Pilot Injured In Crash Near Panhandle

Austin E. Wetzler, Boeing Aircraft employee flying out of Wichita, Kans., was critically injured yesterday at 2:35 p.m. when his single-engine plane crashed two miles east of Panhandle.

Taken to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, Wetzler was given emergency surgery for head and leg injuries, and reported still in critical condition this morning.

"Jim Powers, a farmer ten miles east of Panhandle, first saw the plane crash. He reported it to J. R. Carhart, owner of Kimble Elevators, Panhandle. Carhart called me," E. G. Stapp, Carson County deputy sheriff said after investigating the crash.

"He was unconscious when we pulled him out of the plane. His fuel tank was empty, and the plane was totally demolished."

"Wetzler's home is in Merced, Calif. He was flying from Wichita (See PILOT, Page 3)

Joint US-Soviet Space Project Is Cited By Reds

GENEVA (UPI)—Soviet sources said today America and Russia have agreed to launch a joint weather satellite.

The project, the sources said, is the first fruit of the exchange of letters on outer space cooperation between President Kennedy and Premier Nikita Khrushchev last March.

At All-Faith Memorial Service

Clergyman Says Crash Victims Could Be Considered 'Martyrs'

PARIS (UPI)—A clergyman told mourners in a gray stone church today that the 130 victims of a jet airliner crash near Paris could be considered "martyrs" to the progress of aviation, whose tragic deaths might make it safer for others to fly.

While candles flickered on an altar banked with white lilies, Episcopal Dean Sturgis L. Riddle eulogized the victims of Sunday's jet tragedy.

The hour-long all-faith memorial service at the American Cathedral in Paris paid tribute to the 121 Americans, most of them from the state of Georgia, who perished in the crash. Nine French crew members also were killed.

Listening with bowed heads and tear-filled eyes were high U. S. embassy and French government officials, tourists from Georgia, and pilots and stewardesses of Air France. Among them was Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. of Atlanta.

He came from a hardware store on Main St. in Atlanta. Adv.

Pampa, Woodward, Elk City New Rodeo Association Formed By Three Cities

Pampa is one of the cities in the newly-formed Triangle Rodeo Association organized last week in Elk City, Okla., it was announced here today by Wiley Reynolds, president of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association.

The other two members are the Woodward Elks Rodeo at Woodward, Okla., and the Elk City Rodeo at Elk City, Okla.

Organization of the three-city rodeo group was completed at a meeting in Elk City Saturday attended by the four members of the TOT Ass'n. executive board including President Reynolds, Jake Osborne, Buddy Price and Bill Tidwell. Board members from the Woodward and Elk City rodeo associations also attended the session.

Purpose of the new organization, Reynolds said, is to coordinate advertising and attendance for the three R.C.A. approved rodeos, held annually in Pampa, Woodward and Elk City.

Five beautifully hand-tooled saddles will be awarded to the high point contestant in each of the rodeo events at the conclusion of the Elk City Rodeo in September. To be eligible for these special prizes a cowboy must participate in all three of the rodeos, and points will be determined on the basis of their winnings at each of the three shows.

Dates for the Top O' Texas Rodeo in Pampa are August 22-25. The Woodward dates are August 29-September 1, with Elk City dates on September 3-5. Beutler Bros. of Elk City, Okla., are producers for all three rodeos and will be in charge of registration details. Total purse for the three rodeos will be $11,400 plus the saddles presented to the winner in each event.

A board of directors to handle details of the newly-organized association will be composed of the president and secretary of each rodeo association. Serving as president of the Triangle Rodeo Association will be Ralph M. Billings, Woodward, Okla.; vice president will be President Reynolds of the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association and secretary-treasurer will be Paul Creason of Elk City, Okla.

A meeting of the new board of directors will be held later this month to work out final details for the advertising program.

"Of course, there is a cry for agony and perplexity," said Dean Riddle from the pulpit. "Christ heard it from the cross — 'My God, why, why?'"

"Rain falls on the just and unjust. God's laws are impartial, else all would be whim and chaos."

"Perhaps these dead will be considered as martyrs, their deaths pushing forward the frontier of man's knowledge of these things. Perhaps their sacrifice will make it safer for others to fly. Greater love hath no man than this—that a man gave up his life for his friends."

"The fight for safety in the air must continue."

"Let us honor the dead."

Stock Trading Quiet In Early Dealings Today

Incumbents Backed In Most Primaries

By JESSE BOGUE
UPI Financial Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Trading of stocks quieted in early dealings on the New York Stock Exchange today while the prices of leading issues continued on the same slightly upward course they showed at the close Tuesday.

By the end of the first hour, some leaders had lost a little of the gains they showed at the opening. But most held small advances and, except for one flurry in which the tape ran about four minutes behind the market, there were no big bursts of buying and selling.

Volume in the first hour after the 10 a.m. EDT opening was 960,000 shares compared with the 1,130,000 Tuesday. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 601.36 at 11 a.m., up a healthy 6.40 points and the Standard & Poor's index of 500 stocks was 58.25, up 0.68.

Auto production news was good, and Chrysler, Ford and General Motors added a dollar or more. Du Pont was up at least $1. International Business Machines ran up $6.87 to $71. General Telephone up 50 cents to 21 1/2.

Traders said they were encouraged by the tone the market had set on Tuesday. It closed only slightly higher, but it resisted some selling which in a weaker market might have dropped quotations.

Although analysts remained cautious about the future course of the market, some noted that an administration top-to-bottom income tax cut proposal, advanced Monday by Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, was coming under some fire in Washington and elsewhere as being too indefinite to have a pronounced effect on the market at present. One said it was purely a traders' market.

Graham Says U.S. Schools, Parents, Churches Failing

CHICAGO (UPI)—Evangelist Billy Graham said Tuesday night that schools, parents and churches have failed to give American youth purpose and meaning in life.

Graham, addressing some 31,000 persons in McCormack Place Convention Hall, said the American educational system is "intent in imparting knowledge, but so lax in instilling the power to direct that knowledge toward constructive goals that it is casting our young people adrift on a sea of purposeless life."

"We have worked to develop minds and bodies and have neglected the most important part of the student—the spirit," he said.

"Our colleges have built bone without sinew, generated energy without purpose. We have imported knowledge without wisdom."

Graham, whose sermon was the seventh of his Greater Chicago Crusade, blamed the adults of today for many of youth's problems.

Speaking to young persons in the audience, Graham said, "I am convinced that my generation has failed you. We have immersed our children in the purposelessness, the meaningless of our own lives."

200 Expected For UCT's Convention

Approximately 200 persons representing councils from all over the state will open a three-day convention of the United Commercial Travelers in the Coronado Inn tomorrow.

The convention is for members and their wives. Registration will start tomorrow afternoon and social hour and dance are scheduled tomorrow night.

Bill Crowell, senior counselor for the Pampa UCT, said today the business session will start at 9 a.m. Friday in the Starlight Room and will conclude at 5 p.m.

Feature of the three-day convention will be an address Friday by William (Bill) Martin. (See CONVENTION, Page 3)

Executive Testifies Despite Murder Of His Daughter In Stockpile Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A retired business executive insisted on keeping his appointment with Senate stockpile investigators today despite his daughter's murder Monday.

The former executive, Arthur H. Bunker, was called by the Senate subcommittee investigating the nation's stockpile to answer charges that Eisenhower administration officials showed favoritism to Climax Molybdenum Co.

Bunker headed the company in 1957 when, through General Services Administrator Franklin G. Floete, the government accepted $1.2 million to release the company from a contract obligating it to supply 38 million pounds of molybdenum to the strategic stockpile.

R. C. Coburn, chief counsel of the Senate subcommittee, offered to postpone Bunker's scheduled appearance, but Bunker sent word that he had prepared himself to testify and wanted to appear. His daughter, Daphne Rhodes, 26, was found strangled in her Topeka, Kan., apartment Monday.

Other congressional news:

Aid: Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., said he was optimistic the Senate would pass its $4,822,000, 000 foreign aid bill with no big changes. But he conceded the vote would be close unless a compromise could be reached.

Taxes: Republicans assailed the administration promise of a tax cut next year as a grandstand play for votes in the November elections. Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., said the administration was just "whistling in the dark" and once the elections are over "that will be the last you will hear of any tax cut."

Marshall's Hat Is Found By FBI

FRANKLIN, Tex. (UPI)—Texas Ranger Capt. Clint Peoples said today the FBI has found the hat agriculture agent Henry H. Marshall was wearing when he was fatally shot five times last year. The hat had what may be a bullet hole in the brim.

Marshall was the first Agriculture Department employee to investigate Billie Sol Estes. A state grand jury is trying to determine whether he was murdered or committed suicide.

Goodman was arrested before U. S. Commissioner Ralph L. Fowler on charges of giving false information about a bomb on an airplane and released on $500 bond.

A powerful tornado destroyed a concrete block building on the eastern edge of Vernon Tuesday night. Several other twisters prowled the Panhandle and northern portions of the state.

Thunderstorms raked North Central and Northeast Texas. A severe thunderstorm forecast was issued for the area, but expired at 7 a.m. without serious damage being reported.

Forecasters said storms will build up in West Texas again this afternoon, moving eastward across the northern half of the state. Overnight low temperatures early today ranged from 34 degrees at Dalhart to 79 at Corpus Christi.

