Energy Secretary Pena resigns

Energy Secretary Federico Pena speaks at a news conference at the Forrestal Building in Washington Monday, where he announced his plans to resign from the administration at the end of June.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary Federico Pena, the only Hispanic in the Cabinet, announced his resignation Monday, saying he will leave the administration at the end of June to be closer to his family.

Pena's departure had been expected sometime this year. After four years as transportation secretary, Pena took the energy post reluctantly as President Clinton's second term began.

Clinton praised Pena for his "invaluable service" over more than five years in two Cabinet posts and said Pena had "provided much of the analysis that gave me the confidence" to press ahead on a global warming policy "without harming the economy."

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the president "understood exactly" Pena's stated desire to depart the Cabinet for family reasons.

McCurry said Clinton will "cast a wide net" for a replacement. The most likely successor to Pena, however, is Elizabeth Moler, the department's deputy secretary, who had been close to getting the top spot 15 months ago.

Pena, 51, told a news conference he was departing for "personal and family reasons" and wanted to spend more time with his wife and three small children. He said he informed Clinton over the weekend.

A former two-term mayor of Denver, Pena declined to discuss future plans except to say he would not seek

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tammy Wynette, who rose from beautician to "the first lady of country music" with hits including "Stand by Your Man," died Monday. She was 55. WASHINGTON — A drug found to prevent breast cancer in half of high-risk women also causes serious side effects, researchers cautioned Monday, leaving women with a complex decision about the best course to protect their health. Assault rifles

WASHINGTON — President Clinton blocked the import of 1.6 million military-style rifles Monday, saying Americans do not need an Uzi or AK-47 for hunting deer or skeet shooting. "These are military weapons, weapons of war," Clinton said. The order bars 58 high-powered, foreign-made guns after a finding that they failed to meet an exemption to U.S. gun laws as a sporting rifle.

Gumercindo Gonzalez Sr. and his wife Norberta hold the numbers for a winning Lotto Texas jackpot.

Midland couple holds the winning numbers

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

It's not official yet, but apparently Midland is home to another family of millionaires, to the tune of $6.4 million.

Gumercindo Sr. and Norberta Gonzalez found out that they apparently won the Lotto Texas jackpot on Saturday night.

The couple, who live in East Midland in a humble trailer with four of their five children, are still in shock. The winning ticket was sold on Saturday at Midland's Pecan Grove Grocery, where the Gonzalezes purchased their ticket.

"I said, 'Oh my God, oh my God," Gonzalez said through an interpeter. "I've been playing the lotto since it started. Whenever I won the lotto I couldn't believe it. I'm going to keep playing."

Texas Lottery Commission officials Monday declined to say whether or not the Gonzalezes are winners. But they said a winner has come forward from Midland and confirmed that the winning ticket was sold at Pecan Grove.

The numbers on the ticket the family showed the Reporter-Telegram Monday afternoon also matched the winning Saturday jackpot number the Texas Lottery Commission released to the news media over the weekend.

Those numbers were 8, 11, 19, 29, 30 and 49.

Pat Overton, lottery commission spokeswoman, told the Reporter-Telegram that whenever a person matches all six winning numbers, he or she is considered a "prospective winner."

The person must then drive to Austin and show the commission a 16-digit code on the back of their winning ticket. The commission's security firm also must inspect the ticket and certify its authenticity.

"They're not an actual winner they come in and that ticket has been validated," Ms. Overton said.

Ms. Overton said apparently the winner chose the "cash value option" when he or she bought the ticket, which means that they'll get the money immediately, or about $6.4 million of the $12 million after taxes. They could have chosen to get the amount divided over 25 years.

ECISD's Wilkins makes move to Trinity School

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

This may take some getting used to, but John Wilkins is headed for Midland.

Wilkins, the current athletic director of the Ector County Independent School District and who became legendary as a head football coach at Odessa Permian, has accepted the job as athletic director of Midland Trinity, effective July 1.

Wilkins resigned his position as athletic director of the ECISD last week. His last day with ECISD is June 30.

Mickey Landry, the headmaster of Trinity, announced Monday that Wilkins has accepted the athletic director's position at the private school, which competes in football, volleyball, basketball, track, golf and tennis.

"We are very excited that Mr. Wilkins has accepted our offer to become the athletic director," Landry said. "We've always been strong academically and we want to make that same commitment to the arts and athletics at our school. John can help us get to that level in athletics. He's a great role model for our students."

Wilkins said that he wasn't sure about taking the Trinity position at first, but the more he looked into the job, he was won over.

"I have to admit that I was very skeptical at first, but I met with Landry and was attracted to him as far as his commitment to academics and athletics were concerned. He held the same beliefs that I do and that is that they don't have to be in conflict, that they should work together.

"Also, I met with some of the board members and they had a down-to-earth approach and commitment. The more people I met, the more I liked the idea. After much deliberation and prayer by my wife and me, we accepted the offer."

Wilkins said timing had a lot to do with taking the job.

"Even when I turned in my resignation in Odessa, I knew that I would do something," Wilkins said. "This just came at the right time. It's like the Lord closes one door and opens another.

"It's kind of interesting the way it came about. My son, John, works with the Stoltz Company and Mark Stoltz, a member of Trinity's athletic committee, told John that they were looking for an AD and if he knew anyone who might be interested. John said, 'Yeah, my dad.'

"Then Landry called me and we started talking."

Landry added, "Personally, I didn't know John Wilkins and I didn't know what to expect. Frankly, since I'm new to the community and area, some of the things I knew came from the book 'Fri-

Ranch family donates 4,100-acre spread to MC

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

Midland College on Monday announced that a West Texas ranching family has donated a 4,100-acre ranch that the school can use for agriculture and technology student programs.

Odis and Viola Holiman donated their Upton County Wagon Wheel Ranch to the college. The land is about 40 miles southeast of Midland and 15 miles north of Rankin.

Holiman said he hopes future college students can benefit from his donation. He once took night computer classes at MC.

"A lot of people can benefit from it," Holiman, a San Angelo area native, said of the donation. "It's a good way to give back to the community."

He credited a San Angelo business college for giving him a solid education. And following his retirement from ranching, he wanted to donate his ranch to a West Texas institution.

"I feel like all of our freedoms and joys are pretty much related to land and I loved the land," Holiman said. "I feel like education is one of the most important things we have. I think one of the smartest things we did was enroll in that San Angelo business college."

Deana Lusk, associate vice president of instruction, told the Reporter-Telegram that the Holiman Ranch will be used for horticulture, environment science, agriculture, petroleum technology and geology programs.

David Daniel, Midland College president, said the donation comes during an already successful year for the school. The school set a record enrollment of more than 4,400 students, created more scholarship funds and is building the first women's housing in its history.

The college president credited the recent good news to solid community support. Midlanders have continued to attend and send money to the school.

"The support that this institution receives today and will receive tomorrow has just been uncommon," Daniel said. "We hope always to merit that support

Palestinians clear Israel in death of chief bombmaker

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian security officials cleared Israel on Monday in the death of the chief Hamas bombmaker, saying he was shot by a rival Hamas member who tried to cover up the slaying by disfiguring the body in a bomb blast.

Hamas leaders rejected the findings. They insisted Israel was responsible for the death of Mohiyedine Sharif, and said the Hamas military wing, Izzedine al Qassam, would probably make good on its threats to carry out revenge bombings in Israel.

Sharif's death has strained ties between Hamas and Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority.

An open confrontation with Hamas would make it easier for Arafat to crack down on the militants, as demanded by Israel as a condition for a troop pullback in the West Bank.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the investigation proved that the Palestinian Authority was capable of fighting terrorism and that it must continue its efforts.

"That, I think, would pave the way for the resumption of the peace process," Netanyahu said. But he also said he regretted that some Palestinian officials had been so quick to cast blame.

Sharif's body was found at the scene of a car bomb blast in a garage in an industrial zone of the West Bank on March 29, and the circumstances of his death were unclear for days.

"I can say now that Israel is not responsible for that operation," said Palestinian Planning Minister Nabil Shaath, who several days ago had accused Israel of involvement.

A senior Palestinian security official said Monday that Sharif was killed by Adel Awadallah, a rival for leadership of Izzedine al Qassam.

On March 29, Awadallah and a teen-age bombmaker, Ghassan Addasi, drove Sharif to a remote area, said the official.

Awadallah shot and killed Sharif, packed the body in the car and then drove to Ramallah. Addasi and Awadallah rigged the car with explosives, placed Sharif's body near it and detonated the bombs with a timer, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The two apparently hoped the body would be disfigured enough to erase all signs of the shooting. However, only Sharif's right leg was torn off by the blast, the official said.

Hamas has carried out more than a dozen suicide bombings in Israel since 1994, killing scores of people.

Addasi, along with two other Hamas members, is under arrest, but Awadallah remains at large, the official said.

Addasi's family said he was innocent. His 26-year-old brother, Isam, said Ghassan spent the evening of the killing praying at the mosque, having dinner with his family and going to bed early.

The other two suspects were not identified. Jibril Rajoub, the Palestinian security chief in the West Bank, said they included people whom Sharif had trained and others who had helped hide him.

Sharif, 32, topped Israel's most-wanted list as the mastermind of several suicide bombings. He had been on the run since August 1995, moving from safehouse to safehouse.

Abdel Aziz Rantisi, a leader of Hamas in the Gaza Strip, said the investigation's results are "not acceptable to Hamas." Rantisi insisted that Israel was ultimately responsible for Sharif's death.

Asked on Israel radio whether Hamas would go ahead with previously threatened revenge attacks, Rantisi said: "I believe in the way of Hamas, and that is that it will indeed react."

The Palestinians also took care to fill in the Americans on their investigation. Israel's Channel One said CIA officials received a briefing in Ramallah.

In response to the Hamas threats, Israeli security forces have been on heightened alert, patrolling markets, malls and bus stations in Jerusalem and tightening controls at West Bank roadblocks.

Israel was expected to seal off the West Bank and Gaza Strip before the start Friday of the weeklong Jewish holiday of Passover to prevent possible attacks.

Secretary-General of the Palestinian Authority Tayeb Abdel Rahim talks to the press in the West Bank town of Ramallah Monday saying that several Hamas activists had been arrested in connection with death of Mohieyedine Sharif, a master Hamas bombmaker who was mysteriously killed. Following Rahim's announcement, the Palestinian Authority cleared Israel of responsibility in Sharif's death.

Roots of Japan's economic crisis run deep

By Bernard Kaplan
Hearst News Service

■ News analysis

PARIS — Many people find it hard to understand why Japan, which still has little trouble selling millions of well-made cars and innovative electronic products around the globe, should be approaching a major economic crisis — as some of its own leaders now concede.

But the dwindling number of us who were in that country during the postwar U.S. occupation nearly a half century ago are less mystified by the latest turn in the Japanese industrial saga.

Those were the days — between 1945 and 1951 — when Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Pacific war victor nicknamed the American Mikado, or emperor, was supposedly turning Japan into a U.S.-style democracy. MacArthur's headquarters daily churned out reams of propaganda trying to convince the world of the reality of the claim. Even some Japanese may have believed it, though I doubt that.

The fact was that, behind a facade of democratization, Japan was again evolving into the kind of bureaucratic state it had been before entering its disastrous phase of militarist expansion in the 1930s.

The all-powerful military caste that had led Japan into World War II had, of course, been eliminated, but its disappearance meant the return of the bureaucrats, who had been in charge for most of the period after Japan's opening up to the outside world in the mid-19th century.

During most of that period, the pervasive bureaucracy worked closely with the huge financial and industrial monopolies known as the Zaibatsu. A semblance of parliamentary government was introduced — mainly to demonstrate how "modern" Japan had become. But the politicians were mostly an insignificant lot who took their orders, not from those who nominally voted them, but from those who pulled the strings.

It was a neat arrangement that satisfied nearly everybody, except the Japanese people, who received little or nothing of the rich rewards.

In many ways, history repeated itself after Japan's ruinous defeat in 1945. The Zaibatsu monopolies were officially broken up into smaller, separate companies but continued to collaborate in many ways.

Under MacArthur's benign eye, a parliamentary system was restored — although it had never, in fact, been entirely destroyed. But the core of the system once again became the mighty bureaucrats who were really responsible only to themselves.

Prime ministers and cabinets came and went. The bureaucrats ran the show, establishing the system that became known as Japan Incorporated, a society created almost exclusively to benefit its industrial and administrative oligarchy.

For a long time, the results were brilliant. Japan rose to be the world's second biggest economy. Unemployment was minimal. Most Japanese could look forward to jobs for life, even though with long hours, grueling working conditions and salaries that could hardly cope with the high cost of living imposed by their rulers' insistence on keeping foreign competitors out of the domestic market.

Then in the early 1990s the bubble burst when a wild real estate boom collapsed, opening a gaping crack in the Japanese banking system that's still there. Banks and financial houses went under — and are continuing to do so with frightening regularity. But even worse, the system was soon revealed to be riddled with corruption. Senior bureaucrats, even at such a vaunted institution as the Bank of Japan, were discovered to be on the take.

No sooner had all this happened than much of the rest of Asia was battered by a far-reaching financial crisis, raising the possibility that Japan also might be dragged down.

Public confidence, already waning, was shattered. The Tokyo stock market plunged. So did the yen. Industrial production, the carapace of Japanese power, declined sharply.

The government has looked on helplessly, producing a series of half-baked recovery programs which most analysts quickly condemned as inadequate. Japanese politicians never expected to have to make the big, tough decisions. That is something they always left in the past to the top bureaucrats — and no questions asked. But this time the bureaucrats have been out of ideas, too.

Last week, Norio Ohga, the head of Sony, Japan's biggest electronics firm, broke ranks to lambaste Prime Minister Ryutari Hashimoto for "acting like President Herbert Hoover" at the onset of the 1930s depression in America.

Talk like that suggests Japan Incorporated is now close to bankruptcy.

Britain says no evidence animals killed by chemicals

LONDON (AP) — There is no evidence that dead animals seen in the desert by troops during the Gulf War were killed by chemical or biological weapons, Britain's Defense Ministry said Monday.

The inquiry was part of a pledge by Prime Minister Tony Blair's Labor government to investigate more closely veterans' complaints about a range of illnesses they call Gulf War syndrome.

"We have found nothing to suggest that the dead animals which were seen by British troops in the Gulf in 1990-91 had been killed by chemical or biological weapons," said Armed Forces Minister John Reid.

The inquiry consisted of officials trawling through official records about sightings of animals, interviewing personnel and sending a questionnaire to a random sample of 500 veterans.

Reid said inquiries continued into possible links between chemicals and subsequent illnesses among veterans.

After winning power from the Conservative Party last May, Blair's government promised "a new beginning" over the syndrome controversy.

Reid announced last month that for the first time British veterans will undergo clinical tests to ascertain what has caused their illnesses.

Veterans want the government to acknowledge Gulf War syndrome and pay them compensation. Activists say an estimated 6,000 British veterans have fallen ill, of whom 160 have died since the end of the 1991 war.

Mitchell seeks draft that will deliver Northern Ireland accord

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — At what one negotiator called "the most pivotal point in Northern Ireland's history," the American guiding peace talks agonized Monday over details of a draft accord spelling out how Northern Ireland will be governed.

Former Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell worked into the night Monday to complete the draft and deliver it to the eight participating parties, which would cap a 22-month effort to broker a compromise.

Mitchell postponed publishing his document all day in hopes he could reduce divisions between the north's two biggest parties: the Ulster Unionists on the pro-British Protestant side, the Social Democratic and Labor Party on the Irish Catholic side.

But as darkness fell, both parties acknowledged profound differences. So Mitchell's confidential draft could contain unfilled parentheses and lists of disputed alternatives in key passages.

Nonetheless, Mitchell wants the draft in politicians' hands as a foundation for a comprehensive accord by Thursday.

"This is the most pivotal point in Northern Ireland's history," said Gary McMichael, who represents Northern Ireland's biggest pro-British paramilitary group, the outlawed Ulster Defense Association.

McMichael said his militant Protestant supporters were worried that the negotiations would concede too much to Catholic hopes of uniting Ireland. He vowed not to accept an agreement "simply for the sake of signing up to an agreement."

The British and Irish governments, which cosponsor the talks, want Protestants and Catholics to govern Northern Ireland together in an assembly, and to cooperate with the neighboring Irish Republic in a cross-border council of lawmakers.

While the outline of the would-be agreement has been acknowledged for months, its details have been a problem.

The SDLP and Ulster Unionists don't agree on how to structure the Northern Ireland assembly, or what its relationship should be with the cross-border council.

The SDLP wants strong institutions in both parts of Ireland. It foresees the cross-border council enjoying equal status to the Northern Ireland assembly, which would have a Cabinet-style leadership open to all major parties — including the SDLP's rival for Catholic votes, the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party.

Ulster Unionists want to keep the cross-border council, powerless and oppose forming a Cabinet to oversee what they envisage as a 90-member assembly. They want to leave substantial powers with the British Parliament in London, responsible for Northern Ireland since it abolished the province's Protestant-dominated parliament in 1972.

And Ulster Unionist negotiator Jeffrey Donaldson denounced the idea that Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams could have a Cabinet seat as "a long way removed from reality."

He said politicians like Adams and McMichael should be barred from senior posts until the Irish Republican Army and Ulster Defense Association start handing over weapons.

At the root of the dispute — indeed, the entire Northern Ireland conflict — is each community's fear of being made subservient to the other.

Ulster Unionists founded Northern Ireland as a predominantly Protestant state in the 1920s when the predominantly Catholic rest of Ireland gained independence from Britain.

AP Photo

Former U.S. Senator George Mitchell, chairman of the Northern Ireland peace talks enters Stormont Castle buildings Monday as the talks enter their final week. Mitchell puts forth his compromise plan Monday and is hoping to deliver a final settlement by all delegates by the Thursday deadline.

The north's growing Catholic minority is determined that any settlement must ensure that Protestants can't outvote them within Northern Ireland, or pull the plug on the cross-border aspect of a settlement.

Sinn Fein opposes forming any Belfast assembly; its supporters want Northern Ireland abolished, not reformed.

"There's considerable energy and a buzz about, but there's also trepidation that what might emerge will be either difficult or impossible to sell to different constituencies," said Sinn Fein chairman Mitchel McLaughlin.

The Ulster Unionists face a severe challenge from two more hard-line Protestant parties that left the negotiations last year after Sinn Fein gained admission following the IRA's July 1997 truce.

The Rev. Ian Paisley's Democratic Unionists predicted Protestants would abandon Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble if he compromises.

"If David Trimble signs this document, this deal, at the end of the week, he will go down in history not as a deliverer of peace, but as the traitor of traitors to the unionist cause," said Willie McCrea, a senior Democratic Unionist.

Cushy benefits, dim future for Germany's unemployed

By Paul Geitner
Associated Press

HAMBURG, Germany — His twins were only a year old and his eldest son was just starting school, but Martin Bliesener wasn't too worried when he cleaned out his desk in 1994 and joined the ranks of Germany's unemployed.

He was well-educated, experienced and had a healthy severance package. He also had a sense of optimism: Just two years earlier, when the bank he'd worked for merged with another, he had landed a better job as finance director for a Hamburg trading company.

Now, four years since the trading company laid him off, Bliesener, 42, understands the stresses of the longtime unemployed. His story is typical in Germany, where people are reluctant to move for work and a generous welfare state keeps the unemployed afloat but does little to push them to find jobs.

The once-successful banker minds his three sons during the day. At night, he's up until 3 a.m., trying to rebuild his career. So far, he has had 1,000 job applications rejected.

"You can get depressed. You can begin to doubt yourself, whether you can do anything at all anymore, or if you're just too dumb to find something, or too arrogant," Bliesener says, sitting at his dining room table.

His attire reflects his dilemma: a white shirt and tie with blue jeans and slippers.

