BANK ROBBERS CAPTURED IN CEMETERY BATTLE

Wichita Tax Board Lowers Ground Values 15 Per Cent In New Assessments

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

Maybe the 1928 bolters think they are returning to a "Love" feast.

Senator Gore says that if the Oklahoma Democrats "fail to celebrate the return of the prodigals by killing the fatted calf they will know it is because we have no fatted calf to kill under the Hoover administration."

The names of 13 candidates for governor have been filed with Democratic state executive committee. Talker is not superstitious but if 13 stay in the race 12 will be disappointed. Looking to the night of the first primary he is thinking how much more work it will be to collect returns with 13 candidates for governor than if there were only three.

Collecting and reporting the primary returns is a tremendous job all concentrated within a few hours. The papers must report the returns in the local races, in district races, and in the state races. Take the district races for instance: there are state representative districts, state senatorial districts, congressional districts and judicial districts involving nearly a score of counties.

Some folks think the political announcements are highly profitable to the newspapers. They may be to newspapers which do not have to spend anything to collect election returns but for daily newspapers the expense of collecting these returns is much greater than the entire revenues from political announcements.

An interesting experiment is being carried out in Virginia. The legislature of that state has enacted legislation which permits counties to employ county managers much the same as many cities now do. The plan provides for a board of supervisors somewhat similar to the board of county commissioners in Texas. This board is largely legislative and employs a county manager to administer the affairs of the county. Adoption of the plan is optional with the counties of that state. Only one county, Albemarle, has adopted the plan thus far. It is an experiment that is being watched with keen interest in Virginia.

Wichita Falls has 214 telephones to each thousand of its population says Public Service News. San Francisco leads the world in the number of telephones per thousand with 336 for each thousand of its accredited population. Statistics of some of the major cities of Texas follows:

Dallas	265
Galveston	241
Fort Worth	232
Houston	230
Wichita Falls	214
Beaumont	207
San Antonio	190
El Paso	144

Wichita Falls has again shown a larger increase in employment for the month of May than any other of the larger cities of Texas. Every month this year has shown an increase in employment in Wichita Falls with a larger percentage of increase in May than in any of the preceding months.

Book dealers in Wichita Falls and other cities are in a quandary as to what to do about stocking up the cheaper editions of books that are being offered by some of the publishers. Five publishers have announced reduced prices of books while 11 have joined forces to oppose it. Even those publishers who have announced the low prices take some of the joy out of the announcement for the public by saying that the books offered at cut prices are the kind of books that will not last long.

The 11 publishers who are opposing the cut prices say that they threaten the book-selling business as the low prices will not leave room for the profits required to maintain a book store. "It will force the public in thousands of communities," says a statement issued by these publishers, "to do without the bookseller's wares and his guidance and to fall back on the drug store, the cigar store and even the grocery store for such literature as these places can afford to sell at cut prices. What the eventual character of this literature will be we leave the public to judge for itself."

When the announcement of reduced prices in books was first made we thought the publishers were planning to make a 20 to 25 per cent reduction and to maintain the quality of the product. Somehow we thought the publisher could do this and still give the authors a fair royalty and allow the booksellers a reasonable profit. Maybe it can't be done. Talker would not like to see any policy or practice that would put one single book store in this whole country out of business.

REDUCTION TO SAVE $35,700 FOR TAXPAYERS

Economy in Government Brings Dividend to Wichitans

REVENUE UNCHANGED

New Buildings Offset Cut of $2,255,000 in Tax Rolls

Wichita Falls taxpayers were assured their first direct dividend on the city-manager form of government Tuesday when the city board of tax equalization announced that real estate assessments for 1930 would be 15 per cent lower than in 1929.

The reduction in assessments on real porperty will net taxpayers a saving of approximately $35,700 in 1930 payments, according to estimates made by W. Ralph Hyer, city assessor and collector. The board pointed out that the reduction in assessments is applicable only to real property, and does not affect the values of buildings and other improvements. Economies in the administration of the city government and the addition of many new buildings to the tax rolls made possible the reduction in the assessments, members of the board of equalization said.

Mr. Hyer pointed out that the 15 per cent reduction amounting to $2,255,000 will largely be made up through the addition of new buildings and increased personal property. Members of the tax department are now figuring the discount against all ground values in the city and as soon as the books have been competed, cards will be mailed to those who have had their taxes lowered or raised, asking an audience with the board. The cards are expected to be mailed out within the next 15 days, Mr. Hyer said.

Members of the board include J. M. Baber, John T. Young, and Roscoe Staton.

Countryside Cowers As Armed Criminal Maniacs Roam Through The Night

IONIA, Mich., June 3. (UP)—Eleven criminal madmen, armed with razors and clubs, roamed the peaceful countryside near Ionia tonight, striking fear into the hearts of rural residents.

They escaped 13 strong early today from the Ionia state hospital for the criminal insane after forcing a guard to open the gates. Deputies, prison and hospital guards and posses of citizens captured only two in an all-day hunt.

As night approached fright of citizens grew more intense. Farmers locked their doors, keeping lights burning and shotguns handy. Children remained indoors.

Searchers said late today they believed several of the madmen were located in a thicket four miles southwest of here. Farmers reported they saw several men entering the woods. A posse immediately started a wary hunt for them.

Charles Kenney and Isizan Czordas, the two captured, refused to aid in the search for the companions whose cunning ruse brought them freedom.

One of the inmates screamed about 3 a. m., that some of the prisoners were sawing the bars on their windows. Night Guards U. S. Davis and Bart Hall rushed to the dormitory, only to be over-powered by the 13 desperadoes, bound to cots and robbed of their keys.

Eugene Owen, night superintendent, ran to the scene of the commotion. He, too, was over-powered and threatened with death.

The madmen opened cells of other prisoners who refused to join them. They then headed for the main gate, prodding Owen with knives whetted to razor-like sharpness as they went.

At the gate two of them held their razors at Owen's throat and informed the guard that unless the gates were opened, Owen would be killed. The guard swung it wide.

CANNON STALLS IN LOBBY QUIZ

Committee to Await Flat Refusal to Answer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 3. (AP)—Senator T. H. Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, chairman of the senate lobby committee, tonight issued a statement upholding the contention of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., that the committee had no right to inquire into the political activities of the bishop in the 1928 Southern Anto-Smith campaign.

By EDWARD L. RODDAN

WASHINGTON, June 3. (US)—Declaring himself the victim of "personal persecution," Bishop James Cannon Jr., of Virginia, today challenged the power of the senate lobby committee to investigate his anti-Smith activities in the 1928 presidential campaign.

In a terse reply, Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, acting chairman, instructed the bishop to appear tomorrow prepared to answer questions or accept the consequences.

If Cannon flatly declines to answer, the committee, it was intimated, will consider the matter of instituting contempt proceedings.

Cannon Reads Brief

During his testimony today, the bishop contented himself with reading a legal brief setting forth his contention that the committee has no authority to inquire into "political expenditures" or activities.

Without flatly declining to answer questions, he asked the committee to rule on this challenge of its legal power to act.

Forewarned that the witness would adopt this course, Senator Walsh replied that the committee had a legal right to investigate the political activities of all persons and organizations seeking to influence federal legislation.

When the hearing ended, after two hours of sharp questioning, Bishop Cannon and Senator Walsh were still sparring over the scope of the committee's authority.

Flat Refusal Awaited

Later it was informally decided the committee will take no action until the bishop flatly declines to answer questions. Only senators Walsh and Blaine, Republicans, of Wisconsin, were present today, but a full quorum is expected tomorrow.

In challenging its authority, Bishop Cannon surprised the committee by quoting the supreme court decision in the contempt case of Harry Sinclair, millionaire oil magnate. Walsh was the interrogating senator in that case, as a result of which Sinclair was sentenced to 90 days in jail and a $500 fine.

In concluding his argument, Cannon said:

"This attempt on the part of the committee to go beyond its powers and to investigate my anti-Smith activities is clearly not only political but personal, and because I believe it to be an effort to attack

HOUSE FAVORS SOFTENING OF '5 AND 10' LAW

Amendment to Exempt Hip Flask Carriers From Prison Terms

DRYS AND ANTIS JOIN

Cries of 'Steamroller' and 'Gag' Rule Punctuate Rapid Voting

WASHINGTON, June 3. (US)—Without a roll call and after only 10 minutes debate, the house today passed the Stobbs bill, modifying the drastic Jones-Stalker "5 and 10" law, so as to define petty prohibition violators.

Drys joined with "antis" in a chorus of "ayes" to take from the courts the power to send a hip-flask toter to prison for years.

Petty or casual violators are defined in the bill as persons who do not habitually manufacture or sell or habitually assist in the manufacture or sale of more than one gallon of liquor.

Fine or Jail

Such violators would be subject only to a maximum penalty of six months in jail without hard labor or $500 fine, or both.

Other bills passed and sent to the senate for its action in a drive to improve law enforcement as recommended by the Wickersham law enforcement commission were:

1.—A bill permitting defendants in any criminal case, including prohibition, to waive his right to jury trial, provided consent of the court trying him is given.

2.—One defining petty offenses under any law as those calling for penalties not exceeding six months in jail or $500 fine, or both, and providing that such cases may be prosecuted on complaint or information, no indictments would be necessary.

"Steamroller" Cries

These bills were jammed through amid cries of "steamroller" and "gag" rule by the anti-prohibition bloc. The rule under which the bills were considered virtually gave Chairman Graham, Pennsylvania, on the judiciary committee, one-man power to block amendments.

Having the votes to rule with an iron hand, Graham was in a position to shut off debate. Vigorous protests came from Laguardia, Republican, and Celler Democrat and O'Connor, Democrat, of New York.

Their pleas for more time to discuss the pending measures finally resulted in the administration forces agreeing to put over until tomorrow consideration of the Christopherson bill, carrying out the "jury-less trials" scheme of the Wickersham law enforcement commission.

Agreement was reached to permit three hours of general debate on this measure and then the voting on amendments will begin.

Confederate Veterans Feast On Chicken as 40th Reunion Opens

Thinned Ranks March Proudly Through the Streets of Biloxi While the Band Plays "Dixie"

BILOXI, Miss., June 3. (AP)—Appetites sharpened by gulf breezes, the army of Confederate veterans, here in reunion, feasted at dinner on southern fried chicken tonight and then marched from the mess tent to the big tent auditorium where the 40th reunion formally opened.

The main tent, large enough to accommodate a two-ring circus, was gaily decorated with associated flags strung from side to side. A huge Confederate flag was draped over the speakers stand which was almost hidden from view by flowers and plants.

As the tent filled with veterans and members of the Sons of the Confederate veterans, sponsors of the opening session, and the women of the Southern Confederate Memorial association, as well as thousands of visitors, the U. S. marine band kept music in the air. This band, the president's own, opened the night's program with "Dixie."

Rear Admiral Thomas Pickat Magruder, recently appointed commander of the New Orleans naval base, was the principal speaker. Brief greetings were extended by officials including John Ashley Jones, commander of the Sons of the Veterans, and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president general of the Southern Memorial association, which opened its annual meeting today with a brief afternoon session. Gen. R. A. Sneed, commander of the veterans responded.

More than 500 Boy Scouts were busy between the depot and the camp and all available automobiles were carrying the veterans to the registration quarters and then to Camp Sneed.

No serious illness befell any veterans the first day although many received treatment at the numerous first aid emergency tents and a few were transferred to hospitals. All were back on their feet after a few hours rest. Excitement attended by indigestiion was the main ailment.

50 ENTERED IN STATE PRIMARY

15 Candidates for Governor File Names

DALLAS, June 3. (UP)—Fifty names, including 15 candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, have been filed with the party state executive committee for the 12 state offices to be filled this year.

The time for filing ended at midnight but Albert S. Johnson, committee secretary, announced tonight he would receive any application placed in the mail before that hour. Several more probably will be received Wednesday, he said.

The formal application of Paul Loven, New Braunfels, that he would be a candidate and the drafting of State Sen. Pink Parrish by a group of West Texans today swelled the list of gubernatorial aspirants to 15. Only 12 may make the actual race, however, since Gov. Dan Moody and former Lieut. Gov. Lynch Davidson, of Houston, both were drafted into the race by friends and may refuse to run. Neither Moody nor Davidson have given any intimation of their intentions.

Another Moody, C. C. Moody, Fort Worth laundry truck driver, entered the race today with an announcement containing numerous rebukes for his namesake, the governor. "I am opposed to extravagance, believing that by doing so, I can vindicate the family name," he said. With the filing of his application, politicians here foresaw an attempt to confuse voters should the governor actually run.

Seven candidates, including Sterling P. Strong, of Dallas, who today announced he had mailed his application to Dave Wilcox, Democratic committee chairman, have entered the race for lieutenant governor. Four are in the race for state treasurer and six have an-

FOUR WOUNDED AS CLIMAX TO LONG SEARCH

Two Brothers Wanted for $500 Raid Shot Down By Possemen

FOURTH MAN MISSING

Former Police Officer Named as Member of Michigan Gang

MANCELONA, Mich., June 3. (UP)—With the somber tombstones of a cemetery as a background, Northern Michigan's manhunt for four bank robbers ended dramatically this afternoon in a pitched gun battle.

Four men were wounded. Two of the bandits, Fred and Leonard Elliott, brothers, were shot down and two members of the posse which tracked them to their hiding place were wounded. Robert Kitchen, of Mancelona, and R. C. Bennett were vigilantes wounded.

The fight this afternoon brought the toll of men wounded in the man-hunt, which started yesterday forenoon after the Antrim County State bank here was robbed, to six.

Physician Wounded

Dr. J. R. Gerver, Bellaire physician, is in a Petoskey hospital in a serious condition with a wound inflicted by a fellow posseman when he was mistaken for one of the bandits. Herbert Sullivan, Mancelona business man, was less seriously wounded by shotgun slugs fired by the bandits when he chased them yesterday.

With the shooting and capture of the Elliott brothers this afternoon officers had in custody three of the four bandits. Sylvester Elliott, a third brother, surrendered last night to state troopers when they surprised him emerging from a swamp several miles west of here. He was unarmed and offered no resistance. Officers said the Elliotts named Jim Kelley, former Kalamazoo policeman, as the fourth member of their gang. He is reported to have caught a freight train this morning and escaped.

Bandits Treated

The Elliotts were brought to a doctor's office here for treatment. Leonard, it was said, probably would lose the sight of both eyes. Fred, who also bore a slight flesh wound from yesterday's brush with Sullivan, was less seriously hurt. Kitchen had shotgun slugs in his chest and abdomen. His condition is serious. Benett was less seriously wounded.

Hunger was indirectly responsible for the Elliotts' capture. This afternoon they walked into Alba, seven miles west of here and pur-

First Lady of City Zoo to Get Semi-Annual Bath and Facial Friday

Two Gallons of Oil, 14-Inch File and One Step Ladder Ordered for Big Event

The arrival of summer may not mean much to some of the animals at the city zoo, but to Miss Sugar, three-ton elephant, it will mean her semi-annual facial, manicure and hot oil bath.

Miss Sugar will receive her beauty treatment Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the hands of M. T. Bennett, chief zoo attendant, who will be assisted by Raymond Searcy. C. C. Bunnenberg, park superintendent, is issuing an invitation to all children of the city to be present.

Two gallons of neatsfoot oil will be used for the bath, it was estimated. This oil is the most penetrating oil on the market and when applied with heat will penetrate leather. Stiff bristle brushes will be used in applying the first coat and the second application will be put on with a rag.

Equipped with a step ladder and brushes, workmen hope milady does not assume the attitude of the proverbial country boy on Saturday night when an attempt is made to wash Miss Sugar's ears.

The manicurist's kit will consist of a 14-inch file, several long, sharp knives and a rasp. The rasp will be used in filing the nails of the pedal extremities while the knives and file will serve the purpose of milady's cuticle scissors and orange stick.

Miss Sugar's facial will be limited to a hot oil massage followed by a brisk rubbing and another application of the oil to soften the skin.

