NWS meteorologists call weekend rain unseasonal

Staff Report

The thunderstorms and showers during the past two days may indicate that spring weather conditions have come to the Permian Basin a little early this year, a National Weather Service spokesman said Saturday.

The 0.35 inches of rainfall for the month and 1.65 inches of precipitation so far this year are slightly above average, meteorologist Gary Woodall said.

The entire month of March traditionally receives about a half inch of precipitation, while the total to date for 1990 is about a half inch above average, he said.

A wave of thunderstorms struck Midland early Saturday, and another hit later in the day, Woodall said. Dime-sized hail and 60 mph winds were reported in Winkler County at about 7:30 p.m., he said.

"Actually it's a little unusual to get this kind of severe weather system this early in the year," Woodall said. "Usually it tends to be around the middle of April when we get the thunderstorms."

The NWS had a 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. tornado watch Saturday for Midland County and other counties between Midland, Abilene and San Angelo. The watch did not include Ector County.

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies and becoming clearer with a 20 percent chance of showers with a high in the mid-70s with 20 to 30 mph and gusty southwest winds, NWS said.

Tonight is expected to be fair with a with a low in the mid-50s, NWS said.

Monday's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid- to upper 70s.

Saturday's record high of 88 was set in 1954. The record low for today of 10 was set in 1948.

Texas voters face full plate Tuesday

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas voters in the Democratic and Republican primary elections Tuesday will have one of the fullest menus in recent years as they narrow the choices for political offices.

The race for governor has attracted most of the attention, with seven candidates in each primary, although the field has practically narrowed to three Democratic candidates and four Republicans.

In the Democratic race, Jim Mattox, Ann Richards and Mark White are in the thick of an increasingly bitter fight for spots in an April 10 runoff.

Richards, state treasurer for seven years, led in early polls, but White, the former governor, and Mattox, attorney general for seven years, gained on her in the past few weeks after Richards refused to say if she ever used illegal drugs.

Richards, an acknowleged alcoholic who has been sober 10 years, instead accused her male rivals of profiting from their years in office and failing to follow through on campaign promises.

In the Republican race, Kent Hance, Tom Luce and Jack Rains are trying to keep political newcomer Clayton Williams from running away with the nomination Tuesday.

Williams, a colorful West Texas rancher and businessman who has pumped millions of his own dollars into the campaign, reportedly is near the 50-percent level in polls, which puts him within striking distance of winning the primary without a runoff.

Locally, the most attention has been focused on the Republican nomination for the 238th District Judge race between John Hyde and Nick Taylor.

Another hot race is the Midland County Court-at-Law contest between Republicans Al Walvoord and Matthew Blair in GOP Primary.

Meanwhile two Republicans are running for the GOP nomination for Justice of Peace, District 2. They are incumbent Robert Pine and challenger Barbara Owen.

Also, Chris McCormack and Terry Lowry are running for the Midland County Democratic Party chairmanship.

Statewide, at the top of the Democratic ballot is a match between state Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth and Harley Schlanger of Houston, an associate of Lyndon LaRouche, for the right to take on

The two candidates for chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party say the want to restore the party to greatness.

But that's about all they agree upon.

Terry Lowry proposes to rebuild the Democratic Party around the "principles that made it the representative of most Americans" in industry, defense, agriculture and other areas, he said.

Lowry said the U.S. policies applied by former Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy were successful in producing millions of jobs and higher wages. And, if elected, he wants to present those same principles for analysis in Midland County.

Lowry also is focusing attention on the "freedom movements" taking place in China and Eastern Europe, saying, "We must give our full support."

"The people of these countries are finding themselves in the same situations that our Founding Fathers did over 200 years ago," he added.

Lowry cites his membership in the National Democratic Policy Committee as his main qualification for office.

However, Texas Democratic Party spokesman Jim Boynton says the committee is not sanctioned by or affiliated with the Democratic National Committee or the Texas Democratic Party.

Lowry's opponent, attorney Chris McCormack, claims the organization is a "front" for convicted tax evader Lyndon LaRouche and his followers.

Haitian ruler resigns in face of uprising

The embattled Haitian leader turned over power to Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham, the army chief of staff, who said he would transfer rule to a civilian-led government within 72 hours. Abraham said the interim government would prepare for elections but did not give a date.

Diplomat sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Avril would leave the country within two days. There was no word on where he would go and how he would get there.

Members of a coalition of opposition parties met with Abraham after Avril's resignation, but soon there was disagreement. Some opposition members wanted Abraham to give up power up within 24 to 48 hours, and one member said there would be "all-out war" if he didn't. There was also discord over who will lead the civilian government.

It was Haiti's fifth change of government since February 1986, when dictator Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier fled the impoverished Caribbean nation into exile in France.

Avril's departure followed five days of mass protests. His opponents said they no longer trusted him to usher in fair elections that had been scheduled for October.

Thousands of residents poured into the streets of the capital to celebrate. Youths erected flaming tire barricades at major intersections, and black smoke filled the sky over the capital.

The television station Tele-Haiti said teen-agers shouted slogans outside the house of a special police agent in the slum suburb of Martissant, and that the agent and backers "wildly" opened fire, killing six. Radio Metropole said seven were killed.

Sporadic gunfire was heard throughout the capital, Port-au-Prince, and there were power outages in some neighborhoods.

Independent Radio Metropole said the houses of some Duvalier and Avril sympathizers had been ransacked and their cars burned. On radio talk shows, callers demanded that Avril be thrown out of the country.

Abraham, in uniform, appeared on state television at 3:05 p.m. EST to announce Avril's resignation.

"In light of the resignation of the military government of Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, the armed forces of Haiti accept the heavy task," Abraham said in French.

RISKY BUSINESS:

Alcohol and tobacco

Meet "the movement." It has no single name, but collectively it has managed to bring about sweeping changes that touch the very fabric of a culture that once accepted the habits of smoking and drinking as part of everyday life.

Meet the big-time breweries fighting to keep their advertisements on television and the deep-pocketed tobacco interests that oppose government interference in their business.

With billions of dollars at stake, the answers are not black and white and the fight is on from Capitol Hill to Midland. Who stands to win and who stands to lose?

For drinkers, particularly those who choose to drive, it means "reckless endangerment" has been tossed off the books in favor of the charge — DWI, Driving While Intoxicated.

For smokers, it means more employers are saying, "butt out," and establishing smoke-free environments in response to higher health costs and passive smoke concerns aired by non-smoking employees.

Beginning Wednesday in a five-part series entitled "The Party's Over," the Reporter-Telegram will take a comprehensive look at all aspects of what has become a virtual revolution in the way a growing part of contemporary society views smoking and drinking.

Nicaraguan president-elect's brace removed in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Nicaraguan President-Elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro plans to attend church services in Houston Sunday after physicians removed a leg brace she has worn for more than two months.

Mrs. Chamorro, the National Opposition Union (UNO) candidate who claimed victory over Sandinista-backed President Daniel Ortega in the Feb. 25 election, rested in a Houston hotel Saturday after orthopedic surgeon Dr. Malcolm W. Granberry removed her brace Friday. She takes office April 25.

Mrs. Chamorro underwent knee surgery at Houston's St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital Jan. 4 after she fell at her home and broke her right kneecap on New Year's Eve. She said she came to Houston because the city's medical facilities are superior to those in Nicaragua.

A Nicaraguan spokeswoman said Mrs. Chamorro, who arrived in the city Thursday, will attend a 1:30 p.m. Mass at St. Thomas More Catholic Church in southwest Houston.

The owner of the opposition newspaper, "La Prensa," Mrs. Chamorro is the widow of slain opposition leader Pedro Joaquin Chamorro and has had the backing of the United States government.

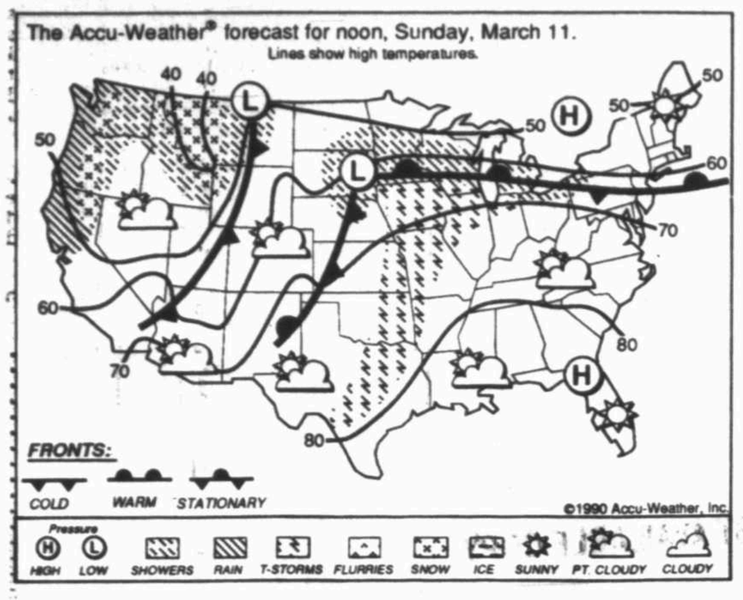

She originally planned a four-city fund-raising sweep of the United States in January, but the knee surgery curbed her efforts. She continued to campaign on crutches and wore the brace after returning to Nicaragua Jan. 16.

UNO represents a 14-party coalition of anti-Sandinista groups. The Feb. 25 polling was the first open election since the overthrow of the Anastasio Somoza regime in 1978.

Mrs. Chamorro and Ortega are calling for the disbandment of the U.S.-backed Contra fighting force before she takes office.

RAIN

Meanwhile, a trough of low pressure remained over West Texas from the northwest Panhandle to the Big Bend area.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms occurred ahead of the trough from the Wichita Falls area southwest to the lower Pecos Valley. Rain and scattered showers dampened the northwest and southeast Panhandle as well as the southeast and north central Texas area.

Late afternoon temperatures across the north and south warmed into the 70s and 80s while readings over the west were holding mostly in the 60s and 70s. The 3 p.m. temperature at Guadalupe Pass was 54 degrees. The warm spot was 85 degrees at Harlingen.

A brisk southeast wind continued to swept the north, south and the west ahead of the trough. The rest of Texas was mainly under a 15 to 25 mph wind, with some gusts over 30.

Cloudy skies are expected statewide through Sunday with scattered showers and thunderstorms north and west becoming widely scattered south. Severe storms possible Sunday across the north. Partly cloudy Sunday night and Monday with widely scattered thunderstorms across the north.

NATION

Rain and snow fell in the Pacific Northwest Saturday, and fog slowed air traffic in Milwaukee and Chicago.

Showers also fell across the South.

Snow advisories were posted over the Cascade range in Washington and northern Oregon, where heavy snow fell late in the week.

Snowfall overnight Friday amounted to 3 inches at Timberline, Ore., and the day before, eight inches fell at Stampede Pass, Wash., bringing the season's total to 8½ feet.

Wisconsin was almost completely blanketed with fog, and air traffic at Mitchell Field International Airport in Milwaukee was disrupted for much of the day.

With visibility at 600 feet, all incoming flights and many departures were halted from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., said Ron LaMarche, supervisor for the Federal Aviation Administration at the Mitchell Field tower.

At Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, fog caused delays of up to 90 minutes, and air traffic was running an hour late at the city's other airport, Midway.

For an hour in the morning, United Airlines, O'Hare's largest tenant, ordered a "ground stop," which directed controllers at airports in cities to halt United flights to Chicago, said to Chicago Aviation Department spokeswoman Lisa Howard.

The dense fog, caused by a warm weather front moving through the region, stretched from Chicago to Dubuque, Iowa, according to the National Weather Service.

It was rainy Saturday in much of the South and parts of the Midwest.

Showers fell from Virginia and the Carolinas across to northern Georgia. Rain also fell in eastern Ohio, western Pennsylvania and New York state and southeast Minnesota.

The low temperature for the nation Saturday was 4 degrees Saranac Lake, in New York's Adirondack Mountains.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EST ranged from 33 degrees in both Duluth, Minn., and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 86 degrees at Harlingen, Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Medal awarded 21 years after rescue

By ED SCHAFER

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jim Lahr sat ramrod straight in his wheelchair, tears welling in his eyes as his field commander in Vietnam added a long-delayed Bronze Star Saturday to the rows of medals pinned to his Marine uniform.

"The good guys finally won one," said Col. Donald Meyers, who retired from the Corps less than two years ago. "It doesn't happen very often."

While on patrol in Vietnam on March 21, 1969, 16 days before the end of his 13-month tour of duty, Lahr and several other Marines descended the steep banks of a stream to fill canteens.

It turned out they had stumbled on a huge North Vietnamese supply cache, said Denver Lawson Freeman, who probably would have died there if it weren't for Lahr. As they stooped in the 2-foot-deep water, they were suddenly ambushed with machine-gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades.

"The whole hill basically just exploded," Freeman said.

A grenade fell nearby, wounding Freeman and several others.

"Corporal Lahr, with complete disregard for his own safety ... assisted several Marines to safety," the award citation says. "Despite the heavy fire, he made several trips ... until he himself was wounded and unable to continue."

Lahr said he took one round from a rifle. The bullet went into his shoulder, grazed his lung, hit three ribs and finally lodged in his spine, paralyzing him from the waist down.

For 20 years, neither Freeman nor Lahr knew that the other had survived.

But through a contact he made at a Marine Corps reunion last summer, Freeman learned that Lahr was living in Lincoln, Ill. He set out to see that his friend received the honor he deserved.

If he hadn't pulled me out of the river that day I wouldn't be here today," Freeman said after the awards ceremony Saturday at the Marine Reserve base in St. Louis. "There's just no doubt in my mind about that."

Freeman "started the ball rolling," said Marine Sgt. Major Wallace Poyner, writing letters and petitions to the awards section of the Marine Corps.

Lahr downplayed his heroism, saying he did it all on impulse and didn't even know immediately that he was shot.

Lahr is active in veterans' groups, said Nancy, his wife of 20 years.

by Lyndon LaRouche, and is designed to fracture and destroy the Democratic party," McCormack said.

Lowry could not be reached for comment on McCormack's allegations.

McCormack — who has been involved in local Democratic Party politics since 1982 as a precinct chairman, member of the Midland County Democratic Party Executive Committee and past president of Young Democrats of Midland County — believes he is the person who can lead the party back to prominence.

He has received the support of incumbent Midland County Democratic Party Chairwoman Janet Massey as well as the Mexican-American Democrats, Coalition of Black Democrats, Young Democrats of Midland County, Democratic Women's Club, Communication Workers of America and the local chapter of the AFL-CIO.

McCormack also has been endorsed by several candidates for statewide office, including State Rep. Dan Morales, a candidate for attorney general; Tom Bowden, a candidate for state treasurer; and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger and State Rep. Clint Hackney, both candidates for Texas Railroad Commissioner.

"I think if you talk to Democrats in Midland County, they'll say the party is at a low point," McCormack said. "I want to bring the Democratic Party back to West Texas, so the voters know they have a choice."

McCormack plans, if elected, to start a local Democratic Party newsletter containing information about upcoming political events. In addition, he said he's already begun to develop a database of the Democratic Party membership in Midland County.

"I also intend to keep a visible Democratic presence in our community," he said. "The county chair should be used as a pulpit for Democratic ideas and beliefs by someone who has respect for Democrats."

VOTE

Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm in November.

Democrats also will have statewide races for attorney general, state treasurer, commissioner of agriculture, railroad commissioner, two seats on the Texas Supreme Court and three seats on the Court of Criminal Appeals.

The Democratic ballot also will have non-binding referenda on insurance reform, judicial selection and the right to trial by jury.

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, predicts a turnout of 1.4 million to 1.6 million, which would be the largest turnout since 1978, when a large number of contested statewide races drew 1.8 million Democratic primary voters.

But Texas Republican Chairman Fred Meyer is proud of the fullest GOP ballot ever, with races not only for governor, but also for attorney general, comptroller, state treasurer, land commissioner, agriculture commissioner, railroad commissioner, at least two Supreme Court seats and one Court of Criminal Appeals seat, along with hundreds of local races.

Meyer is expecting the hotly-contested gubernatorial race to bring out at least 800,000 voters for the Republican primary, which would be the largest GOP turnout ever.

It is a far cry from the 158,000 that voted in the 1978 Republican primary that gave the state Bill Clements, but Meyer also said the primary races will be useful as a tuneup for the general election.

"The primary forces (candidates) to think through the issues, develop their money-raising abilities and get their precincts organized, all of which will help them in the general election," Meyer said.

Meyer and Martin agree that the early primary, with the shortened campaign season, helps to protect incumbents, particularly in areas such as Southeast Texas where there are still few local Republican primary races.

The primary was moved from May to March in 1988 in an attempt to give the state more clout in selecting presidential candidates.

Another wild card in the primary turnout is the early voting period, which ended Friday and allowed three weeks of excuse-free voting for people who did not want to wait until election day.

In the 1988 general election, early voting accounted for 24 percent of the statewide total vote, while it was 42.2 percent of the Midland County total vote and 36.1 percent of the Ector County total vote. Midland County has 52,013 registered voters, while Ector County has 52,427 and nearly 8.3 million are registered to vote in Texas.

Martin noted that the Democratic primary offers the only local races in most counties, which draws voters.

"I don't think you're going to see a lot of traditional Democratic voters leave to vote in the Republican primary when they have the county judges, the commissioners, the state representatives, the people they know, running in the Democratic primary," he said.

"People get a chance to bolt in the general election," he said.

Meyer understands that, and he hopes to give the Democrats plenty of contests in November.

The GOP will challenge in 27 state House districts now held by Democrats and 10 congressional districts now held by Democrats.

Republicans are targeting the Central Texas seat U.S. Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Waco, is giving up as well as the Panhandle seat held by freshman U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, and the upper Gulf Coast seat that U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, the dean of the Texas delegation, has held for 37 years.

Robber has second thoughts at this house

DALLAS (AP) — A robber who broke into a home and held the owner at knifepoint apparently decided his victim was worse off than he was and gave back the $8 he was going to steal.

"I think he was disgusted," said the 32-year-old victim.

The thief came into the house through an unlocked carport door early Friday and jumped on the victim, who was in bed. There was a brief struggle in which the victim was hit several times on the head with the butt of the knife.

The victim said the robber ransacked his room, scooping up a watch, rings, $3 in change and $5 from his wallet.

"This house is not worth robbing," the thief suddenly said, giving back the money. But he kept the six rings and a watch valued at $61, according to a police report.

"He couldn't believe that was all the money I had," the victim said. "He just dumped it in my hands and left."

HAITI

"The mission is clear and the objective is precise: to re-establish peace and order within 72 hours so, in conformity with the constitution, a provisional government can organize elections."

Abraham and the army want to give the interim presidency to Supreme Court President Gilbert Austin, who had been appointed by Avril as chief justice last year after serving as the general's justice minister.

However, the opposition coalition — called the Unity Assembly — said he would be a puppet of the army and that it wanted him to resign as president of the high court.

"It is the president of the Supreme Court who, according to the constitution, should be president," Austin said Saturday night.

There had been speculation that 51-year-old Avril wanted to return to his old job as army chief of staff. However, Tele-Haiti, an independent television station, said he was retiring from the army.

Radio Metropole said Avril left the palace Saturday afternoon and was at his private residence in the wealthy suburb of Canape Vert, on the hills overlooking Port-au-Prince.

Conservative leader Hubert De Ronceray, one of seven prominent politicians forced into exile in a government crackdown in January, said Avril's resignation was "an encouraging first step."

"But Prosper Avril is still a public danger if he stays in Haiti," said De Ronceray, speaking by telephone from Miami.

Another exile, Louis Roy, principal author of Haiti's 1987 constitution, said from the Caribbean island of Martinique that the Haitian people had "risen and overthrown a regime which had tried to destroy its desire for a democratic form of government."

But, he added: "It remains to be seen whether the army deserves the confidence which has been placed in it."

In Washington, the Bush administration welcomed the promise by Haiti's new leader to set the stage for natonal elections by turning over power within 72 hours.

The statement said the United States long has called for improved human rights in Haiti and added: "We obviously hope the latest developments contribute to a realization of this objective."

'Faithful few' make up civil rights' re-enactment

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The re-enactment of the historic, 50-mile march from Selma to Montgomery ended Saturday with 3,000 people gathered in the shadow of Alabama's Capitol to rekindle the spirit of the civil rights movement.

The turnout paled in comparison to the 1965 march, when 25,000 people gathered in "the Cradle of the Confederacy" to demand voting rights, but organizers hoped the 1990 trek would herald a new age of activism.

"It would be a shameful waste if we marched all the way from Selma to Montgomery to go home and sit on our seats of apathy," said Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christan Leadership Conference, who led the week-long, commemorative march.

At the Capitol, where the Confederate battle flag still flies over the white dome despite blacks' protests, Jesse Jackson told the chanting crowd their message must be taken to the nation's capital.

"On to Washington for jobs," Jackson exhorted the gathering. "On to Washington for peace dividends. Keep hope alive."

Coretta Scott King encouraged the mostly black crowd to keep fighting for racial equality.

"These are the faithful few, and God always uses those who are willing to be used," said the widow of slain civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., whose first church is a block down the street from the Capitol steps.

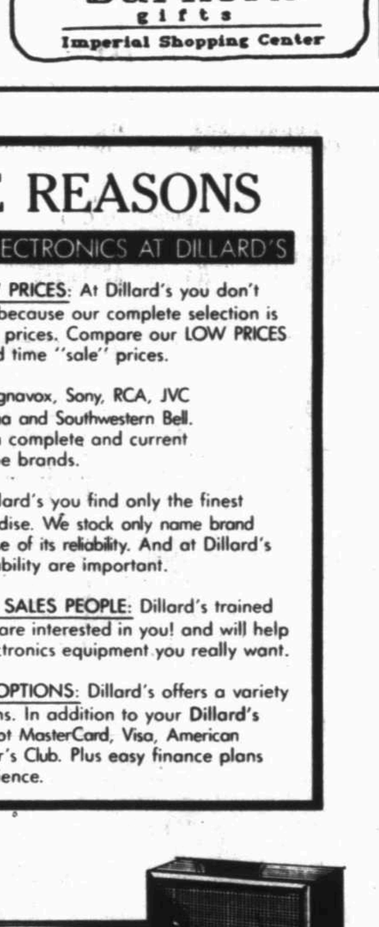

Mrs. King, Jackson and others said blacks had made progress but much remained to be done. Lowery called for corporations "to engage in equitable reinvestment in our communities."

Jackson later went to meet with former Gov. George C. Wallace at his home. Wallace, who opposed the 1965 march, later won widespread black support that helped win his fourth and final term as governor in 1982.

"If the governor can come from where he was 20 years ago and speak of a moral society where there is economic justice, there is hope for blacks and whites alike," Jackson told reporters after the meeting.

The rally capped a week in which about 150 marchers crossed the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma and headed east along a rural highway to Montgomery, covering the same path activists took in 1965.

The march 25 years ago came two weeks after "Bloody Sunday," where white authorities routed black marchers with clubs and tear gas as they tried to cross the bridge over the Alabama River.

Hazelwood defense engaged in high-dollar battle

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — On the brink of its finale, the trial of Joseph Hazelwood has become a battle of expert, high-priced witnesses trying to unravel the tangled tale of the Exxon Valdez skipper's seamanship.

Prosecutors spent more than $140,000 to hire five experts. The defense will spend perhaps half that on more experts to give opinions on how well the skipper performed his job.

"You can't build a case totally on experts," said Thomas Russo, one of Hazelwood's lawyers. "But in any case where the issues are not within common knowledge, experts are useful to explain things to jurors."

Russo said the defense has tried to use experts less likely to confuse or intimidate jurors: sea captains who sail, a naval architect who builds ships and a computer expert who had never before testified in a court.

Prosecutors appeared to go for impressive credentials.

Their toxicologist, Dr. Richard Prouty, spent more than an hour reciting his qualifications before venturing the opinion that Hazelwood probably was drunk on the crucial night. He said he has testified more than 1,000 times.

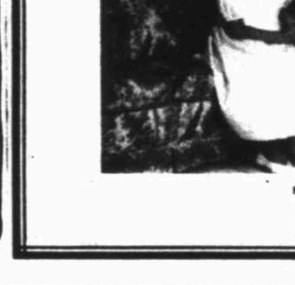

The case, with its discussions of rudder angles and nautical miles, fathom markers and buoyancy, soundings and engine thrust, has not been easy for a non-mariner to understand.

For weeks, the courtroom of Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone has been littered with huge nautical charts and diagrams tracking the Exxon Valdez on its disastrous voyage.

Was it an accident or a crime? That question underlies five weeks of testimony. The jury's answer is likely to have repercussions beyond the fairly mild charges against Hazelwood. Civil suits abound and federal criminal charges have been filed against Exxon.

On the crucial question of whether Hazelwood was drunk, the state presented Prouty who "calculated backwards" to conclude Hazelwood probably was drunk.

He conceded there is dispute on his technique among scientists.

New Veterans Department head faces tough times

An AP News Analysis

By ROBERT GREENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's starting to sprinkle on the election-year parade that last March brought the nation's 27 million veterans more access to the White House.

Not that the marching and music will stop anytime soon.

The Bush administration's 1991 budget proposal asks for a record $31 billion for the Veterans Affairs Department, including an unheard of $12.3 billion for health programs.

The proposal is "the best VA medical care budget request by a president in more than a decade," says Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., chairman of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee.

And VA Secretary Edward J. Derwinski has raised the hopes of the 3.1 million Vietnam War veterans by promising he will personally settle the Agent Orange question this spring. Derwinski, more than any VA official in the recent past, has opened his doors to that group of veterans, says Paul S. Egan of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

But the same members of Congress who praised the budget have already begun tinkering with it and refused to go along with a review of the VA medical system that could mean closing hospitals or clinics. Veterans groups demanded $1.1 billion more and are attacking VA's effort to review the benefits system.

Derwinski is the first VA secretary of the United States. Until March 15, 1989, VA stood for the Veterans Administration — just another government agency, albeit a massive one. Now it is a department, giving Derwinski full Cabinet status.

VA helps educate, house, treat and bury the people who served the country in war or peace. It operates the largest health-care system in the free world and is the fifth-largest life insurance provider in the country.

Second in size only to the nation's veterans-producing machine, the Pentagon, the VA employs about a quarter of a million people. VA's 172 medical centers and its other facilities are choice cuts of meat in the federal pork barrel.

Since they make up well over a tenth of the U.S. population and are all of voting age, veterans are a political force, especially when politicians wrap themselves in the flag as they did in 1988.

That is why it was easy for President Reagan to sign the Department of Veterans Affairs Act in October of that year even though, as an avowed enemy of big government, he had tried to strip the Education and Energy departments of Cabinet status.

"Given the broad political support which already exists for the VA and its programs, the gain from elevation to a Cabinet department would be at the margin," the independent National Academy of Public Administration told Congress in 1988.

That assessment is also why Derwinski, a wily former congressman from Chicago, knows that hard times lie ahead.

Derwinski must decide what to do about the 9 million or so World War II veterans who are getting older — and many of them sicker and poorer. Large numbers have moved South and West away from existing facilities in the East and Midwest.

He must also decide how much special attention to give to the nearly half-million Vietnam-era veterans who have continuing post-combat trauma or to countless others who say they have cancer or other ailments caused by exposure to Agent Orange.

Finally, Derwinski must develop and maintain good working relationships with Congress, where he served 12 terms before joining the Reagan State Department, and with the veterans' lobby.

Derwinski's considerable reserve of goodwill could rise or drop depending on what he does about Agent Orange this spring.

"The advice is so terribly conflicting," Derwinski said. "There's no consensus out there."

He gave strong hints starting last May he would give veterans the benefit of the doubt and award them compensation payments on Agent Orange claims — adding perhaps $36 million to the VA's cost of doing business.

State Department issues Haiti advisory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department on Saturday advised U.S. citizens to avoid travel to Haiti because of political unrest there.

"In view of continuing civil disturbances in various parts of Haiti, the Department of State recommends that American citizens defer all non-essential travel to Haiti at this time," a department statement said.

The department said that although there did not appear to be any threat to Americans in Haiti, U.S. citizens should exercise caution and avoid crowds and areas affected by current unrest.

U.S. welcomes promise of Haitian election

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Saturday welcomed a promise by Haiti's new leader to set the stage for national elections by turning over power within 72 hours.

A U.S. statement called on the country's armed forces to join with political and business leaders in a spirit of reconciliation.

Stressing the longtime U.S. call for human rights in Haiti, the statement said, "We obviously hope the latest developments contribute to a realization of this objective."

The administration has had mixed feelings about the regime of Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril in Haiti, finding it responsive to U.S. human rights demands but unconvincing about its commitment to free elections.

There is no U.S. economic or military aid to Haiti except for a small program to combat narcotics. A $10 million emergency food program for what is one of the poorest and most densely populated countries in the Western Hemisphere was not continued this year.

However, $41.4 million for agricultural development and other humanitarian assistance is being distributed through voluntary agencies.

Shortly after Avril yielded power to Maj. Gen. Herard Abraham the State Department responded by saying it welcomed the intermim leader's promise to give way to a panel led by the Supreme Court president in order to arrange elections.

This step by Arabahm "is in conformity with the spirit of the constitution," said Adam Shub, State Department spokesman.

The department, in its human rights report last month, linked the Haitian army to human rights abuses in rural areas and said armed bands, some possibly traced to remnants of the feared Tonton Macoute militia of the Duvalier years, had committed a number of murders.

And yet, the report said: "Human rights abuses perpetrated or directed by government leaders were the hallmark of previous Haitian regimes. The Avril government avoided the egregious violations — massacres and politically motivated killings — characteristic of its predecessors."

The Avril government is the fifth in Haiti since Jean-Claude Duvalier fled for France in February 1986 aboard a U.S. Air Force transport. His family's 29-year rule was replaced by a national governing council.

NATION IN BRIEF

Demonstrators enter consulate

MIAMI (AP) — Several dozen demonstrators entered the Haitian consulate in Miami on Saturday, demanding a say in naming a new consul following the resignation of Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril as the nation's military ruler.

About 40 or 50 protesters, most of them Haitian exiles, climbed the walls outside the downtown consulate and entered the building.

The group occupied the offices for several hours until an armed FBI unit and State Department officials arrived and talked them into surrendering

The FBI decided against making arrests immediately "because of the emotions involved," an FBI spokesman said.

Union called to table

Federal mediators called the striking Greyhound employees' union to Washington and may call the company to a separate meeting to get both sides back to the bargaining table as the strike enters its third week.

Strikers continued picketing Saturday and Greyhound reported some violence in a nationwide series of memorials Friday for a driver killed on a California picket line.

The Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, which represents 6,300 drivers and more than 3,000 office and maintenance workers, went on strike against the only nationwide bus company March 2, after failing to agree with the company on a new, three-year contract.

"The mediator is going to meet with the union Monday on a fact-finding mission," said company spokesman George Gravely. "After that happens, they might contact us. But there's been no formal date for a meeting."

Soviets to cut testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union will cut back on underground nuclear testing and move the site for the explosions from Asia to an island inside the Arctic Circle, says a report published Saturday.

The move to the Arctic location will force the Soviets to conduct fewer tests and will hamper development of weapons that could be used against the United States, The Washington Post reported.

The decision came after strong political pressure inside the Soviet Union, The Post said, citing unidentified Soviet and U.S. sources.

U.S. officials were quoted as saying the Soviet announcement came as no surprise and added that it still may not curb pressure within that country for a complete moratorium on underground nuclear explosions.

Take off delayed

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Bad weather over Texas on Saturday forced officials to postpone the return of the space shuttle Atlantis to Florida.

A Boeing 747 jet, with the shuttle riding piggyback, was scheduled instead to take off on Sunday, said Nancy Lovato, spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Dryden Flight Research Facility here.

U.S. holdings up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States led the way last year as central banks around the world raised their holdings of foreign currency to a record $768 billion, the International Monetary Fund reported.

The holdings reflect efforts by industrialized countries to influence trade through international exchange rates and by Third World countries to stockpile cash for emergencies. Last year's worldwide level was $726 billion.

The largest increase was in total U.S. holdings of foreign currency, especially West German marks and Japanese yen, IMF said in its March compilation of international financial statistics.

New AIDS drug linked to deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Six AIDS patients taking the experimental drug DDI have died of pancreatitis, a toxic side effect attributed to the drug, according to a report in Saturday's Los Angeles Times.

The deaths have occurred in the five months since the federal government made DDI — dideoxyinosine — available on a limited basis, the paper reported.

Five of the dead were among the 8,000 patients receiving DDI as part of an expanded access program through the Food and Drug Administration, according to the drug's manufacturer, Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. The sixth was one of 700 patients taking part in government-sponsored trials of the drug, the Times said.

S&L's still losing millions daily

Attempts to stabilize industry vex Fed, Bush administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Question: To which administration, President Bush's or Ronald Reagan's, do the following three statements apply?

—More than 500 insolvent or near-insolvent S&Ls are open for business, losing an estimated $14 million a day.

—Beleaguered regulators hint that the administration's bailout probably won't be enough.

—What was thought to be a crisis resolved is once again becoming a political liability for the president.

The answer is: both. The savings and loan crisis is back.

