

If we take the widest and wisest view of a cause, there is no such thing as a lost cause because there is no such thing as a gained cause. We fight for lost causes because we know that our defeat and dismay may be the preface to our successors' victory, though that victory itself will be temporary; we fight rather to keep something alive than in the expectation that anything will triumph.

AN INTENSE, CHOKING FIRE roared through a Vienna hotel before dawn today, killing 27 persons and injuring 13, officials said. Police said American, Yugoslav and probably West German tourists were feared among the victims but had no numbers. The U.S. Embassy said it had not yet been able to establish who the Americans were.

U.S. tries to keep negotiations alive

Cuban solution evading Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met with his National Security Council for the second time in less than 24 hours today as the United States tried to keep alive negotiations with the Soviet Union over a Russian combat brigade in Cuba.

The breakfast meeting at the White House followed Thursday night's hour-long NSC briefing by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on his negotiations with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, which apparently failed to resolve the dispute, at least for the time being.

Carter's meeting with his top security advisers lasted about one hour. None of the participants were available afterward for comment.

American officials did not rule out the possibility of further U.S.-Soviet talks, although none were planned for the first time in three weeks.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, meeting reporters after Vance's NSC briefing, said, "We would not characterize this as a crisis. It was a discussion."

Another official, requesting anonymity, said that, while there was no crisis atmosphere, "there is a problem."

Members of the NSC called to the White House included Vice President Walter F. Mondale, CIA Director Stansfield Turner, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and presidential national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Powell refused to divulge specifics of what Vance told the NSC in a one-hour briefing that followed a private 30-minute meeting with the president in the White House living quarters.

Carter said Tuesday that he would report to the nation, probably within a week, on the negotiations. In a speech Thursday, Vance assured Latin American diplomats the administration, "at an appropriate time," would release a full report to buttress its stand on the troops.

But, at this point, he added, "the best thing that can be done is to keep the negotiations private."

Neither Vance nor Gromyko, meeting the press after their 3 1/2-hour session, would go beyond describing the talks as "serious." The mood was clearly gloomy, however, as the men descended from Vance's 37th floor hotel suite overlooking the United Nations.

Gromyko planned to return to Moscow today, precluding what had been seen as a possible meeting with Carter this weekend if progress resulted from the New York talks.

Administration sources said there remained a possibility Vance would hold further talks with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

Such a meeting, however, was said to depend on some indication from Moscow that it is prepared to accept and do something about the U.S. position on the detachment.

Yet State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said he would not rule out some unspecified U.S. effort to keep the delicate discussions alive. "I'm really trying not to rule out any possibility," he told reporters in New York.

In the talks, the United States has sought to impress on the Russians the Carter administration's feeling that, without a prompt settlement of the dispute, there is little prospect the Senate will ratify the strategic arms limitation treaty by the end of the year.

Little help in store for Gulf of Mexico well

Scientists shedding new light on oil spills

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A team of scientists say some answers may have been found to control future oil spills, but nothing definite can now be predicted to control the fuel spreading through the Gulf of Mexico from the runaway Mexican oil well.

The scientists returned Thursday after a three-week tour of the oil spill in the Bay of Campeche and admitted they needed more time to analyze their findings before coming up with any definite technical solutions.

Dr. John Farrington, senior chemist for the team, said, "It is wrong to say the oil spill is the disaster of the decade. There are earthquakes and hurricanes and famines which have claimed thousands of lives. This oil spill does not fall into that category and has claimed no lives."

Dr. Donald Atwood, chief scientist on the voyage, said, "It is an ecological mess down there. It is one ugly mess. But as of now, we must put together and study all the information we have collected."

"This is now a gray area and we are compiling information for future use. We feel frustrated because we cannot give hard answers to your hard questions."

The voyage to the oil spill, at a cost of about $1.5 million, was sponsored by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, an arm of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Aboard the ship U.S.S. Researcher were scientists from NOAA, Texas A&M University, the universities of Louisville, North Carolina, Washington, and the French and Mexican governments.

Atwood said one of the findings that may help control future spills was that thick concentrations of oil termed mousse "does not form until it is three to 15 miles from the well."

"Mousse appears also to be a function caused by sunlight and wind, not just a combination of oil and water," he said.

Atwood said the research team received "carte blanche" cooperation from the Mexican government.

Atwood said that in his personal opinion Pemex, the Mexican national oil company is now putting all its efforts into placing a cement cap over the runaway well and that "there is very little cleanup operation now under way."

Earlier in the week, Dr. Roy Hann, head of the department of environmental science at Texas A&M, said the U.S. Coast Guard does not have the sufficient funds or authority to keep clean the beaches of Texas affected by the oil spill.

Hann said the Ixtoc 1 blowout off the Mexican coast was an opportunity "to demonstrate to the world we have the capacity of dealing with the spill."

"The best of everything should have been used. But on the conditional level, it just didn't pull that kind of priority."

"The whole thing was lost in the shuffle."

Weather

The forecast calls for decreasing cloudiness today becoming fair and mild tonight and Saturday with warmer afternoons. The high Friday and Saturday will be in the upper 80s and the low will be in the mid 50s. Winds will be light and variable Friday.

Recession or not? Figures are cloudy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government index designed to forecast economic trends showed no change in August, giving cloudy signals on whether a recession is under way, the government said today.

The lack of movement in the Commerce Department's Composite Index of Leading Indicators followed slight declines of 0.2 percent in July and 0.3 percent in June.

Three consecutive monthly declines in the index traditionally have signaled the start of a recession.

The index, however, has been mixed since it hit a peak of 143.7 in October. It fell a sharp 2.3 percent in April, in part reflecting the truckers' strike, and in August it stood at 139.1.

The August figure means the 10 components of the index were 39.1 percent ahead of their 1967 base.

In another development, Citibank of New York, the nation's second largest bank, raised its prime lending rate to a record 13 1/2 percent. Other major banks were expected to follow Citibank's lead in posting the new rate, which banks charge their most creditworthy corporate customers.

The Commerce Department said four of the components in the leading indicators index were up in August — liquid assets, sensitive prices, stock prices and building permits. But the rises were offset by declines in six categories: average work week, lower payroll rate, sales performance, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, money supply and new orders.

Many economists say the nation's seventh postwar recession began in the second quarter this year and that the downturn will persist into 1980, even if third quarter output figures show improvement.

Although a recession could help dampen inflation, currently running at an annual rate of more than 13 percent, it also would throw many people out of work.

The department also released its so-called Composite Index of Coincident Indicators, which is supposed to gauge the economy's current performance. This index fell 0.9 percent in August, the largest drop since a 1 percent decline in May.

The coincident index hit its peak in March before beginning a tumble.

On Thursday, the Commerce Department reported that a surge in imports, including a record-setting cost for foreign oil, helped push the U.S. trade deficit to $2.36 billion in August.

The deficit was more than double the $1.1 billion by which imports exceeded exports in July, the report said. And it was the largest since a $2.48 billion deficit in May.

The trade figures were announced as the price of gold shot toward $400 per ounce on world markets and the value of the dollar sagged against major European currencies.

The trade figures could put more pressure on the dollar because the higher deficit means that more dollars flowed out of the United States last month. This, in theory, increases the supply overseas, which tends to depress the dollar's value on foreign markets.

Imports in August rose to a record $18.18 billion, the report said. This was a 8.3 percent increase from July and the largest such increase since an 8.8 percent rise in February 1978. Commerce figure show.

Exports also hit a record level, $15.82 billion. But the 1 percent increase from July was not enough to keep pace with the import surge.

Emmett Lefors reflects on 90 years in Pampa

This is Emmett Lefors, of 1611 Charles St., who turned 90 Thursday, describing from first-hand recall the mass settling from 1912 to 1914 of Gray County lands.

"They never had very many people until nineteen and twelve, thirteen, fourteen. But it looked like a city down there by the Santa Fe Depot with all them rumbly tractors running day and night, plowing up the finest sod you ever saw."

Lefors almost seems to sing when he's on to a good reminiscence and his talk takes on the epic overtones of a Carl Sandburg poem as he continues.

"The farmers came in here — they issued the rights to bring them in here," Lefors says, his voice rising with the recall. "They had a big sign down there on the railroad: Four hundred thousand acres — correct me, six hundred thousand acres to sell to actual settlers. Forty years to pay for it at a low rate of interest. That was painted there on that little barn there on the Santa Fe. Before that it was all cattlemen," says Lefors, who adds that there was never any friction between farmers and ranchers — "none whatsoever that I knew of."

"Six hundred thousand acres to sell to actual settlers," Lefors repeats in the crusty voice with which he has called cattle for some 65 years.

Emmett Lefors is, of course, the sole surviving son of Perry Lefors who was, in turn, foreman and manager of White Deer Lands, and one of the best known of the cattlemen who settled this section of the Panhandle in the second half of the 19th century.

"I specialize in bulls," says Lefors, who still "rides high in the saddle" as he talks to a reporter in his work-cluttered study. "I got my first registered stock in 1924. And I've been in it for better or worse ever since. I've sold lots of bulls. I've kind of made that my hobby. I had a hundred bulls the year before last in the fall, and I'm going to have about a hundred now."

Indeed, Lefors has earned the nickname "Bull Man" here and in El Dorado, Kan. — where until this year he took his herds to graze and to trade.

This last year, Lefors cut back, decided to slow down, but he doesn't intend to get completely out of the business he's one of the best in — not now, maybe not for another 10 years.

Working herds here and grazing them and trading in Kansas, he's been a cattleman colossus, with a boot in each state for close to 70 years.

"I'd pastured in Kansas almost every year since 1914," he says. "What attracted me was the beautiful, blue-stemmed grass. A sea of grass as pretty as you've ever seen. None like it."

But Lefors said if he'd had a choice he wouldn't have gone into the cattle business — and he says he doesn't recommend the business to a young man today.

"I didn't have a choice," he says. "My father passed away in nineteen and nine. So I had management of the cattle then, land and horses and everything for five years until nineteen and fourteen."

His father left him with a herd of 300 Herefords, out of a 12-member family, only Emmett, his mother Emma Lang, and two sisters survived the typhoid.

His mother, Emma Lang Lefors, was Swiss.

"It was a wonder how she picked up the English language and worked cooking for a bunch of hired men and raising a bunch of kids," Lefors recalls. "It's remarkable how she did it. They ought to set up a monument to her."

"It wasn't easy in those days. There were some rough roads to travel. My father before me tells how bad it was. How when they left with those herds from down in the low country they had to watch for Indians."

But Lefors sees today's market and the economy as a greater pitfall than hostile Indians.

"I wouldn't advise no young fellow to enter it even today," he says. "Cattle's too high for them to get into the game. It's gonna break 'em. Of course, it's expected in the cattle business that you're gonna go broke about every ten years."

"My father wanted to make a doctor out of me. I was fixin' to go to the university when he passed away. But I don't know whether I could have followed it up or not. Or taken a likin' to it. My father had studied medicine for two years and had to quit when the times got hard."

