Trull shares love of sport with kids

By Julie L. Carlson

You don't have to be an Olympic star to be a gymnastics instructor, but you do have to have a knowledge of the sport and what type of injuries it can inflict.

Hereford's YMCA gymnastics instructor Angela Trull has been with the sport since age 12. Now at 25, she's been a gymnastics instructor since 1994, but has been helping with instructing since age 13.

Angela was born in Hobbs, N.M., but she and her mom soon moved to Amarillo where she grew up and became a cheerleader at Tascosa High School. Angela still lives in Amarillo and works at the Builder's Association as well as the unit coordinator of the pediatric care unit at Northwest Texas Hospital System.

Her day's work doesn't end there because in the evening, until 9 p.m., she attends paramedic school and is a candidate for May 2000 graduation and would like to find a job as a flight medic.

"I'd like to work on an ambulance, but I eventually want to be a flight medic."

Even with her hectic schedule, she finds time every Thursday afternoon to do what she loves best, teaching gymnastics and working with children.

"I love kids, I love them," she exclaimed.

She's been teaching at the YMCA in Hereford since 1997. This year her classes go from October to the end of April. With the lack of an air-conditioning system at the YMCA gym, classes are not held in the summer.

Angela's classes begin with children 18 months up to 11 or 12 years old.

With help from the Early Childhood Intervention program of Hereford and the Acker family, Angela began her class working with developmentally delayed children. Kristen was her first student.

'Mooving' on up — Hereford Whiteface players celebrate with their trophy after defeating the Plainview Bulldogs 26-15 in Friday night's Division I Class 4A bi-district playoff game in Plainview. The Herd players presented the trophy to injured running back L.J. Vallejo (center, holding trophy) after the game. Hereford advances to the area round of the Division I playoffs against El Paso Ysleta. The game will be Saturday in Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

Wildfire warning issued

By Julie L. Carlson

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Abundant dry vegetation and a growing potential for wildfires sparked the Texas Forest Service to issue a wildfire danger alert for the High Plains and Rolling Plains regions.

With much vegetation already dormant due to drought-like weather and with continued dry, windy conditions predicted by weather forecasters will only worsen fire danger in the area, said Jim Blott, fire prevention coordinator for the Texas Forest Service in Conroe.

Recently, a wildfire burned out of Hartley County into Oldham County before being controlled at 30,000 acres by the combined efforts of numerous area fire departments. Though a Texas Forest Service survey shows that wildfire occurrence in the High Plains and Rolling Plains has been fairly low, the occurrence of the Hartley County fire indicates that large fires are possible.

The presence in the Panhandle of large acreages of grass set aside under the Conservation Reserve Program further increases the risk of disastrous wildfires, said Blott.

"If it gets too dry we might put in a burn advisory and not allow people to burn their trash," Deaf Smith County Fire Marshal Jay Spain said.

Blott and Spain suggest several fire safety practices that can help prevent accidental wildfires.

Before doing any outdoor burning, check with local fire authorities to see if any restrictions on outdoor burning are in force, Blott said. If outdoor burning is allowed, construct wide fire lines down to bare mineral soil around the material to be burned. Avoid burning on dry, windy days so winds won't carry burning material outside of fire lines.

Changing to stay the same

Always changing, yet ever the same.

The Festival of Trees. The annual Hereford Senior Citizens Association fundraiser always has an array of elaborately decorated trees, but they are never like those from previous years.

There is always the Lionel train display by the Nolan Henson family of Happy, but each year the display features new and different scenes.

There is always the Festival Gala, followed by the Festival Auction but each year the amount collected by the auction varies.

The 10th Annual Festival of Trees will be Nov. 17-21 at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center, 426 Ranger.

The five-day festival agenda will follow basically the same time schedule as in the past years.

Continuous festival activities and children's programs will begin at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

A preview of this year's trees will be 5-8 p.m. Wednesday, providing extra viewing time for anyone interested in bidding on one of the ornate, seven-foot trees.

The Festival Gala is set to begin at 6 p.m. Nov. 19, followed at 7:30 p.m. by the Festival Auction.

Last year's auction of trees and other items, such as oversized lighted wreaths, brought in a record $36,550. The previous high of $28,675 was four years prior.

Contributing to the total was the top-selling tree at $6,000 with a second tree selling for $5,600.

The trees are provided by the Senior Center, are sponsored by local and area businesses and are decorated by individuals, businesses, school groups and service clubs.

Decorators determine what theme will be used for each tree and the variety of theme ideas is limited only by the imagination of the decorators.

The Memorial Tree, offered for the first time in 1994, will be featured again this year. The lighted, wooden Christmas tree serves as a tribute where people may honor loved ones through monetary contributions.

Donor levels and corresponding tree light colors are:

- Green Light - $10-$99
- Blue Light - $100-$249
- Red Light - $250-$499
- Gold Light - $500-$1,000

All proceeds benefit the Hereford Senior Citizens Association which offers services to area senior citizens that include congregate and homebound meals, transportation and a modern and multi-functional senior center.

According to the Hereford Senior Citizens Association, more than 2,000 senior citizens were assisted in 1998.

Once again, this year's festival will include the always popular melodrama. The play will be presented at 7 p.m.

Hereford physician honored by AAFP

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A family physician from Hereford, was recently honored for 30 years of membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians (AAFP).

The AAFP is the national medical association representing more than 88,000 family physicians, family practice residents and medical students from across the country.

The AAFP recognized Dr. Duffy E. McBrayer Jr. and paid tribute to those Academy members whose many years of involvement have contributed significantly to the position of prominence family physicians occupy in today's health care delivery system.

The AAFP, founded in 1947, was instrumental in establishing the medical specialty of family practice in 1969. It also was a pioneer in establishing a requirement that its members earn 150 hours of approved continuing medical education every three years.

Family physicians are medical specialists trained to treat a majority of medical problems for all members of the family from newborns to the elderly.

As the Hereford Whiteface football team rolled down U.S. Highway 385 South en route to Plainview for the Division I Class 4A bi-district playoff game, they saw this sign of support at Plains Ford New Holland Inc. The sign at the farm implement business wasn't the only sign the football team would see because other Herd backers erected signs all along the highway going to Plainview.

Did some dancing

Diamond Dancer Victoria Perez had plenty of reason to dance Friday night as the Hereford High Whitefaces defeated the favored Plainview Bulldogs 26-15 in the bi-district playoff game at Bulldog Stadium. The win advances the Herd into the next round of the state playoffs. Hereford will face El Ysleta next Saturday at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa. The time of the contest had not been scheduled at press time today.

Navy's Blue Angels return to the air

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The Blue Angels, joined by an admiral in the back seat of one jet, have returned to the air following a crash that killed two of the Navy precision flying team's pilots.

A crowd of 55,000 cheered them on Friday at Pensacola Naval Air Station, their home base, during the first of two season-ending homecoming shows. The shows are the team's first public performances since one of their jets crashed Oct. 28 near Valdosta, Ga.

can," Spain said.

Burn trash only in burn receptacles equipped with a metal screen or mesh to contain sparks and burning embers. Stay with all fires until they are completely out.

"The best thing is to be real careful when you burn trash and what time of day you do it; early morning's best when it's damp and wet from the dew," Spain said.

Avoid using welding equipment near dry grass and brush; or, where vegetation can't be cleared from the work area, use a field sprayer or backpack sprayer to wet vegetation both in and downwind from the work area. Make sure all outdoor equipment such as mowers, chain saws and vehicles are equipped with working mufflers. Also, watch out for rocks when mowing or bush hogging to avoid sparks that could ignite dry grass. Check hay bales frequently and remove hay from rollers, so friction won't ignite a fire.

Keep vehicles out of tall, dry grass, so hot pollution control equipment doesn't come in contact with flammable vegetation. Also, dispose of smoking materials properly, in an ashtray or crushed in bare soil if away from the house or vehicle.

"Plow around your trees and around your house to help prevent further burning. Put cigarettes in ashtrays, never throw them out. Watch out for your vehicles driving through tall grass, the grass can get up in your catalytic converters and start a fire," Spain said.

The fire prevention leader credits public cooperation and use of outdoor fire safety precautions for keeping wildfire activity low, but he warns that continued vigilance by Panhandle residents and visitors is needed to help prevent wildfires from occurring.

and two to three years old for my first class and my oldest is 11 or 12 years old for my advanced class."

Angela's first major in school was occupational therapy. The courses she took and material she learned in this major help her with her developmentally delayed class made up of infants and toddlers. The children are recommended to take Angela's class through the Early Childhood Intervention program in Hereford. In this class Angela helps physically delayed children develop their motor skills.

"I make them push the octagon and hang on the unparallel bars to build upper body strength."

Angela also teaches a three- to five-year-old class in which she teaches the children to tumble and how to properly stretch.

"I start out stretching even the little, little ones (infants and toddlers)."

She says the kids usually listen but are easily distracted and some children need help with certain movements. Others excel in the sport.

"I've had one girl I sent to STARS in Amarillo; she was that good."

Angela used to show her students certain moves, such as front and backhand springs, but she was diagnosed with a rare tissue disease which prevents her from being able to do what she loves best — gymnastics.

She was diagnosed in the summer of 1998 after noticing strange discoloration in her hands. Her family practitioner recommended she have an appointment with a rheumatoid arthritis specialist. He diagnosed her with mixed connective tissue disorder. Since this is a rare disease, there is not a cure, but Angela is currently on medication to help with the pain. She said she tries to stretch daily, but the pain can become severe.

To look at her, no one could tell. She still wears her gymnastics outfit as though she were to jump on the unparallel bars and do a penny drop or do a backflip off the balance beam.

In the meantime, Angela has no intention of leaving the sport. When she graduates from paramedic school, she said she'll go wherever she can find a job, but as far as teaching at the YMCA, she won't stop until she knows someone will be there to take her place.

"It depends on where I get hired and what hours I'll work as to if I'll remain teaching here. I'm not gonna stop here until I find someone to replace me, though. Hereford just doesn't have a gymnastics program and I think every town needs one."

Angela's classes cost $25 per month for YMCA members and $30 per month for non-YMCA members. Her developmentally delayed class is half-price.

Angela hopes to one day flip back into gymnastics, but in the meantime teaching children her passion sport is what she likes doing best.

The bazaar is famous for its holiday gift baskets which are assembled, filled and wrapped by members of the senior citizens. Each basket contains an assortment of items built around a central theme and each basket is unique.

The Lionel train display continues to be popular year after year with the young and the young-at-heart. The display features numerous trains on tracks which pass through village after village, all unique and different each year.