That was the situation in the waning days of the Reagan administration in 1988 and that is the situation now, six months after President Bush signed historic S&L legislation in a Rose Garden ceremony declaring, "These problems will never happen again."

Two years before, President Reagan had expressed similar sentiments when signing a $10.8 billion, industry-funded rescue of the S&L insurance fund. As it turned out, that fell far short of the amount needed. Now it's becoming clear the $50 billion provided by the Bush bill won't be enough either.

Bush got high marks from thrift executives, editorial writers and even Democrats for offering a comprehensive plan to handle the S&L crisis within three weeks of taking office, and pushing it through Congress by August.

But, so far, he is getting low marks on execution of the plan.

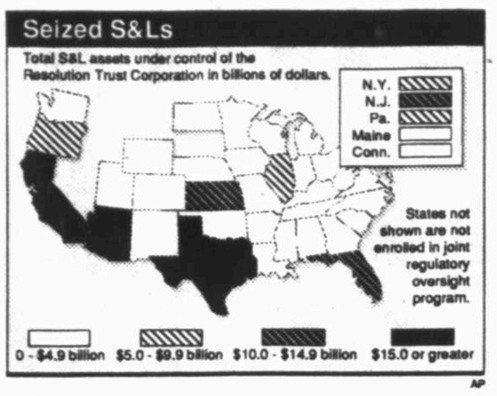

Congressional Democrats, who had been somewhat muted because of the involvement of four Democratic senators in the Lincoln S&L scandal, are criticizing the administration more forcefully.

"Savings and loans have re-emerged as a political problem. The Democrats are back and the name of the game is assessing blame," said Kenneth A. Guenther, executive vice president of the Independent Bankers Association of America.

The Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC), a new bailout agency run by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., has moved swiftly to put failed thrifts under government management. By the end of February it had seized 382 institutions, with $192 billion in assets.

But it has moved slowly in disposing of the institutions, selling or closing only 49, mostly smaller thrifts. It has sold or collected on about $25 billion in assets, but it's had a tough time getting rid of "bad" assets: problem real estate and sour loans.

"What we have is a bunch of rotting S&Ls out there and a bunch of assets being managed in a passive way," said Bert Ely, a financial analyst in Alexandria, Va.

"The longer the delay, the more costly the cleanup," he said.

In the meantime, analysts, congressional critics and bailout officials themselves offer at least three reasons for the slow start.

First, the sheer size of the task is unprecedented. Never before has the government tried to sell so much to so many.

Second, the cumbersome structure of the bailout apparatus, designed to ensure the taxpayer's money is spent properly, is prone to delay.

An existing agency, the FDIC, supervises the RTC's work. But another layer of administration, the RTC Oversight Board, controls the purse strings and policy of the bailout. It's led by the Treasury secretary and includes the Housing secretary and Federal Reserve Board chairman.

A third factor in the RTC's lackluster start was uncertainty over bailout funding. Beyond the $50 billion provided by last summer's bill, RTC officials temporarily need much more money until they can sell the assets of the failed S&Ls.

The administration did not approve such "working capital" until late February, only weeks before the RTC would have had to stop work for lack of cash.

Another funding crisis looms. Private analysts complain the government, even with working capital, must spend far more than $50 billion to cover failed thrifts' losses.

First-of-decade nuclear detonation rocks Nevada

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The first U.S. nuclear weapon test of 1990 rocked the Nevada desert Saturday, the same day a published report said the Soviet Union is phasing out testing on its mainland because of citizens' safety concerns.

The Washington Post reported that the Soviet Union would move its nuclear testing site from south-central Asia to an island inside the Arctic Circle. It cited sources it did not name in the Soviet Union and the United States.

The tested weapon, code-named Metropolis, was detonated at the bottom of a 1,500-foot shaft at Yucca Flat at the remote Nevada Test Site. The device was listed as having an explosive force of 20,000 to 150,000 tons of TNT, but was believed to be near the upper limits because of warnings issued in advance by the Energy Department.

The test registered 5.1 on the Richter scale at the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., according to spokesman John Minsch.

Seismic equipment atop Fitzgerald's Hotel and Casino in downtown Las Vegas, 85 miles away, registered slight motion from the blast.

"There's definitely ground motion," DOE spokesman Chris West said.

He said 11 anti-nuclear weapons protesters turned out at a gate about 30 miles from ground zero shortly before the 8 a.m. detonation.

Metropolis was the 700th announced test conducted in Nevada since testing began at the desert site in 1951. The last test was Dec. 20.

AP Laserphoto

After hearing of the ouster of Haitian President Prosper Avril, hundreds of youths run through the streets of Port-Au-Prince Saturday in celebration. Many carried tree branches, a traditional Haitian symbol that represents uprooting. Avril was forced from power in a popular uprising by opponents who feared he wouldn't allow fair and free elections.

WORLD

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — When Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril came to power in 1988, he talked of free elections and leading the country toward democracy.

Saturday, it was Avril himself who was on the move. He was forced from power in a popular uprising by opponents who feared he would not make good on his promises.

A week before the September 1988 coup that brought him to power, thugs armed with machetes, guns and spears stormed the Roman Catholic church of the Rev. Bertrand Aristide, a popular government critic. They massacred a dozen people there.

The bloodbath split the military, and lower-ranking soldiers revolted against Lt. Henri Namphy. He was the army chief of staff who took charge of the government after dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to France in February 1986 during another mass uprising.

The 1988 soldiers' rebellion was apparently not orchestrated by Avril, then army chief of staff. But it was Avril who finally came out on top, declaring himself president.

He quickly went on national television and promised the impoverished Caribbean nation democratic reform and free presidential elections. Haitians, accustomed to lies and brutality from their leaders, were skeptical.

Avril, a 52-year-old with a quiet demeanor, never seemed comfortable in the public eye. His wife, Marie-Ange, is a captain in the army and a nurse. The couple has four children.

Avril had been in the background as a financial adviser to Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, Jean-Claude's father who founded the 29-year Duvalier family regime. Avril later advised Duvalier's son when he replaced his father.

Because of that close relationship, critics called Avril a "bagman" who reputedly became a millionaire and negotiated military weapons and equipment sales abroad.

Meanwhile, the Duvaliers created an authoritarian regime using the dreaded forces known as Tonton Macoutes to keep opponents in check.

Despite his earlier association with the Duvaliers, Avril won some public support a few months into his rule. He held public meetings with civilian political leaders, talked with union leaders and restored most of the 1987 constitution that Namphy suspended.

He also approved the formation of an independent electoral council to organize and oversee this year's general elections.

Although there was skepticism, many thought it was better to work with Avril than against him.

The U.S. government has had mixed feelings about Avril's regime. In its human rights report, it said the Haitian army was linked to human rights abuses in rural areas but that it "avoided the egregious violations, massacres and politically motivated killings — characteristic of his predecessors."

Nevertheless, in March 1989, it said the resumption of $60 million in aid must be tied to democratic reform and cooperation in fighting drug trafficking. Immediately afterward, Avril's government accused four high-ranking army officers of drug trafficking and discharged them.

But Avril started looking more like a dictator.

After the unsolved killing of an army colonel, his government imposed a state of siege on Jan. 20, jailed 50 opposition activists and sent seven political leaders into exile abroad. Many detainees were reportedly beaten or tortured.

Chile's Pinochet calls for unity as he yields power to successor

Aylwin

Pinochet was snubbed by 10 foreign leaders, who delayed their arrivals for today's inaugural ceremonies until he hands over power to Patricio Aylwin. Only three heads of state arrived during the day Saturday.

In a taped goodbye speech broadcast nationally on television and radio Saturday night, Pinochet called on his countrymen "to unite their forces to those of the new authorities."

"The president who is assuming power has the right to expect, from each of us, a responsible attitude," he said, standing erect in a white dress army uniform with the presidential sash.

"I want the best for my country, and I always will be ready to serve her," Pinochet said.

The 74-year-old general plans to stay on as commander of the 60,000-man army, despite requests by Aylwin that he fully retire.

In 1988, a proposal to extend Pinochet's rule to 1997 was defeated in a referendum, and the loss forced him to call elections last December.

Aylwin, a 71-year-old Christian Democrat backed by a coalition of 17 centrist and leftist parties, won 55 percent of the vote. His closest challenger, a former Pinochet finance minister, won 29 percent.

Pinochet feted visiting dignitaries in the presidential palace Saturday afternoon.

Those who arrived Saturday included presidents Alberto LaCalle of Uruguay, Carlos Menem of Argentina and Jose Sarney of Brazil. Their visits ended years of international political isolation for the general.

Among those delaying their arrivals were presidents Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela, Alan Garcia of Peru, Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua, and prime ministers Giulio Andreotti of Italy and Felipe Gonzalez of Spain.

Chilean Foreign Minister Hernan Errazuriz criticized their decisions, saying they displayed "a lack of education."

Vice President Dan Quayle arrived late Saturday from Venezuela and planned to meet with Pinochet at his residence in a Santiago neighborhood this morning. Speaking at the airport, Quayle said the United States expects Pinochet to honor "a new era" of civilian rule.

Traveling with Quayle was Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., despised by Pinochet and his supporters for his outspoken criticism of human rights abuses under the military government. Kennedy sponsored a 1976 ban, still in effect, on U.S. arms sales to Chile.

Military President Augusto Pinochet of Chile waves at his troops prior to the start of ceremonies at Santiago airport Saturday. Gen. Pinochet was preparing to greet several Latin American presidents arriving for today's inauguration of Patricio Aylwin as president, which ends 16½ years of military rule.

Except for a papal tour in 1987, the last visit by a head of state to Chile was that of Brazilian military President Joao Figueiredo in 1982. Pinochet's last attempt to go abroad, in 1980, had to be aborted when then-Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos withdrew an invitiation even though Pinochet already was in mid-flight.

Pinochet left the three-story presidential palace late Saturday afternoon for the last time by the front door, to both cheers and boos.

"Viva Pinochet!" shouted supporters.

Others cried "Murderer!" and yelled obscenities as he climbed into his armored Mercedes Benz and drove off with his customary, heavily armed military escort.

As he took his leave after ruling for 16½ years, some palace functionaires wept. But he gently chided them: "No one has died here." He called on everyone "to keep working."

About 40 relatives and sympathizers of leftists jailed on terrorism charges staged a protest inside Santiago's downtown cathedral on Saturday, occupying the pews. But the protest was peaceful and they vacated the building without incident after about seven hours.

A spokesman for the protesters, Mirnas Rivas, told reporters: "There can be no transition to democracy in Chile if political prisoners aren't freed." Aylwin has said he favors freeing prisoners of conscience but not those convicted of guerrilla or terrorist actions.

The military government says all of those now jailed are charged or convicted in connection with guerrilla activity.

Pinochet took power in September 1973 in a bloody coup that toppled the elected government of President Salvador Allende, an avowed Marxist, during a period of political and economic disorder.

He suspended congress and launched a harsh crackdown on leftists and dissidents that earned his government a worldwide reputation for systematic human rights abuses.

Police said at least 11 small bombs went off across Santiago during a 45-minute period late Friday night. No one claimed responsibility for the blasts.

In one of the explosions, in an underground tool shed at a city park near the downtown U.S. Consulate, one worker was injured in the face and hands, police said.

Other bombs went off at or near several government offices, a Mormon chapel, a courthouse, an army colonel's house and two businesses. Aylwin characterized the bombings as "strange."

He spoke to reporters in front of his home before leaving for Valparaiso, where he planned to spend the night.

Widow of journalist portrayed in movie 'Missing' returns to Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The widow of an American whose arrest and slaying in a 1973 military coup inspired the movie "Missing" returned to Chile Saturday to witness the end of Gen. Augusto Pinochet's 16½-year rule.

"It's not the Chile of my nightmares," said Joyce Horman, who was invited by the elected government that takes power today.

Mrs. Horman told The Associated Press in an interview that she no longer expects any new information on her husband's death.

"I think it would be a very special circumstance for anyone with direct knowledge to step forward at this time," she said. But she added: "I haven't ruled it out."

"But the most important thing is that democracy is established for Chileans, that there is respect for human rights."

Her husband, Charles Horman, then 29, was among thousands of people arrested when Pinochet seized power in a bloody coup on Sept. 11, 1973. It toppled the elected government of President Salvador Allende, a Marxist. Horman, a free-lance journalist, and his wife were living in Chile at the time.

According to the family and testimony collected by human rights groups, Horman was among many suspected dissidents held and executed at Santiago's National Stadium. The military government has denied the allegations.

Horman's father, Ed Horman, pressed for years for details on his son's death and wrote a book about his efforts. The book provided the story for the movie "Missing," starring Sissy Spacek as Horman's wife and Jack Lemmon as the father.

The movie is officially banned in Chile.

"Maybe now they'll show it," Mrs. Horman said.

In the AP interview, she said she found the country much more open and friendly than it was when she and her father-in-law were ushered out by U.S. diplomats and military authorities on Oct. 18, 1973.

"The air feels lighter. It's a different place," she said. "It's not the place I remember."

Both Mrs. Horman, a 45-year-old computer specialist, and Horman's father live in New York City. Horman's father is not attending the inauguration.

Monday, the National Stadium will be the site of a massive celebration to mark the end of Pinochet's rule.

WATER QUALITY NOTICE

Water Quality is a growing problem in West Texas. Municipal Water is, for the most part, safe to drink, however it is extremely hard and it often tastes bad.
Many area water treating companys are using less than desirable tactics to sell their systems.
This in turn gives the water quality industry a bad image and makes it hard for honest, reputable dealers to represent their products in a straight forward and dignified manner.
We at Jack Holt and Associates/Best Water Products have been helping West Texas people solve their water problems for the past 15 years.
We don't sell bells & whistles, use scare tactics or offer free gifts.
We simply sell quality water treating products at the lowest possible prices and service what we sell. If you are interested in improving water quality for your family or business please give us a call for a free estimate at 1-800-342-5419 or 332-8939. Thank You. Jack Holt & Associates - Odessa.

Elect

MATTHEW BLAIR

County Court at Law #1
March 13, 1990

Pd. Ad Paid for by "Elect Matt Blair Campaign," Dana Engelstad, Treasurer • 500 W. Texas, Suite 1000 • Midland, TX 79701

AN OPEN LETTER FROM MATT BLAIR

My Fellow Citizen;

Nine months ago I decided to seek election to the judgeship of the County Court at Law # 1. I announced my intention in October and took to the streets to collect over 500 names on a nominating petition. I was unopposed until two days before the filing deadline in January. Although recent attempts have been made to discredit me, I have faith that each of you will see these episodes for what they really are. I'm not perfect. All I can promise is that I will do the best job that I can do.
For over two years I have been the Title IV-D Court Master for the Seventh Administrative Judicial Region, covering Midland and seven other counties. I am a judge in everything but name. I hear the evidence, make the decision and pronounce judgment. There were 859 cases decided in my court last year, nearly twice what was decided in the County Court at Law. I have acquired a great deal of actual judicial experience which will serve me well.
I am seeking this position for what it is and not in hopes that the legislature will make it into a more powerful or larger court. I want the opportunity to work with the cases which come before this court such as juvenile matters, family cases and criminal cases. I want to put in place new ideas.
Being tough on crime is only part of the answer. As our society becomes more complex I want to ensure that this Court is on the leading edge of efficiency. I want to see speedier civil and criminal trials, more "Alternative Dispute Resolution", less in the way of frivolous lawsuits and less waste of a jurors time and the taxpayer's money.
In the more that 10 years since I was licensed to practice law I have handled legal matters ranging from multi-million dollar commercial transactions to protecting a battered wife. I have represented plaintiffs and defendants in court. Many times I have not charged for services to people that need them. I have been both lawyer for or participant in oil & gas, farming, and service businesses. As an independent attorney, I see it all and I do it all. I have no partners to answer to either now or in the future. I believe that our system of justice, in particular this court, is for everyone and not just the select and powerful few.
In our system of selecting our government we must often decide whom to chose on the basis of less information than we would like. A candidate is often limited by time and money in getting his message across. My hope in publishing this letter is that each of you that do not know me already, will gain some insight into who I am and why I want this job.
More than anything, I want to use what intellect and energy the Lord gave me to make Midland a better place. I am 34 years old. My future, and that of my family is here in Midland. I am in the middle of my career and feel that now is the proper time to be of service to my community in this capacity.
To the many that have already voted for me, thank you. For those that have yet to vote or decide, I humbly ask for your consideration and support on Tuesday.

Sincerely,

Matt Blair

WORLD IN BRIEF

Soviet citizens protest in 3 cities

MOSCOW (AP) — Reformers who occupied a museum in the Georgian city of Tbilisi Saturday were among protesters in at least three cities who demanded change, according to activists and news reports.

In the Ukrainian city of Kiev, an activist said a crowd estimated at 50,000 gathered for a pro-democracy election rally.

In Nazran, thousands of Ingushi residents held their fifth day of protests, calling for restoration of their autonomous republic in their southern homeland, Tass reported.

Hundreds of thousands of Ingushi residents were deported from their homes in the Caucasus in 1944 after dictator Josef Stalin accused them of collaboration with the Nazis.

Ingushi protesters insisted their demand for restoration of their homeland did not mean they intended to oust the Ossetians now living in the area, Tass said. There is a Chechen-Ingushi republic, but much of the Ingushi land was allocated to what is now Northern Ossetia when the natives were deported.

In Tbilisi, a crowd gathered at the Museum of Marxism-Leninism and then occupied it to demand office space for non-Communist political groups. Authorities agreed, and the incident ended peacefully.

The crowd was estimated by police at 1,200 and by activists at 3,000.

Mexican opposition meets

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — About 2,000 opposition protesters, led by a dozen party leaders, marched in the Pacific coast resort of Acapulco Saturday to demand release of people jailed or disappeared during post-election violence.

Protesters from the leftist Democratic Revolutionary Party called for the impeachment of Guerrero state Gov. Francisco Ruiz Massieu, whom they blame for the kidnapping, illegal arrest or disappearance of an undetermined number of party members.

"Get him out. Get him out," yelled party supporters at a rally following the hour-long march down Acapulco's main street.

The march blocked downtown streets but did not pass the strip beachfront hotels. Police detoured traffic at some points along the coast road, but were not noticeable during most of the march.

No violence was reported.

Ivory Coast activist arrested

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — An opposition leader was placed under house arrest Saturday after demanding multiparty democracy and expressing support for demonstrators protesting austerity measures.

Soldiers surrounded Laurent Gbagbo's house and prevented reporters from entering.

Gbagbo at first was allowed to make telephone calls. He said he was ordered to remain at the house after he returned from the French Embassy, where he was refused a visa to travel to France to participate in a television debate on African economies.

But several hours after police arrived at his home, telephone callers received an announcement saying Gbago's number was no longer in service.

Gbagbo has been under house arrest twice in the past two years. He is a history professor who founded the unauthorized Ivorian Popular Front eight years ago and has been calling for multiparty elections.

Delay of elections sought

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Major opposition parties Saturday demanded a delay in May elections to allow more time to challenge the post-revolutionary leadership, which has been attacked for its ties to the old regime.

The demand represents the first time the fractious opposition has openly pooled its forces to stop the National Salvation Front's bid for long-term power.

Graham warns Germans against 'hedonism' as communism wanes

WEST BERLIN (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham took his crusade to the open Berlin Wall Saturday and appealed to East Germans he sees as spiritually adrift following the demise of Communist ideology.

In a one-hour sermon at the Wall, the U.S. evangelist warned of materialism and the lure of "hedonism and self-gratification" at "this time of rejoicing." He was referring to democratic changes sweeping the Communist world.

"The people I've met in Germany are living in both hope and fear," Graham told a rain-soaked rally of about 10,000 people on a vast, grassy square in front of the imposing Reichstag, the parliament of Germany prior to World War II.

He noted that while many Germans hope for renewed national unity and prosperity, worries about the future abound.

"Many people feel insecure. The old roots are shaking everywhere," Graham said.

Hartmut Stepp, a West German Evangelical Church leader from Stuttgart, said Graham's ministry was sought since "a spiritual, ideological vacuum exists because of this social upheaval."

At least half of the crowd was East German, judging from a show of hands sought by one speaker at the rally.

Horst Arold, 50, said he had traveled 175 miles from Weimar, East Germany, for an event that would have been inaccessible only five months ago. East Germany's old Communist regime flung open the Berlin Wall in November, under pressure from mass protests for democratic reform.

"This is fantastic," Arold said. "It's the first time in years that we can take part in something like this."

Rally organizers set up a giant video screen and public address loudspeakers on the Reichstag steps, where Graham spoke under a portico inscription that reads "To the German people."

However, turnout was only a fraction of what organizers had expected.

U.S. Rev. Billy Graham preaches in front of the pre-World War II German Parliament building, "Der Reichstag," in West Berlin Saturday.

Graham spoke a week before East Germany's first free parliamentary elections on March 18, but said he had no political message.

The East German Christian Democratic Union, which is backed by its West German counterpart led by Chancellor Helmut Kohl, has emphasized its religious roots in the campaign.

Graham last held rallies in Berlin in 1960, the year before the wall went up. He has conducted eight previous evangelical crusades in Germany, the first in 1954 when much of the nation still lay in ruins from World War II.

Nicaraguan assembly OKs amnesty law

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The National Assembly Saturday pardoned both the Contra rebels and Sandinista government workers accused of wrongdoing in a sweeping amnesty law of "national reconciliation."

"We must avoid political vengeance and block any moves by hotheads in the National Opposition Union," said Carlos Nunez, president of the legislature. He was apparently referring to possible reprisals against Sandinista government workers after the opposition takes over April 25.

The amnesty was proposed by leftist President Daniel Ortega after he lost the Feb. 25 presidential elections to Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, who headed the National Opposition Union's ticket.

The leftist Sandinistas control the National Assembly, and lawmakers passed the law on a vote of 72 in favor with six abstentions. Only 78 of the 96 members were present.

The law absolves Nicaraguans, residents or not in the country, who commit crimes against public order and against internal security of the state."

The U.S.-backed Contras, who have fought to overthrow the Sandinistas, have resisted calls from the outgoing and incoming governments to lay down their weapons. About 11,000 Contras are based in border camps in Honduras.

The "Law of General Amnesty and Reconciliation" was introduced Thursday, replacing an earlier version that prompted significant opposition. The wording of the new version was changed to make the amnesty more sweeping.

The amnesty covers public employees who "presumably committed crimes of failing in their duties, fraud or theft and have not been prosecuted" between July 1979, when the Sandinistas came to power, and the day the law takes effect.

Legislators said it will take effect between March 20-23 when it is published in the official government gazette.

Edwin Illescas of the Democratic Conservative Party said he supported the law because he recognized that by holding elections, the Sandinistas were working for peace. He said similar laws had been passed in Argentina, Uruguay and Chile and hastened the return of democracy.

The law says it is designed "to contribute to the national reconciliation of all the sectors of society with the goal of peace and tranquillity to Nicaraguan families."

"The union of Nicaraguan families needs the pardon and to forget those deeds that brought anxiety and restlessness in the nation."

"The law is not to protect criminals" but benefits "people who have worked more than 10 years protecting the revolution," Nunez said.

The Sandinistas hold 61 seats in the present legislature to 35 for the opposition. The 14-party National Opposition Union will hold a majority in the new legislature, with the Sandinistas remaining the largest single party.

SUNGLASS LABELING

The Food and Drug Administration and the Sunglass Association of America are teaming to introduce, over the next few years, a voluntary program for labeling sunglasses. The new harmful (UV) light exposure has been linked to cataract development, temporary eye injury and discomfort, and permanent retinal damage. In the future, most sunglasses will carry one of three labels: A "cosmetic" lens blocks at least 70 percent of ultravilet B (UVB) rays and 20 percent of ultraviolet A (UVA) rays, while a "general purpose" lens blocks 95 percent of UVB rays and 60 percent of UVA rays. "Special purpose" lenses block 94 percent of UVB rays and 60 percent of UVA rays. Consumers should use the new labeling to select the sunglasses that best meet their needs.

TEXAS STATE OPTICAL, Midland Park Mall, is available to discuss your visual condition, explain and recommend the corrective or protective action you should take. Your eyes should be protected whether at work or play. I am more than happy to assist you in understanding how to best accomplish that worthwhile goal. Tel. 699-1300 or 697-7963. Iraq sentences British paper's writer to death

LONDON (AP) — An Iraqi court sentenced a journalist with a British newspaper to death on espionage charges Saturday and ordered a British nurse jailed for 15 years for allegedly helping him, the Foreign Office said.

Under Iraqi law, no appeal is allowed.

Bazoft

The journalist, Iranian-born Farzad Bazoft of London's weekly Observer newspaper, was arrested in September while investigating reports of an explosion at an Iraqi military complex. The nurse, Daphne Parish, was accused of helping Bazoft by driving him to the plant.

Bazoft, 31, and Mrs. Parish, 52, were tried by a revolutionary court on charges of committing hostile acts against Iraq. The proceedings, which were not open to the public, began Thursday, then were adjourned after five hours. They resumed for 35 minutes Saturday, the Foreign Office said.

The defendants were assigned Iraqi lawyers, but a British diplomat was allowed to attend the trial.

There was no indication when the execution of Bazoft, a resident of Britain for 15 years, might be carried out.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was "horrified by the severity of the sentence" against Bazoft, a Foreign Office spokesman said. He said she will appeal to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for clemency on humanitarian grounds.

Junior Foreign Office minister William Waldegrave said the government was concentrating on "the immediate next few hours," to get the death sentence lifted.

He said the government was considering sending a top-level emissary to Baghdad. "We rule out nothing," he said.

The sentences, if carried out, "are bound to have a far-reaching effect on relations between the two countries," Waldegrave added.

Iraq's ambassador to Britain, Dr. Azmi Al-Salihi, told Independent Television News he passed Mrs. Thatcher's plea for clemency to Baghdad.

Bazoft, an Iranian exile, has lived in Britain since 1975 and travels on British documents. Mrs. Parish lives in Baghdad, where she is a senior nursing administrator.

Household chores agency's specialty

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Wednesdays are happy days around Ester and Harmon Scurlark's home in east Midland.

Once a week, the elderly couple welcomes Citywide Community Services Inc. workers into a home which has become too much of a burden for the two to keep clean and tidy.

"I'm taking those heart pills and I can't work," Scurlark, 74, a retired construction worker, said last week. "I can't help myself."

And Mrs. Scurlark, 82, who walks with the aid of a wooden cane, said she sees daily housework as a chore too large to tackle on her own.

Citywide Community Services Inc., which performs home and yard work for about 105 elderly or handicapped people in Midland, began helping the Scularks not long after the agency's birth in 1985.

With their children living far away, living on their own hasn't been easy for the two, Scurlark said.

"Until Citywide came along, we couldn't do what needed to be done," he said. "Without them, I don't know what we would do."

Citywide started after Midland vocational nurse Helen Johnson saw one too many of her elderly, handicapped or frail patients living in squalid conditions over which they had little control.

"There wasn't anybody who would come in and clean the living areas," said Joe Dominey, Citywide board of directors president.

Ms. Johnson's patients would spend time getting well at the hospital only to have a relapse after returning to unsanitary conditions in their homes, Dominey said.

Magistrate 'good guy'

He serves 'big judge' in Pecos area

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

PECOS — Walter Holcombe "smokes like a chimney," goes deer hunting to shoot the bull, listens to subliminal tapes that sound like the Rio Grande flowing, and, most of all, practices law with passion and compassion.

He is an avid fan of Western movies, wears cowboy boots, which are customary west of the Pecos River, and cloaks himself with the black robe of the United States magistrate for a wilderness area called the "Pecos country."

Holcombe, 56, is the newly appointed magistrate for the 10-county Pecos Division of the federal-court system's Western District of Texas. He succeeded long-time Magistrate J.M. Preston, "a wonderful, really dedicated" magistrate, who recently died in office.

Holcombe is assigned to "the big judge," U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton, whom Holcombe described as "very quick witted, very intelligent, and one of the hardest-working judges in the United States."

Holcombe, who has practiced civil and criminal law west of the Pecos since he got out of law school in 1971, will be conducting misdemeanor court cases, holding initial appearance on federal felony cases, setting bail, and among other duties, receiving grand-jury indictments, which, in Pecos, are extensive and drug laden. The Pecos Division takes in much of the Mexico-Texas border through which contraband, including cocaine, heroin and marijuana, flow.

Ed Todd/Reporter-Telegram

Walter Holcombe, who practices law west of the Pecos River in his Western attire, is the newly-appointed United States magistrate for the Pecos area.

The magistrate is "honest and has lots of integrity," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery, who prosecutes cases in Pecos. "He's a good man, an excellent choice. He's a good guy."

Holcombe was "a pleasure to deal with as a defense attorney," Beery said.

The chief judge, Bunton, said Holcombe, whom the judge first got to know in the 1960s when Holcombe was an insurance agent in Fort Stockton and Bunton was practicing law out of Odessa, will make a "good magistrate.

"I think he will be fair," Bunton said. "He has always shown me that he, particularly in these defendant cases, has always been compassionate. He is doing a good job for his people."

Holcombe is familiar with federal-court procedures and knows the goings-on in and outside the courthouse.

And Holcombe knows Holcombe well and knows well the Pecos country.

"This was wild country — a lot of bar-room gunfights," he said of the 1800s. "Lots of history in Pecos," including rodeo as a sport and the old term "Pecosin" — killing a fellow and throwing his body into the Pecos River.

Outside the realm of law, wherein he has served as county attorney and district attorney, Holcombe is serious about enjoying life.

He is earnest about cowboy Westerns.

"I like Gene Autry," Holcombe said of the singing cowboy of the 1930s, 1940s and early 1950s. "I thought Roy Rogers was a sissy. I was so disappointed when Roy Rogers won the King-of-the-Cowboys contest. I was wanting Gene Autry to win."

Holcombe is a fan of another faded Western do-gooder, Hopalong Cassady, and, like his deer-hunting

Hance still confident of making runoff

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

Three days before the Republican primary, GOP gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance told Midland supporters he is confident of being in a runoff with Clayton Williams.

"I'm going to be in the runoff and I'll be endorsing Kent Hance in the runoff and I'll win," Hance said to a crowd of about 30 during a half-hour campaign stop in Midland Saturday afternoon.

"He (Williams) isn't going to win without a runoff," Hance said. "I think if you look at all the other candidates, he certainly is not going to get 50 percent of the vote."

Other GOP candidates are Dallas attorney Tom Luce and former Secretary of State Jack Rains.

Williams, a Midland businessman, has been the frontrunner in GOP polls.

Bill Kenyon, Williams' press secretary, said Saturday that the Williams campaign is working hard to ensure that Williams supporters vote on election day.

"Right now we think we are right on the edge of winning it without a runoff," Kenyon said. "If we keep pushing hard and can get our supporters to get out there on election day, then we have a shot of winning it without a runoff."

Meanwhile, Hance blamed heavy spending by Williams for Hance's second-place showing in the polls.

"I think the amount of money that has gone into this has changed the dynamics of this race," Hance said. "It's made it a different race. I will have spent probably $3.2 million-...and I'm probably being outspent three-to-one."

Kenyon reported that the Williams campaign has spent about $8 million on the primary.

Hance said he is not concerned about Williams' apparent advantage.

"There have been a lot of runoffs in Texas where someone in the first go-round would get 49 percent of the vote and then would lose (in the runoff)," Hance said. "We feel like we've walked to over 120,000 houses — our supporters have knocked on that many doors and asked people to vote for Kent Hance. That's something that doesn't show up in the polls, that's something that does show up on election day."

Hance also said he felt that the Democratic primary has degenerated into a "mud wrestling contest" between State Treasurer Ann Richards, Attorney General Jim Mattox and former Gov. Mark White.

Hance said the flap over Ms. Richards' refusal to comment on possible past drug abuse has drawn attention away from real issues.

"The issue that I would take up with her...if she's my opponent in November is the fact that she's very liberal, the fact that she made a vicious attack on our president at the (Deomocratic) convention," he said. "If you look at the drug issue, over the last 10 years I think it's been quite evident that she's been drug and alcohol free and I think she's to be commended for that."

PUC to consider SW Bell's Texas First plan

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

After 18 months of tough negotiations, Southwestern Bell's Texas First plan may be nearing approval — at least that is what Southwestern and those who have signed on to the plan hope for.

The plan goes before the Public Utilites Commission on March 19 for a final vote and Southwestern hopes this will be the end to a drawn out affair, says Darlene Gifford, spokesman for Southwestern Bell in Midland.

"The sooner it is settled, the sooner we can get on with providing the benefits that come with the plan," said Ms. Gifford. She said the Midland-Odessa area could gain substantially from new technology and perhaps elimination of long distance calling between the two cities as a result of the plan.

Under the terms of the plan which covers a four-year period and gives the telephone company greater flexibility in its rate of return, Southwestern Bell will be permitted to have a return on investment of 10.49 to 12.06 percent.

Earnings above this return, up to 14.5 percent would be split half and half with customers, and any return over 14.5 would be returned entirely to the customer.

In exchange for this flexible rate authority, Southwestern is proposing a $1.2 billion benefit package to Texas and Texans that includes: upgrading 195 offices to digital with some fibreglass optics; eliminating long distance dialing in some metro areas; elimination of milage charges in rural areas; reduction of long distance rates to long distance carriers as well as a reduction of intrastate long distance calling. In addition local rates would be frozen for a period of five years.

