PLO rebels bombard neighborhood

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian rebels and their Syrian backers bombarded neighborhoods around PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's headquarters today, ending a brief lull in the fighting.

The prolonged pre-dawn artillery bombardment set several buildings on fire, and state-run Radio Beirut said the rebels mounted hit-and-run assaults on the loyalists' shrinking defense lines in this port city.

However, a spokesman for Arafat said the situation was "more or less quiet" at mid-morning, when shops were open and some traffic trickled onto the streets despite sporadic sniping.

Police in Beirut, 50 miles to the south, quoted reports from Tripoli as saying 30 people were killed and 60 wounded in the bombardment, which tapered off at daybreak.

Arafat's loyalists in the Palestine Liberation Organization fired volleys of rockets from truck-mounted launchers deployed in Tripoli's seaside slums, but incoming barrages were much heavier, according to the radio.

Suadi Arabia, in apparent response to Arafat's appeal for intervention to spare Tripoli from a "bloodbath," sent its foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, to Damascus for talks with Syrian leaders.

The prince met with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam, and sources in the Syrian capital said the PLO war was the main topic of discussion.

In Beirut, Lebanese troops battled anti-government Shiite Moslem militiamen early today in three southern neighborhoods of the capital in what police called a "grave breach" of Lebanon's often-violated Sept. 26 civil war truce.

Militiamen fired mortars, bazookas and machine guns at army positions, while army tanks fired at sandbagged positions of hooded insurgents for three hours before dawn, police said.

One stray round landed harmlessly at the Beirut airport base of U.S. Marines serving with the multinational peacekeeping force, Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, in a nationwide television address on the eve of today's 40th anniversary of Lebanon's independence from France, pledged to free the country from all foreign forces "whatever the sacrifices are."

"The priorities are ending the occupation, working with friendly superpowers, especially the United States, to achieve the complete withdrawal of the Israeli army from Lebanon, and reaching a mutual understanding with Syria on a schedule for the withdrawal of its forces," he said.

Israel has 15,000-20,000 soldiers in southern Lebanon, while Syria has at least 30,000 in eastern and northern Lebanon, including the area around Tripoli.

Vote expected on deployment of missiles

Riot policemen surround West German Parliament

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Riot police ringed the government district today as Parliament convened for a climactic debate and vote on whether West Germany will proceed with deployment of new U.S. nuclear missiles.

Clusters of anti-missile demonstrators gathered behind steel barriers manned by hundreds of police 200 yards from the Parliament building when the debate resumed this morning.

Defense Minister Manfred Woerner opened the session with a strong endorsement of the planned NATO deployment.

"Who wanted these weapons? It was not the Americans. It was the Europeans," he declared.

Riot police fired jets of water laced with tear gas at anti-nuclear activists outside the Parliament building as the debate opened Monday and made at least 180 arrests when protesters tried to block a main avenue.An estimated 4,000 demonstrators were involved in the protests during the day.

The debate was scheduled to end at 7 p.m. tonight (1 p.m. EST), when three resolutions were to considered by 498 voting members of Parliament.

Two motions by the leftist opposition Social Democrats and the anti-NATO Greens party oppose deployment of Pershing 2 and cruise missiles on German soil.

But Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative-moderate coalition, which has a 58-seat majority, was virtually certain to win approval of a resolution backing the government's defense program, including the missile deployment approved by NATO in 1979.

Kohl opened the debate Monday by declaring that the first U.S. missiles would be sited in West Germany "by year's end" if there is no breakthrough at U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

The chancellor said his government would not be intimidated by Moscow's threats and efforts to separate Europe from the United States.

"We are not wanderers between East and West," he said. "Between democracy and dictatorship there is no middle road. We stand on the side of freedom."

The Soviet Union has threatend to abandon the Geneva talks if any of the Pershings arrive in West Germany. From the new bases, the missiles could reach Soviet territory in a few minutes.

Informed sources, who declined to be further identified, said the first contingent of nine Pershing 2 ballistic missiles could be flown to West Germany later this week for deployment in southern Germany.

The 1979 NATO decision calls for stationing 572 U.S. medium-range missiles by 1988 in five countries if the Soviet Union does not reduce its force of 243 triple-warhead SS-20s already targeted on Western Europe.

West Germany is the key to the deployment strategy because it would receive the largest share of missiles — 204 — including all 108 Pershing 2s.

Woerner defended the plan today and chided the Social Democrats for criticizing U.S. conduct at the Geneva negotiations.

"Willy Brandt accuses the Americans of stubbornness and says that the Americans are more interested in the deployment of Pershing 2s than negotiating away the SS-20s," he said, referring to the former Social Democrat chancellor.

"But I ask who asked for these weapons? It was not the Americans. It was the Europeans," he added.

Arms negotiators hold short session

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet delegations to the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks on reducing long-range missiles met for one hour today at the Soviet Mission, U.S. officials said, and are to meet again next Tuesday.

Although it was the shortest plenary session since the START talks began in June 1982, the two delegations decided to meet for lunch afterwards in a Geneva hotel. The length of the session was not seen as of major significance.

The START negotiating sessions, which concern long-range intercontinental and submarine-launched missiles as well as air-launched cruise missiles and bombers normally last about two hours. Neither U.S. negotiator Edward L. Rowny nor Soviet Ambassador Viktor P. Karpov made any comment after today's meeting.

The START talks run parallel the intermediate-range nuclear force (INF) talks on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe, which are to resume at the U.S. Mission Wednesday. The session will come one day after the sharply divided West German Parliament votes on the stationing of new Pershing 2 and Cruise medium-range missiles in Germany.

The Soviet Union has threatened to leave the INF talks when the U.S. begins deploying new missiles in Europe, and have linked the fate of START to their actions in the nearly two-year-old medium-range negotiations.

Since the Soviet threats to leave the talks, speculation has mounted over their departure with every meeting here.

Soviet INF negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky left the INF talks on Nov. 15 after 35 minutes, their shortest session since beginning in November 1981, but then met with U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze for more than two hours in a subsequent meeting last Thursday.

The current round of START negotiations began Oct. 5, and the rounds normally last two months.

Although the START talks concern more powerful and longer-ranging U.S. and Soviet rocket forces than the INF talks, they have been held largely in the shadow of the politically sensitive medium-range missile talks because of the imminent stationing of the first of 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe.

The U.S.-NATO force is to counter a Soviet force of 243, triple-warhead SS-20s already aimed at Western European and NATO targets.

Family gathers on anniversary of Kennedy's death

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — On this 20th anniversary of that dreadful day in Dallas, the family that bears his heritage gathered to honor the memory of John F. Kennedy at his grave, in his church and in his Massachusetts home.

The very public Kennedy family and some close friends made a very private visit to the president's grave in Arlington National Cemetery at 7:45 a.m. before the gates opened to the public. They scattered yellow and white roses before the plaque that bears the legend "John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 1917-1963."

Soon the flowers were joined by wreaths and bouquets brought by some 50 people who had waited for the cemetery to open. One was Theresa Fitzpatrick who said she worked for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., for 11 years as governess to his children.

"He meant so much to us," she said. "He had a great love for his Irish ancestry. We wanted to come today to remember him in dance and song." With her were four children, dressed as Irish step dancers. She said they would dance to music awaiting them at the gate.

One of the first to arrive was Ambassador Tadhg F. O'Sullivan of Ireland who placed a huge wreath before the grave after an Army bugler blew taps. A priest prayed: "May his immortal soul rest in peace."

An aide to Sen. Kennedy said this was the first time outsiders were excluded from family visits to the hillside where the 35th president is buried.

John Kennedy, who was assassinated in Dallas at the age of 46, lies between his two infant children only a few yards from the grave of his brother, Robert, who also was the victim of a gunman waiting in ambush.

An eternal flame, requested by his widow, Jacqueline, marks John Kennedy's grave. On granite, lining a circular walk, are chiseled the most prominent phrases from Kennedy's inaugural speech.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis was spending the day with the Kennedy's 93-year-old mother in Hyannisport, Mass. John Kennedy Jr., 22, was in India for graduate studies.

Daughter Caroline Kennedy, 25, was in Washington for the observances. Joining her at the graveside were the former president's brother and sisters, and other members of the large family.

The senator, who is the last of the four Kennedy brothers, was to speak at a memorial Mass to be celebrated by Archbishop James A. Hickey at Holy Trinity Roman Catholic Church in the Georgetown section of Washington.

You can't wing it when talking turkey

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Talking turkey to confused cooks is an art.

"You gotta know what you're doing. You can't afford to wing it," says Judy Larhill, who supervises 44 home economists who answer a bank of telephones 12 hours a day each weekday.

The calls come from women, and a few men, eager to know how to thaw, roast, stuff and generally prepare a turkey for holiday meals.

"At times, this place sounds like a schoolroom full of babbling youngsters," Mrs. Larhill said Wednesday from her office in a Chicago suburb, where Swift & Co. has opened its third annual turkey talk line. The toll-free number is 800-323-4848.

The first year, there were 11,000 inquiries. Last year, there were 26,000 calls and "we're expecting between 50,000 to 60,000 before we hang up the phones for the last time this season," she said.

Getting the bird from the freezer to the oven can be a challenge. Cooking it properly can be another problem.

She said a survey commissioned by Swift found that 85 percent of U.S. homes will be serving turkey on Thanksgiving Day and 50 percent at Christmas.

"It's the No. 1 meat for the holidays but a lot of people want to know what size to buy," she said. "If you're serving 10 guests, look for a 15-pound turkey. That will give you 1½ pounds for each one."

Mrs. Larhill, who estimates she has prepared at least 1,000 birds in the company's testing kitchen, said it takes two to three days to thaw a 12-pounder after it's in the refrigerator.

"There's a quicker way. Float it in the sink or a bathtub full of water which must be changed occasionally," she said. "It will thaw in six to nine hours."

That advice goes to anyone who calls the hot-line's experts, who are hired each year on a free-lance basis. All of them are women because "this is one field that many men haven't entered yet," Mrs. Larhill said.

Rebels bombard neighborhoods

On Monday, the Syrian-backed PLO rebels routed Arafat's loyalists from several neighborhoods and pushed to within 1,000 yards of his office in Tripoli.

The rebels, who say Arafat has been too moderate toward Israel and want to drive him out of Lebanon, proclaimed a unilateral ceasefire in the afternoon, but sporadic bursts of gunfire echoed through the city for the rest of the day.

Arafat issued an "urgent appeal" to Arab heads of state to intercede with Syria, saying he would "accept any initiative by any of you to avert Tripoli the bloodbath and massacre being prepared for it."

Saudi Arabia today came out in support of Arafat. "Capturing a camp or two will never uproot the Palestinian cause from Arab conscience or switch illegitimacy into legitimacy," Saudi Prince Abdullah told the Kuwaiti news agency in an interview in Kuwait.

Abdullah, the Saudi deputy prime minister, described Arafat as "the trusted authority of the PLO" and — in the first open denunciation of the other side — called the rebels "traitors, mean stooges."

A pro-Arafat PLO delegation headed by Farouk Kaddoumi arrived in Moscow today for what Tass called a "brief visit."

Teen's suicide raises questions

HOUSTON (AP) — Ann Kretsinger returned home baffled one summer day in 1982. Her 18-year-old son had called earlier, saying he had car trouble, but she could not find him in the shopping center lot where he said he would be.

Two of Kent Kretsinger's friends, waiting in her living room when she returned, advised her to check her son's room. He was there, with a .38-caliber bullet through his heart.

Kretsinger's death divided two families and left his girlfriend facing trial as the first person in Texas ever to be charged under a new law with aiding a suicide.

In suicide notes to family and friends, Kretsinger said he was happy and offered no reason for taking his life.

But the day he died, he traded his Camaro for an old DeSoto and gave it to his girlfriend, Jean LeeAnn Miller, prosecutors said.

The Harris County district attorney's office plans to try the 18-year-old Miss Miller on the charge of aiding a suicide. Prosecutors say it may be the first case tried under the new law.

Miss Miller is accused of driving Kretsinger to his house Aug. 27, 1982, the day he killed himself; providing envelopes; stuffing the suicide notes inside them; and addressing them. If convicted, she could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $5,000.

Kretsinger was a long-distance runner, an aspiring photographer and accomplished saxophone player who was preparing to start college.

Miss Miller, his girlfriend of six weeks, was considered a novelty by students at Klein High School.

A punk rock fan, Miss Miller once went to school with her hair dyed purple and was one among her classmates to rediscover miniskirts. She also wrote poetry about anger, death and suicide.

They seemed an unlikely couple, but Kretsinger was fascinated by her, friends said.

"Jean was his first girlfriend. He thought she was real interesting," said Barry Bramlett.

So much so that Mrs. Kretsinger said she thought the girl "had a power over him, but it was the power of love. Kent died for love. He loved her like you love a person for six weeks."

Miss Miller's family, however, insisted she was only obeying the her friend's last wishes.

"He used her without regard to the consequences to her. Still, she attempted to protect him," the family said in a statement released to the Houston Chronicle and published in Monday's editions.

State District Judge Charles Hearn dismissed the first indictment filed against Miss Miller last May, contending prosecutors were not specific in their charges that Miss Miller aided Kretsinger's death.

But the case went back to a grand jury after another judge took a personal interest in it. Miss Miller was reindicted earlier this month.

Kretsinger and Miss Miller, now 18, met during summer school in 1982.

Mrs. Kretsinger said her son was open about their relationship. "He said more to me than I would have told my parents," she said.

Friends said Kretsinger had talked of committing suicide and once made a half-hearted attempt to kill himself with an overdose of aspirin.

The case lay dormant for several months after the first indictment was quashed.

It was resurrected at a July meeting of Parents of Murdered Children when Mrs. Kretsinger met state District Judge Michael McSpadden and told him the circumstances of her son's death.

"It was a tragic case," McSpadden said. "It sounded like she was getting the run-around from the district attorney's office. After Judge Hearn quashed the indictment, they stopped any investigation rather than reword the indictment. I thought something had to be done."

Another grand jury was asked to look at the case, and Harris County District Attorney John Holmes Jr. was asked to reopen the inquiry and assign it to Don Stricklin, head of the district attorney's special crimes division.

"My initial reaction was that it sounded like something straight out of a Halloween thriller," Holmes said. "I thought it (the evidence) was a little light."

But after hearing more than one month of testimony, the panel reindicted Miss Miller.

"I was upset when (the case) was thrown out. But I didn't pursue it," Mrs. Kretsinger said.

"I don't want to hurt Jean. But it's not right for things to happen and be forgotten. And I don't want this to happen to anyone else," she said.

'Two-hour suicide note' on tape details drug, dating problems

QUAKERTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A tape-recorded "two-hour suicide note" left behind by two teenagers who jumped to their deaths in a quarry indicated they felt death was the only escape from their drug and dating problems, authorities said.

The bodies of the two boys, identified as Marc Landis, 17, of Richlandtown, and Daniel Ferdock, 16, of Quakertown, were found Saturday by an unidentified friend, police said Monday. They had fallen 200 feet and were killed instantly, investigators said.

"This has really traumatized the community," said Fred Shipman, a psychologist at the 940-student Quakertown Senior High School. He said "a lot of kids" had come to the district's seven counselors to talk about the deaths.

A cassette that a friend of the dead youths removed from the quarry but later turned over to authorities "was a two-hour suicide note," said one investigator. "It's leaving a lot of people angry and confused."

The youths' parents asked that the tape's contents not be released.

Landis had exhibited merely "the growing-up problems that teen-agers have," said his father, the Rev. D. Craig Landis, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church in Richlandtown. He said Monday his son had moved out and was living with a friend.

Ferdock's father, Michael Ferdock, a teacher, said, "I know my son, and my wife and I say he did not commit suicide."

A spokesman for the East, Rockhill Township police force, who asked not to be identified, said he didn't know when the tape was made.

The tape showed that "one had just broken up with a girl and both had drug problems," the spokesman said without elaborating further.

County Coroner Thomas J. Rosko said an autopsy showed the youths died instantly of multiple internal injuries.

Chief Deputy Coroner John Moyer said there was no evidence the boys had been drinking, and results of drug tests would not be available for several days.

According to family members, the boys met at Quakertown High, where Ferdock was a junior and Landis a senior, and had become close friends last summer.

Congress takes no action, gets pay raise

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — With what may be an unprecedented lack of public and news media attention, the members of Congress have cleared the way for a 3.5 percent pay raise for themselves effective on Jan. 1.

The $2,443 pay hike will bring the 435 representatives and 100 senators up to a total annual pay of $72,243. Combined with the large pay raise House members received last December and the senators started collecting at the end of July, the January hike will mean a nearly 19 percent boost in salary for Congress in a year or less.

But a search of the Congressional Record for the first session of the 98th Congress, which ended late Friday, will show no vote directly for or against a congressional pay raise and virtually no debate on the issue.

In effect, the members of Congress got their pay raise this year by giving up a claim to a sizable pay increase they probably never would have gotten and then by doing nothing.

The congressional pay raise will come through the actions of President Reagan, who belatedly offered a 3.5 percent increase in pay for all federal workers.

Under the provisions of a 1970 law, federal workers will receive the pay raise recommended by the president, unless the Congress enacts legislation for a different compensation adjustment. A 1975 amendment to that law included members of Congress in the automatic pay raise provisions, but until this year that law had never been used for the lawmakers, according to Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif.

Fazio, as chairman of the Legislative subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, had to carry to the floor any pay raise proposals for Congress and then live with the political fallout.

But this year Fazio was able to avoid the heat and allow the automatic pay raise provisions to work. And, if he has his way, that is how congressional salary adjustments will be handled in the future.

"That would be my hope," Fazio said Monday. "We'll just get what we think we can afford to give federal employees.

Fazio pointed out that the congressional pay raise will be more than offset by the $2,532 members of Congress will have to pay into Social Security next year when they become covered for the first time in history. With added taxes on the additional income, he said, the members will lose take-home pay.

Fazio cleared the way for the automatic increase on June 2 when he brought to the House floor his subcommittee's appropriation bill to provide money for Congress in the 1984 fiscal year.

In presenting that bill, Fazio said one of the provisions "reduces the legal salaries" of members of Congress, and the executive department officials whose salaries are pegged to congressional pay, "to the salary rates currently being paid."

"This will preclude the possiblity of prospective $7,000-$10,000 salary increases" for the members of Congress and the others, Fazio told his colleagues.

The usually reliable Congressional Quarterly weekly journal twice reported that those provisions would prevent Congress from getting a pay raise in the 1984 budget year.

Instead, Fazio said, that part of the legislative appropriation bill gave up the claim to a 12.5 percent pay increase the members would have received in the past had they gotten the salary adjustments computed under cost-of-living formulas provided for federal workers over the past decade. But in dropping the claim, the members were clearing the way for the automatic increase.

"Until we gave away any retroactive claim to a pay raise," Fazio said, "there wasn't any way we could get automatic increases from the 1970 law."

That bill passed on a 184-104 bipartisan vote following a debate that focused solely on the overall cost of Congress, with no mention of members pay.

The only time congressional pay appeared to have been debated in the House was on Oct. 25 during the discussion of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, a measure seeking to reduce federal spending by more than $1.5 billion.

A major part of that supposed reduction came from scaling federal pay raises from 5.5 percent forecasted in the previous year's budget to 4 percent and delaying that increase from Oct. 1 to Jan.1, 1984.

The rule under which the reconciliation bill was to be debated allowed only one amendment, the one to delay the federal pay raise.

Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., rose to inform his colleagues that "as I understand it, the rule that we are considering does protect those sections of the reconciliation bill which, in effect, provide a cost-of-living increase for members of Congress."

DC-9's passengers subdue 'incoherent' hijacker

CHICAGO (AP) — A "very incoherent" man was subdued by passengers who tied him to seats after he seized a Republic Airlines DC-9 and threatened to blow it up unless he could speak to the Rev. Jesse Jackson, witnesses said.

Rasul Ali Shakir, also known as Russell Chappelle, was charged with air piracy and held in lieu of $100,000 cash bond, the FBI said. A hearing for the Detroit bus driver was scheduled today.

Mick Strebeck, one of 36 passengers who boarded the plane Monday afternoon in Detroit, said Shakir told the passengers, "Today is going to be your final day."

Shakir also mentioned the ABC-TV movie "The Day After" and doomsday, said Gregory Price, 33, of Dearborn Heights, Mich. The movie broadcast Sunday night depicted nuclear holocaust.

Four passengers suffered bruises and abrasions, but no one was seriously injured in a scuffle after Shakir allegedly threatened to detonate a bomb Monday afternoon on Flight 275 from Detroit to Chicago, officials said. No bomb was found.

The passengers and crew "were great," tying the suspect "spread eagle" to the seats, using belts and anything else they could find, said passenger Esther Ahlteen of Sweden.

"He was running around hollering, erratic. He hit one of them (passengers) — and the passenger hit him back," said Sgt. Terry O'Donnell of the Police Department's special unit at O'Hare International Airport.

Shakir, 33, a driver for the Detroit Department of Transportation, boarded the plane in Detroit and allegedly commandeered the plane while it was en route to a scheduled landing at Kalamazoo, Mich., O'Donnell said.

The suspect told the crew he was carrying a bomb and presented his demand to speak to Jackson, said airline spokesman Walt Hellman. He would not allow passengers to get on or off the plane when it landed in Kalamazoo, Hellman added.

Airport manager Mike Stampfler said about 60 passengers were evacuated from the Kalamazoo terminal as a precautionary measure.

The plane, carrying 36 passengers and a crew of five, then left for O'Hare, but Shakir was subdued shortly before it landed about 2 p.m. CST, said Thomas Kapsalis, city commissioner of aviation.

Shakir also said "he wanted a radio to talk to his people in the sky," Strebeck said, adding: "When he got a radio, he threw it down and smashed it. He wanted an AM-FM radio. He didn't have one train of thought at all."

About five minutes before the jet was to land at O'Hare Airport in Chicago, "one guy stood up and said he had just had enough," Strebeck said.

Jackson: Leader needed who can mold opinion

Jesse Jackson

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson says the nation needs "leadership that will mold opinion and not just follow opinion polls."

Jackson told reporters he took that message to the University of Texas Monday when he spoke to students of former Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and former congresswoman Barbara Jordan, both of whom teach at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Later, Jackson delayed a speech at UT-Austin in order to bring in students who were locked out by fire safety laws.

As 1,100 students in the campus ballroom urged Jackson to begin his speech, others pressed and banged against the back doors.

"We surely must be concerned about those on the outside who want to come in," Jackson said. "Some get it all and others get none. That's kind of like Reaganomics."

Secret Servicemen and campus police followed Jackson as he want to the rear of the room and arranged for the locked-out students to come in. A rope was set up as a barrier.

Jackson said college students are "strangely exhuberant in the midst of confusion, despair and with war drums beating."

Throughout Jackson's talk, a baby's cry competed with his comments. But when the parents stood to take the child out of the room, Jackson told them to remain in the hall.

