Lee's lucky guess

For the second round in a row, the Rebels won't have to leave their own backyard for the Region I-5A playoffs. Thanks to a good guess by Coach Jesse Benavidez whether a Texas town's ZIP code is even or odd, LHS won't have to prepare for a hostile road crowd. /1C

Shootings trigger new wave of fear

Rebecca Harris embraces her daughter Bonnie, 17, after a student opened fire at Heritage High School in Conyers, Ga. Thursday. Six students were injured in the attack, authorities said, before the suspect was quickly taken into custody.

Summer promises a break from threat of more campus violence

"Almost over."

Whether intentionally or not, these words — which adorn the front windows of Lee High School in bold red and blue — may for some students and their parents carry a deeper promise than evenings without homework.

Clark

In the wake of Columbine, and with the most recent school shootings at a high school in Conyers, Ga., which injured six Thursday, awareness and concern about violence at schools across the nation continues to grow, and the summer may be a welcome respite from the fear that has built this spring.

"Obviously, the continued tension is difficult and a distraction during final exams," said Superintendent Joseph P. Baressi Jr. "I don't know if the occurrence of violent events toward the end of the school year is due to a stress factor during finals or changes in weather. But there's so much media attention now that students crying for help are seeking attention in this unacceptable manner."

And what about next fall? Many are not holding their breaths for an end to the tension.

"I think it's going to get worse," said Elizabeth Olivares, a sophomore at Lee, while sitting in front of the school during lunch Thursday. "It just happened in Colorado, now it's happening everywhere."

Fellow LHS sophomore Israel Romero said he thought that since the Columbine episode, renewed attention was being paid to violence, often making him feel like school was a "prison," he said.

"School is supposed to be safe. Coming to school now is, like, dangerous," he said.

Whether the danger is reality or mere perception may be beside the point; the fact is, more students, teachers and administrators are keeping watchful eyes out amid the highly charged post-Columbine climate.

A year ago, when it came to the possibility of violence, Romero said, "I'm pretty sure half of the student body never even thought about it. Didn't even cross their minds."

At the Midland Independent School District Police Department, the increase in the incidence of terroristic threats seems to owe as much to increased vigilance as copycatting, officials say. MISD police have made 15 arrests of juveniles between ages 10 and 13 since Columbine, and the Midland Police Department has added an arrest of a Midland Freshman student.

"Something that would have been a prank two months ago (now) is taken very seriously," said Neil Richmond, principal of Midland High School.

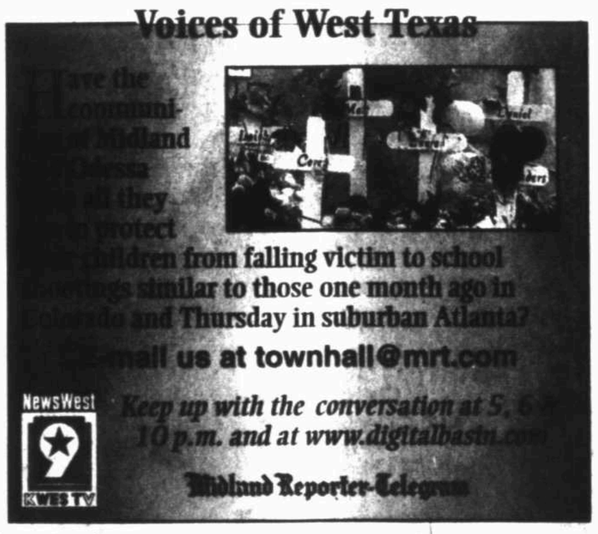

"With the climate of today, you just can't take any chance any longer," said MISD Chief Dan Walkenshaw. "You never know what's in any-

In wake of latest school shooting, Midlanders question causes, themselves

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

After waking to news that there had been yet another shooting in an American school, and after word of the latest installment in this national tragedy had sunk in, William Merritt, the city of Midland's Youth Development Coordinator and facilitator of the city's Youth Advisory Council, offered a suggestion.

"When I heard about it, my first thoughts were, 'What can we do?'" Merritt said. "We have to start by doing things like the Junior League's youth forum last week.

"We really need to hear from all students — not just the leaders, but all types — to see what we can do. How can we make sure every student is included in something so they are a part of it? We need to get together as a community and see what the students think we should do to make everyone feel important."

The reasons "why" will continue to be discussed after Thursday's shooting, this one in suburban Atlanta, where six students were injured by a shotgun-wielding classmate. The shootings, on the grounds of Heritage High School, 30 miles east of Georgia's largest city, occurred as students were arriving for classes.

Several Midland leaders agreed — there are a lot of programs available for youth in West Texas. But those programs won't be a success unless they are given full backing by the parents of the kids who participate.

"I'm at a loss now," said Barbara Phillips, director of the Midland Youth Center. "We have so many programs in place right now to try to help kids make good choices. So many self-esteem programs and character-building programs. What is it we can do? There are enough programs already in place for everyone to reach out to the kids.

"But if you don't have the parental support, there's no way you can get the kids here," Ms. Phillips said. "Parents have got to get involved in their kid's life and when they recognize there's a problem, not get

Gupta, Mullins at head of class at Lee in 1999

Editor's Note: This is the second part of a six-part series on the valedictorians and salutatorians for schools in Midland and Big Spring. Part Two is on Lee High School.

From Staff Reports

With the passing of another school year, so passes another group of students through the Midland school system — certainly none more impressive than this year's top two students at each of the high schools.

This time next year, these students will be in various colleges across the state and the country, cramming for or just finishing finals in subjects from English to engineering, from business to physical therapy.

But before they pack up for their respective dormitories, the Reporter-Telegram has asked them to do one last homework assignment before graduation and tell us a little bit about themselves.

Today, a look at Lee High School's valedictorian and salutatorian, Charu Gupta and Stephanie Mullins.

Valedictorian

Name: Charu Gupta
Parents' Names: Prem and Urmila Gupta
Honors: National Merit Finalist; National Honor Society (officer); Texas Scholar; Spanish Honor Society; sixth in state in UIL informative speaking; Member of the Federal Reserve Board Challenge Team; Girl Scouts Gold Award; Outstanding Senior Girl (University Graduate Women); fourth in district in UIL ready writing; Miss Academic of LHS.
Plans for the coming millennium: Attend Stanford University, major in English, premed.
Hobbies: Piano, Girl Scouts, Peer Assistance Leadership and Service.

Salutatorian

Henkel hearing

At a pretrial hearing Thursday, the court reset Tena Henkel's intoxication manslaughter trial for July 12 and denied her motion for a change of venue. Ms. Henkel, 44, is charged with two counts of intoxication manslaughter and two counts of intoxication assault stemming from a July 1997 car accident that killed two Midland teens. Prosecutors allege the driver of the vehicle, who survived the accident, had come from a party at which Ms. Henkel and her husband, Billy Joe Henkel, served alcohol to minors.

Wynette autopsy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — An autopsy performed on the exhumed body of Tammy Wynette showed the country singer died of heart failure caused by damage from repeated blood clots. The role drugs may have played in Wynette's 1998 death is impossible to determine because the autopsy took place a year after she died, Nashville Medical Examiner Bruce Levy said Thursday.

MIDLANDERS' Braggin' rights

TEACHER WITH THE MOST

Charles A. Bell, chairman of the Midland High School's science department, has been named recipient of the West Texas Geology Foundation's Most Outstanding Science Teacher (MOST) Award in the Permian Basin area for 1999. The award was presented on Tuesday in the MHS conference room.

"He's the kind of teacher who started his physics classes in engineering competition," said Jan Artley, director of science and health for MISD. Not only have Bell's students won in these state competitions, but one team came in second at a national competition in Washington, D.C., she said.

"His original approach to physics has caused enrollment to grow" because he teaches students that physics is for everyday life and can be fun to learn, Ms. Artley said.

And Bell brings that joy into the community through such programs as Physics Circus, which he and his students conduct each year out behind MHS, and a Walk on Water competition that he and his students host at with the City of Midland swim team, she added.

As head of MHS science department, Bell also has proven to be an able administrator, Ms. Artley added.

In short, he truly is the teacher with the MOST.

THE BRAINS IN SPAIN

Three teachers from Midland Independent School District's DeZavala Elementary School have been awarded scholarships to attend the 12th annual Summer Institute on Children's Literature in Spanish. The three-week course will be at the University Complutense in Madrid. The Embassy of Spain, in conjunction with the Texas Education Agency, offered the scholarship to bilingual directors throughtout Texas.

The Midland educators accepting the scholarships are Irma Almager, third grade bilingual; Elva Davila, second grade bilingual; and Ann Sanchez, bilingual reading recovery.

The teachers will participate in workshops, methodology sessions, book exhibits, lectures and cultural activities. One of the requirements for the scholarship is to provide professional development training for other MISD teachers, using materials from the institute.

SUMMER SCHOLARS

Sarah Wilhite and Alan Willis, juniors at Midland Christian High School, have been chosen to participate in Abilene Christian University's Junior Scholars program this summer.

Junior Scholars enroll in freshman- and sophomore-level courses during the two summer sessions — June1-July 2 and/or July 6-Aug. 6 — and earn up to 14 hours of college credit.

Miss Wilhite is the daughter of Paul and Mary Whilhite; Willis is the son of Gary and Carol Willis.

MIDLANDER TITLED

Charlton Taylor of Midland, a Bible major and a senior at Lubbock Christian University, has been elected Mr. LCU 1999. Mr. and Miss LCU awards are presented to students who have been chosen by faculty, staff and students. Taylor is the son of Charles and Terrie Taylor.

Taylor, one of three candidates for Mr. LCU, and Miss LCU Denise Gray of Abilene, received their awards at the annual Student Appreciation Banquet.

Taylor was president of Meistersingers chorus, freshman and sophomore class president and a counselor at LCU's Encounter Youth Camp. He is a youth intern at Greenlawn Church of Christ.

NATO destroys hospital in airstrike, thousands march in Belgrade

By Katarina Kratovac
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — NATO warplanes hammered Belgrade and its suburbs Thursday, leaving a hospital in smoldering ruins, three patients dead, an operating room destroyed and the nearby homes of three European ambassadors damaged.

The Libyan embassy was also reported damaged in allied airstrikes early Thursday amid new accounts of desertions in the Yugoslav army and a fresh round of diplomacy in Moscow involving Russian, Finnish and American troubleshooters.

The bombings that picked up again Thursday night were the strongest in Belgrade since China's embassy was mistakenly hit by NATO on May 7, and came the same day thousands turned out for the commemoration of Saints' Day to pray for peace in Yugoslavia.

Detonations lighted the sky in the capital's New Belgrade and Cukarica districts late Thursday. The Beta independent news agency reported the Jugopetrol fuel depot was bombed anew by alliance warplanes.

NATO acknowledged one of its laser-guided weapons missed a target by about 1,500 feet earlier in the day and struck a building but did not elaborate other than to say "one of the bombs was misdirected for technical reasons."

Besides leaving the hospital destroyed and the Spanish, Swedish and Norwegian ambassadors' residences damaged, the Tanjug state news agency reported Libya's embassy also was damaged by NATO airstrikes.

The bombings came hours after President Slobodan Milosevic accepted the general principles for a Kosovo peace plan but demanded the details be directly negotiated with the United Nations.

Russia's Balkans envoy, Viktor Chernomyrdin, and Milosevic have been discussing a plan by Russia and the world's seven leading industrialized nations, known as the Group of Eight, to end the Kosovo conflict.

In a statement, Milosevic's office said "the solution could be found only politically and within the United Nations, and with the active and direct participation of Yugoslavia, starting from the principles of G-8." It said talks will continue Monday in Belgrade.

Milosevic's demand for more talks under U.N. auspices with Belgrade as a full party appears to fall short of NATO conditions before the alliance will halt airstrikes. NATO seeks a total withdrawal of Milosevic's 40,000 forces in Kosovo, a return of all refugees and a well-armed international force to police the peace accord.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan visited a tent city in northern Albania and called for the United Nations to play a key role in resolving the conflict.

Annan was surrounded by applauding refugees in Kukes, temporary home to 100,000 Kosovars — the largest single concentration of the nearly 800,000 ethnic Albanians who have fled Kosovo since March.

After nearly 12 hours of talks, negotiators from Russia and the Western powers broke up outside Bonn, Germany, without agreeing to key elements of a joint peace plan.

The G-8 foreign ministry officials drafted a seven-page working text but many parts of the resolution were left open for further negotiation.

"We've made progress but important points remain to be settled," said Gunter Pleuger, political director of Germany's Foreign Ministry.

The group was to resume talks Friday.

The G-8 has been trying to draft a Security Council resolution backing terms for Milosevic that could also be passed by Russia and China — both of which oppose NATO's bombing of Yugoslavia.

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott briefed the G-8 envoys on his talks in Helsinki with Finnish President Martti Ahtisaari and Chernomyrdin.

The three envoys then met late Thursday at a government resort outside Moscow.

Hours after Chernomyrdin departed for his homeland, detonations rocked the Belgrade district of Dedinje, an upscale area where Milosevic lives and works. The neighborhood includes a large military barracks and major hospital.

The alliance declined to say it struck a hospital but NATO spokesman Jamie Shea said one of eight weapons aimed at a Yugoslav army barracks struck another building instead.

Ecologists call for ban to help prevent monarch butterfly deaths in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Prominent environmentalists on Thursday urged the government to ban imports and use of genetically engineered corn, citing a study made public in the United States that it could contribute to deaths of monarch butterflies that mainly winter in Mexico.

The call was made in a joint news release by Liza Covantes of the Greenpeace organization and Homero Aridjis, head of the Group of 100 leading poets, artists and intellectuals, saying the ban should stand at least until more is studied about the effects of the corn.

Millions of monarch butterflies spend the winter months in the western oyamel-fir forests of Mexico and Michoacan states.

The monarch butterflies originate in Canada and the United States and fly annually all the way to Mexico. They are not an endangered species, but environmentalists have long been worried that excessive logging in Mexico or use of pesticides in the United States has been killing the orange-and-black butterflies.

Covantes cited a study published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature by Cornell University researchers led by entomologist John Losey to back her concerns about the new forms of corn.

The study found that monarch caterpillars eating milkweed leaves dusted with pollen from the altered so-called Bt corn ate less, grew more slowly and died more quickly. After four days, 44 percent of them had died as opposed to none of the caterpillars that didn't feed on the pollen.

Aridjis said that Mexico, the United States and Canada are obliged to protect the monarch butterfly under ecological preservation provisions of the North American Free Trade Agreement in force since Jan. 1, 1994.

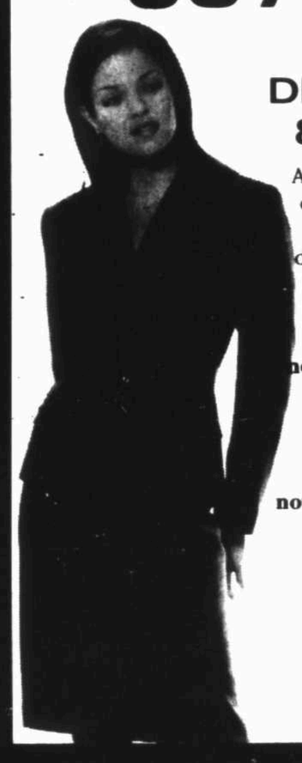

The Mexican government authorized cultivation of genetically engineered corn on an experimental basis since 1993 and only in certain regions. But it has increasingly imported genetically modified corn for human consumption.

Covantes also expressed concern the genetically modified corn could affect some 300 varieties of native Mexican corn.

BREAK: Summer offers respite from fear

one's mind."

Students and administrators agree that security continues to be tight at Midland schools, one month after the shootings in Littleton, Colo. This reporter, for instance, armed with only a pen and notebook, was stopped by LHS security guard Oscar Corral for milling around the parking lot and conducting interviews Thursday.

"Are you aware that you are trespassing?" said Corral.

"Certainly you can see we have a heightened sense of awareness," said George Cooper, principal of Lee High School.

Cooper said that while a structured crisis plan has always been in place at the school, recent incidents have spurred more action on the part of his staff.

The six counselors at the school and Cooper himself, in one instance, took more than a day to make presentations to all of the school's English classes shortly after the tragedy.

"The real emphasis was the need for communication, the need to be alert and observant," said Cooper. Similar instructions have gone out to teachers, custodial staff and other administrators, Cooper said.

As for the idea that a summer away from school may quiet some of the copycatting, Cooper agrees with many students that that is not a safe bet.

"I don't think that's a safe way of looking at any situation as it pertains to the safety of students," he said.

Richmond said that he agrees continuing vigilance is necessary but believes the passage of summer will help cool the hysteria that abounds.

"I just feel like we need a little time here," said Richmond. "It'll never be the same (after Columbine) — I will say that."

Later, after school, while exiting Midland High grounds, students reacted to the latest news.

"I don't know what's going through kids' minds," said Rebecca Clark, a senior. "Just because they're outcasts is no reason to resort to violence ... Not everybody's popular. In high school, popularity is a joke. You just deal with it and move on to college. There's life beyond high school."

Candy Mathis, a sophomore at MHS, said she and her classmates had discussed Thursday's shooting in her sixth-period geography class.

"Some people are scared to come to school and some aren't," she said.

As for rumors that have been cropping up at her school — such as that of a bomb supposedly set to go off May 4 that led to more than 600 absences that day — Miss Mathis said she thought they were baseless.

"Everyone keeps coming up with stories ... I think it's just reasons for people to get out of school," said Miss Mathis, who was one of the students who showed up May 4.

Whatever the motives of the threats that continue to plague Midland campuses — yet another remark was made Thursday by a student at one of the junior highs — the real question now is how to stop them.

"We need counselors working with students with the potential for (committing) these acts to identify them and steer them in a different direction," said René Nuñez, member of the state board of education, whose constituency includes Midland. "I'm not talking about pushing paper ... We may need counselors to go to the parents, to do home visits with the students having problems. Many of these children want to tell us something."

Walkenshaw at least sees a temporary end in sight for his office with the approaching end of the school year — but whether the national scare is really almost over — or simply on vacation — remains to be seen.

"There's no magic silver bullet ... It may still happen in any community, as we obviously see," said Walkenshaw. "But we're going to take every precaution we can to keep it from happening in this community."

QUESTION: Midlanders ponder violence, remedy

in a denial mode. It's just gonna take everybody's involvement in it. We can't sit back and talk about it for a year and let it die out again. We've got to do something about it."

Shane Stokes, chairman of the Vision 2000 Task Force's Youth Issues committee, thought it may not be merely coincidence that Thursday's shooting came one month to the day after the killings in Littleton, Colo.

"You can make people aware that there's a problem, and I think the country has been made much more aware of these problems," Stokes said. "But we haven't implemented the solutions, not enough. Not in one month."

Kerry Faudree, a licensed chemical dependency counselor, thinks the shootings are a combination of many factors.

"We've relaxed ourselves," she said. "We've all said it's about the media making a big hype about it. Plus, it's a copycat incident. It's all those issues together. It's not predominantly one or the other.

"But one more time, we're being told by these kids that enough is not being done. I don't know if it's about gun control. But obviously the kids are telling us, 'You're still not getting it.'"

One of the biggest concerns does appear to be that parents, teachers and other adults apparently don't get it. A reason is that no one seems to know how to pinpoint what the problem is nor what should be done about it. It remains a mystery on how to fix this recurring tragedy.

Stokes said one of the discussions the Vision 2000 Task Force will focus on will be what can be done for the youth of the community to keep them from thinking that violence is a solution.

"This kind of stuff is likely to happen until the tide has turned," said Stokes, also a shareholder at Lynch, Chappell, Alsup. "How long is that gonna take? I don't think anyone knows."

Added Ms. Faudree: "There's so many serious things we need to do. We need to tend to our families, first and foremost. We need to debrief our kids about what's happening. What are we asking them? What are they feeling? For us, as parents, we need to go back home. We need to be home emotionally and psychologically. Our home is the only place we can tend to and make an impact."

Merritt said working toward solutions should now be the top priority.

"Being that school is almost out, we have the summer to do a lot of planning to ensure some of these things don't happen here."

Charlie Dodd, director of Youth Ministries at First Baptist Church, seconded Ms. Phillips' call for a saturation of parental involvement throughout the community.

"As Christian people and as churches, we can't give up," Dodd said. "In our community, we just need to care more about our teenagers. The family needs to stay in contact with one another. Some way, we have to somehow teach kids that violence is not the answer."

In Midland, through a coalition of youth ministers, plans are being finalized for a summer-long series of church events to keep children involved with activities across town. The opportunities the churches will present will offer kids places to talk about what's going on, activities like skating and refreshments, and an atmosphere of caring for the teen-agers.

"Kids not only need effective ways to spend their time," said Travis Reaves, area director for the outreach program, Young Life. "But they also need role models. They need adults who care enough to invest in their lives. They need to know that the community cares and they need to be active. They also need clear information to make decisions. I don't think they always understand the consequences."

Chronology

Some of the similar incidents in MISD schools after the Columbine High School shootings in Littleton, Colo., April 20.

April 21: An MISD student is arrested for making verbal terroristic threats at one MISD school. School officials say they are taking a "zero-tolerance" policy when it comes to threats.

April 21: School officials discover eight threatening notes planted in lockers on Midland Freshman campus.

April 22: Two more notes are discovered on the Midland Freshman campus.

April 22: Two more students are charged with making terroristic threats in cases unrelated to the situation at Midland Freshman.

April 23: MISD holds a press conference at Midland Freshman and promises increased vigilance at all schools.

April 26: Three scribbled notes are found at Alamo Junior High campus indicating there are bombs at specific locations. The notes lead police to beef up security and conduct a low-key search of the campus, which turns up nothing.

April 30: An 11-year-old and 13-year-old are arrested for making terroristic threats at two of the schools.

April 30: MISD announces a decision to heighten security and bring a bomb-sniffing dog to Midland the next week in the wake of rumors at certain campuses that there will be bombs on certain days.

May 4: At Midland High School, 650 students miss class because of a rumor that a bomb will explode on campus that day. Officials never find an Internet site that apparently was the source of the rumor.

May 4: A female Midland Freshman student is arrested after confessing to being the one who planted threatening notes in students' lockers and in women's restrooms.

May 6: At Lee High School, 495 students miss class, in addition to the 300 out on a band trip, because of a rumor of a campus bombing that day. Officials never find an Internet site that apparently was the source of the rumor.

May 6: A student at Abell Junior High is arrested for making a terroristic threat after telling another student not to touch his book bag because it may blow up the school. MISD police discover a quartz clock in his backpack but no incendiary device.

May 11: Three students — ages 11, 12 and 14 — are arrested in separate incidents involving terroristic threats at their schools.

May 12: The third 11-year-old MISD student to be arrested since Columbine for making terroristic threats is sent to Culver Juvenile Justice Center, prompting the mother to go to the press pleading for her son to be released.

May 14: The 11-year-old Henderson Elementary student is released from Culver by County Judge Marvin Moore.

May 17: Another 11-year-old student is detained by MISD police for making terroristic threats.

MISD police have made a total of 15 arrests on charges of terroristic threats since the Columbine shootings, in addition to the arrest by the Midland Police Department of the Midland Freshman student.

Susan B. Anthony dollar is back, temporarily

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Susan B. Anthony dollar, once the unloved stepsister of American money, is making a comeback.

Eighteen years after the Mint stopped turning out the once-unpopular coin — and just months before a gussied-up younger cousin makes a debut — heavy demand for Susan Bs in snack machines and subways has exhausted the supply.

