Federal government experts say petroleum consumption will rise to nearly 1,000,000,000 barrels a year throughout the globe within five years. They say the consumption now is 700,000,000 barrels a year with the leading nations of the earth in economic stagnation and with nearly one-half of the merchant tonnage of the world idle. They ask, "How will the expected enormous demand for petroleum and its products be satisfied." They say that this is the question that is being anxiously pondered in the United States, England, France, Italy and virtually all producing nations. They say that the United States, now supplying approximately 70 per cent of the universal need of petroleum, will not be able to keep up this pace later than 1950. They do not say that there are vast fields in Texas that have not been scratched. They do say that Mexico is being looked to to solve the problem. Mexico's proven field include 10,000 square miles while the unproved fields, geologists declare, constitute a much larger area. Just now Mexico is producing twenty-three per cent of the petroleum taken by the producing nations of the world. Mexican fields under exploitation include only 1,200 square miles and yet the production in the first six months of 1921 was 98,000,000 barrels. This country has developed seven large fields; Mexico has developed only three fields. In the first six months of 1921, 8,000 wells were drilled in the United States. Federal government experts declare that the expense of leasing and drilling in Mexico is materially greater than in the United States and they say Mexico never has been a field for the small operator as has the United States. Moreover, they say that the administration now is negotiating with Mexico to bring relief to small operators desirous of prospecting south of the Rio Grande river and they volunteer the information that American oil experts are seeking new fields in all parts of the globe; that in South America and Mesopotamia and Asia American geologists are at work and that American capital to be counted only in millions is behind them. This reminds H. N. F. that petroleum is to be an uncrowned king in the world of finance and commerce and that the nation that controls the petroleum supply will control the shipping of the seven seas and through control of the shipping will be the dictator of the commerce of the world. Texas is a petroleum-producing state and wherever there is oil there should be golden gains for the producer and large profits for the refiner and those who sell this king product of commerce.

Patrick and Raymond (now how did it happen that a Celt came to be christened Raymond?) were discussing the great conflict and Marshal Ferdinand Foch in general and disarmament in particular. Raymond is a pacifist and an advocate of universal disarmament. Patrick Henry isn't and this is the way he silenced Raymond, pronounced with the "d" silent, "The trouble with permanent peace is that nobody wants to get excited about it while just mention any kind of a fight you are sure to have a crowd." Verdict for Patrick Henry.

Citizens of Vernon and Wilbarger county continue to rejoice over the victory they won on road bond election day. Only two voting precincts in the county declared against the bond proposition. Seventy-six citizens of Vernon casts their ballots against bonds and good roads. But this did not prevent a majority tonight better than 4 to 1 for the proposition. Oklaunion must be a very progressive precinct. In that precinct, 104 taxpayers voted for the bond issue and none against. There were 1350 ballots cast; 1082 for the bonds and good roads and 268 against bonds and good roads. The Vernon Record pays this tribute to the leaders of the progressive forces: "To Cy Long, generalissimo of good roads forces, is due a great proportion of the success of the election. Mr. Long worked generously and unsparingly in the interests of the bonds, and kept at a high pitch the enthusiasm of his co-workers. Until he assumed active charge there was little or no concerted action to favorable sentiment. When the success of the bonds was determined, a jubilee was conducted in Perkins-Timberlake store of which Cy Long is manager. Mr. Long was borne to a table and required to make a speech. County Judge E. L. McHugh was carried on the stalwart shoulders of Bob Walker and W. W. Gilbert to the store and also called upon for a talk. Others in the audience added to the celebration with expressions of gratification over the success of the election." The Vernon Record says: "It was a citizens victory and on in which every citizen may take pride and that furthermore the most important feature is that it marks a beginning of coun-

Jack Rabbit Ranks With Roaring Lion As Dangerous Beast

Health Probers Have Discovered He Carries Germ of "Deer Fly" Disease Which is Fatal in One Case Out of Twelve—"Bug" is Cornered but Cure Not Known.

By HERBERT COREY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Question: Can a jack rabbit kill a man?

Answer: I'll say he can.

The United States Public Health Service has just completed an investigation into a fine new plague for which Brer Jack Rabbit seems to be solely responsible. About one person in twelve stricken by it dies. The other eleven develop ulcers and swollen glands and fevers and are sick all summer long. It is confined as yet to two small spots in Utah, each being about ten miles in diameter. But—and here is the worrisome part of the new plague—

No one knows ust what are the rules that govern epidemics. We have had influenza in this country ever since George Washington crossed the Delaware and no one ever thought much about it. Then the mysterious X was stirred in the brew and in one year 600,000 persons died of it. Bubonic plague is more or less persistent in half a dozen ports and it is merely a nuisance. Something happens and bubonic plague sweeps off hundreds of thousands. Cholera is commonplace in India for years. Then an epidemic year comes along—no one knows why—and the people die like flies at Christmas.

Is Called "Deer Fly Sickness."

Therefore the Public Health Service is delighted at having cornered the new plague, so to speak, and low to handle it. The cure is not yet known. In the Public Health Laboratory here are many glass jars filled with Guinea pigs and white mice which are being diligently sacrificed to science. One of these days it may be possible to give a person a shot in the arm and he will be immune thereafter. But that stage of knowledge has not yet been reached. At present, if the deer fly bites you, you're out of luck. That's all.

In the two spots in Utah where this disease flourishes it is known as the "deer fly sickness." The deer fly is a small, grayish, hungry insect which bites like a dog. Occasionally it bites a jack rabbit, and so far as investigation has progressed it seems that all Utah jack rabbits are as full of the bacilli of the disease as a 10-cent balloon is full of wind. Then the deer fly bites a man. Four hours afterward the man falls off his mowing machine and is taken to his home acutely ill. He has eleven chances out of twelve to live, but no chance at all to escape a slow and enervating illness. As the deer fly always operates in the summer time this means that the sufferer loses his summer's work. This is important to the Utah farmer.

Discovered Eleven Years Ago.

The deer fly sickness was discovered eleven years ago, and has been more or less examined into since then. In 1916 there was so much of it in the affected sections of Utah that the Public Health Service was asked for aid, but at that time it was not possible to send any scientists. The Service never has enough men to go around. After the war the requests for help were renewed and Dr. Edward Francis, one of the specialists on "bugs" in the P. H. S., was sent to Utah. He has spent a part of two years there and his report is regarded as conclusive.

He has shown that other blood-sucking insects, such as the stable fly, the louse, the bedbug and others not as carriers for the "bug" of the deer fly sickness. The importance of this is that if it ever leaves its present range it has a lot of handy helpers to give it a lift. In many respects the bacilli resemble that of the plague. The disease which has for years ravaged the ground squirrels of California is related to the deer fly disease, or is the same thing, but no case is on record of this disease ever having attacked a human being.

As there is no way of curing the disease the Public Health Service has considered the question of preventing it. So far but one plan has presented itself. That is to get rid of every jack rabbit in the affected districts of Utah. In that way it may be the world may one of these days be saved from a devastating scourge.

HULL HOPES TO PUT DEMOCRATS ON THEIR FEET

Members of Party in House Laud White and Congratulate Committee in Choice of His Successor.

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.—Development of the democratic national committee into the "most militant and efficient organization" Within his capacity and dissemination of facts concerning the "shortcomings" of the present national administration among the "average citizens" is in brief to be the policy of Cordell Hull, the new democratic chairman, as outlined today to The Associated Press. Mr. Hull expects to leave late today for Washington, arriving there tomorrow evening.

The new chairman's policies are briefly outlined in the following statement:

"The first step in administering the affairs of the committee will be to pay off the present indebtedness and create a good atmosphere in which to work. We shall try to pay all debts at an early date.

"We shall also proceed at once with establishment of a systematic and thorough organization in the various states and counties. In this same connection we shall strive to maintain an efficient publicity bureau to get unbiased and accurate facts relating to the shortcomings of the republican administration before the average citizens.

People have been fed up on a vast amount of misrepresentation, misinformation and falsehoods concerning the true record of the democratic administration covering the period since 1918. Subsequent events and daily happenings have exploded a vast number of these falsehoods which at times were very dangerous.

"We shall make every possible effort to develop the democratic na-

FINAL DETAILS FOR ARLINGTON SERVICES MADE

Issuance of Proclamation by President Designating November 11 as National Holiday Expected.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Armistice day, November 11, will be declared national holiday in honor of America's unknown soldier to be buried that day at Arlington.

Congressional action on a resolution requesting the president and all state governors to proclaim the day a holiday was completed today through adoption by the senate. Issuance of the proclamation by Mr. Harding is expected within a few days.

While the senate was voting on the resolution, various other branches of the government were at work arranging final details of the honors to be paid by the nation to the dead American soldier selected to represent those who paid the supreme sacrifice overseas.

The navy department was arranging for destroyers to proceed far out to sea to meet the historic cruiser Olympia bearing the unknown soldier to the homeland. The department was in communication with Captain H. L. Wyman, commanding the Olympia, and transmitted to him instructions as to the time of his ship's arrival and as to the escort to be furnished. The destroyers to be selected as an escort will be designated within a few days, officials at the department said.

The war department, working with the navy department has designated 3 p. m. on November 9 as the hour when the Olympia will reach the Washington navy yards. Details of the ceremonies there and plans for the taking of the body to the capitol where it will lie in state until the morning of Armistice day were in process of arrangement.

Congress also took notice of the

CONVENTION OF LEGIONNAIRES IS ADJOURNED

Report of Resolutions Committee Adopted After Section Censuring George Harvey Is Deleted.

CONVENTION HALL, KANSAS CITY, Nov. 2.—The national convention of the American Legion adjourned here tonight after electing Hanford MacNider of Mason City, Iowa, national commander; selecting other officers and adopting resolutions covering a wide range of subjects. The convention has been in session without recess since early this morning.

The election of MacNider to succeed John G. Emery of Grand Rapids, Michigan, was made unanimous after more than half of the state delegations had seconded his nomination and three other candidates nominated, Roy Hoffman of Oklahoma City, Earl M. Cline of Nebraska City, Nebraska, and John F. Williams of Joplin, Mo., had withdrawn in his favor.

The following vice commanders were elected:

George L. Berry of Rogersville, Tenn.; H. Nelson Jackson of Burlington, Vt., and Charles Kendrick of San Francisco, representing the army and Raymond Brackett of Marblehead, Mass., and James McCormick of Fort Lyon, Colo., for the navy.

The Reverend Earl Blackman of Chanute, Kansas, was elected national chaplain.

A fight for the removal of the national legion headquarters from Indianapolis to Kansas City, which the Missouri delegation promised in preconvention campaigning to bring on the floor, did not develop.

The election of officers concluded an all day session, filled with debate and wrangling over certain sections of resolutions committee report, particularly on criticising severely the speech delivered by George A. Harvey, American ambassador to Great Britain, before the Pilgrims club in London, upon his arrival in England to assume his duties as ambassador, and in which Mr. Harvey discussed the reason why the United States entered the war. The original resolution was thrown out of the report on a roll call vote and later a substitute was adopted. The substitute was written in less sharp terms and expressed belief that the ambassador's remarks did not represent the true feeling for which the American Legion stands. It directed that a copy of the resolution be sent to President Harding.

Bonus Favored

Two resolutions bearing upon federal compensation for former soldiers were among the mass adopted. Both declared in favor of immediate compensation legislation. One submitted by the convention's legislative committee declared that "after careful consideration of the arguments advanced in opposition to the measure, including the letter of the secretary of the treasury and the address of the president to congress we firmly believe in the justice, fairness and immediate necessity of the adjusted compensation measure. The resolution adds, it is resolved that the legion "reaffirms its stand upon adjusted compensation and asks that the congress of the United States pass this measure without further equivocation or delay."

The other compensation resolution

BRITISH HOUSE WILL DISCUSS ARMS PARLEY

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A discussion of the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and Far Eastern problems, will take place in the house of commons next Friday in connection with a resolution presented by the labor members "warmly approving of the conference," Austen Chamberlain, government leader, announced today.

Sir Francis William Lowe, unionist member from Birmingham, protested against such discussion at this time because of the adverse effect it might have in America and other countries. Mr. Chamberlain replied that this point had been given most serious consideration.

"I indicated my doubts yesterday," continued the government leader, "as to whether it was desirable to have the discussion, but since then I have considered the matter in consultation with the prime minister and the foreign secretary. We are in such complete accord in our desire to see the Washington conference succeed that the government, confiding in the discretion of the house so as to conduct the discussion that it will not prejudice the success of the conference, agreed to the discussion."

NEW LEGION COMMANDER IS WAR HERO

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2.—Hanford MacNider of Iowa, the newly elected national commander of the American Legion, was born on October 2, 1889 at Mason City, Iowa. He graduated from Milton academy, Milton, Mass., in June, 1907, and from Harvard college in 1911.

He served on the border as a first lieutenant with the second Iowa infantry. After the outbreak of the world war, he entered the officers training camp at Fort Snelling and was commissioned a second lieutenant on August 15, 1917.

Mr. MacNider arrived in France on September 20, 1917, as an officer in the ninth United States infantry. During his overseas service he was promoted through successive ranks until he finally attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel of infantry. He took part in the Aisne, Aisne Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne operations. A portion of the time he was in command of his regiment.

Mr. MacNider was wounded at St. Mihiel, and holds the following decorations:

Distinguished Service Cross and one cluster, Chevalier de Legion d'Honneur, Croix de Guerre (five citations, five palms, one gold and one silver star), Fourragere and the Italian war cross. He was given three citations in general orders.

Before his departure from France he served with the Second division headquarters.

Since his return to civilian life he has been prominent in legion work in his state, having acted as department commander.

MACNIDER OUTLINES FOUR ISSUES LEGION SPONSORS

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2.—Hanford MacNider, banker of Mason City, Iowa, elected national commander of the American Legion at the concluding session of the national convention here late today, in a statement issued tonight said the convention had outlined four great issues for which the legion must fight, and pledged his administration to uphold in spite of all opposition.

Commander MacNider's statement follows:

"The American Legion must build itself so big and fine and strong and keep itself so clean and straight and American that when it asks for certain things—legislation for ex-service men and women, and policies in their behalf—our communities will feel that if the legion is for a thing it must be right. With that responsibility to our country and to every man and woman who wore our country's uniform in the world war we start a new legion year with pride in the legion's past achievements, ambitious to serve and keep serving to fulfill the great obligations before us.

DELAY OF COAL MINERS STRIKE IS ANTICIPATED

Unions Not Expected to Call General Strike Until After "Checkoff" System Is Abandoned.

