Oklahoman's Death Follows That of James Harris, Shot in Raid

ACTION PROTESTED

American Legion Passes Condemnation of U. S. Agents' Gunplay

TECUMSEH, Okla., July 5. (UP)—Resentment against a dry officer and three aides who shot down two men during the raid of their farm house, near here, increased tonight with the death of the second victim.

Oscar Lowery, who had been removed to a hospital at Shawnee, 10 miles north, died late today. His brother-in-law, James Harris, had died a few hours after the shooting late Thursday.

The Oklahoma City American Legion post, meanwhile, assembled and passed a resolution condemning action of the raiders and expressing confidence in the integrity of the two farmers who were shot in front of their families.

Harris was shot to death late Thursday at his farmhouse near here and his brother-in-law was wounded. The dry law squad had opened fire on the men, they said, after their party was fired upon by the farmers. This, however, was denied by the victims who admitted having a gun but said they tried to surrender.

LAWYERS HEAR OF LAND GRANT

Bar Association Elects New Officers

AMARILLO, Texas, July 5. (AP)—Texas and Oklahoma are especially interested in the law of the New Mexico land grant since the discovery of oil in that state, W. A. Keheler, Albuquerque, N. M., told the Texas-New Mexico Bar associations in annual convention here today.

"The Spanish and Mexican land grant had been a curse to the development of New Mexico and it would have been far better for the government to have taken over the grants at the treaty of Guadalupe with Mexico and have made them public domain, paying the owners the then fair price," Keheler said.

H. P. Lawther of Dallas told of the fight the Texas bar made at Austin endeavoring to bring about greater public confidence in opposing "shyster lawyers."

Judge R. R. Watkins, Dallas, reported the approval of the judicial committee of an amendment increasing the number of state supreme court judges to nine members.

C. M. Cureton, chief justice of the Texas supreme court, told the delegates that "too proud to quit or perhaps too poor to quit, the members of the state supreme court had carried on until the great labor entailed under the present system had literally killed them."

At the meeting of the judicial section of the convention, R. R. Watkins of Dallas was elected president; Reese Tatum, Dalhart, first vice president; Charles Clements, Plainview, second vice president; Joseph Jones, Del Rio, third vice president; Nad N. P. Willis, Canadian, secretary-treasurer.

The resolutions committee of the section composed of the president, Allan D. Montgomery, and Henry S. Bishop of Wichita Falls, recommended approval of the proposed amendment allowing for a supreme court of nine judges. It went on record in favor of strict enforcement of the prohibition laws, favored changes in the penalties of the Dean law to conform with those of the Volstead act and the Jones act, keeping the Dean law violations in the felony class.

OLUSTEE MAN SURPRISED BY DEATH CHARGE

NEGRO STORY DENIED

S. B. Scroggins Says He Never Worked Black In Restaurant

Special to The Record News

ALTUS, Okla., July 5.—S. B. Scroggins, Olustee farmer, who was arrested today on a murder charge in connection with the death of John Slaughter, Clarendon, Texas, night watchman, about two years ago, denied all connection with the affair when interviewed late today by a Record News reporter.

Scroggins stated that Slaughter was one of his best friends during the approximately 15 months he lived in Clarendon, and that Slaughter boarded at his cafe most of the time he lived there. He expressed complete surprise at being arrested today.

Waives Extradition

Scroggins said that he would waive extradition and return with the Clarendon peace officers who come for him, but has asked that they wait until Monday in order that he may transact unfinished business matters here.

Scroggins denied having ever known a negro named Scott and said that there were no negroes working for him at the time of the Slaughter murder.

Negro Gives Statement

Walter Scott, negro, told Wichita Falls, Texas, officials Thursday that his employer, formerly a well known Clarendon business man, who no longer lives in Clarendon, had promised him $100 to get rid of Slaughter but that he had refused the offer. The negro said that he and another negro had been called upon to help move the body and were given $50 and told to get out of town. It was following this information that Scroggins was arrested.

Scroggins told of being questioned briefly concerning his knowledge of the murder shortly after the affair at Clarendon and said that his eldest daughter was also questioned briefly. They were never arrested, however.

Jackson County Pioneer

The Scroggins family lived 21 years at Blair in Jackson county before moving to Clarendon and returned to Olustee in this county about two years ago to farm. He was deputy sheriff of Jackson county four years at Blair and justice of the peace for a short time. He was also deputy sheriff in Rusk county, Texas, for a short time, he said.

Scroggins said that he knew nothing of the Slaughter murder until the morning after the tragedy.

The bullet riddled body of Slaughter was discovered early the morning of tragedy, he explained.

FAMED STREET BATTLE GROUND

Striking Carmen Battle; Two Fatalities

NEW ORLEANS, July 5. (AP)—Historic Canal street was turned into a battelground today as striking street car men and their sympathizers fought it out with non union workers and police.

The day's casualties were two dead union men, one union man shot and hundreds of bruised, maimed and injured from both sides from the brickbat, club and gun fights precipitated by attempts of New Orleans Public Service, Inc. to operate street cars.

Starting early today with the launching of the first street car from Canal street barn, mob fury rapidly rose until 2,000 men and a few women were engaged in attacks on the street cars. Finally the crowd captured the third and last car to put out from the barn, chased the non-union men and police guards off, tore the car to pieces and burned it down to the trucks.

Previously they had overturned and burned a company motor trouble car sent to rescue the street car and set on the car starters' house and tool shed in the middle of Canal street, demolishing it and applying the torch.

Several hundred men then righted the burned trouble car, pushed it a quarter mile to the general offices of the public service and shoved it into the door, smashing the jambs and creating panic among the women employes and customers. A police riot squad drove them off and dragged the car to headquarters. Farther up Canal street the strikers tore up a section of track and spiked rails, heavy timbers, concrete and other obstacles were placed across the track.

Police admitted they could not control the mob and firemen had their hose jerked out of their hands when they attempted to stop the fires.

MOODY COOLS CENSURE AIMED AT TEA SOCIAL

Governor Refuses to Join Personal Criticism of Mrs. Hoover

VOTE RIGHT UPHELD

But Executive Strongly Opposes Mingling of Two Races

AUSTIN, July 5. (AP)—Governor Moody today approved in part and disapproved in part the concurrent resolution passed by the Texas legislature condemning Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the president, for entertaining the wife of a negro congressman at a White House tea.

Disapproves Personal Criticism

"Any part of this resolution which may be reasonably construed as a personal criticism of the wife of the president of the United States of America, does not have my approval and I decline to have any part in it," the governor said in a statement filed with the document in the secretary of state's office.

Referring to a section of the resolution which reminded Southern Democrats who voted for the Republican presidential nominee that they had been cautioned that such incidents as the one condemned might happen, Mr. Moody said: "Recognizing the right of every citizen to vote his own convictions I do not assert the right to officially upbraid any because they exercise the liberty to hold and vote views different from mine, nor do I approve any attempt at official criticism of any citizen's vote."

Condemns Custom

The resolution had his "hearty approval," in so far as "it condemns customs that bring the two races into contact, upon the same social plane," he stated.

"Any mingling of the races upon a basis of social equality is intolerable and no precedent can justify it," he said. "The ill effects of acts tending toward equal social recognition between the races are thoroughly demonstrated by the recent contemptible public utterances made before mixed audiences by the negro whose wife was the recipient of the invitation mentioned in the resolution."

Betty Brainerd Passenger No. 1 On Lindy's New Line

Woman's Page Writer to "Cover" Transcontinental Trip For Readers of Record News

When Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his Transcontinental Air Transport service inaugurate passenger travel between New York and Los Angeles July 7, Betty Brainerd, author of "We Women," which appears daily on The Record News Woman's page, will be passenger No. 1 and will "cover" the event for her readers.

Two or more articles will be wired by Miss Brainerd telling the story of this initial trip, which will take a little more than two days.

Colonel Lindbergh will pilot the plane from Clovis, N. M., to Los Angeles on the initial flight, it was said.

Miss Brainerd is the daughter of Erastus Brainerd of Seattle, for many years editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and regarded as the ablest editor and most forceful writer on the Pacific coast. Miss Brainerd took up writing against her father's wishes, and has won a national reputation without the assistance of a noted father. She was a visitor in Wichita Falls a few months ago, in a tour of the country for study of newspapers using her articles.

Ann's Counsel Begins Tirade Against Hardinge After Beauty Quits Stand

Final Day's Testimony in 'Poor Working Girls'' Case Filled With Surprises and Secrets

By W. F. SULLIVAN

CHICAGO, July 5. (UP)—At the end of a long trail of witnesses who told of scandals, plots and trickery, in the romance of a "poor working girl" and a 62-year-old millionaire, final arguments were reached today in the $250,000 breach of promise suit of Ann Livingston against Franklin S. Hardinge.

Ten minutes before adjournment of court for the day, the last witness, Ann herself, had completed her story. Then her attorney Benjamin Ehrlich began his summation of the Tulsa beauty's case.

Hardinge Called Traducer

Before a tired jury, he drew verbal pictures of the millionaire as a "traducer of women," and then of the girl as a "hard working drudge," the same sketches he had sought to obtain from testimony of complainant's witnesses.

"The stories of some of these witnesses," he said, "are framed. The wealth of this man has been been by all who have heard the case. He is a traducer of women whose wealth has jingled throughout the courtroom.

Ann "Fought Way Up"

"Miss Livingston has been a hard working drudge who has fought her way up from the bottom."

Ehrlich had barely launched into his oratory when court was adjourned for the day—a day filled with more testimony, more surprises, more delving into the "past" of Ann—delaying the arguments to the jury.

The first "surprise" came when the defense produced William Everett Logan, red-haired youth of St. Louis but formerly of Tulsa in

FRESH RECORD FOR ENDURANCE FLYING MADE

FUSELAGE BROKEN

Trouble May Avert 200-Hour Mark Wanted By Pilots

CLEVELAND, July 6. (AP)—After establishing a new world's record for refueled flights, Pilots Roy L. Mitchell and Byron K. Newcomb descended to the Cleveland airport this morning at 12:39:39 Eastern standard time. The official timing gave them a record of 174 hours, no minutes and 39 seconds.

CLEVELAND, July 6 (Saturday). (AP)—A new world's endurance record for refueled flights unofficially was attained at 12:10:52 eastern standard time today, by Pilots Roy L. Mitchell and Byron K. Newcomb who took off in the monoplane City of Cleveland at 6:38:51 a week ago Friday night. They continued their course above the Cleveland airport.

As the hour of the new record was reached, a bombardment of fireworks was released above the field as a salute to the fliers. A crowd approaching 50,000 cheered and the flare was increased by flares and skyrockets sent up.

The fliers were soaring 3,000 feet above in the darkness when the celebration broke out. They gave no sign when the time was reached that they felt any elation. Whistles were blown and lights were turned on the city's buildings when word went out that the record had been broken.

The endurance plane was running strongly as it passed the old record although damage to its fuselage threatened to force it down.

Fatigued by their long grind, but game, Newcomb and Mitchell intended to stay aloft as long as possible.

"Everything OK," the pilots messaged tonight as the ship was refueled for the 24th time, but they added:

"Watch us tonight. Be ready to turn on flood lights. Any time we may lose turtleback."

ROBBINS AND KELLY CONGRATULATE FLIERS

FORT WORTH, July 6. (AP)(Saturday)—Reg. L. Robbins and James Kelly, holders of the endurance flight record shattered at 12:10 o'clock by Roy L. Mitchell and Byron K. Newcomb in the city of Cleveland, were enthusiastic for the two victors as they heard that they were no longer champions.

Any rumors that they might attempt to set a new mark, however, were stilled finally by Robbins and at least temporarily by Kelly. Robbins has no intention of shooting for a new record, he said positively. Kelly thinks it would be foolish to do so, at least until this "wave" of enthusiasm for new records has somewhat subsided."

The fliers, both of whom had wired encouragement to the Cleveland pilots were eager to augment their congratulations.

"I should like to be one of the first to congratulate the two fliers on breaking the world's record," Robbins said. "Their feat would have been greater than ours, I feel, even if they had only equalled our record, because they seemed to be constantly battling unfriendly elements. Now that they have beaten it by an hour, I hope they go further and set up the record I would like to have set, 250 hours or more.

"I have no intention of going up to attempt a new record. Others can have that fun hereafter, but for the good of aviation, I am glad that these two Cleveland pilots went after our mark and beat it. I am glad that we held it no longer than we did. It is a good sign to see that it was beaten so quickly."

