Saddam claims rebels crushed

New cabinet said forming

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Saddam Hussein of Iraq Saturday promised political reform, including a new parliament, constitution and Cabinet in the nation he has ruled with an iron hand since 1979.

In his first nationally televised address since the end of the Gulf War, Saddam also said his government had crushed the Shiite rebellion in the south and would soon defeat Kurdish rebels in the north.

Without mentioning it by name, he accused Iran of encouraging the rebellion. Tehran has long sheltered dissident Iraqi Shiite groups, but has denied any part in the insurrection.

The rebels, meanwhile, claimed to control the country's third-largest city and said thousands of army defectors were fighting on their side.

Saddam's liberalization moves are an apparent attempt to quell the twin rebellions rocking Iraq in the turmoil that followed his crushing defeat by the allies.

He referred to the rebels as "stooges and agents of foreign enemies," and said the Kurds were fighting to serve their own interests and those of Israel.

"With God's aid we have crushed the sedition in the cities of the south," he said.

Dressed in military uniform and reading from a prepared text, Saddam said his country was faced with rebellion while it was still "bleeding from the consequences of the vicious aggression committed by 30 countries," referring to the U.S.-led allied forces in Kuwait.

He said the Iraqi government would move into a "new political era."

A new parliament will be elected, and a new constitution will be offered for discussion and debate before it is endorsed in a general referendum, Saddam said.

"Iraqis will find in this a new era more liberty to express their wills and their interests through political parties, societies, and press."

Incumbents facing opponents in races at Ira, Hermleigh

Just a few days before the end of the filing period, Snyder ISD and city council can count no contested races for their May 4 elections, but races at Ira and Hermleigh have heated up.

Gwen Cumbie filed for Place 4 on the Ira school board Friday, challenging incumbent Bob Barbee, while Mobil employee Doug White filed for Place 5, providing a contestant for incumbent Sidney Wall. Those are the only two places up for election on the Ira ISD board this year.

At Hermleigh, incumbents Tony Lambaren and Andres Rodriguez have filed for two of the three at-large positions on that school board. They bring the number of candidates to five, challenging for three places. The other three candidates are Jesse Rios, Julius Roemisch and Jimmy Hudgins.

Carole Haynes, the third at-large incumbent, has not filed.

Also last week, Jimmy Frank "Chip" Roemisch filed for an unexpired term on the Hermleigh board. At present, he is unopposed.

With the March 20 filing deadline looming, only incumbents have filed in the Snyder ISD and Snyder City Council elections.

Incumbent Snyder ISD trustees Mike Jordan and Terry Martin, representing Place 2 and Place 3, are still unopposed, as is at-large city councilman Mike Thornton.

Place 2 councilman Jack Denman and Mayor Troy Williamson.

No one has filed for the council's other at-large seat, currently held by Paul Zeck.

There are no places on the Western Texas College board of trustees up for election this May.

CTBS test slated for local schools

Snyder Independent School District students will be taking the fourth edition of the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills (CTBS/4) achievement test on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

School officials said CTBS/4, published by CTB/McGraw-Hill, was chosen because it provides "a highly accurate and current comparison" of the achievement of local students with that of the nation's schools as a whole.

The testing will be for students in the first through eleventh grades.

Officials urge parents to discuss the importance of the test with their child. They add that every child should take the test during the approved time schedule. If a child is ill and cannot take the test, parents should call the school.

City, county tax rebates up more than 10% this month

The City of Snyder and Scurry County showed tax rebate increases amounting to more than 10 percent over those of a year ago, according to the state comptroller's office.

The rebates, received this month, reflect taxes collected by businesses in January.

Snyder received $59,588.37, an increase of 11.01 percent over the $53,651.46 it took in during March of 1990. For the year, the city has received $229,918.87, or 12.29 percent more than the $204,752.29 received through the same period a year ago.

March rebates to Scurry County amounted to $38,892.91, up 13.72 percent from last March's total of $34,199.15. For the year, the county has received $146,575.13, an increase of 14.46 percent over $128,061.81 received last year.

County faces short agenda

Three agenda items face Scurry County commissioners court as it meets at 10 a.m. Monday at the county courthouse.

Topping the morning's agenda is James Aaron of the Fluvanna Volunteer Fire Department. Aaron will address the court concerning selling old equipment and the possible purchase of new equipment.

Also on the agenda will be the designation of a date to accept automobile liability insurance for county vehicles and discussion of the purchase of a grid roller from Martin County.

In addition, the court is scheduled to approve previous minutes and pay bills.

A check of area cities revealed the following rebates for March:

—Abilene: received $931,299.20, an increase of 0.52 percent over the $926,489.35 received last March. The year-to-date total of $4,298,760.85 is up 69.05 percent.

—Andrews: received $47,249.85, an increase of 16.37 percent over the $40,604.55 received last March. The year-to-date total of $185,316.48 is up 8.77 percent.

—Big Spring: received $163,208.53, an increase of 96.86 percent over the $82,905.09 received last March. The year-to-date total of $730,238.61 is up 95.93 percent.

—Colorado City: received $21,335.24, a decrease of 11.08 percent over the $23,583.23 received last March. The year-to-date total of $109,866.79 is up 16.11 percent.

—Lamesa: received $33,633.90, an increase of 20.42 percent over the $27,954.29 received last March. The year-to-date total of $147,745.40 is up 12.01 percent.

—Lubbock: received

$947,856.76, a decrease of 8.71 percent over the $1,023,297.52 received last March. The year-to-date total of $4,188,187.61 is up 0.01 percent.

—Post: received $10,912.85, an increase of 24.61 percent over the $8,757.40 received last March. The year-to-date total of $46,388.48 is up 15.56 percent.

—Roby: received $1,193.22, an increase of 15.76 percent over the $1,030.74 received last March. The year-to-date total of $4,702.87 is up 2.46 percent.

—Rotan: received $6,806.62, an increase of 41.25 percent over the $4,818.71 received last March. The year-to-date total of $32,632.93 is up 86.33 percent.

—San Angelo: received $365,568.04, an increase of 7146 percent over the $341,206.69 received last March. The year-to-date total of $1,664,348.68 is up 13.14 percent.

—Sweetwater: received $83,680.03, an increase of 81.69 percent over the $46,055.46 received last March. The year-to-date total of $364,888.17 is up 101.79 percent.

Ag land may qualify for special appraisal

Agricultural land may be eligible for property tax relief, said Ray Peveler, chief appraiser of the Scurry County Appraisal District.

According to Peveler, qualified ranchers and farmers can apply for a special, lower appraisal of their land, based on what it will produce rather than what it would sell for in the open market.

The basis for both types of special appraisal is found in the Texas Constitution, Peveler said. Article 8, Sec. 1-d-1 addresses what is often known as open-space land appraisal, and Article 8, Sec. 1-d addresses agricultural-use or "ag-use" appraisal.

Landowners must file completed, signed applications for special appraisal at the appraisal district office by April 30. Those who file this year include owners of land under 1-d appraisal and landowners whose property did not previously receive 1-d-1 appraisal. Late-filed 1-d-1 appraisal applications will be considered until the day before the 1991 appraisal records are approved, but will draw a penalty.

"The requirements for application and for qualification of both the land and the owner are different for the two types of appraisal," Peveler said.

Most property owners apply for 1-d-1 appraisal. To qualify, the land must be used for agriculture, timber growth or as an ecological laboratory. This form of appraisal does not restrict ownership to individuals and does not require agriculture to be the owner's primary business.

However, this form of special appraisal requires that the land is used for a qualifying agricultural or timber purpose to the degree of intensity generally

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Some people can add years to their lives by telling the truth about their age."

People in some professions, like coaching, prefer to retire on a winning season. After one successful stakeout, we're gonna end our brief career as a private eye.

We have a pretty simple routine of rising early, taking a walk and then drinking a pot of coffee at the office while reading three daily newspapers.

We noticed that one of newspapers was missing — always on a Wednesday. After eight weeks of a missing newspaper, we decided to solve the mystery.

Our stakeout started at 5:30 a.m. across the street from the newspaper office on College Ave. The Abilene paper was already in the parking lot and we watched as the carrier for the Dallas News made his toss.

At 5:48 a.m., we observed a middle-aged, slightly-built man with baseball cap stroll across the Kmart parking lot from from the direction of McDonald's.

We got that feeling we were about to be eyewitness to a crime. Sure enough, the man headed straight for the Abilene paper.

We started our engine and pulled into the parking lot just as he reached the exit with our newspaper under his arm. The paper perpetrator was caught red-handed, and we hope red-faced.

3 dogs maul boy

AUSTIN (AP) — Animal control authorities have impounded three large dogs that attacked a 7-year-old boy on his way home from the South Austin Recreation Center.

Christopher Knapp suffered bites to his head, arms, chest and back during the attack by three Rhodesian Ridgebacks, who were roaming free, officials said.

The dogs weigh about 70 pounds each.

"We asked him if they were his dogs and he said ... that they belonged to someone in the neighborhood," said Pat Moore, a recreation center employee.

Chris said he tried to leave the recreation center to go home. He said he had seen the three dogs once a couple of months ago.

FDA panel rejects Alzheimer's drug

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A government panel is refusing to approve the first proposed drug for treatment of Alzheimer's disease after concluding that the medication's effects have not been studied sufficiently.

A Food and Drug Administration panel ignored a last-minute emotional plea Friday night and decided not to recommend approval of the drug tacrine to be sold under the brand name Cognex.

Warner-Lambert Co., which applied to sell the drug, presented results from two separate clinical trials.

Volunteers at West log over 335 hours

Volunteers in a new program formed at West Elementary in January now have well over 335 hours logged in helping teachers with various projects.

The volunteer program was created in order to support both students and teachers at West and to stimulate interested persons in the community to take a more active role in public education.

Jerry Casey, co-ordinator and spokesman for the group, said anyone can volunteer. There are no special qualifications, just a genuine love of children and a desire to help them receive the best possible educational experience.

She said the quality of education makes a difference in the quality of lives. This affects the entire community, and one's decision to volunteer will make a positive difference.

Mrs. Casey also said the education of a child requires time, effort, and responsibility on the part of the school and of the home. The volunteer program builds a bridge between the school and the home resulting in open communication, better understanding and support for the student, the parent and the teachers, she said.

Volunteers at West attended a campus orientation, familiarizing themselves in areas where their services would be needed.

Each volunteer was assigned to a teacher and a conference was held discussing the expectations and a workable schedule planned.

Volunteers have spent over 335 hours collectively in the library, special education room and other classrooms. Their duties include shelving books, listening to children read, working with math flash cards, crafts, plays, bulletin boards, grading papers, spelling bee preparations, and baby sitting in homes to allow others to help at the school. Volunteer hours are spent only by the volunteer helping the teachers and the children. The school's Parent Council hours are separate from the volunteer program which currently has 24 members.

Mrs. Casey stressed the need for more volunteers and anyone interested can contact West Elementary.

Senior Center activities announced

Senior citizens will be working as volunteers when surplus commodities are distributed through the Senior Center Wednesday. Persons who wish to receive commodities are to enter the building through the north doors. Help in completing certification forms is also available from the senior citizen volunteers.

The Golden K Kiwanis Club which meets in the center each Tuesday will be hosting a fish fry there on March 24. Tickets will be $6 each and can be purchased from all club members. Serving will begin at 11 a.m. and continue to 1:30 p.m. Membership in the Golden K is open to men and women 60 and over and anyone interested in joining is invited to contact the club through the center office.

The Tri-Chem textile painting class for senior citizens will meet at 9 a.m. Thursday and new members are invited to meet with the group.

Hoss Clayton and his band will perform at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the center's dining room. The Friday Sing Along is to begin at 11:30 a.m. The Sunshine Choir will go to Snyder Nursing Center to entertain residents there at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

DEWEY MOORE

Funeral services are scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church Chapel for James Dewey Moore, 83, long-time Scurry County resident who died early Saturday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Officiating will be the Rev. Don Taylor, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Interment will follow in Hillside Memorial Gardens under the direction of Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

A resident of Scurry County since 1910, Mr. Moore was a retired farmer and land conservation contractor.

His parents, Henry Garrett and Mattie Lou Blythe Moore, moved west of Snyder in Scurry County in 1910.

Mr. Moore was born Dec. 6, 1907 in Alvarado. He married Eva Bell Fenton on Oct. 20, 1929 at Union. He was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Eva of the home on West 37th St.; two daughters, Dorothy Price of Midland and Janelle Pollard of Snyder; one sister, Ruby Eades of Denton; three brothers, Lester Moore of Snyder, Cecil Moore of Lake Whitney, and Raymond Moore of Palmdale, Calif.; five grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren.

LeRoy Spires II

1923-1991

Services are pending at Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home for LeRoy Spires II who died Friday night in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital following a long illness.

Spires, 67, was the son of a pioneer West Texas ranching family and was operator of more than 50 sections of land that included extensive ranching and oil holdings.

Spires was owner and operator of Lobo Oil Co. which was responsible for drilling and production on the Spires Ranch, located in Scurry, Kent and Fisher counties, just north of the Scurry County line.

Mr. Spires grew up on a ranch near Maryneal and spent much of his boyhood in Colorado City and San Angelo. His father reportedly purchased about 12 sections in Scurry and Kent counties in the late 1940s. Mr. Spires also had a ranching operation in Silver City, N.M.

He was born Oct. 19, 1923 in Roscoe. He married Susan Spires on Jan. 27, 1979 in Del Rio. She survives.

Other survivors include a son, LeRoy Spires III of Abilene; two daughters, Cindy Spires of Snyder and Susan Rush of Ruidoso, N.M.

Arrests recorded by local police

Snyder police made two arrests, took reports of assault and criminal mischief and worked a minor accident during a 24-hour period beginning at 7 a.m. Friday.

A report for Class B criminal mischief was filed after an officer spoke with Ernest Shifflett at 12:13 p.m. in reference to damage being done to heavy machinery at 500 North College Ave.

Police were called to the 3200 block of Ave. L at 12:36 p.m. where Mary Gibson reported she had been assaulted. A suspect was identified and a report for Class C assault was filed.

A minor accident was worked at 10:19 p.m. in the Varsity Square parking lot. Involved were a 1989 Ford driven by Jacqueline Nicole Warren of 3811 Galveston and a 1988 Ford driven by Clay Jacobs of 700 East 37th St.

A 47-year-old male was arrested at 12:01 a.m. Saturday in the 1100 block of 13th St. and charged with driving while intoxicated.

Another DWI arrest was made at 12:26 a.m. in the 1900 block of Ave. T. A 24-year-old male was charged.

Both subjects were taken to Scurry County Jail.

Seven in Reba McEntire Band die in crash

OTAY, Calif. (AP) — Seven members of country-western singer Reba McEntire's band, along with her road manager and a pilot, were killed when a private plane crashed in a mountain area near the Mexican border early Saturday, officials said.

The crash occurred about 1:45 a.m., shortly after the Hawker Sidley aircraft had taken off from Brown Field, a private airfield about 15 miles southeast of San Diego and about four miles north of the Mexican border.

Miss McEntire was not aboard, said her spokeswoman, Jenny Bohler.

There were no survivors, Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Elly Brekke said.

Ms. Bohler said those on the plane included tour manager Jim Hammon and band members Kirk Cappello, Paula Kaye Evans, Michael Thomas, Terry Jackson, Joey Cigainero, Tony Saputo and Chris Austin. She did not know the identity of the pilot, who worked for the company that leased the plane to the singer.

The band members all were under 30 years and lived in Nashville, she said.

"Needless to say Reba is very upset," Ms. Bohler said. "They all had been with her a long time. They were like family. She's lost eight family members."

Two other band members and several of Miss McEntire's road crew were on another flight that left before the one that crashed, she said.

Yugoslavian leader quits

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Military police moved into Belgrade Saturday following the resignation of the head of Yugoslavia's collective presidency, who stepped down after he failed to get support to impose a state of emergency.

The resignation of Borisav Jovic of Communist Serbia created a constitutional crisis in the nation, already shaken by secessionist republics and unrest.

