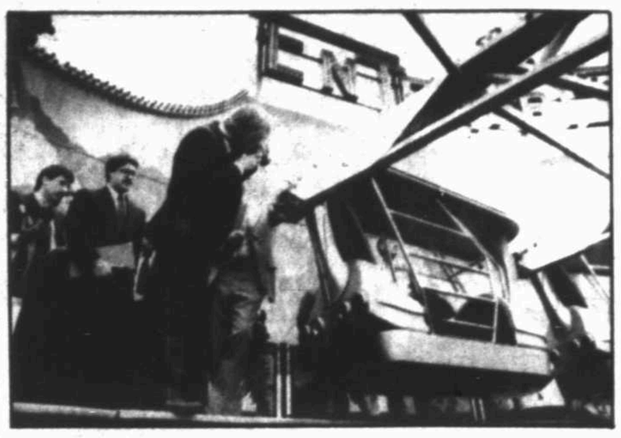

Hamilton has filed a $3.5 million lawsuit in connection with the accident, in which he said he sustained bruises and internal injuries.

McDowell said his inspection supported Hamilton's statement that the back of the car separated from the ride's frame before the front end tore away.

"For some reason, the back of the car gave loose first," he said.

Greenawalt said two small bolts should have been screwed through a safety plate to fasten a solid metal shaft to a heavy metal block that holds the car to the main frame of the ride.

But on the damaged car, one of the bolts is missing, although the threaded screw shaft is intact and shows no signs of stress or force, he said. The other bolt is broken; what is left of it sticks out of its shaft.

Investigators and news media examine a passenger car of the Enterprise ride. The car tore loose form its frame and flew off the ride at the State Fair of Texas Midway in Dallas Monday night. One person was killed, 16 injured. Investigators believe a missing bolt may be significant in determining the cause of the accident.

Greenawalt said it was likely the missing bolt disappeared before the accident because there were no scratches or other indications of force on the face of the bolt shaft.

Family, soldier killed in accident

CIRCLEVILLE, Texas (AP) — A head-on collision near this Central Texas community late Friday killed a family of four and an Arkansas soldier.

Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd said the accident occurred about 11:40 p.m. on Texas Highway 29.

A westbound car driven by Randolph L. Silverstein, 21, of Star City, Ark. apparently drifted out of its lane and struck a car containing a Taylor family, Todd said.

Killed were Dr. Benedict Blace Sobotik, 51, a Taylor dentist; his wife Dorine; and their two sons, Chris and Kel.

Nuclear plant firing illegal

DALLAS (AP) — A second quality control inspector at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant was illegally fired, the U.S. Department of Labor has ruled.

The department ruled Friday that William A. Dunham was wrongfully terminated for objecting to harassment from his employer.

In June, the department ruled in favor of fired inspector Charles A. Achison, and the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board said last month that it suspects a third inspector, Robert L. Hamilton, was fired because he submitted unfavorable inspection reports.

The firings have become a key issue in licensing hearings for the plant, which is under construction 75 miles southwest of Dallas near Glen Rose.

Licensing board Chairman Peter A. Bloch has said that the board may postpone its licensing decision until the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission finishes its investigation into complaints of widespread inspector intimidation at the plant.

In a telephone conference Friday, Bloch told participants in the licensing hearings that the board may seek additional proof — perhaps in the form of a consultant's study — that the plant was built safely even if inspectors were harassed.

In a letter dated last Monday, Curtis L. Poer, area director for the Labor Deparment, said Dunham "was terminated because he was vocal in his opposition to intimidation, harassment and threats made by management to the inspectors."

Plant spokesman Frank Shantz said Dunham was fired Aug. 26 for "insubordnation" and that a hearing will be requested on the ruling.

Shantz said he did not know where Dunham now lives, but his former employer, Brown & Root Inc., will have to pay the cost of his move to a new job, according to Poer.

Texas Democrats favoring Mondale

While there's still more than a year to go before voters go to the polls to pick a president, it appears that the Texas Democratic leadership is lining up behind former Vice President Walter Mondale for their half of that ticket.

A recent informal survey of the State Democratic Party leadership shows that 66 out of 73 leaders who responded, 44 supported Mondale, while 10 lined up with U.S. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio.

Party Chairman Bob Slagle, Sherman, who says although he didn't respond, he's for Mondale, says the former vice president's support reflects Mondale's past activities in Texas and service to the Democratic Party.

"The fact is that Mondale has been in Texas a number of times," Slagle says. "He's well known to be a party person, as well as a public official...He's built up a strong following here."

Glenn, on the other hand, "really didn't do much party activity outside of Ohio until he decided to run for president," Slagle says.

"I don't think it's a very philosophical choice," he adds, "although I've seen speculation that that is the case."

"I think it has more to do with familiarity...Party people see Mondale as someone who has been, like them, a worker in the vineyards."

Glenn has received early backing from Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, whose support has allowed Glenn access to a political organization and fundraisers.

And Slagle acknowledges that support has been important for Glenn, "particularly on the fundraising end."

So far, according to the latest reports, Glenn has raised close to half a million dollars in Texas, twice the amount of Mondale.

But Hobby, too, notes that "it is an early hour" in the campaign, although "at this point, my gut feeling is that Glenn is clearly ahead in Texas."

Glenn, Hobby argues, has done more work and has "more organization" in Texas, and is the frontrunner. "Although, Hobby adds, I'm not sure I want to be the frontrunner right now."

Glenn, Hobby feels, "is a TEXAS-type candidate...He fits the requirements. "That's not to say that Mondale isn't a good candidate...He's a fine fellow, but that's not the issue. "The issue is who can provide the kind of leadership this country needs," and Hobby feels that person is Glenn.

Glenn should, Hobby feels, spend more time in Texas, to allow both the party leadership and voters to become better acquainted with him.

"Like any state coordinator," Hobby says, "I'd like to have the candidate all the time."

Slagle agrees that the principal issue for the Democrats is to nominate "a person who can effectively govern the country if elected."

Slagle sees early endorsements for Mondale by groups such as the AFL-CIO as indicating that concern.

"There's a strong feeling among party people," he says. "They may be of a particular constituency, but they are all active Democrats."

"I feel there's going to be much less of a 'politics as usual' attitude among folks in the Democratic Party. That's what you're really seeing in terms of these early endorsements...There's not that attitude of 'Let's wait and see what someone will offer us down the line.' "These groups are saying, 'Let's decide who we think is the best,'" Slagle contends.

Slagle acknowledges that some Mondale supporters may have felt they were being ignored, while Glenn was making an early effort to win support.

"Quite a number of people" in Texas may have felt that way, Slagle says, but that situation has been remedied.

Mailings have gone out, and there are people out in the field now for Mondale," Slagle says.

"It's interesting how few people decided to support someone else, even if they thought they were being ignored," Slagle says.

"I think that is an unusual attitude, and it shows they're more serious," he argues.

Hobby says that despited the apparent heavy support for Mondale among party leaders, "the whole thing is turning the Glenn people out in precinct conventions."

And Slagle says that whatever happens, Democrats will be working hard to see that their candidate is elected.

"The general public in Texas," he says, "is of an attitude that there needs to be a change in Washington, and either Mondale or Glenn would be acceptable."

Judge's powdery substance probed

EL PASO (AP) — Grand jurors this week will begin investigating the alleged destruction of a powdery substance authorities say they found in a judge's vehicle.

The inquiry will start Thursday and "could be quite devastating to certain persons and pretty encompassing," said grand jury foreman Ken Heineman.

"This is a can of worms, possibly," Heineman said Friday. "We don't know. It may end Thursday or it may go for weeks and get a lot deeper."

A jailer and a reserve deputy say they found the powder resembling cocaine or heroin while installing a two-way radio in the four-wheel-drive vehicle of County Judge Pat O'Rourke.

O'Rourke has denied he knew of the claim the pair made in February until a reporter asked him about it in July.

The pair — jailer Dwight Jefferson and deputy Jim Boykin — said Friday they have been subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury.

They said Sheriff Mike Davis and Capt. Willie Hill, who allegedly ordered the substance to be destroyed, also were subpoenaed.

"I'm glad that finally we can stop messing around and get down to the nitty-gritty," said Boykin, who previously had declined to comment on the case.

Jefferson, who started a two-week vacation this week, said he has been in El Paso but has not been accessible to reporters because "my mother has been protecting me."

"We are all decent citizens. We are not criminals," Boykin said. "We are law enforcement officials. We want to do the right thing. But Lord, why me? After the grand jury it'll be all over," he said.

Davis and Hill could not be reached for comment.

Killer's body exhumed; Autopsy performed

LAS (AP) — The body of a farmer who committed suicide while being sought in the slayings of two Minnesota bankers was exhumed and an autopsy was performed Saturday at the request of investigators.

The body of James L. Jenkins, 46, who apparently killed himself near Paducah in western Texas three weeks ago, was exhumed Friday. The bankers who were killed had been officers in a bank that had foreclosed on his Minnesota farm.

"We're looking for some parts of the body to confirm some things, and we want to explore some others," said Harry Halden, agent in charge of the investigative unit of the Minnesota Crime Bureau. "We need the autopsy for our investigation into the double homicide up here."

However, Halden refused to specify what the investigators were looking for.

Jenkins and his son, Steven, were named in second-degree murder warrants issued after the deaths of Rudy Blythe, 42, and Deems "Toby" Thulin, 37, whose bodies were found on a vacant farm near Ruthton in southwest Minnesota.

Steven Jenkins told Texas authorities his father shot himself after fleeing to a farm northwest of Paducah. He also said he saw his father kill the bankers, who had foreclosed on Jenkins' farm four years ago.

Halden said the body parts would be sent to the FBI crime lab in Washington.

Dr. William T. Shearer explains the bone marrow transplant to David, the "bubble boy," before beginning an infusion, Friday in Houston. Looking on is Mary Murphy, Ph.D. The 12-year-old boy suffers from combined immune deficiency and doctors hope a transplant will free him from his isolation bubble.

Bubble boy alert, rested, 'happy as he's ever been'

HOUSTON (AP) — David — the boy who received an experimental bone marrow transplant that may free him from his germ-free plastic bubble — talked about football, flirted with the nurses and seemed "as happy as he's ever been," his doctor said Saturday.

"When I saw him, he was tidying up the bubble and teasing the nurses, winking at them," said Dr. Murdina M. Desmond, the pediatrician who has treated David for severe combined immune deficiency since his birth 12 years ago.

"I asked him if he had any messages for his friends and he said, 'Tell them I feel OK — no headaches or anything,'" she said.

Dr. William T. Shearer, leader of the medical team that performed the procedure, said David showed no immediate reaction to the transplant and had passed the "first hurdle" in treating the rare disorder that could make even a common cold fatal.

"His temperature, blood pressure and respiration are normal. Physically, he's fine," Shearer said.

However, he said, signs of rejection will not appear for about one week and the success of the procedure cannot be gauged for about three months.

DR. RALPH D. FEIGIN, physician-in-chief at Texas Children's Hospital, said David was alert and rested.

"Nothing in his life has changed, except that he's in the hospital," Feigin said. "We talked some about football and he told me he watched the television news accounts about his transplant and thought they were pretty nice."

On Monday, David will participate in schoolwork via a telephone hook-up to his classroom.

Placed in a sterile environment at birth, David never has been touched by a human hand and is the oldest person to have survived the syndrome. His identity, and that of his family, never has been released by hospital officials.

David never has been ill a day in his life or even had a tooth cavity because of the extreme protection against germs. Filtered air is pumped inside and all of the food, toys, books and clothing he uses are sterilized by either heat or chemicals.

WHILE DOCTORS EVALUATE the transplant, David is living in three "bubble" rooms built into two rooms at the hospital. Doctors said David probably will remain at the hospital for six to eight months.

The doctor performed the transplant Friday by placing his hands into gloves that extend inside the bubble. Inside, David laid out medical instruments and helped doctors insert the needle in his arm for the transplant.

Doctors hope David's body will accept the new marrow, allow it to thrive and begin producing the blood cells that provide immunity, Shearer said. The procedure has been done about 12 times with "some degree of success," he said.

The transplant, which was similar to a blood transfusion, used less than two ounces of specially treated bone marrow from David's 15-year-old sister.

Until recently, such transplants have been possible only when marrow with an exact match of immune properties is available. This usually requires an immediate family member as donor.

BUT IN DAVID'S CASE, nobody in his family had an exact match.

Unmatched bone marrow can cause a deadly reaction. The transplanted marrow actually attacks the body because cells in the marrow, called T cells, attack and kill foreign tissue.

For David's transplant, his sister's marrow was treated to remove the T cells by a process that mixes the marrow with monoclonal antibodies that destroy the T cells.

To be successful, the process must leave intact the stem cells which are the disease-fighting portion of the marrow. The stem cells could then reproduce, mature and form lymphocytes, which provide immunity from disease.

Shearer said David's blood will be monitored daily for signs of rejection.

If the transplant is successful, David will be given immunizations against the standard childhood diseases. Then he would be allowed to gradually join the world outside the plastic bubble.

Owners plan revival of only armadillo farm

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — When Charles Apelt started his armadillo farm in this Hill Country hamlet before the turn of the century, he fashioned lamps, baskets, desk sets, cookie holders and other unusual items out of the mammal's scaly hides.

Live armadillos, which some derisively call "nature's tanks," were shipped to foreign countries for medical research and tourists stopped by the rustic farm just to gawk and purchase the exotic items.

But the thriving 'dillo business faded out in 1974, almost two decades after Apelt's death. The novelty had worn thin and the German immigrant's daughter couldn't carry on alone.

Now, a pair of San Antonio brothers and a barbecue restaurant owner hope to revive the dilapidated Comfort property into what is still believed to be the nation's — if not the world's — only armadillo farm.

"THE ARMADILLO business is alive and well in Comfort, Texas," said Don English, who owns and operates Just Brisket, a restaurant on the farm grounds.

"The idea is to bring the armadillo farm back as a sight-seeing attraction," he said. "We have intentions of going back into the basket business, even though there've been some people with the humane society who say that would be an injustice to the armadillo."

Eugene Cain of San Antonio, who owns the farm along with his brother, Jerry, said he wants to open a restaurant, set up permanent artists' studios, pen armadillos on the property and sell most of the mammals for medical research.

"The crafts people could make other things, but they also would make some armadillo stuff," he said.

The thousands of baskets Apelt and his hired hands shaped out of the thick leathery hides remain prized possessions of Texana lovers and dot antique shops across the state, English said.

He displayed a smallish antique basket — a jazzy little number lined in bright satin and decorated with rick-rack — that he said a customer once tried to buy for $5,000. No sale, English told him.

BUT DESPITE the high-priced offer, armadillos get little respect.

The mostly noctural mammals insist on eating dirt with their food, are accused of causing leprosy and are renowned for their propensity to get killed on Texas highways.

Gov. Mark White even chastised the armadillo, in a semi-facetious proclamation designating its 301st millionth birthday, for an inexplicable desire to mate with two-ton trucks.

No records remain that detail Apelt's exact method of making the baskets, but the general idea survived, English said.

The armadillos are clubbed over the head, their innards scooped out and the inside skin rubbed with poisonous powder to scratch off the stubborn remains. A block of wood is inserted in the hollow shell, which then is hung on a clothesline to hold its shape.

NEXT, THE TAIL is looped around to the snout to fashion a handle and the whole thing is shellacked. All that's left to finish is the decoration — optional, of course.

In Apelt's best year, English said he sold 20,000 live and 20,000 dead armadillos, so named for their leathery coat of "armor."

"He went to the World's Fair in New York City about 1902 and that's when he introduced the armadillo basket to the world," English said. "It was a phenomenon. He came back with thousands of orders from all over the world. The world couldn't get enough.

"He had to hire 40 to 50 people just to hunt the armadillos at night to keep up with the orders," he said. "It was quite a boon to the economy of Comfort, but they resented Charlie because he was always one step ahead of everybody else."

Apelt did record one failure, however, and Cain said he duplicated it — trying to start an armadillo ranch.

"I FINAALY JUST let them all run out of their pen a couple of months ago," Cain said. "The females only give birth about once a year, and it's always four babies of the same sex. It just wasn't working."

A few other obstacles could block the farm's revival, too, he said.

"Actually, we have two big problems: time and money," Cain said. "We want to get something going in the next couple of years, but there's a lot to be done. Right now, it's nothing but a financial drain."

English predicted the venture could be quite successful, with the armadillo baskets selling at prices ranging from $60 to $100.

Reagan accuses Soviet Union of aggression

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — President Reagan said today the Soviet Union is "engaged in a campaign to intimidate the West" and prevent the deployment of new medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

With demonstrators in Europe and the United States protesting the deploymen planned for December, Reagan said, "The values of Western civilization and the beliefs that bind free people together are being tested.

"The Soviets are engaged in a campaign to intimidate the West," Reagan added. "But it will not work."

Reagan spoke in his weekly radio address. It was taped on Friday and broadcast today as the president played golf here at the Augusta National Golf Course.

Reagan said the Soviets have balked at repeated U.S. negotiating proposals to curb medium-range missiles in Europe. "The Soviets insist on a monopoly" of the missiles, he said, adding that meant zero for us and hundreds of warheads for them.

Accusing the Soviets of intimidation, Reagan said the Soviets had warned Turkey it could become "a nuclear cemetery," had called Scandinavian countries "a bridgehead for aggression," and had advised West Germany that if new missiles are deployed, the military threat to it will grow.

"These are not words of a peacemaker, but of a nation bent on intimidation," said Reagan. "It is inconceivable that any Western leader would make such and provocative threats."

Reagan said the United States will remain at the negotiating table "as long as it takes to reach a breakthrough. But the Soviets must understand: NATO's mission is to defend Europe and preserve peace, which it has done for 34 years. And NATO will continue to meet its responsibilities."

Meanwhile, Rep. Mike Lowry, D-Wash., giving the Democrats' response, criticized the president for failing to make good on his promise to balance the federal budget.

Lowry, in remarks prepared for delivery in Washington, noted that in the 1980 presidential campaign, Reagan vowed to balance the budget by 1983 or possibly 1982.

"It is now 1983," Lowry said. "Instead of eliminating the federal deficit he had tripled it. Instead of being a budget balancer, he has become the nation's all-time, champion budget buster."

Candidates constrain attacks after Mondale's apology

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Sen. John Glenn accepted former Vice President Walter Mondale's apology for calling him an "anti-Democrat" as the two presidential candidates toned down their attacks on each other Saturday.

"Fritz, I accept and I certainly appreciate that," said Glenn.

Mondale, Glenn, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and 1972 Democratic nominee George McGovern spoke to about 2,800 delegates to the Florida Democratic State Convention.

Mondale avoided the use of such terms as "real Democrat" or "anti-Democrat," labels he has drawn criticism for using. But he did call himself a "people's Democrat."

Dark-horse Askew, who is expected to win a straw poll that will close the three-day convention Sunday, said he is "the different Democrat."

Glenn, however, pleaded for an end to labeling. "If we conduct our Democratic version of a political inquisition, then on Election Day 1984 we will be looking at four more years of Ronald Reagan," said the Ohio senator, who spoke first.

Mondale had sent Glenn a telegram of apology two days earlier for saying in a letter to Florida convention delegates that Glenn was an "anti-Democrat" because he had voted for Reaganomics in 1981.

Meanwhile, Askew said he is "different" because he is unwilling to "be the captive of anyone," a jab at Mondale, who has received endorsements from labor unions. Askew didn't mention Mondale by name.

He also took a swipe at Glenn, who has criticized the economic policies of former President Jimmy Carter, and another at Mondale, his vice president.

"I say that we must stop bickering about 'Reaganomics' and 'Carternomics' and about who voted for nerve gas, and who favored the MX missile, and who's a real Democrat and who's not," Askew said.

McGovern spoke between Glenn and Mondale and joked that he felt "very much like part of a roast beef sandwich."

Mondale defended his promises to various groups which he said some people have criticized.

"That's what America is all about — promises that are made and kept for the people of this country," Mondale said.

Mondale has hailed anticipated results of Sunday's straw poll as an indication he can win in the South, although he concedes he won't beat Askew, the odds-on favorite in his home state.

"All of these straw polls are significant," Mondale told a news conference Friday night.

Baby girl a first in 113 years

SEATTLE (AP) — The Gordons knew they were going to have a baby, but the last person they expected to show up in the delivery room was 8-pound, 15-ounce Stefanie Ellen Gordon.

Stefanie was the first girl born in the Gordon family in 113 years.

"I was so shocked I couldn't believe it. I cried for 15 minutes," said Stefanie's mother, Cindy, after the 4 a.m. Thursday delivery.

The last time a woman joined the Gordon clan without marrying into it was in 1870, before the Gordons left Manitoba, Canada, to move to Seattle. A sister of Stefanie's great-grandfather, the young woman died at age 18.

"I knew we wouldn't have a girl," said Mrs. Gordon, 35, of the Seattle suburb of Montlake Terrace. "Everyone said it would be a boy. All the things we got are for boys except a couple of girl's outfits just to make us feel better."

Even an ultrasound test indicated the child would be male, she said.

So, when Mrs. Gordon and her husband Don, 35, entered Seattle's Group Health Hospital for the delivery of their first child, Mrs. Gordon was convinced she was about to have a son.

"When we were in delivery, the doctor told us it was a girl. I didn't say anything. It was like I didn't hear him. It just didn't sink in," she said.

"I asked what he had said, and he said we had a girl."

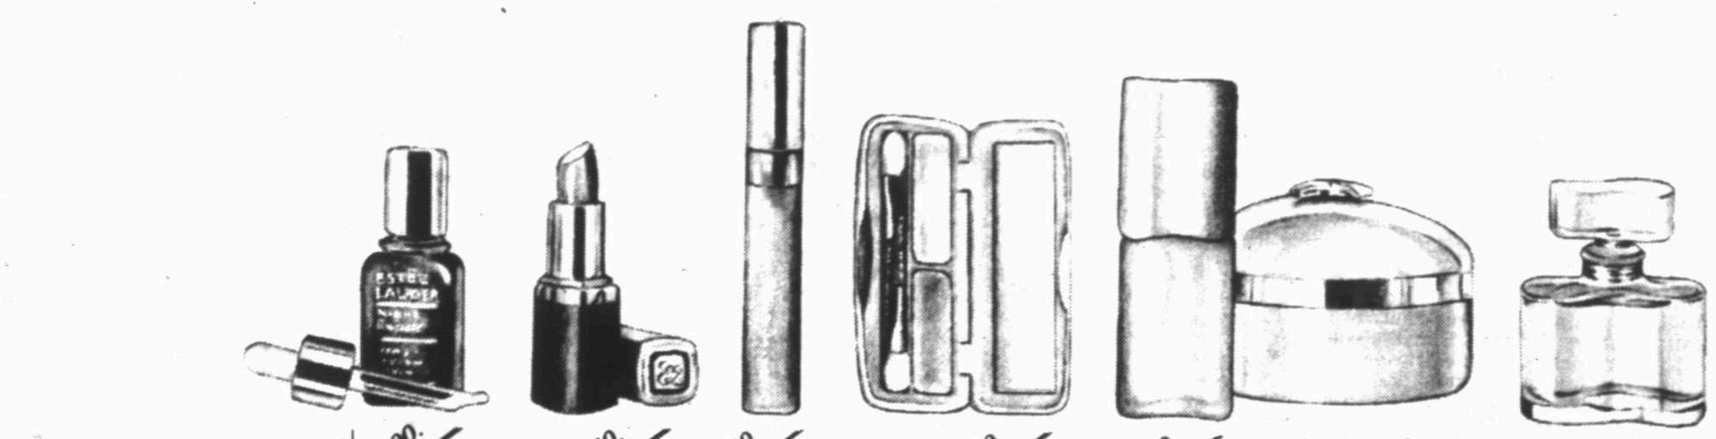

It still didn't register.

"Then Don yelled, 'We did it! We did it!' That's when I started to cry," she said.

How will Stefanie be able to cope with the male-oriented Gordons? Not to worry, says her mom.

"They'll spoil her to death," Mrs. Gordon predicts.

Father takes leap with baby

NEW YORK (AP) — A young father cradled his 8-month-old baby in his arms and leaped from the roof of a four-story apartment building, police said. The father survived, but the baby died.

Michael Robinson, 19, jumped because he was despondent over his separation from the baby's mother, Judy Kennedy, 18, police said.

The baby died at St. Mary's Hospital about seven hours after the fall from the Brooklyn building.

Robinson was charged with homicide and was removed from Woodhull hospital to a prison ward at King's County Hospital late Friday night. He was in satisfactory condition Saturday, police said.

Antique coins, rugs stolen

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — An estimated $1.3 million in antique Russian coins and Oriental rugs were stolen from the home of a Russian-born man, police said Saturday.

Thieves entered the home of Gregory Raczofskij through a rear kitchen window and tripped an alarm, but police arrived to find no one there, Officer William Burns said. Missing were 49 Oriental prayer rugs and 12 antique icons.

Raczofskij was in Boston and was informed of the theft by telephone. Raczofskij, who is Russian, taught in Germany and arrived here two years ago, Detective Robert Hughes said.

Cripple awarded $1.4 million

BOSTON (AP) — A jury has awarded a crippled man $1 million in damages and $400,000 in interest because he was not told of the possible side effects of the drug prednisone.

The Suffolk Superior Court award was made last week to former electrician Wilfred E. Precourt, 46, of Norton, who had sued his physician, Dr. Albert A. Frederick Jr. of Boston.

Prednisone is a synthetic steroid used after surgery to prevent inflammation. Frederick prescribed it in September 1976 after removing a metal chip from Precourt's eye. He later was diagnosed as having aseptic necrosis, or decaying, of the hips, and he no longer can walk without crutches and cannot work fulltime. He claimed the drug was responsible.

Transsexual officer arrested

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N.Y. (AP) — A police officer who had a sex change operation last year to become a woman was arrested early Saturday and charged with assault in the shooting of a bartender, police said.

Nassau County Officer Jennifer McCormick argued with the bartender about the price of her drink, identified herself as an off-duty officer and pulled her gun, Officer William Burns said. The bartender grabbed the revolver, the two struggled, and the gun went off.

Bartender Lorinzo Banifacio, of the Holiday Inn at Rockville Centre, was struck in the forearm with bullet fragments. Ms. McCormick, 41, was charged with assault and reckless endangerment and was suspended.

Testimony finally ends in trial

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Walter Bergman, the 84-year-old former "freedom rider" who is suing the government over a Ku Klux Klan beating, said after the second phase of his case ended that he expects the litigation to go on for years.

But, he added, longevity runs in his family.

"I expect to live to see (the damages) received," the wheelchair-bound Bergman said Friday, his voice made gravelly by a stroke. "I expect to be around for a while yet."

Testimony ended Friday in the penalty phase of Bergman's 7-year-old, $2 million lawsuit blaming the FBI for brain damage he suffered because of a beating in Alabama in 1961.

Some stolen tickets found

NEW YORK (AP) — Police in the city and on Long Island say some of the 400 airline tickets taken from six travel agencies by armed robbery last week already have turned up as far away as Mexico.

The stolen tickets are worth several hundred thousand dollars.

No arrests have been made. The robbers were described as three men in their 20s, with possibly a fourth person driving a getaway car.

"It's definitely a gang," said Detective Sgt. Harry Saiken of the Queens robbery division. "There's no doubt about it."

Relatives receive $1.5 million

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Relatives of a Mobile man who died in an apartment fire have been awarded $1.5 million in damages by a Mobile County Circuit Court jury.

Raymond V. McCloskey died of carbon monoxide poisoning on Oct. 19, 1981. Attorneys for the plaintiffs, McCloskey's two sons, contended that the Garden District Apartments were not equipped with smoke detector alarms and contained open-space heaters, which emit carbon monoxide fumes.

The verdict went against William E. Monday Jr., owner of the apartment complex, and Jack W. Gilmore, the apartments' manager. They have 30 days to appeal the decision.

One of the defense attorneys said Friday night an appeal would be filed.

Feminist seeks party nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sonia Johnson, a feminist excommunicated from the Mormon Church while she worked in support of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, says she intends to seek the presidential nomination of the Citizens Party.

Mrs. Johnson will formally announce her campaign at a press conference Monday, according to a press release.

In her release, Mrs. Johnson, 47, said she has received support from Citizens Party activists who "believe that a feminist analysis of the problems confronting the nation and the world will introduce a unique and invaluable perspective into the current presidential debate ...."

The Citizens Party, founded in 1980 by Barry Commoner, plans to chose a nominee for the 1984 presidential election in the spring. Commoner ran on the ticket in the last election.

Mrs. Johnson was excommunicated from the Mormon Church in December 1979. She claimed the church kicked her out because of her support for the Equal Rights Amendment, which the church urged its members to oppose.

Church officials said at the time that Mrs. Johnson was excommunicated because she misrepresented the church's stand against the ERA and made personal attacks on church leaders.

Jean and Moo Min Mar, two of the 13 people killed in Seattle's Wah Mee Club last February, pose in this family photo. Eight months after the Chinatown massacre, members of the Mar family still struggle with their loss.

Massacre victims' family struggle with their loss

SEATTLE (AP) — Eight months after Jean and Moo Min Mar were shot to death with 11 others at a Chinatown gambling club, the family that had thought them "invincible" still struggles with its loss.

The Mars' daughter, Linda, and Mrs. Mar's younger sister, Jeannie Robertson, spent the late summer and early fall at the back-to-back trials in which Willie Mak and Benjamin Ng were convicted in the shootings.

Initially, Ms. Mar, 26, felt the trials would be "too gruesome" but once she dropped by the courtroom "it was like an obsession."

Her aunt, 37, who first decided to attend "because I couldn't let this child (Linda) go through it by herself," admits she, too, became obsessed.

The trials "literally consumed my life there for a couple of weeks," said Mrs. Robertson, a Fall City wife and mother. "I could not sleep. I had nightmares about it.

"I'D SIT IN THAT courtroom all day and then I'd try to go home. It was hard to go back to a normal life — and I mean I lead a boring life," she said.

Her teen-age son and daughter "just said, 'Well, Mom's weirder than usual' ... but it was hard on my family."

THE FEB. 19 BLOODBATH at the Wah Mee Club left other grieving families in Seattle's Chinese community. Mrs. Mar, 47, and her husband, 52, had been friends with many of the victims.

Ms. Mar, now a registered nurse, went to school with several of the other victims' children.

Mak and Ng were convicted of aggravated murder in the shooting deaths. Mak, 23, was sentenced to death; Ng, 20, to life in prison without parole. A third defendant, Tony Ng, 26, no relation, remains at large. All three are Chinese.

Now the large Mar family faces its first holiday season without the outspoken, hardworking couple they knew as "Big Jean" and "Horse," a literal translation of Mar's family name.

"It changes all our lives because e[illegible] Christmas, every Thanksgiving we'd have a party at my mom and dad's house," said Ms. Mar. "Not just family but friends too. (Now) what are we going to do?"

Both immigrants from southern China, the Mars met in Seattle, married 28 years ago and raised two boys and a girl while struggling to build a successful restaurant business.

THEY HAD COME A LONG way from the days when the pinball machines at their first restaurant, the Sunlite Cafe in Renton, grossed more money than the food.

They built and opened the Kwuntung Country restaurant in suburban Redmond in the early 1970s, leased the Sunlite and in recent years had been semi-retired, working only when needed at the Kwuntung, said Mrs. Mar's younger brother, Tony Y. Chinn, 36, a Boeing Co. worker.

The two "worked long and hard to gain a sense of security," Chinn said in his eulogy. "They enjoyed sharing with family and friends the fruits of their labor. They ate well, traveled a lot and had plenty of good times. They enjoyed life to the fullest."

They shared their wealth with the less fortunate, offering jobs and loans to those who needed them and bringing many of their old-country relatives to a new life in the United States.

"We thought they were invincible," Chinn said recently. "We thought they'd never die — that they'd see a way through the most difficult problems."

MS. MAR'S LOSS INITIALLY left her "overwhelmed. I'm only 26 and (to lose) both your parents — bam! bam! — just like that. I think about my future too. (My parents) will never see their grandchildren, never see me get married."

Mar had been among the victims in a 1977 robbery at the Bing Kung club, where no one was injured.

"Horse didn't think much of it," Chinn said. "He said Chinese don't ever kill Chinese."

It came as no surprise that Mrs. Mar died at her husband's side, the only woman among the Wah Mee victims.

"My mother hangs around a lot with my dad," said Ms. Mar, who sometimes speaks of her parents in the present tense. The couple traveled together to Europe, the Caribbean, mainland China and all over the United States.

The loss "devastated me," Mrs. Robertson said. "I feel like our lives have been forever tainted by this, like (the killers) have maimed us."

Baby's rights investigated

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal agency is investigating whether the civil rights of an 11-day-old baby with severe birth defects have been violated because the infant hasn't received life-prolonging surgery which her parents oppose, authorities said Saturday.

The investigation by the Office of Civil Rights of the Department of Health and Human Services apparently was triggered by complaints from pro-life groups protesting the decision by the parents, a Long Island couple identified only as "Mr. and Mrs. A."

Late Friday, a state appeals court reversed a lower judge's ruling and said non-surgical treatment on the infant, identified only as "Baby Jane Doe," was "medically appropriate" and court intervention was not needed.

'Mr. Untouchable' turns informer

NEW YORK (AP) — Leroy "Nicky" Barnes, one-time king of Harlem heroin dealers, is telling a vengeful tale of brotherhood and betrayal that could put his alleged former associates behind bars with him.

Barnes appeared near tears in federal court last week while describing his "oath of brotherhood" with six other narcotics dealers. He said they held hands and pledged to "treat my brother as I treat myself."

Barnes, 51, is now hoping the law will treat others the way it treated him. He has linked five of the trial's defendants to drug deals and murders that could result in sentences of life in prison without parole — the same term he is serving.

Betrayal is his reason. He says the defendants broke the oath, stole his money, refused to pay his legal bills and ran around with his ex-wife and ex-girlfriend after he went to jail.

Testifying as a government witness, Barnes has been especially vivid in describing how the alleged seven-man drug "council" dealt with informers like him.

HE SAID TWO were killed in a Harlem social club and their bodies dumped on a street corner not far away; another was shot in the face as he sat in the back seat of a car; yet another was shot at such close range that his clothes caught fire.

Barnes, who described eight slayings, testified that he "had no authority to dissent" when the council voted a murder.

One victim had incurred the wrath of defendant Guy Fisher and "I'd go through hell for Guy in a pair of dynamite drawers," Barnes testified. "Honor was an important commodity in the council."

Barnes said the seven narcotics dealers on the council divided their business tasks for the sake of efficiency; murder was no exception.

ONE MEMBER WAS responsible for checking with a Tuckahoe policeman to verify a suspected turncoat was an informer, he said.

The ex-officer, Elmer Morris Jr., is among the eight men on trial at U.S. District Court in Manhattan. The defendants include five alleged council members — Fisher, Frank James, Wallace Rice, Thomas Forman and Ishmael Mohammed — charged with operating a continuing criminal enterprise, the charge Barnes was convicted of in 1977.

Three alleged associates — Morris, James Wheelings and Kenneth Thomas — are charged with racketeering conspiracy, punishable by up to 20 years in prison. Joseph "Jazz" Hayden, said to have been another council member, was convicted along with Barnes.

Barnes said sometimes suspicion was enough for the council to reach the unanimous vote required for "termination": An associate was killed because he acquired a drug habit, making him a weak link.

THE COUNCIL divided up other jobs — buying "cut" to dilute heroin, getting lawyers, finding cocaine, investing in real estate — but Barnes said he was the heroin connection.

Barnes has admitted putting half a ton of heroin on the streets of New York before he was convicted.

Heroin allowed him to keep a Mercedes-Benz in his fleet of five cars and shower his girlfriends with finery. And it gave the former heroin addict a nickname: "Mr. Untouchable."

But Barnes now says he's broke. The indictment says the gang schemed to murder him after his cooperation became known.

Vengeance is Barnes' explanation for becoming an informer.

HE SAID SOME OF his "brothers" violated the oath by sleeping with his girlfriends after he went to jail. He said Thelma Grant, mother of his two children, stole money and jewels he entrusted in her name.

Miss Grant was one of the first to go. She pleaded guilty to drug charges after Barnes implicated her, and is serving 10 years.

The defense maintains that Barnes is hoping the hope of any common criminal, to get out of jail. Barnes claims that's a "satellite" issue, one brought up by his lawyer after a year of cooperation.

Veteran, peace worker honored for 'dedication'

CHICAGO (AP) — The Soviet ambassador to the United States sent a telegram Saturday to the family of a Chicago cab driver and World War II veteran who "dedicated his life" to world peace.

Joseph Polowsky, who died of cancer Monday, asked that his body be buried at Torgau, East Germany, the site where the U.S. and Soviet forces met in April 1945. He said he hoped the act would advance peace between the Soviet Union and the United States.

Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin conveyed his country's condolences and said that Polowsky "was widely known in our country as an active participant in the common struggles of the Soviet and American peoples against fascism ... and a man devoted to ... understanding between our two countries.

"He was really a soldier of war and a soldier of peace," the telegram concluded.

Polowsky's efforts to commemorate April 25 — the day the U.S. Army met its Soviet allies in the final push to the Nazi capital of Berlin — began the day he got out of the service.

Syria threatens to fire rockets at U.S. ships, planes in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's government Saturday threatened to fire its rockets at Lebanon-based U.S. ships and planes because of what it called President Reagan's desire to "terrorize Syria."

The threat in the Syrian government newspaper Tishrin came as Syrian-backed Druse gunners shelled and sniped at Lebanese army positions in the strategic mountain town of Souk el-Gharb and nearby outposts overlooking Beirut.

Shiite Moslem fighters in the Chiyah slum south of Beirut fired at Lebanese army positions near the airport but the army did not say if it would return fire.

Shootouts between Druse and Lebanese soldiers also were reported in southern Beirut near the defense lines of Israel's occupation army, forcing authorities to close major roads temporarily.

The Beirut area fighting did not affect the U.S. Marine contingent deployed at the airport, said spokesman Capt. Wayne Jones. The Marines, supported by ships from the U.S. 6th Fleet, have been in Beirut since the fall of 1982 as part of a four-nation multinational force.

Tishrin's editorial apparently was a response to Reagan's news conference last Wednesday in which he claimed Syria is an obstacle to Middle East peace. The Syrians have occupied parts of Lebanon for eight years and support the Druse militia fighting Gemayel's army and rightist Christian militiamen.

The newspaper said Syria's Soviet-made surface to air missiles "will hit any target that flies above it and will not distinguish between American and Israeli targets. So is the case for any other kind of Syrian rocket which, in its turn, will hit any vessel at sea or any other targets."

U.S. Marine Lance Cpl. Earl Thompson of Dunn, N.C., sits in his bunker manning a M-60 heavy machine gun at Charlie battery near the Beirut airport Saturday.

It referred to "Reagan's renewed threats" and said the American president "wants to terrorize Syria."

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Jack Powers said a task force heading to Lebanon with 1,600 Marines to replace the Beirut contingent was diverted to the Caribbean because of the overthrow of the government on the island nation of Grenada.

New Aquino panel sworn in MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos swore in a new panel Saturday to investigate the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, replacing the commission that resigned when its impartiality was challenged.

But the widow of the man Marcos jailed for seven years said she saw no hope for justice in the revived probe.

In ceremonies at his Malacanang palace broadcast on national television, Marcos swore in a businessman, an educator, a lawyer, a labor leader and a retired judge. The president described the Aug. 21 assassination of Aquino, his chief olitical rival, as a "national shame" and a tragedy that has given rise to "all kinds of emotions," making a thorough and impartial investigation difficult.

Opposition leaders have accused Marcos of complicity in the assassination, a charge Marcos denies.

Corazon J. Agrava, 68, retired Court of Appeals justice whom the panel members picked as their chairwoman, described the commission's task as a "most responsible, most significant and ...most terrible job."

The panel replaces a commission of former Supreme Court justices and a National Assembly member who resigned two weeks ago amid public skepticism about their impartiality.

MARCOS SAID the new investigators had been recommended by associations of lawyers, workers, businessmen, educators and other unidentified civic groups. Friday he said he would pick the panel from among the nominees.

While three Supreme Court suits questioning the impartiality of the first commission have not yet been resolved, Marcos said the new commission had to be formed as quickly as possible because "delay has a way of destroying evidence...of covering up for the guilty."

"You've got wives and mothers, too," a woman worker screams at riot police in Manilla, Philippines, Saturday. The police used shields and wooden truncheons to break up about 300 workers picketing the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co.

Aquino was shot to death while under heavy guard at Manila's airport on his return from three years' self-imposed exile in the United States.

Marcos has repeatedly denied opposition charges of government complicity in the assassination, claiming it was the work of communist subversives. The government has identified a man shot on the airport tarmac seconds after Aquino was killed as the assassin.

BESIDES MRS. Agrava, the other members are:

Dante Santos, 58, president of an appliance manufacturing company and head of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce; Amado C. Dizon, 74, vice president of a Manila university; Ernesto F. Herrera, 41, secretary-general of the pro-government Trade Union Congress of the Philippines; and Luciano E. Salazar, a senior partner in one of the country's oldest and biggest law firms.

Political turmoil caused by the slaying has sharpened the Philippines' economic problems. Price increases, food shortages and most recently a wave of strikes are plaguing the nation.

On Saturday, police armed with truncheons and shields broke up picketing by about 300 striking telephone company workers to allow a van to take food to non-strikers at a Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. exchange.