"Anytime a preacher can't outholler a baby, he's disqualified," he said. "The baby is the whole point."

At a news conference before the speech, Jackson, considered the first major black contender for the presidency, blasted organized labor. He predicted that "a black will be president of the United States clearly before a black will be president of the AFL-CIO."

Deadline passes to file charges in Kerr case

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The deadline apparently has passed for charges to be filed in the 1978 attempted assassination of a federal prosecutor, but authorities remained close-mouthed about what would happen to the case.

The statute of limitations was to expire Monday in the Nov. 21, 1978, attack on Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who since has resigned.

U.S. Attorney Edward Prado refused to comment on the status of the case.

"Our official position is that we have no comment at this time," Prado said Monday. "No one in my department will issue any statements — official or otherwise — about the case."

Kerr narrowly escaped death by ducking under the dashboard as almost 20 bullets slammed into the luxury sedan he was driving to the federal courthouse.

Six months later — and only six blocks away — U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was assassinated by a single shot from a sniper's rifle.

Prosecutors had the option of seeking an extension in the federal statute of limitations, or turning the massive file on the case over to prosecutors in state court, where there is no limitation on when to begin prosecution on attempted murder charges.

Several federal officials close to the case refused to comment Monday on whether either option had been exercised, or whether last-minute sealed indictments had been issued by a special grand jury.

Kerr, whose whereabouts are a government secret, had earned powerful enemies by tackling drug and organized crime cases.

He had prosecuted many cases before Wood, who was nicknamed "Maximum John" for the stiff sentences he handed down in narcotics cases.

Train accident ruled to be caused by human error

BAYTOWN (AP) — The crew of a Southern Pacific train that smashed into 41 parked freight cars killing four men never tried to stop the train, a spokesman for the railroad says.

"There was no indication the brakes were ever applied," Southern Pacific spokesman Tony Aleman said Monday. "In short, human error."

The wreck Saturday on a single track 30 miles east of Houston killed all three men in the engine and one of two men riding in the caboose.

The lone survivor, 41-year-old conductor J.W. Muchow, remained hospitalized today in stable condition with two broken legs and a dislocated arm, officials said.

The caboose, which was the second car on the train, was folded almost in half and derailed when a tank car catapulted forward, smashing into the engine's cabin.

Aleman said an examination of the track and train indicated the wreck occurred because of "failure of the head-in crew (in the engine) to take action to stop the train short of cars that were in the track."

Investigators from the National Transporation Safety Board, the Federal Railroad Administration and the Texas Railroad Commission finished examining the wreckage Monday but were still reviewing the evidence, Aleman said. The tracks were cleared and reopened.

It was the second fatal train wreck in Texas in eight days. On Nov. 12, four people died when an Amtrak train derailed near Marshall.

Nurse accused

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An investigation that produced an indictment against a nurse charged with giving infants powerful drugs could result in more charges, Bexar County prosecutors say.

A special grand jury accused nurse Genene Jones of causing "serious injury" to a 4-week-old boy with an anti-clogging drug.

Veteran launches 'Operation Uplift'

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

A U.S. Navy Vietnam veteran who remembers what it was like spending a holiday away from home and family is trying to raise $16,000 to send 2,000 fruitcakes to beseiged Marines in Beirut, Lebanon, by Thanksgiving.

John Ferguson, 35, of Midland hopes that "Operation Uplift," as he calls it, will uplift the spirits of American soldiers in the multinational peacekeeping force and show them that someone cares.

"He had been in the Navy and knows what it's like to be away from the home during a holiday," his wife Donna said this morning. "Over in Beirut, it's such a bad situation for them right now. He just wanted to get some people together and do something supportive.... It really just started out with an idea: wouldn't it be nice if something like this could be done? As he made phone calls and started talking, he started getting positive response. This has been coming together rather quickly. It's been less than a week since he got the idea."

Ferguson, who was not available for comment this morning, first wanted to send the soldiers turkeys for Thanksgiving, but found out the government already had made provisions for such. A government official suggested that he consider sending Texas fruitcakes instead, and Ferguson immediately thought about Collins Street Bakery in Corsicana.

He contacted Bruce Robinson, a friend and former Corsicana resident, and Robinson in turn contacted Collins Street Bakery to see if it could provide 2,000 two-pound fruitcakes for Beirut Marines.

"They really got exciting about being a part of that, if John could raise the $16,000," said Robinson.

A post office box and bank account was set up to receive donations, and interest began to mount. Ralph Bliss of Houston, who has a freight company, made an offer Thursday to ship the fruitcakes directly from the Corsicana bakery to Beirut free of charge if enough contributions are received to purchase the items.

Contributions may be sent to Operation Uplift, P.O. Box 10952, Midland 79702.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, November 23, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: First Lady Abigail Adams, horror film star Boris Karloff and outlaw Billy the Kid were born on this date. Try to be more practical in the year ahead. New financial trends work in your favor. The number 36 could prove very lucky. A windfall is featured in December or April. Invest in creative projects instead of purely speculative ventures. A special event opens the door to romance. Do not reveal too much too soon. Family members try to increase their influence on you. Be diplomatic when declaring your independence. Stand up for your rights at place of employment. Co-worker is asking too much.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Money from a part-time job makes things easier for the whole family. Monitor youngsters' behavior if you sense they are headed for trouble. You cannot let them ruin their lives.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Find a way for a child to take the Thanksgiving trip he wants so badly. Business success brings you less pleasure than family activities. Consider adding to your household.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Entertaining is lucky for you. So is the number 2. A move made earlier this week will bring new money and opportunities after the holiday. Grants are available for hard-working students.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A noisy environment saps your energy at a time when you must get things done. Persevere! A financial maneuver buys you the time you need to pay pressing bills.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A blow-up could prove costly. Keep your temper in check and eventually things will go the way you wish. A positive, cooperative attitude helps you win the support you need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Clear up a misunderstanding before leaving home. A new romance boosts your spirits. Pursue partner without being pushy. Self-motivation is the key to success. Not a good day for signing contracts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A former love reappears, stirring up feelings you thought long gone. Do not repeat a mistake just because of some exciting memories. A leadership position is worth pursuing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A resolution you keep today will put you in a happy frame of mind. You accomplish more as tension subsides. Try to interest mate in a special project.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although higher-ups will back you in an office fight, you should try to resolve matters yourself. Review bills to catch any mistakes. Romance leads to a change in lifestyle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Mixed business trends make this a good day to lie low and catch up on routine chores. Romance keeps your spirits high. Come to grips with a financial obligation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The emphasis is on new contacts and places. Loved ones distract you from work without meaning to. Double-check the instructions for a project to avoid having to do it over.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Contact an old friend. A lack of cash need not prevent you from having a good time over Thanksgiving. Take care of all safety and security measures before leaving on a trip.

Brazilian film stars actors from U.S.

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — On a dark, claustrophobic movie set, actors William Hurt and Raul Julia spend up to 12 hours a day filming the story of the relationship between an aging homosexual and a political activist who share a prison cell in an unidentified South American country.

Since the middle of last month, Hurt, Julia and Brazilian director Hector Babenco have been closeted in an old studio on the outskirts of Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city, shooting "Kiss of the Spider Woman." It is based on the 1976 novel by Manuel Puig, an Argentine writer living in Brazil.

It is the first Brazilian-made film to star American actors. Its American producer says it could help turn this country into a major international movie production center.

The 33-year-old Hurt, star of such films as "Altered States," "Body Heat," "Gorky Park" and "The Big Chill," plays Molina, a homosexual convicted on a morals charge.

Julia, 39, who has starred in "One From the Heart," "The Escape Artist" and "Tempest," is Valentin, a highly disciplined and intellectualized political prisoner.

Babenco, 37, an Argentine-born Brazilian citizen, is best known for his last film, "Pixote" — the critically acclaimed and poignant story of abandoned children and juvenile delinquency in Sao Paulo.

"Kiss of the Spider Woman" is a story about friendship — "the slowly growing friendship between two men of totally different emotional, cultural and social backgrounds," said the bearded, cigar-smoking Babenco during a brief break from his hectic shooting schedule.

"The South American prison cell they share is the boxing ring where they resolve their conflicts before arriving at a stage of mutual affection," Babenco said.

Molina lives in a fantasy world of glamorous movies and romantic screen heroes and heroines, which at first disgusts Valentin but later hypnotizes him. Little by little, the two men form a bond of friendship and fraternal love.

Babenco said he doesn't consider Hurt and Julia foreign actors. "They are just two excellent actors who are ideal for this film," he said.

He rejects the idea that the use of two successful American actors will help make his film a box office hit. "If that were the case, I would have hired Burt Reynolds or Chevy Chase," he said.

Babenco refused to say the exact cost of "Kiss of the Spider Woman," but indicated it would be less than $1 million. That is cheap by U.S. production standards.

Showing impressive form, USA II won the qualifying stage of the Bermuda Bowl competition, the world championship of bridge. In one semifinal, USA II met USA I, while France and Italy battled for the other berth in the final.

This deal is from the match between USA II and Italy in the qualifying rounds. In both rooms the final contract was four spades. In the auction shown, one club was artificial, guaranteeing at least 17 points, and one heart was positive and game-forcing.

Jim Jacoby, a former world champion and son of master gamesman Oswald Jacoby, led a club. East's king lost to the ace, declarer ruffed a club and led a diamond to the king. When that won, he continued with a diamond, and West's jack was allowed to hold. A trump return was won in dummy, and declarer led a heart to the ten and ace. Jacoby carefully unblocked the king. Now declarer had no way to avoid losing two hearts and either a trump or a club for down one.

In the other room the play followed similar lines, except that the Italian West clung to his king of hearts. Declarer ruffed a club with the king of spades, ruffed a diamond and cashed the ace of trumps. This was the position:

WEST	EAST

Declarer exited with a heart and West was end played. No matter what he returned after winning the king of hearts, declarer had to score both of his remaining trumps for his contract.

Day after the day

While the made-for-television movie "The Day After," which aired on ABC-TV Sunday night, may not have been everything viewers expected, in one sense the movie may have accomplished more than promoters planned.

The movie made one point clearly, reiterated following the screening by Secretary of State George P. Schultz: Nuclear war is not acceptable. And it dragged to the forefront another point that should not be forgotten for any length of time again: Throughout the world, nations possess the knowledge to create nuclear weapons. That knowledge isn't going to merely disappear if mankind does come to grips with the power he holds; it will continue to exist ad infinitum. Now that "the bomb" is a reality — and has been a reality for three decades — the challenge lies in continuing to resist the use of that weapon.

Too many Americans have refused to look at the nuclear reality facing their world. Too many world leaders have failed to negotiate arms reductions realistically, thus failing to acknowledge to magnitude of the nuclear question. Perhaps "The Day After" focused attention on the inevitability of addressing the nuclear topic as though it affects every one of us — because it does.

Estimates released shortly after the Sunday night airing indicated that possibly as many as 75 million Americans saw the film, which graphically depicted a nuclear strike on Kansas City and the devastation that followed in the surrounding area, mainly Lawrence, Kansas.

In the panel discussion which followed the movie, panelists discussed nuclear war and nuclear deterrence without arriving at any clear consensus. Of course no one in their right mind would be in favor of nuclear warfare, but that technology exists and as long as it exists, the possibility that someday it will be used will continue to exist.

Does mankind need more or fewer nuclear warheads, considering there are now in the neighborhood of 40,000 with a combined destructive force a million times that of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in World War II? Realistically the answer is no, of course. Then how do we get rid of some of the bombs now in possession? Through negotiation.

It's impossible to separate the movie from reality because the movie mirrored reality. It presented man's nuclear dilemma and pictured one conclusion — an unacceptable one. To advocate that the United States begin unilateral disarmament is ludicrous. As long as there is hatred and greed in the world that argument will remain ridiculous. Panelists in the discussion which followed outlined a plan for dealing with the nuclear dilemma: Stopping the growth of the nuclear arsenal, stabilizing the world situation and then, through a process of negotiation, beginning to reduce the number of nuclear arms.

That is a logical — a sane — approach. To not pursue it aggressively — removed from the heat of emotion and conducted in the coolness of logic — would be to condemn the people of the world to even greater horrors than they saw in "The Day After."

A realistic view

The hard-headed practicality for which the French are famous has seldom been more convincingly demonstrated than when the Roman Catholic bishops of the nation agreed, by an overwhelming majority, that nuclear deterrence constitutes a legitimate defense.

The vote of the French prelates must certainly have had a stunning and sobering effect on the religious bodies of other lands which have been routinely passing resolutions demanding that the United States jettison its nuclear arsenal.

No such phenomena, of course, occur in the Soviet Union, which has no recognized religious faiths. In fact the French bishops, in their support of the legitimacy of nuclear deterrents, took note of the "aggressive and dominating character of the Marxist-Leninist ideology."

The French people know what it is to be invaded and conquered by a brain-washed and superbly armed enemy. That knowledge, measured against what he perceives to be happening behind the Iron Curtain unquestionably prompted a spokesman for the French Catholic hierarchy to note: "In this situation of extreme distress, the choice is between non-war and slavery — the gulag or Finlandization — and we are picking something better than nothing, the nuclear situation."

Another View:

Increasing the risks

The decision of Turkish Cypriots to declare themselves an independent nation is an act of irresponsibility with dangerous ramifications. The decision of Turkey to grant instant recognition of this regime compounds the crisis.

There has been an immediate appeal to the U.N. Security Council — a most appropriate action, for the council has provided a peacekeeping force on Cyprus since 1964 and has played a continuing role in seeking peaceful settlement of the ugly communal dispute that historically has divided Cypriots of Turkish and Greek origin.

The unilateral declaration of independence on Tuesday affirms a situation that in fact has existed since 1975, when the island was partitioned a year after Turkey's troops invaded in massive numbers to support and defend the Turkish Cypriot minority. Turkey has stubbornly refused to remove its massed troops in the eight years since the partition, discouraging realistic peace negotiations, exacerbating the already troubled relationship between Ankara and Athens and perpetuating an unjust division of the beautiful country. Now all that will certainly be worsened, risking once again the integrity of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as its two easternmost members heat their quarrel.

Irresponsibility and irascibility have characterized both communities in Cyprus. But in the past the door to a negotiated settlement has been kept open. The declaration on Tuesday, supported by Turkey, seems to have closed that door. That can only raise the risks.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Automaker pressured into deal

WASHINGTON — Automaker John Z. DeLorean was caught by the FBI's candid cameras up to his elbows in a cocaine conspiracy. The incriminating videotapes were shown on coast-to-coast television.

Jack Anderson

I have now had access to audio tapes, which support his version of the incident. He was lured into the cocaine deal, he says, to save his foundering company. When he tried to back out, the FBI's undercover informant threatened to bash in his daughter's head, DeLorean swears.

The automaker's recorded behavior was less than heroic. But if he was coerced into committing a crime, then the government's conduct was far worse. It is important, therefore, to pursue the available evidence.

DeLorean told my associates Tony Capaccio and Indy Badhwar he was threatened by the FBI's sting man on Sept. 15, 1982. Earlier that same day, the government taped a conversation between the automaker and an FBI undercover agent posing as a banker. The agent used the name James Benedict.

DeLorean started by saying, "We have a problem, and I think it's serious." He then explained that the $2 million he was supposedly going to invest in cocaine was actually in the bank account of the British receivership that was trying to rescue his bankrupt, Belfast-based auto works. DeLorean pleaded that he couldn't touch the money.

"Well, you really put me in a bad spot," said Benedict.

DeLorean: "Yeah, I think we're in. I just don't see any way out of it."

Benedict: "You just screwed up a hell of a deal."

DeLorean: "I know. But it isn't a matter of choice. It was the only alternative. I don't see any other way, because that's where it is, and unless you've got some other ideas, there just isn't any other way. Now we're fighting like hell to get financing another place."

Benedict: "So what you are telling me is I went to all this trouble for nothing?"

DeLorean: "I'm telling you that the two million is in the receiver's bank account ... and unless we can come up with the money somewhere else, there isn't any way to get it back."

Benedict: "Now you really put me in a bad spot. I got this man (drug trafficker William Morgan Hetrick) committed to make his phone calls. He wanted to do it for us, his end of it. This is going to make us look extremely, extremely bad ...."

DeLorean: "Well, I'm being very candid with you, because I thought we were set ...."

Benedict: "So what do you want me to do? You want me to kill this deal?"

DeLorean: "I don't see any alternative right now. Unless you got some other idea."

Toward the end of the conversation, DeLorean said, "Right now, as I said, it's not optimistic .... I feel as bad about it as you do, I'll tell you."

It was later that night, DeLorean says, that he got the threatening call from the man who turned out to be a government sting man. I also have what some audio experts believe to be a tape of the threatening conversation.

PEN VS. SWORD: Those who complain about the "power of the press" might like to ponder the situation of Jose and Helen Vasquez of Pennsylvania. Vasquez wrote to me asking for help in the vicious murder of his mother and sister in Mexico. With the apparent complicity of local police, the suspected murderers had escaped. Though the victims were U.S. citizens, our embassy in Mexico City had done little to pressure Mexican officials to bring the killers to justice.

My staff began making inquiries, and now the Vasquezes have written to me:

"We are aware that it was the inquiry made by your office last May to the U.S. consulate which enabled us to secure the high level of cooperation we subsequently received from U.S. government officials in Mexico."

The suspected murderers have now been arrested "after much prodding and pressure applied by Mexican government officials and the U.S. Embassy."

INSIDE REPORT:

Black leaders awry on Grenada

WASHINGTON — From the government documents seized in the U.S. intervention on Grenada emerges a pattern of intimate collaboration between its now deposed communist regime and the Congressional Black Caucus, suggesting a gulf between black politicians and voters in the U.S.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The fact that Rep. Ron Dellums of California dissented from the overwhelmingly favorable view of the Grenadian operation by a bipartisan congressional delegation sent there comes as no surprise once these documents are read. They specifically reveal that Dellums' report on Grenada to the House Armed Services Committee was submitted to the late Maurice Bishop's regime for its editing and approval. Beyond that, a close connection between Grenada's now deposed dictators and Capitol Hill is revealed.

Dellums is not alone. Not one notable American black politician, much less a member of the Congressional Black Caucus, has endorsed Grenada's liberation from the bondage of a Marxist-Leninist police state. Reps. John Conyers of Michigan and Gus Savage of Illinois stormed out of a caucus meeting hearing Dominica's Prime Minister Eugenia Charles defend the U.S. intervention. Savage took the House floor to declare: "This puppet of our president represents Aunt Jemimaism."

This aligns black congressmen against black nations of the West Indies and, by all accounts, the black citizens of Grenada. While caucus members contend their constituents back their position, a private nationwide poll shows that nearly six out of 10 American blacks support President Reagan's policy in Grenada.

The connection between the Bishop regime and the black caucus is revealed by documents such as minutes of the Dec. 15, 1982, meeting of the Grenadian Politburo. Dellums' Oakland-based administrative assistant, Barbara Lee, had just arrived on the island.

"... Barbara Lee is here presently and has brought with her a report on the International Airport that was done by Ron Dellums," said the minutes. "They have requested that we look at the document and suggest any changes we deem necessary. They will be willing to make the changes."

That draft of his report to the House Armed Services Committee pooh-poohed President Reagan's fears that the airport would become a military base. Dellums' prose could only please the Bishop government, contending that "nothing being done in Grenada constitutes a threat to the United States or her allies." Dellums urged fellow congressmen to use the report "as a basis for a critique of the administration's hostile and hegemonistic policy toward Grenada." A Dellums aide told us the congressman "may have had discussions (with Grenadian officials) as to whether there were factual inaccuracies" in the report.

The Dellums office's connection with the Bishop regime shows up in another seized document: a report by Ian Jacobs, Grenada's deputy ambassador to the United Nations, on a U.S. tour last spring. "The (California Legislative) Black Caucus agreed (on April 7) to pass a resolution in support of Grenada and send it to Washington," Jacobs reported. "In discussions with Barbara Lee on April 20, 1983, she informed me that this had been done ...." It added that an August visit to Grenada by the California caucus was "being organized by Barbara Lee."

April 20 was also the date for a "hand-carried" memo to Bishop from Dessima Williams, Grenada's ambassador in Washington. Williams was concerned about the prime minister's forthcoming visit here at the invitation of TransAfrica, a black-American political organization specializing in foreign affairs and closely tied in with the Congressional Black Caucus.

Williams quoted Randall Robinson, executive director of TransAfrica, as telling him ("verbatim") that the invitation to Bishop sent this message to the Reagan administration: "Maurice Bishop is our man, a black man. You mess with him, you mess with all black Americans. And we are bringing him here to show you that we are friends with him."

The ambassador went on to tell Bishop that Robinson and Rep. George Crockett of Michigan would "resist any 'white intrusion'" in organizing his visit. But he had two aces in the hole: "John Conyers and Ron Dellums are very, very critical here (and I have set up meetings with them) because of their political clarity and their own perspective."

In contrast, members of the anti-communist Grenada Democratic Movement — such as Dr. Keith Mitchell, a mathematics professor at Howard University — encountered a closed door at the black caucus. His letters and telephone calls went unanswered. Mitchell saw only the District of Columbia's Rep. Walter Fauntroy. Otherwise, he described his movement's reception by staffers when they visited congressional offices as "hostile" and "unfriendly" (particularly those of Dellums and Rep. Mervyn Dymally of California).

After the Grenada operation, Dellums aide Bob Brauer told Radio Havana (in an interview put on communist Cuba's shortwave service Oct. 29): "Congressman Dellums is shocked and has characterized the invasion as essentially a war crime." Another Dellums aide, Carlottia Scott, said over Radio Havana that Americans were "really upset" about the Grenada intervention and that "there were people 10 abreast for 14 blocks in New York."

That preceded Dellums' visit to Grenada Nov. 4-6, and his inevitable finding against the operation. In Grenada, Barbados Prime Minister Tom Adams, typifying West Indies support for the U.S. intervention, told Dellums: "Do not assume that you know better than we what is in our national interest." That admonition might well be repeated by black Americans to their elected representatives in Congress.

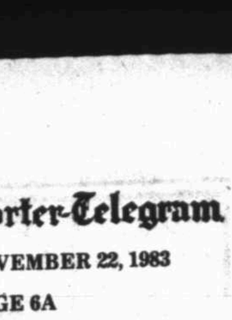
CHARLEY REESE

Capitol bomb just beginning

The bomb that exploded in the Capitol is only a taste of things to come. Unfortunately, when the chickens come home to roost, it is already too late to complain about the odors.



Charley Reese

Liberals have gutted the CIA and the FBI and the Reagan Administration has made only minor repairs. These two agencies which should be able to offer the best protection against terrorists were savaged with budget cuts, public witch hunts, and stupid restrictions.

It will be grimly amusing, after a few politicians are nailed by terrorists, to watch just how fast the Congress will remove the restrictions and heap dollars on the agencies.