Twisters were reported near Fort Stockton, 30 miles northeast of Amarillo, near Higgins and in the area around Follett as well as at Vernon.

Connecticut Republicans at the state convention nominated insurance executive John Alsop to run on the GOP gubernatorial ticket. It took eight roll calls and the longest session for a single nomination in the history of the state GOP organization.

In Montana, Reps. Arnold H. Olsen, D., and James F. Battin, R., were unopposed. Rancher Wayne Montgomery won the GOP nomination to face Olsen and lawyer Leo C. Graybill won the Democratic primary to run against Battin in November.

Off-Train Employees' Strike Threat Ends

By FRANCIS X. BRENNAN
United Press International
CHICAGO (UPI) — Negotiators for 11 unions representing 450,000 off-train employees Tuesday accepted a wage increase of 10.2 cents an hour offered by the nation's railroads, ending a strike threat.

The railroads warned the settlement may lead to rate hikes or layoff of employees.

Separate work rules talks between the railroads and five operating brotherhoods continued with no report of progress.

The agreement announced by George E. Leighty, chief union negotiator, and J. E. Wolfe, head of the railroads' bargaining team, ended a nine-month dispute. With mediation procedures under the Federal Railway Labor Act exhausted, the non-operating employees had been free to strike since last Sunday.

Wolfe said the railroads made the 10.2-cent offer—recommended by a presidential emergency board—under prodding from Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg.

"Carriers have been of the opinion... that the recommendations were inflationary and contrary to the public policy as expressed by President Kennedy. Nevertheless, the carriers were advised by Secretary Goldberg that a disruption of service of one or more key railroads could not be tolerated. The railroads were left without an alternative but to accept the board's recommendations," Wolfe said.

He estimated the wage boost would cost the railroads $105 million.

"The impact of this additional expense on the carriers is indeed serious. Many railroads are not in financial position to pay wages in effect prior to the increase," he said.

Wolfe has estimated that non-operating employees have been averaging $2.48 an hour.

"The possibility of boosting rates must not be overlooked. Also, there is the possibility that many thousands of railroad employees who might otherwise have retained their jobs will be relieved by railroads which can no longer afford to keep them. There is no question but that railroads will have to consider raising rates," he said.

Woman Injured In Two-Car Collision

Mrs. Helen Knox, 2228 Hamilton, was reported in good condition today in Highland General Hospital where she was taken with head injuries received in a two-car collision at 17th St. and Russell shortly before 3:30 p.m. yesterday.

According to police, cars driven by Mrs. Knox and Mrs. Louis Teel, 1801 Grape, were in collision at the intersection. Mrs. Teel was driving west on 17th St. and Mrs. Knox south on Russell when the accident happened.

Police said Mrs. Teel was given a ticket for failure to yield the right-of-way.

Baptists Are Told Christian Ethics Must Be 'Lived'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Herschel H. Hobbs of Oklahoma City, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, will address some 2,000 fellow pastors today in the second session of the church's four-day meeting here.

C. E. Autrey of Dallas, Tex., evangelism director for the church, urged the pastors at Tuesday's opening session to face up to racial issues and follow the example of Christ, rather than be "curbed and guided by the cruel convictions of men."

"We must do something about our Christian ethics," Autrey said. "We cannot ignore the race issue. If there was ever a time when Southern Baptists need to live the Gospel they preach to make it effective, it is right now."

Charles A. Trentham, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Knoxville, Tenn., said the church is fragmented because Christians have forgotten that the church belongs to Christ.

"We have forgotten that the heart of Christianity is a person, not an institution," he said. "Christ builds the institutional life of the church only as we follow him."

Trentham said that if Baptists spend less time in committee meetings debating ecclesiastical structures and organizational procedures and more time close to the people, the world could feel again "the great compassionate heartbeat of Christ."

Autrey warned that unless there is a worldwide spiritual revival in this generation, the world's population will outstrip the growth of Christianity and produce a pagan world by the year 2000.

He also warned that Christians must be more dedicated in their fight against communism.

East German Cop Defects To The West

BERLIN (UPI)—An East German policeman defected to the West before dawn today just a few hours after his fellow border guards shot and killed a refugee trying to escape across the East-West Berlin frontier.

The 20-year-old Communist guard appeared suddenly out of the darkness on the West Berlin side of the wall and asked for asylum. He was in full uniform and carried his weapon.

West Berlin police said they did not see him slip over the wall that divides the city. Details of his escape were not made public.

Tuesday night two Communist guards shot an unidentified man as he attempted to swim the Spree River to the West Berlin bank.

His body was recovered by East Berlin frogmen after a 2½ hour search. At least two of the Communist bullets landed in West Berlin territory, behind the old Reichstag building, but West Berlin police were too far away to help the man and did not shoot back.

During the night a man, woman and child climbed over the wall into East Berlin in a reverse flight that puzzled police. They were helped down by two Communist guards and were driven away in a truck.

Billfold Stolen While Man Sleeps

Cecil Barnett of Miami, a harvest hand, reported to police that he fell asleep in his automobile parked in front of a Pampa night spot Tuesday night and was robbed of his billfold containing $35 and a gold watch worth $50. Barnett said the billfold also contained his driver's license and title to his automobile.

City Manager Will Attend Convention

City Manager Harold Schmitzer of Pampa will attend the annual spring meeting of the Texas City Managers' Association June 10-12 in Abilene.

Schmitzer will be one of some 300 city managers expected to register in Abilene for the study of management methods and problems.

Twenty-four former presidents of the Texas City Managers' Association will be honored at the Monday session, according to W. E. Routh, city manager of Odessa and current TCMA president.

In a special ceremony programmed as part of the meeting, each living ex-president who has served the association during its 28-year history will receive a hand-decorated scroll "in recognition of distinguished service to the management profession and outstanding leadership."

Subject matter on the 3-day program includes the manager and political interpretation, role of the press in promoting sound and effective local government, visual aids as a management tool, training and personnel development, the manager as a resource of the community, evolution of the management profession, relationship of the city council and manager, and the manager's role in selling good government.

In addition, two round-table sessions for managers of cities above and below 25,000 population will delve into problems peculiar to the governmental operations in each category.

Each year TCMA meets in late spring for technical sessions and again in the fall in conjunction with the annual conference of the Texas Municipal League. TML's annual conference, which assembles more than 2,000 city officials and other delegates, is scheduled this year in Fort Worth, October 7-9.

The TCMA spring program next week includes two officers and a staff member of the International City Managers' Association. City Manager Elder Gunter of Des Moines, Iowa, president of ICMA, will speak at the annual banquet and participate on a panel, and City Manager Sam Vickers of Phoenix, Arizona, immediate past president of ICMA, will serve as a panel member. ICMA Assistant Director Robert L. Brown, Chicago, will host a breakfast for new managers in addition to describing his association's services to the conference—at large.

Other program participants at the spring meeting will include Ed N. Wishcamper, managing editor of the Abilene Reporter-News; Dr. James H. McCrocklin, mayor of Kingsville and immediate past president of the Texas Municipal League; Steve Matthews, former Pampa city manager, and now executive director of the Texas Municipal League; Austin; William A. Olson, TML general counsel; Austin; W. D. Rites Held For Relative Of Pampan

Funeral services for Ennis L. Grimes, 65, Quanah, brother-in-law to Mrs. Eben E. Warner Jr., 1221 Christine, were held yesterday in the First Methodist Church of Chillicothe.

Mr. Grimes, who was president of the Quanah National Bank since 1948, died Sunday in the Quanah Memorial Hospital.

Other survivors include his wife, Mrs. Wood Tabnor Grimes, of the home; a stepmother, Mrs. T. L. Grimes, Merkel; a sister, Mrs. Richard Minsell, Arlington; two brothers, Emmett, of Austin, and Luther, who resides in Georgetown.

ita to Amarillo; but beyond that we don't know where he was going."

The 58-year-old pilot was flying a Culver Cadet Model LCA and was due in Amarillo at 2:15. He was supposed to have had enough fuel to last until 3 p.m., but apparently had exhausted his supply fighting strong head winds, FAA authorities said.

The light plane crashed near FM Road 293 in a pasture belonging to John Nunn, Carson County Sheriff.

The Poston Funeral Home ambulance of Panhandle took Wetzel to St. Anthony's, where he was reported in critical condition this morning.

Burglary, Theft Investigated Here

Police today were investigating a burglary last night at the S & J Grocery, 600 E. Frederic.

Entrance was gained by prying open a skylight and dropping through a hole in the ceiling. Police said an undetermined amount of cash and some cigarettes were stolen.

Mrs. June Griffith, 1001 N. Sumner, reported thieves entered her home and stole a purse containing a passport, driver's license and $3 or $4 in cash. Mrs. Griffith told police the house had been left unlocked.

Rites Are Pending For Ernest Fulton

McLEAN (Spl) — Rites are pending for Ernest Earl Fulton, 56, retired farmer and cowboy, who died unexpectedly in the downtown area of McLean at 10 a.m. yesterday.

Survivors are his father, Warner Fulton of Lefors; four brothers, Earl of Lefors, E. C. of Pampa, Lloyd of Topeka, Kan., Monroe of Warner, Okla.; three sisters, Mrs. Joe Walker of McLean, Mrs. Eva Cobb of Sirocix, Mo., Mrs. Cloetta Easterland of Rogers, Ark.