No strikers appeared injured by the police charge, and police left the scene shortly afterwards, taking a strike leader with them.

The telephone company workers went on strike Wednesday, demanding higher wages and protesting delays in a new collective bargaining agreement.

ABOUT 15,000 Manila public school teachers have been on strike since Thursday, and press reports said the walkouts have spread to nearby provinces.

Labor Ministry officials were continuing efforts to end a strike by more than 6,000 workers at private factories in the government's export processing zone in Bataan province across Manila Bay from the capital.

In the Manila suburb of Pasig, Aquino's widow, Corazon, told a rally by about 4,000 residents that for as long as Marcos remained president, "I don't expect to get any justice."

Many in the crowd wore shirts with the image of Aquino printed on them. They held placards calling for Marcos' resignation and broke into occasional chants of "Marcos resign."

One demonstrator held a placard which said, "Don't resign, just die."

Iraq warns tankers

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq said its gunboats mined approaches to an Iranian oil port in the northern Persian Gulf on Saturday and it warned petroleum tankers in the area to stay away.

The Iraqis also claimed their helicopter gunships bombed and strafed Iranian positions along the front and "transformed the battlefield into a huge graveyard swallowing up the enemy and damaging his equipment and weapons."

Iran said its soldiers have seized more than 430 square miles of northeast Iraq, and accused Iraqi forces of killing or wounding hundreds of civilians in missile attacks on three cities.

The rival accounts broadcast by the state-run radios of each nation were monitored in Nicosia. It was impossible to independently verify the claims because Iran and Iraq bar foreign journalists from covering the 3-year-old war.

Baghdad radio said Iraqi gunboats mined approaches to Iran's port of Bandar Khomeini in the northern Persian Gulf, 50 miles east of Iran's major oil refining center of Abadan and 100 miles north of Kharg Island, Iran's main oil export terminal.

The broadcast said the navy operation proved Iraq's ability to control movements in the area and was a warning to oil importers friendly with Iran to keep its tankers out.

Arab diplomatic sources in Bahrain said Bandar Khomeini once had an oil-export capacity of 750,000 to 1 million barrels per day. It is unclear how much oil Iran still exports from there.

Industry experts in Nicosia believe Iran exports most of its daily output of 2.4 million barrels of oil through the Kharg terminal and through the port of Bushehr, lower down the gulf coast.

Tehran radio claimed that as of Saturday night, Iranian forces had seized more than 430 square miles of territory in northeastn Iraq near the Iranian town of Marivan. It said the area had been "cleansed of the presence of followers of world oppression."

The broadcast also said Iraqi missiles slammed into Marivan, but did not report casualties. Last week, Iran launched a military offensive against Iraqi positions in the area, but Iraq has claimed it repelled all of the Iranian thrusts.

President Reagan meets with Henry Kissinger, chairman of the bipartisan commission on Central America, in the Cabinet Room of the White House Friday. Kissinger and the other members of the commission met with Reagan to report on their recent trip to the region.

Kissinger: Commission members have met with rebel leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and members of his Central American study commission have met privately here with opposition leaders from El Salvador and Nicaragua, spokesmen for the commission and the rebel groups said today.

The meetings came hours after Kissinger told reporters at the White House that a recent whirlwind visit by the entire commission to Central America convinced most members that the region's crisis is more urgent than they had previously believed.

Kissinger met late Friday with Guillermo Manuel Ungo, president of El Salvador's Revolutionarly Democratic Front, said commission spokesman Herbert Hetu.

Hetu said Kissinger and other members of the study group met today with Adolfo Calero, president of the Nicaraguan Democratic Front, one of the two major opposition groups to Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime.

Ungo is a key member of the political arm of El Salvador's revolutionary coalition and served briefly in the junta that took power after the overthrow of President Carlos Humberto Romero four years ago. Calero is a former Nicaraguan businesman and a leader of Nicaragua's Conservative Democratic Party.

After the meetings, the Salvadoran rebel group issued a statement saying Kissinger was told of its "willingess to seek a political solution to the Salvadoran conflict through a dialogue leading to negotiations between the parties involved in the conflict."

The group said it considered "the meetings useful," but declined to give any details of the discussions.

Alberto Arene, a spokesman for the Salvadoran rebel group who said he took part in Friday's meeting, added that his organization and the commission "agreed to keep in touch" in the future, but no additional meeting was set.

On Friday, Kissinger reported on the findings of the Central American trip in a private meeting with President Reagan at the White House.

Later, Kissinger told reporters that it was the impression of most members that "the situation is graver than most of us had expected."

Shultz to lecture Salvadorans on 'death squads'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz leaves Monday for El Salvador where he is expected to reassert the Reagan administration's view that continued abuses by rightist "death squads" could imperil American aid to that country.

Shultz will spend about 12 hours in El Salvador before flying to Brazil for a two-day visit that will include talks on Brazil's management of its financial crisis and on recent moves by the United States and Brazil to expand their cooperation in nuclear and military matters and in other areas.

The visit to El Salvador will be Shultz's first since he became secretary of state 15 months ago. It comes at a time of growing American concern over revived guerrilla activity in El Salvador, continued economic deterioration and an upsurge in the activities of death squads.

One U.S. official, speaking privately, said that Shultz's advisers have recommended that he use his meeting with Defense Minister Eugenio Vides Casanova to denounce in the strongest terms the growing number of execution-style killings carried out by anti-communist vigilante groups.

It was not clear how forceful Shultz will be in the meeting because his instinct is to be low-key and non-confrontational, said the official, who insisted on anonymity.

There have been at least 10 killings attributed to death squads over the past five months along with numerous bombings and death threats. The groups bear such names as Secret Anti-Communist Brigade and the Maximiliano Hernandez Anti-Communist Brigade. They are widely believed to be composed of moonlighting soldiers and security officers.

A U.S. official who briefed reporters on Friday said Shultz will tell the Salvadoran leadership that public and congressional support for El Salvador in the United States depends on improved human rights performance.

In addition to Vides Casanova, Shultz also plans discussions with President Alvaro Magana and with leaders of the various political parties.

The latter meeting is expected to be attended by Roberto D'Aubuisson, the rightist Constituent Assembly president who recently angered U.S. officials by suggesting that a prominent Salvadoran labor leader, Samuel Maldonado, had guerrilla connections. In El Salvador, such allegations often are regarded as death threats.

The State Department looks on Maldonado as a moderate and a key supporter of the land reform program. Shultz is expected to press for continued implementation of that program.

Thousands of Basques march to protest separatist terrorism

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — An estimated 75,000 people marched in this capital of the restive Basque country Saturday to protest separatist terrorism that has taken 39 lives this year. Most of those slain have been policemen and soldiers.

A few hours before the demonstration started, bombs exploded at two banks near Bilbao, causing damage but no casualties. Police said they suspected the Basque separatist organization ETA was responsible.

The demonstration in Bilbao was backed by all political parties except Harri Batasuna, which many see as the political branch of ETA. ETA has been blamed for more than 400 assassinations since it first emerged in 1968.

Mugabe commissions train

KWEKWE, Zimbabwe (AP) — With the snip of a ribbon, Prime Minister Robert Mugabe commissioned his country's first electric passenger train Saturday at a ceremony in the central town of Gweru.

Mugabe, cheered by politicians, diplomats and other dignitaries, was one of the first passengers on the 19-car train that will shuttle between Gweru and the Zimbabwe capital Harare 200 miles away.

Tribal dancers and drummers met the train shortly after it pulled into its first stop, the central town of Kwekwe.

Khmer Rouge claim 514 killed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Khmer Rouge guerrillas claimed Saturday that they killed 514 Vietnamese troops occupying Cambodia and lost 88 of their own fighters in the first nine months of the year.

The group's latest bulletin, distributed in Bangkok, said that in more than 700 forays deep inside Cambodian territory, Khmer Rouge guerrillas also wounded 94 Vietnamese troops and seized 107 weapons.

Government considers evacuation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The evacuation of the 1,000 U.S. citizens on the Caribbean island of Grenada is under consideration due to the "unstable" situation following last week's violent coup but no decisions have been made, the State Department said Saturday.

U.S. concerns were eased somewhat when Grenada's new military regime gave permission for U.S. consular officials to visit the island nation in the southeastern Caribbean off Venezuela to meet with Americans and to help those who may wish to leave.

But the department said concern over the safety of Americans remains high.

The aircraft carrier USS Independence and a flotilla of ships are on their way toward the coast of Grenada, and Pentagon sources said they would stand by off Grenada in case Americans have to be evacuated.

"We remain seriously concerned about the safety of U.S. citizens and are continuing to monitor the situation closely," said Brian Carlson, a State Department spokesman.

"In situations of this type plans for an evacuation are always under consideration," Carlson said. "But we have nothing specific to offer you at this time."

The army junta which seized control of the island on Wednesday, killing Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and several members of his cabinet, has ordered the nation's population of about 100,000 to stay in their homes or be shot.

Carlson said that while the 24-hour curfew imposed by the instigators of the coup remains in effect, no reports of additional violence have been received.

"We have no reports that American citizens have been harmed although the situation remains unstable," Carlson said.

The United States maintains diplomatic ties with Grenada but has no permament representation on the island which, with 133 square miles, is about twice the size of the District of Columbia.

Consular services normally are provided from the U.S. Embassy in Bridgetown, Barbados, about 180 miles to the north.

Consular officials have been urgently seeking permission to visit Grenada since the coup on Wednesday.

"We have finally received permission from the authorities there for two counsular officials from Bridgetown to visit Grenada today to meet with U.S. citizens and assist those who wish to depart," Carlson said.

Soviets prepare to turn on the gas for Western Europe

News Special

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

POMARY, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The glistening electronic control panels are labeled "General Electric." Nearby, a pumping station is ready to start relaying Siberian natural gas to homes and factories of Western Europe with U.S.-designed turbines shipped to this remote Tatar village in defiance of President Reagan's embargo.

Although problems with other stations still remain, Soviet and foreign experts predict that the controversial Siberian pipeline will start gas deliveries to West Germany and France on schedule in January. Switzerland and Austria are slated to go on line next. Italy is negotiating to do so.

President Reagan ordered the embargo of American equipment in 1981 in response to the imposition of martial law in Poland and pipeline officials admit it had some success.

But on the muddy banks of the mighty Volga River, Japanese and Italian pipelaying equipment and bulldozers are at work in place of American equipment.

SPECIALISTS FROM Italy, West Germany, Finland and other Western nations are working on compressor stations to pump gas from the snowbound fields of Urengoi to the western border town of Uzhgorod, the two terminal points of the line in the Soviet Union.

The General Electric and other U.S.-designed equipment was shipped to the Soviet Union by U.S.-licensed firms in Western Europe which did not consider themselves bound by Reagan's embargo.

"The Soviets have done a helluva job," said a Western businessman. "It was complicated by the embargo, sure, but give the people credit for doing what they did. They're going to deliver the gas, bet on it."

The only question is whether the gas will flow through the Urengoi-Uzhgorod line, or elsewhere in the Soviet network of hundreds of thousands of miles of interconnected internal pipelines.

That question won't be answered until the valves are opened on the Czechoslovakian border and the Soviet Union begins delivering about 115.5 billion cubic feet of gas ordered for 1984 by France and West Germany.

ALL OF the European contracts would amount to peak deliveries of about 700 billion cubic feet of gas in 1990, unless the buyers exercise built-in 20 percent annual reduction options.

The gas will supplement current Soviet natural gas sales to the West that totalled some 910 billion cubic feet — about $3.8 billion worth — last year.

Boris Shcherbina, the Soviet minister of construction of petroleum and gas industry enterprises, has vowed to meet the new commitments in January, and a half-dozen officials and builders interviewed at worksites near here, the midpoint of the pipeline, also were confident the gas would flow in January.

Meanwhile, the Soviets this past summer announced completion of the pipeline itself — 2,759 miles of 53-inch pipe that crosses 800 waterways and the Ural Mountains, and cuts through marshes, ricefields and forests of pine and birch.

The huge project was finished in a year, six months ahead of plan.

Another, equally difficult task remains, however — building 41 compressor stations, each with three massive 25-megawatt turbines, every 60 miles or so along the line.

TWENTY STATIONS, now in various stages of construction, are supposed to be finished this year — enough for the first year's contract commitments.

Western experts are skeptical that 20 stations can be finished by January.

So far, only the No. 22 station here at Pomary is operating and two others — the No. 2 and the No 3 — are mentioned in press reports as being close to completion.

A Western engineer working at the Shamordan station about 200 miles west of Pomary said the station is only 20 percent complete and probably won't be ready for its scheduled start-up Dec. 24. He said other nearby stations that are to use Soviet-made 25-megawatt turbines are in similar condition.

The Western engineer, who requested anonymity, claimed the Soviets ordered their own equipment installed first although stations with U.S.-designed equipment are farther along.

Europeans don't want missiles

LONDON (AP) — Public opinion polls indicate the people of Western Europe are uncomfortable at the prospect of having U.S. missiles in their countries even though their governments have agreed to accept the new nuclear arsenals.

Recent surveys in Britain, Italy, West Germany and the Netherlands reveal that none of the countries has a majority in favor of installing the 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles.

In Britain, the public tends to blame the United States and the Soviet Union equally for what it perceives as a new nuclear arms race.

PUBLIC opposition to the missiles has run high through the four-year period since NATO decided to place new intermediate-range missiles in Europe to counter Moscow's new SS-20 rockets starting in December.

A poll published Saturday in Britain as anti-missile demonstrations were held across Europe showed public opposition to the missiles was dropping, but opponents still outnumbered those who favor the missiles.

The nine-question survey of 1,473 Britons, published by the Guardian newspaper, was conducted by the Marplan polling firm.

A POLL last January indicated 61 percent of those questioned disapproved of the missiles and 27 percent favored them. Twelve percent said they didn't know. The latest poll shows 48 percent disapproving, 37 percent approving and 15 percent saying they don't know.

In the same period the British strengthened their approval of Britain's nuclear force. In January, 72 percent favored keeping or improving the nuclear force, and now 77 percent favor it, the polls show. In January, 21 percent wanted to abandon the force, compared with 16 percent now.

THE first U.S. missiles are to be installed by the end of 1983 if arms-control negotiations are not successful. Britain, West Germany and Italy are to get the first missiles, with Belgium and the Netherlands receiving missiles later in the planned five-year deployment.

In the Netherlands, four successive governments have delayed answering the politically explosive question of whether to accept the missiles. An October poll conducted by the commercial firm NSS showed that 56 percent of the Dutch opposed the missiles and only 26 percent favored accepting them. The remainder, 18 percent, were undecided.

A poll of 2,000 Italians conducted by the Makno survey firm showed 58.1 percent opposing the missiles with 14.3 percent in favor. However, if Italy were in control of the missiles 18.7 percent said they would favor them.

In West Germany, polls consistently find more people oppose the missiles than favor them. A survey of 2,033 people published last week by the Institute of Demographics in Allensbach found 40 percent oppose deployment and 31 percent favor it.

Texas ends SMU's unbeaten string, 15-12

A modern day Shakespeare classic

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

IRVING — Even though the setting was Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas' 15-12 victory over Southern Methodist before 63,805 fans Saturday was a classic right out of Shakespeare.

It could easily have been the Globe Theater in Stratford-On-Avon. Either the Globe or Texas Stadium could have fooled anybody. Afterall, they both have holes in their roofs.

It started out like one of the Bard's lighter vehicles, a Comedy Of Errors or Much Ado About Nothing. It wound up a classic in a more proper sense, like a Macbeth or Hamlet.

The first half was hilarious. Between them, the No. 2 Longhorns and No. 9 Mustangs fumbled 10 times, eight of them changing hands, and then there were two interceptions. That's 10 turnovers.

All they could manage out of this glut of opportunites were matching field goals for a 6-6 halftime tie. Jeff Harrell kicked 25 and 42 yarders for SMU and Jeff Ward toed 52 and 45 yarders for Texas.

THE GAME boiled down to the last period when Texas drove 62 yards in 12 resolute plays against a fading SMU defense to score on a seven-yard pass. It went from quarterback Todd Dodge who spelled starter Rob Moerschell when the Longhorn offense developed a severe case of the stutters, and it went to flanker Bill Boy Bryant.

It gave Texas a 13-6 lead with 6:59 left and it looked like the game was over. SMU's spent offense was a study in futility in the second half and had been out first-downed 18-4 and outgained on offense something like 300 yards to 100. Obviously, the unbeaten Mustangs had nothing left.

Somehow, however, SMU mustered a magnificent 80-yard drive in nine plays. Going for short yardage on fourth and one on the Texas 16, Reggie Dupard bounced outside left tackle and abruptly found himself all alone. The touchdown came with 2:47 left in the game and Coach Bobby Collins, perhaps remembering how going for a tie against Arkansas last year guaranteed a Cotton Bowl bid, but cost it a No. 1 ranking, went for two and the victory.

Quarterback Lance McIlhenny's hurried pass was drilled into the turf at Dupard's feet as he attempted to throw while fleeing a strong Texas rush.

SMU's desperate bid had failed and all that was left was for the Horns to tack on a safety as McIlhenny tried to pass out of his own end zone with SMU facing the length and with only a minute left to cover it in.

"We had not moved the ball well," Collins analyzed his decision to go for two, "and we had the opportunity to go ahead. It was a different situation than the Arkansas game last year. A tie in that one gave us the SWC championship and the Cotton Bowl bid.

"We needed the win. Those were the toughest three yards in the game against the best defense in the nation. We flooded the zone and sent Rick Bolden across the grain, but Lance was forced wide and didn't see Bolden who was wide open."

SMU'S LATE drive was a source of wonder to some spectators, but to Dupard it just demonstrated "the character of the team. After Texas scored, we got together and said 'we've got to have it. It's not over yet.' Our offensive line came through. Texas is good, but it's not like they can't be run on. I thought we could run more than we did."

Except for the two long drives in the final period, it was, as Coach Fred Akers put it, "an absolute street fight."

The loss was SMU's first in 22 games, ending the longest unbeaten string in the nation. Texas' touchdown came on a pass which means the Mustangs still haven't surrendered a rushging touchdown this year.

The Texas win also extends for two more years its domination of SMU in Dallas. SMU hasn't beaten Texas here since 1965.

Ward's 52-yard field goal is his longest.

"I don't remember much about the 42-yarder," he said. "I was face down on the turf and just heard the yelling. We barely got that one off ahead of the 25-second clock."

The win was Texas' sixth of the season and keeps the Longhorns in the chase after No. 1 Nebraska and it also puts the Steers in the driver's seat for the host Cotton Bowl berth if they can get by Texas Tech, the only other unbeaten team in Southwest Conference play this year.

Tulsa embarrasses Texas Tech, 59-20

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Losing to UT once a year is shame enough for Texas Tech, but the Red Raiders are now in position to lose to UT on-back-to-back weekends.

Tech was murdered by UT here Saturday night by a whopping 59-20 haymaker to the head, but this UT was the University of Tulsa. What will happen when the Raiders face the real UT — as in Austin's Longhorns — next weekend? Murder would seem to be a kind description.

Tulsa is no UT Longhorn — as in No. 2 in the nation — but you couldn't tell the Texas Tech defense that Saturday. This UT — as in Golden Hurricane — poured out 455 yards total offense against the once proud Raider defensive unit. They crossed Tech's goal so many times that a census taker couldn't keep count.

"It just seemed like the dam broke," said Texas Tech coach Jerry Moore. "We weren't looking ahead to Texas. I don't think there was a player or coach on this team that did not know what kind of ball club Tulsa had. They just came out and hit us. They were by far the best team we have played this year."

In addition to the massive yardage rolled up by the Hurricanes before a horrified crowd of 34,002, add in seven more offensive turnovers by the Red Raiders, raising their world-leading mark to 18 turnovers in their last three games.

Tulsa was paced by two Texas natives. Gladewater's Michael Gunter had 132 yards rushing on 22 carries to go with three touchdowns while Bay City sophomore Bobby Booker had 46 yards with his four touchdowns, three of which came in the fourth quarter.

No. 2 Sadri, No. 10 Fillol advance to USTA finals

Phil Lehnhoff reacts to his loss to Alvaro Fillol in the semi-finals of the USTA tennis tournament Saturday at Midland College. Fillol won the match, 6-7, 7-6, 7-6.

Postal Service motto perfect for tournament

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The USTA's Texas American Bank Masters Classic, in Midland this week for a professional circuit stop, may be considering adopting the Postal Service motto.

You know the one..."neither rain, nor snow, nor gloom..."

Weather, winds, upsets and the rest have been prevalent, but after Saturday's play only two singles players are left, with an equal amount of doubles teams.

Today, only the strong will survive. The singles final pits the top remaining seed, number two John Sadri, against 10th-seeded Alvaro Fillol. The singles finals will be held at 1 p.m. at the Midland Racquet Club.

In doubles play, Paul Kronk and Howard Sands knocked off Jai DiLouie and Rocky Vazquez 6-4, 6-3 to move into the finals. The doubles match begins at 3 p.m., and fourth-seeded Kronk-Sands will face fifth seeds Randy Nixon and Walter Redondo.

Nixon-Redondo advanced with a 7-6, 7-6 nipping of Tom Csipkay and Bud Cox.

IN THE singles semifinals, Sadri and Fillol had their hands full before claiming the respective matches.

Sadri, of Charlotte, North Carolina, eked out a 7-6, 6-4 win over eighth-seeded Nixon. After barely taking the first set in a tiebreaker, Sadri found himself down a service break at 2-4 in the second set.

Nixon had a chance to make it tough on Sadri, but blew an easy kill shot to start his slide. Nixon lost his advantage, as Sadri broke him back to make it 4-3 Nixon.

Sadri held service, and Nixon seemingly hit a cold spell, losing aggressiveness as Sadri improved. Sadri then broke Nixon again for his third straight game and a 5-4 lead. Sadri disposed of Nixon with his serve, and moved into today's championship round.

"I'm feeling pretty good," Sadri said afterwards. "I'm getting my consistency back." Sadri's critical break in the seventh game of the second set wasn't lost in the scheme of the match. "It took the wind out of him."

Fillol, of Santiago, Chile, outlasted fourth seed Phil Lehnhoff in a marathon match, 6-7, 7-6, 7-6. The match was a classic pairing of two players that like to serve and volley for points.

Lehnhoff appeared to have things well in hand, while Fillol looked lost early in the first set. Lehnhoff jumped out to a 4-1 lead in the set before doing a nose dive. Fillol held service, as did Lehnhoff, acing Fillol to gain a seemingly insurmountable 5-2 advantage.

Then the bottom dropped out. Fillol, whose backhand was awesome, began heating up. He held service, then broke Lehnhoff, rallying to tie the set at 5-5 and then 6-6. In the tiebreaker, Lehnhoff regained his composure in time to win 7-2 and claim the set.

But Fillol's backhand was brilliant and repeatedly hurt Lehnhoff. In all, Fillol hit 28 backhand winners in the match, nine in the final set.

There were no service breaks in the middle set, a give-and-take struggle that was absolutely even. In fact, except for Fillol's clutch points, this match was a deadlock. Fillol won it in the tiebreak, 7-4.

THE DECIDING set went much the same way as the first two, with neither player gaining a clear advantage. In the tiebreaker, Fillol changed it up a bit, using just the right time to surprise Lehnhoff. Fillol hit three forehand winners and a backhand to send Lehnhoff reeling en route to a 6-1 edge. Fillol won, 7-2, garnering a finals spot against Sadri.

Fillol is a native Chilean, and plans to return to Santiago Monday. His wife is expecting their first child in January, and Fillol will take a break soon from his pro career.

Chile has been having problems lately, and Fillol is aware of them. So much so that he prefers not to comment about the political situation. "I left home in March and haven't been back since," Fillol said. He smiled as he was asked about the political strife in his homeland, but was serious with his answers: "I like politics a lot, but I'd rather not talk about it." Fillol says things have a way of being heard in far away places, even as far as Santiago.

Against Sadri, Fillol is 1-1 lifetime, but lost to Sadri four weeks ago on the Texas segment preceding this tournament. "For me," said Fillol, "It will be difficult to beat him. I beat him a long time ago on clay."

Fillol does have an added incentive - he knows this will be his last pro competition for a while. He will stay in Chile until his wife delivers, and there are no pro tournaments in South America. "There's no tournaments down there, so I don't know what I'll do. Every country's broke down there."

Tulsa jumps out to 21-0 lead, never looks back

THE HURRICANES jumped to a 21-0 lead in the first half by scoring on three successive possessions with drives of 80, 48 and 49 yards. Eddie Hamilton started it with a 15-yard TD romp and was followed by Gunter's two-yard TD and Booker's 24-yard score.

By the half it was 28-7 as Gunter's 45-yard run set up his own one-yard TD. Tech managed to get on the scoreboard with a gimmick play in the first half as a reverse to wide receiver Leonard Harris worked for 32 yards to set up Jim Hart's one-yard score.

"Coming into the game I felt Tech was close to Oklahoma State defensively," said Tulsa coach John Cooper. "But this was the best offensive game we've played since I've been at Tulsa. I really don't know what happened to the Tech defense."

Tech used another gimmick to open the third period as wing back Jesse Kimbrough hit Buzz Tatom for a 20-yard pass to the Tulsa 30 and Hart later scored from three yards out to narrow the margin to 28-14.

But that was as close as Tech would ever get as Tulsa followed with 17 points before Tech's fourth-string I-back Ansel Cole, who was not listed on the depth chart, raced down the sideline for an 87-yard score. It was a thing of beauty, but there were few left in the Jones Stadium stands to see it.

Tech tried just about everything to stay in the game offensively, but nothing seemed to be enough. Two gimmick worked, but the dip to the bench for two quarterbacks to replace Hart was a disaster. Hart threw two interceptions through three quarters, but the Tech backups Kevyn Williams and Bryan Brock threw three between them in the fourth period and Tulsa took two in for scores.

TULSA IS now 5-3 on the year while Tech is 3-3, losing all three games to non-conference opponents.

"It's going to be awfully tough to rebound. I would like to think it won't affect us next week, but I know from past experience that it is awfully tough to get beat like this," said Moore.

The real joke here was that Tech is tied for the SWC lead with Texas, both at 3-0 in Southwest Conference play. But when Texas met SMU earlier Saturday, CBS announcers kept saying that the Mustang-Longhorn battle for the leadership of the SWC. No one mentioned that Tech already had three conference wins. What it all amounted to is that CBS had done its homework and was probably embarassed to mention the fact that Tech and Texas would meet next Saturday in Austin to decide that matter.

That outcome could be so brutal that the score may not be allowed to be published.

Texas A&M posts 29-10 SWC victory over Rice

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M freshman quarterback Kevin Murray threw three touchdown passes, two to Jeff Nelson, and overcame four interceptions by Rice Saturday to lead the Aggies to a 29-10 Southwest Conference football victory.

The Aggies, who have won nine of the last 10 games against the Owls, improved their record to 3-3-1 while the Owls dropped to 1-7 for the season.

It was the final home coaching appearance for Rice Coach Ray Alborn, who has announced his resignation at the end of the current season. The Owls close out the season with three road games.

The Aggies struck twice over a nine-second span of the first quarter on a three-yard touchdown pass from Murray to Jimmie Hawkins and Roger Vick's 11-yard run. The Aggies then coasted to a 20-7 halftime lead.

Hawkins's touchdown came on the Aggies' first drive of the game and after Rice's Kevin Trigg fumbled on Rice's first offensive, play linebacker Billy Cannon recovered at the Rice 11 and Vick ran in on the first play.

Baylor buries TCU, 56-21

WACO, Texas (AP) — Quarterbacks Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke each guided Baylor on 80-yard touchdown drives in the first quarter Saturday and freshman walk-on Derrick McAdoo scored three touchdowns as the Bears swamped Texas Christian 56-21 in a Southwest Conference football game.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff inserted a third quarterback, short-yardage specialist Allen Rice, behind the Bears first-team offensive line and Rice squirmed 1 yard for one touchdown and darted 5 yards for another.

Sophomore running back Ralph Stockemer subbed for Baylor's leading career scorer, Alfred Anderson, and ran 13 times for 111 yards in the first quarter. Anderson rested a sprained ankle.

Stockemer scored an 8-yard run early in the second period and also grabbed a Muecke pass and ran 7 yards for a third-quarter score.

Stockemer finished with 149 yards on 25 carries. McAdoo had touchdown runs of 3 and 1 yards and caught an 11-yard pass from Muecke.

Two penalties were instrumental in Baylor building a 35-7 haltime lead, which was never seriously challenged.

With the score 14-0 in Baylor's favor, a clipping penalty eraced a 27-yard pass to the Baylor 4 yard-line, and Texas Christian had to punt.

On Stockemer's touchdown run for a 21-0 Baylor lead, Texas Christian was penalized 15 yards for unsportsman-like conduct, and the penalty enabled Baylor to kick off from the Texas Christian 45. Jim Mueller kicked a bouncer that Baylor defensive back Aaron Grant recovered at the TCU 9 and Baylor scored in two plays on Rice's 5-yard run.

Another clipping penalty against TCU wiped out an apparent 91-yard punt return for a touchdown by John Thomas.

The victory raised Baylor's season record to 4-2-1. The Bears are 2-2-1 in the SWC. The Frogs fell to 1-5-1 and 1-3.

McADOO, A 5-9, 173-pounder from Houston Northwest Academy, scored on Baylor's first possession from the Texas Christian 3 on his first college carry 2:16 into the game. Carlson had completions of 21 and 36 yards in that drive.

Muecke directed Baylor on its next possession, which Rice finished off by twisting over from the 1. The big gainer was Stockemer's 35-yard run.

Texas Christian trailed 28-0 before scoring its first touchdown on a 1-yard run by quarterback Anthony Gulley. The Horned Frogs added two second-half scores on a four-yard run by freshman James Calhoun and a 6-yard pass from Gulley to running back Egypt Allen with 2:10 left in the game.

Outside of that, Lee was unsuccessful.

A "breakaway switch" automatically applies the trailer brakes in the event of an accidental separation of tow vehicle from the trailer tongue and operates off an auxiliary battery carried on the trailer. In the event of separation, a cable attached to the tow vehicle pulls a plunger from the switch. When contacts in the switch close, full battery power is applied to the trailer brakes. A breakaway switch is NOT to be used as a parking brake! If you are looking for safety tips in operating your R.V. feel free to come in and ask. Wolves' Bergeron beats Iowa with late field goal

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's Bob Bergeron booted a 45-yard field goal with eight seconds remaining to give the 10th-ranked Wolverines a 16-13 Big Ten football victory over No. 12 Iowa Saturday.

The victory left Michigan with a 6-1 season record and kept the Wolverines undefeated with a 5-0 conference record, while the Hawkeyes fell to 5-2 and 3-2 in the Big Ten.

The Wolverines' winning field goal was set up when linebacker Rodney Lyles recovered a fumble by Iowa's Owen Gill at the Michigan 29-yard line. The Wolverines moved 43 yards in seven plays and had a third-and-three situation at the Iowa 28 when Bergeron made good in his third field goal of the game.

The Hawkeyes began a courageous comeback with a fake field goal. Reserve quarterback Tom Grogan picked up the ball and flipped a 3-yard TD pass to Lon Olejniczak, who caught the ball over linebacker Mike Mallory in the right corner of the end zone to pull Iowa to within 13-10.

Michigan's Gerald White fumbled the ensuing kickoff and Joe Schuster recovered for Iowa. Six plays later, Tom Nichol booted a 27-yard field goal to tie the game 13-13.

Bergeron booted field goals of 37 and 20 yards in the first half and Nichol boomed a 56-yarder, setting a school record, as the Wolverines led 6-3 at halftime.

Buckeyes defeat Spartans

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Quarterback Jim Karsatos, making his first college football start, passed for one touchdown Saturday and led 17th-ranked Ohio State to a 21-11 victory over Michigan State in a game played in the rain.

Karsatos, a red-shirt freshman, threw 39 yards to tight end John Frank in the second quarter to give the Buckeyes a 14-3 halftime lead.

Karsatos, filling in for injured regular Mike Tomczak, completed nine of 16 passes for 170 yards, all but seven of them coming in the opening half.

An Ohio Stadium sellout crowd of 89,104 sat through rain the entire game and saw the Buckeyes push their overall record to 5-2 and their league mark to 3-2. Michigan State fell to 2-4-1 overall and 0-4-1 in the Big Ten.

Terps thrash Duke, 38-3

COLLEGE PARK, Md.(AP) — Rick Badanjek scored two touchdowns from the 1-yard line and Boomer Esiason passed for another score as 15th-ranked Maryland thrashed winless Duke 38-3.

Badanjek's first-quarter TD helped Maryland to a 17-3 halftime lead. He and Joe Brkovich scored on 1-yard runs in the fourth period.

Esiason, whose second pass was intercepted, finished with 13 of 21 for 198 yards in the Atlantic Coast Conference mismatch. He tossed a 24-yard scoring pass to Greg Hill in the third period.

The Terps now are 6-1 overall with a 3-0 record in the ACC. Duke, which has allowed 243 points this season, has suffered two of its seven losses in league play.

Huskers skin Buffalos, 69-19

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Mike Rozier and Irving Fryar each scored two touchdowns in a conference-record third period scoring burst as top-ranked Nebraska overcame a sluggish first half to post a 69-19 homecoming victory over Colorado in a Big Eight football game.

The Cornhuskers led Colorado just 14-12 at the half. But Nebraska scored a Big Eight record 48 points in the third period, and shut down the Buffalo passing attack that had worked in the first half.

Nebraska's 55 second-half points set a Big Eight record, surpassing the 48 points scored by Oklahoma against Colorado in 1980. The Husker total was the most ever scored in Memorial Stadium, surpassing the 68 scored against New Mexico in 1982.

Wisconsin routs Indiana

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Randy Wright passed for 199 yards and 4 touchdowns and Gary Ellerson ran for 136 yards and two scores as Wisconsin crushed Indiana 45-14 in a Big Ten game.

Wright, who completed 12 of 19 passes, became the Badgers' all-time passing yardage leader with 3,783 yards, breaking the record Neil Graff set from 1969-1971.

Wisconsin is now 5-2 overall and 3-2 in conference play while Indiana fell to 3-4 and 2-3.

Irish win fourth straight

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Allen Pinkett ripped off three touchdown runs and Notre Dame's green-clad Irish rolled to their fourth straight victory with a 27-6 triumph over struggling Southern California.

Pinkett scored on runs of 11, 9 and 11 yards and Mike Johnston added field goals of 30 and 39 yards as the Irish ended Southern Cal's five-game winning streak in this classic intersectional rivalry.

Notre Dame, wearing green jerseys for the first time under Coach Gerry Faust, boosted its record to 5-2 while Southern Cal fell to 2-4-1.

Beverly paces Illini, 35-21

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Dwight Beverly rushed for a career-best 179 yards and scored three second-half touchdowns Saturday, offsetting Purdue's passing attack and leading 11th-ranked Illinois to a 35-21 Big Ten Conference football victory.

The triumph lifted Illinois to 6-1 for the season and kept the Illini tied with Michigan for first place in the conference at 5-0 going into the two co-leaders' matchup next week at Champaign.

The loss dropped Purdue to 1-3-1 in the Big Ten and 1-5-1 for all games.

Missouri smashes Jayhawks

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Junior Marion Adler tossed two touchdown passes in the opening half and dashed 5 yards to score in the third period, leading Missouri to a 38-0 triumph Saturday over Big Eight rival Kansas State.

Adler, before retiring for the day with more than 16 minutes left, riddled K-State's inept defense for gains totaling 221 yards. The Missouri leader made good on 13 of 17 attempts to highlight a rain-drenched Tiger homecoming.

Missouri, stalled in the opening quarter by an Adler fumble at the 7 of Kansas State, erupted for 21 points in the second period.

Adler first found tight end Greg Krahl on an 18-yard play to cap a 62-yard parade. The Tiger passer next hooked up with George Shorthose from the 11 of K-State and afterward set up a 1-yard scoring dive by Eric Drain with a 25-yard completion.

It was the second-best collegiate passing performance for the 6-foot Tiger quarterback, exceeded only by his 232 yards in 1982 against Army.

Missouri, while maintaining a pattern of winning every other week, scored late in the third quarter on Adler's run and a 37-yard field goal by Brad Burditt and added an insurance touchdown on a sneak of 1 yard by backup quarterback Warren Seitz with 2:35 remaining. The outcome left the Tigers with a 4-3 overall record, improving their mark in the Big Eight to 2-1.

Anderson, who went over the century mark for the sixth time in his college football career, ran 3 yards for a score late in the second quarter. His 6-yard burst in the final period snapped a 17-17 tie before a rain-drenched homecoming crowd of 73,943.

Anderson amassed his rushing total on 23 carries, and teammate John L. Williams ran for 119 yards on 17 attempts to help the 6-0-1 Gators remain unbeaten through seven games for the first time since 1966.

Georgia is 6-0-1 overall and 4-0 in the SEC while Kentucky fell to 5-2 and 1-2.

VMI doubles Bucs, 24-12

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Freshman tailback Trent Bridges rushed for 82 yards and scored two touchdowns to lead Virginia Military's previously winless Keydets to a 24-12 Southern Conference football victory Saturday over East Tennessee State's Buccaneers.

The victory was the Keydets' first of the season after six stragiht defeats and broke a two-year, seven-game losing streak. VMI is 1-3 in the conference. East Tennessee fell to 0-4 in the league and 2-5 overall.

Deacons stop Cavs' rally

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Gary Schofield's 16-yard touchdown pass to Tim Ryan with 14:19 left broke a Virginia rally and gave the Demon Deacons a 38-34 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over the Cavaliers.

Virginia's last chance to avoid defeat came when Harry Newsome's punt was partially deflected by Lester Lyles and went 18 yards. Tailback Derek Jenkins gained 15 yards on a draw play to the Demon Deacon 22. After an incomplete pass, Jenkins fumbled the handoff from quarterback Wayne Schuchts and Randall Singleton fell on it for Wake Forest.

The victory marked Wake Forest's first ACC triumph in 13 games. Their last conference triumph was a victory over Virginia in Charlottesville in 1981.

Interception saves Ole Miss

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi Safety Eric Truitt intercepted a pass in the end zone with six seconds left Saturday, preserving the Rebels' 21-14 victory over the Vanderbilt Commodores in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Truitt intercepted off backup quarterback Mark Wracher, a freshman whose passes drove the Commodores from their 20 to the one in the dying moments. The theft came after Vanderbilt suffered a 5-yard delay of game penalty to the six.

The big play in the last-ditch drive was a 44-yard pass from Wracher to tight end Chuck Scott to the one.

Tyrone Foster had a 57-yard run and Gary Gayle caught a 61-yard pass from quarterback Andy Bell to pace Tarleton. Starting quarterback Kevin Petty hit 10 of 16 passes for 165 yards and also tossed a touchdown pass for Tarleton.

ECU outguns Texas Lutheran

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — Running backs Leon Johnson and Billy Hammon scored two touchdowns each as East Central University of Oklahoma defeated Texas Lutheran 44-35 in a nonconference college football game Saturday.

Johnson led the Tiger offense with 151 yards on 18 carries.

East Central raised its record to 5-2 on the season and Texas Lutheran fell to 4-3.

Wichita State wins close one

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Eric Denson ran for two second-half touchdowns and the winning two-point conversion with 2:17 left to lead Wichita State to a 31-30 come-from-behind victory over West Texas State Saturday.

Denson set a Wichita State single-game rushing record with 217 yards on 19 carries. He scored all of the Shockers' 18 points in the fourth quarter.

Denson reeled off touchdown runs of 55-yards in the third quarter and 56-yards in the fourth quarter to help the Shockers overcome West Texas State's 20-7 halftime lead.

David Wood of West Texas State ran 57 yards on a fake punt for a touchdown in the first half and his twin brother, Don, intercepted two passes to lead the Buffs, now 0-6-1 overall and 0-1-1 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

The Shockers, 2-6 and 2-1, threw three interceptions and lost the ball on fumbles three times in the first half.

Texas A&I nips Sam Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Chris Soza, Robbie Dueitt and James Jefferson each ran for touchdowns to lead Texas A&I to its first victory of the season, a 19-14 Lone Star Conference win over Sam Houston State in the Astrodome.

The victory snapped A&I's nine-game losing streak.

A&I, now 1-6, went ahead on Soza's 7-yard rush and took a 12-0 lead on a 14-yard scamper by Dueitt.

Sam Houston quarterback Jon Meyers led his team back with the first of his two touchdown passes to make it 12-7, but Jefferson's 5-yard plunge iced the victory.

Trinity edges SW Tennessee

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Greg Caffey scored on a 10-yard run and running back Steve Majors on a one-yard plunge as Trinity College jumped off to an early lead and held on for a 14-10 victory over Southwestern of Memphis, Tenn., Saturday night.

TIME AND MONEY

If you offered your house for sale at $2 million, it probably would never sell (or would remain on the market until inflation caught up with your price). If you asked $10 for the property, you'd have a sale before your ad ever hit the newspapers.

So you need only to search for the figure, somewhere between $10 and $2 million that will attract buyers and still bring you the most money possible. One additional point seems clear. If you can sell for $10 in five minutes and for $2 million in 20 years, it is obvious that TIME and MONEY are related in real estate sales.

If you are under no pressure at all to sell, you have the luxury of exploring the market, making some experiments with price, and accepting an offer without pressure. This procedure is likely to yield the highest price - but take the longest time.

