DA's office secures first 'drug case' vehicle

Local law enforcement agencies this week secured a judgment allowing the seizure of property — in this case, an automobile — "owned or used" by individuals convicted of the sale or delivery of drugs.

And District Attorney Ernie Armstrong said he expects it to be the first of a number of civil judgments here to allow such seizures.

In the case of the State of Texas vs 1979 Honda, authorities expect to seize a car used by a local suspect in connection with charges filed for delivery of methamphetamine. Although the judgment has been granted, the vehicle is still to be picked up.

The suspect was given a 10-year probated prison term in June after entering a guilty plea in 132nd District Court to those charges.

The suit asking for forfeiture of the vehicle was filed by the district attorney under provisions of the Controlled Substances Act which allows the state to confiscate "any and all properties used in or acquired through the proceeds from drug use or sale."

According to Armstrong, the seizure of property is the best means available to hinder the activities of individuals dealing in illegal substances.

Vehicles are not the only things that can be confiscated from the defendants.

Under the law, the state can take such items as money and

In Brief

Mengele

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department will continue probing whether U.S. military occupation forces had Josef Mengele in custody following World War II, even if it's proven conclusively that the one-time Nazi concentration camp doctor is dead, a department investigator says.

"The other aspect of our investigation (involving any U.S. role in Mengele's escape) will continue even after we have concluded the other part," Neal Sher, head of the Office of Special Investigations, said Friday.

Sher briefed reporters after meeting with Attorney General Edwin Meese III to report on the continuing investigation in Brazil.

Star wars

HOUSTON (AP) — A "Star Wars" defense system implemented by the United States might allow this country to block Third World nations from firing nuclear-armed missiles at each other, a Rice University laser expert says.

"Most people underestimate the immense flexibility of the proposed U.S. laser-based system," Frank Tittel, a Rice University professor of electrical and computer engineering, said Friday.

Water 'on' again, saving still asked

The city's main water supply from Lake J.B. Thomas was flowing again as of midnight Friday, but city officials are asking that Snyder residents refrain from non-essential water use at least through the weekend.

"We're making water like crazy right now, but we need a grace period to build back our supplies," said City Engineer Rick Conner Saturday morning.

"We appreciate everything that the people have done so far, but we're going to have to ask them to work with us at least until Monday," he said.

City officials are asking that such "non essential" water uses as watering lawns, gardens and washing cars be curtailed.

By midnight Friday, it was estimated the city had approximately 25 percent of its water tower storage remaining. The underground storage facilities had been depleted earlier in the day.

The main water valve from Thomas had been closed since 8 p.m. Thursday. At that time, crews from HBH Construction of Odessa began working to connect a new 500 ft. section of 21-inch main water line.

This section had been laid beneath the new channel for Deep Creek between 30th and 37th Sts.

City officials said Saturday morning they were still experiencing a small leak at a coupling at the west end of the new connection.

Based upon the amount of water being received at the water treatment plant, however, Conner said the leak appears to be insignificant. Repairs to it were expected to be completed later this week.

It was initially hoped the work could be completed before sunrise Friday. Minor problems slowed down the work, however, causing it to go some 18 hours longer than expected.

From 8 p.m. Thursday through midnight Friday, the city's water supply was mainly reliant on the some 3.7 million gallons in the storage facilities — supplies which now need to be replenished.

FINAL PIECE — Around 3 p.m. Friday, workers were putting in place the final connecting piece of 21-inch main line required to close up and put back into use the city's main feeder line from Lake J.B. Thomas. By midnight Friday, water from the lake was flowing again. Because the city's storage facilities were substantially reduced, however, local residents are asked to curtail water use until Monday. (SDN Staff Photo by Noble B. Young)

7 vacancies open at Golden Terrace

With completion of the senior citizen housing project approximately one month away, seven housing units remain unfilled of the 24-unit complex comprising Golden Terrace Village.

Project sponsors noted Friday they have gone through the initial list of 33 applicants for residency and other individuals interested in applying are urged to do so.

Gloria Shaw, senior center director and a member of Senior Citizens Inc., the project's sponsoring group, said Friday "We're disappointed we've not filled all our units at this point, but we feel they will be filled once they're finished and people have a chance to see them."

The seven remaining residences entail four two-bedroom units and two one-bedroom units. In addition, the single one-bedroom residence designed for a handicapped individual remains unfilled.

The quota of residences eligible for "rent-assistance" monies has been filled, so the remaining units in the complex will carry minimum monthly rent payments of $205 for the one-bedroom and $249 for the two-bedroom units.

The project, located south of 37th St. and west of College Ave., is being financed through the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA). Under federal guidelines for such projects, at least 10 of the 24 units had to be made available to individuals

Student accepted at Harvard for summer

Snyder High School Senior Tom Brown is one of a limited number of high school students who have been selected to attend Harvard University this summer.

Brown will be participating in the Secondary Students Program of the 1985 Harvard Summer School in Cambridge, Mass.

Participants in the eight-week program — in which the students earn college credit for classwork completed — are all high school juniors or graduating seniors selected on the basis of grades, scores on college board scores and recommendations from their schools.

Brown's invitation was based on his status as a National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist and because of his standing as the fifth ranking student in the SHS junior class at the end of the 1984-85 school year.

He will be leaving June 21 to begin the eight-week course in which he can take as many as two college level classes for credit and audit a third.

At SHS, Brown has actively pursued the study of computers and foreign language. He said he will carry his studies in those areas over through the Harvard

We did it again--and it may be for real this time. Golf is suppose to be a relaxing activity. After five years of trying to learn the proper golf swing, we find it's work.

Just a couple of weeks ago we got paired up with barber Bill Emerson, a down-the-middle type golfer who uses only one ball per round.

Emerson was hot as the June afternoon. He chipped 'em in, he sank long putts and he hammered the driver. Emerson was awesome and his partner was just plain awlful. We took a 13 on a three-par, hit three out of bounds on number nine and ran out of even shag balls.

Ole what's her name's son, Thang, has offered us private golf lessons for Father's Day. We declined, we just want to beat the lad one time--even if he has to let us win.

Just how important is dad. It reminds us of a story about some friends in another city. At the end of school, one of the children brought home a guinea pig which was named Paddy.

As usual, mom ended up taking total care of the neglected creature. One day she called the children together and announced that "Paddy would have to go."

After much protest, the mother stood firm. One child begged, "Maybe if he didn't eat so much and wasn't so messy all the time, couldn't we keep him?"

"No way," said the mother. "Now go get Paddy's cage and we'll take him to his new home."

In one voice the children shouted with relief, "Paddy? We thought you said Daddy."

SDN sponsors marketing expert in July

A week-long seminar to focus on marketing, public relations and advertising will be held in Snyder July 8-12.

The consultant will be Charles A. Mouser who has more than 30 years experience in marketing and who has given seminars all over the United States and Canada.

The semipar, offered free of charge, is sponsored by the Snyder Daily News. "Mr. Mouser spoke at a recent press convention and I was so impressed with what he had to say that I invited him to Snyder. Anyone in any type of business can benefit from what he has to say," said SDN Publisher Roy McQueen.

"This is an unique opportunity for our business community and I am confident that attendance at one or more of the seminars will be valuable to owners and managers as well as employees."

All seminars will be conducted in the Scurry County Museum on the campus of Western Texas College. The seminars have been endorsed by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce through the chamber's retail committee.

The week begins at 9 a.m. Monday, July 8, with a seminar for owners and managers. Two separate sessions Monday afternoon are planned for sales clerks. One is at 2 p.m. followed by a 3:45 p.m. session.

A session for realtors is set for 10 a.m. Tuesday followed by restaurant and food service per-

Nurse is credited with first detection of infection cases

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A nurse who monitors infections among hospitalized women and infants is being credited with first detecting the pattern of illnesses traced to tainted cheese that has been blamed for 29 deaths or stillbirths.

"It makes me feel good. It makes me feel I'm doing my job well," said Carol Salminen, a nurse epidemiologist at Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center.

"I feel bad it (the outbreak) occurred, but I feel good I was an integral part of bringing it to the attention of the individuals who could do something about it," the 38-year-old West Covina resident said Friday.

Salminen touched off an investigation in April when she realized there had been five cases of the infection called listeriosis in the previous two weeks among women or their newborns at her hospital.

Until then, there had only been two cases all year, she said.

An nvestigation by the federal Centers for Disease Control blamed the outbreak on cheese produced by Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. The company has voluntarily closed pending an investigation and has ordered its cheese products off grocery shelves.

Officials have said the bacterial infection caused 29 deaths or stillbirths, mostly among Hispanic women and their babies.

Salminen is a nurse epidemiologist at Women's Hospital, part of Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center, where she monitors infections among women and infants.

Dr. Paul Wehrle, County-USC's pediatrics chairman, and Dr. Bernard Portnoy, vice chairman, say it was Salminen who first noticed anything was amiss.

Salminen said that after she noticed the unusual number of cases, she checked records of similar infections for the previous three years and found no more than five cases in any year.

So she told her physician advisers "I was interested in investigating it further, and they said go ahead," Salminen said.

"By the 10th of April, I was extremely concerned," she recalled. "I had seen more (cases) in two weeks than I had seen all year.... I saw an unusual cluster of cases. I questioned what was going on."

While officials checked with other hospitals, the number of cases at Women's Hospital increased. County health officials alerted the CDC in May, she said.

The Gentle Breeze of Jesus

"For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but we have one who has been tempted in every way, just as we are - yet was without sin. Let us then approach the throne of grace with confidence, so that we may receive mercy and find grace to help us in our time of need."

Hebrews 4:15,16 (NIV)

Jesus Christ came to earth as a baby and experienced human existence to indentify with us and our frailties so that we might identify with Him and His power. He understands all our joys and all our problems, and He is ready to forgive us every sin and meet our every need if we will approach Him with an honest heart.

Also, this merciful, loving Jesus, who is at the right hand of the Heavenly Father, gives believers the supernatural power of God's Holy Spirit as a free gift or an act of grace. When invited to do so, the precious Holy Spirit of God does the WORKS OF GOD in the lives of believers. In fact, the Holy Spirit's life changing, need meeting and miracle working power is a reality in the lives of many people in Snyder's churches today.

So don't be down hearted or defeated by the circumstances of life and don't let your enemy, the devil, rule over you. But turn to Jesus and ask for the fullness of God's Holy Spirit. Find believers who demonstrate the reality of the Spirit-filled life and grow with them into all that God has for you.

Apologizes for crime

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two men accused of breaking into an Austin home, holding a family at gunpoint, and stealing thousands of dollars in goods have been convicted of aggravated robbery.

After the verdict, Darnell Delk, 22, who also is charged with raping the teen-age daughter of the couple who lived in the house, admitted his guilt to the jury, and apologized to the family.

"I want to say that I'm sorry to the ... family for everything you went through. I hope you can find it in your hearts to accept my apology," Delk said.

The only member of the family in the courtroom at the time was the mother, who stared quietly while Delk testified. The father had taken his daughter out of the courtroom as soon as Delk took the witness stand.

All pilots, flight attendants reach strike settlement

CHICAGO (AP) — Striking United Airlines pilots and the flight attendants who honored their picket lines have agreed to return to work, ending a bitter 29-day walkout against the nation's largest air carrier.

A 27-member master executive council of the Air Line Pilots Association approved a settlement shortly before midnight Friday, said Capt. Bob Lamote, an ALPA spokesman.

"We are ready to go back to work," said Steve Crews, a union spokesman. "For the pilots, it's a matter of putting on uniforms."

A vote of the union's rank and file was not necessary to ratify the agreement.

Joe Hopkins, a United spokesman, said the company was "satisfied with the contract agreement" and would resume service to all 50 states and its 10 foreign locations. The schedule for that resumption, he said, would be announced on Monday.

"Our goal is to maintain our integrity and reliability," said Hopkins. "We will not be rushed. ... We want to come back in an orderly manner."

United has been operating about 14 percent of its pre-strike service of 1,550 daily flights since 5,000 pilots walked out May 17.

A few hours before the pilots settlement was announced, United flight attendants said they would return to work without a formal back-to-work agreement. The pilots had delayed final agreement on a settlement until the Association of Flight Attendants agreed to return to work.

Patty Friend, an AFA official, told a news conference that the attendants would return without a back-to-work agreement because the company has threatened "savage reprisals" against union members who stayed off the job.

"We will vigorously litigate and arbitrate the terms and conditions of our return to work," said Ms. Friend, whose union represents about 10,000 United employees.

United spokesman Chuck Novak said the company would have no comment on her comments.

When the strike began, the major obstacle in the dispute was the airline's proposal for a two-tier pay system under which newly hired pilots would be paid less than veterans. But the economic issues were settled May 24, leaving only back-to-work issues unresolved.

On Wednesday, both sides agreed to let a federal judge decide the back-to-work issues, which include the fate of 570 pilots newly trained by United who honored picket lines, and the seniority of strikebreakers, said Capt. John LeRoy, an ALPA spokesman.

U.S. District Judge Nicholas Bua has scheduled a hearing for Monday.

C. Freda pleads guilty

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A Texas inmate who pleaded guilty to charges alleging he ran a brothel from his Texas prison cell has received an eight-year zentence, prosecutors say.

Raymond Carl Freda, 51, pleaded guilty Friday before State District Judge Olen Underwood to charges of engaging in organized criminal activity, Montgomery County District Attorney James Keeshan said Friday.

Freda, already serving a life sentence for an arson conviction in Houston, was indicted in March for allegedly running a prostitution operation near Conroe called the Hot Tub Club from his cell 60 miles away at the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit in Lovelady.

Freda's wife, Dolores Conti, 44, also pleaded guilty Friday to a similar charge and was sentenced to three years in prison, Keeshan said. Mrs. Conti currently is on probation for similar conviction in Brazos County.

Similar charges against Mrs. Conti's brother, Tony Rubino, 34, were dismissed. Rubino also is probation in Brazos County.

Two club employees also were indicted, but the charges were dropped in April after they provided investigators with information about the case.

Freda, also known as Raymond G. Conti, was moved from New Jersey to Houston in the early 1970s under the federal Witness Protection Program after he testified about his ties to the late crime boss Carlo Gambino.

Procunier resigning?

HOUSTON (AP) — Raymond K. Procunier has decided to resign as director of the troubled Texas Department of Corrections, the nation's second largest prison system, after slightly more than one year on the job, the Houston Post reported today.

Unnamed sources quoted by the Post said Procunier had notified Robert Gunn, chairman of the Texas Board of Corrections, the system's governing body, that he was going to resign. The chances that Procunier would change his mind were "slim and none," the Post said.

Gunn acknowledged that he had heard a rumor that Procunier was returning from vacation early in order to resign.

Gov. Mark White's office said Friday that there has been no official notification of Procunier's intentions. But the Post reported that TDC attorney Rick Gray had informed the governor informally.

Procunier, 61, was recuperating outside Texas from a bout with pneumonia and could not be reached for comment.

Procunier, nicknamed "Pro" for his ability to deal with people, has said frequently that he did not intend to stay with TDC more than two years.

He took the TDC helm on May 21, 1984.

Convictions to have impact

CHICAGO (AP) — The murder conviction of three former managers in the cyanide death of a factory worker will have "far-reaching effects" for the nation's industrial workers, a prosecutor predicted after winning the landmark verdicts.

The conviction Friday of officials of the now-defunct Film Recovery Systems Inc. sends a clear message — "the criminal justice system will step in to protect the right of every worker," said Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley.

The verdict by Circuit Judge Ronald J.P. Banks came in what was believed to be the nation's first case in which corporate officials were charged with murder for the job-related death of an employee.

The charges stemmed from the Feb. 10, 1983, death of Stefan Golab, a 61-year-old Polish immigrant. Prosecutors argued Golab died of cyanide poisoning from inhaling fumes at the plant in suburban Elk Grove Village.

Banks, who presided over the eight-week bench trial, concurred. The death, he said, was "not accidental, but in fact murder."

Banks also said he found conditions at the plant "totally unsafe." Cyanide was used at the plant to recover silver from used X-ray film.

Found guilty of murder were Steven J. O'Neil, former president of Film Recovery; Charles Kirschbaum, plant manager; and Daniel Rodriguez, a foreman. They also were convicted of 14 counts of reckless conduct.

The verdicts carry prison sentences of 20 years to 40 years. Prosecutors said they will seek "substantial" sentences.

Film Recovery and another corporation, Metallic Marketing Systems, also were found guilty of involuntary manslaughter and reckless conduct.

Attorney Thomas Royce, representing Rodriguez and O'Neil, said appeals were planned.

At a news conference after the ruling, Daley said the verdict "should have far-reaching effects in protecting working men and women across the United States."

The three men, who sat stunned as the verdict was read, were ordered to jail to await sentencing. Kirschbaum's wife sobbed as the verdict was read.

Bond for the men — $2,500 each — was revoked. The next court date is June 28.

The defense said the three officials were responsible managers, had no idea conditions were dangerous, and worked at the plant themselves. They also said the plant was as safe as any other engaged in similar operations.