So the Mint decided Thursday to do a final "1999" encore run.

The government struck 857 million coins with the 19th century suffragette on the face from 1979 to 1981, but found itself stuck with 550 million when production ended. Many people complained the Susan B dollar was too easily mistaken for a quarter because of its look and feel.

Now, with many vending machines, Postal Service stamp dispensers and city subway systems accepting the dollar coin, its popularity has surged. Mint officials are vowing to provide enough for the snack eaters, late-night stamp buyers and commuters who use it.

"We're committed to providing an uninterrupted supply of dollar coins through this transition," said Mint Director Philip N. Diehl.

A new, congressionally mandated dollar coin, graced with an image of Shoshone Indian guide Sacagawea, will debut early next year and can also be used in vending machines.

The Sacagawea dollar coin will be the same size as the Susan B, but will have a gold-colored surface and a smooth rim. The ridge-edged, silver-colored Susan B was considered too quarter-like.

Just months before a new dollar coin debuts heavy demand for Susan B. Anthony dollar in snack machines and subways has exhausted the supply.

And while the Susan B depicts the women's rights leader in stern profile, the Sacagawea shows the teen-age guide glancing back amicably over her shoulder, her infant son asleep in a papoose.

The Mint has not yet determined how many new Susan Bs to strike or when the process will begin, and spokesman Michael White said he wasn't sure if officials had yet estimated how much it would cost.

Many coin collectors and some members of Congress have long campaigned for an end to the dollar bill, claiming that while paper money is cheaper to produce than coins, it wears out more quickly and thus costs the government more in the long run.

"As long as there continues to be a dollar bill, they will continue to use it," said Ed Rochette, executive director of the American Numismatic Association, a 108-year-old society of coin collectors. He praised the Susan B's return, saying it "will make it easier for the Sacagawea dollar" to gain acceptance.

Lawmakers vie for Cabinet posts; Palestinians watching closely

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Ehud Barak took the first steps Thursday toward building a broad-based coalition to help make what he called "difficult decisions" about giving up land to the Palestinians.

"Losing parts of the Land of Israel is for me extremely painful," Barak said in his first major interview with Israeli newspapers since his win Monday as prime minister over Benjamin Netanyahu.

"This is one of the reasons we need a broad-based government. It strengthens us internally and externally," Barak told the mass-circulation Yediot Ahronot.

Palestinians, who say their decision on a statehood declaration depends in part on whether Barak forms a hawkish or a dovish government, urged him to accelerate the peace.

In interviews published Thursday — the first day he has discussed Cabinet appointments with party colleagues — Barak said he would include hawkish parties in his coalition to avoid the mistakes of his mentor, slain prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, whose left-wing coalition was accused of not representing the nation.

"When there is a broad government, the public accepts decisions more easily, and the other side expects to receive less," he told the Maariv daily.

Palestinians, who postponed a decision on declaring statehood until after Monday's election to avoid handing Netanyahu a campaign issue, said they expected Barak to move quickly to revive peace talks.

"We hope that his priority in forming a government would be peace," top Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said in an interview. "I don't think anything should be done at the expense of the peace."

Netanyahu infuriated the Palestinians by threatening to annex territory if they went ahead with statehood and by moving to shut down Orient House, the Palestinian headquarters in Jerusalem, days before Monday's vote.

They greeted Barak's win as a signal that peace talks were back on track — but expressed disappointment at some of the measures he outlined in his victory speech, including a pledge to keep Jerusalem off the table.

Palestinians hope to establish a capital to their state in the traditionally Arab eastern half of Jerusalem.

Salim Zanoun, the chairman of the PLO's Central Council, said Barak's "no" on Jerusalem was unwarranted.

Zanoun, whose council is to consider a possible unilateral declaration of statehood next month, said the decision depends partly on the composition of Barak's government.

"If it believes in peace, this could encourage us to give a chance to negotiate with the Israelis for a reasonable period of time, close to what the Americans and the Europeans advised," Zanoun said, referring to a one-year target period.

Barak has said he will not conduct negotiations until he establishes his government.

In an effort to form as broad-based a coalition as possible, Barak has not counted out bringing in a post-Netanyahu Likud Party into the government in order to widen support for his policies.

A natural partner would be Shas, an ultra-Orthodox party that leapt from 10 seats in the outgoing Knesset to 17.

Barak has counted out Shas as long as it is led by Arieh Deri, a former interior minister convicted last month of bribe-taking.

Some of his advisers want to keep the party out, saying Barak's victory was due in part to secular voters who were disaffected by Netanyahu's closeness to Shas and angry at Shas ministers who diverted money to their religious institutions.

French films at Cannes festival long-winded

By Marilyn August
Associated Press

CANNES, France — Intellectuals may love them, but danger lurks at the box office for the long-winded abstractions being presented by French directors at Cannes.

• The four films in competition pretty much sum up the state of cinema in France, where generous state subsidies encourage producers to worry less about attracting a large audience and guarantee near-complete freedom for directors.

• "There may be a danger in our system because it allows directors to be indulgent," says Michel Ciment, editor of the French film monthly Positif.

• Wildly different in tone and style, the French entries at Cannes share slender plots that fail to sustain running times of well over two hours. Many also have shocking sex scenes.

• "Pola X," a somber, unsettling tale of incest starring Catherine Deneuve and Guillaume Depardieu, son of the famous actor Gerard, was enfant terrible Leos Carax's first feature film since 1991.

• Despite the strong visuals, this adaptation of Herman Melville's "Pierre, or the Ambiguities," racked up almost unanimously bad reviews.

• Veteran Chilean director Raoul Ruiz, who adapted Marcel Proust's classic, "Time Regained," fared a bit better.

The plodding costume drama with an all-star cast of Deneuve, Emmanuelle Beart, Chiara Mastroianni, Arielle Dombasle and John Malkovich managed to convey a hint of Proust's analytical lyricism. But it was long and boring.

Bruno Dumont's skillful but snail-paced "Humanity," about a hapless small-town cop investigating a sordid murder, is an intellectually ambitious take on sexual obsession and guilt.

But the meticulous attention to detail — including an excruciatingly long close-up of the genitalia of a murdered 11-year-old girl — left some viewers with a feeling of physical revulsion.

Later, the camera zooms in on Domino, a fleshy factory worker lying naked and spread-eagled.

Many of the black-tie crowd bolted from the official screening, but French critics deemed "Humanity" prize-worthy and praised Dumont for defending the colors of French cinema.

"Humanity isn't a great film, but there's a great film if you lopped off 30 minutes," Ciment said.

It's no wonder French audiences have turned their backs on home-grown films in favor of big Hollywood productions.

According to National Cinema Center statistics released this week, French films in 1998 made up 27 percent of national box-office receipts — the lowest ever. Hollywood's market share was a record 64 percent.

"I'm all for the intellectual films that please Cannes juries, but I think a film can be edifying and entertaining at the same time," said Jack Valenti, President of the Motion Picture Association of America.

Jacques Maillot's "Our Happy Lives," the fourth French entry, isn't exactly entertaining, but this plunge into the troubled lives of six dysfunctional young adults has its fun moments.

The acting is superb, but some say it uses heavy-handed cliches that oversimplify the complexity of contemporary France.

Female matador bows out of macho world

MADRID, Spain (AP) — In the end, it was the bull-headed attitude of her colleagues and not fear of the horned beast itself that forced Spanish matador Cristina Sanchez to turn in her cape.

In announcing her retirement Thursday, Sanchez said although she felt slighted by the men who refused to fight alongside her, she would be leaving the ring proud of her place in it.

"The bullfighting world is made by and for men, but I still have the pride that I've made history," the 27-year-old Sanchez said at a packed news conference in Madrid.

Sitting alongside her father Antonio, a former matador himself, Sanchez refused to name the bullfighters who would not share the ring with her.

"I've struggled a lot in this profession. ... It's unfair and I feel hurt," said Sanchez, who last year became the only woman so far to fight in Madrid's prestigious Las Ventas ring. "I've never used the fact that I'm a woman to get on and I have always lived up to my responsibilities."

Before the death of dictator Francisco Franco in 1975, women were prohibited from becoming matadors in Spain. The owners of bullrings, as well as many male bullfighters, are strongly opposed to female matadors.

Beating death raises tensions between Arabs, blacks

By David Goodman
Associated Press

DETROIT — The arrest of two gas station clerks in the slaying of a man who was beaten with a tire iron in front of his five children has heated up long-simmering tensions between Detroit's many Arab-American store owners and their black customers.

The black community "cries out for justice for this family and for our community," Detroit NAACP President Wendell Anthony said.

Kalvin Porter, a black 34-year-old electrician, was killed last Friday at a gasoline station in a poor neighborhood on the city's east side. Investigators said the clerks attacked Porter after he argued with them about comments they supposedly made to his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Fadhel Mazeb, 46, and Adel Altam, 26, were jailed without bail on murder charges. Both are immigrants from Yemen.

Since the beating, protests outside the Sunoco station have forced it to remain closed, and some blacks have called for a boycott of Arab-American businesses.

Arab-Americans first began to dominate the grocery store, liquor store and gas station business in Detroit in the late 1960s and early 1970s as white business owners fled the city in the wake of the 1967 riots.

Metropolitan Detroit's more than 4 million people include about 200,000 people of Arab descent, one of the largest Arab populations outside the Middle East. The city of Detroit has about 1 million people, about 80 percent of them black.

"The African-American community has too long been the victim of mistreatment and disrespect by some who operate and work in stores and gas stations in our neighborhood," the NAACP's Anthony said in a statement.

Anthony said Porter's slaying "is a tragic example of festering problems of ill will and ill feelings between African-Americans and some Arab-Chaldean store operators."

On Thursday afternoon, the two sides met at a church at a gathering sponsored by the civil rights group, Arab store owners and other community and religious groups. About 100 people attended.

"This situation was tragic, to say the least," Ed Deeb, president of the Michigan Food and Beverage Association, which represents 3,100 Arab-American merchants in metropolitan Detroit. "We feel this is not a racial incident but a crime issue."

Several blacks at the meeting disagreed.

Ruth Williams said she has seen a pattern of racism by Arab store owners against black customers. "We need to boycott these businesses," she said.

"There's racism involved. There's prejudice involved," said Mary McClendon. "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. It's been going on for 400 years."

Ethnic tensions between inner-city residents and store owners from immigrant or minority groups are nothing new in America.

In cities like Los Angeles and Miami, it is between black customers and Korean, Vietnamese or Cuban merchants. A generation ago, it was Italian and Jewish store owners in black neighborhoods.

In Cleveland, tensions between Arab-American shopkeepers and blacks ran high in the mid-1990s after several inner-city merchants were killed and a store clerk was arrested for killing a black teenager.

A 1995 study done by the Arab American Institute in Washington blamed tensions on a combination of crime, poverty and the presence in poor neighborhoods of recent immigrants with successful businesses.

Autopsy: Tammy Wynette died of heart failure

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An autopsy performed on the exhumed body of Tammy Wynette showed the country singer died of heart failure caused by damage from repeated blood clots.

The role drugs may have played in Wynette's 1998 death is impossible to determine because the autopsy took place a year after she died, Nashville Medical Examiner Bruce Levy said Thursday.

Traces of Versed, a sedative, and Phenergan, which is used for nausea and as a sedative, were found in the body.

The exhumation and autopsy were prompted by a $50 million wrongful death lawsuit filed by Wynette's four daughters. They allege their mother could have lived longer but her health wasn't monitored closely enough, and that she was given too many painkillers prior to her death.

But Levy said that if called to testify, he would say Wynette died of natural causes.

"My belief is that the heart failure happened probably through a combination of natural disease and maybe or maybe not contributed to by the drugs," Levy said. "There's no way to be able to determine that for sure."

The lawsuit originally named Wynette's fifth husband George Richey and her doctor, Wallis Marsh, of Pittsburgh, as defendants. Richey was later dropped from the lawsuit.

Marsh, who practices at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, has denied any wrongdoing. Calls to Marsh's office were referred to an attorney who was not available.

A spokesman for Richey said the widower was "elated."

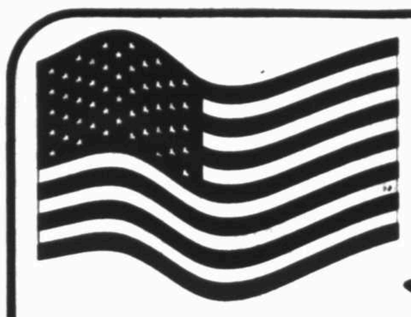

"In his opinion, it shows she died of natural causes as he's said all along," spokesman Fred N. Davis said.

Ed Yarbrough, attorney for Wynette's daughters, said Levy's findings support the lawsuit.

"It shows that a blood clot was not the operative cause of death," he said. "And it now appears Dr. Levy is saying there is some sort of heart problem that should have been addressed by Dr. Marsh."

Senate votes gun curbs on day of new violence; Gore breaks tie

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Propelled by a shocking outbreak of school violence, the Senate passed legislation Thursday night to require the sale of safety devices with handguns and expand a system of background checks for firearms purchasers.

The vote was 73-25, and came a few hours after Vice President Al Gore eagerly broke a 50-50 tie in favor of a politically popular gun control amendment that most Republicans opposed.

Passage sent the measure to the House, where Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., has signaled support for fresh restrictions on guns. Republican and Democratic leaders were discussing plans to bring the issue to the House floor as soon as mid-June.

"What we have seen today is for the first time in a major kind of gun control issue, rejection of the National Rifle Association and a vote for common sense," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said as the bill neared final passage.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Democrats "think gun control is a good political issue and that will solve everything. I say we got all these laws on the books that are already there" that should be more strongly enforced.

A triumph by gun control advocates in the Republican-controlled Senate was improbable at best until the shootings in a Colorado high school a month ago caused a marked shift in public opinion. A shooting at an Atlanta-area high school earlier in the day gave fresh impetus to the measure.

The legislation requires background checks for all sales at gun shows. It also would close what gun control advocates said was a loophole that allows anyone to pawn a gun and reclaim it without undergoing a check.

"Secure gun storage or safety devices" would have to be sold with handguns. But the measure also extends liability protections for a gun owner who uses a safety lock and whose gun is stolen and used in a crime.

In addition, the measure continues current gun law that majority Republicans had succeeded in changing briefly earlier in the day. Under the measure as passed, for example, background checks could still take up to three days instead of the 24-hour ceiling that Republicans wanted on them.

Importing high-capacity ammunition clips would be banned, and any juvenile convicted of a felony would be denied the right to purchase a gun for life.

The measure calls for $5 billion over five years to help crack down on juvenile crime. It provides money for prosecutors, and makes it easier to try some juveniles as adults. In addition, it mandates a study of the entertainment industry to gauge the impact of its violent products on the young.

But Democrats struggled successfully to turn the events of Colorado into a rallying crime for fresh gun controls.

The votes came one month to the day after the Colorado high school shootings in which two students are alleged to have killed 12 fellow students, a teacher and themselves.

And only hours before the roll was called in the Senate, there was new gunfire at a high school east of Atlanta. Six students were injured by another student, who later surrendered.

Georgia Democrat Max Cleland, who had voted against similar gun controls last week, lined up in favor this time. He said he had made up his mind to do so Wednesday night, after Democrats had agreed to changes. But he added the day's home state bloodshed "really confirmed for me that I was on the right track."

Plot to fix vitamin prices draws largest fine in history

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two giant foreign companies agreed Thursday to pay $725 million in fines for plotting to raise and fix the prices of vitamins used in virtually every American home and added to bread, milk and breakfast cereal.

The $500 million fine to be paid by F. Hoffmann-LaRoche Ltd., a Swiss pharmaceutical company, is the largest federal criminal fine ever imposed in any type of case, Attorney General Janet Reno told a news conference.

A German firm, BASF AG, agreed to pay a $225 million fine for its role in the conspiracy to increase vitamin prices in the United States and around the world. Both companies pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Dallas.

Reno and aides said Americans unwittingly paid hundreds of millions of dollars in illegally inflated prices for vitamins and food staples such as vitamin-enriched bread.

"On a daily basis for the past 10 years, every American consumer paid to eat and drink or use a product whose price was artificially inflated," Reno said.

The vitamin cartel was the "most pervasive and harmful criminal antitrust conspiracy ever uncovered," said Assistant Attorney General Joel I. Klein, Reno's antitrust chief.

"The criminal conduct of these companies hurt the pocketbook of virtually every American consumer — anyone who took a vitamin, drank a glass of milk or had a bowl of cereal," Klein said.

The cartel boosted the price of more than $5 billion in products sold in this country, he said.

The scheme lasted from January 1990 into February 1999. The plotters boosted the cost of vitamins A, B2, B5, C, E and beta carotene — those most commonly taken as pills or added to enrich human foods like bread, milk, orange juice and breakfast cereal.

These illegal price increases also reached consumers through the cost of animal products, because the vitamins are added to animal feeds. The plotters are the world's largest producers of the most commonly used vitamins.

The former director of worldwide marketing for Hoffmann-LaRoche Vitamins and Fine Chemicals Division, Dr. Kuno Sommer, agreed to plead guilty to helping run the cartel and lying to Justice investigators in 1997 to cover up the scheme.

Sommer, a Swiss citizen, agreed to serve a four-month prison term and pay a $100,000 fine. "For the first time in our history, a European national will plead guilty and, subject to court approval, will serve four months in prison" for price-fixing, Klein said.

Another three Hoffmann-LaRoche executives and four from BASF were not given immunity under the agreements reached Thursday, and additional prosecutions are possible, said Gary R. Spratling, deputy assistant attorney general in charge of criminal antitrust enforcement.

The case was broken open when another conspirator, Rhone-Poulenc, SA, a French pharmaceutical company, began cooperating with Justice investigators several months ago, Spratling said. "The information provided by Rhone Poulenc was what the division needed."

Rhone-Poulenc was accepted into the antitrust division's leniency program, which protects companies from criminal prosecution if they voluntarily report their involvement in a crime before prosecutors learn of their role.

But all the companies still could face private class-action lawsuits from victims of the scheme. Private lawyers already have met to discuss such lawsuits.

Rhone-Poulenc said its animal nutrition division "acknowledged there were instances in the past in which the company's global business practices did not meet U.S. legal standards," but said changes have been made "to ensure compliance."

Justice officials said the attempted cover-up was a factor in the larger fine for Hoffmann-LaRoche. In addition, Hoffmann-LaRoche was a repeat offender, Klein said — caught earlier by the antitrust division in a global cartel that raised prices for the food additive and feed additive citric acid.

"Indeed, members of the vitamin cartel, including Hoffmann-LaRoche, continued to regularly meet and carry out their global agreement even while Hoffmann-LaRoche was being investigated, prosecuted and fined $14 million in March 1997 for participating in the citric acid cartel," Klein said.

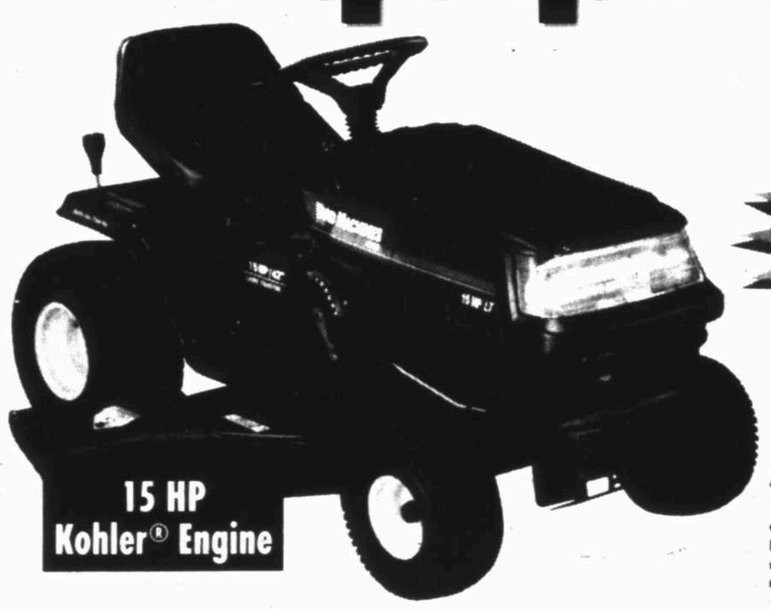

In March, Swiss vitamin manufacturer Lonza AG and five U.S. executives agreed to plead guilty to participating in the global vitamin plot. Lonza agreed to pay a $10.5 million fine.

Lonza schemed to fix prices vitamin B3 prices and the executives vitamin B4 prices.

Latest shooting begs for action by Americans

Another school shooting rocked the nation again Thursday, once more stressing the need for action to end the increasing violence in schools.

This time it was Heritage High School in Conyers, Ga. where a student opened fire, injuring six other students on the final day of classes for seniors. The student who did the shooting was taken into custody. The six injured students were reported in stable condition.

The shooting came only a month after a shooting at Littleton, Colo. that resulted in the deaths of 12 students and a teacher. At the moment the latest shooting was occurring, the Senate was debating gun control legislation, a move prompted by the Littleton shooting.

President Clinton said, "This incident should underscore how profoundly important it is that all Americans come together in the face of these events to protect our children from violence."

But even in the wake of these two most recent school shootings, there apparently is no consensus on gun control in the nation. What this latest shooting should do, however, is to convince any wavering Americans of the need for this nation to take a hard and fast look at what can be done to curb youth violence, particularly in the schools.

This is a tragic happening that has focused the attention of the entire American populace on the situation in our schools. Now it is time to determine the roots of this problem and to take all the necessary steps needed to stop the violence.

Our schools must be restored as pillars of knowledge and wisdom, not become known as killing fields.

Today in History

Today is Friday, May 21, the 141st day of 1999. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 21, 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh landed his Spirit of St. Louis near Paris, completing the first solo airplane flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

On this date:

In 1542, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto died while searching for gold along the Mississippi River.

In 1832, the first Democratic National Convention got under way, in Baltimore.

In 1840, New Zealand was declared a British colony.

In 1881, Clara Barton founded the American Red Cross.

In 1924, 14-year-old Bobby Franks was murdered in a "thrill killing" committed by Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb, two students at the University of Chicago.

In 1956, the United States exploded the first airborne hydrogen bomb over Bikini Atoll in the Pacific.

In 1959, the musical "Gypsy," inspired by the life of stripper Gypsy Rose Lee, opened on Broadway.

In 1968, the nuclear-powered U.S. submarine Scorpion, with 99 men aboard, was last heard from. The remains were later found on the ocean floor 400 miles southwest of the Azores.

In 1979, former San Francisco City Supervisor Dan White was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the slayings of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

In 1991, former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi was assassinated during national elections by a suicide bomber.

Ten years ago: Thousands of native Chinese marched in Hong Kong, Paris, Tokyo and scores of other cities in a worldwide show of support for the prodemocracy demonstrators in Beijing.

Five years ago: Israeli commandos swept into Lebanon's eastern mountains and abducted Mustafa Dirani, a Shiite Muslim guerrilla leader.

One year ago: A gunman opened fire inside Thurston High School in Springfield, Ore., killing two students; the suspect, Kip Kinkel, is also accused of killing his parents a day earlier. In the wake of deadly anti-government protests, Indonesia President Suharto stepped down after 32 years in power and was succeeded by Vice President B.J. Habibie. Frank and Shirley Capaci of Streamwood, Ill., announced they were holding a winning Powerball ticket worth $195 million.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Anthony Steel is 79. Actor Rick Jason is 73. Actor David Groh is 60. Rhythm-and-blues singer Ron Isley (The Isley Brothers) is 58. Musician Bill Champlin (Chicago) is 52. Singer Leo Sayer is 51. Actress Carol Potter is 51. Actor Mr. T is 47. Music producer Stan Lynch is 44. Actor Judge Reinhold is 42. Jazz musician Christian McBride is 27.