Survices will be announced later by Lamb Funeral Home.

Man Is Fined On Charge Of DWI

Anthony W. Simmons, Oklahoma City, Okla., was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to three days in jail yesterday afternoon when he pleaded guilty in County Court on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Simmons was arrested Monday by State Highway Patrol officers.

Convention

A second night of entertainment is slated Friday featuring a dinner and dance, all held in the Starlight Room.

Saturday, the UCT Ladies Auxiliary will take part in a "Treasure Hunt" to be put on by local businessmen for their enjoyment and will also take a "sight seeing tour" of Pampa and the immediate area.

Adjournment of the convention is scheduled for noon Saturday.

Irregularities In Voting To Be Probed

EDINBURG, Tex. (UPI)—The Hidalgo County Democratic Executive Committee voted unanimously Tuesday to ask a grand jury to investigate alleged absentee balloting irregularities in last Saturday's runoff election.

The grand jury is expected to be called into session at Edinburg later this month.

Gary Gurwitz, McAllen attorney, challenged some 40 absentee votes at the official canvass of ballots in Edinburg Tuesday. Gurwitz was an election supervisor for John Connally in the absentee vote county.

The majority of the challenges involved voters in the La Joya precinct who had cast absentee ballots after swearing they were unable to go to the polls because of sickness or physical disability.

In each case, the required affidavit accompanying the absentee applications had been signed by the same physician, Dr. R. R.

Grand Jury Will Convene Monday

The Gray County 31st Judicial District Grand Jury will convene Monday, June 11, at 10 a.m. in the jury room in the County Court House.

District Judge Lewis M. Goodrich will swear in the new Judge term jury panel at this time.

The jury will be presented several criminal cases and will return its findings to Judge Goodrich.

On Monday, June 18, at 10 a.m., the docket will be called for the Gray County Petit Jury with nine cases scheduled to be presented.

The jury will meet in the District Court Room, County Court House, with Judge Goodrich presiding.

Monday's meeting will begin a new term for the jury.

Casso of McAllen, and the same notary public, Leo J. Leo of La Joya.

Casso and Leo were Hidalgo County campaign managers for Connally's opponent in the race for governor, Don Yarborough, who carried the county.

Lingerie for the 1961 bridal trousseau was never more beautiful. And the upkeep is a breeze. Nylon makes the fashions shown here completely practical. Short gown and matching bedjacket (left) have lavish trim of nylon lace. Regal bedroom coat and gown (center) are for the bride who prefers an elegant simplicity. Young brides favor the gown in the short length (right). This one has camisole top with vertical rows of nylon lace.

Take It From Kathy

by Kathy Peterson

Dear Kathy: Just about every one goes to the school dances every week. When I go, I haven't the courage to ask a girl to dance. In junior high, we took lessons but I was never very good and we didn't learn things like the twist. I can't take lessons now and another boy can't teach you so I'm stuck. How can a boy learn—Don B.

Dear Don: At the next dance, stand on the sidelines and count the number of girls who are looking wistfully towards the stage line. They have come to dance, not to watch. Almost any one would be glad to be your partner even though it meant risking a few bruised toes. Wait for something slow and easy, gather your courage and ask! Even Fred Astaire had to start somewhere. You'll never improve unless you try.

Watch the poor dancers rather than the good ones at the next party. You'll realize that many of the boys have more courage than know-how, but they're learning and enjoying it.

Don't choose a girl who is asked to dance almost every time. She might have been wishing that the most popular boy in the school would approach her for that number and resent it if you have beaten him to it.

There are lots of attractive girls who don't dance very often. too many boys just like you have trouble gathering their courage. Look for a girl who is naturally light on her feet and graceful. She can make the worst dancer feel like a pro.

Of course, the ideal situation would be to get coaching privately from your mother, sister, aunt or one of the girls in your class. There is no substitute for a real partner and practice sessions. Isn't there someone who would volunteer?

Teen-agers: Please send your personal problems to Kathy Peterson in care of this paper. While she cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in this column.

Art-Civic Club Has Annual Fete

LEFORS (Sp) — Social committee members of the Art and Civic Club, surprised 20 club members with a "come as you are" breakfast at 5:30 a.m. recently in the Civic Center.

Ellen Geisler, Lea Swann and Pauline Gustine, social committee members, prepared breakfast for the annual "come as you are" meeting.

During the business meeting, the club accepted the resignation of Mrs. Paul Walden who is moving to Michigan for a year while her husband attends the university.

Instead of having bake sales to raise money for the summer recreation fund, the club voted to donate money. Donations must be turned in to the new treasurer, Mrs. Joe Watson, by August 1.

Mrs. Ray Chastain, outgoing treasurer, presented the budget for next year.

Members present were Mmes. C. H. Gustin, Jerry Jacobs, Harry Garrison, Dunny Goode, Earl Atkinson, Alex Swann, Charles Roberts, G. N. Mougner, Carl Hall, L. R. Spence, Keith Geisler, Paul Walden, Lee Airington, R. H. Barron, Bud Cumberland, Ray Chastain, Misses Beryl Hixson, Mickey Johnson, Norma Lantz and Edith Watson.

No matter how poor you rate a performer don't talk or in any way disturb those trying to hear.

Despite Full Schedule Beauties Budget Time

By ALICIA HART

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Do you find that more and more frequently you're rushing off to beauty, one involving time, not to work in the morning feeling and looking disorganized? Then what you need is a budget for money.

Too many breathless "good mornings" from a disheveled looking lass may very well keep her from making progress in her job.

No one will argue that a working girl leads a busy life. But if she makes beauty a habit, she can look well groomed every day and not just on "occasions."

Establish a daily and weekly schedule, with a special time for each step. The daily essentials should include hair and complexion care, spotless cleanliness and make-up. The weekly program should include shampoo, manicure, pedicure and leg grooming.

Mornings are usually hectic. So commence your daily beauty campaign the night before with a thorough face cleansing and a warm bath. If your skin is dry, use bath oil. Before you go to bed smooth on body lotion and overnight lubrication for your face.

When you get up in the morning, brush your hair and reset any loose ends, finishing with a light touch of hair spray. Next, wash your face, brush your teeth, apply deodorant, make-up and dress. By this time, your hair will be set.

Take advantage of the latest timesaving devices in cosmetics. You might try a combination foundation and powder, easy-to-use powdered eye shadow and automatic mascara. These products can actually reduce to about five minutes the time you spend on applying make-up.

To save valuable minutes in your weekly schedule, shampoo your hair under the shower and dry it with an electric dryer. While it's drying, you can tweeze your eyebrows.

When you shave your legs, apply plenty of lather. The job will be faster and more efficient. Then combine your manicure and pedicure by doing your fingernails while you soak your feet in warm suds to soften the cuticles.

As you go along with your daily and weekly beauty routines, you'll find that you can pare down the time consumed as you become accustomed to your schedule. And soon you'll look your best every day, without conscious effort on your part.

'Belt Making' Forms Program For Worthwhile Home Demonstration

Mrs. Roy Tinsley, president of the Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club, explained the uses and construction of belts during the club's business meeting Friday in Mrs. N. L. Welton's home, east of city.

Speaking on "Belt Making," Mrs. Tinsley said, "if the belt is the correct type for your figure proportions, it will add a professional touch to a costume."

"A narrow belt tends to diminish the waistline, while a wide one increases it. For the stout and short, a narrow belt of self material is becoming," she said.

"To hold their shape, belts should be interfaced with permanent-finish bucking. If cotton, it should be preshrunk."

The club welcomed Mrs. G. D. Holmes as a new member and Mrs. Odie Skinner, a former member.

Members adopted the recommendations of the council, yearbook, reporters and family life committee. Mrs. Dewey Lunsford submitted the council report. Members will meet June 15

PWA Is Hostess At Senior Center

Presbyterian Women's Association was hostess at Senior Center on Thursday afternoon.

Representing the group as hostesses were Mmes. Homer Johnson, Lewis McCoy, H. C. Federer, R. H. Nensiel, J. C. Patillo, Warren Hasse, Gene Bill, Clyde Fatheree, L. F. Batson, John Nutting, C. F. Hills, Will F. Graham, Warren Beale, and E. L. Biggerstaff.

Door prizes were won by C. L. Adams, Nettie Cornelison, Lena Dresbach.

An afternoon of table games and visiting comprised the afternoon's entertainment, which was followed by a refreshment period during which cake, ice cream, candy and coffee were served.

Providing transportation of guests to and from the center were Red Cross Gray Ladies, Mmes. Jess Beard, Stanley Brandt, K. A. Sorenson and Jack Dunn.

Altresses assisting with hostess duties were Mmes. Louise Sewell, Lorene Locke, Thelma Bray and Jay Flanagan.

Mrs. Sewell, Senior Center chairman, announced that this Thursday all birthdays of Senior Citizens, occurring during the month of June, will be honored at a birthday party. All Seniors having birthdays during this month are cordially invited to attend.

Dear Abby.... Husband Might... Just See "Red"

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend named Dora. Her husband is a "wife-chaser." Red doesn't care what he chases as long as she's married. He says it is dangerous for a married man to run around with single girls. One of them might take him seriously. When a married woman takes up with a married man, she knows it's all in fun.