Last month, Banks dismissed charges against a fourth defendant, Gerald Pett, the plant's vice president, saying the government had not proven any of the charges against him.

A fifth defendant, Michael MacKay of Salt Lake City, has successfully fought two extradition requests. After Friday's verdict, David Watkiss, one of his lawyers, said, "My reaction is one of incredulity."

Prosecutors are expected to make a third extradition request.

Tugboats sailing to assist cruiser

COZUMEL, Mexico (AP) — Large tugboats were sailing Friday toward the Yucatan peninsula in an effort to set free a cruise ship that has been stuck in a sandbar for three days, authorities said.

An estimated 800 passengers — mostly Americans — are aboard the Panamanian-regisered Amerikanis and have been leaving the vessel regularly for sightseeing tours in the area, authorities said.

No injuries or damage were reported.

Victor Manuel Garcia Enriquez, the port captain here, said tugs in the area were not large enough to budge the Amerikanis from the sandbar at Playa del Carmen.

He said larger tugboats, dispatched by the ship's owners, left Miami on Wednesday and were expected in Cozumel late Friday. The vessel, he said, is operated by the Fantasy Cruise Line in Miami.

The port captain predicted that with 10 hours work, the ship would be freed, probably on Saturday.

"It's not very high above the sand bank," he said.

"We only need a tug of greater power to be able to take it out," he said.

Jail escapee caught near City of Abilene

POTOSI, Texas (AP) — A murder suspect from the Andrews County Jail who eluded police for five days is back behind bars.

Gary Lynn Morgan, 27, was apprehended Friday in Potosi, a tiny community about 10 miles south of Abilene. He was unarmed when he was caught about 4 p.m. behind a church, said Taylor County Sheriff's Lt. Chuck Griffin.

Morgan was in custody in the Taylor county jail Friday night.

Morgan was charged in the beating death of Jimmy Davis, 38, of Midland, whose body was found in a pick-up truck in Andrews on March 6.

Andrews Police Chief Douglas Gaines said Morgan was indicted March 26 on a charge of capital murder, since money was apparently taken from Davis after his murder. Murder in the commission of a felony can lead to a capital murder charge.

Morgan escaped Monday from the Andrews County jail by slipping out a second-story window to a parking area and escaping in the car of a cellmate, Andrews County authoritities said. He was cleaning floors in the jail kitchen at the time of his escape, officials added.

A Potosi woman said she fired a 20-gauge shotgun Friday afternoon at a man in her yard who she said matched the description of the murder suspect that she heard was at large in the area. She missed and the man ran toward a water tower, she said.

Several other people also reported seeing a man they thought was Morgan, Taylor County Sherif John Middleton told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Authorities from Taylor and Callahan counties had been looking for Morgan Thursday around Potosi, after someone reported spotting him there.

Ira residents special guests at senior center

Senior citizens who reside in the Ira community are invited to be special guests in the Senior Citizens Center on Monday. They will be introduced before the noon meal is served.

The Hot Potato band from Big Spring will present a special program starting at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. The Potato band is made up of senior citizens who provide music on a variety of unusual instruments.

Patrice McKinney, physical education instructor at Western Texas College, will bring a discussion of healthy eating habits starting at 11:30 a.m. Friday.

Cheese, butter, flour, powdered milk, and honey will be distributed to county residents eligible for the commodity program on Wednesday. Senior citizens give volunteer time to assist with the distribution and are also available to help recipients fill out the necessary forms if they have not completed the forms this year.

VIVA volunteers from the center hold a Sing along at Snyder Oaks at 2:30 p.m. each Monday and at Snyder Nursing Center at 2:30 p.m. each Saturday. Senior citizens who would like to join the group are welcome at any session.

Senior citizens are reminded that 23 local merchants give special discounts for their benefit and a list of these is included in the June newsletter. Some merchants require that the senior citizens identification card be presented and thse cards are issued at the senior venter without cost.

School named after Goldwater

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater has agreed to lend his name to a new high school but he thinks the school's cheers might sound a bit funny.

Computer for kids classes scheduled at local college

Computers for Kids will be offered at Western Texas College in morning classes starting July 1 and ending July 11.

Britt Canada will be instructor for the 14-hour course. Classes will meet from 9-11 a.m. on July 1,2,3,8,9,10, and 11.

Students eligible for the course as those who will be in grades 4, 5, or 6 in the fall semester. Fees will be $35 per student.

Each session will include one hour of lecture and one hour of work on the computer, Canada said. The first class meeting will include a pre-test, an introduction to the equipment to be used and quick computer games. In the second session, the students will be introduced to LOGO, the computer language to be used in three sessions.

On July 9, students will begin working with BASIC, another computer language.

The final session on July 9 will include a post-test to assess the students' progress and a Show and Tell time which parents are invited to attend. There will also be a display of the students' work and awards for the Most Improved, highest test grade and Most Creative in Drawing.

Parents who would like to enroll a student or students are to call the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, ext. 240.

Mrs. Walker says husband innocent of all spy charges

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — After visiting her husband briefly in jail four times since his arrest, the wife of Navy seaman Michael L. Walker says she doesn't believe he spied for the Soviets at his father's urging.

"In my opinion, he's innocent," Rachel Walker told The Associated Press on Friday. "I want to believe that."

Michael Walker, 22, was charged with espionage May 22 while serving aboard the carrier Nimitz. The FBI says he was sending classified documents to his father, John A. Walker Jr., the accused spy ringleader, for sale to the Soviet Union.

Also charged are John Walker's brother, Arthur J. Walker, a engineer with a defense contracting firm in Chesapeake, Va., and John Walker's friend, Jerry A. Whitworth of Davis, Calif. All three are retired from the Navy.

Mrs. Walker said she hasn't been alone with her husband since his arrest and hasn't asked him if the charges are true.

"It of course is there on my mind, but I'm not going to discuss that with him," she said.

"We talk about little things but we haven't had much time to talk at all. The first things he asked me are 'How are things at the house, how is the dog,'" she said.

"Just seeing each other was enough for both of us when you haven't been able to see each other," she said.

Mrs. Walker, 22, said she hasn't been eating or sleeping well since her husband's arrest.

"I feel all this is happening to me has definitely aged me a lot," she said. "I feel a lot older now, and tired."

John Walker's ex-wife, Barbara, who turned him in to the FBI, said he had been spying since the late 1960s.

Rachel Walker said she believes her husband would not have been implicated if her mother-in-law had gone to the FBI earlier.

"Why did she wait 18 years?" she asked.

"There would not have been as much pain as there is now," she said. "I don't have my husband and as it stands right now he's not in the service. There's nothing normal. Everything's quite abnormal."

The Renaissance artist Michelangelo was born in Caprese, Italy, in 1475.

Two more are buried

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Samuel and Patricia Frustaci have buried two more of their tiny septuplets.

Private funeral services were held Thursday at Olivewood Cemetery in neighboring Riverside County for James Martin, who died June 6, and Bonnie Marie, who died Sunday, according to Laura Johnson, spokeswoman for Childrens Hospital of Orange County.

The three surviving septuplets, all of whom were born May 21, remain in critical but stable condition, Ms. Johnson said Friday.

One of the surviving infants was able to begin breathing on her own earlier this week, but the other two remain on respirators to help their underdeveloped lungs.

The infants were 12 weeks premature. One was stillborn, and three others died because of hyaline membrane disease, a lung condition common in premature infants.

Mrs. Frustaci, 30, had taken a fertility drug to aid her pregnancy.

In 1982, 28 people were killed and 146 survived when a Japan Airlines DC-8 crashed into Tokyo Bay.

U.S. expert says handwriting was that of Mengele

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — An American handwriting expert said he is certain Nazi death camp doctor Josef Mengele, who police believe may have died near Sao Paulo, wrote some documents discovered in Brazil.

"We have made a definite identification of the handwriting of Josef Mengele in documents found in Brazil," Dr. David Crown, who was hired by the U.S. Justice Department, said Friday night. "There is not a shadow of a doubt as to the authenticity of the handwriting in the documents."

The federal police chief in Sao Paulo, Romeu Tuma, said the handwriting identification "shows that the body unearthed at Embu and which lived in four different houses in Brazil wrote those documents. That means that our preliminary conclusion is that the body belongs to Josef Mengele."

Crown is among experts attempting to identify the remains and belongings of a man Brazilian police say they believe is Mengele. Police, acting on a tip from West Germany, dug up the man's body June 6 in the town of Embu, 17 miles from Sao Paulo.

Mengele, known as the "Angel of Death," is accused of directing the killings of some 400,000 Jews and others and conducting heinous human experiments at Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland during World War II.

Crown compared documents found in Brazil with classified war documents sent by the United States, including Mengele's handwritten application to enter the Nazi elite SS organization. Federal police said the documents found in Brazil were letters and notes discovered at a house in which the man believed to be Mengele lived.

Tuma has said investigations inidicated the man thought to be Mengele lived in Brazil for at least 15 years ,and drowned in 1979.

Tuma said anthropologists examining the bones concluded "the age of the skeleton is in the same age bracket as Mengele." The Nazi doctor would have been 68 in 1979.

Police said they had contacted West German police to obtain possible proof of identification from Mengele's son, Rolf, who claims his father died in Brazil in 1979. Dr. Ramon Manubens, a member of the forensic team, said he found "peculiar characteristics" on the remains and medical records from the son "can be very important to the investigation."

The body was buried under the name of Wolfgang Gerhard, a soldier in the Nazi army who is alleged to have protected Mengele in Brazil. Police say he was reported to have given his Brazilian identification card to Mengele when he left Brazil in 1975.

Gerhard died in Austria in 1978, and West German Vice Consul Seep Woelker told reporters in Sao Paulo on Friday that his government has asked the Austrians to exhume Gerhard's body.

The head of the U.S. Justice Department's Nazi-hunting unit, Neil Sher, said in Washington that the department had taken no position on whether the remains are Mengele's.

Gramm sponsors new bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying the Walker spy case might be the "tip of the iceberg," Sen. Phil Gramm has introduced legislation to put military spies under the military court system and make them subject to the death penalty in some cases.

The bill would also require the military to reduce access to secret information and administer polygraph tests before granting clearances.

U. S. to end immigration of refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will suspend the admission of Cuban immigrants on Tuesday in a move that virtually ends a refugee agreement with the Castro government.

About 300 Cubans had reached the United States since the agreement was concluded in December. About 1,000 others had been issued visas in Havana but evidently will not be able to leave the island.

The agreement was designed to clear the way for the entry of as many as 20,000 Cubans a year, plus 3,000 former political prisoners.

In return, about 2,500 so-called "undesirables," some of them prisoners and mentally ill, were to be taken back by, Havana. They were among 125,000 Cubans who had come to the United States during the Mariel boatlift of 1980.

Also, the agreement provided for the resumption of processing of visas in Havana despite the absence of formal relations between the two countries.

However, Cuba suspended its part of the understanding after the Reagan administration launched "Radio Marti" broadcasts to the island on May 20 to counter the Marxist government.

'Texas Monthly' announces 10 worst, best lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — A Dallas-area legislator placed on Texas Monthly's 10 "worst" list responded with 'pfttttt" and then said she was considering suing the magazine for what it had printed about her.

Rep. Jan McKenna, R-Arlington, was described by Texas Monthly as a "multi-car legislative accident looking for a place to happen, a deadly combination of malice, ignorance, and arrogance."

"Exhibited as much grasp of issues as the squirrels on the Capitol lawn," the magazine said.

"Outright lies," responded Ms. McKenna. "They have slandered me, called me names I certainly don't appreciate. It hurts my family and my friends. I am seriously considering legal action, no doubt about it. They have gone just too far."

She also said she would ask Texas Monthly advertisers with whom she does business to withdraw their ads. "The best way to get a message across is through the pocketbook," she said.

Texas Monthly's list of the 10 best and 10 worst lawmakers of the 1985 Legislature was announced Thursday, and "is the result of months of careful observation and interviewing by senior editor Paul Burka and associate editor Alison Cook of the legislators, lobbyists, newspeople, and state agency personnel who interact with the Legislature," the magazine said.

One of the 10 "best," Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, noted that the magazine had named him one of the worst in 1975, "so you've got to take it with a grain of salt."

"Still, it's an honor to be named one of the best, I don't care what poll it is," said Uher.

Sen. Chet Edwards, hailed as a "wartless wonder" and also ranked as one of the best, got to work Friday and found a ceramic frog on his desk. It had warts. "You don't know how much grief this is causing me," said Edwards, laughing.

Edwards, D-Duncanville, said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby set the trend he is trying to follow, "and perhaps reflects doing your homework, balancing factual fiscal restraints with compassion and looking to the future."

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, was ranked among the 10 worst — a "mean, petty person bent on undoing his own good works," the magazine said. Brooks responded, "Texas Monthly has the finest sleaziest political writing in Texas."

"It was a bitter personal attack ... a political assassination, and there was no reason for it whatsoever," Brooks said. "Their information was all false. But what do you do? File a lawsuit? Even if you win a judgment, you couldn't collect. They have no assets to attach. In public life you just have to grin and bear it and go on down the road — that's what we all have to do."

The magazine also rated Rep. Jerry Clark as one of the 10 worst, saying he was "a throwback to the old-fashioned pre-Sharpstown scandal kind of legislator who avoids the serious work of legislating at all costs."

Clark, D-Buna, responded, "I think it's obvious it's a liberal hit, a broadside at effective conservatives, and I'm one of them."

"I think I work hard, represent my district, tend to my business. I don't have any apology," Clark said. "The voters judge what I do and not some goon with Texas Monthly."

Sheriff: Lucas' story will not end until he gets needle

WACO, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas has returned to Georgetown, and Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell says he expects the convicted killer to be taken to a Texas Department of Corrections prison within a month.

The Lucas saga will not end "until they stick him with the needle," Boutwell said.

Lucas, who has recanted confessions to hundreds of murders, left Waco Friday after appearing before a McLennan County grand jury that is investigating how a Texas Rangers task force handled Lucas' case.

The convicted killer has claimed Texas Rangers gave him details of some of the crimes he claims to have committed. In addition, other evidence suggests Lucas was miles away from some of the crimes he earlier claimed to have committed.

Before leaving Waco, Boutwell said he expects Lucas to be transferred to a TDC prison within a month, where he will be placed on death row, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported today. Boutwell is a member of the Rangers task force.

The sheriff told the Tribune-Herald there is little — if anything — the Texas Rangers task force can do without Lucas providing information.

Before the task force's work halted April 12 — when Lucas was brought to Waco — there was still a two-month waiting list of law officials wanting to talk to Lucas, who has been convicted of 10 murders and sentenced to die by injection in Texas.

Asked if this was the end of the Lucas story, Boutwell told the Tribune-Herald, "The Lucas story won't be over until they stick him with the needle."

Lucas apparently made his last apperance before the grand jury late Friday afternoon. Boutwell spent three hours with the McLennan County grand jury.

Boutwell, Waco attorney Guy Cox, assistant Attorney General Reed Lockhoof and District Judge George Allen met Friday afternoon, and the sheriff emerged from the meeting with an affidavit granting him custody of Lucas.

Georgetown District Judge John Carter issued a bench warrant last week to get Lucas back to Williamson County. Carter presided over the 1984 trial in which Lucas recieved a death sentence for the October 1979 slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker.

Cox, who last week was replaced as Lucas' attorney by Gary Richardson, said that Richardson had contacted him and asked him to handle Friday's proceedings. Part of the agreement reached requires that task force members not talk to Lucas without Richardson's permission.

Feazell said he had hoped to keep Lucas in Waco until the grand jury investigation was completed, which is expected to be within two weeks.

"We still had some questions we wanted to ask Lucas, and we had a couple more tests we wanted to run on him — medical and psychiatric," Feazell said.

The new African state of Ghana was admitted to the United Nations in 1957.

Mark White signs indigent health care proposal into law

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White signed a $135 million package of health care bills Friday that he said represented "an investment in the health and productivity of our state."

In a ceremony at the East Austin Health Center, the governor, accompanied by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, put into effect a landmark Texas indigent health care program for those unable to pay doctor and hospital bills.

"When we do not provide basic preventative health care to those in need, all of us pay a huge, unnecessary and long-term price," White said. "We pay for it in high-cost institutional care for the retarded and in $1,000-a-day neonatal units.

"Without preventive maternal care, Texans will continue to pay $600,000 for lifelong, institutionalized care for each person born with severe disabilities. And it costs an average of $33,000 a year to care for one severely disabled child in a state mental health or retarded facilities," the governor said.

The four bills would:

— provide prenatal and maternity services through the Texas Department of Health to pregnant women below the poverty level and not eligible for Medicaid.

— set up standards and requirements for counties in providing health care to indigent residents. The 132 counties without public health facilities must spend up to 10 percent of their general revenue funds to pay for minimum health care to those at the poverty level. If a county exceeds the 10 percent level, the state will pay part of the costs.

— establish standards for the transfer of patients between hospital, a move aimed at stopping the "dumping" of indigent patients on public hospitals by profit-making hospitals.

