'Summit' will center on oil

AUSTIN (AP) — A scheduled April 15 meeting among Gov. Mark White, Oklahoma's George Nigh and other oil-state governors will focus on the impact of falling oil prices on the nation, the governors said.

"We will be discussing the current effects of the oil price decline on producing and non-producing states, on national defense, and on tax reform as it relates to the oil industry," White said Wednesday. "Our discussions will focus on what steps the federal government should take to alleviate the situation."

The governors said the meeting would be near the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

White said in the 12-month period ending in January, Texas lost 32,000 jobs in oil and gas extraction, oil field machinery manufacture and petroleum refining.

In February, Texas experienced the largest single monthly increase in unemployment since the recession of three years ago as 150,000 Texans joined the unemployment lines, White said.

Earlier Wednesday, Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards also called for a meeting of oil-state governors to hash out the dilemma of plunging crude prices.

At least 10 governors are expected to be invited to the conference, including Nigh; Bill Clinton of Arkansas and Toney Anaya of New Mexico, said Ann Arnold, White's press secretary.

White has written to President Reagan urging him to help oil-dependent states. Texas faces a $1.3 billion deficit in its two-year budget because of the slide in oil prices, state Comptroller Bob Bullock says.

Ms. Arnold said that although many governors in the oil-rich Southwest are Democrats, the summit is being planned as a non-partisan affair.

Polling places

From Staff Reports

Registered voters in the city and county will go to the polls Saturday to decide who will represent them on the City Council, Midland College board, Midland County Hospital District board and Greenwood Independent School District board.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Vying for mayor are Barbara Harris, Carroll Thomas and Steve Davidson. Seeking election to Place 3 on the City Council are Lawrence Connolly and Kelly Fish. Unopposed for Place 4 is Robert Rendall.

Trying to win a bid for seats on the Midland College Board of Trustees are: Place 1, Steve Kiser and Al Langford; Place 2, incumbent Fred Wright; and Place 3, incumbent John Cooper and Hugh White.

Assured of winning the two seats on the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors are Pat Estes and Margaret Purvis.

Greenwood voters, in addition to casting ballots in the hospital and college races, will decide who represents them on the school board. Seeking election to Place 2 are Archie Blackwell and Pete Wilkinson. Vicki Moody is unopposed for Place 1, although Janice Brown has announced a write-in campaign.

Eight running for two seats on MISD board

ELECTION '86

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District is proceeding on schedule with plans to hold elections May 3 as the 5 p.m. filing deadline Wednesday passed with eight persons completing candidacy forms for two seats on the board of trustees.

The election marks the first time that voters will elect Midland school board representatives under a single-member district plan.

Seeking election to District 1 are Edia Hernandez, Morris Conner, Owen Louis Broyles, Hadley R. Edwards and Dorothy J. Smith.

Candidates in the District 2 race include James Ramsoure, Raul Jimenez Salazar and Clarence R. "Putty" Zachery.

Meanwhile, MISD officials attorneys have asked for an expedited appeal hoping the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La. will overturn U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's order to divide the district into seven single-member districts.

MISD has proposed a compromise proposal for a 4-3 plan (four single member districts and three at-large positions). A ruling on the appeal is expected before the election.

School board President Bill Jackson said he is confident the appellate court will side with the district and accept the compromise proposal. "I feel good about the case our attorney has presented," he said.

Bunton ordered the election of trustees in Districts 1 and 2 (south and east Midland). Candidates must reside in the district in which they choose to run and are elected by persons residing in that district.

District 1 is bounded by Loop 250, Big Spring Street, East Golf Course Road, Fairgrounds Road, Front Avenue, Garden City Highway, Interstate 20 and the east Midland city limits.

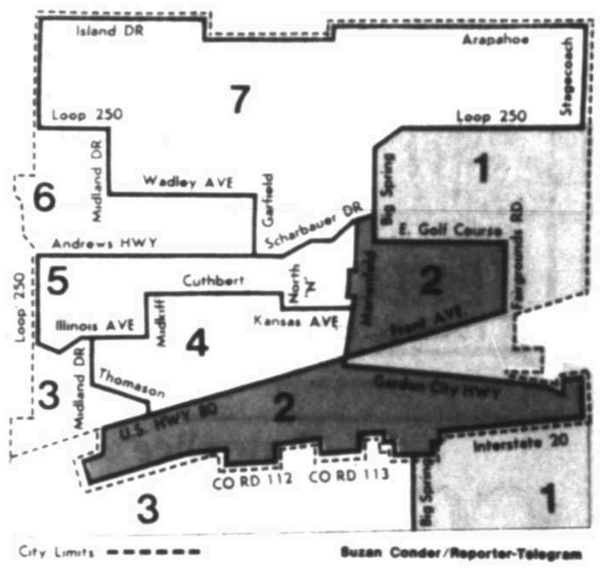

District 2 is bounded by Big Spring Street, Marienfeld, East Golf Course Road, Front Avenue, U.S. Highway 80, Garden City Highway, County Roads 112 and 113, and south Midland city limits

Bunton established the seven single-member districts on the basis of 1980 census statistics, but inadvertantly split two voting precincts in an attempt to balance districts.

Jackson said the split may be confusing to voters and urged them to contact the Midland County Election Administrator's Office, 709 W. Washington Ave., to determine in what district they reside.

Areas affected by the split include Precinct 202 and 105, meaning voters in Precinct 202 will be represented by either District 2 or 5, and voters in Precinct 105 will be represented by either District 3 or 4.

The other five trustee positions will be elected in 1987 and 1988. A. Joseph Reed's District 6 seat and K. Michael Conaway's District 7 seat will be challenged in April 1986. Fred Newman's District 3 seat, Joe Golding's District 4 seat and Betsy Robinson's District 5 seat will be challenged in April 1988.

Texas voters will choose at least four new state senators

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — When Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby gavels the Texas Senate to order Jan. 13, at least four fresh faces will stare back at him from behind the 31 antique desks.

Four senators — all male, all Anglo, all Democrats — have turned in their legislative credentials, taking with them 78 years of lawmaking experience. Their replacements will add some diversity to the upper chamber: certainly one black, probably one or two Hispanics, possibly two women and maybe a Republican.

Combined with Cyndi Taylor Krier's 1984 upset of veteran incumbent Bob Vale, this year's elections will totally revamp San Antonio's three-member Senate delegation. Another race will bring the fourth new senator in 10 years to a district that stretches from Port Aransas to just north of Austin. The fourth will fulfill the long-held dream that a black senator will represent Dallas' southside.

All four races have produced tough competition in the May 3 Democratic primary; two also feature contests for the Republican nomination.

District 21: The largest field of candidates — four Democrats and two Republicans — are vying for the opporunity to succeed Seguin Sen. John Traeger in this sprawling South Texas district. The Democratic action focuses on Laredo in the south, while the two GOP hopefuls work out of the New Braunfels//Seguin Republican stronghold north of San Antonio.

Traeger kept political observers guessing until he announced his retirement at a late October fundraiser that just as well could have been his campaign kickoff. The 24-year legislative veteran bowed out of the race and endorsed state Rep. Billy Hall of Laredo. Judith Zaffarini, a Laredo public relations consultant and vice chair of the Texas Democratic Party, had already begun her campaign to oust Traeger.

Known terrorist had occupied seat of previous TWA flight

Associated Press

A known Arab terrorist occupied the seat of a TWA jet where a bomb exploded during a later flight to Greece, tearing open the cabin and killing four Americans, Italian officials said today.

After meeting with Premier Bettino Craxi, Interior Minister Oscar Luigi Scalfaro told reporters, "It is certain that a suspect person, who is on file as a terrorist, got on in Cairo and got off in Athens, occupying in the airplane the exact seat where the explosion occurred."

The Boeing 727 on Wednesday flew from Cairo, Egpyt, to Athens, Greece, and then to Rome. There it picked up 112 passengers and headed back to Athens as TWA Flight 840, ultimately bound for Cairo.

The bomb exploded as the jetliner approached Athens airport from Rome, and the four victims were sucked out of the plane, flying at about 15,000 feet.

An Egyptian security official at Cairo International Airport said that after the explosion, Egyptian authorities checked the names of passengers who boarded in Cairo and "we had no suspicion about anyone on the list." The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

In other developments today:

— Palestinian sources in Beirut said a little-known group that claimed it staged the attack, the Arab Revolutionary Cells, was associated with Abu Nidal, whose group was blamed by the United States for the Dec. 27 massacres at the Rome and Vienna airports in which 20 people died, including five Americans.

— In Athens, TWA experts, U.S. Federal Aviation Administration and FBI officials, and investigators from Greece and Italy began examining the jetliner to determine if the bomb exploded in the cargo bay or in the cabin.

Greek officials said Wednesday that the blast took place in the cargo hold, but TWA officials in New York said it was in the cabin.

The pilot, Capt. Richard Peterson, told reporters today at Athens Airport, "The explosion was above the floor. It looked like it must have been beneath a seat."

Athens airport officials said the plane's "black box," which records conversations between the pilot and the control tower, would be flown to New York for study.

Is there an injury ahead for a 'Bloom County' resident?

By JOAN GOESSL

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Cartoonist Berke Breathed says this is a rumor, sort of.

Because he never — well, almost never — talks about upcoming episodes of his comic strip, "Bloom County," suffice to say one of the characters will — ah, might — suffer an injury similar to the one that landed Breathed in an Albuquerque hospital for four weeks and pulled his strip off active duty for nearly two months.

"I would be willing to say there's a possibility one of the characters gets a broken back by taking a picture of Sean Penn," Breathed says. "That isn't confirmed but it could be."

After seven weeks of reruns while its creator recuperated from a fractured back, the nationally syndicated "Bloom County" resumed publication with new strips Monday in roughly 700 newspapers.

And on Tuesday, as characters began to recap what had happened in "Bloom County" before Breathed's injury, readers saw Opus, the rotund, big-nosed penguin, ranting about being stalked by — you guessed it — actor Sean Penn. Opus, in summarizing the sort of plot the strip "should" have, says "I, after having an affair with Madonna, am stalked by a rabid Sean Penn. Meanwhile, Steve Dallas is spotted playing leap-frog with a scantily clad Imelda Marcos."

The stage isn't set, exactly, but Steve Dallas, the strip's less than reputable, womanizing lawyer, will — well, probably will — suffer a broken back by colliding with the camera shy actor, the husband of actress-singer Madonna.

It's an injury the cartoonist knows a lot about.

Breathed, 28, sustained a fractured back in January when the ultra-light airplane he was piloting crashed north of Albuquerque on the Sandia Pueblo Indian Reservation.

"I ran out of gas and I was flying too low," said Breathed.

Austin blaze battled

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin firefighters today fought a major blaze in the north part of the city that had burned most of the night.

The communications division of the department said the blaze was contained this morning.

Firemen planned to demolish still standing walls later today, the spokesman said.

The blaze broke out about 10:30 p.m. in two adjacent buildings of the Burr Transportation Co.

Stenholm: Search for oil 'abandoned'

ABILENE (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm says independent producers have all but abandoned the search for oil.

"The price slide of the past 90 days is not the result of supply-and-demand market economics," said the Stamford Democrat, who chairs the House Small Business Subcommittee on Energy, Environment and Safety.

"It results from punitive, monopolistic actions, designed to undercut high-cost producers, of the world's single most dominant producer," Stenholm said.

More than a dozen witnesses, mostly oilmen, testified before the U.S. House subcommittee Wednesday about the woes the industry has incurred from the plummet in crude prices.

John H. Chalmers, president of Chalmers Exploration Co. of Abilene, told the congressional panel tax incentives and government subsidies are among measures needed to help the oil industry overcome downsliding prices.

"It is absolutely necessary that something be done immediately on tax reform," said Chalmers. "Investors are reluctant to invest when they do not know what type, or if any type, of tax reform will affect their investments."

Chalmers outlined several actions to help maintain stripper or marginally producing wells and continue exploration for new pools of oil. Among the parts of his proposals were:

— Subsidizing marginal or stripper well production at a $22 a barrel level. When the market price drops below that figure, the federal government would subsidize the difference and put the oil in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, Chalmers said. The oil could be sold later, and the federal goverment reap the profit, he said.

— Double tax benefits on stripper wells. "If all intangible costs connected with maintaining marginal and-or stripper wells were doubled for tax purposes, then a substantial amount of these wells could be kept producing," he said.

— Double tax benefits for exploration into new pools of oil. "All money invested in drilling and-or completion of a wildcat prospect will be given tax credit for twice the money spent," he said. "This will be a strong incentive for speculative investors."

— Give a 150 percent tax credit for intangible costs for development wells. "All development wells, along with newly enhanced projects, will be granted one and one-half times intangible costs. This will stimulate development wells, and secondary and tertiary projects," he said.

Chalmers said the only way to increase the 1,000 wells current in operation to the 3,000 needed to make the country virtually energy independent is to adopt those tax revisions and repeal or revise various other federal laws and regulations.

He suggested repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax, the incremental pricing, the Fuel Use Act and all preferential tax items for minimum tax.

Chalmers also wants to restore the depletion to a full 27.5 percent and to "open interstate pipelines to equal access and encourage states to open intrastate pipelines to transportation at reasonable and just rates."

Gasoline tax may be 'better' solution

By STEPHANIE SLEWKA
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — A substantial gasoline tax increase is a better energy tax than an oil import fee to brace low energy prices, but it is the toughest of all energy conservation measures for Americans to accept and for Congress to pass, according to a new study.

In a study on the politics of energy conservation released here last week by the Brookings Institution, author Pietro S. Nivola says opposition from a gas-guzzling public is not stopping the U.S. government from raising gasoline taxes as much as the fact that the political left and right cannot agree on how to spend the proceeds of such a tax.

"Unless the main policy objective is to protect domestic oil producers from foreign competition, it is hard to understand why policymakers continue to express interest in an oil tariff," Nivola said.

In his study, Nivola — a professor of political science at the Univesity of Vermont — also made these points:

A large oil fee levied by the world's largest oil importer, the United States, could close off extra production outside the Persian Gulf, making the U.S. dependent on less secure oil sources.

Reliable sources like Mexico, Canada and Venezuela could be exempted from an import fee, but such an exemption would leave relatively few imports to tax.

A fee would reduce domestic demand while stimulating domestic production, and could lead to an artificial protection of the industry.

A gasoline tax would not lead to renewed protectionism, and would result in more conservation because the U.S. uses half of its oil on transportation.

Nivola argued it is wrong to assume an oil import fee is fairer than a gasoline tax because it is broader-based. In fact, he said, an import fee hits harder in the Northeast where oil products heat homes and power electrical plants, while a gasoline tax affects those in rural areas more.

Because the U.S is largely an urban country, the main burden of a gasoline tax would fall on city and suburb residents, and the heavier burden carried by sparsely populated states would be offset by the fact that they have long enjoyed lower prices for natural gas and electricity, Nivola concluded.

Concern over huge federal budget deficits, among other concerns, helped pull together a rare congressional majority in the fall of 1982 to raise the gasoline tax by a nickel, but since then it seems that many lawmakers are hoping the economy will grow out of a slump rather than impose this new tax to balance the federal budgetbook, Nivola said.

The federal gasoline tax increased from four cents to nine cents a gallon in 1982. State taxes vary.

Nivola argues Republican-Democratic ideological conflicts over the role of government run deeper than worry over budget deficits and stronger than special interest groups, public opinion, localism and governmental leadership.

"Members of the left, whose perennial grievance is that upper-income groups are not carrying their fair share in taxes, feel that another nonprogressive levy, especially on consumption of a vital commodity, adds 'insult to injury,'" Nivola claims.

Meanwhile, the right worries that if new, possibly abundant sources of federal revenue are discovered, the government will have an excuse to increase spending, and that the tax would usurp a revenue source of the states.

These conflicting views on the role of government that are hindering the enactment of a gasoline tax extend to the congressional pricing policies of petroleum, natural gas and electric rates, Nivola says.

In the continuing oil and gas deregulation debate, conservatives prefer to restore the nation's energy-producing prowess through market pricing, while Democrats want to rejigger the distribution of energy costs to benefit poorer Americans.

— Rural counties 101, 201, 203, 301, 302, 303, 401, vote in the college and hospital races.

— Greenwood, precinct 202, votes for Greenwood school trustees and hospital board.

SENATE

Benavides rancher Oscar Carrillo Sr., who still carries a strong Duval County base of support, and San Antonio attorney J.A. "Sporty" Garcia, a political newcomer, have also entered the Democratic race.

Traeger says the Democratic primary comes down to a race in Laredo between hometown candidates Hall and Zaffirini. "That's where the biggest vote turnout's going to be," he says.

"Every reading I get out of Laredo says Hall will beat Zaffirini anywhere from 60-40 to 55-45," Traeger explains. "If he does that, Hall's the winner."

Matt Dowd, political director for the state Democratic Party, says the race pits Hall's strong advertising budget against Zaffirini's hard-working organizational team. "It's a super close race," Dowd says.

Observers from both parties give the edge in the GOP race to former state Rep. Bennie Bock of New Braunfels, who switched parties to enter the contest. His opponent is 68 year-old T. Kellis Dibrell, a Seguin attorney.

"Bock, simply because he's been in office more recently, has a better chance," says Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake. "I haven't seen (Dibrell) active in recent years, and I was surprised to see him file."

Traeger expects Bock to win the GOP nomination and says he will support him if Zaffirini is the Democrat's choice. "The Bock family has supported me ever since I've been in politics," he says. "I couldn't take an active part supporting a liberal against him."

Between dodging "liberal" charges from Traeger and Hall, Zaffirini has made an issue of Hall's close ties to the liquor lobby. Hall denies Zaffirini's charges that as chairman of the House Liquor Regulation Committee he helped defeat legislation banning open containers in cars and trucks.

District 19: Perhaps the closest race of the four involves two likeable, young state representatives from San Antonio battling to replace the enigmatic 16-year veteran Glenn Kothmann.

Tommy Adkisson, a 36-year-old lawyer, quit the House and challenged Kothmann in the 1982 primary, losing by just 99 votes. Adkisson and 5-term House member Frank Tejeda are battling it out in a race that splits the traditional "west-side mafia."

"Flip a coin," says Traeger when asked to predict a victor.

"One day somebody is winning, the next day the other is," adds Dowd.

Adkisson came out of the box first, building the early lead. But Tejeda has caught up with his well-publicized investigation into questionable appeals court case swapping involving Supreme Court Justice C.L. Ray and controversial San Antonio lawyer Pat Maloney Sr.

"I thought at first Tommy Adkisson was going to win that race," says Traeger. "But Tejeda is making lots of ground with this court deal, people are getting awful sensitive about courts and judgments."

The two men have taken opposite stands on a key issue for Bexar County voters: parimutuel wagering on horse racing. Tejeda opposes it and Adkisson favors it. "In San Antonio that's a big factor, and that's going to cost (Tejeda) a lot of votes," says Traeger.

Two relatively unknown San Antonio businessman — 36-year-old Joe F. Garcia and 38-year-old Bill Siebert — are seeking the Republican nomination in a district where the demographics heavily favor the Democrats. State GOP political director Royal Masset says the only hope for Garcia or Siebert comes if District Judge Roy Berrara Jr. wins the Republican nomination for attorney general and can draw Hispanics to the GOP in November.

"If Berrara wins, it becomes a winable district," Masset says.

District 23: For the first time this century, a black senator will represent a district outside of Houston. With the lone Republican disqualified, the winner of the May 3 Democratic primary earns certain passage in November and will double the ranks of blacks in the Texas Senate.

Although Hobby maintains he does not care who wins any of the races — "whomever the voters chose" — sources say a huge sigh of relief came from the East Wing of the Capitol when state Rep. Paul Ragsdale dropped out of this race Jan. 11. That cleared the way for Rep. Jesse Oliver, an Oak Cliff lawyer who had refused to challenge his friend Ragsdale. Sources say Hobby looks forward to working with Oliver, a rising star who proved his mettle by shepharding a hotly debated health care package for the poor through the House last year.

The other two Democrats — former Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson and college professor Dr. Jesse Jones — earned a head start on Oliver in the race to succeed liberal 20-year veteran Oscar Mauzy. Jones got 46 percent of the vote in the 1982 primary against Mauzy.

Observers say the race is a test of strength for various Dallas Democratic factions. Jones is the candidate of the Progressive Voters League, a black get-out-the-vote group headed by County Commissioner John Wiley Price. Johnson carries support from the Dallas establishment and Oliver has apparent backing from whites outside the district.

"The results will really determine where the power lies," says Dowd, predicting that Oliver may win without a runoff.

A Dallas-area state senator agrees that Oliver is the front runner despite his late start. The race, he says, "is splitting a lot of the black leadership. I don't see anything wrong with that. It's a natural."

The lone Republican challenger lost his spot on the ballot by filing with the Dallas County Republican Party rather than the state party in Austin.

District 18: Republicans put their strongest hopes on winning this south-central district, although party chairman Strake admits it "is tough for us." President Reagan carried the district 54-46 in 1984.

Bill Livingston, a 36-year-old La Grange insurance salesman, is unopposed for the GOP nomination.

The Democratic primary for retiring Sen. John Sharp's seat is the quietest of the four. Rep. Ken Armbrister of Victoria faces former 10-year Rep. Joe Hubenak of Rosenberg.

Armbrister has been more vocal, but could carry some baggage from his public statements that he personally killed the open container legislation last year. One senator dismisses that issue, saying Armbrister "is the horse to bet on."

Dowd predicts Hubenak will come on strong next month. "Hubenak's going to probably, in the next couple weeks, dump some of his own personal money (into the campaign) and do some media."

The day after the Jan. 22 accident, Breathed underwent surgery to have rods inserted in his lower back to stabilize the fracture. His hospital stay was extended when doctors discovered blood clots had developed in his lungs.

The two rods will be taken out in about eight months, he said, and the back brace he wears will be a companion for a year.

Nowadays, Breathed can't ride horses or motorcycles or do what he calls "assertive things," but he's been speed boating, camping and traveling.

And drawing. The antics of Bill the Cat, computer hacker Oliver Wendell Jones, Opus, Steve Dallas and the rest of the "Bloom County" family are back.

Breathed said the Washington Post Writers Group had ordered the reruns of the comic strip because he was not able to work while he was hospitalized.

"If I'd have had my druthers, I would have had them pull it and reinstate it," he said. "But the newspaper business is too competitive. They could put something else in and decide not to take me back. Besides, it keeps making money and keeps the syndicate happy."

Breathed, who lives in the shadow of the Sandia Mountains on Albuquerque's northeast side, said he began writing and drawing the minute he got home from the hospital.

PLANE

The blast blew a 9-by-3-foot hole in the side of the plane in front of the right wing. TWA President Richard D. Pearson said in New York the explosion occurred on the cabin floor at row 10 or 11 of the passenger seats.

Officials at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport said the terrorist was an Arab who sat in seat 10F on the Cairo-to-Athens flight. They said they suspected he planted an explosive aboard before getting off in Athens.

ANSA, an Italian news agency, said an Arab named Mansur or Monsour was sitting in the 10th row on that flight.

The airport officials said they believed the terrorist was the same man who planted a bomb in luggage aboard a Rome-bound Alitalia flight in Istanbul Dec. 29, 1983. When the man did not board the plane in Istanbul, the passengers were taken off, all the luggage was inspected and the bomb was found.

At that time, sources in the Turkish police identified the suspected saboteur as an Iranian named A. Omar.

An anonymous caller to Western news agencies in Beirut claimed responsibility for the TWA attack on behalf of the Arab Revolutionary Cells. He said it was in response to last week's clash between U.S. and Libyan forces in the disputed Gulf of Sidra.

The Palestinian sources in Beirut, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Abu Nidal had used the name Arab Revolutionary Cells.

Talks on interracial legislature open without major anti-apartheid groups

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Unprecedented talks on an interracial legislature for one of South Africa's four provinces opened today in Durban, but major anti-apartheid groups refused to participate.

The talks, convened under heavy security in the Indian Ocean port city, focused on the possible formation of a joint legislative body to govern Natal province and the black homeland of KwaZulu, which lies inside Natal's boundaries.

Many of Natal's white political and business organizations are participating in the talks, which are the first high-level negotiations on forming a black-white provincial legislature.

Frank Martin, the senior member of Natal's executive council, said in one of the opening speeches that, "Fear is our supreme enemy."

The other principal in the talks is KwaZulu's chief minister, Mangosuthu Buthelezi. He has incurred the wrath of black militants because of his opposition to violence as a means of combating apartheid, the system that allows 5 million whites to rule 24 million voteless blacks.

South Africa's largest anti-apartheid coalition, the United Democratic Front, has assailed the Natal talks, as has the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group.

The Natal Indian Congress, a major Asian political group, also refused to participate.

The central government, while not formally endorsing the talks, has sent an observer from the governing National Party. But the country's extreme right-wing parties have denounced the negotiations.

In Soweto, Johannesburg's largest black township, hundreds of well-wishers thronged around the home of anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela, who returned there Wednesday after her lawyer said the government was effectively lifting restrictions on her movements.

Mrs. Mandela, wife of jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, had spent most of the past nine years exiled to the small Orange Free State town of Brandfort.

South African anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela salutes a crowd outside her Soweto home Wednesday. Her banning order, which prevented her from entering the township, was lifted by South African officials.

U.S. Army pilots ferry Honduran troops, weapons

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — U.S. Army helicopter pilots ferried Honduran troops and weapons Wednesday to an area where Nicaraguan soldiers battled rebels last week, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Arthur Skop.

Skop said the helicopters transported about 150 Honduran soldiers from one location to another near the border area known as the Las Vegas salient, a rugged triangular-shaped mountain area that juts into northern Nicaragua.

Honduran and U.S. officials say about 1,500 troops of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government crossed into the area last week in a failed attempt to wipe out bases of the U.S.-backed rebels, known as Contras. The rebels are fighting to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

The Honduran government refused to allow reporters to travel into the area to verify the invasion report.

Officials say almost all of the Sandinista soldiers, 200 of whom were reported killed, have returned to Nicaragua.

But a Honduran military source said skirmishes between government troops and small Sandinista patrols have continued up to Wednesday.

The source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said there have been no reports of casualties from either side.

U.S. helicopter pilots also transported Honduran troops to the border area during the reported invasion.

On Tuesday, U.S. Army pilots flew 160mm mortars out of the region in Chinook helicopters, Skop said, adding that the number of Honduran forces in the salient is being slowly reduced.

U.S. Army pilots will continue to fly for the Honduran armed forces "until they say they don't need our assistance anymore."

U.S. to back West Bank projects

JERUSALEM (AP) — A top Israeli official said Wednesday the U.S. government has agreed to help finance a $600 million plan to improve living conditions for Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Shmuel Goren, the government official in charge of Israeli policy in the occupied territories, said he was "surprised by the extremely positive response" of U.S. government agencies to dozens of projects, ranging from sewage systems to factory building.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres has said that improving the quality of life for the Palestinians in the areas captured in the 1967 Mideast War could help curb terrorism and prod forward the stalemated peace process with Jordan.

Goren said that the U.S. State Department's Agency for International Development "agreed in principle" to contribute funds when he was in Washington last month. He declined to elaborate about figures.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Falling oil prices, sliding dollar fuel European boom

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The double jolt of an oil price crash and a sliding U.S. dollar is altering the economic landscape of Western Europe with a force few had foreseen just four months ago, economists say.

High inflation, anemic consumer spending and other obstacles to sustained economic growth in Europe are falling away. In their place are a business investment boom, record stock market rallies and forecasts of the lowest rates of inflation since the mid-1960s.

Even unemployment, stuck at levels far higher than elsewhere in the industrialized world, is showing signs of its first retreat in this decade.

Herbert Wolf, chief economist at Frankfurt's Commerzbank, says West Germany may top all its trading partners — even Japan and the United States — with an economic expansion, after inflation, of 4 percent this year. That would be a near doubling of West Germany's 1985 showing.

Some West European nations this year may achieve what until recently seemed no more than a dream to the oil-importing West: zero inflation.

Casualty figures released

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran military says it killed, wounded or captured 148 leftist rebels in March, and 94 of its soldiers were killed or wounded.

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Venceremos claimed to have inflicted 573 casualties on government forces during that time, more than half of them by mines or booby traps. The broadcast gave no figures for rebel losses.

The wide variance in the monthly figures given by the two sides Tuesday has been standard during the six-year-old civil war, and independent verification is impossible.

The guerrillas of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front are fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

The army press office said it removed 622 civilian supporters of the guerrillas from combat zones during March and that 109 guerrillas deserted.

O'Neill visits Venezuela

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — U.S. House majority leader Thomas 'Tip' O'Neill arrived in Venezuela Wednesday night for talks with President Jaime Lusinchi on proposed aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua and the oil market crisis.

Like the Argentines he visited earlier Wednesday, O'Neill opposes $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels, who are fighting the leftist Sandinista government.

President Reagan supports such a measure, which narrowly passed the Republican-backed Senate last week, but was defeated earlier by the Democratic-controlled House.

The measure goes back to the House for consideration, and could be passed, O'Neill said, because some representatives may change their votes in the aftermath of the reported invasion last week of the Honduran border region by Nicaraguan troops searching for Honduran-based Contra guerrillas.

Earlier, President Raul Alfonsin told a U.S. House delegation, led by O'Neill, that Argentina opposes Reagan's policy to provide arms and aid to guerrillas fighting the Sandinistas.

Bentsen visits Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, is in Mexico for a visit concentrating on trade issues.

The senator, who was staying at the residence of U.S. Ambassador John Gavin, was scheduled to meet today with President Miguel de la Madrid and Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda.

On Wednesday, his first full day in Mexico, Bentsen scheduled meetings with Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog and Commerce Secretary Hector Hernandez Cervantes.

Bentsen planned to speak Friday to the U.S.-Mexico Chamber of Commerce in the northern industrial city of Monterrey.

Gavin, who hosted Texas' Republican senator Phil Gramm earlier this year, said commerce and Mexico's decision to join the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade were among the items for discussion on Bentsen's agenda.

Crash site investigated

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Investigators searched a rugged mountainside for clues to the cause of the worst air disaster in Mexican history, and a government agency said the coroner's office had identified the remains of 131 of the 166 victims.

To date, the coroner's office in Mexico City has received 160 bodies and sets of remains of people killed in Monday's crash of a Mexicana Boeing 727. The Federal Attorney General's Office said that as of late Wednesday, 131 victims had been identified.

The U.S. Embassy has confirmed that nine of the victims were Americans.

The plane, Mexicana's Flight 940, crashed about 15 minutes after takeoff from Mexico City on a flight to Los Angeles with scheduled stops in Puerto Vallarta and Mazatlan. All aboard were killed.

Vote for
AL G. Langford
Midland College Trustee — Place 1

"I've worked in public education for 30 years. I was president of Midland College for 12 years, and as its first president I performed many duties while helping the college get started. During the early years I did everything from arranging bank loans and making master schedules to sweeping floors. I did all of this because I enjoyed it, and I wanted to see the college become a success as a first class community college.

"Because I love the college I've served it in every way I can. There is only one way in which I have not served . . . as a Midland College Trustee. With your help and vote on Saturday, April 5th, I will have that opportunity."

At this critical time for higher education we need someone with knowledge and experience to assure the success of Midland College . . . we need Al Langford.

VOTE AL LANGFORD — MIDLAND COLLEGE TRUSTEE, PLACE 1

Pol. adv. paid for by Al G. Langford Campaign Committee, Robert M. Leibrock, Treasurer • 500 Wilco Bldg., Midland, TX.

We believe Carroll Thomas has the maturity and experience to guide Midland through these uncertain times.