Jovic had failed to win approval from other members of the presidency for a nationwide state of emergency, which he had sought to halt a week of anti-Communist demonstrations in Serbia.

The presidency includes leaders from the country's six republics and two provinces, and Saturday the representative from Montenegro, Nenad Bucin, also resigned.

Reports said the leaders voted 5-3 against imposing the state of emergency but that Bucin sided with Jovic. Montenegro, the nation's smallest republic, is Serbia's traditional ally.

Local firefighters called to blaze

Units of Snyder Fire Department responded to a rural fire Saturday morning.

The call was received at approximately 7:20 a.m. and units responded to a utility pole on fire, 10 miles north of town on 208.

Fire officials speculated lightning may have sparked the fire.

DPS arrests one

Department of Public Safety troopers recorded a felony arrest Saturday morning.

Martha McKinley, 41, was arrested at 12:15 a.m. on Hwy. 350 and charged with felony driving while intoxicated. She was transported to Scurry County Jail.

South Koreans battle police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students, many hurling firebombs or chunks of pavement, Saturday battled police in Seoul and at least six other cities. The protesters demanded the ouster of President Roh Tae-woo for a bribery scandal.

An alliance of opposition and dissident groups had called for a day of rallies nationwide to protest the scandal, and 25,000 police were on alert across the country.

Shouting "Down with Roh Tae-woo," students fought police in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Taejeon, Chonju, Kunsan and Iri.

Ag land may qualify

accepted in the area. The chief appraiser, who is responsible for approving the application, must determine that the land has been devoted principally to a qualifying use for at least five of the preceding seven years.

A 1-d appraisal requires annual application; ownership by an individual, not a corporation, partnership, agency or organization; agricultural use of the land for at least three years prior to the year of application; and that the owner's primary occupation and source of income is the land's agricultural business.

"In addition, landowners need to be aware that the law provides specific penalties for taking qualified land out of agricultural or timber production," said Peveler.

A "rollback" tax will be assessed against the landowner who has 1-d appraisal if the land is sold or its use changed. The rollback extends back for the three tax years before the year in which the change or sale occurs.

Under 1-d-1, a rollback is triggered only by changing the land's use to one that would not qualify for productivity appraisal. The additional taxes are levied for the five tax years preceding the year of the change.

The rollback is measured by the difference between taxes paid under productivity appraisal provisions and the taxes that would have been paid if the land had been put on the tax roll at market value, Peveler said. The law also requires that an interest charge be levied.

Landowners also need to be aware that they must apply for productivity valuation with each appraisal district in which they have land. Failure to do so could result in taxing units assessing taxes on the land's full market value.

Additional information and applications forms are available from the local appraisal district office.

Former congressman sees postponement as advantage

DALLAS (AP) — Steve Bartlett, who recently left his congressional seat to run for Dallas mayor, said a federal court decision suspending city elections for six months gives him more time to organize a grass-roots campaign.

Bartlett was meeting with campaign strategists Friday when the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans ruled to bar Dallas from holding city elections scheduled May 4.

"If anything, it gives me an advantage," Bartlett said. "It does help me because I'm able to conduct a grass-roots campaign over the summer, which is much more my style. That's what I do best."

Bartlett said he's never been able to run a traditional campaign. In 1977, he successfully ran for City Council with only seven weeks to campaign. In 1982, he says he had to battle ever-changing district lines because of another court dispute when he ran for the U.S. House of Representatives.

Bartlett is one of five candidates running for Dallas mayor. The other four are Councilman Jim Buerger, businessman Billy Jack Ludwig and Dallas lawyers Forrest Smith and Kathryn Cain.

The 5th Circuit overturned U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer's call for May elections under a 14-1 single member district plan, with the mayor elected citywide. The appeals court also ordered the city to pick a November election date.

Friday's ruling did not uphold a so-called 10-4-1 plan. Instead, it postponed the election to give the Justice Department time to review the plan, which calls for 10 members elected in districts, four elected regionally and the mayor at large.

Voters rejected the 14-1 plan last December, but Buchmeyer ordered a May 4 election under the plan to give minorities a greater voice in government.

The appeals court decision is the latest wrench in a three-year legal battle stemming from a voting rights lawsuit filed by two black plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs, Marvin Crenshaw and Roy Williams, claim the city's current council system, with eight single-member districts and three at-large seats, including the mayor, is discriminatory.

Although minorities represent more than 50 percent of Dallas' population, they are represented on the 11-member panel by two blacks.

Plaintiffs view the appeals court decision as a minor roadblock.

Community service chosen

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas.

(AP) — While thousands of college students party on the beaches during spring break, some choose to spend their break performing community service.

"Three or four years ago, I tried spring break on the beach," said Trent Amendt, one of six Iowa State University students who chose to do construction jobs at a Lutheran church in the Corpus Christi area.

Amendt is a 24-year-old senior majoring in industrial engineering.

"I find this matters more," he told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "On the beach, it's just a waste of time."

He is among the hundreds of college students who paid $80 each to put themselves at the disposal of Missouri Synod Lutheran congregations across the country, said the Rev. Marty Doering of Austin.

Doering is supervising the two-week "Servant Event" program at Lord of Life Lutheran Church in Flour Bluff, where Amendt spent the week working.

"People grow in faith when they work and sweat for other people," Doering said. "It develops personal and spiritual resources."

Dewey Litwiller, 25, a senior industrial engineering major working with Amendt, said, "We want to dispel the stereotype of rowdy college students on spring break, and really make a difference."

Other students choosing to serve others during spring break include volunteers from Dallas' Southern Methodist University who devoted their spring break to performing community service work in Belize, Brownsville and in East Dallas, said SMU

Volunteer Services Coordinator Bea Nealy.

The students working in Corpus Christi said some of their friends spending the week at places like Port Aransas and South Padre Island admire them for their decision to work instead of play.

College will present Texas Tech pianist in concert Tuesday

Pianist Steven Glaser, who will be performing at Western Texas College on Tuesday, has toured from Chicago to New York and Poland to Israel, but he has made his home in West Texas.

Local audiences have heard Glaser as a member of the Texas Tech piano quartet Quadriga but this will be his first solo performance. The program will begin at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

Glaser, an associate professor of music at Tech, has lived in Lubbock for two years. A native of New York, he said he initially felt a culture shock being in West Texas. He has come to appreciate the wide-open spaces and now feels somewhat claustrophobic in large cities.

Glaser began formal music lessons at age 6 and by age 8 he had auditioned for and had received a scholarship to the preparatory school of the Julliard School of Music. He attended public school during the week and Julliard all day on Saturdays. When he graduated from high school, he left Julliard to earn a bachelor of music degree with honors from the University of Michigan. He later returned to Julliard to study under the renowned pianist and teacher Nadia Reosenberg.

Glaser has performed with the Chicago Civic Orchestra and the Amsterdam Philharmonic and has entertained audiences in Israel and Europe. His largest audience, an outdoor concert for the Jewish Arts Festival on Long Island, drew 4,000 people, but his most memorable performance was in 1985 during the Allied Arts Series in Chicago's Orchestra Hall.

He has won top honors in prestigious competitions, such as the First New York Chopin International Competition and the Society of American Musicians Competition. Known for his interpretation of Chopin, Glaser has been influenced by the great violinist Jascha Heifetz and the late Leonard Bernstein.

Financial Focus

There are four major forces behind stock-market movement — psychology, interest rates, earnings and dividends.

Of the four, psychology is dominant when it comes to short-term market performance. Investor attitudes rise and fall with optimism or pessimism. To let market psychology dictate your long-term investment decisions, though, could prove costly.

Fluctuating interest rates also cause market swings. As interest rates move up, the yields available on high-grade bonds become attractive enough to lure money from the stock market. After all, if you can lock in 10 percent or more of secure income and have your principal returned at maturity why risk investing in the stock market, which has averaged a total return of 10.3 percent over the past 30 years?

In the final analysis, however, long-term stock prices are determined by earnings and dividends. These are the most important criteria to use when making the decision to invest in common stocks. They are also a solid reason to always keep part of your money in stocks.

The importance of stock earnings and dividends was illustrated in a recent study that covered a period of 35 years beginning in 1955—when business conditions were similar to those of 1989. Graphically, the study showed a remarkable parallel between earnings, dividends and stock prices. In fact, stock prices advanced just about as much as earnings and dividends.

What does this mean for average investors? It means there's a reasonably simple disciplined way to select stocks, monitor them while you own them, and finally decide when to sell them.

There are several research publications, such as Moody's, Standard & Poor's and Value Line, that closely monitor stocks' financial progress. They accurately record historical data, report current data and reasonably forecast future performance. As circumstances change, these publications are quick to re-evaluate their projections, good or bad.

Your local broker's office should have at least one of these publications on hand. Making it a habit to consult them for earnings and dividend information on the stocks you own or plan to own is a good idea for serious investors.

Investing is not a game that depends on the roll of the dice. As with any business venture, the risks are easily identified when you know how to ask questions and where to find answers. With common stocks, dividends and earnings are a good place to start.

Jaycees host national veep last weekend

Snyder Jaycees were hosts last weekend to Richard Hernandez, one of 10 national vice presidents and past Texas Jaycee president. Hernandez was in Snyder in conjunction with the annual Sweetwater Rattlesnake Roundup.

In a meeting last Saturday night at the Golden Corral, Hernandez told local Jaycees he was in town to congratulate the local Jaycee chapter on behalf of the U.S. Jaycees and the Texas Jaycees.

He said he was very proud of the organization which has ranked No. 1 in its population division since the beginning of the current Jaycee year which began May 1. Rudy Garza serves as president of the local chapter.

Snyder Jaycees are also ranked in the top 10 chapters of Texas Jaycees and are ranked No. 9 on the national level for growth in membership.

Hernandez said "Americans need heroes and in Jaycees heroes are made. Set goals and follow your dreams."

He concluded by thanking Snyder Jaycees for "the great job they are doing in the community" and encouraged them to "continue doing so."

Wife wishes she had lost weight while spouse at war

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Don't get the wrong idea. Margie Brandon was ecstatic when her husband returned home Friday, but there are a few things she wished she'd done while he was gone.

"I didn't lose weight and I didn't save money," she said as she waited with hundreds of others for a plane carrying 350 11th Air Defense Artillery soldiers back to Fort Bliss.

"Look at this, look at this," she said as she grabbed part of her behind. "I need to lose this."

"It all just happened so quick. I would say, 'I'll start in two weeks' and then, 'I'll start in a couple more weeks' and then they came home."

Mrs. Brandon had hoped to save $3,000. She said she saved about half that.

But it didn't seem to bother 1st Lt. Mark Brandon, who climbed over a concrete barrier to wrap his arms around his wife and daughter, Amber.

"After so many delays, after the stress of everything, it's finally coming to an end," said Brandon, squeezing his wife and daughter in his arms.

"There's going to be some serious modern conveniences, running water, a refrigerator..."

"A waterbed!" Mrs. Brandon piped in.

Mrs. Brandon's spirited laugh and saucy wit had supported many soldiers' spouses during the past eight months.

On the night war broke out, she and her closest friends watched all-night news reports, traded jokes and fears.

The support continued Friday. Cindy Slavinski, who Mrs. Brandon called her "right arm," showed up to greet her friends' husbands even though hers was not due to arrive.

Study suggests...

Aspirin stops women's 1st heart attacks

BOSTON (AP) — A major study provides the first evidence that healthy women who take aspirin regularly can significantly reduce their risk of heart attacks, just as men do.

The work, based on a six-year follow-up of female nurses, showed that those who took between one and six aspirin tablets a week reduced their heart-attack risk by about 30 percent.

Evidence has been mounting in recent years that regular aspirin use significantly reduces the chance of heart attacks, the nation's biggest killer. But until now, most of the evidence has come from men, and experts have been unsure whether aspirin works for women, too.

The new study, conducted at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, was presented Friday in Orlando, Fla., at an epidemiology conference sponsored by the American Heart Association.

Dr. Charles Hennekens, senior author of the study, said more research will be necessary to learn just how much women may benefit from aspirin use.

"In the meantime," he said, "for a physician wondering whether to generalize the aspirin data to women, this provides the possibility of a benefit that is comparable to that in men."

The study was based on 87,678 nurses who ranged from ages 34 to 59. All were free of outward signs of heart disease when the study began in 1980.

During the first six years, 240 suffered non-fatal heart attacks, 146 survived strokes and 130 others died of heart or blood-vessel disease.

Almost 23,000 reported taking up to six aspirin tablets a week, typically for muscle pain and arthritis. The risk of heart attacks was about 30 percent lower in these aspirin users than in other women.

Three years ago, another study directed by Hennekens provided the first firm evidence that aspirin prevents first heart attacks in outwardly healthy men. That study, of 22,071 men doctors, found that those who took an aspirin every other day had a 44 percent lower risk of heart attacks.

Researchers said that finding was more convincing than the results of the nurses' study, because the doctors were randomly assigned to take aspirin or placebos. The nurses, however, chose on their own to take aspirin, and some other factor besides their aspirin use could have accounted for their lower risk of heart attacks.

Hennekens hopes to answer the question in women with a major new study, just getting under way, that will randomly assign 40,000 nurses over age 50 to take low-dose aspirin, vitamin E or beta-carotene to see the effects on heart disease and cancer.

Dr. Lawrence Cohen of Yale University said the latest study "is another piece of the puzzle that seems to fit with the data that is coming along."

Heart disease is the leading killer of women as well as men. Of the 512,000 heart attack deaths in the United States each year, about 244,000 are in women.

Evidence is clear that aspirin is an important medicine for people who have survived heart attacks. An analysis of more than 200 aspirin studies, released last week at a meeting of the American College of Cardiology, found that aspirin cuts the risk of a second heart attack or stroke by 25 percent.

Peace ends market for yellow ribbons

HOUSTON (AP) — Some local retailers are paying the price for peace.

The abrupt end to the Persian Gulf War knocked the bottom out of the market for yellow ribbon, maps of the Middle East and books about Saddam Hussein.

"All of the sudden, the war is over and we've got yellow ribbon piled up all over the place," said store manager Dyantha Hammons of So-Fro Fabrics in Memorial City.

When the war started, the store couldn't get enough yellow ribbon to satisfy customers' demands. By the time new shipments of ribbon arrived from the manufacturing houses, the war was over.

At Bookstop stores, scores of readers dropped in to request copies of "The Rape of Kuwait," "The Desert Shield Fact Book," "Saddam Hussein: Crisis in Iraq," and a book ominously titled "Armageddon: Oil in the Middle East."

Bookstop obliged by putting displays for the books front and center. Many of the titles rocketed onto national best-seller lists. Since the end of the war, the books have moved with equal speed — back to the middle of the racks.

"In the beginning, we were having trouble keeping those books in stock. Now we are overstocked," said Nancy Doan, manager of one Houston Bookstop. "Demand for those books is off about 75 percent."

But the end of the war hasn't stopped all star-spangled shopping.

New shipments of American flags are giving the Capitol Flag Co. a chance to restock its depleted shelves. But the company still can't meet all of its demand, such as the order for 500, 3-by-5 polyester flags by the Lions Club of Wichita Falls.

"Before the war we had a big stock, and then we were cleaned out of a lot of sizes," said Lucille Parish, the owner of Capitol Flag. "Demand has dropped a little, but we still need three or four people on the floor to wait on all the customers. Normally, we only need one or two people out there at a time."

Bob Cousy scored 50 points, 25 in overtime, as the Celtics beat Syracuse, 111-105, in four overtimes in a 1953 NBA playoff game.

WATER FOR SALE

WATER BY THE DIPPERFUL ...
Mexico, in 1920, boasted a population of 4,000. In May, 1921, A.E. Humphreys brought in an oil well gusher. Mexico was a boom town. Within weeks the population hit 40,000. Men slept in tents, cars and six-to-a-room in private homes. The city's water system couldn't take it. It was turned off at night, to let the tank refill; then turned on at 6 a.m. By 9 a.m. it was all gone. During the day boys sold water by the dipperful.