Thought for Today: "Originality does not consist in saying what no one has ever said before, but in saying exactly what you think yourself." — James Stephens, Irish poet and novelist (1882-1950).

Maybe we're reaping what we've sowed with our children

Whoa! What in the world is happening with our kids today? Let's see ... first Madalyn Murray O'Hair complained that she didn't want any prayer in our schools, and we said "OK." Then someone said you had better not read the Bible in school — the Bible that says thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal, and love your neighbor as yourself. And we said "OK."

Remember Dr. Benjamin Spock who said we shouldn't spank our children when they misbehave because their little personalities would be warped and we might damage their self-esteem? And we said, "OK, we won't spank them."

Then someone said that the teachers and principals better not discipline our children when they misbehave. And our administrators said "Whoa, no one in this school better touch a student when they misbehave because we don't want any publicity, and we surely don't want to be sued."

Then someone said, "Let our daughters have abortions if they want, and we won't even have to tell their parents." And we said "That's a grand idea."

Then someone else said "Let's give our sons all the condoms they want, so they can have all the 'fun' they desire, and we won't have to tell their parents." And we said "That's another great idea."

And then some of our top officials said that "It doesn't matter what we do in private as long as we do our jobs." and we said, "As long as I have a job and the economy is good, it doesn't matter to me what anyone does in private."

So now we're asking ourselves why our children have no conscience, why they don't know right from wrong, and why it doesn't bother them to kill. Probably, if we think about it long and hard enough, we can figure it out. I think it has a great deal to do with "we reap what we sow." Whoa what a concept! Author unknown.

Craddick failed to support bill that would help Basin

I wish to respond to State Rep. Tom Craddick's comment in the May 17 Midland Reporter-Telegram in which he blasted State Rep. Buddy West of Odessa on his vote against a grant for a pediatric residency program in Midland. Specifically I want to address Craddick's comment that "We should be looking at the Permian Basin as a whole and continue to work together."

Apparently he feels that way on selected issues. Craddick would not endorse or support a Permian Basin-driven unitization legislative bill in the last two sessions of the Texas Legislature that could have brought big bucks to the Permian Basin and the state of Texas. In fact it was Buddy West who co-sponsored the bill along with State Rep. Warren Chisum of Pampa. When Craddick was first approached about a proposed unitization bill in 1995 for the 1997 session he said that all of the Texas oil and gas associations need to be united before he could give his support. In the last session (1999) all six of the Regional and State Oil and Gas Associations fully supported the proposed bill, which needed only one more vote to get it out of the House Energy Resources Committee. Craddick commented this year he would look at the bill when it left the Energy Resources Committee. He still failed to give his support.

It is a shame that a Fort Worth-based oil company lobbied strong enough and had the influential ties to defeat a bill that means so much to the state of Texas and specifically the Permian Basin.

This proposed bill will be back for 2001.

By the way, what happened to the interest in term limits for legislators?

Robert D. Kiker

Maybe we could have proclamations to solve all of our local problems

Bobby Burns represents all of Midland in his role as mayor. His prayer proclamation on May 15th and his prayer meeting at our City Hall at an earlier date are interesting because he can take care of a lot of problems using his mayoral prayer capabilities.

We need additional proclamations to end or solve problems connected with the following heretical organizations, people, events, and trends in Midland and in the world: AARP, planning families, bilingualism, cable TV, the Internet, globalism, non-WASPs, the UN, NATO, mean-hearted liberal people, strange artists, wild dancers, MTV, evolutionary science, the EPA, odd-thinking, the IRS, integration, multiculturalism, busing, welfare, Social Security, food stamps, AFDC, immigration, NAFTA, government regulations, the NAACP, the ACLU, affirmative action, nonconformity, creative thinking, liberal scientists, compromises, advocates of gun control, peaceniks, a liberal press, paganism, liberal speech, flag-burners, left-wingers, communists, radicals, secular humanists, privacy, vegetarians, cults, non-Christian fundamentalists, non-fundamentalistic Christians, liberal churches, separation of church and state, the Supreme Court, suspicious foreign ideas, liberal Republicans, all Democrats, and religious or political tolerance.

If proclamations do not work, we could at least burn a copy of the Bill of Rights and a few local dissenters at City Hall!

Clinton prefers 'war room' to war

In the summer of 1990, as Iraq's Saddam Hussein was moving his tanks into Kuwait City, President George Bush did something extraordinary: He played golf.

He also met with advisers and conducted feverish telephone diplomacy with world leaders, yet he steadfastly refused to leave his beloved Kennebunkport, Maine. His message was clear: The leader of the free world will not have his annual vacation interrupted by a tin-pot dictator.

Anderson

Nine years hence, the United States is once again taking on a ruthless dictator bent on regional hegemony. And once again, the president refuses to be ruffled. But where Bush was racing speed boats and hitting golf balls, Bill Clinton and Al Gore are racing around the country hitting new records for presidential buck-raking.

By our calculations, Clinton and Gore have attended an average of one fund-raiser every three days since NATO's war in Kosovo was launched almost two months ago. Last weekend the president schmoozed in his favorite setting — Hollywood — to the tune of an expected $1.5 million for Democratic Party coffers. It's all part of an effort to raise a record $55 million by the end of this year.

Back in Washington, meanwhile, Clinton's military advisers were struggling to explain a war that so far has been notable mainly for NATO's inability to hit its intended targets.

Most of the people we spoke to say the fund-raising should not be viewed as unseemly. The president must be seen as going about business-as-usual, they argue. To do otherwise might be a sign of weakness, a suggestion that Slobodan Milosevic's defiance is wearing on Clinton.

We disagree. This is a risky strategy — not just politically, but most importantly for the nation.

At some point, Gore will have to answer the same question posed to every vice president who seeks his party's nomination: Where were you when things got hot? The answer in Gore's case will be Iowa and New Hampshire, Birmingham and Seattle and everywhere in between, cozying up to the big-money donors and influential local pols whom every candidate covets.

Of course, Gore has also met for photo-op negotiations with Russian foreign minister Victor Chernomyrdin. But the overriding image will be of a vice president glad-handing big givers while a disastrous war raged in Europe.

A year from now, there is a chance no one will remember that Gore was on the hustings while America's troops were at war. The key in non-election years, insiders say, is to raise and spend enough money to scare away all potential competitors. It worked brilliantly in 1995 for Clinton. After that campaign, White House insiders famously termed Gore the "solicitor-in-chief" for his role in raising gobs of soft money that helped lift Clinton's poll ratings.

Yet it has become embarrassingly clear in recent weeks that this White House is much more adept at political warfare than the real thing. In fact, the blueprint for how to conduct this war may best be found in Little Rock, Ark., where the seeds of the Clinton presidency were sown.

There was even a movie made about the Little Rock "war room," where James Carville and George Stephanopoulos and a group of young acolytes were the generals who defeated Bush by hammering away on economic issues and labeling the president as "out of touch." It was a ruthlessly efficient campaign machine, and it set the tone for the presidency to come. It featured poll-tested themes designed to perfectly complement the public mood, lighting-quick response to crises and a strong network of friends and supporters who could be leaned on to bankroll and support the campaign in tough times.

Candidate Clinton immersed himself in every last detail, leaving virtually nothing to chance when it came to his political future. He's doing the same thing today, gleefully out on the campaign trail supporting Gore in an election that's still almost 18 months away.

Guns are not more accessible in America today

The current push for more federal gun control is fueled by the Littleton, Colo., tragedy and based on a lie that is repeated over and over not only by gun-control ideologues but by talk-show hosts and politicians.

The big lie is that guns are more accessible today.

This is factually false. It is demonstrably false. The truth is that despite the Second Amendment, guns are less accessible today than at any time in American history. There are more than 20,000 gun-control laws and regulations already on the books.

Reese

Prior to 1968, there was no federal regulation at all of ordinary handguns and long guns. The only federal regulation was one passed in the 1930s that did not ban guns but required a special license to purchase fully automatic weapons, sawed-off shotguns and silencers. Prior to that legislation, anybody who wanted to could buy a submachine gun, fully automatic, at most any store without filling out any paperwork at all.

Guns are to America what the sword is to Japan. We would not exist as a country today without guns. For the majority of America's history, guns were as common in an American household as a broom or cooking pot.

Today, most states will not allow children to own a BB gun or to shoot one unless an adult is present. I received my Daisy BB gun at age 5, and I shot it unsupervised. I received a .22-caliber rifle for my 8th birthday, and I already possessed my own pistol, a .380 semi-automatic which had been given to me by my brother-in-law, who had fought at Normandy. It was among a duffel bag full of pistols he brought back from the war.

American soldiers brought home all kinds of enemy weapons -- pistols, rifles, true assault rifles, submachine guns. Today, even an admiral or a general is forbidden to bring back a rifle as a souvenir.

There have been changes, and one change is that guns are less accessible than before. Another is that more and more Americans have been born and reared in big cities, where they had no opportunity to use a gun recreationally or for personal security. Another is that with the end of the draft back in the 1970s, fewer and fewer Americans have had an opportunity to be trained in weapons use in the military. Another change, probably related to the others, is that more journalists and politicians are simply ignorant of firearms, though that never stops them from talking about guns and wanting to regulate their ownership and use.

What happened in Littleton had nothing to do with firearms. Every other kid at that high school had the same access to firearms as the two shooters, and that's true in all the other school shootings. If you're going to argue that all the other kids had the same access to culture and they didn't go berserk (therefore, you can't blame culture) then you must acknowledge the same argument applies to firearms.

What you are seeing all around you is the old Hegelian principle at work – thesis, antithesis, synthesis. First you create or call attention to a problem, then you generate hysteria about it, and then, voila, you offer a solution. In this case, you have two kids go berserk, you fan hysteria and propose, as a solution, restrictions on the right of all Americans to acquire and own firearms.

The land of the free is gradually becoming the land of the unfree. There are Americans, you know, who don't believe in freedom -- at least not for others. We should never forget that humans are humans regardless of their nationality. There are always some people who have a terrible lust to control the lives of other people.

Better to be free in a society with risks than a safe slave in a dictatorship.

Jealousies flare in tight confines in space

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When space travelers leave on voyages to distant planets, their baggage will include the same anger, rivalries and jealousies that mark relationships on Earth.

After months in tight confines, leadership erodes, cliques develop and everybody gets mad at Mission Control, says a psychiatrist who studied astronaut and cosmonaut crews aboard the Mir space station.

Outbursts of emotion are inevitable in outer space, said Dr. Nick A. Kanas of the University of California, San Francisco. He and other experts are searching for ways to control those emotions and teach space travelers how to cope.

"We hope to train the crews before they go up, so they will be aware of what is happening and can apply some self-correction to prevent onboard tension," said Kanas, a speaker at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Anger in space, by astronauts and cosmonauts, has been common since early in the manned space program. Some Apollo crews in the 1960s griped at Mission Control even during short-duration missions. On Skylab missions that lasted up to 84 days in the mid-70s, astronauts regularly ranted about their workload and malfunctioning equipment.

Tempers also flashed occasionally aboard Mir, the Russian space station where astronauts and cosmonauts spent months in an aging craft prone to breakdown.

And, Kanas said, he expects anger and tension to be a part of missions to the International Space Station in the next decade, and again on the two- to three-year missions to Mars expected in the next century.

"It is hard to live with two or three people in space for months," Kanas said. "If you have a fight on Earth, you can go out to a movie or something and it is all better. But in space, you can't go anywhere. You are there."

Research on the Mir suggests that highly professional space travelers do well for several months, working smoothly and compatibly, Kanas said. But eventually, tempers flare.

The Russians believe it starts after just a few months. Kanas' research suggests it takes up to four months before emotions boil to the surface.

What happens, he said, is that crew compatibility breaks down, with some members ganging up on others. The dynamics of onboard leadership may change in subtle ways. And the crew develops a tendency to blame Mission Control for all problems.

"There's a feeling that things are tough on board and nobody cares on the outside," Kanas said.

In severe cases, the powerful emotions affected sleep, attention to work and even caused physical weakness. Experts are still searching for answers, but Kanas said studies have established some fundamentals:

■ The number of people in a crew is crucial. "Three is the most difficult number for a crew. With three, somebody is excluded. You have a majority and one is a loner," said Kanas. "Eleven and nine are good numbers. For instance, you might have a majority of six, but those in the 'out' group still have somebody to talk to."

■ A variety of people may be better than a crew of one sex, one race or one nationality. "There is a school of thought that diversity during a long-term space mission might be a positive, because it keeps them interested in each other longer," Kanas said. "I would guess that the first trip to Mars probably will be multicultural with at least two languages and include at least one woman." Studies suggest, he said, that crew members who are well traveled, sophisticated and able to speak different languages "are used to working with other people and will be less tense and more cohesive."

Teen convicted of plotting to kill her parents

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl who offered a hitman $200 to kill her parents is back home with them until her sentencing in July.

The Lake Orion girl was convicted Tuesday of soliciting murder.

The girl's parents discovered the plot in December while listening to secretly recorded tapes of her telephone conversations. They had tapped the line because of her rebellious behavior.

"She had some problems about drug abuse and drinking, and there was some concern she may be pregnant," said prosecutor John O'Brien said.

On Dec. 17, the couple heard their daughter tell a classmate: "I ... hired someone to kill my parents. ... But I might just have my dad killed because my mom is too stupid to control me."

The parents called police, then posted $100,000 bond to have the girl released until her trial.

The judge ruled Tuesday she can remain with them until her sentencing July 8. Since the girl was convicted as a juvenile, she cannot be held past her 21st birthday.

The alleged hitman wasn't charged. He told police he thought the girl was joking.

BASIN BRIEFING

WWII movie

"D-Day to Berlin," a video rendering of color footage photographed by film director George Stevens in Europe during World War II, is to be shown at 2 p.m. Saturday as the seventh program in the "Remembrance of War" 1999 series at Confederate Air Force headquarters at Midland International Airport. The free seminar, sponsored by the American Airpower Heritage Museum, is to be presented in the museum's classroom. The event is to feature personal accounts by two Midlanders who served in Europe in the U.S. Army during the war: Gerald Howard, who served in the 101st Airborne Division, and Roy Tapp, who served in the 65th Infantry Division's of U.S. Army Gen. George Patton's Third Army. During World War II, Stevens headed up the Army Signal Corps' film unit and covered such events as the liberation of the Dachau concentration camp and the capture of Adolf Hitler's Berchtesgaden hideaway. Among motion pictures directed and/or produced by Stevens are "The Diary of Anne Frank," "The Greatest Ever Told," "Shane," "Giant," and "A Place in the Sun."

YMCA courses

The Alamo YMCA is offering two classes:

- Swimming lessons for children and adults will be offered beginning June 1. Swimmers are grouped according to age and ability, and safety skills are taught. Private lessons are available.
- Arthritis water exercise classes are offered Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The pool has two hydraulic lifts and a therapeutic ladder.

For more information, call 694-2528.

School funding

AUSTIN — A $3.8 billion proposal to give every Texas teacher a $3,000 pay raise, fatten school funding and provide about $1.2 billion in property tax relief was unanimously approved Thursday by a House panel. The bill is expected to reach the House floor for debate on Sunday afternoon. "The commitment of our state to $3.8 billion out of a $6.4 billion surplus says very good things about the priorities we have in our state," said Public Education Committee Chairman Paul Sadler, D-Henderson. "I think all Texans can be very proud we have made the commitment to improving public education and at the same time attempting to take measures to ease property tax burdens." Sadler said lawmakers this session will be able to deliver about $2 billion in total tax reductions, including cuts in property taxes and other levies such as sales and franchise taxes.

Death row move

AUSTIN — The transfer of more than 400 death row inmates — partly spurred by last year's successful death row escape — would begin in the next few weeks under a plan presented to the Texas Board of Criminal Justice Thursday. If approved, the Department of Criminal Justice would transfer about 50 death row inmates immediately from the Ellis Unit in Huntsville to the newer Terrell Unit near Livingston, about 25 miles away. That first phase is meant to "single-cell" the condemned inmates so that two inmates don't share a cell, said Gary Johnson, director of the TDCJ institutional division. The rest of the condemned inmates would be transferred later this year. The board will formally vote on the relocation plan today.

Judge John Hyde denied attorneys' motion for a change of venue Thursday and scheduled Tena Henkel's intoxication manslaughter trial for July 12.

Judge denies Tena Henkel change of venue for trial

By Rick López
Staff Writer

At a pretrial hearing Thursday, the court reset Tena Henkel's intoxication manslaughter trial for July 12 and denied her motion for a change of venue.

Ms. Henkel's attorneys — Bob Garcia and Woody Leverett — asked 238th District Judge John Hyde to delay the trial until they receive transcripts from her husband's February trial.

The original court date on the docket was May 24.

Ms. Henkel, 44, is charged with two counts of intoxication manslaughter and two counts of intoxication assault stemming from a July 27, 1997, car accident that killed two Midland teens and injured two others.

Prosecutors allege the driver of the vehicle, who survived the accident, had come from a party that Ms. Henkel and her husband, Billy Joe Henkel, hosted for their college-bound daughter. They allege the couple served alcohol to a group of minors who attended the celebration.

During Henkel's trial, the defense claimed the defendants lost control of the party when uninvited teen-agers came over with their own alcohol. They also claimed bad road conditions, not the driver's level of intoxication, caused the accident.

Because Henkel's case was the first of its kind tried in Texas, Leverett had initially asked Hyde to spare Ms. Henkel the financial and emotional stress by not pursuing the case while her husband's conviction is reviewed in appeals court.

But Hyde only delayed it for another 45 days.

"It's beyond argument that this is a case of first impression ... and could make new laws," Leverett said.

Henkel was convicted of all four charges and given a three-year suspended prison sentence and 180 days in jail, which he will serve only if his appeal is denied.

Leverett tried to convince Hyde that waiting for the appellate decision would not harm the state's case.

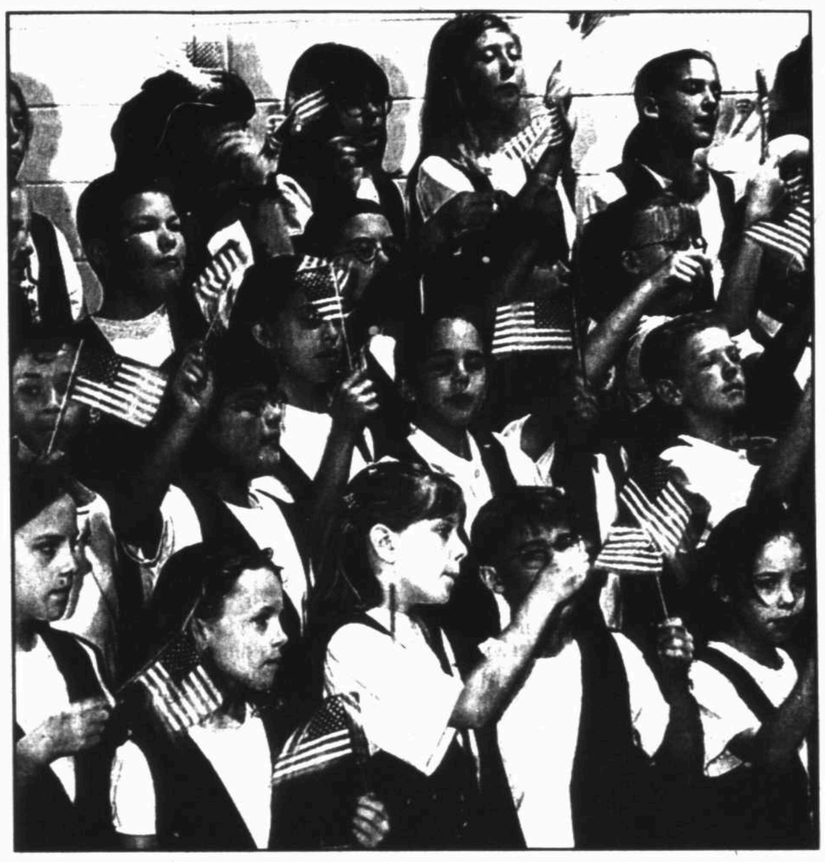

"None of the lay witnesses were crucial. It's not a case where you have an 80-year-old woman who's important to the case and in poor health," Leverett said. "All the witnesses had strong ties to Midland County and parents that still live in Greenwood."

Education board member calls for business support of Texas schools

■ Hispanic chamber honors local business people, presents scholarships

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

With State Board of Education member Rene Nunez on hand, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce presented awards to local business people and scholarships to local high school and college students Thursday.

Nunez

The chamber honored Joe James Camarillo, owner of Joe James Salon, as Businessman of the Year. Zoila Granado, who founded Dos Compadres restaurant with her husband Robert, was recognized as Businesswoman of the Year, and Texaco was named Corporation of the Year. Maria Elena Duron was honored as Member of the Year for her volunteer work with the chamber and the community. All four will compete on a state level at the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce state meeting this summer.

Nunez, a former teacher and currently a real estate broker in El Paso, said it was important that businesses support education and applauded the support of local businesses in helping raise funds for the scholarships that the chamber presented. Twenty-four students received scholarships.

Business support is one of four ingredients that make up a successful school campus, he told luncheon guests at the

Senate to consider radioactive waste bill today

■ Opponents of legislation worry that unlimited Department of Energy waste may flow into Texas.

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

With the 76th Legislature's May 31 end date quickly approaching, Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown (R-Lake Jackson) will bring to the Texas Senate floor today his bill on the disposal of low-level radioactive waste in West Texas.

Texas is currently in a compact agreement with Maine and Vermont to store low-level radioactive waste in Texas. Before the waste can be stored, the state must decide the rules that will mandate how it will be stored.

Critics of Brown's bill, House Bill 1171, are concerned with a section of the bill that deals with allowing the Department of Energy to store certain kinds of waste at a facility.

The bill currently states that the radioactivity of DOE waste has to be 20 percent less than the waste that is supposed to be brought in through the compact.

However, according to an opinion written by Attorney General John Cornyn's office (Opinion No. JC-52), placing limitation on DOE waste violates the commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution. In other words, there can be no limitations on the type or amount of DOE waste that is brought to a privately owned site.

According to Marylia Kelly, with Tri-Valley CAREs (Communities Against Radioactive Environment) in California, states have a waste disposal authority that helps monitor the waste. Although a waste authority cannot limit the amount or type of DOE waste that comes into a state, it can limit what kinds of waste can be stored at a facility. For example, they can say one site is only for contaminated gloves.

However, according to section 14 of the Brown bill, the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority can be abolished.

If Brown's bill is passed in its current form, a private company will be able to take in DOE waste, which the state cannot put limits on. Nor will the state have a waste disposal authority to put restrictions on a facility as to what kind of waste it can accept.

One of the companies in the hunt for a radioactive waste license, Waste Control Specialists (WCS), only wants to store waste if it can have DOE waste. Vice President Bill

Please see WASTE/7B

'WCS will have the application ready the day any legislation passes in Texas allowing for WCS to take commercial low-level waste. However, we will not go forward unless they can take DOE wastes.'

'Phantom Menace' prequel provides night to remember

By James Hershberger

History has been made. Forever after, people will look back at 1999 with a sense of complete and utter awe. It is the year the world will be eternally changed because of one event. You guessed it, the president's impeachment trial. No, it's "Star Wars: Episode I, the Phantom Menace."

