Statehouse stakes: 9-week sprint is on

■ Embattled incumbents, independent intrigue spice nation's 36 governors' races; crime is dominant issue.

By John King
Associated Press

Crime is far and away the dominant issue in this year's 36 elections for governor, a crowded lineup that features contests in the eight largest states, no shortage of embattled incumbents and a handful of intriguing independents.

Beyond that, the races feature some of the most colorful personalities in American politics, including New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and Texas Gov. Ann Richards. And three children of prominent politicians — Kathleen Brown of California and Jeb and George W. Bush, in Florida and Texas, respectively, are looking to carve out niches of their own.

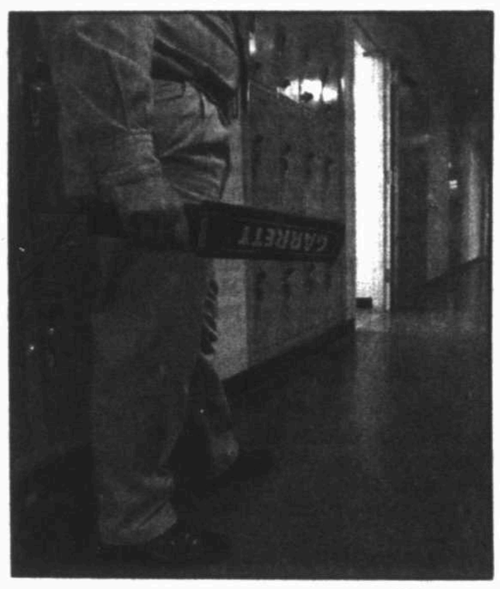

While the Labor Day weekend opens a nine-week sprint to Election Day, it can hardly be considered the kickoff for these campaigns, most of which have been at fall intensity levels throughout the summer.

At stake is control of the governor's office in 18 of the 25 most populous states, giving these races special importance at the White House because of their importance in 1996 presidential politics.

This year's statehouse contests also could factor into 1996 in another way: The impressive Republican gubernatorial class of 1990 faces its first re-election test, and several in this group are considered prospects for a future GOP national ticket.

Democrats now hold 29 governors' offices; the GOP has 20. Con-

Explorers take Jules Verne-type journey to record depths in cave

By Harri F. Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One hundred thirty years later Jules Verne's novel, words still fail the explorers who venture into the Earth.

"It's unknown territory down there. It's basically the last bastion on this planet of truly manned geographical exploration.
— Bill Stone

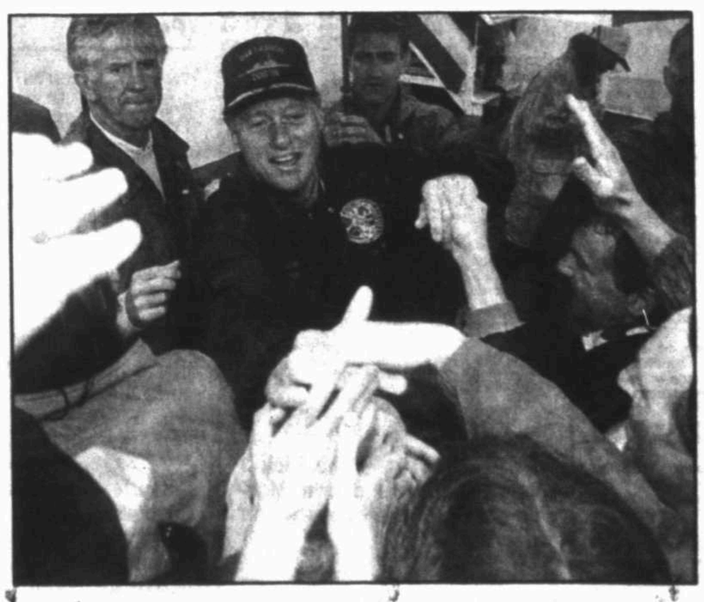

"The whole thing is pure exploration," said Bill Stone. "If you haven't been there, you can't understand it."

For 44 days this spring, Stone and his teammates were underground in a natural abyss in southern Mexico, descending three-quarters of a mile vertically under the surface, then swimming through a half-mile long underwater tunnel to an air-filled cavern beyond.

They eventually got down to 4,839 feet — just short of a mile — the deepest humans have gone in a cave in the Western Hemisphere, the fifth deepest in the world. One member of the expedition died in the attempt.

Why did they do it? Because, as

Think umbrella: Rain's likely

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 40 percent chance of thundershowers, a high in the mid-80s and northeast to east winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 60 percent chance of evening thunderstorms and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 68, Monday's high reached 95, compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1948. The record low is 56 set in 1973.

STATE

Most of Texas enjoyed near-perfect Labor Day weather conditions with sunshine and hot temperatures ideal for a picnic or trip to the lake.

However, a cool front across the Panhandle triggered some thundershowers as it collided with moist air pushed into the state by southerly breezes. Skies behind the front were cloudy. Rain also dampened the upper coast.

Temperatures peaked Monday in the upper 80s to mid-90s across Texas, but stalled in the upper 70s in the wake of the cool front.

North Texas is expected to be cooler today with thunderstorms likely in the west and north, partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms in the east and south and cooler in the west and north. Highs were expected near 80 in the northwest to 94 in the south. Tonight is expected to be cooler with thunderstorms likely in the south half and cooler with a chance of thunderstorms in the north. Lows should range from 64 in the northwest to 69 in the south. Wednesday is to be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms and highs from 83 to 88. Wednesday night is to be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms in the south and lows in the 60s.

Forecasters predicted South Texas would remain hot for the next few days with sunny days and clear nights. Highs were to range in the 80s and 90s with overnight lows from the upper 60s in the Hill Country to around 80 along the coast.

The West Texas forecast was for decreasing precipitation in the wake of the low pressure system. Afternoon highs are expected to be somewhat cooler under partly to mostly cloudy skies and range from the mid-70s to near 80 in the Panhandle to the upper 90s along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend. Overnight lows are to range from the mid-50s in the northern Panhandle to the mid-70s in the Big Bend.

NATION

High wind rattled the Northeast on Monday, piling up waves as much as 18 feet high off the coast, and temperatures fell to record lows from Pennsylvania into Florida. Readings hit freezing in the northern Rockies.

A powerful low spinning in the Gulf of Maine pulled brisk wind across sections of the Northeast and Canada's southeastern provinces.

Peak wind gusts included 58 mph at Nantucket, Mass.; 45 mph at St. John, New Brunswick; 43 mph at Halifax, Nova Scotia; 40 mph at Hyannis, Mass.; and 35 mph at Boston and Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Waves to 18 feet were reported off the coast of Maine and tree and power line damage were reported in parts of Maine, the National Weather Service said.

A marine storm warning was posted for the coast of Maine, gale warnings were posted along the coasts of New York state and Massachusetts, a coastal flood watch was in effect for the eastern coast of Massachusetts, and heavy surf advisories were issued along the coast from Virginia to New Jersey, the weather service said.

To the west, showers and thunderstorms were scattered from the Texas Panhandle to Tennessee. Rainfall amounts were mostly light; Cape Girardeau, Mo., got about half an inch of rain over a six-hour period up to 1 p.m. CDT.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Pick 3 Texas

SPRINT: Races heat up as summer ends

(From 1A)

necticut has an independent governor. That seat is up this year, as are 21 held by Democrats and 14 by Republicans.

Independent candidacies are major factors in at least five states: Maine, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Connecticut. In Maine, independent Angus King is given decent odds at winning.

From a policy standpoint, the sharp campaign debates over crime, welfare reform, taxes and school spending and standards foreshadow the themes, particularly in the areas of spending and law enforcement, likely to dominate state politics in the next year.

Immigration is also a major issue in several states, especially California and Florida, as governors of both parties demand that the federal government pay the high prison, school and health care costs states incur for illegal immigrants.

Each of the 36 races has a peculiar issue of its own, from a fight over alleged nepotism at the state tollway authority in Illinois, to a debate in Rhode Island over whether to allow gambling on Indian land, to fights in Colorado, Wyoming and elsewhere in the West over President Clinton's grazing and other land policies.

Still, in virtually every race the top issue is crime, as candidates engage in spirited, sometimes nasty, debates over police, prisons, gun control and, in several states, the death penalty.

"In the governors races you already see the seeds of the next round of the crime debate — juvenile crime," said Republican pollster Ed Goeas, who is involved in a handful of statehouse contests. "I hate to use a Democrat as an example, but Ann Richards recently came out for a curfew. That is part of this new wave to address juvenile crime, along with crime-free school zones and trying them as adults, that is being pushed at the state level."

Just this past week in Iowa, for example, embattled Republican Gov. Terry Branstad offered a crime package that would reinstate capital punishment. Democratic nominee Bonnie Campbell has used her experience as state attorney general as a crime-fighting credential, but she opposes the death penalty.

Branstad called the death penalty an "important and defining" issue in the crime debate. California Gov. Pete Wilson has tried a similar strategy, noting that his rival, state Treasurer Kathleen Brown, personally opposes capital punishment, although she says she would enforce it as governor.

Cuomo, an ardent death penalty foe, has said he would be willing to put the issues to a statewide vote, a move interpreted as an effort to deflect criticism by his challenger.

Given the sheer size of the state, its huge role in presidential politics, and the personalities involved, the California race has attracted the most national attention. Brown is the sister and daughter of former California governors, and considered a rising national Democratic star. Wilson was given up for dead a year ago, but has used the immigration and crime issues to scratch back into the race.

Two Democratic members of the 1990 class, Richards of Texas and Lawton Chiles of Florida also find themselves in tough races in states that have trended Republican in recent years.

Richards faces George W. Bush, the eldest son of the former president. Chiles is awaiting the results of the Republican primary, in which Jeb Bush is the front-runner. Other embattled incumbents include two Democratic Party stars, New York's Cuomo and Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, whose bid for a third term is endangered by anger at Clinton's land policies and a vibrant anti-incumbent sentiment in a state at the forefront of the term-limits movement.

CAVE: Explorers descend almost a mile

the cliche goes, it is there.

"It's unknown territory down there," Stone said. "It's basically the last bastion on this planet of truly manned geographical exploration. If you ask 'who has been doing exploration in the last 30 years?' you can pretty much say it's been 12 Apollo astronauts who set foot on the moon and the cave explorers of the world."

Not spelunkers. Not even cavers. Explorers.

"I think of myself as a modern age explorer, that's what this is all about," Stone said. "It happens to be the frontier right now."

This particular frontier, Sistema Huautla, is a 35-mile-long complex of interconnected deep limestone caverns in the Mexican state of Oaxaca. Previous attempts at exploration of the cave were stopped by a passage flooded to the ceiling with water. No scuba diving equipment was adequate.

When he's not rappelling down a shaft or swimming through nearly opaque water underground, Stone, 41, is a research structural engineer at the National Institute of Standards and Technology in Gaithersburg, Md., a place where inventors can stretch their minds at government expense.

With eight colleagues, he designed a life-support system that allows a swimmer to remain underwater for 6-8 hours — twice that, when two units are joined.

Their goal was a "sump" at the deepest known point in the Mexican cave where the water completely filled the sloping tunnel. The explorers were to don their backpacks and swim into the watery obstacle, seeking a way on to presumed air-filled passages on the other side.

"You cannot get to where we got this year with traditional scuba diver apparatus," he said "It's just too inefficient, blowing away all that gas every time you breathe underwater."

His device is based on the space suit principle, but it's more complicated because built-in computers adjust a helium-oxygen mixture for the diver, while astronauts set and forget their pure oxygen flow. Exhaled gas is recirculated to remove carbon dioxide by a special process.

"Otherwise, you'd be wasting precious molecules," Stone said. "Every pound carried to that dive site is paid for in sweat and blood."

Cave explorers carry in their heavy equipment and supplies and bring most of it out. Their ethic is not to litter.

"Ten thousand feet of rope, over 100 shafts you have to go up and down every time you carry something to the dive site," Stone said of the Mexican cave. "You are also carrying your body weight in addition to whatever your cargo is."

Stone weighed 210 pounds when he left home on Jan. 15 and 189 when the expedition ended in June. The weight-saving effort extends to food, too. The explorers grind freeze-dried food into dust, and compress it into gallon-sized plastic bottles to avoid carting aluminum foil wrapping in and out.

"We can get 15 man-days worth of food in a gallon," Stone boasts. The cavers literally eat dust and molecularized potatoes — enough to provide them with 5,000 calories a day.

To reach the underwater passage, Stone's team — which numbered up to 20 at times — rigged more than 2 miles of rope down large, steeply descending tunnels, following a river most of the way. There were 60 sheer drops — the longest 360 feet — in inky blackness, lit only by the puny glow of their headlamps and backdropped by the hiss of falling water.

The cavers also needed to string ropes to cross 30 other places where the boiling underground river was too dangerous to wade or swim.

The air temperature was near 70 degrees — fresh and pure. But with 100 percent humidity the cavers sweated profusely inside their colorful nylon coveralls as they hauled 50-pound loads of gear across giant rockfalls in monstrous chambers with ceilings too high to be seen, across slippery surfaces scrubbed clean by millions of years of scouring water.

