PAMPA — Gospel groups are invited to participate in a Music Festival Sunday, Nov. 9, to benefit the Alie Taylor fund. The festival starts at 2 p.m. and is at Trinity Fellowship Church, 1200 S. Sumner. Admission is free and there will be a love offering for Alie. The North Fork Band, led by Bob Jeffers, will host the concert and others who would like to participate should call Bob at 665-2213.

Alie is the 6-year-old Pampa girl who has Neuroblastoma (cancer). She was diagnosed at 4 years old and has since undergone chemotherapy, radiation and surgery. The most recent blood test results show a drop in the LDH levels, which according to Allie's mother, Tabatha Taylor, is a more optimistic sign. Further testing will show if Alie needs to continue chemotherapy or not.

PAMPA — The Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District is accepting orders for tree seedlings at a nominal cost. The trees will arrive around March 18th.

Anyone interested may obtain an order form at the Gray County SWCD office in the courthouse annex on Highway 60E or by calling the district office at 665-1751.

DALLAS (AP) —

Investigators say a long "Cousin Itt" wig-costume that fatally burned a 12-year-old girl on Halloween was not commercially produced.

"It was determined by the fire marshal that the costume was homemade out of jute," a rope-like plant fiber, said Jesus Chairez, a spokesman for the Dallas office of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Erin Christine Jenkins of Pottsboro, about 70 miles north of Dallas, died Saturday of severe burns at Parkland hospital in Dallas. The costume brushed a lighted jack-o'-lantern as she was trick-or-treating in nearby Sherman.

Witnesses to Friday's accident said Erin's costume — based on the Addams Family character who is completely covered by long hair — immediately burst into flames.

Insurance rates going up, down for autos Full policy price rises

Auto insurance rates in Gray County are headed down for those who carry uninsured motorist coverage and/or liability only but drivers who buy collision or comprehensive coverage will see their premiums go up.

For the fully covered, rates will rise 1.6 percent based upon weather-related higher claims made between 1992 and 1995 because of hail damage here and in two other panhandle counties, Moore and Hutchinson.

So said Texas Insurance Commission spokesman Mark Hanna in a telephone interview with The Pampa News today.

"While some people will pay a slight increase, the news for Gray County is mostly good," he said. "Those with liability coverage only will see a decrease of 3.2 percent and premiums will drop 9.7 percent if you have liability and uninsured motorist coverage."

Statewide, the average benchmark rate for insurance on private passenger cars will go down 5 percent, the state insurance commis-

See your name in lights...sort of

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY

Are you ready to see your name with lights?

It can happen when you sponsor a Christmas light display in recreation park from Nov. 21 through the Christmas holidays.

Your name may not be in lights, but when individuals choose to sponsor Christmas displays in recreation park as part of the "Celebration of Lights" program, they do get some name recognition among all of the tremendously lighted decorations.

"Celebration of Lights" volunteers have been busy painting huge wooden Christmas cards with the names of those who sponsor for the annual community Christmas event, in addition to finishing up all of the planned decorations.

This year the group has worked all year to produce some of the most spectacular displays ever. An almost life-size merry-go-round

Georgia Johnson drops her ballot into the ballot box today as Election Judge Dovey Massie watches. By 9:30 a.m. the booths for Gray County precincts 14 and 15 at the First Christian Church's Family Life Center had seen 48 voters. "We had people waiting in line this morning when we opened," said Carol Cofer, election clerk. She said they had more voters then expected through mid-morning. "We always have the most," said her husband, Bill Cofer, alternate election judge. The County Clerk's office confirmed the Family Life Center is traditionally the busiest polling place.

Missing teens safe

CHILDRESS — Investigators from the state fire marshal's office were today examining the burned out remains of a 1985 Chrysler in connection with the disappearance of two Shamrock teenagers from Childress Saturday.

The Shamrock teenagers, Freddy Baker Jr., 18, and Kimberly Lisle, 16, went to Childress on a shopping trip

Friday, according to Childress County authorities. They spent Friday night at Baker's sister's home in Childress.

The couple disappeared Saturday evening, eventually turning up in Iowa City, Iowa, where Baker's mother lives.

Childress County Sheriff Kevin Overstreet said the couple, who have been dating since May, called Lisle's parents on Baker's cellular phone about 6:30 p.m. Saturday. Baker reportedly told them he wasn't feeling well and the couple was having car problems. Overstreet's office got a call shortly after 7:30 p.m. Saturday concerning a car on fire about a half mile north of Childress. The car was identified as the one the teenagers had been driving.

Historic 1868 Washita battlefield dedicated

By DAVID BOWSER

CHEYENNE, Okla. — Cheyenne and Arapaho leaders are working with the National Park Service to develop Oklahoma's newest national historic site near where the Washita River flows out of the Texas Panhandle and into Oklahoma.

The Washita Battlefield National Historic Site where Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer and his Seventh Cavalry swooped down on the winter camp of Cheyenne Peace Chief Black Kettle in 1868, massacring men, women and children, formally became a unit of the National Park Service in a dedication ceremony Saturday.

"We will help develop the educational narrative that will be here at the site when the National Historic Park is opened," said Cheyenne Peace Chief Lawrence Hart during Saturday's ceremony.

Hart said he looks forward to working with Sarah Craighead, the new park superintendent, in developing the site.

"We have many stories to tell," Hart said.

Hart has special ties to the site. His great-grandfather, Afraid of Beavers, was camped here when Custer attacked. Hart's grandfather was six-years-old at the time and was shot in the leg.

"I was here on this site 26 years ago when there was a reenactment of that awful day of Nov. 27, 1868," Hart said.