Hershberger

I'm not exactly a "Star Wars" fanatic. I mean, it was a good movie and all, but to me, it's just that. In my younger brother's eyes, however, it is much more. Ever since he heard the words "prequel," he has been determined to be one of the first Midlanders to lay eyes on the film. I was just along to make history.

Compared to other Americans nationwide, my brother is a "Star Wars" fan lightweight. The hype for this thing is amazing. People camped outside theaters for weeks, merely to have the bragging rights of being the first one to have a ticket. In our little town, things aren't much better. A guy I know waited in line for the midnight premiere an amazing eight hours. He wanted to be among the first. My group of six went 30 minutes before it started and we all sat together in good seats. People love to get pumped up about this sort of thing.

Acquiring tickets was the first challenge for the "Star Wars" extravaganza. My mom assumed the first showing would be a matinee, and she would pick us up a little early from school. After all, school is an everyday sort of thing — "Star Wars" only premiers once.

My brother instructed my mom to get in line by noon on May 12, the day tickets went on sale. Instead, she picked him up after school and dropped him off to let him wait in the broiling sun. By then, the line wrapped around the theater. An hour later we returned to the theater. My brother was breathless — he had secured four tickets to the premiere and had the best news. Our educations wouldn't be jeopardized whatsoever. The premiere was at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday.

My mom was in shock. She was further shocked when my brother broke the news that the tickets were a tad higher priced and cost $28. The threat of losing $28 in the form of tiny paper tickets forced my mom to agree to the midnight movie. Of course, she didn't realize we would return home at 3 a.m. on a school night.

Next we had a ticket dilemma. We have five people in our family but only three were willing to venture to the movie at midnight (what's my 4-year-old sister's problem?). Thus, we had to find someone to take the fourth ticket. Again it was a matter of money — losing $7 was out of the question.

"We could scalp the ticket," I suggested.

My father, a lawyer, frowned and that idea vanished like a frightened Ewok.

The next day, my brother and I set out on separate quests to find a ticket taker. We were both successful. Unfortunately, there was only one ticket. We headed back to the box office and believe it or not, there were still tickets remaining for the premiere ... the matinee tickets and evening shows were all gone, which my mother found to be an indication that midnight movies on school nights were a very bad idea, even if it was a

Earl Whisnand

3-6-26 - 5-18-99

Earl William Whisnand, 73, died May 18, 1999, while a Hospice patient at the Waco VA Medical Center. He is survived by his wife, Lillian Bruce McDonald Whisnand; daughter, the Reverend Deborah Whisnand; son-in-law, Thomas M. Stauffer; granddaughter, Elizabeth Deborah Stinson; son, Dr. Philip Earl Whisnand; daughter-in-law, Diann Whisnand; two grandsons, Jay Philip Whisnand, and Wade Gentry Whisnand; daughter, Deanna Whisnand Rutherford; son-in-law John Rutherford; two grandsons, William Whisnand Rutherford and John Kaden Rutherford. He is also survived by the mother of his children, Jo Ann Baker Whisnand, his sister, Dorothy Whisnand Taylor, two nieces, three nephews and their families and numerous aunts, uncles, and cousins.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Earl Whisnand and Mabel Duke Whisnand Clements, and his sister, Helen Dorrance.

He was born on March 6, 1926, in Ballinger, Texas, and grew up in San Angelo, Texas. He served in World War II in the Pacific as a boatswain mate second class on the light cruiser Chester. After the war he earned a BBA from Texas Technological University in Lubbock, Texas. He worked for Continental Oil Company both in New Mexico and Texas. In 1955 he and his family moved to Midland. He was active as a Sunday School teacher and usher in the First Baptist Church of Midland for 33 years.

After leaving Continental he was an independent oil operator in Midland and a rancher in Reagan and Glasscock counties. He was a member of the National Cutting Horse Association, the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association and the Permian Basin Landman's Association.

In 1989 he married Lillian Bruce McDonald and moved to Waco, Texas where he resided until his death from metastatic prostate cancer. He was a member of Columbus Avenue Baptist Church in Waco.

Visitation was Thursday from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at Ellis Funeral Home.

Funeral service will be at 11 a.m. Friday, May 21, in Midland, Texas, at the First Baptist Church and interment at 3 p.m. at Big Lake Cemetery. Reverend Robert Hopkins will officiate. Pallbearers will be Dean Cox, Rusty Cox, Doyle Kelley, Dr. Richard Klempnauer, Hoyle McCright, Bill Schneemann and Tip Vancourt.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the West Texas Boys' Ranch or to one's favorite charity.

Sue Daniel

Sue Ann Brumble Daniel was born on October 23, 1940, to the union of Wayne Thomas Brumble and Margaret Jane Hensley in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where she spent her early childhood days in the community of Dawson, then a suburb of Tulsa. During the war her dad worked in the shipyards in San Diego, California, painting ships for the Navy. After the war the family moved back to Tulsa and in 1950 her family moved to Odessa. It was in Odessa as a child she was led to her Savior by her Sunday School teacher at Belmont Baptist Church where she was baptized. Sue attended schools in Odessa and graduated from Odessa High School in May 1958. She was employed as a secretary in an engineering firm and in December on the "twelfth of never" she was joined in marriage to Donald Daniel. To this union were born her three children, Craig, Lori, and Clint.

During the seventies after her children were all in school she studied for and passed her test for a real estate sales license. She continued her studies and passed the test as a real estate broker. Her husband Don was employed at Miether Machine Works during this time. Sue was also a member of the Odessa Bible Church where her children all learned to love the Savior she so loved. In February 1980 her husband, then employed with Ingersoll-Rand, was transferred to a facility in Okmulgee, Oklahoma. During this time she made their house in Jenks, Oklahoma, a quiet and joyous refuge to her extended family, many of whom lived in Tulsa, a suburb of Jenks. She obtained her Oklahoma real estate sales license and worked for a time selling real estate in Jenks and Tulsa. She was also employed at C.R. Anthony's in Jenks. She and her family were also members of First Baptist Church of Jenks.

In 1987 the family returned to West Texas where her husband was employed as the manager of the Dresser-Rand Repair Center of Midland. They made their home in Midland on Elma Drive. Sue was a member of Northwestern Baptist Church where she was an active member of Women On Mission, a volunteer at the Midland Baptist Crisis Center, a Sunday School teacher and finally a member of the Fellowship Bible Class and a member of the choir. She was a staunch supporter of Texans United For Life. She was the arms that encircled and gathered together her family during holidays.

She is survived by her husband of forty years and her three children, Dr. Craig Daniel and his wife Betsy of Odessa, her daughter Lori and husband Kent McLain of Mount Gilead, Ohio, and Clint Daniel and his wife Marcia of San Angelo; seven wonderful grandchildren, Joshua, Christy, and Micheal Daniel of Odessa, Chase and Lacey McLain of Ohio, and Caleb and Ethan Daniel of San Angelo; her mother and father Margaret and Wayne Brumble of Midland; her brother Ron Brumble and wife Linda of Austin, her sister Janice and husband Tom Valentine of Denver, Colorado; numerous nieces and nephews and a bevy of beloved cousins.

She passed from this life into the arms of her Savior on May 18, 1999, after a valiant fight against cancer. She is gone from our lives yet she abides in our hearts forever.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday at Northwestern Baptist Church with Reverend James Aldridge officiating. Interment will follow in Sunset Memorial Gardens under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

The family suggests memorials to the Women On Mission at Northwestern Baptist Church, the Church Library or Home Hospice of Midland/Odessa.

Nettie Garrett

Nettie M. Garrett passed away at her home on Tuesday, May 18, after many months of illness, with her devoted daughter, Joyce Arnold, at her bedside as she had been for the past nine months.

Nettie was born Nettie McFatridge on September 29, 1908, in Stephens County, Oklahoma, to James and M.E. McFatridge. She married Ray "Buck" Garrett. They had two children, Joyce M. Garrett Arnold and John M. Garrett.

She is survived by her daughter and son; her five grandchildren, Paula Arnold Harrison and her husband, Kenneth, of Dallas, Deborah Arnold Pierce of Midland, John Robert Pierce of San Marcos, Cecilia Garrett Fleet and her husband, Spencer, of Seattle, Wash., and Adam Ray Garrett and his wife, Kendra, of Seattle, Wash.; her five great-grandchildren, Morgan L. Pierce of San Marcos, Jarrett R. and Kyle E. Pierce of Midland, Kevin R. Harrison of Dallas, and Spencer R. Fleet of Seattle, Wash.; her very special adopted daughter, June Sutherland and her husband, Leroy; and her brother, Robert McFatridge; and sister, Myrtle Gregston both of Oklahoma.

Nettie was a very active participant in her church, Hope Lutheran and also in the Sand and Sage Garden Club, the Palette Club, Art Class Senior Center - Arts and Ceramics, and Ostomony Association.

She was a very take-charge person and kept things moving. Thus, she inherited the name, "Little Miss Boss."

Nettie was preceded in death by her husband, Ray "Buck" Garrett and son-in-law, Paul S. Arnold.

Graveside services have been scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Friday at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Home Hospice or the Hope Lutheran Church.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo, one column wide and three inches deep.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 3:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

Let's Hear It For The Winners!

A famous old coach spawned some tongue-in-cheek words that say, "It makes no difference whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game!" True, yet I firmly believe that you can do it God's way, and still be a winner in the eyes of the world! God compares life to a race and explains, "Let us run with endurance the race that is set before us." Hebrews 12:1. Today I salute that fine host of 1999 Seniors in our community who have run with patience, and are truly winners.

The difference in Winners and Losers? A winner respects those who are better, and tries to learn from them; a loser resents them, and tries to tear them down. A winner explains and learns; a loser gives excuses and quits. A winners says, 'there should be a better way!'; a loser says, 'it's my way or no way!'

Tom Ed Gooden, an all state quarterback in Arkansas a few years ago, faced a dilemma when a season game, canceled due to weather, was rescheduled for Wednesday. Tom Ed told the coaches, "I already have a meeting at church." The date was changed. The courage of a winner!

BUSINESS: Nunez speaks to chamber members

(From 1B)

Holiday Inn Convention Center.

He contrasted two districts in his hometown of El Paso. Coronado is located in a white-collar area, while San Ysidro is located in the colonias. Both have been recognized by the Texas Department of Education as exemplary campuses.

He said each campus has the four ingredients, including the support of businesses. "Especially little neighborhood businesses, pizzerias, copiers, paint stores.

They also were headed up by principals who cared about their schools and staffed by teachers — the third ingredient — who were willing to work with each other and the principal for the betterment of the students.

The schools also had the fourth ingredient required for success: parents who were made to feel welcome and invited to be involved on campuses that were open and available to the students and their parents.

Education will be changed at the local level, he said, "and technology is the way to bring about change," he said, observing that El Paso's Ysleta school district in the next three years will provide every teacher with laptop computers.

Camarillo

Granado

Duron

Schneider

"I truly believe technology, computers and the Internet are the future," he said, noting that he recently visited three departments of education in Mexico and found their technology had surpassed U.S. schools.

"What took the United States 30 years, they've done much more quickly because they learned from us," he said. "They're tracking student performance, revising curriculum online, they've decentralized their education system."

He said opportunities exist for American students, especially those who have mastered Spanish, in Mexico and in South America. "In Mexico City they were asking if we had students who could work with computers and on the Internet. Bilingualism is the wave of the future."

Public schools have to change, he said, or be overtaken by charter schools, voucher programs and private schools. State legislators are the best vehicle to improve the state's schools, he said.

Nunez is the first Texan and first Hispanic to serve as president of the National Association of State Boards of Education, a position he said gave him the opportunity to talk a lot about Texas.

"But we're shameful in regard to teacher pay. We're ranked 38th among the states; we're not rewarding teachers as we should."

With teacher salaries unable to compete with salaries offered by corporations like Microsoft, "we could be losing our best and brightest. We need incentives to attract teachers," he said.

In regard to school funding, he said he hoped the Texas Legislature would find ways to appropriate bigger portions of state resources for education. He also called for a way to put all the state's share of education funding in one pot so it could be equally apportioned among the state's school districts. Then, when one section of the state is hurting economically, while other regions are prospering, the schools in the depressed region would not suffer a loss of its tax base.

He said his goal is to see the state's share of education funding rise to 75 percent.

Since our children are facing a dangerous future, let's change the face of their future.

It's frightening and frustrating-at times, overwhelming-raising our children in the maze of mixed signals that is our society. We need God's strength to help us guide and guard our families as we go into the next century. It's available: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:38). Experience it at your local United Pentecostal Church on Pentecost Sunday, May 23, 1999. Heaven help us...

Texas House tentatively OKs deregulation of utility market

AUSTIN (AP) — Consumers would be able to shop for the best electric rates under a sweeping overhaul of the state's $20 billion-a-year utility market given tentative approval Thursday night by the House.

Bill supporters say the measure, to take effect in 2002, would mean lower rates for consumers and more reliability.

"Even though it's true our rates are lower, Texas has the third highest electric bills in the nation," said bill sponsor Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Dallas.

The 142-4 vote set the stage for final House action today. Approval would send the bill back to the Senate for consideration of changes.

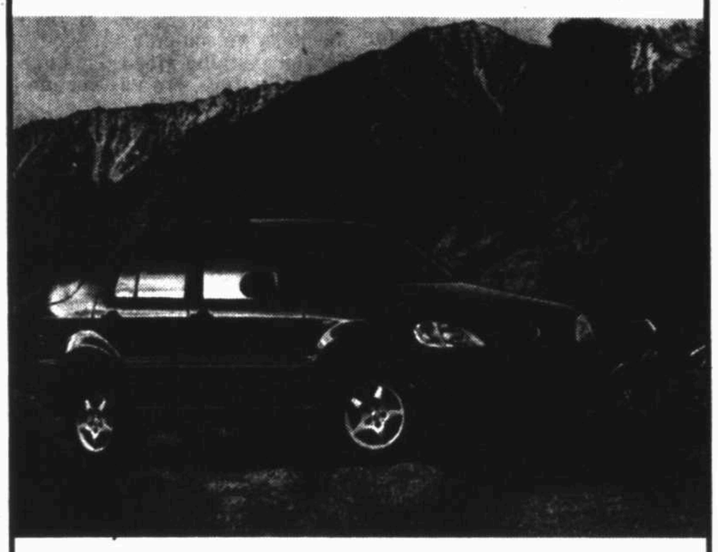

More than 50 proposed amendments were considered by representatives, including a compromise on the issue of "stranded costs" that some had predicted could have derailed the entire process.

Industrial and commercial users had been upset about an amendment by Rep. Kevin Bailey, D-Houston, added in committee to shift from residential customers to them more responsibility for payments to utilities for the utilities' remaining investments in nuclear plants.

Bailey introduced a compromise Thursday that would lower the cost for industrial customers — which range from department stores to oil refineries — while continuing to benefit residential consumers. It was added to the bill.

FAMILY MATTERS

Wife devastated by husband's affair

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: About two years ago, I began to suspect that my husband was having an affair. I tried to talk to him about it, but he would only get mad and accuse me of being suspicious and jealous. I would be OK for a while, but I just had this little thought in the back of my mind that something was going on.

May

Three weeks ago a "friend" called me and left an anonymous message on the machine about my husband and this other woman. They told me that I should go to a certain restaurant at lunch on any day and they would be here.

I fought it at first but then I went. My heart sank when I saw his car there, but I went in anyway. I felt really guilty for doing it, but when I went inside I saw them huddled together at a table, talking. They weren't just "talking," they were eye-to-eye. They were so caught up in each other that they didn't see me walk over behind them and stand there.

She finally looked up and asked me what I wanted. When my husband looked up, he turned beet red and at first started spurting something. I didn't say anything. I was too hurt to talk.

I drove around crying for a long time; then I started getting mad. By the time I got home I was really, really mad. I couldn't believe that he would cheat on me in the first place, and then I felt like such a fool for ever believing his lies.

He was home when I got there and we had a big fight. I told him to pack a bag and leave, and he did. He has been at the (motel) ever since.

Now I think that I'm ready to talk to him without yelling. He's been calling every day, telling me how sorry he was, but also denying that anything was going on. I don't know if I believe him or not, but all I did see was them talking together.

Our adult children are involved now. My daughter thinks that I should throw him out, but my son thinks that his dad just made a mistake and that I should give him another chance. After 27-plus years of marriage, I'm beginning to think that my son might be right.

So my question to you is: Should I give him another chance? He's been a good provider and an OK father to the kids. He never has been able to really talk to me about his feelings, but I've just come to accept that. It does make me mad to think that he wouldn't talk to me, but he would talk to her. What should I do? THROW IN THE TOWEL?

DEAR THROW: Please don't give up on your husband at this point. You son has a good point: 27 years is a long time to give up without a fight.

You and your husband should seek marriage counseling immediately — the sooner the work starts, the better. Talk to your friends, physicians and minister to help find a counselor who you two can work with.

I believe that affairs — whether actual, potential or emotional — affairs can be overcome successfully, and with hard work the marriage can become stronger than before.

You and your husband have much to talk about. Neither one of you should settle for your "old marriage."

Work at creating the marriage of your dreams. It can and will happen if you can put God at the center of your relationship and both be obedient to Christ's command to "Love one another as I have loved you." As Dr. Craig Barnes wrote in his book, "Hustling God," "There is always something missing in our partner, and there is clearly something missing in our lives. That forces a choice. Will you find joy simply in the mystery of putting this relationship together, or will you become obsessed with what is missing from the picture?"

Your husband may focused on what was missing from your marriage and looked to another to find that missing piece. He may have realized what he had in you and wants to make amends. Please give him the opportunity.

THE FOLLOWING TIPS ON "ESTABLISHING FAMILY RULES THAT WORK" ARE BROUGHT TO YOU BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

- Collaborate on establishing the rules.
- Be willing to listen and compromise.
- Be consistent in enforcing the rules.
- Recognize and respect the young person's wisdom.
- Understand your child's "world."
- Acknowledge your child's need for privacy.
- Listen to your child's views on each rule and each consequence.
- When possible, take your child's suggestion on the rule statement.
- Check with other parents whom you respect to make certain that your rules are fair.
- Write out the rules and consequences, post them in an obvious place (such as on the refrigerator) and follow them.

DEAR ABBY

Sister suffers guilt after CPR fails

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently one of my dearest friends, "Mary Helen," was forced to perform CPR on her brother "Bill" when he collapsed at their parents' home. Unfortunately, Bill died, and Mary Helen was left wondering if she had somehow performed the CPR incorrectly.

Van Buren

Right after the funeral, a "friend" interrogated Mary Helen about the precise method she used during the CPR. This "friend" then announced that Mary Helen had done it wrong, confirming her worst fear — that she was responsible for Bill's death. Needless to say, she took the news very hard and blamed herself.

Several weeks later, a doctor told Mary Helen her brother had been suffering from a form of heart failure. Unfortunately Bill had mistaken his symptoms for the flu. After much discussion, the doctor insisted that Mary Helen had performed the CPR correctly, and even if Bill had been in the hospital, his death was inevitable.

Abby, please tell those well-meaning individuals who judge those of us who "fail" at performing CPR to hold their tongues. We don't need a guilt trip. My CPR efforts failed when my husband had a heart attack several years ago. I was 31 years old when I performed CPR with all my might in my nightgown on the floor of our bedroom while our small children slept down the hall. There are people who wondered aloud if I had done everything I could to revive him.

Mary Helen and I already know what it is to lose sleep asking ourselves: "Did I count the breaths wrong? Should I have pushed harder or faster? Is it my fault he died?"

The death of a loved one is hard enough — but it's even worse when you've tried to do everything right, and someone says you did something wrong, implying the death was your fault. Thank you, Abby, for allowing me to vent. — EILEEN IN PORT ANGELES, WASH.

DEAR EILEEN: Even when CPR is performed by a trained professional, it doesn't always save lives. You and Mary Helen should have been praised for your efforts rather than chastised because they didn't succeed. Time and again, studies have shown that any CPR efforts are better than none. Be secure in the knowledge that you made every possible effort to save your loved ones when you didn't hesitate to get involved.

Bottom line: Learning CPR is an investment of time everyone should make.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I were childhood sweethearts. We divorced 20 years ago because we couldn't see eye-to-eye on anything. However, since our divorce, we've become friends.

During our marriage, we acquired a sizable collection of unique timepieces. When we divorced, I received "custody" of the collection. I am now considering giving my ex-wife one of the timepieces in the collection as a gift.

I know a present is a present and shouldn't have "strings" attached, but is there any way I can give her one of the clocks with the stipulation that it must be passed on to one of our grandchildren? — GOING CUCKOO IN CHALMETTE, LA.

DEAR GOING CUCKOO: Since you and your ex-wife are now friends, and this collection once belonged to both of you, discuss it with her to make sure that the future of the collection is something on which you can see eye-to-eye. If it isn't, give her another gift, and leave the collection to your grandchildren in your will.

DEAR ABBY: May I remind people that there are single fathers who care for their children? Most people seem to think that only mothers have custody of young children. Believe me, a number of single fathers are raising their children.

A few years ago, I took my 20-month-old daughter into the men's room to change her diaper. On the way in, I saw a woman look at me in shock and horror that I was taking a baby girl into the men's room.

Another customer had a different reaction. She said, "Isn't that sweet! Her father is taking care of her." I wanted to shout: "No, it's not sweet. She is my daughter and I love her. I am not trying to be 'sweet.' I am trying to take care of her and raise her with morals, feelings for others, and the ability to stand on her own two feet someday and contribute to society."

Abby, the bottom line is people should be aware that there are able single fathers as well as single mothers. — DOUGLAS L. GAYNOR IN VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

DEAR DOUGLAS: In case anyone has forgotten — I'm printing your reminder. I salute you.

New toll-free telephone number helps seniors get Medicare information

Staff Reports

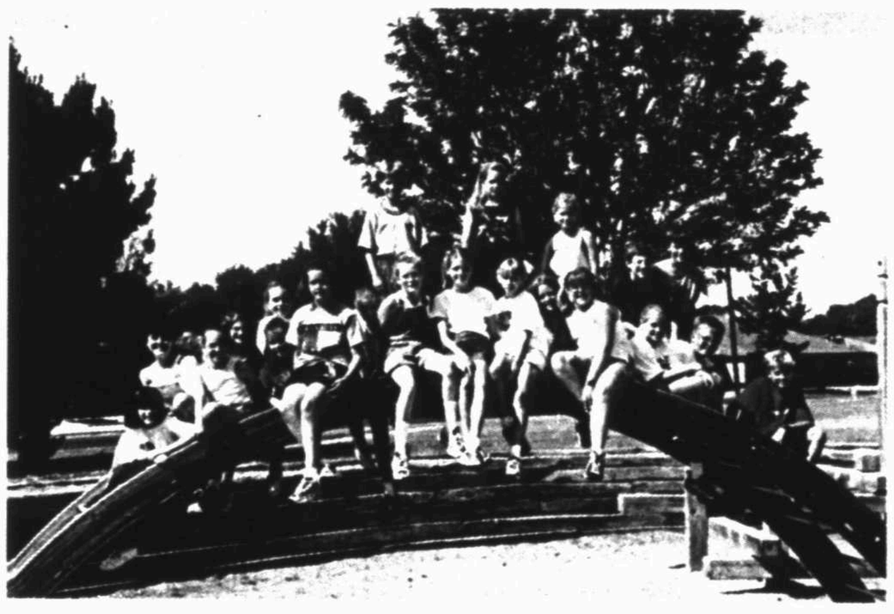

Medicare beneficiaries in Texas have one more tool to get help with questions about the program and its health plan options.