Work in Indiana Coal Fields Practically at Standstill After Walkout of 20,000 Miners.

By Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 2.—Delay in spread of the "protest" strike of soft coal miners which started today with the walkout of 20,000 union workers, closing more than 200 mines in Indiana, was anticipated tonight by officials of the United Mine Workers of America, who said developments awaited discontinuance by operators of the union "checkoff" of dues from miners wages as directed by a federal court injunction.

Indications were that union officials would not call out the men, scattered throughout the soft coal fields of the country, until collection of the "checkoff" was actually ceased by operators.

First official reports of action by operators, elsewhere than in Indiana, reached union headquarters here tonight, coming from the Pennsylvania bituminous district, centering around Pittsburgh. The message from Robert R. Gibbons, president of the district, said the "checkoff" would be stopped with the next pay day, the date of which was not given, but which indicated a probable delay in any strike order affecting 40,000 workers in that field.

Indiana workers, however, did not withhold their strike to await formal notice from the operators, whose stopping the "checkoff" has been drafted by counsel for their association. None of the important mines in the state worked today and reports of both headquarters of operators and the union said that only 16 were in operation.

STRIKE IN SOUTHWEST THOUGHT IMPROBABLE

By Associated Press.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Nov. 2.—John Wilkinson, president of district 21, United Mine Workers of America, declared today that there is no prospect of an immediate strike of coal miners in his district as a result of the "checkoff" injunction granted by Judge A. B. Anderson in United States district court at Indianapolis.

OIL OPERATORS LOOK FOR CRUDE BOOST ON HEELS EASTERN JUMP

Advance of 50 cents for Pennsylvania with corresponding advances of othern eastern grades, leads local operators to look for an additional two-bit boost, at least, of local crude within the present week.

The new price for Pennsylvania is $4.00. The old price was $3.50, with North Texas and other light Mid-Continent grades at $1.75. For the past two years, say operators, Pennsylvania has commanded, with premiums paid by the big agencies, roughly twice as much as the Mid-Continent grades, and neither has advanced or retarded from this relation very long without exaction by the other.

In addition to 1-2 per cent decline in production for September, and belief that a similar decline will be shown for the following month when figures are finally available, operators point out that the effects of the inroads of salt water on Mexican oil production are just beginning to be felt in the United States, making for the stronger market.

"None of the independents had much idea of the real gravity of the situation down there until it has progressed for a considerable extent," said one local operator Wednesday.

New Reason.

"Now we can understand additional reasons for the market which has been gradually growing stronger during the past few months."

Mexia production, according to an operator here, will not affect the market, at least right away. They have not proven up a big field there yet for one thing—most of the wells are within a long narrow strip, with tests tending to condemn the territory, in which it could broaden out from this line both ways. On top of this, the facilities for storing and transporting the oil that is produced there will take a long time, and this must be done before what potential production there is is turned into actual production.

"The oil there is not as rich in gasoline as this, but by using the cracking process in the place of simple distillation it will produce a large quantity of commercial motor fuels. But this is some time in the future and the amount even then depends largely on future development outside the present narrow strip."

Rail Strike Figured

The advance for which operators are now looking was expected before the recent threatened railroad strike. Operators are convinced that the strike held up the advance, for had a tieup of rail transportation resulted, the independent refiner would have been eliminated from the market, and with there would have been more oil, probably, than the big pipe lines would want to handle.

The decline in Mexican production, above referred to, is believed by local operators to prelude the climb of Mid-Continent crude to even higher levels than it has yet attained, in time—something which was not even predicted a few months ago.

Pennsylvania Advances.

By Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2.—The fifth advance in the price of oils within the last thirty days was noted at the opening of the market here today. Pennsylvania crude advanced 50 cents to $4 a barrel, while Cabell at $2.61, Somerset $2.40 and Somerset light $2.65 were up 25 cents. Ragland advanced 10 cents on the barrel to $1.25. Corning was unchanged at $2.15.

COURT DECREES I. & G. N. SHALL REINSTATE MEN

Striking Trainmen Would go Back on Thirty Day Probation by Court's Decision—Men Are Given Until Friday to Accept or Reject Decree.

By Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Nov. 2.—Federal Judge J. D. Hutcheson late this afternoon decreed that the 600 striking trainmen on the International and Great Northern railroad, out since October 22, should be taken back.

This does not apply, however, to the four local chairmen of the men, whose status should be decided by the receiver, James A. Baker.

These men are given until Friday to signify whether they will accept or reject the decree.

The trainmen would go back on probation, under the court's decision. At the end of thirty days, if the receiver and officials of the road are satisfied that the men have returned in a spirit of conciliation, the wage scale existing previous to October 22 and full seniority rights of men will be restored.

The four brotherhood chairmen of the road, R. D. Frame, G. G. Nellis, J. D. Shepherd and J. C. Bigham, will under the court's decision, return to work only in the judgment of the receiver and his officers.

J. C. Farquharson, vice president of the Brotherhood or Railway Trainmen, who presented the case of the strikers to the court, asked for and received until Friday to discuss the decision as regards the four chairmen with representatives of the men.

The I. & G. N. controversy found its way into federal court upon the application of receiver Baker, who asked for advice and direction. At the same time leaders of the trainmen asked permission to submit testimony on their own behalf.

While the strikers are given until Friday to make a decision on the decree, the road is ordered to restore the men to their former positions as soon as acceptance is filed.

HAMILTON'S FATE UP TO JURY TODAY

Evidence in Case Growing From Murder of Postmaster at Charlie Is Finished Wednesday.

Special to the Record News.

HENRIETTA, Nov. 2.—The fate of Dick Hamilton, Wichita Falls youth on trial for his life here in the 30th district court in connection with the murder of B. F. Allison, Charlie postmaster who was shot to death last winter by a masked bandit, will be placed in the hands of the jury Thursday afternoon, according to all indications.

The chain of evidence by which the state seeks a conviction on a charge of murder, in which it is indicated they will ask the extreme penalty, is entirely circumstantial. The prosecution rested at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, having opened their case Tuesday.

The defense closed this afternoon at 3 o'clock and a swift rebuttal by the prosecution attorneys ended at 4:30 o'clock. Judge H. F. Wilson immediately adjourned court, announcing that he would read his charge to the jury Thursday morning at 8 o'clock, immediately following which arguments by attorneys will begin. It is expected that both sides will close by noon, or shortly after.

Hamilton, taking the stand today in his own defense denied emphatically that he fired the shot which killed B. F. Allison or was in any manner connected with the shooting and declared that he spent that night sleeping in a wagon, partly loaded with cotton. He asserted that his shoes hurt his feet so badly that evening that he did not feel like attempting to walk into town. Later on cross examination, he admitted that he slept that night with his shoes on his feet.

Testimony introduced by the state today brought out that on the night Allison was killed, Hamilton was in possession of two pistols, one a Colt's .38 calibre, automatic and the other a .38 calibre Smith and Wesson. Hamilton asserted that the automatic belonged to his father and that the pistol had been turned over to him to attempt to sell to a man named Stewart. Later evidence showed that it had been found in Stewart's possession.

Rebuttal testimony was introduced by the prosecution, following Hamilton's testimony, in which it was asserted that Hamilton was in Charlie on the night of the tragedy.

A. H. Bevering of Henrietta, who talked with Allison as he lay dying from bullet wounds testified that the murdered man declared he was shot by a white man, wearing a red bandana handkerchief over his features. Bevering said that Allison was positive that it was not a Mexican or negro who shot him.

Harry D. Bishop, special agent of the department of justice, T. A. Finegan, Will Lay and Fletcher Jones, former district attorney, testified as to their investigations of the case. W. P. Baker, on whose farm young Hamilton was picking cotton at the time of the tragedy, also testified as to the movements of the accused man on the day preceding the death of Allison.

J. M. Hamilton, father of the accused youth, testified as to the Colts .38 calibre automatic which Hamilton

WILL PROPOSE BEER TAX FOR SOLDIER BONUS

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—A bill to legalize and place a four per cent tax on beer and light wines to be used in defraying the cost of a soldiers' bonus has been drafted by Representative Brennan, republican, Michigan, and will be presented to congress, he announced today, as soon as the American Legion convention at Kansas City has acted on the bonus question.

Declaring that for the last two years, "the revenue which rightfully should have flowed into the coffers of Uncle Sam has been collected by bootleggers and rum runners," Representative Brennan predicted that under the recent regulations permitting medical use of beer "oceans" of it will be manufactured and sold for purposes other than "strictly medicinal."

"Many students of the prohibition question," he said, "predict that medicinal beer is only a forerunner to a return of beverage beer and light wines. If this be so, why should not the step be taken at once and the enormous revenue flowing from the source be applied to paying the soldier bonuses. Estimating that fifty to seventy million barrels of beer would be consumed annually, a tax of $5 to $10 a barrel would be sufficient, without including light wine revenues, to finance an adjusted compensation plan."

ROYAL DUTCH MERGER IN U. S. IS PROPOSED

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Stockholders of the Union Oil company of Delaware will meet here November 17 to consider a merger with the Royal Dutch-Shell Transport and Trading company which is controlled by British and Dutch interests.

Terms of the proposed merger have been outlined, but the exact condition will depend upon the word awaited from abroad.

It is understood that in the prospective consolidation the foreign interests will control seventy-two percent of the stock of the new company the balance going to Union oil shareholders.

This announcement regarding the merger was made late today by Hasen Stone and company, bankers of New York and Boston.

The Union Oil company has operated largely in California and controls a number of subsidiary and affiliated companies, its capital stock consists of five million shares of par value of which about 1,367,000 have been issued.

The Royal Dutch company was incorporated at the Hague in 1890 and the American company is corporately known as the Royal Dutch company of New York is owned by American interests, which also have a predominating interest in the Shell company of California.

Shell transport and trading is properly a British corporation, distributing and transporting petroleum products, owning a large number of tank steamers and operating can factories in all parts of the world.

Royal Dutch and Shell transport and trading, the former particularly have long been active on the New York stock exchange, but the Union Oil company only recently became prominent in this market with other California oil companies, notably Pacific oil, whose vast holdings of oil lands in California were until last year, controlled by the Southern Pacific.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Democratic members of the house at a conference today unanimously adopted a solution expressing "appreciation and thanks for the able leadership and faithful and unselfish service" rendered by George White as chairman of the democratic national committee and congratulating the committee on the selection of Cordell Hull as Mr. White's successor.

"Mr. Hull's patriotism, statesmanship, knowledge of political history and policy and his elements of leadership," the resolution stated, "peculiarly fit him for the position at this time of national and world stress when the country is in the control of a party without a program or guiding policy, wandering in the maze of prediction promises, seeking the path of political expediency to lead it to safety while every interest of this nation and of the world challenges us to definite construction effort toward national and world readjustment and rehabilitation.

Oil Prices and Irrigation Hold High Promise for Future of City Clark Tells Wichita Club

Prospects for high prices for Mid-Continent crude oils, and the tremendous possibilities which will be opened up for Wichita Falls and surrounding territory by the completion of the Big Wichita Irrigation project were two of the principal items mentioned by C. H. Clark as indicating a highly prosperous future for Wichita Falls. Mr. Clark spoke before the Wichita club at their Wednesday luncheon, his subject being "The Outlook."

In predicting high levels for crude oil in this section, Mr. Clark called attention to the rapidly decreasing production of low prices Mexican crudes due to salt water encroachment in important districts, and to the decreasing production in the United States.

In dealing with the irrigation project, he called attention first to the $4,500,000 bond issue, which would be spent during the two years of construction of the project. "The negotiations for the placing of these bonds, necessarily slow, are working out at a satisfactory rate," Mr. Clark, who is chairman of the board for District No. 2, declared. This, however, will be a drop in the bucket compared to the eventual good to be derived from the project after its completion, Mr. Clark said. He spoke first of the new money to be brought in through sale of lands, and afterward of the millions of dollars which will be annually brought in thorugh the agricultural products which will be raised in this district, in place of the few hundred thousand at present.

"We have sunshine and the soil—all we need is the water to grow practically anything," he said.

Mr. Clark declared that one acre of Wichita Valley land planted to pecan trees would, after ten years growth, be worth $1,000 an acre. Mr. Clark mentioned the pecan trees just as an instance—mentioning in passing the pecan tree holdings of himself and W. D. Cline, whose extent is familiar to Wichitans.

With this prospect in the future—he impressed on his hearers that he had barely touched the high spots—and with better times already in evidence, Mr. Clark reminded his hearers that Wichita Falls had passed through the tremendous throes of the business readjustment without being hurt much.

"Our number of people is evidenced by the fact that we have 500 more school children this year than last," he said.

Recently at Mexia I was talking to an oil man from another section, and he told me he understood that Wichita Falls had gone off. I told him that it had not. If I had stopped there, he would have believed that I was not telling the truth. But I told him about the increase in the number of school children. He was impressed at once. Then when I followed by telling him that we had no vacant houses, nor business places, and that rents had held up, he was convinced that we were in particularly fine shape."

Mr. Clark took occasion to pay especial tribute to the banks of Wichita Falls, and the heroic efforts they have put forth to meet the trying situation that local business men are convinced that is now in the past. To them he assigned a great deal of credit for the city's successful weathering of the world wide financial storm.

Italy Pledges Full Support To Conference

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. During the Washington conference on armament and Far Eastern questions, Italy "will never hesitate to give all her support to any proposal which may eliminate future conflicts and assure peace," Senator Carlo Schanzer, president of the Italian delegation to the conference said tonight.

"We feel convinced," he added "that the conference will reach a substantial conclusion and that the friendly relationship between the United States and Italy will be consecrated by even closer links of friendship."

"Italy is anticipating with great interest," Senator Schanzer continued, "the work of the Washington conference and wishes that its great finality may be fulfilled, assuring the world of the maintenance of peace and the reduction of armaments; only thus will it be possible to reduce the heavy burden which oppresses the budgets of every country."

Governor Neff has appointed Sam P. Cochran of Dallas a member of the board of regents of the University of Texas and Mr. Cochran has accepted. At the time of the announcement of the appointment, Mr. Cochran was in Washington attending the session of the supreme council of Scottish Rite Masons and his friends say that as the head of the Scottish Rite educational association of Texas which is building a large domitory for daughters of Texas masons at the University of Texas, Mr. Cochran's duties as a member of the board of regents will fit in closely with his work in connection with the Scottish Rite association. Governor Neff is to be congratulated on his selection. Sam P. Cochran is one of the leading business men of Dallas, a resident of Texas for more than forty-five years, one of the best known fire underwriters in the South and as philanthropic as he is progressive. He is one of the builders of Dallas, a life-long contributor to all its charities regardless of creed or color and a civic worker second to no man under southwestern skies. He has ever been the stalwart champion not only of higher education but for public schools of the highest efficiency for the development of the brains and the training of the hands of all the children of all the people.

