TRIAL OF MOORE NOT CONCLUDED

End of Austin Attorney's Case Probably Will Be Reached Monday Afternoon

DEFENDANT BREAKS DOWN

Says He Intended No Wrong in Handing Kirby Jury List to Deputy

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—The trial of the contempt case against District Attorney Warren W. Moore occupied the entire time of Judge Brooks of the Twenty-sixth district court today, and when the court adjourned in the afternoon until Monday morning the arguments had not been completed.

Moore stands charged with having aided in the selection of a jury in the Kirby et al bribery cases, the charge being the result of an investigation being made by three members of the Austin bar.

The state only placed one witness on the stand. This witness was Eugene Barbisch, deputy sheriff. Barbisch testified that he had been approached by Moore prior to the Kirby trial and furnished with a list of seven or eight names, and was requested by Moore to summon the men named on the list. Barbisch testified that he immediately told Sheriff Matthews of the matter and the sheriff took the list and made a copy of it and returned the original to Barbisch and at Moore's request returned it to Moore.

Several of the names mentioned on the list were summoned as witnesses for the defense, and all testified that they had never been approached by Moore regarding the Kirby trial, and Moore did not know how they stood in reference to the Kirby case.

Respondent Moore was the last witness placed on the stand and he was visibly affected during the recital of his testimony.

He testified that he had given Barbisch the list from which to summon a jury; that he was under such a strain at the time that he did not realize he was doing wrong. He now saw that he had committed an indiscretion and that it was improper, but he had no intention of doing anything wrong. He was only trying to do right in what he did and had no intention of bringing himself in contempt of the court.

He completely broke down during the trial and wept. It was some time before he could resume his testimony.

In answer to a question as to his motive for furnishing the deputy sheriff with a list, he replied: "I cannot say why I did it; but I now recognize that it was wrong."

The court will deliver his charge to the jury Monday morning, after the arguments are completed.

MOROCCO SITUATION AT HIGH TENSION

German Ambassador Pressing France Hard for Reply to Conference Demand

LONDON, June 17.—With negotiations well under way between Japan and Russia, the relations between France and Germany have reached an acute stage. The greatest concern is felt here over the outcome of the differences between these two nations, touching upon the Moroccan situation. Diplomats fear that the war lord of Germany has assumed an attitude which makes it almost impossible for France to recognize without disgrace.

Emperor William has set his mind upon the international conference of Morocco, the request for which comes nominally from Morocco, but which everyone knows was instigated by Germany, and the German ambassador to France is pressing Premier Rouvier hard upon the point.

It is understood Mr. Rouvier has asked for time in which to reflect. France's reply is awaited with eager interest. Up to the present the French people have been wonderfully calm, but this, it is believed, is due to the popular conviction that the government will act only in accordance with the well-known wishes of all patriotic Frenchmen and for the honor of France.

The anti-German feelings is as strong as ever in France, notwithstanding recent diplomatic smooth speeches, and any move to kneel to Germany would, it is feared, bring about a tremendous upheavel.

Germany in fact is considered a piece of high-handed interference in a situation which France has hitherto had entirely in her control. Rouvier, therefore cannot accept any suggestion from Germany which would not in effect be an abandonment of her position.

The situation is complicated by the fact that it is generally regarded in the European castles that Germany is merely using the Moroccan question as a pretext for opening up a general discussion of the Franco-German relations. Germany, it is believed, seeks to secure from France a guarantee that she will not try to isolate Germany, either through negotiations that might tend to impair the triple alliance by relations of close intimacy or by any other means.

SECRETARY HAY TO TAKE LONG REST

Is Spending Summer at Home of His Daughter, Mrs. Payne Whitney

NEW YORK, June 17.—Secretary of State John Hay is taking a rest at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Payne Whitney of Manhasset. Mr. Hay's physician, who attended him at Weisbaden, advised the rest cure. The doctor told Secretary Hay that he had been working too hard and advised a long rest. In fact, the physician put it so strongly that Secretary Hay made arrangements to go immediately to Manhasset. Secretary Hay received an enthusiastic welcome when he went to Manhasset.

LEGAL MEETING POSTPONED

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—R. H. Conneriy, clerk of the court of civil appeals, Third supreme judicial district, was advised yesterday by Judge C. H. Jenkins of Brownwood, Texas, that the meeting of the board of legal examiners has been postponed from June 20 to 26.

ENGLISH COXEY INVADES LONDON

Unemployed March to Metropolis in Effort to Impress Parliament

LONDON, June 17.—The advance guard of the English Coxey's army is already in London and from reports from the provinces the unemployed from all sections if the kingdom are likely to gather at the capital and demand that some action be taken by the government to give work to the unemployed by the undertaking of public works in various parts of the kingdom. Divisions of the various unemployed have started from various points with London as their objective point. The most important division is what is popularly called the "Liecester's Army." Five hundred men started on the march under the command of Rev. F. L. Donaldson, a Christian socialist. They were divided into companies of twenty each, commanded by a sergeant, and have been under remarkable discipline throughout the march. As near as possible they have been kept sober and orderly. At Market borough three men were expelled from the army for having been drunk. The men do not seem to have any very clear idea of what they are to accomplish. They seem to think that their demonstration may have the effect of inducing parliament to take effective notice of the depressed industrial conditions which prevail throughout foreign land. It is not believed that their presence in London will have any effect.

TEXAS RAILROADS ARE MAKING "GOOD MONEY"

State Commission's Statement Shows 4.1 Per Cent Increase in Net Earnings

AUSTIN Texas, June 17.—The railroad commission today authorized the following interesting comparative statements:

SITUATION CRITICAL IN AUSTRO-HUNGARY

Only Respect for Aged Emperor Francis Joseph Prevents Open Revolution

By Malcolm Clark.

Special Cable to The Telegram.

BERLIN, June 17.—Although the disturbances which, it had been expected, would follow the formation of the cabinet have not taken place, the situation in Hungary is exceedingly critical and it is evident that respect for aged Emperor Francis Joseph is the only thing that prevents open revolution.

Baron Fejervary, the prime minister, however, is very sanguine and does not think it will be necessary for the government to take any extreme measures. No attempt is to be made to enforce the conscription of recruits, but an appeal will be made to the patriotism of the young men of Hungary to voluntarily report for military service and both at Budapest and Vienna it is confidently expected that at least half of the men will meet. The same is the case with the payment of taxes, which the government has no right to force, as Hungary since January last is without any law, the diet having refused to pass any. During similar conditions in the past, most of the taxpayers have voluntarily paid their taxes, a burdensome accumulation to be paid later. The opposition, however, is endeavoring to induce its followers to refuse to pay, hoping thus to force the government to submission.

World's Botanists Meet

VIENNA, June 17.—Botanists from all parts of the world have been in session during the past week at the second International Botanical Congress. These sessions have been attended by some of the most noted botanists now alive and many scientists, who are interested in kindred work. The most important business before the body was the consideration of a report of the committee on botanical nomenclature, which was appointed at the first meeting of the congress held in Paris at the time of the exposition in 1900. It is said by members of congress that the work done in this line will have an important bearing on the future study and in the development of this most interesting science. The last session of the congress, so far as business is concerned, was held today and an adjournment will be taken tomorrow. A number of the delegates, including Dr. N. L. Brittin, director of the New York Botanical Gardens, will leave some day next week for a tour of the botanical gardens at Berlin, Paris, Kew and other noted places.

Governor's Son Better

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—Governor Lanham was advised yesterday that his son, Ned, who is ill in Weatherford, was resting nicely, with no alarming symptoms. The report that he was partially paralyzed and had suffered a severe hemorrhage is entirely without foundation. The fear of the attending physician is that the tendency is toward typhoid fever, superintenduced by exposure to the sun and use of bad drinking water.

GOING HOME

COTTON SPINNERS TO FORM ENORMOUS TRUST

Organization of Growers in the South Will Be Met by Powerful Combination

LONDON, June 17.—The organization of the cotton growers of the south American states for the purpose of curtailing production and keeping up the price of the staple will be met by an organization, international in character, of the cotton spinners, the object of which will be not so much to cut down the price of cotton, though this will be naturally one of the objects; as to the gambling in the raw product and bringing about as much stability to prices as natural conditions will permit. The first steps toward this organization was taken at the recent international congress of master spinners and manufacturers held at Manchester.

A special committee, of which C. W. Macara is the head, is at work drawing up plans for such an organization and these probably will be effected by the time the association holds it next meeting. That the condition of the cotton trade in this country is in a bad way is evident by the report of the tariff commission recently published. According to this report the annual average consumption of raw cotton in the United Kingdom was 15.08 million hundredweight from 1896 to 1905. This had fallen to 13.90 millino hundredweight in 1903 and 13.99 million hundredweight in 1903 and 13.99

The consumption in continental Europe had risen from 9.17 million hundredweight in 1880 to 22.77 million hundredweight in 1904. The American consumption has risen from 6.13 million hundredweight in 1880 to 18.92 million hundredweight in 1904. These figures are giving the English cotton spinners and the government no little concern, and it is not improbable that the duty will be levied on manufactured goods.

News comes from British Central Africa that the cotton crop there will be a partial, if not an entire failure.

HOCH GIVES UP HOPE

Convicted Murderer Despairs of Raising Money for Appeal

CHICAGO, June 17.—Johann Hoch is discouraged and has given up all hope. He said he would be unable to raise the $700 necessary to take his case to the supreme court, but even should the case reach the highest tribunal in the state the convicted wife slayer has little or no hope, because no reversible errors have been found in the record of his trial.

Hoch was in an angry frame of mind when he arose in the county jail yesterday. He denounced everything and everybody in general. The prisoner was angry because he had not been granted a respite, although a delay of one week had been granted to "Jocko" Briggs, also under sentence of death. He said: "I am a law-abiding citizen, who never committed a crime in my life, while Briggs is a dangerous highway robber, who killed his victim while trying to rob him."

CROWD SITS UP TO HEAR W. J. BRYAN

Audience of 5,000 People Waits for Address at Muskogee Until Late Hour

Special to The Telegram.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., June 17.—Hon. William Jennings Bryan spoke here tonight on "Democracy." Mr. Bryan did not reach the city until about 10 o'clock, but notwithstanding the lateness of the hour, fully 5,000 people, among them many ladies, heard him.

Mr. Bryan said democracy was gaining strength and in support of that statement pointed to the fact that President Roosevelt in arbitrating the Pennsylvania coal strike had adopted a democratic principle just as he has in the railroad rate question and other important issues of the day.

Mr. Bryan made an address at Keota today, returning here this evening, and will depart for the west tomorrow.

PRESIDENT OBJECTS TO GIRL RIDING ASTRIDE

Joined His Party Unnoticed, and Now Photographs Must Be Destroyed

DENVER, Col., June 17.—The government has ordered that hundreds of snapshots of President Roosevelt's party, taken while it was returning from the hunting trip, be destroyed. The pictures were made by residents of Glenwood Springs and one was a moving picture by H. H. Buckwalter. A very pretty young lady joined the party as it was nearing the Springs and her presence has caused the government order to destroy all negatives in which she appeared.

The reason for the order restraining the photographers from using the pictures was that the garb worn by this daughter of the west was not in accordance with the female attire of her sisters of the east. She wore a tan riding habit, the skirt of which lacked many inches of touching the ground, and where the skirt really ought to be there were a pair of very pretty ankles. A chocked hat, a bandana handkerchief about her neck and her sleeves rolled up "washer woman" fashion, was just how she looked. And she rode astride.

Gertrude Dunn, the young woman who caused all this furore, lives in Glenwood Springs. When she heard of the plans to photograph the presidential party she drove out with John E. Monk, who represented the New York Sun with the party. When they came up with the president she jumped out of the buggy and seeing the horse ridden by Jackson Elliott, the Associated Press representative, standing by without a rider, she whirled herself into the saddle and ride up behind the president just as the photographer began to get busy. The first shot got the girl while riding just between President Roosevelt and Secretary Loeb. Several other pictures were taken, and in all of them the "girl of the Rockies" had a prominent position. She appeared not as the uninvited visitor, but just as though she was an honored guest.

The president evidently did not realize that he had a charming girl at his elbow all the time the photographers were busy shooting him, but there she is in every picture, or rather, there she was, as most of the photographs have been destroyed.

Arrangements had just been completed to present the moving picture scene when the notice came that the government would not allow them to be used, and if the film is used at all it will be filled with blank spaces showing where Miss Dunn had been.

ROJESTVENSKY LIKES JAPANESE TREATMENT

Russian Admiral Slowly Recovering from Wounds Received in Battle

LONDON, June 17.—The Moji, Japan, correspondent of the Daily Telegraph cables an account of his visit to Vice Admiral Rojestvensky in the hospital at Sasebo. The admiral, speaking in broken English, expressed his pleasure at the treatment accorded him by the Japanese and praised the quarters assigned him. He occupies a private room, which is well ventilated and gives the admiral a view of the beautiful landscape. Rojestvensky said to the correspondent:

"I have everything I desire. My wounds are healing, but my left leg is troublesome, and it will be some time before I am able to move about. In thirty days, perhaps, I shall be well again."

Asked for his views of the naval battle the admiral merely replied:

"The Japanese fleet was so good it was impossible—"

Then he completely broke down. Evidently his mental sufferings were acute, for he desired to avoid the subject, and during the remainder of the conversation the naval battle was not mentioned.

"By day," said the admiral, "I look upon that lovely scene," indicating the landscape, "and by night I dream of it."

SAN ANTONIO POSTMASTER BETTER

Special to The Telegram.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 17.—Dr. G. M. Clifford, postmaster, who has been critically ill as the result of paralysis and uraemia, is reported much better tonight, with chances of recovery.

JUDGE TERRELL LOOKS FOR EXTRA SESSION

Says He Expects Three-fourths of Legislators Will Offer Services Free

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—Judge A. W. Terrell, representative from Travis county, author of the general election bill, today, in discussing the proposed call of the legislature to correct an error in the bill, said:

"I believe that by the 24th I will have letters from three-fourths of the members of the legislature, who desire to return to Austin in special session without expense to the state to prevent a fraud on the law by false enrollment of the bill."

"The only members," he said, "who object, that I have heard from, are two or three who have spoken through the press. On the 24th instant I will give the press the names of those who are willing to serve without pay in special session of two or three days.

"Whether Governor Lanham convenes the legislature in special session or not, these names may hereafter constitute a call of honor."

Judge Terrell had an interview with the governor on the subject yesterday, but the governor is not so situated that he is obliged to say "yes" or "no," and did not so say in this interview. The fact of the matter is that fully one year will elapse before an election is held under the law passed by the Twenty-ninth legislature, and while there is not now any emergency for a special session, meantime an emergency may or might justify the governor in calling a special session in which case he might be induced to name the correction in the enrollment election law as one of the subjects to be acted on.

"Correctors" have only this hope and this one thing to lean on for a second special session.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW SAILS

Senator and Family Will Spend Summer in France

NEW YORK, June 17.—Senator Chauncey Depew, Mrs. Depew and C. M. Depew Jr. sailed for Europe today on the American Liner St. Louis. They are going to Paris and Aislee Les Baines. They ordered cabins Nos. 16 and 18. In the senator's state room was a large horseshoe with the inscription: "Good Luck Senator, Margaret, Catharine."

The senator refused to discuss Equitable affairs, except to say that he was for "peace and harmony."

Asked whether he thought there would be serious trouble between France and Germany, he replied: "No, France will yield first, the fight would be too hopeless."

RAILROAD PLANNED IN JASPER COUNTY

Articles of Incorporation for the Rockland, Jasper and Northwestern Filed

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—Articles of incorporation of the Rockland, Jasper and Northwestern railway were filed today in the state department and approved by the attorney general.

The line is intended to be constructed from the town of Rockland, Tyler county, in a southeasterly direction through Tyler county across the Nueces river in Jasper county and continuing in a southerly southeasterly direction the town of Jasper.

The distance is about twenty-five miles. the country traversed being celebrated for its fine timber and adaptibility to the trucking industry. Business headquarters of the company are located in Rockland and the capital stock is $100,000.

Those behind the enterprise are well-known capitalists, whose names are as follows: W. W. Kyle, S. K. Stone, E. M. Weiss, F. H. Votaw, J. J. Elam, C. H. Markham, W. W. Cunningham, P. H. Weiss, Holmes Duke and J. L. Cunningham.

POPE'S TITLES ARE NOW RECOGNIZED

Announcement of Italian Government Regarded as Significant

ROME, June 17.—High church circles are discussing with no little interest the recent decision of the Italian Heraldic court to give formal recognition to the titles of nobility conferred by the Vatican. The main question discussed is as to whether or not this indicates that the negotiations for an understanding between the Vatican and the Quirinal has reached a more advanced stage than had been generally believed. It had been no secret here that Pope Pius, from the very beginning of his pontificate has been strongly disposed to resume relations with the Italian government, which would free him from the Vatican. The confinement has been particularly irksome to his holiness. Stories have been current for some months to the effect that he proposed to spend some part of the present summer outside of Rome.

There is a disposition to believe this action in regard t papal titles is the forerunner of a more important announcement which may mean the tacit, if not the explicit surrender by the pope of his claims to temporal sovereignty. The action of the Heraldic court is of particular interest to America, because of the large number of titles which have been conferred by the pope on Americans for the work in the interest of charity and humanity. These titles will now have the substantial approval of the Italian government.

QUEEN TELLS HOW SHE LIVES "SIMPLE LIFE"

Carmen Sylva's Day Often Lasts From 3 a. m. Until Following Midnight

LONDON, July 17.—Elizabeth, queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylvian, furnished the Daily Graphic with a charming account of the simple life as it is lived in a palace. She says:

"I rise, if possible, at 4 or even 3 in the morning. The sun seldom comes up before me. This is the time belonging to the pen. I write on until 8. In summer I sometimes paint from sunrise until I go to the organ or piano to rest between, as my morning is not so full and I can go on working until luncheon time. But in town once, I wake the king at half past 8, my day belongs to others.

"First the bath and the reading of the telegrams of the day to the king during or after breakfast, which is always very quiet in order to walk about together, as we don't see much of each other for many hours, the king having his ministers from 10 to 1 and often half past 1 every day.

"During that time I have many different people to work with, the lady who is at the head of my Sisters of Charity, who are taught in the best hospitals of Europe.

"Recently I have organized a new society all over the country, in order to make the beautiful silk our peasant women weave, henceforth, not only a luxury to themselves, but also a gain during such very bad years as has been, in which the government and land proprietors had to make unheard of sacrifices to keep peasants and beasts alive. Also a quarter of an hour between half past 12 and half past 1 we take a very light and quick luncheon, as the king has to see people again until 4.

"I generally have one audience and then I rest in bed with books until I fall to sleep. At 4 the king has a cup of tea with me and rests for a short half hour before going into the garden to get a breath of air before he takes up his work until 8, often before then, from then on I belong to the others. Three times a week there is very good music, my quartet singers, strange artists who wish to be heard before singing their concerts. The other four days are all lost entirely, taken up with audiences and only when I have finished can I have my secretary, who reads to me the plays, the criticisms about new books, etc. When the king has at last finished taking from 1 in the afternoon until 8 and sometimes 9 in the evening, then we thing of ourselves, it is dinner time and take a short meal again in order to wander about with the king's comfortable cigar, and if we are not nearly hoarse with talking we tell each other the events of the day.

"At 9 the king sits down to work by himself until midnight and I try to get through with a nice book, as I rise so very early and feel very tired of an evening, but in winter I have to go to many theaters and concerts that never begin before 9 and end at midnight or 1 o'clock."

WOMAN HAS ONLY A WEEK TO LIVE

Mrs. Mary Rogers Sentenced to Hang June 23, Unless Vermont Governor Prevents

MONTPELIER, Vt., June 17.—Unless there is an eleventh-hour interference on the part of the governor, which is regarded as extremely unlikely, Mrs. Mary Rogers, convicted of the murder of her husband, will be hanged one week from yesterday in the state prison. No visitors are permitted to see the condemned woman excepting her mother and sister and her spiritual adviser. She is said to be bearing up well, though the prison officials anticipate a breakdown before the fatal day. The scaffold has been erected in an unusual wing of the prison. Careful tests will be made during the coming week and every precaution taken to prevent any bungling in the execution.

SPAIN TO BUILD NAVY

Will Replace the Ships Destroyed by Uncle Sam

(Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

MADRID, June 17.—Spain has decided that the time has come to build a navy to replace the one which was destroyed by the United States seven years ago.

In a very near future the construction of eight first-class battleships of 14,000 tons each and costing nearly five million dollars apiece will be begun.

Simultaneous orders are to be given to French shipyards for ten armored cruisers of 10,000 tons. It has not yet been decided who is to build the battleships, the king vacillating between the United States and England, but because of the still existing bitterness against the United States, the order will probably go to England.

EXPERTS EXPECT ANOTHER BATTLE

English Military Men Believe Marshal Oyama Has Linevitch Surrounded

JAPANESE CONCEAL TERMS

Predicted That Russia Will Agree to Indemnity Not Over $700,000,000

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

LONDON, June 17.—From the efforts made at Washington to bring a meeting of representatives of Russia and Japan to discuss terms of peace, the eyes of both diplomats and military men are turning toward the Manchurian battlefield, where the two great armies are once more aligned for a big battle that may help the bringing of Russia to her knees before the island empire.

The news that has always preceded the great conflicts since the beginning of the war is looked upon as presenting a new class, and the majority of expert opinion inclines to the belief in the dispatches received from Tokio that Oyama has already succeeded in encircling Linevitch with the Japanese "iron ring."

Russian official circles profess a confidence in the ability of the latter commander to manipulate his troops so that the coming engagement may result in a decided modification of the terms upon which Japan will agree to a termination of the war.

Some interesting speculation is being indulged in as to what these demands are likely to be. Sir Charles Dilke predicts that the very basis of Japan's demand will be a stipulation that Russia shall not attempt to maintain a fleet in the Pacific for at least twenty-five years, thus blocking effectually Russia's schemes for revenge.

M. E. Jaures, in an article on humanity, says the importance of both Port Arthur and Vladivostok as fortresses have been exaggerated, the capture of Port Arthur by the Japanese having exploded the idea of its impracticability ad suggests that it might well be left to Russia as an inducement to agree with the other terms asked by Japanese, which will have no difficulty in attracting strong allies after the signing of a treaty of peace.

Russia herself will not be excepted. The amount of the indemnity that Russia may be expected to agree to is generally credited at $700,000,000, the estimated cost of the war up to the present time. It is believed Russia will have little difficulty in raising a loan as large as this on very favorable terms, once it was understood by financiers that the government was free to deal effectively with the threatened international situation, one of the probable outcomes of the war being an offensive and defensive alliance between England and Japan, giving the two nations absolute control of all Asia, England being safeguarded against Russia aggressions from the direction of Turkestan and Afghanistan and Japan safeguarded against any renewal of Russian schemes for extension in Manchuria and Korea.

POLITICIANS WATCH CIVIL SERVICE REFORM

Asserted That President Intends to Make Knox Leader in Pennsylvania

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 17.—Much political importance is attached here to the investigation which the civil service commission by order of the president has concluded in Philadelphia. President Roosevelt has been studying the fight against the republican machine in Philadelphia and is said to be aroused over the practices of the organization. It is asserted here that he intends to make Senator Knox the power in all Pennsylvania politics and will dethrone Penrose and establish Knox as referee. This is substantially in line with what he did in Maryland, when he turned down the old representative machine leaders and made Charles Bonaparte the referee in all important Federal appointments. The civil service commission will soon make its report on the Meeser case. There are persistent reports that the president proposes to have other investigations conducted in other states than Pennsylvania, in order to uncover unfit officials, but the civil service commission professes to know nothing of this.

400 LEADER HOSTESS FOR POOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay Entertains at Harbor Hill

NEW YORK, June 17.—Harbor Hill, the home of Clarence H. Mackay, at Roslyn, N. Y., was thrown open today to a thousand or more children and grown-ups of the neighborhood. The special occasion was arranged for the school children of Roslyn and the nearby villages, but Mrs. Mackay extended the invitation to include the pastors of all the churches, the parents and relatives of the children. Among the enjoyable games which were provided was a moving picture apparatus. Ice cream, cake and berries were also served. Entertainers from the city were in attendance.

FORMER MAYOR TO HEAD POLICE FORCE

Reported San Antonio's ex-Chief Executive Will Accept Appointment Monday

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 17.—With the return of ex-Mayor Campbell from Corpus Christi this evening it was expected some development would take place in the municipal muddle, which has been pending since June 1 between the police and fire commission and Mayor Callaghan and the city council. Campbell held a conference with the commission, but no conclusion was reached as to whether or not he will accept the position of chief of police tendered him. He is as yet undecided. In the meantime Chief Irvin is still in command. It is said Campbell will accept the appointment Monday.

MODEST, PLAIN MATRON IS MRS. WASHINGTON

Wife of Famous Negro Educator Dislikes Getting in the Public Eye

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 17.—Mrs. Booker T. Washington, wife of the famous negro educator of Tuskegee, Ala., has been traveling in the north this month, and has attravted considerable attention.

She is a well-educated colored woman and modest as any every-day American matron. At Cleveland, while her husband was uptown calling on friends, she sat all alone for five hours in the stuffy waiting room of one of the punkiest, stuffiest depots in the country. That makes her a Spartan, too. Ask anybody who has stopped off at Cleveland.

Mrs. Washington is a large woman and tall. She has regular features, magnetic eyes, beautiful teeth, and good language with the southern drawl.

This colored woman of the south is a teacher, although she has several children. Five hundred negro girls who are thirsting for better things are under her care at Tuskegee. As a girl she was educated at Fisk College and then went to Tuskegee as an instructress. She fell in love with Booker Washington, married him, and went on teaching.

"I think it is too bad a woman has to give up teaching after her marriage," said Mrs. Washington to a reporter. "I know lots of married women who would like to take up teaching again, but I guess they don't dare.

"I'd rather be in the Tuskegee school than traveling about. Getting into the public eye has its disadvantages. My husband can tell you that. He hasn't got over laughing at that Presbyterian preacher's address, in which he said Mr. Washington was the worst beggar in the world.

"Maybe he is the worst beggar. But then, he is not begging for himself; he's begging for the good of the whole world, and that makes a difference."

BROTHER OF SULTAN MURDERERS' VICTIM?

Rumor Says Turkish Ruler Committed Crime as Result of Insane Fear

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 17.—On April 25 an official announcement was issued to the effect that the sultan's brother, Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin, was dead and buried. This announcement caused considerable surprise because no one in the Turkish capital, even in the court circles, had the least idea that Prince Kemal Eddin was suffering from any malady.

The news of his illness, death and burial came simultaneously and gave rise to legitimate suspicions regarding the nature of his disease. Great secrecy was maintained regarding the whole affair, and, although most persons who are acquainted with the methods of the Turkish court felt sure what had happened, it has taken a couple of weeks for the truth to filter through the court circles and come to the knowledge of the outside world.

Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin did not die a natural death, but was murdered and there are good grounds for believing that he was strangled by order of his imperial brother, the Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey.

Since the murder of King Alexander of Servia, in June, 1903, the sultan of Turkey's fear of assassination has become a perfect mania. The impression created on his mind by the Belgrade crime was all the greater because the regicides, by whose hands the Servian royal couple fell, were officers belonging to the Servian army. Adbul Hamid was in such a state of fear and excitement after the Belgrade tragedy that he hid himself from his own court, a fact which gave rise to the rumors of his deposition and assassination by his Albanian bodyguard.

KILLED FOR A GESTURE

A tragic incident which occurred in the palace of Yildiz Kiosk recently afforded another example of Abdul Hamid's frenzy of fear. One of the sultan's aides-de-camp, Chalid Pasha, who had been in the monarch's personal service for nearly a decade, and had proved himself to be an absolutely faithful and trustworthy servant, was summoned to Abdul Hamid's presence to present a report on some matter of state.

In the course of this report Chalid Pasha thrust his hand into his pocket to produce a document which he desired to submit to the sultan. Seeing the motion of the officer's arm, Abdul Hamid immediately jumped to the conclusion that his aide-de-camp was drawing a weapon to assassinate him. Quick as thought, the sultan shot the aid to death.

On another recent occasion the sultan conceived the idea that his brother and heir apparent, Prince Muhammed Reshad, was conspiring to kill him and take possession of the throne.

PUTS BROTHER INTO DUNGEON

The prince was arrested and thrust into a dungeon within the walls of Yildiz Kiosk. The sultan was thoroughly convinced of his brother's guilt, and formed a resolution to have him executed on a charge of high treason. The necessary orders for the execution were issued, and Prince Muhammed Reshad was informed that his imperial brother had sentenced him to die on the scaffold.

The sentence, however, was not carried out immediately, owing to the Oriental habit of procrastination, and in the interval which ensued reports of the sultans' murderous intention became known among the members of the diplomatic corps in Constantinople, most of whom maintain close connections with persons within the palace in order to procure useful information.

SAVED BY AMBASSADOR

The English ambassador had reason to protect Prince Muhammed Reshad, and he intervened on his behalf. The sultan was at first obdurate, and it is understood that the English ambassador had to resort to energetic measures to save the prince's life. According to one version current in Constantinople, the English ambassador threatened to bring an English fleet into the Bosporus and to bombard Yildiz Kiosk if the sentence of death on Prince Muhammed Reshad was actually carried out. The sultan gave way to English coercion and granted his brother freedom.

The fate which Prince Muhammed Reshad escaped has now overtaken Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin. The prince's untimely end was due primarily to the fact that he had excited the enmity of Fehin Pasha, the chief of the palace police, who are intrusted with the protection of the sultan at Yildiz Kiosk.

Fehin Pasha's enmity rose to a boiling point when Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin secured possession of a beautiful Circassian woman whom the chief of the palace police coveted for his own harem, and Fehin Pasha resolved there and then to have revenge.

Fehin Pasha concocted a story of a plot by Prince hmed Kemal Eddin to dethrone the sultan. Fehin Pasha caused letters to be forged, which were alleged proofs of the prince's guilt. He also procured perjured witnesses to swear false oaths regarding Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin's participation in a treasonable conpiracy.

Fehin Pasha told the sultan briefly that he had discovered a plot to dethrone and assassinate him, and that thit plot was to be carried out on the following day.

"The originator of the plot," said he to the sultan, "is your majesty's own brother, Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin."

Fehin Pasha then produced his documentary "evidence," and summoned from an anteroom the perjured witnesses. The sultan's agitation knew no bounds. He declared:

"My brother shall die on the day on which he intended my assassination should take place; instead of ascending the Turkish throne he shall descend into his own grave."

The sultan thereupon gave Fehin Pasha verbal orders to carry out the execution of his brother, swiftly and secretly, on the following day.

Early next morning Fehin Pasha himself, accompanied by three Albanians of the sultan's palace bodyguard, presented himself at the door of Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin's palace and demanded admittance. The plotter was conducted to the prince's private chamber. Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin was asleep in bed when Fehin Pasha opened the door of his bedroom and entered, followed by three Albanian soldiers.

STRANGLED IN HIS BEDROOM

The prince sprang up at once, exclaiming:

"What's the meaning of this intrusion? What's the meaning of this insolence, policeman?"

Fehin Pasha, who had closed the door behind him, replied:

"His imperial majesty, the sultan, has sentenced your imperial highness to death, and these soldiers have orders to carry out the execution immediately."

Prince Ahmed Kemal Eddin cried out, and attempted to reach a second door leading from his chamber into that part of the palace in which the members of his harem resided. The Albanians, whose ferocity is proverbial, seized the prince, threw him down on his own bed, and strangled him with a rick silken scarf.

Within two hours the body of the prince was in its grave.

MONT PELEE AGAIN THREATENS ERUPTION

Smoke, Flame and Cinders Rise From Crater—Part of Dome Topples Into Fire

PORT DE FRANCE, Island of Martinique, June 17.—For the past few days Mont Pelee has manifested a recrudescence of activity stronger than that of the month of April of the present year. Some dense clouds of smoke have been discharged from the volcano, and have slowly fallen over the White River valley, afterward disappearing on arrival at the seacoast.

