Punxsutawney Phil he's not, but this prairie dog did see his shadow when he popped his head above ground this morning near Midland. And if what applies to the ground hog can apply to a prairie dog, then we're in for another six weeks of winter weather. Perhaps that's why there's a 20 percent chance of snow forecast for Wednesday.

Better burrow in — Beast bets on blizzardy blasts

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil, the underground oracle named for this town, saw his shadow when he peered from his groundhog burrow this morning and tradition says that means six more weeks of the calamitous Winter of '82.

The furry prophet fed his dreary forecast to a winter-weary land through Charles M. Erhard, president of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, who roused the slumbering rodent from his electrically heated burrow.

The long-range forecast issued by the National Weather Service concurred with Phil's findings in a year that has seen record cold temperatures nationwide.

"The National Meteorological Center checked with Uncle Phil before they put out their extended forecast, and they agree with his prognosis," said meteorologist Frank Lucadamo in Pittsburgh.

According to myth and legend, spring would have been right around the corner if Phil had not seen his shadow.

But the mystic marmot has predicted an extended winter every year but two since 1960.

Similar events were planned across the state in Quarryville, Pa., and Sun Prairie, Wis. But townspeople here insist that Phil, who has been making forecasts since 1877, is a peerless prognosticator.

"The rest of them are Johnny-come-latelies or phonies. Only Phil is the seer of seers," said Erhard, who donned a silk hat and tails and carried a gnarled cane to rap on Phil's burrow.

The groundhog lives in a glass-enclosed pen with his mate, Phyllis, in the center of town. They eat a diet, recommended by a zookeeper, of dry dog food, animal vitamins, apples and carrots.

Phil is put into his burrow on Gobbler's Knob just before the big event on Groundhog Day.

There is no scientific evidence that any animal can forecast the weather. And the National Geographic Society once pointed out that groundhogs normally hibernate until March, not early February.

But this town of 7,792, located 80 miles north of Pittsburgh and named by the Delaware Indians for a vicious species of black flies that once thrived here, has cultivated international fame by promoting a myth that can be traced back to ancient Scotland.

To mark the occasion, the local high school crowns a groundhog king and queen. And the town honors its man and woman of the year at a Groundhog Day banquet, held after Phil's prediction, which is duly recorded annually in the Congressional Record.

"It's a fun thing. It's the kind of holiday that if it didn't exist, we'd have to invent it. What else would you do on Feb. 2?" said Elaine Light, a historian and former reporter who has written two books about Punxsutawney and Groundhog Day.

"Besides, Punxsutawney Phil is as accurate as any television weatherman, and he doesn't make bad jokes. He just says what he has to say and goes back to sleep," she said.

Feb. 2 is the old Christian feast of Candlemas, celebrated 40 days after Christmas to mark the first time Jesus was taken to the temple.

The Scots had this saying: "If Candlemas be fair, there be two winters in the year."

The conquering Romans introduced the tradition to the Germans, who tied the prediction to the hibernation cycle of the hedgehog. German settlers brought the idea to America, and with no hedgehogs about, they substituted groundhogs.

Clymer Freas, a city editor at the Spirit, revived the tradition 95 years ago. He and his cronies ate barbecued groundhog at an annual summer picnic, and they came up with the idea of Groundhog Day.

Now, Punxsutawney is known as the groundhog capial of the world, thanks in part to local promotion and an annual media blitz.

"It's a tongue-in-cheek deal," said Erhard. "There isn't a town anywhere that wouldn't love to have what we have right now, if they could capture it."

Unknown projectile 'rocks' Bush's car

WASHINGTON (AP) — An armored limousine carrying Vice President George Bush to work was struck early today by an unknown object — almost certainly a rock, according to the FBI. No one was injured and it was unknown where the rock came from.

Ron Dervish, a spokesman for the FBI, said, "It appears that a rock hit the car." The dented car was examined by technicians and "they are 90 to 99 percent sure it was a rock."

But he did not know how it happened. "The rock might have been thrown or picked up by another car," he said.

Another FBI spokesman, Larry Knisley, said he did not know whether the rock had been found.

But, for several hours investigators had worried that the car might have been hit by a bullet. Bush himself speculated as much, according to one source who spoke with him at the White House afterward.

Later, asked as he was arriving at the Senate if he knew his car might have been the target of a projectile, replied: "No, I couldn't tell that. It was just a big bang."

But security was unusually tight as he arrived at the Capitol. Reporters were kept well clear of the vice president and police maintained a heavy presence.

Bush had personally told President Reagan of the incident, spokesman Pete Roussel said.

SECRET SERVICE spokesman Jack Warner said the motorcade proceeded to Old Executive Office Building after the 7:25 a.m. EST incident. Bush went to his office and took part in what an aide called a "routine meeting." The building is next to the White House.

Warner said agents and experts were "going over the car.... Speculation is that it was a gunshot, but we have not definitively concluded that."

A congressional source who demanded anonymity said Bush believed the object was a bullet.

But Warner, told what the source said, replied, "I don't have any idea where a person would have the background information to make that statement."

Gentile, who earlier said there had been an unconfirmed report of a man with a rifle on a rooftop, said police and Secret Service agents were conducting a building-by-building search along two blocks of L Street, where the incident occurred. Agents also combed the street, picking up nails and other pieces of metal in hopes of finding a clue.

BUT THE SEARCH was over by mid-morning. "We have found nothing," Gentile said.

Asked if the car could have been hit by a rock or by a projectile fired from a gun used to imbed nails in concrete, Gentile said, "We're checking into every possibility." A new condominium-office complex is being built nearby.

Contacted in Midland this morning, George W. Bush, son of the vice president, said he knew nothing more about the incident than what was being carried on news reports this morning. Bush had no further comment, other than to say he had not talked with his father since the incident.

Gentile said the car's driver "heard a thump" and, when he arrived at the White House, discovered a V-shaped dent in the rear roof of the car.

Earlier, Warner said, "As far as we can tell at this time, the vice president's limousine was hit by some sort of a projectile. It was hit in the left rear in the roof area."

BUSH SPOSESMAN Shirley Green said Bush "heard a loud noise." But Bush's press secretary, Pete Teeley, said the vice president did not realize his limousine had been hit.

Two Secret Service agents were in the car with him, Ms. Green said.

Warner said the agents said the noise "sounded like a gunshot" but that they could not be sure.

"Nobody was injured; everybody is safe. The only harm was to the limousine and at this time we're not sure what type of projectile it was," Warner also said.

Warner said metal fragments presumed to have come from the projectile were recovered from underneath the vinyl on the car roof. But it was not immediately clear what the metal came from or even whether it could be part of the armored roof itself, he said.

Gentile said shortly after the incident that what sounded like gunshots had been heard in the area.

THE INCIDENT occurred on L Street NW between 21st and 22nd streets, about eight blocks from the White House, just as dawn broke over the city.

"The vehicle has been impounded and the incident is being investigated," White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said.

Early rush-hour traffic was backed up for blocks as police blockaded L Street and several cross streets. Scores of Secret Service agents and city policemen were at the scene and police helicopters hovered overhead checking rooftops.

Teeley said that after Bush arrived at his office he received his usual intelligence briefing and met with former Washington Redskins football coach George Allen and Casey Conrad of the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

THE FIRST ITEM on the vice president's published schedule was an 8:30 a.m. session with his senior staff in Bush's office in the Old Executive Office Building adjacent to the White House, but Teeley said it is not unusual for Bush to arrive about 7:30 and have his intelligence briefing and a short meeting or picture-taking session before his formal business day begins.

Teeley said he first spoke to Bush shortly before 8 a.m., and the vice president "didn't seem at all concerned" about the incident.

Wastewater order affirmed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission has affirmed a temporary order it granted in January to allow the city of Midland to begin using additional land for the irrigation of crops with treated wastewater.

The TWC upheld its action of Jan. 6, but amended the temporary order to require the city to file an application within 30 days for approval of new treatment facilities to meet the city's long-term needs.

The temporary order, which authorizes the city to irrigate 1,295 acres of farm land with treated effluent from its sewage treatment plant, was adopted at the same time the TWC affirmed a previous order allowing Midland to discharge effluent from holding ponds down Midland Draw.

That action was necessary to keep the holding ponds from overflowing, and the city sought approval for the additional irrigation acreage to prevent a similar situation from arising in the future. The city had authority to irrigate 1,650 acres prior to the Jan. 6 action.

Midland City Attorney Joe Nuessle told the TWC that the city is prepared to file within a few days an application for a permit to build new treatment facilities in the Johnson Draw area about 18 miles from Midland. Facilities near Midland Draw would be shut down.

Under the modified order, the city will file that application within 30 days, with time schedules for completion of that project to be filed within 60 days.

The project is to be completed within two years of the granting of a permit by the TWC.

Other modifications in the Jan. 6 order include limits on the amount of nitrogen content in the effluent used for irrigation. Those limitations include 120 pounds per acre per year for cotton crops, 97 pounds per acre per year for grain sorghum and 76 pounds per year for small grains.

Snelson responds to conflict-of-interest charges

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

State Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson deviated temporarily from his plans to run a positive campaign in seeking the Democratic nomination for land commissioner Monday afternoon afteropponent Garry Mauro riled Snelson to the point he decided to answer the charges.

Mauro accused Snelson of having a conflict of interest because of income from a family-owned oil- and gas-producing company and of not being qualified for the job.

Snelson, who has represented Midland as a state representative and then state senator for a combined 20 years, said he had been warned that Mauro would run a mud-slinging campaign.

"Ordinarily, I don't like to respond. It's not part of my campaign plans. But his half-truths he was using should be responded to," Snelson said this morning in his Midland office.

Mauro claimed that Snelson had said he gets half of his income some years from the oil and gas leases.

Snelson replied that he had been asked early in the campaign about his involvement with the family corporation, 6-S Co., and said that his income varies each year, depending upon his advertising business or the leases. He is part owner of Snelson, Randel & Johnson, Inc. advertising firm in Midland.

However, Snelson pointed out that the land office nor the land commissioner can make decisions that would affect those lands. The leases would continue to be operated as a family corporation.

"The key element is that it's already been set out in the law as to what the land office can do. The land office is a repository for copies of agreements. The contractual relationship often was drawn up many years earlier," said Snelson. The owner retains a royalty interest while someone makes the decisions on drilling and operating the lease.

He explained that 6-S Co. owns one stripper lease on state-owned land which produces about two barrels of oil per day and that lease is 50 years old. In this category, Snelson added, the state owns the land and mineral rights. In addition, the family company operates 14 leases on mineral-classified land.

Mauro, contended Snelson, "is playing on people's fears of the oil industry. He shouldn't be in office if he doesn't understand anything about that office."

These conflict of interest charges started early in the campaign and were aimed at Snelson and Billy Clayton. But once Clayton dropped out of politics, that left Snelson alone.

A conflict of interest can arise in any field, according to Snelson who pointed out that Mauro works with an Austin law firm that also represents land developers.

Mauro had also charged that Snelson wasn't qualified for the office, saying that "being a state senator or representative and voting 'yes' or 'no' for four months every two years doesn't give you the experience you need to show up 8 to 5 every day and implement policies for every day."

Snelson retorted that Mauro "has jumped from one assignment to another. He was executive director for the State Democratic Party for two years and that tenure is clouded."

Pointing to his 20 years in the State Legislature, Snelson added that he had served on the budget committee which set up the state budget "of more than $20 billion. We're the ones that established the budget for the land office. I've been involved with all the state agencies from the standpoint of appropriations and legislation."

And his 28 years in the advertising business "is a pretty good record."

Snelson said his campaign will continue "on a positive basis. Mauro was a deviation."

Other candidates on the Democratic ticket include George Fore, 42, a Paducah cattle rancher; Dan Kubiak, 43, Rockdale rancher and state representative and whom Snelson described as a "good legislator"; and Jerry Sadler, 74, a Grapeland attorney.

Sadler, said Snelson, has the greatest name recognition.

New classifed hours set

Beginning Wednesday the Classified Advertising Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram will handle classified orders by telephone from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. daily.

New classified ads should be placed and existing ads corrected or canceled during those hours by calling 682-6222 Monday through Friday.

On Saturday the classified department is open between 8 and 10 a.m. for corrections and cancellations only.

Muse Air slates service from Midland

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Muse Air officials have announced service will begin April 25 from Midland Regional Airport to Dallas and Houston, but there are still some preliminary arrangements that must be made by the airline before the company extends its service.

"They still have a lot to do around here before they start serving Midland," Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation at Midland Regional Airport, said this morning.

Primarily, Banks said, Muse must get approval from Midland's city council for additional construction at the airport.

Banks added that Muse representatives would arrive in Midland Thursday to discuss the plans for occupancy at the airport.

"The council, as I do, welcome any service that will benefit the airport," Banks said.

"We haven't explored all the options yet, but the two most viable are construction or subleasing space," Ed Lang, Muse's senior vice president of marketing, said this morning from Dallas, referring to space needed for counter and ticket service.

Lang said it is very common among airlines to sublease space, adding "we do the same thing in Houston for other airlines."

Muse representatives will discuss options with Banks and Braniff International.

"I'm not saying we'll share the space with Braniff, but it is an option," Lang said.

Lang said the airlines has air approval to fly, "the only other local approval we need is from the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) for flight slots."

He added that Muse representatives were in Washington Monday seeking FAA approval and the decision should be made soon.

"Since the PATCO (Professional Air Traffic Controllers) strike there have been restrictions put on the airlines for slots," he said.

Muse currently serves the Dallas-Houston commuter air market with 26 daily weekday flights between Love Field and Hobby Airport.

The airline has proposed to serve Midland with two new McDonnell Douglas Super 80 aircraft with 12 weekday flights between Midland and Dallas and 11 between Midland and Houston.

Additional service includes 14 week-

Ellsberg among protesters arrested at weapons research laboratory

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Activist Daniel Ellsberg and 161 other protesters spent the night in jail after a blockade of a weapons research lab in the biggest anti-nuclear demonstration in California since fall's mass arrests at the Diablo Canyon power plant.

In all, 166 demonstrators were arrested Monday as more than 400 people chanted and beat drums in a peaceful 2½-hour demonstration at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, about 30 miles east of San Francisco. Those arrested were charged with obstructing a thoroughfare or public place, said Lt. Larry Roten of the Alameda County Sheriff's Department.

Only four of those arrested signed their citations, while Ellsberg and the rest "have chosen to stay in custody" in the facility at Pleasanton, Roten said early today. Arraignments for the 166 were scheduled for later this afternoon.

All face up to six months in jail and a $500 fine on the misdemeanors.

The protest was sponsored by the Livermore Action Group, an umbrella organization for 40 anti-nuclear groups throughout the San Francisco Bay area.

"This is a factory for the first (nuclear) strike," Elisberg said of Monday's protest at the Livermore Lab.

Ellsberg, who was instrumental in releasing the "Pentagon Papers" during the Vietnam War, said that "without actions like this, bombs would still be falling on Vietnam."

He made his comments moments before police lifted him to his feet to arrest him, as a crowd across the street sang "We Shall Overcome."

The sheriff's department offered those arrested immediate freedom in exchange for a promise to appear in court later. But most refused to sign, and were jailed overnight in the county jail at Santa Rita, officials said.

Meanwhile, about 100 people attended a peaceful rally at the University of California at Los Angeles at noon Monday in support of the Livermore blockade.

The lab employs about 7,400 people. Several hundred came to work at 6 a.m., an hour early, because of a magnetic fusion experiment, facility information people said.

At about 6:45 a.m., the protesters mostly kneeled or sat on the ground before workbound vehicles. University police walked up and warned the demonstrators they were trespassing and could be arrested. After waiting a few moments, officers ordered arrests.

Livermore city police also made arrests and contingents of the California Highway Patrol and sheriff's office stood by.

The Livermore facility, run by the University of California, handles research contracts for the departments of Defense and Energy. Lab spokesman William Perry said 41 percent goes for nuclear weapons work, the rest for energy research.

"There is never a weapon assembled here," Perry said.

U.S. battles in Central America with $55 million aid

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States is going to help El Salvador fight "the decisive battle for Central America" with another $55 million in emergency military aid, Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders said here Monday.

The government will "use emergency authority to draw on DOD (Defense Department) stocks for approximately $55 million to replace lost aircraft, and to assure that the government of El Salvador has the means to defend against attacks on its economy and to protect the electoral process," he said.

Enders, the State Department's top inter-American affairs spokesman, made the disclosure in testimony before the Western Hemisphere Affairs subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"The decisive battle for Central America is underway in El Salvador," Enders said.

"If, after Nicaragua, El Salvador is captured by a violent minority, who in Central America would not live in fear? How long would it be before major strategic U.S. interests — the (Panama) canal, sea lanes, oil supplies — were at risk?"

ENDERS INSISTED that U.S. national security interests are being challenged in Central America and the Caribbean basin.

"Cuba is systematically expanding its capacity to project military power beyond its own shores," Enders said. He said that the arrival "this year" of a second squadron of MiG-23 Floggers and over 60,000 tons of war supplies from the Soviet Union last year was already by several times the largest air, land and sea inventory of the region."

Nicaragua is a base for export of subversion and armed intervention throughout Central America, the secretary declared. With Soviet, East European and Cuban help, the Nicaraguan Marxists "are building Central America's largest military establishment."

From Nicaragua, "the clandestine infiltration of arms and munitions into El Salvador is again approaching high levels recorded just before last year's 'final offensive.'"

Enders told the subcommittee headed by Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) that the Reagan administration "understands" the congressional limitations on aid to El Salvador written into the Foreign Assistance Act.