— allow the health department to contract with government units and private firms for health care in high poverty areas.

White gave Helen Farabee of Wichita Falls, head of a Task Force on Indigent Health Care, the credit for much of the success.

"This is just the beginning," said Mrs. Farabee, the wife of Sen. Ray Farabee, who handled much of the legislation. "On this package we can build a system that works for people who need this care."

Hobby said White deserved particular credit.

Treasury bond prices sharpely higher Friday

by The Associated Press

Prices of Treasury bond futures were sharply higher Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade, as economic signals boosted anticipation of lower interest rates.

Treasury bonds settled 41 ticks to 43 ticks higher with the contract for delivery in June at 79 11-32nd. A tick is 1-32nd of a percentage point and represents a price move of $31.25 on a contract with a face value of $100,000.

Precious metals prices were higher on the Commodity Exchange in New York, primarily in response to interest rate markets.

Gold settled $3.30 to $4.70 higher with the contract for delivery in June at $319.10 a troy ounce; silver settled 6.1 cents to 8.1 cents higher with June at $6.251 a troy ounce.

Wheat settled ¼ cent to ½ cent lower with the contract for delivery in July at $3.26¾ a bushel; corn was 1¾ cents to 3 cents lower with July at $2.77¼ a bushel; oats were 1 cent to 2 cents lower with July at $1.52½ a bushel; and soybeans were 6 cents to 9¾ cents lower with July at $5.83½ a bushel.

In 1975, a London subway train crashed into the wall at the end of a tunnel, killing 37 people.

All Jalisco brand cheese taken off shelves in stores

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jimenez Food Products Inc. asked Texas grocers Friday to pull four kinds of cheese of shelves because they were manufactured by a company that has produced contaminated cheese.

Raul Jimenez Jr., vice president of the San Antonio-based company, said he ordered the recall Friday after California health officials reported 87 illnesses and 28 deaths linked to cheese produced by Jalisco Mexican Products Inc.

Jimenez said the recalled cheese would be analyzed and results would be ready Monday.

"I don't expect a problem with it at all," he said.

Orlanda Milford, chief sanitarian for the city of San Antonio, said there have been no reports of illnesses linked to any cheeses in San Antonio.

"Even though this is not the cheese that's bad we're not taking any chances," Milford said.

Milford said he called Jimenez early Friday and the food manufacturer already had initiated the recall.

Jimenez said the recalled cheese included jalapeno, asadero, queso fresco and cotija, all white cheeses.

"We're not talking about hundreds of thousands of packages," Jimenez said. "I don't expect it to be a big percentage of our business."

Jimenez said he was not sure how much cheese actually would be recalled.

Cheeses manufactured by Jalisco were taken out of Kroger's 50 Houston area stores and from Fiesta Mart Inc., which has about a dozen Houston stores specializing in Mexican food products, officials said.

Dr. Gordon Reeve, chief of epidemiology for the Houston Health Department, said about 25 food inspectors had been sent to stores throughout the city to impound the cheese product so it could not be sold.

"Fortunately, the major chains, when we called them early this morning, many of them were removing the products themselves without our urging," he said.

Reeve said he had received no reports of illnesses related to the cheese.

"We're initiating a full-scale investigation," he said.

In Dallas, a Texas Department of Health official said any cheese made by the California company would be recalled.

"We expect to find some in the Dallas area, but not much. Most of it will be pulled off by the time we get there," said Rex Sherry of the health department's food and drugs division.

Lab results on cheese expected on Monday

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lab results on cheese pulled off the grocery shelves in Texas will not be ready until at least Monday, a spokesman for Jimenez Food Products Inc. said.

Raul Jimenez Jr., vice president of the Mexican food manufacturing firm, said Friday his company had ordered the recall of all its cheeses.

The recall was prompted by reports that the California company that manufactured the cheeses had closed down because of illnesses and deaths linked to cheese it had produced.

Jalisco Mexican Products Inc. voluntarily shut down because of 87 illnesses and 28 deaths linked to cheeses it had produced, California health officials said Friday.

Jimenez said Jalisco manufactured four kinds of cheeses for Jimenez Food Products and all of it would be off grocer's shelves in Texas by today.

Jimenez said the recalled cheese would be analyzed and results would be ready Monday.

"I don't expect a problem with it at all," he said.

State health department officials in a prepared statement said, "At this time no illness is known to have occurred in Texas as a result of the problem."

Officials said inspectors are monitoring compliance with the voluntary recall and have found manufacturers, distributors and retailers have responded quickly statewide.

In San Antonio, there have been no reports of illnesses linked to the cheese, said Orlanda Milford, chief sanitarian for the city of San Antonio.

"Even though this is not the cheese that's bad we're not taking any chances," Milford said.

Nevertheless, Milford said he is concerned.

"You're always worried about cross-contamination," he said.

Milford said he called Jimenez early Friday and the food manufacturer already had initiated the recall.

Jimenez said the recalled cheese included jalapeno, asadero, queso fresco and cotija, all white cheeses.

Jimenez said he was not sure how much cheese actually would be recalled.

Family keeping vigil on airplane

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The families of three Laredo residents aboard a hijacked plane in the Middle East continued early today their vigil as the airline continued its odyssey around the Mediterranean.

"You know, nobody figures something like this happens to them," said Jorge Garza, whose brother, Vicente Garza, 53, remained aboard the hijacked jetliner. "We're just sitting here hoping, waiting and praying."

Also aboard the jet were Vicente Garza's son-in-law, Robert Trautmann, 37, and Trautmann's dauther, Adriana, 13.

A Houston man, Allyn Conwell, a 39-year-old manager for an oilfield sales company, also was on board, as were several other Texans about whom further information was scant early today.

"Just the thought of waiting to see what's going to happen makes you nervous, and angry," Jorge Garza said. "I hope everything turns out for the best."

The Trans World Airlines 727 jet was on its way Friday from Athens, Greece, to Rome when it was commandeered by three men described as Shiite Moslems seeking the release of 700 of their comrades held in Israeli jails.

The jetliner, with 150 people aboard, was ordered to Beirut, where 19 passengers were released, including four other Laredo residents.

Vicente Garza's wife, Irma Garza, her daughter, Irma Trautmann and her younger daughters, Ashley, 4, and Katherine, 3, were among those released. "Two men were shouting in Deutsch, running back and forth and slapping people, telling them to get their hands behind their heads and their heads down," Mrs. Trautmann told the Laredo News from her hotel room in Larnaca, Cyprus.

She said the air pirates apparently did not realize her teenage daughter Adrianna was a girl.

"She was crying, sobbing," Mrs. Trautmann said.

The younger children remained calm, she said.

The plane stayed in Beirut for about five hours, then flew to Algiers, Algeria, where another 21 passengers were released. The jetliner took off again late Friday and landed in Beirut early today.

One passenger, believed to be a U.S. Marine, was shot and killed by the terrorists and thrown out of the plane.

The jetliner took off from Beirut today, but there was no immediate word on its destination.

Jorge Garza said he sent his family money because the hijackers had taken all their belongings.

"(Mrs. Garza) just wanted some because she didn't know what to expect," Jorge Garza said. "She's probably going to need the money to stay there. She wants to stay close by since nobody knows where the plane is going."

Friday night, the Trautmann and Garza families had the television set on, hoping to hear news about their relatives.

"I think the wheels are in motion in negotiating with these people in getting something done," Jay Trautmann said.

Jorge Garza said his brother is president of Associated Companies, which owns several department stores and grocery stores in Laredo.

He said Robert Trautmann is in the real estate and import business.

Mrs. Trautmann said a black man was shot en route to Beirut the first time, but she did not know the reason.

"We're just hoping that everyone on the plane will be all right," she said.

In Houston, the family of Conwell waited and prayed for his release.

"They've accomplished all they're going to accomplish. They've made their point. Now they should be willing to turn the hostages loose," said Conwell's brother, Mike.

Allyn Conwell, the father of three children, has worked in the Middle East for about a year and travels extensively in the region, his brother said.

Indian PM in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi came to Houston today for a first-hand look at spacecraft hardware and information about other high technology.

The day long Houston stop is Gandhi's only appearance outside Washington during his visit this week to the United States. He planned to tour the Johnson Space Center, appear at a meeting with local Indians, and attend a state dinner hosted by Vice President George Bush.

"Houston will provide him with a worthwhile and representative view of technological development and its commercialization within the United States," Bush, who invited Gandhi to his hometown, said Friday.

Houston police and the U.S. Secret Service, which is responsible for Gandhi's safety while in this country, said security arrangements were similar to those in force when an American president visits.

Last month, the FBI announced it had uncovered a plot by Sikh separatists to kill Gandhi during his U.S. trip. Some Sikhs in Houston planned to demonstrate outside a downtown convention center where Gandhi was scheduled to speak.

"We are concerned whenever politics unknown to us might affect the visit," Jim Steel, assistant to the special agent in charge of the Secret Service office in Houston, said Friday. "Without getting into the particulars, security arrangements are similar to the president's."

Flag Day speech used to assail Nicaragua

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Reagan wrapped an attack on "communist bullying" in Central America into a red-white-and-blue Flag Day ceremony Friday at Fort McHenry, where Francis Scott Key was inspired to write the "Star Spangled Banner."

In a speech at the Baltimore harbor fort where Key saw the tattered flag that inspired the national anthem, Reagan derided leftist Nicaragua. He compared El Salvador to the flag that inspired Key to write his famous poem while viewing a battle in the War of 1812.

"El Salvador, beset by terrorists supported by the communist regime in Nicaragua, has come securely through its own perilous night, and its democratic flag still proudly waves over a free land," the president said.

Reagan railed against Nicaragua, charging it with inspiring "years of communist subversion", and "outright military attacks" against democratic Honduras and Costa Rica.

"But the communists' bullying tactics have only bolstered the determination of the democratic Central American nations to defend their freedom," Reagan said.

Reagan's prepared text also contained a pitch for his tax overhaul program, but the president did not include that section in his actual address. In that portion, he contended his plan is one that will make the system more equitable and that Americans believe "everyone deserves a fair break."

The president spoke inside the star-shaped red brick fort, which was built from 1794-1805 and stands guard over the mouth of the Baltimore Harbor.

His audience was composed of students and sponsors of the National Flag Day Foundation, who gathered at the fort for a ceremony reciting the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

"I always get a chill up and down my spine when I say the pledge," Reagan said.

Above the platform, a stiff breeze caused a replica of the 42-by-32-foot, 15-star flag sighted by Key to flap smartly in the wind.

Unlikely merger said amid slump

NEW YORK (AP) — For 20 years Burroughs Corp. and Sperry Corp. have tried to reduce IBM's dominant position in the market for large-scale computers, but with only moderate success.

While Burroughs and Sperry have established loyal customer bases that provide steady revenue streams, their ability to capture new customers at the expense of International Business Machines Corp. — and bolster their own growth — has been an uphill struggle.

By various estimates, IBM maintains a 65 percent to 75 percent share of the mainframe computer market.

Now, Burroughs and Sperry are discussing a possible merger, apparently in the belief that by combining their technologies, marketing skills and customer bases into the nation's second-largest computer company, they can better compete in one of the computer industry's slower-growing markets. Analysts have their doubts.

IBM itself delivered the news that Wall Street found most troubling. IBM's president and chief executive, John F. Akers, told securities analysts it was unlikely the company would achieve the "solid growth" in 1985 that it had earlier hoped.

Citing a slowdown in capital spending and the strong dollar, Akers also said IBM's profit for the first nine months of 1985 would trail the results of a year earlier, which were particularly strong.

IBM's stock immediately tumbled on the New York Stock Exchange, dragging with it other technolgy issues and, to a lesser extent, the overall stock market.

Apple Computer Inc. followed IBM's gloomier forecast, saying the "significant" slump in the personal-computer forced Apple to cut its workforce by 1,200 people and its manufacturing facilities to three from six.

Apple also said the moves would result in one-time costs that would produce a loss for the company's fiscal third quarter ending June 30.

In addition, the trade group for the semiconductor industry said the computer-industry slowdown continues to exacerbate the severe slump plaguing the producers of semiconductors, the tiny circuits that store computer data and power many other electronic products.

The Semiconductor Industry Association in San Jose, Calif., said its primary gauge of activity, the book-to-bill ratio, fell to 0.72 in May from 0.77 in April.

Poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born in 1807 in Portland, Me.

Western Texas ready for College National Finals Rodeo Monday

BOZEMAN, Mont. – It's almost time for the College National Finals Rodeo and for the fifth consecutive year Coach Bob Doty will be here with his Western Texas College men's team.

When the rodeo officially gets underway here Monday, it will be Western Texas' sixth team appearance and fifth consecutive showing. WTC, a two year school which must compete against major colleges such as the University of Arizona and the University of Wyoming and perennially touted Sul Ross State University, has never won the CNFR. The Westerners did however place second in 1982.

The Westerners finished second in the Southwest Region this season, behind SRSU.

Competing on the six-man team for WTC during the June 17-22 rodeo will be Van Hale from Snyder, Gary Rowe from Colorado City, Tony Hecksher from Australia, Glenn Jordan from Clinton, N.C., Donnie Yorks from Mt. Morris, N.Y., and Bliss Mayhan from Kim, Colo.

Mayhan tied with Tarleton State University's Chris Guay for the Southwest Region bareback championship this season. He also competes in bull riding.

Hale finished third in bull riding and fourth in saddle bronc in the SW Region while Yorks was fourth in steer wrestling. Hecksher was fifth in bareback and Jordan was fifth in steer wrestling.

Rowe competes in calf roping and steer wrestling.

Doty is optimistic about his team's chances here.

"I think we're probably just as strong a team as we've taken up there with the possibility of the year we won second place," he said. "Everybody sort of counts us out every year at the first of the year but we've been able to qualify."

Hale and Rowe will be making return trips here, and their experience could be an asset.

"Experience helps, but a lot of it depends on the individual. It's a big honor and a big rodeo and there is a lot of prestige and there's a lot of pressure. Some can handle it better than others. Just being a coach, I know the first two or three years up there I was more nervous than I am now," said Doty. "I think that's the same thing with the contestants. I think we have had to fight so hard getting here the last three years we had, well, not a let down, but a feeling of 'we're just glad to get here' and that may have effected us at the finals. At Western Texas you're not dealing with seniors or kids that have been there three or four years."

Beyond experience and the the obvious - talent - it's the luck of the draw that is so crucial in rodeo.

"It's just so much on the draw and, of course, what you do with it. We had 365 points at New Mexico Junior College this season, and then you turn around and you see that earlier in the year we had a 45-point rodeo at Vernon. So it's just how you draw and how everything develops. I don't want to use drawing as a crutch. With that many entries we're going to draw some good stock and from there, we're going to have to use them to the fullest," Doty said.

Several of the Westerners have an outside chance at being named the best collegiate competitor in the nation in their event. Mayhan, for instance, is eighth in the national bareback standings. He is some 140 points behind the leader, but a contestant can score as many as 300 points in a single event here.

Though they are not in the top 10, Hale and Yorks are within 250 points of the leaders in the bull riding and steer wrestling, respectively.

Brewster dominates events in Tri-State HS competition

Adam Brewster, the hottest rodeo prospect to come out of this area in some time, began his assault on state and national championships with the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association finals in Amarillo recently.

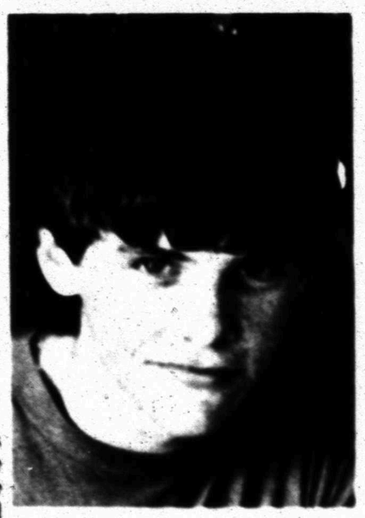

Brewster, who has signed a scholarship to Western Texas College next school year, took year-end championships in the bareback and bull riding of the TSHSRA.

In the Tri-State finals at Amarillo, he won the average in bareback and was second in bull riding.

His success won him three saddles and five buckles.

Brewster will be attending the Texas High School Rodeo Association championships beginning Monday in Seguin. He qualified as regional champion in the bull riding, bareback and saddle bronc.

In 1984, Brewster won the year-end bull riding and average at the finals in Tri-State competion, was world champion bull rider at the Youth National Finals Rodeo and reserve bull riding champion at the American Junior Rodeo Association (AJRA) finals.

Texas sports summary

SENIOR PRO-AM

DALLAS (AP) - Billy Casper shot a 7-under par 65 in the inaugural round of the Senior Players Reunion Pro-Am.

He took a two-shot lead into the second round of the 54-hole tournament Saturday.

Casper owned a two-shot lead over 67 shooters Don January and Lee Elder on the 6,800-yard, par 72 Bent Tree Country Club of this tournament patterned after the Bing Crosby Pro-Am.

