Tangled Wreckage Of Lady Heath's Plane

This tangled mass of wreckage was all that was left of Lady Mary Heath's airplane after the famous English aviatrix crashed through the roof of a factory building in Cleveland. She was the first woman to fly from Cape Town, Africa, to Cairo, Egypt, and thence to London. She came to Cleveland to take part in the National Air Races.

Scores Visit At Wildcat Well 67 Miles From City

Marland Well In Cochran County Makes Showing Of Four Million Feet Of Gas, Driller Reports

Scores of people of the South Plains were Sunday visitors at the wildcat well being drilled by the Marland Oil company in Cochran county. A continuous stream of people visited the derrick all day after news had appeared in the Sunday Avalanche-Journal that a gasser had been made of the well, according to Earl Carothers, driller.

The present well is an offset to another wildcat drilled by this same company. It is reported that the original well was abandoned at 3,000 feet to start a new well that was to be drilled to a salt water formation or oil. This contract was entered into by the Service Contract company and the Marland operators.

Sand Is Promising The present well has reached a promising sand at 4,765 feet with a showing of gas that amounts to about one-quarter million feet per day. Carothers, the driller, on duty Sunday afternoon said, "A great amount of precaution is taken to ward off any possible danger of fire. The gas is of the non-poisonous variety."

The well is located 5 miles due west of Leham in the Slaughterlands, forty-eight miles from Littlefield, and sixty-seven miles almost due west of Lubbock.

Kiddies Feted On Labor Day

Labor Day, to the majority, was just another day, but to forty unfortunate children of Lubbock it was a gala day in their lives and one to turn their sorrowing little hearts into a pean of song.

Under the direction of Mrs. Tom Foster, Miss Lela Jones and Mrs. W. T. Milam, a picnic was served them at Tumble N swimming pool, following a plunge into the waters of the city's playground.

The picnic and swim were made possible through the Avalanche-Journal and Federated Aid societies milk and ice fund and through the courtesy of city officials who offered the pool free of charge.

A score or more poverty stricken families of Lubbock have been aided through the hot summer months through this fund, with Mrs. Milam as chairman and director of the work. Milk, food and even clothing have been furnished while committees have worked unceasingly and citizens have been generous in their donations to the cause.

Cops Charged In 'Shakedown' Ring

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2. (AP)—The federal prohibition office disclosed today that sixty-two Los Angeles police officers, ranging from captains down to patrolmen, had been listed by them as members of an alleged "shakedown" ring exacting tribute from bootleggers.

It also was disclosed that Harry D. MacDonald, Whittier, bootlegger, who made a 42-page statement to District Attorney Byron Fitts, last week, accusing 24 police officers of a similar practice, had been arrested as a result of a federal investigation which extended over several months.

Deputy District Attorney David Clark revealed that MacDonald had declared an empty Main street movie theatre was the liquor storage and "pay-off" station used by police. He was quoted as saying he was "tired of the continued tribute" exacted by the police.

Lubbock Delegates Stick By Guns In Verbal Fight For Kiwanis Convention

Governor Election Holds Attention At Tulsa Meet

By CHARLES A. GUY, Avalanche-Journal Staff

TULSA, Sept. 2.—Delegates seeking the 1930 convention for Lubbock, San Angelo and Fort Worth found the spotlight of publicity dividing time with those clubs aspiring to elect a fellow member as governor for the next term, as the first day of business ended at the annual meeting of the Texas-Oklahoma district, Kiwanis International, here today.

Three candidates were being boosted royally. They are Lieutenant-Governor Harmon Allen, El Reno, Oklahoma; Lieutenant-Governor E. L. Mitchell, Clinton, Oklahoma, and former Lieutenant-Governor L. D. Hudson, Dewey, Oklahoma.

One of the three will be chosen to succeed Lawrence A. McDonald, Denton, Texas, at the close of the present convention, and El Reno's Allen appears to be the strongest candidate.

The convention turned from business to pleasure tonight as the stage was set for the grand ball at Hotel Mayo. Convention boosters from Lubbock, San Angelo and Fort Worth, however, were sticking to their guns and were mixing fun and business with verbal seige guns booming incessantly.

From indications tonight, the final battle will be waged between San Angelo and Lubbock, Fort Worth appearing to lag ground.

Bodies Wash Ashore LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 2. (AP)—The newspaper Diario De Lisboa today expressed belief that the body of a fair-haired youth clad in a yellow rubber suit and wearing aviation goggles washed up on Ericeteira beach was that of one of the two Swiss youths who set out to cross the Atlantic on August 19.

Lead by Fire Chief W. E. Twitty and units of the local fire department, several hundred members of organized labor in Lubbock Monday paraded double file through the streets of the city from 8:30 to 9 o'clock, preceding the big Labor Day celebration in its third day at the Johnston ranch, 16 miles southeast of the city.

The craftsmen marched from Avenue F down Broadway to Avenue G and north to Main street, and west on Main to Avenue M, south to Broadway, and thence east on Broadway to Avenue G, where they disbanded for the day of rest and celebration.

Guardsmen March Following the firemen was a battery unit of the local contingent of the National Guard, followed by the craftsmen.

Barbers were uniformed with white jackets, carpenters were clad in white overalls, electrical workers wore striped overalls and the

Texas Bankers Association President Is Principal Speaker; Next Meeting Will Be In Big Spring

(Special To The Avalanche) MIDLAND, Sept. 2.—Two committees were appointed to draft resolutions favoring the plan of regional clearing houses here today when 30 South Plains bankers met in semi-annual session of the South Plains Bankers' association. O. P. Thrane, president of the association, presided at the meeting which was an all-day affair.

Problems of banks and bankers were discussed by the meeting at some length and several prominent speakers appeared on the program. H. W. Horne, of Galveston, president of the Texas Bankers' association, was the feature speaker and took as his subject "Regional Clearing Houses." Mr. Horne explained the use of the clearing houses and how it would be of benefit to banks of this section. It would keep the unit banks as they are now operated in force and, according to his report, has always proved itself a success wherever used. The resolution for approval will be presented at the next meeting of the group to be held April 21, 1930, in Big Spring. The last meeting was held in Lubbock.

Drexel On Program Other speakers to appear were C. F. Drexel, of Lubbock, who spoke on "Efficiency of Loan Administration"; R. A. Underwood, Plainview, "Trends of the Times"; Morgan Copeland, Brownfield, "Tax Problems of Banks"; Mr. Barron Lamesa, "Diversification."

A luncheon was served the gathering during the noon hour at the Scharbauer Hotel, and here a short program was held. Following the luncheon the afternoon session began at the Ritz Theatre in this city and the convention was brought to a close late in the day.