But, he said, the Marxist-led guerrilla war there "is a challenge to our national security, so military and economic assistance are required."

THE ADMINISTRATION is convinced that the Christian Democrat-military junta now running El Salvador has made progress in controlling violence, on land reform, in developing a democratic process and in bringing the killers of four American churchwomen to justice.

"More is needed, especially on the problem of violence. But a lot has been achieved."

If the United States were to cut off aid, "all hope of achieving functioning democracy in El Salvador would vanish.

"The Soviets and Cubans would have a new opening to expand their power on the American mainland.

"And it would be hard to argue that Nicaraguanizing El Salvador would be an effective way to promote human rights," Enders said.

He called attention to the growing realization of other Central American republics to the Marxist threat to their stability.

"WITHIN HONDURAS the Cubans are trying to unify the left and start another insurgency. ... Costa Ricans are watching the (Nicaraguan) Sandinistas organize military operations in Costa Rica's own rich and largely undefended Guanacaste province. ... In El Salvador, insurgents are escalating their violence and terror, doing everything to prevent the elections (March 28, for a constituent assembly) from being held — including threats to candidates and voters," Enders said.

That is why the United States proposes to provide increased military assistance to El Salvador and Honduras, "the two most threatened states."

Over and above that will be the $55 million to replace the aircraft destroyed when Salvadoran guerrillas attacked the Ilopango airbase on the outskirts of the city of San Salvador last Wednesday.

Enders also took the opportunity to challenge the accuracy of some recent U.S. news reports to the effect that U.S.-trained Salvadoran troops had massacred 700 non-combatants in the isolated village of El Mozote. Enders pointed out that the guerrillas themselves never claimed that more that 472 had been killed. The reports in Washington and New York newspapers that raised the figure to 700 "would appear to be highly exaggerated," Enders said.

CIA cover has changed

NEW YORK (AP) — The CIA has been trying to use private commercial organizations as a cover instead of diplomatic missions since the takeover of the American Embassy in Teheran, The New York Times reported today.

Unidentified senior intelligence officials told the Times that the new procedure, initiated by CIA Director William J. Casey, resulted from the intelligence community's concern over the leak of sensitive information in Iran.

The documents — obtained by Iranian militants when they seized the embassy on Nov. 4, 1979 — centered on secret contacts with Iranian officials and gave detailed American assessments of the Iranian situation.

Information in the documents ranges from accounts of CIA efforts to recruit Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, then a close adviser to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Trawler believed sunk

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The Coast Guard used boats and aircraft today to search for the crew of a fishing trawler believed to have sunk southeast of Portland Harbor.

But Petty Officer 1st Class Martin Perry said the three or four men, believed to be aboard a lifeboat, had not been found by early today.

A Navy airplane from the Brunswick Naval Air Station was to join the search at sunrise for the Chica, a 40-foot trawler out of Portland, Perry said.

Perry said Portland-area fishing boats also were in on the search.

"Emergency! We're sinking! We're going down!" an unidentified crewman cried over a radio monitored by the Coast Guard at Boothbay Harbor at about 6:50 p.m. EST Monday.

Report says pilot not looking ahead

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — An F-15 fighter pilot apparently was checking his navigational equipment instead of looking ahead just before his jet slammed into another F-15 last November during a night refueling mission, a preliminary Air Force crash report indicates.

The report states that the pilot, Maj. John C. Booker of Universal City, Texas, apparently was killed instantly in the collision, which came just after the two jets took on fuel from an airborne tanker over the Gulf of Mexico.

Neither Booker, a member of the Eglin-based 33rd Tactical Fighter Wing, nor his plane was ever found.

Capt. Michael G. Lee, pilot of the other plane, flew his crippled aircraft safely back to Eglin.

Air Force investigators weren't allowed to make any final conclusions in the report about why the crash occurred. The report was obtained Monday by the Pensacola Journal from the Air Force's Office of Judge Advocate at Shaw Air Force Base, S.C.

Air Force officials said a date for release of final conclusions hasn't yet been set.

The preliminary report, however, indicated that Lee, the flight leader, had asked Booker for an "alpha check" just 10 seconds prior to the collision.

Missing passengers' family plans to sue

BOSTON (AP) — The attorney for the family of two passengers missing after a World Airways DC-10 slid off a runway into Boston Harbor says he will file a multimillion-dollar lawsuit on their behalf.

Meanwhile, the Civil Aeronautics Board said Monday the two men submitted flight coupons upon boarding the aircraft in Newark, N.J., but were overlooked initially by the airline following the accident.

Still missing and presumed drowned since the Jan. 23 accident at Logan International Airport are Walter Metcalf, 69, and his son, Leo, 40.

Attorney Camille Sarrouf said in Boston he planned to file a lawsuit on behalf of the Metcalf family seeking damages "of at least $1 million" for each missing man.

Sarrouf said he has not decided whom to sue, but said potential defendants include World Airways, McDonnell Douglas Corp., the manufacturers of the plane, and the Massachusetts Port Authority and the Federal Aviation Administration.

He said the suit would seek at least $1 million damages for each of the men, plus an additional amount for what he termed "the outrageous way the incident was handled by the airline."

The men were not determined to be missing until three days after the accident.

Joseph W. Mullin, regional director of the CAB, told a news conference Monday that the two Dedham, Mass., men were listed as no-shows when the airline coupon list indicated they were passengers on the ill-fated Flight 30.

But Mullin said later he was wrong and that the Metcalfs never were on a no-show list.

"I did say it, and I'm dead wrong," he said.

"The truth is the Metcalfs were on the coupon list right from the beginning," he said. "As to where in the system the Metcalfs' name was misplaced on that night

LHS students win at speech contest

A group of speech and drama students from Lee High School won sweepstakes at The Hockaday School Texas Forensic Association (TFA) Tournament this past weekend in Dallas.

Competing with over 300 students from schools in Oklahoma and Texas, Lee High School won the sweepstakes competition with 190 points, followed by St. Marks School with 156 points.

Two more qualifications for the TFA state meet in Austin were earned by Chuck Camarillo and Tracy King for placing in the dramatic and oratory competitions, respectively. Lee High School now has 31 qualifications for the state competition.

First place winners were: Jimmy Moseley, boys extemporaneous speaking; Chris Ewing, girls extemporaneous speaking; and Tracy King, original oratory.

LHS students placing in the finals were: Jimmy Moseley, fourth place, humorous interpretation; Chuck Camarillo, third place, dramatic interpretation; Chris Ewing and Jimmy Mosely, fourth place, duet acting; Tracy King, fourth place, girls extemporaneous speaking; Chris Ewing, fourth place, original oratory; Kenny Jonsson, fifth place, original oratory; and Tracy King and Kenny Jonsson, third place, cross examination debate.

MC offers art courses

Two free mini-courses in drawing and ceramics begin next week at Midland College.

Each course, which will last for four class sessions of three hours each, is designed to acquaint beginners with what is involved in each of the art forms.

Midland College art instructor John Harmon will teach the introductory course in ceramics on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 to 9:50 p.m. starting Monday.

Stan Jacobs, MC art instructor, will teach the beginning course in drawing on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 3:50 p.m. beginning Tuesday.

"We began offering some introductory courses in music last semester," said Dr. Charles A. Stewart, chairman of the Midland College Fine Arts Division. "They were designed to expose beginners to the techniques of the subject and to see how they were taught in a college classroom setting. The courses were so successful we decided to expand it this semester to include two beginning art classes."

Harmon's course will include actual work in various techniques of clay construction, glazing and firing. The only supplies needed by students are a kitchen knife and fork, sponge and small plastic bowl. Clay, glazes and firing equipment are provided by the college.

For Jacobs' course in drawing, students need to bring 2B, 4B and 6B drawing pencils, art gum eraser and 14-by-17 sketchbook. He will introduce students to rudiments of sketching still life, portrait and landscape.

Space and facilities are limited and students are asked to sign up for the free courses by calling the Fine Arts Division at Midland College, 684-7851, ext. 202. They may enroll at the time of the course if there is sufficient space. Both free courses are limited to

Pallbearers were to be Tom Nietert, Terry Seth and Scott Seth.

Remove judge from bench before prosecuting, lawyer says

MIAMI (AP) — The executive branch of government has no authority to prosecute a federal judge unless Congress removes him from his post, says a lawyer for U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings, charged with conspiracy in an alleged bribery scheme.

Hastings' attorney, Joel Hirschhorn, asked Monday that the charges against the judge be suppressed.

Hastings and his friend, William A. Borders Jr., a prominent Washington, D.C., lawyer, are scheduled to be tried on charges of conspiracy to commit bribery and obstruction of justice on March 22.

They were indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami last Dec. 29.

British businessman freed

LONDON (AP) — British businessman Andrew Pyke has been released from prison in Iran after 518 days in captivity, the Foreign Office announced today.

It said two other Britons were still being held in Iran but refused to give any details about them.

Pyke, who was never charged, had been held 74 days longer than the 52 American embassy hostages who were released on Jan. 20, 1981, after 444 days' incarceration.

Pyke was arrested Aug. 29, 1980, allegedly under suspicion of spying. He was released Thursday, Jan. 28, a Foreign Office spokesman said. He had been held both in Tehran's Evin prison and Karaj jail outside the capital.

He was turned over to the British interests' section of the Swedish Embassy in Tehran which has looked after British affairs since the British Embassy was closed in September 1980.

Pyke worked for a Dutch helicopter company in Iran when he was arrested. He was originally told he would be charged with espionage but later told he would be charged instead with embezzlement. No charges were ever filed.

Now you, too, can retire a millionaire.

It's here. The new Individual Retirement Account. The IRA. A personal tax sheltered retirement savings plan for everyone. And it's available at First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. You can literally retire a millionaire, assuming you begin the plan in your late twenties. Not bad. Huh? Accumulations can be very substantial regardless of the age you begin.

Accumulations at retirement based on age of enrollment*

At Age 27 — $1,044,533	At Age 45 — $142,530
At Age 30 — $758,329	At Age 50 — $76,380
At Age 35 — $441,826	At Age 55 — $37,123
At Age 40 — $253,998	At Age 60 — $13,826

How much does it cost?

It's your choice. You decide what you want to contribute annually up to $2,000. At First Savings, we help you tailor your contributions so you can get the results you want at retirement.

How do you start?

Start by coming into First Savings. All IRA's are not the same. And First Savings IRA's have distinct advantages. For complete information, come by, or call us at 683-5681, and ask for a free brochure. And start making plans to retire rich.

*Figures above are based on the assumptions that $2,000 is invested in the account every year until age 65 and that the funds invested draw interest at 11% compounded annually until that age. Your interest rate may be higher or lower than 11%. Substantial penalties are required for early withdrawal.

Colder weather expected Wednesday

Although the icy precipitation forecast for Monday night has been moved up to Wednesday, Midlanders still received a taste of winter today.

After a high in the middle 40s, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for cloudy skies and colder temperatures with a slight chance of rain mixed with snow Wednesday. The chance for measureable precipitation has been set at 20 percent.

The low tonight is expected to drop into the middle 20s, with Wednesday's high only expected to reach into the upper 30s.

Today's gusty winds which blew from the northwest at 15-25 mph are expected to turn northerly at 10-15 mph tonight and Wednesday.

Monday's high of 60 was 19 degrees cooler than the record high of 79, set for that date in 1932. The overnight low of 28 was 28 degrees warmer than the record low of zero, set in 1951.

Temple seeks gubernatorial nomination

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Peyton McKnight's early-starting campaign fizzled out Monday and Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple barely beat the deadline to get in the Democratic scramble for a gubernatorial nominee.

Oil millionaire McKnight, who announced his campaign back in October, gave up. No money, said the Tyler oil millionaire.

Moments after McKnight withdrew, Temple, a millionaire whose fortune is built on the pineywoods of East Texas, walked into Democratic headquarters and beat the filing deadline by 25 minutes.

TEMPLE SAID the other major Democratic contenders — Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Attorney General Mark White — have drawn "yawns" around the state with their campaigns. So Temple, a Diboll native and son of timberman Arthur Temple Jr., stepped in and proclaimed himself the man who can oust Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

"I have toyed with the idea for some time. In the last few weeks more and more people told me they didn't see the present Democratic candidates capturing the imagination and support of Democrats around the state," he said.

Skip Holcombe, Armstrong's deputy campaign director, said, "Basically, we replaced one East Texas millionaire with another East Texas millionaire."

Temple, 39, was elected to the Railroad Commission in 1980, ousting incumbent John Poerner in the primary. He said he talked with McKnight earlier Monday, and was told that McKnight was having second thoughts about the race.

But Temple insisted he was going to file regardless of what McKnight decided. He said he did not know McKnight was out when he stepped into the race.

McKnight's campaign started early and quickly, but faded in recent weeks.

"At this point, it does not appear that my political contributions will meet these early spending demands," he said in a release. "I am faced with the prospect of immediately borrowing a million dollars in addition to the loans I have already personally made to the campaign."

McKnight loaned his campaign $492,000 of the $527,000 it recently reported.

"IT WOULD NOT be fair to my family to commit more of our resources and go deeply in debt," he said Monday.

White said he hoped to pick up most of McKnight's supporters. The attorney general said his political philosophy and McKnight's are similar.

"I hope our mutual friends will feel welcome to continue the race with my campaign," he said.

Speaker Bill Clayton said the McKnight withdrawal "certainly improves Mark's hand."

Temple, like the other Democratic contenders, chose to complain about Clements, rather than his May 1 primary opponents.

"A high percentage of the people in this state don't like him. They are tired of his bullying tactics. They are tired of his war on state employees and unfortunate people. They are tired of his arrogant attitude," he said.

Temple, who said he would not resign his Railroad Commission seat, had not set a campaign budget.

"I expect I will put in some of my own money," he said.

Behind the scenes, White and Armstrong campaign workers were surprised by the final-day flurry.

"I don't like the idea of these two millionaires sitting around and divvying up Texas," said Dwayne Holman, director of the White campaign.

Holcombe refused to concede the McKnight vote to White.

"We think the race revolves around the jobs they've done in office," he said.

MCKNIGHT WORKERS found out they were out of work at about 5 p.m. Monday when campaign director Richard Jenson told them the McKnight campaign was over. Kaye Northcott, press secretary, said Jenson told them, "The campaign's being shut down."

The high point of McKnight's campaign was a Dec. 7 birthday bash he gave for himself at Billy Bob's Texas in Fort Worth. Willie Nelson was the featured performer for McKnight, a longtime country music fan.

Other last-day filings included some names out of the political past. Former Land Commissioner Jerry Sadler, 74, of Grapeland, filed as a Democratic candidate for his old job.

Former Democratic state Rep. Lane Denton of Waco filed for state treasurer, a race that drew increasing interest in recent day because of a local grand jury investigation of incumbent Democrat Warren Harding. Prosecutors won't say what the grand jurors are investigating.

Travis County Commissioner Ann Richards and Austin businessman John Joseph Cutright also entered the Democratic race for treasurer Monday. Harding previously filed for re-election.

Strake to be guest speaker

George Strake, a candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, will be guest speaker at the Downtown Lions Club luncheon at noon Wednesday in Midland Center.

A press conference at 11:30 a.m. in Midland Center, corner of Wall and Main streets, will precede the luncheon.

Appointed secretary of state in 1978 by Gov. Bill Clements, Strake resigned that position to campaign for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor. He is the sole contender in that primary, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby is the only candidate in the Democratic primary.

Woman cab driver robbery victim

Police are investigating the reported strong-arm robbery of a woman cab driver in the 2400 block of West College Avenue about 11:30 p.m. Monday.

The woman told officers a white man in his mid-20s threatened her and took her wallet, which contained an undisclosed amount of money. No weapon was displayed.

Gasoline fumes ignited by a water heater destroyed the contents of a garage owned by Wayne smith of 3709 W. Michigan Ave. about 7:30 p.m. Monday.

A storage shed fire that spread to an adjacent apartment occupied by Robbie Mae Clark of 205 N. Carver St. destroyed the shed and did heavy damage to the apartment about 10:30 p.m. Monday.

Firemen stood by as a Cessna-414 landed safely after its nose gear malfunctioned as it was landing at Midland Regional Airport shortly before 7 p.m. Monday. The craft is owned by the Petrolite Corp. of St. Louis, Mo., and was piloted by George Sharman. No injuries were reported, but the plane sustained moderate damage.

Dozier calls terrorists business-like professionals

VICENZA, Italy (AP) - Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier today said the Red Brigades terrorists who held him captive for 42 days treated him with "business-like indifference" and made no attempt to get friendly with him or convert him to their way of thinking.

They also did not make a "serious effort" to extract military secrets from him, the 50-year-old American general told his first question-and-answer news conference since his rescue last Thursday from an apartment in Padua.

"I was dealing more with criminals than with military types," he said. "If there were a league of criminals, they would be in the top class.

"They were well organized, they were smart, and my kidnapping was well done...The treatment in captivity did not vary. It was a routine very well established, very well executed, and I would characterize it (the terrorists' attitude toward him) as a businesslike indifference."

The general said he was to blame for the kidnapping because he ignored warnings from the Italian authorities and failed to take adequate precautions.

"YOU ARE LOOKING at an embarrassed guy....I take full responsibility," he said. "I was warned, but the warnings said the terrorists did not have U.S. personnel in mind...and I was so busy."

Dozier said he spent most of his time in captivity playing cards, reading, dozing and doing exercises.

"My problem was to fight excruciating boredom....My life changed abruptly from supersonic existence to subsonic existence," he said.

