Celebrating work

Work.

We can't live without it. We curse it, discuss it, love it, jeer it, abhor it, laugh about it. We are born to it, live for it, die at it.

For those who don't have it, it's their only goal in life.

For those who do, things could always be better.

It touches one's life from the moment he or she is born until that person dies. We are groomed for a job in our early years; we exist on jobs throughout our middle years; and we live off our meager earnings during our senior years.

Work.

It forms the backbone of the nation's economy. And when one disc slips out of place, the nation suffers.

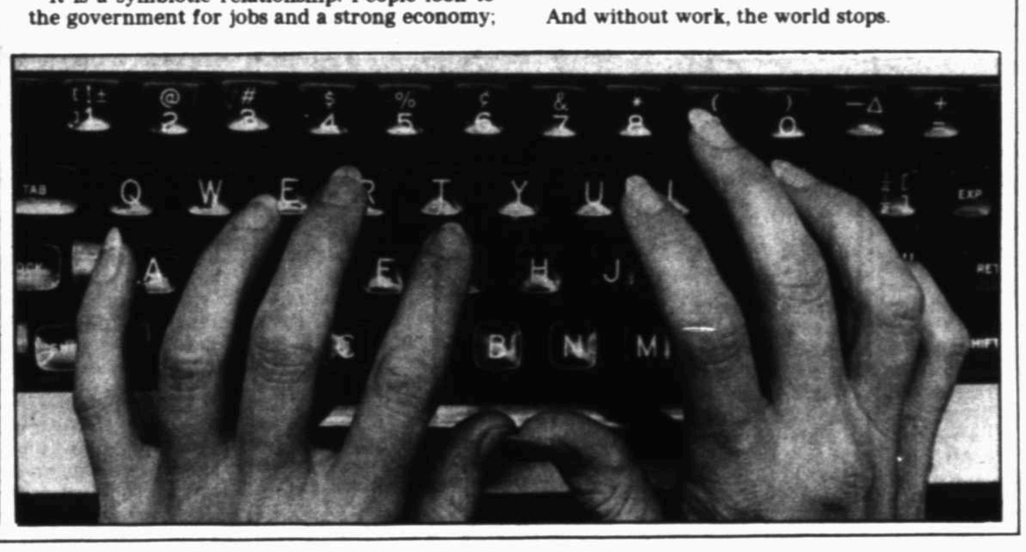

When it heals, the nation heals.

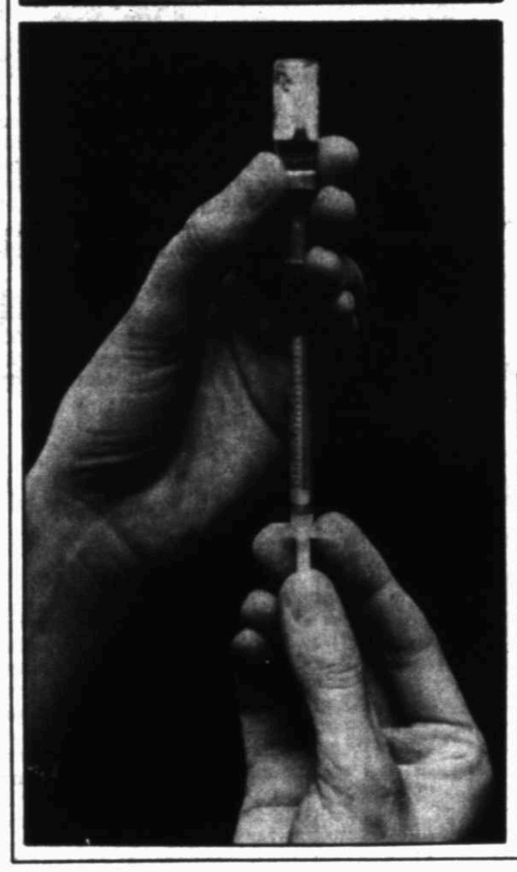

It is a symbiotic relationship. People look to the government for jobs and a strong economy; government depends on the people to work and feed the coffers.

Even in its infancy the United States gained a reputation worldwide for its job opportunities. Working together, the laborers entwined their gnarled, cracked hands with those of the polished professionals to put the country on a superpower pedestal. Today, the United States still is regarded as mecca for its jobs. And the refugees, as they did more than 200 years ago, swarm to the shores for work.

One day a year is set aside to recognize those men and women who keep the machines turning. Labor Day is a celebration for everyone, young and old, and a realization that every job is important, whether it pays $1 an hour or $1 million. From the nurse who administers medicine to an ill patient, to a carpenter building a home, to an accountant keeping the books in line to a secretary keeping the office organized and running. No job is insignificant.

And without work, the world stops.

U.S. spy plane was near Korean jet, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. reconnaissance plane was operating near the Soviet coast and came within 75 miles of the Korean jetliner reportedly shot down by the Soviets, Reagan administration officials said Sunday.

The presence of the spy plane last Thursday raised the possibility that the Soviets thought they were tracking the U.S. aircraft when they were actually pursuing the passenger jet, the official acknowledged.

The disclosure was made as White House aides worked on a presidential address to the nation in which Reagan on Monday evening plans to reveal American sanctions against the Soviet Union.

Reagan, saying the United States has "definite proof the Soviets intentionally shot down" the Korean jetliner, consulted with congressional leaders Sunday about the incident and the response he plans to announce on a nationwide television and radio broadcast tonight at 7 p.m. CDT.

A source familiar with private White House discussions said the president told congressional leaders in a rare, two-hour meeting that hisannouncement will "not be anything earth-shattering," and will be limited to actions such as restrictions on international aviation and cultural exchanges. The source insisted on anonymity.

Another administration official said Sunday that "it is possible" the aircraft was shot down after leaving Soviet airspace. "It was very close. It may have actually been a mile outside of their airspace when they shot it down," he said.

The reconnaissance plane was in the area monitoring for possible violations of the U.S.-Soviet treaty governing strategic nuclear weapons, one administration source said.

Another official said that when the Soviets first began tracking the Korean 747, they thought it was one of the U.S. RC-135 reconnaissance planes operating routinely in the area.

"As it came to their territory, they became confused and changed it to an unidentified status," this source said.

■ Demonstrations staged nationwide — Page 7A

"It is absolutely baffling and puzzling to us that they would not have known what kind of plane it was," he said.

U.S. officials said, however, that while the Soviets may have first thought the Boeing 747 airplane was an RC-135, they had enough information and opportunity before firing at it to realize that it was not a reconnissance aircraft.

Another administration official, also speaking on condition that he not be identified, said the Korean aircraft and the U.S. airplane never came closer than 75 miles, and when they crossed paths, they were 300 miles apart.

In Moscow, a top Soviet defense chief contended one of its fighter pilots thought the South Korean jetliner looked like a U.S. intelligence plane, and that the pilot waved his wings and blinked his lights in an unheeded effort to warn the Korean plane away from restricted Soviet air space.

The Korean Air Line jumbo jet, with 269 people aboard, was lost Thursday from restricted skies near Soviet military installations. U.S. officials say a Soviet pilot shot down the plane with a heat-seeking missile.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan told congressional leaders in their White House session Sunday that the attack was "a barbaric, uncivilized, cold-blooded act."

Astronauts compare flight home to 'riding tour bus'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger was coming home to its first landing by starlight this morning after six untroubled days in space. Its astronauts were sightseers to the end, exulting that they were "riding in a big tour bus," as the world passed in review.

They did what no crew did before them, turning on their television camera for an uninterrupted aerial tour around the world on their 79th orbit: across Mexico, the southern United States, diagonally across Africa and across the heart of Australia.

Even as they ate their last dinner in space, pilot Dan Brandenstein reported "we are looking out the window and talking about space flight."

The ship was flying nose down, giving the five-man crew a splendid head-on view of the spinning world below. Commander Richard Truly marveled at the beauty of a sunrise. "This," he said, "is like riding in a big tour bus."

The other crew members were mission specialists William Thornton, Guion Bluford and Dale Gardner. Thornton, at 54, is the oldest American to make a space flight; Bluford is the first black astronaut.

Even the six rats, aboard shuttle Flight Eight to test a cage to be used on future missions, were reported by Thornton to be in such good shape that it suprised him. He said they were "scurrying around the cages in a pretty skillful fashion."

Chief flight director Harold Draughon called the mission 100 percent successful. "My impression," he said, "is that we've had the fewest failures to date. We have accomplished everything we set out to do."

The landing, on the concrete runway at Edwards Air Force Base in California was scheduled for 12:40 a.m. PDT today. The weather was expected to be perfect: clear skies and visibility of more than seven miles.

Xenon beams, equaling the output of 650,000 floodlights, illuminated the approach end. The unpowered shuttle, coming in like a glider, would have no second chance at landing.

The descent from 137 miles high was to begin 53 minutes earlier, as the shuttle was on its 97th orbit over the Indian Ocean west of Australia, when commander Richard Truly fired the ship's two orbital engines.

Challenger's path was to take the ship through the thickening atmosphere across Micronesia, north of Hawaii and over Santa Barbara on the California coast. It was possible that ships at sea might spot the shuttle, its underside glowing from the heat created by the friction of reentry.

NASA barred the public from the landing site, for security reasons and also because it expected there would be nothing to see until the ship — flying without even wing lights — was 50 feet off the ground.

The astronauts spent their last day in space stowing the gear they used since their nighttime liftoff early last Tuesday. Their cargo bay was emptier than when they began; the communications satellite they launched for India on Wednesday is on duty above the equator.

During the astronauts' last day — night in the United States — one of the spacecraft's computers missed a beat, putting it out of synchronization with a twin computer. After 40 minutes, ground controllers got it back on track, but they assigned it a secondary position for Challenger's re-entry because, Draughon said, "it's got one black mark against it."

Israelis face long stay behind lines

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The army's pullback from Lebanon's central mountains is aimed at saving Israeli lives and paring financial costs, but the troops face a long and uncomfortable stay behind their new lines.

The redeployment behind a new $40-million defense line along the Awali River in southern Lebanon, 25 miles north of the Israeli border may also take some of the heat out of anti-war sentiment in Israel.

But even that could be a short-lived respite for the government, if guerrilla attacks continue and the Israeli presence in Lebanon, already 15 months old, lingers on.

"We are indeed concerned that we are going to stay for a long time," Israel's Tourism Minister Avraham Sharir told reporters after a Cabinet meeting on Sunday. Israel's former military intelligence chief, Maj. Gen. Yehoshua Saguy, has indicated he sees no choice for the country but to stay in South Lebanon for several years.

The Israeli army has cited several advantages for its new defense line in South Lebanon:

— The army will be freed from dangerous policing duties resulting from the sectarian feuding between Druse and Christian militia in the Chouf and Aley areas.

— Unlike positions in the rugged mountains and deep gorges of the central mountains, the new defense line follows flatter geographic features that make guerrilla infiltration more difficult.

— Troop strength, estimated by diplomats in Beirut at 25,000 to 30,000, could be reduced by a third. This would mean a reduction in reserve call-ups, with most soldiers spending 60 days a year in uniform, away from home and family, instead of 90 days.

Marines won't replace Israel troops — Page 8A

— The financial costs of maintaining troops in the field, estimated at $1 million a day, would drop as a result of troop reductions.

None of the benefits are clear cut and many of the advantages could evaporate if Syria maintains a hardline policy against withdrawing the 40,000-50,000 troops it has deployed in Lebanon.

A senior Israeli officer quoted by Israel Radio last week suggested saboteurs could infiltrate the line through the two coastal roads and two other crossing points the Israelis will keep open to link southern Lebanon with Beirut.

"The possibility (remains) that terrorists will continue trying to smuggle sabotage material into south Lebanon as well as Israel," said the officer, who was not named. But he added that closing the coastal highway to Beirut would "damage the whole fabric of daily life for the people of Lebanon."

Sealing off southern Lebanon would also be costly for Israel, which is burdened with a 125 percent annual inflation rate and a $1.7 billion trade deficit in the first half of 1983. It would mean providing the 500,000 residents of South Lebanon with food, fuel, utilities and administrative services — tasks Israeli army spokesmen have said should be carried out by the Lebanese government.

Israeli army officials have also said there are no plans to disarm the array of militias and paramilitary organizations in South Lebanon.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for today for Mississippi, Alabama, Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and parts of Louisiana, Florida, Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina.

Remainder of holiday will be hot

The long Labor Day weekend will be rounded out on a blistering note: hot.

The weatherman at Midland Regional Airport has predicted a high of 101 today. He offered not a hint of clouds to block the sun's rays and respite from the scorching sun.

Sunday was a hot one, too. The temperature, under a cloudless sky, reached 99 degrees, which equalled the record high of 99 degrees for Sept. 4 in 1937. The overnight low of 68 didn't quite break or tie the record low of 56 degrees for Sept. 5 in 1934.

Tonight's low is to be near 70 degrees, and the high on Tuesday is to be near 100 degrees, the weatherman said.

Entire family striken with MD

CYPRESS, Calif. (AP) — Two members of a family of five striken with muscular dystrophy will help answer phones for comedian Jerry Lewis' nationwide telethon to raise funds to combat the incurable disease.

Pearl Breon, 49, and her 23-year-old daughter Heidi said they were going to Anaheim to answer phones at the Orange County headquarters for the muscular dystrophy telethon.

"Each year, I always think that this year's telethon will be the last one," said Heidi. "I keep thinking that something dramatic will happen and they'll find a cure so they won't have to do this any more."

John Breon, 46, is the only member of his family who is able to walk. His wife and three children are confined to wheelchairs.

"It hit my father hard when both my mother and I went into wheelchairs at the same time," Heidi said. "He said he couldn't sit there and watch his family die. That hurt my mom. It took him a while to learn that it wasn't that bad, that it wasn't the end."

Doctors think Breon has only a mild form of the disease in his right side, his daughter said.

Heidi is training to be a teacher; Kris, 22, is an accountant; and Danny, 19, is a computer student.

Because no cure is known, the Breons gradually may lose complete control of their muscles. A simple cold can weaken them to the point of serious, possibly fatal, complications.

Mrs. Breon, a bookkeeper at the University of California at Irvine, didn't discover she had muscular dystrophy until 19 years ago — when she was pregnant with Danny, her last child.

After hearing about muscular dystrophy on television, Mrs. Breon noticed that Heidi and Kris — then toddlers — moved slowly, sometimes dragging a foot when they walked.

Marine killed in Beirut buried

A Marine honor guard carries the casket containing the body of Lt. Donald Losey as his mother, Carol Losey, looks on. Losey and fellow Marine Staff Sgt. Alexander Ortega were killed last Monday in Beirut.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Marine 2nd Lt. Donald George Losey, one of two Marines killed last week in Lebanon, was buried Sunday in a military service.

Hundreds of relatives and friends crowded the graveside in a rural Forsyth County cemetery to pay final tribute. After a seven-member Marine Corps honor guard fired three volleys, a Marine bugler played taps.

Earlier, after a 40-minute church service, several community residents stood by the roadside holding small flags or with their hands over their hearts as the hearse drove past.

Losey, 28, was killed last Monday by a mortar round during fighting between the Lebanese army and members of a Shiite Moslem militia. He was a platoon commander with Company A, 1st Battalion, 8th Marine Regiment. His second-in-command, Staff Sgt. Alexander M. Ortega of Rochester, N.Y., also was killed.

Fourteen other Marines were wounded in the attack.

Losey and Ortega were the second and third Marines to die since the U.S. peacekeeping force arrived in Lebanon 11 months ago.

At the funeral service, nearly 300 people packed the church.

"The large number of people here attests to the love and high esteem in which the people held George Losey," said the Rev. William Kerr. "Your love, affection and concern is deeply appreciated by his family."

"He believed what he was doing was right and he made the greatest sacrifice of all for America and the people of Lebanon," Kerr said. "He gave his life for a cause he believed to be right and just."

Source: Officials decide shooting

MOSCOW (AP) — Top Soviet military officials made the decision to shoot down a Korean airliner last week and President Yuri V. Andropov, on vacation outside Moscow at the time, was not consulted, a Soviet source said Sunday.

The source, who refused to be identified, confirmed that a heat-seeking air-to-air missile shot down the Korean Air Lines Boeing 747 out of the sky. He said Andropov returned to the capital on Friday to deal with the growing world furor over the attack, which took 269 lives.

The Soviets have not acknowledged that their air force shot the plane down. The official Tass news agency, in three dispatches, has said only that a Soviet interceptor fired "tracer shells" along the airliner's flight path.

The Sunday Times of London quoted unidentified U.S. intelligence sources as saying they believed the order to fire was given by army Gen. Vladimir Govorov, a 58-year-old member of the Communist Party Central Committee.

The newspaper identified him as commander of the Soviet Far East region and said they believed clearance for the decision was given by deputy defense minister and marshal of aviation Alexander I. Koldunov, 59.

The Soviet source, who is in a position to know but insisted he not be identified in any way, said the decision to fire on the jetliner was made because the military truly believed the plane was on a spy mission. He said the military had proof that the plane was spying, but did not say what that evidence was.

The source's account of the incident suggests that Andropov, commander-in-chief of the Soviet armed forces and head of the country's security council, would not be routinely consulted before orders were given to fire on a plane thought to be intruding in Soviet territory.

Because of Soviet sensitivity to intrusions over the Kamchatka peninsula, where top secret military installations have been constructed, military officials in Moscow would have been notified only minutes after Soviet air space was violated, the source said.

According to the source, the plane was not shot down until it was about to leave Soviet air space, which it violated for more than two hours, because the military believed it could convince the pilot to land the airliner, allowing the Soviets to retrieve whatever intelligence it might have gathered.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz said a Soviet Sukhoi fighter fired the rocket that knocked the airliner out of the sky, apparently over the Soviet island Sakhaklin.

The source said the Soviets believe that the uproar among U.S. officials was an attempt by the Reagan administration to wreck warming relations between Moscow and Washington.

According to the source, the Soviet leadership has no intention of altering its current stand on the issue of the Korean airliner.

The Soviet response, while decided upon at the very top of the leadership, has been coordinated by Mikhail V. Zimyanin, the 68-year-old former editor of Pravda who now is the Central Committee secretary in charge of ideology and propaganda, the source said.

In another Tass report, the Soviet anti-aircraft Defense Chief said the Soviet fighter pilot waved his plane's wings, blinked the lights and tried to make radio contact with the South Korean plane before he fired warning shots near the aircraft.

Col. Gen. Semyon Romanov, who gave the most detailed Soviet account yet of the encounter over the Soviet Far East, said the pilot thought the plane looked like a U.S. intelligence aircraft.

Romanov said the pilot was following rules that allow interceptors to fire "issued weapons" parallel to the course of an intruder.

But his account still did not address U.S. charges that the fighter pilot shot down the airliner.

Another Tass commentary, read over the evening news, quoted Western reports that there were 269 people aboard the plane and said "the horror of this is that the United States sent the plane on its dirty mission."

Romanov said the "South Korean plane flew from the United States as a rude and deliberate provocation."

He reiterated Soviet claims that the plane flew without navigational lights and "did not respond to all actions by our interceptor-fighter, whose pilot undertook for a long period repeated attempts to lead the intruder plane to the closest Soviet airfield."

"The Soviet pilot failed, despite all his attempts, to establish radio contact with the intruder," Tass quoted Romanov as saying.

He said the pilot rocked his wings and blinked his lights but there was no response from the Korean craft, which Romanov said was flying 26,000 to 33,000 feet above the Soviet Union.

This indicated the Soviet pilot was able to see the Korean plane, as the United States has contended. But Romanov said "its outlines resemble much those of the American reconnaissance plane RS-135. Our interceptor pilot made warning shots with tracer shells along the course of the intruder plane."

His account of the incident stopped at this point. Previous Soviet press reports have said the Korean craft then flew out of Soviet air space and 10 minutes later disappeared from radar.

U.S. spy plane near jet, officials say

"There is no excuse that can justify this ruthless taking of innocent life. It is an afront to humanity. The Soviets have tried to deny their responsibility, but we have definite proof the Soviets intentionally shot down that unarmed civilian aircraft," he quoted the president as saying.

The proof Reagan referred to were tape recordings of intercepted radio transmissions by Soviet pilots, which were played for the bipartisan group of congressional leaders, Speakes said.

Speakes said the tapes contained transmissions during the eight minutes leading up to the attack, condensed to two minutes by eliminating pauses. Speakes said he expected that the tapes eventually would be made public.

"The evidence is irrefutable that the Soviet fighter shot down an unarmed Korean civilian aircraft," the president was quoted as saying.

Discussing possible confusion about whether the aircraft was a passenger jetliner or a spy plane, Bob Sims, a spokesman for the National Security Council, said in a note read by Speakes:

"They may have thought this was an RC-135 when the Korean aircraft was first acquired on their radar, but that was approximately 1½ to 2 hours before the shootdown. As they tracked it and particularly with their visual information obtained by the fighter pilot's close proximity and the radar information available to them when they shot it down, they should have known without any doubt it was a civilian airliner."

In Moscow, the Soviet anti-aircraft defense chief offered the Soviets fullest explanation yet of what happened last Thursday. But Col. Gen. Semyon Romanov did not admit to shooting anything more powerful than "warning shots with tracer shells."

