U.S. leads the world in violence

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States leads industrialized nations in murders, sexual assaults and other attacks, and the fear of violence has permeated American life, the authors of a new study say.

The specter of violence has degraded American life, left people afraid to walk their neighborhoods at night, put children in danger in school and caused many to barricade themselves behind locked doors, according to a report released Thursday by the National Research Council.

"The nation's anxiety on the subject of violence is not unfounded. In 1990, more than 23,000 people were homicide victims," the report said, although it noted that murder rates were higher earlier in this century, and higher still in some locations last century.

"Violent deaths and incidents that result in lesser injuries are sources of chronic fear and a high level of concern with the seeming inability of public authorities to prevent them," the report said.

The United States, the study found, is, in general, more violent than other societies.

"Homicide rates in the United States far exceed those in any other industrialized nation," the report said. "Among 16 industrialized countries surveyed in 1988, the United States had the highest prevalence rates for serious sexual assaults and for all other

School insurance skyrockets

Rates more than double for single employees

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Health insurance rates will jump dramatically for Big Spring Independent School District employees after school board trustees on Thursday approved a partially self-funded plan.

More than 40 educators and support staff crowded the high school board room to voice discontent with the rates — up 46 percent on the high option for employee and family and up 37 percent on the low option for employee and family.

For single employees, the rates more than doubled — up 70 percent on the high option and 73 percent on the low.

BSISD insurance agent Russ McEwen said he was confident he found the best possible plan but regretted the unavoidable rate hike.

"I went to every single player in the market. The other quotes we got were significantly higher than this," he said. "We've had a very difficult year claims wise. We've doubled our losses this year. Everything that can go wrong has."

He added, "I don't overemphasize the fact that I was torn up about it. We all realize that the cost is going out of sight."

Taking comments and suggestions from the audience, trustees fashioned their final decision to accept the policy with a condition.

Trustees included in the approval seeking additional quotes to potentially accept another carrier. After six months, BSISD can exit the current plan.

At the invitation of trustee Larry Hollar, a local insurance agent attended and said local insurance agencies were excluded from the bidding process.

"The main thing that concerned me is I know there are other (local) companies that will bid. There are agents in this town that deserve the opportunity to try and see if we can," said Bill Laster, a local independent insurance agent. "We as (local) agents didn't have an opportunity to bid any of this at all. That kind of offended me."

Betty Cain, an elementary school teacher, said, "We were notified two days before this was to take place. We're not satisfied with (the plan). Out of 16 people (in her school insurance committee) eight said they're going to drop it. We should have other options."

Trustees approved the plan to avoid higher rates with additional claims. By postponing approval of the plan, BSISD employees risked paying 66 percent more on top of the premium in December should they accept the plan later.

"Everybody feels hurt when they see that money going out of their pockets, but we have to look at the long term. If we wait our rates will be higher," trustee Glynna Mouton said. "Part of the problem is the last-minute approach ... (Employees) want to have paper that says this company bids this much."

During 1991 the district was under a fully-funded Blue Cross-Blue Shield health insurance plan. Although rates increased, the accepted plan rates were less than the BC-BS quote for 1992.

Business Superintendent Ron Plumlee said BSISD had usually enjoyed some of the lowest rates. "The rates had to go up some. Big Spring's premiums have been extremely low. We were spoiled with the lower rates."

Other concerns from educators and support staff about the plan included the preferred physician list. Accepting the list shaves five percent from rates and deviating from the list tacks on a 10 percent penalty.

Employees also expressed disapproval of a mandatory generic drug use condition.

BSISD insurance costs

Big Spring school trustees publicly unveiled a new insurance plan at their meeting Thursday night. The new program consists of two monthly premium structures - low and high.

	Current	Low	High
Emp. only	$123.05	$154.20	$190.70
Emp., spouse	$320.44	$357.34	$425.84
Emp., children	$222.33	$286.03	$341.24
Emp., family	$344.36	$399.22	$470.88
Retirees	$ 80.21	$151.40	$187.90

Plan highlights:
LOW - $500 deductible, 50% first $10,000 then 100% to $1 million.
HIGH - $250 deductible, 80% of first $20,000 then 100% to $1 million.

Arrick's resignation accepted by board

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Big Spring Independent School District trustees accepted the resignation of John Arrick on Thursday.

Arrick, formerly of District 3, presented to school officials on Oct. 27 his resignation stating his intent to pursue career goals outside of Big Spring.

"My association with the district has been very rewarding and I can only be positive when evaluating the tremendous job our present administration and teaching staff have done," his letter stated.

"We accept it with great regret," trustee Al Valdez said.

Superintendent Bill McQueary said, "We hate to lose him."

The board entered into executive session to consider an appointment to the vacancy. No appointment was made.

In other business, trustees:

- Approved a request to the Justice Department for a change of polling places from the Wasson Road Fire Station polling place (school elections) to Marcy Elementary School to allow more parking space and convenience.
- Heard a superintendent's report on attendance, down 124 students from last year; most heavy loss was at the Kindergarten Center.
- Approved bids for cafeteria and laundry equipment, student awards, maintenance and transportation bids.
- Approved bills payment and other finance action.

The school board will not have a second meeting in November. The next regular meeting is at 5:15 p.m. on Dec. 10. at the high school board room.

Smoking ordinance goes for approval

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

A proposed smoking ordinance is expected to go before the Big Spring City Council at its next regular meeting.

The council will probably meet on the second Tuesday in December. Passage of the ordinance is expected by January.

The proposal will remain as it was presented at a public town-hall meeting Oct. 29, said Big Spring City Councilman Corky Harris who chaired a citizens committee of smokers and nonsmokers to draft the ordinance.

The committee met for less than a half hour Thursday to consider public input at the meeting. Of 37 people attending, 13 spoke — five in support and six against.

"Basically nobody wanted to change the ordinance," Harris said.

"I'd rather not have had one but I do respect nonsmokers enough to where we should have one," said Quin Martin, who adamantly opposed the idea when the council first discussed appointing the committee in September. After lambasting the idea to the council, he was asked to serve on the committee.

"We need some law," Martin, who owns QM Custom Frames and Gallery, said this morning. "We just need to let it be governed by the people."

Teen turns self in for shooting

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH — A 15-year-old boy wanted in connection with the fatal shooting of an off-duty Dallas police officer has surrendered, saying he feared he would be shot down or brutalized by police.

The teen-ager was taken into custody about 10:30 p.m. Thursday at his uncle's house in Fort Worth, but only after relatives made sure that television crews were present to film the arrest.

The development came hours after Dallas Police Chief William Rathburn got permission from juvenile court Judge Hal Gaither to release the boy's name and photo to the news media in hopes it would expedite his capture.

A department spokesman said it is the first time Dallas police had obtained a court order allowing them to release a juvenile suspect's name and picture.

The Texas Family Code allows the release of certain information about a juvenile who has been charged with a felony if a judge determines the release would be for a legitimate purpose, Gaither said. The information that can be released includes the suspect's name and description and a photograph.

The youth is suspected of killing police officer Reginald House, 29, and critically wounding the officer's friend, Lenny Allen, 31, early Sunday, minutes after the pair were robbed outside a south Dallas apartment building.

Allen was in serious condition Thursday in the intensive care unit of Parkland Memorial Hospital.

The 15-year-old was the fourth suspect arrested in the case.

Police arrested two other men by Tuesday in connection with the robbery of House and Allen.

And on Thursday, before the 15-year-old's surrender, police arrested a third robbery suspect, 18-year-old Laderrick Smith of suburban Duncanville. The three are charged with aggravated robbery and were in custody Thursday at the Lew Sterrett Justice Center in Dallas.

Police also sought a fifth person who may have seen the robbery but was not believed an active participant.

Thursday, police officials discussed for the first time publicly a police report that said House drove Allen to the apartment building where they were shot, and where Allen is suspected of having tried to buy crack cocaine.

Officials said there is no evidence that House, just 12 weeks out of the police academy, tried to buy illegal drugs before he and Allen were shot. A test of the officer's blood conducted after he was killed found no illegal drugs.

A police report, based upon statements taken from the arrested suspects, says Allen approached two men, one of whom was identified as the 15-year-old, and asked to buy crack cocaine.

The youth pulled a handgun and ordered Allen to lie face down on the ground, the report says. Another man ordered House from the driver's seat of his car and onto the ground beside Allen, according to the report.

The robbers then searched the men, took $50 from Allen and ordered them to leave, the report says.

But House drove around the block to the front of the building. One of the robbers, who police believe was the 15-year-old, then fired a shotgun blast into the passenger side of the car, striking both men, the police report said.

The events leading to the release of the 15-year-old's picture and description began Thursday at a meeting between Rathburn and several juvenile court judges. The meeting had been planned for several weeks to discuss state legislation.

As the meeting began, the chief said he was frustrated that he couldn't release any information on the youth, Judge Gaither said. "And I told him that that was wrong — that he could do that, under certain circumstances," Gaither said.

Millions of Texas children are without health coverage

Health care reforms needed

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — A new study showing that more than 1.3 million Texas children lack health coverage points to the need for reforms in medical and social service area, experts say.

The study, conducted by the Southern Institute on Children and Families, also shows that one-tenth of all uninsured children in the United States live in Texas.

Diane Stewart, director for the Center for Public Policy Priorities, called the findings "very troubling."

"The study reveals the impact of the growing health-care crisis on those who are least able to help themselves, our children," Ms. Stewart said.

The study surveyed 17 southern states and the District of Columbia.

Thirty-four percent of uninsured children under the age of five are eligible for Medicaid benefits, but are not enrolled in the program, according to the study.

And 80 percent of uninsured children are in families with incomes 200 percent below the poverty level.

The figures all point to a need to change the state's method for providing health care for children, Ms. Stewart said.

"Early in a child's development is the time during which preventive care can be most crucial and catching small ailments before they become critical emergencies is still possible," Ms. Stewart said.

"Families of most of these children have no way of providing health care coverage to their children," she said.

Dr. David Smith, Texas Department of Health commissioner, said the medical community needs to change how it provides care.

"I think what we're seeing in these statistics is something that all of us have become familiar with if you've watched television over the last 12 or 15 years. It's called pay me now or pay me later," Smith said. "What we seeing with these statistics is, we've been paying later."

Moving toward a preventive-based, rather than reactive-based, health care system could save millions of dollars, Smith said.

Smith said the state should find new and unconventional means of providing health coverage to uninsured children, such as offering services at schools, churches and homeless shelters.

"We're going to have to move into some nontraditional settings," he said.

Ms. Stewart said the need for reform is immediate, despite the funding problems experienced by all portions of government.