PHS students use new building Windup hinges on more money

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
Staff Writer

The Pampa High School's Multi-Purpose Athletic Center (M-PAC) is nearing completion and students are now using the building for different sporting activities. But, the south end of the building, which will eventually be used for dressing rooms, is unfinished and will not be fully constructed until more money can be found for its completion.

M-PAC construction started at the end of the 1996-97 school year on the building which is a facility to benefit indoor winter sports, such as basketball, volleyball and tennis, said project supervisor and Pampa ISD Executive Director of Personnel Services, Jack Bailey.

The building's gym portion was finished and ready for use Oct. 31. Fund raising for the building began about two years ago and the revenues were donated from a number of sources, said Bailey.

The McCarty Foundation gave $21,000 and Cabot Corporation Foundation donated $20,000, while the Meadows Foundation gave $125,000 and the M.K. Brown Foundation gave $100,000 to the building. Harrington Foundation also donated $43,000 and other donations came to almost $34,000 in addition to the approximately $37,000 the Pampa ISD gave toward the building.

But the total revenue generated so far — $379,986 — is still not enough to cover the expenses for the gymnasium part of the building, which cost a total $525,000.

An additional $145,000 was then borrowed from the school district to cover the deficit. Parking lot fees plus fees collected from athletic events and coke machines are planned to be used sioner ordered Monday.

It is the first reduction in the auto benchmark since the state's flexible rating system was created in 1991.

Commissioner Elton Bomer said large cuts would go to drivers who carry only liability insurance and uninsured motorists coverage. He said that would be of particular benefit to lower-income Texans and those who own older cars that don't need full coverage.

The benchmark rate for bodily injury liability will drop an average of 19 percent statewide. The rate for uninsured motorists coverage will fall nearly 28 percent.

"This is good news for all motorists, especially drivers who buy only the insurance they need to obey the law and those who are concerned about being hit by the large number of drivers who carry no insurance at all," Bomer said.

The new benchmark rates take effect Jan. 20, 1998. Companies then have 30 days to file their new rates with the state insurance department.

A company may charge its new rates immediately after filing them, without insurance department approval, as long as they fall within the "flexible band" of 30 percent above and below the benchmark rates. In most cases, individual customer's premiums can be changed only when policies are renewed.

Bomer's order received cautious praise from consumer groups, while the industry was less enthusiastic.

"Texas consumers will welcome this news of rate reductions with caution to be sure. They have heard these promises before and failed to see insurers follow through with lower rates," said Dan Lambe of Texas Citizen Action.

Rick Gentry, general manager of the Texas Insurance Organization, said he didn't know yet whether Bomer's decision would be appealed.

"But I am certain there is insufficient evidence in the record to support the commissioner's order," Gentry said, adding that it may be more difficult for higher-risk drivers to find coverage.

The insurance commissioner also reduced the benchmark rate for commercial auto insurance an average of 9.3 percent statewide. "A reduction in commercial auto rates saves money for business owners, which translates into an improved economic climate for all Texans," Bomer said.

The 5 percent reduction for private auto rates is a statewide average. Local and individual rate changes may vary considerably from the average.

In 48 of the state's 52 geographic auto rating territories, the average benchmark rate will decline for a typical driver with full coverage; three will have increases and one will have no change. All territories have reductions for liability coverage.

According to the insurance department, motorists in Nueces County will get the largest decrease in benchmark rates. A typical driver with basic liability, uninsured motorist and physical damage coverage will receive a 7.8 percent drop in the benchmark rate.

The largest increase will be 1.6 percent in the Panhandle counties of Moore, Hutchinson and Gray.

Drivers' actual premiums vary widely, depending on county, age, gender, auto usage, make and model of car, driving record, types of insurance coverage and the rating decisions of individual companies.

Auto policies usually consist of several types of coverage. Here are the average statewide benchmark rate changes for each of the common auto coverages:

- Bodily injury liability: down 19 percent
- Property damage liability: up 15 percent
- Personal injury protection: up 6.5 percent
- Uninsured motorists: down 27.8 percent
- Medical payments: down 26.5 percent
- Comprehensive: up 9.1 percent
- Collision: up 8.2 percent
- Rental reimbursement: down 0.2 percent
- Towing and labor: down 5 percent
- Total-All coverage: down 5 percent

The benchmark rates and flexibility bands affect insurance companies subject to rate regulation by the Texas Department of Insurance. Those companies write about 75 percent of the policies.

LIGHTS

and a 12 foot cross with a dove in the center are making park debuts in a couple of weeks.

The cross with more than 4,000 lights has been tediously and primarily worked on for months by the Gray County Assistant Auditor, Carla Davis Carter.

Carter, along with a small, dedicated group of 10 to 15 weekly community volunteers help to pull off this event, that to many, may seem short of a miracle.

"But everybody who's involved in this has unique talents to bring to it," said Kathleen Chaney. "And they're committed to making this happen for Pampa."

With the Nov. 21 official park opening, the group is actively seeking other community members and organizations to participate in the city event by sponsoring one of these displays.

"We have plenty of pieces for anyone who wants to sponsor," said "Celebrations of Lights" chairman, Susan Winborne. "We would just love for anyone to sponsor them."

A tug boat, dinosaur, ski-jump Santa and Dickens Village and lighted nativity scene pieces are among some of the displays waiting for names to accompany them for the 1997 holiday season.

TEENS

Authorities mounted a search for the couple after notifying Lisle's parents and Baker's father in Shamrock. A Department of Public Safety helicopter joined the search Sunday.

The two teenagers were found getting off a bus Sunday in Iowa City.

Overstreet said his office was still investigating the case. He said he had talked with Lisle, but she was not providing much information. Some of the information she did provide, he said, didn't make sense.

