Hart rejuvenated by primary wins in Ohio, Indiana

By The Associated Press

Victories in the industrial states of Ohio and Indiana have blown new fire into Sen. Gary Hart's faltering presidential candidacy, offsetting Walter F. Mondale's wins in Maryland and North Carolina and guaranteeing the nomination struggle will continue through the final primaries and possibly onto the convention floor.

"The Democrats of this nation are not prepared to have this contest and this debate end at this time," a jubilant Hart told supporters Tuesday night.

Mondale, appearing tired, subdued and clearly disappointed, told reporters, "I am confident as the debate goes forward that I will get the delegates that I need to be the nominee."

But he conceded there is "a good chance" the fight for the nomination will continue to the Democratic National Convention next July in San Francisco.

While Hart got the industrial state victories he needed to keep his candidacy alive, Mondale added to his formidable lead in delegates.

Hart planned to rest today and then fly to Nebraska tonight. Mondale was planning to fly to the West Coast with an intermediate stop in Nebraska later in the week. The Rev. Jesse Jackson was in Washington to address the American Society of Newspaper Editors and planned a campaign stop in Nebraska Friday night.

Nebraska and Oregon hold primaries next Tuesday, and Idaho Democrats will have caucuses on May 24. But the climactic day in the Democratic campaign is June 5, when California, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia have primaries.

The big prize that day is California with 345 delegates, and that is where the three contenders were likely to spend most of their time.

"I'm going to campaign very heavily on the issues that concern Californians," said Mondale.

Hart, who hadn't won a primary since Connecticut on March 27, suddenly had a chance to put together a winning streak. Hart swamped Mondale in caucuses Monday in his home state of Colorado, he is favored to carry Oregon's primary, and he scheduled the next several days campaigning in Nebraska.

But Mondale's big wins in Maryland and North Carolina more than offset Hart's delegate gains in his narrow victories in Indiana and Ohio. The former vice president picked up 186 delegates in the four states compared to 139 for Hart and 42 for Jackson.

Mondale now has 1,446.05 delegates, Hart has 874.75, and Jackson 279.2. With about 800 delegates left to be allocated in the remaining primaries, Mondale needs 521 to reach the 1,967 needed for a convention majority. Mondale will get at least 100 delegates from Texas, where the allocation from last Saturday's caucuses has not yet been determined.

"Walter Mondale is clearly the front-runner and clearly the electorate has turned away from him," said Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign manager.

Returns from Ohio and Indiana showed how thin Hart's victories were there:

In Indiana, with 97 percent of the precincts reporting, the vote was: Hart 288,058 for 42 percent; Mondale 281,143 for 41 percent; and Jackson 92,161 for 13 percent.

In Ohio, with 100 percent of the vote in, it was: Hart 608,438 for 42 percent; Mondale 583,574 for 40 percent; Jackson 236,829 for 16 percent.

Mondale enjoyed more comfortable margins in Maryland and North Carolina.

Complete but unofficial returns from Maryland gave Mondale 209,509 votes or 43 percent; Jackson 127,799 or 27 percent; and Hart 119,886 or 25 percent.

In North Carolina, with 99 percent of the vote in, it was: Mondale 337,957 for 36 percent; Hart 285,657 for 30 percent; Jackson 238,844 for 25 percent; no preference had 43,695 votes or 5 percent.

In delegates, Indiana's returns showed Hart leading for 39 delegates, Mondale for 34 and Jackson for four. In Ohio, Jackson had 79 to ;67 for Mondale and eight for Jackson.

North Carolina's voting gave Mndale 44 delegates to 18 for Hart and 13 for Jackson. In Maryland, Mondale picked up 41 delegates to Jackson's 17 and Hart's three, with one uncommitted.

Pensive pose

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry awaits results of the rechecking of voting machine precinct totals. His opponents, Dewey Lee and Robbie Rucker, in the Republician Party primary race for the JP nomination had demanded a formal recheck of the voting precinct totals after the "confusing way" the media had reported preliminary election results.

There won't be JP run-off election

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Dewey Lee and Robbie Rucker once again were assured that neither would be in a run-off election with Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

Neither wanted that affirmation.

And they suspected Sprayberry of loitering at the absentee voting place around noon on May 1 and demanded that "all" of Sprayberry's 697 absentee votes "be stricken due to his loitering."

Were that permitted, Lee would be pitted in a run-off against Sprayberry on June 2.

William T. "Bill" Shaner, chairman of the Midland County Republican Party, sidestepped the loitering charge.

"I am not an arm of the law," he said. "I'm just a county chairman."

Lee, 53, and Ms. Rucker, 43, on Tuesday petitioned Shaner for a recount of the 9,356 votes cast in the election. Both had narrowly missed taking Sprayberry into a run-off election after Sprayberry garnered 50.64 percent of the votes in Saturday's Republican Party primary election. Lee picked up 26.18 percent of the ballots, and Ms. Rucker, 23.18 percent.

Shaner obliged, but he found no discrepancy after he unlocked 45 voting machines used in the Republican primary election and checked the total count precinct by precinct. Shaner made the recheck in the presence of 318th State District Judge Barbara Culver; Midland County Election Administration deputies Pat Stovall and Betty Burns; Sprayberry, Lee and Ms. Rucker's representative, Hal Rucker.

Sprayberry carried 30 of the 31 voting precincts. The absentee count was 697 votes for Sprayberry, 327 for Lee and 186 for Ms. Rucker.

Lee, chief investigator for District Attorney Vern Martin, told Ms. Stovall, chief deputy for Elections Administrator Janeice Builta, that "Ms. Builta did a good job."

"And I have more respect for you than I ever did...I won't question the election people anymore. They did any excellent job."

Earlier, Judge Culver had noted that "the election officials — the people who work at the polls — are really conscientious."

Lee and Rucker said the checking of the voting machines was demanded after they had heard conflicting reports of the JP race late Saturday and early Sunday morning over radio and television broadcasts.

Nicaragua says it shot down Honduras copter

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua said its forces shot down a military helicopter from Honduras that crossed into its airspace. Honduras said the U.S-built craft was unarmed, part of its air force, and that all eight men aboard died.

The foreign minister of Nicaragua's leftist government, Miguel d'Escoto, said the violation of the airspace Tuesday was "evidence one more time of the danger with which the American administration, through the CIA, is pushing Honduras into participating in the aggression against our country."

Nicaragua claimed another helicopter crossed into its airspace but escaped back to Honduras.

The Sandinista government took reporters to see the helicopter's remains, scattered over an acre about 10 miles south of Potosi, a port on the Gulf of Fonseca which is shared by Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador.

CIA-backed rebels based in Honduras have attacked Potosi four times since January. U.S. officials suspect that Potosi, 150 miles northwest of Managua, is the launching point for small boats ferrying Nicaraguan arms to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

On Monday, the United States, El Salvador and Honduras ended 12 days of naval exercises in and around the gulf.

In El Salvador on Tuesday, election officials opened ballot boxes from Sunday's presidential runoff and began the official vote count.

Head of Olympic Committee hopes Soviets reverse decision

By The Associated Press

The president of the U.S. Olympic Committee said today he was keeping his fingers crossed and hoping the Soviets would change their minds about quitting the Summer Olympics, while athletes listened for signals that other Eastern bloc countries would drop out too.

The Soviet Union's announcement Tuesday that its athletes, including some of the world's top competitors, would not participate in the 1984 Games in Los Angeles disappointed Western athletes and cheered an anti-Soviet group in California that had threatened to encourage Soviet athletes to defect.

The Soviets cited "anti-Soviet hysteria" and charged that the United States didn't plan to ensure the security of all athletes, complaints that have been echoed in the government-controlled media in other Eastern bloc nations. Officials in the United States have denied the charges.

But sports officials in East Germany, a Soviet ally with a powerhouse Olympic team, declined comment on their plans for the summer Games. A top official of Poland's Olympic Committee said his group wasn't expected to make a decision this week.

An employee of Bulgaria's Olympic Committee said the group planned to meet today to decide whether to join the Soviets. She said neither she nor her colleagues knew anything of reports her country was planning alternative games for Soviet bloc teams. Romania still plans to participate in Los Angeles.

"Let's face it, we're not clean in this affair either," U.S.O.C. President William Simon said in a televised interview today, referring to then-President Jimmy Carter's call for a boycott of the 1980 summer Games in Moscow, a response to the Soviet incursion in Afghanistan.

Figures show mixed results for sales tax rebates

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

One report looks bright, the other a little dim on the sales tax figures reported this month by the State Comptroller's Office.

On the calendar year, Midland was up over last year. On the fiscal year, though, Midland dropped, according to Finance Director Troy Gifford. Odessa, meanwhile, dipped lower than Midland.

Sales tax collected in March and rebated to the cities this month showed Midland with $904,774.94, which is an increase over the $939,191.87 for the same time last year. For the calendar year, Midland reflects a 2.75 percent increase. This year the total has hit $3,367,409 as compared to $3,277,347.88 last year.

Gifford was projecting Midland with a rebate of $1 million, which means the May number fell $35,000 short. Because some large companies report only on a quarterly, and not on a monthly basis the finance director gets an average of these three numbers. The shortfall this month means his "three-month moving average took a slight dip," he said.

While the State Comptroller's report looked bright, the fiscal year numbers reflected a drop. The city government's fiscal year started Oct. 1, 1983, and the total to date since then is $5.175 million, according to Gifford. Last year, it was $5.348 million and two years ago it was $6.885 million.

"This year is less than last year and significantly lower than two years ago," said Gifford. "Last year we were heading down and still declining. We should end this year slightly better than last year." He has projected a final figure of $7.5 million compared to 1983's $7.35 million.

He expects the payment in June to be between $450,000 and $465,000. And July should show an increase this year since last year it reflected the low point of the economy.

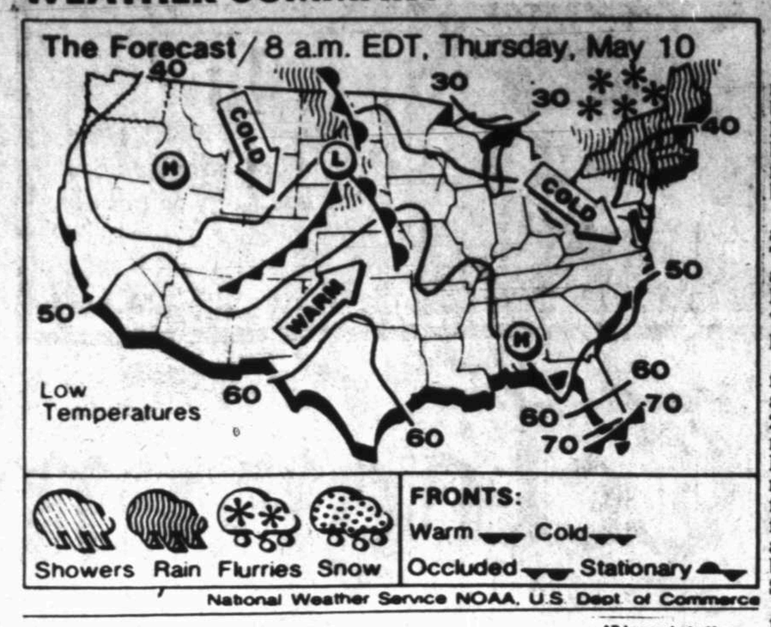
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain for Thursday for most of New England, Washington, Oregon, the Dakotas and Nebraska.

Hot temperatures will be returning to Permian Basin

If you like the cooler weather we've been having, you'd better make the most of it this evening, for Thursday it will be gone. Tonight will be fair, with lows in the mid 50s and winds from the south at 5-15 mph. Thursday will see a return to last weekend's hot weather, with sunny skies and highs in the mid 90s. Winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tuesday's high of 74 was not very high, especially by 1947 standards — that's when the record for the date of 103 was set. The overnight low of 47 was five degrees above the 1969 record low of 42.

STATE

Texans awoke to unseasonably cool temperatures today, but the National Weather Service said a warming trend would begin today and continue at least through Thursday.

Temperatures were generally in the 40s and 50s this morning, with early morning readings ranging from 39 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of far West Texas to 64 degrees at Laredo.

Record lows for May 9 were established at Port Arthur and Houston. The low was 50 at Jefferson County Airport in Port Arthur and still dropping. That broke the old mark of 53 set in 1961. Houston's low at 4 a.m. was 49 and still dropping. Houston's previous low for the date was 54 in 1982.

Winds were south to southwest in much of North and West Texas, with wind speeds generally in the 5 to 15 mph range.

Afternoon temperatures today and Thursday should be in the 70s and 80s, with the mercury reaching near the century mark in the Big Bend, the weather service said.

Another front is expected to enter the state from New Mexico on Thursday, but no precipitation is expected from the system. However, scattered thunderstorms should develop over Oklahoma Friday and Saturday and over much of the eastern two-thirds of Texas over the weekend, the weather service said.

NATION

Violent thunderstorms that have slammed the East with torrential rains, high winds and tornadoes spun into the Atlantic Ocean today but the threat of flooding hung over many saturated sections of the country.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., where at least 40 homes were evacuated Tuesday, officials said the Tennessee River would crest today five feet above flood stage. The Cumberland River at Clarksville, Tenn., was expected to crest 10 feet above flood stage.

The flooding situation in the Chattanooga area was aggravated by the fact that Tennessee Valley Authority was forced to release water from the Douglas Dam, which was threatening to overflow.

The flood waters have retreated in parts of Kentucky and West Virginia where nearly 6,000 people were forced from their homes Monday and Tuesday by water that reached the second floor of some buildings.

At least 16 tornadoes touched down Tuesday in five states, the weather service said, while thunderstorms packing winds reaching 85 mph ripped the tops off houses and knocked out power to more than 140,000 homes, officials said.

"Trailers throughout the area were torn to pieces," Maryland State Police Cpl. Joseph Little said of storms with winds hitting 60 mph that ripped through the state's Eastern Shore. One man was killed in Dorchester County when his chicken coop collapsed on him, Little said.

The possibility of thunderstorms will remain for part of the day from the Great Lakes into New England, the Weather Service said. Showers will also fall on the Pacific Northwest.

Rebel band storms Khadafy's barracks

ROME (AP) — Libyan forces reportedly crushed a daring attempt by a small band of men to storm Moammar Khadafy's fortress-like barracks home. Khadafy said in an interview that the rebels were betrayed by a captured leader.

The Libyan leader's statements about the attack on the outskirts of Tripoli appeared today in Le Monde, a leading Paris newspaper, whose Libyan correspondent said he interviewed Khadafy after witnessing part of the assault Tuesday.

Italian news reports said loyalist forces burst out of the barracks in armored vehicles and defeated the 20 or so rebels who fired rocket grenades. Le Monde's correspondent, Eric Rouleau, wrote that the barracks, where Khadafy lives with his family, "showed no trace of any fighting." He wrote that all the attackers were killed and their bodies put on display in Green Square in the city center.

A group calling itself the National Front for the Salvation of Libya called The Associated Press today and Tuesday and claimed responsibility for the attack. It said the attackers were killed, but vowed to escalate actions against the Libyan leader.

"Khadafy himself managed to escape before our forces were able to get to him," a statement today from the group said. It said the National Front's forces "clashed with Khadafy's forces at the barracks for more than five hours."

The statement claimed soldiers and civilians from within the barracks joined the attack, in which 15 National Front supporters were killed along with "in the tens" of Khadafy's special guards. The statement said there were several Khadafy guards injured.

Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy shakes hands with Czech Prime Minister Lubomir Strougal in Tropoli, during an official visit by Strougal. Libyan rebels firing rocket grenades attacked Khadafy's barracks Tuesday, but were crushed by loyalist forces.

One diplomat said some of the dead were reported to be "Palestinians and people trained abroad by Britain and Sudan."

Even before the Le Monde interview, there were preliminary intelligence reports from Tripoli indicating that Khadafy had survived yet another of a series of attempts to oust him since he seized power in a coup 15 years ago.

Khadafy said in the Le Monde interview that Libyan security forces skirmished with three infiltrators near the border with Tunisia on Sunday, killing one and wounding and capturing the other two. He said the infiltrators carried Sudanese diplomatic passports and claimed they were Palestinians but spoke Arabic with Libyan accents.

The official Tunisian news agency reported today that Libyan authorities were holding three Tunisian border guards who accidentally drove into Libya on the Mediterranean coast.

On Tuesday, Libya's news agency, JANA, said Libya had arrested three Libyans and killed one who it said belonged to a British-backed terrorist group. It said they were arrested trying to infiltrate from Tunisia.

It was not clear if the accounts from JANA, Khadafy and Tunisia all referred to the same arrests.

Khadafy claimed that the infiltrators carried names, addresses and telephone numbers of fellow conspirators in Tripoli and lists of Libyan officials they were sent to assassinate.

The conspiracy's leader was arrested and promptly betrayed a dozen other plotters who had rented an apartment in the center of Tripoli, Le Monde quoted Khadafy as saying.

Midlander offers to sell water to El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — Inspired by this West Texas city's increasing thirst for water, a Midland man has offered to augment El Paso's diminishing Rio Grande supply by selling the city water that rests under his 9,000-acre ranch.

Hal Rachal, a 72-year-old rancher, presented his unique proposal to county officials last week. They called the idea "innovative" but not really feasible at this time.

Because the Rio Grande is nearly dry by the time it reaches El Paso, "there's no water for us to trade him (Rachal)," said Edd Fifer, manager of the El Paso County Water Improvement District.

Rachal's sheep and cattle ranch is near Del Rio and adjacent to the Amistad Reservoir, where a dam impounds water from the Rio Grande just below its confluence with Devils River.

Because of the dam, Rachal said, water that flows under his ranchland is trapped. It is from that aquifer that Rachal proposed to pump into the lake any water El Paso takes out of the Rio Grande. He estimated he could deliver up to 40 million gallons of water a day to the lake.

The fee to El Paso, he said, would be 50 cents per 1,000 gallons.

County officials agreed to listen to Rachal's plan because they currently are paying 65 cents per 1,000 gallons of untreated Rio Grande water, he said.

The city also is embroiled in a lawsuit with neighboring New Mexico to obtain the water it contends it needs.

Fifer said Rachal's plan possibly could have merit for some communities, but said that El Paso does not have enough water in the Rio Grande to trade for Rachal's water.

"We can't get much from the Rio Grande so there would be no way for it to work out, in my opinion," Fifer said.

He said, however, Rachal's suggestion is the "kind of innovative thinking that may be the solution down the road."

Other county officials said they would continue to at least study the idea to determine if there is any validity to it.

Rachal said he understood the authorities' concerns and has made the same offer to other Texas communities, such as Laredo.

He said Laredo city officials turned him down because their current need for water was being taken care of.

Rachal said he intended to continue to "propose to drill wells and pump water into the lake and use that for a trade with anyone that's along or near the Rio Grande.

"I have spent some time and research on this thing (and) it would be nice to do something for somebody else while doing something for myself."

He said he remained optimistic that his offer eventually would be accepted by some community members because "there's no doubt in my mind that more than one of those places is going to get quite thirsty in the near future.

"And, I'm standing by, ready to quench their thirst."

Official hopes Soviets change their minds

But he said of the Soviets: "I'm keeping my fingers crossed they'll change their mind."

Simon, speaking on the "CBS Morning News," called the pullout "a tragedy for the athletes, who are once again going to be denied by the politicians the ability to compete in an atmosphere of friendship and competition."

State Department spokesman John Hughes called the Soviet decision a "blatant political action for which there was no real justification."

A mass pullout at Los Angeles — the Soviet statement avoided the word boycott — would be the third in a row to hit the Summer Games. Eighty-one countries joined the United States in boycotting the Moscow games in 1980, and nearly 40 stayed out of the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal.

A woman who answered the telephone at the East German National Olympic Committee office said there was no statement and "there is nothing I can tell you." She declined to give her name.The media in East Germany, the No. 2 medal winner behind the Soviets in the Moscow Games, carried the Soviet boycott decision Tuesday without comment.

"I don't know of any plans for alternate Olympics and I don't think any other committee officials do either," said Lilyana Karakonova, who would not identify herself except as an employee of the Bulgarian committee.

The withdrawal statement by the Soviet National Olympic Committee said, "Chauvinistic sentiments and an anti-Soviet hysteria are being whipped up in the country." It said "extremist organizations and groupings of all sorts" had the "direct connivance of the American authorities" in trying to create "unbearable conditions" for Soviet athletes.

"It's a great day for America," said E. Gene Vosseler of the Ban the Soviets Coalition, which had been trying to keep Soviet atletes out or encourage defections if they did participate.

"If the Soviets don't come, it will be the athletes who will be the losers," said Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley.

"I just don't believe it right now," said Greg Foster, the top-ranked U.S. hurdler. "There is just something about the Russians that makes me believe they are a gold medal-hungry country."

Romania, where multi-medal-winning gymnast Nadia Comaneci officially retired Saturday, "will certainly participate," a Romanian diplomat requesting anonymity said in Vienna.

Hart, addressing supporters, continued to stress his theme that the race is a contest between the party's future and its past.

"That is not a simple or easy decision, and none of us believes it would ever be easy, but that decision will and it must be made," he said. "It will be made because it must be made for this nation's future, and that is why this candidacy will prevail in 1984."

When Mondale met with reporters Tuesday, it was the first time in weeks that he wasn't pressed to declare himself the front-runner in the race, something he consistently refused to do.

This time, the questions were, what happened and what will he do now.

"I had hoped to do better," said Mondale, "but I also knew it was going to be very close."

He cited the fact there was no formal debate in Ohio, as there has been in Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania and Texas, states where he emerged the victor.

"I think I did not make my case," he said. "The contrasts were not as clearly drawn...I don't think we joined the issues as well as we could in a regular debate."

Adding that "I'm not looking over my shoulder," Mondale said he planned no major changes in his style or strategy.

"I will continue to draw contrasts with Mr. Hart and Mr. Jackson where indicated," he said, "and I will continue on as I have."

There won't be run off election for JP

Those reports in votes variously reflected a runoff between Sprayberry and Ms. Rucker or between Sprayberry and Lee but apparently were caused by miscalculations or transposition of figures by news media election vote counters. Official tallies by Ms. Builta's staff reflected an outright but narrow win by Sprayberry.

"After that point," said Sprayberry, "it became Lee and Rucker raising a ruckus. They like Rs."

After the voting machines were rechecked and Shaner declared there would be no JP run-off election, Sprayberry expressed disappointment in his opponents' behavior.

"I'm still waiting for congratulations from either of my opponents, which I thought would fall under decorum," he said.

Moments later, Lee and Ms. Rucker indicated the wait would be long indeed.

"He's got that right," they said almost in unison.

Of the loitering charge, Sprayberry called it "a kind of petty challenge."

The accusation was made in an affidavit signed by George Foster, who, according to the sworn statement, was in the absentee voting line around noon on May 1. Sprayberry "was loitering inside the building near the voting machines" for approximately 20 minutes, the affidavit said. Foster said Sprayberry's manner indicated "he had no lawful business inside the building."

The Texas Election Code prohibits any candidate from loitering or electioneering within 100 feet of a polling place.

Indeed, Sprayberry said he was at the absentee voting place in the Elections Administration Building around the noon hour on May 1.

"I took my sister (Lynne Bailey) down there to absentee vote," he said. "I would say they (Lee and Ms. Rucker) are grasping at straws."

Lee took exception to Sprayberry's comment on the pettiness of the loitering allegation.

"To me," Lee said, "the law is the law. And he thinks it's petty. You either break the law or you don't. You don't see any of my (campaign) signs nailed to powerline poles, which is against the law."

Figures show mixed results for tax rebates

$3,177,278.22, which is lower than 1983's $3,269,744.17.

Frank Muser, fiscal services director for the city of Odessa, said overall the signs were encouraging. Combined with the previous two months, Odessa's rebates are on the upswing. The three months prior to that had seen a 12 percent drop; the last three months combined are up about 12 to 15 percent, he said.

"There's been a big turnaround in the last six months," he said. "We feel pretty positive about it. The next two payments should be substantially greater than last year's. For once we're exceeding last year's level."

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said the payments statewide are running 12.5 percent ahead of last year. "For the first time this year, we can say that virtually all of this increase came from growth in tax collections and not from the changes in our bookkeeping the Legislature made when they moved up due dates for the sales tax last year."

Nicaragua shoots down Honduras copter

Guerrilla leaders of the war to topple the U.S.-backed government boycotted the election and claimed they prevented voting in 91 of El Salvador's 261 municipalities. The army said voting was blocked in only 45 towns.

Jose Napoleon Duarte, candidate of the moderate Christian Democrat Party, has claimed victory based on unofficial tallies by party representatives at polls across the country. Challenger Roberto d'Aubuisson, of the ultra-conservative Republican Nationalist Alliance party, has refused to concede until official results are announced.

Honduras condemned the downing of the helicopter as "brutal." Its Foreign Ministry said five military men and three civilians were aboard. It did not explain how or why the helicopter had entered Nicaraguan airspace.

An Associated Press reporter, taken to the crash site, said the bodies were burned beyond recognition. Reporters were shown military identity cards that military authorities said were found on three of the bodies.