Health Care Financing Administration, the federal agency that runs Medicare, has announced that the new Medicare+Choice toll-free telephone line, 1-800-633-4277, is available in Texas. The telephone number is part of the National Medicare Education Program and is being phased in across the country.

Callers to the number can talk to customer service representatives in English or Spanish. Hours of service are 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. local time, Monday through Friday.

CINDY MORRIS
NIE TEACHER OF THE YEAR
1998-1999

The fourth graders at The Hillander School have thoroughly enjoyed the Midland Reporter-Telegram newspaper this school year. Both 4th grade classes look forward to their papers every Friday. As we read, we find interesting articles to cut out and use them to create ways to reinforce our language skills. Sometimes we highlight certain words such as pronouns, adverbs, adjectives, etc. or underline all the proper nouns. Other times we look for certain areas of the country that we are studying in Geography and try to locate them on the map.

Mrs. Morris's class thanks the sponsors of this program for providing a unique way for us to enhance our education. We would like to dedicate this award to Mrs. Ann Scharfenberg.

Seniors: Tips help prevent fire injuries

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

To stand in front of a group of Milocevic's "police" and utter the word "fire" would not be very smart. Likewise, to stand around your home or wherever you may be and not contemplate the availability of rapid egress is also not very bright.

Statistics show that during an average lifespan, one can expect to become involved in two or three fires serious enough to call the fire department. The same basic principles for survival apply whether you are at home, in a theater, health institution, airplane or anywhere else, including purgatory.

Page

The incapacities of older people make them especially vulnerable; hence, thinking prevention becomes even more vital.

The National Fire Protection Association lists the following tips for elders:

- Be kitchen-wise;
- Be smoker-wise;
- Allow plenty of space for space heaters;
- Have smoke detectors tested regularly;
- Plan not one but two escape routes; and
- If trapped, close and seal doors.

Other constructive tips include checking all electrical outlets and wires; keeping fire extinguisher near the stove; maintaining clean heating systems; avoiding iron bars in windows; never leaving functioning appliances unattended; and storing flammable materials in cool, ventilate areas.

The development of Midland's smart, "state-of-the-art" fire and rescue service is of much interest. In the old days, Midland was a dusty cow town without real fire protection, until 1909 when a volunteer fire department was organized. A hose cart was added in 1912; the fire hall was built in 1914.

The department added a modern American La France in 1916; a No. 2 truck in 1928; and a No. 3 truck in 1930.

As in all good fire halls, dancing, barbecue dinners and Christmas parties abounded — maintaining a high level of morale.

After World War II, the department gradually became professional, and in 1952, under Chief J.M. Little, became fully paid.

It has now burgeoned into a highly-trained organization of 172 members manning nine stations, including a crash/rescue station at Midland Air Terminal. The equipment includes 11 engines, eight ambulances, quint (truck with five components), ladder truck, snorkel, taskers and six other types of apparatus.

The chief is now Andrew Mehl, who succeeded James Roberts, who did so much to build up the department and accomplish its motto: "Proudly Professionally Protecting the Community."

If fire does strike, above all else remain calm. Do not follow the historical, hysterical pattern of throwing the baby out the window and trying to carry the mattress downstairs. Get out and stay out; crawl if smokey; test doors for heat before opening; stop, drop and roll if your clothes catch fire; and smother flaming grease.

Even churches can catch fire, to wit: " 'Holy Smoke!' the preacher shouted as he wildly tore his hair. How his hair resembled heaven as there was no party there!"

Study: Database can prevent side effects

By Linda A. Johnson

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Using a computer database to flag prescriptions potentially harmful to older folks can persuade their doctors to try an alternative considered safer, according to the country's largest pharmacy benefit manager.

Merck-Medco Managed Care, a subsidiary Merck & Co., said such changes can help prevent nasty — and costly — side effects that often result in hospitalizations or dizziness causing falls and broken bones. Occasionally, medication errors cause death.

"Among the elderly, 17 percent of hospitalizations are due to a medication misadventure," and those hospital stays cost as much as $10 billion annually, said Dr. Mark Monane, senior director of geriatrics for Merck-Medco.

The company, which processes pharmacy claims or directly mails medications to one in five Americans, including 10 million over age 65, in 1995 began its Partners for Healthy Aging program. Its aim is to reduce adverse drug reactions caused by prescribing the wrong drug or the wrong dosage to senior citizens.

"The older population is growing rapidly, and it is not unusual for older people to be taking several medications," Monane said. His study, the largest to date, was presented at the National Managed Health Care Congress meeting on Medicare and Medicaid in Washington.

As people age, he said, the way their body breaks down medications and how quickly it excretes them changes, "so a drug that was good for them at 40 no longer is at 60 or 70."

Meanwhile, few pharmacists and physicians have specialized training in geriatric medicine, and even pharmacists find it difficult to know every possible side effect or interaction a drug could have. In addition, an elderly patient's primary doctor may not be familiar with drugs prescribed by a specialist.

So Merck-Medco compiled the best research on geriatric medicine and, with a panel of experts, developed a database focusing on 11 types of medications commonly used by seniors. The system automatically alerts a pharmacist at one of the company's 13 mail service facilities, and the pharmacist then calls the prescribing physician to point out the drug's dangers and suggest alternatives.

To determine whether the system is preventing patients from receiving the potentially dangerous drug, Merck-Medco examined a nationwide sample of 23,269 patients whose prescriptions triggered a total of 43,007 alerts from April 1996 through March 1997.

In 24 percent of 24,266 cases, where pharmacists were able to discuss the prescription with the physician, he or she then opted for a different medication, another dosage or some other strategy, such as a dietary change. Most of the alerts and medication changes involved antidepressants such as Elavil and tranquilizers such as Valium.

"This is something that obviously there's a need for," said Michael Donio of the People's Medical Society in Allentown, Pa. "We know that when drug manufacturers set a dosage ... it doesn't take into account that someone might be 78 or down to 100 pounds."

Judge rules on competency

ALFRED, Maine (AP) — A former church secretary who bilked more than $10,000 from three elderly women by concocting a story about her husband being a spy is competent to stand trial, a judge has ruled.

Jane Petersen, 70, received contributions from people who were sympathetic after hearing her story that her money was tied up because her husband was a secret agent who disappeared in the Gulf War but was officially declared dead.

Petersen, who is being held on $30,000 bail, is charged with three counts of theft by deception. She was working as a secretary at St. David's Episcopal Church in Kennebunk when the crimes were allegedly committed.

Her attorney claimed — but did not convince the judge — that Petersen was delusional and could not participate in her own defense.

Pension funds sent to stock market

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — After more than a century of caution, South Carolina's pension funds are headed to the stock market with a plan to invest more than $900 million in an index fund before June 30.

Next fiscal year, starting July 1, that will double to $1.8 billion under the plan approved by the state Budget and Control Board on May 10.

Since 1895, after the state was swindled by investments in canal and rail project stocks, South Carolina had a constitutional provision prohibiting equity investments. Voters changed that three years ago to allow stock market investments by the plan that covers more than 200,000 teachers, state employees and local government workers.

The almost $918 million first investment represents about 5 percent of the South Carolina Retirement System's $18 billion. It will be put in a portfolio that tracks the Standard & Poor's 500 Index, according to the plan drawn up by the Retirement System's investment advisory panel.

South Carolina eventually wants to invest about 40 percent of its retirement fund.

Gunman wounds six in Georgia school attack

By James Pilcher
Associated Press

CONYERS, Ga. — A boy upset over a broken romance shot and wounded six students Thursday in yet another school attack in a comfortable suburban community, then fell to his knees, stuck a gun in his mouth and surrendered in tears.

"Oh, my God, I'm so scared," he said.

Exactly a month after the bloodbath in Colorado, the 15-year-old sophomore, armed with two guns, opened fire with a rifle about 7:55 a.m., 20 minutes before classes were to begin at Heritage High School. It was the final day of class for seniors.

Witnesses said the gunman was running and shooting at no one in particular and firing at students below the waist so as not to kill them.

"People were falling on the floor, a lot of screaming, people trying to help each other," said Joel Thomas, 14.

Students in the common area and cafeteria dived for cover under benches and behind planters. Others raced outside the long one-story red brick building into the parking lot and an area of tall pines.

The suspect was not identified by authorities. He was charged as a juvenile with aggravated assault, and prosecutors also were considering charging him with weapons violations and cruelty to children, District Attorney Richard Read said.

The gunman must go before a juvenile court judge before he can be charged as an adult, and that probably won't take place until Monday, Read said.

None of the victims' wounds were considered life-threatening. The girlfriend who had broken up with the gunman was not among the wounded.

A robot removes a suspicious backpack from Heritage High School in Conyers, Ga., Thursday, after a student opened fire at the school. The backback was destroyed by officials and turned out to be harmless.

Heritage, 20 miles east of Atlanta, is a mostly white, suburban school, like Columbine High in Littleton, Colo. About 80 percent of graduates go on to college.

After the Columbine High rampage, which left 15 people dead, Heritage officials had sent letters to parents of the 1,300 students to assure them that a similar attack was unlikely at their school.

"Every day since then I've been thinking about whether it could happen here," said Chris Scroggs, 15. "Last night I was thinking that this might be the day."

Even before the massacre in Colorado, Heritage had video surveillance cameras in the hallways and an armed sheriff's deputy on duty during school hours. The deputy didn't exchange fire with the gunman Thursday, and it was unclear where he was during the shooting.

President Clinton was about to leave for Littleton when he received word of the Georgia shooting. The news "is deeply troubling to me, as it is to all Americans," he said. "We thank God that the injuries to the students do not seem to be life-threatening."

After wounding six students, the gunman dropped the rifle and walked outside. He pulled out a .22-caliber pistol and pointed it through a window at senior Joe Watts.

"He stood there with the gun, then he dropped to his knees and put it in his mouth like he was going to shoot himself and he started waving his hands around and pulling the back of his hair," Watts said.

Then an assistant principal came over. "He said, 'Let me have the gun,' and the boy flipped the gun over and handed it to him," Watts said.

"And when he got the gun from him, he just quickly put his arm around him and held him and the boy started crying and said: 'Oh my God. I'm so scared. I'm so scared.'"

Four of the wounded students were expected to be hospitalized overnight. The most seriously hurt was a 15-year-old girl who underwent surgery after a bullet hit her in the buttocks and passed through to her intestines.

Nathaniel Deeter, a 15-year-old sophomore, said the gunman's girlfriend of one year had broken up with him this week. He talked to the boy about the breakup on Wednesday.

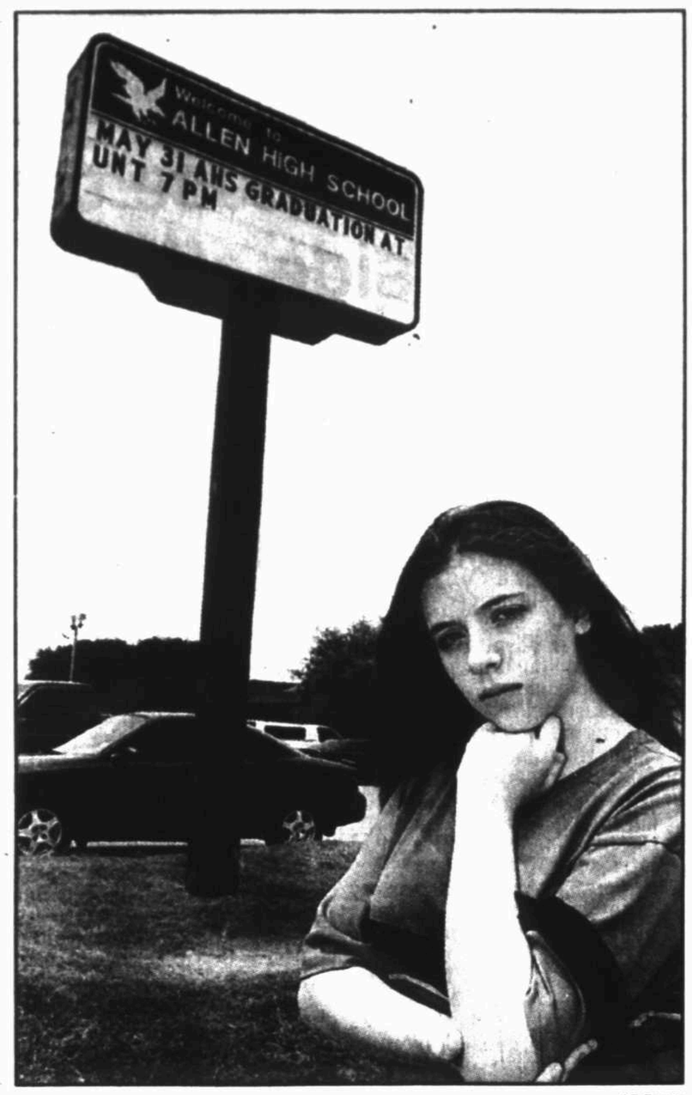

"He said, 'I have no reason to live anymore.'" Deeter said. "And I told him he was crazy. I thought he was just feeling sorry for himself because a lot of kids feel like that."

Chris Dunn, a sophomore, said he had seen guns at the teen-ager's home but never heard him mention plans to shoot anyone at school.

But Katie Bir, a freshman and a friend of the gunman's ex-girlfriend, said: "People have been saying he's been wanting to do this all year long."

Deeter said he chatted with the gunman about 10 minutes before the shooting started. The gunman was wearing a baggy pullover and loose pants, and Deeter didn't see any weapons.

During the shooting, Deeter said, his eyes locked with the gunman's for a moment. "He had a chance to shoot me when I was in the commons area and he shot the kid next to me in the foot," Deeter said.

Jennifer Boccia, a 17-year-old junior, poses in front of Allen High School, Thursday, in Allen. The American Civil Liberties Union of Texas is helping Boccia appeal an in-school suspension she received after refusing to remove a black armband protestesting school policies enacted after the Colorado school shooting spree.

ACLU helps Allen student fight school suspension

By Susan Parrott

DALLAS — The American Civil Liberties Union, which says some school officials have trampled students' rights since last month's shootings in Littleton, Colo., is going to bat for an Allen High School junior.

Jennifer Boccia was suspended from the suburban Dallas school for wearing a black armband to protest school policies enacted after the Colorado tragedy.

Allen school officials refused comment on the case but said the district has the right to enforce a dress code that bans "disruptions of the educational process."

The school district last week gained national attention for calling off regular classes two weeks before the end of the school year because of a flurry of bomb threats.

Diana Philip, director for the North Texas region of the ACLU, said school officials across the nation are becoming overzealous in their attempts to maintain safety.

In Texas, students have been punished for merely talking about the Colorado shootings or wearing clothing that officials suddenly deemed inappropriate, she said.

"We are seeing school officials who are taking more a punitive mode rather than a communicative one. It's an ongoing perception that we need to somehow be afraid of young people."

Ms. Boccia, 17, wants the Allen Independent School District to expunge a one-day in-school suspension from her record.

Ms. Philip is urging Ms. Boccia to seek a remedy to her situation through school district channels, but she added that the ACLU is considering a lawsuit.

"I am in the process of contacting my state legal panel this morning," she said.

Ms. Boccia was among 10 Allen High School students who decided to wear black armbands in late April to protest new security measures at the school.

Ms. Boccia said students had been told not to wear trench coats, were questioned if they wore black clothing and subjected to random searches of their belongings.

'They called a school assembly and told us they take bomb threats and our comments seriously. They were treating us like we had already done something wrong. That was making the situation worse instead of better.'

— Jennifer Boccia, who was suspended from school for wearing a black armband

"They called a school assembly and told us they take bomb threats and our comments seriously," she said. "They were treating us like we had already done something wrong. That was making the situation worse instead of better."

Ms. Boccia and her friends got the idea to wear armbands from a government class. They had studied the 1969 Supreme Court case Tinker v. Des Moines School District in which students were allowed to wear black armbands to protest the Vietnam War.

The teen-agers wore the armbands for three days before school officials told them to stop.

That's when Ms. Boccia said she gave a copy of the Supreme Court ruling to an assistant principal. She said that, to her surprise, the principal ran the document through a paper shredder.

The next day, Ms. Boccia and another student received in-school suspensions for continuing to wear the armbands. Boccia and her parents have appealed the decision.

Clinton talks to Littleton families, calls violence 'deeply troubling'

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — On a day of more school bloodshed, President Clinton consoled grief-stricken families in the town where a murder-suicide rampage by two teen-agers one month ago left 15 dead and shocked the nation.

Clinton said the latest shootings, injuring six students in Georgia Thursday, were "deeply troubling to me as it is to all Americans."

"This incident again should underscore how profoundly important it is that all Americans come together in the face of these events to protect all of our children from violence," the president said at the White House before flying here.

The Columbine High School shootings on April 20 also had an effect on the nation's debate on gun control, softening Republican opposition in Congress to tougher measures.

The latest step came Thursday as the Senate, after angry calls from constituents, approved a Democratic plan to require background checks for buyers at gun shows. Vice President Al Gore cast the deciding vote; Clinton called him from Air Force One with congratulations.

The president, joined by his wife Hillary, talked privately with families of victims of the April 20 massacre at Columbine High School. They met at Light of the World Catholic Church, where counselors had worked with survivors the shootings.

Clinton was embraced by several family members when he walked in. Others shook his hand.

The families were seated at 14 tables in the church, the Clintons went from table to table, sitting and talking. There were about 75 people in all.

The president also was speaking at Dakota Ridge High School to Columbine students, rescuers and community leaders, before returning to Washington. Mrs. Clinton joined the president after a morning trip to the Grand Canyon. Her plane had problems that caused her to arrive here a half hour late.

Clinton has stepped forward many times to try to heal a community's pain, after floods, tornadoes, an earthquake, the Oklahoma City bombing and a school shooting in Oregon a year ago.

On Wednesday night, he called five Columbine students who are still hospitalized.

Seizing on the Columbine shootings, Clinton has begun a national campaign against school violence, urging more gun control and less violence in movies, music and video games.

Clinton's visit came on the same day that six students were wounded in a new shooting incident at high school in Conyers, Ga.

Bush announces grant to fund school violence program

AUSTIN (AP) — On the day a Georgia student opened fire on classmates, Gov. George W. Bush announced an initiative aimed at reducing violence in Texas schools.

Bush's office Thursday awarded a $420,000 grant to Southwest Texas State University for creation of the Texas School Safety Center to help reduce violence on campus.

The action comes a month after two students with guns and bombs killed 13 people and then themselves at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., and the same day a student wounded six others at a high school near Atlanta, Ga.

"It is obviously a part of the American tragedy that children are coming to school and shooting people. And our society has got to do everything we can to figure out ways to prohibit violence," Bush said.

"Schools should be places where children can learn without fear. Unfortunately, events of recent years have shown too often they are not."

Bush, who opinion polls show is a leading Republican presidential prospect, said the new school safety center "will identify ways to make schools safer for our children and teachers."

The center's staff will train teams of people, including law enforcement officers, parents and educators, to develop safety plans tailored for individual school districts. The plans will help with both security issues and identifying and preventing behavior that can lead to violence, officials said.

According to the Texas Education Agency, there were some 200,000 assaults against students and 18,000 assaults against teachers in the past four academic years. In addition, about 31,000 weapons were confiscated in schools during that period, the TEA reports.

Such statistics have caused parents, educators and children to become concerned about school safety, Bush's office said.

The new school violence center, to be located on the San Marcos university campus, has been in the planning stages for about three months.

"We saw a need to help our schools prevent violence and provide our children with positive environments in which to learn and grow," said Richard Nedelkoff, who heads the criminal justice division of the governor's office.

Margaret Dunn, leader of SWT's Center for Initiatives in Education, will direct the new project. It should mesh with work the university already has been doing, she said.

"We have worked extensively with juvenile justice professionals, and we have operated programs in classroom management and discipline, drug and alcohol abuse prevention, and dropout prevention serving schools throughout the state," Ms. Dunn said.

Cheek to cheek

Midlanders Jerry and Eloise Covington dance Thursday at the West Texas Jazz Society's premiere jazz event featuring 18 world-class jazz musicians during jam sessions from 8 p.m. to midnight today and Saturday at the Midland Hilton, 117 W. Wall. Single admission tickets are $35 at the door. For more information, call 800-458-2878 between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. today. The event combines Odessa's 33rd annual Jazz Party and the 18th annual Midland Jazz Classic. Performers include Ralph Sutton and Johnny Varro, piano; Keter Betts, Jack Lesberg and Lynn Seaton, bass; Joe Ascione and Jack Hanna, drums; Ed Polcer and Randy Sandke, trumpet; Harry Allen, Jim Galloway and Ken Peplowski, reeds; Dan Barrett and Bill Watrous, trombone; Rebecca Kilgore, vocalist; and as special guests, the John Pizzarelli Trio featuring John Pizzarelli, guitar and vocals, Ray Kennedy, piano, and Martin Pizzarelli, bass.

HENKEL: Judge allows postponement of trial

and Ralph Petty said the latest delay has already caused some trouble with witness availability. At least two are in the military. One could be sent to Kosovo soon, and the other is already in Korea.

"We had difficulty in locating the witnesses for Billy Henkel's trial — and that was just 18 months after the wreck," Petty said.

"As the kids get older, we don't rely on their parents to get their whereabouts," Ms. Clingman added.

When debating the change of venue, the defense called two local attorneys who said they do not think Ms. Henkel could not get a fair trial in Midland.

One attorney claimed the case has received more attention than the 1995 capital murder trial of Henry Lopez Ortiz, who raped and killed a 12-year-old girl he met at his apartment complex. His trial was eventually moved to Amarillo.

The two attorneys said they have talked to many people who have already decided that Ms. Henkel has more culpability than her husband — even though her case has not been tried. Garcia and Leverett blamed their bias on the local news media's coverage.

Both the Midland and Odessa newspapers and three local TV stations covered the Henkel case throughout the eight-day trial, they said.

But the media "never did an investigation into the background of Tena Henkel," Petty said, adding that the coverage was factual and strictly based on court proceedings.

The state called district attorney's investigator Patrick Bostick as a witness. He testified that prosecutors kept the lid closed tightly on the Henkel case until after Henkel's conviction. Then the coverage stopped — until this week, Bostick said.

He said he thinks the case might have received more media attention because the case involved three defendants: the Henkels and Joe DeLaO, the teen-age driver.

In comparison, recent murder trials have only had one defendant, he said. The two other defendants had their day in court before Ms. Henkel, Bostick said.

Hyde ruled that Ms. Henkel's case will be tried in Midland County — unless the court can not find enough objective jurors, he said. If that happens, the defense can file another motion to try the case outside of Midland, Hyde said.

Possible amendments try to reshape waste bill

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

The death of the original radioactive waste bill has shed light on concerns with the new House bill written by Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown (R-Lake Jackson).

Amendments and issues coved in the original bill, written by Rep. Warren Chisum (R-Pampa), are scheduled to be put before the Senate as amendments to the new bill, according to Heather Young, political analyst for Rep. Lon Burnam of Fort Worth.

The following is a list the possible amendments:

■ The Texas Department of Health will require that a public hearing and prior public notice take place before any major amendments to a disposal license.

■ A community will have to vote on whether or not they want the site.

■ A company must have approval of a landowner before accessing public or private property for a disposal or assured isolation site.

■ An amendment that does not allow a facility to be built in an area that receives more than 26 inches of rain.