City Council delays election on bond issue

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Citing economic uncertainty facing the city and "ridiculous" provisions of the Tax Reform Act on municipal bond sales, Midland City Council withdrew its plans Tuesday to place a $10.8 million bond issue on the April 5 ballot.

During the meeting in City Hall Council Chambers, the council also approved spending $25,000 to attract a $2.8 billion project for West Texas, discovered the number of traffic accidents increased last year, granted street closings for Midland Arts Assembly and rejected a zone change plan for Loop 250 between Knittle Drive and Todd Road.

During a special session Feb. 4, the council outlined projects to be included in the $10.8 million bond package. The lion's share was designated for street and drainage improvements, especially for the Northwest Drainage Channel. The remaining would be used for a new traffic controllers' system downtown and along the Andrews Highway and an aerial fire truck and computerized communications system for the Fire Department.

Postponement of the bond issue was urged last week by mayoral candidate Carroll Thomas, who said at a news conference he wasn't opposed to the items but to the timing and suggested they would be better offered in November. During the council meeting, however, it was Councilman Steve Davidson — also a candidate for mayor — who urged the issue go before the voters to help the council ascertain the public's views.

AFTER THE COUNCIL'S decision, Thomas said he was pleased it had been delayed and that he had voiced his thoughts to a couple of the council members prior to the meeting.

Before the vote, Mayor G. Thane Akins said the council had been looking at the bond issue "for some time, going back to a retreat last fall. I think the public expects us as prudent people in government to plan for the future in the way of providing services."

He added the council had several concerns with the primary one being the provisions in the Tax Reform Act, also known as House Bill 3838. Akins said he has heard that 70 percent of the bond issue proposals in Texas have been canceled this year because of that bill. "Some of these provisions are just ridiculous in nature," he said.

One of the provisions requires 5 percent of the money to be spent within 30 days after selling the bonds. And all the money must be spent within three years.

Continuing, the mayor said the council needs "time to educate ourselves and the public on these bonds. April gives us a short time.

BOND

There is no question the work has to be done. But because of other concerns affecting this, we probably should consider a delay on this proposal."

A plunge in oil prices in the last few weeks also brought concerns from some council members about the city's future economic stability.

Finance Director Troy Gifford related he had attended a seminar last week which featured one of the masterminds of the Tax Reform Act. Known as a chief economist for the House Ways and Means Committee, the man said the government to get the tax-exempt municipal bonds, according to Gifford.

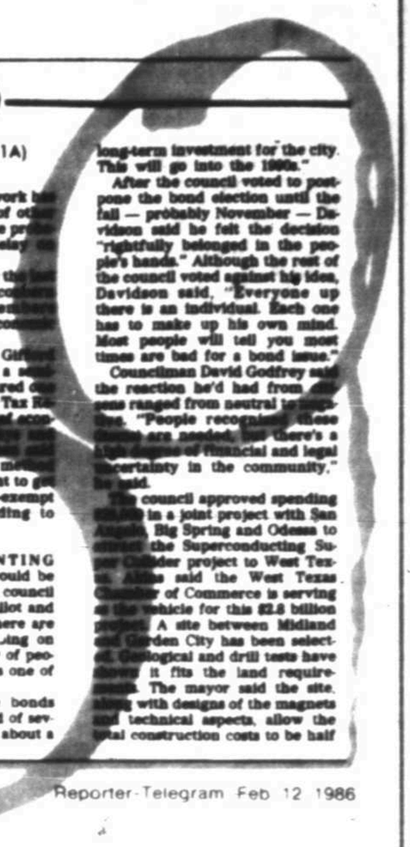

TAKING A DISSENTING stand, Davidson said it would be in the best interest of the council to put the issue on the ballot and let the people decide. "There are a lot of cross currents going on out there. For every story of people having trouble, there's one of someone doing well."

Davidson noted these bonds will be spent over a period of several years. "We're talking about a long-term investment for the city. This will go into the 1990s."

After the council voted to postpone the bond election until the fall — probably November — Davidson said he felt the decision "rightfully belonged in the people's hands." Although the rest of the council voted against his idea, Davidson said, "Everyone up there is an individual. Each one has to make up his own mind. Most people will tell you most times are bad for a bond issue."

Councilman David Godfrey said the reaction he'd had from citizens ranged from neutral to negative. "People recognize these things are needed, but there's a high degree of financial and legal uncertainty in the community," he said.

The council approved spending $25,000 in a joint project with San Angelo, Big Spring and Odessa to attract the Superconducting Super Collider project to West Texas. Akins said the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is serving as the vehicle for this $2.8 billion project. A site between Midland and Garden City has been selected. Geological and drill tests have shown it fits the land requirements. The mayor said the site, along with designs of the magnets and technical aspects, allow the total construction costs to be half

Garbage bag held letters from Whitworth, agents say

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A garbage bag full of classified documents left for the Soviets by confessed spymaster John A. Walker Jr. also held letters about a reluctant spy prosecutors say was Jerry Whitworth, according to testimony at Whitworth's trial.

In a letter to Soviet "handlers," Walker said his helper, known as "D," was unwilling to continue spying. But he predicted that "the big-spender lifestyle" would lead him back into espionage, FBI agents testified.

Prosecutors say "D" was Whitworth, the retired Navy radioman who is charged with selling U.S. secrets through Walker's spy network for $332,000 in payments over nine years.

Whitworth, 46, is charged with 13 counts of espionage and conspiracy, seven of which carry potential life sentences. He is also charged with tax evasion.

Walker, 48, who pleaded guilty last November, admitted luring his family into a spy ring which operated for 17 years. He agreed to testify against Whitworth, the Navy buddy who insists he wasn't part of the scheme.

Officials head to Manila

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two federal prosecutors are heading to Manila as part of the U.S. government's investigation of American business dealings with the regime of deposed Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos, according to Justice Department sources.

The two will look at documents uncovered since Marcos fled the Philippines on Feb. 25, the sources said Wednesday.

Marcos' departure ended a 20-year rule that the government of his successor, Corazon Aquino, says was marked by widespread corruption.

The prosecutors will look at information that may be presented to federal grand juries in Pittsburgh and Alexandria, Va., said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Alexandria panel is investigating whether U.S. money sent to Marcos' government for a military communications system was diverted to top Philippines armed forces officials.

In Pittsburgh, the grand jury is investigating payments by Westinghouse Electric Corp. to win a contract to build the Philippines' first nuclear power plant.

Comet data confirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early results from the visits to Halley's comet by Soviet spacecraft, an effort that serves as a model for a proposed international mission to Mars, confirm data gathered by a closer-flying European craft, says the Soviet scientist in charge of the program.

Roald Sagdeyev, head of the Soviet Institute for Space Research, said Wednesday the Vega space probes that flew by the comet last month found the nucleus of the icy body to be surprisingly large and dark, confirming observations of the European Space Agency's Giotto spacecraft.

"The size of the nucleus was two to three times larger than had been expected," he said. "It also had a lower albedo (reflected brightness) than expected."

Because the soot-like material covering the solid center of the comet reflected so little light, many scientists assumed less light meant a core smaller than the 9-mile-long, 4-mile-wide body found by the spacecraft.

Soviet girl leaves U.S.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Soviet schoolgirl who spent two weeks on a peace mission to the United States flew to Mexico early today after wrapping up her whirlwind tour with a visit to Disneyland.

Katerina Lycheva, 11, left Los Angeles on a Mexicana Airlines flight before dawn, said an airline ticket agent who refused to give her name.

The girl's 12-day U.S. visit was patterned on a highly publicized 1983 trip to the Soviet Union by another schoolgirl peace envoy, the late Samantha Smith of Maine.

Katerina, who goes by the nickname Katya, visited the Magic Kingdom on Tuesday.

Firefighters just hanging on 'by skin of our teeth'

Associated Press

Firefighters battling blazes that have charred more than a half million acres in the Southeast were hanging on "by the skin of our teeth" today and stepping up a crackdown on arsonists as forecasters said rain was still days away.

The dry weather has fueled 42,204 fires covering 583,056 acres of land this year in parts of the U.S. Forest Service region encompassing 13 Southeastern states, said Bruce Jewell, USFS spokesman in Atlanta.

At least four people have died fighting fires, three in Tennessee and one in Ohio.

"We're trying to shuttle crews around to give some relief to the hardest-worked crews," said Dwight Barnett of the Tennessee Division of Forestry. "We're hanging by the skin of our teeth. You really have no choice but to go on."

In Tennessee, at least five fires raged out of control, including a 400-acre blaze in Cocke County. Major fires also raged near Chattanooga and in Overton County, Barnett said.

Head of shuttle projects office at Marshall center resigns

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NASA official who was chided by presidential Challenger commission members for not telling top agency officials that a contractor warned it was unsafe to launch the space shuttle has asked to be reassigned.

Stanley Reinartz asked to be relieved "for health and other personal reasons," the space agency said Wednesday.

Reinartz, head of the shuttle projects office at the Marshall Space Flight Center, in Huntsville, Ala., is going back to his former position as manager of the special projects office, NASA said.

"Stan Reinartz has been one of our stalwarts (for) many years," said center director William Lucas, in making the announcement.

He will be succeeded by William R. Marshall.

Testifying Feb. 26 before the presidential commission investigating the Challenger explosion, Reinartz said he had informed Lucas that engineers at Morton Thiokol, Inc., which built the shuttle's solid-fuel booster rockets, were worried about the effect of bitter cold on the rockets.

Lucas was not in the "reporting chain," because he was not one of the five officials who make the final decision to launch. When Reinartz acknowledged knowing that, commissioner Donald Kutyna asked: "If you want to report a fire, you don't go to the mayor... Why didn't you go through the fire department?"

Reinartz said he didn't go to launch officials, because "I did not perceive any clear requirement."

Commission Chairman William P. Rogers cited this failure among other events in the decision-to-launch process as a major flaw in the space agency. He said the system eliminates "the element of good judgment and common sense."

That prompted commissioner Robert Hotz to ask, "Are you telling us that you, in fact, are the person who made the decision not to escalate this to a Level 2 item?"

"That is correct, sir," Reinartz replied.

A similar shift in responsibility has occurred at Morton Thiokol in the wake of the Jan. 28 shuttle explosion, which killed all seven crew members.

Crippen once told of rocket-seal problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut Robert Crippen, who has flown more space shuttle flights than anyone else, told the presidential Challenger commission today he once heard about a problem with a booster rocket seal but he did not consider it "that big a deal."

But, said Crippen, he was not aware that a waiver had been issued that, in effect, acknowledged that catastrophe could result if the seal failed.

"If I had been aware of the change," he said, "I would have taken the problem much more seriously."

A leaking seal in the right booster rocket is believed to have caused the explosion that destroyed Challenger and killed its crew of seven on liftoff Jan. 28.

Crippen said he was told, during a formal flight review at which he represented the astronauts, that soot was found outside the seal on a booster rocket that was recovered from the Atlantic after the launch of a shuttle in January 1985.

"In truth, in my perception, it wasn't that much of a big deal," said Crippen, who flew on the first shuttle mission as pilot to commander John Young, and has flown three missions since.

"I guess the emphasis was not one to think it was the major problem that I guess it was," Crippen said.

But Young, who is chief of the astronaut office, testified, "I don't ever recall anything coming out on the flight readiness reviews on solid rocket motor seals...If any one in the gang had known about this business and said something, we could have done something about it."

Young, who also flew in the Gemini and Apollo programs and is America's most experienced space flier with six flights, said nine space shuttle missions made 1985 a banner year.

"It was hard to see how we could do a lot more with our people unless we do something different," he said in answers to questions by commission chairman William P. Rogers. "People are just working long hours, long periods of time...If we had more missions, from an operational standpoint, it would be tough." NASA had planned 15 launches this year, before shuttle launches were halted by the loss of Challenger, the year's second mission.

Panel members pressed Young on this point, because in recent memos he said that pressure to launch caused compromises in flight safety. Commissioner Robert Hotz asked NASA's 15 launch schedule for this year would have been too much work.

Said Young: "I think we would have been pushing it."

Rogers told Paul Weitz, an astronaut and deputy to Young, that "we want our report to recommend corrective actions so that astronauts will be aware of critical problems. I can see why John Young was upset."

Weitz replied: "The system is in place, but it broke down some way."

Panelists asked whether the astronauts had to rely on too many other people to filter information to them. Crippen replied, "I don't think there is a vehicle as complex as the shuttle when you put it together. You have to be reliant on people supporting you. You have to have confidence in the system. You have to have trust in the system. Otherwise, you would never go fly it."

Before writing his memos, Young had taken his complaints to Vice President George Bush, who relayed them to the investigating panel, according to a source close to the commission. Young and Bush had a space-to-ground conversation during the first shuttle flight and met several times at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Proposed Pentagon reforms take aim at military waste

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its announcement of President Reagan's public embrace of proposed Pentagon reforms, the White House said the administration was mindful of "the need to move quickly and decisively."

What the statement omitted was the political fact of life in Washington that the need for speed arises from a growing clamor on Capitol Hill for change in the way the Defense Department is organized and spends — some say wastes — the federal government's largest budget.

Few subjects have generated as much mail to congressional offices in recent years as stories about $600 toilet seats, $400 hammers and weapons that cost too much and won't work.

In recent months, there have been dozens of legislative proposals to change the way the Pentagon does business. In one debate last year, Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., spoke for many colleagues when he told the Senate, "I don't care what we do, but we've absolutely got to stop this tremendous waste."

The changes Reagan supports were proposed by a commission he appointed last summer to recommend reforms after two years of criticism about high-priced spare parts.

The announcement is timely because when Congress returns next week from its Easter recess, a leading item on the agenda will be the overall shape of the fiscal 1987 budget.

The president has sought a hike of almost 12 percent in defense spending — to more than $320 billion — in what would be a continuation of his program to "rearm America." However, Democrats and Republicans alike have warned that the request is likely to be cut, partly in response to public anger about Pentagon waste.

The commission, headed by industrialist and former Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard, originally set out to look at waste in spare-parts spending, but it ended up endorsing a broad package of changes.

It called for strengthening the five-member Joint Chiefs of Staff and centralizing the purchasing process under one civilian office.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday that the proposals "are among the most extensive reforms of the defense establishment since World War II."

What Speakes didn't say is that the Packard commission proposals are general and lack many specifics about just exactly who will control what. Those are the kind of details that are extremely important in the status-conscious world of the Pentagon.

Many of the proposed Packard reforms are contained in a bill sent to the Senate floor last month by the Armed Services Committee. The measure is also high on the Senate's agenda next week.

Many of those reforms were also part of another bill overwhelmingly approved by the House last fall.

Since the Defense Department was established in 1947, there have been more than 30 studies, some by the government and others by private groups.

All recommended changes, but few of the proposals were ever adopted, in part because of the strong, entrenched opposition of the military establishment.

The fate of the latest package is also uncertain, due in part to the strong opposition of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

YMCA's spirit

Recognizing that with oil prices plummeting and job layoffs common in the Midland area, officials of Midland Metropolitan YMCA have decided against a business-as-usual posture in the immediate future.

Business-as-usual in tough economic times simply isn't enough. In fact, J. Durwood Owen, general director of the YMCA, announced plans to extend current membership privileges to Midlanders who are members but who are unemployed because of layoffs and other employee reduction programs.

The YMCA deserves high commendation for its thoughtfulness. A large and vital sector of Midland's economy is hard-hit by the oil industry slowdown precipitated by falling oil prices and until that fact changes — and at some point it will change, undisputedly — times are going to be rough for many Midland families.

That's why the YMCA's action speaks so well of the spirit of togetherness that remains alive and healthy in Midland. More than anything it says: "We are a community. When times are good, we all share in the successes. But when times are bad, we also must share in the heartache and difficulty."

Owens adequately expressed the YMCA's position when he said: "The loss of one's job is a very traumatic experience. I believe people need to maintain some of their daily habits. I also believe there will be a greater demand on us to continue to provide programs and services to the community."

He's correct, of course. These difficult times will not continue forever, though. Midland has experienced tough times before and always emerged from the difficulty stronger, with greater resolve to grow and flourish. That will be the story this time, too.

But in the interim, the YMCA has shown a commitment to stand by the people of this community in their time of trouble and help them in the best way it can. That is the greatest testimonial to an organization's community involvement and we take pride in saluting the Midland Metropolitan YMCA.

Don't bill taxpayers

Congressional newsletters are the worst kind of junk mail. They contain little, if any, information of value. In fact, most are political advertising that is billed, not to the sender — the officeholder candidate — but to taxpayers.

It's expecting a lot, but Congress should put an end to this subsidized politicking. That could occur if legislation introduced the other day by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., is enacted. His proposal would ban the use of federal funds to mail congressional newsletters. Predictably, most members of Congress don't want to give up all those campaign fliers being mailed at taxpayer expense.

Congress, in fact, will spend $146 million on postage this year, of which more than $100 million will be for the self-serving newsletters. Naturally, the biggest spenders on newsletters usually are senators and congressmen who face tough re-election challenges.

Unlike the Senate, the House doesn't require its members to disclose their mailing expenses. Because House members must run every two years, most find some reason to send several mass mailings each year. To be completely fair, some of the mailings to constituents are justified in the fact that they keep constituents better informed and more involved in the process of American politics. But often that factor is outweighed by other considerations, such as the media's attention to important matters before the Congress.

Another factor is this: Congressional districts are smaller than most states, so House members generally spend less on postage than their Senate counterparts.

Still, Sen. Wilson is right to try and put an end to these tax-supported political mailings. If senators and congressmen want to send political material to constituents, that's their business. But it's unconscionable that taxpayers should pay for such junk mail.

Fish offers specifics

We strongly support Kelly Fish for City Council, District 3, for several reasons. He has shown his concern for Midland by taking on various civic leadership responsibilities.

He has demonstrated that he will be an effective councilman because, throughout the campaign, he has suggested specific programs to benefit Midland, such as the Task Force Against Crime, which has been supported by the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

In addition, he's called for exploring the idea of allowing the private sector to perform services the city now provides if it can be demonstrated to cost less and provide the same quality.

Also, he has called for a study to determine the feasibility of making Midland Regional Airport an international port-of-entry and a foreign trade zone in order to stimulate new job creation.

With his years of experience in the oil business, he is keenly aware of the current economic problems Midland is facing. As a councilman, Kelly will actively support all programs designed to alleviate the pressure on the petroleum industry and to diversify the economy.

Records revealing

The Mayoral Candidate Campaign Financial Records indicate Carroll Thomas has spent in excess of $33,000 while Steve Davidson has spent only $14,600.

In this depressed city economy, we should ask ourselves who is most likely to demonstrate fiscal responsibility in managing our city funds.

Letters Policy

■ The Reporter-Telegram welcomes letters on various topics. We prefer typed or printed letters. Typewritten letters should be double-spaced and should not exceed two pages. Shorter letters are preferred. Handwritten letters must be legible. They should be signed and contain writer's address and telephone numbers, home and work, for possible verification. However, only the writer's name will be published.

Libelous letters or letters deemed in bad taste will not be published. We do not publish anonymous letters, letters addressed to particular groups or the general public ("open" letters) or copies of letters sent to others. We reserve the right to condense and correct spelling, grammar and punctuation. Letter writers ordinarily are limited to one publication per month. They may appear on any day of publication.

Yasir Arafat trying to find a home

WASHINGTON — Like the legendary frontier rascal being run out of town in tar and feathers, Yasir Arafat has tried to make it look as if he were leading a PLO parade out of his sanctuary in Tunisia.

Jack Anderson

But the humiliating reality is that Arafat was invited to leave in no uncertain terms, and he is having the devil's own time trying to find another Arab country that will take him in with any degree of hospitality.

Considering the past behavior of his cohorts in the Palestine Liberation Organization, to say nothing of the Israeli retaliatory strikes their presence invites, it's hard to blame the Arab governments for being reluctant to play host to Arafat and his unruly hordes.

The PLO's press agents have accentuated the positive, of course, boasting that all of the PLO troops who debarked from Beirut under Israeli guns in 1982 have now returned to their old haunts in Beirut and its environs. This is probably an exaggeration; but even so, it points up the embarrassment Arafat must feel at not setting up his old headquarters in Lebanon.

The reason he hasn't is that even the armed PLO guerrillas in Beirut are kept on a tight leash by the Syrian army. Syrian President Hafez Assad was the greatest single benefactor of the PLO ouster in 1982 and the subsequent withdrawal of Israeli troops — and he can hardly be expected to throw away the control of most of Lebanon by welcoming back a rival.

There has been some talk lately of a reconciliation between Arafat and Assad, presumably under pressure from the Soviets, who value Arafat as a useful tool to stir up trouble, and who have undoubted influence with Assad as his chief arms supplier. But there is a strong personal antipathy between the two Arab rivals — the rigid, ascetic Assad detests the effete, easily compromised Arafat. Sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado that any reconciliation, which they regard as unlikely, would definitely be on Assad's terms.

The history of the PLO's stay in Tunisia is enough to make any potential host leery. The defeated PLO troops were allowed in only on condition that they refrain from terrorist activities. But the PLO murdered three Israelis in Cyprus last September, provoking an Israeli air raid on the PLO headquarters outside Tunis. Many Tunisians were killed.

Yet the internal dynamics of the PLO — and Arafat's always challengeable leadership — demand that the organization be "close to the action." That means being as near to Israel as possible, and being given loose enough rein to carry out the kind of operations that are the PLO's main reason for being.

Jordan's King Hussein still remembers the PLO as demanding guests who nettled him until he ejected them in a bloody showdown in 1970 — an operation that the PLO still refers to as "Black September." In recent months, Hussein has allowed the PLO to open offices in his kingdom, but like his Syrian neighbor, he keeps the PLO elements under tight control. Now Hussein has fallen out with Arafat over regional peace talks, thereby souring relations. Furthermore, Hussein is vulnerable to retaliation from Israel, which has reminded him pointedly of this.

Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy supports the Palestinian cause but despises Arafat. Libya is also a bit far from Israel for the PLO's purposes.

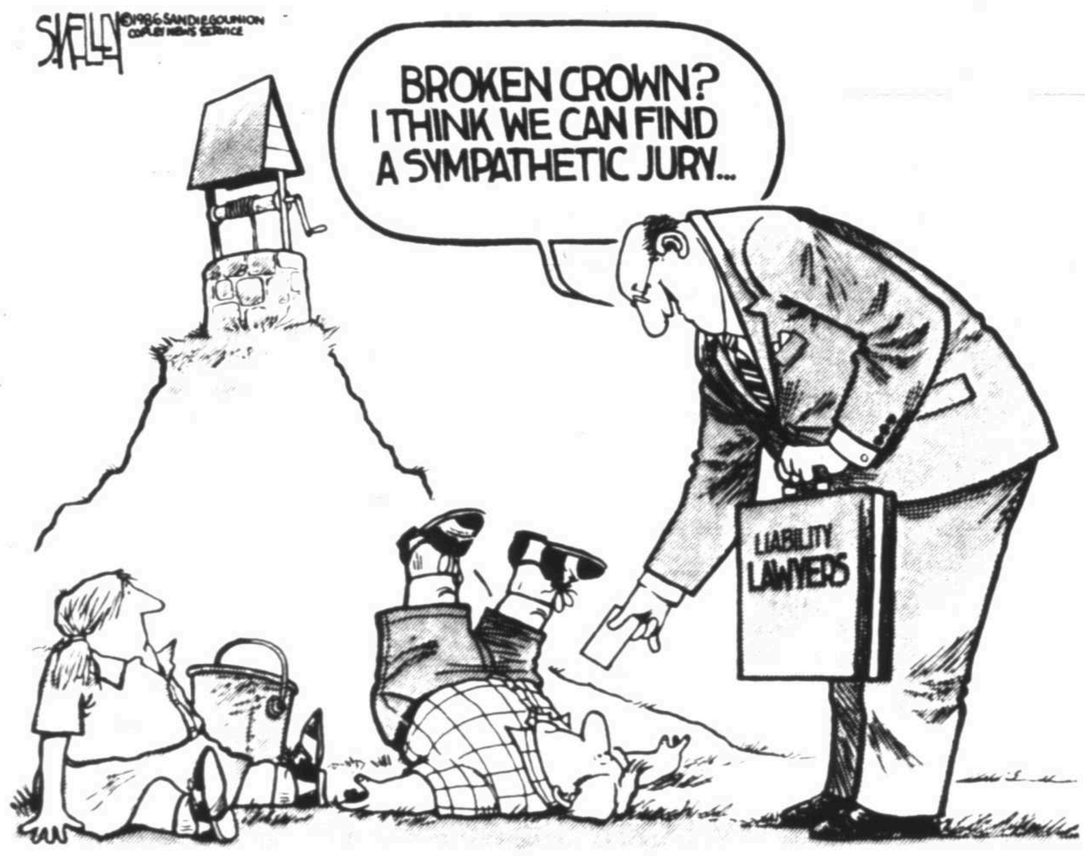

Egypt is a possibility, but since there's an Israeli embassy in Cairo, a PLO headquarters there could be sticky.

Iraq is probably the likeliest prospect on Arafat's "house-hunting" list, but it is also far from Israel's borders, and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein would be certain to keep the PLO under strict bounds.

VISA VEXATIONS: Applicants for tourist visas into the United States are a perennial source of worry for American consular officials. They must decide, usually on the basis of inadequate or possibly misleading information supplied by the applicant, whether the visitor is a legitimate tourist or will decide to stay in this country illegally. A cable from the consulate in Alexandria, Egypt, to Foggy Bottom described one class of alleged tourists who almost automatically raise suspicion: "As usual," it noted, "the bulk of the applicants are university students (who) claim to have $2,000 and plan to stay at 'any hotel in New York.'"

Rulings on religion keeps Americans litigious

WASHINGTON — Americans are about equally religious and litigious, so they have made a cottage industry of litigation concerning the first 16 words of the First Amendment: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...." Those two topics, "establishment" and "free exercise," can become interestingly tangled.

George F. Will

In 1981 S. Simcha Goldman, an Orthodox Jew and ordained rabbi and Air Force officer, decided to fight Air Force restrictions on the wearing of yarmulkes. The regulation restricts the wearing of headgear indoors. Goldman did what any real, not to mention devout, American would do. He sued.

He said the regulation infringed his right to "free exercise" of his beliefs. A U.S. District Court agreed and permanently enjoined the Air Force from enforcing its regulation against him. But permanence is a sometime thing in this rollicking Republic, and a U.S. Court of Appeals held for the Air Force. In the Supreme Court, Goldman had four justices with him, but that was one brick shy of a load.

Justice Rehnquist (joined by Burger, White, Powell and Stevens) reiterated the Court's view that the military is a specialized society and that judicial review of military regulations should be "far more deferential" than review of similar laws or regulations in civilian society. The essence of military service is subordination of the individual's desires and interests to the needs of the collective enterprise. Standardized uniforms are means to a valid end, a sense of hierarchical unity.

Goldman said studies might show that more liberal regulations regarding religious apparel would enhance morale, a thought that cut no ice with Rehnquist, who said: Judicial deference "is at its apogee" when dealing with decisions of the armed services. But Justice Brennan's dander reaches an impressive apogee when such deference is mentioned. He, joined by Justice Marshall, dissented. O'Connor and Blackmun also dissented mildly, but Brennan understands that if you are going to dissent, break some crockery.

The Court, he thundered, has abdicated its role as expositor of the Constitution and protector of individual liberty, "in favor of credulous deference to unsupported assertions of military necessity." All is fair in love and war and constitutional law, and Brennan never met a straw man he didn't like. He said the Court had affirmed the Air Force's contention that a more liberal policy regarding yarmulkes would mean "our fighting forces slip down the treacherous slope toward unkempt appearance, anarchy and, ultimately, defeat at the hands of our enemies."

That caricature is jolly fun, but the Court was saying something more temperate. It was talking only about the allocation of discretion within particular agencies of government, concerning particular spheres of individual autonomy. However, a fascinating facet of Brennan's passionateness is that he is equally passionate about guaranteeing "free exercise" and preventing "establishment" of religion.

Whenever government action can imaginatively be construed as "establishment," Brennan so construes it, using the Court's baroque "tripartite test." Under that test, government action touching religion is presumptively unconstitutional unless (1) it has a secular purpose, (2) its primary effect neither advances nor inhibits religion, and (3) it does not foster excessive entanglement of government with religion.

However, in 1972, about the time the tripartite test was concocted, Brennan joined in a ruling that, in effect, established a religion, and did so in the name of "free expression."

Jonas Yoder, an adherent of the Old Order Amish, disobeyed the Wisconsin law requiring parents too send their children to school until age 16. The validity of the law was not questioned. Yet the Court upheld Yoder's exemption from that law. Walter Berns, a distinguished constitutional scholar, argues that, in a sense, Old Order Amish is now established religion of the United States because its members enjoy special exemption from a valid law.

The tripartite rule for detecting "establishment" expresses the Court's view that the establishment clause requires government to be scrupulously neutral, not merely between religious sects, but also between religion and secularism. However, Brennan's sensitivity to the slightest trace of "establishment" — the most minute departure from governmental neutrality — illustrates a problem. Such punctilious concern for free exercise, a concern expressed in exemptions from state laws and military regulations, violates the spirit of the tripartite test.

Government, in the form of the Court, becomes entangled with religion in ways that suggest government favors policies that advance religion. Under Brennan's sort of passionate fine-tuning, extremism in defense of "free exercise" and in opposition to "establishment" produces an incoherence that keeps the cottage industry of litigation humming.

Malpractice doesn't exist when you're sick

It had to happen sooner or later. Lawyer Dobbins was wheeled into the emergency room on a stretcher, rolling his head in agony. Doctor Green came over to see him.

"Dobbins," he said. "What an honor. The last time I saw you was in court when you accused me of malpractice."

Art Buchwald

"Doc, Doc. My side is on fire. The pain is right here. What could it be?"

"How would I know? You told the jury I wasn't fit to be a doctor."

"I was only kidding, Doc. When you represent a client you don't know what you're saying. Could I be passing a kidney stone?"

"Your diagnosis is as good as mine."

"What are you talking about?"

"When you questioned me on the stand you indicated you knew everything there was to know about the practice of medicine."

"Doc, I'm climbing the wall. Give me something."

"Let's say I give you something for a kidney stone and it turns out to be a gallstone. Who is going to pay for my court costs?"

"I'll sign a paper that I won't sue."

"Can I read to you from the transcript of the trial? Lawyer Dobbins: Why were you so sure my client had tennis elbow? Dr. Green: I've treated hundreds of people with tennis elbow, and I know it when I see it. Dobbins: It never occurred to you my client could have an Excedrin headache? Green: No, sir. There were no signs of an Excedrin headache. Dobbins: You and your ilk make me sick."

"Why are you reading that to me?"

"Because, Dobbins, since the trial I've lost confidence in making a diagnosis. A lady came in the other day limping..."

"Please, Doc, I don't want to hear it now. Give me some Demerol."

"You said during the suit that I dispensed drugs like a drunken sailor. I've changed my ways, Dobbins. I don't prescribe drugs anymore."

"Then get me another doctor."

"There are no other doctors on duty. The reason I'm here is that after the malpractice suit the sheriff seized everything in my office. This is the only place I can practice."

"If you give me something to relieve the pain I'll personally appeal your case to a higher court."

"You know, Dobbins, I was sure you would someday be wheeled in on a stretcher."

"How did you know that?"

"At the trial I made a mental note that you were a prime candidate for a kidney stone."

"You can't tell a man is a candidate for a kidney stone by just looking at him."

"That's what you think, Dobbins. You had so much acid in you when you addressed the jury I knew some of it eventually had to crystallize into stones. Remember on the third day when you called me the 'Butcher of Operating Room 6'? That afternoon I said to my wife, 'That man is going to be in a lot of pain.'"

