The Rev. Tommy Brown of Dallas continues his westward trek toward Midland and beyond — with Los Angeles, Calif., the goal of his spiritual journey.

On the road to L.A.: Walking for the Lord

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

From six miles east of Midland, the late evening sun broods over the skyline of the city much as the spirit of God must have hovered over the Genesis waters at the dawn of time.

Headed straight toward that blazing orb on this day as though its ever-westward trek across the sky is symbolic of his own spiritual journey, a husky man hikes briskly along U.S. Highway 80 as his burnt orange poncho flaps in the wind. But he is no ordinary vagabound wandering aimlessly along the nation's network of highways with the only lure the hope of another easy handout or cheap bottle of wine, for his steps are filled with meaning, purpose, destiny.

The goal is a lofty one for this 30-year-old man with dark eyes veiled by sunglasses and slight growth of beard: he is tramping for the Lord.

This day, a Friday, marks day 10 for the Rev. Tommy Brown of Dallas in a 51-day spiritual saga that he hopes will take him from his native Dallas to Los Angeles, and in doing so "make straight the path" for his congregation to journey across "Big D" to a different and better setting.

TRAFFIC ROARS PAST AND the setting sun leaves an ever-increasing chill in the air as a reporter pulls to a halt beside the tramping reverend, gets out, and begins walking with him his spiritual sojourn westward. He greets the reporter and photographer with a handshake and a smile that reveals a gold-capped front tooth.

"I'm doing a walk-a-thon for my church, the Metropolitan AME in Dallas," he says, as his blue sneakers beat out a rhythmic pattern against asphalt like a snare drummer. "We're trying to relocate it."

Brown, an associate pastor, explains in detail as guard rails with reflectors move along the bar-ditch like an army on march. The present 35-year-old Metropolitan AME building is downtrodden, crowded, confined. The congregation has its eyes on a building across town that itself has seen a journey of a much different kind: from a church sanctuary to a Bonanza steakhouse to a seafood restaurant. Now, Metropolitan AME wants religious meaning to fill it again rather than the wafting odors of shrimp and T-bones.

But all things have a price. That for relocation of Metropolitan AME to its proposed new site is $20,000 to $30,000 — and Brown is bound and determined that his journey of 1,443 miles across an entire continent will reap enough in pledges to cover that amount.

So far, he says, his walk-a-thon has attracted pledges ranging from one-cent to $15 a mile, in addition to outright contributions. One donation assumed special meaning to him, despite the fact it amounted only to 23 cents: coming on the day he departed Dallas Nov. 26, it represented the last funds the donor had in the world.

The 23 cents became a symbol to Brown of the type of generosity he hopes will enable Metropolitan AME to buy the building on a cash basis. And should the congregation succeed, "the cup of kindness" will spill over to those in need. "With the money we'll save on interest, we can feed 50 to 75 people three days a week," Brown says hopefully.

The husband and father of three, who sacrificed the joys of spending the holiday season with his family to yield to a divine summoning to "hit the road," has no doubts his walk-a-thon is guided by the hand of the Lord. "The idea just came to me; it was something the Lord put in my head," he says, adding that "it's kinda like Noah's Ark": each step he takes is like another plank of wood laid into the vessel that was to save God's people.

> "I'm sure not gonna walk back, I'll tell you that. And my body's not gonna be ready for a long ride back either. No, I'm just gonna fly back to Dallas."

And Brown's steps are carrying him steadily toward his destination. He spent Thursday night in Big Spring, Friday night in Midland, and Saturday night — well, it all depends on how far his hooves carry him.

"I'VE BEEN DOING ON THE average 30 miles per day, depending on how far it is between towns," he says, never breaking the rhythmic pattern of his stride. "I could probably do more but I've got to take care of these feet. I haven't got a corn or a blister yet...I'm in perfect shape. I played football four years, baseball six years, and I don't think I felt as good then as a young man as I do now."

Brown didn't just launch forth onto a 1,500-mile hike on impulse — he engaged the help of former Dallas Cowboy running back Duane Thomas in toning up his muscles and learning to stretch properly. Furthermore, shortly before initiation of his super-marathon, he undertook a trial hike

43 miles between Fort Worth and Dallas as well as making shorter treks for conditioning.

The reverend, who sports an orange and white "Longhorn" toboggan, hikes without a pack and relies on a friend in a van to arrange essential matters such as finding lodging and providing food and water. Often, says Brown, his associate is able to obtain free motel rooms once the nature of his walk-a-thon is made known.

But the real legwork is left up to the reverend, and it is along the highways that his pilgrimage reaches its heights of spirituality or plunges into the depths of loneliness. "You know, it gets kinda lonesome out here sometimes not having anybody to talk to," he says.

A SEMI SUDDENLY STORMS PAST, leaving in its wake a great gust of wind that unfurls Brown's poncho like a sail at full mast. The force drives him forward, uplifts his spirit. "They help me out a lot," he quips, nodding toward the receding 18-wheeler. "I picked up about seven steps on that one."

The chill of late fall and early winter often dims the wanderlust inherent in many true drifters, and Brown admits that several persons tried to talk him out of his great adventure. But he would hear nothing of it.

"When God tells you to do something, you better do it right then," he says above the thunder of passing traffic. "I've been in a little rain, but other than that, the weather's been just bee-yoo-ti-ful!"

While he has been vicitimized by occasional uncomplimentary shouts from passing motorists, the Dallas minister says he has experienced no real trouble so far. And even with the knowledge that the farther west he treks the more rugged and remote the terrain becomes, he harbors no fears for his personal safety.

"I KNOW GOD'LL TAKE CARE of me because for every step I've taken, He'll have taken a hundred," he says, his eyes filled with faith.

Nor does he have any doubts but that he will reach Los Angeles in early January. "If I'm not there in 41 days," he notes, continuing his brutal pace into the sunset, "it'll be because I'll have gotten there sooner."

And what happens when he reaches a point where the sun no longer sets behind cities or desert or mountains, but rather sinks into the gleaming waters of the Pacific Ocean itself?

Libya hit teams alarm Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan personally expressed concern Friday over intelligence reports that a terrorist squad trained in Libya has entered the United States on a mission to assassinate him or other government leaders.

A day earlier, Reagan ordered Secret Service escorts for his three top aides. Security officials, who have taken the purported threat seriously for more than a week, already had tightened the protection of the president, Vice President George Bush and Cabinet officials.

These officials are known to be concerned about the possibility of an armed attack against the president or an attempt to blow up his plane with a surface-to-air missile. There also are fears that terrorists might try to hit his armored limousine with a rocket-propelled grenade or some other projectile.

"Obviously, you have to be concerned about all the people that have been named in this," Reagan said, referring to published reports that a five-man "hit team" from Libya was already on the prowl.

ASKED IF HE TOOK the purported plot seriously, the president replied:

"I think you have to. I think it's safe to say that in any security case, even sometimes when security gets what they think is a crank call, they can't take that for granted."

Ever since the attempt on Reagan's life last March 30, security has been tightened. In recent weeks it has grown even stiffer because of the alleged Libyan plot, and "You can expect to see it get tighter," according to an authoritative source who asked not to be named.

A senior administration official, speculating on the reason behind the alleged plot, said there have been two recently published reports alleging the United States was involved in planning for the assassination of Khadafy. "There is absolutely no factual basis for either one," said the official.

"They may well have helped to stir some of the Libyan activities we now see," added the official, who declined to be identified.

Asked if Reagan were considering curtailing public appearances, the source said, "It's moving in that direction."

TALKING WITH REPORTERS after a bill-signing ceremony, Reagan said he has had no contact with Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy, who was enraged when U.S. planes shot down two Libyan jets in a dogfight last August.

"I think he figures I'm concerned," Reagan said, adding, "As you know, I hope you understand, we don't talk about security measures and situations of this kind."

News executives were summoned to the White House on Friday and asked not to report specific security measures used in protecting the president and others. But some of those steps, such as the addition of an anti-sniper team to his motorcades, already are a matter of public record.

In a statement after the meeting with news executives, the White House said, "The purpose of the meeting was to request restraint in reporting and televising specific measures utilitized in the protection of the president and others. We ask all organizations to show similar restraints."

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes refused to comment on any aspect of the rumored plots or the heightened security arrangements.

An authoritative source said there was deep concern in the administration recently about a tip that an attempt would be made on Reagan's life when he left the White House on Nov. 18 for a speech at the National Press Club. Security was beefed up for the appearance and no attempt was made.

At least two informants, long regarded as credible, have provided details of the alleged Libyan plot to government agents, the source said.

The source, saying it would be easy for anyone to slip into the United States from Canada, indicated that law enforcement officials have to assume that a terrorist team actually is in the country.

The informant reportedly told the government he helped train assassination teams in Libya and worked on the preparation of specific plans to attack Reagan and others, the newspaper said.

Unemployment rate hits six-year high of 8.4%

WASHINGTON (AP) — A surge in pre-Christmas layoffs propelled the national unemployment rate to a six-year high of 8.4 percent in November, as a deepening recession left 9 million people out of work.

The Labor Department reported Friday that jobless rolls increased by 484,000 last month, driving the unemployment rate from 8 percent in October to the highest level since the recession period of October 1975.

President Reagan, asked by a reporter if he were alarmed by the steep rise as the holiday season approaches, replied, "I'd be alarmed if it were only half that."

"MAYBE ALARMED ISN'T the proper word to be used here," Reagan added, explaining that his economic advisers expected a weakening economy at this time.

But the president said he remains confident his policies would restore the economy to health and put people back to work.

"Having grown up and entered the work force in the depths of the Great Depression, I can assure you that I do not take unemployment lightly," he said. "It's a very great tragedy for the people involved."

Reagan spoke with reporters in between meetings with his advisers on plans for further budget cuts, which critics say are contributing to the nation's unemployment.

Opponents of Reagan's economic program also contend he intentionally led the nation into a worsening recession to wrestle down inflation through tight-credit.

"This is the price you have to pay for bringing down inflation," Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said. "We feel that the proper measures are in place to put the economy back on track and that unemployment will begin to abate sometime next year."

A LITTLE MORE THAN a month ago, administration officials were predicting that unemployment was unlikely to exceed 8 percent this year.

"The Reagan economic program has been and is a disaster," charged House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. "Its promise of new jobs, new investment and rising productivity is a cruel hoax."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the president's program "is producing thousands of layoff slips just in time for Christmas" and threatens to aggravate already bad economic conditions.

"What we do not need ... is an administration that plays Santa Claus for the wealthy and Scrooge for average families, the needy and the working men and women of America," Kennedy said.

Tafoya found guilty on least severe charge

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Eugene Tafoya, a decorated veteran accused of trying to assassinate a Libyan dissident on orders of Col. Moammar Khadafy, was convicted Friday of third-degree assault and conspiracy.

The nine-woman, three-man Larimer District Court jury deliberated more than 16 hours over three days before deciding on the least severe of the guilty options available to it.

The 46-year-old former Green Beret had been charged with attempted first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the Oct. 14, 1980, shooting of Faisal Zagallai, a Colorado State University student.

Tafoya admitted the shooting but said he acted in self-defense. He said he had gone to Zagallai's apartment on behalf of the CIA to warn him against making radio broadcasts and that he fired two shots at Zagallai's head only after the student pulled a gun on him,

The CIA denied that Tafoya was working on its behalf, and defense attorneys portrayed him as a patriot deserted by his country.

The conviction carries a maximum sentence of two years in jail. Tafoya has been in jail more than seven months in lieu of $500,000 bond and that time could be deducted. Attempted first-degree murder is punishable by up to 12 years.

TAFOYA, DRESSED IN THE same blue blazer he had worn throughout the trial was impassive as District Court Judge J. Robert Miller read the verdict.

Outside the courtroom, Zagallai, 35, spoke to reporters with his wife, Farida, saying he thought it was a "shocking" verdict that would increase terrorism in the United States.

"I think there is a hidden hand behind this whole goddamned trial," said Zagallai, who has campaigned against the policies of Khadafy, the Libyan strongman. "The decision was prejudiced. The defense didn't have one single evidence to support his theory."

Zagallai did not elaborate on what he meant by "hidden hand."

Scott Robinson, one of the two defense lawyers, called the verdict a "major victory." He said the third-degree assault conviction was justified because Tafoya "intended to rough him up, to slap him around. He said as much."

Juror Gene Webb, 31, said the jurors believed Tafoya was working for the Libyan government and had planned to "rough up" Zagallai when he went to his apartment.

JURY FOREMAN GARY Thornberg said the jury believed "there was a conspiracy but we didn't know what to do with it. We ruled out self defense because we decided there had been a conspiracy."

"We felt we could not go further than we did in the charges," he said. "We ended up believing only parts of the testimony of each."

Immediately after the verdict, Miller reduced Tafoya's bond to $5,000. He said he would schedule sentencing and called attorneys for both sides into his chambers, then dismissed court.

The first time the panel entered the courtroom to deliver the verdict, Thornberg neglected to sign three of the five verdict forms and the jury was sent back to the deliberation room to complete the verdict process.

During the brief intermission, Robinson threw his arm around Tafoya and Robinson's law clerk, Chris Miranda, brought out a Colorado statute book in which the defense team looked up the sentences while waiting for the formal decision of the jury.

AFTER DELIBERATING Wednesday and Thursday, the jury had apparently become stymied on legal definitions of charges listed in the instructions, Robinson said.

Zagallai was shot twice in the head with Tafoya's .22-caliber revolver and lost sight in one eye, but survived the attack.

Tafoya, who was decorated for valor in Vietnam, testified that he delivered what he believed to be a CIA warning for Zagallai to stop broadcasting his views to the Mideast when the Libyan pulled a semi-automatic pistol from beneath a sofa cushion and threatened him.

Tafoya said he went to Zagallai's apartment posing as an interviewer for IBM.

Collins brings campaign to Midland

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

While urging reductions in welfare programs and elimination of foreign aid, U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, R-Dallas, on Friday told the news media that "Social Security is the most important financial plan we have."

Collins, a 12-year congressman, visited Midland on his campaign to win the Republican nomination for U.S. Senate — the seat currently held by Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat. A news conference was held in the home of Jess Ann Thomason, Collins' regional coordinator.

Also seeking that seat on the Republican ticket is State Sen. Walter Mengden, a man whom Collins feels he can beat with a $600,000 campaign.

Social Security, claimed Collins, "should be maintained as a separate financial institution apart from the general revenues." He contended that with everyone working and paying 7 percent, and the employers paying 7 percent, the fund can be maintained.

However, he would like to see changes with the first being the elimination of college students who receive Social Security payments while attending college. "They should work their way through college," he said.

Balancing the budget is Congress' primary concern, and to accomplish that goal there should be a major cutback in social welfare programs, Collins said. The first of these programs to be reduced should be food stamps and, again, college students should be eliminated from this assistance.

"More money in the food bill goes for food stamps than to farmers," Collins noted.

He also advocated "doing away with the Department of Energy and Department of Education."

"Education standards have gone down" since the department was instituted. "Student achievement tests have dropped 10 percent," he added.

Taking a jab at Bentsen, Collins said the Democratic incumbent voted in favor of the Department of Energy. And the Republican described the energy agency as spending more money than the industry which produces the oil and gas.

Foreign aid, he continued, "is the most wasteful of any type of expenditure we have. You don't buy friends."

However, later he acknowledged he is concerned about the growing unrest in the Central American countries and criticized Bentsen's vote for "giving away the Panama canal."

> "President Reagan has courage and common sense. The president understands the energy situation perfectly. But he can't do anything until the liberals are out of Congress."

He also claimed Bentsen voted to give aid to Nicaragua and the money eventually found its way into communist hands. He wouldn't be opposed to giving military training to soldiers from the Central American countries.

"We can't afford not to let El Salvador have a free, independent country," he added.

Collins advocates a strong military defense posture and said that can be maintained if the country cuts the social programs and diverts the money into defense. The Republican is "very much committed to missiles and I would like to see a lot of short-range missiles."

Focusing on the country's economy and the budget, Collins said, "For 27 years Congress has been dominated by Democrats. All the spending has originated with liberal Democrats in the House.

"President Reagan has courage and common sense," he continued, saying that the president "understands the energy situation perfectly. But he can't do anything until the liberals are out of Congress."

And Collins contended that the majority party in the House controls the outcome of bills introduced while the minority party, which is the Republican, can work on amendments.

Looking ahead to the general election next year, Collins said he is confident he can beat Bentsen. Saying that the Democrat's followers consist mostly of welfare recipients and special interest groups, Collins asked, "Who determines elections? It's the middle class and Bentsen doesn't have them."

He has hired Art Finkelstein of New York as a consultant, a man that Collins called "the best."

Because of no presidential election next year, Collins is gambling that the senate race will be top news and that is where he expects to get name recognition.

"Finkelstein told me that it really looks good, that I have a winnable race," Collins said.

Crosson, Dearie await sentencing

James Monroe "Cowboy" Crosson, 36, a captured federal fugitive, and David Kent Dearie, 30, a parolee who posed as an Internal Revenue Service agent, are to be sentenced at noon on Dec. 23 in federal court in Midland by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Crosson, an Odessan who had been a federal fugitive for three months after he sawed his way out of the Midland City Jail last June, was captured last September. He was awaiting transfer to a federal penitentiary to serve two five-year consecutive sentences on a drug conviction at the time he and three others escaped from the federal section of the jail. Crosson pleaded guilty to escape.

Dearie, of San Diego, Calif., pleaded guilty to assaulting an IRS inspector last Oct. 15 in Midland after the agent, Martin Ilacqua of Dallas, had approached Dearie to ascertain his IRS credentials.

Both Crosson and Dearie are being held in the Midland City Jail. Neither is eligible for bail.

Warmer weather expected

Despite cooler temperatures the past couple of days, Midlanders need not worry about bracing themselves for winter's onslaught quite yet, as the National Weather Service is expecting warming conditions this weekend.

The high today should reach the mid-60s and on Sunday the upper 60s, considerably above the high of 58 recorded Friday.

The low of 32 degrees experienced early Friday should not be repeated tonight, as a low in the mid-30s is expected.

Friday's temperature extremes compare with the alltime extremes for the date of 85 in 1954 and 18 in 1950.

Winds are expected to be southerly at 10-15 mph today.

Police investigate burglaries

Midland police Friday investigated the burglary of a convenience store and two auto burglaries.

Some $600 was taken in the break-in of a 7-Eleven store at C Street and Indiana sometime Thursday night or early Friday. Entry was gained through a southwest front window, according to a police report.

Sound equipment valued at $700 was taken in the burglary of an auto at 2100 Neely. Earl Baldridge of that address reported the loss.

Marvin Witcher of 1904 Midland Drive told police 12 knives were taken in the burglary of his vehicle early Friday.

Reagan loosens CIA safeguards

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan loosened on Friday the domestic safeguards imposed by two predecessors to keep the CIA and other intelligence agencies from abusing civil liberties, saying he wants "to remove the aura of suspicion" surrounding their missions.

Reagan's order includes new authority for the Central Intelligence Agency to collect "significant" foreign intelligence inside the United States, and gives it the right to conduct covert domestic operations if they are not intended to influence U.S. policies or politics.

However, Reagan said that under the new guidelines "no intelligence agency of the United States ... will be given the authority to violate the rights and liberties guaranteed to all Americans by our Constitution and laws."

The order replaces one signed by President Carter in January 1978, which the Reagan administration had criticized as unduly hampering U.S. intelligence activities. Carter's order had loosened restrictions that had been imposed by President Ford.

Reagan said the revised rules were needed to "provide America's intelligence community with clearer, more positive guidance and to remove the aura of suspicion and mistrust that can hobble our nation's intelligence efforts."

Although expanding the CIA's role inside the United States, the executive order does so on a much more limited scale than Reagan administration officials proposed in three earlier drafts, which leaked to the press beginning last March and were sharply criticized in Congress.

Despite the changes, Rep. Donald Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of a House Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional rights, criticized the new order for putting "the CIA back in business in the United States with no oversight and a secret budget."

But Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and acting chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said "It appears that the president has accepted the advice" offered by his panel, which had been critical of the earlier drafts.

Walking for the Lord: On the road to L.A.

"I'm sure not gonna walk back, I'll tell you that," he says, a grin creasing the corners of his mouth. "And my body's not gonna be ready for a long ride back either. No, it's gonna be just like that song: 'Fly Like an Eagle.' It don't matter which airline, Continental, Texas International or whatever. I'm just gonna fly like an eagle back to Dallas."

And, his frame silhouetted against the fiery orb dropping down against the maze of skyscrapers ahead, his legs carry him out of sight on up the road toward his spiritual destiny.

Clements finally gives deposition in redistricting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, finally giving the deposition he fought for two weeks, Friday told lawyers he was one of the few people not armed with maps and pencils during the "redistricting fiasco."

"Everybody around this Capitol building had a map and they would wear out several pencils drawing lines. I'm the only person in the state Capitol who didn't do this. I never drew a map. I never drew a line on a map," Clements said.