Reporters were shown a propeller of the downed helicopter which had "U.S. Army" written on it. Writing marked the aircraft as a UH-1H helicopter of the type used by the U.S. Army.

In Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, a military spokesman, Col. Cesar Elvir Sierra, said the helicopter was U.S. built and purchased by Honduras for its air force.

Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, the Honduran armed forces chief, said: "We ... are carrying out a minute investigation to determine what really happened."

Lopez Reyes did not mention a second helicopter. He said the downed craft had taken off from Tiger Island in the Gulf of Fonseca for a flight to the naval base at Amapala. Both sites are about 15 miles north of the tip of Nicaraguan territory that juts into the gulf.

Nicaragua's military chief of the region, Cmdr. Javier Pichardo, gave this account to reporters brought to the crash site.

"Two helicopters took off from Amapala military base in Honduran territory and illegally penetrated our territory at Punta Cosiguina. But the anti-aircraft batteries that we have placed in the area to defend our country fired on them, hitting one of them, which burst into flames in mid-air and broke apart when it hit the ground. The other helicopter managed to escape to Honduras."

Krueger asks for recount in 18 counties

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob Krueger, narrowly edged out of a spot in the Democratic runoff for the U.S. Senate nomination, wants the votes recounted in at least 18 counties, his campaign officials say.

Krueger's campaign director, Alan Schoenbaum, said recount petitions were filed Tuesday in Harris, Bexar, Dallas, El Paso and Tarrant counties, the state's most populous counties, and in Fort Bend, Brazoria, Brazos, Chambers, Jefferson, Waller, Wharton and Washington counties.

The recount in Harris County was to be done today.

In Amarillo, Krueger campaign official Morris Overstreet said Democratic vote canvassing boards in Potter, Randall, Armstrong, Gray and Moore counties have been ordered to delay the voting tally for the U.S. Senate race.

Overstreet said he didn't know the names or the number of other counties where the spot recount has been requested or ordered.

Action to stop the canvassing was taken because it is more complicated and expensive to make a recount after the votes are finalized by the boards, Overstreet said.

"Once the votes are canvassed, you have to file a lawsuit to overturn the canvassing board's decision," he said.

In Fort Bend County, election officials reported to the secretary of state's office Sunday that Krueger got 4,117 votes in Saturday's primary. However, they reported Monday he got only 3,232 votes — 885 less than the original count.

Fort Bend County Democratic Chairman John Ferro blamed the mix-up on "people not being able to read the numbers right in the middle of the night."

The votes were retabulated Sunday, Ferro said.

Krueger wanted to ask for recounts in the 69 counties that used computer or mechanical voting devices, but logistical problems prevented filing petitions in all those counties.

Schoenbaum said he did not know late Tuesday how many were filed.

"It had to be done today (Tuesday)," he said. "We had to get petitions drawn and find someone to file them in all these counties, and we had to get the filing fees down to them. The law is definitely stacked against a candidate who wants a recount."

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who helped coordinate Krueger's campaign, had said Monday that Krueger would not seek recounts but would only ask that vote totals be verified in the 69 counties.

Some Krueger campaign officials said they feared that the public would react negatively to recount requests.

Teen-ager gets life in prison in murder case

HOUSTON (AP) — A teen-ager convicted of capital murder in the robbery-murder of a prominent Houston attorney was sentenced to life in prison because jurors said they did not believe the killing was deliberate.

An eight-man, four-woman jury took 90 minutes Tuesday before deciding that Rodney Wayne Davis deserved to spend the rest of his life in prison rather than to die by a deadly combination of drugs.

Davis, 18, was convicted last week in the May 10, 1983, shooting death of Sam Lucas Jr.

Lucas, 63, was killed in the parking lot of a fashionable restaurant, where he and his wife, Burdine, had gone to eat. Testimony at the trial indicated Davis accosted the couple as they were going into the restaurant and forced them back into the car.

Mrs. Lucas was robbed of her jewelry and Lucas was shot so close that Mrs. Lucas had powder burns on her face, according to testimony.

Defense attorneys John Keirnan and J. Philip Scardino said the shooting occurred as Lucas was hiding his watch under the front seat of the car, making Davis think the victim was reaching for a gun.

However, prosecutors Eric Hagstette and Rusty Hardin argued that Davis' action was deliberate.

In reaching a decision on the sentence, jurors ruled that Lucas' death was not deliberate. They did agree that Davis posed a continuing threat to society and that the defendant's conduct was unreasonable.

Since Davis used a deadly weapon, he will not be eligible for parole for 20 years.

In final arguments, Keirnan told jurors that the killing occurred in a moment of panic. He said the death penalty is as repugnant as the killing of Lucas.

"Can you relate to Rodney Wayne Davis?" Keirnan asked. "Can you really understand his life? Are we finished with Rodney? Are we ready to give up?"

Keirnan asked for "consideration, charity and mercy. The plea here is for justice," he said.

Hagstette told jurors that Davis sold a piece of Mrs. Lucas' jewelry for $30. "That's the price of a life," Hagstette said.

He said that Davis has no respect for life and that jurors had no choice but to vote for the death penalty.

EPA action 'appalls' White

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has told federal officials that he is "appalled" at a recommendation to approve Gulf of Mexico burning of PCB wastes.

In a letter released Tuesday, White complained to Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Ruckelshaus.

"At a time when it is so crucial for your agency to regain credibility, a determination to grant research permits without proper application and assurances would only serve to further destroy that credibility," White told Ruckelshaus.

An EPA examiner has recommended that the agency approve research permits that would allow the burning of PCB wastes aboard the Vulcanus I and II ships in the Gulf. White said the PCB burnings pose public health and environmental dangers to the Texas.

Closing dismays workers

LONGVIEW (AP) — Factory workers and union officials reacted with anger and dismay when they learned that the Vought Aero aircraft plant here would be shut down.

"It's heartbreaking...It's like a kick in the teeth," said Larry Sims, president of the local American Auto Workers after the announcement Tuesday. "People are taking it bad."

Man indicted for fraud

AUSTIN (AP) — A Fort Bend County grand jury has returned multiple indictments charging Gary Paul Wagner of Rosenberg with fraud in the sales of securities, the state securities commissioner said Tuesday.

Commissioner Richard Latham said two six-count felony indictments charge Wagner in the sale of investment contracts in diesel fuel and the sale of securities of Fuel 'n Go Inc.

Helms, Hunt square off in Senate race; Black congresswoman upset

By MIKE SILVERMAN
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina Democrats gave Gov. Jim Hunt the go-ahead to take on Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in what could be the most expensive U.S. Senate race in history. Indiana Gov. Robert Orr won renomination, but the state's first black congresswoman was upset in the Democratic primary.

In other non-presidential primary voting Tuesday, a state senator lost his bid for the nomination to become North Carolina's first black congressman this century, and an Ohio sheriff who went to jail rather than sign home foreclosures bucked the party organization to win a Democratic congressional nomination.

The Indiana and North Carolina congressional races had been seen as tests of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's ability to draw enough voters to the polls to help other black politicians.

While Indiana Republicans gave Orr an easy primary victory, Democrats nominated state Sen. Wayne Townsend to oppose him.

In North Carolina's wide-open governor's race, Republicans nominated Rep. Jim Martin, but none of the 10 competing Democrats got a majority, so state Attorney General Rufus Edmiston and former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox will meet in a June 5 runoff.

Cleveland voters for the second time rejected a proposal to increase the city income tax rate from 2 percent to 2½ percent, and also defeated a measure that would have required hiring more police and firefighters.

nation

In Cuyahoga County, which includes Cleveland, a proposal to increase property taxes for a $150 million domed sports stadium failed.

And in Stockton, Calif., City Councilman Mark Stebbins, who claims to be "culturally, socially and genetically" black, survived a recall attempt brought by a defeated opponent — a black man who claims Stebbins is white.

Hunt and Helms, who already have raised $9.6 million between them, swept past minor challengers toward a November face-off that pits a moderate Democrat against a leader of the New Right. Both parties see the race as crucial to Republicans' efforts to maintain their 55-45 edge in the Senate.

"I'm confident that once the people of this state have examined Sen. Helms' record ... they will retire Jesse Helms from politics," said Hunt, officially accepting his rival's challenge to at least 10 debates.

Helms' campaign spokesman Claude Allen said Helms, who is seeking a third term, welcomed scrutiny of his record, and accused Hunt of waffling on issues.

Helms, 62, often derided by opponents as "Senator No," has been an outspoken foe of abortion and busing while championing school prayer, spending cuts for social programs, a hawkish defense policy and the federal tobacco support program.

Hunt, 46, supported a national Martin Luther King Jr. holiday and has appointed blacks to a number of offices including the state Supreme Court, but he takes a hard-line approach to crime, favors the death penalty and opposes a nuclear weapons freeze.

With 97 percent of the vote counted, Helms had 133,683 votes or 89 percent to 17,296 votes or 11 percent for George Wimbish, a Charlotte resident and broker-wholesaler.

Hunt had 634,504 votes or 77 percent, to 124,537 votes or 15 percent for businessman Thomas L. Allred and 63,744 votes or 8 percent for Harrill L. Jones, a civil rights activist.

In northwest Indiana's 1st District, freshman Rep. Katie Hall finished second in the race for the Democratic nomination. Returns showed Peter Visclosky, an aide to the late Rep. Adam Benjamin, with 44,712 votes, or 34.5 percent, while Mrs. Hall had 42,345 votes, 32.6 percent, and Lake County Prosecutor Jack Crawford had 40,775, 31.4 percent.

Sentiment spurs Hart's victories

NEW YORK (AP) — Anti-labor sentiment fueled Gary Hart's Democratic presidential primary victories in heavily unionized Indiana and Ohio, while Walter F. Mondale rode the support of his traditional Democratic labor-led coalition to the forefront in Maryland and North Carolina.

Mondale's strongest support in all four states Tuesday came from voters over 50, those who described themselves as committed Democrats, union members and those from lower income and education brackets.

Hart, meanwhile, continued to do best among the younger, better-educated, more independent voters who have been his strongest constituency through the primary season. The Rev. Jesse Jackson got more than 70 percent of the black vote in all four states, but again received scant support from whites.

"All three candidates are hanging onto their constituencies," Laurily Epstein, the NBC News poll consultant, said, "but none of them is breaking out and expanding, either."

A solid majority of the voters in all four states believe Mondale will win the Democratic presidential nomination over Hart, according to the polls.

However, significant minorities in all four states said they don't believe any Democrat can beat President Reagan in November.

Voters from households with at least one union member made up about 40 percent of the Ohio turnout — and the NBC News poll said Mondale was the choice of 52 percent of those people, compared with 32 percent for Hart. On the other hand, Hart had the advantage, 48 percent to 36 percent, among people from non-union households.

The ABC News poll in Ohio said Hart divided the liberal vote about evenly with Mondale, while Hart won among conservatives. A majority of the respondents in that poll said unemployment is the nation's most serious problem, and they split 41 percent for Mondale, 32 percent for Hart.

In Indiana, Mondale beat Hart by 49 percent to 37 percent among voters from union households, according to the CBS News poll.

But the NBC News poll in Indiana said almost half the respondents believe labor unions have become too powerful — and Hart beat Mondale by 2-1 among them. In addition, one in three non-union voters in Indiana said Mondale's extensive labor endorsements made them less likely to vote for him.

According to the CBS News poll in Indiana, Hart outscored Mondale by 53 percent to 29 percent among voters who described themselves as political independents, and by 52 percent to 33 percent among voters who said they approve of the job Ronald Reagan is doing as president.

Mondale's easy victory in Maryland included good showings in all demographic groups, while he was helped in North Carolina by the large turnout of older voters and people who described themselves as strong Democrats.

Voters 50 and older were 43 percent of the turnout in North Carolina, and Mondale won a majority of them. People who described themselves as strong Democrats made up about 60 percent of the North Carolina electorate, and nearly half of them went for Mondale.

The NBC News polls said 88 percent of the respondents in Maryland believe Mondale will win the nomination at the Democratic national convention in San Francisco in July, along with 79 percent in North Carolina, 78 percent in Ohio and 75 percent in Indiana.

But the same polls said that 29 percent in North Carolina, 27 percent in Maryland, 23 percent in Ohio and 19 percent in Indiana believe that no Democratic nominee can beat Reagan in November.

Mannequin 'drowns'

WINDHAM, N.H. (AP) — Rescuers responding to reports of a possible drowning breathed a sigh of relief when they found that the victim was a bullet-riddled mannequin.

The incident Monday started when two fishermen saw what they thought was a body on the bottom of the pond. Police were called to the scene and, also believing it was a person, they called the fire department and underwater rescue squad.

The victim was a bullet-riddled mannequin someone apparently used for target practice then dumped into the pond, authorities said.

Sniper wounds two people one day after army corporal kills three

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

QUEBEC (AP) — A sniper dressed in a military uniform wounded two people today, Canadian Press reported, a day after an army corporal killed three people and wounded 13 with submachine gun fire in Quebec's legislative chamber.

In today's attack, a male pedestrian was slightly wounded and a female motorist was injured in the head, either by a bullet or by fragments of glass when a bullet smashed her car window, Canadian Press quoted police as saying.

The sniper escaped, police said. The snipings occurred on the Charest Boulevard in the commercial Saint-Roch district.

There was no immediate indication that the sniper attack was connected with Tuesday's shooting in the provincial legislature.

The Canadian soldier taken into custody in the Tuesday incident, identified as Cpl. Denis Lortie, a 22-year-old supply technician, said his goal was to destroy the separatist provincial government.

The soldier, who held a sergeant-at-arms hostage for more than four hours Tuesday in the National Assembly building before surrendering, was scheduled to appear in court today.

Wearing green combat fatigues, a flak jacket, beret and ammunition belts, he was taken into custody by Quebec City police.

Tuesday's dead and injured were low-ranking legislative employees preparing for a committee meeting, rather than the top politicians who apparently were the target of the attack. Flags at the assembly building were flown at half-staff today in mourning.

Defense Department officials said Lortie was a native of Pont Rouge, Quebec, and worked at an armed forces base at Carp, Ont., just outside Ottawa, which is the government's emergency bunker and communications center for use under nuclear attack.

As a supply technician, he would have access to weapons, but no authority to take them off the base, authorities said.

City police declined to provide any information, or even confirm the identity furnished by Defense Department officials for the man being held, but a picture of Tuesday's events emerged from scattered reports from around this historic city.

At about 9:20 a.m., a man dressed in military fatigues delivered a tape recording to radio station CJRP. The cassette was in an envelope marked "D. Lortie," with a note saying to listen to it after 10 a.m.

Maritchu d'Abbadie, a newswoman at the station, said he appeared calm. The recording's criticism of the policies of Premier Rene Levesque and his Cabinet was not alarming, she said, until the speaker started saying he would destroy the government between 10 and 11 a.m.

Station employees called police, but discovered that the shooting was already underway.

Before heading to the assembly building, the gunman apparently stopped at the Citadel, an 1820 fortress built on the bluffs overlooking the St. Lawrence River.

Shots were fired at tourists by a man in military fatigues, but no one was hit and the gunman slipped away, armed forces officials said.

At about 9:45 a.m., the gunman entered the assembly building and immediately opened fire, making a group of about 50 touring schoolchildren duck for cover.

He entered the assembly chamber and continued firing the submachine gun from the speaker's chair until sergeant-at-arms Rene Jalbert walked up to him, shook hands and talked with him calmly, camerawoman Johanne Tanguay reported.

"I'm sure Mr. Jalbert saved the lives of many people who were at the mercy of the gunman," she said. Her camera recorded the events, but police seized the tape.

With Jalbert as a hostage, the gunman held out until 2:25 p.m., when he surrendered.

Assembly Speaker Richard Guay said Jalbert, a retired soldier, talked to the gunman at length and persuaded him to give up.

In the radio tape delivered to CJRP, a portion of which was later broadcast, the speaker vowed to destroy "the government in power."

India suspends construction of barbed wire fence

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India has suspended indefinitely the construction of a barbed wire fence along its border with Bangladesh following a bitter dispute over the project, officials said today.

India began fencing the 1,365-mile border in April to curb an alleged influx of illegal immigrants from Bangladesh.

The project brought protests from Bangladesh, which said the fence violates a 1974 agreement which forbids establishment of defense facilities in the border region.

The construction triggered two shooting incidents last month in which two people were killed.

Officials of the Border Security Forces said India and Bangladesh agreed in a meeting Monday to halt the fencing project temporarily.

Candidate claims plot to steal victory

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The chief opposition candidate says the slow-moving count of votes in Panama's presidential election is part of a plot by the military to steal his victory.

Both Arnulfo Arias Madrid, the opposition candidate, and Nicolas Ardito-Barletta, candidate of the militry-backed party now in power, already have claimed victory, based on unofficial returns compiled by their own parties.

There has been no firm prediction when the official results of Sunday's election will be announced.

Arias charged Tuesday that the plodding vote count was arranged by the politically powerful military in an effort to stall as long as possible and then rob him of a victory.

"The coup is on," Arias said in an interview with The Associated Press, referring to reports, denied by the military, that the armed forces will not accept another Arias presidency.

Arias, 82, has been elected president three times and toppled three times by the military, the last in 1968 when he held office only 11 days. The military leadership has been in control of non-elected governments since then.

Returns from the country's 40 election districts count have been arriving so slowly that Ismael Garcia, president of the National Tabulation Board, described the delay Tuesday as "suspicious."

But excessive bureaucracy and bickering among board members and representatives of the 14 parties that participated in the elections appeared to be the main source of delays.

By late Tuesday, with just six of the nation's 40 electoral districts counted, the tabulation board gave Ardito-Barletta a 25,941 to 21,273 edge over Arias.

Despite the official count, Ricardo Arias Calderon, head of the Christian Democratic Party and Arais' vice presidential running mate, told supporters outside opposition headquarters, "We have won vote by vote and we're not going to let them take it away from us."

At news conferences Tuesday, both Ardito-Barletta and interim President Jorge Illueca condemned Monday night's violence outside the legislative palace where the official vote count is being held.

One person was killed and at least 40 injured in the clash between supporters of Ardito-Barletta and Arias.

Egypt still dominates entertainment

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Despite its political isolation, Egypt still wields considerable influence over what ordinary people throughout the Arab world watch on television, read in their books or see in their local movie theaters.

Nearly half the 6,000 to 8,000 books published annually in the Arab world are churned out by Egypt's six major publishing houses. Egyptian films are big hits in movie houses from Morocco to the Persian Gulf, and Egyptian dramas and soap operas remain the staple fare of Arab television networks, even in countries that have little use for Cairo's politics.

Its domination of Arab culture life enables Egypt to maintain its influence in the region although most Arab governments still refuse to restore diplomatic relations that were severed because of Cairo's peace treaty with Israel.

"Cultural relations are the real ambassador that binds the Arab people," said Samia Sadek, head of Egyptian Television, which markets soap operas, religious programs, documentaries and other entertainment fare throughout the Arab world. "Egyptian artists and writers are welcomed all over the Arab world."

FOR MORE THAN a half century, Cairo — the largest city in the Arab world — has served as the Arab Hollywood, the magic place where stars live and the movies are made. Egyptian performers, like actress Faten Hammamah, the former wife of international film star Omar Sharif, or actor Mahmoud Yassine pack in audiences throughout the Middle East.

Industry sources say Cairo studios release about 50 films a year, and revenue amounts to about $10 million a year.

Entertainers from other Arab countries who want to make the big time still flock to Cairo and established stars spend much of their time here.

"Cultural ties have always been one of the strongest links between Egypt and its Arab brothers," said Film Director Salah Abu Seif. "They are continuous, even at the worst point of the political relations, and will always remain, whatever the situation."

In addition to motion pictures, Egyptian Television produces about 20 multiseries soap operas annually, marketing them throughout the region for about $200,000 to $300,000 each.

CHIEF CUSTOMERS include Bahrain, Lebanon, Algeria and various Arab states in the Persian Gulf. Algeria, one of the chief Arab critics of Egyptian foreign policy, bought $2 million worth of Egyptian programs last year, Mrs. Sadek said.

Some critics, however, chastize Egyptian film and print offerings as mediocre and staid, movies and television series are assailed as being heavy on low-brow humor, melodrama, violence and maudlin romance.

Book publishers prefer religious subjects, reprints of Arab classics or popular fiction, and textbooks which they know will turn a quick profit. Dr. Saad Hagrazy, professor of library science at Cairo University, estimated that of the 3,000 to 4,000 books published here annually, only 10 to 20 are by previously unpublished authors.

He blamed the lack of a more lively offering on high publishing costs and a limited market. Although Egypt has a population of nearly 46 million, 50 percent to 65 percent of the population cannot read. Of the rest, only a few millions can be considered frequent readers and buyers of books, Hagrazy said.

Thus, movies and television shows have traditionally played a much greater role in Egyptian life than books. With this in mind, the government normally keeps much closer tabs on what is portrayed on the screen than what is printed in books.

BOOKS ON Islamic themes must be screened by religious authorities at Al-Azhar University before they can be exported. Some controversial works, such as Mohammed Heikal's "Autumn of Fury," a critical review of the late President Anwar Sadat, have been banned in Egypt.

With films, controls are even tighter.

Censors must approve scripts and review the final production before it can be distributed. With an eye toward social sensitivities, censors routinely scratch out passionate kisses and often frown on scenes of dirty, shoeless children. Belly dancers must have their midriffs discreetly covered.

Censors aren't the only pitfall awaiting the innovative Egyptian moviemaker.

Comedian Adel Imam struck such a nerve with his starring roles in the 1983 films "The Lawyer" and "The Beggar" that he was sued by groups of lawyers and peasants. Imam won the case filed by the peasants, but was ordered by the court to pay a $10,000 fine or serve one year in jail in connection with the lawyers' suit. Imam has appealed.

THE MINISTRY of Culture in February banned all films by America's Columbia Pictures after taking umbrage over the made-for-television production, "Sadat."

"If a television series pokes fun at barbers, all barbers become angry," sighed columnist Mustafa Amin in the newspaper Al-Akhbar. "If a film ridicules undertakers, then all undertakers want to carry the writer to his grave."

Ever since Sadat relaxed censorship in the mid-1970s, some Egyptian filmmakers have tried to produce quality films and television series which reflect the realities of modern Egyptian life.

Bridge going nowhere

DONGOLA, Ill. (AP) — India has its white elephants. The Treasury Department had its Susan B. Anthony dollars. And Southern Illinois has its bridge — the bridge that goes nowhere.

For a quarter-century, the one-lane bridge crossing Interstate 57 has not led anywhere. Officials no longer even care to speculate on when it might.

"The people who designed that bridge are no longer with us," said Ted Jennings, district engineer at the state Transportations Department's Carbondale office.

There's not much likelihood of the bridge being taken down, either. It cost just $133,656 to build in 1959, but Jennings said it probably would cost $200,000 today to remove it and the access road that leads to it.

The bridge is a simple 200- to 300-foot structure with a gray rail on either side. A motorist can reach it via the access road jutting from I-57 and get a nice view of the southbound interstate traffic below. Ahead is only the side of a tree-covered hill.

The bridge was built with the idea of connecting I-57 with U.S. Highway 51 at Anna, about five miles north of the bridge, Jennings said.

The department built the bridge before it had completed the segment of I-57 in that area. Jennings said officials hoped to avoid the disruption to traffic and extra expense that would have occurred if the bridge were built later and traffic had to be rerouted.

However, Jennings said, the department never got funding for a road to Anna. "Had we gone ahead with the plans, we would have saved a lot of money and looked smart doing it."

Jennings said it might cost $15 million to $20 million to complete the road to Anna today and added, "As far as I know, there is no plan at least in the immediate future" to finish it.

Jennings said he still gets jokes about the bridge.

"I'm sure we always will," he said. "Unfortunately, it is there. I'm sure it's going to continue to cause questions."

Anyone seeking the bridge can find it with little trouble. A motorist leaving Dongola, which is 70 miles south of Mount Vernon and 350 miles south of Chicago, can get in the northbound lane of I-57 and take the first exit left. After traveling a few hundred yards down a road with piles of broken concrete on either side, he will be on the bridge.

If he steps off the bridge into the edge of the woods and looks closely he will find a small plaque on the structure. It says, "Built 1959 by the State of Illinois."

Couple finds answers to high electricity bills

SANGER, Texas (AP) — The answer to high utility bills is blowin' in the wind for Bruce and Lois McDougal of Sanger.

They installed a 100-foot windmill tower in their back yard this winter and have been producing electricity ever since.

"Soon as the wind hits eight miles per hour it starts making electricity," said McDougal, whose interest in wind power begen 10 years ago.

At the top of the tower is a 10-foot long tailpiece and three, 11½-foot blades that create a 24-foot arc.

It is designed much like the "old-fashioned windmills of long ago," he said, and can withstand winds up to 125 mph. However, when winds reach 40 mph the tail piece moves it out of direct winds so it doesn't blow apart.

It is a 10-kilowatt windmill, but the wind must be blowing at 22 mph for it to produce that amount of kilowatts an hour, he said.

Though the tower, Denton County's first electric-producing windmill, cost him more than $19,000, Mc Dougal said it should pay for itself within five years.