"Whitey" Walker Refuses To Divulge Secret Of Automatic Pistol Strapped On His Leg At Borger

(By Associated Press) BORGER, Sept. 2.—William J. (Whitey) Walker, in an affable chat with newspapermen and photographers today, smilingly refused to tell where he got the automatic pistol which officers found strapped on his leg when they lodged him in jail here yesterday after an all night trip from Colorado Springs, Colo. He promised to tell the secret later to Sheriff

Joe Ownbey, however. Walker, sought since he escaped during his murder trial here in 1927, also is wanted in Oklahoma for aggravated robbery. When the authorities found the gun, he told them he had intended to use it before submitting to extradition to Oklahoma. Texas was granted custody of the alleged bad man in a hearing at Denver Saturday.

Indictments charging the murder of three peace officers of Hutchinson county are pending against Walker. Sheriff Ownbey did not feel that he had been menaced in the trip from Colorado Springs. "We did not search Whitey at Colorado Springs when he was turned over to us at the city jail after some delay," Ownbey said. "Whitey would not have had the slightest opportunity to use 40 guns on the way back."

Newly Regained Palestine Calm Is Broken as Fighting Is Resumed; Check Of Dead Still Incomplete

(By Associated Press) JERUSALEM, Sept. 2.—Arab attacks on two Jewish colonies in the Tiberias district in the northwest, both of which were repulsed by the inhabitants, were the only occurrences today to break the newly regained calm in Palestine.

One attack was on Hittin, colony of Orthodox Jews, and the other directed against Mizpah, where the farm of Lord Melchett, British Zionist leader, is situated.

High commissioner chancellor today received representatives of the Jewish national council who demanded creation of a Jewish militia punishment of the guilty and relief for riot victims.

Dr. Josky, director of the Hadassan medical service, returned from Safed and reported that looted city was still burning with a check of the dead still incomplete.

Commercial Pilot Is Thrown from Ship In Accident

(By Associated Press) WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 2.—Two women were burned to death and a pilot severely burned and injured in a plane crash at the flying field at Misquamicutt, a nearby shore resort, late today. The women were Mrs. Marie A. Hunter, 31, of Westfield, Mass., and Miss Marie Day, 20, of West Springfield, Mass. The pilot was Arthur Manning of Hartford, Conn.

Manning, a commercial pilot, had just taken off and had not yet got very high when his motor began to miss. He turned and tried to land but the ship struck its left wing throwing him out. Manning, although badly hurt, scrambled to his feet and tried to overtake the plane, which had righted itself and was skidding dangerously along the field. When he reached the plane it was in flames. He was unable to help the two women strapped in their seats.

Named Fleet Champ GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 2. (AP)—The Progress, captained by Manuel Domingos, who retired from the sea 15 years ago and then returned to show his rivals how to sail a boat, was declared champion of the North Atlantic fleet tonight as a result of her victory over three other Gloucester schooners today.

The original plan made it necessary for the champion to win two races but the anxiety of the fishermen contented to return to the captains to agree after today's race fishing grounds caused the four to end the series and call the Progress the victor.

Giant Airliner Keeps Both Sides Of Atlantic Posted On Progress In Fifth Time Over Route

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The Graf Zeppelin gave the navy department its 11 p. m. (E. S. T.) position tonight as 36.15 north latitude and 21.15 west longitude, placing it approximately 600 miles west of Lisbon.

The fleet dirigible Graf Zeppelin continued to put miles of overwater flying behind her last night as she headed for her home hangar at Friedrichshafen.

French radio stations received word that at 3:00 p. m. (E. S. T.) the position of the airship was 200 miles north and slightly west of the Azores. The position given indicated that the Zeppelin, making its fifth trans-Atlantic crossing within a year, had already covered about 3,400 miles in slightly less than 21 hours.

Averages 77 Miles This would mean an average speed of about 77 miles an hour. Apparently there was no bad weather ahead, however, except for electrical storms in the Bay of Biscay. The Zeppelin, through her radio, kept both sides of the Atlantic informed as to her progress.

Flowers and Gay Drapes Enliven Room For Child

By ELLEN D. WANGNER. Editor The American Home Magazine. Written for Central Press.

Junior furniture, designed for the child from four to 14 years, solves the problem of furnishing a permanent room for the child after he leaves the nursery. Much of this furniture is both imaginative in conception and practical in construction and meets the needs of his growing body and the changing interests of his mind.

A bed with low foot-board and no infantile side pieces, built like those used by grownups, appeals to the four-year-old and is satisfactory to the 14-year-old. A knee-hole desk and straight back chair are as businesslike for study as the one father uses in his den. Small chests of drawers, miniature replicas of father's chest of drawers or mother's dresser, are scaled to the needs of the young occupant and depend upon their surface and decoration alone for their classification as juvenile furniture.

The decoration of junior furniture is calculated to appeal to the child's imagination. One suite with a fourpost bed has a baseboard decorated with a landscape showing a little house at the top of a hill, and each of the four posts is a green fir tree. Another bed in a group of juvenile furniture has each of the four posts decorated with alphabet blocks, with A for apple and B for ball illustrated in the primary colors. Still another popular set of furniture for the junior room appeals especially to the growing boy. The baseboard of the bed resembles the front of an automobile, with the headlights, the headboard has two open squares like the back window of a limousine. The knee-hole desk of this suite is a barn. The straight desk chair bears the legend, "No Parking" across the back, and the costume is a top hat and a traffic signal.

Children love flowers, and a window box in the child's room not only gives him the responsibility of a daily task, but develops his interest in growing things. The child's instinct to mark on the wall as forestalled by the use of wall-paper which resembles a child's drawing. A child map design, done in this manner, is one of the favorites.

Linoleum, with washable scatter rugs over it, is a practical floor covering for the child's room, for the inevitable tracks of wet or muddy shoes are easily removed from both linoleum and rugs of this type.

How to Achieve Beauty

Frequently every woman should give herself a simple hand-and-arm treatment with massage. The arms play such a prominent part in beauty today. Sleeveless, informal summer gowns are but a prelude to the sleeveless formal fall and winter styles. And nothing is more startlingly unattractive than to see coarse-skinned, unshapely arms and hands next to a sheer lovely gown. By contrast, with smooth silky fabrics and smart lines, these defects stand out lamentably.

The proper hand and arm massage either builds up or reduces the contour to shapely lines; by establishing right circulation through the skin and muscle tissues. The surface layers of the skin improve remarkably, too, under the regime of massage, combined with suitable creams and lotions.

For a complete treatment set aside an hour. First cleanse the hands and arms with a good cleansing cream. A pasteurized cream such as you use for your face is especially well suited to this purpose—although an oily cleansing and massage cream is excellent if your skin is very dry. Remove the cream with a soft cloth or cleansing tissue.

Next apply a liquid bleach—peroxide and lemon juice is a good home-made one—to clear and lighten the skin. Elbows especially, need a bleach at all seasons of the year. Now comes the massage. Use your cleansing cream for this. If your skin is dry and your hands and arms thin or wrinkled, mix a rich, anti-wrinkle cream with your cleanser. Spread the cream all over your left hand and arm first, then with the thumb and forefinger of your right hand work down from each finger to the wrist as if you were putting on a close-fitting glove. Now massage around the fingers and thumb, from tip to base with a spiral motion. Massage the hand from knuckles to wrist along each slender bone, using a creeping, pressing movement of your right thumb and forefinger. Now work around the "bracelet-line" of your wrist, using a firm wringing movement of thumb and four fingertips.