The train display will open on Nov. 17 and continue through Dec. 11.

There is something for everyone, every age and every budget at the Festival of Trees.

Included in this year's fare are the Herd Restaurant, Bake Shop, children's programs and children's crafts. There is no admission cost for continuous festival activities, tree auction, preview of trees, Lionel train display or children's programs.

'CARBO METHOD'

Students learn how to improve reading

Special to The Brand

"If you can read, you can do anything."

That's a popular saying among educators when they begin teaching elementary age students how letters of the alphabet go together to form words and those words in turn make sentences.

This is a seemingly simple task quickly learned by most students — but not all.

Every school has a few students who don't readily pick up on the basics of reading and many of those in years gone by have "fallen through the cracks," another phrase spoken all too often in the educational world.

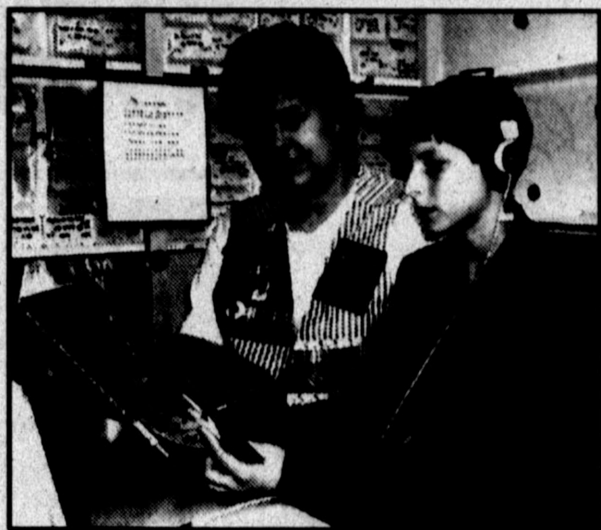

But Michele Merkel, content mastery teacher at Bluebonnet Intermediate School, has found a way to plug those "cracks" and bring the students with slow developing reading skills up to speed.

The Marie Carbo recorded book method was implemented only four weeks into the current school year, and already students participating in the new program have reaped many benefits from this specialized learning method.

"Students can experience a 1- to 1½-year gain in their level of reading," Merkel says of the program which operates along side her content mastery classes. "It (gain) varies from student to student, the best we've seen is a one-year gain in reading level accomplished in just eight weeks."

Most students this year are expected to improve their reading skills enough to bring them up to the grade level for their class, something extremely important for sixth graders as they head toward junior high classes next year.

Merkel credits the program design and one-on-one help for each student with making the Bluebonnet reading improvement plan a success after only eight weeks.

A dozen students, one from each home room at Bluebonnet, participate in the program, working with Merkel a minimum of 20 minutes per day, some up to an hour.

Students are allowed to select the book of their choice from a list approved for the program. Once this is completed, Merkel, Monica Alaniz and Marie Gonzalez spend time alone reading each book into a cassette recorder, permanently placing each word onto a cassette labeled with the name of the book. Pre-recorded tapes are available, but the three stretch their budget by purchasing blank cassettes and recording the books on their own time.

After the cassette tape is recorded, the student is allowed to listen to the tape while wearing headphones, silently reading along in the selected book. This continues for approximately three to four minutes when the tape player is turned off.

The student then discusses with the teacher the content of this part of the book. Once the teacher is satisfied the student understands the book, it is the student's turn to read the same portion of the book to the teacher.

This process may be repeated several times before the student correctly reads and pronounces each word, but Merkel says most students do not find it necessary to listen a second time after they have learned how the process works.

"We have seen a really good increase in reading ability among these students," Merkel says. "It not only improves their ability to read and understand, but it raises their self-esteem."

"Students also learn to readily recognize words, their proper pronunciation and how punctuation affects a sentence and its meaning."

The program has met with such success that teachers have asked Merkel to accept more than one student from each home room, a request she has tried to accommodate. However with limited space, people and time, this has not always been easy, so Merkel hopes expansion of the program is possible in the future with volunteer assistance.

Local author sets signing

Hereford author Gerald McCathern will hold a book signing next week at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C.

McCathern will autograph copies of "Dry Bones," a recently published novel, at the event, which will be 6-8 p.m. The autograph party will be sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

The Deaf Smith County Museum will set up a display of early Panhandle artifacts in the community center. Also, Justin Wells, the Amarillo artist who did the art work for "Dry Bones," will exhibit some of his works.

Entertainment will be provided by Marshall Henderson, a cowboy musician.

"Dry Bones" is the sequel to "Horns," McCathern's earlier novel and continues the saga of Col. Jim Cole, Ned Armstrong and Quanah Parker.

The new book is the story of cattle barons, rustlers, outlaws, shootouts and trail drives in the Texas Panhandle between 1875 and 1881. It combines historical events and characters with fiction to provide a look at life on the western frontier.

What now for hospital board?

Where does the Deaf Smith County Hospital District board go from here?

The board received notice last week that a not-for-profit hospital corporation decided not to pursue a contract to lease Hereford Regional Medical Center.

In announcing its decision, Community Health Corp. of Dallas stated it was unable to obtain the necessary data for it to make a full financial analysis of the Hereford hospital's financial situation and its prospects for the next five years.

That had to be frustrating to the hospital finance office, which had responded to each CHC request for data. The perception is CHC, contrary to what it presented in an October board meeting, wanted the HRMC administration to cultivate all the work on its independent financial analysis.

The hospital district directors now must decide if they want to entertain another lease proposal, this one from Tri-Cities, a hospital company based in Pleasanton, Texas; consider a management proposal from TORCH Management Services Inc., a subsidiary of the Texas Organization of Rural and Community Hospitals; or reopen the search for a new hospital administrator — a search that was put on hold in September when CHC expressed interest in leasing the hospital.

It seems we are spinning our wheels. In our view, the best course of action would be to reopen the search for a new hospital administrator — and now a finance director in wake of Rodney Bailey's resignation — to restore some sorely-needed stability to the hospital administration.

School finance, 46 days and...

After more than two months, a new working budget for the 1999-2000 school year and a tax increase, Hereford taxpayers are still as much in the dark as they were on Sept. 9 when new Hereford Independent School District Superintendent Beth Abernethy first announced her concerns about HISD's financial bottom line.

The HISD school board, in a Sept. 16 board meeting, grudgingly passed a 5-cent per $100 assessed valuation tax increase based on Abernethy's projections that the district was staring at a monumental debt load — stemming from overspending and a rising tide of both old and new debt, the expenditure and necessary repayment of an $854,000 overpayment from Texas Education Agency, and sagging enrollment and tax revenues.

The sobering news left many within the community wondering how such a situation could happen.

State auditors, supposedly the final say on a district's fiscal propriety, had presumably pored over the same audits presented to HISD school board trustees. Did they drop the ball?

According to the state education code, fiscal guidelines for school districts require that a record must be kept of all revenues realized and of all expenditures made during the fiscal year for which a budget is adopted. Further, a report of the revenues and expenditures for the preceding fiscal year shall be filed with the agency on or before the date set by the State Board of Education.

It would appear HISD has, and is, tiptoeing around the fine points of these requirements through months of unreconciled bank balances and its inability to offer a strict accounting of its financial affairs. And, it would also appear that TEA, under whose auspices a district's financial condition ultimately falls, hasn't been doing its job.

Taxpayers didn't deserve a tax increase based on oversights, nor do they deserve to carry the weight of those oversights when they have yet to receive a final tally for the district's alleged disparity.

If that day of atonement ever arrives, the least comforting aspect of the whole conundrum will have been that TEA was once more given the opportunity to offer its blessing of a system that — we've been told — failed.

Never got swing of golf

Donald Cooper

Memorial Day, 1972. That's the day I swore off golf. Actually, considering the way I played, giving up golf wasn't the most difficult decision I've ever made. After all, I was a bad golfer.

I had never been a golf fan. When I was growing up, golf was a sport for the affluent people in town and the only course in town was at the country club, not exactly a hangout for blue-collar kids.

About the only golfer whose name I recognized was Ben Hogan, and that was because of the movie about him.

The first real contact I had with golf was at the 1968 Army All-Europe golf tournament, which was held at the Berlin Brigade golf course.

I was assigned to drive a shuttle bus, taking the golfers to and from the course. I got the duty because I was the German linguist that Roadrunner, the trick sergeant, most wanted to be transferred. Somehow he thought that driving the shuttle bus would be some kind of punishment.

Maybe he thought having to hang out with golfers was a form of punishment, but for me it just meant I got to sit around the club house all day and drink free and check out the goodies on the buffet.

I finally tried my hand at golf during the first spring I was at Henderson State University. I tagged along with some friends who went to play on a small nine-hole course in Bismark, Ark., which is a small town a few miles north of the campus. The club pro was a buddy of one of the guys, so he winked and the green fees were waived.

I rented a set — more or less — of clubs and prepared to do damage to the course. The other players gave me plenty of advice about how to approach the game, and while I tried hard, I probably set a course record for lost balls, divots and profanity. There's probably still a blue haze hanging over the course to this day.

I didn't let the bad start get me down; a few days later I was back on the course. This time I managed to get my score into the 80s — for the nine holes.

I guess the best feeling I had all day was on the seventh hole when I lined up my shot figured the break properly and sank a 49-foot putt — for a nine.

I became a semi-regular at the course, not because I particularly enjoyed golf but mostly because the club pro let me play for free.

Because I was going to the course a couple of times a week, my parents decided that a set of clubs would be an excellent birthday present.

So, for the last three years I was at Henderson, I lugged that bag of Tom Weiskopf golf clubs around the course. While my buddies swore the Tom Weiskopf clubs were outstanding, I couldn't swear to it. My play was pretty much the same, good clubs or not.

But I did find out that a Weiskopf pitching wedge will carry farther than an Sammy Snead pitching wedge. In fact, the Weiskopf wedge when thrown just right would carry over the green, over a small pine tree and land on the No. 8 fairway, while the Snead would always get hung up in the lower branches of the pine tree.

After that, I tried to see if I throw the ball farther than I could drive it.

I could. My final appearance on the golf course was on Memorial Day 1972 in Big Spring.

As the new sports editor of the Big Spring Herald, I was invited to play in a local tournament. I still think I was only there to provide comic relief; it certainly couldn't have been because of my golfing ability.

I didn't finish the round. I don't remember on which hole I decided to never play golf again, but that final hole had a large sand trap at the front of the green. After numerous attempts to blast out of the sand trap, I gave up. I buried the wedge in the sand and left the course.

A few months later, I "stored" the remaining clubs in my parents' garage, where they remained for nearly 20 years before my father finally sold them at a garage sale.