You can't, however, rebuild an intelligence and counter-intelligence capability overnight, expecially when many liberals will continue, to the bitter end, to insist that the Constitution requires that America stand naked before its aggressors.

Actually, the congress continues to shirk its constitutional duty. It is not insuring domestic tranquility, it is not providing for the common defense, it is not promoting the general welfare, and it darn sure is not securing the blessings of liberty for posterity. Those poor kids will be the most heavily indebted posterity in history.

The Congress continues to chisel the armed forces on the arms and ammunition they need. They will not balance the budget, cut social spending, pass a new immigration law, nor fund an adequate civil defense program let alone enact a military draft.

The executive branch shares their spinelessness on these issues. Furthermore it has failed to formulate a coherent foreign policy much less a grand strategy for survival.

I believe ther are two main reasons for this failure of government. One is the generally low caliber, especially in terms of moral courage, of our elected officials.

I'm sorry to have to say that but based on my observations, I can't say anything else. A lot of those guys in Washington know that what they are doing and not doing is wrong, but they simply put their own political welfare ahead of the country's.

Another reason is that a majority of American intellectuals, and I'm using that term in its vocational sense, do not support capitalism, do not support fiscal responsibility, do not support a strong defense, and seemingly do not support America.

I almost drove in a ditch the other day after hearing two academic jerks form the Brookings Institution proclaim that the poor relations between the Soviet Union and the United States are all President Reagan's fault. You would think that President Reagan was the one who shot down a civilian airliner and deployed now intermediate range missiles in Eastern Europe.

These yo-yo's act as if the Soviet Union had not been spewing ut hate America propaganda 24-hours-a-day in 65 languages seven days a week for the past 38 years.

The American people are being deceived by thier own intellectuals. It's the Soviet Union which has outspent the United States in defense for the past decade. It's the Soviet Union which is producing arms at a war-time rate. It's the Soviet Union which has modernized and increase the size of its nuclear forces. It's the Soviet Union which maintains the world's largest spy organization, the world's largest propaganda and disinformation program, the world's tightest censorship, and the world's largest empire created by military aggression. There is no peace movement in the Soviet Union. There is no disarmament agency. There is no public debate. There is a constant stream of propaganda warning Russian children to prepare for a war launched by the evil empire of the United States.

Of course American intellectuals must agonize trying to decide if there is any difference between our minor tactical move in Grenada and Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The bombs in Beirut and in the Capitol and the ones still to come may perhaps explain it to all but the most dense.

Charley Reese writes for Sun Belt Syndicate.

Judge will find other means to penalize Hustler publisher

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge says he will "resort to other means" to penalize Larry Flynt if the publisher can't afford his fines for refusing to name the source of an audio tape important to the John De Lorean cocaine-trafficking case.

U.S District Judge Robert Takasugi on Monday doubled the daily $10 000 contempt-of-court fine he imposed Nov. 15 on the Hustler magazine publisher, but said Flynt did not have to start paying $20,000 until Wednesday.

The tape, which has not been authenticated, supposedly reveals that a government informant threatened De Lorean if the automaker backed out of what prosecutors say was a $24 million cocaine distribution deal intended to save his ailing car company.

New subway a hit with riders

BALTIMORE (AP) — The city's new subway system is a hit with riders, but service will be limited to weekdays for now because there aren't enough cars for weekend service, the head of the Mass Transit Administration says.

"It sure beats the bus," one commuter said Monday after a trip on the eight-mile, $800 million first leg of the system, scheduled for completion in 1987.

MTA Administrator David Wagner said there were a few problems with fare boxes but that most trains were on time. The MTA will wait until more cars are delivered next spring to begin weekend service rather than run "a Saturday service that's not good," he said.

Parents want 'accommodation'

CHURCH HILL, Tenn. (AP) — The parents of seven students suspended a second time for objecting to textbooks on religious grounds want a "reasonable accommodation" from school officials, one father says.

Of 10 children suspended last week from the local middle school for refusing to read books their parents call anti-Christian and un-American were, seven again declined to read the books Monday and were suspended for 10 more days.

Bob Mozert, whose 12-year-old son was among the seven, charged that books used in reading classes contained "anti-capitalist and anti-biblical biases" and advocate "situational ethics." School officials said they found no bias in the books.

Satellite problems plague NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next space shuttle is scheduled for launch Monday morning, but NASA is still trying to solve a new failure on a communications satellite whose operation is crucial to the success of the mission.

Although one antenna on the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite is out of commission and the other is working only in part, NASA still plans to go ahead with the launch, spokesman Jim Kukowski said Monday.

The nine-day mission of Columbia, the first with a billion-dollar orbiting laboratory called Spacelab in the cargo bay, is devoted entirely to more than 70 scientific experiments. Columbia will carry six men.

Legislation raising national debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Compromise legislation raising the national debt ceiling to $1.49 trillion is now law, less than 10 days before the Reagan administration warned that some government checks would start bouncing if the limit wasn't increased.

President Reagan signed the legislation Monday. The government had been operating on a cash only basis since the previous debt limit of $1.389 trillion was reached Nov. 1.

The compromise legislation, approved by the House last Friday, adds $101 billion to the government's line of credit. It was one of the last major pieces of legislation Congress passed before leaving town for a two-month vacation.

Reagan signs veterans bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed into law a $30 million veterans bill despite his reservations about what he called unnecessary and costly compensation provisions in the legislation.

The bill, signed Monday, calls for a study of veterans exposed to radiation, extends Vietnam veterans' counseling centers and provides for community care to keep aging veterans out of institutions.

The bill also establishes a women's advisory committee within the Veterans Administration.

President optimistic about act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cyprus President Spyros Kyprianou says he is encouraged that the United States will help win a reversal of last week's declaration of independence by Turkish Cypriots.

Kyprianou, who met Monday with President Reagan, said he appreciated the United States' firm opposition to the unilateral action that has been declared legally invalid by the United Nations Security Council.

The Greek-Cypriot president of the island's recognized authority said he had "emphasized the need for urgent reversal of this act" and had agreed to keep in touch with the United States regarding the crisis.

Chairman predicts drop in rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker predicts that banks' prime lending rates, which have topped 10 percent for five years, will eventually drop below that level if inflation remains at a moderate pace.

Various government measures of inflation, such as the Consumer Price Index, have been rising at annual rates of 5 percent or less this year — far less than the current prime rate of 11 percent at major banks.

However, Volcker said Monday that many investors and lenders still do not believe that inflation is firmly under control. One reason lenders keep interest rates high is to allow for the possibility that borrowers will be repaying in less-valuable dollars because of inflation.

Senators against deployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Democratic senators say the United States will be in violation of the SALT II treaty early in 1985 if the Reagan administration does not offset the planned deployment of a seventh Trident submarine.

In a letter Monday to President Reagan, the lawmakers said deployment of the missile-firing sub would put the United States over the SALT II ceiling of 1,200 launchers of multiple-warhead ballistic missiles. The SALT II treaty was never ratified by the Senate, but both the United States and the Soviet Union have said they will abide by its limits.

Teacher fired for not signing oath

GROVE, Okla. (AP) — A fourth-grade teacher fired for refusing to sign an oath of loyalty to the state and federal constitutions still thinks "this is the best country in the world."

"Legally, they had every right to do this. Ethically, I wonder if it was needed," Russell Turley said Monday night after he was dismissed by unanimous vote of the Grove Board of Education.

Turley, a 34-year-old Oklahoma native who has taught in the state's school system for more than four years, maintains the oath isn't needed and the state law requiring it is an "anachronistic piece of legislation that should be taken off the books." School officials say they would be breaking the law if they didn't require it.

"I've been in the Boy Scouts and in Up With People and I think this is the best country in the world," Turley said. "But I can't believe Oklahoma still has a law like this."

Turley has 10 days to notify the board whether he will appeal the dismissal, which took effect immediately. He said Monday night that he had not decided whether to pursue an appeal.

"Too many people just don't stand up for what they think is right, and this is a legislative thing and it can be changed," he said.

Turley said he wasn't given a chance to speak during the special Board of Education meeting, called after he refused to sign the oath by a Friday deadline.

School Superintendent Jim Bradford, who recommended that Turley be fired, said Turley could continue teaching without pay until the appeals process is complete.

"You know, Grove public schools did not invent the oath," Bradford said, adding "I'm not going to express my opinion" on the merits of it.

The superintendent said Turley was not allowed to speak Monday night because "he has had over a month now to comply with the law."

Turley said he had refused to sign the oath because it is "a worthless piece of paper." Others who signed it have not lived up to their responsibilities, he said, citing former Oklahoma House Speaker Dan Draper, who is appealing a three-year prison sentence for vote fraud.

"If the system works, you don't need a loyalty oath," Turley said.

The state has had a loyalty oath since 1953. The original was declared unconstitutional in 1968 and a shorter version was written.

The present oath says: "I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America and the Constitution and laws of the State of Oklahoma, and that I will faithfully discharge, according to the best of my ability, the duties of my office of employment."

The state attorney general's office has been asked to research the constitutionality of the current version.

Scientists believe ABC movie optimistic

NEW YORK (AP) — For those who were shocked and disturbed by "The Day After," it will be no comfort to learn that some scientists believe the movie was overly optimistic.

The aftermath of a nuclear attack would in all likelihood be much, much worse, they say.

In the television movie, shown Sunday night on ABC, the survivors of nuclear explosions over Kansas City emerged into bright sunlight.

A more accurate depiction might have had them stumbling blindly through a black, frozen world, as smoke and dust blocked the sun and temperatures plunged — a "nuclear winter," experts say.

According to a report to be published next month in Science magazine, the nuclear winter might be triggered by as few as 100 1-megaton blasts, only a tiny portion of the 15,000 megatons in the arsenals of the United States and the Soviet Union.

These nuclear fireballs would suck smoke, debris and vaporized matter into the atmosphere, the report said. Temperatures might drop to about zero degrees Fahrenheit for at least a month or two — longer, if more bombs were exploded.

"People who didn't receive any radiation or fallout might be dramatically affected by the nuclear winter," said Richard Turco, one of the authors of the upcoming report.

"Even countries way out of the war zone, in the Southern Hemisphere, would be considered possible victims," he said.

Thus the advice to the movie's farmers — that they could scrape off a few inches of topsoil and plant again — was hopelessly in error, according to the report. "There would be no hope of having any crops at all, I would think," Turco said.

The theory of the nuclear winter was publicized last month by Paul Ehrlich of Stanford University and Carl Sagan of Cornell University, among 100 scientists involved in a two-year study of the effects of nuclear war.

Peter Sharfman, who in 1979 directed a study called "The Effects Of Nuclear War" for the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, also found "The Day After" rather tame.

"Given that weapons were used against population centers rather than silos, the movie was optimistic," he said.

The movie "didn't show much in the way of fires, and there would probably be severe fires," and it "didn't show anything like the numbers of refugees that would be expected," he said.

"Another thing completely overlooked is the question of how people are going to get through the winter. I strongly doubt that Kansas farmers keep on the premises a one-year supply of food," said Sharfman, who was with the Department of Defense and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency before joining the Office of Technology Assessment.

If some kind of decontamination was undertaken — even washing away debris with a garden hose — radiation might decline in a matter of weeks or months to the point where survivors could move outdoors again, Sharfman said. But the farmer plowing his field and turning over radioactive debris "might be very badly at risk."

Hospital workers and patients in "The Day After" were told it was safe to be outside for limited periods when radiation had declined to four-tenths of a rad per hour. A rad is an arbitrarily defined measure of radiation exposure.

But even at that rate, 10 days outdoors would be fatal, Sharfman said.

Trouble in paradise for Tech

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Fort Worth Trimble Tech Bulldogs seem to have more on their minds this week than the Class 5A regional playoff battle with Midland Lee, according to head football coach Quintin Robinson.

"We do have more on our minds than just Lee this week. Our morale is low right now and we are working hard in that area," said Robinson Monday after two players quit the team Saturday.

"A lot of our second teamers are dissatisfied about the amount of playing time they are getting. Two players quit on Saturday and there are some others who are unhappy this week. This thing is going to take some work," said Robinson.

RONALD HERNANDEZ, a 224 pound senior, and Ezell Randall, a 180-pound junior, left the team Saturday. Hernandez is Tech's backup center and Randall is a second team defensive end.

Trimble Tech is scheduled to meet Lee's 10-2 Rebels in the regional segment of the state football playoffs at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Amon Carter Stadium, located on the campus of Texas Christian University in Fort Worth.

This is not a time teams would like to see trouble in paradise. It has been a Cinderella year for Trimble Tech, who is in the playoffs for the first time since 1949. Now that they have tasted success, trouble seems to have erupted.

It's been a year of ups and downs for the 9-3 Bulldogs. Dean Stacy was the head coach of Tech until right before the season when he was elevated to the role of vice-principal at one of the Fort Worth high schools. Robinson was called on to guide the team this year.

"I'm really an interim coach," said Robinson. "I've been at Tech five years as an assistant, but when Coach Stacy left, they called on me. We've had some rough spots over the year, but the kids have responded well until this week. There are just some players who feel they should be playing more."

The Bulldogs finished the regular season as the District 6-5A runnerup with a key 27-21 loss to Fort Worth Southwest to end the season, a game that decided the 6-5A title.

But Tech has done better in the playoffs than Southwest. Southwest was eliminated from the playoffs in bi-district play by Wichita Falls Rider in a 21-21 tie. Rider advanced on penetrations and will face Odessa Permian Friday in Wichita Falls at 8 p.m.

Trimble Tech opened the season with a 10-7 loss to Gainesville and later lost in mid-season to Arlington Heights by a 24-13 margin.

THE BULLDOGS pulled a miracle out of the fire in the area round of the playoffs last Friday with a 33-29 upset win over highly favored Euless Trinity. The Bulldogs won that game when quarterback Bobby McCoy hit split end Robert McCann with a 48-yard touchdown pass with 2:07 left in the game.

"It's a game you would like to talk about because we really came from behind to win it. But this thing Saturday takes the lustre off the victory," said Robinson.

But Tech has been tough in the playoffs. In bi-district action, the Bulldogs ousted a favored Denton team by a 24-14 margin and then Trinity in the area playoffs. They keep pulling off miracles and now face the prospect of having to pull off another one against a unified Lee squad.

"Lee appears to be much bigger and a lot stronger than we are," noted Robinson. "I think they also match us in speed, which has been a strength for us this year. I think you have to compare Lee to Trinity. They are both very physical teams."

Robinson is a former football standout at Texas Tech University.

"We'll just wait and see how things turn out, but we will be on hand Friday," said Robinson.

Darryl Strawberry named as NL's top rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — After his first month in the major leagues, Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets was a lot closer to being back in the minors than becoming the National League's Rookie of the Year.

Yet Strawberry, who spent the first month of the 1983 season in Class AAA, overcame his early problems and on Monday was rewarded when he won the NL Rookie of the Year award by a large margin in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"With all the pressure there was when I came up, I was pleased I could turn it around," Strawberry said. "I never questioned my potential."

The gangly outfielder was the only player named on all 24 ballots — two from each NL city — and collected 18 first-place votes, five seconds and one third for a total of 106 points. That far outdistanced Atlanta pitcher Craig McMurtry, who got the remaining six first-place votes and finished with 49 points, and Chicago outfielder Mel Hall, third with 32 points.

Strawberry's victory broke a four-year Los Angeles stranglehold on the NL rookie award. Steve Sax won it last season, preceeded by Fernando Valenzuela, Steve Howe and Rick Sutcliffe.

Strawberry, 21, finished the season with a .257 batting average, 26 home runs and 74 runs batted in for the Mets, who were last in the NL East. He also struck out 128 times.

The 6-foot-6 Strawberry, who was the No. 1 overall pick in the 1980 amateur free agent draft, began the season with Tidewater of the International League and hit .333 in 16 games. With the Mets struggling and the team's attendance sagging, he was called up to the majors May 4.

But in his first 24 games for the Mets, he batted just .161 with three home runs and nine runs batted in.

"At that point in time, I didn't think I'd be in the running," Strawberry said. "I didn't know how my season would progress."

Then, Strawberry began working constantly with Jim Frey, the Mets' batting coach and now manager of the Chicago Cubs, and results followed.

Lee girls capture opener

Rebels start slow, then get tough

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The defending District 4-5A girl's basketball champions looked up in the first quarter at the scoreboard and must have wondered what was going on.

Lee's Rebels were 25-6 last year, and entering the 1983-84 season with three returning starters, makes them a strong favorite to repeat that success. But in the season opener Monday night at Lee against Class 4A Sweetwater, the Rebs began the game in a coma.

LEE TURNED the ball over. They missed shots. They were being outplayed, and trailed by eight through the last few minutes.

Sweetwater never should have played so well. Lee got motivated and mad, and in a very physical duel, outpointed and outhustled Sweetwater after the slow start. The result was a 66-42 win that re-establishes Lee as tough customers in West Taxas basketball circles.

Not that this is anything new for Lee and coach Shirley Stephenson. Ever since Lee began playing the game seven seasons ago, Stephenson's squads have finished at the top of the district heap every year. This group, at least for the last three quarters, shows no signs of changing that legacy.

"It's like somebody told me once, 'It's not how you drive, it's how you arrive,'" said Stephenson. Lee started the game not in drive, but in reverse. But as the game wore on, the Rebels picked up the pressure.

By game's end, Sweetwater looked as shell-shocked as if they'd just seen a re-run of "The Day After" in 3-D. The Rebs went to a nuclear-press with devastating results. In the third quarter, Lee added a little here and a little there in extending a one-point halftime lead to a six-point, 41-35 advantage entering the fourth quarter.

Then the bomb dropped. Lee went full-court with their press and Sweetwater never had a chance. Lee wound up outscoring the Mustangs 25-7 in the last eight minutes, a statistic that is likely to send chills up 4-5A coaches' necks.

"We planned to use it (the press) a lot," Stephenson said, "Because our kids hustle so hard. But we didn't plan on getting that far behind."

SWEETWATER didn't exactly get everything for free. The Mustangs had a capable starting five, but Lee's bench did an excellent job of maintaining and even building on the lead.

And in the fourth quarter, everybody got into the act. Stephenson cleared the bench and began thinking about Pecos, tonight's opponent at Chaparral Center.

Sweetwater's Sandra McCain got the Mustangs on top early with 10 first-quarter points, but Lee tightened up and McCain finished the night with only 18. Lee snapped out of the sleepwalk late in the first quarter and by halftime the Rebs had taken a 30-29 advantage.

After a quick-paced third quarter where Lee got the lead, the Rebs blitzed Sweetwater with a 20-3 surge lead by Tanya Mayberry. Felicia Farias lead Lee with 15 points, but in the decisive fourth quarter, Mayberry provided the spark. She scored 10 of her 11 points in a two-minute span that dazzled the Mustangs and blew the game open.

After Sweetwater had cut the score to 43-37, Mayberry first converted both ends of a one-and-one, then scored the game's next three baskets to stretch the Rebel lead to 14. By the time Sweetwater scored again, the score was 59-38.

Shelly Armstrong added 11 points for the Rebs.

Lee showed remarkable poise, overall, which Stephenson was happy about. "You always hope for that. It helps that some of them have played before. Experience does help," she said.

"The main thing about this team, I think, is desire. Every one of them has it," Stephenson said.

IN LEE JV action, the girls overcame a late Sweetwater rally to win their lid-lifter, 40-39. Lee had broken a tie to push to a 38-34 lead, but the Mustangs exerted relentless effort and Lee narrowly averted defeat.

Sweetwater missed two of three free throws with six seconds left to make it 40-39, then got a break when Lee made an inbounds violation. Sweetwater got the ball in, but Lee swarmed the shooters and SHS never got off a shot.

Coach Linda Caraway's team was lead in scoring by Becky White with nine points. Terri Robles and Nancy DeWitt added eight points each.

New York Jets' punt returner Kirk Springs takes off on a 76-yard punt return to defeat the New Orleans Saints in a Monday night NFL game. The Jets won the game 31-28 with 2:11 left.

Springs springs over New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Kirk Springs surprised the New Orleans Saints with his 76-yard, game-winning punt return, but not his teammates on the New York Jets.

"We needed a big play, and we had a feeling it would come from the special teams tonight," said Jets quarterback Richard Todd.

"I really thought I could break one," said Springs.

Springs' punt return capped a 17-point fourth-quarter explosion that rallied the Jets from a two-touchdown deficit to a 31-28 victory over the Saints Monday Night in a National Football League game.

"We talked before the game about how the special teams were going to figure big in the game — and they certainly did," said Jets Coach Joe Walton.

The Jets had narrowed the gap to just four points on a 37-yard field goal by Pat Leahy 15 seconds into the final period and an 11-yard pass from Todd to wide receiver Jerome Barkum with 4:20 left in the game.

After the kickoff, the Saints had a first down wiped out by a holding call and wound up having to punt on fourth down at their own 36.

Russell Erxleben sailed a high punt 40 yards to Springs, who gathered it in on his own 24.

"I saw someone out of the corner of my eye coming up on my left," Springs said. It was Bobby Johnson, free agent rookie safety for the Saints. Johnson got an arm on Springs, but didn't even slow him down.

"After I got by him, it was clear sailing," Springs said, even though he still had to step through an attempted tackle by John Tice and outleg Erxleben at about midfield.

"After I got past the 50, I looked at Johnny Lynn (another Jets special teams member) to see if anybody else was coming up on me.

"He motioned for me to take it on in."

Springs said the return was carefully set up.

"We kept running right on our returns, so — since this was our last one — I started right, then dipped back into the middle," he said.

"It's not new, but we felt we set it up," Walton said. "We almost broke another one earlier. It finally came through for us. We worked on it last week."

The Jets tied the game at 7-7 midway through the first quarter on a 34-yard interception return by linebacker Lance Mehl and again at 14-14 on a 1-yard run by Marion Barber with just over four minutes to go in the half.

But Springs' punt return gave the Jets the only lead they held all night.

The Saints' George Rogers, who rushed for 84 yards on 26 carries, scored a first-quarter touchdown on a 14-yard run and a third-quarter touchdown on a 2-yard sprint.

"It was the finest comeback win I've ever had," Walton said.

Midland's top secret is out

The secret Midland has jealously guarded the last two years is out.

Spud Webb, the 5-7, darling of West Texas, in one TV appearance became the darling of a nation.

No less an authority than Al McGuire confirmed that everything Midlanders have been seeing the last couple of years was no mirage. The kid from Dallas is the genuine goods.

In fact, Al confirmed that, like a beer commercial, Spud is everything everybody has said about him and less. "They list him as 5-7, but it's more like 5-5."

Acutally, Al, it's more like 5-4. A girl reporter in the R-T Energy department met Spud on a visit to the office after Webb's freshman year at MC and was not only thrilled, but horrified, exclaiming without the slightest hint of tact, "You're not 5-6. I'm 5-5 and I'm taller than you are."

