

Balloonists delay celebration for sleep after historic flight

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Their Super Chicken III roosting on a coastal island, the two men who made the first non-stop balloon trip across the United States chose sleep over celebration at the end of their 2,500-mile flight.

"We're all about in the same tired state," co-pilot Fred Gorrell, 40, said Sunday night in a telephone interview. He and John Shoecraft, 38, breezed across the country in two days.

The Phoenix, Ariz. businessmen were saving the champagne for today when they planned to retrieve the polyethylene balloon and egg-shaped gondola — for which the craft was named — from Blackbeard Island just south of Savannah, Gorrell said. They spent the night at a motel.

Shoecraft and Gorrell fought off oxygen starvation and sub-freezing temperatures, flying as high as 28,000 feet at speeds that at times exceeded 50 mph, said Chris

Van Elk, who officially monitored the flight from Scottsdale, Ariz.

Shoecraft, who said he felt "on top of the world" after the journey, said he and Gorrell were concerned about whether they would be able to land close enough to shore, "or if we landed in the ocean with the fog, if we would have a serious problem getting rescued or whatever."

"We were able to bring the balloon right in on the beach so we were very happy," he said.

The gondola fell several feet and landed with a jolt after the pilots released it from the balloon "to keep from flying off into the ocean at that point," Shoecraft said.

"Shortly thereafter, we just went on and walked up and down the beach and enjoyed ourselves," he said. A Coast Guard vessel took them off the island.

Gorrell said he had been "confident we were going to complete our goal. There was never any doubt."

Two earlier versions of the Super Chicken failed in attempts to float across the country.

Super Chicken I ended Sept. 22, 1980 when Shoecraft and co-pilot Ron Ripps bailed out at Columbus, Ohio, in thunderstorms. Super Chicken II failed after only 30 hours aloft, forced down by turbulence in Liberal, Kan., on Dec. 5, 1980.

Another team, New Mexico mining company executive Maxie Anderson and his son, Kris, flew the helium balloon Kitty Hawk from San Francisco to the East Coast last year, but the craft was blown off course and drifted to a landing in Canada.

The 10-story-high Super Chicken III touched down at 11:07 a.m. EDT on the island, said Robert Nevins of the Federal Aviation Administration's Jacksonville, Fla. Regional Control Center.

"The first time we let down (through the clouds) we found out we were 20 miles inland," Gorrell said. The second landing attempt failed when stiff ocean breezes forced them to ascend and try again.

"They were in the air 55 hours, 25 minutes and they traveled 2,515 miles," Van Elk said.

Shoecraft and Gorrell began their flight Friday morning from Costa Mesa, Calif., and crossed the Continental Divide without difficulty later that night.

Crossing the Rocky Mountains was the most dangerous part of the flight because of possibly hazardous wind currents, Gorrell said, adding that the pair wore parachutes until they cleared the mountains.

They sailed over Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, then over the Mississippi River to Alabama and Georgia.

U.S. to expand Egypt support

By STEVE K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The United States, which plans an expanded Middle East military presence after President Anwar Sadat's assassination, will speed up shipments of fighter planes, tanks and missile to Cairo, a newspaper reported today.

Mayo, the weekly mouthpiece of the ruling National Democratic Party, said assurance of accelerated arms shipments was given to Egyptian Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, who was part of the official U.S. delegation attending Sadat's funeral on Saturday.

Mayo said Weinberger had promised to speed up delivery of an undisclosed number of M-60 tanks, ground-to-air missiles and 40 F-16 jet fighters on order. No timetable was given.

Egyptian authorities said at least two more suspects were being sought in the slaying of Sadat, and a machine gun attack on the home of Interior Minister Nabawy Ismail was reported by police sources but denied by the minister.

The Egyptian government, in a new move against Moslem fundamentalists, dismissed 18 army officers "because of their fanatic religious tendencies" and put them in civilian jobs, official sources announced today. The sources said the 18 were not under any further investigation, however.

The Egyptian defense minister disclosed that the army lieutenant accused of masterminding the assassination Sadat had been checked out by military intelligence because of his religious extremism but was not found to be any threat.

THE ACCUSED KILLER, 1st Lt. Khaled Ahmed Shawk el-Islambouly, was wounded during the assassination Tuesday. He has been in a coma at a Cairo military hospital since but is expected to survive his wounds.

The official sources denied reports that army officers, other than el-Islambouly, had been arrested.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. announced Sunday that U.S. forces will conduct "very extensive" military exercises in Egypt next month with troops from Egypt and some Persian Gulf countries. American B-52 bombers might be used, Haig said on NBC's "Meet the Press," broadcast from Cairo before Haig returned to Washington.

Haig also said American officials are assessing the possibility of accelerating military aid to Egypt and its southern neighbor, Sudan, the only Arab state that openly supported Sadat's assassination with Israel, "as a concrete manifestation" of support.

He said Sudan is threatened with increased subversion and border tension fueled by Libya, and "we are looking for a step-up of deliveries of American equipment to this threatened nation."

The United States, Egypt's largest arms supplier, agreed in 1979 to sell Egypt $3.5 billion worth of arms.

The Soviet government issued a statement accusing the United States of exerting "gross pressure" on Egypt and interfering in Egyptian affairs. A State Department press officer said the accusation was "hogwash."

In Jerusalem, Deputy Prime Minister Simha Ehrlich said Israel is firmly resolved to carry out its commitments to Egypt under the 1979 peace treaty.

ISRAEL IS SCHEDULED to withdraw from the final third of the Sinai Peninsula in April. Following Sadat's assassination last Tuesday, Israeli militants demanded the government suspend withdrawal plans.

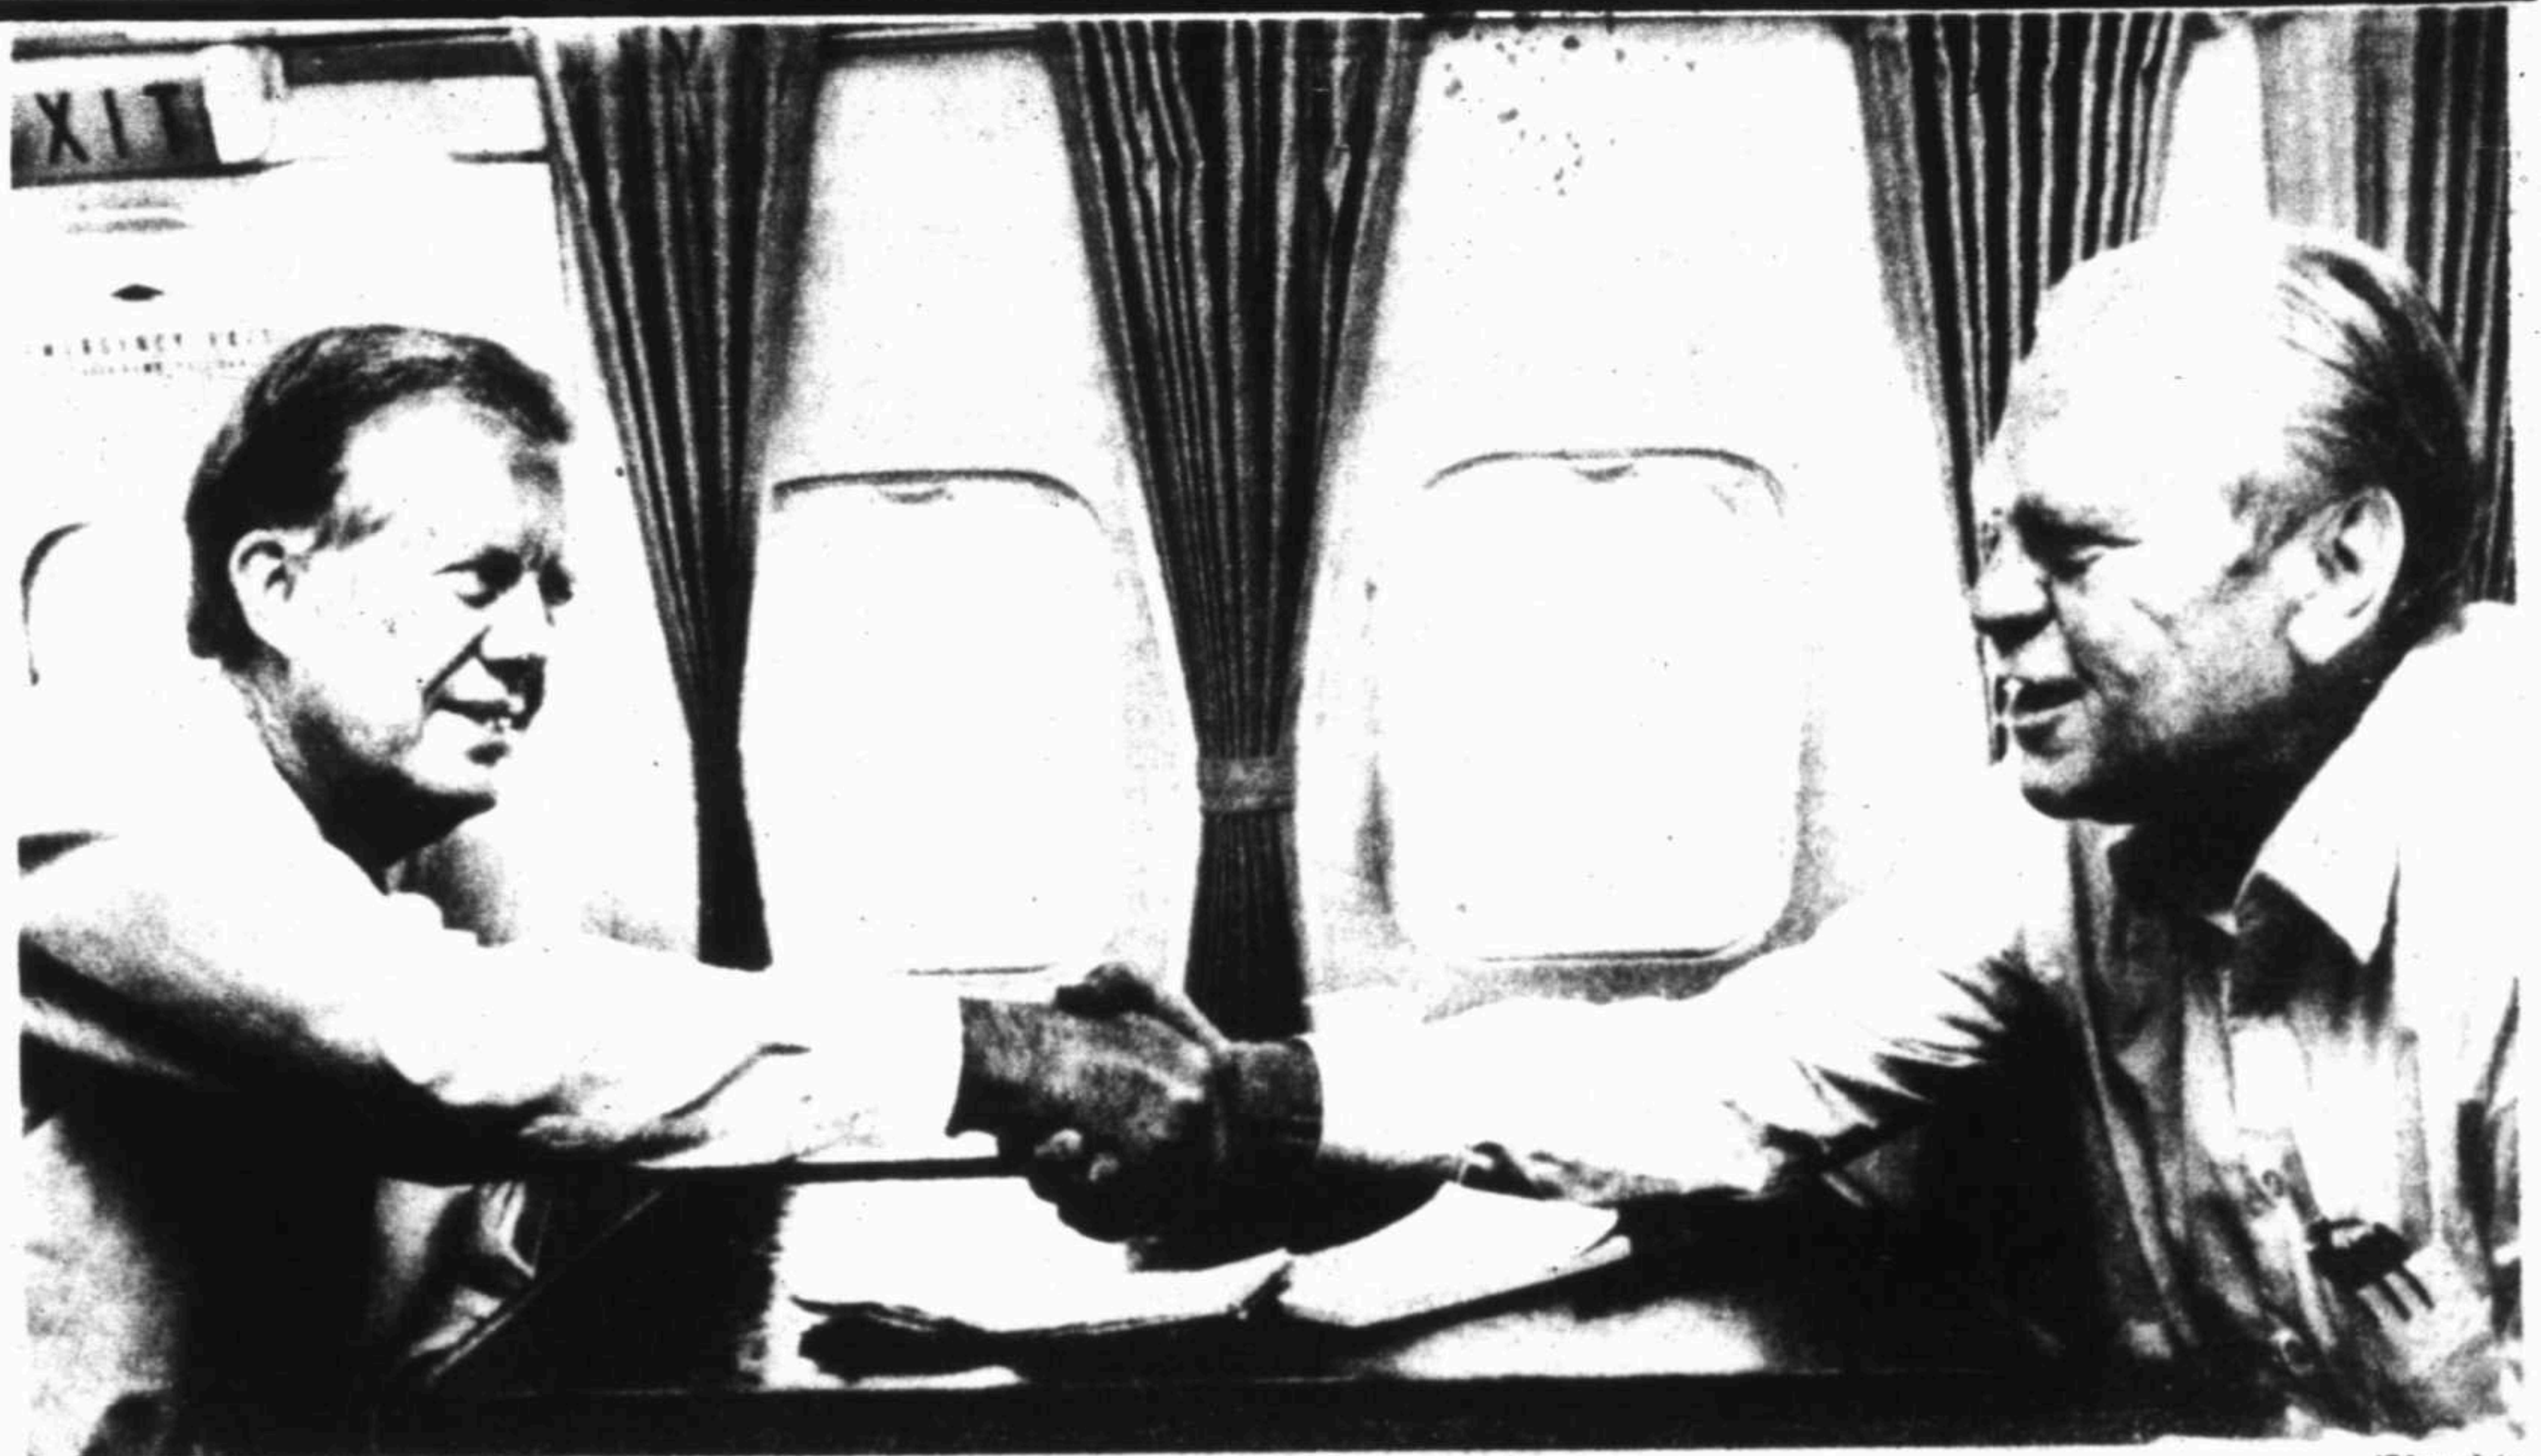

Ehrlich said Israel sees no need to soften its position in the deadlocked Palestinian autonomy negotiations with Egypt as a gesture to the new Egyptian government. "We are doing all we can," he said. The talks are scheduled to resume Oct. 21.

