Iranian decision on hostages may be this week

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The speaker of Iran's Parliament said today it will decide in the "next two or three days" on conditions for the release of the 52 American hostages, now in their 352nd day of captivity.

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press in Beirut, Hafshemi Rafsanjani also said it was a "very remote possibility" that the hostages would be put on trial.

"The Majlis (parliament) will in the next few days announce its decision on the hostages," said Rafsanjani, reached by phone at his office in Tehran.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, leader of Iran's Islamic revolution, has empowered the Majlis with deciding the fate of the Americans, held since Nov. 4.

Asked what Iran's conditions for their release would be, Rafsanjani said, "I cannot predict now. It will be discussed in the Majlis. I think the conditions will be the same as the ones the imam (Khomeini) has mentioned."

On Sept. 12, Khomeini listed four conditions for the Americans' release but omitted a previous demand for a formal U.S. apology for its support of the deposed Shah of Iran. Khomeini's demands were: return of the late shah's wealth, cancellation of U.S. claims against Iran, release of Iranian funds in the United States and U.S. guarantees of non-interference in Iran.

Asked if an apology would be necessary, Rafsanjani said, "You know how the Majlis is. Maybe the majority will want it, or maybe not. Don't worry, it will be known in the next two or three days."

Although some hardline members of Parliament have called for spy trials for at least some of the hostages, Rafsanjani said he felt this was "a very remote possibility."

Rafsanjani, asked if he thought the hostages would be released, said, "If America accepts our conditions, yes."

Asked if the Iran-Iraq war had any effect on the hostages, Rafsanjani said, "No. Before the war we made our demands clear about the hostages and we are still saying the same thing."

Some members of the Parliament, also interviewed by the AP, said the war had slowed down the process of deciding the hostages question.

Rafsanjani denied news reports that the United States would provide spare parts for U.S. military equipment as part of a deal to obtain release of the Americans.

"This is a lie. First of all, we will not buy spare parts from America," he said. "There is no connection between the hostages and spare parts."

Iran, currently locked in a bloody war with Iraq, is said to need spare parts for the U.S. equipment bought by the shah's government.

Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai told a news conference in New York Saturday that the United States should remove four sophisticated radar surveillance planes sent to Saudi Arabia at the start of the Persian Gulf war. He claimed the planes were being used to monitor Iranian troop movements and pass on the information to the Iraqis.

Rafsanjani confirmed that the location of the hostages had been changed twice: after the abortive U.S. rescue attempt last April and again after the war broke out a month ago. But he would not say where they were being kept.

Iraq claiming 'airtight siege' of two cities

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq said its infantry and armor consolidated an "airtight siege" of Abadan and Khorramshahr as the Persian Gulf war entered its fifth week today. But Iran said Abadan's defenders prevented Iraqi tanks from penetrating the city's defenses and that house-to-house fighting raged in Khorramshahr for the fourth straight day.

Iran also announced it renamed Khorramshahr — which means fertile city in Farsi — to Khuninshar, which means "city of blood." It said the name change was in tribute to the "epic resistance" put up against the invading Iraqis by diehard Islamic revolutionary guardsmen in the port, which is 10 miles from the refinery city of Abadan.

The leaders of both governments ignored appeals from other Moslem nations for a four-day cease-fire during Islam's holiest holiday, the feast of id el-Adha, which began Sunday. The Koran, the Moslem holy book, forbids the spilling of human blood during the period.

Meanwhile, the 52 Americans held hostage in Iran began their 352nd day in captivity today, and the speaker of the Majlis, Iran's Parliament, indicated that it would decide their fate late this week or early next week, just before the first anniversary of their being made prisoners.

A Swedish radio correspondent, Agneta Ramberg, said Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani told her in an interview Sunday: "The Iranian Parliament will make its decision on the hostage issue immediately after the special parliamentary commission that is working now has presented a plan, and that will happen by the end of this week at the latest."

Iranian communiques reported heavy fighting at both ends of Iraq's 300-mile invasion front as well as in the central sector. But no major change in the battle lines was reported by either government.

Iran acknowledged for the first time that the Iraqis controlled all the highways leading into Abadan and said they hit the besieged city with "heavy weapons and artillery fire" Sunday. But the defenders "returned the fire and prevented the Iraqi mercenaries from advancing," a communique said. It claimed the destruction of six Iraqi tanks, five other vehicles and five enemy "bunkers."

The communique reported house-to-house fighting was continuing in the port of Khorramshahr, 10 miles up the Shatt al-Arab estuary from Abadan, and said the Iranian navy was evacuating the wounded "with difficulty." Iraq, meanwhile, claimed its troops overran an Iranian army camp at Aidaj, near Khorramshahr. It said eight Iranian soldiers were killed, 84 were taken prisonerand 10 tanks were destroyed.

Iran also claimed that its forces in the Susangerd area, 90 miles north of Khorramshahr, blocked an attempt by Iraqi troops to advance and forced them to retreat.

Another Iranian communique said at the northern end of the front, in the Gilan-e Gharb sector, Iranian forces after "forcing the enemy to retreat in hand-to-hand fighting and capturing heights overlooking the enemy positions, completely destroyed" an Iraqi ammunition and equipment depot, and Iranian artillery blew up another equipment depot.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, said some 200 Iraqi troops had been killed or injured in the Gilan-e Gharb area Saturday night and Sunday.

Baghdad Radio said a military source in the Iraqi command for the central sector reported the Iranian artillery at Dezful, a key garrison town and oilfield center 150 miles north of Abadan, had been destroyed, the enemy fire along the combat lines silenced, and "the remnants of the collapsing enemy troops took to their heels, abandoning hardware and arms." There was no report, however, that the Iraqis had entered Dezful, which has been under attack for weeks.

'Norma Rae's' company signs pact

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Organized labor has won a battle in its bitter 17-year fight with J.P. Stevens & Co. Inc. over unionization at some plants, but the company's chairman says the war is not over yet.

Union members in seven Stevens plants here voted unanimously Sunday to accept a contract with the company, the first union agreement Stevens has ever signed. The dispute had become a symbol of industry's efforts to keep organized labor out of the South and the vote was greeted by cheers from 750 union workers who met at a local high school.

But Whitney Stevens, chairman and chief executive of the nation's second-largest textile concern, said Stevens would remain opposed to unionization at nearly all of its 70 other plants.

"The company continues to be openly and strongly opposed to unions in its non-union plants," Stevens said in a news conference at the company's headquarters in New York.

The union, however, agreed to call off a four-year consumer boycott of Stevens products and end an anti-Stevens publicity campaign.

Sunday's vote came more than six years after the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union won the right to represent Stevens workers. The union had been unable to obtain a contract from the company.

"We are confident that a better era is at hand for the textile workers of this country," said Scott M. Hoyman, executive vice president of the union.

Clyde Bush, a union organizer who has worked in Roanoke Rapids for five years, expressed doubt that the contract would mean good relations with Stevens.

"It's a victory for Roanoke Rapids and a victory for the South, that's for sure," Bush said. "But we've had war with this company for 17 years. I'm not expecting it to roll over and die tomorrow. I expect to still have problems with this company."

The contract gives 3,000 Stevens workers in Roanoke Rapids about $3 million in back pay, with each worker getting about $1,300.

The back pay includes two retroactive pay increases that Stevens granted during the past two years to some 30,000 workers at its 70 non-union plants, but not to those in Roanoke Rapids. They include an 8.5 percent raise retroactive to July 1979 and a raise of about 10 percent that became effective in July of this year.

It would be the first pay increase since July 1978 for Stevens workers in Roanoke Rapids, who earn an average of $4.36 an hour.

Whitney Stevens said the contract "does not provide any better wages and benefits at locations where we have recognized the union than in our other plants."

"It does not restrict the company in opposing future union organizing efforts," Stevens said.

The company has agreed to use the Roanoke Rapids contract as a pattern for agreements at other small Southern plants recently organized by the union at High Point, N.C., Allendale, S.C., and Opelika, Ala.

Stevens officials are bound by the new contract to fight union campaigns through strictly legal means.

Since the organizing drive began in 1963, Stevens has been found guilty of charges of unfair labor practices by the National Labor Relations Board on 22 occasions. Violations have included firing workers for union activities and other means of intimidation aimed at discouraging workers from voting for the union.

The union called for a consumer boycott in the spring of 1976. The company has said the boycott had no effect on sales.

The fight between Stevens and the union was the basis for the movie "Norma Rae," starring Sally Field, who won an Oscar for the role.

The character of Norma Rae was based on Crystal Lee Sutton, whose organizing efforts in 1974 ended in her dismissal from a Stevens mill in Roanoke Rapids.

Asked before the vote what she thought of the settlement, Ms. Sutton said, "I always have my hopes up, but I always think it could be another dirty trick. I won't believe it until I see it."

Ms. Sutton now works for the AFL-CIO.

Patty Hearst due new hearing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst Shaw, the kidnapped newspaper heiress and former Symbionese Liberation Army fugitive, is entitled to a new hearing in her legal battle to overturn a bank robbery conviction, a federal court ruled Monday.

The U.S. 9th Court of Appeals ordered the hearing to be held in federal district court. No date for the hearing had been set.

Mrs. Shaw, then Miss Hearst, was convicted in the April 1974 robbery of a branch of the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco.

President Carter later commuted her prison sentence and she was released on Feb. 1, 1979, after serving less than two years.

Carter, Kennedy coming to Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Carter's re-election campaign will blitz Texas this week with a one-day visit by the candidate and a 1½-day swing by his chief Democratic challenger, Sen. Edward Kennedy.

The President will spend most of Wednesday in Texas, arriving in Beaumont that morning from New Orelans. Around noon he will leave Beaumont for Waco and then will travel to Texarkana for a late afternoon rally, campaign organizers said, although a detailed schedule of the president's activities has not been released.

Kennedy, who opposed Carter's renomination by the Democratic party, now is campaigning for the president's re-election.

His Texas appearances will begin Tuesday morning when he arrives in Houston for a rally. He will then travel to McAllen for an evening rally before proceeding to San Antonio for a night meeting with "political activists," according to his published schedule.

On Wednesday, the day Carter arrives in the state, Kennedy will dedicate a new school, John F. Kennedy High School, in San Antonio before leaving Texas for Massachusetts.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court gave federal regulators a major victory today by turning away arguments that terminal cancer victims have a constitutional right to use Laetrile.

The justices, without comment, left intact a federal appeals court ruling that because no such right exists the government is free to ban the controversial substance.

Today's action was not a definitive ruling. It is conceivable, though not likely, that the high court could at some later date agree to study the issue in depth.

But for now the practical effect is just as momentous. Cancer victims determined to get Laetrile without leaving the United States must do so illegally.

The Laetrile controversy has been an emotional one because of modern medicine's failure thus far to conquer cancer.

A number of physicians advocate the use of Laetrile, an apricot-pit derivitive, for cancer victims. Others in medicine and science discount its effectiveness, portraying its use as medical quackery.

By a unanimous vote in 1979, the Supreme Court upheld a federal ban on the interstate shipment of Laetrile. But that 1979 decision left unanswered the question of whether terminal cancer victims have a right — grounded in their right to privacy — to use the substance.

Cold, wet Basin weather big surprise to Yankees

Northerners who thought West Texas was a hideaway from cold, rainy fall weather have been fooled again. Mother Nature apparently got up on the wrong side of the bed recently and decided to let it rain on Midland.

As a result, Midlanders awoke today to chilly temperatures and a drippy atmosphere, or what is thought to be a typical fall day for Yankees. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport recorded 0.05 of an inch of rain by 8 a.m. today. Total rainfall for the year to date is 15.76 inches.

The sloshy weather was to continue through Tuesday with a 30 percent chance of rain and thundershowers tonight, diminishing to 20 percent Tuesday.

The rain also is putting a damper on the breezes. Wind should be variable at 5 to 10 mph through Tuesday.

High on Tuesday should be in the upper 60s after the mercury dips to the middle 40s tonight.

Sunday was cloudy with a cool 65 degree reading as compared to the record high on that date of 90 degrees set in 1936. Overnight low today was 48 degrees. Record low for the date is 35 degrees set in 1976.

Area towns reported the same dismal weather this morning — misty and overcast.

Dallas couple slain at home as sons watch

DALLAS (AP) — A West Dallas couple was killed by a pair of gunmen who burst into their home Sunday night and began shooting as their two sons watched, police said.

A friend, visiting the couple, was hospitalized in fair condition with gunshot wounds in the leg and chest.

David Owens, 30, and his 29-year-old wife, Shirley, were killed. Roy Clark, 31, of the Dallas suburb of Hutchins, underwent surgery for his wounds. Police said the two gunmen, who knew the Owens family, came to the house and demanded money, then started shooting.

Police said they believed the children — ages six and 10 — were not killed only because the gunmen "ran out of ammunition."

Owens was found on the living room floor with gunshot wounds to the chest and head. Mrs. Owens had been shot repeatedly. She was found in a dining room chair, a dinner plate spilled in her lap.

Officers said the boys fled from the house, chased by one of the gunmen who stopped when he ran out of ammunition. The boys told police they ran to a neighbor's house and had the neighbor call police.

"The boys were unable to give us much information because they were still in shock," said police investigator Gerald Robinson.

Police looking for burglars of local school

Midland police this morning were looking for burglars who broke into Henderson Elementary School, 4800 Graceland Drive.

According to police reports, the break-in occurred sometime Saturday or Sunday.

Reports indicated that Room 107 was entered by way of a ceiling skylight, while Room 119 was entered by breaking out a small window in the room door and opening the door from inside. Both rooms were exited by way of their doors.

Principal Robert Milam was called to the scene and initially told officers he could find nothing missing.

fire Sunday at a mobile home located a mile north of U.S. 80.

The five firemen who responded to the blaze spent about an hour and 20 minutes fighting the blaze before bringing it under control. The mobile home sustained moderate damage in the fire, according to reports.

Owner of the mobile home is Ross Holman of Route 2, Box 164 Y-8.

Probable cause of the blaze was listed as a faulty water heater.

In all, firemen and ambulances answered 13 calls Sunday, most of them medical in nature.

A 25-year-old Odessa man was slightly injured Sunday evening when the late model pickup he was driving west on Interstate 20 overturned.

Department of Public Safety officials said Jerry Wayne Kennedy was injured about 9:30 p.m. when his westbound pickup crossed the median of the interstate and overturned in the eastbound lane.

Kennedy was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital's emergency room for cuts and abrasions.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Ben Valdez of Midland.

Dollar up; Gold down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in value against most major European currencies today as gold prices declined.

Gold opened in London at $666.50 an ounce and dipped to $664.50 at the mid-morning fixing. It closed Friday in London at $668.

In Zurich, the metal opened at $665.50 an ounce, down from $668.50 at the close Friday.

20 travel agents injured by bomb blast in Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. travel agents jammed an airline counter today to book flights out of the Philippines after their convention was cancelled when a bomb blast injured seven Americans and about 13 others shortly after an address by President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Marcos was not hurt and none of the injured was in serious condition. The April 6 Liberation Movement, which opposes Marcos and his government by martial law, had warned the travel agents not to come to Manila and claimed responsibility for the bombing Sunday.

Marcos condemned the bombing as a "heinous act of terrorism" and vowed "vigorous action" to bring those responsible to justice. He ordered the arrest of 30 people, including former Sen. Benigno Aquino and other opposition figures residing in the United States, for alleged links to thz April 6 group, but did not directly tie any of them to Sunday's bombing.

The delegates mobbed an airline counter beside the lobby of the convention center. But many of them took advantage of free sightseeing tours offered by the Association of Philippine Travel Agents, and most said they were leaving early not out of fear but because cancellation of the American Society of Travel Agents' 50th anniversary congress left them with little to do.