Bliesener lost his $66,000-a-year job as a finance director when the economic boom that followed Germany's 1990 reunification was fading and corporate downsizing started to hit Germany's insular business world.

No longer was unemployment a problem only for blue-collar industries or confined to the former communist east. The west started losing jobs, too, particularly after Germany abandoned its taboo on American-style layoffs. Joblessness spiraled.

In 1994, he was one in 4.5 million unemployed Germans — or 9.2 percent of the working population. This winter, he was one in 4.8 million, a threatening 12.6 percent.

Jobless Germans took to the streets in February, and were planning protests again Tuesday for the third consecutive month, timed to the release of monthly unemployment figures.

But the demonstrations are likely to remain relatively small. Like Bliesener, most unemployed will stay home, coping alone with what many Germans see as a private problem.

Germany's unemployment benefits — providing up to two-thirds of a person's most recent earnings for up to 32 months — have kept the Blieseners comfortable.

They live in a stylish prewar apartment with three bedrooms and two balconies. Antiques decorate the high-ceilinged rooms. Books are everywhere, from Goethe to business texts on "Change Management." The floors in the children's rooms are covered with toys.

When he first lost his job, Bliesener went to a career counselor. He developed an "application strategy," answering newspaper ads and sending blind letters.

But getting an interview was only the first hurdle. Displaying an easy confidence became more difficult as the bills piled up.

He got an offer in 1995, but it was only a 1-year contract. After it ran out, he was back on unemployment.

Age and time also work against Bliesener.

He appears dynamic and youthful. Nevertheless, Bliesener is past the mid-20s to mid-30s age bracket that most employers seem to want.

And the longer he is unemployed, the more he senses the unasked questions: "If you're so great, why don't you have a job yet? Are you lazy?"

He credits a supportive family for helping his self-confidence. "But it's not given to me, this buoyancy. I have to motivate myself every day."

His wife, Lone, went back to work as a Danish translator about 18 months ago when they lagged on loan payments and other expenses.

Her salary, plus his monthly benefits of about $1,400, help them keep the apartment. They don't skimp on food, especially for the boys, 9-year-old Lars and the 5-year-old twins. But they drive their Ford wagon less often, skip meals out, postpone buying new clothes.

Only now is he starting to bend to the demands of a changing job market, hoping to make himself more flexible, more mobile, more service-oriented.

Since last summer, Bliesener has redirected his energy from finding a company job to trying to start his own business. He and a partner formed Bliesener and Wiese Consulting, offering computer advice to companies.

"It's not paying off yet, but we're both convinced that we'll get a foothold and we'll be successful," he says.

And if it doesn't?

"It must," he says, with a half-smile and a hint of nervousness in his eyes.

PENA: Secretary cites family, financial reasons elected office. It has been known that Pena, formerly a lawyer in private practice in Denver, has wanted to return to the private sector for financial reasons. As energy secretary, he earned $148,400 a year.

Noting he has been in the Cabinet since 1993, Pena said, "The time is now right" for him and his wife, Ellen, to focus on their children's future.

"In the end, we all have to make decisions about our families," Pena said as 9-month-old son Ryan Federico crawled nearby and daughters Cristina, 6, and Nellia, 7, worked on coloring books in the front row.

Pena took over the Energy Department when there was pressure in Congress to dismantle the agency and after his predecessor, Hazel O'Leary, drew intense congressional criticism over her foreign travels.

Attacks on the department subsided during Pena's tenure, although he has been key in crafting strategies to promote new technology and energy efficiency to support the president's controversial global warming policy.

Clinton noted Pena's role on global warming, saying the DOE under Pena's leadership "provided much of the analysis that gave me the confidence that we can reduce greenhouse gas emissions without harming the economy."

Considered a quick learner with good management skills, Pena had no energy experience when he came to the department. In fact, it was widely acknowledged that he was a last-minute selection because Clinton wanted a Hispanic in his second-term Cabinet.

Pena had already put his Washington house up for sale when approached for the energy post, and says he had planned to return to Denver.

His time at the Energy Department has been largely without controversy. Aware of the uproar over O'Leary's elaborate travels abroad, he sought a lower profile, taking minimal staff on trips overseas.

And he was careful in his pronouncements, remembering the criticism — and embarrassment — over his remarks after the May 1996 Valujet crash in Florida. Pena, then transportation secretary, went to the crash scene immediately and declared Valujet safe to fly. A few weeks later, the Federal Aviation Administration, citing numerous safety violations, grounded the company.

While Pena's departure was expected, the announcement's timing surprised some officials, coming only days after he returned from an energy meeting in Russia where he met with the country's new prime minister.

Less than two weeks ago, in a hour-long meeting with reporters, Pena called his experiences at the department "extraordinary" and ticked off a series of what he considered his major accomplishments and goals still ahead.

Pena said he found it "startling" to hear people still don't trust the Energy Department. Noting recent problems at the Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island, N.Y., Pena said he was moved by concerns from people living nearby about DOE wastes contaminating their neighborhood.

The Brookhaven meetings and discussions with people living near other DOE weapons facilities "helped me understand the ... impact we have all over the country," he said.

On Monday, Pena said one of his successor's biggest challenges will be cleaning up radioactive material from decades of nuclear weapons production. It will cost tens of billions of dollars and take decades.

Local reaction to Pena resignation one of disappointment

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Local reaction to the resignation of Secretary of Energy Frederico Pena Monday was generally one of disappointment.

The energy secretary, who paid a recent visit to Midland and spoke in conjunction with the Permian Basin Recovery Conference, announced his resignation Monday, citing "personal and family" reasons.

"There was no indication that he might be planning to resign when he visited Midland two weeks ago," said Morris Burns, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "He seemed very interested in oil industry problems and was intent on following up on several issues."

Jim Henry, president of Henry Petroleum Co., noted that Pena seemed sympathetic to many of the problems of the oil industry and may not have been in full agreement with the Clinton Administration on many of the key issues. Pena was outspoken in his opposition to the president's decision to sell oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserves.

Said Burns: "There is no doubt that he was supportive of some oil and gas issues, but I'm not sure he could do anything about it. I think he understood how the extreme environmental measures can damage the industry, but those measures are supported by the vice president."

Paul Morris, president of Wagner & Brown and president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, said he was disappointed to see Pena resign because he thought Pena was concerned about oil industry problems.

"We had a private reception after his speech in Midland, and a number of oilmen in Midland had an opportunity to meet with him one-on-one. He noted concerns and promised to take them under advisement."

Morris said one of the problems he expected Pena to follow up on was the intention of U.S. Mineral Management Services to disallow gathering and marketing costs against royalty payments on federal land. He noted that it was especially disappointing to the Permian Basin Petroleum Association because the association had expended a lot of effort and time to get Pena to the Basin and to discuss with him many of the industry's problems. "Now he is gone, and we are back to zero."

Mentioned as a likely replacement for Pena is Deputy Secretary of Energy Elizabeth Moller, a former commissioner of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission under President George Bush.

"At least she would know something about the energy industry going into the job," said Burns. "So many cabinet jobs are merely political payoffs and those taking the post aren't always best informed."

Pena, who took over the Energy Department about a year ago, succeeding Hazel O'Leary, has had a rather uneventful term for lack of burning issues. But his resignation comes on the heels of what is likely to be an issue, Pena's draft of a National Energy Strategy. Pena, when he took over the Energy Secretary position, said he would not stay the whole term, but promised to deliver the National Energy Strategy.

Critics of the strategy have called the energy plan "more environmental than energy." In recent months Pena had spent much of his time promoting energy conservation as a key to the administration's policy on global warming.

JACKPOT: Midland family comes up with winning numbers

(From 1A)

The commission will not officially announce the Midland winner until they've had their ticket validated and filled out the paperwork. The Gonzalezes said they're in the process of doing that.

Things have changed for Gonzalez and his family. He worked for 13 years at Big D Equipment Company until he was injured on the job about two years ago.

The Gonzalez couple today live with their daughters Rosa and Maria and their sons Victor and Gumercindo Jr.

Gonzalez has been unable to find work in the equipment business and ever since has been living with the support of his family. No more.

He said, through his daughter Rosa, that he already has some plans for his family.

"I want to buy a house, a house big enough that I could live in comfort with my family," he said through his daughter. "That way I don't have to pay ... rent like I did for 14 years."

He also plans to take a two-week vacation.

"Go to Mexico," he said with a grin

His former employees at Big D are rejoicing, he said.

"They just said they're going to come over here tonight. They're going to have a reunion," he said.

At Pecan Grove, the employees are rejoicing, too. The store has been frequented by members of the news media during the past few days.

A.J. Langdon, the store's owner, said things have been different around his store.

"It's been kind of hectic today. All the TV channels were out (here)," he said. "It's been pretty fun I guess."

The store will receive $120,000 for selling the winning ticket.

"A lot more than I had before," Langdon said. "I was just real surprised. It's pretty amazing."

The owner said the Gonzalez family visits his store often and buy lottery tickets.

"They trade with us pretty often," he said. "They buy some every week, they play it every week."

Back at the Gonzalez home, the family is already are getting advice. Only a few family members and Big D employees knew about them winning the lottery until now.

"(They said) get a lawyer, get a lawyer who specializes in taxes and they'll take it from there," Rosa Gonzalez said.

Rosa said her mother has said she'd start all over again if she won the lotto.

"She said that if she ever won the lottery, she's going to take her dishes and get a trailer," Rosa said. "She always said that about winning the lottery."

Actually Rosa and her mom had another deal they made with each on what they'd do with lottery money.

"If I won the lotto, I'd get a trailer for her, and if she won she'd get me a truck. So she's getting me a truck," Rosa said.

Rosa said she found out herself later Saturday night and came home to find her parents gone and her brother Gumercindo Jr. sitting in front of the television.

"I asked him, 'Did she win on the TV?'" she said. "He said 'Yeah' about went back to watching the TV like it was nothing. I couldn't believe it. I could have fainted."

Gumercindo Jr. said he still can't believe it either. He's excited for his mother.

"I don't know, I can't believe it, that she won," he said. "I'm very proud. That was one of her dreams, to win the lotto."

Rosa said her family is not going to be changed for the worse by their new wealth. They aren't going to be "putting on airs."

In fact, the family members say they're going to keep their current jobs.

"We're not going to change being the people we are," Rosa said.

WILKINS: Athletic director moves to Trinity day Night Lights.' After meeting with John, I have to believe that most of the stuff in the book just isn't true. He is a very moral person and one who can help guide us into the future of our athletic program."

(From 1A)

This will be a completely different challenge for Wilkins than the one he has faced with ECISD.

"It's a whole different deal," Wilkins said. "I'm going from a school district with 2,200 kids in the top three grades at two schools to one that has 135 students in four grades. That's a big change, but it's also exciting to be part of new growth."

Even though it seems on the surface to be a radical change for a legendary sports figure in the Permian Basin, Wilkins says that the move isn't entirely without knowledge of what is ahead.

"I came from a parochial school background in Waco," Wilkins said. "I had 42 in my graduating class at Reicher, a Catholic school. It's been a long time since I've been in that environment, but being in a private school isn't totally strange to me. I left Reicher to attend Rice, so I was never in a public school setting until I started teaching and coaching."

Wilkins says that he will continue to live in Odessa where he will, "jump on 191 and be there (Trinity) in about 20 minutes."

Wilkins, 55, has 33 years of service in the public school system. He became head football coach of the Odessa Permian Panthers in 1973, being elevated to that position after serving as an assistant coach to Gil Bartosh.

That turned out to be a history making move for Permian. Wilkins lost just 22 of 170 games, won two state football titles and lost only eight district games before being appointed athletic director of ECISD in 1985.

"I'm not retiring, I'm just changing jobs," Wilkins said.

But who would have ever thought that the new job would be in Midland?

"Well, stranger things have happened," Wilkins said, adding, "but I really can't think of one off the top of my head."

MC: College gets 4,100-acre donation from family with the good stewardship of the institution."

Holiman first became familiar with the college while taking computer courses. Ms. Lusk said. He decided he liked what he saw.

Ms. Lusk said the college was flattered by the generous gift.

"He's taken more computer classes," she said. "He and his wife, Viola, have given money to upgrade our computers. We're learning today from the Holimans. This is a gift of their life's work."

Holiman said he had been looking at ways to give back to public institutions for the past several years. The Holimans have owned the ranch for about 30 years.

The couple raised cattle and sheep and at one point in Holiman's career he ran four different ranches in the area. He is originally from Arden near San Angelo.

The couple will continue to live on their home on the ranch as the college moves in.

Midland College boards OKs women's dorms

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

The Midland College board of trustees has given administration the go ahead to build what will be the first-ever women's residence halls on campus to attract out of town students.

David Daniel, Midland College president, said the first of possibly two halls will be built on the north side of campus north of the college's circle drive by fall 1999.

"It's about to become a reality," Daniel said. "Indeed, there's a lot of excitement."

The college president said construction could start as soon as this fall on the two-floor, 96-bed women's hall at a cost of about $3.5 million. A second residence hall is also in the early stages of planning.

Daniel said he and the administration had many parents ask them if the college could build dorms. They decided it was time to act. And there could be more residence halls in the future.

"There may be others, I suspect there will be," he said. "Our recruiter told me one day, he was talking to parents on the phone who said it would be nice we had residence halls."

He hopes this move will attract others to the college.

"We think so, we have a number of students who come to Midland College, 150 to 175 miles away," he said. "They must find quarters, usually they will team up with someone they know. We believe the time has come in the history of Midland College."

About half of the new women's dorm will be used for female athletes.

"It'll change the feel of the campus from a residential campus," he said.

Parkhill, Smith and Cooper is the campus planner and architect. The project has not yet gone to bid.

Trust fund at heart of Social Security debate

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Want to see the $650 billion Social Security trust fund? It's not at Fort Knox. It's here in the hills of West Virginia.

And it's at the heart of the debate over the coming Social Security crisis.

Right now, more money flows into the Social Security trust fund than is needed. But when baby boomers start retiring, the trust fund will need to tap the money it's been lending the U.S. Treasury all these years. And after a while, even the trust fund won't be a big enough nest egg.

The trust fund portfolio contains billions in Treasury securities, considered gold-plated investments because they're backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. government. Some Americans, however, think they are worthless IOUs. They wonder how the government can repay the trust fund the billions it has borrowed over the years.

Ask to see the trust fund at the Office of Public Debt Accounting, in a one-story brick building near the Ohio River here, and Treasury Department workers will stroll down the street to another office and point to a locked file cabinet next to Jo Anna Penn's desk.

There's no real cash in the cabinet. Inside are four brown file folders filled with the $650 billion in Treasury bonds.

OK, they're not real. They're pseudo Treasury securities.

Investors no longer get honest-to-goodness Treasury bonds they can hold in their hands. For decades now, Treasury securities have been handled through a computerized system of book entries.

But about three years ago, Congress decided the American people needed reassurance — paper proof — that the Social Security trust fund really exists.

So every month, Ms. Penn makes up these non-negotiable Treasury bonds on her computer, prints them on a laser printer around the corner from her cubicle and dutifully files them in the file cabinet — just in case anybody wants to take a peek.

Ms. Penn and her colleagues acknowledge these 162 paper instruments aren't authentic. (Privately, they say they think the congressional mandate to make them up is a little silly). But they insist they represent real assets sitting in the trust fund — the whole $650 billion kit and caboodle.

"This was a good-faith effort to prove to the public that the money really is there," said Susan Chapman, manager of the government securities management branch in Parkersburg.

Year after year, the Social Security surplus has acted like a private savings and loan for the government. The money goes into the trust fund. The trust fund immediately buys Treasury securities. The government then uses that money to run the government, vowing all the while to pay back the trust fund with interest.

With the coming wave of baby-boom retirees, all that will change.

Income from payroll taxes flowing into the Social Security system will be sufficient to pay benefits for 14 years. But starting in 2012, Social Security is going to be knocking on the government's door, asking to draw upon the interest — and later the principal — tied up in the Treasury securities sitting in the trust fund.

William F. Gillen, a retired Navy man from Wilmington, Del., isn't convinced the government can pay it back.

"Do you realize how much that is? To date, they've stolen $600 billion," Gillen said. "They've been hoodwinking the American people for so long. They're not hoodwinking me! I know what they're doing."

To pay back the trust fund, the government would have to raise taxes, cut government spending or borrow more money from investors interested in buying Treasury bonds, government officials said.

And even if the government finds a way to pay back the fund, a larger problem looms.

In 2029, all the interest and principal will be used up. The Social Security system will have to depend solely on the payroll and income taxes rolling in from workers. At this juncture, there will be enough money to cover only about 75 percent of the monthly Social Security benefits. Unless changes are made, there won't be any money to pay the other 25 percent.

President Clinton says he'll ask Congress next year to make changes to prepare Social Security for baby boomers' retirements. There's an array of reform proposals that will be debated at four town hall meetings starting Tuesday in Kansas City, Mo.

Some options: Cut Social Security benefits, raise the retirement age or raise payroll taxes. Some lawmakers want to leave the Social Security system in place for current recipients, but set up a new one for future retirees, requiring workers to contribute to personal security accounts that they or the government would manage.

"People my age think they'll see a UFO before they see a Social Security check," said Michael Panetta, 26, who co-directs a group called X-PAC to build political support among young Americans to reform Social Security. "But I think the government will make good on its promise."

Social Security crisis

Right now, more money flows into the Social Security trust fund than is needed. Uncle Sam borrows this surplus and hands the trust fund treasury bonds. As baby boomers retire, Social Security will need to redeem these U.S. bonds and their interest.

Arts Assembly program offers exciting plan

Midland is a community of people who have for years shown an appreciation for and an interest in art. That's why the new project announced by the Arts Assembly of Midland for sculptures to be exhibited in Windlands Park along the jogging trail makes such good sense.

Windlands Park, which is located along Wadley Avenue west of its intersection with A Street, is regularly used by joggers, walkers and other enthusiasts who go there to exercise and enjoy the outdoors at all times of the year, so the sculptures will be viewed, enjoyed and potentially even attract new visitors to the park.

A new project announced by the Arts Assembly of Midland for sculptures along the jogging trail in Windlands Park makes good sense.

Scuptures will remain on display for nine months each before they are returned to the artist, according to Linda Bond, executive director of the Arts Assembly. Plans are to have four sculptures a year on display.

The program is an exciting one that should not only promote art in Midland, but also enhance enjoyment of the outdoors in Windlands Park. Feasibly, the program could even encourage greater use of outdoor art in Midland's parks and downtown region. That will benefit all Midlanders and enhance Midland's image as a center of art and culture.

This appears to be a program with great potential — for the art community, the city, and all the people of Midland. We look forward to the first sculpture going on display!

Coke tweak didn't amuse harsh officials

Even as discipline in too many public schools reaches a state of utter collapse, students seem to get punished for all manner of weird offenses. But a story out of Georgia may top them all.

Mike Cameron, a Greenbrier High School senior in Evans, Ga., was suspended for a day for wearing a Pepsi T-shirt.

How ridiculous.

Cameron, a student possessed of a contrarian sense of humor, wore his Pepsi shirt on Coke Day, an event school officials concocted in order to lasso $500 from the Georgia-based cola giant.

Coke executives flew in for the day to give, speeches and pass out goodies, and school officials were determined to put on a Potemkin scene for the visitors. Coke was made part of the instruction in classes, students were herded outside to spell out "Coke" for an aerial photo, and so on.

Gracious! Surely the fellows from Coke have seen a Pepsi sign or two in their day. Would they really have been that offended? Thanks to ham-handed school administrators, a nice little event has become a deserved public relations fiasco.

We say deserved because one really has to wonder about so much effort and distraction from ordinary studies in pursuit of, after all is said and done, a meager $500. That's probably not even enough to buy every kid at Greenbrier High a ... Pepsi.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, April 7, the 97th day of 1998. There are 268 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On April 7, 1948, the World Health Organization was founded.