An Army spokesman, Lt. Col. Jack Barham, told reporters after the news conference that Dozier's left foot and right hand were chained to a steel cot throughout his captivity and he was confined to a two-square-yard tent in which he could barely sit upright in one corner. A 40-watt bulb illuminated the tent by day and was changed to a blue bulb at night.

Barham said Dozier had to use a chemical toilet in the tent and his captors would bring him some water and a towel about once a week to wash himself with.

After the news conference, Dozier flew to Rome to lunch with President Sandro Pertini at the Quirinal Palace to "express my gratitude and admiration." U.S. officials said he would return to Vicenza and would fly to the United States Wednesday. He was greeted by Maxwell M. Rabb, the U.S. ambassador to Italy, at the Ciampino military airport.

Dozier met the press in the chapel of the U.S. military base in this northern Italian city where he has been resting and undergoing questioning by the Italian police since his rescue. He wore a green uniform with the ribbons of his decorations on the left chest, and his wife, Judith, in a floral print blouse and large pearl earrings, sat beside him.

IN A BRIEF OPENING statement, he said he could not discuss certain questions that might impede the investigation into the Red Brigades or help terrorists still at large. Then he answered questions in English, and an Italian official translated them for the Italian reporters.

Asked about the moment Italian police commandos burst into the terrorists' hideout in Padua, Dozier said: "I was dozing and I had a sense of movement in the apartment. I looked at my guard standing at my side. I looked up and a pistol was pointed at me. Then he was overpowered."

Italian newspapers reported today that his captors asked the general to write a letter to President Reagan asking him to negotiate his exchange for imprisoned Red Brigades founder Renato Curcio. But Dozier in response to a question said: "I was not asked to write or say anything" about such an exchange.

He said despite his poor Italian, his captors spoke only Italian to him. After a week, they gave him an Italian-English dictionary.

He said the transcript of his interrogation which the Red Brigades published in a communique was a "composite."

"They would edit out certain things I said and put in what I didn't say," he continued. "They used Italian I didn't understand."i

In addition to "personal freedom" and his family, "the prime thing I missed was physical exercise," Dozier said. He added that he was in the habit of jogging two and a half miles a day, but his exercise in captivity was limited tomoving his body and his hands to improve his circulation.

O'Shea seeks candidacy for senatorial nomination

LUBBOCK — John J.C. O'Shea of Lubbock today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Senator, 28th Senatorial District, a post currently held by Sen. E.L. Short.

O'Shea, 54, joins John Smith of Odessa in the contest for the Republican nomination. Democratic contenders include Short and John Montford of Lubbock.

"Each session of the Legislature spends over 50 percent of its budget on education for our children, the most precious possession any of us have," O'Shea said. "Education at all levels is the foundation stone for the future growth and prosperity of this great state.

"The importation and transfer of water to our semi-arid region of the state must be accomplished," he added. "This is absolutely vital to continue the great agricultural economy of our area."

O'Shea was born Oct. 3, 1927, and is a graduate of the Columbus School of Law, Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. He served in the U.S. Air Force and is a Korean War veteran. He is a senior partner in the law firm of O'Shea and Hall in Lubbock.

day flights between Dallas and Houston and 13 between Tulsa and Houston.

"Midland-Odessa and Tulsa are two of the fastest-growing markets in the Sun Belt," M. Lamar Muse, chairman and chief executive officer, said.

"Commerce in all these cities — especially the oil business — is booming," he added. "And since the corporate traveler is our primary target market, the decision was a logical one."

"We've had a lot of feedback from our Houston customers who travel from Houston to Midland," Lang said. "They agree that Midland would be a viable market for us."

The company also will offer low fares and frequent flights with the additional service of assigned seats. A slightly fare reduced schedule will be offered on weekends.

This is Muse Air's first expansion since the airline started service July 15. Muse plans additional expansion this summer when the airline adds two more Super 80s to its fleet.

Airlines currently serving Midland include Southwest, American, Braniff, Continental, Texas International and Trans-Central.

Consul suspect pleads innocent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An Armenian immigrant charged with murdering the Turkish consul general could receive the death penalty if a jury finds him guilty of ambushing and killing the man because of his nationality.

Hanpig "Harry" Sassounian pleaded innocent in Municipal Court on Monday to charges of murder and using a handgun while committing a felony.

Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp filed the complaint Monday alleging the slaying had two special circumstances which permit the death penalty under California law.

Sassounian, a teen-ager whose relatives have said he was raised with a heritage of bitterness against the Turks, was ordered held without bail because of those circumstances.

He is charged in connection with the shooting death of Consul General Kemal Arikan at a busy intersection Thursday. Authorities are still seeking another "suspect or suspects" in the slaying.

WHEN ASKED if the search for additional suspects might mean an eventual conspiracy prosecution, FBI agent Edgar Best replied: "An assassination of this nature takes some planning, and obviously some overt acts. All of those could be construed to form the basis of a conspiracy count."

Best said no links have been discovered between Sassounian and any Armenian nationalist organizations.

Sassounian, 19, of Pasadena, stood with his hands jammed in the pockets of his blue jail-issue jumpsuit during the five-minute arraignment. He spoke only to answer "yes" when asked if he waived reading of the complaint and agreed with the innocent plea entered by his lawyer, Paul Geragos.

Geragos, one of three lawyers representing the youth, told Judge Samuel Mayerson that Sassounian, who was born in Lebanon of Armenian parents, has a language problem and will need an interpreter to translate future proceedings into Armenian.

"We think the case is strong," Assistant Police Chief Wes Harvey said at a news conference Monday. "We do have some physical evidence, some witness descriptions, and this morning we had some favorable witness response as a result of a lineup."

HARVEY declined to say specifically whether eyewitnesses had picked Sassounian out of the lineup, but said its results were a key factor in the decision to file charges.

"As a result of the lineup and the evidence we received, we are now prepared to proceed to seek a complaint alleging murder," he said.

Mayerson set a preliminary hearing for the youth on April 1 after he waived his right to a speedy trial.

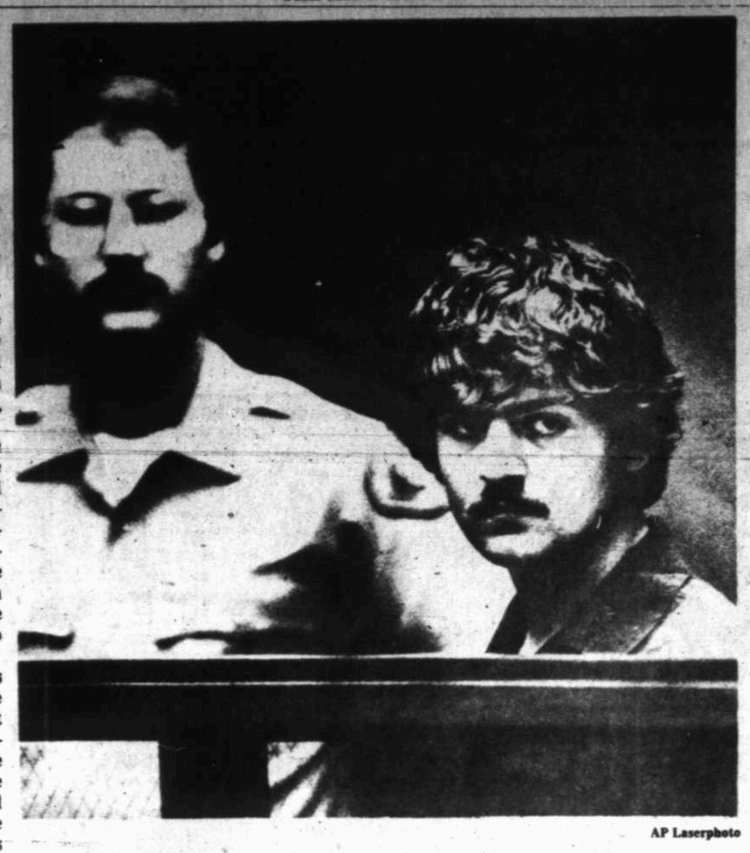

Outside court, Geragos declined comment on the case and said he is "investigating" a claim by Sassounian's parents that the youth was home at the time of the shooting. Geragos said he had met with Sassounian at the jail and "His mood is fine."

Harvey, who appeared at the news conference with Best, said law enforcement officials would seek formal charges from both the district attorney and the U.S. attorney.

However, a source in the U.S. attorney's office said later it was unlikely federal prosecution would be necessary because the state charges carry a more severe penalty.

Harvey confirmed that police traced Sassounian through a license number provided by an eyewitness to the slaying. However, police Lt. Dan Cooke said the family contends the car, a 1977 two-door gray Chevrolet Nova with the license 534 TER, had been sold.

THE FAMILY also claims Sassounian was home watching TV when the shooting occurred.

von Bulow jurors get tour of mansion

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Jurors got a rare glimpse Monday of the fabled mansion where Claus C. von Bulow allegedly tried to kill his wife, viewing the marble bathroom where she fell into a coma and the closet where her son says he found an insulin-tainted hypodermic needle.

Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Needham said opening arguments would begin Tuesday, and the prosecution said its first witness will be von Bulow's stepson, Prince Alexander von Auersperg. He was the first to voice suspicions that his stepfather tried to kill his mother, and enlisted a private attorney and detective to gather evidence.

After the 12 jurors and four alternates were sworn in, they rode a bus to Clarendon Court, one of the estates that line Millionaires Row in this resort city for the very rich. At the insistence of the defense, reporters and photographers were excluded.

THE PROSECUTION WANTED the middle-class jury to be familiar with the estate where the Danish-born financial consultant is accused of trying to kill Martha "Sunny" von Bulow. Prosecutors say von Bulow loved another woman and wanted his wife's $35 million fortune.

The state claims that within the stone walls of the oceanside estate, von Bulow, 55, used a hypodermic needle to inject insulin into the blood of his 50-year-old wife, lowering her blood sugar and leaving her in a coma from which she is not expected to recover.

The defense says Mrs. von Bulow caused her endless sleep by overindulging on sweets and alcohol against advice of her doctor.

With the front gates of Clarendon Court battened down for the winter with green-painted plywood, the jury rode the bus down a private lane to a side entrance and walked past a security guard to enter the mansion where they spent 25 minutes.

Chief Prosecutor Stephen Famiglietti refused to say how jurors reacted to their look at fabulous wealth. "That would be pure speculation. I can't say anything about that," he said.

But three people on the tour, none of them jurors, agreed to disclose what the jury saw on the condition their names not be used.

They said each of the jurors stepped into von Bulow's closet off his study where the prosecution alleges a black bag containing the needle was found by von Auersperg and private detective Eddie Lambert.

THEY SAID THE JURY saw the white and pink marble bathroom where Mrs. von Bulow was found face-down on Dec. 21, 1980, her nightgown up around her waist.

The sources said the jury also viewed the mansion's kitchen and pantry; the breakfast room and dining room, and the library where Mrs. von Bulow last spoke to her son the night before she fell into the coma.

The jurors stepped outside, the sources said, to see the patio with its breathtaking view of Rhode Island Sound, a view Mrs. von Bulow created through the expensive excavation of a bluff blocking the vista.

Prowlers spotted near Brown's house

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A state police guard at Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s home reported prowlers near the Laurel Canyon residence, but the suspects apparently fled without incident, police said.

Police Sgt. Jay Frey said the Hollywood division dispatched four cars and a helicopter to the house shortly before midnight Monday on reports that a state officer needed help.

"They (state police) called for help when they couldn't find one of their men, the man inside the governor's house," Frey said. "He had seen somebody on the grounds" in a wooded area northwest of the house.

Descent into barbarism

Revolutionary governments often liquidate their opposition with firing squads. What the regime in Iran is doing to leaders of the Baha'i religious sect goes beyond revolutionary politics and is beginning to look like a bloody persecution threatening all 300,000 Baha'is in the country.

Baha'i exiles say more than 100 leaders of their faith in Iran have been executed for "treason" since the Ayatollah Khomeini installed his Islamic republic in 1979. Hundreds more have been murdered or have disappeared without the formality of charges. Baha'is are being fired from jobs and are having their property confiscated. Their shrines and cemeteries are being desecrated.

The Baha'is have experienced persecution off and on in Iran since the sect was founded there in the 19th century. The Shiite Muslims now in control regard the Baha'is as heretics because the faith began as an offshoot of Islam. Because the sect has its headquarters in Haifa, Israel, the Baha'is lately have been accused of "Zionism" by Muslim fundamentalists.

Ironically, the Baha'is in Iran have tended to avoid politics because of the tenets of their faith. Baha'ism draws on many religions, and accepts as prophets Krishna, Abraham, Moses, Buddha, Jesus and Mohammed. Baha'is fleeing the country are convinced that political charges against their leaders are only a new and dangerous mask for an old religious intolerance. Not unexpectedly, the Iranian government has been unmoved by protests from the United States and other Western governments.

When the American hostages were being held in Iran, the United States achieved only limited success in generating international pressure against the Khomeini regime to influence its conduct. The taking of diplomatic hostages is serious enough, but the crimes now being attributed to the Muslim militants should serve to further sicken the civilized world. Is there no way the outside world can act against such a descent into barbarism?

Egypt's dangerous step

There are indications that the Egyptian government of President Hosni Mubarak wants to repair the breach between Cairo and Moscow. Mubarak has asked the Soviet Union to provide 66 technical advisers to assist on major industrial projects in Egypt.

Thus Mubarak appears to be reversing a trend set 10 years ago by Anwar Sadat, the late Egyptian president who broke the once-strong ties between Cairo and Moscow on the solid ground that the Kremlin was trying to subvert "Egypt's national unity."

Sadat made the break with Moscow in 1972 when he expelled 17,000 Soviet technicians within a week. Last September, Sadat expelled the Soviet ambassador, several members of his staff, Soviet journalists and more than a thousand Russian technicians working on the Aswan High Dam and at shipyards and steelworks.

Mubarak hinted at closer relations with the Soviets shortly after he was sworn in as president following Sadat's assassination last Oct. 6. He said then, however, that he had no plans to take immediate steps.

Mubarak now appears to have taken that step by welcoming the return of the 66 Soviet experts. It's only a small step, to be sure, but it's down a path that could be loaded with pitfalls for Egypt. Sadat saw that; it is hoped that Mubarak will prove to be as keen-sighted.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Own ABSCAM web may entangle Puccio

WASHINGTON — The chief ABSCAM prosecutor, Thomas P. Puccio, is dangerously close to getting entangled in the web of deceit that he has woven to snag others.

Jack Anderson

This can be detected in his latest petition to the courts. In strident language, he assailed my stories about his prize witness, Mel Weinberg, who has been caught in a double-scam.

Weinberg is the professional con man who conceived ABSCAM, masterminded the operation and personally handled almost every payoff. Now I have uncovered evidence that he extorted gifts from potential defendants and may even have absconded with some of the ABSCAM bribe money. He repeatedly denied this under oath.

I have turned over the evidence to U.S. District Judge William Bryant, a stern but fair jurist, who cannot be manipulated by Puccio. The evidence indicates that FBI agents tried to cover up the charges of Weinberg's misconduct. So it's not just the credibility of the government's star ABSCAM witness that's at stake, but the credibility of the FBI agents who protected Weinberg.

In fact, Puccio himself suppressed the allegations against Weinberg, thanks to favorable rulings from ABSCAM Judge George C. Pratt. Now Puccio has gone back to Pratt with a letter discounting the evidence that Weinberg lied under oath and insisting that even if the evidence is true, there would still be no basis for discrediting the ABSCAM prosecution.

Yet Mel Weinberg's wife, Marie, in a sworn statement, describes how the con man extorted valuables from the ABSCAM targets as gifts from a fictitious sheik. She also charges that FBI agents squabbled like children over some wristwatches that Weinberg got from the ABSCAM defendants.

What's more, she swears that the agents knew about the luxury items her husband received and actually helped crate them when the Weinbergs moved to Florida. Earlier, the agents had denied under oath such knowledge, and Puccio had accepted their assurances.

My associate Indy Badhwar spent three months verifying details of Marie Weinberg's charges. Here's the record of Puccio's involvement in the con man's scam-within-ABSCAM:

— In December 1980, two assistant prosecutors, Edward Plaza and Robert Weir, informed the Justice Department of charges made by Joey DiLorenzo, a nephew of Camden Mayor Angelo Erichetti, that he had given presents to Weinberg during the ABSCAM caper. "Puccio stated he was aware of Weinberg's receipt of a microwave oven and would take steps to remove it from Weinberg's house," they wrote. "Puccio further stated he doubted the veracity of DiLorenzo's statements" about other gifts. Plaza and Weir were taken off the ABSCAM case.

— During the Brooklyn grand jury investigation, Weinberg was asked: "Specifically, did you receive anything from DiLorenzo in the form of electronic equipment?" Weinberg answered: "No, I did not receive anything from Joseph DiLorenzo."

— During the trial of Rep. Ozzie Myers, D-Pa. — with Puccio prosecuting — Weinberg repeatedly answered, "Not true," to questions from defense attorneys about gifts of the microwave oven and other items.

— In the same trial, attorney Richard Ben-Veniste asked FBI agent Martin Houlihan: "Are you familiar with any report wherein it is indicated that someone from the FBI asked Mr. Weinberg about the gifts?" Puccio objected, and Judge Pratt sustained him. "I want to find out," said Ben-Veniste, "whether the FBI asked their own agents whether they saw Weinberg in possession of any of these items." Pratt said such a question was "irrelevant."