Sharp luminous flashes have been perceived at the dome of the mountain, and a fairly strong burst of flame was seen June 3, between 1:40 and 2:10 p. m. On that occasion a very thick cloud of smoke almost descended to the sea, and the cinders thrown up extended over the village of Le Precheur, which is on the extreme line forming the limit of the territory devastated during the terrible outbreak of May, 1902 (resulting in the loss of about 40,000 lives), and then swept seaward and disappeared. After this the volcano again became calm, and remained so until the night of June 10-11, during which the dome was illuminated by numerous luminous points.

The collapse of part of the dome occurred recently. It was accompanied by an outflow of mud into the White river valley. At 11:30 a. m. the same morning a dense cloud of smoke slowly arose from the crater to the estimated height of about 1,000 yards, and extended toward Le Precheur, where the smoke was dissipated. Since then the volcano has remained calm.

CATARRH OF PELVIC ORGANS NOT EASILY DETECTED

Physicians Frequently Mistake Pelvic Catarrh For Some Other Disease.

Pe-ru-na, the Unfailing Remedy for These Complaints.

Mrs. Annie Harpole, 401 Hoyt street, Portland, Ore., State Secretary Daughters of Liberty, writes:

"For over eight years I suffered with intense pains in the abdomen and pelvic organs.

"Through a neglected cold I contracted severe catarrh, which went through my system and finally settled in the bladder, causing great pain.

"My husband spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines without obtaining relief for me.

"I finally decided that I would try Peruna, as a friend recommended it so highly.

"I am pleased to say that relief came to me shortly after I began taking it, and at the end of three months I was in perfect health."

Pelvic Catarrh Had Made Life Miserable—Pe-ru-na Gives New Life

Mrs. Fannie Henderson, 2031 First avenue, Seattle, Wash., Past Grand Worthy Vice Templar, I. O. G. T., writes:

"I was in a wretched condition for over nineteen months, suffering with the troubles peculiar to women, until life lost its charms and everything seemed black to me.

"I suffered with chronic inflammation, was morbidly sensitive, and so nervous and irritable that I was a burden to those around me.

"If I was out of bed one day, I would be in bed for two or three days after.

"I was no use to myself or my family. Only a source of misery and expense.

"Peruna relieved me and cured me in a few short months. I had hardly dared believe that my cure was permanent, but having now enjoyed the best of health for over eight months, I feel that I am entirely cured.

"Your medicine conquers that shattered condition of the system so common among women, removes that tired feeling and gives new life."

THE catarrh may be of the bladder, the kidneys, or any other organ of the pelvis.

These cas have formerly been treated by local treatment.

Irrigation, local applications, instrumental interference, and a great many other devises were used.

A large number of the profession, however, are gradually reaching the conclusion that the best way to treat these cases is by some good internal catarrh remedy that has the effect of eradicating the catarrh from the system.

This is exactly what Peruna will do. It does not relieve temporarily, but cures permanently.

Gratitude to Dr. Hartman and Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. A. L. Orrison, 1605 E. Franklin street, Richmond, Va., writes:

"After three months' trial of your remedy, I am cured of painful menstruation.

"After suffering untold agony for three years, and spending over a hundred dollars and finding no relief, whatever, I began taking Peruna under the advice which you so kindly gave me

"I shall never cease to be thankful for this, or recommend Peruna to all women whom I find suffering from the above ailment.

"I can now do all my housework and take long walks without the least ill effect.

"Words are inadequate to express my gratitude to you and Peruna, for I am a well woman to-day."

OUR CAR HAS ARRIVED

This is the second one this year—three last year; that alone should convince you that "PALACE CAR" READY-MIXED PAINT is being used extensively by the people of Fort Worth. Five solid car-loads, and not one single complaint—and remember also the popular price—$1.50, not $1.65, but $1.50. We are satisfied with a living profit, and pleased customers. We need room badly—fire damaged goods are in the way. The price this week will move them all. Come early.

CHAS. F. KELLY FREE

Turnes State's Evidence in Missouri Bribery Cases

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—All the charges of perjury and bribery against Charles F. Kelly, former speaker of the house of delegates, were nolle prosequied in the criminal division of the circuit court. Circuit Attorney Sager stated to the court: "I move that these cases against Charles F. Kelly be nolle prosequied. In making this motion, I desire to say that he has been used by the state as a witness and has kept faith with the state. At the present time he is physically and mentally run down, and the state recommends that the nolle prosequies be accepted."

Judge Withrow at once announced that this would be done. Kelly, who was in court, thanked Circuit Attorney Sager and then began telling those about him how steadfastly his wife had stood by him during his troubles. Finally he departed, accompanied by friends.

The cases quashed comprise the charge of bribery in connection with the passage of the city lighting bill, bribery in connection with the passage of the suburban railway franchise bill, and perjury in connection with the negeral boodle charges.

Kelly had pleaded guilty in the suburban case, and on the charge of perjury had been found guilty and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, but upon appeal, the supreme court had reversed the finding and remanded the case for retrial.

NAVY MUST GROW TO SEVENTY BATTLESHIPS

Control of Caribbean Sea and Defense of Philippines to Be Considered

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The navy now studies war with the world as its field. The imagination of its officers has taken a wonderful leap since 1898. Before the Spanish-American war the naval experts were content to confine their serious studies to the coast line of the United States. Today the problem of how best to defend the waters that wash the United States has been succeeded by the larger questions that the years since 1898 have brought.

The problems stand out more conspicuously than others; what is the best way to control the whole Caribbean region; how shall the Philippines be defended in case of an emergency, if the general board should make public its declarations, would probably show it has extensive plans for controlling the Caribbean sea and for defending the Philippine Islands against all comers.

A naval officer of long experience was asked how many battleships would eventually satisfy the navy.

"About seventy," he answered. "If we are to be prepared to defend our coast against all comers we must have sixteen battleships along the Atlantic coast, twenty-four for the gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean sea, sixteen on the Pacific coast and sixteen in Philippine waters. We may never get them, but if we are to put up the front of a world power, the time may come when we will need them."

DENVER ROAD MAKES MANY IMPROVEMENTS

All Wooden Bridges to Be Superseded by Steel and Concrete Structures

F. T. Dolan, genral superintendent of the Fort Worth and Denver road, returned to the city Saturday, after a ten days' trip over the company's lines. He reports that the new bridge and track work started some time ago is being rapidly pushed and will be completed within a short time. The road is making extensive improvements in its line north of Fort Worth. Between Childress and Texline they are replacing the old fifty-six-pound track with eighty-pound rails, giving a smoother running surface. The roadbed is also being improved.

Superintendent Dolan says that the workmen have replaced seventy-five woden brides along the line with bridges of steel, stone and concrete and that when the work is completed there will not be a wooden bridge along the entire line.

RAILROAD SUBSIDY

Southern Pacific Wants One in Republic of Mexico

Assistant General Manager J. A. Naugle of the Sonora railway is credited with the statement that the Southern Pacific is attempting to secure from the Mexican government a subsidy for the proposed line from Guaymus to Guadalajara of $18,000,000 and also substantial subsidies from various states through which the line will pass.

It is said to reasonably certain that the Mexican government will materially assist the project, as it is well known that that country has long desired that the Southern Pacific build into Mexico. The Southern Pacific has very small interests in the republic, but is said to be very anxious to construct more lines into that country.

That company already has concessions in Mexico for the construction of the Canasea, Qaqui River and Pacific, but asked for no subsidy, either state or federal. The application for the new concession is now in the hands of the government officials and it is expected an answer will be given very soon.

GOULD TRANSCONTINENTAL

Plans Reported to Be Practically Completed

William E. Curtis of Chicago, who is in Texas, has this to say of Gould's road to the Pacific coast:

"It has always been the ambition of the Gould family to control a line of track across the American continent, and under the management of George Gould it is about to realize that satisfaction. The Canadian Pacific is the only railroads that spans the continent, having a continuous track from Halifax to Vancouver, via Quebec, Montreal, Port Arthur and Winnipeg, a distance of about 5,000 miles. There has been a good deal of talk about the consolidation of the New York Central, Lake Shore, Northwestern and the Union and Central Pacifics, which are controlled by Mr. Harriman and the Vanderbilts, into a single road from New York to San Francisco, but thus far nothing practical has been done in that direction. Mr. Gould, however, is actively at work combining the several lines under his control and filling the gaps as rapidly as possible between Oakland and Baltimore; so that within two or three years it will be possible to cross the continent from either of those cities without changing cars, over a track owned and controlled by a single family. You would leave Baltimore by the Western Maryland, then take the West Virginia Central, the Wheeling and Lake Erie, the Wabash, the Missouri Pacific and the Denver and Rio Grande to Salt Lake City and from there the Western Pacific to Oakland.

RAILROAD PERSONALS

Henry W. Landman, contracting agent of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas road, was in Fort Worth Saturday.

George W. Hawkes, general superintendent of the Houston and Texas Central, with Horace Rees, assistant general freight agent, and O. Rowe of Ennis, division superintendent, were in Fort Worth Saturday on a tour of inspection. They spent the day going over the road's property here.

C. W. Strain, general passenger agent, and Frank M. Griffith, of Dallas, southwestern passenger agent of the Frisco system, left Saturday for Sulphur, I. T.

C. S. Tewkesbury, general freight claim agent of the Rock Island, was in Fort Worth from Chicago Saturday.

W. V. Galbraith, general live stock agent of the Katy line, arrived home Saturday after a ten days' trip through the territories. He says that he found the cattle in the territories and in Texas in the finest shape that he has known for years.

NEW CHURCH PLANNED

Broadway Baptist Congregation Will Have Artistic Structure

Plans for the new Broadway Baptist church are now being completed by M. R. Sanguinet, but is not certain when work of building it will commence, as the congregation is trying to get a lot upon which to move the old church, as the new structure is to occupy the present church site at the crossing of St. Louis avenue.

The new church will be of a Grecian style of architecture, and will cost $25,000. It will seat 1,500 people. Twelve months will be required to complete the church.

The congregation, of which Rev. J. W. Gillon is pastor, has a present membership of 807.

HONOR SHERIDAN CLARK

Brighton Beach Officials Make Him Secretary

SHEEPSHEAD BAY, N. Y., June 17.—Sheridan Clark, secretary and clerk of the course of the Crescent City Jockey Club, New Orleans, was today appointed to the racing secretaryship of the Brighton Beach Racing Association for the ensuing midsummer meeting at the beach. John Bowden, Jr., the present incumbent, has been granted an extended leave of absence, owing to ill health. Sheridan Clark is one of the best known racing men of the south and west and his elevation to a post of such importance is a distinct tribute of honor to the western interest so largely interested in metropolitan racing this season.

The effort at Misneapolis to make No. 2 northern wheat contract grade was defeated. The vote was 225 for the change, 182 against, not the necessary two-thirds.

COURT DENIES VAN A THIRD HEARING

Motion for New Trial Argued Saturday—Other News of the Courts

In the Forty-eighth district court Saturday afternoon, Judge Irby Dunklin denied the application of Jeff Vann for a new trial. A four-year sentence was imposed on him two weeks ago for the killing of Policeman Andy Grimes, having been once before given a death sentence in the case.

COUNTY WINS SUIT

Judgment for the defendant in the case of J. E. Murray et al against Tarrant County was rendered yesterday afternoon in the Seventeenth district court by Judge Dunklin. This case involves the Sandidge homestead and grows out of a fee bill matter in the office of former County Attorney Butler.

TO RAISE VALUES

The county commissioners court adjourned Saturday until Tuesday morning. The court has been working on property values in preparation for the board of equalization for some time past and has served notice upon a great many property holders in Tarrant county that they would raise the values on their properties, giving them ten days in which to report to the court.

PRESIDENT LYNCH TO ADDRESS TYPOS

Head of Organization to Be Entertained at Lake Erie Tuesday

J. Will Moore, representing the Dallas Typographical Union, and Walter N. Reddick, representing the Bookbinders of that city, were in Fort Worth Saturday and delivered invitations to the Typographical, Pressmen's and Bookbinders' Unions of this city and to the master printers, to attend a picnic and dance to be given at Lake Erie Tuesday in honor of President Lynch of the International Typographical Union.

On this occasion President Lynch will be the guest of the Dallas organizations, the bodies in Fort Worth being invited to meet him. President Lynch and members of the eight-hour committees of the organization will deliver speeches. Supper will be served on the grounds and a dance at night will conclude the festivities.

A large delegation of the Fort Worth organizations is expected to attend and arrangements are being made to entertain a large gathering. Members of the local organizations will leave for the park at 2 o'clock.

PRESIDENT PURCHASES HOME IN VIRGINIA

Gossips Say It Means Miss Alice Will Soon Become a Bride

NEW YORK, June 17.—There is a good deal of gossip among hundreds of Miss Alice Roosevelt's friends in connection with the purchase of a Virginia home by the president. Friends of the Roosevelts here says that it means Miss Alice will soon be married and that the Virginia home will probably be a wedding gift from her father and mother. While they have not been able to decide upon the fortunate man who is to marry the president's daughter, the majority of gossips center around Congressman Nicholas Long. Miss Alice, however, if she has any real intention of soon becoming a bride, has concealed her intentions pretty well from New York society. The purchase of the place in Virginia is regarded as most significant. The president has at Sagamore Hill as fine a country place as could be desired and contracts have been given for extensive additions and improvements on the place. Theinference drawn from the purchase of the Virginia place is that it is to be the summer home of Miss Alice and her future husband. One of her close friends in the city is said to have intimated that the trip to the Philippines next month might be a bridal trip, but this is not generally credited, and it is not believed that the wedding, if there is to be one, will take place before the return of the party next fall.

QUARREL OVER SAND HAS FATAL ENDING

Skull in Scuffle at Muskogee, Indian Territory

MUSKOGEE, I. T., June 17.—In an argument over a bill for hauling sand, James Augerbright was thrown down a flight of stairs at the German building, Broadway and Third streets, about 6:30 o'clock this afternoon, fracturing his skull. The difficulty grew out of an account for sand hauled by William H. Brown for Augerbright, who is a contracting plasterer. Augerbright died at 7:45 o'clock. Brown is held without bail.

GRAIN INSPECTORS TO BE INCREASED

Committee Named Saturday to Arrange for Addition to the Force

Steps were taken Saturday afternoon by the Fort Worth Grain Dealers and Millers at a meeting held in the rooms of the Board of Trade, to consider increase of the grain inspection force in this city.

The millers and grain men were in session for over an hour and finally, after a lengthy discussion, appointed a committee to draft a plan. This cimmittee is composed of G. C. Mountcastle, T. G. Moore and F. M. Rogers.

At present inspection of grain is made here by John Upschulte, representing the Board of Trade. Increased business in this city, however, has made necessary additional inspecting force.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the Dandruff Germ."

DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED

Most young and middle-aged men never know that their scalps are loaded with microbic growths until their hair has "gone off." Nature sends her warnings of dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, but the discovery of the dandruff germ is too recent for the public to realize the danger of neglect. Newbro's Herpicide positively destroys the dandruff microbe; stops falling hair and protects the scalp against reinfection. A delightful hair dressing. Stops itching instantly. It's immense popularity proves its goodness. Save your hair while you have hair to save.

'The Light that Failed'

by Cynthia Grey

ANTICIPATION

She flashes him a smile. He thinks her charming.

She twinkles her eyes at him. She is certainly winning.

She tilts her head over on one side and laughs at him.

Then he proposes.

After that he goes home and dreams about her. He sees her as his guardian angel, his guiding star, THE SUNSHINE OF HIS HOME. He buys her a locket and chain. He knows she will set his picture in the locket and fondly imagines that she always wears it next her heart—and she does.

And the SUNSHINE OF HIS HOME gleams brighter until he is half-blinded by its radiance.

After the few weeks or months that he manages to struggle through his lonely breakfasts at the boarding house, he persuades his SUNSHINE to name the day for the wedding. It is at breakfast that he needs this light-hearted little creature most. His breakfast has always been the gloomy meal of the day.

If it hadn't been necessary to keep the machine, man, going and make it fit for the work to be done he would have left out the breakfast long ago.

Just before the widding his breakfast hour is brightened by the DREAM OF THE SUNNY FACE that will soon smile at him from behind his own coffee urn.

He becomes a philosopher and realizes that a dainty breakfast served by a tidy, cheerful wife, will make over the whole day for him. For the first time in his life he realizes that to start the day right is the best way to keep it right.

Pretty soon he is blaming his bachelordom for the failures of many days, which, he firmly believes would have been days of success had the breakfast hour been the cheery, wholesome, happy hour that this dear SUNBEAM will make it for him.

Then he marries her.

For a few days she wears the little locket and a pretty breakfast jacket trimmed with frills of lace.

Dear little SUNSHINE!

After awhile she doesn't fuss about the frills and leaves off the locket.

Pretty soon SHE FORGETS TO BRUSH HER HAIR; knots it up as if she were making ready for a bath. Her collar band, collarless, lops open at the throat, the lips forget to smile.

Well—it is saying a good deal to say that a man's constancy depends upon the wave of a woman's hair and the cleanliness and adjustment of her breakfast jacket.

But it does.

The man or woman who neglects the little touches of decent dressing, just because NO ONE BUT WIFE OR HUSBAND WILL SEE, may look for breakers in the stream of domestic bliss.

Ask this man who married a sunbeam.

One morning he stirred his coffee thoughtfully and looked across the table to where THE SUNSHINE OF HIS HOME sat uncombed and disheveled, and down depe in his heart he knew that this HIS SUNSHINE, was naught but THE LIGHT THAT FAILED.

YELLOW PERIL WILL REACH TEXAS EARLY

Influx of Chinese and Japanese Expected to Follow End of the War

Talk of approaching peace negotiations and anticipations of an end in the near future of the war between Japan and Russia, has caused a revival of talk of "yellow peril," and the question of Japanese and Chinese immigration is becoming a live question among people who have to do with labor matters.

It is generally believed Japan's victory in the present war will be followed by an influx of Japanese into the United States and that they will be accompanied by large numbers of Chinese.

An edict of the mikado of Japan, limiting the number of persons who shall emigrate from the different districts of Japan during a year, and the exclusion laws of this country, which prohibit the entry into the United States of common laborers or coolies, will, to a certain extent, check this immigration.

When the Orientals begin to flow into the United States, Texas will get her share of them, which will be larger than any other state. Of course, California will be the first to feel its effect, but the efforts of all the railroads and immigration bureaus of the country are directed towards diverting immigration to the south, and as Texas is getting a large percentage of the Europeans, so will she get a large proportion of the yellow men, who will go into the fields of the state. Any considerable immigration of the yellow men is looked upon as a menace.

W. H. Robb, United States immigrant inspector, has seen a great deal of the two classes during his connection with the immigration department. Saturday, when asked for an expression on the subject of the present war's effect on immigration from the Orient said:

"I imagine that the immigration of Orientals will be greatly increased because of this war, and when they do begin to come in, the United States will be confronted with a very serious proposition. I spent some time on the Pacific coast and learned to know the Chinaman and the Jap very well. I found that both were great students, the Chinaman applying himself to the study of Confucianism and the literature of his country, while the Jap studied the more modern and practical things of life. When the Chinaman first entered this country he readily adapted himself to the lowest forms of labor and was enabled to live in places and make money where no other class of laborers could succeed. They are, as a class, a mercenary people, who make plenty of money and spend as little as possible. They are all tied to their when they can return to it.

"Japanese are similar, generally speaking, to the Chinamen. They make good laborers in the fields and fruit orchards; are also of an extremely mercenary turn of mind and take no interest in the affairs of this country except as a study."

LAND INFORMATION WILL BE GIVEN FREE

Commissioner Terrell Says List Will Be Received From Printer About July 1

Special to The Telegram.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—Judge J. J. Terrell, commissioner of the general land office, with reference to the unsold portion of the public land, said to The Telegram correspondent yesterday:

"I have delivered to the state printer a list of the tracts of land that will be on the market for sale Sept. 1. With the list is included all necessary information about how to proceed to buy the land. It amounts to about six million acres, and ranges in price per acre from $1 up, one-fortieth cash, balance on forty years time, with 3 per cent interest. It is all the land in many of the counties, but is only about-third of what the state has remaining unsold. In many of the extreme western counties where much is leased, that only is given which is thought to more probably be first in demand. The printing company promises to deliver the printed list by July 1. Then it will be ready for free distribution to every one who will ask for it.

"These lands are for those wanting homes on them. The terms of sale are easy. Every homeless person with a few dollars will have an equal chance with those of larger possessions. I am determined that this information shall reach those most desirous of taking advantage of the state's liberal terms. To that end you are asked to kindly give this a place in your daily and semi-weekly paper, and suggest that all your exchanges publish it for the benefit of their readers. In addition to this effort I shall mail copies to every county and precinct officer and postmaster in the state. It has been and is yet my purpose to bring reliable information from the land office to the people of the state as is possible through every available means. If any reader wants a list just write me a card or a letter to that effect. As a medium for disseminating reliable information newspapers have no competitor, hence their co-operation is asked in this effort in behalf of their readers. The public ought to know more about our public lands, how they are disposed of and where located.

"This information being given free by this department, there is no necessity for any one to notice any advertisement of agents who propose to sell information concerning the state's lands."

MUNSEY HAS SCHEME FOR A NEW MAGAZINE

Idea Strikes Him in England and He Comes Across to Put It into Execution

NEW YORK, June 17.—Frank A. Munsey returned from Europe today, after an absence of two months. He said: "I had a rather interesting talk with Sir Alfred Harmsworth, who expressed the belief that the daily and weekly newspapers are the thing and that and periodicals, monthly quarterly, quarterly or otherwise were not especially. Of course, I do not agree with him. I hold that the monthly magazine if properly edited and properly illustrated, is the one thing in the publishing business that England is sadly in need of. In a measure, this is verified by the reception accorded our magazines, which are distributed throughout the British empire. You find them everywhere. They are read with commendation and anxiously awaited from month to month.

"Sir Alfred has caught the American newspaper idea in all its strength and is now publishing the daily Mail in Paris simultaneously with the London edition. It is his intention to duplicate the London edition in the English language in Brussels, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Rome, Budapest and Vienna. This is considered a desirable thing for the reason that so many English speaking travelers are to be found in all of the cities named and it also enable him to put the most important English news and American on the continent without an hour's delay.

"Doubtless these will be a realignment of the periodical business in England within a year or two and I look to that market for some rather unsual results, in which American publishers will reap the larger rewards.

"It was my intention to remain away all summer," said he, "but an idea for an entirely new type of magazine occurred to me and I have come back to put it into execution. It will be along lines never before attempted either in the United States or abroad. I am not prepared at this moment to define its character. What I am prepared to say, however, is that England for some reason or other, has not yet awakened to the value of the monthly magazine. I think this due, perhaps, to the fact that neither in literary quality nor pictorial effect are the British monthlies as attractive as the American magazine."

Mr. Munsey will leave for Maine in a day or two to visit his father, after which he will inspect the editorial staff and plant of the Boston Journal and the Washington Times, both of which papers are Munsey's own. In Washington he is putting up a handsome twelve-story building, which will be the homes of the Times.

ANGER BY PHONE HIGH

Ohio Man "Sassy" to a Woman Fined $20 and Given Thirty Days

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 17.—Charles E. Prentiss was brought into police court on the charge of insulting Mrs. M. J. McDonald of North High street over the telephone. It seems that Prentiss was talking over the long-distance telephone to the woman when he got angry at her and let loose some language that was more vigorous than choice and the woman in a huff had him arrested. He was given thirty days, $20 fine and costs.

Architect Who Planned Gould Castle Wins Suit Against Owner For Fee of Over $24,000

(Copyright, 1905, by W. R. Hearst.)

NEW YORK, June 17.—Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould and their unfinished castle at Port Washington, Long Island, which is designed to be an exact reproduction of Kilkenny Castle in Ireland. The pictures show one of the great towers, which is the only part of the building so far completed.

A verdict for Abner J. Haydel, an architect, for $24,183.75 against Howard Gould for services in drawing plans for the Gould castle was awarded by a jury in the New York state supreme court at Mineola, L. I., Thursday. This amount represents about 2½ per cent of the original contract price of $967,000, which it was estimated the castle would cost. Haydel had sued for $60,000. The architect had testified that he had been sent to Ireland to make plans of the celebrated Kilkenny castle, to be used in the Gould castle and that Mrs. Gould ordered many changes in his plans and finally refused to accept these plans and ordered him out of her presence at the hotel, where he had gone to consult her as to plans.

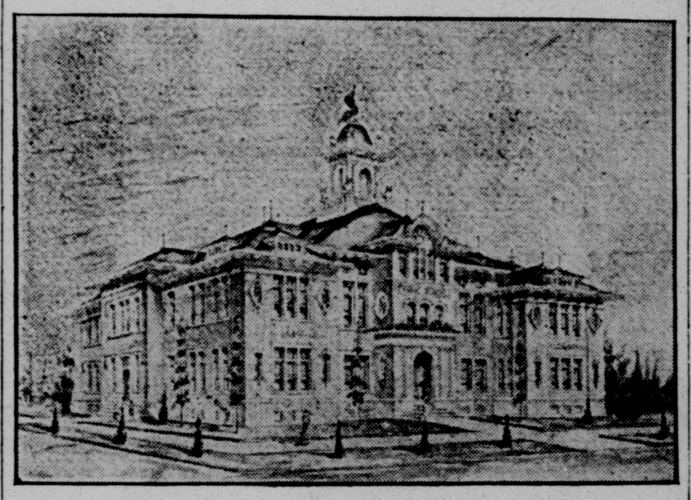
North Fort Worth Soon to Have School Building Costing $25,000



North Fort Worth's new school building, work upon which will be begun next week, will be one of the finest and most costly in the state of Texas, the rapid growth of that city having convinced the school board that it would be folly to build merely for present needs.

The building will occupy a commanding site, being bounded by Main, Calhoun, Fourteenth and Twentieth streets. Rusk street, which originaly would cut through the school grounds, will face the middle of the building at the north and south. The site thus to be occupied is at the juncture of the four wards of the city, being practically the center of the municipality.

A spacious lawn affording ample play grounds in addition to grass plots and flower beds is offered at the site.

The building itself will be a two-story red brick with stone trimmings and slate roof. A roomy basement will add practically another floor. The ground plan of the building occupies a space of 100x125 feet. Twelve rooms and a large auditorium will occupy the upper floors, the first containing class rooms and the superintendent's office, while the upper will have four class rooms and the auditorium. In the basement will be play grounds for the children in bad weather, lavatories and an engine room.

The walls of the building will be plaster, with steel ceilings and hardwood finish. Extra attention has been paid to lighting facilities, in every way the building being adapted to school purposes.

It will be rected by J. W. McPherson after plans made by M. L. Waller. The contract price is $25,281 without heating, plumbing and furniture.

Members of the school board erecting the building whose names will appear on the cornerstone are J. G. Capps, chairman; J. A. Dryden, secretary; J. B. Collier, treasurer; J. J. Lydon, F. F. Hopkins, J. D. Farmer and J. W. Moore.

IMPROVEMENT PLANS ARE SET IN MOTION

Procedure Necessary to Conclude Steps Begun by the City Council

By the next meeting of the city council, active steps will have been taken toward the creation of improvement districts proposed at the meeting Friday night, thus bringing into play the new caluses of the recent charter amendment, which will call for the expenditure of $200,000 in street improvement.

Pursuant with the instructions of the council City Engineer Hawley will this week prepare an estimate of the cost of paving with brick the two districts as outlined in Saturday's Telegram.

At the same time the city engineer is making his estimate, the city assessor will prepare valuations of all property in said districts exclusive of improvements. Out of every $1,000 of valuation $7.50 may be used for improving. In localities where real estate is not high priced and assessments consequently low, it may be found impossible to raise funds enough for brick paving, in which case gravel will be used. It is believed, however, that in the major part of both districts property has a value great enough in general to insure funds for the brick.

The charter also requires that ten days' notice be given citizens who will have an apportunity to come to the council to discuss the matter, stating any objections. Objection of two-fifths of the citizens of the district will be sufficient to prevent the city carrying on the work.

On condition that the matter meets with the approval of citizens as specified the city engineer will draw plans, bids will be asked, contracts awarded and the work begun.

INDICTMENTS TO HIT HIGH PLACES

Chicago Prosecuting Attorney Promises Sensation in "Graft" Investigation

CHICAGO, Ill., June 17.—Assistant States Attorney Fake, in a statement today immediately after the grand jury took a recess until Monday indicated that indictments striking in high places might be expected as a result of the inquiry into "graft" in Chicago growing out of the teamsters' strike.

"There are men on both sides who might as well look to their knitting," said Mr. Fake, who has been with the grand jury during the hearing of all testimony, "for the evidence we have thus far obtained is very strong.

"Up to date we have accomplished good work. We are endeavoring to find out crime and to be fair to both sides. We want both sides to come in with their stories. Thus far it has been 'digging.' Persons who ought to come in do not do so. The man who passes money does not seem inclined to open up investigation. If the labor men of Chicago have anything to tell, we want them to come in."

Mr. Fake said he expected the investigation would consume two or three days of next week. Monday John C. Driskill, Robert J. Thorne and other important witnesses will be heard. Asked whether any testimony had been offered to open up the alleged plot against Montgomery, Ward and Company, a rival firm in which $30,000 was said to have been offered for the calling of a strike, Mr. Fakes said: "No evidence on that subject has been presented to the grand jury. There is such a story, but the grand jury has not yet taken it up."

BASE BALL

PANTHERS ADVANCE ON WACO'S HEELS

Two Games From O'Connor's Adopted Team Lessens Gap to the Front

Consecutive hitting in the fourth inning, coupled with the steady work of Walsh in the box and added to this the brilliant fielding of the Panthers, caused the tail of the Waco Tigers to be severely twisted at Haines' Park Saturday afternoon. The score of 6 to 2 does not fully tell the story, for in the scoring of the two tallies there was considerable doubt and considerable more protest concerning decisions of Umpire Clark.

After Waco had failed to send a man safely to first at the opening, Sullivan came to the bat for Fort Worth, opening vigorously with a singing two-bagger to extreme left. Hubbard gave up his chances to let Sully go to third and Butler who followed went to the first station, hit with a pitched ball. Fans rose from their seats when Wilson sent one just between third and short, tantalizingly near, yet just so far that a mix-up resulted, Sully and Butler spring home during the pandemonium.

MORE WACO SORROW

Spencer had his hopes dashed by Boles, who sent the sphere ahead of him to first. Whitman suffered a like fate at the hands of Wills and Walsh. Metz walked, stole second, where he perished when McDermott took the limit of three good ones from Walsh.

Boles opened for Fort Worth with a whizzer between third and short, but despite the good example the three next, Wills, Mausch and Walsh, failed at emulation, each drawing a goose egg for the necessary trio.

TWO TIGER TALLIES

Rodebaugh said Walsh hit him with a pitched ball and walked toward Umpire Clark exhibiting his wounded arm. Fans laughed, but he walked. Curtis sacrificed, Rody taking the second sack. Bigbie hit a fast one to Hubbard, who fingered it, ran for the first bag and seemed to beat the runner, but Clark yelled safe. Amid protests of fans and players, Rodebaugh, after slipping to third came home for the first Waco run when Patty Mauch let a wild one through his glove. Stovall, next at bat, brought in Bigbie by a hit to left. Spencer then fanned and Whitman was caught out by Walsh.

CALM BEFORE THE STORM

Uneventfully passed the last of the third and the first of the fourth. One, two, three and Fort Worth was retired. One, two, three, four and the Tigers suffered likewise. Fans breathed easy, perspired and speculated as to the outcome. The score was tie.

GETTING BUSY

Wilsoi shot one to Rodebaugh. The Tiger twirler fumbled it, jumbled it, kicked it with his foot, chasing it almost to the first bag. Wilson chased, too, and he beat the ball. One man on first. Burleson, self-sacrificingly bunted. It was a pretty bunt and it rolled in an annoyingly foolish little way. Waco men ran after it, but before they captured and threw the pellet Wilson stood breathlessly safe at the second sack with Burleson at the initial stopping place. Two men on bases. Fans grinned, remarking that successful bunts beat the band, didn't they?

Boles tried bunting. He, too, was successful, reaching first before the horsehide was captured, while the two men ahead of him moved up a peg.