"Children can't be put on hold until we solve all our revenue and budget problems. They problems they face continue to grow while we deliberate," Ms. Stewart said.

Suit targets pep rally prayers

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH — A judge is allowing student-led prayers at Southlake Carroll High School pep rallies to continue at least through today's opening round of bidistrict football playoffs.

State District Judge George Crowley on Thursday denied a request by William Pritchard, a senior at the school, for a temporary restraining order against the prayers.

He scheduled a hearing for 9 a.m. Monday to consider more evidence in the case. Pritchard, along with his father, filed suit Wednesday to stop prayers on school time and on school property.

"I can't see that the plaintiff (Pritchard) has a sufficient basis for a restraining order, but I'm going to allow what other additional evidence needs to be offered Monday morning," Crowley said.

William Pritchard testified that since he complained about the prayers, he has been "alienated and scrutinized."

"I've been continuously harassed, bothered, asked what faith I am, preached to," said Pritchard, a Lutheran.

Pritchard's attorney, Eliot Shavin, argued Thursday that because the school gym is being used and the rallies occur mostly during school hours, the school is in effect promoting religion.

Shavin is vice president in charge of legal matters for the North Texas region of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Football players who learned of the ruling were pleased by it. Carroll, which has a 10-0 record and is ranked No. 1 in Class 3A by the Associated Press, plays Eastland in Glen Rose tonight.

"It's totally awesome," said Bryan Gilmore, 16, a junior center and linebacker. "That's what we're fighting for, because if this gets taken away, it violates our rights as Christians."

Stephen Moreland, 17, a senior running back, said students have begun a petition asking that the prayers continue at the pep rallies and in locker rooms.

"I think we should have it, but it shouldn't be mandatory," he said. "It's real important, a tradition that's always been there. It's just a good omen for both teams — more to keep everybody in good health and safe and for a good game."

Pritchard complained about the prayers at the school board's Oct. 26 meeting. More than 200 people attended the meeting, and dozens of parents and students asked the district to continue to allow the prayers. But some cautioned the district that to do so would lead to a costly court battle.

In an attempt to resolve the controversy and head off a costly and emotional court battle, the school a few weeks ago changed the order of the pep rallies. Now, the prayers are said at the end and students are given an opportunity to leave.

Angolian rebels are offer peace

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUANDA, Angola — In a gesture that embodies Angola's uncertain future, rebel leader Jonas Savimbi has come forward bearing an olive branch in one hand and a war flag in the other.

Savimbi and government forces have agreed to give the United Nations a larger role in trying to stop the country from sliding back into civil war.

But at the time, Savimbi said he was prepared to fight the government for another decade if necessary.

Government officials fear Savimbi, who has refused to concede defeat in the September elections, wants to partition the country. His troops have seized two provincial capitals and were reported closing in on a strategic southern port city.

Marrack Goulding, the U.N. undersecretary general for peacekeeping, told a news conference Thursday that Savimbi and President Jose Eduardo dos Santos "expressed to us their wish that the U.N. should play a larger role in the future."

But he said time was running out for both sides, because the current U.N. mandate expires Nov. 30.

The two leaders signed accords in May 1991 that brought peace to Angola for the first time since civil war erupted on the eve of independence from Portugal in 1975, and paved the way for multiparty elections in September.

More than 350,000 people died in the bloodshed, which escalated from an internecine power struggle into a Cold War proxy battle that devastated this once-prosperous nation.

The peace held until elections in September favored the ruling party, the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, over Savimbi's group, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

U.N. observers said the balloting was generally free and fair. But Savimbi cried fraud and withdrew to his central stronghold of Huambo, threatening war.

In the past two weeks, clashes between rebel and government troops killed more than 1,000 people.

Clinton appointees expected to bring youthful enthusiasm to job

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Three of the top deputies named to President-elect Clinton's transition team are "thirty-something" political operatives whose ambition and energy helped drive his campaign to victory.

Now David Wilhelm, George Stephanopoulos and Mark Gearan will be expected to inject the same youthful enthusiasm and cleverness into giving the White House a fresh look.

Two other transition deputies, Alexis M. Herman and Eli Segal, are a bit older but also are members of the Democrats' new and decidedly young leadership.

Herman helped stage the Democratic Party's most technically sophisticated convention ever in New York. Segal was the campaign's chief of staff who recruited many of the young advisers who drove the campaign.

All are well-educated veterans of political warfare despite their relative youthfulness. On Thursday, they became the vanguard of Clinton's transition planning.

In all, Clinton appointed 48 people to transition positions, including those who will head policy issues like health, economics and national security.

"They reflect my commitment to assembling the most qualified and diverse group of people available, including men and women with broad experience, some of whom served in the campaign and others who are just joining us now as we move toward governing," Clinton said.

Wilhelm, 35, a product of Chicago's famed political machine, served as Clinton's campaign manager, running the day-to-day operations while others conceived the strategy.

He operates a political consulting firm in Chicago, where he ran both of Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's successful campaigns in 1989 and 1991. He was credited with bringing several key Chicagoans into the Clinton campaign.

Stephanopoulos, 31, an Ivy League-educated Rhodes scholar, served as Clinton's communications director and masterminded the campaign's rapid response team.

Despite his choir-boy looks and calm demeanor, Stephanopoulos time and again delivered stinging counterattacks, often in live, on-air interviews.

Gearan, 36, a Harvard-educated lawyer, served first as an adviser to Clinton's campaign and later as Vice President-elect Al Gore's campaign manager.

Herman began tackling tough political issues in the 1970s when President Jimmy Carter asked her to help sensitize the government to the needs of women in the workplace.

Child's death brings change

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Life at the notorious Cabrini-Green public housing project has changed in the month since a 7-year-old boy was killed as he walked to school with his mother.

Residents now fall asleep to the sound of silence instead of gunfire. Children have returned to playgrounds once conceded to gangs. The gangs themselves have declared a truce — which may even be holding.

"It's strange to see kids out there actually playing," marvelled Rashina Bell, one of 7,000 people who call Cabrini-Green home.

Dantrell Davis was killed on the morning of Oct. 13 by a sniper shooting from the 10th-floor window of a vacant Cabrini apartment.

Anthony Garrett, 33, was charged with Dantrell's killing and ordered held without bond. Police say Garrett, a marksman who learned to shoot in the military, told officers he was aiming at teenage gang members he believed had been shooting at his building.

Dantrell was the third student from his school killed this year.

His death seemed to galvanize the city to finally do something to stem the violence at Cabrini-Green, a sprawing complex of 23 high rises and 60 row houses in the city's North End.

One city official even suggested calling in the National Guard, a step that wasn't taken.

Mayor Richard M. Daley announced a police sweep to confiscate drugs and weapons. Metal detectors and stringent security systems were installed in the high-rises, requiring residents to meet guests at the door and escort them to their apartments.

Four buildings, including the one from which Dantrell was shot, are being closed permanently. Police say gangs and other criminals used vacant apartments there to conduct illicit business.

Police also have increased their numbers significantly at Cabrini, but won't say how many officers are there.

Leaders of 12 street gangs declared a truce.

'It's strange to see kids out there actually playing.'

"Now, these guys that are supposed to hate each other are walking up and down together holding hands," said Joseph Peery, a community organizer. "Disciples, Cobras, Vice Lords — not a bad word between them."

Residents describe the silence of the night, once punctuated by gunfire.

"It would end about 6 o'clock in the morning," said Lillian Davis Swope, 62, a 39-year Cabrini resident. "No one seemed to be able to stop it."

Police report no shootings at the complex since Dantrell was killed.

"It's been very, very quiet here," said Sgt. Bernard Ward, of the police unit at Cabrini. "I've been here 10 years and I've never seen it like this."

The increased security is not without its drawbacks.

Some say the housing sweeps, the identification cards residents are now required to wear and the sight of police at every turn are dehumanizing reminders of lives already scarred by poverty.

"It may be safer, but it's a prison mentality," said Julia Burgess, director of Demicco Services, a Cabrini social services agency. "Everybody wants to live in a safe environment. But living with it every day, they don't like a lot of aspects of it."

Residents say greeting guests at the door is a particular hardship, since intercom systems are in disrepair and telephones — which would enable guests to call before coming — are an unaffordable luxury for many.

Bell lives on the 11th floor of her building. Not infrequently, she says, people now stand on the grass far below her window and shout to the upper floors, hoping their friends will hear and come greet them.

We salute:

The Big Spring Herald, each week, recognizes local persons and groups who have been singled out for special honors or who have helped make a difference in the quality of life in and around our community.

- Big Spring residents who supported the Dora Roberts Community Center benefit sock hop. More than 350 persons attended the affair and nearly $12,000 was raised to go toward the private renovation of the facility.
- Moore Development for Big Spring, which continues to work on the Wright Fibers project. Wright Fibers, now said to be within two weeks of a "done deal," would employ 100 persons initially and up to 500 within five years and would open our area to a new industry — textiles.
- The Lions, winners of the Crossroads Little Football League's Division I Super Bowl.
- Area cotton farmers, who battled the extremely long odds of this year's weather to deliver a small, but high quality crop.
- West Texas Center for the Arts, for bringing world-renowned artist Dalhart Windberg to Big Spring for an exhibition and techniques sessions and lesson.
- City of Big Spring, which began the water pipe replacement in the Capehart Addition utilizing city employees instead of an outside contractor. The savings, estimated at approximately $500,000, will allow additional work to be done throughout the community.

My farewell address is not Pa. Ave.

Lewis Grizzard

Somebody was saying, "It's got to be tough being a lame duck president."

That, of course, is what President Bush is, our lame duck president. I'm not certain if that makes Vice President Dan Quayle our quack or not, but the idea came to my mind.

President Bush has from now until January to remain in office before Bill Clinton moves in.

It's one thing to serve out two terms having been re-elected once. You couldn't stay four more years even if you wanted to.

But George Bush, as was Jimmy Carter, was blown out of office after one term. Several million people said, "Pack your bags."

So you know there are all these people out there who got together and ran him out of office. He knows nobody is going to take him seriously during the period he still has in the Oval Office, and he knows everybody will be talking about him behind his back. He has to be hurt. He has to be broken-hearted. And mad as hell.

But Jimmy Carter went quietly in 1980 and I presume George Bush will do the same thing.

Not me. If I'd been fired from my job, but they told me I could hang around for two more months, I'd leave them a few things to remember me by.

The first thing I would do as a lame duck president is make a speech on national television and tell everybody who voted against me to kiss my butt.

"My fellow Americans," I would say, "if you voted for those two idiots who ran against me, you can just kiss my butt."

What more could anybody do to George Bush?