The governor spent about two hours answering questions from lawyers for plaintiffs who claim the congressional districts drawn by the 1981 Legislature dilute minority voting strength.

Clements opposed giving the deposition, but gave up the fight Thursday after the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a lower court ruling against Clements. The deposition will be entered into the record of the case being considered by three federal judges.

As he promised he would do, Clements spent much of the deposition reiterating his position on redistricting. His major interest was setting up a black district in Dallas. He threatened to veto any plan that did not include that district.

DAVID RICHARDS, representing a black plaintiff, said the governor offered no answers that were surprising. A tape recording of the closed-door deposition, released to the media, revealed that Clements restated his oft-repeated lines about having major input only on the black Dallas district.

"I think it's well recognized there was an injustice and there was in fact discrimination and what I call fragmentation of the black vote that was unhealthy and it was wrong," Clements told the lawyers.

"I think the minorities in this district as it's now constituted have been used by the liberal Democratic Party of Texas for its own purposes," he said. "They were trying to control that vote to their own purposes and elect liberal members of the U.S. Congress and use the black vote and the Mexican-American vote in that district for those purposes," he said.

That Dallas district, which includes blacks now represented by Democrats Jim Mattox and Martin Frost is among the major points of the lawsuit. The black plaintiffs claim the new setup "packs" them into one district in order to dilute their influence.

HOWEVER, OTHER BLACKS favor the new setup because it could lead to a black congressman from Dallas. The new districts would make re-election difficult for Mattox and Frost, both white liberals.

'House of Banyen turns statues into instant antiques

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

CHIANG MAI,Thailand (AP) — How do you make a statue carved yesterday look like a priceless antique dating back to the 16th century?

Ask Mrs. Banyen Aksornsee, a petite, ex-market vendor who now owns and runs what must certainly be one of the biggest "instant antique" factories in Asia. Under her careful and imaginative tutelage more than 120 skilled craftsmen have fashioned and aged tens of thousands of superb copies.

Figures out of Thai mythology, Burmese spirits, Chinese lions, intricately wrought ornaments of Buddhist temples, drums twice the height of a man. These and other antique look-alikes crowd every house, courtyard and walkway of what is appropriately called the "House of Banyen" — a lovely, 1.5-acre compound where the instants are made, stored, displayed and sold.

The compound normally buzzes with activity. Fake antiques are big business in Thailand.

Many a foreign tourist as well as Thai has had his ego punctured and his savings account depleted by purchasing cleverly crafted instants at price tags that would normally hang on the real articles.

Shoppers here can give their homes an elegant Asian look for very reasonable prices. However, there is a good chance that unscrupulous Thai and possibly foreign dealers have passed off Mrs. Banyen's products as real antiques at their own outlets. Thai government experts say that most so-called antique stores in Thailand now carry largely copies, often advertised as genuine.

"This," says Mrs. Banyen, "makes me very unhappy. Here I tell my customer exactly what is old and what is new."

Mrs. Banyen is even willing to share her knowledge of instant antique making, apart from a few special "secrets" which might get passed to her competitors.

Take a slender wooden statue of a smiling angel out of Thai mythology, almost 3 feet tall. To the inexpert eye it appears hoary with age but was in fact carved only five years ago.

The key is making a good copy from a genuine model. This particular statue, Mrs. Banyen explains, took about a week to carve and the deft artisan received the equivalent of $20. The wood was purposely not dried properly so that it would develop signs of old age: cracks.

Then the statue was hung out in one of the compound's courtyards where the wind, rain, hothouse humidity — not to mention moss and fungi — gave the piece a mellow, time-worn patina. A thin layer of clay was added for extra effect.

The price at Banyen: $100, although the owner is a game bargainer and will consider lower offers. The price at other outlets: Mrs. Banyen doesn't know and doesn't even want to guess.

There are of course many aging techiques, depending upon the material involved and the styles of the period copied. Some customers, Mrs. Banyen says, will specify a desired effect and she goes on to experiment, often picking up new techniques this way.

Other approaches to wood aging include scorching, smudging gold leaf covering, dulling a painted surface or rubbing out the color altogether to expose patches of the wood beneath. Bronzes can be corroded by use of chemicals or urine. Stone pieces can be buried underground for longer periods and then knocked about and chipped here and there for good measure.

Mrs. Banyen, now 49, started making instant antiques eight years ago, a sharp business move because the real ones in which she originally dealt were becoming increasingly difficult to find and much costlier to acquire.

Some fine antique pieces remain but Mrs. Banyen says that these days her biggest business is exporting the instants to the United States.

Kennedy names friend to run state campaign

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

Washington — With a critical reelection campaign underway, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is making veteran aide Eddie Martin chief of his Massachusetts political operation.

"He's been both a longtime friend and a trusted advisor," Kennedy said of Martin. "He's an enormously talented and gifted person who has got extraordinary knowledge of the state."

Martin, who currently manages space allocation in federal facilities overseen by the General Services Administration in the Boston regional office, will take the Kennedy job in January. His appointment is the key change in a top-to-bottom staff shakeup in the Boston and Washington Kennedy offices.

Although Martin may never carry the title of campaign director, he will play an influential role as usual in interpreting Kennedy to the public, helping shape the campaign itself and in handling crises.

Nearly a year ago, Martin left another federal job, as regional administrator of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, to step into the Kennedy presidential campaign at a genuine crisis point shortly before the Iowa caucuses.

This year, there is no overt crisis. The only announced opponent, businessman Ray Shamie, is considered a long shot. But he is well financed and has placed full-page ads in newspapers around the money, reinforcing the New Right's claim that Kennedy is their top target nationally for 1982.

"Although there is no pronounced opposition as yet," Martin said, Kennedy is obviously "a prize catch for some of the conservative groups." and just the infusion of their money could be a potent factor in the race.

Kennedy says he hopes to raise $2 million for the 1982 race.

Former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel leaves the federal prison facility at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., after a 19-month stay. He planned to return to Baltimore Friday.

Mandel leaves prison

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, saying he would "look forward, not backward," embraced his weeping wife Friday as he returned home from federal prison where he served 19 months for political corruption.

The 62-year-old former Democratic governor was released from a prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., after his three-year sentence was commuted by President Reagan on Thursday.

The president's decision was "a little bit of a shock" to Mandel, who said he was "as appreciative as any human being can be" for Reagan's action.

IN ADDITION TO his wife, Jeanne, a crowd of reporters and well-wishers greeted Mandel at Baltimore-Washington International Airport late Friday afternoon.

"There is no way I can explain ... the feeling that fills me right now — unbelievable. I am just so delighted to be here," said Mandel, who appeared tired and gaunt.

"If I had to do it over, certainly I would do some things differently, but what happened has happened. I have a life in front of me and I'm going to look forward not backward."

The former governor stepped from the prison shortly after 10 a.m. Friday, then headed to a nearby airport where he flew home to Baltimore.

Mandel was convicted of accepting 50,000 worth of cash and gifts in a scheme to fix favorable racing dates for a defunct Maryland race track.

THE FORMER governor, who wept Thursday when attorney Arnold Weiner told him by telephone that Reagan had commuted his sentence, said he was looking forward to rejoining his family.

"I'm going to go back, sit down and rejoin my family; get back into being a father, husband and ordinary member of the family," Mandel said.

Wearing blue corduroy pants and jacket and accompanied by Pensacola attorney J.B. Murphy, Mandel joked that life at the Eglin prison, where he lived in a small carpeted cell and worked in the prison laundry, was "not too good, but not as bad as the Army."

Mandel also pitched for the inmate softball team, taught a current-events class and was president of the Eglin Fellowship Group.

The commutation was ordered following a concerted lobbying effort by Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and a number of Maryland politicians.

The Justice Department said Mandel will be placed in pre-release center until Dec. 20, when he will be finally released. He will be free to leave the center during the day, but will have to spend the nights in custody.

NEITHER THE Justice Department nor Mandel's lawyers would identify the pre-release center, but said it is located in Baltimore.

During a layover at Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport before his commercial flight to Baltimore, Mandel puffed on a pipe and said he really hadn't given much thought to what he'll do now that he's out.

"I have no idea," he said. "I haven't really tried to make any final plans because being institutionalized there's no place to try to make any plans."

Bruce Bereano, another Mandel lawyer, said a letter delivered by Laxalt to the White House in October helped persuade Reagan that there was no reason to keep Mandel in prison.

"He's been sufficiently punished," Bereano said. "He's been disbarred...There's been humiliation...and financial difficulty."

The Justice Department said Reagan decided on clemency for Mandel because he has already been in jail for 19 months, longer than any of his co-defendants.

Mandel was convicted with five others of mail fraud and racketeering charges in the scheme to obtain favorable racing dates for the Marlboro Race Course.

Actor blames alcohol for Wood, Holden deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Dana Andrews, who triumphed over repeated bouts with alcoholism, said Friday he believed that William Holden and Natalie Wood would still be alive if they hadn't drunk too much before their accidents.

"It is clear to all of us, I am sure, there is every likelihood Bill and Natalie would be alive today if it were not for alcohol, and that should not, cannot, be ignored," said Andrews, a board member of the National Council on Alcoholism.

"More than one of us, hearing of Bill and Natalie's deaths, commented, 'What a sad and senseless waste,'" he said.

Miss Wood, 43, drowned off Santa Catalina Island last weekend when she fell into the sea while her husband, actor Robert Wagner, and actor Christopher Walken were having a heated discussion aboard the Wagners' yacht. The three had spent an evening of dining and drinking at an island restaurant, and an autopsy Monday showed the actress had 0.14 percent alcohol in her blood, above California's 0.10 legal standard for intoxication.

Sheriff's investigators declined comment Friday on reports she may have screamed for help the night she died and her cries went unheeded. Deputy Terry Gingrich said no statement would be issued even after the investigation concludes.

HOLDEN, 63, bled to death after hitting his head in a fall in his Santa Monica apartment early last month. The coroner's office said his blood alcohol level was 0.22 percent.

Andrews did not imply Miss Wood was more than a social drinker, but said she and Holden could both be faulted for heavy drinking before their deaths.

Andrews, 72, who overcame alcoholism 12 years ago and appeared trim and fit, praised the media for revealing that both film stars were legally intoxicated when they died.

"I tell you that in reminding the public that alcohol was present at both of these deaths, you are not to be censored but rather commended for performing a significant service," he said, "and you would be remiss in your duty if you did not do so."

Andrews said his most serious problems with alcohol occurred from 1964 to 1969 after he had given up drinking in 1958. The actor didn't blame Hollywood for his problem drinking, although he said, "I think my career might have had something to do with it."

Laotian refugees die during sleep from mysterious illness

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A sudden and mysterious illness that kills people in their sleep has become a significant cause of death among previously healthy Laotian refugees in the United States, the national Centers for Disease Control said today.

"It is a completely new syndrome — death in young, healthy people that occurs at night, that occurs in minutes and lacks explanation after autopsy," said Dr. Roy Baron, a medical investigator with the centers' Epidemiology Program Office.

Thirty-eight cases among Southeast Asian refugees have been reported since February to the CDC, which has launched an intensive investigation of the deaths. The reported deaths occurred from July 1977 until October 1981.

Family members who witnessed the deaths said the victims died while sleeping. All were in good health, and none complained of significant symptoms before going to bed. Abnormal breathing or brief groans were the only clues that something was wrong, and signs of life ceased within minutes, the CDC said.

"Witnesses interpreting the terminal groans in these deaths as signs of terror supported the popular notion that deaths resulted from terrifying dreams," the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. "However, careful questioning of the witnesses in the United States indicated that the terminal sounds were those often heard following cardiac arrest."

The CDC investigation is centered on the heart tissue of the victims in an effort to determine if the affliction is a heart disease.

The estimated rate of the unexplained deaths among Laotian men ages 25-44 is 87 per 100,000, comparable to the sum of the rates of the four leading causes of natural death among U.S. males in the same age group, the CDC said.

The center said 33 of the deaths occurred among Laotian refugees and the rest were scattered among other Southeast Asians. All but one of the victims was male.

Twenty-five of the Laotians who died were Hmong, an ethnic group based in the northern Laotian highlands.

A control study is under way to determine if the illness could be a genetic disorder or if it is associated with geographic regions, current or past occupations, military experience, chronic stresses, refugee camp experiences or dietary changes, the CDC said.

The increasing number of deaths parallels the influx of Laotians into the United States since 1979, the CDC said. Deaths have been reported in California, Minnesota, Oregon, Washington, Illinois, Rhode Island, Iowa, Ohio, Oklahoma, Texas and Wisconsin, reflecting the geographic distribution of Laotians in the United States.

Similar deaths occurring during sleep have been reported among young men in Japan, and among Filipino men in the Philippines and Hawaii, the CDC said.

Rickover feels negative about offer of post as White House advisor

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — It's been three weeks since President Reagan offered Adm. Hyman G. Rickover a post as White House advisor on nuclear science, but the crusty "father of the atomic submarine" still has not said aye or nay.

When asked whether he has made up his mind, the admiral, 81, replied through a spokesman, "No comment."

According to friends of Rickover's he is miffed that he has not been invited to the White House to discuss the proposed assignment or even contacted by telephone to learn what would be expected of him.

"He's feeling pretty negative about it right now," one friend said. "But I don't know what he'll do. He could make a real contribution."

When Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. announced Nov. 13 that Mr. Reagan had decided it was time for an "orderly transition" in the leadership of the Navy's nuclear reactor program from Rickover to a younger person, he said the admiral would not be given another two-year extension on active duty.

Rickover, who will be 82 next month, went on the Navy's retired list in 1964 and was immediately recalled to active duty. He has been given two-year extensions ever since. Lehman disclosed, however, that the admiral would be asked to stay on active duty for a time beyond Jan.31, 1982, when his final two-year extension is up in order to effect a smooth transition in the program's leadership. That could mean one, two or more months more.

The Navy said it had not yet written a formal, official explanation to Rickover on the upcoming change and request that he stay on for an undetermined period beyond Jan. 31.

"A letter is being prepared for the Secretary's signature," a spokesman told Copley News Service. "When it will reach his desk, I can't say at this point, but I imagine it will be soon."

As for any detailed information on the proposed post as presidential advisor on nuclear science, "that will have to come from the White House," he said.

While most observers believe the admiral, despite his advanced age, could help the ailing nuclear power industry, the early betting was that he would turn down the Reagan offer.

Cholera breaks out on oil rig

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — An outbreak of cholera that struck 17 men on a Texas oil rig was the largest outbreak of the disease in the United States this century, the national Centers for Disease Control said today.

The outbreak occurred in September, the CDC said. Water used for drilling that contained raw sewage accidentally was mixed with fresh drinking water, the center said.

Sewage in Gulf Coast areas has been shown to contain the cholera organism. The men suffered severe watery diarrhea, nausea, vomiting and abdominal cramps.

Cholera, generally a mild disease, had not been reported in the United States from 1911 until 1973, when one case was found in Port Lavaca, Texas. That led to increased surveillance and 11 cases were found in Louisiana in 1978. Two more cases were identified in May and June 1981 in Texas near the site where the September outbreak occurred, the CDC said.

The oil rig was located in the Intercoastal Waterway in Jefferson County, south of Port Arthur. Because the cases reported in recent years occurred along the Gulf Coast, the CDC said health officials in the area should be on the lookout for the disease.

The CDC has distributed the growth medium used to identify cholera to laboratories along the Gulf Coast and doctors in the area have been asked to check for cholera in all patients who have diarrhea, the CDC said.

Seven teen-agers sentenced in drownings

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Seven teen-agers convicted in the drownings of two youngsters from a rival town during a graduation party brawl were given 2½-year jail terms Friday by a judge who characterized the defendants as "punks".

The teen-agers were released without bail until Jan. 5 pending appeals.

Judge Wihliam Simons rejected a county prosecutor's recommendation for 13-year sentences in Concord State Prison. The defendants, all June graduates of Lenox Memorial High School, could have received up to 20 years in prison.

The judge said that with the exception of Joseph Burke Jr. 18, "every defendant has had a significant history of brawling and involvement with police. One of the attorneys has used the word 'punk.' It could very well apply here."

THE SEVEN WERE CONVICTED last month of two counts of involuntary manslaughter and one count of assault and battery in the June 5 drowning of Barry Griffin, 19, and Richard Retzel Jr., 18.

The bodies of the Lee youths were found in a 1971 Cadillac pulled out of a lake bordering the two small towns in the Berkshire Hills after a melee on a boat ramp involving three Lee youths and the seven defendants.

But Simons dismissed high school rivalries and graduation party drinking as mitigating factors. He said the case is just like any other he has seen involving death, whether it is "on a glass-strewn schoolyard in Boston or behind an abandoned factory in Springfield."

Defense attorneys criticized Simons' sentencing.

"This is an 'Alice in Wonderland' kind of world in which we live," said attorney George Crane. He pleaded for mercy and pointed out that his client, Todd Terpak, 18, suffered from cystic hydroma, a congenital ailment which has forced doctors to amputate some of his toes and causes benign tumors in his lower extremities.

"This situation cries out for a leader and the district attorney came back with a kneejerk reaction of jail," said defense attorney Frank Antonucci, who represented Steven Piretti, 18.

Prosecutors alleged that Griffin and Retzel drowned after the seven defendants attacked them to avenge a beating they had given Burke and another youth from Lenox earlier in the evening.

Exactly how the car went into the water was never established, but in his closing arguments the proskecutor said the victims may have panicked in their efforts to escape and put the car into drive instead of reverse, sending it spashing into the lake.

The other teen-agers sentenced Friday were Peter Bianco, who turned 18 after he was charged, Robert Walker, Mark Hinman, both 18, and Bruce Kern, 19.

Timber thieves doing big business in Texas

By BETH WATERS
Beaumont Enterprise & Journal

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — In the millions of acres of timberland in East Texas are a handful of people at work stealing lumber of private and commercial concerns.

Statistics show that although only a few timber thieves are at work, their activities are costing timber businesses thousands of dollars a week.

The timber thief's tools are often sophisticated — walkie-talkies and citizen's band radios are employed to coordinate accomplices and to thwart security efforts.

Smaller operations incorporate a simplistic but successful scheme of diverting timber from its legitimate destination for an illegitimate profit to be pocketed tax-free. The small operation also may incorporate simple "timber rustling" or falsifying deeds to sell timber not owned by the salesman.

Timber industry executives explain that while strikes by timber thieves are few, the number of dollars lost in one theft is staggering. For example, a single timber load is worth $1,000 and 50 loads may be handled daily. If one load were taken each day of the year by one timber thief, more than $250,000 would be lost.

BECAUSE THE NUMBER OF thieves are few, the number of contractors many and the amount of loads and sales great, discovering the illegal activity is tough. Often, the timber-stealing may go undetected long after the actual theft has occurred.

"If timber theft is as bad as some people say, we've either been very lucky or we've been living through ignorance," says Glenn Chancellor, vice president of land and timber for Temple-Eastex, the largest timber landholder in East Texas with more than 1 million acres in 22 counties.

"We've tried to set up as foolproof a system as we can. We use two different people to verify the logs coming in, a logging supervisor and an audit forester, who conducts random visits," Chancellor says. "It's just not a major problem for us right now, but that could mean that we don't know about it."

Another major timber company in the region, Kirby Forest Industries, has used similar security methods and one of those measures clued the company to a $100,000 ripoff that had been operating for more than seven months right before administrators' eyes.

John Wood, general manager for resources at Kirby, said a single thief has been responsible for stealing more than $100,000 worth of timber. A grand jury has indicted a suspect who is now awaiting a court appearance.

"He made one mistake ... he stayed on a big company too long. He should have stayed with the smaller businesses," Wood said, adding he suspects the thief has been stealing timber for 20 years. "It has not happened to Kirby on this scale before, but it has on a smaller scale of about one or two loads per week."

KIRBY OFFICIALS WENT THROUGH their contracts with loggers and log truck scale receipts to piece together the pattern of "diversion" theft, which involves a single contractor who enters a company's track to cut, haul and deliver the timber. The illegal contractor then diverts the load to another company that unknowingly accepts the wood and pays the contractor for the lumber as if it were his.

He also may get paid for cutting and hauling timber, which could be the second payment he has received for the same work as contracted by the original timber company.

"Ninety percent of our logging contractors are just as honest as they can be and that's a good percentage," Wood said.

But he added the case has caused his company to become "sensitized" to timber theft and has led to stricter administrative measures. Kirby also has discovered another suspected scheme involving false land deeds.

In such operations, Wood said, people file false deeds for timber land not their own, transfer the deed several times and eventually buy it back and sell the timber at the site. The many transfers of false deeds make it difficult for companies purchasing the stolen timber to detect the illegal activity when they research the land's ownership.

In some cases, the phony deed holder may enter into a contract with a company allowing them to enter the track and cut the timber, nearly making that company a party to the theft. While Wood says his company now conducts more intensive title searches in those cases, the "absentee landowner" often still does not know his land has been cleared of timber.

PREDICTIONS FOR THE TIMBER theft are mixed. Temple-Eastex's Chancellor says the current economic slump, which has curtailed the demand for building materials, is likely to cause larger industries to shy away from extending themselves by entering into contracts where timber theft is more likely to occur.