Emmett Lefors was born in Mobeetie in 1889 — Mobeetie being the trading post his father had developed so that hunters would have a place to sell their buffalo hides.

Lefors, who has sealed millions of dollars of deals with handshakes in the El Dorado Hotel where he lives part of the year, says there's more contracts and written agreements and "money on the table to cinch a trade" than there were in the days when he began.

"I don't think a man's word is as good as it used to be," he says. "Because it's not the policy. The system is different. Nowadays they want the contract."

Lefors only chuckles at the idea of retirement. "Why I think when I turned sixty-five," he says, "I was still doing some bronc riding..."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

United Fund

Pampans are given many different opportunities to help people who are less fortunate than themselves but rarely do they have the chance to help those people here in Pampa.

The Pampa United Fund is the chance people have to help their friends and neighbors, for 97 percent of the money raised by United Fund stays here in Pampa.

The United Fund benefits several organizations that are in the business of helping others. Funds collected through the volunteer efforts of the Fund workers aid the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, Pampa Family Services, the Girl Scouts of America, High Plains Epilepsy Association, the Southwestern Diabetic Foundation, the U.S.O., the Pampa Day Care Center, Senior Citizens, Genesis House, Boy Scouts of America, and Meals on Wheels.

All of these organizations have been designed to offer a great many people the services they may need from time to time and are funded largely by the support they receive from the Pampa United Fund.

Without these organizations many people would not receive even the basic things needed for existence such as food, shelter and clothing.

There is only one United Fund drive each year and the funds raised are disbursed among all of the above mentioned organizations depending on their specific need. And their needs are great.

Pampans are asked to give generously when asked to do so for the United Fund for those dollars you give may be the ones that help rebuild a life that has been shattered.

Give generously.

Using less gasoline

The American people have been using less gasoline this summer than they did last summer, despite the fact there are nearly 10 million more new cars on the road.

The explanation is obvious—curtailed supply and higher cost. The inconvenience and uncertainty of the supply situation discourages travel. The price increase has been 50 percent at the pump in just six months.

Result? Nationwide, consumption has been down from a year earlier. June trailed the previous year's consumption by 10 percent, while July was down 6 percent. August was expected to show a similar trend.

Despite this, everything points to increased use over the longer haul. Experience in Europe shows that higher prices for gasoline have little permanent effect on gasoline use, although they reduce consumption in the short run. The shock wears off. Drivers get used to higher prices and resume normal driving.

There is a lasting effect of higher gasoline prices, however, and it is a healthy effect. When drivers buy a new car, they become more concerned with gasoline mileage. The auto market faces a glut of big new cars right now. Small gas-saving models are in demand. The trend is not likely to be completely reversed.

The GATT Report

The GATT report on international trade released this week puts to rest two myths of the energy crisis. One is that price has no effect on oil consumption, and the other is that the resurgence of inflation in the industrial countries was caused by the oil price increases during the first half of 1979.

Nothing could be further from the truth, says GATT. The growth of world consumption of oil "has declined sharply since 1974, from an annual rate of 8 percent in 1963-73 to 1.6 percent in 1973-78."

The slowdown is more pronounced in industrial countries (a drop from 7.9 percent to 0.5 percent) than in developing lands (from 8.4 percent to 7.3 percent). The rate of growth of Japanese oil consumption dropped from 15.8 percent to 0.5 percent, and North America's came down from 5.1 percent to 1.3 percent.

Gasoline consumption has also been affected, although its growth is off by less than other oil-based fuels. The reason is simple, says GATT. From 1973 to 1978 the real price of gasoline in the U.S. rose by only 6 percent, compared to 120 percent for fuel oil. During the same period Switzerland, which has maintained a sound currency, has experienced only a 1 percent rise in gasoline prices and a 39 percent increase in the price of fuel oil.

The substantially lower fuel price increases in Switzerland compared to the U.S. suggests that something other than oil prices causes inflation. The principal culprit, says GATT, is domestic monetary policy. In the U.S. and Europe inflation rates began rising in the first part of 1978—a time when there seemed to be a petroleum glut.

GATT is concerned that the growth of world production is being held hostage to conventional demand management policy in Western countries. But demand management "is now obviously in a blind alley, the theory underlying it being incapable of transcending the inflation-unemployment dilemma." The policymakers' assumption that unemployment depends only on aggregate demand must go, says GATT. "Policy must pay at least equal attention to the needs of the economy's supply side."

One pressing need, says GATT, is for relative prices that convey accurate information about scarcity and profitability. Price systems beset with inflation and tied up in controls can't do their job. Denied necessary information, investment decisions become skewed toward assets with short write-off periods, acquisitions and speculations—hardly pathways to economic growth.

Under present policies the world economy faces "the possibility of a cumulative deterioration." While a policy of economic growth is not beyond our grasp, governments may instead prefer a policy necessitating repeated government interventions. After all, it is not hard to understand that the opportunities for government to redistribute income and manage crises are greater the worse the economy's performance.

martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA).—Benighted parents and teachers may cling to the old-fashioned notion that education is properly a function of local government, but more "enlightened" souls have decided that federal meddling is required to do the job right.

The undisputed leader of the latter group is John Ryor, president of the National Education Association and chief organizer of the intensive lobbying campaign to establish a new Department of Education.

"The local community pays 48.4 percent of the school dollar and the states pay 43.4 percent," complains Ryor, "while the federal share of the elementary and secondary school funding is 8.2 percent."

To rectify that imbalance, Ryor merely applies some latter-day Caesarian logic ("all Gaul is divided into three parts") and concludes that "the full federal share should be one-third of the costs of public education."

"But getting this kind of money from Congress is impossible," he explains, "if education does not have a powerful representative in the budgeting process."

Establishing a "powerful representative" in this instance means providing independence to the already bloated and mismanaged bureaucracy currently in charge of education matters within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Ryor's National Education Association and other groups that have banded together as the self-proclaimed "Big Six" of national educational organizations now are within striking distance of their ill-conceived goal—but there remains one last opportunity to stop them.

Both houses of Congress have approved the requisite legislation to create the new department, but the differences between the two bills remain to be reconciled in a House-Senate conference committee.

Complicating that task is the fact that the House bill is festooned with a string of barely germane but highly controversial amendments, most of them attached by conservatives opposed to the concept of a new department.

Included in that category are provisions relating to school busing, racial and sexual admission quotas, school prayers and federal funding for abortions.

Assuming those emotional issues can be resolved, both houses of Congress must approve the conference committee's compromise. Rejection of such committee recommendations is highly unusual but certainly not unprecedented.

In the current case, disapproval would truly be a public service. It would go a long way toward maintaining the governance of public education where it has been vested throughout the nation's history.

Administration of the public schools is virtually the last vestige of a public function controlled by the local citizenry in an era when political power increasingly is flowing toward Washington and the state capitals.

In many communities, school boards are the only governmental institutions whose members are not professional politicians. Similarly, local referendums on school bond issues often represent the sole surviving opportunity for citizens to vote directly on how public funds are to be spent.

Those local decisions may not always be wise, but they surely are no more harmful than federal officials' penchant for frittering away millions of dollars in public funds on ceaseless studies, analyses and evaluations.

Defenders of the scheme to establish an Education Department claim the federal reorganization will not affect the tradition of independent local school systems.

But the National Education Association's vision of a government department that provides one-third of all funding to "meet the total child's needs" can produce only one result—an intrusive, over-bearing federal bureaucracy that dominates the nation's public schools.

A new weapons system

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—The Senate always feels it's doing its job when it votes more money for defense. But when it thinks of defense it imagines the funds will be used for some exotic weapon that the Russians don't have. What Congress doesn't like to do is appropriate money for simple things like boots, barracks and tents.

The Pentagon budget people are wise to what turns Capitol Hill on, so when they go up to ask for money for the mundane items that every armed service needs to survive, they disguise the requests as new weapons systems that will send the senators into orgasms of joy.

Col. Plotter was sent up last week to get an appropriation for new mess halls that the U.S. Army desperately needed. He knew he was in trouble if he asked for mess hall money because the Senate armed services subcommittee he was appearing in front of is only interested in new electronic hardware that can knock Moscow (or Havana) off the face of the map.

So instead of asking for funds for mess halls, Col. Plotter told the subcommittee the Army wanted to build 1,000 new MESS 112 All Weather Launch Pad Silos.

He unveiled a large drawing of the new weapon on his easel.

The senators studied it with interest. Then one of them said, "It looks like a mess hall to me."

"Yes, sir," Col. Plotter said. "The configuration of the silo is quite similar to a mess hall, which makes detection of it from the air very difficult for the Soviets."

"The module was designed in a rectangular solid state complex to evade lethal enemy attacks."

"Do the Soviets have anything like it?" another senator asked.

"To our knowledge, sir, they are now working on a BORSHT 514-Silo which has twice the seating capacity of the MESS 112, but lacks the microwave oven throw weight system."

"Don't evade the question, Colonel. Will we have parity or superiority if we go ahead with your weapon?"

"It is my opinion, sir, that if we don't go ahead on the MESS 112 immediately, our Army could starve to death."

"Tell us more about it, Colonel."

"All right. As you can see back here is what looks like a kitchen. This is the control center which feeds the passive integrated fuel supply into this section of the terminal which our people have dubbed the MESS line. The fuel is then transferred into aluminum software and moved by specially trained personnel through the line over to what appears to be tables, but are in effect armored air-to-ground missile shelters."

"When does the damn thing go off?" a senator said impatiently.

The colonel replied, "When the SPAM guidance system locks into the BORSHT 514 the roof opens and then it's goodbye Minsk, Pinsk and Kiev."

"Well done, Colonel," the chairman of the subcommittee said. "What do you estimate each MESS 112 will cost?"

"About $1 million per unit, sir, not counting the Cuisinart."

"Cuisinart?"

"That's our code name for the magnet electronic back burner range."

"Colonel, you can tell your superiors as far as this committee is concerned you will get authorization for 1,000 MESS 112s, and more if you need them. We won't approve the SALT II treaty unless we have them in our arsenal."

"Thank you, gentlemen. The U.S. Army has hungered for this weapon for a long time."

It all adds up to inflation

As inflation roars along at a double-digit rate, President Carter and his economists have grown increasingly defensive. "Don't blame us," the message goes, "the fault lies with forces beyond our control."

There is an element of truth to their claim, of course. It is doubtful that any American president could have forestalled the whopping oil price increases the OPEC nations have inflicted on the world in recent years, and soaring energy costs have greatly exacerbated our current inflation.

But it is disingenuous, at best, to say the Carter administration bears no blame for the relentless upward march of the Consumer Price Index (CPI). It does, and you can take it from one who was there—Barry P. Bosworth, until last month director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, an agency on the front lines of the anti-inflation fight.

There were, Bosworth said in a recent interview, "literally hundreds" of decisions made by the president and others in his administration since 1977 which directly contributed to inflation rather than alleviating it.

Some were readily apparent—big ticket items like the huge jumps in Social Security payroll taxes and in the federal minimum wage. Most were far less obvious—a trade restriction here, an environmental regulation there, a bending of the wage-price guidelines somewhere else. But they all added up.