If, on the other hand, you are working under a deadline, then a no-nonsense price, slightly under true market value, will bring immediate action.

Special teams lead Hogs to victory

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Freshman kicker Greg Horne booted three field goals and kept Houston in trouble all day with his punting as Arkansas beat the Cougars 24-3 in a Southwest Conference game.

On three occasions Horne, punting in place of quarterback Brad Taylor, punted 49 yards or more from deep in Arkansas territory. Three other times, he had punts of 43 yards or more killed inside the Houston 10. Those three led to a touchdown, a field goal and a safety for Arkansas.

Houston, which had suffered 26 turnovers in its first six games, had seven more against Arkansas, but only two produced Razorback points.

Arkansas is 2-1 in the SWC and Houston has lost four straight, the first time that has occurred since 1975. The Cougars are 1-3 in the league, their worst start since they joined the conference in 1976.

Horne kicked a 47-yard field goal on the Razorbacks' first possession. And five minutes later, Bert Zinamon, who had 14 tackles including two unassisted, hit Houston quarterback Quince Harris after Harris had made a first down. The ball popped into the air and Kevin Wyatt grabbed it off at the Arkansas 31.

After a 2-yard loss and an incomplete pass, Taylor, under a big rush, threw for Keith Kidd down the right sideline. Cornerback C.D. Byndom lost the ball and Kidd caught it at the 30. He trotted in to complete a 71-yard scoring play that made it 10-0.

Horne's 29-yard field goal made it 13-3 midway through the second quarter. Late in the period he punted 43 yards dead on the Houston 3. Robert Myers shanked a punt 19 yards and Horne's 41-yard field goal hit the crossbar and bounced over with 15 seconds left in the half.

IN THE third quarter, Horne punted 47 yards dead on the Houston 6. The Cougars made a first down before defensive end Ron Faurot, who had seven unassisted tackles, caused a Harris fumble that Ravin Caldwell recovered at the Houston 35. A 14-yard pass to Luther Franklin got the drive going and Carl Miller covered the final 8 yards in two plays to make it 22-3 with 6:15 left in the third quarter.

After Horne's 52-yard punt died at the Houston 8 and a clipping penalty set the Cougars back, Faurot caught Lionell Wilson in the end zone for a safety on the final play of the third quarter.

Four of Houston's turnovers came in the first half, but Arkansas returned the favor on two occasions. Three plays after Greg Gatson intercepted and returned it 7 yards to the Houston 21, Taylor's pass was picked off by Audrey McMillian. McMillian grabbed the ball at the 2 and weaved his way 52 yards. Seven plays later, the Cougars got a 37-yard field goal from Mike Clendenen.

ARKANSAS GOT a chance early in the second quarter when Greg Berry fell on a Houston fumble at the Cougars' 25. The Razorbacks moved to the 9 but Orsby Crenshaw hit Bobby Joe Edmonds and Greg Purcell recovered the fumble at the Houston 6.

Houston, leading the Southwest Conference in total offense, failed to make a first down on six of its first seven possessions. The Cougars came in averaging 418 yards a game, but managed only 258 against the Razorbacks.

Stanford upsets stunned Arizona, 31-22

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Freshman quarterback John Paye fired three touchdown passes as Stanford snapped a nine-game losing streak and totally dominated 19th-ranked Arizona Saturday for a stunning 31-22 upset victory.

Paye, who connected with Emile Harry for TD passes of 35 and 27 yards and Eric Mullins on a 19-yarder, finished with 280 yards on 22 completions in 28 attempts.

Stanford, 1-6 this season, began its losing streak against Arizona last year. But the Cardinal outran, outpassed and outplayed Arizona in everything this time, including fumbles.

Paye fumbled on the second play of the game and Arizona recovered on Stanford's 19-yard line. The Wildcats couldn't move the ball and settled for a 37-yard field goal by Max Zendejas.

Arizona took a 10-0 lead on its only successful drive of the first half after the Cardinal punted on the next series. Quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe threw a 30-yarder to Jay Dobyns and six plays later Vance Johnson took a pitch around right end for a 7-yard touchdown.

Mixing passes and runs, Stanford came back with a 15-play, 80-yard march, capped by Stan Gill's three-yard touchdown run, to cut the deficit to 10-7. It was Stanford's first touchdown on the ground this season.

However, Gill fumbled at his own 7 on Stanford's first play of the second period on and Arizona made it 17-7 on two runs by Johnson.

UCLA rallies to edge Cal

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Frank Cephous raced eight yards for a touchdown with 2:12 remaining Saturday to lift UCLA to a 20-16 Pacific-10 Conference football victory over California and extend the Bruins' winning streak against the Golden Bears to 12 games.

It appeared for the better part of the game at the Rose Bowl that the Bears were going to beat the Bruins for the first time since 1971, but UCLA got a 32-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Rick Neuheisel to Karl Dorrell with 5:37 remaining and then marched 54 yards in six plays for the winning touchdown.

Big play of the winning march was a 25-yard pass from Neuheisel to tight end Paul Bergmann on a fourth-and-two play from the Cal 46. Kevin Nelson then ran for 13 yards before Cephous scored the game-winner.

Huskies rout Oregon, 32-3

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Sterling Hinds rushed for 131 yards and Jeff Jaeger kicked four field goals Saturday as 14th-ranked Washington took the lead in the race to the Rose Bowl with a 32-3 Pacific 10 Conference football romp over Oregon.

A record Autzen Stadium crowd of 44,300 watched Steve Pelluer throw two touchdown passes and run 61 yards for another score. Meanwhile, the Huskies' defense stifled the Oregon offense, picking off four passes and eliminating the Duck running game.

Both teams entered the game 2-0 in the conference and Oregon was coming off back-to-back upsets over California and Arizona.

But Washington, 6-1 overall, grabbed the lead late in the first quarter and dominated the rest of the contest.

Baumberger paces UW

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Quarterback Brad Baumberger threw three scoring passes and rushed for two more touchdowns and a two-point conversion to lead Wyoming to a 49-29 victory over Colgate.

Baumberger threw touchdown passes of 54 yards, 21 yards and 7 yards and scampered into the end zone on runs of 7 and 5 yards.

The triumph evened Wyoming's record at 4-4, while Colgate's dropped to 4-3.

Idaho rips Montana, 45-24

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — University of Idaho reserve corner back Daryl Henry returned an interception 58 yards early in the fourth quarter, setting up a 14-yard touchdown pass from Ken Hobart to Ron Whittenburg to boost the Vandals to a 45-24 Big Sky Conference football win over defending champion Montana.

Montana, trailing 28-24, was driving in Idaho territory when Henry picked off a Kelly Richardson pass that had been tipped by wide receiver Bob McCauley at the Idaho 28-yard line.

Sooners destroy Cyclones

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Spencer Tillman and Earl Johnson each rushed for more than 100 yards and Scott Case returned an interception 67 yards for a touchdown Saturday, leading 16th-ranked Oklahoma to a 49-11 thrashing of Iowa State.

The Sooners rushed for 356 yards and scored on five of six first-half possessions, building a 35-3 intermission lead.

THe victory boosted Oklahoma's record to 5-2 overall and 3-0 in the Big Eight Conference. The Cyclones fell to 3-4 and 2-1.

Oklahoma St beats Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Rusty Hilger threw two touchdown passes and Ernest Anderson, the injury-plagued 1982 national rushing champion, rushed for 131 yards to lead Oklahoma State to a 27-10 victory over Kansas Saturday in Big Eight Conference college football.

Kansas lost quarterback Frank Seurer to a knee injury in the first period and was unable to do much against a tough Cowboy defense. Oklahoma State, 5-2 overall and 1-2 in the Big Eight, scored twice in the third period to take a 21-point lead.

Anderson, who has seen little action this year because of a pulled groin muscle and an ulcer, broke loose for his first touchdown of the season on a 29-yard run early in the third period.

Hoch, Stewart tie for Disney lead

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Scott Hoch scored his seventh birdie of the day in a driving rain, finished off a 6-under-par 66 and tied Payne Stewart for the third-round lead Saturday in the $400,000 Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

Stewart, who had 10 one-putts and chipped in on another hole, had to drop a 20-footer on the 18th for a 69 that enabled him to retain a share of the top spot at 202, 14 under par after one round on each of the three courses used for the first three rounds of this event.

"Now that everybody's played all three courses, we know how we stand," Stewart said Saturday.

"Tomorrow should be a lot of fun. Scott and I will be playing together in the last group. We're close friends. Our wives are close friends. It should be a lot of fun. I'm looking forward to it."

Hoch and Stewart both played their third round at the rain-drenched, 7,150-yard Magnolia course, the longest and toughest of the three courses and the site of Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

They shared a two-shot lead over Mark McCumber, T.C. Chen, Dave Barr, Morris Hatalsky and Doug Tewell, all tied at 204. Chen closed up with a 66 at the Buena Vista course. Tewell had a 70, also at Buena Vista. Hatalsky and Barr each had a 68 at the Palm course and McCumber an erratic 71, also at Palm.

"Well, at least I don't have to sleep with the lead," said McCumber, who had the top spot through the first two rounds. "I've never led four days, and I've kept that record intact."

Tied at 205, only three shots off the pace, were U.S. Open title-holder Larry Nelson, Mick Soli, European Ryder Cup player Nick Faldo, Curtis Strange and Brad Bryant. Faldo, with a 68, Bryant, with a 69, and Nelson, with a 71, all played Buena Vista. Hatalsky and Barr had a 70 at Palm and Soli 69 at Magnolia.

"With that many players that close, somebody is going to have to play very, very well to win, because you know not everybody is going to back up," Hoch said.

Defending champion Hal Sutton, who learned Friday he had been named PGA Player of the Year, rallied for a 70 but was out of title contention at 212, 10 shots back.

Stewart matched three birdies against as many bogeys over the front side, then one-putted six of the last nine greens. The most dramatic was his 20-footer for the birdie that salvaged a share of the lead on the 18th.

Brewer returns to Seniors lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Gay Brewer battled the rain and putted his way back into the lead in the $150,000 Seniors International by duplicating his opening round score of 68 at Shipyard Golf Club Saturday.

Brewer's three-day total of 211 put him one stroke ahead of Miller Barber, Friday's co-leader, and Gordon Jones. Fred Hawkins and Rod Funseth are tied at 213.

Don January is alone at 214, while Jerry Barber, Dan Sikes and Paul Harney are four strokes back at 215.

An intermittent rain compounded the ever-present winds at Shipyard's twin courses, Galleon and Clipper, but Brewer still praised the tournament site.

Cowboys after best start since '77 against Raiders

By The Associated Press

The Dallas Cowboys, shooting for their best start since the Super Bowl season of 1977, take a 7-0 record into Sunday night's game against the visiting Los Angeles Raiders, possessors of the National Football League's No. 1 defense.

The matchup brings together the NFL's two most successful teams since each was born in 1960, the Cowboys as an NFL expansion franchise, the Raiders as Oakland's entry in the new American Football League.

Since then, the Cowboys have rolled up a 209-115-6 record (which includes an 0-11-1 mark in their first year, and the Raiders have gone 208-113-11. Each team as won two Super Bowl games.

And each has won one game against the other, the Raiders beating Dallas 27-23 in 1974 on two touchdown passes by Ken Stabler and one by George Blanda, the Cowboys retaliating 19-13 six years later when Tony Dorsett rushed for 97 yards and a touchdown.

"It's a typical Raider team," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said, "rough, tough, particularly on defense." And he called Raiders tailback Marcus Allen "a class back . . . He has a knack for doing the right thing at the right time, like Dorsett does."

Allen, injured earlier this year, is 10th in the American Conference in rushing with 432 yards. Dorsett is tied with Washington's John Riggins for third in the Natinal Conference with 660 yards.

NFL

In two of Sunday's other games, Houston and Tampa Bay will try for the eighth time this year to break into the win column.

A week ago in Minnesota the Oilers lost their first game under their interum head coach, former defensive coordinator Chuck Studley. Now, with their losing streak at 14 games, they take on the visiting Kansas City Chiefs.

Tampa Bay owns the NFL record of 26 consecutive losses, set over the Bucs' first two seasons of 1976-77. This year's start is its worst since then. The Bucs broke that earlier streak by beating New Orleans, the team they host now.

In Sunday's other games, it's San Francisco at the Los Angeles Rams, Minnesota at Green Bay, Atlanta at the New York Jets, Chicago at Philadelphia, Cleveland at Cincinnati, New England at Buffalo, Detroit at Washington, Miami at Baltimore, Pittsburgh at Seattle and San Diego at Denver. On Monday night, the New York Giants visit St. Louis.

LANDRY, ASKED about the feud between his boss, Cowboys president Tex Schramm, and Al Davis, the head of the Raiders, smile and said: "Tom Flores and I get along real well." Flores is LA's coach.

Dallas had its first "easy" game of the season a week ago, falling behind 7-3 before routing Philadelphia 37-7. That, coupled with Washington's wild 48-47 loss in Green Bay last Monday night, gave the Cowboys a two-game cushion over the Redskins in the NFC's Eastern Division.

The Raiders are 5-2 and coming off their poorest performance of the year, a 38-36 loss to Seattle in which they coughed the ball up eight times (five fumbles, three interceptions). They hold a one-game lead over the Seahawks and the Denver Broncos in the AFC West.

FIRST PLACE is up for grabs in the NFC West in Los Angeles with the Rams and 49ers sharing the lead at 5-2, one game ahead of New Orleans.

Eric Dickerson, the NFL's leading rusher with 851 yards and one point behind NFL scoring leader Mark Moseley's 73 points, rolled up 142 yards and a touchdown for the Rams in their 10-7 victory over San Francisco two weeks ago.

Dickerson had a season-low 64 yards rushing in LA's 27-21 victory over Atlanta a week ago, promting Coach John Robinson to observe: "Who cares if he gets 63 or whatever as long as we get what we want . . . and control the football."

The Packers, following last Monday night's explosive game against Washington, are the No. 2 team in scoring with 209 points to Dallas' 215 — but the Pack also has given up 213 points, second only to St. Louis' 218. The Vikings own a one-game lead over Green Bay in the NFC's Central Division.

Lynn Dickey of the Packers, who threw for 387 yards and three touchdowns against the Redskins, is tied with Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski as the NFL passing leader. Bartkowski's favorite receiver, Alfred Jenkins, will have to start a new streak against the Jets as the Falcons hope to end one. Jenkins failed to make a reception for the first time in 104 games, leaving him with the fourth longest streak in NFL history. The Falcons are on a four-game slide.

The Bears-Eagles game brings together Chicagp's Willie Gault and Philadelphia's Mike Quick, who rank 1-2 in per-catch average in the NFC. Gault has a 22.8-yard average and Quick, the league's yardage leader at 750, is second in average iat 22.7. Chicago has won 17 of 22 meetings, but the Eagles have won the last two.

CLEVELAND HOPES to make it a season sweep of Cincinnati, its AFC Central rival. The Browns beat the Bengals 17-7 on Sept. 15. Running back Mike Pruitt is expected to return to action for Cleveland after sitting out last Sunday's 44-17 loss in Pittsburgh during which his replacement, rookie Boyce Green, rushed 137 yards.

The Bills have a score of sorts to settle with New England — a 30-19 loss to the Patriots on the final weekend of the strike-shortened 1982 season that put the Pats in the playoffs and kept Buffalo out of them. The Bills, with Joe Ferguson having thrown eight touchdown passes in the last two games, have charged to the top of the AFC East at 5-2.

The Lions, too, have a score to settle — a whole bundle of them, in fact. They've lost eight games in a row to the Redskins and have lost all 10 of their games in Washington, most recently a 31-7 blowout in the opening round of last season's playoffs. The Redskins' string of nine regular-season road wins ended in the wild affair in Green Bay.

Rookie Dan Marino of Miami, in his second pro start, has shot to the top of the AFC passing chart with nine touchdowns and three interceptions. Now he'll be firing against Baltimore's defense, 11th in the 14-team AFC. The Dolphins have won five in a row and 10 of their last 11 games against the Colts, who lead the league in rushing with a 176.8-yard average.

The Steelers are 5-2, first in the AFC Central Division and off to their best start since 1979, when they rolled to a 12-4 record and won the last of their four Super Bowl titles, beating the Raiders. The Seahawks, who blanked Pittsburgh 16-0 last season, are hoping to post their first 5-3 mark in the team's eight-year history. Jim Zorn, the Seattle quarterback who last week passed the 20,000-yard career passding plateau, will be facing the team which leads the NFL in sacks with 31.

The Chargers, 3-4, are off to their poorest start since 1971, when they finished at 6-8, but they have beaten the Broncos in the teams' last three meetings. San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts, as usual, leads the league in passing yardsage with 2,205 and has one of the AFC's top receivers in Todd Christensen, NO. 2 in catches (37) and No. 5 in yardage (451). Steve DeBerg has been the quarterback of record in all four of Denver's victories, coming off the bench to rescue John Elway in the first two, then chalking up the other two as the starter in place of the million-dollar rookie.

Shula jumping to USFL?

NEWARK (AP) — Donald J. Trump, the new owner of the New Jersey Generals, said Saturday that Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula wants to become the Generals' coach and added "it's merely a question of whether I want to pay a certain price."

Trump, a New York developer who purchased the United States Football League franchise last month for a reported $7.5 million, said in an interview that will be aired Sunday on CBS Sports' The NFL Today show that "one of the little obstacles" is that Shula wants an apartment in Trump Tower on New York's Fifth Avenue.

Apartments at Trump Tower range from $500,000 for a one-bedroom unit to $12 million for a triplex penthouse.

"That's something that's more valuable than money," Trump said. "That's something that really I consider gold. And I'm not sure that's necessarily going to work out.

"Don Shula would like to come. He'd like to come to New York. It's merely a question of economics," Trump added. "We'd love to have Don. If we can get him, great. If we can't get him we're going to get somebody outstanding."

Lloyd, Durie advance to DCT finals

BRIGHTON, England (AP) -Chris Evert Lloyd and Britain's Jo Durie reached the final of the $150,000 Daihatsu Challenge Tennis Tournament — along different routes Saturday.

Lloyd led 6-0, 1-0 when her opponent, 17-year-old Hungarian Andrea Temesvari, pulled out with a back injury.

Durie came from behind in both sets to edge Pam Shriver, her prospective Wightman Cup rival, 7-5, 6-4.

Temesvari sat down in tears at the side of the court after losing seven games and called for the Women's Tennis Association trainer. After a brief discussion, she told the umpire she could not continue.

Pecci clinches third place in CoN exhibition

NAPLES, Italy (AP) - Victor Pecci of Paraguay beat Sandy Mayer 7-5, 7-6 Saturday to clinch third place in the $250,000 City of Naples exhibition tennis tournament.

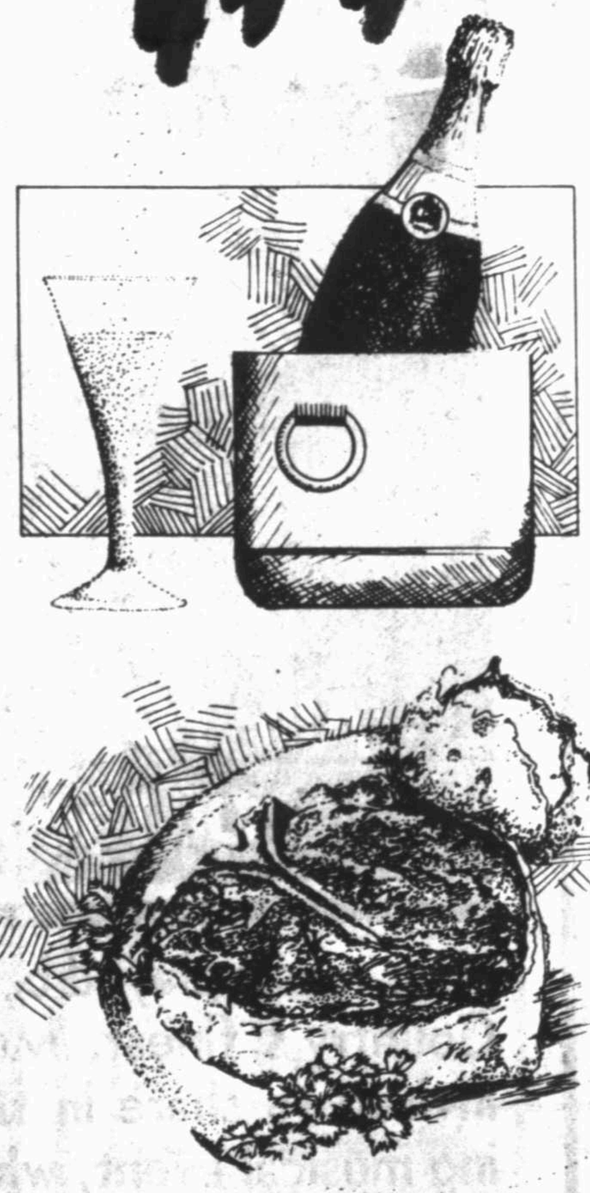

In the closely fought second set, Pecci won the tiebreaker 7-3 to take the match.

The eight-player exhibition awards a first prize of $100,000.

Penn State continues mastery over West Virginia

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Doug Strang threw for three touchdowns, ran for one and setup a field goal as unranked Penn State upset fourth-ranked West Virginia 41-23 Saturday before a record crowd of 86,309.

It was the fifth straight victory for Penn State after three season-opening losses and boosted its mastery of West Virginia to 27 victories in the last 28 years.

West Virginia last won in this series in 1955 and has only a tie in 1956 to show since.

The Mountaineers, who came into the game unbeaten in six starts, trailed from the outset when Penn State scored a touchdown on its first series.

East

The Nittany Lions built a 21-10 halftime lead as Strang connected on his first 11 passes before missing.

In the second half, West Virginia closed the gap to 21-17 on a 2-yard pass from Hostetler to Randolph. Penn State boosted it to 21-17 as Gancitano kicked a 45-yard field goal and Baugh returned a punt 57 yards for a touchdown.

Pitt downs Navy, 21-14

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A spectacular over-the-shoulder catch by tight end Bill Wallace of a 39-yard touchdown pass from quarterback John Congemi in the third quarter gave Pittsburgh a 21-14 football victory over Navy.

After taking a 21-7 lead on Wallace's reception, the Panthers held off a tenacious Middies' attack led by tailback Napoleon McCallum, who rushed for 172 yards.

McCallum, who entered the game as the nation's leading rusher with an average of more than 157 yards per game, cut Pitt's lead to seven points with a 1-yard, fourth-down touchdown plunge early in the fourth quarter.

Crusaders rip Bruins, 31-10

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Sophomore fullback Chuck Doyle scored three touchdowns to power Holy Cross to a 31-10 win over Brown and give the Crusaders their best start in 38 years.

Doyle of Nashua, N.H., scored on runs of 4, 2 and 5 yards as Holy Cross pushed its record to 6-0 for its best getaway since the 1945 season. For Brown, 2-3-1, it was the third straight loss to the Crusaders.

Harvard nips Princeton

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Greg Gizzi, a senior quarterback making his first varsity start, ran for two touchdowns and passed for another, leading injury-riddled Harvard to a 28-26 football victory over Princeton in the Ivy League.

Gizzi ignited Harvard after Princeton drove 86 yards to go ahead 7-0 on a two-yard plunge by Mike Coveny early in the second period. Within a five minute span, Gizzi raced 47 yards for a touchdown and then passed to tight end Peter Ceko for another score.

Bucknell, Columbia tie

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Al Yuknus booted a 42-yard field goal with 35 seconds left to enable Bucknell to tie Columbia 31-31 as the Lions' Larry Welch missed a 36-yard attempt on the last play of the football game Saturday.

Welch had kicked a 25-yard field goal with 1:45 remaining to give Columbia a 31-28 lead before the Bisons rallied.

Lehigh upsets Army, 13-12

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Lehigh quarterback Marty Horn bootlegged 1 yard for a touchdown with 6:41 to play, giving the Engineers a 13-12 upset victory over Army Saturday in a college football game.

Horn's touchdown capped a 54-yard drive which accounted for most of Lehigh's 101-yard total offense in the second half. It also enabled the Engineers to raise their record to 4-3 with their first triumph over the Cadets since 1893, following seven losses and one tie. Army fell to 2-5.

Texas-Arlington tears up NMSU, 28-7

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Tailback Scotty Caldwell rushed for 179 yards and a touchdown to lead Texas-Arlington to a 28-7 thrashing of New Mexico State in a non-conference contest Saturday night.

The Mavs upped their record to 4-3 on the season in winning their third game in a row and fourth in their last five. The visiting Aggies dropped to 3-5.

UTA opened scoring with a methodical 14-play, 70-yard drive after an NMSU punt. The drive appeared to be stopped at the Aggie 47 on fourth down. The Mavs showed punt formation, but Robert Brodner took the snap and went 5 yards for a UTA first down.

Seven plays later, tailback Randy Johnson went over from 3 yards out. Scott Tennison's conversion made it 7-0 with 4:18 left in the first quarter.

The Aggies returned with their only score. With 51 seconds remaining in the opening period, tailback Kim Locklin snagged a 23-yard scoring pass from Bill Ramsey.

Andy Weiler's conversion tied the game at 7-7.

The Mavs struck for two second-quarter TDs. At the 12:52 mark, freshman split end James White caught a Kraig Hopkins pass from 24 yards out for the score.

Tennison's extra point failed and the score remained 13-7. The Mavs went 79 yards on seven plays. Then after Weiler missed a 45-yard field goal for NMSU, the Mavs took over on their own 28-yard line and went 72 yards on 12 plays, capped by Hopkins on a 4-yard scoring run with 33 seconds in the half.

Hopkins threw to tight end John Dyer for the 2-point conversion as the Mavs took a 21-7 halftime advantage.

The only score of the second half came with 5:59 remaining as Caldwell scampered in from the 2. Brad Galbraith added the PAT for the Mavs in the 64-yard, 11-play drive.

UTA amassed 517 yards total offense, 367 of it on the ground.

Mesa College wins, 31-17

SILVER CITY (AP) — Quarterback Bill Monson scored on a 47-yard run and threw for another touchdown to lead defending Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference champion Mesa College to a 31-17 win over Western New Mexico University Saturday.

The victory leaves Mesa College atop the RMAC standings with a 5-0-1 record. The Mavericks are 6-0-1 overall. Western New Mexico, enjoying one of its best seasons in recent years, is now 3-1-1 in the league and 4-2-1 overall.

Monson got Mesa College out to a 24-10 halftime lead as he scored the game's opening touchdown from 47 yards out and came back with a 10-yard TD pass to James Jeffcoat in the second quarter. In between those two scores the Mavericks sandwiched a 1-yard TD plunge by Cedric Logan and a 23-yard field goal by Joe Stellavato.

Western New Mexico, which won most of the statistics, got its scoring on a 14-yard pss from quarterback Gabe Mart nez to Kenneth Allen, a 21-yard field goal by Carey Starnes and a 61-yard run by Sam Pavlinch.

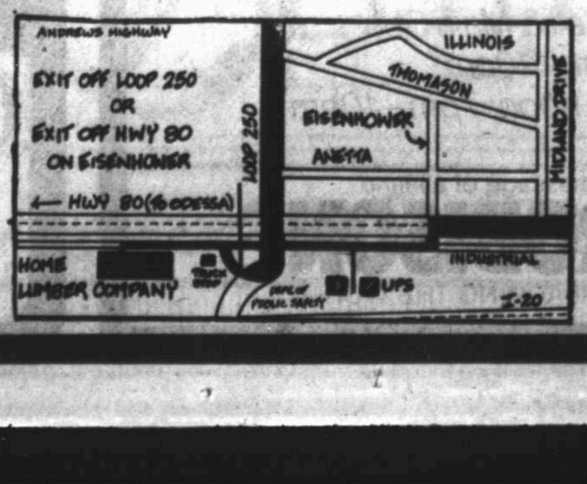

The Mustangs forced four Mesa fumbles, but could not capitalize on the turnovers. Starnes also missed a pair of field goal attempts.

From left, Dr. Donald Grant, Dr. Betty Morris, Dr. Michael Jordan and Walter Osadchuk prepare for Tuesday's 8 p.m. Brahms recital at Midland College. The free performance is being given in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium in honor of the 150th anniversary of Brahms' birthday. A public reception will follow.

Midland College faculty celebrate Brahms' birthday

The 150th anniversary of Johannes Brahms' birthday will be celebrated at Midland College Tuesday with an 8 p.m. recital by the college music faculty in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

Brahms was born in Hamburg in 1833 of poor parents. His father, who played the double bass for a living, taught him the basic elements of music. But, it was his mother, a seamstress and cook, who saw to his beginning piano lessons at the age of 7. He gave his first piano recital in 1848.

He was not widely recognized during his youth and early manhood, but, since 1880, Brahms has been generally regarded as the leading composer of romantic symphonies, concertos and chamber music. He died in 1897.

"The music written by Brahms has long been regarded by musical scholars and critics as some of the finest examples of musical genius in Western civilization," Dr. Charles Stewart, chairman of MC's fine arts division, says in a news release. "The music faculty members are excited about celebrating Brahms' birthday in this manner."

The program will include piano selections from Opus 118, performed by Dr. Betty Morris; the Sonata in F minor for Clarinet and Piano, performed by Dr. Donald Grant and Ms. Morris; the "Vier Erste Gesaenge," Opus 124, performed by vocalist Dr. Michael Jordan and Ms. Morris; and the Piano Trio, Opus 114, performed by Grant, Ms. Morris and cellist Walter Osadchuk.

A reception in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, will follow the free performance. Contributions to the Midland College Music Scholarship Fund will be accepted during the reception.

An estimated 60,000 wild horses and burros are roaming public lands, more than twice the number that specialists say can be managed effectively and supported on those lands in balance with wildlife and domestic animals.

Actor rides high with 'Eddie,' 'Big Chill'

ENTERTAINMENT

By CAROL OLTEN
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — Tom Berenger has had some miserable failures in his career, but now with leading roles in two major movies and his acting career under control, he is doing OK. Make that better than OK.

The movies are "The Big Chill," in which Berenger plays a popular TV private eye having second thoughts about his life and profession, and "Eddie and the Cruisers," in which he is cast as a former member of a rock 'n' roll group who has become an English teacher and is suddenly overcome with a severe case of deja vu. Both roles are similar in that they involve present-day characters looking back at themselves.

Both movies are building successful box-office positions after recent simultaneous openings around the country.

Berenger gazes from a window in his suite at the Plaza Hotel looking out over a serene scene in Central Park. The telephone rings. He answers. It is an old New York actor friend calling to congratulate him on his success. Berenger hangs up the telephone, beaming tiredly. He pours coffee from a silver pot and drinks up trying to keep awake after a strenuous schedule involving too many transcontinental flights. Success necessitates certain compromises, after all. Berenger is ready to do a bit of his own looking back.

"I've done four movies back-to-back in the last two years and it hasn't been easy," he begins. "A lot of what I've done in the past I've felt at the start was really going to work out, but it didn't. Studios messed up with editing, releasing and all that. But now that 'Eddie' and 'Big Chill' have come out I feel really good about what's going on."

Berenger counts "Big Chill" and "Eddie" on the plus side along with "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" in which he played the confused killer. But on the minus side are "Dogs of War," "Butch and Sundance: The Early Days" and "In Praise of Older Women." He has completed a new Italian film, "Beyond the Door" with Marcello Mastroianni and Michel Piccoli, but it has yet to be released, making him antsy.

"You know," he continues with a slight grimace, "I get involved in these things, read a script, like the part and do the movie but never know what's going to happen. But it's the way the Hollywood system operates with all these incredible casting packages and you're pretty much caught up in it if you want to work. You can't be an actor if you don't try some roles to play."

"Big Chill," however, directed by Lawrence Kasdan, produced by the new Carson Productions Group Ltd. and featuring a tight ensemble of talented actors instead of stars, was somewhat different.

"I felt guaranteed of some sort of protection that a studio wouldn't throw the movie in the toilet and use it as a tax write-off," Berenger says.

Novelist finds success as film director

By WILLIAM ARNOLD
Hearst Feature Service

There are movie directors who have given up their careers to write best-selling novels (like Elia Kazan and James Clavell). And there are best-selling novelists who have given up writing to become movie directors (like Richard Brooks). But few have successfully managed both careers at once.

One is Nicholas Meyer, the best-selling author of "The Seven Per Cent Solution" and "The West End Horror" and the director of "Time After Time" and "Star Trek II." Meyer said he had no trouble at all balancing the two careers, though the pursuits take almost opposite states of mind and he couldn't do both at the same time.

"After doing a film and being around a lot of people for an intense period of time, you long for the solitude of your study. After doing a novel, you're so damned lonely, you long to be around people. I really like going from one to the other."

Meyer, the son of a psychoanalyst and a musician, fell in love with movies as a child in the dark of the New York RKO 58th Street theater and made experimental 8mm films in high school. He also showed considerable promise as a writer.

He left home to enroll in the professional writer's program at the University of Iowa, then and now the most prestigious writing program in the country.

"It was an incredible time," he said. "Kurt Vonnegut was there. C.D.B. Bryan. John Irving was there for a while. Mary Beth Hurt was there. It was a very exciting place to be."

After college, Meyer wrote a couple of screenplays for television movies, worked as the unit publicist during the filming of "Love Story," and got a feature writing credit on a B horror movie — which he claims to have never seen — called "Invasion of the Bee Girls."

During a long Writer's Guild strike, he decided to "amuse himself" by writing a neo-Sherlock Holmes novel.

"I had always loved the Holmes stories," he said, "and was always appalled by the way they had come down to us from movies — you know, playing Watson as an idiot and taking the story out of its period. So I wanted to see if I could write a novel that would be close to the Conan Doyle conception."

After a lengthy hassle with the Conan Doyle estate, the book, "The Seven Per Cent Solution," was published and quickly became both the third biggest best seller of 1974 and a hit movie, which Meyer wrote. He followed up the book with "Target Practice," a novel which was actually published a month before "Solution," and a second neo-Holmes novel, "The West End Horror."

In 1978, Meyer wrote an original script called "Time After Time," a bizarre what-if story that had H.G. Wells going forward in time and battling Jack the Ripper on the streets of modern San Francisco. He took the script to producer Herb Jaffe, a partnership was formed and Meyer directed his first film. The film was a modest hit.

After "Time After Time," he tried to make a movie out of a Canadian novel called "Conjuring," but found no backers. Somewhat disillusioned ("I just didn't want to make any stupid movies"), he sat down and wrote another novel called "Confessions of a Homing Pigeon." After that, he languished for a while, then, on the advice of a friend, took the job of directing the second "Star Trek" movie.

"I saw it as a unique opportunity," he said. "Usually they make a sequel because the first movie was well done and made a lot of money and you want to make a second movie that is 'as good' as the first hit. But in the case of 'Star Trek,' the first movie was awful. So I saw the chance to make a sequel that was actually far better than the original."

Carson upset about publicity of divorce

Carson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson may joke about his estranged wife's request for $220,000 a month in interim support, but his lawyer says the "Tonight Show" host is upset over the surrounding publicity.

"He views the publicity...as unfortunate," Norman S. Oberstein said Friday. "I don't think that anybody, whether a public figure or not, would relish having that kind of publicity or details regarding one's personal life made known."

Oberstein said a hearing on Joanna Carson's request was postponed Friday until at least Monday, when Superior Court Commissioner Norman Pittluck was expected to rule on Oberstein's request to postpone the hearing for at least 60 days so he can prepare Carson's case.

Mrs. Carson's demand for $220,000 monthly support pending final divorce and property division included monthly payments of $37,000 for jewelry and furs, $5,000 for clothing and department store purchases, $12,000 for gifts to friends and relatives, $2,700 for travel and nearly $5,000 for household help.

In a "Tonight Show" monologue last week, Carson joked about the request, saying that he had just heard from his cat's lawyer, and that the cat wanted "$12,000 a month for Tender Vittles."

CHICAGO (AP) — Joan Collins, who portrays the villainous Alexis Colby in ABC's "Dynasty," will be featured on the cover — and will bare all inside — of December's Playboy magazine.

Ms. Collins, whose age is described in the 10-page layout as between 48 and "fiftyish," was photographed nude and in a variety of poses by veteran Hollywood photographer George Hurell and Playboy photographer Mario Casilli.

Ms. Collins "is a beautiful, exciting woman," Playboy spokesman David Salyers said.

Salyers said he didn't know how much Ms. Collins was paid for the project.

Thomas

FORT WORTH (AP) — Pop singer B.J. Thomas pleaded no contest to misdemeanor marijuana possession charges and was sentenced to one day's probation and fined $500.

State District Judge Frank Coffey on Thursday granted Thomas deferred adjudication, meaning that no criminal offense would appear on his record unless he violated his probation Friday.

The pot was found in Thomas' Arlington home June 30. Possession of 2 to 4 ounces of marijuana is a Class A misdemeanor.

Coffey said he saw "nothing unusual" in the sentence, but considered the fine "a little heavy."

Assistant District Attorney Joe Drago said the abbreviated probation was "an agreed-on deal" between prosecutors and Thomas' lawyer so that no charge would appear on his record.

He said the probation period was "a little unusual" since average probation in cases similar to Thomas' is three to six months.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chuck Yeager, the first pilot to break the sound barrier, said the portrayal of him by actor Sam Shepard was "fabulous" in "The Right Stuff," the movie about the beginning of the U.S. space program.

"We both drive pickup trucks, ride, rope calves and hunt and fish," Yeager said Thursday night after he received a hero's welcome at the Los Angeles premiere of the film.

Also attending the premiere were astronauts Gordon Cooper and Buzz Aldrin, the second man to walk on the moon.

Workshop set for librarians

Regional librarians will learn about video and cable services during a workshop at Midland College Nov. 8.

Peggy Jamelka Rudd from the Northeast Texas Library System at Garland will be the guest speaker. The workshop will be hosted by the West Texas Library System.

During the morning session, Ms. Rudd will describe the different video formats in production today and the sources of video software, plus video programming for libraries. The afternoon session will include cable franchising, cable programming, interactive cable, telecommunications, video conferencing and teletext.

"This workshop is to help librarians become more aware of developments in video and cable technologies, particularly in relation to the public library and the people it serves," said Dr. Weldon Horton, director of the Midland College Murray Fasken Learning Resource Center.

The West Texas Library System, headquartered in Lubbock, serves public libraries in a 29-county region stretching from north of Plainview to south of Midland-Odessa.

The workshop is open to the public. Persons wishing to attend need to call Horton, 684-7851, ext. 210, or Diane Barker at the West Texas Library System, 1-800-762-5442.

Mel Torme could give lessons to the world on how to sing

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It was Steve Allen, who knows of many things in regard to the entertainment business, who once observed: "If we could get one man to give lessons to the world in how to sing, it would have to be Mel Torme."

In the long ago, they played in the same band on the South Side of Chicago — they were teenagers, the tall, gawky, bespectacled Steve Allen and the not-so-tall Mel Torme. Steve plunked on the piano and Mel tapped the drums and lifted his voice in song.

But it had begun, for Melvin Howard Torme, much earlier, with a tonsillectomy. Shortly after he was divested of his tonsils, a minuscule second growth of tonsil appeared. It coated the Torme vocal instrument with a fuzzy, smoothly hoarse, softly musical purr that would become his enduring trademark — and a special treasure for the jazz buffs.

It is a part of musical lore, how Mel, then a precocious lad of 4, sitting one night with his parents at the old Blackhawk Restaurant in Chicago, rose unannounced and sang "You're Driving Me Crazy" with the Coon-Sanders orchestra. The crowd loved the kid's singing. He must have been pretty cute. The management hired him to sing Monday nights for 10 bucks a show.

He sang later with Ben Pollack's band and Louis Panico and Frankie Masters, and those really are names from the dim past. And with Chico Marx's band and, if you remember, he had a swinging vocal group called the Meltones.

WITH A GENEROSITY of spirit, Mel has always expressed his appreciation for his own favorite singer, meaning Fred Astaire, and others whose manner of interpreting lyrics he has always fancied, such as Harold Mills of the Mills Brothers and Patti Andrews and such non-singers who could sing magnificently — Johnny Mercer and Buddy Rich and Woody Herman.

"I like singers," Mel says, "who know what lyrics are all about."

Once, in the mid-70s, I heard Mel Torme at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco and the climax of his performance was a dazzling, 22-minute medley (his own arrangement, typically) of Gershwin tunes. The audience was bowled over, including a fellow named Crosby who was seated at ringside. Later, Bing Crosby issued his own critique: "Mel Torme puts on the best musical act I've ever seen."

And not too long ago on ABC's "20/20," Mel Torme was profiled in a segment which, coincidentally, began at the Fairmont. Mel was seen in rehearsal, and the narrator, correspondent Bob Brown, is saying about the singer: "He's able to dictate rhythms and dynamics with intimate knowledge of all of a song's musical parts."

MEL IS WORKING this time out with the blind British pianist George Shearing. "Two musicians," the narrator observes, "in a class by themselves, each still rehearsing after more than 40 years of engagements...It is an adventure to know that even the most carefully constructed and rehearsed arrangment is still a playground for Mel Torme's voice."

Mel is asked if he has a more difficult time selling a song than, say, "a performer like a Tom Jones or Engelbert Humperdinck?"

Mel grins. "Look at this classic profile of mine," he says. "Sort of small chin — a double chin, not exactly Robert Redford. I am not a sex symbol type of singer."