George D. Campbell, president of the Guaranty State Bank of San Antonio, will urge the bankers and stockmen of his section of Texas to subscribe $250,000 of the capital stock of the Agricultural Live Stock Finance Corporation of Fort Worth, the total to be $1,500,000. To date $1,000,000 has been subscribed, leaving $500,000 to the earliest takers. Colonel John Henry Kirby of Houston, lumber man and oil man and capitalist, has been invited to take a hand. Wherever there is any subscribing to capital stock to be done the Houston colonel and capitalist is always invited "to come in" and he usually comes.

"From the feeding ground of buffalo and antelope to what has been called the most modern town in the southwest is a long cry and yet that is the change which has taken place in Vernon since the first time W. He is in Vernon the guest of his grand-daughter, Mrs. D. D. Jackson. 'It was in 1874 I first came through this country,' Mr. Morris told a reporter. 'There wasn't any settlement this side of Henrietta. Only buffalo and antelope were here then.' Mr. Morris is a pioneer friend of John H. Stephens, who was for nearly two decades congressman from this district."

Watson Proposes to Present Evidence in Open Senate Soldiers Were Hanged Without Trial.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Notice was given in the senate today by Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, that he intended to present to the senate itself evidence of his charges that American soldiers had been hanged overseas without court martial.

The Georgia senator declared that he would not be "bundled up in any committee room" and have his evidence "entombed with senators in a report nobody would read," but would make his fight in the open senate. The senator said later that he would reserve a decision whether he would appear at all before the special senate committee appointed to investigate his charges.

Senator Watson's statements today were made in another hour's spirited clash over the investigation when Senator Brandegee, republican, Connecticut, chairman of the special committee, presented a formal resolution authorizing the committee to take testimony under oath and subpoena witnesses and papers. The resolution drew sharp comment from Senator Watson also involved him and Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, in a spirited discussion with several republicans regarding the proposed investigation.

By Associated Press.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., Nov. 2.—Tom Slaughter, bandit, heard a jury declare him guilty of murder in the first degree in Jefferson circuit court here late yesterday. The verdict carries the death penalty. Sentence will be pronounced this week.

It took the jurors just one hour and fifteen minutes to declare that Slaughter, a life termer at the state convict farm at Tucker, killed Bliss Adkisson, another convict, in a futile attempt to escape September 18.

Jess Laudermilk, brother-in-law of young Hamilton, who was put on the stand to testify as to the accused's movements on the day of the tragedy was questioned closely as to his own movements during the cross examination. The evidence established the fact that Laudermilk was not with Hamilton at the time the shooting occurred.

The jury who will decide the fate of the accused youth, is made up of the following men: J. M. Anderson, L. A. McMahan, J. E. Shaw, J. W. Turner, Joseph Werry, Ike Johnson, W. R. Crockett, J. J. Wetsel, J. J. Massie, G. E. Gault, I. N. F. Faulkner and C. B. Miller.

The house is expected to act on the resolution within a day or so.

Receipt was announced by Secretary Denby of a letter from a gold star mother in California expressing her thought that the Olympia might be bringing her son home, killed in action in France. She has asked that she be permitted to have a memorial wreath placed on the coffin of the heroes as it lies in state in the capitol. The request has been granted but the mother's name was not made known.

The American Red Cross announced that three hundred women marching in the uniforms in which they served as nurses in France during the world war would participate in the procession Armistice day from the capitol to Arlington. O'BRIEN BROTHERS, ALLEGED SWINDLERS, ARE ALLOWED BOND

By Associated Press.

SAN ANOTNIO, Texas, Nov. 2.—Paul O'Brien was allowed bond of $60,375, and his brother, Peter O'Brien bond of $11,125, in a habeas corpus hearing on charges of theft, theft by bailee and embezzlement of approximately $2,750,000 from D. Sullivan and Company, bankers, in the 45th district court today by Judge S. G. Taylor. Although state's attorneys had announced that they would ask for bonds at least as great as the total amount of money alleged to have been stolen, they contended only for bonds of $500 on each indictment, and after argument by defense attorneys, Judge Taylor agreed to fix the bonds at $375 on each count.

BAKER BRANDS WATSON CHARGES PREPOSTEROUS

By Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Charges of Senator Thomas Watson that American soldiers in France were declared to be "preposterous and inhanged without trial and were subjected to barbarous treatment were credible," by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, tonight.

"If a single American soldier had been hanged without trial," Mr. Baker said, "word of it would have come to this country and proper measures would have been taken. The senator's entire charges are preposterous and incredible."

GENERAL DIAZ PRAYED WITH WARRIOR PRIEST

Little Italy, In Kansas City, a Place of Splendor, in Honor of Famous Soldier of World War.

Father Molinari a Winner of Medals for Wounds Received on Firing Front in Great Conflict.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2.—In the heart of Kansas City's Italian colony, in a little Catholic church, a warrior of Europe worshipped with his own people.

A priest who was chaplain of a regiment in General Diaz's army in those treacherous days at the Piave river, celebrated mass for his former chieftain. As many Italians as could crowd into the Holy Rosary church, Missouri avenue and Campbell street, attended the services with the general and his party.

The men and women who assembled in the church were of varied types. Italians whose lots in America have granted them comfortable fortunes, and others who have fared not so well in the adopted country. There were hucksters, teamsters and fruit vendors sitting in pews with bankers, merchants and professional men. All Italians, and all idolizing one hero.

Within the sanctuary in front of the altar there sat a great soldier with his escort. A man who commanded the respect of rulers and whose name is honored the world over was worshipping his God—their God—with his own countrymen and in their midst.

Little Italy was a place of splendor. Flags everywhere—the flags of Italy and America. It was a holiday. When the general's party motored into the Italian district it was met with cheers and bravos. When the motors stopped at the church an Italian band struck up the Marcia Reale. General Diaz stiffened to salute.

Advancing to the door of the church, Italy's hero found Father Caesar Molinari waiting with a fount of holy water. Following the rite of entry, Father Molinari said:

"Excellency, doubtless you do not remember me. I served as chaplain in the 26th infantry in the Italian army."

The general smiled. "I don't remember you, father."

The young priest who has been in the United States only eleven months held the rank of lieutenant in the Italian army as a chaplain. He holds two medals from the Italian government for wounds he received while following his ecclesiastical duties at the front. He served in all the bloody conflict against Austria.

"But I would rather talk of the brave General Diaz," the priest said after services. "He is the idol of all Italian soldiers. General Diaz was once a major, years ago, of the 26th regiment—my regiment. He reviewed the regiment at times. I saw him then."

General Diaz sat in a large arm chair in front of the altar within the sanctuary. At his right sat General De Luca. At the general's left, Col. Asinari Di Bernezzo. The men, uniformed in sky-blue, were the cynosure of all eyes.

So as chance would have it, Father Molinari celebrated mass for one of Europe's greatest men, Father Molinari, who once had served under the colors of Italy in the ranks over which General Diaz was commander. Father Molinari, the young priest who was wounded in Italy's struggle against autocracy, read the litanies to the generalissimo of Italian armies.

Father Molinari stood before his congregation, and in a short sermon and prayer told of Italy's high regard for General Diaz, and called upon God to safeguard the general and save him for Italy's safety. As the black cassocked priest spoke the general's face became solemn. His eyes turned toward the altar, and then toward a group of Italian flags at one side. His fingers worked at a rosary.

Later the general requested Father Molinari to send him a manuscript of the sermon and prayer.

Following the mass the parishioners stood while a photographer snapped his camera at the group of distinguished guests. Then the secret service men opened a way, and amid "vives" General Diaz and his party pushed their way out of the little church. The general stood in his motor car saluting the crowds of his fellow countrymen as the machines drove away.

SOCIETY

Proving to be the largest and most elaborate formal gathering of the early autumn, Mesdames W. J. Grisham, J. C. A. Guest and R. D. Kennedy were "at home" Wednesday afternoon to several hundred guests at the home of Mrs. Grisham.

The home was delightfully decorated with numerous baskets of huge yellow plume chrysanthemums and ferns featuring. In the diningroom the table was arranged in a veritable bower of the chrysanthemums and autumn leaves, and the punch bower was attractive with vines of autumn leaves trellising the walls and ceiling.

The house was beautifully lighted with numerous shaded electroliers.

Fashions for Americans

Patent leather and suede are frequently used to trim wool fabric or velvet frocks for children, set on either in the form of flower or other motifsor else as straight bands or pipings. And it is interesting to note that fine oil cloth may be similarly applied, and with very much the effect of patent leather. The little frock shown in the sketch indicates one of the methods of using this leather or imitation leather trimmings.

Black velvet vies for popularity with fine wool materials such as duvetyn and broadcloth in high shades for children's dresses. Chinese red, bright green, henna and rust shades are popular.

The dress illustrated has panel back and front, the fastening being at one side and not visible. The little side sections are a trifle full and held in wild a folded belt or girdle of self-fabric. The fancy for short sleeves in children's dresses is pronounced. Very few full length sleeves are used, and the children generally highly approve of this style. When out of doors a coat or sweater protects them from cold, and when indoors they do not need heavy, stuffy looking garments.

The little tam shown in the sketch is also smart and a bit out of the ordinary, with its plain crown and head band and full puff of velvet between.

For party wear—that is, daytime festivities—smart little frocks of white serge are being shown for children up to ten years, these sharing honors with ruffled taffetas. Very little girls are dressed for gala occasions in organdy or georgette. Velvet is as popular for party frocks for children as it is for dresses for street wear, and some charming little models are shown with guimpes of bright colored georgette or chiffon.

Patent Leather, Suede and Oil Cloth Are Used to Applique Frocks for Children.

Nothing But Woodwork

A business woman left a note for her maid, who was due to arrive during the day, to the effect that the baseboard in the kitchen should be washed. That night on her return the mistress found the following note:

"Dear Mrs. —— I spent all morning looking for that baseboard, but couldn't find it. I will wash anything you say, but there isn't anything in the kitchen to wash but woodwork and floor."—New York Evening Post.

JEAN DE RESZKE, CARUSO'S PREDECESSOR AT THE METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE, AND MISS MAY PETERSON, AMERICAN SOPRANO

Jean de Reszke, once the leading operatic tenor of the world and now its most famous singing teacher, doesn't like cameramen. He hasn't faced one before for eight years. But May Peterson, favorite concert star, known as "the golden girl of the Metropolitan," seems to have diverted his attention sufficiently for a photographer to slip in and capture Mr. De Reszke in an informal pose with the American prima donna. Miss Peterson spent the entire summer with Mr. De Reszke receiving suggestions and preparing her concert programs for the coming season. This picture was made at Mr. De Reszke's summer home at Roynt, in the mountains of France.

KEEP YOUR HEART PUMPING PURE BLOOD

Waste Products in the Blood Cause Many Forms of Rheumatism, Skin Disorders, and A Lowered Vitality.

How to Clear Your Blood of Waste Products.

You will say where does this poison get in the blood? Now listen: When foods disagree with us, we have fermentation; when our liver is sluggish, we are subject to constipation; when we fail to drink enough pure water, our kidneys cannot properly function; or when we fail to take regular exercise, our skin becomes congested.

As a result, waste products get in the blood. Ill health sets in. You may lose your strength and vitality; or you may have rheumatism pains in the muscles and joints; or you may be troubled with pimples, bad boils, sores or some other skin eruption. All because of the poisonous waste products in the blood. Nature then needs help. She has done her best but is failing.

Your blood is your fountain source of energy—therefore keep your heart pumping pure blood. Get the waste products out of your blood and your health will rapidly improve.

For over 50 years, thousands and thousands of men and women have relied on S. S. S. to clear their blood of waste products. S. S. S. will improve the quality of your blood by relieving you of the waste products which cause impoverished blood and its allied troubles—skin disorders, rheumatism and a lowered vitality.

S. S. S. may be had at any drug store. Beware of substitutes. Write to Chief Medical Director, Swift Specific Co., 716 S. S. S. Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga., and let him help you regain your health and strength. Give him a full description of your case. He is helping people every day (without charge). Ask him to send you his illustrated booklet, "Facts About the Blood" free. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores.—Adv.

LINE PLAY OF BEARS AWAITS AGGIE ATTACK

WACO, Texas, Nov. 2.—Baylor University's line play will offer a stiff resistance to the Farmers when Bible sends his offense hurtling against the Bear forward line defense. Line coach Jim Crow has developed an exceptionally strong defense in the past six weeks. Beginning the season with practically no line strength, the Bears under Crow's efficient tutelage have developed one of the strongest lines in the conference. Only the end positions keep the Bear line from ranking with the best forward defenses of the Southwest. From tackle to tackle Baylor's five linemen show a finished football polish that should stop the Farmer drive and turn the Aggies' offense to the ends.

The Bear linemen charge as a unit on offense. They have torn big holes in the first defense lines of the best conference elevens. The holes opened up by the Bear linemen have given opportunity for Baylor's backfield stars, Tanner, Craven, Pittman and Strickland, to go through the line for good gains. Even against Boston College Tanner was able to gain consistently. On defense the line tackles hard; the linemen use their hands well; and no team has been able to get the jump on the Bear linemen. They are always there with a charge to turn back the unexpected assault, such as Bible and his men are reported to use.

At center, the 190-pound Kirk is playing one of the best games in the conference. In the Boston College game he played the famous "Biker" Doyle to a standstill. On defense Kirk is a hard fighter; he uses his hands extremely well; backs up the line consistently; covers forward passes; is a hard tackler, and shows uncanny ability at figuring out the opponent's play. On offense, Kirk passes accurately; carries his man out of every play; thinks all the time and out guesses his opponents. He is big, fast, and plays a heady game at all times.

At left guard Captain Weathers is a tower of strength. He is a man of wide football experience. He played on the Waco high school team with Benny Boynton and on a division team overseas. This is his third year on the Baylor Varsity. On both offense and defense Weathers uses his 230 pounds of weight to advantage. He is extremely fast for his weight and often gets tackles behind the line of scrimmage. Besides playing a stellar guard Weathers kicks all goals after touchdowns and is often called back to boot the ball for place kicks.