He's too old to run for office again and he's got plenty of money so he could say just about anything he wanted to and would have absolutely nothing to lose.

After that I'd call U-Haul and rent a truck and start hauling some stuff out of the White House. You know Hilary Clinton is going to redecorate anyway. She's not going to want the same drapes Barbara Bush picked out.

So I'd take the drapes, a few rugs, maybe a painting or two and all the dishes and silverware. And the bedspreads, pillow cases and towels.

I'd clean out the joint, and if anybody said anything to me about it, I'd tell them to kiss my butt, too.

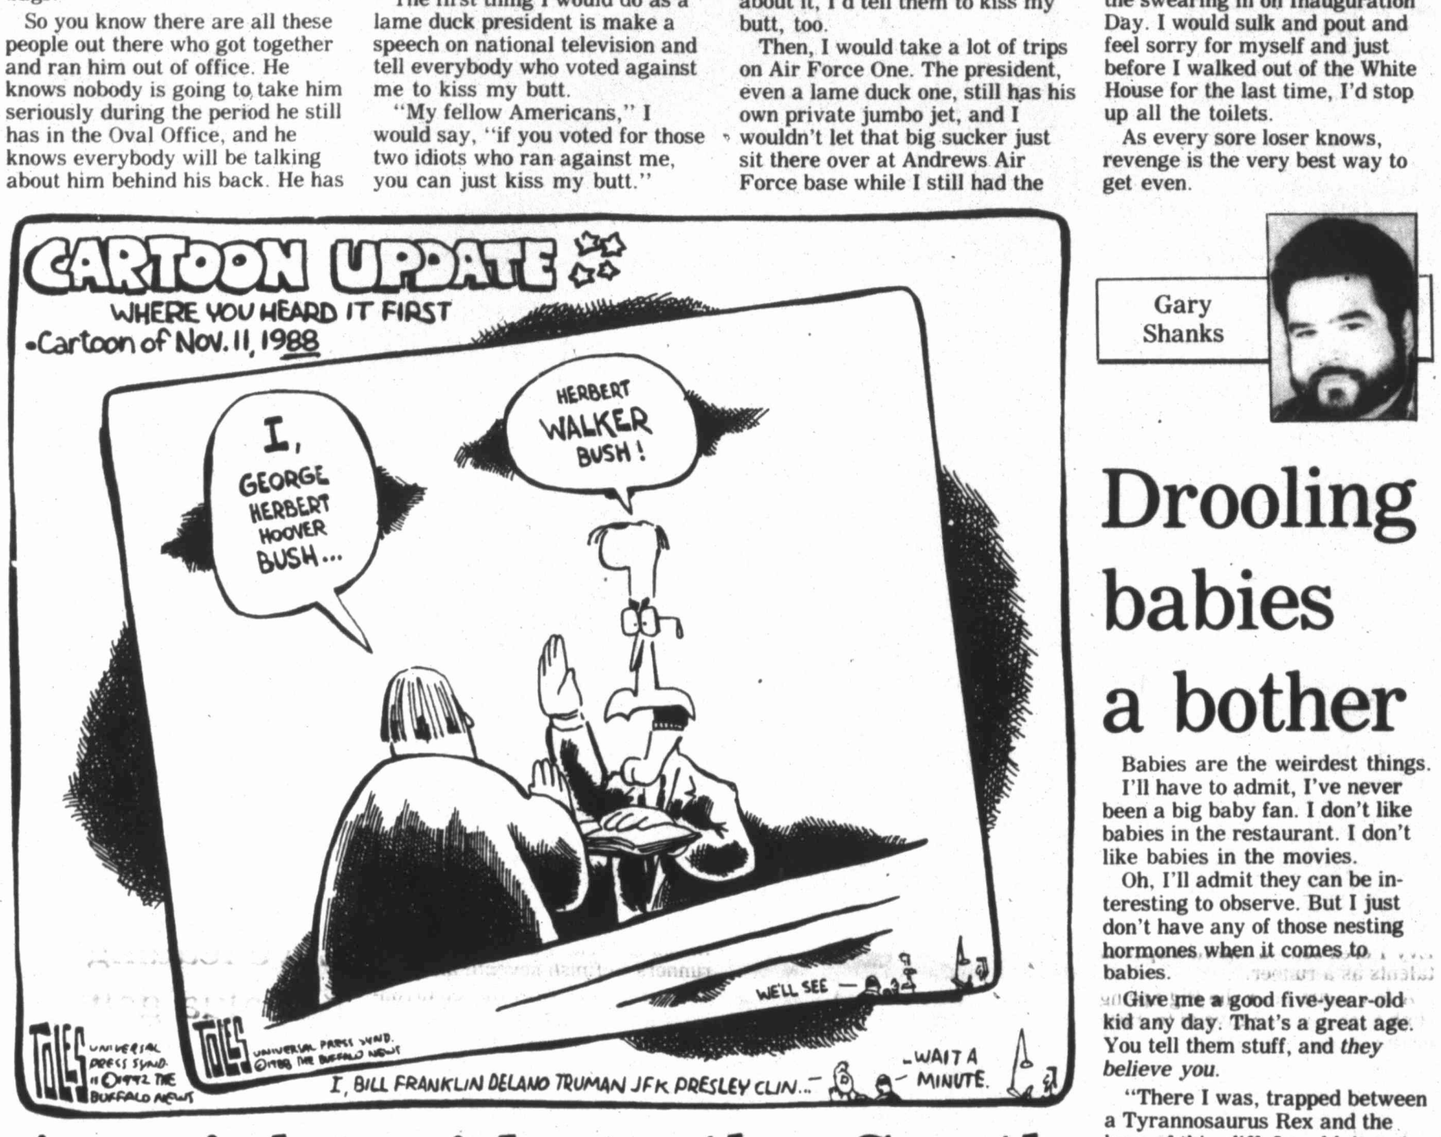
Then, I would take a lot of trips on Air Force One. The president, even a lame duck one, still has his own private jumbo jet, and I wouldn't let that big sucker just sit there over at Andrews Air Force base while I still had the keys to crank it, in a manner of speaking.

I'd go to New Zealand. I've always wanted to go there. I'd check out Australia, too, and if I were in Sydney and decided to go to Vegas in the middle of the night, I'd wake up the pilots and say, "Let's highball this thing to Nevada, boys, I feel lucky."

I wouldn't be nice to my successor's transition team either. "Did you hear some of the things that creep said about me? I'm not lifting a finger," is what I'd say.

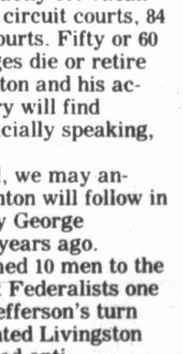
After that I'd start some trouble for the president-elect. I'd do something like start a war with Canada. It's your problem now, big boy, is what I'd say just after the swearing in on Inauguration Day. I would sulk and pout and feel sorry for myself and just before I walked out of the White House for the last time, I'd stop up all the toilets.

As every sore loser knows, revenge is the very best way to get even.



Clinton & the courts

James J. Kilpatric



WASHINGTON — Over at the Supreme Court, where I hang around a good deal of the time, the gossip is to this effect:

Justice Harry Blackmun, who turns 84 this week, will retire at the end of term in July. President Clinton will name Judge Richard Arnold to succeed him. The Senate will confirm without a dissenting vote, and that will be that.

Justice Byron White, who will be 76 in June, also will retire next summer. The White House will leak word that Clinton intends to nominate Harvard Professor Laurence Tribe to succeed him. Immediate uproar! Republicans will never forget what Democrats did to the nomination of Robert Bork, and Tribe would provide a perfect vehicle for revenge.

Tribe is about as far-out liberal as a Harvard professor can get. He was 51 last month, a prolific writer who delights in hurly-burly combat at the bar. He might find it more fun to continue his lucrative private practice, moonlighting in constitutional law, than to go into hibernation at the high court, but White's seat would be hard to decline.

If Clinton decided to make a last-ditch fight for Tribe's nomination, the president would wind up with new enemies in the Senate just as major portions of his legislative program were coming on for action.

Is Tribe worth it? No. Not when such equally qualified constitutional scholars as Professor A.E. Dick Howard of Virginia are waiting in the wings. Howard would be a superb choice. He has impeccable credentials, including a term at Oxford and two years as clerk to Justice Hugo Black. He is, presumably, a Democrat, but he has steered clear of partisan politics. Like Tribe, Howard is a prolific writer, but he ruffles no feathers. His name should be right at the top of Clinton's list.

So the gossip goes in the lunchroom. By general agreement, Judge Arnold would be Clinton's first choice for a vacancy on the high court. A native of Texarkana, Arnold will be 57 in March. He too has impeccable academic credentials (Harvard and Yale), plus a clerkship under Justice William Brennan, plus 13 years in private practice, plus a time on Capitol Hill as legislative aide to Sen. Dale Bumpers, plus 14 years on the federal bench. He's a sure thing.

All this, of course, is nothing more than gab-gab-gab over the liver and onions. Blackmun may not retire; White may go for the longevity record. In an era of good feeling, President Clinton at some point could decide to nominate a nominal Republican.

This has happened before, but it hasn't happened often. President Lincoln, a Republican, named Democrat Stephen Field to the Supreme Court. Franklin Roosevelt promoted Justice Harlan Stone to become chief justice. The Democrat Harry Truman chose Republican Sen. Harold Burton. Eisenhower, a Republican, named William Brennan, an inactive Democrat. ("Worst mistake I ever made," said Ike.) More recently, President Nixon nominated Lewis Powell, a non-partisan Democrat from Virginia. If there are others, the instances escape me.

Truth to tell, prospective appointments to the Supreme Court are of less concern to conservatives than appointments to the district and circuit courts. We troglodytes have six reasonably reliable justices on the high court now. In the 1991-92 term, the Supreme Court decided only 109 cases by written opinion. The action is down below.

George Bush will leave office in January with exactly 100 vacancies — 16 on the circuit courts, 84 on the district courts. Fifty or 60 lower-court judges die or retire every year. Clinton and his activist wife Hillary will find themselves, judicially speaking, in high cotton.

For good or ill, we may anticipate that Clinton will follow in the course set by George Washington 200 years ago. Washington named 10 men to the high court, stout Federalists one and all. When Jefferson's turn came, he appointed Livingston and Johnson, good anti-Federalists. Jackson, a Democrat, named Democrats. Grant, a Republican, chose four fine Republicans, including two who voted on the legal tender issue just as he wanted them to vote.

Lyndon Johnson named 122 district judges, all but seven of them Democrats. Nixon was as partisan — 166 Republicans, 13 Democrats. Carter, Reagan and Bush followed suit — 93 percent from their own party.