Holding the wolves at bay

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford.

The wringing of hands began once more this past week as the nation sought some consensus and compromise to the mounting epidemic of violence in America's schools.

Decatur, Ill., recently joined the growing list of school districts which have been thrust under the microscope after the venerable Rev. Jesse Jackson and the Rainbow Coalition, the American Civil Liberties Union, and almost every other champion of exclusive individual rights challenged the district's suspension of six brawling students.

Jackson's latest sermon on the mount not only questioned the fairness and punishment used in disciplining those students after a "simple fistfight" at a September football game, but also for what he characterized as a lack of righteous enthusiasm in re-claiming our country's youth.

The teachers, whose unfortunate duty it was to break up the fight, were after the reclamation of sanity and safe haven. They said the fight quickly escalated into a mob that trampled over senior citizens and children unlucky enough to be caught in the middle of the fray.

Jackson asserted there were no guns, no knives, no drugs, no serious injuries; so, in effect, there was no harm done — rationalizing his role as defender of the boys, who were later charged with criminal assault.

The circus comes to town

Under duress and the circus atmosphere created when Jackson caravanned thousands of protesters to the central Illinois farming town, the Decatur school district amended its original two-year suspension of the six boys to one-year, reiterated the students' option to attend the district's Alternate Classroom Education program (ACE), and on Tuesday closed Decatur's three high schools for the second consecutive day because of Jackson's rallies.

While the expelled students are all black, Jackson has said fairness is more at issue than race and that these kids are being robbed of their entitled education.

Sure, Reverend. If fairness is going to define the debate, it seems fair to point out that, as of last Tuesday, each of the students were so consumed with pursuing their educations that not one had reported to their alternative education classes.

And according to school district reports, this diverse group of teenage boys had collectively missed 306 days of school during the past three years. Most had already attended ACE classes following previous behavioral problems.

One student, for which Jackson pleaded the most, was the captain of his basketball team and held a 3.5 grade point average. He is alleged to have provoked the fight.

Jackson has argued that the boys should not have been judged as a group, but rather on an individual basis and on the merits of their individual infractions.

Maybe. But then, wolves that hunt in a pack are generally judged as a pack.

In this corner, we have the mob

This was no playground dispute between Goliath — the bully — and the courageous little guy, David. This fight was a horde of fists and kicks that ebbed through the stands faster than a fan wave.

Jackson has also insisted the expulsions meted-out to the boys were too harsh for a "simple fistfight" and that the students deserve to be re-instated in regular school classrooms.

On both counts, I would vote probably not. The fight represented another shocking and arrogant display of contempt for the rules we are all supposed to be bound by.

"Does the suspension of a student, even for one day, improve that student?" Jackson asked one educator.

The astute teacher responded, "I can't say that it does or doesn't, but I am sure that such a suspension improves the environment for the other students who are at school to learn."

Bravo. Jackson, and others from the liberal think-tank, are proponents of a system that would ultimately allow the foxes to guard the hen house — and consequently, a system that increasingly casts our teachers into the role of penal colony wardens.

Perhaps, we would see less violence and recidivism on our nation's campuses if "zero tolerance" policies carried sharper teeth, and the application of indefinite suspensions became more the rule than the rarity.

Students should not have many inalienable campus rights beyond receiving the promise of a good public education. In return for that promise, the students should have to conform to a simple code of conduct that promotes safety, civility, respect and an understanding

Packrat cleans out the closet

I did the unthinkable last weekend. I cleaned out my closets.

For most people, this is nothing unusual, but for the "packrat extraordinaire" it's an event worth taking note. It's most difficult for pack rats of my caliber to actually throw anything away. After all, it may be needed in the future.

But after looking at my room and realizing I could no longer tell my kids their rooms had to be as clean as mine — and actually expect their rooms to be clean — I decided the time had come to break this packrat's heart.

With 50-gallon trash can in tow, I doggedly started at one corner of the room removing the debris, clutter and other keep-it-just-in-case items.

The dressers and night stands were moved, the pictures were dusted, the carpet vacuumed. All that was left was the closet.

Anyone who knows me, knows I pretty much wear the same things week after week. Closest friends know I wear the pink silk pants with the multi-colored silk blouse. The blue, red and purple shirt goes with my blue pants. So most people would not believe the wide array of clothes found in my closet.

Why I've hung on to them, I'll never know. The bleach-splotched green T-shirt, the gray taffeta after-five tea-length dress, or the dark brown gauchos will never be worn again. At least not by me.

The T-shirt was so bad I wouldn't even wear it to wash the car. The gray taffeta is still gorgeous, but how often do I ever go to after-five affairs? I didn't like the gauchos when bought them and I don't like them now. There's no telling how often I've moved these things, but now they are gone.

Because some of these things were still perfectly wearable I chose to separate them into two piles — stuff to be thrown out and stuff to take to the thrift shop.

It didn't take me long to realize the thrift shop pile was growing faster than the throw-away pile. Surely others would appreciate these items as I have.

After much consideration, the bleach-splotched T-shirt went to the throw-away pile. The taffeta went to the thrift shop. Who knows when other size 22W thrift-store shoppers may need to go to an after-five event?

Mud- and grass-encrusted sneakers were tossed, but it went against my gypsy heart to throw out or get rid of the gold lamé spike heels.

Sweaters and jackets, which were never worn, found their way to the thrift shop pile. And even Aunt Gladys' fleeced-lined coat with its broken zipper, frayed cuffs and ragged hem was ousted.

At the rate I was going, my closet would soon be nearly empty. Gone is the embroidered denim vest and matching bell bottom jeans I so loved during my later high school years. Gone are the cowboy boots that only danced 200 or 300 times around a sawdust covered dance floor.

With empty hangers and nearly bare floors, I knew the time had come to make the final break and actually dispose of all the piles.

Disposing of the throw-away pile was easiest. I only bit my lip two or three times on the way to the dumpster. I was so happy to see a neighbor coming to empty his trash right on top of my kept-too-long keepsakes.

Going back to the house, I decided that I would have to take drastic measures to get rid of the other pile, if it wasn't to be reabsorbed.

Before all the thrift store managers get the idea they are going to be inundated with age-old junk that they will just have to throw away, think again.

My kids know me well enough to know if I ever put something back in the closet, it's there to stay. So they relieved me and all the thrift store managers of that nagging worry. They carried the thrift store pile out and dumped them on my neighbor's old frying-grease-covered garbage. None can now be rescued.

There is little consolation in this great loss. The hangers are now empty. The closet floor looks nearly bare with only my Big-Bird slippers, the gold lamé heels, the black sandals, and white dress shoes.

I'm sure that in the very near future I will accumulate more treasures to replace those ousted by this rare phenomenon. Soon new sweaters and shoes will replace the ones now missing and this packrat's heart will once again be complete.

that a free society still has rules. A student's third serious failure in adhering to that code should result in outright suspension.

Jackson doesn't subscribe to that philosophy.

He and his followers would instead focus on re-claiming the wayward few at the expense of the whole student body, and at the expense of educators who are charged with handling repetitive and often very violent discipline problems.

"They are trying to criminalize these youths to justify themselves," he said.

No, your very Rev. Jackson, they are trying to put some distance between good students and the jaws of the wolf pack; and they are making them accountable for their actions.

And, even if today's disturbing trend in schoolyard anarchy is, as Jackson and civil rights activists contend, steeped around complex social issues, it is still largely the result of a leash that invariably permits a very long run — way too long for students who are choosing violence as a vehicle for venting their emotions.

It is time to shorten the leash.

Texas art picked for preservation

Special to The Brand

CANYON — Three works by Texas artists have been selected for the National Trust for Historic Preservation's Save America's Treasures (SAT) program.

Congress has designated $30 million annually for the next two years to be used for the preservation of historic objects.

The three Texas art objects eligible for federal conservation funds designated by SAT are Ruth Pershing Uhler's "Unitile (Allegory of Womanhood)," which was done about 1930; 400 of Frank Reaugh's glass-plate photographic negatives from the 1890s; and J.B. "Jack" Erwin's series of World War II watercolors painted in the Pacific Theater.

Uhler (1898-1968) was a leader in Houston art circles in the 1920s and 1930s. However, she burned most of her work in the late 1930s when she stopped painting and became the education director at the Museum of Fine Arts in Houston.

As a result, her few surviving works are highly prized by collectors. "Allegory of Womanhood" is one of her largest and most complex paintings. It had been rolled and stored in Houston since the 1930s and requires extensive conservation treatment.

Reaugh (1860-1945) used the camera as a sketching tool from about 1890 to 1915. When the Reaugh estate came to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society in 1966, about 400 glass-plate negatives and prints were part of the estate. The negatives have continued to deteriorate and many images, including what may be the only photographs of actual Texas longhorns, will be lost without conservation.

The architect-painter-violin maker Erwin (born 1920) was stationed at Guam in the Pacific Theater during World War II and painted 28 watercolors of the area during 1945-46. His watercolors, while in fairly good condition, require archival housing to make them suitable for exhibits.

Brantley to be honored

Special to The Brand

CANYON — A musical fixture at West Texas A&M University will be honored during a special tribute beginning at 3 p.m. Sunday at Mary Moody Northern Recital Hall on the WTAMU campus.

The program honors Royal L. Brantley, who composed a wide array of music during his 30-year tenure at WTAMU.

"This will be a unique opportunity for the community to hear the music of Royal L. Brantley," Dr. Joe Ella Cansler, program coordinator and assistant music professor, said. "He is one of America's hidden treasures. He wrote some of the most beautiful pieces that have ever been published."

Brantley, WTAMU professor emeritus, was the head of the voice area at the university from 1953 until 1984. While working at WTAMU and since his retirement, Brantley has written some 200 pieces, most of which have never been published.

Cansler designed the tribute, "An American Treasure: The Vocal Music of Royal L. Brantley," to include the early, middle and late stages of Brantley's career as well as the different styles, such as opera, cantata, art songs and chamber music.

"Somehow late at night, in the wee hours of the morning, snatches between other duties and holidays, I found time to compose a considerable amount of music," Brantley said.

Cansler, James Gardner, director of music at St. Thomas Catholic Church in Amarillo and a former WTAMU instructor; Dr. Robert Krause, WTAMU professor of music; and Perri Zimmerman, WTAMU music instructor, will perform the collection of pieces.

Cansler's study of Brantley's work led to her doctoral dissertation on the subject.

