MOSCOW (NYT) — The Parliament of the Ukraine, considered the second-most-powerful Soviet republic after Russia, took its drive for independence a step further on Tuesday and authorized creation of a 400,000-member republic army.

The authorization did not immediately touch on proposals to create the independent military arm from parts of Soviet army contingents now in the republic. /4A

Training bias

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some government job-training officials are going along with employer demands for applicants of a certain race or sex — whites only, or males, or "anyone but an Oriental" — in violation of federal law, congressional investigators charge.

Officials of the Job Training Partnership Program "told us some of these employers were very blunt about their racial and gender preferences," the General Accounting office said. /7a

Abdul is tops

NEW YORK (AP) — Paula Abdul topped a list of celebrity women men "would most like to meet under the mistletoe," according to a marketing poll. Madonna came in fifth. Mel Gibson, Kevin Costner and Paul Newman were the men most often chosen by women interviewed in the poll.

Abdul

The poll, conducted by Bruskin Associates, was commissioned by MasterCard International, apparently figuring it's never too early to get American shoppers thinking about Christmas. Only a third of the random sample of 1,005 Americans surveyed last month by phone said they usually start their holiday shopping in October or earlier.

For the record, about four in five women chose one of the men on the pollsters' list at these rates: Gibson, 22 percent; Costner and Newman, each 14 percent; Harrison Ford, 9 percent; Arnold Schwarzenegger, 9 percent; Norman Schwarzkopf, 6 percent; Michael Jordan, 4 percent.

Nearly three in four men had a preference: Abdul, 21 percent; Julia Roberts, 16 percent; Michelle Pfeiffer, 12 percent; Candice Bergen, 9 percent; Madonna, Demi Moore and Whitney Houston, each 5 percent.

FBI seeks leads

Armed robber takes S&L's cash

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Federal investigators were pursuing sparse leads in Tuesday morning's armed robbery of the Bluebonnet Savings Bank branch in northwest Midland.

Two employees of the savings bank were bound and forced into a vault at gunpoint, when they arrived for work at the bank at 4300 N. Midland Drive about 8:30 a.m.

A man wearing a ski mask brandished a semi-automatic handgun and fled with an undetermined amount of cash, FBI officials said.

Neither employee was injured in the incident.

Television reports stating $50,000 in cash was taken in the robbery were not confirmed by FBI officials.

Investigators said they were unsure if more than one person was involved in the robbery, because the lenses of surveillance cameras in the bank had been painted over.

After shutting the employees in the vault, the suspect left the scene in a 1990 Nissan Sentra belonging to one of the workers. The employees remained in the vault for about 10 minutes.

At 9:10 a.m., Midland police found the vehicle abandoned nearby, in the parking lot of the Wildflower Apartments, 4301 Raleigh Court. Police secured the crime scene and turned the investigation over to the FBI.

According to officials, the suspect gained entry sometime during the night by cutting a hole in the roof over the

Pa. case may bring abortion to court

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pennsylvania abortion law struck down by the Supreme Court in 1986 but resurrected by the state's lawmakers three years later stands an excellent chance of winning the high court's approval now.

The law — imposing various regulations on abortion — was upheld Monday by a three-judge panel of the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Abortion rights advocates must decide whether to seek review from the full appeals court or appeal directly to the Supreme Court.

Even an appeal to the full 3rd Circuit court presumably would prove merely a precursor to a Supreme Court showdown.

Ozone protection slips in U.S. skies

By William K. Stevens
N.Y. Times News Service

UNITED NATIONS — For the first time, scientists have found the earth's protective ozone shield to be weakened over the United States and other temperate-zone countries in summer, when the sun's harmful ultraviolet rays are the strongest and pose the greatest danger to people and crops.

Since damage to the ozone shield is more severe than previously thought, skin cancers and crop damage will increase more quickly than expected, an international panel of scientists con-

Ex-hostage arrives in Germany

N.Y. Times News Service

WIESBADEN, Germany — Jesse Turner was helped from a U.S. Army helicopter by two crewmen Tuesday afternoon, but managed a broad smile at the sight of several hundred Americans at a U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden welcoming him with shouts and tiny American flags.

Turner smiled and waved repeatedly. When a reporter shouted a question about what he would do Tuesday night, he smiled and shrugged his shoulders, then entered the hospital without making a statement.

Earlier Tuesday, the 44-year-old Turner, pale and slightly unsteady on his feet after nearly five years in captivity in Lebanon, was turned over to American officials in Damascus, Syria.

"I am happy to be out, finally," he said in a soft voice during a brief news conference in Damascus. "I am looking forward to seeing my family and friends."

Turner, who was held by a pro-Iranian group called Islamic Holy War for the Liberation of Palestine, was an assistant professor of computer science and mathematics at Beirut University College when he was kidnapped by men posing as Lebanese police officers on Jan. 24, 1987.

When he was leaving the news conference in Damascus he stumbled and nearly fell before being assisted to a waiting car.

A military spokesman in Wiesbaden, Cmdr. John Woodhouse, said physicians who gave Turner a preliminary checkup aboard the C-141 military transport plane that brought him to the big American Rhine-Main air base near Wiesbaden from Damascus, Syria, said he "appears to be in generally good health."

The spokesman said he had no information about his psychological state.

Council sells street, drainage certificates

Santa suggests buying live trees

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Christmas came early for the Midland City Council Tuesday as Keep Midland Beautiful kicked off its program to encourage local citizens to buy live Christmas trees.

"Ho, ho, ho, let's not have any more of these in our landfill," said Joel Ford, KMB chairman, dressed in a Santa Claus suit and carrying "the Ghost of Christmas Past," a dried-up stalk that was a cut Christmas tree last year. He and KMB staffers in tree costumes entered the council chambers to strains of "Oh, Christmas Tree" and were presented with a proclamation of support by Mayor Carroll Thomas.

■ The city gets an interest rate of 5.804 percent, lower than expected.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland City Councilmen sold $1.25 million in certificates of obligation Tuesday, unanimously supporting drainage and street projects but narrowly approving the purchase of a parking lot.

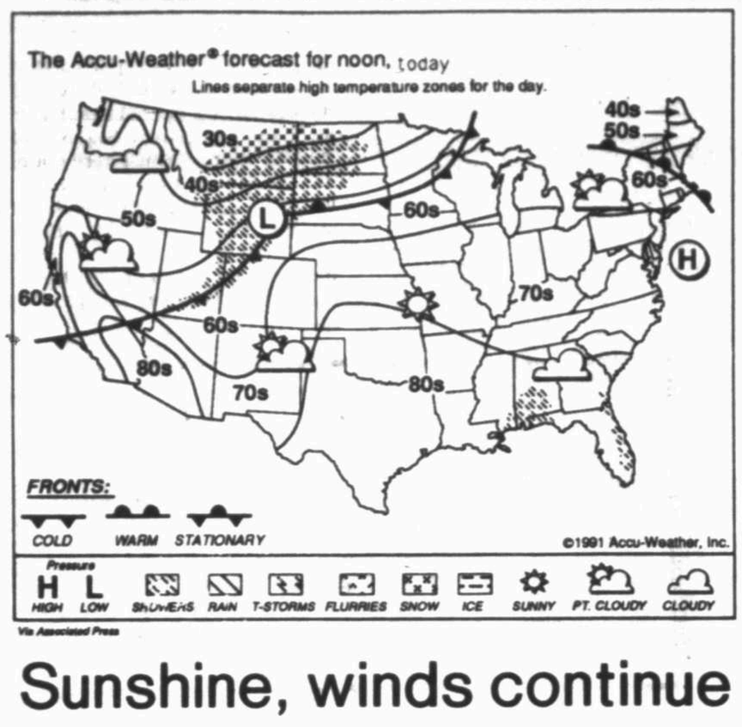

The certificates are similar to bonds except that their issuance, while incurring debt, does not require citizen vote.

Certificates worth $890,000 were issued to Coastal Securities Corp. of Houston, whose bid of 5.804 percent interest was the lowest of nine submitted. The city's total interest payment is listed as $376,189.

The funds will be used for a variety of street and drainage improvements.

Sunshine, winds continue

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 80s and southwest winds at 15 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be fair with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 56, Tuesday's high was 85 compared with the record high for that date of 90 set in 1934. The record low for that date is 33 set in 1936.

TEXAS

Mostly mild, dry conditions across Texas Tuesday were expected to give way to scattered rainfall triggered by a low-pressure trough.

Isolate showers already fell along the lower Gulf coast, while partly cloudy skies covered North Texas. The low-pressure feature stretched south from western Nebraska to the Texas-New Mexico border, the National Weather Service said.

High temperatures ranged from the 70s to mid-80s, with some 90s in far South Texas, including the lower Rio Grande valley and plains.

NATION

Rain continued over southern Florida.

Skies were clear over much of California and Nevada and large sections of the central and eastern United States.

Rain, with snow in the higher elevations, fell over parts of northern Wyoming and along the north Pacific Coast, bringing an end to an unusual spell of fall high temperatures.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

STREETS: City council sells certificates

(From 1A)

Street work is slated to include development of Mockingbird Lane and a Wadley Avenue extension, part of agreements with local developers and the Midland Independent School District.

Among plann d drainage projects, some of which have not been designated, is a $238,000 study to determine what options are available to fund needed drainage work. One possibility is a drainage utility that would charge property owners a "user fee" for channels and other drainage facilities based on the land's propensity to create water runoff.

Financial adviser Joe Smith of First Southwest Co. said the city got a very good interest rate on the certificate issue.

"As far as I can see, these are some of the lowest interest rates in years," Smith said. The city's bond rating, listed as AA by major rating companies, is a factor in getting good rates, he said.

"In any bond market, quality comes in very important and Midland is known for the high quality of its financial position," Smith said.

Finance Director Troy Gifford said the rate was "super."

"I hadn't expected anything below 6 (percent)," he said.

An additional certificate issue — $360,000 for the purchase of a parking lot at Loraine Center — was narrowly approved in a 4-3 vote.

The lot has been cited by officials as not only necessary for immediate parking needs, but possible for future expansion of the building, which is undergoing remodeling now to hold the city's police department.

The city effectively traded the certificates for the deed to the lot, Gifford said. The certificates were issued to MWJ Producing Co. of Midland at 6.5 percent interest, making the total cost over a six-year repayment period $504,000.

The lot is currently under lease by the city, but officials said purchasing it seemed a more cost-effective option in the long run.

Councilmen Buddy Sipes of District 3, James Devenport of District 1 and At-large representative J.D. Faircloth voted against the measure. Mayor Carroll Thomas, along with At-large Councilman John Castro, District 2 Councilman Michael DeVaughn and District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston supported the purchase.

Sipes, who has opposed the parking lot purchase since early discussions, said it is "not a good business deal."

"This is not the time for the city to spend money for a parking lot and space to expand," he said. "There's not another market for that property. I just think that perhaps we could have bought it later at a better price."

Faircloth, formerly in favor of the purchase for its expansion possibilities, said the cost is a "major concern" in his changed view.

"Spending the money today I think is unwise," Faircloth said. "I always thought it a little on the expensive side. I've decided I think we could have waited."

Gifford said the interest rate differed from that of the larger issue because the city made an agreement to purchase the parking lot a few months ago. At that time, the rate was in keeping with the current market, he said.

City Manager Fred Poe said the larger certificate issue will require no second reading for approval as it was declared an emergency. The city took that action in order to accommodate the purchaser, who wanted to take possession right away, he said.

The smaller issue will be considered on second reading at the council's first November meeting, after which the city will take possession of the lot, Poe said.

LIVING: Santa encourages live Christmas trees

(From 1A)

KMB Director Sharla Hotchkiss said the group's campaign is an attempt to encourage preservation of the environment by reducing landfill waste. Discarded Christmas trees took up 400 cubic yards of much-needed space in the city's landfill last year, officials said.

"Instead of a cut tree that would end up in the landfill, we hope people will consider buying a live tree that can be replanted," Hotchkiss said. Support from the parks department and local youth organizations will help the project, she said.

"If someone wants to donate their tree after Christmas to be planted in a park or at a school, the city will pick them up for free," Hotchkiss said. "If they want to plant them in their own yard, but aren't physically able, the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts have agreed to help."

The city will lead the way by planting a giant live tree in Centennial Park Nov. 15, said George Logan, Community Services director.

According to KMB information, live trees provide many necessary functions, including filtering the air, preventing erosion and supplying homes for wildlife. In the last decade, however, only one live tree was planted for every four that were destroyed.

KMB volunteer Faye Beery said the program will help beautify the city as well.

"One thing we need a little more of around here is trees — no one can argue with that," Beery said.

For those who choose to buy a cut tree, city parks staff will provide mulching, a chopping process that renders the tree suitable for fertilizer to be used on other plants. Discarded trees can be dropped off Dec. 26 through Jan. 6 at Hogan Park Field 7 or Wild River Canyon, 5200 Princeton, to be mulched. City parks will no longer be used as drop-off sites for trees after the Christmas season.

"We're really excited about the mulching," Hothkiss said. "In fact, we're excited about the whole project. It's going to be great."

More information about KMB's program will be distributed in the November water bills.

HOSTAGE: Turner arrives in Germany for tests

(From 1A)

The Wiesbaden hospital has become a kind of official recepion center for Americans released from captivity in the Middle East, since the 52 American hostages held in Tehran arrived here in 1980 after 444 days of captivity. But by 1993, the sprawling medical center will be shut down under plans to cut the American military presence in Europe.

American officials who met with Turner described him as "lucid" and "chatty." But the released hostage made few public comments, they said, because of his fear that he might jeopardize the release of the remaining hostages.

There are now eight Westerners believed held hostage in Lebanon — four Americans, two Germans, an Italian and a Briton.

When Turner was asked if he had knowledge of other hostages in Lebanon he looked toward the American ambassador to Syria, Christopher Ross, for guidance, whispered a comment to the diplomat, and then declined to answer.

Turner was held at least part of the time with another American, Alann Steen. Asked whether he had any information to pass on from Steen, Turner said, "Not at this moment, no. I want to speak to his wife first."

Turner also refused to comment on whether he carried a statement or a message from his kidnappers.

Turner, who had a bushy moustache, neatly cropped hair and wore a double-breasted beige jacket, was turned over to Syrian security forces in the early morning hours Tuesday in Lebanon.

Turner, who had a bushy moustache, neatly cropped hair and wore a double-breasted beige jacket, was turned over to Syrian security forces in the early morning hours Tuesday in Lebanon.

He was driven to the Syrian Foreign Ministry in Damascus, where he was greeted by Ross and Nasser Qaddur, the Syrian minister of state for foreign affairs, at about 9 a.m.

Two hours later, he boarded a C-141 transport plane en route to Wiesbaden. He will be joined there by his Lebanese wife, Badr, and a 4-year-old daughter, Joanne, who was born five months after his abduction. Turner will also undergo psychological and medical tests and be debriefed by State Department officials.

U.N. officials and Western diplomats are hopeful that further releases will soon follow as Iran, Lebanese groups and Israel continue to exchange information through United Nations.

The United Nations announced the impending release of a Western hostage Sunday, the first time the organization has forecast such an event.

The Lebanese group that held Turner said he would be released early Monday, but several hours elapsed before Turner was actually turned over to the Syrian authorities and brought to Damascus, creating some confusion among diplomats and Syrians who were following the event.

The delay may have been due to fighting along the transit route, Western diplomats said. Members of the Party of God, the largest Iranian-backed Shiite Muslim faction in Lebanon, battled a local Lebanese clan in the town of Baalbek in the Bekaa until close to midnight.

Turner was apparently taken out of the town, which serves as the Party of God's headquarters and is where many of the remaining Westerners are believed to be held, only after Syrian troops moved in to impose a cease-fire, Western diplomats said.

Baalbek is the main town in the Bekaa, which is under Syrian military control. But Syrian troops are not allowed to enter the barracks and training centers belonging to the Party of God, which is believed to be the umbrella organization for all of the groups holding Western hostages. Its operations in Baalbek are supported by a force of several thousand Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

Qaddur said Syria would "continue to exert all its efforts" to get the remaining Western hostages out of Lebanon.

U.N. officials, seeming buoyed by the resumption of prisoner exchanges in Lebanon, say they expect to announce new releases soon.

Those officials said Turner's release was the outcome of an "intensive stage" of negotiations between U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar's special envoy, Giandomenico Picco, and a hostage negotiator identified as Abu Abdullah, described as the "special envoy of the organization that holds the hostages."

The Israelis hold about 300 Arab prisoners, including Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Party of God leader who was kidnapped from his home in southern Lebanon by Israeli commandos on July 28, 1989.

Israel released 15 Arabs on Monday after receiving hard information about the fate of one of its missing servicemen, Pvt. Yossi Fink, who was confirmed dead. Israel is demanding concrete information on four remaining missing servicemen.

The Lebanese kidnappers said the decision to free Turner constituted an "obligation and readiness to complete the comprehensive agreement being arranged to free all prisoners and the hostages."

Israel freed 51 Arabs and turned over the bodies of nine guerrillas after Lebanese kidnappers freed a British hostage, John McCarthy, and an American, Edward Austin Tracy, in August and provided information on the fate of one of Israel's missing servicemen.

ABORTION: Top court may rule on Roe vs. Wade case

(From 1A)

And the high court's view on abortion — like its membership — has undergone significant change in the past five years.

The Pennsylvania law, enacted in 1989, is almost identical to one the Supreme Court in 1986 declared an unconstitutional interference with women's constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

The current law, like its precedent, imposes a 24-hour waiting period for women seeking abortions and requires doctors to inform patients about fetal development and alternatives to abortion.

The court's 1986 decision finding such regulations unlawful was reached by a 5-4 vote. Three members of that five-justice majority have since retired.

Only Justices Harry A. Blackmun, author of the '86 ruling and of the court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion, and John Paul Stevens remain from that slender majority. Justices Lewis F. Powell, William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall are gone.

Only one of the four 1986 dissenters — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger — has retired. Now-Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White and Sandra Day O'Connor remain.

New to the court since that 1986 ruling are Justices Antonin Scalia, Anthony M. Kennedy, David H. Souter and — come Nov. 1 — Clarence Thomas.

Scalia has said he wants to overturn Roe vs. Wade in its entirety, and Kennedy is on record as favoring broad state regulatory power over abortion.

Little is known about the abortion views of Souter and Thomas, but anti-abortion activists view them as potential allies in their battle to overturn the 1973 ruling.

An important 1989 Supreme Court decision in a case called Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services let states make abortions harder to get. The court's majority in that decision was comprised of Rehnquist, White, O'Connor, Scalia and Kennedy.

The "chill wind" cited by Blackmun in his dissent to the Webster ruling must have felt like a warm breeze to those Pennsylvania lawmakers, who quickly went to work reinventing their previously ill-fated abortion law.

The three-judge panel that upheld the law Monday said the 1989 Webster decision clearly had created new abortion-regulation ground rules.

(From 1A)

vened by the United Nations said Tuesday.

Furthermore, they said, the rate of ozone depletion has accelerated and will continue at the higher rate in the 1990s, requiring a more rapid phasing out of chlorofluorocarbons, halons and other man-made chemicals that destroy ozone high in the atmosphere.

U.N. officials said they would seek to reopen international discussions next year in an effort to speed up abandonment of the ozone-eating chemicals for the second time since controls on them were first adopted in 1987. As of now, developed countries have agreed to phase them out by the year 2000 and developing countries by 2010.

Until recently, scientists believed on the basis of measurements from satellites that ozone depletion was taking place only over the poles, and in the middle latitudes in winter. The depletion is worse nearer the poles, and worst of all over Antarctica, with its ozone "hole."

"We now see a significant decrease of ozone both in the Northern and Southern Hemispheres not only in winter, but in spring and summer, the time when people sunbathe, putting them at risk for skin cancer, and the time we grow crops," said Dr. Robert Watson, a NASA scientist who is co-chairman of an 80-member group of scientists from 80 countries who have been assessing ozone trends. He said the situation was "extremely serious."

Chlorofluorcarbons and other ozone-destroying chemicals are used in a wide variety of industrial and consumer applications, including refrigration and air conditioning, and halons are used in fire extinguishers.

The chemicals take years to waft up to the upper atmosphere. There, they touch off chemical reactions that lead to the destruction of the ozone, which screens out harmful frequencies of ultraviolet radiation. Unscreened, the rays can cause cancer and cataracts, harm some crops and other plants and, scientists fear, disrupt the feeding patterns of marine life.

Dr. Mostafa K. Tolba, executive director of the U.N. Environment Program, called the findings "very disturbing" and said there was "definitely a need for a quick response" and for a reopening of international talks on the subject. They spoke at a news conference at the United Nations on Tuesday.

Besides destroying ozone, chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, are among several gases that trap heat in the atmosphere. In another new finding, the scientists reported that the ozone depletion may have a cooling effect, offsetting — or masking — part of the global warming trend that some scientists fear may already have begun. If this finding is confirmed, restoring atmospheric ozone levels could increase global warming.

The finding could undercut the Bush administration's position on global warming. The adminstration has sought to avoid making possibly costly cuts in carbon dioxide emissions by insisting that actions it is taking to reduce CFCs are sufficient for the next decade or more.

Tolba, under whose leadership the ozone and the climate talks are taking place, said that these findings showed clearly that "the main emphasis should be on carbon dioxide."

But Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly said Tuesday that unexpected findings vindicated the administration's policy of emphasizing research rather than immediate action on global warming. "What had been thought was a major greenhouse gas turns out in fact to be having a cooling effect," he said.

The United States, along with other industrialized countries, has agreed to phase out CFCs by the end of this decade.

And Tuesday, Du Pont Co., the world's largest manufacturer of CFCs and halons, announced that in response to the new scientific report it was accelerating its phaseout of the chemicals by three to five years.