Committee to Await Flat Refusal to Answer

me and in some way to impair my influence, as the wet and Catholic press have been doing for nearly two years, I must decline to admit the jurisdiction of this committee over either my political or personal activities."

Covers Contribution

In making this statement, Cannon was trying to block attempts to question him about the $65,300 in campaign contributions which he received from E. C. Jameson, wealthy New York insurance man, in 1928. These funds were for the purpose of promoting the fight against Smith for president.

When Bishop Cannon concluded reading, Walsh replied:

"Of course, if you don't care to answer the question, you will have to take the responsibility."

Cannon said:

"It isn't a desire to conceal anything. It's a question of persecution."

He added:

"I don't mean to reflect on you, Senator. I have a great respect for you personally."

Crowd Orderly

Bishop Cannon took the witness stand before an eager audience tense in the expectation of what was to develop. The crowd maintained a discreet silence until the bishops final statement, which brought a few handclaps of approval and a few hisses. When the hearing ended, the spectators engaged in a heated argument which nearly culminated in a fist-fight between the two heated partisans, the bishop himself appealing for peace.

During the early questioning, the bishop frankly admitted he had done some "legitimate lobbying," which included the exchange of letters with President Hoover, Secretary Mellon, and other officials on dry legislation.

He read from the statement of the Methodist board of temperance and social service of the Southern Methodist church, of which he is chairman, asserting that $300,000,000 should be appropriated if necessary to enforce prohibition.

When Walsh started questioning him about his political activities, Cannon asserted that those activities were "personal" and in no way connected with his church work. He first objected when Walsh questioned him about the Asheville, N. C., conference, where the anti-Smith movement was launched in 1928.

Despite his objections, Walsh succeeded in having him admit he borrowed $303.53 of the Methodist board's money to help pay some of the Asheville expenses. Cannon explained that he paid this back by charging the board with the expense of printing one of his speeches against repeal of the 18th amendment. Walsh had great difficulty trying to understand this transaction.

The committee produced a letter written last year by E. L. Crawford, Cannon's assistant, saying Attorney General Mitchell was going to delay appointing a successor to Mabel Willebrandt until he found out "how the great prohibition boards stood on the matter."

$12,000 Tax Suit in Archer County Delayed

Trial of the suit brought in behalf of Archer county against Turner Richardson on a claim to approximately $12,000 in delinquent taxes on oil property, which was to have been called in a special session of the 30th district court at Archer City Tuesday, was postponed until Thursday when attorneys announced they were not ready for trial, according to Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court, who will convene the special session. Judge Martin will occupy the bench in the absence of Judge Allan D. Montgomery, now occupied with the regular June term of the 30th court at Graham. Richardson failed to pay the county's claims for taxes for the past three years, contending the property had been valued too high.

Graf Zeppelin Due Over Seville Late Today in Dash to Germany

NEW YORK, June 3. (US)—The Graf Zeppelin will be over the Azores early tomorrow morning and in Seville by evening.

By 4 o'clock this afternoon the huge dirigible had covered approximately 1,200 miles of its 5,500-mile transatlantic hop to Seville and was easting up the 600 miles between it and the Azores at a speed of between 70 and 76 miles an hour under perfect flying weather. A tail wind was pushing the Graf along.

This according to a message from the Graf picked up by the radio marine station at Chatham, Mass. The message added that Dr. Hugo Eckener had changed the Zeppelin's course to the southward from the due east route it had been following since it passed out over the Atlantic at Long Island last night.

At 10 a. m. the Graf had reported its position to the Hamburg-American line here as approximately 800 miles due east of New York. At that time is position was given as 40.18 north latitude, 57.30 west longitude.

Two hours earlier the Graf had been reported 150 miles closer to American shores by the British freighter Kyno, inward bound from Antwerp to New York.

Dr. Eckener said before the take off at Lakehurst, N. J., last night that he expected to make Seville in 50 hours.

BANDITS TAKEN IN GUN BATTLE

Michigan Bank Robbers Shot by Posse

chased grocery supplies. Their actions aroused suspicion and as they left town a group of men, armed with rifles and shotguns, followed.

Robber Fires

The men walked to the edge of the cemetery and dropped out of sight in the high grass. It was there—they had secreted their weapons before they entered town. As the posse drew near one of the brothers arose and fired. Kitchen dropped at the first shot but arose and fired back. His aim was true and one of the brothers sank to the ground. The shooting then became general until the second brother fell, but not until after one of his charges found a mark in Bennett's body.

The prize for which the brothers fought was $500. All they were able to grab as they rushed from the bank yesterday when one of the institution's officials raised an alarm. Leaving the bank they were fired on by Sullivan, who then gave chase in a commandeered car, only to be wounded when he came to close grips with the bandits.

Dr. Gerver was wounded in a tragic mistake of the chase. He fired on a speeding car of make similar to that of the bandits, only to be wounded when the occupants of the car fired back. They, too, were possemen, and when fired on thought they had encountered the bandits. The mistake in identity resulted in a siege on a farm house in which Gerver's son and Fred Lindmere took refuge, the possemen believing the bandits were in the house. The confusion lasted two hours, while more than 1,000 armed men gathered about the house and prepared to close in on the place. Meantime, the bandits were seeking to make their getaway, but their plans failed when a fifth partner in the robbery plan failed to meet them as had been arranged.

Their own automobile abandoned, they then were forced to take refuge in the swamps and timber, from which they emerged this afternoon.

PICHER, Okla., June 3. (AP)—Four more persons were arrested by G. A. Demoss, deputy United States marshal today as the government continued is campaign to break up an alleged liquor traffic in the zinc and lead mining fields of Ottawa county.

Today's arrests included Joe Nolan, Picher chief of police, who had been taken into custody last week on a similar charge and released on $5,000 bond after being arraigned at Vinita. Nolan now is in the county jail awaiting action by United States District Court Judge F. E. Kennamer on an application for an additional $5,000 bond.

The arrests today, made as part of the roundup of officers, former officers and others on federal charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, brought the total number held in the present roundup to 16 and the grand total of the investigation to 22.

Last night M. F. Sweet, Cardin, special highway officer; P. T. Leffler, assistant Picher police chief; Herman Brewer, Picher patrolman, and Louis Carmel, merchant at Picher, were arrested.

Earlier in the day Demoss apprehended William Harrington, Picher councilman; Joe Anderson, special officer; William Schmulbach, Picher merchant policeman, and M. L. Wolsey, Picher constable. Charles Weaver, Picher attorney representing the first group of six arrested, was taken into custody at Bartlesville, on a similar charge.

The arrests reduced the local police force to two men and a former policeman who was acting as merchant patrolman.

Farm Aid Increases Cost of Government

WASHINGTON, June 3. (INS)—Uncle Sam spent $3,577,353,000 during the first 11 months of the 1930 fiscal year to maintain the government, the treasury announced today, an increase of $150,000,000 for the same period in the 1929 fiscal year chiefly because of the expenditures of the federal farm board.

Receipts amounted to $3,374,446,000, a gain of $107,000,000, leaving a deficit for the 11 months of $202,906,000, compared with $160,621,000 for the same time last year.

Officials said, however, that with contemplated income tax receipts of more than $500,000,000 this month, and a security of probably as much, the government will complete the fiscal year June 30 with a surplus. It will be smaller than the $225,000,000 surplus last year.

Issues of securities during the 11 months amounted to $3,170,964,000, chiefly certificates, while retirements were $3,702,595,000, including certificates and notes.

At the end of May the public debt amounted to $16,399,000,000, a decrease of $767,664,000 in a year.

Farmers Win First Skirmish In Row Over Sleeping in Market

HOUSTON, June 3. (AP)—Houston's million dollar farmers market this morning was seething with disgruntled farmers and arguing speculators.

The threat of "rebellion" was occasioned last night when officers attempted to put into effect a new ordinance prohibiting speculators from selling on the market and requiring every farmer to dispose of or move off the produce at 8 p. m. In the past the farmers had been spending the night with their trucks and produce on the market, getting an early start in the morning.

Fifty-nine farmers "stood pat" last night when authorities issued the order to "shove on." They started with their trucks. Police, admidst hmisses and boos of the overall and khaki clad farmers, took the license numbers of the trucks.

"They threatened us all with fines ranging from $50 to $150 at first, said L. P. Hobbs, one of the farmers on the market, "if we didn't move on. Then they came down some, threatening to expel all of us who stayed, forcing us to keep away from the market seven days a week.

"But we stayed all right."

AMERICANS ARE FAVORED BY LOW PRICE OF SUGAR

Most Nations Pay Much Higher Price for This Product

According to statistics, sugar is one of the cheapest food products bought by the American housewife day in and day out. In Australia and New Zealand, where the per capita consumption is thirty pounds more per year than in the United States, a higher price is maintained.

The standards of this country in refining sugar, not only insure uniform color, granulation, density and purity, but give it unlimited keeping qualities. Besides, Americans are offered sugar in many inviting forms, conveniently packed to suit their needs.

The low price of sugar, its many uses, and the important part it plays in the diet should not be overlooked. It is one of the chief ingredients in wholesome desserts, including puddings, custards and ice cream. It improves the taste-appeal of beverages, nutritious stewed and fresh fruits, also breakfast cereals. Used as a seasoning with salt, sugar heightens the flavor of vegetables rich in vitamins and minerals.

The healthy, well-fed United States Army consumes considerably more sugar per capita than those in civilian life. Inasmuch as the diet of these soldiers is constantly watched by medical and dietary experts, this consumption of sugar is significant. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

BANKER RAPS CHAIN SYSTEM

Davison Fears Effect of Money Monopoly

WASHINGTON, June 3. (INS)—George W. Davidson, president of the Central Hanover bank, New York City, today voiced his opposition to monopolistic control of money and the widespread extension of group and branch banking before the house banking committee.

Passage of proposed branch banking legislation would lead to speculation in bank stocks "which would make last fall's stock market debacle look like a child's story," he asserted.

"The traditions of the country are against concentration of any power, particularly money power," said Davison. "It is only necessary to recall the declarations of many statesmen in this regard."

The unit bank, locally owned, has been a tremendous factor in building up the nation, he explained and denied branch banking would lessen bank failures or meet all the needs of small communities.

He opposed the plan of Comptroller of the Treasury Pole to permit national banks to have branches in their trade areas.

Expectancy of action by congress favoring branch, group or chain banking, he said, already has caused tremors among bankers," and urged congress to decide the question promptly.

He also suggested congress act to prevent monopolistic control by group, chain and branch banks.

Wichita Club Women Honor Delegates To Biennial

A representative group of 25 members met the Fort Worth and Denver train Tuesday afternoon and greeted club women of Texas on their way to the biennial convening in Denver June 5-14. Mrs. Ben G. Oneal, president of the first district, T. F. W. C., and Miss Mary Tancred, Junior Forum president, were specially honored when women of the Forum gave them lovely chiffon handkerchiefs in addition to the pretty favors presented all delegates.

The chamber of commerce made possible a pretty courtesy when boxes of Martha Washington candy were presented each of the 30 delegates on the special car. L. H. Estes of the Empire Paper company furnished for his company glassine paper in pastel shades with which the boxes were wrapped and tied, and Junior Forum girls made corsage bouquets of sweet peas in pastel colors for the tops of the boxes.

Inside the packages were cards printed by courtesy of the Humphrey Printing company with the inscription, "Compliments of Wichita Falls, Texas, the City that Faith Built."

A. B. Dodge of the Fort Worth and Denver railroad was especially thanked by forum members for the courtesy extended women of the city which made their greeting to bienniani delegates possible. They were kept informed of the time of the train's arrival and of the number of passengers to be prepared for, and a traveling passenger agent on the train had made arrangements for the club women to get off the train in the city.

Mrs. Maggie Barry of Bryan, Texas, gave greetings from the delegates and special compliments were paid Miss Tancred, Junior Forum president, by state executives of Junior work. Mrs. T. T. T. Reese and Mrs. W. Newton Maer were in charge of welcome courtesies.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

They were talking of flowers and one dainty lady in the group, with a city wide reputation as flower grower and lover, asked, "Did you ever see water with as little moisture as the Wichita Falls water"

With one accord, the group agreed with her. "All it does," one remarked, "is to seep down and rot the roots and we have to wet-nurse flowers through the summer."

Then the talk drifted to varieties of flowers reared in the city. The table where the group sat was centered with a jar of glowing red rosebuds and feathery ferns. But gladioli and lilies were most discussed. The long row of gladioli in every lovely color facing the J. I. Staley home came in for its share of admiration.

One flower lover had taken a tip given by Mrs. P. P. Langford at the Garden club breakfast and planted lilies in her shrubbery and was delighted with the condition of the plants. She discussed their life through coming seasons, bringing a laugh when she asked, "Do you raise or rear lilies?"

Each one of the group was in a talking mood; but it was the consensus of opinion that flowers were such precious things they deserved in Wichita Falls, with the much criticized water supply, the verb "rear."

"I know," was emphatically remarked, "that if I spent as much time on a child as I do on these flowers and he responded as poorly, I'd take stringent measures with him."

Yet there are so many flowers in the city that seem to be growing with little effort. If it necessitated great effort, the long line of tiger lilies around the Kell home repays that effort. They are a golden guard worth having.

We wonder sometimes if result does not repay work when a body loves what he works with. It does not need the encomium of a public to make a flower lover happy. They wish to share the flowers with flower lovers.

We saw another thing Tuesday that made us think of effort well repaid, in Dr. L. I. Lucey, with a clean white little spitz. Born with only two hind legs, she rose on them and stepped daintily about when she heard her master's voice.

She would lapse sometimes into a less dignified position and push herself around on the stubs with the active legs she owned. And, if she did only have half the limbs to which she was entitled, she was a happy, laughing thing.

What a world it would be if people did not have pitying hearts!

Miss Cleo Kemmerly Celebrates Birthday

Miss Cleo Kemmerly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Kemmerly, was honored Saturday evening with a pretty party on the occasion of her 15th birthday. The house was decorated with a spring color scheme of green and white and the same motif was observed in the refreshment plate.

Games were played during the evening and a tray of lovely gifts were presented to the honoree.

A delightful refreshment course was served to Misses Faye Powell, Inez Smith, Mary Wilson, Letha McKinley, Miriam Tow, Rosa Lee Glazner and Messrs. Perry Davis, Truitt Richardson, Cecil Bozeman, Buell Jeqn Martin, Bervin Harper, Joe Allen, Aubrey Speights, Weldon and Wayland Lamance and the young honoree.

Spring Party at Camp Noble Is Pleasant Event

An unusual program was announced for the spring party given at Camp Noble by the Business and Professional Women's club Tuesday night. Formal costumes were aprons and overalls.

A singsong opened the party and executive board members joined in farce orchestra selections.

A Jewish wedding featured the autumn party given by the organization and at the party Tuesday evening, a divorce case of Kuhfusskvie versus Thomasvitz was tried before Judge Elizabeth Weldon with a jury selected from guests present.

A new panatrope has been installed at Camp Noble and dancing was enjoyed during the latter part of the evening. Miss Elizabeth Hall was thanked for a donation of $25 toward the purchase of the panatrope. Fifty reservations were made for the party.

Nocona Man Escapes Death in Boiler Blast

Special to The Record News

NOCONA, Texas, June 3—A. J. Streety, 25, fireman for the Neely Drilling company on the Cunningham lease, narrowly escaped death in the Nocona oil field late Tuesday afternoon when a boiler near which he was working exploded and was blown 170 feet across the field.

Streety was scalded about the face and body and badly cut when he was hurled face downward against gravel. He was rushed to the emergency hospital in Nocona where physicians said he would recover.

Two Trucks and Garage Destroyed in Blaze

Damage estimated at $2,000 was caused by flames of undetermined origin which destroyed two trucks belonging to the Chapman dairy and practically the entire interior of a small brick garage building at 605 Twelfth street about 5:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The flames were confined to the interior of the structure, from which dense clouds of smoke issued even after firemen had extinguished the blaze and which hampered the work by preventing the firemen from seeing inside of the building.