As you massage your arm from wrist to elbow, and elbow to shoulder, use the fingers and palm of your whole hand. Grip the flesh firmly and massage with a spiral motion, around and around the arm, working always upward toward the heart. Massage until the flesh is rosy. Then repeat the process for the other arm. Finish by putting on a good skin toning lotion to firm the skin and close the pores.

For an evening make-up complete this treatment by sponging on a snow lotion or liquid powder. A final dusting of face powder completes the perfect, well-groomed effect.

Record Of Births Here Not Complete

About 42 per cent of the children born in Lubbock county during 1928 were registered by the physician or mid-wife in attendance, according to figures compiled from data secured by the scholastic census enumerators and checked with the birth certificates on file with the State Department of Health. Many of the children born in Lubbock county during 1928 were deprived of the protection of a legal record of their age, parentage and citizenship. This failure is also causing the veterans of the World war and their widows a considerable amount of trouble and expense in filing claims for compensation with the Veterans' bureau.

A concerted drive is being made at this time in an effort to improve registration in Texas so that it may be admitted to the Federal Registration Area during 1929. If this is to be done the combined efforts of all civic agencies and local officials is necessary. Only two other states in the Union are at this time, ninety per cent efficiency is required for admission.

Tariff Test Vote Looms As Lines Of Party Tighten

Question Of Limiting Tariff Revision To Agricultural Products Forms Problem To Solons

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Faced with the possibility of another test vote on the question of limiting tariff revision to agricultural products, there was a tightening of party lines in the senate today as that body made ready for opening the battle on the floor.

The measure will not come up for debate before Thursday, but soundings were being made to determine the strength of the opponents with the expectation that Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, minority member of the finance committee, would seek priority consideration of his resolution to impose the limitation.

A meeting of the finance committee has been called for Wednesday to act upon the formal report, but a republican majority assures the adoption of a favorable recommendation. The bill is expected to lay over a day under the rules.

There has been no announcement of the method the republicans would choose to cope with the Thomas resolution if it should be injected into the debate when it opens. A similar proposal by Senator Borah of Idaho came within one vote of being adopted last June.

Under regular procedure, however, committee amendments would be in order for consideration first.

Maker Of Nelly Don Dresses Started Making Aprons

By JULIA BLANSHARD NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Nelly Donnelly is a Kansas City woman who has sewn up a million dollars! Her success story also reveals a trusting husband who tied his apron strings onto his wife's apron strings. For Nelly Donnelly, now manufacturer of all types of women's clothes, started her business by making gay, one-piece kitchen apron-dresses in the old-fashioned early 1900's when women usually wore long skirts, dressing waques, kid curlers and bouffant caps around the house.

It was her husband's savings that bought her her start. Nell had left the farm in Parsons, Kansas, to work and save for college. Instead she fell in love with Paul Donnelly who sat across the boardroom table from her. She was just 17 when she got married and without knowing it, got her college course as well. For her new husband was a feminist almost before the word was coined and saw no reason why his girl-bridge should make college just because she loved him. Together they saved and Nell matriculated and eventually got her college degree. In a time when it was slightly scandalous for married women to go to college.

Upon graduation Nell moved into a little bungalow in the suburbs of Kansas City. Nell said emphatically to her husband, "It is awfully nice to be your wife, dear, but do I really have to look as 'married' as my neighbors do in their faded and lumpy house clothes?" "I hope not," was his answer. So Nell started out to buy herself a few pretty printed frocks and aprons, to make dishwashing a little more entertaining and to give zest to cooking, scrubbing, washing and bed-making.

But she could not find them! House dresses on the market for women 25 years ago were as unimpaired, drab and ill-fitting as prison wrappers which they vaguely resembled.

Nell refused to buy them, bought herself some remnants, cut her own patterns on the parlor floor and made some original, dashing-looking little frocks, a picnic chambray with white ruffles, green print with lavender touches and a stunning orange one that almost made it an adventure to hang out the clothes and shock her neighbors at her frivolous appearance.

A Pretty Ambition "I remember protesting to the criticism of one older woman that I intended to look pretty always, work or no work." Mrs. Donnelly laughed at the little girl-wife she then was. She replied, rather frigidly that I would learn! Mrs. Donnelly did. She learned the next Christmas when she sent friends some similar house-frocks for gifts and they liked them so much they urged her to go into business and give orders for copies. She discussed it with her husband, told him her idea of selling her dresses to stores and he urged her to go ahead. Then she spent a day going the rounds showing her samples and came home with orders. He gave her the family savings to buy a power machine, hire helpers and the attic of their home was her first factory.

Business thrived, the war came and her husband enlisted. She carried on and what with Hoover aprons and Red Cross uniforms, in addition to her own lines, she built up such a big business she had to move into a huge factory.

The day Paul Donnelly came back after the Armistice, Nelly Don, as her friends all call her, showed her husband a list of orders she herself had placed amounting to a year's business of a quarter of a million dollars. The business was humming so fast that he took over the sales.

AND NOW IS MANUFACTURER OF WOMEN'S CLOTHES

New York: Nell Donnelly . . . "ready to challenge Paris frocks, let alone end while Mrs. Donnelly bought materials, designed dresses and managed.

With increasing beauty in women's apparel, Mrs. Donnelly sought out new fabrics, new styles, new lines. Her frocks began to come out of the kitchen and out the front door to the country clubs, sports and visiting. Now she makes a tremendous variety of clothes, in innumerable colors, patterns and styles.

Has Confidence in Others She now has two other women associated with her in business: Mrs. D. D. Mackay who goes all over Europe and America picking fabrics and designs and Miss Mona Ryan who is sales representative in New York and other Eastern cities. For Mrs. Donnelly has tremendous confidence in other women's successes, too.

Another thing for which Mrs. Donnelly deserves a word of praise: Kind friends advised her to get a Fifth Avenue, N. Y., address for her house-frocks, thinking it would be advantageous for their style value. "My answer to them all has been 'Kansas City bought my dresses and Kansas City makes them.' I could not think of having them appear in disguise. They are mid-west products, proud of it and ready to challenge Paris frocks, let alone New York!"

Delay Caused In Pearson Contest

Several Weeks Will Be Required Before Ruling In Bankruptcy Hearing Can Be Made, Says Pearson

Several weeks will be required before a ruling can be made in the case wherein Leonard Pearson, trustee, contests the deeds of trust executed to seven major creditors of Barriere Brothers, Inc., bankrupt, according to an announcement made Monday by W. D. Girard, judge of the hearing.

The seven creditors involved in the hearing were Marshall Field & Company, McElroy Sloan Shoe Company, Kleth Brothers Hat Company, Hole Proof Hosiery Mills, Heldman Clothing Company, Citizens National Bank (Lubbock) and Perkins Dry Goods Company.