So far Southwestern has settled with 43 interveners with only six holding out for a different version of profit payback plan. Among those holding out are the City of Mesquite, a consumer's union and Don Butler, an Austin attorney who represents 80 cities holding out for lower monthly rates.

"This probably could go on forever," said Ms. Gifford, "but we feel it is in the best interest of all concerned to put it to rest. We have been negotiating on a sincere basis for over a year and need to get on with this plan." Ms. Gifford said implementation of the plan would give Texas a technologically advanced communications system that would be a plus in attracting new business to the state.

While the PUC staff has signed on to the plan, the PUC Commission has yet to officially rule for the plan.

TSTA official urges decentralization, salary changes

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A Texas State Teachers Association official told reporters and educators here Saturday that school finance reform should include decentralization and a teacher salary boost.

Richard Kouri, TSTA vice president, also explained his organization's opposition to Whittle Communications' Channel One news show, which was scheduled to begin airing in Texas classrooms this month.

"Our position is that it's a commercialization of the classroom that we don't want to see happen," Kouri said, referring to the paid advertising which accompanies the Channel One broadcast.

Midland Independent School District trustees voted in January to begin negotiations with Whittle for the installation of about $700,000 worth of video equipment on secondary campuses.

In return for free use of the equipment, MISD will agree to show the 12-minute Channel One show to students daily. Each show contains four 30-second commercials.

"Once you start, where do you stop?" Kouri asked. "If two minutes is acceptable, well then four minutes isn't going to seem all that bad."

Kouri said that by allowing Whittle into classrooms, school districts are in effect endorsing the products advertised on Channel One.

"To say that the state is going to start providing time for commercials in the classroom we think crosses a significant boundary," Kouri said.

Meanwhile, Kouri said, the TSTA hopes to convince legislators that teacher salary hikes and a statewide teachers' insurance program are necessary components of school equalization.

Legislators are in Austin this month to overhaul school financing methods, which the Texas Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional in October 1989.

The court, which said the current system discriminates against property-poor school districts, gave lawmakers until May to create an equitable method of funding.

"The equalization issue is very much an issue that has to do with how property-poor school districts can compete for personnel," Kouri said.

Wealthy districts are able to enhance the minimum state-mandated teacher salary and attract better teachers and more minority teachers, he said.

The TSTA is proposing that the minimum starting salary for Texas teachers be increased from $17,000 a year now to $25,000 a year in 1995, Kouri said.

MISD starts its teachers at about $20,000 a year.

Kouri also said health insurance for teachers should be provided at state expense so that prospective teachers will not all be drawn to wealthy districts with superior benefit plans.

"The state could provide (insurance) for $500 million a year and that would free up local property tax money that had been used for health insurance...for other programs," Kouri said.

Finally, Kouri said the state should move to decentralize education in the wake of the "overreac-

What draws boys, neighborhood games into the street?

There's a group of kids — they seem to be about junior high age — who live down the block from me and who insist on playing games in the street.

Ott

This morning, for example, they were riding skateboards.

Other times, depending on the season, the group will participate in a variety of sports, including the two most popular street games — baseball and football.

This is terribly dangerous, of course, but kids will be kids.

For some reason, the sight of them today got me to reflecting on the past.

What is about the street that lures 13 and 14-year-olds, anyway? It was the same with my friends. We spent the bulk of our youth playing baseball and football on the hard concrete of Wayland Street in midtown Plainview, not far from the city's tallest building, a giant grain elevator. Doesn't that sound cosmopolitan?

But the point is, whether it is in the big city or small town there is something about a street that draws the neighborhood youth to it. In the Bronx, they might play stickball. In Middle America, it's called plain ol' baseball. Either way, though, the playing field is a city street.

In hindsight, it doesn't make much sense to me, especially in the small towns where there were plenty of backyards with real grass to choose from. In addition, we had parks, school grounds, front yards and vacant lots at our disposal.

Still, we ended up in the street.

Obviously, we were not particularly gifted when it came to figuring out choices in life. Why anyone would prefer sliding into a second base surrounded by cement instead of one surrounded by grass is beyond me.

But we did.

Maybe it was a macho thing. It gives a young person a sense of power when his mere presence in the street can bring a moving vehicle to an immediate halt.

Likewise, a line drive hit over the shortstop's head will roll forever on a city street, but it can be stopped by almost anything, including a thorny rose bush, when hit in a neighbor's backyard.

And here's another possible lure of the street to think about. It makes the small town kid feel like he is experiencing a piece of big city life.

At least it did for me.

I used to love those old black-and-white movies that featured small time hoodlums who hung out on street corners and harrassed motorists as they drove by. They never turned out as bad as they were first portrayed. In fact, by the time the movie had concluded they were usually "good guys" and were working with other young hoodlums at a reform school or some such place.

A kindly Catholic priest, who could be tough when he needed to be, was usually around to make sure the boys didn't stray too far from the straight and narrow.

But the fact remained, the best action always took place on the street. There were bright lights, fast-talking "older guys" and an occasional pretty girl who would have sympathy on one of the meaner little thugs.

Those things seemed terribly exciting to someone in a small West Texas farming community.

And in an attempt to capture that big-city mood we would take to the streets.

Did it work?

Sorta. It beat sitting around the backyard watching the grass grow, but, by the same token, we never did come up with a way to slide into second base with skinning the dickens out of our backsides.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Joshua T. Wasson, son of Jim and Jeannie Wasson of Midland and an Electricians Mate Third Class with the United States Navy, has received a citation "For outstanding performance of his duties while serving as a volunteer at the Oakland Highway 880 command center following the San Francisco earthquake of October 17, 1989. Petty Officer Wasson's efforts were invaluable in helping to establish a well organized command post at the Highway 880 disaster area, allowing the maximum amount of effort to be directed toward the casualty in the minimum amount of time. Displaying exceptional resourcefulness, he worked diligently and efficiently to track the hundreds of volunteer organizations arriving at the scene. His calm and confident demeanor was invaluable in dealing with the public and provided a much needed stabilizing influence to the scene. His organization of the assets ensured all services were prepared and readily available when called upon. His exemplary efforts inspired all those around him and significantly contributed to the successful rescue effort following the earthquake. Petty Officer Wasson's superior professionalism and total dedication to duty reflect great credit upon himself and USS Texas, and were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Phase I of a Navy memorial, located midway between the White House and the Capitol, is dedicated to Bluejackets of America, "The Lone Sailor," is now complete and was formally dedicated and opened to the public in 1987. Phase II of the memorial which will include a 22,000 square foot Visitors Center is planned for opening this year. The Navy Memorial Log will be on continuous display; each entry will show an individual's name, highest rank or rate held, dates of service and date and place of birth. More than 140,000 active duty, former and retired Navy members are already enrolled as "Plank Owners," a traditional Nvay distinction given to the first crew of a new ship or squadron. The dedication of the Visitors Center will make the cut-off time for Plank Owner enrollments.

Donations through enrollment in the Memorial Log will help pay for completion of the Visitors center. Enrollment in the Log for oneself or a loved one or general contributions should be sent to the U.S. Navy Memorial Foundation, P.O. Box 96570, Washington, D.C. 20090-6570. Log entries should provide the name, date and place of birth, last or current rate or rank, and dates and branch of service of the person to be listed. You may also call toll free 1-800-424-2733, extension 9012, and enroll using your Visa or Mastercard. contributions to the memorial are tax deductible.

PECOS

That's another story.

Magistrate Holcombe plays the role of the big-time smoker and Pecos lawyer, and Marshal Balog acts out the humorous court jester and prisoner charmer.

They go hunting together and take turns driving the pickup truck and looking about.

"Most of the time, the worst thing we ever shoot is the bull," quipped Balog.

On a two-week hunt on the Armstrong Ranch near Orla, Balog and Holcombe got into an extended bit of dialogue, especially Balog.

"Gosh," said Holcombe, "the guy never stops — just one joke after the other. Never slows down. My ears got tired, and I think his tongue did, too."

The net result was a "lot of fun, a great time, relaxing, no telephone calls," said the magistrate.

And Balog and Holcombe, like the one-eyed aging marshal John Wayne portrays in the Western movie True Grit, are just a tad paunchy.

Bunton, who's not, took advantage of Holcombe's humor and belly and penchant for Westerns: "With the tummy that he normally has, it would be interesting to see him on a horse, I guess. I think he would have a hard time seeing the horn of the saddle."

The Holcombe compassion that Bunton talked about is poignantly illustrated in the "sad case" of a "really pretty nice fellow" who never knew his parents and who had been "in and out of the penitentiary and in trouble with the law all of his life, usually by stealing cars."

Holcombe, who was appointed to the man's case, had taken personal interest in the defendant, who was unaccustomed to that sort of caring. Holcombe did what he could for the man and managed to get a case against him dismissed on a technicality involving the Speedy Trial Act. The man's case had not been sped up.

"You have got a bad enough record," Holcombe told the defendant. "I am not going to let you get another one (conviction)."

Even so, the fellow ended up in the penitentiary ... again.

But in gratitude, the fellow, a talented artist and woodcarver, over the years sent Holcombe carved miniature stagecoaches, covered wagons and war-wagons from prison.

Through the years, other court-appointed lawyers "threw him to the wolves," Holcombe figured. "Didn't care about him. He told me I was only lawyer who ever took any interest in him."

About 1½ years ago, the fellow, out of prison, telephoned Holcombe for some money. He obliged.

"I wired him some money, and I never heard from him since," Holcombe lamented. "I would bet money he is back in the pen and is ashamed to tell. It is a shame to see somebody waste their life like that. He's institutionalized. He's used to being locked up."

As magistrate, Holcombe effectively will be locking up some accused of crimes, others convicted of crimes, and will be unlocking others.

His work area is in downtown Pecos: site of the police station, sheriff's office, state district court, county court, federal court, and closed businesses, including the last of the Pecos moving-picture shows, the State Theater.

The movie house just recently shut down as a testimony to the fading Pecos economy, which, Holcombe said, will return.

"It is the poorest I have ever seen it since I have been here," said Holcombe, who first moved to Pecos from Rankin in 1942. His father was a banker in both towns.

The Pecos economy is linked to the production of petroleum, cotton, cattle, and produce, including the famous Pecos cantaloupe.

"The (slump in the) oil industry hurt us a lot," Holcombe said.

Back in the 1950s, there were 38 cotton gins in the Pecos-Monahans-Fort Stockton area, Holcombe figured.

"And now, I think we got maybe four (gins) in all of those counties:" Reeves, Ward and Pecos.

The water table had dropped, the cost of energy had gone up, and the government bracero farm-labor program had been phased out.

But oil activity picked up in the late 1970s and early 1980s, boomed, in fact, then went into a decline.

"It will come back some day," Holcombe said. "We have lost many, many major businesses in the last three or four years, such as J.C. Penney Company and Safeway.

"Then, we lost our only movie house here" in a town of about 12,000 people.

"We have a hard time finding activities for the kids," Holcombe sighed. "There's nothing much for them to do except drive around and get in trouble. So, we look for every way we can to find them something to do."

There is hope and the hope for hope.

"It (the economy) will come back someday," he said. The nearby Pennzoil refinery is a major industry here. "They employ a lot of people and pay good money," he said. And ranchers and farmers are still plugging away.

SERVE

Ms. Johnson, assisted by a handful of volunteers, began helping the patients by cleaning their homes and taking care of the yard work, he said.

"She soon realized there was a greater need than she could meet by herself," Dominey said. "She needed more than just volunteers. She needed people she could count on."

The nurse approached area civic groups and received enough donations to start Citywide, a non-profit agency which became incorporated in 1986, he said. Ms. Johnson and two staff members took on the task of caring for dozens of homes, he said.

Ms. Johnson, who was Citywide director for about four years, went back to her nursing career in January. Cathy Roberson, Citywide coordinator, and two assistants now clean the houses, while the yard work is done by hired lawn-care crews.

Roberson said the workers' first visit is more like a hygienic assault and includes thoroughly cleaning carpets, beds and drapes. The cleaners attend to everything from dust bunnies under the refrigerator to corroded windowsills, Ms. Roberson said.

The subsequent weekly cleanings are almost as thorough, she said.

"We also have to keep their laundry up," Ms. Roberson said. "They can't even do that themselves.

Dominey said many of the patients are poor or have been abandoned by their children.

"If these people could afford it, they'd live in their own nursing home," Dominey said. "If they didn't get the attention from services like Citywide, they'd be totally alone."

The agency's annual budget of about $48,000 is funded through donations from the city of Midland, United Way, local foundations, the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, individuals, churches and other organizations.

However, Dominey said the agency needs more funds to enable it to hire another director and more staffers. More than 35 elderly and handicapped are on a waiting list to receive the services, he said.

"The program has basically been on a plateau for the past year," Dominey said. "We have been unable to fund all the staff positions that we wanted to fund."

Dominey said he is awaiting word from Casa De Amigos to see if that organization will take Citywide under its wing.

Citywide may also soon work with local Housing and Urban Development officials to take care of residents living in Hillcrest Manor, 700 W. Scharbauer Drive, and Langtry Village, 2200 W. Scharbauer Drive, he said. About 35 elderly people live in the two housing projects, he said.

In addition, Citywide is attempting to land a contract with the Department of Human Services, which has contracted private cleaning companies in the past to care for some resident's homes, Dominey said.

"We always need money," he said. "Aside from money, our biggest need would be volunteers to do yard work and donate cleaning supplies."

Roberson said most of Citywide's customers are referrals from doctors, the Department of Human Services and individuals.

"Others hear about us through word of mouth," she said. "There are a lot of people out there who don't know about us."

Despite their living conditions, many of the elderly are reluctant to accept Citywide's help, Roberson said.

"They feel so helpless because they can't pay," she said. "They feel that you're giving them a handout.

"We have to let them know that that's what we're here for."

tion" represented by sweeping education reforms in 1984's House Bill 72.

"What we have done is to not include the frontline professionals...in the decision-making loop," Kouri said, adding that teachers are burdened by state mandates and policy manuals and not given the freedom they need to be effective.

Midland Freshman High School counselor Linda Harris, TSTA District 18 president, agreed that more control should be returned to the campus and classroom level.

"The curriculum — what is taught, its scope and sequence — teachers need to have input into that," she said. "They need to have system of discipline they can live with. These are definite areas where teachers need more input."

Spring break under way in South Texas

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The average age of the population on Mustang and North Padre islands began a sharp decline Friday, as students on spring break began filling motels and condominiums being vacated by retired wintering Texans.

The first of an estimated 100,000 high school and college students began arriving Friday night. They'll inhabit the island during the next three weeks in a springtime ritual that promises to be lucrative for the area.

A survey of 16 motels, condominiums and cottages conducted by the chamber earlier this week indicated that occupancy levels are high, said Mike Hall, president of the Port Aransas Chamber of Commerce.

The rooms were 80 percent booked this weekend and 90 percent booked next weekend, he said.

Hall expects this year's crowds to equal those that flocked to the beaches last year, even though no major event is scheduled.

But the crowds that please the owners of motels, gift shops and grocery stores create a challenge for area law enforcement agencies.

DEATHS

George W. Mayes

Funeral arrangements for George W. Mayes of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Monday at the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church with the Rev. Marshall Mason officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

DHS warned of starving woman friend claims

AUSTIN (AP) — Four days before a 77-year-old bedridden woman was found starved to death in her Austin home, a friend called the Department of Human Services to say that the woman's life was in danger.

DHS commissioner Ron Lindsey confirmed Friday that it took four days for a caseworker to visit Violet Maxwell after the woman's friend, Dorothy Parker, called an abuse hot line and reported the woman's situation on March 3, the Austin American-Statesman reported in a copyright story Saturday.

Although a DHS caseworker tried to contact Ms. Maxwell by telephone that night, attempts failed, and the first time a caseworker visited the woman's home was last Wednesday, after Ms. Maxwell had died.

"I told them, 'She really, really needs assistance. She is just skin and bone,' " Ms. Parker said. "I told them that (her son) had been living there and had gone through all of her money."

Erwin Dabbs, DHS regional administrator, said that an internal investigation of the case has been launched to see whether agency guidelines were followed.

Ms. Maxwell, who was 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighed 58 pounds when she died.

An autopsy revealed Ms. Maxwell died after weeks of starvation and neglect. Preliminary tests also showed she had been injected with heroin. Travis County medical examiner Robert Bayardo ruled her death a homicide.

Ms. Maxwell's son, Gary Merle Scanlan, 47, was charged Friday with injury to an elderly person, a first-degree felony that carries a sentence of five years' probation to life in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Police say Scanlan was starving his mother, injecting her with heroin and draining her bank accounts to support his $1,000-a-day addiction to heroin.

Emergency center urges knowledge of weather

By LYN MILLER

Tornado watch! Tornado warning! Thunderstorms and flash flooding imminent!

These words will soon permeate the airwaves as spring steadily approaches, the time of year when violent weather is on the increase.

The Emergency Management Operations Center for the city of Midland urges everyone to learn what precautions to take for turbulent weather and to practice these safeguards. Conduct periodic drills to inform each member of the family where to go and what to do during a violent weather alert.

Learn the difference between a "tornado watch" and a "tornado warning." Remember a tornado watch means that tornadoes and severe thunderstorms are possible. Normal activities may be continued but remain alert. A "tornado warning" means that a tornado has been detected or spotted and those persons nearest to the storm area should take shelter immediately, while those farther away should monitor the storm and take cover if threatening conditions approach.

In homes and small buildings, the basement, interior bathroom, hallway or ground floor closets offer protection. Stay away from windows and outside walls. Select the area or areas for you and your family to go should a tornado threaten and assemble blankets and sleeping bags for protection from falling debris and shattering glass as well as a portable radio and several flashlights (both with fresh batteries), bottled water, extra prescription medications and a first aid kit.

In a high-rise office building, the safest place offering the greatest protection is a small interior room or hallway on the lowest floor. Predesignated shelter areas are provided in schools, nursing homes and hospitals and periodic disaster training is usually conducted. Shelter areas are also designated in shopping centers. Do not attempt to take shelter in your parked car.

Remaining in a mobile home or vehicle during a tornado is dangerous. Take shelter in the nearest substantial building or lie flat in a ditch, ravine or culvert with your hands shielding your head. Be aware, however, of possible flooding in low-lying areas. Do not try to take shelter under a mobile home or car, since either of these can be easily picked up or turned over by destructive winds.

In order to prepare yourself with as much forewarning as possible concerning turbulent weather, it is advisable to listen and watch. During the threat of inclement weather, the National Weather Service broadcast on radio and television stations, the status of tornado watches and warnings, as well as when the danger of a tornado is over. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration weather radio also provides this information. Since tornadoes come and go so quickly, watching the sky can provide a warning that might not have time to be given over the radio or television. Be alert for the sudden appearance of violent wind, rain, hail or a funnel-shaped cloud.

It is not advisable to call the 911 emergency number for information on the weather or what to do. Your call could have serious ramifications by delaying or preventing an emergency call from reaching 911 operators.

Only trained weather spotters should attempt to track a tornado. These persons observe severe weather and communicate by radio to the weather station. Unnecessary traffic could hinder observation and escape from a dangerous situation.

NOAA weather serves the West Texas area 24 hours each day with transmitters located in Abilene, Amarillo, Big Spring, Del Rio, El Paso, Lubbock, Odessa, San Angelo and Wichita Falls. Following the Wichita Falls tornado in April 1979, the high survival rate (99.7 percent) of those involved was due to knowledge of tornadoes and the use of safety rules.

One week later, an amateur radio station was installed at the Midland Weather Station to allow direct radio reports of severe weather. Permian Basin amateur radio operators have since received training in severe weather reporting to improve warning capabilities.

Learn and practice safety rules for tornadoes and destructive weather. For additional information regarding severe weather precautions, contact Bill Shipman, coordinator of the emergency management/operations center at 685-7440.

13-year-old held in parents' deaths

AUSTIN (AP) — A 13-year-old boy was being held by juvenile authorities Saturday after his parents were discovered dead of multiple gunshot wounds to the head in their rural Caldwell County home.

The seventh-grader, was described as "a normal kid" who was anything but a troublemaker after a hearing Friday before Caldwell County Court-At-Law Judge Edward Jarrett.

The bodies of the boy's parents, Kenneth and Cindy Shields, were found Thursday night in their home in Lytton Springs, 25 miles southeast of Austin.

The mother was shot five times in the face and once in the abdomen, Travis County Medical Examiner Robert Bayardo said.

The father was shot twice in the forehead and once in the right side of the neck. The father was found in the hallway and the mother in the kitchen.

Primary contests will face voters

When voters who have not already cast their ballots go to the polls Tuesday in Midland County, they'll be picking the nominees of the party primary in which they vote. Although there are numerous contested statewide races, only three Midland County races are contested and in two of those races this election will determine the final winner since there is no opponent for the November general election.

The most hotly contested local race, however, is that for judge of the 238th Judicial District which pits Midland lawyers Nick Taylor and John Hyde in the Republican primary. Winner of that contest will face unopposed Democratic Party candidate Ralph Petty in November.

The race for judge of Place 1, Midland County Court at Law, sees Al Walvoord and Matthew Blair in the Republican primary, while the race for justice of the peace of Precinct 1, Place 2, pits longtime incumbent Robert H. Pine against newcomer Barbara L. Owen. There is no Democratic opponent for either of those positions for the November general election so the individuals elected Tuesday will fill the positions.

In addition to the contested races, there are a number of incumbents running for re-election who are not being challenged. The Reporter-Telegram does not make recommendations in those instances.

Following is a list of our recommendations, listed by primary:

REPUBLICAN PRIMARY

Judge, 238th Judicial District: Nick Taylor.

Judge, Midland County Court at Law, Place 1: Al Walvoord.

Governor: Clayton Williams Jr.

Attorney General: J.E. "Buster" Brown.

State Treasurer: Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Commissioner, General Land Office: Grady T. Yarbrough.

Commissioner of Agriculture: Rick Perry.

Railroad Commissioner: Beau Boulter.

Chief Justice, Supreme Court: Thomas R. Phillips.

Justice, Place 2, Supreme Court: Lamar McCorkle.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY

U.S. Senator: Hugh Q. Parmer.

Governor: Mark White.

Attorney General: Dan Morales.

State Treasurer: Nikki Van Hightower.

Commissioner of Agriculture: Neal Burnett.

Railroad Commissioner: Robert "Bob" Krueger.

Justice, Place 2, Supreme Court: Bob Gammage.

U.N. official's Iran report shows naivete

WASHINGTON — A United Nations team just back from Iran has produced a report on human rights there that reads like a sick joke. If the United Nations had a hall of shame, team leader Reynaldo Galindo Pohl would be in it.

Jack Anderson

Pohl had the unique opportunity of being the first U.N. human rights investigator allowed into Iran since the overthrow of the Shah. He was so flattered by the invitation, he forgot who his hosts were — rabid fundamentalists who beat, torture and kill their opponents and then cover up the truth.

For eight years, the U.N. Human Rights Commission condemned Iran for its abuses, and the U.N. General Assembly concurred with the last five annual reports. All of those reports were made without benefit of an on-site investigation because the Khomeini regime wouldn't allow it.

The current leader of Iran, Hashemi Rafsanjani, understands the value of public relations. Just as the U.N. was about to issue yet another scathing report, Rafsanjani headed it off by inviting U.N. representatives to Iran to see for themselves. Instead of passing a resolution condemning Iran for continued abuses, the U.N. demurred and thanked Rafsanjani for the invite.

It appears to us that Pohl, a Salvadoran who is the U.N.'s special representative, put on his blinders and stumbled into the Iranian equivalent of a Potemkin village.

If the same Pohl who went to Tehran had been dispatched to his own country to investigate death squads, we think he would have solemnly reported that no deaths had occurred, simply because the government had told him so.

The opener of Pohl's report exposes his naivete. He gushes about the wonderful opportunity to be admitted to Iran:

"The Special Representative wishes to place on record his gratitude to the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran for its cooperation in the course of the visit, the facilities afforded to him in his task and its readiness to extend the visit..."

Miss Manners would be pleased with Pohl's etiquette, but his insight leaves a lot to be desired. It is a puzzle how Pohl could let himself be led around by the nose by a repressive government steeped in medieval tortures and executions.

He missed even the abuses that the Iranians boast of. Pohl reported that there had been no public executions for five months. Even a cursory examination of Iran's government press reveals 87 executions announced between Jan. 3 and Feb. 19 alone.

Six of those people were stoned to death for prostitution. Two others were executed for sex crimes, one of them for "fornication with a close relative."

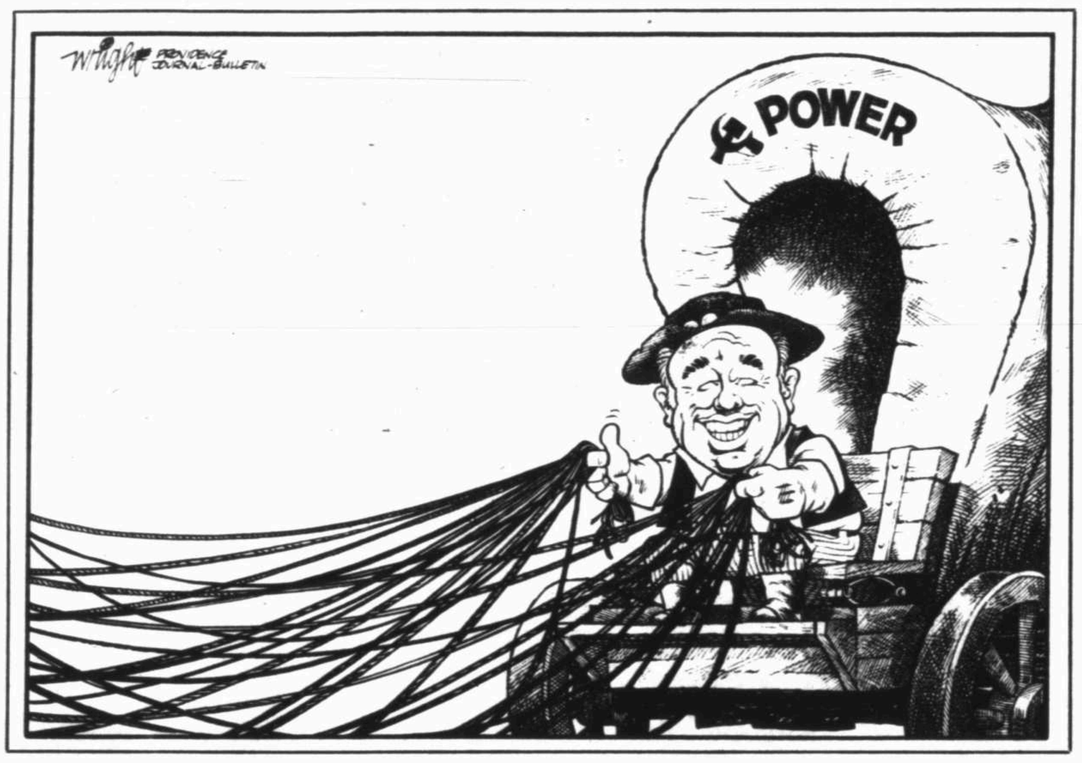

Of the alleged murderers put to death, this is the way the government of Iran chose to send some of them to their maker. A 27-year-old man was whipped 92 times and then beheaded "with the just sword of Ali." A 28-year-old man was whipped 148 times, stabbed three times and then beheaded. A 23-year-old man was whipped 124 times, then his hand was amputated while he was still alive, and then he was hanged.

Another 62 were beheaded, hanged or otherwise executed in public for drug trafficking. Our own intelligence sources have proved to our satisfaction that many of the prisoners Iran charges with drug trafficking are actually political prisoners, often members of the largest opposition group, the People's Mojahedin.

Incredibly, Pohl discounted "the allegation that political prisoners had been executed under false charges of drug trafficking" because three Iranian officials told him so.

If Pohl had bothered to speak to just a few of the hundreds of dissidents who were brave enough to stand outside his hotel, he would have had proof enough. But he didn't. He was too busy being told who to talk to by Iranian officials.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Flight arriving late better than not arriving at all

Arrive at airport. Pay for ticket. Everybody so happy-happy. "Great to have you flying with us today." Friendly-skies type chatter.

Lewis Grizzard

"Sir, we don't have a seat for you yet. If you will just stand by for a few moments..."

No seat?

No seat!

Steady now. Better repress that impulse to yell, pound counter, hold breath until eyeballs bulge and face turns purple. Too easy to end up in chains at airports nowadays. Cops everywhere. Big horse pistols on hips.

Remember news stories about travelers who thought they could get away with joking about hijacking. "All right, joker, lean up against that metal detector and spread your feet..."

No telling what they do to counter pounders. "Your honor, the accused was making a scene in a public airport. Pounding the counter. Holding his breath. And after they'd told him it was great to have him flying with them, too."

Decide against pounding counter. Instead, turn on charm. Be meek, humble, smiley, friendly skies type guy. "I'll just wait right here so I'll be bound to hear you call me when you've got a seat for me, assuming, that is, that it won't trouble you none to have an old country boy like me hangin' round this here friendly old counter."

Easy on the hick dialect. Doesn't go down the way it did 20 years ago when country was full of people who envied hicks their poor but honest lives in rustic cabins, drawing well water from the old oaken bucket.

Nowadays everybody envies city slickers with their padded expense accounts and savoir-faire about bribery.

Bribery? No. Foolish to think airline would find me a seat for $5 slipped cunningly to woman in charge of seats. Speaking of seats, notice something? There is not a single vacant seat within 50 yards of friendly airline counter. Overflow people squatting on suitcases.

Obvious fact: This vast space packed with other seat waiters. My flight has been overbooked. Heard they now do that trick. Permissible since deregulation. Am booked on overbooked flight thanks to evil, vicious, stupid, idiotic deregulation. Wasn't like this in good old federal regulation days.

Feel ashamed about cursing deregulation. "Deregulation best of all possible things for air-travel consumer," according to my economic expert friend Pangloss.

"True," says Pangloss, "airline travel often nightmarish since deregulation, but think how much worse it would be for air travel consumers without deregulation."

Once made mistake of arguing with Pangloss. "But I'm not an air travel consumer, Pangloss. I'm just a guy who's got to get to New York on short notice."

Pangloss said sure, spendthrift rich guys could pay top dollar on short notice to get to New York, but what about thousands of wretched, starving widows and children?

Thanks to deregulation they could now save big bucks by choosing one of thousands of cut-rate fares made possible by deregulation.

Remembering this Pangloss conversation made blood boil with sudden realization that I might be the only person in this entire airport who'd paid full fare for a seat. A seat that didn't even exist.

Suppressed new urge to attack friendly folks at counter and started estimating how many thousands of man-hours all these people must have spent studying the thousands of fare schedules to get the best of all possible prices.

Plane 40 minutes late. Sit on floor and count crowd. Lose count at 537. Do they make airplanes that big? Kill time wishing I were Pangloss.

Just last week, while I was screaming about yet another rise in the extortionate price of health insurance, Pangloss said, "Yes, medical care is a nightmare in U.S., but think of zillions of people in poor backward jungles who would be glad to have any medical care system at all, even one they couldn't afford."

"We enjoy the best of all possible medical nightmares?" I'd asked Pangloss. "Better believe it," he said.

On returning to airport consciousness, became aware an auction was being held. Friendly airline counter people were trying to buy back tickets.

Air travel consumers selling for big profits apparently, then cackling about financial killings they'd made in the overbooked seat market.

Reached New York two hours late, 10 years older. Better than arriving 20 years older. Best of all possible nightmares.

RICK BROWN

Voters can give message insurance reform overdue

AUSTIN — The subject of the day is insurance reform, a dry, dry topic to foist on an unsuspecting public, but one we would do well to know more about.

Brown

Those who happen to vote in the Democratic primary on Tuesday should take the opportunity to send a message to the state legislative leadership that insurance reform is overdue.

The question is among three that Democrats will find on their ballots in referendum form come Tuesday.

Wording of the referendum may seem slanted at first. Democrats are asked whether they agree or disagree that the Legislature should adopt reforms "to eliminate price fixing, cause an immediate rollback of insurance rates, and require good faith and fair dealing with policy holders."

Who could be for price fixing? Who could be against fair dealing with policy holders?

Surely, this is akin to those trumped up straw polls which purport fairness in asking such questions as, "Do you agree or disagree that all God-fearing Americans should keep their fundamental right to bear arms, as guaranteed by the Constitution?"

In reality, the insurance situation is as dire as watchdog consumer groups say.

Because of state and federal legislation passed in 1945, insurers really are immune to most antitrust laws. They have special privileges that allow them to engage in non-competitive practices that artificially prop up the prices we pay.

They have a unique position in the business world. Other industries also are subject to strict regulation — public utilities come to mind — but they still must operate under antitrust regulations.

For insureres, the lack of competition leads to a variety of practices that we would find abhorent in other lines of work.

For example, insurers can effectively fix their own prices by jointly and legally deciding what rates to request. Companies also may divide up markets to lessen competition.

Insurers also are permitted "tie-in" sales, in which, for example, a consumer only can obtain car insurance by also buying a homeowner policy.

The deck is stacked against consumers in other ways, too.

At rate hearing time, the industry plays a dual role: It is the supposedly independent supplier of data on which the hearings are based as well as the beneficiary of whatever rate increase is approved.