— During post-conviction hearings for all the ABSCAM defendants, Puccio told Judge Pratt he had ordered agent John Good to check out the gift allegations and that "either Mr. Weinberg or Mr. Good" told him that Weinberg had purchased the microwave oven in Florida, and had produced a receipt for it. But Marie Weinberg will testify that the original microwave was obtained in New Jersey — and that the FBI agents saw it there before the Weinbergs moved to Florida. She swears her husband later removed the serial number from that oven, then had her drive him to a store in Florida, where he obtained the receipt he gave to the FBI.

— At the same due-process hearing, agent Good told of his "investigation" of the gift allegations, but did not mention that he had seen the gifts in Weinberg's home, as Mrs. Weinberg claims. And agent Anthony Amoroso — the "sheik's" man on the ABSCAM videotapes — also testified that he never had reason to suspect that Weinberg was "hustling" gifts. Yet Marie Weinberg swears that Amoroso and Good not only saw the extorted gifts but helped crate them for the move to Florida. She gave specific details, and some of the gifts in her Florida home have been traced back to Erichetti.

TESTING, ANYONE?: The Defense Intelligence Agency reports that the Taiwanese are looking for a test site for the nuclear weapons they've been secretly working on, and that they're thinking of asking India. But the hush-hush DIA report concludes: "It is highly unlikely that India would allow the ROC (Taiwan) to detonate a nuclear weapon on Indian territory because of problems that would arise with the People's Republic of China."

INSIDE REPORT:

Timing of Rather-Reagan interview questioned by aides

WASHINGTON — Senior White House aides decided too late that a television interview of President Reagan by CBS reporter Dan Rather should never have been scheduled for the day after the State of the Union message.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The interview had been agreed to by communications director David Gergen several weeks earlier. Gergen's hope: The president would be able to use the one-hour Q-and-A with Rather to "explain" what his new federalism was all about, despite Rather's reputation as a tough interviewer who gives little quarter.

When word got around the White House that Gergen was having second thoughts about the timing of the interview, deputy White House chief of staff Michael Deaver told another aide: "Why didn't he think of that when he set up the interview?" It was too late to change. Just as the worriers had thought, Reagan hardly had a chance to explain his new federalism. Rather kept him on the defensive about Nancy Reagan's evening gowns, the president's alleged racism and the recent criticism of Reagan's press conference errors.

SELLING DEFENSE CUTS

The crucial White House meeting between the president and half a dozen top business leaders Jan. 21 that clinched Reagan's decision once and for all against any new tax increases had a less welcome note: a passionate attack on defense spending as wasteful, inefficient and economically dangerous.

PepsiCo's Donald M. Kendall led the attack of the business tycoons by questioning the multibillion-dollar DEW line of radar defenses across northern Canada. Kendall wondered about the "relevance" of the post-World War II DEW line in view of modern AWACS aircraft equipped with long-range radar to pick up incoming attackers. He was followed by LTV's Paul Thayer, who heads a company deep in defense contracts. Thayer said the average cost of most military aircraft bought by the U.S. could be radically reduced by better cost-accounting and contract procedures.

Reagan was surprised. Increased military spending is the core of his foreign policy and he has no intention of cutting back. But he promised Kendall to have counselor Edwin Meese III "look into" the DEW line to evaluate its current status.

DEBT HOBGOBLIN

Runaway costs of unemployment compensation coupled with recession-induced declines in federal tax revenue has raised this scare in the Treasury Department and on Capitol Hill: the prospect of another increase in the now-trillion-dollar ceiling on the national debt long before the present "temporary" ceiling runs out next fall.

If congress can agree on a new budget resolution this spring, the embarrassing question of raising the debt ceiling would be handled largely out of public view. But if, as is highly possible, election-year squabbles delay the budget resolution, President Reagan may have to send Congress a special debt-ceiling bill.

The embarrassment would particularly hit Reagan stalwarts who needed tender White House handling last year when the debt limit was pushed to its present high-water mark. For the Democrats, another debt-ceiling battle in Congress would be a bonanza, giving them ammunition to dramatize Reagan as the biggest deficit-spender in history.

TURNING ON HATCH

Republican conservative Sen. Orrin Hatch, long a favorite of the right wing, is having the tables turned on him by social-issue groups angry at the bill he is sponsoring with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to recodify the criminal code.

Mailings back home to Utah will soon multiply from right-wing groups attacking him for reducing or removing criminal penalties dealing with crimes such as "opiate" trafficking, inter-spousal rape (a husband charged with raping his wive) and others.

In fact, the Kennedy-Hatch bill, approved unanimously by the Senate Judiciary Committee and ready for Senate floor action, changes very little in present law, although it does revise the structure of criminal penalties. But conservative social-issue groups, including the gun lobby and right-to-work activists, think they can pressure Hatch to change his mind on grounds that he will need their support in his tough re-election campaign against Salt Lake City major Ted Wilson, a popular Democrat.

HOW HANDLE CASTRO?

The strange silence in the Reagan administration, broken only by the president himself, over new evidence of high-powered Soviet weapons being delivered in communist Cuba is explained by indecision at the highest levels over what to do about it.

"If we publicize what is going on," a high State Department official told us, "we have to be ready to follow up, we're not." Yet, deliveries of late-model MiG fighter-bomber aircraft, combined with official reports that the Soviet Union now keeps the long-range TU-95 bomber based on Cuban airfields, indicate that Cuba is a greater potential military threat than during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962.

The president spoke harshly about Fidel Castro in a television interview last week, but other officials have kept mum. Congressional critics are readying a blast at the administration on grounds that the steady accumulation of Soviet munitions in Cuba violates the understanding reached by President Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev 20 years ago.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 2, the 33rd day of 1982. There are 332 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 2, 1635, New Amsterdam — now New York City — was incorporated by the Dutch.

On this date:

In 1969, Israel warned the Baghdad government that any more executions or actions against Jews in Iraq would bring reprisals.

And in 1979, Ayatollah Khomeini, rejecting peace overtures from Iran's Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, called on him to resign.

Ten years ago, heavy demand for gold, a barometer of monetary anxiety, pushed the price of the metal to nearly 50 dollars an ounce in Europe.

Five years ago, an emergency natural gas bill, passed by Congress and signed by President Carter, allowed him to shift natural gas from areas of surplus to areas of shortage.

One year ago, General Motors, which had been one of the nation's most profitable major corporations, announced a 1980 loss of $763 million, GM's first yearly loss since 1921.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Farrah Fawcett-Majors is 34. Violinist Jascha Heifitz is 81.

Thought For Today: We have 40 million reasons for failure, but not a single excuse, Rudyard Kipling, English writer (1865-1936).

BIBLE VERSE

He that walketh in his uprightness feareth Jehovah. Prov. 14:2

the small society

CHARLEY REESE

Government shouldn't fill every need

It may be true that words will never hurt you, but ideas can. One idea which is hurting our democracy is the notion that an unmet need is justification for the government stepping into the picture.

Charley Reese

This is the sociologist's version of, "the end justifies the means." You hear it frequently from people who should know better. If, for example, you ask an ardent proponent of public sex education why the public schools, which are already failing at their basic job, should be given this additional burden, he is likely to reply, "Well, parents just aren't doing the job."

As an argument, this is nonsense. Just imagine what our liberal friend would say if he came home to find you cuddled up with his wife and as an explanation you said, "Well, as a husband, you just aren't doing your job."

Seeing a need, no matter how genuine and no matter how unmet, does not justify discarding either common sense or the Constitution. Let me tell you a fact of modern life. A lot of people make a living discovering needs.

The way the game works is that you scout around for a need without its own organization. Then you "document" the need, usually with a small study, the results of which you extrapolate to include the entire universe. Then you hike off to Washington or make the rounds of the foundations. Here is an unmet need, you say, and for so many bucks I will set up an organization or write a textbook or lobby the Congress to set up a bureaucracy to fill it.

Obviously, since rich people have relatively few unmet needs, poor people are in great demand. God knows if by some miracle poor people vanished, an entire industry would collapse and literally thousands of high-priced need-fillers would be thrown out of work. The poor people of this country are a national resource and eliminating them is the last thing liberals really want to do. I suppose that's one reason why they are so opposed to a growing economy which is the only genuine road out of poverty.

But do-gooders-for-a-fee are not the only folks who used the unmet need argument to justify their actions. Most of the abuses of the Constitution by idiot federal judges are rationalized with the same phonus balonus argument. Why, for example, does anyone justify a federal judge taking over a local school district and actually running it? Because, the liberals will say, the local officials weren't meeting the needs of their constituents.

Compost. In the first place, whether needs are met is largely a subjective evaluation. In the second place, if we are to maintain even a pretense of a free society, we have to leave people free to make mistakes. If we are to maintain the democratic process, we must recognize that it is not as efficient as a dictatorship and it may very well ignore real needs for some period of time or meet them in ways with which academic geniuses can find fault. Tough beans. That's the price of a free society.

Furthermore and most important, we cannot, just because the democratic process isn't working to suit us, short-circuit it by running to the courts in the hopes of finding a political hack who will abuse the Constitution and his office by making rules he has no authority to make.

There is nothing in the Constitution which authorizes a federal court to decide how many cubic feet of space there should be in a county jail at Pumpkin Center, but some federal judges are doing it and it is being justified with the argument that if the federal courts don't do it, then it won't get done.

I am a firm believer that the more things government at all levels leaves undone, the better off we will be. I am a firm believer that we follow the rules of our free society even when doing so means that a majority may disagree with our vision of a perfect society.

The Declaration of Independence does NOT say we have an inalienable right to the liberty to conform to current fashions and fads of sociology majors, federal judges, and liberal editorial writers.

After a hiatus from the bargaining table while the United Auto Workers union tried to come to terms with General Motors, Peter J. Pestillo, chief negotiator for Ford, prepares to resume talks in Dearborn, Mich., Monday. The two sides agreed on an agenda for the talks, but no deadline was announced.

Ford, UAW resume concession talks

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and United Auto Workers negotiators renewed contract-concession talks by "getting reorganized," but accomplished little else toward reducing labor costs and securing union jobs.

"I don't think anyone can assume a settlement will be reached here," UAW President Douglas Fraser said after bargainers for both sides met for two hours Monday. But he added: "If we didn't think we could get an agreement, we wouldn't be here."

The talks were scheduled to resume today.

Union negotiators said a Ford proposal already on the table offered some "interesting possibilities" for job security of Ford workers.

Donald Ephlin, who heads the UAW bargaining team at Ford, said Ford's proposal on job security "was a more complete agreement (than GM's) looking for long-range solutions."

He would not elaborate, and said both sides had agreed to keep the proposals under wraps.

The UAW had sought job security guarantees from General Motors Corp. in exchange for contract concessions GM said it needed to be more competitive. But the talks deadlocked and broke off Thursday, shortly before a union-imposed deadline for reaching agreement.

Ford lost $715 million in the first nine months of 1981, and is expected to announce an overall loss for the year. GM on Monday reported a $333 million profit for 1981.

Peter Pestillo, the chief negotiator for Ford, said an agreement with the UAW would not be a cure-all for the auto industry.

"We're not going to turn the market solely by a new labor agreement," Pestillo said. "In fact, our proposal is one which deals with coming to competiveness over a period of time without the Draconian cuts (in labor costs) that would be required to have very, very dramatic cuts in (car and truck) prices."

But UAW leaders hinted that negotiations with Ford might be successful because of an overwhelming vote to resume talks by the UAW's Ford bargaining council in Washington two weeks ago, and because of Ford's unspecified proposal for greater job security for workers.

"I think their proposal has some interesting possibilities that would provide a greater measure of job security for Ford workers," Fraser said. "That's what we want to explore."

Both sides sought to downplay the effect of the GM talks' collapse.

"It does add a certain cloud over these negotiations. There's no question about that," Ephlin said. "But I think we can overcome that."

Talks with Ford began two weeks ago but recessed almost immediately when the UAW decided to concentrate on talks with GM.

Ford spokesman Jerry Sloan claimed the Ford concession proposal, given to the union earlier this month, "is a more conventional offer (than the GM proposal)."

"It doesn't include that pass-through business," he said, referring to a UAW-GM agreement to pass on any labor concessions to consumers in the form of lower car prices.

The Ford proposal offers employees a profit-sharing plan and unspecified job security arrangements in exchange for shorter vacations and other concessions.

The UAW is after job security guarantees and an end to Ford's practice of purchasing parts and components from companies whose workers are not represented by the union.

Prime lending rate follows recent upturn

NEW YORK (AP) — A spurt in the prime lending rate from 15.75 percent to 16.5 percent Monday followed a recent upturn in other borrowing costs that private and government analysts say threatens to prolong the current economic recession.

Interest rate jitters sent prices tumbling on the New York Stock Exchange, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plummeting 19.41 points to close at 851.69, the steepest one-day slide in more than five months. Bond prices plunged and the dollar soared.

Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose for the fourth straight week in Monday's auction, reaching the highest levels in four months. About $5 billion in six-month bills were sold at an average discount rate of 13.846 percent, up from the 13.53 percent of the previous Monday.

Concern over the course of interest rates has heightened as the Federal Reserve Board continues to report greater-than-desired growth of the nation's money supply and the U.S. Treasury steps up its borrowing to finance a record-high government deficit.

One key short-term interest rate, the federal funds rate, has climbed from an average of 12.04 percent for the week ended Dec. 9, 1981, to an average 13.98 percent in the week ended last Wednesday. And on Monday, federal funds, the overnight loans of uncommitted reserves among banks and an important source of funds for financial institutions, traded as high as 15.75 percent.

Lichty named Family Services executive director

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Garland Lichty has been named new executive director of Family Sevices of Midland. Before coming to Midland, Lichty served 14 years as Associate Executive Director of Family and Children Services in Kansas City, Mo.

Lichty earned his bachelor of science degree in sociology and psychology at Kansas State University, and his master of social work degree at the University of Kansas.

Family Services of Midland offers confidential counseling in areas such as behavior problems, marriage difficulties, problems of children and old age.

"Probably our most common problems are in relation to family difficulties or stress...like husband and wife constantly arguing, parents and child having difficulties, a single person not getting along on the job...just a wide variety of things," said Lichty. "We offer individual and family counseling, and an awful lot of people come in here for counseling just for themselves."

"Most people come in because they have something they need to talk to somebody about," he said, "that's the key to the whole thing. A situation or condition that goes without attention can develop into a problem."

Lichty said in addition to people who come in for counseling on their own or because Family Services has been recommended by a friend, neighbor or relation, clients also come from four other sources:

(1) Midland Independent School District — Students who have behavior problems at both home and school are sometimes referred to Family Services by school personnel. "Anything can be a behavior problem if what it is doing is impinging on someone else in the family," said Lichty.

(2) The Child Welfare Division of the Department of Human Resources — for children who are physically or emotionally abused "when the department feels the family is able to respond to a voluntary agency and a confidential service," Lichty said.

(3) The Junior League sponsored Pre-Natal Clinic — gives pre- and post-natal counseling to mothers in lower economic situations and helps them plan for the future for themselves and their families. Mothers in this group are basically between the ages of 16-25, according to counselor David Hickman.

(4) An Employee Assistance program with the local office of a national corporation. People in this program are referred to Family Services through the company personnel office.

Lichty said in addition "we get quite a few referrals from the phone book."

"The interest of the whole staff is in working as closely as possible with families who are going through (a crisis) to make it as comfortable as possible," he said, "Just about everything we do involves relationships."

Family Services of Midland recently held the first meeting of the Board of Directors for 1982. New officers and board members are Ralph Arrell, president; Dr. Roger M. Traxel, vice-president; the Rev. David C. Baker, secretary; Rita Pat Harrell, treasurer; B. C. Hamilton; Arlene J. Strickland; Mrs. Brian Mohr; Mrs. Mamie Williams; David Maley; and Ricardo Saldana.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Jeweler's secret formula

DEAR HELOISE:

To help care for those precious solid gold chains and bracelets, my jeweler told me how professionals do it:

Swish the jewelry in a dish with some ammonia with an added dash of dishwashing liquid detergent. If your jewelry is gold-filled, dilute the ammonia with one part water to one part ammonia.

Let them soak briefly or use an old, but softened toothbrush to gently scrub them. Rinse with warm water.

Then the secret...

With several folds of tissue paper, wipe them dry, polishing to a luster. Makes them look new again! — Cheri Weiner

CAST IRON CARE

Dear Heloise: In order to keep your cast iron skillet in good condition, after washing and rinsing, put it over a low burner until dry.

Remove it, and rub a small amount of oil into the pan. Carefully, though, because it's hot! — Peggy Parrish

GLASS BAKING DISHES

Dear Heloise: I have tried many things but I can't get burned-on brown grease spots off my glass baking dishes. Nothing seems to help. Do you have any suggestions? — Evelyn McElhenie

Warm the dish in the oven, then spray it (the dish) liberally with oven cleaner. Let it soak for a few minutes, then wash in warm sudsy water.

You may need to use a steel wool soap pad or other type scrubber to remove really stubborn spots and you may even need to repeat the whole process. But, at least, you'll have nice, shiny dishes again. — Heloise

HEATING BABY FOOD

Dear Heloise: My husband gave me this idea while I was juggling jars and bowls when our baby started eating solid baby food. He suggested heating the food in the egg poacher.

Easy to heat the meat and vegetables at the same time. — Kathy Jawby

TABLE PAD

Dear Heloise: I needed a pad for my dining room table, so I took an old twin-size mattress pad and only had to trim one end off to make it fit.

It really worked well in protecting the table and was certainly inexpensive. — Mabel Pickford

HANDY HINT

Dear Heloise: Your laundry hints are immediately clipped from the newspaper and attached to my extra refrigerator in the laundry room with decorative magnets. (Any appliance or bulletin board in the laundry area could be used.)