On this date:

In 1862, Union forces led by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant defeated the Confederates at the Battle of Shiloh in Tennessee.

In 1927, an audience in New York City saw an image of Commerce Secretary Herbert Hoover in the first successful long-distance demonstration of television.

In 1945, during World War II, American planes intercepted a Japanese fleet headed to Okinawa on a suicide mission.

How about helping American cities before African?

When Congress was run by Democrats and the White House by a Republican, congressional Democrats frequently called for the restoration of America's cities before money was spent on other programs.

Thomas

When Republicans became a congressional majority and tried to create tax incentives for individuals and businesses in order to rebuild decaying neighborhoods, they were blocked by liberal Democrats, who feared that success in this area would end the cult of dependency that is their political bread and butter.

President Clinton played Santa Claus on his great African adventure, promising to dispense taxpayers' money on such programs as a "Radio Free Africa" and helping kids access the Internet. But how can so many black politicians and Jesse Jackson, who accompanied the president, talk about reviving Africa until they have done something to help revive America?

In recent months I've been spending time in Anacostia, a part of Washington that, if you believe what you see on television, is populated solely by drug dealers, killers and other antisocial low lifes. While Anacostia has its share of such people, crime is mostly confined to certain neighborhoods and street corners. The rest of this part of southeast Washington is made up of people who live decent lives. Some are employed; others are retired or on some form of public assistance. Although parts of Anacostia are nice, much of it could be called "blighted."

It was to encourage the isolation and ultimate eviction of the criminal class that Republicans in the last Congress tried to push through a bill that would give tax breaks to businesses and individuals who moved into certain areas of Washington and rebuilt them. Some proposals offered businesses and individuals a tax-free existence, believing they would repair dilapidated houses and improve neighborhoods. The short-term loss of tax revenue, it was believed, would more than be made up for in long-term social improvement. Eventually the tax revenues would come from these areas where the government currently takes in little or no money but spends huge sums in its largely unsuccessful attempt to reduce crime.

Republicans believed that making Washington an example of renewal would encourage other decaying cities. That's what liberal Democrats feared — and so the proposals never made it into law.

Few white people or middle- and upper-class blacks visit Anacostia, fearing that they will be mugged or their cars stolen. I had the same feeling until I drove there for the first time in 30 years to meet someone. He wanted to take me to lunch in a "good" part of town. I told him I preferred to eat "in the 'hood." He took me to a restaurant where the cook, some employees and customers came over to the table to greet me and to thank me for coming. I was shocked — this was not an attitude I had seen portrayed on television.

On subsequent visits to Anacostia, I have met some wonderful people who care about the same things everyone cares about. However, they are often limited by the lack of economic opportunity caused not only by family break-ups but a business climate that appears to be comatose.

Republicans should take up the challenge Democrats used to hurl at them. Let's fix American cities before we start throwing money at Africa. Let Republicans write not only a new Contract With America but an Economic Emancipation Proclamation for Black America. It was a Republican president who freed the slaves. Let this Republican Congress free all poor people, black and white, from economic dependency on government programs and spark a financial recovery in our cities by giving tax breaks to those who will return to blighted neighborhoods and stay for at least a decade.

What so many liberal Democrats, including the Black Caucus, fear is that true emancipation will mean that poor blacks won't need them to shore up going-nowhere lives any more. Let's see President Clinton outmaneuver the GOP on this one!

William Safire

Welcome back, Sarah; goodbye, Lance

"I was such an ugly baby when I was born," Henny Youngman used to joke, that the doctor slapped my mother."

Safire

However beautiful the baby may be, the decision about its name is usually the mother's, according to Edward Callary, editor of Names: A Journal of Onomastics. Mothers of sons tend to stick with traditional names: Michael is still highly popular and cross-racial, along with the standbys John and Matthew; lately, there has been a good run on Nicholas, Jacob, and Samuel. Although no national survey is authoritative, it seems that Christopher, Austin, Joshua, Zachary, and Andrew are holding their own, with Brandon, Cody, Christian, and Dylan moving up in the kindergartens, but Mark and Luke are already in their 30s.

Macho names are fading fast: fewer boys are named Rock, Lance, or Pierce. (Whatever — now one word — happened to William, Looie? Way down the list with Richard and Robert, and it's goombye Charlie to the once-hot Jason.)

Girls' names, like their clothes, are much more subject to the swings of fashion. Surging past Michelle, Jennifer, and Jessica, according to a list posted by Michael Shackleford of Maryland, the new Top Five includes Emily, Kaitlyn, Brianna, Ashley, and — atop the list — Sarah.

It's nice to see Sarah, with its biblical overtones, rising to new popularity. I was blessed with two Sarahs in my life — my aunt and godmother, Sarah Siegmeister, and my longtime secretary, Sara Cutting — and spelled with or without the final h, the sibilant name comes lovingly off the lips, along with its diminutive Sally. With Sarah atop the Top 40, can Rachel, Rebecca, and Ruth be far behind? (Ruth, with its touch of sadness, is quite far behind, and Hagar, as Abraham's jealous Sarah made certain, is out of it.)

Mothers seem to be searching for the uncommon in daughterclature. Kaitlyn is very big these days, an updating of the ever-popular Catherine. Brianna is the feminine form of the Irish Brian.

Women in today's maternity wards whose names are Loren, Karen, Linda, Lisa, Hillary, Michelle, and Kimberly — and whose mothers are Barbara, Mary, Jane, Helen, Dorothy, and Betty — name their daughters Megan, Alyssa, Hannah, Brittany, Haley, and Jasmine. (Maria seems to be falling from grace, as Grace did long ago. Not a trace of Tracy.)

Androgynous names abound: Ashley used to be a boy's name, as fans of "Gone With the Wind" remember. (Ashley Wilkes was played by Leslie Howard; now even Leslie is a girl's name.) Taylor, Cameron, and Madison can be borne by male or female. This means it is harder for prospective employers to tell a job applicant's sex when reading a resume, a possible reason for the choices.

As names make news, news makes names: a generation ago, Jacqueline was hot, as Diana is today. Controversy can make or break a name; it is too soon to tell if Paula will be many babies' Monica.

In hilarity heaven, St. Henny will catch the groaner on monicker. Rootless etymologists think it is probably from the Shelta language of itinerants in Ireland; monicker began there as munnik, derived from the Gaelic ainm, in turn taken from the Greek no-men, meaning "name."

REVERSE DEFAMATION

The noun defamation means "an attack on the reputation of another person," whether spoken (slander) or written (libel). When the defaming succeeds, the attacked wretch is left in ignominy; the ig means "lacking," and if you cannot plumb the depths of no-men — the good name or reputation — you have been dozing off again.

In a Newsweek report about the claim made by a Dallas woman to a long-ago affair with Bill Clinton, Michael Isikoff and Evan Thomas wrote, "(Dolly Kyle) Browning says that Clinton's account in his deposition — that he never had an affair with her — is 'perjury' and that she intends to sue the president for defamation."

Can the denial of any adulterous affair — the assertion of virtuous conduct — be considered defamation? Meaning is elastic, but at some point the rubber band snaps. Ms Browning's reasoning is that, in failing to support her claim of past sin, the president is "calling me a crazed liar," thereby damaging sales of her book.

Mebbeso, but it turns on its head the meaning of a word that has held firm for seven centuries. Perhaps a new word is needed: unfamation, "damaging refusal to spread a desired ill report." Its adoption would surely spawn an anti-unfamation league.

Let Puerto Ricans decide on issue of statehood

The House has passed a bill that would allow Puerto Ricans to vote in plebiscite. They could choose statehood, the present commonwealth status or independence. The Senate ought to pass the bill and let them vote.

Reese

Before we consider this issue — and all others really — we ought to examine ourselves to see if we are thinking on the basis of facts and the principles of justice or on the basis of prejudice.

Now I'm not one of those thought-police types who thinks prejudice is a near-capital offense. There isn't a human being on earth who doesn't harbor a prejudice or two. Prejudice, after all, is just an opinion, and people can be prejudiced in favor of a group or against a group. The human brain cannot help forming generalizations.

The key thing to understand is that prejudice is an opinion too often based on insufficient data. Our brains do operate somewhat like computers. Our senses collect data, primarily images (real or fictional), and all are stored in a relational database of sorts — our memory.

For example, suppose the only contact you had ever had with Puerto Ricans was with street gangs you saw on television. That's the data that your brain would store, and when something writes Puerto Rico in your "search box," your database would produce the only data it had -- images of gang members.

On the other hand, if you were fan of Pablo Casals, the great Spanish cellist who organized annual music festivals in Puerto Rico from the late '50s to the early '70s, a search would produce memories of Casals and his music.

No kidding, for years before I ever met a Puerto Rican, the words always triggered in my mind images of the great actor Jose Ferrer, who won an Academy Award for his performance as Cyrano de Bergerac. Ferrer, like many prominent people Americans know through their art, was born in Puerto Rico.

Any group, of course, will encompass the whole range of human behavior from criminal to saint. But humans have an odd quirk that can turn innocent prejudice into something ugly.

We all know that our own group has bad guys, but we don't then conclude that the whole group (including us) are bad guys. Too often, however, we will conclude that another group has all bad guys just because of a few individuals.

At any rate, prejudice is the enemy of clear thinking and justice. We ought to always delete it from our mental computers when we find it.

Now back to the issue. Puerto Ricans deserve an opportunity to determine their own status. They have a long history. In 1898, when the American elite got the crazy notion it wanted an empire like the British had, they looked around and saw that Spain was the weakest of the colonial powers and declared war.

We invaded Puerto Rico (a year after, by the way, Luis Munoz Rivera, had won from Spain the right to set up an autonomous government) and other Spanish possessions and just took them. It was a violation of our own principles. Therefore, we have no right to deny the Puerto Rican people the opportunity to choose their own destiny.

Personally, I think Puerto Ricans would choose either to retain the commonwealth status or statehood, rather than gain independence. For reasons I don't understand, the independence movement has not been very strong lately. But whatever they choose is OK with me and is their right.

Puerto Ricans have been American citizens since 1917. They have lived with us in peace, fought beside us in war and contributed to our art and culture. It's foolish to talk about problems of integrating Puerto Rico into America if it becomes a state. It already is integrated.

Nor would language be a problem. Many more Puerto Ricans than some critics think know and speak English and have for years. (In 1993, the government of Puerto Rico declared Spanish and English joint official languages.) The official language of the American government should be English, but there is nothing wrong with Americans speaking whatever language they please in private life.

Drug prevents breast cancer for half of women at risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drug found to prevent breast cancer in half of high-risk women also causes serious side effects, researchers cautioned Monday, leaving women with a complex decision about the best course to protect their health.

"The results tell us that breast cancer can be prevented, but there is no simple take-home message," Dr. Richard Klausner, head of the National Cancer Institute, said at a news conference Monday. "There are important and serious side effects from this drug."

Because the issue is so complex, Klausner said the cancer institute is developing guidelines to help women and their doctors decide when to use the drug, tamoxifen.

Tamoxifen should be used only by women at high risk, Klausner said. It doubles the risk of getting endometrial cancer, although that risk is about equal to that of women on estrogen replacement therapy. Tamoxifen also causes a tripling of risk for a blood clot in the lungs, a potentially fatal disorder.

Nevertheless, tests of the drug, first reported over the weekend, mark "the first time in history that we have evidence that breast cancer can not only be treated, but also prevented," said Dr. Bernard Fisher, an Allegheny University professor and scientific director of the study that involved more than 13,000 women.

Tamoxifen has been used for 25 years to treat breast cancer, but the study is the first to show the drug can prevent the disease in some women. The drug is known as an "anti-estrogen" because it blocks the effects of the hormone in some tissues and retards growth of cancer cells that depend upon estrogen.

Federal officials said the breast cancer benefits from the drug are so clear that they cut short a long-term clinical trial and notified the 13,388 women participants of the findings. The 6,707 women in the study who had been taking a placebo, or dummy drug, will be told they could now start taking tamoxifen, officials said.

As a side benefit, the study also showed that tamoxifen lowered the risk in older women of fractures of the back, neck or wrist due to brittle bones, or osteoporosis.

Klausner emphasized that the proven benefit of the drug is only for women at an above-average risk of developing breast cancer.

The level of risk depends upon a woman's age, her medical history and those of her mother and sisters, and her reproductive history.

Breast cancer risk increases with age, officials said, and they estimated that only about .3 percent of women 39 and younger would be candidates for tamoxifen.

The percentage of women at increased risk goes up to 2.7 percent for ages 40 to 44; to 7.1 percent for ages 45-49; to 9.3 percent for ages 50-54; and to 12.5 percent for women aged 55 to 59.

Klausner said it also is unclear just how long women should take the drug. The study lasted only six years, and some women took the drug for less, he said. Final effects of tamoxifen may still be years away, he said.

Despite the complexities and the problems, Klausner said the major unprecedented effect of the study is to prove that a drug can be developed to actually prevent a high risk group from developing cancer.

"This is the first imperfect, but very encouraging step," he said, toward drugs that could protect people from lung, rectal, bowel or prostate cancer. About 85 other drugs are being tested for this preventative effect.

In the study, the group of women taking the drug experienced 45 percent fewer cases of invasive breast cancer compared to those taking placebo. There were 85 invasive breast cancers among the tamoxifen group, vs. 154 in the placebo group.

Women on tamoxifen also had fewer non-invasive breast cancers: 31 cases vs. 59 cases.

There were 47 bone fractures among those on the drug, compared with 71 among those on placebo.

But the side effects of the drug were significant and serious. Among the group on the drug, there were 33 cases of cancer of the uterine lining, vs. 14 cases in the placebo group. The drug group had 17 cases of blood clots in the lung, including two deaths. This compares with six cases and no deaths among the placebo group.

In the drug group, there were 30 cases of blood clots in major veins, compared with 19 cases in the placebo group.

In some women, tamoxifen also causes hot flashes and vaginal discharge, officials said.

Lobbyist wins key battles for broadcasters

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Eddie Fritts, a small-town broadcaster from Mississippi, was written off by some as a country bumpkin when he became the broadcasting industry's top lobbyist 16 years ago.

But under his presidency, the National Association of Broadcasters has gotten each of the 1,600 broadcast companies a second TV channel for free; persuaded Congress to make it easier for TV and radio companies to own more stations and keep their licenses longer; beat efforts to regulate liquor ads; and forced rival cable companies to carry local TV stations on their systems.

Little wonder, then, that Fritts, 57, still president of the NAB, which is meeting here, is considered one of the most effective lobbyists in Washington.

His next challenge: Stopping the Federal Communications Commission from forcing broadcasters to give political candidates free air time for ads. And he'll be involved in efforts crucial to the industry to get cable TV systems to carry broadcasters' new digital TV signals.

When Fritts became NAB president in 1982, the inside-the-Beltway crowd thought: "This guy is going to be in over his head," recalls Andrew Schwartzman, whose law firm, the Media Access Project, has done battle with Fritts. "In fact, Eddie is crackerjack smart and very effective. ... He'll roll anyone that stands in the way."

His ambitious drive is masked by a folksy, easygoing demeanor. "I think there is a coolness about him, sort of a Caribbean coolness," said Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., whose House Commerce subcommittee oversees broadcasting policy.

Fritts, who declined to be interviewed, has mastered the Washington insider's role of shepherding his constituents to build grassroots support for the industry's positions in lawmakers' home states.

"Being a vocal advocate in Washington and across the country — making noise so to speak — about our issues is much easier than what our members must do," Fritts said in a speech last year.

He also is able to get member companies whose business interests are widely diverse to present a unified front, lawmakers say.

For instance, television giant NBC, for instance, is big in cable, but doesn't own radio stations. CBS is one of the largest owners of radio stations; the parent companies of ABC and Fox both own movie studios.

NAB's members include the ABC, NBC, CBS and Fox networks, affiliated stations and independent stations covering large and small markets.

Having a unified front was instrumental in getting the industry a major break from regulations in the 1996 telecommunications law.

Back in 1983, NAB's lobbying was so ineffective that Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., a friend of the industry, declared at its convention: "You can't lobby your way out of a paper bag."

Another thing that makes Fritts effective is the power of the media, says Common Cause, which is facing off against the industry in the debate over free air time for politicians. Broadcasters are successful in Washington in large part because they have the power to shape the news and control how and if politicians get on the air, Common Cause says.

Broadcasters reject this notion, which also has been made by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and former FCC Chairman Reed Hundt. Both lost in their efforts to get broadcasters to pay for the valuable second channels, which will be used to provide improved digital TV.

The NAB contributed $626,165 — mostly to Republicans — from 1995 through 1997 in contributions to political candidates and soft money to political parties, according to Common Cause.

Fritts also has friends in the right places. He was a University of Mississippi classmate of Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., and has longtime connections with fellow Mississippian and former Republican Party chairman Haley Barbour, now a lobbyist whose clients include CBS.

Fritts began his broadcasting career in radio. He sold the four AM and four FM stations in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana just after arriving at the NAB.

Now, says ABC's vice president Billy Pitts, by getting radio deregulated "Eddie Fritts has done as much for radio in the last decade as Guglielmo Marconi did in the first decade."

Clinton blocks imports of 1.6 millions assault-style firearms

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton blocked the import of 1.6 million military-style rifles Monday, saying Americans do not need an Uzi or AK-47 for hunting deer or skeet shooting. "These are military weapons, weapons of war," Clinton said.

The order bars 58 high-powered, foreign-made guns with large-capacity magazines after a finding that they failed to meet an exemption to U.S. gun laws as a sporting rifle. Most of the affected guns were variations of the AK-47 and Uzi semiautomatic weapons.

"They were never meant for a day in the country and they are certainly not meant for a night on the streets," Clinton said. He announced his decision on a sunny day in the Rose Garden, surrounded by flowering shrubs and trees and beds of red and yellow tulips. Fifteen uniformed law enforcement officials stood behind the president in a silent show of support.

Press secretary Mike McCurry said the announcement was made "within the context of a nation that is still grieving" from the schoolyard killings in Jonesboro, Ark. However, those weapons would not be covered because they were made in the United States, not imported.

Clinton's Rose Garden appearance opened a week that the administration hoped would give the president a burst of momentum following the dismissal of Paula Jones' sexual harassment suit last week and Clinton's successful Africa trip. With Congress out of town, Clinton will be alone in the spotlight.

Heading out on three days of travel — this time in the United States — the president will focus on Social Security's financial troubles in a speech Tuesday in Kansas City, Mo. Clinton will fly to Chicago for a Democratic fund-raiser that night. On Wednesday, he will speak at a Chicago school on education issues. Thursday, he will go to Kentucky for an anti-smoking appearance.

The action against assault-style rifles was set in motion last November when Clinton ordered a review of imports of semiautomatic weapons. Members of Congress and others had expressed concern that the weapons, with slight modifications, were essentially the same as semiautomatic assault-style rifles banned in a 1989 decision by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms during the Bush administration.

Clinton said foreign gun makers were making "minor cosmetic modifications" to skirt the law. To those manufacturers, he said, "You can read the fine print in our law and our regulations all you want and you can keep making your minor changes. But we're going to do our best to keep our people alive and stop you from making a dollar the wrong way."

The National Rifle Association immediately promised a bid to overturn Clinton's ban in Congress. "We believe the people who have responsibility for writing gun laws are the Congress, not the president," said Tanya Metaksa, the NRA's main lobbyist.

But Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., said, "These guns are the tools of gang members, grievance killers and those who go up against police. They do not belong on our streets and President Clinton is right to keep them out of our country."

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who sponsored a 1994 ban on 19 specific weapons and dozens of others with similar characteristics, said he would introduce a resolution in Congress supporting Clinton's action to thwart an attempt to overturn it.

"We can't let a bunch of gun extremists put lives in jeopardy," Schumer said.