"If you have a $200-or-more bill a month then you are definitely in the market for a windmill," he said. "That's when it will pay off. These things have a 30-year guarantee to them."

Not only do the McDougals conserve energy by using the wind, they also have a solar-powered heating system that provides 75 percent of their hot water and 50 percent of their heat, he said.

McDougal designed the solar system and a friend improved it before the installation.

"I'm really concerned about waste," he said. "The American people are the champions of waste. This is a real throwaway society."

McDougal said the price of electricity probably will double during the next few years, increasing the value of his windmill.

"The wind and sun are about as free as you can get after you invest to get it set up," he said. "I'd rather utilize them than use up all of our natural gas. It's going to be great 10 years from now because they (manufacturers) will be able to make 15- and 20-kilowatt hour (windmills)."

A fully ripe banana is 75 percent water; the rest contains 21 percent sugar — more than any other fruit.

Obesity adds health risks for all ages

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have no argument about the advisability of avoiding obesity, both for health and cosmetic reasons. But doctors seem to make a bigger deal about this when their patient has diabetes. Why is obesity more important in these patients? — Theresa, Birmingham, Ala.

Solomon

Dear Theresa: Diabetic patients who maintain a normal weight are better able to control their blood glucose levels. Excess weight can interfere with the body's ability to convert glucose into energy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother has been told that she should have a banana every morning because she needs potassium. She doesn't like bananas or any fruit for that matter, but she does like fruit juices. Would drinking fruit juices provide a person with potassium? — Ms. E.L., Boston

Dear Ms. L.: A medium banana contains 440 milligrams of potassium. By comparison, a cup of frozen grapefruit juice, frozen orange, low-sodium tomato juice, and prune juice contain from 420 to 602 milligrams of potassium.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm not trying to be a smart aleck, but just how serious is obesity? I and many other people would enjoy rich desserts and creamy sauces and a lot of other things we do without, and I'm beginning to wonder whether depriving ourselves of these things is really worthwhile in the long run. — Mrs. S.E., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Mrs. E.: If you consider death a serious matter, then obese individuals of either sex and at any given age have a 30 percent greater risk of dying than do people of normal weight. Moreover, obesity contributes to a number of serious health problems, including heart attack, hypertension, and stroke. Even if these do not result in death, they seriously affect a person's quality of life.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please explain the relationship between peptic ulcers and the use of alcohol and coffee? I seem to be getting conflicting information about the part they play. — Doug, Bryan, Texas

Dear Doug: I'm afraid that the last work on the association between alcohol and coffee on the one hand, and peptic ulcer diseases on the other, is not yet in. Regular coffee is known to be a strong stimulant of gastric acid secretion, but so is decaffeinated coffee. Moreover, beverages such as milk and soft drinks also increase gastric acid secretion. and a recent study suggests that there might not be an association between ulcer disease and the use of either coffee or alcohol.

It seems obvious that more research is needed before a definitive answer to your question will be possible.

For Bart, Macon, Ga.: According to a study conducted in Finland, a low-fat diet can help lower blood pressure. Subjects who took part in the study and who experienced a decrease in blood pressure found that their pressures rose once more after they discontinued the low-fat diet.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Low enrollment drives student 'right up a tree'

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Richard Barrett can't understand why more people don't want to enroll at the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, and it's driven him right up a tree.

Barrett, 23, a landscape operations major, climbed a tree in front of his fraternity Monday morning and said he will stay there until Friday to try to spark some interest in the "wide range of educational opportunities" his school offers.

Enrollment has declined because people are not aware that agriculture is a wide open field, Barrett said. The school is ripe with opportunities in turf management, animal agriculture, agribusiness and landscaping, he said.

"If one person comes to Stockbridge, I guess that's successful," said the anything but out-of-his-tree senior.

The freshman class at the two-year school, associated with the state University of Massachusetts, is 154, about half the school's capacity, according to school officials.

Members of Barrett's Alpha Tau Gamma fraternity said they will send Barrett, who will sleep in a covered hammock, food and other necessities.

"I plan to do homework, reading, and maybe a little pruning, perhaps," Barrett said.

Explain action

When public employees are disciplined immediately following an election in which their boss was defeated, there's ample fodder for rumors.

Such a situation now exists at the Midland County Sheriff's Department following the election ouster of Sheriff Dallas Smith and the subsequent demotions of Chief Deputy George Thompson and Capt. Patrick Fuller. The courthouse grapevine has it that the demotions were a result of Smith's election loss and the two men's friendship with Gary Painter, the former deputy who defeated the sheriff. Maybe that's the case, but then again maybe it isn't.

Without question some elected officials will attempt to strike back at those they believe helped secure their downfall. It happens in private business and it happens in the realm of officialdom. The difference is that when one talks about public office, one is discussing an area in which the actions of elected officials are accountable to the voters of a community.

In fact, a 1982 State Attorney General's opinion says officials must disclose publically "all factual details about the incident which gave rise to disciplinary action" against public employees. That makes political retribution against employees a bit more difficult.

Sheriff Smith refused to disclose the specific reasons for the demotions of Thompson and Fuller other than to attribute them to "job performance." Later, when shown a copy of the attorney general's opinion, he said only, "Sue me."

That isn't an appropriate attitude even in the sheriff's current unpleasant situation. It only adds fuel to the fire of the rumor mill stemming from the demotions.

It may be that the sheriff has good grounds for demoting these two men and simply chose to not take the action prior to the election. If so, his timing obviously would raise questions of political retribution. It also could be that the public needs to know why the action was taken in order to determine if more severe action is justified. Or, of course, it could be that the sheriff's action wasn't warranted and the two men are being punished unjustly. At any rate the public deserves to know his reasons.

During the past election the Reporter-Telegram supported Sheriff Smith in his re-election bid. Now we believe he should explain to the voters who put him in office for his current term the reasons for the demotions of Thompson and Fuller.

The sheriff owes that to himself to stop the rumor mill. But more than that he owes an explanation to the voters of Midland County.

Another View:

Paying too much

The first impulse on learning of hefty pay hikes for many top U.S. executives, including those in the still shaky auto industry, is to condemn these increases as crass, greedy and unwarranted.

When one hears that General Motors Corp. Chairman Roger B. Smith became the first official in GM history to earn more than $1 million a year, it appears he is grossly overpaid. But, reading on, you discover that Smith's salary of $1,058,000 actually is worth far less than the $925,000 that GM Chairman Frederic Donner received in 1965.

On the other hand, there is the case of Ford Chairman Philip Caldwell, who reportedly took in $1.4 million in salary and bonuses in 1983, compared to $445,833 in 1982. That seems a little steep.

Nor are the big executive pay increases limited to just the top executives. At GM, the company paid 5,807 executives bonuses that averaged $31,289.

These large executive pay and bonus hikes could cause both Ford and GM a big headache when talks begin in July with the United Auto Workers union on a new wage contract.

UAW President Owen Bieber made this clear when he told Time magazine, "If these executives who are providing so well for themselves think for one minute that they can convince workers to do without an up-front raise this summer, they better think again."

What really makes employees and stockholders sizzle is when their top officers pay themselves handsomely even when the company is losing money or profits are dropping. In 1982, for example, Time reports that the salary of Mobil Oil Corp. Chairman Rawleigh Warner Jr. increased nearly 36 percent, to $1.4 million, even though Mobil's earnings fell.

But if a chief executive is a star performer for a large company, shouldn't he be worth as much as a TV anchorman, or a professional baseball, football or basketball player?

For example, Apple Computer directors are happy to have paid John Sculley $1.8 million last year in his first seven months as president because he reorganized the company's product line and successfully directed the marketing of two new computers. The chairman of Apple, Steven Jobs, says of Sculley, "He's a bargain at the price."

People generally are paid what they're worth. Although it does seem a little strange that NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw, who makes a reported $2.2 million a year, is paid almost three times as much as his boss, RCA Chairman Thornton Bradshaw.

JACK ANDERSON

Commander Zero leading rebels

WASHINGTON — The most ferocious assault by the guerrilla campaign against the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua was led by one of its former heroes, the legendary Eden Pastora. He was known as "Commander Zero" in the civil war that drove out Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979.

Jack Anderson

The charismatic Pastora captured the Caribbean port of San Juan del Norte and held it for three days last month. It was the first time any anti-Sandinista guerrilla force had driven government troops out of a town of any size in the 2-year-old battle against the Marxist government.

My roving reporter, Jon Lee Anderson, accompanied Pastora's young guerrillas during the three-day siege. He was the only reporter in the front lines. Here is his cabled account of the fighting:

The first thing Anderson noticed was that Pastora's little force had acquired some formidable U.S. weapons since the last time he traveled with them a few months ago. Gleaming new anti-aircraft guns were deployed at Pastora's jungle bases on the San Juan River. Most of the guerrillas carried American-made M14 automatic rifles. His lieutenants acknowledged that the rebel group had received a "huge shipment" of weapons and ammunition from "the Americans" a month earlier.

Pastora's men sneaked into position and opened fire on the garrison at 4:30 p.m. on April 10. My reporter joined them early the next morning and spent seven long hours hugging the ground with a small squad of guerrillas. They were pinned down behind two large trees about 200 yards from the defenders' trenches.

The only way to reach the protective cover of the trees was across an open meadow exposed to enemy fire. One young guerrilla, killed by a shot through the throat, was being carried out for burial as my reporter arrived.

After several hours of stalemate, the squad's fierce-looking Panamanian leader, Mayo, led a patrol out to silence the sniper who had killed their comrade. About an hour later, they came scrambling back, out of breath and drenched with sweat.

One young guerrilla had just been shot through the cheek, throat and chest and was covered with blood. With buddies on each side, he was dashed across the deadly clearing into the forest to a dugout canoe on the river some 10 minutes away. He would be taken to the medical center for treatment by five volunteer doctors.

One rebel in his 20s, holding a heavy machine gun, smoked marijuana and cracked jokes as bullets whizzed over his head. A less sanguine rookie, sick with fear, retched into the jungle foliage.

Mayo, the squad leader, enraged at being unable to locate the sniper, marched out nearly a dozen times into the open and fired his 80mm recoilless rifle, then ducked back as bullets flew around him.

A few feet from my reporter, Manuel, a favorite of Pastora and one of his elite guards, took a bullet in the belly and collapsed in the lap of a boy no more than 16. He squirmed in agony, stared into the boy's face and said, "Little brother, I die."

As he was carried back, Manuel asked one of his buddies to put him out of his misery with a bullet in the head. The friend refused, and Manuel suffered through another 40 minutes before reaching the medical unit.

He died early the next morning from internal bleeding — one of nine Pastora guerrillas killed in the fight for San Juan del Norte.

The Sandinista defenders paid a heavier price. Anderson counted the rotting bodies of 14 government soldiers in the trenches where they had died. Nearby lay the half-burned body of the presumed sniper, whom the rebels refused to bury.

Strangely, there was little outward hostility between winners and losers after the town was taken on Friday the 13th, even though about 40 government militiamen defiantly wore their red-and-black Sandinista bandanas. Disarmed, they were allowed to wander the streets of the wrecked town.

The Sandinista prisoners expressed wonder that they hadn't had their ears cut off and their throats slit, as their senior officers had warned them would happen if they were captured. Instead, Pastora tried to persuade the young soldiers that the Sandinistas had betrayed the revolution, and that their best bet would be to join his army.

After trying in vain to arrange a prisoner exchange by means of a field radio, Pastora packed up his 26 wounded and his 57 prisoners and evacuated San Juan del Norte. Though his anti-aircraft batteries had driven off Sandinista planes throughout the weekend, a steadily growing flotilla of government boats stood offshore and traded machine gun and mortar fire with the guerrillas.

When word arrived on Monday that a large contingent of government troops had landed in Soviet-made helicopters on the coast north of town, Pastora realized it was time to pull out.

He vowed he would be back.

DEFERRING TO NO. 1: Since Al Haig left town, there's no doubt who's in charge at the White House. According to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, the single telephone in the Cabinet room rang one day before President Reagan had arrived to start the meeting. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the waiter to pick it up and say the president wasn't there. None of the other Cabinet members felt they had the right to field a call meant for the boss.

EDWIN FEULNER

Don't turn back on Salvadorans

Yes, El Salvador is in the midst of a revolution, not in the Communist sense, but in the pure sense of the word — a dramatic transition from one form of government to another.

Edwin Feulner

The large turnout for the recent elections is proof that the Salvadoran people want a democratic government which protects their rights and guarantees them the right to elect their own leaders. It would be naive, of course, to think this Latin American backwater will have U.S.-style democracy anytime soon. But still, the Salvadoran people know what it means to have a choice — and they're willing to die for that right.

At the same time, there is a massive amount of misinformation pouring into this country about the situation in El Salvador. Much of it is a result of the activities of the Committee in Support of the People of El Salvador (to which few, if any, Salvadorans belong), the World Peace Council, an arm of the Kremlin's propaganda machine, and a potpourri of leftist banner-carriers reliving the Vietnam era.

In reality, only about 10,000 people out of Salvador's population of five million are thought to be involved in the guerrilla movement. However, what makes this small group of guerrillas dangerous is the fact that their political terror activities are supported — directly and indirectly — by Cuba, Nicaragua and the Soviet Union. And the one thing most Salvadorans don't want is to become another Nicaragua — where a militantly Marxist revolutionary government runs a Latin police state that must be the envy of Moscow.

Some Americans, unfortunately, hold the Salvadoran people in contempt. There are those among us who feel one needs a Harvard Ph.D. to really appreciate democracy and the rule of law (and there aren't too many Harvard grads toiling over the land in El Salvador). To them the struggle in Salvador is a mere peasant uprising, as the leftist guerrillas attempt to "liberate" the country from its oppressive past. It's similar to Vietnam, they say.

Unfortunately, if we cut off U.S. aid as some in Congress are advocating, El Salvador probably will become another Vietnam. The Communists will take over; dissidents will be killed or driven out; and the U.S. will have another flood of unwilling refugees on its hands.

President Reagan is right, of course. Continued U.S. aid is vital in stemming the spread of communism in Central America.

A group of Salvadoran students recently in Washington told us that many of the horror stories repeated in the U.S. media about their country are simply not true. They said most of the voters in El Salvador understand the dilemma facing their country and cast ballots because not voting would be a vote for the guerrillas.

Certainly the Salvadoran political system and its institutions and people are not as sophisticated as those here at home. After all, the Salvadoran people by and large are peasants. They are struggling to survive — as people, as a nation.

Which probably makes it all the more important that we don't turn our backs on them. It's easy to feel morally superior; it's more difficult to help.

ART BUCHWALD

Corned beef index still climbing!

The president keeps saying that inflation is way down, and he has government statistics to prove it. But if it is, President Reagan doesn't buy his corned beef sandwiches from the same delicatessen I do.

Art Buchwald

In 1980 a corned beef sandwich on rye at Ben's cost me $1.50, including a nice large slice of dill pickle. The same sandwich today costs $3, although I've noticed the rye bread slices are smaller and the pickle is much thinner.

"How come," I asked Ben, "if Reagan says he's cut down inflation to five percent, your corned beef sandwich costs twice as much a it did when he took office?"

Ben was steaming. "If you think I'm making more money on a $3 sandwich than I was when it was $1.50 then you're crazy."

"According to the Department of Agriculture, food prices have been holding steady."

"I don't know from food prices," Ben said. "But there is more that goes into a corned beef sandwich than bread, beef and Russian dressing."

"What's that?"

"City taxes, Social Security and health benefits for my employees. My electric bill looks like monthly rent, and my telephone bill now looks like my electric bill. How come those hot shot statisticians in the government don't take those things into account before they publish their figures?"

"Don't get mad at me, Ben. I was curious as to why your prices had doubled in a period of single-digit inflation."

I apparently opened a can of beans. Ben said, "You see that pipe up there that is leaking? In 1980 the plumber charged me $30 to walk in the door. Now he wants $60. So what does a government computer know about plumbers?"

Ben lifted one foot over the counter. "I bought these shoes last week. They cost me $75. The same shoe two years ago cost $45. Why don't you ask a shoe-store owner why it costs $30 more if inflation is so low?"

I tried to change the subject. "How's your wife?"

"She just got out of the hospital. Her room cost $400 a day. The same room three years ago cost $190. They threw in a television set free then. Now they charge $5 a day for it. The doctor used to charge $25 a visit. Now you have to pay $50 up front, and wait twice as long to see him. That all goes into the price of a corned beef sandwich.

"You want to know about my kid? In 1980 his tuition was $6,000. This year it's up to $9,000. It's a bargain compared to how much more I'm paying for his automobile insurance. The president says interest rates are down to 11.5 percent. Maybe for Ed Meese. But own a delicatessen and see if you can get a loan for less than 14.5 percent. Put that in your corned beef sandwich and eat it."

"The price of gas is down," I said.

"So how come the guy who supplies my corned beef is now charging 20 percent more for delivering it? You see this brown bag? It isn't even made by human beings any more. It's made by robots. Every six months it goes up two cents."

"I'm sure everything you say is true, Ben," I told him, "but government statistics don't lie. Reagan has cooled inflation and he has the printouts to prove it."

"Then why has my laundry bill for aprons risen 15 percent?"

"Probably because aprons aren't included in the price index."

"Nothing that goes up seems to be included in the price index. If you want to make a big deal about what I'm charging now compared to 1980, why has the price of the Sunday paper you write for gone up 25 percent?"

"That's simple. We had to raise it, or no one on our staff could afford your corned beef sandwiches."

Grand jury indicts two in abuse case at state school

FORT WORTH (AP) — A grand jury has indicted two Fort Worth State School employees for beating two retarded boys and has recommended that the school review its procedures for reporting and investigating abuse cases.

Angela Culton and Sheila Jenkins, both 24, were indicted Tuesday on two counts of injuring a child in the Feb. 27 beatings of Chris Cockerham and Chuck Money.

They face up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Bond was set at $1,000.

The indictments capped a one-month grand jury investigation that started after Cockerham's father, Harold Cockerham of Dallas, said that during a visit to the school he found his son bruised.

Attorneys for religious worker question U.S. immigration officials

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Attorneys defending a Colorado religious worker accused of conspiring to transport two Salvadoran illegal aliens were to continue questioning Immigration and Naturalization Service officials today.

On Tuesday, Stacey Lynn Merkt, 29. took the stand in her own defense. She told jurors she participated in the trip because she considered the two Salvadorans political refugees, not illegal aliens as the government maintains.

Ms. Merkt, of Colorado Springs, Colo. was arrested Feb. 17 with a nun, a reporter, two Salvadorans and a Salvadoran infant.

All three Americans were charged with conspiracy to transport illegal aliens. Ms. Merkt is the only one to stand trial.

If found guilty, she faces a maximum 15 years prison sentence and a $6,000 fine.

Charges against Dallas Times Herald reporter Jack Fischer were never presented to the grand jury. Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp, of Fort Wayne, Ind., who was driving the car, was given a year's probation in exchange for cooperating with the government.

Ms. Merkt said she agreed to help Mauricio Valle, Brenda Sanchez-Galan and her 18-month-old daughter travel to San Antonio because she believed they were refugees whose lives were in danger in El Salvador. She said in San Antonio they had a chance to apply for asylum without suffering incarceration.

Stacey Lynn Merkt

She said Salvadorans applying to the INS district director in Harlingen are arrested and sent to the federal detention camp in Los Fresnos. They remain there for months, unless they can post bond, while their papers are processed, she said.

Defense attorneys also called immigration lawyers from Houston, San Antonio and Harlingen. They testified that asylum applicants in other INS districts are not arrested when they apply for asylum as they are in the Rio Grande Valley.

INS District Director Hal Boldin testified Tuesday afternoon that he has not granted a single asylum application in two years.

Boldin said that if Valle had applied in person for asylum in Harlingen, he would have been arrested and recommended for deportation.

Boldin was to be cross-examined this morning.

Defense attorneys have subpoened the INS district director from Houston to testify after Boldin.

Under cross-examination by Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Guerra, Ms. Merkt admitted that she knew the Salvadorans had entered the country illegally, but had accompanied them on the drive to San Antonio anyway.

"Do you feel that as a Christian you have the right to violate the law of the United States?" Guerra asked.

"I'm responsible to two things," replied Ms. Merkt. "Number one to God and number two to the government of the United States."

"I don't feel I have violated any law here, either God's or the United States'."

Ms. Merkt maintains the Salvadorans are here legally as political refugees protected by the Refugee Act of 1980, which says political asylum may be extended to anyone who fears persecution in their homeland for reasons of race, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political opinion.

What's pressure?

MC Freshman impervious to perils

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Liz Burris should be shaking in her tennis sneakers, along about this time.

The Midland College freshman is about to lead the Chaparrals' women's tennis team into the National Junior College Athletic Association championships at Ocala, Fla. starting Monday.

That constitutes a lot of pressure for a teenager. Still, anyone who loves to wade off shore at night to fish in the Gulf Coast surf and admits she sometimes feels sharks brush against her legs, isn't likely to scare easily.

As far as Coach Joe Williams is concerned, the more pressure on Liz the better. "Strong pressure doesn't bother her. In fact, she seems to get a lift under tougher conditions."

That's something that doesn't necessarily go inherently with talent. "A lot of good athletes just don't respond to pressure. She does."

WILLIAMS feels his Chaps have a chance to win it all and Liz has a chance to win the No. 1 singles and team up with Nicole Barrett to win the No. 1 doubles. And his confidence is based on more than Liz' ability to respond to challenges.

Last year she won the Texas Class 4A singles championships while compiling a 32-2 record at Friendswood High School.

She is ranked No. 7 in state junior singles and 92nd nationally.

"Dr. Raymond Yell, who has followed Midland College tennis closely over the years, says, 'As far as a pure freshman athlete, she is easily the best women's athlete we've ever recrcuited,' and he has seen them all," says the first-year Chap coach.

It was because her father has been one of the top players in Texas in his age bracket for the last five years that indirectly led to Liz coming from the Houston area to West Texas. Joe met her dad in the state finals of the 35-and-over division at Dallas last summer.

SHE LIKES West Texas. "We have wind at home, but not like this...still, the school is nice, we can play every day. When it is too bad to play outside, we can use the indoor courts at the Midlander."

This won't be her first trip to Florida. She has been there for the junior nationals four of the last five years.

"I've learned responsibility at MC and how to budget my time and money," says Burris. "I've also changed from a two-handed to a one-handed back shot."

Strangely enough, one of her two toughest opponents in nationals will be Sandra Segulinski of South Plains College. They have split in four matches and Liz has enjoyed her best success against the Yugoslavian on the slower courts, which is the surface they'll be playing on in Florida.

"On the slower surface I can set up my ground strokes and my drop shots are more effective," she analyzes.

"I'm excited and I feel the team can win nationals," says the 5-8, 135-pounder who compiled a 22-6 singles record this year.

After that, it will be a summer on the junior tour—San Francisco, Memphis, Chicago and, if she plays well, the nationals again. In the fall, she plans to return for her second year at MC.

Players ranked in the top 10 in the state have their air fare paid for by the Texas Tennis Association. Once on location, they billet in private homes.

WILLIAMS points out that his star pupil has the grades to go anywhere she wants and the ability to play "even as a freshman at Texas in the four, five or six spots. She is only 18, but is mature and a team leader. She has the talent to fill the prima donna role on the team, but Liz is also easy to coach and receptive to instruction."

As proof that Burris is capable of traveling in fast company, Williams notes that she beat Lisa Riekohl, TCU, ranked in the NCAA's top 50; and Carole Hegler, No. 1 at Hardin-Simmons, and Astrid Semde, the girl from Norway who is Tyler JC's No. 1.

"One of her best matches was a loss to Mary Boudreaux of Oklahoma State. Mary is ranked in the NCAA's top 15 and Liz pushed her in losing 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

THE UNIVERSITY of Houston, Oklahoma State, TCU and Northeast Louisiana, all with strong tennis programs, have recruited her, but Liz right now is leaning toward Trinity University in San Antonio, where she plans to pursue marketing research and advertising as well as tennis.

Williams believes the potential for a pro career is there, but it will "take even more dedication and sacrifice. She enjoys tennis, but she also likes to do other things."

One of them is fishing for sharks or stingrays at the family's Galveston Beach house. "The best time is at night," she says. "We wade out in the surf and sometimes you can feel the sharks brush against your legs as they come in to shore to feed."

Homers not enough as Rebels lose, 5-3

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee had the home runs but Lubbock Monterey "had everything else, the strikeouts, the fielding, the hits...," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson Tuesday after the Plainsmen posted a 5-3 bi-district victory over the Rebels here at Lowery Field.

The home run ball was nearly the only kind of hit the Rebels could collect in the opening game of the best-of-three series and, though it was good for an early lead, it wasn't enough for the victory.

With two gone in the top of the first inning, Rebel catcher Jimmy Phillips turned a 0-2 count into a walk and then rounded the bases ahead of designated hitter Steve Woodlee whose towering blast over the left field fence gave Lee a 2-0 lead.

Monterey cut the margin to one in the bottom of the frame when center fielder Billy Lance stroked a two-out single up the middle, went to second on a stolen base and to third when catcher Jimmy Simpson reached first on Keith McDonald's bobble at shortstop. With Curtis Hogan at the plate, Simpson stole second and Lance, on Phillips' throw, used his sprinter's speed to steal home.