Dora is a very quiet, religious type and has never caught onto Red's chasing. Should we tell her? Or should we let her find out for herself? The wife is always the last to know. She might be able to straighten him out before some woman's husband shoots him. He is now chasing me.

DORA'S FRIEND
DEAR FRIEND: I don't believe that when a man "chases" his wife is always the last to know. (She may be the last to admit it.) Since Red is chasing YOU, why don't you straighten him out before your husband sees Red?

DEAR ABBY: Our son is 14 and very big for his age. We aren't the kind of people who talk openly about every subject in the world, if you know what I mean. Lately our son has been asking me a lot of questions about life and so forth. I tell him to ask his father, but his father tells him to ask me. Whose job do you think this is?

MRS. J.
DEAR MRS. J.: It's Father's job. But one of you had better hurry up and tell the boy what he wants to know or it will be like giving a fish a bath!

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle an argument on a point of etiquette? I once read that it was acceptable for a woman to sit and embroider or knit while with friends. Recently I wanted to take my knitting along when we went to call on some friends and my husband told me to leave it home as it might be considered rude. I've seen women knitting and embroidering at all kinds of social gatherings and I never gave it a second thought. I'd like your opinion.

LIKES TO KNIT
DEAR LIKES: There is nothing "rude" about knitting or embroidering while conversing with friends. (If there is any "needing" done, at least it's done in the open.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO WALTER A.: You're not sick, you're just in love.

How's the world treating you? For a personal unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to ABBY, care of this paper.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send 50 cents to ABBY, Box 3385, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Annual Trek Home...

What Kills The Joy

What do parents owe their grown children who year after year spend their weeks of vacation "going home" to visit?

The following letter may give parents the answer to that question. (Letters that say pretty much the same thing come to this column year after year — so this is not an unusual situation.)

"The time is almost here again when my husband and I will be off on our annual trip to visit first my parents and then his. We do this every year because our parents expect it — and we do want to see them.

"But both sets of parents do one thing that takes most of the pleasure out of our visits to them. They insist (and I do mean insist) on our chasing around day after day calling on their friends.

"And they say to everyone they know: 'Do come by when the children are here,' so our time is mostly spent paying calls and entertaining callers.

"I am sure most of these friends of our parents are no more interested in a visit with us than we are in a visit with them. On both sides it is a matter of trying desperately to find something to talk about.

"What we would like, of course, is to be able to visit our parents without having to visit with everybody in both of their towns.

"When we have tried to broach the subject our parents act hurt. Can't you, through your column, let parents know this is a real problem to their children? Many of our friends complain that the same thing happens to them when they go home. Some have even stopped going home every year for this very reason."

That letter ought to give the picture to parents who may never have seen it from the point of view of their children.

There's a simple solution — if parents will just accept it. Make no plans for the young couple who are visiting. Tell no one they are coming. And then they can decide what they want to do. After all, it's their vacation.

Vacation Spots Are Theme For Party

WHITE DEER (Sp) — Ricky Lee and Roger Simons were hosts to the seventh grade class — a "vacation party" in the Fellowship Hall of the First Methodist Church.

Guests, registered at a desk covered with vacation folders from various parts of the world, designated the place they would most like to vacation. Miss Barbara Powers was awarded a prize for naming the winning vacation spot.

The serving table was centered with a world globe encircled with modes of transportation such as car, boat, truck, plane and bus.

NEW WAY TO BE SUDDENLY SLIM

Are you a woman whose figure is on the good side but might look perfect? You'll be thrilled by the new way to become suddenly slim. If you're more than 15 pounds overweight, then this idea is not for you. If your weight problem falls within this range, then you can realize a new, smoother figure today, without diet or exercise.

Suddenly Slim is an all-new kind of 4-oz. girdle constructed of science fibers. A startling innovation is the sheer front panel. This is permanently stiffened by a science process and cannot give or sag. It's surrounded by a slimming action border. A featherstitched panel down each side of this girdle will contour your hips if they are a problem. The girdle itself is of "wonder" Lycra spandex fiber. It feels like nothing on but has such slimming strength it gives your figure everything that's possible with a foundation.

"Suddenly Slim" is the peak achievement of the designer-genius, Olga.

Housing Is Big Problem For Negroes In Hyannis

What will be the fate of the Southern Negroes who have been given one-way bus tickets to a town near President Kennedy's summer home. The situation is approaching a crisis and this dispatch tells about the problems facing the village of Hyannis, Mass.

By HARRY FERGUSON
United Press International

HYANNIS, Mass. (UPI)—The clock is moving relentlessly toward crisis hour for this village some four miles up the road from President Kennedy's summer home. The next week will determine whether Hyannis wins or loses its struggle to take care of the destitute Southern Negroes whom segregationists are sending north on one-way bus tickets.

Housing is the crucial problem. Most of the Negroes now are living in the dormitory of the Cape Cod community college, which opens a summer term in mid-June. They must move out then

Hotel Rooms Victims Of Mistreatment

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI)—What happens to some humans when they check into a hotel room discombobulates the management—and damages the furniture.

An interior designer who has decorated 2,000 hotel rooms throughout the United States and Caribbean claims antics of adult delinquents have led to some changes of thought about furnishing hotel rooms likely to pass the zesty guest test.

Marilynn Motto, of Miami, Fla., said in an interview the abuse ranges from mild to serious.

The mildly delinquent guest, for example, shines his shoes on the bedspread and writes notes on the wall while on the phone.

In the more extensively delinquent category are guests who:

—Use the cushions from an overstuffed chair for a headrest while taking a bath.

—Hang sheets over the windows when they can't figure how to make the draw drapes work.

—Knot or pin the drapes together when they don't completely cover a window.

—Yank too hard on the pulley, making the adjustable lamp over the bed hit the ceiling, breaking the lamp and poking a hole in the plaster.

—Sitting, running and reclining on combination desk-vanity units suspended from the wall loosening them from their moorings.

—Take shower curtains, blankets, pictures from the wall, television sets and lamps.

"We have learned," Mrs. Motto said, "that we can't give the public anything to operate. The lamps on pulleys are out."

"Wall coverings most likely to survive are the washable type—vinyl, for example. And chairs with removable cushions are untouchables when furnishing a new hotel. Ditto for suspended furniture."

"In also, are draw drapes that are simple enough for children to operate."

Institute Will Have Jonas Salk's Name

By DELOS SMITH
UPI Science Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Jonas E. Salk got overruled. He wanted this new center of science to be called "The Institute for Biological Studies" and it is so called in the preliminary announcements. Instead, its name is going to be, "The Salk Institute for Biological Studies."

It doesn't exist now except as a set of architectural plans, a building site in San Diego, a board of trustees, a director (Dr. Salk), six resident fellows (one of whom is Dr. Salk), and four non-resident fellows. Yet it was dedicated last week and the plan is to "move in" a year hence.

That's the kind of confidence Basil O'Connor has in himself, and his associates have in him. Everything depends upon the public contributing $15 million during the next few weeks to a building fund. No one could believe the confidence is misplaced. He is America's champion fund-raiser.

Through the "March of Dimes" he raised the millions which led to the development of Salk's "killed virus" anti-polio vaccine and to the "live virus" vaccine which is promising to replace it in the next few years. With his National Foundation, he is raising the building fund.

Overruling Dr. Salk were O'Connor; Dr. Warren Weaver, who is chairman of the trustees; Gerard Piel, president of the board; and the business men, lawyers and scientists who are its members.

Their view is that Salk has the breadth, depth, flexibility yet discipline of mind to lead a different kind of scientific assault on the basic secrets of life which biology longs to expose. There must be no question that he is the leader, they held. Salk is self-conscious about a full-fledged institute bearing his name but he had to give in.

Since biology is the science of life, biological studies are going on in every university in the world, in countless laboratories, public and private, and are the preoccupations of many scores of thousands of scientists.

But at the Salk Institute a scientific atmosphere will prevail which exists nowhere else. In the words of Weaver, in an organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, it will be "an atmosphere of unparalleled freedom and flexibility, within which the controls will rest with the scholar-scientists."

They will have no worry about personal security because they will be appointed for life with no strings attached. They will be independent of any need to undertake specific projects in order to get grants of tax or charitable funds because they will be endowed. And they won't be burdened by administrative duties nor handicapped by a frozen departmental set-up.

Weaver, who is a former president of the association and one of America's best known men of science, expects great things to come from biological studies in the next 50 years. He expects it to conquer diseases of all kinds but "even more significant," he continued, it will advance "man's inner life of the mind and the spirit."

"At last man will begin to understand his own nature, his place in the total universe of living and non-living matter, his essential oneness with the star, the cell and the atom."

Bulldog Turner Is Joined By Two Football Rivals

NEW YORK (UPI)—Clyde (bulldog) Turner, for eight years an all-pro center, as new coach of the New York Titans was joined today after 22 years with two men from the other side of the football fence.

One is Harry Wismer, owner of the New York team in the American Football League. The other is little Harold (Bud) Leininger, once an assistant trainer of the Los Angeles Rams.

Both of them formerly were rivals. "Back when I came out of Hardin—Simmons," Bulldog remembers, "a man named George A. Richards owned the Detroit Lions and he instructed his coaches to draft me number one in the pro football draft. Wismer was his assistant."