"I don't know how many times I would try to point out the ramifications of a particular decision only to be told, this is not an inflation issue. It only raises the CPI by .001 percent." What they never seemed to realize is that the government does hundreds of these things each year, and the cumulative effect is enormous," Bosworth said.

Carter, he said, is always "open-minded," always willing to listen to arguments on all sides of a particular problem. "He deals with each decision on its merits," Bosworth said, "but that's part of the difficulty. There's no theme, no consistency. There are too many voices pulling in different directions."

Over and over again, Bosworth said, special interest groups would come in and say, "This is hurting us, you gotta help." And they were right. They were indeed being hurt. "But nobody ever said, 'No, we can't help you because if we do, we'll have to help the next guy and the next, and line has to be drawn somewhere.'"

The only way for the government to fight inflation effectively, Bosworth believes, is to do it consistently—across the board, no matter how piteous the pleas for exceptions. "You have to take a stand from the beginning, or at least have some judgment day when you draw a line in the dust and say, 'never again.' And that just hasn't happened."

From his new perspective over at the Brookings Institution, a liberal-leaning Washington think tank, Bosworth is openly pessimistic about the ability of this president and this administration to get a handle on inflation.

With the 1980 election looming, it will be harder than ever for the administration to resist the demands of special interest groups. And the fail ire to show progress against inexorably rising prices has totally undermined Carter's voluntary wage and price guidelines.

"The credibility of the voluntary program is gone," Bosworth said. "We've worn out the promises that six months from now, things will be better. People were willing to give it a try, but they've been disappointed too often."

Out of "desperation," Bosworth said, he would now favor a mandatory wage and price control program, despite his economist's conviction that such policies don't work for long and create serious distortions.

"We must do something," he said, "to break the psychology of inflation, to create a breathing spell."

Low pay, inadequate personnel plague police

By GREG HARDIN
News Managing Editor

In recent weeks Pampa police officers have found their numbers shrinking, and at least one of those officers feels it is no longer safe to be on Pampa streets.

"I don't want to be a martyr," a police officer said. "I don't want to be the one (by being killed) that is the reason behind additional manpower in the police department."

"I don't think it is safe for an officer on the streets of Pampa because he doesn't have the proper backup," the officer said.

The officer made these comments when he submitted his resignation from the force here. And, according to other officers, he's not alone in his feelings.

Other Pampa police officers, citing the job's salary as not enough, have tendered their letters of resignation in recent weeks, according to Police Chief J. J. Ryzman.

"I am losing an officer in two days to the Amarillo Police Department because of pay," Ryzman said. "We lost an officer two months ago to Borger for more money also."

With these resignations, the police department has found itself understaffed and is searching for persons qualified to fill the vacancies.

"I wish I had more applicants," Ryzman said. "But people aren't going to come here and get rich."

Ryzman said a patrol officer makes $805 per month. With the city's qualifications for officers, he is having a hard time getting people who are willing to do the job.

"Our qualifications are tough and it is really hard to get someone to move in here for what we are paying officers," Ryzman said. "It is pretty hard to make house payments and support a family on this pay."

"We are fortunate to have the dedicated people that we do on the streets," Ryzman added.

One officer, who asked not to be identified, said it would be impossible for him to keep his job as a city police officer if his wife did not work.

"She brings home more money than I do," the officer said. "Without her income there is no way we could make it."

Most city police officers are discontented about the pay scale for the job.

"Most officers have their wives work or work extra jobs to make ends meet," Ryzman said.

"If we want to lower our qualifications we could fill the openings we have right now," the police chief said. "But we would rather keep them the way they are."

City manager Mack Wofford said Ryzman requested eight additional people for the force in Pampa, but city commissioners refused to allow any additional personnel in the department.

"It (additional people) came up in a discussion and after the discussion no additional people were hired," Wofford said. "I have made the statement that there could be a reduction in services in the police department with additional things to do and no one to handle them."

The commission looked for quite awhile at more people for the department," Wofford said. "But there are no additional employees in this budget."

City employees may get a 10 percent pay raise this year, but police officers will still be underpaid in comparison to other salaries in the area.

"Our command people make less than a Department of Public Safety Trooper," Ryzman said.

Wofford said the city and police chief were looking at ways to cut the budget to make room for pay raises and additional people.

Texas judges fare well nationally

State's jurists accepting new codes of conduct with reservations

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Stringent codes of conduct have left some jurists grumbling, but they recognize the necessity for tightening the reins on renegades whose misadventures shove them into the limelight, says the head of the state's judicial ethics committee.

The codes have become so specific that many judges long for the days when the only rule was "you don't get caught in bed with a dead man or a live woman," Justice Quentin Keith, chairman of the Committee of Judicial Ethics, said Thursday.

"We're kind of like a lightning rod," Keith told 400 judges at a State Bar of Texas judicial conference here.

"We emphasize that we're not going to challenge the authority of the Supreme Court, but we're going to enforce the code in the theory that a judge should be like Caesar's wife ... above suspicion."

The Code of Judicial Conduct and the State Commission on Judicial Conduct were established by the Texas Supreme Court in 1974.

Since then, Keith said, the commission has handed down 47 opinions on such subjects as judges accepting free football and movie passes, a judge who wanted to be a television auctioneer for charity, and television cameras in the courtroom.

"We don't want to see everyone tarred with a broad brush because of the mistakes of a very small minority," said District Judge Darrell Hester, chairman of the judicial conduct commission.

He urged judges to respond to the commission's questions, saving

86 percent of the complaints are resolved after hearing the "judge's side."

To emphasize his point, he listed several notable cases of misconduct.

—A Wisconsin judge who exonerated a 15-year-old boy accused of rape, saying the clothing worn by teen-aged girls invited rape.

—A judge who so disliked his morning coffee that he had the coffee machine vendor arrested.

News carrier wins award

Drew Watson, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Watson of 101 N. Dwight and a Pampa News carrier for over a year, has been selected as one of nine outstanding carriers in the state by the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

The award carries a $500 cash prize, which young Watson said he might use to attend a trade school after he graduates from Pampa High School.

He and his younger brother cover two routes, and their performance has been good enough to prompt their customers to support them in the awards program.

Drew was the Pampa News "Carrier of the Year" in 1978, and he won that distinction solely on the recommendation of his customers. They filled out coupons in the fall of last year and mailed them to News Circulation Manager Larry Barrows.

The News will soon be running coupons for the paper's Carrier of the Year for 1979, according to Barrows. Customers impressed by the service their carrier has given them are urged to fill out the coupons and return them to the News.

Drew was one of three winners from the West Texas District. The others were from Lubbock and El Paso.

Defense witness agrees he was 'protected' by attorneys

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Defense witness Jodie Mack Oliver says he saw David McCrory and Pat Burleson engaged in whispered conversation at Burleson's karate studio just before millionaire Cullen Davis was arrested in August 1978.

Oliver was on the stand Thursday in Davis' murder solicitation trial.

McCrory is the state's key witness against Davis in the trial, testifying Davis tried to get him to arrange the deaths of several people including Davis' divorce judge, Joe Eidson.

The Davis defense team contends Davis is the victim of an elaborate frame-up concocted by McCrory, Burleson and Davis' ex-wife Priscilla. Oliver also told the jury he saw McCrory and Burleson together last January after both had testified in an earlier trial of the charges, a trial that ended with a hung jury.

On cross-examination prosecutor Jack Strickland brought out that Oliver is a convicted rapist whose living expenses are being paid by Davis' attorneys.

"I went to them for help because I thought my life was in danger," he said.

"They kind of put you on the Cullen Davis witness protection program?" Strickland asked sarcastically.

"Yes sir," he replied, amid defense objections.

He told Strickland that a defense lawyer once gave him $1,090 to help him relocate in East Texas but volunteered that the cash "was not bribe money."

Earlier in the proceedings, and with the jury out of the courtroom, presiding judge Gordon Gray took lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes to task for failing to present an adequate defense.

"I read your opening statement, trying to figure out what you were doing, and it doesn't say anything...it's just words," Gray said.

"It was fractured a little bit..." responded Haynes, "but it should not be held against Cullen Davis."

Texas

A weak cold front moved through the Texas Panhandle during the night, generating some showers and thunderstorms, but forecasts called for fair skies and warm temperatures statewide today.

Highs were to be in the 80s and 90s over all of Texas today.

The showers and thunderstorms generated by the weak cold front produced only light amounts of rainfall in the Panhandle.

Patchy fog was reported along the coast early today, but most of the state had clear skies.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 40s in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the 60s and 70s in eastern and southern sections of the state.

NATIONAL

Flash flood watches were posted for parts of the Carolinas and Tennessee early today after thunderstorms dumped heavy rains over the Southeast.

Rain was forecast for the eastern third of the nation today, from Michigan to the Atlantic, and along the Gulf Coast.

RAIN IS EXPECTED from the mid-Atlantic to the Northeast in the forecast period lasting until Saturday morning. Cooler weather is forecast for the upper Great Lakes, but warm weather is expected for most areas. (AP Laserphoto)

Fishing, wanderlust prompt Harper's departure from Pampa

BY MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Fish and restless feet are just two of the reasons Tom Harper is leaving town.

Harper, director of Pampa's Family Services Center for the last two years, says the fishing and hunting are better in Groveton, Texas, so that's where he's headed.

It really isn't as simple as that, though. "I guess you'd say I have a bit of gypsy in my soul," Harper says. "I've been in Pampa for two years and I'm ready for a change. Besides, the fishing and hunting really are good down there."

Harper will be the director of the Groveton Family Services Center with the same basic responsibilities as his job here. The main difference is the size of the communities — Groveton's population is only around 1,200.

Looking back on his two years in Pampa, Harper believes the center has grown because of more local awareness of what Family Services offers and the good job he and his five-member staff have done.

"We've developed a good reputation," he said. "Past and current clients spread the word when they feel they've been helped plus we've gotten a lot of referrals from agencies and people here in town."

The center now sees between 130 to 135 different clients every month as compared to 45 to 55 two years ago. The Pampa office has also become one of the largest in the Texas Panhandle, Harper added.

Anyone can seek help at the clinic, which is located on the first floor of the Hughes Building. Payment for services, whether it be group therapy or individual counseling, is based on the individual's ability to pay, Harper said.

"Some clients are on a 10 to 30 percent part-pay deal," he added. "We have a lot of indigents — people who can't pay anything."

Funded primarily by the Texas Mental Health — Mental Retardation Agency, the local center is still responsible for obtaining 21 percent of its own funds. Most of those funds come through the United Way Fund, client fees and donations by civic clubs, Harper said.

He hopes the Pampa office can someday become self-sufficient and not as dependent on MH-MR.

"I'd like to see the community get more involved in the center," Harper added. "A lot of people don't realize the importance of it until something happens and they need a psychiatrist."

"We're not a tax burden; we're a tax relief," he said. "We're providing a valuable service to the community which they need to realize."