In April, the EPA reported that during the previous decade, ozone declined by 4.5 percent to 5 percent over the United States and other Northern Hemisphere countries in the winter and early spring. Agency analysts calculated that as a result, some 12 million Americans would develop skin cancer, and more than 200,000 of them would die, over the next 50 years.

Ukraine authorizes creation of army

MOSCOW (NYT) — The Parliament of the Ukraine, considered the second-most-powerful Soviet republic after Russia, took its drive for independence a step further on Tuesday and authorized creation of a 400,000-member republic army.

The authorization, which had been expected with the strong anti-Moscow separatist mood sweeping the republic, did not immediately touch on the more controversial proposals from some officials to create the independent military arm from parts of the Soviet army contingents now stationed in the republic.

"The course of history cannot be changed," the Ukrainian defense minister, Konstantin Morozov, told the Parliament in Kiev. "The Ukraine will have its own armed forces."

To the applause of legislators, the Ukrainian leader, Leonid M. Kravchuk, conferred the rank of general colonel on the defense minister, whose post was created only this year. He responded with the words, "I serve the Ukraine" a deliberate variation on the words of the traditional military oath: "I serve the Soviet Union."

The lawmakers also declared that Ukrainian officials would pursue the proclaimed policy of making the republic nuclear free by safely removing and neutralizing existing Soviet nuclear weapons in the republic.

A Ukrainian army, contingent on an independence referendum considered certain to pass on Dec. 1, would if realized raise numerous problems for the national government and neighboring republics. Those range from mutual security issues to questions like the military draft, in which the sovereign republics have already been getting national authorities to station conscripted youths within their home republics.

There was no immediate comment from the Soviet president, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who had warned on Monday that the creation of independent republic armies by the proclaimed "privatization" of union installations and personnel was unconstitutional and dangerous.

Soviet army officials estimate that a Ukrainian army on the scale authorized Tuesday, backed by planned air force and navy support, would cost perhaps 50 billion rubles a year to finance and that the Ukraine cannot presently afford such an investment.

Fifty billion rubles is about $1.1 billion at the current black-market exchange rate, considered the most reliable gauge of the ruble's worth.

Parliamentary deputies put no price tag on the cost of an independent military, but they authorized an annual expenditure of 2.8 percent of the republic's budget for the military, without specifying what they envisaged would be the total budget of an independent Ukraine.

Earlier Tuesday, before the Ukrainian Parliament's action was announced, Gorbachev and leaders of the eight republics that have agreed to form a new Soviet economic community sent a plea to Kiev that the Ukraine not turn its back on renewing ties with the union by way of the new free-market compact.

"Let us be frank," the special message declared in terming the important agricultural and industrial republic an "irreplacable" part of the Soviet Union. "We cannot imagine a Union without the Ukraine."

The Ukraine, with some of the union's most bountiful agricultural land, and fuel-producing Russia have depended heavily on each other for economic balance, accounting for about 70 percent of the population and economic output of the Soviet Union. With 52 million people, the Ukraine has a fifth of the total Soviet population, while Russia has 150 million.

Korean leaders clash on weapons

SEOUL, South Korea (NYT) — The prime ministers of North and South Korea opened a new round of talks Tuesday, but the two leaders' first meeting in 10 months, in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, began with a clash over the North's continued refusal to allow international inspections of its nuclear installations.

Prime Minister Chung Won Shik of South Korea, who crossed into North Korea at Panmunjom, told reporters that he would demand North Korea acknowledge that it is developing a nuclear bomb and allow international inspections immediately.

His appeal was, as expected, rejected by North Korea, radio reports monitored here and Tokyo said. Press reports in South Korea also said the Seoul delegation was greeted coolly, with little fanfare.

The only other recent attempt to sound out North Korea on the issue of inspecting its nuclear installations, which are believed to contain preparations for a bomb, was made by Japan in August at a meeting in Beijing. That, too, ended with a rejection.

The talks between the leaders of North and South Korea began in September 1990, but little progress has been made in narrowing the differences between the two countries.

Diplomats say the new round of talks could be important because they come after a year of tumultuous developments, including the collapse of the Soviet Union as a superpower and the admission of both North and South Korea to the United Nations.

But in recent months, many experts have become alarmed by the progress North Korea has reportedly made toward building a nuclear bomb.

Shamir, Arafat remain unyielding

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Tuesday rejected any change in his country's borders, saying that to do so would invite war. He insisted Israel has every right to the land it occupied in 1967.

His uncompromising stance a week before the Middle East peace conference was mirrored by PLO chief Yasser Arafat, who countered Israeli efforts to exclude the PLO from the talks by declaring: "All Palestinians are members of the PLO."

Arafat gained a symbolic victory when Foreign Minister Boris Pankin of the Soviet Union, a cosponsor of the conference, met with him for 90 minutes in Paris.

The meeting was concluded with a joint statement in which the two said a "just solution of the Palestinian problem is at the heart of the Arab-Israeli settlement."

In Jerusalem, Palestinian leader Faisal Husseini announced the 14-member Palestinian delegation to the peace conference, and named a seven-member advisory committee to operate behind the scenes.

"I hope that the Israeli side, the government of Israel, will really head for peace," Husseini said in Hebrew on Israeli radio after announcing the delegates. "On our part we want peace ... peace based on equality."

Yasser Arafat

Shamir, in a speech to leaders of the European Parliament, cautioned that quick agreement should not be expected at the conference that opens in Madrid on Oct. 30.

"The gulf between the two sides is still too wide, the Arab hostility to Israel too deep, the lack of trust too immense to permit a dramatic, quick solution," Shamir said.

He said Israel has a "well-founded right" to the territories it occupied in 1967 after a war launched by Arab nations, and would refuse to accept any plan calling for a return to earlier borders.

"Relinquishing this area is an invitation to war," Shamir said.

"Our first duty is to survive, and we cannot survive unless we have secure and defensible borders," he added.

Israel, Syria, Egypt, Lebanon, Jordan and Palestinian representatives are set to attend the peace conference sponsored jointly by the United States and Soviet Union.

The advisory committee named by the Palestinians is designed to bypass Israel's refusal to negotiate with representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization, residents of Arab east Jerusalem or Palestinian exiles.

Asked if the advisory group was acceptable to Israel, Shamir said, "We will not speak with them and they will not ask us questions."

"If the representatives at the conference will say that they speak on behalf of the PLO, we will not speak with them," Shamir told reporters.

EC extends free trade zone to 19 nations

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The European Community and the European Free Trade Association concluded a landmark accord Tuesday that will create a free trade zone of 19 nations stretching from Iceland to the Mediterranean by 1993.

Under the hard-won accord, the 12 EC states extend their 1992 single market benefits to the seven states of EFTA — Finland, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Liechtenstein and Austria — creating a "European Economic Area" of 380 million consumers.

The agreement was announced after a final negotiating round of more than 15 hours. It opens access to the two trade groups' markets, making the European Economic Area "the largest, most integrated economic area in the world," Finnish Foreign Trade Minister Pertti Salolainen said.

"This is an important moment for the EC, for EFTA and for the construction of Europe," said EC External Relations Commissioner Frans Andriessen.

Sixty percent of the Free Trade Association states' trade is with the EC and a quarter of the EC's trade is with EFTA. Two-way trade between the blocs exceeds $220 billion a year.

The European Community nations are Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal and Spain.

The accord must be ratified by the legislatures of all EC and EFTA states to take effect on Jan. 1, 1993. It must also be approved by the 518-member European Parliament.

Karl von Wogau, a German member of the Strasbourg, France-based parliament, said it would question limits on the free movement of EC citizens in Free Trade Association nations, and the lack of a role for the European Parliament in overseeing affairs between the two trade blocs.

Peace plans lead to 'catastrophe,' Yugoslav defense minister says

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Yugoslav defense minister on Tuesday rejected European Community peace proposals as leading to "catastrophe" and accused Germany of plotting the breakup of this Balkan country.

The minister, Gen. Veljko Kadijevic, also demanded a wider mobilization in regions that want to stay in the federation. His order was endorsed by what is left of the federal leadership, the Serb-controlled half of the eight-member collective presidency.

Four other presidency members — from Croatia, Bosnia, Macedonia and Slovenia — no longer attend its meetings.

Desertions have plagued the federal army as it has stepped up its operations against Croatia.

Croatia declared independence in tandem with Slovenia on June 25, but Croatia's ethnic Serb minority wants no part of an independent Croatia. The federal army, with a Serb-dominated officer corps, intervened and has sided with Serb rebels. The fighting has killed more than 1,000 people.

Tuesday's call-up and new Serbian warnings signaled a clear intention to keep up the undeclared war despite the latest truce — the 10th in four months — signed at The Hague on Friday.

The army was reported pressing its advance on encircled Dubrovnik, entering the resort of Kupari, four miles to the south, while bombarding the east Croatian stronghold of Vukovar, under siege for 62 days.

But Kadijevic's blistering speech introduced a new element of peril because it was the first time a member of the top Yugoslav leadership had slammed the peacemakers.

"Germany is openly and with pronounced impatience attacking Yugoslavia for the third time in this century," Kadijevics said.

Serbs battled Germany and its allies during World War I, and the majority, though not all, of the Yugoslavs in Tito's partisan army of World War II were Serbs or Montenegrins.

Many Germans support independence for Croatia and Slovenia, which have strong historical ties with Germany and Austria, although the EC persuaded German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to drop considerations last August of recognizing the two secessionist republics.

Kadijevic said EC peace plans would "lead to catastrophe . . . They definitely abolish Yugoslavia as a common state, and with it also all institutions which have a Yugoslav character, including the Yugoslav People's Army."

French issue warrant for Iranian

PARIS (NYT) — A French judge issued an arrest warrant on Tuesday for an official in the Iranian government on charges that he was an accomplice in the killing of a former Iranian prime minister, Shahpur Bakhtiar, here in August.

Although three arrests have already been made in the case, this is the first time that French investigators have directly implicated any member of the Teheran government in the plot to kill Bakhtiar, who was stabbed to death in his home on Aug. 8.

Political experts said the arrest warrant was certain to complicate efforts by France and Iran to patch up their relations after years of estrangement. Although Iran has denied involvement in the assassination, a planned trip to Tehran by President Francois Mitterrand was put on hold after Bakhtiar's death.

French government officials said Judge Jean-Louis Brugiere had ordered the arrest of Hossein Sheikhattar, who is said to be a 42-year-old adviser to the Iranian minister of posts and telecommunications.

The officials said Sheikhattar reportedly assisted in arranging for two of three suspects in the killing to be given visas to enter France using false identities. One of the three, Ali Rad Vakili, was arrested near Geneva on Aug. 21, while the two others are still on the run.

The officials said Sheikhattar's involvement had been disclosed by Massoud Hendi, a former Iranian television correspondent.

Canada's socialists sweep third province

TORONTO (NYT) — The left-leaning New Democratic Party has swept into power in two more Canadian provinces — British Columbia and Saskatchewan — creating a new source of economic tension for the Conservative-led national government in Ottawa and altering the dynamics of efforts to keep the country united.

Saskatchewan's 1 million voters on Monday joined British Columbia's 3 million last Thursday in electing New Democratic Party premiers.

Ontario, Canada's richest and most populous province with 9.6 million people, have been led by the New Democrats for the past 13 months. In addition, one of Canada's two territories, the Yukon, has had a New Democratic Party government since 1985.

The new elections mean that three of Canada's 10 provinces and 52 percent of the country's 26 million people are now under control of the New Democratic Party.

Americans urged to leave Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The U.S. ambassador has urged Americans residing in Haiti to leave the country, saying that political crisis is lurking behind the country's calm exterior, according to a statement released Tuesday.

In a message to all Americans in Haiti, broadcast on radio frequency used by embassy personnel and American residents with scanners, Ambassador Alvin Adams said his own wife was packing her bags.

He referred to a two-week-old U.S. State Department advisory calling on U.S. citizens without essential business in the country to consider leaving.

"This advice is even more justified by the prospect of seriously increased hardships and shortages which will likely be experienced by the end of the month," Adams said.

The Organization of American States has approved severe economic and diplomatic sanctions against Haiti, including a trade embargo and a freeze on Haitian foreign assets, in a campaign to reinstate ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Haiti's military overthrew Aristide in a Sept. 30 coup and installed a provisional government, which has been rejected by the international community as illegitimate.

Since the early days of the coup, during which the military killed about 150 people, there has been little public unrest in Haiti, despite Aristide's broad popularity among the poor.

Adams said, "We believe conditions are not normal, despite a superficial calm. We also believe that this crisis is more serious than past crises."

About 30 pro-Aristide groups, including student and teacher associations, peasant organizations and trade unions, were calling for a general strike on Wednesday to press for the deposed president's return.

Adams said as many as 25 percent of the estimated 15,000 Haitian residents with American citizenship already have left.

Seven proposals don't deserve OK

Seven of the proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution that voters will be deciding on Nov. 5th concern us. Here is why:

All the disclosures of corruption and graft in government during recent years make us think that Texas needs an active ethics commission, but the one that would be created through passage of PROPOSITION 6 incorporates a couple of points that make it unacceptable. For one thing, Texas voters defeated in 1971 a very similar proposal that also established an ethics commission with authority to recommend legislative salaries. For another, the proposed amendment provides for members to be appointed to the ethics commission from lists prepared by the Senate and House of Representatives. Isn't that kind of like putting foxes in charge of selecting who will guard the henhouse?

The state's voters also rejected a proposal to increase legislative salaries less than two years ago. That makes this attempt to create an ethics commission with legislative salary responsibility look like a sneaky way of getting around the voters — even though the voters would still have to approve any salary action by the ethics panel. This simply isn't the way to solve the problem of corruption in government. We think voters would be wise to vote "against" this proposal.

Another bad idea is contained in PROPOSITION 8 which would permit state debt to be created through simple propositions rather than the current method which requires amending the Constitution.

While the argument that such a change would permit voters to know more about the proposals such as the amount of debt they would cause, purpose of the proposal and repayment source, the fact that under the present system voters are actually required to amend the Constitution on matters of state debt seems to insure that the proposals are seriously considered. This proposition should be rejected.

PROPOSITION 7 would permit statewide public retirement systems such as the Texas Retirement System of Texas and Employees Retirement System of Texas to invest their assets in other investments in order to realize more profit, such as in real estate. While the goal is an understandable one, there is a need to exercise extreme conservatism where state employees' pension funds are concerned.

During the past decade many private investors, banks and savings and loan associations have gone bankrupt because they invested too heavily in risky real estate ventures. While the lure is attractive, Texas voters should protect the pension funds of state employees and reject this proposal.

Much the same argument can be applied to PROPOSITION 3 which would give the Veterans' Land Board the ability to invest in instruments with higher yields and correspondingly greater risk. This change might permit the Veterans' Land Board to realize more profit, but the current restriction which requires the investing of state funds in bonds and obligations of the United States is good, conservative public policy that should be maintained. The proposal should be rejected.

PROPOSITION 10 would authorize an exemption from ad valorem taxation for property owned by a non-profit water supply or wastewater service corporation. Local officials say this would not affect local water suppliers.

Twice in the past voters have rejected similar proposals, obviously fearing that it would be unfair to competing private corporations. This proposal should be rejected.

For the past 32 years the state has funded numerous projects designed to address the water needs of the state through the issuance of water development bonds. PROPOSITION 12 would increase by $150 million the amount of bonds already earmarked for wholesale and retail water and wastewater facilities along the Texas border in the impoverished areas known as the "colonias."

While Texas voters have funded many million of dollars of work in the colonias, the improved conditions there mean local voters in those localities could obtain financing for the work remaining. Voters should reject this additional funding request due to the financial crisis facing the state.

Lastly, PROPOSITION 2 would change state law to allow the legislature to spend money from any source available to build turnpikes, toll roads or toll bridges for Texas Turnpike Authority. Present law requires the turnpike authority to operate with no state funds and no bonds backed by the state's credit.

The current system should be left as it is. All the state's residents should not be required to underwrite turnpike projects. Changing this law would be a mistake; voters should reject the proposal.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 23, the 296th day of 1991. There are 69 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 23, 1983, 241 U.S. Marines and sailors in Lebanon were killed by a suicide truck-bomber who crashed into the U.S. compound at Beirut International Airport. An almost simultaneous attack on French forces in the Lebanese capital also claimed the lives of 58 paratroopers.

On this date:

In 1910, Blanche S. Scott became the first woman to make a solo, public airplane flight, reaching an altitude of 12 feet as she sailed across a park in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Firm's business raises questions

WASHINGTON — One of America's largest oil field service companies may have sent oil drilling equipment to Libya and Iraq that could be used as nuclear trigger mechanisms.

Anderson

The Halliburton Co., based in Dallas, is under investigation by the U.S. Customs Service in connection with allegations by a former employee that it illegally shipped the devices to Libya. Even more troubling is that any shipments to Iraq were probably completely legal, done with export licenses from the Commerce Department.

A May 1990 Customs investigative report obtained by our associate Dean Boyd outlines the alleged Libyan connection as told to two Customs agents by a former Halliburton employee. According to the informant, from Christmas of 1989 to April 1990, Halliburton sent between 10 and 12 pulse neutron generators from Houston to its subsidiary in Italy and then on to Germany before they arrived at their final destination, Libya. They were labeled "valves" or "pressure gauges," the informant claims.

A pulse neutron generator acts as a source of high-energy neutrons and is typically used to conduct geological surveys in oil fields. But, according to the Customs report and several nuclear weapons experts, they can also be used to detonate a nuclear weapon. In miniaturized form, these devices are capable of emitting the perfectly timed bursts of neutrons required to detonate explosives around a core of highly enriched uranium.

During the period in which the informant claims Halliburton was sending pulse neutron generators to Libya without an export license, the Commerce Department was busily granting Halliburton licenses to send the same thing to Iraq legally. From October 1989 to July 1990, Halliburton got 11 U.S. export licenses to send $591,425 worth of "neutron generator systems" and millions of dollars in related computer equipment to Iraq.

Halliburton acknowledges that it had the export license for neutron generator systems, but company Vice President Guy Marcus told us, "no shipments or sales of these items have ever been made to anyone in Iraq." Marcus did not explain why the equipment was not sent after Halliburton got the export license.

According to public export records, in 1990, four ships left Houston with Halliburton supplies destined for Iraq. One ship carried 483,471 pounds of "geophysical surveying equipment." The records do not specify whether pulse neutron generators were included.

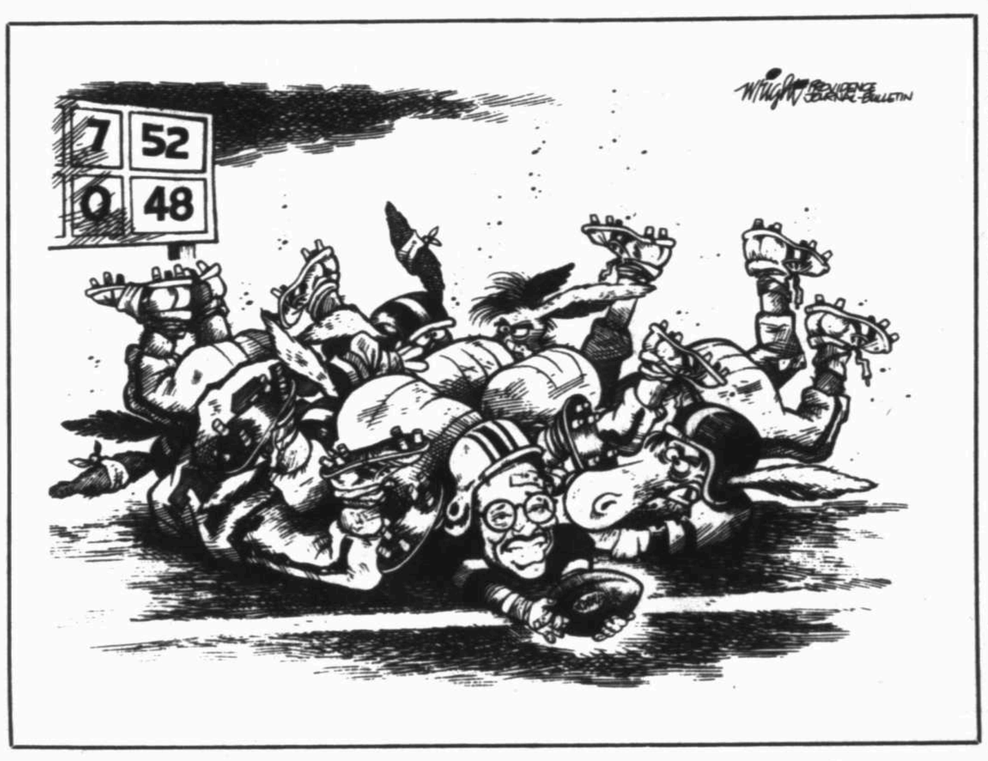

The majority of Halliburton's export licenses specified that their goods would go to the Arab Well Logging Co. of Iraq. We asked around the oil industry and could not find one Middle Eastern petroleum company official who had ever heard of Arab Well Logging. Nor had anyone in the Commerce Department with jurisdiction over exports to Iraq. And the company is not listed in any petroleum index.

That's because Arab Well Logging is not in the oil business at all, according to Kenneth R. Timmerman, author of the forthcoming book "The Death Lobby: How the West Armed Iraq." Timmerman told us that Arab Well Logging was a front company for Saddam Hussein to buy foreign components to build nuclear weapons. It is unclear whether Halliburton knew that.

The few secret records gathered by the U.N. inspection team from Iraq's Al Atheer nuclear plant show that Saddam had been forced to rely on other nuclear detonation devices. But they indicate his goal was to have a "future external initiator," which, according to U.N. officials, would use the pulse neutron generation technology.

