Leaders say they still want agreement

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The White House today welcomed Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's promise not to abandon negotiations to curb nuclear arms and dismissed as "expected and unexceptional" his criticism of President Reagan's stand at the Iceland summit.

Reagan and Gorbachev blamed each other Tuesday for the summit stalemate over "Star Wars" but offered reassurances of their determination to reverse the nuclear arms race at the bargaining table or at a future summit.

Offering the U.S. view of the Soviet leader's comments, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration was pleased that "General Secretary Gorbachev stated that the work that was done in Reykjavik will not go to waste and the way has now been cleared for further movement toward significant arms reduction. This is the view of the United States.

"We believe we can go forward from this moment in a businesslike way," Speakes said, reflecting the administration's determination to paint the summit outcome in optimistic terms rather than dwell on its failure to produce any agreement.

"We, like the general secretary, believe that the meeting overcame obstructions and minute details and that new approaches have been developed," Speakes said. "We believe there is no going back on what was developed at this meeting and we look forward to continued negotiations which will build on the progress achieved at Reykjavik."

Without directly referring to Gorbachev's charge that Reagan had demonstrated a lack of courage and political will at Iceland, Speakes said, "We take note of some of the political rhetoric in General Secretary Gorbachev's speech, but that was expected and unexceptional. What was remarkable was the general secretary's explanation of the progress made."

New instructions will be drafted for U.S. negotiators in Geneva "to try to capitalize on the gains Reagan and Gorbachev made toward curbing offensive weapons before their Reykjavik talks dissolved Sunday into disagreement over the U.S. anti-missile program."

And Secretary of State George Shultz announced Tuesday he will leave for Vienna on Nov. 5 to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze during a 35-nation review of the 1975 Helsinki agreement, which was designed to ease East-West tensions in Europe. Shultz said his intention was to reopen the summit discussions.

Much in store for sister city visitors

By FRANK TROMBLEY

The key to the city presented by Mayor Carroll Thomas to Dongying Mayor Tang Shenghai when he arrived at Midland Regional Airport Tuesday opened the door to a virtual whirlwind, six-day schedule of activities laid out for the seven-member delegation from Midland's Chinese Sister City.

The Dongying delegation's first day in the area included lunch and a tour of the Petroleum Museum.

Mayor Tang and his delegation later went to Odessa to take part in the parade that kicked off the 1986 Permian Basin Oil Show.

The parade included high school bands from Midland and Odessa, as well as a variety of floats.

Tang and members of the Dongying delegation, some wearing cowboy hats, sat on the backs of seats in three convertibles and waved to those who jammed the line of march from East Texas and 3rd street until they left the parade about 17th Street to return to Midland where they were guests of honor at an outdoor barbecue hosted by Chris Scharbauer at his ranch south of the city.

Arriving at the ranch from Odessa Tang and members of the delegation donned cowboy hats and mounted Scharbauer horses to have their pictures taken.

Today's activities got under way with breakfast at Midland College and a tour of the school's facilities.

The rest of the morning was to be devoted to an oil and gas forum in the Midland College Lecture Hall, with four members of the Dongying delegation involved in the oil industry meeting with local counterparts to explain the charateristics and needs of the developing petroleum industry in China.

Tang and remaining delegation members were scheduled to tour city facilities, including the water purification plant north of town.

Following a scheduled "working luncheon" at the Petroleum Club hosted by Rod Dameron, the delegation was to again split up with petroleum experts scheduled to tour Ortlofff Engineering, Vest Exploration and Orion Limited, while those members of the Chinese delegation involved in city planning meet with administrators for briefings on various municipal facilities.

Oil prices still falling as OPEC talks drag on

New York Times
News Service

GENEVA, Switzerland — Oil prices continued to decline Tuesday as OPEC ministers struggled through a weary ninth day of talks, trying to devise a price-support plan.

The conferees are under severe pressure to reach an agreement after Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, two of the organization's biggest producers, issued formal appeals for a permanent production and pricing program to replace the present temporary pact agreed upon in August.

Oil experts say failure by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to reach an agreement would probably accelerate a price drop amid the global oversupply.

In London, the price of North Sea Brent crude oil for November delivery fell 45 cents at the market opening, to $13.65 a barrel.

Production of oilfield explosives resumes at Cleburne GOEX plant

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Production of oilfield explosives resumed without interruption today at the GOEX plant where two men died in an accidental blast on Tuesday afternoon.

Wayne Mercer, a spokesman for the GOEX parent company, Pengo Industries, said "it was production as usual today. The accident was confined to one building and did not damage the production area."

GOEX president David Levey and a co-worker, DeLord Mabry, 63, died in a explosion at about 4:45 p.m. Tuesday. Mercer said they were experimenting with a new explosive at the time of the blast.

"It was a special project related to the development of a new product that was not petroleum related," said Mercer. "It involved the use of black powder, but I can't describe it beyond that."

Parents stir discussion of drug policy

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The war against drugs in Midland schools has parents battling on opposite sides over a new policy that governs drug, alcohol and tobacco use by students on a 24-hour basis.

A grassroots parent organization Tuesday asked the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees to reconsider and amend a new ruling for drug, alcohol and tobacco use as it pertains to students in extracurricular activities.

The board studied the request, but took no official action on the matter.

While some parents say they are concerned about the use and abuse of chemicals by Midland students, they also say they believe the method in which trustees have chosen to solve the problem is unconstitutional and will cause problems if it is enforced.

Others say the rule gives children an excuse to say "no" to drugs.

"This state is ready, at last, to eradicate drug use in our society," parent Becky Hardy said. "Some of our kids already have used the consequences as an excuse to say no."

But Elisa Garibay told trustees "I will not let you come into my home, or to the mall, or to the movies and discipline my child."

The ruling invokes penalities ranging from three-hour work details for possession of tobacco products on the first offense to various suspensions fro possession or use of drugs and alcohol.

The policy includes offenses that occur during school-related and nonschool-related activities.

The penalties accrue from the beginning of the student's participation in junior and senior high school activities.

Parents were asked to sign a document indicating they had read and understood the consequences students face if they violate the policy.

But spokesman Roy Marshall said he won't sign the document.

"I take offense that it was put to me this way," he said.

Marshall said disciplining children who use chemicals is a family matter and not the school board's responsibility.

Parent Shirley Hodges told trustees she fears the rule as it pertains to nonschool-related activities takes the job of raising children away from the parents and places it in the hands of school authorities.

"We as parents resent that, in your trying to do good, you put your foot in our door.

"If we don't fight this now, it will be something else later on," she said.

Mrs. Hodges said she would be willing to lend her "financial and moral support to anyone who would be interested in putting this (policy) to a test."

Lower SAT average reflects increase in students tested

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A record number of Midland high school seniors taking the Scholastic Aptitude Test this year contributed to lower combined verbal and math scores, school officials said Tuesday.

Midland Independent School District's average combined verbal and math score was 886 compared to 906 a year ago.

Dr. Lamar Hebert, assistant superintendent for instructional services, said a larger percentage of 1986 seniors took the test than in 1985, having a significant impact on the districtwide score.

The College Board, which administers the SAT, historically has reported that the higher the percentage of students taking the test, the lower the average score.

Hebert said 45 percent of all Midland seniors took the SAT compared to 38 percent in 1985 — the largest percentage since 1972.

Hebert said preliminary analysis also indicated a significant number of students who took this year's examination were below-average students.

Hebert speculated that new National Collegiate Athletic Association eligibility requirements caused some students who otherwise would not take the test to do so.

He said the districtwide score fell by one point for each student whose combined verbal and math score was 800. About 27 MISD students scored below the 600 mark.

Although Hebert said he was disappointed with the districtwide score, he added that students who rank in the top 10 percent of their graduating classes scored significantly higher than their counterparts a year ago.

MISD students in the top 10 percent of their respective classes score 1,105 points compared to 1,079 in 1985.

Shop eases way for those who've never pawned

HOUSTON (AP) — The owner of a city pawn shop has installed a drive-in window so his well-heeled customers won't be embarrassed to hock valuables as they cope with the devastating oil slump.

"The first thing they tell you is that they've never been in a pawn shop before," owner Jean Davis says his customers at Diamond Liquidators.

Davis said he installed the window about six weeks ago and is believed to be the only pawn shop in the city with a drive-in window. His business also is one of the few places in Houston that will pick a customer up in a black stretch limousine free of charge and drive them to the shop, Davis said.

"We have a lot of upper-class people with money problems, people who need to sell some of their jewelry or art or whatever quickly," he says. "We try to make them feel comfortable here, and not intimidate them."

One oilman hocked his Rolex President watch to make a late house payment to avoid foreclosure, Davis said.

A middle-aged unemployed man in a Mercedes needed $1,000 in cash to take his sick child to the hospital, so he pawned a $35,000 bronze statue, Davis said.

Business has been brisk since an oil-related recession hit Houston, and Davis said he is thinking of opening five new shops.

His store now is stocked with paintings by famous artists, ancient vases that cost more than a new car and top-of-the-line watches.

About 80 percent of Davis' clients pick up their hocked items within three months.

Campaigns trade interesting charges

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements Tuesday denounced his opponent for "prevarication in the pulpit," strongly denying allegations that he supports steep cuts in social services.

Campaign aides to incumbent Democratic Gov. Mark White, who issued the charges in eight black Fort Worth churches Sunday and in a series of new television advertisements, maintained that Clements' own statements back up the budget cuts the governor attributed to him.

"In the course of those discussions from the pulpit he (White) made such rash and without-foundation statements that I would take eyeglasses away from the poor, that I would eliminate warm or hot meels on wheels, that I would close nursing homes and put the elderly out on the streets, and that I would close Prairie View (A&M University) and Texas Southern University and that I would cut the budget for public education and higher education," Clements told reporters Tuesday.

"If there ever was an example of prevarication in the pulpit, this is a classic example," the former governor said. "I want the record to show that I categorically deny all of those statements that he made."

Clements responded by reeling off a list of $121.1 million in health and human services budget cuts that White proposed to the special legislative session in August. "I will suggest to you that in every instance he had not talked to the agencies or the departments or the commissions," he added.

White campaign spokesman Mark McKinnon said the governor developed the comments in the church speeches and the ads by interpreting Clements' public comments concerning the budget, including his assertion that the agency heads should rank the importance of programs to be cut. "These figures were arrived at from the impact statements from those agencies where they'd be impacted from that level cut," McKinnon said. "That's nonsense, that's nonsense," Clements replied. "I have never made such statements, and I categorically deny it, and I want you to quote me on that."

During the course of Tuesday's press conference, Clements said: "I have not looked at the budget in specifics on any cuts. What I have said is that all of the programs in every agency and department should be categorized and prioritized by the executive director and the board of that particular agency. ... And then start at the bottom of the list and do one of three things: either curtail the program, cut it back somewhat; or merge the program with an overlapping, duplicating agency; and//or eliminate the program. So you have three options."

Later, when told of White's rationale for the alleged cuts, Clements added: "I said I would request and insist that within 10 days they put on my desk a list of their priorities. I didn't say my priorities and I didn't say I'd go by 'em either. I don't want to be misquoted. I said that is the methodology that should be observed. There's a vast difference."

He repeated his assertion that White appointees to boards and commissions told him the governor suggested budget cuts to the Legislature without consulting them. He would not name them, saying, "That's privileged information."

White's budget director Bill Hamilton said the governor sought the agencies' comments about the spending reductions he recommended. "To the extent that we could, we tried to consult with the agencies about what we were proposing," Hamilton said.

Reagan resumes campaign

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Reagan returned to the campaign trail today with a blistering attack on the "tax and tax, spend and spend crowd" in Congress and a prediction of Republican victory in the Nov. 4 election.

In a speech prepared for delivery on behalf of Linda Chavez, the former White House aide who is the GOP candidate for senator in Maryland, Reagan made no mention of the Iceland summit from which he returned three days ago.

Instead, he lambasted the Democratic candidate in the race, Rep. Barbara Mikulski, as a "wily liberal opponent who still talks like federal spending is the answer to just about every problem."

"The last thing America needs is another liberal senator congenitally unable to say 'no' to the special interest groups," the president said. "This November I predict the voters all over this country, including Maryland, are going to give thumbs-down to the last remnants of the tax and tax, spend and spend crowd — sending them the way of the Edsel, the hula hoop and the all-asparagus diet."

Election of Ms. Mikulski to the Senate, he said, "could well give control of that august body to the over the-hill gang that gave our country murderous inflation, sky-high interest rates, business decline, ever-increasing taxes and swelling unemployment."

"Does anyone really want to go back to those bad old days?" he asked.

Republicans won control of the Senate in 1980, when Reagan was first elected, ending a quarter century of dominance by the Democrats. The GOP now holds control by a margin of 53-47 and is fighting a vigorous Democratic challenge.

"This is a make-or-break election," the president said. "Losing control of the Senate will mean more than just economic hardship for our people. The safety of our neighborhoods and the security of our country are also at stake."

He said Ms. Mikulski "can't even get herself to vote for a limited use of the death penalty for certain drug-related murders" and has opposed the B-1 bomber, the MX missile, nuclear modernization in Europe and modernization of conventional armed forces.

He called Ms. Chavez "part of a team that has been rebuilding America's strength" and said she could "be counted on to support the appointment of tough law-and-order judges."

"Linda's opponent actually voted against military aid to the fledgling democracy in El Salvador," he added. "Had her view held sway, the people of El Salvador might be under the heel of a Communist dictatorship right now, the rest of Central America, perhaps even Mexico, might be in turmoil, and a flood of refugees could well be headed toward our southern border."

As for the summit, candidates and leaders in both parties are being cautious about assessing the political impact of the Iceland summit.

Although there was some Democratic criticism of Reagan's leadership at the meeting, most from the party passed up any effort to make political capital of the failure to reach arms control agreements.

However, Russ Hale told trustees parents need all the help they can get in fighting drug abuse at home and in the schools.

"If a child is going to get drunk or do drugs, they're not going to be a hero," he said. "There comes a time when we have to put our action in line with what our words are saying. This is not a question of rights. You are not infringing upon the rights of parents," he added.

In other action, trustees:

• Heard a review of the district's elementary science program.

• Approved the budget development schedule for 1986-87.

• Approved a request to use MISD buildings for the General Election on Nov. 4.

• Approved a request from the Templo La Biblia Abierta to rent the Midland High School Auditorium.

• Awarded bids for copy machines, chemistry equipment and telephone system at Midland High School and vehicles.

• Awarded a bid of $142,400 to Campbell & Coats of Midland to build the Midland High School Tennis complex.

• Approved a request from the Midland and Lee High School bands and orchestras to attend the Mountain States Music Festival in Tempe, Ariz.

• Renewed its contract with Custom Benefit Services Inc. for the Section 125 Program.

• Approved football game receipts.

• Approved bills payable, payroll and investments.

• Tabled a proposal from the Midland Crime Commission to establish a Crime Stoppers Program at Midland and Lee High Schools.

That group is scheduled to tour the sewage treatment facility east of the city late this afternoon.

Following a brief respite at the homes of host families the group is to attend an by-invitation-only dinner at the home of Dr. Patrick and Nancy Leung. China's Houston-based Consul General Ni Yaoli and his wife, Madam Zheng Mei Feng, both of whom were in Midland last May, will join the group for dinner and an evening of entertainment.

Following dinner, the Dongying delegation is to be taken to the Midland College Allison Fine Arts Center for performances of Ballet Midland, the Thouvenel String Quartet and the Midland College Chorale.

Ballet Midland is to perform "Adagietto," excerpts from "Pas de Quartre," and excerpts from "84 Riverside Drive." The Thouvenel Quartet is to present "Quartet in D major, Opus 20, No. 4," by Joseph Haydn.

Under the direction of Dr. Michael Jordan, the MC Chorale will perform "All That Hath Life and Breath," "Shut De Do," and a special song composed in China in honor of the Midland-Dongying Sister City relationship.

Additionally, an exhibit of 50 works of art by artists from the Dongying area arranged by Norma Webb will be on display at the Fine Arts Center.

A reception planned by Sarah and David Grimes follows the evening of entertainment, with Midland artists whose works have been sent for display in Dongying joinging the group.

Mayor Thomas and city council members recessed Tuesday's regular council session to greet the Chinese delegation as they arrived at Midland Regional Airport.

Thomas presented the a key to the city to Tang, saying he took pleasure in "officially welcoming you on behalf of all citizens of Midland-Odessa." The Midland mayor went on to say, "I hope they will have as much fun visiting us as we did visting them."

Thomas led a Midland-Odessa delegation of some 30 people to Dongying last June as a first step in initiation of the Sister City relationship.

Tang, accepting the key to the city, said he was "overwhelmed by the hospitality of the people of Midland on our arrival."

Describing the key a a symbol of friendship of the two cities, the Dongying mayor said he hoped it "will lead to greater understanding, friendship and cooperation" between the cities and their people.

A group of 13 children from the Discovery Daycare Center, ranging in age from 3 to 5 years of age, presented long-stemmed roses to each member of the Dongying delegation. Hattie Tennon, a teacher at the day-care center, led the children in songs welcoming the delegation.

During a brief news conference, Tang said the Dongying delegation was concerned about all phases of the oil business, particularly seismic and logging equipment.

Dick Dunbar, chairman of the Midland chamber's Dongying/Midland Sister City Committee, said those attending this morning's oil forum at Midland College would have an opportunity to present company, brochures and other product literature but there would be no time for "one-on-one" sales talks.

GOEX

Tuesday's accident was the fourth explosion involving death or injury at the GOEX plant since 1973.

The normal work day at GOEX ends at 3:30 p.m., said company vice president Phillip Lawson. There were only a few employees on company grounds when the explosion occurred, and there were no other injuries.

In a brief fire that followed the blast, two firefighters were injured slightly. They were treated and released from the Walls Hospital.

Mercer said GOEX currently is producing only explosives that are used for pipe perforation in oilfield drilling. He said the firm does no defense work.

Lawson said Levey was working on "a pet project of his that no one knew much about" at the time of explosion.

Normally the company works with explosives in a different area of the company compound about 200 yards from the workshop that was demolished Tuesday, said residents who live near the explosion site.

The company uses underground bunkers for testing explosives and normally sounds a horn before conducting a test, siad Cleburne police officer Norman Griffith.

Griffith said the plant only recently was incorporated into the city limits.

Area said they thought at first it was just another routine test.

OPEC

In New York futures trading, West Texas Intermediate closed at $14.60 a barrel, up 23 cents, after rising near the end of the day because of traders' short covering and a false rumor of an OPEC agreement.

A committee of three oil ministers — from Nigeria, Indonesia and the United Arab Emirates — spent the day canvassing delegates for suggestions about criteria for reapportioning members' output quotas under the overall OPEC production ceiling of 16.8 million barrels daily.

The committee is expected to present its findings to the full assembly of 13 ministers on Wednesday.

Assessments of the outlook for success varied widely. Some delegates said there was steady progress, but others said the conference appeared to be making little headway.

Delegates said there was broad agreement on roughly eight standards for setting production quotas.

Some of the proposed criteria, they said, are directly related to each country's oil output, such as proven oil reserves, production capacity and historic output levels, while others are related to its general economy, including foreign debt, population size and oil's proportionate share of the gross national product.

But there are sticking points, delegates added, over such issues as which periods to use in setting historic production levels and the weighting of individual criteria.

Some countries with relatively small populations, little debt and large oil reserves — such members include Saudi Arabia and Kuwait — favored a heavy weighting of oil-related criteria.

Other countries with large populations, much foreign debt and moderate oil reserves — notably Latin American members such as Venezuela and Ecuador — appeared to favor general economic criteria.

Two Americans among winners of Nobel chemistry, physics prizes

WORLD

PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Nobel Prizes in chemistry and physics were awareded today.

Two Americans and a Canadian professor today were awarded the 1986 Nobel Prize in chemistry for their research showing how basic chemical reactions take place.

The winners are Dudley R. Herschbach of Harvard University and Taiwan-born Yuan T. Lee of the University of California, and German-born Canadian professor John C. Polanyi of the University of Toronto.

The Swedish Academy of Sciences said their work had opened a new field of research in chemistry. The three will equally split a prize equivalent to $290,000.

Herschbach, Lee and Polanyi were given the chemistry award for research on the dynamics of chemical elementary processes which the Swedish Academy of Sciences said was of great importance in the development of reaction dynamics, a branch of chemistry.

The academy said Herschbach's research led to the possibility of detailed studies of chemical reactions by his development of directed and well-defined flows of molecules.

Lee, who initially worked in cooperation with Herschbach, took Herschbach's method further, using the process for studying important reactions for relatively large molecules, the academy said.

Polanyi developed a method of infrared chemiluminescence, in which extremely weak infrared emission from a newly formed molecule is measured and analysed. Chemiluminescence is a visible light produced by chemical reaction not accompanied by heat. The Swedish academy said he used this method to discover detailed energy disposal during chemical reactions.

Herschbach is 54 and Polyani is 57. Lee was born in Taiwan in 1936, according to biographical material provided by the academy.

The physics prices was physics was awarded jointly to one Swiss and two West German researchers for their work in the development of modern microscopes.

One half of the $290,000 prize went to Professor Ernst Ruska, born in Heidelberg 79 years ago and working at the Fritz Haber Institute in Berlin, West Germany, for fundamental work in electron optics and the design of the first electron microscope.

The other half was shared by Dr. Gerd Binnig, 39, of Frankfurt in Germany and Swiss Dr. Heinrich Rohrer, 53, who both work at the IBM Research laboratory at Zurich, Switzerland.

The Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences cited them for the design of the scanning tunneling microscope.

The significance of the development by the two West German and the Swiss researchers of the modern electron microscopes in different fields of science such as biology and medicine is now fully established, the Academy of Sciences stated.

It termed the Ruska's pioneer work in developing the electron microscope "one of the most important inventions of this century."

Binnig and Rohrer, who have worked together at the IBM laboratory in Zurich for eight years, were the first researchers to succeed in building the new scanning tunneling microscope.

"The reason for their success was the exceptional precision of the mechanical design," the academy said in its prepared statement.

It was the second straight year that West Germany captured the prestigious physics prize, a category strongly dominated by the United States after World War II.

Last year, Klaus von Klitzing won the prize for his discovery of the so-called quantized Hall effect.

America's upper hand in the chemistry field has not been as pronounced, but of the total of 103 laureates named by the Swedish academy since 1901, there have been 29 Americans — 26 after World War II.

Last year, American professors Herbert A. Hauptman of the Medical Foundation of Buffalo, N.Y., and Jerome Karle of the U.S. Naval Research Laboratory shared the chemistry award for achievements in developing direct methods for the determination of crystal structures.

This year's first Nobel was awarded Monday when American biochemist Stanley Cohen and Italian-American biologist Rita Levi-Montalcini shared the medicine prize for their discoveries of "growth factors" in human and animal tissue.

That was followed Tuesday by the 1986 peace prize, which was awarded in Oslo by Norway's parliament to American Jewish writer and human rights activist Elie Wiesel. The peace prize is the only one of the five Nobel awards to be given outside Sweden.

Thirteen of the 23 economics laureates were U.S. citizens.

The prize for literature will be made on Thursday, the Royal Swedish Academy of Letters announced Tuesday. That is on the same day the economics prize, established in Alfred Nobel's memory in 1969, will be announced.

Political appointments controversy delays Shamir-Peres power swap

JERUSALEM (AP) — Disputes over political appointments have threatened the governmental power swap under which right-wing Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir was to trade jobs with Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

Peres' left-leaning Labor Party delayed the switch that had been scheduled for Tuesday in a last-minute attempt to wrest concessions from Shamir's Likud bloc.

There was no definite word on when Shamir, 70, would be appointed prime minister.

The swap stalled when Likud held out Tuesday against Peres' demand to name his aide, Yossi Beilin, as ambassador to Israel's most important ally, the United States.

Peres was seen as needing an ally in the post for major foreign policy decisions.

The current Israeli envoy to Washington, Meir Roseene, was appointed by Likud's former Prime Minister Menachem Begin in 1983.

Shamir wanted former Justice Minister Yitzhak Modai, of the party's Liberal wing, reinstated in the Cabinet. The move is seen as needed to maintain a delicate internal balance inside Shamir's fractious party.

Peres fired Modai in July for Modai's outspoken criticism of his government.

Peres and Shamir were to consult this morning with their respective party leaders to seek a way out of the crisis, Israel radio said.

In an apparent compromise offer, Peres issued a statement Tuesday night on Israel television, agreeing to freeze his demands if Likud would do the same until after the Cabinet was sworn in by Parliament.

Likud ministers responded saying they would demand that President Chaim Herzog appoint Shamir as prime minister regardless of Labor's conditions, the television said.

Labor leaders said this would be reason enough to call new elections, effectively ending the power-sharing agreement.

By law, Herzog must designate Shamir before the Likud leader can be sworn in by Parliament. Herzog has delayed the move because of the squabbling.

New hotel literally under water

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — This tropical island's newest hotel has an ocean view in every direction, even straight up.

Jules' Undersea Lodge, a 30-foot-by-50-foot converted marine laboratory in the Florida Keys, will open Nov. 16 as an underwater hotel, according to its developers.

The hotel was named in honor of Jules Verne, author of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

"A lot of people are tired of doing the same thing for their vacation," said hotel spokeswoman Patty Van Der Gracht. "This is something extremely unique and it will definitely appeal to divers."

Jules' Lodge is in a lagoon 100 feet from shore and 30 feet below the water surface.

Three couples can be housed at a time, and will have bathroom facilities, a kitchen, an entertainment center and, of course, windows to view surrounding marine life, Ms. Der Gracht said.

Designed primarily for the enjoyment of divers, the underwater structure also has a 10-foot-by-20-foot "diving room," where guests can change into their gear and go out to explore their watery neighborhood.

Response to the underwater lodge has been positive.

"We have a month booked up and it isn't even opened yet," Der Gracht said. "They're coming from all around the world."

It will cost guests $300 per person per day to stay at the lodge. There's also a special package discount for parties of six — $250 per person. Guests must be certified divers.

Javier Perez de Cuellar calls criticism of U.N., his leadership 'unfair'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar departed from his habitual understatement to vent deep disappointment over "unfair" criticism of the world body and the leadership he has given it.

"Nothing, nothing, nothing, nothing" is how he characterized the press coverage and other public notices the United Nations and its secretary-general usually reap for their initiatives.

"Everything the United Nations does is taken for granted," Perez de Cuellar complained in an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday.

"I am offended when critics say they (the United Nations) are not taking initiatives," the newly re-elected U.N. chief said.

The critics, he said, "give the impression that if an initiative is not successful, it's not an initiative. Which is really very unfair."

"The United Nations is doing a lot," Perez de Cuellar insisted. "If nothing happens, it is because member countries are not prepared to accept the ideas I have presented."

The 66-year-old Peruvian diplomat, who is recovering from a quadruple heart bypass operation he underwent in July, said, "You try and you don't succeed. It is not because ... you have not made a tremendous effort ... even a physical effort."

Perez de Cuellar spoke in the interview of his continuing efforts to defuse the Afghan, Cambodian, Middle East and Iran-Iraq conflicts, of his recent trip to Haiti "to see in which we can prevent... another source of conflict in our hemisphere," and of his initiatives in launching conferences on the critical economic situation in Africa and on drug trafficking.

"But nobody credits the secretary-general for that," he said. "It's really so disappointing."

The U.N. chief apparently was reacting to American and other press coverage of his unanimous re-election last Friday. He invariably is portrayed as cautious and unexciting.