After hearing the tapes — with a translator's aid — congressional leaders said they contradict the string of Soviet versions.

"They (the pilots) are reporting the aircraft destroyed," Senate Majority leader Howard Baker Jr. said. "There was no conversation of warning shots or tracer shots."

The Soviets decline responsibility for the plane's disappearance. Romanov said the "plane seemed to be stalking under the cover of night above our territory. And there are no doubts that this was a deliberate action designed as a rude provocation" inspired by the United States.

Allegations that the Korean plane was on an intelligence mission have emerged as Moscow's principal defense against claims that the jetliner was the target of an unprovoked attack by Soviet fighters. U.S. officials say there is no evidence of the midair warning described by Romanov.

Despite outrage over the incident, U.S. leaders have apparently decided not to pursue major economic sanctions against Moscow. Some conservatives expressed displeasure Sunday, but there was a consensus among government leaders for a "measured," international response.

Speculation centered on restrictions to Soviet air travel — such as a two-month suspension on landing rights and on flights to the Soviet Union. The Soviet air line Aeroflot has been barred from operating scheduled passenger service to the United States since January 1982 when landing rights were revoked in retaliation for the Soviet-backed martial law crackdown in Poland. But other nations could limit these rights and the Reagan could cut off special Soviet flights to New York and Washington that have been allowed.

These include the pro-Israel 1,500-man force of Maj. Saad Haddad, several hundred men in the Phalangist Christian "Lebanese Forces," and a variety of leftist Moslem underground groups opposed to Israel's presence.

The complexity of controlling the south lies in the mix of its population — 60,000 Sunni Moslems, 30,000 Druse, 65,000 Christians, 95,000 Palestinians, and 270,000 Shiite Moslems.

Israeli military correspondent Eitan Haber, writing in the Yedioth Ahronoth newspaper, suggested the greatest gain for Israel's army would be a boost in morale for its soldiers, many of whom had begun to doubt the benefits of Israel's move into Lebanon June 6, 1982 against Palestinian guerrillas.

"The knowledge that we stuck a healthy head into a sick bed caused the most serious problems in the army, especially in the area of morale," he wrote. "The troops had no motivation and felt for months that they were doing police duty that was not for them to do."

Militarily, Haber wrote, Israel was giving up a major bargaining card with the Syrians in the form of the Beirut-Damascus highway, in exchange for marginal benefits of tightening their supply lines.

Israel and Lebanon agreed on the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon — a pact contingent on Syria's simultaneous removal of its troops. Syria refuses to pull out until the Israelis have left.

Appeal raises $15,000 for 'Migrant Mother'

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — An appeal for help for the woman who symbolized Depression poverty in a photograph entitled "Migrant Mother" has raised over $15,000 and prompted hundreds of thank-you letters because "she helped so many of us by her beautiful face."

Florence Thompson celebrated her 80th birthday last week, stronger but still gravely ill from cancer, heart trouble and the effects of a stroke, according to her children.

The children appealed to the public last month for help with round-the-clock nursing care, doctors and medication that cost $1,400 a week.

The family has received nearly 1,000 letters, many containing cash or checks. "Those donations for one, two and three dollars...when I know that's all they can afford, they really mean a lot," said a son.

"There is something so splendid about her face," wrote a man from Riverside. "I've drawn courage from it many a time. I do not regard my contribution as charity — I owe it to her."

A woman from Louisiana told Mrs. Thompson's children: "Be proud of asking for help from America for your mother, for she helped so many of us by her beautiful face... she is a symbol of the indomitable spirit of America."

The legendary photograph was taken in 1936 outside a pea-pickers camp in San Luis Obispo County by Dorothea Lange, a photographer for the Federal Farm Security Agency. It shows a 32-year-old mother staring pensively while two of her boys bury their faces in her shoulders.

It was the height of the Depression, and Mrs. Thompson, a Cherokee from Oklahoma, was a widow working in the fields of California to raise six children. Never realizing any money from the photograph, she continued to work as a migrant field hand and raised 10 children.

"Everyone seems to relate to that photograph in some way," said one of her children, who have asked not to be identified to safeguard their privacy.

Americans celebrating summer's last long weekend

By The Associated Press

Parks, beaches and highways were crowded Sunday as Americans celebrated the summer's last long weekend with picnics, fairs and fireworks, while unions geared up for Labor Day rallies on "Solidarity Day III."

Sunny skies and temperatures in the 80s and 90s prevailed across most of the nation, except for thunderstorms scattered over the Southeast and the north-central states.

New York City closed part of a major street Sunday for a seven-hour festival of puppeteers, jazz orchestras, blues singers and films. The fair, on a one-block section of West 42nd Street, was sponsored by District 1199 of the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees.

Campsites were booked solid at some Connecticut state parks, the state's Department of Environmental Protection said.

Thousands of people lined the Ohio River at Cincinnati's sixth Riverfest to work on suntans, play in the river shallows and watch fireworks. Saturday's crowds were joined by the crew of the "Real People" television show, starting a five-day trip along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to gather material for this season's shows.

Philadelphians were treated to ethnic food, music and dance Sunday and today with the 13th annual Labor Day Weekend Festival, sponsored by the city's Restaurant and Business Association.

Labor Day marks the end of a summer-long women's peace encampment in New York's Finger Lakes region, and on Sunday participants demonstrated at the gate of the Seneca Army Depot.

The encampment was formed July 4 in protest of nuclear arms which the women claim are stored at the depot. Spokeswoman Chris Mangan said some women will remain throughout the winter at a farmhouse where the camp was located.

The weekend also marked the end of the NAACP's "Overground Railroad" voter registration march with a rally Sunday in Detroit. Participants marched 360 miles from Covington, Ky., to Detroit along the route of one of the "underground railroads" which black slaves followed to get to freedom in the North.

One union used the weekend to draw attention to jobless people who can't affford medical insurance.

Those people face "financial ruin or ruined health," said Sol C. Chaikin, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. He announced a $1 million endowment Sunday to Brandeis University in Massachusetts to be used to train scholars to help cope with national problems of health care cost and access.

For Labor Day itself, union leaders called for massive turnouts at rallies in cities across the nation.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland predicted that hundreds of thousands would turn out at 150 rallies

Hurricane Alicia dashes Labor Day plans

AP Laserphoto

Laura Anderson helps Booba Miller continue clean up debris from hurricane Alicia. The pair arrived last week to help Miller's parents clean their bayside home.

MORGAN'S POINT (AP) — Goldie Taylor had planned to spend Labor Day fixing a picnic feast of boiled shrimp and crab for relatives and friends.

Mayor John McCulley and his wife, Laura, had just wanted to relax at their home overlooking Galveston Bay.

But their plans were dashed Aug. 18 by the howling winds, pelting rain and roaring tides of Hurricane Alicia.

"There certainly won't be any celebrating around here. It'll just have to wait until next year," Mrs. Taylor said.

Broken tree limbs needed to be hauled away. The torn roof, shattered windows and damaged structure of her white wood-frame house had to be repaired. The water-stained ceiling and carpet had to be replaced and insurance claims settled.

Hurricane Alicia had unexpectedly changed course as it approached land, coming ashore on the west end of Galveston Island. As it churned across Texas, the storm left 21 people dead, almost a million people without electricity, water and telephone service and more than $1 billion in destruction.

Two weeks later, mounds of dried leaves and broken branches that cluttered the yards and driveways now line the streets of this tranquil seaside community of 300. Century-old magnolia and pecan trees that had been uprooted and hurled about still had to be cut and hauled away.

Some residents went as long as 12 days without electricity, suffering through the hot summer days without air conditioning. Others — 35,000 in Southeast Texas — still don't have phone service.

"It'll be years before the neighborhood looks like it did a month ago," said Peggy Beaty, who had been working with her family to restore their two-story brick home.

"Many of the houses here — some more than 50 years old — had just been restored. Now the owners have to do it all over again. It's just heartbreaking," Mrs. Beaty said.

"When things got bad, we just put on our bathing suits and started mopping up. The insurance company should pay us for that," Mrs. McCulley said.

Part of the roof had been lifted from her house. In the family room, a huge window pane was shattered, the floor buckled in spots and water stained the woodwork.

But the rebuilding depends on the speed of insurance companies.

"The insurance companies have more customers than they can handle," McCulley said. "We've been waiting two weeks for an adjuster. We'll have to start working on the place Monday. We just can't wait any longer."

Mrs. Beaty said she hopes the skies will remain sunny until the dark green tarpaulin on the house top is replaced with a new copper roof.

"So far we've been lucky. It's only rained once since the hurricane. We got out all the pots and the pans and started pushing them around," she said.

For those who can pay the bills without waiting for the insurance, the job is much easier.

"I've got pictures of the damage and receipts for the repair work and I'll just hope the insurance pays up," Mrs. Taylor said.

"I got the workers here right away. But that was because I paid the cash upfront and didn't wait on the insurance."

Booba Miller and Laura Anderson had planned to spend Labor Day partying in Hawaii, where they work as carpenters.

The couple rushed back from their Hawaiian home to help clean up the five-bedroom home Miller's father built 30 years ago.

When they arrived, they found the roof and the back half of the house had been torn away and the yard littered with lumber, broken glass and uprooted trees. Most of the belongings inside had been broken or damaged by water.

"When somebody asks us if we're going to repair the place, we just laugh. We'll need to bring in a bulldozer and then start from scratch," Ms. Anderson.

One positive outcome of the storm, residents said, is that it drew this already close-knit community even closer.

Lawmaker advocates travel ban

DALLAS (AP) — The United States should prohibit American airlines from flying into Moscow and ban all travel from the Soviet Union into this country as a punishment for shooting down a South Korean jumbo jet with 269 people aboard, a Kentucky congressman said here.

"Hopefully, other countries in the West — France, Britain, Germany, to name just a few — will join us," said U.S. Rep. Carroll Hubbard.

The Democratic congressman made the comments Saturday after stopping at Dallas/Fort Worth Regional Airport en route to Kentucky from Seoul, South Korea.

Hubbard said he originally was scheduled to take the doomed Korean Air Lines Flight 7 to Seoul, where he marked the 30th anniversary of the defense agreement between the United States and South Korea.

Also on the trip were Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Steve Symms of Idaho and Ed Zorinsky of Nebraska.

Rep. Larry McDonald, a Georgia Democrat, was on the plane that disappeared Thursday.

"My name was listed among those to take that flight," Hubbard said. "But later I was invited by the president of Murray State University in my district to come there and speak. I went there and therefore was on a different flight."

Hubbard said he took a later KAL flight "that was only 10 minutes behind the Korean Air Lines No. 7, which was shot down...so I must say I do thank God and realize that I'm lucky that I had a speaking engagement in my district which caused me to have a different plane.

"Early Wednesday morning about 3 a.m. Anchorage time, we were talking with numerous people who were on that doomed Flight 7. Sen. Helms and Sen. Symms and I were talking to a four-person family from Rochester in the lounge who were (on Flight 7). It's so sad to think about the people we saw that night in the airport who were killed."

Hubbard said he could think of no reason for shooting down the KAL jet.

"I assume they (the Soviets) want to prove a point here for some reason," he said. "It is inexplicable. This is a crime against humanity. It's difficult to understand how people have so little regard for life."

He noted that there was speculation that the plane was shot down because the Soviets wanted to eliminate McDonald, chairman of the ultraconservative John Birch Society and a strong critic of the Soviet Union.

"That was the immediate reaction of Steve Symms, the reaction of Congressman McDonald's wife, his staff and others," he said. "I don't know what the motive was. It seems incomprehensible that any individual alive today would try to kill one person by taking 268 more with him."

Hubbard said the Soviet Union made a serious error in judgment "because some countries in the world that might have believed the Soviet Union were a rational type of people interested in peace surely know this is an act of the worst criminal nature possible."

Hubbard said the mood was one of great bitterness when he left South Korea.

"The people of Seoul are very bitter about this incident," he said. "There were several rallies at universities and downtown, with thousands of people chanting anti-Soviet comments. They (Koreans) are very anxious that the U.S. and other countries join in to show Russia how mad the free world is about this criminal act."

Pets can cause strep throat

Your dog, cat or even your pet bird may be the cause of your child's recurring strep throat, according to a medical column in Family Circle magazine. Dr. Stuart M. Copperman of the State University of New York College of Medicine at Stony Brook found 40 cases of recurrent strep sore throats in families whose dog or cat was infected by strep bacteria. When the infected pets were treated for their infection by a veterinarian, all the families were relieved of the illness.

Man holds hostages because he can't afford surgery

AMARILLO (AP) — A 36-year-old man underwent physical examinations Sunday after he told authorities he held another man hostage because he could not afford needed heart surgery.

The unidentified gunman took three people hostage at a farmhouse south of Amarillo about 4:30 p.m. Saturday, but two of them, a woman and a child, escaped about an hour later and called sheriff's deputies, said Randall County Sheriff Cliff Longest.

The third hostage, identified as Keith Rickwartz, was held for more than six hours, Longest said. Rickwartz was released about 12:30 a.m. and the gunman walked out of the house about 10 minutes later, throwing down a high-powered rifle.

A deputy was shot at during the standoff but was not injured, Longest said.

The woman "notified authorities. That's when the Randall deputy responded, knocked and heard a noise and stepped aside as a shotgun blasted the door. That officer was not hit," he said.

"The officer who responded ran back to his car and was pinned underneath throughout the time that the man was in the house with the gun."

Sheriff's deputies, who had talked to the man over a public address system, put him into an ambulance and took him to Northwest Texas Hospital where doctors were trying to determine Sunday if he had heart problems, sheriff's dispatcher Randy Rogers said.

Authorities refused Sunday to release the man's name, and the woman and child also were not identified.

Investigators were not sure of the relationship between the two men but believed they were partners in the stables and that Rickwartz lived on the farm, Rogers said.

Deputies reported that the gunman was depressed over health problems because he did not have the money to get additional medical treatment for a heart condition, Rogers said.

KAMR-TV reported that the gunman called the television station and said he wanted to draw attention to the high cost of medical treatment. The station reported that the gunman said he was especially angry at Houston heart surgeon Denton Cooley.

Jury says no conspiracy in millionaire's death

DALLAS (AP) — A California grand jury apparently rejected police theories of a conspiracy among the children of Texas millionaire Henry Harrison Kyle when it secretly indicted Kyle's son on a murder charge in his father's death, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified source close to the investigation as saying no indictment was handed down on Kyle's other son, Scott, or on Jackie Phillips, Kyle's daughter by another marriage. Both were questioned by Los Angeles police in connection with the slaying.

Two Dallas lawyers confirmed Saturday that the grand jury handed down a sealed indictment Tuesday charging Rick Kyle with first-degree murder and using a handgun in the commission of a crime.

Rick Kyle's attorney, Jack Pate, confirmed that Kyle would return voluntarily to Los Angeles. He faces arraignment Wednesday.

The Los Angeles Times reported that Rick Kyle, who lives in Denton where he is a student at North Texas State University, decided not to fight extradition from Texas after Los Angeles authorities agreed to lower his bail from $500,000.

Kyle was shot to death at his mansion in the posh Bel-Air section of Los Angeles July 22. The 60-year-old tycoon was president of Four Star International, a television and motion picture production company.

Baptists convene in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (AP) — More than 10,000 delegates began arriving here Sunday for the 103rd annual meeting of the National Baptist Convention of America.

The 3.5 million-member denomination is the second-largest predominantly black Baptist group in the nation, behind the National Baptist Convention of America, U.S.A. Inc.

The Rev. J.H. Jackson, pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church in Chicago, will be the keynote speaker tonight at a fund-raising banquet.

Other convention speakers will be the Rev. A.L. Johnson of Kansas City, Mo., last year's host pastor, and the Rev. James Carl Sams of Jacksonville, Fla., convention president since 1967.

Nobel Prize-winner joins A&M

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Dr. Sheldon Glashow, a Nobel Prize-winning physicist from Harvard University, will join the Texas A&M University faculty on Sept. 19, officials announced.

Glashow, who shared the 1979 Nobel Prize in physics with two other scientists for their explantion of the beginning of the universe, will work with researchers in A&M's high energy theoretical physics program during the next year, officials said.

He also will teach some graduate level courses and work with scientists from A&M, the University of Texas, Rice University and University of Houston in their efforts to build a superconducting particle accelerator, which has been dubbed the Texatron but is more commonly known as an atom-smasher. It would be the largest ever constructed, with a radius of 35 miles and a power level in the trillions of electron volts.

Teen fatally stabs stepfather

DALLAS (AP) — A man who was beating his teen-age stepson because their refrigerator was empty was fatally stabbed when the youth retaliated with a butcher knife, police say.

Juvenile investigators said the youth was being struck with a broom or mop Saturday night when he repeatedly stabbed his 37-year-old stepfather, Thurman Anderson, in the neck.

THE BETTER HALF

"I knew this would happen! He gave up caffeine and went right into a coma!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, September 6, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Social reformer and Nobel Prize winner Jane Addams, Army Air Force Gen. Claire Chennault and Joseph Kennedy, patriarch of the Kennedy clan, were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: comedienne JoAnne Worley, golf's Dow Finsterwald and actress Jane Curtin. You have a lot to look forward to in the months ahead. Romance is rich and happy. Partner seems more captivating than ever. A raise is likely in January. Squelch the impulse to spend it on frivolity. A new investment opportunity is too good to pass up. Consult loved one before accepting an intriguing job offer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You shine at work this week! Do not be taken in by promises from someone who wants to unseat you or block a promotion. A financial situation begins to show improvement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance shifts gears. Refuse to accept someone's excuse for breaking a date. Your position at work could be improved by another person's mistakes. A part-time job produces welcome cash.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your income rises when you take your work more seriously. Attend adult education classes. You need to keep up with developments in your field to get a promotion. Romance holds some questions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are able to create your own career opportunities now. Work towards a goal that will make you feel happier. A romantic interlude convinces you that your choice is a good one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An addition to the family is possible. Someone who angers you is hoping you will make a mistake. Stay on top of your job. Your leadership qualities shine brightly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stop being so business-like about love! You need to show your feelings. Give a child the support he/she needs. Intervention in a family argument will only make things worse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Love blossoms between two college students or business chums. Make your apologies at the office and a barrier to career progress will be lowered. A lost opportunity returns, securing your financial future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You have matured a lot in recent months and feel happier about your life. A former job becomes available. Do not ignore a financial problem. It must not be allowed to escalate!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An outrageous idea will be accepted if you propose it at the right time and place. Charm plays a role in your success. A project you begin this week brings new prosperity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some incredible good luck is moving your way. Count your blessings! A large sum of money could be involved. An old friend is partly responsible. Foreign contacts help your business interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Practical measures bring the best results today. Swallow your pride and accept that special position or assignment. You need to scale down your financial dreams. Have the strength to say "no".

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Talk with someone you believe is standing in the way of your happiness. Travel is a good business investment now. Unusual circumstances put you in the right place at the right time.

PBS news show airs tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — "The MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour" has doubled its air time, maintained its news philosophy, but changed its expectations.

"The major difference," says the show's top executive, Al Vecchione, "is that we're no longer designed to be a supplement to the network news summaries. Now we're going to be a substitute."

The gauntlet is down. PBS' pride and joy, "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report," expands by 30 minutes tonight, beating the commercial networks in becoming non-cable television's first hour-long, evening newscast.

Robert MacNeil in New York and Jim Lehrer in Washington will continue as co-anchors, dispensing information, conducting interviews and reading the news. Charlayne Hunter-Gault is the New York-based correspondent. Judy Woodruff, formerly of NBC News, will cover Washington.

The program has received $10 million from AT&T, the largest single underwriting graft in the history of public television.

In half-hour form, "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report" offered balanced, reasoned and in-depth explanations and analysis of a single issue or news development of the day. The new broadcast will provide similar treatment to several topics, along with a summary of the day's other happenings.

"The format will be flexible to be responsive to the news of the day as it unravels," says Vecchione. "On a typical day, 12 to 15 stories will be on our program. If you watch the networks or us, you won't miss anything. Our treatment is just different."

As an example, he cited a rehearsal broadcast last month, when a Soviet diplomat's son, who may have considered defecting, held a press conference before returning to the Soviet Union. In its mock broadcast, "MacNeil-Lehrer" showed about eight minutes of the 30-minute news conference, while ABC, CBS and NBC each offered 30 seconds.

In addition, "MacNeil-Lerer," on that day, would have given fuller treatment to several stories, including Ms. Woodruff's report on an airplane hijacking to Cuba. As a scheduled piece, Ms. Hunter-Gault did a 15-minute minidocumentary on theater for the deaf.

u"Now, when something major happens, we won't have to throw out what we had planned to do," says Les Crystal, the program's executive producer and a former president of NBC News.