Selfish People Reap Harvest In Old Age, Says Dix

Dear Miss Dix—We have two friends, maiden ladies nearly 70, but strong and healthy and exceedingly well-to-do financially. They have a beautiful home and plenty of money, but for all of that they are grafters. They never do anything for any one else, but they expect every one to do for them, and are always putting you in a position where you have to do favors for them. Every summer when it nears vacation time they begin sounding out their friends to find out who is going to have a summer cottage so they can get a vacation without board. That is just an example of how selfish they are. Don't you think that instead of asking so much from other people they should occasionally, at least, do some nice things for others?

—MR. AND MRS. R.

Answer—Selfishness should be met with selfishness. The friends of these miserly old ladies should be just as selfish as they are and refuse to be victimized by them. There is no merit in suffering yourself to be held up and robbed.

Rather it is weakness and cowardice to submit to it. There is no virtue in giving free board in your summer cottage to rich old women who force themselves upon you as uninvited guests, but it would be a fine and benevolent thing to give two poor women, who cannot afford to go to a hotel or boarding house, a vacation in the country.

But what a sad old age these stingy sisters are preparing for themselves! For our old age is the harvest time in which we reap what we have been sowing during our whole lifetime, and if we have failed to scatter seeds of kindness, if we have implanted in the hearts of others no love nor gratitude, the sheaves that we gather in are bound to be so few and meager that we shall spend our last days starved for affection and companionship.

If we had no natural impulse toward kindness, if no well of sympathy bubbled up spontaneously in our hearts it would still pay us to be good and helpful and generous and sympathetic to our fellow creatures in our youth just for the dividends that we would collect on it in age. Because age is forlorn at best and it is an almost unendurable curse if we must bear it alone without love and companionship.

Everybody from Poor Richard down has impressed upon us the necessity of laying up money for our old age. It is just as necessary to lay up affection for our latter days as it is to provide ourselves with a bank account, and we can only do that by investing in the hearts of those about us.

We must live for others instead of ourselves. We must give, not only money but ourselves. We must give our interest. We must give our sympathy, our help. We must weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who rejoice. We must take new-born babes into our arms and fold quiet hands on the still breasts of the dead. We must whisper words of hope and encouragement and forget secrets that have been told us.

And those who do this get their reward in age. It comes back to them a thousandfold. They are loved and cherished. Doors are open to them. Hands stretched out to them. They are never lonely nor forlorn.

But those who have lived a selfish and self-centered life, who have never gone out of their way to do a kindness, who have never given a dollar to one in need, who have never troubled themselves to write a word of congratulation or of sympathy, who have never sacrificed themselves for another, are left to their own dreary company when they are old. These are the old people who claim that they have no friends and that everybody has forgotten them. It is true. They have no friends because they deserve none.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a middle-aged woman and I have been married half my life. Recently because of a misfortune to my husband I have gone to work to try to help out. A few months ago a young chap was taken on by the firm, and I treated him just as I did all the other men, friendly and cordial but to my amazement I find that the poor boob thinks he is such a woman killer that nothing female can resist him. I overheard him talking about an old woman being crazy about him and I found out that it was I. Isn't it enough to make a woman of my age rage to have a young cub who would bore me to tears in five minutes, imagine a thing like that just because I am friendly and don't go about looking as if I had pickles for breakfast? —S. B. A.

Answer—I don't wonder that you are disgusted, but console yourself with the reflection that it doesn't hurt you, and what a whale of a kick he is getting out of it.

Also forgive him because of his youth and unsophistication, because it is only while a man is in the silly stage that he believes himself a lady killer and that no woman, and especially no middle-aged woman, could fail to fall for him. Some men never get over this and to their dying day they hold to the theory that every woman and especially every widow, is just pining to marry them.

When your young cub has had some half-dozen girls turn him down good and hard, it will shake some of his conceit out of him, but in the meantime I don't blame you for wishing that you could turn him across your knee and spank him. —DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—The boy I am going to marry is very good and kind and generous to me, but he never shows me any of the little attentions that women love. He has never brought me a flower or a box of candy, or remembered an anniversary, and it is the little things that count with women, don't you think? —BELLE.

Answer—I think little things count too much with women. They put entirely too much stress on small attentions. It is silly to make the fetish they do of anniversaries.

Of course, it is nice and romantic to have your sweetheart or your husband always remember your little fads and fancies and send you flowers on the anniversary of the day you first met and the day he popped the question and the day you got engaged and your wedding anniversary and your birthday and so on. Probably there isn't a woman living who doesn't get a thrill out of having the man she loves send her violets because they are the color of the dress she is going to wear, or orchids because she wore them the first time he ever saw her.

But after all these are just the meringue on the lemon pie of life. They are not the real thing. A man can say it with other things just as well as flowers and a beefsteak is just as much a token of affection as a box of chocolates.

Yet I have known women married to fine, domestic men who were good providers, who made themselves perfectly miserable because their husbands always had to be reminded about their wedding anniversaries and their birthdays and gave them checks instead of some misfit present they had picked out on Christmas.

Don't be silly about little attentions. Try to see them in their true perspective. The big thing in marriage is everyday living. Getting a man who is good and kind and generous and who supports you in comfort. If you have enough common sense to look at the matter fairly, you will see that it does not make much difference whether the man who pays your bills without a murmur sends you flowers or brings you candy or not.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Honoring outgoing and incoming members of the executive board of the Business and Professional Women's club, Miss Zula McKay, retiring president, entertained Saturday evening at the William-Mary hotel with a dinner-bridge, beautiful in spring colors of green and white. Large baskets of Texas wild flowers were used in decorations and novel place cards were photographs of the guests inside tiny holders. Tiny Dresden baskets filled with bonbons, made dainty pastel favors and the green crystal dinner service stressed the spring motif.

Following the delicious dinner bridge was played and at each of the four tables, pretty hand painted candle holders were awarded as prizes. Increasing Interest Shown In Methodist Mission Study

An interested group of women heard the second mission study lesson held in the parlors of the First Methodist church Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Q. B. Lee presiding.

Mrs. B. P. Williams gave an inspirational devotional lesson followed by a solo number, "The Home of the Soul," by Miss Louella Spragins with Mrs. C. A. Spragins at the piano. The number was noted for the feeling expressed in its interpretation.

Mrs. W. W. Silk was in charge of the third chapter of the study book, with the subject "What the City Does to People." Mrs. Silk stated that a city has a soul collectively, because people speak of it as a good or as a wicked city, and quoted a child's definition of the soul as "that part of us that goes out to find God." In the city, she said, class and group consciousness goes to make civic pride. Foreigners who come to America with high hopes and ideals are disappointed, the speaker said, when they are segregated in foreign quarters and cannot become 100 per cent American.

Other groups were discussed, particularly those who may feel loneliness in a city. The "blighted areas," were discussed as old homes whose glory has been turned into rooming and boarding houses.

Mrs. Silk said the city was built for the naturally strong and the rule was the survival of the fittest. She told of incidents where cities had helped their underprivileged and said that law is making it possible to do more for them each year. Applied Christianity was stressed as the means toward making the city better physically, mentally and spiritually.

Mrs. W. W. Cook talked on the work of the Federated Missionary society and Mrs. Wayne Somerville used charts to demonstrate the growth of industries in the country.

Mrs. E. B. Lehrack discussed "Lawlessness in Our Cities," taking up the city drug problem and racketeering. The fact that all drug addicts are not bad people was emphasized and the speaker told of the psychological effect of publicity given crime in all its phases.

Announcement was made of the lesson to be conducted at 9:45 Wednesday morning and of study continuing through Friday. Mrs. J. C. A. Guest gave the closing prayer. Members and guests who registered Tuesday were Mesdames Q. B. Lee, W. W. Silk, J. C. A. Guest, C. A. Spragins, Homer Lee, B. P. Williams, Wayne Somerville, J. M. Sweeton, Downing, A. W. Karrenbrock, O. P. Dorsey, S. S. McKenney, J. W. Grisham, Bert Bean, C. B. Haynie, E. B. Lehrack, W. W. Noe, W. W. Cook and Miss Laurette Spragins.

R. O. T. C. Opens at Fort Sill Thursday

Special to The Record News

LAWTON, Okla., June 3.—Members of the reserve officers training corps will start arriving at Fort Sill Wednesday with the training camp to open officially Thursday. Major E. T. Parker, instructor of military science at the University of Oklahoma, who will be in charge of the camp, opened his office today.

Approximately 140 youths from the University of Oklahoma and the Oklahoma A. and M. college will train on the reservation for the next 30 days.

A printing press was in operation in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, before the Mayflower landed in North America. The city is 200 years older than New York.

Do Women Suffer More Than Men?

Physicians tell us that the nervous system of woman is more highly organized, more delicately poised, and therefore, more sensitive to disturbances and susceptible to pain than that of men.

Women especially appreciate and profit by the use of Capudine, because it quickly relieves high nerve tension and pain by soothing the nerves—not by deadening them. For nervous headache, periodic pains, pains in the back and sides, neuralgia and rheumatic pains, nothing is so quickly effective and satisfactory as Capudine. Being liquid it acts much quicker than tablets and powders. Contains no opiates and does not upset the stomach, therefore, is the ideal remedy.

Every home should be supplied with Capudine. It brings grateful relief from nerve strain and pain, and affords peaceful relaxation in just a few minutes. At drug stores in 30c and 60c sizes.—Adv.

"Brought Back My Strength"

"My little daughter was born on a homestead in northern Alberta. I had four other children and I worked so hard that I suffered a nervous breakdown. The doctor's tonic did not seem to help me and when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to take that instead. I kept on until I felt well again. It brought back my strength. Today I can do anything, thanks to the Vegetable Compound."

Right Idea!

This four-year-old athlete is the son of Mrs. Sam Jones, 1702 W. Laurel St., San Antonio. She says: "Jimmie's wonderful condition shows my idea is right.

"Whenever he's the least cross or upset, or has a cold, I give him a little California Fig Syrup. It always brightens him up; regulates his stomach and bowels; gives him a hearty appetite. I have used it with all my children and it has never failed to help them promptly."

All children love the rich, fruity flavor of California Fig Syrup. A pure vegetable product, it doesn't gripe or sicken. It always acts gently but thoroughly to cleanse the system of bilious, headachy, constipated children. Doctors say it tones and strengthens weak bowels. Try it with your child. Texas and New Mexico Potash To Break Foreign Monopoly, Says Haskin

Production at Home Would Do Much to Solve Problems of Farmer, Declares Bureau Head

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN
Director The Record News Information Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 3.—After more than a decade of active effort, the United States government now believes that it has developed a source of potash, recognized as one of the best plant foods in the world. The importance of this discovery, made under the auspices of the bureau of mines, scarcely can be over-estimated.

The American farmer in the past has been wholly dependent on Germany and France for commercial supplies of potash, for the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine have been practically the sole location of deposits available for commercial exploitation. The entire world, indeed, has drawn its supplies from this natural monopoly.

Further, this new discovery subtracts somewhat from the importance of the Muscle Shoals project for the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. One of the strongest arguments for the expenditure of government money in the development of the Muscle Shoals hydro-electric project was the need for drawing from the atmosphere this mysterious, invisible element and converting it into a ponderable substance, capable of making many blades of grass grow where one grew before. There is enough run-down tobacco and cotton land in the country and land not originally blessed with natural fertility to make almost any amount of fertilizer welcome. However, the bureau of mines' potash discoveries make the reliance on the nitrogenous fertilizers lighter.

The potash deposits discovered in the course of the bureau's explotations are located in Texas and New Mexico. The potash-bearing mineral found is polyhalite which, chemically, is a sulphate of lime, magnesia and potash, the potash content amounting in these fields to 12 to 15 per cent.

Release from foreign monopoly in the matter of potash supplies is due not only to the bureau's enterprise in discovering the deposits but to its resourcefulness in developing a process which makes extraction commercially feasible. Experiments have been conducted for a long time at the bureau's non-metallic minerals experimental station at New Brunswick, N. J. Only now has a process been hit upon which can economically extract the 12 to 15 per cent of potash from the polyhalite.

The Effect Upon Prices

By utilization of this process in treatment of these Texas and New Mexico findings, potash can be produced at from $8 to $16 per ton. Even with the transportation costs to market added, this fertilizer can be delivered to American farmers under present prices demanded for the French product.

To be sure there may be a hitch in all this. The Alsace-Lorraine potash is controlled by a cartel which fixes prices and doles out supplies in quantities held under sufficient restraint to sustain the eagerness of the world market. It is a reasonable assumption that, in the face of American competition from this new source, the cartel could cut its prices sharply.

Again, however, new factors inject themselves into the situation. In order to flourish, the Alsace-Lorraine potash cartel must continue to make good profits from its business in Europe. Should it drastically cut the price of potash for export to America it would have to cut it at home. The home market would demand a reduction in the first place and, failing to get it, might conceivably turn to the new source in the United States and enable us to develop an export market. In addition to that, if it were found that the French were trying to hold the American market by selling here at prices lower than those changed on the continent, the anti-dumping law would speedily be invoked. Then, too, if it were shown that the Texas and New Mexico deposits could supply domestic demand, there is little doubt that a high tariff would be placed on the foreign product.

Potash is one of those unique raw materials, the control of which heretofore has been entirely out of American hands. It is among the list of materials for which the United States has been dependent on foreign countries, a situation vigorously attacked by President Hoover when he was secretary of commerce. In such circumstances, obviously, no tariff was imposed. We were glad to get the necessary supplies as cheaply as possible.

But with a domestic source able to meet home needs, the tariff policy would change overnight. A rate would be charged on imports of foreign potash which would raise its price above that which American producers would have to charge.

Breaking of Potash Monopoly

Still another factor bearing on the world potash situation is the development in North Africa of new deposits found there. The bed of the Lake of Zarzis in south Tunis has begun to yield a small quantity—only 20,000 tons so far—but active prospecting is going forward and further finds are anticipated.

All of these developments seem to spell the final breaking of the Alsace-Lorraine potash monopoly which for so many years has held the fertilizer-consuming nations in its grip. It may be regarded as somewhat ironical that these new sources of enriching plant food should become available at a time when the products of agriculture already are so heavily over-produced that low prices are causing distress to farmers everywhere.

The situation is vastly different from what it was during the world war. Stoppage of trade with Germany, which then had an almost complete potash monopoly because it held both Alsace and Lorraine in addition to other sources, caused an acute shortage of this important fertilizer. Shipments to this country stopped abruptly and at a time when the entire nation was bent on producing as much food as the ground would yield to feed the armies and civilian populations of our European allies as well as our own people.

The chemists and experimenters and explorers worked with feverish energy to discovery and develop sources and processes which would make up the lack. Price did not matter. Potash was an imperative necessity at any cost. Plants were erected to recover potash from kelp or seaweed and some supplies were drawn from this source. Even then the Texas beds were known in a general way and they were worked. Under war pressure a supply of potash was produced to meet about one-fifth of the nation's normal requirements.

This situation could not last. Cost of production had been disregarded because of the war necessity but, with the end of the war, Germany began shipping potash here at prices actually under her own pre-war prices. This was done in an effort to recapture the trade and collect a lot of money quickly to meet instant needs at home. It sounded the knell of the emergency potash industry in America. Only two producers remained in business.

Now we pass into a new phase. At last we can produce potash on a competitive basis with Germany and France. The hope of ever achieving this position seemed so slim that private enterprise has held aloof. In 1926 congress provided funds for the exploitation and process experiments and to date nine wells have been completed in Texas and seven in New Mexico and the New Brunswick laboratories have perfected their economical process. Emancipation from foreign dependence for our potash seems just around the corner.

Of the amount, $11,378.70 was for city taxes, $517.80 for occupation and $8,048.28 for school taxes. The amount is unusually high for delinquent collections, Mr. Hyer said.

Cooking School Note by Mrs. Frances Northcross

In the cooking school I conducted under the auspices of the Times and Record News, I stressed modern methods of cooking. Naturally, then, I use and recommend CRISCO—for it's a modern shortening.—Mrs. Frances Northcross.

Where Mark Twain breakfasted at 3 P. M.