In the home second, Scott Smith led off with the first of his two triples and knotted the score when third baseman Paul Colwell let the relay throw from right field get by. An infield single by Mike Eckles followed by a Brian Christensen sacrifice bunt and a Kevin Short RBI single made it 3-2.

In the third, Lance hit his second single and used his speed to pick up his third stole base. A strikeout and walk later, Smith tripled to center for two runs.

Dennis Matta gave the Rebel renewed hope in the top of the fifth with a line drive home run to left field. It was, however, Lee's fourth and last hit.

MONTEREY PITCHER Kevin Short, a lefty who hasn't pitched in three weeks because "he has trouble in the playoffs," according to Plainsmen coach Bobby Moegle, didn't seem effected by the layoff. Not only did he hold Lee to four hits but struck out eight and walked two.

"Short pitched real good," said Johnson. "He pitched at us, he didn't just throw the ball. He used the change up well and had great control."

Lee's Bryan Willis wasn't that far off Short's pace. In six innings, the Rebel righthander gave up seven hits, struck out six and walked one.

Farias, Garnett top Lee athletes

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

After a while, it might have been better to rename the night's festivities "The Felicia Farias Show".

Actually, the occasion was the 23rd annual Midland Lee High School sports banquet at the LHS cafeteria. But Farias, who graduates this month as the only athlete in the school's history with 10 varsity letters, was honored at almost every opportunity.

She was named the school's outstanding female athlete, and Isaac Garnett was selected as the outstanding male athlete of the year.

Garnett captained Lee's state runnerup football team, and, were it not for a rare bad day last month would have qualified for the regional track meet in the shotput. As it is, Garnett leaves LHS with a legacy of excellence in his wake. He nabbed All-everything honors in football and is bound for a collegiate athletic experience at Texas Tech.

FARIAS AND Garnett were runaway winners of the outstanding athlete honors. Farias' 10 L's signify the end of an era, especially where Coach Shirley Stephenson's basketball team is concerned. Farias and Co. were knocked out in a first round state playoff game, but the resilient Farias parlayed her basketball skills and intellect (Farias carries a 3.8 grade point average) into an athletic scholarship to North Texas State this year. Farias is being considered as a guard for major college basketball.

The awards ceremonies honored Lee athletes in basketball, track, golf, swimming, tennis, gymnastics and volleyball. Conspicously absent from the affair were members of the Rebel baseball team, in Lubbock for a playoff game. The team's playoff venture was easily acknowledged by a fan following that in 1983-84 came to expect the very best out of Lee's athletes.

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

Helpful hints in selecting seafood

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

Seafood shoppers can make wiser purchases at the market if they are aware of a few basic facts.

Annette Reddell Hegen, Texas Agricultural Extension service seafood specialist, points out: "The consumer's skill in selecting seafood has much to do with his or her success in preparing the dish."

Tips she offers to help consumers find good buys at the seafood counter:

Whole fish: Scales tightly attached, firm pink flesth, mild and fresh odor, clear bulging eyes, reddish-pink gill area.

Fillets or steaks: Firm flesh with translucent-like appearance, mild and fresh odor, no separation of flesh, no signs of freezer burn or bruising.

Shrimp:Head firmly attached to tail, no discoloration of flesh, fresh sweet odor, no coloration associated with cooked shrimp, translucent rather than opgaque in appearance.

Oysters: Shells tightly closed is alive, (discard if shells gap open and do not close when tapped) clear, thin liquor, no ammonia like odor, plump with no extraneous material.

Crab meat: Free of shell and cartilage if picked, sweet odor, alive if uncooked and in shell; bright orange and chilled if cooked in shell.

All seafoods are extremely perishable and must be maintained at a low temperature. Store seafoods at 35 degrees F. in the coldest part of the refrigerator, on the bottom shelf where the two walls meet.

IN THE WILD

Best Outdoor magazines

By ROLLA WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

Some of the most valuable and readable fish and game information these days is printed in the various state and private organization journals concerned with the wildings of the streams and forests. The pictures in most are stunning.

Of particular merit are the state conservation magazines of New York, Idaho, Wyoming, Washington, Colorado, Texas and Nebraska.

Most of the meritorious state magazines, while informing readers of the various seasons, bag limits and hunt results with regularity, seem particularly aimed at those who want considerably more than how to.

Some have camera departments and, generally, in season, there's a bare bones discussion of handling game in the field.

NON-GAME species are big in such magazines, and the use of color in promoting state projects is immense. Wyoming Wildlife states its premise in this fashion: "Dedicated to the proper development and maintenance of all of the wildlife of the state on a sustained yield basis for the best public interest."

Included among the exceptional publications, aside from the so-called "Big Three," Sports Afield, Field and Stream and Outdoor Life, are Ducks Unlimited, dedicated to dues-paying waterfowlers, and National (and International) Wildlife, the journals offered to members of the National Wildlife Federation.

Once an outdoorsman-woman could read the three most popular outdoors magazines and figure he-she was well informed about hunting and fishing matters. No longer.

Last month, Idaho saluted its entries in its state photo contest under the heading, "Encounters of the Wild Kind." The editor found state poems to illustrate the photos and found quotes from Ernest Hemingway, Ted Trueblood and even Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce — all intimately associated with Idaho history — to tie into the pictures.

THE CHIEF Joseph quotation was tied to a stunning green, gold, blue and black picture (by Rodney Denning, White Bird) of a mountain storm scene with a jagged flash of lightning running across one corner:

"You might as well expect the rivers to run backwards as that any man who was born a free man should be contented when penned up and denied liberty to go where he pleases. ...

"Let me be a free man — free to travel, free to stop, free to work, free to trade where I choose, free to choose my own teachers, free to follow the religion of my fathers, free to talk and think and act for myself — and I will obey every law, or submit to the penalty."

New York's Conservationist concentrated on winter snow as a seasonal topic: Specifically, on snowshoeing, on the mysteries of bear denning, what happens beneath the snow, the lake in winter. As always, it is splendidly edited, marvelously illustrated while still promoting the projects its state Department of Environmental Conservation deems worthy.

Ducks Unlimited takes the reader on a visit to its DUMAC projects in Mexico, has a woman writer interview five women duck hunters, reviews Kansas City's National Wildlife Art Show, reprints a farewell to a beloved duck-retrieving Lab and follows Theodore Roosevelt as he bird hunts the North Dakota Bad Lands.

COLORADO Outdoors keeps the reader abreast of the fast-rising tax "check-off" system, a technique states have commenced using to finance non-game projects apart from hunting and fishing license fees.

California starts this practice this tax year and likely, in its first effort, will raise even more money for its rare, endangered and protected species than even New York's $1.5 million of calendar 1982.

Almost every issue of Texas Outdoors adds another chapter of progress in the state's unique saltwater hatchery program, a plan which California is wooing with its new "Saltwater Enhancement" stamp. And what about antlers — or horns, as the hunters mistakenly call most of them?

This magazine had a complete and splendidly illustrated story about the subject and why some grow large with many points and others small with few. It was intensely interesting to a person concerned about deer and "horns."

Lakers expel Mavs, 115-99

By Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers didn't want to go back to Dallas . . . and as a result made sure that Dallas wasn't going anywhere else in the NBA playoffs.

"We were committed not to go back to Dallas," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, whose Lakers made sure they wouldn't with a 115-99 victory over the Mavericks Tuesday night that sewed up their best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series in five games.

NBA Playoffs

The Lakers thus became the first team to advance to their conference finals. They'll meet the winner of the Phoenix-Utah series. The Jazz staved off elimination with a 118-106 victory Tuesday night and now trail the Suns 3-2 in the best-of-seven series with Game 6 scheduled for Thursday night in Phoenix.

The Milwaukee Bucks beat the New Jersey Nets 94-82 to take a 3-2 lead in their Eastern Conference semifinals.

Mike McGee paced Los Angeles with 27 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 14 points and 15 assists in the victory that gave the Lakers the series.

Utah 118, Phoenix 106

Adrian Dantley scored 31 points in the first half and 46 points overall as Utah defeated Phoenix in a do-or-die game.

Dantley scored 10 of his points in the fourth quarter, when Phoenix had erased what once was a 23-point Jazz lead early in the game to trail by a mere five points with 2:55 left.

The Suns got 19 points from Kyle Macy and Maurice Lucas.

Milwaukee 94, New Jersey 82

Alton Lister scored seven of his 17 points in the fourth period to help Milwaukee beat New Jersey. Milwaukee held a 72-61 lead after three periods, but the Nets, behind guard Darwin Cook's seven points, trimmed the margin to 73-70 with 8:49 left in the game.

Longhorns 2nd in college poll

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State remained No. 1 and Texas continued to hold second place in college baseball rankings released by the Collegiate Baseball newspaper.

The Sun Devils, 46-16, were led by centerfielder Oddibe McDowell, at .403 with 21 home runs, including four homers against Stanford last weekend.

The rankings were announced Tuesday.

Arizona State had five players with 11 or more home runs so far this season. Through the weekend, the Sun Devils had 97 homers in 66 games, compared with 56 in 68 games last year.

The second-place Longhorns, 51-12, were followed by Oklahoma State, 48-11, up from sixth to third; North Carolina, 42-9, down from third to fourth, and Fresno State, 48-10-2, from eighth to fifth.

Mississippi State, 40-12, fell from fourth to sixth; California St.-Fullerton, 51-18, dropped from fifth to seventh; Florida, 40-13, rose from 11th to eighth; San Diego State, 60-18, improved from 13th to ninth, and Oklahoma, 39-11, slipped to 10th from seventh.

Tigers go 13-0 in road games

By The Associated Press

Alan Trammell jolted Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry with a grand slam home run in the seventh inning Tuesday night, boosting Detroit to a 5-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals and hiking the Tigers' road record to 13-0.

The Tigers, whose 24-4 mark is the best in the major leagues, are only three victories away from the all-time American League record for consecutive road victories set by the 1912 Washington Senators.

The Royals, who have lost six in a row, led 2-0 after six innings. But Larry Herndon singled leading off the Detroit seventh and took third on a single by Darrell Evans. After Chet Lemon singled Herndon home, Bud Black, 3-2, struck out Kirk Gibson and retired Tom Brookens on a pop-up but walked Lou Whitaker to load the bases.

Quisenberry, whose seven saves lead the league, came in and served up Trammell's third career grand slam.

Detroit's Jack Morris, 6-1, scattered seven hits to become the first six-game winner in the majors.

In other American League games, Dave Kingman's RBI single with two outs in the ninth gave the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners. Kingman's third hit of the day came after Henderson stole second as Oakland defeated Seattle in the ninth inning for the second straight game.

Marv Foley's two-run homer in the sixth inning lifted the Texas Rangers to a 4-3 come-from-behind victory over the Boston Red Sox behind the seven-hit pitching of Charlie Hough and Odell Jones.

Frank Viola limited California to four hits, Tom Brunansky and Tim Laudner homered and Kirby Puckett tied a modern major-league record with four hits in his first game as the Minnesota Twins blanked the California Angels 5-0.

Puckett became the sixth rookie player in American League history to collect four hits in a nine-inning game. The last to do it was Boston's Ted Cox in 1977. It has been accomplished three times in the National League since 1900, although Louisville's Fred Clarke had five hits in a nine-inning game in 1894 and Washington's Cecil Travis debuted with five hits in a 12-inning game in 1933.

Two AL games were rained out — Toronto at Baltimore and Cleveland at New York.

In the National League, pinch-hitter Keith Moreland's tie-breaking single in the bottom of the ninth inning boosted the Chicago Cubs to a 12-11 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Keith Woodlee of Midland Lee dives back into first base to beat pickoff throw from Monterey pitcher in playoff action at Lubbock.

Lee honors athletes

The athletic year was unparalleled in Reb history. Beginning with the state-wide exploits of the football team, whom Stephenson credited as inspiring to her team, Lee teams claimed playoff berths in six sports.

Farias and cager Robert Lowe were also honored with a special award for their excellence in the classroom as well as in athletics. Lowe owns a 4.4 GPA.

"IT WAS a banner year," said boys basketball coach and master of ceremonies Paul Stueckler. "These people paid the price. The friendships they made through athletics are special. They learned to draw on each other, and that's what being on a team is all about."

Stueckler lauded his team with "turning around from the season before." A 3-27 disaster of 1983 became a near-playoff entry in 1984 with mostly underclassmen. Stueckler named Victor Brown the team's defensive ace, and Paul Dacus as the year's Fighting Warrior.

In all, over 100 letters were awarded to Lee's senior class of 1984.

"What a fun year it's been," Stephenson said. "I can't tell you how enjoyable this group was. If you didn't see us play this year you missed a lot."

One person who missed a lot was Stephenson's own player, Tunya Mayberry. Mayberry, who developed into a solid player, missed the banquet, which gave Stephenson a license to comment. "She did a fantastic job and was All-District, but she has a memory problem. We were playing one of our most important games," Stephenson related. "She's always forgetting her shoes, or her uniform, or a book, or something. Well, at the end of the third quarter in this very big game, the buzzer sounds and I'm giving instructions to the team. I look up and Tunya's looking around with this kind of blank look on her face as if something's wrong. I ask her what's going on and she says, "You mean...it ain't over?

"I hope she didn't forget about the banquet."

Stephenson, adding to Farias' list, gave her player the coach's award for outstanding performance for the second straight year.

Cooper downs Plainview, 9-2

From Staff Reports

PLAINVIEW — Abilene Cooper took care of Plainview's home field advantage in Tuesday's first game of the bi-district playoffs, posting a 9-2 victory here.

The Cougars scored three runs in the first, fourth and seventh.

Joby Hill, 8-0, went the distance, giving up only six hits.

The series moves to Abilene for an if necessary doubleheader on Friday at 2 p.m. If the Cougars win, they claim the title. Should they lose, a second game will be played.

The loss dropped Plainview to 29-8.

Minors get voice

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — One of the country's largest public relations firms has been secured to promote the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, which groups minor league teams.

"Minor league baseball is experiencing a major renaissance ... and we have decided to tell people that," Johnny Johnson, minor league president, said Tuesday.

Willis to face Eckles here Friday

"I really think that (Rodney) Jinks from Dallas Thomas Jefferson (the only team to beat Monterey this year in a 27-2 season) pitched at us better than Willis, but Willis is the only one that begins to compare. Willis is a great pitcher and I thought we did a good job of hitting him."

"I thought I did a pretty good job considering this team is as great as it is," said Willis. "I don't think we played hard enough and we didn't get the clutch hits when we needed them."

WOODLEE, WHO has three home runs this year, was the only Rebel with more than one hit, adding a single to his first inning homer.

"I think I hit lefthanded pitching better. I could see his curve ball," said Woodlee, Lee's leading hitter this year with a .405 average going into bit-district. "I think everybody should have hit him because he didn't throw much speed and his curve hung up there. Willis pitched a good game. We should come back with hitting in the next one, our pitching was there."

Lee will be facing Monterey's No. 2 pitcher in the first game 2 p.m. Friday, Eckles, while countering with Willis again.

"If his arm's all right, Willis will start," said Johnson.

Willis said his arm felt fine after the game and he's ready for a second shot. "I'm ready to take them on again. Maybe next time we'll get a few more runs ahead and they won't be able to catch us."

Jackson wins in 14 innings

By The Associated Press

After 14 innings, it was Jackson shortstop Al Pedrique's fifth hit of the game that finally wrapped up a 7-6 victory over Arkansas in a Texas League marathon baseball game.

His single scored Billy Bean, who had gotten on base on an error. The run made a winner of Rick Myles, one of four pitchers for the East Division leaders. Pat Perry, one of five Arkansas hurlers, was the loser.

El Paso derailed West Division pace-setter Beaumont 5-2, Shreveport thumped Tulsa 13-3.

Shreveport got nine of its 13 runs against Tulsa in the fifth inning, when 15 batters went to the plate.

Beaumont had a 2-1 lead over El Paso going into the sixth inning, but Mike Felder's two-run single highlighted a three-run sixth that gave El Paso a 4-2 lead that stood up, giving Rich Buonantony his second victory in three decisions. Dale Sveum went 2-for-4 and batted in one run, while Steve Michael went 2-for-3 with a double and an RBI.

Phone sales offers challange

Small business takes on AT&T

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Oil Writer

SMALL BUSINESS PROFILE

In an industry where AT&T dominates the business telephone market with a 90 percent share, independent companies like Executone of the Permian Basin Inc. must be that much more aggressive in trying to win its share of the remaining 10 percent.

The Midland-based company is a distributorship of parent company Executone Inc. which designs and manufactures telephone systems. Based in New York, the parent company has more than 130 distributor outlets, including Midland, in which to market its products.

With nationwide sales of $140 million in 1982 and $400 million in 1983, the parent company claims to be the largest independent designer and marketer of business telephone systems.

Founded in 1936 and until 1972 when it actively entered the phone market, Executone primarily manufactured and sold intercom systems.

Although they are part of a nationwide company, the Permian Basin firm is a small business which cares about its customers, according to Mark Kimball, one of two partners in the company.

Kimball along with Danny Fisher, "hit the ground running" almost two years ago. Being small businessmen in Midland has fulfilled an old, strong desire for both men.

For Kimball it was an opportunity to be truly independent and for Fisher it was the challenge.

"Small businesses tend to be more vulnerable to drastic changes in economic conditions. They must be aware of this and be prepared to weather the storm. Because of the number of small businesses in this community or in any community, you have to work that much harder to make yourself known in town," Fisher said.

Industry statistics indicate that in 1969 there were 12 major telephone equipment manufacturers compared to today's 1,500.

Size of the competition has not deterred Kimbal or Fisher, they said.

The two agreed the main hurdles they faced initially was overcoming the consumers'reluctance to invest in a system that could wind up being outdated tomorrow, and breaking away from the phone company everyone grew up with.

Although these problems still exist in some form, Kimball said, customers have become more receptive to their products.

"While some are concerned that new technology will soon outdate their existing equipment, in actuality, that can't happen,because independent companies like Executone can only be as advanced as the public phone company," Kimball said.

To make their company different from the competition Kimball and Fisher try to sell the entire firm "as opposed to companies which sell only their products."

"We have the technology and the experience to sell and we back that up with parts and service after the sale. Another thing we try to do is not allow people to over buy. We help them analyze their needs now and for the future and then recommend a phone system which will meet and adapt to those needs."

The duo believes they have the best of both worlds. As a small company they can incorporate ideas faster than a larger company.

"We have the benefit and expertise of a national organization, yet we are also a small local business which is vitally interested in the community," said Kimball.

Yet like many of their peers they are faced with problems which include finding good employees.

"In a community this size we have a somewhat limited technology base which sometimes makes it harder to find the technology-specialized employee we need. Of course, this changes as the area's employment picture changes."

The company, which services about 150 companies in the area, currently employs 13. Of that there are six sales people; three technicians who install and repair systems; a customer service representative and a receptionist in addition to Kimball and Fisher.

The partners are not worried about future demand for their products because, as Kimball said, "Name a business which can operate without a phone."

"Being small businessmen provides us with more of a sense of accomplishment. We know when we've done a good job or let a customer down. When this happens we take it personally, and we should because we're not providing the service we promised."

"To be profitable you have to provide good service, the two go hand-in-hand."

NLRB called anti-union

PINEY POINT, Md. (AP) — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland says the Reagan administration has "gone beyond the bounds of decency" and is turning the National Labor Relations Board "into an instrument of anti-union employers."

Kirkland, at a news conference during the federation's executive council spring policy meeting, told reporters the AFL-CIO will oppose President Reagan's nomination of Rosemary Collier to the position of NLRB special counsel, a key officer of the board who serves as a sort of traffic cop in handling disputes between companies and their unions.

Kirkland asserted that Mrs. Collier, who has been serving at the Federal Mine Safety and Health Administration, lacks the necessary experience in labor law to carry out the duties of that office.

Union leaders have increasingly criticized the labor relations panel, accusing it of taking pro-management and anti-labor stands on a host of crucial cases in recent months.

"I think it represents a departure from a broad understanding by previous administrations, both Democratic and Republican, that there is a limit beyond which you would not go ... that positions on the NLRB would not be filled with agents of one side or the other.

"But this administration has gone beyond the bounds of decency it what seems a deliberate effort to subvert" the National Labor Relations Act, passed in 1935, which guarantees the rights of workers to organize and bargain collectively with their employers.

Kirkland said that the possibility of an AFL-CIO boycott of the NLRB was raised in 1947 following the enactment of the Taft-Hartley Act, which included a provision allowing states to pass right-to-work laws that don't require workers to join unions.

More than 20 states currently have such laws on the book.

Under a boycott, organized labor would stop pressing cases coming under the NLRB's jurisdiction. Kirkland said it was decided at that time a boycott would be a mistake because the American Federation of Labor "had recently been organized and had a responsibility to represent" its members.

"I believe that a boycott and the decision not to seek a recourse to the board's proceedings might be an option were it not for the fact tht won't help get the board off the backs of our unions.

"In other words, we would get the bad in double measure without what's left of the good .... We could go to the law of the jungle, but the law does not permit us to do that."

Feds now pay $1 billion less for energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government paid nearly $1 billion less for energy last year than in 1982, reflecting a large drop in oil prices and a slight increase in conservation.

In a report to the Federal Interagency Energy Policy Committee, Department of Energy Undersecretary Pat Collins said Tuesday that the government spent $12.5 billion on energy in fiscal 1983 compared with $13.5 billion the previous year.

Collins acknowledged that most of the dollar savings resulted from a 25 percent decrease in oil prices, but he said the amount of energy used by the government also dropped three-tenths of 1 percent in 1983, the first decline since 1980.

Under a 1975 law, the government was to reduce its use of energy 20 percent by 1985 under a formula based on the total number of square feet in federal buildings and other facilities.

"Most agencies are very much on track," Collins said. "We have reduced consumption by 16.1 percent within civilian agencies and 13.6 percent in the Department of Defense."

The report followed charges last month from Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Energy conservation and power subcommittee, that energy conservation by the government had decreased under the Reagan administration.

Ottinger complained that the government'suse xh.zk1-8r atop $ 3 percent jump in 1981 following five straight years of decline under the Carter and Ford administrations.

Energy Department officials had blamed those rises primarily on the increased use of jet fuel as part of President Reagan's military buildup.

The government is responsible for about 2½ percent of the nation's total energy consumption.

Utilities may regionalize on issues

PHOENIX (AP) — The chairmen of utility-regulating commissions in Arizona, New Mexico, California and Texas say they favor creation of a regional organization to help them deal with joint issues.

The four chairmen, meeting here for a two-day conference, agreed Tuesday to recommend adoption of the regional idea to their respective commissions.

The agreement came on the final day of the conference, which was arranged by Kimball and attended by Leonard Grimes, head of the California Public Utilities Commission; Alan Erwin, head of the Texas Public Utilities Commission; and David Cohen, head of the New Mexico Public Service Commission.

Richard Kimball, chairman of the Arizona Corporation Commission, said a regional organization will help the commissions deal with the Palo Verde Nuclear generating Station and other issues of joint concern, including the selling of excess electricity from state to state.

Under the proposal drafted by the four commission chairmen, an executive committee headed by Kimball would be created to study the anticipated costs of Palo Verde and any future power plants, and investigate actions that might be taken to mitigate the resulting rate increases for customers.

All four states regulate utility companies that own portions of the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station, which is being built 50 miles west of Phoenix. The $5.9 billion plant has been the subject of rate-increase requests in Arizona and two other states.

Solution to steel imports problem may emerge from Trade Commission talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., says a comprehensive remedy to steel trade problems should emerge from hearings by the U.S. International Trade Commission on a request for sweeping quotas on incoming foreign steel.

"This commission is uniquely positioned to recommend a well thought out, comprehensive remedy to one of the most persistent and vexing trade problems of our day," Heinz, chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, said in prepared testimony as the panel was opening its hearings.

"I urge you not to lose sight of the magnitude and importance of the opportunity before you," Heinz said.

The six-member commission is scheduled four days of hearings. But night sessions may be needed to hear from everyone on the 20-page witness list.

In person testimony or prepared statements were expected today from Govs. Dick Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Richard Orr of Indiana, George Wallace of Alabama, Mark White of Texas, and Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia. Local officials and members of the Federal Trade Commission also were to appear.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America, also on the witness list, spurred the proceedings with a Jan. 24 petition to restrict steel imports from all other countries to 15 percent of U.S. consumption.

Natomas changing name, moving office to Dallas

DALLAS — Diamond Shamrock Corp. announcdd that Natomas Co., a subsidiary acquired in August 1983, will relocate its headquarters from San Francisco to Dallas during the summer of 1984.

This subsidiary will now be responsible for all the company's international oil and gas exploration activities. Accordingly, the name of the Natomas subsidiary will be changed to Diamond Shamrock International Petroleum to more accurately reflect its business orientation.

Dr. Welby won't make house calls

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Robert Young did not intend to retire when he finished his "Marcus Welby, M.D." series in 1976, but he found himself working less and less.