Clinton's order follows a Treasury Department review of 59 weapons, done in consultation with state game and law enforcement agencies, hunting guides, and publications and groups devoted to hunting and shooting. Only one weapon, the .308-caliber Vepr, was considered acceptable for continued import.

Firearms importers had permits to ship in nearly 600,000 altered guns, and applications were pending for 1 million more. The administration's action prevents the sale of those weapons.

"Many importers are going to be out in the street," said the NRA's Metaksa. "You can't return these firearms to the place you bought them like you return a shirt to Macy's."

Tammy Wynette dead at 55

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tammy Wynette, who rose from beautician to "the first lady of country music" with hits including "Stand by Your Man," died Monday. She was 55.

Wynette

Wynette, who had had a series of health problems in recent years, died Monday evening while napping at her home, said spokeswoman Evelyn Shriver. The cause of her death was believed to have been a blood clot.

She was one of country music's greatest success stories, catapulting from a job in a beauty shop to a three-time winner of the Country Music Association's female vocalist of the year award — 1968 to 1970. Only Reba McEntire won the honor more times — four.

She recorded more than 50 albums and sold more than 30 million records.

"When Tammy opened her mouth, it was the soul of country music," said country singer Patty Loveless. "Tammy, Dolly (Parton) and Loretta (Lynn) — that was, and always will be, the heart of this music."

Throughout her 25-year career, her stormy marriages and hospital stays, even a kidnapping and beating for which no one was ever convicted, threatened to overshadow one of the most successful singing careers in country music history. But she didn't emphasize the negative.

"I've had a wonderful life," she said in a 1991 Associated Press interview. "I absolutely feel I've been blessed tremendously. I can't complain at all."

She even became a part of the 1992 presidential campaign after Hillary Rodham Clinton, stressing that her support of her husband was more than routine, told an interviewer, "I'm not sitting here like some little woman standing by my man like Tammy Wynette."

Wynette replied angrily that Mrs. Clinton "offended every true country music fan and every person who has 'made it on their own' with no one to take them to a White House." She added that if she and the Yale-educated Mrs. Clinton ever met, "I can assure you, in spite of your education, you will find me to be just as bright as yourself."

Mrs. Clinton said she didn't mean to hurt Wynette's feelings, and Wynette later performed at a Clinton fund-raiser.

Besides "Stand by Your Man," Wynette's hits included "D-I-V-O-R-C-E," "I Don't Wanna Play House," "Womanhood," "Take Me to Your World," "Your Good Girl's Gonna Go Bad," "Singing My Song" and "The Ways to Love a Man."

She also recorded several duets with country star George Jones, to whom she was married from 1969 to 1975.

Wynette was born Virginia Wynette Pugh on a cotton farm in Itawamba County, Miss. She picked cotton as a child, and as a young woman worked as a waitress, a doctor's receptionist, a barmaid and a shoe factory worker.

In the mid-1960s, she was working as a beautician in Birmingham, Ala., and making periodic 180-mile trips to Nashville in hopes of getting discovered as a singer.

She visited music business offices in Nashville and caught the eye of Grand Ole Opry star Porter Wagoner who asked her to sing at his road shows. Shortly thereafter, she met record producer Billy Sherrill who recorded her for Epic Records and launched her career.

She was hospitalized for various ailments dozens of times, and admitted in the late 1970s to being dependent on painkilling drugs.

In May 1992, she underwent 14 hours of abdominal surgery to relieve a recurring inflammation of the bile duct. Spokesmen said the surgery was necessary because of complications caused by scars from previous operations. For two weeks in late 1993 and early 1994, she was hospitalized, for a time in critical condition, because of a severe infection the bile duct.

Institute for deaf gets new dorm

By Johnnye Montgomery

BIG SPRING — When the 100 or so students at Big Spring's Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf (SWCID) give their rooms a final cleaning and gather up their gear at the end of the spring 1998 semester, they will say goodbye for good to the World War II air base hospital barracks-turned-dormitories, which have served the college for its 18-year existence.

SWCID's new 46-room, 92-bed facility now under construction will feature light-based alarms and signaling devices instead of bells, and space enough for the animated conversations that go on among people who talk with their hands.

The two-wing dormitory is the first new building to be constructed on the site since the college was begun in 1980 in buildings and on land once occupied by Webb Air Force Base. It will replace both Burke Hall and Mehan Hall.

Provost Ron Brasel said renovations and repairs on the 1940s vintage barracks had become increasingly expensive until, in the early 1990s, the college took the inevitable first step toward replacement of the dorms.

"In 1994, our president, Dr. Cheryl Sparks, went before the (Texas) Legislature and requested money to build a new dormitory. Two legislative sessions ago, we received $1.48 million, but that wasn't enough. We went back the last legislative session and requested an additional $1.48 million. We received that, plus Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf provost Ron Brasel says the school's new dormitory, now under construction in Big Spring, will feature 46 rooms and 92 beds.

BASIN BRIEFING

Open Cockpit Day

Highlighting the Confederate Air Force's second annual "Open Cockpit Day" Saturday at the Midland International Airport will be the display of a rare Lockheed Electra 10E. The plane is scheduled to arrive at about 3 p.m. today. One of only two Electras in existence, the aircraft is the plane that was recently flown by pilot Linda Finch to retrace Amelia Earhart's around-the-world flight. The Electra will be on display here for approximately six weeks.

ROT trial

FORT STOCKTON — A Texas separatist has been sentenced to life in prison and his wife to 30 years after both were convicted for a military-style raid that led to an armed standoff in the mountains. A Pecos County jury deliberated about five hours Saturday before handing down the sentences for Gregg and Karen Paulson, both members of the Republic of Texas, a group that believes Texas is an independent nation.

Tuna Guys

GALVESTON — Even offstage, Jaston Williams can't hold his tongue when it comes to politics or a bad hairdo. And sometimes, the two just go hand in hand. Watching an interview with Paula Jones' lawyer after her lawsuit against the president was dismissed, Williams thought back to the days when he and partner Joe Sears began tackling political satire in "Greater Tuna," their two-man, two-dozen character show about small-town Texas life. Now they're back with the third installment in the Tuna trilogy, "Red, White and Tuna," which premieres Tuesday night at Galveston's Grand 1894 Opera House.

Electric weapons

AUSTIN — In the early 21st century, electricity won't just run the television, computer and hair dryer. It will form shields like those on "Star Trek" around ground combat vehicles, power high-technology guns and run super-quiet engines. "They'll run over you before you hear them coming," University of Texas physicist Harry Fair said. It's not science fiction but Army research, some of it secret and all of it maturing at UT's 8-year-old Institute for Advanced Technology, which Fair directs.

Youth shooting

AUSTIN — A 13-year-old boy who reportedly purchased a handgun for $25 was ordered to remain in custody Monday in the shooting death of an 8-year-old companion. Neighbors told police that the 13-year-old claimed to have purchased a .32-caliber handgun on Friday. Police said the gun was used Saturday to shoot Bobby Joe Salazar, the grandson of the 13-year-old's aunt and uncle.

A Day in the Life of Bill Henkel

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Bill and Pat Henkel, owners of Cattleman's Steak House, with two of their passions — steak and 'Old Glory'.

Midland restaurant owner salutes U.S. Navy

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Bill Henkel is a thorough patriot, the compleat naval enthusiast, who figured that his serving in the United States Navy during World War II is "the greatest thing that I ever did."

And inside his Midland restaurant, Cattleman's Steak House, there is proof beyond proof that bears witness via photographs, prints, and other memorabilia to his respect for America's armed forces and the men and women who serve and who have served in the ranks.

And he is steadfastly partial to the Navy.

"I grew up in the Navy. I was young when I went in" as a teen-ager out of high school in the Texas high plains community of Kress.

Henkel, who was born in 1924 on the farm where he helped out with the cotton hoeing and picking and with milking the dairy cattle, joined the Navy in 1942 "for the benefits."

His mother had been widowed in 1937, lost the farm, and had five children to support — young Bill Henkel and his four sisters.

"They (the Navy) had good benefits," Henkel reflected. "My father was dead. And my mother needed somebody to help her with the bills. That's true. I sent my (military) allotment to her and the girls. It was a hardship

Input requested for distribution of CDBG funds

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

City of Midland staff has marked a number of local projects completed with Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds during this National Community Development Week.

Enacted in 1974, the CDBG program is the principal means through which federal funds are disbursed to cities and states for the purpose of neighborhood improvement, according to Sylvester Cantu, CDBG administrator for Midland.

Individual cities are responsible for designing plans to use those funds to improve the physical, economic and social conditions of their communities.

All CDBG money comes from a national program administered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

During this week, city of Midland officials are planning two open meetings to gather ideas and answer questions community members might have regarding the expenditure of next year's $1,306,000 in CDBG funds.

The first of those two meetings is tonight at 7 p.m. at South Elementary School.

"We want this opportunity to get input and answer questions from the citizens before we decide how to use this year's money," Cantu said.

Blue ribbons have been placed to denote neighborhood improvement projects that have come about through the use of CDBG funds, Cantu said.

Those are around Washington Park and new swimming pool in the 1800 block of S. Indiana, a paving project currently in the 1700 block of S. Jefferson, housing development along Main Street and Cuthbert, an affordable housing development in the 700 block of S. Marshall and a dozen other areas around the city, Cantu said.

"Primarily, in our city, these funds are used in low-income neighborhoods," Cantu said. A significant portion of the funding is used locally to get families into their own houses through the creation of low-cost housing and assistance with down payments — and for repairs

Glenwood renamed Desert Springs Medical Center

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Former employees of Glenwood Hospital and West Texas Behavioral Systems have dubbed their new hospital and mental health care clinics as Desert Springs Medical Center.

The new signs are not yet in place, but they are expected to be completed by the April 30 open house to mark the closing date for the purchase of that facility by the Florida-based Riverside Health Systems, Inc.

Oakpark, Inc., a subsidiary of Riverside, has been operating the facility for about two weeks while waiting for the purchase to become official. New Chief Executive Officer Barbara Cabello has been working with David Fletcher-Janzen, outgoing chief executive officer, to make a smooth transition into new ownership.

Fletcher-Janzen will be leaving Midland to continue working with the previous owner of the facility, Brown Schools Corp.

Also on the 30th, Desert Springs officials are planning to begin selecting people from the community to serve on an advisory committee to help integrate the needs and wishes of the community into the operation of the facility.

Hospital officials are asking for people in the community who "believe they could be an asset" to such a committee to get in touch with Desert Springs staff.

"We want people who have a feel for the community," Ms. Cabello said.

Policemen, teachers, lawyers, homemakers are encouraged to apply, as long as they are involved with the community and believe they can serve as a representative of this community.

Those selected will be a mix of medical, professional and lay people to provide guidance for the future of Desert Springs' service to the Permian Basin, she said.

Desert Springs officials are not planning to remove any programs being offered at the facility, which serves the mental health needs of the Permian Basin and has both inpatient and outpatient care along with drug and alcohol abuse programs available on site.

The advisory committee will help form ways in which the center can augment its programs to better serve West Texans, according to Desert Springs officials.

"We're hiring different people from the community to add to what we have," she said.

Oakpark, Inc., is currently working to implement seven-day programing in the inpatient treatment regimes there. Weekends will be included on the treatment program with eight hours of therapy classes and treatment on weekdays and six hours on weekends.

POLICE REPORTS

Hit-and-run

ODESSA — The driver of a vehicle allegedly involved in a fatal hit-and-run accident has voluntarily reported what took place to the Odessa Police Department.

The accident, which occurred at approximately 10:52 p.m. Friday, claimed the life of Leon Gonzales as he was attempting to cross the 2100 block of Eighth Street on foot. The vehicle fled the scene, failing to stop and render aid as required.

An arrest has not been made at this time, nor has anyone been charged with the offense. Based on information from the driver, investigators are contacting potential witnesses, taking additional statements and conducting follow-up investigation. Pending the conclusion of the investigation, charges are expected to be filed and an arrest forthcoming.

Stand-off

ODESSA — Odessa police were involved in a 26-minute stand-off early Saturday morning at 3000 Laurel Street.

Officers were called to the address at 5:25 a.m. in response to a disturbance involving an armed individual, who reportedly had a history of mental illness. Upon arrival, officers were confronted by the individual, who was standing in the doorway holding a rifle. Several officers responded to the scene and a perimeter was set around the house.

In the presence of officers, the individual made several threats of suicide, according to police. As events unfolded, officers determined that three teen-age women and an invalid elderly woman were also in the house. While one group of officers talked with the armed individual at the front door, a second group of officers entered the rear of the house and evacuated the occupants, with the disabled elderly woman physically carried from the house. All the occupants were uninjured but visibly shaken by the incident, police said.

Odessa Police Chaplain Leland Maples was called to the scene.

Throughout the negotiations, the armed individual made overt actions that led officers to draw their weapons for self-protection. After removing the other occupants, a group of officers entered the house through a rear entrance, monitored the suspect without his awareness and were eventually able to overtake and disarm him without causing injury to anyone, police said.

The individual was taken into police custody and immediately transported to Medical Center Hospital for mental evaluation.

Autopsy results

ODESSA — Preliminary autopsy results performed at Medical Center Hospital on Odessan William Franklin Lane Jr. reveal the cause of death was due to natural causes related to heart disease.

The 67-year-old Odessan was found dead in his van in the 6100 block of north West County Road April 1.

James Marberry

James Marberry, 90, died February 23, 1998, after a brief illness. Born in 1907, to Florence Edmiston and James Oscar Marberry, Jim lived his early years in Illinois. After attending the University of Wisconsin for one year, he moved with his family to Texas in 1927, and graduated from The University of Texas Law School in 1932. He was a dyed-in-the-wool Longhorn fan. He set up his first practice in Goldthwaite, then practiced law in Austin with Joe Koch in the Littlefield Building. In 1937, he married Mary Miller Cox of Austin, and they moved to Tulsa where he was employed in the legal department at Skelly Oil. The Marberrys' four children were born in Tulsa. In 1948, the family moved to Midland where the oil patch offered new opportunities. Mr. Marberry worked for several years at Stubbeman, McRae and Sealy before opening a private practice. Semi-retirement began in 1969, when he and Mary moved permanently to Inks Lake, Burnet County; though he maintained an office near his home for many years, he most enjoyed working on the "Inks Spot" coaxing small oaks and cedar elms, and fighting stick cactus. His beloved wife, Mary died in 1989 and his sister, Mary Hettie Sherman died in 1986. Since June 1997, he lived at the Windchime, Kingsland, where he and family members celebrated his 90th birthday.

DORM: Old buildings needed too many repairs

another $250,000 — a total of about $3.2 million."

Brasel said not all the $3.2 million will go toward dormitory construction.

"At our next board meeting we hope to receive final word on a new multi-purpose center featuring a gymnasium and drama stage with facilities for a number of student activities. We're also hoping to renovate the present student union building and move the cafeteria into it." Finally, Brasel said, some of the state funding would be used for technical upgrades, such as new computer equipment.

The new dormitory, officially named Burke and Mehan Residential Complex, is of concrete block construction inside and brick outside. Each dorm room will house two beds, with built-in shelving and special computer and telephone lines, large closets with no doors and a bathroom to be shared by the adjacent room. In each wing will be a special wheelchair-accessible room featuring extra-wide bathroom doors and furnishings designed completely in compliance with Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). Two supervisors' apartments are located at the center where the two wings converge, both with outside doors to the campus as well as inner doors to a window-lined office overlooking a huge lobby and lounging area. Storage rooms, laundry rooms and mechanical storage areas are located within easy access of both wings.

"We really believe it's in the best interest of the state and the college that we spend the money for a facility that is safe, comfortable, provides a home environment for our deaf students and is also constructed so that it will meet the special needs of our students, with doorbell lights instead of sounds, and a strobe light fire alarm system instead of sound. We wanted our students to have easy access to their rooms, and to have computer lines and telephone lines to the rooms. We wanted a large lobby space because our students tend to be very social and they need the room to see each other as they're communicating. But our primary concern was that the building be safe.

"We have remodeled and remodeled the old barracks buildings to the point where we could no longer remodel. The old construction was wood. We were constantly repairing walls and ceilings. The fire alarm system didn't meet our needs.

"We have been good stewards of those old buildings, and they have certainly served their purpose," he added, "and now we have an opportunity to expand that stewardship while looking towards the future and the growth of the college."

to the homes owned by low-income Midlanders.

A second town meeting is slated for 7 p.m. April 16 at Crockett Elementary School. Planning will begin soon, determining how this year's allocation will be spent as city staff begin building the city's budget for the next fiscal year.

A lunchtime picnic celebrating National Community Development Week is scheduled for this Thursday at the Washington Park pavilion. Speakers will include city officials, including Juluis Brooks of the Midland City Council.

Gov. George W. Bush also has proclaimed this Community Development Week in Texas, along with the national recognition effort sparked by the National Community Development Association.

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs is responsible for distributing the state's allotment of federal funds to Texas cities.

Last year, TDHCA allocated more than $97 million to city programs throughout the state.

"These funds go directly toward improving neighborhoods and communities while creating a better quality of life for Texas residents," said Larry Paul Manley, executive director of TDHCA.

Republic of Texas separatists convicted, sentenced to prison

FORT STOCKTON (AP) — A Texas separatist has been sentenced to life in prison and his wife to 30 years after both were convicted for a military-style raid that led to an armed standoff in the mountains.

A Pecos County jury deliberated about five hours Saturday before handing down the sentences for Gregg and Karen Paulson, both members of the Republic of Texas, a group that believes Texas is an independent nation.

The same jury had convicted the Paulsons on Friday on one count each of burglary with intent to commit an aggravated assault. The trail was moved to Fort Stockton because of extensive pre-trial publicity in Jeff Davis County, where the crime took place.

The charges stemmed from the couple's role in an April 27 assault on the home of Joe and M.A. Rowe, two residents in the Davis Mountains Resort, a remote rural community 175 miles southeast of El Paso.

The raid, carried out in retaliation for the arrest of a Republic member, touched off an armed standoff between the separatists and 300 law officers. It ended May 3 when group leader Rick McLaren and other members surrendered.

McLaren and his chief aide, Robert Otto, were both convicted Oct. 31 on organized crimes charges stemming from the siege. Gregg Paulson testified during his own trial that McLaren ordered the initial raid.

A fifth person, Richard Keyes III, is awaiting trial in the incident.

NAVY: USS Enterprise 'greatest ship that ever sailed the seas' thing."

In his "Welcome Aboard" room that is dedicated to the armed forces, to the Navy more than any other branch, are the U.S. flag, prints of warships and aircraft, a newspaper headlined "WAR!" on that day of "infamy" on Dec. 7, 1941, when Japanese naval air forces attacked American forces at Pearl Harbor, and another newspaper, printed on Aug. 15, 1945, that boldly proclaimed "PEACE."

By 1943, Henkel was serving aboard, a "tin can," the destroyer USS McKee.

"I took care of the five-inch guns," Henkel said.

The fast-sailing and agile destroyers are called "tin cans" due to their relatively thin-steeled hulls which afford lightness and speed not accorded the aircraft carriers, battleships, cruisers, and other ships which destroyers escorted and protected from enemy assault during the war.

By war's end, Henkel's destroyer, a fast (35 knots) escort warship, had survived 229 air attacks in the Pacific Theater, had rescued 11 downed pilots, three aircrewmen, and 10 others, and had earned an impressive 11 battle stars from the 1943 Pacific Raids, including Wake Island, to the 1945 battles at Iwo Jima and Okinawa. The USS McKee, DD-575, Henkel noted, was among the first U.S. surface vessels "to go into a Japanese port" toward close of the war in August 1945.

"I think it's the greatest thing that I ever did," Henkel said of his years in the Navy. "You betcha. It was a learning experience. Sure, I love it to this day."

In sincerity and candor, he simply cherishes the Navy, the sailors, past and present and those yet to serve.