WHEN Mark Twain, the American humorist, lived in New York, he used to wander out of his house on Ninth Street and Fifth Avenue at mid-afternoon for his BREAKFAST. This he ate in a certain French hotel nearby which is even now a gathering place for epicures.

Its dining room, still becurtained in Nottingham lace, has looked out over the avenue for more than 80 years. Not long ago I, too, had breakfast there—but not at 3 in the afternoon! And, my dear good reader, if the immortal Mark Twain had ever eaten such pineapple fritters and bacon, I don't believe he would ever have waited so long for them. Those slivers of pineapple simply swooned in a delicate batter fried to a honey-brown crunchiness.

I've found the recipe for you. You can deep-fry them in the French fashion, in your own apartment for Sunday morning breakfast, if you like. Crisco is so fresh-tasting and non-smoking that no frying odors ever linger around to offend early afternoon guests. They can be used, too, as an accompaniment for other meat courses for other meals, or as a dessert by themselves.

Other fruit than pineapple can be substituted in the batter I'm giving you but I wouldn't risk substituting another fat. For Crisco is the only fat I know of that allows the real flavor of any food cooked with it, or in it, to assert its individuality. If you taste Crisco, yourself, just as it comes from the can, you can readily see how a fat so fresh flavored will preserve the delicacy of your most subtle foods. WINIFRED S. CARTER

PINEAPPLE FRITTERS

1 cup flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1¼ cups canned pineapple cut in slivers
½ cup pineapple juice
1 tablespoon melted Crisco
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg (beaten)
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add pineapple juice, lemon juice, well-beaten egg and Crisco. Mix well. Then stir in pineapple. Drop by tablespoons into deep hot Crisco (360° to 375° F. or when inch cube of bread browns in 60 seconds). Fry to golden brown (about 2 minutes). Drain on unglazed paper. Dust with powdered sugar to serve as dessert. Serve plain with meat.

SUNDAY SUPPER CREAMED EGGS

6 hard cooked eggs
6 slices of toast

Save out 2 egg yolks. Slice remainder of eggs thin and add gently to this cream sauce (mix well 2 tablespoons Crisco with 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon chopped onion. Then add gradually 2 cups hot milk and stir over a slow fire. Cook till thick. Then add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley). Arrange toast on hot platter. Pour creamed eggs over toast. Press 2 egg yolks through a sieve and sprinkle over top for a garnish.

The Trail to Capone
Russia Uses Our Brains
Then Laughs at Us
Brave Cardinal Lucon

By EMILE GAUVREAU

Organization counts. Big criminals grown rich and fat on prohibition have found that out. The day of the little crook who took great risks of blowing up a safe is over. America does business in a big way, including crime. All this is reflected in the seizure by the New York police of $1,300,000 in stolen jewelry and the arrest of ten master thieves in New York and Chicago. And the trail, as you might suppose, points directly to Al Capone, millionaire czar of gangland, directing his kingdom of crime as calmly as a president supervises a big railroad.

Noah H. Swayne, executive director of the Anthracite Institute of America, gives our economists something to think about. American engineers, he points out, go to Russia and develop the anthracite industry there to a point where coal mined in the Ukraine can be laid down in American ports (a freight distance of 8,000 miles) at $1 less per ton than we ourselves, with a century and a quarter of experience, can produce it in Pennsylvania. Russia uses our brains and skill and then laughs at our stupidity!

In the month of February 137,000 tons of this foreign coal came into our ports. The Soviet's infant industry now contracts with American distributors to deliver 5,000,000 tons of coal a year, as against 60,000,000 tons a year produced by all the anthracite mines operating in the United States.

Offhand, you would suppose that some tariff protection could be invoked on the grounds of "dumping, discrimination against American industry, unfair competition." But other American interests, whose products find a great and ready market in the Slav countries, are more concerned with having Russian credits established here, as a guarantee of their investments, than over saving a brother industry from going on the rocks.

When self-interest steps in through the front door, patriotism is quick to find a way out through the rear.

Cardinal Lucon, the hero of Rheims Cathedral, is dead. He won the love and honor of the world during the war. For four years while the great cathedral was almost daily the target of German guns he remained in a small room under the crumbling chapel. When the inhabitants evacuated the city in terror the brave cardinal remained, shells bursting over his head. He helped the wounded and held daily mass in his underground room. When the war was over he strove with all of his energy to establish friendly relations between the Germans and the French.

Compare this man with the pompous generals behind the lines and you will understand the meaning of nobility of soul.

Now that the "first sewing machine" has been sent to a Paris museum, you may expect Mussolini to express alarm over the fact that France has taken a stitch in time.

The statistician who said that the average American takes 18,908 steps a day must have found it beyond him to compute the number of jumps the average pedestrian takes.

The Last of Rowdyism

IT COMES as considerable of a shock to learn that bosses in certain lumber camps of the Pacific Northwest have taken to laying out golf courses among the stumps of the cut-over mountainsides where their gangs have been working.

The resulting picture is easy to imagine; the heavy-fisted bull of the woods, arrayed in golf knickers, checkered socks and a form-fitting sweater, waggles his golf club in a clearing that only recently rang to the sound of axes, and whacks the elusive ball over slopes where sweating lumberjacks toiled to bring ancient trees down to the matted sod.

It is all very surprising, and doubtless it is extremely significant, in one way or another. At all events, it would seem to indicate that the horny-handed roughnecks of tradition are growing tamed at an unprecedented rate.

A lumberjack on a golf course! Well, times do change. But there are places where this bit of information ought to be received with loud cries of unbelief.

Peddle it through the old, cut-over Michigan white pine country, some day, and see what response you get. Michigan knew the lumberjack in the day when he was a sign and a portent for the timid; the day when he worked like a Trojan all winter long, rode the logs down foaming rivers in the springtime at high peril to his unwashed neck, clung to one shirt throughout his life and wound up each annual drive with a two-fisted bender that jarred the whole lower peninsula of the state.

The Pacific Northwest knew him in the same incarnation. Washington and Oregon can remember when the woodsman's one great diversion was a semi-annual drunk that invariably ended in an epic fight—a fight in which steel-spiked shoes descended lustily on brawny bodies, a fight in which eye-gouging and hitch-kicking were accepted as perfectly proper methods of offense, a fight which as like as not would tear down a whole building and think nothing of it.

That is the lumber camp tradition. But now—golf courses! Something has changed, somewhere.

Rowdyism is more intimately interwoven with our past than we usually think. The lumberjack was only one among many; sailor, cowboy, miner, longshoreman, steel worker—all of these were hairy-chested, rough and tumble trades with no niceties or refinements.

But the old order does change, and the lumberjack is like the rest of us. We seem to have lost the frontier forever, somehow. If they can build golf courses adjacent to lumber camps, our riotous past has been eternally buried.

Compensation

RECITAL season, apparently, draws near its close—and what is it all about?

Business men who have found the "return to normalcy" quite a sufficient object for their sustained attention; doting mothers who have almost exhausted diplomacy in a determined effort to keep Junior practicing for the big event; teachers who have clung desperately to what reserves of patience and strategy remain after nine arduous months; and even the editorial staff of the local papers, are tempted, perhaps, to regard the completion of recitals as the passing of an epidemic.

That is, until they stop to take stock of what it really is all about. Contemplation of the organized activities of Wichita Falls' citizenry for even one week will reflect convincingly the valuable objectives of these multiple ultra-scholastic study classes. On Sunday, those who have pursued to a considerable extent the study and practice of singing made up of the nuclei of choirs in the majority of this city's 30-odd churches are possibly only because arduous, monotonous practice and churches aer possibly only because arduous, monotonous practice and endless recitals have prepared devoted talent and character for those functions. During the week service clubs and chambers of commerce and sundry other organizations within the community will expect local talent to provide musical entertainment. Which considerations do not include that immeasurable addition to the community's life represented by the provision of music in hundreds of homes.

All of which perhaps reconciles most of us to the possible ennui of recitals by the dozen as far more pleasant than the other alternative—no music at all, in time, save by mechanical reproduction.

Will You Be One?

THE report on automobile accidents for the past year is out at last, and its figures are extremely depressing. No fewer than 31,000 people were killed in this country by automobiles, and more than 1,000,000 more were injured. This represents an increase of 10 per cent over the preceding year.

The dreadful significance of those figures is hard to assimilate until you study them a bit. For example: during the next hour there will be three Americans killed by automobiles, and 115 more will be hurt—many of them, crippled for life.

Who will those doomed people be—those who are to die or be crippled within the next 60 minutes? Well, one of them may be yourself. Or it may be that your car will be the instrument that strikes one of them down.

Harry Thaw Barred by John Bull

PRIME MINISTER JAMES RAMSEY MacDONALD refused to permit Harry K. Thaw to effect a landing on British soil, so the distinguished son of Pennsylvania changed his program and headed for France where they take the money of tourists and no questions asked. Why pick on Thaw? There are hundreds of Americans who make a British landing every year who are just as dissolute and just as rotten in morals as the slayer of Stanford White.

May Rains Below Par For Frederick Section

Special to The Record News

FREDERICK, Okla., June 3.—Rainfall during May was 3.42 inches compared with an average of about 4.5 inches for May since the settlement of this county nearly 30 years ago. It is believed that fully 4.5 inches of rain fell in some sections of the county as some of the local showers which visited some portions did not reach Frederick.

Heaviest rainfall in this city was on May 10 when an inch was recorded; next heaviest was the 29th when .80 of an inch fell.

Hollywood Lamentation

I made a mental image of a man whom I admired.
Endowing it with qualities I 'specially desired;
With Sympathy, and Tolerance, and other virtues too,
The effigy was fine "Within" a "Sportsman" thru' and thru'
I mixed these thoughts into the clay, the Image did erect;
And last of all I painted it with most sincere respect.
And then, one day, the Image toppled over just a bit;
For I had mixed too much Imagination into it.
I've tried to reconstruct it, but despite all I may do,
Altho' it's been regilded, the cracked paint still shows thru'.
—Hollywood Ham.

Ah, There!

The current Vanity Fair offers a devastating picture page of well-known lads whom the magazine wishes were given a load of "Prairie" (air to you!). The page is amusingly titled: "We Nominate for Oblivion," and Richard Halliburton, the author-lecturer-sheik, is among the unfortunates. But what we started out to report was this yarn about Richard. The story is intended to show why Halliburton invariably gets a return date in the towns where he lectures for Ladies' Clubs.

The night he leaves town Halliburton sends the club secretary a bouquet of eleven American Beauty roses—with this card: "Thanks for making my stay so pleasant. There are only eleven American Beauties in this bouquet—eleven, because you are the twelfth!"

Heheheh.

From Washington, D. C., Richy Craig, Jr., telegraphs: "Sign on marquee opposite my theatre reads: 'Dumbells—Joe Frisco in person!' Haw!"

The New Version

It is only a matter of a week or two when the expression "Taken for a Ride" will probably be dumped by the local newspapers. The Broadway Banditti do not take them for "rides" so often. Not since one lad with a gun pressed against his neck drove right into a police booth at Columbus Circle.

And anyway they have discovered a better system—no danger of leaving fingerprints, etc. They merely hold their man down in a bed or chair while the actual killer presses his wrist or forearm on the victim's throat for a few seconds. Or long enough to choke him to death.

How've y'been?

The Ethel Barry-war

"I think," thinks Indignant Reader, "that you may well claim the title of 'Typical New Yorker' after the way you have shown your disrespect for some women. First you abused Ethel Barrymore, one of America's nicest ladies, and now you are picking on Florabel Muir, the newspaper girl, just because she is stupid enough to flatter you with imitation. You most likely would hit a child. I'll bet. Are you a woman-hater?"

Nope. But we will fight any woman our weight.

The Squelch Swelegant

One of the reasons for the recent Joseph Schildkraut-Elisse Bartlett divorce, they say, is that at a Hollywood party Schildkraut berated his wife before the guests. When the actor got through thundering, however, his wife turned to the assemblage and calmly quipped: "You see? Never a dull moment!"

You Never Can Tell

Several months ago Elinor Hunt was a terpsichorine in "Whoopee." Between numbers Elinor and the other chorines had to wait until Eddie Cantor and his principals were taken up in the elevator to their dressing rooms. Then the elevator took up Elinor and her mates.

Sam Goldwyn is now making a movie of that show. Eddie Cantor and several of his principals are in it. But they couldn't find the leading lady "type" for weeks, and you have one guess who finally got it. Yop! Elinor Hunt!

And is she giving them the headache? We're telling you, not asking you. Elinor makes them wait until she is ready, and they have to like it, too. Somfun, hey?

But all we keep thinking about is this. If the New York lad she adored had called her up the day she got the offer, and had said: "Darling, I'm sorry, I love you, I'll take you back." Elinor would have told Hollywood and the movies to go to youknowwhere.

Incidentally

Nozirr, you never can tell when the sour breaks turn sweet on Broadway. The night before Elinor got the big news she was carrying plenty of "torch" for her "heart," who "went" for another honey. And was she blooooooo?

And you never can tell about the boy or girl you snub, too. The late Walter J. Kingsley, one of the better press agents, used to put it this way: "It is dangerous to be indifferent to people. I have always treated the most insignificant newspaper reporter like a king, for you never can tell when one of them becomes the managing editor."

For Life, Too!

We asked Sam H. Harris, one of the more distinguished producers, why the managers couldn't handle the ticket broker sitch-ee-ay-shun themselves. "You can't control the box office men," said Mr. Harris. "They wouldn't swap their $50 weekly jobs with the house manager who gets $100 because they make a fortune by working with the speculators."

"Well, then," we said, "if this plan to make speculators take only seventy-five cents premium on tickets goes through, the box office guys will have to quit and drive trucks, eh?"

"No, they won't drive trucks," replied Mr. Harris, "they'll simply retire, and they can afford to."

Harold Seton, who conducts news columns about the elite for several publications, has over 9,000 photos of celebrities in his Sutton Place apartment. It is said Seton's collection of famous people, society and stage, is the greatest, and newspapers often seek his aid for information and photos. He makes a handsome living out of these pictures. He presented 350 originals of the "400" to the N. Y. Historical Society. He is the veteran writer in that field and shortly, will Newport it for the nineteenth Summer.

And this whole enterprise began in a most unpretentious manner, for he started the priceless collection with a small bundle of photos given away with Sweet Caporal cigarettes!

"SHEILA"

Love and Mystery
Humor and Tragedy
A Story of Wichita Falls
By GORDON TURNER

"Now, Edna, dear, what's tickling your toofies?"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Maizie Brown writes this story for practice in a story-writing correspondence school course, never intending it to be published. She is the confidential secretary of Frank Sheridan, wealthy young lawyer, whose hobby is the solving of crime mysteries. Sheridan is called in by Joseph Hedley, assistant prosecuting attorney, to find a burglar who robbed the safe at the home of William Oliver Wilmer. Hedley is engaged to marry Wilber's daughter, Sheila. Monte Cousin, Andrew Masters, is a frequent visitor at the Wilber home. A diary of Wilber's wife, now dead, has been stolen from the safe. The diary holds a secret of Sheila's birth. Sheridan inserts a $500 want ad in The Record News for the return of the diary. When Andrew Masters gives a wild party in his bachelor home, Homer Menton, a criminal lawyer, and Mercedes Riverton, his stenographer, are among the guests. Mercedes ties her stocking around the neck of a statuet, an act commented on by Ike Sellers, his valet. Andy takes Sheila's chum, Edna Rogers, to a dinner dance at the Kemp hotel. There they see Hedley dining with Pauline Murchison, Sheridan's married sister. They do not know the identity of Mrs. Murchison, and Edna thinks Hedley is unfaithful to Sheila. Menton and Mercedes also are Kemp dinner guests. Mercedes accosts Andy and jokingly recalls his conduct at the Kemp party. Edna, indignant, demands that Andy take her home.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER VII

Mary Rogers and her daughter, Edna, moved in entirely different circles. Mrs. Rogers, the tolerant of the effervescent modernism of the younger generation, did not try to adjust her mode of life to it. She lived in a quiet, almost secluded, existence, enjoying the companionship of a few friends of her own age and interests.