Baker, 18, is legally an adult, but Lisle, 16, is still legally a minor.

WASHITA

In the village that had been set up for the 100th anniversary of Custer's attack, were Cheyenne and Arapaho including Hart's children. There was a waver in Hart's voice when he spoke of the reenactment group shooting as they rode through the village.

"They began shooting at our people including my own children," he said. "That scene became too real for me."

Later, at the Black Kettle Museum in Cheyenne, Hart said, the grandsons of seventh cavalry and the grandsons of the Cheyenne and the Arapaho people embraced each other.

"It's in that spirit, a spirit of peace and friendship, that we will build this facility together," Hart said.

"Washita has many stories to tell and by bringing together the people that can tell them best, we begin a partnership, we begin a friendship and we begin a learning process that will benefit all of us for many generations to come," Craighead said. "The dedication is only the beginning."

"It includes all the land that once contained Peace Chief Black Kettle's Cheyenne Village which was massacred by George A. Custer's troops," said Dr. Bob Blackburn, deputy executive director of the Oklahoma Historical Society.

The 326 acre site along the Washita River was purchased from Roger Mills County ranchers Betty and Brian Wesner with funds from the State of Oklahoma and a grant from the Mellon Foundation of Pittsburgh, Pa.

"It includes all the land that once contained Peace Chief Black Kettle's Cheyenne Village which was massacred by George A. Custer's troops," said Dr. Bob Blackburn, deputy executive director of the Oklahoma Historical Society.

A Mellon Foundation grant, administered by the Conservation

Fund, was combined with a $262,000 supplemental appropriation from the Oklahoma Legislature to the Oklahoma Historical Society to complete the purchase and pay related expenses, Blackburn said.

The amount of the grant was not disclosed.

The historical society deeded the land to the National Park Service. "The Washita Battlefield National Historic Site will become the first cultural national park in Oklahoma," said Blake Wade, the society's executive director, "and it will become a significant tourism attraction in Western Oklahoma."

An estimated 300 people braved gusty winds and 55 degree temperatures to attend the ceremony.

"The Cheyenne people may have lost the battle, but they didn't lose their identity," said Dr. Paul Hutton, an historian and author from the University New Mexico. "They didn't lose their culture."

This site not only will be a monument to those who fought here and who died here, but it will also be a monument to the survival of the Cheyenne people and to the coming together of all Americans who honor those who fought, perished, sacrificed so that we could have the Republic that we have today."

Congressman Frank Lucas (R-Cheyenne) presented Cheyenne and Arapaho leaders at the ceremony with Peace Medals.

Cheyenne religious leaders blessed the site.

A bison luncheon and Pow Wow at the Rogers Mills Ag Pavilion in Cheyenne followed the two and a half hour ceremony.

Author Stan Hoig was at the Black Kettle Museum signing his books which included The Battle of the Washita, a book he wrote in 1976 in connection with Custer's only victory over the Indians.

It was at the Washita battlefield site that Custer and the Seventh Cavalry, after a forced march in bitterly cold weather and deep snow from Fort Supply, attacked Black Kettle's village. Black Kettle and his wife were both killed in the dawn attack along with over 100 Cheyenne, men, women and children. More than 800 horses were shot.

Five-minute eye treatment to repay to the district over the next five year period for the loan.

The building will be completely finished when the last extra revenue is generated for the dressing rooms, said Bailey. And the architect has not given an estimate of how much money will be needed for this area.

"We'll wait for donations before we start working on that," Bailey said.

But, the building is now being used and students are already doing basketball drills on the new, green floor.

The M-PAC is also available for community use, Bailey said. Organizations interested in reserving the facility free of cost should contact Bailey at least a week in advance and he will arrange for its use around scheduled athletic events.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A menace to society or a scared little boy.

Prosecutors paint a different picture than neighbors and the lawyer of 11-year-old Nathaniel Jamal Abraham, charged as an adult in the shooting death of an 18-year-old he didn't know.

"It's horrifying someone this young can be so violent, so dangerous," prosecutor James Halushka said Monday.

"I don't think he knows what he did," said Stephanie Kay, 20, among the neighbors who described the boy as respectful of others but impressionable.

Nathaniel, a 65-pound, 4-foot-9 sixth-grader, was arrested Friday in the death of Ronnie Lee Green Jr. outside a store. With his face painted for Halloween, some officers in the station house thought it was a joke when the boy was brought in as a murder suspect.

Police said Nathaniel fired a rifle at a neighbor Wednesday, then picked Green at random and shot him in the head three hours later. Defense lawyers said the boy was shooting at trees.

Nathaniel is charged with first-degree murder, assault with intent to murder, and two felony weapons counts. If convicted, he could get anywhere from life in prison without parole to juvenile detention until age 21. He was ordered Monday to remain in custody until a Nov. 14 preliminary hearing.

Prosecutors said the boy's record includes arson, burglary, pulling a gun on fellow elementary school pupils, and beating an older boy with a pipe. They allege he told his girlfriend that he was going to shoot someone, and that he hid a .22-caliber rifle six days after his mother turned in another gun to police.

"He's a violent, violent person," Halushka said. "He may be 11 chronologically, but he's a menace to society."

Another prosecutor said the boy deserves the harshest punishment allowable.

"Nice little boys don't kill people walking down the street. Nice little boys don't say they intend to shoot somebody the day before they pick up a rifle, load it and shoot at someone," Lisa Tomko said. "Nice little boys don't have 20, 25 contacts with the police department."