Haig called on the two peace partners to "strip aside some of the inflexibilities of the past" and rapidly conclude an agreement on home-rule for the 1.2 million Palestinians living in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Haig, who led a U.S. delegation including three former presidents to Sadat's funeral Saturday, met Sunday with Sadat's hand-picked successor, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, who is expected to be confirmed as president in a referendum Tuesday.

The Arab foes of the U.S.-sponsored peace between Egypt and Israel continued their rejoicing over Sadat's assassination but refrained from attacks on his successor.

Libyan Leader Col. Moammar Khadafi declared Sunday a holiday to celebrate the assassination and sent his foreign minister to Syria, another Sadat foe, to discuss the situation in Egypt.

New friends agree

Former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford shake hands after conferring during their return trip from Cairo, Saturday, where they attended the funeral of Anwar Sadat. The two former chief executives flew home on Air Force One.

Carter, Ford say U.S. must include PLO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter, who were instrumental in bringing Israel and Egypt together, say the United States eventually must deal directly with the Palestine Liberation Organization to gain a comprehensive Middle East peace.

In an unprecedented joint interview, the 38th and 39th presidents also agreed that many moderate Arab leaders support the Camp David peace process but are afraid to speak up.

Ford and Carter, frequently calling each other "Jerry" and "Jimmy," spoke on the flight back from Saturday's funeral of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The White House released the text Sunday.

Sadat had urged that the United States talk with the PLO.

"At some point that has to happen," said Ford, who was president when then-Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger employed shuttle diplomacy leading to the separation of Israeli and Egyptian forces in the Sinai.

"That is the kind of development that I think has to take place if you're going to get the negotiations for the future off dead center," he added. "I would not want to pick the date today ... but as you go down the road at some point, that dialogue has to take place, and I think that will happen."

IT WAS Ford who promised Israel that the United States would not deal with the PLO until it recognized Israel's right to exist.

Carter, who personally supervised the 1978 summit at Camp David, Md., retreat that led to a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, said: "There is no way for Israel ever to have an assured permanent peace without resolving the Palestinian issue. ... So I think Jerry is certainly right in saying these discussions have to be done."

The problem, Carter said, is U.S. recognition of the PLO before PLO recognition of Israel.

"We can't speak for Israel, but I think a simultaneous acknowledgement of the PLO that Israel has a right to exist, and our dealing with the PLO, would certainly be something that I would favor," Carter said.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said upon his return to Washington early today that U.S. policy hasn't changed — not to negotiate with the PLO until it has recognized Israel's right to exist within secure borders.

Both former presidents said dealings with the PLO would not necessarily have to be with the present leadership under Yasser Arafat.

"It can be responsible business and other leaders," Carter said.

"There may well be other leaders that in time will either in conjunction with Arafat or independently have an opportunity to represent them in these eventual negotiations," Ford added.

Carter said "the greatest thing the Palestinians could do for themselves is for the Palestinian mayors to say, 'We will negotiate even this limited self-government or full autonomy,' and then consolidate their position."

Ford agreed, saying, "If I were in the shoes of the PLO, I would, rather than fight it, accept whatever can be negotiated between Egypt and Israel."

Ford also suggested that returning the rest of the Sinai to Egypt before next April's deadline would be "a great step forward."

"Once the Camp David process is finalized, if the pressure is on from the United States and other sources, there can be another step that will appeal to the moderate Arab nations," Ford said. "And if they're given the opportunity they will disengage themselves from the radicals."

Carter said, "If there was a mistake made in Camp David it was not involving more deeply the Saudis and at least the Jordanians. Following that, Sadat became in public at least a pariah among the Arabs."

Among moderate Arabs, Carter said, "the Saudis in particular ... were hoping that the peace process would succeed. But it's almost impossible for an Arab to step forward because of a threat of assassination or violence within their own fragile government."

Report faults prison for inmate deaths

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Deficient medical care, untrained personnel and poor conditions may have contributed to the deaths of prisoners at the Texas Department of Corrections hospital at Huntsville, according to a physician's report.

The study, prepared by Dr. Robert Cohen for a legal expert monitoring the department under a federal court order, said records of 11 of 33 deaths at the facility "demonstrate serious shortcomings in the medical care these prisoner patients received."

In one death, Cohen named a prison doctor who had "significant responsibility for the outcome of this patient." Another prisoner died of a "potentially treatable, easily diagnosed condition," while a third died after "grossly deficient care," he wrote.

Hospital officials could not be reached for comment.

Cohen, associate medical director of Rikers Island Health Services, Montefiore Hospital in New York City, toured the hospital in August. He prepared the study for a special court master picked by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

Justice has ruled the department violates inmates' rights and has ordered the five-story hospital downgraded to an infirmary. He also ordered sweeping reforms in Texas prisons earlier this year after an inmate filed suit against the system on behalf of the state's prisoners.

PRISON OFFICIALS have appealed, hoping to keep their hospital open until a facility in Galveston opens next year.

Dr. Ralph Gray, assistant director of health services for the prison system, said no hospital has been found that will accept prisoners as patients.

Cohen's report says one man at the prison who is not licensed to practice medicine in Texas calls himself a doctor, signs reports as an M.D. and is not familiar with patient conditions in his ward.

Cohen also criticized the extensive use of inmate nurses and says parts of the hospital are unsanitary.

Of the inmates whose deaths Cohen detailed, Freddie Ramsey was the victim of "grossly deficient care," the report said.

Ramsey, 63, was admitted to the prison hospital Dec. 8, 1980 with a serious liver disease, possibly cancer. On Dec. 10, officials at the Huntsville facility wrote to John Sealey Hospital in Galveston, where more serious inmate health problems are treated on a contract basis, asking that Ramsey be seen on a "Priority 1 basis."

Ramsey died Dec. 15 in his Huntsville hospital bed. John Sealey Hospital received the letter after Ramsey died.

"There was serious misassessment of Mr. Ramsey's condition," Cohen said. "His condition was obviously so serious that to write a letter to John Sealey ... was to condemn him to inadequate treatment."

THE REPORT SAID Billy Joe Tutt, 37, who died of heart failure June 9, 1981, "did not receive any of the medications that were ordered."

A 50-year-old patient who died of a perforated stomach and peritonitis, had "a potentially treatable, easily diagnosable condition, requiring emergency surgery which was not done," he said.

The man in question was unfamiliar with the condition of the patients on his ward, according to the report.

Cohen was highly critical of HUH's dependence on inmate nurses. He also reported that portions of the hospital are unsanitary.

"Handwashing facilities for staff and inmates are inadequate or nonexistent."

After flash flood warnings, Midland can expect more rain

Flash flood warnings were in effect for the Permian Basin for most of Sunday night and early today, and Midlanders can expect to see still more rain.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will be cloudy with a chance of showers and thunderstorms through Tuesday. The chance of rain is 30 percent for tonight and Tuesday.

The NWS recorded 1.38 inches of rainfall in Midland overnight. Big Spring reported 1.05 inches, and Lamesa reported 1.5 inches in town and an excess of five inches in the northern part of Dawson County. Most of the area towns, with the exception of Rankin, reported good rains.

As of this morning, the rains in Midland have brought the monthly total to 3.73 inches and the yearly total to 15.75 inches.

Temperatures should fall into the lower 60s tonight and climb back into the middle 80s on Tuesday.

Winds will be from the southeast 10-15 mph through Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 82 was 12 degrees cooler than the record high of 94 set for that date in 1979. The overnight low of 66 was 26 degrees warmer than the record low of 40 set in 1946.

Heavy, slow moving thunderstorms dumped more than seven inches of rain over a portion of North Central Texas early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue flash flood warnings for several Texas counties.

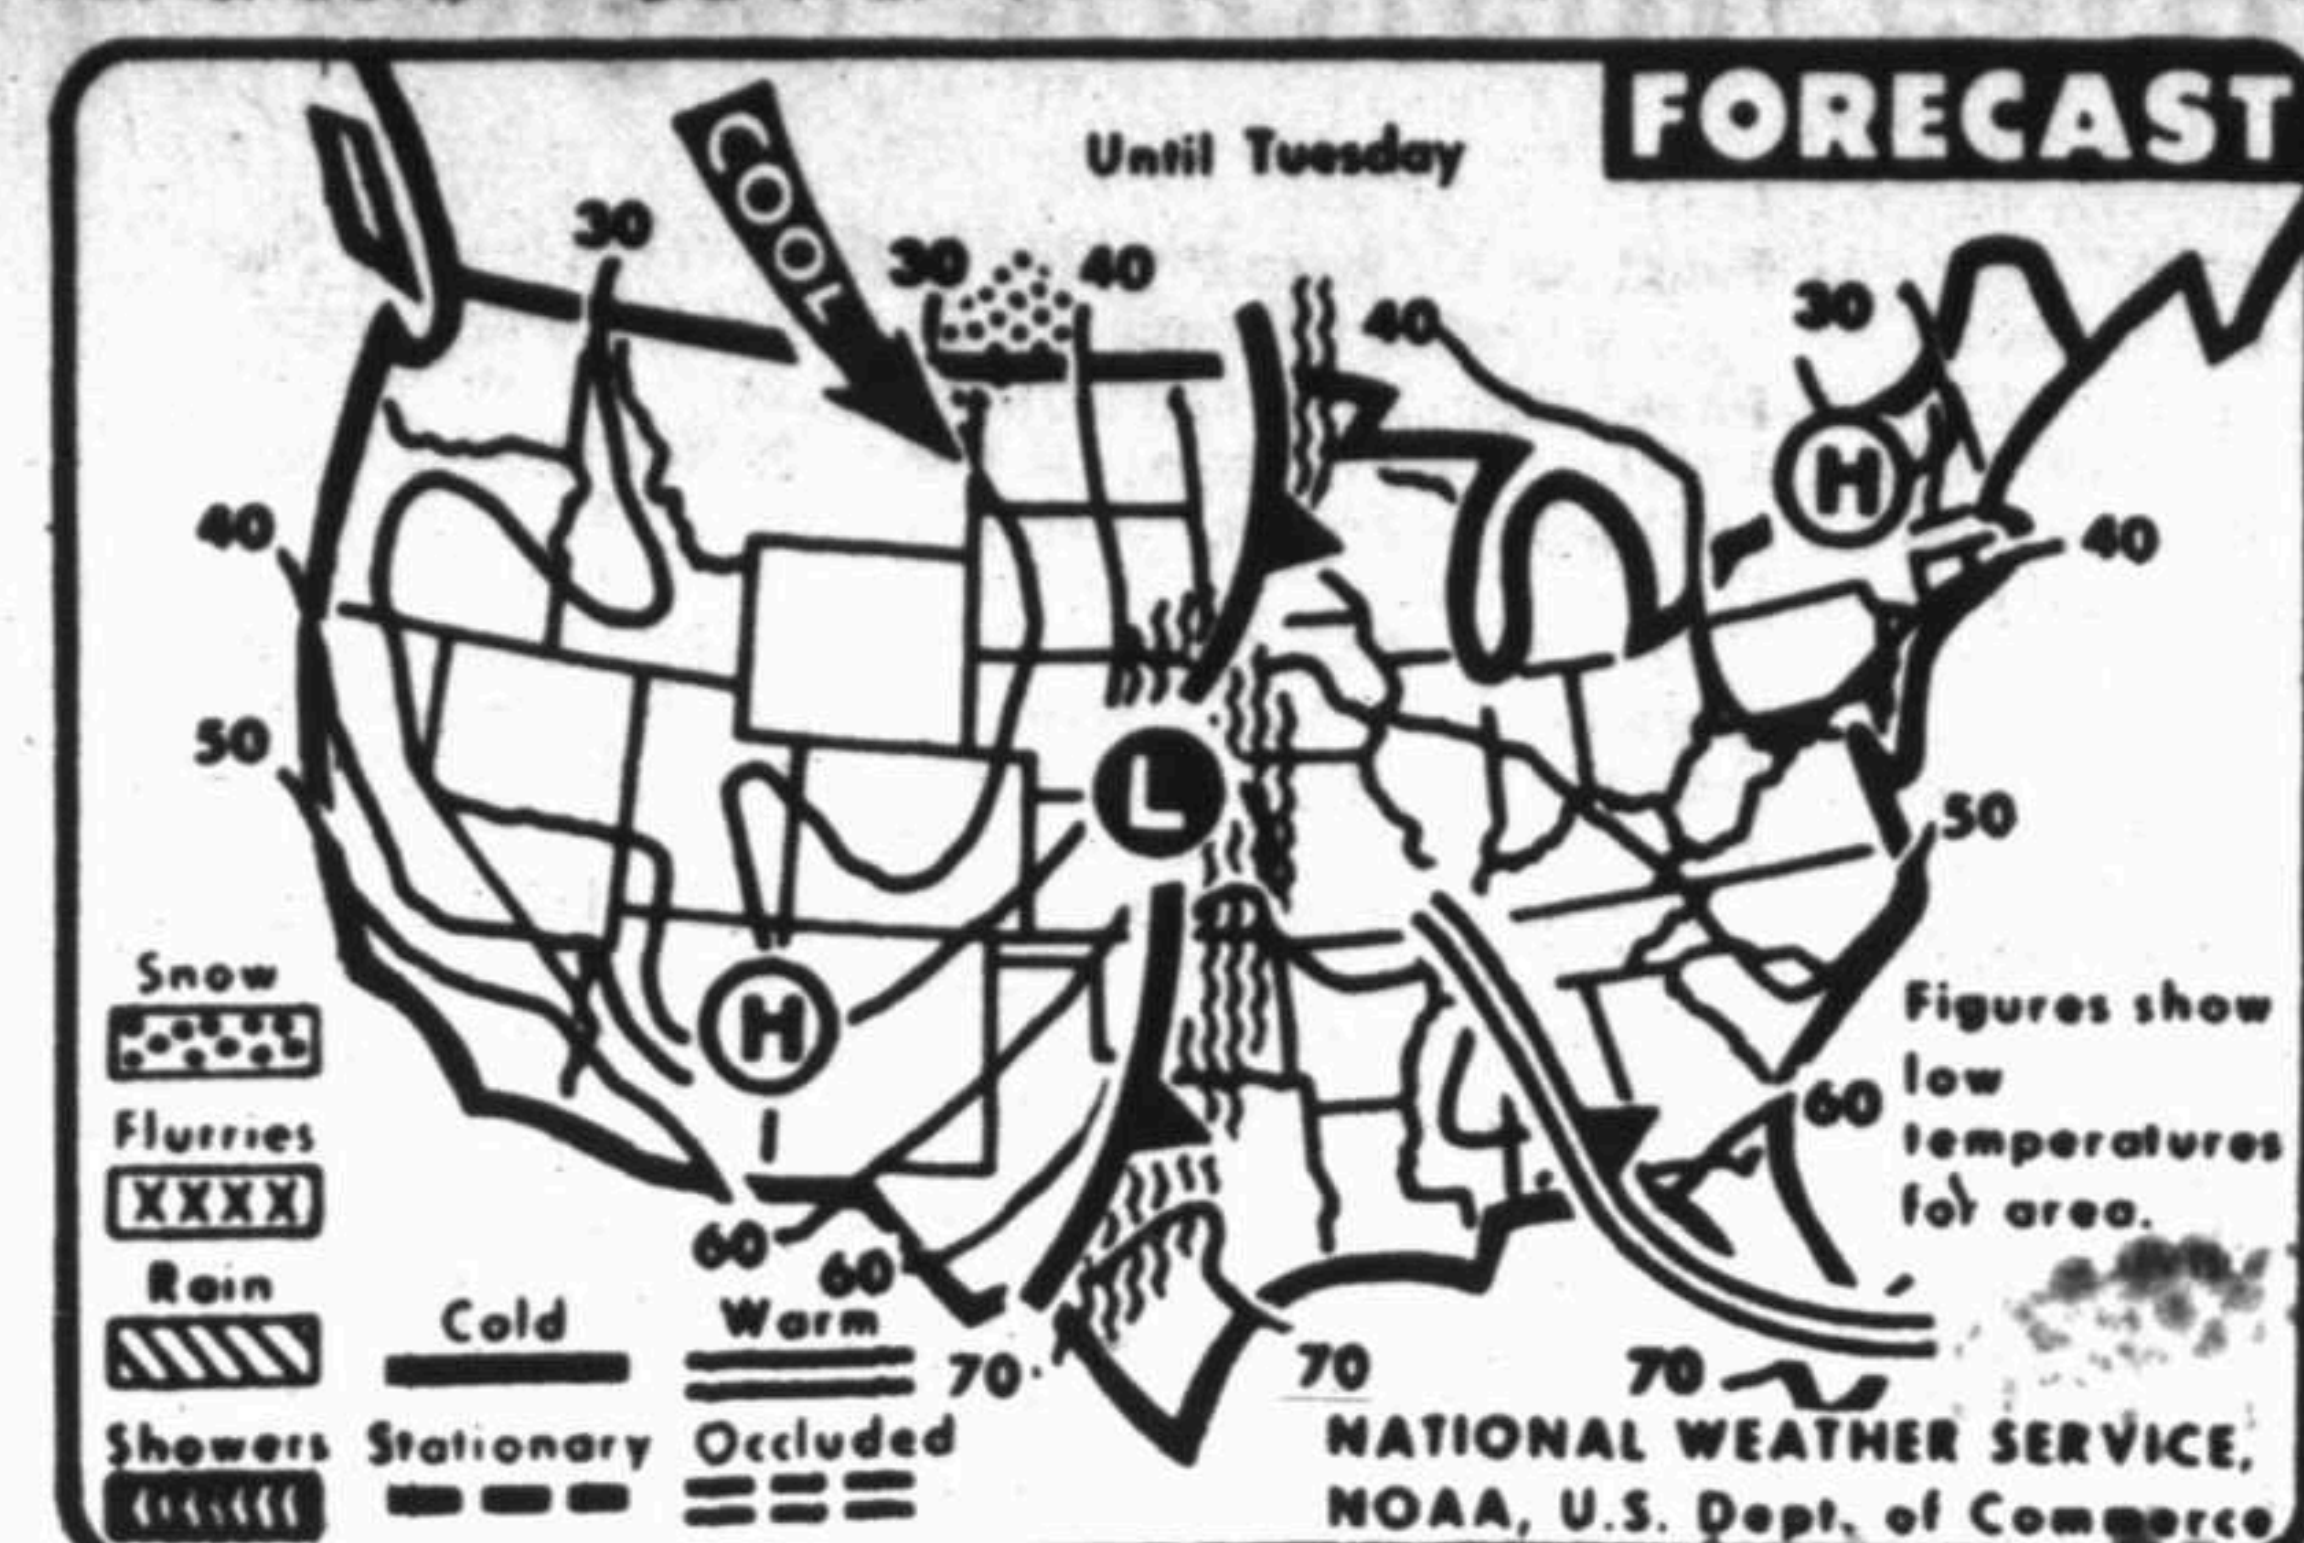

Mineral Wells reported 7.3 inches of rainfall by 6:30 a.m. and rain was continuing to fall. More than six inches of rain fell near Whitt and in the Springtown area of Parker County. Breckenridge had received 4.4 inches before dawn.