A commentary

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Western Texas College has started the tedious job of finding a replacement for men's basketball coach Tony Mauldin, who has just departed to take on the title of head basketball coach at Abilene Christian University.

While Tony never won a national championship while at WTC, fans could always count on an exciting, up-tempo game.

He will be missed as a member of the Snyder community, as well as on the sidelines at WTC basketball games.

Mauldin's new job is a tough one, turning around a Wildcat program that is mired in a 38 game losing skid, including an 0-24 mark in the 1990-91 season.

"There's no place to go but up," the new ACU coach said, and he sure got that right.

With the departure of any coach, the rumor mill begins working overtime, speculating possible replacements and player defections.

Among the early names rumored to be interested in the Western Texas coaching position are former Howard and recently-resigned Sam Houston State coach Larry Brown, New Mexico Junior College's Ron Black, Reggie Franklin of Midland College, an unnamed assistant at Texas Tech and brothers Kelly and Steve Green of Frank Phillips and Howard, respectively.

Gossip also has it that several of coach Mauldin's sophomore players at WTC might be interested in furthering their educations at Abilene Christian.

Texas Tech fans in the area were sorry to see coach Gerald Myers' reign end on such a sad note earlier in the week.

The Red Raider coach took on the job when he was 34 years-old and kept it for over 20 years.

He took the Red and Black to back-to-back Southwest Conference titles and trips to the NCAA tournament in 1985 and 1986.

Falling attendance, due to an 8-23 record this season, and four straight years below .500, caused the Tech administration to seek Myers' resignation.

Athletic director T. Jones was very candid about the decision being based on dollars and cents.

Myers said on Wednesday, "I don't feel like I'm through with coaching," indicating that he might consider job options elsewhere.

Maybe he would like to coach the Westerners...

Hip injury threatens career of two-sport star Bo Jackson

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Bo Jackson's right hip, injured during the NFL playoffs in January, was examined on Friday by the Kansas City Royals team physician, while a newspaper reported that the injury could threaten his career.

The Royals said there would be no comment on Jackson's condition until Tuesday.

Jackson was examined at a Kansas City hospital by Dr. Steve Joyce. He was to be checked Monday by Dr. Jim Andrews, an orthopedic surgeon in Birmingham, Ala.

Royals general manager Herk Robinson said it would be premature to comment on Jackson, until both doctors had examined him.

The San Diego Tribune reported Friday that Jackson has a hip condition known as avascular necrosis. The Tribune cited an unidentified source close to Los Angeles medical authorities familiar with the case.

Joyce and Rich Woods, Jackson's agent, didn't return telephone calls.

Robinson, who was in Lakeland where the Royals were playing the Detroit Tigers in an exhibition game, said the Tribune report may be based on an earlier test done on Jackson by doctors not associated with the Royals.

The Tribune quoted Dr. Gary Losse, team physician for the San Diego Chargers, as saying

SHS tourney...

Tigers drop Brownfield, 5-4

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Snyder's Terry Stephens became the first SHS pitcher of the season to go the distance as he tossed the Tigers to a 5-4 consolation-bracket win over Brownfield Friday in the second round of the Snyder Baseball Tournament.

"Terry did a good job for us," said Tiger coach Albert Lewis.

"He gutted it out. He's still experiencing a little pain from a football injury, but he played through it."

"He was really impressive," Lewis continued. "I know all the kids were trying hard to get the win for him."

"We really needed the lift, as a team, too."

Offensive help came in the bottom of the seventh inning when Shelby Bufkin nailed a double into the gap in left center to drive in Bobby Clinkinbeard, breaking a 3-4 tie and setting up Saturday's Snyder-Wylie battle.

In winners' bracket second-round action Friday, Lamesa shut out Levelland, 3-0. Frenship hammered San Angelo Lake View, 13-5. Brownwood embarrassed Borger, 15-1, and Andrews outlasted Merkel, 4-1.

In the consolation bracket, Wylie nudged Sweetwater, 9-8 and Big Spring blasted Pecos, 7-2.

The Tigers jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning after lead-off hitter Richard Morris singled and moved around on a stolen base and a wild pitch.

A slow roller by Clinkinbeard allowed Morris to score the game's first run.

The tally remained at 1-0 until the top of the fifth frame when Brownfield's Noel Garcia doubled in Andy Martinez, who had gotten a single earlier in the inning.

The Cubs took a 3-2 lead in the top of the sixth on Reuben Piedra's two-bagger that drove in Alex Cruz and Ysidro Jacquez who had both walked.

Snyder answered with three in the last of the inning.

Clinkinbeard led off with a base on balls followed by a walk to Bufkin.

Shortstop Mark King lifted a triple to the wall in deep left field that scored both base runners.

A Brian Crawford sacrifice later in the inning pushed King across and set the Tigers on top, 4-3.

Jacquez's sac-fly in the Cubs' half of the seventh knotted the score before Bufkin's heroics gave the Tigers the victory.

King was the Tigers' top hitter Friday, with a single, a triple and two RBIs.

Stephens was the winner, striking out four and giving up six hits.

Brownfield's Raymond Martinez accepted the loss.

Brownfield was to face Sweetwater at 3 p.m. Saturday in its final tourney appearance.

Wylie 9, Sweetwater 8

The Mustangs' Oubigee Jones hammered a 3-run homer in the first inning but the No. 1 Class 3A Bulldogs answered with three opening-inning runs of their own and six in the fourth stanza to ice the consolation win.

Wylie was slated to battle Snyder at 11 a.m. Saturday while Sweetwater faced Brownfield at 3 p.m.

Big Spring 7, Pecos 2

The Steers used a 3-run third and six-hit pitching from Shane Myrick to post a win over District 3-4A foe Pecos Friday.

Pecos, picked 10th in the state in the season-opening Class 4A poll, could manage just one run in the first and one in the sixth.

The win earned Big Spring a berth in the consolation finals against the Canyon-Merkel winner, Saturday at 9 a.m.

Lamesa 3, Levelland 0

The Golden Tors' Michael Lucio got to first on an error by the pitcher and moved to third on a pair of consecutive wild pitches to score the only run Lamesa would need.

Wylie Diaz went the full seven innings for Lamesa, giving up just two hits.

Frenship 13, Lake View 5

The San Angelo Lake View Chiefs found out how tough the Frenship Tigers are Friday as the tourney favorites hammered the Lake View squad into submission.

Frenship poured five runs across in the first frame including RBI by Brad Cade, Romo and Douglas.

Lake View mounted a rally in the upper half of the fourth, bringing in three runs.

Frenship came back with four to maintain the lead and insure the win.

The FHS win set up Friday afternoon's Frenship-Lamesa battle for a spot in the finals.

Frenship 7, Lamesa 1

The Tigers kept pouring it on as Lamesa's one first-inning run was all that crossed the dish for the Tors.

Holding an adequate, 4-1 lead in the last of the sixth, the Tigers rallied and pushed over three more for good measure.

FHS earned a spot in the Saturday championship battle with the win.

Lamesa was to square-off against Saturday's Brownwood-Andrews loser for third place.

Brownwood 15, Borger 1

Brad Riker hammered out three hits and Jess Rathke blasted a double and a grand-slam homer to lead the Lions to an easy win against Borger Friday.

Brownwood started the game with a 7-run first inning that put the game out of reach early for the Bulldogs.

The Lions were scheduled to take on Andrews Saturday at 9 a.m., with a berth in the finals at stake.

Andrews 4, Merkel 1

The Mustangs blew open a nip-and-tuck 2-1 ballgame in the sixth inning when Jaime Emiliano drove in a pair of runs on an error in rightfield.

Andrews' Randy Gatlin was awarded the win while Robert Mendoza took the loss for the Badgers.

Aggies' Kermit Davis resigns

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — When the Texas A&M basketball media guide for last season described first-year coach Kermit Davis as "a mover and a shaker," it was not meant to preview his quick exit out of town.

But after just 50 weeks on the job, Davis quit the school Friday under a cloud of illegal recruiting allegations.

"Coach Davis determined that it was in his best interest and in the best interest of his family to resign amid all the speculation concerning the circumstances surrounding his tenure as basketball coach," Davis' attorney, George Parnham, said Friday at a news conference in Houston.

"He is convinced that the unsubstantiated clouds of speculation would plague him and his program if he fought to remain in his present position."

Davis, 31, and his attorneys contended the school's investigation as outlined in a 95-page report to President William Mobley was unfair, lacked specifics and legally was insufficient to be used as the basis for firing the coach.

"He has made his decision, it is his life," the attorney said. "I am not content or absolutely happy with the decision. I believe Kermit was not treated fairly."

Texas A&M released a brief statement acknowledging it had received and accepted Davis' resignation and said the school would begin next week the process of selecting a new coach.

"President Mobley expressed disappointment that this situation has arisen," the school statement said.

Parnham said any financial settlement with the university "was a closed matter." He added he believed Davis was made a scapegoat for the university's earlier NCAA sanctions for recruiting violations.

"He is walking away with a load of prior problems," Parnham said.

Because of an earlier NCAA probation brought on by football recruiting violations, Texas A&M risked a possible so-called "death penalty" if it runs further afoul of NCAA rules.

The school said its probe of Davis and his staff revealed a pattern of activities "which are contrary to university, NCAA, and Southwest Conference standards of conduct."

Davis' resignation Friday capped a week of discussions involving attorneys for the coach and the school.

Parnham said he believed Davis could have had legal grounds to fight for his job.

"He just simply deemed it was in the best interest of his family and his future career to go on about his business and get this behind him as soon as possible and hopefully to proceed into another institution where he can ply his trade," Parnham said.

Davis came to A&M after a successful two years at the University of Idaho and was completing the first year of a four-year contract worth about $127,000 annually. His first Aggie team won eight of 29 games.

The university reported it found eight improprieties, ranging from improper visits to recruits and by recruits to improper use of a school telephone credit card.

In addition, university officials contended Davis and assistant coach Fletcher Cockrell furnished A&M false or misleading information seven times in the course of the investigation.

A&M said most of the problems concerned talent scout Rob Johnson of New York City, who recruited Syracuse transfer Tony Scott for the Aggies.

Scott left Texas A&M in February. Davis contended the disgruntled player made up the allegations to get the school on NCAA probation so he could transfer.

Besides seeking the ouster of Davis, A&M officials said they disassociated Johnson from any involvement with the school's athletic program and that they are trying to recover the costs of the school telephone credit card used by Johnson, who made more than 500 calls to Davis and his staff from May to December 1990.

Upsets abound in first round

by The Associated Press
UCLA and Mississippi State are the newest members on the growing list of upset victims in the NCAA tournament. And it's no mystery to Mississippi State coach Richard Williams why Top 25 teams are falling like tenpins. "It's very easy for an underdog from an underdog conference to gear up for one or two games. That's easier than being the favorite, believe me," Williams said after his 21st-ranked Bulldogs lost 76-56 to Eastern Michigan in an East Regional game on Friday.

No. 16 UCLA went down to lightly-regarded Penn State 74-69 in another East Regional game on Friday to continue an early trend in the tournament.

On Thursday, Louisiana State and Syracuse were upset. While seven of the bottom 32 teams won first-round games last year, 10 won this year.

In other East Regional games Friday, it was top-seeded North Carolina 101, Northeastern 66 and Villanova 50, Princeton 48.

In the Southeast, it was top-seeded Arkansas 117, Georgia State 76; Arizona State 79, Rutgers 76; Alabama 89, Murray State 79, and Wake Forest 71, Louisiana Tech 65.

In the Midwest, it was St. John's 75, Northern Illinois 68; Texas 73, St. Peter's 65; top-seeded Ohio State 97, Towson State 86 and Georgia Tech 87, DePaul 70.

In the West, it was top-seeded and unbeaten UNLV 99, Montana 65; Georgetown 70, Vanderbilt 60; Michigan State 60, Wisconsin-Green Bay 58 and Utah 82, South Alabama 72.

Marcus Kennedy had 22 points and 16 rebounds as 12th-seeded Eastern Michigan beat the Bulldogs (20-9). Carl Thomas scored 16 points, while twin brother Charles had nine for Eastern Michigan (25-6).

No. 4 North Carolina 101

Northeastern 66

North Carolina (26-5), making a record 17th consecutive NCAA appearance, moved one game closer to extending another record — 10 consecutive trips to the round of 16. Northeastern (22-11) held its only lead at 10-8.

Group calls for resignations

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A religious group upset over an incident last month at a University of Arkansas athletic dorm is asking for the resignations of head basketball coach Nolan Richardson and athletic director Frank Broyles.

But Richardson said Friday that the issue is dead.

The 40-member Independent Baptist Fellowship of Arkansas is upset over the handling of the incident in which a 34-year-old Springfield woman said she was raped by athletes in the dorm.

The woman decided not to pursue charges, and a prosecutor said after reviewing a police investigation of the incident that the evidence did not warrant charges.

Four players admitted to having sex with the woman, who was legally drunk, but said she consented. The woman told police at one point that more than a dozen men were involved in the incident. She later identified four athletes from photographs and said she thought she consented with one but not with the others.

A spokesman said church leaders are gathering signatures from members for a letter to Richardson, which asks him to resign.

"We think he should either resign or change his description and mete out punishment more suited to this immoral act," John Bishop, pastor of Cleburne County Baptist Church, said in an interview Thursday.

"It is hard for me to believe how innocent all these men were. I'd like to see the incident described as more than poor judgment," Bishop said.

Both Broyles and Richardson have been quoted as saying that the players involved in the incident used poor judgment. Richardson suspended basketball player Darrell Hawkins for three games next season for having a woman in his room during non-visiting hours, which is against university policy.

SHS girls nab 2nd in event's first round

HEREFORD — Snyder's Amy Armstrong carded a 78 to tie Andrews' Lisa McQuatters for medalist position after one round of the 36-hole Hereford Invitational Tournament at Pitman Municipal Golf Course here.

The Lady Tigers' total after Friday's round was 362, which was good for second place behind Andrews' 341.

Kim Duncan, also from Snyder, rested in a third place tie after 18 holes with Pampa standout, Jeanna Pulse.

Each fired a first-round 84. Play was to continue Saturday, weather permitting.

Bubka makes record vault

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union became the first pole vaulter in history to clear 20 feet, reaching that record height Friday at an international track and field meet.

Bubka, whose previous world mark was 19-11 1/4, cleared the bar cleanly on his first attempt at 20-0.

He failed to make the same height last Saturday at the World Indoor Championships in Seville, missing three tries.

Texas considers instituting an income tax

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas lawmakers, who so dislike the idea of a state income tax that many refer to it as the "I word," find themselves seriously considering one for the first time.

With the state facing a $4.6 billion budget deficit, shrunken oil and gas revenues and other financial problems, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock says lawmakers have no choice but to join the other 40 states that already tax incomes.

"I personally dislike — and I imagine most Texans do — any type of new taxes. But I also know deep down in my heart, deep down in my heart, that it's the right thing to do for Texas," said Bullock, a Democrat who took office Jan. 15 after 16 years as the state's tax collector.

The proposal has not generated a wellspring of support from Texas voters, however.

"I think those idiots in Austin need to start being more concerned about reducing the rise in expenditures," said Houston geologist Clint Moore, one of 1,727 people who responded to a recent poll by the Houston Post. The unscientific phone-in poll showed 91 percent opposed to a state income tax.

Bullock says Texas must tax or drastically cut programs.

Already facing a budget deficit of $4.6 billion, the Legislature has been ordered by the state Supreme Court to restructure its public schools to provide an equal education for all Texas students. Current proposals for meeting that order are expected to cost $1.2 billion.

State welfare officials also say they need $3 billion more to meet a rising caseload, and the state is nearly doubling its prison capacity.

The nine other states that do not tax incomes are Alaska, Florida, Nevada, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Washington, Wyoming, Connecticut and Tennessee. The governors of Connecticut and Tennessee, two states also facing financial difficulties, have proposed taxing incomes.