The other side of being a substitute, not a supplement, is that the network newscasts, which once whet the news appetite for "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report," now compete directly with "The MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour" in many markets.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A983 ♡J106 ◇5 ♣A9765
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—In support of hearts, your hand is worth the equivalent of an opening bid, and partner must have a fair hand for his vulnerable overcall. We incline to a jump to four hearts, but we would not fault you if, because you have only three trumps, you chose the conservative jump to three hearts. If you bid only two hearts, we would bet that you still own the first dollar you ever made.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q98 ♡6 ◇AK10752 ♣Q73
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—By making a free raise, partner has shown a hand which, for some reason, is better than minimum. (He could have passed with a bare 13 points.) You must upgrade your queen in partner's suit, and your singleton in the enemy suit is a golden asset. We would leap to five diamonds.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9854 ♡Q105 ◇7432 ♣82
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—You don't have much, but consider partner's bidding. His double and jump in a new suit suggests a hand that can take almost nine tricks on its own. You have two trump honors and a ruffing value for him, so it would be cowardly not to raise him to game.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ5 ♡AKQJ6 ◇873 ♣AJ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—If you had a fourth spade, the answer would be easy — you would jump to game in spades. Now you can't be sure of the best spot to play the hand, so you should jump to three clubs to create a game force. Should partner either take preference to hearts, rebid spades or bid diamonds, your next action is easy. If he raises clubs, you can correct to four hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ83 ♡Q1054 ◇1072 ♣84
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A.—We often find that players tend to respond on their stronger four-card suit. That is wrong! Bid four-card suits up the line. If you respond one spade you run the risk of losing a 4-4 heart fit should partner now rebid one no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K9 ♡A7 ◇AKJ965 ♣QJ3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—We vote for the practical action of a jump to six no trump. Your hand contains no tenaces, so there is no advantage in having the lead come up to it. Partner's hand probably has several tenace positions, and your side might gain a trick by having the lead come up to his hand. You have a balanced hand, and there is no reason why a diamond contract should play better than no trump.

Labor's promise

On this Labor Day only the most idealistic will speak in terms of full employment. Most of us realize that seekers of jobs far outnumber the available positions. Chances are, jobs forecasters say, the situation will get worse before it gets better.

The problem is multi-faceted. For one thing, the work force has been expanding in recent years what with the coming of age of all the "baby boom" babies, women joining the ranks of the employable and economic "hard times" forcing more retirement-age people to stay on the job.

The expansion of the labor pool has boosted unemployment, coupled, of course, with the downturn in the American economy and technological advancements that, while creating jobs in some areas, put machines were men and women formerly worked.

It's not an easy puzzle. Currently, 10.7 million Americans are out of work — 9.5 percent of the labor force — and no magic remedies are in sight to cure the nagging unemployment headache. What do we do?

Bring the economy back into kilter, which will create jobs and put Americans back to work. President Reagan's economic recovery program already has put to work 1.1 million more Americans than were employed last December.

As the president noted, the goal is to provide job opportunities for all those people who want to work. The challenge is meeting that goal.

It just won't sell

What happens if you give a bailout and nobody comes? That's the current question in Yugoslavia, where the government has mounted a feverish publicity campaign to convince credit-shy businessmen that they really need roughly $1 billion in largesse from Western governments and the World Bank.

As of Aug. 17, trade and commodity loans were going virtually unused. Of $600 million offered by the German government, for example, only $150 million found takers — even though the loans are earmarked, as London's Financial Times put it, for "badly needed raw materials and components for its export production."

Other banks, including Beogradska Banka, supervising the French offer of $50 million as well as the World Bank's "structural re-adjustment loan," report the same shortage of customers.

So the Yugoslav government, reacting to the ostensible complaint of businessmen that the terms of credit haven't been sufficiently explained, has been passing out pamphlets, talking up the loans on the radio, and sending representatives door to door to trumpet the scheme's virtues.

But there may be more to the picture than meets the bailout eye. Yugoslavian businessmen have never been this hard to get during previous Western rescue operations. It's just possible that they fear the austerity medicine being attached to the loans more than they fear the disease itself.

The commodities bought with the cheap (10 percent) credits, for example, are tied to export production. Western authorities are telling Yugoslavia, like every other country, to "import less, export more." Yugoslavian businessmen seem to have learned that not everyone in the world economy can do this simultaneously — and they doubt, in particular, whether their own country can.

Faced with protected and stagnant markets in France, Germany, and Yugoslavia's other major trading partners, they wonder who in the world is going to buy all these exports. And with every further depreciation of the country's currency, the dinar — another key feature of the austerity plan — the commodity imports used to generate finished exports grow more and more expensive.

Turning down a loan to finance exports you don't think you can sell nevertheless sounds like curious stuff to the World Bank. The Yugoslavians, it seems, borrow money the old-fashioned way. They pay it back.

Another View:

People vs. machines

Machines and people have been staging a series of complex running battles for years, but peace feelers may be out.

In Indianapolis, in 1968, service station attendant Robert Goines became an overnight hero of sorts when he fired his .45 caliber automatic pistol at a vending machine that took his money but refused to give him his soda pop.

This year in Florida, bank customer Thomas Morton fired six shots from a .32 caliber pistol into an automatic teller machine that ate his plastic bank card.

Men have kicked cars that quit running, assaulted elevators that took too long, bashed lights that glared in their eyes, smashed telephones, typewriters and computer terminals for unsatisfactory performances. In the contest between man and machine, when machine wins, which is what usually happens, man is inclined to react violently.

Newsweek reports an increase in lawsuits and consumer complaints has helped expand a branch of engineering called "ergonomics," which aims at making machines more compatible with people.

During the Three-Mile Island nuclear crisis, overautomated controls so compelled operators simply to monitor dials that when trouble arose they had to dash from place to place to make hands-on adjustments. Ergonomic principles are simplifying controls.

Originally, video display terminals all had keyboards attached to the screen, which could cause operator stress. Newer models have detached keyboards and screens adjustable to reduce glare.

Ergonomically, comptuter softwear is being programmed to minimize brain strain.

Most drivers trailing trucks at night judge the distance by estimating the space between the taillights, which ranges from 18 inches to 8 feet. So ergonomists suggested outlining trucks' rear perimeters with reflectible tape.

If the ergonomists can design chairs that don't press against the backs of the legs, doorframes and steps that glow in the dark, computer jargon that makes sense and tools and machines that do what they are supposed to do, with a minimum of folderol, they may eventually be numbered with the saints.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Labor Day hope bypasses ghetto

WASHINGTON — The economic recovery has bypassed the ghettos where the unemployed, most of them restless blacks, have nothing to celebrate on this Labor Day.

Jack Anderson

To look at the faces behind the statistics, I sent a reporter into the ghettos. I also spoke to social and church workers who deal with the street people.

They paint a stark mural: The ghettos are places of harsh realities; of boarded-up storefronts, padlocked doors and wailing police sirens; of rundown rental properties and public housing projects; of violence and danger, occupied at night by police and those on the far side of the law. These inner cities are populated by desperate, streetwise men, faceless, leaden-eyed women and their listless, anonymous children. The destitute cannot escape; they have no place to go. They prowl the back alleys — scavengers sifting through garbage.

Worrisomely, they are becoming a permanent underclass. Yet they are thoroughly human, with the same motivations and aspirations as their more affluent neighbors. They desperately want to work; they are willing to earn the respectability they crave, social workers plead.

Many were once-solid citizens who have become trapped in an industrial society that is changing from labor-intensive to high-technology. They are not yet able to understand how they wound up on the scrap heap after years of productive work. Resentment and cynicism have slowly turned to hopelessness. And the hopelessly poor respond to their economic plight inevitably by stealing the goods they cannot earn.

"We're gonna survive. We're gonna put food on the table and take care of our own," a Gary, Ind., steelworker, with no job and no prospects, told my associate, Bob Sherman, fiercely.

The word for this is "hustle." Just about everyone on the streets has a "hustle." The youth hang around arcades and, as they get older and meaner, move into dingy bars and pool halls, smoking, drinking, hustling.

In South Dallas, my reporter suddenly found himself in the middle of a chaotic street scene. Police leaped out of a car, cornered two young blacks, faced them against a car, their legs and arms outstretched. They were searched and manacled and shoved into a police car. The scene drew no crowd, just a few casual glances. Arrests are commonplace in the Dallas ghetto.

But there is a problem. As a hustler on the streets of Gary, Ind., put it, "There ain't much left here to steal." It means he'll have to do his hustling in Chicago's nearby, affluent white neighborhoods.

The same sentiments were heard in other ghettos. Blacks in South Dallas, for example, may not have much, but they intend to hang onto what they do have. A bitter black activist, named Bill Stoner, told my reporter: "There are a lot of angry black Vietnam veterans out there ready to take to the streets.... They're gonna start taking some of those skills they learned in Vietnam and start applying them in the streets."

Here are a few other observations:

— In the ghettos, there are few unskilled jobs available; precious little job training is being offered; welfare benefits have been slashed; and low-cost housing is disappearing. Neither the federal government nor corporate employers have accepted responsibility for retraining laid-off workers for new jobs.

— With more emotion than evidence, impoverished blacks across the country blame Ronald Reagan for their deteriorating economic condition. Under Reagan, they repeat, "the poor get poorer, and the rich get richer." This perception heightens their frustration which is turning to anger.

— President Reagan wants to establish urban free-enterprise zones and offer special concessions to encourage businessmen to set up shop in the inner cities. However plausible the idea may appear on paper, it won't work in the streets. At the same time that the president is offering businesses incentives to return to the ghettos, market analysts are telling them to stay away.

— The plague of unemployment falls most heavily on young blacks. Most of them are looking for legitimate means to escape their grim poverty. But if jobs are not available, they will hustle. Surely it would be cheaper to teach skills and provide jobs than to hire more police and build more jails.

— There are fewer jobs for black men, ironically, because of the flood of white women into the work force. Openings that might have gone to young blacks have been taken by women.

— For the poor who live in the ghettos, it's a Catch-22 situation. Either they must put up with deplorable housing or be forced out when it's improved. My reporter interviewed a welfare mother who maintains three children on an $85 monthly check, plus food stamps. Thanks to a housing subsidy, she pays $14 for a small apartment in a falling-down, rat-infested housing project. If it's renovated, she could no longer get an apartment for $14. So she accepts what she has, plugging the rat holes with cardboard.

The solution, it seems to me, is for the blacks to take firm economic control of their communities. This will require federal help, but it will be a hand-up instead of a handout. The alternative, you can be sure, will be more crime and violence.

INSIDE REPORT:

U.S. plans attack to save troops

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A tentative decision has been taken by the Reagan administration that, though intensely dangerous to the U.S. position in the world, is believed by policymakers to be unavoidable: to attack Moslem artillery positions in Lebanon with aircraft from the carrier Eisenhower if necessary to protect the lives of U.S. Marines.

Administration officials privy to President Reagan's thinking are aware a protective blanket of carrier aircraft for the Marine peacekeeping force could antagonize Syria to the point of armed retaliation. The U.S. official mood on Syria, however, is hardening. "If the Syrians think we will play patsy, they had better think again," one highly-placed official told us.

Beyond Syria, the prospect of sorties into Lebanon from the USS Eisenhower raises the ominous prospect of fulfilling the Soviet dream of turning all of Islam against the United States. In any direct U.S.-Islamic confrontation, Moscow correctly sees itself as the winner. Israel, America's strong ally against the Kremlin, is seldom troubled by and seeks to provoke U.S.-Arab hostility but cannot be cheered by a U.S.-Islamic global confrontation.

The tentative decision to use the Eisenhower's awesome air power to silence Shiite or Druze Moslem guns aimed at Marine positions in Lebanon's bloody civil war is understandable. No president can sit back and simply wring his hands when American Marines are losing their lives.

"Given the reality of Lebanon today," a senior Pentagon official told us, "the U.S. is in a position that truly seems hopeless." The U.S. cannot pull out of Lebanon because of its pledges to President Amin Gemayel. It cannot count on Israeli forces to police Lebanon because Reagan has been beseeching Israel to withdraw ever since it invaded that tragic country. It cannot strengthen the small Marine contingent because that would only double the jeopardy.

That leaves air power from the Eisenhower's flight decks as the president's only option. The Navy planes are his sole means to counter rising political anger in Congress and to give himself a cover against charges that U.S. policy in Lebanon is now bankrupt and that this nation is helpless. But the risks are formidable, in terms of both Syria and the vast Islamic world beyond it.

Syrian President Hafez Assad's refusal to withdraw his forces from Lebanon on orders of the U.S. is regarded in the State Department as a humiliation, a slap in Uncle Sam's face. The fact that Assad is now viewed as the Arab world's dominant leader, thanks to his rebuff of Washington, has hardened hearts against him at the State Department.

Thus, the intent to apply U.S. naval air power is focused directly by U.S. policymakers on Syria. That explains why some U.S. policymakers, without producing direct evidence, are privately blaming Syria for the resumption of civil war in Beirut that has caught the Marines in the crossfire.

In turn, the prospective U.S. response conceivably could draw the Syrians into direct action against U.S. forces. Although the Soviet-controlled, sophisticated anti-aircraft SAM missile sites along the Syrian-Lebanese border almost certainly would not be used against U.S. aircraft, the Syrians have weapons of their own — including missiles — to turn against the Americans.

The reaction of Greater Islam to possible U.S. attacks on Moslems in Lebanon cannot be precisely predicted, but friendly Arab ambassadors here believe it could do irreparable damage to the U.S. No matter what the provocation, it would inflame anti-Americanism and boost Islamic fundamentalists who seized power in Iran and are trying to subvert pro-American regimes from Saudi Arabia to Egypt. The reverberations would extend beyond the Arab world to non-Arab Islamic countries now friendly to the U.S., such as Turkey and Pakistan.

Ronald Reagan understands these consequences. But the indecisive policies his administration has followed since the invasion of Lebanon have trapped the United States in a prison of impotence. The president is left no choice but to send the Eisenhower's warplanes into action if needed to save the lives of American fighting men, no matter how great the risks for the U.S. in the strategic Middle East.

CHARLEY REESE

World's eyes on Persian Gulf

I might as well warn you so you won't be surprised when it hits the headlines. There is considerable danger that the United States will be involved in a war in the Persian Gulf in the not too distant future.

Charley Reese

You don't see much about it on television but the Iraqi-Iranian War is now in its third year and has killed some intelligence people say, 500,000 people.

The war started when the dictator of Iraq, Saddam Hussein, who is also known as the Butcher of Baghdad, invaded Iran. Hussein is apparently much better at murdering his political opponents than in planning a war because after a short initial success, the Iranians rallied and eventually drove the Iraqis out of Iranian territory.

Hussein is a bad guy but the ayatollah is even worse. He is determined to get Hussein and he doesn't care how many lives are lost in the process. Hussein has long since tried to make peace but the old ayatollah is not buying.

The French, whose greed seems to get them into trouble, are way out on a limb with several billions of dollars in loans to Iraq. Worse, they have recently sent Iraq advanced planes and Exocet missiles.

Now here is the problem. With the new planes and missiles, Hussein may be tempted to knock out Iran's oil facilities on the Persian Gulf. The ayatollah has said that if that happens, he will attack everybody's oil facilities on the Persian Gulf. Two American presidents have said if anybody attacks the Persian Gulf, we will fight.

Personally, I think that's dumb. We are not dependent on Persian Gulf oil. In 1981 we imported about 500 million barrels, some of that for our strategic reserves, out of a total of 1.7 billion barrels. But even that total is only about 40 percent of our needs, so you can see we could easily make up the 500 million barrels if the Persian Gulf were shut down.

To be sure, the price of oil would take off again, but high oil prices are not nearly as disruptive or as expensive as war.

It is interesting to note that Western Europe and Japan which are dependent on Persian Gulf oil have not declared the Persian Gulf an area of strategic concern to them. They have not said they would go to war to keep it open.

Now why do you suppose both Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan have declared the Persian Gulf an area of strategic concern? I'll tell you. Nearly all of the oil concessions in that area are in the hands of American corporations. These corporations seem to have a great deal more influence in Washington than the American people.

If a crazy man in Tehran decides to bomb some Arab feudal kingdoms, a not overly wise man in Washington has indicated he will commit Americans to combat.

The Soviet Union which has 26 divisions sitting on the northern border of Iran also have an old treaty which allows them to enter Iran if it is invaded by foreign troops. Now they didn't invoke that treaty when Iraq went in but that was because they were trying to court both the Iranians and the Iraqis. Would they come in if Americans attacked Iran? I don't know, but I will tell you that Stephen King's horror stories are Sunday school stuff compared to any history of the 20th century. So far nothing has been so stupid or horrible that heads of state haven't tried it.

We need to be willing to fight when our interests are threatened, but the interests of a few corporations are not the interests of the American people. If the Europeans and Japanese who are dependent on Persian Gulf oil won't fight, then we certainly shouldn't. If we didn't go to war when Iran seized our embassy and people, then we certainly shouldn't go to war just because they bomb somebody's oil refinery or pipeline.

Hussein may not attack Iran's oil or he may get knocked off by an assassin but I just want you to know that the most dangerous spot on earth today is the Persian Gulf.

Alert trucker helps in alleged killer's arrest

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — An ex-convict, captured with the help of an alert tow-truck driver, was ordered held without bond Sunday in the slaying of an elderly widow, one of 17 murders that have terrorized residents in this area this summer.

Donald R. Lego, 51, was arrested Saturday night on a murder warrant issued earlier in the day in the slaying of Mary Mae Johnson, 82, who was stabbed to death Aug. 26 in her home on the outskirts of Joliet.

At a brief hearing Sunday before Judge Herman Hasse of Will County Circuit Court, Lego was ordered held without bond until another hearing Tuesday.

When Hasse told Lego a public defender would be appointed as his lawyer if he could not afford to hire one, Lego interrupted and said, "Your honor, I will represent myself throughout these hearings."

Lego was arrested in Lockport, about five miles north of Joliet, after tow truck driver Frank Sterioti recognized the license plate number on the car Lego was driving and called police. Authorities had released the number earlier Saturday and asked residents to watch for it.

Lockport Patrolman Mike Ganster, who made the arrest, said Lego was unarmed and offered no resistance.

Will County State's Attorney Edward Petka told a news conference Saturday that authorities were looking for Lego, but he declined to say what evidence investigators had to link Lego to the killings.

"Without going into specifics, we have demonstrative physical evidence and statements from witnesses that we believe" constitutes a case that can be prosecuted, Petka said.

He also said authorities were "reluctant at this point" to consider Lego involved with any of the other killings in the last two months.

"We're not going to exclude it," he continued. "But we will not engage in any speculation at this time."

Sterioti said he saw a television broadcast Saturday night carrying Lego's picture and the license plate number of the car he was last seen driving.

Demonstrators protest jet's shooting

By The Associated Press

About 70 angry Koreans, some brandishing baseball bats, surged past police and through the gates of the Soviet Mission Retreat in Glen Cove, N.Y., at one of several demonstrations around the country Sunday protesting the downing of a Korean Air Lines jumbo jet.

The San Francisco Examiner, meanwhile, demanded in an editorial that the government shut down the Soviet consulate in that city and "kick 'em out."

Calmer action was recommended by Eugene Rostow, former director for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency in the Reagan administration, who said the Soviet Union should be submitted to the international court of justice at The Hague for reportedly shooting down the South Korean commercial airliner with 269 aboard, 61 of them Americans.

"It's clearly a breach of international law, whether the Korean plane was in Soviet airspace or not," Rostow, who now teaches at the Yale University Law School.

Sunday demonstrations also were planned in other cities including Miami, Detroit, Dallas, Kansas City, Mo., and San Fransisco.

Police called for reinforcements when protesters surged the gates at the Soviet Mission Retreat in Glen Cove, and there were no immediate reports of arrests. About five people received minor injuries, including one police detective who received a bloody nose.

About 500 protesters had gathered earlier at Glen Cove High School for speeches and a rally to protest the plane downing. Then, they marched the 400 yards to the retreat.

Some protesters burned a Soviet flag and held it up in the air as others pushed past police and through the iron gates to the compound.

About 70 people, some carrying baseball bats, marched up to the retreat house, where they rallied for several minutes before leaving peacefully.

There was no sign of the Soviets during the demonstration, which was sponsored by the Korean-American Association of New York.

There has been an on-going dispute between the Soviets and Glen Cove officials about whether residents of the Soviet diplomatic compound are entitled to use Glen Cove's beaches, golf courses and tennis courts.

A federal judge ruled Thursday — the same day the U.S government said that the Korean jet had been shot down by a Soviet fighter plane off the Soviet-controlled island of Sakhalin — the Soviets could use Glen Cove recreational facilities, at least temporarily.

In San Francisco, the Examiner said, "...Mr. President, shut that consulate down and kick 'em out."

The consulate on San Francisco's Green Street, near the U.S. 6th Army Presidio reservation, was described as "an anthill of KGB spies, unless the best authorities on the subject are all mistaken."

President Reagan should, "in retaliation" for destruction of the jet, order the consulate closed "and all of its operative contents — human, mechanical and technological — shipped to Russia forthwith," the newspaper said.

Number of crime victims drops, survey shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of victims of crime dropped 4.1 percent last year, one of the most dramatic declines in 10 years, the Justice Department said Sunday.

"The downturn...was one of the most sweeping, single-direction changes recorded" since the survey began in 1973, the Justice Department said.

The decline closely parallels a drop in crimes reported to police agencies, a decrease announced by the FBI last spring.

Non-violent crimes of larceny and burglary account for most of the decline, said the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

It reported that there were 39.8 million victims of crime in 1982, compared to 41.5 million in 1981.