Yet, she was young in years and spirit—just past 40—and keenly interested in her daughter's friends and their sometimes turbulent, rather unconventional activities. She was a handsome woman with the kindly, reposeful face often spoken of as "motherly," a lovely countenance molded into benignity by triumph over sorrow and suffering.

Reared in poverty, she had married a brilliant, young business man who had amassed a comfortable fortune rapidly. His death, 10 years after Edna's birth, had brought mother and daughter closer in mutual affection. But as Edna grew into womanhood she more and more found her own friends and went her own way. However, they did not drift apart in spirit, and Mrs. Rogers always was in Edna's confidence.

On the afternoon following the episode at the Kemp, Edna and Mrs. Rogers were seated in the shade of the broad veranda of their fine, old Brook avenue home. Edna had given her mother a vivid account of the events of the preceding evening. Her denunciation of Hedley and Andy and Mercedes had been scorching.

"I think Sheila ought to be told, and as for Andy, I never want to see him again," she asserted defiantly.

"I think very likely you have misjudged Mr. Hedley," said her mother, "he is not the kind who conducts casual flirtations. There may be a very simple explanation. But, I cannot say I approve of Mr. Masters. What explanation did he make of his very evident close friendship with that unmannerly girl?"

"Explanation!" Edna exclaimed scornfully, "why, he scarcely uttered 10 words all the way home. He did mutter something about the girl being his lawyer's stenographer and that he had to be nice to her on that account. Explanations, oh, my Aunt Hannah's tomcat! You don't call that an explanation!"

Mrs. Rogers smiled and shook her head. "You children and your quarrels," she remarked indulgently. She leaned forward and peered around the corner of the house. "Someone is coming up the driveway," she announced.

As Edna sprang to her feet a trim little coupe slowed to a stop. Sheila Wilber lifted a hand from the wheel and waved a greeting. She ran up on the porch, kissed Edna and Mrs. Rogers warmly and dropped into a chair. Sheila was as much at home there as in her own house. Mrs. Rogers was very fond of this sunny-haired, sunny-tempered chum of her daughter.

"Listen, folks," said Sheila, "I've a grand scheme. Papa has arranged to show his invention to two electrical experts from some place in New York and he wants me to have them to dinner next Wednesday night. It would be a lovely evening for me, cooped up there with three stodgy men discussing electrons and ohms and light rays and what not—yes, it would not. So, I told papa we'd make a party of it. You Edna, and you, Mama Rogers and . . ."

"Oh, Sheila, leave me out of it," Mrs. Rogers interrupted "I hardly know your father; I've only casually met him."

"Suffering catnip," Sheila exclaimed, "Dad won't bite. He's as shy as a girl in her first one-piece bathing suit and he's a regular stick-in-the-mud socially until he gets well acquainted. You two would get along fine together after the ice was broken. So that's settled. We'll have Mr. Sheridan—I want you to meet him Edna; he's a prince—and I've already phoned to Joe and Andy."

"What!" exploded Edna.

Mrs. Rogers arose hurriedly and beat a hasty retreat. "I'll leave you two girls to yourselves," she said as she slipped through the door. Sheila turned her big, blue eyes on her friend and inquired:

"Now, Edna dear, what's tickling your toofies? Your fur's all ruffled up like a Halloween cat."

"You can leave Andy out," Edna replied stiffly, "I'm through with him."

"What's that precious baby been up to now?"

Edna recounted the Mercedes-Menton episode with a tempestuous description of the offending Mercy, and added:

"And you'd feel the same way about your sweetly virtuous Joe Hedley if you knew what I know." Sheila looked her amazement.

"There he was," Edna went on rapidly, "sitting in the Kemp dining room, right out in public, making moon-eyes at the vampishest, red-headed, dolled-up siren you ever saw. They were as gooey as a cream puff. You could've exploded a bomb under their table and they wouldn't have known it. They never even saw Andy and me."

Sheila went into paroxysms of laughter, almost rolling out of her chair. "Oh, this is delicious!" she finally gasped, "and you were being jealous for me by proxy!"

It was Edna's turn to register amazement. "What's the great, big joke?" she demanded.

"Oh, Edna, dear," Sheila gurgled "I know all about it, and the best part of it all is that poor, blundering, old Joe thinks he has put something over on me. Maizie Brown put me wise. You know Maizie? No? Well, neither do I, except over the telephone. She's Frank Sheridan's secretary and that girl must know everything. The girl Joe was with is Frank Sheridan's married sister.

"Frank had to go out of town and he got Joe to meet his sister at the train. It seems Maizie Brown had made the hotel reservations, and she went back to the Kemp last night to see that everything was all right. She walked into the lobby right behind Joe and this

OFFICERS QUIZ OKLA. SUSPECT

Man Held Here Denies Part In Robbery

County officials Tuesday night were continuing investigations seeking to determine the connection of a man arrested here early Tuesday by members of the sheriff's department with several crimes of recent date in Texas and Oklahoma, particularly to determine whether he has any knowledge of a series of holdups in Oklahoma City which culminated last March 22 in the slaying of a policeman, according to information given by Warren Belcher, deputy sheriff.

Officers said Tuesday night they had been notified the man was under bond from New Braunfels, Texas in connection with a bank robbery there and also under bond from San Marcos, Texas, on a like charge. He is also under bond from Sapulpa, Okla., in connection with a charge of automobile theft, it was said.

Oklahoma City officers had requested officers here to keep watch for the man a few days after the slaying of J. G. Gates, policeman. Whether the man was still wanted in Oklahoma City remained to be determined Tuesday night, Mr. Belcher said. He was arrested at a rent car establishment here by Sheriff W. G. Bralley and Warren Belcher and Charlie Gant, deputies, who concealed themselves at the place after learning he had rented a car. The man was said to have admitted his identity but to have disclaimed knowledge of the Oklahoma City charges. He said he had recently been released from Leavenworth penitentiary in Kansas after conviction on a charge growing out of the $2,000,000 mail train robbery near Chicago in June, 1924. One of his brothers is still in the penitentiary and another is at liberty, officers here said.

Bullington to Decline Honor

nounced for the agriculture commissionership.

The name of a sixth Republican candidate, Orville Bullington of Wichita Falls, was filed today but Bullington promptly replied that while he appreciated the honor, he would not run.

The 15 "official" Democratic candidates for governor follow: Dan Moody, Austin; Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Austin; Earle B. Mayfield, Austin; Thomas B. Love, Dallas; Barry Miller, Dallas; Jim Young, Kaufman; Clint Small, Wellington; Ross Sterling, Houston; Pink L. Parrish, Lubbock; Lynch Davidson, Houston; Paul Loven, New Braunfels; T. N. Mauritz, Ganado; C. C. Moody, Fort Worth; Dr. C. E. Walker, Grapevine, and Grank Putnam of Houston.

BULLINGTON TO ATTEND G. O. P. MEET

Announcement that he would not allow his name to be placed on the Republican ballot as a candidate for the office of governor was made Tuesday by Orville Bullington, Wichita Falls attorney and vice chairman of the Republican state executive committee.

Mr. Bullington's name was filed as a candidate with the state committee Tuesday by a group of his friends, although he had previously told a group which called upon him to urge that he become a candidate that he would not make the race. A dispatch received here stating his name had been filed with the committee was the first intimation he had received that his name would be entered, he said.

Stating he was not familiar with the required procedure for withdrawing his name from the ballot, Mr. Bullington said he did not yet know what action he would take in removing his name, except that he "simply would not make the race." He said Tuesday night he probably would attend the state Republican executive committee meeting in Houston Monday and would take definite steps to have his name withdrawn at that time, if such action has not been taken before that time.

"There are many reasons why I would not be a candidate," he said Tuesday. "For one thing, I have no political ambitions and for another, I haven't the time. I deeply appreciate the honor shown by those who filed my name, but I positively will not consider making the race."

Oklahoma Mechanic Claims He Is Missing Pilot of Long Lost Plane

Prolonged Search for Maurice Graham May End in Elk City Where 'Flier' Dodges Publicity

ELK CITY, Okla., June 3. (UP)—A man claiming to be Maurice Graham, Western Air Express pilot and world war aviator, listed as missing since his flight from Las Vegas, Nev., to Salt Lake City, last January, was found working here today as a garage mechanic.

Months after Graham flew into a snowstorm and became lost on western air trails, this man revealed himself as the flier. He has assumed the role of mechanic here because he is "through with flying" and is tired "of too much publicity."

The man claimed he leaped from his mail plane when it entered a snowstorm near the Ute Indian reservation near St. George, Utah, Jan. 9. He walked 60 miles to the reservation in the snowstorm, he said, in five days. He spent two months there, he said, and then an Indian agent drove him 45 miles to a camp. In addition, he claimed a "relief plane" took him and his mail to Las Vegas and then he went to Los Angeles and reported to the Western Air Express company.

It was pointed out during all the time cited, a wide search was in progress for Graham; that the Western Air Express spent many thousands of dollars looking for him; that the claimant did not visit Graham's wife and children at Los Angeles and that none of the air mail apparently was delivered.

WIFE CLINGS TO HOPE

LOS ANGELES, June 3. (UP)—Mrs. Maury Graham, wife of the prominent Western Air Express flier who flew into a Nevada snowstorm on his mail run last January, tonight was informed by the United Press a man claiming to be Graham was reported working as a mechanic in Elk City, Okla.

Mrs. Graham said she had received no communications from her husband since he disappeared.

Junior C.-C. to Provide Display Of Art Work at Industrial Mart

The new department, it was said, was created to stimulate interest in the production of fine arts by encouraging local artists in their various modes of expression. Its aim will be to aid the artists in disposing of their works through the providing of suitable wall space and lighting effects, such as may be found in the industrial mart building. Only original and recent works will be acceptable and each exhibit will be subject to loan and sale. It was said. The department will be a changing exhibit, with time limits set so as to allow for the display of all works presented. It is the plan to send out notification cards at the expiration of the exhibit time. The department will be open to all desiring to place their works on display and no charge will be made.

DEATH STALKS RICH DIVORCEE

Assassin Fires Twice Into Woman's Bedroom

CHICAGO, June 3. (AP)—An attempt was made early today upon the life of Mrs. Lottie Brenner Dechow, the wealthy and elderly woman who recently divorced the young, self-styled "Count Von Bjelow."

The assassin fired two shots through her bedroom window. The bullets pierced the coverlet of her bed.

The bedroom is on the second floor of Mrs. Dechow's costly residence at 5928 Sheridan road. The assassin climbed to the roof of a garage abutting the house, placed a gun against the bedroom window and fired twice.

Mrs. Dechow, 55 years old and possessor of a fortune left her by the late Alderman Nate Brenner, had arisen five minutes earlier to go to the chamber of her sister, Mrs. May Gross, whose husband was buried yesterday. It was while in her sister's room that she heard the shots and hurried back to her own.

The bullets had drilled the screen and window just below the point the shade reached. Police later found a .38 caliber bullet embedded in the floor. The other bullet was believed to have buried itself in the mattress. Detectives said that from the position of the bullet holes Mrs. Dechow would have been wounded in the side had she been in bed.

Seeking a motive, officers asked Mrs. Dechow if she had been unusually active in seeking to trace robbers who, in the guise of census enumerators, invaded her home March 31, taking valuable jewelry. She said she had not. They also inquired concerning her feelings toward her divorced husband. She said that although she recently had sought his arrest on a charge of false swearing in the procurance of their marriage license, she and Dechow were now on friendly terms.

The statement also involved a federal prohibition agent as one of several men participating in the trumped up charge against Edwards. The charge was filed by prohibition officers about a week before Edwards was "taken for a ride" on the night of May 18.

Wharton was held incommunicado at a police substation by orders of the district attorney. He was held in default of $10,000 bond on a charge of violating the liquor laws.

WALES FILLS KING'S PLACE

George V Unable to Review Horse Guards Parade

LONDON, June 3. (INS)—With King George absent for the second year in succession, the colorful ceremony of the trooping of the color was held on the horse guards' parade today in honor of his majesty's 65th birthday. An attack of rheumatism prevented the king from attending this year, while in 1929 he was still convalescing from the grave illness which nearly cost him his life.

The Prince of Wales deputized for his father. Thousands of people, including many American and foreign visitors, packed the parade to witness the spectacle.

The prince was accompanied by his brothers, the Duke of York and the Duke of Gloucester. From a balcony overlooking the parade Queen Mary, her daughter, Princess Mary, Prince George, the Duke of Connaught and Princess Elizabeth, 4-year-old daughter of the Duchess of York, watched the ceremony.

In the uniform of a colonel of the guards, the prince led a brilliant procession of high army officers, state officials and the military attaches of foreign powers onto the parade ground to the accompaniment of a salute from the guns in the royal parks.

Against the perfect background of the horse guards' building once an ancient palace, the foot guards stood in double lines in two blocks, dressed in their traditional black bearskin hats, vivid red tunics and white accoutrements. The massed bands stood to their right, and against the tiny garden of 10 Downing street, historic home of Britain's prime ministers, were drawn up the two troops of cavalry, in steel breastplates and helmets, with red and white plumes.

Parents and Guardian Battle For Custody of Boy Musical Genius

NEW YORK, June 3. (UP)—A nine-year-old boy, small for his age, whose genius with the violin has drawn enthusiastic praise of critics and earned him $3,800 for two engagements, was the center of a contest in supreme court today between his father and guardian for his custody.

Ruggiero Ricci appeared not particularly interested in the outcome, although he sided with his guardian, Miss Beth Lackey. Yesterday, when his father greeted him, he said icily:

"You know you signed the paper and I can prove it. I was there in the house in California. I saw you."

But the rest of the time he sat, neatly dressed in a blue and white sailor suit, pink socks, and patent leather shoes with his brother, Giorgio, 8, also something of a musical prodigy and also being sought by his father, who signed papers in 1927 making Miss Lackey guardian. Ruggiero read from "The Book of Knowledge" and "Paganini's Genoa," while the attorneys argued, and giggled when he heard himself called "the greatest living violinist of the age."

The elder Ricci, a music teacher, noticed in 1927 that Ruggiero showed marked talent with the violin.

He took the child to Louis Persinger, who taught Yehudi Menuhin, another child prodigy. Persinger turned him over to Miss Lackey.

Aided by funds from Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bartlett of Bartlesville, Okla., Miss Lackey undertook the boy's training, and obtained guardianship of both youngsters. She also applied in New York recently for a general guardianship.

Miss Lackey's attorney contended it was only when Ruggiero showed unusual earning ability that the father attempted to get the youngsters back. He said Miss Lackey had not touched the $3,800 Ruggiero got for playing with the New York Symphony orchestra and at the Ann Arbor Beethoven festival.

Ricci's attorney, however, said Miss Lackey was exploiting the boys by signing them up for 10 appearances this year, and that the father did not understand the meaning of the papers he signed, thinking they were merely to provide for the boys' care in case of his death. It also was brought out that the Bartletts have discontinued their support believing the boys to be exploited.

It is More Economical to Make Full Use of Electric Service

Electricity is no longer a luxury and electric appliances are no longer considered something to display, but never to use. The modern housewife has found that the electric way of doing things is the cheaper way. For a few cents she saves her time, her strength and her health. She knows that there is no excuse for a woman doing hard work that a small electric motor can do for a fraction of a cent an hour.

The Texas Electric Service Company gladly will prove to any customer why it is more economical to make full use of electric service. A nickel or two is pitifully small when it prevents eyestrain and headaches caused by reading in a poor light. A few pennies to operate an electric fan during warm evenings, to clean the rugs in the morning, to wash the clothes once a week are insignificant compared with the comfort they give and the amount of labor they save.

So it is with all electric appliances. Household electric appliances have been designed for specific needs and have demonstrated their value over a period of years. Their very usefulness has caused them to increase in popularity. The idea that such appliances are luxuries has long been thrown into discard.

Electric merchandise sold through the Texas Electric Service Company must give customers the greatest degree of service and dependability at the lowest possible cost. Only merchandise of high standards which has met exhaustive tests of our own engineers is placed in salesrooms of the company.