The society scheduled a series of educational TV programs for delegates staying until Saturday, when the convention was to have ended. But "I don't like to stay in my room and watch TV," said Bruce Templeman of Brea, Calif.

"I don't think there's any great fear among the delegates," said Roger Hauge, an airline executive from Minneapolis, Minn., "but there's a feeling of sadness that something like this can put a damper on the efforts of so many Filipinos and ASTA delegates who traveled so far."

The bomb exploded during the opening session of the ASTA congress. About 5,000 people were in the seaside convention center, and Marcos had just finished a speech in which he told them:

"You come to the Philippines perhaps for the first time and you are warned that the Philippines is under martial law, raising fear and apprehension that you come to visit a country where bloodshed is rife, kidnapping, arson, murder, pillage and destruction commonplace.

"But this is a nightmare which we hope is past and gone."

The bomb went off during a slide film depicting the U.S. naval bombardment of Spanish ships in Manila Bay in 1898. Marcos was seated 20 rows from the explosion, and his guards immediately surrounded him. Many in the audience dropped to the floor of the auditorium. Hundreds fled through the smoke and dust.

Investigators said several of the travel agents saw two people leave seats in the balcony moments before the explosion.

Tourism Minister Jose D. Aspiras said the bomb exploded in a section of seats occupied by U.S. and Brazilian delegates, and that it was placed in a delegate's bag atop a seat. He said the bomb was similar to those used in other recent bombings in Manila and was believed imported from the United States.

Urban League President Jordan makes first speech since shooting

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — National Urban League President Vernon Jordan, wounded by a sniper last May, returned to work as an active civil rights spokesman in urging blacks to play the decisive role in next month's presidential election.

Jordan, looking fit and speaking clearly, Sunday chose Tuskegee Institute's chapel as the site of his first speech since he was shot in the back at Fort Wayne, Ind., May 29.

He endorsed no presidential candidate, but said the economic policies of Republican candidate Ronald Reagan "are not likely to win many black votes." He dismissed independent John Anderson as an ineffective alternative.

The Urban League president said "the most damaging course of all for black interests" would be not to vote at all.

Some 1,000 people crowded into the chapel for the address.

"It is important to me that my first speech since last May take place in my native South, on a black college campus, talking to young black people who are our future hope," said Jordan.

He said Tuskegee Institute, founded 100 years ago by Booker T. Washington, "is a symbol for black America. It represents a light of learning, hope and achievement in the dark forest of racism and despair."

Jordan, who was released from New York Hospital last month, also told the group about a telegram he received following the unsolved sniper shooting.

"In the darkest hour before dawn last May 29, I was on an operating table in a Fort Wayne, Ind., hospital. A team of black and white doctors and nurses was working together to save my life. They were led by a young black surgeon educated at a black college," said Jordan.

"And when I came out of the operating room, telegrams and wires started arriving at the hospital. One of them came from Montgomery, Ala., and it read:

"'I was shocked and saddened to learn of your injury. I am praying for your complete recovery and I am thankful that your life was spared.' That wire was signed 'George C. Wallace.'"

As the audience applauded, Jordan added that he and the former Alabama governor, who was crippled by a bullet, "probably disagree about every major issue today and yesterday. But we've got one thing in common. Each of us knows what it is to feel the pain of a would-be assassin's bullet."

Mount St. Helens eruptive state is not over yet, say scientists

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Five outbursts of steam and ash from Mount St. Helens, spread over 48 hours, were all part of a single eruption that shows no immediate signs of ending, scientists say.

Magma, or molten rock, continued to churn beneath the southwestern Washington volcano Sunday.

"We still have magma moving, and that technically is an eruptive state," said Susan Russell-Robinson, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist as scientists waited for a sign that the series of bursts which occurred Thursday through Saturday had ended.

The volcano needs to clear molten material clogging the passage of gases before it can settle down, Ms. Robinson said.

A lava dome built up quickly Saturday, but had stabilized Sunday night at a height of about 155 feet and a width varying from 900 to 2,300 feet, she said.

Only occasional wisps of steam and low-level seismic activity were noted Sunday. Late Saturday night, an earthquake measuring 3.0 on the Richter scale of ground movement rattled Packwood to the north, but A.B. Adams of the University of Washington geophysics center said the quake was probably unrelated to the recent activity at the volcano.

Joe Sears of the Federal Emergency Management Agency said scientists agreed it was "not a deep-focus quake that would signal that activity has come to an end."

On Sunday, the surface of the lava dome was "very bread-crusty. The cracks appear to be widening," Ms. Robinson said. If the dome remains relatively small, she added, "we might expect to see it get blown away."

That has happened twice since the cataclysmic May 18 eruption which killed 34 people and left another 28 listed as missing.

Ms. Robinson said a larger dome — for example, one 300 feet high and a mile in diameter — would be less likely to be blasted away quickly but could cause a bigger buildup of pressure and ultimately a more intense blast.

She said ash problems had lessened considerably since the eruptions of May 25, which dumped the fine grit from southwestern Washington to the Olympic Peninsula coast, and June 12, which snarled traffic for days in the Portland, Ore., area.

Eruptions July 22 and Aug. 7 caused relatively few problems.

"It does seem that the eruptive events are not as vigorous in terms of the material being expelled," Ms. Robinson said.

She said pressure from gases locked in the magma may have been released by successive eruptions to the point that "the system is losing its force to propel a lot of material," much the way soda loses its fizz after successive shakings.

Lava dome in the shape of baked bread forms in the crater of Mount St. Helens Sunday, following the southwestern Washington volcano's latest series of eruptions. Ash, smoke and steam belched from the crater in five eruptions since last Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Police begin door-to-door canvass for child killer

ATLANTA (AP) — Five hundred police and firefighters, looking for any shred of evidence that might prevent another killing, were launching a door-to-door canvass of Atlanta today in the investigation of the slaying of 10 black children.

Meanwhile, the City Council was meeting to consider imposing an 11 p.m. curfew for children under 15 and a $20,000 appropriation to a reward fund that already totals more than $50,000 in state and private contributions.

The body of the 10th victim — a 7-year-old girl — was found Saturday in a vacant lot by volunteers who signed up to kick through weeds and brambles in search of bodies and clues. Organizers of the search said the biracial effort by hundreds of blacks and whites had helped ease racial tensions produced by the slayings.

Four other children are missing. The volunteer searches are to continue each Saturday, while the daily door-to-door canvass is assigned to uniformed police officers. Homes missed by police will be visited by firefighters.

"We'll be using our regular beat officers, any officer on duty between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m.," Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown said Sunday night. "When they are not responding to calls for service, they will be, in a systematic way, checking their areas."

About 250 officers and 250 firefighters are taking part. They will leave at each home materials designed "to provide every household with safety tips so we have no more of our children becoming victims," he said.

The brochures include "an easy way to write down a description of any person who acts suspicious, including color of hair, color or clothing, like that," he said.

Officers will ask citizens to "think back in the past, when something may have happened, that may not have been considered significant," Brown said.

The police canvass will be similar to one used in New York's investigation of the "Son of Sam" killer.

"They put 1,000 men on the task force there, and the thing that turned up was a traffic ticket" that led to the killer, said Bill McKenney, an assistant to Atlanta Police Chief George Napper. "Just one little lead and it could all come together."

Brown said police hope the weekend discovery of the body of Latonya Wilson, who had been missing since June 22, might turn up a new clue to the killer. But it might not be possible even to fix the cause of her death, because the body was decomposed, officials said.

Fourteen children disappeared in the period since July 1979.

"We're not overlooking any possibility," Brown said, when asked whether police were finding any connection between the deaths. "Based on the evidence, we cannot conclusively say any one person is responsible, but we do not rule that out as a possibility."

The deaths and disappearances and renewed activity nationwide by the Ku Klux Klan have heightened racial tension in the black community. In addition, some black residents were suspicious about the deaths of four black children and a teacher in a day care center explosion Oct. 13. Authorities said the explosion was caused by a faulty boiler.

City Councilman Arthur Langford, one of 10 blacks on the council and an organizer of the search by 550 people Saturday, said he thought the city needs such black-white efforts.

"It brings us back to what we had years ago, when blacks and whites came together to work out solutions to problems," Langford said in a weekend interview. "We're going on for five Saturdays straight, until we search this entire city."

Justice to rule today on shooting

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A Brazos County peace justice said she might have a ruling today in a weekend shooting at the altar of the Texas A&M University campus chapel that left a Houston man dead and a student critically injured.

Judge Carolyn Hensarling today said she hoped to rule in the case after hearing police evidence.

Campus police have been tight-lipped about the Saturday night shooting that killed Michael Bruce Duchin, 19, and put freshman student Janie Koester in the hospital.

Duchin was pronounced dead Saturday night by Ms. Hensarling, who said his body was sprawled near the altar at All Faiths Chapel.

Four Texans hospitalized after Arkansas plane crash

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP) — Four Texans remained hospitalized early today with injuries they received Sunday when a light plane clipped an electrical transmission cable and crashed at a north-central Arkansas resort, authorities said.

Taken to a Bull Shoals hospital were Joe Kemp, 61, the pilot; his wife Maxine, 58, both of Grapevine, Texas; and Bill and Teka Davis, both 60, of Roanoke, Texas. They were treated for cuts and bruises and were reported in stable condition.

State police trooper Bill Carver said Kemp took off from Gaston's Resort on the White River at about 10:45 a.m. Sunday in a 1955 model 170 Cessna. Gaston's is about three miles southeast of Bull Shoals Dam, near the Baxter-Marion county line.

Kemp said he was attempting to gain altitude and did not see the transmission line, about five miles southeast of the dam.

"Evidently an aircraft hit high line wires crossing the White River," said a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman at Little Rock.

The right wing of the aircraft struck a 161,000-volt transmission line, and it crashed on the grounds of Stetson's Resort near Fairview.

Gays protest at Catholic university

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About 200 gay rights advocates were removed from the University of San Francisco during the school's 125th anniversary celebration after they protested the Catholic school's anti-homosexual policies.

The protesters, some chanting "Two-Four-Six-Eight! Are you sure your priest is straight?" were peacefully led off campus by security police Sunday.

The demonstration was in response to the university's refusal last week to allow a gay rights student organization to be listed in the new law school catalog, the protesters said.

The Rev. John LoSchiavo, president of the 6,500-student Jesuit school, said he decided not to include the gay rights group in the catalog because, "it would be interpreted as university approval and support of homosexuality activity, which are at variance with the principles of the Catholic faith."

In quest of beauty

Back in the 1960s when Lady Bird Johnson and the late President Lyndon Baines Johnson occupied the White House, Mrs. Johnson took an active role in beautification projects.

After leaving Washington, D.C., and returning to Texas, she has continued her beautification efforts on a statewide basis, including her personal financial support for those individuals involved in highway beautification and environmental preservation.

Each year Mrs. Johnson plays a vital role in recognizing the efforts of employees of the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The Lady Bird Johnson Award is given each year to a departmental employee whose efforts have resulted in highway beautification.

Additionally, this year the ceremony was expanded to include a special environmental preservation award, designated the Lady Bird Johnson Scenic Preservation Award.

Mrs. Johnson is to be commended for the positive position she has assumed in leadership of state highway beautification projects and scenic preservation. It's rare to find a First Lady who will continue her project after leaving the White House. But it's even more rare to find an individual so firmly committed to her personal project as is Lady Bird Johnson.

Failure to praise her efforts would be a sad matter. All Texans are recipients of her dedication and commitment to beauty. Because of her efforts we can all enjoy our state just a little more.

Perhaps that within itself is a fitting tribute to a woman who has gone above and beyond the call of duty in her efforts to beautify her state.

Castro's 'skeptical step'

Taken at face value, Fidel Castro's announcement that the Cuban government would pardon all U.S. prisoners would indicate that he is finally coming around to acceptance of the olive branch extended by President Carter in 1977.

But Castro's 20-year history of iron-handed rule justifies suspicions that the Communist dictator has other motives. Given a choice of Mr. Carter or Ronald Reagan as head of the U.S. government, Castro has made no secret of the fact that he prefers Mr. Carter.

And, while the U.S. State Department has called the prisoner release "a positive step," some officials concede that Castro may merely be seeking to minimize Cuba as an issue in the upcoming presidential election.

The alternate optimism and chills experienced by Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy early in the Castro era have continued through the Carter years in the White House.

The president's initial hopes were dashed when Cuba sent thousands of troops to support guerrilla movements in Africa.

There was evidence that Cuba was again taking a hand in revolutionary movements in Central America.

Just a year ago, the president termed the presence of a Soviet Union combat brigade in Cuba "unacceptable." The Carter objections were dropped, however, upon "assurances" from Moscow that the troops were not a threat.

The goal of eased tensions with Cuba is worthy of pursuit. At some time, our relations with Cuba will have to be normalized. And we would like to think that normal relations with the island only 90 miles off the Florida coast would be friendly and mutually helpful.

But the conditions for "normalization" of relations have long been spelled out — an end to adventurism in Africa and Latin America and some kind of settlement, even if it is a token settlement, of U.S. claims for American property nationalized by Castro two decades ago.

Until those terms are met, any "positive steps" by Castro's Cuba must be viewed with skepticism.

CHARLEY REESE

Arguments against hunting outweighed by facts, logic

Charley Reese

The last time I wrote something animal lovers didn't like I got more threats, abuse and hostility than you could find at the annual convention of Hell's Angels.

Nevertheless, the summer heat is broken and hunters are starting to collect their gear and sight in their rifles. There are three things you can count on when autumn finally arrives: (1) hunters smiling with anticipation; (2) leaves falling; and (3) nuts knocking the enamel off their teeth yapping about barbaric people who shoot little furry and feathery critters.

Well, such nonsense must be answered with sweet reason. The first point to establish is that nobody is talking about the animals living or dying. That is not the issue. They are all going to die. The Lord hasn't made an immortal body, bald or furry, four-legged or two-legged. The only questions are when and how, not if, for them as well as us.

With that little bit of metaphysics out of the way, we can proceed to facts. It is a fact that no species is endangered by sportsmen. Hunters talk and walk more than they shoot. They barely make a dent in the wildlife population.

The threat to wildlife comes from non-hunters, especially in the Third World where most folks are more concerned about preserving their lives than they are about preserving wildlife.

What few animals the sports hunters take, they more than make up for by their cash and efforts which have been supporting wildlife preservation long before the present generation of environmentalists were even a gleam in their grandfather's eye.

It is a fact that from a game management point of view, hunting is a plus, not a minus. There are more game animals in U.S. forests today than there were 80 years ago and you can thank hunters for that. They were the original conservationists.

Still some people complain that hunting is cruel. I think their real hangup is death. I can understand that. We live in an artificial environment. We don't have to see the millions of sheep, cattle, fish and poultry that are killed every year so we can feed our tummies. Most people do not think about the fact that veal is a furry little creature with big brown eyes before it is scallopinied.

Shooting is not a cruel death. It's quick, much quicker than death by disease, starvation, or four-legged predator, one of which is the certain alternative to the hunter's bullet. There are no retirement villages, nursing homes, or hospitals in the woods. Mother Nature doesn't play games like people do.

So if hunting doesn't endanger the animal population and shooting isn't cruel, what is the objection? Well, again, it derives from the artificial nature of our society. As long as there are other people around to do the killing for them, some individuals can pretend in an affluent civilization that man is not a predator and a killer. Hunters are, they think, but man is a killer and a predator, always has been and always will be. Historically, ethics have never been concerned with not killing, but with whom to kill and under what circumstances.