The first members of the team to make test dives into the deep sump were Noel Sloan, 40, of Indianapolis, and Steve Porter, 41, of McKinney, Texas, and Ian Rolland, 30, of St. Andrews, Scotland. They laid 800 feet of guideline at depths up to 80 feet underwater to find their way back out. Four days later Rolland and Kenny Broad, 28, of Miami, began diving in earnest.

They poked into numerous deadends before Broad succeeded in finding a way through the sump — a final distance of 1,400 feet underwater where visibility often was less than 5 feet. On a follow-trip, Rolland was continuing in an air-filled chamber beyond the sump, when he apparently had a hypoglycemic blackout caused by diabetes. He had the treatment in his pocket, two power bars.

"The insiduous thing about hypoglycemia is that it impairs your judgment first," said Stone, who labored for six days with others to bring the body out. "Had he eaten those two candy bars, he would still be here."

Stone and Barbara am Ende, 34, a student at the University of North Carolina, made the final dives that got them through yet another sump and on into huge air-filled tunnels. They found more than a mile of tunnels — sometimes more than 150 feet wide — and six more sumps that they were able to bypass. But they finally were stopped by another massive underwater tunnel, named Sump 9, that they couldn't get around.

Alone, and far from any help, they decided they had explored far enough.

Where they stopped, Stone said, is considered the most remote point yet reached by humans inside the Earth, 4,839 feet deep.

RAILS: Leader attacks Vatican, hard-liners

(From 1A)

en as the way to slow birth rates.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan, the only other female leader present, supported women's equality but took a far more conservative view on abortion and sexual issues.

Bhutto's decision to attend the nine-day conference and buck conservative Islamic opponents was in itself a victory for the organizers. Two other Muslim female leaders, Tansu Ciller of Turkey and Khalida Zia of Bangladesh, backed out.

But Bhutto's rejection of sections of the proposed 20-year blueprint to curb population growth, coupled with another Vatican attack on abortion, reflected the polarized debate at the conference.

Weeks before it opened the U.N. conference exploded in controversy over the issues of abortion, birth control and sex education.

The Vatican opposes artificial birth control and abortion in all cases, while Muslim fundamentalists say the draft plan of action promotes promiscuity, homsexuality and a loosening of family ties.

In three preliminary meetings, delegates to the conference agreed to more than 90 percent of the plan of action. But the most contentious issues must still be resolved — reproductive health and family planning services, reproductive rights, adolescent sex education and abortion.

Vice President Al Gore said Monday that participants were "very close" to a consensus on the subjects still in dispute. But he predicted the Vatican would not accept the final document despite compromise language being worked out by the European Union.

Papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro, a member of the Vatican delegation, reiterated the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to references in the draft to "reproductive health," calling the phrase implicit recognition of abortion accessible to all.

Brundtland, a physician turned politician, received sustained applause when she took on the Vatican's position.

"I have tried in vain to understand how that term can possibly be read as promoting abortions or qualifying abortion as a means of family planning," she said. "Rarely, if ever, have so many misrepresentations been used to imply meaning that was never there in the first place."

Unsafe abortion is a major public health problem in almost every corner of the globe, she said, and "a conference of this status and importance should not accept attempts to distort acts or neglect the agony of millions of women who are risking their lives and health."

When she called for "decriminalizing abortions," the audience of more than 1,000 erupted in sustained applause. They also applauded her call for "confidential health services" for adolescents.

Bhutto was warmly applauded when she spoke of her dream of "a Pakistan, an Asia, a world where every pregnancy is planned, where every child is nurtured, loved and educated."

But Brundtland was clearly the star attraction of the day, receiving more applause than any other speaker including Gore, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

At the heart of her address was the need not only to talk about women's equality, but to finance women's needs until equality is reached.

"Women's education is the single most important path to higher productivity, lower infant mortality and lower fertility," Brundtland said.

"The economic returns on investment in women's education are generally comparable to those of men, but the social returns in terms of health and fertility by far exceed what we gain from men's education," she said to loud applause and a few titters.

Boutros-Ghali, noting fears and criticism of points in the proposed action plan, called on the 182 nations attending the conference to observe three principles of conduct: rigor, tolerance and conscience.

"The success of our conference depends upon our efforts to overcome our apparent divisions, our temporary differences, our ideological and cultural barriers," he said.

CROP: Trend doesn't reach farms

(From 1A)

sunflower acres this spring — down from 33,000 acres in 1993. Texans harvested 32.4 million pounds of seeds out of the 3.8 billion pounds reaped nationwide.

State agriculture experts call the crop a static one.

"We could grow quite a few of them," said Travis D. Miller, professor and extension agronomist at Texas A&M University. "It's just a matter of them being competitive, and marketing opportunities. Wherever we grow sorghum can grow sunflowers."

South Plains and Panhandle farmers produce the bulk of sunflowers grown in Texas. Sunflowers can provide an attractive alternative for cotton fields wiped out by hail, ag experts said.

Fields were almost harvest-ready during a recent drive around Petersburg, a Hale County town about 40 miles northeast of Lubbock.

Dry petals were curling into the sunflowers' seed-heavy heads. The slender stalks bowed under the weight.

Carroll Leon, who grows 200 to 300 acres of sunflowers near Petersburg, said this year's crop looks good.

"It's easy to raise, fairly inexpensive and pretty well a profit every year," Leon said.

His family's company, L&W Sunflower Inc., contracts for confectionary seeds — the light, edible type — shipped to Mexico and Spain for roasting and repackaging as snacks.

Other Texas farmers grow seeds that are milled into oil low in saturated fats.

Leon predicted an expansion of sunflower products as people become increasingly health conscious.

"The sunflower's taking the place of chewing tobacco — like in baseball," he said.

Raymond Brigham, a Lubbock consultant on oil-seed breeding and production, described sunflowers as tolerant to blowing sand and heavy rains. Loamy soil and low humidity appeal to the plants, which are native to the Southwest, Brigham said.

He understands their recent commercial success.

"You're seeing them in pottery and fabrics and decorations and things," Brigham said. "I think people are just now realizing the natural beauty of sunflower."

Majority of Cubans reluctant to head for sea

By Tim Golden
N.Y. Times News Service

LA FE, Cuba — There are no rafts in the quiet gulf that presses up to this small town on Cuba's western end, only children splashing around under the hot late-summer sun and fishing boats tethered to the shore.

Though some hungry townsfolk have taken to stealing food from their neighbors' homes, no one has yet tried to steal any of the boats. In a town whose name translates as Faith, no one seems to have turned decisively against the Revolution.

But stories of the thousands of desperate people fleeing the island have dominated conversation for weeks. The people of La Fe are asking the same questions asked by those who take to the rafts, and getting many of the same answers.

"What can you hope for?" demanded Lazaro Rodriguez, a young laborer who is the father of three small children. "There is no future here."

Among the great majority of Cubans, the ones who have stayed, there are some who cling to the Revolution's promise of a more developed society and others who, on its worst days, remember things as having been worse before.

There are people, especially in the provinces, who could not imagine abandoning the homeland. And there are those who would leave in a flash but will not risk their lives to be confined indefinitely at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Yet even for some of the diehard revolutionaries in Havana who look on the continuing spectacle of the rafts with disgust or disbelief, the exodus seems to have heightened a sense of urgency about Cuba's steep economic decline.

"At the beginning, we thought all of this could come apart," a 19-year-old woman studying to be an army counterintelligence officer said, referring to the hijackings of state-owned boats and a riot against the security forces in Havana that prompted the government to start letting people leave the island freely last month.

"Maybe it will help that they leave," said the woman, whose olive uniform was set off by bright pink plastic earrings. "In the provinces people are more tranquil. But they have to struggle to eat, and they get crazy."

As in the past, the bitterness of Cubans' private complaints may be a poor measure of their patience with the communist government that Fidel Castro brought to power 35 years ago.

The World

■ Mitterrand's past

PARIS — It would be an exaggeration to say the early life of President Francois Mitterrand was a state secret, but as long as he was a politician with another election ahead of him, he saw to it that an aura of mystery surrounded the years before he emerged as a Socialist leader. Now, at the age of 77 and just eight months before retiring from the Elysee Palace, Mitterrand has helped a French writer to reveal new details of his hidden past, first as a rightist student in the 1930s and then working for the collaborationist Vichy government in World War II.

"I feel that he wanted to put things in their place," said Pierre Pean, the author of "A French Youth: Francois Mitterrand 1934-1947," "that the time had come to clarify what had been years of mystery, that he was persuaded that all this would become known one day or another."

■ Mielke trial opens

BERLIN — The longtime chief of East Germany's dreaded secret police, Erich Mielke, went on trial for manslaughter here on Monday, but the trial was quickly recessed after defense lawyers challenged the judge's conduct. Mielke, 86, is already serving a six-year prison term for the murder of two Berlin police officers in 1931. The current charges against him allege that he was among those responsible for ordering border guards to shoot East Germans who tried to flee westward.

Doctors have ruled that because of Mielke's fragile health, his trial can last for no longer than 90 minutes per day. Monday's session was recessed after 25 minutes when Mielke's lawyers argued that Judge Hansgeorg Braeutigam had compromised the case by visiting Mielke at a prison hospital. They said that Braeutigam asked Mielke questions about the state of his health, and that he had no legal right to do so in the absence of a defense lawyer.

■ Troops on alert

MOSCOW — Russian troops stationed near the border of the secessionist Chechen republic were put on the highest alert on Monday after dozens of people were killed in the deadliest fighting yet between the rebel Chechen government and opposition forces there. Russia, which refused to recognize the republic's independence three years ago, last month began openly backing an opposition group that is engaged in the current fighting after its leader pledged fealty to the Russian federation. At that time, Moscow promised that Russian troops would not intervene in the Chechen civil war.

On Monday, Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev said that he instructed units stationed in the North Caucasian military district to stay on alert, and that "unit commanders were ordered to limit the conflict immediately if it spreads outside Chechnya's borders." Grachev said that Russian troops have not been drawn into the conflict.

■ Palestinian paper

JERUSALEM — Five weeks after it ceased publication when the Palestinian Authority banned its distribution, the Palestinian newspaper An-Nahar returned to newsstands on Monday with the authority's approval. But Monday's edition abandoned the newspaper's traditional pro-Jordanian stance, carrying little news from Jordan and no pictures of King Hussein.

One editorial declared that the paper to be "Palestinian to the bone" and pledged allegiance to the "national line," while another ended with the slogan of the Palestine Liberation Organization: "Revolution until victory."

Have you noticed angels around?

Have you noticed? It is a strange and subtle little trend, this one, but pervasive. Look at the children particularly. Amid the typical gaggle — mostly clothed in T-shirts emblazoned with unprintable sentiments and unsavory gestures — you can spot a jarring exception. Angels.

Raphael is possibly the hottest new artist around. His dimpled cherubs adorn not only the apparel of the young but the walls of their dorms and the night stands of their trendier elders. Books on angels are big sellers, including one that ended up on The New York Times' best-seller list. The Metropolitan Museum shop has trouble keeping up with the demand for reproductions of angel art: angel posters, pins, statuary, stationery and literature.

Most of the angel books flying from the shelves of the bookstores are accounts of visitations. Many people, it turns out, still believe that in their hour of need — stranded in a blizzard or hounded by bill collectors — the mysterious stranger who came to their rescue was no earthly friend but another kind of guardian.

Strange, how these trends go, and how they interact with popular entertainment. Is it a coincidence that cat books, cat T-shirts, cat art and a musical about cats were the communal obsession of the '80s? In that most selfish of decades we chose an appropriate archetype, an animal that keeps to itself and tends exclusively to its own needs.

In the dizzy and idealistic '70s there were flowers, flowers everywhere, from the endless reproductions of the Picasso handclasped posy to the flowers in the hippies' hair to the garish purple lilies on the mylar wallpaper you can still find in some neglected powder rooms underneath the stairs of rented houses.

Now there are musicals about angels, and cherubim and seraphim are being taped and tacked to the walls of numberless dorm rooms. Why? We cannot give a definitive answer. We can guess, though. In a sectarian age, when people are being slaughtered and persecuted for their differences, angels are nonsectarian well-wishers, common to Christianity, Judaism, Islam and Zoroastrianism.

Bodhisattvas fulfill the same role — heavenly helpers for troubled mortals — in Buddhism, as avatars do in Hinduism. They are universal exemplars of grace and innocence.

They are also a sweet antidote to the nastiness of most popular culture. It is somehow pleasing to think of them, in those dorm rooms, their dimpled smiles meeting the heavy-metal scowls of the rock stars on the opposite wall.

Panetta tries to whitewash Whitewater

WASHINGTON — The Whitewater House chief of staff, Leon Panetta, wrote The Washington Post this week to complain about its reporter's account of a pattern of Clintonite deceit.

Safire

"Factual mistakes or overreaching by the press occur in our time-pressured environment all the time," wrote Panetta, my fellow Old Nixon Hand. "Recall the front-page suggestions in some newspapers of Whitewater document shredding that never occurred."

Facts: Couriers of the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock have said Hillary Clinton twice summoned them to the governor's mansion in the summer of 1992 and gave them records to be shredded at the firm.

In December 1992, eight more boxes from Mrs. Clinton and her partners Foster, Hubbell and Kennedy were shredded. In January 1994, just after special counsel began to investigate, Rose partners admitted they then shredded more "VWF" files that they claimed were unrelated to Whitewater.