"I hadn't thought about retirement one way or another," said Young, 77. "I've never been idle any time in my career. The longest I was out of work in 50 years was seven months. So I decided to see what came along.

"You don't wake up one morning and find eight years have elapsed. But I found I got used to not working. Betty (his wife) and I did a lot of traveling. We enjoy each other's company. But I had vowed to pay for all the grandchildren's college tuition, so here I am back at work."

Young, who is mostly known of late for commercials, reprises his role as Dr. Welby for the ABC movie "The Return of Marcus Welby, M.D."

The two-hour film, which ABC broadcasts Wednesday night, was also a pilot, but not as a regular vehicle for Young. It was a proposed series for Darren McGavin and Morgan Stevens as father-son doctors, but the program did not make ABC's announced fall schedule.

If it should go to series in the future, Young said he wouldn't want to get heavily involved. "I wouldn't want Welby to be the central figure," he said. "Or that he would be in every other show or even every third one. As I see it the show would be set in a clinic with seven or eight doctors, all in family practice. Welby would have an office there instead of practicing at home, as in the past."

When Dr. Welby made its bow in 1969 it was probably the first time that a television series focused on a doctor who practiced out of his home. Series in the past had been hospital-oriented.

Series creator David Victor had previously produced "Dr. Kildare" and made an attempt to move that show out of the hospital and into family practice. When he was unsuccessful, he came up with "Welby."

"David felt it would expand the stories, but the network was fearful and couldn't see its potential the way David could," Young said. "David used to call 'Welby' 'The Son of Kildare.'"

Young said that "Welby" had a ratings advantage because of weak competition. Among its Tuesday night competition were CBS documentaries and NBC's newsmagazine "First Tuesday."

"Inherent in every doctor show is that health is a subject everyone is interested in," he said. "It's dramatic because you deal with life and death. You have all the elements needed for dramatic storytelling. If the public takes a liking to the personalities you can have a big success.

The Spring North American Championships in San Antonio, Texas in March marked the start of a year-long trek for Yvan and Rolande Pageau of Montreal. After playing in the first event of that tournament, they set out in their camper to play 365 games of bridge in the coming year, each in a different town or city in the U.S. or Canada. They are publicizing the 1985 Spring Championships, which will be held in their home town. Their 365th game will be in the first event of those championships.

The Pageaus received a pleasant sendoff from San Antonio — they won their section of the tournament on the evening preceding their departure. On this hand from the event, Yvan Pageau received a good score for making an overtrick at four hearts.

West was remarkably quiet in the auction, and most cooperative on defense. He led the king of spades and shifted to the nine of diamonds. East's king lost to the ace, and declarer drew trumps in three rounds, ending in hand. He then led a spade toward dummy. Declarer was able to discard his low diamond on the queen of spades and then finesse East for the jack of diamonds to make 11 tricks.

Better defense is for West to continue with ace of spades and another, allowing East to ruff away the queen of spades. But declarer can still come to an overtrick if he guesses the distribution. He cashes the ace and king of trumps, then finesses the ten of diamonds. He gets back to the table with the king of clubs for a second diamond finesse, cashes the ace of diamonds and ruffs his last diamond on the table. Now his hand is high and he can claim the rest of the tricks.

Chase Manhattan Bank and Manufacturers Hanover Bank announced they were raising their prime lending rates to 12.5 percent, the highest level in 18 months.

More demands for loans blamed for prime rate hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking issue with White House finger-pointing at the Federal Reserve, private analysts are blaming the fresh hike in the prime lending rate on the surging demand for loans in the economy.

Striving to feed the credit hunger of businesses and consumers, banks have increased their own borrowings. That in turn, say the analysts, has led to higher costs for the financial institutions.

"So the prime went up" to meet those costs and maintain a margin of profit, said Ted Gibson, economist at San Francisco's Crocker National Bank.

Crocker was one of the major U.S. banks that on Tuesday boosted its key lending rate from 12 percent to 12.5 percent. It marked the third rise in seven weeks of that base rate for corporate loans.

Allen Sinai, chief economist at the investment firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., agreed. He said that "the rise in interest rates is primarily the result of strong" demands by businesses and consumers for loans after the 1981-82 recession when they cut back on their credit holdings.

Moreover, he said, the Treasury is putting additional pressure on interest rates by borrowing heavily to finance the government's nearly $200 billion deficit.

Said James Annable, an economist at the First National Bank of Chicago, which also boosted its prime rate, "All together you're overwhelming the available savings in the economy" for financing the loans.

Citing an example of banks' funding costs, Gibson said that 90-day certificates of deposit were yielding 11.20 percent to investors. That, he said, translates into a cost to banks of 11.75 percent because of government restrictions on how much of their money must be set aside as a cushion.

At a 12 percent prime rate, he said, the banks' profit margins were too small.

But the White House offered a different view.

In a strongly worded statement, spokesman Larry Speakes put the blame for the higher prime rate on the Federal Reserve, saying it was limiting the supply of money "in a period of expansion and economic growth."

The Federal Reserve, the nation's central bank, tries to provide enough money to sustain economic growth without reigniting higher inflation.

The administration's concern over Federal Reserve actions was likely prompted by the recent disclosure that the central bank decided to tighten monetary policy in late March to slow the rapid pace of the economy.

A tightening of the growth in the money supply tends to produce higher interest rates, which in turn can slow economic activity. The economy grew at a surprisingly energetic 8.3 percent in the first quarter of 1984.

The unusual disclosure of the Fed's secret deliberations came last week in a Washington Post account of a talk by Frank Morris, president of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank.

WHITE PLAINS, NY — Texaco Inc. has announced that consolidated worldwide net inome for the first quarter of 1984 was $321 million, compared with $319 million for the first quarter of 1983. First quarter 1984 earnings amounted to $1.25 per share of common stock, compared with $1.24 per share for the first quarter of 1983.

Texaco's net income for the first quarter of 1984 included the earnings effect for the one month beginning March 1, 1984, associated with the acquisition of Getty Oil Co., including the financing costs and the estimated amortization related to the purchase.

Revenues for the first quarter of 1984 amounted to $9.9 billion, a decrease of 2.3 percent compared with $10.1 billion for the same quarter of 1983. These reveues do not include Getty's sales revenues. Although total petroleum product and natural gas sales revenues increased 4.6 percent, the increase was more than offset by lower volumes and prices related to crude oil purchased for resale.

The company's first-quarter earnings for 1984 did not include any last-in, first-out (LIFO) inventory drawdown benefits, and currency translation effects were negligible. In comparison, the same quarter of 1983 included a $35 million LIFO nventory drawdown benefit and a $40 million gain in currency translations, both net of related income tax effects.

Chemical companies to file suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of seven chemical companies which reached an $180 million settlement with Vietnam veterans who say they suffered various injuries from the herbicide Agent Orange will sue to get that money back from the government, attorneys said.

The companies say they manufactured the defoliant to government specifications and the government should pay the damages agreed to in the settlement Monday.

Leslie Bennett, attorney for Dow Chemical Co. and Grant Hering, attorney for Diamond Shamrock Corp., Tuesday informed the 2nd U.S Circuit Court of Appeals that they plan to proceed against the government.

Customers to receive rebate checks

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — About 720,000 customers of a New Jersey utility will get $20 rebate checks starting next month in a move designed to relieve consumers of the financial burden of the 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant.

The state Board of Public Utilities on Tuesday ordered the New Jersey Central Power and Light Co. to pay the rebates as part of a settlement on the utility's responsibility for the TMI accident. Jersey Central owns 25 percent of the crippled Pennsylvania reactor.

The rebates are worth an estimated $15 million, officials said.

City corruption may be uncovered

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A statewide grand jury will soon begin hearing evidence from state and federal investigators on alleged widespread corruption in city government.

Superior Court Judge Anthony A. Giannini on Tuesday ordered that the grand jury be empaneled within two weeks to investigate charges that city officials sought kickbacks for snow-removal contracts, paid companies for work they did not perform, and kept no-show employees on the city payroll.

Six city workers have been indicted on corruption charges in the last year.

College runner held for shooting

BALTIMORE (AP) — A standout college runner was being held on $250,000 bond for allegedly shooting a state trooper who had ticketed him for drunken driving earlier this year.

Brian Flynn, 24, a senior at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., was arrested Monday and charged with assault with intent to murder in the May 4 ambush-shooting of Trooper Gary Lowman outside of Lowman's home in Catonsville.

Flynn was arrested on drunken driving charges by Lowman on Jan. 4, police said. The trooper was released from a Baltimore hospital Saturday after being treated for gunshot wounds in the arm and chest.

Attorney: Landis will be vindicated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The attorney of "Twilight Zone" director John Landis says his client will be vindicated on manslaughter charges in the July 1982 helicopter-accident deaths of actor Vic Morrow and two children on the movie's set.

Landis, helicopter pilot Dorcey Wingo and special effects coordinator Paul Stewart pleaded innocent to three counts each of involuntary manslaughter Tuesday in an arraignment before Superior Court Judge Ronald M. George. The men are expected to go on trial late next month.

Morrow, 53, Myca Dinh Le, 6, and Renee Chen, 7, died when a helicopter crashed on top of them July 23, 1982, amid powerful special effects explosions on the movie's set.

Inmate marriages constitutional

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Declaring a rule by the Missouri Division of Corrections against inmate marriages unconstitutional, a federal judge has cleared the way for prisoners to marry.

U.S. District Judge Howard F. Sachs said Tuesday the inmate marriage rule is more restrictive than reasonable. He issued the ruling in a class-action suit brought against state officials by Leonard Safley and Pearl Jean Watson Safely, who contended the regulations violated their constitutional rights.

Office closer to selecting dump site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, revising for the fifth time its guidelines for picking a dump for highly radioactive nuclear waste, says it hopes to narrow its list of possible locations by next August.

The Energy Department sent the latest version of its "mission plan" for opening the dump by 1998 to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Tuesday. The commission has balked at earlier guidelines as being too vague.

Michael Lawrence, acting director of the Energy Department's nuclear waste office, said NRC approval of the guidelines later this month would enable officials to select the best five sites in August for more extensive environmental assessments.

The list of nine sites in six states was supposed to have been winnowed down to five in January. However, the administration was late in getting draft guidelines to the commission; and once NRC officials had a chance to look at them, they did not like what they saw.

Under the Nuclear Waste Policy Act approved by Congress in late 1982 and signed into law by President Reagan early last year, any permanent underground repository has to be licensed by the NRC.

The Energy Department has been looking at nine locations in Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Washington state, Utah and Nevada as possible sites for the first dump since before the law was enacted.

Since its enactment, the governors in most of those states and local groups around each of the potential sites have been lobbying for criteria in the selection process that would eliminate them as candidates.

Lawrence said the new guidelines meet the NRC's previous objections in laying out more detail about selecting suitable sites and the technical specifications that each must meet. But he also said all nine potential sites are still in consideration.

The 1983 law set up a timetable for having the first respository completed and in operation by 1998 and imposed upon nuclear utilities a charge one-tenth of a penny per kilowatt hour to pay for it.

Under the latest plan, the list of five sites chosen in August would be narrowed to three next February. After detailed environmental reviews of each of those three sites including test bores into geologic formations, one site would be recommended to the president in 1990.

The new mission plan, Lawrence said, would enable the government to meet the 1998 deadline by dividing the first repository into two phases. The first phase would be completing a "test" underground cavern capable of receiving 400 metric tons of waste in 1998.

New chief executive officer named at TI

Sheapherd, 61, who has served as chief executive officer since 1969, will continue as chairman, and has been named cheif corporate officer. Shepherd had announced in January his intention to recommend to the board Bucy's election to succeed him as cheif executive officer.

Bucy, 55, who has served as chief operating officer of TI since 1975, joined the company in 1953 after receiving a bachelor's degree in physics from Texas Tech, and a master's degree in physics from the University of Texas in Austin.

Board declares regular quarterly dividends

HOUSTON — The board of directors of Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc. has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 35.3 cents per share payable to holders of Common Stock. The board also declared a regular quarterly dividend of 45 cents per share on preferred stock. All dividends for the quarter will be paid July 1, 1984 to stockholders of record as of June 8, 1984.

This makes 250 consecutive quarterly dividends paid by Texas Commerce and its predecessor banks on its common stock.

Board chairman gets memorial award

ANAHEIM, Ca. — Howard Sherman, chairman of the board of Silvercrest Industries Inc. has been awarded the prestigious Jack E. Wells Memorial Award by the Western Manufactured Housing Institute (WMHI).

Sherman, who began his career in the manufactured housing industry 35 years ago as a dealer, was honored for his outstanding service to the manufactured housing industry and to WMHI.

He began his career working for his father, later starting his own dealership, and in 1969 he entered the manufacturing end of the business. Sherman joined the Trailer Coach Association, WMHI's predecessor organization, in the mid-50's and rapidly moved up its ranks, serving on numerous boards and committees. He was elected chairman of the board in 1975, TCA's final year before merging into the new industry association, the Manufactured Housing Institute. Sherman continued to serve in a leadership capacity in that organization's western region.

Saab's Turbo Cabriolet gets green light

ORANGE, Conn. — Saab's Turbo Cabriolet, unveiled as a design study at the Frankfurt automobile show last September, has been given the green light for series production, according to the Swedish automaker. It is expected to be ready for delivery late in the 1986 model-year.

According to Robert J. Sinclair, president of Saab-Scania of America, Saab's design team had originally created the Cabriolet strictly to explore the development potential of the Saab 900.

"The public's reaction to our prototype was so positive that we immediately began to investigate the feasibility of putting it into production," Sinclair said. "After exhaustive calculations, we decided to go ahead."

Steel imports reach all-time record high

WASHINGTON — Steel imports continued to flood into the United States at an unprecedented rate during March, nudging one all-time record and shattering another.

According to government data supplied to the American Iron and Steel Institute, foreign producers shipped 2,225,000 tons of steel mill products into this country in March. That was within 1,000 tons of the all-time one-month steel import record of 2,226,000 tons set in August, 1981.

This pushed total steel imports for the first quarter of this year to 6,47,000 tons — the highest total ever recorded for any three month period.

March imports were nearly double the 1,113,000 tons of foreign steel that cleared customs during the same month last year, and steel imports for the first quarter of this year were 92 percent higher than the 3,368,000 tons recorded during the same period of 1983.

Steel chief says quota bill may be solution

WASHINGTON — David M. Roderick, chairman of American Iron and Steel Institute, said that the steel industry believes that a quota bill currently before Congress offers the most effective solution to the steel import problem. Roderick, who is also chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., led an AISI panel in presenting testimony before the House Ways and Means Trade Subcommittee, at hearings on the state of the steel industry.

In citing massive financial losses, unemployment, plant closings, and a reduced ability to reinvest which have plagued the industry for the past several years, Roderick noted that the steel industry is still in its deepest crisis since the Great Depression.

"The main continuing cause of this crisis is steel imports and the situation grows steadily worse. Any solutions, to be effective, must be taken at once," he said.

Increase in retail space predicted for 1984

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas now ranks second only to California in the number of shopping centers of 50,000 square feet or larger, according to a real estate expert who predicts 14 million square feet of shopping space will be added this year in the Houston area alone.

"Texas is a very big market for shopping centers," said E.D. Wulfe, vice president of the commercial division of Henry S. Miller Co. "It is second only to California in the number of shopping centers 50,000 square feet in size or larger."

A study by the company, which was released Monday, predicted that the amount of square footage in shopping centers of 50,000 square feet or more will increase by 30 percent in Houston and Harris county.

About three million square feet of retail space is expected to be added to the regional shopping malls in the Houston area. By 1987, the Miller Co. expects that another four million square feet of new regional shopping malls will be opened.

Neighborhood shopping centers of 50,000 square feet or more — but smaller than regional malls — are expected to add 12 million square feet of new retail space in 1984, the Miller study said.

Despite the addition, Wulfe said, he predicted that occupancy rates will not drop below 90 percent. The rate was 92 percent in 1983.

The vigorous expansion in Houston, he said, is typical of what is happening in Texas.

"You'll find it pretty much the same on a line across the state," Wulfe said. "Texas is one of the hottest markets for retail expansion right now."

This is demonstrated, he said, by the fact that major retailers — such as Macy's and Mervyn's — have moved into the state in recent months.

"Probably more new stores have entered the Houston area than in any other market," said Wulfe. Macy's is installing five stores, Mervyn's is putting in eight, and another 5 to 10 home improvement stores are expected. There also an influx of off-price retailers, such as Front Row, Marshall's, T. J. Maxx and Design Depot, he said.

Nine companies receive awards

CLEVELAND — Nine natural gas industry distribution and transmission companies received eleven advertising awards in American Gas Association competition.

Gas Light Co. of Columbus, GA., a subsidiary of United Cities Gas Co. of Nashville, Tenn., won the Grand Award for its campaign "to prove the gas advantage over the electric heat pump.'

The 1983 Communications Achievement Awards were presented to utilities and pipelines for outstanding advertising programs during the association's Communications Conference held May 2-4.

The United Cities Gas Co. program included an offer to customers by the utility for an energy use analysis that would compare annual home heating costs using a high efficiency natural gas furnace versus an electric heat pump. a humorous approach was used in the advertising campaign over a 12-month period utilizing television, radio, print ads, and a direct mail campaign.

Advertising award category winners are: Southern California Gas Co., Los Angeles, Cal., Conservation/Efficiency; Sonat Inc., Birmingham, Ala., Corporate/Financial; Southern California Gas Co., Los Angeles, Cal., Customer Relations and Northern Naturl Gas Co. Omaha, Neb., Marketing.

Residents willing to pay higher fares to keep MidTran

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Raising the rates was no obstacle for the citizens. They just didn't want MidTran services cut back.

During a Midland City Council meeting Tuesday at City Hall, several citizens testified they would be willing to pay higher fares to ride the public transportation system if the council would commit to keep it rolling at least two years.

The council agreed, and at the next meeting will consider a formal resolution to increase rates: from $35 a month for commuters to $50; from $2 door-to-door one-way service to $2.50; from $35 per hour charter service to $45; and from 50 cents one-way for handicapped persons to 75 cents.

"I feel like we're headed in the right direction," said Doris Velasquez, MidTran director. "We can now do a long-range plan for this system."

Steve Orr talked to the council from three vantage points — as a rider, as a representative of other riders and as a member of the Transportation Advisory Commission.

A proposal to go from $35 a month for commuters to $75 had stunned the riders, he said. Instead, Orr suggested a $10 increase now, another $10 in the fall and a third $10 raise by February 1985. This graduated level of increases would give riders time to plan it into their budgets.

He also proposed the council commit to giving the system "two years to develop more efficient means of running."

Councilman David Godfrey said a study showed that for every $1 of revenue brought in, the city lost $6. To break even on the commuter service, MidTran would have to charge $95 a month.

He also noted that MidTran averages 471 riders per day, which he assessed at ½ of 1 percent of Midland's population. "We're having a budget loss for a few people," he added.

But Mayor G. Thane Akins interjected that for every one person served, the system also helps that person's family, friends and employer. "It's not just ½ of 1 percent, but it still is small."

Penny Unterbrink with Midland Association for Retarded Citizens said MidTran has helped mentally retarded persons lead a normal life by transporting them to jobs. Persons living in a new apartment style project are all gainfully, though marginally, employed, she said. "MidTran removes one of the handicaps for mentally retarded persons."

Mack Blackwell, a counselor with Texas Rehabilitation Center, said MidTran has helped his clients get to work or to a training program. Getting rid of MidTran would mean his clients would have no means of getting to work and would have to fall back on welfare.

Martha Gould, a self-admitted senior citizen, offered proposals for increasing revenues and ridership.

"Why not mount a whale of an advertising campaign?" she offered. "Put cards in buses like they do in other cities. Approach ministers in the south part of town to get their people to ride. I ride with some of Penny's (MARC) people, and they are a delight." She also suggested the city lower the fares to get more riders.

Lula Bell Robinson, 1501 E. Lynn, joked about her 70 years and recalled the many days when she had walked from her house to downtown or other parts of Midland. She said a lot of people don't know about MidTran.

"Let me ride," she said. "I want to live a little longer."

Leona Armentrout, activities director for Trinity Towers, said that retirement center already had used MidTran for nine or 10 charters this month. A lot of the residents use the bus system to go to the doctor or get out in the community. "It's safer for them to use MidTran than to have these people out driving," she said.

Nancy Mann with the chamber of commerce Convention and Visitors' Bureau, said MidTran is a viable part of the package in bidding for conventions. Last year, the bureau brought in 24,000 delegates who added $4.5 million to the economy. "MidTran provides an affordable transportation for convention delegates. The money these people spend stays in Midland," she said.

It was the continuing deficit that bothered the council but the group agreed to give it the go-ahead for two years. Price increases will take effect after the council has two readings on the ordinance, which should take about a month.

Night shift

MMH Nursing Supervisor Ginny Radell checks in with Priscilla Cooper during the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift.

Nurse enjoys slower pace of swing shift

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Ginny Radell

Ginny Radell doesn't find it lonely on the graveyard shift.

There is an absence of noise on long nights.

The empty hallways echo with the slightest sound under stark, unrelenting lights. The slightly open doors of private rooms provide only a glimpse of shadowy figures under sterile sheets in dark rooms.

A few televisions are on, the volume turned low to provide company until the nurse comes around. Sometimes they come with a dose of medicine. Sometimes they just come to check on their patient, or to say goodnight.

At the nurses' station, Midland Memorial Hospital Nursing Supervisor Ginny Radell stops to visit with a nurse seated behind charts and a computer, which links her to the patients on the floor. The night is quiet and the beeper signaling a patient's need shrills against the silence. The nurse on duty answers the patient through the intercom and heads toward the room.

Covering for the three other supervisors at MMH doesn't bother Ms. Radell, despite the confusion of switching shifts and, therefore, sleeping-waking cycles.

"I like to float for all three shifts," Ms. Radell, a nurse since 1956, said. "I get to know everybody in the hospital, rather than just those on one shift. I don't have any trouble sleeping and I don't require a lot of sleep."

When a new shift begins, the nurses, who this week are being honored with Texas Nurses Week, turn over census reports on patients. Depending on the floor, nurses will talk face-to-face with their replacements or leave descriptions of the patients' conditions on tape-recorders.

When Ms. Radell arrives on the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift, she makes sure there are enough nurses to cover the patient load, makes rounds and obtains any medication prescribed on the previous shift from the pharmacy.

"I make rounds and if everything is going smooth, I'll just spend time talking with the nurses," she said. "If there are patients who are very, very sick and not in intensive care, I'll see them. I'll start an IV and I'm called in on any emergency situation.

"Mainly, I act as a resource person," she said. "I help define hospital policies."

And if family members, some of whom spend the night in chairs in the lounge or on cots in the rooms, need consolation or information, she is there.

Down the dim hall, illuminated in a circle of light, are a few white-clad figures. A hushed giggle reaches across the linoleum as the nurses pause on their rounds to pencil in notes on patient charts, which they will pass on to the nurses who relieve them at 7 a.m.

With fewer employees on the floor during the late-night shift, there are more patients per nurse, usually seven to nine.

"You get to know your patients," Ms. Radell said. "You don't have the TVs on so much and you don't have the visitors. The PA (public announcement system) isn't going off all the time.

"You know how mothers can hear their babies cry when no one else can? Nurses' ears are tuned for the unusual. They just pick up on it and go check it before you know anything is happening."

Her beeper went off and she paused to pick up a nearby phone. It was the emergency room requesting a room for a patient who came in with a critical gallbladder condition and required hospitalization.

Ms. Radell consulted a list of floor occupancies in her pocket and gave the number of an empty room.

In the nursing administration office in the basement, Security Guard Ron Powelson, Respiratory Therapist Jack Cotner and Plant Operator in Engineering Scott Brich gathered to share a cup of coffee and a cigarette with Sharon Miller, unit coordinator for all units, who specifically requested the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift.

It was a quiet night.

Upstairs on 2-East, Priscilla Cooper manned the nurses' station. Usually on the 7 a.m.-3 p.m. shift, she was filling in for a night nurse who had called in sick.

The work schedule differs greatly from that at 7 a.m. On the early morning shift, nurses are kept busy with prepping patients for surgery, bathing patients and serving two meals.

"It's the hardest one," Ms. Cooper said, stifling a yawn. "But the hours are good."

City to seek grants from state commission

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The city of Midland will be seeking state grants to assist with major projects after the City Council approved the proposals during Tuesday's regular session.

Guy McCrary, representing the Midland Jaycees and the Centennial Plaza Association, asked permission to apply to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission to help fund development of the Downtown Park. When the grant proposal is ready, it will go to the council for approval, he said.

The Jaycees have undertaken the development of the Downtown Park. When completed it will be turned into a $1 million Centennial Plaza complete with eating areas, trees, a water feature and performing area. Deadline for completion is summer 1985.

Mayor G. Thane Akins questioned McCrary about the location of the performance area, which is facing The Midland Hilton. Noting that the hotel management was concerned about the noise disturbing their guests, he asked if the performance area could be turned to the northwest instead of southwest.

McCrary explained it was placed in a specific location so the sun would spotlight the performers.