Zambrano's 123-yard, two-touchdown performance lifts Hereford over Plainview in bidistrict playoff, 26-15

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

PLAINVIEW — Many people had doubts that the Hereford Whitefaces would go far in the playoffs, especially after the gruesome injury to running back L.J. Vallejo.

But Ramiro Zambrano made believers of the skeptics.

After rushing for 123 yards, Zambrano and Hereford proved their mettle in a 26-15 victory over Plainview Friday at Bulldogs Stadium in the Class 4A Region I Division I bi-district game.

"It was just overall team effort by our defense and offense," Hereford coach Craig Yenzer said. "We're going to take chances and come after the opponent."

Hereford took advantage of early Plainview turnovers.

On the first drive, Plainview was stopped on an over-the-head interception by Richard Salinas, who blanketed Plainview's Tye Watson and snarled a Ryan James pass at the 18-yard line and returned it to the Bulldog 40-yard line.

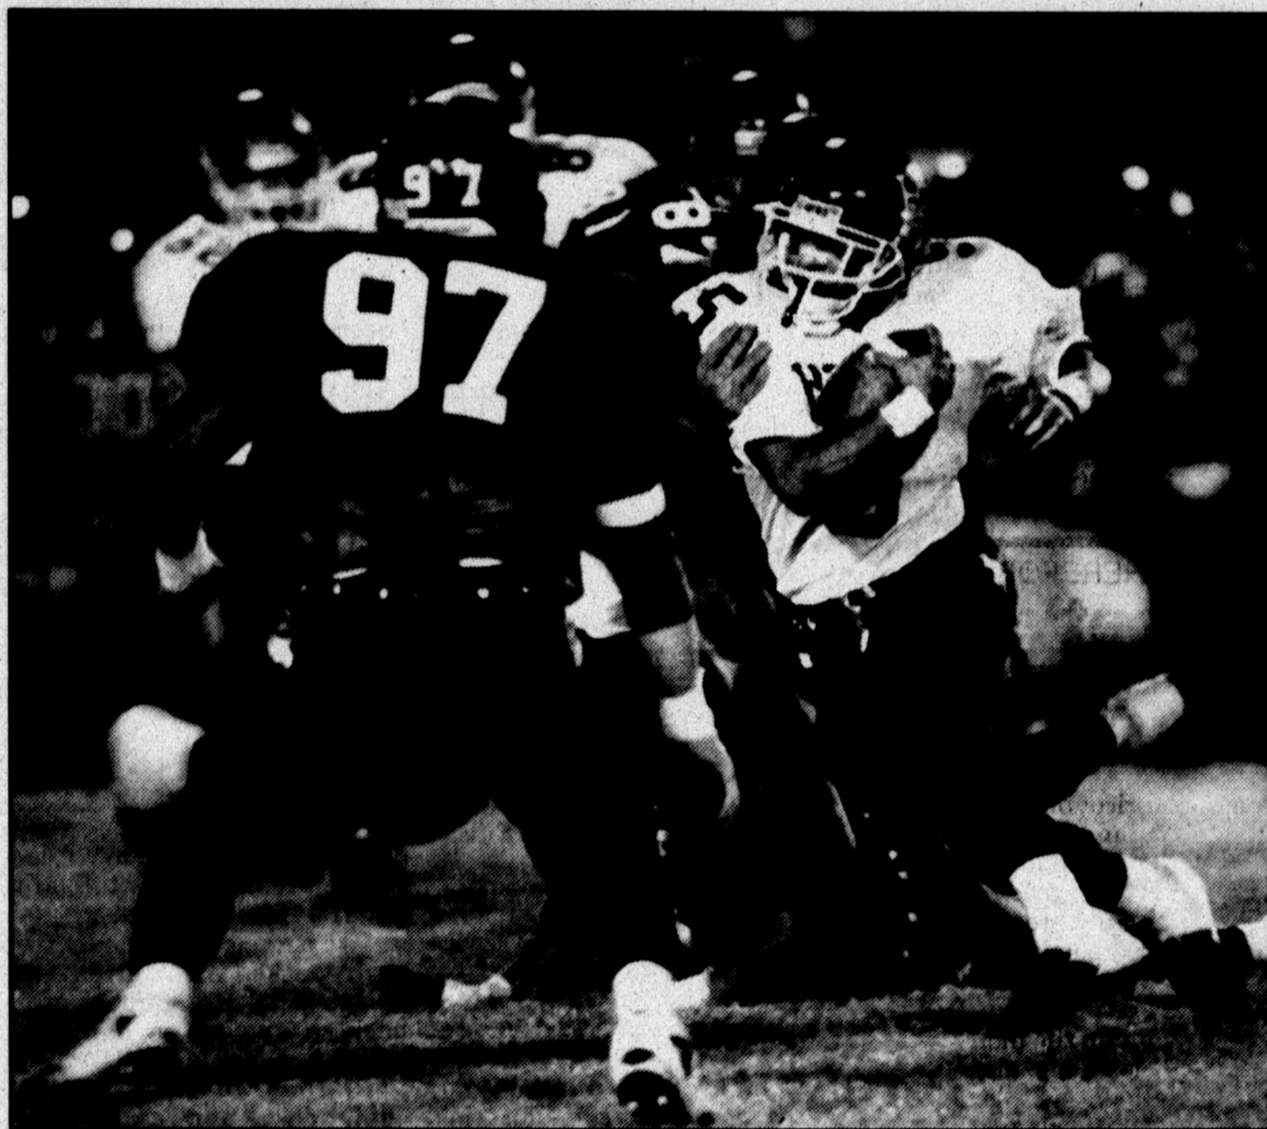

"I was on him all the way," Salinas said. "I was kind of tired after that, but we worked hard and we deserved it."

But the Whitefaces came up empty. After James Miller dropped a potential first-down pass at the Bulldog 5, Rafael Campos missed a 38-yard field goal with 7:58 left in the first quarter.

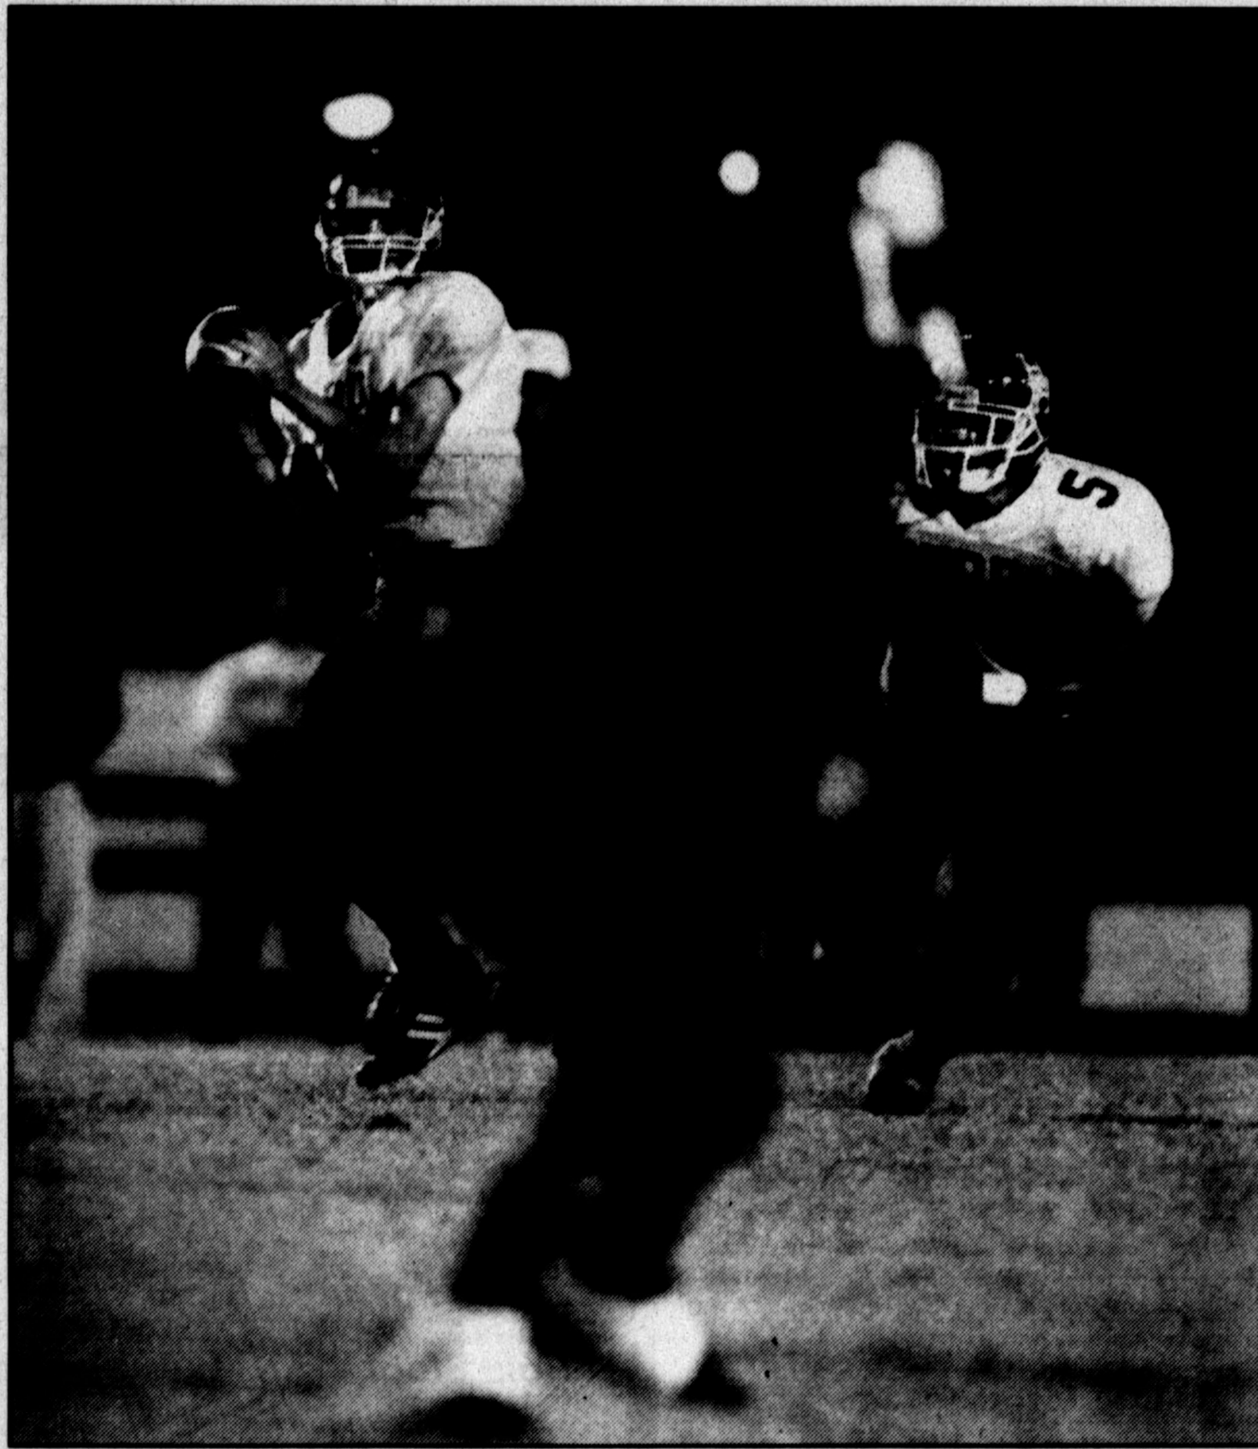

Hereford got another chance at scoring when Plainview's Chris Aldape was stopped for a loss and fumbled the ball at their own 45. Johnny Zammaripa recovered the ball with 5:25 left.