But the need of private citizens to survive during the financial pinch has Kirby's Wood saying "temptation" may get to the best of people, drawing them closer to illegal activities.

Without debate, say the two officials, is the move by companies to meet the timber thief head-on — before his saw meets tree bark, they hope.

Millionaire aids children's hospital

LONDON (AP) — The day after a surgeon said that lack of money had resulted in the deaths of 97 children, a 75-year-old British philanthropist pledged $195,000 Friday to pay for more operations.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she was "absolutely thrilled" by the gift from millionaire John James of Ascot, Berkshire, whose donation is to go toward bone marrow transplants in children suffering from a rare genetic disease called gargoylism.

On Thursday, Professor John Hobbs, head of the transplant team at London's Westminster Hospital, said 97 children had died over the past five years because the unit could only afford to perform 25 operations a year. Hobbs said the donation would enable doctors to perform twice as many operations each year.

In gargoylism, a vital enzyme is missing from the body's cells, leading to an enlarged liver and spleen, brain damage and deformity. A bone-marrow transplant before a diseased child's first birthday produces the necessary enzyme.',

After James announced his gift of 100,000 pounds he said: "I thank heaven it was not one of my children who had this complaint and had to face a choice of being saved or dying."

It was the second injection of extra cash since Hobbs made his public protest about lack of finance from National Health Service authorities.

Sunken Spanish galleon creates a time capsule

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Lift a Gold Bar." That was the genial offer on a label in the exhibition, "Shipwrecked 1622: The Lost Treasure of Philip IV," recently shown at the Queens Museum here.

It was a perfectly genuine invitation — you really could grab the gold bar, approximately five gleaming pounds of 17th-century Spanish gold, although a plastic shield prevented your making off with it.

The gold bar was one of the many treasures, recovered from a 1622 shipwreck, in the exhibition, which was sponsored by the Chase Manhattan Bank. The collection included what according to R. Duncan Mathewson "is probably worth more than the gold and silver, the archeological information we have got."

The objects exhibited have an estimated value of more than $10 million — and also constitute a priceless record of life aboard a 17th-century galleon.

MATHEWSON IS marine archeologist for Treasure Salvors Inc., the salvage team of treasure hunter Mel Fisher, whose work on two Spanish galleons shipwrecked off Florida in 1622 resulted in the collection of rare and precious artifacts on show here. It is the most comprehensive display of Spanish colonial gold ever presented.

The collection has been studied by university scholars and museum specialists, to whom it is available when it is not being exhibited. Eventually it is hoped the collection will form a permanent exhibition, possibly in Key West, Fla.

The two treasure galleons, the Nuestra Senora de Atocha and the Santa Margarita, were lost in a hurricane off the Florida coast. They were part of a convoy of 28 ships carrying the riches of the New World to finance the Thirty Years War then raging in Europe.

The saga of the galleons and their mission, the tragic storm resulting in their loss and the consequences of the loss of the gold on Spanish history, then the early salvage efforts followed by recent years of search and recovery, are material for a real-life adventure story, whose authentic evidence is in this exhibition.

FOR AS MATHEWSON points out, "Every time a ship sinks to the bottom of the sea, a time capsule is created. Each artifact recovered fits in to a lifestyle. Finds like this tell us an awful lot about what was happening not only in Spain in the 17th century but also in the Americas."

The collection represents not only the precious cargo but also the lives of the men who were conveying it — it includes not only the king's gold but also his sailor's dough cutter and razor sheath.

The crew needed to defend themselves, so there are swords, rapiers and daggers, some recovered deeply encrusted in marine deposits, and a variety of shot — musket shot, grapeshot, round shot and chain shot. Functional objects from everyday life include a pewter inkwell, silver buckle and sandshaker, iron skillet and three-legged kettle, brass pestles and mortars, ceramic olive jars — and iron leg shackles.

There are the sailors' tools of trade: navigational instruments, a handsome astrolabe in brass, a sundial, lead sounding weight and anchors, including one massive bower anchor weighing 1,280 pounds.

EVEN THE MOST precious items have their archeological value, too. A coral and gold rosary, a reliquary ring, unusual silver devotional columns and a brass madonna and child reflect the importance of religious faith. Personal treasures include beautifully worked gold and silver bowls and plates, a gold bosun's whistle, a selection of shining gold neck chains, a couple of emerald rings.

Then there is just bulk gold and silver, in bars, most of which are officially stamped, but with a few unmarked and clearly contraband, smuggled in as private-enterprise cargo. A half-disc of gold shows cut marks as if it were a gilded slab of soft Brie cheese. A massive bar of silver weighs 70 pounds, a mass of encrusted silver coins a bulky 105 pounds.

Trade fair today

The Midland Junior Achievement Club will be holding a trade fair today from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. at Midland Park Mall. High school students from 12 "miniature companies" will be marketing and displaying their wares.

According to Gary Petersen, executive director of Junior Achievement of Midland, the students are learning about business and free enterprise through these companies.

"They are in this for a profit," Petersen said. "The companies have stockholders and everything."

The money raised in the trade fair is "soley for a profit and as a way to raise wages — just like a normal company," Petersen said.

All Christmas shoppers and browsers are invited to come by the trade fair.

Tamale shucks in short supply

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A "serious shortage" of Texas corn shucks may cause problems for the makers of thousands of tamales that traditionally are eaten here during the Christmas holidays, one local shuck dealer says.

Ernest Arredondo of Mendez Brothers Produce Co., said besides a lack of domestic corn shucks, importers are expecting higher prices on shucks brought in from Mexico.

He said the Texas crop of corn shucks was abnormally small and those arriving in San Antonio are below average quality.

Tamale makers will have to pay 50 to 60 cents a pound, up 5 to 10 cents from last year, for good-quality corn shucks imported from Mexico, Arredondo said.

Mendez Brothrs purchased only 1,000 bales of corn shucks this year, compared to 4,000 bales last year, he said, but if demand for tamales is high, he will try to order more.

A tamale consists of spicy ground meat rolled in cornmeal, wrapped in a shuck and baked or steamed.

Sakharov, wife given medical aid by Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities said Friday they hospitalized hunger-striking Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov and his wife to "prevent any complications in the state of their health." Their daughter-in-law said she feared the couple was being force-fed.

The government newspaper Izvestia said "medical assistance is being administered" to the Sakharovs, but did not say what type, where they were hospitalized or when. It called the fast "a fresh provocation calculated to attract the attention of the West to Sakharov's anti-Soviet views."

Sakharov, a 60-year-old physicist, suffers from a heart ailment which reportedly has been aggravated by the fast. Relatives say that his wife, Yelena Bonner, a 58-year-old physician, is in better health than her husband.

They began the hunger strike 13 days ago to protest Soviet refusal to let their daughter-in-law emigrate.

In Washington, President Reagan expressed concern for the Sakharovs' health and urged the Kremlin to permit their daughter-in-law to leave the Soviet Union.

"The young couple has been separated for a long time," Reagan said in a written statement issued by the White House. "I am concerned for the health of Mr. and Mrs. Sakharov and strongly urge the Soviet government to allow Mrs. Alekseeva to join her husband."

SOVIET AUTHORITIES used Izvestia nearly two years ago to announce that Sakharov, one of the creators of the Soviet hydrogen bomb, had been banished to Gorky, an industrial city on the Volga 250 miles east of Moscow, and stripped of all titles and awards.

It said Sakharov had become a channel through which "the special services of the imperialistic states" were receiving "important state secrets."

The Sakharovs said the fast was to convince Soviet authorities to allow daughter-in-law Liza Alexeyeva to emigrate.

Miss Alexeyeva, 26, was married in a proxy ceremony last June to Alexei Semyonov, who is Mrs. Sakharov's son by a previous marriage and who lives in the United States.

"I am afraid for their lives," Miss Alexeyeva told Western reporters at Sakharov's apartment in Moscow. "I think they must be force-feeding them, which can be a terrible thing." She did not say whether she thought they were being fed intravenously or orally.

Miss Alexeyeva said she planned to travel to Gorky Friday night, although in the past she and family friends have been barred from Sakharov's apartment in the Volga River city.

IN A TAPE recording played to Western reporters before the fast began, Sakharov said he and his wife would eat no food and drink only mineral water until Miss Alexeyeva was allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

Izvestia said that Miss Alexeyeva's proxy marriage to Semyonov, conducted in Montana, was not valid under Soviet law, and that she was legally bound to remain in the Soviet Union to care for her disabled parents.

Izvestia also accused Semyonov of illegally divorcing a previous Soviet wife, and called his marriage to Miss Alexeyeva "bigamy."

"Such are some facts which reveal the real essence of the fresh clamor in the West in connection with Sakharov's name. It is not important who invented the hunger strike trick — Sakharov ... or somebody else," the paper said.

"Academician Sakharov is trying to turn into a universal crisis the discord of his soul, troubles in family life," it said. "And with this aim he is not above using any means."

Izvestia charged that Semyonov had a "liaison" with Miss Alexeyeva while still married to his first wife, identified as "O. Levshina." It said "a family scandal broke out."

When Semyonov emigrated in 1978, his wife decided not to accompany him, Sakharov told reporters at the time.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Larry Bowa, the Philadelphia Phillies golden-glove shortstop, celebrates this birthday with you. Never underestimate the importance of your willingness to persevere. This determination will pay off handsomely in the year ahead. Look forward to new business, a higher income and happy romance! An interest in the arts gives you keen insights into raising funds for a civic project near and dear to the hearts of those who control your professional destiny. Recognize the fact that you sometimes have difficulty handling criticism. The way you respond to well-intentioned suggestions could mean the difference between success and failure.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your loyalties may be split due to a family crisis. Do not do anything impulsive or you could be sorry later on. The problem may have been blown out of proportion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put financial matters aside and devote more attention to your loved ones. An affectionate overture will be returned. Be willing to make some personal sacrifices to give romance more meaning.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make any vacation plans as soon as possible. Your efforts to please member of opposite sex could cause misunderstanding with a family member.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friends may want you to join them for the weekend. Do not agree to do so before checking with other family members. Browsing through flea markets, antique shops holds special appeal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get into better physical shape. Make some diet resolutions before the holidays begin. Someone may try to pull the wool over your eyes. Stay alert.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This will be one of those days when you can get your own way about almost everything. Do not keep your emotions bottled up inside. Mate will act as a sounding board.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance is under highly favorable influences this Sunday. Loved ones' support will be easier to obtain. Avoid any financial transaction in which there is the slightest element of risk.

Sun City's trains always arrive on schedule

By MICHAEL MURPHY
Sun City News-Sun

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Sun City's smallest communities — New River and West Summit — may be a little lifeless, but the trains are always on time even when they fall off the tracks.

The New River and Northwestern Lines span the towns' residential, industrial and commercial areas, providing service to residents who sit on benches, seemingly content with their artificial surroundings.

But to members of the Sun City Model Railroad Club, who have devoted hours of work to the miniature railway and its attendant towns, it's all very real.

The railways and communities fit comfortably in a large room. Trains run along 500 feet of HO-gauge track — the equivalent of about eight miles if lifesize. They pass through stations and tunnels, cross bridges and scurry past trees — all built or donated by club members.

Two trains run the layout's "low" and "high" tracks; others wait in the New River and Northwestern switching stations.

"Actually, if you're good enough, you could run four trains on the two main lines, but that takes a lot of work," says James Frazer. "We usually keep about six trains set up on the siding and in the station."

Frazer says the club's "rolling stock" includes 32 locomotives, 26 passenger cars and 75 freight cars, many of which are painted blue and gold, the club's colors.

Trains wind around the E-shaped layout, crossing over bridges and trestles and passing through two tunnels, which serve as a backdrop for West Summit.

The walls around the layout were painted by two Sun City women, who added a desert scene to the layout.

"If you just have nothing but track, you have nothing," Frazer says.

In a group such as this, you can take advantage of various talents, he points out, adding, "I enjoy woodworking, so I built all the benches."

The layout has changed repeatedly over the years — "a model railroad layout is never completed," he says.

Chrisitan business list attacked by B'nai B'rith

By SHARON SEXTON
Hearst Feature Service

BALTIMORE — A so-called Christian business directory that solicits ads from businessmen who pledge that they've been "born again" is under attack by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith here.

Edward Leavy, ADL regional director, said the league would contact Maryland Attorney General Stephen Sachs to request an opinion on whether the directory, "The Shepherd's Guide," violates state law. If Sachs advises that the guide does not violate Maryland law, Levy said the ADL would challenge the directory in federal court.

"It is anathema to a pluralistic democratic society," Leavy said of the 84-page guide. "It is dividing our society. Basically, what it is saying is that born-agains should do business with born-agains; Jews should do business with Jews; Catholics should do business with Catholics."

Because of the threat of a lawsuit, J. Douglas Scheidt, Jr., publisher of the directory, declined to talk about the guide. However, his attorney, James L. Mann, Jr., said the ADL has misunderstood the intent of the directory.

"It is meant to serve the needs of people who want to use Christian principles in their business and to provide a service for people who are looking for businesses that follow Christian principles," said Mann.

"If somebody has a legal problem they may want to go to a lawyer who practices Christian principles," said Mann. "If they need an auto mechanic they know they can trust someone (in the directory) not to inflate the price, or do shoddy service."

He said the directory is not discriminatory because any businessman — Christian or non-Christian — may purchase an advertisement. Mann said the 1981-82 directory includes the advertisement of a Jewish attorney who "believes that Jesus is the Messiah."

Garbage piles up Friday on the roof of New York's Waldorf Astoria during a strike by private collectors. The strike has wreathed New York in garbage for the holiday season.

Garbage piling up in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The Waldorf-Astoria stashed its trash on the roof Friday, Chinatown was a mess, and rats picnicked near a fancy hotel.

Garbage is piling up because of a strike by private collectors, and no end is in sight.

The collectors take much of the trash from the city's stores, restaurants, hotels and other commercial concerns.

The piles of refuse are puny compared to the mountains that accumulated during the 1968 strike by public sanitation workers. But officials said that some 21,000 tons sat uncollected as the strike by 2,000 garbagemen against about 400 firms moved into a fifth day.

NEGOTIATORS FOR THE PRIVATE garbage collection agencies and the Teamsters Union, which represents the workers, agreed to state mediator James McCabe's request for a meeting Saturday, the first session since the strike began.

Although more than 300 tons of garbage was removed under emergency orders by the Health Department, the Sanitation Department said it could handle only about 10 percent of almost 2,000 requests for emergency trash removal.

"Chinatown is wall-to-wall restaurants," said Bert Alexander, a Sanitation Department spokesman. "The whole place is a mess."

Piles of garbage forced pedestrians to walk single-file on the streets of Chinatown and the Bowery, which are crowded even without garbage. Plastic garbage bags rose in a pile more than 10 feet high outside a methadone clinic on Second Avenue.

Garbage piled up in some of Harlem's empty lots, but streets and sidewalks were comparatively clear. The city is handling residents' trash as usual.

At a road repair site near Park Avenue, a worker found a hole that he had left the night before filled with bags of garbage.

GM to favor women, minorities in layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — Women, minorities and young employees will largely be exempt from General Motors Corp.'s planned layoff of 13,000 white-collar workers worldwide, the Detroit Free Press reported Friday.

Company documents indicate other broad categories of salaried workers also will be favored in layoffs by the No. 1 U.S. automaker, the newspaper said in a copyright story.

The company is preparing for layoffs of up to 7 percent of its total salaried workforce of 190,000 because of huge cutbacks in production, the report said.

GM told salaried employees in an April letter that individual performance, not seniority or other criteria, would be used in determining layoffs.

But in order to meet its affirmative action goals and to protect its younger workers, the automaker plans to consider factors other than performance, the Free Press reported.

Clifford Merriott, GM's director of news relations, said the April memo's guidelines were genuine and were being used in the review of salaried workers.

Merriott and other GM executives refused to comment further.

The newspaper said GM would protect employees on a secret "high potential" list, which identifies ambitious, fast-rising workers the company wants to nurture.

According to company documents, GM still will use performance ratings in determining layoffs, exempting all workers with at least one year's service and an "outstanding" in their annual review.

But other groups of employees will be protected, according to a confidential April memorandum to GM managers, staff executives and personnel directors from Stephen Fuller, vice president for GM's personnel and administration staff, the newspaper reported.

The memo recommends giving preference to groups including:

—Recent college graduates with one or two year's service to GM if they are in the top two performance categories, and new graduates with less than a year's experience in the top three categories.

—Minority employees and women rated in the top two performance categories.

—Employees working on "critical of essential projects" and who are rated in the top three categories.

—All employees "currently identified as high-potential."

GM has five categories for rating the work of "classified" employees and six for rating executives' work, the report said.

Reagan eyes gas tax hike

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may soon try to more than double the federal gasoline tax — a move that congressional sources say will meet strong opposition on Capitol Hill, especially in an election year.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis says the new taxes are needed to meet highway construction and repair needs. To blunt some of the congressional criticism, he suggested recently that 1 penny of the increase be funneled to mass transit.

A proposal discussed increasingly by Lewis and his staff would boost the gasoline tax from 4 cents to 9 cents. One penny of the increase would go to mass transit construction and the other 4 cents would go into the highway trust fund.

THE PLAN HAS BEEN mentioned several times by Lewis in recent weeks and was reiterated by his top deputy, Darrell Trent, at a meeting Thursday with city and county officials at the White House.

Lewis is expected to try to sell other Cabinet members and the White House on the idea in the coming months. While Treasury Secretary Donald Regan is said to oppose any such new taxes, some senior White House officials and Budget Director David Stockman are described as leaning in Lewis' favor.

But, according to sources at several House and Senate tax and transportation committees, it is highly unlikely that Congress will want to tackle additional gasoline taxes during the 1982 election year.

In 1975 — when gasoline was considerably cheaper and the energy crunch more apparent — a proposal to double the gas tax managed only 57 votes in the House.

"We didn't even come close," said a House Ways and Means Committee staffer. "Now with gas $1.35 and no sense of crisis, it's going to be that much harder."

"I think they have a long way to go to getting a constituency to get it passed," said one Senate committee staffer. "It's not going to happen this (coming) year." Opposition will increase "as we get closer to the election," he predicted.

All members of the House and one-third of the Senate are up for re-election next year.

SENATE SOURCES SAY THE administration would have to develop support from a "delicate coalition" of mass transit and highway interests to have any chance of success. Significant opposition still would come from congressmen who oppose any new tax increases not aimed at reducing the federal deficit.

Lewis wants the new gasoline taxes because the costs of highway construction and repair are expected to increase in the coming years while money coming into the highway trust fund is diminishing as motorists use less gasoline.

States are facing similar problems; 32 state legislatures have levied new gasoline taxes during the past two years. The federal 4-cent tax is been unchanged since 1959.

The government spent $9.2 billion for highways last year, but had to dip into its trust fund reserves because only $7.6 billion was collected, $4.7 billion of that from gasoline taxes. Increasing the federal gas tax to 8.3 cents a gallon would add $4.5 billion a year by 1985, according to government estimates.

A Federal Highway Administration study estimates that $12 billion to $16 billion a year will be needed in the 1980s if highways are to be maintained at their 1978 condition. If the repairs are not made, 83 percent of the Interstate system — usually the best kept highways — will be in "poor" condition by 1995, the study said.

In addition to raising the gasoline tax, the Reagan administration is considering substantial increases in taxes levied against large trucks. A draft of a highway administration cost allocation study favors increasing the gasoline levy on large trucks by 53 to 75 percent.

The so-called "heavy vehicle use" tax applied to opeators of trucks weighing more than 26,000 pounds would be increased by more than 400 percent, according to formulas being developed by highway agency planners.

SUCH AN INCREASE WOULD generate $1.8 billion by 1985 instead of the estimated $333 million under current tax levels.

Mine cave-in kills one, traps 2

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

BERGOO, W.Va. (AP) — Rescue crews using picks, shovels and their bare hands dug through "eight feet of solid rock" Friday, hoping to find two coal miners trapped by a cave-in that had already killed one man.

Mike Neal, a rescue leader, held out little hope that the two were alive. "It's slow going up there, real slow. It was just eight feet of solid rock (that) came down on them," he said.

Three miners escaped immediately after the collapse Thursday night. Three others were found alive within seven hours. One of them lay pinned beneath rock for 13 hours before being freed and taken to a hospital.

The other two men were not seriously injured.

A cold drizzle fell as relatives and friends of the trapped miners waited for word, honoring the grim coalfield tradition of a vigil at the mine gates. Residents of this small central West Virginia community brought food for rescuers who emerged from the mine streaked with coal dust.

The men trapped deep within Leatherwood Mountain were identified as Doyle Gillis, 36, and Donald Arbogast, 31, both of Webster Springs. A company statement said "the condition of the missing two men is unknown. Rescue efforts will continue around the clock."

MINER TOM REDMAN SAID rescuers had run "into one thing after another. They have to move slow because they could bring down more rock and the whole thing could go."