Lt. Kenneth Gillilan of the Mineral Wells Police Department said several families were evacuated from their homes in southwest and southeast sections of the city because of extensive flooding.

Several streets were closed and some motorists had to be rescued from their stranded automobiles, Gillilan said.

"It's still raining hard here now and we have the potential for more flooding," Gillilan added.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers are forecast by the National Weather Service today through Tuesday morning from Texas into the eastern Plains. Sunny skies are expected for the rest of the nation. Temperatures should be cooler in the northern states.

Sadat's Arab foes biding their time

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
 Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT (AP) — President Anwar Sadat's Arab foes are observing a de facto cease-fire toward his successor, hoping he will pull back from the peace process with Israel and alliance with the United States.

The Kuwaiti newspaper Al Qabas said President-designate Hosni Mubarak "will begin his reign with his ability to be fresh and unsoiled and his ability to shake off the responsibility for the mistakes and provocations of his predecessor."

"Mubarak is not likely to hear an ugly word from the Arabs as long as he only utters nice words about them," Syrian officials in Damascus said that, despite Mubarak's pledge to continue Sadat's policies, "things can never be the same" and Mubarak may change them after consolidating power.

Syrian President Hafez Assad met Sunday with Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Triki "concerning the situation in Egypt," the Syrian news agency said. It said they were concerned by U.S. attempts to "contain Hosni Mubarak and besiege him in order to force him to continue Anwar Sadat's peace policies."

Officials in Damascus said Syria and Libya were also concerned about the movements of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, and Libya claimed the fleet was staging "provocative maneuvers" off its coast.

Arab League representative Clovis Maksud said Sadat's assassination "immensely improved" the chances of reconciliation between Egypt and the Arab nations that broke relations with Cairo because of Sadat's separate peace treaty with Egypt, the Beirut magazine Monday Morning reported.

Maksud predicted a battle "for the soul of Egypt" between the United States and Arab nations opposed to Israel. "And I think the Arab world has a much, much better edge within the Egyptian body politic," he said.

But the independent Beirut newspaper An Nahar said the "Arabs have no alternative to Camp David to offer Egypt." It suggested an "Arab strategic summit" that would endorse Saudi Arabia's recent peace proposal offering implicit recognition of Israel in exchange for creation of a Palestinian state.

Israel rejected the proposal when it was made by Saudi Crown Prince Fahd last August. But Sadat favored creating a Palestinian homeland out of territories Israel occupied in the 1967 Mideast War, and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. predicted Sunday that Egypt under Mubarak would move closer to Saudi Arabia.

Echoing this thought, the English-language Kuwait Times urged Mubarak to bring Egypt's Middle East policy closer to those of other moderate Arab states.

"It need not swing from one extreme to another," the government newspaper said. "Instead, it can carry with it the bulk of the Arab world in finding a realistic solution to the Middle East problem, a possibility which is quite feasible now in the context of the Saudi blueprint."

However, exiled opposition leader Michel Kamel of the outlawed Egyptian National Front said he expected no changes in Egyptian policies.

The government says Sadat's assassins are linked to an extremist Islamic sect. Three attackers were arrested Tuesday at Nasr City parade grounds where Sadat was killed in a barrage of automatic weapons fire. A fourth died assailant died in the exchange of fire, the government said.

Security sources told The Associated Press on Sunday the government is hunting at least two more men believed linked to the plot.

Also, guards in civilian clothes manned a machine gun post mounted on the second level of an unfinished building next to the minister's house, where the sources said an undetermined number of sentries died late Saturday or early Sunday when gunmen opened fire from two speeding cars.

The autos — a white Peugeot and an orange Fiat 125 — were said by the sources to have been involved in similar attacks at about the same time on two police stations.

The assaults came within hours after assassinated President Anwar Sadat was buried Saturday, the sources said.

Ismail's house is usually guarded by four to six armed civilians. In addition to the sharpshooters and the pair standing astride the machine gun, 10 armed guards were counted today.

Ismail's ministry manages Egypt's police departments. It is believed the arrest in September of more than 1,500 religious extremists and Sadat's political opponents turned this Moslem nation's fundamentalist Islamic groups against the police.

King receives award

ORONO, Maine (AP) — Stephen King, who once collected a $69.81 prize from the University of Maine English Department, has returned to his alma mater for a more distinguished award.

King, author of a string of bestselling novels, on Friday received the General Alumni Association's Career Award, the highest prize given by the department at the university's Orono campus.

It is given annually to the alumnus who enhances the reputation of the university the most through career achievements.

The 1970 graduate won the $69.81 Hamlet award for a one-act play called "The Accident." But he's more famous for his popular books "Carrie," "The Shining," "Firestarter," "The Stand," "Salem's Lot," "Night Shift" and "The Dead Zone."

King, 34, is the youngest alumnus ever to receive the Career Award.

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy Jr. plans to marry next year and either take a job with a law firm or a law enforcement agency, a New York newspaper reports.

The 27-year-old Kennedy, who will graduate from the University of Virginia Law School in May, is planning to marry Emily Black, 24, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Indiana University, around St. Patrick's Day, and maybe in St. Patrick's Cathedral, according to the Daily News.

Kennedy, the son of the slain Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, said: "We haven't picked the church yet but we definitely will be married on a Sunday and I love St. Patrick's Cathedral."

The News said Kennedy will announce his wedding plans next week.

BOSTON (AP) — Retired opera singer Beverly Sills was one of three people awarded honorary degrees by Boston University in a celebration of the centennial anniversary of its Sargent College of Allied Health Professions.

The honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degrees were awarded Sunday at a special convocation to recognize contributions to rehabilitation.

Miss Sills, director of the New York City Opera since 1979 and the mother of two children born with physical disabilities, has devoted much time to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, serving for many years as chairman of the Mothers March on Birth Defects.

The other two to receive the award were state Rehabilitation Commissioner Elmer Bartels, who was paralyzed by a spinal cord injury, and physical therapist Berta Bobath, who has worked extensively in treating cerebral palsy and other nervous disorders.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees' catcher Rick Cerone says he has been the target of telephone and telegram threats for more than a month.

"I spent last night with cops and detectives coming over and a buddy of mine who is a detective is staying with me," Cerone said Sunday before the final game of the American League East Division playoffs. The Yankees won the game 7-3, and Cerone hit a home run.

The catcher said the threats forced him and his parents to change their telephone numbers. Cerone said the threats have affected him a "little bit."

"Whoever is doing it is doing a pretty good job because the detectives said that even if they get the person they probably could not make a charge hold up," Cerone said. "The threats are vague. They never say 'I'll kill you,' or 'you'll be dead,' they just say things like 'I'll get you.' What does that mean?"

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Bruce Laingen, charge d'affaires in Iran when the U.S. Embassy was taken over in 1979, is considering running for the U.S. Senate, the chairman of the state Republican Party says.

GOP Chairman Allen Levey told the Baltimore Sun this weekend that Laingen has set up an advisory committee to look into the candidacy.

"He's definitely interested," Levey said. Laingen, vice president of the National Defense University in Washington, could not be reached for comment over the weekend. He would be running for the seat held by Democratic Sen. Paul Sarbanes.

Electronic media may lose some rights

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newspaper publishers wanting to provide information electronically may lose some of their First Amendment rights unless they use telephone company transmission facilities, a new study concludes.

While cable television systems, direct broadcast satellites and standard TV stations all can be used for electronic publishing, they apparently will continue to be bound by restrictive rules that publishers would be loath to accept, the report says.

Electronic information services can be transmitted in numerous ways, but each essentially allows a consumer to receive textual and graphic information on a computer terminal or TV set.

"Barring an act of Congress, electronic publishers cannot expect to operate under the press freedoms they enjoy today," says the report, commissioned by the Modern Media Institute of St. Petersburg, Fla. "In fact, their degree of freedom could be directly determined by the distribution system they select."

The 59-page study, released late last month, is by the Washington consulting firm of Shooshan and Jackson. Harry M. Shooshan and Charles L. Jackson until last year served as top staff officials of the House communications subcommittee.

Information transmitted via cable TV or telephone lines is generally known as videotext. Another system known as teletext allows electronic information to be embedded within the standard TV signal and transmitted by a regular TV station.

Under current regulations, however, only the use of telephone facilities offers publishers immediate access to virtually every home in the country without regulation of content, the report notes.

Broadcasting is the most heavily regulated of all electronic media and the Federal Communications Commission likely will be forced to develop some type of licensing procedure for teletext. That means newspapers would have to compete against other applicants for access, the study says.

Cable systems, meantime, are normally local monopolies and "local officials already have the authority to establish access requirements for cable systems. This could, in turn, raise serious First Amendment questions, especially for municipally-owned systems, in which the potential for prior restraint or some form of government censorship is greatest." "Of all the electronic media that can be used to transmit videotext, telephony may be the one best suited to the newspaper industry's needs," the study concludes. Telephone companies are not subject to content regulation; telephone service is universal and in place, and a publisher would not have to fight for access.

The authors add it is thus somewhat "ironic" that publishers have fought so hard before Congress to keep the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. out of electronic publishing. If their battle to restrict AT&T solely to providing transmission facilities fails, the telephone company could end up originating its own information under regulation.

"And regulation of AT&T could carry with it an unanticipated and expensive price: newspapers may have to play by the same rules," the study adds.

House bills awaiting Senate action

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-passed appropriations bills covering many government agency programs for the next fiscal year are awaiting action in the Senate while Congress continues examining President Reagan's budget recommendations.

Here is the status of major legislation:

Money Bills

A proposed congressional compromise housing and urban development appropriation bill and initial versions of nine other money bills for fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1, have been approved by the House and sent to the Senate for more action.

An $87.2 billion appropriation for various health, education and labor programs, the latest of the regular fiscal 1982 money measures to be considered in Congress, was approved last week by the House on a voice vote and sent to the Senate.

Congressional appropriations specialists estimated Reagan originally requested $86.4 billion for these programs. In light of his latest budget cut requests, the president's backers described the bill as a likely candidate for a Reagan veto but they failed, 249-168, in an effort to return it to the House panel which originated it.

Since the House Appropriations Committee began creating the fiscal 1982 bills in late June, the full House has acted on everything the panel has produced except foreign aid. Still awaiting committee votes is a defense money measure.

While the lawmakers continue working on the regular fiscal 1982 appropriations, the government is being kept in operation until Nov. 20 under terms of a congressional compromise stopgap spending measure which Reagan signed Oct. 1.

That stopgap legislation also provided $1.3 billion for legislative branch operations for the full fiscal year compared with $1.4 billion initially sought by Reagan. Thus, 12 regular fiscal 1982 appropriations bills are still being considered by Congress.

Federal Budget

In his latest proposal to hold the fiscal 1982 budget deficit to $43.1 billion, Reagan is seeking a cut of $13 billion in planned spending. His recommendations, including an across-the-board 12 percent cut in fiscal 1982 appropriations for most non-defense discretionary programs, would set total spending at $709.3 billion.

Amid reports they were considering making major changes, Senate Republicans met last week to review the president's proposals. Sen. Mark Hatfield, D-Ore., chairman of the Appropriations Committee, said it would be impossible to grant the 12 percent reduction request.

Congressional compromise legislation which Reagan signed in August will reduce planned spending by an estimated $130.5 billion over three years, including $35.2 billion in fiscal 1982.

That measure was developed after Congress had settled on preliminary fiscal 1982 budget amounts, close to figures initially urged by Reagan, calling for spending a total $695.4 billion. Congressional budget panels have been taking testimony in preparation for action on a resolution setting firm totals.

Income Taxes

The revenue side of Reagan's budget plan contains a call for some selected tax hikes aimed at raising $22 billion over three years, including $3 billion during fiscal 1982.

The White House has said energy tax credits and the tax threshold for jobless benefits are among features being reviewed for such a package of tax law revisions to be proposed later for action by Congress.

Reagan, in August, signed congressional compromise legislation containing tax reductions worth $749 billion for individuals and businesses through fiscal 1986, including a three-stage permanent cut of almost 25 percent in personal tax rates.

The first phase of the personal tax reduction was reflected in changes in tax withholding effective Oct. 1. White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said last week that Reagan has no plans to delay the next step which is set for July 1, 1982, despite some support in the Senate for such a move.

AWACS

The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 28-8 last week to reject Reagan's proposed sale of advanced radar planes, known as AWACS, to Saudi Arabia in an $8.5 billion deal.

The resolution disapproving Reagan's proposal is to be put to a vote in the full House this week. The House expected to vote against the proposed sale, meaning the showdown is likely later this month in the Senate.

Voting influenced by last-minute appeals

WASHINGTON (AP)

For many people, one of the surprising things about a visit to the Capitol is discovering how few lawmakers are actually on the floor of the House or Senate during discussion of legislation.

In a body of 435 members, no more than a handful is on hand in the House most of the time.

Even on important bills that draw headlines, only 15 or 20 members may be present until the time for the vote approaches.

A block or two away, the representatives and senators are visiting with constituents, holding press conferences, attending committee meetings or taking care of other matters.

Thanks to closed-circuit television, House members can follow proceedings from their offices.

They are also protected by clocks throughout the Capitol complex that ring a certain number of times and light up to let members know if a vote is being taken, if a quorum call has been made, or if the body has gone into or out of session for the day.

IT'S WHEN a vote is called for that actions become frenzied on the House floor and that the tunnels and corridors leading to the Capitol become crowded with lawmakers hurrying to the House or Senate chambers.

In the House, voting is handled by a computerized, automatic voting system. Members vote yes, no or present by inserting personalized cards into computer boxes at both ends of every other row of seats.

Votes are entered instantly opposite their names, which are beamed high on the south wall — above the press gallery and behind the podium belonging to House Speaker Tip O'Neill.

To accommodate members who usually are scattered throughout the Capitol complex, however, representatives have 15 minutes to record their vote. After 5 minutes and again after 10 minutes, another bell is sounded on the clocks throughout the buildings to alert the lawmakers of the time remaining.

AS THE representatives stream onto the House floor, they often are unfamiliar with which vote is in progress. That sets the scene for some frenzied last-minute lobbying by those for or against a particular vote.

"We all can't study every bill that comes up, and some of the amendments are very complicated. You may be able to give them a reason to vote with you, especially if it's a bill that a member may not have strong feelings about, one way or the other," said Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Texas.

It is a contest in sloganeering, says Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, the majority leader of the House and chief strategist for his party.

"You'll say, for example, 'Vote no. This is a blow to the retirees,' or 'Vote yes. This will save so many billions of dollars,'" Wright said.

"IT'S A SAD commentary on our system that members come through that door, really with only a few seconds remaining with which to cast their votes, and have to be appealed to on the basis of such simplistic logic," the Fort Worth Democrat said.

"But he who does not participate in it at the doors, he who does not have the doors manned — all four or five doors that enter into the chambers — by partisans who would have an appeal to some of the members who are coming in, fails to do so at his own risk. Because the opposition will be doing it. That's one of the things that goes on every day in this chamber."