The watchdog group Public Citizen says the industry's special dispensations have led to such anomalies as auto insurance rates increasing at twice the inflation rate over the past decade.

Public Citizen also estimates that for every dollar received as a premium in the auto insurance industry, 65 cents is paid out in claims. The remainder goes to executive salaries, agent commissions, expenses and, of course, profit.

Not that insurers should be denied a profit, but the industry has grown to a point where it controls more than $1.8 trillion in assets nationwide, Public Citizen estimates. Premiums the industry receives amount to 9 percent of the gross national product.

Voters and lawmakers in many states are attempting to do something about this nationwide problem.

Californians, with a proposition ballot format in their general elections that seems more reponsive than our constitutional amendment process in Texas, approved Proposition 103, which included a 20 percent auto rate rollback.

In Nevada, the Legislature approved a 15 percent roll back of auto rates in respose to voter demands.

A bi-partisan group of Texas representatives, including Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, made a hard run at insurance reform in the last regular session of the Legislature.

However, they were stimied by a technical point-of-order ruling handed down by House Speaker Gib Lewis.

So what can we do here in Texas?

Voting for a non-binding referendum in one party's primary election seems like diddly-squat when other states are going for actual binding rollbacks.

But in a Legislature dominated by Democrats, the message will get through — and maybe the speaker won't be so quick with his gavel when the issue comes up again.

GEORGE F. WILL

Spending decreasing for U.S. infrastructure

WASHINGTON — On March 9, 1832, a 23-year-old candidate for the Illinois General Assembly told Sangamon County voters "my sentiments with regard to local affairs." His first sentiment was "the public utility of internal improvements," particularly "the opening of good roads (and) the clearing of navigable streams."

George F. Will

Thus did Abraham Lincoln's public life commence with concern about what is now called "infrastructure."

Today Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, from Illinois, has the challenging task of selling a taxaphobic nation on the rationality of spending much more on infrastructure. Americans already spend $800 billion for transportation products and services each year. Eighteen percent of GNP is spent on transportation, which employs one-tenth of the work force. It is perhaps natural that the public considers infrastructure a banal subject. Natural, but unhistorical.

In 1816, John Calhoun introduced legislation for a federal program of internal improvements as a means of avoiding disunion. President Madison, believing Congress not constitutionally empowered to do such things, vetoed it. So prosperous Northern states built their own improvements and the South sank into inferiority and increasing dependence on slavery.

Historian James McPherson writes that prior to 1815 most roads were rutted paths impassable in wet weather. Commerce depended on sailing ships and riverboats. The cost of moving goods 30 miles inland equaled the cost of moving them across the Atlantic. Trans-Atlantic trade exceeded inland commerce and economic growth barely exceeded population growth.

But then came all-weather macadamized roads. The Erie Canal ignited construction: 3,700 miles of canal by 1850. Next, railroads freed commerce from frozen canals in winter, cut travel time from New York to Chicago from three weeks to two days, and cut the price of shipping a ton of wheat from Buffalo to New York from $100 to $10. The difference between the wholesale price of pork in Cincinnati and New York plummeted from $9.53 to $1.18. Suddenly urban workers had more money to spend on manufactured goods.

Today the condition of the infrastructure is just as dramatically connected with economic vitality. Unfortunately, the wearing out of America, which is one aspect of today's incontinent pursuit of current consumption, is accelerating. Since 1960, investment in infrastructure has fallen more than 50 percent as a percentage of GNP, which explains much of America's drop in productivity. Illustrations abound.

Of America's 575,000 highway bridges, 42 percent are structurally deficient (closed or restricted to light traffic) or functionally obsolete. A bridge fails every two days. Consider one bridge with a light load of 2,000 cars and 200 trucks a day: If trucks must detour, adding five miles to their routes at 50 cents a mile, costs increase $182,500 per year. If cars must detour (figuring 20 cents a mile), the annual cost is $730,000.

Over the last two decades, traffic has grown five times faster than highway capacity. In the next two decades, congestion is projected to become five times worse. Airports anticipate a 72 percent increase in passenger volume in this decade; by 1997, 33 major airports are expected to experience, cumulatively, 20,000 hours of delays annually. More billions of gallons of gasoline and billions of dollars worth of aircraft fuel and flight crew time will be wasted yearly.

Time is indeed money and already billions of dollars are being lost because people and freight are congealed in traffic. There are three million truck, bus, taxi and delivery vehicle drivers stuck there, being paid by the hour. Transportation is 15 to 30 percent of the price of agriculture products. A worker delayed by even 10 minutes each way during 45 years of commuting wastes the equivalent of two working years.

You get the picture. The first Republican president certainly did. A crimson thread of consistency connects Lincoln's passion for internal improvements with his later mission of binding the nation together as a land of opportunity. The ninth Republican president, in his exuberance, understood the value of infrastructure abroad: Teddy Roosevelt built the Panama Canal.

Transportation and other infrastructure issues should bring out a strong Hamiltonian streak in American conservatives who too often talk the anachronistic language of Jeffersonian small-government sentimentality, of nostalgia for another America. In the debate now beginning about transportation policy, we shall see if the 18th Republican president is the kind of conservative who understands the need to spend in order to conserve and enlarge the nation's sinews.

LETTERS

District judge hopefuls haven't run dirty race

I disagree strongly with the authors of two earlier letters who have characterized the race for 238th district judge as a dirty campaign. In my opinion, each of the candidates has conducted himself responsibly. Explaining the differences between oneself and one's opponent, by experience and philosophy, is what campaigns are supposed to be about.

Second, I know both candidates. Each is a man of integrity. Each would do Midland a good job. Both are family men. Both are active in their churches. There are, however, as they have themselves acknowledged, differences in the paths their legal careers have taken; the differences in those paths have resulted in each having different qualifications and abilities.

John Hyde is one of the leading divorce lawyers in this town. His practice has also included other civil trial matters, as well as criminal defense matters. John also had prosecutorial experience in his career in the municipal courts, prosecuting traffic tickets and other violations of city ordinances.

Nick Taylor's experience has been primarily corporate in nature, so that he would bring to the court very valuable knowledge important to the resolution of a wide range of complicated commercial transactions, including oil and gas matters. While Nick has trial experience, that has not been an area of specialization for him. Nick also has been extremely active in crime prevention activities in Midland County and would bring to the court new and innovative ideas on dealing with those convicted of crimes.

Based upon their respective qualifications, I will vote for Nick Taylor.

John's experience as a trial lawyer has made him an experienced advocate, but that is not the job of a judge. Whereas an advocate's primary duty is to persuade, a judge's primary duty is to know and fairly apply substantive rules of law. Conversely, Nick's experience and knowledge, acquired through years of specialization in business matters, including oil and gas, and his experience in counseling clients as to the application of law to their business problems, is much more akin to a judge's duty to apply existing law to the cases before him. And while John would initially be more familiar with procedural rules, Nick's broad commercial background is not nearly so easily duplicated as is knowledge of trial procedure. A judge knowledgeable about business law is a valuable asset to the business health of our community.

Finally, I believe that Nick's more conservative and tougher anti-crime philosophies are what the people of Midland want in their district judge.

Hyde one of most active trial lawyers

This is my first letter to the editor, and I write now only to correct a false impression that the backers of Nick Taylor have been circulating.

I speak of the many claims being circulated that Taylor is more experienced than his opponent, John Hyde.

I recently retired from the position of court bailiff after serving state judges in that position for 14 years.

During those 14 years I came to know personally most attorneys in Midland County except Nick Taylor.

To my knowledge, Taylor has never tried a case in 318th District Court nor in the several others in which I also served as bailiff from time to time.

John Hyde, on the other hand, has been one of the most active trial lawyers in Midland County. He has always had a reputation as a hard-working, fair-minded attorney as well as an all-around fine man.

Law officers' support compliment to Taylor

I have studied the issues and made my choice to vote for Nick Taylor.

It is a wonderful compliment for Taylor that so many law enforcement officers are supporting him whereas many of the criminal defense lawyers are backing his opponent. The people on the front line fighting the drug and criminal problems in our community know who will make a difference as district judge.

I know which man I'm supporting and I'm voting for Nick Taylor.

Taylor shows integrity by refusing donations

The principal reason for the scandalous multibillion dollar savings and loan disaster is that seven influential senators accepted millions of dollars in political donations from savings and loan institutions.

One candidate for district judge, Nick Taylor, has refused to accept donations from lawyers who may be practicing in the district court. Too bad the seven senators did not have Nick Taylor's integrity and principles.

Taylor's 'new idea' already in operation

In a recent political ad, Nick Taylor stated that, if elected, he would institute drug testing for all persons on parole. He further stated that anyone who does not pass the test would be sent to prison.

These are wonderful ideas, however, on closer examination, it seems that there are some problems. First, the Midland County Adult Probation program has been testing parolees for at least two years. Secondly, while I will admit that I am not in the legal profession, my sources tell me that a person on parole cannot be sent back to prison for failing a drug test unless that was a condition of their original sentence.

Why is Taylor promising to institute programs that have already been in effect and how many other of his ideas need closer scrutiny? I hope that this is political hyperbole, not an indication of his true awareness.

Taylor, unlike Hyde, remains his own man

Tom Luce in the most recent debate began discussing the problem of lawyers making contributions to judicial candidates — Mr. Luce thinks it is unwise because those lawyers who contribute may be favored when they try cases before that judge to whom they contributed. Further, Mr. Luce thinks it should be made illegal for lawyers to give money to judicial candidates.

The other three candidates for governor agreed with Mr. Luce and all think something should be done about it.

That's good enough for me. These men have made a study of the problems in Texas which need to be corrected — and all agree that this is one.

The only candidate for district judge who has taken money from lawyers who will be appearing before him if he is elected is John Hyde.

I'm voting for Nick Taylor — he is his own man — he doesn't owe anything to anybody.

Blair's actions speak louder than words

We were disappointed to read Niki Griffen's letter in the March 4 Midland Reporter-Telegram. The letter contained numerous factual errors and with regard to Griffen's assessment of Matthew's character, nothing could be further from the truth.

We have known Matt Blair for years. He is honest, forthright, caring and courageous. His service to God and his community as scoutmaster, Jaycee on the church centennial committee and in many other capacities is an example to all of us. Actions speak louder than words. He is there when you need him whether as friend or lawyer.

We have confidence in his ability and his character. We know that he would be a superb judge.

Blair's honesty makes him best man for job

Having known Matt Blair for many years, we want to encourage Midland County voters to cast their ballots for him on March 13. We feel that Matt's honesty, determination, and integrity will make him the best man for the job. Matt is a family-oriented man and wants to make Midland a better place for his family and all of our families to live.

Please help us elect Matt Blair for judge of Midland County Court at Law No. 1.

Taylor again seeking to purchase judgeship

Is justice for sale in Midland County?

It is a fact that Nick Taylor spent over $130,000 in his effort to seek a judgeship just two years ago.

Now it appears a similar mountain of money is going toward his second attempt. Judging by my mailings from Taylor, his daily newspaper ads and the barrage of his television commercials, it looks like he will spend another $130,000 this time around. He has already reported expenditures of more than $75,000 in this race, as of March 3. That means he has spent over $200,000 in the past two years for judicial races. All to cover the fact that he is not qualified to serve as judge.

I am voting for John Hyde — the qualified candidate in this campaign, and urge others to do the same.

Blair deserves support in county court race

I would like to take this opportunity to encourage the citizens of Midland to cast their vote for Matt Blair in the upcoming Republican Primary. Matt is running for Midland County Court at Law No. 1.

I have known Matt for six years. We have worked together on numerous civic projects through our mutual association with the Midland Jaycees.

Matt is a hard worker and is committed to making Midland a better place to live for all of us. I feel that he is qualified for the job and would make a fine judge.

Divorce cases won't help Hyde in 238th

John Hyde is one of Midland's best known divorce lawyers. Even though divorce cases are never heard in the 238th District Court, he claims that this divorce trial experience is what qualifies him for that court.

John is also well known for defending DWI cases. Once again, this DWI trial experience is useless for the 238th District Court because most of the DWIs are handled in another court.

On a very few occasions, John has presided over Traffic Court, ruling on such important matters as speeding tickets and parking violations. He forgets that traffic matters are not handled in the 238th.

The 238th is the "business court." Only two criminal cases were tried in the 238th in January. John is a divorce lawyer and a DWI lawyer. He lacks the legal experience to handle complex business matters. Perhaps he should run for a lower court.

When will Taylor have time to sit on bench?

Recent political ads touting Nick Taylor for judge imply that his civil experience in oil and gas, estate, et cetera, qualify him for the bench. He further states that he, as district judge, will pull together the various community agencies that serve the overt criminal justice system. Since he apparently has gotten himself appointed to all of the boards of these various agencies, along with many others, he must surely be aware of the enormous problems between many of these agencies. Since he will apparently take it upon himself to solve these problems, when does he expect to serve on the bench?

Apparently Taylor lacks the experience in court to realize that being a judge is a full-time profession, requiring full attention and effort. The role of a judge is to adjudicate matters of law — not to become involved in every community conflict.

We do not need any more champions of the public cause on the bench. And we do not need any more self-proclaimed heroes, either. We need a hard-working, knowledgeable jurist who will serve the judicial needs of the community, and not his own, self-serving needs.

Midland needs John Hyde as district judge.

Luce has knowledge, flexibility to govern

Sixteen major newspapers from across Texas have now endorsed Tom Luce for governor. This is more endorsements than the other GOP candidates combined. The reason for such widespread support is summed up very well by the Abilene Reporter-News in stating, "Luce impresses with his knowledge of what Texas needs now but he also conveys the sense that he would know what Texas needs when the conditions change, that he could attack the problem well before it becomes a court-ordered crisis. That kind of leadership is rare."

Luce has already served Texas well as chairman of the Superconducting Super Collider Commission which brought this project and the promise of new jobs and opportunities to Texas, as a member of the Texas War on Drugs Commission which passed some of the nation's first anti-drug legislation, and as chief of staff of the Texas Select Committee on Education, which began the task of reforming our public education system.

Let's let him continue to serve Texas well as governor.

Insurance rate rollback referendum misleading

Ask a silly question, you get a silly answer. Voters in the Democratic Primary will have a ballot bonus: A non-binding referendum asking voters whether or not they would like to see insurance rates rolled back. Who wouldn't? This guaranteed slam-dunk will no doubt translate into newspaper headlines reading "Voters want insurance rate rollback," and anti-insurance activists will use the overwhelming "mandate" of the people to help drum up a Texas consumer revolt. Why not ask "Do you favor the rolling back of prices for auto repairs, hospital charges, doctors' fees?" These are just some of the things for which insurance pays. A rollback in insurance rates attacks the symptoms — not the causes — of high insurance rates.

A crash-repair study by the Alliance of American Insurers determined that the cost of completely rebuilding a demolished 1987 Plymouth Voyager van with factory parts would be nearly enough to purchase three brand new ones — and this does not include labor costs! Health care costs in this country ($599 billion last year) absorb 11.5 percent of the gross national product and continue to climb at an alarming rate. Compare that with military spending, which peaked at 6 percent during the Reagan administration and is currently about 5.5 percent. And finally, Americans file 30 times more lawsuits per capita than our successful trading partner, Japan.

If the Democratic Party was really interested in helping Texas insurance buyers, they would have put this question on their ballot: "Do you favor legal reform that would reduce unnecessary litigation and promote affordable health care, thereby lowering insurance costs that are currently being passed through to the consumer in the form of higher insurance rates?" I wonder why they didn't?

Dog is safe, thanks to caring Midlanders

Last Sunday morning we discovered our back gate open and our dog, Coco, gone. A kind gentleman, Barney McCasland, saw our ad in the Reporter-Telegram and called to say he thought he had seen Coco at the Raindance Car Wash. Tuesday morning we found Coco, as predicted, healthy and happy at Raindance. The employees had seen to his every need.

We are so grateful. It is another fine example of the kind-hearted and considerate young people that reside in Midland. Thank you Barney McCasland and the Raindance employees.

McCormack the best for Democratic chair

I would like to thank the Midland County Democratic voters for allowing me to serve as their county chair the last six years. It has been a rewarding experience, but it is time for a change and I am asking you to vote for Chris McCormack for county chair.

Chris has been very active in Democratic Party affairs. He has been precinct chair for six years, president of Young Democrats, workshop chairman and has served as a delegate to the county and state conventions several years. His opponent is not active in any local or state Democratic Party organization.

Chris has worked many long hours to elect Democrats from the local level to the national level. I have never seen his opponent at any function for any Democratic cause or candidate.

This man who is opposing Chris McCormack ran against me in 1984 and that same year, signed into his precinct convention as a Lyndon LaRouche delegate. Need I say more?

Local science fair deserved coverage

In the Sunday, Feb. 25, newspaper, an article on page 7B asks "Is something turning students off science?" Data from the National Science Foundation and several other organizations predict a further decline in students' abilities to engage in "higher order thinking." The validity of this article, as well as the suggestions to improve student interest and data retention, are definitely worth considering.

Another way of demonstrating this very real problem occurred that very weekend. An important local science event received no Reporter-Telegram coverage, which leads one to speculate that the absence of recognition of student abilities may also be responsible for declining interest in science.

By the time city-wide winners were announced at around 12:30 p.m. last Saturday, well over 400 students, teachers, family members, etc., gathered to congratulate participants, all of whom were declared winners.

Considering the magnitude of local interest in the school and city-wide Science Fairs, and considering the quality of many of the projects produced, we hope that equal space might someday be devoted to covering such an event. The many constraints on students, teachers and administrators make the worthwhile, "fun" activities such as this one well worth timely news coverage.

Science article was slap in the face to students

As the parent of a MISD Science Fair winner, I (like many other parents) eagerly opened my Sunday, Feb. 25, Reporter-Telegram searching for a listing of all the winners from the science fair held Saturday, Feb. 24, at Midland Park Mall. To my dismay, I was not greeted with any information regarding the science fair whatsoever; instead I was hit with a half page indictment of students' lack of interest in science, by N.Y. Times News Service writer K.C. Cole.

Your timing was poor at best. I feel it was a slap in the face to over 2,000 Midland elementary students who eagerly participated in school science fairs, the 152 entrants (representing 192 students) who proudly advanced to the MISD Science Fair, and the 48 thrilled category winners of the MISD Science Fair.

I would think the local newspaper would be more conscious of what was happening in their community before placing an article from New York, regarding student disinterest in science, in their paper the day after an overwhelming successful science fair in Midland.

Elizabeth Dixon
Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: The story on Science Fair results was published Tuesday, March 6. It should have been published sooner and we regret that it was not possible to do so.

While Midland traditionally has outstanding science fairs, there is a major decline in interest in science, and in science-related test scores, on the part of American students nationwide. This is a serious concern and something we all should be aware of, even those of us in areas where that might not be the case.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, March 11, the 70th day of 1990. There are 295 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 11, 1888, the famous Blizzard of '88 struck the northeastern United States. In the days that followed, some 400 people died as a result of the harsh weather.

On this date:

In 1810, Emperor Napoleon of France was married by proxy to Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria.

In 1954, the U.S. Army charged that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin and his subcommittee's chief counsel, Roy Cohn, had used pressure to obtain favored treatment for Pvt. G. David Schine, a former consultant to the subcommittee.

In 1965, 25 years ago, a white Boston minister, the Rev. James J. Reeb, died after being beaten by whites during civil rights disturbances in Selma, Ala.

In 1977, more than 130 hostages held in Washington, D.C., by Hanafi Moslems were freed after ambassadors from three Islamic nations joined the negotiations.

In 1978, 34 Israelis were killed as Palestinian guerrillas went on a bloody rampage on the Tel Aviv-Haifa highway.

In 1982, protesting his innocence, Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., resigned after 23 years in the Senate, rather than face expulsion in the wake of his Abscam conviction.

In 1988, saying he "got a fair hearing, and the people have decided," Gary Hart withdrew a second time from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Ten years ago: President Carter and Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan swept to victories in their respective parties' primaries in Florida, Georgia and Alabama.

Five years ago: The Soviet Union announced the death of its leader, Konstantin U. Chernenko. Politburo member Mikhail S. Gorbachev was chosen the same day to succeed Chernenko as Communist Party general secretary.

One year ago: John J. McCloy, a lawyer, diplomat and onetime head of the World Bank who advised several presidents, died in Stamford, Conn., at age 93.

WHOM TO WRITE

PRESIDENT: George Bush (R), The President, The White House, Washington, D.C. 20500.

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Marxism's historical record of deceit and utter disregard for pledges is threatening the newly won democratic freedom in Nicaragua and creating the potential for a renewal of civil war there.

Hearst

Having been defeated in free elections when erroneous polls had convinced him he would win, President Daniel Ortega, the Marxist dictator, is now demanding, in effect, domination of the country by keeping control of the armed forces and the secret police.

In his first speech the day after the stunning election victory by the pro-democracy parties led by Violeta Chamorro, Ortega promised he and his Sandinista Front "will respect and submit itself to the popular mandate." In that same speech, Ortega also said, "Once again we Sandinistas will be victorious; once again we will be conquerors." He has repeated that intention.

Within a few days after his defeat, he demanded, and continues to demand, that the Sandinistas remain in control of the armed forces and the secret police as provided by a constitution he imposed on Nicaragua. He will have sufficient votes — about 45 percent compared with Chamorro's 55 percent, in the new parliament to block removal of that provision from the constitution.

He has also demanded that the Contra freedom fighters, who played a vital role in bringing about peace negotiations that led to free elections, be disarmed and disbanded before he transfers power to the democratic government. That would eliminate the only effective leverage that exists to persuade the Sandinistas to give up the Defense and Interior ministries.

Leaders of the 11,000 Contras, most of whom are located in neighboring Honduras, adamantly refuse to disband the freedom fighters before transfer of power to the democratic government and relinquishment of Sandinista control of the army and secret police. They know that otherwise the Contras who return to Nicaragua will be vulnerable to Sandinista retaliation, including assassination.

The New York Times warned editorially that unless both sides back down, "there won't be a peaceful democratic transition on April 25, but instead a renewed civil war."

The Sandinistas are already preparing for it by re-establishing and arming local militias to protect "the conquests of the revolution."

Wyoming Republican Malcolm Wallop, one of the most respected members of the United States Senate, believes Chamorro's apparent willingness to consider disbanding the Contras before the transfer of power is due to former President Jimmy Carter "pulling a big rug out from under her on her first day of victory by making disbandment of the Contras the condition for transfer of power."

While Sen. Wallop gives President Carter credit for playing an important role as leader of the international teams monitoring the elections and then serving as mediator between Chamorro and President Ortega to make sure the latter would accept the election results, he feels the former president had no right to support Ortega's demands for disbanding the Contras before the transfer of power to the democratic government.

In an interview with Joe Kingsbury Smith, our national editor, Sen. Wallop said: "Whatever assistance President Carter rendered in providing a sort of stability for the election process, he did not help matters by making disbandment of the Contras an issue for the transfer of power."

As a member of the Armed Services Committee, the senator is particularly concerned about America's security interests in Central America. He does not want to see the authority of the democratic government undermined by Sandinista control of the military and secret police or by communist militia gangs precipitating civil war.

"We should call on the Organization of American States to demand civilized, democratic behavior by the Sandinistas," he said. "However, the OAS is an absolutely supine organization that cannot be counted on to rise to its obligations."

Sen. Wallop believes it would help rescue Nicaragua's economy from its disastrous state if Chamorro, when she assumes the presidency, gradually demilitarized the country and replaced the army with a well-trained, democratically loyal constabulary. That could also be a way to overcome the constitutional right of the Sandinistas to control the army until Chamorro has time to organize a referendum for a democratic constitution.

If Chamorro opted for that course and asked the United States to protect Nicaragua's borders from invasion by anti-democratic forces, the senator believes we should seriously consider such a guarantee. He doesn't think it would require the presence of American troops in Nicaragua unless there were an invasion or grave threat of one. He believes the mere assurance of American protection, coupled with U.S. aerial surveillance of the Nicaraguan borders, would be sufficient to safeguard the security of the country.

Now that a majority of the Nicaraguan people have elected a democratic government, Sen. Wallop believes we should "support that government in every possible way" and not allow it to become again a Marxist dictatorship endangering all Central American countries and the security of the U.S.

That makes sense to me, and I hope President Bush shares Senator Wallop's views.

Job Fair will teach interview techniques

By H.A. TUCK

For most college students, job opportunities or promotions are the carrots in front of them. Then they get a degree and don't know what to do next.

Tuck

Midland College's Job Fair this week is designed to alleviate those fears and show students how to "knock 'em dead."

Mobil Oil Company personnel are providing their expertise Monday and Tuesday from 3:30-5 p.m. for workshops on how to succeed in interviews.

Students nearing graduation in one of the health science fields — nursing, radiography, respiratory technology — are having interviews on Tuesday from 12 noon-3 p.m. in Room 203, Health Sciences Building.

But the big Job Fair is Wednesday from 9 a.m.1 p.m., when local firms, national organizations, and area universities will be in the Student Center for interviews. With their ID cards, students also can have free resumes prepared that day.

Reporter-Telegram is local sponsor for minority workshop

Staff Report

The Midland Reporter-Telegram is one of several Texas newspapers sponsoring the 1990 High School Journalism Workshop for Minorities at the University of Texas at Austin.

The workshop, part of a national program to interest minority students in journalism careers, will be June 10-22. All costs of the workshop experience are underwritten by workshop sponsors. Students will be provided with transportation, room and board and intensive journalism instruction by the faculty of the Department of Journalism at UT, Austin, professional newspaper editors and reporters. Students will be carefully supervised by University staff during every phase of the workshop.

Candidates for the program will be evaluated under four criteria: grade transcripts, writing samples and specific writing assignment, standardized grammar, spelling and language usage tests, and personal interviews. Any minority student with a sincere interest is encouraged to apply. Final choice for the candidate sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram will be made by Deborah Nelson, workshop director, University of Texas at Austin.

Applications for consideration for the workshop are available by contacting either Ms. Elaine Paniszczyn, Midland High School; Ms. Kim Masey, Lee High School; or Ms. Barbara Dempsey, Greenwood High School. Deadline for return of applications is March 31.

Other sponsors are Abilene Reporter-News, Corpus Christi Caller-Times, San Angelo Standard-Times, and Wichita Falls Times Record News, The Dallas Morning News, Austin American-Statesman, and Waco Tribune-Herald.

MC beginning second College Classics series

Staff Report

The second group of classes this spring at Midland College just for those at least 55 years of age begins Monday. College Classics is having three sessions this spring. Designed just for those mature students, the sessions last four weeks with classes meeting for an hour or two, usually one afternoon per week.

Registration fee is just $25 to attend as many classes as desired during both Session II and Session III, which is schedule April 17-May 11. Once students are enrolled for the semester, they can register for additional classes simply by phoning the Continuing Education office at 685-4518. First-time students must enroll in person at the Continuing Education Office, located in the Administration Building.

Courses being offered during Session II, which ends April 6, include Art Appreciation, Ballet Midland, Economics of Current Events, Genealogy, Golf, History of Ancient Greece, Home Security, How Protestant Churches Differ, Looking Good/Feeling Great!, Piano, Rape Prevention, Sound and the Fury (a discussion of Faulkner's novel), Tennis, Texas History, and Understanding the Stock Market.

MC's short courses cover varied topics

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer seven short courses beginning the week of March 19. Courses are as follows:

"Cake Decorating II" will be taught by Cindy Wilson on Mondays from 6:30-9:30 p.m., March 19 through April 2. Instruction covers intricate flowers, lily cup flowers, garlands, roping and setting up wedding cakes. Prerequisite is Cake Decorating I or equivalent. Supplies will be available the first night of class for an approximate cost of $25-45 based on previous experience. Supply list also will be available at the Continuing Education Office. The class is limited to 20 students. Course fee is $19.

Martha Lassetter will be teaching "Certified Public Accountant Review: Practice II" on Mondays and Tuesdays from 6:45-8 p.m., March 19 through April 30. Review content will include Individual Income Taxes; Corporate Income Taxes; Partnerships; and Exempt Organizations. Course fee is $33.

"Certified Public Accountant Review: Theory II" on Mondays from 8-9:15 p.m., March 19 through April 30. Course content will include review of principles pertaining to Business Combinations; Earnings per Share; Partnerships; Foreign Operations; Governmental and Cost Accounting; and Individual and Corporate Taxation. Course fee is $33.

Joyce Low will be teaching "Stained Glass II" on Mondays from 7-9 p.m., March 19 through May 7. Instruction will be in the design and construction of a leaded panel complete with rebar, weatherproofing, and installation. Prerequisite is Stained Glass I or equivalent. Class fee is $25.

"Aerobic Dance" will be taught by Becky [illegible]ght on Tuesdays and Thursdays [illegible]m 7-8:30 p.m., March 20 through May 3. It will be directed toward increasing cardiovascular endurance, decreasing body fat, increasing stamina, and improving body tone. Both exercise and dance movements accompanied by disco, ballroom, and ballet music will be included. Students should wear comfortable clothing and bring a towel. Course fee is $37.

Connie Ladd will be teaching "Leadership Skills for Managers" on Tuesday, March 20 from 1-5 p.m. Students will become familiar with concepts and skills, associated with leadership in the workplace. Specific topics included will be team building, motivational techniques, and leadership styles. Further emphasis will be placed on dealing with conflict and its resolution. Course fee is $9.

"Interior Decorating II" will be taught by Lucy Nye on Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., March 22 through May 3. A continuation of Interior Decorating I, this class will cover in more detail the use of color, furniture, and accessories. Prerequisite is Interior Decorating I. The class will be limited to 25 students. Course fee is $25.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses, call 685-4518.

MAKING THE GRADE

Cari Lynn Starritt, daughter of Pete and Carolyn Starritt of Midland, has been chosen by the Midland West Rotary Club as their Student of the Week.

Starritt

Miss Starritt, a senior at Lee High School with a grade point average of 4.95, is a member of the National Forensic League and serves as their secretary, is on the Projects Committee of the National Honor Society, is the Art Club director, a member of the Pan American Forum, serves as chairperson of the Student Council President's Cabinet, and is a member of the Bio-Medical Club. She is listed in Outstanding High School Students of America, earned three academic letters and a debate letter, earned the United States Student Council Award, and is on the National Honor Roll. Her future plans include attending college where she will major in education.

Christina Yee-Yen Leung, a junior at the University of Dallas majoring in biology, is among the students on the Dean's List for the fall 1989 semester. Miss Leung, who was valedictorian of the 1988 graduating class at Midland High School, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Patrick Leung of Midland. She has earned a perfect 4.0 grade point average for the past three consecutive semester and will study in Rome during the spring semester.

• • •

Deana Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Stewart of Midland, was the recipient of the "Tommorrow's Leaders Today" award. This award is given by the Board of Young Associates at Hardin-Simmons University. Ms. Baker is a junior finance major at the school.

Chris S. Elgin, Noel F. McCarthy, and James E. Setliff Jr., all of Midland, were named to the 1989 fall semester dean's list at Southwest Texas State University. To qualify for the academic honors listing, an undergraduate student must have earned a grade point average of at least 3.5 during the semester while taking at least 12 semester hours of course work.

Solberg

Robert "Steven" Solberg, son of Robert and Kristine Solberg of Midland, has been chosen by the Midland Rotary Club as their Student of the Week.

Solberg, a senior a Midland High School with a class ranking of 29, is a member of Symphonic Winds and the marching band. He participates in varsity cross-country, indoor track and tennis, and is a member of the National Honor Society, a delegate to the Organization of American States, all-city band and has earned three academic letters. He was class treasurer in the ninth grade and served as Student Council Representative in the tenth and eleventh grades. In the future, he plans to attend Texas A&M University where he will major in petroleum engineering.

HOW THEY VOTED

House fails to override strike veto

Congressional Quarterly

KEY HOUSE VOTE

House fails to override Eastern Airlines strike veto. The House failed March 7 to override the president's veto of a bill that would have established a blue-ribbon commission to recommend solutions to the year-long labor dispute at Eastern Airlines. The 261-160 decision was 21 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed.

The vote, which fell mostly along party lines, was a setback for organized labor. Eastern's unions have refused to make large wage concessions demanded by Frank Lorenzo, chief of parent-company Texas Air Corp., who had threatened workers with massive layoffs.

Efforts by federal strike mediators to end the walk-out have stalled. The airline, which sought bankruptcy protection in March 1989, lost $850 million last year.

Supporters of the override said the bill represented the "last best hope" for ending the strike and saving the airline. Democrats accused the Bush and Reagan administrations of parting with unbroken precedent by ignoring the recommendations of federal mediators to set up an emergency board.

"Resolving Eastern's longstanding labor disputes is the key to Eastern's financial revival," said Glenn M Anderson, D-Calif. "Until the labor disputes are resolved, Eastern's management and its employees will be preoccupied and will not be able to carry out the extraordinary efforts which will be needed to win passengers back to Eastern."

Republican opponents accused Democrats of promoting the legislation out of a "personal vendetta" against Lorenzo, who has been widely portrayed as a financial manipulator trying to bust the unions.

"Carving out special laws just because we do not approve of the business practices of one individual is bad legislating — it's just plain wrong," said Jack Fields, R-Texas.