And he has a particular fancy for the famed World War II aircraft carrier, the battle-tested USS Enterprise, and for the post-war USS Enterprise of nuclear-power technology.

The USS Enterprise of World War II note was "the greatest ship that ever sailed the seas," Henkel surmised. "We tied up by her a lot of times. But I never went aboard her. Those days, she carried F4F Wildcats and F6F Hellcats."

Henkel described the captain of his destroyer as "the greatest man who ever lived, (rather, just), a great guy," because "He got us there and back" alive.

After the war, Henkel worked in the wholesale grocery business.

By 1981, he and his wife, Pat, were operating Cattleman's Steak House.

"I like it best because I get to meet people," Henkel said of the cafe business.

At the mom-and-pop eatery, "We just do what we know to do: Serve good food to good customers," Henkel said. "We serve good food, and we try to take care of our customers and give good service. You have to work at it. We take care of them (the customers) here.

"I think there will always be a place for my type of operation" even in these days of chain-store businesses.

His steak house has 31 employees, "part-time, full-time, and all-time."

"I think the Ma-and-Pa operations are coming back ... because of the service," Henkel said.

He and his wife, who have "never had a cross word" in 46 years of marriage, "go on and do our work. She knows what she has got to do, and I know what I have got to do," Henkel said. "I live and breathe the restaurant business. I love it. I love it. I love it."

Tuna Guys return with another show on small-town Texas life

GALVESTON (AP) — Even offstage, Jaston Williams can't hold his tongue when it comes to politics or a bad hairdo. And sometimes, the two just go hand in hand.

Watching an interview with Paula Jones' lawyer after her lawsuit against the president was dismissed, Williams thought back to the days when he and partner Joe Sears began tackling political satire in "Greater Tuna," their two-man, two-dozen character show about small-town Texas life.

"I thought, 'We were writing about you right-wing idiots way back when,'" he shared, adding with a wicked giggle, "It's great to see the judicial system turn them down. I'm a very happy human being."

Perhaps because of his good mood, Williams just couldn't let the conversation end without an additional jab at Linda Tripp, the Pentagon staffer who recorded conversations with Monica Lewinsky.

"I'm hoping if Linda writes a book, she gets some hair conditioner," Williams quipped. "I've seen better hair on a goldfish."

The biting humor and brazen beauty tips have made the Tuna Guys the most popular cross-dressers in the country with "Greater Tuna" and its sequel, "A Tuna Christmas."

Now they're back with the third installment in the Tuna trilogy, "Red, White and Tuna," which premieres Tuesday night at Galveston's Grand 1894 Opera House.

The show continues tracking the lives of the 21 residents of Tuna, Texas, a fictitious West Texas town that serves as the brunt of Williams' and Sears' unique brand of humor.

This time the town's perennial favorites, along with some new Tuna characters, gather for the Tuna High School reunion over the Fourth of July.

"What we did was select an outlet for our characters to continue in," said Sears. "We're trying to bring the characters full-circle."

Returning for more mischief is the town matriarch, Aunt Pearl Burras, who tosses a string of lit firecrackers into her husband's room for forgetting their anniversary — again.

She's joined by Vera Carp, Tuna's richest citizen who has been spending her time rewriting the lyrics to some popular church hymns, and Stanley Bumiller, who left Tuna to pursue a successful career in Albuquerque as an artist who spray paints roadkill.

New characters include Amber Wind-Chime and Star Bird-Feather, a couple of hippy chicks who changed their names and moved to Lubbock for spiritual enlightenment.

"'Greater Tuna' was more about politics and 'Tuna Christmas' about relationships," said Williams. "'Red, White and Tuna' is about change and growth and the lack of it."

With the help of some super-quick costume changes, the 48-year-old Sears plays 10 characters, while 46-year-old Williams takes on 11.

The actors met 25 years ago during a production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in San Antonio. They later joined an acting company in Austin, where the idea for "Greater Tuna" was hatched.

It began as a party skit based on a political cartoon. When the idea showed promised, Sears and Williams would meet at Barton Springs, swim for 30 minutes and spend the rest of the day improvising on a tape-recorder.

They soon took the show on the road, playing to packed houses in San Francisco, Atlanta and Houston before making their off-Broadway debut in 1982. In 1990, then-President Bush invited the duo to perform at the White House.

The show's success eventually led to "A Tuna Christmas," for which Sears received a 1995 Tony Award nomination for best actor in a play.

Nowadays, the Tuna plays bring in about $5 million in annual gross sales, and Sears and Williams, both of whom still live in Austin, write by fax.

Army bankrolls UT efforts to develop electric weapons

By Dick Stanley
Associated Press

AUSTIN — In the early 21st century, electricity won't just run the television, computer and hair dryer.

It will form shields like those on "Star Trek" around ground combat vehicles, power high-technology guns and run super-quiet engines.

"They'll run over you before you hear them coming," University of Texas physicist Harry Fair said.

It's not science fiction but Army research, some of it secret and all of it maturing at UT's 8-year-old Institute for Advanced Technology, which Fair directs.

UT won the institute — which the Army finances for $10 million a year — in a late 1980s competition with the University of California and the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico.

UT won because it had been doing groundbreaking engineering research for more than a decade on a prime international military interest: revolutionary electric guns and the advanced electric generators to power them.

The weapons, which were first developed in the Star Wars missile defense program, also are being researched by the European and Russian militaries.

They are being considered for arming all-electric combat vehicles, to defend against aircraft and missiles, for artillery with the unprecedented range of 155 miles (almost 20 times that of conventional artillery) and to supplement cruise missiles.

The UT institute is near the J.J. Pickle Research Campus in North Austin, but its lab is miles away, northwest of the city in a former furniture factory in Leander.

AP Photo

Engineers in the Institute for Advanced Technology at the University of Texas in Austin are working on a prototype electric gun being developed for the Army. Dr. Jerald Parker, technical director of Advanced Launchers, peers through the jagged hole in a half-inch-thick steel plate which was penetrated by a plastic projectile identical to one held at left in photo. The plastic projectile was fired from the electric gun during one of the gun's many tests on.

In the lab's main room last week, Fair, 61, explained the unclassified workings of what looked like a black bridge beam. A test model of an electric gun, the 21-foot-long beam is the centerpiece of UT research into the guns, generators and highly classified electric armor, which could make the "raise the shields" command used on the starship Enterprise a reality.

Behind the test gun were floor-to-ceiling electric generators that UT's Center for Electromechanics, in cooperative research, is working to reduce to the size of a garbage can.

The smaller generator, dubbed a compulsator, also would be a battery, with an internal flywheel to store the electricity it produced for running electric engines as well as powering the guns and electric armor.

Both the room-size and small generators can deliver 900 million watts — roughly the daily electric power consumption of Travis County — in pulses lasting a tenth of a second.

The pulses would fling 12-inch-long, thin tungsten darts from the copper rails of an electric gun at velocities of almost two miles a second — three times the speed of a deer rifle's bullet and almost twice as fast as the explosive shells of the Army's front-line battle tank, the M-1 Abrams.

X-ray studies of the nonexplosive darts show that, at electric gun velocities, they strike steel with a flash of light and penetrate more than 6 inches before being vaporized by the energy created by the impact.

The darts could shred enemy tanks and troop carriers, disabling them and killing the troops inside. "The idea is for (the enemy) to run out of armor before you run out of projectiles," said Don Berry, an institute researcher.

Although electric guns are being tested in cannon and machine gun forms, none yet approaches the people-sized one that Arnold Schwarzenegger carried in the 1996 movie "Eraser".

Fair, who is acting as a host to a growing number of visiting Army generals, expects the military's logistics branches to become the biggest backers of a conversion to electric guns. Unlike conventional ammunition, the nonexplosive darts aren't dangerous to store or transport.

UT researchers are far less open about electric armor, which is being researched by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as well as the Army and Marine Corps.

The technology, according to military journals such as International Defence Review, uses electric generators to form strong electromagnetic fields inside steel boxes. Attached to the exteriors of combat vehicles, the boxes slow down a missile or another weapon long enough for the electric fields inside to deflect them.

NASA is considering using electric armor to shield the new International Space Station from potentially dangerous collisions with space debris.

"You can provide extraordinary protection electrically," Fair said.

13-year-old detained in 8-year-old's shooting death

AUSTIN (AP) — A 13-year-old boy who reportedly purchased a handgun for $25 was ordered to remain in custody Monday in the shooting death of an 8-year-old companion.

Neighbors told police that the 13-year-old claimed to have purchased a .32-caliber handgun on Friday.

Police said the gun was used Saturday to shoot Bobby Joe Salazar, the grandson of the 13-year-old's aunt and uncle.

The boys were well acquainted and got along, according to Gloria Rodriguez, Salazar's aunt. She said she believed the shooting was an accident.

Homicide Detective Manuel Fuentes on Monday said the two boys were in a shed behind the 13-year-old's grandparents' home when Salazar was shot. He ran toward the home but collapsed and died from a gunshot wound to the neck.

Fuentes said the 13-year-old initially told police that a black youth jumped a fence into his grandparents' backyard and shot Salazar. He later admitted to the shooting, Fuentes said.

The bullet that killed Salazar also passed through his right wrist and hand, indicating a defensive posture, Fuentes added.

But the 13-year-old's public defender, Ruben Castaneda, said the younger boy simply could have been holding up his hand when accidentally shot.

"I believe what we have here is an accident," Castaneda said. "I don't believe warehousing (my client) is to anybody's advantage."

Gregory Salazar, Salazar's father, told State District Judge Jeanne Meurer he was torn about whether the suspect should remain in juvenile detention.

"He is well-known to the family. But I want justice to be done," Salazar's father said.

According to neighbors, the 13-year-old said he needed the gun for protection but did not indicate from what.

Officials at the junior high school at which the 13-year-old was enrolled said he had been disciplined at least twice for gang-related activity. He also had been disciplined for fighting and other misbehavior.

"What troubles me is if a 13-year-old thinks he needs a gun for protection," Castaneda said, adding that he could not confirm why or if the boy purchased the gun.

Judge Meurer said the boy will remain in youth detention for at least two weeks. She also ordered a hearing to determine whether he should get grief counseling.

Assistant Travis County District Attorney Stephanie Emmons said the 13-year-old could also face a felony charge of reckless endangerment to a child.

The boy could be sentenced to as much as 20 years in state custody for the felony manslaughter charge.

If convicted of reckless endangerment, he could get an indeterminate sentence under which he could be held in state custody for a longer, unspecified time.

You don't need to be a mathematical whiz to play bridge. It is all very well to be able to calculate exactly the odds of one line over another, but by and large a few generalities will suffice. The key to many hands is a basic knowledge that the missing cards in a suit more often than not will break as close to evenly as possible without actually being even. Thus, if you are missing six cards in a suit, they rate to divide 4-2.

The auction looks natural but is not quite. North's diamond bid did not necessarily promise a suit — it was simply a forcing checkback to allow South to show three-card spade support. When South could not oblige but confirmed sure stoppers in the red suit, North settled for the no-trump game.

West led a low heart, declarer capturing East's jack with the king. Since declarer needed only four spade tricks for the contract, South could afford to surrender a spade. The ten of spades was led and, had West played low, declarer would have followed low from dummy.

This play would succeed against any lie of the cards except a singleton jack in the East hand. When West covered with the jack, declarer won with the table's queen, returned to hand with the king of diamonds and led another spade, finessing the eight when West produced a low spade. This guaranteed four spade tricks, and nine tricks in all, no matter how the spades were divided. Note that cashing spades from the top, while yielding four tricks most of the time and producing five on 36 percent of the hands, would have resulted in only three tricks and almost certainly would have cost the contract.

'Mrs. Brown' star says she'll let her acting do the talking from now on LONDON — Dame Judi Dench is going to let her acting do the talking from now on.

The Oscar-nominated star of "Mrs. Brown" used the occasion of an interview in this week's Radio Times magazine to announce it would be her last.

It was better when people didn't know as much about actors, Dench says.

"It was better in the old days when the public didn't know so much about actors," said Dench, 63.

"One journalist said anyone in the public eye is not entitled to a private life and I couldn't disagree more," she said. "We are more entitled to a private life, so I'm battening down."

Dench lost the Academy Award last month to Helen Hunt.

NEW YORK — Lollapalooza is taking the summer off.

Promoters couldn't sign a headline act, so the traveling rock festival that began in 1991 will not roll this year.

"We ran out of time," Ted Gardner, co-owner of Lollapalooza, said in Monday's USA Today.

Marilyn Manson, Green Day, Garbage, Nine Inch Nails and Jane's Addiction all rejected offers to headline.

Lollapalooza had a lackluster year last summer, overshadowed by the women-only Lilith Fair and hurt by the marketplace fade of alternative rock, the music style it favored.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Amy Grant has few doubts about her prowess on the guitar.

"I'm kind of a mediocre guitar player," she said in Monday's Oakland Tribune. "But sometimes the earnestness of a so-so guitar player doing their best sounds better than a fantastic guitar player being sloppy."

The 38-year-old Grammy winner says her kids don't seem to mind.

"I rediscovered my love for playing guitar ... playing all the time, for my kids, in the living room ... just like when I first began to perform," she said while prepping for an Oakland concert.

Her latest album is "Behind the Eyes."

NEW YORK — It shouldn't be too surprising that Jerry Seinfeld is ending his show after this, the ninth season.

Nine is his favorite number.

"People said, '10, why not 10?'" Seinfeld told Vanity Fair. "But 10 is lame. Nine is my number. And then I found out that nine in numerology means completion."

Seinfeld plans a long rest after the summer, when he tapes an HBO special that will mark the end of his standup act. A talk show may be in his future — and he may even write ads like his "Superman" commercials for American Express.

"In a 12-month period, I'll have ended a four-year relationship (with girlfriend Shoshanna Lonstein), ended the show, and retired my act," he said. "I've basically stripped myself of everything that ever meant anything to me."

NEW YORK — Argentina shouldn't look for Meredith Brooks anytime soon.

The singer said in Monday's USA Today that she was pelted with everything from rocks to tampons for 45 minutes when she opened for the Rolling Stones on March 29 before 70,000 people in Buenos Aires.

Brooks ends stint on Stones tour after being pelted by rocks, tampons in Venezuela.

"At one point, a big dirt clod hit my guitar and exploded and went into my left eye. It got black and blue and swollen. I think I went into shock, but I come from the school of 'the show must go on.' I finished my set and then totally broke down."

The crowd was apparently antsy to hear the Stones, Brooks said. Subsequent public outrage persuaded her to try the next night. She put on an Argentine soccer jersey and returned to the stage, only to be assaulted again. After singing her hit, "Bitch," she threw the shirt on the ground and walked away.

Sobbing, she told Mick Jagger she was leaving the tour.

"Mick put his arms around me and said, 'I'm so sorry.'"

———

NEW YORK — At eight months pregnant, Lisa Rinna is more than comfortable with her body.

"I feel sexier pregnant than I've ever felt before," the thirtysomething "Melrose Place" actress told Fit Pregnancy magazine. "There's something about it that has given me a feeling of confidence."

Once a five-day-a-week fitness fanatic, she focuses on calming exercises as she and hubby Harry Hamlin await the birth.

She admits to some pregnancy cravings. "Rice, beans, chicken in a burrito are heaven to me now."

The chase is on

Travis McOsker is trailed by his pet calf "Hope" as he rides his bicycle on his family's ranch near Lytle on Monday. The heifer calf was a twin abandoned by its mother, so the family is hand feeding it. In order to get away after feeding Travis takes off on his bike.

Lawmaker proposes using death penalty for children as young as 11

AUSTIN (AP) — Children as young as 11 could be sentenced to death for capital murder under a proposal by a state lawmaker whose own son is just that age.

"I hope my child is a Beaver Cleaver. ... I think there are 11-year-olds out there that would be capable of premeditated murder," said Rep. Jim Pitts, R-Waxahachie, pointing to the recent school yard shootings in Arkansas.

Pitts outlined his proposals to increase penalties available against juveniles who commit violent crimes Monday, the same day death-penalty opponents including Amnesty International USA announced new efforts to restrict Texas executions.

"This idea of killing 11-year-olds, or having them charged as adults, does not answer a principal issue in this society: How do we get the best out of our human resources? It certainly won't be to kill the young," said Samuel Jordan, director of the Program to Abolish the Death Penalty of Amnesty International USA.

"I don't think it has a great deal of chances for success if the people of Texas urge their representatives to enact laws that have morality," he added.

Pitts, who plans to introduce the juvenile crime package when lawmakers meets in regular session in January, said his proposals would give greater leeway to local district attorneys and courts.

"I am not saying that every 11-year-old who commits a crime should be tried as an adult. I want to give an option to a district attorney, if they feel like they have enough evidence and the right kid, they ought to be able to have the option to try this kid as an adult," Pitts said.

His proposals include lowering from 17 to 11 the age at which a youngster is eligible to be charged with capital murder, and lowering from 14 to 10 the age at which a child can be certified and tried in the adult criminal justice system.

Under the proposal, someone as young as 11 who is convicted of capital murder could face either life without parole or the death penalty. Pitts' aide, Rusty Ballard, said life without parole also would be an option in non-capital murders, rape, robbery and aggravated assault. Capital murders have an enhancing factor, such as being committed during a robbery.

Under current law, a person can be sentenced to death for a crime committed at age 16, but the execution is not carried out until the person is at least 17, said Ron Dusek of the state attorney general's office. Pitts said he'll look at whether there should be such a delay built into his proposal.

"I would think probably, realistically, it would take that long to have their appeal processed," Pitts said.

If approved, the plan likely would take effect with offenses committed after Sept. 1, 1999, Pitts said.

Report: Texas losing top graduate students

AUSTIN (AP) — In the high-stakes competition to attract the country's smartest graduate students, the University of Texas is losing to top public and private schools that offer bigger financial awards and free tuition, according to a newspaper report.

"It's killing us," Larry Gilbert, chairman of UT's zoology department, told the Austin American-Statesman. "The overall deal that graduate students get elsewhere is so much better."

UT science faculty said half to two-thirds of the graduate students they tried to recruit this year turned them down.

Campuswide, nearly 60 percent of the graduate students who were offered premier scholarships went elsewhere, a problem so worrisome that incoming President Larry Faulkner says it is one of his highest priorities.

Faulkner, who takes office April 13, said the issue goes beyond compensating graduate students.

"I see UT as having major problems with compensation for staff, faculty and (graduate) students," he said. "I think this will be the most important issue I will be addressing in the early stages of my tenure."

Although graduate students get little public notice, a research university can't function without them. They help teach undergraduates, grade papers, proctor exams, do research and lure bright faculty. The better they are, the better the school, faculty and deans said.

"You can't have a flagship without good graduate students," said Teresa Sullivan, vice president and dean of graduate studies. "Without good graduate students you don't have good research and you don't have a good faculty."

Until 1995, about 60 percent of the top graduate students who were offered premier UT scholarships, or fellowships, enrolled, said John Dollard, associate dean of graduate studies.

That dropped to 50 percent in 1995 and 1996 and then plunged to 41 percent this school year — UT's worst.

Just 67 of 162 accepted those fellowships last fall, the American-Statesman found.

UT still attracts many high-caliber graduate students, Sullivan said, but she and others said the typical UT graduate student is finding it increasingly difficult to cover the minimum $2,460 in-state tuition and fees while buying groceries and paying rent on the salaries they earn as teaching assistants, research assistants and assistant instructors.

Those salaries vary, from $7,350 to $13,750 for TAs, for example, to $9,000 to $16,000 for graduate research assistants, said Erika Allen, a graduate research assistant in the graduate studies office.

Austin Gleeson, longtime UT physics department chairman, said competing schools pay $1,000 to $1,500 more and waive tuition to boot.

UT plans to offer some bigger packages in the fall, boost salaries and provide a few hundred extra dollars toward tuition for some students. But those steps won't solve the problem long term, UT officials said.