That turnover set up the first score of the game when Ramiro Zambrano received a wild option pitch from Cody

Cody Hodges looks for a receiver down the field on Friday night at Bulldog Stadium in Plainview. Hodges had 184 yards passing and a touchdown strike to brother Slade. The Whitefaces will now face the Indians of El Paso Ysleta next Saturday at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa. The kickoff time is yet to be determined.

Hodges and ran the ball 13 yards to the end zone with 4:07 left in the first quarter. The score was set up by two catches of 17 and 12 yards by Cody Marsh.

"We had to work together to do this," Zammaripa said. "We were kind of on our heels early and we realized we had to come hard at them or we'd lose this thing. We worked long and hard for this and we deserved it."

"The line, man, they set it off since the beginning of practice," Zambrano said. "They make the plays possible."

But Plainview would not roll over and play dead in the first half. Rod Ansley caught a 25-yard screen pass and then ran the ball six times for 38 yards, capping the drive off with a 2-yard plunge with 11:56 left in the first half and tied the game at 7-7.

Hereford had a chance to regain the lead as they drove to the Bulldog 36, but after Tony Lopez caught a 4-yard pass, he was stripped of the ball by the Plainview defense. Jason Marroquin's fumble recovery at the Bulldog 34 killed the drive.

But after forcing the Bulldogs to punt, Hereford got a long-haul drive of its own.

"The offense had started working for us and some luck with it," Yenzer said. "Cody got us out of some tough spots in the game. He made some ad-libbed plays for us."

Two Cody Hodges runs of 4 and 13 kept the drive alive. Then he aired it out.

He first passed to Marsh for a 21-yard gain after a ford went into halftime with a 14-7 lead.

"Everybody stepped in and made a lot of plays," Cody Hodges said. "None of us have experienced this type of atmosphere before and we enjoyed it so much we decided to go for it for another week."

In the second half, Hereford just took over the game, not letting Ansley and the Bulldogs any breathing room.

Even after Cody Hodges was intercepted by Justin Raymer, the Whitefaces held Plainview on downs after Johnny Zammaripa sacked James for a 2-yard loss at the Hereford 16.

From there, Ramiro Zambrano took over.

"All week in practice, we were working hard and we believed we could do it," Zambrano said. "We knew we could do it."

"Ramiro made some plays," Yenzer said. "We knew he had some talent and he got better as the game went on."

On the first series of the second half, Zambrano had carries 1, 0 and 2 yards, right before exploding for a

Boys hoops expecting another big year

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

With the football team still in the playoff hunt and the start of the high school basketball season about to begin, the Hereford Whitefaces basketball team faces new challenges early on.

But the expectations are high for head coach Randy Dean.

"We've had a nice run the last three-four years in our program," Dean said. "We want to take that success and grow on it this year."

The football schedule looks to go a bit farther than what Hereford was used to in this decade. So, at least for now, the basketball team will have to wait a bit for the football-playing basketball players.

But Dean will take advantage of that situation.

"We're going to play our schedule," Dean said. "The guys that we have right now, I know we'll give 100% effort."

"We feel like we are going to be competitive," he added. "We think these guys have improved all season and that's an opportunity for playing time for them and that they'll get more playing time as the season rolls on. It's a good opportunity for them to show what they can do."

While the current players work in the off-season, the football-playing basketball players will be key for another successful run on the hoop court. Once they return, they will be hard for opponents to stop.

The Whitefaces return eight lettermen, including first team all-district player Cody Hodges, who will very likely run the offense from the point guard position.

"We got eight returning lettermen from last year and will relay on them heavily," Dean said. "We have a lot of experience returning to the team. It's good experience also."

"Cody Hodges improved in every statistical category from his freshman year to his sophomore year," Dean added.

"Obviously, we need the same thing to happen from his sophomore year to junior year."

Hereford shows size, but they are short compared to the rest of their district rivals.

"We won't be very tall," Dean said. "You'll see some of the people we'll play, we're going to be the shortest team on the floor."

But some of those short-tall guys that will help out the Whitefaces will be Chayse Rives, Cody Marsh, Slade Hodges and Eric McNutt.

"They're talented," Dean said. "They play hard and we got a lot of things to look forward to when we get there (playoffs)."

One player Dean hopes will be a major player in the very tough and tall District 3-4A is Cody Marsh.

Standing at 6-4, he represents the only true size Hereford has to offer.

"We need him (Marsh) to play well for us," Dean said. "He's strong, shoots the ball well and he's capable of being an inside force this year. If he comes to play well inside, it will allow Chayse (Rives) to move out on the floor and use some of the things he does."

Size does matter, especially when one of the opponents is Amarillo Caprock's 6-9 Derrick Collins, who led the district in scoring and is a force to be reckoned with.

Caprock is one of the three teams, other than Hereford, that are favorite to represent District 3-4A in the playoffs. The district favorite is Amarillo Palo Duro, who's ranked 17th in the state.

"It's going to be a tough district," Dean said. "Palo Duro is ranked 17th in the state and they're the district favorite."

Borger returns a strong team from last year," he added. "Caprock will be very tough and they are getting all their team back from last year, especially the top scorer in the district, Derrick Collins. He was hard for us to control last year and he's going to be even better and that gives Caprock a real good chance to be a playoff team."

Shooting safety review is timely as hunting seasons get underway

Repetition is the basis of a good deal of learning that goes on in the country, but when it comes to hunting safety, it seems that some folks never learn and keep repeating the same old mistakes.

With so many hunting seasons already open or getting underway across the state, a little timely review work on safety seems in order.

Steve Hall, education director at the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department says a 30-year study of hunting accidents by the department shows that the same type of accidents keep happening over and over.

"If hunters only followed the basic 'Ten Commandments of Shooting Safety' there would be few accidents. Unfortunately, we keep seeing the same things, like hunters swinging on game outside of their safe zones of fire, or careless handling of firearms and archery equipment," says Hall.

Hunter education training in Texas and other measures have actually helped to reduce the number of hunting accidents significantly from decade to decade. Hall is quick to point out that hunting is essentially safe--and becoming safer--but a few careless folks haven't gotten the message and skew the statistics.

TP&WD commissioned a study to analyze and determine the causes of accidents and to create a database for accident records. Michael McFarland, a Texas A&M University research associate and Dr. Ron Kaiser, professor of recreation, park and tourism sciences at Texas A&M took charge of the research project. They analyzed 2,495 hunting incident reports from 1966 through 1997.

Dr. Kaiser, who is also an attorney and risk management specialist, says certain types of incidents occur at a higher rate. Although hunting is becoming safer, with declines in both the fatality and injury rates, certain types of incidents occur at a higher rate. Among them are incidents involving a victim injured or killed when a shooter swings on game, as well as careless firearm handling. Those two areas may need more study, and more emphasis in education programs," Kaiser says.

Findings revealed that more incidents occurred after 5 p.m.--possibly due to falling light conditions causing hunters not to properly identify targets, and that "blaze orange" clothing might have helped some victims to avoid accidents.

A higher number of incidents occurred in the vicinity of vehicles, and there was a high proportion of accidents among hunters ages 12 to 17.

Statistical analysis showed that head and torso injuries occurred at a higher rate than injuries to other areas.

Llano County, which hosts nearly 16,000 of the state's 515,000 active deer hunters, and has the highest concentration of hunting activity at 24 hunters per 1,000 acres had a high percentage of incidents, with 50 accidents recorded in the data.

Locally, Parmer, Roberts, Lipscomb, and Carson counties had no incidents recorded.

Researchers used their database to profile incidents by 11 factors: injury type, injury locations, incident type, incident by county, month, day of week, time of day, land ownership, environmental factors, firearm type, and distance of muzzle to victim.

Shooters were profiled by gender, age, hunting experience, hunter education status, influence of alcohol or drugs, and species hunted. Victims were profiled by all those factors except species hunted, and were also profiled by their activity, clothing worn, and whether or not they were wearing blaze orange.

The report made several recommendations, including use of more hands-on instruction and skill evaluations in hunter safety courses, and the use of a variety of instruction media.

As we take to the fields, canyons and playas again this season, it's a good idea to review those basic 10 shooting safety rules:

- * Always point the muzzle of your firearm or direct the arrow on your bow in a safe direction.

- * Treat every firearm or bow with the same respect that you would show a loaded gun or nocked arrow.

- * Be sure of your target, and what is in front of and behind your target.

- * Unload and safely store firearms or unstring conventional bows when not in use.

- * Handle firearms, arrows, and ammunition safely.

- * Know your safe zone-of-fire and stick to it.

- * Control your emotions--safety comes first.

- * Wear hearing and eye protection when shooting.

- * Don't drink alcohol or take mood-altering drugs before or while handling firearms or archery equipment.

- * Be aware of additional circumstances that required added caution or safety awareness.

48-yard sprint with 5:50 left in the third quarter. Hereford led 20-7 after Rafael Campos' extra-point try was blocked by Raymer.

Plainview got a good drive going on their second series of the second half, driving to the Hereford 30. But Ryan missed Tye Watson on an out pattern and Hereford took over on downs.

The next Whiteface series took just three plays. It included a 3-yard run by Kyle Artho, a 7-yard run by Zambrano, and a 60-yard touchdown run by Cody Hodges with 1:49 left in the third. Hereford missed the pass to the end zone for the two-point try and they led 26-7 after three quarters.

"People were doubting us because of L.J. and they had a right to," Cody Hodges said. "Ramiro stepped up and he worked hard and you could tell he was ready to go."