McGuire questioned Spud's weight as well, "They list him at 135 pounds...no way, even if he ate a bunch of bananas before the weigh-in."

SPUD MADE his debut for North Carolina State's defending NCAA champions, a team expected to be blown out by Houston's loaded Cougars, the pride and joy of the Southwest Conference, just like they were supposed to have been in the NCAA finals.

In fact, NC State is held in such low regard this year, the Wolfpack is picked to finish fourth or fifth in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The day before the game, Webb was the hit of the pre-game workout in Springfield, Mass., and obviously the crowd's favorite when play began Saturday.

Folks who had never seen him before were delighted with his performance early in the game, the little kid trying to play the big man's game and almost getting away with it. But for Midlanders who had watched Spud perform the impossible for two years, this wasn't the same Spud Webb they had been accustomed to watching. He was playing under wraps.

HE HIT a couple of 22-footers late in the first half and loosened up. Loosened up, shucks, he took charge of the proceedings until fouling out, but by that time what had been a close game was well in hand. Spud had 18 points on seven of 11 from the field, pulled down four rebounds, made three steals and contributed five assists in his 26 minutes and even drove the lane on Akeem Olajuwon for a layup before fouling out. Naturally, just like Midland said they would, the crowd went wild and this wasn't even a Raleigh crowd.

IF MCGUIRE'S reaction to Spud is any indication, we'll see a lot more of the former Chaparral star on TV than had originally been planned.

The best thing about watching Spud on TV is the replays. At Chaparral Center, you were never sure that you really saw what you saw. Saturday we got to watch that floating, delayed underhand, fingerspin layup three or four times.

But the best thing about the game was that it proved Spud can handle himself quite well in the big time. No one has to make any excuses for his size.

"Spud ignited us and our guards shot well all day," said his coach Jim Valvano. "Everyone likes to talk about how Spud can jump, but the fact is, he's a good basketball player. He doesn't get enough credit for all his skills."

And the dimension Spud adds to the Wolfpack, may make ACC experts take a second look at NC State and it's probable finish in this year's race.

With this run Sunday against Kansas City, Dallas' Tony Dorsett became the ninth player in NFL history to reach 8,000 yards rushing. He had 108 yards against Kansas City in a 41-21 victory.

Dorsett marches into elite ranks

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tony Dorsett keeps passing National Football League milestones like an automobile speeds by highway signs.

Dorsett's 108 yards rushing in Dallas' 41-21 victory over Kansas City Sunday gives him 8,051 yards and makes him only the ninth player to reach 8,000.

He also became the first Cowboy ever to get 10,000 combined rushing-and-receiving yards.

Dorsett has rushed for over 1,000 yards in six of his seven NFL seasons.

The strike-shortened 1982 campaign kept him from making 1,000 yards for the first time in his career which dates all the way back to Hopewell High School in Aliquippa, Pa. In nine games, he had 745 yards.

Starting in 1971, Dorsett has rushed for 1,000 or more yards 12 times in 13 years. His lifetime rushing total is 18,100 yards.

"This is the stretch drive, the dash for cash," said Dorsett. "We have to run as well as we pass if we expect to accomplish the things we set out to do in July."

Dorsett ran 28 and 32 yards for touchdowns against Kansas City as Dallas extended its record to 10-2.

"I guess 1,000 yards is still the criterion for a great back in the NFL, but I think for me it's just a mediocre season," said Dorsett. "I'll have to get 1,600 before I can say I had an outstanding year.

"It's my intention to play 10 years and after that I will reassess my desire to play."

He then joked, "Jim Brown's mark just might be in reach, I guess, but haven't you heard, Jim Brown is coming back."

Dorsett has had to live with criticism that he's a fumbler and gets hurt easily.

Actually, Dorsett fumbles only once every 34 carries and has missed only three games in seven years with the Cowboys.

"My whole career has been one of making people eat their words," Dorsett said. "When I came out of high school I remember Ara Parsegian's No. 1 assistant saying I was too skinny to play."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who has lengthened Dorsett's career with a relatively light work load, said, "Tony was the difference. He made the two big runs for touchdowns."

Dorsett called the Dallas running game "disgraceful" earlier in the week after a 24-23 loss to San Diego.

Landry joked, "I asked him (Dorsett) if he ever heard of the 'Bootsie' play where the offensive line lets the gates open and don't block anybody."

Dorsett said he wished he had kept his mouth shut.

"I've been in the league seven years now and you'd think I'd know better," Dorsett said. "I wish I hadn't said those things."

Violets return to cage scene

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It has been a long time between jump shots for New York University.

In 1971, battling a financial crisis that prompted university-wide cutbacks, NYU dropped basketball and its accompanying $500,000 Division I budget. Now the Violets are back, playing in Division III, the lowest level of NCAA competition, an unlikely place to find the country's largest privately supported university.

For NYU, though, it's a step up.

Here was a school in the heart of New York, surrounded by concrete courts where the city game has always flourished; a school which produced All-Americas like Dolph Schayes, Satch Sanders, Cal Ramsey, Mal Graham and Barry Kramer; a school where for a dozen winters, basketball was dormant.

"Those were very difficult years," said athletic director Dan Quilty, "difficult for survival of the department and difficult to keep up the morale of the staff."

It was toughest on Mike Muzio, who had been promoted to the head coaching job less than a month before NYU dropped basketball. Muzio learned about it on his car radio, while driving a recruit home.

"It was a tremendous shock," Muzio said. "We had five kids lined up and then ..."

Of the 22 students playing varsity or freshman basketball at NYU at the time, 20 transferred to other Division I programs. Quilty tried to hold together the athletic department and Muzio coached club and junior varsity basketball.

NYU sold its Bronx campus, including Alumni Gym. Without a home court, restoring the sport was moot.

THE UNIVERSITY survived its dollar crisis and turned the financial corner, evolving into one of the top academic institutions in the East with a handsome new library and a distinguished faculty. In 1979, ground was broken for the $16 million Coles Sports and Recreation Center and in 1981, the facility, complete with basketball court, opened. All that was needed now was a basketball team.

Two years later, NYU has that, too.

There is a rich basketball heritage at the school. In 1919-20, NYU went 13-1 and was invited to the National Championship Tournament (forerunner to the NCAA and NIT playoffs) in Atlanta. Led by All-America Howard Cann, the Violets won four games there and were acclaimed national and world champions.

Cann went on to coach the team for 35 seasons, assembling a 409-232 record for a winning percentage of .638. Six NYU squads went to the NCAA tournament, including the 1945 runnerup. Eight played in the NIT, where NYU finished second in 1948. The Violets were 45-1 over a three-season stretch from 1933-35, including a 25-18 victory over Notre Dame on Dec. 29, 1934, as part of the first college basketball doubleheader ever played in New York's Madison Square Garden.

IN THOSE days, NYU played in high-powered Division I. Now the Violets return at a less ambitious level. There are no athletic scholarships in Division III and the schedule reflects the low-key approach with games against schools like Skidmore and Yeshiva, Muhlenberg and Widener. That's a long way from heavyweights like North Carolina and Notre Dame, Ohio State and St. John's, all once perennial rivals. Still, it's a start and Muzio and Quilty are grateful for it.

"We got condolence calls from a lot of schools when we dropped basketball," said Quilty. "And the same schools called to welcome us back."

Muzio recruited nine freshmen, promoted four players from his 12-3 junior varsity and added three walkons. Recruiting wasn't as tough as it might seem for a coach with no athletic scholarships to offer.

"I call it logical basketball," he said. "If you're a Division III player, we offer more than any other Division III school can. The academics, New York City, an Ivy-type business school located near Wall Street. All of that is a big edge. And a player can start for us as a freshman where he might have to sit at a Division I school."

The Violets, with 10 freshmen and six juniors, open at home Nov. 26 against traditional rival City College of New York.

Basketball season begins

With Midland Lee still playing football, it's hard to believe that the high school basketball season is ready for launching. But tonight, all four of Midland's high school teams will be in action.

Lee will open its cage season in hopes of a big rebound over last year's 3-24 record when they host Class 4A Snyder at the Lee gym at 8 p.m.

Midland High, 16-14 last year and third in the District 4-5A chase, will host 4-5A member Big Spring in a non-conference game at 8 p.m. in the MHS gym.

The MHS girls start the season with a short trip to Greenwood for an 8 p.m. meeting with the Rangerette varsity. MHS' girls got their first taste of the playoffs last year after finishing as 4-5A's runnerup.

The Lee girls, who opened their season Monday with a victory over Sweetwater, will entertain Pecos in an 8 p.m. contest at Chaparral Center.

The Lee girls, the defending 4-5A champs, got the early jump on the season Monday, but after tonight, all the teams will be wet behind the ears.

'Horns can do without 12th man

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns had their own "12th man" last Saturday, and it almost cost them the football game — and a Cotton Bowl bid — against Baylor.

This week No. 2-ranked Texas plays Texas A&M and its non-scholarship kickoff team — part of its "12th man" tradition, which refers to A&M student body support of the Aggie football team.

On Saturday, Texas was leading Baylor 17-0 halfway through the third quarter and had forced the Bears to punt.

A Longhorn player got a sideline shove and was seen charging onto the field just before the punt, and officials penalized Texas 15 yards for having 12 men on the field.

The penalty gave Baylor a first down at its 44-yard line, and the Bears scored, later getting two more touchdowns to make Texas sweat out a 24-21 victory that clinched the Longhorns 18th Cotton Bowl berth.

"It's not his fault," Akers said of the extra player. "He was sent out there — just poor communications on our sidelines. ... When you get right down to it, it would be me (who was at fault). It was my fault, not his."

"We gave them a great amount of motivation when had that 12th man out there," Akers said.

He also told his weekly news conference Monday that A&M freshman quarterback Kevin Murray is even more dangerous than Baylor quarterbacks Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke, who threw for 320 yards and two touchdowns against Texas' No. 1-rated pass defense.

"Their quarterbacks did an excellent job of sitting in there and waiting until the very last second, and, of course, they took the physical punishment that came with it," Akers said. "We were on top of them but they kept their poise, and I'll tell you there was some great, great receiving that afternoon."

Texas, 10-0, and A&M, 5-4-1, play Saturday at College Station in a nationally televised game. Kickoff is at 11:35 a.m., CST.

Asked to compare Murray to Carlson and Muecke, Akers said, "He's an excellent passer himself. He can put the ball in places that a lot of people can't, but he adds something else — he's got more running ability than those other guys have."

"He's a passer that can really scramble," Akers said of Murray. "He's got speed like the running backs — and agility, but he's a passer. He's not going to come out and try to beat you by running 30 option plays. He's got a legitimate arm."

Akers also said the A&M passing offense "has more variety (than Baylor). One big difference, they go to the tight end and get the ball to their backs probably more than Baylor."

Akers said the A&M defense "pretty much has the same people they had last year, but they've shown a lot improvement. (End) Ray Childress has really improved. He was a good football player a year ago. He's twice as good as he was last year."

"No one has ever questioned how much talent Texas A&M has," Akers said. "Texas A&M has as much talent as anyone in the country — they always do."

Asked if his teams always got excited about playing A&M, Akers said, "Yep. It's a big rivalry, a longtime rivalry. I can't imagine either team not being ready to play. My experience has been they could care less what they've done before — either team."

A's obtain Bill Caudill

SEATTLE (AP) — In dire need of a starting catcher, the Seattle Mariners have shipped ace reliever Bill Caudill to the Oakland A's in exchange for Bob Kearney.

Caudill recorded 26 saes for the 60-102 Mariners last season. He was one of the few bright spots during a season in which Manager Rene Lachemann got fired. Dan O'Brien, the club's president and general manager, was fired after the season was completed.

Caudill had speculated his healthy salary would cause Seattle owner George Argyros to trade him.

But Hal Keller, the Mariners' new general manager, denied that Caudill's salary was a factor in Monday's swap.

"That had absolutely nothing to do with this," he said.

Caudill reportedly made a base salary of $350,000 last season.

Atlanta Falcons' receiver Billy "White Shoes" Johnson (81) watches from ground (top left) as teammates and San Francisco 49ers fight for ball (top right). Johnson reaches for loose ball (bottom left) and catches a 47-yard "Big Ben" pass to score winning touchdown in last two seconds Sunday.

Falcons awed by miracle

'White Shoes' brings Atlanta alive

ATLANTA (AP) — Billy "White Shoes" Johnson couldn't describe the feeling, but admitted it was "something else to be part of a miracle."

The bespectacled Canadian Football League castoff has had the city talking since Sunday when he scored on a 47-yard "Hail Mary" pass by Steve Bartkowski on the final play of the game to give the Atlanta Falcons a 28-24 National Football League victory over San Francisco.

NOT ONLY was the reception considered a miracle after deflecting off the hands San Francisco's Keena Turner and Atlanta's Stacey Bailey at the 5-yard line, the ensuing run by Johnson may have been more incredible.

"You may never see that kind of play ever again, and the run was simply amazing," Falcons' Coach Dan Henning said Monday after viewing the films.

Johnson, who was picked up as a free agent by the Falcons last season after being released by Montreal of the CFL, had the day off. But said he saw films of the play on television.

"In a million years, it will probably never happen again," Johnson said.

"It's something to be part of a miracle. It's just totally different. I really can't describe it," he said.

Johnson, who leads the Falcons in receptions with 47 for 531 yards and four touchdowns, said he had never been involved nor seen a play like that, except on film.

"I've seen clips, especially involving this ball club, which seems to be a common occurence. But I've never been involved in one until Sunday," Johnson said.

The Falcons pulled off similar plays twice in one year — both against the New Orleans Saints in 1978 — and both plays resulted in last-minute 20-17 victories.

The play, called the "Rocket," lined up three wide receivers on the left side of the field, and they head for the end zone. Bartkowski just throws the ball up for grabs.

After the deflection by Bailey, Johnson, who just regaining his feet after slipping, took the ball about 2 feet from the ground, circled to the center of the field to about the 7-yard line.

HE GOT a block from former Midland Lee and Nebraska star Junior Miller, then San Francisco's Carlton Williamson missed a tackle at about the 5. Ronnie Lott was waiting for him at the goal as Eric Wright hit Johnson at the 2 but the shifty, 5-foot-9, 170-pounder dived and projected the ball about 1 foot over the line.

Johnson, who had played seven years with the Houston Oilers and is the NFL's career punt-return leader, then went into his patented touchdown dance before being mobbed by his teammates, hoisted on their shoulders and carried off the field.

That also was a first for Johnson and a rarity in the NFL.

"I don't ever remember a player being carried off the field. It's a first for me. It's a great feeling, an honor," Johnson said. "It felt strange when they did that."

Irish take Liberty bid

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Two days of well-publicized indecision have come to an end with Notre Dame accepting the Liberty Bowl invitation, the 11th post-season appearance for the tradition-rich Irish.

The decision Monday to accept the bid for the Dec. 29 game in Memphis, Tenn., was reached only after considerable deliberation.

Cause of the hesitation by the Notre Dame administration was the 6-5 record by Coach Gerry Faust's Irish, who offered to back out if Liberty Bowl officials wanted some other team in the wake of Saturday's 23-22 loss to Air Force.

On Sunday, however, Reggie Barnes, a Liberty Bowl spokesman, said, "We want Notre Dame all the way. We decided last week to invite them win, lose or draw."

Then Sunday night, Irish team members voted to accept the invitation, and Notre Dame officials met Monday to consider the bid.

After Saturday's loss, Faust and several players said they still would welcome the opportunity to participate in the bowl game.

Senior quarterback Blair Kiel said the bowl trip might become a "true test of character."

But before the Irish voted, there was much debate at the team meeting. Faust was not present.

According to players who requested anonymity, several of their teammates spoke until Kiel requested a vote. In the past, only letter winners were allowed to vote on a bid and that was the procedure first tried Sunday. But after the non-lettermen left the room, some of the players inside went to Faust and requested that the entire team be allowed to vote.

Faust then directed the non-letter winners back into the room.

One player said he thought the seniors were split about going to the Liberty Bowl and the underclassmen were mostly in favor. Another said the whole team was split.

Notre Dame's first bowl appearance was in the 1925 Rose Bowl, where the Irish beat Stanford 27-15. For many years thereafter, the school policy was against any bowl appearances, and the next bowl game was in 1970 when former Coach Ara Parseghian's Irish lost to Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

Top nine remains same

By The Associated Press

Led by 11-0 Nebraska, the top nine teams remained the same today for the second week in a row in the Associated Press college football poll, while Air Force made the Top Twenty for the first time in 11 years and East Carolina cracked the rankings for only the second time ever.

With 59 of the 60 sports writers and sportscasters on the AP's nationwide panel voting, Nebraska, which has been No. 1 in every poll this season, received 58 first-place ballots and 1,179 of a possible 1,180 points. The Orange Bowl-bound Cornhuskers were idle last weekend and close out their regular season Saturday at Oklahoma.

Runner-up Texas, No. 2 for the 10th consecutive week, defeated Baylor 24-21 to earn the host spot in the Cotton Bowl. The Longhorns, who wind up their regular season Saturday at Texas A&M, received the other first-place vote and 1,118 points.

Third-place Auburn was idle and received 1,052 points. The Sugar Bowl-bound Tigers meet Alabama in Birmingham on Dec. 3.

Illinois, the No. 4 team, clinched its first Big Ten title in 20 years by defeating Northwestern 56-24. The Illini, headed for the Rose Bowl, received 977 points.

Fifth-place Miami, Nebraska's Orange Bowl opponent, completed a 10-1 regular season a week ago. The Hurricanes got 962 points.

Sun Bowl-bound Southern Methodist held sixth place with a 17-0 victory over Arkansas and totaled 878 points. The Mustangs play Houston Saturday in Tokyo.

Seventh-place Georgia was not scheduled last wewekend. The Bulldogs, who meet Texas in the Cotton Bowl, wind up against Georgia Tech on Saturday. They received 776 points.

Eighth-place Michigan, Auburn's Sugar Bowl foe, edged Ohio State 24-21 and received 761 points, while the losers dropped from 10th to 14th.

Brigham Young remained No. 9 with a 55-7 rout of Utah. The Cougars, who face Missouri in the Holiday Bowl, got 686 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten, Gator Bowl-bound Iowa moved up from 11th to 10th by crushing Minnesota 61-10 and receiving 647 points.

The Second Ten consists of Florida, Clemson, Alabama, Ohio State, Boston College, Pittsburgh, Maryland, Air Force, West Virginia and East Carolina.

Last week, it was Iowa, Florida, Clemson, West Virginia, Washington, Alabama, Pitt, B.C., Missouri and Maryland.

But Washington was upset by Washington State 17-6 and Missouri lost to Kansas 37-27. That made room for 8-2 Air Force, a 23-22 winner over Notre Dame, and 8-3 East Carolina, which took Southern Mississippi 10-6. Air Force last appeared in the ratings in 1972. East Carolina's only previous appearance was a tie for 20th at midseason in 1976. The Pirates' three losses have been by a combined 13 points to Miami, Florida and Florida State.

McCallum is real key for Navy

ANNPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy Coach Gary Tranquill may have a few new offensive wrinkles in mind for Army, but the basic game plan remains the same: Give the ball to Napoleon McCallum.

And, why not? The swift and powerful junior tailback already has established 14 Naval Academy records and he is the nation's leading all-purpose runner with an average of 217.8 yards a game.

"We always have a few different things we get ready," Tranquill said of Friday's game against Army in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif. "But you can't fool them forever. Once or twice a game is about all you can get."

That translates into the usual heavy workload for McCallum, who winds up with the ball on 50 percent of Navy's offensive plays.

In addition to rushing for a school record 1,405 yards on 301 carries this season, McCallum has caught 24 passes for 166 yards. He also has returned 21 punts for 272 yards and gained another 355 yards on 15 kickoff runbacks for a total of 2,178 yards.

His per-game average of 217.8 yards is the fifth highest NCAA all-purpose total in history.

"I hope he has a good game," was Tranquill's succinct and understated observation at a news conference Monday. "If he does, we'll be in business."

Both teams go into their traditional regular season finale with 2-8 records, each needing a victory to salvage something from a dismal campaign.

Rice continues coach search

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Cincinnati Coach Watson Brown has been interviewed by Rice University for the yacant head coaching job, a source has told The Associated Press.

Neither Brown nor Cincinnati Athletic Director Mike McGee could be reached for comment.

Ralph O'Connor, head of the Rice selection committee, declined to confirm Brown's interview but said the committee could be ready to announce its new head coach by Wednesday.

"We've have made a recommendation to our president (Dr. Norman Hackerman)," O'Connor said Monday. "We will let him make the decision. We could have something by as early as Wednesday."

Brown, 33, has been at Cincinnati for one season. In his first game as head coach, Cincinnati scored a 14-3 upset victory over Penn State.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, quoting sources, reported that Rice had been offered a $1.2 million package for five years.

Brown, who returned from Houston in a private jet after meeting with a search committee, could not be contacted. His telephone was busy all Monday evening..

Mike McGee, Cincinnati athletic director, said he had met with Brown.

"I dont want to make any kind of statement right now," McGee said. McGee noted, however, that as of Monday night Brown was "still the head coach at the University of Cincinnati. He has not left."

On Saturday, Brown was rumored to be on the list of coaches sought to replace the fired Paul Wiggin at Stanford. Brown said then: "It doesn't take long for the rumors to start. I like Cincinnati and plan to stay here and help build this program."

Brown started his coaching career at his alma mater, Vanderbilt, as a graduate assistant in 1973. He served as an assistant coach at East Caolina, Jacksonville State and Texas Tech before getting his first head coaching job at Austin Peay, where he compliled a 14-8 record over the 1979 and 1980 seasons.

Brown was offensive coordinator at Vanderbilt for the 1981 and 1982 seasons before taking over at Cincinnati last December.

Brown's name was added to a list of prospects that already included Oklahoma State's Jimmy Johnson and Mississippi State's Emory Bellard.

Johnson said Monday he would like to take advantge of good recruiting seasons at Oklahoma State and had no plans to leave.

"Next year, we will have 22 seniors and 19 juniors returning," Johnson said. "We should have a good year and I want to be around to reap the benefits of all the hard recruiting we've done."

Bellard's Mississippi State team finished the season with a 3-8 record, including Saturday's disappointing 24-23 loss to Mississippi.

Bellard led the Bulldogs to back to back bowl appearances in 1980 and 1981 but has been criticized this season.

Mississippi State Athletic Director Carl Maddox said Monday, "If Coach Bellard wants to remain at Mississippi State, I'll encourage him to to remain. Like w've done every year, we'll sit down and I'll talk with him and we'll review our plans for next year."

Bellard said late Monday that he had not been contacted by Rice officials and declined comment.

Rice is seeking a replacement for Ray Alborn, who resigned effective at the end of the season. The Owls, whose last winning season was in 1963, finished 1-10 this season.

'Greedy' Bennett sets record

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Ben Bennett concedes that he may be regarded as greedy, but the Duke quarterback enjoyed a special satisfaction when he became the NCAA's all-time leader in career passing yardage.