But the Detroit coaches went against Richards' orders and drafted a back named Doyle Nave. Richards was so angry that he fired the coaches and sold the team.

"Meanwhile, George Halas of the Chicago Bears drafted me as his number one choice," Bulldog added. "I never had a kick. I enjoyed playing with the Bears and pro football was good to me."

Leininger will be the trainer for the Titans this season and his selection came about as result of Turner's remorse over the punching of a smaller man.

Their violent meeting occurred during a game between the Bears and the Rams in which there were a number of fist fights on the field. After the game, which the Bears won, the tiny Leininger grabbed the ball and started to make off with it.

"Some big guy on our team knocked him down and took the ball away from him," the massive Turner recalled. "I thought it wasn't quite right."

Turner went straight to the Rams' dressing room where tempers still were blazing. When the Rams saw him there was a general rush in his direction.

"Whoa down a second," Bulldog roared. "I still ain't satisfied with the outcome of all those fights on the field and I'll accommodate any or all of you guys. But I came here for another purpose."

With that, he pushed his way through the scowling Rams and apologized to Leininger for what had happened.

Bulldog ended his playing career in 1955 and then served as an assistant coach of the Bears for five years. After this he retired to his Texas ranch to breed quarter horses and "put it on a sound financial footing."

Early last year, Bulldog came to New York for induction into the Football Hall of Fame. There he met Wismer again.

"I guess the thing that sold him on me was how badly I always wanted to win," said Turner. "I told him how one time when we were winning by a big score they wanted me to make a bad pass from center so we wouldn't kick the point. Footballs cost $18 and we were losing too many by kicking them into the stands. I told them I wouldn't make a bad pass for no reason. That point played honestly was worth more than $18 or any amount of money in the world."

And that, said Turner, is how the Titans are going to play it.

"They're gonna give me everything they've got," he vowed. "And if there's only 11 darned good men, you may see 11 men playing two-way football again. I want guys who want to win."

They don't call him "Bulldog" for nothing.

Two Leaders Are Routed

By United Press International
Indianapolis and Omaha, American Association powerhouses locked in a first-place tie, were routed Tuesday.

Al Cicotte pitched visiting Oklahoma City to a 3-0 shutout of the Indians, while Denver Lemaster hurled four-hit ball to lead Louisville on a 10-3 romp over the hosting Dodgers.

Cicotte, who gave up four hits, struck out seven batters and walked five, handed Indianapolis its third loss in the last four games. The 88ers got two runs in the fourth inning and one in the seventh in handling Indian pitcher Frank Kreuter's loss.

Lemaster lost a shutout in the eighth when the Dodgers put together a single, walk, triple and error for all three of their runs. The Colonels had 14 hits including homers by Jim Bolger, Jim Mahoney and Ellis Burton. Mikris smashed four hits in five times at the plate, two of them doubles. Dick Scarbrough took the loss.

In the night's other action, the Dallas-Fort Worth Rangers shut out the Denver Bears, 3-0, behind the hurling of winner Ed Thomas. The visitors collected two runs on a single and back-to-back doubles in the third inning and the final tally in the sixth. Losing Pitcher was Al Pehank.

The shutout was the first suffered by Denver this season. Thomas, a converted infielder, allowed seven hits and struck out nine. Wayne Graham had three hits in five trips for the winners, including two doubles.

The schedule for tonight had Dallas-Fort Worth at Denver for a doubleheader, Louisville at Omaha and Oklahoma City at Indianapolis.

Olympic Committee Making Decisions

MOSCOW (UPI)—With the "political" phase of the International Olympic Committee's annual meeting practically disposed of, members get down today to more pertinent questions closer related to sports.

Tuesday the committee, called socialist bloc nations' fears by confirming that a unified German team will represent that divided nation in the 1964 games at Austria and Japan, took steps to promote entry of a joint team from North and South Korea; and rejected a Soviet effort to expand the committee membership on a national basis.

The case of Germany, which has fielded a joint team from East and West Germany in the last four Olympics, was settled once and for all when IOC President Avery Brundage of Chicago assured the membership that "there will be a united East German-West German team, period."

The German question received top priority after East German athletes failed to get visas to attend the international ski championships at Chamonix, France, and the international ice hockey championships at Colorado Springs, Colo., last winter.

The Korean question also was laden with politics. According to IOC Chancellor Otto Mayer, Tuesday's session voted to extend provisional recognition to a North Korean Olympic Committee, thus giving North Korea the right to enter the 1964 games.

It was felt that the move was designed to put pressure on the South Korean committee to agree to field a joint team with the North. The South Korean committee rejected such a move in the past on the grounds the two divided sections of the country technically were still at war.

The Soviet Union's bid to expand the IOC to include greater geographical representation and a companion move to promote athletics in emerging areas, particularly Africa, both were turned down.

Mayer said the first idea was rejected because "then we would have 200 persons at our meetings." He indicated that such expansion would curtail the efficiency of the committee. The present committee is made up of 67 members without specific national affiliation.

Only four members voted for the Soviet proposal, which Brundage said would have "thrown the Olympic movement open to politics."

The second Soviet proposal was turned down on the ground that UNESCO already is active in the field of promoting athletics in emerging areas and that the Tokyo Olympic Committee is organizing for such a conference at Manila next December.

Ycaza Wins Westchester Stakes On Board Kicapu Kid Entry

By United Press International
"Many Ycaza's plane trip to the west coast proved to be profitable Tuesday when he scored on Kicapu Kid in the $18,125 Westchester Stakes for 2-year-old colts and geldings at Hollywood Park.

Ycaza, who rides Crimson Satan in Saturday's rich Belmont Stakes, had an easy ride aboard the colt, who defeated Indian Classic by almost four lengths. Kicapu Kid paid $3.40 for $2 and was clocked in :57-2/5 for the five furlong sprint, leading all the way.

Roy Yaka rode three winners on the program, clicking on Little Sal ($21.00) in the second; Moody ($11.00) in the fourth and Social Event ($6.20) in the sixth.

At Balmot Park, apprentice jockey Terry Bove booted home both ends of the $147,300 daily double. He won on Du De Thor ($16.30) and Mei Ting ($17.70).

Mah Moola, with Don Pierce up, rallied in the stretch to defeat Pixie Erin, the leader most of the way, by a neck. Mah Moola returned $17.90 and was timed in 1:30 2/5 for the six furlong event, contested by a field of seven 3-year-old fillies and mares.

Calumet Farm's Sunny Chile won the Monmouth Park feature, outlasting Jumbo by 1½ lengths. Steve Brooks rode the 3-year-old filly to a $5.90 payoff.

Basswood paid $20.00 after Russ Connelley piloted the 4-year-old Son of Bossuet to victory in the Suffolk Downs feature. Iron Band was second and Call My third.

Herbie Hinojosa guided Renade ($22.80) home first in the Washington Park feature, beating Intercepted and Leluck.

Hickey Is Winner Of Guymor Meet

"Max Hickey of Pampa won the championship flight in the Guymor Open golf tournament in Guymor, Okla. last week with a 27-hole total of 105.

Hickey fired a 36-35-34 to win the one day tourney.

L. T. Garren fired an 18-hole total of 71 to win the A Flight title. Garren's 71, one under par, set a new course record.

Sifford Is Best Of US Open Qualifiers

NEW YORK (UPI)—Cigar-smoking Charlie Sifford, five-time national Negro champion, wound up as the best shooter among the nation's 131 qualifiers for the U.S. Open golf championship with a 66-70-136.

The 39-year-old native of Charlotte, N.C., now playing out of Los Angeles, put together his four-under-par 36-hole total at the Ravinia Country Club to lead nine players at Chicago who qualified for the tourney proper, which gets under way at Oakmont, Pa., next Thursday.

Sifford's 136 was a stroke better than four others among 497 competitors in the final qualifying rounds at 13 sites on Monday and Tuesday, which whittled an original entry field of 2,502 to 131 plus 19 exempt players for the Open.

The 19 who were exempt from all qualifying included the last five to win the Open, headed by defending champion Gene Littler, Masters champion Arnold Palmer, Bill Casper Jr., Tommy Bolt and Dick Mayer.

Former United States and British amateur champion Deane Beaman of Silver Springs, Md., shot a 69-68-137 at the Manor Country Club in Washington, D.C., the same site where Dick Wietzke of Pikesville, Md., carded a 72-65-137, while veteran pro Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N.Y., paced a tough field qualifying at the Montclair Country Club in Montclair, N.J., with a 70-67-137.

On Monday, little Fred (Butch) Baird of Galveston, Tex., playing only his third year on the pro circuit, fired a 68-69-137 to pace shooters from six sites.

A total of 50 players qualified through the second round on Monday and 81 made the grade at seven sites Tuesday. Included in the field of name players who passed the test Tuesday was perennial Sam Snead, four-time runner-up in the Open, back for still another crack at his first title.

Slammin' Sam shot a 71-70-141 at Montclair, where 22 players in all earned starting berths.

Missing out were former Open champions Lew Worsham (1947), Sam Parks Jr. (1935) and Jack Fleck (1955); former PGA champions Jim Turnesa and Jim Ferrier; Bob Toski, Chick Harbert, Dick Stanahan, Dutch Harrison, Don Fairfield, Mike Fitchick, Al Besselink, veteran Ryder Cupper Ted Kroll and famed amateur Harvie Ward.