Plainview tried to come-back, but they were forced to punt after Hereford's score.

Hereford was on their way to another score, but Cody Hodges was nailed for a 15-yard loss and fumbled. Marroquin recovered for Plainview at the Whiteface 28.

The turnover set up a 13-yard touchdown pass from James to Kyle Parker, whose catch was tipped by Adam Naron. Ansley's pass to Naron cut Hereford's lead to 26-15.

"We stopped them right on their tracks," Zammarrino said. "A great defense stops a great back. I am just so happy we got this accomplished."

Plainview tried another comeback, but a Ryan-to-Aldape connection went for five yards on fourth down and eight. Plainview's hopes ended.

Now, Hereford advances on against El Paso Ysleta at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa next week in the area round of Division I Region I playoffs. This was Hereford's first playoff victory since 1990, when they defeated Lubbock Estacado and Zebbie Letheridge.

The Whitefaces believe they can go far and Ramiro Zambrano will tell you about it.

"We are going all the way," he said.

NFL fines Clemons $7,500 for punch on Cowboys' Adams

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Defensive end Duane Clemons said he was fined $7,500 by the NFL for punching Dallas Cowboys tackle Flozell Adams below the belt.

"I made a mistake, I went a little too far," Clemons said after the Minnesota Vikings' practice Wednesday. "If he was standing right here, I'd apologize to him."

The officials didn't see it, but a national television audience got a clear view of the punch during the Vikings' 27-17 victory Monday night.

TV replays caught Clemons in the act but didn't show what precipitated the nasty punch, which occurred after Jimmy Hitchcock intercepted Jason Garrett's pass in the fourth quarter. Clemons said Adams took him down from behind on the interception return and that's why he threw the punch.

In an expletive-filled tirade after the game, Adams said: "That's why he doesn't start. I'd be surprised if he was with this team next year. He's a first-round draft pick bust."

Richard Salinas returns an interception from the Hereford 18 to the Plainview 40-yard line, capping a 42-yard return to give the Whitefaces their first offensive possession of the ball game. The offense couldn't capitalize on a 38-yard field goal attempt, but did capitalize on other Bulldog mistakes as they advance to the Region I quarterfinals with a 26-15 win.

Commissioners to take up trash issue at meeting

By Donald M. Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Hereford city commissioners have tossed around some ideas about how to deal with the burgeoning trash problem in the alleyways.

They even conducted a hearing last month to get some ideas, as well as hear some complaints, from the city's residents about how to clean up the alleys.

When the commissioners meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall, they are expected to approve what they hope will be one solution to the problem.

The commissioners are scheduled to approve an incentive program under which residents will receive payments for taking items to the landfill.

Under the proposal, the city will pay $1 for each item, such as a mattress or box spring, a water heater or sofa. For smaller items, the city will pay $1 per cubic-yard of vehicle capacity, which would amount to about $3 for a pickup load of trash. Vouchers would be distributed at the landfill and could be redeemed at City Hall. They also could be credited to a resident's water bill.

Under the guidelines, the incentive program is open only to city residents and proof of residency would be required.

Commercial haulers would be required to register at City Hall.

City Manager Chester Nolen recommends appropriating $25,000 to fund the program.

If approved by the commissioners, the program would go into effect Dec. 1. Also, the landfill would remain open until 5 p.m. at least one Saturday per month; on at least one Sunday per month, the landfill would be open 1-5 p.m.

The commissioners also are expected to approve an agreement with Oller Engineering Inc. for engineering services associated with a permit application for a Type I AE landfill. At their last meeting, the commissioners approved submitting the application for the permit.

In other business, the commissioners will:

- Receive a report from the Hereford Independent School District about the recent Red Ribbon Week, drug awareness program;

- Hear a report from the Hereford Economic Development Corp.;

- Appoint Kathy Moore to the District III Planning Advisory Committee, which is associated with the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority; and

- Conduct a public hearing on a zoning change request for property located at 615 E. Park Ave.

Hereford economy sags in October

By Donald M. Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Hereford's economy sagged last month, according to the Texas Comptroller's Office.

The city's sales tax rebate payment for November was $78,614, down 15.4 percent from the $92,943 received in November 1998. The rebate also was down from the October payment of $85,725.

For the year, Hereford has received $958,815, down 3.2 percent from the $990,712 for the same period last year.

Deaf Smith County received a payment of $25,636, down 19.1 percent from the $31,697 for the previous year. The November payment also was down from the $29,716.63 received in October.

For the year, Deaf Smith County has received $328,201, down 3 percent from the $338,462 for the same period in 1998.

The comptroller's office delivered $244.7 million in monthly sales tax payments to 1,098 Texas cities and 118 counties, a 0.4 percent decrease from the $245.8 million paid in November 1998. For the year, payments to cities and counties are running 5.1 percent ahead of the same period in 1998.

November's sales tax rebates include local sales taxes collected by monthly tax filers in September, and by quarterly filers on July-September sales, and reported to the comptroller's office in October.

"November sales tax rebates are lower for some Texas cities, compared to one year ago, but year-to-date sales tax rebates for most Texas cities are running higher than last year. The Texas economy remains strong," Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander said.

The comptroller's office delivered November sales tax rebates of $227.4 million to Texas cities, down 0.1 percent from last November. Texas counties received payments of $17.2 million, down 3.7 percent from the previous year.

Another $7.8 million went to 44 special-purpose taxing districts around the state. Texas' six Metropolitan Transit Authorities and two City Transit Departments received a total of $80.1 million in rebates.

By law, the state collects sales taxes for Texas cities and counties that have local sales taxes. The comptroller's office then returns the portion of the taxes on a monthly basis.

The state charges a 6.25 percent sales tax and local sales taxes can be up to 2 percent above that.

Around the area: Dimmitt received a rebate of $22,877, up 4.8 percent from the $21,838 from November 1998. The rebate, however, was down from the $24,848 for October.

Dalhart received $91,883 for November, down 13.5 percent from the $106,209 for last year. The city's November rebate also was down from the $95,429.71, up 26 percent from the $75,729 payment for October.

Pampa saw its rebate drop to $207,646, down 15.5 percent from the $245,858 for last year. However, the November payment was an improvement over the $189,981 received in October.

Plainview received $269,842, a 1.5 percent improvement over the $265,968 for the previous year. The November payment also was significantly higher than the $181,784 received in October.

Borger received $197,396 in November, down 13.3 percent from the $227,568 for the previous year. However, November's payment was an improvement over the $164,840 received in October.

Dumas received $149,460, an 84.1 percent gain over the $81,200 rebate for November 1998. The November payment also was an improvement over the $129,925 received in October.

Among the area counties, Castro County received $10,154, up 1.4 percent from the $10,017 received in November 1998, while Hale County received $95,225, down 5.7 percent from the $100,960 for the previous year.

Updike: Writers' losing their status

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Pulitzer Prize winner John Updike thinks the writer as a cultural hero is a thing of the past.

The "tweedy, pipe-sucking, much-photographed, revered writer is a casualty, I think, of our electronic times. Saul Bellow may have been the last," Updike said during a lecture before a packed audience at Bradley University.

Updike, author of 50 books, including "Rabbit, Run," started writing short stories and novels in the late 1950s.

His three sequels to "Rabbit, Run" each seemed to capture what was happening to middle-class America at the time.

"My entire work suddenly ... has this past-century feel to it," said Updike, 67. "It all describes a world, a century, that is going over the water-fall."

Updike's next novel, "Gertrude and Claudius," will explore the characters from "Hamlet."

TxDOT plans to work on U.S. 385 — again

By Julie L. Carlson

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Pretty soon, horns will be honked, traffic will be backed up and tempers will fly. Nothing else could cause this more than construction.

Not just construction on any street, but it is scheduled to take place on the most popular street in town — U.S. Highway 385 (25 Mile Avenue). So get ready, find the directions from Point A to Point B by taking the back roads.

"Several years ago, we went through it and replaced the righthand lanes with concrete because there are so many trucks passing through Hereford and now we have the same problems with trucks tearing up the middle lanes," said Tonya Detten, a spokesperson for the Amarillo office of the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT).

"Tons of grain trucks pass through 385, so we decided to go through the whole thing (with concrete)," she said.

Hereford residents, as well as some non-Hereford residents, clearly remember what a hassle it was working on U.S. 385 the first time.

Bob and Marcy Hughes, owner's of Bob's Hickory Pit located in the 100 block of South 25 Mile Avenue have seen more construction on the highway than they care to remember.

Marcy Hughes' response was sarcastic.

"That's just really wonderful, I'm so excited I can hardly stand myself, and trust me that response is better than what I said yesterday about it (the construction)," she said.

"We've been at this location 14 years and it's (U.S. 385) probably been under construction real close to half of those years, it's probably been under construction six out of the past eight years alone," she said.

For most businesses located along the highway, business slumps during construction.

"It cost us probably a 40 percent drop in business the last time the road was under construction. They (customers) couldn't get in and out. They still have to come across that middle lane to get to us which will be under construction. If they have to go out of their way, they just don't come at all," she said.

Some other store owners, such as Boots & Saddle Western Wear and Homeland, had different experiences with the road construction, they said they don't lose much business. Maybe it has to do with location since both are located on North 25 Mile Avenue.

BRAND PHOTO

The Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) plans to start a 15-month construction project on U.S. 385 early next year.

"It won't affect my business very much. Last time they did a good job of directing people in and out of my store parking lot," Boots & Saddle Western Wear owner Butch White said.

"It really didn't affect our business, to be honest," Homeland Store Manager Richard Selman said.

Specific prices and dates have not been set, but a meeting is being planned between TxDOT representatives, engineers and the construction company.

According to Detten, money was not an issue for stopping after concreting only the outside lanes during the highway's last construction adventure. It was merely trying to find the easiest way to get the job done and to see if it would work.

However, a differing opinion was expressed by TxDOT Area Engineer Don Day of Canyon who said money was the main factor for not completing the whole road with concrete.

"It's a funny thing. We didn't have the money then, but we have the money now," Day said.

Money or no money, what's been done is done and what's going to be done will happen.

As many know, concrete is the best solution for heavy trucks to drive on and it's more weather resistant than asphalt.

"The expected life of concrete is 30 years and asphalt is only 6-7 years. It is a lot more expensive, but worth it in the long run," Detten said.

Hughes said she won't believe until she sees it.

"We have heard this story, 'this road construction will fix everything,' before and two years later it was torn up again," Marcy said, hesitantly adding, "We'll see, we'll see."

Here's the bomb, Hereford. The construction is estimated to take 15 months.