MORE RUNS

Fans by this time were getting nervous. Luck was coming too bunchy—something was liable to happen. Breaths were held when Wills came to the bat with the bases full. The first baseman drove a clean one over short, scoring Wilson and Burleson. Two runs, the Panthers in the lead, no outs and two men on the bags. Fans clapped each other on the back.

But, there was more to come. Mauch sacrificed, advancing Boles and Wills, who scored when Walsh surprised even himself when he sent a clean one to right. Sully, who followed, used his optics, drawing four bad ones and transportation. Waco then becoming desperate, made a pretty double when Hubbard hit to short, catching him at first and Sully at second, retiring the side.

Waco failed to improve at her next chance, four men drawing the three goose eggs. Fort Worth copied this procedure, but made a record of only three batters, matters being accelerated by another brilliant double from Waco short to second and from there to first, killing Wilson and Burleson almost simultaneously. Three batters was the limit for Waco in the next Hubbard spoiling aspirations of Whitman and Metz, intercepting their hits and quickly transferring the sphere to Wills.

Scoring seemed to have gone out of style and for the remainder of the game neat fielding and light hitting kept the chalk from the run columns.

Boles cheated several Waco men out of hits by quick footwork and a clear head. Mauch gobbled in a twisting foul from Spencer's bat in the eighth which caused hand clapping.

Wilson in the Panther half of the eighth sent one to the left garden, where Curtis, blinded by the sun, let it fall untouched, and not hearing it fall stood open-mouthed wondering at the modern miracle of a ball glued in the atmosphere.

Christman will pitch in the game today, to be called at 4 o'clock.

Seven Singles and Three-Bagger Yield Four Runs

Special to The Telegram.

TEMPLE, TEXAS, June 17.—Temple won today from Dallas in a game in which all the ginger showed up in the last inning.

Ables was batted hard in the sixth and ninth, the fusilade realizing seven singles and a three-bagger and producing a total of four runs. Dallas got but six hits off Mitchell, two of which were scratches, one caused a fielder's poor judgment, while Ables' hit gave him credit for a two-bagger, through an accident. Kitchens' work was easily the feature.

Meyers of Dallas had his ankle sprained in the first and was replaced by Captain Maloney, who acquitted himself ably.

BRITT SCHEDULED FOR MATCH WITH SULLIVAN

Battling Nelson Takes Opportunity to Accuse Former of "White Feather"

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—There is no longer any doubt as to who will be Jimmy Britt's next opponent. Choice has fallen upon "Kid" Sullivan. The Hayes Valley Athletic Club has not only fixed the date but has forwarded railroad transportation for two to Baltimore. It is expected that Herford and his piebald stable will soon arrive and that Sullivan and Joe Gans will be soon doing road work in the neighborhood of Shannon's villa, San Rafael, before many days pass. The contest will take place on the vening of July 18 and the weight is to be 133 pounds at 3 o'clock on that date.

Apart from what the mill itself may develop there will surely be turmoil over the signing of Britt and Sullivan. Battling Nelson gave the first inkling of what is coming when he began to shout a week ago: "Britt is afraid of me. Britt is trying to crawl." This was when he was endeavoring to intimidate Britt and deter him from making the match.

But Bat is a mild-mannered, mealy-mouthed individual compared to his manager, Billy Nolan. One trembles to think of what Nelson will have to say when he reaches San Francisco a week or two hence and finds everything in connection with the Britt-Sullivan match going as merry as a marriage bell.

The last time a contest between Britt and Nelson fell through—and it was Nolan's fault, by the way; for demanding a re-arrangement of the terms—Nolan accused Willie Britt of trying to fix the fight. If there are any other skeletons in the pugilistic closet Nolan will be sure to trot them out when he arrives on the scene. Meanwhile an air of determination envelops the Britts and they declare that they are ready to defend their position with Nelson, Nolan or anyone else.

"Here's my idea of it in a nutshell," says Jimmie. "Nelson says to me, 'Now you stay at home and be good and I'll come back here and box you in August. Meanwhile, I'll go east and try and lift a few purses along the six-round circuit.' Isn't that gally? We are all growing old and money like time is a fleeting commodity. I want some of it myself and what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. If Nelson has a right to make other matches while our affair hangs fire, so have I.

"Yes, and I'll get around to Nelson after a while, too. We'll meet as sure as fate and the best way for him to hasten matters is to cut his eastern tour and come back to the coast."

Willie Britt indorses what Jimmie says and adds: "Wouldn't that cry of Jimmy being afraid nauseate you? Is there anything in his record since he graduated from the Olympic Club boxing squad to suggest that he is afraid of anything his weight that carries itself on two legs?"

As before the sports are inclined to take sides in this Britt-Nelson controversy. Britt's critics speak of "A pugilist's duty to the public," the argument being I suppose that the public would rather see Britt and Nelson in action than either man and some one else. Britt has a right to thrust every every other consideration aside and make the match.

It appears to me that a full-sized debate could be held on the subject of a fighter's duty to the public. As a started I should say that a bruiser's principal duty is to box honestly at all times when striving for the money furnished by the public. Whether he has a right to regulate his affairs the same as any other business man and give prior attention to the ventures which involve the least risk, is one of the debatable points.

There isn't much of a bond between a professional pugilist and the public. A champion goes into the ring bowing and smiling and the public greets him effusively. One little swat on the point of the chin will change it all, though. Then the roars of approval are transferred to the other fellow and the champion is carried to his dressing room a back number. The knowledge that he always did his duty to the public may be some solace to him, but it won't earn him lasting regard. The sporting world has no use for has beens. If you don't believe me ask yours truly, always on the level, John L. Sullivan, who is talking himself to death along the vaudeville route, while no one seems to listen.

and Peterson for its opening card, is and Pterson for its opening card, is in hopes of putting Frankie Neil and Harry Tenny in the ring next Saturday night. Tenny is one of our precocious amateurs and according to the experts he will make a better match for Neil than Dick Hyland did. Hyland has to fight a few pounds below his best weight to accommodate Neil, but the Tenny youngster won't have to do that. He makes 115 pounds naturally and, it is said, punches with the vim of a welterweight. He has a dangerous right hand and seldom fails to get his man early in the engagement. When he posed as a four-round specialist he generally managed to land the decision with a knockout punch before the fourth round was reached.

The wrangle in regard to the permits still continues and it may be that this fact more than any other will have to do with keeping Britt and Nelson apart. The Western Club wants the August permit and has applied for it. So has the San Francisco Club. So has the Yosemite. It is understood that each club has the Nelson-Britt fight in view, but Britt's affiliations with the Western Club are said to be of such a nature that that organization may be able to hold him off from signing with one of the others on the plea that if it fails to land the August permit it will surely obtain the one for September.

By throwing up the sponge and hiking back east with his pet lion Bob Fitzsimmons has created the suspicion that he has reached the end of his tether as a fighter at last. It is thought that Bob after putting in a few days at training found that his frame did not respond to the efforts to coax the elasticity back into it and that he used the fact of the Salt Lake Club being derelict with its forfeit as an excuse for throwing up his contract.

GEN. GOMEZ DIES AT END OF LONG CAREER

Almost Idolized by the Cuban Populace on Account of Valiant Services

HAVANA, Cuba, June 17.—General Maximo Gomez died here this evening.

In its truest and best sense was General Maximo Gomez a soldier of fortune. He was born in Bani, in Santo Domingo, in 1836, of Spanish parents, who had settled there. His military life began as a cavalry officer in the Spanish army in Santo Domingo. In the war against Hayti Gomez also distinguished himself at the battle of Tome, where he routed a regiment of Haytians with a company of twenty men. When the Spaniards were driven from Santo Domingo, Gomez offered his sword to Spain in Cuba. It was accepted, but he was only given a lieutenancy, this he accepted. He became engaged with Santo Domingo over General Villar's treatment of Cuban refugees. He became enraged and one day struck General Villars in the face, called him a coward and showed himself as his enemy. Gomez became from that time a bitter foe of Spain. He joined the Cuban insurrection, was made a general and fought through the ten years' war, from 1868 to 1878. He out-generaled Marshal Martinez, Campos and General Weyler. When Spain, through precious promises, brought about a truce in 1888, he went to Jamaica. Afterward he fought under nearly every flag in South America. When the revolution in Cuba began again in 1895 with the proclamation of Jose Marti as president, General Gomez again offered his sword to the oppressed people. He was a warm friend and supporter of the murdered Marti, as he was of General Maco, who was slain in ambush near the close of the war. In June, 1902, Gomez was appointed inspector general of the rural guard and commander of all the Cuban military forces, amounting in all to about 50,000. In November, 1903, the Cuban government presented him the sum of $50,000 in recognition of his services and in celebration of his 67th birthday. The general accepted the gift, but would not draw any of the money until all of the veterans had been paid. On June 12, last, the Cuban house of representatives unanimously appropriated $100,000 for his benefit. The admiration of the mass of Cubans for General Gomez amounted almost to idolatry. His death undoubtedly is a severe blow to any political interest to which he was allied. General Gomez leaves a widow, five sons and one daughter.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE BEEF TRUST SITUATION

By Philip H. Hale, St. Louis

The frenzied article in Everybody's Magazine does not have the distinction of originality. There were sensational writers before. The Chicago Union Stock Yards were opened on Christmas Day, 1865, and as early as November, 1863, the Prairie Farmer of Chicago discovered a "mare's nest" and exposed it by saying:

"In the first place a mischievous combination of buyers and sellers to prevent the producer from learning current values has destroyed public confidence in a great measure.

"There is no disguising the fact that through the manipulations of a few unprincipled buyers and sellers, styling themselves 'the board,' the prestige that Chicago has heretofore enjoyed of being the great live stock center of the great northwest is fast slipping from her grasp.

"A majority of dealers in the country look upon the great union stock yards as a mart where swindlers and live stock shysters 'most do congregate.' A reform is needed. The public demands it, and unless this demand is heeded the combination and the union stock yards will soon find their occupation gone."

We don't know what became of the alleged combination, but the exposure of it anticipates by thirty-eight years the article in Everybody's Magazine. It also anticipated the dressed-beef houses fifteen years. It was written about the people who obtained the profits of the business without any investment in packing houses. The Prairie Farmer was in real earnest and the writer believed that the cattle market was going wrong. The Chicago market, however, has grown to be a hundred times greater than it was in 1865 and a big city has grown up around the market.

OLD-TIME TEXAS CATTLE TRADE

As Texas is always an important state in cattle production we will not offer any excuse for presenting some incidents showing the old conditions surrounding the stock raiser from the Western Texas standpoint which we find in a book entitled, "Sketches of the Cattle Trade," by Joseph G. McCoy of Kansas City. It says.

"In 1867 R. D. Hunter went to Texas and bought twelve hundred head of cattle, which he drove to Omaha, Neb., and sold to government contractors at a snug profit. The summer of 1869 found him on the trail from Texas with a fine herd of 2,500 head of cattle, which were sold in Chicago at paying figures. But in 1870 a herd of 1,400 select beeves was put on the Chicago market and 4½ to 6¼ cents gross weight (in greenbacks) was realized, netting a profit of $20 per head.

"Colonel Hunter was afterwards a ranchman and became identified with the live stock commission business, and this item is mentioned to show that the Texas cattle raiser had no part in marketing his own cattle."

Another extract from the same book refers to a class of irresponsible cattle buyers, saying:

"All along the border a host of sharpers and thieves—men with good address and plausible intentions—were anxious to buy cattle, but owing to the unsettled condition of affairs were afraid to bring cash with them, but had what purported to be New York exchange, with which they bought cattle. Of course, their drafts were worthless, but before the drover could find it out and secure himself the rascal would have turned the stock into some secret confederate's hands and left for parts unknown to the drover. Others used worthless notes and such other devices as villainous ingenuity could invent, and each scheme or plan would surely catch some unwary, confiding drover."

"The cattle-producing portions of the state of Texas were overrun. The ranges were becoming depastured. The stocks of cattle would not yield sufficient revenue to pay the expenses of caring for them; that is, marking, branding, etc. Strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless true that within the bounds of the state of Texas no one came forward to open up an outlet for the millions of her matured cattle. Over the business of cattle raising a deep gloom settled, crushing to earth the hopes of many whose herds numbered multiplied thousands."

EASTERN TEXAS EXPERIENCES

In regard to the before the packing house period, I obtained some information from an old-time Texas stockman at Kansas City quite recently. Tom Trammell of Nolan county, Texas is a cattle breeder, a cattle feeder and a banker, and, although he is a long way from being an old man, he is one of the few who can go back to 1865, which is forty years ago. Tom Trammell was born and raised in Navarro county, Texas, and inherited his right to be a cattleman. He combined the business of cattle raising with buying and shipping cattle to market. His main market from 1865 to 1870 was New Orleans. He drove cattle to Alexandria, Simmesport and other places on the Red river and shipped them to market by boat.

He consigned to Imbau, Aycock & Co. He said that in those happy days stock cattle on the range were worth about $5 per head, and that beef cattle were bought at $8 to $12 per head. This goes to show that before the railroad began to carry cattle to northern markets New Orleans was the best market the Texas cattlemen had. In those days New Orleans received the bulk of the Texas cattle, which were fitted for market, and the others were driven north by the trail. Mr. Trammell mentioned as an exceptional case a shipment of specially fine steer cattle for which he paid $25 per head, which represented the highest price paid to Texas stockmen for beef cattle in several years. These steers he bought mostly from the Widow Cobb and Isaac Hamilton, near Groesbeck, in Limestone county, in the year 1873.

FORT WORTH AS A SHIPPING POINT

I have now come to the time when I am able to give some personal testimony as to what was going on. It was in the year 1880 when the Texas and Pacific railway terminus was at Fort The rebate system was yet forcing shipments into the hands of favored firms. At Fort Worth Robert Strahorn & Co., William Young & Co., Hunter, Evans & Co. were the principal commission firms holding the rebates. Of the speculators we remember A. S. Nicholson, J. D. Beauchamp, C. T. Herring and J. B. Wilson of Texas and Haas Brothers of Chicago. There were others whom we have forgotten. Then there happened to also be a set of speculating drovers, who went as far west as the Concho river to buy cattle from the cattle raisers. The vattle were speculated to death. The cattle raiser sold them to a passing speculator drover. Usually the drover speculator took his profit at the shipping point if he coud find anyone to buy. They were bought by a speculator in St. Louis and shipped to Chicago. If they were good enough for New York or Boston, a speculator had another whack at them. We did not follow any shipments beyond Chicago and few were good enough to go to New York. Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City were beginning to put the cattle into cans and coolers and that shut out the speculator.

From the incidents of this period we cannot get away from the idea that it was the canneries which first made Chicago famous and first enabled a Texas stockman to find a market for the cattle he did not have grass to fatten. In those days it required $7 per head to ship and sell a Texas stere. Those who are now shipping to the Fort Worth market can figure what they are saving since Swift and Armour gave them a home market. In that year the writer first met S. B. Burnett, who recently entertained the president, and who is very wealthy from raising grass cattle; Winfield Scott, famous as the one Texas stockman who says he lost neither sleep nor money by dealing with the packers, and J. B. Wilson, the great pioneer Texas cattle feeder, who has made the packers pay higher prices for Texas cattle than they were in the habit of paying for the best natives. Trace the fortunes of these three millionaires and then say if there is any case against the packers.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. GARFIELD

Being in Washington during the month some records in regard to the beef markets in the period before the beef packing houses became important factors in the trade, and having this beef industry in mind, the writer of this article requested an interview with Mr. Garfield in his official capacity, and he received us and answered our questions courteously, briefly and to the point. We asked Mr. Garfield if he believed that the packers had dealt with him and his experts in good faith. He answered most emphatically that the packers had acted fairly and honorably, giving every facility at their command for the conduct of the investigation. We asked him further that if he had the work to do over again, did he believe that any change in manner of investigation which his first experience might suggest would result in different conclusions, and he answered that in re-checking points and items which had been subjects of criticism or doubt the result was to confirm the belief in his own mind that the work had been done well and thoroughly and the report would stand so far as he was concerned as representing conclusions which could not be changed to any appreciable extent. Mr. Garfield is thoroughly in earnest in standing by the conclusions which are to be found in his report.

NO CONTROL OF MARKETS

I will not work the government report to death for the simple reason that it is a book of 350 pages, but we will take this much more of it. On page 21 the report says: "These companies (the Big 6, the so-called beef trust) do a smaller proportion of the beef business of the country than is ordinarily supposed, and comparatively narrow limits are placed upon the control which they could, even if they acted in harmony, exercise over the price of cattle and of beef."

For twenty years we have held an opinion of our own which we came by honestly, from impartial and disinterested investigation, and to save ourselves the needless trouble incident to framing a statement in regard to it will say that we agree with the government report. When the packers pay 5 to 6 cents per pound for Texas cattle they do it from necessity, and when under different circumstances they buy just as good cattle for 3½ to 4½ cents per pound they pay that much because they cannot get them for less. I would not consider a market worthy of the name if a buyer paid more than he was forced to do, neither should the salesman part with his cattle unless he has obtained the last possible cent. There are people who are not strong enough in their minds to understand the true test of the market, but I have stated it, and the western markets in competition one with another, and in competition inside of themselves, stand the test every time, and values fluctuate from the great natural and much-admired law of supply and demand.

A PACKER'S PROPOSITION TO CATTLEMEN

In the history of the cattle trade there is an incident of great value in the consideration of what is called the Garfield report of the beef industry. This report does not credit the beef packers with making as much money as the popular mind expected, and a margin of one dollar per head looks very small and surely is a small profit, but that is all which the government experts could report from the beef business alone. The incident I refer to grew out of the constant complaint on that part of the western cattle raisers that they were not getting enough money for their cattle and they wanted to have the cattle slaughtered upon a commission basis. A committee representing the cattle raisers were in Chicago and, calling upon the packers, obtained an audience with the late P. D. Armour. After going into the subject with the mat considerable length, Mr. Armour stated distinctly and positively that he would slaughter, sell and dispose of all the beef cattle they would deliver to him, and do it under their supervision, charging them two dollars ($2) per head. He said that he could make all the money he wished to at that rate. This incident was published in all the western cattle papers at the time and was known to every cattle raiser from Montana to Texas. It was considered at the time as a good proposition for the cattlemen, and the main reason it was not accepted was that the cattlemen could not deliver the goods. They wanted the packing advantages but they were not willing to trust the retail butchers to pay a big price for the beef which they had to place on the market. They decided that cattle raising as a business was good enough for them and they were not willing to take packing house risks. Thus the subject was allowed to drop.

THE ENTIRE KICK FROM RANGE CATTLE

If there had never been any Texas or western range cattle arriving in market in large bunches and train loads, thus requiring large operators to compete for large consignments, there would not have been any stockman's complaint against the big packers. It certainly did not begin in the native division. The best natives were the last to be included in the dressed beef trade; most of them were used for eastern and export trade and shipped on foot. Other native cattle, consisting of bulls, stags, oven, cows, heifers, calves, stockers and feeders, are split up in such endless variety and so many people are still in market after them that there is not even a plausible case against the packers. It is only on account of large bunhes of attle whih shut out small buyers by their own large of want of ompetition in any market. As we write this article we have before us the complete list of every sale of native cattle which has taken place at the St. Louis National Stock Yards in one week, which we had made for the purpose of comparison, and the sales are so numerous and to such a large number of buyers that the proof of a free and open market is clear and plain, and must be so to everybody engaged in any branch of the business.

VALUE OF PACKERS TO STOCKMEN

If the operations of the great packers were estimated at their true value, they represent the most beneficent and valuable service which it is possible to imagine. They are engaged in business for profit, and undoubtedly do make profits, although not nearly such large profits as were made by speculators who did nothing except speculate. The packer is entitled to profits of two operations, one as manufacturer and one as a merchant and exporter. The wholesale dry goods merchant undoubtedly marks up as much profit for simply buying and selling goods as the beef and pork packers are able to secure from the double service mentioned. In finding outlets for the immensely increased live stock productions the service performed by the packers is nothing short of a miracle.

TEXAS ESPECIALLY BENEFITED BY PACKERS

On July 3, 1895, the governor of Texas sent a dispatch to the United States secretary of the interior, saying: "There are now on the border about 50,000 cattle which are on their way to northern ranges from Texas, and Federal officers have notified the owners that they cannot pass along the agreed trail. With no other obstacles in the way of Texas commerce, this, added for the purpose of getting the cattle at nominal figures, will prove disastrous in the extreme." That was the last of the cattle trail. The packers now furnishing a home market for Texas cattle has saved southern Texas hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. The trail is actually forgotten in the better conditions which now exist.

In conclusion, we are enabled to say, after twenty-five years of constant contact with the live stock markets and from a thorough examination of influences affecting them from day to day, and year to year, that the only crime which packing companies have committed is the crime of success in business. Eighty-five per cent of the stories told concerning the packers are untrue, based upon false pretenses and imaginary grievances, and the other 15 per cent are charges of methods which are considered perfectly right, proper and meritorious so long as they are acts of men in other lines of business. This sweeping assertion in regard to the packers which is made in good faith without fear of proof being shown to the contrary covers with it the assurance to raisers of cattle, hogs and sheep that their business is not handicapped with conditions which destroy their opportunities for legitimate profits. The stock raiser who will keep within the economical bounds in the matter of production and not speculate too much on borrowed money and so get out of his depth, is safer now than anyone could possibly be before the dressed beef system was inaugurated.

JUDSON AND HARMON CASE AT WHITE HOUSE

President Confers with Secretary Morton and Attorney General Moody

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 17.—The withdrawal of Special Attorneys Harmon and Judson of the Santa Fe railroad and Colorado Fuel and Iron Company case, called for a conference today between the president and Paul Morton, secretary of the navy, and Attorney General Moody. The point at issue was whether the special attorneys and Mr. Moody could agree on a statement which would not be controversal and which would end the whole matter. It is thought the point underlining this statement given out shall apply to principles only and not refer to persons who may or may not have been named by Harmon in his letter which the attorney general has received, giving Harmon's side of the case. After the conference at the white house the attorney general would make no other statement other than to say that an answer might be expected Tuesday. Inasmuch as the special attorneys are the appointees of the president, the latter is also to make a statement probably simultaneously with Mr. Moody. Mr. Morton would not discuss the case. He said that the more publicity was given to the matter the better he liked it and that when the facts were known it would be time enough to consent. The status of the case now appears to be a deadlock between the attorney general and Messrs. Harmon and Judson, which may end in the publication by Mr. Harmon of his letter in full, if an agreement be not reached. The common rumor, undenied, has that Mr. Morton and other of the Santa Fe railway were named as persons who ought to be indicted so as to carry out the findings of the Interstate commerce commission. The fact that the answer of the attorney general is not to be given out before Sunday is warrant for the belief that he has answered Judge Harmon's letter and endeavored to implicate the attorney.

SHEA CONTINUES TO PLAN STRIKE FIGHT

Violence Continues in Chicago—One Is Killed and Several Injured

CHICAGO, Ill., June 17.—While many leaders of the local unions of teamsters in conjunction with the members of the international executive board sought means to bring the strike to an end today, President C. P. Shea as well as officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor laid plans for action tomorrow. Friends of the new move for immediate ending of the strike "got together" today in the office of the Ice Teamsters' Union and held a caucus in which, it is said, plans were laid to control the meeting of the teamsters' joint council Monday night, when a new peace committee will be demanded. The teamsters' joint council is made up of several delegates from each of the forty-six local teamsters' unions in the city and the men now advocating an early ending of the strike believe they can secure control by having every delegate present. In such a case the smaller local delegates would overpower delegates who represent locals of thousands of members. The larger locals which are engaged in the strike here have found no fault with President Shea's policy. Violence in the teamsters' strike broke out with renewed interest today. One person was killed in a strike riot, several others suffered injuries that will probably prove fatal. Many arrests were made, all combining to mark the day as one of the most turbulent of the present strike.

PRAYER FRUITLESS IN ANTI-SALOON BATTLE

Los Angeles Goes Wet by Overwhelming Majority Despite Prohibition Efforts

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—In a battle of prayer against the tactics of practical politics, a movement to close all saloons of Los Angeles failed by a vote of nearly 2 to 1.

The saloon election, which occurred in this city June 2, ending in a most sweeping victory for the saloon side of the contest, was a unique struggle. It had the distinction of being held in the largest city in which such a movement ever reached the polls. It also had the unique distinction of being the first attempt to use the initiative method of enacting law.

The charter of government in Los Angeles contains advanced sociological ideas. Two years ago there was injected into it a provision by which ordinances might be passed by popular vote. The preliminary details for such action demand a petition of 15 per cent of the voters asking for an election on the proposed legislation. Joined with the provisions for the recall of any official who became derelict in his duties and with a referendum on every ordinance passed by the council, including the sale of franchises, Los Angeles has the machinery for obtaining popular government, probably unexcelled by any other city in the union.

That for two years no effort has been made to use the initiative clause augurs that the charter provisions have caused the legislative body to heed popular will, especially as the recall of one councilman showed that the voters understood the weapons of defense that they possessed.

The "no saloon" ordinance was presented on the petition of 5,000 voters. The fight was waged by the Anti-Saloon League under the direction of Superintendent Chapman. The liquor legislation already in force was unusual. It might be considered restrictive in most cities. It provides for a limit of 200 saloons, with a district in the business center. No saloon can be placed in the residence sections. In addition, under the police commission, permits are issued for wholesale houses and restaurants. The privileges of the restaurants are restricted to the sale of wine and beer by the bottle with hot meals. The saloons are closed on Sunday and at 1 a. m. week days.

The ordinance which was presented to the voters proposed to abolish the saloon. Existing conditions in regard to restaurants and wholesalers were to be undisturbed. This exception probably hurt the crusade more than any other one influence, for the argument was broadly used that to abolish the saloon and permit the restaurants to operate would not remove the evils of intemperance, but simply change the methods of distribution. The saloonman, it was asserted, was to be made a sacrifice for the interests of the restaurants.

Los Angeles has a reputation, proven by its building statistics, of being the most rapidly growing city of the country. Its population is cosmopolitan, made up of men from every state and every country. Two decades of life in the city are counted an age, and those who have been here for that period are regarded as pioneers and patriarchs. It was to a population of 200,000 made up in this manner of citizens of short term residence, that the ordinance was presented. The prominent commercial bodies condemned the ordinance as a prohibtory measure calculated to stem the tide of prosperity. The liberalists condemned it as an invasion of right. Others objected to the "half way" measures.

The contest at its finish, however, settled down to a straight question of "wet" or "dry," and it was upon this basis that the vote was cast.

Against the ordinance was a campaign by trained politicians. The liquor interests raised a fund of $60,000 for defense. Allied with the organization was every ward heeler, roundsman and politician of both parties. Their work was quiet. Not a public meeting was held. The only literature distributed was that of a commercial organization condemning the movement.

On the "dry" side there was a heated campaign of a month, with public meetings nightly, with every minister of the city, except the Catholic priests, who condemned the movement, and Francis Murphy, the noted temperance reformer, who declared at the outset that "the saloon to close is between the nose and the chin," allied with the movement.

On the day of election, while the paid workers for the saloon were rounding up the vote, the temperance side depended upon prayer meetings at most of the churches. While the women of the city, who stood almost as a unit in an organization band to assist the ordinance, prayed, the men voted. The result, 8,466 "dry" votes against 15,270 "wet," offers food for reflection on the subject of the efficacy of prayer as a potent force in politics.

ENDEAVORERS WILL MEET IN AUSTIN

Fifteenth Annual Convention of State Convention Opens June 20

AUSTIN, Texas, June 17.—The fifteenth annual convention of the state association of Christian Endeavor will be held here commencing next Tuesday for a three days' session. The program, which will be completed shortly, will embrace a number of special features of great interest to the members. Among the noted Christian workers who are expected here are Rev. Ira Landreth of Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. Crayton S. Brooks of Missouri, both of whom will deliver addresses during the convention. The latter is one of the greatest champions in the cause of Christian citizenship, and who helped Governor Joseph Folk of Missouri in the noted raid on the boodlers of St. Louis and Jefferson City.

Much attention has been paid by the state program committee to the musical feature, and that end will be specially attractive. The Austin Choral Society has been engaged to sing during one evening of the convention, and another evening the combined choirs of the city churches will render an excellent musical program. The program will also include a trolley ride over the city, a visit to the state house and also to the different eleemosynary institutions of the state.

DEATHS

MRS. A. E. SARGENT

Word was received in Fort Worth Saturday of the death at Cleveland, Ohio, of Mrs. A. E. Sargent of Lake and Presidio streets, this city. Her death occurred Friday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary D. Barnard. Interment will be made at Aurora, Ind., Monday.

Court Saw Law Enforced

BOONVILLE, Ind., June 17.—Frank Lampton was convicted and fined by Magistrate Youngblood for carrying concealed weapons. Unable to pay, he was committed to jail. There is a new state law calling for the confiscation and destruction of deadly weapons to the court directed that the sheriff carry it out to the fullest detail. There is also a provision of the law that the destruction of the deadly weapon must be in the presence of the court, and Sheriff Ward procured an anvil and sledge hammer from a nearby blacksmith shop, which he brought to the court room, and the wapon was pounded out of all semblance of order, to the full satisfaction of the court.

HARVARD ATHLETES ASSAULT WAITER

GALES'S FERRY, Conn., June 17.—That the men of Harvard should stoop to acts of violence to vent displeasure for adverse criticism is scarcely to be credited, yet such was the case at Red Top, Harvard's training quarters, when Marion Townsend, sporting editor of the Boston Traveler, was ordered off the grounds by Captain Filley and assaulted and roughly handled by Manager Emerson because of adverse criticism of crimson crew methods. The mix-up is the upshot of adverse criticism which Townsend has been making against the management of Harvard athletics. Assisted by several crew men, Emerson hustled Townsend off the grounds. He was not badly hurt, but received a severe shaking.

City Hall Paving

Continuous Work on Portions of Throckmorton Street Assured

Work of paving about the city hall as ordered by city counil will be begun as soon as the necessary materials are secured by the McCollum Construction Company, which was awarded the contract on lowest bid.

The company has already paved portions of Throckmorton street fronting properties of individual owners and consent irrespective of the improvement district plans has been secured by others to insure the work for such a distance as will make Throckmorton street a continuously paved street from Seventh to Tenth streets.

EXPRESS CRASHES INTO FREIGHT TRAIN

Engineer Killed and Fireman Injured in Collision at Gilbert, Illinois

ELGIN, Ill., June 17.—Engineer Leonard Smith of Chicago was instantly killed and his fireman, Fred Armstrong of Belvider, badly hurt when the Freeport express on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, running at forty miles per hour, crashed into a freight train at Gilbert, twelve miles from Elgin, today. Scores of passengers were thrown from their seats, shocked and bruised, but none were seriously hurt, as the coaches did not leave the track. Dead: Leonard Smith of Chicago, engineer passenger train.

GORDON'S DAUGHTER TO VISIT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 17.—Mrs. Burton Smith, daughter of the late General J. G. Gordon of Georgia, is expected here shortly to visit friends in New Yorw and Long Island. A reception will be given Mrs. Smith by Mrs. Solon Berglum, wife of the sculptor, who has been selected to make the equestrian statue of General Gordon which is to be placed by the Confederate veterans near the capitol building in Atlanta.

Students' Picnic

Students and faculty of Draughon's Practical Business College of this city spent Saturday as a day of outing at Woodlake Park, near Sherman. The party left Fort Worth Saturday morning on a special train over the Frisco. In the afternoon outdoor games, including a baseball game between the college of this city and Draughon's Practical Business College of Denison, were held. A dance was given in the evening. Trolley trips were taken to Denison and Sherman.

Colorado News.

V. W. Allen sold last week to W. D. Irvin and W. A. Johnson of Scurry county, three head of high-grade Hereford heifer calves and two Hereford bull calves at $100 per head.

Why not Colorado get up a fine stock show and an agricultural exhibit this fall? It would create additional interest among our stockmen and farmers and besides be the means of bringing the Colorado country to the front as never before. It is a matter that should be given a serious thought by our business men.

It is reported on good authority that the Spur ranch, located seventy miles north of Snyder, in Dickens county, and embracing 1,000,000 acres of land, has changed hands, passing under the control of E. P. and S. A. Swenson of New York, who own extensive land interest in Jones and other West Texas counties. The Spur ranch was owned by a Scotch syndicate and the deal is said to have reacred $3,000,000.