Health and Diet Advice

Acid Fruits do not Cause Acidosis

The belief of many people that acid fruits cause acidosis is readily disproven by testing the blood of patients who are on an exclusive acid fruit diet. Patients using nothing but orange juice will show an increased alkalinity of blood as long as they remain on the orange juice and, in fact, the more orange juice they use at one time the more the alkalinity seems to increase.

Countless experiments have convinced me that there is not the slightest excuse for believing that acid fruits have any effect, whatever, in creating acidosis. The fruit acids, such as citric acid, malic acid and tartaric acid are quite different in chemical composition from the acids in the body which produce acidosis.

The fruit acids may be considered natural acids and they are combined with alkaline forming elements. When these acids are digested they are oxidized and nothing remains but carbon dioxide and water. This releases the mineral elements which were combined with the acids, and produces a greater alkaline and whenever this protective alkalinity becomes lessened the body becomes very susceptible to a variety of diseases. The body is never really acid until after death, but bad eating habits will reduce the normal alkalinity. I have never found a superior method for increasing the alkalinity of the blood than to use an exclusive citrus fruit acid for a time. When no other food is used, the elimination of toxic acids and material proceeds with great rapidity and, at the same time, alkaline substances are added so that the blood regains its normal alkaline balance.

If the rash appears on the skin when using citrus fruits, it is because of the poisons coming out through the skin in such large quantities that temporarily some of the pores are blocked, and rash and irritation result. This will disappear in a short time and even such skin diseases as eczema and psoriasis will quickly vanish. If the fruit diet is persisted in and nothing is given to retard the skin elimination by the use of ointments which repress the poisons in the body, I do not know of any food which has such a definite, beneficial result on the body as the citrus fruits, and in no case can it be said that they produce acidosis.

The safe rule is to always use the fruits by themselves, and if you do this there is no disease where acid fruits are contra-indicated. The alkalinity of the blood will always increase; the hemoglobin or color of the blood will increase day by day toward normal. Thousands of laboratory experiments have confirmed this opinion. Remember, orange juice every day chases acidosis away.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Birthmarks

Question—Mrs. J. Writes: "Please state your opinion on the so-called markings of a child during pregnancy, and if it is true how I can then prevent it, and can it be prevented by dieting?"

Answer: The marking of children during pregnancy by a mother's fear is not considered scientifically possible. There are a certain per cent of birthmarks on children and if these happen to resemble any particular objects in shape the mother tries to remember something of which she was afraid during the period she was carrying the child. But mothers are no doubt frightened many times without the child having any marks, though if the child is marked she, of course, recalls these instances.

Health Articles for Distribution

Question—K. W. writes: "Kindly send me your pamphlet on diabetes, also the orange juice diet for cleansing the system. Will you please send me a full list of the pamphlets you have printed for distribution?"

Answer: I have sent you many articles on diabetes, also the fasting regime, as you request. I have prepared articles on most of the common disorders and the important diet problems. If you wish information on any of these subjects, you may write and ask for the material on the disease or diet problem in which you are interested. Please be sure to send a two-cent stamp for each article desired, and enclose a large self-addressed envelope. I cannot give you a complete list in this column, and I have several thousand different articles printed.

Tuberculosis and Smoking

Question—H. B. writes: "A man 48, who has had tuberculosis, and who is making a nice recovery, has been told by his doctor that four or five cigarets a day are not harmful. I would like your opinion about it."

Answer: Although I do not advise smoking for one who has had tuberculosis, it is possible that four or five cigarets a day would not be harmful if not inhaled.

Beauty Lies In Bones, Says Flagg

ST. LOUIS, June 3. (INS)—True beauty in women lies in the bone structure, James Montgomery Flagg, well known American artist declared in an interview here today. Flagg is in St. Louis to address the St. Louis Advertising club at its annual art day luncheon.

Catherine Dale Owen and Greta Garbo, who Flagg declared have the bone structure requisite for true beauty, are the two most beautiful women of the screen in his estimation.

"Beauty in women lies in the bone structure," Flagg declared. "Of course she in addition must have pretty eyes and hair and complexion but first of all she must have a symmetrical and beautiful skull. The shadows around her face form beautiful images. It is the camera proof face talked about on the movie lots—the kind that can be photographed from any angle. This bone structure is the reason why some women stay beautiful for years."

Court Reprimands Mrs. Bell Austin

SHREVEPORT, La., June 3. (AP)—Judge Ben C. Dawkins in the federal court here reprimanded Mrs. Bell Austin, mother of Gene Austin, the singer, for the manner in which she talked back to attorneys who were cross-examining her while on the stand in her $25,000 damage suit against the Pardee company.

Mrs. Austin showed resentment when Aubrey M. Pyburn, attorney for the Pardee company, asked if she was a fortune teller. The judge warned Mrs. Austin against the way she was talking and told her if she persisted he would fine her for contempt.

In reply to the attorney, Mrs. Austin said she did fortune telling only in fun, that she was not a real fortune teller and did not claim to be.

Iowa Park Agricultural Station Reports Progress of Experiments

Special to The Record News

IOWA PARK, Texas, June 3.—Earl I. Wilson, superintendent of Texas experiment substation No. 16, makes the following report of agricultural conditions for the month of May, 1930:

Weather conditions improved over the April drouth, with rain commencing the last of April and continuing until a total of 3.68 inches was recorded for May. This fell in 15 different days, until May 23; and before the end of the month more of the May rains were effective, having fallen gently, as a rule, the supply was far below that of May, 1929, with 7.30 inches in 12 different days.

Planting Retarded

Temperature conditions were slightly above normal with 71.4 degrees for the current month, and 69.69 for May, 1929, and plus .5 from the normal. The highest point reached was 90 degrees, lacking six degrees of the highest for May, 1929. The greatest daily range of temperature was but 32 degrees, as compared to 42 one day in May, 1929. The evaporation gauge showed a total of 6.374 inches for the current May, as compared to 5.585 for the same period last year. The wind movement was 5684 and 5209 miles for the respective periods.

Too much moisture prevailed the greater part of the month for satisfactory planting conditions outside. Fields became weedy and much of the cotton and row crops were retarded or planted later than desirable on the farm, and in the region as a whole. Cool weather the latter part of the month, combined with drying conditions, were as a whole unfavorable for cotton and other crops. The rainfall and temperature conditions improved the outlook for small grains greatly, but were too late where irrigation was not available.

Clover Resists Rot

In the root rot tests for resistance, sweet clover made luxuriant growth, yellow blossom varieties blooming earliest, and white blossom strains, generally later, producing heavier growth. Indications are that most field and garden peas matured before root rot adversity commenced; but yields of fruit and forage were disappointing. Winter and spring vetches were poor in tests this spring. Field and green beans are blooming, but have shown no very promising growth thus far; nor has root rot infected them, thus far. Spare spots occurred in the root rot alfalfa plats fully 30 days ago, and root rot is infecting several varieties seriously now.

The corn variety test is making good headway in growth, but some varieties are to a poor stand. Sugar beet varieties have made a splendid growth without damage from any source, and are ready to thin, while stock beets planted and managed the same way have made a poor germination and growth. Field cotton is up to a full stand and making a good growth, while test cottons are up to part stands, only, since planting was delayed on account of wet soils. Test rows of barley and wheat of the several hundred planted, have shown fair growth and most of them are maturing while others have damaged from the winter and chinch bugs.

New Tests Planned

Nearly 5,000 asparagus roots were planted in April and these have made a creditable growth and almost complete stand. Testing them out under varying amounts of water and different fertilizers will commence soon.

Plums and peaches commenced ripening somewhat earlier than last year. Mayflower peaches ripened by May 20, and another strain by May 30. Happiness plums commenced ripening May 23, but their quality is poorer this year on account of curculio stings. A few other varieties have ripened also but the loss of plums from wind has been bad.

HILLIN TAMES SHIPPERS IN PINCHES TO WIN OPENER, 10-5

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

The Fort Worth Panthers so far have made a successful bolt out of the cellar to say the least. Their descent down the ladder created quite a surprise at the first of the season, and when they started up it was the opinion of our best minds that they would continue to march ownward and upward. As the Cat machine clicked more consistently and turned out better baseball, critics of the game as she is played in the Texas league predicted it might, after all, turn out to be the favored crew of the bunch. But its lamentable showing here in the four-game series indicated that if it is going to get a strong footing in the first division, it must make vast improvements, notably in its pitching department.

The outcome of that series also caused a number of Spudder fans to heave a great sigh of relief. Fort Worth was up and coming, so wasn't there a chance the Panthers might stop the Spudders' winning ways? This fear was quite widespread. There was as much apprehension at the opening of the series last Saturday as there was when the Spudders opened at Houston on the late road trip. But three victories out of four starts over the newly threatened felines has brought comfort and cheer into our ranks. The end of the series here found the Cats straddling the fence at the .500 mark, poised either to continue its upward flight or waddle back downward.

Dispatches late last night brought the news that two more Steers, poor things, were cast out of the corral. This time it was Ed Brown, the slugging outfielder-first baseman, who up until a week ago last Saturday had hit in 34 consecutive games, and Paul Wachtel, spit ball artist. They were given outright releases. The other day Winsett and Blackerby were sent to other clubs. Ere this gets to press the remainder of the team might be fired, but we are going to press anyhow. In fact, to keep up with the rapid fire changes going on down to the south of us would require a special leased wire, or so it appears.

The Steers might have made a bad mistake in handing Brown the pink slip. Brown seemed to be the one consistent and timely hitter the club possessed. Certainly it was Brown who did most of Dallas' banging in the recent series here.

At any rate, it does not appear that the Steers are going to have anything in the way of a ball club with so many alterations of the lineup on the spur of the moment. Here the season is about one-third over, and the Steers might just as well be in the spring training period. All the time required for players to learn each others' methods and get the proper coordination has been wasted in the switching of players. If Bob Tarleton, the business manager, finally does get the men he wants, nothing may be expected of the club for at least a couple of weeks or a month. That long is required by any club to develop teamwork. So far it doesn't look like Bob is getting what he wants, and it probably will be the middle of the season before the Steers are really out of their training period.

It is fairly easy to understand how even the best of class A ball players would be dismal flops with the Steers under the conditions now existing in the club. Every player is quaking in his boots, fearing he will be the next man to go. Every one of them is afraid to turn his plate up at the breakfast table for fear of finding a pink slip underneath. That is no atmosphere in which to produce winning ball clubs.

The lowly San Antonio Indians, for instance, have a far worse ball club, in the opinion of many, than the Steers. And yet the downtrodden San Antonio crew has pulled itself out of the cellar to make room for the agitated Steers. They even won a game against Houston, something which the Atzmen, with the turmoil now raging in their ranks, probably could not come in a mile of doing. The Indians are simply making the best of what they have. The Steers probably could learn a lesson from the Indians.

The Dallas club, officials, of course, are being harassed just as much as the players. They are working in a town that demands last, maybe with this player gone winning ball teams or none at all. In their desperation, the club officials are throwing pink slips right and left, making the fans say, "At least with this player gone we'll get better games." But so far they seem to be getting worse. It seems about time for the Steer owners to change tactics.

Blue Stars as Electrics Beat Furniture Dealers

Big Everett Blue pitched and batted the Texas Electric Service Company team of the Merchants league to a 3 to 0 victory over the Furniture Dealers Tuesday afternoon on Wilson field. It was a close and hard fought battle between Blue and Ridling all the way. Blue gave up but three singles while his triple and single in two times up drove in two of his team's three runs. Ridling held the slight advantage in strike outs with 7 in the four innings which he hurled.

Blue was threatened in the last two innings but he pulled out of tight holes with ease. In the fourth he fanned the hard hitting Horsley and made Robertson pop up with a runner on third. The Furniture men got runners on second and third with none out in the fifth, but Anderson popped to short, Garrison whiffed and Lyle popped to Coolidge to end the game.

INVADERS GET FOUR IN FIRST

Teams Meet Today in Double Bill

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Fred Vincent opened Tuesday's game with the Beaumont Exporters like theater managers, in the old days, opened their shows, i. e., by dishing out passes right and left. The result was an inauspicious start that allowed the enemy to amass four runs before the customers had as much as adjusted their feather cushions. A change in policy was quickly ordered by Skipper Williams and Ash Hillin went in to officiate as door-keeper, to continue the theater parallel. Ash was stingier with his passes and behind the new management the Spudders tied the score in the third at 5-all, and then pounded away in the seventh and eighth to win the decision in the first game of the series of four. The final score was 10 to 5.

It was a great day for the Spudders, for while they were plugging in another notch in the win column the Houston Buffaloes bit the dust in the face of Jakie Atz' continually changing lineup of Dallas Steers. These two events gave the Spudders a clean three and a half game lead in the league race.

Double-Header Today

The teams play a double-header today starting at 2:30 p. m.

The youthful and hard-working Exporters were under the eyes of their prexy, R. L. Stuart, Tuesday afternoon, and went to work with a will from the very start. Vincent walked Stapleton and Mullen but finally managed to strike out Eckhardt. Shiver made up for his mate's failing by blasting a double to center which scored Stapleton and sent Mullen to third. Easterling knocked one into left field, scoring Mullen and Shiver, and when Kloza booted it, continued to second. Holley flied out to Fitzgerald. Vincent gave a pass to Schuble, and was relieved by Hillin. Baker singled over first, scoring Easterling. Green grounded out, Hillin to Burns, and the long first half of the first was over.

The Spudders got two runs in their half of the inning. Levey led off with a single past short and scampered to third when Storti singled to right and took second on the throw in. Fitzgerald fouled out to Holley, who made a good run from second to across the first base line. Kloza sacrificed to center and Levey scampered home. Burns singled to right, scoring Storti. Bettencourt forced Burns at second, Holley unassisted.

Easterling Hits Homer

The second went scoreless for both sides. In the Exporter half of the third, Easterling opened up with a long drive over the left field boards for a home run, the only tally the invaders managed off Rough Arm Hillin. The Spudders, however, took the cue, and when they came to bat in their half of the third, Storti opened it up with a homer in the same direction. Fitzgerald, next up, strolled, Kloza singled to center and Fitzgerald took second. Burns hit into a double play, Holley to Stapleton. Bettencourt grounded past first for a base hit, scoring the fleet of foot Bradbury doubled to left, and Bettencourt dashed all the way home from first. The run tied the score, Euller grounded out, pitcher to first, closing the period.

Things rocked along then until the seventh, when the Spudders started cinching the game. Levey grounded out, third to first. Storti walked. Fitzgerald singled past first and Storti went to third. Kloza doubled to left, scoring Storti and Fitzgerald took third. Burns hit to second and Fitzgerald was safe at the plate when Wise dropped Holley's throw. Kloza took third on the play. Bettencourt struck out Euller singled past second, scoring Kloza. Hillin forced Euller, Holley unassisted, ending the period.

In the eighth, Levey walked, went to second on Storti's sacrifice bunt, took third on a passed ball, and scored on Fitzgerald's single to right. Kloza singled down the third base line, sending Fitzgerald to second. Burns doubled to left, scoring Fitzgerald and advancing Kloza to third. Bettencourt cut loose with an infield hit to short, who threw home where the catcher tagged Kloza out. Bradbury popped out to short to close the inning.

Hillin held them scoreless in the ninth, and the game was over.

Hillin Holds 'Em

Hillin showed his usual calmness and mastery of the pinches throughout the battle. One especially tough spot which Ash dry cleaned as if it were an every day job was in the sixth inning, when with Stapleton, Mullen and Eckhardt on the paths, he retired the next three men in order, striking out Shiver, allowing Easterling, the big swatter, to pop out to Bradbury, and striking out Holley.

Del Baker, manager of the Exporters, was forced from the game in the third inning by an injury to the left knee sustained in the first inning when a ball fouled off Kloza's bat.

Mrs. R. R. Fisk, the only other Wichitan in the match, defeated Mrs. G. A. Henshaw of Oklahoma City, four and two.