It was something he had vowed to do as a freshman.

"Mark Herrmann was just setting an NCAA record. I wanted to throw for more," he said. "Maybe that's greedy, maybe that's selfish. But I wanted to be No. 1. Duke gave me that opportunity and I think I came through pretty well for them."

With a 323-yard effort against North Carolina last Saturday, Bennett raised his career yardage total to 9,614, almost 100 yards ahead of the mark set by Brigham Young's Jim McMahon.

The Duke senior emphasizes that his achievement was not accomplished without help.

"I am part of the team. Any accomplishments that I've achieved have been because of that team," Bennett said. "So, when people see my name in the book, they have to realize that I didn't do that by myself."

Like many of Bennett's efforts at Duke, the record was set during a loss — the Blue Devils dropped a 34-27 decision to the Tar Heels. For his four years, Duke went 17-27 with two winning seasons of 6-5 each.

"I'm sorry we didn't win more games, but I'm pleased with the fact that because of what everybody else did with me, my name is going to be in the record books," said the Sunnyvale, Calif., native.

With 13 Atlantic Coast Conference and six NCAA records to his credit, Bennett barely edged Maryland quarterback Boomer Esiason for the Associated Press player of the year honors in the ACC.

His national records include most passes completed in a quarter (20) and most yards gained by a freshman (469, against Wake Forest).

In reaching the record, Bennett set a torrid pace. He hit 108 of 148 passes for a 73 percent average in Duke's final four games, three of which were come-from-behind victories. A 442-yard performance against North Carolina State helped set up the last-game effort that gave him the NCAA mark.

"Coming into this year, all I was concerned with was that my performance would be better," Bennett said. "As the season went along, I began to realize that it was much more important to the team that I get everybody around me playing better, rather than just myself improving."

During the last two years, Bennett hit 541 of 843 passes for 6,119 yards and 37 touchdowns. He likely would have surpassed the 10,000-yard barrier had he not been injured as a sophomore and missed three games.

The team concept was never more evident than this season, when three of Bennett's receivers were in the top five in conference pass receiving statistics. Tailback Mike Grayson and wide receiver Mark Militello were first and second, respectively, while tight end Scott Russell was fifth.

Bennett completed 300 of 469 passes for 17 touchdowns and 3,086 yards this year under new head coach Steve Sloan. The two did not share similar offensive strategies at the beginning.

"Coach Sloan's idea was to move the ball down the field slowly, keep the defense off the field and then score points. It was something I wasn't used to," Bennett said. "It took us a while to realize we were both moving toward the same goal, but we were going about it in different ways."

Primed for a professional career, Bennett said he will abide by the team concept if it means another assault on a record book.

Texas man sentenced to prison in death of Louisiana man

HAHNVILLE, La. (AP) — A Texas man accused of the 1976 hired killing of a New Orleans theater manager has been sentenced to five years in prison after pleading guilty to a lesser charge.

Court records show Charles Musick pleaded guilty in district court last week in the Nov. 26, 1976 death of Larry Jones, 34, who was strangled and thrown into the marsh below a highway bridge.

Musick is a former assistant to Robert C. Thetford, former owner of a chain of adult theaters in 13 states.

Musick and Larry Girard testified against Thetford in a federal trial in Dallas in 1980. Musick said Thetford gave him $4,000 to pay a hit man to kill Jones. Musick said Thetford was concerned that Jones would testify in a federal investigation of Thetford's theaters.

Dallas to clean up for convention

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas will begin sprucing up for the 1984 Republican National Convention by asking citizens to clean up their neighborhoods, officials said.

Dallas Housing and Neighborhood Services Director Robert McElearney said the city will ask residents politely first before it begins issuing cititations and levying fines.

Penny Tadman, McElearney's administrative assistant, told the Mayor's Neighborhood Advisory Committee that the cleanup and education effort arose "mostly because of the convention," but also because the department has a longstanding policy of aggressively enforcing city housing codes.

Heart institute to be established

AUSTIN (AP) — Seton Medical Center officials announced Monday that they are establishing a heart institute to serve a 10-county Central Texas area.

An endowment of $1 million has been made available to the institute from the estate of Frank and Mary Reifschlager of Houston. Seton administrator Judith Smith challenged the directors of the Seton Fund to match the $1 million donation.

A task force led by Robert Hardesty, president of Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos, will plan the institute, which is expected to begin operating in the spring.

White appoints commission

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Monday appointed Cappy Eads of Belton, Mario Santos Jr. of Laredo, Victor Strecher of Huntsville and Myra McDaniel of Austin to the Criminal Justice Planning Council.

Eads is Bell County district attorney, Santos is Webb County sheriff, Strecher is director of the Criminal Justice Center at Sam Houston State University and Ms. McDaniel is the governor's general counsel.

They will all serve at the pleasure of the governor.

Farm road will be upgraded

AUSTIN (AP) — The state highway commission Monday approved the rehabilitation of a 10-mile section of Farm 1960 from Dayton to the Harris County line.

The road will be upgraded to accommodate heavy trucks hauling brine water and energy products to and from salt domes in the area.

Small plane 'breaks up'

EL PASO (AP) — Authorities were trying to determine why a single-engine aircraft "just broke up" about 40 miles east of this far West Texas city, killing its lone occupant, a state trooper said.

A 59-year-old Tucson, Ariz., man, Robert Humphrey, was ferrying the new craft to a flying club in his home city when the plane went down Monday evening, authorities said.

Humphrey was flying toward the El Paso airport about 6:25 p.m. when the airport tower lost radar contact with him. Five minutes later, several pilots reported to the tower that they had picked up signals from a "homing-type device" that activates after a crash, according to Charles Eichhorn, a Department of Public Safety trooper.

"We don't know whether he was trying to land or if the weather forced him down," Eichhorn said. "About that time there were high winds and dust out there."

The trooper added that the plane had not exploded or caught fire, but rather, "just broke up."

The downed aircraft was located west of the Cornudas in Hudspeth County. The aircraft's electronic clock had stopped at 6:26 p.m., the apparent time of the crash.

Eichhorn said that the left wing tip hit the ground first, sending the plane into a tumble which tore the right wing. It came to rest nose down.

The Federal Aviation Administration was expected to send an investigator to the scene today.

Germany's child suicide rate up

Every fourth West German has at some time contemplated suicide, and the number who do kill themselves is rising, according to a new survey. It showed that suicides by children aged 10 to 15 increased almost 25 percent between 1971 and 1981. It was 10 percent for youngsters between 15 and 20. Adults suicides rose only 5.5 percent.

Students contract typhoid

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Trinity University officials, bugged by a typhoid outbreak on campus, have issued an alert to students, faculty and staff members in hopes of tracing the cause of the infectious disease.

Three students remained hospitalized in "pretty good shape" after contracting the bacterial infection, said Dr. Robert Bell, head of the Communicable Disease Control division of the Metropolitan Health District.

A spokesman at the private university, which has an enrollment of about 3,100, said there was a "slight chance" the disease could spread further when students scattered for the Thanksgiving holidays.

"We just issued a brief, matter-of-fact statement saying that some students have contracted the disease and to please contact a doctor if they notice symptoms while they're home," spokesman James Hartford said.

"It wouldn't be good to have them scattered all over the country with this disease," he said Monday. "There's not a good chance, but there is a chance that they could spread it further."

The three students with confirmed cases of typhoid, which usually is contracted through contaminated food or water, had no known connection other than eating in the three on-campus cafeterias, Bell said.

The cafeterias were scoured for possible clues Monday, but came up with "a clean bill of health," he said.

"We're still checking out the various food sources, but these kids could have eaten anywhere in the area," he said.

Two of the students lived in separate Trinity dormitories and the third lived off-campus, Bell said. Authorities refused to release their names or hometowns.

In 1981, almost 80 people contracted typhoid before the outbreak was traced to a San Antonio food vendor.

Bell said the number of cases at Trinity could climb higher since the incubation period for the disease is 30 days, and that medical authorities may never learn what caused the disease.

"There's no way you can even tell when they got their exposure," he said. "We don't think it has anything to do with the water supply because the water supply is cleaned quite frequently."

Courts again playing role in future of Getty Oil Co.

By The Los Angeles Times — Washsington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Sarah C. Getty was 78 and ailing when her wealthy oilman husband died in 1930, willing her the bulk of his $10 million estate. But neither her age nor her health deterred her son, Jean Paul Getty, from waging a battle to wrest from her control of the family oil company.

A half-century later, little has changed in the Getty clan, where family disputes are often settled in the courts. Seven years after J. Paul Getty's death, one of his sons is bidding for control of Getty Oil Co., and nothing less than the future of the Los Angeles-based company may be at stake.

Documents filed last week in Los Angeles County Superior Court indicate that Gordon P. Getty, 49, the patriarch's youngest surviving son, is pushing the company to spin off its oil and gas properties in royalty trusts. Such trusts pay oil and gas profits directly to shareholders — an arrangement that large oil companies tend to view as a form of slow death because it deprives them of cash flow to spend searching for new reserves.

Getty Oil's managers and Gordon's brother, a 50-year-old London recluse, are trying to thwart him by challenging his role as the sole trustee of the Sarah C. Getty Trust. The trust owns 40.2 percent of Getty Oil's shares and generates $82.7 million in annual dividend income for six Getty heirs.

Meanwhile, a so-called standstill agreement in which the trust and the J. Paul Getty Museum, the company's second largest shareholder with 11.8 percent of Getty Oil's stock, agreed not to sell their shares during the next year in exchange for certain management concessions has led Wall Street to conclude there must have been a possibility Gordon Getty wanted to sell.

THE WEEK THE standstill agreement was announced, the company's shares rose $5.875 in trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Getty Oil's shares closed Friday at $72, down $3.375 for the week. That makes the 31.8 million shares that Gordon Getty controls worth about $2.3 billion.

For most of its history, the company has been a one-man show with a reputation for stodginess. In recent years, it became known as a company with such a lousy track record for finding new oil that it was already in a process of gradual liquidation.

Yet, by most of the yardsticks that shareholders cherish, the company has been relatively well run. Although its return on the equity of shareholders has been mediocre over the last five years, Getty Oil outdid all the international oil companies in the 1982 fiscal year and performed well above the industry median, according to Forbes magazine's annual industry review.

Further, its net profit margin, earnings per share, return on total capital and growth of sales also have bested all the biggest oil companies for the last five years and have been above the median for the largest oil industry members, the review shows.

With recent speculation in its stock, Getty Oil is trading at 13 times its earnings per share.

"Getty is selling for closer to its real value than most of the large companies," says Ann Mobley, a vice president and oil analyst for E.F. Hutton & Co. in Houston.

NONETHELESS, rumblings persist that the company could be sold or broken up in royalty trusts. Part of the reason is a malaise that all Big Oil has suffered of late. As Sidney R. Petersen, Getty Oil chairman and chief executive, puts it: "Most of the oil industry for the last couple years has been worth more dead than alive."

In Getty's case, the assets of the company upon liquidation are valued at $167.45 a share by John S. Herold Inc., a respected assets appraisal firm. Yet, even the current high stock price is little more than half that.

But suspicions that big changes could be in the offing for staid old Getty Oil also stem from the nature of Gordon Getty. A man whom one former Getty Oil employee says was "what my kids would call 'out to lunch' in the 1960s," Gordon now is exhibiting signs of an active interest in getting more value out of the one-time family business.

A petition filed last week by Los Angeles attorney Seth M. Hufstedler on behalf of a minor child of J. Paul Getty Jr. seeks the appointment of a corporate co-trustee for the trust because Gordon Getty allegedly wants to maximize the trust's income at the expense of its principal — an apparent reference to creating a royalty trust.

GORDON GETTY could not be reached for comment.

"I can see someone going through this line of reasoning," says one Wall Street merger specialist who asked not to be identified. "Here's the major shareholder saying he's not getting enough out of his major asset. Anything profitable to him will be profitable to the rest of the shareholders, so the time to get on the bandwagon is now."

A healthy affection for profits is a venerable Getty family tradition.

Oil began flowing in the Getty bloodlines early in the century when George Getty — Sarah's husband and Jean Paul's father— made a fortune in the Oklahoma oil rush. Persuaded to join the family business, young J. Paul spudded his first well in 1915, formed the Getty Oil Co. of Oklahoma with his father a year later and made his first million dollars before he turned 23.

But the scion also lived in high style, going through wives like a roughneck goes through drill bits. By the time his father died in 1930, 32-year-old J. Paul had married three times, divorced twice (eventually five times) and spawned the first two of his five children.

FEARFUL THAT HIS son would bring his reckless ways to the family business, George left $500,000 of his estate to J. Paul. Most of the remainder was willed to widow Sarah.

Her confidence in young Getty was scarcely greater than her late husband's. Years later, when Gordon Getty unsuccessfully sued his father, J. Paul, in an effort to enlarge his income from the trust, the trial court remarked that the aged Mrs. Getty had turned over control of the oil business to J. Paul "but only under an arrangement whereby there would be impressed on his conscience a cautious and conservative attitude, in contrast to the manner in which she believed he handled his other assets."

She apparently succeeded. Over the next 42 years, Getty bought a host of different businesses, sent oil rigs to foreign lands and built Getty Oil into one of the nation's largest integrated oil companies. He also became a legend for his conservatism.

Contending that borrowing money made him lose sleep, he allowed Getty Oil to take on little long-term debt. And, in his later years, he undertook little expansion. When Getty Oil bought Reserve Oil & Gas Co. in 1980, it was the company's first acquisition in almost 30 years.

Wall Street often rewarded the senior Getty's performance with a wide yawn.

"It was a one-man show," explains Bill Swanston, an oil analyst with the Herold assets appraisal firm. "A lot of their operations are centered out in California, where I don't think Wall Street people have ever been that enamored. They never made a big splash. They didn't try very hard to court the analysts."

BUT THERE HAVE been many changes since J. Paul's death in 1976 at the age of 83.

In early 1979, Getty Oil announced it would pay $267 million for 15 of Ashland Oil Co.'s oil and gas properties. Later that year, it unveiled plans to pay $630 million for Reserve.

In 1980, the year Petersen became chief executive officer, the company's long-term debt nearly quadrupled, from $168 million to $605 million, as the company went on an acquisition and exploration binge. By the end of 1982, long-term debt totalled nearly $1.3 billion.

Saying it was "time to begin to hedge that long-term future and branch out of the natural resource business," Petersen first engineered the acquisition of Employers Reinsurance Corp., — a property and casualty reinsurer — for $570 million.

Then he led the company into the entertainment business, buying an 85 percent interest in Entertainment & Sports Programming Network Inc., the 24-hour-a-day sports programmer. The company also made an aborted entry into the pay-television movie market before antitrust troubles scuttled the deal.

EMPLOYERS REINSURANCE today is one of the few oil industry diversifications making any money. With net income of $74 million in 1982, up from 1981, it provided a 13 percent return on the company's original investment. The sports network is losing money, but its subscriber network is growing, and the company still hopes for a profitable future.

By the end of 1982, Getty Oil's assets had nearly tripled to $9.9 billion, annual revenues had nearly quadrupled to $11.9 million, and profits were close to triple year-end 1976 levels at $692 million.

But the company still has some serious flaws.

Its exploration record is far below industry standards. Getty Oil spent $1.2 billion in 1982 exploring for oil but finished the year with 120 million fewer barrels of reserves than it started with.

Its low success rate in finding oil has made the company's finding costs 50 percent higher than the industry average — $15.54 for an equivalent barrel of oil compared with the average of $10.75, according to Swanston of John S. Herold.

THE UNSUCCESSFUL efforts have meant the company has replaced only 21 percent of the crude oil and natural gas it has pumped over the last five years, according to Petroleum Analysis Ltd., one of the worst industry percentages.

Meanwhile, interest on Getty's debt removed $109 million from pretax income last year.

Petersen said in an interview that the company's exploration results will improve in 1983, although he declined to disclose exact numbers and admitted the company won't come close to replacing its production. The past problems stemmed from Getty Oil's loss of its most experienced geologists and "some wrong decisions" that the company is trying to correct.

"The problem has been ... that we were trying to implement a bigger program than we had the manpower to do," he said. "We kept bringing people in, but they were raw college graduates." Petersen said the company now is actively trying to acquire skilled people, keep the ones it already has and improve its decision-making process.

Getty Oil also will continue looking for opportunities to acquire proven properties by buying the companies that own them, he added.

BUT, EVEN THOUGH any continued failure to find substantial new reserves means that Getty Oil is in a process of slow liquidation anyway, Petersen says the company has rejected the idea of spinning off its properties in royalty trusts.

"We have looked at royalty trusts and concluded they're not practical," he said, citing the tax implications for shareholders and various adverse effects on the company.

Petersen declined to comment on the pending litigation in which Getty Oil is supporting J. Paul Getty Jr.'s indirect efforts to have a co-trustee appointed to control the family trust. But public records show that, in Gordon Getty's suit against his father, the court concluded that Sarah had intended for the trust to be managed so that the principal would be preserved until her grandchildren all were dead — a possible additional obstacle to any spin off.

Besides its exploration problems, Getty Oil's retail operations also are weak. Refining and marketing operations contributed only 8 percent of operating profits last year, and Getty's share of the retail gasoline market exceeds 6 percent in only one state, Delaware.

Petersen said the company is in the process of getting entirely out of retail sales in California, where it sells gasoline under the Mohawk banner, and is standardizing its image in the 28 other states where it now sells gas under four different names. But he adds that the company is going to concentrate on the exploration and production.

"IT DOESN't MEAN we'll abandon (refining and marketing), but we'll have to focus upstream (on exploration and production)," he said.

Further, the 53-year-old chief executive says he has backed off his early visions of diversifying outside the energy field because of reduced crude oil prices and flat demand — factors that have cut into the big cash flows of the late 1970s.

AT&T's offspring hot items on Wall Street

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Six weeks before they are officially scheduled to be born, the offspring of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. are off to a precocious start on Wall Street.

In their first day of "when-issued" trading on the stock market Monday, the stocks of the eight companies that will emerge from the impending breakup of the Bell System dominated activity on the New York Stock Exchange and regional exchanges around the country.

More than 14 million shares of telephone stocks, new and old, were traded, accounting for about one-eighth of all the buying and selling in those markets during the day.

The new companies will not officially exist as separate entities until Jan. 1 when the breakup takes effect. But when-issued trading, with payment and stock delivery to be settled early in the new year, was begun Monday to allow the markets to start putting price tags on the separate pieces.

By far the most heavily traded Big Board stock was the "new" AT&T, which will retain such traditional businesses as long-distance service, but which also faces new opportunities and competitive pressures after the breakup. It opened at $19 a share, and later slipped to $18.

Stock of the old AT&T, which will continue to trade through mid-February under the divestiture plan, stood at $63.50, up 62 cents from its close on Friday.

Trading was a little less active in the seven regional companies. At the close, Ameritech was selling for $65.12 a share; Bell Atlantic, $70.25; Bell South $90.38; NYNEX, $62.25; Pacific Telesis, $55.12; Southwestern Bell, $61.62; and US West $59.12. One share of each of those companies is to be issued for each 10 existing AT&T shares early next year.

With all the activity, analysts said many stock market participants, particularly the legions of small investors who own the majority of the phone company, seemed to be content to wait out the markets' initial evaluation of the "baby Bells."

Oilman sentenced to prison, fined

HOUSTON (AP) — A former oil company executive convicted of making $1.19 million by adding 10 to 20 cents to the cost of each barrel of crude oil he bought has been sentenced to four years in prison and fined $70,000.

John R. Lennon, convicted in October of defrauding Charter International Oil Co., was also sentenced to five years' probation Monday by U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue.

Swearingen to speak at PBPM

One of the world's best known petroleum executives will inaugurate a new lecture series at Midland's Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Dec. 1.

John E. Swearingen, recently retired chairman and chief executive officer of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), will speak at the museum at 7:30 p.m. His topic will be: "Is the Oil Industry Dying?"

Swearingen served as board chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, the largest trade association of the oil industry, in 1978-79. He is a past chairman of the National Petroleum Council, an assembly of executives that advises the Department of Commerce and other Federal agencies on petroleum and related matters.

A native of Columbia, S.C., Swearingen was a 1938 graduate of the University of South Carolina with a B.S. in chemical engineering. In 1939 he received the M.S. degree from Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh.

His address at the Midland museum will mark the beginning of the newly-established H.B. Fugua Distinguished Lectures Series, funded by the Sid W. Richardson Foundation of Fort Worth. Up to four lectures will be scheduled by the museum in each of the next ten years. Authorities in the fields of history, the earth sciences, petroleum management, and museum science will appear.

John E. Swearingen
Retired CEO, Standard Oil Co.

The grant by the Sid W. Richardson Foundation was made to honor H.B. (Babe) Fuqua of Fort Worth who recently retired from the foundation's board after many years of service. Fuqua had a corporation before becoming chief executive officer of Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil Company. Subsequently he moved into banking. For a number of years he was board chairman of Fort Worth National Bank.

Fugua's many civic accomplishments included representing Fort Worth in the negotiations that led to establishment of the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport. He is an honoree in the Petroleum Museum's Hall of Fame.

He has been invited to attend the first lecture in the series along with foundation executives.

The Swearingen lecture will be held in the central exhibits area of the museum which can seat 300. Museum members and spouses will be seated in a reserved section though there will be no individually reserved seats. The general public is invited. There will be no admission charge.

Board members of the museum and their spouses will host a reception for Swearingen and his wife immediately preceding the lecture.

Texas is Conoco Country.

Part VI

It takes more than quality products to make Conoco the Hottest Brand Going in Texas. It also takes representatives like the 109 independent jobbers who distribute our products to motorists, farmers, ranchers, and businesses throughout the state. (Jobbers are local businessmen who own storage facilities and tank trucks. Many operate their own retail gasoline facilities as well as distribute to other retail dealers.) Last year our jobbers sold 230 million gallons of motor fuel, lubricants, greases, and other petroleum products in Texas.

What makes our jobbers special? For one thing, they handle virtually all of Conoco's retail business in Texas. For another, our ties with many of these good people go back not just decades, but generations. They are truly members of the Conoco family.

When they aren't busy selling Conoco products, you'll often find our jobbers busy in other ways in their communities—as members of local government, school boards, and charitable organizations. In other words, they are good citizens and neighbors as well as good businessmen.

We depend on jobbers for our success. In the Midland-Odessa area, our winning Conoco team consists of jobbers Doug Grimes, J.E. McLain, Preston Grissom, Albert Hester, Chester Kesey, and Troy Sampley.

That's why we say with pride: Texas is Conoco Country.

GULF INVESTORS GROUP

Dear Fellow Gulf Shareholder:

Thank you. The tremendous support we have received so far from shareholders is truly gratifying. I believe both small and large shareholders understand how much is really at stake on December 2.