Mussolini Plans To Resign Office

ROME, Sept. 2.—It is reported here that Premier Mussolini expects to retire from the post of minister of the interior in the Italian cabinet, although he will continue to hold sufficient ministerial posts to make himself a quorum. The Mackmen fell on George Pippas in the third inning of the morning game for a six run rally that brought them a ten to three victory. A rally in the ninth inning of the close afternoon contest added 11 by a 4 to 3 score. Today's victory was Philadelphia's first over Pippas this season.

This afternoon they had to overcome a Yankee lead gained when the New Yorkers drove Rube Walberg from the mound with four runs in the sixth frame. Ehmske stopped the Yankee scoring and the Athletics bunched three hits with an error for a pair of counters in the ninth.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—The Athletics removed the last lingering doubt about the American League pennant race today by taking both ends of a holiday double header from the Yanks and running their lead to 12 1-2 games.

The Mackmen fell on George Pippas in the third inning of the morning game for a six run rally that brought them a ten to three victory. A rally in the ninth inning of the close afternoon contest added 11 by a 4 to 3 score. Today's victory was Philadelphia's first over Pippas this season.

This afternoon they had to overcome a Yankee lead gained when the New Yorkers drove Rube Walberg from the mound with four runs in the sixth frame. Ehmske stopped the Yankee scoring and the Athletics bunched three hits with an error for a pair of counters in the ninth.

Panthers Divide Twin Bill With Wichita Spudders

Cats Gain Even Break As Umpire Awards Second Game To Fort Worth On Grounds Of Stalling

PORT WORTH, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Fort Worth split a double bill with Wichita Falls today when Umpire Grigg awarded the second game to the Cats on the ground that the Spudders were stalling.

The Galloymen, after winning the first 8 to 6, with a last round rally of four runs, had a squad of hurriers badly battered by Fort Worth in the fourth round, with the Cats busily breaking a 8-all tie. The Spudders began to slow up and Grigg decided they were stalling in order that darkness might fall before the necessary five rounds were played and forfeited the contest.

Idalou Wildcats Begin Grid Work

Forty Candidates Report For Initial Workout Of Season Under Coach L. F. Swinney; 10 Vets Return

Forty candidates answered the first call of Coach L. F. Swinney yesterday for the opening of the football training season at Idalou high school.

Ten letter men from the 1928 season were among those who donned the moleskins for the initial workout here Monday afternoon. Around these experienced veterans, Coach Swinney hopes to build a formidable grid machine to place on the field when the season gets under way.

The Wildcats are promised a fleet corps of ball carriers this season with a backfield built around the Yarbrough twins, Wheeler at quarterback and Sheppard at half. All are letter men.

Following are the veteran line-men who have returned: Dodson, Weaver, Easter, Scott, Laasater and Hutson.

A host of newcomers were out for the first day's workouts and from the group, Coach Swinney expects to find a number of valuable additions to the first eleven. The success of the team will depend upon the development of a strong forward wall, the Idalou mentor said.

WESTBURY, N. J. Sept. 2.—(AP)—Greentree's crack four swamped Old Aiken, national junior title holders, under an avalanche of goals to win their first round national open polo combat by a score of 19 to 10, on International field here today.

YOUTH STARTS EARLY Dunlap began putting on the second where he rammed home a forty footer. He sank a 12 footer on the tenth and a 30 footer on the thirteenth, and another of 15 feet on the seventeenth.

Dunlap and Jones were the only players to crash par but four others equalled "perfect 72."

Most of the stars, with the single and surprising exception of George Voight, New York's favorite, came here today.

Ten Thousand Thrilled As First Mid-Air Transfer Of Passenger From Dirigible To Plane Is Made At Races

Here's how an airplane was hooked on to a giant dirigible and a passenger transferred to the plane in mid-air in the first test of the kind ever made, witnessed by 10,000 awed spectators at the National Air Races at Cleveland. Lieutenant A. W. Gordon, navy flier, below, hooked his standard navy fighting plane (shown below) to a device lowered from the Los Angeles and Lieutenant Calvin Bolster climbed down to the plane. Above is the Los Angeles over the airport, with an arrow indicating a sketch showing how the hook-up between plane and dirigible was made. The thrilling mid-air stunt was performed to demonstrate the ability of dirigibles as airplane carriers, as the two new dirigibles now being built for the navy will each carry several planes to take off and return in mid-air.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT Hear me, O Lord, for thy loving kindness is good: turn unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

GOING AFTER CONVENTIONS WHETHER or not the hard-fighting, long-talking and otherwise energetic representatives of the Lubbock Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs, who are today sweating at the task of trying to bring next year's convention of the Texas-Oklahoma Kiwanis district to this city, succeed or fail, does not matter a great deal.

At Tulsa today the name of Lubbock will be heard many times, along with the names of Fort Worth and San Angelo. One of these three cities will be selected to entertain a thousand or more members of Texas and Oklahoma Kiwanis clubs, in the fall of 1930.

Of course, we hope it is to be Lubbock. The fact that Lubbock has stepped up the ladder of renown sufficiently to be counted among the principal contenders as a convention city is something to think about. It even is something to write home about.

As a background to this fact of Lubbock's prominence there exists the romantic story of an empire's development. Such a story is quickly told in the jump of Lubbock's population from 4,651 in 1920 to more than 20,000 in 1929. Such growth has been made possible through the opening up of strange lands by the thousands of acres to cultivation.

It is, therefore, the consequence of dynamic energy, multiplied by the productivity of men and machines and soils and seasons, that has created this voice from the South Plains that is being heard in Tulsa today and that is reverberating throughout the great Southwest.

It is also the voice of youth, but of a youth that has achieved and is to continue its accomplishments.

SUPERFLUOUS England with more people than she can feed and house properly and more workers than work is trying to colonize her dominions with her surplus labor. Thus far her efforts have met with a success far from complete.

The situation is epitomized by the reply of a miner and World War veteran when asked to emigrate with his family.

"Want to throw us out o' bloody country. Let us try it!"

He had left a job which furnished support for himself and family to go to war. He had fought in defense of his country in the sordid slime of Flanders and had been told his country would be grateful for his service and sacrifice. He was assured that when it was all over there would be work for him under better conditions than there. The encouraging promises were not kept because it was not in the power of the nation to keep them.

He looks back on his experiences, and his regards his present state. He too is a product of war, but unfortunately could not so easily dispose of as to make room for some village square. And now the country he fought for hands him a piece of cold charity and asks him to move out.

HISTORY: NEW STYLE Despite the efforts of Chicago's "Big Bill" and other guardians of the name, Chicago is making the writing of American history conform to present-day racial prejudices, historians the better ones, at least—are continuing to turn out volumes which endeavor to show the story of America without adapting it to ulterior ends.