IN A 1980 poll of House members by a national magazine, Wright was named the most respected, as well as the most influential member of Congress.

Someone asked him recently what traits a successful congressman needs.

"Well, I guess you have to develop a reputation for being trustworthy. If your colleagues don't trust you, it doesn't make any difference how brilliant you may be," he said.

"You have to demonstrate over the years that you're capable of keeping a confidence and that your word, once given, is sacred, and that if you say you'll do something, you'll darned well do it. I think that is probably the first ingredient that is necessary for anyone that would aspire to a position of honor and responsibility in a group as diverse as the House of Representatives."

In some unpublished writings of his youth, Wright recalled the only time grandfather lost his temper was when someone went back on his word.

"A promise made is a debt unpaid," Wright quoted his grandfather as saying. Wright believes it as strongly as his grandfather did.

FBI probing contract on Newton

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI is investigating a report that New York-area mobsters ordered a death contract on entertainer Wayne Newton, the New York Daily News said today.

FBI agents were told by a Bridgeport, Conn. informant that leaders of the Gambino crime family had put out a contract on Newton because he is a key government witness in an extortion case that led to the indictments of Frank Piccolo and his cousin Guido Penosi, both reputed captains in the New York-base mob, the newspaper said.

Piccolo, 58, who allegedly ran family rackets in Fairfield County, Conn., was shot to death by two ski-masked men last month.

Penosi, a former New York City resident, lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., and reportedly runs Gambino operations in Los Angeles and Las Vegas, the Daily News said.

Singer Lola Falana had testified with Newton before grand juries in New Haven, Conn. and Las Vegas. They are expected to be star witnesses at the extortion trial.

According to the paper, the Gambino family was particularly angry over national publicity generated by the wealthy entertainer's role in the case, which has triggered other investigations.

The Las Vegas Sun said Newton "was informed of the reported syndicate contract by the FBI in late September, and his team of body guards quickly moved to take safety measures."

Newton was said to be vacationing in Mexico and not available for comment.

NBC News reported Oct. 7, 1980 that Newton was expected to be called before the grand jury investigating possible Mafia connections in his purchase, along with partner Ed Torres, of the Aladdin Hotel in Las Vegas.

Newton contacted Penosi for "help with a problem" during the entertainers' attempt to purchase the Strip hotel, NBC said. But Newton testified under oath before the Nevada Gaming Control Board that he knew Penosi only as a fan and family friend.

Zimbabwe's hard times

Not much earth-shaking news has come out of Zimbabwe recently. 'Tis often said no news is good news, but in the case of the African nation once called Rhodesia there has been a great deal of bad news.

The wave of white emigration continues to flow, depleting the force of skilled laborers and professional people. The economy will hit the rocks unless something drastic happens to turn the tide.

When guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe became prime minister, he expressed the hope the white minority would not flee the country. He did much to make the whites happy, turning out to be a far more moderate leader than his avowed Marxism suggested. But the whites kept going. In the first seven months of this year 12,551 left, a 50 percent increase over last year that brought the white population down to about 175,000 of the eight million Zimbabweans.

Former Prime Minister Ian D. Smith says the economy is "deteriorating rapidly" after 16 months of leadership by the black majority. Naturally he is a prejudiced observer, having been pushed aside because of his adamant white-supremacy stand. But the facts bear him out.

For instance, 4,000 of the 8,000 whites who once worked for Rhodesia Railways have left their jobs. In desperation the Mugabe government has been hiring Indians and Pakistanis to fill the vacancies. But the white departures have created a transportation crisis that affects every phase of the Zimbabwean economy.

When a nation once as prosperous and efficient as Rhodesia has to resort to recruiting foreigners to run their railroads you know there is trouble. As one white put it, "Ultimately, you are going to have to maintain the country with Indians, or it is going down the drain."

No one wants to see Zimbabwe go down the drain, or run by Indians, but the outlook is bleak until Prime Minister Mugabe can find a way to halt the drain.

The 'Reagan Court'

Ever since President Franklin Roosevelt reshaped the Supreme Court of the United States to suit his philosophical self, presidents have wittingly or unwittingly influenced the federal bench.

FDR thought the "nine old men" were too old and too reactionary. Their interests conflicted with those of the New Deal. After failing to add to their number he packed the court with men he hoped would be more akin to his own thinking, such as Justices Black, Douglas and Frankfurter.

President Eisenhower was responsible for the liberal Warren Court, although it is widely believed he did not know just how liberal Earl Warren would be when he named him chief justice. President Nixon made a point of reversing the balance toward conservatism.

What will the "Reagan Court" be like? That is an iffy question at the moment, inasmuch as President Reagan has made only one appointment, Sandra Day O'Connor. But there are some clear clues.

Mrs. Justice O'Connor is one of them. Despite the ruckus raised by the far right, her record suggests she is an intelligent and somewhat flexible conservative. Certainly she would not have been picked by Mr. Roosevelt.

Another clue is Mr. Reagan's oft-repeated desire to "get the federal government off the country's back." This suggests that future appointments will be jurists who believe in more home rule and less federal intervention. They surely will be people, like Mrs. O'Connor, who are attuned to the Reagan policy that the Supreme Court should interpret laws, not make them.

Although no one knows for sure what the "Reagan Court" will look like three years hence, we do know that a good beginning has been made.

The Country Parson.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Spaniards finding U.S., NATO distasteful

WASHINGTON — Columbus Day is an appropriate time for Spain's King Juan Carlos to arrive here for talks with President Reagan and his foreign policy advisers.

The welcoming rhetoric will gloss over the reversal of international power in the 489 years since Juan Carlos' predecessors hocked the royal jewels to send a Genoese adventurer off in search of the Orient by sailing west.

Yet many proud Spaniards are as resentful of the United States' benign "imperialism" as the natives of the New World were of the much harsher variety practiced by the conquistadores more than four centuries ago.

Instead of wringing gold and silver from the local population in the old Spanish tradition, the United States is suspected by many Spaniards of exploiting its military power in an even deadlier way: Hoping, through NATO, to make Western Europe the battleground in any future Soviet-American war.

The big question in the minds of many Spaniards today is whether Spain should rush pell-mell into the NATO alliance, as Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo and his centrist regime have been urging. The Reagan administration has tried to keep a low profile in the situation, insisting that the NATO decision is an "internal matter."

I sent my associate Lucette Lagnado to Spain where she found widespread distrust of the NATO proposal among the Spanish people. Much of it seemed linked to an anti-American sentiment that is even more disturbing. Graffiti is rare on the whitewashed walls of Spain's picturesque villages, which lends greater significance to the crudely painted slogans my associate saw in her travels through the countryside: "OTAN, NO" (NATO, No) and "Abajo el Imperialismo Yanqui" (Down with Yankee Imperialism).

Large orange, white and black billboards warning against entry into NATO are visible every few blocks in the cities, as well as along the highways and backroads of rural Spain.

The graffiti may well be the work of the Communists, but the orange-and-white posters are put up by the eminently respectable Socialist Party. Though currently the "outs," Spain's Socialists are gaining strength, according to diplomatic and local sources. A number of experts say they would win power if elections were to be held today.

Even in Washington, a Spanish official acknowledged that the Socialists had "gained momentum" lately. Opposition to NATO is not the core of the Socialists' program. Indeed, they're stressing that Spain's domestic problems are far too serious to take on the added risk of a controversial embrace of NATO.

In meeting with members of the opposition, in fact, my associate was told that the Socialists are not against NATO per se. They said they simply feel the government's timing is bad — Spain's efforts could be better spent attacking high unemployment, political instability and overall economic woes.

These assurances were made by a local party leader in Cadiz, the bustling port on Spain's southwest coast from which Columbus set sail in 1492. The Socialist functionary saw no contradiction in the anti-NATO and anti-U.S. posters that were plastered on the walls of party headquarters.

Although the Socialist politicians did not say so, they may be using the NATO issue as a campaign tool — just as their French compatriots have done, or as Irish-American office-seekers regularly denounce the British. Presumably, if they were to be elected to rule, the Socialists would turn out to be no more anti-American than the friendly Francois Mitterrand.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander Haig added fuel to the fires of resentment ignited last February, when he was widely quoted as saying the attempted right-wing coup in Spain was an "internal matter." His belated statements in support of Spanish democracy did little to dispel the belief among many Spaniards that the United States would welcome a military takeover.

Haig's latest gaffe was to fly to the south of Spain for a meeting with Saudi Arabia's Prince Fahd. He made no attempt to meet with Spanish leaders — which was regarded by the sensitive Spaniards as a deliberate snub.

UNDER THE DOME: My recent column rating members of Congress has had results on Capitol Hill. For example:

— Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill., was described as a "Special Interest Water Boy." Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., wrote to tell me I was all wet. But a former Russo staffer gave the congressman a bucket with my designation pasted on it.

— Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y., labeled a bore, chewed out his staff for conducting "boring hearings."

— Rep. Jim Howard, D-N.J., was puzzled. His office called to find out what I meant by calling him one of the "best backroom operators."

— Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., described as ineffective, argued that he was good at working behind the scenes with his colleagues. He cited his recent attempt to get a rare record album by the late Louis Prima for a fellow member.

— Rep. Gene Snyder, R-Ky., who rarely talks to reporters, made sure the Kentucky press was told that I considered him "effective."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Oct. 12, the 285th day of 1981. There are 80 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 12th, 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered America.

On this date: In 1942, American forces defeated the Japanese in the World War II battle of Cape Esperance on Guadalcanal.

In 1945, the Allied Control Council in Germany ordered the dissolution of Nazi Party after World War II.

In 1960, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev upset the decorum of the United Nations General Assembly by pounding on a desk with his shoe.

In 1964, Army forces took control in South Vietnam, ousting the government of Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh in a bloodless coup.

And in 1978, peace talks between Israel and Egypt opened in Washington, under United States auspices, amid predictions that rapid agreement will be reached.

Ten years ago: President Nixon announced he would make a trip to Moscow, independent of his planned journey to Peking.

Five years ago: Swine flu vaccinations in 10 states were suspended after the deaths of three elderly persons who received the vaccine at a Pittsburgh clinic.

One year ago: Officials of the Algerian Red Cross said 1,500 persons died in an earthquake that had devastated the city of Al Asnam.

Today's birthdays: Sports executive Joe Cronin is 75. Utah Republican Sen. Jake Garn is 49.

Thought for today: Popularity? It is glory's small change. — Victor Hugo, French novelist. (1802-1885).

CHARLEY REESE

Soviet Union promoting destruction

As the disarmament nuts join hands with Soviet agents, dupes and pacifists to argue against the MX missile and the B-1 bomber, just remember this: The Soviet Union is no damned good.

There are a lot of fools and wishful thinkers in this country who believe differently, but all you have to do, as old Sgt. Joe Friday used to say, is look at the facts.

The facts are that the Soviet Union is treacherous, brutal, cruel, devious, and totalitarian to the bone marrow. Anybody who would sentence a man (Edward Kuznetsov) to seven years of hard labor for reading a poem in a square is not the kind of government at whose mercy I would like to be.

I know the idiotic Soviet "experts" on Ivy League campuses and in the Eastern think tanks don't put much stock in Solzhenitsyn. After all, he doesn't have a degree in Russian studies. He's only a Russian.

But I believe him because he lived there. Solzhenitsyn says in the 80 years prior to the communist revolution, the czar executed at the most about 17 people a year despite revolutionary activity, an attempt on one czar's life and the assassination of another.

As soon as the communists were in power, though, records show 1,000 people a month were executed and in 1937-38, the execution rate rose to 40,000 people a month. Every communist takeover in every country has resulted in a rampage of murder and imprisonment, and the snuffing out of liberty.

Do not forget either that the Soviet Union formed an alliance with Nazi Germany and used it to invade Finland, Poland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. The Soviets have broken virtually every treaty and agreement they've ever signed. In the words of former Georgia Gov. Marvin Griffin, their word's no good.

Even in World War II, the Soviets' actions were infamous. They frequently put poorly armed political unreliable on the front for the Germans to kill. They betrayed the Polish underground, telling them to launch their offensive and then sitting back while the Germans destroyed them. Later, the Soviets executed 10,000 Polish officers and men in the Katyn Forest.

After the war, they did not demobilize their army. They stayed put — in Eastern Europe, which was coerced into communism; in North Korea; in Northern Japan. They literally looted Eastern Europe, packing whole factories on trains and hauling them into the Soviet Union along with thousands of engineers and scientists their secret police rounded up.

When the United States offered to ban nuclear weapons and to turn over control of nuclear energy to the United Nations, the Soviets refused because, having stolen material and plans from the United States, they were busy making their own atomic bomb.

They armed the Red Chinese while our fools were disarming the Nationalists and they engineered the Korean War and later the Vietnamese War.

Beginning in 1962, they launched the most intensive arms build-up in world history, outspending the United States in the last decade alone by $250 billion. Their strategic arsenal is so vast that even if we destroyed 90 percent of the Soviets' land-based missiles in a surprise first strike, the remaining 10 percent would be sufficient to destroy the U.S.

These weapons are in the hands of people who deliberately exterminated 15 million peasants and starved another six million Ukrainians. That is in addition to the executions mentioned earlier.

"...a concentration of world evil, of hatred for humanity, is taking place and it is fully determined to destroy your society," Solzhenitsyn said to the AFL-CIO. "Must you wait until it comes with a crowbar to break through your borders, until the young men of America have to fall defending the borders of their continent?"

We need the MX and the B-1.

INSIDE REPORT:

AWACS deal threatening solidity of Senate Republicans

WASHINGTON — Forty-three Republican senators summoned to hear an emotional appeal from President Reagan Wednesday for support on the AWACS deal were stunned when Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, peevish and unsmiling, predicted that Egypt's post-Sadat leaders would be disposed of in "six months," and offered to bet money on it.

"I'll take that bet," snapped Sen. Charles H. Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, whose courageous stands on the Mideast have hurt him back home in Illinois. Percy and Packwood reflect the widening split on Israel in the Republican Party. While heading the 1982 Republican Senate campaign, Packwood also runs the campaign against the president's AWACS deal with an intensity that has startled the White House.

What Reagan had planned in the wake of Anwar Sadat's death to bring his majority party in the Senate together may have slightly narrowed the split but intensified the bitterness. Before the meeting in the state dining room ended, Sen. Jesse Helms hinted of his concern that defeat of the deal could arouse the beast of anti-Semitism.

Tension at the meeting caused by Packwood's unsupported prediction of new Egyptian turmoil was heightened by a venomous attack on Saudi Arabia and Reagan's policy by the usually affable Sen. Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota. Delivering what one colleague called a "tirade," he said the difference between the Saudis and the rest of the Arabs was a 10-fold increase in oil prices compared with an 11-fold increase. "What kind of friends are they?" he asked. "If the Saudis are moderates, then the rest of the Arabs are real sons of bitches."

Contrary to usual practice, Reagan interrupted Boschwitz, arguing the AWACS deal is necessary to bring the Saudis into the Camp David peace plan. But Boschwitz continued, denouncing Reagan's Saudi policy. "The Saudis have bought this government," he charged. Reagan vociferously denied it.

"I need your help," said Reagan in opening the meeting. Newly energized in the AWACS fight by Sadat's death, the president told his fellow Republicans that Democrats "would like nothing better than to knock me out" on this issue. Secretary of State Alexander Haig said that with Sadat gone, Saudi Arabia becomes all the more important as an Arab friend.

Sen. John Warner of Virginia asked the president whether he had "looked at" a Senate resolution designed to placate AWACS critics. Reagan responded that he had not only "looked at" the resolution but thoroughly approved of it. Thus, hope for Republican unity flourished briefly. But freshman senator Slade Gorton of Washington wanted to hear from Packwood, who began the acrimony with his forecast of an Egyptian governmental overthrow. Boschwitz's outburst followed.

Helms next went to the podium to quote an unnamed "senior Democratic senator" who had told him: "On this issue, you fellows will demonstrate in fact whether you're a majority party. You will demonstrate whether your president has any credibility in foreign policy anymore.... If you Republicans can't even support your own president, how can you ask Democrats to do so."

Helms warned: "If we slap the Saudis in the face, they will go to England and buy Nimrods (radar planes), and then they won't owe us anything." He predicted that defeat of AWACS could see a return of three-hour gas lines and added: "You fellows ask yourselves who the American people will blame for this." Without specifically mentioning anti-Semitism, Helms' warning was clear.

The most impassioned speech came from pro-AWACS freshman senator Jeremiah Denton of Alabama. He said that his long years in a Vietnamese P.O.W. camp resulted from the same blindness Congress was displaying on AWACS.

The unique baring of senatorial emotion reflects the torment over Israeli-Arab policy in the party that looked monolithic on economic policy last summer. High officials are aggrieved that Vice President Bush has made only one speech in behalf of AWACS. Close advisers ask Rep. Jack Kemp how the House's leading Reaganite can oppose AWACS.