"Okay, Doc, you've had your ounce of flesh. Can I now have my ounce of Demerol?"

"I better check you out first."

"Don't check me out, just give the dope."

"But in court the first question you asked me was if I had examined the patient completely. It would be negligent of me if I didn't do it now. Do you mind getting on the scale?"

"What for?"

"To find out your height. I have to be prepared in case I get sued again and the lawyer asks me if I knew how tall you were."

"I'm not going to sue you."

"You say that now. But how can I be sure you won't file a writ after you pass the kidney stone?"

Counties forecasts

Midland, Ector, Crane, Upton, Reagan, Glasscock, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight partly cloudy and cool with lows in mid-40s. North wind 10 to 20 mph. Friday sunny. High in the upper 60s. Breezy in the afternoon. North wind 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

Cooler days anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cooler temperatures can be expected by area residents on Friday. The forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport are calling for clear skies and a high in the upper 60s for the start of the weekend.

Tonight, under partly cloudy skies, the low is predicted to be in the middle 40s with winds out of the north at 10-20 mph. Friday, winds will continue northerly at 10-20 mph.

Wednesday's high was only 5 degrees short of the record high of 89 set for the date in 1978. This morning's low of 44 was 15 degrees above the record low set in 1975.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms, including some that may reach severe levels, were forecast across western and central portions of North Texas today.

A weak cold front was pushing across West Texas this morning, the National Weather Service reported. The front extended from the Panhandle across the South Plains into Far West Texas. Ahead of the front, an area of light rain showers developed over the plains north and west of Abilene.

High pressure over the Gulf of Mexico pushed warm moist air over the eastern two-thirds of the states. Skies were mostly clear over the High Plains and at Laredo in South Texas and skies are partly cloudy to cloudy elsewhere.

Winds were gusting to more than 30 mph at Amarillo and are mostly ranging from 10 to 20 mph.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s and 50s over West Texas and in the 60s and 70s elsewhere. Extremes are ranging from 47 at Amarillo and Lubbock to 73 at McAllen.

NATION

A major spring storm roared through Utah, dumping nearly 2 feet of new snow in the mountains and pelting the Salt Lake Valley with record rainfall before moving today into Wyoming and Colorado.

"The areas that got the most precipitation received 60 to 80 percent of the monthly total in the first two days," said William Alder, meteorologist in charge of the weather bureau's Salt Lake office.

The National Weather Service, which usually reports 2.21 inches of precipitation at Salt Lake International Airport during April, reported 1.93 inches by late Wednesday. The storm more than doubled the 24-hour precipitation record for April 2, set in 1968, at .79 inches.

Dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most currencies in active European trading early today. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

At midmorning, the dollar was quoted at higher levels against all major currencies except the Swiss franc and the Canadian dollar, in line with its strong performance in New York late Wednesday.

Currency traders in Frankfurt, West Germany, attributed the dollar's rise to several factors. They cited growing opinion in the market that the slide in crude oil prices was bottoming out, signs that the Bank of Japan would seek to stabilize the dollar against the yen and a general improvement in U.S. economic performance.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—2.3725 West German marks, up from 2.367

—1.974 Swiss francs, down from 1.9803

—7.305 French francs, up from 7.2625

—2.68075 Dutch guilders, up from 2.6695

—1,631.50 Italian lire, up from 1,610.75

—1.3915 Canadian dollars, down from 1.393

Gold and silver bullion prices fluctuated within a narrow range, unaffected by the dollar's rise.

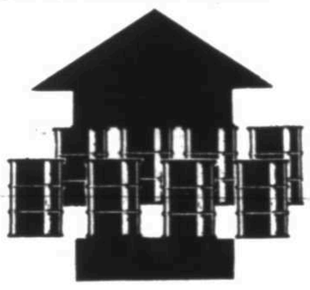

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $336.60 a troy ounce, up from $335 late Wednesday.

The metal was bid at $336.80 in Zurich, down from $337.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $337.23, up from $335.51.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.17 an ounce, up from $5.14 late Wednesday.

Don't dance on OPEC's grave yet, experts warn

By JOHN C. GIVEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid the euphoria over plummeting prices, low inflation, single-digit interest rates and other byproducts of the oil market crash, some voices are warning that it may be too soon to dance on OPEC's grave.

The party will end eventually, the experts say, with a market turnaround that could send industrial economies reeling with a vengance not seen since the early 1970s, if consumers again become complacent about energy.

"The United States is being offered a modern-day Trojan horse of lower prices and increased OPEC supply," Unocal Corp. Chairman Fred L. Hartley said in recent testimony before a U.S. Senate committee. "And, just as the gullible recipients did 3,000 years ago, the nation is cheering as we dismantle our defense to make way for the gift."

"Oil is a strategic commodity," the oil company chairman said. "If the government fools itself into believing that the OPEC price war is the free market in operation, we will be laying ourselves open to disaster."

On Tuesday, Vice President George Bush told reporters that he planned to tell Saudi Arabian officials during a Mideastern trip that U.S. national security is being threatened by the stresses put on the American oil industry by the continuing price free-fall.

Elsewhere, U.S. Energy Secretary John S. Herrington told reporters that the Saudis, dominant members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, "need to be aware of the dire straits the American oil and gas producers are in" and the related industries and banks as well.

On Wednesday, however, a Reagan administration official stressed that the administration still believes in the free market and that the United States has no intentions of pressuring Saudi Arabia on oil price policy.

"I don't think there was a suggestion in his (Bush's) remarks that somehow we're going to be beating up on the Saudis to put a floor under oil prices or to set a floor at a particular level," said the official, who agreed to be interviewed on condition of anonymity.

It is those free market forces that have many experts worried.

Hartley and industry analysts point out that the price crash is forcing domestic producers to slash budgets for capital investment and exploration by as much as half, while growing numbers of high-cost, low-producing "stripper wells" are being plugged because they are no longer profitable.

Despite their low output, stripper wells account for 12 percent to 14 percent of U.S. production, Texaco U.S.A. President Roland M. Routhier recently told the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates the oil industry in that state.

Because the lead time for bringing a well into production averages from five to seven years, and because shutdowns of stripper wells are usually permanent, millions of barrels of daily production could be lost in the United States, the experts say. How much would depend on how low oil prices fall.

At the same time, domestic consumption likely will increase as energy becomes cheaper.

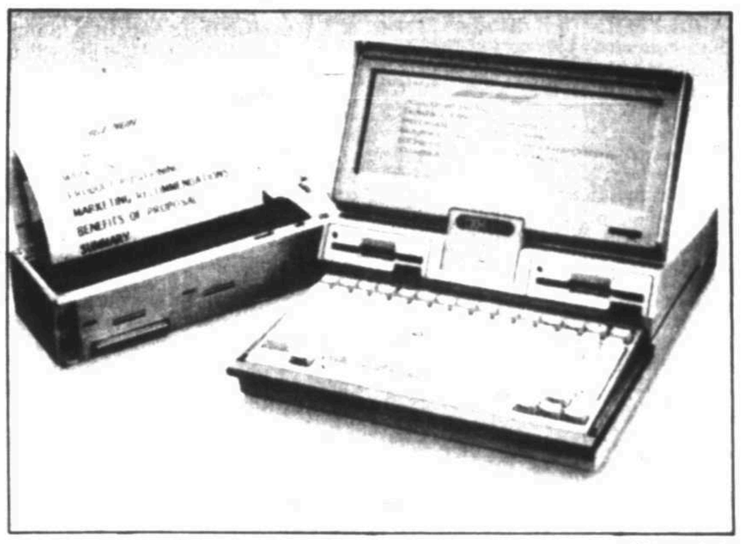

The result, the experts say: more power for OPEC and more vulnerability for the United States as foreign suppliers — particularly OPEC members — provide a bigger share of the U.S. market.

As Bush was speaking Tuesday, contracts for May delivery of oil were plunging below $10 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange for the first time since the mid-1970s. After word of his remarks hit the market, the price shot up to close at $11.27. The price rose to $12.25 on Wednesday, but then slid to $11.52 at the close after the Reagan administration official played down suggestions that the United States had any plans of applying pressure on Saudi Arabia to end the worldwide oil price war.

The market's response indicates its sensitivity to Saudi Arabia's role as the nation which, in the end, calls OPEC's shots in the current price war.

Of the world's total known petroleum reserves in 1984, Saudi Arabia controlled 23.9 percent by itself, while all 13 OPEC members controlled 67.2 percent, according to a report last year by British Petroleum Co. PLC in London.

In the last decade, however, the cartel's grip on world oil supplies has been loosened by competition from some new major sources, including Alaska, the North Sea and Mexico.

IBM introduced a portable laptop personal computer called the IBM PC Convertible. Also available is the optional IBM PC Convertible Printer, a matric printer that easily attaches to the back of the IBM PC Convertible. The unit price, including the printer, is $2,335.

IBM introduces new personal computers

By JOHN MARKOFF
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO – International Business Machines Corp. Wednesday introduced its first new major personal computers in 19 months: a lap-top portable and more powerful versions of its top-of-the-line XT and AT models.

At the same time, IBM cut prices on several existing models.

The announcements were greeted with mixed enthusiasm by analysts, some saying the "Convertible" lap-top computer was overpriced for its performance. They said the new AT and XT models and price cuts on older machines were defensive moves, designed to pressure companies producing IBM "clones" – look-alike machines that often run faster and cost less than IBM's.

"Strategically, IBM recognizes that they're lagging in the AT market," said John McCarthy, an industry analyst at Forrester Research in Boston. "Everyone else out there is selling a faster and less-expensive version. Particularly Compaq AT&T and Hewlett-Packard have been having success making inroads into IBM's market."

McCarthy said the new IBM machines may ultimately have a greater effect on the personal computer market than on IBM itself. IBM's personal-computer line contributed only $6 billion to its total revenues of more than $50 billion in 1985, he said.

The IBM Convertible features two 3-1/2-inch disk drives, a size that has been popularized by Apple Computer Inc.'s Macintosh computer, and is priced at $1,995 in its most basic form. The computer has a detachable display so that it can be used as a desk-top machine with an optional color or monochrome display.

"The positioning of the Covertible is significant," said Richard Matlack, president of InfoCorp, a market research firm in Cupertino. "I think it's the right position. We've been trapped by portability. It's really an easily moveable desktop computer rather than a portable to travel on an airplane travel with."

Matlack also said that the price of the Convertible would erase the price differential that has hindered portable-computer sales. Portable IBM-compatible computers from Data General Corp. and Hewlett-Packard Co. have been significantly more expensive than similar desktop systems in the past, he said.

Official denies Bush will pressure Saudis to make production cuts

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Reagan administration official on Wednesday sought to dispel the notion that Vice President George Bush's mission to the Middle East will be one of "beating up on the Saudis" to achieve oil production curbs.

The United States has no intentions of pressuring Saudi Arabia on oil price policy, said the official, who agreed to be interviewed on condition of anonymity.

"We believe in the free market," the official said.

Oil prices in the United States and Europe rallied after Bush said Tuesday that he will tell the Saudi government during his upcoming visit that plunging oil prices are hurting the U.S. oil industry.

The senior official said that Bush's remarks at a news conference may have been misconstrued in energy markets — and that the vice president had just been trying to point out both good and bad sides of plunging oil prices.

"I don't think there is anything in that appearance of his that would lead one to believe he is being sent there on a mission to work with the Saudis to put a floor under oil prices or anything like that," said the official.

Bush will arrive in Saudi Arabia on Saturday.

In other remarks, the senior official indicated that:

—The administration is satisfied with the current level of the U.S. dollar against other major foreign currencies and that public statements that it should fall further were primarily aimed at forcing West Germany to lower interest rates.

—While buying large quantities of oil from Mexico to help ease its debt crisis might be considered in the future, it is not part of any current rescue package.

The official played down suggestions that the United States had any plans of applying pressure on Saudi Arabia to end the worldwide oil price war.

On Monday, Energy Secretary John S. Herrington cautioned there would be "political implications" for the Saudis if they kept driving down prices by overproducing.

"The energy secretary made it very clear he was speaking only as energy secretary and for himself and not reflecting a consensus administration position," the official said.

As to Bush's comments, the official said: "I don't think there was a suggestion in his remarks that somehow we're going to be beating up on the Saudis to put a floor under oil prices or to set a floor at a particular level.

"Clearly, there are disruptions when prices move too rapidly in either direction, and that's all he was acknowledging."

Although Bush said he was not off on a price-setting mission, he also told reporters on Tuesday that it was "essential that we talk about stability and that we not just have a continued free fall (in oil prices) like a parachutist jumping out without a parachute."

The administration official said statements by top U.S. officials a month ago encouraging further declines in the U.S. dollar were largely aimed at persuading West Germany to reduce a key interest rate.

While Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker had cautioned that the dollar had "fallen enough," Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter all argued that further declines would be welcome.

The dollar has fallen about 30 percent against the West German mark and the Japanese yen in the past year.

"The discussion with respect to the dollar was not totally in a vacuum," the official said. "It was important that we assist the Germans in arriving at a decision that they ought to cut their discount rate. The fact that their currency was strengthening was of concern to them."

Central banks of West Germany, the United States and Japan earlier this month reduced their discount rates, the fee charged to commercial banks for short-term loans, in a coordinated effort to lower interest rates.

The move triggered a drop in other interest rates throughout the economy.

But the official indicated the West German government was initially reluctant to make the move and needed some proding. German officials did not want to see the value of their currency rise any further against the dollar.

MCorp expects loss of $120 million

DALLAS (AP) — MCorp officials said a net loss of $120 million to $130 million could result in the fourth quarter as the bank holding company responds to the drop in energy prices.

The company will make a first quarter provision of $210 million to $220 million to increase its allowance for possible loan losses, an official said in a prepared release.

"We view the action we are announcing today positively, because it should eliminate a large measure of uncertainty relative to the effects of the energy downturn on MCorp," said Gene H. Bishop, MCorp chairman and chief executive officer.

On Monday, Moody's Investors Service reduced its bond rating on MCorp and three other Texas bank holding companies. Standard & Poors, another major New York credit rating firm, cut its ratings on MCorp's senior debt "to reflect expectations taht the dramatic decline in oil prices will materiall affect MCorp's asset quality and earnings."

In the statement released Tuesday, Bishop said "We believe that the planned actions are required in light of current events and reflect, to the extent now determinable, prospects for certain of our customers and the economy in which they, and we, operate."

The announcement was made by Bishop and John T. Cater, company president and chief operating officer.

Officials said earnings should return to more satisfactory levels during the remaining quarters of 1986, but the company could not predict with certainty the level of earnings that would be achieved for the full year.

"... These actions will in no way affect customer service or plans for continued growth in market penetration by our banks and service groups," said Bishop. "Our shareholders, customers and employees should be reassured of the financial strength of MCorp as an organization that can deal effectively with events of this magnitude and still maintain its very strong financial position."

Phillips Petroleum to lay off 2,000 to 2,500 employees

From staff and wire reports

Phillips Petroleum Co. says it will lay off 2,000 to 2,500 employees by July 1 as a result of the continuing fall in oil prices. Phillips spokesman Susan Stoffle said it was presently uncertain how many in the Midland-Odessa area would be affected.

Phillips Chairman C.J. Silas said Wednesday the reduction in the workforce is expected help to reduce annual operating expenses by about $200 million.

The oil company employs 26,700 people worldwide, 6,100 of them at its headquarters in Bartlesville. About 1,000 of the planned layoffs will be in the northeastern Oklahoma city.

Since the end of 1984, the energy company has reduced employment by about 3,500 people, said Phillips spokesman Bill Adams. About 2,500 employees age 55 and older took the company's offer of early retirement last year.

The number of Phillips employees has been reduced by about 11,000 since 1981, mostly through attrition and sale of subsidiaries, Adams said.

"Now we're having to do a little more drastic steps than attrition and retirement programs," Adams said.

Stoffle said notification of layoffs would begin today.

The company has been selling assets to reduce debt incurred in fighting off unfriendly takeover attempts in 1984 and 1985.

In meetings with employees Wednesda, Silas said plunging oil prices prompted Phillips' first layoffs in recent history.

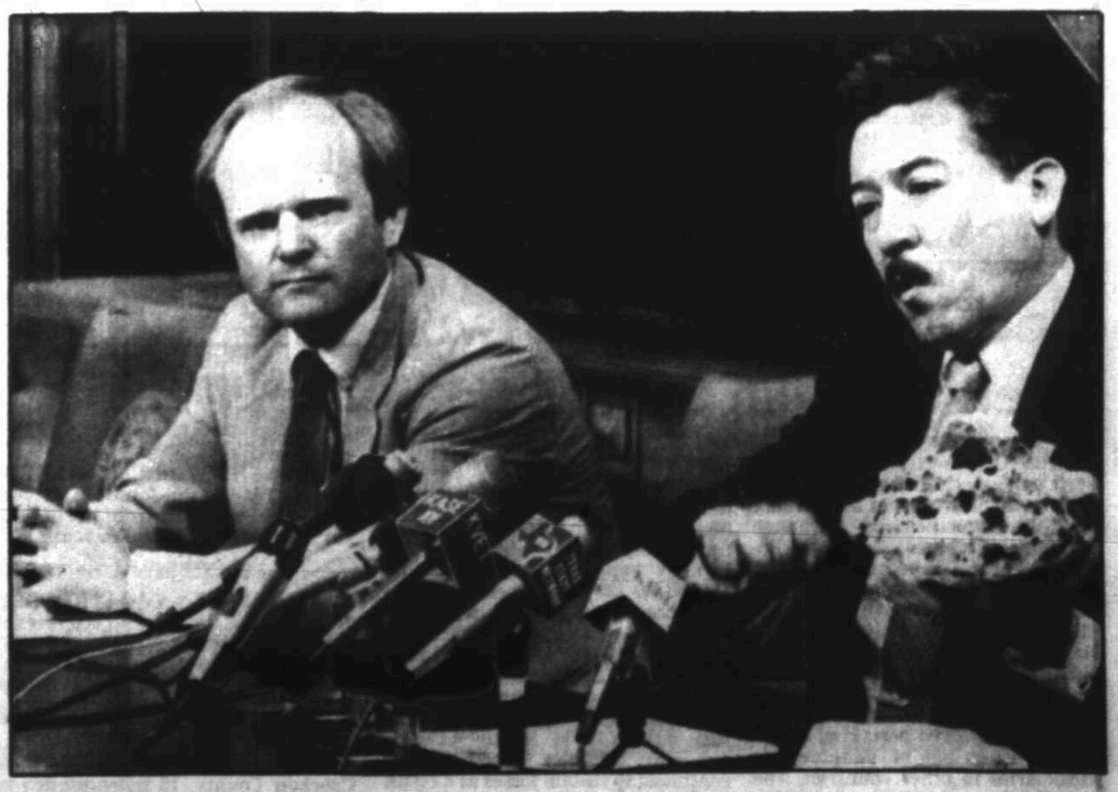

"We had been living here in Bartlesville with rumors ever since the price of crude oil started slipping," Ms. Stoffle said. "As it continued, I think people knew it was only a matter of time."

Glenn Cox, president and chief operating officer, said each of the company's operating groups is being asked to determine which employees should be laid off. He said the layoffs will not be across-the-board.

He said exploration and production operations would be affected most by the layoffs. That will affect employees in Bartlesville, Denver, Houston and London, he said.

Employees who leave the company by July 1 will be automatically vested in the company's retirement plan. The company also will pay up to $10,000 to terminated employees who are unable to sell their homes for their first mortgage balance.

"Although these benefits will cushion the impact on affected employees and their families, we recognize that the next few months will be difficult for many Phillips people," Silas said. "We wish we didn't have to take these actions, but we must in order to maintain our company as a strong competitor in the petroleum industry."

Pipeline opposition

State Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, right, holds a piece of rock which he says is typical in the area where the proposed high-pressure oil pipeline will cross the Edwards Aquifer, which provides drinking water to much of Central Texas. County Judge Mike Renfro, left, and Barrientos contend the oil line would be a hazard to the aquifer.

Chaves discovery flows 7.8 Mmcf

From Staff Reports

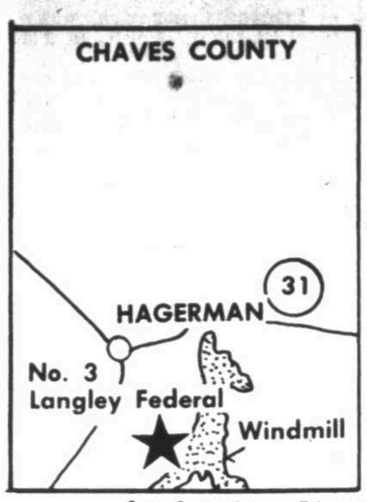

Chaves County, New Mexico gained a Morrow gas discovery west of the Windmill field as READ & STEVENS, INC. completed the No. 3 Langley Federal Com.

Read & Stevens potentialed the well for a calculated absolute open flow of 7.8 Mmcfd from perforations 8,522 to 8,570 ft., no treatment reported.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 8,810 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 8,727 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,537 ft., include the Queen at 1,125 ft., San Andres at 1,695, Glorieta at 2,687, Tubb at 4,530, Abo at 5,071, Wolfcamp at 8,656, Cisco at 7,031, Canyon at 7,809, Atoka at 8,190, and the Chester at 8,720 ft. Pay was topped at 8,522 ft.

Location is 1,190 ft. from south and 2,310 ft. from east lines of Section 14, T15s, R27e.

Wolfcamp producer tests for 173 barrels

Andrews County continues to see drilling activity, with BRAZOS PETROLEUM CO., Midland, completed a strong Middle Wolfcamp producer in the county's Fasken field.

On potential test, the No. 225 University flowed 173 barrels of 41.8 gravity crude, 161 Mcfd and six barrels of water on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 350 psi. Production is from perforations 8,427 to 8,433 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 931:1.

Drilled to 8,797 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,721 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,123 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 3,072 ft., Clearfork at 6,660, Leonard at 7,304, Upper Wolfcamp at 8,250, Midle Wolfcamp at 8,424, and the Lower Wolfcamp at 8,590 ft. Pay was topped at 8,424 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 669 ft. from west lines of Section 25, Block 1, ULS survey, 9 miles southeast of Andrews.

Producers added to Howard County field

Two additional producers have been added to the Moore field of Howard County as ROSEWOOD RESOURCES, INC. completes projects in the area.

Rosewood finaled the No. 1011 Love to pump 112 barrels of 35.2 gravity crude, 36 Mcfd and 75 barrels of water from perforations 3,156 to 3,182 ft.

The second producer, the No. 1011 Massingill, tested to pump 99 barrels of 35.1 gravity crude, 32 Mcfd and 25 barrels of water from perforations 3,160 to 3,202 ft.

Both wells are located in Section 11 of Block 34, T&P survey, 10 miles northwest of Big Spring.

Spraberry Trend area gains two producers

Two operators have completed producers in the Martin County portion of the Spraberry Trend.

BRAZOS PETROLEUM CO., Midland, finaled two wells in the field. The No. 2 Stimson Burley "A" potentialed to pump 30 barrels of 39.6 gravity crude, 34 Mcfd and 115 barrels of water from perforations 7,645 to 9,379 ft.

The operator also completed the No. 1 Williams, pumping 32 barrels of 39.6 gravity crude, 37 Mcfd and 83 barrels of water from perforations 7,377 to 8,941 ft.

HENRY PETROLEUM CORP. tested the No. 2 Elsie "85" to pump 65 barrels of 39.4 gravity crude, 63 Mcfd and 72 barrels of water from perforations 7,953 to 9,447 ft.

Runnels completion opens Fry production

McIVER, INC., San Angelo, opened Fry production in the Harris field of Runnels County with completion of the No. 1 Bryan-Harris.

On potential test, the well pumped 9 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water from perforations 3,665 to 3,669 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of acid and fractured with 7,560 gallons of frac and 120 sacks of sand. Gas-oil ratio is 1,666:1.

McIver drilled the well to a total depth of 4,600 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged it back to 4,390 ft.

The well topped the Gardner at 3,956 ft. and the Ellenburger at 4,464 ft. on ground elevation of 1,900 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,000 ft. from east lines of Section 13, Juliana Voske Cabrera survey 514, Abstract 75, one mile southwest of Crews.

Montero continues to develop Howard find

A correction and additional information on MONTERO OPERATING, INC.'s Howard County discovery, the No. 1 Davis.

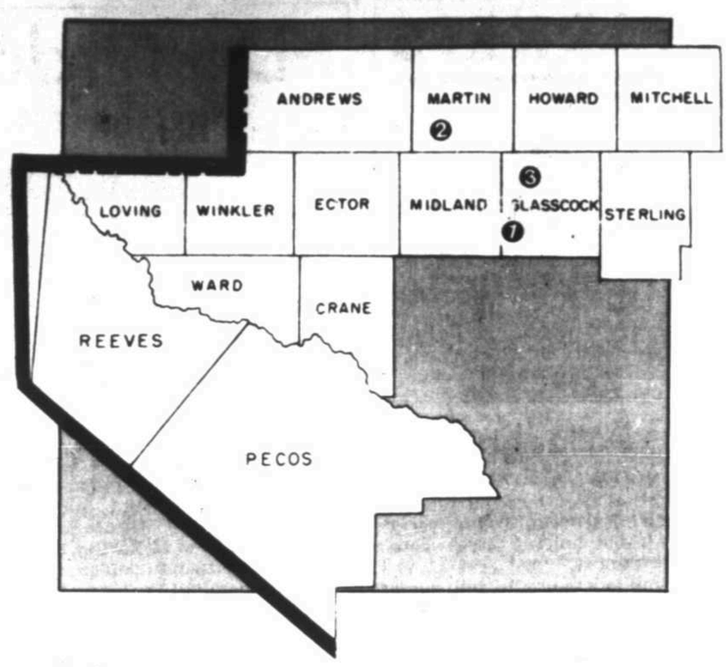

The discovery was potentialed to flow, from the Wolfcamp, 360 barrels of 40 gravity crude and 210 Mcfd on an 11/64 inch choke. The report in the April 1 edition erroneously reported that the well produced from the Spraberry formation.

The firm received a special 500 barrel clearance to run the frac tank full of oil, and used it to potential the well, according to Jim Henderson, partner in the firm. Henderson said he anticipates applying for discovery allowable on the well, and expects to receive it in several weeks. In the meantime, the well is shut in for storage, he said.

Montero plans an offset in the next 60 days, according to Ernest Angelo, company president. According to Angelo, the company considers the prospect to have several other commercial zones, including the Fusselman about 2,400 feet deeper, but was unable to get coring samples because of hole problems. Henderson said any subsequent well will test both the Wolfcamp and Fusselman formations.

Montero has 800 acres in Block 31, T-1-N, T&P survey, with 80 acre spacing, which could result in a maximum of 10 wells on the prospect.

Blocker Energy plans two week delay in SEC filing

HOUSTON (SWN) Blocker Energy Corp. announced that there will be a delay of up to two weeks in the filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission of its 1985 Annual Report on Form 10-K because it has not yet received final financial information from its Venezuelan subsidiary. The Report on Form 10-K was due March 31, 1986. The Venezuelan subsidiary has historically accounted for about one-half of Blocker Energy's operating revenues. During 1985, it transferred certain of its operating assets out of Venezuela to subsidiaries in other countries. The transfers have given rise to complex currency translation issues which have not been finally resolved.

Subject to finalization of the information from Venezuela, Blocker Energy Corporation expects to report a net loss for 1985 of approximately $13.2 million (39 cents per share) on revenues of approximately $47 million. The net loss for 1985 includes a net loss of approximately $3.7 million (11 cents per share) from discontinued operations. For 1984, Blocker Energy reported a net loss of $11,883,000 (36 centss per share) on revenues of $39,732,000, which included a net loss of $2,603,000 (eight cents per share) from discontinued operations. The increased revenues in 1985 resulted from improvements in the Company's overall rig utilization, primarily in North America and Latin America. The Company continued to sustain losses as a result of the prolonged drilling industry downturn which has resulted in depressed drilling and utilization rates.

Blocker Energy Corporation is an international contract driller that owns 37 land drilling rigs and four workover rigs in the United States, Canada, Latin America, the Middle East and Africa.

Economist says price drops could have more benefits

WACO, Texas (AP) — If oil prices continue to drop, the benefits to the state economy will outweigh the negative impact after a certain point, a Baylor University economist said.

"This is a curious thing I've stumbled on," said Dr. M. Ray Perryman, director of Baylor's Forecasting Service and creator of the Texas Econometric Model.

"When you get below $15 per barrel, the negative impact of each dollar drop starts diminishing a lot. And you start seeing a lot of things happen at $10."

The drop from $11 to $10 is the critical contract price for West Texas intermediate crude. More than 90 percent of Texas oil is traded in contract markets and is not as volatile as the spot market. As of Wednesday, the price was averaging about $11.50.

The oil industry already "has taken such a hit" that the ensuing drops do not have as negative an impact on the economy, Perryman said. For example, the drop from $25 to $20 per barrel had a much greater impact than the drop from $15 to $10.

"Every $5 drop is not the same," Perryman said. "What we've found is the negative impact gets less and less for each dollar drop from $15.

"Actually, the state's economy does a little bit better when the price is at $10 than at $11," Perryman said.

While he has not calculated prices lower than $10, Perryman assumed the net beneficial effect would continue.

He emphasized the effect considered the state's economy as a whole, but that some individual cities still would be affected negatively.

"Every dollar drop hurts Houston and Beaumont," he said.

Although the net effect on the state's economy will be beneficial, "the state's budget is still worse off with each dollar per barrel drop," Perryman said.

Perryman estimated the drop to $10 also creates an additional annual demand for 1.5 million barrels of Texas oil, which would help strapped refineries in the Galveston and Texas City areas.

"At $10 per barrel, consumers are already starting to consume a bit more, and a lot of production processes can convert from coal to oil," Perryman said.

While some Texas cities have been reeling from the economic impact from the plunge in oil prices, others such as Dallas, Waco, Austin and San Antonio are benefiting through lower fuel costs, Perryman said.

The impact from dropping oil prices has come in waves, Perryman said. The first wave affected the immediate drilling areas, such as the Midland-Odessa area, some sections of the Texas Panhandle, the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area and the Longview and Kilgore areas.

The next wave hit industries related to drilling such as refineries, corporate headquarters, law and accounting firms.

"That's where you pick up Houston," Perryman said. "To some extent, Midland and Beaumont are affected, but Houston is the big hit."

Energy woes blamed for resignations

HOUSTON (AP) — Some of the 11 directors leaving First City Bancorporation of Texas, one of the holding companies hardest hit by plunging oil prices, said they are vacating their posts to devote more time to their own energy-related businesses.

Both Randall Meyer, president of Exxon U.S.A., and oilman Roy Huffington said they were leaving the board because of heavy demands of their own businesses.

"I'm not standing for re-election because of oil business in general," Huffington said. "I've gotten off a number of different boards."

A First City statement said some of the directors are finding they must devote all of their available time to their own oil-related businesses.

The Houston bank holding company reported a 62-percent drop in profits last year despite the sale of millions of dollars in assets.

Four directors have resigned and seven others will not run for re-election at a stockholders meeting next month, officials said. The bank is replacing only three of the 11 departing directors, reducing the its board from 33 to 25 directors.

Polaroid introduces new instant camera

By ROGER GILLOTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Polaroid Corp. on Wednesday unveiled a new generation of instant camera it hopes will reverse its declining fortunes and lure back consumers who turned to 35mm cameras for better quality.

The company touted the new Spectra as being able to compete head-on in price and quality with inexpensive 35mm rangefinder cameras.

"Spectra is a very important product for Polaroid and its future," said I. McAllister Booth, president and chief executive of the Cambridge, Mass. company.