CULVER CITY, CALIF. FLIGHT CONTINUES

CULVER CITY, Calif., July 5. (AP)—Flying conditions for the "Angeleno" took on a brighter hue today as the biplane sailed on toward the halfway mark in its drive for a new endurance refueling record. ## War on Airfield Speakies Follows Report of Bill Stultz Fatal 'Drunk'

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 5. (AP)—Nassau county authorities reported today that Wilmer (Bill) Stultz, transatlantic pilot, was intoxicated when he took off on the stunt flight in which he and two passengers fell to death at Roosevelt field Monday.

The announcement, based on a report of Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, New York City toxicologist, who analyzed the airman's organs, was made public before the officials declared their intentions of "cleaning out" speakeasies near Long Island flying fields.

Two speakeasy proprietors were questioned, and authorities and Roosevelt field officials were in conference in an effort to determine where rested the responsibility for the tragedy.

Pending the reading of Dr. Goettler's report at an inquest next week into the three deaths, Assistant District Attorney Phillip Huntington said the report stated there was a "large amount of alcohol" in Stultz's "stomach and brain," and "alcohol in the liver and kidney." "The conclusion is that the man was very drunk at the time of his death," the report declared.

County authorities exonerated the owners of the field, but the district attorney's office announced it would begin a "campaign" against drunken flying.

JUST THE Baer Facts

TROUSERS MAKE THE MAN

NEW YORK, July 5.—Ambassador Charley Dawes' stalwart refusal to wear short pants has been received with scientific silence in interscholastic circles.

After all, Charley, your legs belong to your nation.

Dawes is the hero of a thousand vetoes. He has led his shock troops over the trackless wastes of the speaker's platform in the senate.

He belonged to the indomitable minority which refused to take yes for an answer. They have thwarted him, they have curtailed his authority. They have shortened his speeches and abbreviated his power.

But they have never bobbed his trousers.

We have seen many ambassadorial knees twinkling in the diplomatic sunlight. Some of these knees looked like grapefruit, some looked like the gear clutch of a flivver.

Most of them were baggy and none of them were beautiful.

Dawes is right in his refusal to wear silkies. It is too late in life for a veteran like Dawes to compete with Ann Pennington.

The one article of sartorial diet which Charley refuses to endorse is not the short pants. It's the silk stockings.

Even if he has bow legs he still represents some of them.

The preamble to the declaration of amendments gives every American the right and liberty to select his own trousers.

If Charley were smart he would wear firemen's boots while in England.

Nobody knows when a fireman's sox are down.

If we had an ambassador to Scotland, we guess he would have to wear kilts. They would look beautiful on Bill Taft.

After a lifetime of sensible clothing, Charley would never become accustomed to short trousers.

Just when the king and queen were about to welcome him, Charles would look down at his legs and yell, "Good heavens, I forgot my pants."

We have been wearing long trousers in this country for over 100 years now. Sometimes, they have been threadbare, sometimes there have been patches on the seat.

But now, we are accustomed to wearing them long. And we agree with Dawes. When he goes forth to Europe he goes as an American diplomat and not as an American Marble champion.

Clothes make the man. And this proberb includes the trousers.

Pastor Reopens Revival at Jail

Prayer Leader Recovers From Smallpox

His evangelical work at the county jail resumed after an attack of smallpox which kept him for five days in the county house of quarantine, Rev. George E. Gray Friday afternoon reported the conversion of three more prisoners at the jail.

The minister's first sermons resulted in a re-conversion of D. J. Hoobler, sentenced to die for the murder of Arthur Pendergraft, and his afternoon services have continued for several weeks, except for the break necessitated by his illness.

Rev. Mr. Gray reported that E. O. Brannon, under charges of automobile theft, Roy Adair and R. T. Mann, both under narcotic charges, Friday afternoon responded to his sermon on "The Wages of Sin Is Death." The evengelist declared that he had given his hearers a detailed description of the hanging of a 24-year-old prisoner several years ago and that he had used excerpts from Hickman's warning to the youth of the nation.

Rev. M. Gray and Rev. R. L. Cotnam Friday evening closed a six weeks revival meeting at Twenty-second and Yale streets in which one of the principal features was healing by prayer. The minister expects to go on with his jail meetings all next week.

Henderson said the government has no responsibility for anything issued by the third international.

Fliers' Welcome Goes on Unabated

MADRID, July 5. (INS)—Fetes in honor of Major Ramon Franco and his three companions of the hydroplane Numancia continued unabated today.

Following luncheon with Queen Victoria at the royal palace, the airmen went through a round of entertainments this afternoon, to be followed by a gala theater performance tonight.

In the early hours of this morning, the airman, accompanied by the officers of H. M. S. Eagle, the British aircraft carrier which rescued them after they had floated for a week near the Azores, visited the popular Rosales cabaret to sup and dance. They were wildly cheered by the merry-makers, and deluged with requests from pretty senoritas for the honor of a dance.

OKLA. SOLONS GO OVERTIME

House Votes to Submit Testimony to State

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 5. (UP)—Will all capitol clocks stopped at 9:30 a. m. today, both houses worked feverishly late today to complete the most important legislation which had been carried over to the last day.

The legislature previously had agreed to adjourn at 10 a. m. today.

The house voted to submit the transcript of the testimony in the John Rogers investigation to County Attorney George Callihan for consideration of possible criminal charges after refusing to accept the committee report recommending impeachment of the state examiner and inspector on four charges alleging diversion of funds and incompetency.

The vote to refuse to accept the charges lost, 35 to 33. The vote to give the report to Callihan carried, 50 to 19.

The bill increasing salaries of elective state officials was passed by both houses late Monday. It was expected to be signed by Gov. W. J. Hollway. It will apply to officials elected at the next regular election.

The house passed a senate resolution substituting a constitutional amendment creating a board of regents for A. & M. college.

Two house bills, one regulating the barber trade and another authorizing the commissioner of charities and corrections to care for children unsuitable for adoption were killed in the senate. Had the latter bill passed the charities commissioner would have had an appropriation of $48,475.75 next year and almost that sum the following year. The defeat reduced that appropriation to slightly more than $19,000 for each of the two years.

Democratic representatives caucused today and decided to oppose recommendations of the investigating committee that the house recess instead of adjourn until Nov. 15.

The latter action, Mrs. Rhinelander's attorneys said, has been contemplated for some time but has been delayed because they did not know the whereabouts of Rhinelander, who recently was revealed living in Las Vegas, Nev., where he announced he was planning divorce proceedings against his wife.

Examination of several hundred bottles of beer seized in recent raids by Ellis Summers and A. L. Stubblefield, city officers, showed that many of the bottles contained the bodies of flies.

That the legs of cockroaches and other insects were quite common in the brew.

That the bodies of ants were thick in the kegs in which the beer had been made.

That practically all the bottles were refilled without being washed or cleaned in any manner.

NEW CLEW ON AX EXECUTIONS

Photograph of Girl's Body Seized by Police

DETROIT, July 5. (INS)—Detectives investigating the hatchet murders of Benjamin Evangelist and his wife and four children were working today on a theory that the family may have been victims of a crazed parent, whose child Evangelist, professing to a faith healer, had failed to cure.

Discovery of a photograph of the body of a girl of 4 or 5 years, lying in a casket offered a possible clew and police were endeavoring to identify the picture.

Also regarded as significant was the finding of lingerie and women's nightgowns in the desk at which Evangelist had been working when he was decapitated by the slayer. Detectives pointed out that in the practice of "voodooism" the medium sometimes obtains a garment worn next to the skin of a sick person and holds weird rites over the article of dress.

Violent Seas Pound Deserted Schooner

SURF, Calif., July 5. (INS)—Her crew of 25 rescued, the steamer schooner, Anne Hanify, on the rocks at Point Honda, was being pounded to pieces today by violent seas.

FOUR HELD IN 'DRY' KILLING

Prohibition Charged With Farmer's Murder

render. They charged the raiders had not identified themselves and were thought to be burglars.

The dry squad was led by W. W. Thomason, prohibition director for Pottawatomie county. He was accompanied by John D. Williams, Tom Little and Jeff Harris. According to an investigation by County Attorney Randall Pittman, who brought charges against the raiders, no records showed any of them to be officers, except Thomason.

Pittman also claimed no record had been found of a warrant being issued for search of the Harris farmhouse, and no liquor was found on the place. Pittman said Thomason had no authority to deputize the men who accompanied him, such authority being vested in Bee De Monbrum, federal director for western Oklahoma.

De Monbrum was in Shawnee today investigating the shooting. Officials of his office at Oklahoma City were said to have denied that Jeff Harris, accused in a deathbed statement by James Harris of firing the fatal shot,( was an authorized dry enforcement officer. Assistant County Attorney Riley, however, said all the men arrested with Thomason were known to have accompanied the officer on raids.

Neighbors of the Harris family were incensed tonight over the shooting. They contended James Harris was not known to have sold liquor and was a law abiding citizen. Harris' dying statement was that Jeff Harris shot him after ordering him to throw down a gun despite the fact that he complied with the order.

Jeff Harris, however, denied this, saying the farmer rushed at him with the weapon. The farmer's wife today said she could not say who fired first because great confusion followed the appearance of the four men with drawn guns.

Records of Poison Sales Urged by State

AUSTIN, July 5. (AP)—A warning to retail dealers to keep a record of sales of poisons destructive of human life was sounded today by the food and drug bureau of the state department of health.

Owing to the small number of inspectors employed by the department, attention of many dealers has not been called to the law, Dr. J. H. Anderson, state health officer, said. The increasing number of suicides and murders through poisoning has moved the department to try to enforce the registration act more stringently, he added.

MILL VALLEY, Calif., July 5. (AP)—The latest flareup of the fire that three times has threatened this mountainside community with destruction was under control today and residents rested, ready to defend themselves against a possible but improbable new attack.

Pals of Tex Rickard's Cowpunching Days to Give Benefit Show Here

Funds From Indian Ritual Go to $150,000 Memorial to Promoter at Henrietta

When Tex Rickard, until his death in January America's premier fight promoter, rode the range as a cowboy on the OX ranch in Oklahoma, there were three Comanche Indian chiefs and a North Texas cowpuncher who were almost inevitably his companions.

Next Friday and Saturday, these three chiefs, and the cowpuncher will take leading parts in a show to be staged at Lakeside park by the Tex Rickard Memorial association of Henrietta. These plans were announced Friday by Frank Holaday of Henrietta, one of the financial and publicity managers of the association. Funds derived from the show will be placed in a fund to build a $150,000 memorial to Rickard at Henrietta.

Indians Participate

The three chiefs who will be featured at the show are Yellow Wolf, Quasyah and Millet. The cowpuncher who was Rickard's fourth companion is Tom Burnet, Iowa Park, who recently was placed on the board of control of the association.

In addition to the above chiefs several more from the Comanche tribe in Oklahoma will have parts in the show, as will about 50 braves who will accompany their chiefs to Wichita Falls. Among the other chiefs will be Codapony, White Horse, and Black Eagle, Mr. Holaday announced.

The preliminaries to the show will open Friday afternoon when the Indians will slaughter a beef. The slaughter is to be the show, however, the Indians intending the meat for themselves. Officials promise that the scene will be instructive, in that primitive methods will be used in the preparation of the meat.

Friday evening the Indians will give two war dances, and these will be repeated Saturday night. Another feature of the Friday night program will be boxing bouts staged by Johnnie Jenkins, Henrietta, and J. B. Akin, Memphis, but formerly of Henrietta, and Howard Scott, Electra, but who also formerly made Henrietta his home. Their opponents have not been announced. The boxers, it was announced, are donating their services.

For Memorial

During both days, it was announced, an unique part will be played by the Indian chiefs, who will sit in council and bestow Indian names on one and all who desire them. The chiefs will closely study the character of each applicant, and give him the name they see fit.

This will be the second show staged by the association. The first was held recently in Fort Worth. The association plans to stage various entertainment programs in cities all over the United States in its program of raising funds for the Rickard memorial. In charge of these arrangements are Mr. Holaday and C. F. Sullivant.

The Tex Rickard Memorial association was organized last February with August Bevering, old time friend of Rickard's, as president. It consists of friends of Rickard's interested in erecting to his memory a suitable memorial in the town which he once served as town marshal. Included in its personnel is Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, and Mrs. Tex Rickard, who is treasurer of the association.

'Untin' Lands At Great Whale, Can.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 5. (UP)—The Chicago Tribune amphibian, Untin Bowler, landed at Great Whale, on the eastern shore of Hudson bay, the government radio station at Port Burwell reported this afternoon.

The station said it had received a message from the plane which, although garbled, was believed to have read "landed at Great Whale. Fog and rain bad."