SCIENTIST WILL ARGUE GOD IS BIBLE'S AUTHOR

"Science Versus Evolution and Evidences for God and the Bible" will be discussed in a series of lectures beginning Sunday morning, Nov. 2, hosted by the Westside Church of Christ located at 1612 W. Kentucky in Pampa. Speaking at this special series will be Dr. David M. Bonner.

This series begins Sunday morning, Nov. 2, at 9:45 a.m. These lectures will address questions concerning radiometric dating methods such as Carbon 14 dating. At 9:45 a.m. and 10:40 a.m., Internal Evidences for the Bible will be discussed. At 6:30 p.m., Sunday, The Reliability of the English Bible will be the topic. Monday evening at 7:30 p.m., Scientific Evidences for God will be the lecture and Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m., Dr. Bonner will present Scientific Evidences for the Bible. Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m., The Age of the Earth and what about "Radiometric Dating?" will be discussed. Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m., the lecture will be Science versus Evolution.

These lectures are absolutely free. If you question the Bible's inspiration or if you want to have your faith in God and the Bible strengthened, you owe it to yourself to hear this information.

Since 1976 Dr. Bonner has lectured in schools, universities, churches and over the radio. In defending the Bible from the scientific viewpoint, he says that science does support the Bible writer's claim to inspiration.

Dr. Bonner graduated with a degree in chemistry and biology from Stephen F. Austin State University, received his doctorate from the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, and has two post graduate degrees. Has worked as a research scientist in chemistry and in biomedical materials and has taught chemistry on the university level. Since then he has served as a minister in churches and as a dentist in private practice in Dumas, Texas.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Market shows vulnerability

It is not difficult, in retrospect, to come up with plausible explanations for a drop of 554 points in the Dow Jones industrial average, the largest single day fall in Dow history, a drop that could have been considerably larger if trading had not been halted for the second time on the same day. In percentage terms, the free-fall was the twelfth largest in history. Assessing the longer term meaning is more difficult.

Those who follow such matters closely have known for several months that Southeast Asian countries, such as Thailand, have been trying to cope with what seems to be growth beyond real production capacity and demand, along with banking problems created by devaluing their currencies. That affected Japan, especially banks with loans that have started to look shaky in recent weeks. The crisis hit the Hong Kong market, which includes people — in Hong Kong and from around the world — heavily invested in Southeast Asia. Hong Kong authorities resisted currency devaluation, so the stock market went down — losing 10 percent of value in one day. When the Asian markets fell again a few days later rather than recover, the effects rippled into the U.S. market. Add in a little panic, and you have a losing day.

Or, as Bill Gross of Pacific Investment Management Company said, "In a global economic environment, there is no safe haven. Even the United States can catch a cold — perhaps even mild pneumonia — when the rest of the world sneezes."

It's important to put the day in perspective. This downturn was relatively much smaller — 7.2 compared to 22.6 — in percentage terms than the "Black Monday" downturn in 1987. That downturn was followed by recovery, then by an impressive period of sustained growth in stock prices. U.S. exports to Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines, South Korea and Thailand combined amount to less than one percent of U.S. national income. Even if those countries go into recession, reduced demand will not spin the United States into a recession.

On the other hand, this could be a "correction" that was waiting to happen. The stock market has given investors a seven percent real annual rate of return on average over the past 75 years; the figure has been higher during the recent boom. But profits of American business depend on economic growth, which has been in the two to three percent range in recent years. Troubles in Southeast Asia have fed a growing perception that worldwide economic growth is slowing.

Does this mean the United States should pull back from trade involvement with the rest of the world? That would be unwise as public policy. If the market levels off at a lower level, some reduction in overseas investment and trading is likely anyway. Reducing commerce further through government restraints would only make it more difficult and expensive to adjust to the next set of economic developments.

Wall Street simply reminded us that it is indeed a market — that what goes up may well come down.

'Prince of Darkness' was Hal

By BEN WATTENBERG
and DANIEL WATTENBERG

Judge Harold Rothwax has died at age 67. In a long obituary, the New York Times headlined Rothwax as a "stern" judge and a one-time "civil libertarian who had a change of heart in mid-career." Alas, that tells you more about New York City and the New York Times than about Harold Rothwax.

It wasn't his heart that changed in mid-career. What changed was New York City, big cities, America, and our still-troubled criminal justice system. Rothwax, named one of Time magazine's "Top Ten Judges" in the country, was one of a small band of brothers who helped turn the tide in America's fateful battle to recapture its urban wasteland.

Sunday, Oct. 26, friends, family and colleagues crowded into a Manhattan chapel to mourn the death and remember the remarkable life and career of Rothwax, a brave-hearted judge and tender-hearted man. A treasured in-law of ours, we knew Judge Harold Rothwax as Hal.

In 25 years as an acting state Supreme Court justice hearing New York City's worst criminal cases, Hal acquired a reputation as a tough judge — a hanging judge before there was a death penalty in New York. Orderly, prepared, decisive, he used his formidable intellect and (sometimes) his stinging wit to dominate his courtroom. No hand-wringer, this judge did not wait for the instant replay to make a ruling. Around the Manhattan Criminal Court Building, he was known by flavorful sobriquets like "The Prince of Darkness" — and for those defendants' lawyers who feared his wrath, "Yahweh."

At Hal's memorial service, his great friend Commissioner Nicholas Scoppetta recalled a brief theological exchange between Hal and a convict just before sentencing.

"Do you have anything to say?" Hal asked. "Your honor, God is on my side," said the convict.

"No," argued Hal. "If God was on your side, he wouldn't have sent you to my court-

There are knee-jerk macho tough judges, and judges who are tough for a reason. Hal didn't start out on the tough or semi-tough side. Before his appointment to the bench in 1971, he was a crusading civil libertarian prominent in the defense of jailed civil rights marchers, welfare recipients thrown off the rolls, and anti-war protesters. He was a vice chairman of the New York Civil Liberties Union and represented indigent defendants for the Legal Aid Society.