The largest reduction was household burglaries, down 10 percent from 7.39 million to 6.63 million last year. Household larceny fell 5 percent, from 10.17 million in 1981 to 9.7 million in 1982.

The rate for rape, robbery and assault did not significantly change over the past two years, the bureau said.

Steven R. Schlesinger, head of the bureau, said the decline in the number of crime victims may be due to the maturing of the American population, which has reduced the percentage of crime-prone younger people.

Also possible reasons, he said, are the longer prison sentences that deter potential criminals, and a record number of criminals in state and federal prisons, who are at least temporarily prevented from committing crimes.

"There are strong arguments in support of the belief that crime rates are declining as the so-called baby boom generation matures, since a high proportion of criminal offenders are young," he said.

The FBI said last April that the number of serious crimes reported to police dropped 4 percent in 1982, the sharpest decline in five years.

Those figures also showed a drop of about 3 percent in violent crimes such as murder, robbery, rape and aggravated assault.

The far more numerous property crimes of burglary, larceny, theft and motor vehicle theft dropped 4 percent in the FBI survey.

Bail raised for alleged rapist

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Portuguese-language radio station WJFD says it has raised enough bail money to free one of the men accused in an attack on a woman who allegedly was held down on a tavern pool table and repeatedly raped while a crowd cheered.

Victor Raposo, 23, one of two men still jailed for the attack at Big Dan's Tavern six months ago, should be freed Tuesday because of broadcast appeals for money, talk show host Raimundo Delgado said.

The efforts raised $164,000, including the $50,000 needed to make Raposo's bail, he said. Delgado said part of the remaining money will be applied toward the $400,000 needed to make bail for Daniel G. Silvia, 26. The four other men charged have been freed on bail.

Fire breaks out in Macy's

NEW YORK (AP) — A smoky fire in a rubbish chute at the nation's biggest department store Sunday forced the evacuation of thousands of Labor Day weekend shoppers for about 2½ hours, fire officials said.

Joseph Spinnato, the city fire commissioner, happened to be near the Macy's flagship Herald Square store, one block from the Empire State Building, when the fire broke out and supervised the firefighting, department spokesman Robert Ash said.

The fire broke out about 1 p.m. as thousands of shoppers were milling about the store, which had begun its special Labor Day sale. About 70 firefighters were sent and had the fire under control in less than an hour. Shoppers were allowed to return at 3:30 p.m.

Anti-whaling activist indicted

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — An anti-whaling activist who was detained by the Soviets for five days in July was among 20 people indicted on drug charges in a smuggling operation that brought 15 tons of marijuana into Maine, officials said.

The indictment alleges that the marijuana was smuggled into Maine from Colombia in 1980 and 1981, then distributed.

Among the defendants facing charges of possession and importation is James Henry, 33, of Orrs Island. Henry was one of seven members of the Greenpeace Foundation picked up and released when they tried to photograph a Soviet whaling station on the Siberian coast.

Body of missing girl found

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Workmen renovating a porch unearthed the remains of a 13-year-old girl who had been missing since she was sent home from school 18 months ago for failing to have a hall pass.

The porch was at the house across the street from where Carrie Ann Tousignant lived. Identification was made by the girl's mother. The cause of death was not apparent and an autopsy was scheduled.

Police refused to say whether they had any suspects or how they think the body got under the house.

$40 million awarded in box case

HOUSTON (AP) — Because they worked so hard and without compensation, a judge has awarded more than 300 lawyers $40.7 million for their successful price-fixing suit against 34 makers of corrugated boxes.

The lawyers represented 9,000 customers. The case ended recently when the manufacturers, who allegedly eliminated competition among themselves, settled out of court for $550 million.

U.S. District Judge John Singleton made the award. He presided over a 1980 jury trial that found Mead Corp. of Dayton, Ohio, conspired to fix prices of boxes for 11 years. Mead settled for $45 million and another 33 manufacturers contributed to the $550 million settlement.

Man wants bounty hunting illegal

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Canadian businessman Sidney Jaffe says he hopes the controversy over his seizure by bounty hunters and battle to overturn his land-sales convictions will help wipe out illegal bounty hunting.

Jaffe, 59, made his remarks the day after the 5th District Court of Appeal in Daytona Beach overturned his convictions and 30-year sentence on 28 counts of violating the state Land Sales Act. However, the court upheld the Canadian's conviction and five-year sentence for failing to appear for trial, and state officials say he won't be freed anytime soon.

Fighting erupts after Israelis pull out

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Bloody civil warfare between Christians and Druse broke out Sunday in the central mountains and spread to the suburbs of Beirut immediately after the Israeli army pulled back to southern Lebanon.

Police said 34 people were killed and 71 wounded in the embattled mountains and in Christian neighborhoods of East Beirut that were pounded by artillery from the Syrian-controled area of the mountains.

Hundreds of rockets rained down on mountain villages, and fighting in the suburbs caught British, French, Italian and U.S. peacekeeping forces in fierce artillery exchanges.

A U.S. Marine was slightly hurt and an Italian soldier was wounded as thunderous explosions cast huge palls of smoke over the city's southern suburbs and Lebanese army units fought with Druse militiamen near Beirut International Airport.

Marines fired back at Druse militiamen south of the airport at one point during the afternoon fighting, while U.S. helicopter gunships and troops were put on full alert, Maj. Robert Jordan, the Marine spokesman, said.

Jordan said one Marine suffered a slight shrapnel wound on his left arm when a mortar round struck nearby. He did not identify the soldier.

The spokesman said random artillery shellfire and bullets whizzed through the U.S. zone all day, but he reported there were no other American casualties.

Spokesman for Italian peacekeeping troops said one of the men suffered a broken leg, elbow and hands when two shells exploded near his position.

Amid the new fighting, a car bomb exploded in the southern suburb of Haret Hreik, killing nine people and wounding 10 others, police said. Spokesmen could give no further details of the explosion.

U.S. and Lebanese officials had pressed for a delay in the long-anticipated Israeli pullback, fearing a bloodbath between the Christian and Druse militias. Israel pulled its troops back to the Awali River in an effort to reduce Israeli casualties and shorten vulnerable supply lines.

Lebanese troops were slated to take over the evacuated area, but the Israeli withdrawal was completed before any Lebanese units moved into the region.

Druse forces, claiming a government bias in favor of the Christian militia, had vowed to resist any Lebanese deployment into the abandoned Israeli positions.

Lebanese newspapers and radio stations said the army was caught by surprise by the swift, 12-hour Israeli withdrawal from the mountain region it had occupied for 15 months.

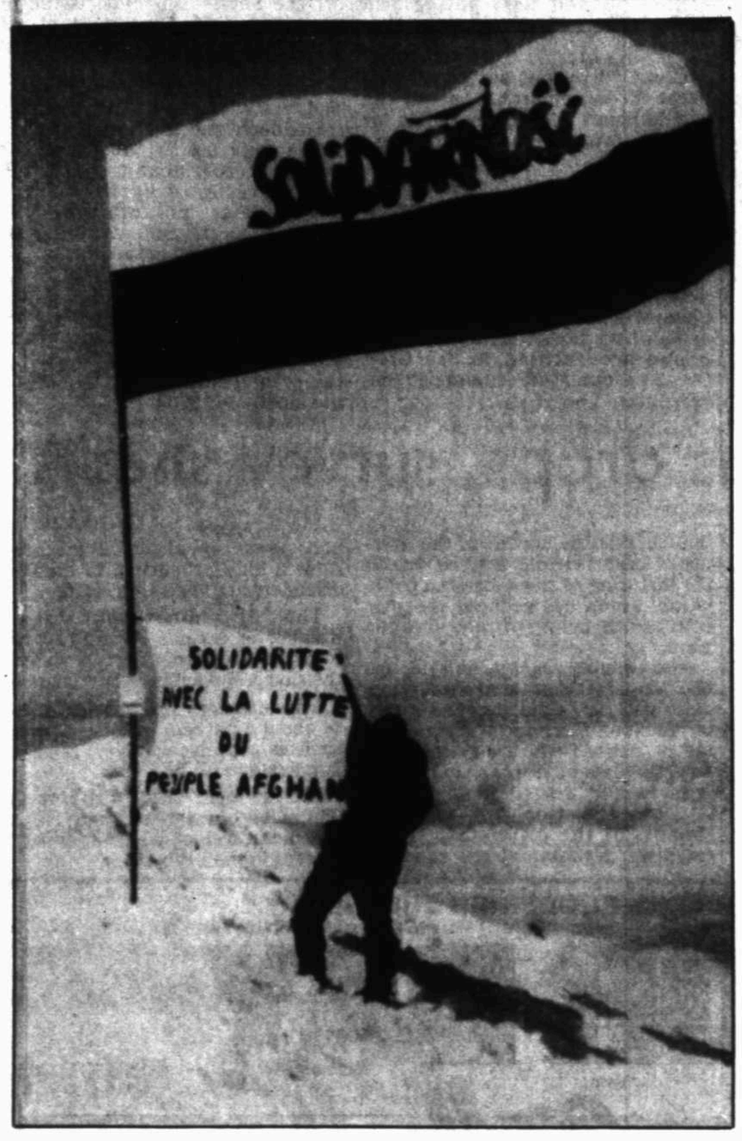

But In Tel Aviv, Israeli officials said "Advance notice of the pullback was given to representatives of the Lebanese army, the Druse and the Christians in all sectors, with a demand to maintain quiet in the area."

Israeli tanks, armored personnel carriers and jeeps moved out of the mountains on twisting roads toward a new, purportedly safer, defense line along the Awali, some 28 miles to the south. Two Israeli jets flew strafing missions against two Syrian T-55 tanks that moved toward the evacuated areas during the predawn operation, an army communique said.

Leftist Druse forces, supported by Syrian artillery, launched a three-pronged attack against Christian militia to the north, south and east of Beirut, the Christian forces said, while other Druse units occupied a strategic road junction near the airport.

The Lebanese army, backed by armed personnel carriers, wrested back the junction after a two-hour battle — its only action of the day.

Most of the day's fighting was between Druse and Christian units, who began trading artillery rounds just moments after the Israeli's left the area.

Baker: Marines won't be replacing Israelis

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has no plans to send U.S. Marines into the troubled Chouf region of Lebanon to replace Israeli troops that have withdrawn, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said Sunday.

"The president made it clear there is no plan to change the mission of the American Marines," Baker said after a congressional leadership meeting with Reagan at the White House.

"The American Marines are there on a very specific mission as a part of a four nation multi-national force," said Baker.

Meanwhile, as fighting between Christians and Druse broke out in the central mountains and spread to the Beirut suburbs following the Israeli pullout, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the United States had asked Israel to delay its redeployment out of the Chouf region.

"We did make our views known that we would have preferred a further delay in the Israeli redeployment because we were aware that it could (lead to) renewed fighting in the region," Speakes said.

He said those views were expressed "as late as yesterday afternoon."

But since the Israelis were withdrawing anyway, Speakes called on the Syrians to do the same. "It's incumbent on the Syrians to move forward with their withdrawal which would then reduce the tensions."

Speakes, like Baker, quoted Reagan as saying "there were no plans to change the mission of the U.S. contingent in the multi-national force."

That statement apparently was designed to allay fears that the Marines would move into the Chouf and, in effect, replace the Israeli forces.

Speakes said Reagan told the congressional leaders that "we are at a critical point in trying to re-establish peace in the area."

The spokesman said the meeting brought agreement between the president and the congressional leaders to endorse Lebanese President Amin Gemeyal's efforts to achieve a national consensus.

As for the new contingent of 2,000 Marines being sent to the area, Speakes described their mission as "to be on hand if they are needed," but said there are no plans to expand the multi-national force. Nor were there any plans for the Marines to go ashore, Speakes added.

After the meeting with Reagan, Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd said he believed Congress supports Reagan's decision to have Marines in Lebanon as part of a multi-national peacekeeping force.

But he said it "would be very proper, if additional Marines are sent in," that the advice of Congress be sought first.

The rare Sunday meeting was called for Reagan to consult with the leaders about sanctions he may impose against the Russians for shooting down a Korean jumbo jet carrying 269 people, but Speakes said they discussed the Middle East for an hour.

In addition to the 1,200 Marines who are part of the international peacekeeping force in the region, Reagan last week decided to send 2,000 more Marines. Baker said their role would be "to protect American Marines and to serve as a reserve force."

Pilgrims blare death slogans

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Throngs of Iranian pilgrims surged through the streets of the Saudi holy city of Medina on Sunday shouting "Death to America," "Death to the Soviet Union," and "Death to criminal Israel," witnesses reported.

"They were blaring death slogans against the whole world," one local resident said in a telephone interview. Saudi police watched the protesters but did not intervene, the witness said.

An estimated 86,000 Iranians have converged on the holy cities of Medina and Mecca for the annual pilgrimage.

Policemen die in demonstration

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Authorities said the seven people killed during an anti-government demonstration Saturday in Sind province were all policeman.

Earlier reports had said only three policeman had been killed in the violence in the town of Moro, 180 miles north of Karachi.

Fifteen other people were injured when gunfire broke out during the demonstration, which was organized by the illegal Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, which has launched a civil disobedience campaign intended to force President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq to restore the 1973 constitution — suspended in 1977 — and call elections.

China has easy pregnancy test

PEKING (AP) — China has devised a "do-it-yourself" pregnancy test for rural women that is clinically safe and 98 percent accurate, the official news agency Xinhua says.

The agency reported that a simple pregnancy testing card costing the equivalent of five cents has been devised by the Shanghai Medical Laboratory. With a few drops of urine, the specially treated one-square-inch card turns white if the woman is pregnant but turns into fine powder if she is not, according to researcher Sun Dani.

The invention is expected to help family planning authorities keep track of pregnancies and urge women to have abortions if their pregnancy is not allowed. China, struggling to keep its population of more than a billion from growing too fast, has been asking families to have only one child.

Dickey, Stenerud lift Pack past Oilers

Manning doesn't 'ever want to see Dickey again'

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler quarterback Archie Manning watched history repeat itself Sunday as Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey completed five touchdown passes and Jan Stenerud booted a 42-yard field goal with 9:05 left in an overtime period for a 41-38 National Football League victory.

"Lynn had five touchdowns the last time I played against him when I was with New Orleans," Manning said. "I don't ever want to see him again. Ten touchdown passes in two games — I've gone two years without throwing that many TD passes."

After his club record-tying performance, Dickey left the game in the fourth quarter suffering from headaches that forced him to turn the overtime quarterbacking duties over to backup David Whitehurst.

DICKEY RIDDLED the Oilers with four first half touchdowns and hit a 74-yard bomb to James Lofton for his fifth shot in the fourth quarter to give Green Bay a 38-31 lead.

Dickey suffered from lower back pain throughout the preseason but missed practice Friday and Saturday with a virus and he left the game with severe headaches.

"I once went to the wrong huddle and (Oiler linebacker) Willie Tullis told me my huddle was on the other side," Dickey said. "I just lost my direction."

Dickey's five-touchdown performance tied the club record he shares two other former Packer quarterbacks.

Stensrud's game-winning field goal finally ended the game after the Oilers had rallied twice in the fourth quarter.

"Before every game, I prepare for a close game so when the time comes, if it is close, I'll be ready," Stensrud said. "I'm never 100 per cent sure, but I expect to make any kind of kick from any where on the field."

THE PACKERS took the kickoff to start the overtime period and drove from the Packer 17 to the Houston 24 to set up Stenerud's game-winner.

Whitehurst completed a 10-yard pass to Philip Epps on third down to keep the drive going and running back Eddie Lee Ivery contributed runs of nine, 12 and eight yards in the winning drive.

Earl Campbell scored three touchdowns and rushed 123 yards before leaving the game in the final minute with a bruised knee to ignite the comeback that forced the overtime period.

Rookie running back Larry Moriarty put the game into overtime with a one-yard plunge with 48 seconds left in the game to tie the score for the second time in the fourth quarter.

Campbell scored on runs of 7, 8 and one-yard, the last score tying the game at 31-31 with 4:23 left in the game.

Dickey completed a club record 18 straight passes to start the game and finished with 27 of 31 passes for 333 yards.

But Dickey hit a 74-yard touchdown bomb to James Lofton with 3:13 left to play that put the Packers back in the lead.

The Packers had taken a 28-10 halftime lead on Dickey's touchdown passes of 25 yards to tight end Paul Coffman, and five and 13 yards to John Jefferson and 11 yards to Gerry Ellis.

HOUSTON'S FIRST half scoring came on a 49-yard field goal by Florian Kempf and a 47-yard touchdown pass from Archie Manning to wide receiver Tim Smith.

Campbell scored on a seven-yard run and Stenerud booted a 46-yard field goal in the third quarter to set up the fourth-quarter charge.

Dickey did not miss a pass until he overthrew Jefferson with 1:12 left in the first half. Dickey's string broke his own club record set Oct. 12, 1980 against Tampa Bay.

Lofton finished with 1:54 yards on eight receptions to lead Packer receivers. Jefferson had 55 yards on five catches, including his two touchdowns.

Campbell rushed more than 100 yards for the 33rd time in his pro career and became the 11th player in NFL history to surpass the 7,000-yard career rushing total. Campbell now has 7,118 career yards.

Dickey's only interception of the game came in the fourth quarter, when linebacker Robert Abraham picked off a pass and returned it to Houston's 38.

That started the drive to Campbell's touchdown that tied the game at 31-31.

Dickey's final touchdown pass came moments later, when Lofton made a leaping fingertip catch and raced into the end zone.

Green Bay Packers fullback Gerry Ellis carries the ball aloft after scoring on an 11-yard touchdown pass from Lynn Dickey in the first half Sunday in the Astrodome. Houston's Willie Tullis (20) walks away as Packers' Paul Coffman (82) and Phillip Epps (85) celebrate.

DeBerg tosses winner

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Reserve quarterback Steve DeBerg, replacing battered rookie John Elway, passed two yards to tight end Ron Egloff for a touchdown with 2:54 to play, giving the Denver Broncos a 14-10 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Elway, the NFL's most heralded quarterback since Terry Bradshaw's rookie season of 1970, played only the first half, completing just one of eight passes, then sat out the rest of the game with a bruised right elbow. He was under constant and intense pressure in his pro debut, being sacked four times for 26 yards in losses and throwing an interception.

With time winding down, DeBerg guided Denver 56 yards in 10 plays for the winning score that wiped out the Steelers' 10-7 lead built on Gary Anderson's 31-yard field goal in the third period.

Sammy Winder, who scored Denver's first TD on a 1-yard run in the second period following a Franco Harris fumble, had runs of 22 and 14 yards in the winning march.

On third-and-goal at the 2, DeBerg faked a handoff to Nathan Poole, who plunged over the middle. Then DeBerg drifted to his right, looked left and fluttered the TD pass to Egloff. DeBerg finished with completions of four of eight passes for 35 yards.

Chiefs defeat Hawks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bill Kenney and Jewerl Thomas tossed touchdown passes and Nick Lowery booted a 19-yard field goal to lead the Kansas City Chiefs to a 17-13 victory over Seattle.

Kenney, given the starting job when Steve Fuller was traded to the Los Angeles Rams in the pre-season, hit 19 of 32 passes for 247 yards and one touchdown, making John Mackovic a winner in his head coaching debut.

The Chiefs moved to the Seattle 1-yard line late in the fourth quarter on a drive keyed by a 48-yard pass play from Kenney to Carson, and Nick Lowery tacked on a 19-yard field goal for a 17-6 lead.

Lindsey claims B.C. Open title by one over Morgan

Midland's John Adams finishes in tie for third place with Levi

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Lindsey was about ready to throw in the towel.

With a wife and newborn baby to support and just $8,700 in winnings through the end of June, Lindsey said he was thinking of quitting professional golf and becoming a salesman.

"Now I think I'll stick with golf," Lindsey said Sunday after winning top prize of $54,000 with a 4-stroke victory in the $300,000 B.C. Open.

Lindsey shot rounds of 71-64-65-68 for a 16-under-par total of 268 — "the best golf of my life" — to claim his first victory in five years on the Professional Golfers' Association Tour.

GIL MORGAN, the B.C. Open champion in 1977, combined seven birdies with three bogeys to close with a 67 for second place, four strokes behind Lindsey.

"I didn't look at the leader board until the 17th green," said Lindsey, unaccustomed to the front-runner's position. "I just tried to stay within my game ... and leave my putting alone."

"He played awful steady," Morgan said of Lindsey. "He deserved everything he got today."

One stroke back at 11 under were Wayne Levi and Midland's John Adams, who had final rounds of 64 and 68, respectively. Don Pooley, the 1981 B.C. Open champion, and Mike Reid each shot 69 to tie at 10-under totals of 274 for the tournament on the par-71, 6,966-yard En-Joie Golf Club course.

Pat McGowan shaved four strokes from par in the final round to stand alone at 9-under for the tournament.

LINDSEY, 31, of Palm Harbor, Fla., had never finished higher than a seventh-place tie on the tour — and said after Saturday's third round that he was playing "the best golf of my life."

Lindsey's top finish this year — an eighth-place tie at the Western Open — earned him about $10,000 and paid the hospital bills for his newborn daughter.