Polaroid's sales of instant cameras to amateur photographers have plunged from a peak of 9.4 million in 1978 to 3.6 million last year. With the withdrawal of Eastman Kodak from the market, Polaroid hopes to pick up some of Kodak's annual sales of 1 million cameras.

Since 1978, Polaroid has been forced to shrink its workforce by 35 percent to 13,000 instead of 20,000 employees worldwide.

But Polaroid's biggest challenge will be winning back a generation of consumers who shunned instant cameras and turned to 35mm photography for better pictures.

The Spectra "produces photographs in rich, faithful colors with incredible brightness and clarity — photographs we place alongside conventional 35mm photographs with tremendous pride," said Polaroid senior vice president and research director Peter Kleim.

The company's first instant camera, the Polaroid Land, went on sale in 1948 but produced only black-and-white pictures. Polaroid introduced color film 23 years ago.

For Spectra, Polaroid invented a hybrid film chemistry that uses new molecules and a new dye-release mechanism.

Over the next 12 months, the company plans to pour about $40 million into advertising its new product, and it has hired actor Ben Cross, star of "Chariots of Fire," as its spokesman, replacing actor James Garner.

Its marketing campaign will target "consumers between the ages of 20 and 65 who demand quality, simplicity and control in a photographic system," Polaroid said.

The Spectra will have a suggested list price of $225, but Polaroid spokesman Samuel Yanes said dealers probably will sell it for about $150, in the same range as an inexpensive 35mm.

Spectra's film will have a list price of $11.75 for a 10-exposure pack, the same as film for its current 600 series cameras, which Polaroid will continue to sell.

Jim Nugent, operators meet here

From Staff Reports

Texas Railroad Commissioner, Jim Nugent, was in Midland Wednesday to discuss current industry problems and how the Commission could help, according to Harry Spannaus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Among the problems discussed by the group of 20 oil and gas operators were: relief from water disposal requirements; the high cost of liability insurance; the high cost of plugging operations as a result of over engineering; natural gas transportation and state reporting and recording requirements.

Nugent told the operators they should become more active in the political process, get to know their state leaders and pool their political efforts in such groups as PBPA to make their concerns heard and to influence the legislative process.

The operators present at the meeting commended Nugent and the Railroad Commission for its adoption of an emergency amendment to statewide Rule 14, which allows for wells which become inactive on or after January 1, 1986 to have a one year period in which to be plugged, instead of the present 90 days.

Baker expects big losses in first quarter

By LESLIE BERKMAN
Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

Reflecting harsh times in the oil industry, Baker International said Wednesday that it had an estimated loss of $270 million in its second fiscal quarter ended March 31, due primarily to the writedown of assets.

The expected quarterly loss represents a 27 percent reduction in Baker's net worth and compares to net income of $20.9 million in the second quarter last year. But the oil services company said it had "nominal operating income" in the latest quarter before the effect of the huge writedowns. The company said it plans to issue its formal earnings report for the quarter on April 23.

In the year ended last Sept. 30, Baker had net income of $87.7 million, up 24 percent from $70.6 million the year before.

Securities analysts noted that, by keeping its operations nominally in the black last quarter, Baker is in better shape than many of its competitors. "They have earned profits while other companies have lost money in the past two years," said M. Craig Schwerdt, senior vice president at Morgan Olmstead, Kennedy & Gardner in Los Angeles.

Max Lukens, Baker's chief financial officer, said the Orange, Calif.-based company decided to take the latest write-off after watching the number of operating oil rigs in United States drop almost 45 percent in 1986 compared to the year before, as companies that normally buy Baker's drilling equipment have sharply pulled back on exploration and production.

Lukens said the announced write-down affects inventories, plants and equipment. In addition, he said, the company is writing off the cost of restructuring operations, shutting down plants, and corporate "goodwill" — which represents the intangible value assigned to an asset above its normal book value.

Baker has responded to its shrinking market by consolidating operations, mothballing some manufacturing plants and laying off personnel. In the last 90 days, Baker laid off 2,000 workers, including some in its corporate group in Orange, leaving a total worldwide work force of 17,500. Lukens said the layoffs will save Baker $50 million to $60 million a year in payroll and associated costs.

For the fiscal quarter ended Dec. 31, the company sustained an 8.4 percent decline in earnings to $16.3 million, from $17.8 million a year earlier.

Dresser Industries implements new retirement plan

DALLAS (SWN) — Dresser Industries, Inc., has announced that its Board of Directors has approved termination of its retirement plan for salaried employees and the implementation of a new plan effective April 30, 1986. Annuities covering the pension liability at April 30, 1986, have been purchased from a major insurance company.

As a result of this action, approximately $65 million, representing the after-tax proceeds from excess assets, will be returned to the company when appropriate government regulatory agency approval is obtained.

Introducing Briercroft's new TaxBreak CD.

You hear a lot of talk about tax reform these days. But that's all it is. A lot of talk.

Briercroft Savings has actually done something about it. We came up with a one year CD that can defer your taxes on the interest earned. We call it the TaxBreak CD.

Here's how it works.

Deposit as little as $500 in a TaxBreak CD. Then wait. For one year.

When a year's up, you collect your interest in one lump sum. Only at that time are you liable for taxes on the interest earned.

If you'd like to take a break from paying taxes on your interest earned this year, and who wouldn't, sign up for Briercroft's all new TaxBreak CD.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

It's advisable to put spare cash into IRA

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. For the past year, I have been putting $110 a month — 6 percent of my salary — into a pension plan at work. Of that amount, 2 percent is before income tax and 4 percent is after tax. The company matches 50 percent of all money I put into the plan and I get a fixed interest rate on the total amount.

I am 25, will be married next month and have recently purchased my first town house. My future wife and I will have a combined income of about $50,000 a year.

People keep telling me I should open an individual retirement account for the tax break. I believe otherwise and feel the savings plan at work is better than any IRA. My mortgage interest provides a large income tax deduction. Also, having money on hand is important to me right now.

What do you advise?

Doyle

A. The standard advice from this column has always been and continues to be that anyone who can afford to put money into an IRA most certainly should do so.

You don't pay income tax on the money put into an IRA or the money an IRA investment earns until you withdraw it. Passing up an IRA opportunity results in paying unnecessary taxes to Uncle Sam.

With a combined $50,000 annual income, you and your intended certainly should be able to tuck money into IRAs. Since it's obvious she is employed, you can each have an IRA and shelter a total of $4,000 from the taxman yearly. That will cut your tax bite way down.

True, your savings plan at work is a better than an IRA, because one-third of the money you contribute is tax-sheltered, and especially because of the company's 50 percent matching contribution. Like many such plans, that's an exceptionally fine deal for employees. Stay with it.

But, if you have spare cash, you should also have an IRA. So should your future wife.

Now, let me hedge a bit. Note that I wrote "anyone who can afford" and "if you have spare cash." In your situation, it may be that you need to keep some money handy to get your new household started. If that's the case, I can't fault you for holding off on establishing IRAs.

Just don't procrastinate for too many years. The sooner you establish IRAs the better off you'll be — with lower tax bills and healthier retirement nest eggs.

Q. When my husband retired 16 years ago, he chose the highest pension available — one leaving no portion to be paid to me after his death. As a result, the pension will die with my husband.

The Retirement Equity Act of 1984 provides that a surviving spouse must receive a pension after a retired worker dies, unless the surviving spouse has signed a form waiving the survivorship rights. I never signed such a form.

Does this mean I will receive the pension following my husband's death?

A. No. The provision that a spouse has to sign away pension survivorship rights took effect as of August 23, 1984. Your husband started collecting his pension before that. Unfortunately for many widows and some widowers, the rule is not retroactive.

That part of the Retirement Equity Act aims at protecting surviving spouses — wives, more often than not. It gives the surviving spouse automatic pension benefits, unless she or he signs a waiver witnessed by a pension plan representative or a notary public.

Interestingly, the act does not cover government pension plans, on the federal, state or local levels.

Q. I have 34 shares of stock in the company from which I retired some years ago. I also receive a monthly pension from that company. I would like to sell the stock, but I am afraid, if I do, they will stop my monthly pension checks.

Are my worries justified?

A. Not at all, assuming those checks are coming from a qualified retirement plan. That company can't cut off your pension from such a plan.

Candidate: Cases can be handled

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Campbell

In an increasingly litigious world, the state's judicial system must bear the brunt of Texans' growing willingness to sue each other. But Texas Supreme Court Justice Robert M. Campbell believes the system can handle the increased caseload without increasing the number of courts.

"What we need is to streamline the courts that we have," said Campbell, a Democrat who is seeking re-election to place 2 on the Texas Supreme Court, the state's highest civil court.

Campbell, a 51-year-old Waco native who was first elected to the court in 1978, was interviewed in the Reporter-Telegram offices Wednesday.

He said the depressed state economy will prevent the Legislature from increasing funds for the judicial branch for the next four to six years. At the same time, however, the state's increasing population and other factors will cause "an increase in the number of lawsuits which will be filed."

The answer, said Campbell, is high-tech support systems and better administration. The justice, who has served as chairman of the Texas Judicial Budget Board for the past three years, claims his opponents lack the necessary experience to get the court system through the coming crunch.

"No person...can come in and assume that responsibility...with the same economy and the same economic efficiency that I can."

Campbell is opposed in the May 3 Democratic primary by Colin Kelly Kaufman of San Antonio, Ted Akin of Dallas and Jim Brady of Austin. Nathan White Jr. of Plano is unopposed in the Republican primary.

"The real issue is the qualifications and background of the candidates," said Campbell.

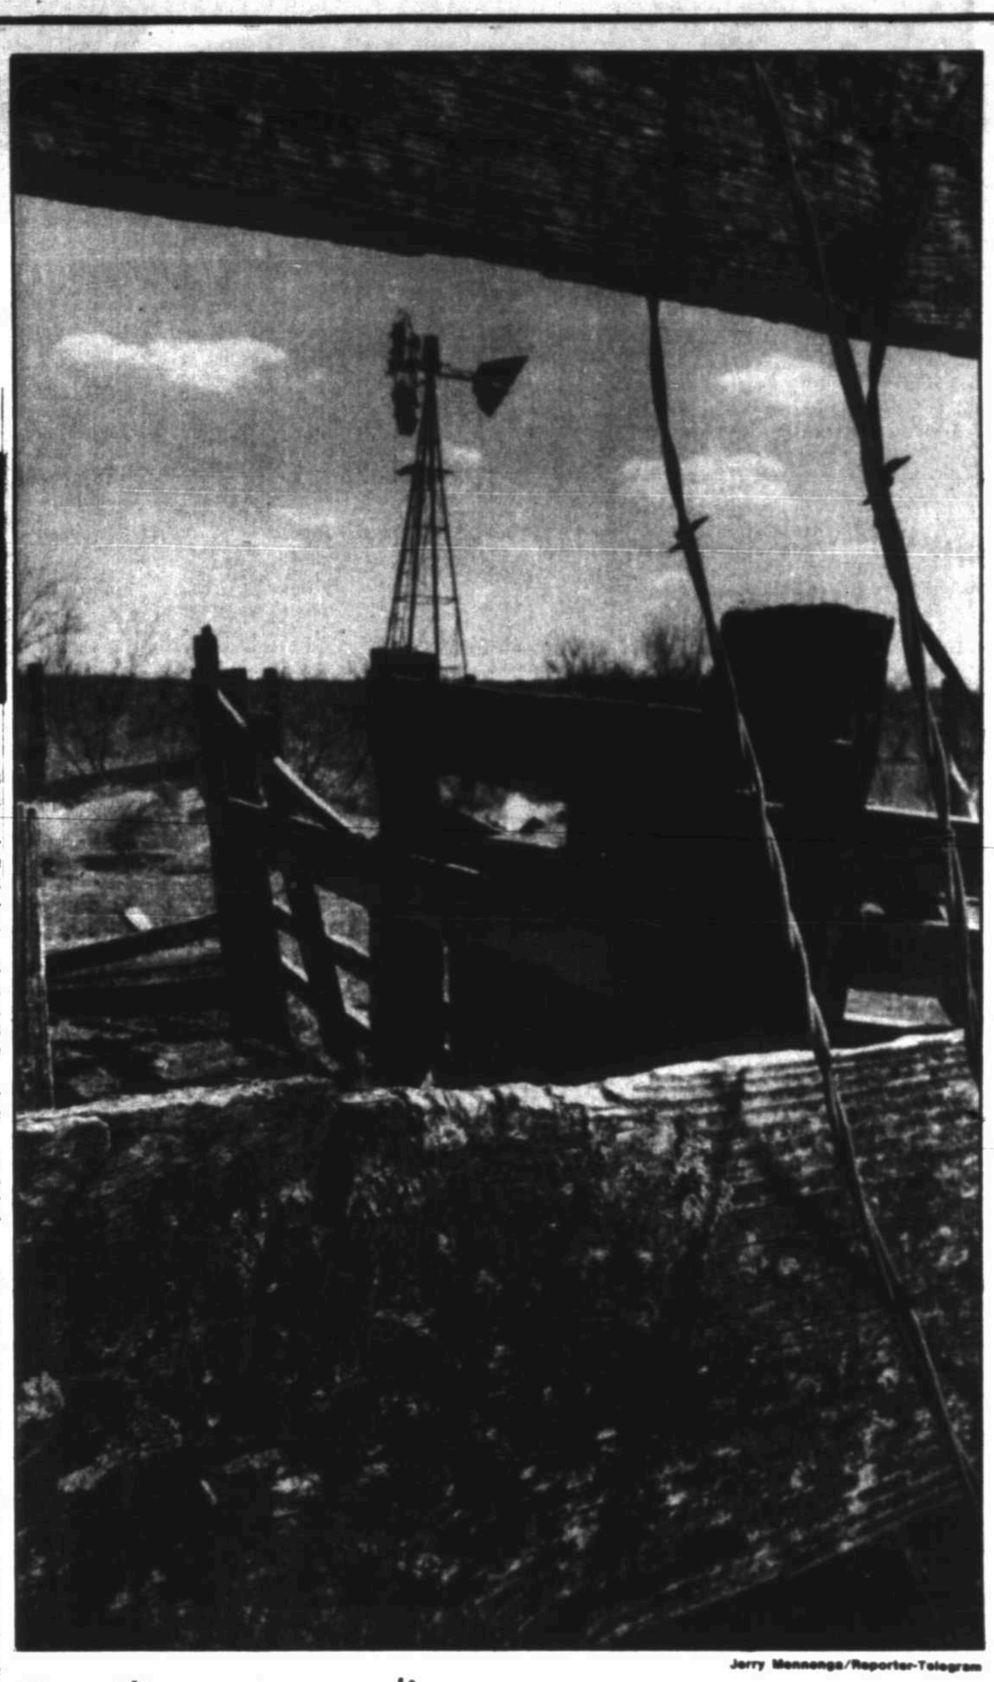

But while he stressed the value of his experience as the incumbent justice, Campbell conceded he had never sat on the bench before his 1978 election, when he unseated an incumbent in the primary. Before his election, he had practiced law in Waco for 14 years after graduating from Baylor University Law School.

Campbell said the code of judicial conduct prohibited him from discussing specific issues to be decided by the court, "so that takes most of the glamour out of a Texas Supreme Court race."

But he did address the issue of tort-law reform, which some organizations have been urging in order to reduce the size of awards granted by juries in civil cases. According to Campbell, that's an issue for the Legislature, not the Supreme Court.

"It's a misconception to say that the Supreme Court can control or do anything about the size of jury verdicts," because when a case passes up from the Texas Court of Appeals, the amount to be awarded has already been set, he said.

Odessa officials speculate record number may vote

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Absentee balloting closed Tuesday, with more than 2,200 ballots cast. The absentee turnout, described by some voting officials as the largest in several years, has prompted speculation that Saturday's election may have a record turnout.

ODESSA — A proposal to implement a Civil Service system for fire fighters and the names of six mayoral and five city council candidates will be on the municipal ballot for city voters to decide on Saturday, while voters countywide will cast ballots for 12 candidates seeking four Ector County school district seats and eight candidates running for three positions on the Odessa College board of trustees.

Absentee balloting closed Tuesday, with more than 2,200 ballots cast. The absentee turnout, described by some voting officials as the largest in several years, has prompted speculation that Saturday's election may have a record turnout.

In Odessa's mayoral race, John Minor is asking voters to give him a second term, while current councilman Vern Foreman is one of five trying to unseat Minor. The other candidates are Lorraine Bonner, Don Carter, Dave Cox and Ernest Cole.

Minor, 34, who now works for Computer Technology Associates in Midland, has been the subject of considerable controversy during his first term.

Bonner, 32, is a former ECISD public information director, who now operates her own public relations consulting firm.

Carter, 57, owns and operates D&L Trophy and Apparel.

Cox, 55, owns and operates two furniture stores.

Cole, 46, is a newcomer to the city who is manager of the Odessa Budget Inn.

Council candidates are Margaret Burton, George Ontiveros and Jaime Rodriguez, who are seeking the District 1 seat being vacated by Thomas Perkins, and J.L. "Barney" Barnett, and Cliff Summar are seeking the seat being vacated by District 2 Councilman Nicky Sheets.

Burton, 48, until recently was director of the Odessa Rape Crisis Center.

Ontiveros, 35, is a bank collection agent.

Rodriguez, 29, is an inventory control supervisor for a trucking firm.

Barnett, 60, operates a detergent-hand cleaner manufacturing firm and serves as president of a company that represents manufacturers and distributes oil and industrial products.

The Ector County school district Place 1 race has drawn three candidates. Jim W. Spencer, 60, is a former ECISD principal who now operates a construction firm. Darrel Carlisle, 30, is a Radio Shack salesman. Olen Arnold, 41, is self-employed.

Seeking the ECISD Place 2 position are: Judy Bridges, 39, a real estate appraiser; George "Buddy" West, 49, an engineer; Don Davis, 45, chief executive officer of a West Odessa oilfield construction firm and president of another firm; Brad West, 39, a self-employed investor and Larry Riley, 39, a bank trust officer.

ECISD Position 3 candidates are: David Dunn, 38, a welding company sales manager and Lee Buice, 54, Odessa College dean of instructional services.

Bill Turner, 53, a long time ECISD board member is running for Position 5 because of boundary changes. Turner is a certified public accountant and partner in an accounting firm. Turner's lone opponent is Fred Pomroy, 36, regional manager for Grant Supply Co.

Odessa College board member Bill Masterson, 70, has no opponent for another term as Place 1 representative.

Seeking the Position 2 slot are: Raymond Chavez, 39, president of an electrical contracting firm; Sandra Shaw, 24, an ECISD speech therapist; Richard Hoffman, 56, owner of a marketing firm and Chuck McHargue, 45, a chemical engineer.

OC Place 3 incumbent Mike Furman, 48, a Liberty Trust employee, has drawn two opponents. They are: Sam Howell, 35, vice president of an engineering firm and Lazar Kirven III, 46, sales representative for a major oil company.

March slated in conjunction with opening of Vets Center

From Staff Reports

"Welcome Home West Texas Vietnam Veterans" will be the theme of the Vet Center's grand opening at 11 a.m. Friday.

In conjunction with the opening, a march for POW/MIA vets will begin at 10 a.m.

A group of area veterans have organized the march in honor of the POW/MIAs and will begin at the Midland County Courthouse, 200 West Wall, concluding at Dellwood Mall, Midkiff and Illinois.

The Vet Center, 3404 West Illinois Ave., is part of a recently expanded nationwide "storefront" program. The center provides re-adjustment counseling and other services to Vietnam-era veterans and their families.

Since returning from active military service, some Vietnam-era veterans continue to experience the effects of the Vietnam conflict. A significant number of those who served in Vietnam have recurring nightmares, flashbacks, employment problems, relationship problems and trouble coping with their Vietnam experiences.

The grand opening ceremony will be held in the north parking lot of Dellwood Mall across from the Vet Center. Parking is available at the mall. A ribbon-cutting, open house and reception will follow at the Vet Center until 2 p.m. Refreshments will be available.

For more information about the march contact Paul Reed at 685-3807 or Doug LaBombard at 697-8613. For more information about the grand opening call Scot Prinz or Rich Burns at 697-8222.

Bond set for murder suspect

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 33-year-old man arrested late Wednesday afternoon on a charge of murder in connection with the death of 30-year-old Miguel Franco Munoz was arraigned in Municipal Court this morning.

Judge J.E. Weatherly set bond for Victor Torres Fernandez at $20,000.

Police Public Information Lt. Mike Davis today said Fernandez, 2611 Kermit Highway, was arrested about 5:15 p.m. in the 5600-block of Mapp Street in far West Odessa.

Munoz's body was found about 8:30 a.m. Tuesday outside of his mobile home in the Radio City Mobile Home Park, 1400 S. Crane Ave.

According to police spokesman John McAhon the results of an autopsy ordered by Peace Justice Manuel Valles showed the cause of Munoz's death was a single shotgun blast to the head.

Davis said investigators had not yet determined a motive in the shooting.

Reports indicate investigating officers found two holes in Munoz's mobile home that appeared to be bullet holes. A neighbor told officers she heard no unusual noises prior to the time Munoz's body was discovered Tuesday morning.

Midlander honored by being named Kentucky colonel

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

At age 92, Jack Howard of Midland got commissioned and immediately looked for action.

He became a Kentucky colonel.

"I'm going to take charge of Midland, I think," he said.

But, he has no particular orders for anyone.

"I'm retired," and, he noted in good humor, "and I'm just waiting around for the end."

The honorary title was bestowed upon him by Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, the Blue Grass State's first woman governor.

Howard's nephew, Midland lawyer Hal Rucker, who's a seasoned colonel and a Kentucky native, recommended his uncle for the honor.

"He's just a great young 92," said Rucker, 64. Rucker's son, Dean Rucker, 30, also is a Kentucky colonel.

Howard offered a ready response about how he felt to be a colonel.

"I don't know," he said. "I've never felt it before."

The honorary status was instituted in 1812 by Kentucky Gov. Isaac Shelby during the War of 1812. And in the 1930s, The Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels was created as a non-profit charitable organization.

The colonels get together once a year to celebrate. This year, about 2,000 colonels will dine at the Galt House in Louisville, Ky., to celebrate The Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels on the eve of the May 3 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. "I've been to the Kentucky Derby once or twice," Howard said.

Dean Rucker said his father "dreamed up" the idea for a Kentucky colonel's commission for their uncle.

"We surprised him with it," he said. "This was one thing the 'old man' needed which he didn't have. He has a young girl friend. He's pretty active. And he's didn't have a Kentucky colonel's certificate."

Dean Rucker said his great uncle catches a flight to Houston once a month to visit his 81-year-old girl friend, Lucille. Both are widowed.

If times are bad, think positive, try to be optimistic

When times are a drag and the straits are dire, there's more to do than tear up stock certificates and do a little hop-scotching on the way to the sidewalk.

There's no point in window jumping. It grieves a lot of folks. And some of the news media only would sensationalize it. It makes for "good copy," exciting but horrifying photographs, and enthralling documentaries for the next generation. Don't.

It's not worth cutting your life short.

Don't give up. Ever.

Think positive. Work at being a die-hard optimist. Just because the day is cloudy doesn't mean that there will be overcast days henceforth. There's sunshine somewhere. Sunshine. If you must, "con" yourself into believing that times will get better if you will but take a bit of positive action a day at a time. Think success. Be kind. I'm trying. But so far, I haven't been the sterling example. Don't use me as a barometer. I'm still groping.

We need to focus on the "good news" in our lives by — if nothing else — celebrating life everyday.

We're here alive, and that's a gift.

If we begrudge life, it will only further embitter us. And friends will "drop dead" about us like falling leaves in autumn and early winter. There will be no joy or happiness, and we will forget to celebrate the gift of life.

We will forget to pray thankfully and to praise God's magnificence and instead will pray selfishly out of desperation.

We humans have a knack for that — beseeching for material security when our lifestyles and very livelihoods are threatened. And these times certainly are threatening.

There is an economic slump all about, and Dwight Eisenhower's Domino Theory seems to be taking off and knocking 'em dead. Prices fall, and jobs are eliminated to ensure the survival of The Company. It doesn't always work.

Rumors of war are unsettling. Skirmishes are afield. Economic battles are waging. Starvation and poverty have claimed many. The good-time nickelodeon is slowing down.

Being no guru, I have no panacea. I do have concerns. I have fears. We all do. When our self-reliant stance fails flat, we have family, friends, the government and the unseen but Almighty God to turn in trying try to restore ourselves to serenity and to peace.

Don't jump.

Permian Basin history papers to be presented at meeting

From Staff Reports

The history of the Permian Basin will be discussed in four papers presented at the spring meeting of the Permian Historical Society.

Registration for the meeting begins at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Falcoln Room in the main building of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

At 11 a.m. Lorene Barbee of Big Spring will discuss "The Development of Howard College." After lunch three papers on the development of water resources in the Pecos River valley will be presented by Janet Neugebauer, Lisa Shippee Lambert and Richard Mason. The three are staff members at the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech University. The meeting and society membership is open to the public.

The society was founded in 1959 by Midland and Odessa citizens to promote the study of history in this region. Since then, membership in the group has expanded to include people in all Permian Basin towns and in several other states. The society meets twice a year and publishes "The Permian Historical Annual." The current issue contains the first part of an article by Dr. James Colwell on the history of the Midland Air Field Training program during World War II. An article by Dr. Diana Davids Olien of Midland on teaching school in oil boom towns and entries on the histories of Howard College in Big Spring and on Martin County are also in the magazine. Copies of the Annual can be purchased from Eileen Welch at 682-0839.

Midland officers of the society include, Mrs. Welsh, treasurer; Sonia Lusk, secretary; and Drs. Roger and Diana Olien, edititors. Dr. Duane Leach serves as president and Dr. H. Warren Gardner is vice president. Both men are from Odessa.

Hearing to decide if snake to be listed as threatened

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Whether the Concho water snake should be listed as a threatened species and what effect such listing will have on the Stacy Reservoir and Dam will be reviewed at 7 p.m. today in a public hearing at the Runnels County Courthouse in Ballinger.

Stacy Reservoir is a project of the Colorado River Municipal Water District and is planned to provide water to West Texas cities such as Midland, Odessa, San Angelo and Abilene starting about 1990. Midland will be represented by Deputy City Manager Fred Poe.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in January recommended the snake be placed on the threatened species list. A representative from that agency's headquarters in Albuquerque, N.M., is expected to be at today's hearing.

Numerous public officials, community leaders and other citizens are expected to join with CRMWD, which holds a permit from the State of Texas to build the reservoir, in presenting statements.

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm will head a list of state officials who will appear, including State Sen. John Montford of Lubbock, State Sen. Bill Sims of San Angelo, State Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring, State Rep. Dick Burnett of San Angelo, State Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls and State Sen. Grant Jones of Abilene.

CRMWD President John L. Taylor and General Manager Owen H. Ivie will present arguments showing why they believe the snake should not be listed and what the effect would be on the economical development of West District if the snake is listed as threatened.

City asks TESCO to change to sodium vapor street lights

From Staff Reports

The city of Midland has requested Texas Electric Service Co. to begin a program to replace all the street lights in Midland with new, more energy efficient sodium vapor lights.

"Replacing the mercury vapor lights with sodium vapor lights will result in more light output for less money," said Fred Poe, deputy city manager. "It costs $58 per light to make the change. But this cost will be recovered from energy savings in about five years."

TESCO owns and maintains the street lights under an agreement with the city, which is then billed a monthly charge for each street light. The city determines the locations for the lights and makes requests for any changes or additions to the system.

The new sodium vapor lights, which give off a yellowish hue, will use about 40 percent less electricity than the existing mercury vapor lights which give off a bluish hue.

The first phase has begun. It will take about six months to complete and will consist of changing about 1,360 downtown area and major thoroughfare street lights from 400-watt mercury vapor lights to 200-watt sodium vapor lights. The new system will produce 10 percent more light.

The program's second phase will begin immediately after the first phase is completed and will take about 12 months to complete. It will consist of changing about 2,600 residential street lights from 175-mereury vapor lights to 100-watt sodium vapor lights. The new system will provide about 35 percent more light.

Midlanders held on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men and two women were being held in county jail this morning in lieu of bonds of $50,000 apiece after being charged Wednesday with possession of heroin.

The four were arrested Tuesday after Midland Sheriff's Office officers raided a house at 809½ W. Louisiana and seized about $200-250 worth of suspected heroin, according to Sheriff's Investigator Wayne Frost.

A fifth man arrested Tuesday was later released, according to Sheriff's Sgt. Jim Newsom.

The four who were charged are Rudy Perez Bernard, 35; Ramon Bermea Carrasco, 32; Patricia Ann Menchaca, 25; and 19-year-old Jessica Rodriguez.

Bonds were set by Justice of the Peace Judy Massingill.

Agronomist to discuss Nicaragua

From Staff Reports

Marcus Wespi, an agronomist working for the Swiss government in Nicaragua, will give a slide show about his work at 7:30 today at El Calvario Methodist Church, 1209 Garden Lane.

Wespi, who is vacationing in West Texas before returning to Switzerland, has been working for the Swiss Cooperation for Development, a joint project between the Swiss and Nicaraguan governments.

For the last three years, Wespi has been project director for Chinorte, a rural development program in the northern agricultural regions of Nicaragua. Chinorte's projects have included farm-to-market road construction, pest control, reforestation and irrigation projects.

Today last day to register to vote

From Staff Reports

Today at 5 p.m. is the last day to register to vote in the May 3 primary, according to Bettye Calvert, elections administrator.

Persons may register at her office, 709 W. Washington Ave., until 5 p.m. today.

In the May 3 primary voters will decide which Democrats and Republicans will be on the ballot in the November general election. The May election will feature such races as the Republican and Democratic gubernatorial nomination, the 21st District congressional race and county races.

COLONEL

"I'm 92, and she's 81," Howard said, "and we can't do anything but hold hands. We get together, hold hands and have a great time together. She's a wonderful girl." They've known each other since 1930.

"She's young," Dean Rucker said of his great uncle's girl friend. "He's got a long-distance romance. He's quite a card. He's an amazing fellow. I hope I'm doing that well when I'm that age."

Howard retired at age 67 in 1960 as chief traveling auditor for Western Union Telegram Company. He was born Jackson Connor Howard in Gregg County in East Texas on Aug. 11, 1893, and moved to Dallas in 1903. At age 14 in 1907, he began his office career with Western Union as a $28-a-month address clerk. "I wrote a good hand," he said of his penmanship. Before that, he was a Western Union messenger boy.

"I went up and up and up until I was doing pretty good," Howard recalled. "I got up in the world." As chief traveling auditor, he was responsible for an eight-state territory. "Of course, I wasn't making much money back in those days. They didn't pay much money. But I made a little money, saved a little money," and received benefit of the company pension when he retired. He was credited with 53 years of service with Western Union. "And now, I'm up in the world."

Howard didn't make much hullabaloo over his new status as a Kentucky colonel. He joined the list of other colonels, including comedians Bob Hope and Red Skelton, former astronaut John Glenn, crooner Bing Crosby, late President Lyndon B. Johnson, late British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Kentucky Fried Chicken's Harland Sanders.

"It's all right," he modestly said of the honor. "I'll accept it."

The colonel status basically has left his life unchanged.

"I do a little resting. I keep busy with my papers and things and walk."

Baby's death ruled suffocation

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The official cause of death of a 7-month-old baby, whose body was found in a trash dumpster Tuesday morning after he was earlier discovered missing from his crib, was suffocation.

Police Public Information Lt. Mike Davis said the autopsy report received today indicated that Orlando Hernandes Banuelos Jr. died as a result of a sock being stuffed down his throat. Dsvis said the sock was retrieved during the course of the autopsy.