But something changed. Punishment of crime softened. Fewer violent criminals were being sentenced to prison. Those who were jailed spent less time behind bars. New court rulings made it harder for police and prosecutors to collect and present evidence and confessions of guilt. Burdened with new paperwork and complex rules only lawyers could love, many lawmen felt handcuffed. Criminals gained confidence that they could beat the rap.

Violent crime exploded across America, rising almost 600 percent from 1960 to 1990, and by more than that in big cities. In Gotham there was a new class of victims who needed help — New Yorkers who had been raped, robbed, mugged, mauled and maimed by hoodlums. Hal saw them each day in his courtroom. In his eulogy of Hal, incumbent Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said, "He often cried — for the victims of the horrendous crimes before him."

In his book, Guilty: The Collapse Of Criminal Justice (Random House, 1996), Hal proposed strong medicine for an ailing criminal court system: abolition of defendants' Miranda rights to remain silent, replacement of unanimous jury verdicts by 10-to-2 supermajorities, rules that would make it easier to present evidence of guilt that juries stopped hearing after the liberal reforms of the '60s. Hal thought thugs belonged in prison. More of them are, now, and crime rates are way down.

His proposals were not always popular — at least not with the American Bar Association or in Hal's natural milieu of Upper West Side intellectuals. His meteoric legal career was stalled. But Hal was fearless. He thought and acted "without regard to public opinion," said Giuliani. Instead, said the mayor, "Hal helped change public opinion."

Indeed he did. In his time, "law 'n' order" changed from a code phrase for repression to a proper description of civilization. There weren't very many in the politics-riven judicial maelstrom of New York City who understood that necessary transformation or who were willing to break their pick to make it happen. Now it is happening, finally.

At the memorial service Hal's brother-in-law, psychologist David Gutmann, compared him to his namesake, the gentle and ferocious Prince Hal of Shakespeare's Henry V, rallying his few troops on the eve of the famous victory at Agincourt.

Shakespeare's Hal told his men that if they won they would be remembered in days to come as "we few, we happy few, we band of brothers" and that "gentlemen in England now abed shall think themselves accursed they were not here and hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks that fought with us"

Our Hal was winning his Agincourt, America's Agincourt. Those who did not fight alongside him may one day feel accursed, for history is the sternest judge of all.

Should Puerto Rico be admitted?

Congressional leaders have come up with an idea that shows just how in touch they are with the burning issues of the day: They want to make Puerto Rico America's 51st state.

Say what? Yes, Puerto Rican statehood is once again a political hot topic. The Puerto Rico Political Status Act is currently before the House of Representatives. As in the past, I have but one simple question for those lawmakers pushing vigorously for this legislation: Why?

During the embarrassing silence that should follow, allow me to provide a succinct list of "why not."

1. Consider the financial burden Puerto Rican statehood would create. In an era of government downsizing and balanced budgets, it would increase entitlement spending (welfare, Medicare, Social Security) by an estimated $3 billion per year, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

Would tax revenue from Puerto Ricans paying federal income taxes be enough to offset the added expense? With an average per-capita annual income of about $7,600, few Puerto Ricans would be required to pay any income taxes at all. The short answer: No.

2. Consider the cultural pitfalls — from both the American and Puerto Rican perspectives.

Edwin Feulner

Edwin Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation.

The island, as anyone who's been there knows, has its own proud and distinctive culture — a culture rooted, as most are, in its language. That language is Spanish. Despite the efforts of a few divisive multiculturalists, the language of the United States is English. The fact that 76 percent of Puerto Ricans, according to a recent poll, thought it unacceptable that English might become their language ought to set off more than a few warning lights. Compende?

We already have a fistful of problems here in the United States because English has never been declared our official language (though most Americans consider it so). Imagine the mess if 50 U.S. states conducted their business in English and one — for long-standing cultural reasons — in Spanish. For those who don't think competing languages and the will of a people to protect their culture can cause serious conflict, I have one word: Quebec.

3. The most compelling argument against Puerto Rican statehood is this: Puerto Ricans themselves don't want it. So why are some lawmakers pushing it?

In three referendum votes over the past three decades and in recent opinion polls conducted by Puerto Rico's biggest newspaper, El Nuevo Dia, the majority of Puerto Ricans have said they don't want their island to be a U.S. state. But, this is not good enough for backers of the Puerto Rico Political Status Act. If the Act were passed by Congress, it would call for another referendum in which Puerto Ricans would vote on whether the island should be independent, remain a commonwealth, or become a state. But in an effort to produce the numbers they want, the authors of the referendum have worded it in such a way that Puerto Ricans can't tell whether their U.S. citizenship would be preserved if Puerto Rico remains a commonwealth. Of course, it would. Yet, the referendum implies that citizenship only goes with the statehood option. Nice trick.

What is going on here? It's a classic example of the Washington-knows best mentality at work. To those pushing for Puerto Rican statehood let me offer a bit of homespun advice that would serve them well.

If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

The Ladies enjoyed a catered barbecue dinner, a get-acquainted game plus testimonies by wives of Promise Keepers.

Teenager unwilling to read Bible stories for school

ARLINGTON (AP) — English honor student Jamie Seeton says the classroom is no place for Bible stories, even if the school district allows alternative readings.

"I don't believe in the Bible, and it should not be a part of school," said the 15-year-old sophomore at Mansfield High School, about 15 miles southeast of Fort Worth. "Your grade shouldn't have to depend on something like that."