In addition to group, family and individual therapy, Family Services provides screening and follow-up services for state hospital patients, marriage counseling, evaluations for various agencies (such as lawyers), consultations and drug and chemical abuse counseling.

Will they play? Or will they stay at home?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of tickets have been sold and music halls rented in two dozen American cities. The only question: Will the Moscow Symphony Orchestra's show go on?

The orchestra was due to open a month-long U.S. tour next week but Soviet officials, worried about the prospect of more defections to the West, may call off the tour despite months of painstaking preparations.

Columbia Artists Management, a New York-based booking agent, was informed Tuesday that the tour "definitely" was off — only to be told Wednesday that it might take place after all.

The Soviets offered no explanation for their actions but State Department officials said there was no question that Moscow was heavily influenced by the defections of three Bolshoi ballet dancers in the United States over the past month and of a husband-and-wife skating team in Switzerland last week.

The orchestra was scheduled to open in Carnegie Hall next Wednesday and then travel to some two dozen cities along the East Coast and in the South, winding up the tour in early November.

Columbia Artists received a cable Tuesday saying the tour was off, company president Ronald Wilford told a reporter Wednesday.

But Wilford said a cable received Wednesday from Goskoncert, the Soviet agency which handles performing arts tours, "implied that their tour need not necessarily be cancelled."

"We don't want the tour to be cancelled, and we assume they don't want to either," he said.

The off-again, on-again status of the tour appeared to reflect divisions within the Soviet hierarchy over two unpromising options.

To go ahead with the tour would entail the risk of additional defections. But to cancel it would mean backing away from commitments that have been in the works for more than a year.

The Bolshoi Ballet is still scheduled to visit Japan next year, but two trips by Soviet cultural groups to Spain have been cancelled or postponed on short notice and without explanation since the beginning of this month.

Moscow observers say it is possible that the latest defections — although embarrassing — are still not enough to provoke the Kremlin into strong action. They note that there are probably fewer than 20 or 30 Soviet defections a year out of an annual total of about one million trips by Soviets to non-socialist countries.

The Soviet sources said there was some possibility that the tour would be rescheduled at a later date, but declined to be more specific. The U.S. Embassy in Moscow issued visas for the group on Tuesday.

The sources also refused to comment on the reason for the cancellation.

Diplomatic sources had expected that some Soviet cultural programs abroad would be reduced or delayed following the recent defections. But the Soviet Union, which is strongly committed to cultural exchange as a building-block of detente, is expected to continue its exchange program in some form.

Area spirit growing with economy

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO (AP) — The downtown streets and plazas are clean and busy, if not bustling, and the north-south highway through the suburbs is strung with seemingly prosperous fast food restaurants and motels.

Compared with two years ago, employment and personal income is up, property values are higher, building activity is healthy. It is no more difficult to measure the area's spirit: It too is higher.

In September 1977, this Mahoning Valley city midway between Pittsburgh and Cleveland was described in terms of tragedy and desperation, a symbol of what happens when industrial plants become obsolete.

The climax came, it was believed, on "Black Monday," Sept. 17, 1977, when Youngstown Sheet & Tube abruptly closed its outmoded Campbell works and laid off 4,100 workers.

Many in the area felt it was the beginning of the end. The message spread about the death of a steel town, and the entire area became in the national consciousness a symbol of industrial decay.

It was, instead, like a beginning — of renewed cooperation among labor, management, education and government; of federal aid; of efforts to diversify; of attempts to control rather than be victimized by change.

New companies, including an aircraft assembly plant, are settling into the area, and older concerns, some of which had considered leaving for newer facilities and fewer labor problems, are expanding.

"We now have as much cohesiveness as it is possible to have in any business, labor and political community," says J. Phillip Richley, mayor president of the Mahoning Valley Economic Development Corp.

"When I became mayor in January 1978 I was depressed," said Richley. "I expected we would have a fantastic tragedy."

To begin with, said Richley, the "tragedy" really wasn't one at all, a discovery he made many weeks after taking office.

He blames the national media. "They buried us and put a 10-ton stone over our heads," he says. "They created a whole series of tear-jerker stories about a dying town wedded to one industry."

But the valley had become more than steel: for a quarter-century it has been diversifying. Now, says Laird Eckman, associate director of the corporation, 78 percent of manufacturing is unrelated to steel.

Conceding a great deal of industrial obsolescence and, in the past, official apathy about correcting it, Richley says the valley still was able to absorb the plant shutdown with unexpected ease.

He cites a Youngstown State University study. Of 4,100 workers laid off, he says, 1,500 found work in the valley; 1,000 retired; 800 moved; 800 are being retrained, looking, or have dropped from the job market.

For those who lost jobs, he says, it was indeed a tragedy. But for the valley as an economic entity, he maintains, the real damage was done by the myth of a "debilitated, distressed situation."

Nursing home protest

William Bechtel looks from his window at the Sarah Allen nursing home on Philadelphia's west side. Authorities want to close the home and remove the patients, but employees are trying to keep the elderly people there until they receive back wages.

So you want to be a photojournalist

So you want to be a photojournalist?

My advice is don't even consider it unless you want to live, eat and sleep photography for the rest of your life with no guarantee you'll ever succeed.

Taking pictures for fun is fine, and I encourage it. But if you want to make your living at it be prepared to work, study, experiment and work some more. Then pray for a lucky break.

Over my desk I have a Chinese character that translated roughly into our word "enthusiasm." I tell all young photographers who ask for advice on becoming a photojournalist that unless they have that — enthusiasm — forget it and become an accountant or something else.

Photography, at least news photography, is not an 8-to-5 job. Those photographers who get ahead and excel over others have one trait in common. I like to say that they chase firetrucks. They think photography all the time and are constantly experimenting, trying new things and new ways of doing something.

They develop an eye and see pictures that others miss even driving from one assignment to another. Some actually do chase firetrucks.

Many of the top photographers are terribly insecure. I've seen some spend hours trying to get a specific shot they have in mind. They'll use various lenses, bracket their exposures, change their position and then agonize over the results.

Almost always they're like the fisherman who complains about the one that got away. They almost always feel that they could have done better.

When a new gadget comes along — filter, lens, flash unit or whatever — they can't wait to take it home and play with it. Using the family as guinea pigs, they'll shoot and shoot until the new gadget is old hat and they understand all of its ramifications.

Some time ago, when the fisheye lenses first came on the scene, there was a rash of round pictures. Photographers were using the lens to get as much into the picture as possible.

One of our young photographers asked to borrow the lens from our cabinet shortly after it arrived. He took it home and, using multiple flash and his children as models, came up with two of the best uses of this lens I've seen yet.

A lens like this has tremendous depth of field, meaning that a greater portion of the picture is in focus than a normal lens — from inches to infinity. It also distorts a lot.

Halloween was just a week away when this photographer borrowed the lens. He came back with two square photos, cropped out of the normal circle you get from a fisheye, just in time to move on the wire as a Halloween illustration.

In one photo he cut out the back of a pumpkin lantern for the lens to show the candle burning in the foreground and his children peering into it framed in the eyes, nose and mouth. The second photo, used as an illustration here, had the distorted images of the children grinning into the lens from inches away.

THE WEEDERS GUIDE

Tissue culture, or micropropagation for mass-producing house plants has been in use for several years. Now researchers are seeking to make the technique feasible for mass-producing fruit trees and berries.

More than 700 strawberry shoots have been propagated in a jar about 4 inches in diameter — each one a potential full-sized strawberry plant — at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Science and Education Administration in Beltsville, Md. Similar 4-inch jars house masses of apple shoots and clusters of blackberry and blueberry shoots supported by a synthetic growth medium. And the scientists are coaxing tiny cuttings to multiply rapidly in a clear medium containing nutrients and hormones.

Plant pathologist Richard Zimmerman says the technique could cut to a fraction the time required for nurserymen to propagate these plants; also reducing the space needed for the propagation of fruit trees.

Currently, for example, apple trees are propagated by grafting shoots from the parent tree onto rootstocks. One tree is produced for each shoot. In tissue culture, thousands of trees could be produced from a single shoot. Now it takes up to 12 years and several acres for nurserymen to propagate a new cultivated variety to introduce to the general market. With micropropagation, or miniaturization, it might take only a year and little space, Zimmerman says.

Tissue culture is also a good way to produce virus-free plants which, unlike field propagated plants, are grown in a sterile environment. Unaffected stock, the researchers point out, is especially important to strawberry growers because strawberry plants are susceptible to many viruses that rob vigor.

What Zimmerman's team is striving for is to make the culture method more uniform for the many strawberry varieties and to inform producers who will be setting up strawberry culture laboratories. The main object is to find the combinations of nutrients and hormones that produce the best shoot and root development for each fruit.

This is how it works: To start a culture, the scientists implant a shoot or meristem in a shoot-inducing medium. If the nutrients and hormones are in proper amounts the shoot tip will grow many new shoots.

The emperor and the general

EDITOR'S NOTE: Thirty-four years ago today, Japan's Emperor Hirohito, dressed in formal western clothes, left his palace and for the first time called upon someone — the conqueror, Gen. Douglas MacArthur. A reporter who was in Tokyo at the time recalls the episode.

By KAY TATEISHI
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — On Sept. 27, 1945, the procession of four old-fashioned black Daimlers left the moat-surrounded Imperial Palace and headed for the U.S. Embassy. On the one-mile trip across bomb-scarred Tokyo, it had no official escort and it obeyed the traffic signals.

Several days earlier, the Japanese Foreign Office had sounded out newly installed U.S. occupation authorities on the prospects for a meeting between Emperor Hirohito and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The answer came back affirmative. But the Japanese leader, traditionally regarded as a deity, would have to break all precedent and go to see the general.

Nearly three weeks had passed since the occupation began in this prostrate country. Sixteen days earlier, MacArthur's headquarters had ordered the arrest of 39 Japanese wartime leaders as war criminals — including former Prime Minister Hideki Tojo, who had bungled a suicide attempt.

Where the emperor was concerned, MacArthur had a different strategy.

On one hand, he intended to reduce Hirohito to an ordinary mortal in Japanese eyes. On the other — and against the advice of some aides — he was determined to treat the emperor with respect.

To do otherwise, MacArthur reasoned, would unnecessarily offend the already beaten Japanese and risk casting Hirohito as a martyr.

"I shall wait and in time the emperor will voluntarily come to see me," MacArthur had predicted. "In this case, the patience of the East rather than the haste of the West will best serve our purpose."

Hirohito, dressed in a cutaway coat and striped pants, with wing collar, button shoes and top hat, arrived at the Embassy at 10:15 a.m. Immediately he was ushered to the second floor, accompanied by his grand chamberlain, Hisanori Fujita; his personal physician, Koji Murayama; and an interpreter, Katsuzo Okumura.

Gen. Bonner Fellers, an aide to MacArthur, took pity on the nervous monarch. Smiling, he extended his hand and said, "Welcome, Sir."

Hirohito found MacArthur dressed in a rumpled khaki uniform, tieless and without decorations or campaign ribbons.