The baby's father, 17-year-old Orlando Hernandes Banuelos Sr., 706 Laredo Drive, has been charged with murder in the youngster's death. He was arraigned Wednesday and Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly set bond for Banuelos on the murder charge at $25,000. He was transferred to the Ector County jail, posted bond Wednesday before noon and was released.

The child's body was found just before 11 a.m. Tuesday in a trash dumpster at the Third Edition Apartments, 2549 W. 10th St. during a search by police officers and relatives after an aunt, Helen Gomez, had reported the child missing about two hours earlier. At the time of the initial report, she told investigating officers the baby was heard crying in its crib about 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Gubernatorial hopefuls to debate

From Staff Reports

The League of Women Voters of Texas Education Fund will sponsor a debate among the Republican candidates for governor from 7 to 8 p.m. April 14. The debate will originate in Houston and will be televised statewide, including on KMID-TV, Channel 2.

Participating will be the three Republican gubernatorial candidates, former Gov. William P. Clements, former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and Congressman Tom Loeffler.

The debate will be moderated by Steve Smith of KHOU-TV, Houston. Panelists will be Paul Reyes of the Houston Chronicle, Carol Kneeland of WFAA-TV in Dallas and Kevin Merida of the Dallas Morning News. The studio audience will be made up of newspaper, radio and television reporters from around the state.

A spokesman for the league said efforts were made to arrange a debate among the Democratic gubernatorial candidates but the League was unable to secure and coordinate dates and air time for the program.

The spokesman added the league is planning to present a televised debate between the winners of the Democratic and Republican primaries before the November general election.

While recognizing that many people pay little attention to Supreme Court elections, Campbell does not favor switching to an appointive system. But there are some proposed changes in the selection process which "merit study," he said.

These include having non-partisan elections; having Supreme Court races in the off-year, so they won't be overshadowed by other races; and dividing the state into 10 districts, each of which would elect its own Supreme Court Justice.

Woman reports loss of jewelry

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman reported the loss of about $3,468 worth of property in a Wednesday burglary of her home.

Sheri E. Robertson, 1304 E. Oak, told Midland police she was missing two $1,200 rings and two $200 watches, along with other items, according to reports.

In other reports, the Dillard's store in the Midland Park Mall, 4511 N. Midkiff, reported a Wednesday theft in which nine Gucci accessories worth a total of about $1,244 were taken.

Among the missing items were a $206 purse, a $196 duffle bag and a $195 duffle bag, according to police reports.

Young, old at most risk

Pedestrians below age 15 and over age 64 account for 40 percent of all U.S. pedestrian fatalities. Twenty percent of all pedestrians killed are under 15 and about 46 percent of all pedestrians injured are under 15. Older adults account for about 20 percent of all pedestrian deaths and 6 percent of all pedestrians injured.

Interest on late payment of tax refunds may total $38 million

AUSTIN (AP) — IRS Commissioner Roscoe Egger says interest paid on overdue income tax refunds will be less this year than in 1985 but it still may amount to $38 million.

Last year the IRS paid interest of $42 million on refunds that were mailed 45 days after a May 30th deadline.

"The public is filing later and later," Egger told a news conference Wednesday. "and it takes us 10 days just to open the mail."

"We simply cannot meet the 45-day deadline in all cases," Egger said, "Even though we have more people and more computers. We will get half the returns we handle between now and the April 15th deadline."

Egger estimated there are still 5⅛ million returns to be processed in the Austin regional center alone, which serves Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana, Kansas and Oklahoma.

He said the IRS has 40 percent more computer capacity this year and additional telephone lines manned by an additional 700 employees.

"We are doing a good job in taxpayer service but we can do a better one," Egger said.

U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House subcommittee that monitors IRS operations, said income tax service had improved substatially since last year.

"We have no backlog from the past year," Pickle said, "but we still have problems. We are not satisfied with the amount of interest paid for late refunds. We think their error correction rate is still too high."

Both Egger and Pickle said they did not know of any serious instances of tax returns being destroyed or mislaid.

Boys find WWI-vintage artillery shells

EL PASO (AP) — Two boys rabbit-hunting in the desert found live World War I-vintage artillery shells with enough firepower to blow up a living room, an official said.

Matthew Connelly, 12, and Chris Jennings, 9, carried the rusty, 14-inch howitzer shells about a third of a mile before they cleaned up the mud and realized the explosives could still blow up.

"I saw the detonators and set it down," said Matthew.

The boys told a neighbor who contacted police.

Although the shells had been fired, the crude detonator used in those days didn't go off when the shells landed in the desert sand, said Army Capt. Kurt Carlson of the 41st Explosives Ordnance Detachment at Fort Bliss.

"They were still good. If you had one in your living room and it went off, that piece of your home would be gone," said Carlson.

The shells were found Monday several miles west of the Castner Range northeast of El Paso. The range was used by the Army at Fort Bliss for target practice from 1928 to the early 1960s.

Carlson said the boys were endangered when they touched the shells, which had point-detonators and would have blown up if dropped on the tip.

"Explosives get less stable with age. They're not like wine. They don't get better, they get worse," he said.

The shells were detonated in the desert Monday evening by Carlson and other members of the ordnance unit.

Sierra Club endorses White

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White has done more to protect the state's environment than any previous Texas governor, a lobbyist for the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club said Wednesday.

The Sierra Club formally endorsed White in his bid for re-election at a Capitol press conference. The organization, which played a prominent role in a developing the comprehensive water plan voters approved in November, also endorsed incumbents Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Attorney General Jim Mattox and Agriculture Commission Jim Hightower in their respective races.

The group is also backing Big Spring Rep. Larry Don Shaw in his District 69 House race.

When asked what makes Gov. White stand out from the crowd of challengers to his office, Kramer pointed to White's 1984 creation of the governor's task force on hazardous waste management.

Kramer also praised White for establishing an advisory committee on oil spill responses and for appointments to the Parks and Wildlife Commission. The appointments, Kramer said, have helped transform the commission into "a resource protection agency, and not just a hunting and fishing agency."

The Sierra Club bases its endorsements on a variety of factors, including the records of incumbents on environmental and natural resources management issues, the viability of a candidate for public office, and responses to questionaires the club distributed to all candidates for public office.

Former Gov. Bill Clements, considered by many as the primary challenger to White, was "very spotty in terms of environmental issues" during his term as governor, Kramer said.

The other GOP candidates, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Congressman Kent Hance, did not fare much better in the Sierra Club's eyes. Kramer said the League of Conservation Voters gave both men low scores in a review of their voting records on environmental protection issues in the U.S.House.

Kramer said the club had most difficulty in determining who it would support in the race for Buddy Temple's position on the Texas Railroad Commission. The group ultimately decided to endorse three candidates for that opening: Victoria Sen. John Sharp and Dallas attorney John Pouland, both Democrats, and Miles farmer Ralph Hoelscher, a Republican.

Board wants to revoke Yarbrough's parole

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough, who faces federal charges of conspiracy and bribery, could be back in prison if the state Board of Pardons and Paroles is successful in its attempt to revoke his parole.

The board has issued a warrant seeking to revoke Yarbrough's parole, which could force him to complete the remaining five years of his seven-year sentence, officials said.

Less than two years after being paroled on perjury and bond-jumping convictions, Yarbrough, 44, and another Houston man were indicted Tuesday on charges they offered bribes to a bank president in a money-laundering scheme.

On Wednesday, the parole board in Austin notified federal officials in Houston that they will seek revocation of Yarbrough's parole.

Harry Green, parole board attorney, said the decision was based on Yarbrough's arrest Tuesday.

The allegations could be sufficient to return Yarbrough to prison even if he is not convicted, Green said.

A hearing on the revocation request has not yet been set.

In a federal indictment returned this week, Yarbrough is accused of offering to launder money for undercover agents posing as drug dealers.

The four-count indictment accuses Yarbrough and another man, George Neeley, 50, of offering thousands of dollars in cash bribes to a Houston-area bank president to allow the conversion of cash to cashier's checks without filing federal reports.

Don Yarbrough

Neeley was released on a personal recognizance bond Wednesday by U.S. Magistrate Karen Brown after pleading not guilty to the charges.

Yarbrough remained in federal custody pending a bond hearing scheduled today.

STATE IN BRIEF

Trade between U.S.-Mexico topic of three ITC hearings

EL PASO (AP) — Increased trade between the United States and Mexico is the topic of three hearings scheduled before the International Trade Commission, an official said Wednesday.

The hearings, set for Monday and Tuesday in Texas and later that week in San Diego, Calif., are part of a one-year study by the commission, said Jack DeVore, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, a member of the Senate Finance Committee,

"The border economy is dependent on a healthy flow of trade between the United States and Mexico and the effect of falling oil prices in Mexico virtually ensures reduced trade between the two countries this year," Bentsen said in a prepared statement.

The first hearing is scheduled for Monday at 9 a.m. CST at the Sheraton Fairway Inn in McAllen. The commission will hear witnesses starting at 10 a.m. MST Tuesday at the Texas Commerce Bank in El Paso. A hearing later that week is scheduled in San Diego, said DeVore.

State senator resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Ed Howard of Texarkana today resigned to become a lobbyist.

"After 14 years of public service, I have simply decided that it is now time to step aside in order to devote more time to family and business activities," said Howard, a Democrat.

A special election to replace Howard is scheduled for Aug. 2. Howard, said he would not endorse any candidate in that race.

The district he has represented since January 1979 includes the counties of Bowie, Camp, Cass, Delta, Franklin, Gregg, Harrison, Hopkins, Lamar, Marion, Morris, Panola, Red River, Titus and Upshur.

Howard will join the Dallas law firm of Jenkens, Hutchison and Gilchrist as the firm's director of governmental affairs in Austin.

LCRA signs agreement

AUSTIN (AP) — The Lower Colorado River Authority announced Wednesday that it has signed an agreement with a small North Texas producer to bring electricity to the city of Austin.

Valley View Energy Corp. of Dallas will transmit its electricity part of the way to Austin using LCRA transmission lines.

Valley View is building two 50-megawatt plants in the vicinity of large feed lots near Hereford and Gruver. The plants will use cattle manure as boiler fuel and will supply Austin withn 100-megawatt capacity for 30 years, the LCRA said.

Bonuses ruled constitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — A law authorizing state agencies to pay bonuses to employees who come up with money-saving ideas is constitutional, Attorney General Jim Mattox held Wednesday.

Mattox, however, said no funds have been appropriated for the State Employees Incentive Commission in 1986-87.

He also said another state agency "may not spend donated funds to finance awards made by the commission to state employees."

Groups claim insurers' ads misleading

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two consumer groups claimed Wednesday that insurance companies launched a campaign to trick the public into thinking the current insurance crisis stems from problems in civil law.

Tani Adams of the Texas Center for Rural Studies said insurance executives banded together "to market the idea that there is something wrong with the civil justice system in the U.S." Ms. Adams claims the insurance industry and big business plan to spend $6.5 million on ads to convince Texans to support changes in tort law, or injury cases.

But George Christian, an organizer of Texas Civil Justice League, a groups working for tort reform, said the league will spend "more than $1 million." Christian said outrageous judgments put defendants at a disadvantage in civil suits and drive up the price of insurance. For some doctors, cities and hospitals, insurance companies have dropped liability coverage or drastically raised premiums, Christian said.

Rebecca Lightsey, spokesperson for Alliance for Legal and Insurance Equity, accused insurance companies and corporations of working in collusion to shift the spotlight from insurance to tort law.

"The insurance and corporate defendants want to limit liabilty for their own mistakes," Ms. Lightsey said. "And they want to do it on the backs of those who have been maimed by defective products or poisoned by toxins in the environment."

Insurance companies, Ms. Lightsey said, "are fabricating a tort crisis." She said, "In fact, when challenged, insurance representatives admit that changes in the law won't make insurance more affordable or more available."

In the 1970s and early 80s, insurance companies charged premiums below cost because high interest rates offset lower prices. Consumer groups say insurance companies want to make up for their "irresponsibility" all at once. Tort reformers say the growing number of lawsuits and large judgments have put the squeeze on insurers.

Ms. Adams said the number of lawuits actually have remained stable, as have the dollar amount of judgments. She said medical malpractice suits have declined in recent years and half of the judgments are less than $8,000.

But Rick Gentry, Insurance Information Institute spokesman, said he thinks Ms. Adam's figures are misleading.

Alleged bribery at DFW to be investigated

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Attorney General's office will take part in an investigation of alleged wrongdoing at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, as requested by a task force conducting the probe, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

"What they've attempted to do is give us information that we may want to take to a grand jury or take to the governmental contracting agency so they understand that certain gifts were given," Mattox said in Dallas.

"We will also be looking to determine whether or not anyone engaged in any commercial bribery," Mattox said.

Dallas Deputy Police Chief Greg Holliday, head of the task force, said Tuesday he would meet with representatives of Mattox' office to discuss allegations that public officials have accepted gifts from contractors.

"We will present evidence of gifts made to public servants," Holliday said. "They're interested enough to come down here from Austin."

Steer clear of car-buying blues with knowledge

By JACK R. NERAD
Copley News Service

There's nothing quite like the proud feeling you get when you drive away from a dealership in a brand-new car. It's a happy day, made all the more pleasant by the realization that you have battled the system and arrived at a deal you can live with because, for all its glamour and hoopla, the new-car buying experience can be a trying time.

First of all, there are so many choices today — Hyundai, Yugo, Suzuki are just the newest in a list of car purveyors that grows longer with every passing day. As auto journalists we have trouble keeping up with the new offerings, so for the consumer who dabbles in the new-car market every four years or so, it must be a horrendous task. Second, the new-car marketplace is one of the last bastions of good old American horsetrading. To get the best deal the buyer must bargain with the salesman, and for many it's an uncomfortable experience. But there are several ways the car buyer can make the process easier:

■ Research the market. As we said, there are so many choices that if you simply plunge into dealerships you're liable to get hopelessly confused. You're much better off to pick up several of the enthusiast publications and a couple of the guides, which will give you objective looks at the new-car offerings.

■ Assess your needs. Too often car buyers dive into the market without even bothering to determine what kind of car fits their particular circumstances. Take a hard look at the type of car you're currently driving and examine what you like about it and what changes you'd like to see in your next car. Determine your passenger-carrying and load-hauling requirements. Then assess your finances to see what cars you can afford. A careful job here will limit your selection to reasonable number.

■ Shop several dealerships. Once you have a list of four or five cars that you have deemed worth considering in light of your research on the market and your own needs, it's finally time to enter the dealerships. Remind yourself that you're on a fact-finding mission only. You don't want to buy the first time out; you simply want to get a firsthand look at the possible choices. You also should take time to look over the various dealer operations, because once you buy you'll be taking your car back to that dealer for warranty service.

■ Test-drive the cars. All new cars look pretty slick in the showroom but what really matters is how they feel on the road. Insist on test driving the models you're interested in — and not just around the block. After all, you're contemplating an investment of several thousand dollars and will have to live with the car for four years or so.

■ Make an informed emotional decision. Many "experts" will warn against making an emotional car-buying choice, but since you're going to have the car for a long time you'd better at least like it, if not love it. This is not to say you should throw away good money on your ultimate dreammobile, but going with a weak second choice to save a few hundred dollars over a period of four years is clearly no bargain, either. If the car doesn't put a smile on your face, don't buy it.

■ Don't quest after the ultimate goal. There is a truism that the average guy will claim he paid more for his house than he really did and less for his car. Cocktail party talk about great deals is cheap and usually worth what it costs. Search for a total deal — price, financing, warranty coverage — you're happy with and let it go at that. Remember, if you finance the car, it's a combination of cash down and total monthly payments that counts, not some largely fictitious cash-price number.

■ Get the whole deal in writing. Be sure all special conditions of the sale — such as used-car trade-in allowance and financing rates — are put down in writing. This doesn't just protect you, it protects the dealer from the vargaries of his sales force.

With these thoughts firmly in mind, you can make the car-buying experience work for you. Remember, there's nothing like driving home a new car. And following the right steps will keep that warm glow burning.

Balanced diet sheds pounds

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

It's only March, but thousands of dieters have already gained back the pounds they lost after making a New Year's resolution to shed excess weight. Going on a low-calorie diet to drop a few pounds in a hurry may only compound the dieter's weight problem. Between 20 percent and 50 percent of weight lost on very low-calorie diets can be water and lean muscle tissue rather than fat.

Muscle tissue burns 2½ times the calories as fat tissue. So as the percent of body fat increases, the metabolism slows down and burns fewer calories. That's why a dieter can actually gain weight while eating less.

The combination of a balanced diet with moderately reduced calories and exercise to lose weight gradually is the most effective way to achieve a permanent weight loss. Exercise burns calories, preserves the lean muscle tissue that already exists in the body and builds more muscle tissue to further increase calorie burning.

Many people avoid exercise because they think it requires special equipment, extra time or is too strenuous for them. That may be true of some sports activities including running, tennis or aerobic dance. However, brisk walking and even doing sit-down exercises at the office desk can help dieters if the exercise is done regularly.

Dieters should learn how to use the basic food groups to eat a well-balanced diet and to develop an exercise program that fits their lifestyle.

The Extension Service has a 1986 "Fit for all Seasons" calendar available which can help dieters plan a sensible weight-loss diet and exercise program for the remainder of the year. It can be ordered for $2 by check or money order from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Reed McDonald, Rm. 101, Texas A&M University, College Station 778-2113.

The County Extension Office also has free publications on nutrition, meal planning and family fitness.

Activity tips for families with spring fever

By LINDA ANDERSON

Linda Anderson

Spring (and summer) is here, and with them come emphasis on families — celebrations such as graduations, weddings and backyard barbecues — and the great outdoors.

The following information may be of interest to those already inflicted with spring fever:

■ The makers of Downy fabric softener have initiated "Mothers Day Hotline" for people who can't decide what to get Mom on her special day (May 11 this year, just in case you have forgotten). Each day between now and May 11, interested shoppers can call 1-800-55-IDEAS and hear a pleasant female voice suggesting a different gift for each day.

Be prepared, however, to listen to a minute or two of commercial about how wonderful mothers are and how much Downy appreciates them. So far, the two suggestions I know of have been herbal teas and — in a slightly suspicious coincidence — a ceramic teapot with matching cups.

■ Ever wanted to go to camp when you were a kid and never got to? The National Wildlife Federation is offering three Conservation Summits this year, which the organization says are "designed for families, single adults, senior citizens and even single-parent families."

The Summits, to be in the Blue Ridge Mountains in North Carolina, Brunswick, Maine, and Colorado's Rocky Mountains, will include nature courses and such activities as hiking, white water rafting, backpacking and nature photography.

For more information write to Summit Vacations, National Wildlife Federation, Dept. BNB, 1412 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, or call (703) 790-4363. But hurry — the Summits begin in June.

Also, for children aged 9-17, the National Wildlife Federation will offer Wildlife Camp, located in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Included will be hobby swaps, sports and "mini-quests" on various nature subjects. Sessions will be 12-days or 15-days, and one is called Teen Adventure Week (June 22-July 1). Prices range from $410 for the teen week to $517 for a 15-day session. Write the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

■ If a family vacation is on the summer agenda, a check-up for the car might be in order. The Car Care Council has prepared several booklets for automobile owners. For a pamphlet on auto fluids and filters, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Filters, Care Care Council, 600 Renaissance Center, Detroit, Mich. 48243.

For a pamphlet on "How to Keep Your Brakes From Letting You Down," send a quarter and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Brakes at the same address. Cooling system maintenance is discussed in a booklet offered by the Automotive Cooling System Institute. For this one you have to send 50 cents and another stamped, self-addressed envelope to Cooling, 222 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

■ If the baby in your life is the cutest one in the world (but which baby isn't?), you may want to enter him or her in the Angel Bunny Million Dollar Baby Contest, which kicked off Feb. 1 and will end June 30. Entrants must be newborn to 2½ years old as of Feb. 15. Rules and entry forms are available where Angel Bunny toys (by Mattel) are sold, and in certain issues of American Baby, Baby Talk, Baby!, Parent's, Working Mother and True Story magazines.

Tire basics important

Associated Press

Your tires are one of the most important parts of your car. But learning tire basics and spending a few minutes each month checking your tires will save you a lot of money.

There are three kinds of tires — bias, bias belted and radial. The terms refer to how various plies of material are stacked inside the tire. A bias tire (the cheapest) has two or four layers of material such as polyester, with cords running diagonally across the tire. A belted bias tire has an extra belt of fabric running completely around the tire under the tread layer. Belted bias tires are often mid-priced and have better wear and traction qualities than bias — and are usually a better buy in the long run.

Radial tires are quite different. The body plies of a radial run at a 90-degree angle across the tire. Then from one to three belts, usually made of a steel cord, wrap the tire. A steel belt doesn't make the tire flat-proof, but does make the tread more rigid, which reduces wiggle and increases mileage. Radials also improve your car's handling. They are usually more costly, but last longer.

Here are some tips on tire care:

■ Check air pressure frequently, preferably when tires are cool.

■ Get new valve stems along with new tires.

■ Check for cuts and uneven wear.

■ If you feel a new shimmy or vibration, check your tires immediately. Even if the problem isn't the tires, it's going to affect them.

BETTER BUSINESS
Laws can't cure business malpractice

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

A constantly recurring question of Better Business Bureau representatives whenever business schemes, rackets and other malpractices are discussed is: "Why don't they pass a law?"

Obviously, in the mind of the questioner, laws are a panacea for all the ills of the marketplace. The only response is that if it were that simple to prevent criminal acts, there would be no murder, no burglary, no fraud, no crimes of any kind.

An inspection of the statute books, local ordinances and regulations of the various federal agencies will reveal that we have plenty of laws to protect the consumer.

Granted, enforcement is sometimes lacking. We know of many examples which reveal difficulties in controlling business malpractices through laws alone.

A classic was the one some years back which involved two predatory entrepreneurs who were known to have promoted more than 20 different schemes allowing them to take millions of dollars over a 15-year period. They were finally convicted and sentenced to up to four years in prison.

Certainly, if it takes 15 years to catch a couple of con men, passing a law isn't the perfect solution to marketplace problems.

In recent years there have been several instances where information documented by the BBB from customer complaints indicated that there was a strong possibility that fraud existed, but, for one reason or another, successful prosecution would be difficult.

The real answer to crimes in the marketplace is twofold — consumer education and self-regulation by business.

All the laws in the world will not protect a customer who persists in shopping blind. Furthermore, the mere passage of laws could penalize a legitimate businessman's operation, bogging him down in governmental red tape until he could no longer continue in business. This, too, could add to the cost of doing business, which would certainly be passed along to the consumer.

John K. Schmidt is president of Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Reader questions safety of red dye used in holiday candies

By SONJA HENIZE

Q. I thought red dye was banned from food. I saw it again in M&M's Holiday candy. I recall a few years back that M&M took that color out of their candies, and now they've put it back. I don't understand this whole situation. Could you please explain to me why they did it when red dye is harmful to your health? Linda Dalessio, Atlantic City, N.J.

A. Not all red coloring agents are banned from foods. The two that were banned, in 1976, are Red No. 2 and Red No. 4 after data indicated that they might cause cancer. Red No. 3 and Red No. 40 are permitted by the Food & Drug Administration and are widely used by the food industry.

Elizabeth Kinney, external relations supervisor at Mars, Inc., explains that because of the controversy in 1976 concerning red food coloring, the Mars company discontinued red in the color blend of M&M's even though the particular red color the company was using was and is still one of those approved by the FDA.

Holiday Chocolates is a new product designed to be sold during the Christmas season, and Kinney says this candy will continue to contain the red and green colors approved by the FDA.

Conversely, Jane Brody, in the "Nutrition Book," states, "Coal tar dyes are suspect, especially Red No. 40, which replaced the banished reds and is now the most widely used food color. It promotes the growth of cancer in rats. Red No. 3, another widely used food color, has been shown to partially block the uptake by rat brain cells of a crucial neurotransmitter called dopamine, which carries messages between brain cells and, in people, has a pronounced effect on moods and behavior. Red No. 3 is also suspected of causing cancer."

"More than 10 percent of the foods Americans eat are artificially colored," states Brody. "If there is a battle to be fought against food additives, it's best directed at these synthetic food colors, which have little or nothing to do with good nutrition or the availability of an adequate and healthful food supply."

Q. What is the difference between white chocolate and regular chocolate? Amy Hamel, Santa Cruz, Calif.

A. White chocolate, if it can be called that, is a confection that does not contain any chocolate; that is, there are no cocoa solids in it whatsoever.

Each cocoa bean has about 50 percent fat, called cocoa butter, and 50 percent liquid, which is the chocolate part. Cocoa butter can be made into white chocolate by the addition of sugar and an emulsifier, plus flavoring. It has the taste of sweet fat.

Virginia Ames, a registered dietitian with the Hershey Company, informs me further that although white chocolate is supposed to be composed of cocoa butter, some of it may simply be produced from vegetable oil.

Q. I have heard that poultry farmers electrocute chickens and do not sufficiently bleed them. Is this what causes the blackness and redness surrounding the bones on well-done cooked chicken?

A. Tom Foster, president of Foster Farms, a large poultry-raising operation in California, replies to your question:

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations with regard to the humane slaughter of livestock require that the animals be made insensitive to pain prior to slaughter. The regulation states, 'Electric stunning devices produce an electric shock blocking the nerve sensitivity to the brain.'"

"This procedure stuns the birds before their throats are slashed, a process that is recognized as the most humane method of slaughtering poultry or other livestock. When properly performed, this procedure does not affect the bleeding process."

A number of readers have written complaining about the discoloration of chicken meat around the bones. In a previous column, several explanations for this problem were offered by "experts," but Mr. Foster's theory seems to me to be the most logical one.

He says, "Rather than being related to the stunning process, the darkness around the bones is more likely the result of the product's having been frozen at some time before use by the consumer. The bones of young fryers are porous, and freezing and thawing may accelerate seepage from the bone marrow into the tissues, resulting in the darkened bones and meat. This does not affect the wholesomeness of the chicken."

Reader Feedback: Frances Arnold, Payette, Idaho: "One of your readers wanted information on how to skin hazelnuts. I agree that after getting them all cracked open, that brown skin is very distasteful to bake with or to eat.

"Spread them all out in a shallow baking pan and bake in the oven at 200 degrees for about an hour, maybe a little longer. The browned skins will take on a cracked appearance. Stir them a few times, then pour them out on a bath towel and lay another towel over them. Rub and roll them vigorously between the towels. A few won't let go of their skins, but with a good 90 percent success rate, it's well worth it. Their flavor is greatly improved and it's so easy."

DEAR ABBY

Sister confesses story of father's abuse

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My sister recently informed me that eight years ago she was sexually abused by our father. She said he didn't go "all the way," but he sexually abused her nevertheless. Our mother found out (how, I don't know), and all three went for therapy.

At the time, I knew something was wrong, but I didn't know what. I am all mixed up about my feelings now. Why did my sister tell me about it? I have always loved my father. Am I supposed to hate him now?

Actually, I think I am madder at my sister for telling me. She seems to want to hurt our father — which I can understand — but she didn't care who else she hurt in the process.

When I asked her why she told me now about something that happened eight years ago, she said she thought I should know what our father did to her, and it shouldn't be kept a secret.

What I want to know is, Why do you think she told me, and who should I be mad at? — ALL MIXED UP

DEAR MIXED UP: I don't think you should be mad at anybody. Perhaps your sister wanted to open the door for a discussion, in case your father had abused you, too. (It is not uncommon for a father who sexually molests one child to molest the siblings.)

Your sister is obviously still very bitter and angry; she needs more therapy to resolve these painful feelings. She also needs your patience and understanding.

DEAR ABBY: "Big in Flagstaff" asked if a person who is 5 feet 10 and weighs 370 pounds can fit into an airplane seat going overseas. You said, "If you go first class, you should have no problem."

Obviously neither you, "Big" nor his travel agent has ever been in the coach section of a modern airliner.

If any of you had, you would know that all one needs to do is lift the arm rest between any two seats, and you will have enough space to accommodate a baby hippo.

Your advice to consider first class is both ludicrous and expensive. Coach fare from Flagstaff to London is $613 round trip. First class is $3,606. If "Big" were to buy two coach seats, it would cost him $1,226, and he would fly comfortably, as opposed to flying first class for $3,606.

You blew it on this one, Abby. — C.J. PADFIELD, LA MESA, CALIF.

DEAR C.J.: What's fare is fare. You'll get no argument from me.

DEAR ABBY: I dated a super man for a year. He boards with a family who loves him like a son. He gave me a ring and we planned a February wedding. This other family found out about me and threw him out, so he moved in with me. On the fourth day he cried and wanted to return to the family he was living with. He said he missed the children. So that's where he is living now.

I told him I needed six months to think things over, but now he's pressuring me to marry him.

My friends and family keep asking me when I'm going to get married. It's kind of embarrassing because we bought our wedding clothes but never went through with the wedding. (I kept the ring.)

What should I do? He is a very fine person, but he can't seem to bring himself to cut the ties with the people he's living with. I need help! — ON THE FENCE IN AURORA, ILL.

DEAR ON: Better to sit on the fence than jump off on the wrong side. A man who can't seem to cut the ties with the people he's living with is not mature enough to marry. Take your sweet time and don't resume the relationship until you're absolutely, positively sure he's able to leave the nest.

DEAR ABBY: My wife insists that it's the man's place to initiate sex. She says if I'm going to wait for her to initiate sex, there won't be any.

I'm tired of always being the aggressor. I've told her I would find it exciting if she would approach me for a change, but she says it's not ladylike and she wouldn't feel comfortable making the first move.

She has never turned me down, and it's very satisfying to both of us when it happens, so what should I do? — TIRED OF ARGUING

DEAR TIRED: Stop arguing. Your wife is replaying the "tapes" of the old admonitions she heard repeatedly as a girl. ("Nice women aren't aggressive — it's unladylike.")

With counseling she will learn that it's OK for a woman to be aggressive in the bedroom. Everywhere else she can be a "lady."

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Video terminal use can cause problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Video display terminals are appearing just about everythere in America.

They are used to write business letters and home budgets; to check flight schedules for airline tickets and show the price at supermarket checkouts; to write this story, and edit it too.

But concentrating on a terminal may aggravate an existing vision problem, and strain may occur because of glare, improper lighting or using prescription lenses that are fine for other uses, but not reading from a screen, according to the American Optometric Association.

The result, the group warns, can be headaches, blurred vision, itching or burning eyes, eye fatigue, flickering sensations, neck and muscle pain and even double vision.

Tell the doctor the type of work, how many hours per day, size and type of screen, its color, and any symptoms associated with the work.

In addition, they point out that vision is only one part of overall human health, and it is a part related to other problems. So, getting the most from an eye exam depends on telling the optometrist or ophthalmologist about other health problems also.

Things to tell the eye doctor, the association says, include:

- Any chronic health conditions, especially high blood pressure, diabetes or allergies.
- Any prescription or nonprescription medicines being used, including birth control pills and acne medication with tetracyclines.
- Hobbies and sports. These activities involve different vision than work, and special glasses or eye protection may be called for.

Paper napkin packages provide child crime prevention tips

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Napkins are not just for catching meal tidbits anymore because of a recent promotion by the James River Corp., a paper products manufacturer.

The company announced recently that it was including dollar bill-size flyers in its paper napkin packaging that would provide tips for parents on how to prevent abduction and other crimes against children.

The program is meant to complement the many other ventures that print the photos of missing children on paper grocery bags and milk cartons.

The company said that a series a leaflets will be placed in more than 3.5 million of the companies' 140-count napkin packages.