From 1971 to 1984, Texas managed to avoid raising any taxes while its population increased by 25 percent. But oil and gas taxes were providing 25 percent of the state's revenues in those days. As oil prices fell, production declined, and those taxes now bring in only 8 percent of all revenues, with sales taxes accounting for 56 percent.

Since 1984, the state sales tax has risen from 4 percent to 6 1/4 percent, and city and county taxes add as much as 2 percent more.

Bullock has proposed a 5 percent tax on personal income over $25,000 and an 8 percent corporate income tax to replace the current franchise tax on business capital. The taxes would raise $8 billion in 1992-93.

"If Texas doesn't do it today, in 1993 this state will be just exactly like Rhode Island ... where they've actually furloughed state services," he said.

State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer says Republicans will fight the proposal and Gov. Ann Richards, a Democrat, said she won't approve any new taxes until she decides voters are convinced government is running as efficiently as possible. House Speaker Gib Lewis estimated Bullock's proposal had the support of about 40 members of the 150-member House, in which Democrats hold the majority.

"What it will take (to pass) is a perception on the floor of the House that voting for an income tax will not spell political death," said Rep. James Hury, who chairs the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

However, several lawmakers said it was remarkable the proposal was getting serious consideration in a state where House members once routinely proposed a constitutional ban on income taxes.

Rep. Ron Wilson, who sponsored a failed proposal to create a state lottery, says unhappiness over the tax proposal could make a lottery more attractive now. He estimates it could bring in $1 billion a year.

"I'm like the ugly guy at the dance," said Wilson, a Democrat. "I get better looking about 2 o'clock in the morning."

Suspect in holdups makes marshals' most wanted list

HOUSTON (AP) — A convicted drug dealer suspected in a rash of holdups of west Houston bars and restaurants was added Friday, to the U.S. Marshals' "15 Most Wanted" list.

Harold Young Andrus, of Lafayette, La., is also wanted on federal charges for failing to show up for sentencing on his conviction for cocaine distribution, and for failing to appear in court for another firearm-violation indictment, the marshals service said.

Houston police believe Andrus is the leader in a series of shotgun holdups of west Houston bars and restaurants during the past year. In those incidents, employees were forced into a cooler or other secured room while the group took jewelry and cash from the customers and the till.

Two people were shot and wounded in the robberies.

The marshals said Andrus is dangerous. His record includes convictions for cocaine distribution, burglary, arson and illegal weapons possession.

Officials described him as white, 5'8" tall, about 150 pounds, with a cloud-and-lightning bolt tattoo on his right shoulder and a Playboy bunny tattoo on his right ankle.

He is also known as Harold Andrews, Keith Alan Shellaby and Jose Maurico Hernandez.

First gulf war heroes: infantrymen, tank crew

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Spec. Jonathan Alston dreamed of joining the Special Forces and was looking for action. Pfc. Craig Burton had just returned from Korea and didn't want to go to the gulf. Pvt. Stephen Schaefer was a green recruit.

On Friday, they became the first heroes of the Persian Gulf War, receiving Silver Stars for gallantry.

At the edge of a parking lot in a U.S. military compound, with a British Army band playing and an honor guard from their Tiger Brigade watching, the three soldiers stood at attention while Secretary of the Army Michael Stone pinned the nation's third-highest award for bravery on their chests.

The words on each of their presidential citations didn't sit easily: "extraordinary heroism," "total bravery," "complete disregard for his own safety," "in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service." "It's hard to look at myself as a hero, because some did lose their lives and I feel sympathy for their families, too," said Alston, a 27-year-old former drill sergeant from Chapel Hill, N.C., who quit the Army and only recently rejoined.

"I just pray and hope no more lives are lost and we all get home soon," he said.

All three were members of the 2nd Armored Division's Tiger Brigade, which helped hold the left flank of allied forces advancing into Kuwait and then sealed off exit roads from Kuwait City to keep the Iraqis from fleeing north.

Under enemy fire, the trio risked their lives to keep the rapidly advancing U.S. troops from getting bogged down by mine fields or snipers.

According to the presidential citation, Alston and 21-year-old Schaefer from Claymont, Del., rushed an Iraqi bunker on Feb.

25, the second day of the ground war.

One or more Iraqis in the bunker were firing at U.S. troops, who were trying to clear mine-laden Iraqi trenches. The trenches were hampering a U.S. advance.

"We were clearing the trenches, very uncertain what to expect, had our backs to the bunker that came on firing at us," Schaefer said. "Luckily he wasn't a very good shot. We hit the ground as fast as possible and just started opening up."

In moving through a mine field to attack the bunker, Alston set off a tripwire anti-personnel mine, known as a Bouncing Betty. "but it didn't really do any damage because I had on a flak vest. Thank God the military has those."

While Schaefer provided covering fire, Alston threw two grenades into the bunker. The second incinerated the bunker, showering Alston with shrapnel, but he and Schaefer got away unharmed, the citation said.

The following day, Burton was in his tank trying to get across a highway north of Kuwait City that had been blocked by hundreds of bombed-out Iraq-bound vehicles.

"There was no way to go on the road so somebody had to breach a mine field," said the 20-year-old soldier from Pascagoula, Miss. "There were minefields all around. ... They were shooting our way because you could hear the bullets."

Burton walked through the mine field in pitch darkness and cut two sets of concertina and barbed wire to clear a path which was "extremely critical" to blocking another Iraqi escape route, the citation said.

When Burton found out he was to receive the Silver Star, he said, he was shocked. He had returned to the United States from Korea just two months ago and didn't want to come here. But he said, "I think I accomplished something very great."

Col. John Sylvester, 45, of Brownsville, Texas, commander of the 1st Tiger Brigade, congratulated the trio and said: "There's probably 25 or 30 others out there just like them in this brigade alone."

Richards says...

Better site for nuke dump can be found

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards said Friday she believes a better site can be found for a low-level nuclear dump than a proposed site near Fort Hancock in West Texas.

"I think from the time that that site was chosen, we were worried about its proximity to a highly populated area, we were worried about its proximity to the water supply and the Rio Grande," she said.

The Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority chose an area near Fort Hancock, about 50 miles southeast of El Paso, for a planned nuclear waste site that would store radioactive waste from hospitals, nuclear plants and universities for the next 500 years.

But a state district judge in El Paso ruled in January that the site was unsuitable for a nuclear dump. His ruling was in response to a lawsuit filed by El Paso and Hudspeth counties alleging the site was prone to earthquakes and flooding.

An appeal of the ruling is pending.

"The district judge's ruling I think now certainly dictates that they have got to find another site. I have asked the low-level radioactive waste authority to do that, and I think that they will," Richards said.

Baker praises Gorbachev during Friday visit

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III failed Friday to break a stalemate on arms control treaties with the Soviet Union, but he offered praise for Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to defuse tensions in the Baltic republics and to energize his stagnant economy.

The deadlock in implementing one treaty and finishing another means further delay in rescheduling a visit here by President Bush for summit talks with Gorbachev.

"The relationship has gone through a test recently and it has survived," Baker said. "That is good for the Soviet Union and good for the United States and good for the world."

Baker's statement concluded a joint news conference with Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh.

Bessmertnykh said quietly to Baker: "Excellent final words."

Baker warned President Saddam Hussein that the cease-fire agreement in the Persian Gulf War imposed strict limits on his military operations. The implication was that the United States might resort to force to restrict his tactics in conflicts with rebels.

Bessmertnykh emphasized that the U.N. Security Council had authorized force only to reverse Iraq's seizure of Kuwait.

Gorbachev signaled Saddam that he would not get support from Moscow as he tries to put down rebellions.

"Let the Iraqi people themselves take care of that," he said of the unsettled political situation.

Bessmertnykh voiced his support for Baker's efforts in trying to bring the Arabs and Israel together. He disagreed with the Bush administration's attempt to exclude the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"The PLO has remained an organization that speaks for the interests of Palestinians, and the PLO should be involved," Bessmertnykh said.

The stalemate in arms control involves one treaty signed by 22 nations in November to make historic cutbacks in troops, tanks and other non-nuclear forces across the expanse of Europe, and a second, long-delayed treaty to reduce U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear missiles by about 30 percent.

Baker said none of the problems in carrying out the Conventional Forces in Europe treaty had been resolved. And, he said, there was no substantive movement on the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty.

Baker said a Bush-Gorbachev summit, which was supposed to be held last month, would not be rescheduled until the START treaty was finished.

Baker registered sympathy for Gorbachev's uphill effort to westernize the Soviet economy and spoke approvingly of the measures he is taking to engage the independence movement in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Baker then went to dinner with the reformist mayors of Moscow and Leningrad, the president of the republic of Georgia and the prime ministers of the republics of Armenia, Georgia and Kirizia.

Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian Federation, did not attend, without explanation.

Baker plans to meet with leaders from the Baltics on Saturday and also to spend some time with Eduard A. Shevardnadze. He quit last year as foreign minister, warning of a coming dictatorship in the Soviet Union.

In the Baltics and several other regions, Gorbachev's hold on the reins of power is being challenged. On Sunday, the nation will vote in a referendum on whether the Soviet Union should be preserved.

Baker said he was not interfering in Soviet politics.

Four policemen indicted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four police officers indicted in the beating of a motorist may not be the last, county prosecutors said. And the U.S. Justice Department reportedly is considering charges against police who saw but did nothing to stop the assault.

Meanwhile, a police audiotape released Friday seems to contradict officers' claims that the motorist drove more than 100 mph in a police chase before the beating.

Indictments against the three officers and their supervising sergeant were unsealed Friday. The felony charges against them follow the March 3 attack of Rodney King, 25, of Altadena.

A bystander's videotape of the beating was shown nationally on television, prompting a public outcry, local and federal investigations of the incident and a Justice Department review of six years of police brutality complaints nationwide.

"It is a terrible moment and time for reflection when officers sworn to uphold the law are indicted for these most serious felonies," District Attorney Ira

Ira PTA's are elected

Six members of Ira PTA attended the annual PTA spring conference March 13 in Abilene. The Ira chapter received a plaque for "having the highest percentage of achievement and a certificate for membership increase in 1990."

New district officers were elected. Mrs. Betty (Floyd) House is the new District 18 president. Mrs. Nancy (Gene) Lomax, Ira PTA president, is the Area III Field Representative. Also elected was Mrs. Pam (Jerry) Helm as District 18 historian. Others attending were Denby Chaney, Julia Fox and Forrest Fox.

Ribbon twist doll making class to start

Creative ribbon twist dolls will be the subject of a demonstration starting at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Dermott School at the Scurry County Coliseum.

Judy Church will give the demonstration. Class members can then make a doll to take home. The ribbon twist will be provided by Historic Scurry County, Inc., and a donation to Historic Scurry Inc. will be accepted in lieu of a fee for the class. Persons attending are asked to bring a sack lunch and trim such as lace and ribbon for the doll's dress. They will need the cardboard tube from a roll of paper towels for the base.

The dolls have the appearance of corn shuck dolls. They can be various sizes.

If you wish to attend the class, make reservations by Tuesday by calling June McGlaun at 573-9742, Jean Everett at 573-2763 or Aline Parks at 573-7108. The class will be limited to 20 persons.

Expert panel aims fire at space station plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battered space station project, redesigned and slimmed down, received another blow Friday as a prestigious panel declared the newest version "cannot be supported on scientific grounds."

A top NASA official called the report "an unfortunate characterization of the capabilities of the space station" and said the scaled-back version actually is an improvement.

The report by the space studies board of the National Research Council comes as the House space subcommittee considers NASA's $15.8 billion funding request for 1992, $2 billion of it for the space station.

"I'd be interested in knowing who made those statements and letting them make them to us at the subcommittee," said Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Tex., the chairman. The panel includes some of America's top scientists, executives and academicians and a noted former astronaut, Dr. Sally Ride.

The space station, which has cost nearly $3 billion in design work since it was proposed in 1984, recently was redrawn to shave $6 billion from its cost in the next five years. Details of the new version are being circulated among agencies for their opinion but won't be formally presented to Congress until early in April.

"It's going to force us to take a good hard look at what our priorities are," said Rep. Bill Green. The New York Republican is on the House appropriations subcommittee which oversees space spending.

He said Congress will be faced with choosing among three big projects — an ambitious space-based study of the environment called Mission to Planet Earth, a new heavy-lift rocket and the space station.

If the station is in third place, he said, it might not be funded.

And what about the money spent so far?

"It's better to stop when you've spent $3 billion and you've seen you are not really able to put it in shape than to go through and spend $38 billion and see you are not able to put it in shape," Green said.

The space studies board said the station as now planned "does not meet the basic research requirements of the two principal scientific disciplines for which it is intended — life sciences research ... and microgravity research and applications."

The space station would be reduced both in size and vital electrical power. It would be staffed by four astronauts instead of eight as previously planned.

Lennard Fisk, NASA's associate administrator for space science, said the board had made a number of factual errors.

"I don't think it's an accurate characterization of the restructured space station capabilities," he said of the report. "The restructured space station has actually improved the capabilities of doing science, an improvement over the previous space station.

"The goal of this has always been to extend human presence into low Earth orbit and beyond and along the way we were going to conduct some world class science. I believe we can do it better on the scaled-down version than we could on the previous version."

A new congressman on the space subcommittee, Rep. Jim Bacchus, D-Fla., said it was noteworthy that the space studies board had not called for the space station's "assassination." He said the station "remains the only way to do the life sciences research that needs be done to prepare for long duration space flight."

He said he does not think Congress will have to choose between the heavy lift rocket and the station, that there will be money for both. "We are going to study this reconfiguration exhaustively in the next few months," Bacchus said.

By Shirley A. Gorman

When Jack V. Greene wants to go to town he attaches harness and leash to his yellow Labrador retriever and signals what he wants the animal to do. At least that is the way it used to be before cataracts robbed his dog of most of her vision.

Greene, himself blinded since a 1936 oil field accident in New Mexico, realized that something was wrong with his guide dog last summer when he noticed a difference in the way she was leading him. A local veterinarian diagnosed cataracts and surgery was ruled out because of the dog's age.

She has to lead by scent mainly because cataracts have robbed her of her side vision. She can only see straight ahead, Greene explained.

For 54 years, the 86-year-old Snyder man has been depending on a series of guide dogs to help him get around when away from home.

Greene will travel to San Rafael, Calif. next month where he will begin a short training period with a new guide dog. In due time, when Greene and the new guide dog bond and learn to work together, they will return home and the yellow lab will become a pet.

In the meantime, Greene has curtailed some outdoor activities because of his dog's inability to see as well as she once did.

The new guide dog will be younger and will need to be worked everyday, something Greene is looking forward to. He likes the freedom a guide dog gives him when he is away from home. At home, he manages quite well by touch and feel and can move about freely.

In 1936, Greene was working on a drilling rig in Hobbs, N.M. when drilling fluid (a combination of mud and chemical) got into his eyes and so severely injured him that he spent some eight months in a Dallas hospital and was permanently blinded.

Greene has been using guide dogs since 1937. His new dog will be number seven. He has worked both with labs and German shepherds.

The local man obtained two dogs through the Seeing Eye Foundation based in Morristown, N.J. when he was first blinded. In 1954, he switched to Guide Dogs For the Blind in California, where he obtained the last four.

He made the switch to the California foundation because it is more convenient for him to go there than to New Jersey, he said.

Each time Greene applies for a dog he has to go through an application process and then an undetermined waiting period while the "right dog for him" is made available.

He spent about a month training with the very first dog he ever used, but now about two-three weeks is usually sufficient.

The California school is a private foundation and is supported through contributions. Each recipient of a guide dog is charged according to his/her ability to pay.

Greene and each guide dog have always been close, so much so, that he recently said "the dog becomes a part of you."

He explained that his guide dogs have always followed verbal directions, but when out in public he also keeps the animal in a halter and leash. With his dog at his side, Greene can safely cross intersections and go anywhere he wants.

Though Greene has been blind some 54 years, he recently said that he "learned to live with it" but he has never been "well adjusted" to his condition.

But blindness has never kept Greene from earning a living.