The Untin Bowler is attempting a flight to Berlin by the far Northern route—over Greenland and Iceland. It started from Chicago Wednesday, carrying Parker D. Cramer and Robert Gast as pilots and Robert Wood as historian of the trip.

Port Burwell is the next scheduled stop on the flyers' route and also the point whence they will take off on their first water jump. They will have to fly over the Davis strait, which at that point is 425 miles wide. The men expect to land at Mt. Evans, Greenland.

C. E. DISCUSSES COLLEGE CARS

Kissing and Short Skirts Also Considered

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 5. (US)—Short skirts, kissing and college motor cars were problems to which delegates to the International Christian Endeavor convention here turned their attention at a forum today.

The delegates voted unanimously against college students owning their own motor cars. No vote was taken on either of the other questions.

In the discussion, Dr. Daniel A. Poling of New York, president of the organization, gave his approval of the short skirt, but was not so enthusiastic about promiscuous kissing.

In reply to the question: "Do you believe in kissing games and have you ever played them," he said:

"I never have played as many as I wanted to, but do not misunderstand me. I believe with Booth Tarkington that a kiss to be appreciated should be an event and not a habit. All I need to say to this crowd of fine understanding young people is that familiarity breeds contempt."

Asked his opinion of modern woman's dress Doctor Poling replied: "The old, long dresses that trailed along the sidewalk were competitors of the street cleaning department. I favor the present style of dress because it is far more sanitary and healthful than that worn a generation ago. However, a good thing can be carried too far and womanly modesty never should be jeopardized by style dictates. Modesty depends largely on the personal attitude of the individual."

Doctor Poling said he did not favor college students owning motor cars as it took too much time from their school activities. He suggested, however, that the delegates vote on the question.

The delegates today also discussed plans for evangelizing high school fraternities and sororities in order to eliminate their evils and put Christian ideals in them. The Rev. Frank D. Getty of Philadelphia young people's secretary of the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., said American youth had gotten over the stage of considering the carrying of hip pocket flasks and the smoking of cigarets smart.

About 10,000 delegates are attending the convention.

ANN'S COUNSEL BEGINS TIRADE

Testimony Completed in Tulsa Beauty's Suit

the days when Ann was selling hosiery in the same department store where the witness was offering draperies to the public.

Indian or Old Man

Logan's testimony, in effect, was in support of the defense's accusation that Miss Livingston was a "gold digger" in love with a rich man's money.

"She told me she was looking either for a rich Indian or a wealthy old man," Logan testified. "She pointed out a rich Indian, Mike Badeen, in the store and asked me to introduce her."

Logan admitted that he was not positive whether Badeen was an Indian and that he may have been a Syrian. Ehrlich also made Logan admit he had notified Hardinge he "knew something important" and that the defense was paying his expenses here from St. Louis.

Further details of Ann's actions and remarks in Tulsa were given through bits of humorous testimony by Mrs. James B. Beyer of Tulsa, Miss Livingston's landlady two years ago.

"When she came to my home first two years ago," Mrs. Beyer said, "she told me she was going to marry Charley Nax in the fall. I saw her last when she came to Chicago to marry Mr. Hardinge. We had many talks about Mr. Hardinge.

"I begged her not to marry him, but she said she was going to marry him and then—well, I don't like to say it—but she told me she was going to come to Chicago and if things went well divorce him later.

"Hates" to Tell It

"I hate terribly to tell this but she said she was going to get what money she could out of him and then leave him. I begged Ann not to do it."

"Are you a divorcee?" she was asked on cross-examination.

"I don't care to go into the details of my marital experiences," she said but she was instructed to answer after the court mirth had died down.

"Well, I was married to the best man in the world and a young girl came along and took him away from me," she said, "leaving me with four lovely children."

Ann took the stand late today to deny that she ever lived with Mrs. Bessie Heath, who accused Miss Livingston of being intimate with Lieut. Robert Puderbauch, the complainant's former husband, before their marriage.

Statues at Gettysburg

THE IMPULSE that makes men put up statues and memorials is an interesting one, when you stop to examine it. The state of South Carolina has just erected on the battlefield of Gettysburg a memorial carved by the famous Gutzon Borglum, commemorating the deeds of South Carolina's sons in the dreadful battle of July, 1863. On the field, this memorial takes is place among scores of others; tablets dedicated to regiments and brigades, bronze figures commemorating plumed generals, markers erected to show, for all time, where especial deeds of valor were performed.

Gettysburg is alive with such statues. Go where you will, you cannot escape them. South Carolina's striking memorial is only the latest of a long line.

Our need for such mementoes sheds a revealing light upon us. For in the last analysis, we put those things on pedestals, not for the sake of the dead men whose deeds we are commemorating, but for ourselves. It is as if we were striving to catch, in sculptured marble and graven bronze, some essence of a bygone greatness so that we could preserve it forever and not let the earth lose it.

In a great many ways, Gettysburg is a good thing to forget. It is an enduring reminder of the fact that there was nowhere in the land enough sanity and forbearance to find a peaceable solution to men's differences. Yet, since Gettysburg, and the things that went before and after it, had to be, we are right in studding the rolling Pennsylvania farm land with statues. There are things about Gettysburg, as about any great battlefield, that it is good for us to remember.

Something like 140,000 men came together at Gettysburg—came from all parts of the sprawling, growing country. And for the three dreadful days they proved a thing which has been proved on every battlefield in history, but which can never be proved too often; that there is something in man that can rise supreme over fear and pain and death—an imperishable, unconquerable something that can never be choked out by stupidity or tramped down by soft living, but that endures forever as a living proof that the race has in it a deep streak of great nobility.

Let no man think that these immortals, at Gettysburg and elsewhere, are things that glorify war. They are not. War is a fearful curse, now as always. But the lurid light that war casts on the acts of men throws into strong relief the bravery and self-forgetfulness and kingly valor that lift mankind above the level of the beasts.

Gettysburg is a peaceful place now. The bronze generals and marble soldiers have the place to themselves, drowsing in the Pennsylvania sun beside the brass cannon that will never fire another shot. As long as the nation lasts they will stand there, reminding Americans that death is a small thing—that here, years ago, men came to grips with destiny, looked destruction in the eye without quailing, and scaled the last fire-ringed heights of endurance.

An Economical Step

MOVABLE coast defense forts which can be shifted quickly from one point on the seacoast to another are now being developed by the United States army.

Fourteen-inch guns, with an effective range of 30 miles, are to be mounted on railway trucks, and emplacements for them are to be built at 100 Atlantic coast ports. Thus, in case of a threatened invasion, the heavy artillery needed to repel an attacking fleet could be quickly shifted from one sector to another, wherever the need might be greatest.

If the scheme works out as well as the army men hope, it ought to be a rather economical step. It will relieve the army from the necessity of building a great chain of forts—and modern forts, with their giant guns, cost a great deal of money.

Aviation's Laboratory

THE AVERAGE NEWSPAPER READER can be pardoned if he is unable to keep track of the various airplane endurance flights now being attempted or contemplated. In all parts of the country, airmen are trying to break the old record; if a new one is set, there is no guarantee that it will last longer than a week.

At first glance these endeavors may look rather useless, except in so far as they win-fame and fortune for the individual fliers. But they are not "stunts," valuable only as spectacles. The men who are taking part in them are advancing the cause of aviation.

Each flight of that kind sheds some new light on the business of flying. These flights are, so to speak, aviation's laboratory experiments. Spectacular though they are, they are nevertheless helping aviation to advance.

TOONERVILLE FOLKS By Fontaine Fox

The GREEN SHADOW - By Herman Landon

(Copyright by Public Ledger)

Police Captain Summers is meditating on the escapades of the Picaroon, whom he is convinced is really his friend, Martin Dale. Mr. Alexander Ferryman calls to relate a tale of strange happenings at 262 Bank street and requests police investigation. Axelson, a watchman employed by Ferryman, has heard footsteps and seen an eerie green light. Ferryman is showing the captain a picture when the telephone rings. A voice tells of finding a woman's body at the above address—the dead woman is Ferryman's wife. Summers finds only one clue, a bit of green lens.

Meantime, the Picaroon has written a note to Adele Castle requesting a meeting in Central Park. Adele has had a terrifying experience. Taken by a mysterious Miss Conway to a strange light through which she could glimpse only the faint outline of a man, calling himself Dr. Moffett, she is told that her father has been connected with a crooked financial deal. Dr. Moffett demands $100,000 for his silence and certain papers.

Adele and Dale meet. He tells her he was present during her strange interview with Dr. Moffett and promises to help her. Dale also meets Adele's friend, Paul Ainsworth. They become suspicious of one another. Dale "on his own" enters the house where the murder occurred and is trapped within by Summers, Ferryman and Axelson, who discover Dale taking a rope of pearls from behind a sliding panel. Dale darkens the room, throws Axelson through a window, and in the resultant confusion escapes.

Summers at luncheon next day receives a note and package from the Picaroon. In the package he finds the missing pearls.

Meantime, Dr. Moffett is getting anxious and telephones, giving Miss Castle just 24 hours in which to make payment to save her father from disgrace and prosecution.

Dale draws cash from his bank and makes an appointment with Adele. He then visits the Ferryman home, agreeing to capture the murderer within a week.

Adele Castle is instructed by Dale how to handle Dr. Moffett when he telephones. Wambley, a servant, is revealed as a spy.

All is set for the Mummers Frolic, where Adele is to make a $50,000 payment to Dr. Moffett's agent. Dale is also present, disguised as the Picaroon.

Miss Castle reviews certain papers presented to her by Dr. Moffett's agent on a balcony just off the ballroom. A streak of fire shot into the sky brings the exchange of papers for $50,000 to a climax. Temporarily, at least, the deal is off.

On the Trail of the Caballero

The head turned. For an instant Dale caught a vague glimpse of a face, and then the head disappeared within the window.

"The caballero—Paul Ainsworth!" he mumbled. He was still gazing rigidly at the window from which the wigged head had projected. One, two, three. It was three floors above his own level. That would be the thirteenth floor, just midway between the ground and the roof. The window was the fifth from the central hall in a horizontal direction.

With the location clearly fixed in his mind, he went to the stairs, ran up three flights and turned into the transverse corridor at the left. He counted the doors as he passed them. At the fifth from the turn he stopped, and the mental figures on the upper panel told him it was No. 1325.

He waited a moment. There was no sign of life in the hall. The orchestral din on the top floor was scarcely audible here. After a moment's hesitation he turned the knob gently. The door must have been left unlocked in preparation for a quick retreat if necessary, for it swung easily inward. He held it open a bit and listened, but no sounds came from the interior. He touched his hair, his mask, his purple-trimmed robe, and without a sound stepped inside.

Silently he moved forward, approaching the window, only a gray blur in the darkness encompassed by the four walls. Only a few steps he moved, across a rug that deadened the sound of his footsteps, then stopped. In the gloom he could hear some one breathing, and he traced the sound to a point near the window. He waited a little, not quite certain how to proceed, and presently his eyes turned in another direction. Again he heard a subdued intake of breath. There were two watchers in the room.

Holding his own breath he moved back a few steps. There was a sound of movement in the front of the room. A man's head and shoulders were silhouetted against the window. For a moment the man leaned out and glanced upward.

"Annie is taking her time," a voice mumbled. Dale recognized the voice in an instant. The speaker was Paul Ainsworth. The Annie referred to could be none other than Joan of Arc.

"Annie is wise," another voice remarked. It was low and distinct, and it sounded vaguely familiar to Dale, yet he could not identify it. "She knows we're playing this game to the tune of one hundred thousand berries. It pays to go slow and move carefully. Anyhow, there's no hurry. This party will last till daylight."

Ainsworth mumbled something under his breath. Dale was searching his memory for a clue to the other speaker's identity. He was certain he had heard the voice somewhere before.

"One hundred thousand," the same voice went on. "It's a nice little grubstake. Too bad it's got to be split five ways."

"Five ways," Dale thought. That meant there were five in the blackmailing band. He tried to check them off by name; Dr. Moffett, alias Paul Ainsworth, Annie, Axelson. Miss Conway was not to be counted, for she was dead. Who were the other two? The answer eluded him, but by way of compensation the other speaker's name suddenly flashed through his mind. Rxelson, of course!

"Wish she would hurry," he mumbled peevishly, moving away from the window again. "Can't imagine what's delaying her."

"Miss Castle probably wants to look the papers over," Axelson suggested. "A lot of good it will do her! If I say it myself, I did a good job copying those papers. Even if she knows Forrester's handwriting—and I'll bet she doesn't—she won't be able to tell them from the originals."

Dale started a little. So the papers were merely copies! Well, he had suspected something of the sort. The originals, of course, were to be retained by Dr. Moffett and used by him for the purpose of further extortion.