Morgan is one of the tour's most consistent performers and moved into fourth place on the money list with his second-place finish here. He won the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open and Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open earlier this year.

Victor Regalado, who had sole possession of second place after three rounds, faded on Sunday with a 72 to share the 8-under-par spot with Sammy Rachels, Steven Liebler and Craig Stadler.

Stadler played a final round of 65, including six birdies on the par-34 back nine.

Lee Trevino ballooned to 75 in the last round, finishing the tournament at 287.

Nick Price, the upset winner of last week's World Series of Golf, finished with an 71 to round out the tournament at 281.

Calvin Peete, the defending champion, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard on Friday.

Peete tapped a rolling ball on the sixth green, which incurs an automatic two-stroke penalty, but signed a scorecard that did not note the penalty, tour officials said.

Redskins open title defense tonight

Both teams have good season-opening record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins open defense of their title Monday night as they host the Dallas Cowboys in a nationally televised contest at sold-out Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

The game, broadcast by ABC-TV, will begin at 9 p.m. EDT.

The two teams, expected to battle for top honors in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division, traditionally are fast starters coming out of the gate.

The Redskins have won 10 of their last 15 openers. The Cowboys had won 17 openers in a row until the streak was snapped last year by Pittsburgh.

The hottest team in football over the last two years, the Redskins have won 15 of their last 16 games, their only loss coming here last year to Dallas, 24-10.

The teams met again in the conference championship with the Redskins winning 31-17.

MONDAY NIGHT'S game also will mark the regular season debut of the Redskins' No.1 draft choice, Darrell Green.

A cornerback and punt returner, the 5-foot-8, 170-pounder out of Texas A&I has been forced into the starting lineup with last year's starters Jeris White, an unsigned free agent, and Tony Peters facing sentencing after pleading guilty to trafficking in drugs.

Dallas quarterback Danny White is expected to test Green early.

"They have to test him early, to learn if he is up to the challenge," said Redskin defensive coordinator Larry Peccatielo.

"I can't be worried about the Cowboys coming at me," said Green. "As a rookie everybody is looking at you. If I let it bother me, I wouldn't be here."

Green's play was erratic in the exhibition season. Beaten twice for scores against Miami, he picked off a pass against Buffalo and returned it 21 yards for a touchdown.

"He was drafted in the first round and he hasn't done anything to show me we made the wrong decision," Peccatielo said. "I've been satisfied with my progress," Green added. "I won't get there overnight but I will be better."

If he gets any better at returning kicks Redskin All-Pro punt returner Mike Nelms may be out of a job. The first time he touched the ball in the NFL, Green returned a punt against Atlanta for a 61-yard touchdown.

"I like to get my hands on the ball, whether it is returning a punt or intercepting a pass, I like to get it and run," said Green.

Running is what Green does best. Clocked at 10.08 seconds in the 100 meters in college, only Olympic gold favorite Carl Lewis had a better time in 1982.

"All of the Cowboy receivers have good hands and speed but that is not my concern. I worry about (Drew) Pearson. He has the experience," Green said.

PEARSON, AN 11-year veteran, is the Cowboys all-time leading receiver with 442 receptions. In the regular season meeting with the Redskins in 1982 he caught five passes for 50 yards. In the playoffs he grabbed five more off Redskin defenders, including one for a touchdown.

"Darrell is a rookie but he is capable," Peccatielo said. "Everybody has to get experience sometime; unfortunately for him it will be against Dallas with a couple of million fans watching."

Boxer dies from ring injuries

By The Associated Press

Kiko Bejines became the third professional fighter to die from boxing injuries suffered in a world championship bout in this decade. His death Sunday made him the seventh fighter in the world to die from injuries this year, according to Ring magazine.

It was the first professional ring death to occur in the United States this year. An American amateur boxer died while training.

Bejines never regained consciousness after being knocked out in the 12th round by Albert Davila Thursday night in their World Boxing Council banatamweight fight at Los Angeles.

Krickstein upsets No. 15 Gerulaitis in U.S. Open

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Sixteen-year-old Aaron Krickstein upset 15th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis 3-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 Sunday to advance into the round-of-16 at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Krickstein, who will begin his junior year in high school at Grosse Point, Mich., a Detroit suburb, when America's premier tennis tournament is over, combined his brilliant backhand passing shots with Gerulaitis' inconsistent play to join most of the top seeds in the fourth round at the National Tennis Center.

Others capturing third-round matches on Sunday were second-seeded Ivan Lendl, No. 4 Yannick Noah of France, No. 5 Mats Wilander of Sweden and No. 9 Jimmy Arias in the men's singles, and No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, No. 10 Zina Garrison, No. 14 Jo Durie of Britain, No. 16 Kathy Jordan and unseeded Ivanna Madruga-Osses of Argentina in the women's draw.

Top-seeded John McEnroe easily advanced to the fourth round, crushing Vince Van Patten 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 in a match that wasn't as close as the score. The New York left-hander toyed with his opponent for 1½ hours before closing out the third-round mismatch.

Two other seeds fell on this, Day 6 of the 13-day tournament. Andres Gomez of Ecuador upset No. 13 Steve Denton 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, while Andrea Leand, who has always done well in the Open, eliminated sixth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia 7-5, 4-6, 6-2.

McEnroe's victory sends the three-time U.S. Open champion against 16th-seeded Bill Scanlon in the fourth round, while John Lloyd of Britain meets Mark Dickson, No. 3 Jimmy Connors plays No. 11 Gene Mayer and No. 14 Eliot Teltscher takes on Greg Holmes in the top half of the men's singles draw.

The bottom half will pit unseeded Joakim Nystrom against Arias, Krickstein against Noah, and Wilander against Gomez.

Lendl will meet the winner of Sunday night's battle between No. 12 Johan Kriek and Roscoe Tanner.

"The first two sets I was thinking of playing Vitas Gerulaitis," Krickstein said after pulling off one of the biggest upsets of the $2 million tournament. "Once I won the third set, I knew I had a chance to win."

GERULAITIS GOT the first break in the fifth set, taking a 4-2 lead when Krickstein's backhand lob sailed long. But the youngster, who was given a wild card into this tournament after winning the national junior boys' 18-and-under title, broke right back in the seventh game as Gerulaitis double-faulted three times, including two straight when he was at ad point.

When Krickstein held his own service, he had pulled even at 4-4.

Then he broke Gerulaitis again after grabbing a love-40 lead, the final point coming on a wicked backhand service return that Gerulaitis could only watch whiz past.

The two split the first four points of the 10th game before Krickstein took a 40-30 lead on Gerulaitis' unforced error, a forehand that was long. And when he rifled a backhand passing shot down the line, he had a spot in the fourth round against Noah.

"I felt I could break his serve at any time," said Krickstein, who won 15 of the last 18 points of the match. "I was putting a lot of pressure on him."

The second-seeded Lendl, a man with a mission, continued his relentless march toward his first Grand Slam title by crushing Jonny Levine 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. Noah, the 1983 French Open champion, stopped Eric Korita 5-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4, and Wilander eliminated Chile's Ricardo Acuna 6-4, 7-5, 6-1.

IN WOMEN'S play, Lloyd, a six-time U.S. Open champion, kept pace with top-seeded Martina Navratilova by easily ousting Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-4, 6-0 in 64 minutes. Navratilova had won her third-round match Saturday.

Garrison defeated Carling Bassett of Canada 6-4, 6-3; Durie downed Terry Phelps 6-4, 3-6, 6-2; Jordan ousted Terry Holladay 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, and Madruga-Osses eliminated Pam Teeguarden 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Both Lloyd and Navratilova have reached the round-of-16 without losing a set. Lloyd has lost only nine games, while Navratilova has lost eight.

Lloyd lost her serve twice, in the third and seventh games of the first set, but she broke Maleeva's service three times. She needed only 20 minutes to breeze through the second set.

Noah, playing with a brace on his right knee, dominated Korita with a powerful serve. After the first set, he never lost his serve while firing 10 aces. He had 14 aces in the match.

After winning the gold medal in doubles at the Pan American Games, Korita was playing in his first tournament as a professional. He had reached the third round with victories over fellow American Brian Teacher and Czechoslovakia's Libor Pimek.

Bassett double-faulted to give Garrison her third match point, and the Houston native won when Bassett hit a groundstroke long.

Upset with her performance, Bassett grabbed her rackets and left the court before the winner could even towel off.

Lendl, the strong Czechoslovakian right-hander who lost to Jimmy Connors in last year's U.S. Open final, needed only 70 minutes to post his third consecutive straight-set victory. Lendl has lost only 14 games in his rapid race into the fourth round.

The only seeded player in the men's draw who has not yet lost a set in this year's tournament, Lendl again was dominating. He rifled winners off both sides from the baseline and sometimes attacked, going to the net behind his powerful serve.

Levine, a member of the U.S. Junior Davis Cup team for the third straight year, had no weapons to fight back against the bombardment from Lendl. A native of Phoenix, Ariz., who attends the University of Texas, Levine had eliminated two hard-serving veterans, Victor Amaya and Peter Fleming, before being trampled by Lendl in his rush towards the title.

Lendl set a single-year record in 1982 when he won more than $2 million. But he feels his record is flawed since he never has won a Grand Slam tournament — Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian Opens.

"I'd give all my titles and money to win a Grand Slam tournament," he has said.

Last year, when he defeated McEnroe, then the defending champion, in the semifinals, was the first time he had reached the final of a Grand Slam event.

Stewart goes 8⅔ as Texas nips Royals, 3-2

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Dave Stewart gave up eight hits over 8⅔ innings to help the Texas Rangers defeat the staggering Kansas City Royals 3-2.

It was Kansas City's eighth loss in its last nine games.

Stewart got support from run-scoring singles by Jim Sundberg, Billy Sample and Larry Parrish as he notched his second victory against one loss since coming to Texas from Los Angeles last month.

Stewart left with two outs in the ninth after issuing a two-out walk to Onix Concepcion. Reliever Victor Cruz gave up a single to U.L. Washington and an RBI single to Leon Roberts before getting the final out for his fifth save. Eric Rasmussen, 2-4, took the loss.

Kansas City had scored in the seventh when Daryl Motley, Concepcion and Roberts singled.

The Rangers scored twice in the second inning. Mickey Rivers and Bucky Dent singled before Sundberg and Sample followed with RBI singles.

A single by Jim Anderson, a walk to George Wright and Parrish's single made it 3-1 in the sixth.

American League

Angels 5, Brewers 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Doug DeCinces' three-run homer helped Tommy John to his 246th career win as the California Angels downed the Milwaukee Brewers 5-3.

John, 10-11, outdueled former teammate Don Sutton, 7-12, in the first confrontation ever between the two veterans who were part of the same Los Angeles Dodgers pitching rotation for eight seasons.

John left with two outs in the ninth inning after the Brewers loaded the bases. Reliever Luis Sanchez walked Cecil Cooper to force home a run and another run scored on catcher Mike O'Berry's passed ball. Sanchez then got Ted Simmons to fly out for his seventh save.

Sutton has not won since July 14, going 0-7 in nine starts since then.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 3

TORONTO — Ernie Whitt hit a three-run homer with two outs in the 10th inning, his second home run of the game, to power the Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

With one out in the 10th, Lloyd Moseby doubled. After Willie Upshaw was intentionally walked, Cliff Johnson flied out.

Whitt, who hit a solo homer in the seventh inning, then drilled a 3-1 pitch from Aurelio Lopez, 9-8, that hit the top the top of the fence in center field and bounced out of the park for his 15th homer of the season.

Dave Stieb, 14-11, struck out a career-high 11 batters in recording his 12th complete game of the season.

Red Sox 6, White Sox 2

BOSTON — Tony Armas drove in three runs with a triple and a single and Bruce Hurst pitched a four-hitter as the Boston Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox 6-2.

Wade Boggs, the American League's leading batter, singled twice to raise his average to .366. His RBI single in the fifth capped a two-run fifth inning that gave Boston a 3-2 lead.

Hurst, 11-10, struck out eight and walked three. He surrendered a solo homer to rookie Ron Kittle, his 30th, in the second inning and a run in the fourth on singles by Carlton Fisk and Tom Paciorek and Greg Luzinski's sacrifice fly.

Orioles 9, Twins 6

MINNEAPOLIS — John Shelby's two-run single capped a three-run eighth inning as the Baltimore Orioles downed the Minnesota Twins 9-6.

With the score tied 5-5, Eddie Murray led off the eighth with a double against Ron Davis, 3-7, and pinch hitter Al Bumbry and Jim Dwyer walked to load the bases. John Lowenstein then knocked in the go-ahead run with a sacrifice fly.

Todd Cruz's infield single filled the bases and Shelby hit a two-out liner up the middle to drive in two more runs.

Winner Storm Davis, 12-5, went the first seven innings and Tippy Martinez finsihed up for his 14th save, allowing Dave Engle's sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Yankees 4, Mariners 3

SEATTLE — Ron Guidry allowed eight hits over 8⅓ innings to help the New York Yankees defeat the the Seattle Mariners 4-3.

Guidry, 17-8, who had pitched nine consecutive complete games, left with two outs in the ninth inning after Steve Henderson's second home run of the game, a two-run blast.

Rich Gossage got the final out for his 17th save.

Indians 9, A's 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Pat Tabler sent Cleveland ahead with a two-run single in a five-run fifth inning and Rick Sutcliffe posted his 16th victory as the Indians trounced the Oakland A's 9-2.

The Indians' rally erased a 2-0 Oakland lead, and Cleveland added one run in the sixth and three in the seventh. Sutcliffe, 16-9, allowed seven hits and struck out eight.

Oakland starter Steve McCatty, 5-7, had pitched 19 innings this season against the Indians without allowing a run before they broke through in the fifth.

Murphy's homers lead Braves to 6-5 win over Pirates

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Braves just haven't been the same since third baseman Bob Horner broke his wrist against the San Diego Padres on Aug. 15. It obviously hasn't affected Dale Murphy of late, though.

Murphy, who usually bats in front of Horner, isn't seeing the best pitches since the Braves' slugger has been out of the lineup — but it hasn't stopped him from one of his hottest hitting binges of the season in the past week.

Murphy knocked in four runs with his 27th and 28th homers of the year, giving him 13 hits in his last 19 at-bats, to pace the Braves to a big 6-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday. The RBIs gave Murphy 13 in his last 14 games.

The victory, the Braves' sixth in 20 games since Horner was injured, snapped a six-game losing streak for Atlanta, which moved within 2½ games of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West. The Dodgers dropped a 3-2 decision to the Montreal Expos in 12 innings.

National League

"I've just been trying not to be a burden with Horner out," said Murphy. "This isn't any time to give up."

In other National League action, Chicago outscored Houston 9-7; St. Louis nipped Cincinnati 5-4; San Francisco whipped Philadelphia 10-4 and San Diego turned back New York 7-5.

Murphy's fourth- and sixth-inning home runs, driving in Claudell Washington each time, knocked out Jose DeLeon and handed starter Craig McMurtry a 4-1 lead that he and Gene Garber promptly dissipated.

Johnny Ray's third single of the game, a two-run job, highlighted a four-run seventh inning that put the Pirates ahead 5-4 before the Braves rallied for their winning runs in the eighth. Murphy triggered the rally with a single and scored on Chris Chambliss' double, and the winning run came home on an error by first baseman Lee Mazzilli.

Terry Forster, 3-2, got the victory with relief help from Steve Bedrosian, who posted his 19th save. Jim Bibby, 4-11, was the loser.

Expos 3, Dodgers 2

In Montreal, Tim Raines hit an RBI-single with none out in the 12th inning to lift the Expos over the Dodgers. Chris Speier led off the 12th with a double off Pat Zachry, 5-1, before scoring the winning run.

Gary Carter had tied the game in the eighth for Montreal with a two-out RBI-single. Reliever Dan Schatzeder, 5-2, pitched three innings of no-hit ball to earn the victory.

"That's a big game for us and not just because the two teams ahead of us lost," said Raines. "We came from behind and it's important for us to win that type of ballgame.

"It's a good sign, a sign that we're starting to play well. Getting a big hit at the right time sometimes is all you need to get you going again."

Cubs 9, Astros 7

In Chicago, Carmelo Martinez hit a two-out, three-run homer in the eighth inning to lead the Cubs to a comeback victory over Houston.

Bill Doran had driven in four runs, three with a homer, to help the Astros take a 7-5 lead going into the eighth. But with one out, Dave Smith walked Keith Moreland and then gave up a single to Dan Rohn, before yielding to Bill Dawley, the third Astros pitcher.

Dawley, 6-6, struck out Jody Davis to gain the second out, but gave up an RBI-single to Jay Johnstone before grooving a 1-1 delivery to Martinez.

Warren Brusstar, 3-1, who worked 2 2-3 innings before Lee Smith came on in the ninth, gained the victory. The save was the league-leading 24th for Smith.

Cardinals 5, Reds 4

In St. Louis, Willie McGee singled home Lonnie Smith from second base in the ninth inning to lead the Cardinals over Cincinnati.

McGee's hit came off Cincinnati reliever Ben Hayes, 2-6, giving the victory to Jeff Lahti, 3-1. Smith opened the inning with a double, his second hit, and Hayes afterward walked Ozzie Smith intentionally to set up the game-winning blow.

Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, honored by fans during pre-game ceremonies, slugged a three-run homer in a pinch-hit role to give Cincinnati a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning. The blow, Bench's 388th career homer, came off Cardinals' relief ace Bruce Sutter.

Giants 10, Phillies 4

In Philadelphia, Darrell Evans and Jack Clark each hit two-run homers as San Francisco hammered the Phillies.

Andy McGaffigan, 3-9, allowed one run in 4 1-3 innings of relief, to gain his first victory since May 6. McGaffigan struck out eight and walked two before getting help from Greg Minton, who pitched the final three innings for his 18th save.

Evans' homer, his 28th, provided the Giants with a 2-0 lead in the first on Evans' two-run homer. Clark cracked his 18th homer in the fourth to give the Giants a 7-3 lead at that point.

Padres 7, Mets 5

In New York, Terry Kennedy smacked a two-run homer to highlight a six-run fifth inning and added an RBI-single in the eighth to lead San Diego over the Mets.

Sid Monge, 6-2, was the winner with relief help from Elias Sosa. Ed Lynch, 9-9, was charged with all six runs before giving way to Carlos Diaz in the fifth when the Padres sent nine men to the plate.

Juan Bonilla and Tony Gwynn had RBI-singles during the Padres' game-breaking uprising.

Ashman plays 10 positions in one game

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Shortly after making baseball history by playing 10 positons in one game Saturday night, infielder Mike Ashman of the Albany-Colonie A's said, "I didn't think it was that big a deal."

However, the Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum at Cooperstown, N.Y., and the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues at St. Petersburg, Fla., both did, verifying that the feat never had been previously accomplished.

Ashman, a .254 hitter for the Eastern League team, said, "At first I was pretty embarrassed about the whole thing. Then I saw the way everyone reacted...it was tremendous. I kind of got used to all the attention."

Ashman, 23, started the A's game against the Nashua Angels, their final contest of the season, as designated hitter, and played the nine field positions over the next eight innings.

The A's won the game 5-3.

Two major leaguers, Bert Campaneris in 1965 for the Kansas City A's and Cesar Tovar in 1968 for the Minnesota Twins, played all nine fielding positions in one game.

In Saturday's game, Ashman played left field and pitcher in the second inning, center field in the third inning, catcher in the fourth, right field in the fifth, first base in the sixth, second base in the seventh, shortstop in the eighth and third base in the ninth.

He went 1-for-4 and drove in one run. In the field, Ashman had a total of four putouts and one assist.