Musial Smashes 450th Homer To Set Record

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer
Stan Musial has reached another milestone—and typically the event meant more to his St. Louis Cardinals teammates than to the great slugger.

The occasion was the 450th homer of Stan's career—a total reached by only five other major leaguers—but its chief value lay in the fact that it finally broke the Cardinals' eight-game plunge out of National League pennant contention.

The homer came in the 11th inning of Tuesday night's game with the Cincinnati Reds and lifted the Cardinals to a 10-9 victory, after they had trailed by eight runs going into the bottom of the sixth inning. Musial had contributed two other hits to the Cardinals' attack but it remained for him to connect for the payoff blow against reliever Dave Sisler. In what may be his final season, the 41-year-old Musial now is hitting .317 with six homes and 24 runs batted in. He looks headed for his best season since 1958 when he last batted more than .300.

The San Francisco Giants welcomed the Chicago Cubs, 11-4; the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-2, and led 7-3, when the second game of the two-night doubleheader was suspended after eight innings, and the Houston Colts defeated the Milwaukee Braves, 7-1, in other NL action.

In the American League, the Baltimore Orioles scored a 6-5 victory over the Washington Senators; the Kansas City Athletics edged the Minnesota Twins, 4-3, and the Chicago White Sox topped the Los Angeles Angels, 9-5.

Bob Purkey, seeking to become the majors' first 10-game winner of the season, carried a 9-1 lead into the sixth inning only to have the roof fall in. The Cardinals roughed him up for three runs in the sixth and then added five more in the seventh with the key blows a three-run homer by Bill White and a two-run homer by Ken Boyer.

Lindy McDaniel, sixth St. Louis pitcher and the only one to go more than 2 2/3 innings, shut out the Red for the last four innings to pick up his second victory while Sisler suffered his second defeat.

Billy O'Dell pitched a five-inning and struck out 10 for the Giants, who scored their 12th victory in 13 games. Orlando Cepeda's two-run single in the third inning and a homer by Felipe Alou were the big blows for the "Giants. Bob Buhl, tagged for seven runs and nine hits in seven innings, suffered his fourth loss.

A homer and double by Willie Davis and Larry Sherry's strong relief in support of Stan Williams enabled the Dodgers to top the Pirates in their opener. Don Drysdale's eight-hit pitching and four hits by Jim Gilliam helped the Dodgers to their second-game lead when the league rule that no inning can be started after 12:50 a.m. local time caused the suspension. The game will be completed before tonight's scheduled night game.

Bob Bruce pitched a seven-inning and struck out 10 in his first complete game in the majors as the Colts moved to within a game and a half of the sixth-place Braves. Al Spangler, Norm Larker, Carl Warwick and Bob Lillis had two hits each in the Colts' 13-hit attack.

Pinch hitter Whitey Herzog's seventh-inning homer with a man aboard was the decisive blow for the Orioles, whose second game with the Senators was rained out. Billy Hoelt, who retired the only batter he faced, picked up the win although Wes Cotten and Hoyt Wilhelm followed him to the mound. Ken Retzer hit two homers and Chuck Hinton one for the Senators.

Norm Siebern's two-run fifth-inning homer and the four-hit pitching of John Wyatt, Diego Segal and Gordon Jones enabled the Athletics to drop the Twins into fourth place. Camilo Pascual yielded all four Kansas City runs to suffer his third loss against seven wins while Wyatt gained his fourth victory.

Charlie Smith's third single of the game drove in two runs and sparked a four-run ninth-inning rally that gave the White Sox' Dom Zanni his third win. Bo Belinsky was chased by the White Sox after 2 2/3 innings but reliever Ryne Duren was tagged with the loss. Leon Wagner homered for the Angels.

Hockey League Holding Annual Draft Session

MONTREAL (UPI)—National Hockey League owners and managers, their player lists juggled and re-juggled, met today to hold their annual grab-bag draft session.

Only one major trade preceded the draft session in which each of the six National Hockey League clubs pay $20,000 for the privilege of picking up someone else's hockey property. And the gossip was that there weren't too many bargains to be had.

Each club is permitted to protect 18 players and two goaltenders. All others on their reserve list go into the barrel for draft purposes.

Detroit, in desperate need for help, traded a pair of farmhands—forward Len Lund and John McKenzie of Edmonton and Hershey—to the Chicago Black Hawks in exchange for a highly regarded minor league defenseman, hitting Doug Barkley, who counted a Western Hockey League record 25 goals and 48 assists with Calgary last season.

In another minor personnel switch, the Toronto Maple Leafs sent former NHL forward Bill Dineen of Rochester and an unnamed player to the Hull-Ottawa Canadiens of the Eastern Pro League for Bob Armstrong, the balding, onetime Boston Bruin rearguard.

FUTURE AGGIES

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI)—Texas A&M today announced the signing of two high school track stars to pre-enrollment applications.

They are Dan Meadows of Corpus Christi Carroll, a broad jump star, and John Charles Stelek of Brazosport, a shot putter.

Coach Charlie Thomas said best marks for the athletes were a 24 ft. 9 in. broad jump by Meadows and a 56 ft. 8½ in. shot put by Stelek.

PROMOTES TOURNEY

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—The Greater Trenton Junior-Chamber of Commerce said Tuesday a four-team Christmas basketball tournament involving Rider College, St. Francis (Pa.), Iona and the University of Massachusetts will be held at the Rider College Alumni Gym Dec. 27-28.

Television In Review

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—A while back, a writer wired a movie studio, asking: "How old Cary Grant?" The actor heard of the wire, and the following reply was sent: "Old Cary Grant fine. How you?"

Tuesday night, another oldtime star, Dana Andrews, showed up on ABC-TV's "Alcoa Premiere." and he was fine too in a surprisingly beautiful little story about a childless detective and a boy he wants to adopt — the son of a man he has sent to prison.

It was the type of role — that of a tough but gentle detective — that Andrews played memorably years ago in the movie "Laura." And he seemed at home Tuesday night.

The boy's father is a worthless hoodlum. The mother is a young but drunken floozy who wants to get rid of the child. As the show starts, she screams at Andrews after her husband's trial to take the child, who looks on terrified. The youngster is sent to a boys' home.

Andrews, a lonely man whose wife is unable to have the children he wants, feels a closeness to the boy. He visits him at the home. The boy, played well by Billy Mumy, is touchingly confused, with a sad face that shows too much experience for one so young.

Soon the two unlikely pals are going to ball games together and taking rides. Andrews tells his understanding wife (Marilyn Erskine) about the boy, and they arrange to take him home while reaching a decision whether to adopt him.

Andrews, however, is conscience-stricken about the mother. To justify taking away her child, he rehabilitates her, sends her to a sanitarium for a cure, buys her a new dress, has her hair done, pays for her to rest up at a boarding house and gets her a job.

He wants her out of the way — far away. But Billy, despite his happiness, wants his mother, prays for her, lies about the presents she never gave him — and Andrews knows his joy is on borrowed time, ironically because of his own kindness to the reformed woman.

The principals face adult decisions. The mother, whose reformation was convincingly portrayed by Barbara Loden, will do anything Andrews says because he has salvaged her life. And Andrews knows she really wants the boy although he could get her out of the way.

Andrews' gentle, low-key surrender of the boy was in keeping with the compassionate mood of the hour, which made one feel good to be reminded that there are problems which can be solved by simple human instinct and decency rather than analysis.

Genuine warmth, unaffected drama and the uplifting maturity of an honest outcome seemed much more preferable to the pseudo-sophistication and subtle violence of such programs as "Ben Casey" and the generally brittle, artificial approach to human beings in the "Dick Powell Show."

Someone once wrote that one of the functions of a dramatist is to show man he is better than he thinks he is. Jon and Ward Hawkins, writers of the teleplay, did that in a small way Tuesday night.

The Channel Swim: Gertrude Berg, whose CBS-TV show was cancelled, does a Broadway musical next season. Three stars of ABC-TV's "Hawaiian Eye," Troy Donahue, Anthony Eisley and Poncie Ponce, appear at the Atlantic City, N.J., Steel Pier July 14 and 15.

Mexico Eyes Exports Of Honey

By T. M. FAGRELL
MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Exploitation of the country's natural assets could boost Mexico from fourth place to first in the little-known but multi-million dollar honey export business.

Honey exports bring dollars needed for the country's balance of payments status.

Although the U. S. currently is the world's leading honey producer with some 260 million pounds annually, it imports almost a third of the yearly Mexican crop, according to a report in the monthly Mexican American Review here.

The Soviet Union is the world's second largest honey producer but it's all eaten at home, the report said, while China has attempted to export the honeybee's product but with poor results because of low quality.

Argentina is the third largest producer, before Mexico's 50 million annual pounds, produced mostly by commercial methods compared with backyard production which accounts for about half the U. S. output, the magazine said.

Germany is Mexico's biggest single honey market, taking more than 46 per cent of yearly output. Other apparently satisfied consumers at the moment are England and Switzerland.

Abundant areas of warm climate terrain with long flower blossoming seasons provide average yield of up to 300 pounds per hive in choice locations, compared with about 40 pounds in the U. S., the report said.

Bees were brought to Mexico from Spain in the 16th Century but there was no real commercial beekeeping until two European immigrant partners started a small honey business in 1944, which last year grossed almost $2 million.