Going into his second five-year term, which begins on Jan. 1, Perez de Cuellar is faced with the problem of averting the organization's bankruptcy.

He said the United Nations will need at least $120 million from the United States by tne end of the year to meet its payroll and $60 million more in January "in order to survive."

He said he had "indications from the highest American authorities in the administration that they will do their best" to help overcome what he has described as the worst financial crisis in U.N. history.

The crisis was brought on mainly by congressionally mandated cuts in U.S. contributions to the world body. If all are implemented, the cuts could lop off $149 million, or 70 percent of the $210 million the United States is required to pay this year.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Police believe Picasso's widow committed suicide

CANNES, France (AP) — Jacqueline Picasso, the second wife of the late Spanish painter Pablo Picasso, committed suicide today at her villa on the French Riviera, police reported. She was 59.

Police said Mrs. Picasso was found with a bullet in her head, fired from a 7.65mm pistol, at her Mougins villa. They said she had been ill for several years, but did not indicate the nature of the illness.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse quoted one of Mrs. Picasso's friends as saying the painter's widow had been very depressed and had said on Monday that she "preferred to end it (her life) in order to not stay like that."

Picasso, one of the 20th century's greatest painters, married Jacqueline Roque in 1961 when he was 79 years old and she was 35. The painter died April 8, 1973.

She was a Paris-born divorcee and former dance teacher when she met Picasso, becoming his model and companion.

The painter's first wife, ballet dancer Olga Kokhlova, died in 1955. But the couple, married in 1918, had been separated for more than 20 years at the time of her death.

Java landslides kill 11

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Landslides caused by three days of incessant rain in west and central Java have killed at least 11 people, the National Search and Rescue Agency said today.

The agency said 10 bodies were recovered Tuesday after landslides the day before buried homes in the central Java districts of Purworejo and Kulonprogo, 400 miles southeast of Jakarta.

The landslides, which also destroyed hundreds of acres of crops, isolated the clove-producing areas as piles of earth blocked main roads in the districts, the agency said.

In the west Java district of Tasikmala, 250 miles southeast of Jakarta, a man's body was recovered Tuesday after a landslide, the agency said.

There was no estimate on the loss to property caused by the landslides.

Young lover tries suicide

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A frustrated young lover, who has failed at 20 suicide attempts in the past, tried once again to end his life because he can't marry the woman he loves, a news report said today.

Naresh Kumar Savita jumped from a three-story building Tuesday in Kanpur city in Uttar Pradesh state, the United News of India reported. But he survived, and is recovering in a hospital, the agency said.

Savita's earlier attempts to kill himself were unsuccessful because of timely medical help, UNI said.

Those attempts included hanging, an overdose of opium, taking sleeping pills and eating a lizard.

Once he was prevented from jumping in front of a train by people, the agency said. UNI did not say why Savita has not been able to wed the woman he loves.

Police barracks bombed

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — A car bomb exploded in front of a police barracks in downtown Barcelona Tuesday night, killing one policeman and wounding two others and 15 civilians, the governor's office reported.

Police Chief Augustin Linares blamed the Basque separatist group ETA for the bombing.

Duarte compares quake's toll to his nation's guerrilla war

By BRYNA BRENNAN

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Among the tons of twisted, broken debris lie the remains of broken lives, personal treasures and memories: tattered school books, crumpled business papers and torn family pictures.

They are what is left from Friday's earthquake that put the private lives of tens of thousands of Salvadorans on the streets and killed at least 982 people, according to the updated death toll given by President Jose Napolean Duarte Tuesday night.

More was lost in six seconds from the quake, which measured 7.5 on the open-ended Richter scale, than in seven years of civil war, Duarte said, referring to the fighting between leftist guerrillas and his government.

A semblance of normality returned to this disaster-plagued country when soap operas and American baseball reappeared Tuesday on Salvadoran television. Electricity and limited telephone service also were restored to most areas of the quake-ravaged capital.

Families have been sifting through wreckage, sweeping away piles of shattered plaster, visiting their injured relatives in makeshift hospitals and burying their dead.

Tent cities to house the homeless have cropped up everywhere.

Some dwellings are simple shacks made of a few sticks planted in the ground, with bedspreads or towels for a roof. Others are made of pieces of roofing tin, or poles covered with plastic.

Many Salvadorans sit in front of what had been their homes on streets blocked off from traffic by rock barriers or ropes. The smell of beans cooking on makeshift brick stoves and campfires hangs in the air.

Youngsters lie in the shaky-shelters on beds toted out after the earthquake. Others play soccer near by with friends.

Many Salvadorans took to the streets in fear that the hundreds of continuing aftershocks would mean another devastating jolt. At least one aftershock measured 4.8 on the Richter scale.

In many San Salvador neighborhoods, people wait in long lines for food to be handed out by government and private relief agencies. Scores queued up in one northern area to fill plastic jugs with water running from a hydrant.

"We will get by with God's will," said Maria Martinez, filling a bucket for her family. "We will stay here and build again."

Friday's earthquake struck selectively, with one house on any given street suffering heavy damage and others only a few cracks. The only sections left unscathed were the upper-class neighborhoods of San Benito and Escalon, where supermarkets and stores stayed open for business.

The working-class neighborhood of San Jacinto was hardest hit. Outside what had been the Santa Catalina school, torn pieces of coloring books and lesson plans lie strewn on the pavement. An untold number of children were killed when a brick wall collapsed.

Exposed classrooms, their walls torn open by the force of the earthquake, show pictures on their baby-blue painted walls of animals, letters and the Salvadoran flag.

Nearby, a group of children sleep in an open field on metal cots brought from their homes.

Downtown, where crumbled office buildings buried hundreds of people under tons of debris, curious spectators gather as rescue specialists try to tunnel into the rubble, hoping to dig someone out alive.

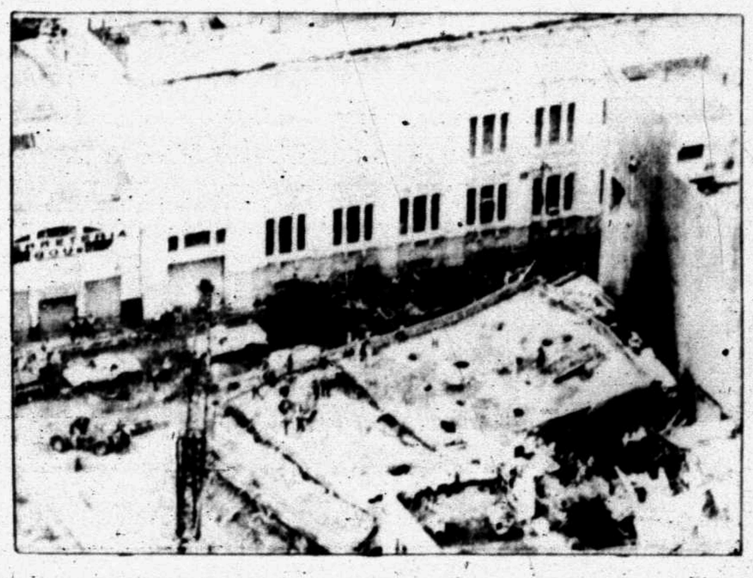
Here, again, some structures collapsed while others stood virtually unscathed.

The five-story Ruben Dario building, which has become something of a symbol of the catastrophe, had at least 100 people inside when the pillars gave way and the structure caved in around them.

Rescue workers there continued searching for survivors Tuesday. Hope waned at other destroyed buildings.

Earth slides now cover parts of the roads leading out of the capital.

In the poor neighborhood of Santa Marta, rescue workers attempted to dig out an unknown number of people buried under an earth slide. The situation was discovered Monday, three days after the quake hit and the aftershocks began.



Rescue workers continue their search for survivors Tuesday in the Ruben Dario Building in downtown San Salvador. The holes in the roof of the collapsed five-story structure were made to facilitate the search for victims. More than 50 persons have been rescued since Friday's earthquake.

Javier Perez de Cuellar calls criticism of U.N., his leadership 'unfair'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar departed from his habitual understatement to vent deep disappointment over "unfair" criticism of the world body and the leadership he has given it.

"Nothing, nothing, nothing, nothing" is how he characterized the press coverage and other public notices the United Nations and its secretary-general usually reap for their initiatives.

"Everything the United Nations does is taken for granted," Perez de Cuellar complained in an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday.

"I am offended when critics say they (the United Nations) are not taking initiatives," the newly re-elected U.N. chief said.

The critics, he said, "give the impression that if an initiative is not successful, it's not an initiative. Which is really very unfair."

"The United Nations is doing a lot," Perez de Cuellar insisted. "If nothing happens, it is because member countries are not prepared to accept the ideas I have presented."

The 66-year-old Peruvian diplomat, who is recovering from a quadruple heart bypass operation he underwent in July, said, "You try and you don't succeed. It is not because ... you have not made a tremendous effort ..., even a physical effort."

Perez de Cuellar spoke in the interview of his continuing efforts to defuse the Afghan, Cambodian, Middle East and Iran-Iraq conflicts, of his recent trip to Haiti "to see in which we can prevent... another source of conflict in our hemisphere," and of his initiatives in launching conferences on the critical economic situation in Africa and on drug trafficking.

"But nobody credits the secretary-general for that," he said. "It's really so disappointing."

The U.N. chief apparently was reacting to American and other press coverage of his unanimous re-election last Friday. He invariably is portrayed as cautious and unexciting.

Going into his second five-year term, which begins on Jan. 1, Perez de Cuellar is faced with the problem of averting the organization's bankruptcy.

He said the United Nations will need at least $120 million from the United States by tne end of the year to meet its payroll and $60 million more in January "in order to survive."

He said he had "indications from the highest American authorities in the administration that they will do their best" to help overcome what he has described as the worst financial crisis in U.N. history.

The crisis was brought on mainly by congressionally mandated cuts in U.S. contributions to the world body. If all are implemented, the cuts could lop off $149 million, or 70 percent of the $210 million the United States is required to pay this year.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Police believe Picasso's widow committed suicide

CANNES, France (AP) — Jacqueline Picasso, the second wife of the late Spanish painter Pablo Picasso, committed suicide today at her villa on the French Riviera, police reported. She was 59.

Police said Mrs. Picasso was found with a bullet in her head, fired from a 7.65mm pistol, at her Mougins villa. They said she had been ill for several years, but did not indicate the nature of the illness.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse quoted one of Mrs. Picasso's friends as saying the painter's widow had been very depressed and had said on Monday that she "preferred to end it (her life) in order to not stay like that."

Picasso, one of the 20th century's greatest painters, married Jacqueline Roque in 1961 when he was 79 years old and she was 35. The painter died April 8, 1973.

She was a Paris-born divorcee and former dance teacher when she met Picasso, becoming his model and companion.

The painter's first wife, ballet dancer Olga Kokhlova, died in 1955. But the couple, married in 1918, had been separated for more than 20 years at the time of her death.

Java landslides kill 11

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Landslides caused by three days of incessant rain in west and central Java have killed at least 11 people, the National Search and Rescue Agency said today.

The agency said 10 bodies were recovered Tuesday after landslides the day before buried homes in the central Java districts of Purworejo and Kulonprogo, 400 miles southeast of Jakarta.

The landslides, which also destroyed hundreds of acres of crops, isolated the clove-producing areas as piles of earth blocked main roads in the districts, the agency said.

In the west Java district of Tasikmala, 250 miles southeast of Jakarta, a man's body was recovered Tuesday after a landslide, the agency said.

There was no estimate on the loss to property caused by the landslides.

Young lover tries suicide

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A frustrated young lover, who has failed at 20 suicide attempts in the past, tried once again to end his life because he can't marry the woman he loves, a news report said today.

Naresh Kumar Savita jumped from a three-story building Tuesday in Kanpur city, in Uttar Pradesh state, the United News of India reported. But he survived, and is recovering in a hospital, the agency said.

Savita's earlier attempts to kill himself were unsuccessful because of timely medical help, UNI said.

Those attempts included hanging, an overdose of opium, taking sleeping pills and eating a lizard.

Once he was prevented from jumping in front of a train by people, the agency said. UNI did not say why Savita has not been able to wed the woman he loves.

Police barracks bombed

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — A car bomb exploded in front of a police barracks in downtown Barcelona Tuesday night, killing one policeman and wounding two others and 15 civilians, the governor's office reported.

Police Chief Augustin Linares blamed the Basque separatist group ETA for the bombing.

Duarte compares quake's toll to his nation's guerrilla war

By BRYNA BRENNAN

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Among the tons of twisted, broken debris lie the remains of broken lives, personal treasures and memories: tattered school books, crumpled business papers and torn family pictures.

They are what is left from Friday's earthquake that put the private lives of tens of thousands of Salvadorans on the streets and killed at least 982 people, according to the updated death toll given by President Jose Napolean Duarte Tuesday night.

More was lost in six seconds from the quake, which measured 7.5 on the open-ended Richter scale, than in seven years of civil war, Duarte said, referring to the fighting between leftist guerrillas and his government.

A semblance of normality returned to this disaster-plagued country when soap operas and American baseball reappeared Tuesday on Salvadoran television. Electricity and limited telephone service also were restored to most areas of the quake-ravaged capital.

Families have been sifting through wreckage, sweeping away piles of shattered plaster, visiting their injured relatives in makeshift hospitals and burying their dead.

Tent cities to house the homeless have cropped up everywhere.

Some dwellings are simple shacks made of a few sticks planted in the ground, with bedspreads or towels for a roof. Others are made of pieces of roofing tin, or poles covered with plastic.

Many Salvadorans sit in front of what had been their homes on streets blocked off from traffic by rock barriers or ropes. The smell of beans cooking on makeshift brick stoves and campfires hangs in the air.

Youngsters lie in the shaky shelters on beds toted out after the earthquake. Others play soccer near by with friends.

Many Salvadorans took to the streets in fear that the hundreds of continuing aftershocks would mean another devastating jolt. At least one aftershock measured 4.8 on the Richter scale.

In many San Salvador neighborhoods, people wait in long lines for food to be handed out by government and private relief agencies. Scores queued up in one northern area to fill plastic jugs with water running from a hydrant.

"We will get by with God's will," said Maria Martinez, filling a bucket for her family. "We will stay here and build again."

Friday's earthquake struck selectively, with one house on any given street suffering heavy damage and others only a few cracks. The only sections left unscathed were the upper-class neighborhoods of San Benito and Escalon, where supermarkets and stores stayed open for business.

The working-class neighborhood of San Jacinto was hardest hit. Outside what had been the Santa Catalina school, torn pieces of coloring books and lesson plans lie strewn on the pavement. An untold number of children were killed when a brick wall collapsed.

Exposed classrooms, their walls torn open by the force of the earthquake, show pictures on their baby-blue painted walls of animals, letters and the Salvadoran flag.

Nearby, a group of children sleep in an open field on metal cots brought from their homes.

Downtown, where crumbled office buildings buried hundreds of people under tons of debris, curious spectators gather as rescue specialists try to tunnel into the rubble, hoping to dig someone out alive.

Here, again, some structures collapsed while others stood virtually unscathed.

The five-story Ruben Dario building, which has become something of a symbol of the catastrophe, had at least 100 people inside when the pillars gave way and the structure caved in around them.

Rescue workers there continued searching for survivors Tuesday. Hope waned at other destroyed buildings.

Earth slides now cover parts of the roads leading out of the capital.

In the poor neighborhood of Santa Marta, rescue workers attempted to dig out an unknown number of people buried under an earth slide. The situation was discovered Monday, three days after the quake hit and the aftershocks began.

Rescue workers continue their search for survivors Tuesday in the Ruben Dario Building in downtown San Salvador. The holes in the roof of the collapsed five-story structure were made to facilitate the search for victims. More than 50 persons have been rescued since Friday's earthquake.

Senate trys to limit opposition's delaying passage of drug bill

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders, unable to break an impasse over the death penalty for drug-related murders, try today to limit a filibuster by opponents that threatens speedy passage of an election-year drug bill.

Even if the Senate votes to limit debate, death-penalty opponents say they will keep talking for the 30 hours allowed under Senate rules to force deletion of the capital punishment provision.

A lengthy debate on the issue could force Congress to postpone its plan to adjourn this week or threaten passage of the popular drug bill. Sixty votes are required to invoke cloture, the Senate term for limiting debate on an issue.

A group of 14 Democrats and 11 Republicans have signed letters opposing the death penalty for murders committed in furtherance of illegal drug enterprises. The provision was included in the bill passed by the House on a 391-23 vote last week.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., one of the opponents, said during brief debate Tuesday that "most of the people who are victims of drug-related murder are drug pushers, drug dealers, drug czars. Those are the people I don't particularly want to protect.

"I don't want to turn this into a drug-dealer protection act," Levin said.

But Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said, "Our youth in this country are being destroyed by drugs. They are being destroyed by people who want to make monetary gain.

"I've seen 10, 12, 14, 16-year-old children who have died from the misuse of drugs," Hatch said. "We can talk about thousands of drug-related deaths caused by these criminal enterprises."

"Until we get really tough with those that are pushing drugs in our society, knowing they might cause the death of others, I don't think you will see any erosion in their ability to do so," Hatch said.

Levin and other opponents argue that the death-penalty provision is unconstitutional because it defines murder as willfully committing an act that the perpetrator knows might cause the death of another person.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has made an agreement to separate the death-penalty issue from the drug bill to allow speedy passage of the legislation.

But death-penalty supporters want assurances from House leaders that a separate capital punishment bill would be brought up in the House before agreeing to Dole's suggestion.

"That would really speed it up," Dole said.

Opponents, meanwhile, were looking for assurances from the same House leaders that a separate death-penalty bill would not be given a chance of passage.

But House leaders were offering no assurances to either side, according to leadership aides who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The death-penalty language was included in the original anti-drug bill passed by the House on Sept. 11. But it was not included in the original Senate bill because floor managers wanted to avoid a filibuster on the controversial issue.

In addition to the death penalty, the Senate is scheduled to debate an amendment sponsored by Dole and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., that makes a number of changes in the latest version of the House bill.

The bill authorizes $1.7 billion for federal anti-drug efforts, rehabilitation, education and aid to local police.

Levin said a number of senators oppose a provision that would allow taxpayers to specify on their income-tax returns the amount of money they want to donate to the federal anti-drug effort.

National crime wave not forecast despite rise in reported serious crimes

By PETE YOST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious crimes reported to police rose 8 percent in the first half of 1986, but criminologists doubt the increase portends a national crime wave.

Despite the figures released Tuesday by the FBI, most experts predict crime levels will remain stable until the 1990s, when large numbers of children of the Baby Boom generation enter their mid-and late teens, the most crime-prone age group.

Criminologists linked the upward movement in the new figures largely to more frequent reporting of crimes to police by victims.

"I'd put my money on a greater willingness to report crime than I would on there being a major increase in real crime," said Marvin Wolfgang, professor of criminology and law at the University of Pennsylvania.

The index of eight major offenses showed violent crime, led by a 14 percent jump in aggravated assaults, rose 12 percent from the first six months of 1985. Property crimes were up 7 percent.

Crime rose in all regions of the United States, especially in the South and West, up 13 percent and 6 percent, respectively. The FBI's crime index rose 5 percent in the Northeast and 4 percent in the Midwest.

Crime was up 9 percent in suburbs and up 3 percent in rural areas. The number of crimes reported to police rose 12 percent in cities of 250,000 to 500,000 population.

Nationally, robberies and motor vehicle thefts rose 11 percent, while murder and burglary were up 8 percent. Larceny rose 7 percent, rape 2 percent and arson 1 percent.

The amount of crime reported to police has been increasing for the past 18 months, and the latest increase is the largest reported by the FBI since the first half of 1980.

The Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics says reporting rates for aggravated assault rose by 6 percentage points from 1973 to 1985 and that reporting of rape went up by 12 percentage points in that time.

The bureau said last week that based upon home surveys, crimes committed against individuals and households in 1985 — including those not reported to police — fell to the lowest level since the government began collecting the information 13 years ago. The decline from 1984 was nearly 2 percent.

Criminologists say increased reporting rates to police may stem from the public's perception that the criminal justice system is dealing more sternly with lawbreakers.

Kindergartens, nurseries show 'record' enrollment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents trying to give their offspring a head start on the future have helped push enrollment in kindergarten and nursery school to record levels, a government study shows.

"Parents are enrolling their children at earlier ages for the educational benefits," Census Bureau statistician Rosalind Bruno said.

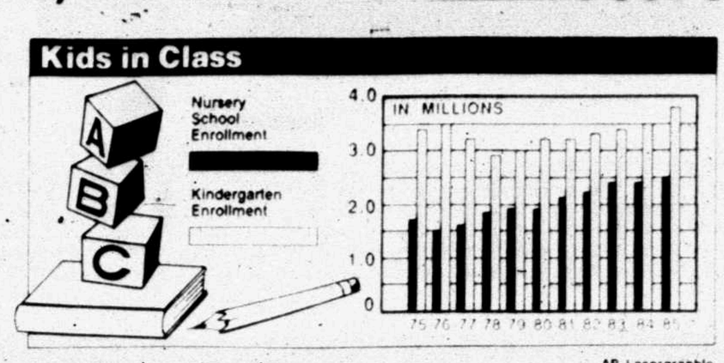
"In 1985 there were more children attending pre-primary school than ever before," including 2.5 million tots in nursery school and 3.8 million in kindergarten, she said in the Bureau's annual report on school enrollment, released Tuesday.

"Some people keep dismissing (rising preschool attendance) as day care, but it isn't. The increase occurs among children of non-working mothers as much or more than among those of working mothers. And most nursery school is part-day, and that's not day care," Ms. Bruno said in a telephone interview.

"The increase in kindergarten and nursery school enrollment in the 1980s because of increased population indicates an imminent reversal of the long-term trend of decline in elementary school enrollment," she said.

Since 1965 enrollment in preschools has grown significantly, despite the face of the so-called Baby Bust when birth rates declined sharply.

That low number of births in the 1960s and 1970s was balanced by the rapidly increasing share of children who were sent to nursery school and kindergarten, the Census study showed.



AP Lasergraphic

And since 1980 an increase in the number of births has added to that trend, helping boost enrollment to the current record levels.

The result could be that systems which closed schools in response to declining enrollments could face a shortage of teachers and classrooms in the next few years, as children in kindergarten and nursery schools move into the regular classes.

Ms. Bruno, cautioned, however, that while an increase in elementary school enrollment will likely occur, "it won't necessarily be in the same places as the schools were in the past. The neighborhoods, areas, even cities (with growing school populations) may change. It depends on migration."

While the number of births is increasing, officials say this does not represent another Baby Boom. That is because the birth rate has not increased.

Instead, what is occurring is what statisticians call an echo of the Baby Boom of the 1950s and 1960s, the result of all those children now moving into their own prime childbearing years.

The baby boomers can produce large numbers of offspring even at low birth rates simply because there are so many of them. Last year, for example, there were a record 3,749,000 babies born in the United States, according to the National Center for Health Statistics, even though the fertility rate of 15.7 births per 1,000 people was unchanged from a year earlier and well below the levels of the 1950s.

And, the Statistics Center added, the total number of women in the childbearing ages is expected to continue increasing until at least 1990, although most of the growth will be in the age group of 25 and over.

The question of whether the total number of births will continue to rise, thus, depends on whether women who postponed marriage and family to complete their educations and begin careers decide to have children in their late 20s 30s, as many have begun doing in recent years.

The new Census study reports that kindergarten enrollment for 1985 showed a sharp jump, rising from 3.5 million in 1984 to 3.8 million. And "from 1980 to 1985, enrollment grew by one-half million students, or 17 percent, largely because the number of 5-year-olds grew," the report said.

As of last year some 94 percent of 5-year-olds attended kindergarten, up from 93 percent in 1980.

While kindergarten enrollment jumped from 1984 to 1985, nursery school enrollment changed little, rising from 2.4 million to 2.5 million. That's up 25 percent from 2 million in 1980, though, and five times higher than in 1965.

Other findings of the new study include:

— Overall, there were 58 million people aged 3 to 34 enrolled in school as of last October, up from 57.3 million a year earlier, but below the levels of the 1970s, when more than 60 million attended classes.

— Elementary school enrollment was 26.8 million, unchanged from 1984, while secondary schools had 13.9 million students, up from 13.7 million a year earlier.

Inaction on spending bill threatening to government

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan agreement on military programs could help sound the final gun for the 99th Congress, which has gone two weeks into overtime with a full slate of decision making unfinished.

Meanwhile, for the fourth time this month, inaction could threaten a shutdown of the federal government.

A House-Senate conference committee planned to meet today to settle final details of the massive spending bill that must be passed before lawmakers can leave Washington for their election campaigns.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., told the House Rules Committee he hoped to bring the bill to the floor quickly, possibly by late today. The rules panel, which sets the guidelines for House floor debate, took the unusual step of approving the bill for action even though the final version did not yet exist.

Negotiators from the two chambers reached agreement late Tuesday on $291.8 billion in military spending and related policy issues. The agreement essentially set more than half of the approximately $560 billion omnibus bill, a record spending measure that also covers nearly all domestic programs outside of those for which recipients are by law automatically entitled payments.

The defense conferees nailed down an earlier tentative agreement on arms control language, urging the administration to continue compliance with the nuclear arms limits set by the unratified SALT II treaty and allowing the Pentagon to proceed with production of chemical weapons.

The agreement put off efforts to limit the payment of union wages by defense contractors and compromised on an affirmative action program for minority contractors.

The House-Senate conference committee on the big spending bill still needed to settle disputes over a wide range of issues, from which new federal buildings to construct to capping subsidy payments to individual farmers.

Action was needed by midnight tonight or the government would be technically out of business, a situation that occurred briefly last Saturday but would be more serious during the work week. If the government went far into Thursday without spending authority, federal officials have said they would consider sending workers home.

Rebuilding of Clarke College near completion

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — Sister Catherine Dunn said she had already begun planning to rebuild Clarke College by the time the fire 2½ years ago had destroyed four of the college's 10 campus buildings.

"I started the plan, what we needed to do," the college president said.

The result was a $13 million project to build a new library, music performance hall, art gallery, music and art classrooms and administrative offices that will be dedicated in celebrations Friday through Oct. 22.

Ceremonies will include speeches by Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill.

The Mary Frances Clarke Freedom award, named for the founder of the Catholic college, will be presented posthumously to teacher-astronaut Christa McAuliffe, killed in the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

The May 17, 1984, fire destroyed the 100-year-old heart of the campus — Margaret Mann Hall, Rose O'Toole Hall, Mary Bertrand Hall and Sacred Heart Chapel.

"The atmosphere was dismay for several days. People in shock, disbelief," Sister Dunn said. "And yet, there was movement. We got the library books out of the library."

Those books damaged by water had to be freeze-dried for restoration, a process accomplished on campus by two refrigerated trailers provided by the head of the college trustees.

She said 800 people formed a human chain to carry the books out.

"We salvaged about 65 percent of the library books," Sister Dunn said. "We only had to throw away 37 books from that freeze-drying experience."

The day after the fire, Sister Dunn began to explain her plan to the college trustees. Final exams were postponed the day of the fire, but graduation went on as planned two days later.

"I knew it was important for people to do as many normal things as possible," Sister Dunn said.

Insurance paid a portion of the replacement costs, but officials at the 840-student college have undertaken fund-raising efforts to pay bills.

Fall rains have delayed completion of the project.

"It's not going to be finished, but it will be far enough along that we can tour people inside," Sister Dunn said.