Youngsters were the synosure of all eyes in the first day of match play.

In this constellation were: Miss Mary Elizabeth Ford, 16, Kansas City; Miss Virginia Pepp, St. Louis City champion, and Miss Ann Webster, Leavenworth, Kan.

The Kansas City lassie, who spurned high school graduation exercises to attend the tournament, was two down with three to play and reeled off some championship golf to beat Miss Phyllis Buchanan of Denver, one up on the 18th green. Miss Ford scored a 5-4-6, to get into the second round.

Miss Pepp had a ding-dong match with Mrs. F. E. Pharr of Texarkana, Texas, winning one up on the home green. The St. Louis titleholder took her one-hole advantage at the 14th, where she scored a four to the Texan's five and they halved the next four holes.

Miss Webster had no trouble in eliminating Mrs. C. O. Collins, of Fort Worth, 4 and 2.

In the tournament's first upset Mrs. Beyer, medalist in the recent Oklahoma state meet, won from Miss Ann Kennedy, of Tulsa, 3 and 2.

A group of seasoned players had a big day. Heading this parade, were Mrs. Dorothy Klotz Pardue of Sioux City, Iowa, and Mrs. Hulbert S. Clarks, of Oklahoma City, and a former Oklahoma champion. These two stars were one-two, with Mrs. Pardue in the lead of the medalist race yesterday.

BRITONS AWAIT ENGLISH DERBY

Famous Classic to Be Run Today

EPSOM DOWNS, England, June 3. (AP)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald has been telling British editors gathered here all about the future of the British empire but what the Britons, high and low, would like to know tonight is what speedy colt will win the 1930 Derby to be run at 3 p. m. (9 a. m. E. S. T.) over the famous horseshoe shaped course atop Epsom Downs.

Britain's annual attack of Derby fever is at its height. The nineteen Derby entries, are at Epsom tonight, petted and provided for as babies rarely are. Diolite, the firm favorite at the short odds of 5 to 2, slumbers in his luxurious box with the Scout II from America not far away. The William Woodward colt and Ballyferris from Ireland are the only foreigners in the running.

The Bank of England and the Derby runners are about the only institutions in this country protected by guards with guns.

Everybody seems to be asking for a Derby tip, giving one or trying to find out whether they've drawn a horse in one of the big sweepstakes, which according to popular legends, make rich men out of chimney sweeps. Newspapers are full of Derby dope. Theaters will broadcast the race as a part of their matinee programs while passengers on trains to Scotland and in air liners over the channel will listen in on the classic.

GROVER CLEVELAND ALEXANDER HANDED OUTRIGHT RELEASE

MAJORS LOSE NOTED HURLER

Last of Triumvirate Bows to Advancing Years

PHILADELPHIA, June 3. (UP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander, last of the mighty pitching triumvirate of Mathewson, Johnson and Alexander, is missing today from the major league roster for the first time since he came out of Nebraska 20 years ago a gangling youngster with blinding speed.

His major league career ended where it started—in the bandbox ball park of the Philadelphia National league club. William F. Baker, president of the Phillies, announced today that Alexander had been made a free agent and that all National league clubs had waived on him.

Great Personality Lost

The passing of the 43-year-old Alexander takes out of the major leagues a man who compiled a record that surpassed that of Christy Mathewson for number of games won. It also removes a personality that had no parallel in baseball's history.

Experts generally concede that there have been three great pitchers of modern times—Walter Johnson, specialist in speed; Christy Mathewson of the famous "fadeaway" and Alexander, who combined speed, change of pace and infinite cunning. Johnson's pitching days are over and he now is manager of the Washington Senators; Mathewson is dead, and today Alexander takes the back trail that waits for all ball players when their steely arms turn to lead.

It is typical of Alexander that he should refuse to believe he is through. After Baker's announcement today, the pitcher, in the drawl that is as famous as his curve, declared he still had winning ball in his arm. He is anxious to pitch on the Pacific coast and it is understood that Baker is willing to help him obtain a job. He will remain on the Phillies pay roll until he finds work.

It was known that the only phase of baseball which Alexander did not enjoy was keeping training.

Star of Phillies

He saw service on many fields. From 1911 to 1917 he was the bright star of the Philadelphia Nationals in the day when the club boasted such players as Cravath, Luderus and Killefer. In 1918 the famous battery of Alexander and Killefer was sold to the Cihcago Cubs for something more than $50,000, a tremendous price in those days.

In the spring of 1926 the Cubs under the new management of Joe McCarthy were convinced Alexander would not keep training and asked waivers on him. He was written out of the major league by many critics but St. Louis obtained him and that summer he pitched them into the world series. Twice during the world series he was called upon to start against the heaviest hitting team in baseball—the New York Yankees. Twice he beat them, allowing only four hits in the first game and eight in the next. In the seventh game with the winning run on base for the Yankees, Alexander was called to relieve Haines. He struck out Lazeri, and St. Louis won.

Numerous suspensions for failure to keep training dot his career and it is believed that this laxity was instrumental in the trade last year by which Alexander went back to the Phillies. This spring time took its toll from him and he failed to win for Baker.

Pitched 600 Games

He closes 20 years of major league service, during which he pitched almost 600 games. And it is no secret that for the last five of those years the strength had been missing from his arm and that "Old Pete" was out there pitching them up and still fooling the batters with nothing but his head and his heart.

Major League Races See Many Teams Rise Only to Tumble Again

NEW YORK, June 3. (UP)—An unusual feature of the two major league pennant races this season is the many leading teams which have slumped and tumbled from the top.

Out of the eight teams in both leagues which have been out in front at one time or another, only Brooklyn has eluded a prolonged losing streak since the Robins fluttered into the National league pennant race with 20 victories out of 28 games played in May. Brooklyn, however, lost seven of its first nine games.

An outstanding example of leaders which have found the pace too swift for them is furnished by the St. Louis Cardinals. After winning 17 out of 18 games, including two long winning streaks of nine and eight games, respectively, the Cardinals had the skids put under them May 27 by Pittsburgh and have lost seven games in a row. The shift of leaders in the National league race has in turn elevated the New York Giants, Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago Cubs, Brooklyn Robins and St. Louis Cardinals to the top.

The Giants were the first of the leaders to experience a slump. They won their first seven games of the season and then dropped four straight. They got the lead back May 1, lost it to the Pirates the next day, went ahead once more May 5, and then dropped it again May 9 to the Cubs.

The Giants went ahead again May 10 but then they went into eclipse and have lost 15 out of their last 22 games, dropping all the way to sixth place.

The Cubs ran up a string of eight straight victories to take the lead May 9, but lost it the next day and tossed away eight out of their next 10 games.

Pittsburgh went into first place for the second time May 2 and then went into a slump which saw the Pirates lose eight out of their next 10 games and descend into second division.

In the American league the Philadelphia Athletics got away to an early lead, but lost it to Washington April 25. Cleveland took the lead from the Senators May 4, but after four days in first place the Indians couldn't stand the pace and dropped eight out of 11 games.

The Athletics got the lead back May 8, and held it for eight days, but the world champions were seized by a slump and lost seven out of 11 games and Washington once more took over the leadership.

After 15 days on top, the Washington club hit a snag May 28 when the Senators were enjoying a four-game lead and they have dropped five games in a row and descended to second place, one game behind the Athletics.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, June 3. (AP)—Cotton was lower today under a comparatively small volume of offerings which were evidently encouraged by the favorable view of the weather news and reports of a continued poor demand for cotton goods. The selling was not aggressive but demand was limited and prices worked gradually lower with the new October contract selling off 14.43 or 19 points net lower and closing at that figure. The general market closed barely steady at a decline of 11 points on July, while new crop months showed net losses of 19 to 23 points.

Unfavorable trade advices from Manchester and reports of a continued slow demand in the domestic markets with talk continued mill curtailment, seemed to increase the disposition to sell on the favorable average of crop advices. The dips brought in some buying which temporarily checked the decline around 15.95 for July and 14.50 for the new October contract, but the demand was supplied and the market reached the lowest prices of the day in the late trading. July closed at 15.90, the old October contract at 14.73 and the new December at 14.51.

Except for light showers at three or four stations in Texas detailed weather reports showed no rain fell with generally clear weather in the south.

Liverpool cables said that liquidation and Bombay selling had ben absorbed by trade calling at the decline of the market there, and reported a moderate inquiry for cotton cloth from Egypt and the Near East. Port receipts today 15.769. U. S. port stocks 1.736.156. Exports today 20.055; making 6.478.808 so far this season.

Market Yields to Bearish Pressure But Keeps Volume of Selling Low

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, June 3. (US)—Faced with additional unfavorable trade developments, the stock market today yielded in price but the volume of selling was unimportant. Total transactions at times dropped to the lowest rate since August, 1928, and for the day aggregated only 1,750,000 shares. Announcement that the Steel corporation operations had been curtailed to 75 per cent from 80 per cent a week ago encouraged a renewed onslaught by professional bears. They succeeded in forcing prices down almost without exception but only light liquidation was induced. In a few issues, such as continental baking, sharp declines took place, but in the majority of stocks the decline was relatively moderate. The influence of the impending reparations loans was evident and no incentive was furnished for the resumption of constructive activities. The only support to the market seemed to exist in investment buying and this demand appeared only on reactions. The extent of liquidation in the market was emphasized in the stock exchange disclosure that security loans of its members declined $315,000,000 during May. Recent action of the market has been such as to encourage a gradually increasing professional short interest.

Foster-Wheeler was an outstanding feature of strength, attaining a record high in the face of the general market weakness. Foster has been steadily accumulated by important interests who recognize it is one of the few companies whose earnings this year are running ahead of 1929. As a matter of fact Foster's profits in the first five months of the current year are understood to have exceeded the net for all of 1929, which equalled more than $6 a share. Case Threshing Machine was another stock to record a net advance. Liquidation of this stock by important western interests, to which attention had been previously directed here, has been about completed. Buying of Case the last few days has been for the account of the most important banking interests. They appreciate that recent setback in agricultural business is a seasonal development. Case has had an almost uninterrupted upswing in its annual profits for many years. From 1925 to 1929, both inclusive, Case reported net income equal to $111.95 per share, an average of $22.39 per year, after making liberal charge-offs.

Worthington Pump yielded several points but was steadily taken by interests aware of the fact that the company has been awarded a $4,000,000 contract by Cities Service and that several other sizeable orders are expected in the near future. The company, like Foster-Wheeler, is this year enjoying larger earnings than in 1929. Utility stocks as a group performed most encouragingly, yielding an average of less than a point and turning extremely dull on the reaction. These stocks appear to be awaiting the congressional adjournment. Railroad stocks were also quiet. Investment interests are studying the record of leading systems to find which roads spent abnormally large sums in the early months of this year, without consequent adverse influence on net. Atchison did about 70 per cent of its rail-laying in the first four months of this year, so that its management is warranted in retrenching on such expenditures. Other leading roads will likewise reduce these expenses and in this way make a much better comparative showing in the last half of the year.

Considering the size of the reduction in its operations and general expectation that unfilled orders will show a decline for May Steel common acted fairly encouragingly. The steel industry has been one of the brightest spots in the industrial picture, with operations at surprisingly high rate up to date. This is the period, however, for seasonal letdown and the current year is no exception. Such readjustment has been expected and Steel common and other Steel shares have been discounting this reduction. Opinion prevails, however, that the steel industry may lead the country in a recovery from the depression. Some well-informed people declare that a turn for the better in the steel trade may be only a month off.

American Can declined along with other leading stocks, but the buying was high-grade. The company is understood to be planning an English subsidiary whose stock may be offered publicly. Oil stocks remained quiet even Tide-water Associated yielding fractionally despite announcement of the million-share purchase of its stock by its officers, in line with the exclusive forecast made here last week. This deal probably inaugurates a series of far-reaching merger developments in the oil industry. Motor stocks were under some pressure as a reusIt of the Ford price cuts and continued weakness in Nash, whose decline close to the record low increased nervousness as to its $6 dividend. The stock at its present price is discounting half that rate. Merchanding stocks failed to follow as a group the encouraging sales report of Montgomery Ward, but various of these stocks were taken for investment account, particularly Macy. A new group has been organized in Best and company, in the belief this stock is entitled to higher prices in anticipation of substantially larger sales and earnings to result from its expansion program.

Sterling was under pressure and declined to a new low on its present setback while the remainder of the foreign exchange markets were somewhat easier. Wheat and other grains improved fractionally but cotton continued in supply.

TEXAS CASH GRAIN

FORT WORTH, June 3. (AP)—The cash wheat trade on the Fort Worth grain market assumed a purely nominal aspect Tuesday due to the near approach of the new crop. Dealers said there was some demand but of purely hand to mouth nature and that prices could not be guaranteed. They reported that some ordinary No. 1 hard milling wheat could probably be sold at $1.11 @$1.13, delivered Texas common points, but that demand just now was easily supplied.

Good demand continued for sorghums at strong prices. Corn also was wanted; but oats and barley were slow.

Estimated receipts: wheat 5 cars; corn, 1; oats, 2; barley, 1, and sorghums, 12 cars.

Bids and offers on coarse grains ranged as follows, basis carloads delivered Texas common points, freight paid:

Corn—No. 2 mixed 95½@96½c; No. 2 white $1.00@1.01; No. 2 yellow 99c @$1.00.

Oats—No. 2 red 53@54c.

Barley—No. 2 nominally 61@62c.

Sorghums—No. 2 milo per 100 pounds $2.08@2.10; No. 2 Kaffir $1.76@1.78.

Dealers also quoted, basis delivered Texas group one—No. 2 mixed corn 92½@93½c; No. 2 white corn 98½@99½c; No. 2 yellow 97½@98½c; No. 3 white oats 51½@52c, to which add 1c for delivery group one.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 3. (AP)—Ominous crop conditions both north and south of the Canadian boundary, together with shrinkage of the world's wheat available supply lifted wheat values late today.

High winds and dust storms were reported as again damaging spring wheat over wide areas, and the crop condition in Saskatchewan was figured as having been reduced 5 per cent within the last week, world stocks of wheat were announced as down to but little more than 3,000,000 bushels over the total at this time last year.

In contract with early declines today, wheat closed firm at virtually the top level ½@1c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ¼@⅝c advanced—oats ½@⅜c up, and provisions varying from 35c setback to a rise of 30c.

At first, the wheat market was largely dominated by monthly unofficial estimates indicating that the 1930 United States winter crop will be larger than was forecast a month ago. Today's June crop summaries by private crop authorities put the probable total domestic winter wheat this season at 544,000,000 bushels, compared with 543,000,000 bushels, the average unofficial estimate a month ago, and with the government's May estimate of 535,000,000 bushels. The new monthly reports, however, pointed out that conditions in spring wheat territory are precarious to subsoil moisture, and that more than usual rainfalls are necessary for the spring crop fom now on until harvest.

Disquieting advices about renewal of dust storms from Canadian wheat territory and North Dakota and Northwest Minnesota soon proved effective in turning the wheat market upward, and more than offset June monthly unofficial forecasts of a domestic spring wheat crop of 257,000,000 bushels this season, compared with 252,000,000 bushels indicated a year ago.

Corn displayed independent strength from the outset, and oats followed suit. Traders in corn were inclined to be anxious about reports that general rains are needed all over the corn belt.

Most deliveries of provisions advanced owing to cash interests buying July lard.

Closing Indemnities: Wheat, July $1.06⅝ @1.06¾; $1.09½@1.09⅝; Sept. $1.09⅜@1.10; $1.12½@1.12⅝; Dec. $1.14⅜, $1.17¼. Corn, July 81¼c, 82⅝c; Sept. 82½c, 83⅝@83⅞c; Dec. 76⅞@77c, 78¼c.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, June 3. (US)—Weather conditions northwest hold the key to wheat market action for the next few days at least, traders believe. All of the reports indicate some damage from dry weather and high winds on both sides of the international line.

The corn market is acting very strong. Offerings are not large and there is an active demand from shorts and more evidence of speculative interest through commision houses.