Unless it can be proved that Halliburton knew its exports were going in weaponry in Iraq, the company has nothing to fear from U.S. authorities, since it had a valid export license. The Libyan issue is more serious. Halliburton's Marcus told us that the company never sold a neutron generator component to Libya. "While a Halliburton foreign affiliate engaged in providing oil field services in Libya has in the past had such equipment in its possession, no such equipment is in Libya today," Marcus said.

Plea bargaining slashes price of justice

Elliott Abrams, the former assistant secretary of state, who fought the battle for the super-hard liners in the Reagan administration, has just plea-bargained with the Justice Department. He admitted that he gave perjured testimony to Congress. This came as no surprise to Washington insiders as plea bargaining is now the second largest industry in the nation's capital.

Buchwald

Any Monday you can walk by the Justice Department on Pennsylvania Avenue and see hundreds of lawyers and clients waiting to make a deal with the government.

The other day I saw a large crowd in front of Justice trying to break down the doors.

"What's up?" I asked a man with a briefcase.

"It's plea-bargaining day at the Justice Department. Everyone is here to make a deal."

"The crowd seems unruly," I remarked.

"They're afraid that if they don't get in first, someone else will be chosen as a government witness."

"How does the Justice Department decide who it will and will not bargain with?"

"The rule is that the first one who offers to turn on the others gets consideration.

"Take the recent Fatfingers scandal when Fatfingers tried to sell nuclear submarines to Iran in exchange for Halcion tablets. I represent Dennis Mokie, one of the people who lied to Congress about it. When the bubble burst, Mokie came to me and offered me a third of all the money he had made if I could get him two months of community service. I asked him if he was willing to turn informer on his friends, and he said that he would consider it a great honor.

"I took the case and the money. You never can tell when white-collar criminals are going to cheat their lawyers. Now it's just a question of getting inside and seeing if the government will deal."

"Does plea bargaining pay better than a full trial?"

"It certainly does. When a white-collar criminal is caught he's terribly fearful of going to jail. Suddenly money doesn't seem as important as the thought of making license plates at the Atlanta Federal Prison. If you can make a decent plea bargain for him, he's eternally grateful. Dennis would give me the house, the swimming pool and the Porsche if I asked him to."

"I guess the plea negotiations depend on the prosecutors."

"It helps if you know Justice lawyers by their first names. I reduced one client down from a felony to a misdemeanor because the prosecutor's kids went to the same school as mine. But today I'm in line with everybody else."

"Presumably this time your client will be humble under oath as opposed to the way he sneered at Congress."

"You better believe it. We're going to say that Dennis never intended to lie. It was just a joke he was playing on Ollie North."

"Then your man is going to reveal names?"

"That's the idea, but this is taking longer than I thought. There are so many others waiting to plea bargain that they now give you a number like they do in the delicatessen. Dennis and I have been here since 7 o'clock this morning. It makes you mad to see the justice system move so slowly. I have a good mind to forget the plea bargain, and let the government throw the book at Mokie."

"I don't blame you. It would certainly teach the Justice Department a lesson."

Midland does not need new airport

I can't believe that our city council is planning to build a new airport. First of all it isn't needed. If Midland needed an airport that would serve the needs of the people, all it has to do is cut the existing terminal in half. To invest the level of money for such an unneeded facility is without warrant. The argument that it is not going to cost the taxpayers very much money should be grouped with those other tax saving projects that we just had to raise taxes for.

I do believe that for Midland to go forward it has to invest in itself. But let's build on what we already have. To build a new facility on the east side of the runways is ludicrous. Has anyone considered the cost for new roads, parking, landscaping or accessibility to services? Midland will need a new facility when it can fully use the four boarding gates that it presently has or when it can use all "four toll gates in our parking lot." We haven't even used two of them, they're brand new. We can expand airport services for a very nominal fee when the time comes by extending the upper course to the north or south and simply adding new gates. Sounds pretty simple and frugal doesn't it?

How about if we forget the airport replacement or expansion until the time comes that it is in need and instead build a monumental monument and put Carroll Thomas's name on it? That would save Midland taxpayers a great deal of money and satisfy Thomas at the same time.

What ever happened to sound management?

Bivins' voting tally favors Democrats

We in Midland County have, by our last legislature in Austin, which is chiefly celebrated for its multibillion-dollar increase in tax levies and spending, been placed in the state senatorial district with most of the Texas Panhandle counties. That district is currently represented by freshman republican Teel Bivins of Amarillo.

Sen. Bivins is descended from an old and noted Panhandle family. The senator is already coming to Midland to seek our support for his re-election to what appears to be "a safe Republican" district.

The trouble I have with his appeal is that he voted with Bob Bullock and the Democrat majority on the education bill, the tax bill and the appropriations bill while the Democrats voted a redistricting plan calculated to perpetuate Sen. Bivins, along with a preponderant majority of Democrats in office. I urge you to be cautious in commiting yourself to support such a man for re-election in the Republican primary.

If the courts leave the district the way it is now drawn, I intend to ask your help in retiring Sen. Bivins while sending to Austin a Republican whose word against higher taxes and spending is trustworthy!

Job-training program goes along with bias, GAO says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some government job-training officials are going along with employer demands for applicants of a certain race or sex — whites only, or males, or "anyone but an Oriental" — in violation of federal law, congressional investigators charge.

Officials of the Job Training Partnership Program "told us some of these employers were very blunt about their racial and gender preferences," the General Accounting office said in a report obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press.

The report quoted a program official as saying, "That's how to get the employers to come back and hire from you ... give them what they want."

One official described an unwillingness to eliminate employers from the program "just because they are a little racist," the GAO said.

The job training funds are distributed to states and local areas using a formula based on the number of unemployed and economically disadvantaged people. The GAO did not identify any individuals, but its investigation took place primarily at the local level where local officials work with private industry in providing on-the-job training as well as classroom instruction and assistance in searching for jobs.

The report said discriminatory practices such as those it described would violate federal civil rights law. Nonetheless, the Labor Department's civil rights office has done little about it, the GAO said.

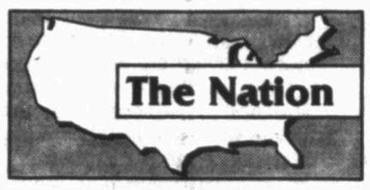

Robert T. Jones, assistant secretary of labor for employment and training, said the department is reviewing each state's affirmative action policies and performance and "is committed to vigorously investigating and resolving each and every complaint of discrimination that is filed."

Jones added that the department's reviews of the program "do not support some of the GAO conclusions. Women and minorities are not necessarily disadvantaged because of the types of service they receive."

Questions mount as fires subside

OAKLAND, Calif. (NYT) — As the toll of death and damage from the devastating East Bay fire mounted on Tuesday, so did questions about whether the Oakland Fire Department moved too slowly, about why water pressure failed and whether California should allow further urban sprawl into uninhabited woodland.

The Alameda County Office of Emergency Services raised the death toll by 2, bringing to 16 the number of bodies found in the scorched rubble of what were once fashionable neighborhoods in the hills above Oakland and Berkeley. Many people are still missing, however, and the count is almost certain to rise.

And as firefighters continued to douse hot spots on Tuesday, rescue workers painted a calamitous picture of property loss far beyond original estimates. After a walking tour that covered just 55 percent of the 1,700 acres the were burned, the American Red Cross reported that 1,800 individual houses and 442 apartment units were destroyed and 150 damaged in the blaze, which roared through the heavily wooded hills Sunday morning.

The fire was the worst of its type in California history. In 1906 a major eartshquake struck San Francisco, killing 6,000 people and touching numerous fires that did more damage to buildings than the earthquake itself.

On Tuesday afternoon President Bush approved federal disaster aid, making residents of the stricken area eligible for low-interest loans and other benefits.

Many residents and some elected officials asked Tuesday if the devastation was necessary.

Governor's runoff prompts residents to register to vote

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Thousands of people waited in long lines Tuesday on the final day to register to vote in the gubernatorial runoff between ex-Klansman David Duke and former Gov. Edwin W. Edwards.

Black churches sent busloads of people to register, one official said.

"We've never seen anything like it. Everyone wants to be able to vote in this election," said the state elections commissioner, Jerry Fowler.

Many people registering Monday and Tuesday said they came because they wanted to vote for or against Duke, a Republican state representative and former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard. Duke and Edwards, a Democrat, were the top two finishers in a primary Saturday and will meet in the Nov. 16 runoff.

In Baton Rouge, where 1,600 people registered Monday, upwards of 4,000 lined up Tuesday, registrar Elaine Lamb said.

House approves crime bill

WASHINGTON (NYT)— The House approved a comprehensive, $1.1 billion crime bill Tuesday that expands the death penalty to more than 50 federal crimes, limits death row appeals, and creates a savings and loan criminal investigation unit in the Justice Department.

The bill, approved on a vote of 305-118, also prohibits death row inmates to appeal their sentences based on statistical evidence of racial discrimination.

The House bill differs substantially from a Senate crime package passed in July. For example, the Senate bill includes a ban on the sale of 13 semiautomatic weapons. A conference committee is expected to work out a compromise version this winter.

In the third and final day of debate, the lawmakers voted 223-191 to delete a section of the bill called the "Fairness in Sentencing Act." That would have allowed death row inmates to challenge their convictions and sentences based on locally disproportionate racial statistics.

Fifty-eight percent of the nation's 2,356 death row inmates are in the South, and Southerners voted 2-to-1 against the provision.

The House also rejected an amendment giving death row inmates convicted before 1986 one year to challenge their sentence on grounds that the prosecutor "intentionally" disqualified black jurors in a racially biased manner. A 1986 Supreme Court ruling permits current defendants to make the same appeal.

In defeating the death sentence provision, House members adopted an amendment from Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., that prohibits statistical arguments about discrimination.

Juries would be instructed not to allow the race of the defendant to influence them when sentencing someone to death.

However, Rep. Craig A. Washington, D-Texas, said today's system "amounts to legal lynching — when in the dark of night, the state puts a black man to death for a crime that a white man would not die for."

Since the death penalty was reinstituted in 1977, 144 people have been executed. Only one was a white man convicted of killing a black.

Advocates of the provision cited recent national study that concluded prosecutors in Columbus, Ga., are six times more likely to seek the death penalty in cases where the victim is white.

Bush knew about activities, North says

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Oliver L. North said Tuesday that he believed that as vice president, George Bush was aware of the broad outline of North's activities in Central America during the Iran-Contra affair.

But North said he could provide few new details about Bush's knowledge.

In an interview with news organizations, North also said he was unable to clarify unanswered questions concerning the scandal about other Reagan administraton officials, including Robert M. Gates and Donald P. Gregg.

Gates, who was deputy director of central intelligence in 1986, is now Bush's nominee to be director, and Gregg, who was national security adviser to the vice president, is now ambassador to South Korea.

North spoke with reporters for nearly two hours in an interview given to promote his just-published book about the affair, "Under Fire: An American Story."

Oliver L. North

North, who as an aide to the National Security Council, was a central figure in the covert arms sales to Iran and in the secret efforts to arm the Contras, the Nicaraguan rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government, once again depicted himself as a scapegoat who had been "thrown over the side" by senior Reagan administration officials seeking to protect themselves from political embarrassment and possible legal jeopardy.

But he described the roles played by other officials in vague and careful terms. Of Bush, he said: "I bet I prepared, to put it modestly, a couple of hundred thousand pages of memoranda that went up my chain of command and in many case went laterally to the vice president's office. The vice president sat in on various meetings, but George Bush was not in my chain of command. He was not one of the people I was told to talk to or brief."

Nevertheless, North said he believed that Bush had known in general of the activities in Central America. "I don't believe anybody ever said that he wasn't aware of at least a good measure of what was going on," said North. He added, "I don't regard the vice president's knowledge of the situation in Central America to be something that's novel."

North said he had no details that would contradict Bush.

Soviets send Bush request for aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush received a 300-page Soviet request for emergency food aid Tuesday and declared "nobody is going to starve" during the harsh Russian winter. But the president said he has made no decisions on how much help the United States would provide.

The aid request is likely to be high on the agenda when Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev meet in Spain next week.

Agriculture Secretary Ed Madigan delivered the Soviet request to the White House. Madigan led a U.S. delegation that spent nine days in the Soviet Union studying emergency food needs.

"The United States has always been open for humanitarian support, for humanitarian needs," Bush said at the start of his meeting with the agriculture secretary.

Asked how quickly he would act, the president said he would "do it in a reasonable, prudent way, to take whatever time is required to be sure what you're doing makes sense. ... I can't give you an exact time frame as when we will have a plan."

Soviet officials have appealed repeatedly for food assistance and have called it essential to the success of political and economic reforms.

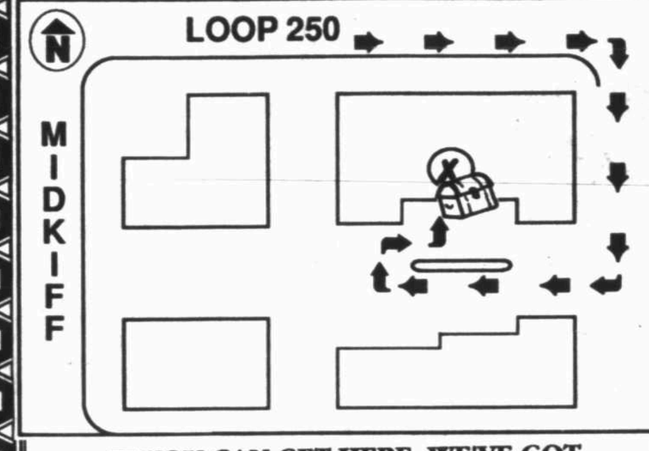

"We need help and assistance from the United States as a country in order to survive the winter and to solve all the problems concerning the transition," Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin said when he was in New York late last month for the opening of the U.N. General Assembly.

But U.S. officials and other experts are concerned about whether massive shipments of food would ever reach the Soviet people. There also are major differences on what sort of aid would be most effective.

Bush and Gorbachev will meet next week in Madrid before the opening of the Middle East peace conference. All indications are that humanitarian assistance will be a major topic on their agenda.

"Nobody is going to starve, and people are not going to be adversely affected in their health for lack of medicine," Bush said.

New schools open bid for cluster balancing

■ MISD will hold a series of community meetings to address issues that include redrawing the boundaries for elementary and junior high schools.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Is the cluster system in Midland public schools working?

How can the minority and majority populations be balanced at the junior high schools?

What will happen to junior high school and elementary school boundaries when the new Barney Greathouse Elementary and Abell-Hanger Junior High schools are built?

These are just a few of the questions which may be addressed in a series of community meetings hosted by Midland Independent School District in coming months.

Midland trustees approved a schedule of the meetings in Tuesday night's school board meeting.

One meeting will be held in each one of MISD's seven districts.

Likely topics for discussion will include redrawing the boundaries for elementary schools and junior high schools, according to MISD spokesperson Ted Miller.

Larry Lusby, MISD executive of computer services, presented an ethnicity report which indicated that Goddard Junior High School's enrollment was almost 67 percent Anglo, while San Jacinto Junior High School was 57 percent Anglo and Alamo Junior High School was 54 percent Anglo.

Goddard had the smallest Hispanic population — 17 percent — among the junior high schools, compared to Alamo's nearly 55 percent and San Jacinto's 36 percent Hispanic enrollment.

With the addition of the fourth junior high school, MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. suggested board members "seize the opportunity to make all the junior high schools equal" in ethnic breakdowns.

Goddard had the highest black population — almost 14 percent — compared to Alamo's nearly 7 percent and San Jacinto's 5 percent black populations.

With the addition of the fourth junior high school, MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. suggested board members "seize the opportunity to make all the junior high schools equal" in ethnic breakdowns.

Lusby also noted that board members could "look at balancing the clusters."

"There are still some schools with a vast majority of Anglos — in schools in West and North Midland," he said.

While Lamar, Burnet and Bonham elementary schools were fairly balanced, school administrators noted that both Burnet and Bonham drew Hispanics since both schools serve as bilingual centers.

Miller said board members will develop an outline of issues which will impact the school district in the next two years. The outline may suggest topics for discussion at the community meetings.

All community meetings will begin at 7 p.m. at the following elementary schools:

- NOV. 14 — Parker in District 7.
- NOV. 19 — Bush in District 6.
- DEC. 5 — Emerson in District 5.
- JAN. 9 — Washington in District 1.
- JAN. 13 — Bonham in District 3.
- JAN. 16 — Crockett in District 2.
- JAN. 23 — Bowie in District 4.

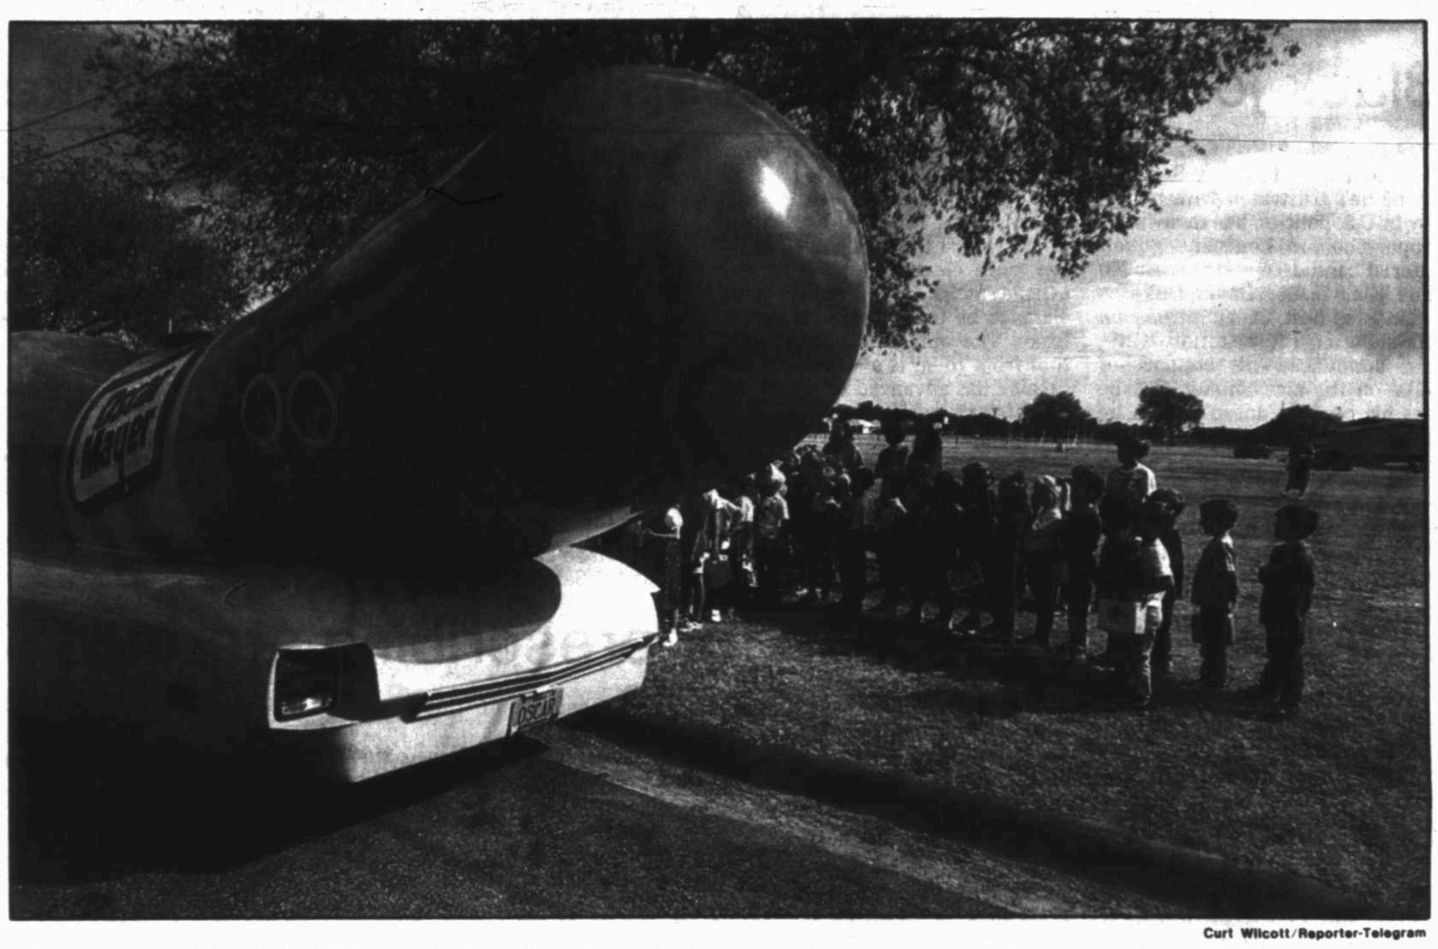

In other action, trustees approved plat improvement bids for the Alternative High School and Greathouse Elementary School.

The board rejected a construction bid for the additions to Fannin, Pease and Washington elementary schools — which came in more than $536,000 over budget.

Trustees requested more bids be pursued prior to the Nov. 12 board meeting.

Hotdoggers relish their roles

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

People are always asking Khaki Dumbaugh and Armando Escobedo if they sell hot dogs — seeing as they drive a 23-foot long one.

Well, they don't sell frankfurters but they still draw a crowd — especially youngsters.

"It's a blast. The smiles and waves I get from children is heartwarming," Ms. Dumbaugh said in Midland Tuesday.

"It's inexplicable the effect it has on children," Escobedo said.

"Their eyes go from the size of a pea to the size of a half-dollar," Ms. Dumbaugh said.