A man of many gifts, Mel has written several books, including a fine novel entitled "Wynner" about the big band era. He has also survived the apocalyptic changes in the music business in the last two decades. He is contemporary in his tastes and he will sing hits by Paul Williams and Stevie Wonder and Neil Sadaka and Janis Ian.

WHEN MEL TORME sings, it is about as good as pop singing gets, warm and musical. He has written some good tunes as well, one of them being what he calls his annuity, a little item called "The Christmas Song."

"But," says the narrator, "he stays closest to the classic popular songs he grew up with when bands wore tuxedoes and composers, despite depressions and World War, still conjured images like angels dining at the Ritz..."

Mexican studio taken over by worm skin

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Worm skin, the emperor's steel tent and the maker room have taken over the sprawling Churubusco film studio as the movie version of the science fiction classic, "Dune," takes shape.

Jose Ferrer, playing the Emperor, stands at the center of an ornate golden throne room on one of the last days of shooting. He's engaged in an anguished dialogue with a mechanical creature made by Carlo Rambaldi, who created E.T.

The creature, called the navigator, who visits the emperor's throne room in a case filled with "spice gas," is Rambaldi's latest creation. Photographers were barred from the set and visiting reporters were gently asked to be discreet in their descriptions.

"They just gave me a very rough description," the special effects modeler said when asked how limited he was in developing the creature. He said he first made a three-foot model and then developed the full-scale navigator that visits the throne room.

Rambaldi also built 25 worms in different dimensions, the largest about 25 yards long. The worms — whose crinkly skin is black and pink — are used by the inhabitants of the fictional Arrakis much as Bedouins use camels.

Elsewhere, mounds of sand shaped into ghostly dunes stand on a sound stage ready for the special effects shooting of the arid planet Arrakis.

Principal photography started March 30 and is almost complete. But special effects and other work will continue into January. Plans originally called for "Dune" to be released Christmas 1984, but the movie might be released before then.

Director David Lynch, who did the midnight movie, "Eraserhead," and the critical hit, "The Elephant Man," says he'd never heard of "Dune" before being asked to direct the film. But to hundreds of thousands of science fiction fans, "Dune," published in 1965, is the start of one of the genre's most popular series.

"Dune" author Frank Herbert has now published four volumes.

Lynch said Herbert, who has visited the set twice and is expected to return, has been a cheerful supporter of the movie version. "Other than moral support — real support — he's read all the scripts and he's very happy," the director said.

Actor Paul Smith, who played Bluto in Robert Altman's "Popeye" has the part of Rabban. "There's never been a cast like this in a science fiction movie," he said.

Others in the movie include Swedish actor Max Von Sydow as Dr. Kynes, Sting from the rock group, Police, as Feyd and Italian actress Silvana Mangano as the Rev. Mother Ramallo.

Miss Mangano, returning to films after an absence of 12 years, is the wife of "Dune" executive producer Dino de Laurentiis and mother of the movie's 28-year-old producer, Raffaella de Laurentiis.

Few expenses were spared on the elaborate sets that fill all eight sound stages and backlots at the Mexican government-owned Churubusco.

Except for some special effects work, all the production has been done in Mexico.

Bird's sense of hearing keen

Next to sight, hearing is the best developed sense in birds, with a range of 100 to 21,000 cycles per second for the European magpie, 1,100 to 10,000 for the canary (which is also the range within which most songbirds sing). The barn owl catches mice by ear in total darkness.

Joan Baskin 'knows everything, and everybody'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"I know you think I'm a jack-in-the-box," chuckled the woman as she got up from the couch for the third time in five minutes.

A visitor can get worn out just watching Joan Baskin for an hour.

She had breezed in from a luncheon meeting and was squeezing in an interview before getting ready for a dinner party she was giving. "Are you always this busy?" she was asked.

Sitting back on the couch, she pursed her lips and mused for a moment, then said, "Yea."

And her life may get busier, if that's possible. She recently became the first woman chosen to serve on the Midland Chamber of Commerce executive committee. This is a select committee of 12 which includes the past president and executive vice president.

A member of the larger board of directors for three years, she had agreed to the executive committee assignment. What she didn't know until she heard it in the media is that she also went in with the title of a vice president.

"I thought it would be fun to serve on the executive board. It's a strong group of people concerned about Midland," she said.

HER FIRST PUSH toward that position came from a friend, Martin Allday, who called her three years ago to ask if she would serve on the board of directors. "I said, 'OK,' and he hung up," she recalled.

In those years, she concentrated on Leadership Midland and, more recently, the Midland Arts Assembly.

"This is the third incarnation of an arts council," said Mrs. Baskin. "The Midland chamber has been helpful. They're interested in helping the arts promote themselves."

Mrs. Baskin took the organization under her wing, giving it guidance and strength to help it fly on its own. With her short white bob, wide smile and crinkling eyes, she has breezed about Midland in the past year to do what was necessary for the arts council.

"She has the best grasp on anything going on in this town," remarked one Midland woman in describing Joan Baskin. "She's a mediator beyond belief."

"My dad was a very, very special person and a man of great principle. He was very well-organized and very strict. He made it clear what his rules were. His opinion of me was very important to me."

— Joan Baskin

Midlander in Profile

"Joan Baskin knows everything and everybody who's anybody in this town," added another man. "She knows who to see, who will give what and who will do the work. All you have to do is ask Joan and it's done."

HOW DOES Joan Baskin do it all, one woman questioned her.

"My dad was a very, very special person and a man of great principle. He was very well-organized and very strict. He made it clear what his rules were. His opinion of me was very important to me," Mrs. Baskin replied in her brisk, down-to-business manner. Her mother, a homemaker, also had a college degree, and her father was a

Freedom invaluable possession

Polish families find freedom in U.S.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Freedom.

For two families that fled Communist-ruled Poland and the threat of further imprisonment and censureship, it's an invaluable possession.

Eighteen months ago Stefan Rudzki and Ryszard Grabski were behind bars in Poland, victims of the Communist Party crackdown on Solidarity, in which they were leaders. Meanwhile, their wives were suffering from job demotions and their children from harrassment by police.

The two men eventually were released to face lower paying jobs and the knowledge their children would pay the penalty throughout their lives for their fathers' rebellion against the system.

And America beckoned.

Rudzki is 37 now, and a custodian at Memorial Christian Church, which originally sponsored his family as well as the Grabskis. He was a foreman for a plastics injection moldings and metal company in Sieradz, Poland, when his desire for freedom led him to become a regional chairman of the labor union Solidarity when it was established in Aug., 1980.

Rudzki knew from the moment that he joined Solidarity that his involvement very likely could result in his imprisonment. But he had to make his stand.

"I believed the government was evil, and thought that I could help change things for the better," he said through a translator. "Poland is not free. The American people don't realize the danger of the Soviet Union. They don't realize what a threat the Soviet Union is."

He and his wife Grazyna, now 34, had been married 13 years at the time, and had two girls, Malgorzata, now 15, and Magdalena, now 10. Grazyna was a secretary in a manufacturing firm, and joined Solidarity a few weeks after her husband.

Forty-five-year-old Grabski, meanwhile, became the leader of his factory's Solidarity union. He and his wife Urszula, 38, also lived in Sieradz and had two sons, Tomasz, now 17, and Robert, now 15.

Tomasz, the only member of either family with prior instruction in English, said his father "was a leader of action against the government and made strikes and led revolts" in his Solidarity post. Rudzki, meanwhile, led strikes and demonstrations and became acquainted with Grabski through Solidarity, which had 15 million members.

But it was only a matter of time before the 1.5 million-strong Communist Party took strong action against Solidarity's leaders. The government jailed 8,000 members of the union, including the two men.

'Cop shop' stepping into computer world

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland's Police Department will take its first step out of the "pen and paper" age into the world of high technology within 30 days.

According to Chief Wayne Gideon, the police department will take a "byte" out of their paperwork by late November with the initial construction of its estimated $700,000 computer system .

Meanwhile, the "cop shop" is going through a partial facelift — old floors have been replaced, walls don fresh paint and offices and desks are being moved and juggled around.

Since 1975, crowded conditions have been the department's main problem. The old central fire department area is being remodeled for training classrooms, budgeting, internal affairs, a library and an evidence room.

"We're in the latter stages of remodeling right now," Gideon said, adding that he can hardly wait until the computers arrive.

It's the computer system that will make the Midland Police Department more efficient, according to Gideon. The system will be capable of handling a variety of administrative functions, paperwork and information — including computer-aided dispatching, traffic accident and criminal offense reports, arrest processing, records management and some municipal court information.

"I'm so excited about it," Gideon said. "I've seen other systems in metropolitan areas. I think they (computers) will be as valuable as the radio was."

"I'm so excited about it. I've seen other systems in metropolitan areas. I think they (computers) will be as valuable as the radio was...A stolen property file will be at your fingertips... There's no doubt it will speed things up," he added. "We'll have statistical data, encompassing every aspect of law enforcement."

— Police Chief Wayne Gideon

Gideon said Midland's computer system — which eventually will hook up with the municipal court — will be a combination of the best in other systems, such as Garland, where he observed their computers.

"A stolen property file will be at your fingertips," he said. "In fact, I was down in Garland when they were looking for a robbery suspect who was driving a red Falcon.

"It took them 20 minutes to search out 10 cars," Gideon said. "Normally, it would have been like searching for a needle in a haystack. As I was leaving, the Garland police were booking the suspect.

"There's no doubt it will speed things up," he added. "We'll have statistical data, encompassing every aspect of law enforcement."

While the estimated installation date for the computer system is mid-February, it will take a minimum of 15 months before the system is totally operational.

The first part of the computer system to be installed is in the new dispatch room. The consoles are expected to cost about $100,000 each. The former room was cramped and noisy, Gideon said, explaining "we had people walking all over each other."

The old area is being converted into office space and a breath intoxizer room.

"Noise was a factor in the old area," Gideon said. "Typewriters were buzzing, the mikes were sensitive. In the new area there will be silence. Each dispatcher will have his own system of computers and a headset.

"When you walk into the modern-communications system, there's dead silence," he added.

News hound enjoys watching press conferences

The president had a press conference the other day and, as usual, I parked myself in front of the television set to take it all in.

News hounds like myself do that sort of thing. When the president speaks we want a front row seat. No detail (or slip of the tongue) is too fine for our keen minds.

Press conferences are particularly enjoyable. Unlike with a prepared speech, the president must utilize his expertise and knowledge to answer a wide variety of questions on every subject imaginable. It also gives members of the White House press corps an opportunity to show off for the folks back home. They pose difficult questions and then shake their heads in dismay when the president is unable to provide quick and to-the-point answers. This, quite naturally, makes the journalists feel important and when they feel important, they are happy.

Likewise, if the president manages to get through the half-hour ordeal without committing a major faux pas (such as declaring World War III) he is happy, his staff is happy and, as a result, the whole country is happy. That is, except for Walter Mondale, John Glenn and the other Democratic presidential hopefuls; but that's another story.

One of the more amusing aspects of a press conference is the rigid procedure that everyone follows.

You know the scenario: First a grave voice announces that regular television programming will be delayed, followed by a close-up of Dan Rather who, in an equally grave voice, informs us that this is the president's 20th press conference of his term in office. This is very important news for those of us who keep count of such things.

Then the camera flashes to the East Room of the White House just as the president is making his entrance. He reads a prepared statement that no one is interested in hearing, before finally entertaining questions.

Then the fun begins. The reporters, jumping up and down with their arms in the air, take turns asking questions which the president never answers directly. The reporters then ask follow-up questions, to which the president cracks a joke (of questionable humor) before turning to the next person.

This goes on for about thirty minutes before the camera flashes back to a close-up of Dan Rather, who proceeds to explain to the rest of us what was actually said during the press conference.

This is crucial because it almost always is completely different from what we thought we heard. That's why Dan Rather makes so much money. He knows these kinds of things.

My only real beef with press conferences is that the reporters rarely ask the questions I wanted answered. Some of us are tired of Nicaragua, Lebanon and all the other so-called hot spots of the world. We want to know the little bits and pieces that make the president human.

For example, the CBS correspondent might ask:

—"Mr. President, do you ever tire of your wife gawking at you with glazed eyes whenever you make a public appearance?"

—"Do you and your wife ever have fights in private? " (And as a follow-up question) "If so, who generally wins?"

—"Tell us the truth, Mr. President, aren't you just a little relieved that your son, the one who used to wear leotards on stage, is no longer a public figure?"

—"Do you find it embarrassing that every time you attempt to make a congratulatory phone call to the coach of a winning sports team, you get disconnected?"

These are the kind of questions that beg for answers. But then, only an old crusty news hound like myself would know that.

It was 12:10 a.m. in the blackness of Dec. 13, 1981. Rudzki, suffering from high fever, lay in bed. It was an omen of things to come.

A banging came at the front door. It was the military police. They dragged Rudzki from his home, telling his family nothing.

He was denied a trial. He was not even told why he had been arrested. And for a long two weeks Grazyna and his daughters could not find out where he had been taken. Every day she would go to the police station, tell them her husband was sick, plead with them to tell her his whereabouts.

Grabski, meanwhile, was arrested at the same hour at his home. The two men were to share common jail facilities as well, but it was not until Christmas that either of their families discovered they were imprisoned there in Sieradz.

For the next year and a half, each of the men were left to wonder if they ever would see freedom again. And their families wondered if they ever would escape ostracism and job supression.

Rudzki was transferred to a prison in Lowicz, and Grabski was to follow in a matter of weeks. Their families were allowed to visit only once per month. Rudzki was released May 2, 1982 as abruptly as he had been jailed, while Grabski was not released for several more months.

Rudzki was given a job paying less than half his former job. His children, he knew, would never be allowed decent jobs. He, like Grabski, had to go to the police station every week and sign a paper proclaiming he was not a supporter of Solidarity. The country that had given them life had turned its backs on them. And they began looking elsewhere.

The Rudzkis first considered Australia, but decided the heat would be oppressive. Instead, they wound up in Texas.

They journeyed to the American Embassy in Warsaw, told officials of their plight. The Polish governmemnt was only too glad to get rid of Solidarity trouble-makers, and with the help of the World Council of Churches, they immigrated to the United States.

Already, Memorial Christian Church had told the World Council it would be willing to support the Rudzkis, who arrived in Midland to stay Oct. 22, 1982.

"When they arrived at Midland they spoke no English whatsoever," said H.A. Tuck of Memorial Christian Church. "They had a total of eight boxes and suitcases, and less than $40."

The church immediately arranged housing, clothing, food and other needs. The children were enrolled in public schools and the parents in English classes at Midland College. Rudzki, noting that "it doesn't take much English to operate a paint brush," first got a job painting houses. Within a few months he became Memorial Christian's full-time custodian, while Grazyna undertook a house cleaning operation.

The Grabskis, meanwhile, also fled Poland via the American Embassy and the World Council of Churches. They first were sponsored by an organization in Pittsburgh, Calif., but were virtually destitute.

When the Rudzkis made contact with the Grabskis and discovered their plight, they suggested to Memorial Christian Church that the second family be sponsored.

"The Rudzkis were self-sufficient in six months, so we decided to take on another family," said Tuck.

Arriving in Midland in August, the Grabskis were given the same support as that initially provided the Rudzkis. The father gained employment as a custodian at a daycare center, the children were enrolled in public schools, and both parents enrolled in English classes.

Today, living a world apart from their native Poland, the Rudzkis and Grabskis slowly are merging into the mainstream of West Texas society. There are moments in which they are lonesome for their homeland and families, but many more moments of thankfulness they now live in America.

Like all of them, Grazyna still has much English to learn, but three simple words have found their way into her vocabulary:

"I am free."

And for eight persons who escaped Communist oppression, the phrase says it all.

Baskin 'knows everything, everybody'

newspaper editor at Galveston. "Both parents always thought I could do anything. When people expect you're capable, you are."

That reminded her of the joke about the elementary school teacher who thought she had gotten all the bright students in her class that year. Each name had a high number, such as 128 or 135, listed next to it.

"She thought they could do anything, and the class took off and accomplished so many things. It wasn't until the end of the year the teacher discovered those numbers didn't mean IQ, but each student's locker number."

She met Pat Baskin at The University of Texas at Austin. After World War II, the young childless couple traveled through the dry plains to Pecos, where Pat had a job offer.

"ALL I THOUGHT of was Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" and I thought of that poor woman in that book," Mrs. Baskin said. "We came back through Midland and I thought it looked like heaven."

With some encouragement from one of Pat's college debating partners, Perry Pickett, the couple has called Midland home for 30 years.

With her four children born in Midland, Mrs. Baskin has been involved in church work, politics and the schools. And as a UT alumni, she's devoted time to bettering that school, recently completing a report on what the university should do over the next 25 years.

As a member of the Centennial Commission, she worked on the student life section.

"I love that university," she said, sipping her sun tea from a glass imprinted with the orange-and-white UT emblem. The commission was composed of "typical Texans who want the university to be world renown. With everyone moving to the Sunbelt, this is the university that has the money to do it."

With that report completed, her attention is back to Midland and the chamber. As a vice president, she will oversee the Community Development Division, which includes Leadership Midland, Clean Midland, Objectives for Midland, conventions and visitors, governmental affairs, transportation, education and sports.

"Midland is so public-spirited and well-educated that when they recognize something needs to be done that's three-fourths of the battle," she said. And while the chamber has lost some funding because of Midland's economic problems, Mrs. Baskin sees the challenge as being one of continuing the programs but also doing them better.

In the past, some members of the executive committee have moved up until they eventually reach the top post of president. But Mrs. Baskin doubts she'll do that.

"One year would be enough," she said."

Using phone book would have saved heartache

HOUSTON (AP) — Relatives of Harvey Treesh didn't learn that he had died of a heart attack until nine days later because medical examiners didn't take time to check the telephone book.

Treesh, 64, died Oct. 1, but his son James found his body at a funeral home four days before it was to be buried in a "pauper's" grave, the younger Treesh told the Houston Post in a story published Saturday.

"He was going to be buried as some kind of derelict. I had the funeral stopped so he could be buried as a human being," Treesh said.

A spokesman for the Harris County Medical Examiner's office said the family wasn't notified because investigators apparently didn't think to use the telephone book.

"It's a very distressing thing. Our hearts really break for this family," said Cecil Wingo, chief investigator for the medical examiner's office.

"If my investigators had looked in the phone book none of this would have happened."

The elder Treesh, a veteran of World War II, was rushed to Southeast Memorial Hospital after suffering the heart attack, and died at the hospital.

Treesh's wallet was left in his car, which was later stolen. When police found the car in the Central Texas town of Marlin, they found Treesh's driver's license. The address on the license was out-dated, so medical investigators contacted the Department of Public Safety to get his current address.

Investigators said they called Treesh's apartment several times and drove by several times hoping that relatives would be there.

On Oct. 8, the dead man's landlord called James Treesh and told him his father had failed to pay the rent.

Treesh then contacted the police department's missing person's bureau and started checking the city and county jails.

Treesh said that "as a last resort" he called the county morgue and investigators told him the body had been sent to a funeral home.

Police investigate assault

Midland police are investigating an attempted sexual assault and several burglaries, which occurred this weekend.

According to reports, police are searching for two 17-year-old youths who attempted to sexually assault a Midland woman in the 3200 block of North Midland Drive. Police said the youths, who both had blond hair, were wearing blue jeans and were driving a 1970 Toyota or Datsun pickup.

In other criminal activity, three burglaries were reported Saturday. About 1:30 a.m., Debbie Shock, 1506 Wayside, reported a television and stereo taken from her home. Entry was gained through a southside window, according to reports.

Greg Holcomb, 4506 Ruidoso Court, told police $550 worth of golf clubs were taken from his residence about 11:30 a.m.

About 12:45 p.m., Don Velliquette, 4101 St. Andrews, reported golf clubs and tools valued at $2,350 were taken from his home. According to reports, entry was gained through an unlocked garage.

Also, Robert E. Kendrick reported a theft of three trucks taken from his business at 1607 S. Midkiff Road. According to reports, the Kendrick Plastering Warehouse was broken into with a company truck, which was rammed against an east overhead door. Police said three trucks valued at $28,000 were taken sometime between 2:30 p.m. Friday and 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

Two accidents in Odessa kill woman, injure two men

ODESSA — Two separate accidents — involving three cars and a motorcycle — Saturday have left one woman dead and two men injured, according to the Department of Public Safety.

According to the DPS, Joann W. Aleshire, 46, of Odessa was pronounced dead at 12:50 a.m. by Justice of the Peace James Harris. Ms. Aleshire and Marion G. Cockrum, 36, of Odessa were involved in a two car accident in west Ector County, the DPS said.

Cockrum is listed in guarded condition with severe head and internal injuries at Medical Center Hospital.

According to reports, Ms. Aleshire was northbound on Moss Street about 12:50 a.m. and Cockrum was headed east on 42nd Street when the two vehicles collided.

The other accident, involving a car and a motorcycle at Torrance Street south of 26th Street in west Odessa, has left Thomas Benton Duck, 26, of Odessa in serious condition at MCH with head injuries, according to the DPS.

The driver of the car, Michele Lee, 16, of Odessa was not injured. The DPS said Duck was on a motorcycle heading south on Torrance Street about 6:20 p.m. Saturday and Ms. Lee was about to leave a private drive when the two vehicles collided.

Former legislator urges antinuclear protesters to contact congressmen

AUSTIN (AP) — Former legislator Frances Farenthold urged antinuclear weapons demonstrators Saturday to express their feelings to their congressmen in phone calls or telegrams.

"Today we stand in the very shadow of death," said Mrs. Farenthold, who ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1972 and 1974. "The danger we face is the danger of a whole new and deadly generation of missiles."

About 500 demonstrators gathered at the steps of the Capitol for a march to the shores of Town Lake, about a mile away. Many carried placards with slogans such as "Honduras U.S. Puppet" and "No Missiles, No War." Several children came with their parents, and one carried a sign that read "I want to grow up."

"I urge us all to stop talking to each other and to begin talking to others," Mrs. Farenthold told the cheering crowd.

Four arrested during narcotics raid at local bar Friday night

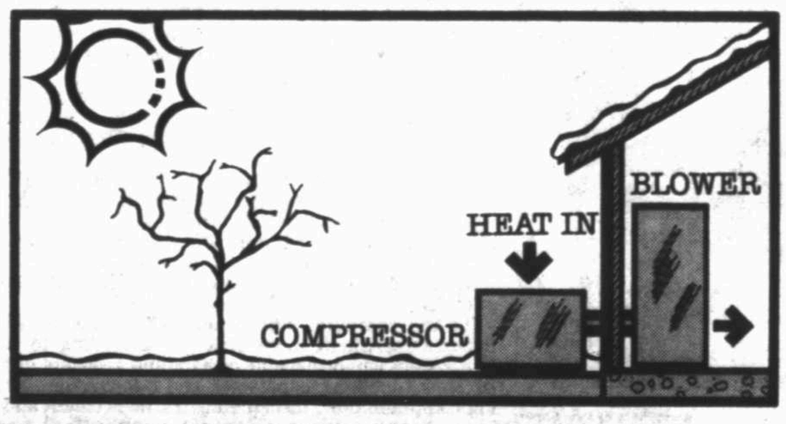

Two men and two women were arrested during a narcotics raid at a local bar Friday night, according to police.

Several law agencies — Midland Police Department, Department of Public Safety, Texas Alcohol Board Commission, Border Patrol, Midland County Sheriff's Office and Midland County Constable's Office — were involved in the investigation, which led to the arrests Friday about 10:30 p.m. at the Las Palomas bar and an adjacent private residence.

Confiscated was $12,745 worth of drugs, including 20 grams of heroin, cocaine and amphetamines and $2,739 in cash.

A 44-year-old man, a 40-year-old man, a 28-year-old woman and a 35-year-old woman are expected to be formally charged with possession of heroin Monday.

Save energy with a heat pump.

If you're planning to install a new heating or cooling system, consider a high-efficiency heat pump. It's an energy-saving, year-round alternative.

The heat pump provides year-round heating and cooling, using only electricity. During the winter, it extracts heat from the outside air (even very cold air contains heat) and brings that heat inside where it's needed. In the summer, the heat pump is a regular air conditioner, removing unwanted heat from the inside air.

The heat pump is the most efficient combination heating and cooling system that can be installed in your home today.

To learn more about the heat pump, call your air conditioning contractor. And when you call, ask about the year-round heat pump that qualifies for a bonus check from Texas Electric.

Robison crusade returns to Midland

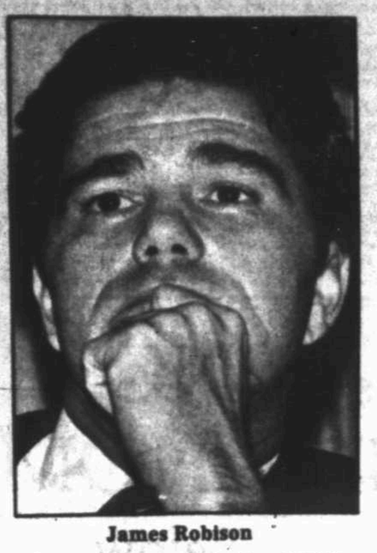

James Robison, sporting a new emphasis on healing and deliverance through the Holy Spirit, will hold a crusade at Midland Center, 105 N. Main, beginning Oct. 30, and extending through Nov. 2.

It marks the first crusade the nationally known evangelist from Fort Worth has held in Midland in several years.

"We feel like the timing was just right with all the economic chaos in our community," said local crusade coordinator Bob Huggins. "We feel the Holy Spirit will draw a lot of people that are hurting to Jesus as a result of this evangelist coming to this town. Their confidence has got to be in something besides money, because they've seen it go away."

Robison will preach at 7 p.m., while Bible studies will be led by Jim Hylton, Dudley Hall and Jeanne Rogers of the James Robison Association from 9 a.m. to noon Oct. 31 through Nov. 2.

In addition, Robison will speak at a pastors' luncheon at Midland Center at noon Oct. 31, a YMCA men's breakfast at 6:30 a.m. Nov. 1 at the Midland Hilton, and a Christian Businessmen's luncheon at noon Nov. 2 at the new Holiday Inn in Odessa.

James Robison

The crusade is being sponsored by several area churches.

Plans for the crusade began about six months ago, said Huggins, when Midland Christian Fellowship considered Robison's new ministry and its impact.

"The leadership of our church prayed about it and then contacted him," he said. "And things began to evolve. He has really undergone a tremendous change in his life. He has just literally undergone spiritual surgery. He has been delivered from some things that were holding him back, like his doctrinal beliefs."

Once the date was set, crusade sponsors went about contacting 300 area pastors and publicizing the event through the news media. In addition, said Huggins, several prayer groups were organized to pray regularly for the crusade.

But behind the scenes, he added, have been countless persons working in their own way to make it a success.

"Thank God for that little man and that little woman and that intercessory prayer that went in to bring this whole thing together," he said. "God knows who you people are, and we want to thank you as workers of the crusade. Without you, this would've been nothing."

Huggins said the crusade will emphasize "people getting right with the Lord. In the midst of all the financial crises that are going on, we are praying they will believe in God. God loves these people that have been undergoing tremendous losses in our financial community...We were going to have this in September, but God, I believe, just would not have it happen then."

After the crusade closes, Huggins noted, the real work only begins, as sponsoring churches follow up on those who make spiritual commitments.

Black farmers meet with lawmakers

DALLAS (AP) — Black farmers are in danger of losing their farms because of the difficulty of securing loans and an "insensitivity on the part of the Reagan administration," U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, told a conference on the plight of black farmers Saturday.

"Over 92 percent of black farmers market less than $20,000 annually in crops," Leland said. "The Reagan administration knows what the plight of the small farmer is — particularly the black farmer — but they choose not to do anything about it."

The conference of about 100 black farmers at the State Fair of Texas was called by Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower as part of "Texas Black Farmer Day."

"Black farmers and ranchers have unique problems," Hightower said. "They've been the first to lose their land, the last to get desperately needed credit and too often they are shut out of normal marketing channels."

Before the conference, Hightower said, "We want to explore the history and the current status of Texas black farmers and propose ways that the (Texas Department of Agriculture), along with other state institutions, can assure that the future of black farmers is more prosperous than the past."

Many of the black farmers suggested that the Reagan administration insitute some type "parity" program.

"At least this would ensure that the farmer would be getting a fair price for his crops," said James Lynn, a 63-year-old dairy and hay farmer from Martin, 28 miles south of Waco.

Actor to address Law Enforcement Appreciation dinner

James Drury, a noted television personality who gained fame in the long-running Virginian series, will be the speaker for the 6th annual Law Enforcement Appreciation dinner Thursday night at the Holiday Inn-Country Villa.

In the past, a committee appointed by the board of directors of the Two Hundred Club of Midland, sponsors of the dinner, has selected four law enforcement personnel to receive awards for outstanding performance of their duties and service to the community.

This year, the Two Hundred Club will honor two deceased officers who died during the past year — John W. Lightfoot of the Sheriff's Department and L.H. Burney of the Police Department.

A.L. Mitchell, with Tom Brown Inc., will serve as master of ceremonies.

The event begins at 6:30 p.m. Attendance will be by invitation only.

The Two Hundred Club of Midland was organized in 1979 by William B. Blakemore II, Thomas C. Brown, Aaron Giebal, W.R. Roden and Clayton W. Williams Jr. to provide financial support to local law enforcement personnel and to foster community support for law enforcement agencies in Midland County.

Purposes of the Two Hundred Club are:

— To provide funds of up to $1,000 to the families of peace officers who have died in the line of duty;

— To sponsor the annual Law Enforcement Appreciation Dinner;

— To provide equipment and personal property for the physical protection and well-being of peace officers in the line of duty;

— To provide funds to peace officers injured or disabled in the line of duty.

Members of the organization's current board of directors are Carl Bond, John J. Omohundro and Clayton W. Williams Jr.

Driving concern

Midland's streets are in terrible condition. Every Midland resident is well aware of that fact, including city officials who are directly responsible for keeping street conditions at an acceptable level.

The street system has deteriorated to its current low point as the result of a number of factors, not the least of which was the recent "boom" period that dramatically increased traffic flow beyond the limit for which the streets were designed and the following "bust" that meant city officials "lost" a large amount of money that had been earmarked for street reconstruction.

Well, you can't rebuild streets without money and city officials probably are correct in assuming that another street bond issue wouldn't find support among the city's voters with the economy at its present level.

So, the city is more or less roped into a "band-aid" approach to street repairs — doing what it can, but far less than what is actually needed. While that approach is necessary, its shortcomings are more than obvious. Potholes seem to breed potholes, particularly after one of Midland's infrequent rainshowers. Meanwhile, the increased traffic flow keeps the pavement broken up.

In the near future (years, not months), it's going to be necessary that the city cast aside the band-aid approach to streets and call a major bond issue to provide funds for the reconstruction and construction of streets in order to make traffic flow safer and more efficient. Midland has grown up and traffic loads now are dictating a more vigorous street maintenance program.

Such an approach will be more costly, but we think the drive to and from the polls will convince voters of the need.

Newspeak economics

U.S. News and World Report calculates that the federal government will borrow 62 percent of all money loaned in the United States in 1984.

Two questions:

Isn't a country socialistic when the government is the biggest borrower during peacetime?

What's the difference between taxing the people to pay the cost of government and borrowing their money to pay it?

The Democrats tax and the Republicans borrow.

Both ways, the American people pay.

Another View:

Baby Doe decisions

Doctors who care for newborns with birth defects are in the business to save lives. But even the lifesavers acknowledge that sometimes the humane act is to forgo extraordinary measures — to allow a doomed and suffering child to die. Those who face such life-and-death dilemmas need help in determining when that choice is right and when it is wrong. But they do not need the sort of help the Reagan administration wants to give under its recently proposed revision of the "Baby Doe" rule.

The Baby Doe rule was first enacted to prevent incidents like one last year in which an Indiana infant born with Down's syndrome was denied corrective surgery and food at his parents' orders. A federal judge revoked that rule last spring, partly on procedural grounds. The replacement rule, due to take effect sometime this fall, is virtually the same as the original: It would require that signs be posted in hospital nurses' stations listing the number of a hot line where callers could anonymously report suspected cases of poor treatment or improper feeding of handicapped newborns. Federal investigators would respond to any tips; a hospital found to have withheld food or treatment could lose federal funding.

The plan seems to be an honest attempt to guard handicapped children against mistreatment. But, as many doctors who oppose the rule have argued, the rule would probably do more harm than good to the youngsters it is intended to protect. It would do nothing to help doctors resolve medical dilemmas. But it would allow federal bureaucrats without medical training to second-guess sensitive decisions that should be made by doctors and parents.

Despite the good intention behind it, the rule would intrude upon the private doctor-patient relationship, distract doctors from their duties and aggravate parental anguish. Worse, it could keep fearful parents and doctors from choosing the best care for handicapped newborns. Ultimately, it could prolong the suffering of dying babies. And if hospitals found in violation of the rule lose federal funds, the lives of even more infants could be endangered.

Handicapped children deserve sensitive care, but the Reagan administration's rigid rule is not the best way to provide it. A better solution is offered by the American Academy of Pediatrics, which favors the creation of federally supervised local ethics committees to review difficult cases involving handicapped newborns. The committees would consider each case separately, basing decisions on the doctor's prognosis for the child, the limitations of medicine and the demands of law and morality. That reasonable approach would protect handicapped children against abuse. It would keep government bureaucrats out of the maternity wards. And it would give doctors and parents the help they need to make the right decision in difficult circumstances.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Exchange cutoff hurting scientists

WASHINGTON — With a cold eye, Uncle Sam has taken aim at the Soviet Union and has shot himself in the foot. The intention was to punish the Soviets for their various aggressions; but unhappily, the U.S. scientific community was hurt the most.

Jack Anderson

Between them, Presidents Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan have virtually brought to a halt years of valuable exchanges with Soviet scientists. On balance, it's the American side that's the loser.

The conventional wisdom, nurtured by conservative politicians, is that the scientific exchange program was largely a one-way flow of information to the Soviets' advantage. So as part of his response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, Carter "punished" the Kremlin by cutting funds and other susport for the exchanges. Reagan let several exchange agreements lapse in retaliation for the declaration of martial law in Poland.

The end result is that U.S.-Soviet scientific exchanges are only one-fifth of what they were in 1979.

Under orders from Congress, the State Department has now produced a study of the exchange programs and the conclusions knock the conventional wisdom into a cocked hat. The study has not been made public, but my associate Donald Goldberg has seen a copy.

Each federal agency involved in an exchange program was asked for an assessment of the scientific and technological swaps which were undertaken by academicians under the supervision of the two governments.

Generally, the study concluded, the scientific exchanges "rarely involve risk of the transfer of militarily significant technology" — a primary concern on both sides. In the few cases where there is danger of militarily useful information being acquired by the Soviet scientists, "the activities are either canceled or appropriately recast" to eliminate the risk.

The report showed that the United States had little to lose and much to gain from the exchanges, which included such fields as health sciences, oceanography, energy uses and space travel. Here are some specific examples cited in the State Department study:

— Environmental studies: "Joint research ... has made new contributions to scientific knowledge, contributions which would have been more costly in many cases — impossible in some rases — to achieve without Soviet cooperation."

The report continues: "American specialists have had access to regions of the U.S.S.R. rarely visited by Westerners. The agreement has served as an effective channel of communication with those sectors of the Soviet scientific and bureaucratic elite professionally committed to environmental goals, and has helped sensitize Soviet decision makers to domestic and global ecological concerns."

U.S. scientists got more information than they gave on nature conservation, climatic effects and earthquake prediction — "traditionally areas of strong mutual interest and benefit."

— Physics: Exchanges in this area have been particularly useful, the report concludes: "In every project area, activities under the cooperative program have resulted in significant achievements, advancing U.S. scientific understanding of the field and providing valuable insight, which would otherwise not have been possible, into Soviet activities, approaches and accomplishments in this area."

In electrometallurgy, "a field pioneered by the Soviet Union," American researchers were able to make impressive gains based on Soviet data "which had long been sought by the U.S. side."

— Atomic energy: The Soviets provided some valuable help to their American scientific colleagues. For an experiment in the United States in 1981-82, "the Soviets supplied a lithium lens worth over $1.5 million, and a lead-glass Cherenkov radiation shower detector, worth approximately $4 million and saving the Department of Energy two years if it were made here."

— Space research: American scientists made tremendous gains in this field through Soviet cooperation. The reason is obvious: The Soviets have kept detailed data on their lengthy manned space flights, a program the United States does not have. The Soviets are the only source of important medical findings on the effects of prolonged travel in space.

— Health and medicine: Academic exchanges in this field covered a wide range of studies, with particular emphasis on heart research. In most of these areas, the Soviets learned more than the Americans.

But the exchange of information on cardiovascular diseases was a net plus for the United States, the study concludes. "In this area, the U.S. is beginning to see significant benefits" from the exchange program. Cooperative studies of such diseases as influenza, acute respiratory problems and viral hepatitis "resulted in the performance of research not otherwise possible," the report states.

In short, the weapon with which two American presidents chose to punish the Soviets has turned out to be a boomerang that missed its intended target and conked U.S. scientists instead.

GEORGE F. WILL

Aron's voice lost for 'hot autumn'

WASHINGTON — Raymond Aron was one of those men on whom age settles almost playfully. His wittiness made him seem increasingly elfin. Two weeks ago in Paris, when I last saw him briefly, he strode out of the offices of 'Express into the sunlit Avenue Hoche and toward what promised to be an autumn of international acclaim.

George F. Will

It is hard to identify an American who has enjoyed comparable preeminence in our nation's intellectual life. Emerson? William James? Lippmann? Aron, who died last week at 78, was a bit of all three. Last month this scholar and journalist published his memoirs, and they went immediately to the top of the best-seller list. The book has 780 pages, not one of which tells how to combat cellulite. Strange country, France.

Aron, a Jew, was born in 1905. Dreyfus was on Devil's Island. In a nation where anti-Semitism was strong, and still is not negligible, and in an era when radicalism of the left was standard among intellectuals, Aron adhered to moderate conservatism. His schoolmate, Jean-Paul Sartre, found fame as a philosophical irrationalist and political Stalinist. Aron became more exotic, because rarer: a philosophical anti-ideologue, combining the life of the mind with political moderation.

His death stilled the pen of the world's most formidable journalist. He wrote more than 30 books, many of them theoretical, and taught at many of the world's finest universities, but he was always a public man. His career was an echo of a healthier age, before the handling of ideas was thought to be the business of an academic clerisy, and before academic specialization sharpened minds by narrowing them.

In the past decade, there has been a transformation of French intellectual life, a thorough "de-Marxification." Events, especially in Afghanistan and Poland (with which France has complex historical ties) have helped, but so, to a large extent, have ideas, words, books. Foremost have been the words of Solzhenitsyn, and of such French writers as Jean-Francois Revel and Alain Besancon.

Besancon says no French intellectual of note now calls himself a Marxist. Many consumers of ideas — many teachers, parish curates, civil servants — call themselves Marxists, but producers of ideas do not. The Communist Party is no longer a party of mass conviction.

The ground for the transformation of French intellectual fashion was prepared by Aron, and especially by his book, "The Opium of the Intellectuals" (1955). Solzhenitsyn is the most consequential contemporary exposer of the practice of Marxism. Aron was the most effective critic of the theory.

He did not just refute the doctrines espoused by enemies of open societies. He also served such societies by dealing unsentimentally with their sentimentalities. The political problem, he said, is to reconcile "the equality of men as men with the inequality of their functions in the community" and to "obtain from the subordinate recognition of his superiors without causing him to suffer constraint or lose his dignity." In a democracy, the expression of such thoughts is as necessary as it is impolitic.

In a book with a deliberately paradoxical title — "In Defense of Decadent Europe" (1978) — he argued that Europe can be praised for its freedoms, but he wondered about a connection between those freedoms and Europe's diminished capacity for collective action. "In spite of its wealth, in spite (or because) of its culture and its freedoms," Europe will not defend itself without U.S. assistance. Aron died on the eve of a campaign against even that assistance. His voice would have been invaluable during the "hot autumn" of protests against the new NATO missiles.

"Anyone who reflects on wars and strategies today," he wrote, "raises a barrier between his intelligence and his humanity." But the man who in 1933 saw Nazis burning books in Berlin was, to the end, a passionate intellect, accepting the role of military power:

"Other people live from other emotions. How could I, as a Frenchman of Jewish origin, ever forget that France owes its liberation to the power of its allies, and that Israel owes its existence to its weapons and any chance of survival to its own determination, and that of the Americans, to fight if it proves necessary...?"

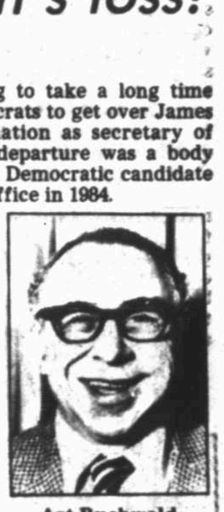

It is almost past now, Europe's great generation of "Atlanticist" intellectuals who in the crucial post-war period defended Western values, and Western defense measures, against many detractors. The detractors multiply like rodents. Defenders like Aron are as rare as eagles.

ART BUCHWALD

Democrats suffering Watt's loss!

It's going to take a long time for the Democrats to get over James Watt's resignation as secretary of interior. His departure was a body blow to every Democratic candidate running for office in 1984.