How can Leon Panetta say that relevant document shredding "never occurred"? Because nobody has yet proved that the shredding that took place so hurriedly was of Whitewater-related documents. But rational people can wonder why the Clintons and their partners were so anxious to destroy certain files at crucial moments.

That secrecy in the handling of Foster files was discussed in this space last month. I charged that Mrs. Clinton misled us when she insisted her staff chief, Margaret Williams, did not "remove" files from Foster's office, but that they "went to our lawyer," as if directly.

The Clintons' private lawyer, David Kendall, wrote to complain. He put the first lady's deception artfully: "Mrs. Clinton did not add that Ms. Williams played a minor role in this subsequent transmission (arranging for the documents' storage until they could be picked up by the Clintons' lawyer after Foster's funeral), but she accurately set forth the process and result."

No wonder this guy is reputed to get $400 an hour; he makes bad look good.

Why was Foster's possession of the files kept secret for six months? Why was their "storage" in Hillary's closet kept secret six months more?

Some of us overreachers suspect the files may have been sanitized along the way. Kendall tells me he is certain that the box he ultimately received was not tampered with, but he has a lawyer's faith in his clients. Any reasonable outsider would conclude from the pattern of delayed and reluctant revelations that in those files there is — or was — something that the Clintons believed to be profoundly damaging.

CHARLEY REESE

'Church of Secular Salvation' takes control

The main religion in America today is the Church of Secular Salvation. Its God is Man. Its Bible is reason. Its priests are intellectuals. Its heaven is the perfect society. Its members I call Seckies.

Reese

Me, I'm a heretic.

The secular salvationists believe the universe is a void. I believe the void is between their ears. They don't believe in God; I don't believe in Man. They think religious writing is fiction. I think reason is an illusion.

The evidence is all on my side. I can demonstrate mystery. They can't produce evidence of a perfect society now or in the past. I can demonstrate irrationality in human affairs. They cannot produce any evidence of a person or society whose life is ruled by reason.

Ayn Rand? She created a cult based on reason. She also fell in love with a married man young enough to be her grandson, and when he finally ended the relationship, she flew into a vindictive rage. Lots of hormones and emotion. Little reason.

How about the Soviet Union. There you had a 70-year experiment in utopia building, a planned state with no opposition (alive) and with all the power of government to do everything and anything the utopian planners decided needed to be done. Couldn't even build a decent road or avoid fouling their environment. It became irrational and murderous and finally collapsed.

Even more irrational are Americans who think they can succeed with central planning where Stalin and his ilk failed. These Americans are really nut-cases. Their faith in secular salvation, their belief that any human problem can be solved with legislation, appropriation, planning, counseling and education is more ingrained than that of any Jesuit who tried to convert the Japanese to Christianity.

You can see the secular salvation converts everywhere. Suppose a hurricane smashes an area. They immediately start talking about how to avoid damage in the future. Well, dear friends, you have no control over hurricanes and you've already built your flimsy condos on the seashore. Wind and waves will do what they darn please when they please as they please and there isn't one thing you can do about it except run for high ground.

I read a plan that's going to be presented to the United Nations population meeting in Cairo. The plan is a joke. It's an oh-so-serious, oh-so-detailed blueprint written by upper middle-class American feminists who think they can re-create the world in their own illusion. Poor deluded gals. They actually believe they can slip their utopian but culture-specific ideas between the ears of 4.5 billion people. They will meet the same fate as the Jesuits in feudal Japan.

These secular salvation-seekers remind me of a character in a novel by Albert Camus. This guy had been writing a novel for years, but he never got beyond the first sentence, which he kept re-writing and re-writing. He was out to lunch.

Fortunately, for the sake of their faith, the Seckies are short-sighted, generally ignorant of the past, not especially well read, not encumbered by much skill in logic, and think a wise man is Al Gore.

I prefer heresy. I relish mystery and limitations, small ambitions, modest expectations, and an appreciation for people as they are and the world as it is. The indifference of the universe comforts me. I'm grateful for a little human progress in small increments. The certainty and consistency of irrational behavior on the part of humans, including myself, at least adds a measure of predictability.

Seckies would be amusing except that, like Jesuits of another time, some of them can sometimes be dangerous.

Lifting Cuban embargo would be bad mistake

President Clinton should not bow to Fidel Castro's request to lift economic sanctions against his country.

The Cuban leader offered the option in a thinly disguised threat to unleash more refugees as another Mariel boat lift. In that action, in 1980, some 125,000 people hit these shores, including criminals and the insane.

Although the Clinton administration has been issuing tough words about the thousands who are now fleeing Cuba, the administration has few options.

The administration has asked 13 countries to take some of the refugees and is taking action to have Guantanamo naval base house up to 65,000.

Although the policy is not to allow refugees to make it to these shores, it's questionable how long Cuban-American friends and families of these refugees will stand idly by.

Too, by clamping down on the $500 million or so that Cuban-Americans send to their families in Cuba for necessities, the administration is adding to the misery in Cuba.

Unfortunately, the people who are hurting the most are the least able to exert pressure on Castro. Their only option is to flee.

It is a hopeless and heartless situation. But conditions cannot continue as they are. The only other options are to try to enlist international support to intervene or do nothing and watch the misery mount.

Clearly, it would be in the best interests of all if Castro would accept some limited capitalism, the United Nations would offer to oversee free elections and the woeful conditions of the people of Cuba could ease. But that would be to assume Castro is rational — which he is not.

In the meantime, lifting the trade embargo would only shore up Castro and feed false hopes that his outdated ideas are working, when, as the exodus shows, they are not.

Today's highlight in history:

'Goofy math' is used to create 'voter welfare'

Join me in taking a simple arithmetic test. You need answer only true or false.

Q. The number 55 is bigger than the number 42.

A. False. The number 42 is much bigger than the number 55.

Royko

You disagree? That isn't what they taught you in school?

All that means is you are unaware of a highly regarded form of new goofy math.

I'm not talking about the "new math" that popped up in schools a few years ago, confusing the teachers almost as much as the students.

This new goofy math is used by lawyers, judges, politicians and other madcaps to create a new entitlement, which might be described as voter welfare.

Nobody calls it voter welfare, of course, because it might be considered insensitive or not politically correct.

But that's what it amounts to, and here is how it works.

Let's say you don't want to register to vote. It's too much bother or it is not part of your lifestyle or it doesn't change anything. Or if you register, it is too much of a hassle to go to the polling place.

Don't worry. You don't have to go through the tiresome fuss of registering or even voting. Thanks to the new goofy math and voter welfare, you will still be represented by someone who would probably be your choice if you were willing to endure the pain and discomfort of casting a vote.

This process is laid out in federal court records, where many weird ideas can be found.

It is part of a lawsuit in which black Chicago politicians say they are being shafted by a new ward map that does not give black voters as many aldermen as they deserve.

This new ward map was overwhelmingly approved by Chicago voters a couple of years ago, but the black politicians say that vote shouldn't count.

After the suit was filed, it was tossed out by a federal judge. But a federal appeals court has sent it back for further legal blathering.

Here is the way the situation is described by the appellate court panel:

"The challenged plan creates 23 wards in which whites are at least a bare majority of the population, 19 in which blacks have at least a 65 percent majority and 1 in which they (blacks) have 55 percent, and 7 in which Hispanics have at least a 65 percent majority.

"The reason for conceiving 'majority' differently for whites on the one hand and blacks and Hispanics on the other is that the latter groups have a younger age distribution and therefore a lower percentage of voting-age members, and also lower voter registration and turnout among those who are of voting age.

"The rule of thumb is that these groups must have at least a 65 percent majority in the electoral district in order to have a reasonable assurance of being able to elect a candidate of their choice.

"The complaint alleges that no black aldermanic candidate in Chicago has ever beaten a white in a ward that has a black majority of less than 62.6 percent, and it is emphatic that the ward in which the population is 55 percent black is not a black ward — is indeed a white ward, even though only 42 percent of its population is white."

There you have it, the incredible "goofy math." If 55 percent of the people in a ward are black, and 42 percent are white, than the number 42 is bigger than the number 55.

And according to Goofy math, anything less than 62.6 percent is not a majority.

But instead of the judges laughing merrily and saying, "you are real kidders," this is all taken seriously. As the appellate judges say, the goofy math is now "the rule of thumb."

That is some rule and some thumb. I don't know whose thumb they are using. Maybe they are using a couple of big toes by mistake.

It doesn't seem to occur to the politicians, the lawyers, the judges and the other social tinkers, that if 62.6 percent of the people in a ward can't win an election, the fault lies with that 62.6 percent. The solution is for more of that 62.6 percent to haul themselves to the voting place and vote.

And if 42 percent of a ward is white, and a white candidate wins, that doesn't mean that 42 percent is more than 62 percent. It means that the 42 percent saw an opportunity and took it and the 62 percent didn't.

But that isn't the way it works with Goofy-math and voter welfare. Hispanics in Chicago have been notorious for not voting. It's as if a trip to the polls includes root canal dental work.

What's the solution? Common sense says that if people have an opportunity to vote, but don't bother, that is their loss.

Not with goofy math and voter welfare. So a congressional district was created that runs through the city like a long, crazed tapeworm, gobbling up whatever Hispanic voters it could find. Hispanics still have a feeble voting record, but with the meandering map they now have their own congressman, whether they care or not.

Lucky for these guys they became politicians, lawyers and judges instead of bookies. If they covered bets with goofy math, they'd be broke or floating in the river.

Schools across nation put more gun-control measures in place

Associated Press

It's back to school time, which means new clothes, new classes and — in these violent times — more metal detectors, surveillance cameras, gun-sniffing dogs, book-bag bans and locker searches to keep kids from toting guns.

Seventy percent of the nation's 50 largest school districts have installed metal scanners to detect firearms, up from 25 percent two years ago, according to the National School Safety Center. But preventative measures are also becoming the norm in suburban and rural areas.

"There is no school district now that is immune, whether you're rural, suburban or city," said Peter Blauvelt of the National Association of School Safety and Law Enforcement Officers.

No national figures exist to underscore the depth of gun-related killings in schools, although a study is due in January by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Just as it tracks outbreaks of flu, the CDC is tracking the rate of death in schools from guns. And preliminary numbers show 102 homicides and suicides in and around schools in the past two years — a number that suggests an epidemic.

"An epidemic is what public health officials use whenever there is an unprecedented increase in the rate of death. Clearly, the increase in rates of firearm-related injury and death in and around schools warrants calling it an epidemic," said Patrick Kachur, an epidemiologist in the CDC's Division of Violence Prevention.

"It's clear to most people the problem is significant and it's on the increase."

In a 1993 survey by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., more than one in 10 teachers and one in four students reported they had been victims of violence in or around school. Thirteen percent of the students said they had brought a weapon to school at least once.

Educators are fighting back, not only with equipment, but with programs such as peer intervention and conflict resolution to prevent disagreements from turning deadly.

Such programs are now being used, for example, in Upper Perkiomen High School outside Philadelphia. In 1993, a 10th grader pulled a 9mm Ruger from his book bag and killed a classmate during first period biology class because, as he told police, "he punches me and kicks me and makes me look like an ass."

Conflict-resolution programs are also in place at the Margaret Leary Elementary School in Butte, Mont.

Clinton's shipyard visit marks holiday, opens political season

BATH, Maine (AP) — With wind and rain whipping down on flag-waving shipyard workers, President Clinton demanded stronger alliances between employees, employers and government in a Labor Day address opening the contentious political season.

"We cannot afford in a global economy to be divided again — government and business and workers fighting each other all the time," Clinton said at Bath Iron Works, a 110-year-old company adapting to post-Cold War military cutbacks with the help of its unions and the federal government.

With a towering, new naval destroyer providing the backdrop, Clinton declared, "We can rebuild this economy on the strength of your example."

Interrupting his own Martha's Vineyard vacation, the president said Labor Day is a 100-year-old tradition designed "to celebrate the dignity of work, its importance in our lives, and to have that last, long weekend before school starts again — and we all go back to work full time."

With two days to go in his 12-day vacation, Clinton didn't seem to be in any hurry for it to end. He left Maine quickly for the Vineyard, where he grabbed an ice cream with his family and headed out to golf.

Clinton, whose political fortunes are sagging, hinted at his plans upon returning to Washington, promising the shipyard workers he would "keep working until we turn the terrible situation we have in health care around — where we're spending more and covering less."

Shipyard officials estimated the crowd at more than 3,000.

Modern facility to replace community's little library

By Duncan Mansfield
Associated Press

BACK VALLEY, Tenn. — What's known as America's Smallest Library sits among the flowers in Dot Byrd's front yard. An American flag waves in a gentle breeze.

The 5-by-6-by-6 foot white clapboard structure is hardly big enough to turn around in and has a slightly musty smell. Yet it houses a ceiling-to-floor collection of 2,000 volumes, mostly paperback mysteries, histories, love stories and encyclopedias.

For 38 years it has been a beacon of literacy among the farms, coal mines and modest homes along winding, barely two-lane Back Valley Road in this stretch of Appalachia.

It's soon to be replaced.

"I don't know what we would have done without it," said May McGlothin, the 86-year-old former Tennessee Teacher of the Year who paid $250 out of her own pocket for the lumber to build the library.

It's not just the children, parents and grandparents of this hamlet of 1,500 people who have come here. Visitors from all over stop by.