Ms. Dumbaugh, 22, of Louisville, Ky., and Escobedo, 27, of San Antonio, are among 13 "hotdoggers" who spend a year — beginning in June — driving an Oscar Mayer Wienermobile.

"This is a life experience. It just can't be beat," Escobedo said.

Escobedo and Ms. Dumbaugh drive their giant hot dog and bun between Pensacola, Fla. and El Paso, and as far north as St. Louis, Mo.

'It has been a great experience — the perfect job the first year out of college.'

— D'Lane Runkles

On Tuesday they toured Midland, with stops that included a local retailer and Fannin Elementary School.

"I'm kinda surprised," said Linda Runkles as she stood by the giant wiener parked outside her place of employment.

"One of the girls (at the business) said, 'Linda there's a hot dog in the yard,' " Ms. Runkles said.

It was the first time she had seen a wienermobile. Her daughter, D'Lane Runkles, drives one in the northeast region of the country.

When Wayne Runkles first heard his daughter was going to drive a frankfurter, he was somewhat taken aback.

"Oh, I thought this is a bunch of foolishness. But as we began to learn about it we got real excited," Runkles said.

Miss Runkles, 23, expressed her excitement during a telephone interview from Syracuse, N.Y., on Tuesday.

"Oh, I love it. I relish it," she said.

"It's like being in a parade every day," Miss Runkles added.

"It has been a great experience — the perfect job the first year out of college," she said.

One memorable experience so far was being "caught in a major traffic jam in Manhattan, New York," she said.

Ms. Dumbaugh and Escobedo recalled some rewarding and memorable times as "hotdoggers," that included taking nine deaf children in Houston for a ride; chauffeuring a bride and groom to the Houston airport with a "Just Linked" sign draped across the vehicle, and having a man in Mobile, Ala., laugh so hard that his false teeth fell out into the radiator grill, never to be found.

The 23-foot long wienermobiles are 10 feet high, eight feet wide and weigh 5,800 pounds. They, six in all, are constructed of fiberglass and are powered by converted 1988 Chevrolet vans.

The hot dog on wheels first began in 1936 with a 13-foot metal wiener. Since then several different models have hit the streets.

And although they don't sell hot dogs from the vehicles, the giant frankfurters have steam vents that release the aroma of freshly grilled hot dogs to entice viewers.

New law prompts surge of license plate thefts

■ Victims of stolen license plates and renewal stickers blame a new state law.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

The recent enactment of a new state law requiring proof of liability insurance to register a car has caused a surge of stolen license plates and license renewal stickers throughout the state, according to authorities.

But Jo Elliott, lead title clerk at the Midland County Tax office, reports only a slight increase in issuance of replacement plates and stickers in Midland since the law took effect on Sept. 1.

Gayla Herring, a title clerk at the office, has noticed several customers blaming the theft of their plates on the new law.

"One guy flat out said, 'I'm a victim of this new law.' They aren't pleased," Ms. Herring said.

Between Jan. 1 and Oct. 11, the tax office has issued 1,450 replacement plates and stickers. Midland County Tax Assessor Frances Shuffield is unsure exactly how many of these replacements resulted from theft, but she doubts there has been an increase since Sept. 1.

The Midland Police Department did not have statistics immediately available on the number of reported license plate or sticker thefts since Sept. 1, but officials don't believe there has been a significant change.

But in the larger cities statewide, the thefts are becoming a big problem.

In Austin, police received 339 calls reporting stolen plates or stickers between Sept. 1 and Oct. 15, 60 more than during the same period last year.

"The first couple of months after you renew your sticker is when you really have to watch it," said Sgt. Ronnie Boatright of the police department's auto theft unit.

Boatright said this enables thieves to get a whole year's use from the stolen sticker.

One man reported his plates were stolen so many times, he takes his rear one inside at night.

Ms. Shuffield thinks stealing plates and stickers is a no-win situation for thieves.

"I think it would cause more problems for them," said Ms. Shuffield. "If they don't get stopped by the police they may be all right, but if they commit any sort of traffic violation everything would be out of sync."

Ms. Shuffield said plates with several stickers accumulated are easy targets.

"They can just pop them out and super-glue them on another when they start piling up," she said.

At the Dallas County tax office, officials say they are currently processing more replacements than normal registrations.

Dolores Colvin, assistant supervisor of registration in Dallas, attributes the missing plates to the new insurance law. Since 1981, Texas law has required that motorists carry liability insurance. But the only time they had to provide proof of coverage was when they were stopped by law enforcement officers.

Under the new law, motorists also must show proof of insurance when renewing their driver's licenses or getting their cars safety inspection.

"We have had to turn several people away who couldn't show proof of insurance," she said. "And they're having to do something else."

In El Paso county, license plate theft was a problem even before the new insurance law, officials said.

"We always have a lot of replacements because of stolen plates in El Paso County. Last year, we had 26,000," said Phyllis Rose, chief deputy tax assessor.

The cost for replacing a stolen sticker or license plate is $5.30. The price of a renewal sticker, ranging from $50.80 to $60.80, is dependent on the age of the vehicle.

Attorney warns women of silicone implant risks

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

Although the U.S. Food & Drug Administration may place new restrictions on the use of silicone breast implants as early as January, a Houston attorney wants to fully educate women right now of the possible risks involved with implant surgery.

Hill

Traditionally, breast implants have been seen as a "no-risk" procedure, said Pat Hill, a former state representative, whose firm currently represents several plaintiffs seeking damages from implant manufacturers.

But 30 years' experience with the devices have proven that there are several potential problems that women should consider before having implant surgery, she said. In addition to the direct medical hazard of leaking or ruptured silicone, implant replacement is often necessary and can be complicated by scar tissue around the implant.

However, just as disturbing to Ms. Hill, is the fact that implants make detection of breast cancer through mammography much more difficult. When she was a state legislator, Ms. Hill was instrumental in Texas' passage of the nation's first law requiring insurance companies to pay for an annual mammogram for women over 35.

Medical experts continue to debate whether silicone-filled implants have any role in causing cancer, but Ms. Hill says the greater threat may be in masking the presence of tumors and impeding early detection.

One in nine American women will be diagnosed with breast cancer, according to the American Cancer Society. The number of women with breast implants is estimated to be between 2 million and 3 million, with 80 percent of implant surgeries being elective for purely cosmetic reasons.

Leaking or ruptured implants often lead to autoimmune reactions of the body to silicone, which can include fatigue, hair loss, sun sensitivity and joint stiffness. Similar reactions to the silicon-shell of the implant have been seen in some women whose implants did not leak.

One recent study at the University of Illinois showed that two-thirds of 51 removed implants had leaked some silicone, and that older implants were more likely to leak.

Additionally, discomfort associated with the hardening of scar tissue around implants is a leading cause of removal.

Among the 19 warnings currently listed on the package insert of breast implants is that the device "is not to be considered permanent."

Chances are they will have to be replaced at some point, Ms. Hill said. "Women need to know that implant surgery is not a one-time operation."

Ms. Hill was critical of implant manufacturers, who she said were often less than forthcoming in informing surgeons of what dangers

Employment report shows no significant changes

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's employment picture was in a freeze frame in September, reporting no significant change, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

The Tall City's unemployment rate slipped to 5.4 percent from 5.7 percent in August, and was below the 5.7 percent recorded in September 1990.

Odessa's unemployment rate remained at 6.8 percent for the month.

In Midland, the civilian labor force shrank by 500, due to several large layoffs, employment officials said, putting the labor pool at 48,200 for September, down from 48,700 in August. The labor force in September 1990 was 47,700.

Total employment declined by 300 to 45,600 last month, but still stood above the 45,000 recorded a year ago.

That put total unemployment 200 lower than in August — to 2,600 from 2,800; unemployment was 2,700 a year ago.

Meris Kidd, manager of the Midland TEC office, said figures indicated 300 Midlanders — those of the 500 who left the labor force and did not find jobs — either left town, ceased looking for a job or returned to school.

"Basically, Midland stayed the same," said Ms. Kidd, who added that "The whole state stayed basically the same. The rate rose in September aside from seasonal fluctuations, (but) the state economy has remained constant over the past few months."

Among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked sixth, tied with Lubbock. Odessa ranked 20th and El Paso, at 10.2 percent, ranked 25th.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest rate in the state with 3.6 percent, followed by Austin at 4.7 percent, Amarillo at 4.8 percent, and Victoria at 4.9 percent.

McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the highest rate in the state at 16.1 percent.

The state unemployment rate was 6.4 percent in September, compared with 6.3 percent the previous month, the TEC said.

About 546,600 Texans were unemployed in September, compared to 540,700 in August.

Woman finds purloined battleship logbook

Carole Allen and her dad, J.C. Allen hold the 1945 log from the Battleship Texas. Allen's date lifted the book from the historic ship during a 1955 date.

HOUSTON (AP) — Battleship Texas curators have said they will welcome the return of a ship's logbook purloined by a teen-ager on a long-ago date.

Carole Allen, 52, on Monday found the stolen 1945 book, lifted by her date from Bellaire High School while the couple was visiting the battleship.

"It was probably back in 1955, but to tell the truth, I have no recollection," she told The Houston Post. "It's my dad who jogged my memory."

J.C. Allen, an 83-year-old former Navy man, reminded his daughter about the long-ago date.

Ms. Allen, now a jewelry maker in Santa Fe, N.M., wants to give the logbook back to Battleship Texas officials.

"There were 1,800 men on the ship, and dozens of logbooks being kept at any one time," ship curator Margarita Marderes said. But of all those, curators have only about 20 as artifacts.

The logbook — a black, clothbound 6-inch by 12-inch daily diary of ship's events in the spring of 1945, apparently recorded by the quartermaster — wound up with Ms. Allen when her light-fingered date left it with her.

The book's entries reflect the daily business of war in the Pacific campaign. One entry says the ship helped recover downed U.S. aircraft. Another says simply, "Steaming north of Iwo Jima." Others note enemy aircraft raids and aircraft shot down.

The logbook — a black, clothbound 6-inch by 12-inch daily diary of ship's events in the spring of 1945, apparently recorded by the quartermaster — wound up with Ms. Allen when her light-fingered date left it with her.

"I only found it today while I was helping move my dad out of our house in Bellaire," Ms. Allen said. "I guess I got scared and didn't want to be involved. I must have put it in a box and forgotten about it."

She said the thief, now a successful Houston businessman, will remain anonymous.

"I'm sure he'd never done anything like this in his life before. He got scared and left it here. And I was scared, too," she said.

Black journalist announces support of David Duke

DALLAS (AP) — Outspoken black journalist Bob Ray Sanders, saying he's frustrated with hypocrisy in U.S. politics, has thrown his support behind Louisiana gubernatorial candidate and former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke.

Sanders, host of an afternoon talk show on radio station KLIF, first announced his support of Duke on the air Monday. But he says his position doesn't mean he agrees with Duke's views.

"Basically, I am so tired of hypocrisy in American politics," Sanders said Tuesday. "David Duke appears to be the least hypocritical of those running for governor of Louisiana. I don't pretend to like what he stands for.

"I want to make it clear to my listeners that this is not an April Fool's joke. I think it will help us see more clearly the closely disguised attitudes of those who claim to be the opposite of David Duke. The only thing separating him from them is a white sheet."

Duke has advanced to a Nov. 16 runoff for Louisiana governor. He ran second to former Gov. Edwin Edwards in Saturday's open primary, forcing out Republican incumbent Buddy Roemer. GOP leaders nationwide have rejected Duke as a member of the party.

Sanders said he has received a deluge of calls at his Fort Worth home since he announced his support of Duke, including one angry call at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday.

"A couple of them understand my point of view," he said. "One was from New York. He was shocked."

Reactions were mixed from callers on Sanders' show Tuesday. One man, who said he is a registered voter in Louisiana, said he also supports Duke and will vote for him.

"All he does is say what he thinks," the caller said.

One woman called Duke a racist and urged Sanders to change his opinion.

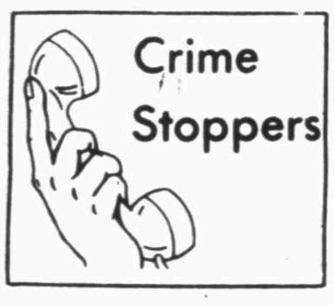

"I think you've got a lot to think about," she said.

Duke says his current agenda — an end to welfare abuse, tough treatment of criminals, no minority set-aside programs and no tax increases — represented the views of most Republican voters.

Sanders agreed, comparing Duke to President Bush.

"Duke is articulating in many aspects ... exactly what the President is articulating," Sanders said. "Perhaps the only difference is that at one time David Duke wore a sheet. At least I know David Duke."

Druggist loses license for prescribing steroids

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin druggist lost his license for a month and was placed on probation for a year for filling forged prescriptions for anabolic steroids, according to official documents released Tuesday.

Walter Leamons of M.D. Pharmacy received a 30-day license suspension and a one-year probation, the Texas State Board of Pharmacy announced. Leamons said Tuesday he had retired.

The board announced the sanctions after a six-month investigation prompted by a series of reports last spring by the Austin American-Statesman.

The investigation concluded that Leamons dispensed seven steroid prescriptions forged with the name of an orthopedist in Duncanville and one forgery bearing the name of an Austin internist.

The Board also fined two M.D. Pharmacies $3,400 after finding that employees filled 16 forged prescriptions bearing the names of five different doctors between September 1989 and January 1991.

Three current or former pharmacists with M.D. were reprimanded with punishments ranging from small fines to forced participation in continuing education classes, according to documents.

Last week the state board and the pharmacists involved agreed to the sanctions. In doing so, the pharmacists did not admit guilt or innocence.

"What I did is no different from what any other pharmacist in this town would have done if somebody checked their records," said Eugene Volcik, who was fined $300. "I filled one forgery and one that was legitimate. There's no telling how many (forged prescriptions) I've turned down or refused to fill, not necessarily for steroids. We just don't keep a record of those," he told the newspaper.

The American-Statesman quoted Austin weightlifter Tim Bruner as saying he bought four forged steroid prescriptions a year ago through a broker near a University of Texas athletic dormitory.

Bruner said the salesman was a former Texas football player who said he got the forgeries from two present members of the Longhorns team.

A number of other forged steroid prescriptions came to light earlier this year.

Brent Beauchamp, a reserve Texas quarterback, was arrested after filling a prescription in Austin. He faces a Nov. 15 pretrial hearing.

Midland, Ector counties to receive satellite equipment

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Midland and Ector county school districts are among about 250 districts that will get state-funded satellite receiving equipment to provide access to television courses next year, an education official has announced.

The equipment also will be installed in each of the state's 20 Regional Education Service Centers, including the Region 18 ESC in Midland.

Installation will begin in November, with completion scheduled for May at a cost of about $1.8 million, said Gary Haseloff, director of the T-STAR program at the Texas Education Agency.

Each of the 1,052 state-supported school districts will receive at least one satellite receiver over the next five years in a $10 million program. An additional 400 sites will be chosen in 1993 and 400 more in 1994.

With the help of private businesses, the state hopes to place more satellites on many of the 8,000 individual school campuses.

Haseloff said schools selected for the first phase are mostly poor or small or have lower student test scores.

Televison courses offered for credit from nationwide instructional services will include foreign languages, English, math and science. Programs also will offer staff training and development for teachers.

Two-way communication will be possible between students and on-screen teachers.

Haseloff said the courses will be helpful for schools that cannot find a teacher for a particular subject or that cannot afford a teacher for a class with only a few students.

The receivers are only part of the expansion of state telecommunication capabilities that will include academic program support and library and administrative services, Haseloff said. The T-STAR program will begin operation in early 1992 to deliver limited state-provided programming to schools.

The award for the initial installations was made to United Satellite Systems of St. Hilaire, Minn.

Pinkie's generosity took in the community

EDITOR'S NOTE: He was a gambler and a bootlegger and as crafty and cunning as a West Texas coyote. The late Tom "Pinkie" Roden was also a widely admired civic and political activist who wove his unique magic behind the scenes. As both a legal and illegal whiskey merchant, he cast a long shadow over the lives of many Texans. Maybe longer than even he knew. Part four of a five-part series examining Pinkie's life.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

ODESSA — Several years after Pinkie Roden's arrival in Odessa, he and some friends stopped by one night at a popular bar called the Melody Club.

The waitress that evening was a perky dark-haired divorcee whose turbulent past could rival even Pinkie's.

"There he was, this big, freckle-faced guy, a real sweetheart and probably the nicest human being I ever met," Jane Roden would wistfully recall. "I felt like I fell in love with Pinkie the first time I met him.

"He was nice and polite and such a gentleman, and he left a big tip."

Pinkie became her friend and confidant and, in 1970, despite an age difference of 28 years, her third husband.

Among his first acts was to adopt Jane's daughter Cynthia, then 14. Cynthia now has a 5-year-old son, Pinkie's namesake.

AN ODESSA travel agent, Cynthia says Pinkie was the "only father I ever had," and a great one at that. "He was so generous, supportive and encouraging. ... He spoiled me."

Pinkie was Cynthia's campaign manager in a junior high school election and threw two parties on her behalf, but nothing to rival the victory gala when she won.

"He loved politics," she observed.

More than ever, Pinkie's generosity spilled over into community projects, and he became an active supporter of local oil shows, Chamber of Commerce projects, stock shows and rodeos.

He was even a patron of the Globe Theater, a showcase for Shakespearean productions, perhaps a bit out of character for Pinkie, if not West Texas.

He pushed for expansion of the hospital and establishment of the Texas Tech Regional Academic Health Center in Odessa. And he put his time and money into the Odessa 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America, the Boy Scouts and the Boys Club of Odessa.

Although a high school dropout, Pinkie's biggest civic coup probably was his deft guidance of the campaign that secured the University of Texas of the Permian Basin for Odessa.

"HE WORKED long and hard and called in a lot of favors to get UTPB," says Frank Deaderick, Pinkie's nephew and executor of his estate.

Gene Garrison and other friends tell of a critical meeting with then Gov. Preston Smith, who looked around the room at the Odessa delegation and said pointedly: "The only one of you I recognize from my campaign is Pinkie Roden."

Pinkie bought a ranch near Balmorhea in the Davis Mountains southwest of Odessa and used it to entertain his political cronies on hunting excursions.

"I think," joked Jane Roden, "the only reason Pinkie married me was because I could guide his prima donna politicians around the ranch and gut his deer."

But Pinkie loved those sorties, and anything else political.

"Pinkie lived and breathed politics," said Beverly Tarpley, his Abilene lawyer, and she considered him a master of the game.

"He refused to make an enemy. That's what it amounts to."

* * *

All who knew Pinkie well say he made only one really bad investment, but it was a dilly.

In 1967, he and some minority investors purchased the old Lincoln Hotel, which was not exactly an Odessa landmark.

"He didn't go broke over the hotel but he got bent awful bad," says one old friend.

"It was an albatross from the beginning," grumped brother Ted Roden, whose keen business sense did not always coincide with Pinkie's civic benevolence.

Hellbent on turning his lemon into lemonade, Pinkie and his pals gave the hotel a $1 million face lift, changed the name to the Inn of the Golden West and opened a plush penthouse club called the Golden Rooster.

The Rooster, as it was known to the regulars, provided the best food, music, drinks and overall entertainment in town, if not all of West Texas.

"BEFORE LIQUOR by the drink, the Golden Rooster was the premier club in this state," insists Gene Garrison. "This was especially true when the seventh floor was operative.

"There was no reason to go to Las Vegas. It was all right here."

Often there would be dining and dancing to different bands on either end of the Rooster, and sprinkled among the city's movers, shakers, hustlers and hookers were Pinkie's Austin buddies.

Probably as much by choice as necessity, Pinkie did a great deal of drinking, but friends said it was never a problem.

"He was good at it," said Bill Cox of Abilene, who managed Pinkie's public relations when the occasion arose. "He could handle it."

Cox said Pinkie never once questioned him about his expense accounts, "and I had some dandies, especially when 10 or 20 of the guys would come in from Austin."

Old friends said Pinkie had a volatile temper, but few ever saw it.

AP Laserphoto

Tom "Pinkie" Roden and his wife, Jane, were married Aug. 22, 1970. She was 31 and he was 58. She said she came to know him better than anyone and "loved him fiercely."

"He knew the kind of business we were in," Cox said. "He knew he had to do some things he might not want to do."

Occasionally, on Pinkie's behalf, Cox would host cocktail parties at sheriffs' conventions, laughing at the stories of how they chased but rarely caught Pinkie and his boys.

* * *

Pinkie Roden was a gambler at heart and in practice, not surprising for one who spent a lifetime playing fast and loose with the law. And again, Odessa was his kind of town.

"In Odessa, gambling never was really considered a crime," says Ken Broadnax, editorial page editor and a longtime columnist at the Odessa American.

"It still isn't," he added.

Pinkie routinely dispatched Bill Cox to entertain golfers and writers in town for the annual Odessa Pro-Am, a golf tournament like none other, in part because it featured illegal but open parimutuel gambling.

The event attracted big name pros and the state's top amateurs, but it mostly was a weeklong party under the guise of golf.

A perennial celebrity guest was singer-actor Dean Martin, who showed up one year with starlet Inger Stevens as a playmate, which caused a mild sensation.

"Pinkie backed it one year and lost money," Cox remembered. "He made up the losses and saw that they came out with some money. He wouldn't let people say Pinkie Roden didn't treat them right."

Perhaps Cox's most unusual duty was guiding Texas Rangers on periodic raiding parties at the Inn of the Golden West, generally amusing events designed to expose and close Pinkie's gambling casino.

The seventh floor Las Vegas-style gambling was not to be confused with the bookmaking service operating in a secret room off the Rooster Club.

"NOT ON today's scale, but Pinkie had a lot of gambling action back then," his friend James Leggett said. "He was a great handicapper on high school football before the professionals took over."