Art Buchwald

My first inkling that the Democrats were really taking it hard was when I overheard a Democratic senator talking to his campaign manager in a Washington restaurant the other day. They were both red faced.

"I told you not to come out publicly for Watt's resignation. Watt was the only issue we had in 1984," the campaign manager said.

"I didn't want to do it," the senator protested. "But when I came out of the Senate Interior meeting, I was surrounded by TV cameras and reporters and I had no choice but to say he had to go."

"Do you realize we spent $500,000 in TV commercials showing how Watt had destroyed the environment? I had crews go to the Love Canal, Times Beach, Missouri, and the Stringfellow waste pool. Now we have to dump them in an ashcan."

"But I couldn't just remain silent after his remark about the Jews, the blacks, the woman and the cripple. I had to be indignant."

"Being indignant is one thing. But why did you have to suggest a resolution in Congress that Watt had to go?"

"I wasn't thinking too clearly. Besides I was hoping Reagan would hang tough and keep Watt to placate the conservatives."

"Well, we're really up a tree. You know and I know when you talked about a nuclear freeze, the MX missile, the B-1 bomber and Reaganomics people's eyes glazed over. But every time you mentioned what Watt was doing to the country you got a standing ovation. They didn't stand on their feet; they stood on their chairs."

"The Democrats didn't drive Watt out of office. The Republicans did. They were the ones who put pressure on the president to push Watt off the cliff."

"Yes, but when the president realized Watt was going to be overwhelmingly censured by the Senate and House he had no choice but to get rid of him. What the devil were the Democratic Party leaders thinking of?"

"Watt could have done a lot of damage to the country between now and 1984," the senator said weakly.

"That's what we were counting on," the campaign manager said. "We were going to run clips of him every night during the last week of the campaign. He offended practically every group in the nation."

"What about running against Bill Clark? He said he was going to follow Watt's policy."

"Nobody knows who Clark is. He could strip mine Yosemite National Park and people wouldn't know who did it. Besides he never opens his mouth."

"Why don't we run against David Stockman?"

"Stockman hasn't been heard from since his interview in the Atlantic Monthly."

"I wish Al Haig were still at State. He was good for Democratic votes."

"We can't think of the past. We have to think of what we're going to do now that we don't have Watt to kick around any more. The man was money in the bank for us."

"Maybe Reagan will come up with another cuckoo appointment before 1984, just to placate the conservatives."

"You only find one Watt in any administration. What makes him more dangerous now is that a lot of people think he's a martyr and he'll be able to sell out every $1,000-plate dinner in the state."

The Senator said, "Okay, so what do we do now?"

"We may have to run against Reagan," the campaign manager said.

"That's impossible," the senator said. "He's going to have the whole country believing they're better off today than they were four years ago. Even if we had a truth squad following him around, while he's demagoging, no one would believe us."

"The Democrats should have thought of that before they started dumping all over Jim Watt."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Oct. 23, the 296th day of 1983. There are 69 days left in the year.

On Oct. 23, 1929, stock prices fell sharply on Wall Street in a prelude to the crash that was to come six days later.

In 1835, the 22nd vice president of the United States, Adlai Stevenson, was born in Christian County, Ky. He served in the second administration of Grover Cleveland, from 1893 to 1897.

Past week one of planning, transition, reassessment

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

EDITOR'S REPORT

Hearst

NEW YORK — The past week was one in which history was in the making at a rather rapid rate. It was a period of planning, of transition and reassessment of policies, all of which will play a part in shaping the destinies of men and nations. Seldom does a single week produce as many developments certain to have an effect on this nation's future.

President Reagan did not come right out and say he planned to run for a second term but he signed the papers necessary to crank up the re-election machinery. He must have been encouraged and comforted by the sight of intramural squabbling and of quarreling among the seven men who want to be the Democratic candidate.

The president made another significant move by naming Robert C. McFarlane to be his adviser on the National Security Council. The vacancy was created after William P. Clark was appointed to succeed James Watt as secretary of the interior.

ON THE foreign policy front, Henry Kissinger returned with his team from a fact-finding journey to Central America. He is to report to the president on what course the United States should take in that area. As fighting continued in Lebanon, the president called in his advisers to discuss issues relating to the Middle East.

A few hours later he held his 20th press conference. He was, as usual, statesmanlike and good-humored as he made no bones about his administration's will — and, I hope, America's — to pursue our fight for peace in the Middle East. He denounced the Syrians and their 7,000 Soviet advisers for being a "major roadblock" to such a peace and added these challenging words:

"If they (the Syrians) are trying to wear me down they're going to be disappointed. I don't think there's any way we should stand by and allow Syria to destroy what so many people want."

It struck me as being one of the president's best press conferences in his more than two and a half years in office.

AGAIN, I thought he showed great restraint in refraining from the use of sarcasm when a couple of reporters (one male and one female) chose their brief moment before the TV cameras to show their "knowledge" of military strategy by pontificating the value of "high ground" around the battlefield. This axiom of military tactics is so well understood, even by kids, as to make the two armchair generals look foolish, but showed the president's patience.

The president displayed a sense of timing, which must be a heritage of his acting days, when he jovially "consented" to the formation of a re-election committee on his behalf last Monday.

He signed one letter authorizing establishment of the group and a second to the Federal Election Commission confirming that action. He still has an escape hatch — he has not formally announced yet — but there is little doubt that he will be hitting the campaign trail early in 1984.

THE TIMING could hardly have been more propitious. On the day before the signing formalities, Mr. Reagan completed 1,000 days in the White House, a number which has become almost mystical in the presidency. And on that same day, the Gallup Poll announced that public approval of his performance in office soared to the highest point in 21 months.

According to the survey conducted Sept. 16-19, 48 percent of America definitely approved of the way Mr. Reagan is handling his job. Forty-two percent disapproved and 10 percent had no opinion. Other polls reported he was ahead of any Democrat.

Mr. Reagan's lowest rating in the Gallup Poll was reported last January when approval sank to 35 percent. It has been on the rise ever since, unquestionably as the result of the brightening economy. Almost every day brings announcements of improved business and employment — to the obvious discomfort of Mr. Reagan's foes.

THE NEWS of the past week reminded the nation that President Reagan continues to seek, and get, sound advice on matters of foreign policy. His inexperience in this area was something critics liked to harp on when he went to the White House.

The fact of the matter is that few presidents have qualified as genuine foreign policy experts when they took office. Even if they had, it is impossible to plan in advance for every global crisis. A president has to consult and adjust, as all presidents have done.

That is why President Reagan appointed the Kissinger commission to examine and re-evaluate relations with Central America.

Again in the Middle East Mr. Reagan is exerting presidential leadership. Scarcely had Robert McFarlane warmed his seat in the security council when he and his colleagues were called to confer with the president on what to do next about that bucket of worms.

In addition to Lebanon (where a cease-fire virtually ended before it started) the council discussed sensitive problems relating to Israel on the one hand and the Arab world on the other, where aiding the one can alienate the other.

But the point is, the president consults regularly with those who know a thing or two about the Middle East, Central America and other problem areas around the world.

Oh yes — and he has some pretty experienced uniformed types around him to advise him on military tactics.

SPEAKING OUT

Are hackers budding computer criminals or practical jokers?

By DEIRDRE BELL

Deirdre Bell is a senior student at Midland High School. She is enrolled in four honors classes this year, holds three academic letters, and is a National Merit semifinalist.

Hackers — computer criminals or practical jokers?

Whichever one, hackers are becoming a serious problem among companies with computers open to public systems. Unlike operators with malicious intent to destroy or obtain classified information, hackers break into computer systems for the intellectual challenge and stimulation involved. After obtaining access, hackers prowl around in the computer and often play practical jokes on the system they have entered. Programming messages to flash on the screen at certain times or causing letters or the entire screen to turn upside down make up some of the hackers' jokes. Operators used to see these problems as computer malfunctions, but more often the work turns out to be that of a computer hacker.

How do these hackers obtain access so easily? Reaching other computer systems is actually rather simple. All that is needed is a home computer and a modem, a telephone for the computer. Using the modem, the hacker can dial other modem-equipped computers.

MANY HACKERS even manage to sidestep the phone charges incurred by dialing through the modems. They do this with the help of instructions on electronic "bulletin boards." These boards are message centers for hackers. They exchange numbers of systems and give hints for passwords or entry codes.

Once they have the number of a system and know its functions, hackers can usually find the password by trying many different words. Often the word is one of a list of sample words commonly used by manufacturers or is related to the function of the program. Once a system is cracked, hackers go back to the message boards and leave information and clues for other hackers.

The hacker's main reason for cracking the system, however, is not to destroy or obtain information. Hackers are purely spectators, getting their kicks from breaking into and wandering around in computer systems.

Is breaking into computer systems allowable as long as the operator is not planning to tamper with information? Hackers think so. They don't consider electronic data anyone's private property and therefore don't feel they're doing anything wrong.

THE OWNERS of the infiltrated systems, however, probably have different ideas. While hackers normally don't destroy information, they will change or insert data. This confuses operators and sometimes changes the program. Also, while the hackers are playing jokes, a wrong command or key can accidentally erase valuable information.

The punishments for hackers caught breaking into computer systems, however, are almost non-existent. Most owners do not want to admit their computer systems have been broken into. They fear that their customers will lose faith in the security of the company. Another problem with punishing hackers is that there are very few laws which deal with computer crime. The laws on trespassing and breaking and entering deal with physical possessions such as cars, houses, and property. Our laws need to grow with technology and expand to encompass electronic as well as physical property.

THE OWNERS and manufacturers of computer systems need to work to make hacking more difficult. Programs accessible to legitimate users are easily accessible to hackers as well. Some safety devices are relatively easy to install. A device which cuts the connection after several wrong passwords would deter hackers from repeatedly trying random passwords. Having to redial the system after only a few words would make the process time consuming and discouraging to potential hackers.

The question also arises that if hackers, who are usually in their late teens or early 20s, can break into computer systems with so little equipment and information, what can the criminally-minded do with their sophisticated equipment? Although this could be a serious problem as technology advances, right now high security computers seem well protected from the curious hackers and hopefully even from those searching for information. The hackers have been breaking into low security systems built mainly for easy public access. High security computers are usually well protected by multiple security systems. Another protection for high security computers is their limited area of users. They are not usually open to the public networks, making accidental contact unlikely.

The infiltration of computer systems needs to be considered and treated as a crime. Hackers have done relatively little damage so far, but if computer hacking continues unchecked, the extent and scope of the damage will increase.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Real 'stupidity'

To the Editor:

This is in response to William B. Rea Jr.'s letter to the editor, which ran in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Sunday, Oct. 2, 1983, titled, "Postal Plans." In the article, he criticized the Postal Service because a retail window was opened at the Westside Station in the Mesa Verde Shopping Center. He classified the move as "bureaucratic stupidity." As Station Manager of the Graves Station, I would like to state for the record some of the reasons for such actions.

First of all, the postmaster inherited all of this when he was selected for the vacant position back in January!

Second, the postmaster's opening of the retail window was not intended to increase postal receipts by even $1, much less by $3000 or $4000. His intentions were to divert this much revenue and business from the Graves Station to eliminate the complaints about long lines and parking problems.

Third, the Graves Station was designed to serve a total population of 20,000, not 40,000, like we're doing at the present time.

Fourth, our staffing, as well as clerk hours spent on the retail windows, are authorized by the Management Sectional Center in El Paso. These hours are determined by annual surveys. Two surveys were conducted this year...one in January; and, the most recent survey was completed in September. The last survey showed the retail windows to be overstaffed daily by 1.5 hours (mid-morning and late afternoons). The survey also showed the average waiting time for all customers to be 2.57 minutes; and, that 26.9% of all purchases were for stamps only — which could have been purchased through the self service vending machines in front of the station, thereby eliminating the number of people in line.

El Paso has already requested us to effect the new staffing for a 30-day trial period. The proposed staffing change will be:

8:00 till 8:45 — 1 clerk
8:45 till 9:30 — 2 clerks
9:30 till 9:45 — 1 clerk
9:45 till 3:45 — 2 clerks
3:45 till 4:15 — 3 clerks
4:15 till 5:00 — 1 clerk

Now, let me tell you what I call "bureaucratic stupidity".

When someone, at some point, with more authority than our postmaster, delays and/or shelves a three-year-old plan for bigger and better postal facilities, strategically located for Midland Postal Customers.

And, when someone three years ago, decided that discontinuing the purchase of postal vehicles would save on energy costs.

And, when the lessor of the Graves Station was advised by the City of Midland if he purchased the vacant lots west of the building, they would not allow that area to be converted into a postal parking lot.

Back the bank

To the Editor

This is for the people who stood in line to draw their money out of First National. I bet that 90% of you did not have $10,000 in there. And no matter what happened your money was insured for more than that.

What did you accomplish? Were you proud when you told your neighbor you closed your account? Did it make you feel good? Or did you want another loan and First National at this point in time could not give it to you? So you say, hey if you can't help me today that's it. Or perhaps you wanted a note renewed and First National could not do it because at this time it just wasn't feasible. Did you stop and think that even the largest and the best banks can sometimes need help too?

First National was there for all of us when we needed a bank, otherwise we would not owe them money, right? And if all of us could pay them they would be in good shape, right? So let me ask you one question: is this the way we repay someone who was there when we needed help? I bet most of you who stood in line to withdraw your money either owed them a note they couldn't roll-over, or money you couldn't repay, and your answer to their problem was take what money you have in checking and run like hell to another bank. I am not against other banks, but to withdraw your money from an institution that has served us well through good and bad times, and we have had both, because in Midland we are all in the oil industry. There are few lives here in Midland that First National has not touched and always with the betterment of the community first.

When I bought my trucks, First National was there. When I needed money to run between a long pay period, no problem, First National was there. Recently I had two notes that they could not renew. Not because I'm a bad risk, but because they have problems too. Due to the economy I have had to take the trucks and work them elsewhere. But I tell you this, I am not angry that they could not at this point in time help me.

Let's stand in line to try to make it great again by putting some of it back.

Thanks, Midland

To the Editor:

The Midland Shrine Club would like to say thank you to the people of Midland who helped make the Shrine Circus the biggest and best we have ever had.

The participation of the business community was tremendous. Without their support we could not have enjoyed the success that we had.

The cooperation of the news media was greatly appreciated, especially the Midland Reporter-Telegram for helping us get our story across to the people.

The proceeds help support our Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital in Houston, Texas, and our Burns Institute in Galveston, Texas. We are looking forward to another successful Shrine Circus next year.

Captain America

To the Editor:

During World War II there was a fictitious comic book hero that was created during this war. This figure was decked out in a red, white and blue uniform. He also had a white star in front of the mask he wore. His name, you ask? His name was Captain America.

He fought against the Nazis in Germany, the militarist Japanese in Japan and the communists in Russia. He stood and fought for the American Way.

In the age of people killing and holding hostage American embassy personnel, attempted assassination of our president and the killing of 68 Americans on a commercial jet is not only sad but an aggravating and frustrating time for all American people.

People need something to look up to that is a positive image and example of this country. This character might be outdated and stupid to some, but I believe that Americans still need a symbol that represents America morally and patriotically even in this day and age. Captain America wherever you are, there still are a couple of us who remember what you stand for.

Texas Salute!

To the Editor:

For the past three days I have been reading through the voluminous articles and "Letters to the Editor" printed in The Midland Reporter-Telegram during our ten day absence from Midland, prior to the "demise" of the First National Bank of Midland and the "take-over" by RepublicBank of Dallas.

Apparently the attitudes of each of the employees and officers have been overlooked. As a curious person, and wanting to note the reactions of the public in such circumstances, several trips were made from my office in the First National Bank Tower to the bank lobby. All it took was a "leader" and the rest of the people followed like sheep — making what is commonly called a "Run on the Bank" with brown paper sacks, attache cases, boxes, etc., in hand for the bank employees to dole out the money from various accounts being closed out.

It was gratifying, yet sad, to see all of the employees and officers working their stations under such adverse conditions and yet maintaining a smile on each and every face — as if the money was coming in instead of going out.

Each one of these individuals deserve a big Texas Salute and Thank You for their proud stance to the bitter end.

Child support

To the Editor:

I have heard so much lately about new child support policies in the making. I am a lover of children and think this is great.

It comes to mind, though, that there is another group of children being pushed aside. What about the child who was not born out of wedlock? Why is he an outcast with no legal right of support from his father?

The number of these children is growing everyday. These are the children who are costing taxpayers so much. I feel our society is unfair to give a single man the right to leave his children everywhere he chooses without being liable. These are the mothers who are stuck and looking for help.

If this law is passed (and I hope it will) shouldn't all children benefit? I don't know what it would take to protect these children; but with help from other readers, surely we can.

BILL MODISETT

Perhaps we should all think more of Shirley Drouet

Bill Modisett

Have you ever heard of Shirley Drouet? Have you ever thought about her, what kind of person she may have been, what she liked or disliked, what her life ambitions were?

If not, you should have. All you'll probably be hearing about in coming weeks is the man who murdered her in cold blood — James David Autry. All the screaming liberals who shiver at the thought of avenging a vicious crime will see to that.

Autry deserves to die. Oh, those unthinking idiots who believe there's no such thing in the world as icy cold rage will try to convince you that Autry has probably repented, wept for his victims and begged the Creator's forgivance. Believe it if you want to. I believe he's an animal unfit to live in our society.

You see, Shirley Drouet was an ordinary person, a lot like yourself in certain ways. She had kids, five to be exact. She was divorced, and being the sole support for her family she worked at a convenience store in Port Arthur, a job she knew involved personal risk. Her worst fears were realized there.

She died on a Sunday night in April 1980, when Autry put a six-pack of beer on the counter of the convenience store where she worked. She told him now much the beer cost — $2.70 — and he shot her between the eyes.

Is that not a cold-blooded crime? Should you give your precious mercy to that type of brutal animal? Should I? I don't think so.

Be humane, be compassionate, the bleeding hearts will say. Consider how Autry was reared, how he was deprived, how he was mistreated, they'll say. Let me tell you something. I will be humane and compassionate with anyone willing to change, willing to show humanity or you — if I haven't touched your emotions yet — consider this. Autry then turned his gun on Joe Broussard, a former priest, and Tommy Svarnas, a young Greek seaman. Joe died in the convenience store; Tommy is alive today, turned into a child again by one of Autry's bullets.

All accounts of Autry's incarceration indicate he is a cold, emotionless being. Even if he wept and repented, I'd still have a difficult time believing his sincerity.

All this bunk about whether the chemicals used in Texas' lethal injections cause too painful a death or whether capital punishment is really just are simply smokescreen. The point is very simple: Are laws designed to protect us or to tease us? Does crime mandate punishment? Is human life to be reduced to such low status that, one day, murder is not punished?

One more question: What if Shirley Drouet had not been some nameless, faceless life form 400-plus miles away? What if Shirley Drouet or Joe Broussard or Tommy Svarnas had been a member of your family? They are the ones our laws were supposedly designed to protect, along with you and your family.

It's time for the people in this country who respect justice to stand up and demand that crime be punished.

They should tell the Supreme Court James David Autry should die.

Darrell Galloway is outspoken about some things, such as rocks in the road. He thinks something ought to be done about rough and rocky county roads.

Rural Midlander jarred by rough, bumpy roads

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Darrell Galloway likes most everything about country living but one thing: the roads.

They're rough and bumpy. Considering the taxes he's paying, Galloway figures they ought to be smoothed out and fixed up.

Cars and trucks are jarred when traveling over the rock-plagued caliche road bordering his place, he noted. People are shaken. The peace is disturbed.

"About the only noise we have out here is when the planes fly over or when a truck comes down the road and the pickup bed is (knocked) loose, or some muffler falls off," Galloway said. "You can hear every pickup with a tool box; I'll guarantee you."

Galloway, who says he loves living in the rural area, makes a home with his family just off the paved portion of County Road 1224 South on the outskirts of far southwest Midland. There's almost a mile of the unpaved road that is unsettling to him.

"They hauled these rocks in with the caliche," said the 51-year-old manager of an oil-well serving company, as he viewed the cobblestone-size rock embedded in the caliche. "There's no rocks in this soil. This soil is about 3-feet deep...As much caliche as there is in the county, you can probably buy it for 25 cents a yard."

Galloway complains — without malice — that he can never get in touch with his commissioner at his office. "I get embarrassed calling."

"I'M SURE (Commissioner C. DeWayne) Davis is nice," said Galloway. "I've never met the guy. I understand he's an ex-schoolteacher. He ought to know what's going on."

Davis has been working with the other commissioners and with County Road-and-Bridge Superintendent Albert Stewart on the miles and miles of paved, unpaved and semi-paved roads in the county. But, as Davis has explained before, the county is shy of funds, manpower, material and equipment in playing catch-up in repairing and building roads.

Galloway feels that the school children in his neighborhood aren't getting a fair shake from the rough roads.

"I don't know how many kids live out here," sighed Galloway. "It doesn't make any difference. It's just rough." The road is so rocky that school buses have stopped traveling on much of the road, he said.

Out in the somewhat suburbanized rural area, Galloway has enough conveniences that he doesn't miss the city life and its noisy traffic, the threat of crime and the aloofness of many city dwellers.

"We've got cable TV service. We've got fantastic (well) water," said Galloway, who was reared on a 40-acre farm east of Baton Rouge, La. ("My daddy was a schoolteacher, a hard-boiled old fellow, Scotch-Irish.") "You can cook beans a lot quicker than with city water. I do love my red beans....I can fiddle in the backyard, don't have to smell gasoline (fumes), can leave my lawnmower or wheelbarrow out and no one will steal them. You can't do that in town...I have some good neighbors."

COUNTRY LIVING seems to bring to Galloway memories of his hunting and fishing days. He is at peace in the country...except for the roads.

"That's the main topic out here," he said. "Somebody ought to get up a petition, but it wouldn't do any good."

Talk about the rough roads has led to more talk.

"We've figured on getting our own commissioners and mayor out here," he suggested. "I'd ought to run for county commissioner, but I don't have time. At least, I'd get my roads fixed."

The good-humored Galloway reconsidered his idle threat.

"I need to be a county commissioner like I need to be an aviator. I don't think my company (Monument Well Servicing Inc.) would appreciate it."

Galloway did note that the road near his place has been graded about three times since he moved out to "the country" last year. The good effects of grading disappear, though, when the wind blows and moves the sand off the road. And it's back to the rough roads again.

Despite his hassle with the roads, Galloway wouldn't swap his rough county road with a paved city street if that meant giving up the rural life.

"There are good neighbors out here," he said. "They will help you do anything in the world. That's why I would hate to live in town. They aren't as good neighbors."

DESPITE THE rough road that he would just as soon detour, Galloway plans to stick with country living and with the rural road just as much as he intends to cherish his Louisiana homelife and to savor his West Texas blessings.

"As well as I love to hunt and fish, I couldn't have been raised in a better place," he said. "So, I moved to West Texas (to work in the oil patch in the mid-1950s).

"This old country has been good to me. I've never been without a job...I've always had groceries, good automobiles and didn't have to go to garage sales to buy clothes...I tell everybody I got drafted out here."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Arthritis treatment tailored to individual

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 69 years of age and I really have no serious complaints. But I would like to get some tips on handling my arthritis. Is exercise a good idea for someone with arthritis? — Mr. S.O., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mr. O.: The treatment for arthritis must be tailored to meet the needs of the individual patient, so I can only respond in general terms. I assume, of course, that you are complying in regard to taking any medication that your physician has prescribed. In addition, achieving an ideal weight in particularly important for a patient who has a problem with a weight-bearing joint.

The determination of how much rest and exercise a person needs is often made on a trial-and-error basis. All I can say in this respect is that a proper balance should be struck, but this balance will differ from one patient to another.

One suggestion you might try is to plan your activities so as to avoid aggravating the condition. For example, if you have an arthritic knee, possibly you can arrange your day so that you would not have to walk up and down the stairs unnecessarily.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is pregnant and she has developed lumps in her breast. She went to her doctor and she says he told her not to worry about them. What would you say? — Mrs. J.G., Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Mrs. G.: Don't worry about them. It is not unusual for the milk-producing glands to become swollen during pregnancy, and this can cause the breasts to feel lumpy. If her physician has checked her and is not concerned, I see no reason to question his evaluation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 12-year-old daughter has diabetes, and the doctor has just increased the amount of insulin she takes. Is this common? — Mrs. J.T., New York City

Dear Mrs. T.: Dr. Richard Guthrie, of the University of Kansas School of Medicine in Wichita, says that a child's insulin requirement may triple during the preadolescent growth spurt. It is often necessary to make frequent adjustments in the dosage of insulin around this time.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can alcohol ever be used for the relief of pain? — Edna, Chicago

Dear Edna: Alcohol may be used to relieve pain in some conditions; however, alcohol is a drug and should not be used for pain relief without a physician's approval.

For Ronnie, Duluth, Minn.: Cancer of the testicle is primarily a disease of young men, but it is one of the most curable cancers. Individuals in whom the testes did not descend until after age six are at increased risk. Heredity, repeated injury, infection, and side effects from mumps may also increase the risk of testicular cancer.

According to the American Cancer Society, most of the 3,500 men who will be diagnosed this year as having the disease will be between 29 and 35 years of age.

Jury: Policeman's force justifiable

GALVESTON (AP) — A federal court jury ruled a Galveston police officer used justifiable force when he shot and killed a man and his girlfriend with a single shot from his pistol.

The panel of five women and one man deliberated about 90 minutes Friday before returning the verdict in the $22 million wrongful death lawsuit filed against Officer Milton Strickland by relatives of the two victims.

State and federal grand juries earlier refused to indict Strickland in the deaths, and the police department declined to discipline the lawman.

Strickland, 34, testified he shot Harry George, 32, and Susan Palumbo, 23, on March 16, 1981, while answering a disturbance call.

The nine-year veteran said he thought George was going to throw a knife. Strickland said he ordered George to drop the weapon and repeatedly ordered Ms. Palummbo to move.

When he refused, Strickland fired a single shot from his .44-caliber Magnum pistol. The bullet passed through George' body and struck Ms. Palumbo.

Precautions will save plants from freezing

With the onset of a frost or a freeze, many people become concerned about what they should to do protect their vegetation from freeze damage. There are certain precautions one can take to minimize frost and freeze damage.

First, use only thoroughly hardy plants in the basic part of your landscape, such as shade trees, screening and foundation plantings. Use the more tender plants only as fillers, or in secondary places (entryways, display plants or borders).

Become familiar with your garden's micro-climate. Observe which areas are warm and which are cool. Recognize danger areas such as stretches of open ground exposed to the sky on all sides, particularly to the north sky.

Plants in shallow or in low enclosed areas where cold air is held motionless are also in danger. The cold air will tend to settle in these areas with poor air drainage to cause more damage.

Tender plants are safest planted under overhanging eaves, lath structures or under tree branches. South-facing walls absorb heat during the day and radiate it at night, warming nearby plants.

The most ideal location of all is a south-facing wall with an overhang. Avoid placing tender plants such as figvine, camellias, bougainvillea or hibiscus on a north exposure. Cold north winds will take their toll.

Condition plants and soil for frost. Taper off nitrogen feeding in late summer and early fall to slow growth and permit wood to harden. Plants in a state of active growth are more vulnerable to freeze damage and less hardy. Reducing water will help harden growth, but keep soil moist at the onset of frost because a moist soil holds and releases more heat than dry soil.

Know how to recognize the signs of approaching frost. Knowing a frost is at hand will give you the advantage in preparing to cope with it. Still air, absence of cloud cover, low humidity, and low temperature (45 degrees or less at 10 p.m.) set the stage for a possible frost.

If you notice these signs at bedtime, take steps to get tender container plants inside or undre protection of a porch roof or the garage. Burlap or plastic covers over stakes or frames will do a good job, but make sure the cover does not touch the foliage. Uncover during the day.

If plants have been damaged by frost or freeze, do not be in a hurry to prune them. Premature pruning may stimulate new tender growth that will be nipped by later cold. Wait and prune in early spring.

In cases of really severe cold weather when the temperature falls below 20 degrees, the less hardy plants may not make it regardless of your precautions. Even the more hardy plants may be injured.

The most sensible way to protect plants from severe freeze is to attempt to protect their roots by mounding or mulching. If the roots survive, the plants can be salvaged and new top growth developed. Use grass clippings, straw, cornstalks, or leaf mold, and cover the roots to a depth of six to eight inches.

Broad-leafed evergreens may be hardy to cold, but they suffer windburn and sunburn when low temperatures, strong sun and cold, drying winds combine forces.

Protect with burlap or lath shelters on the windward side. But, above all, keep evergreens watered through the fall and winter to reduce leaf burn.

Midkiff couple has trees for sale

MIDKIFF — A cotton-farming couple who has turned to growing evergreen trees will harvest Christmas trees this fall and winter.

The couple, Frank and Joyce Evridge, will have about 5,000 of their 40,000 trees ready for harvesting this season from their Upland Nursery.

In April 1978, they started their experimental planting of 280 Pinus Eldarica trees, which have grown to 20 feet in height.

The Evridges launched their tree-crop experiment in the wake of the cotton surplus and the decline in cotton prices. At that time, they realized their family could not depend solely on cotton for their livehihood.

In this market season, the Evridges primarily will concentrate on balled-in-burlap trees to be used during the holiday season and then planted.

Loan applications being taken

TEMPLE — The Farmers Home Administration is accepting applications for drought-emergency farm loans, according to J. Lynn Futch, FmHA state director.

Application deadline is Feb. 16.

Generally, farmers and ranchers who have lost 30 percent of their production due to the drought are eligible for emergency loans, Futch said.

Agriculture lecture series slated

LEVELLAND — Various aspects of agriculture will be discussed here Friday in the third annual Sam Blair Lecture Series at South Plains College.

Dr. David Murrah, director of the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, will discuss "Cattle Kingdom to Dry Farming" at 10 a.m. in the college's Theatre of the Performing Arts.

Dr. Donald Green, chairman of the history department of Central State University in Edmond, Okla., and author of "Land of the Underground Rain: Irrigation on the Texas High Plains, 1910-1970, will discuss "Transition to Irrigation at 11 a.m.

Charles W. Mayfield, executive director of the Texas Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) will discuss "Evolution of the United States Department of Agriculture Farm Program" at noon.

Dr. Dean Hughes, an agricultural economist at Texas Tech University, will talk on "Farm Financing" at 1:30 p.m.

High cotton carry over predicted

LUBBOCK — The United States Department of Agriculture is forecasting a U.S. cotton carryover of 4.4 million bales at the end of the current marketing year on Aug. 1, 1984.

The carry over would be down from 7.9 million bales in 1983, according to the Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

The weekly futures report of a leading commodity brokerage firm sets the year-end cotton "surplus" at 3.7 million bales.

If the USDA projection proves correct, then the higher carry over would considerably tarnish the price outlook for the remainder of the year, said Donald Johnson, executive vice president of Lubbock-based cotton group.

"The need for effective production control measures in the 1984 cotton program becomes more intense," he said.

4-H clubs plan three-wheel rodeo

A three-wheel rodeo will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday under the sponsorship of the Midland County 4-H Clubs in the Midland County 4-H Arena, according to Alan L. McWilliams, Midland County agent for agriculture.

Registration will begin at 10 a.m. that day. Entry fees will be $3 per event.

Events will include the keyhole, flag race, barrel race, pole bending, the stake race and the flat track.

The rodeo will be broken down into four age groups and four engine classes. Youngsters age 9 through 19 may join 4-H.

Admission to the rodeo will be $1 per person, McWilliams said.

Hamburger lunches will be available at the arena, which is near the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

Proceeds from the rodeo will go to the Midland County 4-H Building Fund.

POSITIVE THINKING

Become 'whole minder' by giving all you've got

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I once had a good friend, a big good old boy type of man named Charlie. He came into my life when I was the luncheon speaker at the National Standard Parts Association Convention in the old Hotel Sherman in Chicago. After the talk I went at once to my room to prepare to check out and then go on to O'Hare International Airport for an airplane to another convention in Dallas. No sooner had I entered my room than the telephone rang. A rather forceful woman was on the telephone stating that she and her husband had just heard my talk and that she was bringing her husband up to see me.

Before I could reply the lady hung up and soon came a sharp preemptory knock on my door. I opened it to see a little woman standing and behind her a big hulking man. "I'm Mable," she snapped, "and this is Charlie." Authoritatively she burst in followed by the gangling Charlie and plumped down in a chair. "Sit down, Charlie," she ordered and so commanding was she that I sat also. "Just look at that big guy, Dr. Peale," she said. "With his size and education and the head he's got on his shoulders you would think he would have amounted to something, wouldn't you? But I've just got to put it to you straight. He just doesn't amount to anything much. But he's got the makings and believe me before I get through with him he's going to live up to his potential or else." So ran her racy, forceful talk.

"Now," she continued, "we heard your speech today about how positive thinkers reach their goals and I want you to make a positive thinker out of that big hulk over there."

She finally had to stop to get her breath so I broke in. "How about it, Charlie? Is Mabel right in what she says about you?"

"Sure, Doc," he drawled, "that little lady is always right. Pretty powerful, isn't she?"

"Yes, she sure is," I agreed. Mabel rather startled me at first, but I pretty soon got to liking her very much and admiring her, too. Her methods were not what we might call all that ladylike but her love for her husband was true.

"Well, it's like this," explained Charlie, "I come up with some pretty good ideas. An I sometimes get off to a not bad start. I have half a mind that I can maybe put this one across. But you know how it is. Maybe there's some bugs in it or the timing isn't just right or something. Anyway I just don't ever seem to get going and I'm not getting any younger. And I can't say I blame Mabel for getting exasperated with me."

I met these two several times in the weeks that followed. They seemed to sort of like me and would turn up unexpectedly wherever I was giving a speech. And each time we would have a talk, and Charlie would say, "Norman, I've got an idea, a real good one. This is a honey, a natural and I've got half a mind..."

Then I got it in one swift revelation. "Charlie," I cried," "I've got you figured at last. You are a half-a-minder. Now we are going to change you into a whole minder."

Mabel jumped up, threw her arms around her husband, "You big no-account, loveable Charlie — that's your trouble. From now on no more of that half-a-minder stuff. You're on your way."

WHY BMW CHOSE TO CHANGE THE "QUINTESSENTIAL SPORTS SEDAN."

BMW does not annually reinvent the automobile. Instead they periodically refine it.

So after six years the sedan Car and Driver nominated "the quintessential sports sedan"—the BMW 320i—has evolved into a new car: the 318i. A machine with a totally redesigned, fully independent suspension system, new aerodynamics, new technology, and a new fuel injection system that delivers even greater torque.

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

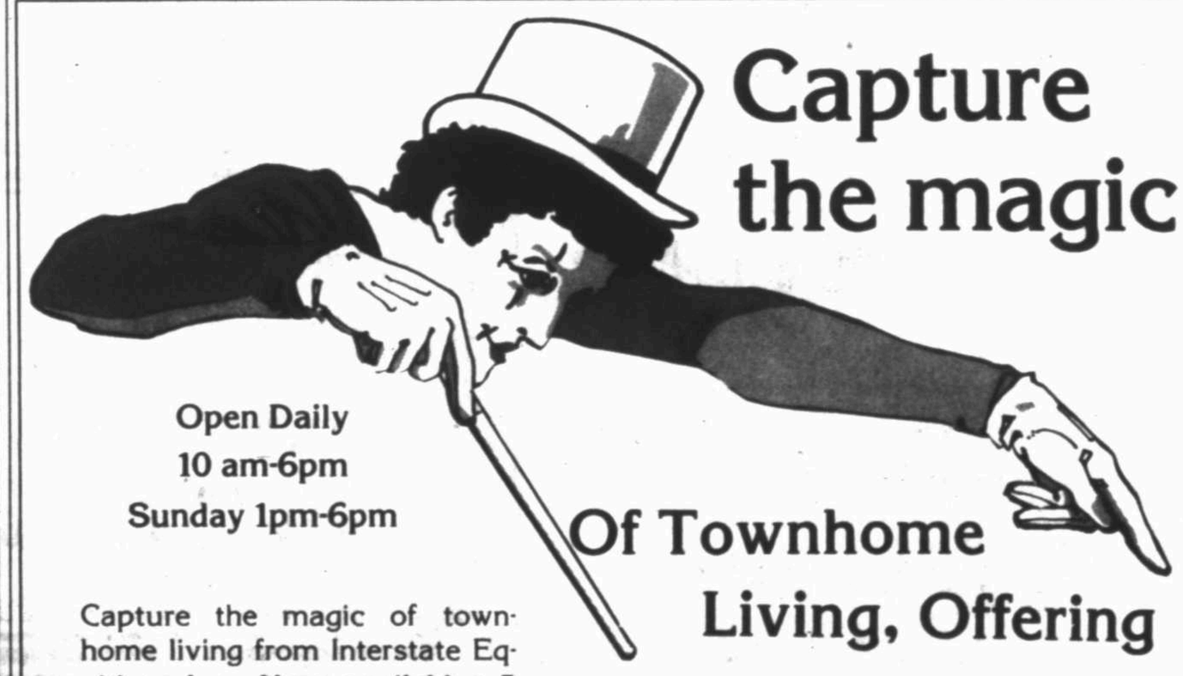

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

"I'VE SEEN EVERY APARTMENT COMMUNITY IN MIDLAND."

"My feet hurt and my patience was wearing thin. I'd seen every apartment community in Midland, and none met my standards... until I discovered Oakridge Apartments. Just a little off the beaten trail, Oakridge has the quiet, private location I'd been looking for. Plus all the other extras I'd just about given up on. Like new construction, nice, friendly neighborhood appeal and superior amenities—indoor spa and sauna, clubhouse and pool, to name just a few—Oakridge is the greatest. I should know, I've seen them all."

1- and 2-bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

Carole Paul and daughter Tracy study the human anatomy in a booklet for the class, "Straight Talk."

'Talk' encourages communication

Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, Inc. believes well informed parents should be primarily responsible for providing their children with sex education.

The Midland Planned Parenthood clinic offers a class for mothers and daughters and fathers and sons and a four-part class series for parents in November and December.

"This is the kind of information that needs to be repeated over and over again," said Mrs. Cyndi Lehman-Budd, a volunteer class instructor. "It's not just something you talk about once."

The registered nurse said planned parenthood education is essential to the community.

"It's an on-going process that should start when children are young so they will understand how their bodies work and understand it's a normal process that works the same for everyone," she said.

"Parents should keep the door open and answer questions as they come up. It lets the child know it's a normal thing."

Mrs. Deanna Holloway, a volunteer for the Straight Talk class said, "It's better if girls know what we didn't know."

Mrs. Lehman-Budd said many mothers today had mothers who didn't talk about growing up. "They don't want their daughters to go through the same thing," she said.

Both instructors said it's obvious many of the mothers they meet didn't get the basic information they needed when they were younger.

"It shows a lot of courage for them to come here," Mrs. Lehman-Budd said.

"Now that the words are out in the open," she said, "They will feel more comfortble to talk about it."

Planned Parenthood was established in Midland in 1964. It is a non-profit organization with a paid staff and a volunteer board of directors. Trained nurses are directed by doctors who donate their services, according to Mrs. Lehman-Budd.

Services offered at the Midland clinic are family planning, birth control counseling, venereal disease testing, cancer screening, gynecological exams, breast exams, counseling and referrals, a film and book lending library, a speaker's bureau and clinics for post and pre-natal care.

Services are paid for on a sliding fee scale, said Mrs. Lehman-Budd. The Midland clinic is supported by fees and donations.

The next "Straight Talk for Mothers and Daughters" class will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 15 at the Midland clinic, 307 E. Texas. The class, forgirls 8-13 years, discusses the physical and emotional changes during puberty. Cost is $5.

"Straight Talk for Fathers and Sons," which deals with the physical and emotional changes during puberty, will be held at the Midland Clinic at 7 p.m., Dec. 13. The class is for boys ages 10-15 years.

"Parents as Sex Educators" is a two-part course designed to provide parents with information, communication skills, and resources to assist in the sexuality education of their children. The class will be offered Nov. 5 and Nov. 12 from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. All classes will be at the Unitarian Church of Midland at Midkiff and Neely. Cost is $15.

For registration and more information, call 563-2530.

Tarsha Henderson, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. David W. Henderson, reads a pamphlet from the class.

"Straight Talk" is designed to enhance communication between mothers and daughters about growing up, puberty, reproductive anatomy and menstruation. A course is also offered for boys and their fathers. Future classes are scheduled for November and December.

Cyndi Lehman-Budd, a registered nurse and instructor, explains the female anatomy to the class from a chart.

Carole Paul discussed with her daughter Tracy, 10, the changes she will go through as she graduates from childhood to puberty to adulthood, but she felt that wasn't enough.

Mrs. Paul said she and Tracy have covered the subject in the privacy of their home but she decided it would help to hear about menstruation and growing up from professionals at Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin, Inc.

"Having it all laid out by professionals and not just hearing it from mother helps," Mrs. Paul said.

SIX MOTHERS brought a daughter or two to the Midland clinic recently to participate in "Straight Talk for Mothers and Daughters."

The class is designed to encourage communication between mothers and their daughters, about growing up, reproductive anatomy, puberty and menstruation.

Cyndi Lehman-Budd, a registered nurse, and Deanna Holloway, a volunteer in the Odessa clinic, donate their time to teach the monthly course.

Mrs. Lehman-Budd led the group which consisted of six mothers and eight daughters aged 8-11 years.

"Bringing mothers and daughters together to discuss growing up is the goal of this class," Mrs. Lehman-Budd said.