This particular Cuernavaca-based operation now produces the so-called royal jelly used for cosmetic and medicinal purposes, sculptured beeswax candles, a supply business for smaller beekeepers who sell to this company, as well as honey in its comb and pure honey.

Trucks busily back into each of six levels on a hillside plant at Cuernavaca, a popular resort community about 45 miles from here.

Wall Street In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) —Harris, Upham & Co. says that if there is anything to be learned from a study of the performance of the market following emotional, heavy volume days like last Monday and Tuesday, it would expect a very sharp rally but would not trust it too far at first.

A return to the established downtrend is usually sufficient for a 1-3 1/2% or preceding losses.

Reynolds & Co. says their best guess is that last week's low will mark the bottom for at least the next several weeks, even though the underlying trends that may have led to the March-May decline have yet to be explained, much less corrected.

According to Spear and Staff, Inc., clients may be tempted unwisely, to jump into the market and buy heavily. In their opinion this would not be the best approach at this time. Instead, they recommend that a policy of caution be continued until the market has had time to stabilize.

Joseph E. Granville of E. F. Hutton & Co. says with November elections coming up five months from now, the implications of a better market between now and then might generate strong psychological support. It is believed, Granville states, that the administration will do as much as possible to improve its image and restore confidence in the market.

BANGKOK, Thailand — Matt Kerbec is a big, friendly man who has been sweating it out in Bangkok for the last three months.

Kerbec, an electrical engineer from Trenton, N. J., is representative of a new breed of American one-meets all over the world these days.

An American aid dollars spread through under-developed countries, these tanned, muscular men are as at home at Rabat or Thailand as in New Jersey.

They follow closely behind to help install new roads, and bridges, purify water, build dams for electric power and irrigation and communications systems.

Kerbec, 42, has been in this business since he graduated from Rutgers under the G. I. Bill in 1951. He has mounted unfamiliar skis to climb a mountain-top in Norway to inspect a microwave station, seen a king's kitchen installed in Morocco and is on hand here awaiting the start of a vital new communications system between Bangkok and Saigon.

This piece is written in the belief that in a world of cross currents and astronomical budgets, too little credit is given these Americans who work with their hands at the grass roots level among people who will form their own concept of the American image and whether the democratic way of life is worthwhile.

They sell the United States to people where diplomats cannot reach.

I asked Kerbec if he had any rule for getting along with people of strange lands.

I thought the answer might give him some trouble, but it came quickly.

"The golden rule," he said, "is to treat them the way I like to be treated."

The United States will have spent more than $300 million in Thailand at the end of this year and both Thai and American representatives believe the results will be good. This is partly the result of men like Kerbec.

On the personal side was a new type of "American, go home" letter received by American advisors who asked not to be identified.

The letter, from a Thai school teacher, paid tribute to American aid, "the love of freedom must be very strong in Americans to have you do this for us" and concluded:

"Go back home to America with a good idea of our people. Tell them we like Americans, too. And it is true, sir, partly because of you."

Early Iron

In the Middle Ages, iron was made in furnaces of relatively small size, in which pure ore was reduced to a pasty mass by means of charcoal, and the product subsequently was hammered to get rid of impurities.

Today we're going to talk about the man who can and does create a favorable impression the instant he walks into an office or room and the man who just "walks in," both men having spent the same amount of money for their wardrobe.

The man who instantly creates a favorable impression is either gifted with good taste, or he has taken time to learn how to dress well. The other fellow just puts on the first thing that's convenient to his reach. Some men resent that implication that they haven't good taste in clothes, though I don't know why; good taste in dressing is a kind of talent like playing good golf — some people just play at it while others excel at it. The ability to play a good game of golf can be acquired if you work at it, and so can the ability to dress well.

Take a little more time in selecting your suit, shirt, and tie. Keep your colors coordinated — like blue with blue and tan with tan or brown — don't mix them unless you really know how to do it.

Keep your clothes clean and well pressed. Let your appearance work for you, not against you.

We here at Heath's will be very happy to help you make the right selection for your wardrobe, and we'll even do the coordinating for you if you want us to.

AN INDEPENDENT FREEDOM NEWSPAPER

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by any government, with the right of freedom, and that it is every man's duty to God to preserve his own liberty and respect the liberty of others. Freedom is self-control, or more, no less.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guides expressed in the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to do the same. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities in harmony with the above moral principles.

Can We Trust Government

Some people still believe you can trust the government.

Let's take a good look at it and see if we can.

Historians tell us that the one imperative for the preservation of a civilization is a climate of stability. That is, it is mandatory for businessmen, industrialists, producers and traders to know in advance what conditions are going to be like so that they can properly manage their affairs.

It is claimed that this is the basic philosophic reason for government. Most of the things (if not all) government does can be and are being done by private persons or firms outside of government. But it is essential to have this "climate" of stability and only the government can provide it for us.

Next we are told that "ours" is the "best" government in the world. Assuming this to be true, let us examine the record of stability as established by our own government.

Take the matter of public debt. The Congress long ago passed a law which placed a limit on the amount of money the government could borrow. Since 1954 (eight years ago), that debt ceiling has been boosted five times.

In 1955 it was raised to $281 billion; in 1958 it went to $288 billion; in 1960 it jumped to $295 billion; and in 1962 there were two push-ups, one to $298 billion and just the other day it zoomed to $300 billion.

Would you say that such procedures are conducive to a stable climate for money, taxation and regulation? Or would you agree with us that this is unstable?

Again, let's take another item relating to money and debt, the annual budget. In January of 1961 as the Eisenhower regime moved out and the Kennedy regime moved in, the transfer occurred to the tune of an optimistic forecast by Eisenhower that by June of 1962 there would be a surplus in the federal budget of $1.5 billion.

Mr. Kennedy hadn't been in office 100 days before he revised the budget and on March 27 he forecast a $2.8 billion deficit for the 1961-62 fiscal year.

On May 25, 1961, just about 60 days later, Mr. Kennedy made an other revision. This time he estimated a deficit of $3.6 billion. One month and two days later he revised this figure to $3.7 billion.

But it didn't stand long. On July 25, almost a month later, he pushed the budget deficit estimate up to $5.3 billion. On October 29, 1961, he shoved it upward again to $8.9 billion. Then, in his annual budget message this year on January 18, 1962, Mr. Kennedy forecast a deficit by June 30 of $7 billion.

Just what the deficit will actually be by June 30 isn't known. But the point is, can one call this kind of thing stability? Of course, many people who are not informed in fiscal areas are inclined to shrug off this sort of thing with a "So what?" They follow by claiming that their own wages have been going up and, therefore, that they "never had it so good."

There's no question but what annual wages have been going up. Take a typical family of four in the United States. In 1947 the average annual income of such a family was $3,831. Income tax for that year for this family would have been $138.83.

A similar family of four in 1960 would have averaged $5,620 in annual wages. This is a dollar increase of $2,589, or about 58 percent more than was earned in 1947.

However, in the same period income taxes would have increased to $531.60, being a dollar tax increase of almost $400, or 284 percent. And this is only the income tax. Meanwhile, social security taxes have been upped, estate taxes have been upped, and all other taxes, including school, commodity, excise and other taxes have climbed.

The dollar gain in wages has been offset by the hidden taxes in all goods and services, plus the visible increase in income taxes and sales taxes. The family of four in 1960 had no more dollars to spend on REAL goods and services than it had in 1947. In fact, it had less.

Is this the kind of "climate" that establishes and maintains a civilization on the basis of reasonable forecasts of what will happen? Or is this an example of the very lack of stability supposed to occur when government is not a factor?

Fixed Direction

For a very long time, as politics is run in these United States, each incumbent president has made his predecessor look slightly conservative by comparison.

There can be no question but that Herbert Hoover made Calvin Coolidge appear almost mid-victorian. And certainly, when F. D. Roosevelt took over the reins, even some of Hoover's rather startling new ideas took on an aura of respectable old age.

Few thought that anyone would ever spend more money in peace time than Franklin D., but it turned out that Harry Truman won the distinction and moved far enough to the left to make even the four-time winner at the national lotteries appear reactionary.

But when Eisenhower, the first Republican since Hoover to move to 1500 Pennsylvania Avenue, picked up the gavel, instead of a sweeping reversal of policy as so many had anticipated, the same drift to the left continued. Personally, it often seemed that Ike was trying to stem the tide, but whatever his innermost thoughts and convictions may have been, the monstrous government grew more monstrous during his two terms.

And now we have John Kennedy.

Beside him, in any kind of comparison, Eisenhower is away over to the right if we speak of conventionalities and conservatism.

Only recently, Mr. Eisenhower took the occasion of voicing his very real concern over the way things are being handled in the White House by his successor.

At a news conference, the former chief executive had this to say:

"It has long been my judgment that the real threat to liberty in this republic will not come from any sudden calculated onslaught.

"Rather, the threat to our liberties will be primarily found in a steady erosion of self-reliant citizenship and in excessive power concentration resulting from the lodging of more and more decisions in an ever-growing federal bureaucracy.