This is how the game is played. On Nov. 3 Republicans lost the White House. Over the next four years they will lose one-third of the federal judges. So it goes, boys, so it goes. Gosh, it was fun while it lasted.

A quick guide to the South

Rheta Grimsley Johnson

Two Southerners are about to be in control of the White House and the Free World, which means the inevitable questions and misconceptions about the South will rise again.

As a public service for non-Southern readers, I offer this quick-reference guide to the South. What follows are the 10 most-often asked questions about the nation's most misunderstood region.

1. What are Southern Baptists?

The Southern Baptist Church is the largest denomination in the region. Both Bill Clinton and Al Gore are practicing Southern Baptists, as are most ambitious Southern politicians and all Rotary Club members.

Southern Baptists believe in immersion, fried chicken, big church weddings and singing hymns off-key and loudly. Former President Jimmy Carter introduced the denomination to the rest of the nation, which at first suspicioned Southern Baptists were pew-jumping, snake-handling fanatics who spoke in tongues (See: Ronald Reagan).

In reality, Southern Baptist services are rather staid and boring, except during summer revival season.

2. How can a truly civilized people live with mosquitoes, snakes and bugs the size of Buicks?

While it is true that approximately 89 percent of a Southerner's life is spent looking for the fly swatter, many remarkable inventions have come from the pestilent atmosphere of the South: the screened porch, the bug-zapper, aerosol repellent, gum boots and funeral home fans.

3. What is an armadillo?

An armadillo is a South American burrowing mammal with a body encased in bony plates, the only known species born dead on the side of the road.

4. What is kudzu?

Kudzu is an exotic-looking vine imported from the Orient by Auburn University scientists to combat erosion. Its hearty, prolific nature was soon put to other use, among them the camouflaging of rusting automobiles, dilapidated barns and defunct outhouses (See: Lady Byrd Johnson).

Kudzu quickly became more of a problem than a cure, however, when its remarkable rejuvenating abilities caused its incessant use as metaphor in Southern literature.

5. Is Southeastern Conference football more of a religion than a game?

While it is true that Southern football fans take the game seriously, the incidence of suicide after games between inner-state rivals is down somewhat in recent years. It also has been several seasons since disgruntled University of Alabama fans hurtled bricks through the athletic office windows at that school (See: Bear Bryant, death of . . . .).

6. Do all Southern males drive pickups?

No, Southern males drive a wide variety of vehicles, just as males elsewhere do. They drive Volvos, BMWs, Accords, Saturns, etc. Gun racks now come in all sizes.

7. Are Southern women obsessed by their looks and preoccupied with beauty contests and home makeup parties?

Only a fringe group of unreconstructed Southern women still believe the way to a man's heart is through Mary Kay. An increasing number of progressive Southern females use Clinique.

8. Is Shelby Foote your typical Southern gentleman and scholar?

Yes, especially when he is on national TV and laying it on thick.

9. Is "Gone With the Wind" required reading in public schools in the South?

Of course not. Books that contain profanity are not considered suitable fare for younger readers (See: Southern Baptists).

10. Is it true that most Southerners make an annual pilgrimage to Elvis's Memphis home, Graceland, at the anniversary of his birth or death?

Absolutely not. The crowds you see at the Graceland wailing wall on television are from mobile home parks in Trenton and Peoria. We can go any day of the year and usually avoid the anniversary crowds.

Drooling babies a bother

Babies are the weirdest things.

I'll have to admit, I've never been a big baby fan. I don't like babies in the restaurant. I don't like babies in the movies.

Oh, I'll admit they can be interesting to observe. But I just don't have any of those nesting hormones when it comes to babies.

Give me a good five-year-old kid any day. That's a great age. You tell them stuff, and they believe you.

"There I was, trapped between a Tyrannosaurus Rex and the base of this cliff. I couldn't go in the cave because the ankylosaurus was in there (kids know the name of every dinosaur — I think the names leave the brain at puberty. I remember knowing hundreds, now I know six).

Anyway, as usual, I digress.

That'd make a good epitaph for me — "I'd be alive now, but I digressed."

Now where was I?

Oh yeah. Babies.

The other night, a baby drooled on me. The mother, a good friend of mine, was doing one of those baby airplane things, where you hold the toddler by the waist and they hold their hands out.

Mind you, this woman's IQ is easily 30 points above normal. And here she is, flying her baby around the room going, "BBbbrrrrrrrrooooooooooooommmmmmmmmmm. Brrrrrrooooooooom."

Babies are the weirdest things.

So this baby dribbles on me (as babies are wont to do) and I reacted a little. I pulled my shirt away from my body and I must have had an expression like I'd just found a tarantula swimming in a blob of nuclear waste on my shoulder, because all conversation stopped.

"Gary, you've had a dog lick you in the face, and that doesn't bother you," my wife said.

Yeah. But it's like, the closer something gets to human, the more I don't like it's saliva.

I mean, if the kid's father had spit on me, I'd be really upset.

Don't get me wrong. I don't actively dislike babies in any way.

They're interesting, as I've said. For instance, watching how they just hunker down and concentrate on deciphering a golf ball, is hilarious.

But for my money, a five-year-old is a much better companion.

"Davie. When you finish making that peanut butter sandwich, grab me a soda out of the fridge and I'll tell you about when I was a Mutant Ninja Turtle."

Adios.

Fourth ranked Aggies rally by Cougars

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The Texas Aggies honed their catch-up skills early in the season. Now they're glad they did.

The fourth-ranked Aggies came from behind for the sixth time this year Thursday night with a 21-point third quarter on touchdown runs of 10, 9 and 4 yards by Greg Hill to rally past the Houston Cougars 38-30.

Trailing 17-10 at the half, the Aggies (10-0, 5-0 in SWC games) charged to a 31-17 lead in the third quarter and then beat back the Cougars' fourth-quarter challenge to keep pace with No. 1 Miami (8-0) and No. 2 Alabama (9-0) as the only unbeaten and untied major colleges.

"I've said all along, those situations would help us down the road," safety Patrick Bates said. "I think it really helped us today, being down and having to come back. We knew we'd done it before and we could do it again."

Hill's touchdown runs were boosted by the improved A&M passing attack, led by freshman Corey Pullig, who completed 17 of 28 passes for 272 yards. A key pass completion preceded each of Hill's touchdown runs.

"I'm really glad we've been in this situation before," Hill said. "It helped us in the second half tonight. We came out and played like we knew we could win."

The Aggies won their 19th consecutive regular season game, interrupted only by a 10-2 loss to Florida State in the 1992 Cotton Bowl.

Jimmy Klingler threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Freddie Gilbert, Lamar Smith ran one yard for another score and Trace Craft kicked a 32-yard field goal for Houston's 17-10 halfetime lead.

A&M resorted to trickery for its first touchdown, a 25-yard run by left guard Eric Harrison on a "fumblerooski" play. Harrison picked up the ball and ran around right end for the score.

Terry Venetoulias kicked a 35-yard field goal in the second quarter.

On the second play of the third quarter, Pullig fired a pass to Tony Harrison, who split between double coverage on a 36-yard catch to the Houston 42.

Venetoulias kicked a 35-yard field goal during the drive, but a roughing the kicker penalty against Houston's John W. Brown allowed Slocum to retract the field goal and go for the touchdown, which came two plays later on Hill's 10-yard run.

That knotted the score at 17-17, and two more Hill runs gave the Aggies the lead for good. A 32-yard pass to Harrison and a 39-yarder to Brian Mitchell helped set up each Hill TD scamper.

"It came at the right time," Tony Harrison said of the Aggie passing attack. "They were stacking eight and nine people against our run. It didn't surprise me how well Corey played.

"Ever since he's been the starter, they've been saying we'd pass more. That really helps all the receivers. Most games we just go out and block."

The Cougars (3-6, 1-4), are assured of a losing season with games remaining against Texas Tech and Rice.

Texas A&M University wide receiver Brian Mitchell (18) gathers in a pass that covered 39 yards in the third quarter Thursday in Houston. Defending on the play is University of Houston Steve Harris (23). Texas A&M beat Houston 38-30.

Lady Steers runner prepared for state cross country meet

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Back when she was playing games in junior high PE classes, Evy Perez sensed she had special talents as a runner.

A few years later the Big Spring High School junior gave in to those instincts and now finds herself in the state cross country meet in Georgetown Saturday.

Perez earned the berth by finishing seventh at the regional meet last week in Lubbock. In doing so she ran a school record 12 minutes, 30.30 seconds. It was no easy feat since the course in the event, at Mae-Simons Park, is one of the tougher two-mile courses around.

Perez didn't start runnning competitively until her freshmen year. She then just ran track, competing in the 800, 1,600 and 3,200 meter runs. She said track coach Randy Britton recruited her to run cross country in her sophomore year. "Coach Britton called me up and asked me to run," she said. "I was in off-season, I decided to get in cross country because I knew Elisabeth (teammate Lopez).

With the encouragement of Lopez, Perez gradully got better in her first year. At the district meet that season she finished sixth, running a 14:51.23. The Lady Steers qualifed to regional as a team. Perez ran a 13:24 for 24th place. "I was a little scared, I didn't know the course, the others did," she said.

Big Spring Lady Steers junior Evy Perez will be competing in the state cross country meet in Georgetown Saturday.

This season Perez continued to be one of the leaders for a strong Big Spring girls squad. At the district meet two weeks ago, Perez said she ran a bad tactical race and finished fourth, running a 14:14.31.

But she made up for it at regional last week. Unleashing a strong finishing kick, Perez passed five runners to finish seventh and gain a berth at state. Only the top 10 runners qualify for state.

"Elisabeth and I were running together, talking to each other, telling each other we could do it. Suddenly everything opened up, I went blank and I had all this energy," she explained about her kick. "I remember I passed about four people, I got up to sixth place and I was beginning to think I could pass the fifth, fourth and third runners. I was sort of scared because I had never run that fast. I was thinking 'What am I supposed to do?'"

Perez has set a realistic goal for state. "I just want to be in the top 10. I'll have no regrets if I don't make it, it'll just make me try harder. I try to do the best in everything I do. This is just secondary, education is what counts," said Perez, an honors student.

"I want to stay at the top of my class, take a year off after I graduate and then attend Brown University. I really haven't thought about it that much, but I think I'd like to be a doctor or a lawyer. Maybe," she said with a slight smile, "I'll be a doctor and a lawyer."

Why not? So far her instincts have been pretty good.

Steve Howe gets another chance at baseball

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Steve Howe has another last chance in baseball.

The 34-year-old reliever, who in June became the first player banned from baseball for life because of drugs, was reinstated Thursday by arbitrator George Nicolau.