In fact, anybody who can look at the world as it is and still be primarily concerned with animal welfare is either crazy or misanthropic. The species in most immediate danger is good old homo sap.

So as you can see, there are no valid objections to hunting. As for why people do it, I can tell you easily. Last year, I shot a wild hog. I enjoyed shooting that hog. I enjoyed it for the same reason you enjoy hitting a homerun, bowling a strike or serving an ace. To kill a running hog at 115 yards with one shot gives me pleasure. It also tasted pretty good.

Of course it is not big deal to kill a game animal with a rifle. Nobody hunts to prove their masculinity as some silly critics claim. If you feel a need to do that, you have to go to a war, a bed or a bad bar. You hunt because it is fun, natural and satisfying in a basic way and that is all there is to it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Justice files link Billy to mercenaries

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — One of the biggest bombshells in the Billy Carter case lies ticking but unexploded in the classified files of the Justice Department. Locked in these files is evidence that President Carter's footloose brother, perhaps innocently, became cozy in Libya with the leader of a ring of American mercenaries — specialists in murder and mayhem who learned their skills in the Central Intelligence Agency and military special forces.

These violent men, some of the toughest and meanest ever to come out of America's clandestine operations, have been collaborating with Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi's worldwide terrorist movement. They have supplied the terrorists with infernal murder devices and have trained them in the dark arts.

The startling details have been swept under the secrecy stamp, ostensibly because they would expose CIA and military secrets, but possibly because the information would embarrass the White House.

The ringleader of the mercenaries is Frank Edward Terpil, a stocky, mustachioed ex-CIA agent who owns a home close to CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., and whose wife once worked for the CIA. He allegedly has supplied weaponry and explosives, including boobytraps disguised as ashtrays, lamps, alarm clocks, flower vases, radios and books, to world terrorists.

One of his associates, Edwin Paul Wilson, a big bulldozer of a man who could pass for John Wayne in a dim cafe, is quoted in the secret files as explaining: "You know, the Colonel (Qaddafi) may some time have some young colonels or some officers who are getting out of line that he wants to send a present to."

The rugged Wilson, who also has a background as an intelligence officer for the CIA and the Navy, allegedly tried to recruit an assassin to eliminate one of Qaddaffi's enemies in Egypt for a $1 million fee.

According to the secret files, Terpil and Wilson have recruited at least 10 U.S. special forces veterans who are described as "trained assassins." But given the skill of these clandestine operatives to conceal their identities, the actual number is probably greater. Another seven U.S. explosives experts and two men trained to make sophisticated CIA weapons have also been brought to Libya by Terpil and Wilson.

The two ringleaders have been indicted for gun-running and are now on the lam from the law. Intelligence sources say Wilson is hiding out in a Tripoli hotel just down the hall from the notorious international terrorist Carlos the Jackal. Terpil was last reported in Syria, which has just joined in political union with Qaddafi's Libya.

Billy Carter was once in touch with the notorious Terpil, though the connection may be entirely innocent. He told Justice Department officials that he had discussed a machine-gun deal with Terpil. Another time, Billy said Terpil had acted as an interpreter for him in Libya, though Terpil knows no foreign languages. Billy also said he might have signed a photograph, showing himself and Terpil together in Libya, "To my friend, Frank."

But later, Billy recanted and insisted he hardly knows the man. Both Carter and Terpil have also tried, perhaps independently, to break the U.S. ban on the sale of C-130 transport planes to Libya.

My associate Dale Van Atta has reviewed the classified Justice Department files, which are drawn from grand jury transcripts and investigators' reports. The FBI, Customs Bureau, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and two federal grand juries have been working on the case for two years. If only a fraction of the allegations can be proved in court, it will be one of the most incendiary political-military-intelligence scandals of the decade.

This secret conclusion from Justice Department files summarizes the case: "The United States, in effect, has become a worldwide supplier of hardware and technology in support of worldwide terrorism. Former CIA personnel, military special forces and U.S. corporations combine to supply products and expertise to whoever can pay the price."

In future columns, I'll report the astonishing details.

Footnote: Sources close to the investigation claim that the prosecutors, fearful of burning their fingers, have been handling the case as if it were radioactive. But the grand jury prosecutor insisted that his office is pursuing the investigation vigorously.

●

OUT FOR (CAPTAIN) BLOOD: Unabashed by the storm of protest from friends of the late Errol Flynn and a pending libel suit by the swashbuckling actor's two daughters, writer Charles Higham insists he has documentary evidence to prove his charges that Flynn was a secret Nazi sympathizer and a not-so-secret bisexual.

Because defaming the dead is not actionable in the United States, Flynn's daughters are about to file suit in Canada, where heirs may sue for libel if their honor and reputation were intentionally damaged.

Higham contends there's no basis for a Canadian lawsuit, "because the book contains no statement criticizing the heirs." Beyond that, he says he has long-buried documents from U.S. and British government archives to substantiate his charges. One is a letter Flynn wrote to former first lady Eleanor Roosevelt seeking her intercession in the tangled immigration problems of a suspected Nazi, Dr. Herman Frederick Erben.

CONSCIENCE MONEY: General Accounting Office auditors, the government's waste watchers, were delighted by the example of a woman who recently mailed them 30 cents - to pay for a ballpoint pen she inadvertently pocketed on a visit to a government office. The money was deposited in the Treasury.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan overcautious for not blasting Carter defense record

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — Sublimely unaware of the rich vein to be mined on the defense issue, Ronald Reagan's political high command overruled his national security advisers last week and again vetoed an attack on this Achilles' heel of President Carter's four-year record as commander-in-chief.

"Put it down to overcaution because of the warmonger nonsense," one disappointed Reagan defense consultant told us. "The politicians around the governor are afraid it will only fuel the charge that he wants an arms race." A better explanation: campaign anemia.

The insiders' struggle over putting the defense issue on the firing line against Carter is by no means over. As polling evidence piles up showing that Carter's warmonger campaign is hitting home (despite disgust among some voters), Reagan has this choice: Pretend it isn't happening or counterattack.

Having failed last week to bring Reagan out of the trenches for counterattack, his defense advisers are now putting final touches on a devastating critique of Carter's management of the nation's defenses while the Soviet Union rolls up one country after another in Africa, Asia and the Middle East. The heart of this critique is that Carter has deceived the American people about the true balance of military power — that, in the phrase of one Reagan defense consultant, he has engaged in "perfidy on the defense commitment."

An April 8 memorandum to Secretary of Defense Harold Brown from Assistant Secretary John R. Quetsch, the Pentagon comptroller, lays the foundation for Reagan's line of attack. Reporting to Brown that the White House wants to "show a 3.1 percent real growth" in defense spending for 1981, Quetsch said that "to accomplish this requires a further lowering of 1980 outlays of $83 million." Translated, that puts Carter on record as ordering a reduction in 1980 defense spending already voted by Congress so as to make 1981 spending appear that much greater. Quetsch continued: "Alternatively, we would have to claim inflation of only 8.91 percent rather than 9.05 percent in order to arrive at the 3.1 percent real growth."

Quetsch's transmittal of this extraordinary message to Brown followed by four days a confidential memorandum to Carter from Budget Director James T. McIntyre Jr. Since inflation was higher than expected, McIntyre reported, the new costs of weapons "will be absorbed" by the Pentagon, reducing Carter's public pledge from a 5 percent real growth to 4 percent real growth for the next five years.

Armed with these and similar internal administration revelations, Reagan's defense advisers see them as bedrock for a multi-pronged attack on the candidate who campaigned in 1976 on a pledge to cut defense spending by $5 to $7 billion.

The political message that these advisers want to send voters is that war cannot be prevented by weakness, but only by strength. "It is simply not acceptable that a president who has allowed our military strength to be weakened compared to our adversary can call Reagan a warmonger for trying to correct the balance," a senior aide told us.

Reagan's own imprecision has played into Carter's hands, but his defense team believes his inept and careless handling of the SALT II treaty is salvageable. Instead of treating SALT II as a worthless scrap of paper, Reagan is being pressed to make clear that his intent is to keep negotiating a better agreement, using the stick of expanding U.S. military strength to induce Soviet cooperation. This would parallel U.S. bargaining leading up to SALT I, when the threat of a superior anti-ballistic missile system (ABM) was used to induce Soviet cooperation.

The non-warmonger Washington Post and New York Times are now warning in front-page displays about the dangerously weakened state of America's once-supreme military might. So, Reagan's defense team is telling him that a scrupulously honest, objective attack on Carter's defense shenanigans could score heavily with voters.

Reagan's political aides, exhibiting their customary blandness, still resist. If they continue, they burden Reagan with the worst of two worlds: no serious riposte to the warmonger brand burned on him by Carter; no exploitation of Carter's "perfidy" as commander-in-chief.

Carter, Reagan both claim to be peace candidate

By The Associated Press

President Carter, keeping alive his war issue against Ronald Reagan, charged today that his Republican challenger has a "naive" policy about Soviet intentions that would deal "a devastating, and perhaps fatal, blow to the long-term process of nuclear arms control."

Speaking to reporters on the White House South Lawn before leaving for a campaign trip through blue-collar areas of Pennsylvania and Ohio already wooed by Reagan, the president had scathing comments about Reagan's nationally televised address on defense policy Sunday night.

Reagan sought to portray himself as a man of peace, as Carter did earlier in the day in a 15-minute radio speech. But the GOP nominee stressed that peace was possible only by rebuilding America's defenses — which he said Carter had allowed to erode — and negotiating a new arms control treaty with the Russians.

Carter said Reagan "does not understand the serious consequences" of his proposals, which the president said would "throw the existing nuclear arms limitation treaty in the waste basket ... threaten the Soviet Union with a nuclear arms race ... launch a quest for nuclear superiority."

Carter said Reagan would "make the naive assumption" — and the wrong one — that the Russians would respond by making new concessions and reducing their nuclear arsenal, and the result would be a perhaps fatal blow to the arms control process.

In his radio speech at midday Sunday, for his he purchased time on the Mutual Broadcasting System, Carter said: "Peace is my passion ... peace is my pledge."

Reagan, for his part, said during the half-hour that he bought on CBS television that he shares with all Americans "the deep and abiding hope for peace."

Each man also tried to portray the other as more likely to get the nation into war. Reagan said Carter had allowed the nation's military strenth to erode, and Carter declared thatlReagan's policies could lead toward "the nuclear precipice."

Independent presidential candidate John Anderson, meanwhile, spoke before a Jewish group in the Chicago suburb of Evanston and warned of growing anti-Semitism.

"An attack on the Jewish people is by implication an attack on us all," Anderson said. "If we do not draw the line here and now, we can't draw it anywhere."

Carter and Reagan left the paid airwaves today to head out on the campaign trail, the president to Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York, and his Republican rival to Ohio, Kentucky and Illinois.

The president's trip today into the industrial Northeast follows a staff assessment that Reagan's forays into the traditional Democratic strongholds may be producing few results among the blue-collar voters he's fighting so hard to win.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Sunday that "everything we see shows those people starting to come back home."

Without citing specific poll findings, Powell said recent surveys showing Carter pulling closer to Reagan found that "the biggest movement has come among blue-collar workers."

In the radio speech Sunday, for which he paid $22,000, Carter maintained that Reagan was advocating measures that could move the nation closer to nuclear war.

"Over the last 20 years, we have taken some tentative steps away from the nuclear precipice. Now, for the first time, we are being advised to take steps that may move us toward it," he said.

Behind the president's argument that Reagan's proposals could push the United States toward the "nuclear precipice" was the GOP candidate's comment in an interview with The Associated Press last month that "the one card that's been missing" in strategic arms limitation talks "is the possibility of an arms race."

The president defended his advocacy of the SALT II treaty, which he likened to "a secret weapon" that would eliminate one-fourth of the Soviet long-range missiles and bombers projected for 1985; reduce the number of Soviet nucler bombs and warheads, and enhance U.S. opportunities to monitor Soviet armament developments.

In an interview Friday with The Associated Press, the president said he would resubmit the treaty to the Senate for ratification after the election. He also said Reagan's call for nuclear superiority "is not only dangerous, but it's ridiculous."

Carter also suggested that in the Oct. 28 presidential debate each presidential candidate should be allowed to directly question the other.

In the half-hour TV address for which the Reagan campaign did not release the cost, the Republican accused President Carter of resorting to the "litany of fear." Carter is trying to "scare people through innuendoes and misstatements of my position," Reagan said.

"We must build peace upon strength," he said, adding that "the cold, hard fact ... is that our economic, military and strategic strength under President Carter is eroding."

Reagan said that as president he would work with Congress to restore the "margin of safety for peace" in the nation's defense program.

He did not repeat past commitments to retore military superiority over the Soviet Union, but Richard V. Allen, Reagan's chief foreign affairs adviser, said Reagan wasn't backing away from that commitment.

Anderson's speech in Evanston was held at a meeting organized by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation to oppose a Nazi rally scheduled several hours later near the nearby and largely Jewish suburb of Skokie.

Clayton defense winding down case

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorneys today prepared to wind down their case in the Texas Brilab trial of Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and two co-defendants accused in an alleged influence-peddling scheme.

Clayton and Austin law partners Donald Ray and Randall Wood are being tried on charges of extortion, bribery, racketeering and conspiracy, after a 10-month investigation by undercover FBI agents into allegations of corruption among political and labor leaders.

Prosecutors also planned to call one rebuttal witness after final defense testimony. The jury will begin deliberations after closing arguments and U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor's charge.

Then Clayton, a 20-year veteran of the Legislature who is seeking an unprecedented fourth term as speaker, will await a decision that could scuttle his political career.

Prosecutors have relied heavily on tapes secretly recorded by undercover agents posing as Prudential Insurance Co. representatives to back up charges that Clayton accepted $5,000, and got a promise for an additional $500,000 a year from a Deer Park union official to reopen bids on a lucrative state employees' insurance contract.

The union official, L.G. Moore, was indicted with Clayton, Wood and Ray last June, but will be tried later.

Clayton spent two days on the stand and insisted he never took a bribe. He said the money was a campaign contribution and he intended to return it at a later time.

Wood and Ray are accused of agreeing to accept money to use their influence with state leaders to see that Prudential was awarded the $82 million-a-year contract.

FBI informant Joseph Hauser posed as an insurance representative and offered kickbacks to several political and labor leaders in connection with the insurance contracts.

Clayton testified last week he had "never cut a deal with anyone during my years in the Legislature ... never made a commitment to any legislator during my three terms as speaker ... and never done anything illegal and never will."

Fraser's Australian coalition re-elected

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser's conservative coalition has won re-election with a sharply reduced majority in the lower house of the Australian Parliament, but a minority party threatens his control of the Senate.

With more than 80 percent of the estimated 9 million votes counted by Sunday night, computer projections indicated Fraser's Liberal-National Country Party coalition would have a majority of 15 to 25 seats in the 125-member House of Representatives compared to the 48-seat edge it took into Saturday's general election.

All the House seats and half the 64 Senate seats were up at stake. Complete results are not expected for several days.

Fraser's opponent, Labor Party Leader Bill Hayden, conceded defeat Sunday but told a news conference: "We punched a hell of a hole in the Liberal and Country parties' majority and their confidence and their claims that they are an irresistible winning team."

Fraser admitted the results showed many people were dissatisfied with the policies of his five-year-old administration.

"We have heard that message and I understand it," he told reporters. "But I also understand very clearly that a significant majority has been given to the government to continue that work.

"Some losses had to be expected because we have had the two largest majorities in all the years since the federation. To expect that to happen three times might have been hoping for too much."

While Fraser's coalition was certain to retain control of the House, it was in trouble in the Senate races, where a minority party, the Australian Democrats, seemed likely to emerge with enough seats to wield the balance of power between Fraser's coalition and the Laborites.