MAN'S BEST FRIEND — Dogs are often called "man's best friend." That's one saying Jack V. Greene of Snyder won't argue with as he has been getting around through the aide of a guide dog since being blinded in an oilfield accident in 1936. This yellow Labrador retriever has developed cataracts and is now limited in her ability to guide Greene. He will travel to California in April to begin training with a new guide dog, his seventh. He will also keep the yellow lab as a pet. (SDN Staff Photo)

Before retirement, he did a "little of everything" in order to supplement his compensation allowance following the accident.

That has included operating concessions stands, selling men's wear, and learning to make mops and brooms. He even shined shoes in Sweetwater during World War II.

In earlier years, it was not unusual for Greene and his dog to travel by bus from town to town while he sold his products. A resourceful man, Greene always "found something he could do."

He moved to Snyder in 1949, just as the local oil boom was getting underway. From 1950-51 he said he operated a concession stand near the courthouse.

Greene, originally from Jones County, was raised on a farm and to this day he loves to work in his yard.

Now that spring is here and summer not far away, Greene can't wait to get his new guide dog and start making his rounds in Snyder.

Greene's wife, Ola, is also blind. They have no children. And Greene said he has no relatives living in Snyder.

Nuptials in Kress church

KRESS — Cynthia Kay Garrett and Rebel Lee Royall were united in marriage at 7 p.m. Saturday, March 9 at First Baptist Church in Kress. Performing the double ring ceremony was Ricky Johnson of Wayland Baptist University.

The bride is the daughter of Linda Garrett and Bruce Garrett, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buck Garrett and Lucille Foster and the late Leo Foster, all of Kress. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wilson of Ira and the late Royce Royall. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. T.D. Royall of Brownwood, Mr. and Mrs. R.K. Taylor of Big Spring and Inez Wilson of Ira.

The registry table was decorated with an arrangement of gerber daisies, tulips and gladiolus. Attending the registry was Michelle Todd of Amarillo.

Decorating the sanctuary were six candelabra adorned with fuchsia gladiolus, white stock and greenery. A unity candle graced the choir rail, and votive candles with greenery marked the outer and center aisles of the sanctuary.

Candlelighters were Terry Garrett of San Antonio, brother of the bride, and Wendy Wilson of Ira, sister of the groom. Miss Wilson wore a black, tea length satin gown, featuring a strapless, sweetheart bodice and a wrist corsage of fuchsia roses. Garrett wore a black tuxedo.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a traditional white satin gown. The princess bodice was richly adorned with imported Schiffl lace, encrusted with pearls and white iridescent sequins. The same beaded lace was applied on the sleeves. The gown back featured a deep V neckline and dropped waist, accented with a bubble peplum bustle. Accents of pearl teardrops and beaded Schiffl lace adorned the bustle. The skirt and cathedral length train were encrusted with pearls and white iridescent sequins applied on Schiffl lace. To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a headpiece of pearls and crystals accented with an illusion veil.

The bride carried a crescent shaped bouquet of ranunculus, roses and freesia in shades of fuchsia, with picot ribbon streamers. Tied in the streamers were dog tags belonging to the groom's deceased father and a Flying Farmer bolo tie belonging to the groom's deceased grandfather. She also carried a small Bible that was a gift to the groom from his deceased father. The bouquet was designed and made by Evelyn Morgan of Plainview.

The bride wore a garter that was worn by her mother on her wedding day, and had pennies minted in the couple's birth years in her shoe.

Maid of honor was Penny Garrett of Hackettstown, N.J., sister of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Melissa Bevell of Plainview, Dayna Bedford of Kress, cousin of the bride, Mendi Thompson and Connie Bowman, both of Lubbock. The bride's attendants wore knee length satin rompers with puffed sleeves and peplums, trimmed with fuchsia ribbon.

The groom's best man was Kevin Quinn of Dallas. The couple were to honeymoon in Durango, Colo., and then make their home in Lubbock.

The bride is a graduate of Kress High School and American Commercial College and is employed as bookkeeper by West Texas Lee Co., Inc., in Idalou.

MR. AND MRS. REBEL ROYALL
(Private Photo)

Groomsmen were Bill Bell of Snyder, Douglas Roberts of Robert Lee, Terry Joe Millican of Seminole and Darron Dorethy of Denver City. They wore black tuxedos.

Guests were seated by Bryan Reynolds of Amarillo, Keith Smith of New Braunfels, Mark Mahagan of Lubbock and Terry Garrett of San Antonio.

Music was provided by Benjy Foster of Kress.

A reception followed the wedding in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table featured a four tiered cake decorated with western motif and topped with an up-turned horseshoe centered with a bell and ribbons. Floral arrangements of gerber daisies, tulips and gladiolus graced the table. Bride and groom dolls from the bride's Madame Alexander collection were also on the table. Serving were Tonya Morphis of Plainview, Vickie Hughes of Kress and Rani Ehly of Amarillo.

The groom's table featured a double horseshoe cake, decorated with the Texas Tech and Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity emblems. A floral arrangement of fuchsia lillies and greenery adorned one of the groom's first boots. Coffee was served from a silver coffee service belonging to the groom's grandmother, Inez Wilson of Ira. Almond bark mints in the shape of Texas, boots and horseshoes, made by the groom's sister, Wendy Wilson, were also served. Serving were Dee Dee Dunn of San Angelo, cousin of the groom, Denise Roberts of Robert Lee and Misty Phillips of Casper, Wyo.

The couple were to honeymoon in Durango, Colo., and then make their home in Lubbock.

The bride is a graduate of Kress High School and American Commercial College and is employed as bookkeeper by West Texas Lee Co., Inc., in Idalou.

The groom is a graduate of Ira High School and is a senior student at Texas Tech University, majoring in animal business. He is a member of Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at the Holiday Inn in Plainview.

The bride was honored with miscellaneous bridal showers in Ira and Kress.

Banking made easier

NEW YORK (AP) — American executives working abroad no longer have to worry about problems with transferring funds, bouncing checks, credit cards being cut off and damaged credit ratings, notes a New York-based banking officer.

According to Robert De Rosa, vice president with Citibank's Personal Banking for Overseas Executives program, these executives now can have their U.S. banking needs handled by a designated bank officer back home.

De Rosa says the relatively new service already has signed up more than 4,000 U.S. expatriates and 31 companies in 91 countries.

ABWA honors bosses

President Penny Cochran gave the invocation and Vivian Cochran led the Pledge of Allegiance that opened the meeting of the Deep Creek Chapter of American Business Women's Night meeting on March 7.

The annual meeting, held at The Shack, was to honor the members' bosses. Members introduced themselves and their guests. President Cochran introduced the officers for the year. They are Pauline Withers, vice president; Stella Bailey, treasurer; and Michelle Krop, secretary.

A brief history of ABWA was given by Polly Echols.

Local historian and author, Charles Anderson, was guest speaker. He told the group he was born Sept. 20, 1930, in a tent on an Indian reservation in Oklahoma. After serving in the U.S. Air Force during the Korean War, he graduated from Abilene Christian University and has been employed for 32 years as both teacher and administrator for the SISD. He said he has recently retired and is devoting himself full time to historical writing.

Three books have been written by Anderson, "In Search of a Buffalo, the Story of J. Wright Moor," published in 1972; "Deep Creek Merchant, the Story of Pete Snyder," published in 1984, and "Reflections, An Album of West Texas History 1840-1990." The books, he said, are not only sold locally, but in several states and in foreign countries. A most recent request for his latest book was from the vice-president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan.

The chapter's WTC scholarship recipient, Maggie Collier, was presented a check.

Ms. Cochran announced Pam Dortch would be the chapter's delegate to the District III convention in Colorado Springs, Colo., April 19-21.

Members were reminded of the Mexican dinner set for 6 p.m. on April 6 at Towle Park Barn. Tickets may be obtained by contacting ARWA members.

Wedding vows by couple

Juanita Fambro of Snyder and Marion Andrew Cochran of Beaumont were married Saturday, Feb. 9 in Northwest Church of Christ in Beaumont with Larry Dickey, minister of the church, officiating.

Kay Valentine, daughter of the bride, was matron of honor and the groom's son, Joe Dean Cochran of Beaumont, was best man.

Jim Sullenger escorted the bride, and he and all their children gave them in marriage.

Following the ceremony, their children hosted a reception in the Cochran home.

Guests were from Snyder, Hamilton, Longview, Garland, Liberty, Friendswood, Houston, Pearland, Nederland, Brian and Beaumont.

After a trip to Nassau Bay, the couple will live in Beaumont presently with plans to make their home in Snyder at a later date.

Use your key spots

By James Jacoby

Yesterday's deal featured declarer's need to unblock diamond spots from the dummy. Today's hand also involves a key unblock, but it is more difficult to spot, if you will excuse the pun.

The auction is typical of pairs tournaments — no one stops bidding after finding a fit. But North should have passed over West's three hearts. South would have doubled for a penalty of 300 (provided that North gets a club ruff).

Declarer won trick one with the heart ace and led a spade to the jack, queen and king. East continued hearts and declarer ruffed the third round. Now South played the ace and queen of diamonds, being relieved to see the 2-2 break. East returned a low club. After winning with the ace, how would you continue?

If the spades had been 5-1, surely East would have given his partner a ruff. So declarer correctly cashed the spade ace, dropping West's 10. But now South took his eye off the ball: On his spade ace he played dummy's four-spot. He overtook his diamond eight with dummy's nine and called for the spade seven, but East played the five. With no hand entry remaining, declarer couldn't avoid a club loser. He had lost a trick in each suit: one down.

If South unblocks dummy's seven of spades on the second round, he can triumph. He crosses to dummy with a diamond and leads the spade four, finessing the six when East plays the five. Dummy's club loser is discarded on the spade nine, and declarer is home.

Scrutinize those spots. When did you last finesse a six successfully?

Afternoon nuptials held

Patricia Kay Fisk became the bride of Bennie Lee Hazelwood Jr. in a double ring ceremony at 4 p.m. Jan. 12 in the Calvary Baptist Church with the Rev. Larry McAden, pastor, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Rosa Fisk and Mr. and Mrs. Don R. Fisk Sr. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Swinney and Ben Hazelwood Sr., all of Snyder.

The altar was decorated with two white wicker baskets highlighted with lavender and peach flowers. Vows were exchanged in a candlelight setting, and pews were marked with white bows and greenery.

Ray Burton, nephew of the bride, was candlelighter.

Jason McAden directed taped wedding music. He played "Close to You" as the candles were lit by Ray Burton, nephew of the bride; "Wind Beneath My Wings" as the couple approached the altar; and "For All We Know," following the exchange of vows.

Don Fisk presented his daughter in marriage as she was attired in a white satin gown, overlaid with lace. Her veil was attached to a band featuring an arrangement of silk lily-of-the-valley, adorned with small lavender and peach flowers and beaded pearls, which rested in her hair on the right side.

Maid of honor was Cassie Burton, niece of the bride. She wore a lavender lace gown featuring a lavender bow worn at the side, and in her hair she wore a matching lavender bow clip with small streamers of lavender and white ribbons.

Michael LaSalle of Trent, brother of the groom, was best man. Ray Burton and Randy Fisk, nephews of the bride, were groomsmen.

The groom was attired in a light brown three piece western-cut suit.

MR. AND MRS. BENNIE HAZELWOOD

Laura Fisk, the bride's sister, invited guests to register at a book placed on a table covered with a white crocheted lace tablecloth centered with a bouquet.

A reception was held following the ceremony where the bride's table was covered with a white cloth and was centered with the bridal bouquet.

The wedding cake was a three tiered white cake and icing, and was decorated with peach and lavender confection flowers. It was topped by double rings and white doves surrounding a miniature bride and groom. Punch, cake, nuts and mints were served by Mandy Hill of Sweetwater, niece of the groom, and Tommie Reynolds, a friend of the bride.

The couple has made their home at Hermleigh. The bride, a long-time Snyder resident, is a high school graduate and attended college one year, and is employed at Rip Griffin's Truck Stop. The bridegroom is a graduate of Hobbs High School and is engaged in farm and ranch work.

Polly's Pointer's by Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — We have been experimenting with candle-making and would like to know how to make scented candles. Can colognes or perfumes be used? — TERRY

DEAR TERRY — Only oil-based scents, such as the essential oils sold at perfume counters and in natural-food stores, should be used to scent wax. Avoid alcohol-based colognes and perfumes. Your local candle-making supply craft shop may also have specially formulated scents to add to candles. Add a few drops of the oil to the wax just before pouring it into the mold. (You'll have to experiment to determine the amount you prefer depending on how aromatic you wish the candle to be.) When the candle is burned, it will release its scent into the air, adding a delightful fragrance to any room. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — A reader wrote about the problem of a fading jute wall hanging. I consulted my daughter, who is an artist, about this. She suggested spraying it with a clear acrylic spray such as "Crystal Clean Krylon Acrylic Spray," which can be purchased at art supply stores. Before doing so, however, tell the art supply store personnel what type of paint has been used on the wall hanging. — MRS. N.L.C.

DEAR POLLY — When traveling with a large cake box in the car, use a seat belt to secure the box. The cake will travel as safely as an infant. — L.M.

Question: what did envoy tell Saddam?

WASHINGTON (AP) — She was the first woman to rise through the ranks to become an ambassador to an Arab nation. She enjoyed the esteem of her colleagues and could point to a long list of achievements.

Her entire world changed last Aug. 2 when, during a stopover in London, she turned on the television in her hotel room. The news was grim: Iraq had invaded Kuwait.

April Glaspie, the U.S. ambassador to Iraq, was crestfallen. At a time of momentous change in the Persian Gulf, she was away from her post, having left a day earlier for a visit to Washington via London, unaware what Saddam Hussein had in mind for Kuwait. She has not been back to Iraq since.

Now, eight months later and the Gulf War over, there is growing interest in Capitol Hill as to just what happened in that crucial period leading up to the conquest of Kuwait, including the still-secret activities of the American ambassador.

What instructions had she received from Washington? Why wasn't the State Department better informed about Saddam's intentions?

Democrats, under fire from Republicans for opposing President Bush's request in January for authority to go to war, are striking back by raising questions as to whether the crisis could have been averted in the first place.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the Middle East, says the administration won't provide information.

"We have scores, if not hundreds, of questions to ask," Hamilton says.

Did Glaspie leave Saddam with the impression that he could swallow up Kuwait without objections from Washington?

Now, after maintaining eight months of silence, officials said Glaspie is expected to give her version soon of her extraordinary July 25 encounter with the Iraqi president — believed to be his last meeting with an American.

Several U.S. officials said the Iraqi account of the meeting was "selective and incomplete." As the Iraqis described it, Glaspie told Saddam that the United States "had no opinion on inter-Arab disputes, such as your border disagreement with Kuwait."

Seizing on that comment, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said that Glaspie, on instructions from the State Department, "virtually gave a green light to Saddam Hussein" to invade.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III calls any such interpretation "ludicrous."

It is not clear what forum Glaspie will choose to give her version of events. But officials here say she will assert that she left no doubt in Saddam's mind on the central issue at hand: that the United States would vigorously oppose any use of force by Iraq against Kuwait, an assertion that never made its way into the Iraqi transcript.

Since August, Glaspie, 48, has maintained the lowest of profiles, refusing interview requests even though she has been subjected to public ridicule because of her purported comments.

EDITOR'S NOTE — George Gedda has covered foreign affairs for The Associated Press since 1968.

Journalists win Polk Awards in 13 areas

NEW YORK (AP) — Washington Post reporter Caryle Murphy, who wrote of the turmoil in Kuwait in the weeks after Iraq's invasion, was among the winners of the Polk Awards in Journalism.

Gayle Reaves, David Hanners and David McLemore of the Dallas Morning News won in the regional reporting category for their series on drug trafficking.

Ms. Murphy won the foreign reporting category of the Polk Awards, established by Long Island University in 1949 to honor CBS correspondent George Polk, who was slain while covering the Greek civil war. Polk grew up in Fort Worth.

"Displaying the courage of Polk himself, Ms. Murphy remained inside Kuwait" after her colleagues had fled, the citation said.