Mrs. Byrd, who retires next month when a much larger, community-built and computer-equipped library opens in nearby Coalfield, is at a loss to explain the interest.

"I have no idea," said Mrs. Byrd, 69. "Like I told Johnny Carson. I thought he wasted his time having me come to California to tell him about the little library."

Yes, the celebrity of America's Smallest Library carried Mrs. Byrd to Hollywood for a 1989 appearance on "The Tonight Show," prompted by a story in the National Enquirer.

The $200 she earned talking to Carson began a building fund for the new library. Donations, free prison labor and community auctions have raised all but about $10,000 of the $55,000 needed for the new building.

Four decades ago, the community's small reading allotment arrived by bookmobile from the Clinch-Powell Regional Library about 20 miles away. The box of books was rotated among people's houses.

Mrs. Byrd, a nurse, began collecting the books in 1955. She wrapped them in oilskin to protect them from the rain since she and her husband, Perry, and their three children were living in a leaky one-room house.

Boat capsizes during fishing trip, trapped three-year-old boy dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A motorboat packed with 19 members of three families capsized during a fishing trip, killing a 3-year-old boy who was trapped in the submerged hull wearing a life vest.

Two girls, ages 10 months and 4, were critically injured in the Sunday night accident outside Los Angeles Harbor. The 18 survivors were hospitalized after spending up to five hours in 60-degree water, the Coast Guard said.

Firefighter John Burgan, a diver, said the boy who died was trapped against the boat's instrument panel, floating horizontally against the console as if he were sleeping.

"It's the kind of thing that comes back to you years later," Burgan said.

The vest probably prevented the boy, Adam Romero, from swimming out from under the capsized boat, Burgan said, adding that such a young child likely wouldn't have been able to escape even without the vest.

Though the cause of the accident was unclear, the boat appeared to be overloaded, said Coast Guard Petty Officer J. Hotchkiss in Long Beach.

The families were returning from a day of fishing when the 24-foot boat capsized about a mile southeast of the harbor breakwater, said Coast Guard Petty Officer James Bride.

A passing vessel heard cries for help shortly before 11:30 p.m. and rescued a swimmer, who told them about the others, Bride said.

"We were there for like two hours, screaming our heads off," Breann Foote, 10, told KCAL-TV.

Five adults and 13 children ranging in age from 10 months to 11 years were rescued and hospitalized for treatment of exposure, hypothermia and in some cases near-drowning, said Fire Department spokesman Brian Humphrey.

A group of parents are to meet at 7 p.m. today to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of block scheduling. The meeting is set for Golf Course Road Church of Christ activities building.

Groups split

SAN ANTONIO — Two of the most influential Hispanic advocacy groups in Texas split Monday in a dispute over a fired attorney. The Texas chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens severed ties with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund over the dismissal Friday of MALDEF attorney Judith Sanders-Castro. Ms. Sanders-Castro had filed a federal complaint with the Justice Department that resulted in an Edwards Aquifer management plan being abandoned. The proposal was backed by some Texas and San Antonio political and business leaders. San Antonio is under court order to reduce pumping from the Edwards Aquifer so its water level will be high enough to keep water flowing at Comal Springs in New Braunfels.

Dallas slayings

DALLAS — An 18-year-old man was arrested on a capital murder warrant Monday in the slayings of two brothers who were found dead in their Italian restaurant two months ago, a police sergeant said. Michael Joseph Roache was arrested at his Dallas home in the July 2 killings of Robert and Mark Wilkin, owners of the North Dallas Pasta Presto store. Roache's bond was set at a combined $1 million in connection with the two deaths, Sgt. Gary Kirkpatrick said. Roache, a Pasta Presto employee at the time of the slayings, is believed to be the last person in the store before relatives and friends found the bodies lying behind the counter in a pool of blood, Kirkpatrick said. A time card shows Roache left at 6:45 p.m., although he was scheduled to work until 9 p.m., the officer said.

Gin to be one of West Texas' largest

■ St. Lawrence Co-Op builds new gin to meet expanded cotton production, shorten ginning season.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

A new $4 million cotton gin, under construction at St. Lawrence in Glasscock County, is expected to be one of the biggest in West Texas.

B.J. Havlak, manager of the St. Lawrence Co-Op, which is building the gin, said the 130-by-200 feet facility is needed to meet the expanding cotton production at St. Lawrence and to shorten the ginning season.

"With new ground going in, we needed a shorter ginning season," he said.

Havlak said there are now 90,000 to 110,000 acres of cotton in the St. Lawrence area, which produces about 110,000 bales a year, and that the new gin will help to reduce the ginning season by 30 days.

He said the current ginning season runs from mid-September to mid-January, and the additional capacity of the new gin should shorten the ginning season to mid-December.

St. Lawrence has two smaller gins.

Adolfo Salcido is director of juvenile probation and detention services at Culver Youth Home.

Midlander tries to help youths turn lives around

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A storm of public concern over juvenile crime remains focused on the court system and juvenile rehabilitation efforts, and Midlander Adolfo Salcido spends his days in the eye of this storm heading up the the Culver Youth Home.

All juvenile criminals detained in Midland County are processed through Culver, according to Salcido. The county-run institution stands at 3800 Lamesa Road.

Salcido has been the director of juvenile probation and detention services at Culver since 1980 and served six years prior to that in Midland's Child Protective Services.

Originally from New Mexico, Salcido moved from that state in 1974 with his wife, Sylvia, after attending Eastern New Mexico University. "We came directly to Midland, and we've been here ever since," he said.

Salcido's wife is currently in her 20th year as an educator in the Midland Independent School District. They have one high-school-age son and a daughter in the 8th grade.

As juvenile offenders commit more crimes, and more violent crimes, Salcido and his staff are charged with trying to rehabilitate the youths before they are forever lost to the adult criminal justice system, he explained.

The 20-bed facility serves as a juvenile detention center for all youths arrested and detained on crimes of at least Class-B misdemeanor in severity. Like all juvenile-crime institutions, the Culver Home operates at the limits of the capacities of both physical space and personnel. Salcido and his staff try to keep six beds available for immediate use, but this is sometimes a problem, he said.

"We are first of all a detention center," Salcido said. Judges can order a juvenile be detained for 10 days, and center personnel can then release the internee or take them back to the judge for an additional 10-day stay. Law enforcement officers and probation officers also can bring in juvenile offenders for short-term detention.

For serious habitual offenders, a judge can order juveniles detained from six months up to the child's 18th birthday, no matter how long that interval may be, Salcido explained.

"A lot of our kids are one step away from being committed to the state school," Salcido said.

Heirs try again to gain billions from oil gusher

Associated Press

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. — Heirs of the late Pelham Humphries are trying again to get billions of dollars in royalties from the Spindletop oil gusher in Texas.

Those claiming to be Humphries heirs number in the thousands across the country.

They have tried unsuccessfully for decades to get a court to award them royalties.

They say Humphries in the 1830s was deeded the land where the gusher is located. It began producing oil in 1901. Humphries, who lived in Carter County in Tennessee at one time, died without leaving a will.

Roy Feathers, who says he is Humphries' great nephew, has qualified to administer the estate. He filed papers in probate court in Carter County that will trigger notices for anyone who owes the estate or has a claim against it to come forward.

Feathers heads the Pelham Humphries Heirs Association, one of two groups of heirs who have tried to claim the royalties from oil companies.

He is not deterred by previous failures. Several years ago, a federal judge fined an attorney and four plaintiffs, members of another group of heirs, $100,000 for filing a lawsuit that had no merit.

Position as new general manager of Hilton follows many firsts for this native of Ireland

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

In traveling the professional road from her native Castlerea, County Roscommon, in the Republic of Ireland, all the way to the West Texas town of Midland, Martha Cahill has established a number of firsts.

Ms. Cahill, 28, assumed duties as general manager of the Midland Hilton five weeks ago.

She was among the first group of Irish trainees brought to Midland by Medallion Hotels Inc., owner of the Midland Hilton, that also recently built a new hotel in Ireland. She was the first general manager promoted within the company, the first Irish general manager and is the only female general manager in the company.

This is not, however, Ms. Cahill's first exposure to Midland. She first worked at the Midland Hilton from September 1990 to

More public figures should speak minds, stand by their words

Ott

More rambling thoughts . . .

— The Ann Richards-George W. Bush gubernatorial race may eventually get kind of spicy, but I still miss Clayton Williams. Whether you agreed with his positions or not, he made things fun, and there is something to be said for that.

— The same can be said for Earl Miller, the Midland Lee football coach who recently announced he will resign following the current season. I've never met the man, but I always respected the fact that he said what was on his mind, and once the heat came from parents and fans, he never claimed he was misquoted or fell back on that greatest of all cop-outs, "It was taken out of context." He spoke his mind and then he stood by it. More public figures should be willing to do the same.

— The tragic death of the Texas Tech mascot last Saturday was terrible, of course, but I hope the school continues to use the Masked Rider and horse during football games. It is one of the most colorful traditions in all of college athletics.

— It is too bad more people are afraid to laugh at themselves.

— Despite my love of cynicism, I grow weary of overly negative people.

— Not only have Americans become exceedingly negative, but more times than not we have added a degree of hatefulness that makes us all the more unappealing.

— Sometimes I think this country would be better off if we could somehow turn back the clock and return to a "Leave it to Beaver" kind of existence.

— If that does happen, I want to be Eddie Haskell.

— It is hard to believe that Harper Lee only wrote one novel, the classic, "To Kill a Mockingbird."

— I hate it when the telephone rings once and then quits. There's always that nagging thought that the world's most beautiful woman called and then, at the last possible second, changed her mind and hung up.

— Do you ever wonder how you'll die?

— I'm always leery of TV commercials that begin, "Have bad credit? That's no problem. Just call us and . . ."

— Yeah, right.

— I know it is all a matter of "supply and demand," but it still boggles my mind when I read about a 20-year-old kid signing a nine-year contract worth

HILTON: Cahill hopes to volunteer as coach

(From 1B)

June 1992 as a management trainee, assistant food-and-beverage manager, assistant front-office manager, front-office manager and rooms-division manager. She transferred to the Houston Medallion, where she served as rooms-division manager until she returned to Midland.

"The vastness of the state is daunting," she recalled, adding that her arrival in Midland was her first exposure to an arid climate. But, she said, "I love Texas. The people are very friendly, and I like the weather and the diversity of the state, the whole southern hospitality."

As general manager, she is assembling a new executive committee and management team that she praises as very talented, determined and motivated. She calls it an exciting time for the hotel.

Plans call for an upgrade of the property, its restaurants, programs and service.

"We want to have the local people look at the Hilton with a feeling of pride," she said. " We want it to be a class establishment."

The key, she said, will be teamwork. The management team "is very much into teamwork, helping each other out and working for the good of the hotel," she said.

She also plans for the hotel to be involved in the community, something she plans to do herself.

Ms. Cahill, a sports enthusiast, said she hopes to volunteer as a basketball coach at the local YMCA, something she did while she lived in Houston. She is also interested in computers and plans to take some computer courses at Midland College.

In fact, as she finished her high school education at Castlerea Convent of Mercy, she said she planned to work in the physical education field. In school, she played and coached basketball and volleyball and also played tennis, table tennis, squash and a game similar to lacrosse called camoige.

Then, she recalled, during her final year of school, her guidance counselor mentioned hotel schools, something she didn't know existed. She applied to hotel school, then got a job at the Don Arms Hotel as a pot washer, later promoted to dishwasher and waitress.

"I was attracted to the hotel industry because I could travel, I could meet people and experience different cultures and there were a variety of jobs," she explained.

She was accepted to hotel school at the Galway Regional Technical College, graduating from there in 1990 with a bachelor's degree in hotel-and-restaurant management. After graduation, she made her first visit to Midland. She returns to Ireland once a year to see her parents, three brothers and sister.

Throughout her college studies, she worked at a variety of hotels located in Germany, London and Scotland, in various aspects of hotel operations, from the kitchen to housekeeping to the front office.

She praises European training as being a very thorough mix of the basics of all aspects of hotel operations, including such practical aspects as cooking, and of academics, such as learning a foreign language — she learned German.

She said working in the American hotel industry offers phenomenal opportunities and said American technology, such as computerization, is superior to what is found in Europe.

Ms. Cahill expects to remain at the Midland Hilton for about two years before moving on within the company.

"For the moment I'll be here," she said. "But I want to stay with Medallion because they offer me a lot of opportunities."

PREVIEW: Event to open Friday

(From 1B)

8 p.m. Hours on Sunday are noon to 5 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults, $1 for children ages 4-12 and free to children 3 and younger.

The Permian Basin Road Runners Club, Inc., will be hosting a 5K Road Race and 5K Fitness Walk Saturday. Also, there will be a 1K Children's Fun Run held at the same time.

On display at the museum during Septemberfest will be "First Artist of the West: Paintings and Watercolors by George Catlin from Gilcrease Museum." A fee will be charged to view the exhibit.

GUSHER: Supposed heirs number in thousands

(From 1B)

"If we'd listened to that, we'd have quit a long time ago," Feathers said.

Hugh Peskett, a British genealogist who has worked on the case for years, said that case was badly prepared.

"I knew it would lose. I know what the truth is in this case," he said.

As administrator of Humphries' estate, Feathers is to determine the value and prepare an inventory of the assets.

Peskett said qualifying Feathers as administrator tidies up the case.