IN DONLEY COUNTY

Clarendon Banner- Stockman.

F. N. Page returned last week from the Santa Rosa country in New Mexico, bringing with him a train of big steers for Lewis & Molesworth. They were placed in the old Curtis pasture at Giles.

J. T. Sneed of Amarillo was here Tuesday receiving from W. E. Barrow of Stonewall county 700 two-year-old steers, which he bought at $18. He also received from Lee Bros. 400 twos at about the same price. The cattle were taken to pasture near Pampa.

While handling cattle in New Mexico last week Will Lewis was marked and branded in the latest approved style with an oversiope on the nose. The accident was the result of him coming in contact with the hoof of an unruly steer, and his nose was pretty badly broken, but we are glad to say will leave no serious results.

COTTON CROP HOLDS BUT LITTLE PROMISE

Southern Texas Reported to Be in Advance of Other Sections of State

An extremely gloomy report on the cotton situation was brought in Saturday night by F. M. Cordill, special representative of the cotton firm of Mayward, Vick and Clark of New Orleans. Mr. Cordill is engaged on a trip over the entire cotton belt of the country and thus far his traveled through Louisiana, Missigsippi, eastern Arkansas, northern, northeast, central and southern Texas. From all except southern Texas he brings an unfavorable report.

"In Mississippi the hill section, taken as a whole is in very poor condition. The crop is at least twenty days behind, much of it is not chopped out and a great deal remains yet to work. The plant is very small and the ground dry, hard and very grassy.

"Louisiana is practically in the same condition as is Mississippi, both in the river parishes and in the hill section. Southeastern Arkansas is the same as Louisiana and the entire Mississippi delta, extending from Memphis to Vicksburg, is in extremely poor condition for this time of the year.

"Northeast and northern Texas, from Texarkana between Denison and Sherman, as far south as Waco, are thirty days late with their crop. The plant is very small and exceedingly grassy and weedy in many places. A very large area has not even been chopped and in some places the plant is just coming up. An amount of damage has been done by web worms south of Dallas as far as Hillsboro, and particularly in Ellis county, regarded as the banner county of the state. Texas, in the sections I have mentioned, has a decrease of at least 15 per cent at this time. In southern Texas the crop is very good to very fine. It is clean, well worked, healthy, vigorous and fruiting well. Even down there, dry, hot winds are beginning to tell on the crop and unless rain comes within the next four or five days there will be a howl from the farmers in the section indicated.

"The crop is in such poor condition at present that I hardly think that with average good conditions that an average crop would be realized. Compared with conditions at this time last year, the present conditions are almost startling. At this time last year conditions were almost perfect, with the ground clean, well worked and fine stands everywhere. Relatively speaking, the crop this year would require as much for the development of one acre as it did last year for five.

"I attribute the present unpromising condition of the crop to the hard and incessant rains, which, followed by a drouth, has packed the ground so hard that work has necessarily been very slow and tedious, and in many places the ground has been too hard for any work at all.

"Summing up the situation so far as I have seen it, I would say that the crop is thirty days late in the western belt from Mississippi westward; there is an average decrease of 15 per cent in the section; the fields are foul and grassy and the elements of chance are against a large crop."

Mr. Cordill is a man of many years' experience in the cotton business, but said he would not, at such an early date as this, hazard an estimate of the crop. He leaves in a day or so for Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Arkansas, Tennessee, the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama. He will then have finished the tour of the belt and will make his report to his firm.

Favors Extra Session

A. M. Kennedy Willing to Serve Without Pay

A. M. Kennedy of Mart, a member of the Twenty-ninth legislature, arrived in the city Saturday night and registered at the Metropolitan. He says that he is thoroughly in favor of an extra session for the purpose of passing on the proposed revision of the state election law, and says that if the extra session of the legislature is called he will be there to make a fight for a blanket primary election law.

He says that he believes the law would be passed in a hurry, because he recalls that there are forty or fifty members of the legislature who would heartily co-operate in the movement to have the bill passed.

Local Travelers Meet

Plans for Picnic Arranged at Session Saturday

At a meeting of Post J, T. P. A., held in the Board of Trade rooms Saturday night, plans for a picnic to be held under the auspices of the post were discussed in detail. William Bates was appointed as an additional member of the committee on arrangements.

The date of the outing has not yet been decided, but will be settled, together with all final arrangements, at a called meeting of the post to be held next Saturday night. Attendance at the meeting last night was light.

THREE DREAMS

"I had the very strangest dream,"
Said Jasper John, "last night.
I dreamed the moon and all the stars
Were shining just as bright,
And yet the sun was shining, too,
And I was racing Ted,
While everybody else we knew
Was sound asleep in bed."
"I dreamed," said little Theodore,
"About a monstrous horse
With twenty legs and lots of tails
(He b'longed to me, of course).
His eyes were green; the rest of him
Was yellow streaked with black;
And nobody in all the world
But me could mount his back."
Their father, mother and their aunt
Agreed that these two dreams
Were very queer; but Bobby said,
"The one I had, it seems
To me, 's the queerest of them all.
I saw a boy who said
He hated football, and he wished He'd been a girl instead!"
—Elizabeth Lincoln Gould.

Up in New York city the other day something was done that got in the papers and it was not about the Equitable squabble nor the Nan Patterson trial, nor any of the spectacular things that our big sis is apt to show off to the rest of her municipal kin. This time it was not spectacular and it was not of a yellow journal chronicling.

The city of New York has a motor club. Just what a motor club exists for is easily understandable. But this time there were no records broken nor simple-minded folks run down. The motor owners, goodness knows how many of them there be up New York way, invited the 5,000 children of the twenty orphan asylums to be their guests for an auto ride to Coney Island, and there they were given sights and excites sufficient to fill their small minds, and good things to eat to fill their juvenile stomachs.

We have only about fifty automobiles here, and we have no Coney Island. But we have an orphans' home, and we have a day nursery, where working mothers leave their children while at work. Would it be an altogether impossible plan for the fifty owners of the fifty autos to take these small folks for a ride one of these hot evenings?

These little chaps are not all going to be waifs all their lives. It is through no fault of theirs that they are fatherless, motherless, maybe even worse now. And the longings that dwell in these small hearts can sometimes be satisfied with such small cost of time or money. The folks who own autos are considered favored. They have luxuries of one sort or another, denied the majority. The sensation of whiling along to the blissful "chug! chug!" of the gasoline engine is altogether unknown to these children.

The joys that come to these small folks of the home and the day nursery are not many. An auto ride would give them something to think about and talk about for many a long day. To give an hour of happiness to a little child without cost or scarifice—is it not worth while?

There was much display of juvenile enthusiasm at the gymnasium of Trinity chapel last Friday night, when the Trinity senior squad met in athletic rivalry a delegation from the gymnasium of the First Presbyterian church. The enthusiasm was juvenile because the audience was largely of that class. If older folks had been there they would have found themselves joining in the hurrahs and cheers before they knew it. The contest was preceded by an exhibition drill by the junior squad of the Trinity gymnasium. There were marching and turns on the horizontal bar, and many dashing feats with the gymnasium horse. The boys of the juvenile squad are from 14 and under, the smallest being little more than 8. The director, Harold Bevans, has had them in hand now for several months and there is promise of expert performances before another year passes.

The older boys of Trinity are also drilled twice a week by Mr. Bevans and are accomplishing remarkable results. Mr. Bilhelmer is the director of the gymnasium of the First Presbyterian church. There, too, the excellent effect of scientific training of body and muscle is worthy of favorable comment.

There are a good many folks who should take the opportunity to see some of this work that is done for our boys. It will set to thinking and thinking is good for anybody.

The city boy is out of his element. The town is all right for elderly people with rheumatism or lazy folks who insist on riding ten blocks on the electric rather than walk, or people who place steam heated apartments above fields and flowers, birds and fresh air. But the boy is deprived of his birthright when he is given the city for his schooling and his amusements. A boy just has to make a noise. Folks there be in any number who live surrounded by the noise of rattling wagons over paved streets, the shrieking of a multitude of passing engines, the clanging of the gongs of the street cars and are more than satisfied. They take it as evidence of metropolitan ways. But let a bog give one of his natural, normal, human nature yells and nerves go to pieces and there is an outcry against "noise." The boy is turned out into the streets, where the best or worst that he can do is drowned a hundred times over by the noises of man's invention.

On the streets he has to take his chances with folks who object to baseball; the balls do go where they are not wanted. If they go swimming mothers are in a fearful state. The humane education has taken his gun away and hunting is out of the question. Fishing chances are too far away from him, and so all he can do is to watch his older brothers and copy all the mischief that is capable of assimilating and incidentally he acquires a distinctive brand of his own. His older brother haunts the street corners for "rubbering" purposes. His older brother puffs the inevitable cigarette. The older brother uses words and phrases that mothers and sisters are supposed to frown upon. The older brother at 21 is stoop-shouldered and undersized in height and breadth of chest. He is soft of muscle and of little service on a camp or other diversion called forth physical strength. This is what the average small boy gets as example from the average big brother.

But the older brother is no more to blame than is the small boy. It is only the inevitable result of city environments on the growing male. The things a boy needs and must have for his normal development, both in mind and body, the temptation is great to add morals too, are denied him by his surroundings. A city is a fine place to purchase finery for feminine adornment, but it lacks somewhat of being the best place to develop men in.

The gymnasium such as that at Trinity church and the First Presbyterian church attempts to counteract even in a small way, and for a limited number, maybe the untoward conditions that boys have to contend with. The Trinity gymnasium has an equipment complete in every particular to cover a course of instruction for several years. The boys from 8 to 10 up have systematic training. Every muscle is developed, and even the lung capacity given a chance. The boys are given opportunities for the yell, cat calls and other exercises without which no normal boy is complete.

While the gymnasium does much for the city boy, there is one enemy that needs a stronger and larger fighting force. There is nothing that is dwarfing the race more than the cigarette habit acquired by boys, growing boys. Mothers and fathers either are indifferent to the result of this early use of tobacco are they are indifferent to their boy's habits and have no home discipline worthy of the name.

No woman with a cranium as big ag a hickory nut objects to men using tobacco at the proper times and at the proper places. But nicotine soaking into the nerves and blood of a boy of 6, 8, 10, 12 and even older, presents its triumph in men of stunted statue and of degenerate mental and moral faculties.

Excessive users of tobacco frequently find that at middle age either their nerves are gone or the heart is affecetd, or other greater and more serious ills. But men of maturity are entitled to their discretion and rights to do with their bodies what they will. The young have no such rights, but their guardians have a duty to send them towards manhood with the best physical equipment possible. An other training is secondary. Sound morals will take care of themselves if the body is kept wholesome and free from poisonous effects of unwholesome food, drink or narcotics.

MISCELLAENOUS

Mrs. C. A. Lyford entertained with a linen shower for Miss Oma Gregory last Wednesday afternoon, the guests being Misses Griffin, Van Zandt, Johnston, Helen Lassiter, Henry Lassiter, Frances Van Zandt, Margaret Van Zandt, Naumie Gregory, Minnie Gregory and Anna Carter; Mesdames Lassiter, Wellington, Robert Johnson, Fox, Dryden, Ryan, Feild, Wray, Bishop and Beck; Messrs. Walker, Gregory and Mr. and Mrs. Speel, Helen Johnson, Joe Johnson, Lena Griffin, Charlotte Wray, Elizabeth Miller and Roma Woody of New York City. Several toasts were drunk, Miss Anna Carter proposing them. The contents of the "shower" basket were looked after by Misses Lena Johnson and Miss Kate Walker. Ice cream and cake were served amid pretty decorations of pink and white. Miss Gregory's marriage to J. W. Musgrove takes place June 26.

A merry party of young folks found relief from the sultry weather in an excursion to Village Creek, mounting a tally-ho drawn by four horses under the guidance of John Matthews, who acted as the Jehu, they sang their way to the place appointed for the picnic. Arriving there they enlivened the time with games and sports and then regalled themselves with the refreshments that had been provided for the occasion. They remained until the midnight hour, when, after a most delightful evening they returned to Fort Worth. Those who were in the party were as follows: Misses Hulda and Annye Johnson, Ola Miller, Miss Murphy, Miss Long, Ruby Kincaid, Miss McBride and Messrs. Johnson, Matthews, Long, Kincaid, Chloe, Weatherford, Rubeck and Coleman.

Mrs. G. D. Conner entertained the Maple Club last Tuesday afternoon with an enthusiastic meeting after the regular parliamentary drill, conducted by Mrs. Nannie Luther, and answers to roll call from Tennyson. The club was called upon for a round table talk, "Thoughts and Pleasantries Garnered from a Day's Outing." The program for the day was an especially fine one. Prof. Camer was assisted by his little daughter, Georgia, who herself rendered some very beautiful solos. The hostess served a dainty two-course ice luncheon, at the conclusion of this part of the program Mrs. Conner prepared this intersting contest, entitled "The Black Cat:"

First—a cat and a fallen tree. Answer, catalogue.
Second—A cat that will be a butterfly. Answer, catterpillar.
Third—A wet cat. Answer, Cataract.
Fourth—A cat and a feathere flying animal. Catbird.
Fifth—A bloody cat. Category.
Sixth—A horned cat. Cattle.
Seventh—A name of a mountain. Catskill.
Eighth—A cat and a toilet article. A catacomb.
Ninth—everal felines on top of a barn. Catsup.
Tenth—A cat that brings trouble. Catastrophe.
Eleventh—A Roman cat. Cato.
Twelfth—A cat and a bite. Catlip.

The contest prize was won by Mrs. Myrtle Stewart in a cut with Mrs. Nannie Luther.

The club will be entertained by Mrs. Jennie Martin, 305 Calhoun street, at the next meeting.

Misses Imogene and Nancy Sanguinet extended the courtesies of the Country Club to the younger folks last Wednesday evening and for the hours of 8 until near 12 their guests reveled in the delight of a dance at the club. There the wide verandas to rest when a rest was wanted after too much exercise and cooling ices and fruit nectar for refreshing. It was quite the largest private party of the summer yet brought forth. The guests of the young ladies were:

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Christian church spent Tuesday at the church sewing for the Julia Fowler Orphans' Home. Luncheon was partaken of in the parlors and a social time much enjoyed. In the afternoon Mrs. Beckham tendered a very nice courtesy by sending a large freezer of delicious sherbet. Those present were Mesdames J. McNeeley, K. M. Van Zandt, Royston, Tevis, Nelson, Mitchell, J. P. Smith, Darnell, Cushman, Wilkins, Miller, Jarvis, Clough and Miss Ida Ayers.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church will give a social on the parsonage lawn, west Fifth street, Tuesday eve from 8 to 11 o'clock. Program rendered and refreshments served.

The lawn social given by the members of St. Anne's guild of St. Andrews' parish last Thursday night was a repetition of the success of former fetes on the lawn of the parish house. St. Anne's guild is only one of the organization of active workers of the parish and is composed of the younger married women. They had lanterns, but Lady Moon made their use unnecessary. Ice cream and wafers were served to sevral hundred guests.

The Lake Erie pavilion was the scene of a play of unique merriment last Friday evening. The ladies of the All Saints' Hospital Association invited the public to inspect a choice assortment of "Old Maids," for such inspection charging a small fee. Besides the view and attendant guessing as to the identity of the "maid," there was a rapid fire contest in offering coin, many among the audience being strongly moved to possession of the maid, so after viewing the graceful carriage, resplendent attire and marvelous and wonderful curls, long and short, light and dark, of the imposed "old maid." W. B. Paddock acted as auctioneer and through his eloquence faint-hearted young men plucked up more than their share of courage and bids became at times suggestive of recklessness.

Sixteen fair damsels were placed upon the auctioneers' stand and the prices offered for them ranged from three dollars to ten. Where the disguise of the candidate could be penetrated the prices went up bounding. Some of the disguises were so perfect that gallant bidders became discreet. There is such a thing as getting one thing when you want another.

But the auction was a huge success and the All Saints' hospital will have a comfortable addition to its treasury. After the auction the younger folk remained for a dance. Mrs. A. B. Wharton was the originator of the idea of an "Old Maid's Auction," and directed all the arrangements. To her skillful management the social and financial success of the occasion is largely due.

Mrs. D. B. Keeler has received from Secretary Loeb four volumes of "Winning of the West," by President Roosevelt. The books have an autograph inscription, donating them to the Carnegie library. When the president was in Fort Worth Secretary Loeb promised Mrs. Keeler that President Roosevelt would donate this work to the library and their receipt yesterday is the keeping of the promise.

A wagonette was the means of giving a party of young people much pleasure last Wednesday evening, the wagonette being filled with merry makers and a ride to Lake Erie was followed by a picnic supper. The party consisted of Mrs. John Cella, Misses Kelley, Kellinger, Otto, Telfair, Griffin, Crossland and Cella; Messrs. Duringer, Patton, Patton, Cunningham, Cameron, Washington, Orr and Ferris.

Mrs. J. L. Cooper and Mrs. W. B. Robinson chaperoned a tally-ho party to Lake Erie last Thursday evening. The ride was followed by certain festivities without which no Lake Erie trip is complete. The young people tally-hoing in this party were Misses Ferr, Bahes Genevieve Harris, Delia Darter, Irene Phenix, Nellie Collins and Leonora Bechler; Messrs. Robert Stewart, Albert Childress, Milton Frees, John Bostick, Gurgus Van Zandt, Fortner and A. L. Bechler.

Miss Mary French will entertain with a morning reception next Wednesday, followed by a luncheon at 1 o'clock, in honor of her guest, Miss Annie Bronbaugh of St. Louis. In the evening there will be a dance in the Imperial Club rooms.

Miss Elizabeth Wells will entertain the Daisies next Tuesday morning.

The Harmony Club held a called meeting yesterday at the residence of Mrs. R. B. West to discuss the revised constitution and by-laws and to hear the report of the committee on year book. The club will hold a meeting later in the summer.

The Lake Erie picnic habit attacked Mrs. A. J. Long, Mrs. W. E. Connell, Mrs. C. C. Connell and Mrs. Thomasson last Thursday evening, and accompanied by Misses Long Webb, Mabel and Fay Spencer, Nell, Blanche, Esther and Phoebe Connell, Messrs. Robert Martin, Allen Brooks, Alfred Hanney and Robert Nix, they sallied Lake Erie-ward, armed with such provisions as the occasion might call for. The lake and the mysteries of the amusement quarters were fully investigated.

Mrs. M. D. Beadle entertained informally with a musical program last Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Morris and Mr. Morris from Columbia, Mo. Mr. Morris is a musician studying at the tate University and delighted with several violin numbers. Mrs. Beadle sang several times, adding her beautiful voice to the interpretation of selections of great merit. Mr. Beadle gave readings that kept his hearers in absorbed attention, "Gloverson Among the Mormons," a suite from Eugene Field, and an arrangement from the "Leopard's spots," the "Higher Law." After the program ices were served in small pots, in each appearing a pink or white carnation.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gerney changed the usual program at the Country Club last Monday evening, substituting a barbecue for the grill room dinner, entertaining thereby a large number of guests. After the barbecue there was dancing for the dancingly inclined. Mr. and Mrs. Berney's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Menefee, Mr. and Mrs. Schenecker, Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Berney, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Berney, Mr. and Mrs. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Newby, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Berney, Dr. and Mrs. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Sanguinet, Mr. and Mrs. Googins, Mr. and Mrs. Humble, Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. John Harridon, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Collett, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCart, Mr. and Mrs. Byers, Mr. and Mrs. Bomar, Mr. and Mrs. Heffley, Mr. and Mrs. R. Ward, Anson, Belk, Kruseman, Marsden, Weatherly, Harris, Friedman, Marsh, Wynne and Humphreys.

The Nash home on Monroe street was thronged last Wednesday evening to witness the marriage of Miss Minnie Nash to G. W. Parker. The hour for the ceremony was 7, but long before friends filled the house, each eager to be among the first to join in the chorus of satisfaction that countless friends felt in this wedding. The ceremony was read by Rev. Luther Little of Galveston, assisted by Dr. W. B. Riley of Minneapolis, both of whom came up specially for the event. There were masses of flowers and festoons of smilax. The pronuptial music was played by Mrs. Olive Edrington Scott, pianist; Mrs. Morton, violinist, and Miss Edrington, who sang, "All For You," with violin oblogato. As the song ended, Mrs. Scott began Mendelssohn's wedding march, and at its first strains the ribbon bearers, Elizabeth Chase and Charles Nash Jr., came through the halls and into the library, where stood the clergymen, Misses Bernie and Annis Newlin held the ribbons in the hall. Miss Bess Parker, the daughter of the bridegroom, wearing a pretty bridesmaid frock of white, was followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Charles Nash. Thomas W. Ridgway, accompanied the bridegroom. Last to reach the bridal circle was the bride, wearing an exquisite hand-made gown of wash chiffon, trimmed with Swiss embroidery and Valencienne lace. Her bridal bouquet was of white sweet peas and maiden hair ferns.

After the benediction the guests pressed around, each eager to express with affectionate sincerity their hearty congratulation.

The cutting of the wedding cake rewarded Miss Horsley with the ring and Miss Farrell the dime. The bridal bouquet, thrown from the steps as the bride left for the train, fell to the possession of Miss Hornby.

Assisting in receiving the guests were Mrs. E. A. Want, Mrs. Duringer, Mrs. Ed Burns, Mrs. Newby and Miss Farrell. Misses Mabel and Fay Spencer served ices in the dining room.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Mills of Minneapolis, aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mrs. Richards of Dallas, and Clarence Parker, son of the bridegroom.

In the parlor suite were displayed many handsome gifts, including cut glass, silver, china and dainty accessories for housekeeping use and adornment.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker left for Denver for a stay of two or three weeks, and on their return will be at home corner Peter Smith and Ballinger streets.

The expressions of love that have been showered upon this bride have been countless. During her girlhood and womanhood there has been nothing but kindness and thoughtfulness for others. Her heart has been filled with unselfishness; her mind has been quick to understand and from her tongue no words unworthy ever fell.

Of the bridegroom nothing is known that is not admirable. Daily tests of business and social life have revealed a character truly upright and noble.

The best wishes of all who know them have been joyfully expressed.

Mrs. J. Davis Tramel entertained with "Railroad Whist" last Wednesday afternoon, the score cards and prizes being significant of railroading. The idea was most original and was cleverly executed.

Some Little Stories Well Told

HAD MONEY TO BURN

That Confederate money was never taken seriously is well illustrated in the following story told by the late General John B. Gordon, and which as far as can be ascertained, has never appeared in print:

One day during a temporary cessation of hostilities between the opposing forces a tall, strapping Yankee rode into the Confederate camp on a sorry-looking old horse to effect a trade for some tobacco.

"Hullo, Yank!" hailed one of a number of Confederate soldiers lolling about on the grass in front of a tent, "that's a right smart horse youall got there."

"Think so?" returned the Yank.

"Yes; what'll you take for him?"

"Oh, I don't know."

"Well, I'll give you $7,000 for him," bantered the Confederate.

"You go to blazes!" indignantly returned the Yank; "I've just paid $10,000 of your money to have him curried."——Lippincotts' Magazine.

WHY HE WAS THERE

Dr. Beadon, a former rector in Eltham, Kent, England, one Sunday preached from the text: "Who art thou?" After reading it he made a pause, for the congregation to reflect upon the words, when a man in military dress, who at the instant was marching very sedately up the middle aisle of the church, supposing it a question addressed to him, replied:

"I am, sir, an officer of the Sixteenth Regiment of Foot, on a recruiting party here, and having brought my wife and family with me, I am come to church because I wished to be acquainted with the neighboring clergy and gentry."

This so deranged the divine and astonished the congregation that the sermon was concluded with considerable difficulty.

TIMELY ADVICE TO TEDDY

The following anecdote is frequently related in Groton, where President Roosevelt prepared for Harvard:

When a boy the president was, like the average American youth, somewhat timid about appearing before an audience to "speak a piece," and always avoided it when possible. However, the time came when the teacher of the school he was attending insisted that he should take part in the closing exercises of the term, and he chose for his recitation that good old standby of the American schoolboy, "Marco Bozzaris," which begins:

At midnight, in his guarded tent,
The Turk lay dreaming of the hour
When Greece, her knees in suppliance bent,
Should tremble at his power.

As his turn came the future president stepped bravely forth and began:

At midnight, in his guarded tent,
The Turk lay dreaming of the hour
When Greece, her knees—

Here his memory failed him, but he promptly commenced where he had left off:

Greece, her knees—"

Still memory failed to respond. Again he started:

Greece, her knees—

It was no use; he had forgotten the remainder of the verse, but strenuously tried again:

Greece, her knees—

Silence.

"Grease her knees once more, Theodore, and see if she won't go," kindly said the teacher.

WOULD KEEP HIM OUT

In a Cleveland hotel the other day a manufacturer told this story of the late Senator Hanna:

"Senator Hanna, like all good managing heads, was continually walking through his mill, examining this, watching that—picking up, in a word, all sorts of good ideas for the betterment of his business.

"One morning, in the machine shop, the senator overheard a little red-headed boy say:

"'I wish I had Hanna's money and he was in the poorhouse.'

"Rather amused, the senator returned to his office and ordered the boy to be brought in to him.

"The little fellow came and stood, a tiny embarrassed figure, before the shrewd and kindly millionaire.

"'So you wish you had my money and I was in the poorhouse, eh?' the senator said. 'Well, suppose your wish came true, what would you do?'

"'Why,' stammered the lad, 'the first thing I'd do would be to get you out, sir.'

"This adroit answer so pleased Senator Hanna that he raised the boy's pay a little."

FITZ LEE IN TEXAS

"Many years ago, when, during a fight with Indians on the Texas frontier, an arrow shot by a redskin pierced the body of Fitzhugh Lee, it was thought by his brother soldiers that the wound was mortal," said an old friend of the lamented Virginian at the New Willard.

"A terrible hemorrhage set up, and Lee's face took on a deathlike pallor, which was taken as a sign of imminent dissolution. Still he preserved consciousness, and in feeble tones made some requests of his friends about sending word to his family.

"While in this desperate situation one of his comrades, in a blundering effort to impart cheer, exhibited his hat to the wounded man, and showed where a bullet had perforated the crown.

"'The Indians came pretty close to getting me, too, Fitz,' he said.

"A sickly smile played over the features of Fitzhugh Lee, and in a whisper he remarked: 'Oh, come off, now, George, about Indians shooting that hole in your hat. You know very well that you went off down yonder by the creek and put that hole in yourself.' One who was present and who was on the verge of tears told me afterward that when he heard this jest from the lips of a man supposed to be dying he immediately took comfort. Any man who could joke at such a time wasn't going to die, and he was right, for in a little while Lee began to improve, and it wasn't long before he was chasing Comanches as merry as ever."

REMAINED IN DOUBT

"Courtesy always pays," said Madame Rejane, the French actress, to an interviewer. "If we are courteous to people, they like us, and they trp to help us. If we are discourteous to them, they hate us and oppose us.

"Two women occupied a compartment in a railway carriage with one man, a stranger. They were extremely rude to this man. In whispers that he could overhear they criticised his costume, his fingers, his manner. He, to be revenged, did a singular thing.

"The blackness of a tunnel enveloped the car, and under cover of the darkness the man kissed the back of his hand loudly and repeatedly. Then, when the train entered the light again, he looked from one woman to the other wire a significant smile.

"They exchanged glances of suspicion.

"'Was it you he kissed?'

"'No, of course not. Was it you?'

"And neither lady would believe the other's denial, and each, in her inmost heart, was offended to think that the man had chosen her companion instead of herself to kiss. The man looked cool and complacent. When, finally, he rose to go, he said, lifting his hat with a jocular air:

"'Have no fear, ladies. I shall never tell which of you it was.'"

FILSTER WANTED SYSTEM

At a certain coal mine down in New Mexico the superintendent was greatly annoyed, from time to time, by employes moving into and oue of the company's houses without due notification of their frequent changes of domicile. It became quite impossible to keep the rent accounts straight on the office books, and finally the superintendent, in his exasperation, resolved upon stringent measures. He therefore posted the following notice, which is given verbatim—orthography, syntax and all:

february the 11th.

Notice to all employes

aney Person or Persons that Mooves into A house Without My Consent shall be Put out Without anney Cemmony.

Dam it I Must and Will have some Sistom. (Signed)

FORGOT THE DEATHS

William R. Merriam was talking in New York about the last census.

"All sorts of odd and interesting things happen," he said.

"One of the collectors told me how he had visited a village, and how, on the completion of his work, a crowd of villagers had gathered around him, very anxious to know how much their population had increased in the last ten years.

"'It has increased,' said the father of a large family, 'about a hundred, I suppose?'

"'No,' said the collector. 'It has only increased six.'

"'Oh dear! There must be some mistake,' said the father, slowly. 'I have increased it more'n six myself.'"

A NEWSPAPER CONTRADICTION

Apropos of newspaper denials and contradictions, Senator Gorman said the other day:

"When an editor has printed an untrue story, he should be willing to retract it. Some editors, though—benighted, stupid fellows—will print no denials unless the untruths they have uttered have been libelous. If they have not been libelous, the editors refuse to make denial. They pretend to to believe that their stories have been true, after all.

"They are as pigheaded as the Arkansas editor who issued an obituary of the leading citizen of his town. When the leading citizen called at the office the next morning and requested that the report of his death be denied, the editor refused to accommodate him.

"'We are never wrong here,' he said in a lordly way. 'We never print denials or retractions in our sheet.'

"But the leading citizen protested and protested, and finally the editor said:

"'No use talking, sir, we can't deny your death. The best we can do for you is to put you in tomorrow's list of births.'"

STANDING ROOM ONLY

Mark Twain, in his lecturing days, reached a small eastern town one afternoon, and went to a barber's to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in the town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes. I'm a stranger here," was the reply.

"We're having a good lecture here tonight, sir," said the barber. "A Mark Twain lecture. Are you going to it?"

"Yes; I think I will," said Mr. Clemens.

"Have you got your tickets yet?" the barber asked.

"No; not yet' said the other.

"Then, sir, you'll have to stand.."

"Dear me!" Mr. Clemens exclaimed. "It seems as if I always did have to stand when I hear that man Twain lecture."

HE WAS TOO BUSY

A year ago a manufacturer hired a boy. For months there was nothing noticeable about the boy except that he never took his eyes off the machine he was running. A few weeks ago the manufacturer looked up from his work to see the boy standing beside his desk.

"What do you want?" he asked.

"Want me pay raised."

"What are you getting?"

"Three dollars a week.'"

"Well, how much do you think you are worth?"

"Four dollars."

"You think so, do you?"

"Yessir; an' I've been thinkin' so fer t'ree weeks, but I've been so blame busy I haven't had time to speak to you about it."

SHE EXERCISED DIPLOMACY

"Papa," the beautiful girl said, brushing the thin locks back from his temples, "I hope you'll never ask me to marry that stupid Mr. Gimpswich that comes here occasionally.'"

"Why, bless my soul, Edith!" he exclaimed, "I've never thought of such a thing. But now, that you've mentioned him, I'd like to know what's the matter with young Gimpswich. What is your objection to him?"

"O, nothing in particular. I just thought—"

"Look here, sis. You'll want to marry some day, and when you do I don't know any young fellow I'd rather have for a son-in-law. He's in excellent circumstances, comes of good family, is perfectly steady, well educated, no bad habits, fine looking chap—just the sort, I should think, a girl would naturally take a fancy to, and you might consider yourself lucky if you got him. What's the reason you can't endure the idea of marrying him?"

"Well, because I can't—not before next June, anyway."

Skipping away from him, she opened the door and whispered to a young man in the hallway:

"Come in, Alfred. It's all right."

The Telegram's Great Popular Voting Contest

In Which the Management will Send Eight Young Ladies to Colorado for a Two-Weeks Vacation, With All Expenses Paid, Started May 16th with 57 Contestants Entered from Towns Throughout Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory

Rock Island System

Trip to be Made Via The Great Rock Island System

Rock Island System

As the contest goes on no doubt the young lady contestants who are so much interested are wondering what the entertainment The Telegram will bestow upon them will consist of, so a portion of the program while in Colorado is herewith given. However, this is a small portion of the program. To give it all at this time would require too much space.