The Democrats, headed by former Fraser cabinet minister Don Chipp, held two seats in the last Senate and could gain three more.

The party that wins the majority in the lower house forms the government, but the Senate can block legislation passed in the House.

Computer projections based on the returns tallied gave the Liberal Party 49 House seats, its allies in the National Country Party 18, Labor 48, and 10 were in doubt.

Before the election, in which one seat was added to the House, the count was Liberals 67 seats, National Country 19 and Labor 38.

Rock barrage ends neo-Nazi rally

A counter-demonstrator is led away by police in Evanston, Ill., Sunday after he crossed police lines in an attempt to confront some 11 neo-nazis in a rally held less than half a mile from heavily Jewish Skokie. The neo-Nazis, background, endured a five-minute hail of rocks, eggs, tomatoes and other missiles, before being escorted away by police. (AP Laserphoto)

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — It was supposed to be an hour-long demonstration of Nazi party strength and white supremacy. But it was over in five minutes for 11 brown shirts who were pelted by rocks and eggs by thousands of counter-demonstrators and decided to beat a hasty retreat under police protection.

Six arrests were reported on charges varying from disorderly conduct to aggravated battery.

Evanston Police Officer James Boone was struck on the leg by a brick and released after hospital treatment. He was the only person reported injured.

The Lovelace Park confrontation Sunday came after a two-mile march by 2,000 people who attended an anti-Nazi rally at Northwestern University.

The largely Jewish crowd there gave independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson, an Illinois congressman, a warm greeting as he called for an end to "the blot of anti-Semitism in America."

"We ignore, at the peril of all we hold dear, the resurgence of anti-Semitism in America," Anderson said. "An attack on the Jewish people is by implication an attack on us all. If we do not draw the line here and now, we can't draw it anywhere."

Several people at the rally wept as they sang Hebrew songs proclaiming "Israel lives" and "Let My People Go."

Many of the speakers, who stood above signs admonishing spectators to "Remember Auschwitz" and other Nazi-run concentration camps, paid homage to those who died in the Holocaust and warned of a recent upsurge in anti-Semitic activity around the world.

"(We are) Jews who will never forget what Nazism did to us," said Sol Goldstein, chairman of the Public Action Committee on Indvidual Liberty and Jewish Security. "Not in Jerusalem, not in Paris, and not in Evanston." The crowd cheered.

At Lovelace Park, the mood was ugly as counter-demonstrators gathered to shout at the members of the National Socialist Party of America and hang a brown-shirted effigy from a tree. "Hoodlums! Hoodlums!" one man shouted at the Nazis while other men threw rocks, eggs and tomatoes and shouted "Death to the Nazis."

The 11 Nazis were backed to a park restroom wall by the barrage and were forced to duck continuously behind swastika-marked shields. As the Nazis abandoned the area, they were pursued by spectators.

Police in full riot gear stood by the Nazis and surrounded the park. More than 200 police officers, state troopers and sheriff's officers closed in on the counter-demonstrators and forced them back behind police lines while the Nazis climbed into two cars and drove away.

The Evanston City Council granted permission for the Nazi rally after denying an earlier application for a demonstration Sept. 20, Yom Kippur, the holiest day of the Jewish calendar.

Lovelace Park is about a half-mile from the suburb of Skokie, home of a large Jewish population and a number of concentration camp survivors.

Grisly ax murder trial begins in McKinney

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — A petite, curly-haired housewife was in court here today — charged with hacking a family friend to death with a three-foot ax.

The murder trial of Candace Montgomery has shaped up to be one of the most notorious in this North Texas city. But State District Judge Tom Ryan says he intends to keep a tight rein on the proceeding.

The grisly murder ignited national interest shortly after the bloodied body of Betty Gore was found in her Wylie home June 13. Mrs. Montgomery, described as an active church member, a devoted mother and a friend of the victim, surrendered to police two weeks later.

Ryan assumed jurisdiction in the case and almost immediately slapped a gag order on all participants, promising to enforce the order with a contempt of court citation for anyone who talked to reporters.

He also drew criticism from attorneys when he refused a motion for a change of venue and opted to keep the trial here in Collin County.

"It doesn't surprise me when someone calls me a petty dictator," Ryan said on the eve of the trial. "I could care less. I'm concerned about running a fair and impartial hearing. I don't care whether attorneys like me. As long as they're professional I don't have any problems with them."

The case has strained the friendship of Allan Gore and Pat Montgomery, husbands of the victim and the accused. Friends say their once-warm relationship is now tense and formal. During a pre-trial hearing recently, the two men exchanged only brief pleasantries.

One of the attorneys arguing the case will be Ryan's successor as Collin County District Attorney, Tom O'Connell, who has the respect even of his courtroom opponents.

"He is an excellent trial attorney," said defense lawyer Don Crowder. "He can be very tough."

Crowder is a close friend of the defendant and the first attorney she contacted about the murder case.

"I agonized over whether I should do this (defend Mrs. Montgomery), and it's arguable that I'm too close to the case," Crowder said during an interview conducted before Ryan's gag order was imposed. "I'm not, though.

"I'm in this case because I believe with every fiber of my body that she didn't do it."

Witches' meet disrupted

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The head witch of the Church of Wicca says his group has no plans to return to Amarillo after a convention that was greeted by a bomb threat and protesters who advised the witches to "take up your cross, not your broom."

"It was certainly the most violent and unfriendly reception we've ever had anyplace," said Skip Tarrant after the weekend gathering. "To me it is reminiscent of the Salem witch trials" in Massachusetts in 1692.

About 75 members of the church participated in a two-day convention here. Saturday's session was disrupted for four hours when a bomb threat forced the evacuation of the hotel where the group was meeting.

During the evacuation, about 300 fundamentalist Christians led by Judy Mamou gathered in a vacant lot nearby to display placards, sing religious songs and listen to a minister.

"We are here to pray because the Bible warns of witchcraft," said Mrs. Mamou, who said she was a prostitute for 13 years before she became a Christian evangelist nine years ago. "What they are doing is extremely dangerous."

"They are all going straight to hell," said Gary Hagler, leader of a marathon "pray-in" held night and day at the San Jacinto Baptist Church during the witches' convention. "They are going to bust hell wide open."

Tarrant, of New Bern, N.C., said witches don't believe in hell.

"We believe in reincarnation," said Tarrant, who said his father was a Baptist preacher in Missouri when he was a boy.

Tarrant said his group will not return to Amarillo anytime soon.

He said the church would meet in Missouri or North Carolina for its next "Samain Seminar," which is held annually to coincide with the full moon nearest Nov. 1, All Souls' Day. The group chose Amarillo this year because the lead branch of the Church of Wicca is located in nearby Dimmitt.

Tarrant insisted members of his group don't cast evil spells or have anything to do with demonic spirits.

"Being a witch makes one feel more alive," said Tarrant.

Firemen held off by woman

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A shotgun-wielding Fort Worth woman was jailed late Sunday after she held police and firemen at bay outside her ex-husband's burning house, authorities said.

No one was injured in the southside fire, but neighbors told police the woman fired several shots.

The 27-year-old woman was jailed for investigation of arson, police said.

Fire Capt. W.E. Dunkin said firemen first thought the woman was shooting at them, but witnesses later told investigators she was shooting in the air.

District Fire Chief Willie Cole and aide Jerry Kunkel talked to the woman for about a half hour before grabbing the shotgun away from her, firemen said.

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Your task is to find not only the best level, but also the best strain in which to play this hand—it could be either no trump, spades or clubs. Don't rebid such a moth-eaten spade suit just to show that you have five, and you can't bid no trump without a heart stopper. We suggest a call of three diamonds. That is forcing, and partner's next action will go a long way toward answering those two questions that were posed in the first sentence.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ92 ♡K873 ♦763 ♣83
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is worth only one forward-going move. To make sure you don't miss a possible 4-4 fit in a major suit, we suggest you respond one heart. For opening bid purposes, your heart suit is not biddable, but when responding, the requirements for introducing a suit are much lower. In fact, as responder, it is usually sound policy to show four-card suits up the line (lower-ranking suits first) to facilitate finding a fit. In this case, your one heart response gives partner the opportunity to raise hearts with four or to bid one spade.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1092 ♡73 ◇K985 ♣A62
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—In support of spades, your hand revalues to 12 points—just short of a jump raise of partner's suit. The only way you can describe your hand accurately is to make a temporizing bid of two diamonds, followed by a spade raise at your next turn.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠1076 ♡743 ◇AJ954 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You are worth some action, but don't go overboard and bid three diamonds. That would be virtually forcing to game, and you do not have anything near enough for that move. The only bid that you can make which is unlikely to get your side into trouble is a raise to two spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠93 ♡J6 ◇AK854 ♣9762
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♡	?

What action do you take?
A.—East has frozen you out of the auction for the moment. You cannot bid three diamonds for the reasons stated in the answer to Question 4, and this time you cannot even support partner's suit. All you can do is pass and hope that partner has enough to reopen with a double. Only then will you be able to act with any degree of safety.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K1092 ♡73 ◇K985 ♣A62
The bidding has proceeded:

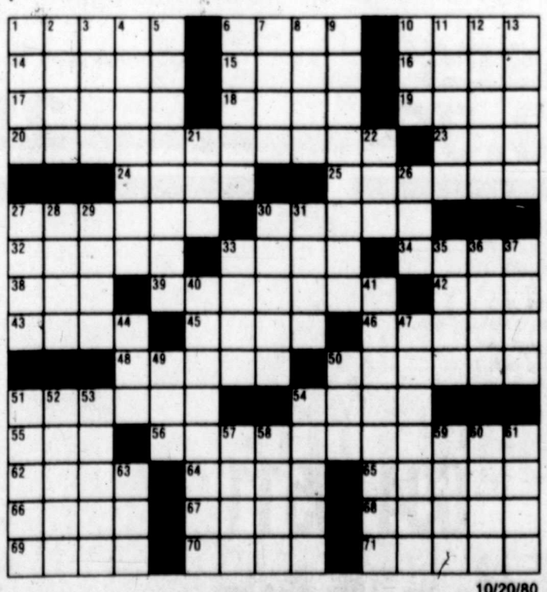

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Yes, this is the same hand as in Question 3, but the auction is different — this time you are a passed hand. Now you cannot afford delicate, temporizing bids because they are not forcing and partner might pass, stranding you in an inferior contract. We suggest a jump raise to three spades. Four spades is also a possibility, but give partner some leeway in the event that he might have opened light in third seat.

Researcher seeks cheap energy in lightning

WENDOVER, Utah (AP) — In a World War II hangar that once housed the Enola Gay, a lone researcher is seeking a shortcut to cheap energy while fighting a two-front war with the U.S. Department of Energy and the Wendover town council.

Robert Golka says he is on the track of nuclear fusion, the energy source that powers the sun and the goal of dozens of research projects around the world.

But unlike the others, which are trying to make fusion with laser beams, gas plasmas or magnetic "mirrors," Golka is pinning his hopes on the rare form of lightning known as "ball lightning."

He thinks the same forces that can mold lightning into a glowing, hovering sphere might be used to create a fusion reactor.

The trouble is that nobody, including Golka, knows exactly how ball lightning works.

Golka, who has built what he describes as the world's largest lightning machine, has been able to produce ball lightning only five times in seven years and thousands of tries.

The DOE turned down his application for a two-year $2 million grant earlier this year after independent scientists who reviewed the idea said it wouldn't work.

Meanwhile, the town of Wendover, which owns the weed-covered former Air Force base where Golka's hangar is located, has extended his lease only through Dec. 31 and may evict him after that.

His equipment, valued at $120,000, is strewn across the huge hangar that once housed B-29s preparing to drop the first atomic bombs on Japan and usher in the atomic age.

Now an old juke box, an upright piano, posters from a bygone era and odds and ends of military equipment litter the floor.

The center of the building is taken up by two gigantic coils of wire attached to a powerful generator. They produce lightning bolts of 20 million volts — about one-fifth the voltage of natural lightning, Golka says, but an impressive sight when the machine is turned on and bright arcs of electricity dance below the 25-foot-high coil.

Golka was doing lightning research for the Air Force when it occurred to him that ball lightning might be the key to fusion.

Victim describes how it really was

Being aboard doomed Nazi battleship

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — On the night of May 26, 1941, there was a common feeling of helplessness among the 2,200 men on the Bismarck, the pride of the German navy and the world's largest battleship.

She was eight days into her first mission. Two days earlier her huge guns had needed only six minutes to sink the Hood, the battle cruiser which was the symbol of Britain's sea power.

But now the mighty Bismarck was a floating coffin, her rudders disabled by a torpedo from a British biplane which looked like a World War I leftover. Unmaneuverable, she and her men could only await their fate from a pursuing British task force numbering 42 vessels, including three battleships.

When the Bismarck was sunk the next day, only 115 men survived. One of them has written the first account of Operation Rhine from the German side.

Baron Burkard von Muellenheim-Rechberg, author of "Battleship Bismarck, a Survivor's Story," never forgot waiting for the end.

"I said to myself at the time, 'This is unbelievable. It's grotesque,'" recalls Muellenheim, who was a 31-year-old gunfire control officer at the time. "It was unreal to me, but it was a reality...When the first salvo fell, I was relieved.

"I was convinced I would not survive."

Muellenheim's recollections are an account of an adventure punctuated by errors, many of them made by Adm. Guenther Luetjens, who commanded Operation Rhine.

When she left her Baltic port May 19 accompanied by the heavy cruiser Prinz Eugen, the Bismarck's mission was to reach the Atlantic undetected and ravage Allied shipping.

The Bismarck's course was through the heavily traveled Kattegat strait between Denmark and Sweden. The British quickly knew of her presence and began deploying warships.

Luetjens was poorly served by German intelligence. He was told that there was no movement out of Scapa Flow, the British naval base in Northern Scotland. In fact, a battleship, battle cruiser and aircraft carrier had left in search of the Bismarck.

On May 23, the British cruisers Suffolk and Norfolk began shadowing the Bismarck northwest of Iceland. Luetjens could have attacked but didn't. The cruisers kept the British command informed of the enemy's location.

Muellenheim says that had he been in command, he would have either engaged the cruisers or turned back to wait for a more favorable time for a breakout southward into the Atlantic.

The following day the Hood and the battleship Prince of Wales arrived. The Hood was sunk with 1,000 men. But the Bismarck in turn was damaged by the Prince of Wales.

Muellenheim says the slowed Bismarck had at least a 50-50 chance of outrunning the pursuing and converging British and reaching port in France.

On May 25, Luetjens used fog to slip away from the British. But within hours he sent two radio messages which enabled the pursuers to pinpoint his position.

Muellenheim believes that had Luetjens maintained silence — and there was no need to break it, he says — the Bismarck would have reached safety.

Instead, it was just a matter of time.

On May 26, Swordfish biplanes attacked. A torpedo disabled the Bismarck's rudder.

The battleship was heavily armored in many places. The rudder was not protected. The vessel carried much spare equipment, but there was no spare rudder.

Unable to maneuver, the Bismarck found herself on a course leading to the main body of her pursuers.

On the final morning, Muellenheim was directing gunfire from the aft control station. Just as he was zeroing in on the battleship King George V, a shell destroyed his rangefinder.

Had it been a little lower, he says, he would have died.

Muellenheim, a retired diplomat, went over the side as the Bismarck sank. He was rescued by the cruiser Dorsetshire. Fearing the presence of German submarines, the British ships withdrew from the area leaving, he estimates, 700 Germans to die in the water.