"We can now go to court in the name of the estate of Pelham Humphries," Peskett said. "Once we get the money from the oil companies, we can figure out who the true heirs are."

He said the association has located a Texas attorney who has made a practice of taking on giant oil companies.

"After all these years of battling this, I feel we're now in sight of the winning post," he said.

Those claiming to be heirs pay dues to join associations seeking the royalties with the promise they will get much more once a court rules in their favor.

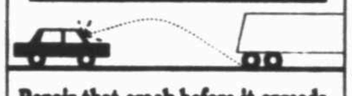

Their dues are to go toward preparation of the cases.

Last year, members of the Humphries Heirs Trust Association, a rival group of heirs to Feathers' group, reached a $9,000 settlement with its administrative board. The group had sued its board alleging misrepresentation, deceit in seeking members and reckless administration of funds.

The butler DOES it

Changing the oil in your car or truck: it has to be done to keep your vehicle running smoothly, but changing it every 3,000 miles is expensive and time consuming.

There is, however, a more efficient way of changing your oil: let somebody else do it for you.

Terry and Deidre Weddle of Midland have recently started the Oil Butler service here in the Permian Basin. Licensed by Oil Butler International Corporation, the Weddles are offering a fast, on the spot oil change that offers more, and costs less than the service at a regular center.

The service is unique because of instead of taking your vehicle to get the oil changed, the oil change service comes to your vehicle.

The service is perfect for both private individuals and for companies with their own fleets, because it saves customers both time and money.

All it takes is one call to Oil Butler and they will come to your home or office and service your vehicle quickly and efficiently.

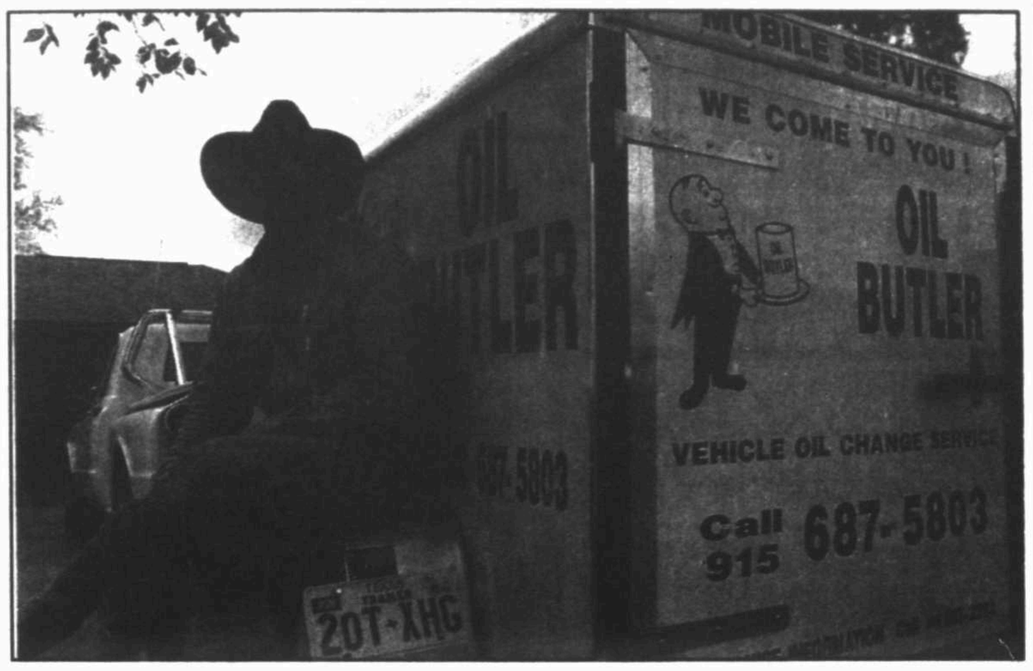

The service is perfect for busy people because you can get your oil changed while you work. It is also fabulous for companies because it reduces downtime and increases productivity because no-one has to take time off to get corporate vehicles serviced.

Most regular service centers charge in the region of $30 for an oil change that you have to wait for: Oil Butler will change your oil and filter for only $25, resulting in great savings.

In addition to being convenient, the Oil Butler is also environmentally safe. The company is fully insured and EPA approved and it takes all of the waste oil and filters to approved waste oil handlers and recycling centers. Care for the environment even extends to using protective mats when changing oil so that spills are eliminated.

Some service centers offer extra services in the way of inspections and safety checks, but few (if any) offer such a comprehensive service as Oil Butler. Included in the price of the oil change is a 16 point inspection of -among others- lights, directionals, hoses, tires, belts and all fluid levels (which are topped off at no extra charge). In addition, if your car is clean you will find that the tires have been treated with Armor-All, and the windows have been washed at no extra charge.

For more information about their fast, efficient service, call Oil Butler, Monday through Saturday at 687-5803 or contact Terry Weddle on his digital pager at 560-5888.

Terry Weddle, owner of Oil Butler, is providing a fast, efficient, environmentally safe mobile oil change service to individuals and corporations in the Permian Basin. The service offers great savings in time and money and can be set up with just one call to 687-5803 (digital pager:560-5888).

Texas twin to participate in research project on AIDS

FORT WORTH (AP) — Rudy Vasquez of Fort Worth, who has AIDS, says he's looking forward to a federal research project he's been asked to participate in, even if he doesn't understand it.

Vasquez and his brother are among 12 sets of identical twins who are scheduled to participate in a federal blood cell-sharing test. In each of the 12, one twin has AIDS and the other does not.

"I feel like it's helping other people, being a part of research," said Vasquez, diagnosed with AIDS in 1992 after he was hospitalized for weeks with a bout of nearly fatal AIDS-related pneumonia.

"I hope it can benefit and help somebody else," he said. "And, I hope it does what they want it to do in my system."

Vasquez, 32, and his brother, Ronnie, leave Wednesday for the initial physicals and screenings at the National Institutes of Health of Health in Bethesda, Md., a suburb of Washington, D.C.

Later, Rudy will be transfused with genetically treated immune-system cells from his uninfected brother.

Under privacy guidelines, project officials said they could not confirm the identity of research participants.

The goal of the research is to learn how long T-cells live in the body of an individual with AIDS, said Dr. Robert Walker, principal investigator in the project for the National Institutes of Health.

T-cells are a component of human blood that are key to fighting infection. A barometer of the overall strength of the body's immune system, the T-cell count is about 800 in an average, healthy person. Rudy Vasquez said last week his T-cell count is "holding steady" at about 15, leaving him prey to nearly any type of infection.

Walker's research, which is about three months old, genetically treats T-cells drawn from the uninfected identical twin, causing more of the cells to grow in a laboratory environment. The cells are also "marked" so they can be tracked inside the infected twin.

"Identical twins provide a simply idealized model for reconstituting the immune system," Walker told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Their immune systems are in fact identical, and so when you transfer the cell from one to the other, you don't have the chance of rejection or of host diseases — the two major problems usually found in transplant experiments."

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, part of the NIH and Walker's home agency, is conducting the research with the National Center for Human Genome Research.

The experiment could conceivably boost Rudy Vasquez's T-cell count.

"I'd be glad if it was just 500," Vasquez said. "But I've never let my T-cell count bother me. I worry about other things. What I can do — like that."

Fort Worth-based American Airlines has offered to provide Rudy Vasquez' airfare for the first visit.

"It sounds like important research that could benefit a lot of people," said Tim Kincaid, a spokesman with American Airlines in Fort Worth.

Air Force veterans find new duty in classroom

By Guy H. Lawrence
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

LUBBOCK — Military personnel who have spent their careers making the future safe for this country are now considering fighting for posterity in the classroom.

"I think education is the key to the future of our youth, and I want to be part of building that future," said Staff Sgt. Rodney Henkel.

Henkel is one of three airmen from Reese Air Force Base to find teaching jobs through the Teacher and Teacher's Aide Placement Assistance Program.

The Defense Department started the program, also known as "Troops to Teachers," in November 1993 to place qualified personnel into schools with teacher shortages. The program has attracted wide interest among military personnel and growing interest among school districts.

Henkel, 31, is teaching reading to eighth-graders at Plainview's Estacado Junior High.

"The Air Force has helped us reach our potential, which we will be able to reflect and help the kids reach their potential," said Henkel, with the 64th Mission Support Squadron at Reese.

'These kinds of teachers will bring our kids a world of experience.'

— Billy Howell, superintendent, Shallowater Independent School District

Master Sgt. David Boom, with the 64th Operations Support Squadron, is teaching social studies to Shallowater sixth-graders. Boom, a 40-year-old weather specialist in the service, said he chose teaching because he enjoys young people at his church.

After student-teaching one time, he knew teaching was the right choice.

"Something is wrong here. It's not supposed to be this much fun," Boom said.

The skills he learned in the Air Force, including supervising and decision-making, will be invaluable in the classroom, Boom said.

Both Henkel and Boom have been working on their master's in education at the Wayland Baptist University Lubbock Center.

The federal program will help relieve teacher shortages in rural and inner city schools with high enrollment of poor students. The program focuses on producing math and science teachers but includes all subject areas.

Billy Howell, superintendent in the Shallowater Independent School District, said the military offers good personnel who bring extensive training to the classroom.

"These kinds of teachers will bring our kids a world of experience," Howell said.

What also attracts a school district's interest is that the program pays 50 percent of the teacher's salary for the first year and then a decreasing percentage over the next four years.

"The federal government kicks in part of the salary and that gives us an incentive to hire," said Dennis Townsend, superintendent of Plainview Independent School District.

At least 20 people at Reese have contacted the education center about the program. Many of them are planning to retire next year. So far, three people have been placed in schools through the program, including Boom and Henkel. A third person was recently hired in Hereford.

The program is administered out of the Defense Activities for Non-Traditional Education Support center in Florida. Jeff Cropsey, deputy director of the center, said the program has been growing steadily since January, and he expects it to continue growing.

Capital murder trial to begin in slayings of man's siblings

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — A 21-year-old man faces a capital murder trial this month in the gruesome, puzzling slayings of two siblings, one of whom was found naked and mutilated.

Jason Massey, formerly of Ennis, says he is innocent in the killings of Christina Ann Benjamin, 14, and her stepbrother, James Brian King, 15.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin today; testimony is expected to start late this month.

In late July 1993, a road worker found Miss Benjamin's naked body in dense brush in rural Telico, 15 miles from her home in Garrett. Her head and hands were gone, and she was covered with cuts. Her body parts have never been found.

An hour later, an Ellis County sheriff's detective found King on a creek bank 100 yards away. He had been shot in the head.

Investigators said information from teen-agers led them to Massey. They later matched hair and fiber samples taken from Massey's car with samples found on and near Miss Benjamin's body and on King's shoes.

Neither Assistant District Attorney Clay Strange nor defense attorney Mike Hartley would comment on the case, citing state District Judge Gene Knize's gag order.

Court records show that days before the bodies were found, Massey allegedly told friends he wanted to have sex with Miss Benjamin, kill her and mutilate her body.

Those friends are expected to testify that Massey liked to decapitate cats and dogs and carry their carcasses in his car, The Dallas Morning News reported in its Monday editions. One friend said Massey fancied becoming a serial killer.

A key witness is Roxanna Garcia, 20, who is expected to testify about allegedly being terrorized by Massey for five years, The News said.

In pretrial hearings, the defense focused unsuccessfully on quashing a search warrant and arrest affidavit and on discrediting DNA blood tests.

Conservation committee to conduct tests at Waco site

WACO (AP) — Supposedly, there's no more lead-contaminated soil at Mount Carmel, where weapons and thousands of rounds of ammunition were stored at the time of the holocaust that destroyed the home of David Koresh and his Branch Davidian followers.

But the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission now says it will study a well on the site for possible contamination.

The agency said the last of the contaminated soil was scheduled to be removed late last week.

TNRCC spokesman Terry Hadley said he's not sure when the state's primary environmental agency will depart Mount Carmel, once the site of the Branch Davidians' heavily fortified compound,

"There still remains some well sampling to do," he said. "We will pump it out and sample that. If the well is contaminated, the pump and pipe inside could be removed and I don't know how involved that is."

Koresh and about 80 of his followers died on April 19, 1993, some by gunshots from within, during a fire that destroyed the compound. At the same time, the fire contaminated the area around their compound in the process.

The fire ended a 51-day standoff between the Branch Davidians and scores of federal agents that began with a thwarted attempt to arrest Koresh on a weapons warrant.

Waco attorney Gary Coker, who secured ownership of the property for surviving longtime Davidians earlier this year, said he's not sure what will happen to Mount Carmel.

"Some people say turn it into a museum; some say turn it into a garden; others say turn into a memorial," Coker said.

"I've even heard people say turn it into an amusement park," he said. "I'm not sure if they were joking or not. But they're apparently trying to put ideas like that into the Davidians' heads. People should know by now, though, that these people are not that concerned about material things or commercial ventures."

Coker said the surviving Davidians have scattered. Janet Kendrick and her husband Woodrow, who was acquitted in the murder trial of 11 Davidians in February, are in Georgia, he said. Gladys Ottman went to Canada, and he doesn't know where Catherine Matteson is, he said.

Coker said he's surprised that no one has expressed an interest in buying Mount Carmel.

That may be due to George Roden, though, he added.