"MANY PARENTS feel they need guidance in approaching the subject of growing up with their children," she said. "This class provides them with basic information while opening the door for further parent/child discussions."

For two hours the group explored the physical and emotional changes that begin a girl's transition to womanhood.

The class started with a film followed by a discussion with models, diagrams and pamphlets to help reinforce information provided in the film.

"This is a normal stage of development," Mrs. Lehman-Budd said. "Each girl goes through these changes at her own rate and in her own way."

THE FILM SHOWN to the group carried the message that everyone develops differently. In the film, the protaganist, Janie, was concerned because she wasn't developing at the same rate as her peers.

Janie received advice from several people including her physical education teacher who told her, " 'It's your race, you've got to go at your own pace.' "

Janie recorded her thoughts in a diary, which was later found by a classmate and to the girl's horror, read by her peers. But Janie's embarassment turned to relief when the girls confided to her they all shared her feelings about growing up.

After the film the mothers and daughters separated into groups. Mrs. Holloway met with the mothers in one room and Mrs. Lehman-Budd talked to the daughters in another room.

WHEN ASKED TO recall the feelings and changes they experienced during puberty, the mothers exclaimed, "It's been too long." But after some thought, they provided Mrs. Holloway with a list to compare with their daughters' ideas compiled on the chalkboard down the hall.

The young girls reflected on the movie's message and volunteered their feelings for the list.

Kimberly McQueen, 9, grinned a lot and chewed thoughtfully on the corner of a floral pamphlet and shrugged when it was her turn to add to the growing list of adolescent problems.

The mothers reentered the room and compered their list with their daughters'.

THE CHALKBOARD included emotional changes such as a growing interest in males and appearance and an increase in disputes with parents as well as physical changes such as hair growth and breast development.

"One of my friends has bigger breasts and she tries to make us feel jealous," said Tarsha Henderson, 9.

Mrs. Lehman-Budd reassured Tarsha about breast size. "Whatever size you are is fine and functional."

Diagrams of the female reproductive anatomy and the menstrual cycle were distributed. The teachers discussed the drawings and the mothers reviewed the sketches with their daughters.

Sanitary products and proper usage was also discussed.

Class information was reinforced in a question and answer session called "Dear Gabby." Girls provided advice for problems posed in a format similar to advice columnist Abigail Van Buren or "Dear Abby."

AT THE CONCLUSION of the class mothers and daughters shared their thoughts on the evening's discussion.

While most of the girls admitted they are better prepared for what lies ahead they are still "scared" about growing up.

Mrs. Leola Henderson said it is time for her "almost fully matured" daughter, Tarsha, to learn about the facts of life.

"She's exposed to a lot of information in school and other places," she said. "I thought they (Planned Parenthood) could explain it to her better."

Mrs. Henderson said it is important for youngsters to get their facts straight from the proper source. She said she is not opposed to sex education in the classroom. "I don't see anything wrong with teaching sex in school. If they don't get it in the classroom they're definitely going to get it out of the classroom."

THE MIDLAND woman said children's questions should be answered when asked. "Parents don't take the time they should to explain, whether it is a lack of knowledge or embarassment."

Mrs. Karen Collier and her daughter, Amy, 10, attended the class. "It's nice to have the same knowledge at the same time," Mrs. Collier said. "It's a good avenue to start on."

The mother of Kelly, 11, and Kimberly, 9, Mrs. Jo Ann McQueen, said the class is helpful because it is two hours devoted only to anatomy, menstruation and the ups and downs of puberty.

"You're here and you take the time to go over it. We didn't spend as much time on this at home."

MRS. SHERIE Grattan agreed and stressed the importance of the girls talking with their peers. "We covered a lot of things we wouldn't have covered at home," she said.

Several of the mothers admitted they learned a few things during the class. "I didn't know some things," Mrs. Irma Morales said.

Mrs. Grattan echoed the sentiments of most of the women in the group. "These kids are really lucky," she said. "I wish there had been something for us at this age."

Mom may risk health

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A mother who holds a job outside the home risks poorer health than a childless working woman, researchers have concluded.

A reason for poorer health among working mothers is that they have more stress and less leisure, University of Wisconsin economics professor Barbara Wolfe said Wednesday.

While employment itself can be good for health, she said, "it is the combination of working and raising small children that is detrimental."

"Working women with small children sleep less, watch less TV and read less," she said. "These women don't have much 'down time.'"

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Karen and Roy Williamson entertained with a party at the Petroleum Club last weekend to announce the engagement of their daughter Jana, to Kelly Smith. The guests enjoyed a cocktail buffet, and the background piano music of Shirley Hansen add a festive air to the proceedings.

The party decor included a stunning arrangement of exotic flowers, including bird of paradise and 15 varieties of lilies in oranges, golds, fall tones and touches of blue, on a mirrored pedestal atop the serving table. Shades of pinks and burgandy were used to decorate the confection table and the guest registry.

Special guests at the party were Kelly's parents, Vaneece and Charles Smith of Tyler.

Both Jana and Kelly are UT graduates and now working in Dallas. They are planning a January wedding at Perkins Chapel on the SMU campus.

RETURNING TO MIDLAND after a ten-year absence, Meredith and Ned Swallow are glad to be back home. They recently had the pleasure of showing off the Tall City to Ned's cousins, Lenore and Rune Swanson of Dallas on their first visit to West Texas. The guests were particularly impressed with the city's fine golf courses and outstanding restaurants.

The Swallows were given a great send-off by their Houston friends and an equally warm welcome here when they retired from Shell and returned. They are so glad to be back with family and old friends. Their sons Chuck and Jack, along with Jack's wife Janet and two young children, live here. They are also happy to have daughter Jan Pickett and her family back in Texas after living in New York. They live in Georgetown, where Jan's artist husband Denny is also using his talent to assist in the renovation of old homes, including an antebellum home they have purchased for themselves. Denny is the son of long-time Midlanders Valerie and Judge Perry Pickett. Jan commutes to Austin, where she teaches at UT.

TO CELEBRATE THE approaching marriage of Judy Johnson and Terry Gant, a cocktail party was held recently in the home of Lou and Paul Haskins. A Mexican theme was carried out in the food and decor.

Co-hosting the party were Josie and Bob Cullen, Mary Jo Drury, Jean and Bill Huffman, Myna and Jack Young and JoAnn and John Ryan.

The honorees will be married November 12 in Midland.

A FUN AND EXCITING trip to New York City was enjoyed recently by a three-generation Midland family, Gertrude (Mrs. Edwin) Alstrin, her daughter Susan (Mrs. Ron) Britton and Susan's daughter Carolyn. The trio was en route to Wallingford, Connecticut, to enroll Carolyn for her junior year at Choate-Rosemary Hall.

While in the Big Apple, they especially enjoyed Sandy Duncan's show, "Five-Six-Seven-Eight...DANCE!" with the Rockettes at Radio City Music Hall. In the "it's a small world" department, they encountered Midlanders Nancy and Buddy Anguish and son Rod Steel, and a former Midlander, Kevin Pearce of Houston and now a student at Columbia University, in the theatre lobby. The group enjoyed dinner together at Sardi's after the show.

The Midlanders found Connecticut's country inns charming and enjoyed dining in Ridgefield and Avon, celebrating Gertrude's birthday at the latter city..

IT WAS A HAPPY OCCASION indeed when Mary Frances and Warren Brown Jr. observed their 30th wedding anniversary recently. A home Mass was celebrated by their son Father Warren Brown of San Juan, Texas, and Father Greg Nevlud of San Antonio, a friend of the family. The Brown's other children, Carolyn (Mrs. David) Hobby and college students Paul Brown and Melanie Brown also participated by reading Scriptures. Mary Frances and Warren renewed their wedding vows during the Mass.

Special music was povided by St. Ann's choir directed by Ed Leps; Harriet (Mrs. E.F.) Motter, pianist; Jennye (Mrs. M.P.) Ready, soloist and Mike Seary, guitarist.

A buffet was served following the service to over 60 guests. The party rooms were gaily decorated in a Mexican Fiesta theme, with paper flowers made by Julia (Mrs. Carl) Doris and pinatas. Members of the house party were Verna (Mrs. Joe) Canon, Clare (Mrs. Felix) Vinklarek, Dorothy (Mrs. Joseph) Mueller, Ann (Mrs. Andy) Andrews and Mary Elsie (Mrs. Don) Troy.

The Browns were married in New Orleans on September 19, 1953 and moved to Midland in 1959 from Fort Worth. Warren is with Texaco, and Mary Frances in a teacher at Anson Jones Elementary School.

Forests once reserves

On March 4, 1907, the name "forest reserves" was changed to "national forests."

The name was changed to indicate that the forests and their resources were not reserved and locked up but were meant for immediate use and for the enjoyment and recreation of future generations.

California Rieslings improved

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

At one time, Californians made Rieslings the way International Harvester might make sports cars: not very lean or graceful. Riesling grapes growing in many warmer areas of the state ripened too fully for the resulting wine to have any finesse.

Alcohol levels usually were too high, the wines had clumsy, heavy, lead-footed aromas, the delicacy of peanut butter and they aged about as gracefully as a mayfly.

TRUE, there have been exceptions, but since California wine makers rarely tell the consumer very much about the wines on their wine labels, the buyer has been left to his own to figure out if the wine being bought was sweet or dry, soft or full-bodied.

(I would hope more wine makers put such critical information as residual sugar, total acid and pH on their wine label. At present, only a few wine makers tell you such important details.)

HOWEVER, in the last year, I have had a number of fine wines made from the grape called Johannisberg Riesling (or White Riesling), and it's clear Californians are learning to make them more delicate and more appealing.

Notably, 1982 Rieslings from Chateau St. Jean ($7.50), Mondavi ($7.50), and Phelps ($8) all intrigued me. All were relatively dry, appley-fresh in aroma, and well balanced.

TO TEST this variety, I staged a blind tasting of 12 Rieslings from the 1982 harvest, and threw in two 1981s to see how they would stack up. And the general remarks of the tasters later confirmed my feeling: California is getting a handle on how to make delicate Riesling.

Winner of the tasting by an eyelash was the Haywood, which coincidentally was one of the driest wines on the table at .6 percent residual sugar. Every taster liked this wine, rating it among the top three on the table. It was fresh, appley, crisp and balanced.

The Joseph Phelps ran second, even though it had a more delicate aroma, with a hint of cloves.

DEAR ABBY

Frugal man stingy with commitments

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am in my late 50s and involved with a man in his middle 60s. I have been waiting for a year and a half for this man to talk marriage, but he doesn't budge. When I ask him if we have a future together, he says that he can't see the end of the tunnel.

He likes money and believes in saving it, so the "entertainment" is at his place or mine (usually mine). He seldom takes me anywhere.

My friends tell me not to expect a commitment from him because a man will not buy a cow if he can get milk for free.

So tell me, Dear Abby, should I give him a time limit and an ultimatum? — TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: Never give anyone an ultimatum unless you are prepared to take no for an answer. And don't expect a man his age to "buy a cow" — the older he gets, the less milk he needs.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my mother-in-law. We've been living with her, trying to save enough money to get on our own. We haven't been married a year yet. We weren't forced into it; it's what we both wanted. I've just turned 17 and Stevie just turned 19. We've been abiding by his mother's rules, which is only right, but she treats us like kids. She makes all the decisions, and if we don't do it her way she takes it out on me. Stevie is no help at all. He doesn't make any decisions on his own. His mother runs our lives, and when she puts me down and picks on me, Stevie doesn't say a word.

It got so bad last week I left her house, and now I'm staying with my mother until I get my mind straight. I love Stevie and want our marriage to last. How can I get back with him and solve my mother-in-law problem? — HURTING IN SOUTH DAKOTA

DEAR HURTING: As long as your mother-in-law is providing you with bed and board, you will be considered "the kids," and she will call the signals. Marriage might have been what you and Stevie wanted, but until he is sufficiently independent to leave his mother's home, don't expect any support from him.

DEAR ABBY: Three months ago, I moved into a third-floor apartment on Nob Hill in San Francisco. A woman on the second floor owns an old dog I'll call "The Howler." The woman leaves "The Howler" locked inside the apartment while she is at work and out on the town, weeknights as well as weekends. He howls incessantly from the time the woman leaves until she comes home.

When I told the woman that her dog's howling was disturbing me, she became hostile and said there was nothing she could do about it.

I called the Police Department and was told that the police will come to the apartment when the owner of the dog is not home, and they will record (from the outside) the sound level of the dog's howling. Then they will decide if the dog is howling at an unacceptable level. If it is, they will send someone from the Noise Abatement Bureau to cite the woman. They said they consider this a "low-priority problem."

What do you say, Abby? — A VICTIM OF HOWLING

DEAR VICTIM: A howling dog is a "low-priority problem" compared to murder, rape and robbery. But it's a top-priority problem to those who are forced to listen to it constantly.

I say you have a large bone to pick with your apartment manager.

DEAR ABBY: I have another response for "Sober in St. Paul," who asked what he should say to people who tell him he's no fun to be with since he quit drinking.

How about: "Gee, since I've been sober, you're not much fun to be with either." — BEEN THERE

Lamb fat content drops

According to a recent U.S. Department of Agriculture study, the fat content of lamb cuts has been reduced during the past 25 years.

"When we compared the fat content of six cooked lamb cuts from the 1958 Leverton and Odell study," said Isabel Wolfe, administrator of the Human Nutrition Information Service of the USDA, "we found that the fat content of cooked separable lean lamb is lower now than it was in the 1950s.

AT WIT'S END

Doing aerobics alone heroic

By ERMA BOMBECK

Today I salute that brave band of lonely women who do aerobics in their living rooms all by themselves.

I used to think the spoils belonged to the ones who dragged out of bed, sacked themselves into a pair of purple tights, drove four or five miles to a studio and bared their varicose veins to 15 or 20 other women.

I was wrong.

Doing aerobics by yourself takes every bit of discipline you will ever have. It's as pointless as putting on lipstick when your husband is out of town. It's as rewarding as making a broccoli casserole for a child's birthday party. It's as ludicrous as painting a happy face on the inside of your garbage can lid.

Who cares?

You find out a lot of things about yourself when you do aerobics alone that you don't want to know. For example, I found out why I really went to aerobics class: to dress up in cute clothes and show off.

In my aerobics class, I never breathed hard, did 15 jumping jacks without fainting and was careful not to sweat like a pig. I took pride in walking to the car before I let my stomach hang out.

At home, it was a different story. I took every advantage I could think of to quit. I quit exercising when the phone rang. I quit eight times to adjust the volume on the stereo.

In time, I became quite ugly. I said things to Jane Fonda that I'm ashamed of. Even today when I hear the words, "Make it burn," I have to hold my head over my mouth to keep from becoming a public embarrassment.

So to all of you women out there who have pushed back the coffee table and have no one to hear you groan and no one to hear your screams, I salute you with a round of applause.

Or did I just walk across the room? I tell you, working out alone can make you squirrely.

Vanilla comes from tropical orchid seed pods

Copley News Service

Most people have a vague idea that vanilla comes from some sort of bean, but since American cooks generally use only the extract in cooking, the origin of this fragrant concoction remains somewhat mysterious. Following, then, is a short primer on this favorite flavoring.

Natural vanilla comes from the pods of several kinds of tropical orchids which belong to the genus vanilla. These long, skinny pods are filled with an oily pulp which contains the seeds known as vanilla beans.

The island of Madagascar, off the coast of Africa, produces most of the world's vanilla; 80 percent of all imported vanilla originates there. Java and Tahiti export small amounts, and while Mexico does grow vanilla, it is not an export item.

Vanilla extract is made from sun-dried beans which go through a six-month curing process. The beans are then steeped in a 35 percent alcohol solution. Vanillin is an oil which develops in the beans during curing and is dissolved in the alcohol to produce the extract we use in baking.

Consumers seen as more value-conscious

By The Associated Press

Observers have noted that American consumers are more value-conscious than they used to be.

"People seem to be looking for products that reflect their own sense of individuality," says Barbara Koller of Burlington Industries in New York.

The firm recently conducted studies with consumer focus groups to determine possible new product directions. As a result of the studies, Ms. Koller, who is manager of new product development for Burlington House Draperies, says the company believes it is on the right track in offering more custom detailing in its ready-made window curtains and draperies.

A trend toward more custom detailing in window coverings, bedspreads and related products appears to be industry-wide. At a recent wholesale market for curtains and draperies, for example, a number of companies introduced new ideas in ready-mades which should provide more options for consumers.

These ideas include reversible drapery and matching bedspread ensembles, custom-like swag and jabot treatments for windows and a wider assortment of colors than were formerly available in ready-mades.

Reversible products are popular with customers, according to retailers, because they offer two looks in one product.

Those shopping for window coverings this fall should find dressier fabrics and more elaborate treatments in the stores.

Tapestry, damask and satin draperies (often in easy-care synthetic fibers) are more widely available than they used to be, coinciding with the reintroduction of more formal window treatments. The new draperies often have a softer feel because more fabric is being used in fuller, more gathered constructions.

Dressmaker details which give window coverings a more formal look include intricate stitching, ruffles, ruching, as well as braid, ribbon and lace trim. Such details used to be found only on custom-made window coverings.

Besides providing more elaborate ready-made curtains, some manufacturers have expanded custom and made-to-measure programs giving consumers the option of specifying the length and width of their draperies as well as selecting from among several header treatments.

Not too long ago, Ms. Koller said, the ready-made drapery market was largely dominated by pinch pleated draperies in a rather narrow selection of fabrics and colors. Today, other options are available, including curtains and draperies sewn to accommodate the so-called European-style flat rod or made with an oversize rod pocket.

Ms. Koller says the new products are industry's way of satisfying consumer demand. Burlington's focus group of consumers said recently that they would prefer to buy more decorative domestics but that such products were not readily available in the stores at reasonable prices. Today's emphasis on traditional decor has also stimulated the development of these softer window treatments.

Even desire to save energy has played a part, since more elaborate layered window treatments are energy conservers.

Consumers are seeking more sophisticated home decorations than in the past under the influence of shelter magazines in whose pages they see pictures of interesting new window treatments which they then wish to duplicate, added Ms. Koller.

Drapery hardware producers — as well as makers of ready-made draperies — are also developing do-it-yourself information on how to measure, select hardware for, and hang draperies.

Snacks an American 'way of life' today

Snacking is a way of life for most Americans today.

Snacks provide 10 percent to 23 percent of 12 important nutrients, according to a study of data collected by the Market Research Corporation of America.

For people with normal health, when and how frequently we eat often are not as important as what and how much we eat. Experts say the key to good snacking is in concentrating on the quality of snack foods, not the quantity.

For preschoolers select snacks that will complement their daily food plan. They should have energy-giving qualities and be fun to eat.

Contacts require care when makeup used

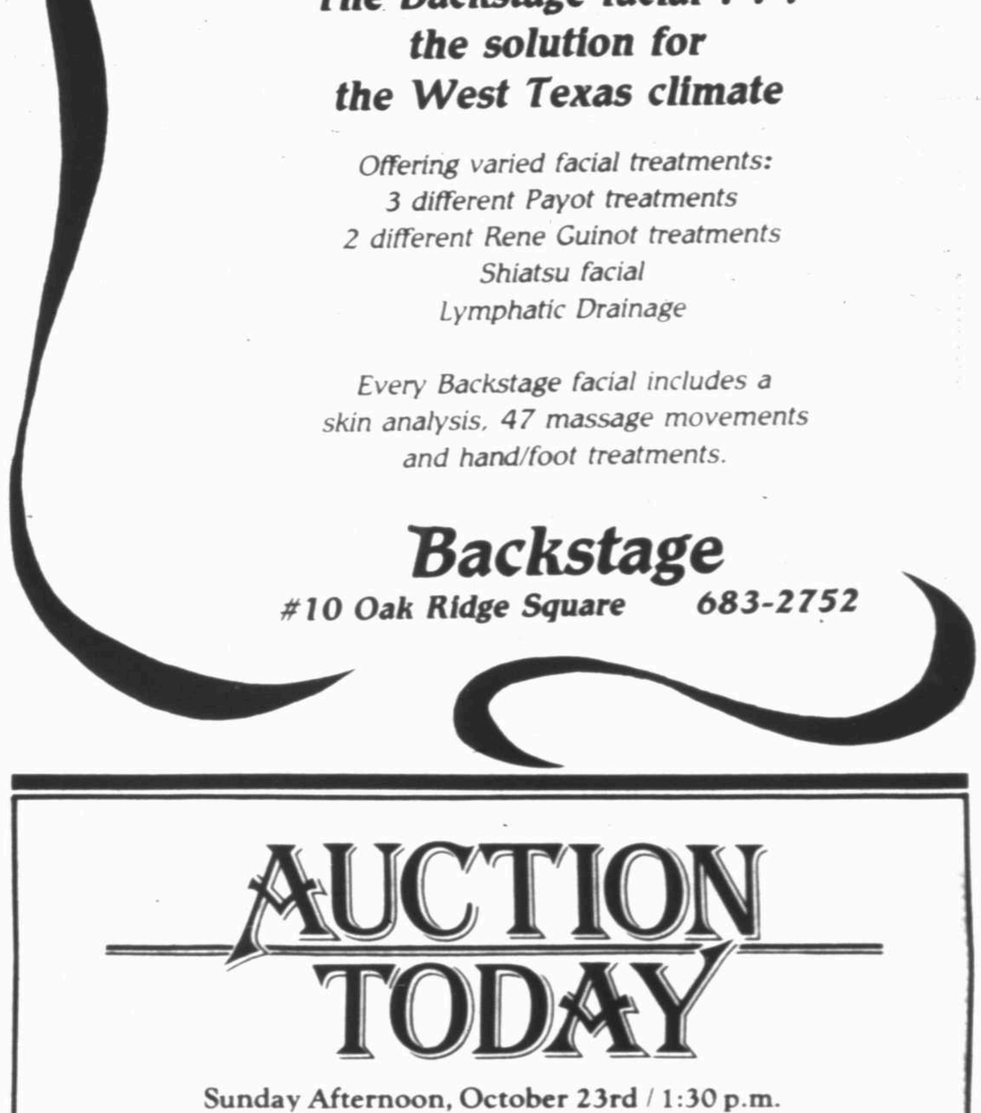

Contact lens wearers should exercise special care when applying or removing eye makeup. These tips come from "Family Circle":

—Use a cotton swab dipped in soap and water to remove makeup.

—Avoid makeup removers; they may leave a residue that will get on lenses.

—Don't use waterproof mascaras which require removers; instead use brands without fibers that come off easily.

—Don't put liner inside the lid; it could stain the lens.

AT WORK

Exploring new field a project

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Q — I'm 30 years old and recently took tests on career profiling. The results said that my interests lie in advertising and interior design. I have only a year and a half of college and will go at night to finish but how do I begin looking for opportunities in these fields? Are there apprentice programs? Will the job market be open? I am very anxious to begin.

A — If your heart agrees with the tests results — that is, advertising or interior design, then you can begin to work in several ways.

(1) Radio, television, newspapers, magazines all sell advertising space to major furniture companies, department stores, interior decorating firms. One way to get in is to get in through that door.

(2) You could start selling furniture and learn the interior decorating field as you go.

(3) Create an internship for yourself in a large company that does interior design or with an advertising agency. Just choose one. You might do this for free in the daytime for the next couple of months while you take a job, say waitressing, on weekends.

(4) Don't wait for school to teach you. Instead, start reading books, magazines and journals specifically for the advertising and interior design fields. If you don't know where they are, stop in the career placement center at your college and ask for ideas or ask your college librarian.

Don't worry about whether the job market will be open; there is always a job market if you make one. There might not be help-wanted ads in the newspaper but this doesn't mean that you can't get in. What you need is the drive to do it.

If you're wondering how other people have started, then make yourself an assignment for one of your college classes and go interview people in both those fields and see which one appeals to you.

Treat finding out as a project in itself. It is.

Q — I'm a teenager who is working full time while attending high school. I was just fired after having been promoted to a managerial job by my manager who was going to leave. But she changed her mind about leaving and changed my excellent rating. That leaves me with two years' work down the drain. What can I do?

A — You've learned one of the hardest lessons — not putting all your eggs in one basket. Next time get to know your boss's patterns better: whether she always threatens to quit, whether she actually has promoted others before you, whether she acts from retribution. And next time get to know several people above your direct boss.

For now, though, don't fear that it is all over. It may be, but it may not be. Go to her superior and see if you can be transferred or recommended elsewhere. Don't blast your boss, but instead tell your accomplishments

Test accurately reveals sex of fetus

BOSTON (AP) — Is it a boy or a girl? Routine ultrasound exams can safely answer that question up to five months before a baby is born, two studies today show.

These tests have been available for several years to check the growing fetus for defects, but the latest test equipment produces such clear pictures that doctors can distinguish the unborn baby's sex.

Ultrasound will "provide information for parents that will help them appreciate that little person that's inside and plan their families," said Dr. Jason C. Birnholz, who conducted one of the studies.

The test, which uses sound waves to produce a picture of the fetus inside the womb, can be used to distinguish the sex as early as the 14th week of gestation.

The same information is also provided by the genetic test called amniocentesis. But that procedure is more complicated. And since it involves a slight risk, it is usually not done simply to reveal the fetus' sex.

Birnholz's research, based on 855 ultrasound exams, was conducted at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago. It was published today in the New England Journal of Medicine, along with a similar study of 100 ultrasound exams at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. John C. Hobbins of Yale Medical School suggested another advantage of knowing the baby's sex long before birth.

"Theoretically, it may be better for some parents who are disappointed in the sex of their fetus to work through their disappointment before the baby is born," he wrote.

In Birnholz' study, doctors attempted to judge the sex of 69 percent of the fetuses examined, and they were right 99 percent of the time. The fetuses were 15 weeks gestation or older.

Knowing whether a baby will be a boy or a girl also has some medical advantages. For instance, girls' lungs develop sooner than boys', so knowing the child's sex could be helpful if the mother goes into early labor.

Birnholz acknowledged that a mother might decide to have an abortion if she isn't happy with the sex of her fetus.

"It's a question that can be brought up, but I have a feeling that in practical terms it's not a very important consideration," Birnholz said in an interview. "I haven't seen anybody come to me specifically wanting to know if it's a boy or girl for that purpose."

In fact, Birnholz said that many mothers, especially those in their first pregnancies, do not want to know the fetus' sex.

THE BUTCHER

Questions answered

By MERLE ELLIS

It is time once again for a question and answer session arising from my mail.

Q: "Can you do anything about getting butchers out of the habit of cutting the bone at the bottom of a leg of lamb? I really don't understand why this is done. We carve a leg parallel to the bone, as both you and Julia Child recommend, and it certainly helps to have the leg bone to hold onto!"

A: It has to do with money, you see, and if not that, stupidity! More likely the former. When a butcher cracks the shank bone on a leg of lamb, most often he leaves the entire "break joint" (ankle bone) on the leg. He cuts through the lower shank and then "cracks" the upper shank so that he can bend the bone around and lay it up alongside the leg when he wraps it for display.

Not only is he selling you half a pound or so of bone at lamb leg prices, but he has, as you have pointed out, made the leg extremely difficult to carve. The only solution is to ask for – nay, demand – a "Frenched" leg of lamb! If your butcher doesn't know what that is, or won't prepare one for you, find one who will.

A "Frenched" leg of lamb is a leg with a handle. It is elegant as well as easy to carve. The upper shank should be divided from the lower shank by breaking the joint over the edge of a table, cutting away the lower shank and an inch or two of meat from the upper shank bone. The exposed shank bone acts as a handle when carving the roast.

Q: "Hope you can shed some light on my problem. About six weeks ago, I decided to give a dinner party for some friends. I planned to serve baby back ribs. To my dismay, I could not find a butcher within ten miles who knew what I was talking about. I was born and raised in Chicago and baby back ribs were common diet fare. Unfortunately, I had to settle for "country style" ribs. They just weren't the same as baby back ribs. Have back ribs gone out of style – or have I gone out of style?"

A: Neither, I'm sure. "Baby" back ribs are still very much in style, although not readily available in retail markets in some parts of the country. Most of what is available goes to the restaurant trade. They are the ribs sought after by fine restaurants because, as you indicated, no ribs are quite the same. They are the ribs from the most tender part of the pig – the loin. The more common spareribs are continuations of the same bones down through the breast, but the meat that surrounds them is not as tender as that on the loin.

Chicago and other midwestern cities have a greater abundance of back ribs because that's where pork is processed. Back ribs are the result of boning out pork loins to make Canadian-style bacon, and most of that is done in the Midwest.

The term "baby" is meaningless and confusing. Back ribs are not from younger pork than any other ribs – spareribs or country-style – they are only shorter in length and, because of their size are sometimes referred to as "baby" back ribs

Stepchildren undergo adjustment period

Despite the fact that one out of every six children in the United States today is a stepchild, adjusting to this increasingly common family structure is still a common problem for children and parents alike.

However, a psychologist interviewed in a recent issue of Seventeen magazine says that there are certain steps both children and parents can take to make this difficult period of adjustment easier for everyone.

It's important for children to realize that their stepparents may be just as nervous about the new relationship as they are, says Dr. Linda Brewster, a Phoenix, Arizona clinical psychologist.

Something special

Text by David Lee Forrest

Sondra Urban smiled while she talked about her role in the recent Opportunity Center Auxiliary's Holiday Bazaar.

"I made tags," she said. "I stamped them."

Sondra — who's quick to correct people who mispronounce her name "Sandra" — is a 19-year-old student in Carver Center's Occupational Developmental Lab for the mentally retarded.

Items made by Carver Center ODL students were on sale at the bazaar held in the Opportunity Center at 2701 N. "A" St. to help the center continue it's work with Midland's retarded citizens.

Some of the items the students made were spiced tea in jars, Christmas decorations, small ceramic figurines and pillows with pockets to conveniently place a tooth for the tooth fairy.

Mike Fisher, an 18-year-old Carver Center student, talked about making the spiced tea.

"We put in sugar and Tang and lemonade and . . ."

Both Sondra and Mike said they had fun preparing for the bazaar.

This year's Holiday Bazaar was the largest ever held by the Opportunity Center Auxiliary, according to bazaar co-chairman Karen Campbell.

"This is a transitional period for the bazaar," she said. In the past, the bazaar has been a fairly small event, but this year the auxiliary tried, she said, "to make this more of a highly patronized annual event."

"Considering the weather, I think we're doing real, real well," said Mrs. Campbell.

The newly remodeled center was crowded with people examining the variety of things sold by the 25 exhibitors, ranging from baked goods and frozen casseroles to women's clothing and stained glass.

The bazaar marked the first time the center has been open to the public since it's renovation, which modernized, enlarged and landscaped the facility, Mrs. Campbell said, "to make it a more pleasant environment as well as more functional."

Twenty-one Down's syndrome babies have been born in Midland County this year, she said, and that alone will increase the need for the center's services.

"All of the proceeds we get go to benefit the center," she said.

The bazaar helps the center "tremendously," said Ray Unterbrink, executive director of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens. The center receives "no government funding, just a lot of support from Midland," he added.

In addition to services offered by the Opportunity Center, Unterbrink said, "We're also looking forward to new services and new services cost new money."

Among the new services planned for next year is an apartment living program for retarded Midlanders, he said, and "the bazaar, along with other projects of the auxiliary and MARC, will help finance that."

"The bazaar means more than the simple fact that things are being sold and some people making a few dollars. Those dollars translate into useful services," Unterbrink added.

"Mentally retarded people are not second-class citizens," he said. "Properly trained, they can be a valuable part of the workforce."

Christmas decorations and Halloween figurines, made by students, were featured at the Opportunity Center Auxiliary's Holiday Bazaar.

Energy boosters

Entertaining before the game is a popular way to visit with friends. If the day dawns bright and clear gather fellow rooters near the stadium for the fun and informality of a tailgate picnic.

The following recipes can make a tailgate picnic a special event. Try Overnight Salmon Strata, featuring layers of canned salmon, bread triangles, vegetables and shredded cheese and topped with a seasoned egg mixture; Sparkling Pear Compote combining canned pears, slices of grapefruit, orange and green grapes; and Chocolate Football Cake made with cocoa, the most concentrated form of chocolate, so flavor is extra rich and luscious.

OVERNIGHT SALMON STRATA

1 can (7-3/4 oz.) salmon
8 slices white bread
1 cup frozen peas, thawed and drained
1/4 cup each chopped green pepper and onion
1 tablespoon diced pimiento, rinsed and thoroughly drained
1-1/2 cups shredded sharp Cheddar cheese, divided
Milk
4 egg, slightly beaten
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon each bottled hot pepper sauce and crushed dill weed

Drain and chunk salmon; reserve liquid. Trim crusts from five slices bread; cut in half diagonally. Use remaining bread and trimmings to line bottom of 11 x 7 x 2-inch baking dish. Combine peas, green pepper, onion and pimiento; sprinkle over bread in casserole. Top with 1/2 cup cheese, salmon, than another 1/2 cup cheese. Arrange bread triangles over all. Add milk to reserved salmon liquid to equal two cups; combine with eggs and seasonings. Pour milk mixture over bread. Cover and refrigerate at least one hour or overnight. Uncover and bake at 325 degrees one hour or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Sprinkle with remaining 1/2 cup cheese; bake five minutes longer. Let stand five or 10 minutes before serving. Makes about eight servings.

SPARKLING PEAR CUP

1 can (29 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
1 pink grapefruit, peeled and sliced (optional)
1 large orange, peeled and sliced
1/2 cup green grapes, seeded if necessary
1 cup pink champagne or rose wine
Mint sprigs

Drain pears; if desired cut halves in two. Cut grapefruit slices in quarters and orange slices in half-rounds. Combine all fruits; chill thoroughly. Pour champagne or rose over fruit just before serving. Garnish with mint sprigs. Makes six to eight servings.

CHOCOLATE FOOTBALL CAKE

3/4 cup butter or margarine
2 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
2-1/2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa
1-3/4 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1-3/4 cups buttermilk or sour milk
Chocolate frosting

Cream butter or margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well; add vanilla . Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt; add alternately with buttermilk or sour milk beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Pour into well greased and floured egg-shaped pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 60 to 70 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool. Assemble cake layers with frosting. Trim broad end of egg to resemble narrow end of each cake layer. Trim sides slightly to match shape of football.

Trim base so cake sits level. Frost with frosting; trim with white frosting to resemble laces of football.

NOTE: To sour milk place 1-3/4 teaspoons vinegar in two-cup measuring cup; fill with milk to 1-3/4 cups.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING

2-2/3 cups confectioners' sugar
6 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
3 to 4 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa

Combine confectioners' sugar, butter, milk and vanilla in small mixer bowl. Remove small amount for decoration; set aside. Add cocoa to remaining frosting, blending well

This perfect football meal line-up features an overnight Salmon Strata, a champagne or wine pear cup and a chocolate football cake-centerpiece.

BETTY MARTIN

A fabric-covered cotton batting form should be part of your sewing equipment as it has many uses and provides great convenience. For example, fitting is much more accurate as well as being easier and quicker. The form can be adjusted by adding padding to the outside and should be checked to see that its measurements are correct before each sewing project. the form helps you to more easily see and understand the reasoning behind darts and structured seams. It will also help in checking details such as the roll of a collar, and in making any necessary adjustments. Most importantly, it will allow you to stand back and see your garment as others do.

Everyone at LEGGETTS FABRICS is an experienced sewer and always anxious to share their expertise with you. Don't ever hesitate to ask our advice and if at any time you don't see exactly what you are looking for...ask and chances are we can get it. Single fathers, mothers similar

Single fathers share a lot of similarities with single mothers. They both are inclined to worry more about children than jobs, they perceive that both they and their children have more problems, and they get along with smaller paychecks better than "traditional" married parents.

Those are some of the findings of Barbara Risman, a Seattle sociologist who studied single and married parents.

Risman questioned 220 families representing single fathers, single mothers, dual-paycheck parents, "traditional" fathers and their homemaker wives.

Some of Risman's research problems provide social insight: She had little trouble locating single mothers, but it took a long time to round up the 55 single fathers. She had specified that there be "none of the new fathers, who fought for custody" but that the single fathers must have adopted the role "without actively seeking it," because of death or desertion of a spouse.

Next hardest group to find were the "traditional full-time homemakers ' with children at home. Risman never did find enough and had to redefine the traditional homemaker as one who "works less than 19 hours a week and earns less than $4,999 a year."

There are very few homemakers who "don't at least teach five hoursra week at the Y or something like that," Risman concludes.

Risman's project, technically, was to "study the theory of gender . . . How much of your behavior is influenced by being the kind of person you were taught to be, and how much by what's cu rently expected of you."

Her study found that single fathers, "socialized for one sex role – to be competitive and aggressive – and then pushed into another," changed their behavior "quite drastically – they began to behave as mothers."

The single fathers saw themselves as more nurturing, valued children ahead of job advancement and overtime. Answering a "Who are you?" question, they saw themselves first as fathers and second as career persons, while it was the other way around for tcaditional fathers.

Risman didn't take the single dads' word for their nurturing abilities. She judged that for herself, on the basis of answers to questions about the child's homeroom teacher's name, the names of the child's three best friends, the mhild's recent triumps and failures, problems and feelings.

Single fathers and others both perceived that they, as well as their childen, had more problems than traditional parents and their children.

The single parents' perceived problems, Ris an believes, "seem to be part of a role overload, of trying to do too much. Of course, you can expect single mothers – with the lowest incomes of all – to have more problems."

Do children of single parents really have more problems?

Rismanssays she isn't sure, because her survey, centered in the Seattle area, dealt more with perceived problems than actual ones. But she says it's entirely possible "kids who lose a parent have more problems."

It's also possible that traditional motheri, who perceive their children have the least problems, are looking at the kids through rose-colored glasses.

Children's books celebrate nature

Hearst Feature Service

Fall is a good time to celebrate our relationship to the Earth and her other creatures with these new children's books.

"The Talking Earth," by Jan Craighead George, is a wonderfully stirring book for readers 10 and up. Billie Wind, a young Seminole Indian, is a modern 13-year-old who is sceptical about the old tribal legends. Her punishment for being a doubter is to go into the Everglades, where the spirits dwell, and stay until she hears the animals talk, sees the serpent, and meets the little people who live underground.

The sojourn of Billie Wind involves encounters with an otter, a panther, a turtle and, ultimately, a hurricane. Her two-day punishment becomes a three month fight for survival which demands all her resources. The details and descriptions are authentic, and the reader will grow with Billie Wind in the course of this challenging adventure. She heads for home, and, indeed, she has heard what the animals have to say. Her commitment to preserving this planet is the logical outcome of her quest and of this satisfying book.

Few young people have the skills or the opportunity to undertake a pilgrimage of that scope, but anyone can experience the joy of observing and better understanding nature. "Secrets of a Wildlife Watcher," written and illustrated by Jim Arnosky, provides readers with clear directions for finding, stalking, and watching wildlife.

This is a luminous book, with direct and graceful text, and informative illustrations. Unlike many nature guides, it is not encumbered with vast amounts of information that serve to intimidate the reader. Wildlife that city dwellers may watch are enumerated, and the emphasis throughout is on sharing one's discoveries, as the author has done. This is the rare book that is suitable for all ages, and that the novice as well as the old hand will be fascinated by.

Snowmass: Ski resort for family vacations

By MICHAEL CARLTON
The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

SNOWMASS, Colo. — It doesn't have the cachet of Aspen. No best sellers have been written about it, and no television movies have been screened extolling its fast-lane life. It is so unknown that many people think it is in Utah (no, folks, that's SnowBIRD).

Even though it is celebrating its sweet 16th birthday this year, SnowMASS (that's the one in Colorado, folks) is one of the Rockies' least-known ski resorts. Part of the reason, of course, is the proximity of glamorous Aspen just 10 miles down the road. Snowmass has the same problem as Farah Fawcett's sister: It's hard to compete. Snowmass was so unsure of itself that when it first opened it was named Snowmass-at-Aspen, with the hope that some of the glitter of its famous neighbor would rub off.

But Snowmass has dropped Aspen from its name, and is busy establishing itself as one of Colorado's most complete ski resorts. Already, Snowmass attracts more skiers than the other three nearby ski areas (Aspen, Buttermilk and Aspen Highlands) combined. A lot of people don't know about Snowmass, but a lot, apparently, do.

THEY KNOW that Snowmass has 11 double chairlifts and two triple chairlifts; 1,440 acres of skiable terrain with more than 55 miles of trails and 90 runs; that it has a verticle drop of 3,596 feet; and that there are more than 25 miles of cross-country skiing trails.

They also know that Snowmass has 23 heated swimming pools and 22 spas, 19 condominium complexes and eight lodges that can house 7,500 people, and a mall with 20 restaurants and a variety of shops selling everything from ski bindings to a full-length red fox coat.

They know all this, but the real reason most people come to Snowmass is that it is a forgiving mountain, one that demands less of a skier than the looming hulk of mighty Ajax, the Aspen mountain that makes mere mortals shiver when they think about its evil collection of black diamond slopes.

There are challenging slopes at Snowmass, about 22 percent of them according to statistics, but the vast majority of the skiing here can be handled by an intermediate skier, and more than 10 percent can be easily skied by a novice.

"Frankly, most of our skiers don't want to fall on their duff all week long," Lloyd Bishop, marketing manager for Snowmass, said. "When people ski Snowmass they generally think 'God, with a little more practice I could be on the Olympic ski team.' At Aspen they just try to survive."