During the party's stay in Colorado, the city of Colorado Springs will be their headquarters and the party will be entertained while there at the Alta Vista Hotel, which is one of the leading hotels of that bautiful city and situated in the prettiest part of town and from its galleries the guests have an excellent view of the mountains and other beautiful scenery in and around Colorado Springs.

One day will be spent in a carriage drive to what is known as the Upper Drive, and in which the following places of interest will be seen: Ute, Iron Spring, William's Canyon, Cave of the Winds, Ute Pass, Rainbow Falls, Grand Cavern and Temple Drive.

Another drive will be made through the Garden of the Gods, Glen Eyrie and the Mesa.

North and South Cheyenne Canyon returning via Bear Creek Canyon and taking in the Seven Falls will be seen while there.

The most beautiful scenery will be seen in the one day's travel to Cripple Creek and return. The trip will be made to Cripple Creek over the Cripple Creek Short Line Railroad, which goes through canyons and up mountains and is one of the most interesting trips one can make in Colorado. The return trip from Cripple Creek to Colorado Springs will be made over the Midland Terminal Railroad.

Broadmoor's Casino vaudeville show will be one of the evening entertainments while in Colorado Springs. The remaining time while in Colorado Springs will be spent in mountain climbing and sight seeing.

Two days will be spent in the city of Denver and the young ladies will be entertained while in that city at the Albany Hotel, one of the leading hotels of that beautiful city. The Albany Hotel is one of the few places in this country where you feel at ease as soon as you enter. The reason is this, you are attended and served by courteous employes and the energies of the management are exerted to make one at home.

Everybody has heard of the famous Georgetown Loop and the young lady winners in this contest will be taken around the Loop, leaving Denver at 8 a. m. and returning at 6 p. m.

One afternoon and evening will be spent at Elitchs Garden, which is one of the most beautiful garden spots in the United States today and which is visited by people from all over the United States and foreign countries every season. It will give one something of an idea as to what they will see at this beautiful place by reading the write-up of the garden aspublished in today's issue of The Telegram in another part of the paper.

Can you afford to miss this excellent opportunity? Yau may never have another chance. If you are one of the winners The Telegram will bestow upon you all of these entertainments and the best part of it all, it will not cost you one penny. The Telegram bearing all expenses.

No paper in the southwest has ever made such an attractive offer as The Telegram does in this grand contest.

These trips are within the reach of all. Any one of these thirty young ladies by a little extra exertion can place her name at the head of the list.

Now is the time to make your votes count. Do not hold them until it is too late. Others may get such a start and ahead of you that it will discourage you. Remember there are only twelve more days remaining in which four votes will be counted for each cent paid on subscription. Send them in now.

QUEEN MARGHERITA ENJOYS AUTOMOBILE

Adopted the Touring Car to Forget Bloody Scene of the King's Assassination

BY LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

(Copyright, 1905, by the Hearst News Service.)

Specila Cable to The Telegram.

LONDON, June 17.—The modern Trafalgar has closed a chapter in the terrible history of the late war. The Russian fleet has been shattered, but not as in the case of the Armada by "the breath of God," but rather by the prowess of man, and now our thoughts are turning towarus the shining prospect of peace, and we ask ourselves: What is the result of this great war? What will its effect be upon the nations of Europe?

It is but a few years back that all eyes were turned upon China. The cupidity of western powers hankered after her great wealth. China was nursed like an invalid, not allowed the power to defend herself. She was falling fast to pieces when Japan took up her cudgels.

Japan foresaw the danger to herself should the integrity of China be meddled with, but when the Russian policy became openly one of aggression, she knew that the hour had come to strike a blow.

So long as the Russians occupied Mukden, danger was at hand. The armies of her great foe were overwhelming, but the fleets yet remained, and there was a chance, no matter how remote, which was yet a danger. At the end of this great war Japan has gained nothing save the freedom of China and the freedom of China and the strength of Japan mean to Europe the best chance of peace.

Another strange chance has befallen an Italian dealer at Reggie Emillo in Italy. He was in the habit of buying delapidated furniture, and one day the old man purchased a picture for four pence. It was in an extremely bad condition, and he hesitated even to pay money for what appeared so poor a bargain.

But there came a day when Professor Balletti, a curiosity hunter, walked into his shop, and offered him the handsome sum of five francs for the picture. The old man was enchanted at the offer and readily accepted it.

The professor, however, had certainly the best of the bargain, for within a few months he refused 1,200 pounds sterling for a genuine Van Dyck, which he had purchased for the sum of four shillings and six pense.

There is no woman who is a more enthusiastic motorist than Queen Margherita of Italy. She has traveled all over her beautiful land in a swift car, and now she has just returned from a tour in the south of France, and is to start again at once for Germany.

A journey to Lisbon is in contemplation, and having placed herself under the care of St. Christopher, she performs these great motor feats in safety. But the reason for the queen's motor fever is not known to most. She has never recovered the awful day when the king's body was laid on the stairs of the palace at Monza, still covered with blood from the assasin's revolver.

The queen finds in motoring the relief she needs. She cannot bear to think, and the swift movement seems to banish consecutive thought.

"There is no doubt," she has often said, "that the motor car is the best cure I have experienced."

No more brilliant procession ever passed the dais of royalty than that organized for the Historic Bazar, which took place in London the other day in aid of Westminister hospital. Within the very precincts of the Abbey, where twenty-eight kings and queens of England lie, beautiful women arranged to wear the dresses of each succeeding period, and so to typify the reigns of the various rulers of our country, in order to help the charity.

And so the fair stallholders were adorned with gold and silver embroideries, glistening with jewels of Plantagenet times, while others were in hoops and farthingale; Stuart ladies, in velvet and lace; Gainesborough ladies, Victorian women, and, at last, the society dames of the reign of Edward VII.

The queen was to have opened the bazar, but had not returned from her foreign tour, but the ladies of the committee, whose business accumen was evidently not wanting, had insured against this contingency, and received 2,000 pounds from the insurance office.

OUR LAY SERMON

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

Such is the language of the ninth Commandment given by Almighty God to Moses for the guidance of the children of Israel, and from them transmitted on down to the children of men of the present day.

The world of today is very much given to the practice of bearing false witness. No community within the confines of this broad state is free from the influence of the bearer of false witness from the fact that there are many eminently respectable people who drift into the habit unconsciously. They would be tremendously indignant and perfectly horrified if they were accused suddenly of bearing false witness against their neighbors, but they are doing it all the same.

Nine-tenths of the gossip that is retailed in every community is but the act of bearing false witness against the neighbors.

Mrs. DeJones drops into your home to make a little social call and soon after her arrival she began to bear false witness against her neighbors. With many protestations of not knowing whether the facts alleged to be true are true or not, she begins the story that she has obtained from some doubtful source concerning the doings or actions of some neighbor. She prefaces the miserable little bit of salacious gossip further with the assertion that "they say."

And "they say" is the biggest and most thoroughly notorious liar that was ever permitted to do business in any civilized community.

"They say" old John Smith is cruel to his family, drinks all the time and his wife may soon be compelled to take in washing. Thus a little story is started on its rounds, which is added to and embellished as it proceeds until it is finally told as a wholesome fact that old John Smith has beat all his children to death, his wife has taken refuge in an adjoining county, while old John has drank all the red liquor that was distilled in the mountains of Kentucky.

When the story reaches old John Smith, who has only been in the habit of taking a wee drop for his stomach's sake, loves his children with a devotion closely approaching the idolatrous and provides his helpmeet with every convenience, he is justly moved to righteous wrath. He starts out with blood in his eye to seek his traducer and is never able to run him down. All he can assertain is "they say" that he has been drinking, has treated his children with cruelty and driven his wife from her rightful place of refuge. "They say" has done work in such instances that can never be successfully over come.

And the good woman visitor continues with her story of the neighborhood gossip. She looks owlish as she prepares to spring the next one, for it pertains to one of her own sex. Mrs. Almira Perturnipseed saw little Mary Peachblossom keeping tryst with a man at the front gate after the sable curtains of the night had been drawn down. It did not make any difference that the man in the case was little Mary's affianced husband, and that both her parents were seated on the front porch. The whisper of that poor little innocent being seen in a compromising position with a man, is retailed added to and embellished until it becomes a public scandal. The girl's character is ruined, she is driven to desperation, perhaps becomes an outcast, and all because "they say" she was guilty of impropriety, and her neighbors were guilty of bearing false witness.

"They say" that the well known banking firm of Catchem & Skinem has been caught in a tight place on account of the failure of one of their eastern connections, is another whisper that is put forth as a bit of live news, and the long line of depositors in front of the bank before banking hours next morning, waiting to draw their money from the vaults, followed by the notice that payment is suspended, is but another tribute to the nefarious practice of bearing false witness. The bank has been literally whispered to death. "They say" has gotten in the usual deadly work.

"I had rather stand before a dynamite gun than a dynamite tongue," says a well known minister of the gospel. "The ravages of the first we can see; the ravages of the second none can estimate. Modern violations of the ninth commandment are perjury, false testimony, exaggeration, slander, calumny, misrepresentation and falsehood. Slander villifies; none can escape its sharp arrows. It is false and malicious report against our neighbor. Misrepresentation takes truth and twists it, making something out of nothing. Falsehood and modern gossip spring from the devil. Their warm words are indicative of the place from which they come. Earth is so full of trouble and life so short we ought to endeavor to brighten and not blacken others; to send forth words of kindness instead of bitter ones."

There are few of us who live up to our duty in this respect. We are too prone to speed the passing scandal and gossip on its way of ruin and destruction. And many of us do this unthoughtedly. We think that the confidences we are imparting to our bosom friend will go no further. We do not stop to figure that our friend has other bosom friends, and that this condition continues on in an endless chain until it reaches the limits of the whole known world.

Some one has said that are three methods of rapidly disseminating news.

Telegraph, telephone and tell a woman.

That is a pretty hard dig at the gentler sex, and what makes it peculiarly exasperating is that there is so much truth in it. The women do much to spread the dictums and assertions of "they say" and there are many men who are not one whit behind them.

As disseminators of these things there are both men and women in all communities that rival a popular newspaper. Tell them something with an injunction to secrecy, and in a few short hours the story will get back to you with the same admonition you gave when you imparted it.

In a small town out west a newspaper man obtained telegraphic advice upon one occasion that a certain measure in which he was interested had come to a successful fruition, and in the height of his gladness, he told the story to a mutal friend with the customary admonitions as to secrecy. Less than an hour after he had occasion to go down the street and was stopped and congratulated on every corner by friends who were glad he had won his point. The friend he told the story to had gone up one side of the street and down the other, telling the story indiscriminately to people who had not one particle of interest in it.

That man was worse than "tell a woman." The only justification of his action lay in the fact that he was half woman—on his mother's side.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

And that commandment should also include provisions against the violation of the confidence of your neighbor. Nine times out of ten when you violate this confidence you are not only guilty of falsehood, but you are in reality bearing false witness against your neighbor.

There should be a summary quietus placed upon the gossiper, the scandal monger and the whisperer away of reputations that abound in every community. These people are doing a fear-faced by the harm that comes from against thy neighbor."

BUILD THE INTERURBAN

It has been suggested that the sum of $15,000 asked by the promoters of the proposed interurban line between this city and Mineral Wells, is too much money to be expected from Fort Worth.

The Telegram has understood that the meeting held in this city some time ago by those who were interested in the matter agreed that the bonus should be right of way and $1,000 per mile. If this is true, then if as much as fifteen miles of the proposed line come within Tarrant county, it is clearly Fort Worth's duty to see that the promised $1,000 per mile is made good.

It may be possible to obtain a portion of this $15,000 from country property owners whose property will be enhanced in value by the building of the line, but Fort Worth cannot afford to stand back on a proposition of that kind.

What is a bagatelle of $15,000 to the prosperous and growing city of Fort Worth, when the benefits to accrue are so patent?

It has been supposed that the proposed line was to be built in answer to the popular clamor. That the people of the intervening country were fairly falling over themselves in an effort to promote the enterprise. It is a little bit singular that doubt should be expressed at this early stage of the game to carry out the promises that have already been made.

It is not the Fort Worth way to either crawfish or lie down on any kind of a proposition.

Fort Worth is the one Texas city that does things.

IRRIGATION IN THE WEST

There are a number of new irrigation plants being installed and planned in various portions of the west, and the great work that is to be done by the federal government above El Paso, by which millions of acres are eventually to be reclaimed, will give a wonderful impetus to this kind of work by individuals throughout the arid country.

There is a great deal of wonderfully fertile land in West Texas that can be readily converted into the finest farming land in the world through some system of impounding the storm waters and holding them in reserve until such time as they are needed for the growing crops. There are many large streams that can be successfully dammed out in that section, and many points where great reservoirs can be established at moderate cost to the property owners.

Nature does not deal that section a fair hand, but the deficiencies of nature can be readily remedied through concerted and intelligent action on the part of the people.

When the people of West Texas awaken to the real possibilities of the situation there is going to be some wonderful developments in that section and the people of West Texas are gradually learning.

The next five years will witness a great transformation in that section.

The old Confederates have finished their annual reunion, and it is sad to think it will be the last for many of the old heroes. Many there will be who will not respond to the next annual roll call.

If the members of the state legislature are not willing to give the state the benefit of a little of their precious time in order to correct some of their manifest errors, then there is nothing to do but accept the legislative dictum and permit the errors to remain uncorrected.

These June days are warm and sweltering, but the Texas farmer finds them just about the proper caper when it comes to destroying the weeds and grass that have been making his existence burdensome.

Dallas is about to capture the next state encampment of the soldier boys, which will be pulled off the latter part of August. Austin has not been able to raise the requisite bonus.

Fort Worth has an increased water supply, and the Fort Worth water supply is the envy of our neighbors for miles and miles around.

Fort Worth fans would be pleased to see the local ball team move up at least a peg or two.

BEEF TRUST CLIMAX

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The president has been in consultation with Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, former attorney general, in regard to the beef trust investigation. Senator Knox was sent for, it is understood, to assist in bringing about some sort of a conclusion as to the course to be pursued by the government in its action against the packers. The district attorney of Chicago, Mr. Morrison, and Mr. Pagin, the indictment expert, had been in daily consultation with Attorney General Moody for two weeks, and nothing definite seemed in sight. Mr. Knox, true to his record, left no uncertainty in the president's mind in the course he recommended. The president became impatent at the delay, and called in Mr. Knox for the express purpose of "getting action" quick. This was quickly brought about, as seen in the developments of yesterday.

Naturally, the greatest secrecy has been thrown about the action of the president in this latest development. The delicacy of the situation indicated is contributed to by some susidiary considerations having no hearing on the beef trust case.

United States District Attorney Morrison of Chicago has left for that city, after spending more than two weeks in this city in almost daily consultation with Attorney General Moody. Positive developments in the beef trust case are expected upon his arrival in Chicago. The fact that he was accompanied to that city by Mr. Pagin, the special attorney for the department, who is skilled in the drawing of indictments, and has done such service for the government in connection with the land fraud and other important cases in the west, has led to the conclusion that the department of justice has at last decided to act, and indictments will be forthcoming soon after the arrival of the pair of legal lights in the Windy City. It has been known here for some days that the grand jury there has been waiting to adjourn, and that its disposition was entirely dependent upon the recommendations of the attorney general.

CONCHO COUNTRY SHEEP

S. M. Oglesby of San Angelo, a prominent sheepman of that section, is running 7,500 head of sheep in Iron county. "Speaking of lambs," said Mr. Oglesby, "I don't think I ever saw a better crop than we have had this spring. I have 2,100 lambs, after losing quite a few, and have less than that number of ewes. Besides the large per cent of lambs, they are of excellent quality, as the ewes have had good grass all spring. They are large and fat and will beat anything I ever saw for their age. But when it comes to the number of sheep in that country as compared with other years, I think that it is safe to say there are fewer. This is due to the short lamb crops we had the past two years, and the heavy runs of sheep during that same period. At the present time the bulk of the mution sheep have been sold there for this season.

"San Angelo is the great wool center of that district, and it is there that we do all our selling. This spring we have had good prices, and the sheepmen have made good money on the wool alone. I have not sold mine yet, and am holding on for 25c, which I think I will get. I have refused an offer of 23c, and with my sheep averaging close to ten pounds per head, that will make a nice sum of money on the flock. I might just state, however, that I did not clip in the fall as is customary there. But there are no sheepmen in all that country but what have received over $2 per head for the wool on their sheep during the past year."

OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING

W. P. Anderson, special live stock agent Pecos Valley lines of the Santa Fe system, en route from Guthrie, stopped over at Bliss, the headquarters of the "101" ranch. He says that he met acquaintances from Kansas, Oklahoma and the Panhandle of Texas, and that the composite conclusion derived from their stories fresh from the field and the pasture was that during June thus far the grass was curing on the plains, is in ideal shape in the long grass pastures, and that while wheat is spotted or too "think and thin" stooling, that the crop will average up with that of last year, while the corn crop, with greater acreage, has shown wonderful promise during the past two weeks. "Harvesting," said Mr. Anderson, "has commenced in Oklahoma, and the most of the corn will be laid by this week. The general consensus of opinion was to the effect that both Kansas and Oklahoma farmers should successfully cope with an excess of weeds this season."

RESTOCKING ARIZONA RANGE

Burro creek in Mohave county, Arizona, which was well stripped of cattle during the drouth of five years ago, has remained minus cattle enough to eat its sparse range grass until very lately, when a large number have been driven in from other parts, where water was less abundant. The thirty miles of the Burro creek range is now one solid mass of green grass, and to say that it is up to the bridle-bits is a mild expression for the term. Burro creek has always furnished an abundance of water for stock, even in a very dry season, but at this time the creek is running bank-full, with no signs of but little limitation to the quantity until late in the summer.

GLEANINGS FROM EXCHANGES

Ex-Governor Bob Taylor will try to fiddle his way into the senate from Tennessee. Taylor made good when he undertook to fiddle his way into the governor's office—and now he is en route to Washington over the fiddle strings.—Sherman Register.

Bob Taylor is going to find it a very difficult matter to break into the United States senate. His fight against the virile and gifted Carmack appears a very hopeless undertaking.

Legislators do not seem to be clamoring for the chance to serve their state without good hard dollars at that proposed extra session. If there were five round dollars a day and mileage attached would it be different, do you think? Only one guess allowed.—San Antonio Gazette.

Quite different. The average legislator gave evidence of the fact that he was out for the stuff when he forced the calling of an extra session.

Mr. Justice Brewer declared at Vassar that at some future time a woman may occupy the presidential chair; the learned justice has profited by the example of Grover Cleveland's sortie against the women's clubs.—Houston Chronicle.

Justice Brewer hails from Bleeding Kansas, the state that has produced Mary Ellen Lease, Carry Nation and other female celebrities. It is but natural under the circumstances that he should show some evidences of contamination.

While a man down in Georgia was praying for a blessing from the Lord, his wife slipped out the back way and ran off with another man. This is the latest instance on record of a direct answer to prayer.—Yoakum Times.

Perhaps the afflicted husband does not receive it that way. It was a good riddence, but it is possible he may indulge in the belief that it was a piece of the devil's own work.

A Texas man killed a wild bear with a club in a hand-to-hand encounter. This puts him in line for some good federal appointment at the hands of the president.—Houston Post.

Not necessarily; but it is probable the next time the president goes bear hunting that Texan will be invited as an accomplice. The president will desire to learn how the trick is done.

The declaration of the General Passenger Agents of Texas railroads that they will not give rates to cities that do not protect them from the scalper, is a matter for the serious consideration of all places that have an ambition to be considered convention centers.—San Antonio Express.

And it is nothing but right that Texas cities so favored by the railways should exercise the proper steps for protecting all convention rates. The railroads should not be compelled to suffer as a result of their own generosity.

Already there is a break in the line-up for a special session of the legislature without pay to correct some of the errors made in the closing days of the last legislature. It is pretty hot to go to Austin and that walk up to the capitol is excessively warm and enervating.—Denison Herald.

These warm June days are so enervating that they appear to be wilting all the patriotism out of Texas legislators. They are not unduly anxious to give anything to the people that involves a little personal sacrifice. All are willing to go for the usual mileage and per diem, however.

A governor like Jeff Davis of Arkansas would be a good investment for Texas, at least, until we could get taxation equalized. In Arkansas corporations are assessed and made to pay taxes in the same proportion as all other property is taxed. It is very different here in Texas, and for this one reason we need a governor like Jeff Davis.—Tyler Courier.

Jeff Davis of Arkansas may measure up to the Tyler standard as a governor, but the balance of the state will insist on something infinitely better. There is plenty of gubernatorial material in Texas of a much higher standard.

Vice president Fickinger of the Frisco says the railroads will all be motor lines, doing away with the locomotive and it will not be long until this is accomplished.—Sherman Democrat.

The railways of Texas are going to take hold of gasoline motor cars for passenger service to meet interurban competition. The day is not far distant when the passenger traffic in this state is going to be almost completely revolutionized.

A WORD FROM JOSH WISE

Whut looks like a long chance t' ev'ry-body else may look like a sure thing t' th' feller th't took it.

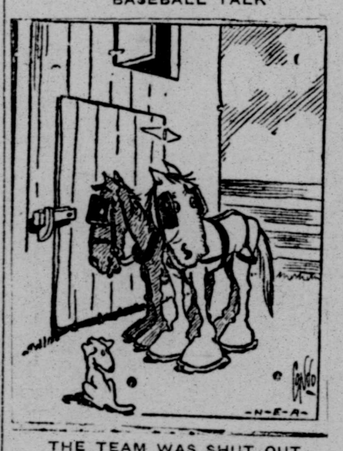
A TRYING POSITION

The warden of the Leavenworth prison says he will let Bigelow, ex-banker and embezzler of Milwaukee, keep the books. Judging from Mr. Bigelow's past record, he'll keep 'em if he gets his hands on 'em.

BASEBALL TALK



THE TEAM WAS SHUT OUT

"Too bad General Linevitch hasn't had an opportunity to make a reputation."

"Why, he has the best in the world. He can go home and tell what he would have done if the war hadn't ended."

Of course, if Jimmy Hyde is looking for a job, there's Norway.

Barney Oldfield has had another narrow escape from death. Naturally a score of innocent bystanders had one, too.

"Say, old man, tell me why on earth you keep that iron dog in your front yard."

"Sh—don't say a word. One of my neighbors has an iron deer in his yard and I thought maybe my dog would scare it away."

"Do you know, I feel sorry for Willie Ziegler?"

"Who's he?"

"The little boy who says he's going to school till he's 21, and then try to discover the north pole."

"Why sorry for him?"

"Because the poor little chap can't make up his mind to run away from home and fight Indians, or to be a railroad brakeman."

THE WORN WEDDING RING

Your wedding ring wears thin, dear wife!
—ah, summers not a few,
Since I put it on your finger first, have passed o'er me and you!
And, love, what changes we have seen
—what cares and pleasures, too—
Since you became my own dear wife,
when this old ring was new!

O, blessings on that happy day—the happiest of my life—
When—thanks to God—your low, sweet
"Yes" made you my loving wife!
Your heart will say the same, I know—that day's as dear to you,
That day that made me yours, dear wife,
when this old ring was new.

How well do I remember now, your young, sweet face that day!
How fair you were, how dear you were,
my tongue could hardly say—
Nor how I doated on you—ah, how proud
I was of you!
But did I love you more than now, when this old ring was new?

The past is dear—its sweetness still our memories treasure yet;
The griefs we've borne, together borne,
we would not now forget;
Whatever, wife, the future brings, heart unto heart is true,
We'll share as we have shared all else
since this old ring was new.

And if God spares us 'mongst our sons and daughters to grow old,
We know His goodness will not let your heart or mine grow cold;
Your aged eyes will see in mine all they've still shown to you,
And mine in yours all they have seen,
since this old ring was new.

And, O, when Death shall come at last to bid me to my rest,
May I die looking in those eyes and resting on that breast!
O, may my parting gaze be blessed with the dear sight of you—
Of those fond eyes—fond as they were when this old ring was new!

—W. C. BENNETT.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR

Popularity never begins at home.

Some people are so lucky they don't die even if they have no insurance.

Horse racing is a very enjoyable sport for everybody except the horses, the jockeys and the bettors.

What girls like about the schools they go to is all the things they can study without having to learn anything.

It is pretty hard for a man to figure out the difference between a woman's spring hat and Fourth of July fireworks.

A man of fifty thinks he can fascinate a girl of twenty and she makes him think it.

There is an awful good time to be had in letting other people have the ambitions.

It takes a lot of money not to care whether people think you have it or not.

A girl is never too young not to let some boy she is interested in imagine it is another fellow.

When a woman doesn't have to get a new cook more than once a week she begins to think she is becoming a successful housekeeper.—New York Press.

QUAKER REFLECTIONS

Egotism is a stranger to discontent.

Stupid are they who stoop to folly.

Even the left handed man may be all right.

A blush don't always indicate the pink of propriety.

Even the black sheep may masquerade as a spring lamb.

The mantle of charity is soon worn threadbare by a hypocrite.

Good habits must be nurtured under glass, but bad ones grow wild.

One man's point of view is as good as another's until you sit on it.

It is much easier to profit by the mistakes of others than by our own.

The man who knows his own weakness aalso realizes his own strength.

The avaricious man squeezes his money so tightly that it can't talk.

Nell—"She says mean things." Belle—"I know, but she doesn't always mean things."

When a marrie woman looks back on the fellow she was in love with at 16 she is glad she didn't marry him.—Philadelphia Record.

IT IS THE MAN THAT COUNTS

The newspapers of the country are devoting columns of space to a discussion of Admiral Togo's wonderful victory. The burden of it all is that is the man that counts, and this is proclaimed to the world with an enthusiasm which indicates a belief on the part of each writer that he has discovered a brand new truth; one that will set the whole world agog when it becomes known.

But why all this hubbub? Of course, it is the man that counts. This is a world-old truth.

It is always the man that counts. He has counted since the dawn of reason. He has counted in war and in peace. He has counted in all of the crises of history, and he has counted in all of the long stretches of every-day life when there was lacking the inspiration of the battle song and the enthusiasm that is due to heroic leadership.

Battleships alone cannot bring victory; nor can the great death-dealing guns with all of their terrible power. It is the man on the battleship, the man behind the gun, that wins the day. It is the man with a trained mind, a sound body and a courageous heart that conquers.

And it is this kind of a man that is victor in the battles of peace as well as those of war. It is this kind of a man that never falters, that never gives up. He fights on faithfully and persistently for the good of himself and of his fellows. He keeps his eyes to the front and pushes on towards the goal that he sees in the distance.

Machines of wondrous power and inventions of marevious intricacy have their uses, but these are always dependent upon the man.

The forces of nature are harnessed and made to render service to society, but it is the man that makes these things possible.

A MOTHER'S PRIDE IN HER BOY

Theodore Perry Shonts, the new head of the Panama commission, who will have immediate direction of the greatest engineering enterprise the world has ever known, has a good old mother who takes less pride in his present success than in the fine qualities that marked him when he was all her own boy.

"Theds was a good boy—when he was young," said Mrs. Shonts with a deprecatory shake of her head. "He never went out nights then or went chasing away to foreign parts. I don't know where he got those ideas in his head. We didn't teach them to him. Theds was a fine boy—once."

Instead of being the proudest mother in the land at the honor that has been conferred upon her son, the good old woman at the announcement wept bitter tears. Her once fine boy to come down to this—to be food for mosquitoes and prey to yellow fever!

She tells how her Theds went to teaching school at 16, how he got along fine, as he always did with anything he undertook, how they sacrificed to send him to college, where he was the only one in all his class that didn't drink or smoke, and how proud they were of him when he came home and read his Hebrew testament to them. She sighs at the thought that with all that work to do in Panama he will have no time to read his testament any more.

And she remembers well that as a boy he "was a beautiful penman and would spend hours practicing his Ds and Ts. He wrote with a great flourish. I wish that he could write that well now."

And so, while Theodore P. Shonts is rising rapidly in the regard of the big world, which sees only the surface of things, his honors and fame do not appeal to the deeper mind of the loving old mother who looks into the heart of things.

We are apt to think that the mother, living a humble, closely circumscribed life, naturally takes a narrow view. Boys are born to be more than their mothers' idol, perhaps.

But is hers the narrow view?

High salary and glory come to Shonts with his new position—tinsels that glisten in the world's eyes.

But, after all, his true greatness lies in the true gold of the qualities that the old mother prizes.

THE WAY TO SUCCESS

"If you never do more than you are paid for, you will never get paid for more than you do."

A good motto, that! It is the motto which the girls of a trade traning school in Boston have adopted as the principle which shall guide them in their work.

It might well be the motto of every man and woman who toils. And who of us do not? Who is there to whom it does not apply?

These young girls who are preparing themselves for a life of the highest social service—that of real usefulness in the work of the world—have hit upon the principle of true success. In fact they have hit upon the only principle which can assure success that is worthy of the name. It is a safe guide—the old safe guide—for working girls and for working boys; for working men and for working women.

It is a motto which may be expanded into a philosophy of life.

It stands for honesty, for fidelity and for efficiency. It stands for purpose, for courage and for zeal. It recognizes the value of sincerity, of integrity, of worth. It places manhood ond womanhood above everything else. It marks the way of success.

The man who gives less than he receives will be helf behind in the race of life. It is the fit who survive.

The real failures are the men and women who have deceived themselves into thinking that they can succeed without being worthy of success. They give little and expect much. They are doomed to disappointment. They may accumulate money, but their lives are destitute of those achievements which mean success. They may wield power over their fellowmen, but their own souls are dwarfed by their thoughs and deeds.

The success worth struggling for is not to be attained in that way.

These Boston girls have found the key which opens the door of true success.

It is the key of merit. The servant must be worthy of his hire.

SHOWS WEDDING

A Baltimore clergyman declines to take part in rehearsal of the wedding ceremony, "because," he says, "church weddings are becoming more and more occasions for dramatic effect and dress display.' '

If more ministers were to take this sensible view and bold stand, the modern wedding might become less a theatrical and more a sacred affair, less a society show and more a ceremony of wholesome sentiment.

With the benign atmosphere and influences surrounding the society wedding removed it might cease to be so prolific a feeder of the divorce courts and become the secure basis of rational and happy domestic life.

In the good old days, when marriage was for life and not for a social splurge, it was made a great event indeed, but not as it is now. The bride had for months, sometimes for years, been busy with her sewing, quilting, crocheting, into every seam and patch and stitch of which she had threaded her love and hope and trust. Her wedding meant much indeed to her, but the importance was not all in the mere ceremony. The main thing was preparation to do her full part toward making the home a comfortable and happy one in which peace and prosperity loved to abide.

The society bride of today is busy too for weeks before her wedding. Between "shower parties" she finds time to be measured for her gowns and fitted into them very much as a bronze statue cast into the proper shape, a thin crust, is filled with base metal. It is an "awful bore," but can't be avoided. She owes it to the "dear boy" to look her very best at the ceremony. And that in many cases is about all she imagines she does owe him and all he ever gets. The divorce court records clearly show that many a blind fellow has taken a leading part in matrimonial theatricals to find out afterward that he has married one of the finest wedding gowns that money ever bought, but that it has very poor stuff inside it.

We can't all be rich and have swell weddings, and it is a good thing we can't. If we could and did, this would be a dull world. If there were none poor, none struggling, none aspiring, mankind would forget how to laugh and how to love.

Love and marriage means far more to those in moderate circumstances than to the case-taking wealthy; it means a wedding of sympathies in a common cause of anxiety, of hope, of struggle, of disappointment, of success. It means a deep experience in all the profound, soul-nourishing emotions to many of which the hearts of the society butterflies are closed. For when struggles cease, sympathies and aspirations cease also and the soul stagnates.

The divorce records tell the story pretty clearly. Proportionately more marriages are found unhappy among the very rich than among the poor and middle classe combined.

TOMORROW MORNING Burton-Peels STORE WILL START A

Mid-Summer Carnival Sale!