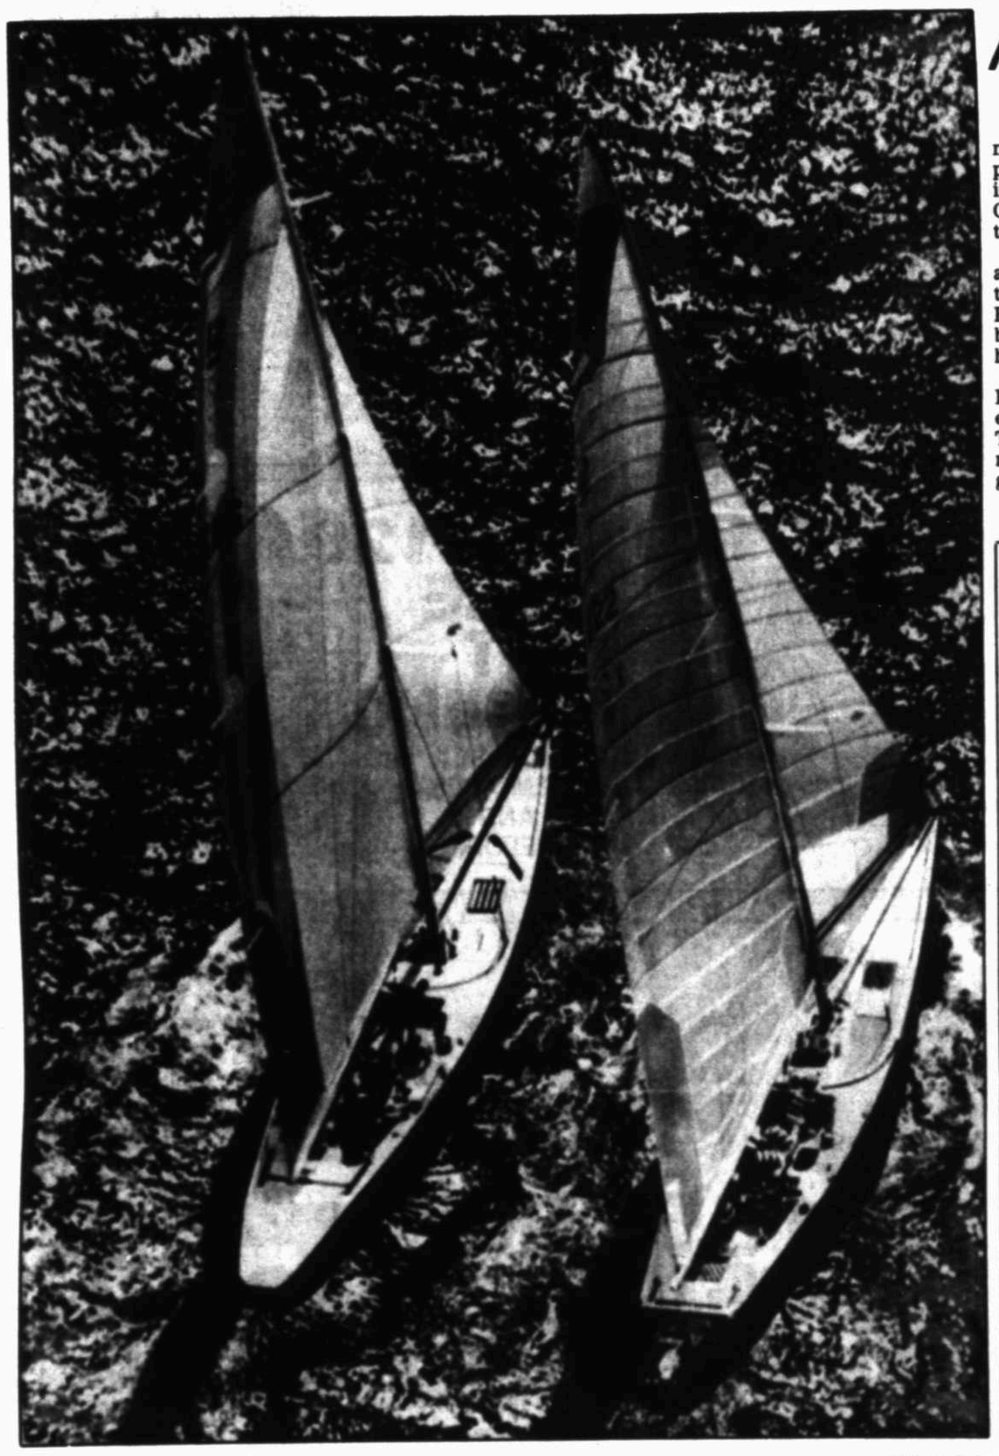

Ashman, of Bloomington, Calif., said he was nervous when he took the mound, but managed to get Nashua pitcher Ron Romanick to fly out to right field. The Angels did not use a designated hitter in the game.

"I knew he was going to throw me fastballs," said Romanick, who hadn't batted in three years. "He has pretty good stuff."

A crowd of 8,842 cheered and applauded Ashman throughout the game.

"I'll go back to California and no one may know about it," Ashman said.

Ashman had played every position during the season for the A's except left and center field.

The Australian 12-meter yacht Australia II (left) edges the British yacht Victory '83 by one second over the starting line Sunday off Newport, R.I.

Australia II defeats Victory '83

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The mystery-keel yacht Australia II climbed within one race of winning the America's Cup challenger series with a two-minute, 20-second triumph over Britain's Victory '83 Sunday.

The Aussie yacht, racing in the kind of hazy, light, southwest winds on which she thrives, led all around the 24.3-mile course in Rhode Island Sound to take a 3-1 race lead.

Australia II, sailed by John Bertrand, led by only one second at the start, but spread that to 1:10 by the first mark and never was seriously threatened.

The British boat, skippered by Lawrie Smith and Rodney Pattison, cut the edge to 1:04 at the second turn and 58 seconds at the third, but then saw Australia II sprint ahead to a 2:12 advantage after the next beat and slowly pull away.

The Australian boat needs only a victory in Monday's race to capture the best-of-seven series and the right to challenge U.S. defender Liberty and skipper Dennis Conner for the cup.

The New York Yacht Club, owner of the cup held by this country since 1851, last Friday chose 1980 cup champion Conner to defend again.

The seven-race finals begin Sept. 13.

Seven challenger yachts and three defenders began separate elimination racing early in June to determine which would get the two places in the match race finals.

Australia II, controversial since she arrived with a winged keel shape her crew keeps hidden behind plastic sheets, dominated the trial races with a 44-5 record. Victory '83 was second at 31-18.

This is the 25th foreign challenge for the homely old silver mug since the schooner yacht America won it from a squadron of British sailing craft 132 years ago.

The races are staged over a 24.3-mile course in Rhode Island Sound in aluminum-hulled 12-meter yachts, sailboats about 65 feet long.

Jets get controversial win, 41-29

AP Laserphoto

Atlanta Falcon Kenny Johnson grabs Chicago Bear Emery Moore-head around the foot for the tackle during NFL action Sunday.

SAN DIEGO — Running back Freeman McNeil rushed for 120 yards and scored twice, including the go-ahead touchdown on a 18-yard pass from Richard Todd with 6:43 remaining, to power the New York Jets to a 41-29 victory over the San Diego Chargers in a controversial NFL opener.

A 64-yard kickoff return by New York's Kirk Springs set up the deciding touchdown after the first kickoff was nullified by a television timeout.

An interception by cornerback Johnny Lynn at the New York 23-yard line with two minutes remaining preserved the victory for the Jets and Coach Joe Walton, who was making his NFL head coaching debut. New York's Mike Augustyniak then scored an insurance touchdown on a 1-yard run.

On the controversial timeout, NBC producer Larry Cirillo said the play was started over because the referee allowed the kickoff before the network gave approval. The ball was whistled dead while still in the air and it was ruled no play. Then Springs broke loose to the San Diego 30 with the second chance.

Raiders beat Bengals

CINCINNATI — Marcus Allen rushed for a pair of first-half touchdowns and a hard-charging Los Angeles defense blunted Cincinnati's passing game as the Raiders crushed the Bengals 20-10.

Allen darted through the Bengal defense for 47 yards on 17 carries and a pair of 1-yard touchdown runs.

The Raiders raced to a 17-0 halftime advantage, then relied on a pressuring defense to keep Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson offstride.

Miami rips Bills, 12-0

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Four Uwe von Schamann field goals accounted for Miami's scoring as the Dolphins blanked the Buffalo Bills 12-0 at Rich Stadium.

Von Schamann kicked field goals of 33, 23, 36 and 50 yards to give the Dolphins all their points.

The first and last field goals were set up by interceptions by the Blackwood brothers, Glenn and Lyle.

National Football League

Vikes defeat Browns

CLEVELAND — Ted Brown ran for two short-yardage touchdowns and caught a Tommy Kramer pass for a third TD as the Minnesota Vikings opened their NFL season with a 27-21 victory over the Cleveland Browns.

Brown ran for first-half touchdowns of 1 and 5 yards in helping the Vikings to a 17-7 halftime lead, then caught a 10-yard scoring pass with 4:31 left in the third quarter, putting Minnesota ahead 24-14, thwarting a Cleveland comeback.

Kramer, who connected on 17 of 20 first-half passes for 150 yards, finished with 22 completions in 33 attempts for 198 yards.

Lions blank Bucs, 11-0

TAMPA, Fla. — Ed Murray booted three field goals and William Gay led a menacing Detroit pass rush Sunday as the Lions stymied the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 11-0.

Murray kicked a 29-yard field goal in the first half and added three-pointers of 48 and 38 yards after intermission as the Lions won their regular-season opener for the fourth straight year.

The Lions' defense, meanwhile, contributed the game's only other points with a first-quarter safety.

Rams roll past Giants

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Quarterback Vince Ferragamo passed for 279 yards and hooked up with tight end Mike Barber on two scoring passes, propelling the Los Angeles Rams to a 16-6 victory over the New York Giants.

Barber had seven receptions for 93 yards, and Ferragamo also found a reliable target in wide receiver Henry Ellard, who had three receptions for 91 yards in the second half.

The Rams' defense, meanwhile, made life miserable for quarterback Scott Brunner, who was sacked five times and intercepted three times.

Jack Youngblood had two of the sacks and Leroy Irvin made both interceptions. Ferragamo, who completed 17 of 28 passes with two interceptions, flipped an 8-yard scoring pass to Barber in the final moments of the first half. He then found Barber wide open over the middle on a 42-yard touchdown pass play early in the second half, giving the Rams a 16-6 lead.

Saints outgun Cards

NEW ORLEANS — George Rogers ran for 206 yards including a 76-yard touchdown sprint in the third quarter to lead the New Orleans Saints to a 28-17 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

It was only the third time in 15 years that New Orleans has won a season opening game and the first time in its three years under Coach Bum Phillips.

New Orleans trailed 10-7 when Rogers burst up the middle, ran through a pair of hands at his 24-yard line, bowled over safety Benny Perrin at the 35, then outraced everyone the remaining 65 yards for the touchdown.

A little over three minutes later, Rogers scored again on a 1-yard plunge after a bizarre interception off the hands of St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart.

Passing from his own 18-yard line, Hart's toss was knocked into the air by cornerback Rodney Lewis, then gathered in by linebacker Dirt Winston. New Orleans safety Frank Wattelet knocked the ball from Winston's hands at the St. Louis 5, and Lewis recovered it there. Three plays later Rogers went over from the one.

Colts end losing skid

FOXBORO, Mass. — Linebacker Johnnie Cooks romped 52 yards for a touchdown with a fumble recovery on the third play of overtime as the Baltimore Colts notched their first victory since 1981 with a 29-23 triumph New England Patriots.

Cooks scooped up Tony Collins' fumble and rambled untouched down the left sideline for his first pro touchdown. It came one play after Steve Grogan had hit Cedric Jones for a 31-yard completion that moved the ball to the Colts' 47-yard line.

Baltimore, 0-8-1 last season, won only its third game in its last 29. All the victories have been against the Patriots.

Baltimore sent the game into overtime on Raul Allegre's third field goal of the game, a 33-yarder with no time left in the fourth quarter. The Colts had taken the ball at their own 9-yard line with 1:09 left.

New England had gone ahead, 23-20, on a 9-yard touchdown run by Robert Weathers with 1:16 remaining in the fourth quarter.

Falcons fly past Bears

CHICAGO — Steve Bartkowski hurled two touchdown passes, including a 21-yarder to Alfred Jenkins in the fourth quarter Sunday, lifting the Atlanta Falcons to a 20-17 victory over the Chicago Bears.

Bartkowski completed 14 of 23 passes for 201 yards and put the Falcons ahead 6-0 with a 23-yard TD aerial to William Andrews in the first quarter. But the conversion kick was blocked by Jim Osborne.

Chicago rallied to take a 10-6 halftime lead on Jim McMahon's 8-yard TD pass to Ken Margerum and a 29-yard field goal by Bob Thomas after Osborne had caused Andrews to fumble.

The Falcons regained the lead 13-10 on a 67-yard drive, with Bartkowski's 25-yard pass to Alfred Jackson setting up a 1-yard touchdown slant by Gerald Riggs.

The Bears mounted a 74-yard touchdown drive on the passing of McMahon, climaxed by Anthony Hutchison's 2-yard run for a 17-13 lead after three quarters.

Early in the fourth quarter, Bartkowski drove the Falcons 81 yards in seven plays, capped by his touchdown pass to Jenkins. He also completed an 11-yard pass to Jenkins in the drive and two to Billy Johnson for a total of 31 yards.

BIG ITALIAN FLAVOR ON A SMALL SCALE

Minestrone al Pesto is the minestrone soup for two, served with a dollop of walnut-parsley sauce called "pesto." This custom was first innaugurated by the residents of Genoa, Italy. We can still enjoy it today with the convenience of canned chunky minestrone soup.

There was a time when bigger meant better in the realm of Italian cooking. A peck of tomatoes and an enormous pot practically guaranteed the success of any Italian recipe. That was when Italian families were larger and a non-Italian didn't know how to cook Italian food.

But in the past ten years, two things have changed in our society. Families, including those of Italian descent, are smaller. According to American Food Preferences, A Campbell Study, the average household is 2.8 persons and dropping, a decrease from the 3.2 ten years ago. Secondly, Italian cooking is embraced by all nationalities, demonstrated by the fact that the purchase of Italian food and ingredients have increased by 47 percent over the past nine years.

Minestrone al Pesto is derived from a recipe in Genoa, the birthplace of Columbus. Genoans claim to have invented minestrone and whether they did or not, they have created a delicious version that calls for a dollop of "pesto" to be stirred into each bowl. This version designed for busy one or two member households is made with a base of canned chunky minestrone soup, brimming with fresh carrot nuggets and succulent beans.

James Beard defines pesto as "a green sauce of basil, strong pecorino cheese, oil, garlic and pine nuts." But there are probably as many varieties of pesto as there are thicknesses of spaghetti. In this Minestrone al Pesto, the aromatic pesto is made from parsley, Parmesan cheese, oil, garlic and walnuts. After heating the canned minestrone, the pesto is stirred into each bowl. One taste will convince you that those Genoans had a marvelous idea.

Antipasto, literally means "before the pasta" and if served in a traditional Italian meal, it would be the first course. But whether it preceeds or follows the soup is strictly up to you. Antipasto Misto or mixed antipasto is a carefully arranged platter of artichoke hearts, provolone cheese, tomatoes, olives and ham on lettuce leaves. Whenever you serve Antipasto Misto, remember to include the bread sticks or Italian bread. The crowning touch to this Italian meal is expresso coffee and ice cream or fruit. It's a meal with big Italian flavor on a small scale.

MINESTRONE AL PESTO

½ cup walnut halves
½ cup firmly packed parsley
3 tablespoons salad oil
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan Cheese
1 small clove garlic, minced
½ teaspoon dried basil
1 can (19 ounces) Campbell's Chunky Minestrone Soup

1. To make sauce: In covered blender container at high speed, combine all ingredients except soup. Blend until smooth.
2. Meanwhile, in 1½-quart saucepan over medium heat, heat soup, stirring occasionally.
3. Ladle into soup bowls. Top each with about 1 teaspoon parsley sauce. Makes 2½ cups or 2 servings.

NOTE: Leftover sauce may be frozen.

Ex-broker building 'banana boats'

RIPARIUS, N.Y. (AP) — John Berry left the hustle of the stock brokerage business a dozen years ago to find a more subdued life in the country.

Today, he makes his living building canoes and teaching people to paddle them safely in rough water, but you cannot spend more than a few minutes with the 60-year-old Berry without realizing he lives for the days when he can paddle his own battered canoe off into fast-flowing water.

While the American canoe industry is dominated by such giants as Grumman Boats, Coleman Co. and Old Town Canoe Co., Berry's Millbrook Boats represents another side of the business.

"I probably produce about 50 boats a year," said the white-haired builder while putting the finishing touches on one of his canoes.

Located in a drafty old shed beside a set of rusting railroad tracks, Millbrook Boats has been drawing serious whitewater canoeists to this small Adirondack Mountain village for about eight years.

It is easy to see why Berry, who gave up being a Washington, D.C.-based stockbroker, decided to settle in Riparius after a brief stint as an innkeeper in Vermont. He can walk out of the shop, cross the tracks and plunk down a canoe in the Hudson River.

That is something Berry regularly finds himself doing.

"It's a nice run down to the Glen," Berry said, referring to a tiny community a few miles downriver.

Berry moves easily around his shop, cutting fiberglass cloth to fit a canoe mold and then saturating it with resin, but he seems most at home on the water.

Slipping into his well-worn life jacket, Berry pushes a favorite canoe off to play in the waves. With the boat dancing around rocks, Berry seems to drift into a different world.

The nation's top whitewater racer in the late 1950s and early '60s, Berry has for the past five years captured the national whitewater racing "master's" title for solo canoeists — a class for racers over age 40.

"I'm just too damn old to play with the big boys anymore," said Berry, whose body resembles that of a well-trained athlete 15 years his junior.

However, Berry still makes the toys for many who want to get into the game.

Berry-designed ME canoes, for instance, captured eight first places in the eight classes in which they were entered during the national championships for whitewater open canoes two years ago.

AP Laserphoto

John Berry, a veteran white water canoe champion and custom canoe builder, prepares to enter the Hudson River in Riparius, N.Y. Berry annually builds about 50 ultralight canoes fo white water use.

Berry's "banana boat" — the ME's nickname because of a curved hull shape which makes it easier to turn — is mass produced by several other canoe manufacturers, including Vermont's Mad River Canoe company.

Berry could make more of the canoes himself — if he were willing to hire anyone to work with him.

"I could hire more help and work harder and become bigger," he said. "But I didn't come here for that ... I don't want to lose sight of the hobby."

Divorced, Berry lives in Riparius with his 90-year-old mother and a 23-year-old son who helps him run whitewater clinics from early May through September.

The canoes Berry builds are not made for paddling around a pond, but for whitewater canoeing where the occupants kneel low in the craft for stability.

"I never put a seat in a canoe in my life," he said.

Costing from about $400 to more than $800, Berry's whitewater canoes even come with a guarantee of sorts. "Ten seconds or ten yards, whichever comes first," Berry quipped.

Using no advertising for his one-man canoe business, Berry claims to get all the orders he wants from the people who come to his whitewater clinics and from competitors who have raced against his boats and want one of their own.

World War II aircraft simulate an aerial battle in the Confederate Air Force's rendition of the war years Sunday at Midland Regional Airport.

Warbirds

Ronald Healy, left, and Wayne Edwards, both of Kermit, look over the engine of an SNJ, a World War II Navy trainer, at the Confederate Air Force show.

The wild blue yonder brought forth the tragedy of war and the glory of valor over Midland Regional Airport Sunday afternoon.

The sight and sound of the Confederate Air Force's "flying museum" of the 1939-45 World War II era depicted the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, air and sea battles in the South Pacific, the Normandy Invasion, raids over Tokyo, and, finally, the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan, on Aug. 6, 1945.

"The Confederate Air Force is not here to glorify war in any way," CAF Col. Jack Morgan, a P-47 Thunderbolt pilot during the war, told the 5,000 warbird buffs who viewed the four-hour show of trainers, fighters, bombers and a post-war jet — the trainer version of the P-80 Shooting Star.

On that "day of infamy" in 1941, "the greater part of the United States fleet lay in smoking ruins," Morgan, under the blistering sun and cloudless sky, said of the Pearl Harbor bombing, "and 2,403 Americans had lost their lives."

"That was not glorious," he said. "That was tragic."

"Battles...were not glorious," Morgan said, "but simply (were) hard-fought engagements waged by men who were terribly, terribly frightened but who conquered that fear because they believed in the cause for which they were fighting...They did not want to let down their country, their fighting units....their friends fighting next to them.....Now, that is glorious."

The air show was sponsored by the Midland-Odessa Desert Squadron of the CAF's West Texas Wing.

The biennial Labor Day show featured fly-bys by bombers such as the B-25 Mitchell, the B-26 Invader, the B-29 Superfortress, the B-24 Liberator and the TBM torpedo bomber, the C-46 and C-47 transports, and aerial maneuvers by trainers such as the BT-13 Vibrator, T-6 and SNJ, PT-19, and fighters such the U.S. Army Air Corps' P-40 Warhawk of Flying Tigers fame and the P-51 Mustang and the U.S. Marine Corps' and U.S. Navy's F4U Corsair, Wildcat and Bearcat.

DEATHS

Eddie Dean Fitts

Eddie Dean Fitts, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Junior Dean Fitts of 1716 S. Lamesa Road died Friday in a Dallas hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Hollowell United Methodist Church with the Rev. Hadley Edwards officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Thomas Funeral Home.

Survivors include his parents; his grandparents, Vernell and Cleo Cooks of Midland and Marde Ruth Fitts of Morton; his great-grandmother, Rosie Brown of Dallas; six aunts and two uncles.

J.D. Windham

J.D. Windham, 83, of 3116 Delano, died Saturday afternoon in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Kenneth Duhon officiating. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Windham was born Jan. 26, 1900, in Brown County. He was married to Mayme Burks in McCamey Jan. 21, 1944. They lived in McCamey for a while before moving to Seagraves. They lived in Odessa 18 years where he owned and operated a service station. For a short time they lived in California and Abilene before moving in 1973 to Midland.

He was a member of Kingdom of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Survivors include his wife; a son, J.D. Windham of Hobbs, N.M.; a sister, Mrs. J.T. Smith of Dumas; three grandchildren; a niece and three nephews.

N.J. Gardner

Norman J. Gardner, 74, of 2000 N. Main St., died Sunday afternoon in a Midland hospital after a lengthy illness.