The fire in the central buildings left a gap in the campus.

Sister Dunn said in an interview that the Clarke community had definite ideas about what it wanted in replacement buildings, and in an architecture firm.

"One of the stipulations was that they had to come and live with us," she said.

Vickrey Ovresat Awsumb architects of Chicago was selected. Wilmont Vickrey, VOA president, said by telephone the firm decided to do preliminary design work on campus to gather as much information as possible. The architects and engineers talked and planned for a month and then moved into a downstairs lounge at Mary Josita Hall.

"The students kept saying to the architects, connect us back together," Sister Dunn said.

"If there is anything we heard from the faculty and students is that Clarke is special and we want that back," Vickrey said.

"We felt we had to build on this tradition of linkage and try to make it even stronger. The evolution of this idea was a large atrium space that collects the circulation from the recital hall, the administration, the library and certain student services so that this grand space becomes the center of activity."

Earthquake aid

The U.S. government and private relief agencies reacted quickly and efficiently after a devastating earthquake rocked El Salvador last Friday, killing at least 890 people and leaving 150,000 homeless in the capital city of San Salvador.

Although the earthquake measured only 5.4 on the open-ended Richter scale, it decimated a 20-block area and caused an estimated $2 billion damage. For a nation as small and poor as El Salvador, already racked by civil war, the loss is incalculable.

The short-term humanitarian assistance that has poured into El Salvador in recent days should be the beginning, not the end, of aid to the Salvadoran government and its people. Without aid from the United States and other free nations, the government of President Jose Napolean Duarte will be unable to provide for its homeless, whose numbers could grow to 300,000. That in itself is a tragedy of immense proportions that can only worsen if the needed assistance is not forthcoming.

The centrist government of President Duarte and his Christian Democratic Party has brought at least temporary stability to El Salvador. By instituting needed reforms and curbing human-rights abuses, the Duarte administration has weakened support for the leftist guerrillas who have been fighting the government for seven long years. But these gains could be jeopardized if the democratic government cannot cope with the economic and social consequences of last week's earthquake. Obviously, El Salvador needs some help from its neighbors in the wake of this most tragic natural disaster.

The United States has played a key role in restoring democracy to El Salvador and then helping to defend it against communist-led guerrillas. Clearly, it is in the best interest of both the United States and El Salvador that Washington play a similar role in assisting the Central American nation in rebuilding its badly damaged capital.

LETTERS

Public good suffered

I am writing this letter to clear up some misconceptions currently held by many citizens of Midland/Odessa and several members of the media regarding my business holdings here in the Permian Basin. The recent outbreak of shigellosis in our area has led to a substantial amount of misinformation and I'd like to take a moment to set the record straight.

First, my current restaurant holdings consist of five Texas Burger restaurants (three in Odessa and one each in Monahans and Andrews) and the six Taco Villa restaurants in Lubbock which I operate as a franchisee.

Secondly, the Texas Burger restaurants which I operate are not involved in the current lawsuit filed against Creative Food 'N Fun, the company which owns and operates the Taco Villas in the Midland/Odessa area and Cox Marketing (Comark), its food distribution subsidiary. The Texas Burger restaurants in Big Spring and Midland are totally separate businesses, owned and operated independent of my organization. The confusion caused by the identical names of these restaurants is understandable; however, I feel it important to correct any misconceptions that might have occurred.

It is unfortunate that the television media's rush to beat the competition led to a significant amount of incorrect information being televised by several of our local TV stations. As an example, I find it discouraging that our local CBS affiliate reported that food samples from Texas Burger tested negative for the bacteria, when in fact, no health department official ever came to a Texas Burger in our organization and took food samples for testing. My restaurants' sales dropped dramatically as a result of the story and our recovery from the incident will be a slow process.

I feel certain that the undue pressure placed by local television reporters on the health department to release incomplete results of the investigation before its completion led to an overall drop in area restaurant sales which was both unfair and irresponsible. That the local media can destroy the credibility of many fine Midland and Odessa businesses by reporting incorrect information is truly tragic. Not only does it hurt the businesses which have been misrepresented, it hurts our economy as a whole at a time when our area cannot sustain additional negative trends. It is especially sad when this is set in motion by heresay or false information spread by a local reporter trying to make a name for his or her self.

I truly believe in the public's right to know information which can effect their health and well-being. However, I believe equally that it is the media's primary responsibility to represent factual information and not be so quick to scoop the competition.

The tax difference

My income has fallen, my property value is down, but my taxes have just gone up. How can that be? Well, the Texas Legislature just raised gasoline taxes and sales taxes.

Every time the legislature runs up against a little trouble, they raise taxes. I wondered if this was a Texas mentality or a political mentality, so I counted up the individual votes and found that Texas Democrats voted two to one for the gasoline tax increase and five to one (80 to 15) for the sales tax increase.

Texas Republicans voted four to one (41 to 10) against the gasoline tax increase, and seven to one (46 to six) against the sales tax increase.

Now that I have looked at the facts, I no longer believe you can "vote for the man and not the party." The only way to do that is to vote for an "independent." Since there aren't too many of these running in November, I am voting for the men and the party that overwhelmingly vote to keep taxes low. I am voting Republican.

JACK ANDERSON

Exploratory risk reduction talks going

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has been conducting secret, exploratory talks with the Soviet Union that could soon lead to the creation of "nuclear risk reduction centers" to prevent an accidental nuclear war between the two superpowers.

Jack Anderson

Both sides are uneasy at the possibility of mistaking the source of a sneak nuclear attack by terrorists or a Third World country and turning it into a nuclear holocaust through pre-programmed retaliatory strikes. Concern has grown in the last few years as both superpowers realize they lack the ability to pinpoint the identity of a nuclear attacker.

The risk reduction centers would have as their sole mission the prevention of an accidental U.S.-Soviet nuclear exchange. They would be either closely linked centers in the United States and the Soviet Union, or a jointly manned facility in a neutral location, like Geneva.

One incident that highly motivated U.S. officials occurred in the summer of 1979. A malfunctioning Pentagon computer indicated falsely that 200 Soviet missiles had been launched against the United States.

Fortunately, it was not a period of crisis in U.S.-Soviet relations, so the possibility of a mistake immediately occurred to U.S. officials. Quick checks of the warning system soon determined that the computer was the culprit. Had it been a period of high tension, the consequences could have been disastrous.

High-level Reagan administration sources told us there have been at least two substantive meetings with the Soviets on risk-reduction centers. Those two were held in Geneva in August and September. Leading the U.S. negotiators were Robert Linhard of the NSC and Richard Perle of the Pentagon.

"The prospects are promising," one official said. "But these are exploratory talks. The issue for decision is: Should we have a formal negotiation that could lead to the establishment of this thing? There's interest on both sides."

One White House source warned against premature optimism. The talks are "the kind of thing that needs to be done quietly," the official explained, adding: "Maybe an agreement can be reached and maybe not."

The idea of risk reduction centers has been quietly promoted by various members of the Senate over the years: primarily the late Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., a former secretary of the Navy. The Foreign Relations Committee held unpublicized hearings on the subject in 1984.

Following a Strategic Air Command assessment in 1981, the three senators introduced legislation ordering the Pentagon to explore ways to reduce the risk of accidental nuclear war. This led to secret negotiations with the Soviets and a 1984 agreement to modernize and improve the Washington-Moscow "hot line."

The SAC report also led to creation in 1982 of a "working group on nuclear risk reduction," which eventually produced the secret, exploratory talks in Geneva. There are three basic concepts under study at this time:

— Create a special "alert group" directed by the NSC to develop better identification methods for nuclear attacks and ways to share information instantaneously with the Soviets.

— Set up closely linked nuclear risk reduction centers in Washington and Moscow, manned by top nuclear experts with regular exchanges of information.

— Establish a joint nuclear crisis management center in a neutral country. In addition to its great symbolic value, such a center would involve day-to-day relationships among U.S. and Soviet nuclear experts that could make the difference between peace and war when a crisis develops.

MOSCOW MESS: A team of Senate staffers from the Budget and Foreign Relations Committees recently winged off to Moscow to see if press reports on the new U.S. Embassy construction were accurate. They were. The staffers were appalled at both the poor construction and the widespread implantation of "bugs" for future KGB eavesdropping. It is reminiscent of the $46 million fiasco over the building of a new U.S. Embassy in Cairo, which we disclosed earlier this year. But in Moscow, there's $170 million at stake. As one returning Senate aide observed ruefully: "Moscow makes the Cairo project look like a Swiss watch."

FAT & FREQUENT FLIERS: One recommendation for trimming the fat out of the U.N. budget is to cut down on the traveling to and fro by diplomats attending the endless series of U.N. conferences around the world. "The present level of official travel should be reduced by 20 per cent," an internal U.N. report states. "There are too many missions, and the Secretariat staff assigned to service conferences tends to be excessive, particularly from the department of public information." Under the present profligacy, the United Nations pays the fare for five representatives from each country attending a conference, and they all go first-class.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Navy Secretary John Lehman has done it again. At a recent conservative media conference, he pooh-poohed charges that the Pentagon's efficiency is hampered by sniping among the armed services: "Interservice rivalry is largely a myth of the Washington community," he declared. We wish he was right, but unfortunately the rivalry is no myth — and if Lehman doesn't know this, he should.

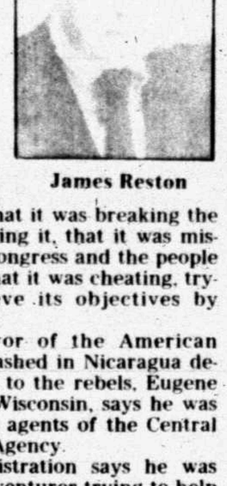
JAMES RESTON

Tricky government moves raising eyebrows

WASHINGTON — There's an uneasy feeling in Washington these days. The Reagan administration has been hurt by its misinformation campaign against Libya and its tricky handling of the Nicaraguan problem. It has denied everything but convinced nobody.



James Reston

The charge against the administration in both cases is not that it was breaking the law but bending it, that it was misleading the Congress and the people — in short, that it was cheating, trying to achieve its objectives by stealth.

The survivor of the American plane that crashed in Nicaragua delivering arms to the rebels, Eugene Hasenfus of Wisconsin, says he was working with agents of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The administration says he was merely an adventurer trying to help a good cause. This is a free country where citizens have many liberties, President Reagan explained. He compared Hasenfus to the Americans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade who volunteered to fight against Franco in the Spanish Civil War.

This has not satisfied Congress, particularly after the disclosure that Admiral Poindexter, the president's national security adviser, had proposed a "disinformation" campaign against Libya, and that Bernard Kalb, the assistant secretary of state for public affairs, had resigned in protest.

If Hasenfus and his two American colleagues who were killed in the crash were, as he says, working directly or indirectly with the CIA, this mission would seem to violate congressional restrictions, and contradict repeated administration statements that the plane was involved in a purely private adventure.

But congressional intelligence committee members ask how a strictly private operation would have been able to hire former CIA agents, commandeer planes, warehouse tons of equipment and fly repeatedly in and out of the U.S. to El Salvador and Honduras.

All entirely legal, say officials here. Such an operation does not violate the Neutrality Act because the president has made no Neutrality Proclamation, and it would not violate arms export legislation unless the arms originated in the United States.

"What has kept the (Nicaraguan) resistance alive," Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said, "has been private help. Some members of Congress accuse us of approving of this with a wink and a nod. A wink and a nod, hell! We think it has been fine."

Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., who is chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, thinks otherwise and raised the question of government involvement: "The president, someone on the NSC surely has some knowledge. I know the White House knows and is not telling the world."

This raises a fundamental question. If, as the administration insists, it is perfectly legal to maintain a U.S. embassy in the Nicaraguan capital while permitting private U.S. citizens to supply arms for an attack on that government, there must be something defective in the U.S. neutrality and arms export legislation.

No doubt this will be examined in the next session of Congress, but meanwhile it is clear that the political atmosphere has been poisoned by the evidence that the administration approves "with a wink and a nod" of a proxy war by its own citizens.

There are other reasons for the sense of unease in Washington. The Congress has loitered along to the end of the present session without passing the appropriation bill necessary to meet the government's payroll and had to pass a continuing resolution to avoid the consequences.

Also, though the administration and the Congress have been fussing with one another for almost six years over limiting or stopping nuclear arms tests, a compromise was not found until after the president had finally left Washington to meet Mikhail Gorbachev of the Soviet Union in Iceland.

Finally, there is a feeling that both the administration and Congress are hurrying toward the next election without any clear line of succession or sense of purpose in either party.

As usual in the last two years of an administration, many leading officials are thinking about their personal futures and the gold at the end of the tunnel.

Tip O'Neill will not be back as speaker of the House in the January term and the Democrats in the Senate are not happy with their present leader. So both branches of the government are looking to a wholly different situation, and maneuvering for power in post-Reagan Washington.

There's nothing particularly new in all this. It's only that the political air along the Potomac is a little more poisonous than usual.

ART BUCHWALD

Don't write that book! But could you call it ...

The word on the street is that Kitty Kelley, Frank Sinatra's unofficial biographer, is now looking for another fascinating subject to write about.

Art Buchwald

Well, Ms. Kelley, this is to warn you that I'm not cooperating with you, and you're just wasting your time if you think you can do to me what you did to Sinatra.

I've told all my close friends not to talk to you, and this goes for Ava, Mia, Lauren, Jill, Victoria, Shirley, Angie, Dinah, and Walter Annenberg.

Unlike Frank, I do hold grudges, and if I read one word in your book about me going skinny-dipping with Madame DeGaulle in the fountains at Versailles, I sue.

You think, Ms. Kelley, that just because I am an outstanding public figure with a worldwide following, you can steal my life story and appropriate it as your own. Well, you can't do it, and if I am unable to stop you, I have friends who can. What if I told you the entire Chilean navy owes me a favor? If you have doubts, just write about the orgy we all had with the Bartles and Jaymes Brothers and see if someone doesn't shoot a torpedo up your word processor.

I believe in freedom of the press as much as the next woman, Ms. Kelley, but there are certain things better left unsaid when writing a biography. And that includes the shouting match I had with Mother Teresa when I jumped the line in Wagshal's Delicatessen.

Ms. Kelley, you have no more right to include that as you have to say I was one of the great ear-lobe kissers of the '60s.

Having read your book about Frank, I am worried that you may be more interested in scandal than history. Like Warren Burger, there are plenty of skeletons in my closet. I've never claimed that I was a saint, but I did a lot more than fall off the golden chairs at the White House. Behind all this craziness was a man who knew how to make Phil Donahue cry "uncle."

I don't know why I'm even writing this, since the only reason you are interested in me is because my life sells books. Well, Ms. Know-It-All, just because I always took the fast lane doesn't mean I am in the public domain. Win or lose, I had a good time, and you can check that out with the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

The reason why I refuse to cooperate with you is because you can mess somebody up badly. You could take a little story about me stiffing a Vietnamese hatcheck girl and make it into a Gulf of Tonkin resolution.

Ms. Kelley, I can't stop you from writing the book, but I will do everything in my power to see that no one buys it. I have friends among the street people, and I'm going to see that all of them stretch out in front of Waldenbooks store until it closes for the night.

Don't think flattery will get you anywhere either. You can publish that I am the greatest unmined biographical subject in the country, and you can say that my married life was vivid and unforgettable, and you can imply that I was a womanizer and wildly lavish with money. You can say I was complex and misunderstood, and it wouldn't bother me. But then you are going to have to write about my private life, and that's when you get to talk to my lawyers.

So the purpose of this letter is to make sure you understand that I will not cooperate with your biography even if it is a fully documented, highly detailed, penetrating love story that will capture the hearts and imagination of the American people.

After this warning, if you insist on going ahead with the project, my wife would like you to title the book, "I Did It Your Way."

NATION in brief

Congress OKs funds for Korean War memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has approved $1 million for a memorial to Americans wounded, taken prison or killed in the Korean War.

A bill passed by the House Tuesday and by the Senate earlier authorizes a memorial on federal land in or near Washington.

It provides $500,000 for site preparation, design, planning and administrative costs, and makes the same amount available for construction once enough private funds are collected to build and maintain the memorial.

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said the bill sets a dangerous precedent by earmarking federal dollars for a war memorial. He noted that the Vietnam Memorial was funded entirely by private contributions.

Medical malpractice eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a bill aimed at cutting down on medical malpractice by encouraging doctors to identify and discipline colleagues who are incompetent or unprofessional.

The Health Care Quality Improvement Act was passed by voice vote Tuesday and sent to the Senate, where its future was unclear in the rush to adjourn this week.

The bill establishes an immunity system and reporting requirements aimed at stopping incompetent doctors from moving from one jurisdiction to another undetected.

Satellite finds crash site

WASHINGTON (AP) — A newly launched satellite has successfully directed rescue workers to a private airplane crash site near a remote Canadian lake, NASA said Tuesday.

The search and rescue equipment is on a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration satellite launched Sept. 17 from Vandenberg Air Force Base. The gear was activated on Sept. 22 and picked up its first distress signal just 24 hours later. All four passengers on the plane were hospitalized.

The distress signals were sent by a transmitter that was activated when the airplane, a small Cessna, crashed. The satellite picked up the signal on its next pass and relayed the coordinates of the plane's location.

Porpoise off limits in ocean

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. tuna vessels will catch their annual limit of 20,500 porpoises by Oct. 21 and be prohibited from taking any more from the eastern Pacific Ocean for the rest of the year, the Commerce Department has announced.

After Oct. 21, U.S. tuna boats may not "set" their nets on porpoises and will be permitted to land tuna only if they have an observer aboard from the department's National Marine Fisheries Service.

Foreign boats also will have to show such an observer or other certification that the tuna were not caught by setting nets on porpoises.

"Setting" on porpoises means that the fishermen use porpoises as a guide to where to catch tuna. Big yellowfin tuna frequently are found below porpoises.

'Duck stamps' to double

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has approved a bill that would double the $7.50 price of "duck stamps" sold to waterfowl hunters.

The increase will help finance acquisition of wetlands as habitats and breeding grounds for migratory birds.

The Senate-passed bill, approved by the House on a voice vote Tuesday, would raise the price of duck stamps to $15 over the next five years. It also would extend authority for a $200 million congressional loan to a waterfowl conservation fund, to be repaid by receipts from sale of duck stamps.

New embassy to be built

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government will have to build a new embassy in El Salvador as a result of last Friday's Earthquake, the State Department said Monday.

Embassy operations have been moved to the residence of U.S. Ambassador Edwin Corr. They will continue there until a suitable temporary site can be found, said department press officer Pete Martinez.

'Mr. Bubble' to be sold

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — A New Jersey company that manufactures air fresheners and other household products has agreed to buy the Gold Seal Co., maker of Mr. Bubble bath soap, officials of the companies announced Tuesday.

Airwick Industries Inc. of Carlstadt, N.J., will take over the family-owned company as soon as the Federal Trade Commission approves of the deal, said Gold Seal chairman and founder Harold Schafer. No purchase price will be disclosed, he said.

Schafer and Airwick Presdent Michael Sheets announced the agreement in a joint statement issued Tuesday afternoon.

"It is felt that Gold Seal's brands and products ... are well positioned with specialty market niches and represent an excellent strategic fit with Airwick's present businesses," the officials said.

Gold Seal also makes such products as Snowy Bleach and Glass Wax.

Airwick Industries, a subsidiary of Reckitt & Colman of London, England, makes Airwick room fresheners, Carpet Fresh, Bully bathroom products and Binaca breath freshener.

'Massive' compromise defense bill ready for final action by Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise $291.8 billion defense authorization bill is ready for final action by Congress now that House-Senate conferees have agreed to provisions covering arms control and chemical weapons.

Work on the massive defense bill was completed Tuesday night after conferees adopted language urging President Reagan to continue compliance with the nuclear-arms limits of the unratified SALT II treaty.

The final agreement, which gives Reagan $28.5 billion less in military spending than he requested for fiscal 1987, also included compromises on the production of chemical weapons, payment of union wages for defense workers and an affirmative action program for minority defense contractors.

The arms control language, which parallels agreements made last week on the catchall government spending bill, states that continued observation of the SALT II limits are in the nation's best interest.

The House had voted to require continued SALT II compliance, while the Senate had urged Reagan to continue observing the 1979 treaty.

In return for adopting SALT II language more favorable to House conferees, Senate negotiators won a provision allowing the Pentagon to proceed with production of chemical weapons, which the House had voted to bar by a one-vote margin.

But the compromise left Congress the option of reconsidering the chemical weapons issue next year.

Under the agreement, the Army can begin production of the 155 mm chemical artillery shells but cannot "fill, load, assemble or pack" them during the current fiscal year.

Conferees also agreed to allow production of the Bigeye chemical bomb to begin Oct. 1, 1987, with final assembly put off until after Oct. 1, 1988.

Fair skies continuing

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland-area residents may expect fair skies through Thursday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Forecasters at the NWS are calling for a high on Thursday in the middle 70s.

Tonight, a low in the middle 40s is forecast, along with easterly winds at five to 10. Winds will shift to the southeast at five to 10 mph on Thursday.

Tuesday's high was 17 degrees below the record high of 91 set for that date in 1970. This morning's low of 43 was seven degrees above the record high set for this date in 1966.

STATE

Clear skies were reported over almost all of Texas today as a result of a high pressure system in the state.

An exception was far South Texas, where skies were mostly cloudy and a few thunderstorms dotted Gulf waters off the coast of Brownsville.

Early morning temperatures in the 40s were most common throughout North and West Texas, while readings in the 50s covered a large part of the southern part of the state.

However, under the cloudiness, readings over the extreme south and the lower valley lingered in the 60s. Overnight extremes ranged from 39 at Marfa to 66 at Brownsville.

Under the dome of high pressure, prevailing breezes were northerly, but rather light, averaging about 5 mph.

The National Weather Service said showers could occur in the Rio Grande Valley today, with isolated thunderstorms possible tonight in far West Texas and along the Big Bend. Elsewhere, conditions were expected to be fair through Thursday.

NATION

Most of the nation had dry weather early today, although rain was scattered across the Great Lakes region, northern Maine and the Florida Coast while snowshowers fell in northern Michigan.

A large high pressure extending from the northern Rockies to the southern Plains cleared skies and lowered temperatures across most of the central states.

Temperatures were in the 30s to 40s early today from the northern and central Plains and the Mississippi Valley across to the Great Lakes, and dropped into the 20s in western sections of the Dakotas.

About an inch of snow had fallen at Marquette, Mich., by early today.

Up to 4 inches of snow fell in northern Michigan on Tuesday, but it was melting quickly and was expected to be wiped out by temperatures in the 40s today.

Mets clip Astros in 12

By CLAIRE SMITH
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The Mets were too tired, too emotionally exhausted and, most importantly, still a little too in awe of the Houston Astros pitching to gloat.

Yes, the Mets had won Game 5 of the National League Championship Series to move within one victory of the World Series. And yes, the Mets can now defy the Astros to sweep two games in order to deny them their first pennant since 1973.

Still, the Mets knew just how close they had come to a possibly fatal loss before staving off the Astros for a grueling 2-1, 12-inning victory.

After the tautly played, 3-hour, 45-minute marathon, Gary Carter, the slump-ridden catcher who delivered the game-winning hit off reliever Charlie Kerfeld, called the victory an act of justice. By many standards, it was not just justice that has the Mets ahead, three games to two.

"We were real lucky to still be in the game," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "We only had two hits going into that inning. We were fortunate to still be out there."

INSTEAD OF being down a game, the Mets left for Houston Tuesday night knowing that if Bob Ojeda can beat Houston's Bob Knepper today (2:05 p.m), the championship is theirs.

Still, the Mets certainly cannot gloat over the one-game advantage. Not when the offense managed only four hits. And not when the game-winning hit was delivered, as Carter said, by the grace of "the good Lord."

The hit improved Carter's postseason performance to 2-for-22.

"Whether or not it's a lot of hits, it's key hits," Carter said. "That's all that matters."

Sparse but timely hits were not the only proof that Lady Luck was humming "New York, New York" this cloudy day. The Mets also defied the odds by handing an almost unhittable Nolan Ryan a no-decision. It took equally great starting pitching to offset the amazing righthander's two-hit, 12-strikeout performance.

Dwight Gooden met the tough standards.

After losing the opener to Mike Scott 1-0, Gooden "rebounded" by pitching to a draw with Ryan. Gooden was even better in terms of endurance, pitching 10 innings for the first time in his three-year major league career. He allowed only one run, gave up nine hits, walked two and struck out four.

Gooden called it a "must-win" situation for him. Even though he didn't win, more importantly, he did not lose. "It was very important for us," he said. "We'd have a better chance going back to Houston only needing a split. This was the biggest game of my career."

As if great pitching and extremely fortuitous hitting were not enough, the Mets also got an able assist from the men in blue. One call in particular may have cost the Astros a victory.

WITH RUNNERS on first and third and one out in the second inning, Astros shortstop Craig Reynolds grounded to second baseman Wally Backman. Shortstop Rafael Santana took Backman's throw for the out at second and then went for Reynolds at first. Replays indicated Reynolds beat the throw by a stride, but umpire Fred Brocklander ruled differently, calling an out for an inning-ending double play.

"I felt I beat it, by how much is irrelevant," said Reynolds, who argued to no avail. "In my mind, there was no question I was safe."

The scoreless tie was broken by Houston three innings later, ironically on an almost identical play.

This time, the batter was second baseman Billy Doran, who, batting with runners on first and third, grounded to Backman. This time, said Backman, "I got a little bit of a in-between hop." Handcuffed for a brief moment, Backman's failure to start the play cleanly enabled Doran to reach and Alan Ashby to score from third.

Ashby had started the rally with a double, moved up to second on an infield single by Reynolds and then on to third on a fielder's choice ... the classic pitch-and-putt Houston offense. But compared to the Mets' output against Ryan, that was a rally of immense proportions. For Ryan had no-hit stuff for 4⅓ innings.

He lost his no-hitter and shutout on one swing in the fifth inning.

"It was a fastball, down and in," Ryan said. "In that situation, I'm going to throw my best pitch and he just hit it."

New York's Gary Carter tells the story of Mets' 2-1 win over Astros.

Angels teeter toward failure

By MURRAY CHASS
New York Times News Service

BOSTON — The California Angels, who last Sunday stood one strike from the first pennant for them and their star-crossed manager, Gene Mauch, teetered on the brink of another failure Tuesday night after the Boston Red Sox crushed them, 10-4, and tied the American League playoff at three games each.

The teams will play the seventh and deciding game at Fenway Park tonight. Roger Clemens, the 24-game winner, will pitch for the Red Sox, who lost the first two games he started in this series. The Angels' pitcher will be John Candelaria, who was the third-game winner.

The Angels' precarious predicament broke a remarkable resemblance to the indignity they and Mauch suffered in 1982. In the three-of-five-game playoff that year, the Angels won the first two games from Milwaukee, but the Brewers won the next three and the pennant, leaving the Angels and Mauch still looking for their first pennant.

THEY THOUGHT they might have it Sunday when Donnie Moore had two strikes on Dave Henderson with two out in the ninth inning, but Henderson hit a game-tying, two-run home run and the Red Sox won, 7-6, in 11 innings.

This game was not so close. The Red Sox amassed 16 hits. Spike Owen, the shortstop, had four and Marty Barrett, the second baseman, three.

Dennis (Oil Can) Boyd, Boston's emotional pitcher, started shakily, allowing two runs and five base runners in the first inning. But he settled down and gave up only one additional run in the next six innings that he pitched.