State police Sgt. Fred Dickinson said the rescuers were hampered by the narrow mine shaft and the danger of additional roof falls.

"They're doing everything they can, using picks, shovels, anything they can to get in there," Dickinson said. "But only a certain number of people can work in there."

The cave-in occurred about 9:30 p.m. Thursday at the Stillhouse Run Deep Mine, which is owned by Elk River Sewell Coal Co. Company President Joseph Post said the roof collapsed along a 35-foot section of the shaft, 1,750 feet from the entrance. Nine people were inside at the time.

Officials said there were no reports of an explosion.

"There was no warning. No one even had a chance to yell," said Carl Hull, 24, of Webster Springs, the first miner rescued. "I turned around and all I could see was rock."

Hull said he was trapped about an hour. It took six more hours to reach Larry Clevenger, 18, and Donzil Cutlip, 27, both of Webster Springs, officials said. Cutlip was listed in fair condition at West Virginia University Medical Center at Morganton.

Soon after, rescuers unearthed the body of Bob Bennett, 34, of Bergoo, who had been crushed under tons of rock, Dickinson said.

Hull said he was standing "about 3 feet" from Bennett. He said he was saved by a roof support that held while others around it collapsed.

THE CAVE-IN "SOUNDED LIKE thunder," he said, and Bennett "just disappeared" under the debris.

Cutlip was pinned under an enormous rock for nearly 13 hours, rescuers said, but remained conscious throughout the ordeal and his most serious injuries appeared to be broken bones.

Clevenger and Hull suffered minor injuries.

Clevenger, a recent high school graduate who had never before worked in a mine, was treated and sent home, where his mother said he was "nervous and very upset" but otherwise in good shape.

"He said he talked to a buddy of his, who he was buried with," said Ruth Clevenger. "While they were covered up they kept talking to keep each other going."

It was the second roof fall at the Webster County mine this year. The earlier collapse injured no one but prompted the company to revise its roof-control plan, said Kathy Weaver of the state Mines Department. She said the revised plan was checked by state inspectors and approved July 23.

The mine began production in June and is relatively small, Ms. Weaver said. She said inspectors had cited it for three safety hazards, which she called a relatively low number for a new mine. None of the violations was related to roof control, she said.

The roof fall was one of two serious coal mine accidents in the state Thursday. An acetylene fuel tank exploded in a Ranger Fuel Co. mine in Raleigh County, about 120 miles southwest of Bergoo. Six men were injured in the explosion; four required hospitalization.

Police eavesdropped on Lindbergh suspect

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — State police eavesdropped on conversations between Bruno Richard Hauptmann and his wife and lawyers while he was jailed in the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh's infant son, The Record of Hackensack reported Friday.

Monitoring by officials was legal then, but now would constitute grounds for a mistrial or dismissal of charges, officials said.

The newspaper said in a copyright story that one example occurred after the jury, on Feb. 13, 1935, came in with its verdict of guilty in the 1932 kidnapping and murder.

The next day, Hauptmann's wife and defense lawyer Edward J. Reilly visited him.

"Immediately after the interview with his wife, attorney Reilly made a final effort to have this man confess and upon being unsuccessful left for New York," a police officer reported to superiors.

HAUPTMANN DIED IN THE electric chair in 1936, still maintaining his innocence.

Transcripts of officers' recollections of the conversations also include a boast by a former state police captain that authorities were "kept pretty well acquainted at all times" with supposedly secret jury deliberations.

The clandestine monitoring was done by officers fluent in German, the language Hauptmann and his wife usually used.

State Police archives were opened last week by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne after Robert Bryan, a San Francisco lawyer representing Mrs. Hauptmann, filed a $100 million wrongful death suit in federal court.

The jailhouse talks were "in essence, bugged," Bryan said. "As a defendant involved in a criminal proceeding, he still has a right to privacy. And that right was apparently curtailed."

Former Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who prosecuted Hauptmann, claimed he knew nothing of the eavesdropping.

Mrs. Hauptmann was especially suspicious of a visit by Dr. John F. Condon, a go-between in ransom negotiations following the kidnapping.

Ball! Ball! Get that fumble. The action is basketball between Midland College and Laredo, but looks more like a careless football pitch out gone loose.

Chaps topple Laredo

Wilson, Webb befuddle Palominos, 94-83

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Locked in a struggle for survival with 12 minutes to go, Midland College came to life with an 11-point sprint that keyed a 94-83 victory over previously unbeaten Laredo Junior College in the the Chaparral Classic Friday night.

Howard College, making its first appearance in the meet, outgunned St. Philips, 120-104, as 6-1 Leon Isaac and 6-6 Nathan Givens, a couple of deadeye freshmen, scored 30 points apiece to pace the Hawks.

In the third game, Barton County, Kansas, a winner over Ranger Junior College Thursday, met Odessa College, a loser to Laredo in the first round.

THE TOURNAMENT concludes tonight with MC seeking to avenge a loss to Barton County in the 8:30 p.m. game at the Chaparral Center. The Chaps bowed to the Kansans in a tournament two weeks ago at Great Bend, Kan.

Tonight's other games will send Howard against Laredo at 4:30 and Odessa against St. Philips at 6:30 p.m.

MC raised its record to 7-4 with its second win in the Classic while Laredo is 9-1 for the season and 1-1 in the Classic after Friday's loss in a game that looked as though it would be a barn burner to the wire. MC had just taken a 56-52 on a couple of Wilson baskets. Ken Satterfield, who had 27 points for the Palominos, cut it to two with a little over 12 minutes to go in a contest that had been tied 11 times.

THAT'S WHEN Webb and Wilson and a arm-wiggling serpentine defense changed the course of the game.

MC reeled off 11 straight points in a three minute stretch to take command. Webb ignited the rally by hitting a short jumper from the lane. McCain then fed David Thompson for two on a booming fast break layup. Webb then converted a three point play off a Wilson feed and then came the play that brought the house down and even had the Chaps on the bench standing up and applauding.

McCain made a bold back court theft and fed the 5-6 Webb, who turned the perfect lead pass into a thunderous dunk that would have done credit to Ernie Tate.

That seemed to put the final stamp of approval on the win. MC never let Laredo creep inside nine points over the final nine minutes.

Wilson scored 33 points, hitting 14 of 20 from the field while Webb was 8 of 12 from the floor for a 25-point night. Six-six Chester Smith, supplied a 12-point lick in the final half for a 14 point night.

Although Satterfield scored 27, Harold Howard's 28 led the Palominos.

Barton County, Kan., and Midland became the only 2-0 tournament teams left when the Cougars rolled over Odessa College, 74-60, as Jeff Noble and Willis Thomas led the way with 13 points each.

The win raised Barton's record to 4-5 for the season and dropped OC to 4-6.

It was tied at 31 at intermission and still close with Barton holding a 35-33 edge when the Cougars went on a 14-4 tear to take a 49-37 lead with 10 minutes left.

Luis Clark, converting 10 free throws, was high scorer for the Wranglers.

Character pulls Dogs to win

Gunnels' 18 points aids MHS 57-54 victory

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

ODESSA — The Midland High Bulldogs can chalk season victory No. 8 up to sheer character after a nail biting 57-54 win over the El Paso Eastwood Troopers here Friday night in the semifinals of the Odessa Invitational basketball tournament.

With only 3:20 left in the game and the Bulldogs hitting nothing from the field and trailing by seven points, it looked like MHS was ready to list loss No. 2 on the ledger. After dominating the first half of play while owning a 13-point lead early in the second period, the Purple Pack hit only eight points in the third quarter and owned only three points after the first 5:30 of play in the final period. Quite frankly, it looked like a lost cause.

But character reared its head and MHS was headed to tonight's 8 p.m. finals against the winner of the Odessa High-El Paso Riverside winner, who played in the late game Friday.

Preston Robertson, who led all scorers with 22 points, got the rally started with a layup and Jim Gunnels, who had his best varsity night ever with 18 points, followed with a layup and two free throws to bring the Dogs to within one at 54-53 with 1:49 to play.

It was at that point the the Pack defense began swarming like an interrupted bee hive. Don Sharnowski, who had only eight points on the night, stole the ball and raced the length of the court for an easy layup game winner with 42 seconds left. Robertson added two free throws with 27 seconds left to ice it.

"They (Eastwood) tried to float the ball over Barr's (Bolger) head and I saw it coming all the way. I just stepped in and got it and then just said to myself all the way down the court to put it up easy," Sharnowski explained.

"I looked up with 2:33 to play and we were down by five and had no timeouts left. I told our kids it was time for us to force the action because Eastwood had been doing that to us in the second half," MHS coach Jack Stephenson stated. "You talk about a beautiful bunch of kids, we have them. That's the second night in a row they have won with pure character. We had to beat Amarillo Tascosa in the fourth quarter last night when we were down and they just seem to find a way to do it."

It could be argued that the Bulldogs should have never been in a position for such dramatics in the first place. The Pack roared out of the starting gate for a quick 11-2 lead and led 22-10 at the end of the period as Robertson canned 10 of his 22 points. Eastwood trimmed the margin to 37-29 at the half, but they couldn't seem to solve the problem that Gunnels was giving them. Gunnels, whose highest outing has been eight points this year and averaging five per game, scored 14 points in the first half. His other four came in the fourth period.

"I scored 20 points when I was a sophomore, but that wasn't on the varsity so it doesn't count. This is my best," Gunnels said. "We had a good first half, but Eastwood started beating us on the boards and we went cold."

Cold was the correct wording. The Bulldogs hit four of 11 in the third period and four of 12 shots in the fourth after hitting 59 per cent from the floor in the first half.

It was a battle against two teams that were powers last year in West Texas. Both earned Region I tournament berths and both were eliminated from the state playoffs by Fort Worth Dunbar. Eastwood is now 3-4 on the year.

Eastwood's Rick Clark was the only Trooper in double figures with 16 points and 12 came in the second half as the 6-7 senior led the surge at MHS. Clark's bucket with 4:52 left in the game gave Eastwood a 48-46 lead, their first since scoring the first points of the night to start the game. Nate Shepherd hit a jumper off the glass and Clark connected on a free throw before Guy Crenshaw gave Eastwood a 53-46 lead, the zenith of the Trooper attack.

The 8-1 Bulldogs are now in position to capture their second straight tournament title tonight. MHS won the Tall City Invitational last weekend.

In other tournament action Friday, Lubbock High defeated Odessa Ector, 72-62, to earn the right to meet Odessa Permian in the 4:40 p.m. consolation finals. Permian defeated Tascosa by a narrow 58-57 margin.

Rebels charge by Coronado

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels had trouble doing it, but they snapped a two-game losing streak Friday night by defeating a stubborn Lubbock Coronado 92-85 at Lee Gym.

Both Lee and Coronado came out running in the first quarter and kept up the fast pace until the final buzzer in what turned out to be one of the most exciting basketball games of the early 1981-82 season.

The Rebels overcame an early Mustang lead by taking an 18-14 edge at the end of the first quarter and held a two-point 40-38 margin at intermission.

It was in the third quarter that things got a little hairy for Lee as the Mustangs, behind the 13-point effort of wing-man Cody Love, rallied to take a 69-65 advantage and control of that fickle guardian of all sporting events, momentum.

Mo would have really been a factor for Coronado if Lee center Andre Van Buren hadn't overshadowed Love's performance in that period, scoring 20 of his game high 38 points to keep the Rebels within striking distance.

And being within range was all the Rebels needed as they outscored Coronado 27-16 in the final quarter to claim the victory and a 5-2 season record. The loss dropped the Mustangs to 3-3.

At approximately the mid point of the fourth frame, the Rebels caught up with the Mustangs. Forward Alvin Dunson brought the momentum back to Lee by catching fire at that point, connecting on two close-range buckets and a free throw for a 79 76 lead. Mustang center Brad Enloe scored an answering two-pointer to bring the score to 80-78.

Lee came back with guard Randy Pepper's score on a fast break followed by another Enloe basket and a Kevin Wilcox layup on a steal to tie the game at 82 with 1:30 remaining to play in the ball game. From that point on it was a foot race and it turned out Lee had enough horses left to win.

In that final push toward victory, the Rebels cashed in on vital free throws, scoring eight of the last 10 points from the chairty line, including one by guard Steve Cherryholms that capped a three-point play and gave Lee an 89-84 lead with less than a minute to play. Pepper got the final three points for the Rebels at the line and Enloe and Pat Norris scored the last two buckets for Coronado.

"I went scouting yesterday (Thursday) in Odessa and gave the guys a rest," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "Sometimes I think a day off helps. They (Coronado) played an excellent man-to-man defense, the best man-to-man we've found all year. It was good to win. We'd lost two in a row to Midland High and Snyder and we needed to win.

"Steve Cherryholms' three-point play was very important for us in the ball game. I was very pleased to win."

For some reason, which Coach Stueckler prefered not to discuss, 6-foot-6 center Kenneth Brown was not in the game against Coronado, he was in the stands. He said that it wasn't a "disciplinary action, he hasn't missed any practices, and he'll be back with us for the next ball game."

That next ball game will be on Monday at Chaparral Center against Sweetwater with sophomores at 4:15, junior varsity at 6:15 and varsity at 8 p.m.

In sophomre action Friday night, Lee scored a 60-54 victory over Coronado. Andre Mayfield and Willie Long led the soph's with 10 points each while Lowrie scored 14 and Erwin and Price 10 each for the Mustangs. Lee's sophomore record is now 3-3.

Coronado won the junior varsity battle by a 58-49 count. James Day led the Lee scorers with 20 points while Outland scored 21 for Coronado followed by Law with 12. The loss dropped Lee to 3-2 on the season.

Lubbock Coronado (85): Kurt Johnson, 1-0-5-2; Kevin Hensley, 5-4-1-14; Kevin Wilcox, 3-0-2-6; Cookie Dewberry, 4-1-4-9; Cody Love, 9-11-2-29; Pat Norris, 1-1-3-3; Jaycne Conner, 3-0-2-6; Brad Enloe, 7-2-5-14; Martin Higgins, 1-0-2-2. Totals: 35-19-26-85.

Midland Lee (82): Barry Blackwell, 4-6-3-14; Randy Pepper, 5-8-1-18; Alvin Dunson, 4-1-4-9; Andre Van Buren, 18-3-5-38; Olen Smith, 2-6-4-10; Steve Cherryholms, 1-1-4-3. Totals: 34-24-21-82.

Wink moves into A finals with 40-23 win

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Steve Eggleston threw for 112 yards and three touchdowns on just five completions to lead the Wink Wildcats to a 40-23 win over Aspermont in a Class A semifinal schoolboy game Friday night.

Wink, now 13-0 for the season, will face Saturday's Harleton-Bremond winner next week for the state title.

Eggleston threw a 15-yard scoring strike to halfback Joe Wolf and a 12-yarder to split end Ron Rasco to ignite a 21-point third quarter that turned a 13-7 Wink lead into a 34-15 advantage.

Running backs Wolf and Ronnie Thomas, who combined for 159 rushing yards in the second half, complemented Eggleston's passing and kept the Aspermont defense off-balance the entire half.

Thomas sandwiched a 25-yard touchdown run between Eggleston's passes in the third quarter and Wolf scored on a 4-yard run in the fourth quarter to boost Wink's lead to 40-15 with 9:45 left.

Aspermont opened the scoring as halfback Marvin Louis scampered 15 yards for a touchdown. Wink then scored on its first offensive play and Eggleston hit Rasco for a 50-yard scoring strike. The PAT failed, however.

Midland College's Chester Smith (40) appears to have taken charge of this rebound with a space-clearing, leaping split and the ball tucked safely away in Chaparral Classic action Friday night.

Army-Navy square off today

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For Army, the game is a chance to salvage a season. And for Navy — on its way to a Liberty Bowl meeting with Ohio State — the game means just as much as ever.

The 82nd edition of the Army-Navy football game kicks off this afternoon at Veterans Stadium before a national television audience and an expected crowd of near 60,000.

One of those attending the game will be former quarterback Roger Staubach, a Heisman Trophy winner who went on to National Football League stardom with the Dallas Cowboys.

Staubach, who will be inducted into the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame in ceremonies in New York next week, will be a guest of the Naval Academy.

"Staubach isn't going to play though," said Army Coach Ed Cavanaugh, whose 3-7 Cadets will have enough problems with Navy, 7-3 and on its way to the Dec. 30 meeting with Ohio State.

Under Coach George Welsh, Navy has won seven of the last eight clashes with Army and now leads the series 38-37-6.

But upsets are as much a tradition in the annual meeting as are Army's mule and Navy's goat.

Three years ago, sophomore Eddie Meyers came into the game as Navy's fourth-string tailback. He exploded for a record-breaking 278 yards rushing and three touchdowns.

Meyers is now a senior, ranked fifth in the country in rushing with 1,199 yards, 93 short of the Navy season record and already the career rushing leader for the academy with 2,816 yards. Sophomore quarterback Marco Paganelli has thrown for 850 yards and rushed for 274.

Army's biggest offensive weapon will be junior running back Gerald Walker.

Knotty problems exist in NFL playoff picture

By The Associated Press

Two National Football League teams can claim playoff berths with victories Sunday, while eight teams locked in first-place ties in three divisions hope to unravel the knots.

The Cincinnati Bengals can clinch a playoff berth if they defeat the the San Francisco 49ers. A Bengals' victory coupled with a loss by Pittsburgh, which plays Oakland Monday night, would make Cincinnati the American Football Conference Central champion.

Philadelphia, the defending National Football Conference champion, can win a playoff spot if it defeats the Washington Redskins.

PLAYOFF BERTHS already belong to the the Dallas Cowboys and the San Francisco 49ers.

The Kansas City Chiefs, tied with Denver and San Diego at 8-5 in the American Conference Western Division, will try to whittle down the deadlock when they visit the Broncos, whom they beat 28-14 last Oct. 18.

The Chargers meet another playoff contender, the Buffalo Bills.

In the National Conference Central Division, Detroit is tied at 7-6 with Tampa Bay and Minnesota. The Lions visit the Green Bay Packers, whom they edged 31-27 on Oct.25. The Packers are 6-7 and still in the chase for a playoff berth. The Bucs host the Atlanta Falcons, another 7-6 team dreaming of the playoffs, and the Vikings visit the NFC Central's cellar-dwelling Chicago Bears.

The Miami Dolphins and New York Jets, 8-4-1 in the AFC Eastern Division, each hope to emerge as the sole possessor of the top spot. The Dolphins host New England, while the Jets are at Seattle.

SUNDAY'S OTHER games include the 49ers at Cincinnati; Cowboys at Baltimore; Los Angeles at the New York Giants; and New Orleans at St.Louis.

On Thursday, Houston clipped Cleveland 17-13 and dropped the Browns into sole possession of last place in the AFC Central with a 5-9 record. The Oilers now are 6-8 in the AFC Central.

"You can't think about playoffs. You have to think only about Denver. Every game is important right now and certainly Denver will be a very important game," said Chiefs Coach Marv Levy.

Just two week ago the Broncos were 8-3 and leading their division in Coach Dan Reeves' rookie season. A loss to Kansas City Sunday would, as Reeves puts it, "make our chances of reaching the playoffs very remote" due to a complicated tie-breaking system.

Denver could use some help from the Chargers' upcoming opponents. San Diego's remaining schedule appears tougher than Denver's — after Buffalo, the Chargers meet Tampa Bay on the road and then return home for Oakland. Denver's last two games are against Seattle and Chicago.

THE BILLS, like San Diego, are 8-5, but trail the Jets and Dolphins in the AFC East. It's their firstSan Diego won 20-1thé Chargers since the 1980 playoffs when San Diego won 20-14.

The Lions are aiming for their first playoff berth since 1970 when they earned a wild-card spot, but were eliminated in a 5-0 loss to Dallas. Detroit, which wraps up the season with games at home (where it is unbeaten) against Minnesota and Tampa Bay), hasn't won a division title since 1957, when it obliterated Cleveland 59-14 for the NFL crown.

The Packers are trying for their best finish since their 8-7-1 record in 1978. Green Bay finished tied for first with the Vikings that year but lost to Minnesota for the division crown.

Atlanta, eliminated from contention for the NFC West title they won a year ago, still can take a wild card. Falcons quarterback Steve Bartkowski, third among NFC passers, has thrown for 3,310 yards, just two behind conference leader Tommy Kramer of Minnesota.

The Vikings, two-game leaders in the NFC Central only two weeks ago, have lost two in a row and have lost sole possession of the lead. They hope to make it a season sweep of the 3-10 Bears, whom the Vikings beat 24-21 earlier this season. The Vikes close out the season at Detroit at at home against Kansas City.

THE 49ERS, having locked up their first division title (NFC West) since 1972, will be trying to keep Cincinnati from closing in on its first division title (AFC Central) since 1973. Cincinnati's remaining games are on the road against Pittsburgh and Atlanta. The Bengals can clinch the title by winning two of final three games or combining one victory with one Steeler loss. They can clinch at least a wild card by just winning one game.