Sadat's death changed Sens. Orrin Hatch of Utah and Alan Simpson of Wyoming to the pro-AWACS side. Charles Mathias of Maryland is moving in that direction. But the harsh words said by Republican senators to the president's face in his own house show the difficulty of his late-hour struggle to avert a catastrophe for the Republican Party, not to mention the country.

More Iranian leftists killed; Peacekeeping force rejected

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Moslem fundamentalist regime sent 82 more leftist opponents to their deaths before firing squads over the weekend, Iran's state-run radio reported today.

Parliament speaker Ali-Akbar Rafsanjani, meanwhile, rejected an offer by the 42-nation Islamic Conference Organization to station a multinational peacekeeping force along the Persian nation's warfront with Iraq, Tehran Radio said.

The radio said 73 guerrillas from the Islamic-Marxist Mujahadeen Khalq underground group were executed in the capital and nine in four other cities in northern and western Iran.

All 82 executed leftists were convicted by Islamic revolutionary courts of armed insurrection, street violence, bank robbery and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

The latest deaths brought to 1,328 the total number of publicly announced executions in Iran since the June 22 ouster of moderate President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Bani-Sadr's dismissal triggered a Mujahadeen Khalq urban guerrilla campaign of bombings and assassinations to overthrow Khomeini's regime.

Mujahadeen Khalq leader Massoud Rajavi said in a statement from his exile headquarters in Paris that nearly 100 students supporters of his movement injured in recent street demonstrations in Tehran "were taken last week from their hospital beds to (Tehran's) Evin prison, where they were executed."

Tehran Radio said Rafsanjani had rejected as nothing new the latest proposals submitted by Tunisia's Habib Chatti, secretary-general of the 42-nation Islamic Conference Organization, to resolve the nearly 13-month-old Iran-Iraq war at the northern tip of the Persian Gulf.

The broadcast said Chatti proposed a cease-fire simultaneous with an Iraqi withdrawal from all war-conquered territory in western and southwestern Iran.

Chatti was quoted by Tehran Radio last week as saying Iraq agreed to the new peace plan, which calls for stationing of an Islamic peacekeeping force along the 300-mile-long battlefront pending a new ICO-sponsored delineation of the disputed border.

Nixon in Saudi Arabia

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon is in Saudi Arabia for a surprise meeting with King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd.

Nixon "is not here in any official U.S. government capacity," a U.S. Embassy official said Sunday in the Red Sea port of Jidda. American diplomats in Jidda and Cairo were unable to say what the purpose of Nixon's visit might be.

Nixon flew to Saudi Arabia from Cairo on Saturday night after attending the funeral of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Reports from Cairo suggested Nixon would discuss the controversial proposed U.S. sale of AWACS radar planes to the kingdom — perhaps at the behest of President Reagan.

Soviet who entered embassy in custody

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A man who entered the U.S. Embassy here with a loaded shotgun and told reporters he planned to shoot himself if he didn't get political asylum was in Soviet custody today.

The man, who identified himself as Boris V. Lesnov, a 42-year-old mechanic, drove a Soviet-made Moskvich past Soviet guards Sunday.

He surrendered the shotgun to a U.S. Marine guard and talked for several hours with consular officials.

Soviet plantclothesmen took him into custody when he left the embassy five hours later. Authorities said he was arrested "for disturbing public order."

U.S. official would not comment on details of Lesnov's conversation, but embassy sources described him as excited.

Lesnov, talking to reporters before he was led away, said he spent four years in a mental hospital in the city of Kaza, 500 miles east of Moscow.

"This is not Communism," he said. "We have problems everytime we try to do something different. Life is terrible."

A Soviet police officer said Lesnov has "a record of mental illness."

Soviet dissidents claim authorities over lock up dissidents in mental hospitals.

Plantclothesmen tried to stop Western television crews and reporters from covering Lesnov's departure from the embassy. One Western correspondent was knocked to the ground and a television camera was damaged.

Uniformed police prevented another television crew and a reporter from photographing the scene.

It was the third time in six weeks that Soviets have eluded guards and driven into the compound to talk with U.S. Embassy officials. Soviet citizens have also entered the Belgian and French embassies.

Dominicans protest Bush's visit

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Rock-hurling demonstrators protested the visit of Vice President George Bush, who later praised "the example the Dominican Republic offers in strengthening democracy in the world."

Riot police arrested 43 anti-American protesters in downtown Santo Domingo Sunday after they began burning tires and attacking police. One reporter at the scene said a young man was injured, but officials did not report any casualties.

The clash erupted as Bush arrived in this Caribbean nation for a 48-hour visit on his way to Colombia and Brazil.

President Antonio Guzman, toasting Bush at a banquet Sunday night, noted the "spectacle of rapidly deteriorating respect for authority and the enthroning of terrorism as a habitual political weapon."

"This situation demands the closest international cooperation in order to avoid that these social conflicts, at times generated by economic pressures, become general and lead to the crumbling of societies and governments," Guzman said.

In his response, Bush said his conversations with Guzman and other Dominican officials had given him "a new and better understanding of the needs of your beautiful country and of the example the Dominican Republic offers in the strengthening of democracy in the new world."

Bush is scheduled to address the national legislature today and hold talks on possible financial aid to the Dominican Republic, whose main trading partner is the United States.

Prior to Bush's arrival, Dominican legislators approved a resolution opposing a proposal in the U.S. House of Representatives to increase domestic sugar price supports from 15 to 18 cents per pound.

There is concern here that higher price supports for domestic sugar in the United States — the biggest buyer of this nation's main export crop — could cut the demand for Dominican sugar.

A night of cattle auctions and fundraising

Photography by Paul Gilbert

Approximately 550 persons showed their support of the Children's Service League and Cerebral Palsy Center in Midland by making an appearance at the ninth annual Beefeater's Ball Friday.

Scene of the black-tie event, which is held every other year, was the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Activities included cocktails, dinner and dancing, with the night's highlight being an auction of cattle. All benefits from the $100 a couple fundraiser will go to support the activities of the Children's Service League. More than 260 sponsors of the event paid $250 a couple.

It was announced that auction of the steers and three pieces of artwork yielded $228,230. Added to the figure will be funds received from those attending, including sponsors, and deducted will be cost of the affair. And even though costs are rising, it obviously was a good night for the Children's Service League and the Cerebral Palsy Center.

Most of the choice steer, weighing about 1,050 pounds, went at about nine dollars a pound. A spotter positioned in the crowd attempted to spur the audience's ambitions to bid higher and higher.

Marilynn Philpy, chairman of the board for the Cerebral Palsy Center estimated funds raised during the event would provide sufficient monies to keep the center operating for 10 months over the next two-year period. Additional funds are collected from other individual contributions.

Admissions at the center located at 810 Ventura have tripled within the last year, she said and operating costs have increased to $18,000 a month.

Theme of the affair was "Steamboat Adventure." The "Mississippi Queen sailed" at 7 p.m. As guests left their vehicles with the help of Mr. Beefeater (Ennis Cole), they walked through a wharf decorated in a realistic setting of steamer trunks and cotton bales. Crossing a gangplank, they approached an island of trees, plants and wharf pilings set at the building entrance.

Handing out programs on the "promenade deck" was Ted Strickland, assistant director of Midland Community Theatre, who was authentically dressed as a riverboat captain.

Other decoration accents included statues of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn in a focal setting; color theme of royal blue and fresh coral; table decorations of miniature copper paddlewheel boats and hibiscus coral; bronze mirrors and portholes.

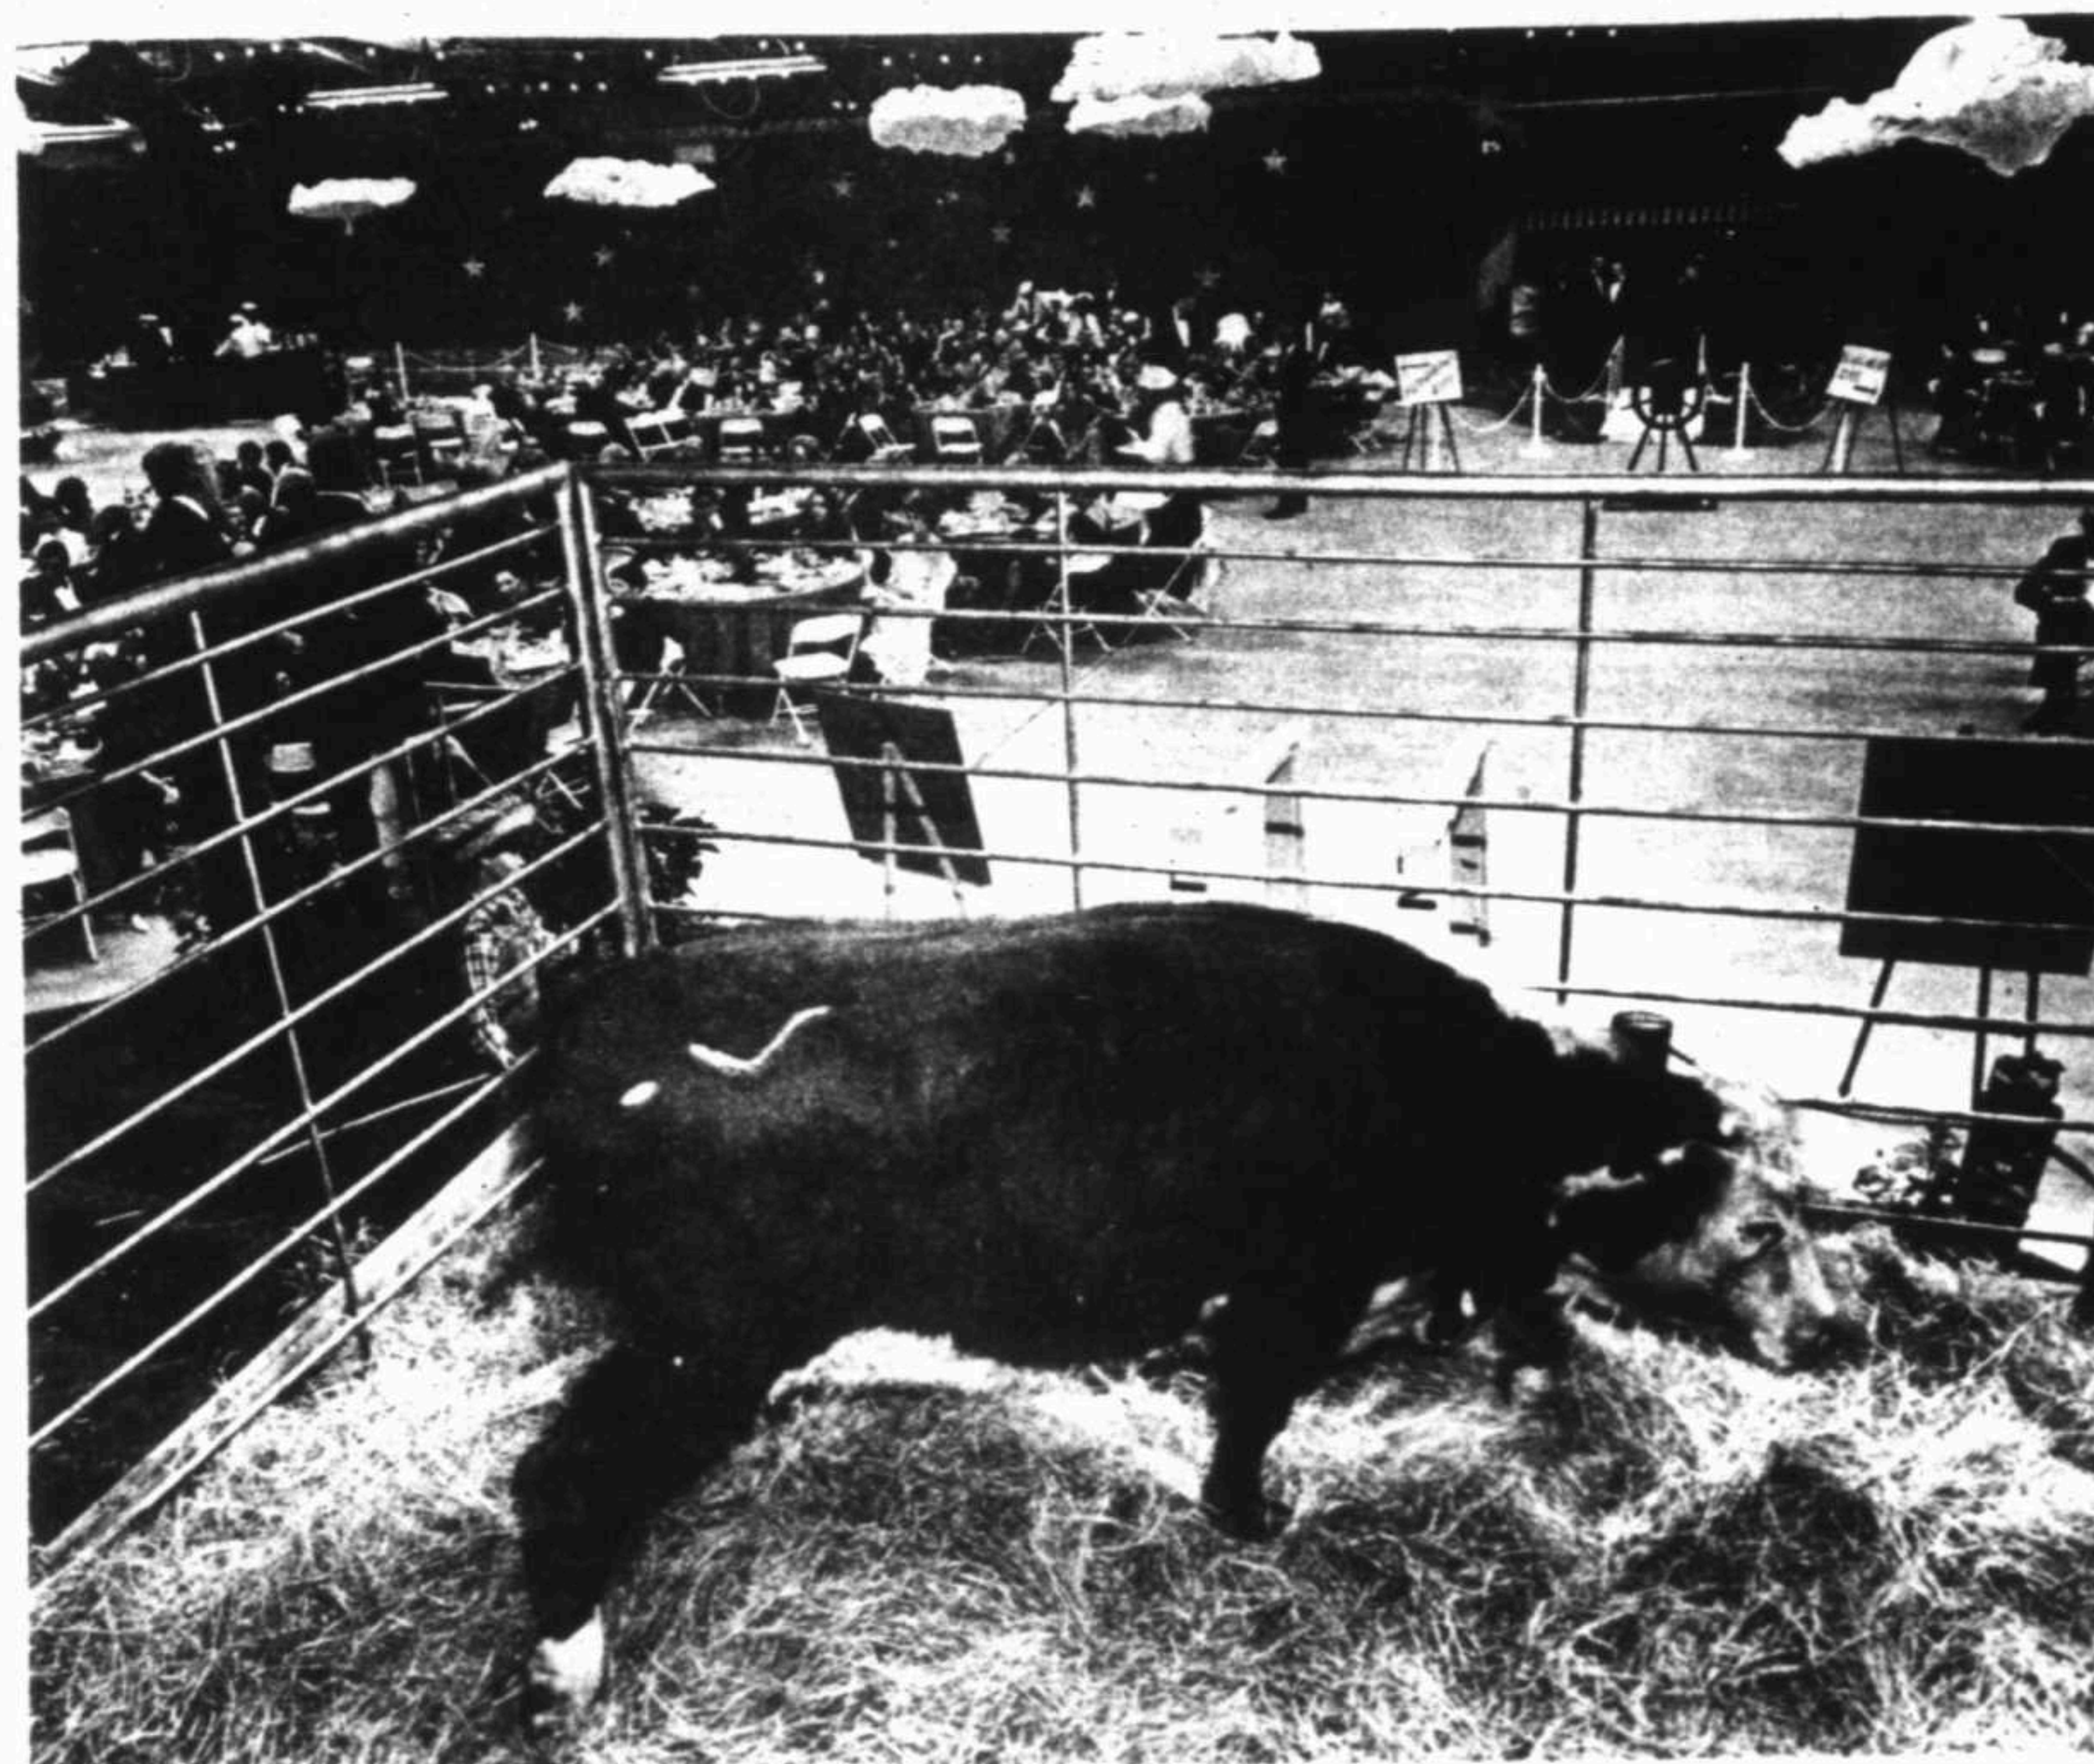

Music was provided by Mal Fitch and His Orchestra of Dallas. The dinner was catered by Don Strange of San Antonio which included steaks, wild rice, fresh asparagus and vegetables with dip. The meal was concluded with a liqueur-soaked chocolate mousse topped with whipped cream.