The start of the game plunged the Fenway faithful into gloom, but the Red Sox quickly snapped themselves and their fans out of the doldrums. They scored two runs without a hit in the first inning for a 2-2 tie and erupted for five runs in the third inning with a playoff record-tying one-inning barrage of six hits, against Kirk McCaskill.

The first three innings took 90 minutes. The first inning lasted 39 minutes and required a total of 71 pitches to secure the necessary six outs. That's how shaky McCaskill and Dennis (Oil Can) Boyd were at the start.

Boyd, the third-game loser, who was starting on three days rest, walked Ruppert Jones with one out, then struck out Brian Downing. However, Reggie Jackson and Doug DeCinces cracked consecutive doubles high off the wall in left-center field, giving the Angels a quick 2-0 lead.

THE ANGELS loaded the bases following the second double on Dick Schofield's infield single and Boyd's pitch that hit Bobby Grich. A hit there could have put the Red Sox in deep trouble, but Boyd induced Rob Wilfong to hit a popup in the infield for the third out.

McCaskill, who gave up six runs in losing the second game, didn't allow a hit in Boston's half of the inning, but he walked the first two batters, Wade Boggs and Marty Barrett, and they scored on the combination of two groundouts and Bob Boone's passed ball. The first grounder put them at second and third, the passed ball enabled Boggs to score, and Barrett scored from third as Jim Rice grounded out.

The wobbly pitchers maintained the 2-2 tie through the top half of the third inning, but the Red Sox battered McCaskill in their half of the third.

Spike Owen, the ninth batter in the Boston lineup, ignited the onslaught by stroking a single to center. Boggs singled to right and Barrett lined a double to left-center that drove in Owen and gave the second baseman nine hits in 23 at-bats, a .391 average.

Bill Buckner then singled to center, driving in Boggs and moving Barrett to third. Barrett was tagged out in an ensuing rundown on Rice's grounder to third, but McCaskill could not get the second out.

Batting with runners at first and second, Don Baylor lined a single to right-center. Buckner had held up between second and third, waiting to see if the ball would be caught, so Rene Lachemann, the third-base coach, stopped him at third.

However, Baylor ran well past first, and when Bobby Grich cut off the throw from Jones on the third-base side of the mound, he fired to first, trying to catch Baylor. The throw was wild, skipping into the photographer's box next to the Red Sox dugout.

Earlier, Jackson set league career series records of 36 hits and 20 runs batted in, knocking George Brett's name from two lines of the playoff record book.

Boston's Red Sox get a lube from Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd as Angels falter again.

MHS, Lee nail Odessa V-ball teams

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

After posting an easy 15-5 volleyball victory in the first game against Odessa Permian Tuesday night, the league-leading Midland High Bulldogs had a fight on their hands in the second.

But, good teams can handle stiff competition and Midland High is a good team. Trailing 6-1 in the second game, the Bulldogs rallied to tie at 8-8 on a devastating spike by Amy Cumings.

It was the first of three straight spikes the Bulldog senior had in the crucial middle of the second game. The second gave MHS a 9-8 lead the Bulldogs never relinquished and the third made it 10-8 and helped lead the way to a 15-10 victory.

There was little difference between the first two spikes, both hard and to the floor with authority. The third, however, was like a baseball change up, a soft spike that left Permian defenders swatting at air.

Beating Permian was important for Midland High because the Bulldogs lead the District 4-5A standings with a 7-1 record, a day off better than Midland's next opponent, San Angelo. The Bobcats set up a 4-5A one-two showdown with a 15-5, 15-12 victory over Abilene High for a 6-1 record.

MIDLAND HIGH has a well-rounded team this year with offense a little better than defense. At least that's the way the Bulldogs are thinking.

"Our strength, offense," said Cumings. "All of us are hitters. We can set to just about anyone we want to. On defense, we've got good passers."

Memorial's forgettable night

As far as miserable nights go in District 4-5A, Friday's San Angelo-Midland High game has to rank high as one of Memorial Stadium's most forgettable contests ever played.

The 42-0 romp by San Angelo was bad enough, but the rain-drenched Homecoming activities were washed out and only about 200 loyal fans remained in the stands before it was over.

I was one of the lucky onlookers, owning a booth in the press box, but even that envious position had its drawbacks.

From my position, the game was viewed through a foggy blur. Maybe, that's the way this game should be remembered anyway.

A thin film of dirt covered the press box windows. Rain didn't clean the windows. It just made trying to see the playing field that much tougher. It was a bit like being in one of those carnival mirror houses where everything is distorted.

Homecoming should be a festive event. This one wasn't. We didn't even get to see Paige Prado crowned as Homecoming queen. Paige will go down in history as the queen who didn't get a halftime party. And we needed a party at the time.

You have to go back to Midland Lee's 15-6 victory over Midland High on a November night in 1976 to find worse conditions at Memorial Stadium. That's the night three-feet of snow was dumped on the stadium from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. when the game started. They played anyway while Odessa High and Odessa Permian decided to wait until Saturday to play over in Odessa.

That was the night I was scheduled to cover a game between Andrews and Monahans in Andrews. Before I could get two miles out of town, I had lost the road. There was just a sea of white with fence posts visible on either side of the road.

A quick decision was made to forget the assignment in Andrews, return to Midland to see one half of the Lee and Midland High game before heading back to the office. A trip from Memorial Stadium to downtown Midland turned into a 35-minute ordeal.

But Friday was bad enough. After the game, the duty sheet called for an interview with San Angelo's Bronza Moore. After all, Moore had a big game with what was believed to be 134 yards rushing and two touchdowns. That's just a guess since the game was seen in a foggy blur.

After crossing three lakes and ruining a pair of shoes to get to the San Angelo dressing room, San Angelo coach Jimmie Keeling refuses to let members of the press talk with his star running back.

It's just a guess, but Keeling is probably still paranoid over a story written by the San Angelo Standard Times two years ago before a game with Lee when some of his players said all the wrong things. Lee went on to a big victory that week and Keeling evidently still doesn't trust his players to open their mouths to anyone with a pen in hand.

It wasn't like anyone with the press wanted to write something bad about a kid who did some remarkable things on a sloppy night. The only thing that could have come out of such an interview would have been positive at worst.

At any rate, you don't talk to kids in San Angelo. And that ranks this particular night as the worst I can remember in this business.

If San Angelo makes the playoffs, the Bobcats will be the most colorless team in the state for fans.

At 39, Ryan still smoking fast balls

By BARRY LORGE
Copley News Service

NEW YORK — Nolan Ryan went into the ninth inning with the squint of an old gunfighter, hurting but still able to produce smoke.

Baseball's all-time strikeout leader wasn't thrilled about facing the New York Mets in Game 5 of the National League Championship Series Tuesday at soggy Shea Stadium. He would rather have pitched Game 6 today, indoors at the Astrodome in Houston, where there are no chilly days or rain delays that might stiffen the elbow that put him on the disabled list twice this season.

But Manager Hal Lanier designated him to oppose Dwight Gooden, who has struck out more hitters in his first three seasons than anybody else in major-league history.

The match-up was tantalizing. The young Dr. K, age 21, against the long-time fastest gun in baseball, age 39 — the winner to put his team within one game of the World Series.

"I pay no attention to that whatsoever," Ryan said. "My job is to go out there and shut the other guys out if I can, and if not, just give us a chance to win the ballgame. Just keep us in the game. I don't care who gets the win, who I'm facing, any of that stuff."

Wally Backman and some of the other vociferous Mets predicted that Ryan would run out of gas after four or five innings, as he did in losing Game 2 in Houston, 5-1, after a blazing start.

Ryan didn't pay no mind to those words, either. He has been pulled at around 100 pitches in every start since he went on the DL for the first time in his career on June 2, but this is the playoffs.

"My intentions were to pitch today as long as I possibly could," he said. "If that meant throwing a high number of pitches, fine. I was prepared to do that."

FORGET THE weather and the tender elbow, Ryan came out throwing smoke. "That's the only thing I've known," he said.

He was simply brilliant. He retired the first 13 batters he faced, striking out two in each of the first four innings.

He hardly made a mistake in the game, even on the 3-2 fastball that Darryl Strawberry lined inside the right-field foul pole for a home run in the fifth inning. It was on the inside corner, just above the knees. "He made the pitch he wanted. I just went down and got it," said Strawberry. "Nolan Ryan pitched a tremendous game."

He out-pitched Gooden, though neither was around at the finish, when Gary Carter's single off Charlie Kerfeld in the bottom of the 12th inning made Jesse Orosco the winning pitcher. After Strawberry's homer, Ryan allowed only two more men to reach base — Keith Hernandez on a single and Strawberry on a walk in the seventh inning. He went nine before being removed for a pinch hitter, giving up two hits, striking out 12.

He threw 134 pitches.

"I was tiring," he said. "The elbow aches, it tires. The tendency with my elbow is that the longer the game goes, it affects my curve ballfirst. The last three innings, I just canned it. I had no feel on it. I couldn't throw it for strikes."

He threw sinkers instead. Mets manager Davey Johnson was impressed. Ryan hasn't beaten the Mets since 1984 — he was 0-3 against them this year, not counting last week's playoff loss — but the old gunslinger showed him something.

"Ryan had outstanding stuff today," Johnson said. "He was throwing an outstanding fastball, a good curveball, and a sinker. I don't know where he came up with that."

Necessity is the mother of invention.

"I started doing that after my elbow problems, because I haven't been real consistent with my curveball, and some days I can't throw it," Ryan said. "I had a good sinker today, too. That helps."

Doctors have urged Ryan to have an off-season operation to reconstruct the ligaments in his pitching elbow, similar to what was done to veteran pitcher Tommy John. But John has always lived by the sinker, not the fastball. Some specialists have said Ryan cannot pitch another year without the risky procedure, but he thinks otherwise.

"I'm not planning on having surgery," he said. "There are several schools of thought there, and one is that it will heel itself. When I went on the disabled list for two weeks and didn't throw at all, I felt I got some positive results. It should work. I'm anticipating pitching, and hoping I don't have a bad arm. If I do, I'll pitch another year with a bad arm."

If he pitches as he did Tuesday, he will keep striking people out.

"It was strictly power pitching today," said Hernandez, a student of pitching and hitting baseballs. "I only got one curve from him today, and it was a ball. He threw cutters in and a turnover sinker away and sometimes he'd cross in and ride it up and in, up and away. He was never off the corners. He was on the paint all day. It was just a great game. He changed speeds on his fastball and was in and out. The sinker is the reason I say the man will be able to pitch. He's tougher to hit than ever before. It was strictly heat and the curve before. Now he's got that sinker running away, and that's another weapon against a left-handed hitter."

The gunslinger may be 39, but he is not finished.

Simmons returns to UT practice

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas running back Edwin Simmons, suspended Sept. 28 for disciplinary reasons, has returned to practice as the Longhorns prepare for Saturday's meeting with Arkansas, Coach Fred Akers said Tuesday.

Akers would not say if Simmons would be allowed to play against the Razorbacks, only that he was cleared for practice.

"It is my decision," said Akers, "but I value the opinion of my players. This is their football team, and they felt it was best that he get back out here."

Akers had asked his team their opinion of whether Simmons should be reinstated, and the players asked that Simmons present his case to them.

Following a meeting with Simmons, Longhorn team leaders told Akers they were convinced that the senior deserved another chance.

Simmons' suspension came after he was apprehended naked outside an Austin house by police who responded to a prowling call. No charges were filed, but Simmons missed the Longhorns' games with Rice and Oklahoma.

"I made a mistake," Simmons said following the Tuesday practice. "I am just happy to be back out here. I realize that what I did caused embarrassment to my school and my team.

Portland signs Berry to four year contract

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Walter Berry has his sights set high as he prepares for his first year of professional basketball.

Berry, last season's college basketball player of the year, signed a four-year contract Tuesday with the Portland Trail Blazers.

Afterward, he was asked about his goals for the coming year.

"Just making the all-rookie team," the 6-foot-8 forward said, "and hopefully Rookie of the Year."

Terms of Berry's agreement with the Blazers weren't announced, but team officials said it included incentives that will pay the former St. John's standout more money if he performs at a certain level.

"It gives him the opportunity to become the player he thinks he can be and we think he can be in this league," said Bucky Buckwalter, the Blazers' vice president for basketball operations. "If he plays well in his rookie year, we have some bonuses that will allow him to do very well financially."

VOLLEYBALL

"Offense because we have excellent hitters and consistent setters," echoed Melinda Carrasco, who had a few spikes and some strong blocks of her own. "We've got power, definitely, and we're good at dinks. We've been practicing on them."

The Bulldogs also have a strong, hustling defense with six girls willing to go to the floor after any shot.

And, once they've got the ball?

"We've got good passers," said Cumings. "We couldn't do it without our passers."

"I think we have a well rounded format," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "All of our players can play every position on the court. I don't think we have a weak player, we win or lose as a team. Also, we have a strong bench. I don't use it much, but when I do they contribute."

THOUGH MIDLAND High played a good game against Permian, Carrasco doesn't rate it as good as the one the Bulldogs played against San Angelo in the first half of the season. But still, the grade she gives isn't bad.

"A minus because we can do a lot better than this," said Carrasco. "Against San Angelo we played a lot better than this. This was a good game, but not as good as we're capable of."

The Bulldogs can do a lot this weekend toward winning the district title when they travel to San Angelo, always a tough place to win a game, much less a match.

The key for a title?

"We have to play together, never say die. That's kind of our motto," said Carrasco. "We have to go after everything like it's the championship."

ELSEWHERE AROUND the league, playoff hopeful Midland Lee kept its cause alive with an easy 15-1, 15-8 victory over Odessa High.

The Rebels are in third at 5-3, 1½ games behind San Angelo and two games behind MHS.

"We played real well, real consistent," said Lee coach Janice Baulch. "We did a real good job offensively and did a real good job on the back line defensively. We looked real good."

Part of the "good" showing comes from Lee's upset win over Midland High on Saturday.

"They're still flying high from that and it's given them a lot of confidence in their abilities, abilities I knew they had all along," said Baulch.

This new confidence is coming at a time when the odds are long for a district title. Second place, however...

"Realisticly, we're shooting for second place but we have to take care of our end first because if we don't take care of our end, it's not going to matter what happens to the rest of them."

So, Baulch and her Rebels will be rooting for the Bulldogs to beat the Bobcats while they hope to take care of Abilene Cooper at Lee Gym at 2 p.m.

Ditka agrees with TV interruption

CHICAGO (AP) — Angry viewers thought otherwise, but Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka says a network's decision to interrupt weekend NFL games with special reports from the pre-summit in Iceland was a question of priorities.

"If you get an arms-control thing set up," said Ditka, "I think that's a little more important than what we're doing with this stuffed up piece of pigskin. Our thing can't blow up; the other thing can blow up.

CBS interrupted the Bears-Houston Oilers game and seven other football games Sunday for the special news reports, prompting thousands of fans to call the network.

"I'll tell you what," said Ditka, who wasn't pleased with the Bears' game despite a 20-7 victory over the Oilers, "I wouldn't have wanted to watch most of our game anyway."

Philadelphia Eagles could be Pelluer's biggest test

IRVING (AP) — Now comes Steve Pelluer's biggest test.

He thought Denver and Washington had good pass rushes, but the former fifth-round draft pick from the University of Washington has never gone against the "Chicago Bear" 4-6 defense of Buddy Ryan.

Ryan was the defensive coordinator of the 1985 Super Bowl champion Bears and is now the head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles.

And on Sunday, he will be sending his eight-man line, blitzes and changeups at the Dallas Cowboys' third-year quarterback unless starting quarterback Danny White has a miraculous turnaround with his lingering injury.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday that White's pulled groin muscle and strained hip aren't responding to treatment.

"I'm not sure why Danny isn't progressing, but his injury just isn't healing the way it should and it's disappointing," Landry said. "It looks like he won't play for another week. I wouldn't play him unless he was 100 percent."

Landry said the Cowboys will need a nimble quarterback like Pelluer to avoid the Eagles' blitzing defense.

"You have to have somebody in there who is active and moving," Landry said.

Pelluer's scrambling tactics helped the Cowboys to a 30-6 victory over the Washington Redskins last Sunday to tighten the NFC East race. The loss dropped Washington into a tie with the New York Giants at 5-1. Dallas is 4-2.

White, who is the NFC's top-rated quarterback, also missed a 29-14 loss to Denver in which Pelluer made his NFL starting debut.

"I'd better get well quick," White joked. "A lot of people are finding out how good Steve can be. I've known it for a long time."

"Steve is doing the best job of any quarterback I've seen coming off the bench," Landry said. "He has poise. You can't rattle him. He'll be tested this week. The Eagles play Ryan's Bear defense and they really come after you. It's a very good scheme."

Landry said he expected Ryan to concoct a special defense to stop Herschel Walker, who had 200 yards offense, including six catches for 155 yards against the Redskins.

"The more success Herschel has the more attention teams are going to pay to him," Landry said. "We've played him at three different positions and the defenses didn't know where he was coming from.

"We had a lot of formations that put him on linebackers and when you get that much power and speed into an open area big things can happen," he added. "Teams will start to get a book on Herschel and it will make it tougher to get him open. Then we might have to go elsewhere."

Landry said the day will come when he will put Walker into the same starting backfield, with Tony Dorsett.

"It's always possible it could happen," Landry said. "Right now I think we have three starters, Tony, Herschel and Timmy Newsome."

Dallas rated a four-point favorite over the Eagles, although the Cowboys were upset 16-14 in Veterans Stadium last year. It's the only time Philadelphia has defeated Dallas in the last three years.

Girl plays in football game

AUSTIN (AP) — She didn't make it into the game until the fourth quarter, but when her team lined up against unbeaten Fulmore Tina Tejo of Bedicheck Junior High took another step toward the record book as only the second girl to play on a Texas boys football team.

The 14-year-old stood on the sideline for the first three quarters of Bedichek's 39-13 loss Tuesday at Burger Center.

Thirty seconds into the fourth quarter, after Fulmore scored its last points, the 5-foot-3, 164-pound eighth-grader lined up on the front row for Bedichek's kickoff receiving team, then played four downs at offensive left guard.

After Bedichek punted, she was in for four plays at defensive tackle. Two plays after Bedichek again went on offense, she was in for two plays, with the Bobcats scoring on the second play. She went down to cover on the ensuing kickoff after Bedichek recovered a fumble in the closing minute and finished the game with two more offensive plays.

Tina had gained a spot as a guard on Bedichek Junior High's team in early September before being dropped under a University Interscholastic League rule barring girls' participation in football.

Through an agreement reached Tuesday between her lawyers and the interscholastic league, Trejo will be allowed to continue playing under a restraining order that was continued indefinitely.

Diane Henson, representing Trejo, her parents and the American Civil Liberties Union, said the league at its Legislative Council meeting in Austin Sunday and Monday also will consider a proposal to allow junior high girls to play football. Henson and Bill Farney, league athletic director, both said they expect a 38-year-old prohibition against participation by high school girls on boys' teams to remain in place.

Trejo actually got in for one play last week under protection of the restraining order issued Sept. 26 in state District Court and continued Oct. 6 by federal District Judge James Nowlin against the interscholastic league and the Austin Independent School District.

"We may be able to resolve Tina's problem through a rules change," Henson said. "The UIL indicated it wanted to resolve the problem internally, through its Legislative Council. The indefinite extension of Judge Nowlin's order will mean in essence that Tina will be allowed to play the whole season."

Bedichek's coaching staff refused comment on her participation in the game. Fulmore Coach Javier Reyes said "I knew she might play, but I didn't know which one she was, so I can't comment on what kind of football player she is.

"I'm dead set against girls playing because of the risk of injury," Reyes said. "If girls were meant to play football, one would be in the NFL by now."

Fiesta pay rises in pact

PHOENIX (AP) — Under a new four-year deal with NBC-TV, the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl's payoff to each team in the Jan. 1 football game may reach $2 million in 1988, according to bowl officials.

Bruce Skinner, the bowl's executive director, said Tuesday the new contract had been negotiated with NBC over the past two months.

"We now feel we have a chance to have a national championship game in the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl," Skinner said. "We always felt we had a chance before, except financially."

The four other New Year's Day games all pay more than the Fiesta.

The Cotton and Orange bowls pay about $2 million per team, the Sugar Bowl $2.25 million and the Rose Bowl nearly $6 million.

Bears acquire Flutie

CHICAGO (AP) — Apparently, no challenge is too big — or too small — for the Chicago Bears.

The defending Super Bowl champions on Tuesday staked a claim to quarterback Doug Flutie, counting on the same intangibles that made 330-pound William "Refrigerator" Perry small enough for the NFL to make the 5-foot-9 1984 Heisman Trophy winner big enough.

"It's nice to know that somebody wants you," said Flutie, celebrating at Boston's Fenway Park with agent Bob Woolf during Tuesday nights's American League playoff contest between the California Angels and the Red Sox.

Bears General Manager Jerry Vainisi said the Bears gave the Los Angeles Rams a "middle-round" future draft pick for the National Football League rights to Flutie, 24.

He declined to be more specific, and said the Bears were looking to sign Flutie to a 1987 contract, but wanted him "available this season if something happened to our quarterbacks."

"We did not give a high draft choice, so we thought 'why not take a chance,'" Vainisi said during a break in Tuesday's NFL owners' meeting.

"We know he has the ability to be competitive and play football," continued Vainisi. "The only knock against him is his height."

Vainisi and owner Michael McCaskey warned against reading too much into the deal, especially as it related to the jobs of starter Jim McMahon, or backups Steve Fuller or Mike Tomczak.

McMahon has been hampered by injuries through most of his career and is currently nursing a mild shoulder separation. Both Fuller and Tomczak have been starters during this season.

"It is not our intention to disrupt our 45 players," said Vainisi.

"We feel we paid a fair price (for Flutie)," said McCaskey. "But the gratification will have to be delayed. We'll have to wait to see him in Platteville (Wis., the Bears' preseason training camp)."

Flutie said he was ready to wait until the 1987-88 season.

Arthroscopy has quick results

Few scientific advances have had the impact enjoyed by arthroscopy. Not only has this procedure saved millions of dollars, it has demonstrated vast superiority over conventional open joint surgery.

In the past, when a patient has a torn meniscus or cartilage in the knee, the joint was opened with a two to three inch incision and the meniscus totally removed. The resultant hospital stay was usually three to four days.

The patient also suffered significant pain and stiffness of the joint and did not feel "normal" for six to eight weeks. More importantly, greater than 50 percent of the people treated by this method developed significant arthritis because of the lack of meniscal function.

With arthroscopy, the patient may be treated safely as an outpatient and since the procedure is so atraumatic, little pain or stiffness results. Meniscus tissue is preserved and arthritic changes are minimized. The patient is back to normal in as little as two weeks.

Whereas the concept of arthroscopy was first developed in the 1930s, a Japanese orthopedist, Dr. Mikada Watanabe, is credited with being the father of modern day arthroscopy.

Beginning in 1957, Watanabe was determined to develop a safe, easily usable arthroscope. It took 12 different designs before his basic criteria were met. The Germans, with their superior knowledge of light physics, fiberoptics and electronics, became interested and by the 1960s the harbinger of today's arthroscope was developed.

In the early days of this new science, the pioneers of arthroscopy primarily confined their activities to developing surgical techniques and trying to discern what was pathological and what was normal. The knee joint received the vast proportion of study because its size and anatomical uniqueness. Even into the mid-1970s orthropedic surgeons were divided concerning the benefit of arthroscopy. Many felt this discipline to be little more than a "medical fad."

An "arthroscopic revolution" then occurred which convinced even the most disbelieving. This revolution was the logrhythmic explosion of knowledge and clinical proof was a major medical breakthrough.

Today, almost any intra-articular procedure can be accomplished arthroscopically. This has radically changed treatment protocols for almost all joint diseases and injuries.

One of the basic principles of arthroscopic surgery is the preservation or repair of tissue instead of its removal. The goal is restoring the joint to mechanical normalcy. It is difficult to do this by removing a protioi of the joint structure. It is much better to restore the normal anatomy by repair.

Arthroscopic surgery tends to be technically difficult. The arthroscopic surgeon needs to be prepared to perform a multitude of different procedures, depending on the pathology noted within the joint. Many of these techniques should not be attempted by anyone less than a full-time arthroscopist.

To be truly expert, the surgeon should do arthroscopy on a daily basis and arthroscopy should comprise at least 75 percent of his surgical practice. There really is not a place for the occasional arthroscopist. Results of surgery and complications give testimony to this fact.

The future of arthroscopy is exceptionally bright. Techniques are being developed for almost every joint. We are doing things today that were considered impossible five years ago. The net result for the patient is a major cost savings, much less pain and a much better joint.

Dr. Jerry L. Cochran is president of the Midland Orthopedic Center and specializes in sports medicine and arthroscopic surgery.

SA Holmes holds grip on 5A No. 1

Associated Press

San Antonio Holmes kept its No. 1 ranking in Class 5A over second place Odessa Permian in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll.

McKinney in 4A, Daingerfield in 3A, Refugio in 2A and Valley View in A won their games by an aggregate 268-12 last week and just as easily held their top ranks.

Holmes defeated San Antonio Harlandale 63-0, McKinney blanked Terrell 21-0, Daingerfield defeated Clarksville 42-6, Refugio routed Orange Grove 61-0 and Valley View beat Collinsville 81-6.

Daingerfield, the defending 3A champion, again was the unanimous pick, receiving all 22 first-place votes cast by the AP's panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Cuero, last year's state finalist, and Ballinger remained second and third following a week in which all 10 3A ranked teams were victorious.

Holmes received 15 first-place votes and easily held its top rank over runner-up Odessa Permian, second with 191 points, and No. 3 Dallas Carter, 171. San Angelo moved to No. 6 after a 42-0 win over Midland High.

Ninth-ranked Cypress-Fairbanks lost for the second straight week and was replaced in the poll by Port Arthur Jefferson, which beat Beaumont Central 16-13. Central dropped from No. 4 to No. 10.

McKinney received 15 first place votes and held a 213-196 lead over runner-up Corsicana in 4A voting.

Sulphur Springs was the only casualty in 4A, playing to a 7-7 tie with Kilgore and dropping to 10th.

All 10 teams in 3A remained unchanges from last week.

The first seven teams in 2A remained unchanged from last week but Nos. 8 and 9 Franklin and Seymour lost and No. 10 Pilot Point was tied for the third time this year.

Franklin dropped off the list and Olney became the No. 9 team. Seymour dropped to 10th and Pilot Point moved to No. 8.

Valley View got 20 of the 22 first places votes in A for a 218-183 lead over Meridian.

Other teams receiving voter consideration included: 5A, Converse Judson 22 points, Wichita Falls High 21, Cypress-Fairbanks 12; 4A, Brenham 23, Cleburne 19, Carthage 11; 2A, Mart and Leon 11 each, Franklin 10.

Quantity nice, but quality counts

Anemic Mets win without hot bats

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Quality counts.

Quantity is nice, but for the New York Mets, quality is what has brought them to the brink of the World Series. Quality, and a little bit of luck, which always helps.

This team which led the league in hitting during the regular season is batting an anemic .185 against Houston pitching in the National League playoffs.

THE METS have come to bat 48 times in the playoffs and scored in only seven innings. And in three of those innings, they have scored just one run.

They have 32 hits, 26 of them singles. They have scored 14 runs, less than three per game. In the last 21 innings, they have managed three runs and seven hits. In the first three innings of games they have gone 1-for-47 and struck out 19 times.