Councilman Jesse Hatfield noted the groups performing there wouldn't be any louder than those given permission recently to "dance in the streets" in the downtown area.

"It would be music of a lower-keyed nature," added McCrary.

George Logan, director of parks and recreation, was given the green light to apply for state funds to repair Doug Russell Pool.

MISD trustees award contract

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

A $2.5-million contract to construct a new elementary school was awarded to HBF Construction at Tuesday's school board meeting.

Although a company based near Lubbock turned in a bid $11,700 lower, its estimated completion date coincided with the beginning of school. HBF expects to have the building finished by May of 1985. HBF constructed the two most recently-built elementary schools, Santa Rita and Parker.

The new school will be located in west Midland.

Trustees also approved on first reading three policy revisions. The first places all new employees on a probationary contract for two years. In past years, only teachers hired after the first day of school were placed on probation until the end of the school year.

"We want to take full advantage of our legal allowance...to be sure that we have made the best possible decision," explained Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi. He said the policy would also apply to employees who leave and later return to the district.

The second revision provides for teachers to be hired under a dual contract, such as teacher/coach. Currently such teachers have two separate contracts with the district, and can resign one while keeping the other. The revision combines the two roles into a single position.

"I'm not saying if someone decided not to coach we wouldn't consider him as a teacher. We certainly would," Baressi qualified. But it would allow the district more flexibility if no other position was available, he said.

Teachers' committee asks trustees for pay increase

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

The Joint Teacher's Salary Committee Tuesday asked Midland school trustees for a pay increase package that could total about $1.6 million.

But both parties agreed no action could be expected until after a special session of the Legislature this summer to decide on teacher pay raises and other financial educational matters.

Teacher representative Mike Bustilloz outlined a proposal which incorporated state and local increases, new pay grades and a salary supplement.

He requested whatever state pay raises are approved — a 10 percent increase is expected — be passed along and supplemented locally. Midland pays its teachers 32 to 50 percent above state minimum, and teachers requested any state raise be increased 32 to 50 percent to maintain the present pay structure.

Average teacher salary in Midland is $20,437. The percentage of local funds for a 10 percent pay raise would total about $800,000 or $800 per teacher.

The committee also asked for an additional $650 raise per teacher and another $600 for educators working toward a higher degree. The first would cost the district about $650,000 and the latter about $200,000, teachers estimated.

If all measures were approved and the state raised salaries 10 percent, it would bring average teacher salary to $23,337 locally.

Midland now ranks in the top percent statewide in teacher salaries, board president Parker Humes said.

Midland Independent School District does not provide an incentive to overcome the stress, strain and expense necessary for teachers to continue their education, Bustilloz charged. "Midland and MISD expect our teachers to strive for professional and academic excellence, but the philosphy of the district has been hindered by lack of policies providing incentives."

Odessa candidate decides not to contest City Council election

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — David Narbaez threw in the towel Tuesday in his search for enough votes to overturn the result of the April 7 election he lost by eight votes.

Phone callers tipped the Narbaez camp soon after the election that as many as 10 people had voted twice for incumbent City Councilman Thomas Perkins.

Investigation uncovered four people who had cast ballots absentee and on election day, encouraging Narbaez and his attorney Richard Abalos to continue their search. It was never definitely determined whether four double votes would invalidate all eight tallied.

But Abalos said this morning that two Hispanic women who voted twice told the Narbaez camp they had voted for him, rather than Perkins. Assuming the other two men who had voted twice voted for the incumbent (Perkins has admitted taking the men to vote absentee), the four voting violators had canceled each other out.

But Abalos insisted that the investigation was worthwhile. "We felt we had a duty and an obligation to check into the election," he said.

This election was the first in which voters were forced to deal with single-member districts and many of those involved suggested this may have confused voters.

Reports had county residents voting in city races illegally. At several voting places, county and city people voted on one of three combinations of races. Seven ballot styles were used throughout the voting area, further complicating the voters' and election judges' tasks.

Former Mayor Bob Bryant, who lost his race by 110 votes to John Minor, joined Narbaez initially, but dropped the matter after failing to find enough votes to sway this decision. Bryant said he was threatened not to investigate the election.

An investigation of the election, requested by the Odessa League of Women Voters, is pending in the district attorney's office.

Volunteers honored at VIPS awards lunch

From Staff Reports

This is Volunteers in Public Schools (VIPS) Appreciation Week. To recognize all volunteers and to honor outstanding volunteers, First City National Bank of Midland hosted a luncheon Tuesday at Greentree Country Club.

Each school's outstanding volunteer received a VIPS mug and each school was given a plaque listing the names of its outstanding volunteers.

1983-84 outstanding volunteers included Sally Hinsley, Bonham; Jerry Hawkins, Bowie; Glenna Scarbrough, Burnet; Nancy Atchley, Crockett; Ana Serna, De Zavala; Patty Brunet, Emerson; Marianna Crosse, Fannin; Kathy Stanley, Henderson; Karen Burkett, Sam Houston; Lana McIntosh, Anson Jones; Paz Carrizales, Lamar; Ann Payne, Long; Mary Banda, Milam; Kathy Ellis Randall, Parker; Jackie Hatfield, Pease; Dottie Hill, Rusk; Charlotte Johnson, Santa Rita; George Ann Crowder, South; Jay May, Travis; Carol Ried, Washington; Sherry Parker, West; Ruth Dodd, Carver ODL; Jackie Hamilton, Alamo Junior High; Kay Sowders, Goddard Junior High; Susan Eiteljorg, San Jacinto Junior High; Kathryn Nichols, Lee Freshman; LaDonna Moore, Midland Freshman; Lynn Mashburn, Midland High, and Barbara Young, Lee High School.

Though only one volunteer from each school is recognized at the luncheon, more than 3,000 Midlanders will receive certificates of appreciation for volunteering in Midland's public schools during the 1983-84 school year. They contributed nearly 50,000 hours in service to schools — a 20 percent increase over last school year.

VIPS was formed in 1977 by the Midland City Council of PTAs. By assisting with non-teaching duties, volunteers enable educators to spend more time teaching and planning and less time filing and duplicating. Volunteers provide individual attention for children who need it or supervise large groups while the teacher provides small group instruction.

They are also involved in projects outside the classroom, including student safety activities such as Helping Hands and Youth Protection, community involvement projects such as Adopt-a-School and SHARE speakers bureau, and special projects such as Halloween carnivals and the Storytelling Troupe.

VIPS is financed through contributions. In addition to First City National, contributors for 1983-84 include RepublicBank First National Midland, Texas American Bank, Republic Bank, ClayDesta National Bank, Security National Bank and Midland Downtown Lions Club.

The third revision reorganizes the communications committee and recommends members be elected rather than appointed.

Trustees also approved a pilot program in Saxon algebra. The text was turned down by the state textbook adoption committee last year.

Contingent upon donation of books, one introductory algebra class at each freshman school will take part in the pilot program. Student enrollment will be voluntary.

A committee recommended the action because the text uses constant review and has a good format, simple explanations, emphasis on word problems and good organization of exercises.

"Saxon algebra should provide the introductory algebra student a better route to learning the objectives of the course than that provided by our present text," the committee report said.

The program will be re-evaluated in a year.

The board also finalized the district's position on recommendations of the Select Committee on Public Education. It supported: limiting non-academic absences, an extended school year, smaller classes, pre-school for disadvantaged students, limiting junior high and middle school sports and eligibility requirements for participation in extracurricular activities.

It opposed: an appointed nine-member State Board of Education, removal of the University Interscholastic League from The University of Texas, "Robin Hood" equalization that would "take from the rich and give to the poor," taking responsibility of teacher evaluation away from administrators and school boards and turning it over to other teachers, single-track curriculum and those aspects that would increase bureaucratic red tape.

Committee asks for pay increase

The proposal called for giving an additional $600 to teachers who have 15 hours toward a master's degree, $600 to those with 15 hours toward a doctorate, $1,200 for 30 hours and $1,800 to those who have obtained a doctorate (45 hours). Currently MISD has the master's-plus-30 hours step.

Board members were more concerned with increasing lower-level salaries, saying the district has fallen behind others in beginning pay.

Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi said he expects the legislature to increase salaries, but not necessarily revenues. If that happens, local taxpayers would have to bear the cost, he said, adding that the board is limited to an 8 percent increase in the tax rate without the possibility of a rollback.

If the state accepts a recommendation to base funding on numbers of students and not a statewide salary scale, it will present an even bigger problem, he added.

Midland has a high percentage of upper-level teachers and pays them comparatively high wages. A new funding arrangement would reimburse local districts the same amount of money whether its teachers earned high or low wages. The difference would have to be made up locally, Baressi said. The financial incentive would be to hire inexperienced and cheaper teachers.

City Council to seek grants from state parks commission

Contracts for three street rebuilding projects were awarded to South Texas Construction, which submitted the low bid. The projects will include reconstruction of Louisiana from Pecos to Big Spring, reconstruction of Michigan at B Street and reconstruction of Illinois from Marienfeld to Loraine.

Stop signs were approved for Lavaca and Holiday Hill Road, Rio Grande and Holiday Hill Road, Conroe Court and Holiday Hill Road, Canadian and Holiday Hill Road and Marshall and Hicks Streets.

Because a child had been hit by a car one morning on Tanforan, the council approved installing a stop sign at Tanforan and Oriole Drive in an attempt to slow down the traffic.

After hearing from Deputy City Manager Fred Poe that Phillips Petroleum had contacted city officials before laying a pipeline on city land southeast of Midland, the council rescinded a previous ordinance which charged the company $10 a rod for that line. Instead, the council lowered the charge to its regular price of $2 per rod.

In other action, the council granted a limousine franchise to Continental Limousines to be operated by Joe White Lincoln Mercury of Odessa, revised the water and sewer charges to apartment complexes, agreed to close Main Street between Illinois and Wall on May 30 for a senior high party and approved a zone change for a two-story building for Security National Bank in the Courtyard.

Odessa's Presidential Museum to celebrate formal opening

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum in Odessa will celebrate the formal opening of their new long-term exhibit galleries with a week of special activities centered around the theme, "The Presidential Museum...A New Decade." Presidential Museum Week will be May 14-19.

Following a press review May 14, the formal opening of the exhibits will be held May 15 at 4 p.m. Funded by a grant from the city of Odessa, the 3,600-square-foot exhibit area was designed by Ralph Rhodes Associates of New Harmony, Indiana.

The exhibits were fabricated and installed by the TenBarge Co. of Wadesville, Indiana. Using original artifacts from the museum's collection, the exhibits trace the development of the presidency through the presidential campaigns, effects of third parties, changing technology on the campaign process and the expanding electorate.

In conjunction with the Presidential Museum Week, the museum has sponsored an essay contest, poster contest and mock presidential balloting, with the winners of these contests announced during the week.

On Saturday, May 19, the museum will conclude its special week with an art show and auction to benefit the facility. The auction will be held at the Holiday Inn Center in Odessa at 7 p.m. Admission will be $10 per person. Among the artists represented by the Folger Ranch Gallery of Midland will be Wayne Baize, Penni Anne Cross, Bob Guelich and Kent Ullberg.

Located at the corner of 7th and Lee in Odessa, the museum is open Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m. — 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Wind-driven forest fire incinerates more than 1,500 acres near Bastrop

BASTROP (AP) — A wind-driven blaze has engulfed more than 1,500 acres and destroyed at least four structures near this Central Texas city, authorities said.

Mike Fisher, assistant fire chief of the Bastrop Fire Department, said the fire was almost under control late Tuesday night.

More than 400 firefighters from 16 fire departments helped battle the blaze, which officials said may have spread from a trash fire beside a barbecue restaurant along Texas 71.

No injuries or loss of livestock had been reported, Smithville Fire Department spokesman Steve Burns said. The fire destroyed mostly pine trees and brushland.

Helicopters evacuated several people from the area, and at least three homes and a trailer have been destroyed, he said. No monetary figure has been set yet on the damages, but Burns said they'll be "a mint."

Burns called the fire — which started about 3:45 p.m. on the north side of Texas Highway 71 — "one of the most awesome I've ever worked on in my 11 years."

Whipped by high winds, the flames skipped over a four-lane highway and spread southward through hundreds of acres, he said. State park lands were not immediately in danger.

Nearly 200 pieces of equipment and firefighters from all over the region were battling the blaze last night about four miles east of Bastrop, which is about 30 miles southeast of Austin, he said.

Fuel had to be shipped to the site after the equipment drained portable tanks and a nearby gas station's reserves, Burns said.

He said the fire was "closer under control" than it was earlier in the day because the wind has died down.

The Salvation Army was assisting the undetermined number of evacuated residents, he added.

Prosecutor apologized for 'bad judgment'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lawyers defending John Z. De Lorean got an apology from the prosecution for an "intimidating" FBI message, and revealed that a government agent who took part in the drug "sting" will testify for the defense.

Attorney Donald Re, saying he and his partner, Howard Weitzman, fear government retaliation for their role in the celebrated cocaine-trafficking case, complained Tuesday to U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi about the message.

Re said Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Perry had told Weitzman that the agency was "upset" with Weitzman's public criticism of FBI agent Benedict Tisa's testimony, and Perry apologized in court.

The incident provided evidence of frayed tempers in defense and prosecution camps at the end of Weitzman's fierce, eight-day cross-examination of Tisa.

De Lorean, 59, a former General Motors executive who started his own sports car company in Northern Ireland, is on trial for allegedly conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in a futile effort to save the firm from bankruptcy. He faces up to 72 years in prison if convicted on all charges.

Perry said he had relayed to Weitzman the concerns of the Los Angeles FBI chief, who thought he heard Weitzman call Tisa "a liar and a crook" in a television interview. Weitzman said he never used those words.

"I would ... like to apologize to the court for having the bad judgment to bring this up," said Perry.

"I want to make this a public apology to Mr. Weitzman," he said. "I'm sorry if you read more into my words than I said. I didn't mean to upset you."

Takasugi called the comments "utterances in the heat of battle" and took no action in the matter, which took place with the jury absent.

President pushing for Salvadoran aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key House Democrat wants the debate over foreign aid legislation in the House to end with President Reagan getting the money he is seeking for El Salvador.

A catchall $10.5 billion foreign aid bill has become the backdrop for congressional arguments over the administration's Central American policies.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, says it is time to give the president what he has been asking for.

"It doesn't make any sense to have a friend who is bleeding and refuse to give him a tourniquet," Wright said Tuesday after a bipartisan leadership meeting at the White House.

Wright's comments to reporters contrasted sharply with those of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., who holds that no military aid whatsoever should be sent to El Salvador.

In a nationally televised speech tonight, President Reagan was expected to make a strong pitch to the legislators to support his requests to bolster aid to El Salvador and help the country's battle against leftist guerrillas.

Wright criticized the bill put forward by House Democrats that places tough restrictions on U.S. aid to El Salvador.

He said that one of the plans put forward by House Republicans, which goes a long way toward giving the president virtually everything he has asked for, "has merit."

The president has asked for $132.5 million in 1985 authority for military funding for El Salvador. Congress has already appropriated $64.8 million for this year.

The president asked for additional 1984 aid and a $61.7 million supplemental measure passed the Senate, but it stalled in the House as representatives expressed fears that the administration was broadening the U.S. military involvement in Central America.

The foreign aid bill, which covers the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, places numerous conditions on the release of funds to El Salvador.

The bill authorizes $64.8 million in military aid to El Salvador if Reagan reports "demonstrated progress" in human rights and other reforms by the Salvadoran government. An additional $124.5 million would be made available if the president is able to report that military involvement in death squads has ended and unconditional negotiations with leftist guerrillas have begun.

Methodist to revise wording of hymns

BALTIMORE (AP) — The United Methodist Church has decided to produce a new hymn book — but there were some sour notes about the plan to use sexually "inclusive" language in the lyrics.

Several delegates at the denomination's quadrennial governing conference said Tuesday that many members are not ready for modified wording, and would resist it.

But a strong majority approved the proposal Tuesday, adding a qualifying amendment that the producers of the book "respect the language of historic hymns."

"People are scared to death of this inclusive language," said Peggy Coates of Galveston, Texas. She added that the denomination should not undertake a project "that we cannot afford and that members don't want."

LaVerne Burton of Hot Springs, Ark., said the project was being pushed prematurely and could drive some people out of the church.

"Please leave the traditional hymns as they are," she asked the delegates.

Her reference was apparently to such old favorites as "Faith of Our Fathers," "Stand Up O Men Of God," and others with male-oriented usage. However, there were indications that some of these time-honored wordings would be preserved.

The Rev. Edward L. Duncan of Adrian, Mich., said a new hymnal could be a "unifying force in a diverse church" and would offer "the Lord a new song."

Turkish political prisoners tortured

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of men and women detained under martial law in Turkey have been tortured with beatings and electric shocks, Amnesty International charged today.

The human rights organization, winner of the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize, alleged that detainees were burned with cigarettes, tied to hot radiator pipes, suspended from the ceiling by their hands or feet for long periods and routinely subjected to beatings ont he soles of their feet.

The organization said more than 500 political prisoners at Mamak Military Prison went on a hunger strike Feb. 22, and that since then beatings had stopped and inmates were allowed family visits.

Turkey, a NATO member, adopted military rule in September 1980 when the army stepped in to end a wave of left- and right-wing terrorism. The armed forces remain powerful, although there were general elections in November and local elections in March that represented a partial return to democracy.

"Allegations of widespread and systematic torture of political prisoners continued throughout 1983 and the pattern has shown no significant change during 1984," Amnesty said.

Freighter carrying cocaine seized

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Navy patrol boats stopped a Colombian freighter at sea, seized $256 million worth of cocaine being smuggled to the United States, and arrested all 18 crew members, a navy spokesman said.

Lt. Julio Raudales said Tuesday that several patrol boats intercepted the freighter, which he identified as the 790-ton freighter Carib Freeze, in the Caribbean near Puerto Cortes, 125 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

He said an inspection by navy officers who boarded the freighter showed it carried 3,960 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $256 million in clandestine retail markets in the United States.

"The cocaine discovered on board the freighter was 80 percent pure, that is to say of magnificent quality," Raudales said. He said the ship and crew were escorted to Puerto Cortes.

The crew said the Carib Freeze had sailed April 31 from the Colombian Atlantic coast port of Tiburon for Miami, Raudales said.

Women defy Iranian bank's order

LONDON (AP) — Fifty women arrived at work wearing short skirts and makeup in defiance of an Iranian bank's attempt to impose traditional Islamic dress on women employees at the downtown London office.

The women had been told they would be sent home unless they cover their heads and arms, wear dark clothing and use only "minimal makeup," union leader John Townsend said. But the women were allowed into the Bank Melli Iran on Tuesday.

Only one woman, an Iranian who refused to give her name, said she would abide by the new ruling, although she was wearing makeup and a shortish skirt today.

"It is unreasonable and they should not comply with it," said Townsend, negotiating officer for the 151,000-member Banking, Insurance and Finance Union following the order by senior officials of the Iranian state bank in Moorgate.

Request for extradition granted

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An appeals court has granted a U.S. request for the extradition of former Bolivian Interior Minister Luis Arce Gomez on drug smuggling conspiracy charges.

Despite Tuesday's ruling, the whereabouts of the former army colonel was are unknown and there was no indication he remains in Argentina.

Arce Gomez was interior minister during the military regime of Gen. Luis Garcia Meza from 1980 to 1982. He was dishonorably discharged from the Bolivian armed forces and traveled to Argentina shortly after Hernan Siles Zuazo became Bolivia's president in October 1982.

Athletes fear Soviet politics

By JOHN NELSON
Associated Press Writer

A Soviet withdrawal improves the prospects for other nations to win medals at the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles, but that seemed little comfort for athletes who worried that "there'll always be that asterisk by your name."

Some feared politics may someday close the Olympics for good.

"You know something? Politics stinks," Eddie Liddie, a top U.S. contender in judo competition, said Tuesday after learning that the Soviets would not allow their powerful team to participate.

Some athletes, however, like U.S. pole vaulter Earl Bell, said they weren't bothered by the Soviets' withdrawal.

"A few years from now, when people remember that Earl Bell won the gold medal in 1984, they won't remember that the Russians weren't there," Bell said. "So who cares if they come or not?"

West Germany's fencing team chief, Harald Hein, remembered the Soviets' dominance in 1980, when 82 nations joined the U.S.-led boycott over the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"The Soviets won a lot of medals in Moscow because fencers from the West — potential medalists — weren't there. ... This time it will be the reverse," Hein said.

Four years ago, the Soviet team won 195 medals, 80 of them gold.

"That was, far and away, the most in history, but obviously the competition was watered down. We felt we had our best Olympic team in 1980, and we feel the same way with this one," said Mike Moran, information director of the U.S Olympic Committee.

Liddie said the current judo team was "the best ... America has ever had, and we wanted to show the world that."

"But now, when we do well, everybody will just say, 'Aw, it doesn't mean anything. The Russians weren't there," he said.

Teammate Craig Agena, an Army officer, described himself as "a soldier and an American first. I'm an athlete after that." He said the Soviets' absence could make it easier to win medals, "but there'll always be that asterisk by your name, so it's too bad."

The prevalent fear was that politics eventually would destroy the Olympic movement entirely.

FOOD FOR

ACTIVE LIFESTYLES

America—it's a country on the move. From the executive who totes a gym bag to work and runs the racquetball court at lunch, to picnickers who pack a meal and bicycle to a special destination—today's lifestyles reveal a new awareness of physical fitness and health.

Our eating habits are on the move, too. Food patterns have been influenced by the nation's interest in a more active lifestyle. Consumers are eating more whole-grain products, fresh fruits and vegetables, and are looking for foods that accommodate their busy schedules.

Featured here is a selection of recipes that fits right into today's lifestyles. They're the kinds of foods that can travel with you for eating on-the-go, or that can be enjoyed at home. In addition, each recipe makes the most of nourishing ingredients and is highlighted with the moist, naturally sweet flavor and juicy texture of Golden Delicious apples.

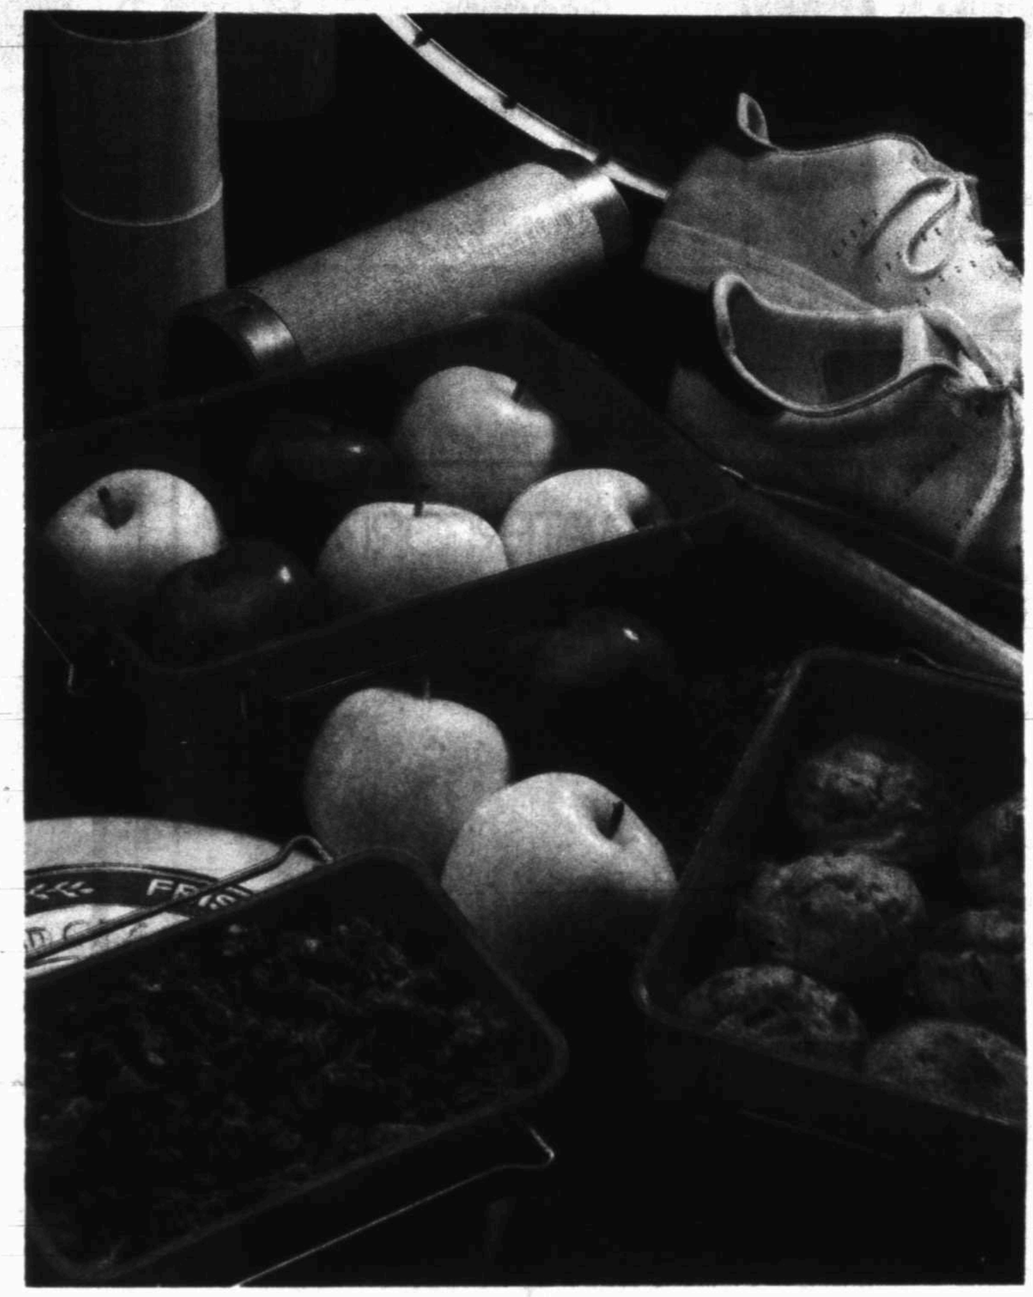
For early morning exercisers or avid snackers, tote along Whole-Wheat Apple Muffins or Golden Apple Granola. Both are made with whole-wheat flour, crunchy chopped nuts and fragrant spices, and are laced with sweet Golden Delicious apples. Pack these wholesome treats in plastic bags and eat them on-the-go or serve them at home with cold milk. They're excellent for satisfying a hungry morning or any time appetite.