San Francisco shares the NFC's best record, 10-3, with Dallas, which takes a one-game lead in the East Division into its game against the Colts, whose losing streak has stretched to 12 games.

The Cowboys, who pulled out of a first-place tie with Philadelphia last weekend, have clinched a playoff berth and play home against the Eagles and then against the Giants in New York.

A victory for the Eagles will assure them at least an NFC wild-card spot. Philadelphia walloped the Redskins 36-13 earlier this season.

The Jets, already assured of their first winning season since 1969 (the year after they beat Baltimore in the Super Bowl), now go after their first victory ever against Seattle.

Seattle quarterback Jim Zorn, who suffered a broken leg last Sunday against Oakland, will be replaced by Dave Krieg.

THE DOLPHINS, coming off last Monday night's come-from-behind victory against the Eagles, have beaten the Patriots 13 straight times at the Orange Bowl.

The Rams, in the Super Bowl just two years ago, are on the verge of elimination from the playoff for the first time sinc 1972, the last year they didn't have a winning record. The Giants are still shooting for their first winning season since '72 and their first playoff berth since 1963.

The Cardinals, like the Giants, are 6-7 in the NFC East and hoping for a wild-card berth.

SWC Cougars upset, 87-85

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dan Callandrillo's 16-foot jumper with three seconds remaining in overtime gave Seton Hall an 87-85 upset over the reigning Southwest Conference champion Houston Cougars in college basketball at the Meadowlands Arena on Friday.

Callandrillo finished with a game-high 34 points, his personal best.

Houston junior Larry Micheaux, who finished with a team-high 27 points, scored nine in a Cougars' 11-5 spurt to tie the regulation game at 79-79.

With two seconds remaining in regulation time and the score tied 79-79, Houston's Clark Young was called for a traveling violation, and the ball was turned over to Seton Hall. Darryl Devero sent an inbound pass to Howard McNeil. He passed to Mike Ingram, who missed a top-of-the-key jumper as the clock ran out and the game went into overtime.

Devero scored first in the overtime and the score see-sawed. Eric Davis tied it at 81, followed with a basket by Devero, then another by Davis, who tied it a second time at 83. Callandrillo hit a jump shot which was followed by a basketfrom Clark Young to give Houston its third tie with 38 seconds left.

After Callandrillo gave the Pirates the 87-85 lead, Young missed a desperation shot thrown from just inside the half-court line as the clock ran out.

The victory gave Seton Hall a 3-0 record, and evened Houston's at 1-1

SWT Bobcats face reserve QB in semis

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — The Northern Michigan Wildcats, whose regular quarterback underwent an appendectomy Thursday, will rely on a signal-caller without a completion this year in Saturday's NCAA Division II semifinal against Southwest Texas State.

The undefeated and top-ranked Wildcats meet the Bobcats, 11-1, at 11:30 a.m. CST at Southwest Texas' home field in a regionally televised game.

Northern Michigan will start freshman Steve Preston at quarterback. Preston played in four games, threw six passes, completed none and had one intercepted.

He will replace sophomore Tom Bertoldi, who missed a Wednesday practice with what he thought was the flu. On Thursday he was rushed to a Marquette, Mich., hospital for an emergency appendectomy.

Bertoldi was fourth in the nation in total offense, accounting for 222 yards per game with his passing and running. He threw for 443 yards and two touchdowns in Northern Michigan's 55-6 quarterfinal rout over Elizabeth City.

"I'm disappointed more for the team and Tom," said Northern Michigan Coach Bill Rademacher. "But I think we still can win."

"Our quarterbacks are trained in our system and it will be a matter of whether he can utilize his training," Rademacher said of Preston.

The big difference, obviously, could come in the passing game, according to the coach. "Just how much it will be affected will be determined by what plays I call and how we adjust to what they do to us," he said.

Northern Michigan enters the game with the No. 2 passing offense in Division II.

"Out backup is prepared and he'll do what he has to. I think we have a well-balanced offense," said Rademacher.

Southwest Texas Coach Jim Wacker said he also knows about injuries. Defensive end Mike Baliff, who suffered an ankle injury, and defensive tackle Rick Sowell, a knee victim, are out for the playoffs.

"Hey, we're still two ahead of them," said Wacker.

Georgia eyes top; Tech wants to end skid today

ATLANTA (AP) — Second-ranked Georgia, still alive in its chase to claim a second consecutive national collegiate football championship, tangles with struggling arch-rival Georgia Tech Saturday in a regular season finale.

The Bulldogs, bound for a Sugar Bowl date with No. 10 Pittsburgh, are whopping 20-point favorites to dispose of Tech before a sellout Grant Field crowd of 58,121. The kickoff is schedule for 11:30 p.m. CST as the opener of a nationally televised doubleheader (ABC) that will be followed by the annual Army-Navy clash at Philadelphia.

Georgia, 9-1, will be trying to extend a seven-game winning streak since dropping a 13-3 decision at Clemson, currently the nation's top-ranked power.

Tech, 1-9, has lost nine consecutive outings since upsetting then second-ranked Alabama 24-21 in the Jackets' season opener. It equals the longest losing streak in history for Tech, which never has lost 10 games in a season.

The Jackets will have a new look — breaking out blue jerseys for a home game for the first time since 1947 and also having quarterback Mike Kelley back at the controls after he sat out five games with a separated shoulder.

There won't be any new wrinkles from Georgia, however.

"When it's not necessary to change, it's necesary not to change," said Coach Vince Dooley of the Bulldogs. "It'll be Herschel Walker left, Herschel Walker right, Herschel Walker up the middle and we'll fake it to him once in awhile and throw a pass."

Walker, who already has gained All-American honors two years in a row, will be closing in on the Southeastern Conference single season rushing record.

Walker has 1,666 yards in 10 games and needs only 20 to equal the conference mark held by Charles Alexander of Louisiana State. The Bulldog star has surpassed by 50 yards the total yardage he had last year when he broke the NCAA rushing record for a freshman.

Tech also is high on a freshman tailback, Robert Lavette, who leads the team in rushing with 819 yards and ranks No. 1 in Atlantic Coast Conference all-purpose running.

"They have so many weapons," said Tech Coach Bill Curry. "I've never seen a Georgia team with so many. I might not have seen any team with so many.

"The illusion is that if you stop Herschel Walker, you've got it made," Curry said. But he said that wasn't the case because Georgia also has other outstanding performers such at two-time All-SEC quarterback Buck Belue and All-SEC wide receiver Lindsay Scott, among others.

Belue, who has a 26-2 record as Georgia's starting quarterback, has passed for 1,383 yards and Scott has caught 37 for 574 yards and five touchdowns.

Kapp gets Cal job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Minnesota Vikings quarterback Joe Kapp will be named head football coach Saturday at the University of California — the team he led to its last Rose Bowl — Kapp's attorney said Friday.

Kapp, who starred at Berkeley before starting his professional career in 1959, flew from his Westwood home to Berkeley to be present for the announcement, said Paul Macias.

"He's not officially yet, but he is the coach," Macias said.

The school has scheduled a noon news conference on campus to announce the head coaching choice.

Athletic Director Dave Maggard flew to Los Angeles to dine with Kapp Friday and has said the former quarterback, who has no coaching experience, is a top candidate to succeed Coach Roger Theder, who was fired after the Golden Bears' 2-9 season.

"I've had intense conversations with Joe in the last week," Maggard said before leaving for Los Angeles. "I think he has the ability to work with people ... I believe he has the qualities that will make him a successful head coach."

Macias said he did not know details of the contract, "except I believe it's for three years."

Kapp and Maggard are friends and the two were classmates at Cal in the late 1950s.

Maggard said he was not afraid of Kapp's lack of coaching experience or the fact he has not been involved in the game since the early 1970s.

"He is California football," Maggard said. "I don't know of any Cal player in history who put out any more in football than Joe Kapp. It has been Joe Kapp's life to succeed."

Kapp was quarterback when California last visited the Rose Bowl, a 38-12 loss to Iowa in 1959. He played eight years in the Canadian Football League before joining the Minnesota Vikings in 1967, leading them to the 1969 Super Bowl.

Sierra Blanca 40 per cent open

Sierra Blanca, near Ruidoso, opened four intermediate runs off the Lincoln Chair Thursday as ski season opened in New Mexico. The largest ski area in southern NM was 40 percent open as a result of a 15-inch snowfall last Sunday.

Three other areas opened in northern NM at Angel Fire, Red River and Santa Fe, offering only beginner-level skiing at present. Each is about 10-20 per cent open.

Red River Woodlands, with man-made snow capabilities, will open completely Tuesday while remaining NM ski areas, including Taos Ski Valley, where 10 inches of snow fell last Sunday, remain closed.

At Sierra Blanca, surface conditions are packed man made snow in the beginner area east of the main lodge and packed powder off the Lincoln Chair, which runs to midway.

Concho Crawl slated in San Angelo Dec. 12

The West Texas Running Club's 10th annual Concho Crawl will be held 10 a.m. Dec. 12 at the base of Wink Hill, Highland Range Park, North Concho Lake in San Angelo.

Bill Moore (1417 W Avenue D, San Angelo) is the director for the hilly two and seven mile jaunts. Divisions are for Ladies, 50-over, 40-49, 30-39 and open in the seven mile event while ladies 25-over, girls 24-under, 30-over, high school under and open will compete for two-mile honors.

Crane in hunt for two cage titles

CRANE — Crane's Golden Cranes are still in the hunt for two titles today as the Crane Invitational basketball tournament comes to a close.

The Crane boys got 12 points from Tim Lowe in a 50-41 victory over Alpine while the Crane girls defeated Pecos, 35-30, with Shonda Enos hitting for 11 points.

The Crane girls will meet the winner of the Van Horn-Coahoma game at 6:30 p.m. today in the girls finals. Van Horn won a 45-42 decision over Denver City and Coahoma defeated Odessa High 59-42. In other girls action Friday, Pecos defeated Fort Stockton 42-35 and Odessa High won a 62-45 decision over Denver City.

The Crane boys have a tougher road to the title. They must face Van Horn at noon today to get to the finals, against the winner of the Kermit-Marfa game, also slated for noon. Kermit defeated Coahoma 80-48 in the biggest runaway while Marfa beat Pecos 65-51. Van Horn won against Coleman, 50-46.

In the loser's bracket, Greenwood defeated Stanton 82-44 and Burleson hit for 23 points. Greenwood meets Coleman today for the right to advance to the consolation finals against a team to be decided.

Allen early pick for Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) — Southern California running back Marcus Allen has the inside track on the Heisman Trophy, according to one of his chief competitors.

"If I was to pick, I'd say he was the leading candidate right now," says Jim McMahon, himself a record-breaking quarterback from Brigham Young.

Allen, McMahon and Georgia halfback Herschel Walker were among the leading candidates for the 47th Heisman, which will be awarded tonight to recognize the best college football player in the nation this season.

While Walker disagrees with McMahon's assessment of the situation ("I think I'd choose myself," he said), Allen seems to be the most likely candidate for the award, considering his nonpareil season in the Southern Cal backfield.

Allen, another in a host of fine Trojan running backs, eclipsed the accomplishments of them all by rushing for 2,342 yards in 11 regular-season games — the first player in college history to rush for more than 2,000 yards in a season.

He also led the nation in touchdowns with 23, but despite these accomplishments was disappointed with the season.

Bouchard selected Rookie of the Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Bouchard is about as unlikely a guy to be Rookie of the Year on the NASCAR Grand National stock car circuit as you could find.

It's not that he hasn't proven himself a talented driver during his years as a modified driver on the nation's short tracks. It's just the fact that he is a Yankee, born and bred.

However, Bouchard, born in Fitchburg, Mass., and now working out of Madison, Conn., has stormed the bastions of the Good Ol' Boys of southern stock car racing.

The barrel-chested young man, who built a weightlifter's physique by carrying pianos and refrigerators as part of his dad's furniture moving business, received his Rookie of the Year award Friday night at the NASCAR awards banquet in New York City, where Darrell Waltrip officially was honored as the 1981 Winston Cup champion.

Earlier in the day at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where the ceremony was to take place, Bouchard grinned and said, "At least I'm getting the award up north."

Joe Frazier speaks to newsmen Friday after his 10-round fight with Jumbo Cummings. Frazier, the 37-year-old ex-heavyweight champion who has been retired for 5½ years, didn't get his comeback off to a very good start as he struggled to a draw against Cummings Thursday in Chicago.

Lake Placid idea to be copied by Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Sarajevo, host city of the Winter Olympic Games in 1984, will copy an idea introduced by Lake Placid, N.Y., and stage the medal presentations in the center of town, for all to see.

Lake Placid, the little ski resort in upper New York state, was heavily criticized for some aspects of its handling of the Games last year. But one of its successes was the medals ceremony, held each evening on the frozen lake and followed by fireworks.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), told a news conference Friday that Sarajevo will copy Lake Placid and have the presentations in the downtown area.

"It will be an additional feature of the Games, just as it was at Lake Placid, and it will be free for everybody to see," Samaranch said.

The medals will be presented outside the Skanderia complex, where the figure skating and ice hockey will take place. It is a few hundred yards from the famous street corner where the assassination of Grand Duke Ferdinand in 1914 sparked off World War I.

The IOC executive board ended a three-day meeting with leaders of the international federations controlling winter sports.

Samaranch said he was pleased with preparations for the Games at Sarajevo.

"We believe everything will be completed one year before the Games," he said. "We have no concern about the organization."

But he admitted that after discussions with the organizing committee he still was worried about transportation to Sarajevo. The local airport frequently is closed by bad weather in the winter, and some delegates came late to this week's meeting after an uncomfortable 11-hour train journey through the night from Belgrade, with no sleeping cars available.

"The organizing committee has promised us that Mostar will be prepared as an standby airport for athletes and officials," Samaranch said. Mostar is 80 miles from Sarajevo.

The president added, "We are also asking that arrangements be made for athletes to travel by train in good conditions, if they have to land there."

Samaranch announced the appointment of Arpad Csanadi, the IOC's Hungarian member, as honorary sports director.

Csanadi has played an important role in IOC affairs in recent years as technical adviser and chairman of the Program Commission, which deals with the sports program at the Games.

In his new job he will be responsible for liaison between the IOC and the international sports federations.

Stipanovich sparks Mizzou

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Steve Stipanovich scored 13 points to pace 16th-ranked Missouri to a 87-55 victory over East Carolina in the second game of the Show-Me Classic Friday night.

Missouri, which led 39-27 at halftime, will play first-round winner Wyoming in the Classic's final game Saturday night. Canisius, which lost to Wyoming 73-40 Friday night, meets East Carolina in the consolation game Saturday.

Ricky Frazier and Jon Sundvold chipped in 12 points apiece for the Missouri victory, its 17th consecutive win in the nine-year-old tournament.

UCLA won't appeal findings of investigation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA reportedly won't appeal the findings of an NCAA investigation that allegedly uncovered a number of relatively minor violations in the Bruins' basketball program over a number of years.

The Daily News in Van Nuys, Calif., reported Friday that the NCAA's findings submitted to the university "definitely won't be appealed."

The paper quoted a source close to the UCLA athletic program as saying, "One of the (NCAA) allegations said an assistant (basketball) coach bought a $14 T-shirt for a recruit when the kid said he liked it. Small things like that."

UCLA, given the NCAA's report earlier this week, had 15 days to inform the NCAA whether it would accept or appeal the findings.

The Bruins reportedly will be placed on a two-year probation, but with the only real effect being a ban on UCLA playing in the NCAA basketball tournament in 1982.

The Bruins, NCAA basketball champions 10 times, reportedly would be eligible to participate in the National Invitation Tournament next spring.

UCLA Director Bob Fischer said the reports emerging on the NCAA findings and sanctions are "a lot of speculation," and that there was "some truth to it, some untruths."

First-year basketball Coach Larry Farmer said he hasn't been told of any NCAA decision.

Major grid schools trim membership

TV property rights remain stumbling block

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The nation's major football colleges pared their membership by approximately 40 schools Friday, but the explosive battle over TV property rights was put off until next month.

However, immediately following the windup of a special two-day NCAA convention, there was grumbling from the big-time College Football Association that its 61 members had not really made any inroads toward their longtime goal of being able to control their common interests.

SHORTLY AFTER such groups as the Southern and Southland conferences and the Ivy League — and perhaps the Mid-American and Missouri Valley conferences as well — were kicked downstairs from the Division I-A (137 members in 1981) to I-AA (50), several presidents of CFA institutions reacted angrily with threats of continuing the NCAA-CFA war.

"We got the weakest restructuring proposal of the whole lot," William S. Banowsky, president of the University of Oklahoma, told a meeting of CFA members. He said it was obvious that "our best interests are not the best interests of most (NCAA) institutions.

"Oklahoma feels that now is the time to make an effort to exercise the individuality and economy that any university ought to be able to claim."

Banowsky urged the CFA to formalize a $180 million four-year contract it ratified several months ago with NBC to televise its members' football games.

The NCAA, which claims control over TV rights and has been taken to court over the hot issue by Oklahoma, Georgia and Texas, has signed a $283.5 million two-network pact with ABC and CBS for 1982-85.

THE CFA has until Dec. 14 to sign the contract, which NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers claims is unenforceable, and Banowsky said that "now is the time to attempt to exercise our fundemental property rights."

He said Oklahoma would sign the NBC contract if nine other CFA members joined it, provided one was a fellow Big Eight Conference school and another was Texas. Ronald M. Brown, a Texas vice president, said his school would go along. "The CFA is our authorized negotiating agent," he said.

Chuck Neinas, CFA executive director, said forms would be mailed Saturday to CFA members — all major football schools minus the Big Ten and Pacific-10 conferences — for their final decision on the NBC contract.

The issue of TV property rights was sucessfully tabled until next month's regular convention in Houston when NCAA President James Frank ruled out of order an amendment to clarify those rights. His ruling was challenged, but eventually upheld by the delegates.

It was not clear exactly how many schools would be dropped from Division I-A to I-AA by Friday's legislation, but the Ivy's Southern and Southland Conferences seemed to certain to be among the casualties. Byers estimated I-A would be cut from 137 schools to between 91-94, but other guesses went as high as 102.

ANYWHERE IN that range, however, is more than the CFA had hoped for. But a couple of CFA-backed proposals were soundly defeated.

Adopted was a proposal sponsored by the policy-making NCAA Council that killed the 12-sport option cause — the so-called Ivy League amendment of 1978 which kept the eight Ivy schools in Division I-A and replaced it with two exception provisions plus a waiver opportunity.

A school which does not meet the previous Division I-A requirements of an average paid home football attendance of 17,000 over the past four yrears or a stadium with 30,000 permanent seats can still qualify if:

—It belongs to a conference in which at least six institutions play Division I-A football and more than half of them meet the criteria. (This saved the Pacific Coast Athletic Association which recently admitted Nevada-Las Vegas, giving it four schools out of seven which meet the standards.)

—If it can average 20,000 for all games, home and away, for the appropriate period.

A non-complying school also can petition Division I-A members directly for a waiver that would provide instant acceptance.

"We'll go the waiver route," said Seaver Peters, athletic director at Dartmouth.

Carr leads Shockers

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Junior Antoine Carr scored 23 points and pulled down six rebounds to lead fourth-ranked Wichita State to a 100-76 victory over the University of the District of Columbia in the first round of the McDonald's Classic Friday night.

Carr, a 6-foot-9 forward, led the Wichita State attack. The host Shockers, 2-0, blew out the Firebirds, 2-1, in the first half, exploding for 11 straight points.

Earl Jones, the Firebird's 7-0 sophomore center, had a game-high 30 points.

Fumbles doom Grand Prairie

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Two fourth-quarter touchdowns keyed by Grand Prairie fumbles sealed a 28-21 Lake Highlands victory over the Gophers in Class 5A quarterfinal schoolboy action Friday at Texas Stadium.

Lake Highlands halfback Alvin Rettig scored both of the final-quarter tuouchdowns on runs of 2 and 14 yards, finishing the evening with 151 rushing yards. The Wildcats, 13-0, will play the winner of Saturday's contest between Hereford and Fort Worth Eastern Hills.

With the score tied 14-14 until early in the fourth period, Grand Prairie's Rusty Lagow fumbled on his own 2-yard line and Lake Highlands' Bobby Kinder recovered 2 yards short of the goal.

On the following play, Rettig scored on a 2-yard run and Todd Tschantz added the extra point, boosting the Wildcats to a 21-14 advantage. With 3:58 left, Grand Prairie quarterback Marion Brown tossed a 14-yard pass to Leonard Smith, but the ball popped out and Lake Highlands' Thomas Jefferson recovered at the Gopher 37.

Lake Highlands drove 37 yards in six plays, with Rettig going over from the 14 for a 28-14 lead with 1:20 remaining.

Cavalier job goes to Daly

Philadelphia 76ers assistant coach Chuck Daly officially will be named head coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers on today, Cavaliers owner Ted Stepien said Friday night.