But Nicolau said if Howe fails again, he will be banned for life.

Howe, 34, was suspended by then-commissioner Fay Vincent following the left-hander's seventh incident related to drugs or alcohol. Howe was with the New York Yankees at the time of the suspension, which followed a guilty plea in U.S. District Court in Missoula, Mont., to a misdemeanor charge of attempting to buy a gram of cocaine.

Love leading Kapalua golf

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

KAPALUA, Hawaii — A chance meeting may have improved Davis Love's chances of winning another golf tournament.

On a flight earlier this week from Los Angeles to Hawaii en route to compete in the Kapalua International, Love unexpectedly ran into his instructor, Jack Lumpkin.

"I told him the things I was having problems with," Love said Thursday, "and he told me to do this and to do that, mainly improving my grip. Sure enough, it clicked."

The in-flight lessons helped Love to a 6-under-par 65 and a share of the lead after Thursday's opening round of the Kapalua tournament. Also at 65 was Mike Hulbert, who defeated Love last year at Kapalua with a birdie on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff. It was the third time Love had finished second in this tournament.

"I enjoy this tournament because Mark Rolfing (tournament founder and chairman) has been real good to me," Love said. "He got me into a tournament early in my career where I was able to make some money, and I always feel that I owe Mark something for getting my career started."

No year of Love's career has been more profitable than this one.

Aussie upsets Ivan Lendl

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANTWERP, Belgium — Five-time winner Ivan Lendl was soundly beaten by Australian Mark Woodforde 6-4, 6-2 Thursday in the biggest upset at this year's European Community Championship.

Three-time winner John McEnroe also lost, beaten in straight sets by Czechoslovak Petr Korda 6-4, 6-4.

Top-seeded Jim Courier cruised along, getting past Spain's Javier Sanchez 6-3, 6-3 to join Woodforde and Korda in the quarterfinals of the $1.11 million event.

Spain's Carlos Costa was another seed to go Thursday, falling victim to German Michael Stich 6-4, 6-4.

Sweden's Magnus Larsson reached the quarterfinals in a three-sets struggle in which he beat Dutch qualifier Tom Nijssen 4-6, 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-1). Larsson will play Woodforde Friday.

McEnroe kept Korda in check during the first eight games but served two double faults for the vital breakthrough to lose serve and the first set. From then on, Korda's agility and quickness dominated proceedings.

Junior varsity Steers end season with tie

HERALD STAFF REPORT

SWEETWATER — Dustin Waters threw five yards to Tedric McCalister and Tony Rodriquez ran in the two point conversion with two seconds left to give the Big Spring junior varsity a 22-22 tie with Sweetwater Thursday.

The game ended the Steers' season with and undefeated district mark of 5-0-1 and 7-2-1 overall.

Neither team led by more than eight points as the lead changed hands three times in the game played at the Mustang Bowl. Sweetwater scored and made a two-point conversion with 59 seconds left in the game to take a 22-14 lead. Big Spring drove 60 yards in the last minute to keep its district record unscathed.

"The kids showed a lot of character and a lot of poise," JV coach Ricky Long said. "This is a great bunch. They got better every week."

Rodriquez had a five-yard run in the first quarter and Manuel Cervantes ran in the conversion to give the Steers an 8-6 advantage. In the third quarter Waters and McCalister hooked up for a 20-yard TD pass to tie the score at 14-14.

SWEETWATER 16
BIG SPRING FRESHMEN A TEAM 14

Sweetwater scored a touchdown with three minutes left to give the Steers A team a season-ending record of 3-7 Thursday at Blankenship Field. Daniel Franks scored two touchdowns to give Big Spring 6-2 and 14-2 leads before Sweetwater's game-ending tally.

Franks scores came on an eight-yard pass from Bucky Crenshaw in the first quarter and a five-yard run in the third.

BIG SPRING FRESHMEN B TEAM 6
SWEETWATER 0

The B team avenged an earlier 36-0 loss to Sweetwater at Blankenship Field Thursday. Manuel Lopez scored the game's only touchdown with a five-yard run in the second quarter.

"It was an incredible turnaround," freshmen coach Gary Simmons said. "They played hard and saved the best for last."

Shaq works Magic on Bullets

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Washington Bullets shouldn't be shocked at what Shaq did to them.

While the Bullets were searching for someone to slow down the NBA's top draft choice, Shaquille O'Neal was scoring 31 points and pulling down 21 rebounds Thursday night. He led the Orlando Magic to a 127-100 rout.

"He's a good player," Pervis Ellison said after trying in vain to guard the 7-foot-1, 303-pound rookie. "Anytime you have that kind of size, strength and ability, it's going to be tough. He's also got a combination of strength and speed. There's not a whole lot of players who have that kind of package."

The Magic had a strong package to go with O'Neal.

Point guard Scott Skiles had 14 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists, his second career triple-double. Dennis Scott's 27 points came mostly from long range as Washington tried to double-team O'Neal in the middle. Scott hit 11 of 20 attempts, including four 3-pointers.

Nick Anderson also benefited from O'Neal's attracting attention, scoring 25 points.

Washington tried Ellison, Charles Jones and Tom Gugliotta — or any combination of the three — on O'Neal. No good.

"I couldn't believe they put Gugliotta on me for a little while," O'Neal said. "He was a guard in college. No guard is going to stop me.

"I told myself if I don't do anything else, I want to rebound. That's all they ask me to do here. Any scoring is gravy."

In other games, it was Cleveland 126, Golden State 122 in double overtime; Minnesota 88, New Jersey; Phoenix 102, Utah 97; Detroit 95, Miami 88; Atlanta 104, San Antonio 97; and Seattle 114, the Los Angeles Lakers 102.

Cavaliers 126, Warriors 122, 2 OT

At Oakland, the Cavaliers won a multiple overtime game for the first time since Jan. 29, 1981, when they beat the Warriors 154-153 in four extra periods.

They didn't do it with 3-pointers, missing all 14 — a record for futility against the Warriors. Mark Price was 0 for 7, a Cavaliers record and one short of the NBA mark.

Mike Sanders scored Cleveland's last four points for the win.

Tim Hardaway scored 35 points and Billy Owens added 30 for the Warriors.

"The defense was real good down the stretch," Cavs coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We didn't give them anything easy. We wanted to go to Hot Rod a lot, but we posted up Mike a bit, and he scored for us."

Miami Heat center Rony Seikaly (4) shoots over the pressure defense of Detroit Pistons' Terry Mills (right), Joe Dumars (4) and Isiah Thomas during fourth quarter action Thursday night at the Palace in Auburn Hills, Mich.

Timberwolves 88, Nets 84

At East Rutherford, N.J., Doug West scored 24 points and Chuck Person hit a clutch 17-footer with seven seconds to play, ruining the home coaching debut of Chuck Daly.

Minnesota built a 19-point lead, then almost blew it as Drazen Petrovic led the Nets back. Petrovic finished with 27 points and Derrick Coleman added 19 points and 19 rebounds for New Jersey.

"Some teams react differently when they are at home," he said. "We should have been more fired up for the game."

Suns 102, Jazz 97

At Salt Lake City, Charles Barkley scored 25 points and Cedric Ceballos had 24 as Phoenix held the Jazz to just 37 percent shooting. The Jazz, 37-4 at home last season, have lost their first two home games this year.

Karl Malone scored 32 points for the Jazz and John Stockton added 18.

"We've played very good defense the last two games," said Barkley, who grabbed 14 rebounds. "But this game doesn't mean anything. It's the third game of the year. All it means is we were fortunate to come in here and get a win."

Pistons 95, Heat 88

At Auburn Hills, Mich., the Pistons' strong backcourt spoiled the return of John Salley to the Palace. Joe Dumars scored eight of his 29 points in the fourth quarter and Isiah Thomas had six of his 14 in the period.

Salley, who played six full seasons with the Pistons, including their two NBA championship years, was traded to Miami during the offseason. He was annoyed at his team's performance Thursday.

"You've got to be able to play 48 minutes," Salley said. "They were tired, and we just let them hang around and hang around."

Hawks 104, Spurs 97

At San Antonio, Dominique Wilkins scored 30 points, 11 in the final eight minutes, and Travis Mays had 19 for Atlanta.

The Spurs were paced by David Robinson's 20 points and 19 from Antoine Carr. Sean Elliott and Lloyd Daniels contributed 16 apiece. But San Antonio was 1 for 16 from 3-point range, with Elliott making one of his six attempts and Daniels going 0 for 5.

SuperSonics 114, Lakers 102

At Seattle, an 18-3 rin the final four minutes put away Seattle's third straight victory. Gary Payton scored seven points and Shawn Kemp five in the run for the unbeaten Sonics, who outscored the Lakers 34-18 in the fourth quarter.

Derrick McKey led Seattle with 27 points. Kemp added 19. Sedale Threatt scored 25 points for the Lakers and Byron Scott had 19.

St. Petersburg files suit against league

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The city of St. Petersburg and the group that wanted to move the San Francisco Giants to Florida filed suit as Tampa's battle for a major league team shifted to the courts.

The complaint, filed in Florida Circuit Court in Pinellas County, seeks a declaratory judgment invalidating letters the group and city signed promising not to sue major league baseball, its clubs and employees.

The suit named the National League, NL president Bill White, executive council chairman Bud Selig, the commissioner's office, major league baseball and all NL clubs except the Giants as defendants.

Eagles DE asks for free agency

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Attorneys for Philadelphia defensive lineman Reggie White and several hundred other players asked a federal judge to declare them free agents after the season.

White was joined as a plaintiff by Pittsburgh linebacker Hardy Nickerson, New Orleans quarterback Mike Buck and former Seattle and Los Angeles Raiders defensive back Van McElroy. If Judge David Doty rules that White has a valid class action lawsuit, as many as 605 players who are in the final year of their contracts could be declared free agents as of Feb. 1, 1993.

The request comes in the aftermath of the Freeman McNeil lawsuit, in which a Minneapolis jury said in September that the league's Plan B free agency system was a violation of antitrust laws.

Majors to step down at Tennessee

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Knoxville News-Sentinel and The (Nashville) Tennessean reported today that Tennessee has reached an agreement to buy out the remaining two years of Johnny Majors' contract, bringing an end to the coach's 16-year tenure at his alma mater.

An official announcement is expected either today in Knoxville or Saturday in Memphis, where the Vols play Memphis State. The newspapers said the 57-year-old Majors would be replaced by offensive coordinator Phillip Fulmer, who guided the team to a 3-0 record to begin the season while Majors recuperated from heart surgery.