Shooting 4-under 68s were Australian Peter Thomson, winner of four Senior PGA tournaments this year, and Charles Owens, who had to qualify on Tuesday to get into the 54-player field.

Owens and partner Jack Reese, a 21-handicapper, led the Pro-Am division by a shot with a 14-under par 58. Reese helped Owens 10 shots.

TECH SIGNEES

LUBBOCK, Texas - Texas Tech University has signed junior college All-America sprinter Byron Stroud of South Plains College and quarter-miler Gary Brown of Mount Sac Junior College.

Stroud of McAllen was the state junior college champion in the 100-meter dash and earned All-America honors during the past two years. Brown of West Covina, Calif., was the South Coast Conference track athlete of the year.

The pair brings to eight the number of tracksters signing with the Red Raiders this year.

'POKES INK JONES

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys said Friday they have signed 10th round draft choice Joe Jones, a 6-foot-4, 247-pound tight end from Virginia Tech.

Stanton's Garza inks with Western Texas

Adolph Garza, a four-year letterman for Stanton High School, has signed a golf scholarship with Western Texas College for the 1985-86 season, Dave Foster, coach, said.

Garza was a starter for the Stanton golf team all four years he played there and also participated in basketball.

In both his junior and senior years he served as team golf captain and was regional qualifier, finishing fourth each season.

Garza will be enrolled in the Golf Course and Landscape Technology program at WTC.

"Adolph will help our team in many ways, furnishing leadership and experience," Foster commented.

Foster has previously announced the signing of Scott Sawyer from El Paso and Matt Smith from Austin for the coming season. he will be visiting with five other players in the coming weeks.

WTC returns four players from the 1984-85 team.

Nicklaus doesn't make cut...

Chen still leading U.S. Open

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) - For the second day in a row, T.C. Chen of Taiwan holed out from the fairway - this time for a birdie - scrambled to a 69 and retained a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the 85th United States Open Golf Championship.

Chen, whose first-round 65 was spiced by the only double eagle in Open history, reached the halfway point of the American national championship with a 134 total, six shots under par for two trips over the Oakland Hills Country Club course and matching the Open record for the first 36 holes.

Jack Nicklaus, PGA champion Lee Trevino, Tom Watson and Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany all missed the cut when the field was trimmed to the low 60 scorers for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

For Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles, it was the first time he'd missed an Open cut since 1963, when he was defending the first of his four American national championships.

Nicklaus, 45, appeared worn and weary when he finished his round of 73 that put him at 149. But, when asked about his future in golf, he bristled.

"I've got two choices: continue to play or quit. And I'm not about to quit," he said.

Watson, a 5-time British Open champion and the outstanding figure in American golf in recent years, shot 72-147. Trevino, a winner in England last year, was 72-148. Langer shot 76-150.

In their place, such names as Chen, Rick Fehr and Dave Barr worked their way to the top of the leader board.

"There are just more good players, better players than there were 20 years ago," answered Jay Haas, who shot a 66 and moved into a tie for second place at 135, one stroke back.

"In this day and age, the players are so good, there are so many good, good players out there now, somebody is going to get hot," he added.

Haas shared second with Andy North, who has not won since taking the 1978 Open title. North shot 65 with no bogeys and a birdie-birdie finish.

Fehr, 22, a rookie pro who spends most of his time on the mini-tours, managed a 67 and was at 136, four under par.

Denis Watson, a South African, matched the competitive course record with a 65 and, despite a Catch 22 penalty of two shots assessed Thursday, was at 137, three off the pace.

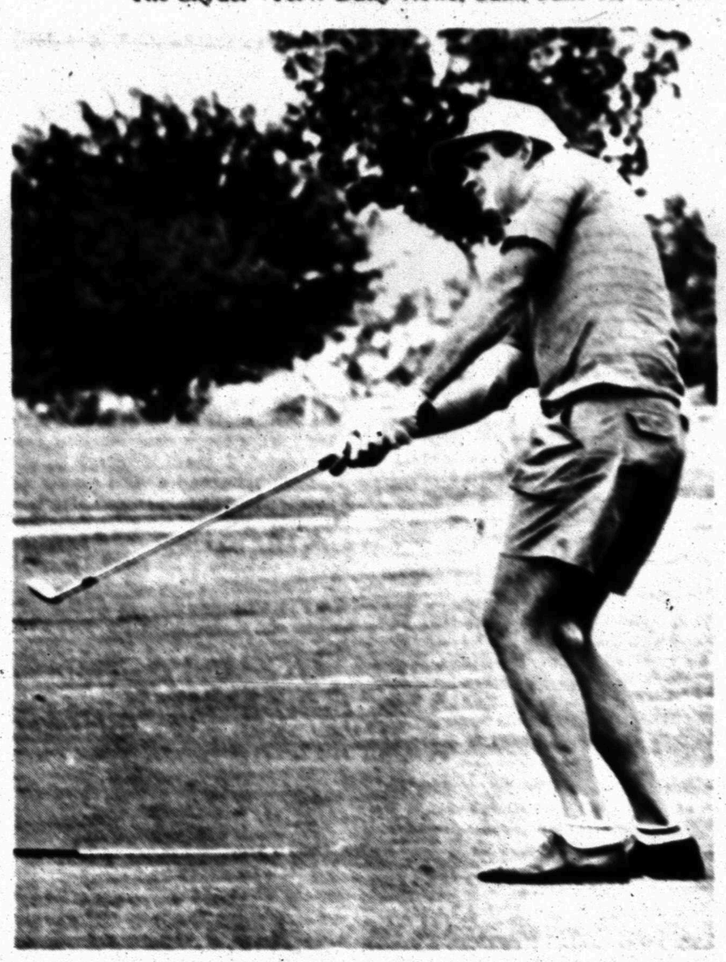

Barr, a Canadian, was next at 68-138.

Tom Kite, veteran Ray Floyd, Mark O'Meara and Curtis Strange, the leading money-winner on the tour this year, were at 139. Strange had a 68, O'Meara and Floyd had 67s, and Kite 70.

Defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller had a 69 and was at par 140.

British Open champion Seve Ballesteros sought medical treatment for a problem with his right thumb after shooting a 70 that left him at 141.

Fred Couples, a single stroke off the pace after the first round, blew from an opening 66 to 78 and was at 144.

Andujar wins 12 as Cards triumph

by The Associated Press

En route to his 12th victory, San Diego's Andy Hawkins couldn't help himself and let it slip through his hands. The same could not be said of St. Louis' Joaquin Andujar, however.

Winning 4-3 in the ninth inning, Hawkins yielded a leadoff single and eventually wound up with a no-decision when San Francisco rallied for a 5-4 victory in 11 innings.

Andujar, meanwhile, became the first 12-game winner in major leagues while helping St. Louis take an 11-10 victory over Chicago with his bat as well as his arm. Andujar, 12-1, contributed a two-run double and won his eighth straight game, even though he pitched only 5 1-3 innings. He was forced to leave with a 6-4 lead when his shoulder stiffened.

In other National League action, it was Montreal 5, New York 4; Pittsburgh 3, Philadelphia 2; Atlanta 5, Cincinnati 4, and Los Angeles 10, Houston 2.

Giants 5, Padres 4

David Green's one-out home run, his first of the season, off Luis DeLeon in the bottom of the 11th inning lifted San Francisco over San Diego.

The homer came on a 1-1 pitch off DeLeon, 0-2, the third San Diego pitcher. Mark Davis, 3-3, pitched two innings for the victory.

Expos 5, Mets 4

Dan Driessen had two hits and drove in three runs, including the game-winner in the bottom of the ninth, as Montreal rallied to score twice and edge New York.

Driessen's game-winning single came on a 3-2 pitch off Mets relief ace Jesse Orosco, the fourth New York pitcher, after Vance Law had tied the score 4-4 with an RBI single.

New York ace Dwight Gooden struck out 11 batters in eight innings and led 4-3 when he left the game, catcher Gary Carter's first at Montreal since being traded by the Expos to the Mets last December. He was 3-for-3 and two walks.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2

Bill Madlock hit a tie-breaking single and Johnny Ray and Sixto Lezcano belted solo home runs as Pittsburgh rallied to beat Philadelphia.

Lezcano, a former Phillie, greeted loser Don Carman, 0-1, in the seventh with his second homer. The victory went to Jose DeLeon, 2-8, winning his third in his last 20 decisions after one-hitting the Phillies over the first six innings.

Braves 6, Reds 4

Ken Oberkfell scored from first base on third baseman Nick Esasky's throwing error in the eighth and Bob Horner followed with a two-run homer to lead Atlanta.

Horner then belted his seventh homer, off Mario Soto, 8-5, for a 6-3 Atlanta lead. The victory went to Bruce Sutter, 3-1, who worked the final two innings, giving up an RBI double to Gary Redus in the ninth.

Dodgers 10, Astros 2

Pedro Guerrero hit two home runs, joining Greg Brock for consecutive homers in the fifth inning, and Jerry Reuss scattered eight hits and drove in three runs to lead Los Angeles over Houston.

The Dodgers chased Joe Niekro, 3-7, in the fifth on Guerrero's 10th home run of the season and Brock's ninth homer. Reuss, 4-5, a one-time Houston pitcher, improved his career record to 16-5 against the Astros as he hurled his second complete game of the season.

Rangers win, 4-2...

Weaver's Orioles bag Brewers

by The Associated Press

On a cool night in Baltimore - the kind meant for the playoffs and the World Series - Earl Weaver showed that retirement is for the birds.

"He started off yelling like he always does," Rick Dempsey beamed after the Orioles celebrated Weaver's return as manager Friday night by trouncing the Milwaukee Brewers 9-3.

The Orioles, whose performance in the last year was criticized as "lackluster" by owner Edward Bennett Williams, looked alive against the Brewers. Weaver called for four hit-and-run plays, and Eddie Murray took it on his own to steal his first base of the season in the first inning.

In other American League games, Cleveland tripped Oakland 6-1; Chicago beat California 4-2; Boston downed Toronto 4-1; Detroit blanked New York 4-0; Seattle crushed Kansas City 13-5 and Texas defeated Minnesota 4-2.

Weaver, who replaced the dismissed Joe Altobelli, got a standing ovation when he came out of the dugout to present the lineup card, but a two-run double by Ted Simmons and a bases-loaded walk to Jim Gantner had Baltimore starter Storm Davis in trouble in the first inning.

"I could hear him from the tunnel," Davis said. But Davis, 4-2, settled down to pitch a four-hitter while the Orioles rallied.

Indians 6, A's 1

Bert Blyleven, the object of intense trade rumors in the past week, ignored the talk and pitched a five-hitter to win his 200th career game.

Blyleven, 5-6, gave up just one unearned run in becoming the 83rd pitcher in major-league history to reach the 200-victory mark. He has lost 173 games.

Brook Jacoby singled home a run during Cleveland's two-run first inning, and had a two-run single as the Indians scored four times in the second to put away visiting Oakland.

White Sox 4, Angels 2

Tom Seaver, after giving up two unearned runs on two hits in the first inning, did not give up another hit in his seven innings of work as he won his 295th career game.

Seaver, 7-4, retired 13 straight California batters at one point. He left after walking the leadoff batter in the eighth, and Chicago reliever Bob James gave up one hit in recording his 15th save.

The visiting White Sox scored three runs in the third inning off Ron Romanick, 7-3, to take a 3-2 lead. Greg Walker hit a two-run homer, his ninth, and Daryl Boston singled home the third run.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 1

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, pitching despite an aching wrist that he hurt while chasing his dog, scattered 11 hits and kept Boston rolling at Fenway Park. Boyd, 8-4, pitched his AL-leading ninth complete game - including six straight - and lowered his ERA to 2.37.

The Red Sox won for the 11th time in 12 games as Mike Easler contributed an RBI single in the third off Toronto starter Jim Clancy, 2-4, and a run-scoring double in the fifth.

Tigers 4, Yankees 0

Four solo home runs and the five-hit pitching of Walt Terrell and Willie Hernandez led Detroit to victory at Yankee Stadium.

Terrell, 7-2, gave up five hits and left with one out in the ninth with runners on first and second. Hernandez got the final two outs for his 12th save.

The loss was the third straight for New York and Dennis Rasmussen, 2-4.

Mariners 13, Royals 5

In the Kingdome, Seattle broke a four-game losing streak with a power display against Kansas City. Alvin Davis and Gorman Thomas hit three-run homers and Bob Kearney cracked a solo home run and a two-run triple.

The Mariners scored seven runs in the fifth inning to take a 9-2 lead. Thomas connected for his 10th homer to pin the loss on Danny Jackson, 4-4, and Frank Wills, 2-0, worked the first 6 1-3 innings for the victory.

Rangers 4, Twins 2

Toby Harrah hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Burt Hooton and reliever Dave Schmidt made the lead stand up in Texas.

Hooton, 3-1, went 6 1-3 innings and gave up eight Minnesota hits, including a two-run homer by Tom Brunansky, his 15th, in the sixth. Schmidt got his first save.

76ers name Guokas as new head coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Mild mannered Matty Guokas already has changed his image.

The ink was hardly dry on his multi-year contract as head coach of the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association when he let it be known that he would be as tough as the occasion demanded.

"I'm going to be the most demanding person of myself. ... And in turn I'm going to be demanding of them (players)," Guokas said Friday. "I know their strengths and weaknesses. I have a pretty good idea of what kind of philosophy I want to go after and how I want to present it to the ball club."

Guokas, who signed a multi-year contract for a reported $300,000 per year, said he didn't expect any adversary relationships with his players. "But if a situation occurs I'll deal with it."

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but 76ers' owner Harold Katz said earlier in the week on a radio show that it would be for at least two years. Billy Cunningham, who resigned May 28 after eight years and one championship, reportedly earned about $400,000.

Guokas said that the first item on his agenda when he sits behind his new desk in the June 18 NBA player draft.

"We have over the weekend and Monday and Tuesday to get squared away in that area. That's the most important thing on our mind right now."

See doctor about nosebleeds

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am taking medication on a daily basis for high blood pressure, and I have had numerous nosebleeds throughout the year without the symptoms of a cold.

Could this indicate the possibility of clotting or other serious complications?

DEAR READER — Nosebleeds can result from a variety of causes, including high blood pressure and clotting deficiency. Some medicines for hypertension can affect the blood, so I recommend you check with your doctor to make sure that your blood pressure is under control and you haven't developed a complication of treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have been having a lot of trouble sleeping lately. I always eat a big meal around 9 p.m. Could I be disturbing my sleeping patterns by eating like this so late in the evening? Are there certain foods one should avoid at so late an hour?

DEAR READER — Your sleep pattern may be altered by a large and late evening meal.

Although several European cultures find it fashionable to have late evening meals, they usually eat the main meal at midday, followed later by tea (or a siesta), a light late-evening meal and bed after midnight. This pattern seems to work for them; they don't retire with full stomachs.

Americans have chosen a different custom, which includes light breakfast, early lunch, a heavy dinner and bed usually before midnight. If you are eating sparingly during the day and then "piling on the carbs" at night, your digestion may be in high gear by the time you roll into bed. The situation can be worsened if you are consuming lots of rich and indigestible food at dinner.

Try eating dinner earlier in the evening. Perhaps you might experiment with eating your main meal in the middle of the day. Or go to bed later, if your schedule permits.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Whenever I eat dairy products, I develop acne. A friend who has bad acne was told never to drink milk. I was recently tested, and I am not allergic to dairy products. Are dairy products especially acne-forming?

DEAR READER — Dairy products contain fats and oils that may encourage acne. This is not a usual pattern, but it can happen.

Cholesterol in cow's milk is commonly the culprit. Therefore, drinking skimmed or powdered milk may help. If that doesn't solve your problem, try giving up milk products for several weeks. You can supplement your calcium needs with pills. With time, since acne tends to clear with age, you may be able to enjoy dairy products once again.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Why do adults have such a tough time learning new languages? I used to speak fluent Spanish, but now I cannot pick it up again. How can I relearn the language? I cannot afford to relocate.

DEAR READER — Children appear to learn languages more readily than adults because there are more "open circuits" and youngsters really can throw themselves into the learning process.

Your problem, I think, is not learning a language, but remembering it. I'm no language expert, yet I'll bet your Spanish would return pronto if you were to immerse yourself in a Spanish-speaking environment — a neighborhood, foreign country or language lab.

If you say you "cannot" pick it up again, you won't. That's true of any skill. Rather, take the position that you "will" — and so you shall. To get you started (or finish you off), call the adult education department of any university or one of many language schools listed in the Yellow Pages. You may not be able to relocate, but you certainly could take two or three days (or evenings) a week to regain your fluency.

You would think that with all the technological skills at our disposal, someone could invent a workable pipe reamer.

For those of you who don't smoke pipes, I allude to the chore that we pipe smokers periodically confront: cleaning out the charred ash that forms inside the pipe bowl. The stuff is abominable. It's as hard as dry plastic wood. It builds up, smoke after smoke, like a malignant arteriosclerosis, progressively reducing the diameter of the bowl until so little tobacco can be inserted that a relaxing after-dinner habit becomes a five-minute frustration.