■ The amount of out-of-state waste must be limited to 10 percent of the volume expected to be receive at the Texas-Maine-Vermont compact site.

■ An affected party can sue if the limit is not complied with.

■ Defining assured isolation as permanent disposal so the state can use this means in the Texas-Maine-Vermont compact as a form of disposal.

WASTE: Legislation set to go to Texas Senate floor today

(From 1B)

Dornsife said at a Low-level Waste Forum in San Diego in February that "WCS will have a license application ready the day any legislation passes in Texas allowing for WCS to take commercial low-level waste. However, we will not go forward unless they can take DOE wastes.

"Compact waste alone would escalate the price for everyone," Dornsife said. "We would have to cover our overhead costs. By including DOE waste, it would balance the cost for and make it less expensive for us and we can pass the savings down to the customers."

MENACE: Midnight showing draws fans, curious

premiere. At the box office, we decided to buy two more tickets instead of one, just in case. By the time May 18 rolled around, we could have used dozens of tickets. Everyone wanted to go at midnight, and most moms had said yes, as long as someone else was driving.

About 10:45 p.m., we began the quest of collecting the moviegoers. That took longer than expected because the first one picked up was my brother's friend who had his midnights mixed up. He thought the premiere was the next night. A true "Star Wars" fan, he jumped out of bed and headed for the movies.

The parking lot was filled and the line to get in the theater wrapped around the building. It was looking dismal. The people around us weren't average Midland moviegoers. Many were dressed in "Star Wars" costumes, and light sabers were glowing like the stars. At the concession stand, the guy ahead of me was dressed like Obi-Wan Kenobi and shot out his light saber as he gave his order. The girl waiting on him tolerated it, but she obviously had not requested to work the "Star Wars" crowd.

"Star Wars" was premiering on two screens. As we entered the movie theater, the suspense began to build. I was tempted to stand up and announce in an official voice that the reel was broken, and "Star Wars' would not be shown. My friend convinced me that our bodies would never be found.

Excitement was mounting, and light sabers were flashing like crazy.

Finally, the manager announced it was time to start the premiere.

He assured us that even though we were the second group to get in, we would be the first in Midland to see "Star Wars," because they would be starting our movie a few minutes before the other screen. I'm sure his assistant gave the same spiel to the other group. The whole crowd counted down and ... the previews began.

Though my contact lenses burned like fire, it was quite an experience. The special effects blew the mind as magnificent ships did battle, robots interacted and beautiful cities were unveiled. And, let us not forget why half the people were there: the sinister Darth Maul was everything every "Star Wars" fanatic could have hoped for, with his double-blade light saber that he used in fighting two (yes, two!) Jedi knights at once. And of course, like the original, some whinny snot-nosed kid saves the day.

After the movie, my friend was interviewed by two television stations. To one, he sang the praises of the movie, raving about how much he loved it. To the other one, he said, "It was OK." One station asked him if he could tell which parts were virtual reality, to which he replied, "No, there's a ton of those aliens in Hollywood."

Time meant nothing as we returned wearily to our beds, quoting the movie and battling with imaginary light sabers. The magic of the movie lingered in the air. By 6:30 the next morning, the magic had mysteriously disappeared.

SPRING — Former star Baylor recruit Ben Gay says he's headed for Garden City Community College in Kansas after his dismissal from the Bears.

The running back from this north Houston suburb told TV station KRIV he has been recruited heavily since his dismissal earlier this month.

"My phone has been ringing off the hook," he said.

Gay said he's been talking to Florida State, Syracuse, Kansas State, North Carolina, South Carolina and other schools.

Gay was not allowed to play his freshman year at Baylor because he was a partial academic qualifier, though he said grades had nothing to do with his dismissal. The school did not discuss why he was dismissed.

Williams' number

AUSTIN — The University of Texas Longhorns will retire football jersey number 34, which was worn by Heisman Trophy winner Ricky Williams during a career in which he set the NCAA Division I career rushing record.

"Everybody in the world knew we'd probably do this — it was nobody's bright idea," men's athletics director DeLoss Dodds said after the UT men's athletic council voted for the honor on Wednesday.

Solansky vaults into UT program

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High pole vaulter Wes Solansky received a surprise birthday present Saturday in Austin, and it wasn't the bronze medal he won at the UIL State Championships.

Solansky had caught the eye of University of Texas pole vault coach Dan Pfaff, and when Solansky left the Capital City, he had a scholarship offer to go with a state medal. On Tuesday, Solansky signed a letter-of-intent to become part of the Longhorns' next freshman class.

"I was expecting Division II, not Division I," said Solansky, who had talked to Oral Roberts University and Southwest Texas State. "It took a couple of days to set in."

All year long, Solansky had a goal to make the state meet and getting there paid off.

"You make it to the state track meet. There are coaches from all over the nation, watching and taking notes," MHS track coach Wes Cope said. "That (vaulting at the state meet) did more to get a scholarship than anything we have done in three years. He and coach (Todd) Peterman have spent an awful lot of hours working on the pole vault. This is their reward."

Solansky said Tuesday he was not thrilled with his showing in Austin. In warmups, Solansky broke his longest vaulting pole and ended up vaulting only 15 feet. He had been vaulting as high as 16-9 in practice leading up to the meet.

"I could have jumped higher and not impressed the coaches as much," Solansky said. "It was better the way it happened. My speed and everything are what the coach told me impressed him. I had to worry about technique.

"It made me feel a lot better, knowing they saw what I

Feeling Right at Home

Rebs play host again in playoffs

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

Good fortune never hurts once a team makes the playoffs, and it might be safe to say that the Midland Lee baseball team isn't feeling any pain.

For the second round in a row, the Rebels won't have to leave their own backyard for the Region I-5A playoffs. Thanks to correctly guessing odd for the final digit of a small Texas town's ZIP code, Lee coach Jesse Benavidez won't have to prepare his team for a hostile road crowd.

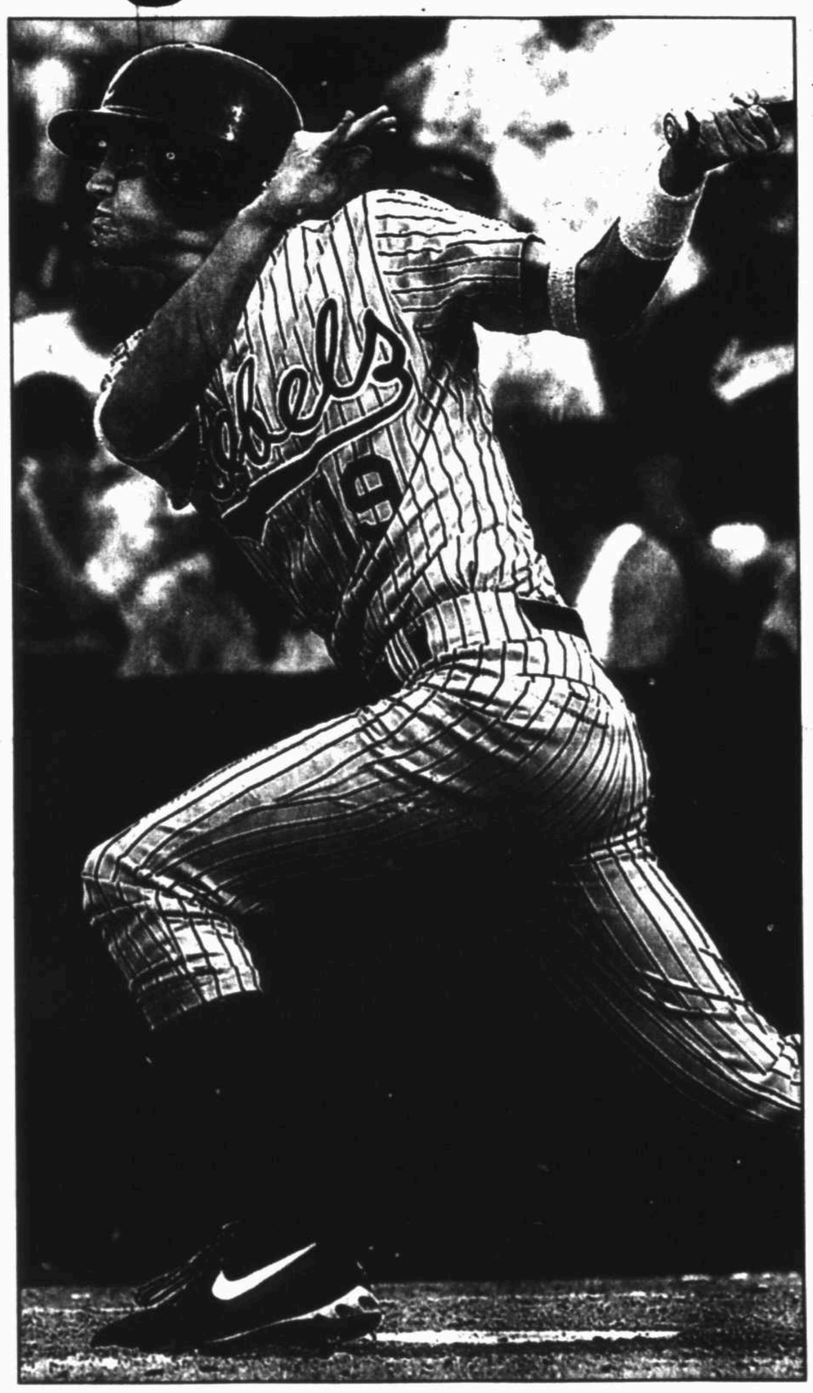

The Rebels will host No. 9 El Paso Socorro in the first game of the best-of-three regional quarterfinal series today at 4:30 p.m. at Ernie Johnson Field. The series continues Saturday at 11 a.m. with a third game, if necessary, to follow 30 minutes later.

Last week, Lee (25-6) won the right to host the best-of-three area round series against El Paso Coronado by winning a coin flip. The Rebels won the series in three games. It's rare that a team could reach the regional semifinals — where the Rebels will head if they beat Socorro — without having to venture out of its own town.

"You usually have to leave one time," said Benavidez, well aware of the double stroke of good luck his team has received. "We were thinking Alpine (as a neutral site), but (Socorro) called and wanted to go two out of three home and home."

Who could blame Socorro for feeling lucky? The week before, the school's athletic director guessed correctly in

LEE PASSMORE

MHS coach has perspective on series

Passmore

The El Paso Socorro baseball team ended the regular season ranked No. 9 in the state and is now the highest-ranked team remaining in the Region I-5A playoffs. If Socorro makes it to the state tournament, the Bulldogs will have found that the road to Austin required a long stopover through Midland.

For the second weekend in a row, Socorro will face a Midland school in the playoffs, when the Bulldogs come to town to face Midland Lee in the first game of the best-of-three region quarterfinals at 4:30 p.m. This series will complete the El Paso-Midland gauntlet for the season. It started last weekend when Socorro hosted Midland High and swept MHS in the area round series.

Aside from Lee's Jesse Benavidez and Socorro's Chris Forbes, there probably isn't a coach in the state who has more interest in this series than Midland High's Barry Russell. It might be safe to say that no coach anywhere knows more about the two teams matching up at Ernie Johnson Field than Russell.

Midland High had a highly successful season by any standard, finishing 26-9 before losing to Socorro. MHS

Chaps drop to 5th place at nationals

Staff Report

DOTHAN, Ala. — The Midland College golf team has its work cut out if it expects to bring home a third national title.

The Chaps shot its best round of the tournament Thursday at the Highland Oaks Golf Course but still dropped to fifth in the team standings. Midland College will go into today's final round 21 strokes out of the lead held by Central Alabama Community College.

Central Alabama carded a best third round (285) to move its three-day total to 872. Scottsdale Community College, the leader after two rounds, is second at 877. Wallace Community College-Dothan is third at 888, while Brevard Community College and MC round out the top five.

The Chaps have never finished lower than sixth in the last 12 national tournaments. This year should be no different. Twelve strokes separates MC from sixth-place Pima Community College.

"Our goal tomorrow is to move from fifth to third, and we are capable of doing that," MC golf coach Delnor Poss said. "We still haven't played anywhere close to our capabilities. These young men deserve a better fate, and I believe they will have an exceptional round and we'll finish in third place."

There are a couple of Chaps still in the hunt for all-American honors. Ernie Rose is fifth after Day 3 with a total of

The Midland High Bulldogs take their final exam of Football 101 at 7 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium.

The Bulldogs end their three-week crash spring training course tonight with the annual Purple-White scrimmage, a test that will be for public consumption. And MHS head football coach David Browning is ready to show the wares produced by toil.

"It's been a very competitive spring," Browning said. "You can sure tell that we are way ahead, especially on defense, from where we were three years ago when we started."

A regular game format will be in place with a few exceptions. There will be no kickoffs, with teams starting play at the 35-yard line. The quarters will be 15 minutes with no stop until the final two minutes of each half. Field goals and extra points will be allowed, but with no rush.

"This won't be a long game," Browning said. "I would like for it to be about 1 1/2 hours.

Coahoma goes after its second straight Class 2A softball crown

By Stewart Doreen

COAHOMA — Nobody has to tell the Coahoma softball team how good it is.

"We think of ourselves as a (Class) 2A powerhouse," said Cassie Tindol, a four-year starter for Coahoma.

The Lady Bulldogs have a high opinion of themselves and rightfully so. This year, they are 28-3 and the champions of Region I. This weekend, they will make their third trip in four years to the state tournament.

Also, their recent history is as good as anyone's. In the previous three seasons, the Bulldogettes have advanced to the state tournament twice. Last year, they won the Class 2A state title.

This weekend at the UIL Softball Championships, Coahoma will try to become the first team to win consecutive state softball titles since softball became a UIL sport in 1993.

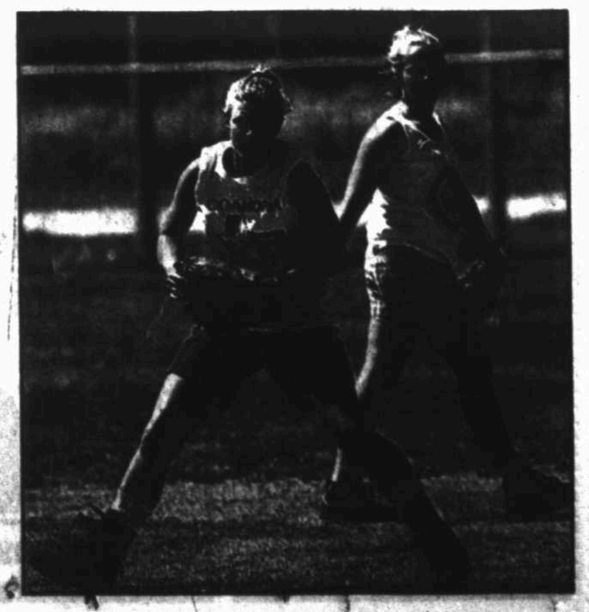

Today, Coahoma faces Como-Pickton in one of the semifinal matchups. The Lady Eagles are the only undefeated team in 2A at 26-0.

"One of our biggest goals is to repeat," Kelli Buchanan said. "It is one of the most amazing feelings in the world to know that you are one of the four best teams in the state. We are excited and nervous."

Buchanan joins Tindol and Misty Baker as the team's only seniors. The three are a big part of West Texas' most successful program. They also say that the success will continue.

Missouri eliminates Tech in 12 innings

Associated Press

■ Big 12 Tournament

OKLAHOMA CITY — Designated hitter Jake Epstein drove in the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning Thursday as Missouri edged out Texas Tech 8-7 in the longest game in the history of the Big 12 baseball tournament.

Epstein had a total of three RBIs on 4-of-7 batting. The winning hit was a single.

Missouri (36-18) advanced to play the loser of the Baylor-Texas game.

Texas Tech (40-15) was eliminated. The Red Raiders were two and out, with the first loss recorded Wednesday against Texas.

Missouri led 7-4 after six innings, but Tech rallied to tie the game 7-7 in the top of the seventh. All three runs scored on a home run by Josh Bard.

Neither team scored over the next four innings.

Brandon Roberson (2-4), the last of four Missouri pitchers, gave up seven hits in 6 1/3 innings. He took the loss.

Chris George (4-3) was the winner in relief. He came on in the sixth inning and gave up two hits while striking out eight.

Texas A&M 4, Oklahoma St. 2

OKLAHOMA CITY — Casey Fossum pitched a complete game Thursday as top-seeded Texas A&M stayed alive in the Big 12 baseball tournament by eliminating Oklahoma State, 4-2.

Fossum (10-5) struck out 10 and walked two in helping Aggies (45-13) advance to play either Oklahoma or Nebraska on Friday. It was Oklahoma that knocked A&M into the loser's bracket with a 10-5 victory Wednesday.

Oklahoma State (40-17) went two and out in the conference tournament for the first time since 1979.

The Aggies took a 1-0 lead on a home run by Steve Scarborough leading off the game. Thom Dreier (8-4) allowed another run in the second and was relieved by Frank Bludau in the fourth. What proved to be the winning run scored in the sixth on back-to-back doubles by Sean Heaney and Greg Porter.

Fossum gave up a two-run homer to Jay McCullough in the bottom of the sixth. He allowed a one-out double to Jimbo McAuliff in the ninth, but worked out of the jam.

"I had a plan that I was pitching to," the left-hander said. "I knew that my job was to pitch a complete game so that we could save some people that will be ready tomorrow. I'm a little tired, but it was worth it."

Porter and Shawn Schumacher had two hits each for A&M. McCullough, McAuliff and Billy Gasparino did the same for the Cowboys.

The victory was the 661st for coach Mark Johnson, moving him past Tom Chandler atop the A&M career list.

Nebraska 14, Oklahoma 7

OKLAHOMA CITY — Jarod Bearinger shut Oklahoma down after coming on in the third inning and Nebraska put together 15 hits to beat the Sooners 14-7 Thursday night and stay unbeaten in the Big 12 tournament.

The fifth-seeded Cornhuskers (39-16) will play Saturday against the survivor of Friday's elimination game between No. 1 seed Texas A&M and Oklahoma. The Sooners (30-28) beat A&M in the first round Wednesday, but the Aggies responded with a victory over Oklahoma State.

Nebraska scored four runs in the first inning off Kyle Denney (4-6) and never trailed. However, Oklahoma kept things interesting by scoring three runs in the second inning and one more in the third to tie the game.

Bearinger (3-1) came on in relief of Shane Komine, got out of the third-inning trouble and went the final 6 2/3, allowing just three more runs, two of them earned.

John Cole's two-run triple was the big hit in Nebraska's first inning. Cole finished with three RBIs.

The Cornhuskers broke the tie for good with a run in the bottom of the third, added two more in the fourth and sixth, then sealed things with a four-run eighth.

Ventura hits 2 grand slams in double-dip

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

NEW YORK — Robin Ventura became the first major leaguer to hit grand slams in both games of a doubleheader, leading the New York Mets to a sweep over the Milwaukee Brewers on Thursday night.

Ventura hit his first slam against Jim Abbott in the first inning of the opener. He hit a 3-2 pitch high down the right-field line, just ... the outstretched glove of Jeromy Burnitz, in an 11-10 win.

The second was nearly a replica. He came up with the bases loaded in the fourth inning of the nightcap and again worked the count full. He hit a high fly to nearly the same spot in right, but Burnitz could only watch as it cleared the wall. The Mets won the game 10-1.

Ventura also became the first player ever to twice hit two slams in a day. He had two slams in a game for the Chicago White Sox at Texas on Sept. 4, 1995. Ten players have done it once.

The two slams gave Ventura a total of 12 in his career, one behind Harold Baines for the active lead. Mark McGwire and Ken Griffey Jr. also have 12.

In the opener, Benny Agbayani went 4-for-4 with two homers and Roger Cedeno threw out Alex Ochoa at the plate to end the game.

Al Leiter (2-4) was the winner and John Franco got his 12th save. Abbott (0-5) lost his fifth straight start.

In the second game, Masato Yoshii (4-3) was the winner and Steve Woodard (3-4) took the loss.

Cubs 6, Braves 5, 12 innings

ATLANTA — Sammy Sosa homered again, connecting against struggling Greg Maddux, and the Chicago Cubs beat the Atlanta Braves in 12 innings.

Lance Johnson's sacrifice fly in the 12th gave the Cubs their fourth straight victory. Atlanta, which had won four in a row, sent the game into extra innings on Gerald Williams' solo homer in the ninth.

Sosa hit his fourth home run in four games, and ninth in 15 games. His solo shot in the first inning was his 13th homer of the season.

Maddux was spared losing his fourth straight start, something he has not done since a career-worst eight-game losing streak in 1990. Still, the four-time Cy Young winner was stuck with a 5.02 ERA.

Cardinals 6, Padres 4

SAN DIEGO — Eric Davis hit a two-run homer and Mark McGwire and Joe McEwing had solo shots, leading Kent Bottenfield and the St. Louis Cardinals over the San Diego Padres.

Tony Gwynn flied out with runners on second and third against Ricky Bottalico to end the game. Gwynn finished 0-for-5, leaving him 25 hits short of 3,000.

Bottalico got five outs for his third save. On Wednesday night, he walked the only three batters he faced and threw a wild pitch in the ninth inning, taking the loss as San Diego rallied for four runs to win 7-6.

Rockies 8, Diamondbacks 4

DENVER — Kurt Abbott, who had three hits all season, went 3-for-4 with his first homer and the Colorado Rockies took advantage of shaky Arizona defense to beat the Diamondbacks.

Dante Bichette hit his second career homer off Randy Johnson (4-2) as the Rockies scored three unearned runs to hand the Big Unit his first loss since April 15.

PASSMORE: Russell predicts close game

played Lee and Socorro a combined six times this season and lost five of those games, a testimony to the quality of the teams facing off in town this weekend.

Russell has seen the strengths and weaknesses of Lee and Socorro up close and is aware of the quality of both teams.

"Socorro doesn't make many mistakes and they have a lot of playoff experience, but I think Lee will match them there," Russell said. "I think Lee has better hitters all the way through the lineup, but Socorro doesn't strike out a lot and they put a lot of guys on base."

In the first game of last week's series, Socorro put its ranking on display against Midland High and silenced doubters with a 10-0 in a five-inning run rule game. Socorro right-hander Bernie Minjares seemed to taunt Midland High, giving up only four hits and getting the Bulldogs to ground into two early double plays. Omar Quintanilla hit a mammoth three-run home run which put the game away.

The next day, though, Socorro looked highly mortal. Midland High scratched out to a 3-1 lead against Socorro left-hander Adrian Soto while MHS right-hander Aaron Pullin kept Socorro in check. Eventually, Socorro's Bulldogs pecked away and scored two runs in the top of the seventh to pull out a 5-3 win.

Socorro threatened often in that second game, but left 12 runners on base, and only pushed across the eventual winning runs against Pullin on a bases-loaded walk and a sacrifice fly. Of the 11 hits Socorro had against Pullin, only one was for extra bases.

Russell thinks that game might be the type of battle Lee and Socorro will engage in.

"I think the second game (of the MHS-Socorro series) was indicative of how (Lee and Socorro) will match up," Russell said. "The main thing I heard about Socorro is that they are going to compete and find a way to win."

The same could be said when Midland High and Lee face off, which would have happened again had MHS beaten Socorro twice last Saturday. The Rebels and the Bulldogs played two tight, exciting District 4-5A games, with Lee overcoming a 7-0 deficit to win the district opener 12-10 and Midland High scoring six runs in the bottom of the seventh to win the second meeting 11-10.