The new treatment is fortunately free from the reason for "debunking" which has been carried to extremes by the new school of historians. It was perhaps inevitable that the tendencies to hero worship among the older historians should have been offset by the fashion of slinging mud which has given many half-baked scholars the opportunity to be smart and startling.

Of particular interest in the new histories are the accounts of the lives of different generations and of intellectual pursuits of succeeding generations. They provide a true historical background.

This sort of writing does much to give history its place in forming the American perspective. Doubtless it has its flaws and will find new censors who will complain that it omits references to foreign nations or that it paints too glowing a picture of the comforts our ancestors derived from thoughts and things now taboo among the best people.

But it is a relief—and an education—even for those who are already well steeped in the conventional political histories of the country.

A HILIBILLY BOY Ray McKinley, the boy who topped the presidential camp on the Rapidan, to give Mr. and Mrs. Hoover a "possum" is representative of the sturdy Southern mountaineers of whom America knows all too little. Long before the revolution settlers of pure Anglo-Saxon stock located in the Blue Ridge, the Cumberland and the Appalachian ranges of the South. Waves of westward migration reseeded and left them stranded in their rugged valleys. Modern civilization has made slow progress up the rocky hillsides. Like thousands of his kind, Ray is illiterate and not informed. He had not even heard of Lindbergh.

But Ray showed the mountaineer's keen interest in politics by his shy way of congratulating Mr. Hoover and by his matter-of-fact remark: "My paw was such a bum runner that he had to climb a tall hickory tree after the election." An election is the biggest event a mountaineer knows.

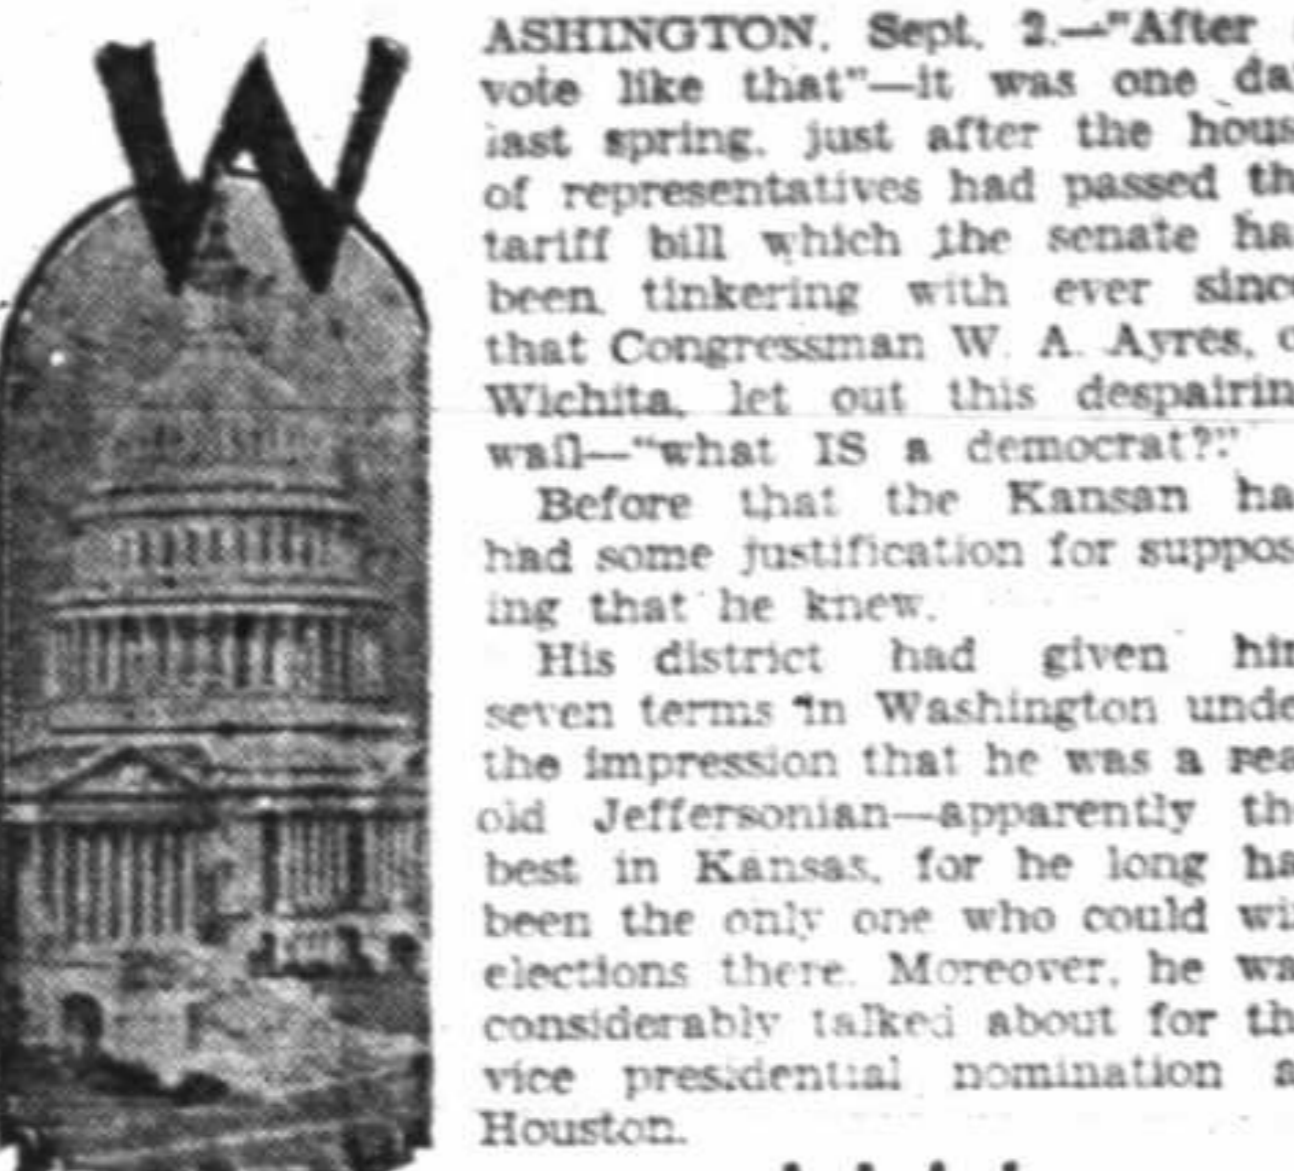

The gift of the opossum was one way of expressing the inherent trust and friendliness of a Southern hillbilly. And Ray revealed also the mountaineer's love for song and story, which may include both native creations and curious inheritances from the "Emigrants of Old Queen Bess." The southwest drift of industry is changing the life in those mountains. But there are still isolated valleys where Ray McKinleys live and where writers, composers and painters are journeying to preserve for posterity the folkways, tales and appearance of the vanishing mountaineer.

Maybe they will reduce the size of postage stamps, too, to coincide with the allowance of postage.