Of more economic importance, the gummy crust has a different coefficient of expansion than does wood. If the pipe is not regularly reamed — a major undertaking, at present — the briar expands at a different rate than the deposit and will crack, thereby ruining the pipe.

I realize this is not the kind of technical problem that interests the general public. Perhaps it is an inconvenience better suited to an analysis by Andy Rooney. However, I have yet to find a decent, cleanable, inexpensive pipe reamer. And that got me thinking about other familiar items that also could stand some improvement:

— The stethoscope. Contrary to popular opinion, physicians do not store their stethoscopes in the coldest crannies of the office. In fact, I often warm the flat listening portion, called the diaphragm, before placing it on an unsuspecting warm chest. But the warming is never enough. Each patient jumps and exclaims "Hey, doc, where do you keep that thing? (You guessed the next line.) In the refrigerator?"

I plead for someone to design a stethoscope mitten — or something — so that doctors can stop torturing warm-blooded clients.

— The hospital gown. This flimsy cotton garment was clearly not designed by a patient, for a patient. The darned thing is a veritable Gordian knot of flaps, snaps, ties and gaping holes. I've never met a patient who could figure out how to get in to it. Never met a doctor who could, either. If you slip it on with the opening in front — the logical way — watch out, you end up looking like a refugee from Penthouse magazine. When donned with the opening in back, the gown exposes the entire spinal column, down to and including the coccyx and surrounding structures.

This vestment defies my definition of the word "gown." It seems calculated to minimize modesty, maximize loss of body heat and make the wearer an instant object of interest among visitors. I say throw hospital gowns in the wastebasket and insist on wearing your own pajamas or nighties. (Incidentally, the disposable office-gown is no improvement over its hospital counterpart.)

— Stirrups. These are not the gadgets you stuff your boots into when cantering around the countryside. Medical stirrups are medieval devices — akin to the thumbscrew — commonly attached to uncomfortable tables upon which sadistic gynecologists examine women's reproductive tracts. The specialists insist that stirrups are necessary, but most females don't like them, and I've never seen a male gynecologist try them himself. The solution? Ride bareback. Or surprise your obstetrician by requesting a western saddle.

Although modern science can put men and women in space, I suspect that what we really need are more enterprising young minds devoted to discovering solutions to our little problems. One way or the other, the big ones have a tendency to take care of themselves.

Noah Project gets donations

Two local churches have made recent donations to the Noah Project in Snyder, a shelter for abused spouses and their children.

Food was donated Friday morning by the kindergarten class of the Vacation Bible School at the First United Methodist Church. Teachers were Janis Key and Ranada Jack.

The children of the Morningside Baptist Church's Vacation Bible School collected their nickles and dimes for one week in order to present a donation of $253 to the shelter. Included with the money was two large boxes of toys that the children, ages three through high school, brought to the church each day from home.

The theme for the Bible school, which ran the first week of June, was "Helping Hands." Before the week began, Bible School director Pam Collom and assistant director Norma Grimmitt said they "prayed for the place God would have us send an offering," and shortly received a phone call from Bible school teacher Carylon Vaughan to the effect that the Noah Project was losing its state funding and would have to close its doors if additional funding could not be secured.

On June 3, Noah Project director Linda Scalf gave a brief talk to the youngsters (in which she compared the shelter to Noah's Ark) and the children took over from their, Collom said.

"We didn't think we'd get more than $60," she said, "And the box I set out for toy donations overflowed three times."

A final donation on commencement night, June 7, pushed the total cash donations to $253.

The Noah Project, Inc. is a social service agency designed to work with families disrupted by violence. Through shelter, counseling, and community agency referral, the Noah Project provides assistance to battered wives and their children.

Unless the shelter can raise its operating expenses through private and public donations, it will be forced to close by the end of summer.

To date, the shelter has served over 50 families in Scurry and Nolan counties (though only 10 families have been from Nolan County).

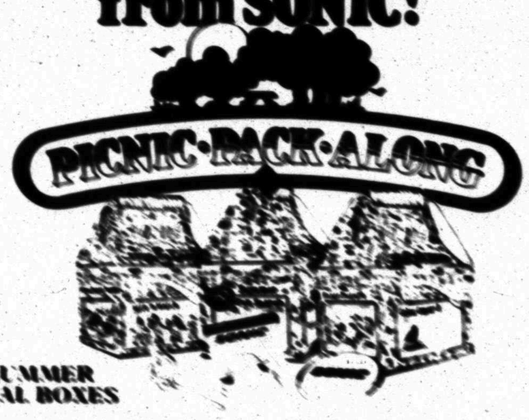

Other needs include: household and personal care items (particularly toothpaste, shampoo, diapers etc.), food and volunteers.

sonnel at 2 p.m. Tuesday. Lumber and hardware personnel will convene at 4 p.m.

At 9 a.m. Wednesday, subjects will be targeted for auto dealers, parts stores and repair shops. At 2 p.m. Wednesday, the session will be geared to general merchandise stores such as clothing, shoes, gifts, houseware and soft goods.

Supermarkets and convenience stores will convene to hear Mouser at 9 a.m. Thursday followed by furniture and appliance dealers at 10 a.m. Oilfield service company personnel will have a session at 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

Mouser will speak to all Snyder civic clubs during the week and a luncheon will be held at noon Monday for representatives of Snyder financial institutions.

A special public relations seminar for members of the medical community will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday. A 4 p.m. session on Wednesday is planned for all public officials.

In addition, Mouser will be available to make individual calls to firms as time permits.

"Mouser is a walking encyclopedia of marketing and public relations information," McQueen said. "He has the ability to motivate his audience and to generate feedback, empathy and enthusiasm. He has a down-to-earth approach that is very practical in nature.

"Persons attending will find it a fresh and stimulating experience and you will return to work with renewed enthusiasm for the business you are in."

Minor injuries in city wreck

Stephanie June Stipe of the Arah Rt. reportedly sustained minor injuries that did not require medical treatment Friday following a mishap at 7:57 a.m. in the 1400 Block of 23rd St.

The wreck was one of four traffic accidents reported in Snyder Friday.

Stipe was the driver of a 1980 Toyota which was in collision with a 1977 AMC driven by Edwin Nelson Stagner of 1312 17th St.

Friday's first minor accident was reported in the 3500 Block of College Ave. at 1:11 p.m.

Involved in it were a 1977 AMC driven by Marion Elvy Tierce of 2110 Peyton Ave. and a 1983 Plymouth driven by Lila Turner of Rt. 3, Snyder.

The 200 Block of 37th St. was the scene of the day's third accident at 8:19 p.m.

Involved in it were a 1982 Oldsmobile driven by John Forshee of 3308 Ave. A and a 1982 Ford driven by Jay Cox of Rt. 2, Snyder.

The final accident was recorded at 9:56 p.m. in the 1300 Block of 25th St.

According to reports, a 1980 Pontiac driven by Johnny Claxton of 2904 Ave. V struck a parked 1974 Mack truck owned by Dynamic Fluid Controls of Abilene.

Obituaries

Annette May

Services for Mrs. Annette May, 65, of 3413 44th will be at 3 p.m. Sunday at First Baptist Church Chapel with the Rev. Ken Branam, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Hillside Memorial Gardens under the direction of Bell-Cypert-Seale Funeral Home.

She died at 3:10 p.m. Friday at Baptist Memorial Hospital in San Angelo.

She was born Oct. 20, 1919 in Hico. She had been a bookkeeper.

She was married to Raymond May Dec. 19, 1936 in Sweetwater. He survives.

She had been a resident of Scurry County since 1937, moving from Sweetwater, and a Snyder resident since 1977. She was a member of the First Baptist Church and a longtime member of Central Baptist Church in Hermleigh where she taught Sunday School and Vacation Bible School classes.

She was preceded in death by a brother, Charles Pitman of Sweetwater in May of this year.

She is survived by a daughter, Ramona Huffman of Irving; one son, Don May of Garland; eight grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; her mother, Laura Bell Perry of Sweetwater.

whose income would qualify them for rent assistance.

Regarding the remaining units, a higher rent than the minimum $205 and $249 may be charged based upon individual income. Those with an annual income of more than $18,500 will not qualify for residency under the FmHA guidelines.

This is figured based upon actual income, however, and does not take into consideration monies placed in interest-bearing accounts or the interest derived from such accounts.

To apply, the individual must be age 62 or older.

When the application for residency began, some 50 forms were picked up. Of these, 33 were returned.

Shaw said many of the individuals expressing interest "are just not ready to move yet."

Regarding completion, the residential construction is essentially done with concrete now being poured for driveways and sidewalks. Carpet is also being installed and appliances moved in.

Senior Citizens Inc. has now applied for a tax exempt status so that donations to complete the construction of a fence may be carried as tax deductable.

Approximately $19,000 is needed for the fence construction. It would be built along the eastern edge of the project, separating the homes from the business district which runs along College Ave.

Once construction is complete, an open house is planned to allow county residents to tour the facilities.

Once seized, the property can then be given to any governmental agency with the legal power to employ certified law enforcement officers.

Those agencies could include the State of Texas, City of Snyder, Scurry County or even the district attorney's office.

The agency that receives the property can then sell it, destroy it or keep for their own use.

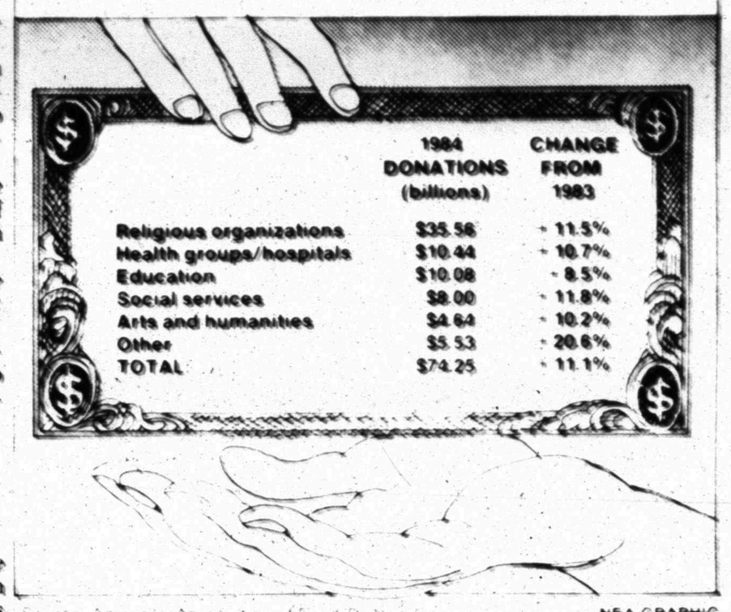

Three other similar suits involving one automobile and two quantities of money are now pending in the district court.

More than 50 hostages freed

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — More than 50 hostages aboard a hijacked TWA passenger plane were freed today after the Shiite Moslem air pirates won their demand for the release of an alleged accomplice who was arrested in Athens, said airline officials.

"Shortly before 11 a.m. EDT this morning, TWA officials on the scene in Algiers reported that passengers began deplaning onto several airport buses, and they were taken to the airport terminal," said David Venz, a TWA spokesman in New York.

"We believe that all but 53 passengers have now been released and are at the terminal, including most of the females on board and the five TWA flight attendants."

When the plane landed in Algiers this morning, for the second time in 24 hours, it held 106 hostages and crew, plus four hijackers. Beirut control tower officials said that two new hijackers had joined the original two when the plane stopped there for refueling last night.

The hijackers took over the Athens-to-Rome flight Friday.

They said in Algiers today that they would blow up the plane unless the alleged accomplice, Ali Atwa, 21, was released by Greek police. He was flown to Algiers shortly before the mass release.

The Algerian news agency said that most of the passengers released today were Greeks and most were women.

Earlier today, three people — identified as an American man, his daughter, and a second American woman — had been freed from the plane.

Thank You

WE WANT to say a big "Thank You" to the ones who sent cards, and who called on the phone or visited in our home. The ones who helped in any way in the loss of our son, Glenn. To the ones who sent flowers or food also.

Sincerely,
Lloyd & Pauline Merritt
and Family

Thank You

THE FAMILY of Harvey Stout would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone for their kind expression of sympathy. For the food, flowers, cards, calls and the ones who were there to lend their support, we are extremely grateful. May God's richest blessings be yours.

Opal Stout, Herbert, Ruby
Kathy and Terri Stout
Darrell, Leatha and Mimi Stout

Thank You

TO THE Host of friends who came to us with love and sympathy, to those who could not come but sent flowers or messages of condolences in our loss of Bess Johnston; we want to express our deepest appreciation. We are indeed grateful for the beautiful flowers and for the food that was served. May God's blessing be upon you in our prayer.

The Families of:
Merle Williams, Joe Johnston, Pat Johnston

Scurry County Folks...

By Linda Baylor

Marcie Matson, director of the Diamond M Museum, moved to Snyder from Florida in September to assume her duties.

"I like it (Texas) better than Flordia, but I consider Arizona my home. It's nice to be able to look out and see everything and not look into trees," said Marcie.

She holds her undergraduate degree in both history and anthropology and is currently working on her masters in humanities. "My favorite hobby would have to be school. I'm a professional student," she laughed.

"My concept of history is that you should include social concepts as well as wars and things," she explained. "I stumbled onto archaeology as an undergraduate in anthropology. That (field) requires a steady hand while cleaning and marking the items and distinguishing between soil colors because each one means something different."

She explained that she had been on several digs but has found that she can't handle the heat.

She worked for the State Parks in Arizona for several years where she did public information and most of the interpretation.

"I like interpretation at museums. You need more than who, what, when, why and where. You need a little bit more about the history, but that's my own personal opinion," she said.

In addition to her job, Marcie also enjoys photography. She sold some of her pictures for brochures when she was employed by the State Parks in Arizona.

MARCIE MATSON

Other interests and involvements include teaching embroidery and needlepoint class in an adult education non-credit program.

Currently she is working on a history book for nine through 12 year olds. "This book will be directed to museums and historical societies when it's published," she said. A friend is doing the illustrations and she is working on the copy. "We do all our arguing by mail. No one could afford the phone bill otherwise," she laughed.

Marcie also enjoys traveling and does as much as possible. She has spent three months living in Norway and she traveled across Europe about five years ago. She explained that she just took the time off and loved every place and every minute of that trip.

"This is the first job that I've had in five years that I didn't have to do any fund raising," she said. But she is available to speak to the various clubs and organizations in the county.

MICROWAVE COOKING

CANTONESE STYLE ALASKA COD

- 1 pound Alaska cod fillets, thawed if necessary
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- Salt and pepper
- 1 tablespoon packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons each water and cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 cup diagonally sliced celery
- 1/2 cup canned pineapple chunks, drained

MICROWAVE METHOD: Cut into serving-sized pieces; place in microwave-safe dish. Dot with butter; sprinkle with lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper. Cover with waxed paper; microwave at High 2 minutes. Rotate dish 1/4 turn; microwave at High 1 to 2 minutes longer or until cod flakes easily when tested with a fork. Keep cod covered while preparing sauce.

Combine brown sugar and cornstarch in 4-cup glass measure; add water, vinegar and soy sauce. Microwave at High 1 minute or until thickened. Stir once during cooking.

Stir in celery and pineapple. Microwave at High 1 minute. Serve over cod. This kitchen-tested recipe makes about 4 servings.

Steamed and poached fish cook perfectly, unless you cook it too long. For example, for a pound of fish fillets in the microwave, figure cooking between four to five minutes plus four to five minutes of standing time after the microwave cycle shuts off.

Couple repeat vows in garden wedding

Robin Lynn Floyd of Irving became the bride of James W. Williamson of Dallas in a double ring ceremony held June 1 in a private home in Dallas. Mike Peters, minister of the Prestoncrest Church of Christ, officiated the 10:30 a.m. garden ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robbie Floyd of Snyder and Intha Schmear and Don Williamson, both of Dallas.

A white gazebo served as the altar. The entry way was laced with ivy and accented with two large ferms and baskets of mums.

The registration table was draped with a white lace cloth and featured a bride's candle and the bride's book which was covered with roped lace that had been beaded by her mother. Sarah Eggleston of Arlington assisted the guests.

MRS. JAMES W. WILLIAMS

Guests were ushered through the house by Jeff Nipp of Dallas. Wes Baggett of Dallas, brother-in-law of the groom, Edmund Gray of Dallas, uncle of the groom, and Chad Worley of Levelland, cousin of the bride, escorted the guests from the house to the garden area.

Accenting the setting, the guests were seated in white wooden chairs.

Prior, during and after the ceremony, several musical selections were presented by Patricia Williamson of Wichita, Kan., sister-in-law of the groom; Tim Williamson of Dallas, brother of the groom; and Donnie Williamson of Wichita, Kan., brother of the groom.