Former Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown earlier Friday rejected an offer to take over as coach in Cleveland. Brown, who was fired by the Hawks after last season, has two years remaining on his Atlanta contract. He is currently a commentator on the USA cable television network.

Don Delaney officially was ousted as the Cavaliers' coach Thursday, but Stepien said that Delaney will remain as the Cavaliers' general manager...

Bob Lutz, Rod Laver and Sherwood Stewart all won their second matches without a loss Friday to move a step closer to gaining a berth in the final of the $35,000 Xerox Grand Champions Master Tournament...

Tom Nieporte birdied two of the last four holes to take a 1-stroke lead in the second round of the Professional Golfers Association Colonial Penn seniors classic Friday. Tied for second are Miller Barber, Gardner Dickinson and Auggie Navarro with 3-under-par 140s...

Saying, "Naturally, I wouldn't do anything to jeopardize my career in the NFL," Miami Dolphins quarterback Don Strock wants television commercials he and his wife did for a Miami restaurant taken off the air because the National Football League and FBI have approached him about the restaurant's reputation as a meeting place for organized crime figures...

Gil Perreault, the Buffalo Sabres' all-time leading scorer and the only player left from the team's first year in 1970-71, has been named captain of the National Hockey League club...

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, plans to visit North and South Korea next April to try to ensure a full entry in the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul...

The Edmonton Oilers have lost left winger Dave Hunter for at least a month with a badly sprained knee...

Striker Giorgio Chinaglia of the Cosmos, whose 155 career goals is the highest total in North American League history, announced that he will play with the club's indoor team...

Outfielder Joe Rudi, whose defensive heroics and timely hitting helped Oakland win three world championships in the 1970s, returned to the A's Friday as a free agent.

Rudi, who began his major league career with Oakland in 1964, went to the California Angels as a free agent in 1977 and played there until being traded to the Boston Red Sox last January...

The Colorado Rockies and the St. Louis Blues completed a three-player trade Friday in which the Rockies acquired defensemen Joe Micheletti and Dick Lamby in exchange for defenseman Bill Baker...

Noel is ready to keep title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Going into the ring as a champion will be a new experience for Claude Noel when he defends his World Boxing Association title Saturday against Arturo Frias. But the title holder of only three months says he has already learned what pressures come with the crown.

"I know as a champion that all the challengers come to get what a champion has," said Noel. "I know I have to be prepared for the opposition. I can't underrate him in any way."

NOEL, 33, who didn't begin boxing regularly as a professional until six years ago, was given a shot at the WBA lightweight crown when it was vacated by the WBA after then champion Sean O'Grady of Oklahoma City refused to defend against Noel.

He captured the title Sept. 12 with a 15-round decision over Rodolfo "Gato" Gonzales in Atlantic City and will defend it for the first time against the No. 9 ranked Frias.

Noel, of Trinidad, brings a 30-3 record with 17 knockouts into the bout against Frias, who carries a 22-1 mark.

FRIAS, WHOSE only loss came in a 10-round split decision last summer to former WBA champion Ernesto Espana, is a late substitute for Gonzalo Montellano, who withdrew from the bout with a back injury.

Frias, who never has gone more than 10 rounds, expressed confidence he could go all the way if necessary in the scheduled 15-round fight.

Three way tie for mixed golf lead

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Despite gusty crosswinds, Tom Purtzer and Jane Blalock fired seven birdies Friday to move into a three-way tie for the lead after two rounds in the $500,000 J.C. Penney Mixed Team Golf Tournament.

The duo tied with early leaders Andy Bean and Sally Little and partners Mark O'Meara and Amy Alcott, who were second after the first round. The teams finished with 10-under-par 134s.

Purtzer and Blalock combined for a 7-under-par 65 round to move up from a fourth-place 69 finish in Thursday's opening round at Bardmoor Country Club.

In second place, were teammates Jim Simons and Dot Germain at 9-under-par 135.

Tom Kite and Beth Daniel were tied with Vance Heafner and Kathy Morse two strokes off the lead at 136.

Defending champions Curtis Strange and Nancy Lopez-Melton were bunched up five strokes back at 5-under 139 with six other teams.

"We got off to a good start," Purtzer said after he and Blalock birdied five of their first seven holes. One of the birdies was on a three-foot putt, the rest were of nine or 12 feet.

"We told ourselves we were locked into 65 on the first tee," he said. "By the fourth hole, we were just having fun. We were both leaving ourselves 12- and 15-footers."

The format of the 48-team, four-day tournament — the winning team receives $100,000, with $50,000 for each player — calls for partners to hit each other's drives, then select one ball to hole out on the par-4 and par-5 holes. It is selected drive, alternate shot on the par-3 holes.

Bean and Little combined for four birdies over the 7,015-yard Bardmoor Country Club course. Bean-Little put together a 4-under-par 68 to go into the lead with an opening round 66.

"We just didn't make any putts today" Bean said. "I thought the course played tough today with the winds."

Alcott and O'Meara, first-time partners, hit identical rounds of 67-67. They sunk four birdies, three-putted the 11th hole for a bogey and made it up on the 16th when Alcott with a 15-foot putt.

"Mark and I make a good team," Alcott said. "Neither of us is hitting the ball real well, but, we're holding each other up when we're in trouble."

Although O'Meara-Alcott and Bean-Little complained the winds slowed them down, Purtzer and Blalock said the winds posed no problem. They have played as a team four times before.

Bean said he missed a lot of short putts.

"In the middle of the round, we were trying to force things to happen and you just can't do that," the University of Florida graduate said.

Gervin guns SA past Blazers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — George Gervin fired in 45 points Friday night to fuel San Antonio to a 127-111 victory over Portland in a contest between division leaders of the National Basketball Association's Western Conference.

Ron Brewer added 25 points and three other Spurs hit in double figures as the Midwest Division leaders upped their record to 13-5.

Mychal Thompson led the Trail Blazers, the Pacific Division leaders, with 25 points and Calvin Natt contributed 20.

San Antonio led 32-30 after one quarter and 66-58 at halftime after the score was tied eight times and the lead changed hands five times.

San Antonio led 94-85 after three quarters and the Trail Blazers never got closer than seven points after that.

The loss snapped a four-game losing streak for Portland and dropped its record to 12-5.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

★ Just check the chart.

IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS	YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS	THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS
$50,000	50%	25%
$35,000	40%	20.83%
$25,000	30%	17.86%
$20,000	25%	16.67%

*Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

Clovis, Hobbs to battle for AAAA title tonight

By The Associated Press

Vince Lombardi said it best and said it often, and Eric Roanhaus and Doug James have kept it in season.

The subject is blocking and tackling — what Lombardi philosophized football was all about — and no one has done it better this year in the New Mexico prep ranks than Roanhaus' Clovis Wildcats and James' Hobbs Eagles.

Saturday night at Clovis' Leon Williams Stadium, the Wildcats and Eagles will display their assorted football talents in a battle that will decide the Class AAAA football champion.

The collision between the two southern New Mexico powerhouses who finished the regular season ranked 1-2 in The Associated Press poll, figures to produce few surprises on the field. The two rivals have seen enough of each other on film and across the line of scrimmage to know their strengths and weaknesses and both Roanhaus and James have said they will go with what got them this far.

So this year's title is expected to be decided in the trenches, where the blockers and tacklers live.

"I'm not anticipating anything less than a real head-knocker," said Roanhaus. "Defensively we have to get our kids in a position to make the tackles and offensively we have to be able to move the ball on them."

But while it is likely to be the linemen that decide which way the plot unfolds, most of the attention from what is expected to be a crowd of more than 10,000 will focus on the two teams' talent-loaded backfields.

Top runners elect to stay out of Fiesta Bowl Marathon

PHOENIX (AP) — Close to 4,000 runners are expected to participate in Saturday's 11th annual Fiesta Bowl Marathon here although many of the sport's major names will be missing.

Bill Rodgers and Alberto Salazar have bypassed the event, as have women runners like Grete Waitz and Patti Catalano because of the absence of television coverage, a race official said.

Rogers said there wasn't enough sponsors to make running here Saturday worthwhile so he has instead chosen to run in a race at Beverly Hills, Calif.

But record-holder Ed Mendoza, former University of Arizona track standout, is expected to run in addition to 1977 winner Robert Waugh and top contender Steven French of Salt Lake City. Race officials said 3,900 runners have entered the race thus far — 3,261 men and 663 women — from 40 states and three foreign countries. The 26-mile, 385-yard course will wind up at Scottsdale Community College.

Mendoza set the Fiesta Bowl Marathon mark of 2:14:13 in 1975 while Waugh posted a 2:21:27 and French has a personal best of 2:18:14.

Goddard quints reach cage finals

Goddard Black defeated Alamo Red, 84-24, and Goddard White downed San Jacinto Green, 63-40, in the semifinals of the Eighth Grade Basketball Tournament at Alamo Gym Friday to set up an all Goddard final at 10:45 a.m. today.

Goddard Black and SJ Green meet in the third place game at 9 a.m. and San Jacinto White faces Alamo Grey in the consolation final, also at 9 a.m., in the Alamo Gym.

Beaumont Hebert victim of upset

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — Place kicker John Simpson booted a 26-yard field goal with 3 seconds left in the third quarter to propell Fort Bend Willowridge to a 15-14 upset of previously unbeaten Beaumont Hebert.

The victory will pit the Eagles, 12-1, against the winner of Saturday's Brownwood-Rockwall semifinal playoff game.

Willowridge fullback Anthony White rushed for 156 yards on 26 carries, including a 71-yard touchdown run, in the third quarter.

The Eagles jumped to a 6-0 lead with 7:36 left in the first quarter when wingback Terry Rose scored on a 35-yard run to cap a seven-play, 73-yard drive. Simpson missed the extra point.

Hebert scored with 9:18 left in the half when quarterback Gerald Landry connected with wingback Floyd Dixon on a 51-yard touchdown pass. Kenneth Johnson kicked his first of two extra points.

Hog rules the junkyard

HUGHES, Ark. (AP) — He's not as mean as a junkyard dog, but he's one intimidating hog.

If you look closely, Charlie's wiggly tail will give away his pleasant nature. But this porker is so portly — 500 pounds — that he's been enlisted as the "guard hog" at the junkyard next to Jackson Used Cars.

One of the lot's owners, Wayne Beene, 41, adopted the hog in 1979 after mechanic Johnny Washington spotted Charlie slumped over and partly frozen in the snow and mud, apparently pushed out of his mother's litter by frisky siblings.

Washington chopped Charlie out of the freeze with an ax and took him to work, thawing him near a small gas heater in the shop.

Charlie now rules the junkyard, with his hefty size and 4-inch tusks. Beene said thefts are down, and gives some credit to Charlie.

Charlie has been known to give customers a fright.

Brezhnev has been victim of minor strokes

By Bernars D. Kaplan
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — A team of West German doctors, assigned to observe Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev during his recent visit to Bonn, reportedly concluded that he has been a victim of one or more minor strokes.

According to a West German source, the doctors told Bonn officials that the Soviet leader's difficulties in walking and talking, together with apparent problems of orientation, probably stemmed from a series of light strokes.

Brezhnev will be 75 this month, but the physicians described him as someone who looks and acts 10 to 15 years older. One doctor is understood to have employed the phrase, "traits of approaching senility," in characterizing him. The German medical evaluation was that his years of hard Kremlin living and, especially, hard drinking have taken a heavy toll.

West German officials who have seen Brezhnev at close quarters in recent years judged him to be in better physical condition than at any time since at least 1979. Although he needed help negotiating stairs, he walked less shakily and spoke with greater ease than on his last visit to West Germany.

On the other hand, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, among others, was said to have been dismayed at signs of his intellectual decline.

More than once during last month's visit, he seemed to be confused about exactly where he was and what he was supposed to be doing.

He had problems differentiating between close-by objects. For example, at a reception, he visibly had trouble picking out a glass of orange juice on a tray proffered to him. He finally grasped it only with difficulty.

The Soviet leader also exhibited an impaired sense of direction. "His aides and sometimes Schmidt had to guide him gently in the right direction," according to an eyewitness. "He seemed not to understand."

The way in which the visit was conducted confirmed that he "functions" only two to three hours a day, at most. That was the maximum daily period allowed for official engagements. Most of his time in Bonn was spent out-of-sight, resting.

Although virtually all of the reins of power in the Soviet Union are formally in his hands, Brezhnev is thought to operate as a kind of part-time or even semi-retired chairman of the board who leaves most of the decision-making and executive action to others.

Observers in Bonn were struck by the free-wheeling manner of his spokesman, Leonid Zamyatin. Soviet officials in Zamyatin's position invariably stick to an inflexible brief, but he liberally interpreted Brezhnev's views and Soviet policy to newsmen. He is chief of the Central Committee's department of international information.

"One got an impression that it was more a case of Brezhnev expressing Zamyatin's views when he met with Schmidt than the other way around," according to Bernard Brigouleix, diplomatic correspondent of the French newspaper, Le Monde.

This reinforced a belief that the Soviet president, no longer fully capable of acting as chief of state and of the party, is now a front man for a Kremlin collective leadership which prefers not to acknowledge its own existence.

Several months ago, it was reported that day-to-day authority in running Russia had been vested in a small inner group, known as the Soviet defense council. This body, numbering no more than six, was said to be chaired twice weekly by Brezhnev.

On the evidence of the Bonn visit, he may no longer be in practical charge of affairs even to that extent.

Harvard Medical School offers course on treating victims of nuclear war

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A proposed course for Harvard medical students on how to treat victims of an atomic war is part of a political campaign by physicians against nuclear weapons, a professor says.

"Doctors don't know that much about the effects of nuclear war," said Dr. Herbert Abrams, one of those who wants to teach "The Health Aspects of Nuclear War" at Harvard Medical School.

"They know this can kill, but not many have been exposed to information about things like blast and and burn injuries."

The elective course will be considered by the school's curriculum committee Monday. If approved, the lecture series would be offered next semester.

"Doctors have never been involved as a group in any anti-war movement," Abrams said. "They look on war as a matter of national policy. But this is the first time they have been faced with such a life- and health-threatening possibility."

Abrams, a professor of radiology, said the course would include 15 lectures by professors from Harvard and other Boston-area universities on medical problems that surviving physicians would face after a nuclear war.

Medical students would be told of the effects of radiation on the body's system of immunity, and the expected epidemics that would follow the destruction of health and sanitation facilities.

There would be discussions on malnutrition, caused by disruption of the food supply, and the long-term effects of radiation that increases the chances of leukemia and other cancers in the years that follow a nuclear conflict.

The course would end with discussions on ways of preventing nuclear holocaust. Students would take a final test or write an essay.

Abrams believes it is the first such course proposed for a medical school.

"One of the problems is that it's too horrible to imagine," said Dr. James Muller, an assistant professor of medicine. "One can imagine one burned child, or perhaps a school of burned children, but who can imagine more than 100,000 burned children?"

Muller, a cardiologist who helped draft the course, says it is only part of a growing movement within the nation's medical community to oppose nuclear arms.

The movement, he said, is sponsored by Physicians for Social Responsibility, a 7,000-member group opposed to the continuing threat of nuclear war are members of the organization.

"It's happening all over the country," he said. "There have been major medical meetings in Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., to educate physicians so they can educate the public."

Abrams said such seminars are needed to make doctors "more capable of educating their own constiutency, which is patients."

The SNOWMAN

Maggie and June worked all morning making their snowman. He got so big that they had to fetch a stool and stand on tiptoe to make his arms and to cinder-button him. The mailman helped put on his head.

When they napped that afternoon, the sun shone hot and bright, and the south wind blew. When they woke, their snowy pal had dwindled and his cinder face cried dirty streaks. Sadly they turned away.

Sometimes life is like that snowman — grand and glittering with all the things we have. Then the hot winds of disaster blow, and their importance vanishes and we are left with emptiness.

What makes life meaningful? If possessions can't make us happy, what can?

Our churches have the answer. Through worship and prayer they teach us to find the joys of spirit.

Luke's United Methodist Women hold their annual Christmas Dinner

St. Luke's United Methodist Women held its annual Christmas Dinner at the church Tuesday, with the theme for the evening being "Love Made Visible — Through Gifts of Love."

Musical selections were presented by Jane Parker and Gloria Steelman. Accompanying them on the piano was Moneeta Heckathorne. Maxine McCullough presented a speech on "Our Gifts of Love," a personal recollection of the church women's activities over the years.

Joann Foster, president, conducted the elections of officers for 1982. They include Mrs. McCullough, president; Elloui Moseley, vice president; Jo Ann Castle, secretary; and Marge Savage, treasurer.

Awards and gifts were given to and sent to missions in honor of the following women: Ms. Foster, Ida Bell McBrayer, Vonell McAnich, Ramona Huxman and Joann Castleman.

Table decorations for the event consisted of over 40 new dolls, dressed by the UMW. The dolls go to the Salvation Army to be given out at Christmas.

Church begins novena celebration

In preparation for the celebration of the 450th anniversary of the apparition of Our Lady of Guadalupe at Tepeyac to Juan Diego in Mexico on Dec. 12, 1532, Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, 1004 N. Tyler St., began novena services Friday which will continue through Dec. 12. A mass will be celebrated at 7:30 p.m. each evening.

The Rev. Trevino of El Paso will preach the novena. There also will be a mass celebrated in English at 7 p.m. today. Sunday's service will include celebrating mass and reciting a rosary.

Trevino, a Claritian priest, is a native of Monterrey, Mexico. He has worked for 40 years in the priesthood in Texas and California.

The public is invited to attend.

Catholic women's council meets

ABILENE — The Diocesan Council of Catholic Women held a special board meeting at Holy Family Parish in Abilene Wednesday.

Attending from the Midland-Odessa Deanery were Dora Cortez of Odessa, deanery president; Mary Reidy, deanery treasurer; Edith P. Foster, diocesan public relations vice-chairman; and, from Big Spring, Mildred E. Ward, diocesan organization services chairman.

Plans were formulated for 1982, including the appointment of the nominating committee.

Church schedules special services

Good Shepherd Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod's mission congregation in Midland, will have two more special services for the Advent season.

The special Wednesday night services are scheduled Wednesday and Dec. 16 at 7:30 p.m. The special services will be held at the church's temporary home, the Carpenters Union Hall, 2211 W. Florida Ave.

The congregation meets every Sunday with Sunday School and Bible class at 9:30 a.m. and worship hour at 10:45 a.m., also at the union hall.

The public is invited to attend the special and regular Sunday services.

Church schedules guest speaker

The Midland Foursquare Church, 415 Alta Ave., will have as its guest speaker Sunday the Rev. Jack Rowe of Elk City, Okla.

As a former diabetic, Rowe has a special ministry in praying for the sick. He has conducted special services on many occasions in the Permian Basin area.

Rowe will speak at the 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. services. The public is invited to attend.

Permian Church has guest minister

The Rev. Harold Wardrop will be the guest minister Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Permian Church of Religious Science. His topic will be "Working with the Law of God to Bring About Harmonious Conditions."

Wardrop is among the candidates for the position of minister at the Permian Church of Religious Science. He is currently minister of The Divine Science Church in St. Louis, Mo. In October of this year, Waldrop was licensed and became affiliated with the United Church of Religious Science.

During his previous years in the ministry, Waldrop was an assistant minister for five years, established and built a church, did a two-year Christian television broadcast and held seminars for businessmen in the community.

Before becoming a minister, he was an organist and choir director for several churches.

The public is invited to attend the service, which will be held at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Catholics should have easier time getting annulments, archbishop says

CINCINNATI (AP) — The more lenient procedures for marriage annulment available to Roman Catholics in the United States will be adopted worldwide by the pope, says a bishop working on the project for the Vatican.

Archbishop Joseph Bernardin of Cincinnati, former president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and a member of the Commission for the Revision of the Code of Canon Law, said the commission will suggest the American standards to Pope John Paul II, who is expected to accept them.

Catholics in general are not allowed to divorce and remarry. Annulment by a church tribunal that finds the marriage vows invalid is the preferred way to dissolve a marriage.

"I am of the opinion that he (the pope) will endorse and promulgate most of what the commission had done," Bernardin said.

"The proposed code reflects substantially the thinking of the Holy See, and so I do not expect any change in what was proposed."

"The new code adopts a middle ground. On one hand, it has simplified the procedures considerably so as to expedite these cases as much as possible. On the other hand, it has made sure there are certain safeguards," he said.

Bernardin said U.S. Catholics would not notice much change in the procedure because it has been in force for more than a decade.

ACLU says it will file suit against 'creationism' law

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union said this week it plans to file suit against Louisiana's new law requiring that "creation science" be taught in public schools.

Shortly after the ACLU announcement, the man who wrote the law and 20 other members of the state Legislature filed suit in Baton Rouge, asking a federal judge to declare the law constitutional.

"This is a friendly action. We are asking for the courts to say it is all right to go ahead and implement the law," said Sen. Bill Keith.

Keith said he filed his suit after receiving a letter from Education Superintendent J. Kelly Nix, who said he would not start teaching creationism until legal questions were settled in court.