Anderson at right guard is playing his first Varsity football. He is not a brilliant man but is at all times a consistent player. He has probably the best football head of any man on the Bear eleven save Bradshaw. If he were fast enough he would be playing in the backfield. He is well put together and although light in weight has been able to outplay his opponents throughout the season.

In her tackle positions Baylor has two of the strongest men in the conference. Blallock at left tackle is playing his best game in years. This is his third year on Baylor's Varsity. On defense he stops everything that is sent over him; on offense he carries the ball for frequent gains. He is exceptionally fast for his weight.

Williamson, playing his first Varsity football, is fast enough to be used in the backfield. His playing has improved with every game, and Coach Frank Bridges is relying on Williamson and Anderson, both first year men, to stop the Farmers' onslaughts against the right side of the line.

Baylor is weakest at the end positions. However, line coach Crow has been able to improve the Bear wingman's style of playing, and A. & M. will find in Crosby, Butler, Cairnes and Burch a quartet of fast and hard tackling end men.

LARGE AUDIENCES CONTINUE AT THE WICHITA THEATER

Two large audiances greeted the Gene Lewis-Olga Worth players again yesterday and every one went away well satisfied that the company is the best ever seen in this city.

"Sick-A-Bed" is just the kind of a play that drives away all the dullness of the day and makes you start the next day right. "Sick-A-Bed" will continue for the balance of the week with another matinee on Saturday.

Starting Monday night this company will be seen in their first dramatic offering "The Acquittal" which Cohan and Harris produced with great success in both New Yirk and Chicago. The play is without a doubt one of the strongest dramatic plays ever presented. Cohan and Harris have one thing to their credit that no other producing firm in New York has, that is they have never produced a failure. "The Acquittal" proved to be one of theire biggest successes for more than two years.

In "The Acquittal" Miss Olga Worth will have an excellent part. She also has a chance to wear some of her handsome gowns. The seats are now selling for all performances.

Anything to Oblige.

DETROIT OFFERS CENTRE BIG GATE FOR GRID GAME

By Associated Press.

DETROIT, Nov. 2.—University of Detroit athletic authorities have renewed negotiations with Centre College for a football game. In a message sent to Centre by Charles L. Bruce, graduate manager of athletics, the "Praying Colonels" were offered one-half of the gross receipts and guaranteed $7,500 for a game to be played at Navin field here on Thanksgiving day. This offer, it was pointed out, probably would bring Centre's share of the receipts to $15,000.

NEW YORKER WINS LEGION AERIAL DERBY

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 2.—Lloyd Bertaud of New York won the American Legion aerial derby race over a 440-mile triangular course here this afternoon. His time was 60 minutes 15 2-5 seconds.

Lieutenant J. D. Givens, Fort Sill, Okla., was second, his time, 66 minutes 15 1-5 seconds. Third place was won by C. B. Wrightsman, Tulsa, Okla., time 67 minutes, 17 4-5 seconds. Lieutenant Wagoner, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, won fourth place, time 67 minutes 55 1-5 seconds.

Fifth place went to Major Lamppher, Fort Sill, Okla., time 68 minutes, 12 2-5 seconds. His prize was $250.

The derby race was over a 440 mile triangular course of eight laps. The prizes awarded follows:

First, $3,500 and the Kansas City Rotary club trophy cup which, to become a permanent possession, must be won twice in legion events.

Second, $1,500.

Third, $750.

Fourth, $500.

ELECTRA AND FORT WORTH ELEVENS MAY CLASH HERE

Several local lovers of football are trying hard to get the Electra and Fort Worth high school elevens to settle their district championship argument in Wichita Falls, if possible next Saturday. The managers of the two teams, it is understood, are willing to play the decisive game in a neutral city provided all expenses are guaranteed—and local lovers of the sport have formed a little syndicate of their own to raise approximately $500 as this guarantee.

As neither Electra nor the North Side high management expects any net profit from the game, those who put up the guarantee hope to break even on the gate receipts. Unless the customary admission price were raised (and this, of course, might have the effect of reducing the size of the crowd), the game probably would not net any profit to its promoters. They are interested in the fracas purely from the standpoint of desiring to see the two fast teams clash here, and it is to be hoped the plan will succeed. Definite answers from the Electra and Fort Worth managers are expected within twenty-four hours.

SABOLOSKY SEEKS INJUNCTION AGAINST HAM AND HASSELL

DALLAS, Nov. 2.—The controversy owner of the Dallas franchise in the Texas league was docketed for its first inning in court here today. The Sabolosky, Mineral Wells capitalist, through counsel late today asked District Judge E. B. Muse to issue an injunction restraining Jesse Hassell and Hamilton Patterson, who, petitioner alleges, contracted to sell him the franchise for $150,000, from changing lease terms on Gardner park and to hold in status quo all matters in connection with operation of the club.

Defendants recently refused to accept the initial payment of $50,000 on the contract and declared the club was not for sale, according to the petition. It also charges that Hassell, in violation of the sale contract, has purchased Gardner park for $60,000 notwithstanding it was to pass to Sabolosky on the old lease basis from the Gardner Amusement Company.

Texas league officials at a meeting here two weeks ago recognized Sabolosky as owner of the Dallas club and it is said final settlement of the controversy probably will be put up to Judge K. M. Landis.

CALDWELL FIRST TO GO IN PLAN TO REBUILD INDIANS

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 2.—The Cleveland Indians have given Ray Caldwell, vet hurler, his unconditional release. The passing of Caldwell in itself isn't important. But it does show that Tris Speaker is beginning the renovating and rebuilding his club needs. Spoke must bolster his pitching staff for next season and the seasons to come when his other vets begin to slip. He also must strengthen his infield with youngsters. And, in passing, Caldwell's release strikes a body blow at that old talk of Speaker making it soft for his own friends on the team. Spoke liked Ray, but puts the team ahead of his personal interests.

"MA" BURDICK ATTENDS THE BIG CONVENTION

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2.—"Ma" Burdick of Salvatnon Army fame, now of Wichita Falls, Texas, who fed doughnuts to thousands of soldiers at a score of places in France, and ministered to the men in France hospitals, believes the women's auxiliary of the American Legion is the real power to quell the unrest in the world today.

"Ma" Burdick made that statement upon her arrival in Kansas City for the convention. She is first vice-president of the Texas auxiliary. She is wearing her overseas uniform, and there seems to be scarcely a man attending the convention who doesn't know "Ma" either personally or through friends.

"The old saying, 'The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world,' is just as true today as it was when it was originated," Mrs. Burdick said, explaining her attitude regarding the auxiliary.

"The 150,000 women who now make up its membership are a bigger power in the country today than they realize.

"In my eighteen months overseas I found that the value of the women in performing little tasks for the boys and in mothering them was greater than the women had supposed. So great, in fact, that it often has been said since, that without the overseas women, as well as the woman at home, the United States would not have turned the tide of war.

"There is an even greater work for the women to do since the war. There is a social unrest among us that everybody recognizes. It is affecting the nation materially and spiritually. The work of women first is to quell in a sympathetic way the great unrest in the world. The salvation of the world lies in their hands more than they know.

"Every woman who is eligible to the American Legion women's auxiliary should go into it, and work not only for disarmament, that there may be no wars between nations, but work 'tooth and nail' that there may be no internal strife and with the hope that the problem of unrest may be replaced by real contentment."

Mrs. Edward Clinton Murray, Houston, Texas, is a strong candidate for the national presidency from the Southwest, Texas delegates are instructed to vote for her. The New Orleans delegation also comes instructed to vote for Mrs. Murray. The only war memorial favored by the Texas delegation is a hospital or camp for convalescent soldiers.

BAYLOR COACH DENIES TALE OF DIRTY PLAYING

WACO, Texas, Nov. 2.—"I want to correct the impression that has gone out over the state of Texas that Baylor University does not play a gentlemanly and clean sportsman-like style of football game. We have drilled our men in the idea that sportsmanship comes first, then victory. Because Baylor suffered numerous penalties in one of her recent games certain biased and self-appointed critics over the state have spread abroad the report that Baylor men have been coached to play a rough and unsportsman-like game of football.

"I have at all times stressed clean athletics. My associates in the coaching at Baylor, Jim Crow and Johnnie Fort, have done the same. Mottoes on the walls of dressing room and halls in the athletic buildings exort the men to play clean and fair. Baylor has been penalized only one time this year for roughing or slugging. This regrettable incident happened in the Boston College game at Dallas when a Boston man was trying to twist the neck of a Baylor man. It was after the play had already been stoped by the referee's whistle, and came as a personal affair, not as a part of the play or the game. We do not indulge in any sort of underhanded or questionable style of football. We have been penalized for using our hands on the offense, but never, save for one instance, for slugging, kneeing, or other roughing tactics."

This was the statement made today by Head Coach Frank Bridges of Baylor University in answer to numerous letters and personal inquiries that have come to Baylor's coaches as the result of a report spread broadcast by some biased person seeking to discredit an otherwise successful season.

COURT OF APPEALS REVERSES SENTENCE BELL COUNTY MAN

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Nov. 2.—The court of criminal appeals today affirmed the life term sentence of Fleming Johnson, convicted in Lamar county for murder. The case of J. N. Gunn of Bell county, given 20 years for murder, however, was reversed and remanded to the trial court for a new trial.

A motion for rehearing was overruled in the case of A. M. Harkey, sentenced to six years imprisonment in McCullough county, for attempting to poison his father-in-law. The case of Nettie Peoples, sentenced to two years for burglary in Harris county, was reversed and remanded for a new trial. R. F. WEDDING BELLS READY TO PEAL FOR BO M'MILLIN

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 2.—Miss Marie Miers, until yesterday an employe of a large oil company here, left last night for Danville, Ky., in response to a telegram from "Bo" McMillin, Centre college football star. It was announced today by her employers. Today friends of Miss Miers admitted that reports of her approaching marriage to McMillin were true. Miss Miers came here a year ago from Fort Worth, Texas, where her mother now lives. She was a childhood friend of the celebrated football player.

LEONARD HAS JOB FINDING OPPONENTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard is in training for another campaign in the ring, but it looks as though good opponents for him will be decidedly scarce. Neither Rocky Kansas nor Lew Tendler, who met in New York recently in a bout that was supposed to be for the purpose of providing an opponent for the champion, showed anything to give Leonard cause for alarm.

Kansas never was taken seriously, but if Tendler had defeated him decisively there would have been a countrywide demand for Leonard to meet the Philadelphian in a championship match. The size of the crowd that attended the bout showed that the fans were interested in Tendler's prospects. If he had made good a match with Leonard would have been a tremendous attraction. In that case there is no doubt that Leonard would not have allowed his dislike for Tendler to interfere with the opportunity to rake in a fortune.

It is evident that Tendler is not as good as he was a year or so ago. At the present time he is just a fair lightweight without a particularly brilliant future before him. At that time he was almost as great an attraction as Leonard himself, and he could make plenty of money without running the risk of being knocked out by the champion. Even a big loser's end and the off chance of capturing the title were not worth the risk. But now it is apparent that Tendler made a big mistake. He has lost all his prestige and the shot at the title as well.

Tendler has nothing that indicates he would have the ghost of a chance with Leonard. He has lost his wallop and he is not a great boxer, although he is decidedly more clever than the average southpaw. But Tendler is easy to hit and he cannot withstand much punishment. He has a very tender skin that shows the mark of every blow, no matter how light, and he seldom goes through a bout without bleeding in several places.

As far as Kansas is concerned, he would have even less chance with Leonard. Tendler at least has plenty of speed, but Kansas has nothing but a rugged physique. That he received the verdict over Tendler does not prove anything. Tendler, with all his faults, showed himself to possess more "class." Although the Philadelphian seems to be going back, he is younger than Kansas and probably will be boxing long after Kansas is through.

Got His Dates Mixed.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

What football eleven in these parts wants to tangle with the Wichita Falls high school team this coming Saturday? The red and black crew haven't a game on the schedule, and Coach Harry Viner is anxious to arrange a game for Saturday in order to keep the players in good condition for the Armistice Day battle with Devol, Okla. But up to a late hour last night Viner had still been unable to find an eleven in this section willing to fill the hole in the locals' schedule.

Our syndicated contemporary, answering the question why young golfers play a better game the first few times out than they play later, declares it is because as they grow older at the game they play more form and less golf. He argues that "all they have to do is be natural, step up to the pill and slam it" and that "it is a man's own game that counts and not the duplication of another fellow's golf." All of which sounds reasonable, but ain't—for GOOD golf is based upon good form in 999 cases out of 1,000. How many really fine golfers have you ever seen whose game wasn't based on the cardinal principles of form? You can't recall any offhand, can you? If form wasn't the basis of good golf, the golf professionals of the world would have to quit; the dubs would always remain dubs and no man would ever need an instructor—and in a few generations, with all form discarded and every golfer playing "his own game and not the duplication of another fellow's golf," the player who could consistently shoot an 87 would probably win the United States open championship.

No, there isn't a thing to form—nothing but the entire game of golf.

Sport writers and athletes the country over mourn the passing of "Bat" Masterson, sporting editor of the New York Morning Telegraph, and one of the most picturesque characters who ever came out of the great West. Throughout the Rocky Mountain region and all up and down the Rio Grande Masterson years and years ago left his name stamped indelibly on the frontier as a fearless, fighting foe of the "bad man." His record requires no comment from me. He was perhaps the only man of his type who ever graduated from the saddle and the campfire to the editorial chair of a big newspaper in the "effete East." As a sporting editor "Bat" showed the same great fighting heart, and was recognized nationally as a battler against crookedness in sports. He did much to protect the public from the flim flam wiles of dishonest fight promoters in the East, and his friends among the fight fans were legion.

Unquestionably "Bo" McMillin, the Fort Worth boy who is playing such brilliant football for little Centre college, will be selected by many experts as all-American quarterback. His brilliancy against Harvard recently went far toward winning McMillin the berth again. But Penn. State, it seems, also has a quarterback, Charlie Killenger, who looks like a world beater this season. Killenger almost single-handed beat Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado 28 to 7 last week. He completely dominated the game, according to Eastern writers, and on every play wherein he carried the ball it required from three to six Gergians to down him. Once the entire team couldn't do it, and Killenger ran 90 yards for a touchdown from the kickoff. All in all, the Penn Stater will have to be figured in somewhere when the big league dopesters start picking stars for an all-American eleven.