The group presented "God, Man, Woman," "Follow Me," "Whither Thou Goest," "Wedding Song," "Nature of Love," "Father Hear This Prayer We Offer." "You're My Inspiration" was used as the processional.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected a formal length gown fashioned of lace over taffeta. A high neckline edged in lace added interest to the sheer bodice. Cap like sleeves fashioned of matching lace highlighted the gown. Miniature seed pearls were scattered around the bodice and sleeves.

The full skirt was gathered at the natural waistline to form a train. A matching ruffle enhanced the hem of the gown and train.

To compliment her ensemble, the bride selected a summer hat which was designed with lace appliques and adorned with seed pearls. The waist length bridal veil was gently secured to the hat.

She carried a bridal bouquet atop her mother's Bible. This Bible had been carried by her mother at her wedding.

In keeping with tradition, the bride's gown served as something new, she wore a blue garter and had a penny placed in her shoe for luck. For something old and borrowed, the bride chose her mother's pearl necklace.

Kathy Floyd of Snyder, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. The bridesmaids included Charolette Bishop of Kearne; Tami Weaver of Dallas; and Dennise Farmer of Midland.

They wore matching gowns of lavender. The tea length dresses were sleeveless and the attendents carried baskets of fresh orchids and summer flowers.

Rae Lynn Worley of Levelland, cousin of the bride, served as flowergirl. She was attired in a white tea length dress and carried a basket of rose petals.

Corbin Baggett of Dallas, nephew of the groom, served as ring bearer. He wore a black tuxedo and carried a white lace pillow with the rings secured gently with satin ribbons.

The groom was attired in a black morning coat with gray stripped pants. A white rose boutonniere completed the ensemble.

The best man was Bane Jordon of Lewisville, friend of the groom. The groomsmen included Jeff McKune of Dallas, a friend of the groom; Donnie Williamson of Wichita, Kan., brother-in-law of the groom; and Tim Williamson of Dallas, brother-in-law of the groom.

The mother of the bride wore a street length beige dress which featured a neckline fashioned of lace. The mother of the groom wore a street length pink dress which featured a satin collar. Both mothers wore matching orchid corsages.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth and featured a three tiered cake accented with fresh spring flowers. Crystal and silver appointments completed the setting.

Susan Gergory and Ronda Simmons, both of Dallas, presided at the bride's table.

The groom's table was covered with a matching cloth and featured a carrot cake iced with chocolate. Chocolate roses accented the cake. A basket of Bromeliads and green plants served as the centerpiece. Karen Jordon of Lewisville assisted the guests at the groom's table.

The brunch table featured quiche, sausage balls, sweet rolls, fresh fruit with sweet dip, and juices. The table was covered with a cloth which matched the bride's and the groom's tables.

Guests served themselves.

Other members of the houseparty included Shirley Oler, Lahoma Cox and Virginia Vaught, all of Dallas; Carma Allison of Plano; Donna Krimbell and Mildred Whaley, both of Richardson.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pepples of Miami, Fla; Mr. and Mrs. John Markey of Miami, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Ennis Floyd, of Snyder, grandparents of the bride; Mrs. Davis Beard of Snyder; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Johnson of Levelland; Ken Johnson of Lubbock; and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Worley of Levelland.

The bride is a graduate of Levelland High School and Abilene Christian University. She is currently teaching in the Dallas Independent School District.

The groom is a graduate of Wichita High North and is currently a full time student of the University of Texas in Arlington.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's aunt and uncle on May 31 at 8 p.m.

TO WED - Mr. and Mrs. Eleodoro V. Garcia announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Naida Garcia, to Luis Gabriel Garza, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos G. Garza of Los Fresnos. The couple will exchange vows July 6 at 2 p.m. in the Our Lady of Guadalupe Church.

Snyder Palette Club sets 7th annual art show here

The Snyder Palette Club is preparing for its 7th annual July 4 art show in conjunction with the 23rd annual July 4 celebration at the Scurry County Barn in Towle Park.

Entry date for the show is July 2 from 1-7 p.m. with the pick-up date set for 9 p.m. July 4.

All artists in Scurry County and the surrounding areas are invited to participate in this show.

An entry fee of $3 per adults and $1.50 per student will be charge per entry. Artists may price their work for sale with 10 percent of the sale going to the Snyder Palette Club.

There will be three divisions in the show. They include professional-teacher, amateur, and students through high school.

The catagories involve landscape, stillife, portraits, and contemporary work. Each individual artist may enter up to five paintings in each catagory. Original and copy-classroom work will be accepted and judged in respective categories.

All entries should be framed and wired for hanging and they should not be over two years old or previously shown in this show. Each entry should have a card attached to the back with the name of the artist, address, telephone number, division and price if the item is for sale.

Care will be taken to safeguard all entries, however, the Snyder Palette Club will not be responsible for loss or damage. Any work submitted will signify an agreement on the part of the artist to the above stated conditions.

The judge reserves the right to give additional catagory awards or not to present any awards if the work in that catagory should not meet standards of quality or entry rules.

The exhibit will open Thursday, July 4 at 9 a.m. and close at 9 p.m. For more information, contact Myrtle Joiner at 573-0066 or Lila Guinn at 573-0905.

Whether you're a summer athlete or spectator, you'll probably reach for something cool and refreshing to relieve the heat and quench your thirst. But the best way to get relief, is not with any commercial product.

The American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM) recommends water as THE thirst quencher. The body needs water during exercise, since water losses greater than three percent of your total body weight can result in decreased strength and endurance.

Here are some thirst-quenching suggestions from the ACSM:

—Drinks high in sodium actually increase the amount of water your body loses. Only under extreme circumstances, such as when your water loss during exercise equals six pounds or more, should you worry about replacing sodium and other nutrients. Even then, you should be sure to include adequate amounts of water.

—Alcohol may be a part of many summer sports activities, but it does nothing for quenching a real thirst. When it comes to restoring your body's water balance, an alcoholic drink does just the opposite. It's a diuretic, so it increases the amount of water the kidneys excrete. Thus the more alcohol you drink, the more fluid you lose.

—Other substances in a beverage can affect the way the water is used. Caffeine, theobromine and theophylline, found in cola and tea, also have a diuretic effect thereby increasing water loss.

What this all means is that water is still number one for quenching the thirst of athletes and spectators alike.

Lloyd family reunion set

The Lloyd Family Reunion will be held June 29-30 at the Towle Park Pavilion. Relatives and friends are invited to bring a picnic lunch and join the visiting.

War breaks out Thursdays off coast of SW England

ABOARD HMS BRILLIANT (AP) — The planes arch high over Dorset's chalk cliffs, dive low near Henry VIII's castle atop Portland Bill and stab for the task force, weaving back and forth along the line of warships.

"We have a bogey!" shouts a radar operator on HMS Brilliant, the flagship. The helm swings around. Missile launchers rise. Guns boom.

For the Standing Naval Force Atlantic, NATO's peacetime navy, it's the culmination of a week in one of the world's toughest sea schools.

For the instructors of Britain's Portland sea training headquarters, it's just another Thursday War off the southwest coast of England.

Each week, the Royal Navy's flag officer for sea training puts his charges through individual exercises involving maneuvering, gunnery, air defense, antisubmarine and antiterrorist operations — then rolls them all into a single test simulating battle conditions.

"We call it the Thursday War," says Capt. Rob Woodard, an easy-going close friend of the royal family who runs the operation. "We do everything to the ships from launching air strikes and to simulating chemical weapon attacks, throwing in real gas, starting fires, jamming communications, cutting power and flooding parts of the ship."

Up to 80 vessels a year — mostly British — come to Portland to be put through their paces. The full course can last up to seven weeks. In a recent exercise it was the NATO force's turn to endure the Thursday War.

STANAVFORLANT is the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's name for its standing navy in the Atlantic. It consists of between five and nine ships, each donated by one of NATO's 16 member nations. The command rotates annually.

The force exercises throughout the ocean, showing the NATO flag, keeping tabs on the Soviet navy and in turn showing the Soviets how the Western allies operate their joint defense. In the event of war, it would be the nucleus of a much larger allied fleet.

"It's very important that the Soviet navy sees that we work together, effectively, in one language," says Commodore A. Bruce Richardson of Britain, who assumed command of STANAVFORLANT on April 2.

For STANAVFORLANT, the Thursday War actually begins on a Wednesday.

At dusk, the Brilliant and seven other ships — the destroyer USS Richard E. Byrd and frigates Skeena from Canada, Rheinland Pfalz from West Germany, Weilingen and Jan Van Brakel from the Netherlands, Stavanger from Norway and Commandante Roberto Ivens from Portugal — put into harbor under Portland Bill, a rocky peninsula crowned by a castle built for Henry VIII, father of Britain's navy.

At dawn, the shooting war begins.

First, the Rhineland Pfalz and Jan Van Brakel hoist anchor and slip out into the early morning mist. They play "orange force," the enemy.

The rest of STANAVFORLANT plus a pair of British frigates getting Portland's full shakedown course form an escort to take a High Value Unit — navy jargon for a carrier, troop ship or important commercial vessel — out through a defensive minefield and fend off attacks from surface ships, submarines and planes. The High Value Unit is really a Royal Navy repair ship, Tidespring, like the Brilliant a veteran of the 1982 Falklands War.

The warships steam away from the breakwater in single file and are still hemmed in by the minefield when the first air attack begins. Two Hunter fighters, based at nearby Yeovilton and flown by retired pilots, play the part of Soviet Forger attack planes.

As the vessels emerge from the "minefield" into open water, a helicopter from the Brilliant detects the two "orange" vessels on radar. Two ships from the escort screen, Portugal's Roberto Ivens and Penelope, one of the Royal Navy "workup" ships, are dispatched to deal with the attackers.

Meanwhile, another helicopter, trailing sonar microphones, detects the Royal Navy submarine HMS Oppossum and quickly drops a dummy torpedo into the water.

Ex-French school teacher succeeds in business plan

SCOTTS VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Listening to Philippe Kahn's tales of Silicon Valley, it's easier to imagine him dressed in a robe and wreath while playing a saxophone than addressing prestigious business schools.

He's done both since leaving a humdrum job teaching math in France in 1982 and kissing his wife and kids goodbye to seek riches in the land of venture capital.

His family's together again, but life has changed dramatically for Kahn, now 33.

He's millions of dollars richer — on paper, at least — because of two smash hits on the computer software charts, Turbo Pascal and SideKick. The venture capitalists shunned him, but Kahn made his fortune anyway, working 15 to 20 hours a day designing, packaging and shipping his $49.95 products.

Kahn is founder, president and chief stockholder of Borland International, a 2-year-old company he says recorded $10 million in sales in fiscal 1984 and expects about $30 million this year.

Kahn started his company in true Silicon Valley fashion — in a garage, like Hewlett-Packard and Apple Computer. Aside from that, and an annual salary he says is about $500,000, he has little else in common with other entrepreneurs.

Borland's staff includes a former manager of a Japanese restaurant, who became vice president for operations; a former punk-rock cocktail waitress, who is now director of personnel, and an ex-Campbell soup salesman who heads dealer sales.

"Shipping software or serving food in restaurants are about the same thing," Kahn says. "You laugh, but it's true. You have to keep the customers happy, you've got to serve them on time and the meal has to be good. Otherwise they won't come back."

SideKick, a desktop organizer that puts a calculator, note pad, calendar or phone directory on a computer screen while a word processing program is in use, won raves when it was introduced last June.

Kahn says over 200,000 copies of SideKick have been sold, despite competition from similar products by other companies, including IBM's $149 Topview.

Kahn likes to talk about his early days in the business. He says he cooked up a comic scheme to trick an ad salesman for a trade magazine into thinking he was going to give his business to other magazines. As a result he got the advertising on credit at a special rate.

The ads launched a successful mail-order campaign for Turbo Pascal, software that helps programmers write in the Pascal computer language.

Kahn said he came to the United States with about $5,000 and took a variety of odd jobs with computer companies. He had the idea of selling software cheaply, as little as 10 percent of the going rate of $400 to $600.

"Everybody thought software would succeed only in the business market," he recalls. "My idea was there was a huge market in education. Universities and high schools had just switched to Pascal. That's millions of potential customers who are renewed every year, but nobody recognized it."

A leading market research group said only 20,000 copies of Turbo Pascal might sell in five years, according to Kahn.

"We sold 250,000 in one year," Kahn says. "That program generated probably $7 million in sales in the first year."

His seed money came in a $20,000 loan from his father.

That $20,000 is now worth over $1 million on paper, Kahn says

Kahn entertained guests at a Halloween party last year with a saxophone while dressed in flowing robes and wreath. He performed an encore at a wild, $30,000 bacchanal he threw for 500 guests after the West Coast Computer Faire in April, featuring a trapeze artist, fire juggler, two bands, four men on stilts and a Turbo Olympics with a floppy discus event.

Barbara Walters plans to marry

NEW YORK (AP) — Television newswoman Barbara Walters will wed businessman Marv Adelson in the fall, a spokeswoman says.

The two have known each other for about a year, and plan a bicoastal marriage, with homes in New York and Los Angeles, said Maurie Perl, a spokeswoman for ABC News.

Miss Walters, 53, is co-host of the ABC News "20-20" show and host of her own interview specials.

Woman predicts future women's fashions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Every time Carole Little has an idea, it costs her at least $1,000. One might think that would curb one's imagination, make one think twice before thinking at all.

But not so. Because one of Ms. Little's ideas could make her a million dollars.

Carole Little is a dress designer. There are Carole Little boutiques in Saks and Robinson's and other fancy stores around the country. As a designer, she is neither the littlest nor the biggest, but so far she's been pretty successful in outguessing the unguessable which she says is women in general.

One idea she had about ten years ago made her much more than a million dollars. It made her rich and famous. The idea was a shirt.

But she makes mistakes too. One year she came out with a fine, smooth, high quality linen fashion. It was the same year other designers came out with cheaper Polish linen. When their line didn't move, she and husband Leonard Rabinowitz were able to stop production, but they were caught with $200,000 worth of fine, smooth, high quality linen.

The industry itself has had bombs — miniskirts when they first came out, then midiskirts, the first Nehru jacket, and last fall, the man-tailored look.

So Ms. Little relies on her husband's computerized weekly reports to tell if a given line is moving or not at retail. If it isn't, sometimes they can stop production and think what else to do with the material. Sometimes, because they work a year or more ahead and deal with worldwide production facilities, they cannot.

Sometimes she is able to make changes in the design. Sometimes she decides to try it again later. Let's suppose the idea was a brown knit. The yarn is already bought and paid for. They may decide to offer it again at Christmas, or dye it black for next fall.

They didn't have any of those troubles with that fabled shirt that shot her into the design business in a big way. It started with something she saw on her first trip to Paris, at a little unisex shop on the Left Bank.

America at the time was awash in "throwaway fashion," miniskirts and cutesy clothes.

"I noticed the women in Europe dressed far more sophisticatedly and more like I liked to dress, but they didn't have the million clothes that American women did. They would have a few good outfits and change them around."

Then she saw a man's-type shirt in a little unisex shop and fell in love with it and the ideas it engendered.

It was a chancy guess for an ingenue dress designer.

It was also a critical time in her life. She had divorced, gone back to school she had quit to marry. After school she married Leonard Rabinowitz, a Great Neck, N.Y., boy avoiding his family's business by venturing into clothing sales.

They lived in a two-bedroom apartment in Malibu with "a water bed on the floor and a stereo. We just had a good time. It was fun. It was like playing. Then we decided if we wanted to keep eating, we'd better do something else."

They borrowed $20,000 from Leonard's parents, more from the banks.

Thence Europe and the glorious guess on the shirt.

"It was like an oversized man's shirt. It had epaulets, and a little button here where you could roll up the sleeve and it had pockets and tabs and flaps and it was silk crepe de chine. No one in the United States at that time was doing silk crepe de chine, except the expensive houses."

They put it out in six colors with simple linen pants dyed to match.

"It took off immediately. That shirt, or a variation of it, has been in the line ever since. We call it a signature shirt, because it has become our signature. Back a ways Lauren Hutton used it for something she did, an advertisement I think. The salespeople then started calling it the Lauren Hutton shirt... Jane Fonda did a movie, "China Syndrome." She wore the same shirt and layered it one over the other. That shirt really made a name for us."

One good guess followed another. Today, her and Leonard's firm is doing $40 million at wholesale which converts to $80 million retail, not the biggest by far, but respectable.

C-SPAN watched by millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives crept into Nelda Thompson's life when she happened to catch a live congressional debate while watching television at a friend's house in Los Angeles.

"I would kill to have that," she thought.

In Applegate, Ore., Mrs. Thompson's hometown, there is a general store, a church, a gas station, a few hundred residents — and very poor television reception.

So the 68-year-old grandmother bought a $3,000 satellite dish, and now, like millions of others across the country, she has a ringside House seat via the Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network — C-SPAN.

"It brings the whole world so very close to us," says Mrs. Thompson, a retired journalist. "When I'm home during the day I have it on constantly — except when the Chicago Cubs are on."

Mrs. Thompson is among an estimated 20.5 million viewers who tune in each month to Congress or other government business, which constitutes the sole fare offered by C-SPAN.