Ten Days of Selling Such as Fort Worth Never Saw

Bold type symbolize the greatest bargain event. It's a considerable story; it's a big undertaking, a weighty matter, this task of riddance of outgoing fabrics, but here are the points of greatest interest to you, and which have a world of meaning for the buying public for there's the telling of half price and unheard-of reductions. The present season for washable and light fabrics will soon be termed "the outgoing season." Overstocks and understocks, too much of this, too little of that, stares us in the face, and right now, tomorrow, while the season is at its heighth, while your need is greatest, we shall begin a stock clearance, a "Mid-Summer Carnival," that will give you every penny of profit, and in many cases lop off half of actual cost. This great sale gives you choice from every department of summer fabrics, odd lots, etc., at prices away below those we paid; at half in many cases, white goods, lawns, batiste, ginghams, including all wash linen and cotton fabrics, then, too, many staple towels, table damask, etc., are included in this big underprice sale.

Mid-Summer Carnival Starts Tomorrow and Continues Ten Days!

"READ US ARIGHT"—We do not wish to convey an idea that everything in this great store will be sacrificed during this Midsummer Carnival Sale. The items we print on these four pages will keep us busy with added help. But there will be thousands of other articles slaughtered. As an illustration—you may see on the silk counter $1.00 Silks marked to sell at 39c. Beside it you may find a $1.50 Silk selling at $1.50. But to convince you that this is a Midsummer Carnival—a sale to rid us of all summer goods, unmindful of cost—that's the intention. MID-SUMMER CARNIVAL
Ten Days Sale
STARTS TOMORROW!
NOTE—STORE OPENS 9 A. M.

A TEN-DAY MID-SUMMER CARNIVAL SALE IN THE BIG READY-TO-WEAR ROOM

We are determined that this "Carnival" Sale shall establish a new mid-summer selling record. To that end prices on ready-to-wear are forced to the very lowest point. Economy will hold court at this store. It's adherants are assured of a right royal reception and of savings of the most substantial and satisfactory sort. From day to day public interest will intensify, because each department will vie with the other in efforts to excel in bargain giving. The benefit is all yours. You will note that special lots are favored in this sale. This is done to facilitate matters and make it easy for you to select, and quick for our salespeople to wait upon the crowds that are sure to attend these sales.

This Mid-Summer Carnival Sale Reduces Women's Silk and Woolen Tailor-Made Suits to Just Half Their Former Price

150 Ladies' Silk and Woolen Tailored Suits and Dresses represent the leaving of this season's vast purchase. Elegance of materials and elegance of style characterize all the remainder of these ready-to-wear garments in stock. Prices from the start of the season were exceedingly low and fair, and now that the time for clearance has arrived, the price is dropped to HALF REGULAR PRICE. This brings them down to much under makers' first cost. All suits on sale will remain marked with the original tickets. Cut the price in two and you will have the present price.

A SWORD MISLAID

"My very words, sire!" cried Talleyrand, excitedly.

"But the opposition itself, what real assistance would they be to us when the time comes?" demanded the emperor.

"They have no present hope of office," I replied; "they will harass and hamper the government at every step. What greater service could they render?"

Napoleon was, I think, well pleased, but he coldly turned to Talleyrand. "That is not your opinion, monseigneur?"

"But it is, sire," returned the minister, sharply. "It is true that I believe the opposition only want places and pensions to become as loyal subjects as the ministers, but the government is tenacious and powerful, and in default of realizing their hopes the opposition can be reckoned as our friends."

"Good!" said the emperor, rubbing his palms together with a gesture of much satisfaction. "Good! Then our money is not all wasted."

"We shall get it back again with interest," murmured Talleyrand. "England is a rich land, sire; only fools and men of genius do not thrive there."

"A nation of shopkeepers," said Napoleon, "but before long we shall change all that. What think you, monseigneur?"

"I think, sire," I answered gravely, "that you have set yourself a task worthy of your genius."

"But your opinion, count, of the issue?" cried the emperor, tartly, rising as he spoke.

I bowed low and reverently, a veritable courtier, smiling in order to repress a dangerous desire to sneer. "I think, sire, that your ministers will soon be set a task still more difficult."

"And that?" with undisguised impatience.

I bowed again. "To devise a fitting title, sire, wherewith to name the master of the universe. 'Emperor' will one day grow too small and inexpressive."

Napoleon was vain, vain. I saw in his mein then—written on his trembling lips, which he bit to control, painted in his eyes which he averted to avoid my glance—vanity of vanities, and in my heart I mocked him for the weakness I had at length discovered in a man otherwise of iron. He turned from me abruptly, discourteously, and strode from the room, as if in great displeasure at the flattery; but I did not need Talleyrand's half-envious smile to be assured that none the less I had struck home and stood in the emperor's highest favor. I gained sweet hope that moment that I was safe and sure to be in England soon.

CHAPTER XIII.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Once alone, I settled myself on my couch for an hour or two of quiet rest before the journey, but I was not allowed to remain undisturbed for long.

First came a message from the empress, expressing her majesty's deep regret that she was unable to accompany my sister to Boulogne that evening, but faithfully promising to set out the following morning and to be present at the nuptials. To this I answered in fitting terms, expressing my deep appreciation of her majesty's complaisant kindness.

Then came the tailor who had been commissioned to make Clarisse a suit of boy's clothes. He was a perfect cormorant, and having scented an intrigue made exorbitant demands, which I was compelled, having no choice left, to satisfy.

Thirdly came a veiled woman, who refused to give her name to my servants, but implored a private interview.

I was too nervous by this, though, to admit her, fearing she might be some emissaire of the man whose name I had assumed; and knowing that to be too great a danger to hazard, I pleaded weakness from my wound, and made an appointment for the morrow. She was importunate for long, but finally departed in tears, the secretary informed me.

There is no peace vouchsafed the wicked. I had barely reposed myself the fourth time when the Duc d'Otranto was announced. I scarcely dared refuse so eminent a scoundrel audience, so he entered presently, bearing under his arm a long mahogany case, richly inlaid with mother-of-pearl and gold.

"Ah, my dear prince," he cried, "how grieved I am to find you indisposed! Ever since your arrival I have been dying to have a word with you, but state business has always interposed. And but an hour ago I heard that you are to set out with the emperor this evening for Boulogne. That must be my excuse for introduding on your leisure hour."

"You of all men need no excuse, my dear duke," I murmured civilly. "I pray you be seated."

THE LITTLE MAN STARTED PERCEPTIBLY AND GLARED AT ME WITH FIERCE INTENTNESS.

He nodded, put the case he carried on his knees, then begging me to lie down again, drew his chair to my bedside.

"I have presumed to bring with me a little offering," he said, smiling, and opening the case drew forth a shining sword.

I sprang up, unable to repress a cry of admiration, for the weapon was fit for a king to wear. It was straight and long, clip-hilted and formed of plain Damascus steel, traced like a Malay dagger from blade to hilt with waving gold. The hilt was transversed in the manner of Turkish weapons, and ornamented with a crescent elegantly arabesqued and crusted with splendid emeralds. The scabbard was of pure silver, engraved with such richness of design and execution as to defy description.

"This for me?" I muttered, wondering as I spoke what could be the reason of a gift so princely.

"If you will honor me so far as to accept it," returned Fouche. "The blade has a history; it is old and has been worn by sultans if the pasha of Masoulk may be believed. It was the price of the Marechal Ney's friendship and the reason that the pasha himself still lives after his treachery at Alexander. I won it at faro from Chevalier Fenelon, to whom Ney bartered it."

I handled the sword with the keenest pleasure, more in love with it each instant and longing to test its properties.

"It has a motto," I observed—"'Inshalla Shafa.' Can you translate it, duke?"

"A bad motto, but who shall say inappropriate for a sword," smiled Fouche. "It means, 'In the name of God, spare!'"

I shuddered a little, for the duke's voice held a spice of blasphemous mockery, and a sneer underlay his words. I placed the sword beside me on the bed. "I shall always treasure it in memory of the giver," I said, more coldly than was wise I think.

But Fouche appeared not to notice. "Keep it rather as a memento of my friendship, prince," he said earnestly.

I smiled. "But yesterday I was forgotten, or unknown to you," I retorted.

"Neither unknown nor forgotten," he protested.

I pointed to the sword. "But this has a meaning, duke?"

"Assuredly; I offer you with that my services, my friendship; I beg your kindly offices in return. It seems to me that we should do well to be friends, prince."

"Friends," I repeated reflectively.

"And why not, monseigneur? I assure you that my services will be of use to you. I say it advisedly. I have some power in France, monseigneur; there is nothing may transpire from one end of this country to another without my cognizance. Have you a friend to advance?—through me you may most easily and without risk or trouble advance him. Have you an enemy to ruin?—a word and any punishment you devise may be inflicted, and all secretly as the grave, prince."

"But in return for these favors?" I suggested, smiling.

Fouche shrugged his shoulders and spread out his hands. "Your co-operation, monseigneur," he answered dryly.

"In what?"

He glanced at me craftily with his great goggle eyes.

"Only in those things wherein friends should co-operate," he murmured softly.

"For instance, duke?"

"Personal aggrandisement, advancement, power, amustment."

"And politics?" I suggested with a subtle smile.

Fouche laughed. "That is implied, monseigneur. The man of intellect or of ambition nowadays may, through politics alone, obtain either amusement, power, riches or aggrandisement."

"So it seems in France," I said musingly.

"That is the opinion of many, monseigneur," said Fouche. "For my part it is my firm belief that no man, however highly placed, can proceed always without that help which may be alone rendered by disinterested friends. It is, moreover, true that to acquire such friendship it is necessary to make some sacrifices."

"You would have me then believe that you are more or less disinterested, duke?" I inquired with quiet cynicism.

"I have revealed to you my heart," returned Fouche, speaking with a certain air of reserve which quickened my curiosity.

The man's repute belied his words and I more than ever asked myself the question—Why his untimely visit? Why his extravagant gift to me? I toyed with the hilt of the sword and answered slowly by asking a question, "What is it you require me to do for you monseigneur?"

Fouche started back and cried reproachfully, "Why nothing, prince, nothing, nothing."

I felt sure then that he required a great deal, but I took care to appear surprised and also a little confused. "Forgive me should I have misjudged you," I muttered.

"You have misjudged me," he replied with dignity. "I have not only nothing to gain from you, now at least, but I have come to visit you tonight in order to render you a service."

"Ah," said I, "a service, duke."

He took from his pocket a paper, which he unfolded and spread upon his knee, watching me intently the while.

"This is a letter from Louis Capet, the Bourbon, our exiled king," he whispered mysteriously.

"And then?" I demanded.

"Ah, and then prince! If this letter could find its way to Napoleon's hands your life would be worth but little, mon ami. An hour's purchase, perhaps, no more."

It is not a matter of surprise that his words made me both alarmed and curious I could not doubt that the real D'Arras was in communication with the Bourbon prince; it seemed to me not improbable that Fouche might be a traitor to Napoleon—at least so far as treasonable correspondence went. But it was impossible that Louis could know that I was posing as D'Arras, or even suspect that the real D'Arras was in France at this time. An instant's reflection informed me that this letter, whatever it contained, was either a forgery or that its contents were exaggerated and referred only to the past.

I smiled tranquilly. "That would be a sad happening, duke, but what does Louis say of me?"

"This letter is addressed to Talleyrand," said Fouche, not heeding my question.

"Then how came it to your hands?" I inquired.

He frowned and whispered, "What matters that? what matters that? How often must I tell Louis that Talleyrand is not to be trusted? Louis' time is not yet, not yet; a little while, a little while, and who knows? Bah! Talleyrand de Perigord is an aristocrat, it is true, but he is a rascal without heart. He now takes straightway all his correspondence to Napoleon, for the emperor is firm on his feet. But let him once totter and then we should see no one more loyal to the exiled king, no voice more mighty in sounding his recall."

"I do not doubt you," I answered, dryly, "but how does that concern this letter?"

"In a measure it concerns that, and you, and all of us, mon prince. It is to warn you I am come, to implore you to join with me in warning Louis that Talleyrand is not to be depended on. Why, even the happening of this day should have proclaimed that fact to you. How you slipped from the net spread for your fall I can even yet scarce conceive. I knew of it but could not, dared not, warn you. Providence alone saved you. It was magnificent."

WHEN HE SAW ME HE UTTERED A CRY.

His intimate knowledge of events and cool assumption that I must be a treator to Napoleon staggered me. Feeling half dazed I murmured—

"You mistake, monsieur; the letter! the letter!" and held out my hand.

He looked at me keenly, his glance wolfish but illegible. "The letter," he said, "is sent to Talleyrand. My spies just in time arrested the courier, who now is lodged in my own house, where he awaits to bear Louis a reply—a reply which we shall write together if it please you, prince."

I felt as though in a dream, embarrassed and beset. Had I been the real O'Arras I would have known my course. As it was I was overcome with doubt. The man appeared to be in deepest earnest. It seemed that a chance lay open for me to serve my country through the treachery of France's ministers, and yet I shrank from the task. One trap had been set for me, why not two? And yet in this instance I did not suspect a trap. It flashed upon me, however, that the game was not worth the candle, that I had already done enough, that it would be foolish to hazard too much. Fortune had already been overkind, it would be unwise to strain the favor of the fickle goddess; moreover, I had yet to get out of France.

Slowly I sat up on the bed and allowed my feet to drop to the floor.

"You suggest, then, sending a letter to Louis without Napoleon's knowledge?" I demanded.

"Surely, prince, you are dreaming," muttered Fouche.

"Ah, it is you, then, who have put me to sleep in very surprise!" I cried satirically.

He started back in apparent alarm.

"What mean you, monseigneur?" he demanded in a low, grim voice.

"I mean," I retorted sharply, "that it is not good to serve at the same time two masters, monsieur. It seems to me that we each have changed our coats, and more than once, perhaps, but we both now wear the livery of the Corsican. For my part" (and I pointed to the ruffles on my sleeves) "I like this uniform amazingly, it suits me passing well; besides, I am tired of change. In fact, monsieur, I am convinced that further change is impossible a decade at least."

Fouche was on his feet by this, eying me with a wild and angry gaze. "But," he stammered, "this letter, monseigneur, it is your death warrant."

"I do not think so," I replied indifferently. "The Corsican is no fool and I am sure he trusts me."

"There are names here," stuttered Fouche, tapping the paper excitedly; "have you heard of Savrache, monsieur?"

"Nor do I wish to," I retorted coldly.

"La Croix, monseigneur?"

"Ha, the assassin!" I cried; "the inventor of the infernal machine from which Napoleon so narrowly escaped last autumn!"

"I have you touched," cried Fouche, seemingly relieved. "He is here in Paris, with me, in my power, both ready and anxious."

"Well," I interrupted with a feeling of horror, half of admiration, "you are a very pretty scoundrel, duke, and a very proper coward, too, it seems to me; but for my part I prefer La Croix to you. He at least has the courage of his opinions."

He gazed at me in angry uncertainty. "Devil take me, I cannot understand you," he growled at last. "Scarce a week since you and others hired La Croix to assassinate the emperor, and now—"

"You are an infernal liar!" I cried sharply.

He was stung to the quick. "Liar!" he cried, "liar!" and rushed to the doorway. In a second he returned, accompanied by three men, two of whom I had no difficulty in recognizing as police spies. The third, the man who walked between the others, was a stunted specimen of humanity, small and sallow, with high cheek bones, a horribly prognathous jaw, a fanatic. He was undoubtedly a prisoner; his fingers worked with constant twitchings; he appeared both alarmed and anxious, and glanced about him furtively from out the palest gray eyes I have ever seen.

"Liar!" repeated Fouche, grinning at me with the face of a wolf. "Repeat that before your confederate, monseigneur!"

"Why, certainly, but is that La Croix?" I asked disdainfully.

On mention of that name the little man before me started perceptibly and glared at me with fierce intentness.

PHOTOGRAPHING THE NEW FLYER

CAMERA ARTIST A. C. PATTERSON TAKES THE SWIFT PENNSYLVANIA SPECIAL ON THE FLY AND TELLS OF THE RATHER TERRIFYING EXPERIENCE HE HAD WHILE SHOOTING THE ONCOMING LOCOMOTIVE WITH HIS CAMERA.

BY A. C. PATTERSON.

CHICAGO, June 17.—My assignment from the Newspaper Enterprise Association was to photograph the new Pennsylvania flyer, and I received it somewhat late to get out in the country where distance without obstruction favored me.

The next best was to get out of the busy part of the city of Chicago, away from the elevation of tracks at a point where the train would pass at full speed, keeping foremost in my mind that it would be necessary to get located at a point of vantage before the train passed me.

It was then 2:10 in the afternoon, and the flyer of the Pennsylvania, drawn by the Noque engine, 7203, with veteran Engineer Holmes at the trottle, left the union station at 2:45, just 35 minutes late.

Taking a train on the Nickelplate leaving the La Salle street depot at 2:30, runing over the right of way of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, I arrived at Englewood eighteen minutes later, but found the surroundings were not favorable to my operations, and knowing that I was ahead of the flyer and that I could reach Grand Crossing ahead of the object of my search, I continued by ride to the latter station, arriving seven minutes ahead of the Pennsylvania, which was due to arrive and pass at 3:05 p. m.

The tracks at this point were not elevated, still there were obstructions in the shape of high fences that run along the entire right of way for a great distance. Having but a short time to locate, it was necessary for me to make a hasty observation of the field and get somewhere quick.

Starting towards South Chicago I came to a line of several freight cars that were on a siding being unloaded. These I mounted and placed myself in readiness in a hurry.

After getting settled for the exposure I then looked for light, as the exposure was to be very short. The sky was overcast with shifting clouds which broke now and again, and I prayed that the sun would shine when the train passed, but my hopes were not realized.

After testing the shutter of the camera several times everything was in readness for the coming train which I could see in the distance throwing out great volumes of smoke and tooting the whistle for the crossings. Clear signals were giving her the right away.

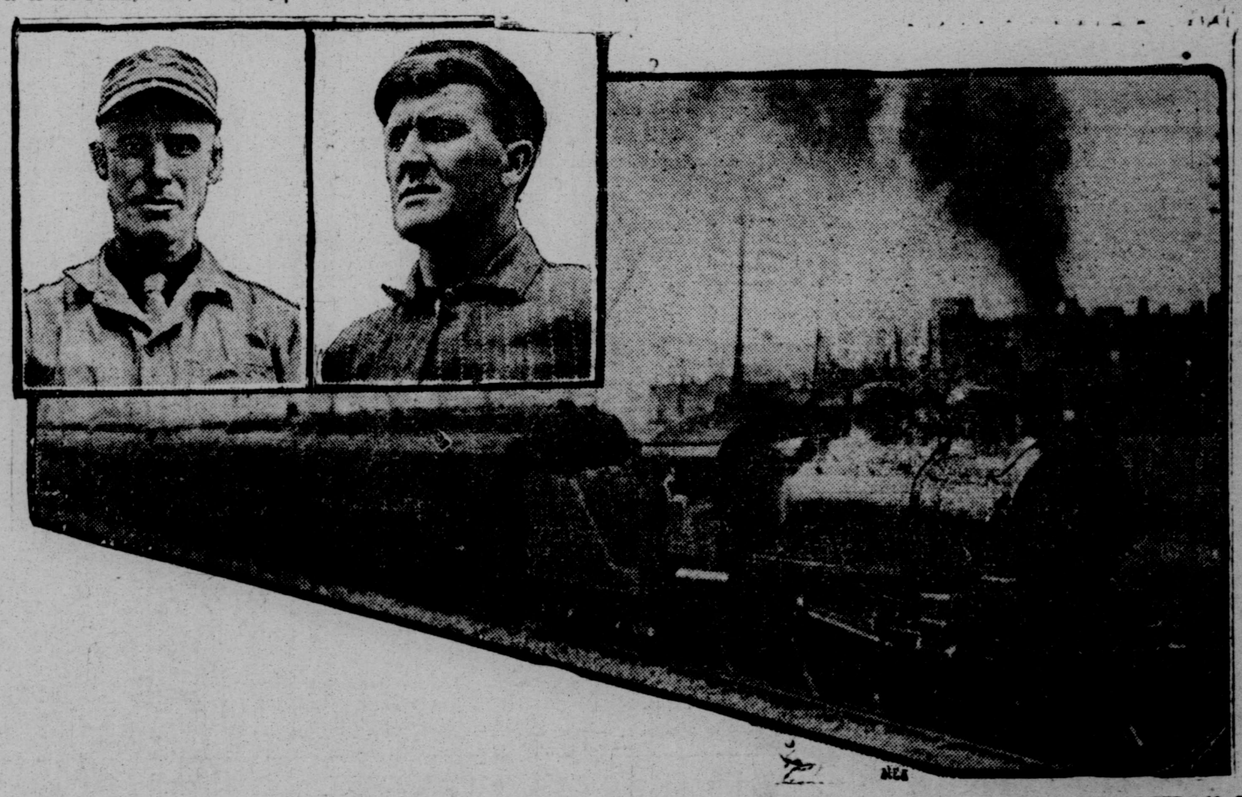
The thunder of her pounding wheels was deafening. Now she was at the next crossing to me, and the whistle was almost drowned by the roar of the train.

The flyer was making over a mile a minute clip, and as I saw the front of the huge locomotive bending down towards me, the sides and top in a haze of smoke, dust and cinders, I felt a quake way down in my shoes, and a light sort of feeling up in my throat.

The engine shook and swayed, and for a quarter of a second the thought came to my mind:

"What if she side-swiped this car?"

But I looked into my camera. In an instant the full train covered the plate; I pressed the release of the shutter working at 1-500 of a second and the result was the photograph I send you.



THIS PHOTOGRAPH OF THE NEW PENNSYLVANIA FLYER, 18 HOURS FROM CHICAGO TO NEW YORK, WAS TAKEN ESPECIALLY FOR THE N. E. A. WHILE THE TRAIN, DRAWN BY ENGINE 7203, WAS RUNNING EASTWARD AT OVER 60 MILES AN HOUR BETWEEN GRAND CROSSING AND SOUTH CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, June 16.—A new era in railroading that has been inaugurated with the eighteen-hour trains between Chicago and New York is attracting attention throughout the world.

All along the line the train is the sensation of the day. Crowds gather at the stations and the crossroads to get a glimpse of the latest railway marvel, and usually express their admiration with a cheer that is drowned out by the roar of the wheels as the train flashes by.

This Pennsylvania railroad flyer is popularly known as the Pennsylvania Special. Among railroad men and on the official schedules the train out of Chicago is No. 28. Railroad men speak of it affectionately as the Twenty-eight. The sister train out of New York is the Twenty-nine.

The special leaves Chicago at 2:45 p. m., central time, and arrives in New York at 8:45 a. m. eastern time. Just eighteen hours, and the distance is more than 900 miles! The total time consumed is 1,080 minutes.

The regular schedule of the Pennsylvania special calls for a little less than a mile a minute, but that does not tell the whole story. There are mountains to cross and there is slow running out of Chicago. That means that lightning time must be made on the level stretches. There a mile a minute would be very ordinary running. Eighty, even ninety miles an hour must be reeled off on the straight, level sections of track in order to make good the world-beating trip between the two big cities.

To give good measure the engineers have formed a cheerful habit of beating the schedule and running into stations a few minutes ahead of time.

Danderine Is So Exhilarating, Invigorating and strengthening to both the hair and scalp that even a 25c. bottle of it is often enough to show wonderful improvements. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout out all over the scalp, and grow abundantly, long and beautiful. Use it every day for awhile, after which two or three times a week will be enough to complete whatever growth you desire.

NOW at all druggists, in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE. To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to any one who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and ten cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

In a little hamlet by the sea, never mind where, there dwells a family to the members of which exceptional good fortune has been granted. Several years ago the father and mother celebrated their golden wedding, surrounded by their children and grandchildren, an unbroken circle. No death had invaded their ranks. There was no vacant chair at any table. Such continuity of blessing is exceptional and delightful, but most families undergo loss and change, and not all who love one another are privileged to live together to the very end of their days.

When husband or wife is taken away, there is an upheaval in the home, as if an earthquake or a cyclone had swept the house from its foundation. The survivor feels at first as if the world had come to an end. It does not seem as though ever again there can be joy and gladness in the universe, or any chance of going on. Things have collapsed for the hour.

Outsiders are very apt to gauge the fidelity to an ideal of man or woman by the length of time that passes before there is an effort to fill the empty place. It is, however, only in accordance with a law of nature that there shall be, after a time, cessation of grief and the effort to go on again under new conditions, and with a new partner.

Nature always hastens to repair her waste places. Flowers spring up and bloom in the track that has been swept by fire. The greenest spots are those where battles have been fought.

No grief should last forever. It implies not the slightest disrespect, hardly forgetfulness of the past, in beginning again a new chapter of life, in new circumstances, with some one else.

In most cases it is inevitable that a desolate heart should snatch at some probability of renewed comfort and that there should be once again the enjoyment of home life which is incomplete to the widowed.

It is the outsider who has nothing to do with it who generally feels and expresses most jealousy at a second marriage of neighbor or friend. It happens, too, that often there is apparently good cause for this impersonal jealousy. For instance, a husband who was sufficiently devoted to a first wife, yet who made no fuss about her, who surrounded her with few delicate attentions, and took for granted all the sacrifices she made, is often most gallant and lover-like in his attitude to his second wife. She comes to him after the first difficult strife of youth, to acquire a competence, is over. In a way, she inherits the self-denial and sacrifice of her predecessor. The wife of the man's youth did her own work, saved and skimped, had few outings, and seldom a long holiday. A handsome gown was perhaps an event to her. She was satisfied with few luxuries. She was helping her husband to get a firm foothold, and make his money. By and by, it may be, worn out with incessant labor, she slipped away into the grave.

The woman who, after a decent interval of mourning, has taken her place is younger, prettier, and much less inclined to strenuous domesticity than she was.

She wears dainty gowns and hats, and has plenty of changes in her wardrobe. Her step-children do not weigh heavily on her hands, the older ones being promptly sent to school, and the younger ones put under the care of a nurse or governess. This wife has leisure, retains her good looks, is her husband's comrade and companion everywhere, and has the joy always prized by a woman of knowing that he is proud of her. Not infrequently the lot of a second wife is far more enviable and desirable than that of her who was wooed and won in the freshness of early girlhood.

There is room in the same breast for faithful love as we all know, in more than one direction. We love our friends, our parents, our children, and the various affections do not crowd or jostle or quarrel one with another. We love people for different reasons, and along different lines. Thus, a second marriage may be equally as congenial and equally as beneficial in its results to both parties as the first, if only it be not a marriage of convenience. When people marry for any lower reason than mutual esteem, and a wish to help one another on the road of life, they are likely to arrive at failure and disappointment. They have dared to lay profane hands on the ark of God.

If a woman marry her second husband because he has wealth and can give her opportunities for herself, or for the children of her own first marriage, that otherwise she cannot compass, she is taking a tremendous risk. Of one such marriage I think, where the gallantry of the lover fell away like a husk the day after the wedding, and the wife found herself united indeed to a millionaire, but as well to a sordid miser. From the ample house to which he took her the hired help was sent away, and she was bluntly told that he married her that he might save money.

When a man looking about him for a second wife decides that this woman or that will make him a good housekeeper, that she will do his mending and preside well at his table, and so addresses her, omitting all thought of romance, he is not likely to give or receive much happiness. Such a union is hopeless in the higher sense. Married happiness must have love for its foundation stone. All satisfying pleasure by the hearth is kindled by the breath of true love. This is as true in a second or third marriage as in the first.

We must admit that people sometimes find their true mates later rather than earlier in life. We are not the same people at 40 that we were at 20, nor at 50 that we were at 35. Our characters have broadened. We have taken in new ideas from many sources.

Great disparity of age should be avoided. The man of 50 seldom seeks a wife near him in age, but let him beware of paying court to a very young girl. She and he will look at life from a different standpoint. They will not be on the same plane. If she be social and he perfers an arm chair and the evening lamp at home, there will be inevitable jars.

A father who has young daughters in their early womanhood should not bring into their mother's place a wife who is about the age of his own eldest girl. Occasionally, but rarely, such a choice turns out well. When it does it reflects great honor on all concerned. Generally, it results in heartache and friction all around, and often it causes a broken home and irreconcilable antagonism follows.

Many wives would do well to cease their laborious struggle and no longer necessary self-abnegation when prosperity comes to their husbands, and to begin at once the sort of life his second wife would live. They may as well array themselves in soft raiment and insist on adequate help in the household before they are laid upon a sick bed. Excellent and devoted husbands are often thoughtless. To their eyes Jenny looks well in anything. It never occurs to them that she is wearing a frumpy gown or a dowdy hat. They would be willing to give her anything she craved, if they recognized a lack. By every law the first marriage, that union of hearts which begins when man and woman are in the gladness and strength of their early day should be the one perfect and rounded sphere, the one glorious fruition within reach of humanity. It is not always this, because human nature is a poor imperfect thing of shreds and patches. But it may be made ideal if people live up to their privileges of goodness and unselfishness.

A second marriage should not have to face criticism and unkind comment. It, too, should have a chance for expansion in all that is worth while. A man once said to me: "When my first wife died, I determined to remain faithful to her memory, and for ten years I did. But I married then, and now I am sorry for the possible seven years I might have had with the dearest woman in the world, my second wife. Why did I not find her sooner? Life is short, we are growing old. I think I did Mary no good by my long loneliness, and I am sure she would say so, could she see me with Jane."

I wonder! I am afraid that Mary, could she return, would look with mournful gaze on her successor. But the dead do not come back, and in Heaven they neither marry nor are given in marriage.

Golf Champion

JAS. BRAID.

James Braid, who won his second open golf championship June 10 at historic St. Andrews, was victor in the championship of 1901, when he won at Muirfield. At that time there was rejoicing among the Scotch golfers as an Englishman had won for the seven previous years. Brair has been looked upon as the third best golfer in Britain, Harry Vardon and J. H. Taylor being considered his superiors. Braid's last round this year was made in 81.

STORIES OF ADMIRAL TOGO

Vice Admiral Togo Heihachiro comes by his sea fighting blood by right. He is a Samuria of the Satsuma clan, and the men of Satsuma held a monopoly of naval rank in the old feudal days of Japan. His ancestors for generations further back than he can count have been sailors and sea fighters. He was born in 1857 and saw in his youth the awakening of Japan and the beginning of the new Japanese navy. He was one of the first Satsuma youths to be sent abroad to study, and had three years at the British Naval College at Greenwich. Returning to Japan Togo entered the imperial navy as an ensign. A student as well as a fighter, he kept up his studies and did his part in planning the building and discipline of the new navy, says the Indianapolis News.

The opening of the war with China in 1894 found him in command of the cruiser Naniwa, 3,650 tons. He struck the first blow of the war. The Naniwa was dispatched in search of the Chinese transport, the Kowshing. Togo found her, ordered her to heave to, and when she ran for it gave her twenty minutes to stop or be sunk. The Kowshing kept on and Togo sent her to the bottom. He commanded the Naniwa through all the victorious engagements of that war, did his part in the final battle of Wei-Hai-Wei, and brought his vessel home only slightly damaged.

In ten years of peace which followed Togo rose to the rank of Vice Admiral. He became known as a strict disciplinarian and the smartest kind of a commander. Already he had gained the nickname "The Silent," for this little bearded Jap who looks anything but a commander and a leader, never speaks except when spoken to. "He seems always in deep thought," says a Japanese commentator on the war.

When war with Russia became inevitable and the naval board at Tokio planned out the opening surprise at Port Arthur Togo was mentioned, with half a dozen other vice and rear admirals, for the supreme command of the fleet. Togo was finally chosen, mainly because he made a reputation for striking quickly and desperately, and on a quick blow depended the success of the Japanese plans.

He was called to the Navy Department where the news was broken in a formal speech.

"Yes, sir," said Togo, when the Minister of Marine had finished.

Everyone waited for a speech. It did not come. Togo stood at salute and said nothing more. When he led the fleet against Port Arthur for the first blow of the war the units were all against Togo. The Russian fleet had a strength about equal to his own, and the backing of mines and land batteries. It is history that in the dashing night torpedo boat attack of February 8-9 he so crippled the Russian Port Arthur fleet that it had to remain bottled in the harbor for months. Later he lured out the battleship Petropavlovsk, the best Russian vessel at Port Arthur, and sank her. When, in August, the repaired Russian fleet sailed out and tried to escape Togo met them in a fair, stand-up fight, scattered them and drove a damaged remnant back into Port Arthur, to be pounded to pieces in the siege of the city. In all these engagements he lost only one battleship and one cruiser, which were destroyed over mine fields by the Russians.