"Oh, don't crow," said Ainsworth with his usual surliness. "I'll admit you are clever at that sort of thing, but don't forget that a lot of clever forgers are wasting their talents behind prison bars."

"So are a lot of clever blackmailers," Axelson retorted.

A pause fell. Dale was getting a deeper and more comprehensive insight into Ainsworth's despicable character. There seemed to be no limits to the man's villainy. Even while his heart ached for Miss Castle such an exhibition of treachery and infamy filled him with loathing.

"Are you sure Miss Castle came here alone?" Ainsworth asked in an undertone.

"Positive. Not worrying?"

"I'm just wondering if she is quite as simple as she looks. I think she would be capable of playing a trick on us."

"What can she do? We've taken precautions against every sort of surprise she can possibly spring on us, haven't we? I don't see where there's any room for trickery. Annie won't even touch the money. Miss Castle will just drop it over the railing and Caesar will do the rest."

"Caesar," Dale thought. That was the dog, of course.

Another pause came, then Ainsworth asked: "Did you see the man in the white toga with the purple border?"

"Oh, you mean the cockeyed one?"

"I'm not sure he was as cockeyed as he looked. He danced with Miss Castle, and afterward he took her out on the balcony. I don't like the way he acted."

"She had to dance with somebody, didn't she? And it's the most natural thing in the world to step out for a bit of fresh air after a dance."

Dale smiled. It was a lucky thing he had selected a mask that concealed more of his features than the ordinary mask did. His muscles were beginning to feel the strain of remaining motionless for so long. He moved a foot cautiously.

"It's all right," Axelson was saying. "You're just nervous tonight. Everything is going all right. We'll trim Castle good and hard, and then we go after Ferryman, eh? Ferryman is rich. Not so rich as Castle, but he's got a lot of coin salted away. And he owes me something for the way he gave me the air. I'd like to—"

He stopped and caught his breath sharply. Dale's foot, as he moved it to ease his cramped position, had struck against something.

"Say did you hear that?" Axelson exclaimed in a hoarse whisper.

"Sh!" Ainsworth whispered back.

Dale sense two pairs of ears and eyes straining in his direction. He moved back and ran his hand along the wall until he found the light switch. A little click sounded, but no lights came on. The bulbs had either been removed from the sockets or partly unscrewed to forestall the very thing he had attempted to do.

"It's a plant!" Axelson cried hoarsely. "We've got to stop it! Quick—the signal!"

A match flared up. Then came a sizzling sound like that of a frying pan over a fire. A small streak of flame shot up over the window sill. Then two pairs of feet scurried quickly across the floor. The door slammed.

With a soft chuckle Dale stepped forward and fumbled for the light fixture. As he had suspected, the bulb had been partly unscrewed to break the connection. He gave it a few twists and a bright light came on. He saw a spacious room, an open traveling bag on the floor, a few toilet articles on the dressing table.

He acted in great haste now, as if each second were precious. He took two newspapers, saturated them with ink from a bottle on the writing desk, formed them into a small, compact bundle, tied a string around it, and held it at arm's length. A small, steady trickle of ink fell from the package.

Smiling, he stepped to the window. He looked down for a moment, then let the ink-dripping package drop to the ground.

"Caesar will do the rest," he chuckled softly as he ran quickly from the room.

As if to cheer the pale, lovely girl seated on the frail-limbed Chippendale chair, a flood of glorious sunshine poured through the windows of the Castle drawing room.

"How dreadful!" she sighed.

Dale, looking his brightest and freshest, picked up the afternoon paper she had dropped to the floor. A prominent black caption stood out from the general run of news on the front page:

"Arrest of the Mysterious Mr. Graves Promised Within Twenty-four Hours"

Dale ran his calm, gray eyes down the appended column.

"Rot!" he exclaimed.

"But it says the police have definite information which will positively lead to an arrest before tomorrow night."

"Lies!" Dale crumpled the paper and flung it from him. "It is only yellow journalism at its worst. Nothing but insinuation, innuendo and drivel. Not one positive statement in the whole article. I admit Dr. Moffett is clever, though. He has fed a few harmless hints to the authorities, enough for this yellow rag to base a scarehead on. His object is to frighten your father and you, and to convince you that he is ready to go the whole way unless you submit."

"But suppose he should—"

"Look here, Miss Castle, Dr. Moffett is flourishing a big gun, but he has only one shot. He isn't going to waste that shot."

She considered, then brightened a little. "I was hoping to hear from you yesterday," she murmured.

"Busy," said Dale laconically.

She smiled faintly. "I thought perhaps you were resting after the big night."

"Oh, the Mummers Frolic. Rather a bore, wasn't it?"

She searched his face. "Not for me. Was it for you?"

"That reminds me. This is my first opportunity to ask you what happened out there on the balcony after I left. Joan of Arc proved to be Dr. Moffett's messenger, I suppose?"

"Oh, you knew that? I didn't suspect anything until she spoke a sentence with the words 'blue' and 'yellow' in it. She almost knocked me over with that sentence."

"No wonder. What happened?"

She looked at him as if suspecting that he knew a great deal more than he pretended, but she plunged into her story, finishing at the point where a warning signal had been flashed to her companion on the balcony.

"I'm afraid I didn't carry it off very well," she concluded.

"You did splendidly," Dale assured her. "Did you know the papers were forgeries, or was it only a bluff?"

"Only a bluff."

"Well, it was a good one, and it happened to be true."

She looked a little startled. "Then the papers were forgeries?"

"They were copies," said Dale. "Dr. Moffett meant to keep the originals for future use."

The dark look in her face showed that she understood.

"What a blackguard he is!" she exclaimed.

"Oh, all of that," said Dale in his softest tones.

She reflected for a moment. "But the signal? What was the meaning of that?"

Briefly Dale explained his own part in the events leading up to the signal, but he omitted the fact that Ainsworth was one of the two men he had found in the room on the thirteenth floor of the Vandermoore. She listened intently, her eyes gradually widening with amusement.

"A dog was to receive the money!" she exclaimed. "What an idea!"

"A rather clever one. After giving the signal, the two men fled from the room very hurriedly. I didn't care so much about them, but what I was curious to know was whether Caesar would have carried the packet of money if one had been dropped. I suppose some one was waiting for him in a car nearby, but that night every block in the neighborhood of the Vandermoore was packed with cars, so it would have been hard to find the right one. Then I hit upon the idea of having Caesar lead me to it."

She wrinkled her forehead perplexedly.

"It was perfectly simple. I merely dropped a package from the window. It was only a couple of newspapers done into a neat bundle, but Caesar couldn't be expected to know. He did his duty like a thoroughbred. Oh, I forgot to tell you. First I saturated the newspapers with ink."

"Oh!" she exclaimed after a moment's bewilderment. She laughed a little. "And then you ran down and picked up Caesar's trail."

Dale nodded. "It was lucky I had a trail to follow. The car was parked several blocks away, and I would never have found it without Caesar's assistance. The trail grew fainter and fainter. The papers absorbed some of the ink, of course. But I found the car. It was just about to start, and I barely had time to jump into a taxi and follow it." Dale laughed amusedly. "Wonder what the person in the car thought when Caesar brought him that package."

She gave him a warm glance of approval. "That was clever. Where did you follow the car?"

Dale looked suddenly diffident. "To Dr. Moffett's new headquarters," he replied vaguely.

"He had to leave Bank street, you know, after the excitement the other night."

His tone seemed to puzzle her. "Did you see who was in the car?"

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, July 5.—John Sullivan, Indian fighter whose campaigns 150 years ago resulted in the opening up to the white man of western New York, has been honored by the issue of a special two-cent stamp. He had a colorful career in the revolutionary war and afterward in politics. But the trouble with these commemorative stamps is that they just say John Sullivan or Jack Robinson and let it go at that. Since so many persons in the world are engaged in writing the Bible on walnut shells and that sort of thing, why doesn't the government hire one of these experts to engrave a stamp that would tell all John Sullivan's history? Then it would be truly worth while.

Our Sea Lion

The sea lion in the Central park zoo is a clever member of the fair sex, and I enjoy watching her outwit the crowds. She has, of course, much less privacy than a goldfish, for, being a happy creature with a sense of humor, she draws great throngs to the fence around her bath. Much of the time she disports herself for their benefit, swimming, snorting and yapping for joy. But occasionally she yearns for peace and quiet, and when she does, she lies on the cement bank of her pool for a sun bath. Her body catches all the healthful sun's rays; but she sticks her head, ostrich fashion, into the water, covering eyes and ears. That deadens the sound of the chatter about her, and, in fact, is so surprising an attitude that most persons stand spellbound and forget to annoy her.

Taxi Figures

Dark threats of a taxi war in New York have been heard. There are some 45,000 cabs now operating and many new companies are apparently ready to deluge the streets with still further thousands. Their only obstacles have been the police regulations and Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen. The Ford company, for example, stands ready to provide hundreds of small cabs on short notice—but police regulations provide that the passenger compartments of taxis must be of dimensions too large for a Ford chassis. And, even if other cabs were provided to meet the regulations, Commissioner Whalen thinks their introduction may bring about an economic crisis. Taxi rates are now 20 cents a mile, and if they are to be cheaper, cabs must be smaller. The commissioner has had a survey made, to determine if four-place machines are big enough. Apparently they are, for, out of 45,512 cabs observed, only 2,021 carried four passengers, and 1,115 carried five. There were 23,457 single passengers.

One Man's Opinion

One of the city's supreme court justices, Peter A. Schmuck, appears to be not only a liberal-minded gentleman but also a literary critic of firm ideas. Not long ago he opined that a married man might seek other feminine company than that of his wife. "Entertaining another than one's wife, even to the extent of escorting her to the theater, is in itself no reason to cause public comment or indignation. Marriage is not supposed to deprive a man of his individuality, or to restrict his social activities to those acceptable to his wife." His literary views were aired in a technical ruling concerning a libel suit over Ludwig Lewisohn's best seller, "Mid-Channel." "It is," said Justice Schumck, "the gibberish ego of a selfish sentimentalist, the feverish exhalations of a perverted and disappointed conceit against an individual in particular and society and law generally."

A New Family

A new flower family is being painstakingly established by Dr. John K. Small, head curator of the New York Botanical garden. It will, he said, be a race of truly American iris. Doctor Small has discovered a number of new native iris along the gulf coast, and has already succeeded in breeding them with each other and with related plants. According to the curator, the earliest recorded work in iris breed was in France in about 1893. Many of the best plants come from France and England.

The Great Indoors

I have discovered that summertime is the period for biggest business in the indoor swimming pools, such as the one in the Woolworth building basement and those in the various new uptown hotels. And I don't know why. There are scores of beaches in and near the city—some of the finest beaches on the Atlantic coast. One would think that indoor swimming could offer no possible competition. It may be that the crowds to be found at the resorts are too much for some persons. On the other hand, I believe that there are many who are so used to living in big buildings and subway tunnels that they are miserable out of doors. I am one of these. I much prefer the clean conveniences of a fresh water pool to the sand, sun and salt water of a beach.

The Ambassador and the Pipe

General Dawes has swung into action with his famous pipe in London. The first engagement on British territory resulted in a draw. The Prince of Wales was the first to meet the general, stem to stem and bowl to bowl. Overwhelmed by the first broadside of soot and cinders from our ambassador's pocket furnace, the British flag seemed about to fall when distinguished countrymen rallied to its support and saved the day.

PHILLIPS

The general was compelled to call on "Big Zix" for everything it had, and when the smoke had cleared away he seemed willing to accept an even break. However, he put his pipe into drydock for an extensive overhauling, immediately after the battle, and may return to the attack shortly.

◆ ◆ ◆

General Dawes' pipe may be down but it is never out.

◆ ◆ ◆

It all happened at a formal dinner by the British Empire Service league. The Prince of Wales was chairman; the American ambassador and his pipe were invited guests. The ambassador stoked his pipe for action immediately after dinner and lost no time getting under way. The Prince of Wales pulled out his trusty briar and closed smartly with the general, but was outmatched from the start.

◆ ◆ ◆

The prince's pipe was merely a pipe, but the general's first line of offense was a combination blast furnace, 1907 Ford runabout and working model of Vesuvius in eruption. Wale's pipe carries fuel for only two hours cruising, but the general's "dudeen" is an eight-day affair operated on the lines of an oil-burning furnace, except that it has not thermostatic control and can be refueled from the air.

◆ ◆ ◆

When England's desperate position was realized, every Englishman in the hall sprang to his pipe. They had anticipated trouble and secreted them in their dress clothes. Many of the men had spent four years in the trenches and were no amateur smokers.