Roden's mother and father once led the Branch Davidians. George Roden lost out in a power struggle to Koresh. Roden is being detained at a state hospital in Vernon, where he was sent after he killed an acquaintance.

LARGEST: New St. Lawrence gin should shorten ginning season

(From 1B)

One of them has a capacity of 12 bales an hour; the other 1,000 bales a day.

When the new gin is complete, the two older gins will still be kept in service, Havlak said.

There is also a gin at Midkiff that is used by some farmers in the area, he added.

Construction on the new gin began March 17 and is expected to be completed Sept. 22.

The ginning machinery is a 3,300 hp Continental 161 that requires 2400 kw of power. Cap Rock Electric will supply power to the facility.

Also under construction is a new office for the St. Lawrence Co-Op, which, in addition to the cotton gins, also runs a supply store, fuel facility and buys and sells milo. The co-op employs 14 people year round.

OTT: Gubernatoral race may get spicy

(From 1B)

$60 million to play professional basketball.

— Surely, our priorities are slightly out of whack.

— Of course, no one complains when an entertainer — be it Frank Sanatra or Barbra Streisand or whoever — gets millions for performing one concert.

— What the heck. If the public is dumb enough to pay you that kind of money to sing a few songs, take it. It's the American way.

— And, today's final quote comes from Dorothy Parker, who once said, "Wit has truth in it; wisecracking is simply calisthenics with words."

YOUTHS: Salcido stresses responsibility of parents

(From 1B)

As the most likely candidates for successful rehabilitation are early offenders whose stay at the center will be relatively short, counseling is intensive, Salcido said.

Juvenile detainees are counseled both individually and in groups. Counselors attempt to isolate the individual needs of these youths and coordinate with other social service organizations for those needs.

Salcido's philosophy is based on making youthful offenders conscious of the consequences of their actions. Forcing offenders to make reparations, either monetarily or through community service, is an integral part of rehabilitation efforts at the center.

Forcing parents to take greater responsibility for their children's behavior is something Salcido stresses. He has had parents claim they could not control an eight-year-old and one parent who claimed she could not make a five-year-old child get out of bed to meet with a juvenile probation officer.

"How can you not control an eight-year-old?" he said.

"Heaven help us if you can't make a five-year-old get up and do something," he added.

Collection of attorney fees for juveniles' court costs has been increased recently. "Attorney's fees hit the parent's pocketbook ... With a direct order from the court, we have been more successful in collecting those attorney fees," he said.

Once a week, Salcido joins a round table discussion on how each specific juvenile offender should be treated. At these discussions are Culver counselors, court prosecutors, juvenile officers with the Police Department, sheriff's office and MISD Police.

Even given Culver personnel's efforts, some youths are simply unable to be helped and are lost to lives of crime and incarceration. "It's sad. It's very sad," Salcido said.

But many children are never seen again in the juvenile justice system following their stay and rehabilitation at Culver. "A lot do come in — we see them once and never see them again," he said.

On rare occasions, young adults will come by the center to visit, after leaving the center as juveniles years before, just to thank Culver personnel for having helped turn their lives around.

"Even though those numbers are few, it makes it all worth it," Salcido said.

Salcido is currently overseeing a project to extend office space in the center. Additional counseling staff to address the growing numbers of juvenile offenders are utilizing office space in file closets and even in the only family visiting room in the Culver Home.

Even with these additions, bed space will have to at least be doubled in the next five or six years. The volume of detainees will simply grow too great for the current facility, Salcido said.

"I've been a victim of juvenile crime myself. The voters get frustrated ... The commissioners get frustrated, but in the meantime, nobody wants more taxes," he said.

Salcido is hopeful that some relief will come from changes on the board for dealing with juvenile offenders. Certifying violent offenders as adults once and forever, instead of having a new certification hearing for each new offense, will take pressure off his staff, he said.

At Wit's End

Many forget about plights some good houseguests must endure

You read a lot of stories about the houseguests from hell. They are visitors who have no curiosity where food comes from, consider a dish towel contagious, and sit around waiting for the host's car to leave the driveway for the next excursion.

Bombeck

Few articles deal with the plight of guests. I have been given a room with no toilet paper in the bath, no soap and no heat. ("Fresh air is good for you.") I have stayed in homes of people who have the social life of informers living under a witness protection program. I have visited couples who eat only two meals a day — one in the early morning darkness when I am still asleep and the other when it is so late, my head falls in my plate and I must be led to my room where I sleep with my clothes on.

I have slept on rollaways in the middle of the living room where I am converted to a breakfast table at 7 a.m. I have slept in upper bunks under Barney sheets and a Beauty and the Beast mobile in my face.

But the worst was a visit to a friend in New England. As I climbed the small, winding staircase to the second floor, she said, "Here's where you sleep." The room was adorable — four-poster bed, chintz curtains, bright wallpaper, light for reading. "It's also Bruno's room," she added. Bruno was a large dog who slobbered for a living and clung to his mistress like a bad suit. "If you just push the door almost shut," she said, "I don't think he'll bother you."

That night as I prepared to make a trip to the bathroom, I heard heavy breathing in the room. I turned on the light. It was Bruno. I swung my feet over the side of the bed. He made a move toward me and started to growl.

Maybe I could wait until morning — or later that day — or whenever anyone stirred.

I turned off the light. In a matter of minutes, the bed shook as something large and furry landed across my feet. I was sleeping with Bruno!

Some people do not consider a visit a success unless they have to have a tongue transplant on their arrival home. I love it when visitors entertain themselves. It's not that I don't like to show off the Grand Canyon. It's just that the squirrels recognize the car.

If you're a good visitor you will not get involved in the game of "Can you top this?" Hosts are a walking Chamber of Commerce pointing out they have the biggest harbor, more museums, better weather, lower interest rates, more jobs, better schools, and more happiness per capita than any other state in the Union.

If you retaliate, there is always the chance you'll get my Uncle Charles' reaction when I sent him to the Grand Canyon. "Looks like an Ohio ditch to me."

Dear Abby

Old adage is good advice: If shoe fits, wear it

DEAR ABBY: I am a clerk in a shoe store. The letter you published a while ago from a medical assistant in a foot clinic, complaining about the shoe requirements for flight attendants, caught my attention.

Van Buren

While I know nothing about the shoe requirements for flight attendants, I know that every dress shoe for women that has a 1 1/2-inch heel is considered a high heel. (It is a low high heel, but it's considered a high heel in the shoe trade.)

I see women every day with foot problems that could have been avoided had they worn the proper size shoes. Many women don't want to admit that they need a larger or wider size than what they have been accustomed to wearing.

Cramming the foot into a shoe that is too small can cause corns, bunions and hammertoes — not to mention leg and back pains.

Most women do not realize that their feet have a tendency to widen over the years, and that pregnancy or a significant weight gain can affect their shoe size.

Also, it is not uncommon for one foot to be larger than the other — in which case, the larger foot is the one that should be fitted.

Abby, please stress the importance of wearing only shoes that fit, because foot problems caused by ill-fitting shoes are painful, costly, inconvenient and preventable. Sign this ... WHEN YOUR FEET HURT, YOU HURT ALL OVER

DEAR WHEN: Thanks for a letter to which many women will relate. And be assured that there is a special place in heaven for shoe clerks who have never sold a pair of shoes to a woman unless they fit properly.

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from Arlene E. Differding of Summerville, S.C., I saw myself! She wrote about people who RSVP'd in the affirmative but failed to show up at the wedding.

I was married three months ago, and the same thing happened to me. Even though 85 people had sent their acceptances two to three weeks before the wedding, I called them three days before to reconfirm, and they all said they would be there.

Well, 45 people showed up! It was very upsetting. The bill for my reception could have been cut in half, but the caterers allowed only a 3 percent reduction for no-shows.

When I asked the no-shows why they didn't attend, their excuses were: "I forgot," "I couldn't get off from work," "I lost my invitation and didn't know how to get there," or "I wasn't sure what time it was being held." — MRS. BROWN IN VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

DEAR MRS. BROWN: I never cease to be amazed at some of the letters I receive dealing with invitations, acceptances and no-shows. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when you invite a couple to a wedding and reception and you address it to the couple, and on the RSVP card where it asks how many are attending, they include three or four children? How do you handle this? — J.C.A.

DEAR J.C.A.: I would telephone the couple and tell them, "I am unable to accommodate the children." And by the way, I think that asking, "How many are attending," is sometimes perceived as an invitation to bring along uninvited guests. (It's not!)

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. DALLAS (AP) — The Associated Press high school football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, records through Sept. 5, total points based on 10 points for a first-place vote through one point for a 10th-place vote, and ranking in the preseason poll. Fox nails it

NEW YORK — Fox's overnight rating for its first Sunday of regular-season NFL coverage was 18 percent higher than CBS' rating for the first weekend of the 1993 season.

Sunday's games on Fox got a 13.0 overnight rating and a 32 share, Nielsen Media Research said Monday. The rating is the percentage of televisions tuned in from 32 major markets and the share is the percentage watching among televisions in those markets that are on at the time. National ratings will be released later this week.

Fox took over NFC coverage from CBS, which had the rights for 38 years. Fox also beat NBC, which averaged a 12.4 overnight rating and 31 share for its coverage of AFC games.

Graf speeds across Open

■ Top-seeded Steffi Graf makes short work of Houston's Zina Garrison Jackson.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Maybe they ought to label the courts at the U.S. Open the way they do some parking lots:

"Caution: Speed Bumps Ahead."

Pete Sampras insists the Center Court surface has its own set of ups and downs, not exactly the conditions you want at a Grand Slam event.

"The court isn't really that level," he said. "It has little humps and bumps. You can see it out there."

He can, perhaps because he is the No. 1 player in the world. Not every one else can.

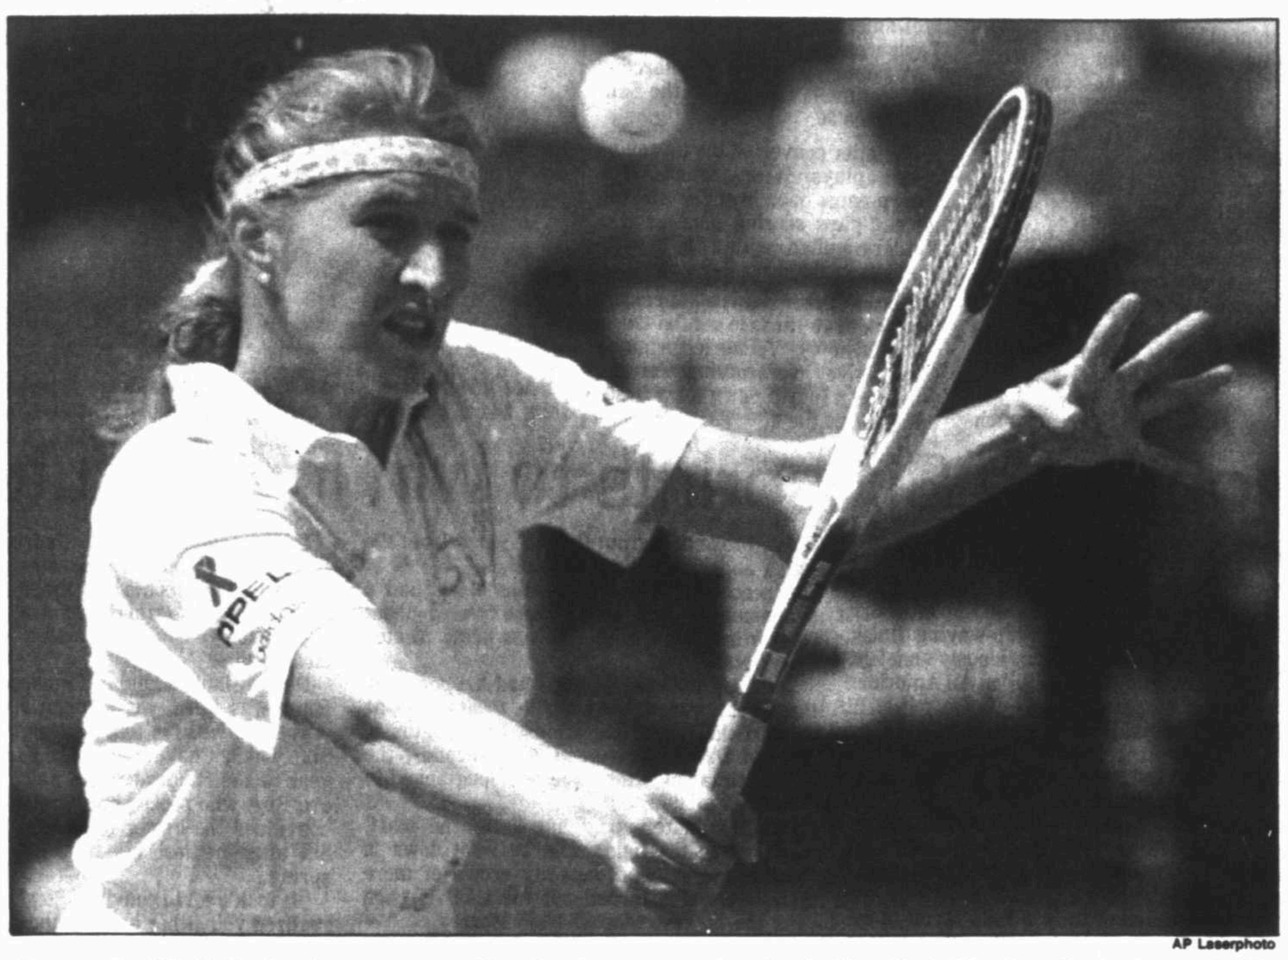

Steffi Graf, who made fast work of Zina Garrison Jackson 6-1, 6-2 Monday, said the courts seem the same as always to her.