Their No. 5 hitter is batting .235, not much, but a ton more than their cleanup man, who is at .091.

And yet, today the Mets went into the Houston Astrodome, their personal house of horrors, needing just one more victory to clinch the National League pennant.

They reached this pleasant plateau when Gary Carter, the No. 4 man, snapped a horrendous 1-for-21 playoff slump with a 12th-inning single that delivered the winning run in Tuesday's pulsating 2-1 victory. A quality hit at a most appropriate moment. No waste here.

WHAT DID Darryl Strawberry, the No. 5 man, think about Carter's chances in that spot?

"I had the feeling he was going to do it," said Strawberry, whose home run in the fifth inning was the first hit off Nolan Ryan and the only run the Mets had to that point.

Strawberry, in the on-deck circle, motioned to Carter with his hands to swing easy. "He's been trying to jack everything out." The message was that a single would do quite nicely.

Keith Hernandez, the Mets' No. 3 hitter, had confidence in Carter, the slump notwithstanding. "Athletes have strong egos," he said. "Strong men rise to the occasion."

Carter rose.

"It was about time," he said. "There really is justice in this world."

Oh?

Carter may think there's justice, but you might have trouble convincing the Astros of that right now. If there really was justice, then Nolan Ryan would have had a 2-1 two-hit victory and the Astros, not New York, would be in front in this series.

The run the Astros didn't get in Game 5 came in the second inning when Dwight Gooden escaped a jam on a double play that really was nothing more than a forceout. Craig Reynolds seemed to beat the relay to first by a half step, but was called out by umpire Fred Brocklander. Reynolds and first-base coach Matt Galante, a couple of mild-mannered guys, ran at Brocklander, screaming to no avail.

"Anytime Reynolds and Matt argue, I have to think the ump missed it," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "It was a judgment call. He said it was very close and he thought the ball beat Reynolds to the bag."

Even viewing replays couldn't convince Brocklander, who called it "a matter of depth perception." That's right, the camera's depth and the umpire's perception. Give the man this year's Don Denkinger Award.

To their credit, the Astros did not moan and groan over Brocklander's call. They went about their business of trying to solve Gooden. And they didn't once accuse him of scuffing the baseball.

THE METS, on the other hand, have accused Houston's Mike Scott of doing all sorts of nefarious things to the baseballs. How else could he have beaten them twice in this series? They have even offered — in the jargon of the replay — indisputable visual evidence.

Chub Feeney, president of the National League, considered the Mets' complaints and found Scott innocent of any misdeeds. "As far as we know, Mr. Scott is not guilty of this infraction," Mr. Justice Feeney declared.

This means Scott, perhaps wearing a utility belt under his uniform blouse, awaits the Mets if the Astros can push this series to a seventh game.

Should that happen and should he win again, then Feeney's finding may come to be known as the dreaded Scott decision.

SMU Mustangs feel scholarship pinch

Associated Press

SMU is 4-1 but the Mustangs may be feeling the impact of NCAA restrictions — no scholarships at all this year and only 15 next year.

"Most schools have 95 scholarship players; we have 70," Coach Bobby Collins says. He says the missing players have cut down on the number of potential specialists on the kickoff and punting teams.

Baylor defensive tackle Steve Grumbine wasn't impressed with highly touted Southern Cal guard Jeff Bregel in last month's meeting.

"He wasn't as tough as I thought he was going to be," Grumbine said. "I was expecting more of a physical game out of him, but he is quick and moves well. he just isn't the type of player I thought he would be. He's more of a get-in-your-face and hold-you and that's a little different from the other people I have gone up against in our conference."

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield

SWC Notes

on nose guard Tony Cherico.

"Tony Cherico is a message to anyone who plays the game. He makes big plays when everyone is tired. We require our linemen to run a mile in 6:30 (in preseason camp) and he finished in 6:02. He wins the sprints after practice every day. He was prepared to make plays like he has. That's the difference between being ordinary and being a champion."

Scott Bednarski, a sophomore running back at Texas Christian, is the son of professional wrestler Ivan Putski. Scott joined his father on the tour last summer as a tag team partner.

"The best part, of course, was being able to spend that much time with my dad, but the constant travel was a bummer," says Scott, who established a TCU weightlifting mark with a 450-pound bench press. "We were on the go from one city to the next and from one coast to the other all the time."

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, October 16, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Expect a great deal from others, but do not forget to carry your share of the load. A new self-confidence helps you climb the ladder of success more rapidly. A love relationship or marriage is strengthened by the little things you do. Unexpected expenditures worry you, but careful budgeting will allow you to increase savings. You should feel much more secure by this time next year. Keep an eye on loved ones' spending.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Murder, She Wrote" star Angela Lansbury, actor Michael Conrad, actress Linda Darnell, basketball's Dave de Busschere, outdoorsman-jurist William O. Douglas, Mets' play-by-play announcer Tim McCarver, playwright Eugene O'Neill, actress Suzanne Somers, lexicographer-author Noah Webster, poet Oscar Wilde, Israel's David Ben-Gurion.

ARIES (March 21-April 29): Do not allow yourself to be too involved in an outsider's problems. You need to take a wait-and-see attitude where partnership funds are concerned.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make the most of a golden opportunity but do not press for financial rewards at this time. Share the limelight with loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Meeting deadlines on time preserves your reputation. Carefully weigh the benefits of a new hobby or creative venture. Romance sparkles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more conscientious in your financial dealings. Other people are relying on you. Keep all diet and exercise resolutions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A conciliatory attitude will improve teamwork. Profits grow. Brilliant solutions are available but you must take the initiative. Try new methods.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Purchasing a home is a wise investment now. Capitalize on your ability to talk your way to success, but back your claims with facts and figures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22: An excellent day to launch a new vocational or business project. A financial move proves most rewarding. A brief encounter could lead to a happy romance. Just be careful not to go too fast!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be careful with finances today -- a hasty reaction could cause tensions to build. Budget revision could be a quick solution.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Compartmentalize your business and personal lives to avoid a conflict of interest. The news concerning overseas business is good. Others look to you for leadership. Do not let them down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your financial ties with other people are in the spotlight. Be reticent if asked to reveal your sources or allies. Someone may be trying to outbid you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 10-Feb. 18): Expect good luck if dealing in real estate or stocks. Your intensity will attract some people but offend others! Follow someone else's lead if you think he is on the right track.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your resourcefulness is your biggest asset in your career and financial dealings. Let your special talents shine. Shopping or investing gives you a positive and glorious outlook.

You get no prize for playing fast. While we do not suggest that you play so slowly that you become a drag to the rest of those in the game, you should stop to see whether you are not committing hari kiri by choosing a particular line.

North was maximum for his raise to two hearts. Had he had a ruffing value instead of a square hand, he would have been too strong. So when South made a game try, North accepted quickly.

The defenders got off to an excellent start with West's club lead. East took his ace and returned the suit for declarer to ruff. A trump to the king lost to the ace, and back came another club. Declarer ruffed once more and cashed the queen of trumps. When West showed out, there was no way for declarer to make his contract.

The hand was lost when declarer ruffed the second club. Instead, he should have discarded a diamond—a trick he had to lose. Let's suppose East shifts to a diamond. Declarer wins and draws trumps. Now he will make the contract if spades break 3-3 or if the player with four spades also holds both missing diamond honors or at least four diamonds, as is the case here.

When declarer plays his last trump he will remain with four spades and two diamonds while the table is down to four diamonds and three spades. West must release his guard in one suit or the other and permit the contract to come home.

There's a lot more to this hand. We'll discuss it again tomorrow.

Transplant operation leaves man with two functioning hearts

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A man has two functioning hearts as a result of a transplant operation that doctors say will allow his new heart to gradually take over the functions of the original.

"He has two heartbeats on the EKG and two separate heartbeats when you listen to him," Dr. Kirk R. Kanter said Tuesday. Kanter and Dr. D. Glenn Pennington performed the operation at The University Hospital at St. Louis University Medical Center.

Kanter said the surgery, known as a heterotopic heart transplant, took nearly seven hours Saturday. He declined to disclose the patient's name, but said the 44-year-old St. Louis man had been forced to quit his job a few months ago because of heart failure.

"We're pleased with his progress so far," Kanter said. "He's out of intensive care, and he's walking around."

Only under unusual circumstances would surgeons remove the old heart, Kanter said.

"We anticipate that the patient's own heart will continue to deteriorate, but the new one will take over more and more of the work," Kanter said. "The new heart will do as much work as necessary. Hearts are pretty smart when it comes to that."

Kanter said patients had survived for years with two functioning hearts in South Africa, where the procedure has been used since 1974. Similar operations also have been performed elsewhere in this country and in Britain, doctors said.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies in early trading today on European foreign exchanges. Gold prices fell.

Dealers in Frankfurt said trading was thin because the market was waiting for the release of a number of key U.S. economic indicators.

But the underlying sentiment among traders was that the dollar was headed downward and only fear of further intervention from European central banks was propping the currency up.

The banks, led by West Germany's Bundesbank, intervened heavily on Tuesday to support the dollar.

—1.9792 West German marks, up from 1.9745

—1.6185 Swiss francs, up from 1.6165

—6.4825 French francs, up from 6.4725

—2.2352 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2340

—1,370.25 Italian lire, up from 1,367.50

—1.38735 Canadian dollars, down from 1.38875

The British pound fell to $1.4370 from $1.4380.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 154.05 Japanese yen, unchanged from Tuesday's close. Later, in London, it was quoted at 154.10 yen.

Gold bullion opened in London at a bid price of $426.30 a troy ounce, down from $428.75 late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $426.25.

In Zurich, the bid price for gold was $425.50, down from $428.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold dropped $4.74 to close at a bid of $424.34.

Silver bullion was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.58 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.61.

Texas Air acquisition of People Express gets nod

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department gave tentative approval Tuesday to the Texas Air Corp.'s proposed acquisition of the financially weak People Express Inc. and most of the remaining assets of Frontier Airlines Inc.

But the agency delayed a final decision for at least seven days to allow both Texas Air and opponents of the merger to address questions raised about the impact of the merger on competition.

"We tentatively find that the transaction is not likely to substantially reduce competition," the agency said. But it added that it did have "concerns" with the level of competition in the national market, in particular on routes between the New York area and Washington and on flights and routes to and from Denver.

In a similar case, the Transportation Department tentatively agreed to the Texas Air-Eastern Air Lines merger, but on Aug. 26 it held up the merger, saying the plan would reduce competiton on the shuttle routes linking Boston, New York and Washington. After an earlier agreement to spin off gates and arrival slots to Pan Am was then expanded, the department on Sept. 18 approved the acquisiiton, worth $676 million.

Texas Air officials declined to comment on the department's action until they had time to review it.

But People Express officials predicted that the merger would ultimately be approved. They also said that they were trying to get Texas Air help to make an interest payment due Wednesday. But they stressed that, even if People did not make the payment, it would continue to fly.

"All aircraft will be flying as scheduled, whether we make this interest payment tomorrow or not," said Russell Marchetta, a spokesman for People.

Commenting on the department's action, Robert E. Cohn, a People attorney, said: "We view it as an extremely positive decision. DOT responded favorably on all the competition issues similar to the Department of Justice's conclusions. It is our view that it is unlikely that any opponents will be able to convince DOT to overturn their tentative conclusions on the competition issues."

Cohn said that People had received no word yet from Texas Air on whether it would help People make the $13.4 million interest payment. "We don't know at this point what Texas Air is going to do," he said, noting that Texas Air first wanted to study the department's decision. "I'm hoping whatever funding we need will come forward."

However, Cohn stressed that, even if People Express defaulted on the interest payment, that would not immediately force the company into bankruptcy proceedings. Because of technical language in the equipment trust certificates, the debt instruments in question, he said, failure to pay the interest Wednesday "will not trigger any event that would force People to terminate operations."

Marchetta, the People spokesman, said that this de facto grace period was "more than a week," but both Cohn and Marchetta declined to be more specific.

Texas Air had agreed to give cash-starved People up to $49.5 million in return for up to 12 aircraft to help tide People over until the merger was consummated. So far Texas Air has provided $30 million, said Bruce E. Hicks, a Texas Air spokesman. But Hicks would not comment on whether Texas Air would help People pay the interest.

"We're going to review the order" from the Department of Transportation "and determine its impact," he said.

Texas Air, People Express and the Justice Department had urged quick approval of the acquisition, in part to help People Express make the interest payment on Wednesday. People Express had argued that failure to approve the merger by Tuesday would leave it unable to make the interest payment.

The financial problems of People Express intensified in recent weeks after a sharp drop in business during September.

Owner Linda Green, left, and Joe Whitford, general manager, say their new store could be a boon to local small business or individual businesspersons.

Private post office opening soon

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

There's more to Mail Boxes Etc., USA than mail boxes.

Billed as an alternative to the U.S. Post Office, the California-based franchise will be opening a Midland store around the first of November. "We should appeal to the businessman who has his office at home," says Linda Green, who owns the local franchise with her husband Ban.

Green and Joe Whitford, general manager, plan to open the store, located at North Park Shopping Center between Vista Savings and Zody's Ice Cream, with 100 mail boxes. Whitford says that a customer can call the store to see if there's any mail. "If we have time, we'll even read him the letter," Green adds.

Whitford points out that the store can be a boon to the small businessman, particularly one based out of his (or her) home, explaining that the home-based businessman could use Mail Boxes Etc.'s telex number for his services, and even the street address as his office address, with his box number as a suite or apartment. He can even get secretarial service, a message center and answering service at the store. "The independent geologist, for example, could get all the services a big business gets for a lot less cost," he says. Right now, only customers will be able to use the answering service, according to Whitford.

One of the major services will be Western Union, according to Green. Customers can use Western Union's telegrams, mailgrams, cablegrams and computer letters through an arrangement made with Western Union by Mail Boxes Etc.

Also available will be copying services, packaging and shipping — both overland and air express, money orders, office supplies, and even floral delivery service. Customers can also order stationary, business cards or rubber stamps, and even get keys made.

Green and Whitford, in the market for "something not oilfield-related but still useful," saw an ad for the franchise in a copy of the Wall Street Journal. After traveling to stores in Lubbock and Austin, the two spent a week at the corporate offices in San Diego, and will spend a week at the Lubbock store before opening the Midland location.

Mail Boxes Etc. was founded in 1980 by Californians Herb Goffstein and A.W. (Tony) DeSio. DeSio serves as president and Goffstein as chairman of the board. The chain has been compared to the McDonald's triumph, due to its franchising success. "We provide a complete turnkey operation, offering extensive support to franchisees. The franchise requires minimum labor, costs and inventory requirements," Goffstein notes. The Midland store is the 366th store in the chain, and Green says there should be 400 stores open by the end of 1986.

Oil analyst sees two year wait for price turnaround

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

An oil analyst for a major investment company predicts it will be at least two years before there is any significant improvement in oil prices.

Laurie Law, an oil futures analyst for E.F. Hutton in New York, says that structural changes in economic dependence on oil have permanently altered the course for improvement in the market for U.S. oil and gas for two years.

"Oil has long been a global commodity — it is only now becoming more apparent to Americans because of our country's diminishing control over the market," says Law, who was in Midland to address an investment seminar Tuesday evening.

"OPEC, despite having lost market share, still holds the largest clout in the world market and will continue to be the players to watch in the future of oil prices," Law notes.

"Investors and analysts have been optimistic that prices would rise since the first of the year, but the anticipated increase in demand hasn't materialized." Law says that total U.S. petroleum demand is expected to rise only 1 to 1.1 percent this year over 1985, not a significant enough increase to impact prices favorably for domestic producers.

And there is no indication that non-U.S. demand will increase in the near-term. "Countries that were oil importers in the 1970s, such as Brazil and India, are now energy self-sufficient. Those markets are lost and won't be regained for world producers.

Laurie Law

"It is difficult to advise anyone because I do not see any improvement," Law said. "We have to expect more volatility in the oil market because we haven't completed the current down cycle of the industry.

"There are a lot of factors that are beyond the control of the people of Midland and even out of the reach of the people of the United States."

FCC head: States should regulate phone rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — State regulators should let local phone companies raise or lower prices at will, ending 100 years of artificial pricing schemes, the head of the Federal Communications Commission said.

In an article prepared for the Federal Communications Law Review, Chairman Mark S. Fowler and two associates call for a three-year experimental suspension of regulation to determine if competition and the ability to act quickly on business opportunities could bring lower costs for all phone users.

Under the proposal put forth Tuesday, a state would be permitted to regulate home phone rates only if it was willing to use taxpayer money to subsidize them.

As a futures analyst, Law has closely watched the New York Mercantile Exchange crude oil futures trading from its inception in 1983 to its current rise to prominence as a pre-eminent pricing mechanism in the world market.

As for those who allege that futures trading was responsible for the price collapse of early '86, Law says that the success of futures trading reflects fundamental changes in the oil market that had already taken place before the establishment of NYMEX. Futures prices reflect the worldwide over-supply of oil, but didn't create it.

"Prices would have come down, futures prices simply allow higher visibility of price movements, and will to some degree exaggerate price movements both upward and downward," she says.

For producers, futures trading represents an additional risk management tool, which can be used to hedge against coming price movements, but whose value is still being discovered by many participants in the market.

While not offering a blanket endorsement of futures trading for all producers in all situations, Law says that futures hedging "shouldn't be dismissed out of hand," by producers.

ELEGANT END-OF-SEASON GRILL-FEST

SINCE ALMOST NOTHING compares with the taste of foods cooked in the open air, why not stretch the season this year? Invite some of your favorite people and, whether or not it's warm enough to dine alfresco, guests will probably make forays to the backyard or patio while sampling the special hors d'oeuvres.

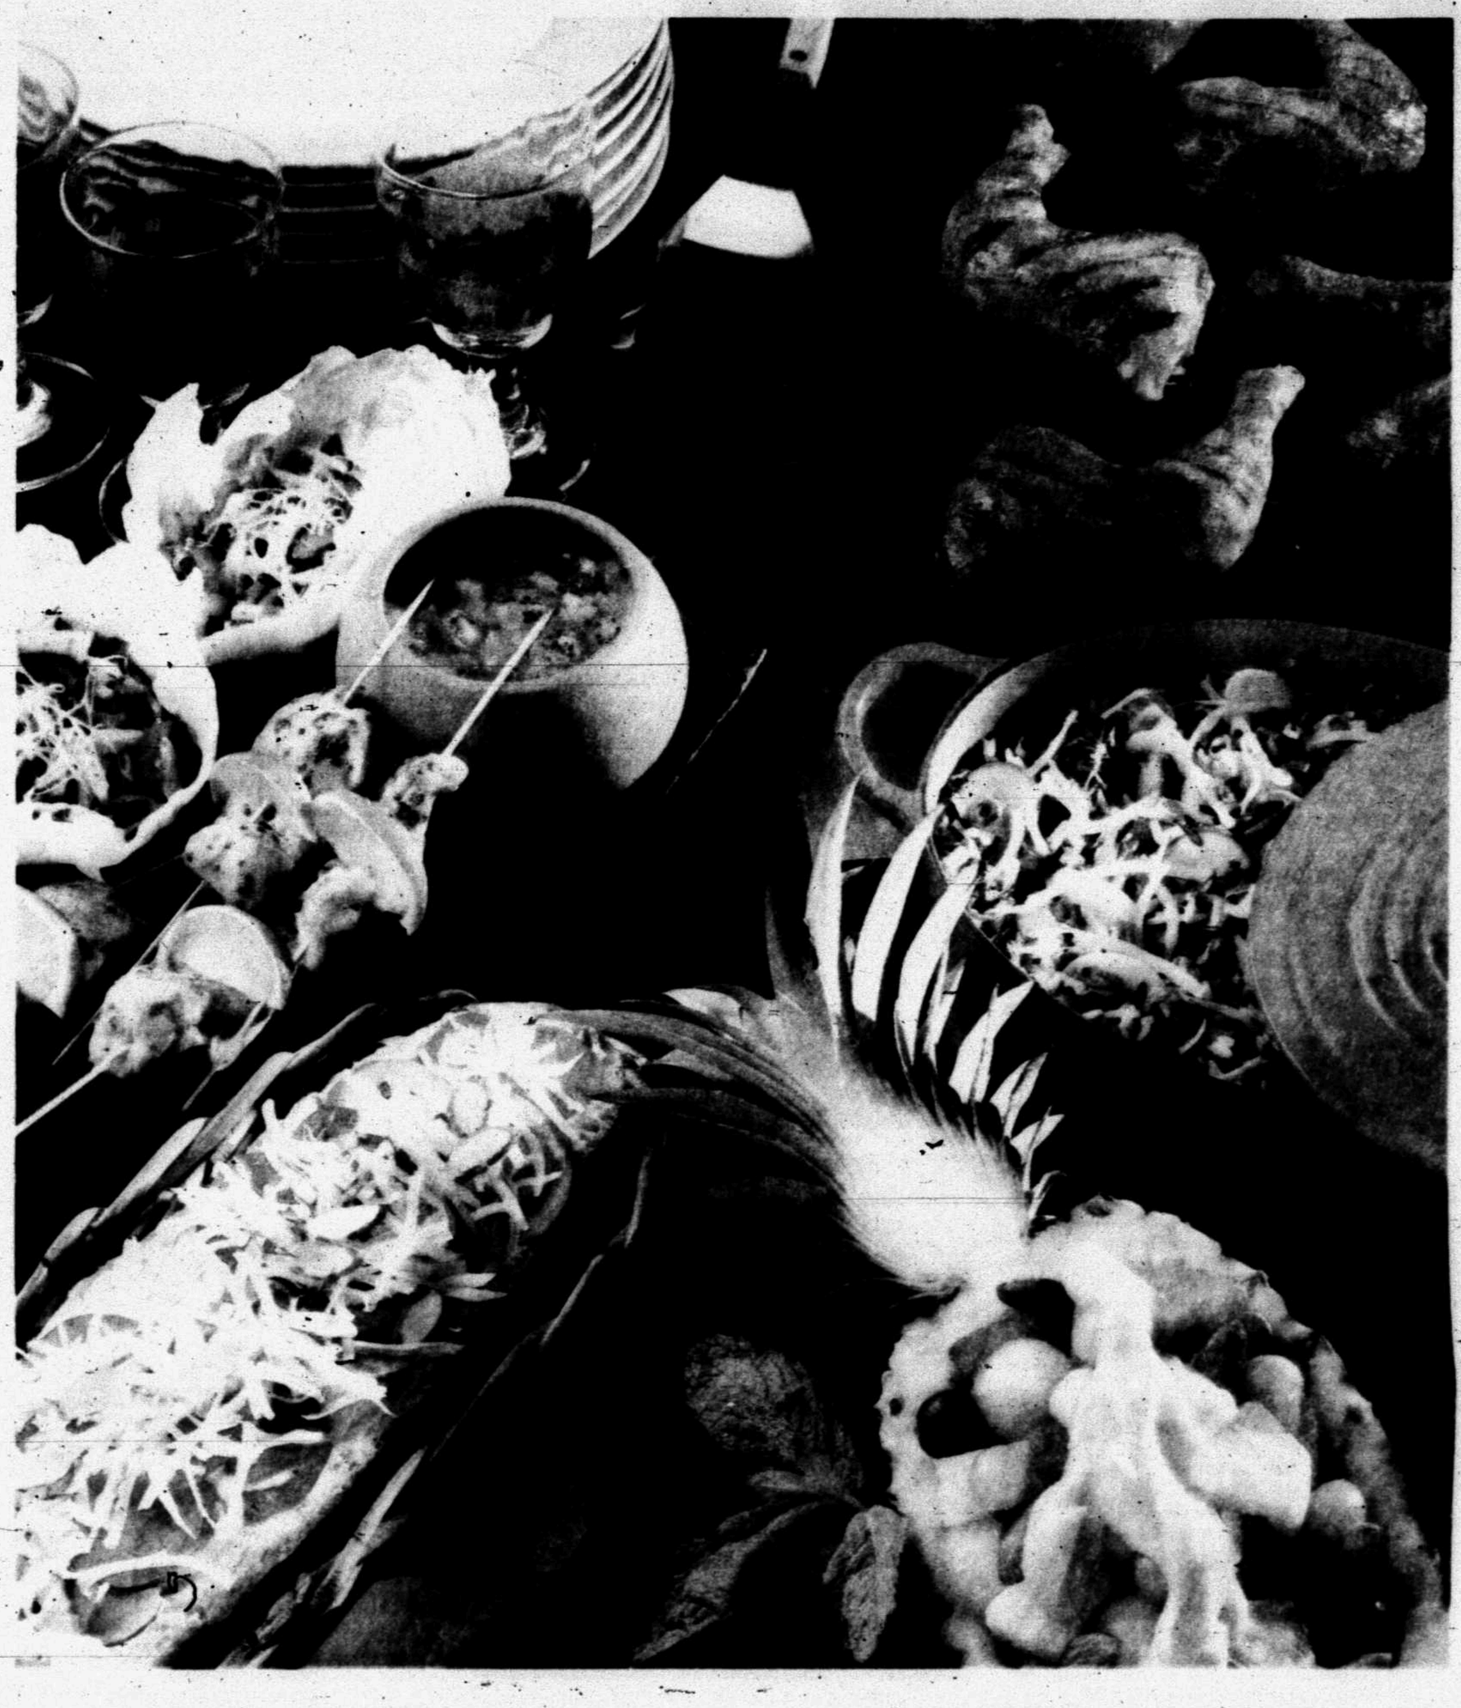
This menu offers an intriguing, sophisticated — yet surprisingly simple — group of dishes that are appropriate year-round. (Note that oven times are given as alternates to grill directions.) The rather unusual recipes, which use readily available ingredients, combine highly versatile almonds, Norwegian cheeses and chicken in novel ways, with very delectable results.

Did you know that nutty Jarlsberg (Yarls-berg), because it's made using part-skim milk, is lower in calories and fat than many cheeses? It's also loaded with precious calcium and protein — just like delicately spiced, semi-soft Nokkelost (Knock-a-loast) and naturally sweet Gjetost (Ye-toast). Creamy, golden brown Gjetost has a pleasing caramel accent, perfect for the sauce in this dazzling fruit dessert.

And what would a barbecue be without chicken? This wonderfully adaptable bird, used here in both appetizer and entree, is not only light in flavor but low in both calories and cholesterol. Chock-full of protein and other healthy things, it's the economical bird everyone loves.

California almonds add delightful crunch and rich, toasted flavor whenever you use them. One of the most versatile of nuts, they go from appetizers to desserts, adding good taste and a host of nutrients as well. High in Vitamin E, the B Vitamins, calcium, fiber and iron, they add texture, flavor and flair.

To enhance your reputation as a hostess, serve this intriguing grill-fest soon!



VEGGIE LETTUCE WRAP-UPS

1/2 cup slivered almonds
1 head iceberg lettuce
1 cup slivered cucumber (English type, if available)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup cherry tomatoes
1 cup slivered yellow crook-neck squash
1" cup shredded Jarlsberg or Nokkelost cheese
1/4 cup fresh cilantro (or dried equivalent with a few sprigs of parsley, to add color)
1/2 teaspoon dill weed
1/2 teaspoon basil, crumbled

Spread almonds in shallow pan. Toast at 350° F. for 10 minutes or until golden, stirring once or twice; cool. Core, rinse and drain lettuce. Chill in plastic bag to crisp. Sprinkle cucumber with 1/2 teaspoon salt; let stand in colander 5 minutes. Drain liquid, pressing out excess moisture. Cut cherry tomatoes into wedges.