Chairman of the Beefeater's Ball is Don Evans and co-chairman is Ferrell Davis.

Committees include Jess Ann Thomason, decorations chairman, and Dolores Wynne, assistant chairman; Kathie Wetzel, invitations chairman, and Dot Stovell, co-chairman.

Liaison committee members are Puff Aycock, Mary Mims and Juanita Goolsby while gifts and programs committee members are Mrs. Goolsby, Dorothy Frenzel and invitations committee. Robbie Davidson is publicity chairman.

Other committee chairmen include, Marilyn Philpy, special effects; Lou Haskins, construction; Dorothy Melzer, painting; Susan Stengl, entrance and powder room; Darlene Goule, dance floor, bandstand and bars; Fran Henderson, arena; Sarah Holcomb, ceiling and overhead special effects; Alice Durfee, sewing and costumes; Donna Smith, buffet; Barbara McLellan, table; Carlene Ware, plants; Louise Jenks, supply; and Marilyn Hanson, barn workers food.

A choice steer, upper right hand corner, looks on impassively while members of the audience consider their bids. Don Jones, middle right, an independent oilman and former vice-president of First National Bank, quietly makes the final bid for a 1,060-pound steer. Attendants at the ball, above, pass through buffet lines offering

DEAR ABBY

Free surgery wipes slate clean for marked teens

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, the "Tattooed Man" wrote you, explaining the grief his self-inflicted tattoos had brought him.

Thousands of teen-agers have engraved themselves with tattoos, often as a symbol of gang identification, and later wish there was some way the tattoos could be removed. As you advised the "Tattooed Man," a plastic surgeon should be consulted. Most teen-agers, however, cannot afford a plastic surgeon, and for years the marks proclaim their youthful indiscretion and gang affiliation.

Now in the San Fernando Valley, there is a unique project, sponsored by the Los Angeles County Medical Association and Juvenile Justice Connection Project, whereby teen-agers can have gang-related tattoos removed without cost. As the plastic surgeon who performs the surgeries, I have seen several teen-agers have their lives literally turned around after removal.

For further details about our anti-gang project that offers free surgical service, please contact me by writing in care of the Juvenile Justice Connection Project, 6857 Lennox Ave., Van Nuys, Calif. 91405. — KARL N. STEIN, M.D., F.A.C.S., SHERMAN

OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR DR. STEIN: Your unique project deserves this nationwide publicity. I hope it inspires other plastic surgeons around the country to initiate similar programs.

DEAR ABBY: My only granddaughter has been taking showers after dinner with her father ever since she was a very young child. She is now 7 years old, and her father still calls her when he's ready to shower so she can join him. I do not approve of this closeness, and feel that a 7-year-old girl needs her privacy.

This situation has been upsetting me. I've discussed it with my daughter and she suggested that I write to Abby and ask how you feel about it. I am waiting patiently for your reply.

— GRANNY
DEAR GRANNY: I agree with you. Your granddaughter should have quit showering with her father three years ago.

DEAR ABBY: Bless you for rerunning that wonderful patriotic poem, "If God Should Go on Strike." I had copies made and have sent them all over the U.S.A. and Canada. — CECIL IN VERMONT

DEAR CECIL: Thanks. I needed that. Read on for the flip side:

DEAR ABBY: I beseech you to stop featuring such insipid poetry as "If God Should Go on Strike." It was bad enough seeing it in your column once, but twice was almost too much to bear. Believe me, Abby, these flea-brains who request reruns of such tripe are in the minority.

And while I'm writing, I implore you not to devote an entire column to one subject like drunk driving. No drunk is ever going to make it through an entire column in the first place!

What I want is letters! As many as you can cram into your space, which should be twice as long as it is. And I want these letters sensational — drugs, illicit relationships, cheating spouses, etc. This is the stuff I wake up for! Please, Abby, I write this on my knees. Sign me... DISGUSTED IN L.A.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (35 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Local DAR chapters hear Texas regent of DAR

Lt. William Brewer and Col. Theunis Dey chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution held a joint meeting at the Midland Woman's Club to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Yorktown which successfully concluded the American Revolution on Oct. 19, 1781.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Mrs. Ernest S. Brainard, state regent of the Texas Society, DAR. She is the state chairman of the Yorktown Bicentennial Committee and spoke on the significance of the Battle of Yorktown.

She said that, with the aid of France, the United States' first ally, the war for independence was concluded by this battle as Lord Cornwallis surrendered to George Washington at Yorktown. According to Mrs. Brainard, Lafayette realized the importance of the victory when he said, "Such a glorious cause has never before attracted the attention of man."

Mrs. Brainard reminded the members of the group that in order to preserve their freedom, they must constantly renew their commitment to the American dream that has sustained this nation for over 200 years.

Dr. Carol Woodfin, state vice regent of Waco, was a guest at the meeting, as was Mrs. F. Hastings Pannill, honorary state regent of Huntsville and formerly of Midland. Midlanders serving as state officers this year are Mrs. John E. Cross, state corresponding secretary and Mrs. Walter C. Hubbard, state curator.

In other business, Mrs. F.H. McGuigan gave the president general's report and Mrs. Robert O. Lowery, national defense chairman of Col. Theunis Dey, presented the national defense report.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Tasty treats

DEAR HELOISE:

Your recipe for salmonettes is my husband's favorite. You guessed it! I loaned the recipe out and now it's lost!

Would you please reprint it in your column? Thanks. — P.D.A.

How can I refuse, besides I'm glad to oblige and do anything I can do to make for a happier marriage.

This is a delicious way to fix that canned salmon or tuna, plus it's so simple and quick, and one that your family will love!

All you need, in ingredients, are:

Approximately 14 ounces of canned salmon or tuna.

1 egg.
1/2 cup sifted flour
1 HEAPING teaspoon baking powder

Drain the salmon or tuna liquid into a measuring cup. Put the fish into a mixing bowl and flake, then add the egg. Mix well with a fork. Add the flour and mix again. It will be thick, but that's all right.

You can add pepper at this stage, but I find it doesn't need any salt. Use 1/4 cup of the liquid and add that heaping teaspoon of baking powder to it. Beat with a fork until it foams up. It should reach the 3/4-cup mark. If it doesn't, then your powder is probably old.

Pour this into the mixture and mix well. It will now be thin, but that's the secret.

Using two teaspoons, scoop the mixture out with one spoon and with the other, push the mixture into a deep fryer half full of hot oil.

Don't worry about the shapes. Seems the crookeder the better. So nice and crunchy when they come out.

Why these tasty little morsels practically cook themselves. They'll float on top of the oil and then just turn themselves over. They're done in just a few seconds. So keep an eye on 'em!

Now you CAN'T mix these ahead of time to cook later. You have to cook them within about 15 minutes of mixing, otherwise the baking powder won't perform its magic.

You can vary the taste too by adding grated onion, garlic, or whatever your tastebuds demand.

They're great served with a dip at parties or for a family treat. Pour a hot cream sauce over them or even barbecue sauce, chili sauce, or catsup for a little zing!

I even like them served cold the next day. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: I'm not a housewife but I think I've got a good tip.

Because I got tired of running out of paper napkins and being without them two or three days until we remembered to buy more, I went to a restaurant supply house and purchased one of those napkin dispensers — the metal box-like ones you see in cafes everywhere.

Napkin refills cost less than $2. per thousand in my area.

Music helps socialization

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son's girlfriend is majoring in music therapy and hopes to get a job in a mental hospital when she graduates. It reminds me about the story of the patient whose doctor told him to give up wine, women, and song — so he stopped singing. What is music therapy, and how is it supposed to work? — Hal, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Hal: In general, music therapy is designed to increase socialization and provide mental stimulation among patients who might otherwise become isolated and withdrawn. While the technique is used in some hospitals, it may also be beneficial when used in nursing homes and with the mentally retarded, among others.

Many institutionalized people tend to become increasingly isolated if left to themselves particularly in large facilities where patient-staff contact is limited. Music therapy can help keep them in contact with their environment and with the people around them.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can understand why exercise may bring about an attack of angina, but my doctor has told me that I should take it easy during cold weather because I am more susceptible to an attack at such times. What does cold weather have to do with angina? — Smitty, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Smitty: Just as is the case when a person exercises or, for that matter, is emotionally upset, the heart requires more oxygen during cold weather as well. Therefore, if your coronary arteries are narrowed, whether because of hardening of the arteries or coronary atherosclerosis (the deposit of fatty substances on the inner lining of the arteries), you will be more prone to an anginal attack.

The pain or discomfort of angina often disappears after you rest a while because the heart then needs less oxygen, and a sufficient amount of blood is able to pass through the narrowed coronary artery.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is meant when someone speaks of a migraine headache? Is it any severe headache that occurs from time to time? — Dolores, Oklahoma City

Dear Dolores: A migraine headache involves the blood vessels within the skull. It may begin with symptoms such as flickering lights, or may cause a temporary defect in speech or body movement. The headache itself is centered over one of the temples or the back of the head, and may be accompanied by nausea and vomiting.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has been told he has diabetes, but that he does not need insulin. Instead, his doctor put him on a strict diet. Is it usual for a person who has diabetes not to take insulin? — Mr. V.K., Greensboro, N.C.

Dear Mr. K.: About 10 million Americans have diabetes, and it is estimated that from 10 to 15 percent take daily insulin injections. For most of these patients, the diabetes began when they were children or adolescents.

Union chief vows defiance

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Striking city teachers were urged by their union to defy a court order to return to work today, despite the threat of fines, jail sentences and dismissals.

"If that's what it takes to put our contract put in place, I guess that's what it takes," John Murray, president of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, told 300 union members Sunday. His remarks were the union's first official reply to the injunction issued Wednesday by Common Pleas Judge Edward Bradley that ordered an end to the month-long walkout.

School officials, meanwhile, said they hoped enough teachers would return to work today to enable classes to resume Tuesday. There would have been no school today anyway because of the Columbus Day holiday.

Murray said he was prepared to go to jail rather than send teachers back to work without their disputed contract in force.

"Don't lose sight of this one fact. It's very important and you have done it: you have closed down the Philadelphia school system. There is no education in Philadelphia," he said, praising the endurance of the strikers.

The 22,000 union members, including 13,000 teachers and 8,000 non-teaching staff members, face fines, jail or dismissal if they fail to heed the court order.

During an 11-week strike in 1973, the PFT defied a back-to-work order, and a judge jailed its top two leaders, imposed a $160,000 fine and added $10,000 more each day the contempt continued.

The current strike began Sept. 8 over the school board's efforts to trim a $223 million budget deficit by laying off 3,511 employees, rescind a 10 percent pay hike and increase class size. The union says the moves violated a contract signed last year after a three-week strike.

Bradley ruled that although public employees in Pennsylvania are permitted to strike when they are negotiating a new contract, the teachers were already working under a contract, negotiated last year, when they walked off the job at the city's 273 schools.

Superintendent Michael Marcuse has told the city's 213,000 students they would begin classes Tuesday if enough teachers reported to work today to begin preparations. Administrators and a few non-striking teachers have staffed special schools for about 10,000 high school seniors and a few hundred handicapped students and elementary school pupils.

A high-ranking school district official, who asked to remain anonymous, was quoted in The Philadelphia Inquirer as saying he did not believe school officials would immediately initiate contempt proceedings against no-show teachers.

The district probably would report to Common Pleas Court by this afternoon on how many teachers ignored the order, the official told the newspaper.

The PFT has asked a higher court to set aside the Common Pleas Court ruling, but it was uncertain when a decision would be made. All state and city offices are closed today for the holiday.

State mediator Edward Feehan began a marathon effort to renegotiate the pact Oct. 2 under a strict news blackout. The talks broke off four days later with Marcuse saying the union had rejected a settlement offer.

No new negotiations are scheduled and Murray on Sunday blamed Mayor William Green for a breakdown in the talks. He told teachers that "the city administration can't deal fast and loose with their commitment to us ... on backing the contract."

Kidnappers free engaged couple

BOVALINO, Italy (AP) — A young engaged couple snatched by kidnappers 10 weeks ago was freed after their parents paid $420,000 in ransom, police said today.

Antonietta Raschella, 20, and her fiancé Carlo Speziale, 21, both university students from wealthy families, were abducted July 25 while driving through the ancient ruins in nearby Locri.

They told police they were held in a hut in a mountainous area. On Sunday they were gagged and blindfolded for a two-hour ride to the Calabrian town of Santa Cristina D'Aspromonte, where they were released.

Motions to be heard affecting Daniel trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Leonard Giblin has set aside today and Tuesday to hear arguments on motions that could drastically affect the custody trial, including a psychological examination of Mrs. Daniel.

The 34-year-old widow is accused of murder in the shooting death of her husband, former Texas Speaker Price Daniel Jr. He was killed during a domestic quarrel last January.

Mrs. Daniel has already testified as to the details of the shooting, but her lawyer, Jack Zimmermann said since her testimony came during a civil custody trial involving her children, and was therefore "judicially coerced," he said it is not admissible during the murder trial.

Without Mrs. Daniel's prior testimony, in which she all but admitted firing the shot that killed Daniel, the prosecution would be without any eyewitness accounts of the shooting.

Mrs. Daniel's 13-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, Kimberly Moore, was at home the night Daniel was killed, but she was not in the same room. She has nevertheless been listed by the prosecution as a potential witness.

Defense attorneys also want to suppress other items stemming from the custody trial, including a psychological examination of Mrs. Daniel.

"Under the law, anything that is ordered by the court cannot be used because it is not voluntary," said Zimmermann.

Mrs. Daniel had filed for a divorce from Daniel, 39, the son of a former Texas governor and U.S. senator, three weeks before the shooting.

District Judge Leonard Giblin set aside today and Tuesday for arguments on defense motions, with testimony starting Wednesday afternoon. The court will be in recess Wednesday morning because of a local parade.

A jury was seated in three days last week to hear the controversial case involving Daniel, the great-great-grandson of Sam Houston, and his 34-year-old widow, who was a local Dairy Queen waitress when he met her.

Tarr beats Gondolfo for Penn Circuit net title

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Derek Tarr of East London, South Africa, was a double winner Sunday in the 21st annual Midland Fall Classic Tennis Tournament (part of the USTA Penn Circuit) when he won the single's title in straight sets followed by a doubles come from behind victory with partner Rand Evett of Grand Junction, Colo.

Playing a patient ground stroke game with occasional net charges, Tarr was able to overcome the dynamic serve of Mike Gondolfo, Lakeland, Fla., to post a 6-4, 6-4 victory. Gondolfo's serve, which is reportedly in the 120 miles per hour neighborhood, was good for 15 aces in the match to Tarr's zero, but it wasn't enough to overcome the South African's consistent play.

TEAMING UP with Evett in the doubles finals, the two spotted Mike Bauer and Jeff Simpson the first set, 3-6, and came back to win the next two, 6-3, 7-6. The 12-point tie breaker for the doubles title was won 7-4 by Tarr-Evett after posting a quick 6-0 lead, a strong finish for what had been an exciting match.