◆ ◆ ◆

Sensing that the prince was on his last legs and begun to wither under American tobacco, they jumped into the breach and fought fire with fire.

◆ ◆ ◆

The tide of battle was soon turned. But General Dawes didn't know when he was licked. He felt overcome by fumes, but thought they were from his own pipe.

◆ ◆ ◆

◆ ◆ ◆

The banquet broke up with pledges of lasting friendship between Great Britain and America. It just goes to show that it is impossible to stir up another war.

She wore a Madonna hat of lace lined with ivory satin and ornamented with seed pearls. She carried a small white Bible and dainty handmade linen handkerchief. ## We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Those Parasites

"If American wives are parasites it is because their husbands wish them to be," says a noted woman writer.

By the term parasites, she explains, is meant those wives whose sole cares in life are their looks, their clothes and their social life. Women who really work in the home can not by any flight of the imagination be classed as "orchids," even though they may never have earned a dollar in their lives.

Few women are congenitally lazy. The necessity to be busy is deeply grounded in the feminine make-up. And the desire to please a loved one, to be approved by him, is perhaps the only emotion sufficiently strong to counteract woman's craving for activity.

Wealth and opportunity do not tend to make parasites of us. Scores of rich women give unstintingly of their time and energy in promoting and aiding all sorts of worthy causes. Scores of others go into business in order to satisfy their longing to be doing something.

I agree that it is true that the parasites among us are parasites only—or chiefly—because it flatters their husbands' vanity to have them fragile and useless and expensive.

In old China it was the custom for ladies of high degree to wear protectors of filagree gold over their long and exquisite finger nails. Those languid, lovely fingers were never employed in useful tasks—to be useful was to lose caste immediately. Service was the part of menials.

Something of that spirit animates many American husbands. They regard their wives as the symbols of their greatness. To have them beautifully gowned, beautifully groomed, untired except from amusement-seeking, flatters the ego of those husbands, many of whom have fought their way rung by rung up the ladder of success.

Once at the top they want houses bigger than their needs, more motor cars than one man could use in a life-time, a retinue of servants —and a wife whose purely decorative qualities glorify their achievements still further.

Maidens of old China with feet bound to stifle their growth, for ladies never needed to walk; with fabulous finger nails, for ladies hands were meant to be useless—and some modern American wives, marcelled, bejewelled, and befurred, these belongtog ether. In spite of the differences of time, race and background remain sisters under the skin.

Betty Brainerd will be glad to help her readers with their problems. Send a self addressed stamped envelope to her in care of this paper.

ADVICE GIVEN HOMELY GIRL

Popularity Can Be Had Despite Poor Looks

How the Homely Girl Can Make Herself Popular With Boys—Will a Cross Old Bachelor Be Happy Married to a Widow With Three Children?—Making a Lazy Sister Go to Work.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl 14 years old. I go to high school and I am ugly and I wear glasses. Please tell me what I can do to make the boys like me.—LOUISE.

Answer—At 14, Louise, you are very young to take up the homely woman's burden and if I were you I would leave it alone for the next three or four years. Don't bother about what the boys think of you while you are still a little school girl. Concentrate on your studies and then you won't have to worry about your looks.

But let me tell you, for your comfort, that right now wou are at the peak of your homeliness and the worst is over. At 14 a girl is at the gangling, hobbledehoy stage when her feet and her hands are too big for her and her nose frequently seems to have outgrown the balance of her face and her complexion is muddy and her hair lanky and she has neither grace nor poise.

Practically all girls are ugly ducklings at your age, but a few years does wonders for them. They grow up to their hands and their feet, their skin clear up, they shape down or fatten up and if they do not always turn into actual beauties they are at least 1,000 per cent better looking than they were in their adolescent period.

Of course, it is a pity that old Dame Nature is such a partial old jade and that she is a fairy godmother to some girls and a cruel stepmother to others. But facts are facts and we just have to accept it as our ill luck that we were not around when she was handing out good looks and make the best of it.

But even so no girl need be as ugly as she was born if she has the courage and intelligence and industry to set methodically about improving her appearance, for happily in this day we can create a synthetic beauty that you can hardly tell from the real thing.

So, my dear, study yourself and find out what are your defects and set about remedying them. To begin with, starting at your age, you can make yourself a beautiful and graceful figure and that is about nine-tenths of the battle. If you are fat and stocky you can get yourself down to any weight you please by counting your calories. If you are thin and bony you can fatten yourself up by the same method. By taking the proper exercise you can coordinate your muscles and learn to move with grace and rhythm.

You can call science to your aid and if you have bad teeth and a badly shaped mouth you can have your teeth straightened and the contour of your face changed. I know of more than one grotesquely ugly woman who has been turned into a beauty by a skillful dentist. And, of course, you can have any color or wave of hair you desire. So that's that.

And you can learn how to dress. Nine-tenths of women's beauty lies in their clothes. We don't distinguish between them and their chiffons. We merely refer to the pleasing impressions they make upon us and when we speak of a pretty woman we mean oftener than not one who has on a pretty dress.

But one thing I caution you against. Don't dwell on your lack of pulchritude until you get the ugly-girl complex. If you do you will emphasize your every defect. Forget that you were not born a living picture. Learn how to bear yourself with assurance. A woman can carry herself 45 per cent above her looks or 70 per cent under them and in the one case she will be a success and in the other a failure.

Then bear in mind that an ugly woman has to be a clever woman to focus people's attention to what is inside of her head instead of what is outside of it. If a woman is witty and amusing and entertaining, nobody cares whether she has a saleratus complexion or the skin you love to touch. So, dear little girl, get busy with your studies. If you are going to be ugly you must be intelligent. For only the beautiful dare be dumb.

And the homely woman must make herself amiable and pleasant and agreeable. She must be sweet and cheerful and good nautred and if she is she will seem beautiful to every one who knows her. We look good to those who like us and we might be as pulchritudinous as a bathing beauty and nobody would like our looks if we were scowling and peevish and cross and did rude and disagreeable things.

And if you are not beautiful, make up for it by perfecting yourself in accomplishments. If you learn how to be the best dancer in your set you will never lack for partners. If you are a fine swimmer or you play a good game of tennis or golf, if you can do all the things the other girls do, only do them a little better, you will always be the ringleader of the crowd. If you are a good musician people will think of your playing or your singing and not about whether you wear glasses or not.

Of course, every girl would like to be beautiful, but beauty is only one asset of popularity. The homely girl may have the others and win out.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have a son 41 years old, a splendid man, who has never cared for girls. Now, for the first time, he has fallen in love and with a young widow with three babies. She is pretty, full of life and happy and has charm. She is poor. The youngest child is only a year old, the eldest 5. By doing office work in the mornings and housework in the afternoons she has kept her flat going and her children with her. When I suggested to her that possibly she shouldn't have picked a bachelor for a husband she laughed and said: "I know Jack and I will get on and my only worry is whether I am doing right in picking him to raise my babies." Imagine! Do you think my son, at his age, will be happy with his ready-made family? He says he loves the babies and they seem fond of him and he a heretofore old bachelor.

—MRS. L. McG.

Answer—Any man, in these days of the high cost of living, who undertakes a ready-made family has certainly a noble and altruistic disposition. Also he must be so overwhelmingly in love with the woman that life without her will not be worth living.

Evidently this is the case with your son, and the chances are that if he marries this fascinating widow he will be happy with her, despite the handicap of the three children. She seems to be an exceptionally worthwhile sort of woman. Courageous and gay and cheerful and interesting, a good sport who has taken some pretty hard knocks from life with a laugh instead of a whine. I like her and I even like the audacity and nerve which makes her offer the support of her children as a privilege instead of a burden to her future husband.

That kind of a woman will keep her husband interested and entertained to the end of the chapter and your son will be far more likely to be happy with her than he would be if he married some flapper. Also this woman has showed she could stand up to her obligations and she will be sure to do her duty as a wife.

The only danger will be of your son being jealous of the mother's affection for her children. If he is big enough to put that out of his mind and to really learn to love them all will be well. But I find that the jealous stepfather is just as common a figure as the jealous stepmother.

Certainly no man can do a nobler act than to marry a widow with three little girls and cherish and care for them.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—What do you think of a girl who is strong and healthy, who has been given a college education through the parent's scrimping and who has been fitted for a profession, but who is so lazy that she refuses to work and spends her time amusing herself while her brothers and sisters have to work to feed and clothe her? What's to be done?—PATTY.

Answer—It is just as shameful for an able bodied girl in these days not to support herself as it is for a boy. In both cases the lazy loafers should be turned out of the home and made to work or starve. But it is easier to suggest that remedy in the case of a girl than it is to apply it, which is a fact of which your grafting sister takes advantage. This being the case, why don't you make it so unpleasant for her at home that she would rather even work than listen to your reproaches?

—DOROTHY DIX.

Killian is charged with having made love to Mrs. Hopkins and to have succeeded in obtaining $10,000 from her.

CHICAGO, July 5. The resolution was a joint document drawn up by delegates from Minnesota and New York.

The delegates as individuals said they were not against propaganda if it were honestly presented as propaganda instead of under cover methods of getting the propaganda in schools.

A resolution was also passed condemning the establishment of R. O. T. C. units in high schools. The resolution stated the war department sought to control schools and establish a militaristic spirit and that "in its efforts to attract young men to the R. O. T. C. the war department used pretty girls, credits, uniforms, saddle horses, etc., as bait."

Disarmament was endorsed by the teachers. President Hoover was commended "for taking steps inviting the leading powers to achieve a reduction of armaments."

Legislature Still Unable to Work

AUSTIN, July 5. (AP)—The legislative hiatus continued unabated today. The house of representatives again met and adjourned. This time there were 16 members present, an increase of six over yesterday. It consumed only two minutes to meet and adjourn.

Both the house and the senate will meet tomorrow, but there is little likelihood of a quorum in either branch. A quorum is not expected until Monday, and there is some doubt about the house mustering one then.

The house never has been able to organize since it met under the governor's proclamation calling the 41st legislature in third special session Wednesday. The senate convened with a quorum and organized, but it cannot turn a wheel until the house is ready to transact business.

The senate finance committee met and agreed to report the same educational, eleemosynary and judiciary bills as were vetoed by the governor.

Eat vegetables for beauty

What we eat has to do with how we look

EAT vegetables for a healthy—hence clear and beautiful—skin, is the way a recent address by a professor of medicine might be summed up. Specifically he mentioned cabbage, carrots and spinach. It may be news to many women that the vegetable garden or market is first aid to the beauty parlor.

There is nothing new about this, however, to scientific and medical authorities. Good skin, as well as good health generally, is largely a matter of what we eat. In a very real sense, the children, women and men of the United States are as good as their diet.

Every woman interested in feeding her family will be interested in the results of a series of experiments recently conducted by a group of nationally known women cooking experts. They searched for a way to make vegetable foods so tasteful that practically everybody will enjoy them. Their recommendations are: (1) Use very little water in cooking the vegetables. (2) Add a dash of sugar to the vegetables while they are cooking.

Bear in mind that this dash of sugar does not make the vegetables taste sweet. Sugar is nature's supreme seasoning. In this case it brings out the delicate vegetable flavors, and it also improves the vegetable freshness and color. In addition to milk, cereals, fruits and meat, eat at least one raw and one cooked vegetable a day. Remember cookies, candies, stewed fruits, berries or ice cream for dessert. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

"What I know about nice women"

Listen to a doctor whose practice includes hundreds of the better class. Don't fool yourself

Be the first to suspect yourself of having halitosis (bad breath). So many everyday conditions cause it that it is folly for any one to assume complete freedom from it. Defective teeth for example. Fermenting food particles. Pyorrhea. Germ infections of the mouth. Keep yourself on the popular side by gargling with full strength Listerine morning and night, and before meeting others. Listerine instantly ends halitosis.

Destroys odors—kills germs

Being a safe germicide so active it kills even Staphylococcus Aureus (pus) and Bacillus Typhosus (typhoid) germs in 15 seconds, it naturally combats germ conditions which cause odors. Then, being a powerful deodorant, it destroys the odors themselves. Send for our free Book of Etiquette. Dept. H 6, Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

GRANDFIELD WHEAT HARVEST NEARS END; 60 CARS SHIPPED

45 CARLOTS YET IN FIELD

Production Lags but Better Prices Are Seen

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., July 5.—Nearly all of the 1929 wheat in this community has been brought in and all the wheat is expected to be marketed at the end of next week. This year's crop falls short of last year's by several cars as only 60 cars have been shipped by the two elevators of Grandfield, though they expect 45 cars more before all the wheat is marketed, while last year over 157 cars were shipped.