Huskies won't have to forfeit games

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Washington will not have to forfeit any of the eight games that Billy Joe Hobert played in this season, a Pacific-10 Conference committee recommended.

The junior quarterback was declared ineligible Tuesday after an investigation by the Pac-10 and Washington found he had taken $50,000 in loans from the father-in-law of a friend last spring with no collateral.

Bowe tries to dethrone Holyfield

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Another ghetto kid off the mean streets of Brownsville tries to grab the brass ring.

Riddick Bowe, the last of 13 children raised by his factory-worker mother in a Brooklyn housing project, gets a shot at boxing's biggest prize when he meets champion Evander Holyfield tonight for the heavyweight title.

The last youngster from the Brownsville district who used boxing as a ticket out of the ghetto to the top was Mike Tyson, who created other problems for himself and now is serving time for rape in Indiana.

"He would have knocked out Evander Holyfield in one or two rounds," Bowe said of Tyson. "I'm going to do the job that he didn't do."

Holyfield is guaranteed $5 million for the scheduled 12-round bout. Bowe is guaranteed $3 million. Both fighters also have percentage deals.

The 25-year-old Bowe, who carries a 31-0 record with 27 knockouts into the bout against Holyfield (28-0, 22 knockouts), went to the same grammar school as Tyson.

"All I remember about him from those days is that he was big for his age, very tough and always carried a big bag of cookies around with him," Bowe said of Tyson, who lost the heavyweight crown when Buster Douglas scored a stunning knockout of him in Japan.

Tyson, meanwhile, sent along his best wishes to Bowe in his fight against Holyfield, telling a newspaper reporter by phone from Indiana that if Bowe wins the title, it would be good for Brownsville and good for showing that people can make it out of the ghetto.

Bowe said that he's dedicating the fight to Tyson and the people of Brownsville, among others.

Bowe, who hits with explosive power but whose determination has been questioned, appears the toughest challenger faced yet by Holyfield, who has been cast as a determined, dedicated fighter who does not have overpowering talent.

While tonight's bout is rated about even, Holyfield was favored in his three previous defenses. Since knocking out a bloated Douglas in October of 1990 to take the title, Holyfield has fought two fighters well past their prime — George Foreman and Larry Holmes — and unheralded Bert Cooper.

Holyfield had to go the distance to beat Foreman and Holmes, both in their 40s, and was knocked down by Cooper before rallying to stop the challenger in the seventh round.

Although he won those fights, Holyfield lost credibility as champion. He believes he can regain some of that respect with a victory over Bowe.

"I didn't get any credit for beating Larry Holmes or George Foreman," said the 30-year-old Holyfield. "They didn't really fight to win. Riddick Bowe wants to win, not just go the distance. When people say, 'You're fighting a tough fight,' it feels good. When my opponents don't get credibility, it takes away from my work."

Bowe takes some significant physical advantages into the fight. At 6-foot-5 and 235 pounds, he is three inches taller and 30 pounds heavier than the champion, at 205 his lightest since he fought as a cruiserweight in the 190-pound class.

Weed and Seed program resulting in few changes

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Six months into a government Weed and Seed project to clean up Henrietta Goff's blighted neighborhood, there's still more weeding to do. And the seeding seems a long way off.

"I don't see too many changes," the 69-year-old widow said. A resident for 32 years, she said gunfire still is frequent, and some of her neighbors have been robbed. Youths continue to sell drugs on street corners.

The neighborhood is part of a $9 million federal plan to weed criminals from 20 inner-city areas, then seed the areas with social aid to reverse urban decay.

Mrs. Goff's neighborhood used to consist of tidy two- and three-story homes along safe, tree-lined streets. Now, boarded-up houses dot Park Avenue, known as Drug Alley.

Police are closing some of the drug houses and arresting criminals. But the initial $200,000 in federal money allotted Kansas City as a demonstration project buys little.

The money has purchased police vehicles and paid for overtime that allows four extra officers per shift to join patrols in the 50-block midtown target area.

The Bush administration asked for nearly $500 million more to expand the nationwide program, but the bill got tangled in a pre-election snag after Congress attached a tax increase.

President-elect Clinton hasn't announced his plans for the program. Although the package had bipartisan support and may be revived, some say it's being pushed too fast.

"On the basis of past experience, it's pouring money down the toilet," said Thomas Carroll, a criminologist at the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

"They're calling for $500 million without waiting to see if (the pilot program) is effective. On paper, it sounds good, but there's no provision to collect or analyze results."

Kansas City authorities tick off statistics they say show results: 29 weapons confiscated, 24 instances of narcotics being recovered and 86 people arrested. Thirteen of some 80 suspected drug houses identified at the start of the program have been closed.

Serious crime, which had been growing by 57 percent a year in the Kansas City target area, has been slowed to 45 percent since the crackdown started, according to police records.

"There is still a lot of violent crime," admitted Capt. John Hamilton. "The subjective evaluation of officers is that we're starting to see a decline in activity in the area, but whether that means they're just going to another area, we're not sure."

Mayor Emanuel Cleaver, a strong supporter of the program, agreed that crime has moved to other parts of the city but said the effort is better than doing nothing at all.

"It does not get at the causes of crime, but it does fight crime," he said. "What we have to do when we don't have large amounts in federal assistance is concentrate all our resources on one spot. It keeps criminals on the run."

U.S. Attorney General William Barr, whose office coordinates Weed and Seed, has declared it effective.

"The success of Weed and Seed is measured by whether a community feels safe, not by numbers" of arrests, said Kristen Gear, a Justice Department spokeswoman. "From our standpoint, the general feeling is this is working."

Indeed, some residents, including Jannette Robinson, president of a Kansas City neighborhood association, say dealers are getting caught or moving on.

Others on the streets disagree.

"If anything, it's gotten worse," said Elvis E. Gibson, a resident of the target area and owner of a sign-painting business. He said the addition of four officers doesn't match the magnitude of the problem, and many of those arrested are just released on probation.

Meanwhile, about $100,000 is expected to be available soon for two seeding programs. One will offer a haven for children after school. The other will use offenders on probation or parole to help turn former drug houses into homes.

"We have paroled dealers come back to their neighborhood, so people can see the once high-and-mighty drug dealer picking up trash and helping to improve the area," said Tim Becker, a spokesman in the Jackson County prosecutor's office. "It's a nice turnaround."

U.S. mail carrier Percy Quarles walks along his route in one of Kansas City's east side neighborhoods recently. The neighborhood is part of a federal experiment called Weed and Seed, a plan to "weed" criminals from inner-city areas and then "seed" them with social aid to reverse urban decay. Quarles has delivered the mail in this neighborhood for 25 years.

No help for stranded kitten

By BOB GOODMAN
Thomson News Service

EASTON, Pa. — Shadow, a 6-month-old black kitten, knew how to climb up a tree.

He just didn't know how to get down.

His owner called one agency after another — including the police, the fire department, the electric company, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals — no one would come to help them rescue Shadow from the tree.

And when help finally did arrive, rescue efforts went tragically awry.

In a local park last week, Shadow scaled a thin, limbless ash tree, climbing 80 feet up.

"He picked the worst tree in the whole woods to go up," said Bill Rath, the cat's owner.

Rath, who lives near the park, said his uncle gave him Shadow just four months ago. He thought the cat could keep his dog, Brandy, company while Rath worked during the day.

Rath first heard Shadow crying Friday night and spotted him up in the tree, but he couldn't coax him down. He decided to try again in the morning, but he kept checking on Shadow all night long.

"I'm out there every 15 minutes and through most of the night. I'd holler to make sure he was still there, and he would answer," Rath said.

By Monday morning, Rath's mother and his two aunts arrived, calling every agency they thought might be able to help. "Everyone we called said 'I'm sorry, we don't do that,'" said Rath's aunt, Margaret Reese.

Meanwhile, Shadow just kept looking down at them sadly from above. "We would talk to him and he would just meow and meow. He was pleading for someone to help," she said.

Finally, the family found some sympathetic souls. First came Mark Wolfe, owner of Wolfe's Tree Service in Phillipsburg, N.J.

Wolfe says he's often called in to rescue cats, but this time, the tree was just too flimsy to climb and too tall for his cherry picker.

"That cat in the South Side knew why people were under that tree," Wolfe said. "He was putting his claws out, reaching out, like, 'Come get me.'"

Wolfe left the family with numbers of other tree cutters to call. Next to arrive was Kevin Wallaesa, a city highway supervisor and a friend of the family.

After his efforts to climb another tree and toss a rope around the ash tree failed, Wallaesa called in highway foreman Donald Bachman. They couldn't see many alternatives and wondered whether the cat would survive another freezing night.

The family gave Bachman the go-ahead to cut the tree down. Using a chainsaw, Bachman sawed the tree so it would fall against another tree.

But Shadow was thrown, and they all knew right away he was injured — bad.

The family brought Shadow to a nearby animal hospital, but the next day the staff told them the bad news — Shadow had fractured his spine.

Aggie frats rescue cars stranded on railroad tracks

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRYAN — Members of the Zeta Psi fraternity at Texas A&M don't really wear capes with a big "S" emblazoned on the chest.

They just seem like Supermen as they dash, with increasing regularity, from their frat house to rescue cars stopped on the railroad track with a train bearing down on them.

The most recent heroism came late Monday, when a train horn sounded down the boulevard as a carload of frightened high school students fled from their car, leaving it to be crushed by the locomotive.

Then, appearing as if from nowhere, 30 Zeta Psi fraternity brothers came running down 27th Street. The Texas A&M students circled the 1965 Mustang, which was stuck on the tracks, and moved the vehicle along the tracks to a cross street where they could move the car from harm's way.

The fraternity moved last April into their new house, which is about 50 feet from the dark tracks, which occasionally are mistaken for a road.

Last spring, a car turned onto the tracks and got stuck when three tires went flat. Out of the Zeta Psi house barreled a dozen fraternity brothers, who lifted the car off the tracks, moved it to the side and watched the train rush past while the ground shook beneath them.

Several weeks later, another driver got trapped on the tracks and a fraternity member — who knew by the train schedule that one wouldn't be by for a while — grabbed a jack and rescued the car by himself.

The tracks run straight down the middle of a residential neighborhood and are bordered by cement curbs and a narrow, unlit road on both sides.

Hamilton Rothaus, a sophomore economics major, said the fraternity has security guards at their parties, not only to keep the peace but to warn drivers of the danger from the tracks.

But guards can't always be there, and the fraternity members do have to go to class, so Zeta Psi house manager Bill Cozart, a construction science major, called Bryan City Hall earlier this week.

"We had to do something," Cozart said. "We know there's a possibility that someone could be killed out there."