Picnickers will love Golden Apple Chicken Sandwiches and Apple Calico Bean Salad. Tender cooked chicken and crunchy Golden Delicious apples are highlighted with toasted almonds and spicy curry powder in the sandwich filling. Enjoy this mixture between two slices of bread or served, as-is, on lettuce leaves.

For Apple Calico Bean Salad, simply combine three varieties of beans with juicy Golden Delicious apples, celery and a vinaigrette dressing; marinate and serve.

And for those who want a quick-to-prepare, lean entree, there's Golden Apple Stuffed Fillets. Delicate whitefish fillets are stuffed with a sweet, savory filling of shredded Golden Delicious apples and carrots, complemented with a medley of seasonings—parsley, lemon juice, ginger and white wine. Prepare this entree in the microwave or in a conventional oven.

Golden Delicious apples from Washington State are ideal for a fresh, healthful snack any time of the day. They're low in sodium, contain important vitamins and minerals and provide fiber to the diet. And, one medium-sized apple contains approximately 80 calories.



GOLDEN APPLE GRANOLA

- 4 cups old-fashioned rolled oats
- 3 cups chopped Golden Delicious apples
- 3/4 cup whole-wheat flour
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup apple juice
- 1/2 cup chopped dates
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine oats apples, flour, walnuts, brown sugar, cinnamon and salt; mix well. Heat apple juice; add dates and let stand 15 minutes or until softened. Mash and blend well; slowly beat in oil and vanilla. Pour mixture over dry ingredients; stir to moisten evenly. Crumble in thin layer on greased large baking sheet. Bake at 350°F. 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 250°F.; bake 1 hour. Stir; bake 1-1/2 to 2 hours longer or until mixture is dry. Stir every 45 minutes. Makes 6 to 7 cups.

WHOLE WHEAT APPLE MUFFINS

- 1 cup each flour and whole-wheat flour
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1 cup lowfat milk
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 cup finely chopped Golden Delicious apple
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts (optional)

Combine flours, sugar, baking powder, salt and allspice. Add milk, oil and egg; stir only until ingredients are blended. Fold in apples and nuts. Fill 12 greased muffin cups almost full. Bake at 400°F. about 30 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Makes 12 muffins.

Cooking and baking are natural uses for Golden Delicious apples as they hold their shape well when heated. Their cut flesh stays white longer than that of other apple varieties and paring is not necessary as the skins of Goldens are so tender.

QUICK AND SIMPLE SERVING IDEAS

Serve slices or wedges of Golden Delicious apples with assorted cheeses for a continental-style snack or appetizer.

Serve slices of crisp Golden Delicious apples with a refreshing yogurt dip for a light dessert.

Add chopped Golden Delicious apples to peanut butter and spread on whole-wheat toast for breakfast or for a snack.

Dice, chop or slice Golden Delicious apples and add to tuna, turkey, chicken, potato, tossed green or spinach salad.

Add Golden Delicious apple slices to stir-fried chicken, fish or beef and heat thoroughly.

SELECTION: Choose Golden Delicious apples with firm skin. Apples will range in color, depending on maturity, from light green to creamy yellow. Light green apples will have a slightly tart flavor and creamy yellow fruit will have a sweeter flavor.

STORAGE: Store apples in a plastic bag in the refrigerator. Apples ripen 10 times faster at room temperature and five times faster at 40°F. than at 32°F.

Cookbook offers tips on using healthy ingredients

Copley News Service

If you're a vegetarian in a family of meat-eaters and want to make sure that you all eat natural, healthy foods, here's a cookbook you'll welcome with open arms — "Rodale's Basic Natural Foods Cookbook."

It offers over 1,500 recipes, all using health-wise ingredients. Yes — even those that contain meat! (The majority do not.) All recipes are salt-free, and make minimal use of processed and artificial ingredients.

The book, edited by Charles Gerras, offers tips on using whole grain flours (none of the recipes uses white flour) — and it even tells you how to grind your own! Honey is the main sweetener here, while a few recipes call for date sugar or molasses.

Sections on grains, nuts and seeds, sprouts, legumes, salads, vegetables, even sea vegetables, are of particular interest to vegetarians. A guide to meatless cooking, with information on soyfoods, complementary proteins, flavorings and menu suggestions, offers helpful tips.

Nutritional charts show what time of year is best to buy healthful foods for quality, flavor and price. You'll learn how to get the most out of herbs and spices, how to make perfect sauces, how to remedy whole wheat baking problems.

The book gets down to such basics as how to properly fry or scramble an egg — and then goes on to more elaborate dishes such as souffles and frittatas. As a guide for beginning cooks who favor natural, whole-foods cuisine, "Rodale's" is an excellent compendium of how-tos. The more experienced cook will glory in such recipes as: Brown Rice Salad with Radishes and Snow Peas, Rosemary-Garlic Pizza Bread, Mandarin Mushrooms and Whole Garden Soup with Rice and Pesto. Detailed step-by-step instructions guarantee anyone can turn out healthful and delicious meals.

Those vegetarians who cook for meat-eating families will be glad to find a source of natural recipes. Here, meats are teamed with whole grain bread crumbs, whole wheat flour, tofu — and seasoned with herbs, spices and lemon juice — not salt.

And, of course, there are the many meatless recipes which will delight the vegetarian looking for new and nutritious whole-foods dishes.

"Rodale's' is a welcome addition to the kitchen library of all health-conscious cooks. Today's recipes are from "Rodale's Basic Natural Foods Cookbook," Rodale Press, Inc., 33 East Minor St., Emmaus, PA 18049.

Canadian bacons completely different

By MERLE ELLIS

Toronto is, on almost any and all counts, a marvelous city. It's clean, it's beautiful, it has an abundance of fine restaurants and a nice variety of cultural niceties. But on a recent trip to that city, I discovered that what I like best about the place is its bacon.

They have some incredible bacons in Toronto. I use the plural because in Canada they don't just have one kind of bacon; they have several. I'm not talking about brands of bacon — we have dozens of those in this country — I'm talking about different kinds of bacon, so different from anything we have here that, unfortunately, there is no comparison.

At "The Butcher Shoppe," a little market in the Kensington area of Toronto, I counted eight different kinds of bacon, not more than one of which would you find in a U.S. supermarket. Here, bacon is bacon, whatever the brand. There, they have "back bacon," "belly bacon," "side bacon," "streaky," "gammon rasher," "Aryshire," "Wiltshire" and "pea-meal." The only kind of bacon that they don't seem to have in Canada is what we call "Canadian bacon."

The term "Canadian bacon," according to gastronomic historians who keep track of such things, originated in England. It seems that at some time in the distant past there was a shortage of pork in the mother country. Rather than face the dismal prospect of a baconless breakfast, importers brought in "back bacon" from Canada. Since Canadian back bacon is very like English back bacon — the back of all pigs being essentially the same — the English began calling the imported stuff "Canadian bacon" to distinguish it from their own. The name stuck and now back bacon is called Canadian bacon — except in Canada.

In this country, Canadian bacon is totally different from any of the bacon I saw at the shop in the Kensington marketplace. There, the whole side of the hog — the back (which we call the loin), the side (our "bacon," which they call "streaky") and the belly — all are cured and smoked in one piece, complete with the skin and the flavorful layer of fat between the skin and flesh.

Some of the many bacons of Canada are not smoked at all, but are cured to provide what Canadians call "Ayrshire" or "green" bacon. If green back bacon is rolled in a good covering of coarse-ground golden corn meal, it becomes "pea-meal" bacon.

You can, however, cure your own. It's easy, and if you want to taste a real breakfast meat treat, it's well worth doing.

Buy a piece of boneless center cut pork loin or, if you want to save a little money, buy a rib and pork loin roast and bone it out yourself. I use about a three-pound boneless piece.

For curing you will need a special curing salt, a "complete cure," which is a combination of salt, sugar and sodium nitrite in the proper proportions. There are two companies that make cures that I have used with success: B. Heller and Company makes a home cure called "Complete Cure With Sugar" and the Morton Salt Company calls their product "Tender Quick."

Weigh the boneless pork. For each pound, rub two tablespoons of curing salt into the meat. Rub the cure well into all surfaces of the meat, then put it into a plastic bag, tie the end closed and put it into the refrigerator. Turn the meat occasionally so that all surfaces of the loin will spend an equal amount of time in the brine that will form in the bag. Cure the meat one day for each pound of meat: Three pounds will take three days.

When the curing time is up, remove the meat from the brine and rinse it with cold water. Sprinkle the meat liberally with ground pepper and cover with a generous coating of coarse-ground yellow corn meal. Presto! Pea-meal bacon. To cook, simply slice off slices, bread each with a bit more corn meal and fry.

Sauce poured on cornbread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

BURGER SAUCE

Tomatoes and other vegetables stretch ground beef.

1 to 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, minced
½ pound ground beef
½ cup finely diced onion
1 cup finely sliced celery
¼ cup finely diced green pepper
1-pound and 4-ounce can tomatoes, undrained
1 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste

In a 10-inch skillet, in the hot oil, cook together the garlic and beef. Mash beef with a fork, until it loses its red color and is crumbly; stir in the onion, celery, green pepper and cook a few minutes. Add tomatoes and bay leaf; cook gently, stirring occasionally and breaking up tomatoes, until sauce is as thick as you like — about 30 minutes. Remove bay leaf. Serve over hot cornbread squares. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Pastries made with pistachios

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Cream puffs, often found in pastry shops, have been baked at home successfully by American cooks for a long time. At first the puffs were filled traditionally — with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. And old-fashioned cooks used to keep on hand a large shaker of confectioners' sugar with which to sprinkle the puffs (and other desserts) just before serving.

For some decades now, the puffs have often been made into a savory rather than a sweet. For this they are made small — no bigger than a mouthful — and filled with a savory combination of perhaps cheese or seafood or both.

Interestingly enough, a savory French variation of the puffs made with Swiss cheese (called Gougere and from Burgundy) has been a latecomer to the United States. Only occasionally do you find recipes for it. Now an inventive American cook has varied the French recipe for Gougere by adding pistachios, which contribute great texture. These Pistachio Puffs are delicious served straight from the oven; they do not need to be filled.

PISTACHIO PUFFS

1 cup water
¼-pound stick butter
1 cup all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 large eggs
½ cup shredded Swiss cheese
¼ cup finely chopped pistachios

Heat the water and the butter in a 2-quart saucepan over moderate heat until water boils and butter melts. Add the flour and the salt all at once. Remove from heat; stir vigorously until mixture leaves side of pan and begins to form a ball.

Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition; continue to beat until mixture is smooth and glossy. Stir in the cheese and pistachios.

Drop by rounded tablespoonfuls, about 1 inch apart, onto a large greased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 40 to 45 minutes. Serve at once.

Makes 15 puffs.

Note: You can bake the Pistachio Puffs ahead and, appropriately wrapped, store them in the freezer.

"Roaches forced us out of our own home."

Mr. and Mrs Harry Fleming, Kansas City, Kansas.

"It used to be, every time we sprayed for roaches, we had to leave the house because of the fumes and odor. And we'd still see roaches.

Then we tried Combat®. Now there are no fumes, or odor. And we hardly ever see roaches any more."

"COMBAT IS MUCH EASIER TO USE."

"It would take us all day to get the kitchen ready for spraying. We'd have to take everything out before spraying. And then we'd have to put everything back.

Combat is much, much easier. We put the Combat discs under the sink, under wall cabinets, near cracks by the baseboards and near the refrigerator and range. It only takes us 15, maybe 20 minutes."

"IT'S CLEAN TOO."

"After spraying, there was always a left-over odor or oily film. The house just didn't seem clean.

With Combat, the house feels clean because there are no fumes, odor, or oily film."

"LASTS FOR 3 MONTHS."

"We'd have to spray every 2 or 3 weeks.

Now all we do is put out the Combat discs, write down where we put 'em and forget 'em.

Three months later, we just pick up the old ones and replace them with new ones. No trouble at all."

For large roaches, water and palmetto bugs

For small roaches

KILLS WITHOUT A TRACE
More powerful than leading sprays or foggers.

"OUR PROBLEM IS UNDER CONTROL."

"We've been using Combat for about a year. In all that time we can honestly say that Combat kept our roach problem under control."

Combat is a new, completely different roach killer. So exclusive, it's patented. So powerful, it kills more roaches in a three-month period than repeated applications of sprays and foggers.

Combat's powerful roach killer is contained in child-proof, spill-proof discs. It's dry, so there's no possibility of evaporation.

Simply place the Combat discs according to directions—10 in the kitchen, 2 in the bathroom. Wherever you've seen roaches. Even where you wouldn't dare spray. In food and dish cabinets. In silver and utensil drawers.

With Combat, there are no fumes, odor, oily film or contamination worry.

Replace Combat discs every three months, and you can virtually eliminate your roach problem.

We're so confident Combat works, we guarantee it. Or your money back.

Give Mom a break, prepare dinner for a change

Copley News Service

One day out of the whole year has been designated as the day to honor our mothers, thanks to President Woodrow Wilson's proclamation back on May 9, 1914. He directed officials to display the national flag on government buildings and asked that people hang out their flags on the second Sunday in May as "a public expression of our love and reverence for mothers in our country."

Custom decrees that children wear a red or pink carnation if their mother is living and a white carnation if their mother has passed away.

Flags and carnations are symbolic "thank yous" for the individual responsible for our own health and well-being from the start; responsible for our very existence! Of all the duties in a lifetime, motherhood seems both the most taxing and and most rewarding. How appropriate that we set aside at least one day in which a nation can pay homage to the traditional keeper of home and hearth, or as Wilson phrased it, "the fountainhead of the state."

A good way to show appreciation on this day is to give Mom a break and prepare her dinner for a change. Give her time to watch the baseball game or putter in the garage.

And how lucky for us, in this day of advanced technology, to pop something into a microwave for 5 minutes, contrasted with the tedious ritual of meal preparation our mothers faced a generation ago.

CHICKEN IN WHITE WINE

Arrange chicken in 13x9-inch baking dish. Dot with butter or margarine, sprinkle with tarragon. Cook, covered, for 5 minutes. Rotate dish and baste chicken. Cook 5 minutes longer. Add marinade, half and half and mushroom caps and cook 5 minutes or until chicken is tender. Serves 4.

CREAMED POTATOES AU GRATIN

2 lbs. potatoes
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
1½ cups hot milk
½ tsp. salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Paprika
6 ozs. Swiss cheese, grated

Peel potatoes and slice thinly. Soften butter or margarine in a 2-quart glas bowl for 15 seconds. Stir in flour and hot milk. Add cheese, stir, add seasonings to taste. Add potatoes, stir. Cook, covered, 25 minutes rotating the dish one-half turn and stirring every 5 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes before serving. Serves 6.

ASPARAGUS VINAIGRETTE

¼ tsp. salt
Pinch freshly ground white pepper
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Yolks of two hard-cooked eggs
3 pimiento-stuffed olives, chopped
1 tbsp. finely chopped parsley
1 tsp. chopped chives

Snap and discard tough ends from asparagus. Wash stalks well. Stand asparags upright in 1-quart glass measuring cup. Add boiling water to fill slightly less than halfway. Cover asparagus with tent of wax paper. Cook about 5 minutes, until asparagus is fork-tender. Drain. Blend oil, vinegar, salt, pepper and Worcestershire sauce in a small bowl; cook until steaming hot, 3½ minutes. Add mashed egg yolks, olives and herbs, blend well. Pour sauce over cooked asparagus on serving platter. Serves 4.

CHERRIES JUBILEE

1 (14½ oz.) can pitted bing cherries
1½ tsps. cornstarch
1 tbsp. sugar
½ tsp. cinnamon
¼ cup brandy or cognac
1 pint vanilla ice cream

Drain cherries, reserving liquid. Combine cornstarch with sugar and cinnamo in 1½-quart serving dish. Stir in cherry juice. Cook 2 to 3 minutes, until thickened, stirring after 1½ minutes. Add cherries, heat through, about 2 minutes. Remove. Before serving, warm brandy in cup 20 seconds, ignite and pour over cherries. Spoon the flaming sauce over vanilla ice cream. Serves 4.

Change in diet should include consuming less fat

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — "Fat is the No. 1 dietary menace. If people want to make one change in their diet, the most important one would be to eat less fat."

So says Dr. Michael Jacobson, director of Center for Science in the Public Interest, and his advice is supported by current research.

Diets high in saturated fat and cholesterol are a major cause of heart disease, America's No. 1 killer, and the National Academy of Sciences recently reported that diets high in any kind of fat appear to promote cancers of the breast and large intestine.

Americans eat far more fat than they realize because so much of it is hidden in foods not usually thought of as fatty.

Consider:

More than 80 percent of the calories in a hot dog come from fat.

French fries provide 99 calories of fat, compared to essentially none in a baked potato.

One food, Wendy's triple cheeseburger sandwich, has more fat than the average person should consume in an entire day.

MORE THAN half the calories in potato chips and corn chips come from fat, compared to just 11 percent of the calories in pretzels and 15 percent in plain popcorn.

More than 80 percent of the calories in bologna come from fat.

Only a third of the calories in a McDonald's hamburger sandwich come from fat, but more than half the calories in a Big Mac are fat calories.

Fast foods are some of the biggest fat culprits. Not only are they usually high in calories, but about 40 to 50 percent of their calories come from fat. Keep in mind that the National Academy of Sciences' committee on diet, nutrition and cancer has recommended that only 30 percent of our calories come from fat.

According to research by nutritionist Bonnie Liebman, of CSPI, the average woman consuming 2,000 calories daily would get about three-fourths of the fat she should eat in an entire day just by consuming one Extra Crispy Combination Kentucky Fried Chicken Dinner or a Big Mac or Whopper, regular french fries and a small chocolate shake. The average man would consume about 53 percent of his recommended daily fat intake.

A Wendy's double cheeseburger, french fries and shake would provide 89 percent of the man's fat allowance and would put the woman over the top, Liebman found.

THE GROWING number of Americans who eat fast-food meals is of concern to nutrition awareness groups, such as the Washington, D.C.-based CSPI. According to the Food and Drug Administration's "Consumer" publication, Americans last year spent two of every five away-from-home food dollars on fast foods.

Fast foods do provide many of the elements found in home-cooked meals: A hamburger on a bun provides as much protein, iron, zinc, thiamin, riboflavin and niacin per ounce as one cooked at home.

But fast food also provides heavy doses of saturated fat and sodium, both of which can contribute to the risk of heart attack and stroke.

In working to reduce the fat in our diets, consumption of fast foods should be kept to a minimum and the fast foods that are ordered should be chosen with care.

But we also need to be aware of the types of fat hiding in other foods.

Not all fats are the same. Basically, there are two types of fatty acids: saturated and unsaturated.

Saturated fat comes from animal fats (beef, butter, cheese, egg yolks) and should be avoided.

Unsaturated fats come from vegetable fats and are safer to consume.

UNSATURATED FATS fall into two categories: polyunsaturated and monosaturated. Polyunsaturated is found in foods like vegetable oil, most margarines and fish. Monounsaturated is found in peanut butter, avocado and olives. Polyunsaturated is better than monounsaturated.

The type of fat we eat is important because it affects the level of cholesterol in our blood. Cholesterol is the waxy gunk that clogs arteries and contributes to heart disease. Diets that are rich in saturated fat tend to raise the level of blood cholesterol, while polyunsaturated fats help to lower it. Monounsaturates seem to have no effect on cholesterol level.

The National Academy of Sciences recommends eating less fat and more fresh fruits, vegetables and whole grains to reduce the risk of cancer.

Other guidelines to keep in mind are:

Eat red meat at most only once a day and keep portions small; three ounces is more than enough protein for most adults, especially when combined with vegetables and complex carbohydrates such as pasta, potatoes or rice. Chicken, turkey and fish contain less total fat and less saturated fat than beef and pork.

WHEN BUYING meat, choose lean cuts. Avoid well-marbled cuts. For beef, the leanest cuts are eye of round, shoulder (or arm), rump, chuck with round bone, sirloin tip roasts, flank, round, tenderloin, sirloin tip steaks, extra-lean ground beef, lean stew meat.

Most fish are low in total fat and in saturated fat, except for tuna canned in oil, salmon, sardines canned in oil and mackerel. Most shellfish are higher in cholesterol than most meats, but they are low in fat and can be substituted for meat, (except for shrimp, which is higher in cholesterol than other shellfish and should be substituted for meat only occasionally).

Avoid high-fat meats, such as hot dogs, luncheon meats, canned meat, sausage, regular bacon, spareribs, regular hamburger and compressed veal patties.

Broil or roast meats, fish and poultry rather than frying or stewing them. This allows the fat to drip off, and you can then discard it.

Honey has long sweetened up springtime

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Well, it's finally spring, and you know what that means! If you find your fancies turning toward the opposite sex, make like a bee and sweeten things up with a little honey. Your honey will eat it up!

Until the end of the Middle Ages, this clear amber liquid was the most popular sweetener in existence. In ancient India, honey was served on holy days and at state banquets. In fact, honey probably was the first sweetener ever used by man. Egyptian tombs from 3000 B.C. depict honey-collecting techniques which must have been in use long before they were recorded for posterity.

With today's growing interest in natural foods, honey is enjoying a resurgence of popularity. Once thought to be an aphrodisiac, honey is now hailed as the most "natural" of natural sweeteners. A substance created by thousands of tiny busy bees has just got to be more natural than, say, cane sugar which must be extracted by human labor. Right? Not necessarily.

Honey itself is almost pure sugar. It does contain small amounts of iron, which is not present in refined white sugar — but not enough to make a significant contribution to your diet. Honey is nutritionally much the same as brown sugar, except that it's in solution. Is it really any better for you than sugar? Maybe not — but it does have a wonderful variety of flavors, depending on what type you buy. And in many recipes it imparts a certain unique lusciousness which honey enthusiasts can't do without.

A note of caution, though: honey should not be fed to children under 1 year of age because it has been linked with cases of infant botulism. While perfectly safe for older children and adults, infants may become seriously ill after ingesting honey.

So save it for the older kids in the family, including yourself. And when your springtime fancies turn to love, whip up a honey of a dish for yourself and your sweetie.

HONEY-COATED CARROTS

4 medium carrots, sliced
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 tbsps. honey
2 tbsps. water
¼ tsp. salt

Pretzel: Traditional snack with twist

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

HANOVER, Pa. — No site in the Eastern United States is more appropriate for the twisted art of pretzel making than this unassuming town nestled in a gentle terrain of rolling hills and farmland.

The area is ideal for the production of this snack, caught somewhere between a cracker and a biscuit, because the location anchors the fringe of the Pennsylvania Dutch country. This region is the home for the nation's early German settlements (despite the confusing reference to the Netherlands), and ancestors of this immigrant group boldly pioneered the pretzel while others were simply content with pumpernickel.

Although the marriage of beer and pretzels was probably made in a Munich beer hall, it was not the Germans' love of brew (or even Germans) that was responsible for this savored snack. Folkorists believe that the immigrants brought to this country a pretzel-baking tradition that originated about AD 610 in a Southern French, or possibly Northern Italian monastery.

Apparently on a whim, a monk formed an otherwise worthless batch of dough bits into the famliar twisted shape. The primitive treats were given to children who memorized the latest prayer or performed the appropriate genuflection. In fact, the pretzel's odd shape is actually meant to resemble a child's arms folded in reverence, according to pretzel historians.

TRADITION FURTHER records that the pretzel took on its hard texture as the result of a baking accident. Ovens left unattended produced a burned and brittle pretzel that was consumed with delight by some undiscerning soul. After evaluating the enthusiastic reception afforded the mishap, the bakers continued producing the now-familiar hard pretzel.

History has a limited appeal, though, when it comes to successfully marketing food. What has made this area the center of "pretzeldom" is a collection of bakers all with a longstanding dedication to quality. The pride is apparent from those few traditionalists still hand-rolling dough to the modernists that rely on automation.