Never before have so many people peered so closely into the democratic process, and thousands more have the opportunity each month as more cable companies sign up.

C-SPAN is the ultimate in full exposure: an amalgam of the boring and the compelling, the trivial and the momentous, all of it singularly unadulterated by journalists asking questions or explaining what it all means.

The seven-day-a-week, around-the-clock format features uninterrupted House debate, speeches, House committee hearings, conventions, conferences, seminars, caucuses and call-ins. The Senate has not yet agreed to be televised, but many believe that is just a matter of time.

The House coverage provoked bitter outbursts last year when Democratic Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, annoyed that Republicans were using free air time at the end of each day to lambast his party, ordered C-SPAN cameras to pan the chamber to show viewers that the energetic speakers were addressing an empty House. This year, Democrats are fighting back with after-hours speeches of their own.

In addition to partisan bickering, viewers have been treated to — or subjected to — an evening at an Iowa caucus, floor debate on illegal immigration, and mumbling scientists at an obscure hearing on dioxin. A recent month's lineup included a conference of the Reserve Officers Association, President Reagan's meeting with some Boy Scouts, a seminar on the U.S. Postal Service, and a speech by Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens.

Some view televised proceedings as just one more government reform. But other observers believe C-SPAN is a more potent force.

Washington Post television critic Tom Shales called the network "a crucial, pivotal moment in the life of the newly emerging wired republic." Vilius Brazenas of Bonita Springs, Fla., a Lithuanian immigrant who lived under Nazi and Communist regimes before coming to the United States, told C-SPAN it is "an electronic town meeting of the nation."

Steve Lotterer, a spokesman for the National Republican Congressional Committee, says that last fall, in congressional districts capable of receiving C-SPAN, "the level of involvement was higher and the level of information was certainly higher."

Michael J. Robinson, a social scientist, conducted the only major research to date on C-SPAN. From a survey of 900 cable homes last November, Robinson concluded that C-SPAN is watched in 7.6 million of the 20 million homes it reaches via a non-profit cooperative of cable companies.

With several potential viewers in each home, the survey estimated that 20.5 million people are peering into the democratic process each month. And 20 percent of them are "C-SPAN nuts" addicted to long hours of House politics and personalities.

An essay contest last year on C-SPAN's fifth anniversary attracted 1,000 testimonials from people like Mrs. Thompson and her 18-year-old grandson, Mike Kellington, who submitted a jointly written 46-line poem and won themselves a free trip to last year's Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Other C-SPAN essayists include Donna L. Unfried, a minister in Tucson, Ariz., who says C-SPAN helped her choose her 1984 presidential candidate.

Therese M. Green, a Richmond, Va. housewife, says C-SPAN has saved her from boredom, soap operas and atrophy.

Joyce A. Chippazzi of Erie, Pa., says C-SPAN transformed her from a spectator into "a true citizen of this country."

Mary Ann Crary, a retired Kentucky newspaper reporter, predicted she will soon be "out marching for causes I never dreamed about before I got hooked on C-SPAN."

But these born-again activists are not typical, says Robinson, who is director of the Media Analysis Project at George Washington University in Washington and co-author of a book on news coverage of the 1980 election.

Gravity waves are currently being studied

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — No one's ever seen a gravity wave. No one knows if they exist. But scientists would like to spend $50 million to look for them in the Mojave Desert and the wild blueberry fields of Down East Maine.

These people think very big and vanishingly small. Their scheme: Bury six miles of vacuum tunnels underground a continent apart, then see if they change in length by a fraction of an atom.

Working out the technology involved is at least as hard as it sounds. But if all goes as the scientists hope, they will confirm — or shoot down — a basic prediction of Albert Einstein's general theory of relativity. And they will open a new window on the universe.

Gravity waves (if they exist) are faint echoes of catastrophies long ago and far away in the depths of the universe. Only the most powerful galactic disasters, such as the collapse of stars, could make gravity waves strong enough to be felt on earth.

The search for gravity waves began two decades ago, but so far no one has convincingly captured one. The latest project is sponsored jointly by Massachusetts Institute of Technology and California Institute of Technology. Scientists there are preparing feasibility studies for the National Science Foundation, which they hope will finance a search.

"The main reason for doing this is that we expect it will tell us some very fundamental new things about the universe," says Ronald W.P. Drever of Caltech.

Some of these things are within, if only barely, the realm of the imagination — black holes, for instance. Like gravity waves, they might or might not exist. But if they do, they are crushed stars so dense and with gravity so strong that nothing can escape them, not even light. Anything that passes nearby is sucked in.

They may be in the centers of galaxies. They may be the source of the vast energy thrown out by quasars, the farthest objects in the universe. No matter what, they should give off gravity waves. And the new gravity wave antennas should be able to record them.

"This will probably be the only way you will determine if there are black holes," says Paul Linsay of MIT.

Yet the scientists seem more excited with the idea that their tool will find things even beyond the fancy of theorists.

"There is a lot that we don't know," says MIT's Rainer Weiss. "If one looks with a completely different kind of technique, you will probably find phenomena that you haven't thought about. Almost all of us believe that's what we'll see first."

Of the fundamental forces of nature, gravitation is the weakest — and probably the hardest to understand. Gravity feels like an attracting force. But Einstein's idea is that gravity is a distortion in the geometry of space and time. Waves carry the force of gravity, just as electromagnetic waves carry light.

These waves bend space. The sun, for instance, generates gravity that seems to curve the light from distant stars. Yet the light is following the shortest possible path. Space itself is warped and dimpled like a bumpy rubber sheet.

Planets radiate these gravity waves when they accelerate. So do atoms, butterflies, bowling balls, galaxies and everything else. Yet the gravity waves from all but the most violent cataclysms are too puny to amount to much. In its trip around the sun, the earth radiates only about one kilowatt of gravitational waves.

But something really big should send a ripple of gravity waves through space that will ever-so-slightly distort everything in their path, including the earth and all that's on it.

Recording one of these waves would, of course, prove they exist and confirm a major prediction of Einstein's theory.

"In a sense, you can't lose," says William Press, chairman of astronomy at Harvard. "If you find that they're there, everyone breathes a sigh of relief, and the theory is no longer quite so much a house of cards. Even more exciting is if one finds that something that is expected from the theory in this strong a way is not there. Those are the sorts of major discoveries in science in which the whole house of cards can come tumbling down."

A gravity wave is such an elusive thing that no single antenna can be trusted to find one. The scientists say they need at least two antennas a long way apart to prove that what they've recorded is really a gravity wave and not, say, a jiggle from a passing truck. If the two antennas see the same thing at about the same time, then it's probably a gravity wave.

Even finding places to put the antennas has been a big job, for these are jumbo scientific instruments. Each one will be L-shaped, and each leg of the "L" will be three miles long and perfectly straight.

So the ideal site must be flat. It must have porous, welldrained soil that's good for digging. It must be far away from buses, subways and other sources of mini-earthquakes. Even trees are bad, because their roots shake the ground when the wind blows.

"If you're looking for a straight shot three miles long, turn right, and go straight another three miles, there's almost no place east of the Mississippi," said Peter Saulson of MIT.

In the West, the Caltech researchers have narrowed down the search to two spots in the Mojave Desert of southern California. And in the East, the MIT team is negotiating to buy or lease 40 acres in the wild blueberry fields (known as the barrens) of Columbia, Maine, population 275.

Each antenna will be built inside a large sewer culvert that will be buried under 4 feet of dirt. Inside each leg of the culvert will be a vacuum tube, and inside each tube will be a laser beam.

Success overcomes dowser's skepticism

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Using nothing but a marble on a thread or two bent coat hangers, Robert Humphris says he can find water. Or the winner of a football game. Or whether his wife is home from work yet.

In fact, Humphris, an amateur dowser, says he can find the answer to just about any question he wants to ask.

"The imagination is the limit as to what you can do with dowsing," said Humphris, an engineering professor at the University of Virginia here.

The traditional notion of dowsing, or divining, is a man using a forked tree branch to locate underground streams. That notion, Humphris said, is incomplete.

"Dowsing is the gift or the art of obtaining information with the help of a device," is his definition.

With his array of divining devices, Humphris has searched for — among other things — graves, Zachary Taylor's birthplace and a buried culvert. Using a dowsing rod the way some people use an Ouija board, Humphris has answered questions ranging from "Will it rain here today?" to "Will the Steelers beat the Colts?"

And, of course, he has searched for water. By his count, he's searched for locations for some 350 wells. Only 10 have come up dry, he said.

It is that success rate that has erased Humphris' scientific misgivings about dowsing. Fifteen years after he first lifted a divining rod, he is still not sure why it works. But he knows it works.

"I sure was a skeptic at first," the gray-haired 56-year-old Humphris said while sipping iced coffee at a local seafood restaurant. "I keep having feelings of — 'Here I am a scientist, what am I doing in this area? It just can't work.'

"But just what I have seen has convinced me that there's something there," he said. "I'm convinced now."

Humphris' interest in divining began when his son was taught the art by a plumber for whom he was working. The son introduced dowsing to his father, who was skeptical but intrigued.

Ten years later, Humphris was taking a course in parapsychology when he chose dowsing as the subject of his term paper. His research fascinated him.

"That really got me hooked, because here it was well documented," Humphris said.

Now, he is an amateur dowser, clearly fascinated by the art and anxious to share his enthusiasm. He teaches classes in dowsing. He teaches dowsing to people who hire him, so that they can do the job themselves next time. He has taught dowsing to his family, and they can all dowse — except for his brother and brother-in law, geologists who remain cynical while dowsing.

Humphris said the key to dowsing is in the mind. Anyone who believes he can dowse can learn to dowse.

"Most anybody can do it," said Humphris. "Eight of 10 people can do it right off the bat. If you work at it you gain confidence."

While dowsers in Texas rake in thousands of dollars for locating oil, Humphris makes little profit from his dowsing. He charges only 20 cents a mile and $35 if the well is successful — enough to cover his costs for attending the yearly American Society of Dowsers convention in Danville, Vt.

His work at the university has nothing to do with dowsing and, although he said he would love to research the subject, he said he doubts he could obtain funding.

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Kid Stuff-Look Back-Letters

As another over-excitable newspaper editor used to say, Great Ceasar's Ghost! We thought we'd made a mistake as we read Wednesday's 48 pt. banner headline, "Liverpudlians overwhelmed by guilt."

The story referred to the feelings shared by citizens of Liverpool, England over the recent soccer riot incident involving English and Italian fans.

But we never made it past the lead paragraph, as we beat a path to News Editor Shirley Gorman's desk, the headline in question held out in front of us like an accusation. "What happened?" we inquired.

"Read the body copy," she said. "It's right."

Sure enough, there it was. A reference to the citizens of Liverpool as "Liverpudlians."

Once again, we had been tripped up by the infernal habit some citizens have of referring to themselves based upon where they pay taxes.

For three solid years we refused to refer in print to the citizens of Andrews as "Andrewsans." And we've yet to write a sentence or a headline with the term "Snyderites," although as these things go it's several clicks above Liverpudlians.

We grind our teeth when we ponder the concept of adding those foolish-sounding four and three-letter "isms" to the end of perfectly good names.

In our own mind, we compare it to parsley topping on good steak. Uneaten and unneeded.

There's a whole bunch of these dressups that get our goat. We remember being shown a feature story years ago where the writer had the hero of the piece offering up a cud of wisdom "smilingly."

We made a pencil mark through the word and asked "What's wrong with saying he did it with a smile?"

"But 'smilingly' is only one word. Isn't that tighter writing?"

"Yes, but I read it "gagingly" on the page."

The same deal with the tags people adopt in relation to their hometown.

If you have to, why not go whole hog, and have a male and female descriptive word — Snyderites and Snyderettes? Then you have to include those wee folk, the Snyderitti-bittis.

Our own county could include Hermleighians, Iraanians and Fluvannasaurians. In rapid succession, we've created a religious order, a new Middle Eastern country and a species of prehistoric reptile.

Part of our problem is no one ever seems to use these descriptive doo-dads except in print. For example, to the question, "Where you from?" who replies, "I'm a Lubbockite," although you will see the term with frequency in that city's Avalanche-Journal.

We suspect the origin may be traced to some burned-out copy editor who tried to make "Local resident" fit one too many times into a one-column width. Hence "Localite" was born.

Sorry folks, the whole deal is too "chumpyish" for our tastes.

Commentary

By Don Graff

On visits to Nicaragua during the past several years I have twice had conversations with Sergio Ramirez.

Ramirez was a member of the five-man revolutionary junta from the ouster of the Somoza regime in 1979 until last November, when he was elected vice president on the Sandinista ticket. No professional ideologue, he is a novelist of some note in Central America and, on the evidence of my discussions with him, a reasonable individual with a good grasp of realities.

So I found of more than passing interest his reaction to the flap in the United States over Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's recent trip to Moscow.

It would pass, Ramirez assured the New York Times' man in Managua. Ortega was making other stops in Europe and soon photos of him with French President Francois Mitterrand and Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez would push those with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev out of the news. The American attention span in these matters was short.

Ramirez was wrong. The generally negative reaction in the United States lingers, and to damaging effect for the Sandinistas on Capitol Hill. The Reagan administration, whose bid for $14 million in aid for the contras was blocked by the House on the eve of Ortega's journey, is encouraged to try again for even more.

At this point, it looks like a rare public relations misstep by the Sandinistas. Generally, they have seemed a step or so ahead of the heavy-handed strategists in Washington in making favorable impressions.

They promptly accepted, for example, the proposals drafted by the Contadora nations to reduce Central American tensions, letting Washington put itself in a negative light by refusing to go along. And they consistently took an upbeat public attitude toward the Manzanillo talks, the sporadic meetings in Mexico between special Nicaraguan and American representives. They left it to Washington to bad-mouth the conversations and unilaterally break off contact.

Now, the Sandinistas are looking less reasonable and more fallible, possibly substantiating a prediction by Edward King, a retired U.S. Army officer who has spent much time studying the Nicaraguan situation on the scene. A critic of administration policy but no apologist for the Sandinistas, King sees a good chance that they will make some mistake serious enough to invite an American military response.

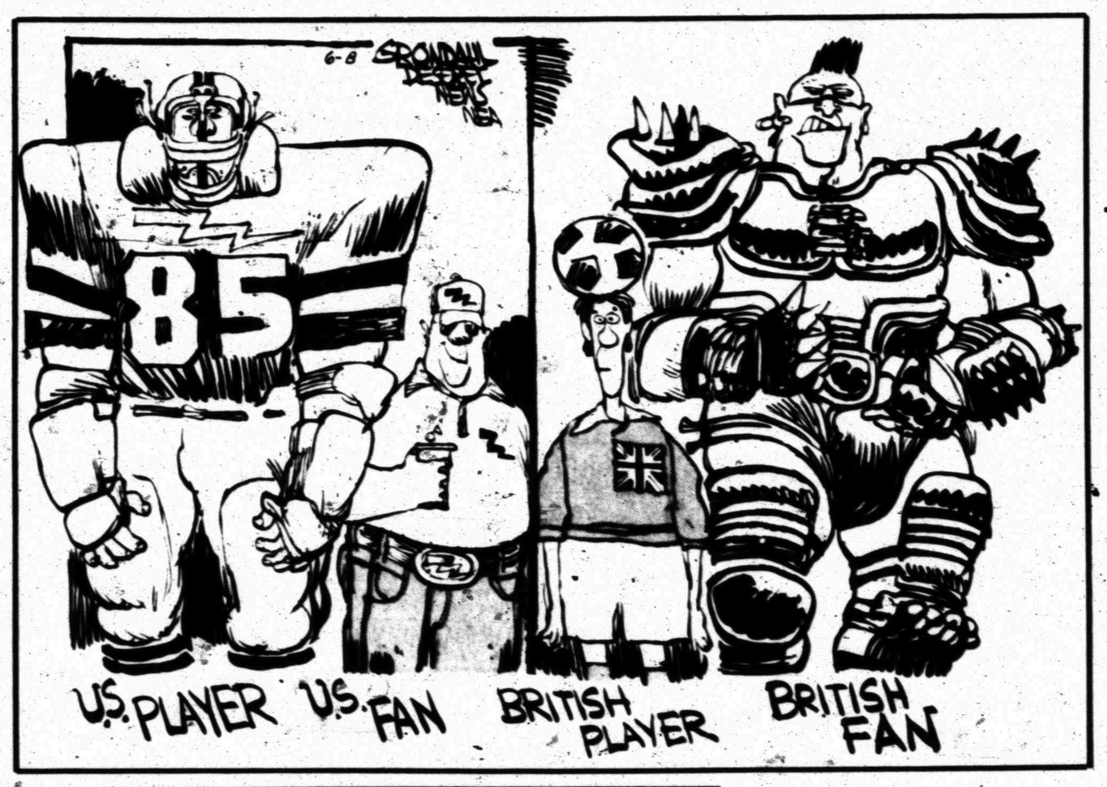

None of the above makes for optimism on the chances of avoiding escalated conflict in Central America. Neither do other developments.