One night the Rangers showed up and demanded to see every room in the hotel. Pinkie said fine, and he and Cox led separate raiding parties on a floor-by-floor search.

"They went in every nook and corner, even the basement," Cox recalled with a smile. "They didn't find a deck of cards. They didn't find anything. Hell, there wasn't anything.

"At that time," he added.

On one occasion, someone asked Pinkie why he needed 32 telephones in a single large room on the eighth floor.

"We get lots of calls here," he replied.

Jim Lehrer of the Public Broadcasting System's MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour remembers reporting on Pinkie's activities in the Seventies and the raids on his gambling den.

"Once we spent two or three days in Odessa trying to get Pinkie to talk with us but he never would," said Lehrer, then a reporter for the Dallas Times Herald.

"I WROTE stories about him, but those stories were kind of vague."

Retired Ranger John Woods, who spent 17 years in the area, remembers Pinkie as a "bighearted fellow" but also an elusive target.

"I understood he had some gambling going on in the old Lincoln Hotel," Woods said. "We made a few trips up there but we never could catch him."

Local authorities were somewhat less vigilant. As Ector County's top cop at the time, Slim Gabriel, now retired, explained: "I wasn't a very good sheriff, but I was a wise one. If I'd arrested Pinkie, the oil show people and the Chamber of Commerce would have run me out of town."

Grand jurors looking into the seventh floor activity once called Gabriel to testify, he said, and he told them there wasn't much he could do to help.

"You mean, Slim, that you didn't know there's gambling up there?" he was asked.

"I've never been up there," he replied.

"I didn't need to raid him," Slim now says. "I could have stopped him with a nickel phone call."

Deer population on the rebound, experts say

GONZALES (AP) — Three years of a small deer population has troubled hunters and wildlife enthusiasts in this part of Texas, but they say plenty of rain recently means deer reproduction should be on the rebound.

"Our deer population has declined, but we look for it to come back," said Wayne Spahn, an avid hunter and owner of Javelina Gun Shop in Gonzales. "Mother Nature will take care of us.".

Drought is the major culprit, although property owners bulldozing woody land and replanting it with coastal grasses also contributes to a smaller number of whitetail deer, say wildlife experts.

A lack of trees and tall grasses eliminates food sources and removes cover for deer, particularly during the crucial fawning months of May and June, making young deer easier prey for coyotes.

"Your deer populations are dependent on habitat. As your habitat declines, so does your deer population," said Bob Carroll, district supervisor with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Another wildlife official likened a coastal grass pasture to a paved parking lot for a deer.

Carroll, who is based in La Grange and whose territory is located south of San Antonio and Austin and east of Corpus Christi, said the deer population decline around Gonzales County is the worst in his 25-county district.

In 1987, the county's deer population was recorded at a deer per 30 acres. That dropped to a deer per 40 acres during the drought years of 1988-90, Carroll said.

With little rainfall, food and cover is more scarce, so fewer fawns survive to adulthood. "So we weren't adding a lot of animals to those herds," Carroll said.

His office currently is measuring this year's population.

"I suspect we're going to see a lot better reproduction," he added.

Hunters will be seeing for themselves how the deer population is doing when hunting season opens Nov. 2 in Gonzales county and other areas and Nov. 9 in parts of South Texas. Deer bow-hunting season began Oct. 1 across Texas.

In Gonzales, hunters aren't the only ones affected by the size of the deer herd. Hunting has been a growing attraction for this community located about 80 miles southeast of San Antonio. "It's been getting bigger all the time," said Gerald Fougerat, a hunter here for years and owner of Gonzales Wholesale Nursery.

Hunting leases that went for $1 an acre less than five years ago now are leased for $3 to $5 per acre, depending on the part of the county. Fougerat said described hunting in Gonzales County was "spotty" — good in some areas, bad in others.

Opening lead: Four of ♠ Study the play of this hand, dealt in a rubber-bridge game at the YMPL Card Group in New York, successor to the defunct Cavendish Club. A critical error was made. Can you spot it?

The auction is typical of the hurly-burly of Chicago-style rubber bridge. North's club cue-bid showed a limit raise in diamonds. East battled to prevent the opponents from carrying a 60 partscore into the final hand of the series, when both sides would be vulnerable. Four clubs would have been a good sacrifice at any form of bridge, since it would cost, at most, 100 points.

West led a low club. East rose with the ace and shifted to the king of hearts. Declarer, oft-time world champion Bob Hamman of Dallas, made a routine duck in dummy, forcing the defenders to switch the attack.

East reverted to a club. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps in two rounds and then played three rounds of spades. That set up a long spade in dummy to take care of the losing heart, and declarer lost only one trick in each side suit to fulfill the contract. Did you spot the error?

It occurred way back at trick one. It was West's choice of opening lead that is the heart of the issue.

West should have realized that it might be vital to start the defense on the right track, and the king of clubs was not likely to be an entry to the West hand—the bidding made it a near certainty that the defenders could not cash more than one club trick. Therefore, it was incumbent on West to lead the king of clubs!

That would have held the trick and, with dummy in view, the heart shift would have been easy to find, especially when East follows with the seven of clubs to request a switch to the lower-ranking side suit. Thus the defenders would collect two heart tricks, a spade and the king of clubs—down one.

Joyce Brothers learns to deal with grief of loss

PRAIRIE VILLAGE, Kan. — Since losing her husband to cancer two years ago, Joyce Brothers says she has learned to survive as a widow and deal with her grief.

Brothers

The psychologist had some advice on grief to the 1,400 people at a church lecture Monday night.

"You need to be good to yourself," Brothers said. "It's not a tribute to the person you have lost to make your life smaller or to not have joy in your life."

Crying helps, she said.

"Crying gets stress out of the system. There is no timetable for grief, but little by little joy comes back in your life."

SANTA ANA, Calif. — Dan Castellaneta admits that his type of fame — as the voice of that bungling cartoon father Homer Simpson — allows him to retain a certain anonymity.

"Only the most fanatical cartoon freak connects my face and name to Homer, the same people who knew what (cartoon voice greats) Daws Butler and Bill Scott and Jay Ward looked like," Castellaneta said.

"Being just this disembodied series of voices allows me to remain totally separate from 'The Simpsons' and enjoy it like a fan might," he added.

On the popular Fox network comedy, Castellaneta also speaks for Homer's drunk pal Barney, children's TV host Crusty the Clown, Grandpa Simpson and Clarence, the mayor of Springfield.

Castellaneta, 33, also plays accountant Warren Morris on the ABC sitcom "Sibs" and does voice work for Disney, CBS and Fox Children's Network productions.

Castellaneta said he honed his repertoire of more than 100 characters and impressions with radio routines in high school and college.

And Homer's voice?

"At first I'd come up with a Walter Matthau kind of voice, but I found Matthau too deadpan and monotone for a guy like Homer who runs the gamut of emotions and does a lot of yelling," he said.

"So the tone kind of metamorphosized. The Homer you hear was a voice I used to fool around with in college."

DALTON, Ga. — Maria Maples returned to her high school reunion in a private jet and a limousine — and in the company of Donald Trump.

While Maples crowned the new Northwest Whitfield High homecoming queen on Friday, there were no baubles for her. She was not wearing the engagement ring Trump gave her before they broke up in late September.

"We're good friends, and we're here to see a football game," Trump, 45, told reporters. Maples was the high school's homecoming queen 10 years ago.

"Donald's just very, very supportive right now," said Maples. "We're not really making steps right now" toward marriage, she said.

Neither would comment further on their relationship.

But Maples, 27, said Thursday that she was not ready to get married.

"There's been a lot of pressure in the relationship," she said.

"Before I get married, I want to know that the commitment needed for marriage is there and it's forever."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Arson charges against Donnie Wahlberg were dismissed after the New Kids on the Block singer made a series of public service announcements. But the fire department is less than pleased with his performance.

Wahlberg

Wahlberg was charged with first-degree arson in March for allegedly pouring vodka on a carpet at the historic Seelbach Hotel and igniting it.

Through a special arrangment, the 21-year-old was ordered to make three public-service announcements and prosecutors agreed to drop the arson charge.

Three tapes, on drug abuse, drunken driving and fire safety, were completed in July and aired on television.

After the charges were dropped Friday, Lt. Col. Mike Gramig of the Fire Department said he was disappointed with the quality of the fire-prevention tape.

"Our opinion is that Wahlberg met the letter of his requirement, but he certainly didn't meet the spirit of it," he said. "It took a lot of production work by our own people to make anything salvageable out of it whatsoever."

George Salem, an attorney for Wahlberg, said: "As I understood it, what Mr. Wahlberg did was satisfactory."

Wahlberg did not appear in court Friday.

Cadet recants claims of alleged attack

The State

COLLEGE STATION, (AP) — A female member of Texas A&M University's Corps of Cadets has recanted claims she was twice attacked by male cadets, school officials said Tuesday.

But Maj. Gen. Thomas Darling, corps commandant, said the woman had been the victim of harassment on other occasions. Six male cadets have been disciplined in those incidents, which did not involve physical contact, he said.

Last month, A&M disbanded the corps' elite Parsons' Mounted Cavalry pending an investigation into an allegation that several members attacked the woman. University officials had said the woman claimed she was attacked and threatened with further harm if she continued efforts to join the group.

But Darling said Tuesday night that the woman actually was a member of the Parsons' unit. He did not know why other A&M officials had said she was trying to join the group.

The woman claimed she was attacked again and briefly abducted in a car on Oct. 13. However, she recanted those allegations Monday.

"The young woman met (Monday) with university officials and said that the claimed assaults, beating and abduction never happened," said A&M Police Chief Bob Wiatt.

"The evidence developed by the university investigation conflicted with her earlier statements. In light of these discrepancies regarding the two alleged assaults, she stated, 'It never happened.' She has not given us any reason for her actions," Wiatt said in a statement released Tuesday.

Darling said six members of the unit have been disciplined for harassing her on other occasions. The incidents occurred during the first two weeks of the school year.

"I would say that she was the victim of some type of harassment. A lot of it was, I would say, subtle, from ignoring her to not letting her do certain things, some name calling," he said, declining to elaborate.

The university has not released the names of the cadets who were punished or the woman, who has so far not been disciplined. Three of the six were dismissed from the corps.

"Punishment ranges from dismissal from the corps with university conduct probation to deferred suspension and corps conduct probation. Some members were exonerated from any misconduct and others were sent reprimands for failing to inform officials of the harassment," Darling said.

Darling also said he expects the Parsons' unit to resume activities, but he did not know exactly when.

The woman's allegations had ignited a controversy on the A&M campus about the corps' treatment of women. The school had appointed a special committee to investigate the alleged attack and other complaints of abuse or harassment against female cadets.

Soldier of Fortune case figure wins stay

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A former Marine captain convicted of hiring a hitman to kill his wife won a stay Tuesday night just hours before he was scheduled to be executed.

The Texas Court of Criminal appeals granted the stay for Robert Black, 46, who had faced lethal injection just after midnight Tuesday for the slaying of his wife, Sandra, at their Bryan home Feb. 21, 1985.

Earlier Tuesday, the court had refused a similar request to halt Black's execution.

Mrs. Black was shot twice in the head by John Wayne Hearn, who was paid $10,000 by Black and who had run a classified ad in Solider of Fortune magazine, which billed itself as the "Journal for Professional Adventurers."

Hearn pleaded guilty to the slaying and testified against Black in exchange for a life prison term. He is in Florida serving that term and two other life sentences for unrelated killings.

After the criminal appeals court rejected the first request for a stay, attorneys for Black had sought relief in a state court. A judge in Bryan refused to grant a stay, sending the case back to the appeals court.

Until late last week, Black had been refusing legal help.

"I know I'm going to die some day, so it shouldn't surprise anybody if Oct. 23 would be that day," he said. "I just told the judge in court I had no objections to the Oct. 23 date."

'I know I'm going to die some day, so it shouldn't surprise anybody if Oct. 23 would be that day.'

— Robert Black

Last Friday he agreed to allow the Texas Resource Center, a legal group which assists death row convicts, to intervene in his case.

On Monday, the trial court in Bryan refused to block the execution, sending the case to the appeals courts.

Black's lawyers contended their client is schizophrenic and paranoid and suffers from a depression illness and that his previous attorneys may have been ineffective in presenting that as mitigating evidence.

Black, who served in Vietnam, also blamed post traumatic stress syndrome for his troubles readjusting from combat. Since his imprisonment, Black said he had been on medication to counter depression.

Black paid Hearn, whom he had met through the magazine ad, to kill his wife so Black could collect on $175,000 in recently purchased life insurance. Evidence also showed Black planned to marry his cousin.

"He's a con man," Marjorie Eimann, whose daughter was killed in the shooting, said of Black. "Sure we're bitter. Bob pulled a terrible, terrible thing, all over women and money. That's what sad."

Asked her thoughts about the execution, she replied: "Let's just pray it's real."

Hearn shot Mrs. Black twice in the head when she returned home from work on Feb. 21, 1985.

In 1988, Mrs. Eimann and her grandson won a $9.4 million judgment against Soldier of Fortune magazine for running the ad that led Black to Hearn. A year later, a federal appeals court threw out the award.

Black would be the 42nd Texas inmate put to death since the state resumed executions in 1982. The total is the highest of any state with capital punishment.

Judge grants change of venue in controversial rape trial

LUBBOCK (AP) — If a jury pool is any indication, it seems just about everyone in this West Texas city has heard about the sexual assault charge against Jimmy Wayne Wooten, who is accused of raping his retarded sister-in-law.

District Judge Blair Cherry granted a defense motion Tuesday to move Wooten's trial out of Lubbock. Cherry's decision came after 94 of the 96 prospective jurors for the trial acknowledged that they had formed an opinion about the case.

"It's the fair thing to do at this time," said Cherry, after granting the change of venue early Tuesday. Cherry, who speculated that it would be early next year before Wooten goes to trial, did not name where the case would be tried.

Wooten, 41, is accused of raping Debra Lynn Thomas, his 34-year-old sister-in-law, and fathering her son, David Lynn Thomas.

Miss Thomas is a former Lubbock State School resident who has the IQ of a 2-year-old. She does not realize she has given birth.

Wooten's arrest in January shocked local and state officials who were investigating the possibility that Miss Thomas was sexually assaulted while living at the Lubbock State School.

Ten state school employees and Wooten submitted to DNA blood tests. Police say the results genetically fingerprinted Wooten.

Wooten, who has repeatedly claimed he is innocent, faces up to 20 years in prison and up to $20,000 in fines if convicted.

Sam Ogan, Wooten's attorney, said his client and Wooten's wife, Dori, were happy with the judge's decision. Dori Wooten, who is Miss Thomas' sister and legal guardian, maintains her husband is innocent.

"Mr. and Mrs. Wooten look forward to trying this case in a more neutral territory," Ogan said. "They expressed some fears especially when those 94 hands went up.

'It just wasn't possible to have a fair trial due to the massive exposure the potential jurors had to the facts of this case.'

— Sam Ogan, attorney

"It just wasn't possible to have a fair trial due to the massive exposure the potential jurors had to the facts of this case."

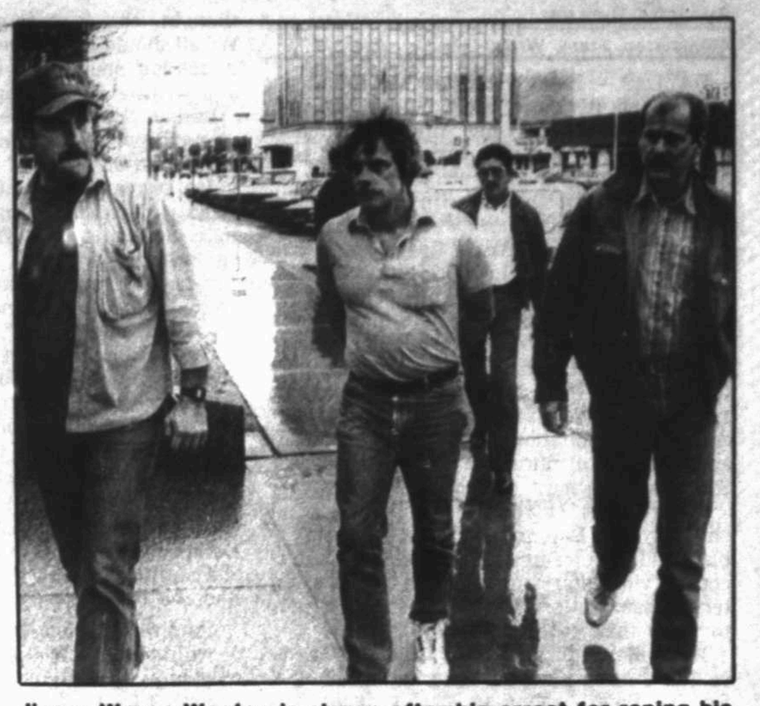

Fifty of the 96 prospective jurors were dismissed Monday after saying they had made up their minds about the guilt or innocence of Wooten.

By the end of informal questioning Monday, 38 jurors were left. Before more intensive questioning could begin Tuesday, Cherry agreed to move the trial.

"We are disappointed it can't be held in Lubbock," said Charlotte Bingham, a prosecutor in Wooten's case. "But the judge felt it was the fair thing to do and we are not quibbling. We thought it would have been easier and cheaper for the citizens to have the trial here."

The rape of Miss Thomas' and her subsequent pregnancy drew national attention and initiated reforms in the reporting of abuse of clients at state schools, governed by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

The Associated Press does not usually identify rape victims, but Miss Thomas' name was made public at the request of Dori Wooten.

Texas beer plans on expansion

SHINER (AP) — With its popularity increasing, Shiner Beer is doubling production and planning to sell outside Texas for the first time in its 82-year history.

The K. Spoetzl Brewery now produces 4,000 barrels of Shiner Premium and Shiner Bock beer each month. That's 2,700 cases each day.

When the expansion is completed later this year, production will double to 8,000 barrels a month, said brewmaster John J. Hybner.

"This is a big growth, but we've been at full capacity for a while," Hybner said.

The brewery, which is owned by Gambrinus Importing Co. Inc. in San Antonio, will soon begin marketing Shiner Beer in Albuquerque, N.M., and Nashville, Tenn.

"It's a big process just to open the state and get it out of Texas," said Bernadette Leininger, public relations director. "We used to sell to only south central Texas."

Austin is the biggest market for Shiner Beer. The darker Shiner Bock is three times as popular as the Premium, Ms. Leininger said.

With the expansion, new fermentation and storage tanks and a new brewing kettle will be added. The new kettle will replace the older copper kettle that has been used since it was purchased secondhand in 1941. Holding only 75 barrels, it is one of the smallest commercial kettles in the country.

"We don't ever want to keep up with the big breweries," Ms. Leininger said. "Shiner Beer is now marketed as a speciality item. It may cost a little more, but you get what you pay for."

The brewery started in 1909 after eight years of fund raising by German and Czech farmers who "wanted to produce a beer that satisfied their taste for Old World beer," Ms. Leininger said.

After a short time, they realized they needed an expert brewing craftsman, so they hired Bavarian brewmaster Kosmos Spoetzl. Before coming to the United States, Spoetzl had studied three years in Germany to receive his brewmaster's degree.

Spoetzl rented the brewery with an option to buy, and in 1915 he purchased the two-story building. Unfortunately for him, Prohibition was just around the coroner and in 1918 he was forced to brew nonalcoholic "near beer," Ms. Leininger said.

Store offers black cultural renaissance on video

By Jane Sumner
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Beverly DeBase has found her niche. Well, it's more like a hole in the wall. Turn the doorknob at her Alternative Videos near Fair Park and the furniture gets rearranged. But except for a couple of stools, the space is mainly decorated with videocassettes.

Alternative Videos specializes in black-oriented videos. Ms. DeBase's tiny store is jampacked with at least 1,000-cassettes featuring black scholars, leaders (Malcolm X is increasingly popular), sports figures and performers.

There are videos for children ("Fat Albert," "The Songhai Princess," 'How The Leopard Got His Spots" are favorites), documentaries and lectures, and mainstream, vintage, foreign and even exploitation films. There is comedy and all kinds of music including gospel, jazz, R&B, rap (the most rented) and reggae.

"The biggest barrier to this particular niche," says Ms. DeBase, "is that people think of black video in terms of entertainment and, of course, video stores market themselves as entertainment centers. But there's so much more to video than entertainment."

Ms. DeBase got into the business after she couldn't find a video of "The Spook Who Sat By The Door," about an ex-CIA agent who trains gangs in revolutionary warfare.

"I was appalled that I could not find it anywhere," she says. "Now it's my third-highest-grossing title. When I discovered that I thought, 'this is something I just have to do. We all should have access to this.' From there, it was just spending a lot of time in libraries and writing and calling."

Besides the store, she runs a mail-order service and publishes an annual catalog. She says her operation is one of only four or five black video stores in the country, and she credits them with helping jump-start the cultural renaissance she says is taking place among African-Americans.

"The cultural renaissance is a kind of awakening of African-Americans that their history pre-dated colonialism," she says. "Video has played an integral part in it because you can actually get information on historical topics without reading. It's a supplement to reading, but you can get a good introduction, a good framework on various topics in African history with the massive number of documentaries that have been produced."

Unless they've actually visited Africa, Ms. DeBase says, most people know nothing about the country except what they see on television and the movies.

"And that's primarily directed by European or white Americans," she says. "Right now our only link is through African cinema. That is, African film by African film makers."

One of the best primers, she says, is "Africa." Written by historian Basil Davis, it goes back to pre-colonial times on the continent.