The suit asks that the law be recognized as in accord with the 1st, 9th and 14th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

Martha Kegel, executive director of the Louisiana ACLU, said her organization would file suit in federal court Thursday, naming a broad variety of religious leaders and educators as plaintiffs.

The ACLU suit will ask that the law be declared unconstitutional because it violates the doctrine of separation of church and state.

A similar lawsuit against creationism goes to trial in Little Rock, Ark., next Monday. However, the outcome of that trial would not necessarily be binding in Louisiana, the ACLU said.

Louisiana and Arkansas are the only states whose legislatures have passed a creationism law.

The laws require that anyone who teaches the scientific theory of evolution in school must also teach the Biblical story of creation.

"The proponents of this law are trying to sneak religion into the public schools," Ms. Kegel said.

"They are trying to disguise the religious nature of the doctrine of creationism. They have dressed this law with verbal fig leaves, nice sounding phrases like 'equal time' and 'non-discrimination.' But the fact remains that creationism is a Bible story and teaching it as science in public schools violates the rights of religious minorities," she added.

The ACLU also argues that the law denies academic freedom and is so vague and overbroad it is illegal.

Pope John Paul II, standing on his open car, waves to well-wishers. Although he doesn't always wear the traditional papal garb he is shown dressed in here, he does depend on the Gammarelli brothers of Rome to outfit him in custom-made clothing, like they have done for popes since 1793.

Tailors to pope keep him dressed in style

By NINA HYDE
The Washington Post

Annibale Gammarelli proudly remembers the day when he and his brother, and the tailor and seamstresses of the Gammarelli business, had a private audience with Pope John Paul II. "We were received in the hall of the throne and the Holy Father said, 'If there were no Gammarelli, there would be no pope.' "

John Paul jested. Without the Gammarellis, there would be a pope, of course — but not one as well-dressed. The Gammarellis have been ecclesiastical tailors since 1793.

No pope has demonstrated quite the flair of John Paul II. He has worn a white cashmere sweater vest and a windbreaker while traveling in the mountains. He wears a watch, perhaps the first pope to do so. He has been photographed in ski caps and in the traditional head coverings of countries he has visited. And his warm, somewhat theatrical presence prompts many who see him to comment on how splendid he looks in his red cloak or white cassock.

Yet John Paul is not overly interested in his appearance, his tailor says. "He carries his clothes well because he has a good comportment," says Gammarelli, who is tall and slender and looks more like a diplomat than a tailor. "He has a strong personality, and he is robust."

The Gammarellis first managed to fit John Paul II on short notice. Before a pope is elected, Annibale Gammarelli and his older brother Francesco take a full set of white clothes and accessories from their shop on the via Santa Chiara to the Vatican, each item in three sizes — short and stout, tall and skinny, and average. They are for the new pope, chosen in secret conclave, to wear when he appears for the first time at the Vatican window. They missed the size once, and Pope John XXIII appeared on the balcony with his buttons open. But there was so little time between the elections of popes John Paul I and II that the Gammarellis only had time to prepare one garment. Miraculously, sort of, it fit.

The Gammarelli shop, with its dark wood and marble facade, tucked in a dark old building on a narrow street behind the Pantheon, once used the label "tailor to the pope." (The Gammarellis have made the attire for all the popes in this century except Pope Pius XII, a Roman prince whose family had its own tailor.) But Pope Paul VI discouraged the use of the ultimate designer endorsement.

In their floor-to-ceiling walnut shelves and cabinets, the Gammarellis carry clothes and accessories to suit all clergy, as well as vestments and fabric for custom-made items. Yet anyone who happens to stop in can find such good buys as cotton shirts with French cuffs ($20), black shoes and silk bathrobes.

"But we wouldn't sell a cardinal's hat to a tourist," Annibale Gammarelli concedes.

Clergy from around the world have their clothes tailored by Gammarelli. "They are better made in Rome, and once they have your measurements they stay for life and the things always fit," says Msgr. Anthony Howe of Westminster Cathedral.

Ordinary priests' cassocks are ready-made and sold over the huge, dark walnut counter, but garments for the pope are made to order, "like the alta moda" (high-fashion houses), jokes Gammarelli. "But it is cheaper than, say, Littrico" (a high-fashion, made-to-order menswear house).

The two Gammarellis, who were trained as businessmen rather than tailors, and a tailor go to the Vatican to measure the pope for his clothes. The fabric is cut upstairs in the shop and is finished by two seamstresses who work in the shop and four others who sew at home.

The clothes change little from pope to pope. There is the white cassock and cape worn daily, wool in winter and watered silk for summer, and a cap, which the current pope often forgets to put back on when it blows off. The sottana (robe or skirt) with pellegrine (small mantle) and cummerbund is the daily garb. When it is cold, John Paul wears a long red cape with gold border. The Gammarellis also make the wine-red slip-on shoes he wears in size 9 1-2. He appears to have forsaken the traditional velvet slippers, last worn by Pope Paul VI.

The Newspaper BIBLE

THE PLACE OF HIGHEST PRIVILEGE

Now, since we have been made right in God's sight by faith in His promises, we can have real peace with Him because of what Jesus Christ our Lord has done for us. For because of our faith, He has brought us into this place of highest privilege where we now stand, and we confidently and joyfully look forward to actually becoming all that God has had in mind for us to be.

We can rejoice, too, when we run into problems and trials for we know that they are good for us--they help us learn to be patient. And patience develops strength of character in us and helps us trust God more each time we use it until finally our hope and faith are strong and steady.

Then, when that happens, we are able to hold our heads high no matter what happens and know that all is well, for we know how dearly God loves us, and we feel this warm love everywhere within us because God has given us the Holy Spirit to fill our hearts with His love. When we were utterly helpless with no way to escape, Christ came at just the right time and died for us sinners who had no use for Him. Even if we were good, we really wouldn't expect anyone to die for us, though, of course that might be barely possible. But God showed his great love for us by sending Christ to die for us while we were still sinners.

And since by His blood He did all this for us as sinners, how much more will He do for us now that He has declared us not guilty? Now He will save us from all of God's wrath to come.

And since, when we were His enemies, we were brought back to God by the death of His son, what blessings He must have for us now that we are His friends, and He is living within us!

Now we rejoice in our wonderful new relationship with God--all because of what our Lord Jesus Christ has done in dying for our sins--making us friends of God.

Faithful California Indians thankful for Pala Mission

By JERRY SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer

PALA, Calif. (AP) — The Indians at Mission San Antonio de Pala have worshipped in the same long and narrow, cedar-beamed mission chapel for 165 uninterrupted years, a claim no other California Indians can make.

Despite greedy Mexican landowners, ravaging white settlers, floods and earthquakes, the Indians have remained faithful to Pala Mission, which is located in a farm-filled river valley near the foot of Palomar Mountain in northern San Diego County.

Pala is the state's only mission that has ministered continually to the needs of the Indians, the people for whom the Franciscan padres originally established the 21-mission chain more than 200 years ago.

Since its most recent restoration was completed in 1959, Pala Mission has been the spiritual center for six nearby reservations of Mission Indians, so-called by the U.S. government because most Southern California Indians became Christians at the missions.

ABOUT 200 children from kindergarten through eighth grade attend the only mission school in California, said Sister Michaeleen, the school's principal. The students, more than 40 percent of them Indians, are bused in from a 10-mile radius stretching into Temecula in southern Riverside County.

Indians still attend services at two minor missions on Indian reservations, said the Rev. Frank DiFrancesco, Pala Mission's associate pastor, but Pala is by far the largest community.

But the mission's survival is as tenuous as it has been since Padre Antonio Peyri oversaw the making of thousands of adobe bricks and tiles for the first permanent buildings in 1816.

"We are struggling for our existence," Sr. Michaeleen said. "We are very much dependent on our fiesta and the sale of Christmas cards made by the children."

HOWEVER, she added, although there is a long waiting list, no child is turned out of school because of inability to pay tuition.

Rev. DiFrancesco said the mission needs the busloads of tourists who visit on weekends and the thousands of people who attend the annual Corpus Christi fiesta in late spring.

The religious feast has been celebrated since Pala Mission's founding among the Luisenos Indians, as the Shoshonean Indians of the San Luis Rey Mission were called by the Franciscan Fathers, and the Cahuillas Indians.

The Luisenos generally live on Pala, Pauma, Rincon, La Jolla and Pechanga Indian Reservations. The Cahuillas live on the Cahuilla and Santa Rosa reservations, all served by the mission.

The Luisenos and Cahuillas were joined by the Cupenos Indians in 1903 when they were evicted from their Warner Springs homeland by a U.S. Supreme Court decision. Today the three Indian groups intermingle freely through marriage and business dealings.

Pala Mission is not one of the major 21 California missions, but an "asistencia," or satellite mission to Mission San Luis Rey, located 25 miles west. Pala Mission was designed as part of an ambitious plan to create an inland chain for Indians who could not reach the coastal missions, but the plan died.

WITHIN 15 years of its founding, Father Peyri reported the mission had 1,300 Indian converts. But in 1835, Father Buenaventura Fortuni surrendered Mission San Luis Rey and Pala to the newly independent Mexican government.

Fearing takeover by the United States 11 years later, Mexican administator Pio Pico sold the land for $2,500 in silver and wheat to two Mexican entrepreneurs, a deal later voided by the U.S. government.

As the Franciscans left the mission, the Mexican landowners and white settlers plundered mission timber and tile and all but a few of the Indians dispersed.

However, the mission's remoteness protected it from further damage and priests continued to sporadicaly attend Indian needs. The first repairs began in 1885. But an earthquake on Christmas Day, 1899, severely damaged the chapel.

After the Cupenos Indians came in 1903, the Landmarks Club of Southern California began further restoration. A flood in 1916 toppled the bell tower, but it was remounted. Five years of rebuilding by Father J.M. Carillo completed mission repairs.

LIKE ANY other American family, the Mission Indians celebrated Thanksgiving with a big dinner — and the children had a day off from a school the Indians are thankful to have.

This team fights more than fires

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — When acid spills, poison leaks or exotic chemicals run amok, the Seattle Fire Department's "Haz-Mat" moves in.

Haz-Mat means Hazardous Materials Emergency Response Unit Members. Clomping around like Darth Vader henchmen in unworldly space suits, they are the newest wrinkle in firefighting.

They deal with the mysterious potion, the unknown vial, the teetering tank car full of explosive fuel that could flatten a city block. They transcend spraying water.

Similar teams have been formed or are being formed in such cities as New York, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Houston and Jacksonville, Fla.

"It's definitely more dangerous than traditional firefighting," says Lt. Jerry Childs, fire department spokesman. "They are exposed to the same hazards as other firefighters, plus they are at the heart of every lethal, explosive incident in the city."

Tons of chlorine, sodium hydroxide, vinyl chloride, sulfuric acid, liquefied flammable gas and explosives roll through Seattle daily. More than one-half million tons of corrosives came through the city in 1979.

"Many cities have suffered disastrous consequences because they thought the universal application of water would take care of almost any problem," says Seattle Fire Chief Robert Swartout.

"SOONER OR LATER, all fire departments might recognize the need for a hazardous materials response capability."

John J. O'Rourke, New York Fire Deparmtent Haz-Mat coordinator, says the increase of hazardous and exotic materials demands special knowledge. "If the first-in firefighters don't recognize the problem, it could lead to disaster," he says.

Seattle's team is made up of 60 firefighters at the main downtown fire station who also perform regular duties.

The team is easy to spot on its way to trouble. Leading a procession of flashing lights and screaming sirens is the white, five-ton Haz-Mat van with red skull and crossbones painted on the side.

Following like a convoy are a command car, deputy chief's car, a ladder truck, pumper truck, medic and paramedic units and a truck carrying dozens of reserve oxygen bottles.

The added danger doesn't seem to bother Haz-Mat members.

"There are so many thousand chemicals that you have to use a lot of special caution. And (if an accident brings a firefighter in contact with an exotic chemical) you don't know what the long-term effects will be. But it's a challenge," says Lt. Jerry Davis, 42.

Capt. Bob Mitchell, 45, a 23-year department veteran, adds, "The department's procedures, training and equipment are pretty good. I feel comfortable."

Seattle's Haz-Mat has responded to more than two dozen calls since it was formally inaugurated in January 1980.

BUT THE UNIT existed informally for two years prior to that, while members trained, responded to hazardous materials accidents and accumulated equipment.

So far, responses have been to scenes of "potential" disaster, not actual disaster, says Deputy Fire Chief Rod Bower, Haz-Mat coordinator. No unit member has been injured.

To train, key Seattle fire officials attended seminars and received formal classroom instruction. The U.S. Coast Guard, National Fire Academy, community colleges and industry representatives helped fill the chemical knowledge gap.

Each team member was tutored by representatives of railroads, the military, chemical companies, hazardous-waste disposers, marine and highway shippers and chemists, says Swartout.

Orderliness is the main theme of a Haz-Mat run, not speed, says Childs.

He gets real people to talk about real life

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — When people talk, Studs Terkel listens.

Terkel and his tape recorder.

He asks Americans to tell him about their hopes, their dreams, their fears, and what they tell him — "the thoughts I capture" — he puts into his books. Books such as "Hard Times," "Working," and "American Dreams: Lost & Found."

While the books are often referred to as oral history, Terkel smiles at the description.

"Some people call me an oral historian," the amiable, white-haired Terkel remarks, "and that's nice. But I don't know what an oral historian is. As far as I'm concerned, what I do is capture people's voices and then put them into print.

"I like to think of myself as a gold prospector. I find a person to talk to and tape, that's the gold ore. They talk and eventually I come up with maybe 60 pages of talk, and that's the unrefined ore.

"I edit, then I edit some more, filtering the gold out and after a while those 60 pages have been boiled down to eight pages, and that's the gold dust, the real stuff. I take this gold dust and, like a goldsmith making a crown, I make a book."

The 69-year-old Terkel — "I'm a Titanic baby. I came up the year that ship went down" — lives in Chicago and does a lot of his interviewing there, although he travels about quite a bit in search of the people he wants to interview.

"I play it by ear," he says. "I might read in the newspaper about someone who sounds like a good interview and I go see him. Or friends might give me some leads. One thing leads to another and pretty soon I've talked to about a hundred people and I've got enough material for a book.

"I do all of the interviews myself. I tape them, then I transcribe them and then I start thinking in terms of sequences and themes. Eventually, I find out what goes next to what and suddenly — after three to four years of work — I've got a book."

Terkel came to books in a rather roundabout manner. "I'm a lawyer who's never practiced law," he says with a smile. "I used to be a disc jockey on the radio, and I also was an actor on radio programs. I was usually the bad guy in soap operas, and I was always getting killed off. That wasn't a very good career because whenever I got killed I'd be out of a job and had to go looking for another one." He got back into radio and while hosting an interview show a friend in publishing suggested he do a book of interviews.

"He suggested I talk to ordinary people — except for a couple of big shots here and there all of my books feature ordinary people — and find out what they thought about Chicago. I liked the idea and eventually it became the book 'Division Street: America.' And that is how it all began."

"Division Street: America" was followed by "Hard Times," a book "about the people who had been in the Great Depression and had survived it. Those of us who were there tend to romanticize the Depression, to emphasize the good and black out the bad. I wanted to tell what it was really like during those days, to let the kids of today know it had its good things but it also was hard times."

From there he started thinking about people and their work because "work is one of man's basic impulses," and in "Working," people, says Terkel, "tell all about their jobs, skilled people and unskilled, lawyers and laborers."

After that, he says, "I started, for some reason, to think about the so-called 'American Dream.' Just what is it — a better job, more money? Is the dream you had as a child the same one you have now? That's how 'American Dreams' came about."

Terkel says he is currently working on a book about World War II and the effects it had.

"There's a lot of people around now who remember that war, and I want to ask them how it affected them," Terkel says. "But there's also a lot of people around to whom that war is just history, and I want them to know what it was like, really like, during those days."

Reagan must make enterprise decision

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Feature Service

Washington — President Reagan faces the task of settling a disagreement among his top advisers over the final shape of enterprise zone legislation, the administration's only major new program to aid decaying cities.

An administration official disclosed Thursday that the Cabinet Council on Commerce and Trade, after failing to reach a compromise, had decided to submit to the president two separate sets of tax incentive proposals for the massive enterprise zone plan. Reagan's decision must be made this month so that the legislation can be submitted to Congress in January.

THE PROGRAM will provide incentives to business and industry to locate in specially selected and badly rundown sections of cities that are designated as economically depressed.

Once the president personally approves the proposal, he intends to send it to Capitol Hill to determine whether there will be enough congressional support to get it quickly enacted.

The administration's plan is a revised version of the Kemp-Gracia Urban Jobs and Enteprise Zone bill presented to Congress in 1980.

The disagreement among top Reagan advisers occured at the council's Wednesday meeting attended by White House, Treasury, Housing and Urban Development and Commerce officials.

The flap occured over a misunderstanding by Reagan aides over the position of Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and their belief the secretary "was on board for a previously-agreed to proposal."

But several minutes before the meeting, a participant said, a Treasury official introduced some proposals that were scaled down from those agreed to earlier.

"There were quite a few outraged people at the session, including Bob Carleson, special assistant to the president," added the participant, who did not want to be identified.

An argument followed during which Treasury won the right to present several tax proposals to the president as an optional package to tax incentives agreeed to by the other conferrees.

The Treasury officials are opposed to a tax credit for employers who hire certain disadvantaged workers.

The Treasury also favors cutting a proposed 10 percent tax credit for employers in enterprise zones to about 3.5 percent and opposes a tax credit for employers who hire certain disadvantaged workers.

IN ADDITION, participants other than the Treasury officials agreed to include an option that would permit a company that exhausts its income tax credits to bgin depleting payroll tax credits.

Both sides agreed on:

— A special tax credit of three percent to 10 percent to be allowed for capital investments in an enterprise zone by a qualified business. The credit would be in addition to the investment tax credit already available;

— Elimination of capital gains taxes on the sale of qualified property;

— Incentives to established companies already in zones if they increase their number of employees by 10 percent, at least 40 percent of whom are low income, and — Permission for a business in the zone to carry over its losses for tax purposes for as long as 20 years, an increase from the current limit of seven years in most cases.

One official said there was general agreement to suggest that 25 enterprise zones be established each year for the next three years, with the first two set up in Buffalo and South Bronx, the New York home bases of the two principal plan sponsors — Conservative Republican Jack Kemp of Buffalo and Liberal Democrat Robert Garcia of New York City.

THAT BILL has been harshly criticized by community and civic leaders for offering "too little" to the poor.

Prisoners must be taken

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Commission on Jail Standards can require that a county accept prisoners taken from another county's jail that does not comply with the commission's standards, the attorney general said earlier this week.

The request was asked by Robert O. Viterna, executive director of the commission. No specific counties were mentioned.

Group charges Interior conflicts

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — A citizen lobby's charge that President Reagan has tainted the Interior Department with an industry bias set off a squabble about ideological purity among federal officials — with a spokesman branding their complaint "warmed over hash."

Common Cause released what it called a "guide book" of top Reagan appointees in Interior titled "Who's Minding the Store?" The 80-page book shows 11 of 16 high-level Reagan appointees as having been employed or served clients in the five major industries Interior regulates.

The White House had no immediate comment but Interior spokesman Harmon Kallman, using the "warmed-over hash" characterization, noted all officials mentioned had been examined and confirmed by the U.S. Senate. And he pointed out the government now operates under the strictest conflict-of-interest and ethics laws in history.

"Each of these people swore a solemn oath when they took office," Kallman added. "If they break those vows, they are accountable."

TOPPING THE COMMON Cause list is Interior Secretary James Watt, whom it links to four of the five industries: oil and gas, mining, utility and timber. The group says seven Interior officials had professional affiliations with oil and gas, six with mining, three with utilities and two with the livestock industry.

Common Cause President Fred Wertheimer seemed concerned that past associations would affect future viewpoints.

"Officials of the Interior Department serve as trustees for the American people of more than 500 million acres of federal land," he said. "But a look at the employment histories and financial interests of the new management team at Interior shows a disproportionately industry-oriented perspective.

"It is a limited perspective that gives cause for very serious concern."

Ten Interior officials, including Watt, have reported conflicts of interest with specific corporations, partnerships and other organizations and promised to disqualify themselves from decisions involving them, the group noted. Six had to sell stock holdings in oil, gas and mining companies.

"THE SEARCH FOR ideological purity has many facets," commented Interior's spokesman Kallman — a veteran of six presidential administrations.

"The last administration recruited many officials from paid positions with environmental organizations, reflecting the outlook of the people in charge. If this administration is to give the nation a new direction, it must look elsewhere for talent."

Common Cause noted Watt has said that as Interior Secretary he would "err on the side of public use versus private," vowing to change "40 to 50 years of bad government."

The group cites Watt, former president of the Mountain States Legal Foundation, and four others as having the most extensive past relationships with industries with direct interest in Interior decisions. The four are:

Donald Hodel, under secretary, former president of his own energy consulting firm;

William Coldiron, solicitor, retired employe of the Montana Power Company;

Robert Burford, director, Bureau of Land Management, a long-time cattle and sheep rancher;

Vernon Wiggins, federal co-chair designate of the Alaska Lands Use Council, who is former director of the Citizens for Management of Alaska Lands.