Smoking

The proposal is designed to protect smokers and nonsmokers, Harris said. "It was a compromise, clear and simple."

It would require retail businesses and those in charge of enclosed public places to designate areas as smoking — according to demonstrated "reasonable" need — or non-smoking and hang appropriate signs and provide ashtrays. Required non-smoking areas would include cashier areas and waiting lines.

Other businesses would have to accommodate all nonsmokers but no expenses or major construction would be required.

Exceptions include bars, tobacco shops and private functions in private places.

Violations would be a misdemeanor offense punishable by fines that accrue daily.

The council-appointed committee of nine members met four times, about once a week prior to the public meeting, Harris said. At least one smoker attended every meeting. Seven committee members were at the public meeting, including Marting.

"I was real disappointed in the turnout," Martin said of 37 who attended.

assaults including threats of physical harm."

Despite this, the study said U.S. violence is not the worst it has ever been. The homicide rate peaked in the early 1930s and then dropped for the next 30 years, the study said. The rate rose again between 1979 and 1981, then declined, only to rise again in the late 1980s.

"Historical data suggests that certain cities may have experienced still higher homicide rates during the 19th century," the report said.

Both victims and perpetrators of violent crime are more likely to be male and come from ethnic or racial minorities, the study said. The most likely to commit violence are men in the age range of 25 to 29. In the majority of assaults, rapes and homicides, the perpetrator was an acquaintance of the victim.

Homicide rates are five times higher among blacks than among whites, and the rate among Native Americans is almost double that of the rest of the population.

Victims most often are minorities, with blacks 41 percent and Hispanics 32 percent more likely to be victims than are whites.

The cost to society of violence is high, the report said. It estimated these average costs per violent incident: rape, $54,000; robbery, $19,200, and assault, $16,000. This loss includes a value given to pain, suffering, psychological damage and the loss in quality of life.

Putting more people in prison for longer periods of time has had little effect on the rate of violence, the report said. Average prison time per violent crime tripled between 1975 and 1989, the report said, but the rate of violent crime still increased after 1985.

Instead, the study advocated certainty of punishment. "A 50 percent increase in the probability of incarceration would prevent twice as much violent crime as a 50 percent increase in the average term of incarceration."

Among its recommendations, the National Research Council committee suggested studies of better ways to disrupt illegal drug and firearm markets; improved statistical studies of violence and a search for markers in the brain that signal a potential for violence.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus recently protested a government study of violence, alleging that the research was seeking genetic markers for violence in an attempt to link race to violence.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan replied that some of the research would be biological but denied the government is looking for a genetic marker that would indicate one individual is more violence-prone than another.

"The very idea of a 'crime gene' is simplistic and misleading," Sullivan said. "Genes do not code for those kinds of things."

The National Research Council Committee on Law and Justice conducted the study. The council is the research arm of the National Academy of Sciences, a private organization of scientists chartered by Congress.

Speaking of good speech

Tall Talkers ready to use their skills at area club meetings

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

With 10 members and much enthusiasm, the local "Tall Talkers" Toastmasters group will form a speakers bureau for community groups and organizations seeking speakers for various subjects.

The group also works toward doubling their numbers giving them an edge for entering participants in district and regional levels of competition, said one of the group's vice presidents.

"We're trying to build up our club," said Scott McLaughlin, education vice president. District competition kicked off in late October.

Regarding the speakers bureau, he said, "We can draw from sources for any topic and design speeches specifically for that civic organization."

'We can draw from sources for any topic and design speeches specifically for that civic organization.'

Scott McLaughlin
Toastmasters member

Toastmasters International arms members with communication skills through trial and evaluation of speeches on various topics.

Speaking before a group is high on the list of nerve wracking experiences for most adults, he said.

"We build on skills to improve prepared and spontaneous speaking," McLaughlin said. "Each one of us has something to offer."

Members evaluate articulation, enunciation, intonation, pitch as well as the "ah" count.

"You're evaluated in such a positive way that you're really nurtured. (The manner in which speeches are given is) informal and impromptu — not like reading a speech but more like sitting in your living room and talking," he said. "Effective speech evaluation requires constructive feedback on the speakers, not judgements."

Steps members follow to improve communication skills include:

- speaking with conviction
- organizing speech
- vocal variety
- skill with words
- persuasive speaking
- knowledgeable speaking.

Member Lanelle Witt said besides increasing speaking confidence, the group makes room for both facts and opinions during Table Topics (each member speaks spontaneously on a selected current event).

"You go at your own pace (for improving speech qualities)," she said. "You learn more about the members and develop an interest in the topics discussed."

During each meeting, members are assigned positions like "topic master, general evaluator, 'ah' counter, speaker 1 & 2 and timer/grammarian."

Topics the local group have discussed include freedom of speech, the state lottery, the presidential election, violence in rap music and AIDS victims in sports events.

The group's remaining officers are Carl Johansen, president; Dene Sheppard, public relations vice president; and Donna Jackson, secretary/treasurer. Local Toastmasters meet at 6:45 a.m. on Tuesdays at the Howard County Library.

Coahoma's Senior Center Project Group met Monday, November 1st, rather than their regular time of Tuesday, election day. Twenty three seniors enjoyed a covered dish luncheon at noon at the Community Center. Special guests were Bob and Lil Blassingame from Big Spring.

Plans for a Garage Sale in January or February were discussed but no firm date was set. A White Elephant Gift exchange was planned for the first Tuesday in December as a Christmas party.

President Jean Wynn read a poem for November "How to tell when you're going to have a rotten day" and things to be thankful for were related by each person in attendance, such as being thankful for the times that we live in and being thankful for all of the many privileges we enjoy.

The next Senior Luncheon will be Dec. 1, at the community center. The group also agreed to hold over the same officers as in 1992-being Jean Wynn, chairman; George O'Brient-co-chairman; Secretary, Ruth Mitchel; treasurer, Jerrye Hull.

The Elbow Extension Homemakers Club met in the home of Ruth Morton, Nov. 5. Wanda Lee presided.

Mrs. Morton gave the Devotional: Psalms 136:1. Myrl Soles read the thought: Behold the turtle — he only makes progress when he sticks his neck out. Nine members and one guest answered roll call with: My plans for Thanksgiving.

Extension Agent, Naomi Hunt presented the program: Cholesterol, Triglycerides and Fats — Understanding the puzzle. She said, both high cholesterol and high triglycerides have been identified as controllable risk factors for heart disease. One of the leading causes of high cholesterol and high triglycerides is Americans consume too much fat.

The next meeting will be a Thanksgiving luncheon in the home of Myrl Soles, Nov. 19, Zula will give a book review.

Club honors youth horsemen at banquet

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Howard County Youth Horseman Club gathered Nov. 7 to honor youth and adults that worked hard all year for the group.

Events throughout the year included barrel racing, poles, flags, potato race, straight away barrels, key hole, and goat tying. Several horse shows were sponsored for the membership.

Clinton Harrison gave the invocation at the group's recent banquet. He has been associated with the club for 30 years and today still gives his time to kids.

The Youth Horseman Club is a place where kids can ride their horses and practice whatever they want to. It is a family environment where youth can learn responsibility as well as a sense of pride in what they are doing.

This year the club awarded saddles to the top two overall winners of the year, Lauren Middleton and Randy Mask. On second place for the saddles were Erica Cate and Bandi Barnett.

Other top award winners are as follows:

Second and 3rd place winners, awarded a Duffle Bag with leather monogram plates — Erica Cate, Lindsy Barnett, Bandy Barnett, Lorin Wolf.

Baptist convention takes no stand on Clinton views

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

CORPUS CHRISTI — The Baptist General Convention of Texas has ignored a Fort Worth pastor's demands that President-elect Clinton be reprimanded for his stands on abortion and homosexuals.

W.N. Otwell, pastor of the Heritage Baptist Church, led a small group of protestors in Corpus Christi where convention delegates met this week.

"Bill Clinton needs to be disciplined because he supports sodomy and he is a whoremonger," Otwell, who also leads the God Said Ministries, said Tuesday. "We must stand against him."

The Rev. Richard Maples, convention president, didn't mention the protest to the gathering, however.

Maples said the convention does not have the authority to discipline Clinton, a Southern Baptist, even if it wanted to.

"If he was to be disciplined, any form of discipline of an individual church member is done by the local church," said Maples, adding he was personally satisfied with Clinton's record as a Baptist.

Church briefs

Bake sale for missions

The St. Paul Lutheran Church LWML (Lutheran Women's Missionary League) will host a bake sale Saturday at Big Spring Mall.

The event will be from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. All proceeds will be used for mission projects, locally and in Russia.

One of the congregation's own members, Karen Crandall, is currently doing missionary work in St. Petersburg, Russia, along with five other people associated with the Lutheran Worldwide Mission Program. She is teaching an English language class and two Bible classes in the St. Petersburg public school system.

She is also planning to begin classes in ASL for the deaf and hearing-impaired in that city. St. Paul is eager to be a support and part of Karen's work in Russia, spreading Christianity among the newly liberated Russian people.

Church of England to ordain women

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — The Church of England voted Wednesday to ordain women as priests, risking a schism with a stubborn minority in its pulpits and pews who feel the move contradicts Scripture and tradition.

The vote allows the Church of England to join 12 of the 28 self-governing provinces in the Anglican Communion that already ordain women priests — most of them in the 2.5 million-member Episcopal Church in the United States.

But in Rome, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the vote was a "grave obstacle" to repairing the 16th century split between Roman Catholics and Anglicans.

"The church has been emotionally exhausted over this. Now we can get on with preaching the Gospel," said Cave Bergquist, a chaplain at Trinity College, Cambridge, who was in the crowd awaiting news of the vote outside Church House in central London.

With a two-thirds majority required in each of the three houses of the church's General Synod, the legislation was approved 39-13 by the bishops, 176-74 by the clergy and 169-82 among the laity after a day-long debate.

A switch of just two votes among lay delegates would have blocked the path to priesthood for the church's 1,350 women deacons.

If Parliament and Queen Elizabeth II endorse the decision, as expected, the first woman priest could be ordained in 1994.

"The ordination of women to the priesthood alters not a word in the creeds, the Scriptures, or the faith of our church," said Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey, the spiritual head of the Church of England.

The legislation does not permit women bishops. Also, parishes may refuse to accept a woman as priest, and bishops cannot be compelled to ordain women or accept them as priests in their dioceses.

Following its historic vote, the synod approved severance pay arrangements for any full-time priest who decided to resign rather than accept women.

Some opponents threatened to leave the church. Michael Silver, who was in the crowd outside Church House, said those who did not want the change "have no choice but to rebuild the Church of England from outside."