"To cite only a few of the recent proposals to vest more power in the executive branch: Authority for the President to modify income tax whenever he should so decide; authority for the President to finance, wherever and whenever he pleases, large-scale emergency public works by diversion of funds dedicated to other purposes by the Congress; authority to regiment all agriculture, more sweeping and repressive than any authority ever before sought over any segment of the nation's economy; authority for the federal bureaucracy to take over a whole host of state and local responsibilities, notably including the proposals for a Department of Urban Affairs; authority to dilute the independence of the Federal Reserve Board by presidential appointment of its chairman.

"To be sure, the objectives underlying many such proposals are not in themselves controversial. I do not agree, however, that in every instance more presidential power is needed to achieve this. "I believe that the problem of the presidency is rarely an inadequacy of power. Ordinarily, the

In Many Cases, 'Miracle' Drugs Are Not Miraculous

Are those "miracle drugs" really so miraculous in all instances? The Department of Pediatrics of the University of Rochester (N.Y.) says "no."

The department summarized the results of treatment in 781 children suffering from respiratory illnesses, presumably of virus origin. Each patient was given medication from identical dark-brown bottles. Half of these bottles contained nothing more than a solution of a pain killer similar to aspirin. The remaining bottles contained a "miracle drug" (sulfis, tetracycline, chloramphenicol or penicillin).

Neither the patients nor the attending physician knew the content of the bottle used in any particular case. However, this information was kept immediately at hand in the event that the condition of the patient required the physician to know exactly what was being prescribed.

Since all patients were seen under the usual conditions of private practice, elaborated bacteriologic studies were not made. On the basis of long clinical experience, it was assumed that the illnesses were due to a virus.

Herewith, the results:

The duration of the illness was not influenced by use of antibiotics. The children who received symptomatic treatment (analgesics) were ill on an average of 3.7 days. Those who received specific (antibiotics), 3.5 days. In children whose illness was complicated from the beginning, the duration was 8.1 days (symptomatic) and 7.7 days (specific).

The development of complications (ears, nose, throat, tonsils, eyes) was actually greater (13) in children receiving specific treatment than in those treated symptomatically (8).

And here are the conclusions reached by Drs. Townsend and Radebaugh who conducted the study:

"The intelligent use of penicillin, the peer of antimicrobial drugs, remains one of the most significant advances in modern medical progress, but its indiscriminate use in febrile respiratory illness cannot be justified."

"Pressure from patients, parents, the lay press, which glamorizes miracle drugs, and the detail man, who promotes the products of his pharmaceutical concern, may induce the physician to use antimicrobial drugs when they are not needed. These forces will naturally lead to the overuse of antimicrobial drugs."

"The free use of antimicrobial drugs does not protect the pediatric patient from respiratory illnesses of virus origin; rather, careful counseling, thorough investigation and the offer of adequate follow-up study are more protective."

To which may be added a hearty "amen."

problem is to use the already enormous power of the presidency judiciously, temperately and wisely.

In view of the unprecedented demands for further power and more money on the part of the Kennedy administration, the former president's comments were restrained and certainly in order.

But as we look at the pattern laid down since the days of Herbert Hoover, we are beginning to conjecture as to what kind of a man will follow in Mr. Kennedy's wake, particularly if Mr. Kennedy manages to acquire all the additional potency he seems bound and determined to get.

For one thing is certain, Mr. Kennedy, too, is mortal. And whatever he does for good or for evil will be transient so far as he, himself is concerned.

But the laws that men pass live after them. And the accumulation of power in a given administration, remains to dominate the administration which follows.

On balance, it would appear that even with a truly conservative president, should such an event still be possible, the office would contain such enormous potential as to automatically belie any effort at conservation.

We are, we believe, in the grip of the thing itself. It is not the character of the men who will manage the mechanism that matters so much. It is the enormous, significant fact that no man can now manage the mechanism, regardless of intent. Movement in reverse now appears to be totally unlikely in the foreseeable future.

Pull Up A Chair

Eating is controlled by a small area in one region of the brain, and is called the hypothalamus. There is a satiety center which acts as a brake and tells us when we have had enough to eat. Obey its signals and you'll not have to worry about overweight, if you're normal. . . . Pastime recount: Latest estimates are that amateur theater groups will attract audiences totaling 30 million persons this year. That is more than half again as many admissions as major league baseball will draw in the 1962 season.

About face: The president of a major industrial enterprise recently sought a bright young colleague who was NOT an engineer. He desired one who had majored in history, philosophy or English; one with balanced studies, better-than-average grades, with a reasonable program of sports, social and professional activities or campus projects where in he had to work with people. The Big Idea: To find a young man who could be trained for a company vice-presidency.

Thoughts while shaving. 1. In the entertainment field any dialog or song lyric that is risqué or has a double meaning is called "blue" material. It's because, in the old days, a censor was supposed to use a blue pencil when deleting any objectionable parts of a script. Just why a heavy black pencil wasn't equal to the task, no one seems to know. . . . 2. And in TV and radio circles, one is said to have been given a "pink slip" when he's fired. In other words, any notice of dismissal is supposed to be typed or printed on a pink slip inside an envelope—although we've yet to hear of any TV-radio employee getting such a tinted message. (That certainly isn't the way some of them are fired.) . . . 3. Among big city newspapers we can think of none that have longer names than the Washington (D.C.) Post and Times-Herald, the New York World-Telegram and Sun, and the San Francisco News-Call Bulletin.

Pegler Says:

Phillips Had Troubles Holding Off Billie Sol

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Even while the attorney general of Texas was lurching Billie Sol Estes in the hearings called courts of inquiry, Phillips Petroleum, of Bartlesville, Okla., was fighting back for business which, this harsh and greedy faker had staked out for his own monopoly in Western Texas.

The record shows up Estes as a cruel fellow who could preach a sermon and crush a friend the same day. He set out to dominate three phases of agriculture — chemical fertilizer, grain storage and cotton acreage. He had been heard in numerous pulpits of the Church of Christ, blabbing ungrammatical sermons which one young woman described as appeals for determination and zeal but not for charity and faith in God. She quit that congregation to join another.

A neighbor who had fought him in big deals said Estes donated $10,000 to a religious building fund but later persuaded the trustees to let him have the entire kitty, amounting then to $190,000, promising to invest it and return $300,000 one year later.

"The year won't be up for a couple of months yet," the neighbor said with a hard chuckle, "so of course he might make good."

Phillips Petroleum is a giant and a native of the country. Estes was just a pitchman on a corner. Billie Sol's supplier was Commercial Solvents, based in New York. Apparently Phillips just let him go his idiotic way. But less than a month after the earth shuddered and Billie Sol's hop-joint came down in rubble all over his couch, Phillips ran an ad in the regional papers showing a six-passenger open-cockpit speed boat plowing the sea with cotton bolls flowing away from the row in the foam. The headline said: "Raise a Motor Boat in a Cotton Field? It's Not Fantastic. And here is why—"

Whereas 25 years ago farming was terrible drudgery and the farmer was a serf to the soulless corporation which held his mortgage, in the weird new economic Land of Oz the farmer could rent his "credit" to a promoter to the extent of $50,000. This lunacy was conjured by both Republicans and Democrats. Theorists in Washington, in the cow colleges and chemical laboratories substituted laws and graft as well as plant magic for honesty and work. Lawyers who couldn't use passable grammar became experts in this maze and great magnates of the land and its products, feeding like lice on the leaves.

So, a windshield farmer could increase his profit by drenching his allotment with fertilizer and the taxpayers would buy him a beautiful speedboat as a premium on 70 acres.

"Phillips 66 Ammonia helped one farmer realize an added net profit of $54.32 an acre on his cotton after deducting the cost of ammonia," the ad continued.

"Seventy acres of cotton like this means over $3,800 extra profit—enough to buy a pretty classy bear and motor. Let us help you work out a complete fertilizer program with this 82 per cent nitrogen fertilizer."

"Phone your local Phillips dealer."

How are the moral standards of Pecos? The "society" is intimate and everyone knows more about the neighbors than New Yorkers now. There are four or five blocks of homes near Billie Sol's which cost from $30,000 to $40,000. There are some hellions among the kids, but I can't imagine a paper in any Big City printing a proposal which ran in a Vox Pop of the Pecos Independent signed R. V. Nabers, to flog them instead of treating them as "juvenile delinquents."

Mr. Nabers wrote that only last week the city police recovered three stolen bikes in one day and then:

"One of our former sheriffs told me he had caught a boy several times with stolen stuff, had put him in jail and meted out all the punishment that could be legally done. Finally, he caught him with several hundred dollars worth of stolen goods. So he got him in his car, drove him down to the Pecos River, took a wet rope and whipped him until the blood ran to his heels. He told him if he ever caught him with any more, that whipping would not be a taste to what he would get next time. Took him home and made him return all the stolen articles and the boy grew into a good man, held a responsible position as long as he lived and never did steal again. If our police would stop juvenile crimes faster than a little boy's heart quicker than to come out of school and find his bike gone. A boy's bicycle is his best friend."

Bid For A Smile

An old man was making his first visit to an army post. He watched two sentries passing and, and repeating each other in silence.

After several minutes he stepped up to them as they were passing and said:

Old Man — Come now, boys, why not make up and be friends?

Barrower — One who exchanges hot air for cold cash.

Merchant's Young Son (Looking up from his newspaper) — Papa, it talks here about scientific salesmanship — what does that mean?

Papa — that could be defined many ways, my son, but what it really means is selling a dress suit with all the trimmings to a man who came in for a pair of work gloves.