Entrance of India into the export field in a much larger capacity than expected has relieved tension abroad, where there was some concern over decreasing stocks and a tighter price position in North America because of reported crop damage.

A bullish inference taken by some from the private reports is that the unchanged yield from a month ago indicates that favorable weather has not brought about the recovery in wheat conditions which was anticipated.

A Buenos Aires cable estimated the exportable surplus in Argentina is now less than 37,000,000 bushels.

Broomhall thinks that any dry weather scare in Canada would find a prompt reflection in the Liverpool market owing to the narrow margin on which foreign stocks are being carried.

CHICAGO COTTON

CHICAGO, June 3. (AP)—Cotton declined 10 to 17 points today, with new crop deliveries leading the decline. The market opened unchanged from the previous close. Prices sagged slowly in morning trading on perfect weather over the belt and continued to decline slowly in the afternoon. The close was at the bottom for the day. Cables were due ¼ point higher to 3 lower and were actually 1 to 2 lower when American exchanges opened. Slow business is reported from dry goods circles.

DRY GOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, June 3. (AP)—Cotton goods were quiet with prices barely steady in the gray goods division. The demand for sheep wash fabrics is more active. Raw silk was weak and inactive. Silk goods for immediate cutting were in fair call. Burlaps were unchanged and quiet. More interest is reported in worsted dress fabrics for fall.

TEXAS SPOTS

GALVESTON, June 3. (AP)—Spot cotton closed steady, 15 down.

Low middling 13.10; strict low middling 14.15; middling 14.90; strict middling 15.40; good middling 15.55; strict good middling 15.70; middling fair 15.95. Sales, spots, 42. F. O. B. 100.

Committee Favors Power Commission Alterations

WASHINGTON, June 3. (AP)—The senate bill to authorize the reorganization of the federal power commission was approved tday by the house interstate commerce committee.

An amendment would provide for a commission of five instead of three to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate.

"SHEILA"

Love and Mystery Humor and Tragedy

A Story of Wichita Falls By GORDON TURNER

Mrs. Murchison and heard Joe invite her to take dinner with him.

"Knowing Joe and I are engaged, Miss Brown called me up this morning and said she had a hunch there might be a misunderstanding. For some reason or other, Mrs. Murchison didn't want anyone to know she was in town, and the foxie Maizie scented a shattered romance if I were left in the dark."

There was another burst of laughter. "Oh, this is too good!" she chuckled. "Joe phoned me he had a business engagement and he doesn't know that I know. The old dear was pledged to silence about Mrs. Murchison and his sense of loyalty to Frank wouldn't let him tell even me."

"Well, they were mighty thick, I'll tell the world," commented Edna.

"Yes, he had no right to be so entertaining and so well entertained," Sheila replied, "but don't worry; wait till I see him tonight! He'll be disciplined. The temperature will be 40 degrees below zero at the Wilber domicile. I shall have learned of his unforgivable defection. I'll confront him with the damning evidence, and then we shall see what we shall see." Her eyes gleamed in joyous anticipation.

"Oh, gosh, I'd like to be there hiding behind a toothpick!" Edna said gleefully. "Soak him hard as Andy would say. Oh, darn Andy," she continued in sudden remembrance.

"Come out of it, Edna," urged Sheila, "give Andy a chance and don't spoil my party. Andy must have met that girl when he was drinking, when he didn't know what he was doing."

"All right," Edna agreed reluctantly, "but I'm not going to kiss and make up. From now on Andy is the dirt in the doormat."

Note by Maizie Brown to her correspondence school instructor:

I don't want you to get the idea, Mr. Instructor, that I'm a meddler. It was all in Mr. Sheridan's interests, even if he didn't know about it. I just had to give Sheila Wilber a tip about Mrs. Murchison when I saw how things were going, but I had no idea at the time she would play a cat-and-mouse game with poor Mr. Hedley.

The next morning, Mr. Hedley burst into our office and without paying any attention to me, shouted at Mr. Sheridan:

"Where is Mrs. Murchison?" Just like that, not a word of greeting.

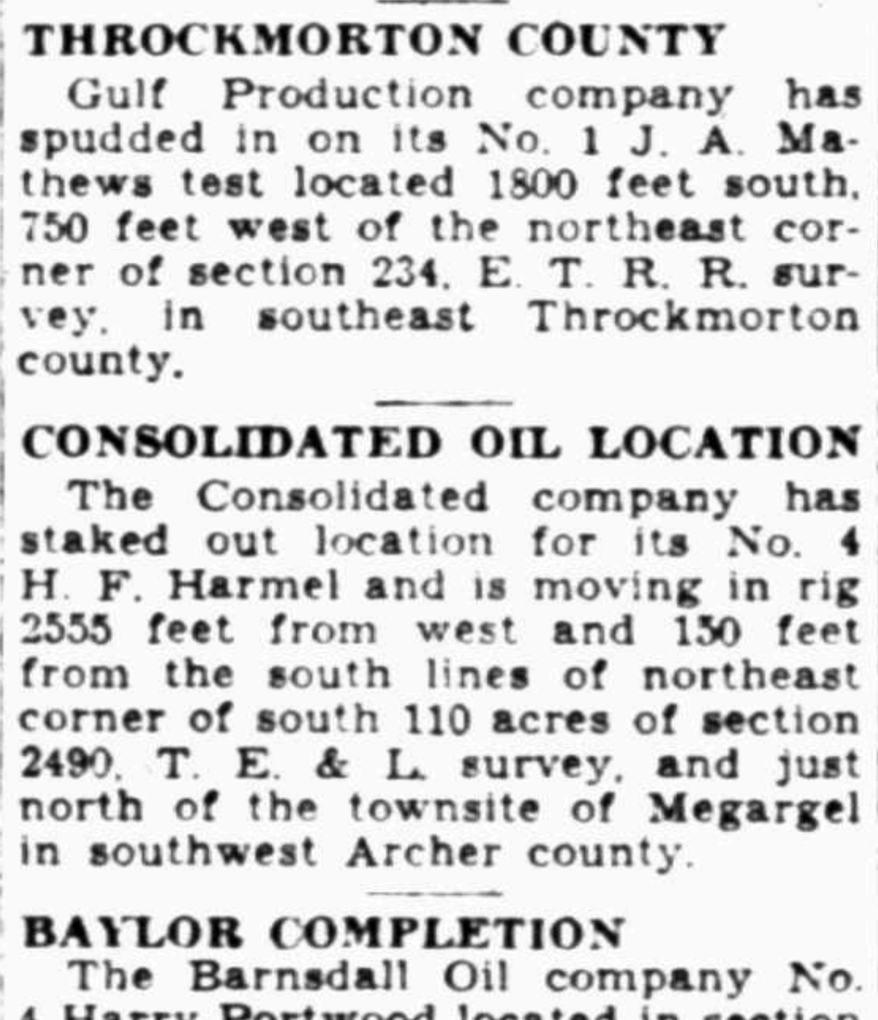

"Pauline? Oh, she made me stand and deliver and then spread her wings and fly away," Mr. Sheridan answered. "Actual fact, she expressed her trunks early yesterday afternoon, then went out to the Municipal airport and boarded a plane for Chicago, where she was to make connections for New York. Her full purpose accomplished, she was impatient to be on her way. By the way, you made quite an impression on my erratic sister; she said you were a perfect esquire of lone damsels. She told me she regretted not seeing you again and asked me to give you her sincere regards."

"Then there's no more need keeping quiet about her visit?" Mr. Hedley inquired. "What a mess! Say, you got me in this hole and you've got to pull me out. I broke an engagement with Sheila to entertain your sister. Sheila somehow got wind I was dining with a strange woman and now she's on the warpath. With your gag in my mouth, I couldn't explain."

Mr. Sheridan laughed. "Thank the Lord," he exclaimed, "that Pauline lives as far away as Seattle. She can stir up more trouble than a bunch of Mexican insurrectos. But, calm yourself, Joe, I'll pour oil on the troubled waters. I'm going out to the Wilber's today—Mr. Wilber wants to see me. I'll see Sheila and tell all."

I heard all of this through the open door to the inner office. I was very, very busy at my typewriter when Mr. Hedley passed through the outer office.

President George H. Denny of the University of Alabama delivered the commencement address.

"The greatest obstacle to a correct solution of the problem of modern youth is that age has been busy stressing the brakes and the steering wheel, while youth has been too busy stressing the accelerator," he said.

"This brings an apparent clash between youth and age. A period of large cooperation and sympathy is in sight now, however.

Wichita Board Discusses Business Outlook

Statistics revealing a general tone of business stability in this city were included in a discussion of the annual real estate survey and taxation given by Roscoe Staton before members of the Real Estate board at the Kemp hotel Tuesday noon.

Building permits for the first five months of 1930 showed an increase of $384,011 over the corresponding period in 1929, it was said, and real estate transfers during the same portion of 930 amounted to $819,746.02. The scholastic census increased about 900 to give a total of 11,035, while utilities meters showed a gain of 54 for telephones, 237 for gas meters, and 94 for electric service. Postal receipts for the first four motnhs of this year lacked $5,514.76 of equalling those of the same months in 1929.

With 5.7 per cent of the city's 9,282 residences vacant, according to the recent survey, Mr. Steen said that only about 10 per cent of the houses vacant were judged to be in suitable condition for renting. Poor locations and poor conditions were said to account for most of the 10.8 per cent of vacancies among the 920 business houses counted here.

Members of the board heard Joe P. Witherspoon Jr.'s address on "My Home Town" with which he won the West Texas Chamber of Commerce contest at Abilene last week. It was announced that he will compete with the winner of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce competition for the right to represent Texas in a national contest.

Ross Robot to Appear at Two Wichita Stores for Hour Friday

Announcement of two engagements for appearances of an hour at Wichita Falls stores was made Tuesday by Ross Robot, the Mechanical Man, who is touring Wichita Falls.

Robot will spend an hour at Saul's Friday in connection with a fashion revue there from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock. Sofia Ross, a former musical comedy star in the famous "Rose Marie," will also attend the Saul's fashion show, appearing in the show window and at the revue. She is the wife of the "mechanical man."

At 10:30 o'clock Friday morning Robot will make his appearance for an hour at the Perkins-Timberlake store during a special sale of neckwear. He is also to make an appearance at the Texas Electric Service company at an hour to be announced later.

Wednesday Robot will make a complete tour of the business section of Wichita Falls, starting at the Majestic theater at 2:30 o'clock and stopping for a brief period at The Times building at 3 o'clock. He will then proceed to visit other stores in the business area.

Robot, while entirely human, duplicates the movements and work of a robot, or mechanical man, so closely that he has caused many persons to doubt that he is really a man. He has made appearances over most of the nation, and will remain in Wichita Falls this week.

Huge Flood Control Plan Is Explained

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 3. (UP)—Plans for a $15,000,000 flood control system that would protect Oklahoma City's Canadian river bottoms and surrounding district from a heavier flood than has ever been recorded here were laid before the city council today by Maj. John B. Hawley, Fort Worth hydraulic engineer.

Major Hawley and Daniel W. Mead, Madison, Wis., evolved the system after an eight-month study of the river's course through the city to the eastern city limits.

One plan would cost $8,000,000 with a $3,000,000 fund to acquire flood plains. The other plan would cost $12,000,000 above the flood plain costs.

The plan abandons reservoir construction. High water would be let into flood plains instead.

Sergeant Biesiot landed at Dryden, en route from El Paso to San Antonio. While his ship was at a standstill a sudden gust of wind flopped it over on its back with such force that the plane was wrecked. Sergeant Biesiot was caught between the center section of the wing and another part of the ship.

Three passengers in the plane escaped injury.

Dr. Rusby testified he had pleaded with officials of the drug unit to protect the quality of this drug used in childbirth, but they had shown no disposition to "admit the facts."

The state health department's fight against malaria in southwestern Oklahoma reduced the number of cases from 5,711 in 1928 to 3,814 in 1929, reports show.

HOOVER SHEDS LIGHT ON VETO

President Explains Stand on War Pensions

WASHINGTON, June 3. (US)—President Hoover today reiterated his opposition to provisions in the Pension bill, passed by congress over his veto yesterday by an almost unprecedented majority.

Explaining his position the president stated:

"I favored a liberalizing of the Spanish War Veteran pensions because they have not been on a parity with other services, but I have not changed my opinion that it should have been worked out in such a way that rich men, or men having substantial incomes, should not draw pensions from the government. I have made no suggestion at any time of a pauper provision against veterans or anything akin thereto.

"I do not believe we should alter the principles which have been held for Civil war veterans all these 70 years, requiring that men claiming pensions should have at least 90 days service.

"Further than this, I do not believe it is right to change our national policy and to call upon the nation to pay disability allowances to men who have or who may tomorrow destroy their health by vicious habits.

"I have received numerous communications from veterans supporting these views."

The president and his official family were admittedly surprised at the swift and stinging rebuke to his veto message, rejected in the senate 61 to 18 and in the house 298 to 14. The overturn of the veto was discussed at the cabinet meeting today.

The measure as enacted over the president's protest carries an annual appropriation of $11,500,000 for additional pensions for Spanish war veterans. It reduces the time of service to benefit by a pension from 90 to 70 days and generally liberalizes the regulations under which pensions may be awarded.

Hoover Deaf to Plea For Postponing Treaty

He repeated his decision that if the senate does not act upon the treaty during the present session, he will call a special session immediately after adjournment.

MAJESTIC: Betty Compson in "Street Girl," with Jack Oakie—a revue built for Betty's violining. Krazy Kat cartoon comedy. Paramount sound news.

STRAND: Clara Bow in "True to the Navy," with Frederic March supplying the only excellence which the play affords. Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel golfing in a Mack Sennett comedy. Sound news.

STATE: Jack Mulhall and Lila Lee in "Murder Will Out," last day. The first murder is at midnight, the next at 1, the next planned for 2 o'clock. Talking comedy. Sound news.

MELBA: "Lucky Star," with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor. Vitaphone sound equipped. Comedy.

GEM: "The Canyon of Missing Men," western story. "Flannels and Flivvers," comedy.

Standing before the State theater Monday afternoon, debating as to which Publix manager was to be made happy by two more admissions, the one lady says to the other: "No, not the Strand; Clara Bow's there, and I'm tired of seeing her undress, and dance, and talk slang." Which, since "True to the Navy" is now the Bow feature, supplies at least one instance of woman, even with her intuition, going far, far astray. Several Clara Bow pieces of the past two years were properly impaled by the discriminating lady's tart remark. But Clara's producers have, wisely enough, executed an about face, and the long popular red-head again is in her element.

Reversing the ancient platitude relatives to the sailor's Nancy in every port, "True to the Navy" allows the Bowish charms to knock first one sailor and then two into calf-eyed admiration as Clara operates a soda-fountain in a San Diego drug store. Harry Green, of course, owns the store—since he is in the cast. Besides having a light but entertaining story to narrate, Clara has the help of a male lead who can hold attention fairly well himself—Fredric March. And this is a March you haven't seen before. He is not a McLaglen, but certainly makes a very convincing hard-boiled gob from the Mississippi. More and more the element of action is being utilized in comedy-narration, and "True to the Navy" strikingly exemplifies that new evidence of directoral wisdom.

The Strand's comedy, "Match Play," is a distinct innovation. Introducing a golf match in which two of the established Sennett comedians draw partners, they trot out nobody but Walt Hagen and Leo Diegel themselves. You know the rest. Those golf balls are made to cut more amazing didos than a circus clown. Golf-bugs will ignore such trivial things as dinner or business to stay through for the whole day's run—it's that kind of golf.

"Murder Will Out," at the State. The strong flavor of "Dr. Fu Manchu" which prevails throughout the picture is dispelled only with the last scene denouement. For the surprises there—to all except those who have classified Noah Beery, Tully Marshall, and Claude Allister definitely as villains—will put the picture quite definitely under the head of cleverly-evolved mystery, acceptably entertaining as it unfolds. It requires little acting, but also uses little of the super-natural monkey-business which cursed "The Return of Fu Manchu." Jack Mulhall and Lila Lee look nicely together.