There is also the Library of African Cinema, eight films showing Africa through African eyes. The rare videos range from "Yeelen" (meaning "Brightness"), an epic of self-discovery from Mali, to "Mapantsula" ("Hustler"), an action-packed drama from South Africa. All are in native dialect or language with subtitles.

"This is an important project," Ms. DeBase says. "If people don't rent these or go to see them, they're missing out on a major viewpoint on the substance of African people. Most of us view Africa as a monolithic place, not recognizing that there are 55 countries with many different tribes and subcultures."

But she warns that African film is different from American and European. "It's often very stilted, and the images are so massive. In some instances you're just overwhelmed by the backdrop."

Ms. DeBase says she was as brainwashed as anybody about Africa.

"There was a period of time when African students would come to our school, and we had preconceived notions about them. Most came from the cities, and all I could think of was the bush and having to go down to the river and get your water. I grew up when 'Tarzan' was on TV. I had these images, too, of people who were savages, who believed in many different gods. Everything that was totally opposite. Most people still view Africa as a dark continent."

Her Alternative Videos is one woman's attempt to hold a spotlight on the subject.

Trekkies gear up for anniversary celebration

By Mary Doclar
N.Y. Times News Service

ARLINGTON — You can't visit Clayton Melanson's family without getting a crash course in Trekology.

In fact, you're virtually a prisoner in Melanson's Arlington home until you become well-versed in the breeding habits of tribbles, the bloodline of Mr. Spock and all other matters of "Star Trek" lore.

Family conversations are sprinkled with references to phasers, cloaking devices and dreadnoughts. Their home is filled with "Star Trek" books, models, videotapes, posters and photo albums of their close encounters with the stars of the legendary TV and movie series.

They're true green-blooded fans.

"We'll go to the movies; we'll watch all the episodes," said Melanson, a computer programmer and captain of an Arlington-based "Star Trek" fan club called the USS Lancelot. "There are a lot of loyalists, but I enjoy all the episodes, unless it's just real bad."

When hundreds of Trekkies beamed over to the Dallas suburb of Plano on Oct. 19 and 20, for a convention celebrating the 25th anniversary of the series, Melanson, his wife, Joyce, and their children, Jeff and Debbie LeFleur, 13 and 17 respectively, were among those watching videos, giggling at "Star Trek" blooper reels and admiring actor Michael Dorn, who plays the Klingon Worf in "Star Trek: The Next Generation."

More than 700 people from across the state were expected to attend the convention, which featured a trivia contest, a sound-alike competition and taped appearances by the original crew of the USS Enterprise, organizer Greg Romero said.

As one might expect, this wasn't the Melansons' first convention.

They travel regularly to Trekkie gatherings from Austin to Oklahoma City, collecting autographs and memorabilia. Trading abounds and rumor has it, the Melansons say, that Leonard Nimoy is willing to trade a pair of pointy ears for an original "Star Trek" lunch pail.

Although they say they are not as obsessed as some Trekkies — those who supposedly believe "Star Trek" is a true picture of the future, or the Trekkie couple married by a Trekkie minister — the family admits enthrallment with the adventures of the Enterprise and its crew.

Values expressed in the series — racial and sexual equality and interplanetary harmony — are very much the family's values.

"Basically, what we're trying to do is improve the world so you can live what you see on "Star Trek,'" Clayton Melanson said.

"It's a look at the future that's positive," said Joyce Melanson, a lieutenant commander in Lancelot. "I saw the original series when it came out. It broke a lot of new ground. Actors and actresses on the original series were pioneers, role models."

Lancelot is one of several area Trekkie groups commissioned by Starfleet, an international organization with about 6,000 members in more than 120 chapters worldwide. Melanson said Lancelot has about 40 members and meets each month in the community room at The Parks at Arlington mall.

Braves take Game 3

■ Mark Lemke's RBI single in the bottom of the 12th inning gives Atlanta its first win in World Series play.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Mark Lemke's two-out RBI single in the bottom of the 12th inning ended the Atlanta Braves' long wait for a clutch hit and the longest World Series game in 14 years.

Lemke's opposite-field looper to left off Rick Aguilera, the Twins' seventh pitcher, scored David Justice scored from second base as the Braves returned home and beat the Minnesota Twins 5-4 Tuesday night to narrow their Series gap to 2-1.

Lemke ended an evening in which a record 42 players took part, including the first pinch-hitting appearance by a pitcher since 1965, and provided Atlanta with its first World Series victory ever.

The Braves had not won in the Series since 1958 when in Milwaukee, while Minnesota fell to 0-7 overall in World Series games on the road.

An error by Lemke at second base put the Twins in position to go ahead in the top of the 12th. But Minnesota had only pitchers left, so Aguilera was summoned from the bullpen to hit for reliever Mark Guthrie with the bases loaded and two out.

Aguilera lined out to center field, and then the Braves won in the bottom half when Justice singled with one out, stole second and, after a walk to Greg Olson, scored when Lemke's singled on a 1-1 pitch.

Aguilera had saved the first two games, and Twins relievers had not allowed an earned run in 32 2-3 innings consecutive postseason innings dating to the the 1987 World Series.

"That's gotta be the biggest hit of my career," Lemke said.

Certainly, it was the biggest hit of the Series for the Braves, who had left 13 runners on base in the first two games amd stranded seven more in scoring position in Game 3.

The Twins wasted their chances, too, leaving two runners on base in the 10th and watching Kent Hrbek strike out with runners on second and third and one out in the 12th. After Hrbek fanned, Kirby Puckett was intentionally walked before Jim Clancy retired Aguilera.

The game was the longest in the World Series since the New York Yankees beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in 12 innings in Game 1 of 1977. That made this one tied for the second-longest in history.

More for Ripken

BALTIMORE (AP) — Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken added another postseason honors Tuesday, winning The Sporting News' Player of the Year.

Ripken, named player of the year by The Associated Press last week, was the first player since The Sporting News initiated the award in 1936 to win it while playing on a team that finished below .500.

Ripken also won the award in 1983.

Finishing with a .323 average, Ripken drove in 114 runs and hit 34 home runs. He was the only American League player to finish in the top 10 in batting, hits, home runs and RBIs.

He also became only the 10th player in league history to hit more than 30 home runs while striking out less than 50 times.

Evander Holyfield, right, trained hard in advance of this title bout against James "Buster" Douglas. Now the heavyweight champ, Holyfield is gearing up for a foe yet to be named.

Holyfield puts off bout with Tyson

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

NEW YORK — Evander Holyfield's promoter said the heavyweight champion's next title defense will not be against Mike Tyson.

Unable to come up with a January date for a Holyfield-Tyson fight, promoter Dan Duva said Tuesday the postponed match would be rescheduled "for some time after January 1992."

That means it is possible the fight never will take place. Tyson is scheduled to go on trial in Marion County Court in Indianapolis on Jan. 27 on a charge of rape and related charges.

So Holyfield will fight against an opponent to be decided in late November. Duva said the fight would be on HBO rather than on TVKO pay-per-view television, where the Holyfield-Tyson fight would have been televised.

Duva said a site, opponent and date will be announced in the next few days.

MHS clips San Angelo

■ The Lady Bulldogs take over second place with a 15-13, 15-1 victory over the Lady Bobcats.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

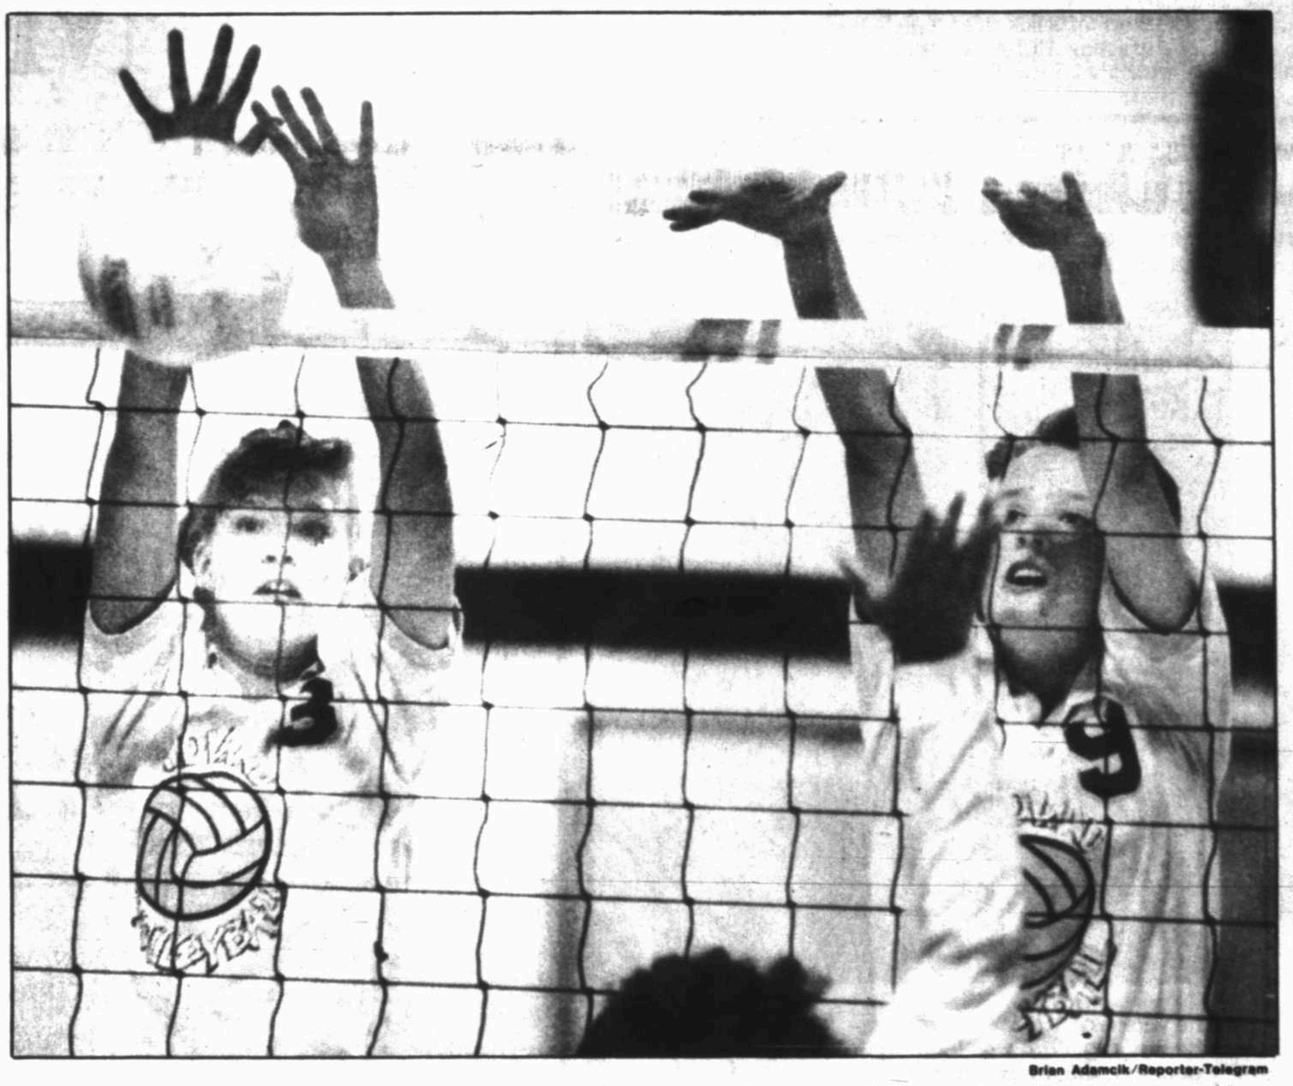

Midland High fought off a first-game surge by sixth-place San Angelo and held on to defeat the Lady Bobcats 15-13, 15-1 Tuesday night at the MHS gym. The win moves the Lady Bulldogs (7-3 in District 4-5A, 13-6 overall) back into sole possession of second place with a Saturday date coming up against rival Odessa Permian.

Permian fell to 6-3 in district, ½-game behind MHS, after losing to Abilene High, 15-3, 15-[illegible]. Elsewhere, Abilene Cooper, also 6-3, defeated Odessa High 15-13, 15-6.

"We're still searching for a starting lineup," MHS head coach Sonja Pittman said of the Lady 'Dawgs. "We're an unusual team. If I have a starter having a bad game, I'll put someone in for them and that person will play lights out. But then if I keep that person in for the second game, she might

Woes could follow Lee loss to OHS

Williamson

After seeing the golden arm of San Angelo quarterback Shea Morenz against Midland High last Friday, you get the feeling that Midland Lee is left with two football options if the Rebels want a ninth consecutive trip to the state playoffs.

LEE OPTION 1: Beat Odessa High's speedy Bronchos Friday night and insure passage on Texas' glory grid road.

LEE OPTION 2: Lose to Odessa High — and start praying for a Nov. 8, 8 p.m. to 10 p.m., rain storm.

What this really means is that a Lee victory over OHS will eliminate the Bronchos from playoff contention and it won't matter what the Rebs do against the Bobcats. Lose to OHS and Lee's playoff hope is in major jeopardy.

OHS is the fly in the ointment at this stage of the 4-5A race. If OHS beats Lee, things get really messy — even to the point of testing for the first time the district's new positive point system.

Confused? Why should you be any different than the experts? It's complicated, but we will try to explain.

First, we must get a few assumptions out of the way. We contend that San Angelo will not beat Odessa Permian next week and Abilene High will not beat either OHS or Lee in the next two weeks. San Angelo will also beat Abilene Cooper this week. No one will beat Permian. Yes, these are assumptions, but bankable by 4-5A standards.

If the bankable assumptions hold, Permian will win the 4-5A title outright, leaving San Angelo (3-0), Lee (2-1) and OHS (2-2) fighting for the two remaining playoff berths.

Still with us? If Lee loses to OHS, Lee will have two losses and will have to beat San Angelo in two weeks to have a playoff chance. If the Bronchos beat Lee and Lee beats San Angelo, the probable district outcome is that all three teams will finish with a 4-2 league record, a three-way tie.

That will put into action the positive point system adopted by the league two years ago to break multiple ties where no team owns an advantage in head-to-head competition. This would be the case here.

If so, playoff teams will be determined on the 18-point positive point system concerning games only played between the three teams. For example: OHS 21, Lee 14; Lee 28, San Angelo 20; and San Angelo 39, OHS 16. That leaves San Angelo at a positive 10, Lee a positive one and OHS a negative 11 (or zero since no negative points will be considered under league rules). San Angelo wins the tiebreaker, and the third place playoff spot goes to Lee by virtue of its one positive point. The current rule does not revert back to head-to-head competition once the second place team is decided.

However, if OHS and Lee ended up tied for positive points for third place, the team that has been out of the playoffs the longest would be in as the other tiebreaker. Both were in the playoffs last year, but Lee was in the playoffs in 1989 and OHS wasn't, so the Bronchos would be in.

In other words, if Lee loses to Odessa High, the Rebels might be forced into a position of having of beat San Angelo by a certain point margin to get into the playoffs. After what I saw Friday, that's not what you would want to be forced to do. Lee may beat San Angelo, but it is sure a risky business of having to beat any playoff bound team by a certain number of points.

No one seemed to like the three-way coin flip in 1988 between Permian, Lee and MHS. The 18 positive point system may be a better way of determining playoff teams, but is anyone going to understand it?

Lee can help us avoid all this by winning Friday. We all look for the easy way out — and this is it.

SPIKERS: Bobcats fall swiftly in second

(From 1C)

have a so-so game."

After four consecutive points in the first game that put the Lady Bulldogs up 12-6, 23 of the next 30 serves by the two teams ended in sideouts. Meantime, during that string, San Angelo had clawed its way back to trail by only one, 14-13.

As long as the first game took, the second contest was painfully short for the Lady Bobcats, although a succession of sideouts — 12 in a row when Midland led 14-1 — kept San Angelo from caving in altogether.

Another unforced error by the Lady Bobcats and MHS had ended another grueling match for San Angelo.

San Angelo fell to 1-8, 3-19 with the loss.

"San Angelo's got the strangest team since I've been here," Pittman commented. "Their talent level is not bad. They have problems with serving and service receiving. And regardless of how many great things you can do with a volleyball, if you can't serve, and you can't pass the serve, you'll have a hard time winning."

Aside from San Angelo's unforced errors, the serving of Jennifer Pirkle also took its toll on the Lady 'Cats. The MHS senior's serves led to six consecutive points to put the Lady Bulldogs up 12-1 in the second game.

MHS' low ceiling — the lowest in the district — came in to play as many as six times when the Lady Bobcats lost points or possessions on sideouts when the ball would hit a rafter and skitter weakly out of play.

"I'm glad we got a new floor this year and not a new ceiling," Pittman said. "It's (the low ceiling) is a great homecourt advantage. Teams hate to come here."

Stephanie Pirkle, sister of varsity member Jennifer, led the MHS junior varsity in a 15-1, 12-15, 15-8 beating of the Lady Bobcat JV.

Midland High hosts Odessa Permian Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Junior varsity action begins at 1:15 p.m. The contest could likely determine who sits and who goes to postseason action at the conclusion of regular season play later this month.

"We tried not to look ahead (Tuesday night)," Pittman said. "But we're watching everyone closely, just like everyone's watching us."

Auburn's Dye lashes out at media

Associated Press

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn football coach Pat Dye on Tuesday forbid reporters from questioning his team about allegations of illegal payments to former players, and vowed that the controversy will not lead him to quit.

"If you guys come out with something about me resigning, you might as well say Coach Dye was fired, because that's what it's going to take to get me out of here," he said at his weekly news conference.

Dye lashed out at the media, particularly over a report by a Birmingham talk show host last week that his resignation was imminent.

"All the other conversations are enough, and then that comes out," he told reporters. "Everybody is calling here, calling the players, their mamas and daddies calling here to talk to ask, 'Is Coach Dye resigning? Is Coach Dye resigning?' The players are concerned about it.

"I ain't going to be quitting."

For that reason, Dye said, he would not allow reporters to question his team about anything involving allegations made by former player Eric Ramsey.

Ramsey's attorney already has released tape-recorded conversations which purportedly show he received payoffs and performance bonuses from an Auburn booster. Ramsey claims to have more tapes to back up his allegations that coaches were involved in major violations of NCAA rules.

"I wish all of you were the same," Dye told reporters. "But some of you will get in there and twist and turn it around like you want it instead of how like it was intended to be said. I've had enough of that stuff in the papers. I don't need it anymore."

Normally, the media is allowed access to Sewell Hall, the athletic dormitory, after Dye's regular Tuesday news conference. The Tigers (4-2) play host to Mississippi State on Saturday.

When a reporter objected to the restriction on questioning, Auburn officials said no one would be allowed to question players at the dorm. Instead, eight players were brought to the athletic complex for an impromptu news conference.

UCLA, PSU lead Hancock chase

EL PASO (AP) — UCLA and eighth-ranked Penn State are at the top of the list for this year's John Hancock Bowl, bowl officials said.

Marc Boehm, associate director of the Sun Carnival Association, said Hancock Bowl officials are confident of attracting UCLA, a Pac-10 team with a 4-2 record.

UCLA has lost to No. 15 Tennessee and No. 10 California. The Bruins have Arizona State, Washington State, Stanford, Oregon and Southern Cal left on the schedule.

Penn State is 5-2 with losses to Miami and Southern Cal. The Nittany Lions have games left with West Virginia, Maryland, No. 5 Notre Dame and No. 20 Pittsburgh.

Hut ... 40!!

The year was 1968
The Bulldog team was looking great.
Coaches came in awe to see,
The center named "Brahaney".

For reasons some don't understand
He left his native city and land
And journeyed to the "Okie" state
And began his career in the BIG EIGHT.

In '71 and '72,
His All-American dreams came true.
Lombardi finalist . . . meeting Bob Hope,
It's a wonder his fragile ego could cope.

Sooner Co-Captain . . . Sugar Bowl bound,
The honors kept spinning his poor head around.
But still when all is said and done,
In the game of the decade, Nebraska still won!

The Cardinals drafted him in round number five
His NFL dream was finally alive.
In St. Louis and Dallas, his fame was widespread,
For snapping the ball over the punter's head.

As all good things truly must end,
Brahaney returned to dismay his friends.
He haunts the "Y" from daylight to dusk,
And tries to play golf . . . without much luck.

And each Friday night, he sits in the stand,
And remembers the feel of the ball in his hands.
'Cuz now he's too old and way past his prime,
All he can do is "remember the time?"

What goes 'round comes 'round, Thomas, OLD friend.
I've told Midland you're 40 and this is . . .

UIL Legislative Council approves 5A playoff expansion

By Jack Keever
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — A plan that would allow more students in larger high schools to experience the thrill of state playoff competition in team sports was approved Tuesday by the University Interscholastic League's Legislative Council.

The 24-member council, acting on a recommendation of the UIL Athletics Committee, voted to send three teams per district to the Class 5A playoffs in basketball, baseball, soccer and volleyball.

In exchange, one game would be dropped from the regular-season schedule in those sports. The basketball season would be shortened to 21 games, baseball to 19, soccer to 15 and volleyball to 23.

The schedule adjustments were proposed in response to comments by state Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno, who said he wanted more emphasis on academic achievement.

The playoff proposal must be approved by the State Board of Education.

The UIL's plan does not affect 5A football, which has been using the three-team concept on a two-year experimental basis that ends after this season.

By a 16-6 vote, the Legislative Council agreed to delay until 1994 plans to decrease from 95 to 75 the maximum enrollment for schools playing six-man football. The new cutoff had been scheduled to take effect next fall.

Currently, 93 schools play six-man football, and the plan would eliminate some of those programs, forcing the schools to field 11-man teams if they wanted to continue to compete in football.