The president has taken to the stump again. And while his theme is unchanged, his language is meaner. Ortega is "a little dictator in green fatigues." The Sandinistas are "sworn enemies of freedom" who cannot be permitted to impose their will on Central America.

In a classified report to Congress in May that leaked to the press, he was more alarmingly explicit on that point. The use of American military force, he advised, "must realistically be recognized as an eventual option in the region, if other policy alternatives fail."

Secretary of State George Shultz used to be the voice of reason on Central America in the administration, urging continued efforts to negotiate. But now he is also talking combat troops to Congress.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes denies an escalation in rhetoric and says it is "dumb" to read plans for military intervention into any of this. But the publicly available evidence doesn't support him.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
June 9

Cogdell Memorial Hospital is once again undergoing an on-site survey through the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH), it was reported Sunday.

It was reported Sunday a new attorney has joined the local firm of Rosser and Armstrong — 25-year-old Joe Worthington.

The Seminole native is a May graduate of the Texas Tech Law School.

Natural causes were ruled in connection with the death of 57-year-old Glenn Merritt, whose body was found Sunday afternoon beside Deep Creek just south of Snyder.

MONDAY
June 10

Snyder's recent sale tax return — reflecting sales here during April — took a one month drop of some 47 percent, a showing that dragged the year-to-date figure down to a minus 14.6 percent, it was reported Monday.

In real dollars, the monthly return of the 1 percent state sales tax equaled $55,370. For the same period last year, the city received a return of $103,726.

Western Texas College trustees employed seven new college staffers for the 1985-86 school year Monday during the regular June session.

In addition, the board met for 45 minutes prior to the regular meeting to discuss the expected revenues and expenses related to "auxiliary" campus operations for 1985-86 and voted to table a request to change the investment firm now used for a supplemental retirement plan offered college staffers.

TUESDAY
June 5

Members of Detachment 2, Company D of the Texas National Guard's 111th Engineers are now completing their annual two-week summer camp, but for some the annual duty involves work right here at home.

It was reported Tuesday that local guardsmen are working as recruiters for their summer camp period as well as a three-man crew who will spend the next two weeks continuing with the Deep Creek cleanup project.

After the resignation of Trustee Lillie Sullivan was accepted "with regret" Tuesday, her fellow board members began work to name a replacement for her to the place 1 seat.

In addition, trustees were offered two comparisons Tuesday — ranking Snyder students beside their fellows statewide as well as a comparison of local achievement against an educational "goal" set by state administrators seven years ago.

In both categories, Snyder students compared favorably for TABS testing conducted here since 1980.

Enrollment at each grade level was projected Tuesday for Snyder ISD — a prediction that has local class sizes in every case but one falling within state-mandated guidelines for 1985-86 regarding teacher-student ratios.

To do this, however, an increase of four to five additional teachers at the elementary level is expected — a staff change involving some $100,000 in district salaries.

WEDNESDAY
June 12

Pete Sterling, 58, of Ira was hospitalized at Cogdell Memorial Hospital Wednesday for injuries sustained in a traffic accident occurring around 10:30 a.m.

Sterling was driving a late model Ford pickup westbound on Farm Road 1606 when he collided with the rear of a Holcomb Well Service tank truck.

THURSDAY
June 13

As the 20th season for the musical "TEXAS" opened, two Snyder graduates were among the cast: Calvin Wimmer, a 1983 graduate of Snyder; and Michael Lynn Everett, a 1984 grad of SHS, it was reported Thursday.

Thursday afternoon and night, city residents were asked to cutback on their water usage as crews worked to complete the installation of a new section of a 21-inch main water line buried beneath the newly cut channel for Deep Creek.

The work involved shutting off the flow of water from Lake J.B. Thomas into the city.

An update on projects planned for Scurry County's celebration of the state's Sesquicentennial was held at noon Thursday. Chairman Charles Anderson presided.

FRIDAY
June 14

The city's main water supply from Lake J.B. Thomas remained shutoff at noon Friday, although service was expected to be restored by mid-afternoon.

The main water valve from Thomas was closed around 8 p.m. Thursday as workers prepared to connect a new 500 ft. section of 21-inch main water line.

FIVE YEARS AGO

C.S. "Buck" Cochran was named King for a Day for 1980 today — June 15. Cochran was named winner of the Father's Day contest sponsored by the Tejas Cowbelles and Snyder Daily News on the basis of letters written by relatives to nominate candidates for the honor.

"Earliest" award winners at the Fluvanna Homecoming this weekend included: Tom Squires, earliest graduate (1916); Mildred Mathis, earliest teacher (1920); Joe Glass, earliest superintendent (1948); and Wallace Jones, earliest school board member (1927). Approximately 750 people attended the event.

10 YEARS AGO

The era of two junior high schools in Snyder officially came to an end Tuesday night — June 10 — when SISD trustees voted to seek bids for the demolition of the old main building at Travis Junior High School on 26th St. In other action related to the closing of the school, the board also voted to officially rename Lamar Junior High on El Paso Ave. Snyder Junior High School.

15 YEARS AGO

Officials of the Santa Fe Railroad today — June 16 — announced the promotion of Avon Rushing of Snyder to the position of agent for the local operations. Rushing, who has 22 years with the railroad, has served as relief agent and operator at the local depot for the past 9½ years.

20 YEARS AGO

Midshipman first class Michael P. Reed of Snyder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Reed of Snyder, graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland today — June 9. Reed is a 1961 graduate of Snyder High School and will receive the bachelor of science degree from the service academy.

A symbolic passing of the keys took place this morning — June 11 — as officials of the Humble Oil and Refining Co. transferred ownership of the old Humble district office building on 37th St. to the Snyder Independent School District.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The red carpet was rolled out at the Rock Ledge Farm Friday for the Old Settlers Tea in Fluvanna. Guests drove into the compound, left their cars for chauffeured parking and walked up the red carpet to be welcomed by Mrs. Edith McKanna and other pioneer family members.

Guests visited throughout the lovely home which contained many antiques and momentoes of Mrs. McKanna's world travels. Visitors received refreshments from the formally laid table in the dining hall or made their way to the garden and patio areas. Refreshments there were served from chuck wagons and stands which were dotted among the patio tables and chairs.

Live music was provided by local talent from the patio band stand. A square dance team danced as Sleepy Browning called.

More than 300 hundred guests attended from nine states.

It was a lovely day and a lovely occasion.

We would like to thank those who worked so hard to make it a special day and to thank all those that came to celebrate with us.

See you in five years!

Refugee relates early life in native country

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years ago, Daniel walked almost 250 miles across the Ethiopian desert to the Sudan in a quest for freedom and a better life. Today he considers himself lucky to be a janitor in a Manhattan skyscraper.

He knew he could be killed by soldiers, highwaymen, the blazing sun, even the guides he had paid about $450 to lead him out.

Daniel, 19 at the time, walked about 14 days in all, frightened, he admits now, but more frightened by the prospect of a lack of freedom if he stayed in Addis Ababa.

"Since I started knowing myself, when I was 13 or so, I knew I did not want to live this way," comments Daniel, who says he spent six months in an Ethiopian prison because of his political beliefs and does not want to be identified. "You had to go to the Communist organization every Saturday and Sunday. There was no privacy. Your life was always at risk.

"If something happened at the school, they may come and put you in prison whether you did it or not. I did not want to live that way. I wanted to be free to work where I wanted to work, to study what I wanted to study, so I decided to walk to freedom."

Daniel, who now lives in a tough section of the Bronx and works as a maintenance man at night in a high-rise building, says he was not tortured or mistreated while in prison.

"Some members of the Army are sympathetic," he says. "They don't want to be there either."

Daniel is one of an estimated 15,000 Ethiopian refugees in the United States and part of an overall Ethiopian population here that some estimate as high as 45,000. The United States began granting refugee status to Ethiopians in 1980.

Some students and others in this country for other reasons were allowed to stay after the overthrow of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Ethiopian refugee centers in the United States say that victims of the drought and famine have not yet migrated to this country. Hardship alone does not qualify a person for political asylum, immigration officials say. An individual, like Daniel, must show that he would be persecuted for political reasons were he to return.

Daniel says he was also lucky in finding an organization that helped him get a job once he got to the United States.

That was Wildcat Service Corporation, a non-profit work program that began in 1972 and has worked with chronically unemployed people with histories of drug addiction, crime, welfare dependency and lack of education. In the past few years, the organization has been helping refugees as well.

By the time they find Wildcat, the refugees already have learned that the streets of America are not paved with the proverbial gold.

"I had applied for jobs, but no one would hire me," says Daniel. I got four days of work doing carpentry, but that was it."

Daniel saves as much money as he can and plans to attend college in Buffalo, N.Y., this fall to study history and maybe eventually become a writer.

Wildcat operates throughout the five boroughs of New York City and most jobs are clerical, or in construction and renovation, security services, painting or entry level jobs of other kinds. Many are with city agencies and the new Wildcat workers are supervised by fulltime employees of Wildcat, men and women who also had to learn their work skills slightly late in life.

There are about 20 refugees in the Wildcat program, including Ethiopians, Afghanistans, Cambodians, Vietnamese, Haitians and Cubans.

Brother Thomas Murray, a Franciscan who works with Wildcat, says most of the refugees are good workers.

"They will work late, show up before the employer, and, in general, their attendance and punctuality is remarkable," he says.

Your Birthday

June 16, 1985

Be alert in the year ahead for enterprises or ventures that could produce a second source of income. These will be things you can do in conjunction with your present activities. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is one of those days where you won't appreciate having others tell you what to do or when to do it. Beat them to the punch and set the agenda yourself. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't fret or become overly dismayed today if you find yourself in a tight situation. Conditions will switch to your advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) To derive the utmost pleasure today, you require companions who don't take themselves or life too seriously. Seek out the free spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's not likely that you'll be numbered among the losers today. Should fate close one avenue on you, she'll quickly open up another.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be an attentive listener. Someone may say something in your presence today that will be worth remembering and useful to you at a later date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Financial manipulations will be your strong suit today. Where dollars and cents are at stake, it'll be hard to put anything over on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Partnership situations will be fortunate for you today, whether you are teamed up for commercial or social purposes. Seek strong allies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unless you spend your time productively today, you're apt to end up feeling your hours have been wasted. Do useful things that keep your head and hands busy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Make today a complete pleasure break. Focus on fun activities and do not permit anything mundane to seep into the picture.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your place could be the most popular gathering spot for others today. Family members as well as close pals might unexpectedly drop in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Select the type of activities today that aren't too demanding or tightly structured. You require freedom and space.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's possible for you to reap material gains from two different areas today. However, it will require cleverness on your behalf to bring them into being.

June 17, 1985

Ways and means will present themselves in the year ahead to enable you to do more traveling for fun than you have been able to do in quite some time. You're not apt to go back to the same place twice. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Anxieties and doubts regarding someone you hope to impress are unfounded. In fact, you will be a smashing success. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Madame Fortune will look upon you favorably in your financial dealings today, provided you don't press your luck too far. Use your common sense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't have preconceived negative opinions regarding your social activities today. What you think may be a bummer could turn out to be fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're apt to be luckiest today in arrangements where you are not involved with people with whom you have strong emotional ties. Maintain your objectivity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Early indicators may make it appear as if the odds are stacked against you today. However, these conditions will rapidly change for the better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Tenacity has its merits, but today you will find that being a bit flexible at the proper time will work out better for you than trying to adhere to a rigid line.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) People you associate with today might not comply with the standards you establish for yourself. Don't lower yours just to appease them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your material prospects look encouraging today. Something you've been working on that has been a financial drain will start showing a profit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try to play life as if it were a game today, regardless of the circumstances. You could be exceptionally lucky in matters where you don't let yourself feel overwhelmed.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Have faith in your abilities today to make things ultimately come out to your satisfaction. Once you envision positive results, you'll take the right measures.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A friend who has been lucky for you still has the same magic. Today he or she will help correct a negative development.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Profit is a possibility in an enterprise where you operate independently. However, the opposite might be true in joint involvements.

TOKYO (AP) — "The Farrah Fawcett style," the woman ordered the hairdresser. But after the job was done, the customer grumbled that her freshly coiffed tresses didn't even resemble the look of the lionmaned actress.

High technology has put an end to all that, contends Tetsuya Taya, president of Beauty Taya Co. Using the latest gadgetry, his white-walled Tokyo beauty parlor lets customers see exactly how they'll look — before the stylists ever touch their hair.

"The world of beauticians will be surrounded by hightech," says Taya, who predicts customers of the future will have their hair shampooed by robots and age spots removed by lasers.

The 44-year-old entrepreneur outfitted one of his ten shops with a new $7,000 device that combines a camera, copier, television monitor and videodisc player.

First, the customer leafs through a catalog and chooses several from a selection of 300 hairstyles, many of them based on those favored by international celebrities such as Princess Diana and singer Sheena Easton to Japanese songstresses Seiko Matsuda and Mizue Takada.

Dear Abby

Lesson in Thrift Earns Reward For Both Son and Proud Father

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As a father, I made a lot of mistakes (my son is now 14), but I know I did at least one thing right, and I'd like to share it with you.

When my son was 3 years old, I started giving him an allowance of 50 cents a week. There was one catch—he could spend 25 cents on anything he wanted, but the other 25 cents he had to put in his piggy bank. He could spend his piggy bank savings any way he wanted, but only after it reached $10.

Each week he spent his 25 cents on candy and gum, but he never really thought much about his savings—until he got his first $10. When he realized what he could get if he saved up his money, he began saving all his allowance.

Every year on his birthday, his allowance was increased 50 cents, so he had 25 cents more he had to save. Also the amount he had to save increased $10.

He now has his first after-school job, and he's saving for a set of drums and a school trip to France.

I have never talked to him directly about the virtues of saving, but he saves money like no other teen-ager I know.

PROUD SEATTLE POPPA

DEAR POPPA: You have a right to be proud—of yourself, as well as your son.

You gave your son a gift that will last him a lifetime: a lesson in the value of saving.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this in your column for Father's Day. Many people could profit from it. I am 42 and it has already helped me to be a better person.

G.J.F., LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR G.J.F.: With pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: My father wrote to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. (You reprinted it twice on request.) My father had it framed, and when we brought him here last year to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might get damaged or lost.

When he heard that his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, "What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more posted on a bulletin board in a high school."

Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write and ask you to run it once more. He died one week ago today (72), so I hope you will print it once more in memory of my beloved father. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person in the world. I could always find the time to go everywhere else, but never time to go visit Mom and Dad. They sat at home alone and loved me just the same. It's too late now to give them those few hours of happiness. I was too selfish and too busy to give. Now when I go to their graves and see the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them when they were alive. I pray to God that those who still have their parents to visit, do so, and show their love and respect while there is still time, for it's later than you think.

TOO LATE"

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Young refugee said promising artist

By JIM NAGEL
St. Paul Dispatch
& Pioneer Press

LAKEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — Between the ages of 8 and 12, after the Khmer Rouge takeover in Cambodia, Chhomrith Un was a slave laborer in the jungles and rice paddies of his native country.

Now Un, an 18-year-old senior at Lakeville High School, is documenting the cruel and inhumane acts he witnessed in oil paintings that are winning awards, although he recognizes that the works won't end up on many living room walls.

In all his paintings, Un tries to document life as he sees it. As a result, some of his paintings depict torture and murder. However, others show less violent childhood scenes or serene views of refugee life in America.

Un won his first art contest while in a refugee camp in Thailand, and his painting titled "The Killing Fields of Cambodia" recently took top honors in the 1985 Minnesota Regional Scholastic Art Awards competition. It is one of his most graphic paintings, showing a refugee being beaten with a spiked club.

The first murder Un witnessed took place in a rice field behind his parents' farm after Khmer Rouge revolutionaries took over Cambodia in 1975.

"Three guerrilla soldiers said they were taking a man to court," Un recalled in an interview. "When the man protested that the rice field wasn't the way to court, they shot him with an M16 rifle. The bullet went into his jaw, making a small hole, and came out under his arm."

Un described the exit hole with his hands, forming an area as big as a large grapefruit.

The soldiers then ordered bystanders to bury the victim, he said, adding that it was one of the cleanest killings he witnessed following the Khmer Rouge takeover.

Later, as the revolutionaries began decimating the Cambodian population, death often was a slow and painful process, Un said, with guerrilla soldiers using torture to make examples of their victims. Un's pictures are gruesome tales of beating deaths and beheadings. Deaths often followed mutilation.

START FIGHTING TARTAR TODAY...

Accepted COUNCIL on DENTAL THERAPEUTICS AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION

Once, the only way to fight tartar was to go to your dentist twice a year and have him scrape it off your teeth. Unlike soft, sticky plaque, tartar is hard and crusty. So while brushing with any toothpaste could help remove plaque, no toothpaste could help stop tartar. Until now...

Now, revolutionary new Tartar Control Crest helps keep unsightly tartar from building up between dental visits, while it continues to fight cavities with Fluoristat.®