Tarr, 21, is a newcomer to the professional tennis scene. He got his start in June after graduating from Auburn where he was an All-American his senior year and seeded 10th in the NCAA tournament. From college he went to Europe where he played "in some $25,000 tournaments, a little bigger than this (Midland Fall Classic) in Italy, and managed to get to the quarterfinals of two," he said. "After that I went to Switzerland which is very similar to the Penn Circuit in the United States and won three of five matches on a six-week circuit."

When Tarr returned to the United States he played in the qualifying rounds of this year's U.S. Open and survived long enough to face Harold Solomon in the first round.

"I lost to Harold Solomon in the first round," said Tarr. "It was a pretty tough draw. From there I came on this circuit."

IN HIS singles final against Gondolfo, Tarr had problems returning serve, even when he got his racket on the ball.

"His serves were coming so fast that I could only try and get my racket on the ball," he said. "I was lucky he let up a slight bit in the second set. I pulled out some returns in the second that I didn't think I could make. He served great throughout. I think his serve is as good as Roscoe Tanner's and his second serve is a little better because Tanner lets up a bit and Mike goes all out."

The two finalists in Sunday's matches had completely different starts in their tennis careers. Tarr began playing when he was eight years old while Gondolfo was a relative late-comer to the sport, not starting until he was 15.

"My parents played tennis socially, not competitively," said Tarr. "I was lucky to start so early. I think that's important. I played all the way through junior tennis until I got a tennis scholarship at Auburn."

Gondolfo, 23, got his start in tennis at the end of a pair of baseball mishaps.

"I started on my 15th birthday," he said. "I played baseball before I played tennis. The summer before I turned 15 I was hit twice in the eye and on my next birthday my father gave me two tennis rackets and told me to quit baseball and Florida you can play tennis year round."

GONDOLFO went to college at Clemson where he received All-American honors in both his junior and senior years while also being named Atlantic Coast Conference Most Valuable Player. He's been playing Satellite pro tennis since February and last year he competed in the U.S. Open. Like Tarr, he qualified for the tournament and was defeated in the first round by Peter Rennert.

The player who teamed up with Tarr to win the doubles competition is older than most of the players he goes up against, 27. Evett graduated from Arizona in 1975 and has played off and on since then in the pros, not full time. He considers this time through could be his last if he doesn't make it onto the Grand Prix Circuit.

"It's kind of a last shot for me at the circuit," he said. "I'm getting to the age where it's now or never. I think I can do it or I wouldn't be out here. My goal is to be ranked among the top 200 in the world and I think I can do it by the end of this year."

Evett and Tarr have been doubles partners since the second week of this five-week tour and so far they are the only players to beat top seeded Bauer and Simpson. They've done it twice.

"We met the second week of the circuit," he said. "During the first tournament, his partner got sick and mine went home and we were both looking for partners so we just got together. Right away we clicked. He's got a good ground stroke and I'm more of a streak player. Derek is stronger off the ground and I like the net."

Whether they are playing singles or doubles, tennis is the life of these players and the others who are struggling to make it big on the Grand Prix Circuit. Some will make, and others won't. Still, they are giving it the best they have to offer and in most cases are getting little (money) in return.

Switzer must count blessings

Oklahoma's Barry Switzer owns the best winning percentage of any coach in college football. If he had to play Texas every weekend, he might be pounding the pavement.

Switzer is 1-4 against Fred Akers-coached Texas teams and the way things have been going he couldn't be blamed if he were pulling for Texas' influential alums to become impatient.

Going into the season, Fred's job was supposed to be in jeopardy after a 7-5 season, a year in which even a win over Oklahoma was forgotten. The word was out that this was it for Fred.

But after a 4-0 start and his most emphatic win thus far over the Sooners, 34-14, that presumably is ancient history. After the game, Fred had to ask the score during his interview.

HOWEVER, at halftime it looked as though Texas and Fred were in trouble. The Sooners led 14-3 and to many it looked like the game was not only over, but the second half was only a question of how bad it might get. It got bad, all right.

As the clock wound down, the Cotton Bowl presented a curious scene. You could tell where the Texas fans were, they were still a solid block of orange, savoring every last minute. You could also tell where the Oklahoma fans had been. They were only a few isolated pockets of red scattered where once there had been a solid mass of humanity.

YOU HAD to wonder what Akers had told the Longhorns at half to create the stampede. He said essentially nothing. "You're all right, hold the ball, settle down and keep going."

And looking back, it was good advice. Oklahoma's two touchdowns were the result of two unseemly Texas fumbles that set up easy scores. The Longhorns defense, which had yielded a paltry 1.1 yards per carry going into the game, had blunted the vaunted Sooner running attack. Except for a brief flash here and there, it had been contained more effectively than USC had been able to do in a 28-24 win a few weeks earlier.

Still, Texas hadn't been any ball of fire offensively. Quarterback Rick McIvor looked harried and indecisive and was the culprit on two of those three lost fumbles.

In the second half, he suddenly started picking the Sooner defense apart. If there was a change, McIvor confirmed, it was in the passing attack. "In the first half, I was dropping straight back and couldn't see the Oklahoma linebackers. They were dropping back in a zone and with the line rushing, I couldn't see where they were. In the second half, we started running sweeps." He continued and "we went to the play action passes and they were taking the fakes."

It forced the OU secondary to commit when Rick scrambled out of the pass rush and opened up some big gains.

BASED ON Texas and USC showings against Oklahoma, it seemed the Longhorns were the only logical choice to move into No. 1 this week, but that was before the Trojans went from No. 1 in the nation to perhaps No. 2 in Los Angeles.

That throws this week's poll up for grabs. No. 4 Pitt and No. 2 Penn State are unbeaten. Penn State beat off-whipped Boston College but the Panthers probably picked up more prestige points with a win over previously unbeaten West Virginia.

No. 5 North Carolina just might be the best of all. The Tar Heel point margins have been awesome and event without Kelvin Bryant, won big again Saturday.

It really doesn't matter this early. However, the Cotton Bowl people have to be pulling for all four to keep it up, because it could set up a national championship match for their New Year's Day Classic, and they haven't had one of those since Notre Dame foiled Texas in 1978.

Pitt and Penn State are independents and North Carolina belongs to the Atlantic Coast Conference, which has no binding bowl obligations. All three are free to go where they please. If just one of the three make it unbeaten and Texas, which still has SMU, Houston, Texas A&M, not to mention Arkansas, left, makes it...well, you can't blame the Cotton Bowl fathers for dreaming, can you?

Galway wins Gaelic football

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight points by Gabriel McManus carried County Galway, the National League champ, to an 11-9 upset over County Kerry, the All-Ireland titleist, in the Bank of Ireland Gaelic Football Classic Sunday night before a crowd of 5,325 at Gaelic Park.

Eoin Liston and Jack O'Shea each had two points for Galway, which trailed at the half, 4-3.

Mr. October strikes again

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When the weather turns cool, Reggie Jackson gets hot.

The aptly-named "Mr. October" lived up to his title with a clutch two-run homer that helped the New York Yankees beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-3 Sunday night in the final game of the American League East playoffs.

That put the Yankees into the AL championship series against the West-winning Oakland A's starting Tuesday night in New York and completed the playoff picture for the two league titles.

Earlier Sunday, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Houston Astros 4-0 for the National League West championship and the Montreal Expos blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0 in the East. They'll start their five-game series Tuesday night in Los Angeles.

JACKSON, WHO has hit 16 post-season homers, smashed his second of the Milwaukee series in the fourth inning to wipe out a 2-0 Brewer lead. Oscar Gamble followed with another homer to give New York a 3-2 lead and the Yankees were off and running.

"There was a lot of pressure on us," said Jackson after owner George Steinbrenner branded his players "overpriced fat cats" and threatened wholesale changes if the team lost to the Brewers.

"George said yesterday that we would embarrass the New York Yankees if we lost three straight," said Jackson. "That really hurt. If I don't play for them any more, I don't want to leave with that on me. That was paramount."

Jackson is eligible for free agency at the end of the season.

"This team is not going to play three bad games in a row," added Jackson. "The talent is too good. I didn't want to be part of a club that lost three in a row. What he (Steinbrenner) said didn't have to be said. The pressure was on us anyway."

STEINBRENNER had particularly singled out Yankee catcher Rick Cerone in his Saturday tirade, leaving him in tears, and ironically it was none other than Cerone who delivered the game-winning run Sunday night with an RBI grounder that capped a four-run fourth and later added another run with a homer in the seventh.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers found themselves in another one-sided game, but this time they enjoyed the experience.

"It was the greatest victory we've had," said Bill Walsh, the third-year coach whose first two San Francisco teams went 2-14 and 6-10.

Exactly one year after losing 59-14 to the Dallas Cowboys, the 49ers raced to an early 24-0 lead and dealt the Cowboys an embarrassing 45-14 defeat Sunday.

"It was obvious what happened. We had a total breakdown," said Danny White, the Dallas quarterback who left the game after San Francisco took a 38-7 lead on rookie cornerback Ronnie Lott's 41-yard interception return for a touchdown in the third period.

LOTT's touchdown, his second as a pro, came 35 seconds after the 49ers' Joe Montana connected with Dwight Clark on a 78-yard touchdown pass play.

"We played like we were in a fog out there," said Coach Tom Landry.

But, in their worst loss since the 1970 National Football League season, the Cowboys couldn't blame the weather. It was sunny and warm at Candlestick Park, the often foggy stadium by San Francisco Bay, and a sellout crowd of 57,574 home fans basked in joy.

MONTANA hit Freddie Solomon on five passes for 74 yards and a touchdown in the first period, when everything went the 49ers' way.

On one key play, a Dallas fumble rolling toward the sidelines hit a referee's foot, stayed in bounds and was recovered by Lott.

"It was gratifying to have everything going our way for a change. As you know, it hasn't been that way for us in recent years," said Walsh.

Tony Dorsett, the NFL's leading rusher going into the game, managed only 21 yards against a San Francisco defense strengthened by the addition of Fred Dean, the former San Diego star who had three sacks in his 49ers' debut.

But Walsh said, no doubt hopefully, "Next week Dorsett could get 200 yards."

Dallas, 4-2 after a second straight loss, will be home next Sunday against the Los Angeles Rams, tied with the 49ers for the NFC West lead.

Ken Stabler finds Snake bite remedy

HOUSTON (AP) — Seattle coach Jack Patera expected his underdog Seahawks to get pounded by Houston running back Earl Campbell but he never anticipated being knocked out by quarterback Ken Stabler.

Stabler, who completed only one pass a week ago, resurrected the Oilers passing attack Sunday with three touchdown throws in the 35-17 victory.

Campbell chipped in with 186 yards and two touchdowns on 39 carries, the third-highest number of carries for one game in National Football League history.

"Even with all the yardage that Campbell gets, if Stabler hadn't hit those passes we'd have been in good shape," said Patera, whose team lost for the 14th time in 15 games. "I thought Kenny played his best game of the year."

THE SEAHAWKS, who upset the Oilers the past two seasons, jumped to a 10-0 lead on Efren Herrera's 41-yard field goal and Jim Zorn's 17-yard TD pass to David Hughes before Stabler ignited the Oilers.

The 11-year veteran hit Ken Burrough on a 31-yard touchdown toss in the first quarter and Campbell ran 1 yard for the go-ahead TD in the second period.

Stabler, who completed 12 of 18 passes for 156 yards, then came back with touchdown shots of 32 yards to tight end Dave Casper and 24 yards to Burrough. Campbell added a 4-yarder in the fourth quarter for the clincher.

Seattle dropped to a 1-5 record and the Oilers, who play their next three games on the road, improved to 4-2.

"Our offense has been taking a licking from the media and we really needed a day like today to lift our confidence for the upcoming road trip," said Stabler. "I've said all along that we were much better offensively than we have shown."

CAMPBELL, meanwhile, continued to prosper in the Oilers' new heavy use of the I-formation.

"I'm not going to lie, I am happy to be running out of the I again," Campbell said. "And I think Tim Wilson should be the all-pro as much as me."

Wilson returned to the starting lineup last week when the Oilers traded Rob Carpenter to the New York Giants.

Zorn completed 19 of 30 passes for 145 yards but was intercepted twice and was replaced midway in the fourth quarter by Sam Adkins, who completed the final touchdown pass for 31 yards to Steve Largent.

"I don't feel like we got beat as much as we just lost," Zorn said. "In the early drive we took it to them and scored but from the second quarter on, we just couldn't get the ball away from them."

Patera wished Seattle could have kept the ball away from Campbell.

"I think he's the most effective on short-yardage situations. The thing about him is, if he needs a yard, he'll give you eight. There's seldom a need for a measurement when he runs."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, October 13, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was born on this date. If you go after new responsibilities now you will get them! Greater prestige and additional income are part of the picture. Although long-distance travel is not favored, shorter trips will bring both pleasure and profit. Work conditions show slow but steady improvement. The career and business achievements you register now will pay off handsomely for many years to come. Romance remains a very important factor in the decisions you make. Refuse to be rushed into committing yourself. You need to be a bit more discerning when choosing partners.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are partly motivated by the desires of others now. Hold off on committing yourself to career change. You could discover a new way to increase your income.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid getting caught in the middle of a power struggle. It is apt to be a no-win situation. Speak frankly to a family member who buys things you cannot afford.

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—We are not averse to raising partner with three trumps to an honor — indeed, we recommend it highly on most hands that contain a ruffing value. Here, however, you have a minimum opening bid, a balanced hand and a stopper in every suit. One no trump is surely a more descriptive rebid than a raise to two hearts.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AKJ985 ♦J ♦6 ♦Q10762
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Despite your repeated spade bids, partner has shown no inclination to let you play in that suit. You can be sure that his suit is at least as good as yours, probably better, and that his support for spades is not nearly as good as yours is for hearts. You have just run out of bids—pass.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A109 ♦AKJ107 ♦KJ1084
The bidding has proceeded:

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your excellent suits and good intermediates suggest that a game should be makable in one of your suits, so a jump shift would seem to be the natural rebid. But there is a danger that partner might have length and most of his values in clubs. Therefore, we would take the slightly conservative action of just bidding two diamonds. If partner cannot move over that, game is doubtful.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A1086 ♦A ♦Q986 ♦J952
The bidding has proceeded:

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fund-raising is something at which you are suddenly good. Do not let an opportunity to use this skill slip past you. Romance is waiting in the wings!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Flexibility is your strongest ally. Get rid of outdated concepts, procedures to increase profits. Older person could hold the key to new financial gains.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tread lightly. Be careful with whom you share "inside" information. The competition is keener than ever before! Safeguard documents, valuables. Distant affairs look promising.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tact and patience are your greatest assets now. Business affairs show new promise but could entail travel to foreign shores. Romance takes a more serious turn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow the line of least resistance today when coping with difficult people or situations. Pay more attention to older person's needs. Seek expert career or financial advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.

21): Take advantage of an opportunity to right a wrong connected with home life. Family members are willing to listen to suggestions. Tackle odd jobs that were temporarily put aside.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find life glorious right now! A special friendship proves valuable. Home life takes a new importance. Others recognize where you are headed and want to help.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romantic partner may divert your attention from work. Playfulness could get you into hot water. Let mate know how you feel. You have a right to expect more freedom.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can win over someone who feels alienated by appealing to his or her sense of humor. Do not lose your temper when disagreeing with instructions passed on by supervisor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Mate "comes clean" about something that involves your interests. Romance moves into a more favorable period. Your talents receive new notice from those who count.

A.—If you have a game on this hand, it will be in no trump and not in a minor suit. Therefore, there is no point at all in introducing one of your minor suits. With 11 HCP, you do not have enough to commit your side to game, but you do have the values to issue an invitation, and two no trump stands head and shoulders above any other action.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—This is close. You have a minimum opening bid, but partner's actions have been most encouraging. He must have a reasonable hand to respond at the two-level and then raise your suit. Since you have the unbid suits stopped, we suggest you chance three no trump. It appears as if your diamond suit will produce six tricks, and the lead of either major will give you a seventh. It's not too much to ask that your partner's hand produce two more.

The bidding has proceeded:

What action do you take?
A.—Neither your spade holding nor your hand is strong enough to justify converting partner's takeout double for penalties. And you are not strong enough to venture one no trump. Bid two clubs, and be thankful that you have a suit to bid that is as good as four to the queen.

Roger Zweig sits among the instruments and controls last week in the cockpit of the Shuttle Training Aircraft at El Paso International Airport. Zweig trains shuttle astronauts to land the shuttle by taking them aloft in the simulator. The seat at left is the astronauts'.

He strives for realism in training shuttle pilots

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP)

When the space shuttle Columbia nears the end of its second mission early next month, the 200,000-pound craft will be dropping toward Earth at a rate of 12,000 to 15,000 feet per minute.

Landing the behemoth is a delicate task. Roger Zweig knows.

Zweig is one of three National Aeronautics and Space Administration research pilots who train astronauts to fly the shuttle during descent.

"The shuttle is kind of a cross between the Concorde and a Mack truck," Zweig said. "Some parts of it are very streamlined and others are very bulky."

"We're trying to provide realistic training for the orbiter. In the spacecraft, there is no second attempt."

Zweig, 39, spends several days a week with shuttle astronauts and backup crews, flying with them in the Shuttle Training Aircraft, which is designed to handle and feel like the shuttle.