Combine cucumber, tomato wedges, squash, cheese, toasted almonds, cilantro, dill weed and basil; toss to mix well. Place in serving bowl. To serve, separate lettuce into leaves. Fill with vegetable-cheese mixture and roll up. Makes 12 servings.

LIME CHICKEN KABOBS

4 boneless chicken breast halves, cut in 1-inch chunks
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 strips lime zest (1 x 1/2 inches)
1/4 teaspoon marjoram leaves
1/4 teaspoon savory leaves
1/4 cup fresh (or bottled) lime juice
1/2 cup water
1/4 teaspoon ground coriander
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 lime, cut into 16 pieces
Kiwi-Lime Dipping Sauce (recipe below)

In frying pan over low heat, melt butter; add lime zest, marjoram and savory while stirring. Add lime juice and water; increase heat to medium and simmer 5 minutes. Place chicken chunks in bowl; sprinkle with coriander, pepper and salt; toss to mix. Pour sauce over chicken; cover and refrigerate at least 6 hours.

On small skewers, place 1 chunk of chicken, then a piece of lime and another chunk of chicken. Arrange kabobs on prepared grill and cook about 8 minutes, turning and basting with sauce.* Serve hot with warm Kiwi-Lime Dipping Sauce. Makes about 16 hors d'oeuvres on skewers.

Kiwi-Lime Dipping Sauce. In frying pan, melt 2 tablespoons butter over medium heat. Add 1/2 cup fresh lime juice and 1 cup chicken broth. Bring to boil; add 1 tablespoon minced onion and 3 tablespoons minced sweet red pepper. Mash 3 peeled kiwis, sprinkle with 1/4 cup sugar and set aside. Mix together 2 tablespoons arrowroot and 1 teaspoon ground ginger; stir in 2 tablespoons teriyaki sauce. To mixture in pan, add 3 tablespoons of the sugar and kiwi mixture; slowly add arrowroot mixture, stirring until thick and clear. Cook over low heat about 15 minutes. Serve warm with Lime Chicken Kabobs.

*Or set oven on broil with rack 5 to 6 inches from heat. Broil about 6 minutes on each side, turning skewers once.

GRENADINE-GLAZED CHICKEN

8 broiler fryer chicken quarters
4 cloves garlic
1 1/4 cups tarragon vinegar, divided
1/2 teaspoon black peppercorns, freshly ground
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 can (16 ounces) jellied cranberry sauce
1 cup grenadine
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
1/16 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1/4 cup sherry
3/4 teaspoon salt

Split garlic cloves and rub over chicken; then place garlic in small saucepan with vinegar. Bring to boil; remove 1/4 cup vinegar and allow to cool. Pour remaining vinegar over chicken and sprinkle with pepper. Mix reserved vinegar and cornstarch and set aside. In saucepan, place cranberry sauce, grenadine, mustard and hot pepper sauce over medium heat. Cook about 5 minutes, stirring until smooth. Stir in cornstarch mixture and cook 1 minute. Add sherry and remove from heat.

Place chicken on prepared grill, about 8 inches from heat. Grill, turning and basting every 10 minutes with vinegar used in marinating, for about 1 hour or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease.* Sprinkle salt over chicken and, with skin side down on grill, baste generously with grenadine glaze. Turn chicken and quickly glaze the other side. Remove to serving platter and top with additional glaze, if desired. Makes 8 servings. (Recipe may easily be doubled or tripled, for additional servings.)

*Chicken may also be cooked in 350°F. oven for about 1 hour or until fork-tender.

GRILLED JARLSBERG STUFFING

1 medium zucchini, halved lengthwise and sliced
1 small yellow squash, halved lengthwise and sliced
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 medium clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons olive oil
1-1/2 cups cooked white rice
1 cup cooked wild rice
1 large tomato, chopped
1-1/2 cups shredded Jarlsberg cheese
1/2 cup sliced green onion
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1/2 teaspoon thyme, crushed

In large skillet, saute zucchini, yellow squash, mushrooms and garlic in oil until just tender. Remove from heat and blend with remaining ingredients, reserving 1/2 cup Jarlsberg for topping. Spoon into shallow foiled 1-1/2-quart baking pan or heat-proof casserole, as shown. Cover with heavy duty foil.

Heat on rack above grill, or over indirect heat on grill, for 20 minutes or until heated through.* Just before serving, sprinkle with remaining Jarlsberg cheese. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

*Or, bake in 350° F. oven for 30 minutes, until heated through.

GARDEN ALMOND CHEESE BREAD

1 cup sliced almonds
1 loaf (1 pound) French bread
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 green pepper, thinly sliced
1 red pepper, thinly sliced
2 cups shredded Jarlsberg cheese
1/4 cup sliced green onions

Spread almonds in shallow pan. Toast at 350°F. for 10 minutes or until golden, stirring once or twice; cool. Slice bread lengthwise in half. Spread cut surface with mixture of butter and garlic. Arrange pepper rings on top. Combine cheese, almonds and green onions. Sprinkle down center of loaves.

Place on broiling pan, broil 3 inches from heat source (coals or broiler) for 3 to 5 minutes, or until cheese is melted and bubbly. Slice to serve. Makes 12 servings.

GJETOST-TOPPED PINEAPPLE BOATS

3 pineapples, halved
2 nectarines, pitted and sliced
2 plums, pitted and sliced
1 cup halved strawberries
1 cup blueberries
1/2 cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1/2 cup shredded Gjetost cheese
1 tablespoon almond-flavored liqueur
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
3/4 cup toasted unbleached whole almonds
Mint sprigs

Cut pineapples in half lengthwise. Scoop out fruit, leaving about 1/4-inch shell. Remove core and cut up pineapple into cubes. Reserve 2 cups (save remaining pineapple for future use).

Combine pineapple cubes with remaining fruit. (Any seasonal fruits may be substituted to total approximately 4 cups.) Spoon into boats. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve.

In saucepan, combine cream and cornstarch. Cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth. Add remaining ingredients, except nuts. Heat, stirring, until cheese melts and sauce is smooth. Pour into glass bowl. Cover immediately with plastic wrap and let stand, allowing mixture to come to room temperature.

To serve, spoon sauce over fruit and sprinkle with almonds. Decorate with mint sprigs, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Education built on rock of attendance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It might interest you to know that a letter from your column was used as the basis for a feature story about an outstanding student at Roosevelt-Wilson High School in Nutter Fort, W.Va.

Buffie Blackshire, 16, excelled in several fields of endeavor both in and outside of school and had a perfect attendance record since kindergarten. The principal of that high school thought that letter was so effective that he included it in a newsletter he sent to parents. I have enclosed that letter, hoping you will run it again. — MARGARET WILSON

DEAR MARGARET: Here's the letter:

DEAR ABBY: Now that school has resumed, as a high school teacher, may I make a few suggestions that would greatly improve our nation's educational system and cost the taxpayers nothing?

Make school attendance a top priority!

A message to students: Stop skipping school because you don't want to face a challenging day. Accept those challenges and do your best. Your whole life will be filled with challenges, so learn to deal with them now — one day at a time.

A message to parents: Stop letting your children skip school to go shopping, to go hunting, to sleep in, to go on a family vacation, to nurse a minor ache, or whatever. It's your responsibility to see that your children get eight hours of sleep each night, eat nutritious meals (especially breakfast) and get to school on time.

A message to business people: Stop hiring students to work during school hours. And please stop hiring teen-age students to work after 8 p.m. on evenings before a school day. They need time to study and get a good night's sleep for school the next day.

A message to doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers: Please stop pulling students out of classes for non-emergencies to accommodate your schedules. Most students are dismissed at 2:45 p.m., so please give them late-afternoon appointments. Their education is as important to them as the schedules of adult patients and clients are to professionals.

Abby, recent studies show that we are a nation at risk. In the last 10 to 15 years, the quality of our education has deteriorated dramatically. An appalling number of our high school students are certified illiterates, and absenteeism is one of the main causes.

Students who do not attend classes cannot be taught. — SMALL-TOWN TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Bravo! Well stated. Students, parents, business people, doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers, please take note and make school attendance a top priority.

DEAR ABBY: Don't people know what a doorbell is anymore? I live in a small town in Massachusetts where no one seems to use a doorbell — people just sit in the car and lay on the horn to beckon someone from his house.

This inconsiderate practice knows no limits. Horns can be heard at 6 a.m. or 2 a.m. I don't live on a busy street — it's a neighborhood where houses are close together.

The man across the street is picked up precisely at 6:40 a.m. every workday. I know his ride is coming at that time. Why doesn't he?

What is wrong with people these days? How did such ignorant and inconsiderate behavior come to be acceptable? — FED UP IN EVERETT

DEAR FED UP: Ignorant and inconsiderate behavior has never come to be accceptable, but if it persists unchallenged, it will continue. You may have to get out of a warm bed and give the picker-upper what for at 6:40 a.m. a time or two, but I'll wager the honking will stop. Try it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.J. IN OTTAWA, CANADA: Two can live as cheaply as one — if they both have good jobs.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Americans hungry for snack foods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Americans have an appetite for snack foods. Last year, they spent $600 million just on fruit snacks, a relatively new product category.

According to Del Monte USA, a maker of fruit snacks, the growing concern with nutrition is affecting even the fun foods we eat.

For example, dried fruit was traditionally used seasonally, mostly as an ingredient in cooking.

Gum researched

Copley News Service

Here's something for you to chew on: Sugarless gum may help prevent cavities.

So says researcher Dr. Mark Jensen. He claims that chewing sugarless gum stimulates the saliva glands to produce an anti-bacteria agent which neutralizes plaque.

Just how effective is chewing sugarless gum at combating cavities? Jensen says while it won't beat brushing, it's a good alternative.

Many people who won't take the time to brush after eating snacks can stick it to tooth decay by chewing a stick of sugarless gum.

For best results, sugarless gum chewers should pop in a piece right after eating and chew it for at least five minutes. That gives the body plenty of time to produce the super-cavity-fighting saliva.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It might interest you to know that a letter from your column was used as the basis for a feature story about an outstanding student at Roosevelt-Wilson High School in Nutter Fort, W.Va.

Buffie Blackshire, 16, excelled in several fields of endeavor both in and outside of school and had a perfect attendance record since kindergarten. The principal of that high school thought that letter was so effective that he included it in a newsletter he sent to parents. I have enclosed that letter, hoping you will run it again. — MARGARET WILSON

DEAR MARGARET: Here's the letter:

DEAR ABBY: Now that school has resumed, as a high school teacher, may I make a few suggestions that would greatly improve our nation's educational system and cost the taxpayers nothing?

Make school attendance a top priority!

A message to students: Stop skipping school because you don't want to face a challenging day. Accept those challenges and do your best. Your whole life will be filled with challenges, so learn to deal with them now — one day at a time.

A message to parents: Stop letting your children skip school to go shopping, to go hunting, to sleep in, to go on a family vacation, to nurse a minor ache, or whatever. It's your responsibility to see that your children get eight hours of sleep each night, eat nutritious meals (especially breakfast) and get to school on time.

A message to business people: Stop hiring students to work during school hours. And please stop hiring teen-age students to work after 8 p.m. on evenings before a school day. They need time to study and get a good night's sleep for school the next day.

A message to doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers: Please stop pulling students out of classes for non-emergencies to accommodate your schedules. Most students are dismissed at 2:45 p.m., so please give them late-afternoon appointments. Their education is as important to them as the schedules of adult patients and clients are to professionals.

Abby, recent studies show that we are a nation at risk. In the last 10 to 15 years, the quality of our education has deteriorated dramatically. An appalling number of our high school students are certified illiterates, and absenteeism is one of the main causes.

Students who do not attend classes cannot be taught. — SMALL-TOWN TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Bravo! Well stated. Students, parents, business people, doctors, dentists, counselors and social workers, please take note and make school attendance a top priority.

DEAR ABBY: Don't people know what a doorbell is anymore? I live in a small town in Massachusetts where no one seems to use a doorbell — people just sit in the car and lay on the horn to beckon someone from his house.

This inconsiderate practice knows no limits. Horns can be heard at 6 a.m. or 2 a.m. I don't live on a busy street — it's a neighborhood where houses are close together.

The man across the street is picked up precisely at 6:40 a.m. every workday. I know his ride is coming at that time. Why doesn't he?

What is wrong with people these days? How did such ignorant and inconsiderate behavior come to be acceptable? — FED UP IN EVERETT

DEAR FED UP: Ignorant and inconsiderate behavior has never come to be acceptable, but if it persists unchallenged, it will continue. You may have to get out of a warm bed and give the picker-upper what for at 6:40 a.m. a time or two, but I'll wager the honking will stop. Try it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.J. IN OTTAWA, CANADA: Two can live as cheaply as one — if they both have good jobs.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Salad combines oranges, carrots

Associated Press

ORANGE AND CARROT SALAD
3 cups shredded carrots (¾ pound)
2 medium oranges
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
Dash salt
Leaf lettuce

Place shredded carrots in a medium mixing bowl. Peel and section oranges over the bowl to catch juice. Halve orange sections. Add to shredded carrots along with lemon juice. In a small bowl combine sugar, cinnamon and salt. Add to carrot mixture; mix well. Cover and chill several hours. Serve in a lettuce-lined bowl. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Fruit dish served warm or cold

Associated Press

Serve this fruit duo warm or chilled as a side dish with ham or a roast. Or dress it up for dessert with whipped cream and shaved chocolate.

PEAR-PINEAPPLE COMPOTE
½ cup unsweetened pineapple juice
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
6 fresh medium pears, peeled, cored and halved
Whipped cream (optional)
Shaved chocolate (optional)

In a 10-inch skillet combine pineapple juice, sugar, lemon juice and ground ginger; heat and stir until sugar dissolves. Add pears, turning to coat. Bring mixture to boiling. Reduce heat. Cover and simmer 20 to 25 minutes or until pears are just tender. Makes 6 servings.

Microwave directions: In a 2-quart casserole combine pineapple juice, sugar, lemon juice and ginger. Micro-cook on 100 percent power (high) for 1 minute; stir to dissolve sugar. Add pears, turning to coat. Cook, covered, about 6 to 7 minutes or until pears are just tender, turning dish once.

Americans hungry for snack foods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Americans have an appetite for snack foods. Last year, they spent $600 million just on fruit snacks, a relatively new product category.

According to Del Monte USA, a maker of fruit snacks, the growing concern with nutrition is affecting even the fun foods we eat.

For example, dried fruit was traditionally used seasonally, mostly as an ingredient in cooking.

Gum researched

Copley News Service

Here's something for you to chew on: Sugarless gum may help prevent cavities.

So says researcher Dr. Mark Jensen. He claims that chewing sugarless gum stimulates the saliva glands to produce an anti-bacteria agent which neutralizes plaque.

Just how effective is chewing sugarless gum at combating cavities? Jensen says while it won't beat brushing, it's a good alternative.

Many people who won't take the time to brush after eating snacks can stick it to tooth decay by chewing a stick of sugarless gum.

For best results, sugarless gum chewers should pop in a piece right after eating and chew it for at least five minutes. That gives the body plenty of time to produce the super cavity-fighting saliva.

Cookbook gives no-nonsense basics

By VERNE PALMER
Copley News Service

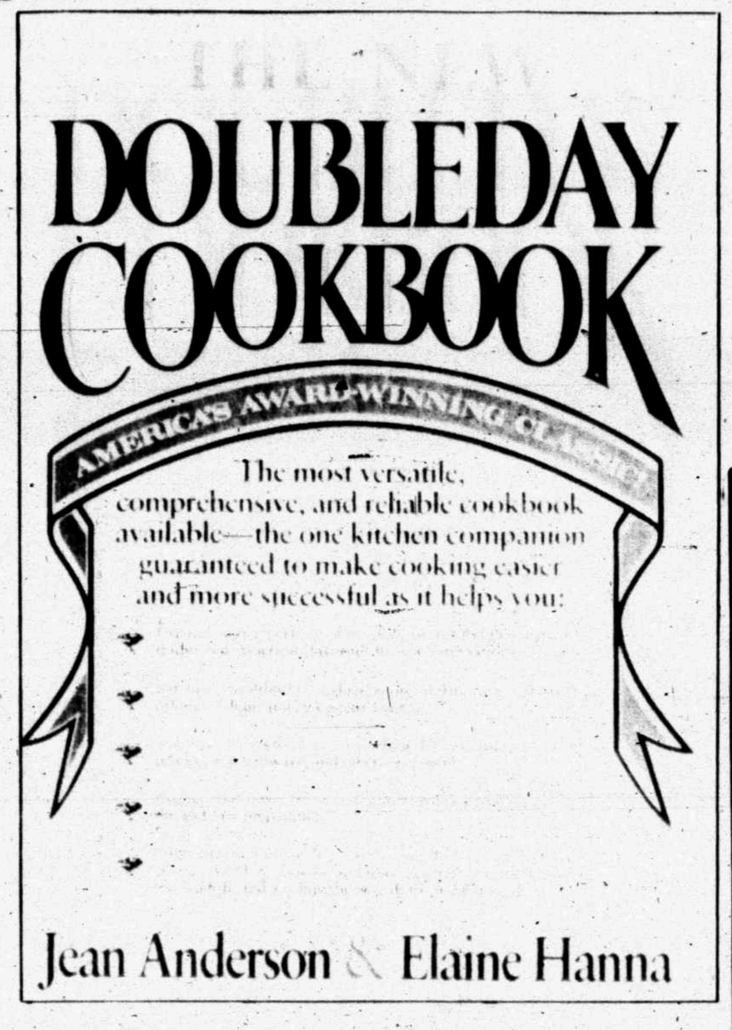
You won't find this book doing double duty on the living room coffee table, but in all honesty, you probably wouldn't have let it out of the kitchen, anyway. It's called "The New Doubleday Cookbook."

This is not a lovely book; "no-nonsense" is the kindest you could be. But its 965 pictureless pages are literally crammed with information, including such basics as:

The selection and care of kitchen utensils and appliances, cooking terms and techniques, preparation shortcuts, oven temperatures in Fahrenheit and Celsius, metric equivalents, ingredient equivalents, emergency substitutions, marketing tips, storing food and an herb and spice chart.

Then come the recipes — 4,000-plus of them, all bearing the stamp of today's calorie/sodium/cholesterol-conscious culture. There are appetizers, soups, beverages, meat, poultry, seafood, eggs, cereals, sauces, stuffings, vegetables, breads, desserts, ad infinitum.

This book is first cousin to "The Settlement House" and "Fannie Farmer" cookbooks and offers the same kind of all-inclusive fundamental information, plus the advantage of more than 135 easy reference charts and tables.



BOSTON BROWN BREAD

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1½ cups unsifted whole wheat flour
½ cup cornmeal
¾ cup molasses
2 cups sour milk or buttermilk
1 cup seedless raisins

Grease three clean, small shortening tins (the 14-ounce size) and line bottms with greased circles of waxed paper.

Sift all-purpose flour with salt, baking powder and soda into large bowl; stir in whole wheat flour and cornmeal, then mix in molasses and sour milk. Stir in raisins. Spoon into cans, filling no more than two-thirds full, cover with a greased double thickness of foil and tie or tape securely. Place on rack in large kettle, pour in enough boiling water to come halfway up cans, cover and steam about 1 hour or until well-risen and a metal skewer inserted in center of bread comes out clean.

Lift cans from water, cool upright 1 to 2 minutes on a wire rack, then invert and ease loaves out. Cool slightly on racks before cutting or cool to room temperature. Slice ¼ inch thick.

BEEF AND SAUSAGE STUFFED RIGATONI OR TUFOLI

FILLING

½ pound ground chuck
½ pound sweet or hot Italian sausages, removed from casings and minced
¼ pound mushrooms, wiped clean and minced
¾ cup hot Italian tomato sauce
½ cup diced mozzarella cheese
TOPPING
2½ cups hot Italian tomato sauce
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat over to 350 degrees. While rigatoni cools, prepare filling: stir fry beef and sausages in large, heavy skillet over moderate heat 4 to 5 minutes until no longer pink; add mushrooms and stir fry 2 to 3 minutes. Mix in sauce and simmer, uncovered, 5 minutes; cool slightly and stir in cheese. Using a small teaspoon, stuff into rigatoni, layer in oiled 2½-quart casserole or au gratin dish, topping with some of the 2½ cups sauce as you go. Add remaining sauce, sprinkle with cheese and bake, uncovered, 30 minutes until bubbly.

ITALIAN TOMATO SAUCE

2 cloves garlic, peeled and crushed
¼ cup olive or other cooking oil
1 (1 pound, 13-ounce) can tomato puree
½ cup water
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon basil
1 bay leaf, crumbled
½ teaspoon crushed dried hot red chili peppers

Saute garlic in oil in saucepan over moderate heat 1 to 2 minutes until golen. Add remaining ingredients, cover and simmer 30 to 40 minutes, stirring now and then. (Note: If doubling recipe, use 3 cloves garlic; if tripling, 4 cloves.)

TURKEY CUTLETS IN DIJON CREAM

2 pounds turkey cutlets, cut ½ inch thick and pounded thin as for scalop pine
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
½ cup unsifted flour
8 tablespoons butter or margarine (about)
¼ cup Dijon mustard
6 tablespoons dry white wine
2 cups heavy cream
2 tablespoons minced parsley

Cut turkey into pieces about 2x4 inches. Sprinkle both sides of each piee with salt and pepper, then dredge in flour. Heat 4 tablespoons butter in a large, heavy skillet over moderately high heat until a bread cube will sizzle, lightly brown cutlets, a few at a time, 1 to 2 minutes on each side, using tongs to turn, adding more butter as needed. Drain on paper towels and keep warm at back of stove.

Combine mustard and wine, mix into skillet drippings and simmer, uncovered 1 to 2 minutes until reduced to about ¼ cup. Whisk in cream and boil slowly, stirring often, until thickened slightly — about the consistency of thin white sauce. Return turkey to skillet and heat 1 to 2 minutes, stirring occasionally, over low heat. Sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Makes 6 servings.

Alligator appears on dining table

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Now that Paul Prudhomme's blackened red fish has caught on nationally, there are those around Louisiana who hope a similar popularity could await an overlooked work of Mother Nature — the alligator.

The fact is that alligator meat is slowly gaining popularity.

The Cajuns from the start were adept at making great food from the ingredients they found at hand, and what their hands found a lot of was alligators. The result is a host of traditional recipes using the meat in wondrous ways.

Around New Orleans these days, alligator is turning up not only in Cajun concoctions but in a wide variety of other expressions. One Chinese restaurant even offers it stir-fried. Here, however, is one of the old faithfuls.

GATOR SAUCE PIQUANT

3 cups white wine (optional)
2 pounds alligator meat, cubed (see Note below)
2 cups chopped onions
½ cup cooking oil
2½ cups chopped bell pepper
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped shallots
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 8-ounce cans tomato sauce
1 can stewed tomatoes
1 6-ounce can sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon basil
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon oregano
Salt and black pepper to taste
1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce

If you care to, you can get additional flavor from the alligator meat by marinating it in the white wine for about 1 hour before adding it to the sauce.

Saute the onions in oil until dark golden brown, stirring often. Add the bell pepper and celery, cooking until they are tender. Add the tomato sauce and tomatoes along with the seasonings.

Simmer for 10 minutes, then add the mushrooms and drained alligator meat. Cover and cook for 40 minutes, then add the shallots and the parsley and cook for 10 minutes more. Served with boiled white rice.

Note: Louisiana wholesalers are now sending out alligator meat nationwide, with samples going to Europe and Japan. Much of the meat is finding its way to canners, who are selling it via gourmet shops and fancy meat or fish markets. Check with your gourmet retailer.

Bake, uncovered, in a 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until heated through. Sprinkle with almonds. Makes 6 servings.

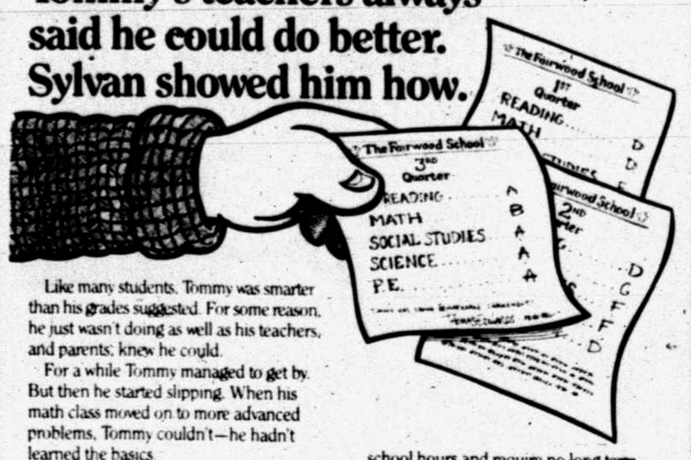
Tommy's teachers always said he could do better. Sylvan showed him how.



Like many students, Tommy was smarter than his grades suggested. For some reason, he just wasn't doing as well as his teachers, and parents, knew he could.

For a while Tommy managed to get by. But then he started slipping. When his math class moved on to more advanced problems, Tommy couldn't—he hadn't learned the basics.

At Sylvan we know how important those basic skills are. We've helped thousands of children master the basics of reading and math, and go on to fulfill their potential.

We can help your child. In fact, we guarantee it.

The Sylvan Guarantee

Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

Your child can begin to do better—today.

Learning problems don't go away by themselves. But they can be solved.

If you feel your child could be doing better, let Sylvan show him how.

Former student returns to teach

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter Telegram

Carolyn Hunt

"It's important to teach students what they need to know when they get out into the real world," said Carolyn Hunt, home economics teacher at Midland High School.

"Teens don't realize what it is going to be like — that they must pay the rent and their bills, they must buy groceries and take care of the necessities first. Then what's left over can be used to do the fun things."

That is one reason Mrs. Hunt believes her role as a teacher is so important. "I know we have an influence on these kids," she said.

Mrs. Hunt has taught at MHS for six years but her dedication to the school and its home economics department goes back many more years. She is a graduate of MHS and a former student of the home ec department where Darlene Hicks was her advisor. Mrs. Hicks began teaching at MHS the same year Mrs. Hunt began her sophomore year there.

Mrs. Hunt credits Mrs. Hicks for "a good bit of the reason I felt I could succeed in college. My parents helped me a lot, too. They felt it was important to have a college education, but Darlene told me I could do it. It was always a dream of mine to come back here to teach with her."

A graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelors degree in home ec; Mrs. Hunt now has 11 years of teaching behind her. During that time she has observed many changes taking place in the educational environment.

"There are more boys in the home ec classes now and the curriculum has changed from just the basic comprehensive classes to more specialized areas," Mrs. Hunt said. "The classes have changed with society's changes. That is something we are very proud of, that we keep up with the times.

"In our changing society women don't stay home and prepare three meals a day and clean house like they used to. Many women work now and many of these students will be a part of a two income household, whether by choice or necessity. Their time is limited. We try to teach them to use their time efficiently, to use their money efficiently, to get the result they want."

As an example, Mrs. Hunt said that sometimes precooked food is more efficient to use than the "old" long way of preparation. A convenience item allows her more quality time with her husband Phillip and daughters, Jessica, 9, and Sarah, almost 8.

"You have to think of it in terms of what is a better investment — a few more cents on the grocery bill and time with your family or saving money and spending your time in the kitchen," Mrs. Hunt said.