The fact that there are only three companies that market pretzels nationally bears out the significant role of the little man in the $260 million industry, which produces 300 million pounds of pretzels annually. The small-scale bakers prefer the role of regionalists content with properly serving smaller marketing areas rather than wrestle with the tangle of nationwide distribution, according to a spokeswoman for the Lancaster, Pa.,-based National Pretzel Bakers' Institute.

"THE MAJORITY of pretzel consumption takes place in the East," said Michele Madonna of the bakers' institute. "The reason is pretzels have a German origin and, consequenty, Pennsylvania is the heartland because of its large German population. The majority of pretzels are produced here by local manufacturers because it is not cost effective for them to ship west of the Mississippi River.

The commitment to manageable size and quality is epitomized here by Hanover Guest Quality Foods Corp., the leading pretzel-marketing company in the Northeastern United States, thus geographically poised to satisfy the region's voracious appetite. The company is more familiar to its customers as Snyder's of Hanover and is celebrated for its best-selling item: old-fashioned, sourdough hard pretzels. This twisted delicacy is similar in size to Bavarian-style pretzels, but the similarities end with the measurement.

These thick, crumbly morsels are a snack-food lover's dream and conversely a nightmare for those with delicate dental work or badgered with reducing sodium intake. These particular pretzels are a shimmering bronze delicacy liberally dotted with the tangiest, coarse salt. They cannot be eaten in quiet and the distinctive crunching created by a Snyder's pretzel can disturb people within a 10-foot radius of the actual munching.

SNYDER'S WAS founded more than 40 years ago and the company now makes 17 different types of pretzels, but it is the sourdough version that has brought it raves from consumers, local television and even a national political columnist.

"Our hard pretzels are just a delicious tasting product that people just keep coming back for," said Mike Warehime, president of Hanover Guest. "We have gotten an enormous number of compliments on our sourdough hard pretzel."

A look inside the Snyder's bakery, a cavernous room buzzing with the hum of machinery, makes it clear that there is more to pretzel making than just twisting dough. The pretzels get their start from some basic ingredients (flour, water and yeast) in industrial mixers where the right dough texture is obtained.

From there the dough is funneled to 15 automated, two-armed machines which twist the material into the familiar pretzel shape. The twisters then, almost affectionately, crimp the ends of the pretzel for good measure.

The next step initiates the interesting part of the process. The pretzels are placed, all facing eastward for some unexplained reason, on a beltway that leads to the massive Snyder's ovens. The 20 minutes on the extended beltways allows the dough to double in size.

SNYDER'S OPERATES six ovens, one as long as 75 feet, side by side in what would appear to be a creative baker's nightmare. However, the technical aspects of pretzel baking make the job interesting.

"Baking is the biggest challenge in the company," said Robert L. Hollabaugh, plant manager. "Pretzel making is an art; not a science. It is something learned from years of experience. For instance, each oven has a distinctively different temperament."

Before being coaxed into the ovens the pretzels are sprayed with a soda bath, actually a caustic-based lye, that creates the lustrous brown sheen. Then they are seasoned with a specially formulated coarse salt before a 20-minute run through the ovens.

Once baked, the pretzels take a slow 1 1-2-hour ride into a chamber underneath the ovens that hardens them to the proper crunching consistency.

With that process Snyder's can pump out 9 million pretzels in any 24-hour shift; 5 million of which are the celebrated sourdough hards.

The company has recently announced plans for limited distribution in Los Angeles, a move that may put fear in the minds of all those West Coast distributors of less renowned pretzels. The concern is inevitable, according to one longtime customer.

Dutch grow much food

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

I recently visited what is now a land of plenty, despite its grim history.

The Netherlands, a sea-threatened country of 13.5 million people, has a spectacular agricultural output that dwarfs that of countries 10 times as big.

This, despite the fact that about one third of the land was wrested from the sea. It overran part of the country again in 1953, killing more than 1,800 people.

A visitor to this land is struck by the network of canals and, if the season is right, fields ablaze with tulips in bloom.

About 70 percent of the little nation is devoted to farming. You see meadows with grazing cows which have made Holland the world's greatest exporter of cheese.

Then there are the pens filled with pigs which supply the bacon, sausages and rosy hams for which the country is known.

Long rows of lettuce, cucumbers, tomatoes and other vegetables line the neatly cultivated land as summer approaches. But this is only part of the picture. Thousands of greenhouses lie glittering in the sun in almost every field. They provide vegetables all winter as well as the brilliant flowers which are exported all over the world.

The Netherlands' acreage under glass has more than doubled since 1950, which partly explains why its agricultural industry now accounts for more than 27 percent of total Dutch industrial sales.

Cheese still reigns supreme in the Dutch marketplace as it has for centuries. Edam and Gouda are the best known, and a quarter of a million tons of those two types are exported each year to about 100 countries.

I found Dutch food delicious, but some native customs took getting used to, such as dipping french fried potatoes in mayonnaise. Or eating ham, or roast beef and cheese on thick slices of bread for breakfast.

DEAR ABBY

Woman believes 20-year age gap too wide

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The man I dearly loved for two years walked out on me to take up with the woman who had been my best friend for 25 years! I am devastated. She had been separated from her husband, so I foolishly invited her along to make it a threesome. I'm 50 and am now going with "R," a man of 70 who has been waiting in the wings for me. He loves me, but I can't return his love as I will always love the other man no matter what he does.

I admire and respect "R," but I feel the need of a younger man. (Am I wrong?) He is good in the bedroom, but I feel like I'm making love to my father, and that bothers me.

"R" insists on the bedroom scene and I would rather not. (Can you blame me?) How do I get around this? He's attractive and well-to-do and would give me the moon. People say I look 40, and I feel 30. What should I do? — HURTING

DEAR HURTING: Since you are not sexually attracted to "R" and he insists on the bedroom scene, he is clearly not for you. It's lovely to have a man who would give you "the moon," but what good is the moon if you need a younger man? It's not up to me to blame or judge you. You are the one who must live with your decision. Let him go for your sake and his. There are plenty of women your age who would find "R" the answer to their prayers.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I need a couple of questions answered. In the last two years, three of our son's girlfriends have had babies by him. What are those babies to us? And what are they to our son?

And if our son should decide to marry one of these girls, would he have to adopt his own baby to make it legally his? — NEEDS ANSWERS IN ALABAMA

DEAR NEEDS: The children fathered by your son are your grandchildren regardless of whether they were born in or out of wedlock. And your son is the father of these children. You need more than answers from me; you need counsel from a lawyer who practices law in your state.

And let me offer a little unasked-for advice: It's high time your son learned something about BIRTH control as well as SELF-control.

DEAR ABBY: I love birds, which is why I'm writing. For some years now, I have been offended by the expression "for the birds." When people want to express a negative opinion of something, they say, "It's for the birds."

Why, Abby? Birds are the most beautiful of all God's creatures, and their music is among the most glorious of all sounds. What did they ever do to earn the disparaging "It's for the birds" reputation?

I would like to know where that unkind expression originated. — FOR THE BIRDS

DEAR FOR: So would I. If a word (or a bird) lover out there knows, I'll deliver the message.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ABBY'S PECAN PIE BAKERS: The recipe states that the pie should be baked for 45 to 50 minutes in a preheated 350-degree gas oven. Please note: If an electric oven is used, add 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time. If a toothpick inserted in the center of the pie comes out clean, it's done. (Test the pie after 45 minutes.)

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Artichokes steamed

STEAMED ARTICHOKES

Rinse 4 medium artichokes (each about ½ pound); cut off stems evenly at base and discard. With kitchen scissors, clip off thorny tips of leaves and discard. Stand artichokes upright in a steamer with a solid-bottom top. Steam, tightly covered, until artichoke hearts are tender and a leaf pulls out easily — about 30 minutes. Cover and chill. Serve cold with lemon wedges and ground pepper. Makes 4 servings. —(AP)

Truman has series of failures before call of politics

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Harry Truman went to work in a zinc and lead mine he bought in early 1916 with the fanciful notion he would strike it rich and thereby persuade his well-to-do sweetheart to marry him.

"Just think what a win would mean," Harry wrote in an Aug. 19, 1916, letter to Bess Wallace, the woman he loved. "All my debts paid (something that no one of the name ever accomplished), a city home, a country home, some automobiles and flying machines — and who knows but maybe a yat (yacht? what?), and you to boss the whole thing."

A few weeks later, the mining company went bust. And Bess, unwilling to become a farm wife, was still putting off marriage.

But Truman didn't give up. When the mine slipped into disaster, he and a couple of partners formed an oil investment and drilling company.

"If this venture blows, I'll know I'm hoodooed," Truman said in a letter to Bess in January 1917. "I don't want to be a bloated plutocrat, but I would like very much to have enough to tell my creditors to take my liabilities off the books and then have something left over ... just enough for a country place, a machine or two, and a couple of new dresses a year for the lady."

Truman worked hard, but his bad luck continued. He and his associates, for example, stopped drilling a well in Kansas, a few hundred feet short of tapping what years later proved to be one of the richest oil fields in the state.

"I seem to have a grand and admirable ability for calling tails when heads come up," Truman wrote to Bess in May 1917.

By this time, however, the United States had entered World War I. Truman signed up to lead an artillery battery in France, leaving his dwindling share of the oil business up for grabs and glowing with a promise from Bess that she would marry him upon his return.

The two were married in 1919, and Truman made a final stab at business. He started a haberdashery, but that too only lasted a few years. He then started a political career that carried him to the White House.

Truman's brief foray into the mining and oil businesses is an almost forgotten chapter of his life, which began 100 years ago in a small house in Lamar, Mo. Truman himself did not talk about it much.

"It was a classic case of a naive investor's bad timing and bad luck," said Thomas Heed, a history professor.

Broommaking a sweeping business from start to finish

PRAGUE, Neb. (AP) — Most people look at a broom and simply see something to sweep grass clippings off the sidewalk, glass off the kitchen floor or dirt from the back porch.

But Anton Vanek of rural Prague looks at brooms with the eyes of a connoisseur. Vanek's hobby is making brooms.

In a little shop not far from his house, common house brooms, decorative fireplace brooms, brooms of all sizes, hang in neat rows from the vaulted ceiling. A woodburning stove that Vanek fashioned from a large silver-colored barrel heats the small building. Vanek's broom-making equipment, built from pieces of old farm machinery, sits along the walls.

Vanek said he had started making brooms about 10 years ago because he wanted to see how broomcorn grew.

Vanek plants his broomcorn, a member of the sorghum family, in May. In September he cuts tassles from which the brooms are made from 7-foot-high stalks. Harvesting the broomcorn is the hardest part of raising it, not only because Vanek cuts it with a knife, but because it must be cut in a week to yield a good product.

To harvest the corn, Vanek walks backward between two rows, taking one stalk in each hand. He breaks the stalks about 3 feet from the ground and crosses one over the other in front of him. He repeats the process with the next two stalks until he reaches the end of the row. Each pair of stalks contributes to what Vanek calls a table.

"Then you walk along each side of the table that you made with the broken stalks and cut off the tassles," he said.

The tassles are put in small piles on the table.

"That way you don't have to bend like you would if you threw them on the ground," he explained.

When he's finished cutting, Vanek hauls the tassles to a shed and uses a homemade thrasher to eliminate the seed. Then the broomcorn is left to dry for three or four weeks.

Vanek also uses a homemade tool to cut the tassles into the proper lengths for each type of broom he will make. For a house broom, the straw must be 19 inches long on the inside and 21 inches long on the outside. The straw is then placed in bunches for storage. Vanek can make two 30-pound bunches in a day.

"Before I start, I weigh out a certain amount for each broom," Vanek said. "For a house broom I use a little over a pound and a half. For a warehouse broom I use a hair over two pounds (of broomcorn)."

The straw is placed in boiling water so it will be easy to bend.

'Beurs' come into own in France

PARIS (AP) — They call themselves "Beurs," and though the word was coined in immigrant ghettos on the outskirts of French cities, it has come to represent the emerging new self-awareness of the sons and daughters of North African immigrants in France.

As if to symbolize the plight of these young people of Algerian, Moroccan and Tunisian blood, the word "Beur" was formed by reversing the syllables of the word "Arab" in the French slang called Verlan.

Radio Beur and Media Soleil, two Paris-region FM stations, have given voice to this new constituency. Slogans like "Beur is beautiful" have appeared, reminiscent of the 1960s Black Pride movement in the United States.

Straddling two cultures, one European and predominantly Christian, the other Arab and Islamic, the Beurs are seeking to find a place in French society.

"Now they're going to demand a certain number of rights," said Farid Aichoune, 32, director of the magazine Sans Frontieres (Without Borders), a 30,000-circulation monthly devoted to immigrant issues. "They're not going to apologize for being here."

"Les Beurs" attained recognition last December, when a group protesting racism toured the French provinces and ended with a 60,000-strong rally in Paris.

"The march was the result of a new collective consciousness," said Georgina Dufoix, France's highest official for immigrant affairs, in an interview.

There are only about 400,000 Beurs, but they are one of the most visible segments of the 1.5 million-strong North African immigrant community in France.

They are far more aware of their rights than their immigrant parents, according to Jose Vieira of the Paris-based Association for the Support of Immigrant Workers.

"They won't accept the same conditions our parents accepted," said Vieira, 26, the son of Portuguese immigrants. "We won't go through what they went through."

In addition, the Beurs want to be accepted for what they are: French and Arab. Some of the Beurs were born in France, others in North Africa. But nearly all feel trapped between the two cultures.

Taieb Amine, 24, a young singer-songwriter of Algerian descent, explained: "We're not at home here, but back there, we're not at home either."

Immigrant organizations want the government to allow dual nationality for naturalized immigrants as well as for those born in France.

Good intentions pile problems on Ohio historians

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The house that Alfred Kelley built is a 900-stone puzzle waiting for someone to put it together again.

Built more than 150 years ago and reputed to have been used as collateral to help Ohio's fledgling state government pay its debts, the Kelley mansion was razed in 1961 to make way for a downtown Columbus hotel. Only the efforts of a local committee saved the Ohio sandstone blocks from being pulverized in the process.

Nearly a quarter century has passed, and the pieces of the Kelley house are piled up at the Hale Farm and Village, a historic attraction near Akron, about 100 miles from the original house site.

Experts estimate the cost of rebuilding the house at $1 million or more, astronomical in comparison with the $15,000 Kelley spent to build it. Chances the mansion will ever be restored appear remote.

Curator Don Hutslar, of the Ohio Historical Society, said efforts to save the mansion and have it rebuilt are a classic case of "good intentions gone absolutely, completely berserk."

According to a history of the mansion published in 1953, Kelley built the Greek Revival house from 1836 to 1838 on Broad Street, Columbus' main east-west thoroughfare. At the time, the 18-acre tract about six blocks from the Ohio Statehouse was considered suburban. The land is now occupied in part by a downtown hotel.

Siegfried Buerling of Hale Farm and Village describes the mansion as "one of the finest Greek Revival stone houses in Ohio."

Kelley, born in 1789 in Connecticut, moved to Cleveland in 1810. Four years later he was elected to Ohio's General Assembly, decided to move to Columbus and in 1831 bought the site for the house.

Kelley was active in developing early transportation in Ohio, overseeing construction of a state canal and serving as first president of a railroad.

Historical accounts credit Kelley with designing his house, although there is no proof he was the architect. Kelley lived in the house until his death in 1859, and his son's family lived there until 1906. It was used as a parochial elementary school from 1907 to 1959.

Dixie Miller, a member of the Ohio Historical Society board, chaired a committee that tried to save the Kelley house.

"From childhood, I've been somebody who loves architecture," she said. "I'm not somebody who's going to try to defend every last old building. But I'm not going to get excited either about every new building."

Of the Kelley House, she says, "It's tragic. It could have been all sorts of things right where it was."

Repeatedly rebuffed in efforts to get state help to move the house, Mrs. Miller's group arranged to have it taken apart stone by stone. The stones were numbered and plans drawn to make reassembly possible.

Cosby finally honored by home state

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby, whose Fat Albert and Weird Harold characters sprang from the streets of Philadelphia, says it's about time his native state of Pennsylvania gave him an award.

Cosby, 46, accepted the fifth annual Distinguished Pennsylvania Artists Award from Gov. Dick Thornburgh at ceremonies Tuesday in the state Capitol.

"I've been in show business 22 years and so far I've been awarded something by every other state," Cosby said. "Pennsylvania came in last." Then, referring to the small sculpture he received, he said: "And it weighs the heaviest."

Cosby and Thornburgh drew laughs from the audience of several hundred people as they engaged in a mock tug-of-war with the sculpture, which Cosby stuffed into his coat jacket.

Thornburgh said Cosby "has used his priceless gift of humor to help millions of Americans understand and overcome, through laughter, the racial, social and psychological barriers that might otherwise keep them needlessly divided."

Cosby said artists don't set out in search of awards, but instead embark on "some sort of dream, some sort of mission."

The Philadelphia-born comedian said Fat Albert and Weird Harold routines were dreams "of doing something to help educate and causing aid to teachers."

Buddy Ebsen

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon likes to watch "Barnaby Jones" reruns and wants to join a fan club honoring the television sleuth, the club's president says.

Jordayne Thomas, president of the Barnaby Jones Luncheon Club, said Tuesday that series star Buddy Ebsen told him in a letter that Nixon had seen all the episodes and could quote lines from some.

Ebsen saw Nixon recently in Palm Springs, Calif., and said the former president "has expressed a lively interest in joining your club," Thomas said.

Thomas, 67, said he hasn't heard from Nixon yet. There was no immediate response to reporters' messages left with the former president's office in New York.

MIAMI (AP) — Fred Rogers, the star of the popular children's show "Mr. Rogers," has won his beef with the Burger King fast-food restaurant chain.

Rogers said Burger King has agreed to pull a $150,000 television commercial which parodied him and his Public Broadcasting System show.

"To have someone who looks like me doing a commercial is very confusing for children," said the 56-year-old Rogers.

Rogers said he called Don Dempsey, Burger King's senior vice president for marketing, last Thursday and asked that the 30-second spot which debuted last week be pulled from the airwaves.

The commercial — with an imitator named Mr. Rodney teaching his audience to say the word "McFrying" — was off the air within 72 hours of Rogers' telephone call, said John Weir, a spokesman for Miami-based Burger King.

"Mr. Rogers is one guy you don't want to mess with, as beloved as he is," Weir said.

Rogers, 56, said Tuesday he was pleased with Burger King's cooperation.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Conductor Andre Previn has asked to be released from the remaining two seasons of his contract with the Pittsburgh Symphony, but the orchestra's board of directors says it doesn't stem from differences of opinion.

The request follows Previn's announcement April 28 that he will become music director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, replacing Carlo Maria Giulini, who is stepping down for health reasons.

The Pittsburgh board said Tuesday it will grant Previn's wish to leave early as soon as a replacement is found, It added that the conductor and the directors would be parting on good terms.

"I can't emphasize enough that the man has made a great contribution, and we hate to see him go," said G. Christian Lantzsch, president of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society.

In a written statement Tuesday, Previn said: "The 1984-85 season was to have been a long-planned sabbatical and my activities with the orchestra were already greatly reduced for that reason. I would like to spend the following season composing, studying and preparing to assume the music directorship of the Los Angeles Philharmonic."

Sabelli spent his early years as a test pilot and barnstormer. He became the first airborne pilot to issue a radio transmission. Sabelli retired from flying in the 1940s.

'Dynasty' edges out 'Dallas' for No. 1 in Nielsen ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although outnumbered by CBS in the Top 10 shows of the week, ABC captured the regular ratings race for the third straight week with "Dynasty" edging CBS' "Dallas" to lead the way.

NBC invaded the list as the opening installment "V: The Final Battle," a tale of humans fighting off their would-be alien conquerers, finished at No.5 in the Nielsen ratings, two spots above part one of ABC's "The Last Days of Pompeii." The two ran opposite each other Sunday night.

"Dynasty," "Dallas," ABC's "Hotel" and CBS' "Falcon Crest" took the top four spots as the prime-time soaps frothed toward end-of-the-season cliffhangers. A rerun of NBC's "Adam," about the Florida kidnapping of little Adam Walsh, was sixth.

The A.C. Nielsen Co. survey released Tuesday gave ABC a network average of 14.9 for the week. CBS was close behind in second place with 14.6 and NBC was third with 13.7. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute, 14.9 percent of the TV homes were tuned to ABC.

Completing the Top 10 were CBS' "Cagney & Lacey," which was canceled one year ago, returned by popular demand and then renewed last week for the 1984-85 season, at eighth; CBS' "60 Minutes," ninth; and NBC's "The A-Team," 10th.

CBS won the opening days of the May sweeps, the period when local stations are measured. The Nielsen sweeps ratings for May 3-6 showed CBS with 15.6, ABC with 14.4 and NBC with 12.3.

Network programs are measured all year by Nielsen, but only in May, July, November and February are the local stations monitored by the ratings service. The ratings during this period help determine what stations can charge for advertising for the next few months, and the networks have scheduled miniseries and original episodes of many series to boost audiences for their stations.

Among the evening news shows, "The CBS Evening News" began its third consecutive year in first place, posting a 12.2 rating. ABC and NBC had a rating of 10.0.

The lowest-rated show of the week was NBC's "Animals Are the Funniest People."

Co-founder of Readers Digest dies at age 94

MOUNT KISCO, N.Y. (AP) — Lila Acheson Wallace, co-founder of The Readers Digest, was mourned as "a grand woman" whose millions of dollars in charitable donations created "a living memorial" to her for years to come.

Mrs. Wallace, who started the publication with her late husband DeWitt Wallace 62 years ago, died Tuesday of heart failure at her Mount Kisco estate, High Winds. Mrs. Wallace, 94, had been in failing health for some time.

She and her husband started the compact magazine, which published excerpted articles from other periodicals, in a Greenwich Village basement shortly after their honeymoon in 1922.

About a decade later, the magazine's popularity was so great that the couple moved the operation to its present Georgian-style offices in Chappaqua, which Mrs. Wallace had built to her specifications as an industrial showplace.

By the time the couple retired as co-chairmen in 1973, the magazine had an average U.S. circulation of 18 million. Overseas, it is circulated in 16 languages to 12½ million subscribers. It employs 10,000 people worldwide.

Like her husband, who died in 1981 at the age of 91, Mrs. Wallace was noted for her philanthropy.

She donated more than $50 million to a variety of organizations, including the University of Oregon, her alma mater; Planned Parenthood; the Juilliard School of Music at Lincoln Center; the Metropolitan Opera; the New York Zoological Society, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"Publishing, music, art, opera and the performing arts have lost a grand woman," said former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, a senior counselor for national and international affairs for the magazine. "Her contribution to all will be a living memorial to her for many, many decades."

She and her husband were awarded the nation's highest civilian honor, the Medal of Freedom, from President Richard Nixon in 1972. Mrs. Wallace also received the order of Chevalier from the French government for her donations to restore artist Claude Monet's home in Giverny.

Mrs. Wallace supervised the purchase of the multi-million dollar collection of paintings which lined the walls, offices and reception rooms of the Digest building — original masterpieces by Matisse, Cezanne, Modigliani, Monet, Gauguin, Bonnard, Picasso, Renoir and van Gogh. Until the mid-1970s, she continued to choose the Digest's cover art each month.

"A painting is like a man," she once told an interviewer. "If you can live without it, then there isn't much point in having it."

She contributed $8 million to the restoration of Boscobel, a 19th-century mansion in Garrison, N.Y., near the Hudson River. In addition to the money, she gave personal attention to the details of the restoration and to the gardens of the manor house.

Other awards received by Mrs. Wallace included several honorary doctorate degrees, a gold medal from the Architectural League of New York and the distinguished service award of the New York Botanical Garden. In 1977, New York Floating Hospital was renamed for her.

After she and her husband retired as co-chairmen of The Reader's Digest Association Inc. in 1973, both remained directors and sole owners. After her husband's death, Mrs. Wallace retained all voting shares in Reader's Digest and continued to have a hand in editorial decisions.

Man makes unusual proposal

KASSON, Minn. (AP) — Here is the heroic suitor riding proudly on his steed, his armor shining, glass slipper for his lady love in hand — even if, to the mob of spectators he attracts, it looks like a guy in a gladiator suit carrying a plastic shoe.

But love is blind, and Jim Brandli's intended kindly overlooked the rented costume and the borrowed old mare that stood in for a white charger as he rode up to the Y Motel to ask her hand in marriage.

"We knew we were getting married, but I never expected him to go that far," Robbin Dokken said Saturday, after Brandli ventured onto a horse for the first time to make his proposal.

The chivalrous gesture was born in Brandli's imagination last fall as he served aboard the USS Guam off Grenada and Lebanon.

"When you are out at sea for such a long time you start thinking of things and I just thought this would be a neat way of doing it, showing her how much I love her," he said.

It's tough being a knight in the 1980s. "It was hard to find a white horse. We couldn't find one anywhere," Brandli said.

But one of Brandli's relatives knew the owner of an old mare who was willing to truck the horse to a site several blocks from the motel.