Togo the Silent—the "Ogre," his sailors call him—is a good peg upon which to hang romance. Already the story-loving Japanese have a thousand anecdotes about his courage, his discipline and his obedience to duty. With a subtlety characteristic of the Japanese the Navy Department had set spies on the trail of Togo as soon as he was placed in command, to see whether he was animated solely by love of country or simply by aversion to the Russians, whom he is known to hate.

"For it is only a grudge," they said, "he may blow hot and cold, but if it is loyality to the empire he will fight to the end."

The spies could make no satisfactory report, but Togo, who was aware that he was watched, made the report for them. He invited every officer of his fleet to a great banquet on the hills of Sasebo on February 3, asking them to bid their wives and children—a great departure from Japanese precedent. Next day shore leave was suspended, and the next, when the Elder Statesmen had formally decided on war, Togo summoned all his officers to the flagship.

They found him sitting on deck. Before him, on a little table, stood a tablet fo pure white wood supporting a dagger—the hara-kiri knife of the Samurai. This is the outfit placed before a Japanese gentleman when he commits ceremonial suicide. It meant only one thing to the officers, victory or death, honor or suicide. But to back it up Togo made one of the longest speeches of his silent life.

"Gentlemen," he said in effect, "the your presence was the parting feast, feast at which you honored me with Never could the sailors of Nippon have feasted among their wives and children except for a farewell. We sail tonight to attack the enemy. Go on that voyage with the idea that you will not return. Be ready to weigh anchor at the signal. Good day."

The officers saluted, bowed Japanese fashion and returned to their posts.

Of the exploits of those officers in the next fortnight it has been said: "Their prose of bravery is the poetry of ours."

Togo has kept them to the "code of the 3 1-2 inch knife." From time to time, through the secrecy which has surrounded the Japanese naval movements, has leaked out some tale of this or that officer who has failed in his duty or has preferred safety to death. The stories always end in one way—a ceremonial self-removal.

STOCK MARKET WAS DULL

Railroad Stocks for Most Part Quiet—Bank Statement Unexpectedly Favorable

NEW YORK, June 17.—Transactions in stocks and bonds today compared as follows with those of the same day last year: Number of shares sold today 84,700, a year ago 84,739. Par value of bonds sold today $2,358; a year ago $878,000. A number of usually active shares scarcely appeared on the tape during the first hour of trading. Where they did appear at all single sales of 100 to 200 shares were often recorded.

Features of this dullness were St. Paul, Louisville and Nashville, Rock Island, People's Gas and American Smelting and Refining. The ticker stood motionless for long periods.

Pennsylvania was one of the four stocks able to show a sharp gain after the bank report came out. As the real prices eased off, but in this case stock which opened at 134 7-8 sold up to 135 5-8 and showed some signs of an extending interest. The flattening of the little boom in Illinois Central, which was marked out for a brief season, is not likely to deter operators of a like kind in other high grade stocks, according to the views held by experienced Wall street people. The demand for Illinois Central seems to have been satisfied for a few thousand shares, all told. But it brought a two-point advance.

An unexpected favorable bank statement was a factor of the general sagging of prices. Firmer discounts abroad and a greater demand for gold at Paris and other Continental centers are also influences initial of the predictions of early shipments. The foreign political situation and the cabled reports of trouble brewing between Germany and France also affected the general action. At the same time foreign markets reflected apprehension with Berlin quiet and firmer on the report that the political situation had improved Renewed internal troubles in Russia were regarded as favorable factors toward peace with Japan. Russian bonds and Japanese issues scored good gains abroad. At London the tone was steady, but dull. Americans closed with fractional loss after early irregularity. Arbitrary business here was normal.

STOCK MARKET IS DULL

Speculators Wait Light on Crops and Industries

NEW YORK, June 17.—Slight animation on the stock exchange this week induced by the plans for the Equitable Society settlement, by the peace prospects and by the government crop report quickly subsided and the market for stocks sank into a condition of greater stagnation than before the revival and more and more importance is attached to the outcome of the crops and the future course of iron and steel, so that a waiting attitude in the stock market is indicated until more light is thrown on these questions. Meantime, prices show dull, resisting and lose only part of the advantage gained in the occasional tentative revivals.

IN COLORADO

"The One-Day Trip That Bankrupts the English Language."

In Colorado there is a standard gauge railroad connecting the tourist center of Colorado Springs with the world's greatest gold camp of the Cripple Creek district, which for grandeur of scenery and marvelous engineering achievement excels anything in this country or Europe. It is the Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek District Railway, better known as "The Short Line," opened for traffic in 1901, since which time its fame as a line of unparalleled scenic attraction and wonderful construction has spread to all parts of the world.

The air line from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek is nineteen miles, but this famous railroad, in its ascent of the mountains, twisting and turning around the edges and over the tops of gorgeous canyons, traverses a distance of forty-five miles, and from start to finish presents a continous panorama of stupendous and bewildering mountain and canon scenery, which baffles all description. It was a well known writer who, after exhausting his entire vocabulary of adjectives before reaching the awe-inspiring Point Sublime, six miles out, declared in desperation that it was "the one-day trip that bankrupts the English language."

It is universally pronounced the feature of a western tour, and no traveler would think of passing through Colorado Springs without making the side trip to Cripple Creek over this wonderful railroad, including an inspection of the fascinating gold camp on electric trolley cars. Palace observation cars are run on all trains, which afford the tourist every facility for viewing the incomparable scenery and the best built railroad in the west.

The time consumed in making the trip is two hours and a half in each direction.

Handsome descriptive booklet, with embossed cover and profusely illustrated, may be obtained free upon application to W. C. MacWatters, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Colorado Springs, Colo.

ELITCH'S GARDENS

DENVER, June 17.—Elitch's Gardens are pronounced by Denver people to be even more beautiful than ever. Thousands upon thousands of flowers are in bloom, apples are appearing on the trees that form one of the main decorative features of the garden and the electric display is far more brilliant than ever before in the sixteen years that the gardens have been in existence.

In the main theater Walter Clark Bellows has one of the strongest stock companies ever assembled, and individual members have already scored pronounced successes, although the gardens are just starting the third week of the season. The company opened in "My Wife's Husbands," followed it with "Pretty Peggy," and "The Henrietta" will be the third week's attraction. The others will be of an equally high order.

There are amusements almost without end this summer. One of the new attractions is the Katzenjammer castle, filled with mechanical surprises and forming the one building in the world from which no person can come without laughing. Adjoining the castle is the new vaudeville theater, its entrance filled with various mirrors that distort the human form into grotesque shapes and which is dubbed the "Temple of Mirth." Then there is the $20,000 merry-go-round, the big double figure 8, and the circle swing, the latter brilliant at night with incandescent lights and which has cars seating four persons that whirl you in a circle far above the heads of the spectators. The helter-skelter, a crescent groove 200 feet in length down which you coast seated on a bit of carpet, is another novelty, while there is near by a first-class dog, cat and money show. The old mill through which you float in a boat with beautiful panoramas almost constantly in view is another feature. In addition there is a big free show and a free concert every afternoon and evening. Ten cents is the highest admission charged, except in the main theater, where it varies from 15 to 75 cents.

The bears and other animals are proving as popular as ever and the season promises to be the most successful in the history of Elitch's.

THE LIVSETOCK MARKET

REVIEW OF THE WEEK

Cattle receipts have been very much lighter than for the week previous, and the steer trade has exhibited a stronger tendency in consequence, the market closing, perhaps, 10c higher. Cows of the better kind have not exhibited any disposition to advance, but medium cows have lost 10c to 15c. Vealers are 25c to 50c lower than the closing prices of last week.

Best hog prices have run about as follows during the week: Choice sorted, $5.10@5.30; mixed packers, $4.90@5.10; lights, $4.65@5.10; pigs, $4.75@4.85; stags and roughs, $3.50@4.25.

Sheep receipts have not been excessive for the week. Hardly any market has developed, and the few sales have been mostly in small lots. The top price for lambs was $4.85. The general quality of the offering has been of low grade.

Closing quotations run about as follows: Strictly choice heavy steers, $3.80@4.50; best grass steers, $3.25@3.65; common to medium grass steers, $2.50@3; strictly choice cows, $2.50@2.75; good butcher cows, $2.10@2.30; canners and common kinds, $1.50@2; strictly choice veal calves, $4.50, with fair light calves at $3.75@4.25; heavy calves and steer yearlings, $1.75@2.25; bulls, $1.75@2.25.

Considerable improvement is noted in the week's volume of hog receipts, and prices ran on all fours with last week's closing up to the middle of the present week, when a big run of prime hogs came near overloading the market. The tendency from then on was towards a lower level, until Saturday, when an improvement was noted, the week closing fully steady with the opening. Pigs 25c lower.

NORTH FORTH WORTH, June 17.—Cattle receipts for mall sources today were around 880, the lightest Saturday's run for some time. Total for the week, 17,100. Steer receipts for the market were two loads of common Mexican stuff, due to sell at $2.25@2.50. About half the steer supply went on under through billing.

Cows and heifers made up the greater portion of the cattle run. Some betterment in the quality was observable, particularly on two loads of light fat heifers, averaging 467 that sold at $3.10. Top cows were $2.25, the bulk selling around $2.15.

A very light run of bulls was in and trading was nominal, around $2.

Three loads of calves were on the market: Prices were steady, at $2.75@4.50.

The local demand on the light run absorbed all offerings for the day.

HOGS

Receipts amounted to 400; for the week, 7,393. With such a light supply on hand prices necessarily took on a stronger tone, bidding being 10c higher than yesterday's close. The quality of the suppiy was improved in part, tops for the day averaging 304 pounds and selling at $5.30, with the bulk of sales at $5@5.15, and pigs at $5.25.

TRADE ITEMS

Clarendon reports 5,000 head of cattle on the open market.

By grading the flock of sheep for sale into bunches according to size, kind and quality, they will appear to a better advantage and will sell at better prices.

Reports from Knox and King counties in the upper Panhandle are to the effect that the range is fine, grass being knee high.

For poor lands and short pasture sheep are better adapted than cattle and should be kept in preference.

It is impossible to raise big mutton sheep on short pasture and without grain or roots.

The National Live Stock Commission Company's advice by wire from St. Louis today says the calf run is increasing. Veals about 50c lower than a week ago. Prospects lower. Veals at Fort Worth today 25c higher, with tops at $4.50, at which price three straight loads were sold, averaging 156, 157 and 177 pounds. Moral: "Ship to Fort Worth."

Professor Mumford of the Illinois feeding station, has thoroughly demonstrated that young cattle are more profitable to feed than mature ones. They make faster gains and their carcasses command better prices.

Combined receipts of cattle at the five big packing points last week amounted to 146,800 head, or 19,000 more than the week previous, and 15,000 more than for the corresponding week in June last year.

Pecos shipped 900 cars of cattle in the month of May.

In investing in sheep to form a flock, purchase none but first-class animals, healthy and vigorous.

IS THERE MONEY IN GOLD MINING?

"I am often asked," says Jasper in his famous letter on financial topics in Leslie's Weekly, issue of May 18, "whether I believe money is to be made in mining enterprises, especially in gold, silver and copper properties. I answer unquestionably in the affirmative. The history of this and every other country tells its own story. Probably greater fortunes have been made on smalled investments in the mining of precious metals than in any other field of human endeavor.

"There is as good money in mining as in any other staple, legitimate line of business, and brains, ability and foresight, are as sure to win out in that field as in any. The man who seeks mining stocks, and who will exercise the same care and discretion as in other investments, will find them much more profitable. * * * He who would invest profitably must either know the mining industry, or he must depend upon some individual of good reputation who is informed. There are hundreds of honest mining engineers — men who value their reputations as priceless, men who would not allow themselves to be connected in any way with a shady enterprise. The advice of such men is a safe guide, just as the sincere advice of a Wall street magnate would be safe—if it could be had.

"It is on the advice of such trained and educated men that the earth is opened up, veins tested by frequent borings with the diamond drill, and then, if the gold or silver is found in sufficient quantity, the mine is financed and the stock offered to the public to raise the money for driving tunnels and sinking shafts, erecting a hoisting plant, and perhaps a mill for treating the ore, or else a railroad to convey it to a smelting works. * * * That the men who know find it extremely profitable is proven, not only by insances cited, but by the history of such properties as the DALY-WEST, SILVER KING, and Horn Silver of Utah; De Lamar of Idaho, Portland and Small Hope of Colorado, and St. Joseph of Missouri, each of which has earned away into the millions. * * * And so the figures run —always in the millions —telling their own story of the profit in mining for those who use discretion and business judgment. When a mining property has been prospected by men of the right sort; when the district is a good producer; when there are railways convenient to handle the ore, and when the men in charge have their own money invested and are there with serious business intent, the chances for large profits are good—just as good as in manufacturing, agriculture, trade, or transportation—in fact, the profits are usually much larger on the capital invested."

IT DEPENDS ON THE MEN AND THE MINE

One of the directors and original incorporators and owners of the Silver King mine referred to above, is W. V. RICE of Salt Lake City. The Silver King has paid during a period of less than eight years, dividends in excess of ten million dollars. It is now paying dividends at the rate of $1,300,000 per year. The Silver King is the greatest known silver mine in the world.

The Daly-West, also referred to in the foregoing, is a combination of properties that were merged five years ago. One of these, known as the Quincy mine, at the time of the merger, had produced $2,000,000 worth of ore in a period of fifteen months, and has paid dividends of $1,300,000. JAMES FARRELL was the principal owner of the Quincy and he is now part owner of the Daly-West.

The consulting engineer of W. V. RICE, JAMES FARRELL and associates is J. H. Shockley. Mr. Shockley is a mining engineer of twenty years' study, research and practical experience in mining in all its phases.

For upwards of a year Engineer Shockley had been engaged in the inspection of "prospects" 'in a dozen state and had turned them down as either unworthy or not immediately promising, when he came into Southern Nevada in January of this year. After four months of observation and examination of the properties in Tonopah, Goldfield and Bullfrog districts, he enthusiastically advised the purchase of the Equitable group of claims, the Morris and Phillips group, and the Ugly Duckling and Comet claims, aggregating 135 acres, and situated on Bonanza Mountain, in the center of the Bullfrog district. James Farrell at once went to Bullfrog, examined the properties, and purchased them in the interests of himself, W. V. Rice and their partners. A company called the Gibraltar Mines Syndicate has been incorporated to operate them. W. V. Rice is president and James Farrell is a director of the new corporation.

J. H. Shockley's report on the property of the Gibraltar Mines Syndicate is, in part, as follows:

"On the Equitable group there are at least five distinct gold-bearing veins. Judging from what is in sight it is safe to say that they vary from two to forty feet in width. Average samples taken from the exposures on the different veins show from fourteen to thirty-six dollars per ton. Of course selected ore can be had which runs much higher. These veins belong to the same fissure zone as those on the Tramp, Eclipse and Denver series on adjoining properties, and can be traced on the surface for nearly three-quarters of a mile, and wherever opened will pan and show good values in gold.

"I have no hesitancy in saying that the property possesses far greater inducements as a mining investment than ordinarily offered, and the chances are more than favorable that it will make a mine. It is with full confidence the above statement is made; and it is with high satisfaction, after many months of travel through the mining regions of the west, and the expenditure of much money without recommending one solitary mining investment, to be enabled at last to feel justified in writing a favorable report.

"In an experience of twenty years active mining throughout the west, no series of gold veins have come under the observation of the writer, which had better showings with like development and like area."

GOLD MINE BACKED BY MEN OF FORTUNE

W. V. Rice and James Farrell have decided to give investors an opportunity to partake of the future prospects of the Gibraltar Mines Syndicate; 500,000 shares of stock of the par value of $1.00 have been placed in the treasury, and 100,000 of these are offered to the public for subscription, at 55 cents per share. The entire capitalization of the company is 1,500,000 shares and all shares are fully of the par value of $1.00 paid and non-assessable.

This offer is made, not because the incorporators are in need of any money, but because it is the practice of all mining companies, in order to make a market value for their securities, and to provide funds for development work for a property that is already paid for in cash and turned over to the company absolutely free of indebtedness to sell a limited number of shares of treasury stock.

The money that will be realized from the sale of this stock will be used for development work. It is not believed that it will be necessary to dispose of any more shares than those now offered to provide ample funds to operate the property and put the company on a dividend paying basis. Should that be nesessary, however, 400,000 shares remain, and the incorporators are willing at any time to take these shares and pay for them at the market value.

It is, of course, impossible at this time to prognosticate the future value of the company's shares, but if the property on development, shows that it is the ore produced that the mining engineers say it is bound to become, $10.00 per share is not an exaggerated idea of what the price should be within a year or two.

Every lesson that has been taught practical and successful mining men will be used to the lasting advantage of the Gibraltar Mines Syndicate, and everything that backing by men of fortune can do for the credit of the company will be done.

Reservation of shares can be telegraphed or or mailed to W. H. Clark, secretary Gibraltar Mines Syndicate, Exchange Building, Goldfield, Nevada, and remittances should follow by mail in full at the price of 55 cents per share.

Prospectus, press notices, maps, engineers' reports, photographs and other particulars will be mailed on application.

"IT TAKES THE CAKE"

Is the usual favorable comment on the superb laundry work turned out at the Fort Worth Steam Laundry. The best of linen and other materials are easily ruined by careless and indifferent laundering. We cannot and do not hope to retain your patronage by slipshod work, and the best is none too good here.

AN EXAMPLE IN ARITHMETIC—Rent a house for seven years, at $12.50 per month, $1,050. Buy from us a neat, four-room cottage, built for you, on a splendid lot 50x120 feet, fenced and close to street car. Our price for all $950, on monthly installments that need not exceed $12.50 to $15 per month, on our easy payment plan. See Mr. Carpenter with Glen Walker & Co., Sixth and Houston streets. Phone 621.

LOOK AT THIS—Those wanting cheap homes. We have in North Fort Worth houses and lots ranging in price from $800 to $1,200. Small cash payments, balance $15 to $25 per month. Also homes in Glenwood and Union Depot addition, on same terms.

Also several beautiful vacant lots in the Sixth and Eighth wards; all good bargains. Also several choice building sites on the interurban and at Riverside. A word to the wise. All these propositions are worth more than our price and are increasing in value daily. We have several nice residences for rent. List your houses for rent with us.
STARLING & HOLLINGSWORTH.

AT THIS season of new aspirations and new resolutions, make up your mind to own your home before another month is past, or the rent collector comes around again. We will build you a neat, modern cottage, on a splendid lot, in a fine location, close to street car, and sell all so you will have no trouble in paying for it on our easy payment plan. See Mr. Carpenter, with Glen Walker & Co., Sixth and Houston streets. Phone 621.

DO YOU WANT one of those elegant lots on the south side at $25 down, balance $7.50 per month? If you do, you will have to call within a day or two, as I have only about seventy-five left, and they are going, going (next week) gone. Come early and get your choice. None such bargains have ever been offered before. Call tomorrow morning on E. G. Bylander, 315 and 316 Fort Worth National Bank building.

YOU NEED A HOME, and we will sell you a neat cottage, in a splendid location, where you will have all the advantages of churches, schools, street cars, gravel streets, good sidewalks, city water, etc. Price and payments can be made to suit you. See Mr. Carpenter, with Glen Walker & Co., Sixth and Houston streets. Phone 621.

RENTERS, READ THIS—It is to your advantage.

I have a few lots left on which I will build houses to suit purchasers on cash basis. When you come to me for a place you get 100 cents value for every dollar and you won't have to pay from 10 to 20 percent interest.

It will pay you to "lay off" tomorrow and call on me in regard to building a house for you. Bring a rough sketch of the kind of house you want. Don't wait until it's too late. E. G. Bylander, 315 and 316 Fort Worth National Bank building. Phones 2727 and 3777.

MODERN "DR JEKYLL" SAYS HE'S INNOCENT

Thos. P. Wickes Admits Dual Personality, But Denies Wrong-doing

By A. T. Moore.
Staff Correspondence to The Telegram.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Thomas Parmelee Wickes, Yale '74, Columbia Law '76, for thirteen years an assistant corporation counsel for the city of New York, since 1889 prominent member of the bar of the metropolis, member of the Lawyers' Club, the University Club, the Yale Club, the Phi Epsilon Club, the New York Athletic Club and the Mendelssohn Glee Club, son of an old-time and respectable New York family, himself respected, able, well-to-do.

Lewis Jarvis, lock box 1604, New York, whose title to distinction rested upon the possession of "Tiffany" letter heads and the authorship of letters of alleged blackmailing character sent to persons interested in the outcome of suits in which Thomas P. Wickes was one of the attorneys.

And Wickes is "Jarvis."

The exposure resulting from Wickes' arrest on charge of blackmailing has caused a sensation in New York, especially among members of the Bar association.

Wickes does not deny that some six years ago he signed an application for a postoffice box in the name of "Jarvis," that Jarvis is none other than himself, and that he has been writing all these years in the name of "Jarvis." He merely says he has done nothing criminal.

Meanwhile he is out on $1,000 cash bail which he furnished, not one of his many club or professional friends coming forward to comfort him in his hour of distress.

While the present action against Wickes grows out of a letter in which "Jarvis" threatened to charge Dr. Edward Weston, wealthy manufacturer of Waverly, N. J., with perjury, most of the "Jarvis" letters that have thus far come to light have been of an innocent character written for the sole purpose of boosting Thomas P. Wickes as one of the ablest men of the New York bar. The apparent uselessness of a great many of these letters has led to the belief of many that Wickes is subject to a mania.

In the Weston letters "Jarvis" urged hat genetleman to settle a suit for damages which had been brought against him by Dr. A. P. Grinnell, a highly respectable resident of Vermont. As a result of mistaken identity Weston has caused the arrest of Dr. Grinnell. The latter secured a judgment for $12,500 and another for $10,000 against Weston. Then there was a mistrial, and, a few weeks ago, a fourth hearing of the case. Wickes was one of Grinnell's lawyers. While the case was pending in court Weston was deluged with letters from "Jarvis" advising him to pay and not prolong the litigation. Here is a sample of the "Jarvis" literature.

"May I write that many of your friends think you have pursued this lawsuit with Dr. Grinnell long enough? You must know you can never win the case. You admit that you caused the arrest. * * * As long as your answer remains what it is, the case cannot be changed; and you could not alter your answer so as to make it effectively and legally different, without running the risk of a prosecution for perjury.

"If Mr. Wickes had made the final address to the jury I believe that the verdict would have been at least $20,000 against you. But the publicity given to the matter hurts your good name—all your friends here are saying so. It is not a matter of money with you—of course, I know that; but would it not be better for your reputation to stop the case here?"

In another letter "Jarvis" said: "Will you continue to be led like a blind man, upon advice which, I still believe, must be against your own good judgment, but which, just as surely as you live, will take you to Sing Sing?"

Dr. Weston and his attorneys got busy, laid a trap and with the help of postoffice inspectors discovered the identity of "Jarvis." Wickes' friends point to some of the effusions as the letters of a crazy man and say they would not wonder if it transpires that he has been writing "Jarvis" letters all over the world to men of affairs. And it is suggested that he has been using at least two other aliases in his letter-writing mania.

Wickes used to be in partnership with Edward S. Hatch, an attorney. They disagreed, the partnership was dissolved, and at once Hatch was in receipt of his share of "Jarvis" letters telling what a fine man Thomas P. Wickes was and how Hatch would regret the dissolution.

In another case Wickes was attorney for a young woman in a damage suit. He was successful and she received judgment for a large sum. Then she learned of "Jarvis," but this time it was Wickes that was boosting "Jarvis." He told her that he would have been unable to win such a victory for her had it not been for the unexampled genius and ability of one Lewis Jarvis, without whose advice her case would have been practically hopeless. He suggested that his client should amply reward "Jarvis" for what he had done for her, and she very graciously did so—through Wickes.

To his family at 330 West Eighty-fifth street, and to his office mates at 41 West Wall street, the myterious Wickes case has been one of as much shock and mystery as to the general public. His wife is prostrated and his former personal friends are dumb.

It would take Wickes perhaps thirty to forty minutes to reach his office from his home. Yet it was generally his custom to leave his home at 7 o'clock in the morning, while he would not arrive at his office until several hours later.

Where was he in the meantime? is the question that is being asked, and on its answer very likely depends much of this Jekyll and Hyde mystery.

Wickes, with his short-trimmed imperial, and a military swing of the shoulders, is an impressive personage. His manner is somewhat imperious, but always suave. He is trying his best to keep clear of the interviewers, and to all such callers at his office he is "out."

He happened to bob in from an inner office when one reporter called and he could not escape. He tried to sidestep, but was cornered and finally said that his hot shot would come later.

Wickes is proud of his ancestry, for, in a prepared statement for publication of his biography, along with other "notable men of New York," the first paragraph tells all about Wickes' grandfather, Eliphalet Wickes, and his revolutionary experience.

It also shows that Wickes was born in 1853, tells of his years of education, and states that while in the city counsel's office, "it was due to his energy and activity and thorough preparation of the cases against these enterprises that the original cable railway system, which had no merits, and the matter of the Metropolitan Transit Company, another underground railroad scheme, were defeated in the courts."

One also learns from this source that "in early life, especially while in college, Mr. Wickes was noted as the possessor of an uncommonly fine baritone voice, and he frequently sang in public on a variety of occasions."

Wickes' Portrait, by Courtesy "New York State's Prominent and Progressive Men."

THOS. P. WICKES. DR. EDWARD WESTON,

Signatures are those of Wickes and "Lewis Jarvis," the name which Wickes used.

MATERIALS LIE LOOSE

Complaint is being made to the police department of the condition in which materials are left around buildings in course of construction, bruised shins and profanity, however, being the most serious damage reported.

At one building in the business section of the city a pile of lumber effectually blocked all but a foot of the sidewalk passageway for several nights, no light being there to warn pedestrians. At the same building an inclined plank used in carrying materials into the building was left in place Saturday night when the workmen quit, its position a few inches from the ground threatening to trip all persons attempting to pass.

At another building recently completed a pile of dirt was left in the street, many horses stumbling over it and falling to their knees, until it was finally ground down by passing teams.

A contractor's runabout left for several nights unhintched in front of a residence near which he was at work has also been made subject of unofficial complaint, as has been the leaving of city work teams and scrapers at the rear of the city hall over Sunday in place of removal to the city street

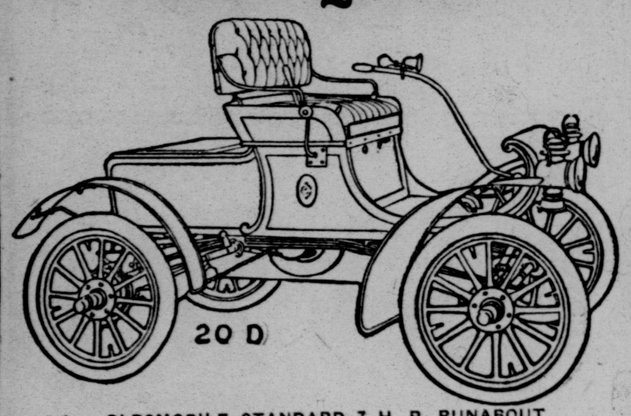
THIS OLDSMOBILE HAS NO EQUAL



OLDSMOBILE STANDARD 7 H. P. RUNABOUT

It is a Runabout Built for Touring

If there is any possible way to improve this new and improved Oldsmobile Standard Runabout, we don't know it. It represents all we have learned in 20 years about runabout building. It has power, durability, comfort and beauty—with an Oldsmobile motor that has no equal.

It stands, in our opinion, as the perfect runabout, because it is built in a way we know an antomobile should be to stand hard daily use for the city or country—good roads or bad.

See this car—try it—examine it—there isn't the slightest question that anyone who will be influenced in purchasing a car by merit, by superiority, point by point over any other, will buy an oldsmobile—$650.00, f. o. b. factory. Lamps and horn included.

The new flexible springs make it as comfortable as a Touring Car. New ratchet differential brake; new hub brakes lined with camel's hair belting; new circulating pump; starting relief at side of seat; priming cup is added for cold weather; piston pin is bigger and four piston rings instead of three; automatic oiling system; improved clutches—in fact every little thing strengthened and improved to make the car "simply perfect."

Two of these Runabouts taken right out of stock are now on their way from New York to Portland, Oregon, having gone 2,500 miles under frightful road conditions. No argument is necessary to prove the reliability and durability of these cars.

COUNCIL INVITED TO MINERAL WELLS

Requested to Attend Municipal Convention In That City During July

Mayor Powell and the city aldermen have received the following invitation from Mayor Highsmith of Mineral Wells to attend the coming convention of mayors and aldermen of Texas in that city:

"It is with pleasure I extend to you on behalf of the city and Commercial Club a hearty invitation to be present at the next annual session of the Mayors' Association of Texas, which meets here on July 12, 13 and 14.

"This is planned to be one of the most interesting sessions ever held in this state. Subjects of great importance to municipal governments will be discussed in papers to be read by civil engineres of state reputations and also by mayors of experience.

"Mineral Wells will take pleasure in introducing to you the handsomest and most complete auditorium in the south, and also we assure you the entertainment that you will receive will cause you long to remember 'the Great Texas Health and Pleasure Resort.'

"No efforts will be spared to make your stay one of pleasure and joy, and you will never forget it. We know how to entertain and we are going to make this occasion one of the greatest of the season. We will forward you a program a little later, and it certainly will interest you. Dancing, bowling, donkey riding, boating on our great lake and other entertainments that will fascinate you.

"Low rate round trip tickets for sale on all railroads for sixty days.

"Please inform me at your earliest convenience how many of your aldermen will attend. Of course we expect the mayor. Please address all of your mail, telegrams and telephones care of convention, and you will have no trouble on that score.

"We are expecting a reply stating you and your board of aldermen will be present. Not knowing the names of your aldermen, please inform them of this invitation. Yours very truly,

"F. C. HIGHSMITH,"
"Mayor and President Com. Club."

TORTURE OF A PREACHER

The story of the torture of Rev. O. D. Moore, pastor of the Baptist church of Harpersville, N. Y., will interest you. He says: "I suffered agonies, because of a persistent cough, resulting from the grip. I had to sleep sitting up in bed. I tried many remedies, without relief, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which entirely cured my cough, and saved me from consumption." A grand cure for diseased conditions of Throat and Lungs. At W. J. Fisher's, Reeves' Pharmacy and M. S. Blanton & Co., druggists; price 50c and $1.00, guaranteed.

PEACE NOT DECLARED

War on Weeds Being Waged Without Cessation

War against weeds with their allies, careless citizens, has not been called off with the Russo-Japanese contest by the city officers, under the leadership of City Physician Barber. On the contrary the campaign is being pushed without let up, notices being sent to all places in which the weeds begin to tower.

"The fact that weeds are growing on some lots does not mean that other citizens should stand by and permit the same things on their property," said Dr. Barber. "Lots where they are growing will be attended to and it is a dangerous plan for other citizens to take them as guages."

Notices to clean up, which are still being sent out, contain a copy of the ordinance on the subject, in many cases being served in person by Dr. Barber.

EARLY CITIZEN DIES

J. J. Scott, a pioneer of Tarrant county and a former county commissioner, died at his home near Crowley at noon Saturday, aged 72 years. Mr. Scott, who had become enfeebled in later years, was suffering from nervous indigestion. He leaves surviving him, a widow, who is ten months his senior, and four children, J. C. Scott, living near Crowley; Mrs. Mary Gantt, near Crowley; Mrs. Martha Lochridge, Canyon City, and Mrs. Laura Small, Burleson. A number of grandchildren are also living.

Funeral services will be held at the family home Monday, interment being made at Crowley. Members of the Masonic fraternity, of which Judge Scott was a member, will conduct the services.