"Although her coverage often had to remain anonymous in order to protect her as she hid from the invaders, she continued to send out stories for a month," it added.

Ms. Murphy traveled to Kuwait in late July. She escaped to Saudi Arabia 25 days after the Aug. 2 invasion.

The winners, chosen from 600 nominees, included eight in print journalism and four in broadcasting. The awards, announced Thursday, will be presented April 17.

A career award went to former CBS News president Fred Friendly "for his pioneering efforts to free television news from commercial restraints and to protect journalists' First Amendment rights."

Susan F. Rasky and David E. Rosenbaum of The New York

Times won the national reporting award for their coverage of "the complex issues, the political maneuvering and personalities in the greatest budget debate that has ever taken place in the United States," the awards committee said.

Reporters Laurie Bennett and Robert Ourlian and editor Alan

Fisk of The Detroit News received the award for metropolitan reporting for their series, "Hidden Interest," which examined the reasons for Detroit's decline.

Joseph Belth, who singlehandedly produces a monthly newsletter, The Insurance Forum, won the special publications prize.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The enclosed article was published in our local paper, and I thought it deserved a wider audience. If every parent and grandparent made this little jingle a part of a child's daily life, who knows how much energy might be saved!

YOUR FAN IN VERMONT

DEAR FAN: I agree. And here it is:

SINGING FOR EDISON

Annette Anderson, who died several years ago in Rutland, Vt., at the age of 99, was a singer. From 1914 to 1917, she worked with Thomas Alva Edison, singing song after song as he developed his phonograph recording system. He had stacks of sheet music everywhere, and would pick one out, saying "Here, Annette — sing this one."

I remember Annette telling me about Edison's eccentricities, and his small soundproof recording room (completely lined with horsehair), but the strongest memory is of a jingle I heard daily in my childhood. It was written by Edison, and it hung from the electric light chain in his recording room.

It went like this: "Save the juice, save the juice, turn out the light when not in use!"

Perhaps if we all posted this prudent reminder near the light switches in our homes, we would be less dependent on foreign oil and could avoid situations like the one we are in right now.

DORIS ERB,
CUTTINGSVILLE, VT.

DEAR DORIS: With all due respect to Mr. Edison, "juice" is saved only if the lights are switched off for 10 minutes or longer. According to a spokesperson for the Department of Water and Power in Los Angeles, there is a power surge when lights are turned on, so lights should be left on if one plans to be in and out of the room. Perhaps the jingle should be amended to read, "Save the juice, save the juice, turn out the light if it won't be needed for 10 minutes or more." Of course, the meter is all wrong, but the message is accurate.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me before I pull the last strands of hair out of my balding pate! I have been trying to find a word that is not in any dictionary or thesaurus. I have called the public library as well as my newspaper, and no one was able to help me. The word I am looking for is what the person who makes up crossword puzzles is called. Thanks for any help you can give me.

A.L. DELK

DEAR MR. DELK: The word is "cruciverbalist," and you are correct, it is not in any dictionary, thesaurus or "word finder." Nor was it in my vocabulary — in fact, I had never heard of the word before I went on this treasure hunt. I also learned that crossword puzzles have been in existence for more than 2,000 years.

DEAR ABBY: I was housecleaning and came across a clipping of a column I had kept since 1958 — the year my daughter graduated from high school. I reread it, and Abby, I want you to run it again because the kids of today sure can use the advice you gave 33 years ago. I hope you agree with me. I am 74 years old and have 11 grandchildren.

ETHEL TAYLOR,
WAYNESBURG, KY.

DEAR ETHEL: I agree. Here's the letter, and thanks for asking:

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, I was a poor student, shy, lonely, friendless, unhappy, and I never smiled. I wrote to you, and you gave me the best advice I ever received. Here it is:

"The key to being popular with both sexes is: Be kind. Be honest. Be tactful. If you can't be beautiful (or handsome), be well-groomed, tastefully attired, conscious of your posture, and keep a smile on your face."

"Be clean in body and mind. If you're not a 'brain,' try harder. If you're not a great athlete, be a good sport. Try to be a standout in something. If you can't dance or sing, learn to play an instrument. Think for yourself, but respect the rules. Be generous with kind words and affectionate gestures, but save the heavy stuff for later. You'll be glad you did. If you need help, ask God. If you don't need anything, thank God. Love, Abby"

I followed your advice, step by step, and kept it handy when I felt low. I am now president of the sophomore class and I play the guitar. Smiling comes naturally to me, and I have a boyfriend who is kind and respectable. My grades are better, and I have more friends than I ever dreamed I'd have.

Abby, you're not the only one who helped me. God helped me. He answered my prayers.

CAROL

DEAR ABBY: Since you're so smug about using the word "waitperson," I decided I ought to point out what children's verse would be like if Mother Goose — I mean Parent Goose — had lived in this day of linguistic lunacy. Here is a sanitized version of a sexist/ageist poem by the Goose:

There was a person of undisclosable age
Who lived with his or her kids in a shoe.

"Unless quickly you remind me,
"Giving me privacy, kindly,"
Said she or he, "I'll slap a lawsuit on you!"

GALL (Group Against Linguistic Lunacy)

P.S. For the sake of consistency, please don't forget to use "actperson," "bounceperson," "carpentperson," "engineperson," "farmperson," etc.

Forrest Sawyer's journey into war revealed

NEW YORK (AP) — Dark, moonless night on the Kuwaiti desert. The B-52s are raining thunder and steel on Iraqi-held ground to the north. ABC correspondent Forrest Sawyer, just back from the Gulf War, remembers,

"Stars are everywhere. It's pitch black. And on the far horizon toward Kuwait City we could see oil fires burning. They just lit up the sky," said Sawyer, eyes distant, no longer in the room.

He and a seven-member news crew took four trucks and satellite gear "off the reservation" of U.S. military press pools and drove to the war. When they found it, they helped put it on television and into history. He remembers:

"If you were facing north, toward Iraq, you would see these parachute flares, spotter flares, like novas, that would light up the sky," he said.

"You were standing in this blackness ... and off in the distance occasionally you would hear this (rumbling) that was the B-52s. It really is rolling thunder," he said.

"The sky would light up and the fire would be left wherever it was they'd hit whatever it was they hit."

If you turned and faced south, it's an entirely different vista. There are no fires, flares and explosions if you look back toward Saudi Arabia. Instead, "it's like a night of fireflies just blinking everywhere," he said.

The fireflies are the running lights of many warplanes. The pilots shut them off as soon as they hit the Kuwaiti border.

"Behind the Saudi border, they want to have them on because the air traffic is something like LAX, O'Hare and Kennedy all at once," he said.

It was his first insight into the magnitude of the air war.

"That, frankly, was the first time that I got it," he said. "I realized that this had been going on for days and days and days. It's incredible to think what it would be like to be under that," he said.

It helped him understand how the Iraqis will to fight was so utterly sapped.

"I was 20 kilometers or so from the B-52 bombing and I could still feel it. If it were two kilometers away, it would change your life. If you were under it ... Quit. Try to fix the ear bleeding and go home."

Sawyer's attempts to get ABC News into the outset of the ground war, confounded by events almost from the get-go, became "a logistical nightmare" of flat tires, equipment failures and geography.

"Nothing worked," he said. Still, his team managed to get the first video footage out of Kuwait on the morning after the ground war began.

There were other difficulties. Poised at the southwestern corner of Kuwait with Arab troops, ready to roll north, Sawyer and his team found themselves advancing more slowly than other ground units — and other reporters.

The ABC team did a dramatic about face and drove a 500-mile fishhook course to reach Kuwait

City. Because of the roundabout, they managed to reach it hours, instead of days, after CBS began transmitting from the capital.

Sawyer didn't mention it during his interview, but an ABC colleague said he worked for four days straight, without sleep, during that time.

"Kuwait City was remarkable because you come face to face with the worst that humanity can do ... and the best," Sawyer said. "At one hospital that I visited, I saw both."

A physician, one of three who secretly photographed the bodies of Kuwaiti torture victims, took Sawyer to the morgue.

"In one room, piled high, were Iraqi soldiers that had been killed. In another room ... were Kuwaiti torture victims." His eyes go remote again. His voice is very calm, very measured.

"It's one thing to hear about it, and it's another thing to see it," Sawyer said. "It's astounding to me that this guy was able to maintain his sanity in the face of that."

Sawyer is home in New York City now, enjoying some time off after his five-month stint in the gulf. He has no immediate plans.

"I'm going to chill for a while, and re-think it. See what happens. I don't quite get that the war's over," he said. "You know? I'm still sort of disoriented. I'll probably end up going back there. There's a lot more to tell."

Gramm recommends 3 for judgeships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm is recommending three attorneys, including two from the same El Paso law firm, be nominated to fill federal judgeships in the Western District of Texas.

The attorneys — Terry Means of Corsicana, and Kenneth Carr and Sam Sparks, both of El Paso — would fill the first of 11 new federal judgeships in Texas, created by Congress last year to help whittle down dockets around the state that have been overloaded by drug prosecutions.

According to Gramm's office, the Western District is traditionally second nationwide in drug and overall criminal cases. It currently has 465 pending drug cases involving 700 defendants, with a total of 643 criminal cases with 1,066 defendants.

Gramm, R-Texas, said Thursday that he was forwarding to President Bush the names of three men who "are concerned about the rights of victims, not just criminals." The candidates must still be nominated by Bush and confirmed by the Senate.

George Kassouf, director of the judicial selection project at the Alliance for Justice, a coalition of public interest groups devoted to legal policy issues, said he had not heard of the three judicial candidates.

But Kassouf said he was not surprised that all three were white men, despite a recent letter from the Bush administration to Republican senators saying efforts should be made to increase the representation of women and minorities on the federal bench.

"The line that there aren't any conservative women or minorities out there just doesn't wash," said Kassouf, who investigates nominees to the federal bench. "There are plenty of people to consider, but I think it's the old boy, country club network that's in operation."

Kassouf said of the 36 federal judges on the bench in Texas, six are Hispanic, two are women, and one is black. Hispanics accounted for one-fourth of the state's population in 1990, while blacks account for nearly 12 percent.

Gramm said he is confident of the "demonstrated legal talent and high personal and professional integrity" of each of the attorneys.

"They each believe strongly that Congress, not the courts, should make our laws. And they are concerned about the rights of victims, not just criminals," Gramm said.

Gramm's spokesman, Larry Neal, said the senator's recommendations for the bench "are uniform in one regard — they are top flight, first rate attorneys" and are considered by their peers to be among the best judges in the nation.

"That's exactly what our process is geared to generate, the best possible judges, regardless of any other factor," Neal said.

Sparks, 51, is executive officer of the Grambling & Mounce law firm in El Paso, and has previously practiced law in Austin. He is an Austin native and holds a law degree from the University of Texas.

When the three attorneys are on the bench, Gramm will have recommended 21 of 39 federal judges in Texas.

Airmen were greeted upon their arrival

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Family members, too excited to wait, rushed through a line of news cameramen at Lubbock International Airport to greet six members of the 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital upon their return from duty as part of Operation Desert Storm.

Airman 1st Class Leonard Acevedo, among those who arrived Thursday, held his girlfriend close and said he was excited to be home. His unit is stationed at Reese Air Force Base and was deployed eight weeks ago to the Persian Gulf.

"We'd been waiting for three days to come home, but we kept getting bumped," Acevedo said. "When he (a friend) finally said, 'We're going home,' the look on his face was 'We're outta here.' And I knew we were really leaving."

Children waved banners and flags as the six, dressed in camouflage fatigues, entered the baggage claim.

With Acevedo were Capt. Roy H. Fukuoda, Staff Sgt. Ken D. Killingsworth, Sgt. Liston R. Barron, Sgt. Luis Tang and Airman 1st Class Delania A. Keene.

Astro-graphs By Bernice Bede Osol

March 17, 1991

You may become closely involved with a very unique individual in the year ahead, someone who isn't overly popular but who selects you to be a special friend. This relationship could produce benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A friend who is a good pal but a poor paymaster might try to stick you today with the lion's share of a bill, regarding something in which you're jointly involved. Be on guard. Pisces, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you suffer from a lack of accomplishment today, it's not likely to be due to an absence of initiative. You'll have the drive, but your procedures could be counterproductive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's best not to take situations for granted today, even those in which you feel comfortable and familiar. There's a chance that uncertainties could present themselves in various developments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Even if the overfriendly behavior of someone you know only casually arouses negative perceptions, this should not be ignored. You may be dealing with someone with ulterior motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let companions or associates make important decisions for you today; they could impair your image if they use poor judgment. Think for yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though your performance level might not be up to par today, you may not be very tolerant of those with the same problem. Don't mentally block out yours while emphasizing theirs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If possible, steer away from the complex financial or business problems of a friend today. If you don't, you may find yourself joining this individual beyond the looking glass, where things can get distorted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be extremely selective regarding whom you go to for advice today. An ineffective counselor may get you so confused that you're worse off than when you began.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually, you're a rather industrious person. But, you may spend more time today rationalizing about the things you have to do rather than rolling up your sleeves and getting the job done.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your judgment regarding the intrinsic value of things is a bit questionable today, and there's a possibility you might pay more for something than it is worth, either financially or emotionally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Disappointment is likely today if you expect those with whom you're involved to suspend their whims. Try to be realistic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Rushing to judge the intentions of others could introduce complications into your relationships today. Those you negatively rule upon might actually be just the opposite.

March 18, 1991

More opportunities than usual may be available to you in the year ahead. However, you must be careful not to dilute your possibilities by jumping from one thing to another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is a possibility that you might be overly negative or unrealistically optimistic when assessing various developments today. Either extreme could be counterproductive. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for Pisces' Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to keep a tight lid on your expenditures today, especially those dedicated to non-essentials. If you are undisciplined, things could get a bit out of hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Placing too much emphasis on your own requirements while ignoring those of associates won't make you very popular at this time. Poor behavior could leave a bad lasting impression.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you are required to make a serious presentation today, be careful that you do not embellish the facts. It could darken your image, as well as cost you the deal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might be in need of financial or business counseling and, instead of seeking out experts, there's a chance you may go to friends who don't know even as much as you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Lady Luck could be a trifle fickle today and, if you depend on her too heavily, she may let you down just when you need her the most. Be self-sufficient.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually, you're reasonably well-organized, but today you might be inclined to let chance manage your affairs. This could be a big mistake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone with whom you're closely involved might draw you into a situation today that could incur unplanned expenses. Don't be afraid to say "No" if you're imposed upon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Adhering to an agreement about which you're doubtful could prove to be unwise today. Don't enter into any arrangement that makes you feel insecure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your imaginative mind should be able to provide you with ample reasons for goofing off today. None will be valid, but you may convince yourself they are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order to improve your financial position at this time, you might be tempted to take some speculative risks that you normally would reject. This isn't a good day for long shots.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you are too indecisive today, you are not apt to have too much to show for your efforts; neither will those who are involved with you in special arrangements.

Gospel concert held under Golden Arches

HOUSTON (AP) — Rickey Ford's enthusiasm for gospel music is so contagious that he convinced a local McDonald's restaurant to share it.

The two have joined together for "McPraising," Ford's word for gospel concerts under McDonald's golden arches.

Some weeks, 75 to 100 people gather. When the weather is poor, attendance is sparse. Some come to listen; some to eat.

From 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. Sundays at McDonald's, 4005 Elgin across from the University of Houston, folks sip coffee and munch breakfast biscuits to soulful tunes about prayer and Jesus. One recent Sunday, an early-evening session also was held.

Ben Wilson, owner of several McDonald's franchises, wouldn't have it any other way.

But why gospel? Wilson isn't a die-hard gospel fan, but he does like the unusual.

A former professional football player for the Los Angeles Rams and the Green Bay Packers in the 1960s, Wilson attended George Washington Carver High School in the Acres Home area of northwest Houston. He played football in high school and later was a fullback when he attended the University of Southern California.

"There are a lot of things the community needs, things from the business community," said Wilson. "This is just one facet of that."