"Fifteen months is the expected time it will take for the construction to take place," Detten said.

When informed of the length of time the construction will take, Marcy Hughes said, "It's horrible, it really is. It kills us. It's just an absolute wreck."

An Amarillo company has been hired to do the construction.

"We have hired Holmes Construction out of Amarillo with their bid of $2.9 million," Detten said.

Good books, good libraries are hub of local schools

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

tagnant air hovers over the ancient stacks. Dusty, crumbling tomes remain unread and forgotten on the sagging shelves.

A common enough setting for any number of murder mysteries in film and print, but the libraries of Hereford Independent School District present a far different environment.

Warm lights, modern or classic titles and knowledgeable help invites visitors to escape in the pages of a good book, discover the joys of new favorite author, or perhaps get started on that all-important term paper.

Graduating seniors to the youngest pre-kindergarten student can find just the right thing to ace a research paper or achieve their necessary accelerated reader points.

It's not just idle boasting for librarians to say the libraries have something for everyone. With 79,463 volumes plus numerous age-appropriate reference materials, HISD libraries compare with many smaller county libraries throughout the state.

"This district is very blessed," said Delores Phipps, librarian at Bluebonnet Intermediate. "We used to load up and go down to Deaf Smith County Library. We are very lucky to have our libraries."

"We have some very good libraries," said Donna Luther, Hereford High School librarian. "We work very hard to make the libraries exciting, fun and welcoming places."

Wanda Nall, librarian at Northwest Elementary School, ranks HISD libraries with some of the best, noting the father of today's lending libraries — Benjamin Franklin — would be pleased with the district libraries which so closely adhere to adopted standards.

Libraries on all campuses serve multiple-level readers. The librarians attempt to draw in all students and help them become "independent library users." HHS library alone has volumes for readers at the fifth-grade level well into college material. Intermediate and primary schools offer volumes as simple as ABC to two or three grade levels above their oldest students.

"Kids want books about kids, what they do and what they are interested in," said Janice Carr, librarian at West Central. "We've seen some changes. Kids of all ages want books about some of the modern issues. But, they still like a good story book, too."

"Libraries must be the hub of any school," Nall said. "The students must start with the printed materials before they can go on to any of the electronic media."

Dee-Ann Matthews operates the computerized card catalogue at Shirley Intermediate School.

Bluebonnet librarian, Delores Phipps, helps a group of students complete a research project.

"We're a very busy place," Carr said.

Librarians are not the only ones to think the library needs to be the hub because a number of the schools have centralized libraries. Tierra Blanca, West Central, Northwest, Shirley and Bluebonnet have very centralized libraries, with the junior high and high school libraries being nearly centralized.

Aikman alone has a non-centralized library, but it is most prominent as the first thing a visitor encounters when entering the doors.

School librarians today do far more than just check out books and reshelve them appropriately. From history to computers, librarians build the students' knowledge through displays and appropriate learning/teaching techniques. Of course, their first task is the wonders of the printed materials.

"It's very typical, across the nation, for technology to fall to the librarians," Nall said.

"People of all ages need to be able to locate information in this age of information," Luther said. "Not everything will be on the Internet, so they must be able to use the printed material."

It's a rarity to find a quiet moment with the school librarians. When they're not checking books in and out, they can be found teaching second-grade students how to locate and assimilate information for their first research paper or maybe selecting books of special interest for the hard-to-reach older student.

"Kids have to get the right book," Luther said. "Sometimes we have to pull them in to get them hooked. Sometimes that means encouraging teachers to encourage students to explore what the library has to offer." "School libraries are not hush-hush anymore. We want the kids to ask questions and know we are here to help," she continued.

"Ours is an evolving job," Nall said. "We've all taught in the classroom. Now we are still teaching, but using a broader spectrum."

"We look at the curriculum and change to fit the needs of that curriculum," Luther said. "It's more than just knowing literature. It means knowing kids, what they want to read, and being able to entice them to read."

Common among the librarians — besides the love of a good book — is the desire to teach young readers to enjoy the pleasures between the pages of a book and all the wonders that can be found even while doing drudgery of research.

"There is wonderful information in books," Phelps said. "Our job is to connect the students and get them excited about that information."

District librarians count themselves lucky to have valuable assistants and mentors who help students with individual readers.

"They all help so we can reach the most students possible," said Nall.

Books and teachers go hand in hand, but for many the school librarian offers the bridge that connects them with a world of reality or fantasy that can only be gleaned from the pages of book.

Donna Luther, Hereford High School librarian, looks through a number of books.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Is Customer Service Dead...Or just dying?

(Last of two-parts)

Consumers feel that service is declining and the research backs that up. Last week I shared some true stories illustrating just how bad service really is.

Despite the nearly unanimous agreement among Americans that customer service is extinct, it actually isn't quite dead. It is declining, it is different, and it may be dying. However, it isn't dead yet.

Customer service is changing and it is being redefined continually. The self-service businesses are changing the standards.

The discounters are redefining it. And every day new E-commerce companies are setting new boundaries for acceptable service.

Interestingly, customers seem willing to accept different standards in different industries. For example, I would guess that at least one order in 25 if filled incorrectly in the fast food industry. Yet, fast-food franchises continue to flourish.

On the other hand, how long would folks fly on an airline that took you to the wrong city or crash landed one in 25 planes? How long would you keep a car that failed to start one in 25 times? Not long would be my guess.

What happened to good service?

Increasing competition has caused many businesses and industries to re-think their customer service strategies. Some firms have changed their focus from high quality, high service and mid-range pricing to lesser quality, limited service and lower prices. They often reduce training costs and lower employment standards. They rationalize these decisions as necessary to stay competitive.

Other firms have adopted - or perhaps just allowed - a laissez faire attitude toward their service efforts. While this "hands-off" approach may not alienate some customers, others are getting upset. They include good service as part of the value equation and these folks want no part of no service companies.

Unfortunately, most American companies have instituted a "lip-service" policy. They talk about customer service. They advertise their great service, and if you don't listen too carefully you may even be convinced that they really do care. They certainly use the right buzzwords and sound persuasive about their commitment to service.

However, their actions don't shout their words. The proof of great service is in the results not the rhetoric.

Technology is also driving some interesting service changes. You can do your Christmas shopping without going to the mall, standing in line or feeling the crush. You can make your own airline reservations, buy a car or sell your stock without ever talking to a human being. You can avoid high-touch customer contact with voice mail, e-mail and overnight delivery.

The Door is Open

Where problems exist, opportunities abound. The door is wide open for companies who can maintain sound operating efficiencies and still keep "satisfying customers" as their number one priority. These companies are excelling today and will in the future.

The future will bring additional changes. In 1998, E-Commerce trackers reported that consumers spent nearly $8 billion on Internet purchases. That number is expected to exceed $100 billion by the year 2002. Other experts are predicting that the amount of online spending may hit $300 billion by 2003.

In my opinion, those companies who are offering the poorest service have the greatest risk. The more satisfied customers are, the less likely they will be to seek new sources for their purchases.

I encourage you to intensify your customer service focus. Personalize your service. Respect your customer's need for courtesy and quick, accurate service. Hire employees with an attitude to service, and train them thoroughly in basic job functions, product knowledge and customer care. Your business will be a standout in your community and your bottom line will be glad you did.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the Covers

By Martha Russell

The Texas Book Festival was celebrated last weekend in Austin, with authors and illustrators, and all sorts of book people in attendance. This is about the third or fourth year for this event which raises money to be awarded in grants to Texas Public Libraries. Laura Bush, a librarian before becoming the governor's wife, is the honorary chairman and effectively uses her public voice to promote reading and libraries.

Not only do attendees get to hear authors tell of the writing process, but they also are privileged to hear authors reading from their own work. There is nothing like it. It brings the story to life in a way no actor or performer or any other person can achieve.

Hereford will have its own mini-version of a book fair when local author Gerald McCathern will be having a book signing of his newest book, Dry Bones. The event, which will also include musical entertainment, will be at the Hereford Community Center on Thursday, Nov. 18 from 6-8 p.m.

Dry Bones takes place in the Texas Panhandle in the late 1800s where the frontier towns of Tascosa and Hidetown were known for saloons and prostitutes, and the Llano Estacado was littered with buffalo carcasses stripped of their valuable skins by the hunters who nearly wiped out the herds.

Colonel Jim Cole and his young side-kick, Ned Armstrong, trailed 5,000 head of maverick longhorns from Central Texas to this wild prairie and established the Ceebara Ranch with headquarters along the banks of Red Deer Creek, just 30 miles north of Hidetown. The pair meet with, and are charmed by, Billy the Kid who, it turns out, does not rustle cattle belonging to friends.

On a cattle drive to Dodge City, the proprietors meet such historic figures as Charles Goodnight and Thomas Bugbee, as wives of the Ceebara ranchers contend with the same loneliness and physical danger that beset all women on the Plains frontier.

Cole also makes friends with Chief Quanah Parker and the Comanches, but the Indians began to be pushed into Indian Territory as more and more white men began to covet this land of free grass. When a band of renegade Comanches raids Ceebara and takes the Colonel's grandson captive, Quanah Parker returns to the Llano Estacado to help rescue the boy.

Rebecca had the privilege of attending the Texas Book Festival in Austin. Of course, she has brought back lots of stories. We have enjoyed hearing the tales of her encounters with such writers as Louis Sachar, Mary Higgins Clark, and Scott Turow.

Evidently, writing is not as easy as it may seem. Rebecca told us of one author who takes about six months to write a short story, making at least 16 revisions. I'm not sure I would have the patience to do that.

Also, long hours of research precede a good novel. According to an afterward in his latest book, Personal Injuries, Scott Turow gives us a small peek at the background work he did. The main character, Robbie Feaver (pronounced "favor"), is a successful personal injury lawyer married to a beautiful woman who is dying of ALS. Mr. Turow drew on the expertise of not only health care specialists and authorities, but also ALS sufferers and their families. This was not a surface investigation, but rather an in-depth inquiry into the technical, medical, emotional, and logistical aspects of daily life with ALS.

And the research was not purely academic. As Turow thanks those who shared their first-hand knowledge with him, he states, "Those afflicted simply broke my heart with the courage, honesty, and eloquence of their responses." He lists several family members. This combination of research, experience and close contact with ALS victims lends authenticity to the book.

Robbie Feaver, though successful, is not entirely honest. There is a secret bank account where he occasionally deposits funds that make their way into the pockets of the judges who decide Robbie's cases. He is apprehended, and, in exchange for leniency, Robbie agrees to "wear a wire" as he continues to try to fix decisions.