An option is to ask donors to endow more fellowships and see if the Legislature will provide the money to waive tuition, Faulkner and others said.

DEAR ABBY

Minister's wrath rains down on collecting ceremony fees

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have just read with disgust a letter in your column from a clergyperson giving a specific time when the clergy should be paid for performing a marriage. The writer is concerned that if payment is not made preceding the ceremony, he/she will have to ask for payment at a later time.

Van Buren

Ministers in most churches receive a salary that should include the performance of any service done in the church. I cannot help but wonder what the tab would be for a baptism or a funeral. In my denomination, services such as those are considered sacraments of the church. To even think of charging for any of them is nothing short of blasphemy.

Certainly, I have received gifts from brides and grooms for performing their wedding ceremony, but to expect or to ask for payment is simply not acceptable. It is crassness such as this that gives the church and its ministers much bad press.

Do you suppose that this person sends statements proclaiming "service rendered" that carry a monthly service charge if not paid promptly?

Hopefully, this individual will remember that the role of a minister is primarily that of a servant. — THE REV. RALPH O. MARSH, ATHENS, GA.

DEAR REV. MARSH: Perhaps you are judging this clergyperson a bit too harshly. A survey of churches in the Los Angeles area reveals that some churches charge a "usage fee" for the church building (and minister), while others charge non-members to perform marriage ceremonies, but waive the fee for members.

Now that people know your policy, I predict your membership will increase by leaps and bounds.

DEAR ABBY: When I fell in love with Rodney, he was a single parent with a 4-year-old son called "Junie," for Junior. Rodney's wife had died before Junie was a year old. When I came on the scene, Junie started calling me "Mama" because I was the only mother he had ever known.

Now, after 10 years of marriage, some of Rodney's relatives still refer to Junie and me as "stepmother" and "stepson." That just breaks my heart.

When will I officially be known as "Mom"? — JUNIE'S ONLY MOM

DEAR MOM: To people who think the way Rodney's relatives do, probably never. You can't change them, but you can change the way you react to them. When you are referred to as "stepmother," you might remind them that, although you may not be his biological mom, you are the only mother Junie has known. Then bask in the knowledge that you are truly Junie's mom, regardless of what anyone calls you.

DEAR ABBY: This is my "how we met" story:

In 1948, two friends stopped by my home and told me they were going to a dance in Brooklyn. Since I lived in New Jersey, I told them I didn't want to go. I had no car, so I didn't want to get involved with a girl so far away. Well, they would not take "no" for an answer. Since they had a car, I gave in and decided to go.

At the dance, I saw a very tall and attractive girl across the room. I walked over to ask her to dance, but another guy beat me to it. So instead of going back to where I had been, I asked the girl who had been sitting next to her for a dance.

To make a long story short, last month we celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary. — STILL DANCING IN BERGENFIELD, N.J.

DEAR STILL DANCING: Congratulations on your golden anniversary. All married couples should be so lucky.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: Easter will soon be here, and although I've cautioned you before, I must caution you again: If you plan to surprise a child with a live rabbit, baby duck or chick, please consider that living creatures need proper care. Unless you are absolutely certain that the little creature will receive the care it needs to survive, please give a stuffed bird or animal instead. Regardless of how cute baby animals are, they should not be given to children on impulse.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Officials kick off public health tour

LUBBOCK (AP) — As he helped kick off a series of events commemorating 170 years of public health in Texas, state health commissioner William R. Archer III said Monday his agency needs more funding flexibility to protect future generations.

In the first of 30 observances scheduled statewide this week, health commissioner Archer joined area dignitaries to promote the importance of public health programs in Texas.

In honoring the past, Archer also looked to the future.

"We do need flexibility in the budget to find dollars to protect the health of every single Texan," said Archer, who said most of the agency's $6.5 billion budget — which is largely federally funded — is tied to specific programs, such as Medicaid.

"Only $300 million is going to public health (programs)," Archer said.

Archer and his predecessor, Texas Tech Health Sciences Center president David R. Smith, emphasized that the term "public health" refers to more than medical care for needy Texans.

Smith credited public health programs for food and water safety, emergency services and even the inspections performed on mattresses and pillows.

Archer, whose great-great uncle died of yellow fever while working as New York City's first coroner in the early 1800's, said it's up to government health officials to lead the fight against similar epidemiological threats.

In addition to relatively recent outbreaks of hantavirus, dengue fever and group-A streptococcus, Archer said officials are still vigilant about traditional contagions, including a highly drug-resistant strain of tuberculosis that is cropping up.

United meet Prez

WASHINGTON — Here's another sign Major League Soccer has arrived: The league's two-time champions, D.C. United, finally got their White House tour Monday.

"You bailed me out," United coach Bruce Arena told President Clinton in a Rose Garden ceremony. "In '96, I promised the White House. In '97, I did. And now it's really in '98 and we hope we can come back again."

Some United players felt snubbed when they didn't get an invitation from Clinton after winning the inaugural MLS Cup in 1996 — especially after he welcomed the then-NHL champion Colorado Avalanche, a team transplanted from Canada a year earlier. United repeated as champions last October with a 2-1 victory over the Colorado Rapids at RFK Stadium, and this time the lobbying effort paid off.

"It was great," said midfielder and former team captain John Harkes, who had been one of the most vocal in appealing for a White House trip. "It's an honor to be here with the president, and it just shows how far soccer has come in the last few years."

Clinton praised D.C. United and Major League Soccer for "making soccer more popular in the United States, especially among young people." He added that his daughter, Chelsea, "taught me all I know about soccer."

Wizards accused

WASHINGTON — Washington Wizards forwards Juwan Howard and Chris Webber are being investigated for an alleged sexual assault against a woman during a party at Howard's suburban Maryland home, authorities said Monday.

Investigators at the Montgomery County police department searched the homes of the two teammates after a woman detailed the allegations in a call to authorities early Monday, police spokesman George Luddington said. No charges were filed.

Police also are interviewing people at the party who may have witnessed the alleged incident.

Billy Martin, an attorney for Howard, said on WTTG-TV in Washington no warrants were pending for his client. Howard described the allegation as "a big distraction" and told the station "I'm speechless about it."

Following a Monday morning practice, Webber told WUSA-TV in Washington that "no police have contacted me."

MC foreigners at home

■ Ferrie paces Chaps to huge lead at Green Tree with even par score in bad conditions.

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

It was no secret that the Midland College golf team would have the home course advantage at this week's Omega Treating Chemicals College Invitational.

However when Monday's winds clobbered Green Tree Country Club, it was a group of Chaps most foreign to West Texas who truly felt at home. The European trio of Kenneth Ferrie, Mark Loftus and Fraser McLaughlan paced the Chaps to a remarkable 24-stroke lead over the field after the tournament's first day.

It was a day when the winds howled through the Permian Basin at 35-40 mph, and at times peaked around 52 mph. It was a day, they are all too familiar with.

"(Playing in the wind) is a lot easier (for us)," said McLaughlan, a native of Glasgow, Scotland. "Because some of the (American) players are not used to it, and it makes for difficult scores.

"Nine times out of 10 when the winds blow, the quality comes to the top of the field," McLaughlan added. "You never get a bad player in the top 10 when the wind blows. You have to play too many shots."

Midland College leads New Mexico JC, which shot a 604 over the two rounds. Weatherford College (611), Temple College (616) and Paris JC (621) round out the top five. Western Texas is sixth at 625. Midland College No. 2 is 10th, while the Odessa College teams placed 11th and 14th.

Much of the quality in this field was wearing Green and Gold. Five of the top 10 scores for the 36 holes came from MC. Ferrie blistered the field with a morning round of 68 and an afternoon round of 74 to grab the medalist lead.

Mark Loftus carded back-to-back 74s to claim the fifth spot. McLaughlin fired a pair of 75s while former Midland High star Josh Jacobs hit 150 via a different route. He shot a 71 in the morning and 79 in the afternoon.

Even a golfer on the No. 2 team, Nathan Goulding, was on his game, recording a 147 over the two rounds for fourth place overall.

"We performed exceptional under the adverse conditions," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss, who has coached the Chaps to two national titles.

"To play in a gale and shoot the scores they did in the second round was an outstanding feat. That is one of the best performances we have had in a long time. We have six outstanding players, and that showed in the team scores."

Monday, it all started with Ferrie, who is well on his way to collecting his second individual title as a Chap. The freshman from Ashington, England, rolled in four birdies and one bogey during a round he described as "a good score but nothing brilliant."

However, when all the scores were tal-

The wind howled at Ranchland Hills Country Club Monday, but the Midland Lee girls golf team was also howling after the third round of the District 4-5A golf tour.

Lee fired a 354 team score under miserable, gusty conditions to take a huge 29-stroke lead over the field. The Lady Rebels started the day with an 11-stroke margin over Odessa Permian and now only need to protect their massive margin next week at Odessa Country Club in the tour's last stop.

"We played really well, considering the conditions we had out here today," said Lee golf coach Phyllis Sutton. "This is a nice feeling to have to be up by 29 strokes. It's a sigh of relief, but we don't need to sigh too much."

The top two teams advance to the Region I tournament later this month and Permian, like Lee, is almost in the Region I house. Permian owns a 25-stroke lead over Midland High for the second playoff berth.

"We're still in second and I think that will get us to the regional tournament," said Permian coach Steve Chandler. "We're 29 shots behind Lee and that seems like an insurmountable margin, but you never know. We'll be on our home course next week."

For MHS golf coach Bernie Hagins, he may have seen the last chance for his Lady Bulldogs to make a run at a region berth.

"We're 25 strokes o ıt of second place and I don't think we can catch Permian in one round," Hagins said. "We needed to have a really big day here to stay in the race and we didn't pick up ground."

Lee, too, owns the medalist leader after three rounds, but that race is close enough to keep things interesting in Odessa next Wednesday. Again the medalist race, like the team race, now appears to be between Lee's Krystal Mehaffey and Permian's Jodie Duff. Mehaffey owns a four-stroke lead (247-251) over Duff.

Mehaffey had the best round of the day

■ District 4-5A Girls Golf

Monday with an 84 while Duff posted an 87.

"I was leading by only one stroke and now I'm leading by four," Mehaffey said. "That makes me feel a little better. It's not a big cushion, but I like the (OCC) course a lot and have played on it quite a bit.

"Still, I know that the scores were high here (RHCC) today, but I wasn't very satisfied with my game. The wind didn't really bother me that much, but I had a triple bogey on No. 14 with four putts."

Duff said, "I regressed today since I came in down one stroke, but about everyone did bad. The wind was very tough and that was the reason that everyone did so bad."

Mehaffey expects a challenge from Duff in the last round.

"Jodie told me after today's round that she would be waiting for me to arrive in Odessa. I'm sure she will come after me."

San Angelo Central's Liz Wardlaw is in third place in the medalist race at 254, seven strokes out of the lead, but her chances for the medalist title were hurt with a 90 Monday. Still, she has an excellent chance of earning a region medalist berth with a change in the UIL ruling this year.

Now, the top two medalists not on a region qualifying team can make the cut if they finish in the top six in the district. Wardlaw fits here since Mehaffey and Duff should both be on qualifying teams.

That also keeps Abilene High's Devon Day (264, fourth place) and Midland High's Julie Jacobs (267, sixth place) in contention.

"The new rule is in the back of my mind, but I want to win on my own merits," Wardlaw said. "I just didn't play well at all, with a quad on the next to last hole and I started with two doubles.

"The new rule is helping out, but I just try not to worry about what everyone else is doing and, hopefully, I'll play like I can."

Lee's Amy Roach stands in fifth place at 265 and Amber Myers moved into the Top 10 with a 272. Myers and teammate

Majerus, Bender at head of short Texas coach wish list

By Chip Brown
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Utah's Rick Majerus and Washington's Bob Bender are heading a short list of coaches being considered by the University of Texas to replace Tom Penders, according to a high-ranking university source.

Majerus has said that he's happy at Utah after leading the Utes to the national championship game. But he has yet to take himself out of the running for the Texas job as he did last week with Arizona State, which reportedly offered him just over $1 million per year.

Majerus, 50, was believed to be somewhat of a longshot for Texas because school officials are unwilling to pay the Longhorns basketball coach more than the $750,000 that football coach Mack Brown makes. Bender's stock is high among Texas officials, and he would not be considered a consolation prize if the search committee couldn't agree to terms with Majerus, the source said Monday.

"The committee is very excited about Bob Bender," the source said.

Bender, 40, who said that he expected to meet with the committee as early as Tuesday, told The News Tribune of Tacoma that the Texas job "is something that I want to look into.

"They've had success. Tom Penders has done a great job there, the kind of success that gets your attention," Bender said.

"I think it's worth it when you look at what Texas can be and what Tom made it. But that's not to say it's going to be better than where we're at with our program."

Bender was an assistant coach at Duke under coach Mike Krzyzewski from 1983 to 1989 before becoming head coach at Illinois State.

Bender's overall record in four years at Illinois State and in five years at Washington is 128-129, including 68-72 as coach of the Huskies. But he turned both programs around.

At Washington, his record has improved each year — 5-22 in 1994; 10-17 in 1995; 16-12 in 1996; 17-11 in 1997 and 20-10 this year.

His Huskies have been to the postseason three straight years, including two NIT berths in 1996 and 1997, and this year knocked off Xavier and Richmond in the NCAA tournament before losing on a buzzer beater to Connecticut in the round of 16.

The earliest Texas can name a coach is late Tuesday afternoon because of job posting laws. UT officials hope to wrap up the search quickly because the national spring signing period begins Wednesday.

Penders, the winningest coach in Longhorns history, resigned last week after a month of controversy in his program that began when four young players went to Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds to complain about the coach. Two of those players, Luke Axtell and Gabe Muoneke, said earlier that they intended to transfer.

"A lot of people sent e-mail and told me to leave, that I was a baby for wanting to go," Muoneke said. "Well, I'm going to stay, just for all those people who wanted me to leave. I'm staying."

Axtell reportedly has been in contact with Kansas and Texas Tech about a possible transfer. He didn't return telephone messages left by The Associated Press Monday.

Angels beat Wichita in wild, windy game

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

With the wind as gusty as it was Monday night out at Christensen Stadium, you could almost sense a feeling it was going to be one of those nights when a simple pop-up would turn into a home run.

The 1,871 fans who braved the mighty West Texas wind not only got to see 23 runs scored and 24 hits between the Midland Angels and the Wichita Wranglers, but also saw four ejections on the night.

More importantly for the Angels, with the wind and the ejections out of the way, Midland had a 14-9 win in the game and 4-1 series win over the Wranglers. That sets up tonight's battle with the El Paso Diablos for early possession of first place in the Texas League West.

"It's a team that we want to play well against," said Angels manager Don Long about the

Central boys hold big lead in 4-5A

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — San Angelo Central looks to own a hammerlock on the 1998 District 4-5A boys golf championship, but the Bobcats have no idea who will be their traveling partner to the Region I tournament in Lubbock later this month.

The top two teams from each district earn Region I berths, but only 12 strokes separates the next six teams behind Central after play Monday at the Bentwood Country Club.

The Bobcats, firing a 311 round Monday on its home course, own a 20-stroke lead over Abilene Cooper, but the Cougars are in second place by a mere two strokes over Midland Lee. The Rebels fired a 323 round, making up six strokes on the Cougars.

However, Lee can't just look at Cooper. Abilene High is only three strokes behind Lee and five behind Cooper at 967. Odessa Permian is eight back of the Rebels and 10 behind Cooper, Midland High is nine back of Lee and 11 strokes off the Cooper pace. And even Lee's No. 2 team is only 12 strokes behind Cooper.

A 12-stroke swing isn't a great dream in team golf, so the last round Monday in Abilene should produce some fireworks.

Central is also riding high in the medalist competition. J.C. Ramirez took over the medalist lead Monday after a 1-under par round of 71 for a three-round total of 225. Previous leader Clint Wellhausen of Cooper fell to a 77 and now trails Ramirez by four strokes.

Lee's Justin Smith, a player on the No. 2 team, is a surprise face in the Top 10 circles. Smith owns a three-round 237 and is in a three-way tie for fourth place at 237.

Midland High's Jason Lindgren stands in seventh place at 239. Lee's Jared Cooper and Midland High's Zack Cauthen are tied for eighth place at 240.

Since the top two medalists not on a qualifying team also earn Region I advancement, the locals will need to jockey into position to earn one of those berths on the final round.

However, Chance Finley led the Lee charge Monday with a 77 while Daniel Pender produced a 79. Those were the only two golfers to break 80 for the Rebels. C.W. Porter, a member of MHS' No. 2 team, was the only Bulldog to crack 80 with a 79.

Monday's third round District 4-5A boys golf results from Bentwood Country Club in San Angelo.

Local Softball Today

San Angelo Central vs. Midland High

Where: MUGS Field in Ulmer Park.

When: 4:30 p.m.

Records: Midland High is 16-8 overall and 7-2 in District 4-5A while San Angelo is 13-9 and 5-3.

4-5A Significance: A victory by MHS would ensure that the Lady Bulldogs return to the state softball playoffs in 1998 after a one-year absence. A win by MHS will leave the Lady Bulldogs with no worse than a district playoff berth. Central needs a win desperately to stay in the thick of the playoff hunt. If the Lady Bobcats win, they will be only one-half game behind MHS with three games left to play. MHS will have only two district games left after today.

Notes: Central rallied in the bottom of the seventh inning with two runs to defeat MHS 6-5 in the first half. MHS had rallied for four runs in the top of the seventh to take a 5-4 lead. The Lady Bulldogs made four errors in that game that accounted for four unearned runs... Both teams are coming off of victories. The Lady Bulldogs defeated league leading Abilene High in eight innings Saturday while San Angelo won 5-3 over Odessa Permian... Central is the only team in the district MHS has not defeated this year.

Next: MHS will host Abilene Cooper at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at the MUGS Field. That game was switched to Thursday instead of Saturday so the teams could take advantage of the Easter school break. Central will play Odessa High, but it isn't known if that game will be on Thursday or Saturday.

Local Baseball Today

Midland Lee vs. San Angelo Central

When: 4:30 p.m.

Where: Lee's Ernie Johnson Field.

Records: Lee is 14-6 overall and 1-4 in District 4-5A; Central is 9-8 and 3-2.

Coaches: Lee — Jesse Benavidez; Central — Ted Leps.

Last Action: Lee lost to Odessa Permian 10-9 in a district game Saturday.

Notes: The season has now officially reached the red alert stage for the Rebels, who have dropped four straight district games. They find themselves in their current predicament largely because they haven't been able to hold leads in their last two games. Lee blew a six-run lead against Abilene High a week ago, then Saturday against Permian, gave up two runs in the bottom of the seventh to lose. While the Rebels have hit the ball effectively, scoring at least six runs in each of their five district games, their pitching has obviously let them down. In their four losses, the Rebels have given up an average of 11 runs a game. Aaron Erdwurm, the team's No. 1 starting pitcher, went the whole way against Permian, and while he gave up 13 hits, he wasn't helped by five errors which led to five unearned runs... Lee might want to flash back to last season today, when it needed to beat Central at home in the regular season finale to make the playoffs, and pulled out an 8-1 victory.

Next Action: Lee will host cross-town rival Midland High Thursday at 4:30 p.m. in a crucial game which opens the second half of the district schedule.

Midland High at Lubbock High

When: 5 p.m.

Where: At Lubbock High.

Records: Midland High is 14-8; Lubbock High is 10-10.

Coaches: Midland High — Barry Russell; Lubbock High — Jimmy Webster.

Last Action: Midland High closed out the first half of its District 4-5A schedule by defeating Odessa High 5-3 Saturday.

Notes: After getting themselves in comfortable playoff contention by finishing the first half of district play 4-2, the Bulldogs are playing what amounts to a tune-up game for the second half of district. Junior right-hander Jeff Beard will get the starting call for MHS today, and it appears possible that some players from the junior varsity could also see mound time as well. Lubbock High currently sits at fifth in competitive District 3-5A, so it's unlikely that if the Bulldogs make the playoffs that they will see the Westerners.