The airplane is a Grumman Gulfstream II jet modified with a computer system that can simulate operations of the shuttle.

"We've tried to make it as close to flying the real thing as we can make it," Zweig said. "We try to make it handle and feel as much like the real spacecraft in real weather conditions at real times of the day."

Astronauts prepare for the tricky landing by training first in a ground simulator, then in small T-38 jets then in the shuttle simulator.

Zweig believes the flying simulator is the best training. "There are advocates of ground-based simulators who say, 'Couldn't you do it better some other way?' We don't think so. It's just not the same."

"The problem with training in a room on the ground is that your hide is not really on the line. But if you're in the air and you fall apart at the seams, it's your tail."

The astronauts fly the simulator for a couple of hours a week, getting more than a dozen chances to "land" in each session, Zweig said. The simulator's cockpit has been designed so the left side is similar to the cockpit in the real shuttle, with a stick instead of a steering wheel and various dials and switches. The right side, where the instructor sits, is basically unchanged.

"We fly them up to 35,000 feet and then let them take it down," Zweig said. "We take it up and then switch on the computer."

The computer operates on a pattern from a magnetic tape and is controlled by commands from the astronaut's stick.

Because the shuttle is bulkier than the training plane, the computer throws on the plane's reverse thrusters and lowers the main landing gear to get more resistance.

"It's like a skier with a parachute," Zweig said. "If we cut the engines off, we would glide too well. Reverse thrust gives us an even poorer glide."

In striving for realism, NASA researchers even designed "window blinds" that reduce the pilots' vision.

"If the field of vision in the simulator was larger, then you would get negative training," he said. "We don't want it to be easier to fly. In fact, we wish it were harder to fly."

Zweig said the simulator is so "high fidelity" that pilots virtually can't tell the difference between landing it and landing the real thing.

"Sitting in the cockpit, we wouldn't know the difference," he said. "We feel it slowing down, but we can't see why. It handles the same. It feels the same."

Zweig said there are rarely any surprises on the training flights.

"There have been times when the computer guidance has made it take some sharp turns near the ground."

Bar claims early closing came too early

HUGO, Okla. (AP) — One of the largest "after-hours" nightclubs in Oklahoma was ordered by law officers to close for the night at 2 a.m. Saturday, but the owner and some state officials claim it was nine days too early.

The "Party Place," on the Texas border south of Hugo became during the weekend the apparent first victim of a new state law requiring private clubs to close between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m.

Choctaw County Sheriff Bill Hall ordered the "after hours" club closed at the new time this weekend because the district attorney told him the new law went into effect Oct. 1.

The clerk's office at the state House of Representatives said although the language of the bill gave it an Oct. 1 effective date, the Legislature failed to attach an emergency clause.

Article 5, Section 58 of the state constitution, states that bills without emergency clauses are effective until 90 days after adjournment of the session.

The Legislature adjourned the 1981 session on July 20 after a three-week recess. Therefore, Oct. 19 would be the effective date following the 90-day waiting period.

"That could change the situation," said Don Shaw, Choctaw County district attorney. Shaw said he could see a "potential mess" ahead of all laws passed by the last regular legislative session.

Jerry Pierce, owner of the "Party Place," said the difference between an Oct. 1 and an Oct. 19 effective date might mean as much as $10,000 profit for his 5,000-square-foot club, which seats 250 but which Pierce claims sometimes holds as many as 800.

"There's 15 clubs in Paris (Texas) that close at midnight on Friday and 1 o'clock on Saturday," Pierce said. "They all support our place. They even announce on the loudspeaker that they're headin' for the river."

"If we enforced the law to the letter, he's operating illegally now," Hall said. "But he tries to run a nice club. There's several places out there. We're quite concerned with it. We have a lot of problems after 2 o'clock."

Seven 'cats, two extenders planned in 8, 8A

Operators working the Permian Basin plan to drill seven wildcat's in the region. Extenders are planned for two small fields.

ANDREWS VENTURES
Rankin Oil Co., Midland, will drill the 7,300-foot wildcat No. 4 Fly, 14 miles west of Andrews.

The operator originally scheduled this one as a Furman-Mascho field project. It was recently refiled with the Railroad Commission as a Wichita-Albany wildcat at 7,300 feet, with tests planned for the Furman-Mascho at 4,900 feet, and the Nix, South at 6,900.

The location is 2,173 feet from the north, and 1,330 feet from the west line of section 25, block A-2, PSL survey.

The drillsite is along the western edge of the Furman-Mascho field, surrounded by production.

Rankin Oil will also drill a 7,600-foot wildcat, the No. 1 C.F. Parker, 12 miles west of Andrews.

This was originally scheduled as a Nix, South project at 7,600 feet, but has been rescheduled as a wildcat to 7,600 feet, with the Nix, South being checked at 6,900 feet.

The location is 2,173 feet from the north and east lines of section 21, block A-41 PSL survey.

The drillsite is surrounded by production and plugged wells.

BORDEN WILDCATS

Brazos Petroleum Co., Midland, will drill the wildcat No. 1 Coleman Farms to 7,500-feet, 14 miles west of Gail.

The project spots 660 feet from the north, and 850 feet from the west line of section 7, block 32, T-S-N, T&PRR survey.

The drillsite apparently is in a little explored area, with no wells of comparable depth near by. It looks a if the Spraberry is found around 6,000 to 6,200 feet in this neighborhood. Other commonly producing formations run quite a bit deeper.

ABCO Energy Corp., The Woodlands, will drill the wildcat No. 1 Holmes-Lemley Unit, to 8,300 feet, 13 miles east of Gail.

The drillsite is 1/2 mile west of the Fisher et al No. 1 Smith, abandoned September 13, 1963 at 8,300 feet.

The location is staked 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 265, block 97, H&TC survey.

HOCKLEY EXPLORER

Nielson Enterprises Inc., Lubbock, will drill the No. 1-B G.M. Slaughter to 5,000 feet, 9 miles northeast of Whiteface.

The location is 467 feet from the south and east lines of section 87, block 79, Reeves CSL survey.

The map shows few wells in the vicinity of this project. Most, however, are 4,800-footers, and they are all dry holes.

MITCHELL EXTENSION

Brazos-Grover Oil Co., Midland, will attempt to extend the small Beals Creek (Wichita-Albany) field with the drilling of the 4,000-foot No. 1 Patrick, 16 miles southwest of Colorado City.

There were four wells in the field at last count, all Dorchester "Spades." The Patrick well will go down 1,000 feet north of the No. 6-A Spade, producing from 3,694 feet; and 1/2 mile north-northeast of the No. 7-A Spade, producing at 3,635 feet.

The new project is staked 660 feet from the south, and 467 feet from the west line of section 5, block 18, SPRR survey.

PECOS WILDCAT

Fuller Petroleum Inc., Midland, will take a chance on the wildcat No. 1 Noelle "39", a 10,200-foot project to be drilled 2 1/2 miles northwest of Sheffield.

The stake is driven 660 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the west line of section 39, block A-2, TCRP survey.

The drillsite appears to be in a relatively unexplored area. There is a 10,400-foot dry hole one mile north-northwest of the site; a 10,300-foot dry hole one mile to the north-northeast; and a 9,400-foot dry hole one mile southwest.

PECOS EXTENDER

M-T Petroleum, Monahans, will attempt to add a well to the three-hole Catlynn, West (Clearfork, Lower) field, with the drilling of the No. 2 Credo-Olix, 15 miles southeast of Imperial on the the Girvin Highway, according to the form filed with the Railroad Commission.

The location given is 873 feet from the north, and 868 feet from the east line of section 29, block 2 H&TC survey, which is only nine miles south-east of Imperial.

This project's location in relation to other Catlynn, West wells could not be exactly determined. There is a dry hole 1/4 mile to the north of the drillsite, and a producer 1/4 mile south.

WINKLER PROSPECTOR

HNG Oil Co., Midland, will sink the 19,500-foot wildcat No. 1 University "21-13", 3 miles west of Wink, according to the form filed with the Railroad Commission.

The location given is 2,310 feet from the north and east lines of section 13, block 21, ULS survey, which is only a little more than one mile from the west city limit of Wink.

The drillsite is 3/4 of a mile south of the Union Texas No. 1-A University 21-12, abandoned as dry May 23, 1978 at 19,135 feet.

Ships' coal covered, shot, flattened and still burns

By REBECCA TROUNSON
and
ANNE LARIVIERE
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Since early September, coal experts from around the world have been struggling to cool down 189,000 tons of smoldering and burning coal inside the holds of four cargo ships here.

The experts — including a daredevil Texas firefighting team and geologists from the United States, England, Japan and Germany — have covered the coal with dry ice, shot it full of chemicals and flattened it with bulldozers.

Working around the clock in scorching temperatures in the holds, they have removed thousands of tons of coal from two of the ships and piled it on docks at Los Angeles Harbor and along a nearby seaplane runway.

Coal fires in ships are not a new phenomenon, the experts say. But everyone interviewed agreed that the rash of recent incidents here is unprecedented.

"We are trying to see that this doesn't turn into an epidemic," said Capt. Keith Schumacher, head of the U.S. Coast Guard's cargo and hazardous materials division in Washington, D.C. The Coast Guard, which regulates safety in U.S. ports, does not consider coal a hazardous cargo and therefore imposes no special regulations on its handling.

Most industry and port officials link the fires to an increase in the amount of low-grade, highly volatile coal being loaded at the port of New Orleans — where all four ships took on their cargo — and a failure by the coal transportation industry to handle the coal properly.

"I can never recall an incident where there have been four ships on fire and in danger of sinking at the same time anywhere in the world," said James McKunkin, executive director of the Port of Long Beach, where three of the ships are docked. The fourth is in Los Angeles Harbor.

The incidents have resulted in an intensive self-examination by the industry, including the formation of a nationwide committee made up of representatives of every group associated with the export of coal. Its members range from coal producers to barge operators, the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

The committee is scheduled to meet for the first time Monday in Pittsburgh to discuss better ways of handling the coal, specifically the low-grade steam coal that comes from such major coal-producing states as Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio.

A mining expert called in as a consultant by the owner of one of the four ships said many factors could have caused the coal to ignite: it water, sulfur and ash content; the size of the coal particles; the fact that it was piled high in the holds, creating a chimney effect, and the layering or mixing of low- and high-grade coals.

But industry spokesmen caution that no one yet knows why steam coal is so much more volatile than the higher grade metallurgical coal that makes up most of U.S. coal exports.

"We cannot say why this problem exists. That's why this committee of experts was formed — to answer those very questions," said the engineer, who asked not to be identified because he expected a large number of lawsuits to result from the fires.

Since 1979, when oil prices doubled, the less-pure coal has become increasingly attractive to overseas buyers and more economically feasible to mine in the United States, according to the Washington, D.C.-based National Coal Association, an industry organization.

The high sulfur content of steam coal makes it illegal for use in most of the United States.

U.S. exports of steam coal — used primarily in the generation of electricity — have climbed dramatically since 1979: from 2 million metric tons in 1979 to a projected 30 million metric tons in 1981, the association's Jim Beckham said.

Although it is expected to make up only about one-third of total U.S. coal exports in 1981, the proportion of steam coal exported in the coming decade is expected to rise with the increasing demand for cheap fuel overseas.

"Ship captains were used to picking up coal in the U.S. that was relatively benign and we knew how to ship it," Capt. Schumacher said. "These new coals, though, are prone to have more problems."

On Sept. 6 the first ship, the Indonesian freighter Kartini, called at the Long Beach port for fuel on its way to Taiwan.

Three days later, the Kartini was back in port with 55,000 tons of steam coal smoldering in the holds — wisps of smoke curling from its closed hatches.

Stevodore crews — faced for the first time with the task of dousing mountains of hot coal aboard a ship — pumped water spray and liquid nitrogen into the holds in an effort to cool the cargo.

When those efforts failed, the Kartini's owners decided to unload the vessel.

PBGC class for non-geologists

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer "Prospect Evaluation for Non-Geologists" Wednesdays, from October 14 to November 18, 7-10 a.m., at the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois. Jack G. Elam, consulting geologist, will instruct.

Geological prospects often need to be evaluated by landmen, brokers, engineers, and independent operators with limited or no geological background. This course will cover various petroleum geological techniques used in building a prospect. An exploration game will be conducted throughout the course.

Registration fee is $200. Registration is limited. For more information, call 563-2311.

Historical perspective

In August, graduates of the Czech Military College are sworn in front of a statue of Jan Zizka, a 15th century Czech hero, on Prague's Vitkov Hill. The memorial, the world's largest bronze mounted statue, is 27 feet tall, 33 feet long and 15 feet wide. It weighs 16.5 tons and is currently undergoing restoration, according to UNESCO sources.

Mideast peace at crucial point; Key leader missing

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years after the Camp David accords, the Middle East peace process may be in its most crucial phase.

And now, with the United States, Egypt and Israel facing what they say privately is an April deadline for a breakthrough, one of the key partners is missing: assassinated Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Sadat, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Jimmy Carter initiated a two-part process at Camp David in the Maryland mountains in October 1978. Israel's return of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt and an effort to work out an autonomy plan for the 1.3 million Palestinian Arabs living in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Thus far, Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai — occupied since 1967 — has gone smoothly and is scheduled to be completed by next April. A multi-lateral peacekeeping force will be deployed in the Sinai once the Israeli withdrawal is completed.

The second phase of the Camp David process has been stalemated. But Sadat is known to have wanted an acceptable autonomy plan for the Palestinians at the same time Egypt regained full control of the Sinai.

In this way, Sadat could rebut his Arab critics who claimed that his chief objective at Camp David was recovery of the Sinai and that the Palestinian issue was peripheral.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told a news conference the day after Sadat's death that he, too, saw April as the target date for a Palestinian autonomy agreement.

Asked whether there was any connection between Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai and the autonomy talks, Haig said, "Of course, there is a linkage — it goes without question."

The autonomy talks resumed in September and continue next week.

Before leaving Cairo on Sunday, Haig noted on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the United States was represented last month by its ambassadors to Israel and Egypt. "At the right time, we would raise the level of that participation if it will make a constructive contribution," he said.

Haig said "the important thing is for both parties to strip aside some of the inflexibilities of the past."

During more than two years of discussions, the Israelis and the Egyptians have not even agreed on a definition of autonomy. Until last month, there had been no negotiations since the spring of 1980 because of protracted election campaigns both in the United States and in Israel.

Still unresolved are 15 major areas of disagreement.

An analysis

Begin favors "administrative autonomy" under which the Palestinians would be granted authority over local matters while Israel would be responsible for security.

Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak, Sadat's hand-picked successor, is believed to favor a full autonomy plan that would lead eventually to the creation of a Palestinian state or entity.

A complicating factor is that none of the Palestinian leaders in either the West Bank or Gaza has indicated any desire to take part in the talks.

Most identify themselves with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which refuses to recognize Israel. The Israelis refuse to deal directly with the PLO, which they call a terrorist organization.

The question now is whether Mubarak will be able to resist pressures from within Egypt and from other Arab countries to abandon the Camp David process.

Alleged killer soil being analyzed for anthrax by British ministry

LONDON (AP) — A package of soil claimed to contain potentially lethal anthrax disease spores is being analyzed by scientists after being dumped at a Defense Ministry biological research center, authorities said today.

Officials said the package was discovered Saturday at the Chemical Defense Establishment at Porton Down in Wiltshire, 85 miles southwest of London, and is now being examined by microbiologists.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the incident was being taken seriously. He said it would be at least two days before it could be established whether the dumping was a hoax or if the soil really contained anthrax spores.

A previously unknown environment group calling itself the "Dark Harvest Commandos" claimed responsibility for sending the package in statements sent Sunday to the London Times and newspapers in Scotland.

The statement said the soil containing anthrax spores had been dug up from Grunard, a tiny uninhabited island off the northwest coast of Scotland that was used for germ warfare experiments on sheep during World War II.

The public has been banned from the island since 1941 and scientists say it will remain contaminated for years to come.

"In 1941, the government took our island away. We want it back," the environmentalists' statement said.

The group threatened to deposit other bags of infected soil "at various points" over the next 12 months to draw attention to "government indifference" over the island's fate.

The group claimed its visit to the island was carried out by a team of microbiologists from two unidentified universities and that all necessary precautions were taken to avoid contamination. It said it had removed 300 pounds of soil containing "seeds of death."

Defense Ministry sources said that for safe transportation, the soil would need to be packed in a carefully-sealed container. Anyone handling anthrax-contaminated soil could become infected, they said. Police have been put on alert in Scotland to try and track down the anonymous environmentalists.

Hamish Gray, Minister of State for Energy and a Scottish member of Parliament, claimed the group had put the whole country at risk and accused it of "gross irresponsibility."

Anthrax is a highly infectious disease that primarily affects cattle and sheep, although on rare occasions humans have contracted the disease.

Although first symptoms are said to be mild, a human victim can suffer severe boils within five days, followed by violent fever and breathing difficulties, according to reports published today in British newspapers.

If infection is through a wound in the skin, it can usually be cured. But if the spores are inhaled, the disease is said to be much more serious.