Twins celebrate third birthday

CLINTON, Utah (AP) — Lisa and Elisa Hansen, joined at the tops of their heads when they were born three years ago Saturday, have now spent half their lives apart — but never very far apart.

The twins were separated in pioneering surgery a year and a half ago. But their matching red, white and blue bonnets are often side by side as they play, chat or just reach out to hug each other.

Their parents, David and Patricia Hansen, say it's not unusual to tuck them into separate pink canopy beds at night, then find them snuggled close together in one bed in the morning.

"They really empathize with each other," said Hansen. "If you spank one, the other cries for her."

Before the girls were separated, both had to lie either on their backs or their stomachs. They quickly learned to cooperate to get where they wanted to go, one crawling forward and the other inching backward, or rolling in unison.

DOCTORS KNEW the girls shared blood vessels. When they operated, they discovered their brains were joined at one spot as well. The surgery left each twin with muscle weakness on one side. Lisa was affected on her left side, Elisa on her right. They now see a physical therapist twice a week and wear plastic ankle braces on their weak sides.

Hansen, who recently quit his supermarket job to start his own ice cream wholesaling business, says the twins' development lags slightly behind that of other 3-year-olds. But they are close to walking on their own and seem to be normal in every other way.

"I can't wait for the day when the girls can run out and play with other kids their age," said Mrs. Hansen, 23, who gave birth to another daughter, Shaylyn, just before the twins were separated in 1979.

Lisa and Elisa eventually will have to undergo more surgery, said their father. They now wear protective bonnets because they have no bone at the very tops of their heads and hard bumps could be fatal. Their brains are protected only by skin that was specially grafted prior to separation, then sewn neatly across their heads.

When they return to the University of Utah Medical Center, "cross bars" of bone will be grafted on top of their skulls. The bone is expected to grow and eventually fill the open space.

Some of the bone will be tissue frozen and saved since the girls were separated. Additional bone will come from each girl's ribs.

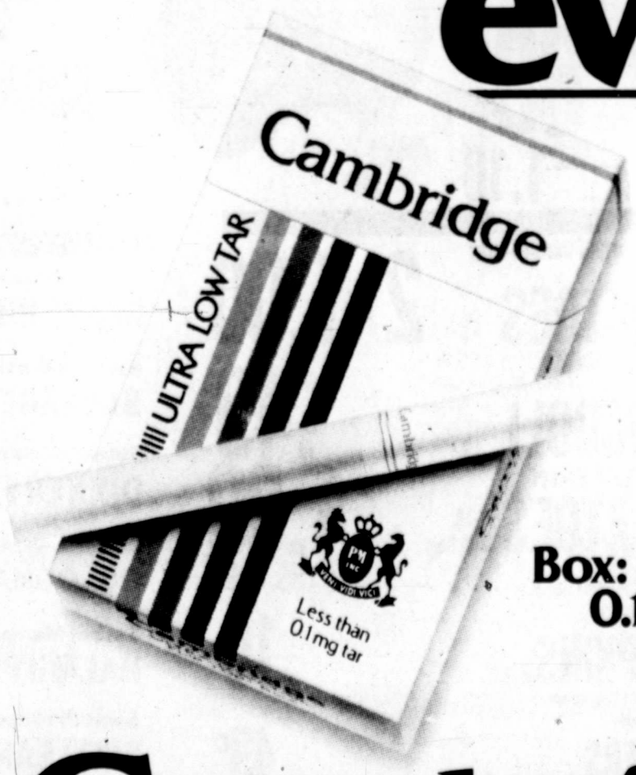

"It'll be sort of like a roll bar," Hansen said of the planned bone configuration.

Hill cries 'thief' but no one hears

By BRUCE LOWITT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was, as in all plays of this nature, a matter of opinion. Tony Hill of Dallas, who believed himself the victim of foul play, was livid. Roynell Young of Philadelphia, the accused, professed his innocence.

The guys in the striped shirts agreed with Young, and the Philadelphia Eagles' 17-10 National Football League victory Sunday was secure. And so was their position as sole occupants of first place in the National Conference East with a 6-1 record, one game ahead of Dallas.

The play was the last of the game by the Cowboys, coming with 45 seconds to go and Philadelphia already ahead by a touchdown, thanks to Ron Jaworski's second TD pass of the game, a 15-yarder to Charles Smith with 4:27 remaining.

AFTER THAT score, set up by middle guard Charlie Johnson's interception, James Jones ran the kickoff back 41 yards to the Dallas 40 and White marched the Cowboys to the Philadelphia 8-yard line. Then, on fourth-and-goal, he looped a pass to Hill at the left edge of the end zone. Hill jumped. So did Young, who batted the ball away.

"As I went up for the ball my left hand was restricted because he was on my back and kept me from getting my arm up," Hill fumed later. "I complained to the referee that it was interference, that it (just waving incomplete) was a pretty terrible call ... Sure, it was pass interference. It was a sure TD. We should've won the game."

Young, of course, saw things differently. "There was contact," he admitted, "but I was going for the ball. And the defensive man has the right to go for it in that kind of situation. I have a clear conscience on that play ... I think I had an opportunity to intercept it, but I just wanted to knock it down. I felt relieved when I saw the ball just lying on the ground there."

Before that, the game hinged on the third of White's intercepted passes. With six minutes to play he tried to force a pass to Jones, a rookie playing because Tony Dorsett had left the game with cracked ribs. Linebacker John Bunting deflected the ball and Johnson made a diving interception.

TWO RUNNING plays by Louie Giammona (playing because Wilbert Montgomery had a hyperextended left knee) gained 5 yards to the Dallas 15, then Jaworski threaded the ball to Smith. "It was a pretty gutsy call," the quarterback said of the play sent in by his coach, Dick Vermeil. "I was hoping at least for a field goal. I wasn't even thinking TD."

Jaworski also passed for the other TD, 5 yards to Harold Carmichael in the second period two plays after his rollout pass to Billy Campfield wound up as a 50-yard gainer to the Dallas 7.

The Cowboys' only TD, in the first period, belonged to the defense. Jaworski, blind-sided by Randy White, fumbled, the ball rolled 10 yards into the end zone and linebacker Mike Hegman fell on it.

"We got beat because we had a bad offense," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "We turned the ball over enough times to have gotten beaten by twice the margin."

Phils inch ahead of KC Royals, 4-3

BY THOMAS BOSWELL
The Washington Post

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — On any day, baseball is a game of instantneous decisions and tantalizing inches. In the fifth game of the World Series Sunday, baseball at its highest level became a game of fractions of inches.

The Philadelphia Phillies will call themselves the Comeback Kids, and all manner of other giddy nicknames, after their stirring two-run rally in the ninth inning Sunday to beat the Kansas City Royals, 4-3, and tilt this Series back their way once again, three games to two.

The Phils and their fans will talk of Mike Schmidt's leadoff single and Del Unser's pinch-hit RBI double and Manny Trillo's game-winning two-out hit in that thrilling ninth inning. And they will praise Tug McGraw for his three valorous innings of relief and the way he worked out of a bases-loaded-with-walks jam in the ninth.

What the Royals will remember, however, is the way Schmidt's ground smash rolled out of George Brett's glove at third as he sprawled on his face in a portrait of near-miss agony.

And how Unser's one-hop bullet went right past immobile first baseman Willie Aikens, who actually moved out of the way to try a fancy sweeping grab. What is it that Unser has on first basemen that they can't catch his hard grounders in the fifth games of postseason series? The Houston Astros are still muttering about an almost identical play.

AND FINALLY, Kansas City will think of the way Trillo's liner hit squarely in the glove of losing pitcher Dan Quisenberry's glove, then rolled slowly away as Unser sped home with the winning run. "It hit me in the glove and the bare hand both. Next thing, it was rolling by me. . .They never hit a ball more than 75 feet in the air off me, and they win," said Quisenberry, despondent and, for the first time, not a quipster. "The ball was playing hide and seek. It just wouldn't find our gloves."

That top of the ninth was a mere fragment of the Royals' torment. Aikens, gone from hero to goat in a day, made one of the most horrendous errors in Series history Sunday to cost his team a run. He nonchalantly caught a soft flip from starter Larry Gura on a bad back-to-the-mound bunt by Bake McBride in the fourth. McBride was out by 15 feet. A lazy, sleepy little play. But Aikens' big, clumsy-foot was one inch, maybe less, from the bag. Instead of shuffling or jabbing his brogan a millimeter or two, he picked up his size-12 clodhopper and smashed it into the bag. In that additional split second, McBride had arrived. Tie goes to the runner.

The next batter, Mike Schmidt, hit a 440-foot home run over the center field fence.

Yes, that was one run. And how about sluggish Darrell Porter being waved home from first base by Coach Gordy MacKenzie on Willie Wilson's sixth-inning double off the right field fence? That's a gamble you only pull with two outs, never with one out. For the second time in this Series, Porter was out from here to Topeka. At least this time he slid.

JUST AS Game 3 was a contest that the Phils lost more than the Royals won, so this shadowy twilight affair was a portrait in Royal profligacy. In Game 2, K.C. had 19 baserunners, scored just four runs and lost. Sunday, they had 17 men on base, stranded 13 and ended seven of the nine innings with men left in scoring position. Even when the Royals scored, it seemed a sort of minimal art. Big rallies became little one-run affairs as Brett drove in a run with a harmless fifth-inning ground out. U.L. Washington tapped a sacrifice fly to left in the sixth. Even the Royals' one loud blast — a homer to open the sixth by Amos Otis, who is now 11 for 20 with three homers and 22 total bases — was a solo blast and brought minimum returns.

When Jose Cardenal, one of those hound-faced, long-suffering journeymen synonymous with bad teams and defeat, struck out swinging with the bases loaded to end the game, it was just the culmination of a Royal flush of failures.

Two on and none out with the top of the order coming up in the third — the Royals get nothing. Men at the corners in the fifth and Hal McRae hits a foul fly. TV replays show that McBride probably trapped it off the wall. But McRae is called out. Nice play. Close call. But fractions of an inch, again.

Normally, a team ought to be decimated if it endured what the Royals did Sunday. And a club that won such a battle should exult that the tide of warfare had turned decisively.

The Royals should feel that this Series trickled away from them Sunday as those ground balls rolled out of the gloves of Brett and Quisenberry.

And the Phils, who now return home, should feel that the rook of their interminable team history has been rolled way from the ave and they are finally free to walk into the sunshine of a championship season. After all, they have their aces— Steve Carlton and Dick Ruthven— scheduled for the sixth, and, if necessary, seventh games.

However, in the aftermath of this game, both teams spoke only of their exhaustion, of how they don't know if they can persevere through another of these nerve-wracking games that is neither masterpiece nor slapstick but merely the most brutally draining of games between two solid, but limited, teams ill suited to quick kills.

IF THIS Series goes to a seventh game, the fantasy recurs that it will be called in the 50th inning, tied 3-3, after both teams have left 100 men on base. These teams set the stage continually and torment each other with strategic decisions, then fizzle like e torch thrown in water.

"We can never do anything the easy way," said Phillie Bob Boone. "I hope for once we can on Tuesday (in Game 6)."

"I'm getting gray hairs," said McGraw. "We've had 10 straight postseason games and every one has been a one- or two-run game that went down to the last pitch. They keep advertizing that CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) here and I'm about ready for it."

Ack Ack, goat or hero?

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

He could be the World Series hero...or goat...but he still isn't too much different from the Willie Aikens who hit 30 homers and knocked in 117 runs for El Paso in 1976.

Willie took his bat with him to the major leagues, but left his nickname behind. In the majors, he is, reluctantly, Willie Mayes Aikens. In the Texas League, he was Willie "Ack Ack" Aikens, whose frequent artillery shots scattered the elephants in the zoo behind Dudley Field's right field fence.

Willie still has the same productive bat that made his pitchers love him for what he could to for their won-lost records, which was wonders.

Willie, also, still has the same glove that made those same pitchers, watching from the safety of the Cubs Stadium press box the day before they were scheduled to pitch, shudder at what that hunk of leather was doing to their earned run averages. It wasn't so much the balls he booted, but the ones he ignored that hurt, the kind that balloon those ERAs.

AIKENS set a record for homers in four Series games, hitting a brace in the first and fourth games and looked like the Royals' savior. He won two games with his bat and Sunday he didn't hit any homers and his fielding wound up costing the Royals the game. So Willie's bat could make him the Series MVP, but his glove has Goat written all over it.

Willie's glovework, or lack thereof, makes the play of the guy next to him all the more remarkable. Some of second baseman Frank White's most precious gems afield wind up instead of outs in the dugout. After a season playing next to Willie, anyone else might be ready for a winter-long session on a consulting couch an effort to deal with his frustations. Frank, he just keeps turning the plays like it was Mickey Vernon or Gil Hodges over there on first...

DANNY WHITE compiled such impressive passing statistics through the first six games that he was ranked the No. 1 quarterback in the NFL the last couple of weeks, but the question always remained, Would he be there if Roger was still playing? It was asked by fans and, despite all the affirmative evidence in the weekly statistics, by White as well.

The only lacking confirmation of White's ability to make 'em forget Roger was his ability to perform Staubach-class rescues in two-minute drills during a big game, say like

Two tight-end offense great for Earl

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers' two-tight-end offense was a much discussed topic after Sunday's 20-14 victory over Tampa Bay. But it was the quarterback and running back who made it work.

Quarterback Ken Stabler artfully combined the Oilers' attack and Earl Campbell banged out a career-high 203 yards rushing on 33 carries as the Oilers ended a two-game losing streak.

The Oilers obtained All-Pro tight end Dave Casper from the Oakland Raiders last and immediately installed him in starting lineup opposite incumbent Mike Barber. And the change got immediate results.

"I think the two-tight-end offense helped us today," Campbell said. "It made it seem like we had more men on the field."

Stabler completed 19 of 26 passes for 242 yards, hitting Barber for a 17-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter and handing off to Rob Carpenter for a gutsy 10-yard touchdown run in the third period.

Casper, with less than a week of practice with the Oilers, caught one pass 6 "It added a new dimension to our offense," Barber said. "It put men one-on-one more than before so it's going to work out better for me and for Dave." for 14 yards, but spent most of the day blocking.

"Houston's system isn't really that much different from what we had at Oakland. Everybody helps everybody out there. So if they yell at me just a little bit, I'll be satisfied with my performance today."

Oilers kicker Toni Fritsch booted field goals of 21 and 33 yards to start Houston's scoring, but missed a 49-yard attempt in the fourth quarter, ending a string of 10 straight field goals this season.

The Buccaneers, who dropped to a 2-4-1 record, would have been pleased to run any kind of offensive formation. But the Oilers' ball control tactics allowed Tampa Bay only 20:34 minutes of offensive time, while Houston hogged 39:26.

But even when the Buc offense was on the field, Coach John McKay didn't like much of what he saw.

"Our offense made some idiotic mistakes," McKay said. "We couldn't seem to keep from lining up in illegal formations. You'd expect that from rookies, but our veterans were doing it.

"We had opportunities to win the game, but not deservedly so. We refused to take advantage of our chances."

After the Oilers had taken a 13-0 lead in the second quarter, Tampa Bay quarterback Doug Williams engineered a 71-yard scoring drive, leading to a 17-yard touchdown pass to Gordon Jones shortly before halftime.

When Stabler fumbled and Tampa's Lee Roy Selmon recovered early in the third quarter, the momentum seemed to shift to the Bucs, but defensive end Andy Dorris stopped the drive by sacking Williams and the Oilers retaliated with the decisive touchdown.

Stabler kept the drive going with a 19-yard third down completion to Billy Johnson and when the Oilers faced another third down at the Buc 10, Stabler turned to Carpenter.