Miss Cecil Leitch has announced that she will return to the United States in 1922 to renew her quest for our woman's golf championship—and while all god sports are always glad to welcome visiting stars of the athletic firmament, darned if that announcement will bring any loud cheers from the feminine golfers in the land of the free and home of the brave. Miss Leitch holds the championships of England, France and Canada already, and there isn't the slightest question but that she is the greatest woman golfer in the world. She failed to win the United States title this year, but we can thank our lucky stars for that; she was beaten by a player of far inferior ability who was in turn easily eliminated the following day. Miss Leitch lost in one of those freakish upsets that occasionally disturb the golfing calendar. While in this country she repeatedly trounced Alexa Stirling and the very best golfers of the nation—and it behooveth our feminine exponents of the game to rally 'round the flag, boys, with extreme desperation when that sturdy Englishwoman returns to our shores with blood in her eye in 1922.

"Travelers Find Reds Not Such Dreadful Folk," says a headline anent the situation in Russia. Might save that headline for a Mineral Wells paper when Cincinnati starts training next spring.

An Eastern story states that both the Giants and Yankees are planning a buying campaign to land more stars now with other big league clubs. You can't tell Jawn McGraw that "good ball players can't be bought;" when he wants 'em he merely waves a fat wad of currency and gets 'em. McGraw has pretty near bought every pennant he has won. The Yankees on the other hand ought to be trying right now to buy not players but a little harmony. Miller Huggins put the Yanks over last year, but the discord in the Yankee camp all season can't continue if Hug expects to repeat.

A "Garage in Spain."

"Why didn't you sell that visitor a motor car?" asked the manager.

"He said he was just looking around," replied the new salesman. "He's going to buy a car when his oil stock makes him rich. I took down his name and address."

"You might as well destroy that memorandum, son. Every castle in Spain has a garage now, but there's nothing in it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Students Give Programs for Chapel Period

A student program, half by the school orchestra and half by students of the public speaking department, featured the chapel programs of the last two days at Senior High school.

The orchestra played a march for the entrance of students and during the program rendered Massanett's Elegie from Thais, the solo part being played by Miss Vena Tickle and Dvorak's Humoresque.

The students from the public speaking department rendered a scene from a play composed and staged entirely by students. The title of the play is "It Happens Thus" and was written by James Fox, Hollis Clark, William Powers and Robert McAbee.

An essay "On Account of My Trip Through Main" by Miss Vaugn Buchanan concluded the program.

LLOYD GEORGE WILL BE "AT HOME" HERE DURING ARMS CONFERENCE

The Munn residence and latest photo of Premier Lloyd George, taken when he attended services for Great Britain's unknown soldier.

It is understood that Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain has accepted the offer of the use of the home of Mrs. Charles A. Munn on Scott Circle, Washington, for himself and party during the disarmament conference. This acceptance, it is said, is conditional on his decision to attend the conference. It is not known definitely as yet whether he will head the British delegation. The offer of the Munn home was made by Gurnee Munn, Mrs. Munn's son. It is a short distance north of the White House and two blocks east of the British embassy.

POLICE ARREST TWO ON ADVICES FROM CHILDRESS

Two men were arrested Wednesday afternoon, as they stepped from an inbound train by City Detectives Jack Miller and Lenly Humphries, on advice from the sheriff at Childress giving descriptions of two men wanted in connection with the disappearance of two rings there.

Two rings, one with a ruby setting and another with an imitation diamond were found in possession of the men.

They gave their names to officers as Frank Evans and Tate Crawford and asserted they had been picking cotton during the fall. They are being held at the city jail, pending the arrival of Childress officers.

How an
EXPECTANT MOTHER
Prepared for Baby's Coming

DO YOU know that thousands of women never really suffer at child-birth? Perhaps you have thought with many others that this should always be the case. But how?

Let Mrs. Mattie Paul, of Ocilla, Ga., tell you. She is one of thousands who has demonstrated this fact:

"As I am a young mother of one baby, I am writing for free booklet to 'expectant mothers.' I used only two bottles of Mother's Friend before I was confined and had a quick and easy time through labor. I can recommend Mother's Friend to all expectant mothers. I will never go through pregnancy without it."

You, too, can have this booklet for expectant mothers by sending coupon below.

It goes into the features of maternity and gives, in a plain, interesting manner, information about what the mother needs in clothing before baby is born; what clothing will be necessary for the baby; an interesting table as to the probable date of delivery; simple but necessary and helpful rules of hygiene to follow, and much other worth-while information. This little booklet also tells about Mother's Friend and the wonderful good it is doing for expectant mothers.

Don't let false modesty keep you from performing this duty to yourself—your family—and your baby.

Send for your copy NOW.

MR. THOMPSON WELL VERSED IN HIS WORK

Frank S. Reid Interviews Engineer on Wonderful Reservoir Which Nature Has Kindly Provided.

Its Value As a Water Supply for the Future of Wichita Falls—Specialists Will Do the Work.

By FRANK S. REID.

In talking with Chief Engineer Thompson of the local irrigation project the other evening, Mr. Thompson sounded the keynote of the situation as regards the local project in the matter of publicity. He seemed to be pleased at the publicity already given the project, and wanted considerably more. The writer appreciates his wishes along this matter from personal experience. The public should be informed of every detail of the project and as indications point to an early commencement of actual work, it will be interesting to follow it up to completion.

Mr. Thompson is a man of pleasing personality, well versed in engineering work. In our conversation, he told the writer that while he would serve more in an executive capacity, he would procure the best construction men possible. That is, he would have a specialist in the construction of the dam and another man who is especially fitted for the construction of the canals and the distribution system.

Mr. Thompson spoke of the wonderful reservoir which nature has so kindly provided. He said in his experience he had seen few its equal. He spoke of the city of Berkeley, California, adding to its water supply and making a lake that would cover 900 acres. Here we have a reservoir covering approximately 20,000 acres. Mr. Thompson said its value as a water supply for the future of Wichita Falls could not be questioned, and the work should go ahead if for this reason only, laying aside any thought of irrigating some 150,000 acres of land, but since the two can go hand in hand, was all the more reason why it should go through.

While Mr. Thompson did not commit himself regarding the sale of the bonds, it seems evident that something of interest is at hand regarding the construction of the project, for Mr. Thompson has opened up a suite of offices on the second floor of the Waggoner building, and is preparing himself for the active discharge of his duties in connection with the project.

FERDINAND FOCH GENIUS OF WAR ONCE A PRIVATE

Conqueror of the Hohenzollerns and Hapsburgs Rose From Ranks in the Army of French Republic.

A Memorable Message—"My Right Is Crushed, My Left in Retreat, I Am Attacking With My Center."

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2.—"My right is crushed. My left is in retreat. I am attacking with my center."

In the hour of a deadly peril of the first Battle of Marne, when the fate of France seemed hopeless, General Foch flashed that memorable message to Joffre.

He commanded the Twentieth Army Corps of 120,000. Opposing him was the Prussian Guard, flower of the German Army, 200,000 men. They smote Foch fearfully and his aides reported that right and left wings had been compelled to give way.

"In that case there is nothing left to do but smash them in the center," Foch rejoined. He smashed them.

This genius from the Pyrenees—scarce six inches over five feet tall, thin, ascetic, mathematics incarnate—now is seventy years old. He was a private in the Franco-Prussian War and in the early nineties was recognized as the greatest authority on tactics.

A conference of Clemenceau, Foch, Poincare, Petain, Leygues and Loucheur took place in Doullens March 25, 1918. The next day, March 26, Lloyd George and Haig joined the conference. Clemenceau took charge of Foch's argument for unity of command. The Premier turned to Haig asking if he consented. Haig bowed his head in acquiescence. Then Lloyd George said: "I accept this plan in the name of His Majesty's government." Clemenceau put his arms about the British Premier and from then on the Allies marched together under Foch.

Gas, Indigestion, Stomach Misery —"Diapepsin"

"Pape's Diapepsin" "really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes — that — just that — makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous—and the joy is its harmlessness. A large sixty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin is worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the most efficient antacid and stomach regulator in the world. (Adv.)

IRISH AFFAIRS WILL DETAIN LLOYD GEORGE

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Premier Lloyd George has definitely cancelled his passage on the Steamer Aquitania, on which he was to have proceeded to the United States November 5 to attend the Washington conference.

This fact became officially known here tonight for the first time.

It had been known, however, for some days that the critical stage the Irish negotiations had reached probabl would prevent Mr. Lloyd-George from sailing on Saturday.

Owing to the grave turn in Irish affairs, it is not even possible to fix a provisional date for the premier's sailing but he still intends to go to Washington at the earliest moment possible.

The cancellation by the premier of his passage is considered a favorable sign of the progress of Irish negotiations. The interpretation placed on it is that Mr. Lloyd George hopes that a few days delay in his departure will enable him to see a settlement reached, or at least the basis of an agreement which can be worked out during his absence from the country. In this connection, importance is attended to the fact that Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, is coming to London Saturday.

DERAILMENT OF OIL TANK CARS DELAYS TRAINS

Derailment of five loaded oil cars on the Wichita Valley near Seymour late Tuesday caused slight delays in passenger and freight traffic, according to reports from the local office. Passengers on train No. 1 which left here at 2:45 p. m. Tuesday were transferred at the scene of the wreck to train No. 8 and the passengers of No. 8 were put on No. 1, which returned here as No. 2, arriving three hours late Wednesday afternoon.

The wreck was cleared early Wednesday morning. No injuries were sustained by any member of the crew of the freight derailed.

INCONSIDERATE MAN.

She—Yes, I've broken our engagment. Just think, last night he take me to a show and tells me it's a tragedy. For two whole acts he lets me sit there and weep and finally, in the third act, he tells me the whole thing is a farce. I'm through with him.

Wild Chase Nets Two for Police

A wild chase, with Detective Bob Hembree in pursuit, which began on Lake street and ended near the Travis school late Wednesday afternoon, resulted in the arrest of three men, who were lodged in the city jail.

According to the report of Detective Hembree two half gallon fruit jars, filled with corn liquor, were hurled from the fleeing automobile during the pursuit. Hembree reported that he fired one shot at a tire of the fleeing car in an effort to stop it. Two of the men were booked under charges of 'investigation' and one under a charge of reckless driving.

Unchanged to Him.

"Don't you think the theater has become sadly commercialized?"

"If," replied Mr. Stormington Barnes, "by 'commercialized' you mean affording opportunities to make large sums of money, I cannot say that I have noticed it personally."—Washington Star.

YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to summon H. C. Roberts and Theo. Hildebrand by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 30th District Court of Wichita County, to be holden at the Court House thereof in Wichita Falls, on the third Monday in December, A. D. 1921, the same being the 19th day of December A. D. 1921, then and there to answer an amended petition filed in said Court on the 29th day of October, A. D. 1921 in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 10802-A wherein, W. L. Schachner and C. F. Carew are Plaintiffs and H. C. Roberts, M. M. Ferrell and Theo. Hildebrand are Defendants, and said petition alleging, that on or about the 10th day of May, 1921, plaintiffs as trustees for Texlouana Producing & Refining Company, were legally seized and possessed of an oil and gas lease and the oil and gas being produced from the following described tracts of land situated in Wichita County, Texas, holding and claiming the said leasehold estates, and the said oil, gas and mineral right therein, to-wit: The oil and gas and mineral leasehold estates in and to and covering the South 20 acres of block No. 12 of the S. N. Ferguson Sub-division of the J. T. Lewis survey in Wichita County, Texas.
Also the oil, gas and mineral rights and leasehold estates in and to and covering Block No. 6, Knight's sub-division of the North ½ of Block No. 72 of the H. E. R. V. lands in Wichita Co., Texas, and as shown by the plat of said Knight's Subdivision.

Traffic Monument Causes Crash for Out-of-Town Man

Unfamiliarity with a "drive to the right" monument at Tenth Brook is thought to have been the cause for the complete demolishment of a Ford touring car and painful but not serious injuries to J. B. Kennedy, of Sherman about 11:30 o'clock Wednesday night.
If the concrete object at the intersection of the streets was intended to slow up traffic it did, in this case, the car stopping in the front lawn of R. O. Harvey's home.
The young man was carried to the Wichita general hospital where it was reported his injuries were of a minor nature, consisting chiefly of bruises and a small scalp wound.

U. S. EXPECTED TO TAKE LEAD IN ARMS MEET

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Conferences between the American delegation to the conference on arms limitation and the staffs of technical advisers assigned to aid the delegation will continue even after the conference itself has opened.

It was indicated today at the state department, where the American delegates were again in session with Secretary Denby and the naval advisers on technical matters of the delegation, that there would probably be no termination of this discussion of naval armament matters or of any other specific matters to come up before the international gathering, the meetings going on as occasion required even after the conference was in session. So far, the American delegates are understood to have confined themselves in the joint discussions, primarily with naval armament, no other subjects such as those involving a possible association of nations plan, or a world court having been considered.

The delegates are understood to be preparing to take the initiative and make a substantial offer in the conference looking to reduction of naval programs. The United States called the conference, it was pointed out, and expects to be ready to submit a very liberal offer on its own behalf looking to such reductions. The first meeting of the conference is scheduled for 10:30 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, November 12, in the auditorium of the building erected by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

JAPAN WILL SEEK TO HOLD GRIP IN EAST AT COMING DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

The map shows the grip Japan has on eastern Asia. The shaded portions of land are territories that Japan either owns or controls.

1—The islands of Sakhalin and Yezzo (Hokkaide) control the waters of Siberia and the outlet of the rich Amur basin, with all its mineral wealth.

2—The Japs are still in Vladivostok and the surrounding territory, and show little disposition to get out.

3—They are advancing into the interior of Siberia.

4—They have a tight grip on Manchuria, and dominate North China by their guns at Port Arthur.

5—They have absorbed Korea.

6—They have seized all the wealth of Shantung, excluding every one but themselves from share, and now that they have everything they talk of returning the administration to China.

7—From Formosa they hope to dominate South China, which they expect to soon break up into a mass of disunited provinces. Formosa is fortified and looks toward Hongkong, Canton and the Yangtze valley.

8—They hold the former German Pacific islands, which lie in a crescent about our island of Guam and cut us off from the Philippines.

"CHOICE" IS SUBJECT OF DR. M'KISSICK

"The choice of the Moment may be the index to destiny. It is a choice between the Savior and Satan, between heaven and hell," Rev. James T. McKissick declared in his Wednesday evening sermon at the First Christian church.

Dr. McKissick took as his text "Choice." He declared that power of choice is one of the things that differentiates man from the lower members of the animal kingdom and exhorted his hearers that they exercise that gift as regards their spiritual welfare.