Farmers Hold Crops

Tillman, shipping point north of Grandfield, whose total export is sometimes figured in with Grandfield's, had up until this week, shipped 38 cars with 12 still to come in. Last year Tillman had accounted for 60 cars. Totaling the yields of the two shipping points, this section of the county has shipped 98 cars with 57 cars of wheat remaining in the fields still uncut or in storage. Shipping from now on out will be slow, as rains and increasing price of wheat has caused many farmers to hold their crops.

According to E. R. Day, manager of the Farmers Cooperative Elevator, most of the wheat leaving Grandfield goes to the Kansas City or Chicago markets, as it is of such superior quality that it is in demand in northern markets.

Production Lower

Average production this year will fall slightly below the average for the past three years. Last year, which was a small decline on the year previous, showed an average of 10 bushels to the acre, occasioned by poor stands. Some fields, however, ran up to 29 bushels with an occasional small field showing 35 bushels. Acreage average this year will probably fall to eight or nine bushels. Lack of moisture in late spring caused many farmers to break their fields under or set fire to them. Fields that showed a total loss in the spring, though, have produced considerable wheat. These fields, with small production, have brought the average down. Deep Red fields have made some wonderful yields this year, some of them going as high as 35 bushels. Deep Red bottom lands are yielding 30 to 35-bushel this year due to the construction of the drainage system which prevented the overflow of the Red river over the lands.

THROCKMORTON GETS 10 BUSHELS PER ACRE

Special to The Record News.

THROCKMORTON, Texas, July 5—Wheat threshed in this section has averaged around 10 bushels to the acre, though some of it on the bottom lands has run as high as 20 bushels. Barley is running from 15 to 20 bushels per acre. Threshing will soon be over.

The rains the first of the week were very beneficial to growing feed that is now heading out; also to cotton.

This Week's Simplified Recipe—BAKED ALASKA!

Cake Mixing Time, Less Than 4 Minutes!

Mrs. Donald Brewer is another convert to "Kitchen-tested" flour.

Another Adventure in "Kitchen-tested" Baking

Now Baked Alaska has been simplified.

Of the first 427 women trying this recipe, 424 succeeded perfectly. Two who failed blamed a mistake in mixing; the third her oven. Try it.

By the development of an utterly new type of flour—Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour—baking has been simplified amazingly for housewives. And the cause of most baking disappointments banished.

"Kitchen-tested" means that every batch of this flour has been tested in an oven just like yours, before it goes to you. Tested for uniformity of result with home recipes.

That means Gold Medal Flour always acts the same way EVERY TIME with your recipes.

Ask your grocer for GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour. For perfect results, be sure and get that brand of flour before you try this recipe.

Cut out along this line and save

RECIPE . . . . *Baked Alaska

6 egg yolks, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup GOLD MEDAL "KITCHEN-TESTED" FLOUR, 2 tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, ½ cup boiling water, 1 tsp. lemon juice.

METHOD: 1. Beat egg yolks with rotary beater until thick and lemon colored. 2. Add sugar gradually, beating all the while. 3. Sift flour once before measuring. 4. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. 5. Add boiling water, flour mixture and lemon juice to egg mixture and beat well, still using rotary beater. 6. Place batter in ungreased pan and bake. The spring form cake pan in which the bottom has been inverted to form a depression in center of cake is correct size, or regular Mary Ann Cake pan can be used. TIME: Bake 40 minutes. TEMPERATURE: 350° F., moderate oven. SIZE OF PAN: One 10-inch spring form pan, or a Mary Ann Cake Pan, not a tube center pan. AMOUNT: 12 to 16 servings. Meringue and Filling: 6 egg whites, 1 cup sugar, 2 quarts strawberry ice cream. METHOD: 1. When cake has cooled and it is time to serve dessert, make meringue by beating egg whites very stiff and gradually beating in sugar. 2. Place cake on paper on board and fill depression in cake with ice cream. 3. Cover ice cream and sides of cake with thick icing of the meringue. Be sure ice cream is thoroughly covered so that heat of oven will not melt it. 4. Place in oven for few minutes until meringue is delicately browned. 5. Remove from oven, slip cake from board onto serving platter and serve at once. TIME: Bake from 3 to 5 minutes. TEMPERATURE: 500° F., very hot oven. NOTE: You can make one-half this recipe, enough to serve 6 to 8 persons by making one-half the cake mixture in a bread loaf pan. When cooled place 1 quart of brick ice cream on top of loaf cake. The cake must extend out a little beyond the ice cream on all sides. Cover with one-half the meringue mixture and bake in same way.

FITZ PROVIDES THRILLING PLAY

Hair-Raising Catch One of Greatest Made Here

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

Your Uncle Billy Disch would have been more proud than ever of Howard Fitzgerald, one of the most famous products of the University of Texas diamond, had he seen the greyhound of the garden perform yesterday. Fitzgerald arose to his greatest heights yesterday in the execution of one of the most sensational plays ever enacted at Spudder park.

It was a miraculous catch by Fitzgerald that prevented at least one run and perhaps saved the ball game, that ended a loosely-played but interesting contest, with the Spudders taking the opener of the three-game series with the Shreveport Sports, 10 to 8.

The defeat halted the winning streak of the hostiles, which had extended to 13 straight.

How Fitz Made Catch

The stage was set for Fitzgerald's catch in the ninth. There were two out and a runner on base. Holman, the long-distance hitting Sport third baseman, crashed a terrific liner. Off at the crack of the bat, Fitzgerald dashed to the center field fall, whirled, and leaped with outstretched gloved hand. The ball stuck, and Howard fell to the ground, still clutching the pellet with desperate fingers.

It was such a play that one sees once a season, if that often.

It was Fitzgerald's day, for in addition to that hair-raising exploit and other fast fielding plays, Howard shared batting honors of the day with Dick Sullivan, the juvenile who continues to play great ball and look like a certain major league prospect.

Sullivan and Howard clouted three hits each, including a double apiece. They each drove home two runs and Howard tallied three and Dick two. Sullivan also flashed some fast fielding to make it quite a day for that pair of speedsters.

Steen Hurls Good Ball

Milt Steengrafe chucked a very good game of ball but his comrades almost booted it away, the usually brilliant and reliable keystone pair costing four runs. An error by Turgeon cost a run and one by Benton resulted in three tallies by the hostiles, Gus Whelan pounding a home run in the eighth with two runners on bases that tied the score after Benton had made a boot with two out. Steengrafe held the hard-hitting Sports to nine hits, a creditable day's work, though he passed four.

Tiny Owens also received some sloppy support, though the big right-hander was not effective. Harry Thompson, vintage southpaw, chucked the last two rounds and is charged with loss of the pastime. Fitzgerald's hit, an infield scratch that neither Holman nor Woehrs could handle, scoring the two winning runs.

Elton Langford shared batting honors with Fitz and Sullivan by smacking a brace of doubles and a single. Benton and Herman got two blows each of the Spudders' 11. Duke driving in two runs with his singles.

Both Score in First

The Sports tallied two runs in the first inning. Whelan walked and went to second on Stewart's liner to right which Sullivan reached too late. Turgeon and Benton made a fast play to force Stewart on Cashion's grounder, Whelan going to third. Cashion stole second. Langford hit down the left field line for two bases, scoring the two runners.

The Spudders tied it in their half with two out. Fitzgerald and Bennett strolled. Sullivan singled to left, scoring Fitzgerald. Bennett stopping at second. Duke Hermann slashed a hit over Deviveros, Bennett romping all the way home.

Shreveport went out in order in the third. Benton singled but two were out and he was left.

The Sports took the lead with three runs in the third. Whelan, first up again walked, but was forced by Stewart, Hermann to Benton. Cashion doubled to right, advancing Stewart to third. Turgeon dropped Langford's liner, Stewart scoring and Cashion going to third. Holman's long lift to Fitzgerald scored Langford.

Spudders Tally Two

Wichita Falls counted two in its third after a pair were out. Deviveros fumbled Sullivan's grounder. Hermann singled to left, Sullivan stopping at second. Cashion backed up for Stapleton's long hoist and dropped the ball, Sullivan and Hermann scoring.

Steengrafe turned back the hostiles one-two-three in the fourth. Deviveros threw out all thre batters in the Spudder half.

Stewart got on base on Benton's boot but was out stealing. Langford bounced a hit to Stapleton but Sullivan went far into deep right-center to pull down Cox's drive.

The Spudders counted three in their fifth to go in the lead. Fitzgerald led off by smiting a mighty blow to deep center for two bases. Deviveros' throw to catch Fitzgerald at third on Bennett's bounder was late. Sullivan delivered again, the kid slashing a hit into left that scored Fitzgerald and advanced Bennett to second. Brown hit Bennett in the back trying to catch Red off second, the ball caroming into center field and Bennett scoring and Sully ambling all the way to third. Stapleton's fly to Cox tallied Sullivan.

Holman walked in the sixth and advanced to third on Owens' single after two were gone and Lapan took Whelan's foul for the third out.

Benton got his second hit but to no avail.

Howard Hits Again

Fitzgerald started the home seventh with his second hit, was sacrificed to second by Bennett and scored on Sullivan's two-base smash to the far left field line. It was Dick's third hit.

Tobin slashed a hit in the eighth after two were out and went to second when Cooper, batting for Owens, rolled one through Benton. Gus Whelan hammered his homer over the left field wall, scoring Tobin and Cooper ahead and tying the count at 8-all.

Benton walked after two were out and went to third on Turgeon's double to left. Fitzgerald slashed a hit that eluded Holman and Deviveros and both Benton and Turgeon tallied.

Langford crashed the right field wall for two bases in the ninth with one out. Fitzgerald came in for Cox's drive. Fitzgerald then made his great catch, taking the ball off the center field fence with outstretched gloved hand.

JUDGE LANDIS TAKES A HAND

Commissioner Benches Giard Pending Inquiry

ATLANTA, July 5. (AP)—Commissioner Landis has ordered the Atlanta club of the Southern association to bench Joe Giard, southpaw pitcher, until further notice.

This is the latest development in the dispute between the Atlanta and Washington clubs which grew out of the latter's failure to go through with a deal to purchase the Crackers.

Before calling off the sale, Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators, sent Giard here from St. Paul as one of his moves to strengthen the Crackers. When negotiations ended, he took steps to reclaim Giard, who has been performing in an Atlanta uniform for two weeks or more.

The Atlanta club sought to keep Giard along with a $5,000 binder Griffith posted when he agreed to take over the Crackers.

Man o' War's Son Wins Latonia Feature Race

COVINGTON, Ky., July 5. (AP)—Broadside, L. B. Combs' 3-year-old son of Man o' War, turned in a surprise victory to win the $10,000 added handicap at Latonia today. Royal Julian from the W. H. Whitehouse stables, was second and the Parkview stable's 6-year-old Rhinock third. Martinique, favorite, ran fourth.

A CAREFUL SPEAKER

NEW YORK, July 5. (AP)—One of the most interested spectators at the drubbing given Paulino by Max Schmeling was Jack Sharkey, who will fight the German in September. But the usually loquacious sailor had little to say except that Der Maxie "would do."

Golf's Haunting Phantom

Golf is a game that even the champion must hold in the deepest respect. There is always the haunting phantom of disaster. Take Bobby Jones' final round before the playoff. He had taken a 71 in the third round on Saturday, a week ago. He was on his way to what looked to be a romp and another 71 or 72. Before he knew what had struck him he had a seven at the eighth hole, after hitting a fine drive and a good looking iron. He rallied after this wallop. He got going again. He was six strokes ahead of his nearest rival, with six holes to play. And then at the 68th hole of the match, with everything set, another seven exploded under his heart. And again the explosion took place before he knew any shadow was swinging across the scene.

That is a way golf has. One can be slipping along evenly and serenely and without warning he can find himself in the coils of trouble. Bill Mehlhorn, for example, had great hopes in this last championship, and at the sixth hole of the first round, a hole only 325 yards, that many had almost driven, he ran into a 10. Any average duffer playing well over 100, would have raved at taking a seven or an eight on this hole. But Mehlhorn had his 10 before he could figure what had happened and the dagger was in his heart for the rest of the championship.

Johnny Farrell understands what this haunting phantom means. A year ago Farrell was the big shot. He had the crowd galloping at his heels as he beat Bobby Jones with a swirl of birdies down the stretch. Yet a year later Johnny Farrell, still a young golfer, finds himself part of the gallery, unable to break 80 or finish among the first 65. There is no other game in which form or touch can apparently disappear so quickly. What one may be on Monday has nothing whatever to do with Tuesday or Wednesday.