"Some are faster, some are a little slower," she said. "I don't think there have been any differences from years before."

Garrison Jackson was asked about the surface and her answer paid tribute to Graf's dominance. "Actually," she said, "I couldn't have noticed anything. I was just trying to get the ball back."

The National Tennis Center courts are resurfaced annually and there is the suspicion among some of the players that they've been deliberately slowed to benefit baseline play and cre-

It's the same old Dallas

■ Barry Switzer is the new coach of the Cowboys, but the results seem to be the same.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — New coach. Same old result.

The defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys answered questions about Barry Switzer, middle linebacker, the defensive line and place kicking with a solid 26-9 victory over Pittsburgh on Sunday.

"Everybody kept saying we were old and that teams could run over us," said defensive end Jim Jeffcoat. "I think we showed we still have it. I think we showed that a change of coaches hasn't changed the way we play on the field."

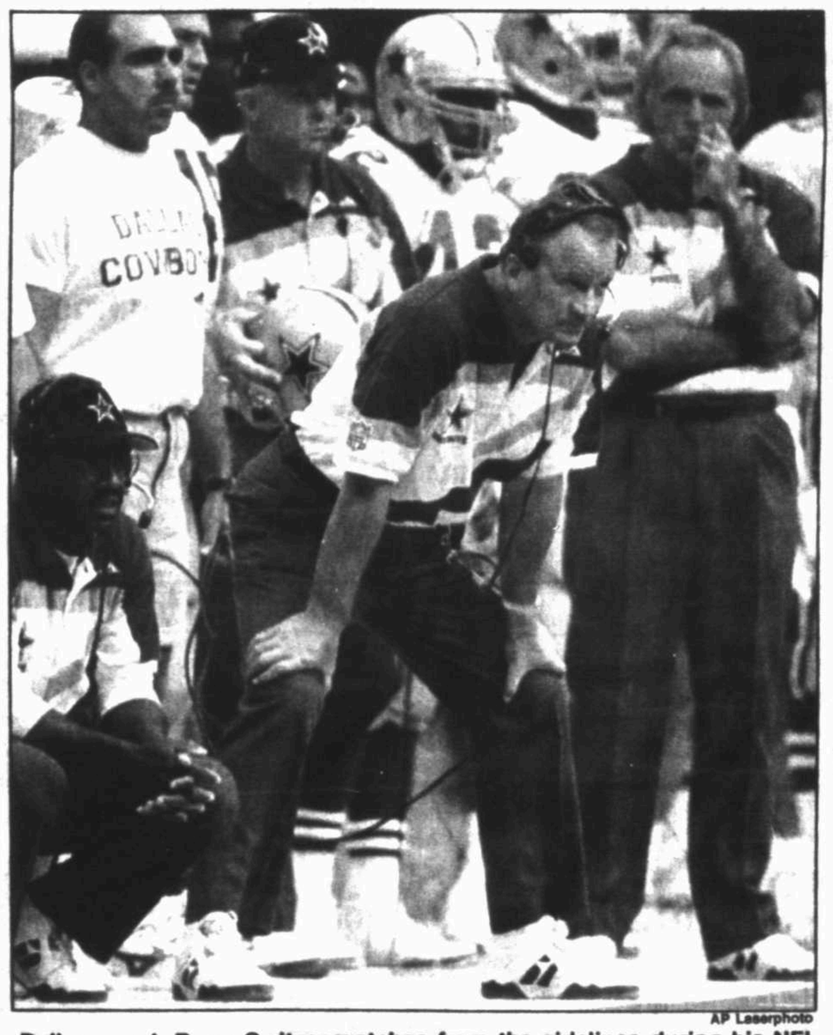

"We're not as deep as the team we had last year but everything else is in place," said defensive end Charles Haley, who had four of the Cowboys' nine sacks. "We have a good chance to do what no other team has done."

The Cowboys are trying to become the first team to win three consecutive Super Bowls.

"These other guys are trying for three rings and I just want one ring," said Switzer, who replaced Jimmy Johnson. "It's a great feeling and a great way to start."

Switzer became the first Cowboys head coach to win his opener, something Tom Landry and Johnson couldn't accomplish.

Rice sets TD record with three

SAN FRANCISCO — Jerry Rice finally scored against the Los Angeles Raiders and moved to the top of the NFL's career touchdown list.

■ 49ers 44, Raiders 14

Rice scored three times Monday night to become the league's career touchdown leader with his 127th career touchdown and help the San Francisco 49ers open impressively with a 44-14 victory over the Raiders.

They were the first touchdowns by Rice in four games against the Raiders and they moved him past Jim Brown as the league's touchdown leader.

Rice got the record when he outleaped Albert Lewis on a 38-yard touchdown pass from Steve Young with 4:05 to play.

He immediately was surrounded by teammates as they celebrated the record.

Rice, who has 120 touchdowns receiving, tied Brown when he ran 23 yards on a reverse for his second touchdown of the game earlier in the fourth quarter.

Ricky Watters started the play by sweeping left. Rice came from the opposite direction, took the handoff from

Odessa claims disputed national softball crown

■ Odessa takes two games from Sacramento, Calif., to win the Men's Class C National Fast Pitch Softball Tournament.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

The finals of the Men's Class C National Fast Pitch Softball Tournament had all the drama build up of a seventh game of the World Series.

Both teams — Sacramento, Calif., and the home town favorite Odessa — had grown a disliking for one another during its first meeting in the tournament, a 6-4 Sacramento win on Sunday.

The emotions hit a climax during the "if" game when Odessa center fielder Gary Ashby was thrown out the game in the bottom of the fourth after receiving a walk on ball four and the game tied 3-3.

A heated argument ensued with Odessa manager Don Miller pleading Ashby's case. But after 10 minutes, Ashby, who had gone 2-for-2 with two doubles in the game and had gone 3-for-3 with a three-run home run in the earlier game, was sitting on the bench.

While no punches were thrown, the damage had been done for Sacramento.

Cleanup hitter Rich Wieligman followed with an electrifying grand slam homer that propelled Odessa to an 8-5 win in the finals for the national title.

"You don't throw out someone in a championship game for something like that," said Ashby, who was an All-America performer for Texas Tech in the 1970's and played professionally in the San Diego Padres organization. "He said I was showing him up, but how do you show someone up on a ball four call. Maybe a strike three call, but not a ball four.

RECORD: Rice breaks Brown TD mark 1-2-3

(From 1C)

Watters and went around the right side and broke into the clear for the touchdown.

The score was set up by Dennis Brown's interception of Jeff Hostetler at the Raiders 36.

Rice finished with seven receptions for 169 yards.

Jim Brown had held the touchdown record since the running back retired from the Cleveland Browns in 1965.

Young was 19-for-32 for 308 yards had four touchdown passes, the first and last going to Rice.

Brent Jones caught Young's other touchdown passes, the second an 8-yarder on the first play of the fourth quarter.

Rice's first touchdown and Doug Brien's first field goal helped San Francisco take a 23-14 halftime lead. Brien, who kicked a 33-yard field goal with three seconds left in the second quarter, also made a touchdown-saving tackle of Raghib "Rocket" Ismail to stop his first-quarter kickoff return at 51 yards.

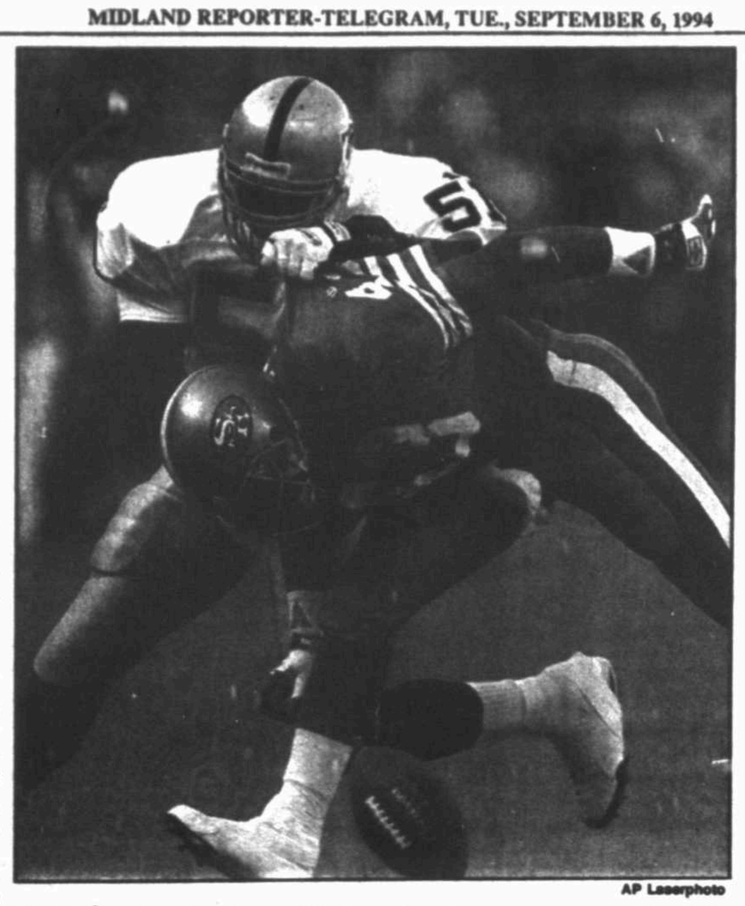

Rice got his 125th career touchdown on the bomb from Young, streaking past Lionel Washington and Patrick Bates. He gathered in the pass about the 30, stumbled when Washington dived at his ankles but maintained his balance and raced the rest of the way into the end zone untouched for a 7-0 lead.

Jones scored on a 15-yard scoring pass to put San Francisco up 14-0.

A turnover opened the door for the Raiders to score. Terry McDaniel broke up a pass to John Taylor and linebacker Greg Biekert came up with the interception, return it 11 yards to the San Francisco 30.

Hostetler converted the turnover seven plays later, when Tim Brown came open over the middle for a 7-yard scoring pass as the Raiders pulled within 14-7 with 9:44 left in the second quarter.

Dexter Carter returned the ensuing kickoff 40 yards to set the 49ers up at their 49. Young led a nine-play drive, scrambling for 23 yards on a fourth down for a first-and-goal at the 8.

No. 1 McArthur wins, then works out twice

Associated Press

Aldine MacArthur had little time to savor its victory over Fort Bend Willowridge.

The top-ranked Generals spent Labor Day practicing — not once, but twice — to get ready for Thursday night's game against Angleton.

"We just got back from two-a-days," said MacArthur coach Bob Alpert, whose team shut down Willowridge 16-3 Friday night in a battle for No. 1 in The Associated Press high school football poll.

Class 5A MacArthur, like all other No. 1 teams in the preseason AP poll, retained the top ranking in the first regular-season poll, which was released Monday.

MacArthur was the only Top 10 5A team that retained its preseason position on the poll. Five of the Top 10 lost their openers, and one tied.

Spring Westfield moved up to No. 2 from No. 6 with a 38-17 victory over Temple. Euless Trinity improved from ninth to third after beating Arlington Bowie, 28-17. And Abilene Cooper's 54-0 pounding of Brownwood moved Cooper up from No. 10 to No. 4.

Traditional powers Plano and Odessa Permian, both unranked in the preseason, also were selected to the top 10.

Plano edged defending 5A Division II champions Lewisville 10-7, knocking the Farmers from the top 10 and earning the No. 5 spot for themselves. Odessa Permian's 35-14 victory over El Paso Coronado earned them the No. 8 ranking.

DeSoto was ranked tenth following its 10-7 upset of preseason No. 4 Dallas Carter.

Longview and Austin Westlake also checked in, ranked No. 7 and No. 8, respectively.

■ Prep Rankings

Willowridge, ranked second before losing to MacArthur, slipped to No. 6.

Sulphur Springs held on to the top 4A spot after beating Carthage, 36-7.

Cuero remained No. 1 in 3A after shutting out preseason No. 5 Columbus, 26-0.

Schulenberg stayed at the top 2A position by pounding Hallettsville, 68-19 and Thorndale's 39-12 beating of Franklin kept them atop 1A.

Despite being selected No. 1 by a panel of sports writers and broadcasters, Alpert said MacArthur still must improve before playing Angleton, which won its opener against West Columbia, 32-7.

"We just need to execute on offense this week," said Alpert, whose Generals garnered 24 of 27 first-place vote "Angleton is going to be fired up. It'll make their season if they beat us."

The top 4A team wasn't quite as clear cut. Voters cast at least two first-place votes for five different teams.

No. 1 Sulphur Springs got 16 votes. Stephenville's 44-6 drubbing of Boswell resulted in three first-place votes, and they held on to their No. 2 preseason position.

Sherman moved up from No. 4 to No. 3 and gained three No. 1 votes for its 27-14 victory over Fort Smith (Ark.) Southside. No. 4 Waxahachie (2) and No. 5 La Marque (3) also got first-place votes

The Indians' move to No. 4 came after their 19-7 upset of McKinney, which was ranked third in the preseason poll. The Lions fell to No. 10 after the defeat.