School officials said the required readings from the King James Version of the Bible help prepare youngsters for questions on advanced-placement exams administered by the College Board.

"We don't stand up in class and teach the Bible," Judy Soriano, co-chairwoman of Mansfield High's English department, told The Arlington Morning News. "It's one-third of their summer reading. They also have to read Greek mythology and plays. We approach it as a source of Western literature. The King James Bible is considered one of the great literary works of Western culture."

Jamie reluctantly read assigned material from the Hebrew Bible book of Ruth and the New Testament book of Matthew over the summer. She said she became convinced Mansfield High was promoting Christian ideology when she saw a test question this fall that asked: "How do we pray to God?"

Jamie's mother, Janet Dawson, filed a complaint last month with the Texas Education Agency, demanding that the district stop the Bible readings.

She says although she is a Christian, she faults the district for what she says is promoting Christian ideology and religion.

"It's against the U.S. Constitution," said Ms. Dawson, 37, a truck driver. "Separation of church and state has been fought out in the Supreme Court."

"They have no right to assign passages from the Bible to any public school student. My daughter calls herself an atheist, and she's not ready to make a decision on religion right now."

In an Oct. 17 letter to Ms. Dawson, the TEA ruled that the district had a right to assign the Bible readings.

"As long as it's optional and merely taught as literature and history, then there is no violation, as far as we can tell," said TEA spokeswoman DeEtta Culbertson.

The Supreme Court has approved public school use of the Bible for instruction in literature and history classes as long as it is optional and elective.

After a review, administrators replaced some of the test questions, said a district spokeswoman, Sherilyn Conn.

"We looked over the questions and felt some were inappropriate," she said.

ACT I rehearsals begin for upcoming production 'The Man Who Came to Dinner'

ACT (Area Community Theatre, Inc.) has begun rehearsals for their first production of the 1997-98 season. The Man Who Came to Dinner is a comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. Performances will be the weekends of Nov. 7 and 8 and Nov. 14 and 15 at 7:30 each night. Seats are $7 per adult and $3.50 per student. Reservations can be made by calling the Pampa Mall at 665-3710. In true cooperative spirit, the show cast and crews are composed of both adults from the community and students from the PHS drama department. Act I director for this show is Rochelle Lacy, one of the founding members of the community theatre. "We are delighted at the response from both adults and students to this cooperative venture."

The story revolves a popular celebrity, Sheridan Whiteside, who comes to dinner at the Ohio home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley. Whiteside slips on a piece of ice and breaks a hip. He then proceeds to take over the house, causing mayhem with his constant influx of strange Christmas gifts and eccentric visitors, from convicts to celebrities. Matters go bad to worse as he tries to break up his secretary's budding romance with a local journalist and encourages the Stanley's adult children to defy their parents.

Inmates free hostages, end prison outbreak

APODACA, Mexico (AP) — Mutinous inmates at a northern Mexican penitentiary freed eight guards unharmed early Tuesday, 10 hours after rebelling against what they called bad living conditions, authorities said.

Jose Luis Coindreau, a spokesman for Nuevo Leon state, said the inmates gave up their rebellion after being granted a local television interview to air their grievances. No one was reported injured.

Coindreau was quoted by the Notimex news agency as saying some 30 inmates from a high-risk wing took part in the overnight mutiny at the Apodaca prison.

Television teams in Apodaca said the prisoners seized control of the maximum security wing, took the unarmed guards hostage, barricaded themselves inside and began chanting protest slogans on Monday afternoon.

Reporters at the scene said the mutineers handed them handwritten statements protesting bad food, crowding, bad treatment by the guards and were demanding the resignation of prison director Fernando Torrecueva.

Officials said they were studying the grievances. At the height of the disturbance, scores of armed riot police to surrounded the prison, which houses about 1,500 inmates.

Notimex quoted one freed guard, Mario Fernandez Ramos, as saying he was never harmed by the inmates. While he said they did not carry firearms, there were reports the inmates were brandishing homemade knives and picks.

Eager Little Leaguers Suffer Major League Disappointment

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, my two sons each sent a number of their best baseball cards to big-name professional players, asking for their autographs. They spent hours creating personal letters and precious, individual drawings. They enclosed self-addressed, stamped envelopes and a note asking the player to return the card if, for any reason, he was unable to sign it.

Only one athlete, Orel Hershisier, responded by autographing and returning the children's cards. Mr. Hershisier was in the midst of pitching the World Series for the Indians when the cards were mailed.

There was a time when athletes felt a certain responsibility to be role models for their young fans and were appreciative of their adoring public. Many of today's sports stars have done a 180-degree turn. One other player did return his card, although it was unsigned. However, none of the others responded at all. Surely, major league players can afford to hire someone to handle their mail!

So, to Orel Hershisier I say, "Thank you" — for setting a good example in both your personal and professional life. You'll always hold a special place in our hearts as the one big-leaguer who cared enough to take a moment of his time to make a kid's day.

pass along your message of thanks to Orel Hershisier. In a time when professional athletes regard themselves as products to be marketed, Orel Hershisier seems to regard himself as a traditional sportsman and gentleman.

There's an old saying, "Don't give away what you're selling." Perhaps in some cases it should be amended to, "Don't sell what you should be giving away."

DEAR ABBY: Your letter to "Sleepless, But Not in Seattle," struck a familiar note with me. My natural sleep rhythm also makes me a night owl. I have been like this as far back as I can remember, going to bed after midnight and waking up around 10 a.m. I was always teased about it, and my mother used to stand at the bottom of the stairs and sing, "Lazy Mary, Will You Get Up?"