Judge Scott, who was an ex-Confederate soldier, served as county commissioner for a number of years, being finally defeated in the contest that was waged over the then proposed erection of the present court house. He was well known throughout the county, to which he came about fifty years ago from Arkansas.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

Congregation Ahavoth Sholom to Have Open Air Exercises

An outing will be held today at Hermann Park by Congregation Ahavoth Sholom at Hermann Park, the Sunday school spending the day there, accompanied by Rabbi Halper, Superintendent B. Z. Friedman and the teachers, Misses Dan, Schuster and Hermann.

Members of the Sunday school will meet at the synagogue at 9 o'clock and will board Rosen Heights cars at Fifth and Throckmorton streets, being taken over that line, before entering the park.

Sunday school exercises will be held in the park. Lunch will be served at noon and in the afternoon at 3 o'clock class exercises will be held, medals being awarded the girl and boy found most proficient. Certificates will be given others. Parents of the children will accompany them.

TRACK CROSSING ROUGH

Teamsters Complain of Ruts on Main Street

Many complaints are being made by drivers and others regarding the condition of the railroad crossings on Main street. Dirt used between the tracks near the Texas and Pacific station, instead of the paving flanking them on either side, has been worn to ruts in many places, bringing wheels with a destroying thud against the unbending rails, only to drop into another depression and renew the jolt until all tracks have been crossed.

A driver of a heavy wagon reporting the conditions, complained of the strain on the wagons and teams, and declared that many trips with heavily laden wagons across the tracks would prove expensive in wagon repair bills.

This portion of Main street will be included in one of the improvement districts outlined by the council.

Pain may go by the name of rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, pleurisy. No matter what name the pains are called Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will drive them away. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. J. P. Brashear.

STREET FLUSHING WAITS

Conditions Relieved But Must Await More Water

Considerable relief from the dust caused by street sweeping has been brought about through the ordering of sprinkling before sweeping, thus materially allaying the dust, which formerly arose and blew in clouds into the stores.

Some complaint, however, is still being made and City Physician Barber says he hopes to have the streets flushed at least once or more a week, as in many places the sweepers merely brush the dirt into hollows, from which it is blown and again swept back.

Conference of city officials to secure a remedy of conditions if possible showed system with the new wells, to be made in about two weeks, it will be impossible to spare sufficient water for properly cleaning the streets. At that time, however, it is believed all the trouble will be remedied.

CARDINAL ATTACKS WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Says He Hopes Women Will Never Get Right to Cast Vote

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 17.—A Picayune Baltimore special says:

"Cardinal Gibbons delivered an address at the commencement exercises at Mount S. Agnes College, one of the most exclusive female seminaries in this section, during which he made an attack on woman suffrage.

Among other things, he said:

"Woman today is the peer of her husband, not the slave of his caprice. She is as she ought to be, queen of the domestic household.

"But because you are equal in quality it does not mean you should have the same functions to perform. Some women are not satisfied with their own power; they want to invade the man's privileges and they want to vote. I trust they will never get the authority to do that, for when woman mingles with the political life she loses her freshness.

You cannot vote, but you can make your men vote to please you, and you cannot preach. Some of these new women get angry with St. Paul and call him an old fogy and an old bachelor, but he was right. You can preach in your own home, for the best teacher is the good, pious Christian mother."

Educational Meeting

Superintendent Alex. Hogg, state director of the National Educational Association, has issued a pamphlet regarding the annual meeting of the organization at Asbury Park, N. J., July 3-7, an outline program of which was contained in The Telegram. As announced at that time President Roosevelt will address the association.

The distracting headaches from which so many women suffer make life a daily purgatory. If men suffered with headache as women do, business would be almost at a standstill. Does not the fact that men do not suffer from these severe headaches suggest that there must be a womanly cause for them?

When the womanly organism is diseased, headache, backache, nervousness and sleeplessness are consequences which are sure to follow.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures headaches and other aches and pains by curing their cause. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It soothes pain and builds up the nerves. It transforms weak, sickly, nervous invalids into happy, healthy women. Thousands have testified to its marvelous merits.

"I took two bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and two of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and am feeling well," writes Mrs. Dan McKenzie, of Lorway Mines, Cape Breton Co., Nova Scotia. "I had uterine trouble, pain in the side and headache. After taking your medicines I got well. You may publish this or use it in any way you think best, as I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

Send Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send twenty-one one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or thirty-one stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Many Modes in Millinery

ONE OF THE FLARING DOUBLE SHAPES.

A BENDEL LACE HAT.

OF RIBBON, ROSES AND A SHADED PLUME.

QUILLED RIBBON AND A WREATH OF ROSES.

STUART LITTLE FLAT SHAPE.

FLOWERS AND FEATHERS—RIBBONS REIGN SUPREME—THE MADE HAT THE THING—ORIGINALITY AND INDIVIDUALITY THE QUEST—WINGS AN ESPECIAL FEATURE OF THE LATER MODES.

After the first shapes and styles that ushered in the spring season have been thoroughly tried out, the later developments of the summer shapes begin to manifest themselves.

Ever and always the earlier modes are really an experiment. Of necessity they are and must be more or less reminiscent of the late winter styles, and in many instances they are made up merely to find profitable use for the ribbons and flowers that have been left over from other days.

The millinery modes for the summer days are delightfully different from those that claimed our attention even a few short weeks ago. That extremely trying and often ridiculous polo turban is seldom, if, indeed, ever seen at the modish milliners. Its vogue, emphatic enough while it lasted, soon burned itself out, and the fact that, unlike all of the other turban shapes, it is utterly unsuited and unadaptable to any but the most youthful face, doubtless helped materially in its speedy downfall.

Shade seems to be the first requisite in the modish summer hat. This is a fashion that will be welcomed by young and elderly alike. Not that the hats are to be at all large in their proportions. It is merely that the very latest styles show a breadth of brim that cannot fail to yield some protection to the eyes from the glare of the summer sun, and prove extremely becoming to any and all types of face at the same time.

It is what is known as the made hat that reigns supreme in all of the summer shapes. This is merely that a wire frame is used as a foundation, to which the straw braids are sewn by hand, and this can then be bent and twisted into the lines that will assuredly prove the most flattering to their wearer.

The quest for originality and individuality in hats is muchly furthered by those made shapes, and there is simply no end or limit to the effects that the clever milliner can thus weave with one and the same hat when she comes to make it up for different customers. One has the back turned up flat over the crown, and the front brim turned into a very slight, almost imperceptible, downward flare. Another will have the very same shape with the back wired into fluted folds and turned up somewhat, while the front looks as though it had received a slap in the face and doubled up on itself, a smart quill being thrust through, apparently to hold it in place.

All of the summer modes are delightfully youthful in effect, and from the milliner's point of view, at any rate, it would appear a crime indeed for any woman to appear old. In fact, the only difference that one can perceive between the hat for the matron of 40 and her debutante daughter who has not yet said good-by to her teens is, or will be, in the wearing. The younger generation have taken to a most fascinating downward tilt to all of their hats in the front, while the more elderly ladies wear theirs after a more sedate fashion. The same shady shape, the same flowers and feathers, the same high, built-up back and even the same shades and colorings are worn by mother and daughter alike. Even those smart little Breton sailors that were once the perquisite of youth alone are now twisted and manipulated so that they do not look at all out of place over even snow-white locks.

Once upon a time, and not so very long ago, either, it was considered very poor taste to wear a beplumed hat in the mornings, with one's wooltex tailormade frock. Even the simplest chapeau that was so adorned was not considered suitable for morning wear. But like so many other of our traditions sartorial, this one, too, has been put aside, and the plumed hat is now worn at any time of day and the wearer need not consider herself at all out of the correct mode in so doing.

Wings are a very prominent feature of all of the latest shapes. Their mode and method of application is delightfully various. In most instances, though, they are posed flat, and the tips point to the back, rather than in any other direction. Where those smart wings are employed—and they are used in a multitude of delicate tints—velvet ribbons are accepted as the correct accompaniment, and flowers and ostrich plumes seldom, if ever, appear on the wing-trimmed hat.

The shaded effects, of which we got just a hint last autumn, are to the fore in a most bewitching way. Color combinations are most complicated and the greatest care must be taken in the blending and mixing so that the appearance of "a paint shop out on a spree," as one witty girl characterized an unfortunate selection of colors in a hat the other day, will not be the one presented. In the chapeaux that are fashioned entirely of ribbons this caution cannot be too strongly borne in mind, for Madame La Mode beams bountifully upon the chapeau that displays several shadings and colorings in ribbon for its chief attraction.

New Treatment of the Sailor Shape

Here a pale lilac sailor in a fine chip straw is trimmed with roses that run the gamut of natural shades, from a pale pink into a rich, deep red Jacqueminot. There is a deep bandeau on the left side that tilts the hat high, and this is covered with a perfect conservatory of the vari-colored roses, with velvet maidenhair fern and some dark green velvet ribbon for relief. The crown is encircled with a sparse rose wreath, some grasses in the odd brown tones that these assume in nature being beautifully reproduced, and just a spray or two of heliotrope tucked in here and there completes the color harmony. Two fluffy ostrich plumes start from the bandeau at the left side, the tip of one curling up over the brim to the crown, and the other wending its curly way to the low coiffure in the back, over which a coiffure hair net has been deftly drawn.

One of the Flaring Double Shapes.

The vogue of the new double shapes is one that must be seen to be appreciated. There is something distinctly smart in the flaring lines, and they do afford a scope for originality that is lacking elsewhere. White malines and a white horsehair braid are cleverly used in the chapeau illustrated, which is on this double order. The upper section follows the flare of the lower, except that it is turned sharply upward on the right side to display a pink cabbage rose tucked in on the lower brim. The left side is turned up abruptly and faced with billowy folds of malines and another big pink rose with just a spray or two of foliage is deftly perched here. The back sets close to the shape of the head, and a big splashing bow of white satin ribbon rests flatly on the crown.

Of Ribbon, Roses and a Shaded Plume.

The hat that is fashioned entirely of ribbons is tremendously fashionable. The one illustrated shows a frame covered with a raspberry tinted straw, and on this little crush roses in several shades of the same colored ribbon are sewn, these covering the straw, except for occasional glimpses. The edge of the brim is bound with velvet of a deeper tint, and the under brim faced with framboise chiffon is banded at intervals with velvet folds. The shape is one of the recent successors to the long popular shepherdess, the crown fitting comfortably to the head, and the brim showing a graceful, though slight dip in front. Two long plumes, shading from the faintest pink into the deepest raspberry tone, are posed in the back, the quill ends being thrust through the roses on the crown and then falling flat over the brim to the hair behind.

Quilled Ribbon and a Wreath of Roses.

In this instance a wire frame is covered with quilled pale blue satin ribbon, the quilling done in the center and following a side-pleated effect. The sailor shape is the one chosen, and the under brim is faced with a heavy shirred white chiffon, with a lace edge turned up to the top brim. A wreath of roses, shading from a pale blue to the deep old porcelain shade, and with foliage running from a faint green to the rich copper tone that is observed in hothouse rose foliage, passes carelessly from side to side across the front. A bandeau in front gives the hat that very becoming tilt down over the face, and this is covered with a drapery of lace-edged chiffon disposed after a handkerchief effect.

Smart Little Flat Shape.

In this chapeau one of the latest and most youthful conceits in millinery is displayed. A flat brim sailor furnishes the motif, this covered with a plisse horsehair braid in a dead tone of white. The crown is shallow and the brim wide. The underfacing is of folds of mousseline loosely tacked to the brim. A deep bandeau is tucked in at the left side of the back, this giving a very odd tilt to the shape, and on this a long plume is wreathed. The crown is simply encircled with a twist of white satin ribbon, with a simple loop knot on the side.

A Bendel Lace Hat.

Black chantilly lace is cleverly combined with embroidered chiffon pear-shaped motifs in the making of this picturesque hat. The lace is ruffled over the crown and the brim, the edge falling in curtain fashion along the brim, but supported at close intervals by the wire frame. The under brim displays the embroidered chiffon motifs—these, too, held by the loops of black silk wire that form the frame. The crown is encircled with a thick wreath, made of black satin ribbon loops, this mounted upon a wire so that it may readily be bent to the desired shape. Under the brim a spray of wistaria in the natural violet tones is posed; and long black satin ribbon strings depend from the back of the hat and are carelessly drawn around to the front, but are not tied under the chin.

The latest things in sunshades have tops as flat as a Chinese paper umbrella. The stick is long and made to fold up so that it may readily be packed into the ordinary trunk, or even into a suit case. Crystal handles, exquisitely cut, are the latest fashionable extravagance in this direction.

Some Dainty Fixings and Furbishings.

There is a wealth of the daintiest things in all of those small fixings and furbishings that go so far toward making a smart appearance.

The knowledge of what's what in these amounts almost to a cult; and scarcely a day passes that some new and fascinating novelty is not presented in these.

The amount of money that one can invest in collar and cuff sets alone would make the uninitiated stare. And, incidentally, the best tailors are making up the plain linen and madras shirtwaists with just a plain band at throat and wrist, to which one buttons on the stiff linen collars and cuffs that are having such an extended vogue in Paris. Over here the smart people who keep in touch with all that is new and novel in fads and fashions are just beginning to wear them.

The collars are but medium high, and the front and back fastenings are about equally favored. The foldover collar is shown with all sorts of dainty stitcheries to mitigate its severity of outline. There are rows of hemstitching, one, two or three of them; there are the daintiest little sprays done in the solid French embroidery; and quite a fad it is to have one's favorite flower so embroidered. And then there are others with petit pois or polka dots heavily embroidered in groups, straight lines, diamonds, and a hit-or-miss pattern that looks like no pattern at all, but rather as though one has just sprinkled them at random over the fine linen.

The cuffs to these sets are far different from the plain and conventional lines that shape the collars. Usually the cuff is a down-turned one; and the more irregular the outline the better the style. Those that turn back from a straight band are in high favor, too, and the edges of these are deeply scalloped and buttonholed.

There is quite a strong demand for colored handkerchiefs of the sheerest linen batiste to match the filmy frocks of the summer time. In all of the rose and the raspberry shades there are charming trifles, with or without a lace edge whipped on by hand. All of the mauve and violet tints, the blues, and some new sulphur and copper shades are all well represented; and even a soft pearl gray with a violet border is meeting with considerable favor.

It is quite evident that the jewelers expect that this will be a collarless summer, for they have prepared the most distractingly lovely things in collars of filigree silver and of wrought gold that are a temptation to look upon. Those in silver follow the classical Maltese and East Indian designs, and are intended to be clasped close around the throat, taking the place of the usual collar of the gown. Sometimes there is a festoon effect of fine chains that center in the front, where a jewel or a section of the collar design acts as a pendant.

In the bead necklaces of various origin the several strands that pass through rhinestone slides are shown in quite a number of new designs. Crystal rondels are often employed to separate the beads, and when these are in turquoise or coral the effect is an extremely pretty one.

Those dainty little metal slides that have a jeweled stud at either end are now to be had at almost any notion counter. They are intended to be thrust through the transparent collars of lace and to hold them in shape during wear. For all of the other collars, though, nothing more generally satisfactory than the featherbone strips has so far been found, and doubtless these will continue to be used indefinitely.

In many of the summer frocks the lingerie petticoat will be expected to do double duty—once as a petticoat and again as a drop skirt as well. When such double service is demanded of it a smart idea is to run some of that featherbone cording—it comes encased in a strong crinoline—into the hem. This withstands all the assaults of the laundry without splitting and cracking, and it will keep the dress skirts from assuming the skimpy lines that even the fullest of the sheer organdies, batistes, nets, dotted Swisses and such will sometimes assume in the summer time, and especially when the humidity is rampant and the thermometer soaring toward the top notch.

Silk is undeniably warm when once the dog days heave in sight, and even those most devoted to silk petticoats and silk linings are fain to find some substitute that will afford all the grace and style of silk, but without its heating qualities. Some of the best dressmakers are fashioning special petticoats of colored linen or of mohair. These are carefully fitted at the top, and a large variety of flounings, some of them exquisitely trimmed, are made to fasten on, so that they can be removed instanter. Either buttons and buttonholes or else the snap fasteners are employed.

Frills of Fashion.

The Greek key design is manipulated in a host of various ways, simple and intricate. In velvet, either ribbon or bias piece strips, it is used, and a tiny tight quilling of either a silk or a gauze ribbon is used to define the pattern.

Swansdown is coming back into fashionable favor after a long period of neglect. Some very smart short boas are shown in this; and there are charming evening capes in henrietta and the like that are edged all around with this white fluffy fur.

Charming little short coats, full and loose, are shown for evening wear at the mountain or seashore resorts. These are of the godet pattern and unlined. In soft cashmeres and henriettas they come in all the delicate tints; and the sleeve is so loose that one can readily thrust even the fluffiest dress sleeve through it without fear of crushing.

The touch of velvet trimming appears on even the linen frocks that are destined to receive their periodic cleansing at the laundress' rather than at the dry cleaner's. The best shops are showing these in separable shape, smart buttons being sewn on the coat and the necessary buttonholes for attachment made in the velvet collar and cuffs.

The latest things in robe frocks show tiny checks in mohair, the soft, silky chiffon finish prevailing, and the border is in a plaid of the same tones. In these the skirt follows the circular mode, the fitting to be accomplished by pleating over the hips; and there is a shawl suggestion in the pattern for the bodice and the sleeves, which is further emphasized in some of them by a rather ragged fringe for a finish at the edge.

Fringes have come to the front in some several and unexpected ways. It is chiefly the very short fringes that are employed; and there are some gowns in embroidered voile that show flounces deeply scalloped and edged with a short bobby fringe. Some in old blue are embroidered in ragged sailors, and the fringe has been dyed to match. In the new Tahiti robes the fringe is either self-color or in ecru, and white fringes are seen on a multitude of colored gowns.

The vogue of the ribbon frock is one that is making a perfect furore for itself. There are some charming ones on a square-meshed white or ecru net almost entirely covered with graduated rows of coral or of turquoise velvet ribbons. Less popular, but vastly becoming to the right girl, are the frocks in sulphur yellow velvet ribbons, and mustard yellow—moutarde anglaise, or English mustard, the Parisiennes term it—is another recent comer. Some pretty ones are shown in which several shades of green are employed, and the rose tones are similiarly treated. The lighter tints are at the top, the color deepening from the shoulder to the feet.

Painted or Varnished Floors

May be kept in good condition by wiping with a damp cloth and then rubbing with a dry woolen cloth. This, of course, is for floors that do not get badly soiled. Kitchen or pantry floors may be washed with skim milk; if very dirty, with soap and water. A scrubbing brush should never be used on a painted or varnished floor.

Cocoa Stains on Table Linen

May be removed with oxalic acid when boiling water fails. Spread the stained part on a plate and pour on it a little hot acid. Rub gently with a soft brush. When the stain disappears, rinse the article in plenty of cold water and then in ammonia water to neutralize the acid. A tablespoonful of ammonia to two quarts of water will be the right proportion.

Plymouth, England, [illegible] — Dear reader—reader as dear as a very brief acquaintance can justify—where are you going this summer?

Are you going anywhere?

Why don't you bravely put your foot in the road?

Why don't you tuck your wife under your arm and come to Europe?

It isn't the impossible thing you imagine—not at all. What will it cost in time, money and effort?

Come, sit down; let us talk it over, measure the conditions and find out if it is even difficult.

Here we are in a stupendous ship. One of those whic' is a mastodon and greyhound in one, floating and panting opposite the great Eddystone Lighthouse that has furnished the world for generations with narratives of tragedy and disaster, and persistently held up its gleaming torch to light the imperilled to safety. We are a little less than six days from New York. Before night we shall be gently spilled overboard and carried to Plymouth—old Plymouth—revered Plymouth—Grandmother Plymouth—whence the Mayflower set sail for Boston Harbor on September 6, 1620. Here William of Orange landed and was first proclaimed king. Here the English fleet started to encounter the Invincible Armada, and Spain was done to a turn. Here was witnessed the departure of Sir Francis Drake's expeditions of discovery and piracy. This is Devonshire, where browse the red droves of comely cattle. Drake seems to have been a merry rover, for here where he lived he was nicknamed "the fellow-traveler of the sun," when he started out from the mouth of the Plym.

I feel a good deal as Sir Francis felt, barring the piracy. I love to travel, and it is wholly harmonious with my mood that I have been commissioned by you to make a comprehensive tour of Europe, and report to you how cheaply and comfortably it can be done. I say comfortably without hesitation, for the mammoth proportions of our latest steamers enable them to sit upon the waves without rocking or pitching, and the passenger need not be seasick unless he declines the services of a bromide prophylactic, which any prudent physician can prescribe.

Not only comfortably, I say, but cheaply; for a part of the service these letters will render will be to show the methods whereby the tour of Europe can be made with little more expense than staying at home.

I need not say that there are dead loads of fun on the passage over, for in a week close and valuable acquaintances are made and a good many of the passengers act like boys just let out of school. I went on deck this morning and found that the betting mania which had manifested itself strongly for four days had grown into a frenzy of finance. A score of passengers were seated in a circle on deck hotly and vociferously discussing the contingencies of landing. In the luxurious smoking-room were other groups gathered about tables in a cloud of smoke watching piles of gold and silver and something they called "chips" in the center of each table, uttering strange mystic cries, solemnly dealing more cards and occasionally raking in the little piles of exposed specie. Their faces were white and unsullied by the sun. But the group on deck wore upon their noses the hectic flush of solar blandishment, and each one was shedding skin enough to make a pocketbook. When a steamer lands it is not difficult to guess the different diversions of the passengers, because each ardent poker player bears aloft a blanched and undecorated prow.

But there are other ways. Here sit the ruby revelers on deck—staid folk from New York, Boston, Vicksburg and Oshkosh—railroad men, merchants, doctors, ministers, drummers, professors, fighting time with a new diversion. Most of them have English money in their pockets.

"I'll bet a guinea," says a stout and jolly doctor from Cincinnati, "that the number of the pilot boat at Plymouth is an even number."

The challenge is instantly snapped up by a little man in spectacles walking nervously up and down the deck, and they exchange cards. The little man adds: "A pound to a shilling that the pilot doesn't wear a silk hat." This is discussed by nearly all in the group, and finally, it being thought that the odds are not great enough, the bet is made two pounds to a shilling.

"What'll you bet he doesn't wear a swallow-tail coat and white necktie?" put in a man in a red fez. But this is thought too preposterous and is not insisted upon.

The mania is contagious. The bets that have been made every day since we started concerning the daily run do not seem [illegible] something more exhilarating is demanded. Bets are now made in rapid succession from a shilling to a pound that the pilot is married, that he will have his pantaloons tucked into the tops of his boots, that he will have red hair, that he will be possessed of five children (at the time of meeting the vessel), that he will wear a tarpaulin hat, that he will carry an umbrella, that he will step on the ladder with his left foot first.

"I'll bet two dollars even," says a theatrical manager who has been making obeisance to Neptune most of the way and who has not learned the new language of finance, "that the pilot doesn't wear any socks or undershirt." Even this queer bet finds a taker.

"Let's bet on the number of his boots," says a wealthy manufacturer languidly.

"I'll bet a guinea he has two," says the facetious president of a railroad company.

"I'll bet," exclaims a fresh young collegian, "that you'll find out the size and weight of his boots when you try to verify some of your other bets." [Laughter.]

"Let's bet on his name," suggests a reckless young fellow with a nose like a full blown rose.

"I'll bet," said a lady in a yellow rug, turning softly in her steamer chair and wearily lifting her head from her pillow, "that this pilot's name is Pontius."

And so they went on, hour by hour, while the low-lying lilac band in the distance broadened and deepened in contour and color, and the vessels we had passed faded away to the west and the big gulls, harbingers of land, came out and greeted the great ship, flitting before it like heralds and dashing joyfully after it in a silver train.

So presently we come to Plymouth, where Archbishop Laud fixed his eye upon the prayerful insubordinates and exclaimed to them, like an earlier Greeley, "Go West, young man, go West!" And presently we shall be tossed ashore in a little steamboat, and as the plump dames climb timidly down the ladder they will doubtless sing out to the men who have already descended, "Remember Lot's wife!" This whole Devonshire district has made an important mark in the world's history, aside from the Pilgrims and the Dutch William who in 1688 "with Mary came on." Right here at Torbay the whole British Navy dressed in mourning and set its flags at half-mast in 1799 on hearing of the death of George Washington. A little ways in the country is Stonehenge, that marvelous collection of great rocks on end where the Druids held their mystical worship and auto da fe. At Exeter, Bath and Wells, Salisbury and Glastonbury Cathedrals and London your scribe will gather curious materials for his next letter.

Meantime let us discuss the ways and means of travel. In the first place, don't come to Europe for the mere sake of doing something that is considered fashionable. Don't come at all unless you know enough to need the experience. And you do not know enough if you are ignorant of geography and history. Thousands come to Europe every year who ought never to leave their native shores. To travel without intelligent interests or definite purpose—nothing can be drearier or more idiotic. An Athenian said to Socrates, "Phædrus has been abroad, but they say he has returned none the wiser."

"Of course!" exclaimed the philosopher, "for he took himself along with him!"

"I'm tired to death of this," said an American tourist in Switzerland, "and I wish to the land sakes I was home." He yawned and turned to his wife, sitting on the other end of the bench in the park, and added, "Haven't we been in this town about long enough, Mary? Why don't we go to Lucerne?"

"Henry!" exclaimed the good wife of the wealthy wandered—"Henry, this is Lucerne!"

A good many such men come to Europe, not because they wish to come, or because they need to come, but because they are badgered by their wives and daughters into following the fashion and keeping in the swim. They are not likely to learn much, and they bring home with them the opinion which they carried away—that traveling is tedious business, and especially that the United States surpasses all other nations in every respect, and that we have the best of everything, the biggest of everything, and that we can never learn anything of anybody. Of course, this is a lamentable and preposterous mistake.

Americans who come to Europe generally spend about twice as much money as they need to, because they do not know how to travel. Our countrymen, as a rule, are extravagant, self-indulgent and wasteful. To show the readers of your paper how to see Europe thoroughly and cheaply will be one chief object of this series of letters, for the writer has had unusual opportunities for presenting the subject in its various phases and from every point of view. We shall see what the mountains and rivers look like, what the cities and towns look like, shall visit modern palaces and tumble-down castles, but most of our time will be spent studying the people themselves and finding out how they live and what they talk about, and what are their hopes and fears, their needs and aspirations.

Many people who have money enough and information enough to make a European trip to advantage are detained and deterred by the mistaken notion that they would encounter serious difficulties in making themselves understood. This was true 50 years ago. But times have changed. English is now spoken at almost every railroad station and hotel in Europe outside of Russia and Turkey, at half of the boarding-houses, restaurants and stores, by Alpine guides and French Jehus and Roman vetturinos and Venetian gondoliers and the universal stagedriver—or something that is sufficiently like English to make a courier or even a valet de place quite unnecessary. Yet it should be added that a traveler will save something—say 5 per cent. of his expenses—if he will buy Baedeker's little "Conversation Book" for 75 cents, and commit to memory a hundred phrases of the language of the country he is about to visit. The cost? That depends on the degree of luxury required. If the tourist goes for sight-seeing and wishes to see all that it is possible to see in a given number of weeks—say 10 weeks—let him by all means join one of the Conducted Parties that are being organized and sent off every month under the shadow of Trinity Church, New York. Forty or fifty of these aggregations go off every year, and to join one of them saves a lot of time and worry. They are quite luxurious and rather expensive, costing $5 to $8 a day for each passenger; but they see everything that is visible and get all that they go for.

Some exclaim, "O, I wouldn't join that caravan if I never went! To be dragged through a cast-iron schedule, obliged to go where the others do whether I wish to or not—no, sir; not for me! And doesn't the 'conducted' procession look too grotesque!"

But there are compensations. "Conducted" members, if in reasonable health, see three times as much in a given time as any other tourists. They do not rush, but they do not dawdle. They do not sacrifice health, but they do not cling to their bedroom because it looks cloudy. If summoned to assemble at 9 o'clock in the drawing-rooms of the Grand Hotel in Paris, the conductor—a local connoisseur—meets them and makes this little speech: "Ladies and gentlemen, we go to visit the Louvre today. If it rains we will be under roof. This superb palace covers 48 acres, has 15 miles of galleries and possesses 70,000 pictures and works of art. At least 1,000 of these we ought to see; 100 of them we must see and get at least a glimpse of them this day. Fall in!" He leads them directly to these supreme art treasures. If traveling unconducted, these Cookies or Clarkies could not see one-fifth as much in a given time as is now pointed out to them by this skilled and accomplished exhibitor. If they have five days in Paris, two of those days are theirs to use without the conductor, to see what they please and to "catch up" if they have been obliged to forego any of the daily trips.

The tourist can travel by rail, by stage, by private carriage, by bicycle or on foot. A ride by brake in Scotland or by diligence in the Alpine regions is among the most exhilarating and delightful of human experiences, especially if the traveler, by payment of an extra shilling, obtains a reserved seat in the "coupe," "banquette" or "imperial," perched so high above the road as to overlook the landscape. For a person who is not timid, there is nothing more stimulating or agreeable short of a dash through mountain scenery standing by the engineer in the cab of a locomotive.

Perhaps the ideal way to see Europe is to travel with Vanderbilt behind you, an automobile beneath you and eternity before you. But some of us do not possess those advantages and are compelled to husband our resources, both of money and time. For all such I write.

On shipboard are various methods of entertainment. Out on deck the favorite is skittles, in marine language "shuffleboard," consisting of prodding a soft pine pancake with the end of a soft pine pudding-stick and making it knock other pancakes out of place. You wouldn't suppose such pugnacious play could stimulate the tender sentiment, but it does, and the steward assures me that not only trip-long flirtations, but life-long marriages have resulted from throwing beanbags. Of course there is music in the music-room and cards, cribbage and dominoes in the drawing-room.

Marconi's representative, in a little cubby-hole in the bow, is having fun all by himself. The battery crackled to him a weird good-by as we slid out of touch 200 miles from Sconset, on old Nantucket, and for four days thereafter he swung his electric finger all around the sky with great eagerness, hoping, as he said to your correspondent, to "catch some ship in the trap." But we have curved so far south to avoid the flock of icebergs sailing down from Baffin's Bay, that we were without news or contact. He uses 45,000 volts—about eight amperes. It may not illuminate the mathematical mystery much to say that 10 amperes multiplied by 10 volts equal 100 watts. The two poles of the battery manifest the current by an explosion like the continuous creation and extinction of an arc light, and the noise like the crack of a rifle. Two boxes are set to time and tune, and the 16 volts of the storage battery are reinforced from the engines of the ship. It will scarcely make the explanation comprehensible to add that volt is capacity and ampere is quality.

pathize with and help Japan. Russia may be hopelessly defeated, and we shall then have peace for just exactly the time that Japan requires to thoroughly organize the millions of China.

"At this very moment Japanese statesmen are controlling the government of China. Japanese officers have outlined, and are ready to carry out, the plans which are to make China a great military power—a terrible tool in the hands of the ambitious Japanese government. Every officer in the Chinese General Staff has received his military training in Tokio, and has imbibed admiration for the Japanese and hatred of Europeans. The Japanese are organizing China as Moltke organized Germany. The war has shown the Japanese to be magnificent strategists and tacticians, and, with the countless millions of China at their disposal, they will, in a few years, be able to put a Chinese-Japanese army in the field, which the combined powers of Europe and America will be unable to crush. Men, whose clear minds have scented the coming danger, have been unable to give positive facts, but now we have them. The reports of our Governor General are full of details. They will give full information about uniforms and arms and equipment of the great Chinese Army which is being created, and the white race cannot afford to make light of the [illegible]

French Fear "Yellow Peril."

The official report made by the Governor General of French Indo-China, that the Chinese government is organizing a vast modern army, which, in a few years, will number more than a million men, has caused great anxiety. Never has the "yellow peril" been more widely discussed than now. Leading men of all parties are strongly advising that France actively assist her ally, Russia, in the Far East to crush Japan, on the ground that the latter's power is endangering the world's peace.

"France could render no greater service to the world than by sending out a strong squadron to co-operate with Admiral Rojestvensky," says a prominent French leader. "Sooner or later we shall have to fight the Japanese in self-defense, and it would be better if these yellow upstarts were crushed now, than to have them choose their own time for attacking us. If Europe and America continue to sym-