This has been the best year for Midland high school baseball since 1991, when both Lee and Midland High made the playoffs. An MHS-Lee meeting in the region quarterfinals for ultimate Tall City bragging rights would have been the perfect capper, but it took a team of Socorro's quality to end that dream.

And now the No. 9 team in the state is in round two against the Midland schools, and they'll be in hostile territory.

"I think if Lee plays the game they're capable of playing, they'll beat Socorro," Russell said. "That home field advantage could be worth two runs. If they get to a third game, that's big."

For Socorro, that will determine if Midland was a mere stopover or a stop sign.

LEE: Rebels host another playoff series

the ZIP code game with Midland High, forcing MHS to head west for the area round series. Socorro swept the Bulldogs in two games.

The ZIP code game is a kind of long-distance coin flip which lets coaches fairly decide an issue — like who will host a playoff series — even when the coaches are 300 miles apart and a coin flip will not do. All Texas coaches have directories which include all Texas high schools. By telephone, one coach names a random school, the other immediately guesses "odd" or "even" for the fifth digit in that school's ZIP code.

Monday morning, Socorro coach Chris Forbes selected the town of Krum, northeast of Denton. Benavidez guessed odd. Krum's ZIP code is 76249, so Lee gets to play at home for the second straight week.

For Forbes, it was a risk worth taking.

"We've played on the road before," said Forbes, whose team reached the regional finals last season. "Last year during the playoffs we played all of our games away. It was a 50-50 chance."

Regardless of where Socorro (23-5) ends up playing, you can't fault Forbes for liking his team's chances. At a time of the season when pitching is at a premium, Socorro wheeled out two aces against Midland High, and the Bulldogs had no answer for them.

Particularly effective for Socorro was right-hander Bernie Minjares, who defeated MHS 10-0 in a five-inning run rule decision in the first game of the series. Midland High had only four hits off Minjares, all singles.

Naturally, Benavidez is using Midland High as a measuring stick as preparation for the series, since the Bulldogs are the most common opponent for Lee and Socorro. The Rebels defeated Midland High three times in four games this season, and they scored 22 runs in their two district games with the Bulldogs.

"I feel like we've got to play just like we did against Midland High this season," Benavidez said. "(Minjares) shut them down on four hits and that ought to be a motivational factor for our kids. You've got to realize these teams wouldn't be up here in the playoffs unless they were good enough to win every time."

Benavidez is hoping the series against Coronado was a wake-up call for his team. Lee's bats came alive during the series, hitting six home runs, including two apiece from Josh Haney and Eric Clodfelter, whose two-run blast gave the Rebels an 8-6 win in the first game.

The pitching wasn't as strong, as five Lee pitchers combined to surrender five homers and 20 runs in the three games. Such a performance against Socorro might mean an early exit for the Rebels.

"We'll have to keep the ball down," said Benavidez of his pitching staff. "Even though we might get ahead in the count we've got to be consistent about where we get the ball down. We can waste a pitch and get them to hit the pitch we want them to."

Benavidez wasn't committed on who would start the first game today. Collin Gilliam started the first game against Coronado, and gave up nine hits in five innings in a no-decision. Eric Neatherlin went five innings in the final game, a run rule-shortened 19-3 Lee win.

Regardless of who pitches for the Rebels, they'll be focusing on Socorro's Nos. 3 and 4 hitters, Omar Quintanilla and Alonzo Ruelas, both returners from last year's squad. Quintanilla hit a three-run homer in last week's first game against Midland High.

Forbes wasn't saying who would start today's game either. While Minjares, now 10-0 on the season, might seem like the obvious choice, left-hander Adrian Soto isn't a bad second choice. Soto pitched a tough second game to beat Midland High 5-3, while Minjares pitched the final inning for the save.

"Our pitching is OK, but it's not great," said Forbes, underplaying an obvious strength. "We're going to have to make (the Rebels) do some things they don't want to do."

In any case, Lee has survived one round of the playoff pressure-cooker and could be the wiser for it. Things won't be any easier against Socorro, and the Rebels realize it.

"We've to be a little more up for Socorro," said Clodfelter, who drove in six runs and won the first game on the mound against Coronado. "We can't be too loose against Socorro. They're the No. 9 team in the state and we know they're good because of what they did to Midland High."

Yankees salvage finale of series against Sox

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

BOSTON — Orlando Hernandez and the New York Yankees shook their losing ways Thursday night, beating the Boston Red Sox 3-1 to salvage the finale of their three-game series.

Hernandez (4-4) pitched two-hit ball for eight innings, ending his three-game losing streak. Mariano Rivera closed as the Yankees won for just the second time in nine games.

Joe Torre got his first win since returning as Yankees manager after a two-month absence following surgery for prostate cancer. He lost the other two games.

Bernie Williams homered and had a sacrifice fly as New York reduced Boston's AL East lead to a half-game. The Red Sox are 11-3 in their last 14 games and ended a streak of 13 games with 10 hits or more.

Angels 6, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Todd Greene snapped a tie with a sixth-inning homer as the Anaheim Angels beat the Baltimore Orioles after blowing a four-run lead.

Garret Anderson had three hits and Andy Sheets drove in two runs to help Anaheim hand Baltimore its eighth loss in 10 games. Cal Ripken hit his 387th homer for the Orioles, who fell 12 games under .500.

Down 6-4 in the eighth, Baltimore loaded the bases with one out before Jeff Conine hit a foul popup to first baseman Chris Pritchett. B.J. Surhoff, thinking there were two outs, ran in from third base and was tagged out for an unlikely double play.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 0

TORONTO — Rookie Roy Halladay pitched his first shutout, Tony Fernandez went 4-for-4 with two RBIs and Shawn Green hit his 14th homer as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Detroit Tigers.

Halladay (3-2) gave up seven hits, struck out six and walked none for his first victory since April 18. During that span, he had two losses and three no-decisions.

Royals 7, Athletics 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jeff Suppan pitched a five-hitter as the Kansas Royals completed their first three-game sweep at home in almost four years.

The Royals, whose 29-51 home record last year was the worst in the majors, hadn't swept a three-game series in Kauffman Stadium since doing it against Milwaukee on Aug. 29-31, 1995.

Sprewell carries Knicks' scoring load in 77-70 victory over Hawks

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Latrell Sprewell carried the offensive load by himself this time.

Allan Houston didn't come close to duplicating his 34-point performance of Game 1, but Sprewell scored 31 for the second straight game as the New York Knicks grabbed command of their second-round series by beating the Atlanta Hawks 77-70 Thursday night for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 matchup.

After winning both games at the Georgia Dome, the Knicks are heading home with a chance to sweep the series. Game 3 is Sunday afternoon at Madison Square Garden, with Game 4 the following night.

"It's been great," said Sprewell, who was suspended most of last season after choking his former coach, P.J. Carlesimo. "Back then, I didn't think I would be in this position. It's nice to win in the playoffs. I've not experienced that before. I hope it continues."

The Knicks struggled just to make the playoffs, then upset top-seeded Miami in the opening round. Now, they are trying to become the first No. 8 seed to reach the conference finals.

"We always thought we were a good team," said Marcus Camby, who came off the bench with Sprewell and provided 11 points, 13 rebounds and one resounding dunk over Dikembe Mutombo. 'Everything is clicking now, especially the transition game. We're getting a lot of easy baskets, and I haven't seen that in a New York team since I've been watching. The roles are definitely changing."

Actually, there weren't many easy baskets in a game matching two of the NBA's best defensive teams. The Knicks shot 39 percent (26-of-67) and the Hawks hit just under 30 percent (24-of-81).

But New York's numbers were skewed by a 1-for-15 beginning, and the Knicks pulled away after leading only 54-52 lead after three quarters.

Sprewell provided 10 of New York's 23 points in the final period, including a three-point play with 5:45 remaining that pushed the lead to 69-58. The Hawks never got closer than five the rest of the way.

"We're really playing with a lot of confidence," Sprewell said. "It was not our best game. It was a little ugly. But I'm glad we got the job done in the fourth quarter."

Houston was held to two points after setting a playoff-high in Game 1, but Sprewell was right on the mark once again for the Knicks. He shot 8-of-16 from the field and used his quickness to get to the line time and time again, making 15 of 19 free throws.

Asked what the Hawks have to do to shut down Sprewell, Grant Long replied. "Pray. There's not a whole lot you can do. He's playing great at the right time."

At the defensive end, Spree helped shut down Steve Smith in the first half, then turned his attention to Chris Crawford.

Smith, the Hawks' leading scorer during the regular season, was held to 2-of-16 shooting and nine points. Crawford, back in the starting lineup after pacing Atlanta with 26 points in Game 1, made only one field goal and finished with 10 points.

Mookie Blaylock scored 17 to lead the Hawks.

"Nothing was going right for us, inside or out," said Smith, who was double-teamed much of the game. "I'm not going to make excuses. I've shot through a double before. It was just one of those nights when I wasn't shooting well."

The game drew a sellout crowd of 22,558, augmented by thousands of Knicks' fans who made the Georgia Dome seem like a mini-Madison Square Garden. At the end, the New York fans were deafening with their chants of "Sweep! Sweep! Sweep!"

De La Hoya takes spotlight away from opponent Carr

By Tim Dahlberg
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS — Oba Carr walked unnoticed Thursday behind dark glasses past the posters of Oscar De La Hoya in the hotel lobby.

Carr fights De La Hoya for the welterweight title Saturday night. You might not have known it by looking at posters, which featured only the champion.

Such is the plight of an opponent, which is all 10-1 underdogs like Carr are expected to be.

"The only way for me to have my picture up there is to win the title," Carr said. "When I do, you'll see my pictures all over town."

Carr, in the biggest fight of his boxing career, meets De La Hoya for the WBC 147-pound title. It's the fight of his life, but not many are noticing.

"It doesn't bother me," Carr said. "I don't feel like Oscar is overlooking me."

It's not only that Carr is overshadowed by De La Hoya, who makes millions each fight and is the biggest non-heavyweight attraction in boxing. He's also been overshadowed by negotiations all week long for De La Hoya's next fight — a showdown with IBF champion Felix Trindiad.

Carr fought Trindiad and knocked him down in the second round before being stopped in the eighth. His only other loss was to Ike Quartey, De La Hoya's last opponent, and he put Quartey down in the 11th round, only to lose by decision.

"Trinidad and Oscar is an attractive fight," Carr said. "People want to see that fight. But in the future they're going to want to see Oba Carr and Trinidad in a rematch."

Carr (48-2-1) beat Frankie Randall on the De La Hoya-Quartey undercard to earn a shot at De La Hoya. He'll earn $350,000 to $5 million for the champion, but he'll also get the opportunity to finally make a name for himself.

"I'm at the epitome of my boxing game," Carr said. "I have a serenity in myself, a peace in myself that is almost not understandable."

Carr, of Detroit, and De La Hoya appeared at a final pre-fight press conference Thursday, where few listened as Carr delivered a sermon-like speech. When it came time for De La Hoya to talk, though, they were all ears.

De La Hoya (30-0, 24 knockouts) vowed to mix it up with Carr and every other fighter who gets in the ring with him in the future.

"I've gone to my old style. Enough about this boxing stuff," said De La Hoya, who has gone the 12-round distance in four of his last eight fights.

De La Hoya said he decided suddenly five weeks ago in training camp that he would not box opponents anymore, but would try to knock them out instead.

It's a tactic that is more crowd-pleasing but also carries risks.

"I was losing total respect from people," De La Hoya said. "I have it now. It's back."

De La Hoya and promoter Bob Arum have given Trinidad a Friday deadline to accept an $11 million offer for a Sept. 18 unification fight. But De La Hoya said he is not underestimating Carr or his ability to thwart his future fight plans.

"Oba Carr is a dangerous opponent. He's experienced, but he has had bad luck," De La Hoya said. "When I fight an opponent, they lift themselves up to sky. I expect the same from Oba."

Nieuwendyk, Fleury meet again

Associated Press

DALLAS — A decade ago, the Calgary Flames won the Stanley Cup with help from second-year center Joe Nieuwendyk and rookie right wing Theo Fleury. Young and talented, Nieuwendyk and Fleury had reason to expect more titles to follow.

It hasn't worked out that way. Despite solid careers, neither has even come as close as the conference finals.

Until now.

Nieuwendyk and the Dallas Stars meet Fleury and the Colorado Avalanche in the Western Conference finals beginning Saturday. No matter which team wins the series, either Nieuwendyk or Fleury will get a chance to again have his name etched onto hockey's premier trophy.

"There are a lot of players on both sides who can put the puck in the net, and both teams have good goaltending," Fleury said. "It's going to be a great series. I'm just excited to be a part of it."

The Stars reached this round last year, but Nieuwendyk missed it with a knee injury suffered midway through the first period of the first postseason game. It was a devastating blow to Dallas as Nieuwendyk had led the team in goals and points during the regular season.

This postseason, Nieuwendyk is making up for the lost time. His three game-winning goals are tied for the playoff lead, as are his two overtime goals. Over 10 games, he has six goals and three assists.

Fleury also is making the most of his chance to play in late May, scoring five goals and assisting on nine others. His 14 points tie teammate Joe Sakic for third in the playoffs. Another teammate, Peter Forsberg, leads the list with 17 points.

"Fleury is another threat for them, but he's not asked to carry the load like he was in Calgary the last few years," Nieuwendyk said. "I think he's a real good fit for that team."

Since Nieuwendyk left the Flames in December 1995, Fleury has played in four playoff games — all at the end of that season.

Although Fleury established himself as one of the league's top scorers and became an all-star for the sixth time this season, he was likely to leave Calgary as an unrestricted free agent this summer. The Flames made no secret of their desire to trade him, and on Feb. 28 he was sent to Colorado.

The 5-foot-6, 160-pounder with the laser shot and quick skates scored in his first game for the Avalanche but also sprained his right knee. He missed seven games, then scored again in his first game back.

"He's really an opportunistic kind of guy," Nieuwendyk said. "He won't be overly aggressive on the forecheck, but he'll be the guy coming in late who seems to get the goal."

Los Angeles faces uphill battle

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — After letting an opportunity at the Alamodome slip away, the Los Angeles Lakers were back home Thursday facing a harsh reality.

Trailing 2-0 to the San Antonio Spurs, they now must win four of five games from a team that has gone 35-6 since the beginning of March.

And that's just the beginning.

The Spurs are 4-1 in the playoffs after winning 12 of their final 13 regular-season games; they've won their last five road games and seven of their last eight, and they haven't lost two in a row since setbacks to Seattle and Utah at the end of February left them 6-8.

"They've proven themselves time and again this season," Lakers' forward Rick Fox acknowledged. "To say we share the same urgency would be reaching a little bit.

"They've made a commitment. you can sense a commitment from this side."

Games 3 and 4 in the best-of-7 series are Saturday and Sunday at the Forum.

"As in tennis, they held serve," Fox said. "We come home now to our home fans, home cooking. We can do what we do best, play Laker basketball, go back to San Antonio tied 2-2."

It appeared in the final minute of Game 2 on Wednesday night that the Lakers might come home tied 1-1, but it wasn't to be.

First, with the Lakers leading 76-75 thanks to a 3-point shot by Kobe Bryant with 36.9 seconds remaining, Bryant missed two free throws with 18.9 seconds left.

When Bryant stepped to the line, he had scored 28 points in Game 2 and made 23 of his 25 foul shots (92 percent) in the playoffs.

Then, San Antonio's Tim Duncan, being guarded by J.R. Reid, made a short jump-hook from the right baseline with 8.4 seconds left to put the Spurs ahead.

"We were supposed to come down and double-team him right away," Lakers coach Kurt Rambis said of Duncan. "That was one thing we didn't do."

had to offer."

The UT coaches are also banking on Solansky's potential. Vaulting at the Michael Myers Track Complex and with all-American Jacob Davis should help. Davis, a junior, won this year's NCAA indoor meet with a vault of 19-2 1/4. He has also won four Big 12 indoor and outdoor titles.

"When I get down there, they can make me excel," said Solansky, whose career best in 15-9. "Just the experience of jumping with him (Davis) for a year will help. He could teach me so much."

- The University of Texas track team, which is directed by head coach Bubba Thornton, has won 52 conference championships (indoors and outdoors), including seven of the last eight outdoor titles.
- Solansky will be a part of a freshman class at UT that includes Germaine Cooper of Giddings. Cooper is the No. 1 hurdler in the nation. Also, Jonathan Fawcett of Georgetown has signed with the Longhorns. Fawcett won the Class 5A 3,200 meters at the state meet.
- Solansky was part of arguably the best track team MHS has produced. The Bulldogs won their first district meet in 44 years and won what is thought to be the program's first region meet. Last week at the state meet, MHS finished fourth.

Raji Hickey has already signed with Division II national power Abilene Christian. Weldon Cooks signed a football scholarship with the University of Texas-El Paso and might run track with the Miners.

Flesch takes Colonial lead with late birdies

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Steve Flesch didn't need to walk across crunchy greens or feel the blast of wind through the trees to realize he had his work cut out for him Thursday at Colonial Country Club.

■ Golf Roundup

One look at the leaderboard was all it took.

With no one better than 3-under par, Flesch birdied the last two holes in fading sunlight for a 4-under 66 that gave him a one-stroke lead over Vijay Singh and Jeff Sluman after the first round of the MasterCard Colonial.

"Teeing off at 2 p.m., it's kind of hard not to notice what's going out there," Flesch said. "Last week, I was eight strokes back before I hit my first shot. This time I was only two strokes down, so I knew something was going on."

Singh was carried along with renewed confidence in his putting, while Sluman chipped in twice for birdie in their rounds of 67.

Steve Elkington, playing for the first time since another bout with viral meningitis, was among those at 68 despite a bogey on the 17th.

The 66 by Flesch matched the highest score in relation to par by a first-round lead on the PGA Tour this year — the other 4-unders were in the Phoenix Open and The Players Championship. The first-round lead in the Masters was 3-under 69.

"That's the hardest round of golf I've played this year," Singh said.

It wasn't difficult to see why. From the time Singh roped a 3-wood into the first green for a 30-foot eagle until he finished under the long shadows of late afternoon, the wind gusted and swirled through Hogan's Alley.

"You can't pick the right clubs, even when you're 110 yards away," Singh said. "You stand over the ball, take your swing and the wind changes direction. It wasn't consistent."

Nothing summed up inconsistency as much as Scott Hoch.

He had a chance to leave the rest of the field in his wake with a torrid four-hole stretch that shot him out of the pack at warp speed. Hoch made three straight birdies, then holed out from the fairway for eagle at No. 10 to get to 6-under.

But Hoch made bogeys on five of the last seven holes to finish at 69, along with Corey Pavin and Mark Calcavecchia.

Tom Lehman and Lee Janzen were among those at 71. Davis Love III, who had two double bogeys in a span of three holes, Phil Mickelson and Fred Couples were at 72.

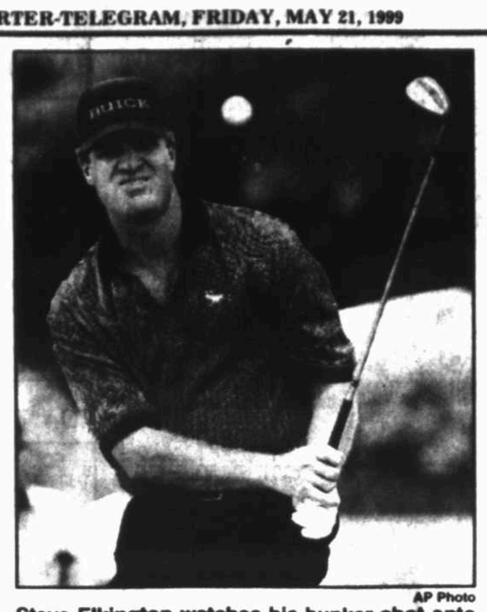

Flesch, the rookie of the year in 1998, got off to a good start in search of his first PGA Tour victory — especially because he tees off three hours earlier on Friday.

"The greens were baking out there, and the wind was blowing in the opposite direction on a lot of the doglegs," he said. "But I hit a lot of good iron shots."

Fukushima takes first-round lead in inaugural Philips Invitational

AUSTIN — Akiko Fukushima shot a six-under par 64 Thursday to take a one-shot lead after the opening round of the inaugural LPGA Philips Invitational.

The 25-year-old native of Kanagawa, Japan, played the back nine first at the Onion Creek Country Club and started with a bogey. But she recovered with seven birdies, including five of her last nine holes, to take the lead from early leader Dale Eggeling, who carded a five-under 65 on the 6,101-yard course.

AP Photo

Steve Elkington watches his bunker shot onto the 16th green during Thursday's first round of the Colonial in Fort Worth.

"I was able to drive well," said Fukushima, ninth-ranked on the LPGA Tour in driving distance at 253.3 yards. "I was quite pleased. It was my best score here (in the U.S.) to date."

Seven players, including Meg Mallon, the tour's winner last week in Nashville, were tied for third at four-under 66. The group also included Laura Davies, Susie Redman and Jill McGill.

Six more women are one more stroke behind in the chase for the $120,000 first prize in the tournament honoring longtime golf teacher Harvey Penick, who died in 1995 at age 90.

This 72-hole, $800,000 affair also marks the LPGA's return to Austin for the first time since the 1962 Civitan Open. It's the LPGA's first tourney in Texas since 1986.

SOFTBALL: Coahoma boasts 2A powerhouse

(From 1C)

the sophomores graduate. We will win it until then," Buchanan said. "We are doing our jobs by being part of the best."

Being the best on the softball diamond is expected in Coahoma. First-year coach Robert Royer didn't need long to see that.

"When I was hired, it was made clear that making it to state was an expectation," Royer said. "It has never been a secret. It has been an expectation all year long.

The expectations are not just high in the community.

"They (the players) were talking about where we were going to eat, stay and practice (in Austin) in September," Royer added. "It was like there never was any question. They will do it again next year. They expect that."

Royer, who lives in Midland, makes the 50-mile drive (one way) to his job every day. Just east of Big Spring, Royer says, football country turns into a softball haven.

"They have a really strong summer program. It has always been there and always will be there," Royer said. "It is competitive from the smallest league through high school. It carries off into the work place. Their dads talk about it at work and everywhere else.

"It is beyond football, basketball and baseball here. It is a real important thing. Softball is our thing, and they are expected to excel and win."

Royer inherited a group that lost six starters from a 24-7 state title winning team. This team has a better record going into the tournament and has defeated three district champions from 3A (Greenwood, Brackenridge and Merkel), one from 4A (Andrews) and three from 5A (El Paso Bel Air, El Paso Franklin and Lubbock Coronado). The Bulldogettes also split games with TAPPS 4A state champion Midland Christian.

All totaled, only four teams on Coahoma's schedule (Midland High, Sweetwater, Hermleigh and Miles) did not qualify for postseason play. Hermleigh and Miles were in Coahoma's district.

"He has a lot of pressure on him," Buchanan said. "It is said sometimes, but it is also good because he knows what he has to do. I feel sorry for him sometimes, but he has handled it good."

Of the three losses, two (Midland High and Midland Christian) came the week Coahoma got a number of players from the basketball team and the other came against 4A Brownwood in a playoff tuneup.

This weekend, the Bulldogettes play against teams their size. It remains to be seen if the other teams are of Coahoma's capability. Coahoma has two quality sophomore pitchers — 15-0 Amber Bingham and 13-3 Kenni Kay Buchanan. Offensively, eight of the nine starters hit .375 or better, and seven take a .400-plus average to Austin. Tindol, the district MVP, leads all starters with a .467 average.