No more searching for, or guessing about, these valuable hints. — Mrs. Ralph Elizardi

STITCH IN TIME

Dear Heloise: Keep your mending basket, along with buttons, needle, thread, etc., by your telephone for those long chats with friends and neighbors.

Besides avoiding feeling guilty about talking so long on the phone, your family will thank you for having their clothes always in tip-top shape. — Mrs. Carol Maier

HAM HINT

Dear Heloise: Put a half or whole ham which has heavy skin on it in a warm oven for about 10 minutes before preparing the ham for baking.

The skin will come off easily, leaving a smooth surface and the ham will be easier to carve. — R. Buckheit

DEAR ABBY

Cats' hair covers gourmets' flair

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A charming young married couple we know well are both gourmet cooks, college graduates and from well-to-do families. They enjoy entertaining and do it with great style — setting their table with the finest china, crystal and silver.

The problem: They have two long-haired cats who have the run of the house. I have seen these cats walk all over the countertops in the kitchen, sniffing the food, lying down and shaking themselves while this couple prepares the food. Naturally, an occasional cat hair is found in the food. We find this most unappetizing, and so do others who have eaten there.

Many of their friends are beginning to decline their invitations. It is so sad to see an intelligent couple with so much to offer losing friends by such carelessness.

Isn't this unhygienic? Or are we being too finicky? — CARING FRIENDS

DEAR CARING: Although I doubt if a cat hair (or a human hair, for that matter) ever killed anybody, the appearance of same could easily kill one's appetite. As good friends, you should be able to talk candidly to them about their carelessness. Speak up, and don't pussyfoot around.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 39, divorced, have four kids, am on welfare and I think I'm pregnant again. That's bad enough, but what's really bothering me is my hair won't hold a perm.

Can you please advise me? — ELAINE IN LOUISVILLE

DEAR ELAINE: First, see a doctor. It could be due to your physical condition. If it's not that, inquire at a beauty parlor that specializes in hair care.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the letter from "Confused in Indiana": She complained that some people "have so little respect for the dead that they would bury a spouse in the afternoon and dance the same evening."

Abby, there are many reasons why the widowed woman would "celebrate" the death of her husband. One may be that she hated his guts for a long time but couldn't divorce him because of her religion.

Personally, I think the death of a loved one is a time to celebrate, not a time to cry from selfish grief if the person who dies is out of pain and misery at last.

Incidentally, I am 13, and my folks agree with my views. They both want big parties after their funeral services. — KATY

DEAR KATY: Thanks for writing. I wish more young people would express their views.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for sending the booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." It was the best $2 I ever spent. I have already witnessed a miracle. My 15-year-old son not only read it, but passed it around in a class at school.

Normally he reads only under duress from parents or the night before finals. Now his secret is out. At least one teacher and about 15 kids know he can read. — JEAN T.

(Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Dinosaurs live again in new book

By TOM MURPHY
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 40-foot, two-ton dinosaur clashed in the Texas countryside with a 30-foot, four-ton beast from New Mexico. It happened long ago. But now they meet again.

The reunion takes place in "The Dinosaurs," a new book that combines the latest scientific research with the drawings of William Stout and narrative of William Service.

Unlike most books about the ancient beasts, "The Dinosaurs" is more than a textbook crammed with facts. It is a glimpse at private moments that passed millions of years ago.

These dinosaurs are not lifeless museum skeletons. They give birth. They fight. They die. They fly. They make love. In his opening remarks, science fiction writer Ray Bradbury calls the book a "time machine."

Though the tales are filled with enough information to satisfy a college paleontology class, they are pleasant enough to serve as bedtime stories.

The stunning illustrations were changed repeatedly to reflect scientific fact. If a muscle was missing or a rib was misplaced, Stout corrected it.

The facts were checked by an expert, Peter Dodson of the University of Pennsylvania, who also wrote the introduction and the scientific commentary.

Stout, whose posters have promoted pop films such as "More American Graffiti" and "Allegro Non Troppo," has been fascinated by dinosaurs since childhood. He had been a member of the Dinosaur Society of Los Angeles for years before the idea of a book came up.

The concept for "The Dinosaurs" finally surfaced when editor Byron Preiss was working with Stout on a book about The Beach Boys. One day, he happened to see Stout's drawings of dinosaurs.

"For the next year, I talked to Bill about how we could do a book using his illustrations," recalled Preiss. "What finally emerged was a book about the way dinosaurs lived, rather than what they were."

Stout said he tried to show the dinosaurs as creatures with feelings and emotions.

Mud Island theater to replay disaster

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The worst river disaster in American history will be replayed on nearby Mud Island, beginning in July.

The tragedy, which occurred north of Memphis, was the sinking April 27, 1865, of the Mississipppi River steamer Sultana, which claimed 1,400 lives.

The theater on Mud Island is part of a $63-million, 50-acre education and entertainment center that will open this summer.

Foundation gives monies to set up endowment fund

NEW YORK (AP) — The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation has given $750,000 to the Metropolitan Museum of Art to establish a permanent endowment fund.

The income from the fund will be used to support the museum's conservation departments.

Day care can cause more problems for parents than for children

NEW YORK — A prominent pediatrician said today that working parents who must resort to infant day care may suffer more from the experience than their children do.

Writing in a recent issue of Redbook magazine, R. Berry Brazelton, M.D. explained that parents who fail to understand their infant's emotional reactions often feel guilty and think they are being rejected.

Dr. Brazelton also said he is convinced that infants can thrive under day care that meets specific standards. "These are: first, that caregivers are well trained, that they like babies and are ready to treat them as individuals; second, that they know what babies need in the way of stimulating experiences and opportunities for hearing about themselves and about their world; and third, that the staff is prepared to adjust to the sleeping and waking rhythms of each baby."

For these standards to be met, Dr. Brazelton said the ratio of infants to adults should be no greater than four to one. He said that parents on the other hand need day care centers that are parent-oriented so that the parents are comfortable leaving their children there.

While studying a number of infant care centers, Dr. Brazelton said he noticed that the infants seemed to go through waking and sleeping cycles at a very low level of energy. "It was as if the infants had developed this pattern as a way of protecting themselves from the emotional cost of being shared with adults other than their parents.

"They seemed to preserve their energy and 'high' attention all day long for their parents.

Children's poems on best-sellers list

By MILES BELLER
Hearst Feature Service

It's No. 1 on best-seller lists across the country.

Bookstore managers, giddy with delight, say they haven't been able to keep the book on their shelves since copies were first received in September; and its own editor claims that after an initial press run of some 145,000 copies, demand was so great there were four more press runs. She adds there are more than 600,000 copies of the $10.95 hardback in print — with more on the way.

The publishing industry is calling it "a phenomenon."

As for the author, well, he doesn't seem to care a wit. He will not go on a promotional tour. He will not let his publisher hand out biographical information. He will not go to autographing parties. And no, he absoutely will not grant interviews — something he has refused to do since 1978.

The author is Shel (nee Shelby) Silverstein, a 49-year-old Chicago native. He sports a black beard, shaves his head bald, writes bawdy verse for Playboy magazine, composes pop lyrics (He wrote Johnny Cash's "A Boy Named Sue" and a plethora of songs for Dr. Hook, including "Cover of the Rolling Stone.") and avoids the media as if it were poison sumac.

"A LIGHT IN THE ATTIC" (Harper & Row) is the name of his book. Far from being a weighty non-fiction tome, it's an illustrated book of poetry for children.

That's right: a 175-page collection of line drawings and 136 poems for kids, bearing such titles as "Adventures of a Frisbee," "Crowded Tub," "Ticklish Tom" and "Hiccup Cure."

Although the book was designed with juveniles in mind, Harper & Row has also touted it as fare fit for adults.

"Yes, the book does have a big appeal to adults," says Joan Robins, a Harper editor who worked on the manuscript: "As a 21-year-old told me, 'This isn't only a children's book, it's also social commentary.'" And, according to Robins, it's the "recognition" of "truths" that Silverstein illuminates in his poetry that "strikes home" to adults.

Some of Silverstein's earlier children's books also have been read by many adults. Two in particular — "The Giving Tree," an illustrated tale about a tree that helps a little boy mature, and "Where the Sidewalk Ends," a collection of whimsical poems and drawings such as those contained in "Light" — appeal widely to grownups.

"Shel is capable of cutting through the cant. He is totally honest" says Arthur Kretchmer, editorial director of Playboy. "He's able to say, 'This is how it really is — the emperor has no clothes.'"

DESPITE SUCH praise, some credit Silverstein's success to less noble attributes. Many have called him a crafty fellow who simply possesses an "acute sense of where the market is at."

One critic of children's literature, requesting anonymity, chides Silverstein for playing on the jaded side of kids' sensibilities. An author of children's poetry, who also asks not to be identified, takes a dim view of several poems in "A Light in the Attic," citing "They've Put a Brassiere on the Camel" as a prime offender.

"He doesn't stretch for an interesting word at the end of a line. Consequently, children don't have to stretch to understand it. Overall, his isn't an extraordinary voice. " Adults who are attracted to the "soft-headed mysticism" in "A Light in the Attic," the poet believes, are the same people who might find Kahlil Gibran stimulating.

"He's a cult guy," says Jerome Cushman, senior lecturer on literature for chilren and adolescents in the English department at UCLA. "To some extent, he's popular because he's a show-business personality." The prime reason Cushman thinks Silverstein's "lovely little poems" have won the public's heart, however, is that "he strikes a common didactic chord that's popular in its approach."

Silverstein's editor, Robins, provides an explanation for Silverstein's persistence in dodging the press. When it comes down to it, says Robins, Silverstein figures the author's not on sale, the book is.

Couple marries through want ads

DALLAS (AP) — She's the modern-age model of a mail-order bride.

Judy Culbertson answered Harold Stern's ad in the classifieds that read, in part, "Wife wanted." She wanted a husband. A few days later, they both got their wish — marriage.

Ms. Culbertson called Stern after reading a Dallas Morning News story about Stern's search for a wife and his ad in the "personals" section of the Dallas Observer, a semi-weekly tabloid. The ad read:

"Wife wanted — that means marriage, that also means immediately. I am a professional person, 43 years of age. I am a dental lab owner. Wife is to be 23-35 years of age. Children okay. I am 5 foot, 10 inches, not good-looking, not ugly, and warm heart. And one more thing, this is no long courtship, 2-3 weeks, then marriage. This ad is for real."

Ms. Culbertson called Stern on Tuesday. They met Wednesday, over lunch. He proposed at dinner that night, and she accepted during dessert. They were married Saturday in Las Vegas.

"It's been a wild week," he said.

Ms. Culbertson, 31 and divorced, explained.

"He offered what I wanted most — marriage," she said. "There have been men who have offered me things lately, but none of them was marriage. I don't care how quick this has been, I wasn't going to let it slip by.

"He's exaggerated about a few things," she said, "but that's because of his crazy personality. We've been very honest about the important things. I've checked him out. I feel very comfortable about marrying him. I don't think there are going to be any big surprises."

The day after Ms. Culbertson called Stern, his story was picked up by wire services and sent to newspapers across the country. He said he was contacted by more than 600 women. Some sent flowers, some sent telegrams and one sent a message via a stripper, he said.

"I'm just thankful she saw the story early," Stern said of Ms. Culbertson. "Otherwise, she never would have been able to get through. I kept a notebook by the telephone and rated the women who called. Judy got four stars. That's because she wasn't silly. She didn't play around. She just sounded sweet — and serious."

"I think I'm going to write a book — that is, if the phone ever stops ringing to give me time to do anything. The women keep calling and calling.

"Listen to me. I've got laryngitis. That's just from talking to women who want to get married."

"The women who called from Detroit were the most desperate," Stern said. "Outside of Dallas, I got the most proposals from there. One woman in Pennsylvania, however, offered to send a Lear jet for me. She said she had money. What she needed was a husband."

Major devaluation of peso not just rumor

By HELEN L. CALL
Copley News Service

The rumors are thicker than ever about the possibility of a major devaluation of the Mexican peso. Easter is a favorite time for such maneuvers — Easter comes on April 11 this year. That is not to say an actual devaluation will occur, but a lot of holders of pesos will be happier if Easter's passing finds their holdings still intact.

The fortunes of the peso are closely monitored by Glenn Elgin at E. F. Hutton. He took a look at a chart of Mexican peso futures on the International Monetary Market in Chicago and said prices on pesos for future delivery are so much cheaper than current prices that they "continue to predict a major devaluation of the peso."

This is not new — to have far forward peso contracts selling much cheaper than current contracts, but there has been an ominous widening of the spread between the two, according to Elgin.

"One million pesos in the spot market are worth $37,550. Looking at futures, one million pesos for delivery in June 1983, are worth $23,200, a decline of $14,350 per contract."

The peso has been declining in value in relation to the U. S. dollar for many months. In 1981, the peso lost 12 percent of its value in a series of regular mini-devaluations.

"Looking at the last four months of 1981, the peso has been accelerating its rate of decline," said Elgin. "The economic factors are varied. Mexico's inflation rate continues to accelerate while the U. S. inflation rate is declining. As the gap becomes wider, more pressure is put on the currency.

"Mexico's debt is close to $50 billion, much of it tied to floating interest rates. As U. S. rates go up, the cost of servicing this debt also rises."

All this suggests a steady increase of pressureto push the value of the peso down sharply. "There is an increased probability of a major sudden devaluation," said Elgin, "or at least an acceleration of the small, mini-devaluations the peso has been going through."

Jim Sinclair's vews on gold are not exactly enthusiastic, but they changed course at the start of the year. He now favors holding off buying physical metals until late in the first quarter and waiting for the summer lows to take positions in the futures market.

Bache analysts expect the large-capitalization oil companies to outperform the rest of the market this year and recommend Mobil, Standard Oil of California, Royal Dutch Petroleum, among the internationals and Phillips Petroleum, Atlantic Richfield, Amerada Hess, among the domestic companies.

Bache utilities experts are more optimistic this year and see an improving regulatory climate, moderating construction programs and an abatement in the inflationary spiral. Electric utilities on the recommended list: Florida Power & Light, Txas Utilitiss, Carolina Power & Light, Consolidated Edison, Illinois Power, Potomac Electric Power, Southern California Edison, Commonwealth Edison, Oklahoma Gas & Electric, South Carolina Electric & Gas, Northeast Utilities, Virginia Electric & Power.

The machine tool industry is particularly susceptible to a business downturn and the Holt Investment Advisory has picked two short sale candidates: Acme-Cleveland, Brown & Sharpe.

Low-priced stocks, as a group, surged in 1980, peakedout in early 1981, and since then have been hibernating. But Dow Theory Forecasts says there are quality companies available at under $20 a share, even on the New York Stock Exchange.

The advisory provides this list: Airborne Freight, American Business Products, Bairnco, Barnes Group, Bell Industries, Bucyrus-Erie, Burndy, Butler International, Clorox.

Core Industries, Dr Pepper, Eagle-Picher Industries, Echlin Mfg., Emery Air Freight, Family Dollar Stores, Fleetwood Enterprises, GenRad, Guardian Industries, Gulton Industries, Heck's.

Huffy, Insilico, International Aluminum, Jostens, Lainer Business Products, Lawter International, Mary Kay Cosmetics, Pargas, Parker Pen, Pay Less Drug Stores NW, Payless Cashways.

Plantronics, Rollins, Rorer Group, Rowan Companies, Seagull Pipeline, Simmonds Precision Products, Snap-On Tools, Sullair, Sun Electric, Swank.

Haig to assure Romania U.S. won't stand for intervention

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Alexander Haig, after delivering a tough speech on Poland next week in Madrid, will travel to communist Romania to deliver a personal commitment from President Reagan that the U.S. will not sit idly by if Moscow tries to get rid of the independent-minded government there.

This was disclosed by State Department officials today who said Haig also would visit Portugal, Morocco and West Germany in the course of the week-long trip.

Haig is scheduled to leave on Monday to attend the foreign ministers meeting of the 35-nation conference on European security and cooperation, which has been meeting in Madrid in an effort to reach agreement on new human rights guidelines and advance notification of East-West military maneuvers.

The Haig speech will be the first time that American and Soviet as well as free world and communist bloc envoys publicly confront each other over the Polish issue. Haig last Tuesday traded charges over Poland with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. But that meeting in Geneva was private and secret.

One irony that may complicate Haig's mission is that Poland will be in the chairman's seat when the Madrid conference reconvenes.

But U.S. officials said that they expect Portugal to take over as chairman within 24 hours of Haig's arrival in Madrid and then to permit the U.S. to raise the issue of massive human rights violations in the aftermath of the martial law crackdown.

The officials said that there are at least 4,000 Poles, mostly members of the outlawed Solidarity free trade union movement, being held in detention camps. The officials said that Reagan earlier had considered a U.S. walkout from the Madrid conference but has now decided that it is a useful forum.

The main reason for that is the Soviet assertion that in signing the 1976 Helsinki Final Act, the United States and its allies in Europe finally recognized that the borders of Eastern Europe were legal — in short, that the boundaries established unilaterally by Russia at the end of World War II now are permanently part of the Soviet empire.

Haig wants to make crystal clear that the United States never did anything of the sort and that the Reagan administration regards Poland to be an ifidependent nation and a signatory, as is Russia, to the human rights provisions of the Helsinki accords.

The opportunity to use the Madrid meeting to embarrass Moscow over Poland is more important than the symbolic value that would be derived from an American walkout, U.S. officials said. They disclosed that the Soviets recently have stepped up pressure on the government of Nicolae Ceausescu in Romania.