The meeting Wednesday night was well attended, the congregational singing continuing as one of the strong features of the service. The meetings will continue through next Sunday.

Enlistment in Guard Unit to Begin Friday

Enlistment in a rifle company of the reorganized 142nd infantry of the 36th division, Texas National Guard, will start at the meeting of all men interested next Friday night at the American Legion hall, according to a decision reached at an enthusiastic meeting Wednesday night.

Major W. L. Culbertson, of the 5th infantry, United States army, who has been assigned to the Wichita Falls district, made a short talk to the men present Wednesday night on the features of the reorganization national guard. A rifle company of 65 men and officers will be recruited from Wichita Falls and surrounding country. Major Culbertson said, and he called on all men present to do their best to work up interest of their friends in the guard company.

Under the national guard system, drills of one hour each, will be held one night a week, for which the government will pay enlisted men and officers, according to their grades.

The present organization of the rifle company has been announced to consist of Charles W. Nolen, captain and James M. Williams, first lieutenant. The other officers and non-commissioned officers have not been appointed.

"While it is desired that as many ex-service men as possible be secured in this company, we still have room for a number of strong active youths who were too young to enter the late war," Captain Nolen said.

Practical assurance of local business men that an armory will be built to accommodate the newly organized guard has been received, local guard officers say, and the enlistment in this company will start after Friday night.

EVIDENCE IS BEING TAKEN IN $30,000 SUIT

The taking of evidence in the $30,000 damage suit of W. P. Harris against W. F. and C. H. Parker, Saul Lebenson and Ike Bergolosky for alleged injuries resulting when a frame awning broke and fell on him while walking in front of buildings owned by them on Indiana street will probably be completed today, according to information from attorneys interested in the case.

The case went on trial before Judge P. A. Martin of the 30th district court Tuesday.

The principal development in the trial of the case Wednesday was the action of Judge Martin to postpone decision on three questions of law brought up by defendant attorneys until the evidence in the case had been introduced. The legal question involved the question as to the responsibility for maintaining an awning.

The court will ultimately be called upon to determine whether this responsibility rests upon the landlord, tenant or original owner.

The following officers of the new club was announced; Polly Clark, president; Edward Kadane, vice president; Myers Bayes secretary; Clyde Robinson, treasurer and John Barnard, sargeant-at-arms.

The purposes of the club are announced as identical with those of the disbanded club and are for the promotion of good fellowship, clean athletics and higher morals among members. Social and literary entertainments are expected to feature the programs of the club.

The members of the club announced that the Parish House had been chosen as a meeting place, following a ruling of the school board, prohibiting school students from meeting evenings at the High school building.

"BLOC" MENACE IN LAW MAKING

The great problems that confront the American people at this time can not be settled by partisan shibboleths or by sectional clamors or class propaganda, writes Senator King in The Nation's Business. It were an unmitigated evil that the affairs of state should fall within the control of any group with a propaganda, or of any class obsessed by an ism which subordinates every consideration of the public weal to the promotion of its pet and partial projects. One of the evils of these times in public life of our country is the formation of numerous groups in the country, each with some special project or propaganda, and each attempting to seize the power of the government and make of it an instrument to impose its projects upon the people.

Sectionalism in its day was an evil thing. It was the cause of a great war between geographical divisions of the country, but sectionalism is not entirely deaf to the appeals of patriotism. The man who is obsessed with the narrow projects of a class, a group or a special party cannot be appealed to from that standpoint. His country means nothing to him.

WATSON AND DEBS.

Senator Tom Watson again is in a state of eruption. He is responsible for the indictment, delivered on the floor of the senate, that twenty American soldiers serving in France were hanged without court martial or other form of trial. If Senator Watson of Georgia had been sent to trial in the court that convicted Eugene V. Debs of violation of the espionage laws, the Georgian would have been an inmate today of a federal penitentiary. He denounced the draft and his newspapers were denied the privileges of the post-office department. Debs, a socialist, was convicted and sent to the penitentiary; Watson, who calls himself a democrat, was unmolested and the Georgia democrats honored him with a seat in the senate of the United States where Gordon and Brown and Ben Hill in days of old shed lustre on and won honored recognition for the Southland and its sons. It is a mighty and lamentable fall from Ben Hill to Tom Watson; but this is a democracy and the majority should rule.

Former Congressman Cordell Hull of Carthage, Tenn., is chairman of the National Democratic Committee. Former Congressman George White of Ohio stepped down and out "to return to the ranks to help in the struggle for the ideals of democracy." Now just what are the ideals of modern democracy?

A DEMOCRAT SHOULD BE CONSISTENT.

Congressman Hatten W. Sumners, ranking Democratir member of the house judiciary committee, scored the Dyer anti-lynching bill in a minority report in whicd he declared the measure is "directly antagonistic to the philosophy of our system of government." Congressman Sumners is a states righter, but he wasn't a states righter when the eighteenth amendment was put over and neither did he lift his voice in opposition to the nineteenth amendment to the constitution. If states righters are correct in their premises and sound in their conclusions, then the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments are "directly antagonistic to the philosophy to our system of government." There are no birds in last year's nest. Prohibition is here and here to stay. Equal suffrage is here and here to stay. But a Democrat should be consistent.

President Harding is opposed to the passage to any resolution providing for immediate withdrawal of American troops from the Rhine. Why call the boys home? Germany pays their way and the Germans have always said that American soldiers on the Rhine was preferable to soldiers from France or England. In addition to this the boys are having a good time over there, the pay is excellent, the fare is first-class and a penny buys a schooner of Pilsner. Of course, this latter is mortifying to Dr. Atticus Webb but Dr. Webb isn't the president of the United States; he isn't the American war department and he isn't the American Army of Occupation on the banks of the Rhine.

Jack Dempsey says he doesn't expect to again get $500,000 for a single bout as he did in the case of the Carpentier combat. Dempsey is a very modest man. He is ready to adjust his fighting price to existing conditions. Think of a bruiser taking down $500,000 for an hours work and a college president forced to work twelve months for $3,500. There should be an adjustment of labor prices in this country.

Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty is said to have promised railroad brother chiefs jail sentences if they forced a tie up of the mails and interstate commerce triffic. Well, as millions voted for a change in 1920, having won a change they should be satisfied as well as gratified.

CHATTER WORKS HARD

When Chatterer the Red Squirrel had left the Green Forest because of his terrible fear of Shadow the Weasel, he had been fat. At least he had been fat for him. All through the pleasant fall, while he had been gathering his supply of nuts and seeds to store away for the winter, he had eaten all he could hold, and had filled his red coat out until it actually felt too tight. But now that same red coat hung so loose on Chatterer that it looked too big for him. Yes, sir, Chatterer had grown so thin that his coat actually looked too big for him. And he was growing thinner every day.

You see, most of the food had been collected and stored away long ago, and Chatterer had to run about a great deal and hunt very hard to find enough to eat day by day, while as for filling a new storehouse, that seemed impossible. Still, Chatterer kept trying, and day by day he managed to add a little to the supply of seeds. But it was pretty poor fare at best. There were no plump nuts or tasty pipe seeds such as filled his storehouse in the Green Forest, because no nut or pine tree grew near the Old Orchard, and Chatterer didn't dare go back to the Green Forest for fear that Shadow the Weasel would find him and track him to his new home. So he patiently did his best to find food close at hand. But it was discouraging, terribly discouraging, to work from sunup to sundown, running here, running there, running everywhere, until he was so tired he was ready to drop, and knowing all the time that the snow might come any day and bury what little food there was. Oh, those were hard days for Chatterer the Red Squirrel, very hard days, indeed!

One morning he started very early and made a long journey by way of the old stone wall and the rail fences down to Farmer Brown's cornfield. Of course, Farmer Brown had long ago taken away the corn, but in doing it a great many grains had been scattered about on the ground, half buried in the ground where they had been trodden on, hidden under leaves and among weeds and under the piles of stalks from which the ears had been stripped. For the first time for days Chatterer felt something like cheer in his heart as he scurried about hunting for and finding plump yellow grains. For he ate all he could hold, for he saw that then there would be plenty to take home. Then he stuffed his cheeks full, scrambled up on the rail fence, and started for his new home in the Old Orchard.

"It is a terrible long way to have to carry all my supplies," thought he as he sat up on the top of a post to rest. "I don't see how I ever can do it. Well, I certainly can't if I sit here all day!" With that he jumped down to the rail below him. He was half way across when he noticed a crack in it. It looked to him as if that rail was hollow part way. A great idea came to him. His eyes grew bright with excitement. He ran the length of the rail and back again, looking for an opening. There was none. Then very slowly and carefully he worked his way back, stretching his head over so that he could look underneath. Almost over to the next post he found what he had so hoped to find. What was it? Why, a knot hole. Yes, sir, a knot hole that opened right into the hollow in the rail. It wasn't quite big enough for Chatterer to squeeze through, but that didn't trouble him. He emptied the corn from his cheeks, and then he went to work with those sharp teeth of his, and in a little while, a very little while, that knot hole was plenty big enough for Chatterer to slip through.

His eyes snapped with pleasure as he explored the hollow rail. "I'll make this my storehouse!" he cried. "I'll fill it full of corn, and then when I am hungry in the winter I can run down here and fill up. It will be a lot better than trying to carry the corn up to the Old Orchard." And with that Chatterer began the work of filling the hollow rail with corn.

THE EXCHANGE MUDDLE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

The curious thing about the chaotic condition that now rules in the rate of exchange of the moneys of the different nations is that nobody seems to comprehend exactly what makes it, nor precisely what will remedy it.

There is no doubt but what the distress all over the world among laborers, the stoppage of production and the other elements of our present economical condition, are due to the violent disorder in exchange rates.

Nobody wants to make a contract to sell anything for a thousand dollars in six months, if at the end of that time his thousand only mean six hundred.

Of course there are many cocksure economists who very shrilly insist that they know just what is the trouble. But hardly two of them agree, and hardly one of them is consistent.

Whatever may be the immediate cause, whether it be the destruction caused by the war or the vast debts of the various countries, or the uncertainty of the times, there is little doubt that the root cause of the whole thing is that the money, which is the blood of commerce, is controlled by some forty or fifty nations instead of some one central authority.

Commerce is international. Patriotism and all other national sentiments and devotions may be very estimable in their way. But they do nothing to business except to play hob.

Perhaps, after all, it may be from the pocket-book of the world that will come the pangs that shall compel mankind to that redemptive unity which alone can insure the progress of the race.

The dollar is controlled by a group of gentlemen at Washington, the mark by another group at Berlin, the franc by another group at Paris, and so on. This would work all right if each country were alone, "each on its separate star." But when they live on the same planet and have to do business with each other, the result is only confusion.

One perfectly absurd result of all is that in Germany, where the currency is most depreciated, business is flourishing and factories are busy with foreign orders. While in Great Britain and in the United States unemployment is at its worst and business is suffering from paralysis.

This would seem to argue that the way to get prosperity is to speed up the printing presses and make more paper money. It furnishes an excellent basis for the claims of the greenbackers and inflationists of all kinds. So long as nations are complete and independent entirely of each other, the one that has the most depreciated money has the advantage over the one whose money is sound.

Of course, any one who sees a few inches beyond his nose understands that inflation is only a temporary matter. By and by a country, as an individual, has to pay up. Also with inflation, prices have a way of galloping ahead of wages, and it does no good to have your salary increased to $1,000 a minute when the price of ham and eggs has been multiplied ten thousand times.

There are two ways out of the difficulty.

One, which is actually insisted upon by many politicians, is that each country labor for itself alone, isolate itself, raise high the tariff barriers, and work out its own salvation.

The only trouble with this is that it is impossible. It is an effort to turn back the clock of time, to revert to a condition of provincialism and isolation which the world has abandoned.

The other remedy is to go forward, and to form some sort of international arrangement by which the money of the world may be based upon a standard recognized universally and controlled by an authoritative body acknowledged by all.

Rippling Rhymes

THE STORM

It is a dark and stormy night, the winds around my dwelling roar, and, as my trusty lyre I smite, the rain is beating at the door; and owing to that circumstance by nephew's head is passing sore—the storm has kept him from a dance. The storm began, a gentle shower, from vagrant cloudbanks overhead; but it grows fiercer every hour, and now its noise would wake the dead; the tempest now might rise the dead, and every minute swells its power, and all my folks are seeing red, and they are savage, mad and dour. For all had dates they hate to miss, the movie show, or bridge, or tea; and on a beastly night like this they can't go forth, the sights to see; when darting lightnings round them hiss, and so they're sore, but as for me, a stormy night's a time of bliss. I have my good old easy chair, and storybook that's full of snap, so let the lightning rip and tear, and clouds unload their store of sap; let clouds discharge their valued sap, and I'll be happy in my lair, and read about the hero who shows us how to do and dare. A wild and stormy night for mine, when I've a goodly book to read, wherein the hero, brave and fine, pulls many a high and knightly deed; wherein he does the valiant deed, and makes the robber chief resign, and seeks the lady in her need, and dries her eyes of flowing brine.

What Cancer Is Not

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Amply justified as is the universal dread of cancer, that dread is needlessly intensified for many people by certain erroneous ideas regarding this terrible scourge of the human race. They are ideas, moreover, tending to bring upon those entertaining them all the evil consequences of chronic worry.

Also they may have the deplorable effect of increasing the sufferings of cancer victims. Thus, inadequate nursing may be—and in some cases undoubtedly has been—the consequence of a widespread belief that cancer is contagious.

Whereas, according to an official bulletin of the United States public health servive, giving the consensus of expert medical opinion:

"No germ capable of causing cancer in human beings or animals has ever been demonstrated. In all the thousands of recorded operations for cancer there is no report of a case in which cancer was acquired from the patient by any surgeon or nurse.

"Nor is there any reason to believe the stories so often told of 'cancer houses' or 'cancer villages.' The occurrence of a large number of cases in a particular house or street has usually been shown by careful investigation to be due to the fact that the house or street has been occupied by an unusual proportion of persons above middle age.

"The possibility of transferring cancer from one person to another by direct contact should therefore be disregarded."

Though, of course, in nursing cancer patients, as in nursing patients stricken by other diseases, the usual common-sense precautions of modern hygiene and sanitation should be observed. Not because neglect to observe them may mean transference of cancer from patient to nurse, but because the dressings, etc., may contain germs capable of causing erysipelas and other inflammations.