Some of the napkin-based messages that James River encourages parents to discuss with children include:

- Don't wander unaccompanied in supermarkets or shopping malls.
- Stay away from adults who might be following in cars or on foot.
- Never get into a car or go anywhere without parental permission.
- Alert parents or teachers if someone asks you to keep a special secret.

New spread rivals jellies for sales share

Hearst News Service

It begins with a sea of sugar, white and seemingly endless. Floating in the white are bottles of popular brand jams and jellies. A voice reads a simple poem:

"Once upon a time in the land of jams and jellies. Mostly sugar and empty calories were filling our children's bellies."

That's the opening of a TV commercial that may be seen in the near future, plugging a new product already on grocery shelves.

The new product is Sorrell Ridge Conserves — no, not "preserves" — a new bread spread that is challenging the big jam and jelly makers, including Smuckers, Kraft, Welch and Polander on a thoroughly '80s battleground: Sugar content. The new bread spread is basing its marketing on the fact that the conserves contain no added sugar at all.

According to Sorrell Ridge representative Carol Pressman, the spread's slogan says it all: "The fruit and nothing but the fruit." Pressman, vice-president for sales and marketing for Allied Old English Inc., which distributes Sorrell Ridge, says the conserves are made from nothing but fruit solids, water and fruit juices, boiled down to a jam-like consistency. The resulting mix is 42 percent water, 58 percent fruit solids.

That, she says, is in extreme contrast to the other bread spreads on the market: According to federal guidelines, in order to be called a "jam," a product must contain only 8 percent fruit solids, 35 percent water and 57 percent added sugar solids.

The benefits of conserves without sugar are obvious to dieters and many others, Pressman says. Many people with diabetes are forced to limit their consumption of sugar and corn syrup, but the conserves are allowed by many doctors. Parents of hyperactive children who adhere to the Feingold Diet, which reduces sugars, have been allowed to add the conserves. And for calorie-conscious dieters, right on the label, next to the words "fruit only," each conserve lists the number of calories per teaspoonful — which is less than 15 in all cases.

Three-pointer or not? Check the NCAA replay

DALLAS (AP) — A decision by the NCAA men's basketball rules committee to impose a three-point goal and the use of instant replays to correct timing and scoring errors has met with mixed reviews by college coaches.

One praised the moves, another called the three-point goal "silly."

Notre Dame's Digger Phelps was less than enthusiastic about the rules changes, announced Wednesday by Dr. Edward S. Steitz, secretary-editor of the rules committee and athletic director of Springfield, Mass., College.

"It would be nice, one of these years, to let the game settle down and see what we really have," Phelps said. "If anything needed to be addressed, it's still the foul situation at the end of the game."

Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss thinks the idea will work.

"I think you'll see a lot of dramatic comeback attempts and a lot of dramatic losses," Bliss said. "I think it will be positive."

UNDER THE new rule, three points will be credited for a shot made 19 feet, 9 inches from the basket and beyond.

In another rules change, coaches no longer will be charged with a technical foul if they leave the coaching box to protest errors involving time, scoring and alternating possession.

Louisville assistant coach Bobby Dotson questioned the need for the three-point goal.

"The game was going awfully good," he said. "I don't see why they need to mess with it. I can't understand why they would put something like this in.

"I think it's silly."

Steitz said the three-point goal would ease the rough play beneath the basket.

"It's going to force teams to play more defense away from the basket," Steitz said. "People will say 'you are putting the little man back into the game' and that's good."

Steitz stressed that instant replays would be used only to clarify timing and scoring questions.

AN INCIDENT that occurred in Kansas City during the NCAA Midwest Regional two weeks ago was a factor in the decision to use the replay, Steitz said.

A clock malfunctioned, causing 15 seconds to be lost during a game between Kansas and Michigan State, and the incident was blamed for blemishing the Jayhawks' victory.

Steitz said conferences experimented with different distances for the three-point goal before adopting the 19-9 distance.

"Some conferences used the pro distance (23-9) and didn't find that desirable," he said. "As a result of a questionnaire, most of the coaches preferred 19-9."

In another rules changes, the committee eliminated the 28-foot hash marks and the combination count while a player is being closely guarded in the mid-court area.

Under the new rule, the entire front court will have a five-second count on a closely guarded player for either holding or dribbling the ball.

"Having just one count eliminates a lot of confusion," Steitz said.

He said the committee also singled out several existing rules that would be stressed next season.

They include illegal use of hands and arms during rough post play; ejection of players because for flagrant intentional fouls; illegal screening away from the ball and three-second violations.

THE COMMITTEE also listed several items for experimentation including:

— Creation of a rear boundary arc concept. Instead of requiring 10 seconds to cross midcourt, teams would have to advance to the arc within 10 seconds.

— Widening the free throw lanes from 12 feet to the NBA width of 16.

— Reducing the size of the backboard as a safety factor. The size reduction would be below the basket to help prevent player injury.

Edmonton's Coffey, Vancouver's Naslund set marks

Associated Press

It was a night for individual goals — and assists — in the National Hockey League. Team objectives, however, fell a bit short.

Edmonton's Paul Coffey set a single-season record for a defenseman of 47 goals in the Oilers' 8-4 victory over Vancouver, and Montreal's Mats Naslund became the highest-scoring left wing in the history of the Canadiens in a 6-3 triumph over Detroit.

In addition to Vancouver, the Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers fell short of their targets. Chicago missed a chance to win the Norris Division by losing to Minnesota 7-5, and New York could have clinched a Patrick Division playoff berth had it no lost 5-2 to Philadelphia. Vancouver could have clinched a playoff spot in the Smythe Division.

NHL

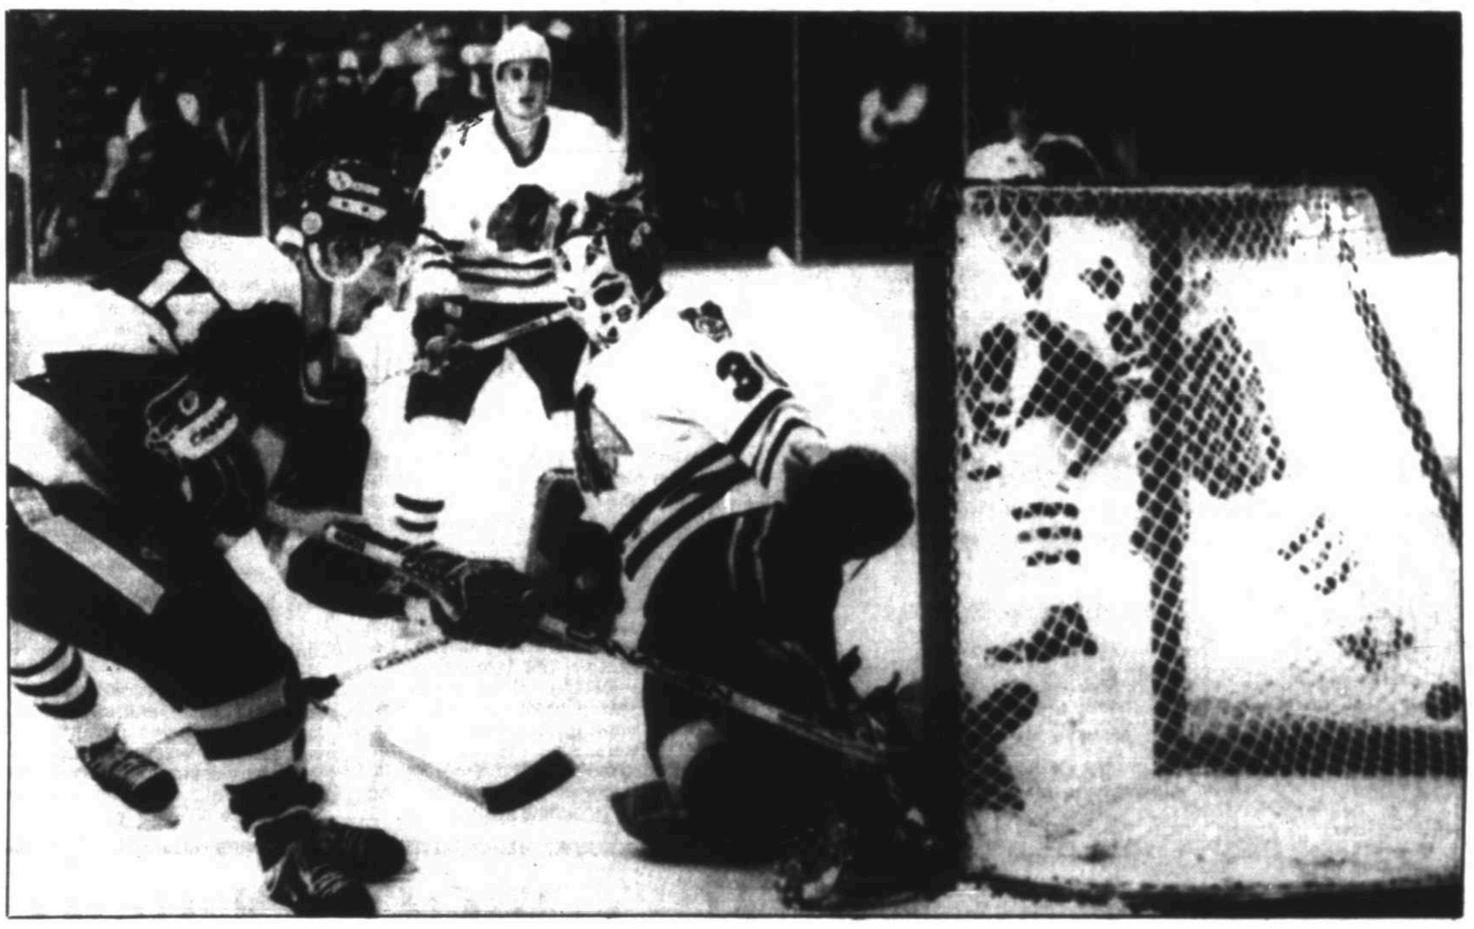

Coffey scored his 46th and 47th goals to break the NHL record for goals by a defenseman set by Boston's Bobby Orr in 1974-75. He also aasisted on two other goals and his four points gave him 137 for the season, two short of Orr's 1970-71 mark.

"I once thought those records would be impossible to get," Coffey said. "It was a tremendous feeling," he said of his record-breaking goal at 2:44 of the second period.

Coffey scored at 19:37 of the first period to tie Orr. His attempted pass from the right faceoff circle deflected off the skate of Vancouver defenseman Doug Lidster past goalie Wendell Young. That came 11 seconds after Coffey appeared to have scored, but his shot from the blue line was deflected by teammate Jari Kurri for his league-leading 65th goal.

Coffey's record-breaker came on a typical end-to-end rush, not entirely unlike many of Orr's goals. Coffey split the Vancouver defense pair of Doug Halward and Rick Lanz, shifted the puck to his forehand and slid it under Young as he was going down.

Edmonton's other goals were scored by Wayne Gretzky, Dave Hunter, Esa Tikkanen, Kevin McClelland and Mike Krushelnyski. Gretzky had a goal and an assist in the final period, increasing his season total to 211 points, one short of his own record.

AP Laserphoto

Minnesota's Scott Bjugstad fires a shot past Chicago goalie Murray Bannerman during Wednesday's match in Chicago.

Canadiens 6, Red Wings 3

Naslund's assist on rookie Claude Lemieux's first NHL goal gave the speedy Swede 106 points, one more than Steve Shutt's old mark. Mike McPhee scored twice Montreal took a two-point lead over Boston in the battle for second place in the Adams Division.

McPhee's first goal came 52 seconds after Naslund notched his 42nd of the year at 17:05 of the second period. McPhee scored his second midway through the third period.

"I wanted a goal so I could have the puck on a plaque, but I'll settle for an assist," Naslund said.

North Stars 7, Blackhawks 5

Kent Nilsson broke open a close game with a pair of second-period goals and linemate Dennis Maruk contributed two goals and an assist for Minnesota. The victory moved the second-place North Stars within one point of the Blackhawks in the Norris. Minnesota also got goals from Dirk Graham, Scott Bjugstad and Keith Acton.

Flyers 3, Rangers 2

Tim Kerr scored twice, including the tie-breaking goal at 10:17 of the third period for Philadelphia. New York has a three-point lead over the Pittsburgh with two games left for each team, including a head-to-head meeting in New York on Sunday night.

Kerr tied the game 2-2 with his career-high 55th goal at 18:11 of the second period, then delivered the game-winner at 10:17 of the third period to extend his NHL power-play record to 33 goals for the season.

Islanders 7, Penguins 2

Mike Bossy scored his 59th and 60th goals of the season and Tomas Jonsson also scored twice. Bossy's second goal came in the third period and was the 534th of his career, moving him past Frank Mahovlich into eighth place on the all-time list.

Jonsson put the Islanders ahead just 48 seconds into the game and Bryan Trottier converted Randy Cunneyworth's giveaway for his 36th of the year at 5:03 to make it 2-0. The Islanders led 5-2 after two periods on goals by Bob Bourne, Bossy and Mikko Makela.

Devils 6, Nordiques 5

Mark Johnson scored three goals, including the game-winner with 1:45 to play, as New Jersey rallied from a three-goal deficit in the third period. The Devils tied the game on a power-play goal by Uli Hiemer with 9:09 remaining in the third period. Johnson started the Devils' comeback 5:21 earlier, taking a perfect centering pass from rookie Dan Dorion and tipping it past Quebec goalie Mario Gosselin. Fifty-one seconds later, Randy Velischek brought the Devils within 5-4 on a slapshot from the blue line.

Jets 4, Kings 4

Dale Hawerchuk scored with 55 seconds left in regulation as Winnipeg eliminated Los Angeles the playoff race. The Kings pulled goalie Roland Melanson in the final minute of overtime in an attempt to win the game, but Dave Williams' deflection went just wide with 25 seconds remaining.

Asbury College losses almost a victory

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Four long years and 75 games after Asbury College fielded its first baseball team, the record-setting Eagles came out a winner — at least unofficially.

It happened Monday when they swept a doubleheader from Lee's Junior College of Jackson. On Wednesday, Asbury lost twice and set with the first-game defeat an NAIA record of 49 consecutive losses.

"The players were excited," Asbury Coach Cecil Zweifel said of the victories.

But, according to the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics office in Kansas City, they won't count because they didn't come against a four-year school.

"We came back to the world of reality," Zweifel said with a laugh perfected by all the losing he's known in his four-year stretch as coach. "I laughed because I knew crying wouldn't help."

Asbury's unofficial victories over Lee's were followed by two official losses to Georgetown (Ky.) College, 21-0 and 15-0, on Wednesday, extending the official losing streak to 50 games, minus 27 unofficial losses to junior colleges.

NAIA spokesman Charlie Eppler said York College of Nebraska held the previous mark of 48 consecutive losses from 1977-80.

The Eagles worked under a severe handicap the first three seasons. They didn't have a field to practice on.

"We would play our home games 26 miles from here in Athens," Zweifel said. "Every time we played we were practicing because that was the only time we were on a field."

They would manage to get in some hitting and outfield practice on the school's golf course, but that was between foursomes and watching out for stray golf balls.

Now the Eagles have their own baseball field.

"It's new," said the 56-year-old coach, "but there's a lot of work to be done and a lot of grass to grow. It's really an excellent facility."

The field is laid out to U.S. Baseball Federation specifications, with the foul lines 330 feet and 405 feet to center field. Bleachers have also been ordered to seat a growing number of fans.

"We now have a batting cage up," Zweifel said. "The players hit 50 balls a day. And the outfielders and infielders field 50 balls a day. We never had that before.

"I don't think the past is a fair judge at all about our program. It made me wonder if we should have started that early. It probably wasn't realistic."

And it has been difficult on some of the players.

"We have three players who have been with us the four years," said Zweifel, who also serves as athletic director. "It's been tough psychologically, particularly if a player had been on a winning team. It's hard to keep your head up if you lose."

Celtics set home court record

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

To K.C. Jones, records are no big deal, even when they are 36 years old.

"It is rest and preparation for the playoffs that are important," the Boston coach said Wednesday night after the Celtics established a single-season record with their 28th straight home victory. "A team in 1934 broke a record. Who cares? Twenty years from now nobody will care about this record."

The Celtics beat the Detroit Pistons 122-106 with an overpowering performance by their front line of Larry Bird, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale, who combined for 83 points and 37 rebounds.

"It's something that happens to be here on the way to the playoffs," Jones said of the record that broke the NBA mark for consecutive home victories established by the Minneapolis Lakers in 1949-50. "I really can't get into the record. I can get into what we need to win the ballgame."

But Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said the Boston players wanted the record.

"I'm sure the winning streak was in the back of their minds because they all played very hard tonight," Daly said. "I would rather have come in here on another night."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Philadelphia 93, New York 87; Phoenix 110, Golden State 101; Los Angeles Clippers 97, Utah 94; and Portland 121, Seattle 109.

Parish had a season-high 30 points and 18 rebounds, Bird had 29 points, 11 rebounds and 13 assists and McHale added 24 points and eight rebounds.

"No matter who the Pistons try to concentrate on, we always have one of three players in a mismatch — Bird, me or McHale," Parish said.

"Their inside game is impossible to beat," said Vinnie Johnson, who led Detroit with 20 points. "It's their bread and butter. They've got three great post-up players — Bird, McHale and Parish."

"We moved the ball well," McHale said. "We got it down inside. If we do that consistently we're pretty tough to stop."

The Pistons played without guard Isiah Thomas, who missed his third consecutive game with a pulled left hamstring.

"Against Boston, it's tough to say that Isiah would make a difference," Detroit forward Kelly Tripucka said. "He's not a seven-footer. He's a point guard. It's tough to compete with that many big men."

Boston was leading 69-63 when McHale's dunk sparked a 13-3 run that made it 82-66 with 3:54 left in the third quarter. McHale had six points in that span of 4:04.

76ers 93, Knicks 87

Philadelphia, playing without center Moses Malone, still had plenty of healthy players to beat New York, which lost its sixth consecutive game.

Charles Barkley had 18 points and 19 rebounds and scored the first five points of the final period to extend a two-point lead to 73-66, and the Knicks, who have lost seven players for the season because of injuries, never caught up.

Julius Erving added 23 points and rookie Terry Catledge 19, while Maurice Cheeks collected 14 points, nine assists and seven steals for the 76ers, who have lost Malone for the rest of the regular season because of a fractured eye socket. Darrell Walker led New York with 18 points.

Suns 110, Warriors 101

Phoenix improved its playoff chances with a strong fourth quarter against Golden State.

Alvan Adams and Larry Nance, who had 31 points, 15 rebounds and seven blocked shots, scored eight points each as the Suns outscored the Warriors 37-22 in the fourth period to rally from a 79-73 deficit. The lead changed hands 11 times in the quarter before Jay Humphries' jumper with 3:54 left put Phoenix ahead for good at 96-95.

Phoenix, which also got 27 points from Walter Davis, is now only 1½ games behind San Antonio in the race for the eighth and final Western Conference playoff berth. Golden State, which was paced by Joe Barry Carroll with 18 points, is out of playoff contention.

Clippers 97, Jazz 94

Los Angeles also stayed in playoff contention as Benoit Benjamin had 18 points and 16 rebounds for the Clippers against Utah.

The Clippers' fourth straight victory moved them to within 2½ games of the Spurs. Los Angeles trails Phoenix by a game.

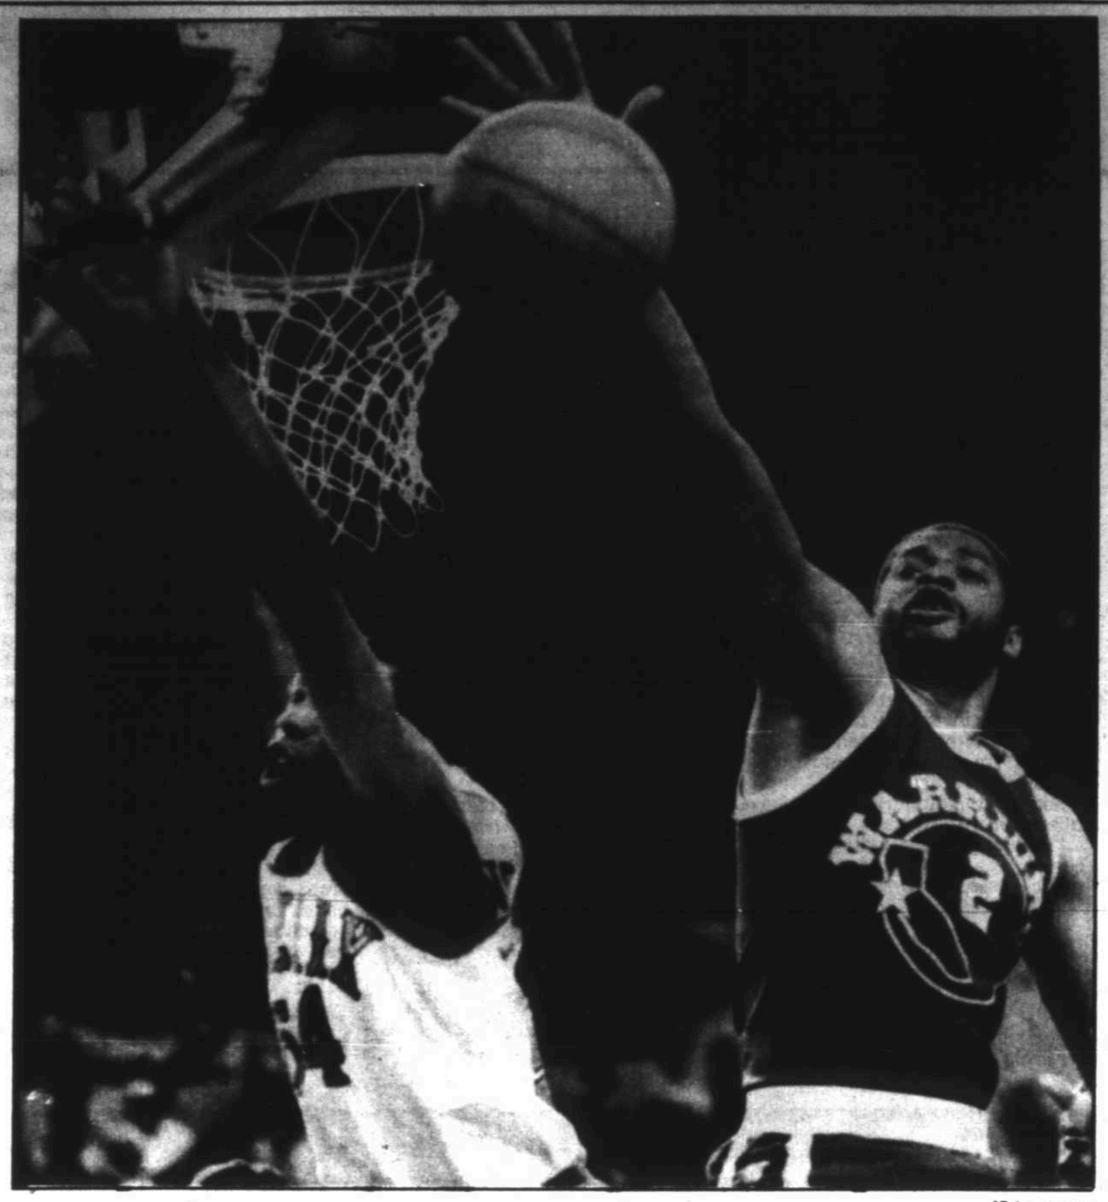

Mark Eaton's two hook shots capped an 8-0 Utah run, giving the Jazz an 86-82 advantage with 6:56 left. The lead changed hands four times before Benjamin gave Los Angeles the lead at 95-94 with a slam dunk with two minutes remaining, and Norm Nixon hit a 15-foot jumper for the final points of the game.

Trail Blazers 121, Sonics 109

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 36 points on 17-for-22 shooting against Seattle as Portland broke a 13-game road losing streak.

Vandeweghe had 12 points in the fourth quarter as the Trail Blazers broke open a close game, outscoring the Sonics 39-23 in the final period.

Xavier McDaniel had 27 points and 15 rebounds for the SuperSonics, while Gerald Henderson added 21. Clyde Drexler had 24 points for Portland.

Why fix basketball if it isn't broken?

Associated Press

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski says the use of the three-point field goal will lead to chaos in college basketball at a time when the game doesn't need any changes.

"I'm shocked that something like this has been passed at this time. To me, the game seems to be great right now. This is a revolutionary change and I don't think it's good for the game right now," Krzyzewski said Wednesday after the NCAA adopted a 19-foot, 9-inch three-point shot.

But Virginia Coach Terry Holland said he had little objection to the rule.

"I thought maybe they would wait a little longer before going to it. I'm for standard basketball rules at all levels, and we already have the three-pointer in the NBA ..." Holland said.

In addition to the three-point rule, the rules committee adopted instant replays to assist in scoring and timekeeping calls. Videotaped replays would not be used to settle arguments over judgment calls such as fouls.

"We've just had a year of no chaos and now we're introducing chaos," Krzyzewski said. "I don't think that's good for the game. There are a lot of major coaches shocked by this. If we're shocked, then you know there hasn't been a lot of discussion about it, and certainly there has been no public outcry to implement a three-point shot.

"It could have more impact on the game than the shot clock. I'm not for it, and I'm really against the timing of the decision," he said.

WAKE FOREST coach Bob Staak said he's had no experience with the rule.

"I think I'm going to have to get (5-foot-3 guard) Tyrone Bogues on somebody's shoulders to shoot that shot," Staak said. "Seriously, I'm concerned that sometimes people will get too involved with that shot to the detriment of the offense. But it should be exciting for the fans."

Krzyzewski said he was also against televised replays.

"I'm not for that right now because every game can't have it. This isn't the NFL where every game is televised. Some schools never have games televised. If it isn't a rule that everyone can use in every game, then we shouldn't have that rule," he said.

Coaches from Kansas and Louisville, two other Final Four teams, said the three-point goal could make zone defenses obsolete.

"I think the three-pointer has merit, (but) I'm a little confused about the distance," said Coach Larry Brown of Kansas, which lost to Duke in the semifinals. "I don't want it to be such an easy shot that it really becomes more important than anything, because I don't think that's the purpose; I do think that it'll open the game up a little more and we probably won't see as many zones."

Louisville assistant coach Jerry Jones, who said he was speaking for Coach Denny Crum, said his first reaction to the three-point goal was "that shot can cause as much harm as benefit because it's not a high-percentage shot."

"I think it's a way of legislating against zone defenses without really saying so," Jones said.

"We put the (shot) clock in and if that didn't keep you out of the zone, 'We'll put the three-point play in to make you play man-to-man,' " Jones said the NCAA was seeming to say.

WYOMING COACH Jim Brandenburg joined Krzyzewski in questioning the timing of the rule change.

"The rules committee dropped a bombshell on the coaching profession," Brandenburg said. "We just got the 45-second clock. We should stabilize the game."

"I'm very surprised to see it (three-point goal) pass," Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said. "I didn't realize it was under serious consideration, based on the experimentation by major conferences a few years back, which generally seemed to be negative."

Steve Alford, Indiana's All-American guard, said he likes the three-point rule.

"Anytime you add something to an individual's game that is his particular asset or strength, you've got to like it," Alford said. "And I think shooting's one of my strengths and probably my major stretgth. My jump shot's worth one more point now."

But he added, "I really don't see our (the Hoosiers') game changing. We've had that rule before in the Big Ten and it didn't really change our game that much."

Iowa State basketball Coach Johnny Orr was pleased with the three-point shot plan.

"I'm not opposed to it at all," Orr said. "Now you may recruit a guy who's a great shooter. It may open up the way for the smaller guys."

To stay, or not to stay?

Navy's Robinson has problem to solve

By GORDON BEARD
AP Sports Writer

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — David Robinson may be having some nagging "what if?" second thoughts about his decision to remain at the U.S. Naval Academy.

While the 6-foot-11 basketball star plans no drastic action to avoid the five-year service hitch he faces after graduation, he's not adverse to at least investigating ways to delay the obligation.

"I haven't had time to look into it," he said Wednesday. "But if I get that option, I'll take it."

Robinson sees no future in resigning before graduation, a move that would result in a three-year hitch as an enlisted man. "That would be stupid," he said, "after what I've been through already at this place."

That means the agile center with the 1,320 SAT score will play for the Middies again next season, and then begin an agonizing wait until he can test his talents in the NBA in 1992.

Robinson had a chance to jump ship last summer, when he could have hastened his pro debut by transferring to a civilian school for the final two years of college. But once he started the junior year at the Naval Academy, Robinson was locked into the five-year postgraduate hitch.

"I'm comfortable with my decision . . . I feel good about it," Robinson insisted. "If I had transferred, I don't know what might have happened."

What's more, Robinson noted, he would have had to sit out the past season under NCAA regulations, and wouldn't have continued his meteoric improvement in a sport he has played competitively for only four years.

ROBINSON AVERAGED 22.7 points a game while leading the Middies to a 30-5 record and a surprising appearance in the final eight of the NCAA tournament. His 13 rebounds and 5.9 blocked shots a game topped the nation.

The performance not only peaked Robinson's curiosity about playing in the NBA, but also got him to wondering if he would have stayed at Navy had he played that well as a sophomore.

"It would have been a lot tougher decision," he admitted. "But I still like my chances of playing pro ball later, so it's no big loss."

If there's any feeling of loss, it's among the NBA scouts and general managers who are almost reduced to tears while watching Robinson, knowing he probably won't be available until 1992.

"Robinson is a franchise player," said General Manager Bob Ferry of the Washington Bullets. "It's a shame he can't complete a 10-year pro career, and then serve five years in the Navy."

Ferry, however, sees no reason why Robinson couldn't succeed as a 27-year-old rookie, and neither does Roger Staubach, a former Naval Academy athlete who wound up in the Pro Football Hall of Fame following his postgraduate hitch.

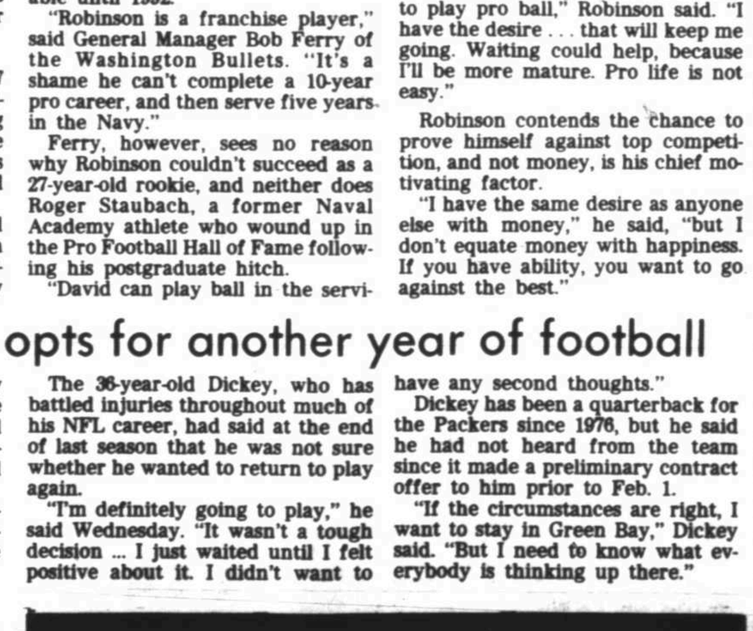

"David can play ball in the service," Staubach said in a telephone interview from Dallas, "and he's not going to get any shorter. He's dedicated, so I'm sure he'll stay in shape."

Robinson expects to be able to play basketball in the service following graduation, and he will seek permission to try out for the 1988 U.S. Olympic team.