HIGH TARIFF BILL MAY PASS SENATE WITH HELP OF DEMOCRATIC BALLOTS

BY CHARLES F. STEWART Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—"After a vote like that"—it was one day last spring, just after the house of representatives had passed the tariff bill which the senate had been tinkering with ever since, that Congressman W. A. Ayres, of Wichita, let out this despairing wail—"What is a democracy?"

Before that the Kansan had had some justification for supposing that he knew.

His district had given him seven terms in Washington under the impression that he was a real old Jeffersonian—apparently the best in Kansas, for he long has been the only one who could win election there. Moreover, he was considerably talked about for the vice presidential nomination at Houston.

However, when it came to beholding a lot of supposedly low tariff or free trade democrats (so-called) gaily casting their ballots for the highest tariff in history, he had to admit that party line-ups of today have him guessing.

It was a queer way for democrats to vote, to be sure; but after all, it made no real difference—the bill was bound to pass the house of representatives anyway. The republican high tariff majority is large enough to pass anything.

The subject on which Congressman Ayres' comment promises to be really well worth listening to—when he gets back from his vacation in the Sun-flower state—is the situation in the senate.

That the republican high tariff senators will be able to scrape together enough of their own kind of votes to pass the present skyscraper bill through the upper chamber is no certainty—seems pretty doubtful, in fact.

So what are they doing but trying to rattle up sufficient democratic votes to accomplish it?

The prospect is fair to middling that they will succeed.

Congressman Ayres was horrified by a bunch of high tariff democratic ballots in the house of representatives—where, nevertheless, the democrats could not have beaten the bill even though they had stood solidly together—how will he feel about a bunch of them in the senate?—where maybe they could defeat the measure, with their ranks intact.

It would be a dismal outlook for true Jeffersonians, such as Representative Ayres—the fashion in which many erstwhile members of their own party are deserting nearly everything but their original labels—it would be a dismal outlook indeed, but for the fashion in which about an equal number of erstwhile republicans are beginning to break away from nearly everything but THEIR original labels to come over to what looks like the democratic side.

There is no mystery about it, at that.

Communities which are struggling to industrialize themselves, like high tariffs—to protect them against outside competition. The G. O. P. saw this at a time when a large part of the country was in process of becoming industrialized, and capitalized it politically.

It was at the expense of the area which was not yet ripe for industrialization, so this latter area professed democratic principles and fought for them the best it could—though looked after than not.

Years passed, America's industrialized sections arrived at a point where tariff protection began to hamper rather than to help them—not all of them, but some.

There were the ones which had grown too strong to fear competition in their home markets any longer and were starting to covet markets abroad. High tariffs handicap would-be exporters, by making it expensive for them to produce; the lower their costs, the better they are able to undersell their rivals in foreign fields.

Moreover, as everyone knows, American bankers have piled up billions in investments in the last dozen years. The whole world has not the money to settle these obligations in cash, but they can be settled in trade—if our tariffs are cut, to let in more foreign goods.

Thus America's industrial and financial captains alike—both groups mainly republican hitherto—have been rapidly modifying their high tariff views recently.

The tendency has not yet permeated the G. O. P. very thoroughly, or it would have flopped over bodily, but considerable progress has been made.

Meanwhile a period of industrial development has set in in those sections of the country which formerly stood pat for free trade, or a small revenue tariff at most—Dixie—particularly since the World War all of us have heard a deal concerning "the industrialization of the south."

These regions are just at the industrial stage where now they want tariff protection. They have grown into it; they have not had time to grow out of it, as the older industrial area is doing.

The democrats are to more clear over the political fence, and down on the protectionistic side than the republicans are clear over and down on the free trade side—but they appear to be on their way even as the G. O. P.—only in the opposite direction.

Anniversary Notes

TREATY OF PARIS The treaty of Paris was signed September 3, 1763, between Great Britain and the United States, and marked the end of the American Revolution and the recognized independence of the colonies.

The four questions that caused great difficulties before the negotiators reached an agreement were the boundaries of the United States, fishing rights on the coast of Newfoundland; payment of private debts due from Americans to British creditors; and compensation of the Loyalists.

Roughly, the boundary agreed upon was the Mississippi river on the west, the 31st parallel of latitude on the south, the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence river on the north and the Atlantic ocean on the east.

The Americans were allowed to continue to enjoy the same rights of fishing at Newfoundland as when they were English colonists.

On the third point it was agreed creditors on either side should meet with no impediments in collecting lawful debts contracted before the war.

Regarding the Loyalists, the American negotiators consented Congress should be asked to recommend to the state legislatures to provide for restitution of confiscated estates, and to cease all prosecutions commenced against persons known as Loyalists.

Today's Poem

THE VIOLET Down in a green and shady bed A modest violet grew; Its stalk was bent, it hung its head, As if to hide from view.

And yet it was a lovely flower, Its colors bright and fair; It might have graced a rosy bow-er, Instead of hiding there.

Yet there it was content to bloom, In modest tints arrayed; And there diffused a sweet perfume, Within the silent shade.

Then let me to the valley go, This pretty flower to see; That I may also learn to grow In sweet humility.

—Jane Taylor (1783-1824)

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED MOLLY BURNHAM writes plays and books, and is generally adored. In a single evening, two men ask her to marry them. One of them, RED FLXNN, is a reporter. Molly and Red have been friends for years. Red has an invalid mother, and he has never been able to contemplate marriage.

The other man is BOB NEWTON, the widower of an old friend, whose little girl Molly adored. Bob reminds Molly that if she marries him, she will become little RITA's mother. If she refuses, he will take the child and go away.

Bob has been drinking, and is rather abusive, when he finds Red in Molly's apartment late at night. Then, in front of Bob, Red (whose mother has died that very night) asks Molly to marry him. Shortly, Bob flings angrily out of the flat, and Red and Molly sit together and talk of love. She tells him that she is very fond of him, that he would make a perfectly impossible husband. And, besides she loves JACK WELLS. While they are talking, Bob returns with a policeman, to demand the surrender of little RITA, who lives with her. After the fracas has subsided, Molly asks Bob to return the next day, when they may discuss matters amicably. Then she proposes the trial engagement, with the stipulation that the experiment shall be kept secret until such time as they may decide to marry. She suggests a period of three months as the probable time required to ascertain the practicality of marriage.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII Eventually Bob had agreed to the trial engagement.

And he began, immediately, being very nice indeed. Molly had spoken of a painting she had seen and loved in Florence. As though he were a genii, and waved a magic sceptre, Bob procured a very fair copy. It was La Maddalena by Carlo Dodi.

The usual conceptions of Magdalene, as Molly had seen them in various galleries, were of older women, with tragic faces. But Carlo Dodi had painted a young girl, of high school age, who had been bad, and was sorry. She was a beautiful, intense child. Her eyes were dark and passionate, and her lips were full, and fashioned for kissing. There was a holy light in her face and it had been transfigured by a great love. Such a girl might have lived in any age. And in any town. Molly thought of her as a girl of the centuries. She had wanted to procure a copy ever since she saw the original.