The FBI agent assigned to supervise him goes by the alias of Evon Miller. She is lonely, uncomfortable in her skin, and immune to Robbie's charms. And she carries secrets of her own. As the law tightens its net, Robbie's and Evon's stories converge.

Deaf Smith County Library also has Personal Injuries in the talking book edition for those who have more time to listen than to sit down and read.

Gail Godwin's Evensong is the story of a small Smoky Mountain town at the approach of the new millennium. The residents of High Balsam are in desperate need of hope. Economic and social unrest has led to tragedy. For Margaret Bonner, the young pastor of High Balsam's Episcopal church, care of the community is her constant challenge and devotion.

But now, into Margaret's well-ordered life, come three strangers - a firebrand female evangelist with a haunted past; an elderly itinerant man whose visit to this quiet village may be no accident; and a troubled boy whom Margaret's husband, headmaster of a progressive local school, is determined to save. Soon these volatile personalities will stir up a tempest in Margaret's marriage and in the depths of her very soul.

According to the jacket flap of All The Best, George Bush, the former President does not plan to write his autobiography, so it is fortunate that he is a prolific writer of letters, memos, and diary entries. Normally reticent in public, President Bush has openly shared his private thoughts in his correspondence throughout his life, and, remarkably, shares them with us in this volume.

Organized chronologically, the volume begins with 18-year-old George's letters to his parents during World War II, when, at the time he was commissioned, he was the youngest pilot in the Navy. The correspondence traces his career highlights as an oilman, Congressman, ambassador to the U.N., envoy to China, head of the Central Intelligence Agency, Vice-President, and President as well as the post-Presidency.

Chronicling his family life ranges from a love letter to Barbara and his letter to his mother about missing his daughter Robin after her death from leukemia, to a letter to his children two weeks before Nixon's resignation and one written to them just before the beginning of Desert Storm.

In his preface, the author writes: "So what we have here are letters from the past and present. Letters that are light and hopefully amusing. Letters written when my heart was heavy or full of joy. Serious letters. Nutty letters. Caring and rejoicing letters...It's all about heartbeat."

Writing want ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

- Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Unimpressive story mars message of Black and Blue

Black and Blue stars Mary Stuart Masterson as Frannie, the physically and emotionally abused wife of Detective Bobby Benedetto, played by Anthony LaPaglia. The new TV movie, based on the popular book of the same name by Anna Quindlen, airs Wednesday on CBS.

Bobby Benedetto's a decorated New York detective. He's also a bossy pig who beats his wife to a pulp. But for some unknown reason, Frannie, his spouse of 12 years, still loves him.

When she leaves dishes in the sink overnight, he grabs her by the neck and forces her face down to look at the mess. When she doesn't wear a slip under a summer dress, he calls her a slut—in front of their son, Robert.

None of this is easy to watch in Black and Blue, a CBS TV movie airing Wednesday, Nov. 17. The underside of man's psyche is rarely pleasant to witness, but that, of course, doesn't excuse us from trying to help women who are used as punching bags.

"If we did it without violence, it would have been a total cop-out," says Mary Stuart Masterson, who plays Frannie.

Masterson says she has tremendous sympathy for Frannie. "It was important to me not to portray her as a victim, but as someone who made choices that didn't work out."

Masterson (Fried Green Tomatoes, Benny & Joon) says it was a difficult role to play. "I thought, 'I've got to basically construct the whole thing around the love my character had for her husband, and if that weren't there, it would be a monster movie.'"

On-screen, there's no apparent reason why she does love him.

"Why does anybody love anybody?" Masterson says. "There was stuff we didn't have screen time to cover. He was always full of remorse and in some ways was very tender. And in some ways, what fueled his rage was jealousy. You feel loved or appreciated if somebody is that jealous."

Regardless of its good intentions, the movie falls short because the plot does not hang together. Based on the popular book by respected writer Anna Quindlen, it has the feel of too many people tinkering with it and no one realizing that the last half-hour raises many questions without bothering to answer any of them.

Nevertheless, Anthony LaPaglia (Murder One) turns in a chilling performance. At one point, Bobby sneers at Frannie and asks, "What are you going to do? Call the cops?"

Frannie, a nurse, contacts a woman who helps battered women. After briefly hearing Frannie's story, she realizes that Frannie should not just obtain a restraining order and divorce, but flee with her son and adopt a new identity. She gets Frannie a fake Social Security card, bus fare and the keys to a dingy apartment in Florida.

Naturally, Bobby Benedetto is going to find his son. The only question is when. Frannie's underground contact warns her to cut off her long red hair because it's too conspicuous—sound advice and not hard to follow. Although she's supposedly a smart woman, however, she leaves her hacked-off hair in their bathroom as evidence and never bothers to pick up that bottle of hair dye.

From the moment Sam Robards (American Beauty) enters the picture as Robert's new teacher, it's clear he and Frannie will fall in love. The suspense is supposed to come from whether Bobby—whose career is finding people—will locate his son and estranged wife.

Masterson says she hopes the message people glean from this movie is, "People should do whatever they can to get help and get treatment and get out of relationships that are dangerous."

If this movie helps one abused woman, then it's to be lauded. Otherwise, just as a movie, it can be missed.

Famous New York structures, including the Brooklyn Bridge, are highlighted in Ric Burns' New York: A Documentary Film, airing Sunday through Thursday on PBS (check local listings).

Burns starts spreading the news in New York

Most American cities were founded with lofty ideals, particularly the pursuit of religious freedom. New York, however, never made any bones about it. This was a city born of capitalism and reared on commerce. You got a problem with that?

This attitude of thumb on nose, waving at the world and expecting the rest of the country to recognize this 13-mile-long island as the center of the universe, is nothing new. It is as old as the European settlement of the island and explained in an exhaustive 12-hour series, New York: A Documentary Film, airing Sunday through Thursday, Nov. 14-18, on PBS (check local listings).

Filmmaker Ric Burns spent five years working on this miniseries, in which well-versed historians expound on the island's history. The project bears some resemblance to the work of the more famous Burns sibling, Ken, and has the brothers' signature of painstaking research.

"New York is, indeed, the city Americans love to love and love to hate," Burns says. "It's the King Kong of American cities -- rampaging, hirsute, upwardly mobile and tragicomic in its fate. ... The world has come to its doorstep as it has come to no other city, and it, in turn, has aggressively projected itself back out, across the country and across the world, as no city has ever done in the history of cities. As a consequence, the names of its streets and place names have become part of the lingua franca and dream of an entire nation: Wall Street, Broadway, Madison Avenue, Times Square."

The miniseries serves up some fascinating historical tidbits (Manhattan was not bought for $24, but for $600) and forgotten events (the Draft Riots of 1863, waged by impoverished Irish forced to fight for a country where they were being abused while the rich bought themselves out of conscription).

Those who pride themselves on their knowledge of New York will gain more lore from this documentary but should be warned: It has a stately, scholarly pace. Perhaps that's the price of exploring a city where Lincoln adopted his signature top hat and much of America's history began.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

Q: My friend insists that Fran Drescher's parents are Renee Taylor and Joseph Bologna. I disagree. Also, who is Clint Eastwood's father? --Mary O., Pocono Lake, Pa.

A: Your friend is confused. Taylor and Bologna are married in real life, but Taylor only played Drescher's mom in The Nanny. Even more confusing is the fact that Drescher's TV parents had the same names as her real parents, Morty and Sylvia.

Clint Eastwood's father, Clinton Eastwood Sr., was not an actor.

Q: I understand John Lithgow's real-life son is in 3rd Rock From the Sun. Which character does he play? --B. Pearson, Nampa, Idaho.

A: Ian Lithgow, John's son from his first marriage, plays poor Leon, the student who suffers the brunt of Dr. Solomon's ridicule in class.

Q: Was the late Carolyn Jones of The Addams Family married to Aaron Spelling? Was she Tori Spelling's mother? --D. Sansalone, Greenville, N.C.

A: Jones was married to Spelling from 1953-64. She died in 1983.

Tori Spelling was born in 1973 to Spelling and his current wife, Candy.

Q: I love to hear the actor who plays Jeffrey Geiger on Chicago Hope sing. Didn't he star in the movie Finian's Rainbow several years ago with Petula Clark and Fred Astaire? --A.O., Tyler, Texas.

A: No, that was Don Francks, who now plays Walter in La Femme Nikita, who wooed Petula Clark in that 1968 musical. Tony winner Mandy Patinkin (Broadway's Evita) plays Dr. Geiger.

Q: Did Jack Palance ever star in a weekly dramatic series? --J.M. in Michigan.

A: Twice. He played circus boss Johnny Slate in The Greatest Show on

Fran Drescher

Earth (ABC, 1963-64) and police detective Alexander Bronkov in Bronk (CBS, 1975-76).

Q: Can you give me the names of shows produced by Donald P. Bellisario prior to JAG? That's my favorite show! --Janet Warner, Appleton, Wis.

A: Before JAG, Bellisario worked in a variety of production capacities on the flops Tequila and Bonetti and Tales of the Gold Monkey. He had greater success with Quantum Leap; Airwolf; Magnum, P.I. and Baa Baa, Black Sheep.

Q: I have always been a great fan of Walter Pidgeon. Did he die? If so, when? --Robert Wempe, Roy, Utah.

A: The beloved actor, who was twice nominated for an Oscar (for Madame Curie and Mrs. Miniver) and received a Lifetime Achievement Award from the Screen Actors Guild, died of a stroke in 1984 -- just two days after his 87th birthday.

Doug Smith was Marcy Walker's (Liza Colby, All My Children) date for the Daytime Emmy Awards in May, and he'll be her husband in December.

"We go to the same church in Connecticut and met through Bible study," Walker says. "Our first date was the Emmys, and it was more as friends. I didn't want to go by myself, and he kindly offered that he would go as my escort. Now we are engaged."

In other news, Tamara Tunie is back in her recurring role as Jessica Griffin in As the World Turns. The actress, who created the role in 1987, left the show to pursue work in feature films and prime-time TV. Jessica is Oakdale's new district attorney.

Michael Swan, who played Jessica's husband, Duncan McKechnie, is now on The Bold and the Beautiful as Adam Alexander.

Also, Maura West and fiancé Scott DeFreitas, who play Carly Tenney and Andy Dixon on ATWT, have announced they are expecting their first child next year. "We're grateful to be adding to our family," West says.

The new baby will be the brother or sister of West's 3-year-old son, Benjamin.

In prime time, Rick Bauer (Michael O'Leary, Guiding Light) makes a guest appearance on NBC's Law & Order Wednesday, Nov. 17.