Carpenter broke at least two tackles and was dragging another would-be tackler when he fell into the end zone.

Carpenter's touchdown proved to be the decisive blow because it nullified an 80-yard fumble return for a touchdown by Tampa Bay's Cedric Brown with 3:37 left in the game.

Stabler said he felt comfortable with the new offense.

"I'm used to playing it," Stabler said. "I don't know if it's the formation or I was playing better. It won't change us that much. We will run the ball well with it just like we always have. If you play well, you're going to control the ball, no matter what formation you run."

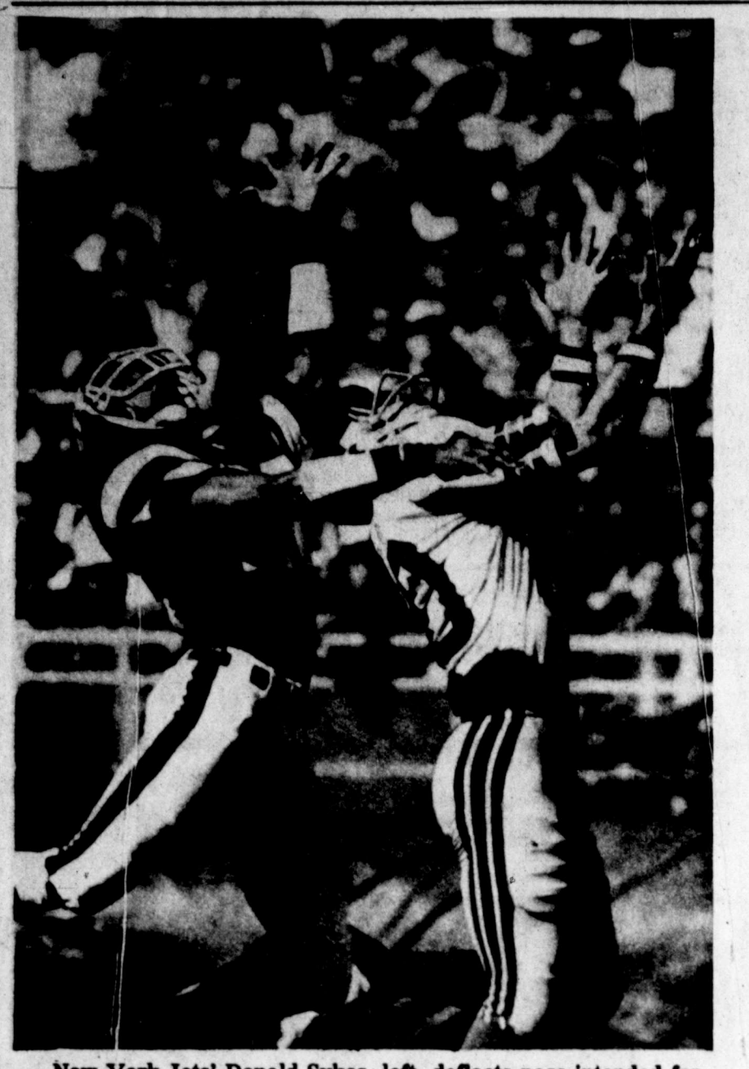

Three tie for LSC lead

By The Asssociated Press

Angelo State, East Texas State and Southwest Texas State were locked atop the Lone Star Conference football chart with unblemished league records, but Texas A&I was knocked off the ladder over the weekend with the biggest surprise of the season.

The Stephen F. Austin Lumberjacks, who hadn't won a game, ambushed the Javelinas 14-0 behind a clinging defense.

Charlie Smith scored on a one-yard plunge and Gary Jents hit tight end Bill Cosper with a 38-yard scoring toss as the Lumberjacks struck for two first half touchdowns.

White lives with doubts

Sunday's battle for first place in the NFC East against Philadelphia.

Alas, the Eagles won and White, despite an afternoon of torment as the prime victim of Philadelphia's suffocating defense, came within an interference call of winning over the last of the skeptics. White and the Cowboys maneveured into fourth and goal at the eight with time running out and White hung the winning touchdown pass to Drew Pearson, who would have caught it if he hadn't been wearing an Eagle for a necklace as he went up for the ball.

So Danny must continue to live with the doubts...barring a collapse by Philadelphia, which isn't likely, until the season's final game when the Eagles come to Texas Stadium.

TCU ready to become Believers

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

As if Texas Christian Coach F.A. Dry didn't have enough problems with his winless and injury decimated team, guess who comes calling this weekend?

Some clues are: They wear green and gold, wave "Growl Towels," haven't lost a game, and say "I Believe" a lot.

Certainly it's the Baylor Bears, the Waco Wonders who are causing the preseason experts to rush out and burn every copy of Texas Football magazine they can find.

The experts picked the Baylor Bears for sixth place, don't you see.

Baylor is 4-0 in Southwest Conference play and isn't going to finish sixth if you kidnap its Bear and Coach Grant Teaff.

The Texas Aggies were the latest victim, 46-7, Saturday. Victim No. 7 is supposed to be the Horned Frogs in Fort Worth this week as the Bears march to a Nov. 22 showdown in Waco with the equally unbeaten Texas Longhorns.

"Our goal is to get better each week and so far we have," said Teaff. "If we continue to do that, by the time we play Texas we could have a pretty good football team."

The Aggies throught the Bears were "pretty good."

"We got out-coached and outplayed," said A&M Coach Tom Wilson.

"The rain kept us from doing about one third of what we wanted to do," said Teaff. "We planned to throw the ball more, but the rain took that away from us."

The 6-0 record is the school's best since 1953 and the 4-0 league ledger is the fastest in conference play for Baylor since 1922, when Wesley Bradshaw ran wild.

In other games, defending SWC champion Houston stayed alive with a 13-11 escape from Southern Methodist, Texas Tech downed Rice, 10-3, and Texas Christian tumbled to Tulsa, 23-17.

Arkansas and Texas were idle.

Walter Abercrombie, who gained 143 yards on 24 carries, including a 71-yard touchdown run, said of the Bears, who play San Jose State, Arkansas and Rice before meeting Texas: "I don't believe we have reached our potential yet."

Wilson said if there are any alumni grumbling about the big loss to the near flawless Baylor team, he wouldn't let it bother him.

"People that talk don't bother me that much," he said. "I'm not going to quit, though, if that is what you are asking. I said when I took this job I was going to do the very best I could."

A quarterback change could be in the cards at A&M and SMU with Gary Kubiak a potential starter at A&M and freshman Don McIlhenny and sophomore Mike Fisher looking on at SMU.

SMU quarterback Mike Ford suffered four interceptions against Houston and Coach Ron Meyer said "We're going to have to make some tough decisions. I don't want to do something in the gloom of the locker room. I'm not saying I will do it. We certainly toyed with the idea of putting McIlhenny in."

Steelers' Harris may miss game with Oakland

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers may be forced to battle the Oakland Raiders tonight without a key offensive weapon, running back Franco Harris.

Harris, who strained ligaments in his left knee in last week's loss to Cincinatti, was listed as "doubtful" for the nationally televised game.

If Harris is sidelined, he'll be replaced in the starting lineup by Rocky Bleier or Russell Davis. Harris is just 63 yards shy of becoming the third player in National Football League history to rush for 9,000 yards.

The Pittsburgh-Oakland series, considered one of the most intense in professional football, dates to 1970. The Raiders hold a 6-5 edge in season and post-season play, but the Steelers have won three of the five games played at home.

Are the Raiders the arch enemy of the Steelers, or just another football team?

"Nothing special," says Steeler Coach Chuck Noll.

"All we're concerned with is playing one game," he said. "They all count one."

Not so long ago, the Steelers ended the decade with four Super Bowl trophies, Oakland with one, and players on both teams with a headful of vivid memories.

Not Noll, who says he's forgotten the biggest rivalry of the 1970s, when Pittsburgh won three of five consecutive post-season contests from 1972 to 1976.

"I can't even remember what our team was like when we played the Raiders last," he said. Seriously? "Seriously!"

But for some members of the Steeler squad, forgetting isn't easy.

"When you think of the Oakland Raiders, you think of Darth Vader," says Pittsburgh running back Rocky Bleier. "It doesn't change, even though we haven't played each other since 1977."

Others, including Steeler center Mike Webster, downplay the hostilities.

"I don't get into that stuff," Webster said. "Any two teams that play each other sure aren't going to be cordial."

Oakland was a special case, though, for Steeler safety Mike Wagner.

Evans sparks Bears over Lions

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Making his first start of the season, quarterback Vince Evans hurled a 64-yard touchdown pass to James Scott and scored once himself in leading Chicago over Detroit, 24-7. Evans also set up the Bears' other TD with a 59-yard pass to Scott.

In other games, it was Miami 17, Buffalo 14; Cleveland 26, Green Bay 21; Cincinnati 14, Minnesota 0; Washington 23, St.Louis 0; Seattle 27, the New York Jets 17; Atlanta 41, New Orleans 14; Kansas City 23, Denver 17; New England 37, Baltimore 21; Los Angeles 31, San Francisco 17; San Diego 44, the New York Giants 7, and Houston 20, Tampa Bay 14.

Monday night, Oakland will be at Pittsburgh.

Horace Ivory returned a kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown, giving New England the lead for good in its seesaw battle with Baltimore. The victory gave the Pats sole possession of first place in the American Conference East.

Three fumbles by Buffalo rookie running back Joe Cribbs set up all of Miami's scoring as the Dolphins upset Buffalo. The victory, behind rookie quarterback David Woodley, snapped Miami's two-game losing streak.

CLEVELAND edged Green Bay when quarterback Brian Sipe connected with wide receiver Dave Logan on a 46-yard touchdown pass play with only 16 seconds remaining in the game. Green Bay had come back from a 13-0 deficit to take a 21-13 lead in the final period.

Kansas City rolled to its third straght victory as quarterback Steve Fuller fired two TD passes, including a go-ahead 46-yarder late in the third period.

The Atlanta Falcons capitalized on two third-quarter interceptions and a pair of short punts to keep New Orleans winless. Steve Bartkowski and Lynn Cain led Atlanta's four-touchdown second-half explosion.

Ken Anderson passed for 270 yards and one touchdown and fullback Pete Johnson rushed for 115 yards and another score, leading Cincinnati over Minnesota. It was the first time the Vikings have been shut out in seven years.

Sam McCullum's blocked punt accounted for Seattle's first touchdown and Jim Jodat added two short scoring runs to power Seattle past the New York Jets.

QUARTERBACK Joe Theismann passed for two touchdowns and Clarence Harmon rushed for another TD as Washington blanked St. Louis. The victory ended the Redskins' four-game losing streak.

Dan Fouts, hitting 26 of 41 attempts, passed for a club-record 444 yards as San Diego crushed the New York Giants. The Giants' lone score came after a San Diego snap from center sailed over punter Rick Partridge's head and New York took over on the Chargers' 2-yard line.

Phils take 3-2 lead

Royal misplays prove costly in 5th game

"I'll be so glad when this is over," said Schmidt, hitting .389 with two homers and five RBI and finally looking like an October hero. "It burns your mind out. On every pitch, you have to fight the freaky thoughts that creep into your mind when you get tired. I just say to myself over and over, 'Hit it to me. . .hit it to me.' That drives out the little negative demons."

"When does it end?" asked Larry Bowa. "There's not much of me left. Pete Rose told me that whichever team gets the third win first has the hammer and usually wins. I guess Pete knows. I wouldn't. I haven't been here before."

Neither of these teams has, and they ere playing like it.

These clubs swing from the sublime to the ridiculous, showing the best of themselves, then suddenly succomb to a pressure so insidious that even after it has done its work the players don't know what has happened. George Brett, for instance, struck out twice against McGraw — the first time this season that he has struck out in consecutive at bats against the same pitcher. The second time, in the ninth with the tie run on first, he fanned on three pitches, taking the third. "I just couldn't pull the trigger," he said. "I don't know why."

Each player fights his interior devils differently. Royal gold glove Frank White is hitting .095, but he made four splendid defensive plays Sunday and might have been the hero, but for those other K.C. gloves of lead in the ninth.

"Strange things happenin'," said McRae. "We've blown three leads in games we'd normally have won. Hell, we could have won five straight."

THE EMBLEM of this series may be Aikens, the slugger who has had the greatest and worst moments of his career within a few hours. On Saturday, he was the man with four Series home runs. No one noticed the two routine one-hop throws that skipped past him on one hop.

Drunkenness common complaint against judges

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Judges who act like tyrants don't always get away with such arrogance these days, and if they hit the bottle too hard, they can find the going rough.

Every state except Washington now has a special commission empowered to judge the judges — not on their legal rulings but on their conduct, in or out of court.

"The most common complaint, believe it or not, is drunkenness," said Professor Francis W. Jamison of the University of Denver College of Law.

"Drunkenness is usually conduct out of court," he added. "Most in-court complaints deal with the arrogant, tyrannical SOB types, and we have managed to get their attention."

Jamison was one of the speakers at the seventh National Conference for Judicial Conduct Organizations, which drew about 200 delegates for a four-day meeting that ended Saturday.

From day one, judicial conduct commissions were clearly an idea whose time had come.

California set up the first real commission in 1960. After that, the rapid proliferation of state commissions was a judicial equivalent of wildfire.

Even federal judges, appointed for life, no longer enjoy independence measuring up to the standard set by a former chief justice, who said a federal judge should be answerable only to God and his conscience.

President Carter signed a bill last Wednesday setting up procedures for dealing with charges that a federal judge is unfit. Jamison called it window dressing, a very weak version of a strong state commission.

"It won't amount to a hill of beans," he said. "It lets judges judge judges. That's putting foxes to guard the henhouse."

The makeup of most state commissions include public members.

Fortunately for all, the errant judge is fairly rare.

In 1979, the 50 commissions, which include one in the District of Columbia, received 3,799 complaints. Most were thrown out. Those considered resulted in 21 resignations, 16 retirements, 2 involuntary retirements, 52 cases of private censure, 10 instances of public censure, 4 suspended without pay, 1 fined and 4 ousted.

Some commission lay as low as possible, and thus draw few complaints. Others are vigorous.

"I know the commissions are strong and active in the big states. In fact, I think some of them are getting too nit-pickey," said Jamison.

As one might expect, legal technicalities abound when a judge is to be judged.

"This stuff is brand new, relatively speaking, and it is developing like common law, with precedent and interpretations coming a little bit at a time," said Jamison. "It will take a while before it is all spelled out."

Indeed, many of the workshops on the complexities involved tended to raise more questions than they answered.

Example: a delegate from Kansas reported that a judge who resigned under pressure after being accused of incompetence is again running for election as judge. If he wins what is the commission to do? No one knew.

Jamison said judges who have problems are frequently those afflicted with the little tin god syndrome, an occupational hazard.

"I was a judge for five years and I can understand how it happens," he said. "You sit way up there, treated with such elaborate courtesy. Everything is 'Your honor,' and 'Please sir' and after three of four years you begin to believe they are talking to you personally, not to the court."

Platform now under tow after two days adrift

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Crewmen aboard an oil-drilling platform under tow after two days adrift in the northern Pacific Ocean have reported the discovery of more structural damage but have flooding under control, the Coast Guard says.

The damage probably would not endanger the crew or platform unless the weather worsened, authorities said Sunday.

The 208-foot platform "Dan Prince" was set adrift late Thursday when a helicopter pad broke loose in 40-foot seas and 60-knot winds, slicing the towline between the platform and its tug.

The Coast Guard said the tugboat Smit New York re-established a towline late Saturday and was pulling the 208-foot platform owned by Scout Shipping of Monrovia, Liberia, towards Honolulu.