Common Cause said the purpose of its booklet is to provide reporters, government officials and citizens "with information to understand and monitor" the Interior Department. It contains profiles of all top appointees.

KALLMAN, ONCE A newsman, was clearly annoyed by the Common Cause attack on government officials. Unless there is to be a class of hereditary rulers, like the Chinese mandarins, he said, it is all but impossible to purge government of people who bring a point of view to their jobs.

"The American system," he added, "is built on faith that public officials will do their honest best to be fair-minded. It has worked pretty well for 200 years despite its imperfections. We think it will serve for a long time to come."

Common Cause said its study was based on government records, including presidential documents and Interior publications.

Church talks about everyone's politics

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst Feature Service

Washington — Whatever happened to Frank Church, the arch-liberal former Idaho Democrat who was one of the earliest opponents of the Vietnam war, the inveterate leader of a Senate probe into illegal intelligence activities and a champion, to his own political undoing, of the Panama Canal treaties?

Would you believe the self-same Frank Church, forced to give up his influential post as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee when he lost his Senate seat last fall, today is offering support to Ronald Reagan ? Not very enthusiastically, but offering support all the same.

"President Reagan, more than any of his recent predecessors," Church told the Women's Democratic Club here in a speech Thursday, "has a window of opportunity, seldom available, through which to persuade the Russians to meet us half-way" in reducing the multibillion-dollar nuclear arms race.

Lauding Reagan for beginning negotiations this week to reduce the nuclear threat in Europe, Church said that American attitudes towards the Russians must mature. "Only one man can do it, the one man who will be heard above the howl of the scaremongers in our politics and press.

"That man is Ronald Reagan, who, because of his bouyant belief in the ultimate world-wide triumph of the free market, stands in a unique position to carry public opinion with him in the search for a safer world.

"If," Church told the startled audience, " he has now embarked in good faith on a venture he intends to carry that far, if his apparent turnabout (from a cold warrior) is indeed real, then he is entitled to our full and nonpartisan support."

But Church left no doubt that he still is the political warrior who infuriated Jimmy Carter by stealing four Western states, almost denying Carter the nomination, when he ran for president in the 1976 primaries.

Church predicts that both Democratic frontrunners Walter Mondale, Carter's vice president, and Sen. Edward Kennedy will burn themselves out by 1984. "They're going to peak much too early," he said in an interview following his speech.

Nor does Church believe that Sen. John Glenn, D.-Ohio, has the fire in his gut to be president, although he admits, somewhat cynically, that "this country is getting used to having actors and astronauts as president." Who does that leave ? Of course, Frank Church wouldn't utter his name in public.

But he is the self-same figure who believes Ronald Reagan could mature a little in his attitude toward the Russians. "We should stop regarding them as manipulators so omnipotent as to be responsible for every mishap, every insurrection, every troublesome problem that erupts on earth," Church said.

He said that the Soviets are merely doing what every superpower has done in history, exploiting opportunity when it presents itself, "whether in Iraq or Yemen, Ethiopia or Angola, Cuba or El Salvador. That we continue to find this Russian activity so alarming never ceases to amaze me."

Church said that this is nothing more than "the favorite game great nations play, as old as geopolitics itself, and one in which we ourselves are deeply involved. Yet we keep insisting that the Soviet Union should withdraw from the game and behave itself."

The former Senate Foreign Relations chairman cited the fact that without even counting Vietnam, "our government intervened no less than 31 times in the internal affairs of what we scornfully called 'banana republics,' " and frequently landed Marines "in force" to occupy Central American nations.

And people really use them too...

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Roger Mortimer rolls his eyes as he describes how professors on weekend research trips used to pull original Audubon bird engravings from the library stacks to amuse their unruly children.

Mortimer is in charge of the University of South Carolina's rare-book collection, and those hand-colored prints are among the most highly prized items in his custody.

"If you could see the condition of some of them, you'd know what was happening to them as late as the 1920s and '30s," he says with just a tinge of sad amazement evident in the measured accents of his native England.

But greasy juvenile fingerprints and 150 years of Palmetto humidity haven't prevented the amassing of what, in Mortimer's seasoned view, is one of the South's best assemblages of printed treasures.

There are more than 20,000 items in all, many of the most collectible purchased for a song by the library in the early 19th century when they were printed. Today their value is too great to be prudently discussed.

A few of the rarest are stored in a vault — a first edition of Darwin's "Origin of the Species," for example, and histories of the world painstakingly hand-copied by monks before Columbus set off for the edge of the earth.

Every day, half a dozen researchers find their way to the top floor of the Cooper Library to labor over an obscure text in the lush, funereal reading room set aside for the purpose.

It's all very well to boast of a collection of masterpieces, but Mortimer's charges are all cataloged as part of the library's general collection, and anybody who needs to look at them can do so.

"Otherwise, there wouldn't be much excuse for us," he says. "We don't particularly regard ourselves as a repository of treasures."

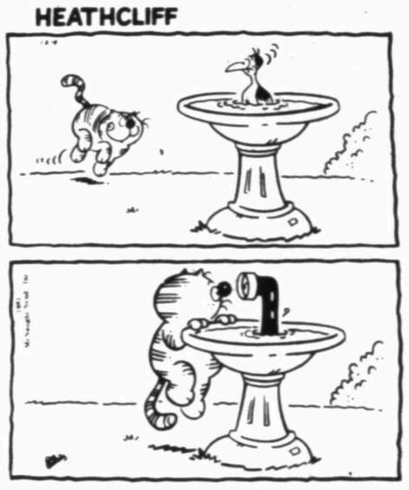
Some rarities are donated, but most of the university's purchases are obtained for $100 or less to fill specific research requests.

The works of medieval monks are fascinating objects in themselves with their delicate calligraphy, gilded scrollwork, durable leather bindings and pages of animal skin or paper from the days before chemically treated wood pulp made preservation more difficult.

"Depending on your knowledge of the field, the content of the book frequently comes last," Mortimer says, "which is the charge frequently leveled at rare-book collections.

"Even the smell can appeal," he adds as he caresses a volume from a set of early 19th-century botany texts, bound in leather tanned with birch oil.

HEATHCLIFF



Cathleen Nesbitt: She's still charming

By AMEI WALLACH
Newsday

NEW YORK — Henry Higgins mother was 93 Nov. 24. That is only fitting, since Henry Higgins is 73. Both mother — Cathleen Nesbitt — and son — Rex Harrison — have returned to Broadway in the roles they created for the original production of "My Fair Lady" 25 years ago.

Cathleen Nesbitt has a way of dismissing her own contribution to the revival ("I mean I don't do very much as Mrs. Higgins, do I? I stand around a lot. I mean, it's not much of a part."), while extolling Harrison's ("I take great pleasure in watching Rex from the wings every night. He makes infinitesimal changes in his characterization that are fascinating to see. I think Rex and John Gielguid are the greatest English-speaking actors").

Her performance, however, has a great deal to do with making this revival the standing-ovation success it is. Like Harrison, she gives the impression that there is a lot held in reserve. They are not actors who give everything they've got, but actors of humor and intelligence who play surface textures, all the while indicting that what you see is only the window dressing. Behind the lines they are thinking, listening and feeling. It's all implied

True, she does not always remember her lines, which makes for some tension both onstage and in the audience. But it is pleasurable tension, the kind you feel when you are on tenterhooks to find out how a particularly good story will come out.

Here is a remarkable — if not unique — position in theatrical history. In many ways she is an embodiment of 20th-century theater and literature. In the years since the sea captain's daughter from Belfast made her debut in an amateur production in 1906, she has acted with the likes of Gerald du Maurier, Alec Guinness, Laurence Olivier, John Barrymore and Richard Burton. She was loved by Rupert Brooke, whose poems became a symbol of the First World War, and was a friend of such tart-tongued literati as Anita Loos, Somerset Maugham, Noel Coward and George Moore.It was not only that she was always in the thick of the action, but that she has remained there for so long.

Among working performers, only Eubie Blake, at 98, has outlasted her. Most of the grand ladies of the theater — Ruth Gordon, Eva Le Gallienne — or of dance — Martha Graham, Agnes de Mille — are hardly in their 80s. Or long retired. Miss Nesbitt ("I'm Mrs. Ramage but Miss Nesbitt — that's my professional name") does more than lavish all her electric energy on keeping her part fresh and nuance-filled. Trooper that she is, she also takes on the less pleasurable chore of helping publicize the production.

Even if it means getting up long before 8 a.m. for a "Good Morning America" taping, as she did one recent day. By the time she was settled in the limousine bearing her to the studio, she began wondering why she was there.

"It should have been Rex," she said. "But Rex is sensible. If they ask him to get up at 8 a.m., he won't."

It had not been a promising beginning to a day like so many other days in so many other cities during the past year. Harrison's new $1.3-million production of "My Fair Lady," had made stops in Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, New Orleans, St. Louis, Miami and Boston before coming to New York.

...OUS PUZZLE

Commodities

Commodity futures markets scored losses in the past week led by weakness in the grain markets and precious metals markets.

Precious metals prices continued their sharp decline on long liquidation as signs of a deep recession made metals unattractive investment vehicles.

Both cattle and pork futures were negatively influenced by the retailer attention on turkey marketing.

Recessionary concerns prompted the liquidation of stale speculative holding of wheat position. Corn eased on modest additonal seasonal pressure as harvest of the record crop was nearing completion.

Cotton futures continue lower although at a somewhat slower rate of decline. Recessionary news had dampened any cash buying and export interest.

Harrelson goes on trial Monday

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso attorney Joe Chagra says he will ask that charges of cocaine possession and felony weapons possession against Charles Harrelson be tried simultaneously when Harrelson goes on trial Monday in Van Horn.

Federal officials say Harrelson is a prime suspect in the May 29, 1979, assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. in San Antonio. Also implicated as a suspect has been Chagra's brother, Jimmy, who is serving a federal sentence for drug smuggling.

Joe Chagra said Friday that he has been unable to confer with Harrelson about the Van Horn charges because the 43-year-old professional gambler has been shuffled between the Harris County Jail in Houston and the state prison in Huntsville.

Rick Hartley, administrative assistant to the director of the Texas Department of Corrections, said Harrelson has been held in a maximum security unit at Huntsville since a firearms conviction in Houston last month.

"I'VE ALREADY TOLD THE district attorney and the judge that since they haven't made him available to me and I don't even know where he's at, the first chance that I'll get to see him is Monday morning," Chagra said.

Chagra said he would meet with Harrelson for an hour or two before the jury selection process gets under way Monday in state district court in Van Horn.

One of the things Chagra wants to discuss with Harrelson is combining the two charges pending against him and trying them together.

"If we ask, they have to be tried together," Chagra said. "When break them up like that, you give the state the opportunity to stack the sentences. The disadvantage if I try them together is that the firearms charge would tell the jury, that he had previously been convicted of a felony. But if the jury doesn't know who Charles Harrelson is by now, they must be from another planet."

Chagra said he also wants to talk to his client about rumors that Harrelson may "make a deal" with authorities concerning the Wood investigation.

"I've heard a rumor that Charles wants to work some kind of deal and get out of Huntsville," the attorney said. "I don't know if it's true. In all fairness to Charles, I don't even know if he can make a deal. What do you offer someone who you think is the trigger man?"

Chagra said that if Harrelson does want to cooperate with investigators, he will have to find another attorney.

"I would certainly have to get out of it as his attorney if he wanted to deal," Chagra said. "The deal would be that he would talk against my brother.

"I REALLY NEED TO TALK TO him and see where he's at," he added. "Until I know differently, I'm going to assume he hasn't changed his mind."

Chagra said that in addition to the motion to consolidate, he also would make motions to suppress evidence in the case and to dismiss.

Harrelson was arrested in Van Horn Sept. 1, 1980, after he surrendered to police he had held at bay for four hours by holding a gun to his own head. Harrelson, who served 10 years in prison after being convicted in 1968 of the murder-for-hire slaying of Hearne grain dealer Sam Degelia, was charged with being a felon in possession of firearm and of cocaine possession.

Midland man loses discrimination suit

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midlander man whose efforts to be an oil-field truck driver were thwarted when he was fired by his employer more than two years ago lost his bid for a $1 million settlement and job re-instatement based on alleged racial discrimination on Friday, when U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ruled in favor of the defendant, B-J Hughes Oil Field Service of Odessa.

Loser in the non-jury trial was James Ellis, in his early 30s, who maintained B-J Hughes fired him in September 1979 because he was black and not because he was unable to satisfy the company's driving standards. Court records indicated that Ellis was hired on Sept. 10, 1979, and was fired two weeks later. The next year, Ellis charged that B-J Hughes violated the Civil Rights Act of 1964 in firing him without just cause. The court disagreed.

Pete Ruiz, former driver-trainer, for B-J Hughes, testified that he spent about 12 hours over five or six days in teaching Ellis how properly to drive a 13-speed light truck to get his commercial license from the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"Mostly," Ruiz said, "he (Ellis) kept forgetting to step on the clutch" when changing gears.

HE SAID Ellis, by not changing gears at given speeds, would cause the engine to lug down — "forcing the engine to work too hard."

Ruiz, who said Ellis's performance as a student driver was "very poor," said he took Ellis out for special instruction on a certain Sunday.

"I told him, 'Damn it! Please pay attention!,' " said Ruiz, who admitted to slamming a note pad on the truck's dashboard. He said he did not strike Ellis or curse him.

Ellis was ruffled, he suggested.

" 'I'm no dog you're training,' " Ruiz said Ellis retorted. " 'You want to fight?' "

Ruiz said Ellis opened the cab door but that he (Ruiz) did not take Ellis up on the offer.

"DID YOU call Mr. Ellis 'nigger'?" asked an attorney on the case.

"No, sir," Ruiz said.

Ruiz, rather than Ellis, drove the truck baek to B-J Hughes on that Sunday.

"I went inside the office, punched out and went home," Ruiz said.

In another line of questioning, Ruiz said he was "raised with them (blacks) in the same town (McCamey), same neighborhood." Ruiz, a Mexican-American, said that he did not think blacks were any more prone to violence than other people.

In his original complaint filed in federal court in Midland in 1980, Ellis contended that Jesse Bradshaw, B-J Hughes' district superintendent, told him that he was being "discharged" from the company "because of having a verbal argument with Pete Ruiz, (who) was afraid to go out with me in the trucks and would not continue to train me, because of verbal abuse."

Ellis admitted "logging the truck — the same problem I had earlier."

"Mr. Ruiz was the one to start cursing and throwing things inside the moving truck at me," Ellis charged. "I stopped the truck and invited him outside to settle the matter, as I interpreted his hostility to be directed toward me. Even though I challenged Mr. Ruiz to fight over things he said to me, no fight occurred," the complaint said.

"HIS REFUSAL to train me further is a reflection of an unsubstantiated belief other ethnic groups have about blacks being violent," Ellis said in his complaint.

Further, Ellis said that Ruiz was privy to his resume, which, Ellis apparently surmised, caused Ruiz to believe that "I (Ellis) was violent, because I had played football, ran track and lifted weights in college."

In addition to the $1 million in damages he sought, Ellis also was asking to be re-hired to his $245-a-week job and for backpay from B-J Hughes.

But the judge perceived no racial discrimination in the termination of Ellis's employment.

Since his 1967 graduation from Midland High School, Ellis attended The University of Texas at El Paso, and has held several jobs, including working as a roustabout, plumber's helper and moving man.

Ellis's attorney in the case was Bill McCoy of Odessa. Kent W. Robinson of Houston represented B-J Hughes.

New bill would change royal accession

LONDON (AP) — If the baby born to Prince Charles and Princess Diana next June is a girl, she'll be pushed farther back in the line of royal sucession every time a brother is born — unless a newly proposed bill changes the ancient tradition of male accession.

Labor Party legislator Michael English this week proposed a bill to the House of Commons providing that a monarch's eldest child inherit the throne irrespective of sex — meaning even if it's a girl.

The bill would overturn a constitutional law dating from the 1700 Act of Settlement, which gives males precedence in the right to accession. The tradition of male succession goes farther back in time, deep into feudal history, and is even more strictly applied to Britain's 770 hereditary peers, of whom only 19 are women.

"QUITE SIMPLY, I believe in equality of the sexes," English, 51, said in an interview.

"The monarchy is to a certain extent symbolic. Therefore if you ensure equality of the sexes applies to the succession, it is likely this will reflect in everything that still has to be done in this field."

It might seem a simple thing to change, with one woman — Queen Elizabeth II — reigning in Britain, and another — Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher — governing.

But it is a revolutionary idea that was met with silence from Buckingham Palace, disdain from Britain's main feminist publication, and opposition from Debrett's, the publishers that chronicle Britain's blue-bloods.

It is also likely to be crowded out of the legislative program by government measures.

Of all Europe's monarchies only Sweden, under an act passed in 1979, gives the first-born child automatic right to inherit regardless of sex.

For the rest, daughters get to reign only if, like Elizabeth and seven previous woman monarchs, they have no brothers.

English said he had notified the queen and her heir, Prince Charles, of the measure, but declined to give their response.

SO DID Buckingham Palace. "It would be a major constitutional issue and until it is formalized there is no way we would comment," said the queen's press secretary Michael Shea.

Debrett's editor Charles Kidd said any attempt to change the system "would raise an enormous amount of legal issues."

All but a handful of the Royal Letters Patent under which hereditary titles have been bestowed since medieval times bar a daughter from inheriting the title and accompanying estates under any circumstances. Even distant male cousins take precedence.

"I think the present system works very well," said Kidd. "It is what has kept so many of these estates together."

Feminist activists, who in Britain tend to be left-wing and anti-monarchist, couldn't care less.

"We don't really care," said Ruth Walsgrove, editorial board member of the feminist magazine Spare Rib. "The monarchy is not an institution which has any relevance to the lives of ordinary women."

THE CHANCES are slim that English's proposal will reach the most important legislative stage, the second reading, before the birth of Charles' and Diana's first child.

The title of the measure — the Succession to the Crown Bill — was put forward formally Wednesday as a Private Member's Bill, the path for proposed legislation not initiated by the Conservative government.

Commons' time for such bills is strictly limited. With the present government program and competition from other Private Members' bills drawn ahead, English will be lucky if it comes up at the end of February.

If its crowded out then, it is unlikely to get a second reading slot this session, which ends next fall.

FAA could hire controllers if ban lifted

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration could more easily fill out its strike-depleted ranks of air traffic controllers with recent retirees if a ban on "double-dipping" is lifted for them, FAA chief J. Lynn Helms said Friday.

Helms commented as he and Transportation Secretary Darrell Trent appeared at a hearing by a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on the Reagan administration's proposal to give $57 million in special pay and benefits to some 26,000 FAA air-safety employees this fiscal year and more in the future.

The legislation includes a provision that would partially waive until Dec. 31, 1984 a law against "double-dipping" that requires civil service or military retirees to relinquish part of their pension or salary if they return to government service.

More than 11,400 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization were fired after they began an illegal walkout against the FAA Aug. 3, and the agency has replaced some with supervisors, military personnel, newly hired employees and retirees.

About 250 recently retired controllers are back on the job, but Helms said many more would be encouraged to return to the payroll as controllers or trainers if they were allowed to continue to draw their pensions, which average $16,000 to $17,000 a year.

THE PAY AND benefits measure, which would be atop the 4.8 percent salary raise granted most government workers recently, had been attached last month to the Senate version of a stopgap federal spending bill, but it did not survive the legislative process.

Opponents at the time objected that no hearings on the bill had been held, and Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the subcommittee chairman, said he called Friday's 30-minute session mainly to keep that argument from arising again.

The bill will be handled by the Senate as separate legislation but could also be attached to another stopgap bill to keep government agencies operating after Dec. 15, an aide said.

The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee began hearings on the measure Wednesday, also with testimony by Helms and Trent.

The House panel has been investigating allegations that test scores of controller trainees at the FAA's academy in Oklahoma City, Okla., had been juggled to keep some students from flunking out.

Benjamin Demps Jr., director of the school, told Stevens his own inquiry "absolutely confirmed the fact there has been no attempt to manipulate student grades."

A TOTAL OF 19 grades were changed, but only to correct errors caused by a scoring machine, Demps said, and this recomputation resulted in the failure of three students instead of seven.

FRESH CHRISTMAS TREES AND WREATHS SHIPPED DIRECT FROM THE VIRGINIA PLANTATION

You can have (or send to your friends) a Christmas Tree so fresh that it caresses your face with its soft foliage. The fresh needles will stay on the tree. We have shipped trees and wreaths to Texas friends for years.

The tree will be a groomed white pine just under six feet tall. It will be cut, wrapped in a net sleeve to protect it and shipped by UPS on the date you specify. The beautiful wreaths are pine, with cones and a big red bow—approximately 19'' in diameter.

Delivered prices: Trees $29.95 Wreaths $17.50