Ceausescu, who runs a tight, Stalinist-type regime within his country, nonetheless has repeatedly snubbed his nose at the Kremlin, most recently becoming the only communist East European leader to have publicly condemned the Russians for their involvement in the Polish crackdown,

Romania also has been experiencing labor problems of its own that have forced bread to be rationed and electricity to be cut back to several hours a day. The Soviets reportedly have offered little or no help to Romania in apparent hope that the shortages will lead to the overthrow of the Ceausescu regime.

Haig's trip to Romania, which will take place Feb. 13-14, will be the first by an American leader since President Ford visited the communist country in 1976. Romania is one of the few Eastern European nations that receives most-favored-nation treatment of its exports to the United States.

That allows its goods to come into this country without the penalizing tariff that is applied to all goods from the Soviet Union and most of its Warsaw Pact allies. The only other communist nations whose exports are granted MFN status are Yugoslavia and Poland.

Program at planetarium

ODESSA — "Indian Sky Lore," the spring program at Odessa College's Poole Planetarium, begins at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The program, which examines Indian legends of constellations, is free to the public and will be shown every Wednesday, except April 7, through May 14.

Special showings of "Indian Sky Lore" can be arranged for groups of 10 or more by contacting Robert Blake, planetarium director, at Odessa College. Cost for special showings is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Building burns

STANTON — Members of Stanton Volunteer Fire Department fought an early morning fire today in an abandoned downtown building here.

A brick building which formerly housed Roadrunner Chevrolet was damaged extensively in the blaze, which was reported to the police dispatcher at 5:03 a.m.

Firemen were still at the site at presstime, and no additional details were available.

Voting rights activists plan march

CARROLLTON, Ala. (AP) — Voting rights activists, spurred by the recent election fraud convictions of two black Pickens County women, have started planning a 180-mile weekend march to Montgomery, the Alabama capital.

Leon Hall, president of the National Coalition to Free Maggie Bozeman and Julia Wilder and Extend the Voting Rights Act, said the march is aimed at increasing voter registration.

He said the group hopes to start out with "a couple of hundred" marchers on Saturday and recruit more along the way.

Organizers said Monday that several stops will be made on the route to gather evidence to urge Congress to extend the 1965 Voting Rights Act. The issue is up for congressional action this year.

The registration push and march was initiated after all-white juries convicted Mrs. Wilder, 69, and Mrs. Bozeman, 51, of voting fraud. The two were sentenced to five years and four years in prison, respectively. Appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court failed.

The women, both active in voting rights causes in Pickens County, were charged with marking absentee ballots for 39 blacks, most of them elderly, during a 1978 election.

About a week after they were sent to prison last month, Gov. Fob James met with black legislators and agreed to transfer the women into work-release jobs in Macon County. They are now living in a trailer home donated by longtime civil rights attorney Fred Gray of Tuskegee.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, Feb. 3, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Dallas-born Morgan Fairchild of TV's "Flamingo Road" celebrates a birthday today, and so do novelist James Michener, former Minnesota Vikings star Fran Tarkenton and comedian Joey Bishop. You learn a lot about sharing in the year ahead. Business opportunities which previously eluded you now move within your grasp. Your chances of finding the right romantic partner are greatly improved. Offspring become more communicative and parent-child relationships grow very rewarding. Intelligent and ambitious, you are likely to achieve even your most remarkable goals. Look for new outlet for your managerial skills! You need to choose work projects that excite your imagination.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A financial matter needs your prompt attention. Show that you are able to act responsibly. You could get blamed for another person's disappointment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The outlook brightens for those who have gone through a difficult financial period. Go slow when reacting to criticism. A romantic interlude proves both fun and diverting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be selected for a special honor or award. Self-discipline leads to new confidence. Be sensitive to loved one's needs. Discretion is the key to lasting romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check someone's financial reputation before signing new contracts or agreements. Monetary intrigue ends when you take steps to become informed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A personal relationship could be strained by a career decision. Let others do most of the talking; you win important points. A casual friendship could ignite into romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Show more self-discipline and you will find an exciting new admirer. Conflict makes you come alive. New success is indicated in career, romance. Relationships with higher-ups show improvement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Change is imminent. Progress comes from getting rid of outdated methods and attitudes. Find new ways to entertain. A fun evening need not be expensive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You work best by yourself, far from distraction or noise. Collaborative ventures and private talks will help advance your career or financial goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You must wait while someone else makes the first move. Free investment advice will probably be worthless. Obtain professional assistance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your progress is aided by good luck today. Bring your creativity to bear on a job assignment. An on-again, off-again romance may not be worth the trouble. Know your priorities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not judge others. You will be attracted to someone with a dynamic, outgoing personality. Check to be sure there is substance beneath that wonderful veneer!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not confuse enthusiasm with indiscretion. Help loved one develop his/her artistic talents. Greater effort may be necessary in business.

A laudable goal is "to make the punishment fit the crime." But sometimes you have to determine what the crime was and who committed it! Who would you charge on this hand, and with what?

A competitive auction ended when East had to determine whether to double five spades or to push on to slam. In theory he chose wisely, for his side had two unavoidable club losers. Unfortunately, the defenders did not get all the tricks that were their due. West led the ace of hearts and the play was soon over. Declarer ruffed and drove out the ace of trumps. East had no way to get to his partner for a lead through the king of diamonds. In fact, had he not cashed his ace of diamonds when he was on lead, he would not have scored it, for declarer could set up dummy's clubs for all the discards he needed.

True, West could have defeated the contract by leading a diamond, but we attach no blame to him for failing to do so. Indeed, had he decided not to lead a heart at the opening gun, his other choice would surely have been the queen of clubs, with no better result.

The culprit here is East, who had the opportunity to direct the defense but failed to do so. And the chance occurred during the auction, not the play!

Once East had decided that he was going to compete up to the level of five hearts, he exhibited a lack of imagination about how to get there. He had a free opportunity to show where his side-suit strength was located—his correct bid was five diamonds!

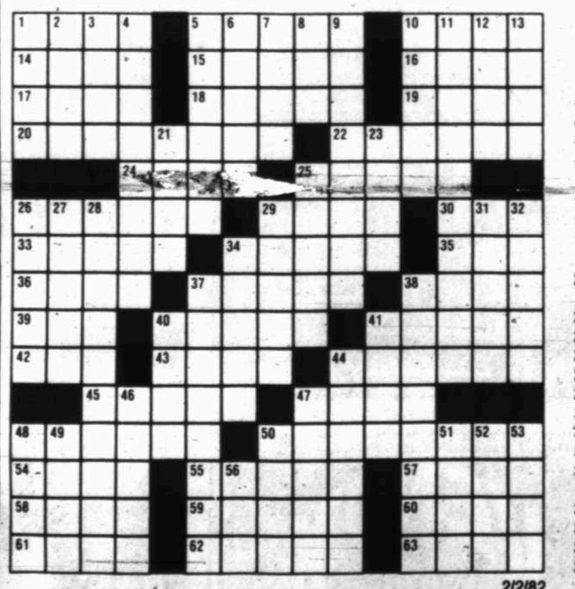

That could not have been misinterpreted. After having already agreed on hearts as a trump suit, there was no reason why East should want to play five diamonds. Thus, the bid could only be lead directing. Now, if North-South let East-West play five hearts, that contract would have been made. And five spades would go down with a diamond lead.

The projects will be drilled to test the Atoka formation at 11,020 feet and the Silurian at 15,560 feet, and are located in section 13, block 111, Public School Land survey.

The No. 1 St. Culberson is 1,980 feet from the north, and 660 feet from the east line of the section.

The No. 1-A St. Culberson spots 2,500 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the east line of section.

The sites are in an area of very little exploration.

HOWARD VENTURE

The No. 1 Grantham "A" will be drilled by Rendova Oil Co., Midland, one mile north of Knott.

The scheduled 10,600-foot wildcat is 660 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the east line of section 12, block 34, T-2-N, T&P survey.

The project will also be drilled as a test to the Knott, W. (Dean) at 8,500 feet; Knott, W. (Penn Reef) at 9,200 feet; the Isaac (Penn upper) at 9,700 feet; and the Isaac (Strawn) at 9,975 feet.

LAMB SEARCHER

A 4,300-foot wildcat has been staked by Desana Corp., Midland, 10 miles southwest of Littlefield.

The No. 1 Matador is 660 feet from the north, and 660 feet from the west line of labor 19, league 632, State Capitol Lands survey.

It is 4,000 feet northwest of Norvel Douglas No. 1 White, a 4,433-foot project, dry and abandoned Nov. 11, 1958.

STERLING DISCOVERY

Quanah Petroleum Inc., Dallas, has completed the No. 1 Foster, 14 miles north-northeast of Sterling City.

The San Andres discovery flowed 125 barrels of 39 gravity oil through a one-inch choke in 24 hours. The gas to oil ratio is 740 to 1.

Production was gained through perforations between 5,052 to 5,084 feet, which had been acidized with 5,100 gallons.

It was drilled to 5,200 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 5,190 feet, and plugged back to 5,145 feet.

The well is 660 feet from the south, and 1,580 feet from the east line of section 61, block 18, SPRR survey.

Austin Chalk trend expanded

DALLAS (SWN) — Pyro Energy Corp. has announced the successful development of its original acreage in the Gonzales County area of the Austin Chalk trend of central Texas. The Company to date has successfully completed all of the 13 wells drilled on its leases. The initial discovery well, the Burchard No. 1, was announced in April, 1981.

The average producing rate per well of all of these completions is 306 barrels of oil and 237 thousand cubic feet of gas per day on initial potential tests of the Buda formation. The best oil well is the L.F. Burchard "C" No. 5 which potentialed in the Buda for 955 barrels of oil plus 1 million cubic feet of gas per day with 750 pounds flowing pressure on a 12/64 inch choke.

All of the Buda completions have indicated potential pay in the Austin Chalk zone which lies about 200 feet above the Buda. Only one completion, the A.E. Schieberle No. 1, has been attempted to date in the Chalk. That well was recently repotentialed from 84 million cubic feet per day to 300 million cubic feet per day on an absolute open flow potential test in the Chalk. Additional Austin Chalk completions are planned.

Pyro Energy Corp. is the operator of the wells with a 25 percent interest. Other owners are Maynard Oil Company and partners with 25 percent and Tarpon Oil Company, a privately held company, with 10 percent. The remainder is held by unnamed private investors.

Pyro Energy Corp. also announced that it has acquired an additional 5,000 undeveloped acres in the vicinity. The Company plans to drill 10 to 15 wells on these leases during 1982.

Long hedging on auction

Wednesday's seventy-first public auction at the Midland Hilton of oil and gas leases on University Lands will likely be a "good" sale but not a record setter.

That's the opinion of Laddie Long, who manages the University Lands mineral interests. Long said last week (as we reported in Sunday's editon) a day or two before a sale he usually gets a feeling for how the bidding may go. He said this morning he still wasn't quite sure what to expect. He has had indications the sale could go either way.

"My gut feeling right now is it's going to be a good sale," Long said. But, he predicted, there would be no "booming records" set.

Long said some of the oilmen he has talked with have said they aren't interested in the auction and others have said they will be there with "buckets full of money."

"We ought to consider this a good sale is we make $20-25 million," Long said. That's about what he expects will be made by the auction, but, he said, he was "going way out on a limb" to make that prediction. "The sales always surprise me," he said.

If Long's guesstimate holds, Wednesday's sale will be the third most profittable since the auctions began in 1936. The greatest amount ever earned was $52,882,000 at last year's sale. At the sixty-ninth sale in August, 1980, $44,191,500 went into the University kitty.

Lee faces shootout while MHS needs a rebound

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

It's a little hard to figure out who is the real culprit of the second half District 5-5A basketball race. Is is Midland Lee or Odessa High?

One of those teams (take your choice) is not playing in the spirit of this league. Lee defeated OHS, 55-40, last Friday night at Chaparral Center and that outcome is certianly out of step with the rest of the wild happenings taking place in this insane race, quickly becoming known as "The Year of the Mess".

About the only thing decided in the first half race was that Midland Lee, Midland High and Abilene High were the only league teams to lose fewer than three games in seven outings.

So the second half race got underway last Friday and of those three teams that shared the first half title, only Lee escaped a gun at the head. Midland High lost to Odessa Permian, 55-52, with a technical foul with five seconds remaining in the game making the difference. And Abilene High dropped a 69-66 decision to the Big Spring Steers, a team that won only one time in the first half.

TO MAKE things even stranger, San Angelo clipped Abilene Cooper, 57-44, after losing to that same team in the first game of the first half.

So, the only conclusion is that either Lee or Odessa High hasn't got the word that this half is supposed to be a "mess" also. One would like to think that it is OHS who is out of step because it was Lee that helped generate the first half mess in the first place by defeating Abilene High and Midland High in the last two games of the first half to force that logjam.

So, is it now safe to say that coach Paul Stueckler's Rebels have all the advantages on their side while running down the stretch? The schedule, which has the Rebels facing San Angelo, Abilene High, Odessa Permian and Midland High at home, says yes. The fact that MHS and AHS lost Tuesday says yes. The wild happenings of this year in 5-5A will say only maybe — and probably no. There seem to be no real advantages in playing in this league.

Still, the Rebels are 1-0 in the second half, at least until 8 p.m. today at the Chap when they face San Angelo, a team that beat the Rebels by a 63-60 count in the first half. San Angelo figured to be a major contender for the 5-5A title this year, but logged only a 2-5 first half mark. The angry Bobcats hope to turn that record around in the second half and are off to a good start with the victory over Cooper Friday.

THE GAME may be heard locally on KBAT-FM radio, but this one could be well worth the $2 admission of seeing Lee's Alvin Dunson, who has had back-to-back games of 27 points, going against the high scoring threesome of San Angelo's Jeff Kasner, Hercules Miller and Lorand White. Lee also features inside scoring from Andre Van Buren and outside shootmng skills of Randy Pepper and Barry Blackwell along with one of the league's leading rebounders in Kenneth Brown.

Meanwhile, the frustrated Midland High Bulldogs of coach Jack Stephenson travel to Big Spring tonight to face a Steer team that has won two games in a row. After the technical foul call against Permian Friday in Odessa, the Bulldogs are in no mood to put up with a Steer resurgence, knowing that a loss today just might put them out of the playoff picture.

The Bulldogs, who have won or shared the district crown for three straight years, think they belong in the playoffs and they have to start rolling again after losing on a technical at Permian and seeing Lee outscore them 12-1 in the last 1:47 of play to end the first half.

Stephenson thinks his team is playing some of its best basketball of the season despite the two losses. Preston Robertson is getting his scoring back in gear after a couple of ankle injuries and Raymond Parker is beginning to score more also. Don Sharnowski, Jim Gunnels and Barr Bolger are playing steady ball and there is plenty of help on the bench.

MHS AND Lee are not the only teams facing problems tonight since Abilene High travels to Odessa Permian. Permian also thinks it has a shot at the second half title after beating MHS Friday, technical foul or not. AHS beat Permian in the first half by a 48-47 overtime margin. And Abilene Cooper, who was in the first half race until the final gun, faces Odessa High, a team the Cougars beat in the first half by a 46-45 margin when OHS missed a 30-foot shot at the buzzer.

Life in this league is not easy, and tonight's games could prove to be another scramble as the "Year of the Mess" continues.

Midland College Chaparral Lance McCain stretches out to try and keep the ball from going out of bounds in game action Monday night at Chaparral Center against New Mexico Junior College. The Chaps posted a 117-107 victory over the Thunderbirds to remain in contention for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference title.

Chaps blister Thunderbirds

Puntus Wilson goes on 40-point scoring binge

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland College Chaparral Puntus Wilson has New Mexico Junior College's number. It's 42.5. At least that's what the 6-foot-3½ sophomore from South Oak, Calif., has averaged against the Thunderbirds in two Western Junior College Athletic Conference basketball games this season.

In the first meeting between MC and NMJC, Wilson set a school record for most points in a game with 45 to lead the Chaps to a 113-96 victory. Monday night at Chaparral Center, he hit 19 field goals and two free throws for 40 points as Midland College posted a 117-107 victory over NMJC.

"I like playing them," said Wilson about his two hot nights against the Thunderbirds. "I wish I just had them on the schedule, it sure would be nice.

"I figured it would be a high scoring game," he added, "a run and gun game and when I had the open shot I took it."

And much to the dismay of the Thunderbirds, Wilson kept on hitting.

The Chaps used a familiar format in taking the victory. They took the lead on the first bucket and held it all night. But, while it's true they never relinquished the lead, it's also true they had trouble keeping even the biggest of point spreads.

IN THE first half the two teams played about even with MC on top anywhere from two to nine points. The nine-point lead, 14-5, came with 16:14 remaining to be played in the half. About three minutes later it was back to two, 19-17.

From that point until the end of the first half, the Chaps could never gain more than a six point edge and when halftime finally arrived they were up by five, 52-47.

MC outscored NMJC 16-8 in the first four minutes of the second half for a 74-61 lead and reached its biggest margin of the game when Chester Smith slammed one home for an 18-point, 91-73 lead. it almost looked like the Chaps were going to win an easy one.

But NMJC would have none of that. If the Thunderbirds were going to go down, they were going to go down fighting, and by playing with that attitude, it only took them six minutes to return the margin to four, 99-94, with 4:11 left in the game and revive their previously diminishing hopes.

In the next two minutes of play, Wilson and teammate Spud Webb scored 10 of the most important points of the game while the defensive play slowed the NMJC attack down to four points for a 109-98 lead. That margin was enough to hold off the Thunderbirds' final surge that brought the score back to five points, 112-107, but the clock had wound down to only 41 seconds.

MC finished out the game by scoring the final five points, two free throws by Lance McCain on a technical foul against NMJC, a five-foot jumper by Wilson and a free throw by Smith.