KEY SENATE VOTE

Senate rejects "oxygenated fuels" amendment. With the overwhelming support of farm-state legislators, the Senate voted 53-43 March 7 to table (or kill) an amendment that would have loosened a requirement for using "oxygenated fuels," such as ethanol, during winter months in 44 largely metropolitan areas exceeding federal carbon monoxide standards.

Carbon monoxide, a poisonous gas produced by cold or poorly-tuned engines, is most acute in winter months. An engine using oxygenated fuels produces less carbon monoxide.

The amendment, which was offered during debate on clean air legislation, would have lowered required oxygen content levels from 3.1 percent to 2.7 percent. Ethanol, a product derived mostly from corn, would meet the higher standard; some petroleum-based products would not.

Those who voted to kill the amendment said six EPA-approved products in addition to ethanol would meet the higher standard. They said the lower standard would increase carbon monoxide emissions from tailpipes by 400,000 tons per year.

"We are not favoring one fuel over another," said Tom Daschle, D-S.D. "Very simply, the 3.1 percent oxygen standard assures that the most carbon monoxide reduction possible is attained."

Opponents of the motion called the 3.1 standard "arbitrary" and said the 2.7 standard would be just as effective in reducing pollution.

"This would allow for open and free competition among the various fuels and provide state and local officials with the flexibility to decide what fuels they need in their areas," said Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J.

Voting to table (kill) the amendment to lower oxygen standards: None.

Voting to consider the amendment: Bentsen (D), Gramm (R).

MISD board may decide junior high's location

Staff Report

Midland Independent School District trustees may decide Tuesday on a location for a proposed new junior high school, Tuesday's board meeting agenda shows.

MISD spokesman Ted Miller said trustees are likely to choose from among three sites recommended by district administrators last month.

Sites include one on the western edge of town near Scharbauer Elementary School, one near the intersection of Texas 349 and Loop 250, and one in east Midland by Fairgrounds Road near Cuthbert Ave.

East Midlanders have been campaigning for several months to have the new school built in their area of town, which is populated primarily by minorities.

Residents have argued that the new school would boost the east Midland economy as well as build morale among minority pupils.

Proponents of a western site, meanwhile, say it does not make economic sense to build on the eastern site, which will cost about $260,000, when the Scharbauer site can be had at no additional cost to the district.

Meanwhile, MISD officials have estimated the cost of the Texas 349 site at $345,500.

Miller said it is necessary to choose a site for the new school now even though a bond election to build it has not yet been called.

"Without a site selected, an architect can't do all the preliminary work...necessary in order to give us a clear idea what the cost would be for this," Miller said.

Furthermore, Miller said,voters may base their bond election decision on the proposed location of the new school.

"There's a lot of people out there who for them, where the site is is going to be a big determiner of whether they're going to vote for a bond election," Miller said.

Miller said that the new school, planned to relieve district overcrowding, is not yet a "sure thing."

"This still does not obligate the school district to call a bond election for that junior high," Miller said.

Series of free enterprise lectures continuing at Midland College

Staff Report

Most business leaders would agree that "it takes money to make money," but not all of them know where to find the money to get started.

But the Free Enterprise Lecture speaker at Midland College on Wednesday is an expert on the subject. Jeffery P. Blanchard, founder and Managing General Partner of First Capital Group of Texas, Ltd., is speaking at 7:30 p.m. that evening on "Sources of Fiancing and Venture Capital for West Texas."

The lectures are free and open to the public. They are presented in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium, last about 45 minutes and are followed by a question period and reception.

Blanchard, who earned Bachelor's and Master's degrees in Business Administration from the University of Texas at Austin, was named 1989 Entrepreneur of the Year for South Texas by Arthur Young and INC Magazine for his role in supporting entrepreneurship.

In addition to First Capital Group, Blanchard owns South Texas Small Business Investment Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Victoria Bank & Trust Co. His responsibilities include identifying, analyzing, negotiating, structuring and investing venture capital in various companies located in the Southwest, as well as the ongoing management of those investments.

During the past 11 years, he has managed the investment of more than $50 million in emerging companies. As an active investor, he generally works with management of portfolio companies, usually as a director, to help support their growth and development.

The third speaker for this year's Free Enterprise Lecture Series will be Floyd E. Edwards, Dallas Regional Administrator, U.S. Department of Labor. His topic, "Labor Problems and Availability in West Texas", is slated for 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 20.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

barnacle (noun) — Barnacles are pesky saltwater shellfish that fasten themselves to the hulls of ships, wharf pilings, rocks, turtles, whales, and all kinds of underwater objects. At birth, barnacles can swim around freely, but they soon attach themselves to an underwater object and set up housekeeping for life. Then the barnacle forms a limelike box or shell with a lid that can be quickly closed in case of danger. Most of their time is spent fishing for microscopic plants and animals by waving their bristly featherlike legs through the open lid.

Democrats in 3-way tie; Williams leads GOP

Associated Press

The top Democratic gubernatorial candidates, whose fiery primary race has covered questions from drug abuse to income taxes, are in a three-way dead heat, while GOP hopeful Clayton Williams seems poised to win the Republican primary without a runoff, a published poll shows.

The Dallas Morning News-Houston Chronicle Poll, published in the newspapers' editions today, shows that Democrats Ann Richards, Jim Mattox and Mark White are running neck-and-neck in what is predicted as a close finish for their party's nomination Tuesday.

The poll also said Williams, who has spent about $6 million of his own money in his first bid for public office, continues to widen a lead over his opponents as the choice of 55 percent of likely Republican voters.

"The question is not, 'Will Williams fall under 50,' but 'Will he get over 60?' " said Richard Murray, director of the poll by the Public Policy Center at the University of Houston.

Of the Democrats' increasingly bitter race, Murray said, "Anybody could lead or run last, and anybody could make a runoff."

The poll, conducted March 4-7 for The News and the Chronicle, showed 28 percent of those surveyed backed Ms. Richards, while Mattox had 25 percent and White garnered 24 percent. All were within the poll's margin of error.

Ms. Richards, despite suffering setbacks in recent weeks because of her refusal to say whether she has ever used illegal drugs, should at least grab a spot in the April 10 runoff election, said Murray.

"The big question is who is she running off with," said the pollster.

Compared with front-runner Williams, Republicans Kent Hance had 13 percent, with Jack Rains and Tom Luce trailing with 8 percent each, the survey showed.

The university policy center surveyed 485 people who said they would vote in the Democratic primary and another 363 people who said they intended to vote in the GOP primary. Responses were selected from 165 key urban precincts and rural counties.

The poll's margin of error for the GOP sample was plus or minus 5 percentage points, with 4.5 percentage points for Democrats.

"The Democratic race has become very muddled, very close," said Murray, adding that a runoff is nearly a certainty.

"It's a race where there could be a lot of movement over the weekend," he said.

White angrily demanded Friday that Ms. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, pull television commercials questioning his ethics. Mattox claimed she started a negative campaign, including demands her opponents reveal income tax records, to draw attention away from the drug issue.

A primary candidate, to win outright, must get more than half the vote. If no candidate finishes with a majority, the top two vote-getters will face each other in an April 10 runoff.

Murray said that, ironically, negative Democratic campaigning has increased the number of undecided primary voters in the final days of the governor's race.

"The campaign is so negative it is driving up the undecideds," he said. "All the candidates are badmouthing each other."

The survey showed that Ms. Richards, a two-term state treasurer, was once the clear gubernatorial front-runner in the primary but has lost some strength because of the drug question pressed by her rivals.

"It definitely hurt Richards and knocked the Democratic race into a mess," said Murray. "It knocked her campaign off stride, sent a lot of her supporters to 'unsure' and a few to the other candidates."

Mattox, a two-term attorney general, has made big progress in the governor's race, climbing from a distant third to a virtual tie.

Illness makes Sul Ross president leave post

AUSTIN (AP) — Jack Humphries, president of Sul Ross State University, has asked to be relieved of his duties because of a lengthy illness, officials said.

"Dr. Humphries has served both the university and the system in a dedicated and exemplary manner. He will be most difficult to replace," Norman Elder, chairman of the Texas State University System board of regents, said Friday.

Elder said Humphries said he was recovering from illness, but felt his current health status would not allow him to fulfill his duties as president.

Humphries said he would like to return at some time later to the classroom and teach history.

Humphries requested that he be allowed to step down at a time that is convenient for the board.

Elder said Sul Ross would continue to operate under acting president R. Victor Morgan.

Sul Ross State University, founded in 1920, is located in Alpine.

Atom smasher forms center of area's science education

FORT WORTH (AP) — While scientists predict the multibillion-dollar super collider project will provide breakthroughs in atomic physics, educators are hoping the atom smasher will spark the imaginations of elementary students.

Three school districts in Ellis County, where the underground accelerator will be constructed, plan a science curriculum that focuses on the project, much as classes in the 1960s and early 1970s used the space program to generate student interest.

Scientists say the 53-mile superconducting collider ring, projected to cost at least $6 billion, should reveal new information about the nature of matter and the origins of the universe.

"We're counting on the SSC to spark the same level of interest in science that efforts to put a man on the moon did for another generation of children more than 20 years ago," said Dr. David Montgomery, Waxahachie school superintendent.

"And since science and math are so closely related, we believe an excitement about one will generate excitement about the other."

The collider site is near Waxahachie, about 30 miles south of Dallas.

With aid from the University of Texas at Arlington, Tarrant County Junior College in Fort Worth and Navarro College in Corsicana, the school districts want to demonstrate a method of reversing the nation's steady decline in math and science competence.

Arlington school administrators are watching Ellis County's progress closely and could adopt a similar curriculum within several years.

"We're excited about the SSC's potential impact on education," said Dr. Kenneth Greene, associate superintendent of education for Arlington public schools. "We will be teaching the children of many people who will be working at the SSC and want to be responsive to that situation.

The project is funded and coordinated by the National Super-Collider Education Consortium, a nonprofit group of regional corporations, businesses and colleges that hopes to raise about $500,000 in the next two years to expand the new curriculum.

Dr. Ron Hastings, a physics and mathematics instructor at Waxahachie High School and science advisor to the curriculum development team, said the goal is to get children excited about science by relating it to the SSC.

San Antonio's Emilio Navaira wins big at Tejano music awards

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Emilio Navaira of San Antonio won Male Entertainer of the Year and gathered three honors in 12 categories at the 10th annual Tejano Music Awards Friday night.

Navaira's band Rio also was named Most Promising Band of the Year and Album of the Year with "Emilio," during ceremonies at the San Antonio Convention Center Arena.

Actor Easi Morales and actress Rita Moreno were hosts.

Selena Quintanilla of Corpus Christi won Female Entertainer of the Year and Female Vocalist of the Year.

San Antonio-based Latin Breed took Single of the Year for "Ay Mujer," or "Oh, Woman," and Album of the Year, orchestra/group, for "Breakin' the Rules."

Tejano music is a hybrid of traditional Mexican musical styles, with predominantly Spanish lyrics and strains of jazz, rock 'n' roll, country/western and rhythm and blues.

Joe Lopez also was a multiple winner as Songwriter of the Year and also captured Vocal Duo of the Year for the duo Grupo Mazz with fellow Brownsville native Jimmy Gonzalez.

Paulino Bernal, of McAllen, won Tejano Gospel Music Artist of the Year for the second consecutive year. San Antonio's David Marez captured Male Vocalist of the Year.

The Brownsville-based group Mazz won Song of the Year for "Ahora Quiero Que Me Quieras," or "Now I Want You to Love Me."

More than 5.5 million ballots were distributed nationwide through retailers, newspapers and Tejano radio stations. Nominees were selected by disc jockeys and program directors at radio stations throughout the United States, members of the Amigos of Tejano Music and a music industry panel of experts.

Attorney general races wide open in both primaries

DALLAS (AP) — The race for attorney general remains wide open with more than 60 percent of the voters in both parties undecided a few days before the primary, according to a new poll.

The poll, taken last week for the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning News, also found several other down ballot races in Tuesday's primary up for grabs. Results of the poll were published in today's editions of the papers.

In the Democratic primary race for attorney general, San Antonio state Rep. Dan Morales was supported by 20 percent of the voters surveyed. Houston attorney John Odam had 16 percent and 62 percent were undecided.

Lake Jackson state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown led four Republican contenders for attorney general with support from 17 percent. Dallas state Rep. Pat Hill had 10 percent. Dallas attorney Tex Lezar and Houston attorney Bobby Steelhammer each had 2 percent, while the number of undecided likely GOP voters was 66 percent.

In the race for state treasurer, Nikki Van Hightower of Houston led the Democrats with support from 32 percent. Karen Friend of Houston had 6 percent, Armando Gutierrez of Austin had 5 percent and Tom Bowden of San Saba 4 percent. The poll found 60 percent undecided.

Dallas lawyer Kay Bailey Hutchison led the GOP field with 30 percent. Charlotte Self of Richmond had 6 percent and 64 percent were undecided.

Incumbent Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower was the choice of 39 percent of the likely Democratic voters surveyed. Six candidates backed by the Texas Farm Bureau for ag commissioner had a combined total of 11 percent. Among Republicans seeking the post, state Rep. Rick Perry of Haskell and Richard McIver of Stafford each had 9 percent. Gene Duke of Brownfield had 6 percent and 76 percent were undecided.

Democrat John Sharp is unopposed in the primary for state comptroller. On the GOP side, Jon Hall of San Antonio had 17 percent, Warren G. Harding Jr. had 14 percent and Irby Ford had 2 percent. Two-thirds of the Republican voters surveyed were undecided.

Incumbent Land Commissioner Garry Mauro is unopposed in the Democratic primary, but the race to be his Republican opponent in the general election is open, the poll found. Wes Gilbreath of Houston had 14 percent, Grady Yarbrough of Flint had 13 percent and William James John of Dallas had 4 percent.

Bob Krueger of New Braunfels led the Democratic field for Railroad Commissioner with 39 percent and former state Rep. Clint Hackney of Houston had 12 percent. Beau Bolter of Amarillo led the GOP field with 30 percent and Ted Lawson of Odessa had 19 percent, according to the poll.

The poll was taken for the papers by the University of Houston Public Policy Center, which surveyed 485 likely Democratic voters and 363 likely Republican voters. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 4.5 percent for the Democrats and plus or minus 5 percent for the GOP.

Absentee voting ended Friday. The state's "no-excuses" absentee voting law allowed Texans to start casting ballots last month.

Mark Toohey, spokesman for the secretary of state, said absentee ballots could tally as much as 25 percent of the more than 2 million votes projected in the primary. Through Thursday, 95,498 absentee votes already had been cast in the state's six largest counties, he said.

The secretary of state and the two parties are predicting a total turnout of between 2.1 million and 2.6 million of the state's 8.3 million registered voters, Toohey said.

GOP officials are estimating 750,000 to 1 million voters in their primary, while the Democrats anticipate 1.4 million to 1.6 million.

Education board votes to re-implement career ladder

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education voted Saturday to take steps toward re-implementing previous teacher career ladder statutes since a new plan passed by the Legislature in 1989 was ruled invalid last month.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled Feb. 28 that the 1989 bill — which makes it tougher for teachers to move up the ladder — is invalid because it contains a clerical error.

The court sent the case back to the district court level, ordering that court to issue a temporary halt to the bill's implementation until the controversy can be finally settled.

The school board did not take emergency steps to rescind the measure Saturday, opting instead for a slower route toward reinstituting the earlier career ladder.

Commissioner of Education William Kirby said the board hopes to "sit tight" for a few weeks and see what happens in the courts and the Legislature before taking any further action.

"Between the courts and the Legislature, we need to find out exactly what's going to happen, so we're telling everybody to just hold in place," Kirby said.

The board also adopted a resolution Saturday urging the Legislature to increase teacher salaries to the national average and spend at least 70 percent of any increased education funding on "direct instructional costs, teacher salaries and health insurance."

The Legislature is meeting in special session to devise a new method of funding the state's public education system, which was found to discriminate against poor school districts.

The Supreme Court gave the state until May 1 to devise a new finance system.

Board member Bob Aikin of Commerce, who sponsored the resolution, said the board believes that at least 50-60 percent of whatever new funds the Legislature may put into the system should go directly to salaries.

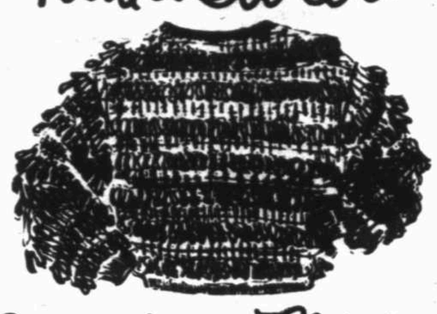

"This legislation is not going to be a Christmas tree, but it shouldn't be an empty stocking, either," Aikin said.

Ex-sheriff acquitted in death of wife

FORT DAVIS (AP) — A Jeff Davis jury deliberated about 1½ hours Friday before acquitting the former sheriff of murder charges in the shooting death of his wife.

Former sheriff W.W. "Wid" McCutcheon IV, 51, went on trial Monday in the Jan. 7, 1989, shooting death of his wife, Betty, 53. Defense attorneys had contended the death was a suicide.

The McCutcheons' three grown children let out a yell of joy and clapped their hands when the verdict was announced. McCutcheon shook hands with the jurors.

Jeff Davis County District Attorney Richard Barajas said he was "surprised, absolutely surprised," by the verdict. "I did my job. We put on the best possible case."

McCutcheon had no comment after the verdict.

Bexar County Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio testified Thursday that the shooting could not have been a suicide.

Defense attorneys alleged that Mrs. McCutcheon had twice tried to kill herself. But prosecutors claimed McCutcheon murdered his wife so that he could marry a Fort Davis woman.

Nursing home to stay open

GLADEWATER (AP) — Newly approved state funding will allow a nursing home that cares for seriously ill children to remain in operation, officials said.

The Truman W. Smith Children's Center will not close April 1, as previously scheduled, said administrator Alan Loyd.

Loyd was in Austin last week lobbying state officials to increase state funding for the center — the only one of its kind in Texas and the Southwest designed specifically for medically fragile children. Many of the 103 children at the facility are terminally ill.

Truco Properties, which owns the center, has been asking the Texas Department of Human Services to increase Medicaid payments for the children.

Loyd said the 15-month-old center was losing about $50,000 every month. He said the center was receiving about $50 per day in Medicaid payments for each child, when it costs the center about $85 per day to care for each child.

"But now the Medicaid payments will be increased $15 to $20 per child, which should allow us to break even," said Loyd.

Jury to probe guard's killing

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County grand jury has agreed to spend the rest of the month investigating the shooting death of a security guard by a former Houston police officer.

Civil rights prosecutor Don Smyth said the 182nd District Court panel will hear almost two dozen witnesses in the case against former Officer Scott Tschirhart, who was fired in January as a result of an internal police investigation.

Smyth said he expected a decision by the panel by March 30.

Security guard Byron Gillum, 24, was shot to death Nov. 15 after Tschirhart stopped him for a routine traffic violation. Gillum was shot eight times. The officer had been following Gillum's car for several blocks in the Texas Southern University area. Tschirhart told investigators the vehicle had been moving suspiciously.

Gillum was the third black man killed by Tschirhart during his seven years as a policemen.

Transplant patient released

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh has released transplant patient Stormie Jones almost three weeks after she received her second liver.

Stormie, the world's first and longest surviving heart-liver transplant recipient, was discharged Friday. The 12-year-old Texas girl will remain in Pittsburgh for about two weeks to receive out-patient treatment, spokeswoman Lynn McMahon said.

Stormie received her second liver transplant Feb. 20 in a 10-hour operation, Ms. McMahon said. The girl first underwent transplant surgery in 1984 when she was given a liver and heart.

The heart has not caused Stormie any problems, but she needed a new liver because the first one was damaged by hepatitis. Ms. McMahon said surgeons are pleased with Stormie's progress since her latest operation.

Exorcist needed, priest says

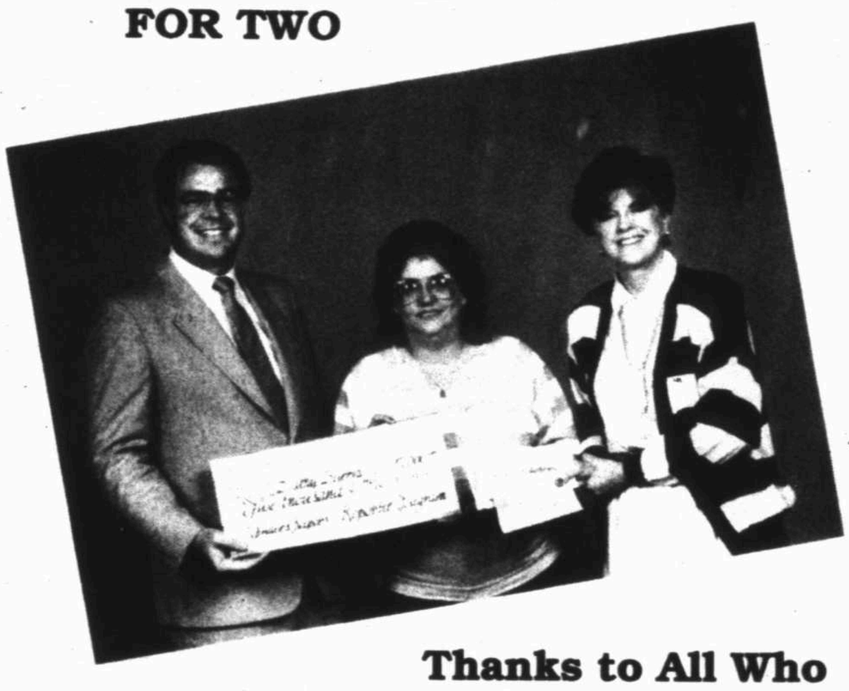

DALLAS (AP) — A Dominican priest who prays over those who believe they are possessed by the devil says it is time for the Catholic Diocese of Dallas to designate an exorcist.

With the "increasing involvement in devil cults, we better get one to discern whether an exorcism is required," said the Rev. Paul Hinnebusch.

Monsignor Robert Rehkemper, vicar general of the diocese, said calls to the diocese office about the possibility of someone being possessed by the devil are generally treated with skepticism.

DON'T TAKE A CHANCE . . . . VOTE HANCE!

A New Vision for Texas

A New Vision for Texas Governor

Kent Hance for Governor

"This is a time of change and challenge for Texas. This is a time for men and women of experience, leaders with a record of achievement, to step forward. This is the time for a Governor with a New Vision for Texas. I am that leader."

Kent Hance

For a Republican Victory . . . Keeping the Governor's office in Republican hands is critical for our state's future and for the future of the Republican Party, especially with redistricting around the corner.

Only one candidate for Governor has won statewide office as a Republican.

Only one man has the experience as a Congressman, State Senator and statewide elected official it will take to be a good Governor.

That man can win, if you help him. Kent Hance is that man.

Kent Hance is a strong manager who runs a major state agency with a $35 million budget and nearly 1,000 employees.

For Better Schools . . . As Governor, Kent Hance will build on the education reforms of the last eight years with new, innovative proposals to improve our schools.

He'll stress more local control with more input by teachers and parents.

He'll emphasize the educational basics and help Texas schools challenge all students.

He'll make the State Education Commissioner elective, not appointive.

Kent believes local school districts should be able to select textbooks, rather than having them dictated by a bureaucracy in Austin.

And he will see there's a complete review of all state mandates to eliminate unnecessary paperwork and red tape and to foster innovation.

"I do not accept and will not tolerate an education system that fails. Quality education is a key to the future of Texas and to more jobs for Texans."

Kent Hance: Experience That Works For Texas

- U.S. Congressman: Sponsor of the Reagan/Bush 25% Tax Cut.
- State Senator: Wrote tough laws to make food stamp and welfare fraud felonies.
- Professor: Taught at Texas Tech for five years.
- Now, as Texas Railroad Commission Chairman, fought against foreign government control of Texas energy industry.

As a Congressman, Kent was a principal sponsor of the Reagan-Bush Income Tax Cut. For his leadership on the issue, Reagan praised Kent by saying, "the country is indebted to you and I am indebted to you."

Kent with Barbara and President Bush at the White House. Kent was the President's Texas Co-Chairman.

For More Jobs . . . Texas is one of a few states without an Income Tax—a big advantage attracting industry and creating jobs.

Kent Hance will keep it that way. He backs a Constitutional ban of the State Income Tax to guarantee a good business climate, especially for small business and high tech.

Kent proposes a "Tax Free Start Program" to suspend the state franchise tax for new investments.

He also suggested tax relief and incentives to help existing Texas businesses.

Kent will establish a Natural Gas Marketing Fund to open up new markets for our plentiful Texas natural gas.

For Safer Neighborhoods . . . Kent Hance backs mandatory jail time for drug users, the death penalty for major drug dealers and a Constitutional amendment to deny bail to drug dealers.

He'll build 25,000 more prison beds to stop early release of violent prisoners from Texas prisons. Experts agree there should be ample new revenue from our economic recovery to pay for this vital prison expansion.

Kent was the first to suggest 24-hour "drug courts" to deal with cases faster and end delays in our criminal justice system.

A New Vision for Texas' Future

- No State Income Tax. Only candidate to favor a Constitutional ban.
- Dedicate 60% of new state revenues to education. New reforms to restore local control, increase excellence, and involve parents more.
- Stop early release of dangerous criminals from our prisons and step up drug rehabilitation in prisons to break cycle of crime.

Kent Hance is the first Republican in over 100 years to win a down ballot statewide office. With 15 years in public service, Kent Hance has the experience that works for Texas.

Aquadawgs dominate region

Lee finishes second in girls' swimming division

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — The Midland High boys swim team didn't just win the Region I meet here Saturday, they won big.

Big as in Moss Fennell's two meet records.

Big as in Matt Seay's two near-meet records.

The Bulldogs — Aquadawgs, if you will — used Seay's win in the 100-yard breaststroke to pull away from second-place San Angelo and third-place Amarillo High. MHS scored 54 points to 43 for San Angelo and 39 for Amarillo. Midland Lee finished 15th with two points.

In girls competition, Midland Lee missed out on a repeat regional title by finishing second to El Paso Coronado, 51-44. Midland High used a pair of wins by Carrie Henry to place fifth with 20 points.

Midland High's No. 1 singles player, Elizabeth Ameel, returns a volley during first round action.

Essex, Ameel lead 'Dog netters at Invitational

By JOE WYATT
Sports Writer

Midland High enjoyed singles championships by Harper Essex and Elizabeth Ameel in the A division of the Midland Invitational tennis tournament Saturday, and those wins propelled the Bulldogs to the team title with 25 points.

Lubbock Coronado, tied with MHS going into the semifinals, finished as the second place A team with 21 points.

"We needed those last two wins (Essex and Ameel) to win the tournament and we got them," said gratified Bulldog tennis coach Steve Hoover. "It was up in the air there for a while."

Semifinal rounds of the event, which was co-hosted by MHS and Midland Lee and began at three sites Friday, were delayed Saturday for about three hours due to early morning rain showers. And championship play began at 2 p.m. beneath ominous skies.

But most of what fell from the sky came off the racket of Essex, who sprayed hail-like winners all around Coronado's Ty Anderson in the 6-2, 6-0 title-match rout at the MHS courts.

"I kept my concentration which is something I've had trouble doing lately," said Essex, a 1989 state doubles champion who plans to stay with singles this year.

"I proved to the college coaches that I could play doubles. Now I want to prove that I can play singles," he said. "I'm really pleased with the way I played. I think I'm on top of my game."

Ameel also provided evidence that singles is her game. In defeating Allison Marsh of San Angelo, 6-1, 6-1, she knocked off the defending District 4-5A singles champion. Marsh earned that title against Ameel last year in the district finals.

Odessa's Big D lights up WT Relays

Permian dethrones San Angelo, but Cowan turns most heads

ODESSA — Odessa Permian easily ended San Angelo's three-year reign in the championship throne room of the West Texas Relays at Ratliff Stadium Saturday, winning five events on the way to 106 points.

Abilene High, paced by the record setting 15.00 by Ernestine Pyle in the 100 meter hurdles, took the girls crown with a 92-85 edge over Lubbock Coronado while old faces retained crowns in the 4A and 3A divisions.

Lubbock Dunbar easily defended its 4A crown with a 104-64 margin over Andrews while Abilene Wylie had a 94-79 team margin over Canyon.

But if you really want to know what makes the heads turn for West Texas track fans, you only have to look as far as junior Dallas Cowan and his sprint buddies at Odessa High.

This is the straw that seems to stir the 4-5A track drink this year and the WT event is a good reason why.

The OHS sprint relay team, a state qualifier last year, is off and blazing again with Kevin Skinner, Cowan, Devorick Taylor and Patrick Brown. They teamed for a 41.27 and a new relays record with some near perfect handoffs.

Then Cowan goes out and wins the 100 in near human 10.55 and the 200 in 21.46, just .04 off the meet record.

"I would have to say that the 200 is my strongest race right now," said the exciting Cowan, who was third in both the state 100

Wranglers shoot their way to Hutch

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

SNYDER — Odessa College found the three-point shot in the Region V NJCAA men's basketball tournament, and used it to near perfection as the Wranglers beat McLennan Community College 90-71 in the tourney finals Saturday at the Scurry County Coliseum.

With the win, OC (30-5) earned the right to represent the region at the national junior college tournament March 20-24 at Hutchinson, Kan. It is the third consecutive year that the Wranglers have won the Region V title, but this will be the first of those three years that OC has earned a trip to Hutchinson. This is the year Region V has an automatic berth to the national tournament field of 16.

After starting out slow (5-of-20 from the field in the first 10 minutes) for the second consecutive night in the tourney and falling behind early 9-2, the Wranglers went on a three-point splurge in the latter part of the first half, sinking 5-of-7 treys in the the 10 minutes before intermission.

Holding a 41-29 lead at the break, OC began slow in the second half and saw the Highlanders score seven unanswered points before Wrangler coach Dennis Helms called a timeout. OC stemmed the tide momentarily, scoring seven of its own before another MCC score.

The Highlanders made another pair of runs, but were never closer than 10 points after the game clock eclipsed the 9:47 mark.

In the second half, OC again used the three-pointer with lethal effectiveness, making four of the five attempts in the half, and finishing the game with 9-of-14 effort from three-point range. According to MCC coach Ken DeWeese, the Wranglers' perimeter shooting made all the differerence.

Lamesa falls in 3A championship game

Rattlers retain perfect 35-0 record with 71-54 win over Tors

Kevin Jefferson scored 19 points and grabbed 12 rebounds Saturday as Navasota capped a 35-0 season by running past Lamesa 71-54 for the Class 3A state schoolboy basketball championship.

3A

Bert Butler had 32 points for Lamesa, which set a 3A tournament scoring record Thursday in defeating Gonzales 100-69.

"Thirty-five and zip, up in flames," said Navasota Coach Mike Dacus. "It wasn't one of our better games, but I can't seem to remember any other games at the moment."

Navasota led by as many as 23 points in the first half and at halftime 47-32, although the Rattlers made only 9 of 18 free throws and Lamesa 11 of 12.

Lamesa, 30-7, pulled to 51-43 in the third quarter but could get no closer.

Lamesa coach Wayne Roberts was assessed two technical fouls in the first half, apparently for arguing with officials, in the fast-paced game.

Members of the state 4A champion Navasota Rattlers proclaim their victory over Lamesa.

In the second half, Tommy Lewis of Navasota threw in two seldom-seen hook shots for baskets, drawing loud applause from the Navasota crowd.

The victory gave No. 1-ranked Navasota a title in its first trip to the 70th annual tournament.

Lamesa, in 10 appearances, has won three championships and finished second five times.

Dallas Kimball 65, Clear Lake 59

Charles Gentry scored 21 points and Dallas Kimball used an 18-0 run in beating defending champion Clear Lake in the Class 5A state schoolboy basketball championship.

5A

The title game drew 13,941 spectators and raised total attendance for the three-day tournament to 103,110, breaking the record 102,487 set in 1988.

A 12-0 run by Clear Lake, near Houston, pushed the Falcons (30-7) to a 34-25 lead, but Kimball responded with 12 unanswered points of its own for a 37-34 halftime advantage.

Hawks learn they aren't invincible

How could the Howard College Hawks — the nation's fifth ranked team — fail to make it to the finals of the Region V tournament, losing to McLennan Community College, 89-88, in Friday's semifinals?

Patterson

As Midland's Reggie Franklin noted last week, Howard, which won its first 24 games, scheduled several weaker teams early in the season to boost its record, morale and national image.

Then, when conference play began, tougher opponents rolled around and suddenly, Howard was beatable. The Hawks realized they were no longer invincible.

"Howard has been winning most of its games, but I think they're in a slump," Franklin said last week. "I think they peaked too soon."

Not to mention Howard hit only 4-of-16 free throws and shot but 47 percent from the field on 78 attempts against MCC.

Lynn Collins' 75-foot shot at the halftime buzzer in Friday's Odessa College win over South Plains was a site to behold.

Imagine standing on the three-point arc at the far end of the court, heaving the ball and finding nothing but net. Collins fell to the floor in disbelief after the shot fell. It was amazing.

That was the good news for OC. The bad news was the juvenile behavior of their rabid pack of fans.

During the OC-SPC game, every time South Plains' David Diaz, a native of Caracas, Venzuela, would enter the game, OC fans would stand up and chant "USA, USA."