Graveside services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Fairview Cemetery, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Gardner was born Feb. 18, 1909, and spent most of his life as a carpenter in Oxnard, Calif. He moved to Midland 10 years ago.

Survivors include his wife, Pearl of Midland; two stepsons, Charles E. Trapp of Upland, Calif., and Michael Trapp of Miami, Fla.; a brother, Andrew Gardner of Dallas; and several nieces and nephews.

Jesse Ramirez Jr.

SAN ANGELO — Prayer services for Jesse C. Ramirez Jr., 32, of San Angelo, brother of Diana Dye, Ann Montez and Martha Garcia, all of Midland, will be at 6:30 p.m. today in Johnson's Funeral Home chapel here.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the First Assembly of God Templo Monte DeLos Olivos with the Rev. Esequiel Fax and the Rev. Javier Fernandez officiating. Burial will be in Fairmount Cemetery.

Ramirez died Thursday in a San Angelo hospital.

He was born May 25, 1952, in San Angelo. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps and worked in the oil field.

Other survivors include a daughter, his mother, his grandmother, six sisters, a brother, and several nieces and nephews.

Power plant may still be delayed

FORT WORTH (AP) — Threats of a fine and federal investigation could further delay commercial operation of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant, already three years behind schedule and quadruple its original cost.

Utility officials say the plant, under construction southwest of here near Glen Rose, already is considerably different from the one they envisioned in 1972. The changes primarily stem from new regulatory requirements that followed the 1979 Three Mile Island accident in Pennsylvania and have helped swell the plant's cost to $3.44 billion, four times the orginal estimate.

Texas Electric Service Co. officials decline to estimate how much consumers' bills might rise if the plant does not go on-line as scheduled next year. But utility officials in other parts of the country told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that if the plant's opening is delayed until 1985, interest and replacement power could cost $1 million a day.

Renewed fears that the plant's opening will be delayed stem from two pieces of bad news last week, from the Arlington office of the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission and from Citizens Associated for Sound Energy, a vocal opponent of the plant.

The local NRC proposed a $40,000 penalty against Texas Utilites Generating Co., the first of its kind for the plant's operator. The proposed punishment stems from claims of a former quality control inspector that he was fired for doing his job too thoroughly.

Meanwhile, CURE released a two-inch-thick document claiming technical construction violations and requesting NRC's national headquarters to conduct a thorough plant investigation.

If such an investigation is approved, it almost certainly would postpone the plant's opening, officials say. A Houston Lighting & Power official said a probe at the national NRC level would mean "many, many months" of delays.

Already, CASE members doubt that the utilities financing the $3.44 billion plant will meet their December fuel loading date, which was set when they could not meet a September date.

CASE president Juanita Ellis says the group will seek the help of U.S. Rep. Edward Markey, a Massachusetts Democrat who chairs a House subcommittee that oversees the nuclear power industry. She said Markey, who two years ago triggered an NRC investigation of a Vermont company that sold nuclear power plant pumps, will be asked to help obtain an expanded investigation through direct contacts and the assistance of two Washington-based public interest groups, the Government Accountability Project and the Union of Concerned Scientists.

When NRC inspectors from Washington last came to Texas in 1979, they issued a $100,000 fine against HL&P and issued stop-work orders, which added an estimated six months to construction at the South Texas Nuclear Project. The general contractor, Brown & Root, later was replaced.

Brown & Root also is general contractor at Comanche Peak but does not have architectural and design control as it did at the South Texas plant.

TESCO officials said the proposed investigation would be "time-consuming," "expensive" and "unneeded."

NRC spokesman Clyde Wisner of the Arlington office said a Washington inspection team would be more likely to find construction defects than regional inspectors because they would be more thorough and spend more time in "spot checks."

Federal officials said no action is expected on CASE's request until they have reviewed other construction complaints contained in a document CASE filed last month.

Peter Bloch, chairman of the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board reviewing the plant's operator's license request, said he would make a decision on CASE's complaints by January.

CASE members believe "only the tip of a very large iceberg" has been revealed in past investigations at Comanche Peak, Ms. Ellis said. She said a full-scale review would show how drugs and morale problems have affected the quality of design and construction and the extent to which workers, supervisors and quality control inspectors are discouraged from doing their jobs thoroughly.

CASE contends the Arlington NRC office has shirked its regulatory duties and failed to properly apply and enforce its own regulations. Ms. Ellis said CASE witnesses often have been the ones to point out major flaws in design and construction, not NRC witnesses.

"I feel the NRC office is quite capable of conducting inspections at Comanche Peak regardless of what CASE feels," said NRC spokesman Clyde Wisner.

"The efforts on their (CASE's) part have been appreciated. But the majority of items that have been found at Comanche Peak have been by our personnel."

But Ms. Ellis remains undaunted.

"Somebody, somewhere is going to have to really look at that plant, and we don't think it has been done yet," she said. "The truth is going to come out. Even if they have to be dragged screaming and yelling all the way."

Old physician banned from emergency room

ALPINE (AP) — A 74-year-old physician who still travels the scrubby West Texas ranch land making house calls has been banned from the emergency room of the hospital he helped found.

Hospital officials say Dr. William Lockhart Jr. is showing his age and has misdiagnosed seven cases.

But the doctor says the mistakes have been sensationalized and maintains he's still spry enough to "whip anyone." He said the younger doctors dislike his liberal politics and are jealous of the loyalty and large number of his patients.

"I take care of the poor," said Lockhart, who also is the chairman of the local housing board.

"My door of my practice is open to anyone, anytime, regardless of whether they have the money to pay."

Big Bend Memorial, which the doctor helped found in this town of 7,000 people, is the only hospital in an area of Texas scrubland the size of the state of Maryland.

In July, the hospital board revoked Lockhart's emergency room privileges because "the community looks to the hospital and medical board to protect them from questionable practice," Administrator Tom Santry said.

Among the allegations was that Lockhart misdiagnosed at least seven cases, including one in which he said a woman was suffering the deadly, pneumonia-like Legionnaires' disease, Santry said.

"Yes, I misdiagnosed one case... but all the cases got well," said Lockhart, who said all doctors make mistakes and he shouldn't be singled out.

Mark Pate, the hospital chief of staff, said the Texas Board of Medical Examiners was asked to look into Lockhart's practices. The probe could take months, he said, and "the end result might be nothing at all or might have consequences."

John Sortore, spokesman for the state medical examiners' hearing division, said an inquiry was being held.

One recent change in hospital bylaws bans doctors age 65 and older — including Pate's father — from practicing in the emergency room unless a patient asks for him. Another rule requires Lockhart specifically to treat trauma and critically ill victims only in the presence of another doctor.

The changes were in the "best interest of the hospital, general public and medical staff as a whole," Pate said.

But Lockhart has charged that most of the 12-member staff acted maliciously to deny him emergency room access because of his politics — he calls himself a "liberal in a conservative community" — and his No. 1 local ranking in the number of patients.

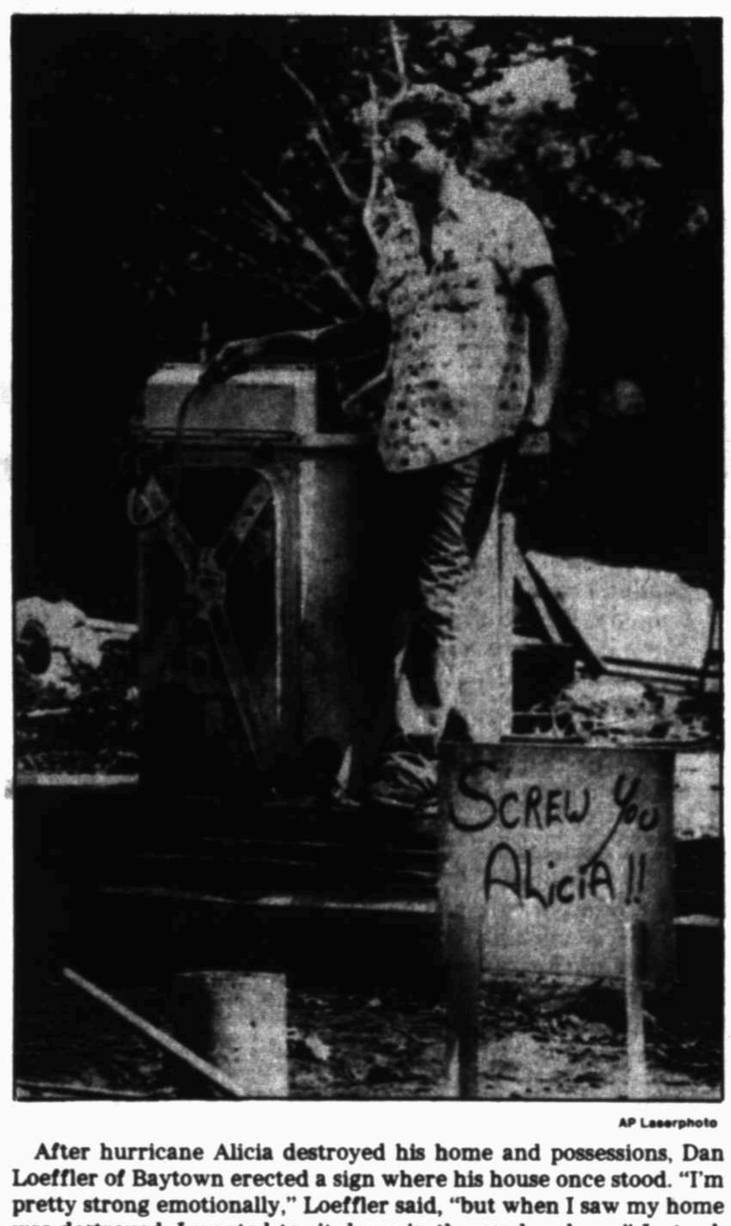

Santry said the board acted neither with bias nor vendetta.

But Lockhart said the charges against him were brewed up by Pate and a former medical chief of staff and they have backfired because of an "outpouring of affection and recognition by the people of this area that I didn't expect until after I died."

A recent letter published in the Alpine Avalanche and signed by Fort Davis residents Mrs. J.K. Miller, Mrs. J.C. Duncan Jr., and Barbara Dirks, asked: "When you take Dr. Lockhart out of the emergency room, who will there be to care?"

Lockhart said the new rules also robbed him of income because many times he is the only local doctor "not out on the golf course" and concerned enough to treat patients on off-hours and weekends.

Despite being banned from the emergency room, Lockhart said he still treats up to 60 patients a day.

After hurricane Alicia destroyed his home and possessions, Dan Loeffler of Baytown erected a sign where his house once stood. "I'm pretty strong emotionally," Loeffler said, "but when I saw my home was destroyed, I wanted to sit down in the road and cry." Instead, he struck back with a sign and the lastword.

Alicia hurts tourist business of Texas coast

GALVESTON (AP) — Although the sun shone brightly on this island resort, the beaches and tourist attractions were mostly deserted Sunday more than two weeks after Hurricane Alicia and during the traditional final weekend of the season.

"The hospitality industry here is sitting on absolute zero right now," said Jack Bushong, executive director of the island's Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Bushong said he hoped the island would retain over the weekend about 20 percent to 25 percent of the visitors it usually attracted on weekends before Hurricane Alicia pummeled the area with 115-mph winds and 12-foot tides.

Even the few people who did come to the island Saturday and Sunday came primarily to sightsee and survey the damage done by Alicia, Bushong said.

"It's quite obvious these people are sightseeing, because nobody is on the beach," he said. "For the most part, these people are out for a Sunday drive."

Betty Perkins of the Gander Gift Shop on Seawall Boulevard said the business was "doing just a smidgeon of the business we usually do.

"Usually, businesses here like to go out with a bang," Ms. Perkins said. "But this is just a mess."

"I got the impression that business was pretty much back to normal," said Stanley Cosden of Houston, who came to the island for the day by bus to fish. "But I was misled. This looks like a ghost town."

Officer Stanley Dunn of the Galveston Police Department said 150,000 to 200,000 visitors usually come to the island on holiday weekends. He estimated 30,000 to 50,000 will come this extended weekend.

"We're still in a state of disaster," Dunn said.

The island has been losing $200,000 to $300,000 in potential tourist revenue each day since the Aug. 18 storm, Bushong said.

This weekend alone, Galveston merchants will lose at least $1 million, Bushong said.

"There isn't a merchant in town who isn't affected" by the hurricane, he said, adding about 1,200 Galveston area residents are unemployed because of the storm.

All major tourist attractions were open Sunday and most large restaurants were able to accommodate the people who did visit, but there are virtually no hotel rooms open to tourists on the island, Bushong said.

Only about 400 hotel rooms are open, and most of those are housing island residents whose houses were destroyed by the storm, Bushong said.

"We're delighted to have (visitors) down for the day. We're ready for them, for the most part...but we just want to make sure they understand there are no accommodations," Bushong said.

Hundreds of visitors who had wanted to spend the night in Galveston Saturday were turned away and told to head to the Space Center area or South Houston for hotel rooms, he said.

Although Alicia did more damage to Galveston than Hurricane Carla in 1961, Bushong said, he predicted the island will "rebound much, much faster" than it did more than 20 years ago.

"It took two or three years then," he said. "Now, everything should be back to normal by January. This is just a little setback to us."

DeBakey plans more transplants

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Michael DeBakey, who celebrates his 75th birthday Wednesday, says he plans to start doing heart transplants again and to supervise one of the nation's most comprehensive multiple organ transplant centers.

DeBakey, chairman of surgery and chancellor of Baylor College of Medicine, said recently he was "increasingly optimistic" about overcoming many of the problems faced in the early transplant days. But he still insists that a transplant operation is not the answer to every organ disease.

DeBakey has done more than 60,000 operations during his vast career.

He has written more than 1,100 medical articles, chapters and books; designed 60 different operating instruments; and has charted surgical courses.

Sights, sounds of WWII depicted at air show

The CAF is the "13th largest air force in the world," noted CAF Col. Don Luttrell.

Prior to the airshow, U.S. Air Force Gen. Andrew P. Iosue, commander of the USAF's Air Training Command, saluted three West Texans who survived the infamous Bataan Death March in 1942. While he alluded to the "valor and heroism" in World War II, he noted the "horrible atrocities" on Bataan, the peninsula in the Philippines.

The general gave U.S. flags to the three men: Bob Barton of Pecos, T.R. Louder of Stanton and Lyndal B. Preslar of Odessa. Barton was with the U.S. Army Air Forces 19th Bomb Group; Louder was assigned to the U.S. Army Signal Corps' 60th Coast Artillery, and Preslar was attached to the old 4th Regiment of the U.S. Marine Corps.

The air show began with the aerobatics of Gene Beggs, a national champion aerobatic pilot, in his Pitts Special biplane, and by Doug Warren in his British monowing Chipmunk and was wrapped in the missing-man formation and the skreiking of an F-4 Phantom jet fighter.

In between were warbird aerobatics by pilots such as Howard Pardue in his Corsair and Bearcat and Robb Satterfield in his P-51 Mustang.

During the flying, Masajiro "Mike" Kawato, Japanese Navy Air Force World War II Zero pilot, was autographing his latest book, "Flight into Conquest," and was selling Kamikaze headbands and Japanese Rising Sun momentos. He was credited with shooting down U.S. Marine Corps Corsair pilot, Greg "Pappy" Boyington, in 1944.

Midlander threatens police

A 29-year-old Midland man was arrested and jailed early Sunday for "terroristic threats" against Midland police after he telephoned police headquarters and allegedly said he would kill any officer who returned to his wife's home at Quail Ridge Mobile Home Park.

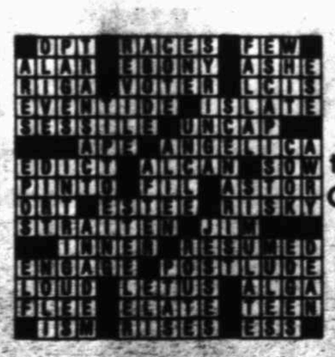

The man, who had been investigated earlier after he allegedly had beaten his wife about the face and shoulders, appeared to be drunk at the initial disturbance call and when he made the threat, police said.

Missing plane found

HOUSTON (AP) — A twin-engine plane missing for three days was found Sunday in a wooded area near Lake Houston, the Civil Air Patrol said. All three people aboard were dead.

The names of the two adults and one child aboard the Piper Aztec were withheld pending notification of relatives, the Harris County Medical Examiners office said.

The craft disappeared from radar Friday on a flight from Baytown to Dallas, investigators said.

New uses for old post office

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The finishing touches are being applied with a dash of style to an array of specialty shops, restaurants and cafes that soon will be open for business on the lower floors of the renovated Old Post Office Building gracing Pennsylvania Avenue here.

The upper floors looking out on a dramatic 196-foot high, glass-domed interior court of the landmark already are occupied by a variety of arts-related agencies, including the National Endowments for the Humanities and Arts, the Institute for Museum Services and, perhaps most appropriately, the national Advisory Council on Historic Preservation.

The building and its public spaces have been designated the Nancy Hanks Center, in honor of the late former chairman of the arts endowment who had lobbied extensively to have the Romanesque-styled structure converted into a cultural and commercial complex.

Built in 1899, the cavernous gray granite structure with its distinctive statuesque clock tower was vacated by the Post Office in 1934 and marked for demolition shortly after. However, the demolition had a low priority and by the time the General Services Administration could schedule it, Hanks and citizen groups were calling for the building's preservation. It was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in the early 1970s.

The building now is being hailed by the General Services Administration as the most ambitious renovation of its type in the nation. Other phrases heard at the building's rededication a few months ago featuring Vice President George Bush included "magnificent," "rejuvenating" and "trend-setting."

The $36-million project is the first application of the Cooperative Use Act of 1976, which permits mixed public and private uses in federal buildings. The idea behind the act is that such private uses as shops and restaurants could generate some rental income for the buildings, be a convenience to workers there and, not the least, lend some life to the surrouding streets.

It was with this in mind that the shopping arcade in the Old Post Office was designed. Called the Pavilion, the arcade is set back on three lower levels surrouding a performance area in the building's courtyard. Above the arcade are nine floors of balconies encircling an atrium that rises to the glass skylights above. The effect is striking. Despite ropes fencing off the unfinished arcade, tourists have been making their way into the courtyard to take photographs or just gasp at its dramatic setting.

Less enthusiastic and more muted have been the reaction of those who recently moved into the building. While some floors have spacious private offices, others have been laid out in an open-space plan under oppresively low-hung ceilings. The spaces tend to be cluttered and noisy, a situation that is not helped by the fact that all the windows have been screwed and caulked shut.

"We tried todesign the space to be as efficient and as economical as possible," explained Jack Finberg, director of planning for the National Captical Region of the GSA. Some bureaucrats squeezed into what amounts to rabbit warrens think the effect has been a little too efficient and economical — and in sharp contrast to the rather grand spaces on other floors allocated to the political appointees in the tenant agencies.

Nevertheless, the renovation of the public spaces and the inclusion of the shopping arcade does lend an architectural excitement to the area. The public portion of the project, costing $21 million and including 127,000 square feet of office space, was designed under a joint venture of Arthur Cotton Moore Associates, the MMM Design Group, Associated Space Design Inc. and Stewart Daniel Hoban and Associates, all of Washington, D.C.

The 60,000-square-foot arcade when completed will be able to make their way up to the building's 315-foot-high clock tower and an observation deck offering a spectacular view of the city second to that of the Washington Monument.

Also on view in the tower will be the Ditchley Bells, replicas of the bells in Westminister Abbey that were installed earlier this year. Presented as a Bicentennial gift of the Ditchley Foundation of Great Britain in gratitude for America's aid during World War II, their installation had been delayed for lack of a prominent place to hang them.

The hope is that the observation deck with its view and bells and the 29 shops and 21 restaurangts and fast-food establishments that make up the Pavilion will provide both a focus for pedestrian activity in the area and a bridge between the Washington Mall and downtown — a challenge the city's Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp. had been struggling with for two decades.

Lined with staid neo-classic government office buildings, the avenue is one of the more bland areas of the city, making the placing of a precedent-setting renovated mixed-use facility in its midst an experiment by both the GSA and the Evans Co.

Unlike most of the more genial attractions in downtown Washington, the building between 12th and 13th streets on Pennsylvania Avenue is to be open in the evenings. For a city that tends to close down at dusk when its army of office workers retreats to homes in the fringes of the city and suburbs, that also is an experiment.

DEAR ABBY

Notch-year babies tighten belts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: If you want to do a good deed, please print the following message:

If you are drawing Social Security and were born in 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 or 1921 (called "the notch years"), you are being unjustly penalized by receiving lower benefits than those born prior to and after the above-mentioned years. For example, if you worked until you were 65 before starting to draw Social Security, you are receiving about $100 less in your monthly check than those born before 1917 or after 1921.

A bill in Congress to correct this unfair situation (HR-5469) failed to make the committee and died at the end of the 1982 session.

If you are in this age group, write to your congressman requesting that this bill be reintroduced, or a new bill be introduced to correct this unfair situation. - NOTCH YEAR BABY

DEAR ABBY: I have just inherited some beautiful furs - a mink coat, a leopard jacket and a silver fox muff and hat. They are gorgeous! My husband is an animal lover and can't stand the sight of fur garments. He says it makes him both sad and furious when he thinks of the way the animals died.