"WE'VE GOT kind of an excuse tonight," said Chap head coach Jerry Stone about giving up the big lead. "Spud has been sick, is still sick, and Jerome (Crowe) is sick. Spud hasn't worked out in five days. Puntus has been sick also. I was really worried about this game, and I'm worried about Thursday's game. I don't know when they'll get well."

"I was sick about two weeks ago," said Wilson, "touch of the flu I think. I'm over that now though. Spud Webb is really down and Jerome Crowe also. I guess it's spreading around on the team. Everybody else seems OK."

While Wilson is concerned with the health of his teammates, he is also confident that the team will be ready for Thursday's game against New Mexico Military Academy.

"I hope we, I know we'll win it," he said. "I hope the players are feeling well. If they're not, I think team play will keep the winning up."

And team play is a key to the Chaparral game plan. Who scores isn't as important to them as who wins.

"The best thing we do is be an unselfish team," said Stone. "They're getting as much pleasure out of feeding the ball as they do scoring."

The victory upped MC's seaons record to 19-5 and keeps the Chaps in contention for the WJCAC title with a 9-1 mark while New Mexico fell to 12-13 overall and 4-7 in league play.

Of the eight players that played for MC Monday night, five broke into double figures. Wilson led all scorers with his 40 points followed by Smith with 21, McCain with 18, Webb with 15 and Crowe with 14.

For NMJC, Mike Smith was the top scorer with 27 points with Charles Prescott adding 21, Ray Floyd 15, Steve Welch and Kenny Smith 14 each and Herb Briant 10.

New Mexico JC (107): Mike Smith, 11-5-4-27; Steve Welch, 6-2-3-14; Kenny Smith, 6-2-5-14; Charles Prescott, 7-7-3-21; Ray Floyd, 6-3-4-15; Mike Crudder, 1-2-0-4; Darryl Davis, 0-0-0-0; Herb Briant, 5-0-1-10; Harvey Campbell, 0-0-0-0; Louie Marsh, 0-2-0-2. Totals: 42-23-29-107.

Midland College (117): Spud Webb, 7-1-1-15; Puntus Wilson, 19-2-3-40; Lance McCain, 6-6-3-18; Chester Smith, 10-1-4-21; Rodney McChriston, 0-0-2-0; Chuck Robinson, 0-2-0-2; Justin Morett, 3-1-3-7. Totals: 52-13-18-117
Technical Fouls: NMJC, Kenny Smith, Mike Smith, Steve Welch. MC: Jerry Stone.
Halftime Score: MC 58, NMJC 53.

Lady Bulldogs keep 5-5A momentum

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland High girls basketball team has produced the "Great Turnaround of 1982" after a 45-32 romp over the Big Spring Steers Tuesday night at the MHS gym.

At this stage of the first half girls 5-5A cage race, Midland High was out of the race with an 0-3 record. They ended up the half with a 3-4 mark. Now with new life in the second half, the Lady Bulldogs are 3-0 and at the top of the standings. Now if they can finish the rest of this half like they did in the first half, they just might be in some kind of district playoff with San Angelo and Lee, the two co-champs of the first half.

And after seeing the Bulldogs against Big Spring Tuesday, one wonders why the MHS girls were ever 0-3 in the first place. The Bulldogs dominated the Steers and had several leads of over 20 points. In the process, MHS coach Jane Young emptied her bench.

"We got to play a lot of kids and that always makes it fun. I just now hope we can beat the teams that we did in the first half," Young said. "I think our kids were a little scared at the beginning of the game because we weren't relaxed and we missed some early shots and that didn't help our confidence. But everything turned out all right as we went along.

"We were 0-3 at this time in the first half, but I kept telling our girls that I felt we were as good as anyone in the district. Maybe it was just a matter of putting it all together."

THE BULLDOGS, the smallest team in 5-5A, have improved offensively and that may be the biggest key. Some of the shots that missed in the first half are now falling for the Pack and they work hard against the taller teams on defense. Things have jelled at MHS.

The Pack started slow, leading only by an 8-6 score at the end of the first period. Janice Littlefield, who scored eight of her 12 points in the first quarter, was hot from outside, but the Bulldogs were struggling. However, the Pack roared to a 14-6 and 19-10 lead in the second period as Littlefield and Penny Griffin each hit for four points.

The rest of the Bulldogs got hot in the second half, especially Shelia Christian. She hit 10 of her 12 points in the second half and the Pack put the game out of reach in the third period with a 20-point explosion for a 39-20 lead heading into the final period. Griffin ended up with eight points, but was a mainstay on defense as was Shelly Parker, who scored six.

ONE OF the highlights of the game came from Midland High's Missy Larremore, who performed a reverse layup off of a steal in the third period to give MHS a 37-20 lead with 1:04 left to play in the third period.

Midland didn't hit a good percentage, hitting only 21 of 58 from the field, but Big Spring was much worse, connecting on only 15 of 43 shots. Big Spring's 12-point fourth quarter was their best showing.

Shirly Dixon and Shell Rutledge led the Steers with 10 points each, but Elise Wheat, who is usually a high scorer for Big Spring, was held to a mere two points.

The loss all but dropped Big Spring out of the district race this year. The Steers are 0-3 in the second half and 11-16 on the year. MHS is now a respectable 17-11 on the season.

THE BULLDOGS face a major challenge Thursday when they travel to Abilene High in a battle of unbeaten second half teams. Abilene High defeated Odessa Permian Tuesday by a 50-47 count to go 3-0 also. San Angelo's 67-60 win over Midland Lee also left the Bobcats at 3-0 in the second half. In another league game of little importance, Abilene Cooper got its first 5-5A win of the year with a 40-27 win over Odessa High.

In the junior varsity game Tuesday, Midland High won a hard fought 49-46 verdict over Big Spring as Margaret Stanley hit for 15 points and O.J. Johnson 12. Big Spring's Paula Spears led all scorers with 18 and Teresa Smith had 15.

Bobcats dim Rebel hopes

SAN ANGELO — The Midland Lee girls basketball team is now in the position of needing help from other District 5-5A members if the Rebels hope to make the playoffs in 1982 after dropping a 67-60 decision to the San Angelo Bobcats here Tuesday night.

Lee and San Angelo tied for the first half title with identical 6-1 records, but Lee has now fallen on hard times in the second half with a 1-2 mark while San Angelo is rolling at a 3-0 clip. Midland High and Abilene High are both 3-0 in the second half also after games Tuesday night and Lee can only hope now that one of those teams wins the second half in order for the race to be thrown into a district playoff situation.

If San Angelo wins or ties for the second half title without Lee in the picture, the Bobcats will have won their second consecutive playoff berth. Lee is left in the position now of supporting Midland High or Abilene High in the second half.

San Angelo put four players in double figures against Lee to defeat the Rebels for the second time this year. Elsa Ornelas led the way with 17 points while Lisa Champlin, Regina Cole and Jeanne Bryant all had 10 each.

Lee's Shun Harris led all scorers with 18 points and Yshun King had 14. Maudie Akins added 10 points but those were the only players in double figures for the Rebels.

San Angelo started fast, but held a narrow 15-12 lead at the end of the first period. The Bobcats increased their lead to 41-32 at the half with a 26-point second period.

Down by nine heading into the second half, Lee narrowed the gap to five points in the third period, 52-47, and in the fourth period got as close as 58-55 on a pair of free throws by King with 3:47 left in the game. However, San Angelo reeled off six unanswered points for a 64-55 margin with 1:27 left and moved into the favorite's role in league play. San Angelo did lose to Midland High in the first half, but have the Bulldogs at home in this half.

Lee hit 25 field goals to San Angelo's 23, but the Rebels lost this one at the free throw line as the Bobcats outscored Lee 21-10 at the free throw line. Lee was charged with 30 fouls while San Angelo had 24 in a foul marred contest.

In the JV contest, San Angelo whipped Lee by a huge 71-40 margin as Talamantes hit for 26 points. Harmon had 14 for Lee.

Midland Lee (60): Yshun King, 5-4-4-14; Shun Harris, 8-2-4-18; Lurdes Duran, 0-0-2-0; YoYo Goodley, 4-0-3-8; Ellen Matson, 1-1-1-3; Felicia Farias, 0-0-3-0; Rozena McCabe, 1-2-5-4; Suzanne McGaha, 1-1-3-3; Maudie Akins, 5-0-5-10. Totals: 25-10-30—60.

San Angelo (67): Lisa Lisewsky, 2-1-2-5; Else Ornelas, 4-9-5-17; Regina Cole, 4-2-4-10; Lisa Champlin, 4-2-5-10; Jeanne Bryant, 2-6-2-10; Beverly Holtkamp, 4-0-3-8; Angie Hogue, 1-0-1-2; Yvette Guerrero, 1-0-2-2; Monica Bradley, 1-1-0-3. Totals: 23-21-26—67.

Rice blasts Texas; Cougs fall again

By The Associated Press

Texas A&M rode the hot hand of Claude Riley to an easy win over Houston and share of the Southwest Conference basketball lead on a night when the injury-troubled Texas Longhorns dropped their third game in a row.

Riley pumped in 38 points as the Aggies handed Houston its fifth loss in six games with a 95-77 decision Monday night.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN nudged Baylor 83-80 Monday night, but the surprise was the way unheralded Rice manhandled the fifth-ranked Longhorns 80-49.

"This is not the first time we've played this well," said Rice Coach Tommy Suitts. "We played some other games on the road but this is just the first time the home crowd has seen it."

Texas Coach Abe Lemons said he was not embarrassed by the season's worst defeat for the Longhorns, who are trying to recover from the loss of forward Mike Wacker.

"I've never been humiliated over a basketball game. Turning against your country might be humiliating, but not losing a basketball game," said Lemons.

"Things are so different now, you just can't put a team together overnight, it just doesn't work that way," Lemons said.

THE OWLS hit 80 percent of their shots in the first 10 minutes of the game and the stunned Longhorns could never recover.

"Any time you play Texas you've got to make some outside shots," Suitts said "Before the game, I was worried about our scoring but it turned out differently, didn't it?"

Rice's Rickey Pierce, the nation's No. 2 scorer, led the assault with 32 points. But the Owls also got 18 points from Bobby Tudor.

The Longhorns were led by Denard Holmes with 19 points and LaSalle Thompson with 13.

Riley got 14 of his points in the first half as the Aggies broke open a close game and took a 44-35 lead at intermission.

"Claude Riley was just tremendous tonight," said Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf. "He did everything right. ... There are a lot of peaks and valleys in this game, but tonight we climbed the peak."

RUDY WOODS added 15 points for the Aggies and the Cougars could draw no closer than eight points in the second half.

The win was the sixth in the last seven games for the Aggies and their 6-2 SWC record put them in a first place tie with Arkansas.

"We were completely outplayed tonight. Our big men were dominated for the first time all year," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis.

TCU's Darrell Browder scored 30 points and Doug Arnold added 26 as the Horned Frogs took an early lead and held on to move into third place with Texas.

"I thought Browder really played super," said TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth. "That's the way he played for us last year."

Terry Teagle scored a career-high 37 points, but the Bears just could not overtake TCU.

"We didn't play that badly at all. Darrell Browder and Doug Arnold just killed us. We did all we could to stop them, but we didn't," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller.

China's sports to cross Formosa Strait to Taiwan

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A women's softball team will do this summer what Mao Tse-tung's revolutionaries couldn't in 1949: cross the Formosa Strait to Taiwan.

Taiwan has told International Softball Federation officials in Oklahoma City it will invite a women's softball team from the People's Republic of China to the Fifth Women's World Softball Championships, ISF Secretary General Don Porter said Monday. And the Chinese have said they will go, he said.

The hosts have not yet issued formal invitations but they are due six months before play, Porter said.

"However, in previous communications with Taiwan, I have been advised that they will invite all the eligible member countries, which would include Mainland China," he said. "China has advised me they plan to participate in the world championships in Taipei."

Flags and anthems of guest countries are not allowed during the competition July 1-15 in Taiwan's capital, and neither side has demanded special treatment.

There are 46 countries in the federation and Porter said up to 20 can be expected to participate in the championships, held every four years.

Softball teams from the two countries have met only once before. China beat Taiwan 7-4 in a round of the Youth World Championships in 1981 in Edmonton, Alberta. Japan won that tournament.

The two countries have fought the same battle in the International Softball Federation that they have in other arenas such as the United Nations, Porter said.

Since China joined the federation in 1979, and was refused its demand that Taiwan be expelled, the two have been "jockeying for position," he said.

"We get the same political overtones from time to time that Taiwan is a province of China and that Taiwan claims it is the real China," he said.

Sometimes, he said, the relationship "is kind of touch and go. The Chinese are great nogotiators, both sides. I felt like Kissinger, or Haig, for a while."

Foursome wins MCC tourney

The team of Walt and Sylvia Laufer-Bill and Jane Thomas posted a 58 net score Sunday to win the Midland Country Club Ladies Golf Association Tournament.

Buddy and Dot Reddin-Glen and Helen Brant finished second with a 59.

Mississippi star choses Texas Longhorns

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) — Marcus Dupree, the most highly recruited prep football player in Mississippi, has decided to play his college ball with the Texas Longhorns, his coach at Philadelphia High School said today.

"He made up his mind this weekend," coach Joe Wood said. "We liked the school, the people and everything he saw."

Dupree, a 6-foot-2, 220-pounder, scored 87 touchdowns during his four years at Philadelphia and gained 5,300 yards. Wood said his running back had excellent hands as a pass receiver.

The athlete had been recruited by colleges across the country, including Mississippi's three major universities.

Davey Moore captures WBA crown

TOKYO (AP) — American Davey Moore made good today on the prediction that he would take the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title from Japan's Tadashi Mihara, with a sixth-round knockout.

The 22-year-old New Yorker floored Mihara three times in the sixth after having him on the canvas in the fifth. The scheduled 15-rounder ended under a three-knockdown rule, at 53 seconds of the round.

"I'm on top of the world," Moore said afterward. "When I came to Japan I knew I would beat Mihara."

Moore said his strategy was to lure Mihara to him so that he could counterpunch. "I beat him because I hit him harder and faster," said the American, who boasted earlier that he would dethrone Mihara. "I thought I had finished him in the fifth, but there wasn't enough time."

Moore, who grew up in the Bronx, was in command throughtout the fight, with many ringsiders giving Mihara, 26, just one round.

Moore weighed in at 152¾ pounds, a pound less than Mihara.

It was Mihara's first defense of the title he won by beating American Rockey Fratto last Nov.7 in Rochester, N.Y., for the championship vacated by Sugar Ray Leonard.

Referee Carlos Berrocal of Panama raised Moore's hand after a third mandatory count put the Japanese out of action. The partisan crowd of 7,000 booed and cheered inside Tokyo's Metropolitan Gymnasium. It was the first championship match in Japan this year.

Both fighters entered the ring with undefeated professional records.

It was Moore's eight triumph and his sixth straight knockout.

Pre-fight favorite Mihara has 15 victories, including 11 knockouts.

Leon Washington, Moore's manager-trainer, said: "Moore won because he was in good physical condition and in top form."

He predicted Moore will be a long-time champion because "he has the potential," adding that he thought Moore would win by the 10th round but "not so soon."

Declaring Moore now is ready to face any of the top 10 contenders, Washington said, "We are waiting for offers."

The fight opened with Moore firing a couple of double left jabs to Mihara's head. In the midst of a left-right attack, the third-year business administration student of Manhattan College scored with a stinging left to Mihara's head, rocking the Japanese. He then continued the attack with a double left jabbing attack.

In the second round, Moore again scored with a hard hook to Mihara's head that sent him reeling.

For the next two rounds Moore continued the same effective attack pattern. But in the fourth round, Mihara cornered Moore with strong lefts and rights that had the challenger in trouble for a while.

The two fighters then slugged it out in midring until the bell sounded.

Bucs trade linebacker Lewis

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — "It's all for the best," former Pro Bowl linebacker David Lewis said Monday after learning the Tampa Bay Buccaneers had traded him to the San Diego Chargers for future undisclosed draft choices.

Lewis, a three-year starter at Southern Cal, was the 29th player taken in the 1977 National Football League draft and the first choice in the second round.

He started 60 of 62 games for Tampa Bay, including 57 in a row, before the 1981 season and appeared in the Pro Bowl after the 1980 season.

Last season, however, Lewis was limited to four starts because of personal problems, injuries and the rapid development of second-year pro Andy Hawkins.

Lewis said although it was frustrating to sit on the sidelines last season, he felt discipline measures taken against him by Tampa Bay Coach John McKay were fair.

"It was justifiable and it was right. On this ball club, if you don't follow the team rules, steps will be taken, and that goes from A down to Z," he said.

McMahon receives O'Brien QB award

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jim McMahon, who broke 55 NCAA records and tied another in his Brigham Young University career, was presented the Davey O'Brien award Monday night as the nation's outstanding quarterback.

The senior quarterback was presented a $10,000 scholarship for his school at an awards banquet at The Fort Worth Club.

The award is named after O'Brien, the late Heisman Trophy winner who was an All-America at Texas Christian University.

"I think an award like this honoring the quarterbacks is really great," said McMahon. "It's nice to get a national award that a Southern California tailback doesn't win. I think it's good that the number one quarterback is so honored."

He said that of all his NCAA records, he was most proud of his 84 touchdown passes.

"That is the record that I cherish the most because when you get the ball into the end zone you have accomplished something," he said. "There are a lot of quarterbacks who can get yardage but can't score the touchdowns."