Schmeling's Future

If Herr Max Schmeling isn't the next heavyweight champion of the world and if he doesn't hold the title for quite a spell the German will fool a number of boxing experts.

At the age of 23 he has most of the needed ingredients. He is big enough, fast enough, strong enough, cool enough, game enough, and he carries two good looking hands into action—a left and a right. His left has improved a good bit in the last few months, but he can improve it still further, and when he does he will be a two-gun fighter who can do a world of damage.

It has been taken for granted that he will either knockout Sharkey or give him a terrible mauling. He will unless Sharkey puts on another surprise. He would knockout the Sharkey who fought Stribling at Miami Beach. But Sharkey will be more dangerous than Paulino ever was because he is a faster, better puncher and a much better boxer. Sharkey always has possibilities. The stuff is there, to make a much better fighter than he has shown himself to be, and he will need his best when he meets Schmeling, or else lose a pair of ears and part of his chin. He isn't going to beat Schmeling with any set or series of threatening gestures.

When you figure Sharkey's battles against Heeney, Risko, Christner, De Kuh and Stribling, he would figure to have little chance against the German fighter. It will be a question as to what state of mind he may carry into the next war, and Sharkeys' state of mind is none too easy to follow. Schmeling will be the best man he has met, not overlooking the Dempsey of 1927.

Schmeling has a chance to be a great fighter if he is willing to work at the job and keep learning—to work for more speed and for a better left—to work something as Tunney worked to get the best he has. He has more natural resources than Tunney, in a physical way at least. He has a chance to grab the old crown and hold it for a long time if he doesn't take too much for granted. For young heavyweights have ever come along with as much to offer at the age of 23.

The Fastest Human

Dear Rice: Is Simpson the fastest human? How much faster is he than Drew, Paddock, Bowman and company at their best? Is he seven feet faster? Is Bracey six feet faster than that crowd? And is Tolan five and one-half feet faster than they? Would Simpson lead Howard Drew from the gun? Hardly! This is not the customary growl from an oldtimer! But is this 9 4-10 seconds actually one-fifth of a second or seven feet faster than the 9 3-5 gaited stars of yesteryear?

I believe the following conditions enabled Simpson to chalk up 9 4-10:

1. Conditions were marvelous. As a rule tracks have been hard and dry all spring.
2. Competitors de luxe.
3. Simpson hit his peak.
4. Those starting blocks.

The oldtimer dug holes four inches into the ground. This means that he was one-third of a foot below the level at which he was to run his race. If the runner weighed 165 pounds he had to use 55-foot pounds of energy more on his initial step to rise to his running level.

Jack Ryder, coach of B. A. A. has said repeatedly that if the hundred record was to be lowered, the first 10 yards would have to be covered faster. The starting blocks solved that problem. But are they fair?

5. When watches showing 1-10 seconds are used in timing, closer timing can be made. It is possible that several 9 3-5 hundreds which were not allowed to be called 9 2-5 would have been called 9 5-10 had the present system been in vogue.

Simpson is fast. Probably he would beat any man that ever lived. But by seven feet! He would never lead Drew, Paddock, Kelly, Duffy, Bowman and company (at their peak) by more than six inches if he ran 8 2-5 seconds. They would step along with an antelope.

CUBS TO BACK HACK WILSON

Bear Officials Say Attack On Kolp Justified

CHICAGO, July 5. (AP)—Hack Wilson, Cub outfielder, was justified in attacking Ray Kolp of the Cincinnati Reds during yesterday afternoon's baseball game and the Cubs will back him to the limit, President William L. Veeck said tonight.

"We caution our players against unmanly tactics on the playing field, but in Wilson's case, it was an exception," Veeck said. "Kolp called him vile names and Hack just couldn't stand them. He jumped off the field and went into the Cincinnati dugout to stop it. Any man would have done the same thing.

"Wilson, like the rest of the baseball players, takes plenty of insults, but there is a limit to what any human being must or can endure. We are back of him and intend to fight his case to the limit if necessary. He is a gentleman and a conscientious baseball player and has enough red blood in him to resist vile insults such as Kolp hurled at him yesterday."

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

THE THIRD intersectional play of major league clubs gets under way today, though St. Louis was scheduled to play yesterday at Philadelphia, and the invasions of eastern American clubs in the west and western National teams in the east will have important bearing on the pennant races. The season is half over and barring a sensational rise of some team, an entirely improbable matter, the leaders now may be figured upon to hold their advantage to the end.

The Athletics apparently are headed for the flag. There may be a slump by the Mackmen. But even a falling off of their play should not prevent the A's from copping the gonfalon. They outclass the rest of the field so decisively that you may make your plans now to see part of the 1929 world series played at Shibe park, where the Athletics pastime when they wear the white diamond regalia of the home team.

THE FOUR-CLUB race in the National league that prevailed up to a week ago seems to be resolved now into a fight of the two leaders, the Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs. The champion Cardinals ran into a long losing streak that seems to have ended whatever hopes were held by the St. Louis aggregation to repeat. The Cardinals, even at the start of the season, did not impress close observers as being of pennant calibre and they played much better ball than was expected of them by staying near the top as long as they did.

New York has been a disappointment. Larry Benton, leading National league pitcher of 1929 has been a woeful flop and other Giants of whom much was expected have failed to respond to the drive of Jawn McGraw. It still is too early to count the Giants out of the race, they possess much potential class and if the faltering stars achieve form expected of them they will be in the thick of the hunt.

Otherwise, it is between the Cubs and Pirates.

HELEN RETAINS TENNIS CROWN

Wills Beats Helen Jacobs In Wimbledon Final

WIMBLEDON, England, July 5. (AP)—Conquering Miss Helen Jacobs, 6-1, 6-2, in Wimbledon's first all-American final in women's singles, Miss Helen Wills won her third straight British championship on the famous center court today.

These two American girls live in the same California city. They met in a title match no more exciting or doubtful than if it had been played on a club court in Berkeley.

It was Miss Wills' match all the way after the opening game which Miss Jacobs took on her strong service.

Although defeat was inevitable, Miss Jacobs never gave up. With set point against her, she fought off the decisive stroke half a dozen times in the opening session and she also carried the final game of the match to deuce twice.

Not content with her one-sided success in singles, Miss Wills took the court with Frank Hunter and reached the final in mixed doubles by a victory 6-8, 6-2, 6-3 over Miss "Bobbie" Heine and N. G. Farquharson, a South African combination.

The all-French singles final between Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra is down for settlement tomorrow, while the Anglo-American battle for the doubles championship between Gregory and J. G. Collins and Wilmer Allison of Texas and John Van Ryn promises to be a feature match with interest high.

Bib's Drive Decisive Factor In 11-10 Victory

CLEVELAND, July 5. (AP)—A five-run rally in the seventh, the largest factor in which was Bib Falk's home run, gave the Indians an 11 to 10 victor over the White Sox in the final game of the series today and a 4 to 2 edge for the set.

Though the Sox knocked Jimmy Zinn and Willis Hudlin for 20 hits, they failed to bunch them as effectively as did the Indians, who made only 12. Score:

Malignant Tumors

Any unnatural enlargement of tissues within the body is known as a tumor. Some of them do no damage other than might be caused by pressure upon neighboring organs; others tend to injure the general health, invade neighboring tissues, recur after removal, and produce death by toxic poisoning. There are many different kinds of both types of tumors, depending upon the shapes and the composition of their cells. The comparatively harmless enlargements, such as fatty tumors of the skin and the fibrous tumors of the uterus, have become known as benign tumors; and the dangerous tumors, such as cancer or carcinoma, and sarcomas are known as malignant tumors.

Millions of dollars have been spent in trying to discover the cause of malignant tumors, but the cause is still unknown in spite of the many theories that have arisen from time to time, each to be disproven almost as soon as propounded. We do know, however, that any long-continued irritation may result in cancer. The irritation from smoking a pipe is frequently the site for a cancer of the lip. The irritation from stomach ulcers frequently results in cancer of the stomach. The use of pessaries and chemicals preventives frequently results in concer of the uterus. Old scars are sometimes the starting point. In both sexes, cancer of the stomach and intestines occurs most frequently. In man, cancer of the rectum follows third, of the liver fourth, tongue fifth, throat sixth, prostrate seventh. In women, cancer of the breast comes third, of the womb fourth, liver fifth, rectum sixth.

There seems to be a slight hereditary tendency to cancer, but not as much as formerly supposed. People living in the same family seem more likely to have cancer, but this is probably caused by using the same kind of food and having similar habits.

Cancer hardly ever occurs before middle age, the most frequent cases occurring between the ages of 50 and 60. Sometimes those who appear quite healthy while young are affected when they grow older, but this is only an illusion, since most people do not know what a healthy person looks like. I am convinced that a really healthy person can never develop cancer. About four women are affected to every three men. Cancer is now the third most important cause of death, closely following diseases of the heart and blood vessels, and pneumo-bronchial diseases.

When cancers begin to ulcerate, a general body poisoning or cachexia results. In its action, cancer seems to resemble the chronic inflammations, such as lupus and leprosy rather than simple tumors.

The various plasters made out of arsenic, turpentine, trypsin and adrenalin are practically useless, and I have not seen very good results from x-ray or radium treatments, or from surgery, especially when the cancer was large enough to make diagnosis certain. The medical treatment is administering morphine and sedatives is, of course, only to give relief and is not an attempt at cure. Our greatest hope is to prevent tumors or cancers by living so that there is no opportunity for their formation. Our best defense is in proper eating, vigorous exercise, and keeping our vitality and endurance up to the highest level for functional efficiency.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Whooping Cough

Question—M. S. K. asks: "Will you please tell us how to treat a child with whooping cough, and how long a time should he be kept out of school, and how can these children's diseases be prevented?"

Answer—All children's diseases are preventable if the child is brought up with the proper habits. Once whooping cough has been well developed, it is a serious disorder and needs the diligent personal care of a physician. In my practice I have found the most effective treatment to be with a series of short fasts of three or four days each, with the child eating a light diet in between each fast. It will sometimes take several weeks to produce a complete cure. Hot applications over the chest are helpful, and also deep manipulation of the spine and muscles of the upper back. A physician's certificate is usually necessary before a child will be allowed to return to school.

Alfalfa Tea

Question—E. J. L. asks: "What do you think of alfalfa as a drink? What food value has it? I am drinking it three times a day with my meals in place of tea or coffee. I like it, and it seems to agree with me."

Answer—There is little food value in alfalfa tea or any other similar hot drink with meals. I do not advise my patients to take these drinks, but I am sure the alfalfa tea is an improvement over the drinks ordinarily used.

That Tired Feeling

Question—J. E. B. writes: "I seem to have that "tired feeling" physically and mentally. It seems rather difficult for me to concentrate. Do you think I have an inactive thyroid?"

Answer—If you are very overweight, it may be that you have a sluggish thyroid, but enervation can be produced from many things, such as overeating, lack of exercise and not being interested in constructive activities.

China Girl Lost In Crowd Wants To Study English

WASHINGTON, July 5. (INS)—A doll like Chinese maiden of nine summers who hasn't been in America very long, is going to be a good English pupil when the public schools open next fall.

The little girl, unable to speak any English—her father just came here with the new Chinese minister a few weeks ago—could not make herself understood. A frenzied call from the legation to the police brought about a search through the milling crowd, and Pih Min-Yu, second secretary, instituted a search of his own. He found her, not too frightened, but a bit bewildered.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, July 5. (AP)—Cotton was generally lower today under realizing or liquidation which appeared to be coupled with some southern and local selling. The latter probably was influenced by some of the larger private acreage figures but offerings were not heavy and after selling off to 18.23 or 11 points net lower, October contracts rallied partially, closing at 18.30. The general market closed barely steady at net decline of 2 to 13 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 1 point. A private report placing the condition of the crop at 74.1 and the indicated increase in acreage at 5.5 per cent, accounted for some of the selling.

Private cables said there had been covering with London, continental and Bombay buying in Liverpool over the holidays here. Influenced by rain news from the South and boll weevil complaints. Port receipts today 1,941. U. S. port stocks 730,745. Exports today 9,764, making 8,932,120 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, July 5. (AP)—Failure of the weather map to confirm early rain reports and bearish private reports today caused cotton prices to work nearly $1 a bale below an early advance. The initial improvement, due to the rain reports and relatively steady cables, carried October up to 18.30 but the option traded off to 18.11 and closed at 18.19, or 2 points net lower. The general market closed steady at net decline of 2 to 3 points.

Liverpool cables were 3 to 5 points better than due and as the English market scored a good advance over the holiday here yesterday, first trades showed gains of 7 to 9 points.