Talk about no class.

Diaz could only look at the crowd in disbelief. No doubt puzzled why everyone claims Texans are such a friendly bunch.

I know basketball coaches are, by nature, a high-strung sort, but OC's Dennis Helms takes it a step further than high strung. His courtside theatrics make the Tasmanian Devil look calm by comparison.

Western Texas officials made for a good group of Region V hosts, but they need a little work on their facility. As in only one working pay phone in the joint.

As for the floor at the Scurry County Coliseum, the prevailing question is why do they have an NBA three-point arc in addition to the 19-9 line? As Midland College P.R. man H.A. Tuck said, "It's been years since Snyder has had an NBA franchise."

Apparently, officials got a good deal on a used floor.

And Texas State Technical Institute head coach Carl Love had the quote of the tournament, and as is his style, he made it a humorous one. Commenting on officiating, Love said "I called down to the sheriff's office and ask them to see if there was any outstanding warrants on those guys."

Love laughed and had no complaints after the game.

Hogs, Coogs meet in conference final

Associated Press

DALLAS — Todd Day got his revenge. He buried Baylor.

Day promised retribution after the Razorbacks lost to the Bears last month, wiping out their chances of gaining a No. 1 ranking. On Saturday he scored 22 points to lead the ninth-ranked Razorbacks to a 115-75 rout over Baylor in the semifinals of the Southwest Conference tournament.

"Baylor embarrassed us in Waco and I want to drive them into the ground," Day said before the game.

He did.

After whipping the Bears, Day said, "We were headed for No. 1 in February when Baylor stopped us. We had Baylor on our minds and wanted to get back at them."

Arkansas (25-4) meets the winner of the Houston-Texas semifinal game in the tournament finals at 3 p.m. on Sunday in Reunion Arena.

The 115 points beat the tournament record 111 points set by Houston in a 111-67 victory over Texas Christian in 1977. The 40-point margin was the second worst defeat in tournament history.

Baylor (16-13), which had upset Arkansas 82-77 on Feb. 10 when the Hogs were ranked No. 3 in the nation, fell behind 19-1 as the Bears committed six quick turnovers and missed their first eight shots.

Baylor players made Arkansas even madder by wearing the score on caps during pre-tournament functions.

"It was payback time," said Arkansas guard Lee Mayberry. "We wanted revenge."

The Bears didn't make a field goal for the first 6:51 until Julius Denton hit a jumper.

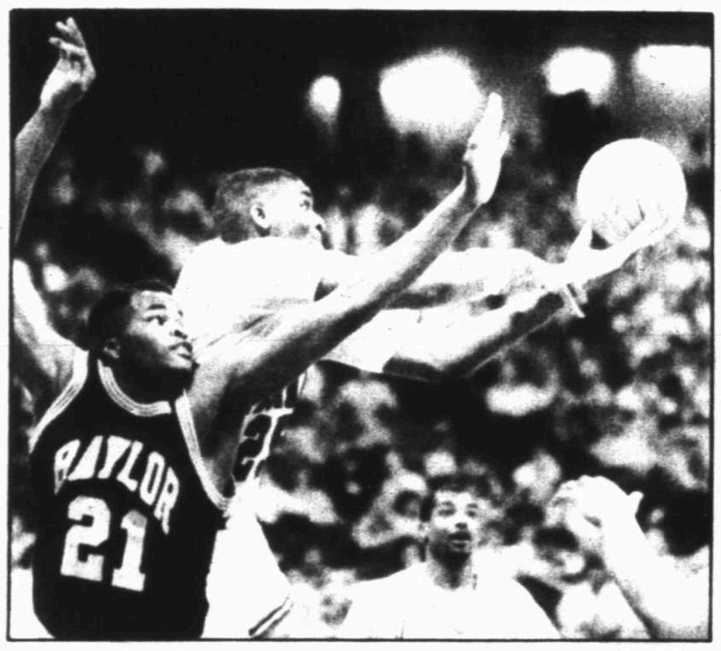

"We never did recover from the first five or six minutes of the game," said Baylor coach Gene Iba. "I've been coaching for a long time and I've never seen a team come at us more ready to play. Arkansas has people 12 deep. There's not a better team in the country."

Arkansas shot a sizzling 72 percent from the field in the first half to 32 percent for the Bears as it rolled to a 48-27 lead at intermission.

Day made seven of eight shots, including three 3-pointers as the Razorbacks blew the game open early by getting 13 points off turnovers.

Baylor made a brief charge by outscoring Arkansas 13-3 to start the second half but the Bears quickly succumbed to Arkansas' defensive pressure.

"We wanted this game bad, real bad," said Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson. "We were hitting on all eight cylinders. We played offense, defense and we shot it well. We were motivated and when we are it's hard to stop us."

Arkansas got into the quarterfinals with an 84-61 victory over Southern Methodist while Baylor defeated Texas Christian 72-62.

Arkansas shot 67 percent from the field for the game to 34 percent for Baylor.

Lenzie Howell added 14 points, Mario Credit had 15 and Lee Mayberry contributed 12 points to round out the Hogs in double figures.

"That was, in my 26 years of coaching, the best exhibition of basketball I've ever been associated with," said a satisfied Richardson.

Foster wouldn't be drawn into the officiating squabble.

"I won't talk about the officiating," Foster said.

Penders and Foster exchanged words at a distance during the game.

"I'm not sure what he was talking about," Penders said.

Houston, winning its 13th consecutive game to extend its record to 25-6, will meet the No. 9-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks, 25-4, in the SWC tournament finals at 3 p.m. Sunday. The Razorbacks inflicted a record 115-75 defeat on the Baylor Bears in the other semifinal.

"We're looking forward to playing Arkansas but we are awful tired," Foster said. "I just hope we can get a boost in our energy level."

Texas dropped to 21-8 but still held out hopes for an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament.

The Cougars had to beat back a late rally in which Texas overcame a 19-point deficit to pull within two points but Herrera and Smith had two and three free throws, respectively in the final minute of play. Lance Blanks' desperation three-pointer missed wildly at the buzzer in Texas' third loss to Houston this year.

Houston built a 15-point lead in the first half but after Penders got a technical for charging onto the court to protest a call the Longhorns snapped back to life.

Penders received two more technicals in the second half and was ejected from the game with 2:59 left.

The Cougars had a 20-6 run until the first half Penders' "T" and after Smith hit one of the two technical free throws the Longhorns went on a run of their own.

They outscored Houston 20-10 and trailed only 41-36 at halftime.

Houston outscored Texas 14-6 to start the second half behind Smith and Herrera. Penders got two more technicals, the third "T" came with Texas trailing 80-72.

Herrera finished with 23 points, and Upchurch and Smith had 21 each.

Houston defeated Texas twice during the regular season, 102-93 in Austin and 84-79 in Houston.

Houston 89, Texas 86

The Houston Cougars moved into the Southwest Conference championship tournament finals against Arkansas for the first time since 1984 on Saturday night.

But not without a first class fight from the Texas Longhorns and their coach, who says the league officiating belongs in a circus.

Craig Upchurch, Byron Smith, and Carl Herrera scored in double figures in the 89-86 victory over the Longhorns.

Texas coach Tom Penders was ejected from the game with three technicals and said later: "If you are going to have a circus, put a tent over it. The referees in this league are ruining the game."

Penders added: "It's a shame this type of thing had to happen. Officiating in this league is an embarrassment. It's a joke. There was a mugging out there after every three passes and the refs didn't call it."

Houston coach Pat Foster responded:

"As coaches in this league and representatives of the conference, we need to find a a way to do something to make sure this doesn't happen again. We need to uphold the dignity of the game."

MHS eliminated from soccer race

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High soccer team was mathematically eliminated from the District 3 soccer race with a 3-1 loss to the San Angelo Bobcats here Saturday.

MHS dropped to 4-5-1 with the loss, while San Angelo improved its record to 7-2-1, one-half-game behind district leader Abilene Cooper with two matches left in the regular season. Cooper beat Odessa Permian 2-0 in the other district match available by press time.

Midland High can finish at no better than 6-5-1, while San Angelo can finish at no worse than 7-4-1, and Cooper can place no worse than 8-3-1.

The Bulldogs had their chances Saturday, but Chris Lanning was wide right on two penalty kicks to hurt MHS chances. Steve Canon scored the only Bulldog goal on an assist by Joe Dominguez in the 20th minute.

Canon's shot was MHS' only try from the field.

Taylor added an insurance goal in the 68th minute.

Midland High hosts Odessa High at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, while Midland Lee returns to action at Odessa Permian.

Capriati continues beginner's success

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Jennifer Capriati beat 10th-seeded Laura Gildemeister of Peru 7-6 (9-7), 7-6 (7-4) Saturday to continue her amazing first-tournament run in the Virginia Slims of Florida.

Capriati, 13, of Saddlebrook, Fla., will face top-seeded Gabriela Sabatini in Sunday's title match. Sabatini advanced when third-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez retired with a strained left hamstring at 4-4 in the opening set.

Capriati is trying to become the youngest player ever, at 13 years and 11 months, to win a professional tournament.

Jordan's 45 leads Chicago by Indiana, 117-105

Associated Press

Michael Jordan scored 45 points to lead the Chicago Bulls to their 11th victory in the last 13 games, beating the Indiana Pacers, 117-105 Saturday night.

Scottie Pippen added 16 points and Will Perdue had a career high 14 for the Bulls, who are 24-3 at home mark.

Bulls center Bill Cartwright returned to the starting lineup for the first time since Feb. 23 and scored four points in limited action. Cartwright had missed nine of the Bulls last 10 games because of back spasms.

Reggie Miller led the Pacers with 30 points while Rik Smits added 20 and Chuck Person had 14, six below his average.

In the final quarter, eight points was the closest the Pacers got as they lost for the first time in the last five games against the Bulls.

In the third quarter, the Bulls opened a 16-point lead when Jordan scored from the top of the key, his 10th point of the period, making it 95-79.

Indiana trailed 40-39 when Smits scored on a 10-foot jumper at 9:19 of the second period. The Bulls then scored eight straight points and led 48-39 at 7:31. Chicago's biggest lead of the first half was 64-52.

Rockets 105, Mavericks 95

Akeem Olajuwon scored 25 points to lead six Houston players in double figures as the Rockets increased their season-high winning streak to six games.

Olajuwon also had 16 rebounds while Mitchell Wiggins scored 19 points, Sleepy Floyd 17, Buck Johnson and Otis Thorpe 12 each and Vernon Maxwell 11. Derek Harper led Dallas with 27 points, Sam Perkins had 21 and Rolando Blackman 16 before leaving in the third quarter with a strained left groin.

After Dallas tied the score 70-70 on the first basket of the fourth period, Houston went on a 13-2 spurt and led 83-72 with 7:22 left. Dallas pulled to 91-83 on a 3-point shot by Brad Davis with 2:28 left but that was the closest the Mavericks got.

After trailing 11-8, Houston outscored Dallas 12-1 to lead 20-12. It was 20-16 after one period and Houston took a 40-28 lead by scoring eight straight points. The Rockets led 47-34 with 1:50 left in the first half and 51-41 at the break.

Spurs 118, Nuggets 111

David Robinson scored 26 points and fellow rookie Sean Elliott added a season-high 24 to lead San Antonio over Denver.

Elliott hit 12 of 16 shots in 31 minutes.

San Antonio held off a Denver rally in the fourth period when the Nuggets twice closed within three points. the last time at 114-111 on a 3-point shot by Fat Lever with 39.3 seconds left.

But San Antonio's Rod Strickland hit a jumper with 25.8 seconds remaining and added a free throw with 8.9 seconds left to give the Spurs a 117-111 lead.

Willie Anderson had 23 points for the Spurs while Walter Davis came off the bench to lead Denver with 21.

The Spurs went ahead for good early in the game when they outscored Denver 16-6 in the final 3½ minutes of the first period to lead 38-28. Anderson had 15 points in the period.

San Antonio's biggest lead was 18 points in the third period on a dunk by Robinson with 8:46 to go. Denver began its comeback later in the period when Michael Adams connected on three 3-point goals.

Blazers 116, Bullets 113

Clyde Drexler scored 17 of his 31 points in the third period as Portland beat Washington and stretched their winning streak to five games.

The win gave Portland a sweep of their six games in Atlantic Division cities this season as well as their first 4-0 road trip since Feb. 21-26, 1978. The Trail Blazers won in New York on Tuesday night, Boston on Wednesday night and Philadelphia on Friday night.

The Trail Blazers appeared to have taken control with a 14-0 third-period run that gave them an 84-72 lead. Portland led 93-83 after three quarters.

Washington, which trailed 112-100 with 3:26 remaining, used a pressing defense to erase most of Portland's lead over the next three minutes. Bernard King had a chance to put the Bullets in front with 38.7 seconds left but missed both free throws.

Drexler missed a long jumper but Portland's Buck Williams got the rebound. He passed to Danny Young, who was fouled by Darrell Walker. Young made both free throws with 9.5 seconds left for the final margin. Walker and King missed 3-pointers for Washington.

Suns 101, Timberwolves 98

Eddie Johnson scored the winning basket in overtime and Kevin Johnson scored 24 points as Phoenix took their fifth straight victory, four on the road.

Phoenix never trailed in the overtime and Minnesota scored just one point in its first eight possessions of the extra period.

After Tom Chambers' basket put the Suns on top in overtime, Kevin Johnson made a pair of free throws to make it 98-95 with 54 seconds remaining. Eddie Johnson's 18-foot jumper clinched the game with 13 seconds to go.

Chambers, who scored 21 points, added another free throw before Minnesota's Pooh Richardson closed the scoring with a 3-pointer.

Kevin Johnson's free throw tied the score 94-94 with 28 seconds left in regulation. Minnesota's Tony Campbell then lost the ball while driving to the basket with 13 seconds remaining but Dan Majerle's last-second shot rimmed out for Phoenix.

Minnesota used a 16-4 run and Sam Mitchell's 11 fourth-quarter points to overtake the Suns. Tod Murphy's score off a pass from Campbell with 1:46 remaining put the Timberwolves ahead for the first time since early in the game 94-92.

For Minnesota, Campbell scored 27 points and Mitchell came off the bench to score 25.

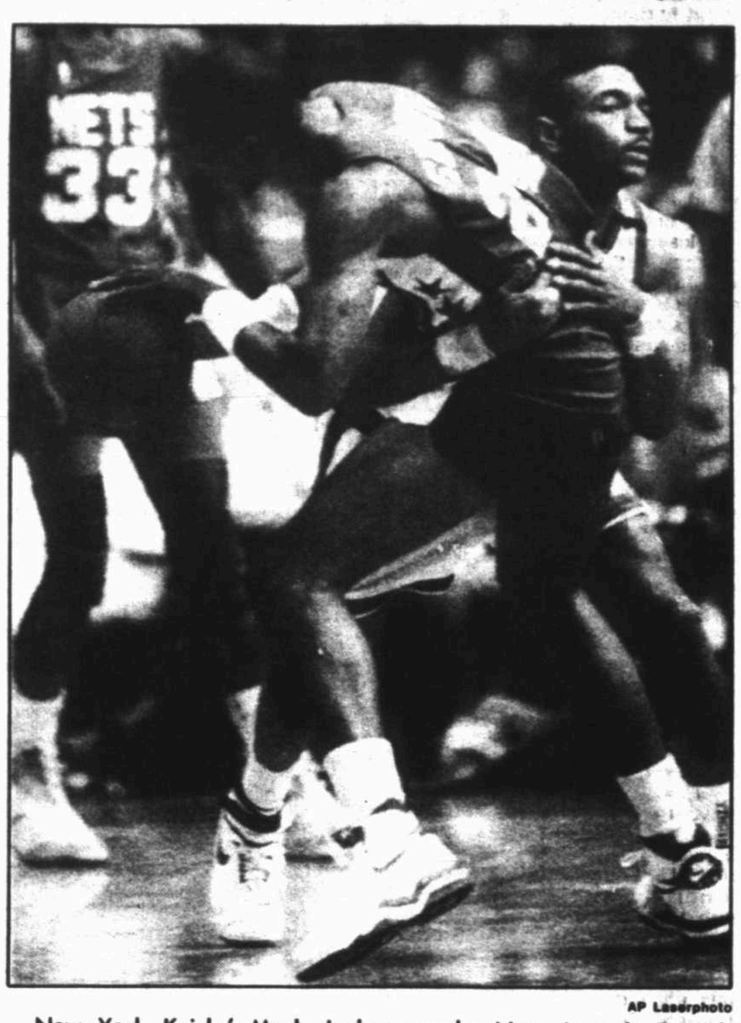

Knicks 110, Nets 91

Patrick Ewing scored 31 points on 13-for-15 shooting and the New York Knicks blew a 23-point lead but recovered to beat New Jersey, handing the Nets a club record-matching 18th consecutive road defeat.

The Nets, playing without starters Sam Bowie and Roy Hinson because of illness and injury, also lost 18 straight road games in 1987-88. They have lost 21 of their last 24 games overall.

New York, which got 21 points from Gerald Wilkins and 17 from Johnny Newman, outscored the Nets 38-19 in the fourth quarter after losing all of a 41-18 lead.

The Knicks outshot the Nets 72 percent to 19 percent in the first quarter.

Texas-El Paso victorious in WAC title

EL PASO (AP) — Marlon Maxey scored 17 points and Greg Foster 16 to lead Texas-El Paso to a 75-58 victory over Hawaii in the Western Athletic Conference tournament championship game Saturday night.

The win gives UTEP (21-10) an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament that begins Thursday. Hawaii fell to 23-9 and awaited a possible at-large berth in the tournament.

Bowe and Chris Gaines scored 14 points apiece for the Rainbows and Terry Houston added 12. For UTEP, Stewart added 13 points and Mark McCall 12.

The Miners ran off 12 unanswered points early in the second half. The run left them ahead 48-35 with 15 minutes to go and Hawaii never got closer than nine points after that.

A 3-point shot by Gaines with 1:38 left cut UTEP's lead to 65-55. But the Miners scored three dunks and a fast break to ice the game. McCall made one of the dunks as Henry Hall bounce passed the ball above the rim to set it up.

The lead changed hands 10 times in the first half, but the Miners finally took control when Foster put in a layup with 6:17 remaining to put UTEP ahead 24-22.

The Miners' zone defense shut down Hawaii shooting, holding the Rainbows without a 2-point field goal for the final 13:36 of the first half. Two 3- pointers by Bowe and seven free throws in the final 5:09 kept Hawaii in the game.

Hawaii hit only 33 percent (17-of-52) percent from the field while UTEP made 50 percent (28-56). The Miners out-rebounded Hawaii, 41-28, led by Maxey's 11 boards.

The Miners led at halftime 35-29.

Foster was voted the Most Valuable Player of the WAC tournament. Joining Foster on the All-tournament team were Raymond Dudley and Jeff Bowling of Air Force, Troy Bowe of Hawaii and Stewart of UTEP.

Huston takes lead at PGA Honda

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — John Huston gained some breathing room from the brace of double bogeys that ambushed Tom Watson and moved into a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the Honda Classic.

Huston, a third-year touring pro looking for his first victory, coaxed a 2-under-par 70 from gusty winds and completed three rounds at 211, five under par on the TPC at Eagle Trace.

Mark Brooks, also with a 70, came on to take second at 212, one stroke back with one round to go.

Watson, still seeking to regain the form and flair that helped him to five British Open victories, had to overcome two double bogeys to remain in contention.

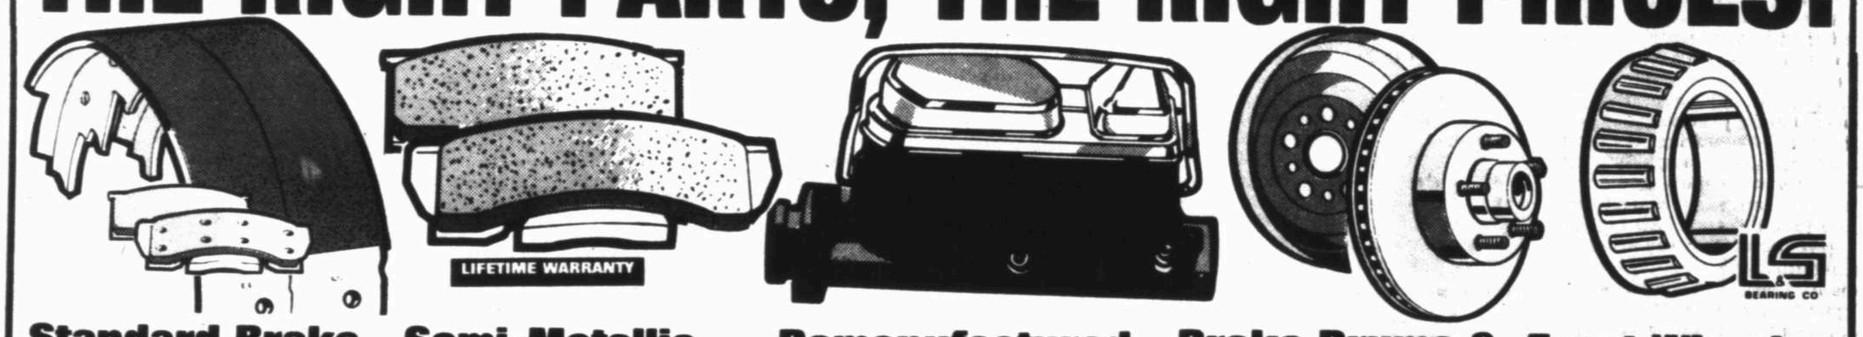

"I still have a chance. I'm still within reach," Watson said after he battled back from two shots into the water and scored a 73.

He was tied for third at 215, one under par and four strokes away from the leader, with current British Open title-holder Mark Calcavecchia, Hall of Fame member Ray Floyd, Dr. Gil Morgan and Bob Estes.

Calcavecchia, who all but eliminated himself with a 42 on the back nine of the second round, came back with a solid 69.

Floyd, 47, the United States' last Ryder Cup captain, shot 70. Estes had a 71 and the 43-year-old Morgan matched par 72.

"It just didn't go in the hole for us and it did for them," DeWeese said. "They shot the ball well and we didn't. These are evenly matched teams, and there's not a 90-71 difference between the two. I'd even say if we played five more games, we'd win all five."

However, Helms begged to differ.

"I felt we could score against this team, and even after the slow start I wasn't as worried as last night because I knew we'd get our shots against them," he said.

The OC player who got the lion's share of shots was guard Lynn Collins, who scored a game-high 28 points and was 10-of-13 from the field, including a perfect three-of-three from beyond the arc. Collins, who was named the tournament MVP, also came away with a 5-of-8 mark from the free throw line.

"When you're going with a good guard on top, you have to get the ball to him when it counts," Helms said.

Other Wranglers in double figures were Patrick Nash with 23 points, Orlando Berry with 16, and Rodney Dent with 12.

Maurice Gandy led the Highlanders with 26 points, and Billy Carlock had 20.

and 200 last year as a sophomore. "I'm running relaxed in the 100, but I don't feel that kick that I usually have. I would like the time to be a little better in the 100. I would like to get state ranked times as soon as possible."

Permian's Lloyd Hill, another attraction, won the 400 as expected in 48.93, but was somewhat upstaged by Sweetwater's Kiley Anglin, who set a 4A meet record with a 48.08.

San Angelo's Joey Bonds, a hurdle standout the last two years, won both hurdle events and continues to establish himself as the man to beat in the West.

But tape-across-the-chest glory was not to be found among Tall City entrants, who didn't win an event in what might be considered the roughest outing in the 46-year history of the event.

The Midland High boys scored only 16 points, but it was two Bulldogs who gave Midland its best results with two second places.

MHS' Chris Spratt placed second in the shot put on Friday and John Braun joined him on Saturday with a season best 151-0 second place in the discus.

"I started out this year throwing well over 150 in practice, but was only in the 140s during the first three meets," said Braun. "I'm just trying to get it all back now."

Braun was an early starter last year and faded toward district. This event gave hope that the trend is reversing this year.

Midland Lee's best finish was a third place by sophomore sprinter Brett Sullivan in the 200 with a fine 22.04. But with Odessa High's Cowan and Bradley Givens in the field and Cowan, Permian's Chris Comer and Taylor in the 100 field, the sophomore had his eyes opened.

"I had heard of all these guys and I guess I came in here a little scared. But I'm going to work hard for the district meet," said Sullivan.

Midland High's Annette Glover, a region qualifier last year, had a third place in the 100 with a 12.47 and she was even beaten by district foe LaRhonda Kendrick of Abilene High. Glover was so angry after the event that she wouldn't talk about the race.

Lee's third place by Mary Ann Isom in the discus on Friday was the best for the Lee girls, who also had a fourth in the 1600 relay. Sophomore Traci Logan had two fifths and ran a leg on the relay team.

Lubbock Coronado's Sheryl Tinnell set a new girls record in the 400 with a 57.21 to repeat that title while Permian's Dorley Patton was credited with a new record in the 300 hurdles with a 47.74. This is the first year for the event.

Canyon's Korbin Reeves set a 3A record in the 800 with a 1:59.19. In all eight records fell with two set Friday by Nikki Heath of Sweetwater in the girls long jump and high jump. The girls had five of the eight records.

Andrews' Kelly Hubert won the 4A 100 with an 11.0, but was second in the 200. Andrews' Dustin Dunaway won the pole vault late Friday with a 13-6, but was not reported until Saturday.

TENNIS

"I just played a lot more agressively today," Ameel said. "I just went after it."

Marsh stayed with a deep game that kept Ameel near her own baseline most of the match. And Ameel adapted to her opponent's strategy without much difficulty.

"I was trying to attack the net more, but she wouldn't let me. So I just tried to force her to make the mistakes."

Marsh reached the finals with a 6-4, 6-2 semifinal win over Susan Johnson of MHS.

In other A action, Morris Creath and Chris Kiser of Coronado took a 6-3, 6-1 decision over fellow Mustangs Mitish Patel and Monte Williams in boys doubles. And Lubbock Monterey's girls doubles team of Laura Worley and Amber Simpson earned a 6-2, 5-7, 6-0 title win over Odessa Permian's Rhonda Price and Kathy Burian.

Lee's top performers in the two-day event were Jason Gooch and Ben Bacon. The pair teamed for the B division championship in boys doubles at the Lee courts. Gooch and Bacon knocked off Odessa High's Hunter Pomroy and Mike Hall, 7-5, 6-1, in the finals.

Lee finished the tourney second overall in the B division with 17 points, a single point behind Big Spring. Odessa Permian was third in B with 10.

The other local winner Saturday was Amanda Connally of Lee Freshman who outlasted teammate JoAnn Kelly to win the C division girls singles title.

Carlsbad trips Lee in finals

From Staff Reports

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Midland Lee lost in the championship finals of the Carlsbad baseball tournament, 6-0, to host Carlsbad Saturday while Midland High took consolation honors in the tournament with a 4-1 win over Plainview.

Craig Young, who was named MVP of the tournament, limited Lee to six hits on the way to the shutout.

This year's NCAA Tournament is big, big, big

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — If there weren't already a movie by the same name, they could go ahead and entitle this year's NCAA Tournament "Big" — as in Big Eight, Big East and Big Ten.

From those three conferences should come as many as nine of the tournament's top 12 seeds.

More than 290 Division I teams are eligible. But those three leagues all by themselves may own almost one-fourth of the bids when the 64-team field is unveiled Sunday.

"I guess popular wisdom seems to be that if your conference doesn't have "Big" somewhere in its name, this may not be your year," said Jim Delany, chairman of the nine-man selection committee and commissioner of the Big Ten.

"But there is absolutely no way to forecast anything with certainty," Delany added. "Which teams will get upset in the early rounds? Which teams will get to the Final Four? That's what makes the tournament so much fun. Nobody knows what's going to happen."

Delany will emerge, bracket in hand, about 6:15 p.m. EST Sunday from the conference room where committee members have been holed up behind armed guard for three exhaustive days. Sequestered almost as tightly as jurors in a murder trial, the committee and senior NCAA staff members Tom Jernstedt and Dave Cawood began their deliberations shortly after dawn on Friday.

Their finished product will be announced live on CBS at 6:30 p.m. EST Sunday, and a three-week run at the national championship will start with first-round games the following Thursday.

"The tournament is 52 years old, but the 64-team format is only about five years old," said Delany, in his first year as chairman. "Just about every time we do something a little bit different, you could say it's the first time we've done it. So when people ask me if the Big Eight could get three

No. 1 seeds this year, I just say there's never been a conference with three No. 1 seeds before, but there's no rule against it."

Eight of the top 10 teams in this week's Associated Press poll hail from the Big Eight, East and Ten. The Big Eight, the new kid on the big-time basketball block, has held the No. 1 spot nine weeks in a row, with current No. 1 Oklahoma being the third Big Eighter at the top.

Kansas, which figured to meet the Sooners in Saturday's semifinals of the Big Eight Tournament, is No. 2. Missouri, the regular season champion, is No. 6 after being No. 1 for four weeks in January and February. Oklahoma and Kansas figure to be good bets for No. 1 seeds in at least two of the four regionals. Missouri also could have been a No. 1, but the Tigers lost in the opening round of the Big Eight tournament.

But Big East powers Syracuse, No. 4 in the poll, and No. 5 Georgetown are also possibilities for top seeds. Some observers feel as many as six Big Ten, and possibly more, will get bids.

Outside the three "bigs," only third-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas figures to get a No. 1 seed. The Rebels could get tabbed No. 1 in the West Regional.

Delany, who speaks of the "culture" of the selection committee as it has evolved over the decades, says decisons will be based strictly on how best to balance the bracket.

"If, in the committee's view after reviewing all the objective data and analyzing it, the top seeds in the country are all from one conference, then that's just what we'll do," he said. "It's purely hypothetical at this point. But if that's the case, that's simply the case, and we'll work with that."

In reaching its decisions, the committee uses computer rankings, regional reports from coaches' groups, news service and other opinion polls and committee members' own observations. Each of the four geographic regionals — East, West, Midwest and Southeast — are seeded 1 through 16. Thirty of the 64 bids go automatically to conference champions or conference tournament champions.

That leaves 34 at-large bids for the committee to pass out — each one worth more than a quarter of a million dollars.

One rule strictly enforced, Delany said, is that no committee member is allowed to lobby solely for his own school, conference or region. When the committee weighs the merits of a school that a member has a particular interest in, that member leaves the room.

If not for this rule, Delany might be in an uncomfortable position as commissioner of the Big Ten. There have already been charges in the some media circles that he plans to make sure the Big Ten gets all the bids it can.

Stoppage now second-longest ever

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Although they can't agree on a method to solve the salary arbitration deadlock, baseball owners and players are only about $12 million a year apart on economic issues.

And that's in an industry that is expected to earn $1.3 billion in 1990. The sides, who began talks on Nov. 28, are arguing over less than 1 percent of the pie.

The owners' lockout enters its 25th day Sunday, the second-longest work stoppage in baseball history behind the 50-day strike in 1981. And opening day is just 22 days away.

"There has got to be a solution," Seattle Mariners owners Jeff Smulyan said Friday night. "We've got to find a way to stop the animosity."

Both sides distrust each other. The players remind owners of the conspiracy against free agents following the 1985 and 1986 seasons, estimated by clubs to have cost players $70,616,000 and by the union to have cost as much as $200 million.

Owners distrust the union, arguing that players never seriously considered their revenue sharing and pay-for-performance proposals.

"We have an economic responsibility to the fans and everyone else to try to keep this thing viable," said Bud Selig of Milwaukee, chairman of the owners' Player Relations Committee and one of the fathers of revenue sharing.

There are three major outstanding economic issues — salary arbitration, the minimum salary and the benefit plan.

■ Salary arbitration: The union wants the top half of players with between two and three years of service to be made eligible and estimates this would cost between $4 and $5 million. Owners, who countered with a $4 million yearly bonus pool, claim arbitration would have a ripple effect on salaries of two-year players that would cost as much as $4 million.

■ Minimim salary: Players want $105,000 while owners offer $90,000. There are about 70 players each season at the minimum, meaning the sides are about $1 million apart.

■ Benefit plan: Players want owners to make an average yearly contribution of $57 million while owners are offering $50 million.

Baseball salaries up again

Associated Press

The average baseball salary in 1990 will be $557,000, according to a management estimate, a $60,000 increase from the end of last year.

The increase between seasons is the highest ever by dollar amount and it represents a 12 percent boost from the 1989 average of $497,254.

It would have been even higher except that many players hedged against the owners' lockout by agreeing to multiyear contracts with large signing bonuses and lower 1990 salaries. According to a computer projection by the owners' Player Relations Committee, the average would have been $592,000 without the large signing bonuses.

The PRC and the Major League Baseball Players Association both prorate signing bonuses over the length of contracts. For instance, Rickey Henderson and Oakland agreed to a four-year, $12 million contract last fall. He got a $1 million signing bonus, a $2 million salary for 1990 and $3 million salaries for 1991 and the following two seasons. The portion of the contract devoted to 1990 is considered to be $2.25 million, even though the contract averages to $3 million a season.

The 12 percent increase this year follows a 13.3 percent rise last year. Salaries resumed their sharp escalation after baseball agreed to a four-year $1.06 billion contract with CBS and a four-year $400 million deal with ESPN after the 1988 season.