Molly knew nothing at all about paintings. She had seen only two in her life that she would have liked particularly to own. The first was La Maddalena. And the other was Correggio's Virgin Adoring the Child.

Now Bob had found the Magdalene for her, and he had not forgotten that she coveted the most exquisite of Madonnas. He thought he knew where a copy might be obtained. A modern reproduction Molly was touched and delighted.

She had loved the lovely Magdalene where the light played on her upturned face. And, because Bob had given her the beautiful thing, she felt—almost—as though she could love him. Because he had brought her unexpected happiness.

Bob was proving a rather pathetic lover. Like Henry's, his was a love that longed for romance, he tried too hard to please. He bought Molly lollipops and peanuts, because she had said she liked them.

And he took her to all sorts of odd and dirty places to eat. Molly knew that he hated restaurants that pretended to be Bohemian. She knew that a soiled tablecloth could ruin a meal for her. And that art places were his pet abomination. But, because she liked painting, he took her to him to him that once were barns, and still smelled slightly horse. And a kitchen where the guests about a long table and ate from common dishes. They went to a French place, where napkins were never used. And to an Armenian cafe, where the chef wore a dirty apron and waited on table. And, all the time, Molly knew that Bob would have sold all Bohemia for fresh linen and immaculate service.

He hated sports. But he bought season tickets for the Braves and gave Molly was a baseball fan, and had a weakness for Hank Gowdy.

"You're too good, Bob," she teased. "We've always dug me to something intellectual. How about an art exhibit, or a musicale? You must be bored to death with my lowrow entertainment."

But that evening he bought tickets for the circus. And the next night he took her to a movie.

"The trouble is," she told herself, "he's much too nice. He's letting me walk all over him. He just simply isn't natural. No man could go on forever, pretending to like things he despises. It's pathetic, too, the way he makes believe he's having a good time."

And then it was she thought of O. Henry's waitress.

"Poor Bob. I suppose that's the way I was with Jack. It's probably always that way when there are two people and one is ever so much more in love than the other. The trouble is, that the one who is more in love has to be loved twice—too hard to please, it never pays."

But, since pity is akin to love, Molly was beginning to love Bob a little. It was, undoubtedly, because she was sorry for him. His pathetic attempts to rouse her affection made her almost cry.

Every time he called her brought her a gift. Odd little things that he had a way of picking up. A bit of old damask, or a piece of rare china. A first edition of Salome with illustrations by Aubrey Beardsley. And once a Venetian glass sconce from the Doge's palace. Bob loved beautiful things, and he had the happy faculty of finding them.

Sometimes he sent her orchids. Not the common catleya, but the yellow marshallian. They suited her best, he said.

He had rare appreciation of paintings and of music. He loved flowers, and knew them by their Latin names. He had made a study of folk lore. And he knew a great deal about the various religions of the world. He talked of Buddha and Confucius and Mohammed, as people that of their contemporaries. Molly was beginning to find him very interesting. He knew so many things.

He told her facts she had never heard before, and she found them amusing—and interesting. He told her, for instance, that every perfect body could locate him. Anyhow the office had a tip this afternoon. He has a reservation on the Merchant's.

Molly's heart was beating madly. "My goodness, Red, what are you telling me for? He's not coming to see me, is he?"

"I don't know about that. Anyhow, here's the dope. I'm supposed to meet the train, and get an exclusive interview. Statement about Mrs. Bulver-Eaton, and all that rot. If you say the word, I'll steer Wells up to your place."

"Oh!" she cautioned. "Don't talk like that over the phone. Red, you shouldn't say mean things about Bob. Honestly you shouldn't."

"Why not?"

"Oh, I don't know," she floundered. "You just shouldn't, that's all."

"All right, I won't. But how about Wells? Shall I bring him around?"

Molly hesitated. It would not be quite fair to Bob. She had promised to play the same game with him. She had consented to a trial engagement on tacit condition that she would observe the rules. It was hardly the thing to banish even an unofficial fiancé, in order to receive an old sweetheart. Particularly when the two were friends, and the affair would Eaton, and wondered if Red would dare to ask Jack questions about her. She was still wondering when the telephone rang.

Something told her it was Jack before she took the receiver down. "Hello, Molly," he said, and his voice sounded tender and timbre that thrilled her so outrageously. "Yes?" she said, striving for control. "Who is it, please?"

"It's me, Molly," he said. "Right the first time," he told her. "How are you, Molly?"

"I'm fine," she assured him. "W-what are you doing in Boston, Jack?"

"I came over to see you," he informed her surprisingly. "I didn't have the nerve to write, or wire. I was afraid you wouldn't see me. It's been a long time, Molly."

"An awfully long time," she answered. "W-what do you want to come about?"

"Molly, I want to talk to you. I've got to see you. What are you doing now? Couldn't I go out tonight? Red Flynn's here. He's got a car. We could be out there in 10 minutes. Red has a date. He'd drop me please, Molly."

"I'm afraid not. Not to night, Jack. I'm expecting a guest now. I ought to be here any minute. I'm afraid he'd think—"

"Tell him you're not at home," she said. "But I can't do that, Jack. The set is—it's Bob Newton. He'd think it was awfully funny."

"Bob Newton?" she exclaimed. "Why, Bob would understand."

"No," she insisted. "I'm afraid it wouldn't make it tomorrow. Come in the morning, if you'd like."

"Oh, let me come now."

But Molly was firm. She had a reputation that Bob had been linking. Knowing how insanely jealous he was, she felt that it would be foolish to precipitate a scene. But, when she had disconcerted, she reproaching herself because she had not let Jack come, she now it was too late.

She would wait until 10 o'clock. Bob had not come then, she said telephone the hotels and locate Jack. Or perhaps Red Flynn would call, and let her know where he might reach him. Dear Red! He was like him to try to patch up again.

When the servants had gone to bed, she went to the kitchen, and looked in the refrigerator and the pantry. She would prepare supper herself for Jack if he came. She remembered the day of Ruth Wood's funeral, when she wanted to cook dinner. That was the night Dopey Dan shot her, when she was on her way home from the florists. Lots of water had flowed under the bridges since then. That day was the turning point in her whole life. How nice it was, getting things ready for Jack! They were going to have steak, she remembered, and mushrooms — and, of course, she was to cook them herself. Now she had a woman to cook her food, and a man to serve it. Almost anybody would think that would make life pleasant. But it didn't.

"I shan't tell Jack I've a butler," she decided. "It would simply annoy him."

But she had better tell him, she decided, about Bob. Better tell him right straight off. Bob was being a perfectly ideal fiancé. While he played the game, she must. Besides it was much safer to tell the truth. Goodness, next time she saw Jack, she and Bob would probably be married.

She covered her face with her hands, and began, quite suddenly, to cry. The door bell rang, and still she cried. Then she remembered that Natsu had gone to bed. She must make herself presentable. She dabbed her face with powder, and looked at her self in the glass. Her nose was red and swollen, and her eyes were puffed.