Daily News tries to keep Dick Young

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Daily News announced Monday that it would take legal action to try to prevent its veteran sports columnist, Dick Young, from joining the rival New York Post.

The columnist's move was hailed by the Post in a red ink banner atop page one of Monday's editions which read, "Dick Young Joins The Post."

"We are taking immediate legal action to compel Dick Young to live up to his contract with The Daily News," Michael J. O'Neill, editor and executive vice president of The News, said in a statement. "Under the contract, he is clearly barred from writing for The Post."

The newspaper said its contract with Young runs to 1984.

The Post said it would have no comment on O'Neill's statement.

The announcement last Dec. 18 that the Daily News was up by sale by its parent, the Tribune Co. of Chicago, raised job concerns among its more than 4,000 employees. Some have applied for work elsewhere.

"It is incredible that Young would run out on the newspaper that has employed him for 45 years just when it is in difficulty. It is even more incredible that he would desert his many colleagues who are working loyally to help the paper through its crisis.

Clarendon nips Badgers, 63-62

CLARENDON — Clarendon College knocked Amarillo College from the ranks of the unbeaten here Monday night with a narrow 63-62 win over the Badgers.

Amarillo, ranked No. 5 in the nation, is now tied for first place with Midland College in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference with 9-1 marks.

Amarillo will host Midland College Monday in a battle for the conference lead.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Rising interest rates dealt the stock market its sharpest setback in more than five months Monday as last week's rally came to an abrupt end.

Energy, high-technology and bank stocks were among the primary casualties of the selloff.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 26.07 points last week, tumbled 19.41 to 851.69. That marked the average's largest loss since it fell 20.46 last Aug. 24.

The daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange showed almost three losers for every gainer, and the Big Board's composite index dropped 1.38 to 68.01.

The advance in stock prices last week was attributed partly to hopes for a decline in interest rates. But such talk quickly faded late Friday when the Federal Reserve issued weekly statistics showing a much smaller decline in the money supply than analysts had expected.

The stock market's decline picked up momentum late in the session when two banks — Citibank of New York and Crocker Bank of San Francisco — raised their prime lending rates from 15¾ to 16½ percent.

Energy stocks came under pressure on reports that oil prices might soon decline further in the face of continued weak demand. Standard Oilof California fell 1⅜ to 34½; Standard Oil of Indiana 1⅜ to 44½; Exxon ⅝ to 30, and Texaco ⅝ to 30⅞, all in active trading.

Among oil-field service and equipment issues, Schlumberger dropped 3⅛ to 50⅞; Halliburton 3⅛ to 47¼; Hughes Tool 1⅝ to 32⅜; Baker International 1¾ to 33¼, and Gearhart Industries 1⅜ to 19.

In the high-technology sector, Computervision lost 1½ to 32⅜; Datapoint 1⅝ to 49⅜; Hewlett-Packard 1⅝ to 43⅛; Tymshare 1⅛ to 18⅜, and Texas Instruments 2⅛ to 78¾.

Bank issues, which had been among the leaders of last week's advance, reversed course. J.P. Morgan dropped 3 to 54; Citicorp ⅞ to 25¼, and Chase Manhattan ⅞ to 57¼.

Volume on the Big Board slowed to 47.72 million shares from 73.40 million Friday.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 55.42 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell 3.03 to 131.58, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 2.62 at 117.78.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gave up 8.28 to 287.38. The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market closed at 186.82, down 1.57.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 26.07 last week, dropped 19.41 to 851.69.

Declines held a 3-1 edge on advances at the New York Stock Exchange.

The NYSE's composite index fell 1.38 to 68.01.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 8.28 at 287.38.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

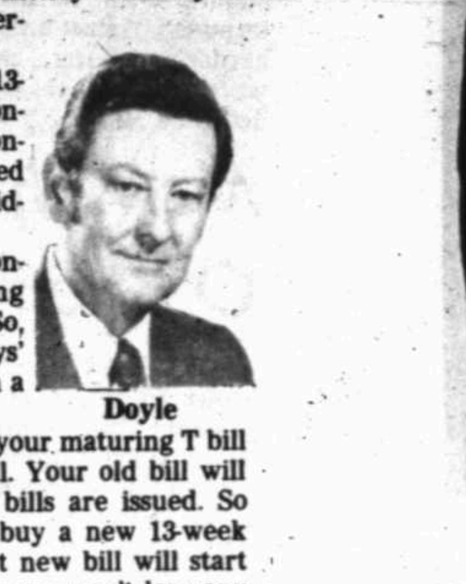

Interest, rollovers on Treasury bills

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I purchased a $30,000, 13-week U.S. Treasury bill by mailing a "tender" and my $30,000 certified check to a Federal Reserve Bank on Thursday, Dec. 10. The T bill was issued the following Thursday, Dec. 17, and the T bill didn't start earning interest until that date. So I lost a week's interest.

On the tender form, I checked the box electing to "roll over" the bill when it matures and buy a new 13-week T bill. Will I lose another week's interest at that time?

A. No. At roll-over time, your money will stay at work and you won't lose any interest.

Doyle

The U.S. Treasury auctions off 13-week and 26-week T bills every Monday — the preceding Friday, if Monday is a holiday. A tender submitted by mail must be postmarked by midnight before the auction.

The T bills auctioned off on Monday are issued and start drawing interest the following Thursday. So, you lose at least three or four days' interest on a T bill purchased with a small tender.

But, when you roll over a T bill, your maturing T bill is used to pay for your new T bill. Your old bill will mature on the same day new T bills are issued. So your original 13-week T bill will buy a new 13-week with an issue day of Feb. 18. That new bill will start drawing interest immediately and you won't lose any interest.

Q. If I purchase a $10,000, 13-week U.S. Treasury bill with a discount rate of approximately 10 percent, will the discount check I receive be for about $1,000? Further, if I roll over the T bill every 13 weeks and the discount rate is 10 percent each time, will I get a $1,000 discount check at each rollover?

A. Sorry. But you get loud "NO" answers to both questions. Discount rates, like most interest rates, are quoted on an annual basis. If you were able to get $1,000 four times a year on a $10,000 investment, that would be 40 percent — not 10 percent.

If you buy a $10,000, 52-week T bill at a 10 percent discount, you would get a $1,000 discount check. Simple arithmetic shows that $1,000 is 10 percent of $10,000.

If you buy a $10,000, 13-week T bill at a discount of approximately 10 percent, your discount check will be roughly $250. That's 10 percent on your money for one-fourth of a year.

And, if you buy a $10,000, 26-week T bill at a discount of about 10 percent, your discount check will be a approximately $500 — 10 percent on your money for half of a year.

Q. My husband just retired and will receive a lump sum of about $80,000 from a profit-sharing plan. An accountant has advised us how to handle this money to minimize taxes. I agree with most of the accountant's recommendations. But he advises putting a large part of the $80,000 into a 52-week U.S. Treasury bill, in order to defer tax on the interest until 1983.

Treasury bills are not exactly risk free, especially in these economic times. This is what scares me. Am I wrong?

A. Yes, you are. U.S. Treasury bills, notes and bonds are counted as the least risky of all investments.

A T bill is a "discount security." You buy it at a price below its face value and collect that face value when it matures. You get a discount check at the time you buy it. Your interest, however, is the difference between the purchase price and the face value you receive at maturity. With a 52-week T bill the tax bite on the interest is put off until next year.

My recommendation is to follow the advice that accountant gave you about the T bill — and all the other things you mentioned in your letter.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Dollar value high after prime increase

LONDON (AP) — The American dollar, propelled by higher interest rates, soared in early trading today. Gold bullion dwindled with reports of a continuing decline in South African production.

The sharp rise in the dollar's value followed higher prime rates announced Monday by Citibank and Crocker National Bank.

Sir Gordon Richardson, governor of the Bank of England, voiced concern Monday night over the impact in Europe of American monetary policies.

Speaking to the annual banquet of the Overseas Bankers Club in London, he said too much of the anti-inflation battle was being put on monetary rather than tax policy and there was a risk U.S. interest rates would not only remain high but continue to be volatile.

The dollar reached a three-month high in Tokyo and Zurich, a four-month peak in Frankfurt and a five-month high in Paris.

Midmorning dollar rates compared to late Monday:

2.3660 West German marks, up from 2.3470.

1.8892 Swiss francs, up from 1.8720.

6.02 French francs, up from 5.97.

1,255.50 Italian lire, up from 1,253.55.

2.5930 Dutch guilders, up from 2.5705.

1.2087 Canadian dollars, up from 1.19595.

The British pound eased to $1.8520, from $1.8673 late Monday.

Earlier in Tokyo, where trading ends just as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rallied to a closing 233.60 yen after briefly hitting a three-month high of 233.75. It closed Monday at 230.30. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 233.425 yen.

London's five bullion houses fixed a morning recommended gold price of $376.25 a troy ounce, down from $378.63 late Monday.

In Zurich, the metal traded at a median $375.50, down from $380.30.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold fell $7.34 to close at $378.60.

Silver was unchanged in London at $8.045.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Alternative methods to coping with pain

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is 84 years of age and suffers from arthritis. The doctor has prescribed medication, but she is very reluctant to take it and rarely does. Is there any other way she can try to control her pain that does not depend on drugs? — Ms. V.Y., St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Ms. Y.: Dr. Karen C. Parker, of the Veterans Hospital in Loma Linda, Calif., points out that chronic pain in elderly patients is often a combination of a number of factors. These not only include the disease itself, but poor nutrition, loneliness, depression, and even overmedication.

Proper nutrition, therefore, is one possible method of helping a person cope with pain. Dr. Parker suggests foods such as milk and peanuts that are rich in tryptophan, an amino acid. Exercise and relaxation training are other ways that pain may be minimized in some people without the need of resorting to the use of drugs. In fact, many patients report that they did not even realize how tense they were until they experienced the effects of relaxation training.

Before your mother undertakes any of these other approaches to treatment, she should inform her physician that she is not taking the medication prescribed for her. You can't expect a doctor to be very effective if he is not even aware that the patient is not complying with his instructions.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As plainly as I can put it, my sister is married to a bum. In other words, he's been a chronic drunk for the past 20 years. I don't care about him, but I do worry about their eight-year-old son. What sort of effect does such a father have on a son? — Mrs. D.O., Denver

Dear Mrs. O.: I imagine this is not the time for a discussion of the fact that alcoholism is a disease and that your brother-in-law is in need of treatment. Let me simply note that if he continues to drink as much as you indicate he does, he may not be around much longer to annoy you. If your sister can get him to Alcoholics Anonymous or to an alcohol abuse clinic, the entire family may benefit.

As for your nephew, it should come as no surprise that the sons of alcoholic fathers run an increased risk of emotional problems and social maladjustment in later life. This development not only seems logical but has been demonstrated in controlled studies.

Daughters, on the other hand, do not appear to be as seriously affected. A Swedish study has shown that the social adjustment of daughters did not differ significantly from that of a control group of daughters. The different reaction of boys and girls to the same situation was attributed to the father's importance as a role model for his sons.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a newborn baby has gonorrhea, do the symptoms show right away? — Arlene, Trenton, N.J.

Dear Arlene: Symptoms of gonococcal infection in a newborn infant may not become apparent until as long as 28 days after the baby is born.

TAX TIPS

'One-time' deduction applies to amount of interest

This is the second in a series of tax tip articles sponsored as a public service by the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. If I invest in one of the new savings certificates and earn part of the interest in 1981, is my "one-time" deduction limited to that amount?

A. The "one-time" deduction on the special savings certificates applies to the dollar amount of interest. If a cash basis taxpayer received a quarterly interest payment on Dec. 31, 1981 of less than $1,000 ($2,000 for a joint return filer), his deduction would equal the amount of the payment and completely offset the interest income.

The interest received in 1982 would be offset to the extent that the $1,000/$2,000 maximum limit exceeds the deduction claimed in 1981. If the limit is still not reached in 1982 and the taxpayer invests in another one year certificate before Dec. 31, 1982, the remaining available deduction could be realized in 1983.

It should be remembered that if the certificate is redeemed prior to maturity, no deduction will be allowed and any amount claimed in a prior year must be recaptured. The certificates also lose their tax benefit if used for collateral, or if the taxpayer has to borrow the money to make the initial investment.

Q. I understand that in 1981 I will be able to exclude up to $200 of dividends and interest ($400 on a joint return) instead of the $100 dividend only exclusion I was allowed in the past.

A. It is true that in 1981 you will be able to exclude up to $200 ($400 on a joint reuturn) of both interest and dividends. Congress passed this new provision in 1980 along with the Windfall Profit Tax Act and made it applicable to years beginning after 1980.

But beware because the new Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 does away with the interest and dividend exclusion described above for tax years beginning after December 31, 1981 therefore making it effective for only one year. Beginning in 1982, the law reverts to how it stood before the Windfall Profit Tax Act, so that after 1981 you will only be entitled to a dividend exclusion of $100 ($200 on a joint return) and there will be no interest exclusion.

Q. My credit union sends me a year-end statement which lists how much I earned during the past year on my deposits and refers to the earnings as dividends. Should I show this on my tax return the same way I do my stock dividends?

A. No. Income which you receive from your credit union on deposits you have with them are not dividends for tax purposes and should not be reported as such. This should be reported as interest income along with other interest income you might have.

For more information on this and other income tax questions, attend the "You and Your Income Tax" class sponosred by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants. The class, scheduled for Feb. 11, from 6:30 to 10 p.m. is presented as a public service.

Classes will be held at Midland College in the Allison Fine Arts Building. A $2 per person fee will be charged. To register, mail your $2 your name and address to Taxpayer Education, P.O. Box 151, Midland, Texas 79702 before Feb. 8. Pre-registration is encouraged, but walk-ins will be accepted.

Power plant splills radioactive water

LOWER ALLOWAYS CREEK, N.J. (AP) — Workmen have mopped up some 23,000 gallons of "mildly" radioactive water that spilled into an auxiliary building and splashed onto workers at the Salem I nuclear power plant, officials said.

About 16 workmen "got their feet wet, their shoes, their socks and their trousers," said Wes Denman, spokesman for plant operator Public Service Electric & Gas Co. here, of the Monday morning accident.

The spill was cleaned up by Monday night, Denman said.

He said the exposure levels were comparable to "an evening of watching color television," he said. "It's really nothing much above background levels. It's all inside the auxiliary building."

The workmen were decontaminated with soap and water, he said.

"They received no measurable exposure. You'd have to swim in that for a while to get some exposure," he said.

The water leaked out when an 8-inch line of steel and lead hosing pulled loose from a coupling, he said. The hose was a temporary link between the spent fuel pools at Salem I and Salem II.

Karl Abraham, a spokesman for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission in King of Prussia, Pa., said there was no danger to the public or the workers.

PSE&G spokesman Neal Brown in Newark said the water was contained in an auxiliary building after the leak.

Salem I has been out of service since Jan. 1 for refueling and maintenance outage. The plant will not affect the restart scheduled for March 1, Brown said.

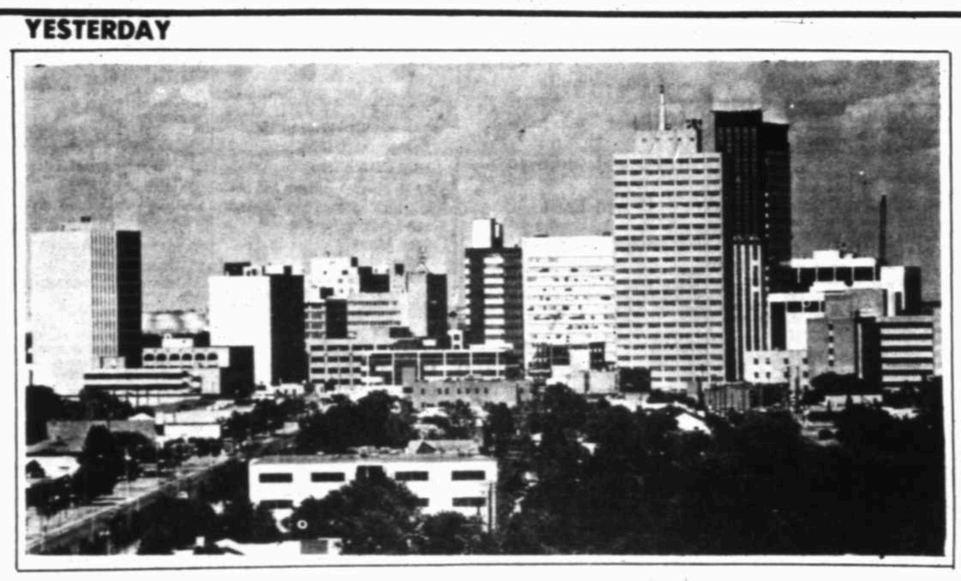

The leak did not affect operations at Salem II, Brown said.

All fuel assemblies were taken out of the reactor before the leak and were being stored in the spent fuel pool in another building, he said.

Brown said workers were examining another problem at Salem I. On Sunday, it was discovered that two of the fuel rods were cracked.

Plant operators were assessing what effect, if any, the cracked rods have had on the generating station, he said.

GARAGE SALE

Patio Sale, Yard Sale . . . whatever term you use, it's an enjoyable and profitable experience. It's your opportunity to "clean up" while you "clean out." You'll become re-acquainted with your neighbors and meet new friends, and the fresh air is good for your health.

Check your attic, basement, garage and closets for good, but no-longer-used items - furniture, tools, . . . the list goes on and on. Every item should be priced, of course. You may want to combine your sale with a friend or neighbor. Choose your days, get your signs ready and place your ad in the Classified section. Your ad should list a few key items, give the date, time, and good directions.