"If I stay in shape, I should be able to play pro ball," Robinson said. "I have the desire . . . that will keep me going. Waiting could help, because I'll be more mature. Pro life is not easy."

Robinson contends the chance to prove himself against top competition, and not money, is his chief motivating factor.

"I have the same desire as anyone else with money," he said, "but I don't equate money with happiness. If you have ability, you want to go against the best."

Bears' basketball assistant resigns

WACO (AP) — Mike Naderer resigned his position as part-time assistant men's basketball coach at Baylor, head coach Gene Iba said Wednesday.

Naderer, 26, plans to enter private business in Lincoln, Neb., Iba said.

"I felt this was a good career move," Naderer said. "I need to make sure that there is not something besides basketball out there for me."

Before coaching at Baylor in the 1985-86 season, Naderer was part-time assistant to the Drake Bulldogs.

A Phoenix, Ariz., native, Naderer lettered from 1978-81 for Nebraska, where he played in 113 games, the third-most in school history.

— Permit a player with four personal fouls at the end of regulation play to receive two more fouls in overtime play before fouling out. A player who fouled out in regulation play could not return in overtime.

— Reduce officials' pregame jurisdiction from 30 minutes to 20 minutes.

Conferences that want to experiment with any of the items must receive approval from J. Dallas Shirley of the Southern Conference, Steitz said.

Packers' Dickey opts for another year of football

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey says he wants to return for a 14th National Football League season — but it remains to be seen whether he will play for the Packers.

Dickey commented from his residence at Lenexa, Kansas, in a telephone interview with Milwaukee Sentinel columnist Bud Lea.

The 36-year-old Dickey, who has battled injuries throughout much of his NFL career, had said at the end of last season that he was not sure whether he wanted to return to play again.

"I'm definitely going to play," he said Wednesday. "It wasn't a tough decision ... I just waited until I felt positive about it. I didn't want to have any second thoughts."

Dickey has been a quarterback for the Packers since 1976, but he said he had not heard from the team since it made a preliminary contract offer to him prior to Feb. 1.

"If the circumstances are right, I want to stay in Green Bay," Dickey said. "But I need to know what everybody is thinking up there."

NBA breaks single night mark for attendance

NEW YORK (AP) — A single-night attendance record was broken in the National Basketball Association Tuesday night, the league said Wednesday, reporting that 152,577 fans attended the eleven games.

The previous record was 147,673, set on Nov. 29, 1985.

The largest crowd Tuesday night was at the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., where 25,816 saw the Detroit Pistons beat the Indiana Pacers 116-106.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Friday, April 4, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A new confidence helps you find success at work and happiness at home. The fires of love burn bright for all who are young at heart. Someone else's achievements influence your own. Changes in the economy help you boost profits. Seize an opportunity to travel. The wider your social circle, the more valuable the contacts you will make. Be patient when trying to do business with someone influential.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: dance master Arthur Murray, Sen. Richard Lugar (R-Ind.), poet Maya Angelou, Louisville manager Jim Fregosi, actor Anthony Perkins, Hall of Famer Gil Hodges, singer Muddy Waters, news commentator John Cameron Swayze.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day for travel. See if you can slip away for a long weekend. Contacts at a distance open the door to new business opportunities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid both procrastination and impulsive decisions. A lost opportunity will not return. A romantic dream moves closer to becoming reality. A financial situation improves following a visit to a bank or friend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote your time to major business projects while your associates take care of the rest. Both productivity and profits rise when you accept some high-tech improvements. Get out and socialize more.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An ideal day for entertaining at home. A surprise visit could lead to romance. Be careful not to neglect your work responsibilities. Procrastination is the enemy of progress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be able to accomplish more at home than at work today. Confiding in a partner could mend a rift. Let family members know they must curb extravagant spending. Set limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't rush just because it is Friday. Take the time you need to do a work project right. Enthusiasm is essential for a business victory. Personal goals come into focus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The financial picture may be brighter than you think. Adopt a positive attitude and new solutions will be found. Thoughts of romance could interfere with your concentration. Put first things first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): School activities attract your attention. Mate's cooperation is central to what you must accomplish today. Tie up loose ends at work so that you can enjoy a carefree weekend with friends, relatives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Both work and romance enjoy highly favorable influences now. Make hay while the sun shines. A compliment works wonders. Forget about trying to get even with an associate. Let bygones be bygones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Better employment opportunities lie just ahead. Do not lose confidence. Cash arrives in the nick of time, reducing your anxiety. Romance is quiet but rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Old friends are the best judge of how good an idea will be for you. Tell them the whole story. A scholastic or financial decision should not be made in haste.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some risk-taking is fine, but out-and-out gambling should be avoided. Loved one will welcome some extra attention and affection. Share a health idea with someone close to your heart.

LUCKY SPADES

North-South vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

This defensive problem from Eddie Kantar's new book ("A New Approach to Play and Defense," H.D.L. Publishing, paperback, 212 pp., $9.95. Available from the author, P.O. Box 4127, Venice Calif. 90291-0427) is the defensive companion hand to the one that appeared in Wednesday's column. Cover the West and South hands and see how you would fare as East.

West attacks with the king, ace and jack of diamonds. Declarer drops the queen on the second round and ruffs the third. After leading a spade to the king and ace, declarer draws two rounds of trumps, ending in hand, and leads another spade. This time partner produces the jack, dummy's queen wins and on the ten of spades partner discards a diamond. Now declarer leads a low club from the table.

What is declarer's distribution? Which club do you play?

Declarer's hand counts out to 3-5-2-3. To defeat the contract, your side must collect two club tricks, so the one card you cannot afford to play is the king!

If partner has the queen of clubs, it makes no difference what you do, so assume that declarer holds the lady. If you duck smoothly, declarer will probably play the eight to try to end play your partner and go down. If you play the jack, declarer might play you for the jack-ten and duck, then try to finesse the nine when you return the five of clubs. That also dooms the contract.

Key lesson pointers: If you can't beat declarer by honest means, try a swindle. And when sitting behind an ace with the king, don't always fly up with his majesty when a low card is led away from the ace. If you need two tricks in the suit, play low.

By the way, compare declarer's diamond holding Wednesday with the club holding on this hand. Now perhaps you see why we like this book so much.

Hudson auction results surprising

NEW YORK (AP) — A Steinway baby grand piano that furnished Rock Hudson's Manhattan apartment and a needlepoint rug created by the late actor were big sellers at an auction of items from his estate that brought almost $90,000 Wednesday.

The items were among more than 700 pieces of Hudson memorabilia auctioned by William Doyle Galleries for the estate of the actor, who died last October at 59 of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The pieces came from his New York City apartment and a house in Beverly Hills, Calif. Most big pieces from both homes were sold with the properties earlier.

A 3-by-5-foot red wool rug needlepointed by Hudson went for $2,100, far exceeding the pre-sale estimate of about $400, said Michael Shay, the gallery's president. The Steinway piano sold for $6,250.

Both were purchased by anonymous buyers.

About 650 people attended the auction, and another 200 bid by absentee bids, said Shay.

Displaying the stage sword Rock Hudson used in a 1977 production of "Camelot" is William Doyle Galleries employee M.J. Flannigan

Dickinson

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A 65-year-old woman named one of the most photogenic WACs of World War II was crowned Ms. Senior America, defeating contestants from 14 other states.

Jeannette "Jan" Dickinson, who lives in a retirement community in Vincentown, N.J., sang a medley of "When You're Young At Heart" and "Happy Talk" to win the competition in this resort noted for its competition involving younger beauty queens.

Women ranging in age from 60 to 78 competed in the pageant, which emphasizes "that true beauty is a matter of insight as well of eyesight," said Maureen Donovan, the pageant's national director.

The contest, held at Resorts Internatinal Casino Hotel, includes competition in the categories of talent, evening gown and "inner beauty," in which the women deliver short talks on their philosophy of life.

The contestants also were interviewed by a panel of judges prior to the on-stage, two-hour finals before an audience of about 1,600 people.

First runner-up was Ms. Senior Florida Mary DeSapio of Tamarac; second runner-up was Ms. Senior New York Ethel Bennett of Amityville; third runner-up was Ms. Senior Nevada Dorothy Guralnik of Las Vegas; and fourth runner-up was Ms. Senior Maryland Marjorie Setzer of Capitol Heights.

Newman

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Paul Newman diverted gamblers' attention from slot machines and roulette tables when he showed up at a casino hotel to film part of his new movie, "Color of Money."

Newman plays "Fast Eddie Felson," whom he first portrayed in his 1961 film "The Hustler."

The film, directed by Martin Scorsese and also starring Tom Cruise, includes a trip to Atlantic City, where Newman's character participates in a pool tournament. It is to be released in December.

Newman was filmed Wednesday walking from the boardwalk into the Resorts International Casino Hotel and strolling through the casino.

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby has another doctorate from the University of Massachusetts, an honorary one to go with one he earned.

"I want to tell everyone at this university — please understand me — I am proud to be a shown-up-for-real graduate of the Graduate School of Education," said Cosby, a Shelburne resident who received a doctorate in education in 1977.

Other alumni presented honorary doctor of fine arts degrees Wednesday were Bruce MacCombie, a composer and newly appointed dean of the Julliard School of Music, conductor Billy Taylor; and Lois B. Torf, an art collector and patron. Other honorees were Graham Gund, a Boston architect and art collector, and Frank Hodsoll, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Country music superstar Ricky Skaggs says he can't do all the benefit performances he's requested to perform, but that one for two southern Indiana women was special.

Skaggs and his wife, Sharon, were among several entertainers who performed Wednesday to benefit two ministers' wives stricken with cancer.

"We felt a need to help them with all their hospital bills. Sharon and I felt led to help these people out," said Skaggs, the 1985 Country Music Entertainer of the Year.

Neither of the two women, Rebecca Rich nor Kathy Burklow, could attend the two performances, held before a sold-out crowd at the Bible Center Cathedral, which holds 1,500 people. Tickets were $6.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Agent 007 gave Mayor Dianne Feinstein a Picasso reproduction, one of the $16,000 worth gifts she received last year.

In her annual financial statement, the mayor discloses also that among her gifts was a Japanese vibrating chair and vodka from Russia.

The mayor said she did not recall who gave her the chair. But Roger Moore, who plays 007 in the movies, gave her the $600 reproduction of a Picasso plate. His latest spy thriller, "A View To A Kill," was filmed partly in San Francisco.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A new confidence helps you find success at work and happiness at home. The fires of love burn bright for all who are young at heart. Someone else's achievements influence your own. Changes in the economy help you boost profits. Seize an opportunity to travel. The wider your social circle, the more valuable the contacts you will make. Be patient when trying to do business with someone influential.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: dance master Arthur Murray, Sen. Richard Lugar (R-Ind.), poet Maya Angelou, Louisville manager Jim Fregosi, actor Anthony Perkins, Hall of Famer Gil Hodges, singer Muddy Waters, news commentator John Cameron Swayze.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day for travel. See if you can slip away for a long weekend. Contacts at a distance open the door to new business opportunities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid both procrastination and impulsive decisions. A lost opportunity will not return. A romantic dream moves closer to becoming reality. A financial situation improves following a visit to a bank or friend.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote your time to major business projects while your associates take care of the rest. Both productivity and profits rise when you accept some high-tech improvements. Get out and socialize more.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An ideal day for entertaining at home. A surprise visit could lead to romance. Be careful not to neglect your work responsibilities. Procrastination is the enemy of progress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be able to accomplish more at home than at work today. Confiding in a partner could mend a rift. Let family members know they must curb extravagant spending. Set limits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't rush just because it is Friday. Take the time you need to do a work project right. Enthusiasm is essential for a business victory. Personal goals come into focus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The financial picture may be brighter than you think. Adopt a positive attitude and new solutions will be found. Thoughts of romance could interfere with your concentration. Put first things first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): School activities attract your attention. Mate's cooperation is central to what you must accomplish today. Tie up loose ends at work so that you can enjoy a carefree weekend with friends, relatives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Both work and romance enjoy highly favorable influences now. Make hay while the sun shines. A compliment works wonders. Forget about trying to get even with an associate. Let bygones be bygones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Better employment opportunities lie just ahead. Do not lose confidence. Cash arrives in the nick of time, reducing your anxiety. Romance is quiet but rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Old friends are the best judge of how good an idea will be for you. Tell them the whole story. A scholastic or financial decision should not be made in haste.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some risk-taking is fine, but out-and-out gambling should be avoided. Loved one will welcome some extra attention and affection. Share a health idea with someone close to your heart.

This defensive problem from Eddie Kantar's new book ("A New Approach to Play and Defense," H.D.L. Publishing, paperback, 212 pp., $9.95. Available from the author, P.O. Box 4127, Venice Calif. 90291-0427) is the defensive companion hand to the one that appeared in Wednesday's column. Cover the West and South hands and see how you would fare as East.

West attacks with the king, ace and jack of diamonds. Declarer drops the queen on the second round and ruffs the third. After leading a spade to the king and ace, declarer draws two rounds of trumps, ending in hand, and leads another spade. This time partner produces the jack, dummy's queen wins and on the ten of spades partner discards a diamond. Now declarer leads a low club from the table.

What is declarer's distribution? Which club do you play?

Declarer's hand counts out to 3-5-2-3. To defeat the contract, your side must collect two club tricks, so the one card you cannot afford to play is the king!

If partner has the queen of clubs, it makes no difference what you do, so assume that declarer holds the lady. If you duck smoothly, declarer will probably play the eight to try to end play your partner and go down. If you play the jack, declarer might play you for the jack-ten and duck, then try to finesse the nine when you return the five of clubs. That also dooms the contract.

Key lesson pointers: If you can't beat declarer by honest means, try a swindle. And when sitting behind an ace with the king, don't always fly up with his majesty when a low card is led away from the ace. If you need two tricks in the suit, play low.

By the way, compare declarer's diamond holding Wednesday with the club holding on this hand. Now perhaps you see why we like this book so much.

JIM MURRAY

As speed, finesse return, home runs dwindle

Is the home run, like the Great Plains bison, an obsolete American species, an artifact? Is it endangered, destined to exist only in cave drawings?

In 1921, after the Black Sox scandal, the home run, as delivered by Babe Ruth, saved baseball. It, and he, also revolutionized the game.

The purists never forgave either of them.

Before Ruth and the home run, the game was a swift, crafty, heady game, a scientific pursuit, part chess, part chicanery, the cats vs. the mice. The ball was little more than an exaggerated beanbag and the game was a set-piece battle of strategy where artful placing of the ball and daring base-running were paramount and determined the outcome.

Ruth changed all that. He made the game over in his image. It became a long-range artillery duel. Speed, deceit, cunning were all ruled, not to say blasted, out of existence.

The era of the long ball, the big inning, came in. The game became an exercise in brute force. The small skills all but disappeared. The arts of base-stealing and base-running died out.

You could win a league championship with 19 or fewer steals. What sense was there risking an out when you could just stand there and let anyone of the next eight guys in the lineup knock you in with a home run?

Good fielding became secondary. Not even Willie Mays could catch a home run.

THAT STYLE of play – Yankee baseball – prevailed for decades. The Yankees won an annual world championship without ever getting their uniforms dirty. They drafted for power, not finesse.

Michael Jack Schmidt, of the Philadelphia Schmidts, who may be the last of the big swingers, the final Ruthian gasp, thinks that the pendulum has swung clear back the other way in this year of Our Lord 1986. The game has come full circle.

The home run is on its way out, or at least is in full retreat. Not only are the 50-homers-a-year hitters disappearing, so are the 40-a-year. Next, maybe, will go the 30-a-year.

"Look at your World Series last year," Schmidt suggests. "You had two teams in there for whom the home run was almost nonexistent. I think the Cardinals had only 80 home runs, not counting the inside-the-park ones. They stole 314 bases. You think the 1927 Yankees stole 314 bases? In their entire existence?"

Even architecture has conspired against the power game, Schmidt argues. The new symmetrical ballparks no longer have any Green Monsters, inviting left- or right-field targets like the 315-footer in Boston.

The parks today are a nice, dull, uniform distance away from home plate to eliminate the cheap home run. To eliminate any home run. The power alleys all resemble Yankee Stadium's Death Valley. They rob the game of suspense, argues Mike. A four-run lead at Fenway Park in Boston is nothing. A four-run lead at Busch Stadium in St. Louis is the end of the game.

Artificial surfaces have sounded the retreat for the home run game, too. "The stolen base is overrated as an offensive weapon," says Schmidt. "But the managers love those guys who can run."

For one thing, it gives them something to do. In Ruth's day, a manager's chief cerebration consisted of handing a bat to a cleanup hitter and saying: "Go hit a three-run homer."

Today, he has more signs than an Indy race car. Teams have signs for signs in the dugouts these days. It's not likely Babe Ruth even knew what the team's steal sign was. It's not likely they had one.

THE SURFACES have made it possible for fleet outfielders to cut off hits that once would have sailed through the gaps for extra-base hits, which is another incentive for clubs to draft for speed rather than power.

All sports are imitative and baseball no less so. In football, if a split-T or wishbone works for one team, all adopt it.

In baseball, when the Yanks won with power, every team went looking for 6-foot 3-inch, 240-pound behemoths with bulging stomachs and 50-ounce bats. But, when the game went to the big round ballparks and teams began to win with the small skills –base-stealing, running, fielding – the rest of the game went to that.

Relief pitching also worked against the big inning theory of attack.

Says Schmidt: "It used to be you had a pitcher who had a good, live fastball your first two or three times up but he would lose a little in the late innings and you could get to him, take him out of the park."

Now, they take him out of the game.

"You get some young strongarm coming in there. Look at the Dodgers. You got a pen full of guys throwing 92 m.p.h. in the late innings."

Is the new way any surer route to a pennant? To a dynasty? Is the quest for swift, punch-hitter types of ballplayers a smarter way to the top?

Schmidt's own career would argue against that.

WHEN MIKE came up, the Phillies were a spectacularly unsuccessful franchise who had won only two pennants in 73 years. Since Schmidt joined them, they have won five division championships, two pennants and their first World Series.

When Mike came up to the club in 1973, he was batting an anemic .196 for the year. He tried to steal eight times and was caught stealing two of those times. He struck out 136 times, more than once a game and almost once out of every two times at bat.

Managers today would replace that kind with a rabbit by Mother's Day. But Danny Ozark persevered with Schmidt because he also hit 18 home runs in that stretch – one out of every four of his hits was a homer. He may be the only .196 hitter in history to hit 18 home runs – to get a chance to hit home runs.

Mike is the best argument in the world for a return to the old ways. The Phils' patience has paid off in pennants and playoffs. And some time this year, Mike Schmidt may hit his 500th home run.

It may be time to take the game out of its hit-and-run stance and back to its hit-and-wait.

The home run is as American as the Tin Lizzie or the Spirit of St. Louis but it doesn't deserve to hang in a museum just yet. Contrary to a large body of opinion, it still wins ball games and pennants.

Ask the Dodgers.

Hermann promoted to Navy basketball commander

By DAVE SELL
The Washington Post

Pete Herrmann is the new head basketball coach at Navy and the feeling, he said, is "tremendous."

Navy Athletic Director J.O. "Bo" Coppedge made the announcement Wednesday afternoon at about the same time that Don Donoher, who was the only other candidate, was saying he had decided to remain at Dayton, where he has coached for the last 22 years.

This will be the first collegiate head coaching job for Herrmann, 37, who came to the academy as an assistant in 1980 with Paul Evans, who resigned last week to take the head coaching job at Pittsburgh after leading the Midshipmen to a 30-5 record and to the final of the NCAA tournament's East regional.

A Buffalo native, Herrmann graduated in 1970 from Geneseo State, where he met Evans in 1969. Herrmann started his coaching career at Byron Bergen High School in Bergen, N.Y., and spent four years there, and then one season as the freshman coach at Hobart College, before going to Midlakes High in Phelps, N.Y., near Rochester for five years.

"I was in ecstasy," Herrmann said of his reaction when Coppedge, with the rest of the Naval Academy Athletic Association Board of Control on hand, offered the job at about 4 p.m. "I'm very happy. My association with the Naval Academy has been nothing but good. I've enjoyed being here and enjoyed the kids.

"The administration has shown they are backing the buildup of the program that Paul began, and they recognized that I'm comfortable and that my relationships with players, media and the Naval Academy are strong."

Said Coppedge: "He's proven in six long seasons that he was a good assistant. He knows the program, knows the kids, he's a well-rounded guy and he's shown that he's a good recruiter for the Naval Academy."

Herrmann said that Navy fans shouldn't expect any great changes in the style of play.

"If it's not broken, don't fix it," Herrmann said. "Paul's system was simple to teach, and I'll be demanding like he was in players maintaining fundamentals. It's a continuation of a solid program."

Herrmann said John Fitzpatrick and Dave Laton would remain on the staff as his assistants, along with Al Moraz, who has directed the plebe-junior varsity team the past two seasons.

Colorado hires Cornell's Miller

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Tom Miller of Cornell was named Wednesday head basketball coach at the University of Colorado, with CU officials saying they're hoping he will make as much difference in Boulder as he did at the Ithaca school.

As CU's 14th basketball coach, Miller will take the place of Tom Apke, fired March 10 afer the Buffs finished a losing season that included 17 consecutive losses.

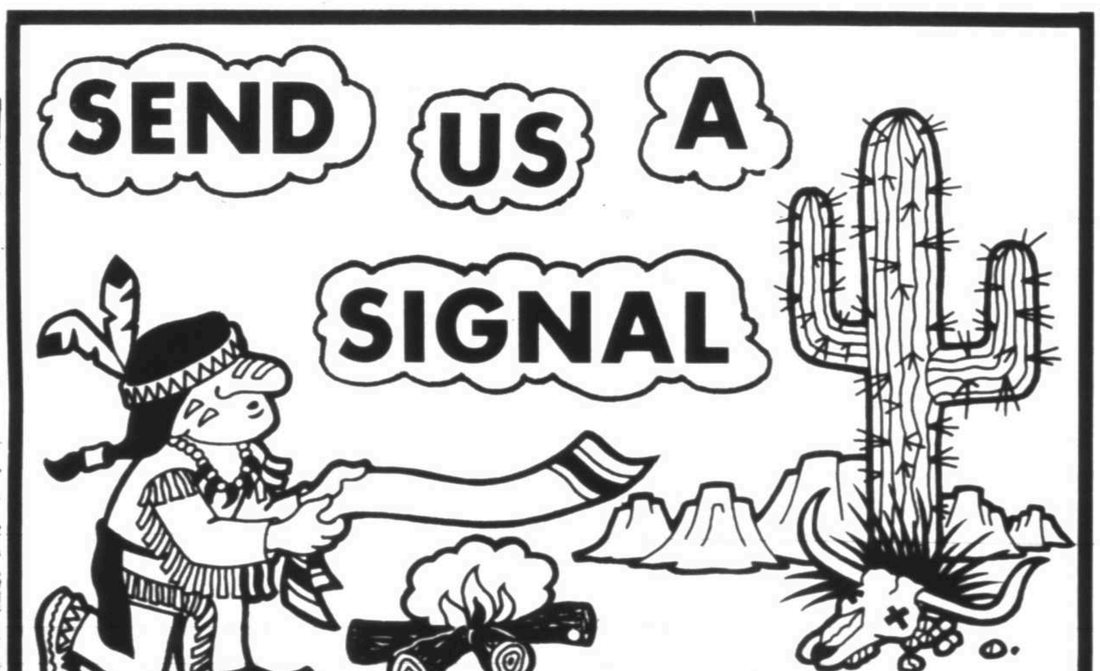

CU Athletic Director Bill Marolt said Miller would begin high school recruiting immediately because there is just a week left before high school prospects announce their intentions.

"The more we talked, the more I realized that Tom Miller was who I was looking for," Marolt told reporters at a news conference called to introduce CU's new coach.

"When I started the search, I wanted a younger guy who already was a head coach," said Marolt. "I wanted a man who could teach, recruit, a man who believes in discipline and (who) is work-oriented, like others in our department."

Miller, a 37-year-old protege of Bobby Knight, spent six seasons at Cornell, compiling a 71-85 record that includes a 44-34 mark over the last three seasons.

He played forward for Knight at Army in the late 1960s and began his coaching career in 1975 when he joined his college coach at Indiana. Miller, who earned an engineering degree from West Point in 1970, was named head coach at Cornell on Feb. 18, 1980.

Rookies make strong bids for Cincinnati outfield

Associated Press

Three rookie outfielders could be on the Cincinnati Reds' roster for next Monday's season opener against Philadelphia following strong spring training performances.

Tracy Jones, Kal Daniels and Paul O'Neill, each of whom batted .300 or better last season for the Reds' farm team in Denver, played important roles Wednesday as Cincinnati beat Houston 3-2 in exhibition action. Jones had two hits to raise his spring average to .366, while Daniels and O'Neill keyed the Reds' three-run ninth-inning rally.

The Astros led 2-0 entering the ninth, but Daniels singled and scored on a double by Tony Perez. O'Neill doubled later in the inning to drive in the tying and winning runs.

"Everybody says I'm there, but I won't feel relaxed until I hear it from one guy (Manager Pete Rose)," O'Neill said. "You get to this point and waiting for a decision is really anxious."

The Reds opened an extra roster spot for one of the rookies Monday by trading infielder Wayne Krenchicki to Montreal for a minor-league pitcher. One of the three may still be sent down, however.

"We hear rumors, but it's not mine to say," O'Neill said. "It's not in our hands, so I can't even guess. I just worry about myself. Things will work out for themselves."

The Reds' ability to keep all three rookies on the opening-day roster may depend on a possible trade of Eddie Milner, last year's regular center fielder who has apparently lost his starting job to Eric Davis. Milner, despite batting .389, has had only 18 at-bats this spring because of an injured wrist.

"I can't say that we were shopping Eddie," General Manager Bill Bergesch said. "If we were trying to make a deal, I wouldn't make any comment."

Royals 5, White Sox 3

Tom Seaver, who has asked to be traded to New York or Boston, gave up a tie-breaking two-run homer to Frank White that helped Kansas City beat Chicago.

"All I can do is wait and see what develops," Seaver said. "I can't force anyone's hand. In essence, I'm a third party in this matter." Both New York and Boston are closer to Seaver's Greenwich, Conn., home than Chicago.

The White Sox scored twice off American League Cy Young Award winner Bret Saberhagen in 4 2-3 innings. Saberhagen had had some shoulder tenderness that cost him his opening day assignment next week.

Yankees 8, White Sox 2

Ron Guidry allowed only three singles in seven shutout innings as he tuned up for the season opener by beating Chicago.

Henry Cotto's leadoff homer sparked a five-run first inning for the Yankees against Steve McCatty.

A's 16, Cubs 7

Mike Davis and rookie Jose Canseco hit two home runs apiece for Oakland, with Davis adding a single in a seven-RBI performance.

The A's had six of the eight homers and 17 of the 31 hits at windy Phoenix Stadium. Dusty Baker and Mickey Tettleton also homered for Oakland. Jody Davis and Ron Cey countered for Chicago.

Brewers 22, Mariners 10

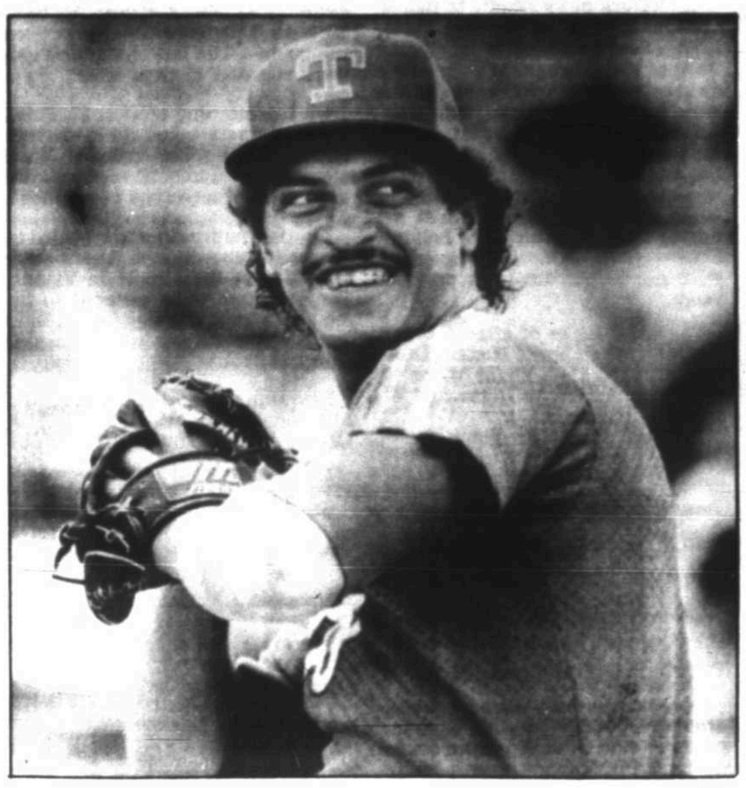

Mike Felder hit two two home runs and drove in five runs in another windswept game. Felder led a 28-hit barrage that included five hits each by Robin Yount and Rick Cerone on a day when virtually every ball hit into the air was an adventure because of the winds. The game was stopped after eight innings to permit the Mariners to catch a flight to Seattle.

Tigers 9, Red Sox 3

Alan Trammell, Kirk Gibson and Chet Lemon homered for Detroit while Dave LaPoint pitched seven innings, giving up three runs on six hits, including Bill Buckner's three-run homer. Boston's Al Nipper was tagged for six runs on 11 hits in six innings.

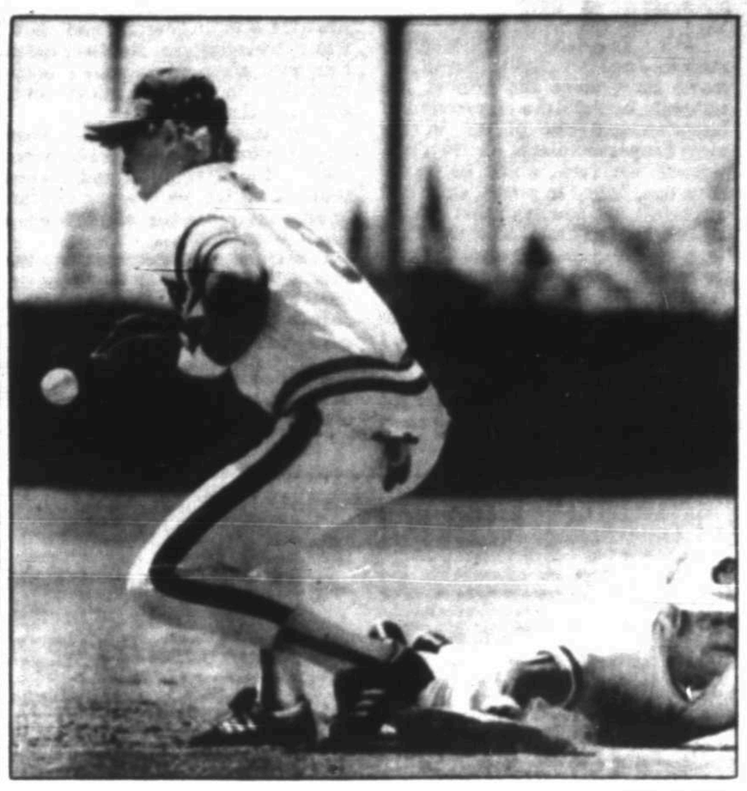

Mets 7, Twins 1

Dwight Gooden hurled seven scoreless innings in his strongest spring outing and Gary Carter's fourth home run ignited a six-run second inning for New York against Minnesota.

Texas rookie Jose Guzman has been named to replace injured Charlie Hough in Monday's opening night game.