There will be 152 players making $1 million or more this season and 27 making $2 million or more, including Milwaukee's Robin Yount — the only $3 million player at $3.2 million. That's up from 106 $1 million players last season and 20 $2 million players in 1989.

According to PRC estimates, salaries of players with between two and three years of service — the group at the center of the stalemated labor talks — will rise only 6.4 percent, from $215,656 to $229,535. Since not all players in that group will be signing until later this week, the estimate was made based on 43 of the 83 players in that class who had agreed to contracts as of early last week.

Johnson has talent to carry UNLV Rebels all the way

By KEVIN KERNAN
Copley News Service

FULLERTON, Calif. — You don't have to look at the perfectly sculpted 6-foot-7, 250-pound body to realize that Nevada-Las Vegas forward Larry Johnson is a basketball stud.

You don't have to look at the brilliant passing touch or the quick feet, a combination rarely found in hulking big men.

Even his diamond-hard look of concentration isn't the tipoff to how great a player Johnson is and will be — did someone mention Karl Malone? No, on this night, all you have to do is look behind the basket to a row of tables along the baseline of Titan Gym on the campus of Fullerton State.

Sitting there are 10 men who watch Johnson's every move as UNLV dismantles the Titans, 103-85. They are NBA scouts and general managers.

The NBA frowns on its members talking about college juniors, but here's what one Eastern GM had to say about Johnson after the game last weekend:

"Look at the way he handles himself on the court. He's a man out there. Look how quick he is. Look how smart he plays the game. No wasted movement and he never takes a bad shot. He can pass. He's a team player."

So this scout thinks it might be best for Johnson to jump to the NBA? Just as he made the jump from Odessa Junior College, where he was the JC player of the year, to UNLV, where he has led the Runnin' Rebels to a 26-5 record?

"No," the GM said cautiously. "You love to see junior college kids like that stay in school that final year, because they need all the coaching they can get."

Translation: Johnson should pass up the temptation to declare for the NBA draft, stay in school and develop a 15-foot jump shot.

For now, Larry Demetric Johnson is not thinking NBA. He has more immediate concerns. UNLV, seeded second to surprising New Mexico State, opens play tomorrow (March 9) in the Big West Conference tournament at Long Beach State.

Regardless of what happens in the tournament, UNLV is considered certain to get a bid when the NCAA Tournament field is announced Sunday.

That will cap a strange season, filled with suspensions, suspense and adversity, but UNLV has won 12 of its last 13 games and appears to be peaking at the right time.

This is a tough team whose players' grit is reflected in many ways.

Sophomore guard Anderson Hunt is a pressure shooter — remember his three-pointer that gave UNLV a 68-67 victory over Arizona in the NCAAs last season?

Center David Butler and forward Tracy Augmon take scoring pressure off the backcourt, and Coach Jerry Tarkanian has a strong bench in muscular Moses Scurry and rail-thin Travis Bice.

Even The Shark thinks his team may be moving in for the kill.

"No one has played a tougher schedule than us and nobody has gone through a period like we have in the last month," Tarkanian said. "NBA teams don't play 13 games in 30 nights. We've basically played our whole season since Dec. 23."

The glue to this team is Johnson, who averaged 20.8 points and 11.2 rebounds this season.

"He's the most unbelievable kid I've ever coached," Tarkanian said. "He's probably the nicest kid you'll ever meet. He's so unselfish."

Sometimes too unselfish. About five weeks ago, Tarkanian had to take Johnson aside and tell him to shoot more.

"He's such an outstanding player, we need him to dominate at times, something he's very capable of doing," Tarkanian said.

Noted Johnson about his unselfish ways, "If I'm six feet away from the basket and David (Butler) is two feet away, I'm going to give him the ball for the dunk. That's just the way I am."

Johnson's story could have turned out differently had he not gotten help from concerned adults when he was a child.

Johnson moved from Tyler, Texas, to Dallas when he was 12. He soon found himself in trouble with the law. Nothing serious, but trouble just the same.

"I was robbing bikes, that kind of stuff," he said.

He was caught four times. After the fourth time, he was put "on a big white bus" and sent to a work farm for the weekend. That's when his life began to turn around. The big white bus belonged to the Police Athletic League and Johnson started putting all his efforts into sports.

"For the next few years, I waited on that bus," he said with a smile. Johnson, who was 6-foot-2 in the seventh grade, fought in the PAL Boxing League for five years.

"Because I was so big, I was boxing guys much older than me," Johnson said. "I was fighting 22-year-old guys when I was 17. That's when I decided to concentrate on basketball. Without the PAL, though, I would have been in big trouble."

And now, if UNLV keeps its act together, look out Big West, there's big trouble ahead.

"I think we're ready to do some damage," Johnson said. "We went through some tough times, but we're ready to go now."

Crippled by steroids, boxer fights back

By JIM LEFKO
San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO — Imagine subjecting a laboratory rat to more than a decade of continuous steroid use.

Sometimes the rat would be forced to slurp up the body-modifying drug in oral form. Other times, the dose would be injected with a needle.

Just for variety, the specific steroid would be rotated. Dianabol for a couple of months, then Winstrol and for good measure, Equipose, which was expressly designed for horses.

Then to glean further data, megadoses of 10 and 100 times the normal amount would be administered. Occasionally the rat would be subjected to stacking, too, where both oral and injectable steroids would be ingested.

If animal-rights activists ever got wind of such a cruel and unusual experiment, the uproar would be unprecedented.

No one in his right mind would ever subject a rat to that type of test.

But San Antonio resident Bob Hazelton, who wonders now about the state of his own mind, spent the better part of his adult life assaulting his body in similar fashion.

"That crap made me pay a big price," he said during a recent youth coaches conference. "It took me 11 years, losing two legs and having two heart attacks to know that you can't be stronger than steroids."

Wheelchair-bound Hazelton, a man who once fought George Foreman, is ample proof that steroids won this particular battle.

But Hazelton is fighting back with what is left of his once well-defined body and unquenchable spirit. He has dedicated his life to preaching about the evils of steroids.

A real-life Johnny Appleseed, Hazelton plants sees of doubt in the minds of youngsters who might be tempted to take shortcuts for enhanced athletic performance.

"Everywhere I've gone, kids have said they didn't know (how they felt about steroids). When they see this, they believe. I don't think anybody wants to wind up in a wheelchair," he said.

"I was 6'6" and 187 pounds in 1969 when I fought Foreman. That's what you'd call very skinny. The fight lasted one round. A minute and 26 seconds. I wound up getting embarrassed. After the fight, I didn't want anyone to see me.

"I decided I needed to change something. I moved to England and started on Dianabol, two times a day, seven days a week. I went to 200 pounds, and began getting stronger. When I came back to America I was a new person.

Roid Rage.

Hazelton, and those close to him during his Dianabol days, learned all about Roid Rage.

Between 1971 and 1973, the chemically altered fighter registered 13 straight knockout victories.

His physique was impressive, but his behavior deteriorated. Plain and simple, Hazelton turned into a jerk.

"I was starting to use more steroids during that period. None of my friends wanted to be around me when I was in a bad mood. I wasn't a good person," he said.

In the 10th round of a blood bath, Hazelton's eyes were battered shut and his nose broken. The fight was stopped and Hazelton, looking for that extra edge again, decided to go back on the juice.

Two years later, and fortified by steroids, he got another shot at Foster.

"I upped my steroid use. My legs started killing me and friend said, 'You're having circulation problems.' "

COLLEGE ROUNDUP

OU emerges as team to beat

Sooners' shooting overwhelms KU

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hitting 63 percent from the field and 100 per cent from the line, top-ranked Oklahoma looked every bit like the best team in the country.

But Kansas hardly seemed worthy of its No. 2 ranking Saturday when the Sooners won 95-77 in the semifinals of the Big Eight tournament.

"I said earlier in the year that every team is entitled to five outstanding games where you're clicking on all cylinders, and we did that today," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said. "It was pretty simple. We hit our shots. They didn't hit their shots."

In the Big Eight's second 1-vs.-2 matchup of the season, the Sooners (25-5) held Kansas (29-4) without a field goal for more than seven minutes during a stretch early in the second half.

Skeeter Henry scored 24 points and helped trigger a 24-8 run in the decisive stretch as the Sooners, perfect in 18 foul shots, forced the Jayhawks to shoot only 40 percent. The Sooners outrebounded Kansas 40-26.

"We just kept pushing the ball up the floor and didn't allow them to set up their defense," Oklahoma's Smokey McCovery said.

In the second half, Kansas shot only 31 percent as all-conference guard Kevin Pritchard went 0-for-7 from 3-point range.

"It was sort of like a horror show in the second half," Kansas coach Roy Williams said. "We had good shots, but they didn't go in. I didn't do very much to help them out."

Williams agreed the Sooners' zone defense had much to do with his team's shaky shooting.

"Oklahoma went to a zone and stayed in that, and our shots wouldn't fall," he said.

The Jayhawks, whose victory total is the second-highest in school history, still hope for a No. 1 seed when the NCAA field is announced Sunday.

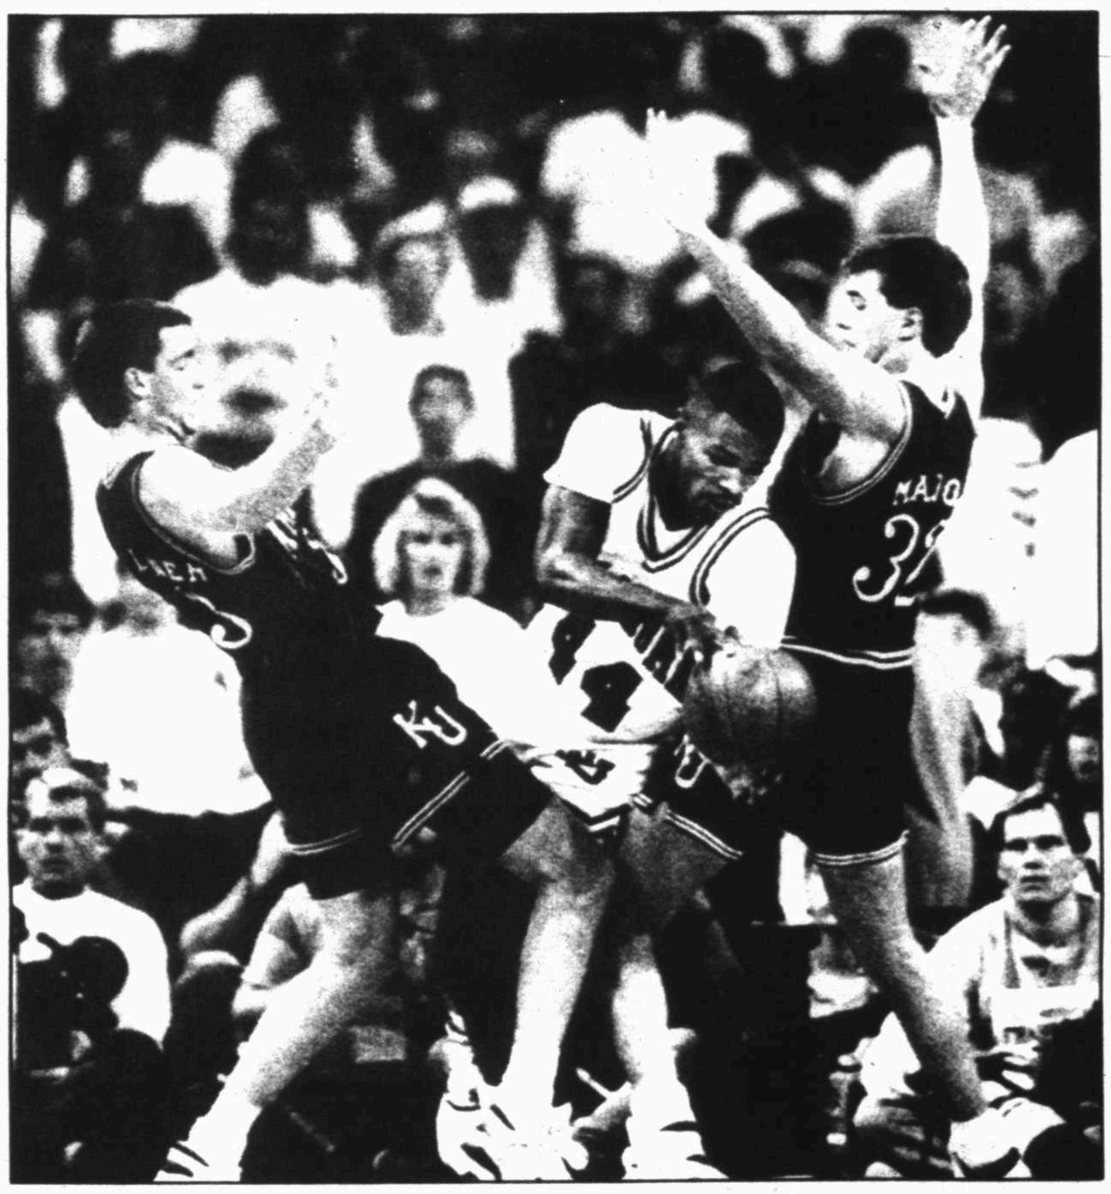

"We've got to make sure this doesn't get us down and hinder our performance going into the NCAA tournament," said Jeff Gueldner, who led Kansas with 21 points. "They didn't allow us to get the ball inside, but the biggest blame is on us not making our shots. It's more frustrating than intimidating."

The teams were playing each other in Kemper Arena for the first time since the 1988 NCAA final, when the Jayhawks won 83-79.

No. 4 Syracuse 73, Villanova 61

Derrick Coleman had 25 points and 23 rebounds, setting a Syracuse career scoring record and a Big East tournament rebounding mark in a semifinal victory over Villanova.

The win, Syracuse's first in three tries against Villanova this season, advanced the fourth-ranked Orangemen into Sunday's tournament final against No. 8 Connecticut. The Huskies beat No. 5 Georgetown 65-60 to reach the Big East final for the first time.

No. 8 Connecticut 65
No. 5 George town 60

Eighth-ranked Connecticut used an 14-0 run, with 12 of the points coming from its bench, rallying past No. 5 Georgetown 65-60 on Saturday for a berth in the championship game of the Big East tournament.

The Huskies (27-5) followed their deciding run with a near-perfect free throw performance to secure the victory that sends them into Sunday's championship game against Syracuse.

No. 13 Michigan 127, Iowa 96

Demetrius Calip scored 17 of his 22 points in the first half as No. 13 Michigan beat Iowa, establishing a Crisler Arena scoring record and avenging an earlier loss to the Hawkeyes.

Virginia 69, No. 17 Clemson 66

John Crotty scored 16 points and Kenny Turner ignited a second-half surge as Virginia held on to beat 17th-ranked Clemson to gain the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

With Clemson leading 42-40 with 14:46 left, Turner scored on a 3-pointer and a three-point play to key a 12-3 run that gave the Cavaliers a 52-45 lead with 11:09 to go.

Georgia Tech 83, Duke 72

Brian Oliver scored 11 points in a crucial 15-3 run as 14th-ranked Georgia Tech beat No. 12 Duke and set up the first Atlantic Coast Conference tournament final without a team from North Carolina.

The Yellow Jackets (23-6) play Virginia, which beat Clemson 69-66 earlier Saturday.

Christian Laettner scored successive baskets in a 30-second stretch to give Duke a tie at 60 with 7:38 remaining. Oliver started the run at 7:23 with a 3-pointer, followed by another 3-pointer by Dennis Scott. Oliver scored on a leaning jumper at 4:02 to stretch the lead to 68-61.

No. 15 Arizona 85, Stanford 61

Jud Buechler scored 18 points and Ed Stokes added 15 as 15th-ranked Arizona wore down Stanford in the semifinals of the Pacific-10 Conference Tournament.

The second-seeded Wildcats (23-6), seeking their third straight championship, will face UCLA in Sunday's championship game. The fourth-seeded Bruins (20-9) defeated Arizona State 79-78 in Saturday's first semifinal after the Sun Devils ousted top-seeded Oregon State in the quarterfinals.

Ohio St. 93, No. 19 Minnesota 83

SWIMMING

Fennell picked up the pace with the first of his two meet records, a 1:45.63 in the 200 free. The top three finishers all beat the old mark of 1:46.61 set by a former El Paso Coronado swimmer.

Then it was Seay's turn. Swimming in his final regional meet, the MHS senior qualified for his third state meet with a winning time of 2:00.01 in the 200 individual medley, just missing the meet record of 1:59.98.

If the rest of the field had had enough by then, it was too bad. Two events later, Houston obliterated the 100-yard butterfly field with his meet record time of 51.46 — more than three seconds ahead of second place.

Two events after Houston's record swim, Fennell got his second regional record of the day with a 4:47.65 in the 500 free. Alan Reed of Midland Lee held the old record of 4:48.65.

Houston was touched out by El Paso Hanks' Brent Ware in the 100 backstroke, but Seay picked up the slack in the 100 breaststroke with his second near-record performance. His time of 58.79 just missed the meet mark of 58.76, but he still won by two-and-a-half seconds.

Despite the convincing wins, Seay said his competition was stiff.

"This was not an easy meet for me," he said. "Somebody always comes up and tries to challenge you, no matter how fast you think you are."

Seay will be seeking to improve '89 state meet finishes of sixth in the breaststroke and 13th in the I.M.

Fennell, who was 12th in both distance races at last year's state meet, is hoping for a better performance after two weeks of tapering.

"I have tapered, but I usually do better on my second taper," he said.

For Houston, the state meet will be a new experience. But don't bet on this sophomore being intimidated by the stiff competition, especially since he trained through the regional meet with the idea of tapering for state.

"Right now, I'm still going pretty hard in practice," Houston said. "I'll start my taper for state next week, so I should be able to go faster."

Houston, who was been swimming 5,000 meters a day at a fairly rapid clip, will swim between 1,000-to-2,000 meters a day at a slower pace to get ready for state.

"I think 49 seconds is in my range," Houston said. If that's the case, the sophomore should be among the favorites in the state meet — and perhaps among the best in the nation. Only five U.S. prep swimmers broke the 50-second barrier during the 1987-88 school year, the last year for which such a list is available.

"Midland's a great town," he said. "We have a great parent group and an excellent feeder system through COM (City of Midland Swimming)."

Henry was another MHS sophomore who wore her competition out en route to state berths in the 50 and 100 free races.

But the state meet is an unknown quantity, she said.

"Since I've never been there, I don't know what to expect."

Henry may not have first-hand knowledge of the state meet, but she can draw of the experiences of several Midlanders who have made the trip in recent years, such as Seay, Fennell and 1987 state backstroke champion Michaela Hasek, who graduated from Midland High last year after a storied prep career.

Even though the Midland Lee girls missed out on repeating their '89 girls crown, Coach John Bettina was far from upset.

"Coronado just has a real strong girls team," Bettina said. "I can't get upset about the way my girls swam."

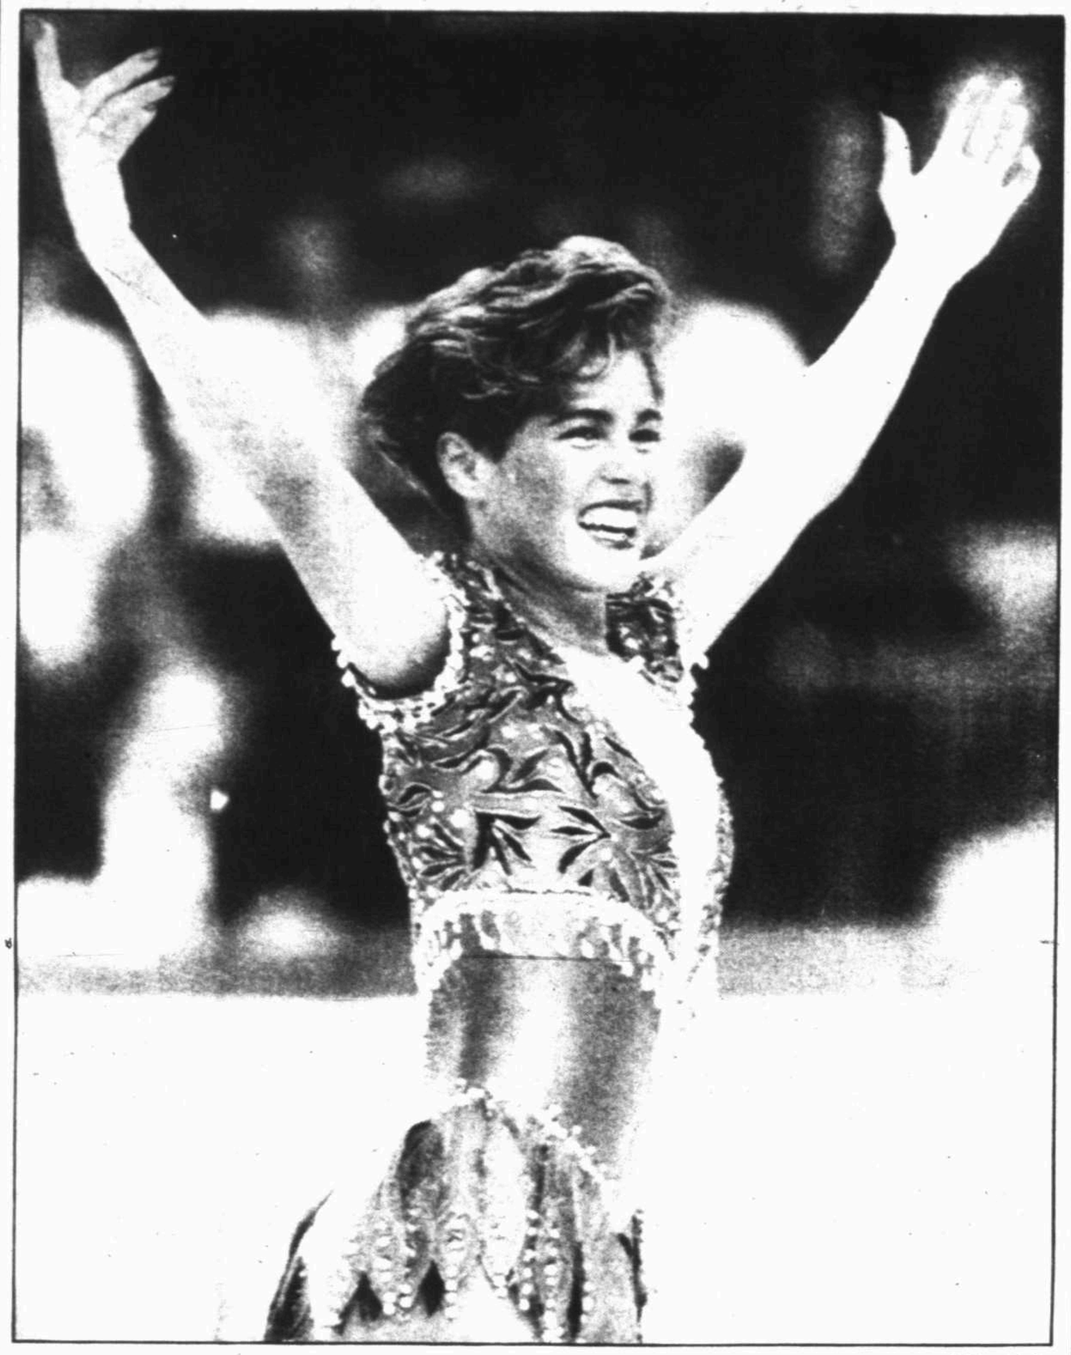

The Lady Rebels picked up their only sure-fire state qualifier on the last event of the day with a win by the 400 free relay team of Mimi Morrison, Adinda Kelder, Kerri Stiles and Stephanie Reed.

Reed, a two-event qualifier last year was the top Lady Rebel individual finisher with seconds in both the 200 and 500 freestyles. The senior was edged out by Odessa Permian sophomore Jamie Bobo in the 500, and El Paso High soph Mariah Cade in the 200, but still has a chance to go to the state meet if she can post one of the eight best times among regional also-rans in either event.

Lee's girls 200 medley relay foursome of Shanna Tomlinson, Ginger Brininstool, Morrison and Kelder may also have a shot at state, using the same criteria.

The Lee boys were shut out of state meet qualifying, but senior Stacy Davis closed out a fine high school career with a fifth in the 100 free.

Trenary wins women's world figure skating title

N.Y. Times News Service

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia — Jill Trenary's long climb to the highest level of figure skating ended Saturday when she won the women's title of the world figure skating championships, her first major international title.

After finishing seventh, fifth and third the last three years, the three-time United States champion did exactly what she had to do — finish no lower than second in the long program to assure that Midori Ito of Japan, the defending champion, could not repeat.

And that's just how it turned out.

Though Ito won the round in typically sensational fashion, completing six triple jumps, including the difficult axel, Trenary earned the second-best marks of the round to keep Ito in second place overall.

In the surprise of the competition, Holly Cook, who was third behind Trenary and Kristi Yamaguchi at last month's United States championships, beat Yamaguchi for the bronze medal. Yamaguchi was fourth.

"This means so much to me," Trenary said, looking drained and relieved. "I've worked so hard; I've put so much of my life into it. National champion and world champion: It's a dream."

The narrow path to the top for Trenary, 21, a skater from Colorado Springs, was cleared earlier in the week when she won the compulsory figures phase of competition, and Ito was so far back, in 10th, that she was almost incapable of challenging for the gold.

In retrospect, that was Ito's downfall. Had she placed ninth in compulsories, a phase of competition that has been elimiated for the future, and had everything that followed remained the same, Ito would have won.

Another way to look at it: If the compulsories were not counted, Ito would have won, with Yamaguchi second and Trenary third.

On Friday, Ito came roaring back to win the short program, moving into fourth place, with Trenary fifth on the round to take third over all.

That set up a scenario in which Ito could only retain her title by winning the free-style phase, with someone else beating Trenary — a possible but unlikely development.

The most likely candidate was the first among the leaders to skate, Yamaguchi, 18, with a difficult program. When she fell on two triple jumps within the first minute of her program, she lost any chance of earning higher marks than Trenary.

Ito was next, and again, she was primed. Her program reflected her amazing athleticism. She opened with two perfectly landed triples, the second the axel, which no other woman has landed in competition.

Faye Vincent takes a big risk in allowing Howe back

By Nick Canepa
Copley News Service

I'm here to tell all of you six-time losers to take heart. Don't get down on yourselves. There is hope for you yet.

Do you do drugs? Perhaps drink too much? Well, there is a career for you in Major League Baseball. Yes, if you have what it takes on the field — if you can bat a ball, catch one or throw one — then this just may be the job you've been looking for.

And there's no formal schooling required. You can get through high school if you want, doing drugs and drinking all the time, if you so desire. You say you have a "J" average? Big deal. Thrown out of school for doing coke? Smacking a teacher around? Who cares? Major League Baseball doesn't.

Sure, baseball banned Pete Rose for life, even though he got to first base more often than anybody who ever lived. But that was for gambling. He wasn't kicked out for doing drugs or alcohol. He was doing something terribly wrong. He was doing something that wasn't in the BEST INTEREST OF THE GAME.

But not Steve Howe, the pitcher. All Steve was doing were drugs and alcohol and he had the misfortune to get caught doing it. OK, he was caught six times. Once, twice, six times. What does it matter?

So, Steve, welcome back to baseball. We've missed you.

You remember Steve Howe, don't you? As a left-handed relief pitcher, he was National League Rookie of the Year with the Dodgers in 1980. Terrific prospect. But he was released by Los Angeles for substance-abuse problems. Then he was released by Minnesota. And Texas.

In 1984, then-commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended Steve for cocaine abuse. Howe eventually went to the minors. In 1986, then-commissioner Peter Ueberroth suspended Steve for alcohol abuse.

We thought that would be the end of it, but now Steve once again has popped into the baseball picture. Commissioner Fay Vincent, who is starting to make Kuhn look like Kenesaw Mountain Landis, is willing to give the man another chance. In 1991, Howe can return. Unfortunately, so can Fay Vincent.

"While I believe that a lifetime ban from baseball is fully warranted in this case, I resolve the doubts raised by the conflicting medical and psychological opinions in Howe's favor and will offer him yet another chance to return to the game," Vincent says.

Really now. Here's a man who doesn't have the guts to override the owners' wishes — which he can do — and open the lock on spring training. That certainly wouldn't be in the best interests of the game, would it, Fay? But he has no problem playing judge, jury and doctor and obviously establishing a dangerous precedent in granting Howe's reinstatement.

Just how far do we now allow our athletes to go? Is there no limit?

In this country, everybody has a right for a second chance — unless you play baseball or some other sport, where you often are above the law. Steve had his. But he had a third chance. And a fourth. And a fifth. And a sixth.

They say Howe has kept his nose clean for the past two years or so and I congratulate him. What he's been through is difficult. But it's time for him to get on with the rest of his life, and baseball should not be a part of it. He had his chances. He blew them.

This is not depriving a man a chance to earn a living. There are rules in any business, and they are there to be followed. If you were a six-time loser, would your company take you back? If you do drugs in this country, you are breaking the law, which the majority of our sporting bodies refuse to understand.

Athletes are such special cases as it is. To allow a Steve Howe to return to baseball merely is throwing a pie in the face of law and order. Why should he be different from anybody else? Why should any athlete, clean or dirty, be different than you and I just because he can bat a ball or catch a forward pass?

Baseball should be in the business of cleaning up its act and trying to establish role models, who have become dinosaurs in our games. There are too few Tony Gwynns, certainly not enough of them to go around.

And so what is the message Fay Vincent has sent to the youth of America? Steve Howe, caught six times for substance abuse — and don't forget, those only were the times he was caught — can do all the wrong things and still receive baseball's blessing.

It's not just baseball. It appears the lessons that should have been provided by the deaths of Len Bias and Don Rogers have escaped most organized sports. Winning and money are the keys, not an athlete's well-being or even the state of the sport's health.

HOOPS

Kimball (37-3) spoiled Clear Lake coach Bill Krueger's strategy of subbing an entire team by adding six straight third-quarter points to cap the 18-0, five-minute run.

But Kimball, with a 16-point lead and only 3:19 left in the game, needed two free throws by Vincent Rowlett with 11 seconds remaining to beat back a closing surge by Krueger's second unit, which had scored eight straight points.

Lincoln 87, Boerne 77

Dallas Lincoln, with Larry Thomas and Willie Black each scoring 21 points, wore down Boerne for the Class 4A state high school basketball title before a 4A record tournament crowd of 15,459.

4A

The 164 points scored by both teams also was a record, breaking the mark of 158 set last year when Port Arthur Lincoln defeated Austin Travis 86-72.

Lincoln's 86 points was just short of the record by one team for a 4A championship game. Beaumont Hebert scored 88 in 1980.

Boerne was only the runnerup in its district, but advanced to the championship game and finished with a 28-8 record.

Lincoln closed out a 27-10 season with a title in its first tournament appearance.

Boerne advanced to the tournament once before, in 1958.

Lincoln led 77-61 with only 3:57 to play but Boerne made a late run that fell short.

Robbie Shivers, a sophomore, paced Boerne with 25 points, and his brother, David, a senior, had 21.

"What Willie says — goes," Lincoln coach Richard Bacon said of Black, who also had five assists and four steals. "He is the Coach Bacon on the floor. The team listens to Willie. He's the man."

Santo 67, Moulton 64

Lance Hendrick scored 34 points, including 20 in the fourth quarter as Santo rallied for the Class A championship victory over Moulton at the state basketball tournament.

1A

Santo, southwest of Fort Worth, extended its record to 36-2 in winning a title in its first trip to the 70th annual tournament.

Moulton, a semifinalist last year and still seeking its first championship, ended its season at 33-6.

Moulton, a Central Texas team, led 51-42 with 7:09 to play but tied the game 57-57 on a shot by Hendrick, a 6-foot senior.

Patrick Henke, a 6-2 sophomore who was all-tournament last year, and Bobby Fishbeck each scored 20 points to lead Moulton.

Moulton, a step slower than Santo, was hurt when starting guard Henry Nieto limped off the court with a leg injury with 5:06 to play in the second quarter. He returned but his mobility was hampered.

Hendrick's 34 points was one shy of the record for a Class A title game. Calvin Gerke of Snook set the record of 35 in 1966.

Hendrick, who leads his class academically, said "Ever since I was this high and could pick up a basketball, I have dreamed of coming here."

"I told everyone on the team in the third quarter that I wouldn't let them down," said Hendrick, who broke his arm last year in a motorcycle accident and wasn't sure if he could ever play again. "It was up to me."

Ingram 73 Troup 72

Troy House threw in 31 points and teammate Josh McCormick swished two winning free throws as No. 2-ranked Ingram nipped top-ranked Troup for the Class 2A state title.

2A

House, a 6-foot-1-inch senior, guard who holds the known record for schoolboy points, finished his high school career with 4,259 points, 436 more than Calvin Gerke of Snook had in the mid-1960s.

House said without hesitation that the state title meant more to him than the scoring mark.