Despite 18-foot seas and 30-knot winds, crewmen from the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell managed to pass emergency gear to the 18 men aboard the platform on Sunday.

Student dies when parachute fails

AYER, Mass. (AP) — Military officials today were investigating the death of a Wellesley College student whose parachute failed to open when she leaped from an Army helicopter during a sports club jump at Fort Devens.

Bonnie Gresham, 21, of Brookline was declared dead Sunday after she jumped with 15 others over an Army tactical training area, said Army spokesman John Rasmuson.

Investigators were trying to determine if the parachute failure was due to human or mechanical error.

Rasmuson said Miss Gresham was an experienced parachutist and a member of the Reserve Officers Training Corps program at Masssachusetts Institute of Technology.

DEAR ABBY

Love is best weapon in battle

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 60-year-old husband has emphysema so bad he can hardly draw a deep breath or laugh without coughing. His doctor said he absolutely had to quit smoking, so he saw a hypnotist a few times, came home and announced he was "cured." I knew he was lying because whenever he'd come in from the outside he'd smell of smoke. He thinks he's fooling me, but I keep finding cigarettes stashed all over the house.

Abby, I feel like I'm living with a dope addict. Should I throw the cigarettes out when I find them? It's bad enough to live with a man who's killing himself because he isn't man enough to quit smoking, but to know that he's a liar and a cheat hurts even more. I really love him, but I feel so helpless. Please tell me what to do.—HEARTSICK WIFE

DEAR WIFE: First, I'll tell you what NOT to do. Don't tell him that he were a "man" he could quit smoking. He hates his habit as much (or more) than you, but he's hooked. His craving for nicotine is as real as a heroin addict's need for a fix. Don't throw away the cigarettes he's stashed. It will only make him feel guiltier, and Lord knows, he already feels guilty enough.

If you love him, tell him! He needs to hear it to help him conquer the habit.

I've heard from literally hundreds of smokers who have been as hooked as he, but managed to quit. Some use the tapering-off method; others said "cold turkey" was the only way. Many recommended behavior modification. Some credit prayer. But of all the programs for which people pay according to my readers, the most successful by far is Smokenders. (For information, the toll-free number is 1-800-227-2334. In California it's 1-800-642-4772.)

Your man may have to try several methods before finding the one that works for him. But with your love and support, his chances for quitting are infinitely better.

DEAR ABBY: A writer asked whether it was proper to ask "Who else is coming?" after receiving an invitation to a party. Your reply, "It's not considered good manners," prompts this letter.

Recently we drove 20 miles to a party only to find that our neighbors had done the same thing. Our "good manners" is not inquiring who else was coming was both wasteful and expensive.

I suggest that hostesses consider this, and offer information that would promote sharing a ride. Or perhaps a guest might properly inquire as to whether he could give any other guests a ride.—WARSON WOODS, MO.

DEAR WOODS: Asking "Who else will be there?" out of curiosity is tacky. Offering to provide transportation to other guests is thoughtful.

DEAR ABBY: Many of your readers may get the wrong impression from ANONYMOUS, who said, "I was married to a Christian Scientist who wished to return to the celibate life—married, but no sex. Then I suddenly came to my senses, divorced him, and now I am married to a normal Presbyterian."

Abby, Christian Scientists are "normal," too. The warmth and affection evident in their family lives belie that frigid and misleading picture given.—A.W.P.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Welcome mat's out for trick-and-treat

DEAR HELOISE:

Each year on Halloween night, I had such a problem holding onto my dog while trying to hand out candy to the youngsters.

That is until last year when I read a wonderful suggestion in your column which was sent in by a fellow reader.

She said, "Just remove the top glass or screen from your storm door." Fantastic!

Now the dog can jump around and the children aren't frightened. I have two free hands to dish out the goodies and can even enjoy all the cute outfits the "spooks" are wearing.

Her tip was such a boon to me I thought you might repeat it for those who may have missed it. — Mary Graham

+ + +

Consider it done, luv. The idea really is a good one and thanks for reminding me to mention it again.

I feel anything we can do to make Halloween a little safer and more pleasant occasion for little folks is effort well spent. — Hugs, Heloise

+ + +

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found a great way for mothers to have those nice, thick absorbent training panties at little cost when their little one starts wearing them.

Buy the cheapest cotton panties you can find and add your own panel with fabric you have on hand. I used stretch terry but several thicknesses of an old white cotton T-shirt would suffice. Just be sure whatever you use is soft and absorbent.

Cut the panels the width of the crotch and long enough to extend from the front waist elastic to the back waist elastic, or approximately 4 x 12 inches. Pin in place and zigzag on the sewing machine.

A little time-consuming perhaps, but the savings are great! — Brenda Mocarski

Spirited races on in cities for congressional seats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anyone looking for action among Texas' 24 congressional districts on election night might do best by starting in Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth.

Most observers are predicting one of the closest races in the state will be the bitter 5th District rematch between incumbent Democrat Jim Mattox and Republican Tom Pauken in the Dallas area.

The other contest that crops up near the top of those lists of expected-to-be-close races is in the 8th District of the Houston area, where veteran incumbent Bob Eckhardt, a Democrat, is up against a strong challenge from Republican Jack Fields.

And, while it is generally not considered to be anywhere near as close a contest as those two potentially down-to-the-wire battles, the 12th District race in Tarrant County is hard to beat for interest.

It definitely will be attracting the most national attention.

That Fort Worth district is where House Majority Leader Jim Wright has been caught up in his hottest campaign in years by Republican conservative Jim Bradshaw, a former mayor pro-tem.

Bradshaw, attracting such colorful supporters as oil millionaire H.E. "Eddie" Chiles, contends that Wright has lost touch with the district by spending more than 25 years in Washington.

The Republican says the demands of the leadership position have forced Wright to adopt a more liberal posture.

Wright, in line to be the next House speaker, can point to his clout in Washington and claim it brings benefits to the district.

He also suggests that if he had not won the House leadership post, it would be in the hands of a liberal.

His supporters prefer describing the opposition as extremist rather than conservative, not representative of the majority of the district.

Wright is regarded as one of the most effective campaigners in the state and the congressional recess allows him to spend a solid month in Fort Worth before the election.

The conclusion for most observers is that it will be a tough race ending in a solid victory for Wright.

Republicans doubled their membership in the Texas congressional delegation two years ago, raising it from two to four.

Democratic hopes for regaining one of those seats are centered on the 22nd District in the Houston area, where incumbent Ron Paul of Lake Jackson is matched against Democrat Mike Andrews, a Houston attorney.

The district see-sawed between conservative Paul and liberal Democrat Bob Gammage in the past three elections.

Andrews, a moderate-conservative who has the support of the downtown Houston business establishment, defeated Gammage last May in the Democratic primary and has gone on to attack Paul as ineffective.

Paul is an ardent supporter of reducing government.

The district is expected to vote strongly for Republican Ronald Reagan for president, and that turnout could be the deciding factor.

Only two congressional seats — both held by Democrats — were opened by retirements this year in Texas, and both generally are expected to remain in Democratic hands.

In the 4th District, where longtime Rep. Ray Roberts of McKinney is stepping down, former state Sen. Ralph Hall of Rockwall is favored against Republican John Wright, a Tyler businessman.

State Sen. William Patman of Ganado, the son of former longtime Rep. Wright Patman, is considered to be running ahead in the heavily Democratic 14th District against Republican C.L. Conklin, a Corpus Christi physician.

Patman, however, has a liberal reputation in the basically conservative district, which should make the race more interesting. The seat was opened when freshman Rep. Joe Wyatt of Victoria resigned, citing personal reasons.

Two years ago, Mattox drew 51 percent of the vote against Pauken's 49 percent.

The margin of victory could be just as thin for whoever wins this time around, when the feud is running strong enough to earn it a nomination as the most bitter fight in the state.

Pauken describes Mattox as a liberal, a label the incumbent claims his opponent slapped on by misrepresenting the congressional voting record.

Mattox in turn calls Pauken a "deadbeat," a claim not surprisingly rejected by the Republican challenger.

In the Houston area, Eckhardt has a tough fight against Fields' well-funded and well-organized campaign.

Candidates shifting positions

Carter, Reagan both moderate economic stands

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON -- President Carter and Ronald Reagan appear to be moderating their economic game plans, moving away from positions they took earlier in the campaign.

The current economic proposals of Democrat Carter and Republican Reagan appear to have remarkable similarities, probably reflecting an attempt to appeal to the crucial undecided voters in the center of the economic spectrum. But some economists argue that the similarities are only the icing on very different cakes.

In almost any political campaign, candidates moderate their policies as the general election nears. With party support and the candidate's traditional base locked up, the candidate is free to edge toward the opposing camp to bargain for the undecided in the middle who could vote either way, tipping the election.

The 1980 presidential campaign appears to be a classic example. Both presidential candidates are presenting themselves as champions of fiscal restraint.

Both offer tax cuts.

And both promise incentives for personal savings and business investment.

"The decision in 1980," says Federal Reserve Board member Lyle Gramley, "is between the big tax cutter (Reagan) and the little tax cutter (Mr. Carter)."

Reagan has proposed reducing personal income taxes 10 percent a year for three years, then indexing taxes to the inflation rate to prevent voters from being pushed into increasingly higher tax brackets by cost-of-living pay raises.

In 1981, the Reagan plan would reduce taxes an estimated $35 billion.

Mr. Carter says he wants a $28 billion tax cut next year.

The president would give about half the total to individuals to offset next January's Social Security tax increase, and offer the rest to business to create jobs in depressed areas and enable businessmen to write off plant and business equipment costs faster. This is called accelerated depreciation.

While few economists would argue that the $7 billion difference in the two tax-cutting plans is significant, Professor Robert M. Dunn Jr. of George Washington University's economics department argues that the long-term effects are strikingly different.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the Reagan plan would cut personal taxes by $285 billion annually by 1985, while the amount for Mr. Carter's plan would be $58 billion annually by then.

Dunn says the Democratic Party is committed to "huge expenditure increases" and cannot afford to cut taxes as dramatically as Reagan proposes.

"The combination of a progressive income-tax system and inflation provides a subtle mechanism for slowly but steadily increasing (taxes) to finance larger, more expensive government," Dunn says.

Without any tax cut, federal revenues are expected to nearly double, to $1 trillion by 1985.

Reagan is de-emphasizing his massive tax-cut proposal as the campaign heads into its final weeks. Last month, for example, he delivered a major economic address before the International Business Council in Chicago, stressing plans to cut government spending more than he stressed tax cuts.

One top Reagan aide, conceding the shift in emphasis, said it was due to voters questioning the soundness of a large tax cut in the aftermath of Democratic attacks on the proposal.

Mr. Carter, however, was doing some shifting of his own. After claiming for months that inflation is the nation's No. 1 enemy, he decided a tax cut for early next year wouldn't be a bad idea after all and unveiled his $27 billion tax-cut plan.

A tax cut -- with a corresponding cut in government expenditures -- generally is considered a fuel to inflation since it makes more money available for spending.

Reagan has dropped his support of one proposal to allow business and industry to more rapidly deduct from their taxes the costs of new plants and equipment. He has adopted a more modest plan, endorsed by the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. Carter supports a version of the more moderate plan.

Both candidates consistently have held that the federal budget should be balanced, but both have altered their timetables for achieving a balanced budget.

Mr. Carter originally said it could be done by 1981, but he now has changed that schedule, without offering a specific date. Reagan says that if his economic package is enacted, it could be done by 1983.

On defense spending, Mr. Carter advocated a $5 billon to $8 billion cut during his 1976 campaign.

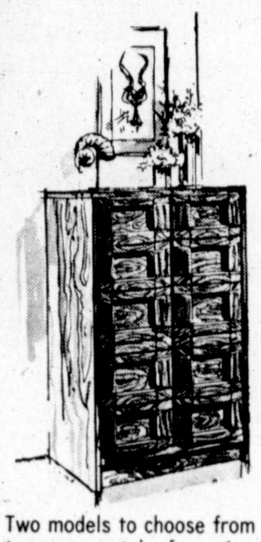

Carter now leading in Illinois, paper says

CHICAGO (AP) — President Carter's heavy support in traditionally Democratic Chicago is giving him a narrow lead over Republican challenger Ronald Reagan in the race for Illinois' 26 electoral votes, the Chicago Sun-Times is reporting.

The newspaper's usually reliable Straw Poll, to be published in Sunday's editions, said Carter has 43.9 percent statewide in the latest sample by the Sun-Times' canvassers and Reagan has 41.7 percent with independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson at 14.5 percent.

But Reagan is ahead in suburban and downstate areas, the newspaper said its polling shows.

Libertarian party hopes to win some offices in Texas

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Libertarian party will be on the ballot in Texas for the first time this November and, although its leaders don't expect their presidential candiate to carry the state, they hope to win some lesser offices.

The Libertarian party was formed eight years ago to espouse "maximum personal freedom with a minimum of goverment interference,"

It placed a presidential candidate on the ballot in 32 states in 1976 and in 1980 became the first third party movement ever to get candidates on the ballot in all 50 states, Guam and Washington, D.C.

The Libertarians will be the only third party -- other than independent John Anderson -- on the ballot in Texas.

"We're going to be the balance of power in this country in the next two decades," says former state party chairman Michael Grossberg, 28, of Austin, who is running against U.S. Rept. Jake Pickle for the 10th Congressional District seat

Grossberg, a communications graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, believes the Libertarians could become a "major minor party" if the Democrats and Republicans "do not move drastically in the Libertarian direction."

The basic emphasis of the party is on civil liberties and a free-market system. "Each individual has the right to do whatever he chooses with his bond, mind or property as long as he respects the rights of others," Grossberg says.

Since 1792, the party has supported such proposals as de-regulation of industry, repeal of pro-union and anti-union laws, repeal of victimless crime laws (such as mairjuana possession and prostitution), tax cuts and banning police vice squads.

Libertarian presidential hopeful Ed Clark has supported increasing military pay, pulling American troops out of bases in foreign countries, abolishing the Department of Energy and instituting a $1,200 tax credit for parents of school children.

The tax credit would enable parents to have the option of sending their children to private schools, thereby reducing the need for public schools, Grossberg says.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

There's nothing in world greater than one's love

Now we know so little, even with our special gifts, and the preaching of those most gifted is still so poor.

But when we have been made perfect and complete, then the need for these inadequate special gifts will come to an end, and they will disappear.

It's like this: when I was a child I spoke and thought and reasoned as a child does. But when I became a man my thoughts grew far beyond those of my childhood, and now I have put away the childish things.

In the same way, we can see and understand only a little about God now, as if we were peering at His reflection in a poor mirror; but someday we are going to see Him in His completeness, face to face. Now all that I know is hazy and blurred, but then I will see everything clearly, just as clearly as God sees into my heart right now.

There are three things that remain—faith, hope, and love—and the greatest of these is love.

Mother with 'live-in' denied custody

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision denying an Illinois mother custody of her three daughters because of her live-in boyfriend was left intact by the Supreme Court today.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices rejected Jacqueline Jarrett's attempt to win back custody of her daughters.

Mrs. Jarrett's appeal had argued that the Illinois fornication law violated her constitutiopal right of equal protection.

Today's action does not preclude the chance that the high court might explore the issue at some future date. It only means the court decided not to study Mrs. Jarrett's case.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun voted to hear Mrs. Jarrett's arguments. Four votes are needed to grant such review.

In a dissenting opinion for himself and Marshall, Brennan said, "Nothing in the record or in logic supports a conclusion that divorced parents who fornicate, for that reason alone, are unfit or adversely affect the well-being and development of their children in any degree over and above whatever adverse effect separation and divorce may already have had on the children."