Baltimore's Alan Wiggins slides safely back to first as Texas' Pete O'Brien fights for control of the ball

Exhibition Baseball

Dodgers 2, Expos 1

Pinch hitter Terry Whitfield doubled home the winning run for Los Angeles with two out in the bottom of the ninth, scoring Ken Landreaux.

Fernando Valenzuela pitched seven scoreless innings for the Dodgers in his final preseason tuneup. He allowed four hits and struck out six and did not walk a batter.

Braves 7, Expos 1

Bob Horner hit a two-run homer and Rick Mahler earned his fourth victory of the spring for Atlanta by scattering seven hits over seven innings and lowering his spring earned run average to 2.48.

Phillies 4, Blue Jays 3

Luis Aguayo hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning and Kevin Gross pitched seven innings for his third spring victory. Glenn Wilson hit a solo homer in the fourth for Philadelphia.

Orioles 12, Rangers 6

Fred Lynn hit a pair of homers and Cal Ripken added a two-run shot as Baltimore bombed Texas.

Alan Wiggins had four hits and Lynn and Mike Young three each as the Orioles collected 21 hits off four Texas pitchers. Lynn hit a two-run homer off Matt Williams in the first inning and a three-run shot off Mitch Williams in the seventh.

Pirates 10, Cardinals 7

Sixto Lezcano homered and drove in four runs and pinch hitter Lee Mazzilli hit a tie-breaking two-run homer to pace Pittsburgh's 19-hit attack.

Indians 9, Giants 8

Joe Carter single snapped an 8-8 tie in the sixth inning. Ken Schrom, Cleveland's opening-day pitcher, got the victory despite allowing eight runs, seven of them earned, and 10 hits in six innings.

Padres 6, Angels 5

Mark Thurmond allowed one unearned run in six innings and every San Diego starter had at least one hit.

Thurmond, 3-0 in six starts this spring, struck out two and walked three while California's Mike Witt lost for the fourth time in five decisions this spring, giving up six runs and 11 hits in five innings.

Bean expects to be GGO factor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Andy Bean doesn't merely hope to be a factor in the $500,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament. He expects it.

"The key is that I'm putting well," Bean said before teeing off today in the first round on the hilly, 6,984-yard par-72 Forest Oaks Country Club course.

"I've been playing well, striking the ball well, most of the year. But the putting has been kind of in and out. And it's hard to score well when you're not putting.

"Now, I feel like I'm putting well, really putting a good stroke on it. If I can keep that up, look out," Bean said.

Bean, who hadn't won since taking this title in 1984, finished second in the Honda Classic last month despite "three-putting I don't know how many times," he said.

"But if you can finish second and not be putting, you've got to be hitting an awful lot of good shots," he said.

The following week, at Doral, he continued to have putting problems. But he won the tournament. It was his third title at Doral and the 10th of his career, broke that non-winning string and stamped Bean as a prime contender, not only for the Greensboro tournament but next week's Masters as well.

"I know I'm playing good. And if I can putt good, then I'm going to be making an awful lot of birdies," he said.

But he's not alone in that category. In fact, one of his chief challengers in the chase for a $90,000 first prize is the man who led the PGA Tour in birdie-production last year, defending Greensboro champion Joey Sindelar.

In addition to Bean there are three other men in the 144-man Greensboro field who have scored 1986 PGA Tour victories: Fuzzy Zoeller, Corey Pavin and Dan Forsman.

Some other leading figuers are former Greensboro champions Lanny Wadkins, Larry Nelson and Danny Edwards, a two-time winner here.

Also on hand are British Open champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Mark O'Meara, Wayne Levi, Craig Stadler and Jim Thorpe.

Dinah Shore has gained a lot of LPGA prestige

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — The Nabisco Dinah Shore LPGA tournament, probably more than any other event on the tour, has helped put women's golf on the map.

The tournament, which began with Colgate as the sponsor in 1972, has been designated one of the LPGA' four majors and is the most-watched of the women's tournaments on television.

It also seems, from the perspective of many of the players, the tour's most prestigious event.

When Kathy Kratzert finished a stroke behind winner Mary Beth Zimmerman recently at the tour's stop in Phoenix, Kratzert immediately asked: "Does this qualify me for the Dinah Shore? The next best thing to winning is qualifying for the Dinah Shore."

Marci Bozarth, runner-up to Juli Inkster in the recent tournament in Hawaii, had much the same reaction.

"I wanted to compete in the Dinah Shore this year," she said after her second-place finish. "I was initially disappointed with my play (during the final round in Hawaii), then I realized I qualified for the Dinah Shore and the disappointment eased."

Despite blow outs, Dallas still Monday Night favorite

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys may have been whipped 44-0 by the Chicago Bears, trounced 50-24 by the Cincinnati Bengals and shut out in the NFL playoffs by the Los Angeles Rams, but they remain favorites of the television networks.

In the National Football League schedule released Wednesday, the Cowboys will have the maximum three appearances on ABC television's Monday Night Football series this fall, although one of the games will actually be played on Sunday night.

For the fifth season in a row, the Cowboys will open the ABC football series. This year it will be a home game Sept. 8 against the New York Giants.

They also have another Monday night game against the St. Louis Cardinals and a Sunday night version of ABC's pro football show against the Los Angeles Rams, who whipped the Cowboys 24-0 in the NFL playoffs.

The Cowboys follow the Giants game with contests against the Detroit Lions, the Atlanta Falcons and then go to St. Louis for the Monday night contest against the Cardinals, who are coached by Gene Stallings, one of five former Dallas assistants who is now a head coach in the NFL.

Tom Landry's Cowboys will face two of the other former assistants, Dan Reeves' Denver Broncos and Mike Ditka's Chicago Bears later in the season.

The Cowboys face a tough 10-game stretch after that, including matches against Denver, Washington, Philadelphia and the Los Angeles Raiders. They'll close out the regular season with consecutive home games against Philadelphia and the Chicago Bears.

The exhibition schedule has the Cowboys playing the Bears in London Aug. 3; at San Diego Aug. 9; at the Raiders Aug. 16; at home against the Steelers Aug. 23 and at home against the Houston Oilers Aug. 30.

Texas Fishing Report

AUSTIN (AP) — Here is the weekly fishing report as compiled by Parks and Wildlife for April 3, 1986

CENTRAL

BASTROP: Water clear, 71 degrees, normal level; black bass good to 4 pounds on smoke worms and jigs; hybrid striper slow; crappie good to 80 fish per string on jigs and minnows; catfish good to 8 pounds live bait.

BELTON: Water clear, 59 degrees, normal level; black bass good to 2½ pounds on minnows; hybrid striper fair to 4 pounds on minnows; crappie good to 15 fish per string on minnows; white bass slow; catfish good to 4 pounds on shrimp, night crawlers and summer sausage; carp and buffalo spawning near dam.

BROWNWOOD: Water clear, 4½ feet low; black bass good to 6½ pounds on RatLtraps and worms; striper fair to 8 pounds on CC shad and Model A Bombers; crappie fair to 1¼ pounds to 18 fish per string; white bass fair to 2 pounds to 20 per string on slabs; Roadrunners, Rapowsky Super Shad; catfish fair to 3½ pounds on minnows and small perch.

CANYON: Water clear, 63 degrees, normal level; black bass fair to 4½ pounds on crawdad cranks; smallmouth bass slow; striper good to 21 pounds on pencil poppers and Redfins on riprap off damand main lake points; crappie good on minnows to 40 fish per string; white bass fair to 25 fish in the lake on jig and spoon; catfish good 5 pounds on night crawlers.

FAYETTE: Water clear, 66 degrees, 3 inches low; black bass off with the biggest bass of the week a 10 pounder; numbers are down on dark worms; crappie fair to 10 fish per string mostly on minnows; catfish good to 51 pounds on live bait.

GIBBONS CREEK: Water slightly murky, 73 degrees, one foot low; black bass fair to 8½ pounds with about 8 keepers for week on cranks, buzz and motoroil worms; crappie slow; catfish good to 8 pounds on jugs on perch and crawdads.

LIMESTONE: Water muddy, 80, normal level; bass and all fishing slow due to high winds, a few yellow catfish to 25 pounds on trotline with live bait.

LBJ: Water murky, 64 degrees, normal level; black bass good to 4 pounds on white spinners and black jigs; striper good to 6 pounds trolling yellow Hellbenders with white trailers; crappie good to 35 fish per string on minnows and jigs; white bass good to 40 fish per string on shad cranks up the Llano Arm of LBJ; catfish good to 28 pounds on trotline on shad and perch.

SOMERVILLE: Water clear, normal level; black bass real good in creek to 3 pounds on L'il George and speck rigs; striper fairly good in deeper water to 5 pounds; crappie real good to 25 fish per string in the creeks in shallow water; white bass good in same area on minnows, jigs and L'il George; catfish fairly slow.

STILLHOUSE: Water clear, 57 degrees, normal level; black bassand smallmouth to 3 pounds in cove north of marina on ringworm, minnows and nightczg73nd marina; crappie fair to 15 fish per string to one pound from the bank in the cove north of the marina; catfish slow.

TRAVIS: Water clear, 63 degrees, normal level; black bass good to 4½ pounds on 3 inch smoke glitter worms, twister tailedgrubs; 4 inch strawberry worms; striper slow; crappie fair in 10-15 feet of water in brush piles; whites fair; catfish slow.

WHITNEY: Water clear, 59 degrees, 4 feet low; black bass good to 5 pounds 12 ounces on spinners, topwaters and minnows; striper good from 4½ pound to 20 pounds on white jig, perch and Redfin; crappie slow; white bass good to 2½ pounds to 26-30 per string on Redfin, Long A and minnows.

NORTHEAST

ATHENS: Water clear, 62 degrees, normal level; black bass fair to 7 pounds on large blade spinners and topwaters such as Rogues, Devil's Horse and Long A, still some nesting, spawn about over; crappie very slow; white bass slow in deep water; catfish good to 12 pounds on trotline on small perch and bloodbait.

BOB SANDLIN: Water clear, 65 degrees, normal level; black bass fair to 7 pounds on lizards and Rogues; crappie fair around bridge pilings with minnows to 20 fish per string; white bass fair to 20 fish per string on deep diving cranks; catfish fair to 7 pounds on cutbait and stinkbait.

BRIDGEPORT: Water clear, 78 degrees, normal level; black bass slow; striper slow; crappie fairly good but slowing from last week on minnows to 30 fish per string; white bass slow; catfish fairly good to 10 pound range on shad.

SOUTH

AMISTAD: Water clear, 81 degrees, 20 feet low; black bass fairly good to 4 pounds on purple or red firetailed worms, jigs, chartreuse and tiger cranks, green and brown crawdad baits; striper fairly good to 18 pounds on bananahead jig with one ounce Sassy Shad; crappie slow; white bass slow in river channels; catfish good in 10-20 feet of water in good numbers on shrimp and worms.

COLETO: Water slightly off color, normal level; black bass excellent to 7 pounds 12 ounces on Shadrap, blue metalflake worms and minnows; striper slow to 2½ pounds on minnows; crappie erratic; white bass slow; catfish good to 23 pounds on bloodbait and night crawlers.

CORPUS CHRISTI: Water murky, 68 degrees, 2 feet low; black bass slow; striper slow; crappie fair in shallows on minnows early; white bass slow; catfish slow.

FALCON: Water clear, 29 feet low; black 4mY striper slow; crappie fair in brushpiles; white bass good from Tiger to dam under gulls on jigs and spoons; catfish good on frozen shrimp on rod and reel.

MEDINA: Water clear, 22 feet low; black bass fair to 4 pounds on minnows; striper good to 9 pounds plus, first big ones brought out; crappie slow; white bass slow; catfish good to 10 pounds and up on perch.

WEST

ARROWHEAD: Water murky, 60 degrees, 4 feet low; black bass real slow, some to 4 pounds on minnows; striper slow; crappie good to35 per string, some strings to 70 fish in shallow water on minnows; white bass slow; catfish good to 3 pounds to about 5 fish per string on minnows.

BAYLOR: Water clear, 60 degrees, normal level; black bass good to 7 pounds on black jig and eel, RatLtrap; crappie good to 30 fish per string on minnows; catfish good to 6pounds on rod and reel nightcrawlers and shrimp.

FT. PHANTOM HILL: Water cloudy, 64 degrees, 5 feet low; black bass fair to 3 pounds on black and chartreuse worms, hybrid striper good to 7 pounds wading, most about 2 years old and three pounds on cranks and downriggers trolling Hellbenders; crappie good to 25 fish per string on hair jigs and minnows; white bass good to 20 fish per string on cranks; catfish slow.

GREENBELT: Water clear, 61 degrees, normal level; black bass slow; striper slow; crappie fair to 4 fish per string on minnows and lures; white bass slow; catfish fair to 1½ pounds.

HUBBARD CREEK: Water slightly off color, 59 degrees, 8½ feet low; black bass fair to 6 pounds on chartreuse spinners; striper slow; crappie fairly good to 18 fish per string to near 2 pounds; catfish real good to 25 pounds on minnows and shiners.

MEREDITH: Water clear, 77 degrees, normal; black bass slow; striper slow; crappie fair to 8 fish per string on minnows; white bass real good to 18 fish per string on minnows, slabs and shad; catfish fairly good to 12 pounds on minnows with trotline; walleye fairly good averaging to 4 fish per string on minnows.

POSSUM KINGDOM: Water clear, 65 degrees, 4 feet low; black bass fairly good to 8 pounds on dark plastic worms; striper fair to 5 pounds on slabs; crappie picking up to 25 fish per string on minnows; white bass good with strings to 60 or more fish on slabs and minnows in fairly shallow water; catfish improving on trotline to 4 pounds on big minnows and perch.

SPENCE: Water clear, 60 degrees, 30 feet low; black bass good to 6½ pounds on dark worms; striper good on live bait drifting to 24½; crappie fair, not hot and heavy yet on minnows; white bass fairly good moving toward the river on chartreuse slabs; catfish slow; Wildcat and Paint Creek ramps good, Humble Crossing ramp still good but water shallow.

WHITE RIVER: Water clear, 57 degrees, 18 inches low; black bass good to 7 pounds; crappie good to 17 fish per string to 2½ pounds on minnows; white bass slow; catfish good to 15 pounds on rod and reel; walleye slow to 4 pounds on minnows.

Mediterranean becoming dangerous for travelers

By ROBERT H. REID

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Mediterranean, once an idyllic haven for movie stars, poets and princes, has suddenly become the playground of terrorists and one of the world's most dangerous places for travelers.

Since last June, about 80 people have been killed in planes, ships and airports in the countries that rim the Mediterranean basin. Most were victims of the mounting cycle of violence spilling across the region from the turbulent Middle East.

In addition, at least 60 Palestinians and Tunisians were killed Oct. 1 when Israeli jets struck Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters near Tunis in retaliation for the slaying six days earlier of three Israelis on a yacht in Larnaca, Cyprus.

The State Department cautioned Americans to be "careful and alert" while traveling in Mediterranean countries after Wednesday's bomb explosion on a TWA jetliner over southern Greece.

Four Americans were killed when an explosion blew a 9-foot-by-3-foot hole in the Boeing 727 and sucked them out of the plane as the aircraft approached Athens airport on a flight from Rome.

Greek and airline officials say the blast was caused by an explosive device in a piece of luggage beneath a seat in the 10th row of the passengers' compartment.

A little-known Palestinian terrorist group calling itself the Arab Revolutionary Cells claimed responsibility for the bomb in a telephone call to a Western news agency in Beirut, Lebanon.

The blast is the latest in a grisly wave of violence against travelers in an area where tourism is one of the most important national industries.

Travel agents who met last winter in Italy spoke quitely of a decline in bookings from the United States, stemming from Americans' fears of being the target of a terrorist act during their Mediterranean holiday. Some agents said their bookings were off 50 percent from previous years.

The latest series of attacks began last June, when Shiite Moslem Lebanese hijacked TWA Flight 847 on its way from Athens to Rome and diverted it to Beirut.

At Beirut airport, the gunmen shot dead U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem and dumped his body on the tarmac. The last of the hostages were released 17 days later.

On the morning of Dec. 27, Palestinian gunmen raked the departure hall of Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport with automatic weapons fire in an attack that left 16 people dead.

Another four people were killed in a second, coordinated attack that same day at the airport in Vienna. The attackers were believed to belong to a radical Palestinian group led by Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabry al-Banna.

Egyptian authorities blame the Abu Nidal group, which has links to Libya and Syria, for the Nov. 23 hijacking of an EgyptAir jet to Malta while on a flight from Athens to Cairo.

The gunmen shot dead two passengers, an American and an Israel, before Egyptian commandos stormed the plane. The rescue operation backfired, and another 58 people, including three hijackers, died.

Last Oct. 7, New Yorker Leon Klinghoffer was shot dead after four members of the Palestine Liberation Front, a branch of the Palestine Liberation Organization, commandeered the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro off Egypt.

Klinghoffer's body was dumped overboard but washed ashore on the Syrian coast. The four gunmen were arrested after U.S. jets intercepted their Egyptian plane on a flight from Cairo to Tunisia and diverted it to Sicily.

The Achille Lauro hijacking followed a Sept. 25 raid by three PLO members on an Israeli yacht in Larnaca, Cyprus. The three gunmen, including Briton Michael Ian Davison, who served with the PLO in Lebanon and North Yemen, surrendered to Cypriot authorities after killing two Israeli men and an Israeli woman.

They were later sentenced by a Cypriot court to life imprisonment for the operation that led to the Israeli air raid on the PLO headquarters.

Bomb victims' families head for Greek capital

Associated Press

Some relatives of four Americans killed when a bomb exploded aboard a TWA flight for Athens headed for the Greek capital today, as others bemoaned how the United States deals with such terrorist acts.

A bomb aboard TWA Flight 840 to Athens killed the four as the flight approached the Greek capital from Rome on Wednesday, officials said.

Greek officials and TWA identified the victims as Alberto Ospina, a Colombian-born American from Stratford, Conn.; Demetra Stylian, 52; her daughter, Maria Klug, 25, and granddaughter Demetra Klug, 8 months old, all from Annapolis, Md.

In Annapolis, Paul Alexiou, 54, said his sister was returning to her native country to take care of some business and that she had not been worried about the trip.

But family members were concerned, said Warren Klug Sr., Mrs. Klug's father-in-law.

"We just said, 'Maria that's just such a hot spot over there and you shouldn't be going,'" Klug said from his Dundalk home. "But she said, 'We'll be all right.' She was that type of girl, she wasn't a worrier."

"I just wish President Reagan would stop the terrorists instead of antagonizing them," Klug said. "It just seems like it's adding fuel to the fire instead of stopping them."

His wife, Joyce, said through sobs, "Innocent people are dying for no reason, no reason at all."

"You hear about these things but you never believe that they would hit so close to home," Alexiou said at his Annapolis home, where friends and relatives gathered Wednesday evening.

"I never thought we would lose all three of them at once," Alexiou's wife, Penny, said.

Alexiou, a Greek native who came to Annapolis when he was 18, planned to fly to Greece today to join Mrs. Klug's husband, Warren, who left Wednesday.

Experts say 'luck' saved jetliner

By RALPH VARTABEDIAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Only luck saved TWA's Flight 840 after a 10-foot hole was blasted in the jetliner's side by an explosive device during a flight over Greece, air safety experts and aeronautical engineers said Wednesday.

The Boeing 727 aircraft was descending and at an altitude of 15,000 feet when the bomb went off, triggering an explosive decompression in the pressurized passenger compartment and sucking out four passengers.

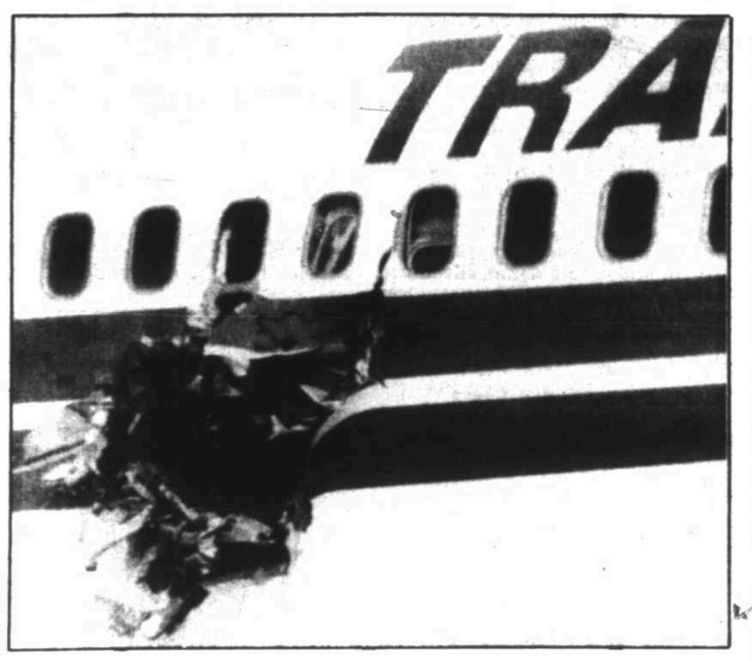

"An aircraft is exactly like a balloon, and once you get a hole in a balloon it doesn't just deflate. It explodes," said Issac Hoover, an airframe engineer and airline industry consultant.

"I think they are very fortunate," he said of the surviving passengers and crew members.

If the bomb had gone off at a higher altitude, the decompression and resulting structural damage to the plane would have been worse. At some point, the damage would have caused a chain reaction of cracking and structural failure, experts explained.

In addition, heavy debris from the area blasted away could have caused major damage to delicate control surfaces, which would have destabilized the plane in flight. Such loss of controls have contributed to numerous accidents, including the crash of a Japan Air Lines Boeing 747 last year, the worst single aircraft accident in aviation history.

The hole in the side of the aircraft did not make the plane significantly more difficult to control.

A gaping hole remains in the side of a TWA 727 jetliner, evidence of the force of the explosion which struck the craft during a flight Wednesday from Rome to Athens.

"A hole in the side of an aircraft doesn't particularly screw you up aerodynamically," said Jerry Presba, an aircraft structures specialist. "A lot of worse things could have happened during the decompression."

The hole caused somewhat greater drag, which was easily overcome by using additional engine power on landing, TWA officials said in a press conference in New York.

The hole was blown at floor level, about three rows in front of the point where the wing joins the fuselage. It appeared from photos examined by air safety experts that the force of the blast and the force of escaping cabin pressure burst apart the aircraft's aluminum skin.

A 727 normally is pressurized to between five and six pounds per square inch over the outside pressure at that altitude, Boeing spokesman Richard Schleh said. That amounts to about 36 tons of force, more than the weight of 36 subcompact cars, over the roughly 10-foot-by-10-foot area that was blown out by the bomb.

Photographs of the explosion damage appeared to indicate that at least one and possibly three "frame" members were damaged. Frames are structural rings around the fuselage, spaced lengthwise about every two feet.

Commercial airliners are typically designed to sustain flight with one frame severed and several other frames seriously cracked, Hoover said.

In addition to structural peril caused by the bomb, debris from the explosion could have knocked out aircraft controls or caused catastrophic engine damage.

Damage caused by metal being sucked into the jet engines often is confined inside an engine, but it also can lead to serious safety hazards. For example, an engine fell off an American Airlines 727 last year when it was struck by a chunk of blue ice — frozen disinfectant from a leaky toilet.

Debris would have traveled in an air flow over the wings and then down near the engines, said Hoover. But a flat piece of metal can behave in unpredictable ways.

It possibly could have damaged the wing or a control surface on the wing, known as an aileron. Less likely but still possible was damage to the 727's tail or its control surfaces, the elevator and rudder.

Pilots will seek boycott of terror-linked lands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association said today it plans to call for a worldwide pilot's boycott of countries linked to terrorism.

Meanwhile, an association of airline passengers is telling Americans not to travel in the Mediterranean area unless it's necessary.

Those developments came today in the wake of Wednesday's bombing of a TWA jet that killed four Americans on a flight to Athens from Rome. The bomb tore a hole in the side of the jet. A Palestinian terrorist group has claimed responsibility.

Capt. Henry Duffy, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, said 65,000 pilots from 60 nations will be convening next week in London, "and we're going from the U.S. to be carrying a resolution of boycott against countries that either harbor terrorists or foster terrorism."

Appearing on the NBC "Today" show, Duffy said of the planned boycott, "I think it's long past due."

He added: "We've got to have the security devices at the airports, but we've got to have good intelligence to track these people, the terrorists, as they circulate around the world. And our boycott is one additional message to the countries that would foster that kind of terrorism."

Duffy did not specify which countries would be boycotted.

Capt. Thomas M. Ashwood, the association's security expert, said the boycott would be proposed formally during a closed meeting of the International Air Line Pilots Association next Thursday in London.

Weaknesses in detection apparent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bomb that tore a hole in the side of a TWA Boeing 727, sending four passengers plummeting to their deaths, demonstrates the weakness of tools used to detect explosives at even the most security-conscious airports, experts say.

"TWA in that part of the world is complying and fully implementing rather extraordinary security measures," said Richard Lally, the top security expert for the Air Transport Association, on Wednesday.

Even so, an explosive device found its way into either the cargo hold or passenger compartment without detection on the Rome-to-Athens flight. It exploded when the plane was flying at 15,000 feet over southern Greece, but the plane landed safely at Athens 10 minutes later.

Lally and other aviation security specialists characterized the Rome airport as among the most security conscious in the world, with officials using special precautions on flights by U.S. airlines. Security was stepped up after last December's terrorist attack at the airports there and in Vienna.

"The fact of the matter is you cannot make a security system foolproof; you can't even get close to it," said Capt. Thomas M. Ashwood, a security expert for the Air Line Pilots Association.

Ashwood said the association plans to call on pilots attending an international conference next week to boycott countries linked to terrorist attacks.

Before TWA Flight 840 departed the Rome airport Wednesday, checked bags were examined with X-rays or were transported directly from another TWA aircraft which had arrived from the United States, according to various experts, who spoke under the condition that they not be identified.

Passengers were screened before boarding and their carry-on luggage examined by X-ray.

For the bomb to have been hidden in carry-on luggage "would require a major breakdown in what has been an intensified security net" at the airport, said Ashwood. He speculated that the explosives, if in the cabin, likely were planted there before the passengers boarded.

But TWA President Richard D. Pearson said such a plant was unlikely since the Boeing 727 was cleaned and prepared for another flight under the supervision of security officials after it arrived in Rome from Cairo with an intermediate stop in Athens.

Nevertheless, on the flight from Rome to Athens, an explosion ripped open the side of the aircraft just forward from the wing, sucking a man, two women and a baby out of the aircraft. Three of the bodies, one still strapped to its seat, were found on an abandoned Greek airstrip 120 miles south of Athens, and the fourth was discovered in the sea nearby.

A Palestinian terrorist group later claimed responsibility.

Lally suggested that the current brand of terrorism might be beyond the ability of airlines to handle.

The bombing "points up the irrefutable fact that acts of terrorism are directed against governments.... We have to recognize a government responsibility" to ensure a secure environment for air travel, he said.

Last summer after the hijacking of another TWA plane and the bombing of an Air India jumbo jet, the Federal Aviation Administration imposed tighter security requirements aimed at detecting explosives in baggage. Industry sources said those procedures were used in Rome.

The FAA directives require elimination of curbside check-in of bags; that checked bags be matched with boarding passenger; that more bags be subjected to X-ray or physical searches; and that carry-on bags be subject to X-ray and more frequent physical searches.

But even those precautions are inadequate, the experts acknowledged.

In the long term, said Lally of the ATA, which represents the major airlines, new technologies must be developed to detect explosives.

"We need to accelerate that effort," said Lally. "Until we do that, we're using the best tools that are available...but they are not techniques that can or will detect explosives."

Airports, especially in regions where terrorist attacks are likely, routinely subject bags to X-ray screening or random physicial searches. But security experts say the accuracy of X-ray technology depends on the ability of the person monitoring the screen.

To family, Flight 840 pilot 'really a hero'

Associated Press

TWA Capt. Richard "Pete" Petersen, who landed Flight 840 after a bomb exploded aboard it, "really is a hero," says his wife, who is keenly aware of the dangers her husband faces.

"I'm just so proud of him. He's a great guy, a great pilot. He's safe and he saved all those lives," Linda Petersen said Wednesday in Sarasota, Fla., after her husband landed the crippled jet.

"After 16 years of marriage to a pilot you learn to accept the dangers," she said. "If you thought about it all the time you'd be a basket case."

An obscure Palestinian group called the Arab Revolutionary Cells claimed responsibility for the bomb, which tore a hole in the Boeing 727 as it flew at 15,000 feet approaching Athens, Greece, from Rome. The four victims were sucked through the hole caused by the explosion, but the plane landed safely in Athens 10 minutes later. It had carried 111 passengers.

Mrs. Petersen said her husband began flying the overseas assignment that includes the Rome-Athens route two months ago.

"He keeps calm, absolutely," she said. "He really is a hero."

Petersen, 54, called his wife, but "It was a short conversation and a very bad connection. He did tell me there was a bomb," she said. "He wanted first to assure me that he was safe. And the second thing, he wanted to speak to the children. He talked to 4-year-old Tiffany, but she really didn't comprehend."

Another child, Krista, 8, was in school, but Mrs. Petersen said she called the school so the child wouldn't hear news accounts and worry.

Petersen, a native of Omaha, Neb., moved with his family to Florida's Gulf Coast five years ago.

In Meadville, Pa., the parents of a flight attendant said their daughter, with only four week's experience, had no intention of quitting despite the blast aboard her flight.

"She said she was five rows away from the blast when it went off," said Robert Purdy, father of Cynthia Lynn Purdy, 21, a former beautician.

"She seemed to be very well composed and determined to go on. She loves to travel. She loves to work with people," said Purdy.

Her mother, Shirley, said her daughter called from Athens to say she was OK and that "she sounded very calm. Her voice was very calm."

Ms. Purdy had flown the Rome-to-Athens route three times since she was hired on March 7, her father said.

"We know that it's dangerous, especially now," Mrs. Purdy said. "But you can't turn off the world because there's dangerous people in it."

Deepening polarization threatens Lebanese press freedoms

By RODEINA KENAAN

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Television Channel 7 delivers the news with a Moslem viewpoint from its studios in west Beirut. A few miles away in east Beirut, Channel 5 gives the news with a Christian view.

Both stations are government-owned and they have similar program schedules, showing movies, British comedy shows and American soap operas.

But when it comes to the news, each broadcasts its own politically distinct version.

This divergence reflects a deepening polarization in Lebanon after 11 years of civil war and the threat to press freedoms that many editors and writers believe is growing.

Before the hostilities, Beirut's news media had the greatest freedom in the Arab world, covering a wide spectrum of the region's politics.

Now with political upheaval and a worsening economy, news outlets are under pressure from the various militias that control the country.

"The Lebanese press is no longer the press it used to be 10 years ago," said Talal Salman, publisher and editor-in-chief of the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir.

"It is now a miserable press, a crippled press. The Lebanese press used to be the press of the Arabs. It is no longer."

Salman narrowly escaped assassination last year in an ambush by unidentified gunmen in west Beirut, the sector run by Moslem militias since they drove out Christian army units in February, 1984.

Beirut Radio is technically state-run, but is in west Beirut where the government no longer has any control.

Before 1984 the station supported President Amin Gemayel, a Christian. Now it is heavily influenced by the Shiite Moslem Amal movement led by Nabih Berri, Lebanon's justice minister and Gemayel's political foe.

All militias have their own newspapers and pirate radio stations, blaring propaganda across Lebanon's crowded airwaves in a war of words.

More than 30 Lebanese journalists have been killed in fighting or assassinated because of their political viewpoints.

Newspaper offices have been bombed.