Bishop David Hope of London said that a split "is a danger, but we have to wait and see how the thing turns out."

"I now have to reflect carefully on the decision and the sort of options that lie open before me," said Hope, who opposed the legislation.

"And I hope that I will do that in a generous and Christian kind of way."

The crowd of about 400 outside Church House roared in approval as it heard a radio broadcast of Carey announcing the vote. Many who had been clutching lighted candles hugged, cried, danced in circles and set off fireworks.

"The vote was an affirmation of the direction the U.S. Episcopal Church took, and it will have an immense effect on the Australian Anglicans who vote on it Nov. 21," said the Rev. Robbin Clark, an Episcopal priest from Santa Fe, N.M.

The synod's debate underlined the passion on both sides of the issue.

Black church allowed into Selma organization

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

SELMA, Ala. — The Selma Baptist Association recently struck down a racial barrier in admitting its first black church on a unanimous vote in a city known as a civil rights battleground.

About 150 association members, representing the city's 24 churches in the Alabama Southern Baptist Convention, raised their hands in support of allowing Freedom Baptist into the group.

Although a first for Selma, the Rev. Michael Brooks, pastor of First Baptist, said this morning it's a growing trend in the state's largest denomination.

"I can see that a revival has begun in Selma," said the Rev. Letha Rumph, pastor of Freedom Baptist.

Given rousing applause, Rumph stood in the pulpit at First Baptist after the vote. Freedom Baptist has about 250 members.

Members of the association gain access to Southern Baptist training and church literature.

World church news

The ASSOCIATED PRESS

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — The ousted Haitian president, the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a Roman Catholic priest, has begun discussions with the Episcopal Diocese of Long Island about becoming an Episcopal priest.

The Long Island Catholic diocesan weekly reports that Aristide, who now lives in Washington, has discussed such a transfer recently with Long Island Episcopal Bishop Orris Walker and Episcopal Presiding Bishop Edmond L. Browning.

Aristide, ousted in a military coup a year ago, is still recognized by the United Nations and the United States as Haiti's president. He was expelled earlier from his Salesian order because of Pope John Paul II's objections to priests' involvement in politics. Long Island has a large Haitian community.

Aristide, who has said his return to Haiti depends on action by the international community, was quoted as saying in a recent interview, "I am an ecumenical man. I am not the prisoner of any religious structure."

CHICAGO — A proposal now under consideration by the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America would realign its eight seminaries into three, four or five clusters, each with a particular specialty.

The clusters also would forge close ties with other institutions in their geographic areas under the proposal.

WASHINGTON — The head of the Roman Catholic bishops' anti-abortion activities committee has appealed to President-elect Clinton to "exercise the same compassion toward the unborn" that he "pleaded for during the campaign on behalf of the unemployed and the others disenfrancised."

Cardinal John J. O'Connor of New York said in a statement it is the "moral obligation" of elected officials "to do everything in their power both to stop the slaughter of the innocents, and to stop mouthing platitudes asserting that anyone can morally exercise the 'choice" to kill an unborn baby."

Another case of bride vs. crying child

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: You have covered this topic numerous times in your column, but it just happened to me and I am stuck for a solution.

Our wedding is coming up soon, and we just received a response card on which the couple had penciled in " -- and child."

Abby, their child is under 2 years old and the father is a colleague of my fiance. We both fear it would be rude if we asked the couple to please leave their child at home.

On the other hand, we do not want a crying child to ruin our formal church wedding. What other course of action can we take? -- IN A BIND

DEAR IN: Because I'm sure you wouldn't want to offend your fiance's colleague, you could make arrangements to have someone look after the child in the church basement -- or another room in the church -- during the wedding ceremony. But first, you must inform the parents of your plan, and hope they agree to it.

Don't be surprised if they insist on having their child with them during the ceremony. People who are brazen enough to "pencil in" the news that they are bringing their child without asking permission to do so are capable of declining your offer to provide a sitter.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I read a letter in your column expressing sadness over the readiness of drivers to exchange obscene one-fingered salutes and the general lack of courtesy. She wanted to know if there was some way to promote courtesy and goodwill.

We all make errors in driving, either in judgment, lack of attention or knowledge. In the spirit of harmony, I am suggesting we might promote a language of hand gestures to communicate messages other than anger or irritation.

Your column reaches so many people, I am sure your readers could add to or improve on these. We need to make traveling our highways a pleasant and safe experience.

Thank you for anything you can do. -- DODIE RUEGEMER

DEAR DODIE: How about a nod, a smile, and mouthing the words, "Thank you"?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument for several of us here at work: Did the 19 people who served time because of their involvement in the Watergate break-in lose their right to vote? -- LOUISE B., DANA POINT, CALIF.

DEAR LOUISE: They lost their right to vote while they were incarcerated in prison, and for the duration of their parole, if they were paroled. But, according to the Justice Department, once their sentences were completed, whether or not their voting rights were restored depended on the nature of their crimes and the laws of the state in which they resided.

Perfect Date™ Voice Personals

Touch-tone phone required. Pulse to tone line: after dialing 1-900-776-5474 switch from pulse to tone on your touch-tone phone before selecting categories. If you find that someone has not recorded a voice greeting, you can still respond; just listen for directions. Perfect Date Personals are run for the purpose of introducing adults (18 and older) to one another. No advertisement or voice greeting will be accepted that is suggestive, sexual or offensive to the public. We reserve the right to edit copy. We suggest caution in arranging meetings with strangers. People who place or respond to Perfect Date Personals do so at their own risk. Perfect Date is a service of MWX, Inc. For more information call 1-800-437-5814. Service may not be available in all outlying areas.

THE HOME FRONT

By Kay Moore

Design professionals know it's extra-effective to mix old and new, formal and less formal. Great look: classic details played against strong modern colors.

★ ☆ ☆

Pre-1955 houses may have been painted with lead paints. It's wise to have the house tested — especially doors, windows and baseboards — and be extra careful when there is remodeling or reconstruction planned. Dust from old paint can cause damage.

★ ☆ ☆

Need privacy in a bedroom? One homeowner who preferred the look of bare windows draped curtains around the bed.

★ ☆ ☆

Lumber isn't really as big as the standard dimensions. A 2x4, for instance, is actually 1½ inches thick and 3½ inches wide. The difference is shrinkage and trimming after the wood is milled.

★ ☆ ☆

Talk show host Oprah Winfrey paid $1.4 million for a log-and-stone vacation home. At that price, you can't call it a "bungalow."

★ ☆ ☆

Can't promise millions, but we'll find the buyer who thinks your house is terrific and will pay a good price for it. List with Home Real Estate, 110 W. Marcy Dr., 263-1284.

FISHING

Fishing Report

AUSTIN (AP) — Here is the weekly fishing report as compiled by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department for Nov. 12:

CENTRAL

BUCHANAN: Water clear, 72 degrees, 5 feet low; black bass are fair to 6 pounds, 2 ounces on chartreuse DB3s; striper are good to 7 pounds on live bait, some limits; crappie are good to 2 pounds on minnows; white bass are fair around Garrett Island under birds early and late; catfish are good on trotlines to 4 pounds; channel catfish are good to 5 pounds in baited holes with fresh shrimp.

LBJ: Water clear, 73 degrees, lake full; black bass are good to 5 pounds, 6 ounces on pumpkin seed colored pigs and jigs; striper are slow; crappie are good around docks with structure on minnows; white bass are good around 1431 bridge trolling deep diving Bagley Baits; catfish are good to 6 pounds in baited holes on stinkbait.

WEST

ARROWHEAD: Water murky, 67 degrees, normal level; black bass are slow; crappie are beginning to hit jigs and live bait in 10-12 feet of water; white bass are slow; catfish are fair to in the 2-3 pound range on trotlines baited with live bait.

FORT PHANTOM HILL: Water murky, 62 degrees, normal level; all fishing slow due to high winds midweek.

GREENBELT: Water clear, 51 degrees, normal level; black bass are slow; white bass are good on slabs, spoons and minnows from the surface to 30 feet; crappie are fair on minnows in 6 to 20 feet of water; catfish are very good to 9 pounds on minnows and dough bait; walleye are good to 9½ pounds on minnows and slabs; smallmouth bass are slow.

HUBBARD CREEK: Water clear, normal level; black bass are slow; striper are fair to 5½ pounds on bass lures; crappie are fairly good up the rivers on minnows; white bass are slow; catfish are slow.

KEMP: Water clear, 2½ feet low; black bass are fair in number to 1 pound on silver spoons and trolling cranks; striper are slow; crappie are fair around brush piles in 15 feet of water on minnows; white bass are fair to 15 fish per string trolling cranks; catfish are slow.

MEREDITH: Water clear, 1 foot low; black bass are slow; crappie are slow and small; white bass are good on minnows on 10 to 12 feet of water; catfish are fairly good to 22 inches on minnows; walleye are good in the 4 to 8 pound range on ghost minnows.

O.H.IVIE: Main lake clear, upper end murky, 63 degrees, normal level; largemouth bass are good to 20 inches up creeks and draws on buzz baits, brown worms and cranks; small mouth bass are fair to 15 inches along points and ridges in 20 feet of water; crappie are fair to good to 1½ pounds on minnows along brushy points and ridges with near limits under lights; channel catfish are fair on trotlines on the flats and on rod and reel; yellow catfish are fair in number on trotlines up rivers with live bait.

POSSUM KINGDOM: Water clear, 70 degrees, 5 feet low; black bass are good to 5 pounds on Bass Assassins and jerk worms in the mid lake area; striper are good to 14 pounds on Pencil Poppers and jigging slabs, birds are working and helping to find striper; crappie are good under docks and in baited holes on minnows in 22 feet of water; white bass are good on white bass rigs when schooling and on slabs when under the birds; catfish are good to 4-6 pound range on trotlines and jug lines baited with perch and shad.

PROCTOR: Water cloudy, normal level; black bass are fair to 21 inches on nightcrawlers; crappie are picking up on minnows; catfish are poor.

SPENCE: Water clear, 67 degrees, 24 feet low; black bass are fair to 3½ pounds; fishing is fairly slow because of high wind, the deer season and the Dallas Cowboys.

THEO: Water clear, 65 degrees, 6 feet low; black bass are slow; crappie are fair in number on minnows in 20 feet or deeper water; crappie are slow; catfish are excellent to 12 pounds on cheese bait at night.

TWIN BUTTES: Water clear, above normal level; black bass are good to 5.57 pounds on buzz baits; striper are fair trolling live bait; crappie are fair in 20 feet of water along the river channels on minnows; catfish are fair to 6 pounds on live baits primarily, regular catfish baits are slowing down.