The general immediately sought to put his visitor at ease by recalling that he had met Hirohito's father, Emperor Taisho, after the Russo-Japanese war. Then all but the interpreter and Hirohito were excused.

The 38-minute discussion was a secret, but reports leaked out that Hirohito had thanked MacArthur for occupying Japan peacefully, and the general replied that it was wholly due to the emperor's cooperation.

Japanese sources said MacArthur at no time addressed Hirohito as "Your Majesty," but spoke to the interpreter, saying, "Tell the emperor..."

According to MacArthur's memoirs, "Reminiscences," Hirohito said he had not come to plead innocence of war crimes, but to "offer myself to the judgment of the powers you represent as the one to bear sole responsibility for every political and military decision made and action taken by my people in the conduct of war."

MacArthur was surprised by the show of courage, saying later that "I was moved...to the very marrow of my bones." He noted that Hirohito was "an emperor by birth, but in that instant I knew I faced the first gentleman of Japan in his own right."

Reporters had learned about the meeting but were barred except for a U.S. Army photographer. A report on the meeting was held up by Japanese officials for two days and then only a brief announcement appeared.

The photograph did not appear with it. Japanese Home Office officials, still in charge of censorship, called it insulting and lacking in etiquette where the emperor was concerned.

At Domei, the official news agency which still was operating, a photo editor rushed to my desk, appealing for help in getting the photo made public.

We went to MacArthur's press section, where Col. Donald Hoover fumed over the Home Office action. "Who is censoring whom?" he demanded. Then he called the Home Office and had the order revoked.

The photo appeared on Sept. 30, three days later. It stunned the Japanese. Some thought it was a fake: a towering MacArthur, was in summer uniform, hands hooked casually into his hip pockets; next to him was the tiny, fragile-looking Hirohito in his slightly ridiculous formal attire.

Clements defends parole policy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements defended Thursday his rejection of about a quarter of the paroles submitted for his approval by saying the Board of Pardons and Paroles was trying to empty the prisons.

"They are flooding us with recommendations. We are receiving far more recommendations for parole than ever in history," Clements said at a news conference.

"If we followed their recommendations, our prison population would be reduced by 50 percent and we would have on the street 12,000 new parolees. This is ridiculous. I am trying to see the process slowed down," Clements said.

Ambition -- okay for today's woman

BY TINA McCLOY
Of The Pampa News

Ambition is not a dirty word for women, according to Danella Davis, who spoke Tuesday evening to members of the Desk and Derrick Club of Pampa.

"An ambitious woman is no longer looked upon as a freak, a fit subject for psychoanalysis or an undesirable employee," said Davis, editor of Pioneer Corporation's employee magazine, THE JET.

"Rather, an ambitious woman — especially one with multi-talents — is treasured as an asset by most companies today and sought out as an advisor."

A man in the business world is not expected to verbalize his ambitions to his superiors, she added, but a woman must convince them that she expects to advance just as steadily.

"If she finds the right professional environment, she'll be encouraged and, if all other factors are right, promoted."

"There was a time when being a middle-aged white male was the goal of everybody," she explained. "Now they are the most discriminated against."

She also said she's an advocate of making individuality, rather than sex or force, work for changing the way things are.

Davis, who emphatically said she's not a women's "libber," described herself as an outgoing, assertive, aggressive female who wants more out of life than mopping floors and washing dishes.

"I like many other women today, want the feeling of accomplishment and achievement that comes from a career and creativity in a professional position," she said.

"I honestly feel that any individual — male or female, ethnic or caucasian, young or old — can make their own mark, find their own place in the sun and be successful without forceful coercion based on sex, minority or age facts."

Davis jokingly said she gives birth every month when THE JET comes off the press. Scheduled around deadlines are trips to Pioneer's companies and offices spread over 16 states.

"I just throw a camera over my shoulder, put on a hard hat, my boots and jeans, and climb down into a uranium mine in Colorado or a coal mine in Kentucky," she said.

As editor of the monthly publication, she interviews executives and workers, tours facilities, and asks "obstinate and some ignorant questions."

The result of her efforts may be a magazine with human interest articles, technical pieces on nuclear and solar energy, or stories on politics and government regulation.

"I thought I knew a lot about energy before I went into it," said Davis, who began with Pioneer as a secretary in the public relations department in July 1974.

Fourteen months later, she became editor of THE JET.

A wife and mother, Davis' husband often travels with her when she makes speeches. A resident of Amarillo, she said, "I have a very liberal minded husband — not politically — but he does give me the opportunity to travel and give speeches, and generally promotes me."

"Since he's media-minded, he understands my craziness."

A native of Mitchell County, Davis received her initial journalism training from a veteran newsmen in Fort Stockton. In 1973, she joined the editorial staff at The Amarillo Globe News.

Davis won the sweepstakes award last April in Texas Press Women's competition, accumulating a total of 24 points. She won four first place awards for page makeup, editorial, special edition and public relations material — speeches.

She captured six second place awards, including individual personal column, news story, feature writing and feature photography. THE JET was named first place winner in the media awards — magazine category.

She joined Desk and Derrick of Amarillo in 1974 and has held several offices since then. Nominated by her Beta Sigma Phi sorority chapter for a national award, she was named Outstanding Young Woman of America in 1973.

Davis also has won several "Who's Who" awards. "The one I guess I was proudest of was 'The World Who's Who of Women,'" she said. "I'm on the same page as Bette Davis."

DEAR ABBY

Organ, not organist, may be problem

DEAR ABBY: A reader in St. Augustine, Fla., said he quit going to church because the organist played too loudly. Well, I've been an organist since 1934, and the problem is probably not the organist, but the organ. Over the years, churches replace worn-out organs with rebuilt theater organs or parts of several organs, and the resulting sounds are disastrous!

The church is the only corporate body I know of in which each member is an expert concerning what should and should not be played for the service. It is also the only corporate body which pays its most qualified employees, i.e., the minister and the organist, salaries which bear no relationship to the cost in time and money spent to acquire professional status.

To all critics who think the organ music is too loud in church, I say the music in the service should run the gamut of soft to loud, depending on the occasion. Too many Christians today declare their faith sotto voce instead of fortissimo, and expect their organist to do likewise. I play for the joy of it, not for the pay, and God knows I sometimes pull out all the stops. Hallelujah and Amen!

LOUISE M. CHILDS IN S.F.

DEAR LOUISE: Let's hear a slightly different tune from another reader:

DEAR ABBY: This is for the St. Augustine reader who quit attending church because of the organ music: I, too, had the same problem, but I asked God to show me the way, and He pointed me toward the Church of Christ.

The Church of Christ doesn't believe in instrumental music, and believe me, it is heavenly to go to church and not have to hear all that loud instrumental music. For true salvation in a quiet and spiritual atmosphere, try the Church of Christ.

REBECCA

DEAR ABBY: I'll bet you're bombarded by nurses after advising FRUSTRATED, who wanted sex with her husband in the hospital, to ask the physician to write an "order" to that effect. You compared it to "conjugal visits" such as some prisons allow. Prisoners are one thing. Patients are something else.

Abby, we nurses are held responsible for everything that happens to, with, for, on and around every patient in our care. I can just see the patient's chart: "Patient's door closed for two hours. Patient presumed to be alive." The floodgates for lawsuits would be wide open.

Patients who are well enough to engage in sex could ask their doctors for a pass to leave the hospital for a specific period of time. Of course the patient would have to sign a form, releasing the physician, the hospital and its employees of all responsibility for anything that occurs during the patient's absence from the hospital.

I hope you back up on this one, Abby.

CALIF. NURSE

DEAR NURSE: Consider me backed up.

DEAR ABBY: I was married last week, and just prior to the wedding I was introduced to a cousin of my soon-to-be husband. What a shock! I couldn't believe it. This cousin was the SAME man who, a year ago, tied me up and robbed the gift shop where I worked. I spent 90 minutes bound and gagged by this man, and now he is a relative. I am not guessing. I am absolutely positive!

"Cousin" gave no indication that he had ever seen me before, and I said nothing. So, Dear Abby, if you were in my place, would you tell your husband, or remain...

FOREVER GAGGED

DEAR GAGGED: I would tell my husband first. Then I would tell the police.

MAKING PREPARATIONS for the annual Christmas in October project are, from left to right, Karen Gee of Lefors, Barbara Shaw and Helen Hogan, both of Pampa. The women, all members of Gray County home extension clubs, will assist with Christmas in October on Oct. 11 at the First Christian Church Fellowship Hall from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The project is sponsored by the Gray County Extension Homemakers Council.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Dr. Wallace: I'm 14 and have been dating a 16-year-old guy for eight months and really like him. A few weeks ago, he made a pass at me. He said he wanted to make love with me because he loved me and wanted to marry me. Against my better judgment, I gave him what he wanted. Last night I went to an amusement park with a girlfriend and who do you think I meet walking arm-in-arm with a girl? My "lover." When he saw me he said, "I want you to meet Tammy, my new girlfriend." Now I feel used, abused and very stupid. — Diane, Noshua, N.H.

Diane: You were used and abused but you are only stupid if you allow this sort of thing to happen again.

For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent stamped, large self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace in care of this newspaper.

Rho Eta chapter has regular meeting

Rho Eta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Monday in the home of Stephanie Rheams for a regular bi-monthly meeting. Lisa Crossman, president, conducted the meeting.

A program entitled "Morals and Mores versus Social Behavior" was presented by Brenda Bruton and Kay Newman. Hostesses were Stephanie Rheams and Lizann Gattis.

Zindi Richardson was elected as Valentine Sweetheart for the annual dance in February.

The state convention, to be June 20-22 in Amarillo, was discussed; help from Pampa's chapters was enlisted.

This month's ways and means project will be a donation of 15 dozen cookies to this weekend's cancer bike-a-thon.

City Council will meet Oct. 11 in the home of Nancy Brogdon. Executive Board will meet Oct. 8 in Starla Tracy's home before the regular meeting.

Mrs. Cross hosts Civic Culture Club

The Civic Culture Club met this week in the home of its president, Ophelia Cross, at 2425 Christine.

During a business session, the group planned a garage sale, set for Sept. 29 in the Kez Bulls' garage at 1612 Christine.

Plans also were made for the fall board meeting at Wellington on Oct. 16.

Georgia McDonald gave the program on keeping physically fit.

Refreshments were served to 14 members. The next meeting will be Oct. 9 in the home of Helen Hogan, 914 Somerville. The program will be given by Alvena Williams.

Goodwill Extension Club has meeting

The Goodwill Home Extension Club met recently in the home of Helene Hogan, with Elaine Houston, County Extension Agent, as special guest at their first fall meeting.

Elected as new officers were Boots Barnett, president; Charlie Dell Sartor, vice president; Barbara Austin, secretary; treasurer; LaVerne Coombs, council delegate.

Sartor conducted a short business session and Hogan gave the council report.

All members were urged to participate in the Christmas in October project Oct. 11. Announcement was made of the annual luncheon, scheduled Oct. 22 at the Courthouse Annex. County commissioners will be special guests.