THIS RELATIVE ease of skiing has had much to do with the appeal of Snowmass to families, which account for most of the skiers on the resort's slopes. In a family with different levels of expertise — expert, intermediate and klutz — they can all leave their lodgings in the morning, ski the same mountain, have lunch together, ski some more, and meet in a hot tub to relax in the afternoon. And, because Snowmass is set back three miles into the mountains from Colorado Highway 82, mothers have little worry about children and dogs playing with the traffic. Most of the traffic here is on foot.

With more than 95 percent of the lodgings at Snowmass right on the slopes, most visitors can ski from their back door directly to the lifts, which can carry as many as 14,775 skiers each hour. And, it is just as easy to ski to your back door for lunch, for a toddy, or just to soak in the bathtub after you've had enough of the chill Rocky Mountain air. "Ski in; ski out" they call it here.

Because of its high percentage of family business, Snowmass has developed many programs for families when they are not skiing. You can take a dog-sled ride behind 13 huskies, gliding 12 miles through hauntingly quiet wilderness past herds of elk and mule deer; take an early morning hot-air balloon ride high over the valley; visit the gallery at the Anderson Ranch Arts Center; get a group together and take a guided cross-country ski to Gracie's Cabin for lunch or dinner; or play tennis, squash or racquetball at the Snowmass Club.

SNOWMASS HAS none of Aspen's slightly naughty fame. (When Playboy was filming "The Girls of Aspen" in the area, Snowmass officials wouldn't even let the magazine take a picture of a naked lady on its run called "Naked Lady," so the magazine and its publicity went to Aspen Highlands instead.) Nor does it offer the romance of Sun Valley, or even the broad-shouldered back bowls of Vail.

What it does offer is a perfect ski vacation for the entire family, a place that will neither terrify the beginner nor bore the expert. Snowmass may not be famous, but it deserves to be.

IF YOU GO:

HOW TO GET THERE: Aspen Airport, which is about halfway between Aspen and Snowmass, provides daily service from Denver's Stapleton Airport. With its new improvements, the airport will be able to handle commercial jet aircraft sometime next year. Snowmass is about a five-hour drive from Denver over all-weather roads in winter. In summer, when Independence Pass is open, the drive takes a bit over three hours.

WHEN TO GO: The ski season is scheduled to begin Nov. 24 and end April 15. In the low season (Nov. 24-Dec. 16; Jan. 1-Feb 3; March 31-April 15) lift tickets cost $22 per day, $57 for three consecutive days. In the high season the lift tickets are $22 per day, $66 for three consecutive days. Children 12 and under and senior citizens (65 and over) pay $10 a day for lift tickets. As a special January promotion of its birthday, Snowmass is offering a "Sweet 16" package that gives you six days of skiing in seven days for $96 if you buy a lodging package through the Snowmass Resort Association. There are a variety of other packages available.

WHERE TO STAY — As mentioned, there is a wide selection of accommodations available, most of them in condominium and lodge units located directly on the slopes. A central reservation number (303-923-2010) handles most of the facilities. Rates range greatly according to location and size of the unit. Most have fireplaces and kitchen facilities. An alternative to condominium units is the Snowmass Club, which has such amenities as room service, a gourmet restaurant, concierge service and porters. Rates at the Club, which include use of the extensive recreational facilities (indoor tennis, racquetball, squash, weight room, aerobics classes, heated pools), start at $90 per night in the low season to $140 in the high (Dec. 17-Mar. 30). Seven-night packages begin at $270 during the low season and $427 in the high.

WHERE TO EAT — There are a number of good restaurants in the village, with Krabloonik famous for its game dishes, Four Corners at the Snowmass Club for its bountiful Sunday brunch and elegant dinners, Stew Pot for hearty soup and sandwiches, Pour la France for good breakfasts and quiches, and Mama Maria's for pizza.

Portuguese town charming

By JERRY HULSE
The Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

OBIDOS, Portugal — Sunlight floods the narrow, twisting streets, flashing off whitewashed walls, and somewhere the pealing of church bells announces that all is serene in Obidos.

It is noon, and the sky, flawlessly blue, looks down on vineyards that sweep away to the valley below.

Geraniums, pink and white and blood red, pour from window boxes mounted on houses trimmed in blue and yellow, and beneath them a stray cat slips stealthily through a street and a mongrel dog sleeps beside a store whose owner sells groceries as well as shoes, clothing and kerosene lanterns.

It is that sort of place, Obidos, a town divorced from the rapid-fire development of other touristy places in Europe, a small island of contentment where no one hurries and few voice any desire to leave.

Perched on a hilltop less than 60 miles from Lisbon, Obidos is old and secure and a lifetime removed, it would seem, from the tumult of our times.

Indeed, one gets the impression that the little fortified village could, if necessary, survive alone and that what occurs beyond its ancient walls is of little concern to the fortunate few who call Obidos home.

THE TOWN HAS endured for centuries; it was thriving even before the Romans arrived. When they were gone the Moors fortified Obidos, and later they were driven off by King Alfonso Henriques, Portugal's first monarch. The Portuguese have been in control ever since.

Elisia Mauricio of the local tourist office insists that she would not live anywhere else. "I love Obidos," she says with the fervor of someone who is fulfilled. "It is peaceful; the life is simple."

Well, sure, she gets paid to say nice things about Obidos, but it is evident that Elisia Mauricio has discovered that elusive prize, contentment, in the town's twisting, cobbled streets. Otherwise, she would return to Lisbon and the crowds and the excitement of Portugal's capital city.

Obidos never fails to please. Everyone who has seen it is enthralled. The magic has caused even crowned heads to succumb. Portugal's famed "poet" King Dinis was captivated during a visit in 1228. So was his queen. As a result, he made her a gift of the walled village. Succeeding monarchs followed suit, offering Obidos as a prize to their queens in a traditional gesture.

No one is disappointed with the village. Even its souvenir shops and small cafes charm visitors. There is Restaurant Alcaie, whose terrace overlooks dozens of red-tiled rooftops and whose menu offers fish stews and marinated eel with rice and traditional codfish dishes for $3 and $4. (No one is trying to get rich in Obidos.)

It was around the corner in St. Mary's Church that Portugal's 10-year-old monarch, Alfonso V, was wed to his 8-year-old cousin in 1444. The altar they faced remains; the walls are lined with tiles and pictures that were painted by Portugal's famous 17th-century artist, Josefa Ayalia.

A few doors away, in the old town hall that dates from the 16th century, an art museum contains paintings and statues as well as gifts from the queens who successively "owned" Obidos.

INSIDE THE CRENELATED walls of this ancient village the nuclear age is forgotten. One travels back in time for centuries. Obidos is home to fewer than 1,000 souls, and for them the village is a cocoon that offers solace from the maddening pace beyond these ramparts.

Still, there is excitement of an evening. Guests gather in the little lantern-lit cave of Antonio Tavares on Rua Direita to sip "ginjinha," a cherry liqueur, and to sing the fado. They arrive with their guitars and remain sometimes until dawn. There is a truck driver who sings frequently of love and hate and other passions. Occasionally he is joined by a glass blower and the room, blue with smoke, is silent save for their mournful voices.

None of the entertainers in Antonio Tavares' shadowy bar is a professional. They accept no tips. Rather, they sing and play purely for the joy of doing so.

Weapons used in the defense of Obidos line the walls of the room where Tavares serves sausage and cheese and bread that is freshly baked by his grandmother. Ginjinha flows throughout the night.

Finally, the horizon grows pink. A rooster crows. Tavares shrugs. It is time to close and go home.

Shelter for visitors is provided in the town's famous "pousada" as well as a former convent outside the walls. Still visible over the door leading into the pousada's dining room is the coat of arms of a Portuguese king.

Because the Pousada do Castelo has only six rooms, reservations are necessary weeks in advance. Guests pass through a thick Gothic archway to reach the great hall; scattered about the room are old chests and lanterns that provide a yellow glow which is reflected by red-tile floors.

Tapestry, a suit of armor and priceless antiques remind guests that they have found shelter inside a castle, the price for living the royal life coming to $41 a day for two.

ALTHOUGH THE POUSADA de Castelo is said to be one of Portugal's finest, the atmosphere is far cozier inside the ex-convent operated by Louis de Sousa Garcia, which is outside the walls — but only barely. His Estalagem do Convento is also cheaper, its 13 rooms priced at $31 a day, single or double.

This old inn, which has been around for more than four centuries, is the choice of lovers young and old. Indeed, one who fails to respond to the sense of romance here is without hope.

To begin with, there is the lounge with its fireplace and the restaurant with its candles and flowers (figure on about $15 per couple for dinner). Huge bouquets are found elsewhere, and, when the weather is pleasant, guests are invited to dine outside in a garden blooming with orange and tangerine trees.

Rooms feature wrought-iron beds along with wonderful old chests and tables, and tiled baths are mirror-bright.

A sense of cheerfulness pervades the entire building from the miniature reception area to the bars, of which there are two, one upstairs and one downstairs. Antique dueling pistols line the walls of the bar below, and British street signs are posted on heavy beams.

A fire sheds its warmth, and guests play chess while listening to recordings by Portugal's fado singers. Other times some local artist appears and suddenly the room is filled with live music.

Proprietor Louis de Sousa Garcia is an ex-pharmacist who was born in Obidos (just as his father was), and he wears an apron he snagged from Portugal's prized Ritz Hotel in Lisbon. With a gentleness and friendliness, he supervises the activities of 17 employees who pamper, spoil and frustrate his guests to the point that some wish to stay on indefinitely.

For other details, contact the Portuguese National Tourist Office, 3440 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 616, Los Angeles 90010.

Drastic changes in personal appearance may mean new passport needed

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

Q: My hair color is totally different from that shown in my expired passport, and now I need a new one. I am wondering about my new passport, and if I must keep the color I have now for the duration of the passport which I understand will be good for 10 years.

A: The color of a bearer's hair (and eyes) is no longer written in a passport, although this information is to be set forth in the passport application. Most important, however, is to be certain you resemble your photograph during the validity of your new passport, since a passport is a document of identity as well as nationality. If your appearance changes markedly from that shown by your passport photograph, then you should apply for a new passport.

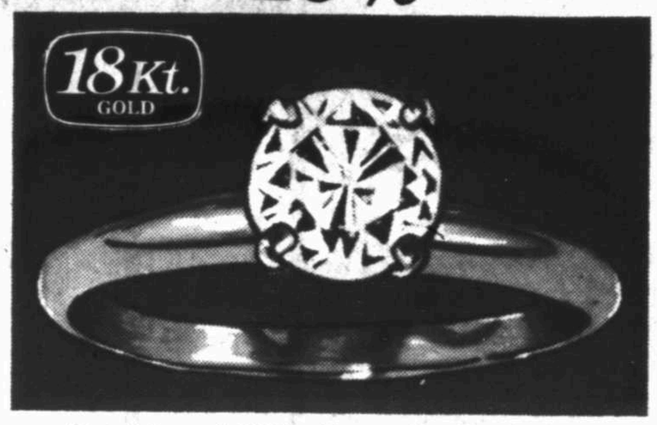

Q: When applying for a passport, if a person submits a court order changing their given name from one which is deemed a masculine name to one which is feminine, will the sex be shown in the passport according to the name in the court order?

A: No. The sex designation written in a passport will be that which is shown on the individual's birth certificate.

A submarine in Wisconsin? The sight isn't that strange when one considers that 28 submarines were launched from boatyards in Manitowoc, Wis. during World War II. The area has a long and colorful maritime history. The submarine U.S.S. Cobia is open for public tours at the Manitowoc Maritime Museum.

Museum honors maritime heritage

By JACK BIESTERFELD
Copley News Service

"Weigh that anchor! Trim that mainsail! Step lively you landlubbers!"

It was an exciting, invigorating time, the golden age of sail. It was a time of iron men and wooden ships, of sea gulls resting on wooden pilings, of fishermen braving the raging surf.

The maritime heritage of this country has always been one of the most fascinating periods of our history. It has always been closely associated with the East Coast and the West Coast, but unbeknownst to many is that the Great Lakes harbored a thriving maritime industry all its own.

Three-masted achooners braved the often turbulent waters of Lake Michigan, delivering lumber, coal and grain to ports of call throughout the Midwest. They were later replaced by great iron ships and paddle-wheel steamers.

NOWHERE IS THE Great Lakes' maritime heritage better preserved than in the Manitowoc-Two Rivers area of Wisconsin. The lakeshore area slightly over an hour north of Milwaukee has dubbed itself Wisconsin's Maritime Capital, and rightly so.

Visitors today can relive this maritime history at the Manitowoc Maritime Museum and the Rogers Street Fishing Museum, or the modern-day seagoing activities of charter fishing on Lake Michigan. And there are sand dunes and beaches to explore and lighthouses to photograph.

The first stop should be at the maritime museum on the banks of the Manitowoc River at 809 S. Eighth St. It is open seven days a week all year long.

A huge wooden hull section of a three-masted schooner dominates the main exhibit hall. The massive timbers and braces were hand-cut much as they would have been more than 100 years ago. At one time there were 10 shipyards lining the Manitowoc River. The first schooner, the "Citizen," was launched from there in 1842. Since that time, thousands of ships, both big and small, built in this area have sailed the waters of the Great Lakes.

THE TOOLS USED to fashion native timber into the stout craft lie about the room awaiting the return of the boat-builders and their apprentices, but it will be a long wait. There is only one shipyard left in Manitowoc.

Barrels of beer, sacks of flour and crates of china are piled high on a creaky wooden dock, ready to be loaded on the next schooner destined for Chicago. At one time, it was not unusual to see dozens of ships crowding the harbor, their masts looking like a forest, bobbing gently up and down with the swells.

Turn a corner and it is the elegant era of steam. Manitowoc changed with the times and soon the boat yards were turning out paddle-wheel steamers, which could deliver cargo and passengers much faster and more reliably than the old sailing ships. And, for the first time, passengers could travel in refined elegance.

The steamboats featured fine china and silver service in the dining rooms, and the cabins and parlors were thr epitome of plush elegance.

THE MUSEUM is still updating its exhibits. The latest addition is a tribute to the harbor, showing its changes from the early days of sailboats, through the steamboat and iron boat periods, to its height as a submarine port during World War II. Other exhibits in the museum include some of the most intricate and detailed ship models ever made. Visitors can even watch craftsmen building the models.

Although the indoor exhibits are fascinating, it is probably the outdoor one that gains the most attention — the submarine USS Cobia.

"Ohh-gah, ooo-gah. Dive! Dive!"

Visitors scramble down a steep, narrow stairway into the forward torpedo room of the submarine. It's crowded, but then that's how World War II sailors lived on the submarines. Their berths were wedged between the torpedoes.

Duck through the rounded hatches through the officers quarters into the control room, the nerve center of the sub. The walls are lined with gauges, levers, valves and switches.

Here is the conning tower with its periscopes and sonar sets. The tour continues through the crews' quarters and galley, then into the engine rooms dominated by the huge diesel engines that powered the ship. Visitors exit through the rear torpedo room. A submarine in the Great Lakes may seem incongruous, but when World War II broke out, the East and West Coast shipyards could not turn out enough submarines to bolster the country's pitifully small fleet and the experienced shipbuilders at the Manitowou shipyards were asked to build 28 of the undersea craft.

ANOTHER PIECE of maritime heritage can be found at the Rogers Street Fishing Museum in Two Rivers, about five miles north via Wisconsin 42 which hugs the shore of Lake Michigan. The small museum on the banks of the East Twin River tells about the city's long history as a commercial fishing center.

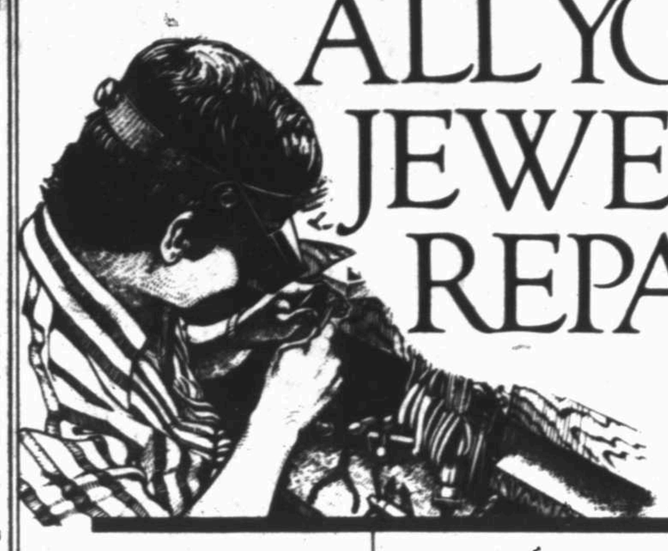

There is a 40-foot fishing tug on display, as well as a small lighthouse, a 5,000-pound marine diesel engine, tools and photographs. The museum, one block south of the 22nd Street bridge, is open only sporadically, but visitors can still tour the outdoor buildings and exhibits when the buildings are not open. The riverfront is also a good place to watch the comings and goings of boats along the river.

Rio de Janeiro's famous beach is not crowded at this time of year, mid-winter in Brazil. Most Americans will find the weather quite comfortable, however, with temperatures in the low 70s.

Dynamic Rio: No place to relax

By MIRIAM MCIVER
Copley News Service

RIO DE JANIERO, Brazil — With its beautiful beaches and bays and its lush hills and mountains, this is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, by day or by night. There is so much to do and see in this festive, dynamic city that it is difficult to make choices in a limited time.

We left California in midsummer and arrived in Rio in midwinter, but in Rio, at least, there was very little difference in climate.

We were staying at the Meridien Hotel of the Air France chain, right on famous Copacabana Beach. The beach was almost deserted, even though the temperature was in the low 70s. No "two dots and a dash" bikinis in sight.

To the natives of Rio this is heavy-sweater weather. A handful of those sinfully handsome Rio youths were playing volleyball. Here and there some strolled along the famous black and white zigzag tiled sidewalks, but otherwise the beach area was uncluttered and beautiful.

One of the outstanding sights of Rio is Sugar Loaf Peak, at the entrance to the harbor. No matter how short your stay, you really must go to the top for a magnificent view of the entire city. Ascent is in two stages by cable car. Do this early in your visit to get your bearings.

The Corcovado, the huge statue of Christ, sits atop another peak. The day we visited, a light rain was falling. The statue was hidden by clouds, but I was determined to see it. A little cog rail train takes you most of the way up the mountain, through a dense rain forest. The forest floor was covered with salmon-pink flowers the Brazilians call "Busy Lilies," which resemble our impatiens plants.

At the top, as we stood at the base of the statue, we could see just up to the outstretched arms. The head was hidden in the clouds — as though it was already in heaven.

Rio is famous for its nightlife. If you are not there during Carnival time, you can get a taste of what it is like by going to the show at Plataforma No. 1 — a Rio version of a Las Vegas, Nev., show. If anything, the costumes are even more elaborate than in Vegas. The logistics of engineering some of the enormous headdresses the ladies wear is mind-boggling.

At least one dinner should be at a churrasco restaurant. At Mariu's in Ipanema we dined on barbecued beef sliced paper-thin, barbecued chicken, pork, sausage, lamb, turkey and chicken livers — each one more delicious than the other. The meats are served by a seemingly endless parade of waiters who slice them from a long swordlike spit right onto your plate. It may have been the best dinner of the entire trip. (If you go there, plan to have a very light lunch that day!)

The Delta Cruise Line's Santa Maria was ready to sail at midnight. Earlier in the evening a Folklorico group came aboard and put on a spectacular show. The troupe danced a wild and crazy tango, so fast it made heads spin.

A group of gauchos demonstrated with boleadoras, or bolas, as they are sometimes called. These are long braided leather thongs with heavy wooden balls at the end, used for entangling cattle. They can also be deadly weapons, and some of us who had chosen to sit in the front row close to the performers soon questioned our eagerness as the balls seemed to whiz within inches of our heads.

We sailed out of the magnificent harbor, into the starry night, still hearing the music that is everywhere a part of Rio.

Arrangements needed for Rio

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Before you lose yourself in the warmth and vitality of Rio de Janeiro, you should consider some of the necessary arrangements:

VISA: Brazil is the only South American nation to require American visitors to obtain a visa before entry.

GETTING THERE: American Airlines operates three non-stop flights weekly from Dallas-Forth Worth; other carriers fly daily from Miami and New York. Flying time on the D-FW-Rio route is about 10 1-2 hours. American's round-trip fares range from $938 (21-day advance purchase, 14-day minimum stay required) to $3,312 first class. One-week land packages, including a choice of hotels in Rio, daily breakfast and airport transfers, start at $227 per person. (Package rates are not available during Carnival.)

Within Brazil, four domestic airlines offer a Brazil Airpass good for 21 days of unlimited travel. Priced at $330, it must be bought in the United States.

WHEN: Seasons are reversed, with December-February the hottest months and also the high tourist season in Rio.

LANGUAGE: The language of Brazil is Portuguese. English is not widely spoken outside the major tourist haunts, but Spanish is widely understood.

FOOD: Many cuisines are represented, with fare at the more plush establishments inclined toward French or Continental. Prices are quite reasonable by American standards — only in the very best restaurants will a dinner tab exceed $15.

Two of the city's top restaurants are tucked away in Copacabana hotels: Le Pre Catalan in the Rio Palace and Le Saint Honore in the Meridien. The simple sidewalk cafes that prevail throughout the city are sound bets for anyone seeking good food at modest cost.

To sample some of Rio's most delectible seafood, however, you must flag a cab and head downtown to the Alba Mar Restaurant, located harborside in an historic building that once was a fish market.

But save room for typical Brazilian fare, including snacks. There are stand-up coffee bars all over the city, along with fruit juice bars (try the nectar from the fruit of the cashew) and typical restaurants called churrascarias where charcoal-grilled meats are the specialty and a set price buys all the beef, pork, chicken, sausage, lamb and goat you can eat.

One of the better places to sample churrasco is Mariu's, on the Avenida Atlantica. Here the meats are grilled on long metal swords, carried dripping to the table, where the waiter plants the point on your plate and carves until signaled to stop.

'Tumbleweed' tumbles into West Texas

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Want to hear a really good one, y'all? A man born and raised in Arkansas wants to sell Texas cooking and Texas culture to Texans — and, he hopes, the world!

Meet Jack Ray — former world champion duck and goose caller, now "champion" steak cooker, owner of Texas Tumbleweed restaurants. The family-oriented genuine-Texas chain was number 14 in Inc. magazine's listing of 500 fastest-growing private companies in 1982.

Tumbleweeds are covering Texas — Amarillo, Lubbock, Austin, Dallas — with eight in Houston, one opened in Lafayette, La., and one planned in Tampa, Fla. Now number 19 is open here in Midland.

Ray said he opened the restaurants because he loves people and wanted to create a family restaurant with entertainment — a live country band — and Texas charm. The concept "has worked everywhere we've been so far," he contends.

DURING Tumbleweed's recent Midland opening, Ray said "I'm glad I'm here at this particular time," rather than bringing a new eatery online at the collapse of Midland's boom.

Ray said he signed his lease at the Courtyard at Midland Park during 1981, when Midland was "going crazy."

Now, he feels, the city's business cycle is at the bottom and heading back up.

Growth was a bit slower for Ray in 1982; he will be 118th in the 1983 Inc. private companies listing. "The restaurant business took a slowdown. We were off 30 percent (in sales) in Houston — but we're back up now.

"THE AMARILLO store was doing great until July, 1982, he said. "Business was way off in what are usually our two biggest months."

Ray expects his six-year-old venture with Tumbleweed to grow by five to seven restaurants a year.

Ray's business card says, "Tough Steaks, Watered-Down Drinks, High Prices." That's another joke, because one thing Ray is serious about is food and drink at Texas Tumbleweed, which must be delectable, and competitively priced. "It's damn good," Ray said of the fare.

Ray does not cook but has learned to flip steaks or "bust" tables when one of his restaurants needs it. He gets personally involved in "firing up" employees and management.

Ray gives the lowly mesquite tree credit for his success. Mesquite is supposed to romance the meat with a searing, flavorful 600-1,200 degree fire that makes New York chefs boil with envy. Some chefs up North are known to spy on competitors to discover where they are getting mesquite shipped from.

TEXAS Tumbleweed's menu, mostly steaks, includes Blazin' Saddle beans, baked potatoes or fries, and bread, with the meal. Homemade peach cobbler a la mode is extra.

Tumbleweed's brand of Texas beef, Texas wood, Texas ingredients, and a whole heap of Texas-style dancin' and hollerin' and carryin' on remind Ray of his yonger days.

"It's like going back to a junior high school class reunion," he said, "and saying, " 'Y'all remember me, don't you?' "

Those who don't catch Ray in one of his frequent visits to Texas Tumbleweeds might see him on T.V. — he's done the latest American Express ad. "Don't leave home without your shoes, grandma, or the Card," he cautions viewers. He also gives a duck-call.

TEXANS GET A taste of their own homegrown traditions at Texas Tumbleweed. And non-Texans love to go to one when visiting here. Doug Oden, area manager, said, "It's what people want to believe Texas is like."

Jeff Runion, manager of the new Midland Tumbleweed, began as a bar tender in Amarillo. "It's like the American Dream," he said of the opportunities at the chain.

Average sales of the stores are $1.1 million — and managers earn a percentage of the take. "If we make money, the managers make money," Ray said.

Runion, who could do well in the deal, said "I wouldn't trade this now for an 8-to-5 job if I found one that paid more." He said he is staff psychologist, head accountant, head chef, personnel manager, and other things — as well as being the "sheriff" who greets customers at the door.

Ray lives on the fast track.

HE OPENED THE Barn, in Austin, 22 years ago by borrowing $30,000 from a contractor and depositing it for 30 days to get a construction loan. In contrast, the Midland Tumbleweed was finished with $500,000 in interior work and fixtures.

The store will seat 400 and arranges large parties in the restaurant — or steak dinners catered for 2,000 out under the trees. (Or by the mesquite, if preferred.)

Ray's full of restaurant ideas. Mesquite cooking's the keystone of five new concepts, which he hopes to franchise. They include "Porterfield's," "Catfish Jack's," and a catfish and frog-leg place called "Daddy Did It" with big band music and a beautiful girl perched on a 1947 Dodge.

Ray hopes to make each idea as successful as his Texas Tumbleweeds. And he is confident he can do it.

Jeff Runion, Midland manager of Texas Tumbleweed's new steakhouse (left), and Jack Ray, owner of the chain (right), party with Midlanders during its recent grand opening. Ray, a flamboyant, sharp businessman, said he hopes to open five to seven new Tumbleweeds a year — and has lots of other restaurant ideas up his sleeve, all based on cooking over a West Texas mesquite fire.

Water board OKs salt dome waste disposal study

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Water Development Board members have approved a study by the Bureau of Economic Geology, University of Texas at Austin, on use of salt domes for disposal of toxic chemical wastes.

WDB approved contracting with the bureau for up to $150,000 for a multi-phase program to determine geologic and hydrologic settings for the salt domes, and any environmental problems which have resulted or could result from use of the domes for permanent disposal of chemical wastes.

The problem of disposal of chemical wastes also is being studied by a special joint House-Senate committee, which is to report its findings and recommendations to the 1985 Legislature.

Figures from the Economic Development Commission show industrial revenue bond issues approved by the agency in fiscal 1983 came to 367, compared to 362 for fiscal 1982.

However, the value of 1983 issues came to roughly half the amount of the prior year, $697,369,781 compared to $1,317,234,900.

The 1983 issues provided 14,580 jobs, compared to 15,667 the prior year.

EDC officials said the lower amounts could reflect changes in interest rates and financing conditions, but that the figures still are undergoing analysis.

Air Control Board is expanding a sampling program on possibly contaminated waste oil being used as fuel to examine various parts of Texas, after initial work in the Fort Worth area indicated possible problems with chlorinated organic compounds, sulfur and lead.

ACB conducted tests and analysis of oils being burned at various facilities, including power plants and hot-mix asphalt facilities, and found high amounts of chlorine and lead at some (with sulfur not apparently a major problem).

ACB notes that under certain conditions, chlorinated hydrocarbons may reform, during combustion, into extremely toxic substances.

The agency is attempting to determine if the use of the contaminated fuel poses any health threats.

Estimates by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency show 90 million gallons per year of waste oil generated in Texas, with 30-45 million gallons burned in Texas for fuel, with a "significant portion" shipped out side the state for fuel.

The expanded sampling is to cover sources with permits for burning fuel oil, such as boilers, process heaters and other industrial devices, refineries and petrochemical plants.

The Texas Savings and Loan Department is continuing its work on new regulations relating to changes in control of State-chartered savings and loan associations, under new powers granted by the 1983 Legislature.

Commissioner L.L. Bowman III says the agency is "trying to handle these matters in an expeditious manner," with the Savings and Loan Section of the State Finance Commission having adopted regulations on the changes in control.

At present, Bowman reports, the savings and loan industry in Texas is "coming back pretty strong" after some problem years.

"We are still monitoring three or four trouble spots," Bowman says, "but generally speaking, the industry appears to be in good shape."

Texas Board of Health is moving ahead with plans to activate its Municipal Solid Waste Management and Resource Recovery Advisory Council, a 15 member body created under legislation signed by Gov. Mark White in June.

The panel is to have broader powers and scope than a previous similar body, and will deal with ways to recycle and reuse waste materials.

The board is hoping to have the council operating by the end of the year, and plans to make appointments at it Dec. 10 board meeting.

House Insurance Committee's Subcommittee on Mandated Coverages holds its first meeting Nov. 3 in Austin, to begin work on its interim study on mandated coverages in the health insurance field.

The subcommittee is to recommend a "coherent policy" of State-mandated coverages, an issue which has come in for much discussion during past legislative sessions during hearings by the committee.

Insurance industry officials have warned that requiring coverages, particularly on group policies, will increase the cost of those policies and could lead to some employers dropping group plans.

Midlanders building less

COLLEGE STATION — Authorized residential construction for Midland continued to decline during the first quarter of 1983 falling 60 percent below the dollar volume authorized one year ago.

Acording to Dr. Jack Harris, assistant research economist with the Texas Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University, single-family and two-to-four-family-unit housing permits were especially inactive. Total authorized residential construction during 1983's first quarter was valued at slightly more than $22 million.

Nonresidential authorizations ran well below the 1982 pace with the exception of hotel and motel permits. Total authorized nonresidential construction was valued at almost $14.4 million — a 4 percent increase from 1982's first quarter. Home sales by Multiple Listing Service members were 31 percent below 1982's first quarter while the average sale price rose 4 percent to $87,781. Total sales volume declined 28 percent.

In Texas as a whole, the dollar volume of nonresidential construction authorized during the first quarter of 1983 was 22 percent less than 1982's first quarter volume. The largest component of nonresidential costruction, office buildings, showed substantialy less activity than last year, a decrease Harris attributes to high vacancy rates in many of the major cities.

Growth was especially strong among residential sectors throughout the state. Reisdential building permits issued during the first quarter of 1983 exceeded 1982's first quarter by more than 27,000 dwelling units. Multi-family units (units housing five or more families) le d the growth again, expanding by 80 percent over 1982.

Business structure and taxes

By Donald J. Massoglia

The Subchapter S Revision act of 1982 has made the S corporation very similar to a partnership for federal income tax purposes. However, there still remains some significant differences between S corporatons and partnerships when choosing the appropriate entity in which to conduct business. Two of the major differences are in the calculation of basis and in the flexibility to allow for special allocations.

The loss a S corporation shareholder can deduct is limited to his adjusted basis in stock and loans to the corporation. The shareholder does not obtain basis in corporate debt to third parties even if the shareholder is required to guarantee the debt.

For example, assume two 50 percent shareholders each contribute 10,000 to capital of a S corporation. The shareholders also loan $50,000 to the corporation ($25,000 each) and guarantee a loan from the bank to the S corporation for $50,000. Each shareholder's basis for deducting losses of the corporation is $35,000 ($10,000 capital, plus $25,000 loan).

In a general partnership, partners also share in partnership debt for basis purposes. In the above example, a 50 percent partner's basis for deducting losses would be $60,000 ($10,000 plus 1/2 (25,000) plus 1/2 (50,000). The shareholders in a corporation should consider borrowing money personally from a bank and then loaning it to the corporation in order to achieve a basis result similar to that of a partnership.

The shareholders in a S corporation share in profits and losses on a per share per day basis. No special allocations of profit and loss can be made. On the other hand, a partnership; vehicle permits the use of special allocations if the allocation has "substantial economic effect." Thus, a partnership by allowing special allocations provides the necessary flexibility to adequately handle the economic and tax problems inherent in certain farm-outs and carried interest siuations common in the oil and gas industry.

S corporations are now very similar to partnerships for tax purposes, but as noted above, there remains some significant differences. A careful analysis should precede any decision on which type of entity to use in a business venture.

Suppliers say decontrol would make prices fall

By STEVEN EISENSTADT
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Natural gas prices in the United States would plummet about 20 percent if the Senate enacts legislation to deregulate the fuel, the Natural Gas Supply Association said in a study released Friday.

The natural gas trade group, which has been pushing for the legislation, said the wellhead price of the fuel would drop an average of 55 cents to $2.25 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf), assuming the current cost is $2.80/Mcf.

For homeowners, that would mean an annual savings of about $63 on natural gas bills, according to NGSA figures.

The group released its study at a Washington news conference, as the Senate gears up for debate on the controversial decontrol bill.

The Senate probably will begin consideration of the bill next Friday or may hold an unusual weekend session next Saturday.

With Senate action nearing, the study seemed to be a volly in the NGSA's battle for the legislation.

Included in the three-page study were statements that touted the bill as containing "many features that together will convert today's rigid, inflexible industry into a flexible, market responsive, highly competitive industry."

Moreover, NGSA president Nicholas Bush, speaking at the news conference, spent more time discussing prospects for the bill's passage than he did talking about the study.

Calling the bill "a balanced document," Bush said "there is no question" the measure would lower prices, bolstering both consumers and the gas industry.

He also predicted that a filibuster planned by Sen Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, will not threaten the decontrol measure because other Senators "will lean sympathetically to the bill" once they "focus attention" on it.

Bush also said he was befuddled by opposition to a House version of the decontrol legislation by Rep. John Dingell, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Big Gulf stock block traded

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

A 2.5 million share block of Gulf Oil Corp. was traded on the New York Stock Exchange Friday for $118 million cash, amid speculation that an investor group led by Amarillo, Texas-based Mesa Petroleum Co. may be increasing its stake in Gulf.

The block was the third-largest in dollar value ever traded on the Big Board. Bear, Stearns & Co., the Wall Street brokerage that handled the transaction, declined to identify the buyer or seller of the block. Gulf and Mesa also declined to comment.

However, a Gulf spokesman noted that Friday was the date of record for purchasing shares in order to be able to vote on a proposal by the company's management to reorganize the company as a Delaware-based holding company and thus change the shareholders' voting rights.

Wall Street analysts speculated that the Mesa-led group, which is headed by President T. Boone Pickens Jr. and includes members of the powerful Belzberg family of Canada and three other companies, took the unusual step of making the large cash purchase in order to bolster its influence over the outcome of that vote.

If the consortium did buy the shares traded Friday, its holdings now would total 17 million shares, or a little over 10 percent of Gulf's 166 million shares. The group already is the company's largest single shareholder.

Texas gas yield less

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace has announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 476,192,044 Mcf (thousand cubic feet) of gas in July, down 5.99 percent from field runs a year earlier.

That brings total production for the year through July to 3,193,946,917 Mcf of gas. Through July of 1982, Texas had produced 3,584,181,618 Mcf of gas.

Marketed gas production in July totaled 385,432,917 Mcf and reflected a 7.28 percent decrease from the July 1982 volume.

Wallace chides Congress

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace recently chided Congress for its inability to solve the nation's natural gas problems and suggested the federal government look at Texas' system of gas regulation for managing gas resources on the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS).

In testimony prepared for a hearing on OCS gas and gas prorationing conducted by the House Subcommittee on Fossil and Synthetic Fuels, Wallace told congressmen the states aren't responsible for the present turmoil in the nation's natural gas markets.

"You need not look to state systems of proration and ratable take to find causes for the nation's inability to solve its natural gas problems," the Wallace statement said. "Congress must look to its own back door to see the effect the NGPA (Natural Gas Policy Act) has had in creating the price differential problems of which you complain."

Wallace praised Texas' system of correlating natural gas production to market demand and said a similar system would be beneficial in developing the nation's OCS gas reserves.

"The Texas system has worked well for over six decades, during times of both shortage and surplus, and continues to work toward a fair and equitable balance between the interests of the consumers, producers, pipelines, and royalty owners," Wallace said.

The key to the Texas gas proration system is flexibility, according to Wallace. Each month, purchasers submit nominations of their requirements for gas - their market demand. Producers also submit montly their forecasts of production. Taking this data and using semi-annual well test results, the Commission then determines the total estimated market demand for gas in each field in the state. Allowable production for each individual well is then set by dividing the field's allowable up equitably amoung producers.

The system's flexibility comes into play when actual market conditions change between the time purchaser nominations are filed and the time gas is actually taken from the fields. To meet demand which rises above or falls below anticipated levels, the Commission allows a pipeline to take production in excess of, or below, its well's assigned allowables - within certain limitations. The over or under production is carried forward and made up when market conditions permit.

"By our system of ratable takes," Wallace said, "the state seeks to assure that all producers have the opportunity to sell their fair share of gas, whether the market is large or small."

In addition to preventing waste of a valuable resource by overproduction, the Texas proration system has other important advantages, Wallace said. First, it ensures that a well will not be shut in unfairly and that a producer will be able to maintain the cash flow necessary to provide for future production.

The guarantee that a producer will have access to a market for this gas encourages new exploration and thus continued supplies. "The continuing decline of production from existing wells makes this feature of the Texas system a highly important one," he said.

Natural gas consumers benefit because abuses which have plagued the interstate market are stymied by the Texas approach. It does not allow shutting-in of wells producing lower priced gas in favor of wells producing more expensive gas, which may be subject to high take-or-pay contracts.

Wallace attacked the myth that state regulatory systems inhibit market pressures and competition in times of gas surplus. Wallace emphasized that "Texas ratable take orders do not tell pipelines how much total gas to purchase or at what price, but rather solely direct that pipelines take whatever gas they purchase ratably (equitably) from all wells within a field and between fields when the pipeline's system covers more than one field.

Midland County wells important to economy

The sale of crude oil and natural gas from Midland County wells made an important contribution to the county's economy in 1982 and accounted for $355.6 million of the $41.1 billion wellhead value of Texas petroleum production last year.

In its annual survey of the economic impact of oil and gas industry operations in the significant producing counties of Texas, Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association reported that the county ranked 20th among Texas' 254 counties on the basis of value of its marketed petroleum production. Such production includes condensate and casinghead gas.

The county's wells produced 7.6 million barrels of crude oil, valued at $239.5 million, and 55.6 billion cubic feet of natural gas, valued at $116.1 million. Owners of royalty in the county received $44.5 million as their share of the output, the Association noted.

"The figures cited in this survey offer graphic evidence of the continuing importance of petroleum production to nearly every county in Texas, a situation which should continue indefinitely," said the Association's chairman, Joe C. Walter Jr., Houston independent producer.

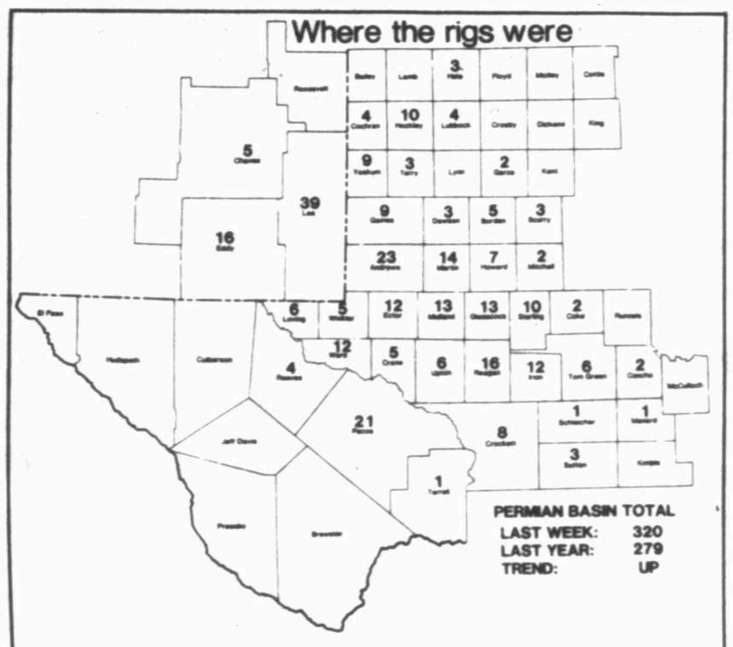

"There are a number of encouraging signs indicating that the oil and gas industry's protracted slowdown in activity is coming to an end. A general economic recovery in the United States and other industralized countries will increase the demand for petroleum products, thereby stimulating geophysical and drilling activity here and abroad. The domestic petroleum industry stands ready to drill more wells as drilling projects become economically feasible," Walter said.

In addition to paying property taxes to cities, counties and school districts, producers in the county supported state government through production tax payments estimated at $19.7 million, according to the Association survey. Crude oil taxes amounted to $11 million, while natural gas levies totalled $8.7 million.