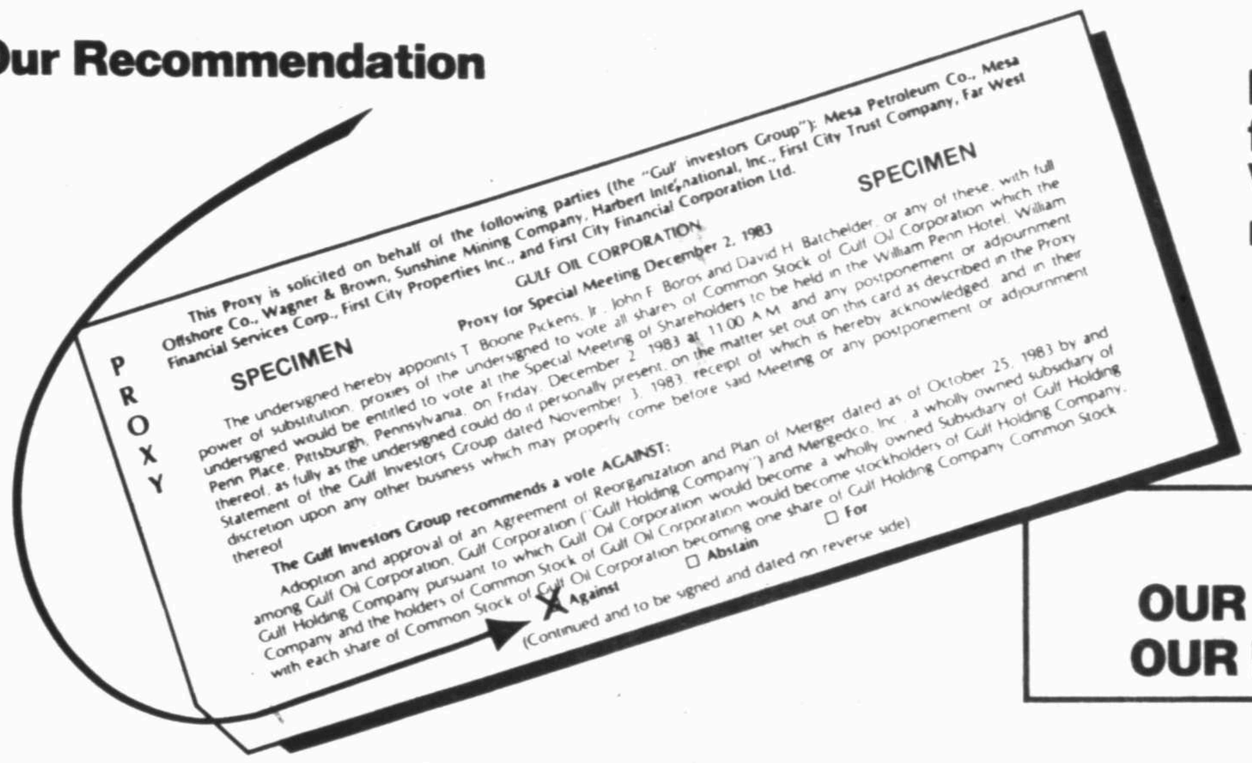
If you haven't yet decided on how to vote on the reincorporation proposal—CALL YOUR BROKER and ask him what he thinks will happen to the price of Gulf stock if management's proposal passes. There can be no certainty as to future stock prices but remember, if Gulf stock declines by $5 per share, your investment will lose $500 in value for each 100 shares you own. Just think, if you own 1,000 shares you would lose $5,000.

- WE BELIEVE YOU CANNOT POSSIBLY AFFORD TO SUPPORT MANAGEMENT AND THEIR REINCORPORATION PROPOSAL.
- WE BELIEVE GULF'S STOCK PRICE WILL DECLINE IF WE DO NOT DEFEAT MANAGEMENT'S PROPOSAL.
- WE BELIEVE MANAGEMENT'S REINCORPORATION PROPOSAL, WITH ITS ELIMINATION OF SHAREHOLDER RIGHTS, CANNOT POSSIBLY INCREASE SHAREHOLDER VALUE.

IT'S NOW OR NEVER

You will only get one chance to reject management's reincorporation proposal. That chance expires at the Special Meeting on December 2. If you don't do it now, you will lose precious shareholder rights forever. The Gulf Investors Group is fighting to protect your and our financial interests in Gulf. We can't do it alone—it's now up to you.

Our Recommendation



PROXY

SPECIMEN

Proxy for Special Meeting December 2, 1983

GULF OIL CORPORATION

SPECIMEN

This Proxy is solicited on behalf of the following parties (the "Gulf Investors Group"): Mesa Petroleum Co., Mesa Offshore Co., Wagner & Brown, Sunshine Mining Company, Harbert International, Inc., First City Trust Company, Far West Financial Services Corp., First City Properties Inc., and First City Financial Corporation Ltd.

The undersigned hereby appoints T. Boone Pickens, Jr., John F. Boros and David H. Batchelder, or any of these, with full power of substitution, proxies of the undersigned to vote at the Special Meeting of Shareholders to be held in the William Penn Hotel, William Penn Place, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on Friday, December 2, 1983 at 11:00 A.M. and any postponement or adjournment thereof, as fully as the undersigned would be entitled to vote all shares of Common Stock of Gulf Oil Corporation which the undersigned could do if personally present, on the matter set out on this card as described in the Proxy Statement of the Gulf Investors Group dated November 3, 1983, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and in their discretion upon any other business which may properly come before said Meeting or any postponement or adjournment thereof.

The Gulf Investors Group recommends a vote AGAINST:

Adoption and approval of an Agreement of Reorganization and Plan of Merger dated as of October 25, 1983 by and among Gulf Oil Corporation, Gulf Corporation ("Gulf Holding Company") and Mergedco, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Gulf Holding Company pursuant to which Gulf Oil Corporation would become a wholly owned Subsidiary of Gulf Holding Company and the holders of Common Stock of Gulf Oil Corporation would become stockholders of Gulf Holding Company with each share of Common Stock of Gulf Oil Corporation becoming one share of Gulf Holding Company Common Stock.

X Against ☐ Abstain ☐ For

Protect your financial interests. Vote against the reincorporation proposal Today.

REMEMBER:
OUR GAIN IS YOUR GAIN
OUR LOSS IS YOUR LOSS

Thank you once again.
On behalf of the Gulf Investors Group

T. Boone Pickens, Jr.

An Important Note to Former Gulf Shareholders

Only Gulf shareholders who owned Gulf stock of record on October 21 are entitled to vote at this Special Meeting on December 2. Since October 14, however, over 10% of all Gulf shares have traded. It would be unfortunate, indeed, if the future of Gulf were determined by former shareholders who no longer had a continuing financial interest in the Company's affairs. We request that if you are a former shareholder with voting rights, that you please respect the possible investment objectives of those that have purchased your shares by abstaining on the reincorporation proposal. If you have previously voted in favor of the proposal, you may now abstain by sending in a later dated Blue proxy, marked "Abstain". An abstention will have the same effect as a vote against management's reincorporation proposal. If you need an additional proxy, please call our proxy solicitor for immediate assistance.

ATTENTION: "STREET-NAME" HOLDERS

If your shares are held in the name of a brokerage firm or bank nominee, only they can execute a proxy on your behalf. Since time is short, please mail your proxy today in the envelope that has been provided to you. If you are concerned that your vote may not be in time for the December 2 meeting, please call our proxy solicitor for immediate assistance:

Texans review John Kennedy's 1,000 days

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"I look forward to a great future for America — a future in which our country will match its military strength with our moral restraint, its wealth with our wisdom, its power with our purpose.
..."And I look forward to a world which will be safe not only for democracy and diversity but also for personal distinction."

John F. Kennedy, Oct. 26, 1963

Military strength. Moral restraint. Power. A safe world. Twenty years ago John Kennedy inspired the people to believe that a better world was being created. Today, President Reagan espouses the same goals.

Two different presidents; two different time periods; same thoughts. A lot has changed in the world since then; and nothing has changed.

Many of the issues butting into Kennedy's Camelot world remain the same today: Cuba, Communists, the Soviet Union, nuclear arms, poverty. He began to touch on civil rights issues, and those have metamorphosed into "workers' issues" of all colors.

On the anniversary of President Kennedy's assassination, historians, journalists and critics have looked back on that Democratic president's 1,000 days in office. Some liked him, some didn't. Some rank him as one of the country's greatest presidents; others say Kennedy accomplished little.

It's no different locally. Kennedy didn't handle all things well, and even some Democrats say Reagan has kept a more logical stance during the hot issues.

"For all its advances, the nation is still falling substantially short of its economic potential — a potential we must fulfill both to raise our standards of well-being at home and to serve the cause of freedom abroad."
JFK, Jan. 21, 1963

HARRIS KERR remembers Midland was in a recession during the Kennedy years, similar to that of today. "Things haven't changed that much," said the Democratic State Executive committeeman. "We had 3,000 empty houses back then; we have today maybe 2,000. A lot of problems we face are immune to who is in the White House."

"I remember the country was at a low ebb economically," said Bob Hellman with the local Democratic party. "The people were looking for a significant change; the country seemed to have wound down."

Economically, people have a better living today than they did 20 years ago, in the view of J. Tillapaugh, chairman of history at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. "I don't care if we are in a temporary recession, our lifestyles have gone up."

Kennedy brought youthfulness, class, style and vigor to the country. He awakened the citizens to the governmental process and asked for their participation.

He sounded the rallying cry: "Ask not what your country can do for you: Ask what you can do for your country."

"I THINK the country was much more divided then than it is today, the left wing vs. the right wing," said Kerr. "I think the country has de-radicalized. People have moved more toward the center. He set the tune: Let's go forward. I think Reagan has set that, but not in the same way as Kennedy."

Michael Williams, a Midland attorney, is seeing a swing back to nationalism and away from individualism.

"We're recognizing the interest of the whole is more important than the individual interests. We have a different kind of understanding, that we do have an obligation to support our country.

"There is a sense of nationalism developing. Kennedy talked a great deal about that. His theme was that one group would have to compromise on something they wanted for the national good," said Williams. "Politics of the '70s were special interest politics. The Peace Corps provided alternative ways for people to contribute to the national good."

The national good also meant trying to see that all individuals had a chance to get out of poverty, and so Kennedy began designing programs.

"We can no longer tolerate growing patches of poverty and injustice in America — substandard wages, unemployment, city slums, inadequate medical care, inferior education and the sad plight of migratory workers."
JFK, Aug. 10, 1960

"EVERYONE WAS looking forward to Kennedy's New Frontier programs, expecting very much from his campaign promises," recalled Hellman. "The youthfulness and vigor they (the Administration) had in approaching the challenges of the New Frontier captured the imagination of the nation. The demand for social programs and civil rights was accelerating. It's not that Kennedy achieved so much; he certainly recognized needs and began programs."

Several agreed that had Kennedy not died, his programs never would have made it through Congress.

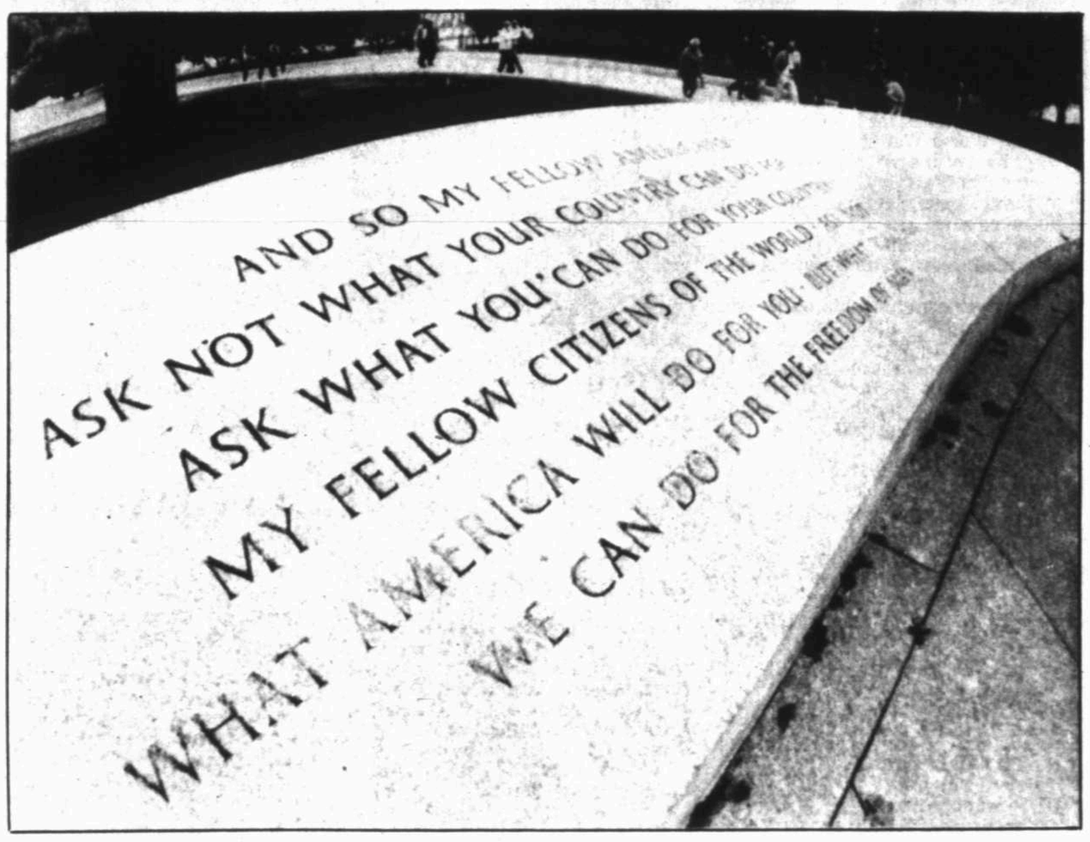
According to Kerr, JFK projected the image of working on programs but it was his vice president, Lyndon Johnson "who knew how to work the House and Senate."

Ernest Angelo, a member of the National Republican Executive Committee, doesn't see how Kennedy would have succeeded with his programs. "He wouldn't have gotten the programs through. Most of the programs and aid to every element of society have been enacted. We have more poverty today and people are still unhappy."

Unlike the Republican, Hellman credits the programs with doing some good. But the country also has learned since then "that social programs can't provide for every need. These were some of the most far-reaching, benefitting programs the world had ever seen. But, again, we can't provide so much for so many for so long, which was the approach in the early years of Kennedy's programs."

"Equality before the law has not always meant equal treatment and opportunity. And the harmful, wasteful, and wrongful results of racial discrimination and segregation still appear in virtually every aspect of national life, in virtually every part of the nation."
JFK, Feb. 28, 1963

"WE'RE HAPPIER as far as race relations today," said Kerr. "I remember when Midland High was integrated. It wasn't a happy time. We're a lot closer to wiping out discrimination today."



The words of John F. Kennedy on the day of his inauguration as 35th president, above, greet some of the three million persons who walk the curving paths to visit the grave of the slain president at Arlington National Cemetery. Crowds gathered to greet President and Mrs. Kennedy, right, at the Dallas airport the day Kennedy was assassinated.

Civil rights has gone from a quest for those privileges to now seeking greater access to the political process, according to Williams. "For the most part, those obstacles have been removed. Now, we talk about providing groups of people to have greater control over their lives."

Department is place past can be used for present, future

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It is, says department head Jan Carter, a place where West Texans can "use the past for the present and for the future."

It's Ector County Library's Southwest History and Genealogy Department, an impressive array at 321 W. 5th St. that stands in the forefront of public library collections in West Texas.

Here, a student, researcher, or just an interested person can find rare volumes on Texas history, newspaper and magazine files containing clips on topics of historical significance, and everything he needs to get started on climbing the family tree.

"Our objectives are to keep the history of the area and the Southwest and to be able to help people with their family histories," said Ms. Carter. "We do know that there are several (collections) in the area, like the Nita Halley Library (in Midland) which has a better collection specifically on the cowboy and the Indian and ranching. And there are several special college libraries that outshine us by a long way.

"But for a public library, we do believe that we are probably, if not the best, then one of the best, in West Texas. With a public library you have a problem with funding, but with special libraries they can absolutely put all their money into it that comes through donations."

Ector County Library had its genesis in approximately 1939, and while volumes relating to Texas and Southwest history gradually accrued, they did not warrant the establishment of a separate department until 1960. By 1962 a genealogical shelf had been added, and as each collection expanded the two were created as a separate entity apart from the library-at-large by the mid-1960s.

In 1972 the history collection was named a Texas State Library Documents Depository, as numerous documents relating to the state's history are at researchers' hands. Just last year the collection gained charter membership as a Texas Heritage Resource Center to be used as resource tools for the teaching of Texas history.

The greatest emphasis in the collection is on West Texas and Ector County, though it also is extensive in items relating to elsewhere in the state as well as in Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona.

For those interested in finding out from whose loins they have sprung, Ms. Carter and the staff will offer guidance.

"You start from you," said Ms. Carter. "You have to have information at least back through your grandparents because of the 70-year Privacy Act. You need names, nicknames, dates, places, any information of movements from one state to another, one area of a state to another. And then we hand you the book on how you do it and let you ... read it."

Thereafter, the genealogical researcher can make use of such items as microfilm copies of the national census from 1790-1910 for the states of Texas, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Kentucky and Tennessee. The earliest censuses, explained Ms. Carter, detail only the name of the household and number of persons in the home, while later ones began to list the first name of the wife and number of children. By 1910, the census had become quite detailed, with listings of state of birth, state of parents' birth and whether or not the person was Indian.

"Midland (County Library) and Ector County Library complement each other a lot, because they have a lot of genealogical books, while we moved into microfilm," said Ms. Carter.

Holders of valid library cards from Midland County Library may check out circulating volumes at Ector County Library's Southwest History and Genealogical Department.

Hours through November are 9 a.m.-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Friday and Saturday. A tax rollback will cut those hours Dec. 1 to 10 a.m.-7:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

RHONDA RIGENHAGEN

Lime-green house filled with wonderful memories

I've been thinking about a lot of strange things lately. Oatmeal with raisins, a marble game, lefse (to a Texan, it's like a potato tortilla), a fruit cake tin full of buttons.

Maybe it's because I won't be having Christmas dinner at Grama's house. Or maybe it's because it's almost Thanksgiving. I've got much to be thankful for this year — a new home, husband, job and city I love. But mostly I'm thankful for something intangible that sustains me when material things cannot. Roots.

I didn't have many constants as a child, but there was one thing that never changed — a lime-green, two-story house across from the park in a small southern-Minnesota town and the two people who live there.

I don't think my grandparents have aged in the past 20 years. And the only thing that's changed in that house in all those years is the wallpaper in the kitchen. But I'll always remember the original paper, dotted with coffee pots and kitchen utensils, as I'll always remember every vivid detail of that house:

—The paneled basement with its black-and-white checked tile floor. A long table in the corner piled high with ageless castoff clothing kept my cousins and I occupied for hours playing dress up.

—The warm, sunny kitchen. Mostly I remember late-night snacks of molasses in milk and waking up on cold winter days to find Grama making raisin oatmeal for breakfast. And jars and jars of vitamins and health foods she forced on everyone she loved.

—The dining room, where the entire family gathered for Christmas dinner — the adults deliberately lingering over their meal because they knew how badly we kids wanted to go into the living room and open presents.

—That same living room, with the two easy chairs reserved for Grama and Grampa. There's a tiny dark smudge on the ceiling, imperceptible to anyone who doesn't know where to look for it, where my brother shot a suction-cup arrow at least a dozen years ago.

—The den, with shelves and shelves of knickknacks my grandparents have collected over the years. A lamp that creates the illusion of running water and a blazing forest fire, a fuzzy black spider with coiled wire legs, a hand-blown glass wishing well.

Across from the mandatory grandfather clock are the carpeted steps where Grampa patiently taught me how to make my Slinky walk down the stairs.

There are three bedrooms upstairs, each with a distinct personality, still haunted by memories of their former occupants. And through one of the walk-in closets lies the magical door leading to the large, stuffy attic that is hot or freezing, depending on the season. It's filled with old boxes, suitcases, dresses, baby things and memories.

Out of that room came the brooch Grama sent me to wear on my wedding dress — the one she wore when she married more than 50 years ago. She wasn't able to make the 1,300-mile trip, but it seemed as if Grama was at my wedding just the same.

Still, it would be just another house but for the spry ageless couple living there.

Mostly I remember Grama, who cooked the most wonderful meals, laughed at childish jokes ("Why do firemen wear red suspenders? To keep their pants up!"), was always suitably impressed by the smallest accomplishment and always had time to play games. Funny, of all the games we played over the years I don't recall Grama winning very many. Rotten streak of bad luck.

Grama always indulged my creative streak. She taught me to sew, embroider, knit, crochet and cook (what little I know about that). There I read my first book and wrote and illustrated my first story.

I always found mysteries and treasures at Grama's house. One was a fruitcake tin filled with hundreds of buttons. Some of them must have dropped off Confederate army jackets and Amelia Bloomer's scandelous pantaloons. The buttons seemed to hold memories of a mysterious and adventurous past. I spent hours sorting, stringing and daydreaming over them. No video game could match that.

I remember smells: Norwegian delicacies Grama would whip up, musty rooms and mothballs. I remember sounds: the grandfather clock sounding in the late-night hours, the little squeal Grama reserves for the times when special visitors like me stop by, or Grampa's booming, "Well, well. Lookee who's here."

Unfortunately, there are a few omissions in my memories. Grama, I don't think I ever told you — Thank you. And there's one thing I don't think I ever said often enough.

I love you.

Texans review JFK's 1,000 days

Issues today are economic ones and they are colorless. "These are workers' issues and they have no color. It still doesn't mean blacks and browns are fully integrated."

Living conditions haven't changed for the poor people, he said. "Living conditions for a percentage have improved; more minorities have been introduced to Middle America. But living conditions for the poor blacks is just the same as it's always been."

"Basically they (the Communists) believe that the United States lacks the nerve, the will and the determination for a long, long hard fight."
JFK, Oct. 18, 1960

"AS A DEMOCRAT, one of the greatest feelings I'd had under (President) Eisenhower was the limits he went to maintain the U.S. at peace, possibly even to extremes," Hellman said. "When Kennedy came in, people were disappointed at the inaction in foreign policy for a long period of time. People were demanding a more active role in foreign policy."

Kennedy gave it to them. There was the Bay of Pigs, the Cuban Missile Crisis, the Berlin Wall, the face-off with Khrushchev. Kennedy's stands apparently didn't discourage the Soviets. Reagan's problems in office have stemmed from Soviet expansion.

"There was the Cold War," said Tillapaugh. "If anything, it's still here. Kennedy chose to fight in Vietnam; I'd go with Eisenhower's passiveness any day. Kennedy was a terrible president; he had a disastrous foreign policy."