Louisiana City Governed By Prayer

Woman Preacher Is Mayor Of Small Village

By NEA Service MONTGOMERY, La., Sept. 2.—When the citizens of this small Louisiana city three years ago voted a woman preacher into office as mayor, there were plenty of residents who wagged their heads, muttering into their beards and sat back to wait for the new chief executive to fall at the job.

Here's Mrs. Lula Wardlow, the woman preacher-mayor of Montgomery, La. Below is the new high school built in the little town of 800 to 1,000 population under her administration.

A woman, they said, might conceivably make a good mayor, and so might a preacher—but never the two together.

Now, with this same woman preacher-mayor half way through her second term, this little city is practically unanimous in voting her the best chief executive Montgomery has ever had.

Here's What She's Done Montgomery's mayor is Mrs. Lula Wardlow. Since she took office, she has done the following things:

Wiped out the city's debt and put it on a self-sustaining basis. Eliminated the rutted, muddy streets and substituted level, well-paved ones.

Done away with the petty vices that are ordinarily the inevitable features of small city life.

Secured for the city electric light, water and gas service.

How has she done it? Her fellow citizens say that it is chiefly because she is an intelligent, capable business woman. But she herself says it is because she prays to the Lord for help in every problem.

Prayers Bring Light Plant There was, for instance, the matter of the electric light plant. Montgomery, which has between 800 and 1,000 inhabitants, had never had water, gas and light service. When Mrs. Wardlow took office, she determined to get these things for her city. But unlike her predecessors, she seemed unable to make any headway. Mass meetings were held, civic leaders were interviewed—but nothing happened.

So Mrs. Wardlow went to her home, knelt down and prayed for divine help. The next day, without any warning whatever, a group of men came to her and said they were going to organize and finance a stock company to provide these services. So today, Montgomery has a plant that provides it with gas, electric light, water and ice at very low rates.

When she was making her first campaign for mayor—she didn't have to make any campaign the second time—Mrs. Wardlow used to quote a verse of Scripture to the voters:

"Where the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn."

Rules by Gospel Thus, after election, she quickly set herself the task of ruling the town as a preacher of the gospel should.

Small towns, as well as big cities, have their sordid side. Mrs. Wardlow wasn't long in tackling Montgomery's.

Presently it was found that the "street shows" and little carnivals, companies couldn't get permits in Montgomery. The dismal little back-room gambling joints were quietly but speedily suppressed. Sunday baseball and Sunday movies were shut down.

All of this went hand in hand with a business administration that put the town on its feet financially, provided new public works and gave the place an air of prosperity and efficiency. The voters liked it.

Last summer Mrs. Wardlow filled a long-cherished desire by traveling to Palestine. The mayoralty campaign was on at the time. She made no campaign whatever—and while in the Holy Land, received a telegram telling her that she had been re-elected.

Faces Problem Like Mother Montgomery has a curfew law. After a certain hour of night, children are supposed to be in their own homes. This law was being ignored, and Mrs. Wardlow, as a mother, felt that this was a problem that should be tackled. She noticed that one particular group of small boys used to roam the streets long after the curfew hour; so one day she had the town marshal round them up and bring them to her office.

There she talked with them earnestly, explaining the importance of law observance to them, and inducing each of them to promise obedience in the future. Then, as the chastened lads turned to go, she noticed one was limping. She called the boy back, found he had a splinter in his bare foot—and promptly became the mother instead of the mayor and took the splinter out for him.

Since then Montgomery's curfew law has been obeyed without protest.

Mrs. Wardlow began life as the daughter of a planter. As she grew up she spent much time helping him, and in this way she got her business experience.

In 1909 Mrs. Wardlow became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Later, feeling a call to the ministry, she went to Chicago to study at the Moody Bible Institute. Returning to Louisiana, she accepted the pulpit, where she still fills the pulpit on Sunday mornings.

Ministry Her Favorite Job The ministry to her is her biggest job, and when she was first asked to run for mayor—asked because a group of business men felt that she "was the best man in town"—she agreed to take the job only if she found it would not interfere with her pastoral duties.

Above events for her husband, however, she places her home. "It has always seemed to me," she explains, "that a woman's first and highest office and a woman's first mission in life is to be a queen of her home—a true companion and a helpmate for her husband. There is no higher calling for a woman than to be a home maker and companion for her husband and a mother of his children. If a woman can make a home and still have time for public duties, let her go ahead and enter public life—but not otherwise."

Her husband, intensely proud of her achievements, is a mail carrier on a rural route out of Montgomery.

Propose Legion's Membership Close

SALINA, Kas., Sept. 2. (AP)—Raymond Fields of Guthrie, Okla., in an address at the annual convention here today of the Kansas department of the American Legion, advocated closing the membership rolls in 1930. Fields represented the Oklahoma department, of which he is state membership chairman.

He sponsored a plan whereby membership dues in the organization might be paid through an endowment fund, thereby eliminating annual payments, now in effect.

Elaborating on his plan to close the legion membership, Field declared former service men who had not joined the Legion by 1930 should not be allowed benefits of legionnaires who have devoted years serving the organization.

Value Cannot Be Over Estimated, Plainview Man

Plainview Blacksmith Says, "Orgatone Has Relieved Me, Of My Worries And I Am Happy Again"

"I can't praise this new medicine Orgatone too highly for all it has done for me," said R. L. Bayter, of rural route 3, Plainview, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone representative.

"For about six years, I have been in a bad run-down condition, and suffered from stomach troubles. I was in a wretched state, and gas formed on my stomach. I would feel as if I was just going to burst. I would be so bloated up, I was troubled with my kidneys and had pains in my back, which was very weak. My nerves were completely shattered and I just couldn't sleep at all, and was very restless and worried. Every night I rolled and tumbled, and would have just given anything to go to sleep and really rest. I had a bad case of constipation, and in fact, my general condition was just run down and I was tired, and did not have any energy and felt no-account all the time.

"Orgatone was recommended so highly by the people here of Plainview, I decided to try it. I have just taken one bottle, and want to tell everybody that my worries are over, and I am well and happy again. It is the finest medicine I have ever taken or heard of. I feel better than I have in the past six years, and all of my troubles are gone. I actually know if I hadn't gotten hold of the right medicine I would have died, for I was on my way to the grave, and no one, or any kind of medicine helped me. I think Orgatone really saved my life, and I would like for every one suffering as I did to try it, and then see for themselves.

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Lubbock exclusively by the Bowen's Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents. Adv.

DISPUTE SETTLED Boundary Treaties Signed In South America

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 2. (AP)—Another long standing boundary dispute between South American republics received formal burial today when Brazil and Venezuela exchanged ratifications here of boundary treaties negotiated in July 1928.

The conversations looking to peaceful settlement of rival claims to jurisdiction over almost un-mapped lands drained by tributaries of the upper Amazon were begun 70 years ago.