It is again, widely believed that cancer is a disease directly transmissible by inheritance. This, too, is a mistaken idea. If there is any heridity in cancer it is no more than the inheritance of a tendency predisposing to the contracting of cancer if one happen to subject one's self to cancer-provoking conditions.

Even the inheritance of such a tendency is strongly questioned by many authorities, who point out:

"A disease so widely prevalent as is cancer must necessarily, by the simplest law of chance, frequently attack sevreal members of the same family in the same or succeeding generations."

Finally, it is important to emphasize that, whatever cancer is, it is not related in any way to the so-called venereal diseases, and should never be thought of as implying any kind of moral discredit in the afflicted individual or his family.

There are people who do so think of it. And because of the odium thereby false attached to cancer, not a few victims of the disease are led to conceal their condition even from their physician until it is too late for medical science to help them.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH.

"APPLY EXTERNALLY"

"Aunt Charity!" sang out a young girl's voice as the front door closed on the crisp November air and opened upon the ordor of soft gingerbread and raisin cookies.

Aunt Charity hobbled to meet the girl, bent almost double with the pain in her side.

"I can't imagine what has happened," she said, when the girl had laid aside her wraps and smothered her aunt in bear-like hugs. "I've had a pain in my side and my arm for three days, and I'm not sick enough to go to bed, so I thought I'd just bake up a lot of cookies in case you did come home from school this week end."

Girl Calls the Village Doctor.

"When you should be in your bed, poor darling," chided the girl lovingly. But she was alarmed and lost no time in summoning the village doctor, who examined Charity Holland with gentle hands, and said:

"A few days' rest in bed and some gentle massage with a liniment I am going to leave you will cure this pain in no time, Miss Charity. It seems only yesterday that you and I were skating on the river after school, and now we are both pleading guilty to vague aches and pains, and being found with bottles of liniment in our possession."

And the doctor, who had never quite grown up, stuffed his professional pockets with warm soft gingerbread at the earnest request of Miss Charity and her niece. Then he left a blue bottle of liniment on the mantelpiece and went off on his rounds.

Studied Care of Sick in School.

It was when Miss Charity expressed doubt as to the ability of her niece to do the necessary massage for her that she was gratified to discover that the young girl knew a great deal more about liniments than she had dreamed possible.

"We've been studying the care of the sick at school," explained the girl. "Though I confess I had thought it was a terrific waste of time. But now—well—let me show you how to do it scientifically." And the girl's fair head bobbed over the snowly bed.

Having tucked her aunt into bed with hot water bottles at her feet and soft pillows under her head, the girl brought towels, and tucked them in around the area that was to be massaged. This was to protect the sheets from the liniment until the skin had absorbed it.

Then having washed her hands, she took the cork out of the liniment bottle and poured a small quantity directly upon the skin, taking care that the rim of the bottle did not touch the patient's skin. She rubbed the liniment into the skin with a firm, gentle pressure and circular movements of her strong fingers.

Rubbing Continued Twenty Minutes.

Once her aunt protested, saying, "That's enough, I'm sure, my dear."

"Are you tired?" questioned the girl quickly.

"No, but I thought a few minutes rubbing was all that was necessary," said Aunt Charity.

"It's much better to continue the rubbing for twenty minutes," explained the girl. "I want you to get a sensation of tingling from the liniment. A glow, you know. Then I will know that it has done some good." So she continued to rub the liniment gently into the aching body for twenty minutes.

And had the gratification of knowing that the treatment had done good, because she had given it properly.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

No. 1—The Lumbago Dip.

Stand erect; bend slowly from the waist; touch tips of shoes with extended fingers. If you do this once you are in fair condition; if you do it three times in succession you are a new White Hope. Do it more than three times and you are a falsifier.

At your first attempt you will probably bring on a stroke of apoplexy. If you succeed, however (in touching the shoes, not in bringing on the attack), repeat until blue in the face.

You will be amazed to discover how far the floor is from the human chin.

This exercise pursued daily for two years will remove two pounds of flesh and 2,000 pounds of ambition.

Note—While the point is to touch the tips of the shoes with the extended hands without bending the knees, it must be borne in mind that the shoes must be on the feet at the time. The substitute of placing the shoes on a table, chiffonier, desk, chair, or raised platform is decidedly unsportsmanlike.

Exercise 2—The Stroke Oar.

First, lie flat on your back. Many people prefer to let the exercise end right at this point. You may then close your eyes and sink into a deep slumber or pursue the rest of the exercise, which consists of raising and lowering the head and trunk from the waist as many times as you can stand it.

Note—This exercise can be made easier if the feet are braced under a bureau or bed. This very often results in pulling the furniture over on to the exerciser, however, wrecking one or the other, or both. Most men try this exercise once and give up physical culture for life.

Exercise 3—The Suspension Bridge.

Stretch yourself flat on the floor, face down, hands under the chest; straighten the arms out, raising your body and lowering it, very slowly. After about three lifts you will probably fall in a heap and have to send out for a couple of strong men to lift you up and put you to bed for repairs.

Exercise 4—The Knee and Toe.

Stand erect with arms extended sideways as if reaching for something with both hands. Bend knees slowly and lower body toward the floor until legs make a perfect letter "O." Then rise slowly again. If you are unable to rise, call for assistance. Repeat exercise until neighbors protest against calls.

Exercise 5—The Backward Bend.

Stand erect, hands at side, chin tilted upward, attitude being that of Paul Revere saying, "I only regret that I have but one pound to give for my physical instructor." Bend backward fro mthe waist until your head hits the floor, your body forming an inverted letter "U." The success of this exercise depends very much upon the way your head hits the floor. A hardwood floor adds greatly to the success of the stunt. A concrete floor makes it a sensation.

Exercise 6—The Roll Your Own.

Very popular outdoor exercise. First select a steep hill. One that has a railroad crossing at the foot of it is to be preferred. Lie flat across the road at the top of the hill and roll down, holding the speed to about five miles an hour at the start, but allowing it to increase until you have lost control.

For the success of this exercise it is essential that you time your arrival at the foot of the hill with the passing of a through train. It all depends upon your weight with respect to that of the train. If you are heavier than the train you win. If the train is heavier your figure will never bother yourself or the railroad company again.

The Daily Story

WRONG INTERPRETATION

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

Jane Vernon was cleaning the attic. As punctually as October came everything in the Vernon attic was hauled forth, dusted and aired and put back just where it was before, for Jane's mother was an old-fashioned woman who believed in keeping things not only seven years but thrice seven.

Cleaning the attic was not a task that Jane relished, especially when Saturday was her one day of liberty in the week, but since it must be done, and done according to her mother's ideas, she resolved to make the best of it. She had reached the point where she was just as breathless and smudgy and hot as might be, when her mother called her downstairs to the telephone.

"Hurry, for they've holding the wire!" cried Mrs. Vernon.

Jane descended two flights quickly. At the first sound of the voice that came over the wire she tried to smooth her hair. It was as if she believed that Mrs. Stanley Edgerton, speaking from her house a half-mile distant, could see and disapprove of her dishevelment.

"What do you think?" she said as she hung up the receiver. "Mrs. Edgerton has asked me to meet her at the restaurant and lunch with her!"

"When?" asked Mrs. Vernon.

"Today, at 12."

"Of course, you accepted?" Mrs. Vernon looked pleased and flattered.

"I did, indeed. But I've barely an hour, and look at me!"

Jane rushed upstairs. Her preparations were made quickly, but when she presented herself to her mother for critical inspection she looked beautifully calm and trim in her dark blue hat and suit.

As she hurried toward Main street Jane tried to find some reason for Mrs. Stanley Edgerton's asking her to lunch thus publicly at the only restaurant in Westhill. In the first place, Mrs. Edgerton's home over on the boulevard was one of the show places of the town, and in the next, Mrs. Edgerton had never before taken particular pains to be nice to Jane Vernon. Of course, Jane knew her as she knew everybody in Westhill, but such a casual acquaintance as was theirs does not warrant invitations to lunch. It was true that Mrs. Edgerton was always gracious to her townspeople, although that graciousness sometimes savored of condescension. In this instance Jane thought only of the graciousness, and was grateful for it, since it offered her a good time. For good times were not plentiful with Jane. She had to work too steadily and be too careful of all expenditures.

"It must be," Jane concluded, "that Mrs. Edgerton liked the paper I read before the woman's club Monday. I did work hard on that paper and a little appreciation of the effort seems delightful."

Thinking thus, Jane was quite gay by the time she entered the tiny lounge of the restaurant where Mrs. Edgerton sat. "Oh, I hope I haven't kept you waiting!" she cried, anxiously.

"Not at all." But Mrs. Edgerton sighed.

Jane felt that she had committed an error. The clock at home must be losing time again. Humbly she followed her hostess to the table that had been prepared for them.

"Do you like clams?" inquired Mrs. Edgerton wearily.

Jane did not like clams, but she dare not at that juncture say no. She accepted them with a smile. She even manage dto swallow one.

Mrs. Edgerton consumed her clams as if she did not know, or care, what she was eating. Even long training in affairs social could not conceal the fact that in some way she was suffering.

"Can she be ill?" Jane wondered. She exerted herself to entertain. Indeed, so conscientiously did she labor with her wits that she felt she was not only funny, but witty. But Mrs. Edgerton did not once smile. She may have looked less glum, but that was all.

Jane was glad when the meal came to a close and she was at liberty to return to her attic cleaning.

As they emerged from the restaurant Jane glanced across the street and saw a gay little group descending the steps of the Central Hotel. At the foot of the steps waited the monogrammed limousine of Mrs. Snyder whose return to her birthplace after an absence of years had created a distinct sensation. Mrs. Snyder was the centre of the group, and as Jane caught her eye, she bowed perfunctorily with an astonished stare at Jane's companion. Mrs. Edgerton also bowed. Then the ladies entered the car and passed from sight.

And now at last Jane had found a reason for her invitation. Mrs. Edgerton had not been asked to the luncheon party—was there not some story of an ancient jealousy between her and Mrs. Snyder?—and in order to carry it off she had asked Jane to lunch with her. But why Jane? Could it be possible that there was no one else available?

"I won't tell mother what I think—what I believe," Jane decided. But later when she heard her mother commenting that "my daughter lunched with Mrs. Edgerton at the Westhill," and saw her preening herself innocently, she winced.

Three days later Jane tramped home through a cold wind and rain after a hard day's work, trying to teach forty-six children what they seemed determined never to know, to find Mrs. Edgerton sitting in the small, shabby parlor with her mother. Mrs. Vernon's delicate face wore a flush of satisfaction. As Jane entered the room Mrs. Edgerton arose and greeted her with unusual cordiality. Her face and manner were so pleasant that Jane could not help comparing her appearance with what it had been during that unhappy luncheon.

"I'm afraid that I didn't give you a very good time the other day, Jane," she said. "But you were so understanding and sympathetic that you helped me over a bad place."

"I, understand and sympathetic?" Jane gasped with bewilderment.

"You certainly were, Jane, and I needed just the sort of treatment you gave me out of your kindness of heart. I knew that I was glum and horrid, but I couldn't explain then. I should have broken down." Her voice trembled a little. She sat upon the worn sofa and drew Jane down beside her. "You see, it was the anniversary of my boy's death," she explained.

"Oh!" Jane breathed. She knew all about David Edgerton and how much his life had promised, for he had been her pupil at the time of his death, knew how his mother's heart was wrapped up in him and how when he was taken suddenly in a tragic way, it was thought for some little time that she could scarcely survive. It had, however, all happened so long ago that she seldom recalled it now.

"I had been asked to Mrs. Snyder's luncheon party," went on Mrs. Edgerton, "but I did not feel like making merry, and so I told her. Neither did I feel like passing the whole day alone—that is, with no one but my maid. Mr. Edgerton was away on a business trip. Somehow I wanted you, because you had taught my boy and must remember him better than most people. I wanted to ask you to the house, but that morning a portion of the plaster fell off the ceiling in the dining room. So I took you to the restaurant instead."

Jane bit her lip. She despised herself for what she had surmised.

"And now that you know and have perhaps forgiven me," went on Mrs. Edgerton, "I hope that you and your mother will dine with me this evening. I am making a little party for Mrs. Snyder—just a few people who knew her best in the old days when she was Charlotte Warner. You'll come, both of you?"

And even while she accepted the invitation Jane thought, "I'm glad I did my best to give her something in her great need that day. But what a pity that I misunderstood that need!"

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

This is a sort of an obituary notice. Just a sort of a one, mind you. Some of it is composed of moral reflections and the rest is what I think of the average hotel. This part can be skipped because it really ought not to be read anyhow. Its language may be proper, but its implications are profane.

"Old Uncle Jeff is dead," a friend told me. "He had the biggest funeral ever held in our town."

Uncle Jeff used to keep a little hotel in a little town in a certain state which shall not be named for reasons of prudence. Before Uncle Jeff began to keep that hotel the little town was equipped with one of the slatternly hostelries with which every American who has travelled in his own country is sorrowfully familiar.

The larger American hotels at least have steam heat and running water, even if they do charge three prices for inferior service and refuse to recognize the culinary art. The majority of them are just parking places men who are away from home. With the very widest range of the best raw materials for cookery in the world we Americans have the most criminal public cooks. The smaller the hotel the worse the cookery.

Uncle Jeff and his wife, Delia, were just naturally forced into the hotel keeping business. I don't know how or who forced them, but Delia was a genius over a cookstove and Uncle Jeff was the prefect type of body servant. Both colored, of course. As colored as a truckload of soft coal. They began in a small way, and by and by the travelling men began to spend Sundays with them instead of hurrying to the nearest big city. In the end they sold out to some white folks who couldn't understand the English language if it were spoken very slowly. When Uncle Jeff was buried the governor of the state rode in the first carriage behind the hearse.

We didn't know it then, but now we see that Uncle Jeff was the biggest man in our small town. Not because he ran the best hotel in two day's travel, but because he gave all there was in him to his work. That sort of absolute devotion would make any man big.

Some Chest-Nuts

A singularly unlowly lady had just entered and the dreariest bore at the party, buttonholing his long-suffering acquaintance, perked his thumb in the direction of the newcomer and said, with proprietorial pride: "My better half."

With a frankness which had more than once got him into trouble, the too-candid friend, appalled at the lady's lack of charm, blurted out, ruthlessly: "Then I should scrap the other half!"

A merchant had advertised for a boy. Late in the afternoon a red-headed, freckled-faced, blue-eyed, honest-looking youngster applied for the job. "Do you like to work?" asked the merchant. "No, sir!" replied the boy. "Then you can have the job," replied the merchant, "You are the first boy who's been here today who didn't lie about it and say yes."