"We also emphasize nutrition. Teens are notorious for having bad food habits," she said. "We try to select foods that the students may not have experienced at home but will still appealing to them. We want to broaden their experiences."

Mrs. Hunt teaches approximately 75-100 students per semester and is proud of them and of the facilities at MHS.

"I give a lot of credit to my co-worker (Mrs. Hicks) for all we have in this department," Mrs. Hunt said. "The junior highs have lost their living areas due to overcrowded classes. A home ec class is not like an ordinary class. In a lab, if there are more than 20 students, it is crowded."

One lab Mrs. Hunt said her students enjoy very much is the cooking lab. Some of the recipes she uses for her labs, and at home, follow.

CHINESE SWEET 'N' SOUR BEEF

1 pound top round steak, ½ ¾ inch thick*
natural meat tenderizer, seasoned or unseasoned
5 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 large onion, cut in thin wedges
1 can (8½ ounces) water chestnuts, drained and sliced
1 green pepper, cut in squares
1 can (13¾ ounces) pineapple tidbits or chunks, undrained
2 tablespoons ketchup
1 tablespoon wine vinegar
2 tablespoons soy sauce
½ teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons cold water
2 firm, ripe tomatoes, cut in eights cooked hot rice
* 1 pound lean boneless pork or chicken can be substitution

Trim excess fat from beef. Prepare meat, one side at a time, with meat tenderizer as follows. Thoroughly moisten meat with water. Sprinkle tenderizer evenly as salt over entire meat surface.

To insure penetration of tenderizer and retain meat juices, pierce meat deeply with fork at ½ inch intervals.

With sharp knife, cut beef diagonally across grain into thin slices.

In wok or large skillet heat 3 tablespoons vegetable oil until hot but not smoking.

Quickly brown beef, cover high heat, stirring rapidly 3-4 minutes. Remove meat and pan drippings to platter.

Heat remaining two tablespoons of oil in same skillet. Add onion, water chestnuts and green pepper. Stir fry until tender-crisp, about 3 minutes.

Add undrained pineapple, ketchup, vinegar, soy sauce and sugar. Heat to boiling.

Mix cornstarch smoothly with cold water. Add to sauce in skillet and heat, stirring, until sauce clears and thickens.

Return meat and drippings to skillet and add tomatoes, heat through. Serve over hot cooked rice.

No-calorie, low-calorie sweeteners controversial

Associated Press

No-calorie and low-calorie sweeteners depend upon a whole galaxy of artificial compounds, some of them familiar, some not, and many of them controversial, according to Better Homes and Gardens Eating Healthy Cook Book.

Saccharin, which dates back to 1900, is about 300 times sweeter than refined sugar and is widely used in soft drinks and as a tabletop sweetener. It leaves a slightly bitter aftertaste. Large doses have been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals, but sale is still permitted. Labels must carry the warning that saccharin "may be hazardous to your health."

Cyclamates are less sweet than saccharin, or about 30 times as sweet as sugar. They were widely used in the 1960s until laboratory tests implicated the cyclamates, too, in animal cancers. Cyclamates are now banned from sale in the U.S.

Aspartame was introduced in 1981 and given a renewed bill of health in 1985 by the national Center for Disease Control after a long investigation found no evidence of a widespread health threat. The sweetener was first barred from soft drinks for fear it might harm children but now is approved for both tabletop use and drinks. Aspartame contains the amino acide phenylalanine, and persons with phenylketonuria (PKU) are advised against its use.

Xylitol, sorbitol and mannitol are sugar alcohols found in fruits. They are sometimes used in food for diabetics because insulin is not needed to metabolize them. They are also found in sugarless gum, because they do not appear to cause tooth decay.

THE BUTCHER

Restaurant's lunch memorable

By MERLE ELLIS

"Where's a good place for lunch?" I asked Terry as we left the peanut plant following a tour of Nuts D'Vine facility in Edenton, N. C. Nuts D'Vine is a peanut processor that makes, among other peanut products, a peanut oil that is, I think, the finest on the market. Terry Wacklin, my guide, is president.

"We have several nice restaurants in Edenton," Terry replied. "But most of us usually go to the Pick Wick. It's nothing fancy, it's a pool hall, but the food is always good."

I swear folks, if Wolfgang Puck or Jeremiah Tower had happened on this place as I did, they would have broken out in a cold sweat. There it was, everything that the "new California Cuisine" is supposedly all about; fresh fruit, fresh ingredients, open kitchen complete with grill (but I'd bet they don't use mesquite — most likely peanut shells, Edenton being peanut country). The main difference, aside from location and color scheme (there was no grey, green and pink at the pool hall — it went more to red checks and chrome) was price! Terry and I had a great, satisfying, comfort food sort of lunch (no wine, of course, but I did have two beers, and Terry had iced tea) and the bill for both of us was less than $5, including tax and tips. That's so cheap it could make Alice Waters sweat. What if word got out? The yuppie world can't afford that kind of fad.

Terry told me the story of the pool hall in Edenton: Seventeen years ago "Chub and Gwen Matchell retired from the Navy and decided they wanted to live in Edenton, N.C." Edenton is a beautiful town with lots of stately old homes and an aura of history. "They" bought the pool hall, built a wall across the middle to separate the tables from the tables, if you know what I mean. They put a grill in up front, and a counter with five chrome pedestal stools with red plastic-covered swivel tops; crowded in five tables with red and white check oil cloths and, viola!, Edenton had an American restaurant with an open kitchen, grill and all, in 1969, long before it became fashionable."

Terry ordered a hamburger (75 cents) and Gwen apologized for being out of chili. That's the way Terry usually takes 'em, with chili, mustard and pickles. She put a slice of tomato from Chub's garden on instead. With all of the hoopla I hear from many American chefs about the freshness of their produce, I'd bet Edenton has one of the few who really does take tomatoes fresh from his own garden to the restaurant each morning in a paper bag and leaves them to ripen in the window!

The luncheon special changes daily, except during the hot summer months. Gwen says: "When folks start sayin' it's too hot to eat, I figure it's too hot for me to cook, too!" People call in and ask: "What's in the pot?"

Actually, locals only ask on Wednesday, because that's the day it varies. Everyone who lives in Edenton knows that Monday the "pot special" is Navy Bean Soup; Tuesday it's Chicken Pot Pie; Thursday, it's Vegetable Soup and Friday, it's Chili. Wednesday; it's either Big Butler Beans or Black Eyed Peas. The other items on the menu included hot dogs, 55 cents; hamburgers, 75 cents; add a dime for cheese. Barbecue on a bun was 95 cents and unless you've tasted it, you can't imagine how delicious North Carolina barbecue on a bun can be. The most expensive item on the menu is something called "beef onion hoagie." It costs $1.95.

I ordered "Chicken Pot Pie," but I was a little late. "If you want chicken pot pie, honey," Gwen said, "you best call early before it's all promised out. That's our most popular dish." It was all "promised out" the day I was there, but Gwen did give me her recipe.

GWEN'S CHICKEN POT PIE
(Yankees call it Chicken and Dumplings)
(North Carolinians call it Chicken Stick)

1 fat hen, or large broiler
Salt and pepper to taste

Put chicken in a large pot or Dutch oven, cover with water, add salt and pepper to taste. Simmer chicken gently until very tender. Remove chicken from the pot. Let it cool and remove the meat from the bones.

PASTRY

3 cups self-rising flour
2 tablespoons lard or shortening
1 cup (or more) hot water

Cut lard into flour. Add enough water to flour mixture and work to form a firm dough.

This recipe requires some kneading to make smooth.

Roll out dough very thin on a floured surface.

Cut dough into strips approximately 1x3 inches. Drop strips of pastry into pot with boiling broth. It is suggested that only one layer of pastry be put in at this time. Replace the lid; cook pastry a few moments, stir, then add another layer of pastry until all the pastry is used.

Put chicken back in the pot. Replace lid and continue cooking about 15 minutes or until dumplings are done.

When we finished lunch, Terry challenged me to a game of pool. Fool that I am I accepted! She beat me three games straight and made me promise, in lieu of payment on a stiff but friendly bet, to tell you that if you would like a catalogue listing some marvelous North Carolina peanut products, write to: Nuts D'Vine, P.O. Box 589, 185 Peanut Drive, Edenton, NC 27932.

School lunches important to growing child's health

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — School lunches are important to a growing child's health, but making them quickly and ensuring they are nutritionally sound isn't always easy.

Donna Higgins, director of Del Monte Kitchens, suggests, "Don't plan lunch at breakfast, that's when you have the least time. Prepare lunch ahead, cold foods in the evening stored in the refrigerator, and hot foods packed at the last minute.

"When possible, prepare several items ahead and freeze them to use later. Don't forget about using dinner leftovers. And, to be sure your child eats what you prepare, include the child in the menu planning."

Chicken breasts delicious, nutritious

Copley News Service

Chicken breasts have increased greatly in popularity over the last several years, for a number of good reasons. They are very high in protein, have much less fat and cholesterol than red meat and are a good buy as well. They are also a natural choice for the after-work chef, because they can be prepared quickly in a number of delicious presentations.

Many people serve chicken less often than they might, because they think only of the few basic ways of cooking it — fried, baked and broiled. In fact, there are hundreds of excellent recipes for chicken.

Chicken may be used very successfully in almost any recipe that calls for veal. This is especially appealing since chicken breasts cost only about a quarter as much per pound as veal scallopini.

When you shop for chicken, look for a light-colored, unblemished skin and not too much hard, yellow fat. Perhaps most important of all, the breastbone should be flexible. The tip of the bone should bend easily under pressure. If it doesn't, you're dealing with a fowl that's long past its prime.

Today's recipes call for boned, skinned breasts. Most stores carry chicken breasts that have been skinned and boned, but you pay a premium of up to $2 per pound for them. Do your own boning and skinning — it just takes a few minutes — and remove all the fat that you can before cooking the breasts. For each of today's recipes, add boning and skinning the chicken breasts as an optional "do-ahead" step.

CHICKEN SAVOY

1 pound skinned, boned chicken breasts, cut into 2-ounce pieces
4 slices ham or prosciutto
½ pound fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
½ pound sliced Swiss or mozzarella cheese
1 cup flour
½ cup beef consomme
½ cup Port or Madeira wine
2 ounces brandy (optional)
1 egg, beaten with small amount of water added
2 to 3 ounces heavy cream
1 tablespoon cornstarch, diluted slightly with water

Lightly pound boned chicken breast pieces to a thickness of approximately ¼ inch. Dip in flour then egg. Saute in hot skillet, with small amount of butter, 2 to 3 minutes on each side.

In four individual ovenproof casseroles, place two pieces of chicken in each. Top with one slice of ham. Put mushrooms in same pan chicken was cooked in. Saute lightly, adding consomme, brandy (optional) and wine. Simmer a minute or so, whisk in cream then add diluted cornstarch as needed to thicken. Pour the sauce and mushrooms into casseroles with chicken and ham. Top with sliced cheese. Place under broiler until cheese is bubbling and lightly browned, and serve.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE

4 chicken breasts, skinned and boned
1 medium onion, sliced
1 large green pepper, diced
2 medium, firm tomatoes, diced
½ cup black olives
½ cup white wine
1 cup tomato puree — OR — 1 cup commercial tomato sauce
Salt and freshly ground pepper
black pepper to taste

Cut chicken breasts in strips approximately 1 ounce each. Saute in skillet over medium-high heat with butter, adding onion and green pepper, 5 to 6 minutes. Add diced tomatoes and olives, saute another 2 to 3 minutes. Deglaze pan with wine. Add tomato sauce and salt and pepper to taste. Serve with spaghetti or noodles on the side.

Seafood salad satisfying

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Any time of year, cooking and eating an elaborate dinner seem a chore instead of a pleasure, and even the most devoted chef may grudge the daylight hours spent in front of a hot stove.

Light, cool dinners that can be prepared quickly or ahead of time allow you to spend those last hours of daylight enjoying things you've been waiting all summer to do. If you use that time for some gardening or sunset-watching, you'll find that lighter meals are also ideally suited to an earlier dinner hour, and won't leave you feeling overstuffed at bedtime.

Today's recipe is for one of my favorite seafood salads. It combines three kinds of seafood with pasta shells and a light lemon-herb dressing with two kinds of mustard. I've called the resulting dish Seafood Salad Pass-a-Grille, in honor of its point of origin - the tiny peninsula on Florida's Gulf Coast that I call home.

High in protein, this salad is surprisingly satisfying as a meal in itself. I served it to several friends recently, along with some hot, crusty French bread and a well-chilled glass of white wine.

SEAFOOD SALAD PASS-A-GRILLE

½ cup water
½ lemon, thinly sliced
½ pound flounder or other white fish
¼ pound scallops
½ pound shrimp
1 large tomato, diced
1 zucchini, julienned
6 radishes, sliced
3 scallions, chopped
1 carrot, thinly sliced
1 cup pasta shells, cooked

Total preparation/cooking time — 25 minutes. In skillet or saucepan, brin to boil wine, water and lemon slices. Add fish and scallops, cover and simmer until just done (about 5 minutes). Remove fish and scallops, drain.

Bring to boil remaining liquid. Add shrimp, in shells. Cook, stirring, until just done (about 2 minutes). Remove and drain.

Allow seafood to cool. Shell and devein shrimp. Toss seafood together with vegetables and pasta shells, and add enough dressing to coat. Chill in refrigerator for at least an hour before serving. This salad can be made several hours ahead of time and kept refrigerated until you are ready to serve it.

Serves 4 as a main course.

DRESSING

1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon salt (or to taste)
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon dill weed
¼ teaspoon basil
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon vinegar
⅔ cup olive oil

Blend together all ingredients but oil. Allow to sit 5 to 10 minutes, then add oil slowly, stirring to blend. This makes more than you need for one recipe of salad, but is delicious on other types of salads, as well.

Mc Egg Foo Yong to replace hamburgers and fries?

Copley News Service

Old Chinese proverb say, "Man who make chow mein meal speedy quick, corner fast-food market."

That seems to be the opinion of cardiologist Dr. Anthony Chan.

Chan, who owns a chain of Chinese fast-food joints in Chicago, claims egg rolls and Oriental noodles will replace burgers and fries as the choice for the quick meal.

Chan claims he turns out his version of "Mc Egg Foo Yong" faster than McDonald's can crack out a Quarter-Pounder.

Americans prefer new white wines

By FRANK J. PRIAL
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Let's take a look at white wines that sell for $10 or less. We Americans prefer white wines to red by a wide margin, but then white wines are far less interesting to drink — or write about — than reds, which were surveyed earlier. Aside from white Burgundy, including Chablis, some Loire Valley wines, a couple of white Graves and American chardonnays, most white wines are boring.

Worldwide, the quality level of white wine is considerably higher than it was a couple of decades ago. When, in the early 1970s, the Italians began to make fresh, lively white wines at remarkably low prices, it seemed as if the millennium had arrived, bringing endless quantities of good white wine at bargain prices. And, indeed, the inexpensive Italian whites were better than anything previously encountered in the same price range.

They still are, but with rare exceptions they have never advanced beyond that level. To anyone but an expert on the subject, one Italian white tastes pretty much like all the others. The same is true for the whites of Argentina, Chile, South Africa and the countries of the Mediterranean basin, namely Algeria, Morocco, Spain and Greece.

Inexpensive California white wines are often flabby. They lack bite and definition, the steeliness or flintiness that characterizes a good Chablis or Sancerre or Macon blanc. One expects this from the California generics, the jug chablis and simple white table wines, but there are a lot of highly touted sauvignon blancs and blancs fum'e that leave much to be desired, too.

Often, the wine makers insist that they want the wines to be like that. And why not? Evidently, the customers like them that way. They're certainly buying them that way.

So, let's have two categories of white wine, traditional and, for lack of a better word, modern. Any slightly acid, greenish Chablis or Sancerre would be in the first category and almost any California French Colombard would be in the second.

Probably the best-known French wine from the Macon region is Pouilly Fuisse, which is made from the chardonnay grape, and is enormously popular in the United States. No one has ever quite fathomed the popularity of Pouilly Fuisse in this country. It probably has something to do with its hame, which seems as though it would be easy to pronounce (It is, in fact, pronounced POO-yee fwee-SAY).

In any event, the French were quick to capitalize on the name. Nowadays, a bottle of Pouilly Fuisse can cost as much as $13, while a bottle of equally good St. Veran from the communes adjoining Pouilly Fuisse would sell at half the price.

St. Veran, a relatively recent name among French wine appellations, sells for about $5 to $7.50 a bottle. Georges Duboeuf is a good name in these wines. There are many others, however: Joseph Drouhin, Louis Latour and Prosper Maufoux among them.

For a good everyday white wine, Macon-Villages or Macon-Lugny are hard to beat. Most of the big producers in Burgundy offer one. Even with recent rises in French wine prices, good ones can be found at from $5.75 to around $6.25.

The white wine of the Paris bistros, the better ones, anyway, is Sancerre. It's light, but not too light, and has a nice edge. It's just right for all kinds of seafood, which is the way most Parisians start a good bistro meal.

Sancerre, a wine from the central Loire Valley, was once almost as inexpensive as Muscadet, the sharp, fresh seafood wine from around Nantes at the western end of the Loire. The price of Sancerre has been creeping up, unfortunately. It has not reached the point that anyone is effectively cut off, as is the case with the now extravagantly priced white Burgundies, but it doesn't hurt to look around.

Buzz Aldrin, the second man on the moon, was in the Permian Basin Tuesday. He discussed America's space program.

'Man in the moon' comes to Odessa

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Some may have thought Dr. Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin had as much to do with an oil show as the man on the moon.

Aldrin, 56, here on a dignitary basis at the request of members of local Masonic lodges, led the Permian Basin Oil Show parade through Odessa Tuesday afternoon just hours after opening a "free-for-all" press conference.

The Apollo 11 crew member took on legendary status July 20, 1969, when he stepped off the space module "Eagle" in the moon's Sea of Tranquility just steps behind the man who took the giant step for mankind, Neil Armstrong.

Life today for Aldrin consists of running his own consulting company — Science Applications International Corp. — where he has participated in studies of simulator training of shuttle crews and the recovery of surface samples from Mars.

He is also a professor and director of the space studies program at the University of North Dakota.

Discussion centered on the future of the space program and its inevitable tie-in to President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative program. Aldrin said he was unconditionally for the acceleration of both.

"Obviously, you had to get there before you could have a station, so the funds were cut for the space station. Then, later, shuttle funds were cut in half as well."

"I think it (the space shuttle endeavors) suffered from being penny-wise and pound-foolish."

— Former astronaut "Buzz" Aldrin

"The result of the space shuttle accident had a tremendous affect on the program, which gave us the opportunity to make an agonizing reappraisal of the whole thing," Aldrin said.

Historically, Aldrin explained, the shuttle program may have been doomed to the January 1986 disaster from its inception.

"Anti-Vietnam sentiments fell into a deterioration of interest in the space program. We had a choice between developing a space station or a space shuttle program.

"Obviously, you had to get there before you could have a station, so the funds were cut for the space station. Then, later, shuttle funds were cut in half as well," Aldrin said.

"I think it (the space shuttle endeavors) suffered from being penny-wise and pound-foolish," Aldrin said.

Aldrin expressed dire concern about the "space race" between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

"I have never felt prouder of the president than the other night on television...I just hope we're able to maintain that kind of leadership in the future.

"We are at an impasse in the SDI and arms control negotiations with (Secretary) Gorbachev. He's just hoping to play politics with this.

"I heard a question a year ago about why the Soviets are so uptight about our SDI program," Aldrin said.

He explained offensive strategies between the two superpowers are exhausted and the future of the nuclear arms race is in defense.

In answer to the question of the existence of similar Soviet defense system, Aldrin said, "Of course they have one and it's called the 'Active Defense' and it's (headquartered) in Moscow."

The East and the West both have advantages in the defense race, Aldrin said.

"What's more, we (the West) may be sowing seeds of demise in our own system," Aldrin said.

The Soviets' advantage lies in the fact they are able to plan on a long range basis without the virtue of having the press or the people pick it to death before it is finished, Aldrin explained.

The Americans' advantage comes from the fact there is a free exchange of information — "we are the leaders of progressive endeavors," Aldrin said.

But he added "you all (the news media) may pick it (SDI) apart before it ever gets going."

Aldrin painted a grim picture of the "self-serving interests of the Soviets" whom, he said, care more about beating the Americans in the space race than genuinely exploring that final frontier.

"The Soviets have planned to land on Mars on Oct. 12, 1992 — the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America. That is not beyond the realm of possibilty.

"They'll do it just for national prestige," Aldrin said.

America's future in space, Aldrin said, includes another shuttle launch in February 1988, but a return to the moon may not happen until the halfway mark of the 21st century.

"By 1998, we could feasibly swing by Venus, then go to Mars for a couple months," Aldrin casually said as if he were speaking of stopping at the store for a loaf of bread.

"History will look back on the '60s and see wasted technology. We have another opportunity for space advancement with the shuttle program.

"There is no way I'm gonna let us fail twice."

City Council votes for self-funding of liability insurance

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council Tuesday voted to self-fund the city's general and automobile liability insurance because of ascending insurance premiums.

Assistant City Manager Scott McGregor said the city already has health and workmen's compensation self-insurance.

"We had budgeted about $420,000 for premiums, and we will use that as a self-insurance fund," McGregor said. "Another six or seven hundred thousand dollars will be transferred from other sources."

McGregor said insurance premiums have risen sharply in the last few years. He said the situation has worsened to the point that some municipalities have received little more than one dollar insurance coverage for every dollar of premiums paid.

The city averages about 150 insurance claims annually, McGregor said. Most are small claims less than $200.

"I think it (self-insurance) is a trend," McGregor said. "Whether or not it continues will depend on the future cost of the premiums."

McGregor said the adequacy of the city's insurance fund, and the amount of money the city might save under the new program, is dependent on the amount of future claims.

The council also voted to appropriate approximately $21,000 for a fire training building to be built at the current training center on Cloverdale Rd.

Midland Fire Chief James Roberts said the metal building, about 24 by 44 feet, will be used to train firefighters in the use of self-contained breathing apparatus, or air packs.

"We will do the labor on the inside ourselves," Roberts said. "Inside we are going to build a maze of plywood walls. It will be a series of hallways that connects from one door to the next. Inside we will have obstacles, such as stairs, and doors they will have to get through. Of course, this will all have to be done in the dark."

Roberts said all Midland firefighters are required to wear breathing apparatus at fires where smoke is present, and mobility with the gear is essential.

Roberts said the building contract was awarded to a local firm, Lone Star Builders.

Congress locks out lobbyists, nears compromise on immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — After years of failure, Congress is within a whisker of approving a bill designed to shut down the stream of illegal aliens crossing the border for new job opportunities in the United States.

Compromise legislation was approved Tuesday by House-Senate conferees, who took a cue from successful tax bill writers earlier in the session: they locked out the lobbyists and negotiated in secret.

The House Rules Committee unanimously cleared the way for a vote, possibly today.

Chief Senate sponsor Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., said any obstacles to passage would likely be raised in his chamber, where "one or two senators could stall" the legislation.

He appealed to House conferees to speak with their Senate friends, to "assist me in crushing knuckles."

The cornerstones of the bill remain an amnesty program for long-term illegal aliens and a system of fines against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers. The amnesty would apply to those who came to this country before 1982.

In the private discussions, conferees said, the debate centered on three issues:

— Language authored by Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., and backed by Hispanic lawmakers, that would ban employment discrimination based on national origin or citizenship status, and establish a special counsel in the Justice Department to enforce the protections. The language was retained, although conferees agreed the program could be ended after three years if a General Accounting Office study found it unfair to employers.

— A temporary ban on deportation of illegal aliens from El Salvador and Nicaragua until the GAO studied the political conditions they would face by returning home. The proposal by Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., was dropped by the conferees after the Reagan administration warned it would cause a veto.

Texas congressmen split over portions of immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas congressmen split over an immigration bill that retains criminal and civil sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens and provides amnesty for millions of foreign workers.

An agreement favored by all but one of the House-Senate conferees was announced Tuesday after 5½ hours of closed-door bargaining, but several Texas representatives expressed concerns about the bill.

"It went smoothly, but there was some serious bargaining going on in there this morning," said Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, the only Texan on the committee.

"The purpose of this bill is to send a message to the world that people shouldn't come here illegally hoping to find work," Bryant said. "There is a legal method of coming into this country."

An estimated 3 million aliens illegally entered the United States last year and the numbers are growing, according to figures a Bryant aide said were released by the Congressional Budget Office.

The conference agreement now goes to both houses.

The bill's centerpiece is still an amnesty program for long-term illegal aliens and a system of fines against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers.

The conferees accepted House language that would make illegal aliens who have lived here since Jan. 1, 1982, eligible for the amnesty program. The Senate plan to delay amnesty for up to three years was dropped.

Those eligible under the compromise would first be classified as temporary residents, during which they would be granted the right to work and have the same rights as a full citizen except access to welfare benefits, which would be withheld for five years.

After at least one year, the temporary residents could apply for permanent resident status under the bill.

The House dropped its proposal — pushed by Hispanic lawmakers — to end criminal and civil employer sanctions after 6½ years unless Congress extended them.

Several Texas representatives, including members of the Hispanic coalition, have opposed employer sanctions all along, saying they would be discriminatory because employers would tend to avoid hiring anyone who looked like he might be a foreigner.

Bryant said he pushed for retention of sanctions because they will keep Americans working rather than foreigners. The conferees agreed to the provision after agreeing to various methods designed to prevent discrimination.

Under the agreement, employers must check all employees to be sure they hold Social Security cards — not just those they think might be foreigners — said Bryant, who authored similar language in the House version.

A special council was established in the Justice Department to enforce the protections.

"I don't think anybody's happy about (the agreement)," Bryant said. "Nobody wants to pass a bill like this, but illegal immigration has got to be stopped. Employer sanctions is the only method anybody's suggested that could do that."

Democratic loser endorses Clements

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The runner-up to Mark White in the spring Democratic primary has endorsed White's opponent, Bill Clements, amid charges that he had previously tried to sell his endorsement to the White campaign.

Dallas businessman Andrew C. Briscoe III, who polled 247,000 votes — about 23 percent — against White in the May 3 Democratic primary election, told reporters Tuesday he would chair a group called "Democrats and Independents for Clements." Briscoe said he made the "hard choice" of backing Clements because of disagreements over White's positions on economics, prisons, gubernatorial appointments and utility regulation.

"I take pride and honor in supporting Bill Clements for governor," Briscoe said.

Dwayne Holman, White's campaign manager, said he met with Briscoe on Sept. 4 over "fried catfish and big, large glasses of ice tea" at the Lone Star Cafe in Dallas.

"He said he could deliver all that vote he'd gotten in the primary to us, and he'd figured out it would be a real bargain if we would cover the amount of money that he had spent in return for him delivering his vote to us," Holman said of his conversation with Briscoe. "He said that his personal money that he had put in the campaign plus the money that he had borrowed came to $219,000."

When the governor rejected Briscoe's offer, Holman said, Briscoe "sounded very, very disappointed and said that he'd expected a counter-offer of some kind and that $40,000 or $50,000 would have helped. He'd even figured out how we could pay him that it wouldn't show up (on campaign finance reports filed with the secretary of state)."

Briscoe denied Holman's story. "As far as asking the White campaign, no; I did not ask for any financial remuneration," he said.

Holman challenged Briscoe to take a lie detector test over the issue. Briscoe demurred, saying, "That decision has to be made by the Clements campaign."