Noblesse Six sprints to win in rich futurity

By Pete Herrera
AP Sports Writer

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Noblesse Six, with a solid start and a whip-waving finish, outran Darlin Sixarun and previously undefeated Major Rime in the $1.6 million All American Futurity on Monday.

Noblesse Six paid $14.40, $5.80 and $3.40. Darlin Sixarun returned $4.80 and $3.20, while Major Rime paid $2.80 to show. Delightful Lark, owned by Midland's Gwendolyn Eaves, finished sixth.

Owned by retired Albuquerque trucking company owner Steve Chavez and ridden by veteran New Mexico jockey Chris Zamora, Noblesse Six took command of the 440-yard sprint in the final 50 yards to win the $1 million that goes to the winner.

The race, the richest in quarter horse racing, was marred by the worst accident in the history of the race. Doo Dominate, a brown colt owned by Osvaldo B. Rodriguez of Anthony, N.M., broke both front legs 100 yards from the finish and had to be destroyed.

A second horse, Ghost Witha Most, had a compound fracture of the right foreleg about 200 yards into the race. He was being treated by a veterinarian.

Zamora, unaware of what had happened up the track, waved his whip in a circle as he crossed the finish line almost two lengths in front of Darlin Sixarun in 21.35 seconds, the fastest time since the race was lengthened to 440 yards in 1973.

Doo Dominate, struggling from the start, was trailing the field when he went down in front of the stunned capacity crowd of more than 10,000 who turned out for what is each year the biggest race in New Mexico.

Billy Peterson, riding Doo Dominate, went tumbling over the horse's head when it broke down and the horse narrowly missed rolling over him. Peterson was able to walk away limping from the scene and was not seriously injured.

Early leader Darlin Sixarun and Major Rime, which had won six straight races and was trying to become only the second New Mexico-bred horse to win the All American in its 36-year history, could not match Noblesse Six's closing kick.

Darlin Sixarun held on for second, and Major Rime was third, his winning streak history.

The win was the fourth straight for Noblesse Six, which Chavez purchased for $23,000 last year at the Ruidoso Select Sale. Trainer Richard Fry, who picked out the horse for Chavez, convinced the owner to let him geld Noblesse Six after he lost his first five races in the spring.

"It took a lot to convince Steve, but he finally realized you either have a stud horse or a race horse," Fry said.

Noblesse Six hasn't lost since he was gelded and has developed into a classic quarter-mile sprinter.

"He's always had a tremendous kick on the end . " Fry

"That's a little special," Switzer said. "I'll savor it."

Middle linebacker Robert Jones had his best day with six tackles as Dallas held Pittsburgh to 55 rushing yards. Barry Foster gained only 44 yards on 12 carries.

Safety James Washington said, "Robert told us in the huddle we could count on him and he came through."

Rookie Chris Boniol of Louisiana Tech made an impression as Eddie "Money" Murray's replacement, hitting all four field goal tries. Murray took the free agency road to Philadelphia.

"I was perfect and that's what I have to be," Boniol said. "Now, I need to work on getting my kickoffs deeper into the end zone."

There weren't any questions about running back, but Emmitt Smith, seeking a fourth consecutive NFL rushing title, went out and gained 171 yards to remind everyone why he was the regular season and Super Bowl MVP.

"It was important that we get off to a good start," Smith said. "We executed. Now we have to do it 15 more times."

Quarterback Troy Aikman said a fast start was imperative "because of all the changes that occurred in the off-season. If we started off wrong it would raise a lot of doubts and concerns and that wouldn't have been good for the team."

Aikman hit 21 of 32 passes for 245 yards and one touchdown. Wide receiver Michael Irvin caught eight passes for 139 yards.

"It wasn't bad for an opener," Aikman said, "but there is still a lot of room to get better."

Aikman said Monday he was getting a little tired of Irvin's constant complaints for the football.

"I don't tolerate that," he said. "Michael should be wise enough to realize he will get the ball."

COWBOY NOTE: Quarterback Troy Aikman on Monday explained the flap about his jersey's NFL 75th anniversary logo.

The logo is supposed to be attached on the left. But Aikman wipes his face with the left side of his jersey and said the patch was scratching him.

So Aikman asked a Cowboys staffer to move the patch to another part of the jersey. Aikman says he thought the move had been cleared through the league, but later found the switch had been OK'd by Cowboys owner Jerry Jones.

The league apparently wasn't pleased. "I got a letter (from the NFL) saying if I didn't take care of the problem, I would get fined," Aikman said.

TITLE: Odessa sweeps finals

(From 1C)

"I think he (the umpire) was a little thin skinned and knew that he had missed a couple of calls earlier."

The break in the action during the argument that ensued worked to Odessa's advantage as Wieligman followed with the big blast and then former Lubbock Christian standout Daren Hays followed with a solo homer run of starter Ken Brose to make it 8-3.

"The delay sure didn't hurt me," said Wieligman, who named the tournament's most valuable player. "I wasn't thinking about hitting a home run, I just thought if I could get a hit I could drive a couple in. That home run really knocked the wind out of them."

Sacramento manager Troy Blane concurred that the delay crippled his team.

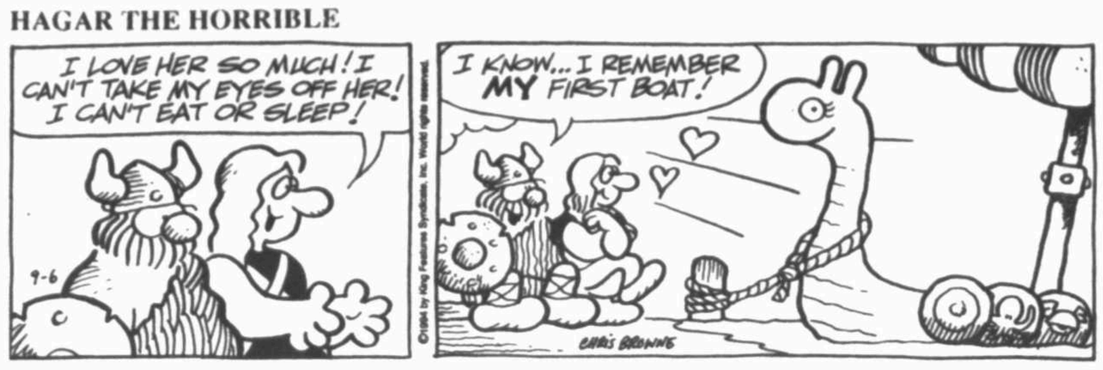

"My pitcher got cold and they took advantage," said Blane.

"I said it yesterday, win or lose, that this team (Odessa) should not be playing in this tournament. They have too many players who are Class A players. I've heard from people in the North-South vulnerable. South deals.

WEST ♠ 7 5 4 ♡ 9 8 3 ◇ Q 10 7 3 ♣ K J 10		EAST ♠ 10 8 6 2 ♡ K Q 10 6 ◇ 4 ♣ 6 5 4 2
	SOUTH ♠ Q J ♡ A 5 4 2 ◇ A K 9 2 ♣ A Q 8

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ◇

South tied a world record by capturing the first trick at his three no trump contract with the five. So impressive was this achievement, the contract was forgotten in the process.

South was on the borderline of an opening bid of two no trump. The flaw in spades precluded that, but South showed a strong balanced hand after North responded in spades, and the no trump game was the result.

West led a low diamond and, since that was declarer's suit and East could not produce a card higher than the four, it should have been obvious to all that West held four diamonds. But declarer was delighted to let dummy's five win the first trick. A diamond to the king confirmed the 4-1 break, and suddenly declarer realized that, with no entry to dummy, the only chance for four spade tricks was to drop the ten in three rounds.

The queen of spades was cashed, the jack was overtaken with the king and the ace was cashed. No ten. When the club finesse lost into the bargain, declarer had to settle for eight tricks.

As so often happens, the contract was blown at trick one. Had declarer won the first trick in hand with a high honor, the queen and jack of spades could then be unblocked. Declarer can then continue with the ace of diamonds and another, forcing an entry to dummy with the jack of diamonds. That allows declarer to gather in four spade tricks and nine in all.

Raunchy rockers hit dead end on journey to 'Sesame Street'

LOS ANGELES — Raunchy rockers Red Hot Chili Peppers found a dead end in their attempt to get to "Sesame Street."

Lead singer Anthony Kiedis recently told Britain's "Melody Maker" magazine the group has "wanted to play Sesame Street" for a long time, and had finally been accepted for a guest spot.

A Children's Television Workshop publicist confirmed there were contacts with the band. But Carolyn Miller said producers concluded the group "would not be appropriate" for the show.

In January, federal health officials dumped Kiedis from a public service ad campaign promoting condom use when they learned of his 1990 conviction for sexual battery and indecent exposure after a concert in Virginia.

The band also stirred controversy in 1987, when members band posed for a publicity photo wearing nothing but sweat socks on their genitals.

Miller said the Los Angeles-based group's raunchy reputation wasn't the reason producers decided against a guest spot. She said, "It's a hot band, but we just don't feel they'd be suited to our audience."

LAS VEGAS — Bette Midler returned to Las Vegas after an 18-year absence and lost no time getting in some digs at Lisa Marie Presley, Barbra Streisand and even herself.

Bette Midler returns to Las Vegas after 18 years.

"Las Vegas, Las Vegas, what has happened," she said Sunday night during one of her two sold-out performances at the MGM Grand Arena. "I got respectable and so did you. With pirate battles, jousters and volcanoes, the poor hookers have to dress up like Barney to get any attention."

"I worry about Lisa Marie Presley," she said, referring to Presley's recent marriage to pop star Michael Jackson. "I don't think she understands why they call it (Jackson's California ranch) Neverland."

After a ballad she told the audience, "I wish I'd brought my carpet, like the other Jewish girl."

The dig referred to Streisand, who performed at the MGM Grand Arena with two New Year's weekend concerts. There were reports she used carpeting to enhance the acoustics at the Grand and other venues on her concert tour.

As for herself, Midler referred to her recording career as "the scud missile of show business."

Midler, who took her act on the road last year, winds up her current tour next week in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Jane Seymour and husband James Keach have put their luxurious vacation home near Bath, England, up for rent. They're asking a hefty $10,000 a week.

Jane Seymour and husband are asking $10,000 a week.

Seymour has had a hectic schedule this summer, after her Emmy nomination for her performances in "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman," which Keach directed.

The 13-acre estate, called St. Catherine's Court, has some history to it. Most of the country house was built during the reign of Henry VIII, whose third wife was Seymour's namesake. Portions of the renovated estate date to a Benedictine monastery built more than 1,000 years ago.

"I've owned it for almost 12 years now," said Seymour, who lives in Malibu with her husband and four children. "I do miss not going there this summer."

"We decided to rent it out to people who want a British experience that they can get only by living in a house such as ours," she said.

The house has nine bedrooms, five reception rooms and an acoustically perfect ball room.

LOS ANGELES — Actress Luise Rainer spoke about the collapse of her 1930s Hollywood career. In a rare appearance, she said her only regret was that there was "so much inside me" that she wasn't able to show.

The 84-year-old Rainer, who lives in London, won back-to-back Oscars in 1936 and 1937 for "The Great Ziegfeld" and "The Good Earth," then quit the screen.

In retrospect, she expressed uneasy emotions about the large amount of attention — and scrutiny — she received in her first years in Hollywood. She also said the roles she was offered after her early successes were meant for box office profits, with little attention given to the quality of the work.

Rainer was in Hollywood to accept an award from the Society for Cinephiles.

NFL's top names explode in openers

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

What happened when the NFL started playing for real?

Many of the game's top names showed up and had terrific games, from Joe Montana and Dan Marino to Junior Seau and even rookie Marshall Faulk. Oh yes, and Sterling Sharpe appeared after a one-day walkout.

There's more:

—Montana and Marino, along with John Elway, Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith showed why they're on their way to Canton. And Boomer Esiason and Randall Cunningham, whose careers w re in doubt, proved they can still perform with the best.

—Faulk had 143 yards in his first game on his way to becoming Emmitt Smith and Drew Bledsoe nearly outpassed Marino on his way to become the next Marino.

—Seau plucked a fumble out of the air to save San Diego's win on his way to becoming the next Lawrence Taylor. "You're the man," Taylor told him after the game. "No," replied Seau, "You're STILL the man."

—And Barry Switzer won his first game as coach of the Cowboys.

It was, everything considered, an opening day that commissioner Paul Tagliabue could only dream about. He even has baseball on strike, keeping the entire focus on football.

"Call back later, I'm watching the Packers' game," Bud Selig, chairman of baseball's executive council and a member of the Packers' board, told a caller Sunday.

Everything was working for the NFL on Sunday.

All those new rules to increase scoring?

There were an average of 45.6 points scored in Sunday's 13 games compared to 41.9 in 14 games the first weekend last year. Going into Monday night's Raiders-49ers game, there were 594 points scored, more than the 587 in all the games on opening weekend last year.

Two-point conversions? Terry Kirby ran for two points in Miami's 39-35 win over New England, preventing the Patriots from going for a late field goal.

Of 122 kickoffs Sunday, only 11 were touchbacks, or 9 percent.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for anyone willing to work early morning hours. These routes require a small deposit.