Now that I'm an adult, I get the same attitude from my husband. He's snoozing in his recliner by 8 p.m. (nobody says he's lazy), and I'm wide awake for four more hours. I even wear a nightshirt that says, "Perky Morning People Should Be Shot!"

I don't know why "Sleepless" should be considered to have a "condition" that can be relieved. She's fine. She should find a job on the second shift and work from 3 p.m. to midnight, or work the swing shift. She'll be glad she did. No sense dragging around, waiting for retirement to enjoy life. Sign me... DEAR SLEEPLESS: If other factors in "Sleepless's" life don't compel her to conform, that's certainly an option worth exploring.

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." WHEELER — With a win Friday night, the Wheeler Mustangs can clinch the District 1-1A championship.

Wheeler, 4-0 in district, hosts Booker, 3-1.

The Mustangs, 6-3 overall, gained sole possession of first place with a narrow 14-13 win over Gruver last weekend.

A missed extra point kick by Gruver late in the fourth quarter helped Wheeler hang on for the victory.

Jeremy Davis (5-yard run) and Aaron Dunnam (3-yard run) scored touchdowns for the Mustangs.

Bryan Judd led Wheeler's rushing ground attack with 110 yards on 25 carries. Davis added 107 yards on 18 carries.

Gruver falls to 3-1 in district and 4-5 overall.

McLEAN — Samnorwood defeated McLean, 45-0, last Friday night in a District 2-1A six-man game.

The Tigers host Chillicothe at 7:30 Friday night to close out the regular season.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs tight end Ted Popson was to have further tests in a hospital today to determine the extent of injuries he received in Monday night's game against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Popson was hit on the chin by the helmet of cornerback Donnell Woolford in the Chiefs' 13-7 victory.

Popson had a mild head trauma and soreness in his neck and was hospitalized as a precautionary measure, the Chiefs said. Team officials declined to discuss his condition this morning, saying Popson would have more tests.

The game was stopped for several minutes while Popson was secured to a board before being placed on a stretcher.

BASEBALL

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles manager Davey Johnson might be willing to make concessions that would allow him to serve the final season of his three-year contract, The Washington Post reported today.

Johnson's future is up in the air after he came under fire from Orioles owner Peter Angelos for firing second baseman Roberto Alomar $10,500 and instructing the player to donate the money to a charity that retains Johnson's wife as a fund-raiser.

Angelos has said Johnson had no right to designate the direction of the fine without first checking with the owner.

Team officials, cited by the Post, said Johnson might be willing to say he made a mistake.

"He's willing to make an admission," the Post quoted an unidentified team official as saying. "He's willing to say maybe he made an error in judgment. Who knows if that would be enough for Peter. ... (but) it's still salvageable."

HOCKEY

TORONTO (AP) — The NHL wants its on-ice officials to take more authority over the controversial and widely disliked crease rule.

Officials should trust their own view of a goal more often than relying on video replays to determine if a player is in the crease, the league said Monday during general managers' meetings in Phoenix.

"There is a lot of dissatisfaction (with the rule)," Toronto president and general manager Ken Dryden said from Phoenix. "The question is how to deal with the number of reviews."

"The rule will stay as it was, but the objective is that if you (referees) don't think a guy's in the crease, don't ask for a review ... We (NHL) want you to trust your view of it rather than going upstairs."

Referees were to be informed of Monday's determination immediately, Dryden said.

Chiefs outlast Steelers, 13-10

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There were no rallies and no big plays by the Pittsburgh Steelers this time.

The Steelers, who came from behind in five games this year and won five straight, lost to Kansas City 13-10 on Monday night as Chiefs quarterbacks made the big running plays and running back Marcus Allen made a big passing play.

The Steelers (6-3), who had never lost in seven previous regular-season games at Arrowhead Stadium, were taken by surprise when Allen connected with Danan Hughes for a 14-yard touchdown with 1:40 left in the first half. That made the score 13-10 and turned out to be the end of the scoring.

It was the fifth touchdown pass by Allen, the NFL career leader with 117 rushing touchdowns. He passed for a score for the first time since Nov. 10, 1991 against Denver.

"It was just the right time in the game to call it," Allen said. "We called one last year, but it was unsuccessful. Actually, we've been practicing that play a little farther out on the field. I was a little surprised they called it that close to the goal line."

Hughes slipped behind the Pittsburgh secondary and was wide open against zone coverage.

"We just have to be smarter," Steelers safety Darren Perry said. "We knew he was capable of that. We knew they were going to try a trick play on us because that's the way people try to slow us down."

Pittsburgh took a 10-0 lead, but Pete Stoyanovich kicked field goals of 35 and 44 yards in the second quarter before Allen's touchdown pass.

Kansas City (7-2) rushed for 183 yards against a Steelers defense that had limited opponents to an average of 65.9 yards a game, second in the NFL.

Seven Chiefs players rushed 42 times, with quarterback Elvis Grbac gaining 35 yards on four carries before he was hurt and backup Rich Gannon getting 10 yards on four carries. Allen led the Chiefs with 49 yards on 10 carries. "For all of those concerned about the running game, I think probably the numbers speak more

"If you are able to run the ball on offense, it opens up everything else. If you can't stop the run, you're not going to win in this league."

— Donnie Edwards, Chiefs' linebacker clearly than anything I might say in that regard," Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "We were persistent. We got some pretty good yardage out of our quarterbacks."

Kansas City held the ball for 36 1/2 minutes, and the defense limited the Steelers to 12 first downs, consistently stopping them on third down.

"We put ourselves in third-and-6 situations, third-and-5, third-and-4 situations that we have converted in the past," Pittsburgh coach Bill Cowher said. "We didn't convert them tonight. Give Kansas City credit, they got in our face."