Next Action: Midland High goes across town Thursday to face Midland Lee and open the second half of district play at 4:30 p.m.

Top Houston hoops recruit gets release

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston basketball recruit Don Emanuel has asked for and received an unconditional release from his scholarship agreement, KRIV-TV of Houston reported Monday night.

Emanuel, who averaged 16 points and 11 rebounds for Houston Jones last season, said UH athletic director Chet Gladchuck gave him the release.

"I asked him could I get an unconditional release from the university and he told me that he would give it to me," Emanuel said.

"The national letter of intent says that you sign with a school, not the coach, which I understand, but the coach is a big part of you coming to the school."

Emanuel was recruited by former Houston coach Alvin Brooks, released after the end of last season and replaced by Houston Rockets star Clyde Drexler.

Tech's Thompson goes to WNBA

NEW YORK — Former Texas Tech University All-American forward Alicia Thompson signed a contract to play in the Women's National Basketball Association, the league said.

The WNBA also signed University of Utah guards Julie Krommenhoek and Alli Bills, DePaul University forward Mfon Udoka, University of Iowa guard Nadine Domond and University of Maryland guard Sonia Chase. All six players are eligible to be selected by during the WNBA draft on April 29.

Thompson, 21, won this year's Big 12 Player of the Year Award after averaging 23.2 points and 8.9 rebounds a game. A Big 12 First Team All-Star for the past two years, Thompson, who attended Reagan County High, is the second-leading scorer and rebounder in Texas Tech history with 2,156 points and 953 rebounds.

Krommenhoek and Bills, both 22, were members of the Western Athletic Conference All-Star Team. Krommenhoek, who led Utah with 20.2 points a game this season, holds the conference's career scoring record with 2,087 points.

Udoka, 21, was DePaul's leading scorer this season with 20.1 points a game and averaged a Conference USA-best 11.7 rebounds.

Portland's defense stifles Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs, the NBA's best defensive team, were beaten at their own game Monday night.

Portland held San Antonio to 36 percent shooting and Rasheed Wallace scored 28 points as the Trail Blazers beat the Spurs 79-75. Wallace hit 10-of-12 shots in that first half, ended up 13-of-21 from the field, while his free throws put the Blazers ahead 78-75 with 1:02 left.

After Jaren Jackson and Vinny Del Negro missed 3-pointers that would have tied the game, Damon Stoudamire hit one free throw with 5.5 seconds left to clinch the win.

"I feel we're one of the few teams in the league that can match up with San Antonio," said Stoudamire, whose 15 assists were one more than the Spurs had as a team. "We were able to make their big men work hard for their buckets. The key is not let everybody else go off. We were able to contain Vinny (Del Negro) and Will (Perdue)."

The Blazers (42-33) moved three games ahead of Minnesota for sixth place in the Western Conference. San Antonio (52-24) was only two games ahead of Phoenix for fourth place and the home-court advantage in the first round of the playoffs heading into the Suns' game at Seattle on Monday night.

The Spurs' next three games are against Western pacesetters Utah, Seattle and the Los Angeles Lakers. San Antonio, which had won five in a row, is 1-6 against those teams.

The Blazers set the tone early, building a 15-point lead in the second quarter and shooting 63.2 percent in the first half against a team that leads the NBA in field goal defense (40.5) and scoring defense (88.5).

"Defense is our staple and this is the second game in a row we've started slow and let a team get up 12 to 14 points on us," Spurs center David Robinson said.

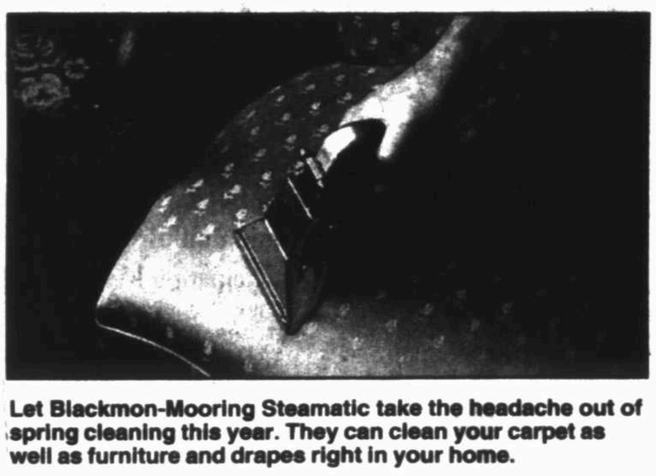
Turn your spring cleaning over to Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic

How much dust has collected in your carpet, furniture and drapes since your last spring cleaning? These areas can be real dust traps, says Mike Eaton of Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic.

Having this done is easier than you might think. Mike says his Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic professionals can do all this cleaning right in your home, including the drapes.

Their specialized carpet cleaning equipment preheats emulsified water to a controlled temperature. The superheated water cuts grease and dirt, putting them into suspension. Then, the powerful vacuum extracts the water and suspended dirt from the carpet. This thorough process leaves no soapy residue to collect more dirt and it allows the carpet to dry in a quick five-to-seven hour time frame. While it's drying, your Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic professional will put protective pads under the legs of furniture, to protect both the furniture and the carpet.



Let Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic take the headache out of spring cleaning this year. They can clean your carpet as well as furniture and drapes right in your home.

The superheated water in their specialized process has been proven to reduce microorganism levels (such as dust mites) in carpet by an average of 92 percent. These "germs" can be a major source of allergy problems.

Do you dread cleaning the drapes because it's such a problem to take them down and put them back up? The down-and-up process can also put great amounts of dust into the air, making it extra dreadful for allergy sufferers. Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic's Lambrite process removes all the hassle (along with the accumulated dust) because it allows the drapes to be cleaned while they're up. This gentle, thorough method removes dust, restoring life to those colors you thought had faded out.

Having your upholstered furniture cleaned can prolong fabric life and give it a fresh, like-new look. Since there are so many kinds of fabrics, your Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic professional will first test a small, hidden swatch of cloth to see if it needs to be dry cleaned or wet cleaned. Dry cleaned furniture is usually ready to be used in a matter of minutes, while wet cleaned items take just three hours to dry. Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic's cleaning method reduces microorganisms on furniture by up to 96 percent, another breath of fresh air for allergy sufferers.

In summary, letting Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic thoroughly clean your carpet, drapes and upholstered furniture can really clear the air at your home this spring. Wouldn't it be great to give all that work to someone else, and know it will be done right? Turn it over to the professionals at Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic this year.

The original Blackmon-Mooring company was founded in 1948, and continues to offer a wide variety of home services. Blackmon-Mooring Steamatic cleans air ducts, carpets and furniture. Other services include restorations from damage caused by fire and water, as well as deodorization. The phone number is 520-8121 or 1-800-949-8121.

Carpet, furniture and drapes can all be cleaned right in your home.

Jib's tender brisket gets Slim n' Earl back together

Slim n' Earl frequented Jib's together for years until Slim was transferred to Houston.

"I don't know why you hate Houston so much, other than its lack of Jib's barbecue," Earl told Slim one Saturday as they enjoyed a lunch of Jib's tender smoked brisket. Slim was making one of his weekend pilgrimages back to Jib's, Texas.

"I understand the TV down there is really good," Earl continued. "Especially that Houston Ship Channel."

"What?"

"Well," Earl hesitated, "isn't that the cable channel that plays reruns of shows like McHale's Navy, The Love Boat and Gilligan's Island?"

Slim finished his bite of potato salad and replied, "No. The ship channel is a waterway where tankers load and unload."

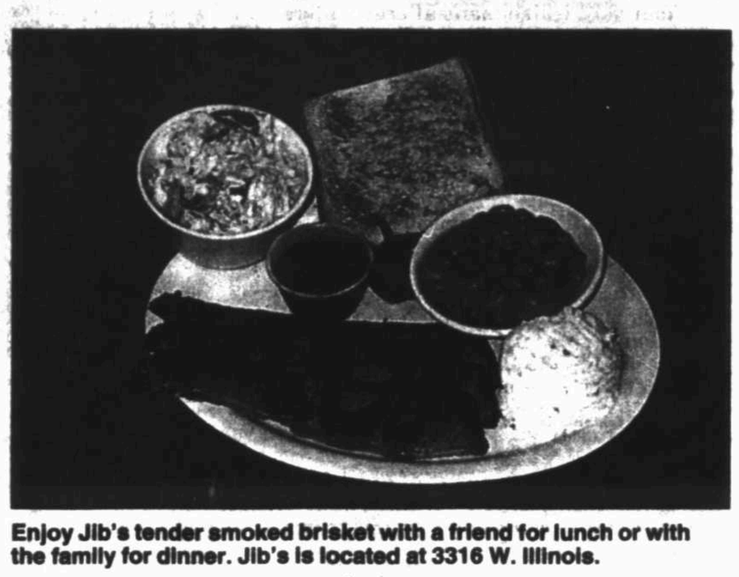
"Oh," said Earl, sheepishly. "At least I know about barbecue."

"Yep, that is the main thing I miss about Midland," said Slim. "I dream about platters of cut-it-with-a-fork, deeply smoked brisket, sided with Jib's veggies like golden French fries, tender pinto beans, yellow corn, crunchy fried okra—and this buttery Texas toast," he finished, taking a big bite out of his toast. "At least I can come here occasionally and get some. I hear now that I may be transferred to Alaska. Then I'll never get to come back to Jib's."

Earl finished the last of his creamy mashed potatoes (his fried broccoli had disappeared long ago, along with his Cole slaw) and said, "I have some money saved up, and I know you do too."

Slim was puzzled. "So I should spend that on airline tickets between here and Fairbanks?"

"No, but I've been thinking. You know, Jib's barbecue always helps me think."



Enjoy Jib's tender smoked brisket with a friend for lunch or with the family for dinner. Jib's is located at 3316 W. Illinois.

"Barbecue as brain food. Interesting concept," Slim mused. "Go on."

"Aw, it's a crazy idea. Can I get you a soft drink refill?"

"In a minute. What's your crazy idea? It can't be any goofier than trying to surprise Effie with a ticket to the tractor pull."

"Okay, here it is: we take our saved-up money and start a business. We could do it here, and you could move back to town, even live in Jib's neighborhood if you want. You could smell their wonderful cooking aromas all day."

"You know," Slim replied slowly, "it must be the Jib's brisket. I'm feeling so good, so full of these mouth-watering flavors, that I actually don't think that's the stupidest idea I've ever heard. As you say, that would get me back to Jib's, Texas. But, what would we do? We can't eat here for a living."

Earl sat up straight. "We could start a new cable channel, and show reruns of McHale's Navy and The Love Boat and The Wackiest Ship in the Army and....."

"I guess there has to be a working brain for there to be brain food."

Located at 3316 W. Illinois, just north of Dunlap's, Jib's features steak fingers, chicken fried steak, chicken strips, deep-fried pork chops, catfish, shrimp, barbecue, smoked sausage, baby-back ribs and more made-from-scratch Texas fare. Their hours are 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and until 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Call ahead for carryout orders at 699-3008.

It's springtime, and your yard can't breathe

"Your yard is like many allergy sufferers in the spring—it can't breathe properly," said Charlie Cook of Precision Landscape Maintenance. Instead of allergies, thatch and compacted soil are what suffocate your yard. These things stifle grass (as well as trees and shrubs) by preventing air, water and nutrients from getting into the soil's root zone.

Soil aeration opens up the thatch and helps prevent compaction. Precision's aeration machine uses cylinder-like spoons to penetrate and shatter the soil. It pulls half-inch plugs from the ground. This opens up the soil, allowing more air, water and nutrients to penetrate the root zone, promoting deeper, healthier roots.

Now through the end of June, you can save 15 percent off the usual price for an aeration-and-fertilizer-application at Precision simply by asking for the special.

Charlie and his associate, David Flores are native Midlanders whose combined landscape experience totals almost 20 years. Charlie, the owner, brings his knowledge to every job. He stated, "We're not happy until you are."

Call Charlie Cook, owner of Precision Landscape Maintenance, now for a free estimate for soil aeration at 694-7758. Other services include mowing, tree trimming/removal and flower beds.

Now the grass can be greener on your side of the fence. David Flores (left) and Charlie Cook, owner of Precision Landscape Maintenance, can use this machine to aerate your yard, helping get air, moisture and nutrients to the grass roots.

Daisy Herb and Flower Farm opens this Friday

The Daisy Herb and Flower Farm opens again this spring, a nursery owned and operated by long-time Midlander Lynda Johnson.

In its fourth year, the small nursery located at Mrs. Johnson's residence in Midland County specializes in quality herbs—culinary, ornamental and medicinal—for the cook or collector.

Other offerings are perennials both old and new and worthy annuals.

Mrs. Johnson has gardens on site where she grows hundreds of plants, for beauty and as trials, as well as for next year's seeds, cuttings and divisions. "I try to grow a plant at least one season before offering it for sale. The unique growing conditions in Midland require a tough plant to make it. But selected carefully, we have many choices."

Brilliant blue queen salvia would brighten any garden. Find these and other varieties at Daisy Herb and Flower Garden on S. CR 1221.

She caters to the experienced gardener, tired of the usual fare, and the serious herb gardener who wants to add to their collection. Her slogan is, "For the experienced gardener—and those who want to be."

She carries over 20 varieties of annual and perennial herbs and a large assortment of scented geraniums.

The Daisy Herb and Flower Farm is open from Easter weekend through fall. Hours are 1-6 p.m., Tues-Sat, or by appointment (call after dark) 694-7042. It is located off I-20 between Midkiff and Loop 250. Turn south on S. Co. Rd. 1221, watch for sign on left.

Save money with Lifetime Siding

Have you recently received an estimate for storm windows or siding that you thought was too high? Do you keep painting and repainting the outside of your home because you think maintenance-free siding is too costly?

One more estimate could change your mind.

Lifetime Siding's low overhead allows owner Neil Letkeman to save customers hundreds of dollars on steel and vinyl siding, soffit and fascia. Lifetime also offers dual glass tilt-in windows with a lifetime warranty, metal carport covers (can be screened in), seamless rain gutters and metal roofing as well as storm doors and windows.

By using screws instead of nails in critical areas, Neil can offer a lifetime warranty on parts and 15 years labor. That means once it's installed, you don't have to worry about it.

From now to the end of April, save an additional 15 percent off Lifetime's already low prices. Begin saving up to 25 percent on energy costs if you have insulation installed behind the siding.

Lifetime Siding has been in the Permian Basin for over 10 years. They specialize in steel and vinyl siding, as well as storm doors and windows, plus patio covers, carports and metal roofs. Call 580-8125 for a free estimate. Financing is available.

Travis Morgan will never again have to paint the exterior of his home on Tanner, as Neil Letkeman (left) and Lifetime Siding install beautiful, maintenance-free siding.

Augusta's a good fit for Woods

By Ron Sirak
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods returned to Augusta National Golf Club the way he left it a year ago — in a class by himself.

■ Masters

For the first three years that Woods came to the Masters, the always-thinking Butch Harmon made certain his star pupil played practice rounds with former champions.

On Monday, Woods returned to Augusta as one of those former champions and fittingly played his practice round alone. It was symbolic of the way Woods finished last year at the Masters — 12 strokes ahead of his nearest competitor.

Woods' victory was a tribute to his ability, but it was also a tribute to Harmon's brilliant game plan. Local knowledge at Augusta is so important, Harmon wanted to make certain Woods had every opportunity to soak up every bit of information possible.

"There is a route around Augusta," three-time winner Nick Faldo said. "You just have to find it and follow it."

In search of that route, Woods played practice rounds with Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Ben Crenshaw, Seve Ballesteros, Jose Maria Olazabal and other Masters champions.

Harmon was the perfect schoolmaster, setting up the curriculum cleverly and selecting the best teachers who shared their insight willingly. And in Woods, he had a pupil whose learning curve is as impressive as his tee shots.

"One of the great things about Tiger is how open he is to information," Harmon said. "He knows that as good as he is, he can't do it on talent alone. He listens and he soaks up information like a sponge."

Faldo said it took him "six or seven Masters" to feel comfortable at Augusta. Woods mastered the layout in one-third that time, shooting a record 18-under-par last year.

There likely is not a better golf course to match Woods' game. Augusta is wide open with no rough, so while his occasional wild tee shots may cost him a bogey, they will not cost him a double bogey or triple bogey like those that did Woods in at the U.S. Open, British Open and PGA Championship last year.

Woods played 10 holes in those three tournaments a total of 24 strokes over par. But he made only seven bogeys all week at Augusta last year and never had a score higher than bogey on any hole.

Watching Woods work his way around Augusta is similar to watching Nicklaus play the course when he was at his peak.

"I felt if I played well, I would really have to have some bad breaks to lose at Augusta," Nicklaus said. "With my length, the hazards weren't there. I hit it over everything, same as he does. I see no reason why he won't do it again."

While Augusta may already feel like home for Woods, there are a number of challengers who will give him a run when the 62nd Masters starts Thursday.

Ernie Els has two firsts, two seconds and two thirds worldwide this year. Justin Leonard was impressive in coming from five strokes back to win The Players Championship.

Lee Westwood, the 24-year-old Englishman who won Sunday in New Orleans, joins Jim Furyk, Phil Mickelson and David Duval in the tier of under-30 players right behind Woods, Els and Leonard. Davis Love III won the last major played — the PGA in August — and will try to become the first player to win consecutive majors since Nick Price took the British Open and PGA in 1994.

In fact, the last 13 major championships — dating back to Price — have been won by 13 different people. One of the people who could break that streak is John Daly, winner of the 1995 British Open and playing the most consistent golf of his troubled career.

Two question marks are Faldo and Greg Norman, who crossed paths here in 1996 when the Englishman overcame a six-stroke deficit to catch the Australian on Sunday. Faldo hasn't been able to putt consistently in nearly two years and Norman, who has played only 17 1/2 competitive rounds this year, is not even arriving at Augusta until Tuesday night.

Loren Roberts Withdraws From Field With Rib Injury

Loren Roberts withdrew from this year's Masters with a broken rib he suffered during a sneezing fit, his agent's office said.

Roberts, 42, qualified for this year's tournament, which begins Thursday at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Georgia, by winning the last year's CVS Charity Classic.

His best finish this year has been a tie for 13th at the season-opening Mercedes Championships. Roberts has two other top-20 finishes in six other starts.

He's won five tournaments on the U.S. tour, all since 1994.

Bagwell powers hot Astros past Rockies

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell hopes the suddenly productive Astros offense doesn't spoil the fans.

Bagwell drove in three runs with a grounder and two-run homer, and Houston overcame five hits by Dante Bichette to beat the Colorado Rockies 13-4 Monday. Houston, which outhit the Rockies 15-13, won three of four games against Colorado, outscoring the Rockies 37-13 and outhitting them 51-38.

"They'll probably expect us to score 10 runs every game," Bagwell said of Houston fans. "We can't expect to do this every night. It would be nice."

Colorado, 35-45 on the road last season and 47-34 at Coors Field, finished its first road trip 4-3 and open its home schedule against St. Louis on Tuesday night.

Bichette was 5-for-5 with two RBIs, matching his career high for hits and raising his average to .531. It was his first five-hit game since June 30, 1996, against Los Angeles.

"I see the ball well here, I don't know why," Bichette said. "They say it's a pitcher's ballpark. It's nice (the hits), but it's not something I'm going to have a party about. We lost. I'm just looking forward to getting home."

Bagwell had an RBI grounder in the first and hit his third homer of the season in the sixth for a 9-2 lead. Despite the big hits, Bagwell isn't satisfied with his start . He's hitting .259 following Monday's game.

"It's like every April — not great," Bagwell said. "I've battled to go up and have a good at-bat and then follow it with another good at-bat."