Angelo thinks the violence around the world has increased today and he pointed to terrorist activities. "Kennedy wasn't doing much. He had said there was an agreement for the Russians to take the missiles out of Cuba and now we find out we never had an agreement," he said. "They've since put more weapons in Cuba than they had back then."

The Soviets have been testing Reagan and that isn't unusual, according to Kerr. "Soviet leadership has always been the kind to test for any signs of weakness."

Reagan and Kennedy expressed similar attitudes toward the Soviets and the need for more nuclear arms while also stressing peace, according to Kerr. But, he explained, both men grew up in similar times; Kennedy would be about 65 today "and Reagan is not that much older. They're not that much different on national defense."

WILLIAMS SEES the government's pre-occupation today with Communists as a holdover from the Kennedy era. "We've had a slightly different approach on foreign policy. We've developed a sense of value of the role that diplomacy plays and also the role of developing some military might."

Whether or not Kennedy handled the defense issues properly, there was something about him and his family that hynotized the public.

Even Angelo admits that "a lot of countries think he was the best president we ever had. He created a favorable impression of the United States in Europe" that has been a boost to every succeeding president.

But Angelo doesn't think Kennedy had a strong chance of winning re-election. "We were doing canvassing in Midland and the odds were good that Kennedy would have lost."

Hellman, though, "could see the strength building up in his administration. He would have won a second term. I think Kennedy was a good president, but I don't think he ranks among the best. If he'd been able to live out his promises, he had every opportunity to become one of our greatest presidents."

Kennedy was the first to control television and that brought him home to the average American. "We saw him spank his kids and kiss his wife," said Williams. We haven't had glamour in the White House like Kennedy's, and there's been no first lady like Jackie.

"What was it about that man that 20 years later we're still infatuated with him?" Williams asks and then finds his answer:

"I recall his mystique, his aura. He changed the fabric and color of American politics."

Scraps of paper are memories of tears, sorrow

DALLAS (AP) — On scraps of paper, torn checks, business cards and matchbook covers are memories of tears, sympathy and sorrow, left behind in the plaza where John F. Kennedy was gunned down.

The sympathy notes, now collected in thick three-ring binders in the Dallas Public Library, were written by pilgrims from 40 states and 28 foreign countries who came to see the place where a president was assassinated.

Collected by the Dallas Parks Department, the notes succinctly record the grief after the murder 20 years ago today.

"I came all the way from Ireland to pray for you, Dear President, at the place of your martyrdom," says one found in Dealey Plaza.

"We the people of Cambridge, England, will never forget you. Rest in peace," says another.

"A tragedy we can't understand. But, Oh Lord, thanks for the time we had him. Denmark is mourning. Denmark will remember. Lord, help the American people after this loss."

The notes — some eloquent, others crudely written and poorly spelled — were written on the back of torn personal checks, matchbook covers, business cards and stark white formal stationery. Some left flowers. Many left printed prayers.

Most of the notes were collected between 1963 and 1965, said Dallas librarian Lucile Boykin. Some were even left in the Texas School Book Depository, the building Lee Harvey Oswald shot Kennedy from.

"Every day after the assassination the parks people went by and picked them up," she said. "I don't know that many people do that anymore because we haven't gotten any in years."

The parks department held the notes for several years before turning them over to the library, which assembled them in 1974.

Few know about the library's collection, and fewer ever dust them off to look at them, she said.

"In view of the fact that they are so rare and so unusual, we don't display them," Mrs. Boykin said.

From Debbie Kuykendall of Mobile, Ala., 8 years old at the time, came a July 15, 1964 thought: "We all loved you very much. I am sorry."

From four members of the Keith Johnson family of Warren, Ariz.: "We came to pay tribute to a great president, John F. Kennedy."

A 10-year-old from Downey, Calif., said, "May rest in pice."

"To a very good president," wrote Yvonne Berry of Monticello, Ark., "I miss you very much. It was a very bad thing to happen."

A weathered note left behind by Sue and Jamie said simply, "We came from California to see where our beloved President was killed. We'll always remember you and always love you."

"My Dear President," young Patti Goldsmith of Miami wrote, "Your death was a great loss in the United States. But the world must go on. You will always be in my heart expecially for I have written to you many times and always received answers. One I grow up the one thing I will pledge to try to help is peace."

Many Dallas residents sent flowers to the site, some addressed to "President Kennedy, Dallas," and others addressed to the "Kennedy Assassination Site." One card read "In your final moment of life we saw you smile and wave. This memory we will always treasure."

Another said "To the Kennedy Family: Being a Dallasite, I am so hurt that it was my city where such a great man was lost. I will always be hurt about this."

Bobby Scott, 32, of 2811 N. Loop 250, was in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital today after his 1975 Chevrolet, shown here, and two other vehicles collided on FM 1788 near Interstate-20 about 1:10 p.m. Monday. Scott suffered head injuries and multiple fractures in the crash, according to an MMH spokeswoman.

JFK memorial service planned in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Two Democrats who rode in the John F. Kennedy's fateful motorcade 20 years ago today were scheduled to speak at a memorial service — the last time Dallas will honor the assassinated president on Nov. 22.

Beginning next spring, the city will remember Kennedy on May 29 in keeping with the American tradition of honoring leaders on their birthdays.

Former Texas Sen. Ralph Yarborough and U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez of San Antonio, who were riding in cars behind Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, were part of a memorial service that local Democratic Party leaders were hoping would draw a large crowd.

The noon observance at the John F. Kennedy Memorial, just 200 yards distance from where he was shot, was planned for Democratic Party faithful and others interested in paying their respects one last time.

Massachusetts House Speaker Thomas McGee also was part of the program that included a $15-per-plate luncheon.

But Kennedy era officials showed little interest in attending the observance. The Kennedy Observance Day Committee was unsuccessful in getting anyone from the Kennedy family or his administration to speak.

Dallas County Democratic Party Chairman Bob Greenberg conceded he was mildly disappointed because so many people turned down invitations to have a role in the ceremonies.

"We invited literally thousands of people, but the event is really for the people of Dallas," Greenberg said recently. "I don't think I'm disappointed...to the extent it will lessen the ceremony.

"I don't think there's any residual fear of coming to Dallas."

CBS, magazine refuse Boy Scout ads

DALLAS (AP) — A television ad campaign that asks viewers to imagine life without Boy Scouting, then shows an adult ripping merit badges off a youngster, has been rejected by CBS as too controversial, a Scouting official says.

And a print ad that presents Scouting as an alternative to drug abuse — by showing a freckle-faced teen-ager sticking a hypodermic needle in his arm — has been turned down by a major magazine, said Michael Whittaker, advertising director for the Boy Scouts of America.

The ads "say America is in a lot of trouble and that Scouting can help. You don't find Eagle Scouts shooting up," said Whittaker, who added in an interview published today that the campaign was "controversial but effective."

In the magazine ad, the headline reads, "Last year, there were over 82,000 cases of drug abuse by teen-age boys." Underneath the picture of the young drug abuser is the campaign's slogan, "Boy, do we need Scouting."

For the TV commercial, actor James Earl Jones, the voice of Darth Vader in the "Star Wars" movie series, narrates.

"Imagine life for a boy without Scouting," it begins. "No more camping trips or canoeing." On screen is a young Scout, in full uniform, as an adult hand reaches out and tears off each of his merit badges. Finally, the American flag emblem is ripped from the uniform.

Whittaker said CBS rejected the ad because it is "too tough" and potentially "too upsetting" for young viewers.

A CPS News assignment editor in New York said Monday night that officials were not immediately available to comment on the ads.

NBC and ABC have both agreed to run the commercials, Whittaker said.

Broadcasting and publishing companies that have donated space and air time for past Scouting ads are resisting the new campaign, Whittaker said. He declined to name the magazine that has refused to run the ads.

Justice of the peace sues judge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A peace justice has sued Bexar County Judge Albert Bustamante, demanding he apologize for saying she was involved in "rancid politics."

Peace Justice Irene Canales de Janssen said Monday that she would drop the suit if Bustamante issued a public apology, but that she wanted monetary damages if he refused.

Bustamante had told reporters that Ms. Canales de Janssen fired a clerk for not supporting the peace justice's husband in a race for county commissioner.

"It's so rancid," Bustamante said. "It's against the bar and judicial ethics to engage in such rancid politics."

Ms. Canales de Janssen, however, said that clerk Irma Medellin was asked to resign because her husband habitually bothered her at work.

"(Bustamante) would not have made the statement without checking it out if I were a man," Ms. Canales de Janssen said. "He didn't think I would fight back. I may be a woman, but that doesn't mean I don't know how to protect myself."

Twenty-one-year-old Lonnie Pugh of the Sandstone Apartments picks up tools and supplies thrown from his 1980 Toyota pickup truck after it and two other vehilces colleded in the 4600 block of West U.S. Highway 80 about 1:30 p.m. Monday. Minor injuries were reported in the accident.

FASHION

Tie it together with fresh holiday pizazz

As fashion moves more toward the minimalist, accessories are no longer just the icing on the cake. They're essential. And a collection of scarves, bows, waist wrappings and belts is not only a convenient accompaniment to festive dressing, is also offers dozens of gift-giving ideas for the holiday season.

A wardrobe of scarves can freshen last year's fashions or add the perfect finishing touch to new holiday glitter. There are oblongs and oversize squares to casually toss over one shoulder; pretty bows and face-flattering bias ties to soften necklines and knit mufflers that not only ward off winter winds but are the important new accessory for sweaters.

This is one of the most glittering holiday seasons with jewels, beads and sequins liberally sprinkled on sweaters, evening suits and short evening dresses.

A multiple-choice collection appeals to many holiday moods with fresh-looking animal prints for the uninhibited, bold graphics for the avant-garde, charming paisleys and florals for the traditionalist and elegant stripes for the conservative — all in an eye-appealing range of colors from delicate pales to vibrant brights.

The waist has also been put in focus with an exciting group of belts and waist wrappings. To tie up those party velvets with satins, there are perky bow belts in solid, striped or plaid taffeta. Jewel-toned sashes add the right spark to simple dresses and skirts. And there's more glitter ahead with leather belts studded with stones or fabric belts buckled in glimmering rhinestones.

Accessories are holiday essentials that are great to give in a wrapped package or as a stocking stuffer.

A 10x60-inch metallic glitter knit oblong scarf can make a grand entrance during the party season.

An iridescent tuxedo stripe bow sash, left, or a single wrap sash, right, can tie together skirt and blouse.

A 1 7/8-inch constructed moire belt with rhinestone pull through buckle can wrap up the gala season in style.

Windsor knots use more fabric

By BETTY KINSER
Copley News Service

Regarding the women's neckties, if you plan to use a Windsor or double-Windsor knot on your tie, you may want to move the neck-edge darts away from the center about 4 or 5 inches.

The Windsor takes up a lot of fabric from one side of your tie which will throw it off-center.

For what some patterns cost, a body could buy a pair of shoes! It's unreal and can stir the "Scrooge" within each of us.

Recently I saw a lovely pattern for a three-piece dress to be made from a soft knit such as interlock. I loved it, but couldn't make my purse open to pay the $7.50.

So I came home and dug through my pattern drawers and found just what I wanted. By taking bits and pieces from each of four patterns, I constructed the very same three-piece outfit, and it didn't cost me a penny!

That same day (I go on sprees) I saw a luscious piece of soft velour done in stripes — different colors and different widths. Some of the stripes were as wide as 6 to 8 inches, others were as narrow as 1 inch.

However, as pretty as it was, it would not be an easy piece to work with. When the fabric is that outstanding, the pattern must be very, very simple with few "minute" details.

For such a fabric select a pattern in a loose, simple style with sleeves cut in one with the garment body. The fewer seams the better, believe me. Matching those stripes is going to be an unparalleled experience in frustration.

For your velour, use seams that will give, then trim the seam allowances to ¼ inch and overcast edges together. "Stay" shoulder seams with twill tape and, if facings are called for, use a much lighter-weight fabric such as lining.

DEAR ABBY

Congress tackles 'notch' situation

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your readers may be interested in legislation currently pending in Congress to correct the Social Security "notch" problem. Simply stated, the notch problem can cause a person who reaches age 62 after 1978 to receive a much lower benefit than a person with an identical wage history who reaches age 62 in an earlier year. The difference could be as great as $100 a month and could reach a total of $20,000 for some persons over the course of their retirement.

Bills pending in Congress to correct the notch include:

BILL NUMBER AND SPONSOR
H.R. 1483 Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y.
H.R. 1964 Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass.
H.R. 1965 Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass.
H.R. 3013 Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R.I.
H.R. 3859 Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va.
H.R. 3893 Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn.
H.R. 3925 Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky.
H.R. 3947 Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla.
H.R. 4093 Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif.

Unfortunately, correcting this inequity will be very costly. Nevertheless, your readers who are affected by the notch may want to contact their members of Congress. — LAURIE A. FIORI, LEGISLATIVE ASSISTANT, AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED PERSONS, 1909 K. ST. N.W., WASHINGTON, D.C. 20049.

DEAR LAURIE: Thanks for the update. Granted, it will be very costly to correct this inequity, but as I said in an earlier column, that money will be pumped back into the economy because our senior citizens must spend their Social Security checks immediately in order to survive — unlike younger folks who would save it for a rainy day. For our elderly, it's already raining!

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and I need to know something that I can't ask my mother or anybody else. If a girl goes all the way with a boy before she begins to have her monthly periods, can she get pregnant? Please hurry your answer. — CAN'T SIGN THIS

DEAR CAN'T SIGN: Fertility experts say usually no, but it IS possible.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I were married secretly. We have not told my parents because they disapprove of him. My love for him is stronger than it has ever been, but I also love my family and want them to accept us as one.

I am presently attending college away from home and it is about to kill me to keep my marriage a secret. I want to shout it to the world, but I'm afraid my parents will not continue to pay for my education if they know I married this guy. — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Tell your parents that you are married, and if they discontinue paying for your education, find a way to pay for it yourself. (Many students work and go to college.) To lie about your marital status in order to continue getting financial help from your parents is both dishonest and immature.

AT WIT'S END

New households have new priorities

By ERMA BOMBECK

Never before have there been so many kids living away from home in the single state.

Traditionally when you left home you got married and your apartment looked like a stripped-down version of the home you just left. You moved in a plastic place setting for four, a few pots and pans, a bed, a second-hand vacuum sweeper and a toaster. (You weren't legally married without a toaster.)

Nowadays, young people are setting their own priorities for the first home of their own.

The first furnishing they buy for their apartment is a stereo. No self-respecting single would be caught dead without a stereo. Humming just doesn't do it for this generation.

If there are no plugs in the bathroom? They don't care.

If the stove doesn't work? They don't care.

If the room isn't wired for heating? They don't care.

If the front door doesn't close? They don't care.

If there are two large walls that will hold the weight of speakers, they'll rent it.

The second priority is a roommate, preferably someone of the opposite sex who owns a color TV set. You can have an overbite and legs that belong on a piano, but if you come with a color TV set with a few months left on the warranty, you can write your own ticket.

Close behind the roommate comes an answering attachment for the phone. Heaven forbid you should miss a message while you sleep on the floor.

Young people have a totally unique outlook on the creature comforts of living. An apartment with a fireplace (that doesn't work) takes precedence over one with a refrigerator. A pool table comes years before a sweeper and a tape deck for the car is considered more of a necessity than an alarm clock.

I visited my son's apartment a few weeks ago.

"What do you need for Christmas?" I asked.

He shrugged. "I don't know. I've got everything."

My eyes scanned his room. A sofa with a single sheet and blanket. A card table with four folding chairs. Two cereal bowls, three spoons, a stereo, a phone with a 50-foot cord, and a poster of Loni Anderson on the wall.

"That's true," I said.

"You know, there is one thing I really need."

My mind raced to an ironing board, a sweeper, a washer, dryer, window . . . .

"I need one of those cassettes with earphones for when I jog."

Doctor: Stroke can hit child even before birth

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Although stroke is usually associated with aging, it also strikes very young children and may even occur before birth, a neurosurgeon said at an American Heart Association conference here.

These child victims tend to be younger than three to four years, Dr. Alexa Canady, of The Neurosurgery Group in Detroit, told a news conference before participating in a symposium on stroke.

She also said that in the cases where it is suspected that a stroke has occurred before birth, the condition may be responsible for failure of the brain to develop properly.

Young children with sickle-cell anemia and some other diseases are known to be at risk for strokes, but the cause in many other very young victims is unknown, Canady said.

"We have a large population of children who have strokes and we don't understand why," she said.

Throat infections have been suspected as at least a contributing factor, she said. It has also been theorized that some inflammatory process in the vessels — which later disappears — could be responsible. Whatever the cause, it may be transient.

In adults, Canady said, the blocking that impedes the flow of blood to the brain often occurs in the carotid artery in the neck or in the small vessels of the head. But the stroke process seems to be different in small children, where the lesion is in the large vessels inside the cranial cavity.

Furthermore, if these children are looked at some months later, the vessels appear normal, "suggesting some type of dyanmic process is going on," she said.

Canady said no statistics had been kept on the number of childhood stroke victims. But she called it a significant problem that should be attacked with the same kind of aggressive approach that has been used in adults in order to establish a treatment. (Although stroke is still the third-leading killer in the United States, the death rate from it declined by 46 percent between 1968 and 1981, due in part to a heavy emphasis on prevention, especially control of high blood pressure.)

Canady said that the vast preponderance of child stroke victims have continuing problems, usually a slight weakness that may be hardly noticeable except to a trained professional. That may interfere with growth so that one limb may become shorter, she noted.

About 50 percent continue to have seizures and are categorized as epileptics, she said.

In another development at the Heart Association meeting, a study was presented that raised questions of whether some patients with mildly elevated blood pressure, as measured in doctor's offices, may need around-the-clock medication or any medication at all.

The findings, by the Cornell University Medical Center's Cardiovascular Center, suggested that about a fifth of the patients with mildly elevated blood pressure in the doctor's office may have normal readings at other times and not need hypertension medication.

Youngsters' heart surgery bloodless

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Almost 100 children have undergone open-heart surgery with a "bloodless" technique that reduces body temperatures and dilutes blood instead of using transfusions, easing the ordeal of surgery on the body.

The procedure, in which the blood is diluted with water and nutrients, results in less loss of blood and less strain on kidneys and lungs than in conventional surgery, doctors said Monday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

Sambamurthy Subramanian, chief of cardiac surgery at Children's Hospital in Buffalo, N.Y., said in an interview that the findings were a surprise. The children ranged in age from 3 months to 8 years.

Originally, the technique had been used only on Jehovah's Witnesses, whose religion forbids blood transfusions, but it turned out that the Jehovah's Witness infants tolerated surgery much better than other patients.

"We felt if these patients are doing so well, why don't we do it for other patients?" Subramanian said.

The technique consists of cooling children's bodies from the normal temperature of 98.6 degrees to about 75 degrees, cutting the rate of blood flow in half.

The blood is diluted with an equal or larger amount of a standard hospital solution of water, minerals and starch or other nutrients.

In cases requiring unusually complex surgery, the body may be cooled for up to an hour to about 65 degrees, at which time circulation stops completely.

Transfused blood always carries with it the risk of disease, especially hepatitis.

Subramanian's colleague, Dr. Jacob Bergsland, told the convention: "Our experience shows that bloodless surgery can be performed safely in all but the smallest infants."

The diluted blood that flows through the children's bodies carries as little as one-third of the percentage of oxygen-carrying hemoglobin found in normal blood, and research has shown that the thinner blood circulates better than normal blood, Subramanian said.

In nearly 100 trials on youngsters who needed surgery for a variety of congenital heart defects at the Buffalo hospital, Subramanian said he found no detrimental effects.

Floor helps people stand longer

DALLAS (AP) — A podiatrist said his research team came up with a special flooring that helps workers stand longer.

"The reason people who have to do standing work — like neurosurgeons or machinists or homemakers or teachers or clerks at cash registers — become fatigued is that they have to continually move their legs to stimulate circulation," said Dr. Charles Brantingham, a podiatrist and assistant professor of medicine at the University of Southern California.

"Standing still is very tiring," he said. "We have designed a surface with some ribs underneath that can be placed under carpet and a mat for the work place that cause the foot to move slightly," Brantingham said. "The muscle activity produced reduces venous pressure, the study shows, and can even help prevent varicose veins."

Brantingham's findings were scheduled to be presented Wednesday at a convention of the American Public Health Association.

A mile of the surface — designed with a continuous series of 4-inch elevated triangles — was installed at the Resorts International hotel-casino in Atlantic City, N.J. and profits went up because the gamblers could stand longer and lose more money, he said.

AIDS fear hurt blood banks, official says

NEW YORK (AP) — After 10 years of increases, blood donations declined this year as potential donors learned of a few cases in which contaminated transfusions led to the deadly disease AIDS, an American Red Cross official says.

But Dr. Alfred Katz also said Thursday that hospitals are in no danger of running low on blood because they're using less this year.

"Surgeons may be realizing that some blood transfusions are not necessary. Or they may be concerned about transmissible diseases, including AIDS," said Katz, director of blood services for the Red Cross.

At a news conference at the New York Academy of Sciences, Katz said the 1 percent decline in donations in 1983 contrasts with an average annual increase of 6 percent recorded in the past decade.

Katz said he believes AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is scaring some potential donors out of participating in community blood programs.

"If all of us were convinced that our blood was going to be safer for somebody in our family ... we would all tend to hold ourselves back from normal community blood drives and wait for that occasion," he said.

GULF SHAREHOLDERS SHOULD KNOW ALL THE FACTS

Dear Fellow Shareholder:

Please do not be misled by Mr. T. Boone Pickens' November 16 "Urgent" letter. In our opinion, it is full of objectionable statements and quotations taken out of context.

For example, his letter grossly distorts two columns written by respected financial analysts, which appeared in the November 13 edition of The New York Times.*

The title of one of those columns calls Pickens' royalty trusts "A Bad Idea That Could Spread." The author of that column stated that a royalty trust would "jeopardize Gulf" and then explained that such trusts, if adopted generally in the oil industry, would be potentially dangerous to the nation's energy security because it would lead to an "inevitable rise in imported oil".