Jerome Bettis rushed for 103 yards on 17 carries, but Kordell Stewart had just 24 yards on three carries and was 11-of-21 passing for 101 yards.

"After we scored 10 points, it seemed like there was a big yield sign up," Stewart said. "You try to make things happen, and when they don't happen, you go out and try to make it happen on the next play. We just didn't get it going."

Pittsburgh finished with 142 yards rushing and 235 yards total offense, down from its average of 162.9 yards rushing per game and 347.9 yards total offense.

"If you are able to run the ball on offense, it opens up everything else," Chiefs linebacker Donnie Edwards said. "If you can't stop the run, you're not going to win in this league. That's the most important thing, because if you can't stop the run, you're not going to win a game. You've got to stop the run first."

Stewart threw a 44-yard touchdown pass to Courtney Hawkins with 8:05 left in the first quarter, and Norm Johnson kicked a 27-yard field goal with 32 seconds left in the period.

That was the end of the scoring for Pittsburgh.

Students Mary Hartley and Diana Solis recently put finishing touches on their self-portraits at Wilson Elementary's Parents' Art Blow-Out.

Agricultural Extension Service to offer software workshops

AMARILLO — The popular "Have Computer Will Travel" software training workshops sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be returning to the Panhandle beginning this month.

Area farmers and ranchers can start registering now for upcoming courses. The Extension Service uses its traveling computer laboratory to teach records management to farm and ranch operators. The lab features laptops powered by the WINDOWS 95 operating system.

Each short course will be taught by Dr. Steve Amosson, Extension economist specializing in farm and ranch management. This year, the training will be restricted to beginning and advanced Quicken 6, and BUDPRO, due to the high level of interest in these particular programs. Classes will be offered in two- and one-day formats. Each session will begin at 9 a.m. and will end by 3:30 p.m.

The registration fee is $75 for the two day introductory Quicken 6 course. A one-day short course for advanced Quicken 6 users costs $40.

BUDPRO participants will pay a $50 fee which includes the software, a $100 value. All registration fees cover teaching materials for the courses and computer lease payments. Couples are encouraged to attend and will be charged only one registration fee if they share a computer. Registration will be limited to 14 to provide hands-on experience for all participants.

Five BUDPRO workshops are scheduled. Sites will include: Canadian, Nov. 5; Spearman, Jan. 9; Amarillo, Jan. 14; Booker, Jan. 26; and Amarillo, Feb. 6. This software program addresses the question "To make money or not to make money."

BUDPRO is a stand-alone, menu driven package, containing six user friendly programs to project budgets for corn, wheat, sorghum, cotton, stocker cattle and cow-calf enterprises. It will calculate break-even prices and will provide sensitivity analysis for varying prices and quantities produced. BUDPRO has many enhancements including an irrigation cost calculator.

Three workshops are scheduled for beginning Quicken 6 users. A two-day session will be held Nov. 18-19 in Pampa, with two workshops set for Amarillo — Jan. 28-29 and again Feb. 12-13. Additional one-day workshops for advanced Quicken 6 users will be Jan. 23 and Feb. 16 in Amarillo and Jan. 27 in Booker.

Quicken 6 for WINDOWS 95 is an inexpensive, easy to use record keeping program widely used by agricultural producers. Participants will use a case study to learn in a hands-on setting. Tasks include entering transactions in the register, write check screens, categorized by type of income and expense, split and saving transactions to help develop meaningful financial reports. No prior computer experience is necessary.

To register, send a check with the registration form to reserve a place in the workshop. Checks should be made payable to Texas Agricultural Extension Service and sent to: Regina Linder, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd. W., Amarillo, TX 79106.

Information about these future classes with the Extension Service traveling computer lab is available through any county agricultural agent in the Panhandle, or by calling the Extension Service District Office in Amarillo at (806) 359-5401.

Talks between Israel, Palestinians sluggish

WASHINGTON (AP) — New talks between Israel and the Palestinians are off to a slow start, with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright playing a direct role and Yasser Arafat under U.S. criticism.

Albright met separately Monday in her office with David Levy, the Israeli foreign minister, and Mahmoud Abbas, a close adviser to Arafat, as she tried to set up a schedule for tackling her ambitious agenda.

Today, the talks were shifted to the U.S. Foreign Service Institute in the nearby suburb of Rosslyn, Va., in an effort to keep the news media at a distance. American mediator Dennis Ross took over from Albright.

On the list were Palestinian demands for an airport, a seaport, a corridor to connect the West Bank with Gaza, and for an industrial zone. But State Department spokesman James P. Rubin complained the delegation sent by Arafat lacked expertise in those areas.

Israel sent 14 negotiators. Embassy spokesman Gadi Baltiansky said "we think we can finish some deals here."

Arafat sent three senior advisers, prompting Rubin to register concern that without specialists "we won't be able to make any progress" on the four issues.

Arafat apparently intended to underscore his demand for a substantial Israeli pullback on the West Bank as the first order of business.

Responding to Rubin's statement, Marwan Kanafani, an adviser to the Palestinian leader, said the Palestinian negotiators in Washington "are more than expert" on all issues on Albright's agenda.

"If there is a positive development on these basic issues, I think Arafat is prepared to dispatch a private plane now with all the experts needed," Kanafani said.

Arafat then gave ground and decided to send two experts to Washington in the evident hope Israel would give him the airport, seaport and other concessions.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu renewed his criticism of Arafat on security grounds, thereby signaling his reluctance to risk placing more of the West Bank under Arafat's control.

"I think the crucial factor for us is that so far terrorists are being released by the Palestinian Authority," Netanyahu said on the PBS program, The NewsHour With Jim Lehrer.