Instructed by Eva Sue Frazier and Boots Barnett, members made table place mats from greeting cards.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses to 10 members and one guest. The hostess gift was won by Coombs.

The club's next meeting will be Oct. 2 at the annex, with Sidney Jackson as hostess. Houston will give the program.

Corruption continues

I Corinthians 5:6-8

In the Bible, corruption or rotting is called leaven. When a nation, a home, a school system, or even a church lets sin go unchecked, corruption begins to eat away at righteousness like a cancer. Our United States and her assets are rotting away with this cancer.

I. Our nation has turned her back on God! Sins of pleasure have taken the place of God. Proverbs 14:34: Deuteronomy 23:47, 48

A. Liquor is indulged openly (Proverbs 23:31-35: I Corinthians 6:10)

B. Immorality and sex perversion is accepted (Romans 1:24-27)

C. Drugs are a way of life (I Corinthians 7:1: Revelation 21:8)

II. Homes are in chaos! Today most homes are not in the order God set for them in the beginning. Genesis 2:18-25

A. Husbands are no longer the head of the families (Ephesians 5:23)

B. Wives are no longer in subjection to their husbands (Ephesians 5:22: I Peter 3:1)

C. Children no longer obey their parents, but they run the home, and their parents (Proverbs 15:32, 33: Ephesians 6:1)

III. Public schools continue to increase in ungodliness! As parents watch, sin grows like a fungus in the public school systems. Deuteronomy 6:6-9: Proverbs 22:6

A. God is not honored as God (Romans 1:21)

B. Atheist teach in the classrooms (II Thessalonians 2:10)

C. Evolution is taught as a fact (Genesis 1:1)

D. Scholarship has been replaced with sports or some other "event of school interest" (James 4:17)

E. There is no discipline (Proverbs 22:15)

F. Lewd "sex education" is exploited (Ephesians 4:19)

G. Vulgarity of dress and action is tolerated (Colossians 3:17)

IV. Many churches are tolerant of open sin! Sin is to be named, not allowed to continue as a cancer in the church. Isaiah 58:1

A. Liberal preachers do not condemn drinking, smoking, dancing, adultery, and many other sins. (Jude 4)

B. A literal hell is never mentioned (Luke 16:19-31)

C. Salvation by grace through faith is not taught (Ephesians 2:8, 9)

D. Jesus is the gate into heaven, not the church, baptism, or even good works (Matt. 7:13: John 14:6)

THIS SERMON TO BE PREACHED SEPT. 30, 1979, 11 a.m. at the Pampa Baptist Temple, 500 East Kingsmill. Rev. Jerry A. West, Pastor. Ph. 669-7830.

RELIGIOUS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK (AP) — An American Jewish leader says that Pope John Paul II's visit to the United States can help rejuvenate the spirit of Americans and "call the world to its senses."

He comes in the midst of a "pervasive anxiety and downbeat mood" among Americans and "at a time when the entire human family feels in its bones a universal malaise," says Rabbi Marc H. Tannenbaum.

Tannenbaum, director of interreligious affairs of the American Jewish Committee, who met with the pope last March in the Vatican, says there is powerful symbolism in the fact that the pope arrives in Boston on Oct. 1, the Jewish day of atonement, Yom Kippur.

It is a day of "repentance and renewal," he says. Citing the pope's sturdy faith and fight for human rights under both Nazism and Communism in his native Poland, Tannenbaum adds:

"Such a commanding personality has the capacity to call the world to its senses — to turn away from nuclear disaster and moral anarchy and to turn toward human unity. All of us have a stake in that urgent message being heard and acted on."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The report of a Southern Baptist investigation of reported voting irregularities at its convention in Houston last June finds corrective measures are needed to eliminate flaws, ambiguities and "sloppy" procedures that occurred.

Registration secretary Lee Porter, who conducted the inquiry, reported there were no massive irregularities, but the integrity of the denomination's balloting system required steps to correct the problems uncovered.

He reported indications that 284 registrations were unquestionably out of line, and another 1,000 registrations involved messengers not technically elected by their churches.

There were 11,979 votes cast in an election in which the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis won with a margin of 3,338 votes in a six-man race. Porter's report, submitted to the denomination's executive committee, emphasized the investigation was of registration, and not of the election of the new president.

NEW YORK (AP) — Catholic Relief Services provided a record volume of aid, rehabilitation and development assistance valued at $291 million during 1978, says its annual report.

Bishop Edwin B. Broderick, its executive director, said the work in 1978 benefitted about 14 million people in 86 countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Middle East and the Pacific. The total aid compared to $237 million worth of help in the previous year.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The incoming president of the Leadership Conference of Women foresees nuns moving from being "obedient daughters" in the church to being "obedient leaders."

Sister Theresa Kane told some 600 nuns who hold top administrative positions in their Roman Catholic religious orders:

"We have a responsibility to use the power with which we have been entrusted for the building of this earth by speaking the truth courageously."

TEL Class has successful year

The women of the TEL Class of the Central Baptist Church had a successful year under the leadership and teaching of Mrs. Wayne Cobb.

They were blessed with four new members. Mrs. Willis White. Mrs. Millie Hunter. Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Gay.

The class gave to Lottie Moon Christmas Missions, Home and State missions, and members ill in the hospital from the Love Offerings taken each Sunday.

The class officers for the past year were. Mrs. Jess Hulsey - President, May Bell Watts - Vice-president, Mrs. Naida Sparkman - Secretary, Mrs. Margie Mitchell - Treasurer, Mrs. Lillie Griffin - Out-Reach Chairman, Group Captains were Mrs. Dora Poe, Mrs. Nettie Young, Mrs. Pearl Crump, and Mrs. Sam Bray.

The class had an average attendance of 12 and 13 during the year.

Revival services to be held

The Iglesia Bautista, 512 Kingsmill, invites the public to attend the revival services they are having Friday, Saturday and Sunday of this week. Services start at 7:00 each evening, and a nursery will be provided. If transportation is needed, please call 669-9691.

The evangelist - singer for the services will be Rev. Josue Calderon of Ft. Worth. Early in life Mr. Calderon trained for an operatic career and sang with the Riverside Opera Guild. He has over twenty-five years experience in the evangelistic field. He is a multi-linguist and served as soloist in the opening sessions of the organization of the United Nations in San Francisco, Calif. He has participated in crusades in several latin - american countries, including Spain, also in Alaska and Canada. He is currently serving as Minister of Music and Education in Herrod Memorial Baptist Church in Dallas.

Dedication services set

A special dedication service will be held at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon at the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler.

The new Family Life Center, a two - story, 110 by 60 foot recreational building which includes a gym, full kitchen and restroom facilities, will be the feature of dedication.

Special guest will be Assembly regional director J.W. Farmer of Lubbock.

The building is available for rental by community groups and organizations. If interested, call the church at 665-5941.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life:
in thy presence is fulness of Joy..."

PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

The TIE that Binds... Church Directory

Man and woman began their married life in church and according to God's holy word are joined together. With the Bible as the basis for the beginning of a new life together, it seems only reasonable that a continued study of God's word would strengthen and serve as a guide to any couple. The Bible can truly serve as a tie that will bind two together in accord. The church as God's agency on earth can help you in Bible study, and with the guidance of the Holy Spirit can help you to understand God's will in your life.

"And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." Isaiah 58-11

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Sylvie Vartan - sings in English

Sylvie Vartan likes to sing in English. "I think it's the best language to sing contemporary music — rock 'n' roll. It doesn't sound as nice in French. The French language is good for ballads and intellectual kinds of songs. I love French. But I think English sounds better for rock 'n' roll. No doubt."

This is a surprise since Miss Vartan and her husband, Johnny Hallyday, really introduced rock 'n' roll to France — translated into French.

She has sung quite a lot in English this summer as she toured around Europe, since she is singing songs from her first album in English, "I Don't Want The Night To End," on RCA Records. And she hasn't translated them into French.

Her disco single, "I Don't Want The Night To End," entered the American best-selling charts in September.

"I'm impatient to tour in America," Miss Vartan says. "I waited too long now. Now everything gets into place with the record and I'd like to start touring."

"I had a crush on America when I first came here in 1963. I've been living in Los Angeles — in and out of our house there — for 15 years. It took me a long time to feel what I should do here and to know the people and living here. I think you can't make it in a country when you just come for a week or so. You have to live there, eat, have friends, really enjoy. That is part of the knowledge you get."

"I didn't want to work in America before I had a record. It took a year to get that done — to make up my mind who is going to produce it. You waste such a long time in talk and contracts. The audience doesn't know but it is like years of talking about agreements with lawyers. You just can't jump and do it fast. Now it is done and I'm quite happy."

Miss Vartan and Hallyday both tour but not together. Both fill big halls and both have elaborate shows. Miss Vartan has 16 dancers. She cuts down her traveling company from 35 to 24 when she goes as far as Japan.

"The Olympia in Paris holds only 2,000," she says. "In order to make a good show there you'd have to stay for six months. It's impossible for me to stay six months. We're a pretty expensive show. There aren't so many huge places so we have to play in tents like a circus: we play in front of 4,000 people."

When the couple met, both were teenagers. He was a star and she a beginner. A friend of her brother's had needed a girl's voice on a record in 1961 and Miss Vartan sang. The record was a hit. Hallyday and Miss Vartan toured together in 1963, were married in 1965. Their son David was born in 1966.

Hallyday's cousin, married to an American performer, sent him Elvis Presley records. And some three years after they were hits in America, Hallyday and Miss Vartan translated them into French and made them hits in France.

"The stars in France sang chansons — French songs. There was nothing like rock 'n' roll in France or Europe before, except for jazz, which was concerning only a certain part of the people. When rock 'n' roll came, it was a music teenagers took over. We had crowds of teenagers following us. All of a sudden everybody was aware that there was such an audience," she says.

"We sang 'Don't Be Cruel' in French and Ray Charles' tremendous 'What'd I Say?' We sang the ones that translated well. I'm not talking about the meaning of the lyrics but about the musicality of the words."

"'Bad, Bad Leroy Brown' goes well in French. The Linda Ronstadt 'Don't Leave Me This Way' is a 'rhythm 'n' blues to translate into French. I do it stage; we built a production number around it. But I knew a record of it wouldn't sell."

Her husband, she says, is still the top rock singer in France.

"He knows how to sing rock 'n' roll," she says. "He has that in his blood. He is the only male singer who can make French swing to rock 'n' roll music. All the other male singers sing softer types of music. In the '60s some tried to sing rock. They disappeared very fast."

Miss Vartan was born in Iskretz, Bulgaria, and speaks Bulgarian with her mother and brother. She also speaks French, English and Italian but thinks she is forgetting her Spanish.

Her father, whose roots were Armenian, spoke French and liked French culture. He gave her a French name, Sylvie, and moved the family to France when she was 8.

TEXAS

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — There's not much the Fort Worth police can do at this point but sit and wait for the recovery of three stolen diamond rings worth $17,000.

You see, the suspect may have swallowed them.