Mrs. Jarrett was divorced from Walter Jarrett in Chicago four years ago. She was awarded custody of the couple's three daughters, now ages 15, 13 and 10.

In early 1977, Mrs. Jarrett told her ex-husband, who saw his daughters regularly, that Wayne Hammond would be moving in with her and the children.

Jarrett went to court and eventually won custody of the children. A state trial court, invoking an Illinois divorce law, ruled that the children's removal from Mrs. Jarrett's home was "necessary for their moral and spiritual well-being and development."

A state appeals court overturned the trial court's decision, saying there was no proof the children's well-being would be harmed. But the Illinois Supreme Court last Dec. 20 reinstated the order stripping Mrs. Jarrett of custody.

"To wait until later years to determine whether Jacqueline had inculcated her moral values in the children would be to await a demonstration that the very harm which the statute seeks to avoid had occurred," the state's highest court said.

Its opinion said "potential future harmful effects" of Mrs. Jarrett's lifestyle had to be considered.

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for Mrs. Jarrett argued that the state court interpretation of the Illinois law has created "an irrebutable presumption of future harm."

The appeal noted that the state court's two dissenters saw the decision as making cohabitation automatically sufficient grounds for changing previously awarded custody.

In response, Walter Jarrett pointed to a subsequent Illinois case in which an unmarried father with a live-in girlfriend was allowed to keep custody of his children. But in that case, the state court acknowledged that the father and girlfriend planned to marry.

Big bonds don't seem to bother drug suspects

MIAMI (AP) — Within hours of arrest and arraignment, suspected drug smugglers post huge bonds and scurry back to South American safety, out of reach of U.S. law, complain frustrated authorities trying to stop drug trafficking and Miami's bloody "cocaine cowboys" war.

"It seems absurd that anybody would walk away from a $1 million bond, but it happens frequently," said Allan Pringle, special agent-in-charge of the Miami Drug Enforcement Administration office.

"Those who jump bond are foreign nationals, primarily Bolivians or Colombians, the people at the very top of the organizational structure," he said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Sullivan agreed. "We have someone jump on $500,000 bond almost every week," he said. "When somebody can put up $500,000 or $1 million bond straight cash, that's a clue anybody can see: We're never going to see that guy again."

MOST OF THE arrests of the people who smuggle this country's supply of cocaine, marijuana and Quaaludes into Florida follow extensive investigations by the DEA and other federal agencies.

The "cowboys" tag was coined by local police who say dozens of people have been killed in a drug smuggling war over the last few years, most of them Colombians and most of them in Florida machine gun shootouts.

U.S. officials say they don't receive much help from the foreign countries once the suspects flee.

"The level of cooperation is not great," said Scott Miller, an assistant U.S. attorney.

DEA officials cite the case of alleged drug gang leader Alfredo Gutierrez as an example showing the need to toughen bond standards.

On May 28 in Miami, undercover DEA agents passed $9 million in cash to Gutierrez in exchange for 874 pounds of pasty cocaine base, officials say. When the Bolivian handed over the cocaine, the agents pulled badges and guns and arrested him.

The agents had just made the biggest single bust in the federal agency's history.

Gutierrez was charged with conspiracy to import cocaine.

BOND, FIRST SET at $3 million, was later reduced to $1 million. Just hours after his arrest, a briefcase containing $1 million cash was delivered to court officials, and Gutierrez was headed back to Bolivia.

Even $3 million probably wouldn't have kept Gutierrez in jail. Intelligence sources told DEA investigators that members of his gang in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, were prepared to bring that sum to Miami if bond were not reduced.

Gutierrez's trial in U.S. District Court was set for Sept. 25, but the Bolivian didn't bother to show up. Law enforcement officials weren't surprised.

"There's not a chance in hell that he will go back for trial in the states," said a U.S. diplomat in Bolivia, who asked not to be identified.

"The facts speak for themselves," said Miller, who was assigned to prosecute the Bolivian. "We received information from South America that he would try to get the bail lowered and flee to South America. It's very frustrating."

Even Gutierrez's attorney, Jeffrey Weiner, acknowledged his client probably will never come back to this country to stand trial.

"I must tell your honor that I have no indications he will appear," Weiner told U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings. "I have not received any communication from my client and I do not know his whereabouts."

"What has to happen is a realization that the profits in this business are so large," Miller said. "We have to realize what the assets of an organization like this are and have the appropriate bonds set."

"They are flouting our laws, coming here making a fortune. They get caught, are out on bond and right back in Bolivia. They're laughing at us in Santa Cruz," Miller said.

MILLER'S BOSS, U.S. Attorney Atlee Wampler III, said restrictions must be placed on bonds for suspected major drug smugglers, especially repeat offenders.

"I'd like to see certain restrictions placed on bonding proceedings, especially defendants charged with a continuing criminal enterprise. The burden should be placed on the defendant to show why he's not a risk," Wampler said.

"And if a person already has been convicted (of a major drug smuggling offense) and is being charged again, there should be no bond," he added.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., has authored a bill to toughen bond standards, but it has been stalled in Congress, said Marty Steinberg, chief counsel of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

"The bill would give the federal courts an opportunity to consider whether a person is likely to commit another crime or would be a danger to the community during the pretrial period," Steinberg said. "As the law now stands, a judge can only consider this after conviction and on appeal."

Allan Pringle, special agent-in-charge of the Miami Drug Enforcement Administration, holds a package of cocaine confiscated in the Miami area in October of 1979. Pringle says that some drug dealers walk away from a $1 million dollar bond and then leave the country. (AP Laserphoto)

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Boots can usually be worn all day

Dear Dr. Solomon: During the cold weather I generally wear boots to work. Is there any reason I should not keep them on all day? — Sheila

Dear Sheila: Ordinarily, boots can safely be worn all day, provided they fit well. However, if they have high heels, are constructed of sythetic materials that do not breath, or have been treated with silicone to make them waterproof, it would be better to change to other shoes during the day.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I enjoy being out in the sun, winters as well as summers. If the sun can cause skin cancer, wouldn't you expect people who normally are exposed to a great deal of sun — such as farmers — to be more likely to be affected? — Mrs. C.J.

Dear Mrs. J.: People exposed to large amounts of sunlight not only would be more likely to be affected, they are more affected. Those who work outdoors, for examples, are at higher risk of skin cancer, as are residents of the southern and southwestern areas of the United States.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Critics sometimes ask why newspapers never print good news, only bad — stories about such subjects as war, crime, inflation and unemployment. Despite all these horror stories, I recently was able to find a silver lining. Apparently, there has been a sharp decrease in cases of stomach cancer throughout the world in the last 50 years. How do you account for this favorable bit of news in the face of so many stories about an increasing incidence of cancer and the discovery of a carcinogen-of-the-week? — Mrs. L.V.

Dear Mrs. V.: No one really knows why cases of stomach cancer have declined so markedly over the last half century, but researchers at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions believe they may have an answer. And from what they say, it appears that every silver lining has a cloud.

Mary Meyer, an associate professor of epidemiology, and her colleagues at the School of Hygiene and Public Health, suggest that the decrease in stomach cancer may be related to cigarette smoking and the resultant damage to the lungs. According to their line of reasoning, stomach cancer has often been linked with exposure to dusty or smoky atmospheres. In people with normal, healthy lungs, particles are cleared from the lungs and swallowed. However, individuals whose lungs have been damaged by cigarette smoke retain carcinogens and other particulate matter, thus making them more susceptible to lung cancer. However, since fewer carcinogenic substances and other particles reach the stomach, the risk of stomach cancer in these persons is decreased. Ironically, smokers whose lungs are not damaged seem to remain at risk of stomach cancer.

According to Mrs. Meyer, this theory is supported by statistics gathered from a number of countries, which show stomach cancer death rates going down as lung cancer death rates go up. This relationship holds true despite wide differences in such variables as geography and climate.

Two rescued from abandoned mine

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — David Aubuchon and Guy Hayton say they were down to their last match and praying for their lives when they were rescued after four days trapped in their car — at the bottom of an abandoned 65-foot mine shaft.

"I don't think either one of us thought we were ever going to get out of there," said Hayton. "We both thought we were going to die."

On Saturday, a University of Arizona student on a geology field trip spotted smoke coming from the nearly vertical shaft and heard shouts. Aubuchon, 22, and Hayton, 25, who had burned the car's hoses to attract attention, were pulled to safety by rescue workers two hours later.

Hayton had a broken leg and Aubuchon had two broken ribs. Both were hospitalized.

Their 1966 Chevrolet station wagon was also pulled from the shaft and police said they found tools allegedly stolen from the Arizona Experimental Mine a quarter of a mile away.

Pima County sheriff's detectives questioned Hayton and Aubuchon. No charges were filed.

"There's still a few items down at the bottom of the shaft," said Deputy Donald Story. "That shaft is such a backbreaker to get into."

The shaft was believed to have been mined at the turn of the century and is one of many in the area. The fences that surrounded many of the zinc, lead, silver and copper mines have been torn down.

Hayton said he and Aubuchon were driving across the desert Tuesday night when he saw a dip in front of them "and the next thing I know we're crashing."

"We had been drinking quite a bit of beer," Hayton said.

Rower in trouble, makes for shore

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — London photographer Peter Bird, his storm-tossed boat sloshing with water after 19 days at sea, was pulling for a Mexican shore today to make repairs before another try at the first solo row from America to Australia, his sponsor says.

"He's about 120 miles off Baja California, between San Diego and Ensenada," said Ken Crutchlow after a conversation via a San Diego marine telephone operator over the weekend.

Crutchlow said Bird was not injured although uncomfortable and "very disappointed" that he had to abort his planned 8,500-mile pull.

"I don't know when he'll get in, or where, but we'll be going down to make the repairs," the sponsor said. Crutchlow figured Bird had chalked up about 600 miles rowing and drifting since leaving San Francisco Bay on Oct. 1.

The 33-year-old adventurer, who once rowed the Atlantic with a friend, told Crutchlow he'd been hit by several storms since his departure in the 35-foot "Britannia II."

"He was knocked over on his beam-ends once and took in a lot of water," said Crutchlow. "And he's having trouble with the hatches. He's been unable to bail the boat out. The weather has not been calm enough for him to do that."

At this time of year, coastal Pacific weather is highly changeable. Crutchlow said Bird knows he's in a race with winter, but is determined to try again as soon as the boat is seaworthy.

He said the Coast Guard would not be asked to search for Bird. "We'll wait until some fisherman spots him, something like that, or he makes shore."

Libyan leader warns U.S. candidates

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, in messages to U.S. presidential candidates Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, warned that World War III could erupt unless America changes its Mideast policies.

The messages, released by the Libya's official JANA news agency and published by the pro-Libyan Lebanese newspaper As Safir, accused Washington of having "threatened the independence of the Arab world."

Khadafy called on the United States to abandon military facilities in Oman, Somalia and Egypt and recall the four sophisticated radar planes sent to Saudi Arabia. He also urged the candidates to adopt a neutral stance in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

U.S. policies, Khadafy was quoted as saying, "had brought the animosity (of) Libya and the entire Arab nation to a dangerous stage."

With friendship impossible, "we will concentrate now on the possibility of avoiding armed conflict between Arabs and Americans," he added.

Khadafy, an Arab radical who insists on the eradication of the Jewish state, predicted that if the Arabs were successful in regaining any part of Palestine from the Israelis, the Americans would intervene on Israel's behalf.

"Such an American intervention of course will throw open the door for the intervention of other superpowers which puts us in front of a third world war, the responsibility for which lies with the Israelis because of their occupation of Palestine and other Arab land."

Khadafy said the Araxs have a "sacred right to self defense" and are willing to pursue that right "even if another Vietnam is resurrected or World War III erupts.

"The United States is at a crossroads," he said. It can "either choose a path of peace by withdrawing (its) forces, both naval and air, from the Arab world and leaving the oil of the Arabs to the Arabs and taking a neutral stand in the Middle East, or choose the path of aggression in the area."

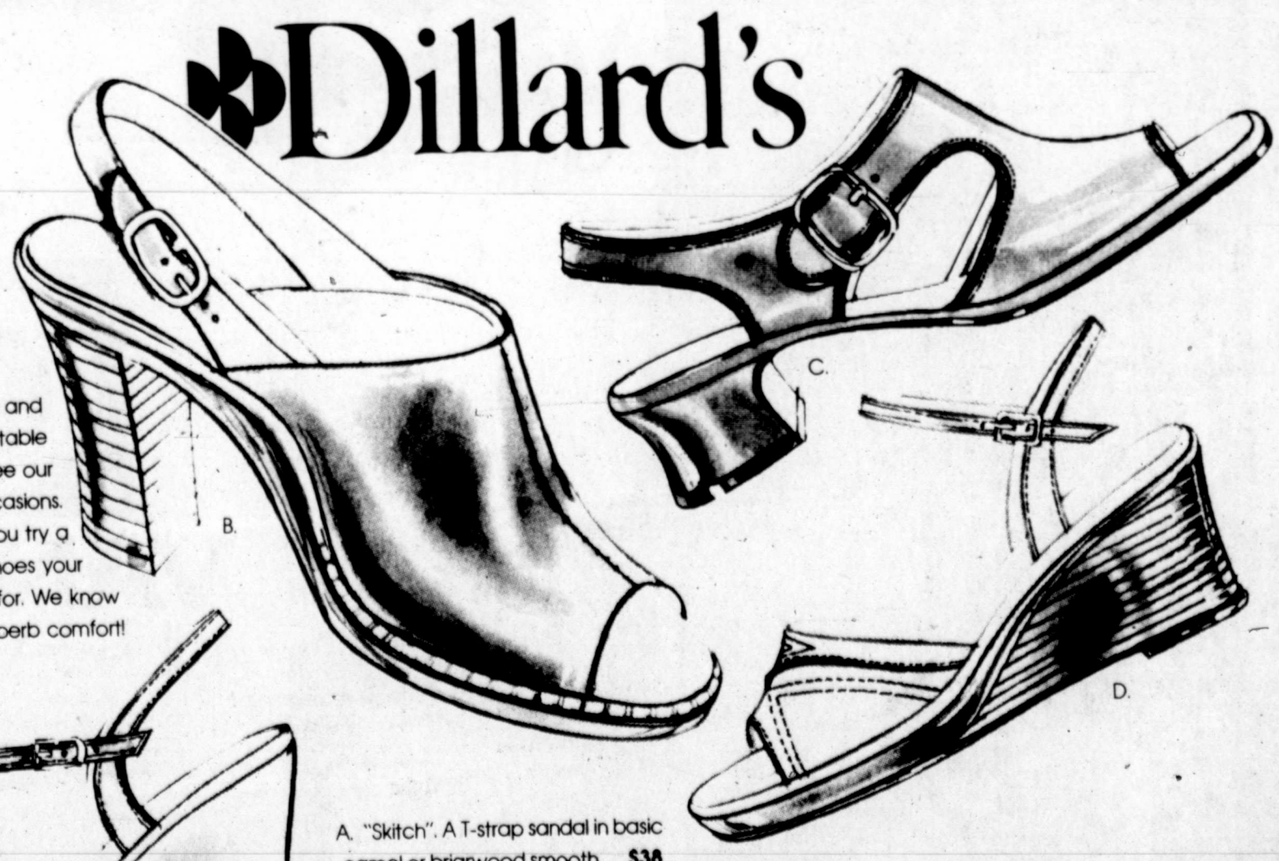

The Libyan leader, who has been accused by the State Department of using his nation's oil wealth to fiance terrorist groups around the world, said he sent his message to the candidates out of a "love for peace."