The lows of the day were made in late trading when October sold at 18.11 and December 18.31, or 18 to 19 points below the early highs. There was some covering at the end and final prices showed recoveries of 7 to 8 points from the lows.

Holiday Influences Fail to Stop Advances in New York Stocks

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, July 5. (US)—Expectation of increase in brokers' loans and holiday influences quieted but did not halt the advance in the stock market today. Specialties featured again with Auburn Auto rising 15 points, Allied Chemical 5¾, Coco Cola 3⅝, Simmons 5½, and Western Union Telegraph 6⅜.

Steel after rising to the 200 mark slipped under profit taking and closed fractionally higher for the day while most other standard industrials held to narrow price range.

General Motors and others of the group evidenced a tendency to advance early but succumbed with the result of the list to the final hours of profit-taking. Rails and oils remained very quiet and somewhat irregular call money was held at 7 per cent throughout but appeared to be in good supply. The turnover dropped below the 4,000,000 share level.

Further talk is heard of plan to split up General Electric stock in the very near future. Its friends maintain that there is little realization of the full extent of earnings of the corporation during the last few years. In addition to actual income that has been plowed back or otherwise not shown there has been material enhancement of value of "investments" as a result of the rise in Public Utility and Power stocks during the past several months. Not alone are the General Electric interests taking a prominent part in the current Utility activity but they also have designs in the amusement field which if carried out would make them the dominating group.

Westinghouse Electric also is enjoying increased earnings but the major factor in the stock is the likelihood that it ultimately will merge with Baldwin.

A new pool has been formed in Kansas City Southern, it is learned, by those who expect the rails to play the most prominent role in market activity over the next few months. American radiator's strength was further reflection of the plans of insiders which have been told of here on several occasions. After taking in one or two more companies, it is felt, merger with Johns Manville will be consummated. Ludlum had been quieter but the interested group hold to belief that it is out of line with other independent steel shares as it is enjoying increasing income from its specially patented products.

Steel reached the 200 goal but as it had sold higher than that in London over the holiday there was little excitement. As happens whenever a stock reaches such point, there was heavy profit taking, but offerings were well absorbed as the coming extra cash dividend is not all expected from current prosperity of the corporation. Underwood continues well absorbed for in addition to expectation of split up of the stock soon the belief will not down that ultimately it will be merged with international business machines.

United Light & Power featured in the Utility group for awhile as an offer is expected from Commonwealth Southern before long. Further skyrocketing of Auburn reflected the technical corner in the stock and expectation that shares would be split on a five for one basis before long.

Federal reserve bank statements read "caution!" for the stock market. Brokers' loans showed increase of $227,000,000 to within $24,000,000 of the record top of $5,793,000,000 recorded early in March. It is true that the most of the increase was due to subscriptions for new stock issues which were used mostly for bond retirement, but with loans approaching the record there is bound to be timidity on the part of public speculators. Both the reserve system and the local bank showed less inclination to ease credit, for holdings of government securities of the system dropped $8,200,000 while those of the local bank declined $5,000,000. Bills bought in the open market by the system showed falling off of $9,000,000. With ratio of the local bank down to 62.7 per cent a drop of 10 per cent for the week and that of the system off 2.4 per cent, the reason for hesitancy in the stock market is enhanced.

Sterling held unchanged in a quiet market while other foreign exchanges turned irregular. Cotton continued to drop but the grain market rallied further with wheat and corn registering new highs for the move.

To substantiate his charge he pointed out that the original advertisement designated the cities through which the route was to pass as Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, Oklahoma City, Dallas and Fort Worth.

Service on the new daylight line from Dallas direct to Tulsa and on to Kansas City started July 1.

Creager Has Snappy Comeback To Offset Brookhart's Activity

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, July 5. (UP)—Charging Senator Smith W. Brookhart and his senate investigating committee with "raking the gutters of Texas" for witnesses in the recent senate probe into federal patronage in Texas, R. B. Creager, Republican national committeeman, today issued his first statement since the hearing ended in Dallas last Monday.

In the statement Creager declared that the only witnesses Brookhart produced to testify against the state Republican organization were "disappointed office seekers, jail-birds, confessed bootleggers and discharged and discredited federal employes."

"Insofar as Texas is concerned, not one scintilla of evidence was heard in the investigation to substantiate the charges of improper handling of federal patronage," Creager said. "Brookhart's witnesses, with the malice and lack of regard for truth which has characterized the senator's conduct throughout, merely condemned the organization in general terms. Not one single specific instance of improper handling of federal patronage was given."

As a contrast, Creager named 49 witnesses who testified to the "high standing and reputation" of the Republican organization and that of its leaders.

HOOVER ASKS BUILDING FUND

President Requests Money For Capital Structures

WASHINGTON, July 5. (US)—President Hoover will ask congress to expend $75,000,000 instead of $50,000,000 on the 10-year building program for the nation's capital, it was announced today.

After lengthy conferences with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the chief executive has evolved an expanded program which he believes will better meet the housing needs of the government and result in great economies of construction.

The economies are to be brought about by adoption of a "rotation" method of construction, made possible by the number of buildings to be set up, which President Hoover has worked out largely through his acquaintance with engineering problems.

The 10-year program was authorized by congress to provide proper housing facilities for government departments and at the same time make Washington the world's most beautiful capital city. In effect it was an attempt to carry out the detailed plans of Major L'Enfant, the Frenchman who designed the city.

A feature of President Hoover's revised plan will be the "refacing" of the old senate, war and navy building to make its outward appearance conform with that of the treasury building. The White House then will be flanked by two imposing structures of like architecture.

Congress originally authorized the expenditure of $5,000,000 annually for 10 years on the program so that additional $25,000,000, if authorized, will bring the annual expenditures up to $7,500,000.

In revealing the revised plans, the White House explained that the original program included funds to purchase sites for several buildings but failed to provide funds for their construction.

These proposed buildings are for the department of justice, the department of labor, the archives building, and the building to house the independent offices.

President Hoover is anxious to have funds appropriated for their construction at this time in order that the "rotational" building method may be employed. This method does away with the old way of completing one building at a time.

Instead as soon as the excavating is done for one building, the same crew will start at once to excavate for the other buildings in turn. In the meantime, the steel workers will follow behind them, starting a new job as soon as one is finished. The same system will be followed by the stone workers and the finishers.

In this way, the chief executive believes that remarkable economies will be effected. There will be a minimum turnover of labor and a minimum of other expenses.

FRANCE GIVEN DEBT WARNING

U. S. Cautions Against Making Reservations

WASHINGTON, July 5. (US)—The United States has notified France that any reservations appended to the ratification of her debt to this country, will nullify the Mellon-Berenger agreement. This was learned from highest official sources today, following receipt of cabled dispatches that the French chamber was proposing ratification contingent upon certain reservations.

The movement to make French war payments to the United States depend upon German reparations payments to France has received the confirmation of the finance and foreign affairs committees.

The intention of the United States to make French ratification without qualification was conveyed to Ambassador Claudel by Secretary Stimson during the visit of the French ambassador last week, it was learned. At that time Monsieur Claudel brought the request of his government for a postponement of the maturity date of France's $407,000,000 debt for war supplies purchased after the armistice.

Secretary Stimson couched the position of this government in such terms that French susceptibilities were in no way offended, nevertheless, he pointed out that previous communications between the two governments on the subject of war debts had already anticipated the matter of French reservations to ratification. Any such ratifications, in the viewpoint of this government, are superfluous.

It was pointed out that if such reservations seriously affected the French instrument of ratification, it rendered ratification null and void, and if such reservations did not seriously affect the ratification, in the opinion of this government, they were superfluous and it was unnecessary to make them.

Henrietta Man Files U. S. Suit for $10,000

Rolley Curtis Armor, of Henrietta, Friday afternoon filed suit against the United States for the collection of $10,000 in government war time insurance. The papers were filed with Miss Jessie Cowan, clerk of the United States district court here. The case will be set down for trial during the November term of the federal court here, Miss Cowan said.

Mr. Armor alleges in his petition that he enlisted in the United States army on July 22, 1918, and served until Jan. 22, 1919, being attached to a provost guard company at Camp Sheridan in Alabama. The petition asserts that he became permanently and totally disabled.

The suit was filed by George & Brannan, local legal firm, who explained that negotiations had already been under way before the limiting date set by an act of congress had passed, so that the case is not barred by the limitations established.

FARM BOARD TO MEET JULY 15

Hoover Orders Experts to Hold Session

By EDWARD L. RODDAN

WASHINGTON, July 5. (US)—Anxious to aid depressed agriculture without delay, President Hoover today summoned the new federal farm board to meet July 15.

The chief executive is hopeful that by that time the membership of the board will be complete. However, in the event one or two places remain unfilled in the membership of nine, the five appointees who have accepted and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde will constitute a quorum.

The meeting 10 days hence was decided upon in order that the board might perform the necessary routine and preliminary matters which must be done before the actual work of farm relief gets under way.

It is believed this early start will enable the board to organize its work and decide upon methods of operation in time to aid in the marketing of the 1929 crops.

The special session of congress, appropriated $151,500,000 which the board will have at its disposal. The bulk of this probably will be expended in loans to cooperative marketing associations and other organizations of producers.

When the farm act was enacted, congress authorized the expenditure of $500,000,000 so more funds undoubtedly will be made available if needed.

The powers conferred upon the farm board by congress made it one of the most powerful government agencies ever set up to aid an American industry. President Hoover has used the utmost thoroughness in selecting the membership of the board. The chairmanship has been given to Alexander H. Legge, president of the International Harvester company.

The public library at Beaumont, Texas, has a truck library of 1,400 volumes which visits outlying sections of the city daily.

FIRE MENACES TRUCK FACTORY

McClure Warns of Danger From Burning Grass

Firemen were called to the factory of the Wichita Motor company shortly before 10 o'clock Friday morning when grass fire threatened the buildings adjoining. The blaze was quickly extinguished and no damage was reported.

The great number of grass fires in Wichita Falls during the last two weeks is attributed to the dryness of the grass, with only a carelessly tossed cigaret or match necessary to set off the flames which are possible of great property damage unless fire engines arrive in time to prevent the spread of the blaze, officials of the fire department declared. It was urged by Fire Chief J. L. McClure that citizens exercise care in tossing lighted cigarets out of cars into grass and weeds because of the fact that such flames sometimes gain great headway before being detected.

Youthful Slayer, 15, Accepts Murder Charge

PATERSON, N. J., July 5. (UP)—Displaying a coolness that would have done credit to "Scarface Al" Capone, 15-year-old Louis Torzella swaggered into Paterson police court today and accepted the murder charge against him without remorse.

He is accused of killing John J. Nolan, 14, who resisted the attempt of a youthful gang led by Torzella to rob him of a new watch and ring he had received as a graduation gift. The boy died of a ruptured wind pipe after Torzella had hit him, police say.

City Calls for Entries In Fiddlers' Contest

C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent. The entries may be written, or telephoned to 2-2183.

Several names have already been entered in the list, it was said, and interest in the contest has been manifest even in other towns near Wichita Falls. Prizes will be offered to the best fiddler, the oldest fiddler and the oldest fiddle. The Wichita Music company has donated a valuable violin and case as one of the prizes.

THE KATY IS YOUR RAILROAD

Record Katy Year

In 1928 the Katy handled a larger volume of freight traffic than was handled in any previous year in the railroad's history, thus indicating the railroad's increasing usefulness to the growing Southwest. Measured in tons moved and tons moved one mile, the Katy's freight traffic volume in the first half of 1929 has exceeded the first half of 1928.

The Katy Serves

Pioneer railroad in its territory—the Katy throughout its history has occupied a distinctive relationship to the Southwest. Although constructed as a private project, the Katy was conceived in a public purpose, and its importance as a Southwestern service institution has advanced steadily.

Recognizing the necessity for a railroad from the North to Texas and the Mexican border, Congress at the close of the Civil War offered a large land grant to the first railroad constructed across Indian Territory to Texas. The Katy was certified by President Grant as winner of a spectacular race in railroad construction rich in pioneer romance and thrill.

Though finally denied in the courts the promised land grant reward to which its enterprise gave it just claim, the Katy has uniformly met the obligations of public service imposed by conditions under which its construction was undertaken.

Pioneer hope of public advantage to result from its completion as an artery of commerce have been fully realized, and a Southwestern empire has grown up along the Katy. First railroad in its distinctive field—the only railroad serving all the more important centers in Oklahoma and Texas through both St. Louis and Kansas City—the Katy purposes to serve in steadily increasing degree the continued development of the Southwest.