Jack Howell added a two-run, pinch single in a four-run seventh, and Derek Bell went 3-for-5.

Mike Hampton (1-0) improved to 5-1 against Colorado, allowing two runs and nine hits in seven innings. John Thomson (1-1) was pounded for nine runs and 12 hits in six innings.

"I felt good but I'm glad we scored a lot of runs," Hampton said. "I didn't have a lot of my good stuff. My changeup and fastball were up in the strike zone. I was just very fortunate."

Craig Biggio and Bell led off the game with singles, and Houston took a 2-0 lead on Bagwell's high-bouncing grounder and Carl Everett's single.

After Vinny Castilla's RBI single in the second, the Astros made it 3-1 in the third on Brad Ausmus' triple and Hampton's single.

White Sox 5, Rangers 4

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez, one of several young players the White Sox will rely on this season, homered to tie the game in the sixth and then drove in the go-ahead run with a bases-loaded single in the eighth. Ordonez's first homer of the season, a solo shot off Bobby Witt in the sixth, tied it 4-all on a chilly 52-degree day.

With the score 4-all in the eighth, Frank Thomas singled and Albert Belle doubled for only his third hit in 20 at-bats. Robin Ventura was intentionally walked by Roger Pavlik (0-1) to load the bases, and Ordonez singled to center.

Texas took a 3-0 lead in the first off struggling Jaime Navarro — who was booed — on a sacrifice fly by Juan Gonzalez and RBI singles by Will Clark and Lee Stevens.

Cubs 3, Expos 2

CHICAGO — Pitcher Mark Clark hit a go-ahead single with two outs in the sixth inning, and the Cubs won their sixth straight over the winless Montreal Expos.

Chicago, which lost its first 14 games last season, is an NL-best 6-1. Montreal, which purged most of its veterans to save money, is the only winless team in the majors at 0-6 and set a franchise record for worst start.

Brewers 8, Marlins 5

MIAMI — Jeff Cirillo tied a club record with three doubles and Milwaukee completed its first series sweep in the National League, winning its fourth straight against the World Series champions.

Pirates 4, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Francisco Cordova (2-0) allowed five hits and struck out eight in seven innings, and Pittsburgh avoided a four-game sweep with some help from a disputed balk.

ANGELS: Halos face contenders El Paso

upcoming series against the Devils. "I don't think it's much of a rivalry for the players. We don't need to add that to the play of the game. We want to do well against whoever we play."

With the way the Angels have been getting production out of not only the hitters but the pitchers as well, the Halos are in a good position to take sole possession of first in the wild Texas League West.

On a night when the elements played dirty tricks on the baseballs which were hit in the air, Angel pitcher Matt Wise kept the ball down and for the most part and kept Wrangler batters at bay through 6 2/3 innings. Wise allowed just two runs on six hits, and struck out four on the night.

"For his first start above pro-rookie ball, I thought he threw the ball pretty well," said Long about the right-hander. "He was aggressive on quite a few pitches, which is something as the season goes on, he will get a little more refined with his command."

Wise gave up a home run in the bottom of the first, but just like the rest of the series, the Angels' bats responded. The Halos scored five runs, four of them coming on a Jason Herrick grand slam to right-center field, in the bottom of the first. The Angels added seven more runs in the third.

"With the wind blowing out the way it was, I knew it was going out," said Herrick who notched his third career grand slam. "There's always going to be the elements. We're not going to take anything lightly. We want to be the team to beat and we're just going to go after each team we play."

It was Wichita that started going after the Angels in the fifth inning. But the Wranglers didn't use their hitting or fielding talent. Instead, the Wranglers used some misguided pitches to go after Midland players.

It all started when Trent Durrington stole second base when the Angels had a 12-2 lead at that point. Apparently, the Wranglers took offense to that and pitchers started to hit Angel batters. What it all amounted to was the ejections of Wichita pitchers Daron Kirkreit and Pat Flury, Wichita manager John Mizerock, and Angels pitcher Fernando De La Cruz for retaliation.

There was also a bench clearing in the game, although unlike the WPHL, nobody threw any punches. Neither side commented on the exchanges.

Adding to the Angelic onslaught at the plate were Norm Hutchins, who went 4-for-5 with two runs scored, and Troy Glaus, who hit two home runs and had five RBIs. He has now hit in each game and has belted five homers in the last four games.

ANGEL NOTES: The Angels open tonight's five-game homestand with the Diablos with Brian Cooper (1-0, 2.57 ERA) on the mound going against El Paso's left-hander Horacio Estrada.

MC: Chaps' Ferrie only player to break par

(From 1C)

lied, Ferrie was the only one to break par, the only one to get into the 60s, and there was no golfer within three strokes of him after the first round and after the day was done.

"It is always good to lead, no matter what tournament you play in," Ferrie said. "That is why you try to play in competitions and that is to lead. When you do that, that is good."

At 6-3 and 260 pounds, Ferrie has the size to deal with the winds, which reached 52 mph at times. Although, he and the rest of the Europeans are used to it.

"We play in this most days," Ferrie said. "A little wind doesn't bother us as it does most Americans."

"Bring from Scotland, I'm used to (the wind)," said Loftus, who like McLaughlan resides in Glasgow. "We know we will make bogeys and have learned to accept it. Those players from here hadn't played in the wind and get annoyed.

"Some these scores are unbelievable. Scores in the 90s are unheard of."

There were plenty of those 90s on the board at day's end, 10 to be exact. In fact, the afternoon round proved to be a brutal one. The average player's score in the field of 144 rose from 76.5 in the morning to 83.2 in the afternoon. Team scores ballooned from 302.8 to 327.3.

NOTES: Ferrie's round of 68 in the morning was the low round of the morning by three shots...Odessa College's Michael Hansler had the low nine of day with a 32 (3-under par) on Green Tree's West course.... The low round of the afternoon (2-over-par 73) belonged to New Mexico JC's Nick Evans.

Trinity golf wins Region I-3A title

Staff Report

FORT WORTH — The Trinity golf team won the Region I-3A title Monday at the Pecan Valley Golf Course and will make its first trip to the TAPPS state tournament.

Trinity fired a team score of 334 to distance itself from second place Shady Grove Academy by 12 strokes. Last year, Trinity missed qualifying the team by just six strokes.

"It was a good accomplishment," Trinity golf coach Bill Young said. "I was proud of the kids. They played well under adverse conditions."

The team of Mark Stoltz, Hunter Kennedy, Stephen Stoltz and Nathan Pirtle got through the par-73 course better than anyone on a day where the winds made things difficult. Mark Stoltz and Kennedy both recorded 81s, which just missed a medalist title by two strokes. Stephen Stoltz carded a 84 and Nathan Pirtle shot an 88.

Also, Jay Leonard shot a 86 competing as a medalist.

Young is excited about the chance to play at the state tournament, which will be held on April 20-21 at the Cottonwood Creek golf course. With no seniors in the starting lineup at regionals, this could be the first of many visits.

"That is the good thing about it," Young said. "It is our first trip down. We feel good about it."

The District 1-3A TAPPS meet held at the Pecan Valley Golf Course in Fort Worth.

Team Standings: 1. Trinity 334; 2. Shady Grove Academy 346; 3. Texas Christian 350; 4. Trinity Fellowship 364; 5. Notre Dame 372; 6. Lake Country Baptist 373; 7. Lovington Academy 374.

Citicorp, Travelers plan record merger

■ Formation of new Citigroup would put families' financial needs under one umbrella.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — If Travelers Group pulls off its proposed merger with Citicorp, families will be able to take care of all their financial needs — from checking accounts to life insurance — under the same red umbrella.

Monday's announcement that the insurance and brokerage giant and the nation's second-largest bank planned to merge in the biggest corporate deal ever stunned and thrilled Wall Street.

Both companies were valued at $70 billion at the beginning of the day, but after trading closed, Citicorp's value had shot up to $82 billion, with Travelers at $82.5 billion. Citicorp stock bolted $37.62 1/2 to $180.50 on the New York Stock Exchange, while Travelers jumped $11.31 to $73.

John S. Reed

The new company would be called Citigroup Inc. and have Travelers trademark red umbrella as part of its logo.

The companies see the union as a convenience for customers around the world who are looking for easy ways to get at reasonably priced financial products.

"The customer does not want to have to shop from place to place," said Citicorp chairman John S. Reed.

Citigroup would sell convenience, but the company would also get a wealth of financial information about its customers that would allow it to dig out new sales opportunities. If you applied to Citibank for a mortgage, for instance, you might get a pitch for Travelers homeowners insurance. Getting a Citibank auto loan could lead to a solicitation to buy a Travelers auto policy.

The new company will combine a portfolio of more than 100 million customers in 100 countries, 70 million in the United States.

"We are creating a model for the financial services company of the future," Travelers Chairman Sanford I. Weill said at a news conference

Sanford Weill

The transaction, which the companies hope to finalize within three months, nearly doubles the previous record price of $37 billion that the telecommunications company WorldCom Inc. is paying for long-distance provider MCI Communications Corp. Reed and Weill would be co-chairmen of the new company.

Citicorp and Travelers, parent of Salomon Smith Barney and Travelers insurance, are betting that Congress will change Depession-era laws prohibiting banks from getting into the insurance or brokerage businesses. For now, the companies expect to be able to operate as one under current rules for as long as five years.

By then, the companies expect Congress will have overhauled the banking laws.

The deal spurred speculation that competitors will have to look at whether they need to strike deals to keep up with such a behemoth.

Cutting costs often means job losses, but Weill said more positions would likely be added than cut.

"Obviously, you know, there are some places with overlap, but we started by allowing two co-CEOs, so that's a good example," Weill said.

Record merger sends Dow past 9,000 mark

■ Citicorp-Travelers Group megamerger sends bull market on rampage.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bulling past a new milestone, the Dow industrials on Monday closed above 9,000 for the first time, extending a relentless climb that got its final nudge from the biggest business merger ever.

The nine-month journey, which included a brief detour below 7,000 during October's swoon, was long and hard — at least by recent standards.

But dire predictions of the bull market's impending collapse just five months ago could not choke investors' appetite for stocks. Monday's first-time close above 9,000 by the Dow represents a stellar 14.2 percent gain for this year, a bigger climb than even the most optimistic forecasts for all of 1998.

The push that tipped the Dow over the 9,000 milestone was fitting.

Investors have kept the bull market running by putting their savings into mutual funds at financial services companies. On Monday, Citicorp and Travelers Group, returned the favor, announcing a merger made possible by their rising stock values and that sent financial stocks surging further ahead.

Without the rise in financial stocks, the Dow would have missed the historic marker and lost ground for the day.

The Dow rose 49.82 points to 9,033.23 Monday, gaining an unprecedented 1,124.98 points in just over three months after starting the year at 7,908.25.

Despite rise in the Dow, declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 629.10 million shares.

Suddenly, despite opening the year with a 4 percent slide, the Dow isn't very far from extending its already unmatched three-year string of better-than 20 percent gains. Some Wall Street experts have raised their Dow targets to 10,000 and beyond, but many are standing by their forecasts.

"My point of view will sound incredibly grumpy against this ebullient background. This pendulum could swing further. We could end up the year a little lower than where we are now," said Charles G. Crane, chief market strategist at Key Asset Management. "We're dealing in a psychological currency that's as powerful as I've ever seen."

Few would argue that the backdrop has changed considerably since July, when the Dow first blew past 8,000.

Back then, there was reason for the optimism: high employment, but low inflation; robust economic growth, but low interest rates; and, most importantly, steady gains in corporate profits. The Dow, which covered the ground from 6,000 to 7,000 in four months and from 7,000 to 8,000 in five months, seemed destined to make quick work of 9,000.

That was before the Asian economy began unraveling in August, eventually setting off a global financial panic that pushed the Dow into a record 554-point slide on Oct. 27. The next day, the Dow slid another 178 points to 6,983 before reversing course.

According to preliminary figures, the NYSE composite index closed at a new high, up 0.09 at 583.17 to surpass the record it hit on Friday.

The S&P 500 list fell 1.32 at 1,121.38, the Nasdaq composite index was down 26.26 at 1,829.14 and the American Stock Exchange composite index was down 4.41 at 742.78.

AP Photo

Saudi oil minister expects further oil production cuts

N.Y. Times News Service

NICOSIA — Global oil producers will cut production further to reduce oversupply in the market if prices don't improve by June, said Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Ali al-Naimi.

"There is a positive trend of commitment among producing countries," Naimi told the Nicosia, Cyprus-based Middle East Economic Survey, a weekly newsletter. "And there is a willingness to cut more volume if need be."

Ten members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries plus six non-OPEC producers agreed to limit oil production by about 1.6 million barrels, or 2 percent of global supply, to revive oil prices which recently traded at nine-year lows on concern about high supply.

OPEC's share of the cutbacks were ratified at a March 30 meeting in Vienna.

Still, traders aren't sure all of the nations in the pact will stick to their pledges. Oil prices fell Monday, with crude falling 54 cents to $15.45 in New York.

Three days after OPEC met, Petroleos de Venezuela SA President Luis Giusti said that Venezuela might achieve some of its 200,000 barrels-a-day cutback by storing oil rather than limiting output, though he didn't say how much. While other PDVSA officials were quick to deny that Giusti's comments meant Venezuela wouldn't keep its promise, oil traders were concerned that extra barrels might still pile up.

Venezuela's track record in meeting targets doesn't inspire confidence either. The nation is OPEC's most notorious over-producer, busting its 2.583 million barrels-a-day OPEC quota by 32 percent in March, according to Bloomberg estimates. The new output levels announced at OPEC's Vienna meeting last week have effectively replaced OPEC quotas, at least until the group next meets June 24.

Naimi said that since reductions would be made from current levels, not quotas, pledges from members such as Venezuela had more weight.

Tandy head to leave as CEO

Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Tandy Corp. Chairman and Chief Executive John V. Roach said Monday he'll step down as CEO at year's end and relinquish the title to a businessman known for helping turn around a fast-food chain.

But Roach will stay on as chairman, the company said. Leonard H. Roberts, president of Tandy and flagship Radio Shack chain, will continue as CEO to refocus the electronics division to neighborhood-based merchandising.

Fort Worth, Texas-based Tandy is one of "the largest and most profitable retailers in the country — Radio Shack — so it's a pretty good niche we've carved out for ourselves," said Roberts, 49.

The consumer electronics giant showed a dramatic turnaround last year after refocusing on its core business. Its loss in 1996 was its first in 15 years.

Roach, 59, has been at Tandy for 31 years and for the past 20 years has had principal responsibility for the company's strategic direction and day-to-day progress. Age was the main factor in his decision, he said.

"I've long planned to retire at age 60, which will occur later this year," Roach said.

"Why would I do this, you might ask? Part has to do with the intensity of my work ethic. Mentally, I focus on Tandy all the time. Physically, I devote (to) Tandy essentially all of the time," he said.

Roach will also remain as Texas Christian University's chairman of the board and continue community projects.

Roberts, president of Radio Shack since 1994, will continue his goal of using the 7,000 or so stores to demystify technology for the mass market.

The stores, which are within a five-minute drive for 94 percent of Americans, are positioned to take advantage of that marketing.

"I knew there was a Radio Shack in my neighborhood," said Roberts, who as an officer of Arby's Inc. helped revive the roast beef restaurant chain. "I didn't realize there was a Radio Shack in everyone's neighborhood."

Crude retreats

NEW YORK — Crude oil fell more than 3 percent as a plan top producers reached last week to cut output showed signs of unraveling, reducing chances of ending a world glut.

Venezuela said Thursday it would store some of the 200,000 barrels of oil it pledged to cut from its daily output, rather than leaving it in the ground. Saudi Arabia, the world's largest producer, responded by cutting prices for U.S. customers by as much as 40 cents a barrel, Bridge News reported.

Crude oil for May delivery fell 54 cents, or 3.4 percent, to $15.45 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices fell to nine-year low of $12.80 on March 17.

Petroleum product prices also dropped, after prices fell to a nine-year low. May heating oil fell 1.14 cents, or 2.6 percent, to 42.83 cents a gallon; and May gasoline fell 2.01 cents, or 3.9 percent, to 49.75 cents a gallon.

Also weighing on oil prices was the proposed sale of $207.5 million worth of oil by the U.S. Department of Energy as it lowers the country's strategic petroleum reserve.

Bids are due by April 20 for the sale, which is required by Congress. Traders also speculated that the United Nations will soon lift economic sanctions against Iraq and allow the country to sell oil freely.

Dollar slides

NEW YORK — The dollar slid against the Japanese yen and the German mark Monday on positive economic news emanating from those two countries.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 134.80 yen, down from 135.10 yen late Friday, when it reached a 6 1/2-year year against the yen. The U.S. currency also was changing hands at 1.8403 marks, down from 1.8472.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.5264 Swiss francs, up from 1.5243; 6.1630 French francs, down from 6.1910; 1,815.50 Italian lire, down from 1,821; and 1.4189 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4194.

The British pound was quoted at $1.6661, up from $1.6595.

New Microsoft case

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is considering a new antitrust case against Microsoft Corp. involving the new Windows 98 software, officials said Monday.

Justice investigators issued a new round of civil subpoenas to major computer makers concerning Microsoft Corp., but haven't decided yet if they will file a case.

A Microsoft spokesman said the company "will work very closely" with Justice Department investigators but said the company envisions no delay in the planned May 15 release of its new Windows 98 software to PC makers. The software is scheduled for public release June 25.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investors should use care in hiring financial planners

By Eric Tyson

Q: I am considering hiring a financial adviser. You mention in your book that you have many cautions about hiring financial planners. Why is that? Aren't you a financial adviser yourself?

Tyson

A: The financial planning field, of which I am part, is in great need of reform. In most states, anyone can hang out a shingle and start working as a financial planner or adviser. So, competency is a problem.

Another problem in the field is conflicts of interest. Too many people who call themselves "planners" or "advisers" sell products on commission. There's nothing inherently wrong with selling and working on commission in many lines of work, but with personal finances, it skews recommendations. People hire a planner in the hopes of obtaining objective, comprehensive advice.

As with your taxes or personal health, you should seek out advisers who charge based on their time and do not sell products.

Also beware of spending a lot of money for a plan that doesn't give specific answers to your financial questions and that advocates hiring the planner to manage your money or to prepare legal trusts, etc. In order to turn you into an ongoing customer, some advisers try to make you feel that things are more complicated than they really are.

Just because a financial planner says he or she is "fee only" or "fee based" does not mean that the planner doesn't have conflicts of interest. You can't expect advisers who make their money from ongoing investment management to provide objective, informed advice about whether to invest in real estate, say, or pay down mortgage debt. Such financial moves would deplete your pool of available cash that the financial adviser would like to manage.

Q: It seems that more and more stock market analysts are predicting a major correction. Money Magazine columnist Michael Sivy, for example, is pessimistic, as are some newsletter writers. What do you think of these predictions, and what do you expect from the market in the next year or two?

A: I've never been a fan of following pundits' stock market predictions; most of the time they're wrong.

I myself don't make predictions, because predicting the market is nearly impossible.

A person's long-term investment plan should be based not on predictions but on personal needs and the proven effectiveness of broad diversification.

In every issue of Money magazine, Michael Sivy attempts to predict where U.S. stock and bond prices are headed. In the fall, Sivy predicted a significant stock market correction. When the Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped 7 percent in one day, he crowed that he was right.

Problem was, Sivy had been predicting a market fall for several years. It's like someone predicting rain every day and then bragging when it finally does rain.

In the meantime, however, those who followed Sivy's advice all those years would have missed out on a tremendous increase in stock prices.

If you're feeling swayed by a particular pundit's predictions, check on his or her track record.

The Hulbert Financial Digest tracks the performance of various investment newsletters' recommendations.

To investigate the track record of a journalist such as Sivy, go to your local public library and read his or her columns from several years back.