Workers subjected to unannounced drug check

AUSTIN (AP) — An unannounced check for drugs among workers at a high-rise office building uncovered about an ounce of marijuana in cigarettes and packets, and unidentified pills found hidden under rocks and car bumpers, construction company officials said.

Workers at a high-rise project in downtown Austin were greeted Tuesday by drug-sniffing dogs, urine tests and lunchbox searches in a company crackdown on drug use on the job site.

A team of seven technicians and two dogs from Global Safety and Security of New Orleans inspected workers' lunchboxes and tool chests Tuesday morning and asked each employee to turn out his pockets. The workers were then ordered to give urine samples.

"Two or three" among the company's 25-member work crew refused to take the urinalysis and will be fired, said Alan Stembridge, executive vice president of Charter Builders Inc.

The Dallas-based company is building the 30-story One Congress Plaza office building at the northeast corner of Congress Avenue and First Street.

The results of the urinalysis should be available later in the week, Stembridge said.

Stembridge said the drug screening of workers was ordered because the accident rate on its jobs in Austin is higher than in other cities where it has construction projects.

"Charter's interest is safety on the job site," Stembridge said. "If even one death is prevented, it will more than pay for the cost of the program."

Workers for subcontractors will not be allowed back on the job site if they fail the urine test or refuse to take it, he said.

The tests were met with mixed feelings from the workers, who said the search that began at 6:30 a.m. delayed work for about two hours as they stood in line for the tests and searches.

A foreman for a subcontractor said he will send Charter Builders a bill for the two hours that his men were idle waiting for the drug tests.

"I can't believe they are doing that here," said Mark Mullen, president of the Central Texas Building Trades Council, which represents union craftsmen.

"I think it probably is a violation of those workers' privacy, and personally I think it's a constitutional violation although I guess that's open to intrepretation."

Panel cuts funding for nuclear waste site study

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional conference committee has cut funding from the nuclear waste storage study program and prohibited exploratory drilling at proposed dump sites in Texas, Nevada and Washington, congressional sources said Tuesday.

The action, according to sources, will delay a final decision on where a federal nuclear waste dump site will be established, according to the Dallas Morning News.

A House-Senate appropriations conference committee slashed $212 million from the administration request for the nuclear waste program, leaving the funding at $499 million, the same level as in 1986.

The committee also stipulated that another $79 million would be withheld until the Energy Department reported to Congress on progress in cooperation agreements with the three states where the candidate sites are located.

The administration had requested $769 million for the program, but Energy secretary John Herrington deleted $58 million from the request when he announced that the department was suspending a search for a second nuclear waste site in six Eastern states and Minnesota.

Western lawmakers were infuriated by Herrington's decision and some in the House and Senate tried to kill funding for work in the three candidate Western sites, Deaf Smith County, Texas; Yucca Mountain, Nev., and the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington.

The Energy Department had planned to start drilling at the candidate sites to study the geologic character of the subsurface. Plans call for highly radioactive wastes, with a half-life of thousands of years, to be entombed deep under ground at a stable geologic site.

Residents, particularly farmers, in Deaf Smith County have opposed use of the Texas site, claiming that the atomic wastes would threaten the subsurface water supply.

College tuition fund nearing goal

DALLAS (AP) — A program designed to provide college tuition funds for 1,000 of Dallas' needy sixth-graders has reached more than half of its $1.8 million goal, officials said Tuesday.

Active fund-raising for the program has not yet started, but project director Gainor Eisenlohr said donations and pledges have been coming in steadily since the visit to Dallas last month of Eugene Lange, a philanthropist who started a similar program five years ago in New York.

"We are just this week kicking off our aggressive sponsor drive," said Ms. Eisenlohr. "We've done nothing until now. These people have been coming to us."

She said $1 million of the $1.8 million goal has been raised.

The plan calls for sponsors to provide about $2,000 for each of 18 students in a total of 55 classes that will graduate from high school in six years. When the classes advance to the 7th grade, volunteers will start meeting monthly with the students to encourage them to stay in school. There will also be programs of educational, cultural and social development.

Odessan to be sentenced for women's murders

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Jimmy Weatherford of Odessa, Texas, will be sentenced Monday for his convictions on two counts of first-degree murder and one count of attempted first-degree murder.

A first-degree murder conviction carries a mandatory sentence of life in prison without parole.

Weatherford was convicted Tuesday night of killing two women and wounding a man in a March 22 shooting spree at a Rapid City home.

The victims were Weatherford's common-law wife Angela Koricanek, 27, of Odessa, and Talia Haefs, 23, of Rapid City, who died of her wounds three months after the shootings. The injured man was David Engelbrecht, 22, of Rapid City.

Weatherford had pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to all the charges, but the judge struck down the insanity plea at the end of the testimony, saying the defense had failed to introduce any evidence regarding Weatherford's mental state.

The Pennington County jury returned the verdict after 11 p.m. Tuesday night.

Weatherford testified on his own behalf for about an hour Tuesday morning. He said he fired the .22-caliber revolver in self defense because Engelbrecht was choking him.

Weatherford told police the morning after the shootings that he fired the gunshots without realizing it.

Defense attorney John Feehan introduced tapes of Weatherford's interview with the police, even though he earlier had tried to bar them as evidence.

"To me, I thought it was in self-defense; I thought I was being killed," Weatherford said on the tape.

"You don't remember hearing any bangs?" Rapid City police detective Chris Grant asked Weatherford.

"I don't remember hearing nothing," he replied.

Weatherford said the first thing he remembers is holding the gun.

"I seen some blood and that's what made me run," he told police.

"I didn't even know (Ms. Koricanek) was hit, man," he told police, weeping and after being told she was dead. "She was going up the stairs. I knew I shot somebody. I didn't know I shot my baby."

Court: Bar owner liable in death

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today ruled that a bar owner can be held responsible for a drunken patron who becomes a drunken driver and causes a fatal wreck.

Without writing an opinion, the high court affirmed a 14th Court of Appeals ruling that ordered a full trial of a Houston family's lawsuit against an El Chico restaurant.

A Houston judge, without convening a full trial, had ruled in favor of El Chico because Texas has no law that makes a restaurant liable for its intoxicated customers when they leave the premises.

But the Houston appeals court, in the ruling affirmed today by the Supreme Court, said, "It is up to the civil courts to change concepts of duty as social conditions change."

"We hold that a bar operator owes a duty to the motoring public to not knowingly sell an alcoholic beverage to an already intoxicated person," Justice William Junell said in the Houston appeals court's June 12 opinion that ordered a full trial.

The case involves the Jan. 21, 1983, death of Larry Bryan Poole, 31, of Houston, who was killed when a vehicle driven by Rene Saenz of Houston ran a red light and slammed into him.

According to court records, Saenz said he had become intoxicated while drinking during "Happy Hour" at an El Chico restaurant in Houston.

IMMIGRATION

— A plan, championed by Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif., to provide free legal services to foreign workers brought to the country to harvest non-perishable agricultural crops. The language was accepted, but the program would be limited to transportation, wages, housing and working conditions.

After 5½ hours of bargaining, the House had given in on 43 items and the Senate on 48, while dozens of lobbyists were forced to wait in the hallway of the Senate Dirksen Office Building.

"What really broke it loose was we got out of the public session for tough bargaining," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Two years ago, immigration conferees were unable to complete their work before Congress adjourned. In prior years, immigration bills never even made it to conference. Some lawmakers, such as House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., have been trying to push through an immigration bill for 15 years.

When the conferees finished, the House had given up its plan to end employer sanctions after 6½ years unless Congress approved their continuation. A substitute was adopted in which lawmakers could end the penalties in three years — but only after a GAO report found the sanctions caused widespread discrimination.

The Senate relinquished a provision that would have delayed amnesty up to three years while a special commission studied whether employer sanctions were in place and working.

The conferees accepted an offer from President Reagan to provide $4 billion over four years to reimburse state and local governments for the cost of legalization. The House gave up its proposal for a 100 percent reimbursement. The Senate had insisted on a spending cap.

The House won its provision to require employers to keep records showing they had verified their employees were legal residents.

In the future, however, the program would shift to a Senate-approved concept that would eliminate the paperwork requirement. But if an illegal alien was discovered, the employer would be presumed to have knowingly hired him.

Provisions to give legal status to hundreds of thousands of foreigners who harvest perishable fruits and vegetables were left in the bill. An agreement on the language was worked out previously.

PUC asked to OK toll-free plan

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has asked the Public Utility Commission to approve a toll-free dialing plan for northern parts of Midland County.

Bell spokesman Rick Hainline said Tuesday the "very routine case" would add 132 telephone customers to the Midland base area. "They won't have to pay mileage charges anymore," Hainline said.

The move would cost the phone company about $1,100 per year, saving the customers about 69 cents a month in mileage charges. Two customers would have to pay an extra $4.10 per month because they would no longer be eligible to have a four-party line.

Bell filed the request, which expands the existing Midland base-rate area about one mile northward, with the PUC on Oct. 3. Hainline said the company has notified all 132 customers of the proposed change.

Death-row inmate wins stay of execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Carlos DeLuna won a stay of execution 12 hours before he was to die by injection after his attorney appealed to a federal judge.

DeLuna, 24, was to die before dawn Wednesday for the 1983 robbery-slaying of a Corpus Christi convenience store clerk, but U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. granted a stay Tuesday.

DeLuna, who appeared calm while awaiting word on his last-minute appeals, said only "thank you" when apprised of the stay, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said.

He talked with other death row inmates and visited with a friend, two sisters, a half-sister, a half-brother and a sister-in-law. The convict took heart medication early Tuesday, but prison officials said they did not know anything about an ailment.

Head said DeLuna's attorney, Richard Anderson of Dallas, had filed several constitutional issues that the state of Texas had not had time to address.

Anderson filed the appeal early Tuesday because he said federal offices were closed Monday for the Columbus Day holiday.

The state Attorney General's office did not oppose the stay, said Marianne Bolus, a deputy clerk for Head.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused Monday to grant a stay for DeLuna. On Friday, the U.S. Supreme Court denied an application for a stay of execution.

The Wednesday execution date was DeLuna's first.

His appeals are based on grounds he was inadequately represented during the trial and a subsequent appeal, and that killers of whites receive the death penalty more often than those who kill blacks, Anderson said.

DeLuna was convicted in the Feb. 4, 1983, robbery-slaying of Wanda Jean Lopez, who was white.

He said he was convicted of capital murder on eyewitness testimony that was not reliable. DeLuna also said no physical evidence linked him to the scene.

"I was a block away at the time," he said. "When police drove through the area, I started to run. I was on parole. They were pointing a gun at me. I didn't know what was going on."

DeLuna was sentenced to three years in prison for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in Dallas. He had already served two years in the Texas prison system when arrested in the woman's death.

Texas cited by human rights group

LONDON (AP) — The state of Texas was singled out several times for criticism in a report by an international organization that seeks abolition of capital punishment.

Amnesty International cited Texas:

— for putting to death a man who committed murder as a juvenile;

— for the "prolonged suffering" it inflicted because it took more than a half hour to execute another inmate; and — for being one of three states where most of the executions in the United States have occurred over the past decade.

Amnesty International maintains that capital punishment is cruel, inhuman punishment and a denial of the right to life.

In its annual report, Amnesty said 18 convicted murderers were executed in the United States by lethal injection or electrocution in 1985. A total of 16 executions occurred in six states — Texas, Florida, Georgia, Virginia, Louisiana and South Carolina. The other two were in Nevada and Indiana.

Sixty-six prisoners have been executed since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976, including 16 men this year. Amnesty International noted that more than two-thirds of them have died in Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas.

In all, 1,642 prisoners were under sentence of death in December 1985, the report said.

Charles Rumbaugh was sentenced to death in 1980 for murdering a Texas jeweler when he was 17. Amnesty International protested that his execution in September 1985 violated international agreements not to execute convicts for crimes committed when they were under 18 years old. He was the first juvenile offender to be executed in the United States in 21 years.

Lisa Christopher, a spokeswoman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, said Rumbaugh was executed in accordance with state law. "The Texas law has been held constitutional," she said. "All we do is enforce the law."

The Amnesty report said Stephen Peter Morin, 37, was one of several inmates in the United States who suffered unnecessarily during execution.

Investigators want White to testify in Lucas case

EL PASO (AP) — Investigators in the Henry Lee Lucas case have had a tough time serving a subpoena on Gov. Mark White, whose testimony is sought in a pretrial hearing.

Defense attorney Rod Ponton said a private process server was trying to deliver the subpoena to White. An agreement with the governor's office fell through Monday when an aide first agreed, then refused to accept the subpoena on behalf of White, Ponton said.

White's legal counsel, Leslie Benitez, said from her office in Austin there was no such agreement and that a subpoena has to be delivered directly to the person named.

"I can't imagine what information the governor would have that would be relevant," Ms. Benitez added.

Lucas is charged with first-degree murder in the May 1983 slaying of Librada Apodaca at her El Paso home. Lucas at first confessed to that slaying and about 600 others nationwide, but later recanted all.

In a pretrial hearing that began Sept. 8 and is expected to end next week, Lucas' attorneys are trying to have their client's confession ruled inadmissible. The confession to the Apodaca slaying is as phony as the others, they said.

The Travis County Sheriff's office in Austin returned White's subpoena last week, saying it couldn't be served.

"We need to find out if he (White) was covering up for the Texas Rangers," Ponton told the El Paso Times.

The Texas Rangers task force on Lucas and other law enforcement agencies say they have cleared 266 unsolved killings based on Lucas' confessions. An investigation and subsequent report by Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox concluded Lucas could not have committed most of the crimes.

The Rangers have been criticized for their handling of the Lucas investigation. Witnesses at the hearing said the Rangers refused to consider information that proves Lucas was elsewhere at the time of slayings for which he took the blame.

McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell, among the first people to believe the Lucas confessions were bogus, was among those scheduled to testify today.

Deaf man passes knowledge of sign language to hearing

By NANCY PERDUE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The sounds of silence surround Job Ayantola's everyday world. The 36-year-old Nigerian native has been deaf since the age of 4, which has forced him to live without knowing such noises as alarm clocks, emergency sirens or his children's cries.

Understanding the heartache such a condition can bring, Ayantola is devoted to reducing frustration for other deaf people. He teaches sign language at San Antonio College so people who can hear can communicate with those who can not.

He also is a supervisor at Southwest Center for the Hearing Impaired where he helps deaf people learn to live independently by "acting as a role model."

"Deafness is not visible and that is a problem," Ayantola said, with the help of his friend, Susan Rapp, serving as a sign language interpreter. "We need to work through the problems that face us. We must fight through the tough times. It's part of our life."

Ayantola came to the United States in 1976, after the Nigerian government awarded him a college scholarship. He moved to San Antonio in 1984, after earning a bachelor's degree in California and a master's degree in Maryland.

He said physicians have not been able to determine why he lost his hearing. He has come to grips with knowing his problem can not be reversed, but he admits there have been some trying times. It has meant dealing with people who treat him as if he is mentally retarded. And, it has meant spending a lot of money to buy machines for his telephone and television so he can read captions in place of hearing.

Using Rapp's voice to make himself heard, Ayantola said his major pet peeve is the high expense of such gadgets that are necessary to alert the deaf of danger, emergencies and everyday events happening in the world.

Father who abused son serves just one-third of sentence

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A father convicted of using radioactive pellets to castrate his son is being paroled this week after serving one-third of his 15-year sentence.

The son, Kirk Crocker, is not pleased with the decision by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to parole Kerry Andrus Crocker on Friday.

"It's a cheap trick to have him appeal a conviction, run from police, and once he is finally put in prison, he only spends five years there," the son said Monday.

The younger Crocker, a Houston real estate agent, has tried three times to prevent the release of his father by petitioning the parole board. The father was most recently up for parole in June 1985.

The board was forced to release the 56-year-old petroleum engineer because he has earned enough good conduct credits to make him eligible for parole from the Texas Department of Corrections, officials said.

The father was convicted in 1975 for placing pellets of radioactive cesium-137 in a sock, then placing it on his son as punishment for siding with his estranged wife over a dispute on visitation rights, testimony showed.

His son spent about three years in bed with burns and sores before physicians diagnosed his injuries as radiation-induced. He had to undergo a series of operations until he was 17 to cut out the burns that would not heal. He still must take regular injections of hormones to maintain a normal appearance.

Kerry Crocker was freed on bond while he appealed his 10-year prison sentence. He jumped bond after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals affirmed his conviction and was finally arrested in 1981. A five-year bail-jumping sentence was added to the earlier term.

Kirk Crocker, 25, said he believed his father still is dangerous.

'I'm fugitive from injustice,' Otwell says

Otwell

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A fundamentalist minister wanted for contempt of court in Texas says he will return to the state when "God would have me go back."

"They say we're a fugitive from Texas," the Rev. W.N. Otwell said Tuesday. "We're not a fugitive from justice, that's for sure. We're a fugitive from injustice."

Otwell fled from Texas after an arrest warrant was issued when he failed to appear Oct. 6 at a contempt-of-court hearing. Otwell has ignored a March order to have his church-run boys home obtain a state license or close.

He spoke Tuesday to a national conference of unregistered churches, telling the ministers from across the nation that he plans to return to Texas when he has rallied support for his cause.

The Rev. Greg Dixon of the Indianapolis Baptist Temple said Otwell "stands in the tradition of a long line of Americans who have stood for religious liberty."

"We do not consider him a lawbreaker, a rebel, an anarchist," said Dixon, the chairman of the American Coalition of Unregistered Churches. "We consider Gov. Mark White, (Attorney General) Jim Mattox and the authorities of the state of Texas...the anarchists and lawbreakers."

"When my mission is through, crossing this country, I'll call...the sheriff in the county I'm from and come in and turn myself in," he said. "I'm not afraid of jail. Jail would be the simplest thing to do."

Otwell said he hopes 100 ministers will join him in Austin next Monday through Thursday to protest against White, Mattox and State District Judge Paul R. Davis, who issued the arrest warrant.

"Who in the name of God do you think you are?" Otwell said the protesters would ask state officials. "Who gave you the authority to attack a church ministry? God sure didn't. You don't have a biblical right. You don't have a constitutional right."

Otwell, 49, faces fines and an arrest warrant in Texas in a dispute over a court order to close his unlicensed boys home operated by his Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, a suburb of Fort Worth.

He is being fined $100 a day for violating the state law requiring youth homes to get state licenses. Otwell owes the state more than $27,000 in fines, Mattox said Monday.

Texas authorities said Monday they will not try to have Otwell extradited. Otwell maintains the state has found nothing wrong with the home aside from its failure to have a license.

"No one has been damaged physically. There's never been any child abuse," he said. "That church is as clean as it could be.

Citizens' group seeks more weapons in war on crime

AUSTIN (AP) — State lawmakers must give Texans more weapons in the war on crime, including life sentences without parole for some repeat violent offenders, a victims' organization says.

People Against Violent Crime called on lawmakers Tuesday to make several fundamental changes in the criminal justice system, including life sentences without parole, for repeat violent offenders who "have not shown a response to rehabilitation."

"The battle against crime is not being won. In fact, things are getting worse," said Robert Stearns of Round Rock, PAVC state chairman.

The group's list of "priority" legislation for 1987, released at a Capitol news conference, also includes:

— Denial of bond to defendants whose records include violent offenses.

— Denial of release on bond for defendants who are appealing convictions "unless the appeal raises substantial questions of law or fact and is likely to result in a reversal or an order for a new trial."

— Allowing jurors to hear evidence concerning a defendant's juvenile record.

Bishop College board to reconsider offer

DALLAS (AP) — Bishop College trustees will reconsider a community group's offer to purchase the school, despite expressed objections of some of its members to the sale under any circumstance.

Acting board chairman Comer Cottrell said Monday that studying an offer to buy Bishop College is "the prudent thing to do," despite the initial unfavorable reaction by the 20-member board.

Cottrell said he presented the offer to the board on Friday and "they said trash it. They didn't even have the courtesy to say table it."

The acting chairman refused to name the community group interested in buying the college, but said it is a black religious organization that wants to use Bishop as a non-denominational seminary. The amount of the offer has not been disclosed.

Bishop College board members are seeking a solution to the institution's financial problems, including a $1.26 million debt to the Internal Revenue Service.

Gorbachev: Soviets were willing at Reykjavik

By KEN OLSEN

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said the Soviets were willing to make major concessions at the Iceland summit, but that the Americans lacked the courage and political will needed to reach hard-sought arms control agreements.

Gorbachev

"And so there's been no turning point in world history, although it — and I am convinced of this — it was possible," the Soviet leader said Tuesday night in his first assessment of the superpower meeting since returning from Reykjavik.

In a 65-minute nationally televised address, Gorbachev said his meeting with President Reagan was useful, but foundered on the U.S. leader's refusal to give up "Star Wars," the space-based missile defense system formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"We were in an impasse. We had suggested large-scale, major and clearly compromise proposals. We made major concessions. But clearly without just a glimpse of a desire on the part of the American side to reciprocate, to meet us halfway," he said.

Gorbachev, however, said he remained optimistic that the superpowers have not reached the end of the road in their efforts to agree on arms control, but indicated the next step is up to the Americans.

The official Tass news agency today published a statement from the Politburo blaming the United States for the collapse of the summit, but calling for superpower dialogue on arms control to continue.

"It would be a fatal step to pass up a historic chance for a drastic solution of problems of war and peace," said the statement from the ruling body, which met Tuesday to discuss the summit. "Everything must be done to use this chance."

Gorbachev, in his speech, portrayed himself as the one who repeatedly took the initiative and made concessions in Reykjavik, suggesting Reagan was intransigent and ill-prepared.

The Americans "lacked the breadth of approach, understanding of the unique character of the moment and, ultimately, courage, responsibility and political determination that are so necessary for resolving vital and complicated world problems," Gorbachev said. "They stuck to their old time-eroded positions that contradicted present-day realities."

Reagan, conversely, blamed Gorbachev for the failure to reach agreements in Iceland. In a nationally televised address Monday, he said the United States was ready to continue talks, but reiterated that the United States would not give up the Star Wars defensive shield.

Gorbachev said he had read Reagan's speech carefully and accused him of presenting the Soviet arms control proposals as his own.

"It must be that these proposals are so appealing to the Americans and the peoples of the world that one might resort even to such a stratagem," the Kremlin leader said.

He said Star Wars emerged from the summit as "the symbol of obstruction to the cause of peace, the epitome of military schemes, of the unwillingness to remove the nuclear menace looming over mankind."

However, he said the meeting prepared a possible step forward for a real shift for the better, provided the United States at long last adopts a realistic position and abandons its illusions.

Gorbachev made no predictions about when he and Reagan would meet again.

U.S. ready to formalize Reykjavik agreements

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet and American arms control negotiators met today for the first time since the Iceland summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"We've got a very sharp pencil, we've got lots of paper and we're ready to work," U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman told reporters before the session began.

Viktor Karpov, the chief Soviet delegate, was touring West European capitals and was not to return to Geneva before next week. His deputy, Yuri Kusnetsov, refused to speak to reporters as he entered the U.S. mission.

Kampelman said the Reykjavik meeting "was a very important, significant, positive step in the bilateral development of an agreement here."

He said "many more problems were solved" in Reykjavik than he had expected and that the Geneva talks would be pivotal in continuing the work done there.

"We're ready to sit down now, take the agreements that were made, communicate them into practical language, and try to formalize as much of this as we can," he said.

Kampelman spoke at a hastily called news conference in front of the U.S. mission before negotiations on space weapons began. Separate talks on strategic nuclear arms were scheduled for the same at the Soviet mission. The group on medium-range weapons normally meets on Thursdays under the arrangement calling for separate talks in the three arms control areas.

Kampelman said it was "an important step" that Reagan and Gorbachev tentatively agreed before the summit collapsed to eliminate all European-based medium-range missiles.

"It's in our interest, and in the interest of the peoples of Europe that we begin to formalize" the leaders' agreement, said Kampelman.

He said he was "so sorry" that an agreement on medium-range missiles, said by both sides before the summit to be the most promising area for an accord, was not reached.

Democrats predicted to lose if Reagan criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats who criticize President Reagan's refusal to give up "Star Wars" in exchange for an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union will suffer at the polls in November, conservative activists predict.

A national debate with the Democrats on arms control and the Iceland summit "is a briar patch that we'd love to be thrown into," said Richard A. Viguerie, a political consultant and founder of the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

Viguerie, in a statement, called the summit "a mistake from the beginning" because it "handed the Soviets a massive public relations victory."

But at a news conference Tuesday organized by American Conservative Union Chairman David Keene and attended by representatives of a half dozen other conservative organizations, Viguerie said criticism of Reagan would backfire.

"Democrats have probably lost more senators, more congressmen and more presidential candidates to the issue that Democrats are soft on communism than any other issue I can think of," Viguerie said. "The media keeps making this an Achilles heel of Republicans and the reverse is true."

By preserving the Star Wars missile defense program, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, "Ronald Reagan will be remembered in history as the deliverer of the world from nuclear bondage and the greatest president of the 20th Century," Viguerie said.

'Explanation' of arms issue will bring support to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's national security adviser said today that arms control is such an important, but complex, issue that the administration must take unusual steps to explain its view of what happened at the Reykjavik summit.

Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, the normally reclusive adviser, said administration officials decided after the Iceland summit to "get out the people that were there as spokesmen to explain to the public precisely what had happened."

"We feel confident that when we are able to do that the people will understand and support the president's position," Poindexter said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

Poindexter disputed claims that the administration effort is a "sales job" to portray the summit as a milestone in the struggle for arms control.

The national security adviser, who briefed reporters for more than 80 minutes Sunday on the return flight from Iceland, referred to the administration's offensive as a "clarification."

"It's just the arms control issues we're involved with here are extremely complex," he said. "I've often called the whole business arcane, but it takes a lot of discussion and a lot of explanation to get across what's involved to make sure the people understand the reasons that the president did what he did and the importance of this subject and especially the president's Strategic Defense Initiative to the national security of the United States."

Administration officials who expressed disappointment and frustration when the summit broke up, trotted out Tuesday to outline the administration's version of the talks between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz two days after saying the United States was "deeply disappointed" at the outcome of the sessions, likened Reagan to Christopher Columbus and said the president "discovered a new world" at Reykjavik.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, who angrily denounced the Soviets on Sunday and said the outcome of talks "shows them up for what they are," said Tuesday, "I think we are upbeat now and we realize we did do quite a bit in Iceland and we've got a lot to be proud of."

And the president, his buoyant smile contrasting with his somber appearance Sunday night, told a group of arms control officials Tuesday that "the significance of that meeting at Reykjavik is not that we didn't sign agreements in the end, the significance is that we got as close as we did."

Gorbachev told a different story. Speaking on Soviet television, he said, "After Reykjavik it is clearer than ever for everyone that SDI (Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative) is the symbol of obstruction to the cause of peace, the epitome of military schemes, of the unwillingness to remove the nuclear menace looming over mankind."

Said Regan: "I think it's only natural that each side is trying to present its version of what did take place. There will obviously be our side and the wrong side."

To present "our side," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes announced that all briefings on the subject by administration officials will from now on be on the record and for attribution, jettisoning the customary attribution of background sessions to unnamed senior administration officials.

"I'm alerting you that those who you've talked to who don't talk on the record may not know what went on there," Speakes said.

Speakes said the administration was making Shultz, Regan and Poindexter available to news media "so that they can ask the questions and satisfy themselves as to what our positions were."