The 21-year-old woman was arrested Tuesday after two downtown jewelry store employees were sprayed in the face with Mace. The employees told police the woman squirted them while looking at a tray of diamond rings.

Police caught the woman after a two-block foot chase through downtown, but not before she gulped three of the rings, they said.

Capt. G.S. Geeslin, chief of the criminal investigation division, said he may ask for a court order to have the woman X-rayed.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

September 28, 1979

Chances are you will have many projects going at the same time this coming year. Try to give priorities to the more promising ones, or you may not give the necessary attention to any of them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't even try to fight city hall today. The quickest way to end any confrontations that might occur is to let things go in one ear and out the other. Discover with whom you best get along romantically by sending for your Astro-Graph Letter which begins anew with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Pride could be your biggest enemy today if you fail to ask advice or counsel from one you know has the answers you're seeking. Don't hold back. Seek advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Usually your charm and wit takes you a long way toward achieving your goals, but not so today. Only proven methods or experience will suffice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It's not like you to attempt to use anything but practical methods to accomplish your purposes. This is the wrong day to try anything else.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may not like it because you are usually the one who comes up with neat and exciting ideas, but today it will be those you're involved with who'll provide the answers.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Chances are you will have many projects going at the same time this coming year. Try to separate and give priorities to the more promising ones, or you may not give the necessary attention to any of them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Politely disregard all the friendly butting-in you are likely to encounter today when you attempt to tackle a difficult task. There are no shortcuts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Before you become a self-appointed teacher today, make certain you know what you're talking about. Your instructions will be put to the test.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your first obligation is to your family today. Don't let outsiders talk you out of doing what is right. You're the one who will wind up being unhappy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Face your limitations today. Instead of quarreling over who is right or wrong, give the other guy a chance to prove his contentions and you'll learn something.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) All talk and no action will net you exactly zero. If you hope to have a productive day, the only way to achieve it is by the sweat of your brow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Sometimes you can go overboard with analyzing things to the point where you lose out. Today, however, you are wise to be cautious and not take any foolish gambles.

Pirates shelled, Expos rained out

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates' magic number is still four, and it's not so magic anymore.

"I think we'll bounce back. We have to," Phil Garner said Thursday after Pittsburgh was beaten 9-5 by the St. Louis Cardinals, trimming the Pirates' lead to one game in the National League East.

The Montreal Expos, crushed 10-1 here Wednesday night in the biggest Pirate win of the season, could have moved back into a tie for first with a Thursday night sweep of a doubleheader in Atlanta. But the twinbill was rained out.

Meanwhile, it rained St. Louis batters, 17 of them, at Three Rivers Stadium as the Cardinals clinched third place with their makeup game victory.

Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner shuttled an assortment of pitchers, starters and relievers, to the mound.

He did it because of injuries and because he didn't want to disrupt his starting rotation for three weekend games here with the Chicago Cubs, a series which ends Pittsburgh's regular season.

Tanner was saving Jim Bibby, Bert Blyleven and Bruce Kison to pitch against the Cubs.

Had the Pirates beaten St. Louis, they could have clinched the division with a sweep of Chicago, no matter how the Expos fared the rest of the way.

But, now, the Pirates could win the rest and still finish in a tie — if Montreal wins three from Philadelphia and a Monday makeup of the doubleheader with Atlanta.

Giants 5, Dodgers 3

Mike Ivie slammed a three-run homer, his 27th of the season, and three Dodger errors aided the Giants' victory. Vida Blue, 14-14, was the winner with relief help from Greg Minton, who got his fourth save.

White Sox 4, Twins 2

The division races may be over in the American League, but not the late-inning heroics.

"Everybody likes to be the hero once in a while," said Jim Morrison of Chicago, who got his chance Thursday night. Morrison belted a two-run homer in the 10th inning to give the White Sox a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

It was Morrison who scored on Mike Marshall's balk to win the game for Chicago Wednesday night, and Morrison who did most of the damage again Thursday as the White Sox beat the Twins for the fifth straight time and completed a three-game series sweep.

Yanks 5, Indians 2

New York trailed 2-1 going into the ninth but tied the score on a single by George Scott, walks to Reggie Jackson and Juan Beniquez and a sacrifice fly by Roy White. Oscar Gamble followed with his 19th home run of the season, into the right-center field bleachers.

Ex-Yankee Cliff Johnson's run-scoring double in the ninth inning had put the Indians in front.

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 5

Carlton Fisk had two singles in the game prior to hitting a game-winning homer in the ninth.

Toronto had gone ahead 5-3 with four runs in the eighth, including a two-run homer by Rick Bosetti, but Boston tied it in the bottom of the eighth on a two-run homer by Fred Lynn, his 39th of the season.

Brewers 7, Mariners 6

Seattle took a 6-4 run by scoring three runs in the fourth inning and three more in the fifth, but Milwaukee tied the game on Paul Molitor's two-run double in the bottom of the fifth. That was all the scoring till the 11th, when Buck Martinez got his game-winning hit off Byron McLaughlin to clinch second place in the AL East for Milwaukee.

Rangers 4, A's 3

Jim Sundberg's RBI-single capped a three-run sixth inning for the Rangers and gained the victory for Larry McCall, 1-0, who was making his first start for the Rangers.

Parker still leads

DENISON, Texas (AP) —

Hank Parker held an 11-pound lead today going into the final round of the $50,000 Bass Masters Classic tournament at nearby Lake Texoma.

The 26-year-old Clover, S.C., fishing pro has caught 11 pounds of bass Thursday to bring his total catch to 28 pounds and nine ounces after the first two rounds of the three-day fishing tournament.

Stephenson grabs two-shot lead

DALLAS (AP) — Jan Stephenson held a two-shot lead as the second round began today in the $150,000 Dallas Open, but cooling her image as a sex symbol seems almost as important to her as golf these days.

"I hardly could be labeled the sex symbol type," Stephenson said after posting a 6-under-par 66 in the first round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament. "I go to bed early. I eat most of my meals in my room and I'm probably the hardest worker on the tour."

She admits part of her image resulted from a wet T-shirt photograph that appeared on the cover of a national sports magazine. She said the photo was made "as a joke. The photographer tossed me this T-shirt and I had the shot made and I was so embarrassed when it became public."

The Australian native joined the LPGA tour in 1973 and has established solid credentials, winning almost $300,000, including $55,354 in 23 tournaments this year.

She fired 338 on both nines Thursday, posting seven birdies and a bogey. "I was really charged up," she said. "I was feeling pretty good about my round because in the past I've played about the same but didn't get anything out of my score."

"I think it's a piece to get off to a good start but I can't afford to lose my temper. Often, after I miss a couple putts, I lose my head."

Stephenson has yet to win a tournament in 1979 but said, "I really like my chances every time I tee up."

She now makes her home in Fort Worth, Texas, and said the other members of the tour have begun teasing her about becoming a Texan.

Holmes, Shavers square off tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Earnie Shavers tries tonight to become the second-oldest heavyweight champion in history. He'll fight Larry Holmes, who found out in his last bout he is not too old to learn.

"It's always on my mind. You guys (reporters) won't let me forget it," said Holmes of his unimpressive performance against little-known Mike Weaver, who gave the World Boxing Council champion a rough time before being stopped in the 12th round last June 22.

"I learned to discipline myself," said the 29-year-old Holmes, who contends he didn't prepare properly for Weaver. He said he hasn't made the same mistake for Shavers, though he easily outpointed Shavers in 12 rounds on March 25, 1978.

Should Shavers win the title at age 35, he would be second only to Jersey Joe Walcott as the oldest heavyweight champion. Walcott was 37 when he knocked out Ezzard Charles in 1951 to win the title on his fifth try. This is Shavers' second title shot; he was outpointed by Muhammad Ali on Sept. 29, 1977.

"I'll knock him out in the fifth round," said Shavers, who said he has come of age as a fighter and will be a much different man than the one who lost to Holmes last year.

"I'm beginning to think now, I'm not trying to kill a guy with one hand," said Shavers, who used both hands to knock out Ken Norton in one round last March 23 and get back into the championship picture.

But while Holmes says he has learned his lesson, he adds Shavers is too old to learn to change.

"I don't really think you can get better when you get a certain age," said Holmes.

a one-time sparring partner for Shavers who expects Earnie to be the same man he beat before. "I don't really believe Shavers has the punching power he says he has."

Odds-makers agree with Holmes. To bet on the champion, one must give 4-1. If you like Shavers, you get 3-1.

Holmes weighed in Thursday at 210 pounds, five pounds lighter than for the Weaver fight, and one pound lighter than Shavers.

The fight at Caesars Palace headlines a show that also features another world title shot and appearances by unbeaten Sugar Ray Leonard and the great Roberto Duran. ABC will televise the card from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., PDT.

Leonard, of Palmer Park, Md., is scheduled to fight for the WBC welterweight championship against Wilfredo Benitez Nov. 30.

Harvesters facing another big team

Borger Bulldogs make Palmer nervous

By JOE BLOBAUM
Of The Pampa News

Danny Palmer is the first one to admit it. The Borger Bulldogs make him nervous.

"They're going to be after us," he somberly stated Thursday afternoon. "It's not going to be easy at all. In fact, we could get our tails beat."

Palmer has good reason for his apprehension — despite the fact that the Bulldogs lost to Hereford last week, a team Pampa defeated 22-0 in its season opener.

Hereford won in the closing seconds on a three-pass, 80-yard touchdown drive and a two-point conversion. But, as Palmer put it, "You can't judge their secondary by that."

"We're taking Borger seriously," he said. "You can take whatever intensity they've had in their previous games and triple it for us. It's their first home game. And they don't make mistakes. They're well-drilled, especially in the line. Coach Henderson has done real well with them. Their linebacker play is excellent."

While he didn't mention it, Palmer must also be aware that Borger will be looking to put the first legitimate — non-forfeiture, if you will — mark into Pampa's loss column.

"It's going to be hard for us to run on them," said Palmer, probably thinking of a defensive line that averages nearly 200 pounds. "Their secondary has intercepted a lot of passes, so they're pretty sound all around defensively."

Leading Pampa's rushing attack will be fullback Doug Kennedy, the leading rusher in District 3-AAAA. The rugged fullback-linebacker has amassed 302 yards on 52 carries for a 5.8-yard average.

The same cast of characters resides on the Bulldog offensive line, which lends a strong hand to Borger's ball-control offense.

"Borger scares me," Palmer noted, "because they will keep that football for minutes — not for seconds, but for minutes. They don't fumble very much."

Bulldog Coach Butch Henderson, meanwhile, is feasting on the play of his line — and getting ready for an entree of an offensive backfield that is improving from week to week.

"They're improving real fast and learning real fast," Henderson said of his people in the skill positions. "If we can get to the point where we can do something with them we'll be alright."

Anchoring the Bulldog line are the likes of Doug

Stephenson and Joel Dumas, two players who helped Borger physically whip the Harvesters in a 21-6 Bulldog win last year. Both are seniors and tip the scales at better than 200 pounds.