Superintendent Johnnie Reeves of Christoval said converting the different-sized six-man fields to regular size could cost the small schools up to $500,000. He suggested doing away with a specific enrollment number and allowing the UIL staff to periodically set the cutoff.

The Athletics Committee was instructed to develop options for determining which schools would play six-man.

A 13-9 council vote would prohibit coaches from organizing or coaching in non-school events. The Board of Education also must approve the prohibition.

"We're going to create many more problems than we're ever going to fix," said San Angelo Superintendent Bill Graves, who joined others in protesting that the rule might be too restrictive.

A recommendation by the Athletics Committee to hold a referendum on "goodie bags" was rejected by the council, 12-10. Goodie bags for student-athletes, containing such items as cookies, candy and balloons, are currently prohibited but UIL officials acknowledge that the rule is ignored by cheerleaders, pep squad members and others.

The referendum proposal would have called for a $5 limit on goodie bags.

Several council members said trying to regulate goodie bags is virtually impossible, and athletes who do not receive them may have hurt feelings.

"We're trying to legitimatize something we all disagree with ... and really think is wrong," Graves said.

Superintendent Mauro Reyna of Ysleta said spending time on such topics "makes us the laughing stock of Texas."

UIL Director Bailey Marshall acknowledged that "it has not been a tremendous problem."

In other action, the council voted for the UIL staff to survey member-schools on holding all six football championships at a single site.

The staff also was instructed to continue to study wording that would define "taunting" and "baiting."

A total of 28 proposals had been rejected by the Athletics Committee, and the council Tuesday approved that action on a single vote.

Among those items rejected were proposals that would sanction wrestling and water polo as UIL activities, allow interschool competition in elementary schools and create two area meets after the regional meet in track and field.

PGA returns to drier Woodlands

Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — The Independent Insurance Agent Open is back for another try.

Seven months after the weather-battered PGA tournament was rained out of its April 4-7 date, it's returning for a second chance beginning a Wednesday-through-Saturday format over The Woodlands' Tournament Players Course.

And players who didn't play on the waterlogged course in April will have a much better chance at breaking the course record 63 shot by Mike Sullivan in 1986.

In fact, Sullivan says his record could be broken and he hopes he's the one to do it.

"Hopefully, I'll be the one to shoot a few more low rounds this week," Sullivan said. "Conditions now are more conducive to scoring well. It's more ideal. The greens are better.

"The fairways have more grass and everything is dry. You're going to get better lies in the fairways and you'll be able to putt better."

Sullivan has a history of scoring well in the Houston event. He shot a final round 65 in 1986 and won the tournament.

"When I think of coming there, I don't say, 'Gosh, I've got the course record at the Woodlands,' but it's a nice thing to have," Sullivan said. "It's nice to think back on such a good round."

Sullivan's 63 also included the course 9-hole record of 29. Curtis Strange won the tournament in 1988 with an 18-under par 270.

Although Greg Norman and Ian Baker-Finch joined the field, many of the top European players in the April field will be absent, including Steve Ballesteros, Nick Faldo, and Jose Maria Olazabal.

Prices plunge

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $23.48 per barrel, down 56 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Texaco Trading and Transportation and Marathon dropped their posted price 50 cents to $22.25.

The drop may have been exaggerated by the expiration of the contract for November crude. Oil to be delivered later fell more modestly.

Natural gas prices took the biggest hit of all, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.910 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 10.3 cents.

Analysts said the market may have been overbought after several weeks of virtually uninterrupted buying. But many were not yet ready to say the rally was over, because some who previously made such predictions suffered heavy losses.

After the market was closed Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported that the nation's supply of crude, gasoline and home heating oil fell last week.

The crude stockpile dropped 1.6 million barrels, to 338.3 million, for the week ending Friday.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was higher in New York and mixed overseas Tuesday in largely directionless trading.

Analysts said the dollar traded in a narrow range and was unable to latch on to any trend.

The British pound gave way to the dollar. Sterling fell to $1.7085 in New York trading from $1.7165 late Monday.

Other late rates for the dollar in New York, compared with late Monday's prices, included: 1.7000 German marks, up from 1.69333; 1.4850 Swiss francs, up from 1.4835; 5.7970 French francs, up from 5.7750; 1,270.75 Italian lire, up from 1,266.00; and 1.12635 Canadian dollars, up from 1.12625.

Market falls

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost 20.58 to close at 3,039.80.

Declining issues outnumbered gaining ones by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Two automakers report stunning losses

■ General Motors and Ford appear to be headed for their worst financial year in history.

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. reported Tuesday a $1.1 billion loss for the third quarter while Ford Motor Co. posted a $574.4 million loss for the period, as the Big Three lurched toward their worst financial year in history.

The GM loss was in line with Wall Street expectations, but Ford's was larger than auto analysts expected. Chrysler Corp., the financially weakest of the Big Three, is expected to report a big third-quarter loss next week.

Typically, the third quarter is the weakest for automakers, which shut down plants to change to the new model year during that time. This year, a stubborn recession and consumer caution compounded results for the dismal period.

Together, the Big Three were expected to post more than $2 billion in third-quarter losses. A year ago, they lost $2.1 billion mainly because of a big one-time expense taken by GM to cover the cost of closing assembly plants.

GM's latest third-quarter loss amounted to $1.88 a share, compared with a loss of $2 billion, or $3.54 a share, last year.

Its revenue for the quarter fell 6.2 percent to $28.9 billion from $30.8 billion last year.

Without the $2.1 billion plant-closing charge, GM earned about $109 million during the third quarter last year.

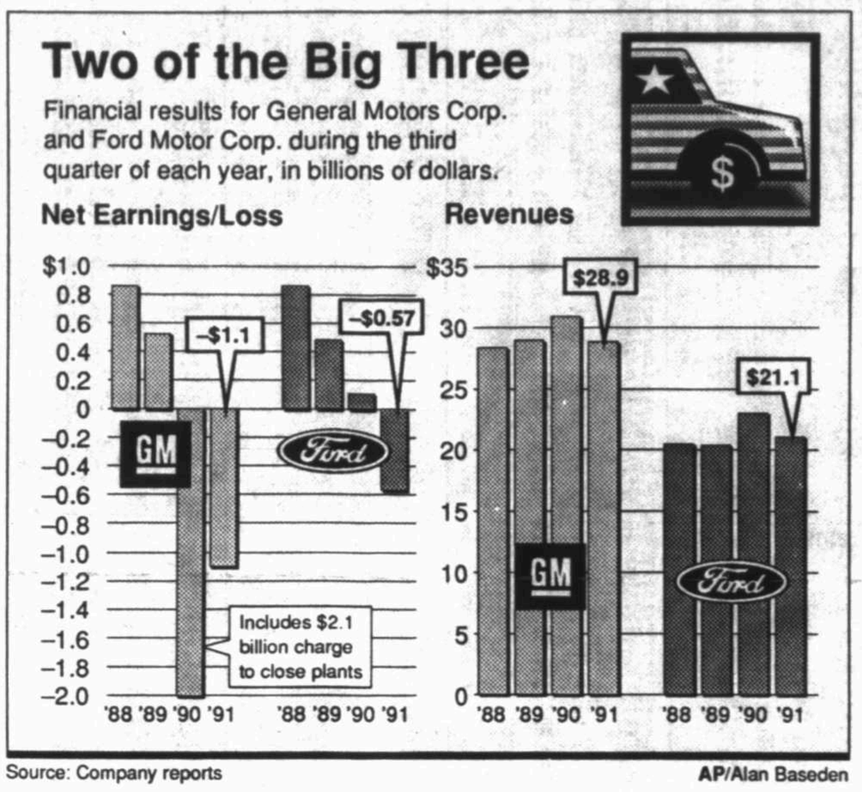

"While consumers appear to be relatively optimistic about the outlook for the national economy according to recent surveys," GM Chairman Robert Stempel said, "they seem to be less confident about their own personal financial situation as they adjust to the slow rate of economic recovery."

For the first nine months of this year, GM lost $2.2 billion, or $4.10 a share, on revenues of $89.5 billion. During the same period last year and including the one-time charge, GM lost $368.7 million, or $1.20 a share, on revenues of $94.8 billion.

Monday, GM's three largest subsidiaries reported profits. General Motors Acceptance Corp. earned $346 million, Electronic Data Systems Corp. showed $145.5 million in profit and GM Hughes Electronics Corp. earned $38.2 million.

Ford's third-quarter loss amounted to $1.20 a share and came on revenues of Dr. William Giessel, and his assistant, Lillian Steffers leave a ship after vaccinating crew members.

Dr. Geissel specialized in occupational medicine when most doctors ignored the field.

Doctor's choice now favored by hospitals

HOUSTON (AP) — Before they sailed for the tropics, many crewmen on ships along Houston's Ship Channel would get a visit from Dr. William Giessel, his totebag brimming with vaccines.

It was the 1950s, and Giessel was choosing to make occupational medicine his career at a time when most doctors ignored the specialty.

Today, Giessel and his daughter, Dr. Gail Blakely, still visit ships that come to Houston, vaccinating sailors against cholera and yellow fever and testing them for alcohol and drug use. Their practice has expanded to include explaining to Shell Oil Co. workers the dangers of and treatments for exposure to toxic chemicals, and testing other employees for exposure to asbestos.

Their family-owned group, the Melby Clinic, was one of the first in Houston to specialize in occupational medicine, but now it shares the market with some of the city's largest hospitals.

Competition has proliferated as giant increases in the cost of health and workers' compensation coverage, along with heftier federal fines for workplace safety violations, have led many companies to pay to improve worker safety and health.

Responding to the demand, occupational and industrial medicine programs have flourished, springing up at many Houston hospitals, clinics and

Montgomery Ward to resume catalog sales

By Eben Shapiro
N.Y. Times News Service

Montgomery Ward & Co. wants to muscle its way back into the crowded catalog business.

The big Chicago retailer, which closed its unprofitable catalog division in 1985, said Monday that it was teaming with Fingerhut Cos., a mail-order concern, to start a company to produce nearly a dozen separate catalogs a year.

Unlike its previous "big book" general-merchandise catalogue, which included 100,000 different items, Ward now plans to mail separate, narrowly focused catalogs for clothing, electronics, jewelry and cosmetics and other merchandise.

Bernard F. Brennan, chairman and chief executive of Ward, said he expected the sales of the new company, called Montgomery Ward Direct, to reach $500 million in five years.

In pursuing the specialty mail-order business, Ward hopes to avoid the problems of the troubled catalog divisions of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and J.C. Penny Co. The country's last two large general-merchandise catalogs are performing poorly. Sears's unprofitable mail-order business, which includes some specialty catalogs, still does the bulk of its business from its 1,600-page fall and spring catalogs.

When Brennan closed Ward's catalog operation in 1985, it was losing $75 million a year on sales of $1.2 billion.

"In 1985, I said that general-merchandise catalogs were no longer viable," Brennan said Monday. He said that was even more true today, with specialty merchandisers supplanting generalists at both the catalog and the store level.

"It is just impossible to satisfy a customer today with a broad array of merchandise," he said.

Brennan has considerably narrowed the focus of the Ward's stores.

But Montgomery Ward is entering the catalog business at a difficult time. With the cost of setting up a mail-order operation comparatively low, the field is crowded. There are 8,000 catalog companies in the country, according to the Direct Marketing Association, a trade group in New York.

In addition, there was a substantial increase earlier this year in the third- class postal rates used by catalog mailers, and the weak economy has hurt many retailers, including mail- order merchants.

"You've got three negatives on the horizon that you didn't have four or five years ago," said Richard Pyle, an analyst in Minneapolis with Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. "It's more difficult to make the kind of profit margins that you used to in the business."

Weaker companies are beginning to fall by the wayside, retail experts said. But the turmoil makes it "perfect timing" for the new venture to enter the market, contends Theodore Deikel, chairman and chief executive of Fingerhut, based in Minneapolis.

"As those that still have the big books try to figure out what to do and struggle for direction," Deikel said, "we are jumping in."

Tenneco plans corporate cuts

HOUSTON (AP) — Tenneco Inc. officials have said they plan to cut more than a third of the company's 630 corporate and related staffers.

Houston-based Tenneco announced Tuesday that 230 employees would be laid off as of Dec. 31.

The move is part of a $250 million cost-reduction program, officials said. Along with changes in some corporate operations and facilities, Tenneco said the staff cutbacks will save about $25 million annually.

"While it is a painful process any time you affect people and their jobs in this way, these steps must be taken to assure the company's long-term financial strength," said Michael Walsh, Tenneco president.

Sept. 11, the company announced a $2 billion action plan that included a series of asset sales, dividend and capital expenditure reductions and new equity, in addition to cost reductions.

Midland Park Mall is preparing for both the fall season and Halloween.

According to Susan Perkins, mall marketing manager, the mall will have a special pumpkin purchase Thursday through Sunday. If a customer spends $35 or more at any mall store, he can buy a 10 pound pumpkin for $1. While supplies last, the mall will have a pumpkin patch in Centre Court through Sunday.

In addition, Perkins reports the mall will have a jack o'lantern contest October 25-30 where customers can enter their own jack o'lanterns. There will be three categories — funniest, scariest, and most unusual. Each category will have three winners, with first place receiving a $50 Mall gift certificate, second place a $25 certificate and third place a $10 certificate. Entries should be at the mall by 5 p.m. October 30. Winners will be notified November 1. The contest is sponsored by the mall, Midland Reporter-Telegram and KODM-FM radio.

Saturday is VIP Kids Day at the mall, according to Perkins, hosted by the Mall Ambassador Board. Children will be decorating Halloween bags.

Santa Fe Grill, formerly Charlies, has opened, and Santa Fe Cafe and Santa Fe Bar (formerly Sally's and Goodnights, respectively) are expected to open by mid-November, according to Hilton General Manager David Nichols.

Santa Fe Grill is a moderately priced casual dining room serving dinner from 6 to 10 p.m.

Santa Fe Cafe is cafe style and serves breakfast and lunch from 6:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Since changing its name, the JEWEL OSCO store in North Park shopping center, Loop 250 and Midkiff, has made a number of changes.

A salad bar has been added that includes not only salads but hot foods such as seafood, and even hot breakfast foods.

Also, the floral department is being expanded to add a large walk-in cooler so the customer can walk in and choose an arrangement or a single flower. The store is also in the process of establishing a floral wire service. However, the Midland store will start out as a sending store, sending the order to towns with a Jewel Osco that will make and deliver the arrangements.

CAREER: Doctor picks occupational health

(From 5C)

doctors' practices, and even a company.

The services offered run the gamut from pre-employment physicals, with a price tag of $45, to $200 executive annual physicals.

Faced with declining numbers of patients, many hospitals have found occupational medicine appealing because the demand is relatively predictable and there's less fee discounting.

Memorial Hospital System opened its Worklink Program this year. In the past two years, St. Joseph Hospital, Hermann Hospital and AMI Twelve Oaks Hospital have started occupational medicine programs as well. Twelve Oaks' program began with 10 clients; it now has more than 200.

"Most hospitals on the east end of town have hired people just to market to various companies," said Dr. Gary Friedman, Hermann Hospital's director of occupational and environmental medicine.

"You can see industrial clinics springing up and down the freeway there. As medicine has become more competitive, many (health care facilities) have launched corporate initiatives."

Better reimbursement for occupational medicine has fueled its growth, making it guaranteed income in an industry rife with professional cost cutters.

"In comparison to other business, it's not so heavily discounted," said Peggy Kircher, marketing director for Hermann Hospital's Occupational and Environmental Medicine Center.

Medicare can discount doctors' and hospitals' fees by 40 percent, managed health care arrangements like health maintenance organizations or preferred provider organizations by 15 to 25 percent and medical fees for workers' compensation by between 18 and 20 percent, according to Kircher.

It's also easier to predict how much it will cost to provide the care when bidding on contracts. "You can tell how many injuries a company had last year, and how many it expects to have. You can't say that about cancer," she said. "With pre-employment (testing) and workers' comp, you can determine what gross revenues would be if a company would direct all of its business to you."

Some programs, such as Hermann's, seek to attract clients with unique services. Hermann's occupational medicine center stocks 30 antidotes for toxic chemicals used by Houston's industries.

At Kelsey-Seybold, one of Houston's largest doctors' groups, the occupational medicine practice has grown 22 percent and now accounts for 10 to 15 percent of revenues, said Dr. Ed Bernacki, until recently the group's director of occupational medicine.

Breaux Castleman, Kelsey-Seybold's managing director, sees two reasons for the growth: companies trying to hold the line on medical costs; and Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations that mandate screening exams.

Though tallying the number of occupational programs nationwide is difficult, there are signs their numbers have grown and that many are newcomers, according to the National Association of Occupational Health Professionals. The association's membership has grown to 900 since it was founded last year.

A survey of 175 programs done for the association showed 41.5 percent were just one year old. The average annual profit margin was 7.7 percent on revenues of $477,063. Treating workers for injuries generated the most revenues, said more than half of those surveyed.

With so many new participants in the market, it's tough for customers to evaluate them.

"There is an absence of any real quality data on where to go for service," said Patricia Nelson, president of the Greater Houston Small Business Action in Health, a trade association.

But as companies place more emphasis on workplace safety and the cost of workers' compensation coverage escalates, more and more services are evolving.

The fastest-growing facets of occupational medicine at Kelsey-Seybold are on-site teams of doctors and nurses sent to companies to do everything from pre-employment exams to treating on the job injuries, Castleman said.

These teams also often advise companies on ways in which workers can lower the risk of injury, he said.

AUTOS: GM, Ford show loss

(From 5C)

$21.1 billion. During the third quarter last year, the automaker earned 22 cents a share on revenues of $23 billion.

The company said it lost $197 million in its core U.S. automotive operations July-September, compared with a profit of $50 million last year. Its overseas operations, which bolstered a sagging U.S. market in the late 1980s, lost $554 million in the third quarter, substantially more than last year's $89 million loss.

"Because the pace of recovery from recessions in many of Ford's key markets has been slow," Ford Chairman Harold Poling said, "Ford also expects to report a loss in the fourth quarter."

Through the first nine months of this year, Ford lost $1.8 billion, or $3.76 a share, compared with a profit of $1.4 billion, or $2.99 a share, during the same period last year.

Revenues through September this year amounted to $66.3 billion, down 9.8 percent from $73.5 billion last year.

Ford's car and truck sales through September of this year were down 15.8 percent from the same period a year ago. Poling said part of the losses stemmed from lower sales of higher-profit cars and trucks.

A bright spot amid all the gloomy news was Ford's financial operations, which earned $177.1 million during the period, up 26 percent from last year. For the nine-month period, Ford's financial services earnings rose 20.5 percent to $690.9 million.

The worst year on record for the Big Three is 1980, when Chrysler needed federal loan guarantees to stay alive. That year, GM, Ford and Chrysler lost a combined $4.5 billion.

This year, sales flagged in the spring and recovered a bit in June and July, but headed down again in the late summer. They have stayed there since.

"We're bumping along the bottom," Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca said last week.

Through September of this year, Big Three sales were down 14.4 percent compared with last year. Sales by the industry as a whole were down 12.5 percent. Sales by Japanese automakers were down just 5 percent.

MAIL: Wards to try catalog again

(From 5C)

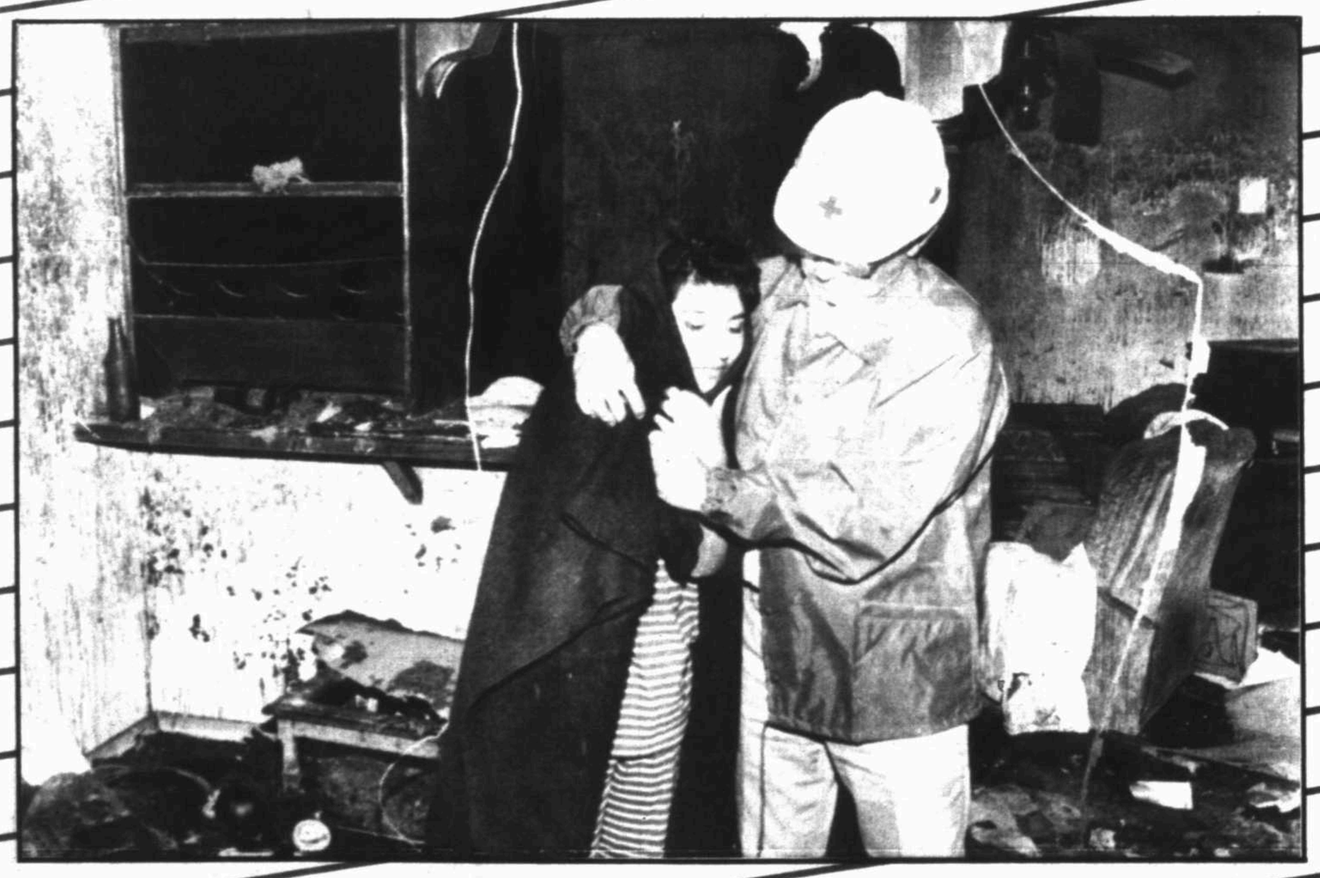

The lure of the mail-order business is considerable, with more and more time-strapped shoppers buying merchandise over the phone or through the mail. While only sketchy numbers exist, the Direct Marketing Association said that mail-order sales exceeded $25 billion last year. The trade group said that half of the consumers in the country shop by phone or by mail at least once a year.