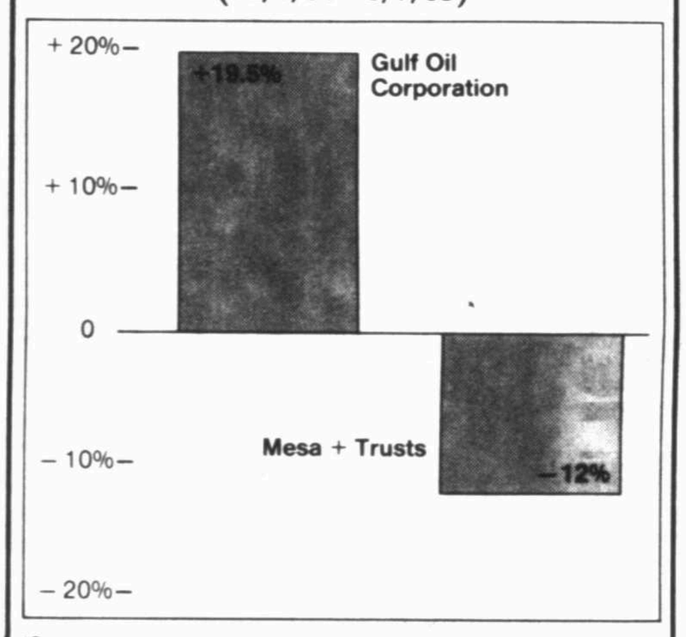
The other guest columnist, while taking the opposite position on the question of royalty trusts, nevertheless went on in the article to praise present Gulf management for the "effective job" they have done during the past few years. In his words, "Gulf Oil's management, led by James E. Lee, has adjusted its strategic planning, sold or shut down losing operations, trimmed the fat from on-going operations, disposed of nonproductive assets and has done a creditable job of getting new oil and gas production onstream. On this basis, Gulf shareholders have reason to be satisfied with Mr. Lee and company."

In our opinion, Mr. Pickens is not giving you the full story.

He used a chart to imply that a royalty trust would offer value to Gulf shareholders. In our view, the chart that is most pertinent to any present Gulf shareholder is the one that follows. This shows the total return of Gulf stock from the time I became Gulf's chairman (December 1, 1981) until the day before the Pickens Group began purchasing our stock. The chart shows Gulf's total return up approximately 19.5%; Mesa's total return (including both royalty trusts) down approximately 12% during that same time period.

In addition, the chart used by Pickens did not even consider dividend distributions. As a Gulf shareholder, you know that the best measure of performance is total return, which includes both stock appreciation and the dividends you receive.

TOTAL RETURN ON INVESTMENT*
(12/1/81—8/9/83)



*Price appreciation plus dividends plus trust distributions to a person who purchased on December 1, 1981 one share of Gulf stock or four shares of Mesa stock and one share of Mesa Royalty Trust (equivalent to one share of Mesa prior to the distribution of the Mesa Royalty Trust) at the closing price on November 30, 1981.

1983 marked the 10th consecutive year in which Gulf's dividend payments have been increased over that of the prior year.

Also in his letter, Pickens attempted to gloss over the tax consequences to shareholders of creating a royalty trust. The plain fact is that if a royalty trust were created, the majority of our shareholders would face a significant tax burden—up to the maximum rate of 50%, and you will receive no cash to pay that tax.

Finally, Pickens expresses concern about the rights of Gulf shareholders. But the fact is that Mesa does not have cumulative voting, and Sunshine Mining got rid of cumulative voting in 1980. Gulf believes that the holders of a majority of Gulf's shares should elect all directors.

We believe that the planned reorganization best serves your investment in Gulf. This reorganization will lessen the opportunity for a minority shareholder—like Pickens—to disrupt our program.

I urge you to vote FOR your Company's proposed reorganization. Abstaining from voting is the same as voting against the proposal, since it is necessary that more than 50% of the Company's outstanding shares be voted FOR the proposal for it to be approved.

Because every proxy vote cast is crucial to the future of your Company, we have made every effort to provide you with the information you need to make an informed decision.

Please express your support of Gulf's proposal by signing, dating, and mailing the WHITE proxy card. If you have previously signed a Blue opposition proxy, you have every right to change your mind. Remember, your latest dated proxy is the only one that counts.

The management and Board of Directors thank you for your support of your Company.

James E. Lee
Chairman of the Board and
Chief Executive Officer

Forces put on alert in Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government announced new security measures in the province today in the wake of the machine-gun attack on a Protestant church two days ago.

Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior said security forces in the area had been put on maximum alert, soldiers' leaves had been canceled and troops were being moved toward the border with the Irish Republic. The frontier region, referred to by police as "bandit country," was the site of Sunday's attack.

"There will be a much higher profile for a period of time," he said in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview

Prior was to meet with leaders of Northern Ireland's Protestant majority later today at Belfast's Stormont Castle, the seat of Ulster's provincial government.

His comments came hours after Roman Catholic youths firebombed a police Land Rover in Londonderry and sent it crashing into a wall.

The youths bombarded the vehicle with 20 gasoline bombs in a predawn attack before the two officers inside were rescued by police in another Land Rover, a police spokesman said.

On Monday night, all 27 delegates from the Protestant Official Unionist Party quit the 78-seat Northern Ireland Assembly to protest the attack on the Protestant church by Catholic extremists. The mass resignation jeopardized the future of the assembly.

U.S. resuming high-level talks with Moscow

An Analysis

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, under pressure from its allies, is resuming high-level talks with Moscow even though it hasn't received the apology and compensation it was demanding for the shooting down of the South Korean airliner on Sept. 1.

Officials said two recent meetings between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin signaled the resumption of high-level contacts. Shultz had refused to meet with Dobrynin for nearly two months, until he invited Dobrynin for lunch on Oct. 28.

They also met again last Friday before Dobrynin returned to Moscow for consultations. The meetings were announced at the time, but officials did not stress their importance until Monday, when they apparently decided to reassure European allies and others that Washington was making a serious effort to reduce tensions.

"It's an effort to get the dialogue moving again," said a senior State Department official who insisted on anonymity. Referring to the Shultz-Dobrynin meetings, he said, "They had a number of sessions before the shooting down of the airliner, and I would cast these as a resumption of that."

The official said Shultz had invited Dobrynin and the Soviets were quick to accept. "They were both ready for it. They both wanted to do it," he said.

Looking ahead, officials say Shultz might meet Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the opening of the European Disarmament Conference in Stockholm in January, if foreign ministers are invited. Moscow is considered more anxious than Washington to have regular high-level contacts.

Prior to the airliner tragedy, it was thought the talks would lead to a summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Yuri Andropov sometime next spring. While still not completely ruled out, there is virtually no discussion of a summit now.

But the European allies, especially West Germany, have been urging the resumption of high-level contacts between the United States and Moscow.

Salvadorans defy no-strike statute

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Telephone workers defied a no-strike law, disrupting communications throughout El Salvador, and leftist rebels killed 13 soldiers and claimed they captured 135 others during fighting in the remote northeast.

An army officer said late Monday that 500 reinforcements were sent to Anamoros, 117 miles northeast of the capital.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said 13 soldiers were killed in a rebel attack Sunday at the isolated mountain town, but he denied a rebel claim, broadcast on the clandestine Radio Venceremos, that 135 soldiers were captured.

The conflicting claims could not be verified through other sources because the telephone workers' strike made it impossible to call many small towns. Telex and other lines were also down, and it was nearly impossible to make or receive foreign calls.

More than 800 operators and other phone company employees walked off the job Monday to demand bonus pay.

It was the first strike in four years by the workers of the National Telecommunications Administration, or ANTEL. There have been no wage increases in that period despite a 20 percent annual inflation rate.

Civilian sources in Sensuntepeque, 40 miles northeast of the capital, said at least 14 dead troopers and many wounded soldiers have been brought there from scattered guerrilla attacks across Cabanas province. The sources, who work at hospitals and the city morgue, asked not to be identified.

Rebels launched the attacks in a bid to increase control over a section of northern El Salvador near the Honduran border. They already control much of northern La Union, Morazan and San Miguel provinces to the east, and Chalatenango province to the west.

Fighting also raged in Guatemala, where guerrillas killed the military commander of the Solola district by setting off a mine under his car on a rural road, an army press release said Monday.

Col. Luis Alfonso Rebulli Capelli was the highest-ranking officer to be killed in recent years of the 20-year-old guerrilla insurgency in Guatemala.

The release said his driver and bodyguard were wounded in the explosion Sunday.

Poland forms new defense council

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Parliament today appointed Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski chairman of a new defense council with broad powers like those used to suppress dissent during 19 months of martial law.

Jaruzelski stepped down as defense minister as expected. He remained Communist Party chief and prime minister.

The new defense minister, former Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Florian Siwicki, will be Jaruzelski's top deputy on the defense council, which was approved by Parliament without debate or dissent on Monday.

Parliamentary sources say a major shakeup in the Cabinet also is planned.

The Communist government's actions come at a time of public displeasure with announced plans to boost food prices. Labor leader Lech Walesa and fugitive leaders of the outlawed Solidarity trade union have called for protests of the price increases, scheduled for January.

Some Western and Polish analysts say Jaruzelski hopes the Cabinet changes will shift blame for Poland's ailing economy away from the leadership.

The Parliamentary sources, who insisted on anonymity, said Jaruzelski would move the government's top economic official, Janusz Obodowski, to Moscow to represent Poland on the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance.

Obodowski is chairman of the planning commission and deputy prime minister. Goverment and party sources, speaking privately, have criticized Obodowski for mismanaging the economy.

The top party economist, Manfred Gorywoda, would replace Obodowski as planning chief.

In other changes, Zbigniew Messner, an economist and member of the Communist Party's ruling politburo, will be named to the new post of first deputy prime minister, the No. 2 post in the government, the sources said. Messner would take charge of carrying out moderate economic reforms, which Jaruzelski has said are being resisted by party and government bureaucrats.

When the Bell System splits up, your phone bill won't.

Beginning January 1, different companies will provide different parts of your phone service. It's due to the break up of the Bell System.

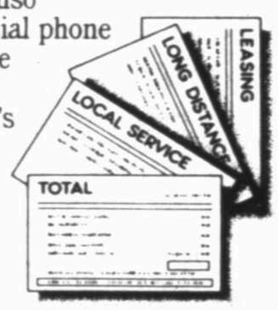
But you'll still get only one bill each month at your home or office.* Because all of the services previously provided by the Bell System will be billed through Southwestern Bell Telephone, except for purchases of new telephone equipment from AT&T.

So you'll continue to make just one payment each month to Southwestern Bell Telephone as you now do. But the way your phone bill looks will change. It'll have more pages.

For example, local service from Southwestern Bell Telephone will be on one page, long distance from other companies will be on another page and leased equipment on an additional page.

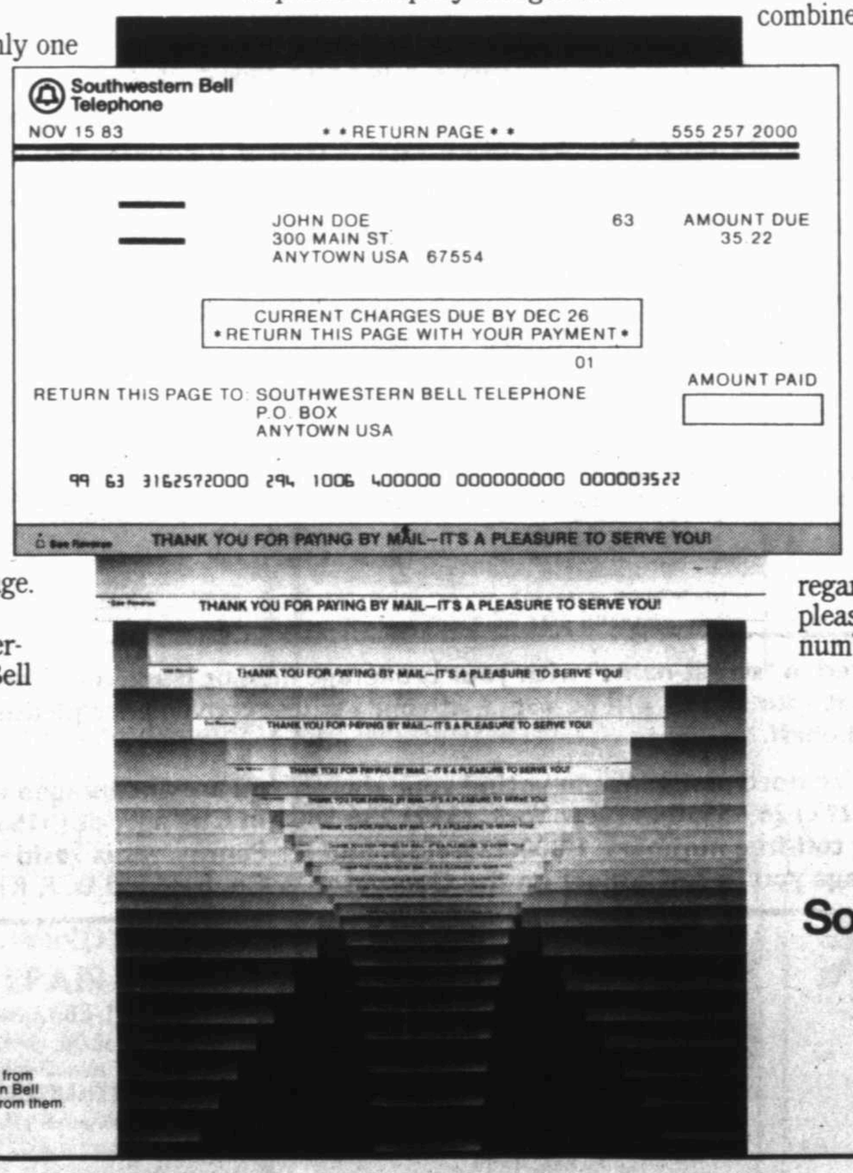
You'll also see a separate page for some long distance charges from Southwestern Bell Telephone. These would be for long distance calls made within your surrounding area which Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to handle. Outside that area, though, long distance will be provided by other companies. And all long distance calls and charges will be itemized as always.

Separate company charges will show you exactly what each service costs. There also will be a special phone number on the first page of each company's section that you can call for questions about that part of your bill. That's important, because each company will be responsible for handling questions concerning its services.



Southwestern Bell Telephone has combined all of these separate service charges into one bill to make it easier for you. And to show you exactly how much each part of your total telephone service costs. It's one more way we're working to keep your telephone service, even with all the changes, what most people think is the best in the world.

If you would like to find out more about your new bill format, call 1 800 555-5000, toll free. We'll be glad to answer your questions. For questions regarding specific charges, please refer to the phone numbers on your bill.



*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

Cicely Tyson sues Elizabeth Taylor, others

Cicely Tyson

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Cicely Tyson has begun legal proceedings against Elizabeth Taylor and others, seeking back wages of $625,000 from her performances in "The Corn is Green."

Ms. Tyson claims she was "improperly terminated" by the management from her starring role in the stage production.

The winner of an Emmy for "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" has filed a demand for arbitration against Miss Taylor, producer Zef Bufman, The Elizabeth Theatre Group and Zev Bufman Entertainment, her manager, Larry Thompson, announced Monday.

The Elizabeth Theatre Group was formed by Miss Taylor and Bufman to stage three productions — "Private Lives," starring Miss Taylor and Richard Burton; "The Corn is Green"; and a third production.

The group was disbanded earlier this month by mutual agreement between Bufman and Miss Taylor.

Ms. Tyson contends she was guaranteed $750,000 to star in both the stage and television productions of "The Corn is Green," which closed after a poor showing at the box office.

Bufman was out of town Monday and could not be reached for comment. A woman who would only identify herself as his assistant said it would be improper for the company to comment on an unresolved legal matter.

WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — "Hi, everyone. I'm Liza Minnelli," said the casually dressed woman who walked up to a microphone at a restaurant in West Orange. "Mind if I sing for you a little while?" The audience didn't mind a bit.

The 37-year-old Ms. Minnelli was at The Manor on Saturday with a group of friends, including her husband, Mark Gero, and the actor Joe Pecci, who starred in the movie "Raging Bull," when she decided to do some singing.

At first the crowd of about 150 thought it might be a joke, but when Ms. Minnelli launched into "New York, New York," the doubt disappeared — and the impromptu concert went on for more than two hours.

Ms. Minnelli sang many of her own hits, including "Cabaret," but when she was asked to sing "You Made Me Love You," a Judy Garland favorite, she turned the audience down.

"No, that's my mom's song," she said.

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — James Van Allen, for whom the Van Allen radiation belts are named, describes a book he has written as "a participant's account of how early space exploration all started." In "Origins of Magnetospheric Physics," Van Allen, now 69, tells of the moments after the launching of the Explorer I satellite in 1958.

"The clock ticked away," he says, "and we all drank coffee to allay our collective anxiety." And when a radio signal from Explorer finally was received, the "roomful of people exploded with exultation."

In the weeks that followed, Van Allen and his colleagues collected and analyzed data leading to discovery of the Van Allen radiation belts in space, which surround the Earth and other planets.

Van Allen, head of the University of Iowa's department of physics and astronomy since 1951, says his book is "not sophisticated" and not "grandiose in any sense." It is intended mainly for students, working scientists and historians of science, but may also interest the general reader, he says.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy visited one of this city's poorest neighborhoods — the Hill District, used as a setting for the "Hill Street Blues" television series — and toured a soup kitchen.

Earlier Monday, the Massachusetts Democrat chaired a three-hour hearing on hunger, one of a series he is conducting in five cities.

At the Jubilee Soup Kitchen, Kennedy chatted with Sister Liquori Rossner, a Roman Catholic nun who oversees distribution of hot and cold food for up to 300 poor people a day, and an unemployed steelworker who complained of "really bad" economic conditions.

"There's no way people have to live like this," said Ron Christman, a steelworker for 17 years until he was laid off two years ago.

"I think you're absolutely right," Kennedy told him.

Pregnant women with diabetes should consult their obstetrician before exercise

Dear Dr. Solomon: As someone who never misses one of your columns, I know you have written that women can continue to exercise while they are pregnant. But what about if the woman has diabetes? Would you recommend exercise for such a woman during pregnancy? — Ella, Petersburg, Va

Dear Ella: You raise a question that will receive different answers from different physicians. Some obstetricians recommend restricting exercise for diabetic women during the last part of a pregnancy. However, Dr. Raul Artel, of the University of Southern California School of Medicine in Los Angeles, reports that mild to moderate exercise is safe for pregnant women whose diabetes is well controlled.

The safest course for any woman, particularly one whose pregnancy is complicated by diabetes, is to obtain the services of a competent obstetrician and to follow his or her instructions as closely as possible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: An acquaintance of mine is taking estrogen to protect her from loss of bone, but she says that her doctor told her that it would also help her from getting a heart attack. Is this possible or is she confused about what she was told? — Mrs. H.R. Canton, Ohio

Dear Mrs. R.: There is increasing evidence that estrogen may provide protecton for the heart and blood vessels; and Dr. Howard L. Judd, of the University of California, Los Angeles School of Medicine, says that this might be more important than its protection against bone loss.

Until about 50 years of age, white men have abut 10 times the chance of dying from heart disease than women; after that age, however, the risk for women begins to increase faster than it does for men. For men and women 90 years of age, the risk of cardiovascular death is the same.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you explain exactly what is meant by impotence and what causes it? Everyone seems to have a different opinion. — Stanley, Portland, Maine

Dear Stanley: Impotence refers to the inability of a man to obtain or maintain an erection that would permit him to have satisfactory sexual relations. It may be primary, which means that the man was never able to have an erection, or secondary, a condition that may be caused by psychological or organic factors or some combination.

It used to be thought that most impotence, possibly as much as 90 percent, was due to psychological factors; however, newer and more sophisticated methods of investigation suggest that organic causes are present in about one-half of all cases. The important point is that impotence is now being recognized as a treatable condition.

For Sheila, Washington, D.C.: Injury from frostbite can occur even if the temperature is above freezing if there is a stong wind. Small children are particularly susceptible tothis during the winter months.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Trudeau's Doonesbury opens on Broadway

NEW YORK (AP) — It's been nearly a year since Michael J. Doonesbury and the other residents of Walden commune disappeared from the more than 700 newspapers that carried Garry Trudeau's Pulitzer Prize-winning comic strip.

They're expected to return in time for the 1984 election campaign. In the meantime, you can catch Zonker, B.D., Joanie Caucus and Uncle Duke on Broadway — singing and dancing in "Doonesbury," a likable little musical that opened Monday night at the Biltmore Theater.

Trudeau has done impressive double duty on his first Broadway show, providing a book that doesn't dawdle and lyrics that show genuine wit and emotion. He's allowed his pen and ink characters to step away from Peter Larkin's cartoon-style set and become human. But his sting is never far away.

Trudeau's collaborators offer sturdy support. Elizabeth Swados' strong, rhythmic music ranges from calypso to country to rock. And Jacques Levy has directed with a minimum of show biz razz-ma-tazz, a light touch that complements the show's satiric flavor.

The three are working with a slender story line: college graduation is approaching for Mike Doonesbury, the dithering major-domo of Walden; tanning expert Zonker Harris, the count of Coppertone; marvelous Mark Slackmeyer, the mellow talk show host at radio station WBBY; and superjock B.D., whose chance to play football for the Dallas Cowboys evaporates when he's traded to the Seattle Seahawks for two draft picks and a bus.

Into this appealing quartet roars Zonker's renegade Uncle Duke, a high-flying former U.S. ambassador to China. Duke's been forced to open a drug rehabiliation center after being convicted of selling recreational drugs at the State Department. Now he's finagled Walden's lease. But instead of detoxing junkies, Duke (aggressively played by Gary Beach) plans to bulldoze the building and put up the best little vacation condo in New England.

Beach, with the strongest voice in the cast, makes the most of the musical's showiest role. Whether describing the jury that convicted him — "We're talking human garbage here" — or trying to scare off imaginary bats with kitchen utensils, he dominates the stage.

But Trudeau and Ms. Swados have been careful to dole out the musical numbers to all 10 major characters. Each gets a chance to shine.

Ralph Bruneau, who plays the title character, has a fine moment near the end of the second act when he fumbles through a proposal to his girlfriend J.J. (Kate Burton). He's got it all written out on index cards and can't seem to find the right one.

And J.J. has an affecting confrontation with her mother, lawyer Joanie Caucus, who deserted her daughter to find herself during the feminist revolution of the 1970s.

Korchnoi wins first game in chess championship

LONDON (AP) — Victor Korchnoi, the Soviet defector who says chess in his old homeland is "all politics," played briskly and aggressively to win the first game of his world chess championship semifinal match against a 20-year-old Soviet rival.

Korchnoi, seeking a third chance to challenge world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union, defeated Gary Kasparov on Monday night in the first game of their scheduled 12-game series.

Kasparov, who had the advantage of the first move because he drew the white pieces, resigned after Korchnoi's 52nd move.The Soviet delegation left the hall with glum faces.

Kasparov, reckoned by experts the world's outstanding young player, was confused by Korchnoi's rapid play.

Normally quick and aggressive himself, Kasparov spent so much time thinking over his opponent's fast moves that he ran into time trouble.

The two players play again Wednesday.

Jazz promoter dead at 71

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Milton Morris, a Kansas City saloonkeeper who helped launch the careers of several jazz stars, is dead at age 71, apparently of heart failure.

Morris, who died Monday, is credited with helping nurture the careers of jazz greats Charlie "Yardbird" Parker, Jo Jones and Count Basie.

Morris, a Kansas City native who had ran Milton's Tap Room since 1951, also was an unsuccessful candidate for governor five times. His campaign platforms included legalization of gambling to limit taxes.