Gospel in hamburger heaven simply is something no one else is doing, Wilson said. "That's what this is. It was something that I developed an interest in."

And customers love it, he said.

For Wilson, it's a welcome addition to another Ford brainchild, "McJamming" at lunchtime on Tuesdays, when jazz artists perform.

As far as Wilson knows, the gimmick hasn't caught on at other local McDonald's.

Ford, a woodwind specialist who plays saxophone, flute and other instruments, envisions a time when gospel at McDonald's will be as common as ketchup.

"What I hope for and look forward to is for outreach programs to start at other restaurants. Not only in the city, but around the country. In addition to that, community orchestra programs."

"Most schools have instrumental programs, but all those musicians who go to church don't always have forum to use their talent."

McDonald's gives them an audience they might never capture under a steeple.

"This make the (Christian) word, musically speaking, more acceptable to people," Ford said. "In addition, the program is good for people who don't go to church at all. Also, it cuts down barriers."

"You hear people say, 'I don't go to church, or I don't send my children to church because they don't have the proper clothing.' People come up with excuses. At McDonald's you come as you are. And there are no time constraints. You can come in when

Spinoff research from collider could lead to more diagnostic advances

ATLANTA (AP) — The National Science Foundation is donating $10.6 million for the development of magnetic technology that will allow doctors to study the human brain and other living organisms through magnetic resonance imagery, a Texas congressman said Friday.

The grant will allow scientists to further develop magnetic technology that was discovered as researchers were constructing magnets for the Superconducting Super Collider, a federally funded science facility being built in Texas.

Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, who attended a conference on the Super Collider Friday in Atlanta, said the National Science Foundation grant eventually will allow doctors to study brain functions in great detail.

"It is going to allow for the first time ever the ability to do magnetic imagery of the brain," Chapman said in an interview. "It's an exciting new advance in diagnostic medicine."

The National Science Foundation chose five institutions to receive the grant funds: the Houston Advanced Research Center, the University of Chicago, the University of California at Berkeley, the University of Illinois at Urbana-

Champaign and the IBM T.J. Watson Research Center.

The foundation was expected to announce the research project at the Atlanta conference this afternoon.

Chapman hailed the project as a positive spinoff of the super collider, an $8.2 billion research facility under construction near Waxahachie south of Dallas that is expected to be completed in 1999.

"So many people are asking why we are building the super collider," Chapman said. "Before we even have any atoms running around its huge racetrack, it's going to make a difference in the lives of many people."

The super collider, which scientists say will greatly advance the understanding of the basic structure of the universe, is to be a huge research facility in which beams of subatomic particles called protons will be hurled through a 54-mile oval tunnel at almost the speed of light.

The protons will collide at certain points along the tunnel, producing even smaller subatomic particles. Huge electronic detectors will record the collisions, and scientists will use the data to explore the innermost nature of matter, time and space.

for McPraising. Performers have included the Angelics and Pressin' On, local gospel performers.

One of his newest finds is former jazz singer Mickey Moseley, whose voice has a soft, honeyed quality.

"I was once a singer, and my whole life has changed," Moseley said.

She speaks with the conviction of the newly converted, determined to bring her own change of heart to others.

"Religion is one thing—Christianity is another," she said.

Dr. Gott

Are over-the-counter drugs safe?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Over-the-counter drugs (medicine purchased without a prescription) provide substantial profits for the pharmaceutical industry, as well as a genuine concern among health professionals. OTC drugs are increasingly in demand. It's not that these drugs cost less than their prescribed counterparts. Quite the reverse. Weight for weight, they cost about the same. Moreover, patients' health insurance will often cover prescription medicine — but not the same drug in OTC form. Thus, the main advantage of OTC compounds is, for people eager to take more control over their health, convenience.

According to the American Pharmaceutical Association, the average American adult suffers minor symptoms, such as headache or heartburn, about every three days. This person is more likely to make a trip to the drugstore or the supermarket, rather than to the doctor, in an attempt to obtain fast relief. The older we get, the more likely we are to rely on non-prescription remedies. For example, although people over 60 constitute 17 percent of the population, they consume 40 percent of all OTC drugs, leading to total sales of $9.7 billion in 1989.

At present, about 700 ingredients are approved by the Food and Drug Administration for inclusion in the approximately 300,000 OTC preparations. This number is scheduled to shrink by 1994, as the FDA proposes to ban 400 ingredients that have been shown to be ineffective or dangerous. Nonetheless, many physicians remain concerned that OTC drugs carry substantial risk and should be consumed cautiously. In one study, for instance, 15 percent of patients using OTC ibuprofen experienced kidney damage which was, fortunately, reversible when the drug was stopped.

Patients taking prescribed antidepressant medicine may become confused and delirious from timed-release cold capsules. Many OTC cough/cold preparations can raise blood pressure, cause drowsiness and affect coordination, especially in the elderly. Aspirin and similar OTC analgesics frequently cause stomach upset, gastric bleeding and delayed blood coagulation. In particular, patients can inadvertently overdose on these drugs when, for example, they supplement prescription medications, such as high-dose Motrin, with OTC Advil or Mediprin, both of which contain the same active ingredient (ibuprofen) as Motrin.

To complicate the issue further, many people don't consider OTC drugs to be drugs at all. Therefore, when asked by a doctor what medicines they are taking, they may mistakenly fail to inform the physician of the OTC medication. This can set the stage for diagnostic dilemmas (indigestion and bleeding from unsuspected analgesics) or unpredictable and dangerous drug interactions, such as that between antihistamines and sedatives. As Americans gravitate toward OTC remedies, the phenomenon of polypharmacy emerges: Patients self-medicate with one drug to overcome the consequences of another.

Regulations about OTC drugs remain relatively stringent in the United States, as opposed to other countries where medicine, such as codeine and antibiotics, are readily available without prescriptions. This easy access to powerful pharmacologicals often leads to addiction, severe allergic reactions and inappropriate self-medication. Even with strict regulations about OTC drugs, Americans must be cautious and parsimonious in choosing to take these medications. Any substance, prescription or not, has potential side effects, can cause illness and may react unfavorably in the presence of certain diseases (such as glaucoma) or with one another.

Consumers should heed these suggestions:

- Avoid self-medicating for temporary and trivial ailments.
- Read labels carefully.
- Take the medicine only as directed.
- Check with a doctor about possible drug interactions.
- Be honest with your physician about which OTC drugs you are taking.
- Consider OTC remedies to be as potentially hazardous as prescription drugs.
- Seek medical attention for symptoms that persist for more than a few days or for recurring ailments.
- Avoid OTC drugs if you are taking prescription medicines, unless your doctor approves.

OTC drugs may be convenient and easy to obtain, but most are surprisingly potent and can lead to serious consequences.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter has been diagnosed with mononucleosis. An allergy doctor wants to put one drop of Fluogen (the flu virus) under her tongue four times a day for treatment. Is this an approved method for control?

DEAR READER: Mononucleosis is an acute illness caused by the Epstein-Barr virus, an infectious agent estimated to infect at least 95 percent of the world's population. In most instances, patients are not even aware of Epstein-Barr infection; however, their immune systems are activated to produce antibodies to the virus. These antibody markers, which can be identified in a blood test, persist for a lifetime.

In some cases, patients become quite ill: overwhelming exhaustion, swollen glands, sore throat and fever, which may progress to rash, jaundice and liver inflammation. In most instances, the spleen swells, too. Occasionally, patients exhibit neurological signs, such as Bell's palsy (facial weakness), blurred vision, confusion and paralysis. These signs are more common in older adults and rarely appear in youngsters and adolescents.

Being a virus infection, mononucleosis is untreatable with current means. Although some practitioners advocate various therapies, such as Fluogen, these methods have not been proven effective.

Most patients with mononucleosis recover uneventfully, after several days of acute symptoms, followed by a few weeks of fatigue and malaise. If sore throat and tonsillitis are severe enough to inhibit swallowing, short-term treatment with prednisone (purified cortisone) will relieve symptoms.

I suggest you disregard the allergist's advice and take your daughter to your family doctor for further guidance.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have endometriosis and suffer from chronic pain on my left side. I've been taking hormone pills for relief. Can certain foods I am sensitive to aggravate my condition?

DEAR READER: Endometriosis is a common congenital disorder marked by abdominal pain and cramping due to the presence of endometrial tissue (the lining of the uterus) in abnormal locations, such as abdominal organs. During menstruation, when the endometrium usually sheds and bleeds, these aberrant "islands" also bleed, leading to inflammation and a buildup of pressure.

Treatment consists of suppression of menstruation, using drugs such as danazol or continuous oral contraceptive pills (hormones). This may lead to unacceptable weight gain, breast tenderness, fatigue and depression.

For moderate/severe endometriosis, surgery is recommended: The abnormal nests of endometrial tissue are removed.

Diet bears no relation to endometriosis, which is an affliction of the reproductive tract; therefore, the avoidance of certain foods plays no role in treatment. You can obtain further advice about therapy from your gynecologist.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their names and addresses to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

It's a conspiracy. You know that, don't you?

It began eons ago when a caveman in California realized that if he could convince his friends that eating too much water buffalo was unhealthy, he'd have more for himself. It worked, but soon he began to believe his own myth, and instead of eating so much meat, he traded some of it to the guys in cave 3B for some berries. In time, he convinced his neighbors that, indeed, too much berry pie was also unhealthy. And so he was able to trade less meat for more berries. And he became, ahem, berry wealthy.

He was the world's first nutritionist.

Years and years later, a blind Boston shoemaker was working in his shop when he accidentally spilled a vat of red dye on several thousand pairs of sneakers. Realizing it would take something bizarre to pull him out of financial ruin, the shoemaker collected together the sneakers and jumped a bus to California. There, he found a professor who was actually managing to convince people that something which causes severe muscle cramps, leaves them gasping for breath and gets them nowhere in a hurry must be beneficial. He called this "jogging." Understandably, it wasn't much of a trick to convince these people to get to nowhere wearing ugly red sneakers.

The fitness craze was born.

Still, everything would have been fine if the shoemaker hadn't one day run headlong into the caveman's great, great, great, great, great grandfather. The fitness craze bumped into the health food craze one smoggy summer afternoon in Los Angeles. They were helped to their feet by a young advertising executive.

The world has never been, and will never be, the same again.

Fitness and nutrition realized that, not only were they compatible, but they could make great money together.

Now in 1991, the focus isn't on what's good for you, but, rather, on what is bad. Sugar is bad. Salt is bad. Fat is bad. Cholesterol is bad. Red meat is bad. Caffeine is bad. Glucose is bad.

Anything good has to be preceded by one of three words. These are the magical, wonderful words "light," "free" and "low."

Anything light is good. Sugar free is good. Caffeine free is good. Anything light, sugar free and caffeine free is fantastic. And if it's light, sugar free, caffeine free and low in sodium, fat and calories it must be food for the gods.

The American public can't gulp it down fast enough.

Ten years ago, if you wanted something "free" and "light" to eat from the grocery store, you went to one particular shelf on one particular aisle. Now, the stuff is everywhere. "Light," "free" and "low" have invaded syrup, salad dressings, soups, cold cuts, soft drinks, tea, cake mixes, beer, chips, dips and cheese. And there is a special wonderland in the frozen food section — entire meals — for "light," "free" and "low" fanatics.

Normally, I wouldn't care. Drink all the diet pop you want. Swell with pride at the 10 calories you saved by purchasing sugar-free jello. It's your life. Besides, paying more for less seems to have become the American way.

Two things though, have led me to write this particular column. The first occurred about three days ago when I saw a bottle of sugar-free, sodium-reduced barbecue sauce.

Yep, they finally did it. I personally believe that anyone who uses sugar-free, sodium-reduced barbecue sauce should be shot.

It's right there in the 12 Commandments. "Thou mayest taketh the flavor from the cheese, maketh Coca-Cola tasteth more like the can than the can itself, and processeth the chip until it cannot be processed anymore, but thou shalt not, underth any circumstances, messeth with the barbecue sauce."

The second outrage was an article I read which foretells of a major fastfood franchise trying to cash in on the craze. It is putting the "McLean Deluxe" on the market.

Yep. It's a low-fat hamburger made by you-know-McWho.

The article explained that previous low-fat burgers didn't go over big because they used a soy substitute. This low-fat burger will be different, though. It uses seaweed.

Sugar free barbecue sauce and low-fat seaweed enhanced hamburgers.

The world has gone totally McNuts.

Country Life

"Mom, you are so mean."

"So, call the Child Abuse Hotline number. Here, let me dial it for you."

"But to make us work on Spring Break. It's not fair."

"Neither are stretch marks."

but what can you do?"

"Why do we have to clean out the store room?"

"We've lived here eleven years. It seemed as good a time as any."

"WAIT! You can't throw that away. That's a perfectly good telephone answering machine. I might need it in my room someday."

"Uh-huh. Well, it WAS good, until lightning blew it out."

"Well, what's wrong with this toaster?"

"It sends out little sparks when you turn it on and burns everything."

"But should we throw it away? I mean, don't you think we should, like, GIVE it away to someone needy?"

"Oh yeah. That's just what a needy person needs, all right, a toaster that sends out sparks."

"You're not going to throw out my third-grade health project are you?"

"Oh, I wouldn't think of it. Someday you'll cherish this wadded up poster board with a drawing on it of a huge sunburnt man."

"He was supposed to use sunblock. What are you sticking in that Hefty bag?"

"Nothing. Just a big ol' piece of rolled up white cardboard that I don't need anymore."

"NOT MY TEDDY BEAR SHIRT!"

"Honey, it's a size three. You outgrew it two decades ago."

"BUT IT'S MY TEDDY BEAR SHIRT!"

"Right. We can't part with that, can we? See, I'm keeping it. Tell your brother we don't need the paramedics after all."

"You know, jeans with holes in them are all the rage now. We could sell those and make a lot of money."

"Well, that is my life's ambition, but I think we'll pass this time."

"You can't throw away Daddy's—"

"Hush. You never saw this, and I never noticed that you left the barn door open yesterday, right?"

"Right."

"Why do I have to sort through all these catalogues? It's boring. And it's SPRING BREAK."

"Because I don't think a 1985 Sears catalogue would do us much good right now."

"But it might come in handy sometime."

"Spoken like your father's true disciple."

"We're going to need to hire a Mayflower moving van to haul all this junk to the landfill."

"Just think of all the space we'll have then."

"Good. I've been needing someplace to put my old Science Project."

Author's Note: Hope to see you at the book-signing for my new novel, "Spellbound," next Saturday, March 23, from 2-4 p.m. at Wal-Mart.

SDN letters to the editor

Dear Snyder Daily News,

I am Michael D. Brasher and I am on the USS Vreeland FF-1068 in the Persian Gulf. Two days ago, a chaplain on board asked me if I had just one minute on the news or a couple of lines in my hometown paper, what would I say.

Well, I said that I would give my wife and son a message telling them that I am safe and I love them.

The reason I am telling you this is because I would really appreciate you printing the following statement in your paper:

To Michelle and Scooter Brasher, I love you both more than anything and hope to be home soon. Keep up the prayers, Baby. Love, your husband and daddy.

Michael D. Brasher DCFR VSN USS Vreeland FF-1068 R-DIV FPO Miami, Fla. 34093-1428

To the Editor,

On Oct. 16, our son will be dead

10 years. He would have been 30 years old Feb. 11.

On this date I went out to Hillside Memorial Garden and changed the flowers on his grave like I do four times a year. I buy the silk flowers because they don't fade like the plastic ones do. They are expensive, and I really can't afford them, but I buy them anyway because we love him and want his grave to look nice.

Sometime between Feb. 11 and March 14 someone removed the flowers and the foam that held them in the urn. This is not the first time; one time the flowers were pulled apart piece by piece.

We don't know why or who would do such a sick and cruel act. It can't hurt our son but it sure hurts us. If whoever is doing this reads this letter, I pray you will have the decency to stop.

Controversial comedian draws large following in Texas cities

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Frank Lunney's comedy routine comes with a caution.