But the pre-game jitters work both ways. Henderson knows his team must be ready for an inspired Pampa squad.

"They've got one of the stronger defenses in this part of the country," he said, "and they really move the ball on offense. We're going to have to play a real good ball game on both sides of the line."

The only injury of major note for either team appears to be Bulldog Mike Meek. A starting safety and wingback, he will not be available for action Friday night.

On the Pampa side of the ledger, Palmer's biggest worries are sore throats and a flu bug that have been making the rounds at PHS.

"But we'll be okay," he said. "Greg Quarles (who was knocked out of Pampa's 15-7 win over Altus, Okla., last week) will be our starting quarterback."

"Arthur Lee Williams will start at left halfback," he said, outlining the only change in the Harvesters' starting lineup. "But Bobby Dorsey will play too."

Borger, Dumas, Lubbock High provide opposition

Volleyball team will host tournament here Saturday

By D'ANNA CONWAY

Looking forward to District 3-AAAA play, the Pampa High volleyball team will host its own tournament Saturday at Harvester Field House. The Lady Harvesters will be putting their 9-1 record on the line against Lubbock High, Borger and Dumas.

Coach Lynn Wolfe is unsure of Lubbock High's strength, but she feels her athletes "have the stuff to win it."

Dumas "is a lot better than they were last year," she said. The Demonettes have a new coach who has improved the team's fundamentals, but Wolfe gives Borger the nod for giving Pampa its biggest challenge for the tournament crown. "They've given us the best games this year," she noted.

"Win, lose or whatever, I want a good workout. I want a tough battle. That's the only way we can really prepare for district," she said.

And it's the loop title upon which the team has set its sights. Preseason prognosticators have picked Amarillo High to win it all.

"They're more disciplined and more experienced," Wolfe said. "They have a wider selection to choose from and they have bigger girls." The Sandies also have two All-District and one All-Region players returning.

Wolfe said, however, that Pampa has strong players of its own. Seniors Sharon King, Mamie Laycock and Alecia Fleming (who sat out last year) and junior twins Deanna and Jeanna Porter are "improving every day."

"We're trying to improve our teamwork," Wolfe analyzed. "We want to work like a finely oiled machine."

She re-emphasized the need for tough competition, which she hopes the Harvesters will get in the tournament, perhaps for untested Lubbock High.

"We want a tough game; we want a challenge. We need to be made to play hard. I'd like for us to be aggressive enough to where we wouldn't care what the other team was doing or how they were playing. So far, though, we've only been working as hard as we need to win, and that's what we need to improve upon before district."

The Harvesters will have three opportunities to work on aggressive play Saturday. The teams will play round-robin style, with each team guaranteed three games and a chance to play every team in the tournament. The team with the best record at the end of the day wins the first-place trophy.

Junior varsity games will precede all varsity contests in the schedule listed below.

Lefors Jr. High stops Skellytown

SKELLYTOWN — Lefors opened its junior high football season on a successful note here Thursday night, thumping Skellytown by a 30-8 count.

"Give credit to the offensive line for opening holes for the backs to run through," Coach Don Parsons said. "And Daron McBea did a good job of blocking out of the backfield."

John Winegart scored two touchdowns. Tracy Jennings added another TD and three extra-point runs and Brent Finney scored Lefors' other six points.

Winegart and Jennings also led Lefors' defensive effort with 11 tackles apiece. Richard Hutchinson was in on six stops.

Lefors will host Claude at 5:30 Thursday afternoon for its next action.

Public Notices

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
THE STATE OF TEXAS
COUNTY OF PAMPA, TEXAS
TERRY KIRBY, RESPONDENT.

GREETINGS:
YOU ARE HEREBY COMMANDED to appear and answer before the Honorable 223rd JUDICIAL DISTRICT Court, Gray County, Texas, at the Courthouse of said County in Pampa, Texas, at or before 10 o'clock a.m. of the 30th day next after the expiration of 20 days from the date of service of this citation, then and there to answer the petition of RODNEY HOWE and CAROLYN HOWE. Petitioners filed in said Court on the 7th day of September, 1979, against TERRY KIRBY, Respondent, and said suit being numbered 21,083 on the docket of said Court, and entitled "In The Interest of CRYSTAL LYNN KIRBY, KYLE TODD KIRBY and KELLIE LEE KIRBY, CHILDREN, the nature of which suit is a request to TERMINATE PARENT-CHILD RELATIONSHIP between TERRY KIRBY and the children. Said children were born: Crystal Lynn Kirby, 3-25-1968 at Newport, New Va. Kevin Todd Kirby, 4-26-1969 at Pampa, Texas. Kellie Lee Kirby, 3-5-1972 at Groom Texas.

The Court has authority in this suit to enter any judgment or decree in the child's best interest which will bind upon you, including the termination of the parent-child relationship and the appointment of a conservator with authority to consent to the child's adoption.

If this citation is not served within ninety days after the date of its issuance, it shall be returned unserved.

The officer executing this writ shall promptly serve the same according to requirements of law, and the mandates hereof, and make due return as the law directs.

Issued and given under my hand and the seal of said Court at Pampa, Texas, this 10th day of September, 1979.

Helen Sprinkle Clerk,
223rd District Court,
Gray County, Texas.

Who's who in Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since the days of Sam Houston, Texans have had a special presence on the national scene and the Carter years are proving no different.

The dust has finally settled after a summer known for the new Washington sport of Cabinet juggling, and Texans can be found in more visible spots than before the shuffle started.

Charles Duncan, new head of the Department of Energy, joined Labor Secretary Ray Marshall as the second Texan on the Cabinet. Sarah Weddington moved up in the White House staff hierarchy.

Other Texans named to new or higher posts this year include Robert Strauss, the president's Middle East troubleshooter; Bob Krueger, ambassador-at-large for Mexico; and Abelardo "Lalo" Valdez, appointed in September as chief of protocol.

The only departure becomes official Monday when Leonel Castillo voluntarily gives up his position as commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to run for mayor of Houston.

John White, the longtime Texas agriculture commissioner who now heads the Democratic National Committee, puts forth a theory that the state's heritage of "frontier politics" is partly responsible for Texans' will to succeed.

"Those West Texas cotton patches gave a lot of us incentive," he added after recalling his poorer, less prominent youth.

Another prominent Texan in Washington who preferred to remain anonymous gloated, "Next to Georgia, we've got more than just about everybody... if not in quantity, certainly in stature."

He said Texans are willing to take advantage of power, regardless of who may be in the White House.

"We're much more willing to go along to get along," he said. Texans also may hold on to their image as Texans long after natives of other states are blended into Washington uniformity.

Whatever the reason for Texans' high profile in Washington — from John Nance Garner to Lyndon B. Johnson to the latest presidential hopefuls, John Connally and transplanted New Englander George Bush — a partial guide to Texans in Washington government and politics follows.

The state's two senators, 24 representatives and the numerous

Texans employed by private law firms or organizations — other than the Democrats and the Carter campaign — are omitted.

Strauss, born in Stamford but a longtime Dallas resident, attracted national attention as Democratic national chairman from 1972 to 1976. He joined the Carter Administration as a special trade representative, giving up those chores to assume the role of the president's envoy to the Middle East.

Marshall was born in Louisiana and raised in Mississippi. He later settled in Texas and was a University of Texas labor economist before Carter chose him to fill the labor Cabinet slot.

Duncan, a Houston native, gained a Georgia connection through Coca Cola. Duncan was president of Coca Cola in Atlanta but resigned in 1974.

Ms. Weddington also arrived in Washington in 1977, resigning as a state legislator from Travis County to become the Agriculture Department's general counsel. The Abilene native moved to the White House staff the next year to take charge of women's issues.

She picked up additional political responsibilities with her promotion in August.

Valdez, from Floresville, became the assistant administrator for Latin America at the Agency for International Development in 1977. That appointment made him the State Department's highest ranking Mexican-American. His new post as protocol chief for official visitors from abroad still must be confirmed by the Senate.

Krueger's nomination as ambassador-at-large and coordinator for U.S.-Mexican affairs also was awaiting Senate confirmation. The two-term congressman from New Braunfels unsuccessfully ran for the Senate last fall.

Rick Hernandez, deputy assistant for White House personnel, worked in the Carter campaign before accepting a job in the Small Business Administration. The Houston native then joined the White House staff. Hernandez was assistant comptroller for the state of Texas before moving to Washington.

Lynn Coleman, from Vernon, became general counsel for the Energy Department in 1978.

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Selected artists and programmers would receive federal grants to produce quality television programs for children under legislation proposed by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa.

The bill introduced Wednesday would set up a National Endowment for Children's Television to work the same way as the National Endowment for the Arts. That is, qualified applicants would be granted funds on the merits of their projects. The decisions on who would get the money would be made by a national commission. Heinz said he is hoping for a $10 million appropriation to get the idea going next year. Similar legislation died last year, but Heinz has lined up more support this time.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says the Federal Reserve Board was "exactly right" in raising its bank lending rate to a record 11 percent in an effort to slow inflation.

Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, offered his compliments Wednesday to Fed chairman Paul Volcker during a committee hearing. Volcker was there to testify in favor of legislation aimed at discouraging banks from withdrawing from the Federal Reserve System. "People are going to complain more and more, but your monetary policies are exactly right," Proxmire told Volcker.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The time required for gaining federal approval of new drugs would be shortened under a wide-ranging revision of U.S. prescription drug laws approved by the Senate.

Another part of the measure passed Wednesday would give the Food and Drug Administration authority to monitor a new drug's performance after it goes on the market.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee has rejected limits the House wants to impose on the Federal Trade Commission.

A funding resolution approved by the House last week stipulates that the FTC could neither start new investigations of possible "unfair and deceptive trade practices" nor take final action on any new regulation already proposed. The Senate committee version approved Wednesday has no such limits. The resolution is to provide money for the agency to operate after the start of the new fiscal year Monday.

FOCUS

The First Americans

More than 20,000 years ago, people from Asia followed the animals they were hunting across a narrow strip of land that connected Siberia and Alaska, and began to settle in the Western Hemisphere. By 6000 B.C., they had spread out over two continents, from Alaska and Canada to the tip of South America. They discovered foods the rest of the world had never heard of: peanuts, corn, potatoes, peppers, tomatoes, and squash. Some of them built great cities, and invented their own systems of counting, writing, and measuring time. Today is a good time to appreciate the accomplishments of the first Americans. Today is Native American Day.

DO YOU KNOW — What European explorer first called the American natives "Indians"?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Earnie Shavers is scheduled to fight Larry Holmes for the heavyweight title.

Captain's body moved

DALLAS (AP) — For three decades, Captain Leo Francis Donohue II lived an adventurer's life at sea. Before he died 19 years ago, he asked to be buried in the Canal Zone, a land he loved.

Now, because of an obscure provision in the Canal Zone Treaty, the restless sea captain's body has been moved to a small Catholic cemetery in Dallas, the hometown he left for the sea.

"He had been happy down there and said he'd like to be buried there," said his widow, Edna, who lives with their son.