Should I wear them anyway, or give them away? - TORN

DEAR TORN: Sell the furs and give the proceeds to your local animal shelter. And consider yourself lucky to have such a caring, sensitive husband.

DEAR ABBY: To "The Children," whose father has inoperable cancer and his wife refuses to tell him:

Our family was in exactly the same situation years ago. Mom refused to tell Dad, and we reluctantly went along with it. I will always regret that decision.

As a result, we all acted like nothing was seriously wrong with Dad. Meanwhile, he grew sicker and sicker. We created a false atmosphere of hope and optimism that was more painful than the real one.

No honest or meaningful conversations ever took place because no one admitted that there was anything wrong. I'm sure Dad knew he was dying, but he held back so as to prolong Mom's avoidance of reality.

What a terrible, terrible loss! We could have comforted each other, cried and hugged and spoken what was in our hearts and minds, but we didn't.

I'm glad you advise people to be honest with each other in such situations. It's the only way. - TOO LATE FOR US

Food programs growing along with food demands

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans by the thousands are lining up for free meals and sacks of groceries at food centers across the country, where officials say the ranks of the hungry are growing, despite the national economic recovery.

Many of those seeking help are the "new poor," jobless workers who have used up their unemployment benefits and savings. Others are welfare families who cannot stretch the government dollars far enough; the demand rises during the last week of each month when food stamps run out.

The problem stretches from the industrial cities of the North to the booming communities of the Sunbelt.

Kathy Goldman, director of the Community Food Resource Center in New York City, and Rina Rosenberg, director of the Houston Interfaith Coalition, tell the same story.

"We have seen things become worse and worse and worse," said Ms. Goldman. "The economy is not getting better in the poor neighborhoods."

"Our whole goal is to put ourselves out of business. So far it has not happened," agreed Ms. Rosenberg, adding that pleas for help had risen 116 percent in the past year.

The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a non-profit research group in Washington, D.C., founded in 1981 and specializing in analyses of social programs affecting the poor, said in a survey published in May there was "a dramatic increase in the number of people coming to soup kitchens and food pantries between February 1982 and February 1983."

The center said more than half of the 181 emergency food programs it surveyed "reported that the number of free meals or food baskets they provided increased by 50 percent or more during the year. Nearly one-third of the programs doubled in size over the same period."

The survey found "nearly all of the agencies reported a significant number of unemployed workers among those seeking aid. ... Nine out of 10 agencies also reported that a significant proportion of the people they served were those whose food stamps had run out before the end of the month."

Much of the food is collected through food banks linked in a Phoenix, Ariz.-based network called Second Harvest. The 57 food banks that are members of Second Harvest solicit donations from the food industry for distribution to almost 10,000 local charities.

Mary Crawford, director of communications for Second Harvest, said member banks would distribute an estimated 90 million pounds of food this year, up from about 70 million pounds last year.

There are no national figures on the number of food distribution centers. In Massachusetts alone, however, a study by the Hunger Hotline and the Harvard University School of Public Health found three food banks collecting food, 35 soup kitchens providing cooked meals and 178 food pantries giving out sacks of groceries.

The operation of the individual food centers varies. Some serve only a particular category of people — union members, for example, or the elderly. Others are open to everyone. Some require a referral from a social service agency or set income requirements. Others do not.

Officials of all the centers agree, however, that the need is greater than the supply of food. And many of them also say they are seeing new types of faces on the bread lines.

Dick Goebel of the Greater St. Paul (Minn.) Food Bank said that when the bank opened in March 1982, about 85 percent of the people receiving food were already getting some kind of welfare assistance, 10 percent had no income and 5 percent were working but needed help. A client profile in March 1983 showed 48 percent of the people were on welfare, 30 percent had no income and 22 percent were working.

"It means to me that we're creating a whole new class of poor people," said Goebel. "Some of these people have been employed 20 or 30 years. They now find themselves laid off. And they're at a point in their lives where it's pretty difficult. Some are homeowners, they have kids in school."

Joan Grate, executive director of Harvesters — The Community Food Network in Kansas City, Mo., and Ruth Sterling, director of Northwest Second Harvest in Seattle, said the same thing.

Food bank network turns melons to muffins

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In four hours on any given Wednesday, Michael Alexander can turn 10,000 pounds of lettuce into 2,000 pounds each of melons, tomatoes, plums, radishes and English muffins.

He's not a magician, but it's still a pretty good trick. And no matter how many times he pulls it off, the feat leaves Alexander with a sense of wonder.

"It's amazing," said the former Vista volunteer, who runs the food bank in Watsonville, one of five major food banks in Northern California and one of the oldest in the country.

The food banks in Watsonville, Santa Clara, Concord, San Francisco and Sacramento regularly swap surpluses, sharing the bounty in an area that supplies most of the nation's fresh food.

During the summer harvest, Alexander's food bank is in green vegetable country — lettuce, broccoli, brussel sprouts and artichokes. John Bateson's food bank in Concord has plenty of radishes and citrus. The food bank run by Mary Ellen Heising in Santa Clara usually has more stone fruit — nectarines, peaches and plums — than it can handle. Howard Osborne's Sacramento-based Senior Gleaners gets tons of tomatoes.

"We get a much greater variety of food," Bateson said of the swaps, which take place at Watsonville. And it helps them all follow what Bateson called the first rule of food banking: Never turn down a donation.

The Northern California food banks are members of Second Harvest, a national system of food banks that collects surplus food from farmers, distributors and retailers for distribution to the needy.

"A donation of 20,000 pounds of produce might be too much for us to handle in Contra Costa County, but we know we can take it, keep half of it and distribute the rest to the other food banks," Bateson said.

On Monday, the banks collect their food, 50 to 60 tons a week, and distribute it to charitable agencies, from 50 to 130 each, reaching more than 150,000 needy people. By Tuesday, the banks know where their surpluses are and they're on the phone to Alexander, who charts out what everyone will get.

On Wednesday, six or seven flatbed trucks, each carrying at least 10,000 pounds of food arrive at Alexander's warehouse in Watsonville.

Hunger amid wealthy

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Even in this affluent suburban community, home to an Ivy League university and sprawling mansions, there is hunger.

More than 100 residents have appeared at the doors of the Community Crisis Ministry this summer to collect free bags of groceries.

"We are taking care of the people the government isn't. We try to help them through a crisis," said the Rev. Carol A. Kerbel.

She runs the ministry at the Nassau Presbyterian Church, and almost every day hands out the grocery bags filled with enough canned goods and powdered milk to feed a family of four for two days.

The median annual household income in Princeton is $30,000 — about 50 percent higher than the national average.

But there are those with far less.

"People come to us last," said Ms. Kerbel. "Before us, they hit up their neighbors, families, but some don't like coming asking us for help."

Ms. Kerbel sees people like the 21-year-old woman who recently became eligible for government disability payments because of mental illness. She is the sole source of support for a younger sibling and needed food to tide the family over until the checks began arriving.

A man sat in Ms. Kerbel's office recently, nervously explaining how he had been forced to survive on $172 a month in public assistance since October when the government stopped Supplemental Security Income and food stamp benefits worth $247 a month. Officials stopped the benefits because they determined he was well enough to hold a job.

"I wasn't," said the 35-year-old former mental patient, who asked that his name not be used. He said he couldn't participate in a program in which local industries hire the mentally ill because "I got too nervous."

Even with public assistance, the man said, "The money never lasted. I couldn't have more than one meal a day. I got hungry on many occasions. If I got too hungry, I'd just run to get my mind off of it."

But the loss of benefits — and the constant hunger — destroyed what little self-confidence the man could muster, said Ms. Kerbel.

"I felt trapped and couldn't get out of it," he said. "I was humiliated."

Militias rival armies, have little use for Marines' arms

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The militias that have brought Lebanon to the brink of a new civil war range from lightly armed irregulars to standing private armies with tanks and heavy artillery.

But in Beirut's embattled streets, as U.S. Marines learned in combat this week, small arms are usually the most useful.

None of the militias is as large or strong as the newly rebuilt Lebanese army, and they cannot withstand a full assault by the regulars. But the army is incapable of crushing them completely, or preventing most from simply hiding their guns and merging with the local population.

FOR THE U.S. MARINES and French, British and Italian soldiers in the multinational peacekeeping force, it is difficult even to tell the militiamen apart, and impossible both politically and militarily for the foreign peacekeepers to take any part in army actions against them.

The multinational force — 1,200 U.S. Marines, and 4,200 French, British and Italian troops — can only defend itself when directly attacked, and run patrols to establish "presence" and lend confidence to regular Lebanese soldiers.

The Marine unit is armed with a half-dozen tanks, armored personnel carriers, a battery of 155mm howitzers and rocket-equipped Cobra helicopter gunships. The six-ship navy squadron that supports the Marines has an additional 600 Marines aboard. And the U.S. aircraft carrier Eisenhower, with its massive airborne firepower, has moved in close to the Beirut coast.

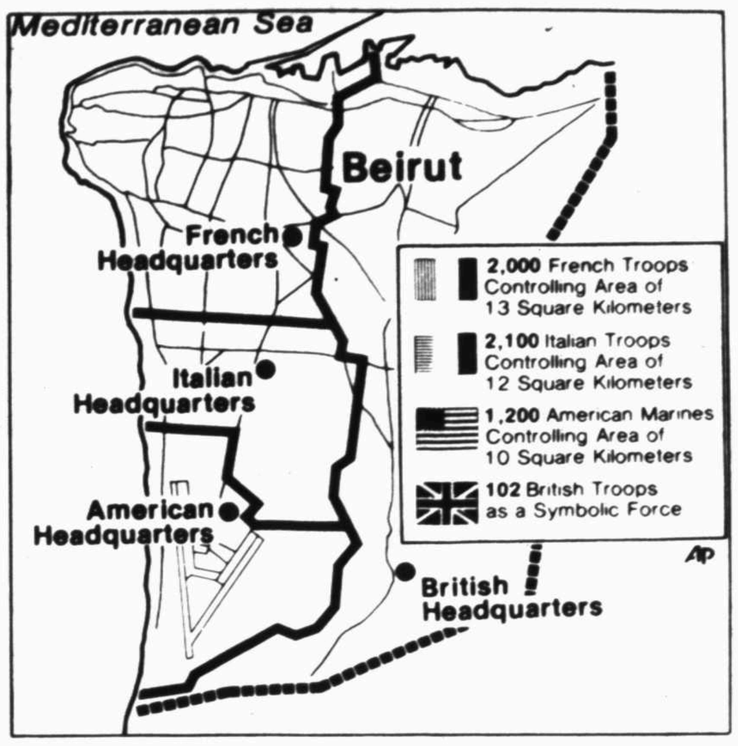

But all the weaponry has proved of little use.

The artillery has fired once, and one Cobra fired one rocket. Only the Marines' rifles and machine guns have been used heavily in the past several days, as they came under fire from the ground and by artillery. The heavy U.S. weapons here are designed for regular war, not to combat urban guerrillas.

IN THE FOUR DAYS of fighting with Shiite Moslem and leftist Druse militiamen in Beirut, the Lebanese army used its U.S.-supplied M-48 tanks, armored personnel carriers and mortars to push the militiamen back again and again, finally regaining control of the west side of the city.

But only 50 or 60 militiamen were captured in the battle, and fewer were killed, out of the hundreds who took part.

Beirut is divided into the mostly Christian east and mostly Moslem west. In the west, the 500,000-600,000 population is divided roughly between Sunni Moslems, essentially conservative, and Shiite Moslems, mostly religious fundamentalists who admire Iran's Islam-inspired revolution. West Beirut also has 20,000 Druses, members of a splinter Moslem sect who also populate nearby mountains.

East Beirut is dominated by an estimated 450,000 Maronite Christians, nearly all loyal to the right-wing Phalange Party and the Christian militia alliance it dominates, the "Lebanese Forces," which took little part in the fighting in the capital this week.

THE LEBANESE FORCES are the nearest thing to a regular army among the irregular groups. Armed mostly by Israel, the estimated 2,500 hard-core rightists are armed with everything up to older U.S.-made Sherman tanks and old Soviet-made T-32s captured from the Palestine Liberation Organization by Israel.

The Phalange can arm several thousand more Christians in time of need, and even runs its own forced conscription program among Christian youths.

Its main opponent is the leftist Druse Progressive Socialist Party and its militia, also heavily armed with artillery and Grad and Katyusha rockets, supplied mostly by Syria.

The Druses are believed to have about 2,000 regular fighters, and claim they can field and arm 6,000 to 10,000.

BOTH THE CHRISTIAN rightists and Druse leftists have most of their fighters deployed in the Israeli-occupied Chouf and Aley mountain regions, near Beirut. The two factions have battled for control there for months. Many Lebanese fear that when Israel pulls its troops out, a move expected within days, the two militia forces will launch all-out war on each other.

The third major militia force around the capital is the Shiite "Amal" (Hope) led by Nabih Berri.

The Amal were allies of the PLO during last year's Israeli invasion, and were armed and equipped by the Palestinians. They lost almost all their heavier weapons after the PLO was pushed out of the south and Beirut, and retain mostly automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades.

The Amal have almost no standing force, but are able to quickly muster several thousand irregular fighters. Many are in the southern part of Lebanon. But many Shiite refugees fled to Beirut last year, undoubtedly bringing Amal guerrillas with them.

The government army has 32,000 soldiers and is undergoing an intensive program of training. About 20,000 are veterans, but they took almost no part in last year's war and for the eight years before that stayed mostly in their barracks, not strong or united enough to oppose the leftists and Palestinians who controlled west Beirut and the south.

Clearing and regaining control of West Beirut this week demonstrated that the army could operate well against lightly armed guerrillas, but few people suggest that its control is anything but tenuous.

Hard times force hard hats to depend on food bank

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The food bank has become a key ingredient for jobless steelworkers whose meals are paid for by rock concerts, cookbook sales, cash gifts and union donations.

"Something had to be done to help people," said Jack Conway, coordinator of the Presentation Food Bank in Midland, where a mystery woman known as Mrs. Calabash has donated $20,000. "Over the years, steelworkers have always been like that. They stick together. They help out their brothers and sisters."

The food banks were first used to help hard hats during the 116-day strike of 1959. They reappeared when the jobless rate among steelworkers, the best paid industrial workers in the world, hit its highest mark since records were first kept after the Great Depression.

The first one opened in March 1982 in the Monongahela Valley. Now there are 200 steelworker food banks nationwide and about 50 to 75 locals involved in the so-called "Rust Bowl" — the tri-state area around Pittsburgh.

"It's become a big business. It just gradually evolved. We're all buying time," said Gary Hubbard, spokesman for the United Steelworkers of America, which has seen membership drop 40 percent to 700,000. "There's no other industrial group that's been hit harder."

All sales of the urban folk song "Steel Mill Blues," written by college student Mike Pickering of Wellsville, Ohio, go to the USW food banks. The union has sold 25,000 records at $2 apiece and sent copies to President Reagan and each member of Congress.

Since last August, the USW has raised $110,000 through payroll deductions and other contributions. But most of the money comes from local ingenuity — carnivals, a cookbook and concerts. The local food banks use the money to buy food at 10 cents a pound from the Pittsburgh Community Food Bank.

In Homestead, USWA Local 1397 made $28,000 from two benefit rock concerts and other money from bingo games, raffles and benefit softball games.

In May 1982, the food bank fed 300 families. Now, about 1,000 families each month get milk, eggs, government cheese and butter, canned goods, pasta, bread, potatoes, cereal, and other staples.

"It's a supplement," said Jay Weinberg, chairman of the local's unemployment committee. "There's no way we could feed a whole family three meals a day. We give them something that can free up their money for utilities or rent. We're just trying to tide them over."

The Midland food bank opened last August after workers donated $92,000 in a deferred cost of living raise. The admission price for a union dance last October was a can of food.

But the real heroine is a white-haired woman in her 70s whose real name has never been made public. She is known only as Mrs. Calabash, the name used by the late Jimmy Durante when he ended his performances with, "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are." The steelworkers' Mrs. Calabash has donated $20,000 in the past year.

"She's pulled us out of some tight times," said Jesse Torres, co-director of the food bank.

Last July, USW Local 1211 in nearby Aliquippa began handing out $25 food certificates paid for by the payroll deductions of members who still had jobs. Money also came from a carnival where $1 bought three whacks with a sledgehammer at foreign cars. And a former resident who is now an Alaskan construction millionaire sent a $10,000 check in March.

"I just love the people back there in Pennsylvania dearly, and I know they've been in a struggle," said Jack Andrews, 41, of Fairbanks.

Meanwhile, in McKeesport, the 18-month-old Mon Valley Food Bank found a timely recipe for feeding 1,000 people in 14 locals at a cost of $4,500 a month.

Steelworkers published a 122-page book entitled "Cooking On Extended Benefits: The Unemployed Cookbook," which includes recipes for such dishes as Depression Soup. It sold out 6,000 copies in a month and netted $18,000 for the food bank.

Projects await improved relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says overall relations with the Soviet Union must improve significantly before the United States undertakes a major resumption of joint research projects in science and technology.

And U.S. officials say any new research agreements with the Kremlin should be more scientifically and less politically motivated.

"I think we can serve the needs of science without having all of the atmospherics and the falderal — we might even serve the needs of science better that way," said Gerson Sher, a National Science Foundation official.

In 1972-74, beginning with President Richard M. Nixon's first summit trip to Moscow, the United States and Soviet Union signed a panoply of accords for cooperative work in areas ranging from transportation and housing to environmental protection, artificial heart research and space exploration.

ACTIVITIES UNDER MANY of these agreements were sharply curtailed following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in December 1979 and the martial law crackdown two years later in Poland. Overall, U.S.-Soviet scientific programs currently are down to about 20 percent of their 1979 level, officials said.

In addition to political tensions, scientific ties also have been heavily affected by the concern of many American scientists over human rights abuses, particularly the internal exile of Nobel laureate Andrei D. Sakharov and continuing imprisonment of physicist Yuri Orlov and other Soviet scientists.

The Reagan administration decided to let three of the 11 agreements — on energy research and space, plus an umbrella accord covering various fields of science and technology — expire during 1982. Last month, however, it moved quietly to renew a separate accord on peaceful uses of atomic energy.

SOME AMERICAN SCIENTISTS and members of Congress have urged the United States to resuscitate scientific cooperation with Moscow.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said at a hearing Aug. 2 his panel wanted to "evaluate the desirability of resuming a more active U.S.-Soviet exchange program."

Rep. Dan R. Glickman, D-Kan., called for "a concerted effort to expand our on-going contacts with the Soviet Union."

"There is a great opportunity to do so by renewing some of the government-to-government science cooperation agreements which have lapsed in recent years," he testified at the hearing. Glickman is chairman of a House Science and Technology subcommittee on transportation and materials.

But William Schneider Jr., undersecretary of state for security assistance, science and technology, told Zablocki's panel: "I do not foresee an early return to cooperation with the Soviet Union on a scale matching that of the 70s, and certainly not until the political factors that led to reduction in cooperation improve."

GEORGE A. KEYWORTH, President Reagan's chief science adviser, testified that the administration's "paramount concern" was responding firmly to Soviet "aggressive behavior" in Afghanistan and Eastern Europe and the Kremlin's massive spying efforts to acquire sensitive U.S. technology.

"We continue to make decisions for renewing agreements on a case-by-case basis," Keyworth said.

Sher, the National Science Foundation official monitoring cooperative activities with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, said in a recent interview that the NSF currently was undertaking a detailed review and evaluation of U.S.-Soviet programs over the past decade.

He noted that during the champagne days of detente, many of the programs had been marked by "a lot of very high-level, ceremonial meetings and consultation" that largely reflected the political aims of both sides.

Rather than a new round of broad-gauge accords signed "with trumpets blaring," Sher said future programs with Moscow are more likely to be low-key — each involving "a professional, scientist-to-scientist working agreement that would be oriented toward specific projects."

WILLIAM D. CAREY, executive officer of the 140,000-member American Association for the Advancement of Science, said bolstering U.S.-Soviet cooperative programs could help promote movement toward easing the current "gridlock" in nuclear arms control negotiations.

"The objective should be to try to rebuild some basic elements of trust that could provide a support structure for anything that might come through in the area of a political-military type of settlement. That's the hope that I have," he said in an interview.

However, Carey said he does not expect substantial progress on a new round of science and technology accords until there is a summit meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov.

Abortion debate threatens Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A bitter debate over abortion has divided the staunchly Roman Catholic Irish Republic and is moving toward a showdown after more than a year of political, legal and theological scrapping.

The country's 2.3 million voters will decide in a referendum Sept. 7 whether a Victorian law against abortion should be written into the country's 1937 Constitution.

A "yes" vote will block any future move by the Dail, the lower house of the Irish Parliament, or by the Supreme Court to legalize abortion, currently punishable by life imprisonment.

The proposed amendment has pitted Protestant churches and liberal Catholics against the powerful Catholic hierarchy.

It also has threatened to disrupt Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald's crusade to woo militant Northern Ireland Protestants into a united Ireland.