"We put up signs, we warn customers when they buy tickets and even give the audience one final warning before Frank comes on stage," said Gary Grant, owner of Jollys comedy club in Amarillo. "But they still come."

Although, "the faint of heart should probably skip this one," Grant said.

Lunney, a Dallas comic better known as "Captain Rowdy," fires off twisted, X-rated jokes about such issues as abortion, gun control and suicide.

Rowdy's jokes shred political issues and leaders. He even pokes fun at Mother Theresa.

Lunney, a recovering alcoholic, says: "I'm just a product of my sick mind."

"Hey, nothing is sacred," he says with a wry grin. His slogan: "The darker side of comedy just got darker."

Despite, maybe even because of, his highly confrontational material, Lunney draws packed houses, not in Dallas, Austin or Houston, but in conservative strongholds such as Amarillo, Lubbock and Waco.

"He is a cult figure here," says Sean McCann, co-operator of Waco's Waterworks restaurant and comedy club. "Here we are at the buckle of the Bible belt and Frank is by far the most requested comedian we bring in."

"He says what everyone's thinking but are too afraid to say. So they come to see him and just let it all hang out."

McCann and other comedy club owners said they go out of their way to warn audiences of Lunney's highly offensive material.

Captain Rowdy's humor, which will be released on an album this spring, is not for everyone, says Grant, who has watched several people walk out.

Despite the warnings, McCann thought Lunney's first performance in Waco would be his last.

"I looked out at the audience right as Frank got started and I saw all these stone faces," McCann recalled. "I thought the Baptists would run me out of town for bringing the devil to Waco. But 15 minutes later people were up on their chairs yelling and applauding."

Nothing escapes Captain Rowdy's assault, not even his home state.

"I love Texas," he said during a recent performance. "Only in the Lone Star State do you buy a pickup truck and they ask you, 'Cassette player or gun rack?'"

"And of course the guy says, 'Gun rack?! ... What are you crazy? What would I do with a cassette player?'"

Rowdy, who sports black leather attire, spiked boots and a mohawk haircut, hammers away at his routine, driving the audience to the edge of tolerance before cracking, "Come on people, if I did all the things I said I did, I would still be in jail."

Immigration to the U.S.

The number of new immigrants to the United States has been steadily rising since World War II, but the proportion of immigrants to the total population is lower than in some earlier times

Who are we?

Inside our bigger, better melting pot

NOTE: In his new book, "The First Universal Nation: Leading Indicators and Ideas about the Surge of America in the 1990s," Ben Wattenberg predicts that America is on the brink of its most promising decade. Wattenberg, an expert on trends and demographics, is a nationally syndicated columnist for Newspaper Enterprise Association. Here is an excerpt from "The First Universal Nation" (which is published by The Free Press, a division of Macmillan).

By Ben Wattenberg

In Indonesia, an American social scientist, a burly man, wholly bald, visited a remote village. Proudly committing sociology in the raw, he walked down the street. Soon, a band of children began following him, Pied Piper fashion. They were chanting: "Kojak! Kojak!"

That's strange. Hadn't those kids heard America was in decline?

Indeed, it is said, frequently, that "America is in decline."

I don't believe it.

Not only is America not in decline, not only is America still "No. 1" in the world, not only is America more influential than ever, America may well be on the way to becoming the most influential nation in history.

To make such a case credible, which I propose to do, it must be demonstrated that America is: 1) doing better at home; 2) doing better abroad; and 3) doing better than its competitors.

All that is happening. What helps stitch these ideas together is that America has become the first universal nation.

We are universalizing at home; Americans now come from everywhere. And the American way of life — for good and for ill, although mostly for good — is the pervasive, persuasive, universal model of activity everywhere. Isn't that what the No. 1 nation is supposed to be about?

Here are some highlights:

• Immigration. Our top two tennis players are named Ivan and Martina. The new wave includes Andre Agassiz (father from Iran) and Michael Chang (father from China.)

Americans used to brag that "we come from everywhere." It wasn't really true. Now it is.

In the 50 years prior to 1965, about 11 million immigrants, legal and illegal, came to the United States. About 75 percent of those were of European ancestry.

But in just the 25 years since 1965 significant headway toward cures or treatments for osteoporosis and anemia.

• Intermarriage. Can such a polyg'ot nation work? It's has worked. Among Americans of European descent (75 percent) intermarriage rates are very high. Today, 75 percent of Italian Americans marry non-Italian Americans, double the earlier rate. The argument about whether America was a melting pot or a stew is over. We're melting.

Similar trends showing increased intermarriage (from a lower base level) are already apparent among Asian-Americans and Latinos. It has only begun, barely, among blacks.

• Fertility. There is another major demographic development.

We alone among the modern democracies have emerged from the "Birth Dearth." For 13 straight years, from 1973 to 1986, our Total Fertility Rate was about 1.8 lifetime births per woman, well below the 2.1 needed to keep a nation at mere "replacement level" (absent immigration).

Unexpectedly, our fertility has climbed solidly, now up to 2.1 births for 1990.

Higher immigration and fertility has a positive commercial implication. Instead of growing by 17 million people in the 1990s, as expected, we should grow by 25 million. And, far from the 1987 Census Bureau projections showing plateau and decline, America will continue to grow with some vigor.

We should see a customer boom in America, of benefit to most businesses. At the same time, our principal competitors, in Japan and Europe, will be demographically frozen, and probably losing population, and markets.

SDN Letter to the Editor

To the Editor,

Sue Richardson, manager of Long John Silver's, came to me in February with an idea she had, wanting to support the Snyder Special Olympics athletes. Two Saturdays in February were set aside for our athletes with Long John Silver's giving 10 cents from each Fish n' More dinner sold on those days. Sue challenged other businesses in town to adopt an athlete by letting us put a container in their places of business, giving the people of Snyder the opportunity of dropping in change to help support the athletes.

The response was great!! There are containers in the following businesses: Long John Silver's, Bailey's Tire Service, Merle Norman Boutique, The Best Little Hair Place in Town, Snyder Lanes, Health Food Center, Landes Home Furnishings, Snootie Fox, Everybody's Thriftway, Travis Flowers, Art Style Beauty Salon, North College 66 Station, Thompson's Shoe Store, McKinley Plumbing, SJS Inc., Spanish Inn, The Shack and Pizza Inn. KSNV Radio was a great help, letting us explain about Special Olympics and what the program does for all of our athletes and the benefits they reap from it.

Monetary contributions came in from individuals wanting to support the program. These are: Health Food Center, Harold Denison, Reta's Cake Shop, Rosie and Bill Clement, Lions Club, Darlene Grant, Janice Cox, Landes Home Furnishings, SJS Inc., Jennifer and Don Jenkins, E.L. Farmer Trucking Co., Arlene and Loy Neeper, West Texas State Bank, Carla and Robert Beard, Barbara and Robert Miller, Joe Fowler and Associates and Lawrence IGA.

The Snyder athletes participate in two of the events offered by Texas Special Olympics — track in the spring and bowling in the fall.

All of you, by your support, are making this happen for them and you are sharing in making Special Olympics for Snyder a success. All monies that are contributed in Snyder benefit our local Olympians.

The Special Olympics athletes and coaches thank each of you for helping us reach the goals we are striving to attain.

If we have missed anyone it is surely unintentionable.

Thank you!!!

Anderson begins his sixth year in captivity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Terry Anderson's family and friends gathered Friday at a somber ceremony marking the end of his sixth year as a hostage. President Bush vowed "we will not forget" Anderson and five other Americans held captive in Lebanon.

Fellow journalists, senators, diplomats and former hostages honored the 43-year-old Associated Press correspondent at a 90-minute ceremony that brought tears to the eyes of some in attendance.

"I don't have much to say because after six years there is not much to say," said Walter Mears, vice president of The Associated Press.

Despite the length of time that Anderson — the longest-held American hostage in Lebanon — has been in captivity, participants voiced optimism that the time might be at hand for a resolution to the hostage case.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the United States was closer than it had ever been to "a political settlement" of the general Middle East situation, which could lead to freedom for hostages.

Katharine Graham, chairman of the board of The Washington Post Co., said the end of the Persian Gulf War and developments in the Middle East gave Americans "every reason to hope" that Anderson and his five fellow U.S. hostages may be freed soon.

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, who has visited the Middle East in the past, proclaimed that Friday's ceremony of prayer, song and speeches would not be repeated.

"This is the last ceremony," she said.

Say, who has worked tirelessly for her brother's freedom, read a letter she received Friday from Bush, who has recently focused attention on the hostages.

"We have not forgotten the hostages and we will not forget them," Bush told Say in his letter. "These six men are held cruelly apart from their families simply because they are Americans," he wrote.

"...and another thing, I'm tired of your wet panty hose dripping all over the bathroom!"

Fort Worth council considers curfew

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Robert Snoke learned firsthand how violent teen gangs can be at night. After he proposed an 11 p.m. curfew for youths, his house was riddled with bullets, large rocks were thrown through windows.

But Snoke, chairman of the 1,000-member Rosemont Neighborhood Association, continues his three-year effort to persuade the city to impose the curfew for those aged 16 or less because he believes it is needed to curtail gangs.

Police Chief Thomas Windham, a former Los Angeles policeman, agrees, and says Los Angeles' curfew was handy.

"Street cops have a tough job. They'll be able to use this to their advantage," Windham said. "They are frustrated when they respond to a lot of calls involving young people. Now, there is nothing they can do."

"But having this ordinance in their tool pouch gives them an additional lever," he said.

Civil libertarians and others, however, object to what they call threats to youth freedom and a danger of discrimination.

Homes around the hilly, cedar-shaded Rosemont Park in south Fort Worth have been burglarized and vehicles vandalized by roaming groups of juveniles, Snoke said.

"We've had killings, knifings, shootings, drugs and vandalism of all kinds," said Snoke, 44. "But since our association has been organized, we have been successful overall in reducing the crime rates over here. Our biggest problem is still with street gangs."

In a housing area of nearby

Southwestern Baptist Seminary, the youths have made nervous students receptive to the curfew idea.

"Teens stay out late at night, including Fridays. One night, there was a fight, a kid got shot and everybody scattered," said Andrew Argent, acting security supervisor at the seminary. "Before that shooting, we were getting 50-75 teens in just one yard."

Phyllis Roark, who has operated a grocery store nearby for 20 years, said she also supports the curfew.

But some disagree. "I don't support a curfew of any type unless it comes from an adult in my home," Jamal Jones, the 18-year-old student body president at O.D. Wyatt High School, said.

Snoke, who has three children, said retaliation against him has caused thousands of dollars in damage.

"I have had my house shot at and threats made toward me and others, including stores in the neighborhood, by some of these roaming gangs of juveniles," he said. "They shot seven or eight rounds into the front of my house and threw stones and boulders through the front window."

Later this month, City Council is scheduled to receive statistical data that police said would support the proposed curfew. A vote on the curfew could also come this month, and Windham said he expects a curfew will be in place by summer.

Two other Tarrant County cities, Watauga and Richland Hills, have curfew laws that are not enforced.

The 14-page draft Fort Worth ordinance is patterned after an Atlanta provision in force since late last year.

So far, Atlanta police said 88 youths have been picked up, with 79 released to parents without charges. Of the nine others, eight were charged with various offenses, including auto theft and curfew violations.

Three parents have also been charged, police said. Georgia's American Civil Liberties Union said it was prepared to challenge the law if asked, and the Texas ACLU could review the proposal here.

"The ACLU believes that, where curfew laws are unreasonable and arbitrary, those are grounds to oppose them — arbitrary age limits, curfew limits," said Suzanne Donovan, Texas ACLU director in Austin.

She said the organization also feels parents shouldn't be penalized for their children's actions unless parents' contributory fault can be proven.

"If we had a group of youths come to us and complain about misapplication or how such a curfew is imposed, we would look closely at that," said Ms. Donovan.

The Fort Worth proposal would require those aged 16 or less to be in their homes between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m. weekdays, and between midnight and 6 a.m. on weekends. Parents would be subject to fines up to $200 for violations.

Among numerous exceptions are for returning home from work or from attending events of educational, religious or non-profit nature. Windham said those exceptions would help the curfew withstand constitutional challenges.

Businesses help others to prepare for contract bids

DALLAS (AP) — Winning a government contract can boost a business of any size.

But bulky application forms, a lengthy bidding process and other red tape scare many businesses, particularly small ones, from even trying.

Some business owners don't know where to go to begin. Others are overwhelmed by the sheer number of agencies there are to deal with — nearly 400 in the Texas state government alone.

The government tries to help. The Texas Commerce Department's directory of purchasing agents is "in real hot demand," said Rose Reyes Pitts of the small and minority business office.

General Services Administration assists at the federal level and the Commerce and Defense departments have computer services that are updated daily with the latest available contracts.

Texas hopes to have a similar service soon, Ms. Pitts said. Several legislators have introduced bills to improve access to Texas agencies, particularly for small businesses.

A small industry has also sprung up to help businesses wade through the contracting quagmire.

Privately run bid centers supported by local chambers of commerce, schools or, in some instances government grants, help businesses keep up with available contracts and assist in research and procedures for getting on a bid list.

Once on a bid list, a business will always hear from an agency when it lets contracts for a good or service the business offers.

The Association of Government Marketing Assistance Specialists, a trade group of bid centers, will have its annual convention in Dallas next week.

Dennis Armon, director of the GSA's business service center in Fort Worth, says the assistance of those centers is invaluable to the government.

"We needed a custodial contract for (a federal facility) in Marfa and we got no bids for it," Armon said. "We called the bid centers closest to them — San Antonio, San Angelo, El Paso. They were able to come up with a number of names for us."

At the Center for Government Contracting, a Dallas bid center, there are often more bidding opportunities than businesses seeking them.

"We have a lot of (contract) solicitations in our office that we have no clients to send them to," said Toni Townsend, an assistant at the center. "Constantly we're having solicitations sit here."

Business has been tough too for an Irving company that built a database of all the Texas purchasing offices and those of the prime federal contractors and U.S. agencies in six Southwestern states.

The company, Government Procurement Systems Inc., sells the three databases for about $100 each. They also supply forms and other assistance to get on bid lists.

"It's just something that makes it easy for a business to use the government as another customer," said Don Harvey, a company salesman. "We're selling 18 months of research."

The company's developed a customer base of a few hundred businesses last year but flopped in its first mass mailing to 10,000 potential government suppliers. Harvey said either too few people know about it or too few want to sell goods and services to the government.

The GSA's Armon said government contracting can appear to be more trouble than it's worth. "It's different from a lot of things (businesses) have been exposed to," he said.

As an example, Armon cited a recent 69-page contract to hire three people to work in the mailroom of a government building.

"A good, good percentage of that is boilerplate. I don't mean to minimize it," he said. "But because of different laws, there's a lot of contract terms and conditions. If you're going to be in government contracting, you've got to be accustomed to that."

Armon's office is often a first-stop for businesses seeking entry to the market of U.S. agencies.

CALIFORNIA'S DROUGHT

California is enduring its worst drought in memory. The naturally semi-arid state is in the fifth year of a severe water shortage, with no end in sight.

As a result, state officials are starting to take drastic measures. The State Water Resources Board is instituting mandatory water rationing. It will affect all California residents, especially farmers.

How bad things are is shown by the steps being taken by the federal Central Valley Project, which administers the 450-mile long California aqueduct that runs north to south through the central part of the state. It provides irrigation water to 23,000 farmers of the world's richest and most productive farm land.

Effective immediately, their water supply is to be cut 75 percent. This move follows last year's 50 percent cut. The result will be that some farmers will have to radically curtail the acres they plant; others who plant water-intensive crops might be put out of business. Crop yields will be much lower, and food prices nationwide will rise sharply.

The Project also supplies water to some 3 million urban households in Sacramento and the San Francisco Bay area. They have been told to expect cutbacks of 50 to 75 percent.

Meanwhile, in the Los Angeles area, consumers and homeowners have been told to cut back water consumption by 31 percent or face huge fines. And Gov. Pete Wilson has instituted a $100 million water-emergency plan.