Still, Coahoma's success starts with their 1-2 punch inside the pitching circle and continues with the girls behind them.

"Defense pulls us through everything," Baker said. "At first when we were playing teams that were not as good, we run-ruled them. When we stepped into the playoffs, it got tougher and everybody picked each other up, not only seniors but the whole team."

As much as any Coahoma program in any sport in recent memory, the softball team has put the school and town on the proverbial map. With two more wins this weekend, the girls' grip on the town will get that much tighter.

It might come to the point where motorists along Interstate 20 see a sign while driving into the town, "Welcome to Coahoma — a softball powerhouse." Because that is what it is.

MHS: Purple-White game set for tonight

(From 1C)

that they are a better football team than they have been when we started three years ago. It's been an extremely good spring."

The No. 1 offense will go against the No. 1 defense while the No. 2's will also work against each other.

"We'll always have a No. 1 against a No. 1 or a No. 2 against a No. 2 with the way we are splitting the two squads," Browning said.

Even three of the baseball Bulldogs got in one solid week of work and will be at the game. Quarterback Laynce Nix, center Cotey-Joe Cswaykus and linebacker Matt Bose, all baseball players, are expected to play tonight.

Browning said that quarterback Chris Howard has taken most of the snaps this spring with Nix in baseball. Browning also felt that Howard improved a lot during the spring.

Jimmy Smith has moved from fullback to tailback this spring and that, too, seems to have worked well. Courtland Cook, who had some playing experience last year, has also had a good spring. Browning said he may use more one-back sets this next fall.

Cswaykus, who moved to center during the District 4-5A campaign last fall, is expected to be an integral part of the MHS offensive line. Guard Matt Neu has excelled this spring.

One of the major blooming roses this spring came from Robert Covington, who was a backup player a year ago and has stepped into one of the guard slots.

Tight end Randy Gardner, who is also expected to start next year in basketball, is another offensive lineman who has been strong. Gardner missed much of the 4-5A season last year with an injury.

"Some kids like Covington have come to the front this year," Browning said. "And that's just one example of seniors-to-be who are showing that it is their turn to contribute. Gardner has a chance to go to that next level."

Wide receivers Cavrine Harris and Lamar Hickey have also been impressive this spring in an area that was hard hit by graduation.

But it may be on the defensive side of the ball where Browning is most pleased.

"I think we are bigger than we ever have been and we've got some experience. I think we should be much better on defense this year," Browning said.

Defensive linemen Brandon Amato, Corneil Ellis, Sultan Bradley and Michael Glasscock are rock solid. Depth is also apparent at the linebacker posts with Chris Hicks, Mike Nue and Bose all back. There is also Aaron Robison, who moved to linebacker from tight end this spring.

Going into the spring, the secondary was a major concern with heavy losses, but that area seems to be shaping up since safeties Colter Lange and Ray Johnson have come through with a good three weeks as has cornerbacks Chris Rodriguez and Merardo Avila.

Many others will have a chance to leave good impressions tonight by passing the final exam. That's probably the most exciting part of a spring scrimmage. And it's always more fun when you take the final exam with a crowd watching. After all, it's been a long and hot three weeks.

Judge denies cart request

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday denied a disabled golfer's request to use a cart in a local qualifier for the U.S. Open, ruling it would fundamentally alter the nature of the tournament.

In denying Ford Olinger's request under the Americans with Disabilities Act, U.S. District Judge Robert Miller wrote in his ruling that athletic competition presents a different concern for the ADA than the workplace.

"The point of an athletic competition, in contrast, is to decide who, under conditions that are about the same for everyone, can perform an assigned set of tasks better than (not as well as) any other competitor," Miller wrote.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, May 21, 1999:

Be more forthright when dealing with others this year. The clearer you are, the more results you will get. Never deny your imagination and creativity. Your sense of fun and romance is high; relationships sparkle. You are fortunate — wish for what you want, and you'll receive just that. Network, broaden your horizons and make your wishes come true. Unexpected developments occur with travel, research and foreigners. Be open to learning and to different styles. If you are single, surprise! A special relationship commences this year. If attached, you can develop an even closer bond. Together, create what you want. LEO cheers you up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You glide through misunderstandings, squash problems, come up with answers and still have time to tackle the next hurdle. Today, life's a snap. Unexpected developments bring a positive surprise. Tonight: Why not kick up your heels?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Pressure builds, but you have the unique ability to see through a family member. Meanwhile, you have your hands full with a career-related issue. Your intuition remains right on. No matter what, you land on your feet. Worry less about others' reactions. Tonight: The fun is close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You're operating on full power as a new cycle commences. Friends, get-togethers and celebrating life mark the next few days. Make plans. If there is a change, work through it; only better times lie ahead. Flirtation sparks your creativity. Tonight: Let the night go wild.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Take your time to ward off mistakes. Bosses have great expectations, but you can perform on a high level. Family works with you. A change you have been wanting to make finally seems possible. Accept an offer, even though financial fluctuations are present. Tonight: Indulge a loved one — and yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Put your best foot forward. When another makes an error in judgment, be kind when pointing it out. Your ability to take an overview helps. Be gracious. You might be surprised by the change in a loved one or friend who reverses a pattern. Tonight: Go for what you want.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Keep decisions under wraps until you've considered all angles. One-to-one relating works well. Sort carefully through confusion. A major expenditure need no longer be resisted. Take a break from the grind soon. Schedule a vacation. Tonight: Take off as fast as you can.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Keep the total picture in mind. You might be worried about what is happening with another. Make calls, explore options, make important decisions. Others come to you with great ideas. You have no reason to resist. Use your high energy to get what you want. Tonight: TGIF!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Others demand your attention. Work needs that extra effort and time. A family member has been very easygoing of late. Think about a change around your home soon. Your intuition helps you with one you consider quite special. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Take an overview if a partner gets a bit daffy or silly. He simply might not understand the implications of what is going on. Maintain a high profile, identify what is going on with others. You have unusual ingenuity. Romance is in the air; be open, if available. Tonight: Do what you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Close relating reveals answers to a difficult work or health issue. You get a brand-new perspective on your goals and your finances in the next few days. Listen to feedback from a boss or an authority figure; now he really makes sense to you. Tonight: Get up close and personal!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Listen carefully. You might be jolted by news or by another's actions, but he could be equally taken aback by yours. Allow another to play ostrich or display his true colors. Your accepting ways help you bypass any problems. Tonight: Say "yes" to an invitation!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might read a situation improperly, or your initial reaction could be off. Financial remuneration from work arrives. Relating brings new moneymaking opportunities. You might need to spend a little to create more. Tonight: Clear your desk at work, then at home.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

How good is your dummy-play technique? Cover the East-West cards and decide how you would declare three no trump after the lead of the queen of hearts?

North's two hearts was fourth-suit forcing. It did not promise anything in the bid suit, and South's first duty was to show a heart stopper if there was one. North's raise of two no trump to game was automatic.

There were seven fast tricks available, and either minor suit could be developed for two more. However, the opening lead removed declarer's only heart stopper, so South had to score nine tricks before surrendering the lead, because the opponents were poised to cash at least four more heart tricks.

The art is to test both minors, starting with clubs. After winning the ace of hearts (holding up does not help), cash the ace of clubs first since that will permit you to score four tricks in the suit by finessing the nine should East have a singleton queen. Next lead a club to the king. If the queen drops, you are home. If it does not, cash the king of diamonds to catch a possible singleton queen. If the lady does not appear, return to hand with the king of spades to take the diamond finesse. If that loses, console yourself with the thought that you did your best.

Puerto Rican heartthrob tops charts

LOS ANGELES — The first all-English album by Puerto Rican heartthrob Ricky Martin was No. 1 in its debut on the nation's pop music charts.

By selling 661,000 copies, the "Ricky Martin" album became the best-ever album debut by a Hispanic artist on the mainstream Billboard charts. It was released May 11.

"Not for a very long time have we seen a new artist with the star power of Ricky Martin. We played his video and the next day it was among the most requested," MTV programming chief Tom Calderone said Wednesday.

The album's first single, "Livin' La Vida Loca," is also the top pop and Latin music single.

SAN FRANCISCO — Three decades after Janis Joplin died of a heroin overdose, a house in the Haight-Ashbury district where she lived is being turned into a drug rehab center.

The four-story Victorian was the scene of many a wild night when Joplin lived there in 1967 and 1968.

After a $350,000 renovation, the home's nine rooms are painted yellow and white, with new cribs and beds. The nonprofit Golden Gate Community Inc. runs the place.

"I think Janis would be really pleased and happy to have this happen," said Country Joe McDonald, who sometimes played with Joplin. "Really, she was just a regular person who had simple pleasures and liked family life. She'd like to know something good was being done with that house."

One big change — no stereos. Music distracts people trying to live together and shake drugs, said Randy Newcomb, Golden Gate's executive director.

LOS ANGELES — "NewsRadio" actor Andy Dick was charged with driving into a utility pole while under the influence of alcohol and drugs, then trying to run away.

Dick, 33, who plays a neurotic, whiny reporter on the NBC sitcom, was freed on $10,000 bail after his arrest Saturday.

The actor tried to run away but was chased by a witness who held him until officers came to arrest him.

Dick was charged with cocaine and marijuana possession, driving under the influence and hit-and-run driving.

NEW YORK — Steven Spielberg says his 1982 hit "E.T.: The Extraterrestrial" is about divorce.

The filmmaker said in the latest issue of Life magazine that the movie about a boy seeking friendship and trust in the otherworldly was a message to his own father, Arnold. Spielberg's parents divorced when he was 16.

"There was a distance between us," the director said of his father. "And when my father remarried, it separated us even further. ... I wanted my father to remarry my mother and he didn't."

"E.T.," he said, was "a manifestation of my feelings about my mom and dad. The whole movie is really about divorce."

Spielberg's own divorce from Amy Irving and marriage to Kate Capshaw changed his bitter feelings about his father.

"Look. You're 16, 17 years old, blaming your parents for something that you know very little about," he said.

———

BILLINGS, Mont. — On his way out of town after a concert, John Mellencamp made a donation to a fund-raiser for a school music program.

For weeks, parents and students at Bench Elementary have been putting together items for a silent auction.

On Monday, just hours before Mellencamp was to perform in Billings, Missy Jones and her daughter, Karli, dashed off a letter to Mellencamp, telling him about the fund-raiser. They managed to get the letter to one of Mellencamp's guitar players following warm-ups at MetraPark Arena.

Jones got a call Tuesday.

"He said, 'This is John ... John Mellencamp,'" Jones said. "At that point I turned into a 16-year-old saying, 'Oh, my God! Oh, my God!'"

Mellencamp said he was on his way out of Billings and would leave an autographed copy of his new CD at the front desk of the Billings Sheraton for the school's benefit.

The CD will be the featured attraction at Friday's auction.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
YTD: Percent change in price since December 31.
How to use: The year-to-date percent change compares the most recent price with the company's price as of Dec. 31. The number is a good way to compare and track the performance of different companies in the same industry or the same town.

Benchmarks are important in investing and the year-to-date percent change can be a useful field of information when used as a benchmark. If you were considering investing in the automotive industry, for example, you could watch to see which auto stock was enjoying the best performance so far this year by looking at this field.

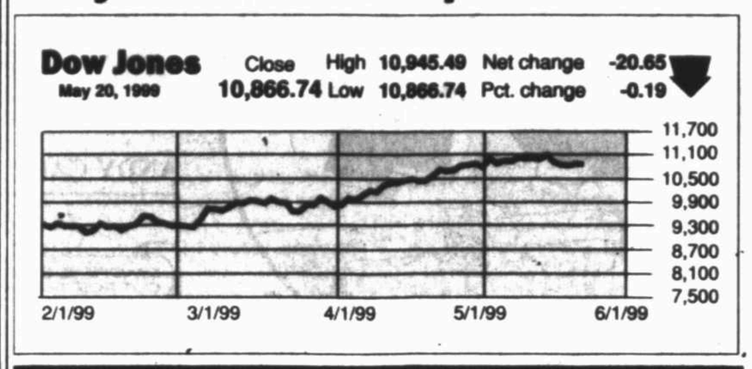

These numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to use in determining how to invest. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE greater than 99. dd – Loss in last 12 mos. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.

Futures edge up

NEW TORK (AP) — Crude oil futures edged higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange as the United Nations became mired in debate over whether to approve another round of an oil-for-aid program for Iraq.

Iraq is operating under an embargo imposed after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait but is allowed to export 1.9 million barrels of oil, equal to $5.2 billion, over six months to buy food and medical supplies.

That period ends Monday, however, and the U.N. Security Council still is trying to determine how to reinstate weapons inspectors who were pulled out of the country after Iraq refused to cooperate with the program. Iraq also has not submitted a distribution plan for such a sale.

Market participants said the current wrangling could take weeks, effectively keeping oil off the market at a time when other major oil producers are cutting back output. The two combined could cause prices to jump, although investors were cautious in light of recent refiner cutbacks that have limited demand for that reduced output.

June crude rose 15 cents to $17.03 a barrel.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose to another seven-month high against the yen Thursday as hopes for higher U.S. interest rates overshadowed a discouraging trade report.

The dollar also added to Wednesday's gains against the euro despite news that the U.S. trade deficit soared to a record high for the third straight month.

The dollar rose to 124.40 yen from Wednesday's seven-month high of 124.21 yen even though the report showed that the trade gap with Japan shot up to the highest level in more than four years.

In other trading Thursday, the euro was quoted at $1.0623, falling from $1.0657 in Wednesday's late trading in New York. The British pound fell to $1.6075 from late Tuesday's $1.6173.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK (NYT) — U.S. stocks fell in the last hour of trading as investors shifted money from computer and semiconductor shares into smaller companies.

The Nasdaq Composite Index slumped 28.53, or 1.1 percent, to 2548.87, led by Intel Corp. International Business Machines Corp. accounted for most of the Dow Jones Industrial Average's 20.65-point drop to 10,866.74. The Standard & Poor's 500 Index fell 5.40 to 1338.83. By contrast, the Russell 2000 Index, a benchmark for small stocks, gained 1.89 to 448.03. "It's a rotation from the old leaders into a broad list of stocks," said Edmund Cowart, a money manager with Banc One Investment Advisors Corp. in Columbus, Ohio, which oversees $120 billion in assets. "If you want to buy small-cap stocks or others that have not participated in the bull market, you sell the tech stocks."

Stocks endured a wave of program trading that knocked market measures lower late in the day. Advancing shares outnumbered losers on the New York Stock Exchange by a 17-to-12 ratio.

Seven computer-guided buy programs and six sell programs accounted to the late-day volatility, according to Birinyi Associates Inc., a Greenwich, Connecticut adding 32 points to the Dow, the firm said.

SBA reps look to help create next AOL

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Such corporate giants as America Online, Federal Express, Apple Computers, Nike, Ben & Jerry's, Outback Steakhouse and Intel — which now pays more in taxes than the entire budget for the Small Business Administration — all received assistance from the SBA in the early days.

Representatives of the SBA's Lubbock office visited Midland Thursday to discuss the agency's various programs and how they could help build future AOLs, Outbacks and Intels.

The Small Business Roundtable discussion sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce was attended by a number of business owners seeking ways to expand.

"I'm looking at expansion possibilities regionally," said Mike Gillian with Rocky Ford Moving & Storage. "That's why I came; I hope the SBA can help."

Scot Smith, who owns two beauty salons in Midland-Odessa, is looking at starting some new businesses, specifically business sites on the Internet.

"I was interested in information on new business start-ups," he said. "I haven't dealt with the SBA in a number of years and I know it's changed.

"I think these roundtable discussions and the exposure they bring are important, especially given this economic climate. There's going to be a lot of 'mom-and-mop' business start-ups," he predicted.

The roundtable also drew a couple who plan to work with the SBA and package loans.

"We're here looking for prospects," said Carrie Orel, who with husband, Ken, is starting Eagle Custom Lending. "We see a need for SBA loans in Midland. We package loans and deal with brokers nationwide. We're especially interested in the LowDoc program; there's a real need for that.

"People are jumping on the home equity loan program to get funding for a small business because the SBA is considered so burdensome. With the LowDoc program, maybe they'll turn to that and won't have to involve their residence."

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Reba May, assistant district director for economic development for the Small Business Administration in Lubbock, speaks at a roundtable Thursday morning in the Midland chamber boardroom.

LowDoc is a streamlined program that involves a one-page loan application for both the borrower and lender and a response in 36 hours.

Reba May, assistant district director for economic development for the SBA's Lubbock district, said that the new LowDoc program has been doing extremely well.

The SBA, Ms. May said, has also just unveiled a Y2K guarantee program making funding available to purchase hardware, software or hire consultants to ensure a business is "Year 2000" compliant. The program will be available through Dec. 31, 2000, but an economic injury addendum — assistance to companies economically impacted if their computer system fails because of the Y2K computer bug — will be available after the first of the year.

Other programs include an SBA Express program where the lending bank uses its own forms and a prequalification program.

While the SBA does not make loans directly, it guarantees loans made by participating banks. Ms. May said the agency urges banks to push SBA lending programs and make financing available to smaller businesses.

"We're especially striving to make funding available to what we call new markets — minority and women-owned businesses that are usually underserved by traditional lenders," she said.

She said the district offices are given goals to meet in certain categories "and right now we're under that goal so we welcome and encourage new markets to contact their banks or come to the SBA."

Little company goes after software giant

Devon Energy, PennzEnergy announce merger plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Independent oil and gas companies Devon Energy Corp. and PennzEnergy have agreed to merge, the companies said Thursday.

In the agreement, shareholders of Houston-based PennzEnergy will receive .4475 shares of common stock in the new company for each PennzEnergy common share.

Devon shareholders will own approximately 69 percent of the combined company, which will be based in Devon's hometown of Oklahoma City. The company will retain the Devon name.

The companies said the deal is expected to save them $50 million to $60 million in costs, but that isn't the only reason Credit Suisse First Boston analyst Phil Pace liked the merger.

"I thought the deal on its own looked pretty good," Pace said from his Houston office, adding that PennzEnergy's resources and Devon's strong balance sheet made a perfect match. "The cost savings are sort of an added bonus."

Pace's analysis echoed the sentiments of James L. Pate, chairman of PennzEnergy and pending chairman of Devon.

Commission report shows rising unemployment in Permian Basin

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Permian Basin unemployment inched higher in April, according to statistics from the Texas Workforce Commission.

Unemployment in the city of Midland climbed a half-point to 6.7 percent in April from 6.2 percent in March, while the rate for the Odessa-Midland metropolitan statistical area inched up to 8.7 percent from 8.6 percent.

The Odessa-Midland labor force rose to 128,800 in April from 128,500 and total employment rose to 117,600 from 117,500. Total unemployment also rose, to 11,200 from 11,000 in March.

"The labor market is the number of employed and unemployed and it's not unusual to see increases in both total employment and unemployment," said Bob Crawley, labor market analyst with the commission.

He added that he sees stability arriving in Permian Basin labor markets, especially in the mining sector that includes the oil and gas industry.

"Wage and salary estimates show the job count increased by 400, with a 300- job increase in the service sector and a 100-job increase in local government," Crawley said. "The mining sector held steady at 11,500 jobs. Given the times that the current mining industry is in, it speaks well that we're seeing some stability in the volatile mining sector."

Fran Hawke, manager with Temporary Resources, said the temporary employment agency has been impacted by events in the oil and gas industry, "but we've been steady, considering what's been happening. Not all our job orders come from the oil and gas industry, but they're all impacted by it."

She added that as oil prices have moved higher, people are more confident, while remaining cautious.

The agency has been seeing orders for long-term and short-term temporary help as well as temporary-to-permanent, she said.

"We've been successful in placing the people we have," she said. "We need people with good skills. In any economy, you need people with good skills."

A quarterly survey by Manpower Inc. finds a cloudy outlook for Midland employment in the third quarter.

Doug Shipley of Manpower in Midland said that the survey found 7 percent of local employers plan to add personnel, 7 percent expect reductions, 73 percent expect staffing to remain at present levels and the remaining 13 percent haven't finalized plans.

A year earlier, Manpower's survey found 66 percent of local employers would increase staff and 3 percent planned cutbacks.

The survey indicated that in the second quarter of 1999, 10 percent of employers would add staff and 13 percent expected cutbacks.

Shipley noted that the third quarter is traditionally when employers increase their staffs.

The survey predicts cutbacks will be seen in mining and public administration with promising job opportunities in durable goods manufacturing and the wholesale/retail trade sectors.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Fourth-graders make 1320 percent return in 10 weeks

By Eric Tyson

Q: I wanted to tell you how much I enjoyed your book "Investing for Dummies," but I was wondering if you weren't overly cautious. Some people are making money hand over fist in the stock market. Just last week, a news station ran a story of a fourth-grade class investing on paper only $10,000 and in 10 weeks selling for $142,000. These types of stories seem to abound. I don't have much to invest, but these stories are inspiring. Do you take as cautious an approach as you advocate in your book, or are you just afraid of people losing their life savings and don't want any of your readers exposed to that type of risk?

Tyson

A: Risk and return go hand in hand. I could construct many hypothetical $10,000 portfolios that invest in super-risky items like futures, options, etc. Through dumb luck and probability, a small number of these portfolios could achieve outrageously high investment returns similar to those of the fourth-grade class.

A number of organizations are running stock market contests (which are probably what generated the news story you heard). These contests cover short periods of time — months or weeks — which encourages participants to take extraordinary risks in the hopes of finishing at the top of the pack.

In the world of investment management, mangers who engage in similar strategies can be at the top of performance-ranking charts for brief periods of time. However, in the long-term, such managers often end up underperforming the market averages.

The same is true of the winners of these short-term stock market contests and those fourth graders. Remember — stocks historically return about 10 percent per year on average. In recent years, investors in the U.S. market have enjoyed returns almost double that. Of course, such high returns can't continue, and we will eventually have some down years.

As for my own investments, I practice what I preach in my books. All of the money I have devoted to securities investing is invested in mutual funds. That's not to say that some of these aren't aggressive. I own various pure stock funds, including those that invest in emerging markets which I advocated readers of my column consider early last fall. They have since increased about 50 percent in value. I also invest in real estate and small business, where you have the potential to earn even higher returns.

Whenever I hear about stock market investors — whether novice or professional — posting the kind of return numbers that those fourth graders did, rather than thinking that such investors are geniuses or that I can do what they did, I know they took extraordinary risk and got lucky. A 1320 percent return in 10 weeks comes from high-risk gambling, not investing. You might make that kind of return in Vegas from time to time if you go often enough! I'm not a gambler; I am an investor who enjoys taking sensible risks to make long-term profits.

Q: With an S&P 500 index fund, if the S&P does poorly for a few years, will this fund also do poorly? Should I be concerned about that if I'm considering investing at this time? I have $3,000 I want to invest so that I can have access to the money should I need it (though I don't anticipate a need at this time), but I'm concerned about some recent talk in the news about the market not doing well in the near future. I have modest resources, but no debt except $25/month for five years on a 4 percent disaster loan. My retirement savings are well-funded. My 403(b) through my employer is in Fidelity's Contrafund and Growth Company (50/50).

A: An S&P 500 index fund should produce returns near identical (after subtracting fund operating expenses) to that produced by the S&P 500 index, which tracks the performance of 500 large-company U.S. stocks. So long as you're investing for the long-term (at least the next seven years and preferably 10 or more), such a stock fund should be fine.

One additional point: Your retirement funds are focused on the U.S. market, as is the S&P 500 index fund. You should consider investing at least 20 percent of your stock-market money in foreign markets.