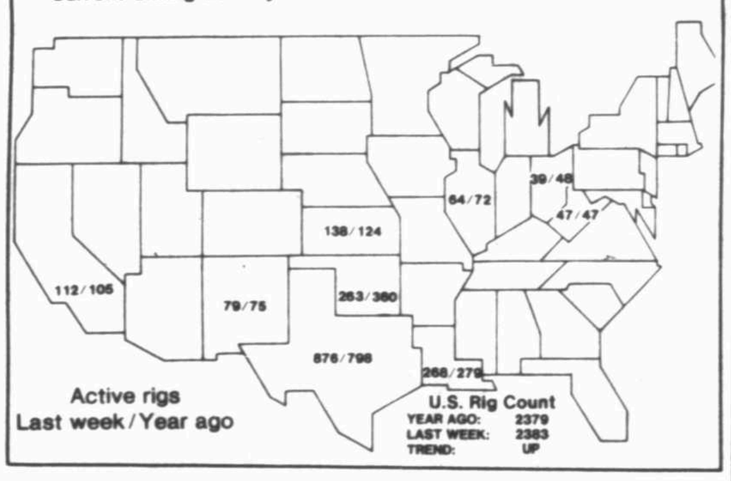

Based on Texas Employment Commission figures, some 14,478 oil and gas industry employees in the county received wages of about $416.7 million in 1982.

In the search for new petroleum reserves in the county, oil and gas producers spent a reported $29.9 million in the drilling of 64 wells, including three wildcat, or exploratory, wells. This effort resulted in the completion of 58 oil wells and one gas well, although some $3.8 million was lost in the drilling of five dry holes. As of April 1, 1983, therewere 1,521 producing wells in the county: 1,368 oil and 153 gas.

Petroleum processing also contributed to the county economy, with four natural gasoline processing plants, having a total daily capacity of 211.1 million cubic feet of natural gas.

Market forces control gas prices

NEW YORK (SWN) — Market forces are controlling the price of natural gas now — and it is the market, not the Natural Gas Policy Act (NGPA) and other regulations, that offers the best protection for consumers from a "fly up" in gas prices, the president of Shell Oil Company said here recently.

"In fact, one might argue that controls are today keeping prices from falling," John F. Bookout told a meeting of the New York Society of Security Analysts.

He said that NGPA has encouraged the development of high-cost supplies of gas and discouraged the development of low-cost supplies.

"The removal of NGPA controls on old, low-priced gas (discovered prior to 1977) would make it economical to recover at current market clearing price some 52 trillion cubic feet of additional reserves from old gas fields by producing them to lower abandonment pressures, by more infill drilling and by well stimulation treatments," Bookout said.

"This additional gas, equal to a quarter of the nation's current proved reserves of 200 trillion cubic feet, will never be recovered it the fields are abandoned as uneconomic before decontrol occurs.

"While we do not think decontrol of old gas would increase the overall average price to producers; it would substantially increase recoverable reserves of natural gas," Bookout said.

Turning to Shell's performance, Bookout observed, "As we assess the situation now, Shell's 1982 net income of $5.19 per share will not quite be equalled in 1983. After-tax cash income should about equal that of the last two years."

Important factors in this outlook for 1983, Bookout said, are lower oil prices and reduced natural gas demand, poor first quarter earnings in the refining and marketing segment, higher chemical earnings and a net gain of about $50 million from the sale in September of geothermal operations.

"Natural gas prices are no longer increasing rapidly, but conversely, gas demand is perhaps no longer declining," Bookout said. "While oil prices seem to have stabilized for now, lower average oil prices this year are expected to more than offset the benefit of Shell's moderately higher domestic and foreign crude oil production. Therefore, for the immediate future, we do not expect much change one way or another in current earnings levels in our exploration and production segment...

"Earnings in the refining and marketing segment have recovered to more normal levels of performance from the first quarter loss, but earlier-than-normal seasonal weakness in gasoline pricing this year has prevented makeup of the loss," he said.

Shell's refined products sales volumes were up about six percent in the first eight months of 1983 compared to last year, while industry volumes were down a little more than three percent, he said. Gains in gasoline volume, market share and throughout are in part due to Shell's program last year to expand its number of credit card holders.

"Volumes in most of our chemical lines have been improving from their low point last November and are now up some seven percent from that point... Prices have been increasing on most chemical products and are now about five percent above their low point in March," Bookout said.

"As we look back over the last five years, we are proud of our record of achievements," he said. "During that period, net income, after tax cash income and dividends have about doubled. Proven reserves of domestic oil and gas have grown by almost 25 percent — or about 700 million barrels — and now stand at 3.5 billion barrels crude oil equivalent...

"We look forward to the next five years with confidence," Bookout said. We are well positioned in our businesses and we expect to be drilling some of the most important wildcats, from the stand-point of volume potential, in the company's history.

Bookout said Shell's company-wide capital expenditures in 1983 are now expected to total about $2.7 billion.

Oilfield theft seminar focuses on need to educate

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

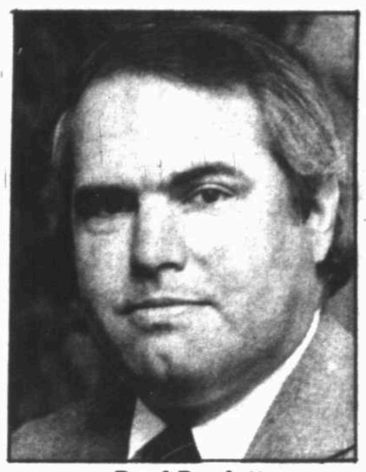

Education was on the minds of everyone attending the "Oil Field Crimes" seminar Wednesday through Friday in Midland. More than 75 law enforcement and corporate security officials learned about identifying factors which contribute to oilfield thefts, different methods of investigation and preventative measures that can reduce the incidents of theft.

Dan Mills, Texas' assistant attorney general, said his office wants to educate the thief first.

"We are interested in working these cases with the local authorities because we think if we can make examples in a few areas, we will curb the incidents of theft. In areas where we have worked and returned indictments and gotten convictions, we've seen a noticeable decline in the number of crude oil thefts."

Mills also said security officials need to work hard and be patient when investigating and building oilfield theft cases.

"Unless you actually catch the thief in the act you're going to have to spend a lot of time going through records. It gets very, very involved and it can get very boring. The more circumstances you can put together to show that the circumstances of the people you are accusing of the crime are not likely, the stronger your case will be. It gets tedious. It's going to take lots of time if you are going to build a good case."

Boyd Burdett

Dan Mills

Mills encouraged security personnel to take advantage of public records from the Railroad Commission, the Secretary of State and the Comptroller's Office when investigating and building a case to take to the district attorney or grand jury.

"All these records are public records and everyone has access to them without a subpoena. You need to work the records to get a grasp of the mechanics that are going on behind the scenes."

Mills emphasized law enforcement officials need to know what to look for and how to find information which will help them build a solid case. Once that is done, Mills said more indictments will be handed down which should significantly effect the oilfield theft problem.

Boyd Burdett, executive director of the Petroleum Industry Security Council said by educating law enforcement and industry personnel, the council helps to reduce oilfield theft.

"Law enforcement people have the tools, we just need to teach them how to apply them in the oil industry."

Burdett said oilfield crime had slowed down considerably.

"Equipment theft is still a problem — it's just not as critical as it was was in 1980 and 1981. The emphasis on types of equipment being stolen has changed. During the boom drilling equipment, such as drill bits, blowout preventers and even entire drilling rigs were being stolen. Now the emphasis has shifted to items that can be used in other industries such as air compressors, trucks and tubing. Crude oil theft though has not slowed down appreciably."

Burdett said it is difficult to determine exactly how much money was being lost to oilfield theft.

"One of the reasons we (PISC) were formed was because no one could really tell what the problem was. Oilfield thefts are lumped under a general theft catagory which is tremendously large and there's been no way for any agency to tell how much oilfield-related theft had taken place during the year.

"The problem is we are still new and not all sheriffs' departments are sending us their reports. They are not required to do this, they do it voluntarily and not all (oil related) companies are sending us their reports."

Burdett said the council is in the process of informing law enforcement offices around the country, through seminars similar to the one in Midland, about their services.

"We need support from industry and individuals because everything we do is for law enforcement and at no charge."

Burdett said industry and law enforcement, both, must have a full understanding of the problem before they can attempt to solve it.

"It's going to take an effort on the part of industry to do something about the problems itself. They need to start marking equipment and they need to know how to protect themselves without spending a lot of money on a security program. I'm talking about practical good sense measures.

"Second, industry needs to be very forceful about prosecution. And third, law enforcement needs to understand the problems companies face in trying to protect their equipment."

Burdett is very optomistic about the future of the security council's efforts to reduce the oilfield crime rate.

"It amazes me what we could do with more cooperation from industry. I haven't been this optomistic since I've been in law enforcement."

Rich Pfeiffer, senior investigator for Petro Lewis Corporation, said eduction of employees is the most important step in reducing oilfield theft.

"Educating employees creates an atmosphere of security awareness. Security is the responsibility of each and every employee. It's real easy to turn your head when you see something happening.

Pfeiffer said his company has a strict policy regarding theft and hopes other companies will adopt similar policies.

"Our management went on record to say that Petro Lewis would do everything we possibly could to prosecute someone that stole from us. This is just an unacceptable practice at Petro Lewis. Our policy on theft is real simple — it is unacceptable and anybody that we catch stealing from us will be terminated and will be prosecuted."

Pfeiffer hopes his efforts to reduce oilfield crime at Petro Lewis can one day be "pro-active," — taking preventative measures — rather than reactive.

"I want to take steps to minimize the problem so that when it occurs we will be able to pinpoint where, specifically, the problem occured."

Ortloff subsidiary wins contracts

TULSA, OKLA. — The Pro-Quip Corporation, a subsidiary of Midland's Ortloff Corporation, has been awarded two contracts for gas processing plants.

Union Texas Petroleum Corporation has awarded a contract to Pro-Quip for the design and fabrication of a gas treating pant to be installed in Terry County. Minerals Inc., Hobbs, N.M., a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston Natural Gas Corporation, has awarded a conract to Pro-Quip for the design, fabrication, and installation of a cryogenic gas processing plant to extract hydrocarbon liquids from a natural gas stream. The plant will be located in Eddy County, New Mexico.

The Union Tecxas treating plant will be installed at the Wellman Gas Plant. It will utilize diethanolamine to extract carbon dioxide from natural gas for reinjection in an enhanced oil recovery project.

The Minerals Inc. facility, called the Kermac Plant, will be disigned to process 6 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. The plant will utilize a Joule-Thompson expansion process to recover approximately 4,000 gallons of natural gas liquids per day.

BOTTOM LINES

Adobe Oil & Gas Corporation announced recently its Board of Directors have declared a twenty percent increase in quarterly cash dividends on its common stock for fourth quarter, 1983. The six cent quarterly dividend will be payable December 16 to shareholders of record on November 18. The Board increased the dividend as a resuslt of the company's excellent financial condition and the continued excellent cash flow which amply covers the total budget in addition to the increased dividend.

• • •

Elcor Corp., announced record earnings for the first quarter ending September 30. Income before extraordinary item increased 32% to $1,947,000 or $.55 per share from $1,472,000 or $.42 per share last year.

Net income of $2,998,000 or $.85 per share (including a tax benefit carryforward extraordinary item of $1,051,000 or $.30 per share) was up from $2,710,000 or $.78 per share (including a tax carryforward extraordinary item of $1,238,000 or $.36 per share) in the first quarter last year. Sales of $61,847 were up from $59,459,000 last year.

• • •

HOUSTON — United Energy Resurces Inc. said recently its consolidated results of operations for the quarter ended Septemer 30 will include a provision for the write-down of the oil and gas properties of Cotton Petroleum Corporation, its wholly-owned oil and gas exploraton, deyelopment and production subsidiary. The write-down, net of federal income taxes, is expected to be approximately $35 million. This non-cash item will adversely affect reported earnings by $1.26 per share of United Energy's common stock, but will not affect cash flows.

• • •

Dorchester Gas Corp. announced gross revenues for the year ended Aug. 31 reached another record high of $1.4 billion. Net earnings for the year were $17.7 million or $1.01 per share compared to $17.8 million or $1.01 per share earnings on revenues of $1.2 billion reported for the previous year.

Although the company continues to be affected by sluggish energy demand caused by economic recession and consecutive mild winters, earnings levels were sustained as a result of improved prices for natural gas liquids, increased crude oil volumes, and a $3.2 million pre-tax profit realized during the 4th quarter on a real estate transaction. Additionally, while industry-wide refining margins remained weak, Dorchester experienced healthy profits at its East Texas facility.

As planned, the company reduced its debt by about $16 million in the year ending Aug. 31, 1983 and plans provide for additional reductions in 1984 along with a capital budget of $35 million, most of which will be spent in exploration activities.

"Good Oil and Gas Loans Are the Safest Loans in America Today."

Given all the negative press about energy these days, a lot of people are down on the oil and gas industry. They blame it for all kinds of problems.

But that's exactly the opposite of the way we feel at ClayDesta National Bank.

Our bank was started by oil people, is owned by oil people, and is dedicated to serving oil people. We know the business. We like it. And our philosophy isn't going to change just because the economy changes.

Simply stated, good oil and gas lending practices lead to good oil and gas loans. At ClayDesta National, we base energy loans on the value of proved producing properties.

Our people know what they're talking about. We're one of just a handful of Texas banks with oil and gas lenders and engineers on staff. The intelligent professional analysis of proven reserves is the foundation of sound oil and gas lending. And since reserves are going to be there, we know good energy loans are the safest loans any bank can make.

Independent oil operators risked everything they had to establish this great industry. They're still the backbone of it today. And we stand behind 'em.

If you'd like to know more about the way ClayDesta National feels about energy lending, give us a call at 683-2265.

You'll be surprised at how much better you'll feel when you talk to bankers who are high on energy.

You've never seen a bank like ClayDesta.

"Now Is A Good Time To Move To ClayDesta For The Same Reason That Now Is A Good Time To Drill A Well."

People who know the oil and gas business know that right now is a good time to drill a well.

Costs are way down. Plenty of rigs are available, for example, and the competition to keep these rigs busy is fierce.

It's the old law of supply and demand. And it works in leasing office space, too.

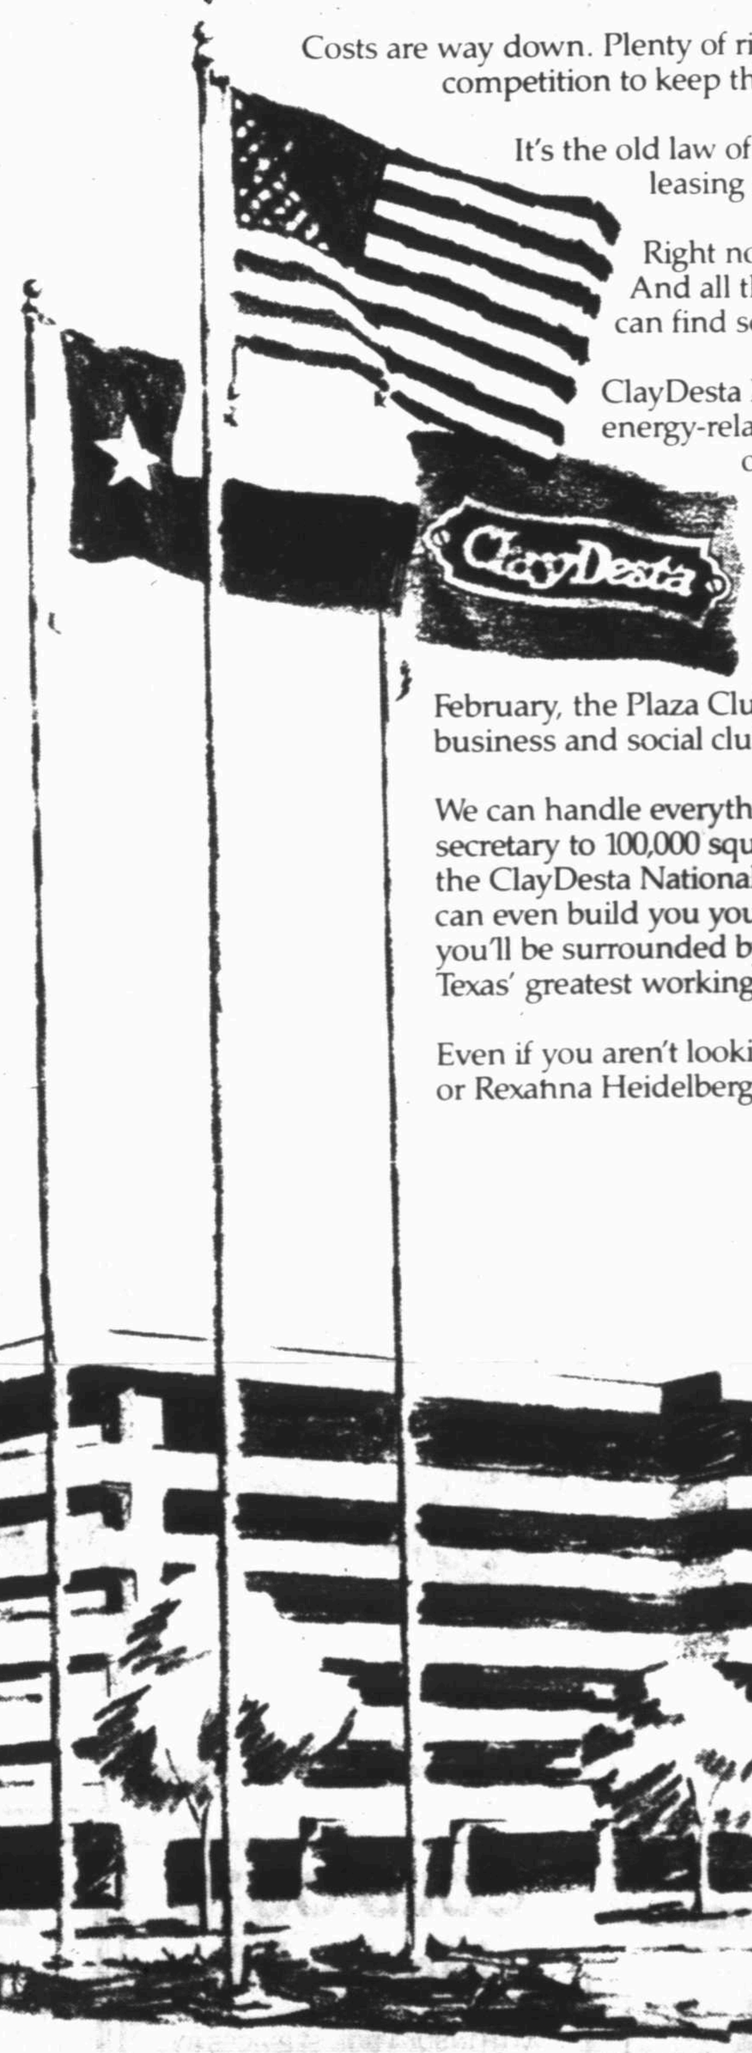

Right now there's lots of it available in Midland. And all that competition to lease it out means you can find some great values.

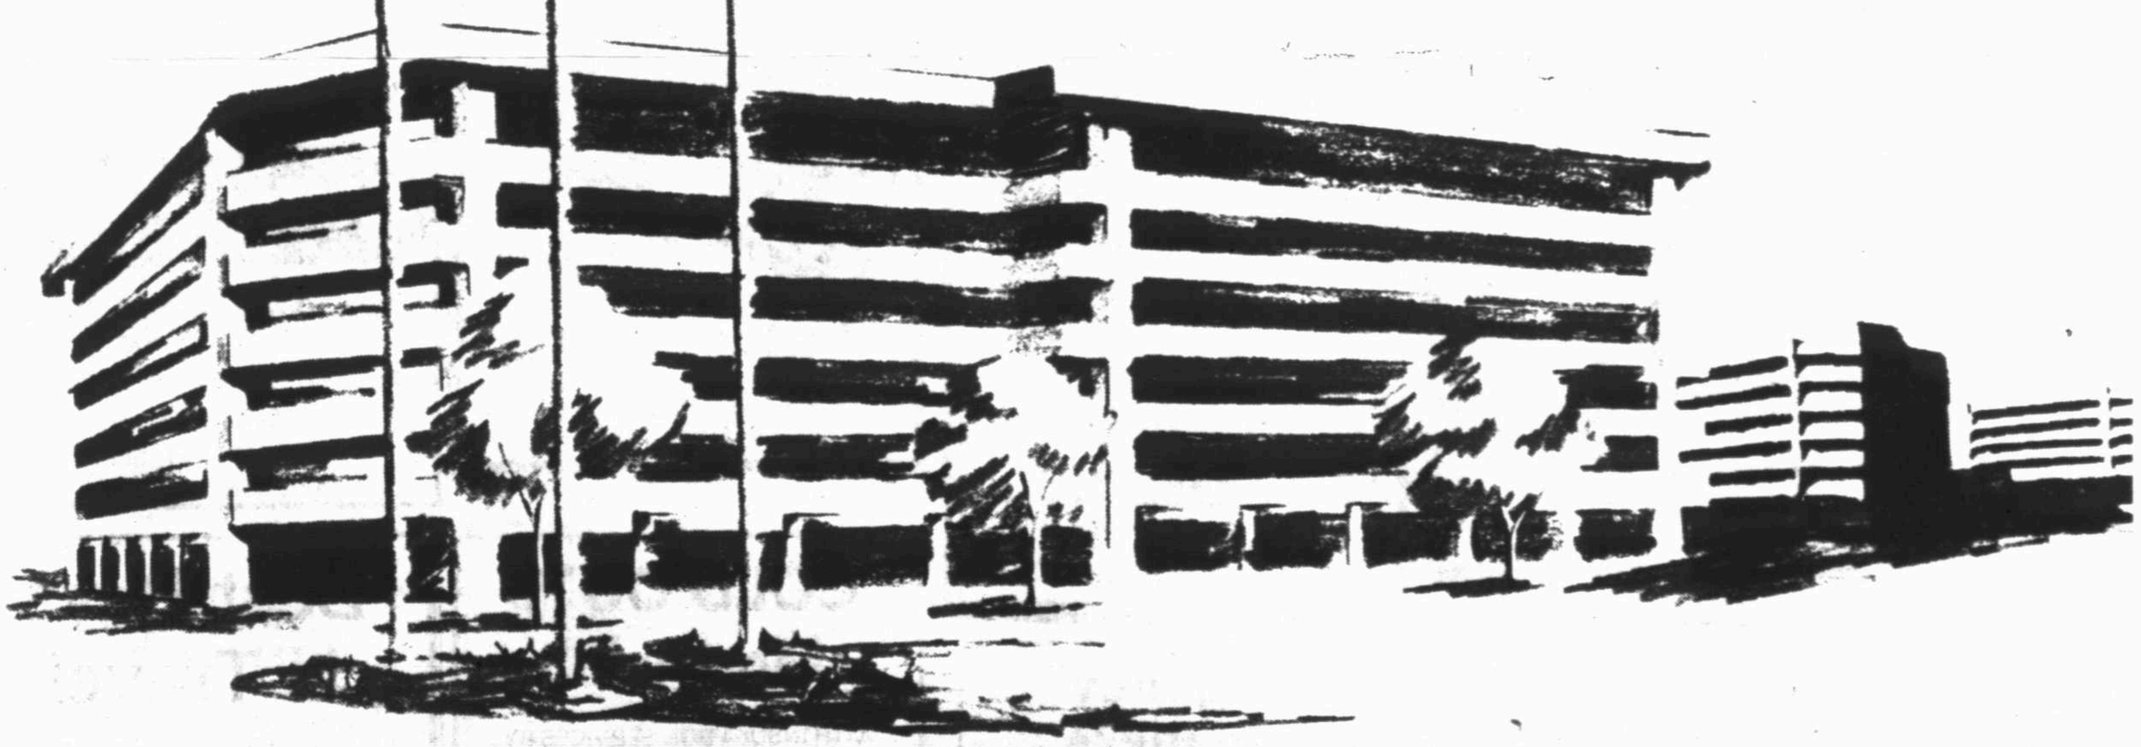

ClayDesta Plaza is proving its value to more than 30 energy-related companies, from independent operators to majors like Sohio, Cities Service, Sun, and Southland Royalty.

We've got lots of room. And plenty of free parking close to where you work. There's an extensive Petroleum Information Log Library. And coming in February, the Plaza Club, Midland's only high-rise private business and social club.

We can handle everything from 500 square feet for you and a secretary to 100,000 square feet for your regional headquarters in the ClayDesta National Bank Building or ClayDesta Towers. We can even build you your own building if you need it. Either way you'll be surrounded by energetic successful businesses in West Texas' greatest working environment.

Even if you aren't looking for space right now, give Bill Sandlin or Rexanna Heidelberg a call at 682-5379.

Diamontrigue has moved and is now easier than ever to find. They are still located in the Market Place, University and Parkway in Odessa, but now are in the center of the front. Diamontrigue offers only the finest diamond simulants available. Diamontrigue is also located in Lubbock at 2811 S. Loop.

Diamontrigue moves, is now easier to find

We've moved! We've moved! And we're much easier to find. Diamontrigue is still in the Market Place at University and Parkway, but on the front of the center. Come see!

This year we have requested that our Christmas selections be shipped early, and we have good news for you. We are featuring a special 10% deposit for your Christmas gifts that enables you to have exactly what you'd like for all on your Christmas list and take three months to pay. You hav first choice from a generous collection of bracelets, rings, pendants, and earrings in white and yellow gold.

Is the Diamontigue gem a zircon?
No, a zircon is a mined stone. It comes in many colors. Long ago, the colorless variety was used as a substitute diamond, not successfully. Some of the colored zircons are very beautiful. The Diamontrigue gemstone is a man-made stone, originally made for the space program.

Can you wear this every day, do dishes, etc.
You can treat the Diamontrigue gem like any other gemstone. It needs no special handling. However, we do not recommend that you wash dishes or clean house in any of your fine jewelry. It's very hard on the gold. We do recommend that you treasure your jewelry and take care of it, cleaning it frequently.

Do these need a special cleaner?
No, any fine jewelry cleaner wil do. However, we can say with total immodesty that our cleaner is the most superb we have ever seen. Many of the cleaners on the market leave a residue on the jewelry that interferes with the clarity and beauty. Our cleaner is most inexpensive, kept deliberately so, that all may have and enjoy. The price? Only one dollar.

Will these gemstones get cloudy, or yellow?
Not ours! Our guarantee against this happening is unconditional and permanent.

I can buy this type of jewelry elsewhere for less money, why is Diamontrigue more expensive?
The difference is our relentless pursuit for quality. As has been said, "There is always someone who can make a product cheaper, and sell it for less." A cheaper product is not what we are interested in. Many sell what is known as "the finest" cubic zirconia. The finest is where we begin. Two gemologists select the Diamontrigue gem from the finest: the rejection rate is 93%. We show only the top 7% in the Diamontrigue Collections.

To have a "14K gold mounting" is not enough, as quality in mountings vary a great deal. The mountings selected for Diamontrigue must be immaculately finished, heavy for the size, innovative in design or a timeless classic of superb finish and good weight. Quality costs more; but only quality has lasting value and the look of elegance.

At Diamontrigue, we don't talk about the newest and best. We have it for our customers. You will be delighted with the gift you give to others and to yourself!

Come see for yourself!
And remember,"If you don't tell, we won't!"

Leasing offers you numerous advantages

Just what is leasing? Leasing can offer many advantages to almost everyone, though most don't realize it. Many people simply don't understand what leasing is. You don't have to own a business to be able to lease things. Estimates are that over half of the automoblies driven in some states, California and Illinois for example, are not owned, but leased. Leasing normally requires no down payment, usually just the first month plus tax, title and license. Payments on a lease are often even lower than you would pay if you were buying. Even most people who say they own their homes are in reality borrowing money from the bank on a lease concept. When you pay a monthly rental on your telephone, it is simply being leased from the telephone company.

But sometimes it is hard to fully comprehend, or believe, that leasing is so simple for the ordinary citizen. We're here to help you understand leasing and all of the many advantages it has in store for you. We are Big Wheel Leasing, Inc., a full service leasing firm dedicated to serving West Texans. We are definitely not limited to simply automobile leasing, we can lease you anything from a typewriter to an oil rig or a lear jet. We can lease heavy equipment, phone systems, computers, airplanes, farming equipment, automobiles... the list goes on and on. Leasing rates on automobiles start at only $127/ month!

But just what are some of the advantages of leasing? First, leasing does not tie up your line of credit at the bank. It does not restrict your cash flow, requires less cash outlay as there is usually no down payment, and business leases may be 100% tax deductible. Payments are usually less than if you were buying. We would like to send you a free brochure if you can't make it in to visit with us. Just call us at 689-0738 or 1-800-592-4773. We will give you the straight facts on leasing.

If you are interested in leasing a full-size car, now is the time to do it. Most of the full-size cars will be down-sized the first of 1984. This could be your last chance for a larger car. Also, since the 1984 models have recently come out, rates are lower. Before you buy, check with us and see what leasing can offer you. We can custom-fit a leasing package to your needs. Come by Big Wheel Leasing today, or give us a call.

If you need heavy equipment, a phone system, a computer, or almost anything, check with Big Wheel Leasing before you buy. We can lease you any type auto, from Chevettes, Corvettes, Cadillacs, Mercedes, Rolls Royce, BMW, etc. We offer good terms, and we can work with you to tailor a package to fit your needs. Come by Big Wheel Leasing, Imc. today at 1017 N. Midkiff, Suite A, across from Town & Country Shopping Center. For a free brochure or more information, call us at 689-0738 or 1-800-592-4773. See the advantages leasing has to offer you.

Vice President Bill Lawler, of Big Wheel Leasing, can offer you numerous advantages with a custom tailored lease package. For more information on how Big Wheel Lease can help you, call him today at 689-0738.

Jo Smith, owner of the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, offers Midland the world's first natural organic line of cosmetics: Nutri-Metics. Of Course, the Pennyrich Shop still offers the best in custom-fitted bras, in lingerie, and in formal wear. The Pennyrich is located at 311 Dodson in Midland, or call 683-1045.

Pennyrich Shop brings you natural beauty

Competition is the base of free enterprise. Everyone has the right to make and sell a product, within limits, of course. But competition and the free enterprise system can make things very confusing at times for consumers. How do you know which brand to choose? It is impossible for anyone to know everything about any single product on the market. So how do you make your choice? Well, common sense will tell you which brand is the best for you and your family. Sometimes, looking at the ingredients can be a big help. Nutri-Metics cosmetics, available at the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, was the first in the world to create a line of cosmetics made solely of natural organic ingredients.

Nutri-Metics was developed in 1961 by Mulford J. Nobbs, president of Con-Stan Industries, Inc. after he ahd received an invitation to visit Hunza, high in the Himilayan Mountains. There he found a population that appeared to have found the true secret of the Fountain of Youth. Women of 80 had skin that looked as if they were only 30. He learned that the golden apricot played a big part in their lives, both from eating the fruit and then using an oil from the kernel as their only form of skin care. He also found that there had been no crime in Hunza for over 100 years, that people did not know what sickness was, and that the age of 120 years was not at all uncommon. Why, men of Hunza often fathered children at 90 years old!

But the apricot oil was not the only reason for the remarkable preservation of the people of Hunza. They observe six basic rules: sunshine, fresh air, pure water, proper exercise, sufficient sleep, and natural food.

With this in mind, the company became the first in the world to make a line of cosmetics made of natural organic ingredients. In fact, reading from a list of the ingredients used in the Nutri-Metics line, it appears that the cosmatics could be eaten as well as used externally. In addition to the apricot oil, there are honey, almond, mint, oranges, lemons, limes, papaya extract, special herbs, soy bean, and avocado. The Nutri-Metics line is natural, organic, derma-genic, ph balanced, and hypo-allergenic.

Remember in buying your cosmetics that anything put onto the skin is absorbed into the bloodstream. With this in mind, you should realize that any chemical not safe enough to be put in the mouth is not safe enough to be put on the skin. This is one of the beauties of Nutri-Metics.

Remember,Nutri-Metics cosmetics are available locally at the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop, 311 Dodson in Midland. But besides the Nutri-Metics, the Pennyrich also carries, of course, the Pennyrich bra, beautiful lingerie, swimwear, Danskins, and formal wear. In addition, Jezebel strapless bras, halter bras, French-cut bras, and bras for all types of formal wear are available there. Jobst prosthesis and Camp masectomy bras are also available. If you prefer, special appointments made be made after hours for these items. The Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop gives you the personal attention you deserve to serve your individual needs.

Next time your present bottle of make-up runs out, come by the Pennyrich Bra & Lingerie Shop at 311 Dodson in Midland and try Nutri-Metics. Compare the ingredients with your present cosmetice and decide which is really better for you. Then look at the beauty of Nutri-Metics. Even if you can't wear other cosmetics, remember, the Nutri-Metics cosmetics are all natural and organic. Of course, the Pennyrich is still the place to go for your custom-fitted bras and beautiful lingerie and formal wear. Call Jo Smith, owner of the Pennyrich, at 683-1045. Start today out as the first day of your new-found beauty.

Vacuum Cleaner Shop moves to new location

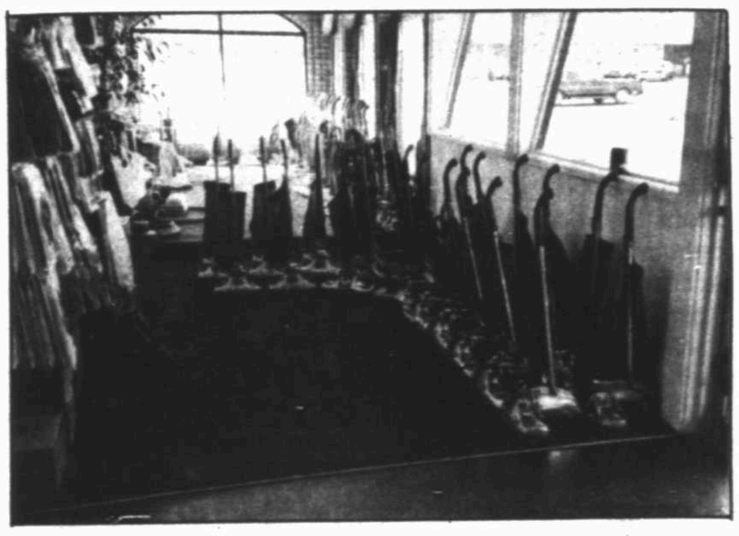

Ah, the days of years gone by. Man has advanced more technologically in the last century than in centuries and centuries before. Time Magazine recently released a special anniversary issue entitled The Most Amazing 60 Years in History. But for all of the advancement, people still look back and reflect upon the "good old days." Those were the days in past years when we didn't have to worry about the price of oil. We didn't sit back scared to death of who would nuke who first. Those were the days of penny candy. But most of all, those were the days when the merchant had a sincere interest in both quality and service to his customers. With inflation and the state of the economy today, everyone is trying to make as much money as they can, as easily as they can. This means that service and quality are fast becoming extinct. If you find a business that is truly concerned about each and every customer; one that still believes in service after the sell and selling only quality merchandise, you had better remember where you found it. The Vacuum Cleaner Shop, 3102 W. Cuthbert in Midland, is one place you had better remember.

The Vacuum Cleaner Shop has moved from their previous location at 3001 W. Cuthbert (corner of Gibson's parking lot) into a better location at 3102 W. Cuthbert, across from Gibson's. The service you receive at the Vacuum Cleaner Shop is of the type that you hardly ever see anymore. Owner Jack Snoddy firmly believes in giving his customers the very best service possible anywhere. This includes not only sales of new makes and models, but in repairing as well. The Vacuum Cleaner Shop offers probably the best repair service available anywhere. Service is available on all makes and models.

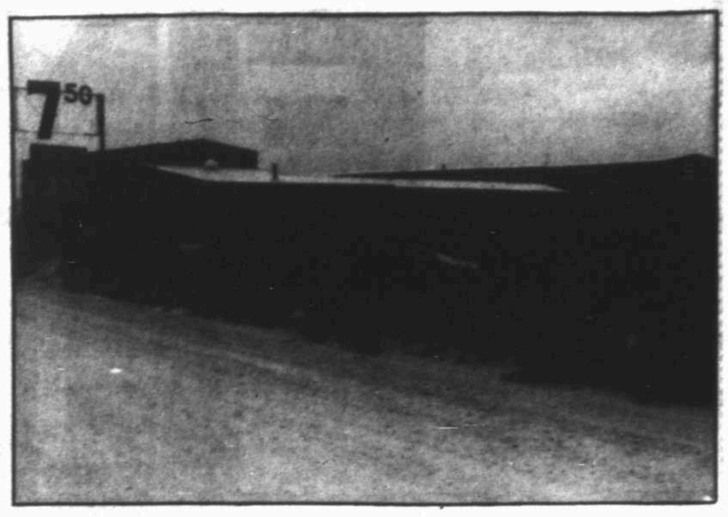

The Vacuum Cleaner Shop offer the largest selection of new vacuums with over 26 different models. Jack's shop was the P1 Sanitaire Blue Line Dealer in Texas in 1982, as well as the P1 volume vacuum cleaner shop in the Fort Worth branch. The record speaks for itself. Those who have discovered the Vacuum Cleaner Shop know the importance of shopping somewhere that is truly concerned about the needs and desires of each and every customer. And you have never known the meaning of service after the sell or repair service until you have been to the Vacuum Cleaner Shop.

Mr. Snoddy's store carries all major door to door model vacuum cleaners at greatly reduced prices; most are up to ⅓ off. He carries many rebuilt Kirby vacuums which are probably better built than most new vacs, as they are all metal construction. You can even find a shop vac for your garage or commercial cleaners at the Vacuum Cleaner Shop. In addition, you can find a complete line of bags, belts, and accesories for most models.

Before you buy any vacuum cleaner, check with the Vacuum Cleaner Shop. Check on their repair service, and your vac could be as good as or better than new at a fraction of the cost of a new machine. If you do need a new machine, come by the Vacuum Cleaner Shop and compare prices before you buy anything anywhere. The new building means even better service to the customer and more room for merchandise, giving you a larger selection. And, of course, you can still find the pride in service and the genuine concern for each and every customer. Come by 3102 W. Cuthbert or call 699-7555 today. The days of quality, service, and customer satisfaction can still be found, if you just know where to look.

The Vacuum Cleaner Shop has moved from 3001 W. Cuthbert (corner of Gibson's parking lot) to 3102 W. Cuthbert, across from Gibson's. They offer excellent repair service on all makes and models, as well as 26 different new models to choose from. Come by or call owner Jack Snoddy at 699-7555.

Dorm offers comfort at unbelieveable price

The weather has finally turned colder, and the prospects of warmer weather making many more appearances this year are fast becoming nil. The colder weather brings with it many things, one of which is more expenditures on necessities such as warmer clothing or coats. But in today's economy, many singles find it harder and harder with each passing day just to make ends meet. Necessities such as food and clothing take an unbelieveable percentage of the paychecks of many singles. Sometimes, this leaves little or nothing for living accomodations. Where is a single to turn? Belmont, offers comfortable rooms at prices which you can easily afford.

What does Midland Dorm offer singles that other places don't? The main advantage of staying at Midlnd Dorm is the price. In fact, Midland Dorm has been constucted to very strict specifications making it one of the safest places not only in Midland, but in the entire West Texas area!

And though you may be single, you never have to worry about your safety. Men and women are given seperate accomodations at Midland Dorm. Each building includes well maintained restrooms and shower area, coke machines, and inside pay telephones. Each is carpeted throughout, well-lit inside as well as out, and has more than adequate parking for each and every guest. The grounds are patrolled on a regular basis for your safety.

Common grounds for men and women include a laundry area, game room with a pool table and video games, an outside picnic area with built in bar-b-que grills for the few days of warm weather left, and storage buildings which are available to the general public as well as each guest at the Dorm.

Midland Dorm also has a manager on the premises 24 hours/day for the safety and protection of the guests. Any questions regarding the comfort or condition of a room may be directed at any time to Mr. Grady Toney, the Dorm's manager. Each guest is given fresh towels and sheets when checking into the Dorm, and these may be exchanged for new ones at any time. We want your stay at the Dorm to be as pleasant as possible. After all, we are here to serve you.

Remember, you can stay at Midland Dorm for the low, low rate of $7.50 per night! You can't beat that price anywhere. Come by Midland Dorm tonight. The Dorm is located at 2305 Belmont, one block North of I-20 and one block East of Rankin Highway. For more information, call Grady Toney at 687-0439 or 687-0430.

FINANCIAL ENERGY AT WORK.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

It is a pleasure to announce that the year-to-date growth in deposits and revenues of Petroplex Savings has exceeded that established by any other new financial institution in Midland. We are proud to have become the first savings and loan association in history to exceed one-hundred million dollars in assets during the first year of operaton.

The future looks even brighter thanks to the depth and diversity of strengths displayed by Management and the reliability and determination of our employees. We will continue to follow the policy of sound financial planning that has proven successful since our beginning, as well as follow an aggressive survivor's approach to deregulation. Effective control of our net interest margin coupled with our demonstrated ability to generate non-interest income will allow us throughout the remainder of this year to attract additional investment capital, lendable funds and quality real estate lending opportunities.

All of us at The Petroplex Savings Banking Centers appreciate your support and invite you to be a part of our success. I assure you, we will spare no energy in meeting your financial needs.