They were in a railroad train and were discussing the Dickens. "Well," said one, "John puts 'Bleak House' first and 'Martin Chezzlewit' second." "Excuse me, gentlemen," said a husky voice from the seat behind, "I don't know your pal, John, but you're being steered. There ain't no such horses runnin'."

A very nervous man bought a motor car and a friend asked him to give him a lift. They found themselves in a crowded street.

The friend said: "Jim, your engine is knocking badly."

"Don't be a fool," was the reply. "That's my knees."

"Who is really the boss in your home?" inquired the friend.

"Well, of course, Maggie assumes command of the children, the servants, the dog, the cat and the canary, but I can say almost what I please to the gold fish."

Two beginners went one day to fish. They sat down on a dock and cast their lines and waited. Presently one grew weary of waiting, so said to his friend, "Will you stay here while I go for a stroll?" As he was strolling back he was glad to see that his friend had got a bite and was winding in his line. While yet in the distance he saw his friend land the fish and then to his dismay, unhook it and throw it back into the sea. Running up to him, he asked him why he threw the fish back and heard the astonishing reply:

"Why, it was bad!"

"Bad? How's that?"

"Why, some one had stood on it; it was flat!"

Stocks

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The stock market pursued its recent irregular and professional course today, paying little heed to the lowest money rates in many weeks and other encouraging factors.

An abundance of local and interior funds forced loans from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent. Announcement of the reduced rediscount rates by the federal reserve banks became known shortly after the close of the market.

Oils continued to absorb the bulk of dealings, domestic and European issues repeating their erratic movements, but showing gains in the main. Elsewhere changes were unimportant and restricted largely to specialties of obscure origin.

Mexican Petroleum fluctuated within a 4 point range as one of the day's most prominent features and closed at a gain of the smallest fraction. United Fruit enlivened the final hour, heavy buying causing a net advance of 4½ points. Sales 575,000 shares.

The further collapse of German marks to .49½c, a new low record for all time, was the only striking feature in the foreign exchange market, most remittances recording moderate improvement.

A steady tone market the dealings in bonds, Liberty issues, as well as standard rails, industrials and some of the foreign division closing at advances. Total sales, par value, $15,375,000.

Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Reports that Canadian interior elevators and railroads would co-operate in regulating shipments helped to rally the wheat market today after prices here had fallen to the lowest level since 1915. Closing quotations were unsettled at ⅛c net decline to ½c advance, with December 1.02 to 1.02¼ and May 1.07 to 1.07⅛. Corn gained ⅛@¼ to ⅜, oats lost ⅛ to ¼, and provisions finished unchanged to 10c off.

Notwithstanding the break of 6 cents yesterday in wheat, spasmodic liquidation continued this morning. There was no evidence of any export demand for United States wheat and it was estimated that domestic hard winter grades were 4 to 5 cents above a working basis as compared with Canadian. Another bearish factor was slowness of call for flour.

Indications of export business in corn gave comparative firmness to the corn market.

Provisions were fairly steady in line with hogs.

Livestock

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Nov. 2.—Beef steers and calves did not meet with much favor at the hands of packers today and the market worked lower on each class. Fat cows again found a slow market, but sales were in line with the week's decline. Canners cleared to a very good call and prices were steady. On heifers and yearlings the market was unchanged and bull values remained in line with recent quotations. Best calves were purchased by outside buyers on a steady basis, but anything that packers secured came cheaper and medium calves especially found a poor outlet. The average was 25 to 50c lower. Receipts amounted to 3,000 head of cattle and 3,500 calves.

An advance of ten cents resulted in a seasonable clearance of the hog yards where receipts reached 1,000 head. An order buyer purchased a car of fancy hogs at 7.90. Otherwise the top was $7.75 and most sales and most of the run cleared at $7.50 to $7.70. The packer top was $7.70. Pigs sold strong at $7.50 to $7.75. Only 500 head arrived in the sheep division and quality offered a wide range. The market was strong to 10 cents higher. Shorn wethers notched 4.85 and a small lot of choice wethers went at $5.25. Cotton

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Early declines in the cotton market were followed by very sharp rallies owing to the more bullish average of Southern spot advances and talk of small ginning figures. After selling off to 18.02, January advanced to 18.70 but the gain was not fully maintained, that position closing at 18.48 compared with 18.27 at the close yesterday. The general market closed steady at a net advance of 6 to 25 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 5 to 10 points on more active months as a result of overnight buying orders attracted by the rally of late yesterday, and relatively steady Liverpool cables. There was a good deal of scattered Southern selling around the initial prices however, and the market soon turned easier under a renewal of tired long liquidation. It seemed that the failure of trade demand which had developed on the break below 18 cents yesterday, to follow the advance, was a disappointment from the bullish standpoint, and there was also some reselling by people who had covered short contracts on the previous day. As a result, prices soon worked lower, December selling off to 18.13 and March 19.18 or 24 to 25 points net lower.

Demand again improved around the 18c level and the market suddenly turned firmer. After a recovery of about 60 to 68 points from early low levels the buying movement slackened. Last prices showed reactions of 20 to 25 points under realizing. December was relatively easy early but led the afternoon advance, showing evidences of a firmer technical position, with few contracts for sale when shorts attempted to cover. December sold at 18.60 and March at 18.62 on the afternoon advance making a recovery of 80 to 88 points from yesterday's low level.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Cotton seed oil was fairly active, the day's turnover amounting to 30,900 barrels. Prices were easier under selling of late positions by refiners and scattered liquidation, prompted by lower crude, dull export conditions and heaviness in hog products. Closing bids were five to 10 points net lower. Prime crude 7.05, summer spot 7.90, December 8.63; March 8.98; May 9.16, all bid.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

By Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 2.—Although much selling was felt by cotton at different times today, the strong technical position the market recently has drifted into, told in the long run and in the early afternoon a sharp bulge occurred which sent prices 53 to 58 points higher than the close of Monday to 18.32 for December. The advance appeared to be almost wholly caused by covering by shorts, although market gossip indicated the suspicion in some quarters that bullish ginning figures quietly were being circulated. There was much comment of this sort regarding the announcement of the census bureau that the fourth report of the season would be issued Wednesday.

The opening was higher, on strength of a better Liverpool than due mainly, but after advances of 16 to 23 points the threatened coal strike caused selling and a little later selling increased on the report from Indianapolis that 20,000 miners actually had gone out.

The dock strikers at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston were a further unsettling influence and prices finally worked 7 to 19 points under the close of Monday, December falling to 17.57. Once the market started reacting, its recovery was rapid but the highest levels reached on the bulge were not well maintained. The close showed net gains of but 30 to 39 points with December at 18.12 cents a pound.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—A marked activity in purchases of carpets for next spring featured today's dry goods. Sales were more lively than for many seasons past.

Cotton goods were quiet in the gray goods division with sheetings easier. Yarns were quiet, burlaps steady and unchanged. Knit goods more active and silk quiet.

CRAIG TO JOIN IRISH PARLEY IS PREDICTED

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Negotiations relative to peace in Ireland have progressed to a point which makes necessary the presence in London of Sir James Craig, the premier of Ulster, it was declared here this morning. Political correspondents of London newspapers today centered their attention upon the Ulster question and speculated whether Sir James would soon join in the conversations going forward here.

"It would appear that the day when Ulster must be associated with the sinn fein in the negotiations is near at hand," declared the parliamentary correspondent of the London Times, "but the manner and time of Sir James Craig's coming are among the obscurities of the situation."

The Daily Mail asserted there would be little surplus if Sir James should be invited soon to join the Irish conference and other newspapers treated such an event as a probability. A Dublin dispatch to the Daily Mail stated that many people there were more sanguine than might be expected over the Ulster situation. It said prominent persons in Dublin had been in Belfast recently and had sounded various circles there with optimistic results, but the dispatch added the root of this optimism seemed to lie principally in the belief that the financial position of Belfast was so bad that a junction with the rest of Ireland might be forced by the stringency of money.

There were pessimistic rumors here last night concerning the Irish negotiations, but there were no developments as far as known to justify the opinion that the situation was either better or worse than it had been during the past few days. The absence of any prospect of an immediate settlement would obviously lessen the chance of Prime Minister Lloyd George sailing on the Aquitania, which leaves on Saturday, for the United States. Some papers were positive in their statements that Mr. Lloyd George had abandoned all idea of starting on Saturday, although he was still determined to go as soon as possible.

INTER-PARTY FIGHT MEETS "HAM'S" SCORN

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.—Former United States J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, who attended the democratic national committee meeting yesterday, said the fight between the McAdoo and Cox contingents for the chairmanship was as profitless as a "mutiny in an army preparing for war over the selection of a drill sergeant for dress parade."

He said the conflict between the McAdoo and Cox forces over the organization would make former Vice President Thomas R. Marshall the nominee for president in 1924.

Lewis advocated the abolition of the democratic national committee and all other party national committees, declaring they are not needed in national elections. He issued a statement giving his views as follows:

"The national campaign committees of all political parties ought to at once be abolished. There is now no need for any of them in the national elections.

The state election machinery in each state in every presidential election conducts the elections which choose president, senators and congressmen at the same time the state officials are elected. The day has gone when there was conflict and jealousies between state and nation, and their officials, as well as when there were different dates for state and national elections. We should now have only state committees, aided by a campaign committee chosen by the candidates for president and vice-president as they are named by the conventions, this campaign committee to merely co-operate with the state committee in each state in the collection of campaign contributions and conduct of election.

"This annual party dissension in all parties in off-years over the chairman of a presidential campaign committee, is as profitless as mutiny in an army preparing for war over the selection of a drill sergeant for dress parade.

"This conflict between the McAdoo eastern wing and the Cox western wing of the democratic party will make Thomas H. Marshall of Indiana, late vice-president, the nominee of the democratic party for president in the next convention."

HUSBAND MADALYNNE ONCE SPURNED LEADING FIGHT FOR HER FREEDOM

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 2—The towering figure at the trial of Madelynne Obenchain, who with Arthur C. Burch is charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, will be Attorney Ralph Obenchain, the lover of college days, the forsaken husband of later life, who when the wires flashed to him the news that she was in desperate trouble rushed to the defense of the woman who had cast him aside.

In the hands of "the man in a million," who has become a popular hero, will largely be the fate of the beautiful Malalynne. For months he has worked on the case day and night without rest. To him has fallen the task of selecting associate counsel. Most prominent among the lawyers who will sit by his side at the counsel table when the curtain goes up at Madalynne's trial will be Charles Erbstein of Chicago.

Ralph Obenchain and Madalynne were college sweethearts, and when college days were over Ralph became a prosperous lawyer of Chicago and Madalynne his wife.

One day Madalynne met J. Belton Kennedy of Chicago, and her love for Ralph vanished. She secured a divorce and came to Los Angeles, where Kennedy was in business.

One night both were returning to Kennedy's bungalow in exclusive Bexerly Glen when Madalynne suddenly remembered that a year ago she had buried a penny—a lucky penny, she called it—beneath a stone. She stepped down, leaned over, lighted a match.

Two shots rang out. J. Belton Kennedy toppled over dead. Dark figures disappeared in the garden.

Five hours later Madalynne was arrested; twenty-hours more and Arthur C. Burch, son of a minister, was also behind the bars. Both were indicted, charged with murder.

In her hour of distress, Obenchain, her former husband, who still loves her, came forward to help her. He sped across the continent to act as her legal adviser.

Marshal Foch Has Big Time With Children

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 2.—Marshal Foch stayed here today, rather than disappoint several thousand school children who had been told they might get a chance to see him. The marshal had expected to go to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, to be the guest of the officers of the garrison. Then he learned that there was a plan here to have the school children lined up along the boulevards that he might wave to them and they to him. About 11 o'clock he began his boulevard tour. Lieutenant General Baron Jacques of Belgium was with him. Both military leaders were waving continuously to the school children for several miles.

Then the marshal's car stopped at the convent school of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Sion where seven little girls, dressed in white and with the French tricolor in their hair, made a speech in French to the Marshal, who responded. The school is conducted from pupils from the kindergarten age up to 12 or 14.

"Children," the marshal said, in response to the greeting, "I came to America because I love this land. I wanted to show my appreciation. We have been friends in war—we must be friends in peace. You boys, when you grow up, must work; you little girls, when you are women, must remember to pray."

When the formal program was concluded, the marshal started to enter his car. Then he changed his mind. He was tired, and he asked the head of the school whether he might not rest a moment in the parlor of the school.

Waving aside the Count de Chambrun, who had been acting as official interpreter and the immaculate staff, the marshal went in alone into the convent parlor to rest. He leaned back in a chair and closed his eyes. But the marshal was not to take a nap. Several little girls, who had not been able to see him when the exercises were in progress, tiptoed to the door of the convent parlor to peek at him.

The marshal of France saw them, bright-eyed and bashful, and beckoned them in. And half a dozen, at the same time abashed and delighted, sidled in, and stood on one foot and another beside the marshal's chair and smiled at him, and answered his questions to their names and age. They did not need the services of the Count de Chambrun for the sisters had taught them all to speak French, though some of them spoke lispingly. When the marshal's twenty minutes were up, he shook hands with two little boys gravely, and kissed the four little girls and there were great tears in his eyes. For today was the anniversary of the death of Marshal Foch's son who perished in the war.

N. Y. MAIL ROBBERY LOSS IS ESTIMATED AS NEAR $2,000,000

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—With the departure for Washington today of Postmaster Morgan and three of his superintendents, it became known that the loot taken in the Broadway mail truck robbery October 24, may total $2,000,000 or $500,000 more than first estimated. In checking up losses, postoffice officials found missing seventy more pieces of registered mail.

"BUDDIES" AT CONVENTION PICK DAISY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2—The Daisy was adopted by unanimous vote today as the official flower of the American Legion. The poppy had many adherents because of its association with Flanders battlefields, but when it was explained that it was not an American flower and could not be obtained in large quantities, the "poppy party" shifted its support to the daisy.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY HOLDS FIRST CONVENTION

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Lowell Hobart of Milford, Ohio, was chosen national president of the American Legion auxiliary, the women's organization, composed of relatives of veterans.

The women who held their first national convention today in a downtown church auditorium, chose as their official designation the American Legion auxiliary after a discussion which lasted two hours. They voted to make mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of veterans of the world was eligible for membership and voted to exclude grandmothers.

A constitution was adopted, and several resolutions dealing with the treatment of disabled soldiers were adopted by the convention.