Some analysts said that Montgomery Ward's name and considerable resources give the venture a good chance of success.

"It is a very smart and strategic move," said George Rosenbaum, president of Leo J. Shapiro & Associates, a research firm in Chicago.

Ward plans to send catalogs primarily to its 10 million credit card customers. Fingerhut will supply the expertise of running a mail-order business.

Fresh meat becomes tasty treat

By John Curran

Eberbaugh has a recipe for converting bloody roadside opossum, deer, turtle or skunk carcasses into tasty treats. If it's game, so is he.

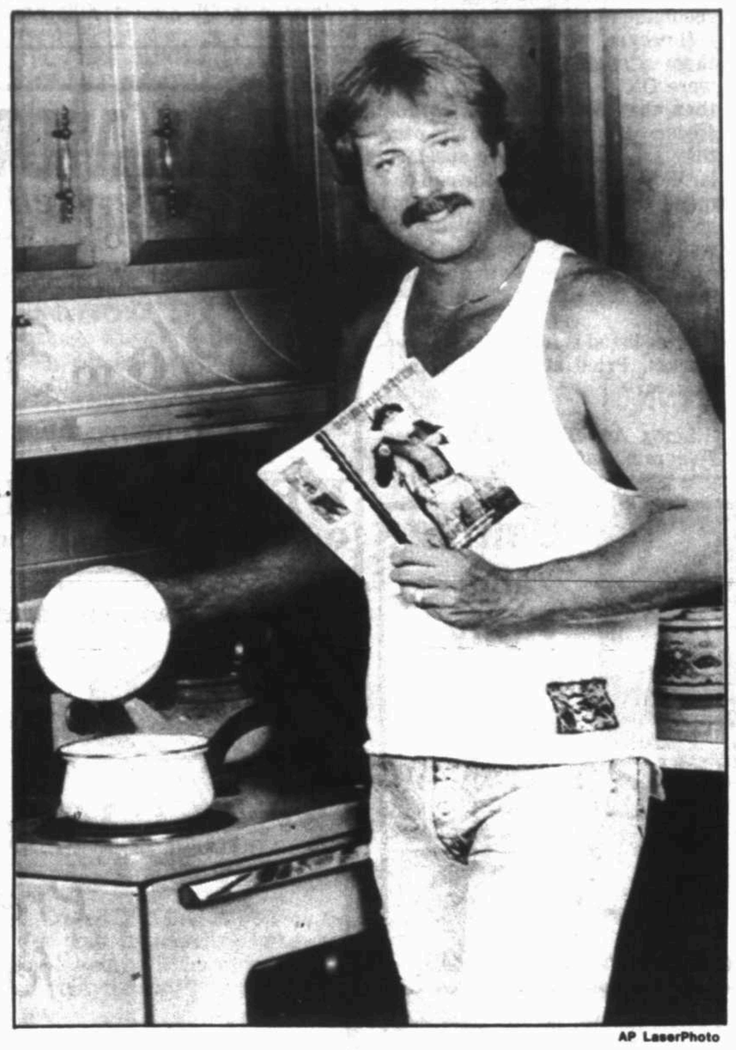

His book, "Gourmet Style Road Kill Cooking," offers tongue-in-cheek suggestions for squirrel pot pie, groundhog hoagies, creamed coon casserole and road kill stir fry.

Which prompts Guy Hodge of the Humane Society of the United States to express this fear: "I hope people don't use it as a grocery shopping list." Eberbaugh, a 30-year-old nurse, says he doesn't really advocate eating road kill, even though he has done it.

Whatever his preference, his recipes for the run-overed are not for the squeamish:

"Take a normal sized 'possum that's bought the farm; put him on a hook and hang him in the barn; let the smell of the cow dung rise up through; let him cure that way for a month or two," Eberbaugh wrote in a recipe called "Possum on an Oak Plank."

The book's first 40 pages are illustrated recipes written in such verse and laced with backwoods colloquialisms. Six pages of genuine recipes for venison, bear, roasted rabbit, pork, and calf's brains follow.

AP LaserPhoto

Jeff Eberbaugh, author of "Gourmet Style Road Cooking," Stands in his Charleston, W. Va., kitchen with a copy of his cookbook. Eberbaugh, a nurse by profession, has written a tongue-in-cheek book with suggestions on cooking road kill animals such as squirrel pot pie and creamed coon casserole.

ONE RECIPE SAYS cooking animals who get in your way is only sweet revenge.

"It might be a doe or a great big buck; take steaks in return for the damage to your truck.

"... Cut tenderloin steaks about two inches thick; cook 'em real slow, never cook 'em too quick. Remember when you're eatin' it's expensive meat; 'cause your grill and your fender are still in the street."

The book, which took three months to write, has been a hot seller even though it has been available only in West Virginia. In three weeks, it sold 1,000 copies at $7.95 apiece, Eberbaugh said.

"It's outselling Kitty Kelley here in Charleston," he said of the unauthorized Nancy Reagan biography.

The cover photo of Eberbaugh's book shows a man with a long, white beard wearing a flannel shirt and tuxedo jacket, a linen napkin draped over his forearm. He is dangling a dead possum by the tail.

"We can't help the millions of animals who are killed by cars," Eberbaugh said. "I don't think even the animal rights activists could complain. This is meant to be a novelty. ... Anybody who looks at it will know it's a joke right off."

MOST BUYERS laugh when they see it, said Bill Clements, who works at Trans Allegheny Books in Charleston.

"I tell people to bring us a sample when they cook something up," Clements said. "He's already in the second printing, and it's only a month or so since it's out. A lot of times you'll press 1,000 and not expect to sell it for a year or more."

Hodge, of the Humane Society, said Eberbaugh's book is part of a bigger trend, as evidenced by paperweights and candies shaped like squashed animals with tire tread marks through them.

Several years ago, one ghoulish professor even published a "Field Guide to Flattened Fauna," Hodge said.

About 1 million animals a day die on U.S. highways, but deer usually are the only road kill sought for dinner, he said.

Did someone say deer? That's almost too tame for Eberbaugh.

Some other samples from his book:

"I squashed a little kittycat — doggone shame; flat as a pancake and stuck to the frame; right beside the manifold it cooks real slow; depending on the weather and how fast ya go."

Despite his outlandish recipes, Eberbaugh said he welcomes book sales but fears fame, and he won't divulge the name of the Charleston hospital where he works.

"I don't want any aggravation," he said.

The book can be ordered by sending $7.95 per book, plus $2 for shipping and handling, to "Gourmet Style Road Kill Cooking," P.O. Box 13592, Sissonville, W.Va., 25360.

Book's recipes are far from conventional

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Here are some recipes from Jeff Eberbaugh's "Gourmet Style Road Kill Cooking":

ROAST VENISON

Roast venison is best to be thoroughly larded, using a half a pound of pork to a leg or saddle weighing 8 to 10 pounds. Trim to a good shape. Roast in a hot oven, basting at the end of the first 5 minutes and every 15 minutes after. It is nice to use claret along with the pan drippings. An hour and a quarter will cook it very rare; for more people an hour and three-quarters will be real fine.

Make a good gravy from the drippings in the pan, adding stock made from the bits of meat trimmed away before roasting.

FILLET OF VENISON

Have as many steaks as there are to be covers (number of people to be served). Trim and flatten into good shape. Lard one side of each steak with tiny strips of pork and lay them in an earthen dish with salt, pepper, a chopped onion, a minced carrot, 2 bay leaves, 2 sprigs of thyme, ½ cup salad oil and ½ cup vinegar. Let them steep in this mixture for about 6 hours, turning often. Twenty minutes before serving, drain and wipe them. Fry them to a handsome brown in a little very hot salt pork fat. It must be done quickly or they will be come tough. Serve on a hot platter with brown gravy, made from the marinade.

Following cooking instructions important for toaster pastry

By Linda Anderson

Have you noticed that it's possible to have three meals a day, plus snacks, only from foods available in the supermarket freezer section?

Anderson

For breakfast, you can buy everything from waffles to eggs and sausage to donuts. Since the last thing many of us want first thing in the morning is a big breakfast, I decided to try something smaller and share it with my co-workers.

Pillsbury Toaster Strudel is a frozen pastry that is made for breakfasts. A 11.5-ounce box that contains six individual-sized pastries cost $1.79. That means a really, really light breakfast of Toaster Strudel costs about 30 cents.

Toaster Strudel comes in four flavors — apple, cinnamon, strawberry and blueberry (ours was strawberry). Each fruit-filled pastry, designed to be heated in the toaster or toaster oven, comes with an individual packet of glaze to be drizzled over the top of the warmed pastry at the diner's discression.

Label advertising claims Toaster Strudel is "The Incredibly Flaky Breakfast Pastry!" and then continues: "With one bite of Toaster Strudel, you'll be amazed that pastries from the toaster could be this light and flaky. Everyone in the family will love them! Be sure to treat your kids, who'll have fun using the separate icing packets.

"Toaster Strudel is great with coffee or juice for a quick breakfast treat."

Nutrition information reveals that although the pastries may be quick to fix and sweet to eat, they aren't exactly paragons of nutritional virtue. One pastry contains 190 calories and 9 grams of fat (or 81 calories — almost half — from fat). The same pastry contains 5 grams of cholesterol, though, so I guess that's something.

In the taste test we learned why the back of the box warns: "Not recommended for use in microwave oven." Since we were tasting the pastries at work and since the only way we had to heat them up was in the microwave, that's what we did. They came out mooshy and not flaky enough, and as they cooled they became tough. No wonder microwaving is not recommended.

However, we were able to taste them enough to know that they were OK — no more and no less than that. While Toaster Strudel frozen pastries are quick and easy, they are really nothing spectacular. For a breakfast-on-the-run or a quick treat for kids, great. Don't go feeding them to company you want to impress, though.

Short cuts to cooking rice offered to cooks with fast paced lives

N.Y. Times News Service

To cut down the cooking time for brown or wild rice, soak it overnight.

For brown rice, the water-to-rice ratio is 2 to 1. For wild rice, cover with a generous amount of water, several inches above the rice.

Soak the rice in a covered pot and keep in the refrigerator about six hours or overnight.

To cook brown rice, bring rice and water to a boil; reduce the heat, cover and simmer until the rice is tender and the water has been absorbed, about 20 minutes.

For wild rice, drain then add enough water to cover generously. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer until rice is tender, 17 to 20 minutes. Drain and serve.

At The OPTIFAST® Program, You'd Be Surprised How We Measure Up.

It's a rare weight management program that measures up in both inches and dollars. Yet, that is what's surprising people about The OPTIFAST Program.

CALCULATE YOUR POTENTIAL WEIGHT LOSS

_____ (Your current weight) X .20 = _____ (Your potential weight loss after six months)*

A recent study shows that half of all people who completed 26 weeks of the Program maintained, on average, over 70% of their initial weight loss one year after completing the active weight loss phase of the Program. Our special maintenance program is recommended for helping you maintain your goal.

When it comes to dollars, our weight management Program can cost less than many commercial diets, if you have 50 lbs. or more to lose. Ask us about insurance coverage and flexible financing, too.

DEAR ABBY

Closed-captioned TV not just for hard of hearing

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for Cora Laird of Iowa who complained about how difficult it is to hear the dialogue over the noisy background sounds that many television shows feel are necessary. To her list, may I add: waterfalls, street traffic, but mostly — background music. (In some cases I have concluded the dialogue is secondary to the music, since there is no way I can hear what is being said!) I also wear a hearing aid.

Van Buren

Your suggestion to write to the various sponsors was a bit impractical, since in a two-hour show there are approximately seven breaks with eight or nine commercials, plus TV ads in each one. Besides, the commercials are not the main problem — I just hit the mute button; it's trying to hear the show itself.

The only way to reach the "powers that be" is through your column. A letter would not carry the clout your column does. If they would put filters in their ears, they might find out how truly irritating these background sounds are.

Have others written to substantiate this ongoing problem? — HAD IT WITH BACKGROUND IN THOUSAND PALMS, CALIF.

DEAR HAD IT: I have received hundreds of letters with the same complaint — however, one contained the following good news. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: There are about 20 million people in the United States with some degree of hearing loss — also millions of recent immigrants still struggling to learn English. In addition, there are millions of adults who are learning disabled, or simply never learned to read.

What do they all have in common? They can all benefit from closed-captioned television. The problem: Very few of them realize they can be helped by closed-captions, let alone own the caption decoder needed to decode the otherwise invisible subtitle-like captions that are broadcast with many television shows, and recorded with many home rental video movies. (Contrary to popular belief, closed-captions are not just for deaf and hard-of-hearing people.)

The good news: Many people who become deaf early in life own a caption decoder. The National Captioning Institute claims that half the caption decoders sold were sold to Hispanic and Asian Americans who find it easier to understand new idioms and strange English expressions when they can read and hear the words at the same time.

The bad news: People who lose their hearing late in life either don't know about closed-captions, or consider "dependency" on captions as a sign of aging.

More good news: Starting July 1, 1993, ALL television sets 13 inches or larger made or sold in the United States will have a closed-caption decoder built inside!

Abby, please educate your readers and encourage them to turn on the decoder at all times if they have children at home who are reading at or below fourth-grade level. That little decoder chip inside the television set may help put a permanent dent in the illiteracy rates of this country. — ANDREA SHETTLE, GALLAUDET COLLEGE, WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR ANDREA: Thank you for your informative letter. I am sure many will be very interested in the information you have to share.

AND DEAR READERS: Anyone interested in learning more about closed-caption technology may contact: National Captioning Institute Inc., 5203 Leesburg Pike, 15th Flbor, Falls Church, Va. 22041. NCI has two toll-free numbers: (800) 533-9673 for hearing people, and (800) 321-8337 for deaf and speech-impaired people.

ROASTED RABBIT

A rabbit should be drawn as soon as possible after taking, but should not be skinned until ready to use. They are best in the fall or early winter when they are young.

Skin and wipe the rabbit, stuff and sew up carefully. Truss the forelegs back and the hind legs forward and put in a baking pan. Fasten thin slices of bacon over the shoulders and back. Put into a quick oven and bake 1½ hours, basting every 15 minutes with ¼ cup butter in ½ cup boiling water. Turn the rabbit several times while baking. When half done, dredge with flour and baste once more. Remove to a hot platter and garnish with slices of lemon and watercress.

Stuffing for rabbit: Make a moist stuffing as for chicken, using the water in which the giblets were boiled and adding the minced giblet meat.

SQUIRREL POT-PIE

Prepare squirrels as rabbits, cut in pieces, flour and fry brown in a little good dripping, and place in a stew pan. Add one quart boiling water, ½ lemon sliced very thin, a teaspoon salt, a small glass of sherry and one minced onion fried brown in a tablespoon of butter. Cover all closely and stew for an hour. Make a delicate biscuit crust, cut in rounds and lay them on top of the squirrel. Let them boil, covered closely, for 15 minutes. Pile the squirrel in the center of a hot platter, arrange dumplings along it. Thicken the gravy with one tablespoon of flour, browned in one tablespoon of butter, and pour gravy over meat.

SCALLOPED TONGUE

1 pint of chopped beef tongue
2 teaspoons onion juice
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon capers
1 cup bread crumbs
½ cup stock
3 tablespoons butter

Butter the scallop dish, cover the bottom with bread crumbs. Mix meat with parsley, salt, capers and pepper. Distribute this over the bread crumbs. Add some of the butter between layers, pour the stock and onion juice over all and add the remaining crumbs and butter for the top layer. Bake 20 minutes in 350 degree oven.

Halloween costumes mirror public figures

BOSTON (AP) — Norman Schwarzkopf and Saddam Hussein could be ringing your doorbell soon. Or perhaps even Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill.

But it is more likely you will encounter The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Freddy Krueger of "Nightmare on Elm Street," Scarlett O'Hara or The Terminator.

And what will they say? "Trick or treat."

Merchants report that the tried and true in spooky garb are the most popular costumes among trick-or-treaters, although current pop hits are stirring attention.

Astrid's Costume Attic in Buena Park, Calif., for example, reports success with an outfit similar to the green garb worn by Kevin Costner in his Robin Hood movie.

In the South, they're expecting a surge of Scarlett O'Hara wear. In Portland, Ore., the Energizer Bunny is big. Beer can outfits are doing well in Indiana. Pee-wee Herman is still big in New York. The Addams Family is emerging in New Jersey. And Arnold Schwarzenegger as The Terminator is showing up frequently around Los Angeles.

But the Persian Gulf War has received a cool reception. Although one Nashville store reported great interest in Saddam and Schwarzkopf, many stores around the country say the masks are not moving.

"We can't believe it. We haven't rented one," said Pat Edgecomb, assistant manager of Costumes Unlimited in Indianapolis. She added that customers also have turned up their noses at the store's stock of mock gas masks.

Basically, little in the costume business has changed in recent years, merchants say. Slashers are still runaway favorites, especially the razor-fingered menace Freddy Krueger, the hockey-masked killer Jason of the "Friday the 13th" series, and Chucky, the homicidal doll of "Child's Play."

"Kids relate to all these horror things," not people in the news, said owner Harold Bengin at Jack's Joke Shop in Boston.

"A lot of people, a lot of young kids especially, want to be Freddy," said Bruce Campbell of The Costume Corner in Westfield, N.J.

And the Ninja Turtles.

Costume Unlimited's Edgecomb said she regrets having deemed the turtles out of fashion and not stocking up on their costumes this year, having received numerous requests for them.

Other Halloween revelers are sticking to standbys.

"A lot of people want the typical vampire — Dracula and Frankenstein," said Damion Browning.

Chinese try to keep abacus alive, clicking

BEIJING (AP) — Huang Jian, a 57-year-old accountant, has used an abacus every day for nearly four decades. Her daughter-in-law Xu Dan, also an accountant, can barely use one.

Traditionalists at the National Abacus Association fear Xu represents the future — a future in which the abacus won't be alive and clicking much longer.

Schools barely bother anymore with the abacus, China's ancient calculating tool. Too many Chinese, especially the young, prefer Western things.

Eventually, the association thinks the country that invented the abacus 2,000 years ago will join the rest of the world by relying on calculators — and computers.

The thought upsets Huang.

"For adding and subtracting, the abacus is a lot faster and more accurate," she said, running her hands over her rosewood abacus, its beads worn smooth from years of use.

Last month the association held the first National Abacus Knowledge Competition to promote interest in the tool. About 2.4 million people competed. The finals were shown on national television.

The three first-place winners received almost $2,000, about 15 months pay for the average worker.

Most of the competition was devoted to testing contestants' knowledge of the history and techniques of the abacus. But they also had to prove their skill.

Semifinalists had to add 15 numbers of up to 10 digits, add and subtract 20 numbers of up to 10 digits, and multiply and divide 20 numbers of up to seven digits — all within three minutes.

Fingers flew. All 24 semi-finalists at one contest site finished clicking their calculations before their time was up — and all had the right answers.

A standard Chinese abacus is made up of nine vertical rows of seven wooden, movable beads. Each row represents a decimal place. Beads are shifted in specified patterns to add, subtract, multiply and divide.

The abacus' first historical mention is in a book from the 2nd century. There is no record of it again until the 15th century, but historians say it became popular during the intervening years.

The imperial government, however, looked down on the abacus because it was used mainly by merchants, who were at the bottom of the social order. The official counting method of the time used bamboo sticks.

The abacus association says up to 60 million Chinese use the abacus regularly in their jobs as accountants, bookkeepers, cashiers and clerks.

Li Xin, consultant for the National Abacus Association, said a good user can add and subtract up to 600 numerals in a minute.

Village ordinance forbids outhouses

MORRISTOWN, Ohio (AP) — You can admire them for their historic value, but it's now illegal to use or build a working outhouse in this eastern Ohio town.

The village council on Monday passed an ordinance prohibiting outdoor bathrooms in the Belmont County town of 400.

"I haven't had luck in getting the help of the state in building a sewage system, and that's why we don't need more outside toilets," Mayor Betty June Hamilton said Wednesday.

But the law does not prohibit ornamental or non-working outhouses.

"Our town is a historic town. If somebody has an outhouse that he or she wants to preserve but not use it, that's fine," she said.

Ms. Hamilton said there is a working outhouse near the Town Hall. The outhouse was built under the federal Works Progress Administration during the Great Depression.

She said it might be kept there "as a reminder of the past."