FEMALE PERSONAL ADS
The following ads have been placed by females looking to meet males

DIVORCED Caucasian female. Tall, attractive, green eyed blonde with slim figure, good personality and a sense of humor in late 40's. Seeks tall, good-looking, caring, honest, reliable, sincere male with class, good sense of humor and personality, who is financially secure and knows how to treat a lady. I enjoy movies, dining out, theatre, dancing, walking, cooking, travel, sunbathing, quiet evenings and I'm flexable in other activities. Write if you fit these qualifications. (MP-229)

IF you're looking for a Caucasian 40-ish single mom, who is just zany enough to be fun, loves people, nature and quiet times as well as crazy times, then I may be your answer for some shared companionship. Let's talk it over. Please include phone number when responding. (MP-230)

5'6", 121 lbs., 29 year old Vanna type, green eyed blonde. Wishing to meet single Caucasian male, financially secure, 6' or taller, muscular (no wimps please), no self centered gentleman. Must like c/w and r/r dancing and music. Must enjoy children and having fun. Must be honest and know how to treat a lady. Please send phone number when responding. (MP-232)

IS there intelligent, professional, single life in Midland, Texas. Divorced Caucasian female seeking a man capable of multi-level relationship, very tall, slender professional lady loves theatre, all music, evenings chatting in front of a fire. Would love to laugh with someone who finds answering ads as absurd as I do. Prefer ages from 40-50. (MP-234)

DIVORCED, Caucasian, 30 years old with children. Enjoys football, most music, dancing, camping out and cuddling. Looking for Caucasian Christian, someone who is caring, honest, and not scared to make a commitment and someone who knows what he wants and going after it, if the person is right. All replies will be answered. (MP-235)

ATTRACTIVE, 20 year old single Caucasian female, blue-eyed blonde, 120 lbs., 5'6", sensitive, romantic and responsible. I enjoy music, dancing, movies, dining out, traveling or just talking. Please include telephone number, age and description of yourself for friendship. All letters will be answered. (MP-236)

ARE you open-minded, honest and know how to treat a lady? Then you may be the friend I'm looking for! I'm 29, divorced and enjoy camping, cookouts, dancing and lots more. So if you know how to have a good time without using drugs, lets get together! Light smokers and social drinkers ok. (MP-238)

OK all you fun loving men I know you're out there, I just haven't found the right places. This attractive, Caucasian female is in search of a gentleman 32-45 to share some moments with. I enjoy rock and roll music, dancing, golfing, exercise, reading and much more. (MP-239)

23 YEAR old, 120 lbs., blondish hair, hazel eyes, divorced Caucasian mother of two. Interested in meeting attractive, professional Caucasian male 29-38, who likes c/w and r/r music, dancing, theatre, romantic, dinners, children and lots of time together. Various hobbies. Must be honest, sincere, caring, no drug users, drinkers or pessimists please. Commitment and friendship possible. Send phone number. All replies will be answered. (MP-241)

PRETTY single Caucasian female desires to meet 20-25 year old Caucasian Christian man. You must be honest, romantic and sincere. My interests are movies, candlelight dinners, c/w music and watching sports. All letters will be answered and you won't be disappointed. (MP-243)

DIVORCED, Caucasian mother of two, 22 year old, 130 lbs., 5'6", brown hair, blue eyes. Wants to meet attractive, Caucasian male, 25-35 with professional outlook on life. Enjoys c/w music, dancing, bowling, movies, romantic evenings and children. Must be sincere, honest and have caring attitude. Possible commitment and friendship. No drug users or heavy drinkers. Reply with phone number. All replies will be answered. (MP-244)

DIVORCED 43 year old, 5'7", professional looking for long term relationship with a man who wants and appreciates a good lady. I enjoy fishing, camping, gardening, music and fireplaces. Comfortable in blue jeans to formals. I believe in the golden rule and inner beauty more important than outer appearances. Anxious to hear your beliefs, likes and wants. All replies will be answered quickly. (MP-245)

DIVORCED 44 year old female looking for long term relationship with a man who wants love and to be loved. I like movies, music, dancing and sports. I love children. I'm non-smoker a non-drug user, but I still like to have fun. All replies will be answered. (MP-259)

WHERE have all the good guys gone? Desire to cultivate mutually rewarding relationship. Age 35, Christian, Health Care Professional, 5'7", full figured, gorgeous green eyes. Interests include, but not limited to aerobics, bowling, cooking, dining out, entertaining, all types of music, movies, 12 step programs, people and cats. (MP-267)

ATTRACTIVE, single Caucasian female, 27 years old, 5'8", brown hair and eyes, 130 lbs., and I have a one year old son. I'm very independent, outgoing, and stable, looking for single Caucasian male, 29-39, for friendship, good conversation, and possible relationship, smokers ok, social drinkers ok, but no bums or drug users. I like c/w dancing, all music, movies, reading, etc. Send phone number address when responding. (MP-246)

I'M 25 years old looking for Christian friendship. I'm old fashioned girl with strong morales and I love to be pampered. I'm a family girl, meaning I have 3 small children. I like movies, dining out and I'm impressed with someone who can teach me to dance. I'm Caucasian, non-drinker, non-smoker, and very shy. (MP-247)

SPUNKY sense of humor, 5'2", 116 lbs., 32 years old, brown eyed brunette. Seeking single Caucasian male, financially independent, secure gentleman. Must be 5'9"to 6', muscular body, uninhibited and good looking (no wimps). No drug users please. Honesty, a love for children, outdoor activities, c/w, r/r music and dancing a must. Please send phone number when responding. (MP-233)

TIRED of the same kind of people who want to play head games. So I'm looking for someone fun to be with. Must have a good sense of humor. I'm 22 year old college student, enjoys parks, music of all types. Willing to try other adventures. Please no drug users. All replies will be answered. Send phone number when responding. (MP-250)

IF you would enjoy the company of a lady at the age of 53 or older who is warm, and comfortable, then maybe we should get acquainted. I enjoy politics & finance, travel, bridge, dancing. My favorite song is "People". I'm 5'2", brown eyed, auburn hair, 131 lbs. I'm not a loner. I have a professional job and I believe life is for living. I would love to hear from you. (MP-249)

40-ISH Female, professional, loves fishing, tennis, c/w dancing, good figure, good sense of humor and loves to exercise. I'm non-smoker, moderate drinker, sensitive and sentimental, attractive, 5'4", 125 lbs. I prefer ages 35-50, outgoing, prefer jeans and boots to dresses and heels, but very much a lady (MP-254)

JUST because I'm in my 60's and retired from working 25 years with the same company doesn't mean I want to take to the old rocking chair. I'd like to meet a Caucasian Christian gentleman, ages 60-73, no smokers and no drinkers please. I'm a real good conversationist, and not bad looking. I'm 5'5", 155 lbs., I like all church related activities, card & dominos games, c/w dancing, anything thats clean and fun. All replies will be answered. (MP-255)

SINGLE and attractive 23 year old Hispanic female searching for a single Hispanic male 21-27, non-smoker, light drinker for friendship and possible more. I enjoy dancing, movies and spending time with someone special. Please respond and lets meet! All letters will be answered. Send address and phone number. Please no game players. (MP-257)

CHRISTIAN, 40-ish, tall, full-figured, self-sufficient mother is wanting a relationship with a tall, self-sufficient, fun loving Christian man. Let's share quality time together. I enjoy dining out or dining in, busy times or quiet times, camping or hoteling, golfing or easy rocking. (MP-263)

WOULD like to meet man 65 to 70 who is kind, neat, nice appearance, able to drive, and like to attend some functions. I enjoy fishing, dancing and eating out or in. I like to travel. I'm lonely and need someone to visit with. (MP-264)

NICE looking, slim stable and fun loving, professionally employed lady in 40's would like to meet stable gentleman (45-58) possessing Christian values, good sense of humor, respect for others, average weight/ height/ appearance, with similar interests. I love all music & dancing, theatre, intelligent conversation, Christmas and romance (not necessarily in that order!) No smokers, drug users, but light drinking ok. (MP-266)

CLASSY lady would like to meet refined, educated, neat, Caucasian male, age 50-60 and average size. Must enjoy life, companionship, have a good sense of humor and I prefer a non-smoker. (MP-268)

DON'T you people have anything better to do than read this silly singles column and dream of meeting that special person? I know, me neither. This 5'7" stack of dynamite is ready to blow the conservative lid off this town. So if red hair doesn't scare you. Let's meet! (MP-269)

CAUCASIAN female, 28 years old, 5'9", brown hair, green eyes, divorced with 2 children. I enjoy the simple things in life, romantic evenings, dining, dancing, movies, bowling, outdoor activities, weekend get-a-ways and taking time to smell the roses. PRINCIPLES WITH PIZAZZ

By JILL HANCOCK

Very seldom does every room in a home elude an essential quality of character — from walls that are painted in shades of heather lilac and Pierre deux pink to colorful bunny rabbits hopping along the kitchen walls. Candice McPherren Designs decorated this week's featured home which was built by Bill Brown Construction three years ago.

This four-bedroom and three-bath home is located in Saddle Club South. A glass front door leads into the foyer of the home. Slate gray brick columns divide the tile entry from the formal living room, with one wall matching the brick columns. The adjacent walls feature a soft hue of lilac. A fireplace is inset along the right wall.

Brick planter boxes divide the formal living areas. A step leads to the dining room, whose elegance is enhanced by an exquisite crystal chandelier. White moulding, which complements the crown moulding that encircles both of these rooms, is place at mid-wall. A floor-to-ceiling window frames the back yard.

THE MASTER bedroom is situated to the left of the front entrance. This sequestered room features a brick fireplace with a carved mantle, pale gray walls and two windows which view the front yard. A sitting area by the fireplace is a must on a chilly March evening. This room also has a wall that is ideal for a writing desk.

Two doors open into a wonderful master bath! After an endless day of errands, carpools and job responsibilities, a soak in the marble tub will help to ease these everyday stresses. Two marble vanities are placed back-to-back and serve as a room divider. Both sides have customized walk-in closets and built-in cabinets for storage. The bath also has a built-in shower and gold fixtures. A floral paper in shades of taupe, rose and blue adorn the walls.

The kitchen is located to the left of the formal living room. Bunny rabbits in a multitude of shades tastefully add to the decor which also includes white wash cabinets and a raspberry crown moulding. Designed around a central work island, the kitchen is equipped with gourmet appliances that include a Whirlpool self-cleaning oven, cooktop with grill, trash compactor and dishwasher. A skylight in the vaulted ceiling brightens this entire area and a window above the kitchen sink overlooks the backyard.

A breakfast table is placed between the two doorways that lead from the formal living areas into the kitchen. A spacious desk lines the right wall and cubbyholes and shelves will help to organize the busiest of mothers.

The formal living area, left, is an excellent example of this home's beautiful decor. The sequestered master bedroom, right, has a brick fireplace with a carved mantle.

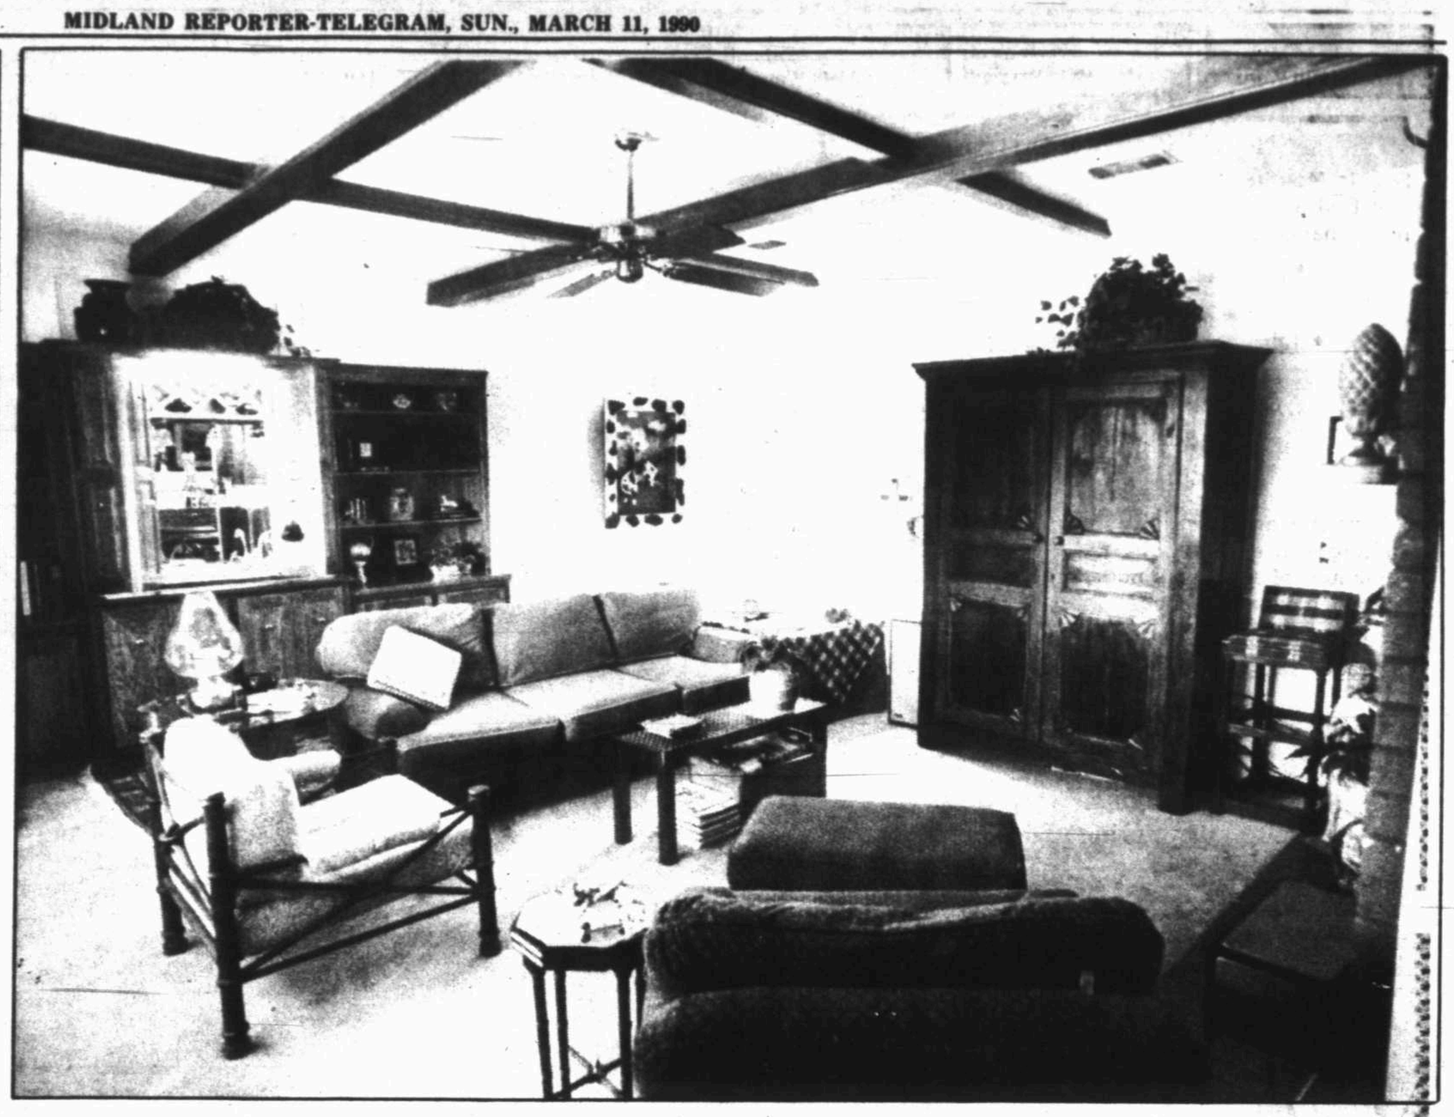

MAR 11 90

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Pink walls highlight this child's bedroom which has a plantation shutter window that overlooks the side yard.

The den is situated to the right of the formal living room. Picture frame paneling, a wet bar and a beamed ceiling are the amenities in this room.

PIZAZZ

A hallway leads from the kitchen to a large utility room which can easily accommodate a freezer. A sink and a built-in ironing board are the other amenities in this room. Access is also made into the rear-entry, two-car garage with an automatic door opener through this hallway.

Three of the home's other bedrooms are situated to the right of the front door. A guest bath is located at the beginning of the hallway and is decorated in a southwestern paper in shades of blue, gray and mauve. The bath has a marble vanity and a bathtub.

The first bedroom has windows which view the front yard, cream-colored walls and a walk-in closet.

Emerald green walls highlight the second bedroom. This room also has a window which overlooks the front yard and a walk-in closet.

Storage cabinets are inset at the end of the hallway. These cabinets are ideal for linen storage, as well as games and toys for children.

The third bedroom has French pink walls that are accented by white moulding. A window that frames the side yard and a spacious closet are the other amenities in this child's bedroom.

If this home hasn't displayed enough pizazz, then the features of the den will certainly attract a person's attention. Tucked behind and to the right of the formal living room, the den is situated for informal living. White paneled walls with picture frame paneling, a deep green fireplace with a white carved mantle and a wall of windows with a door leading to the back patio are only three of the elegant appointments in this room. The others include a built-in wet bar with bookcases on both sides and beams that cross each other along the ceiling.

The other amenities in this home include a plantation shutters, sprinkler system, well-manicured yard, 10 foot ceilings, a dog run and an intercom system.

Dene Kelly Realtors is offering this home for $195,000.

Wallace of Chaparral, Realtors named winner of office listing drive campaign

Patti Wallace, an associate of Chaparral, Realtors, was awarded a cellular phone recently for having the most listings for two months among the Chaparral agents. "We had a listing drive campaign and Patti was the winner of a new phone for her car. By the end of this month, Patti will already have attained hermillion dollar producer for 1990," stated Norma Pine.

Wallace, a native of San Antonio, began her real estate career with Chaparral, Realtors almost two years and was a million dollar producer in 1989. She has lived in Midland for the past 13 years and has developed a deep love and admiration for the Midland community.

"Midland has a uniqueness all of its own that comes from the people who live here," she explained. "From all walks of life, they radiate what I call the 'Midland spirit' — warmth, caring, commitment and camaraderie.

After graduating from Southern Methodist University with a B.A. in education, Wallace taught school in San Antonio and Midland. She has served the Midland community in many capacities that include Pi Beta Phi alumnae, Act IX Theatre Guild, Junior League of Midland, Inc., Ballet Midland Board of Governors, the American Cancer Society board and is a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church. She is also the mother of three children.

Working with people of Midland in a professional capacity as an associate of Chaparral is very challenging to Wallace. Becoming a Realtor is a dream that she began to pursue 12 years ago.

"Having a builder as a husband, I was involved daily in the business as an observer and I felt that this was a profession that I had possible talents in. I hope that I can live up to the 'Midland spirit' that I so admire," explained Wallace.

Chaparral, Realtors is celebrating 10 years of service in the Midland community this year. Pine said, "Our proudest achievement is being a member of RELO. We are very active in third-party and home finding service. Chaparral is fully staffed with associates and broker associates who are experts in the real estate field."

"We are very appreciative of Midland for supporting us during the past 10 years and we will continue to grow into the '90s. We are recognized for the quality of service we have to offer our customers," concluded Pine.

Buyer's Guide features Adobe listings

Your home when listed with Adobe Inc., Realtors is featured daily in the Buyer's Guide — not just one day a week or in Sunday's newspaper. The Buyer's Guide is placed in high traffic areas and distributed free at Albertsons, Skaggs, Walgreens, "M" System, Furr's, Raindance Car Wash, Klean Kar Wash and Cattleman's Resturant. To feature your home every day in the Buyer's Guide, call Adobe Inc., Realtors at 694-9548 for an agent to assist you in listing and marketing your home.

The following three homes will be featured in Adobe's new Buyer's Guide which is nearing completion for publication:

■ 1701 Coventry is located in prestigious Polo Park subdivision. This two-year-old, custom built home has four bedrooms, three baths and a sequestered guest bedroom and bath. The house also has two living areas, a formal dining room, a large kitchen and a utility/hobby room.

This executive home has a beautifully landscaped yard with a sprinkler system, a monitored security system, Aprilaire humidifier, Space Guard air cleaner and stain resistant neutral carpet. And of course, the use of the Polo Park Clubhouse, pool and tennis courts. Adobe Inc., Realtors is offering this home for $149,500. Please call for your own private viewing.

■ 4909 Island Circle is located in Green Tree Country Club North addition on fairway Number 9. The lot is just under one acre and has enough room in the back yard for your swimming pool. It has four bedrooms, three baths and is located on a circular street with a wonderful view of the golf course. This four-year-old home has skylights, ceiling fans, sequestered master bedroom, three-car garage, a formal dining and a sprinkler system. But these are only a few of the amenities. It is priced at $235,000 and won't last long, so call today for your own private showing.

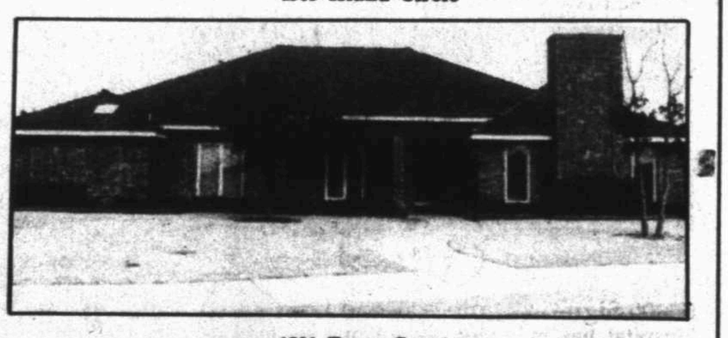

■ Many special features are yours to enjoy in this custom, Jim Leonard built home located at 1301 Terra Court. This new listing in this coveted Saddle Club addition has a quiet, secluded neighborhood park as well as the nearby club house, pool and courts for children to enjoy.

4909 Island Circle

1301 Terra Court

1301 Terra Court is a lovely executive home with two living areas, four bedrooms, four baths and a beautiful formal dining just right for entertaining. An extra special bonus us the office/library with beautiful wood that adjoins the master bedroom. All of this and "better than new" for $164,900. Extras like plantation shutters, Marvin windows, kitchen island and a three-car garage make this your perfect "dream home." Should you desire further information, or want to see this home, call 694-9548 today!

Bedrooms invaded by fluffy fashion

By CAROL OLTEN
Copley News Service

Beds from Maine to California may be having bad dreams these days.

Not another pillow, they groan. Off with the crewel and swags, skirts and ruffles, plush and fluff. Enough is enough!

Not since the late 19th century, when Victorians swathed beds in passionate festoons of velvet draperies and tassels, have so much time, effort, consideration, money and genuine worry gone into the dressing of beds.

Many beds are getting to look like they're ready either for a debutante ball or going to sea — although the latter could be dangerous. There is so much stitchery on board that they very well may sink.

But if a four-poster actually goes down, let's hope somebody is able to save the sheets — at $500 apiece, they're well worth recovering or, at least, cause for an insurance claim.

Nobody has been able to offer a decent explanation why designer sheets — white sheets — have escalated to as much as $500 apiece.

Granted, they do have a well-known name attached; they are made of fine, soft cotton; they have handsomely finished edges and more thread counts per square inch than ever before. According to nice advertisements in nice interior design magazines, sometimes they have last been dried under the Italian sun to account for their special freshness.

But one wonders if it will be necessary to jet the dirty linen back to Italy when it's time to wash. I'd take them for $450 less, thank you, and have them dry in local sunshine.

Overdressed beds begin with overpriced sheets, if not white cotton ones, which are the prettiest and most versatile, after all, than overpriced ones with flowers, stripes, dots, paisleys, teddy bears, abstract geometrics and little pinpoints designed by computers.

Practically all the designers, from Givenchy to Perry Ellis, from Jack Lenor Larsen to Ralph Lauren, have their names on sheets, and more seem to be joining the list every day — including Mario Buatta, the prince of chintz, whose floral extravaganzas are expected shortly in department stores.

And, then of course, there are any number such as Laura Ashley who have their names on bed linens as part of an extension of wallpaper, tile and other decorating lines.

Designer bed linens haven't necessarily made beds look any better, but they have certainly increased the choices of pattern and color.

And of course, they lend themselves to status play when it comes to creating a look.

There are no doubt those who simply can't sleep nights without an entire Ralph Lauren natural wicker bed dressed in sheets, shams and pillow cases in the "Allison" floral pattern. They wouldn't think of dropping off to sleep without the special 27-inch square "European" side pillow nearby. And no sleep would be lost over the $5,000 price tag for the whole business.

The purchase of opulent bed dressings may sound like just an activity of the female social set that has nothing else to do after lunch. Not so.

The manager of a home-furnishings department in a major store recently told of a yachtsman who purchased $3,000 worth of Italian silk bedding made by La Scala — and that was for the queen-size bed on his yacht.

Experts say one of the reasons people spend more mind and money on bed dressing today is that the bedroom is becoming a private retreat. More time is spent in the room as it is used for office homework and other activities previously reserved for different rooms.

'Tis Your

when you're movin' into a lovely 2 BR 1 BA apartment at The Courtyard. Your friends will be green with envy when they see the big walk-in closets, a spacious living room with separate dining area, and a kitchen where you can stir up a good mulligan stew. No stairs to climb, either.

Your Irish eyes will be smilin' at your own fenced backyard for good old Rover. And you can store your treasure in the outside closet.

It's no blarney, we've got a fine club house, beautiful swimmin' pool, and terrific tennis courts. On-site management and maintenance.

Still of the night

All in a night's work...

EDITOR'S NOTE: Most working people get up in the morning and go to their jobs, but for the thousands of employees whose work hours are not always during the day, "working 9 to 5" may mean p.m., not a.m.

This is the last of a three-part Sunday series on people who work when most of the world is asleep.

Fires, automobile accidents and other emergencies happen no matter what the time or the season.

That's why emergency service personnel are on duty 24 hours a day, every day of the year.

Don Turnbow has been a firefighter-paramedic for the City of Midland since 1980. "I started as a firefighter-paramedic 10 years ago," he said. "In the (past) 10 years, I worked shift work the whole time."

A firefighter's shift is 24 hours on duty, Turnbow said, followed by 24 hours off. "It breaks down to about 72 hours of work a week."

A normal work day begins at 8 a.m., he said. "You are at work from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Work consists of prevention maintenance on the vehicle, station clean up — the station has to meet the Texas Fire Station Guidelines. We usually go grocery shopping; we cook two meals a day at the station. After 5 p.m. on a workday, you can watch TV, work out, go to bed — you just can't leave the station. It's like guard duty in the army.

"You can make or accept personal calls after 5 p.m.," he added, "and have visitors until 10 p.m.," which means the wives and children of firefighters can visit their husbands and fathers on those nights when the men are on duty. "After 10 p.m., visitors have to leave."

Paramedics and firefighters never know when they will be called out on an emergency. Many of the hours spent on duty are routine — punctuated with times of intense action and personal danger.

"If the alarm goes off (at night), you have to be up and out of bed in seconds, and know where you are going and what the situation is," Turnbow said.

Emergencies tend to "come and go in patterns," he said. "We usually have a lot of sick calls during the fall and winter. In spring and summer traffic accidents start picking up. In wintertime we have more fires because people are re-lighting furnaces and fireplaces without cleaning them."

House fires have many causes, but some of the more common ones are electric heaters shorting out, overloaded circuits and Christmas trees bought too early, which makes them dry out and be more of a fire hazard than trees that are more fresh. "It could be that the tree is close to a source of combustion," Turnbow said.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Firefighter Don Turnbow does maintenance checks on equipment.

In a fire, "the major cause of death 99 percent of the time is smoke inhalation," he said.

Prairie and grass fires are not uncommon in this area either, he said, and if a building burns, usually it is an older one that doesn't meet fire code standards, Turnbow said. "We don't have many new structures that just burn down," thanks in part to changes in the electrical wiring code.

"Some fires are electrical in origin," Turnbow said, "some are carelessness, some are arson."

Because firefighters and paramedics deal with emergency situations every day, "There's a psychological effect," Turnbow said. "You deal with things normal people don't see — death, destruction, people that are hurt, severe pain and injury.

"Dealing with those things takes a special person."

"...during the last six to nine months our census has been between 180 and 190 patients. The average has been about 190 patients (at a time) for this fiscal year."

Illness and medical emergencies aren't limited to daylight hours. Babies insist on being born in the wee hours of the morning. And hospital in-patients need to be monitored even at night. Caring for so many people in so many situations means nursing is an around-the-clock occupation.

Diane Diaz, R.N., night nursing supervisor for Midland Memorial Hospital, is in charge of all the night-duty nurses at the hospital.

As a representative of the hospital administration and nursing administration, her duties include "making rounds; I have to be responsible, at night, for the nursing staff and patients.

"On any given night we may have 50 nurses" on duty, she said. Numbers of patients may vary throughout the year, but "during the last six to nine months our census has been between 180 and 190 patients. The average has been about 190 patients (at a time) for this fiscal year."

During her nightly routine, "I make rounds on all floors. I don't go into patients' rooms unless there is a specific problem with that patient," Ms. Diaz said.

Ms. Diaz became a registered nurse in 1964, and has been with MMH for 17 years. She was previously head nurse in both pediatrics and oncology.

For the past two and a half years she has been working at night. "It takes some length of time to adjust your body to the difference," she said. "The sleep you get during the daytime doesn't really rest the body (like sleep at night). The body was made to sleep at night."

Social lives are possible, too, for people who work at night instead of during the day, Ms. Diaz said. "It depends

MAR 11 90

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

"Be a Rebel with a Cause ... Come rock the clock with the Senior Girls of 1990!" So began the invitations to a Fifties party hosted by a group of 77 Lee High School seniors.

A clever poem by Tori Stutes gave the details for the fun event, which was attended by over 200 high school students last weekend at the National Guard Armory. The invitation also included a drawing depicting the Fifties by Bridget Burleson.

A Malt Shop was set up to serve ice cream sundaes, Cokes and popcorn and featured authentic soda fountain chairs. The individual tables were decorated to resemble oversized dice and held soda glasses with pink and black helium balloons.

Entertainment included dancing and a hula hoop contest. DJ Dennis Grubb provided the music. A vintage Corvette convertible was the backdrop for picture taking. Dice and hula hoops were awarded as prizes.

The foyer of the armory was decorated with pink and black balloons and 45 records hanging from the balloon strings. Posters of the Fifties movie idol, the late James Dean, decorated the wall.

The hostesses were recognizable by their costumes of black cardigan sweaters and poodle skirts.

Senior Girls officers are Shawnna Hill, president; Hilary Johnson, vice president; Lauren Chapman, secretary, and Traci Standifer, treasurer.

PARTIES CONTINUE for Lisa Libby and Robert Caire, both of Dallas. They are planning an April 7 wedding in Perkins Chapel on the Southern Methodist University campus in Dallas.

An engagement party at the Petroleum Club of Midland started the chain of parties and was hosted by the bride-elect's parents, Genevieve and Henry Libby. Special guests were Robert's parents, Katherine and James Caire of New Orleans, La.

Also in Midland, Lisa was honored with a display bridal shower in the home of Karen (Mrs. Paul) Raymond. Co-hostesses were Ann (Mrs. Clay) Atchison, Nell (Mrs. William) Blackman, Charlene (Mrs. Larry) Gnagy, Windy (Mrs. Robert) Neustaedter, Corinne (Mrs. A.T.) Carleton and Colleen (Mrs. Vincent) Scury.

Other parties have included a "Round the Clock" shower given in Plano at the home of Sandy Koch, with Karen Pate as cohostess. Out-of-town guests were the mothers of the engaged couple and Phyllis Clark of Lubbock.

Lisa and Robert also were honored in Dallas with a Home and Garden shower and lasagna dinner hosted by Nona Reid, Denise Hasley, Diane Filen-Wilson, Sherryl Dewitt and Jo Layne Harris.

THE MIDLAND PANHELLENIC ASSOCIATION invited senior girls and their mothers to a sorority information and registration party last Sunday afternoon at the Saddle Club South Clubhouse.

After a style show by The Gazebo Teen Board of apparel appropriate for rush parties, the group divided into discussion groups by schools. Representatives of the various colleges were on hand to answer questions.

The party ended with informal conversation and refreshments, which included soft drinks and finger foods.

Girls who missed the party and would like to register with Panhellenic may call the rush chairman, Linda (Mrs. Harlan) Martens, at 686-9277 or assistant rush chairman Melissa (Mrs. Tommy) Thompson at 689-0085.

THE MIDLAND-LEE YOUTH CENTERS, Inc. presented its annual fund-raiser, which included a luncheon, style show and silent auction, last weekend at Midland Country Club.

Fashions were provided by The Canopy, and silent auction items were donated by local businesses.

The models included students from Midland and Lee High Schools. They were Helana Beal, Alexis Beck, Jennifer Bishop, Hannah Boyd, Lauren Chapman, Libby Gilmore, Sherrye Hall, Shawnna Hill, Tracey Hopkins, Hilary Johnson, Jennifer Jones, Robin Landreth, Teya Rowland, Angela Saltzman and Paige Williams.

Among those in attendance were Lynda Kay (Mrs. Carlton) Beal, Carolyn (Mrs. Joe) Terry, Nell (Mrs. Bobby) Ellis, Linda (Mrs. Joe) Achilles, Debbie (Mrs. Lee) VanWinkle, Nancy (Mrs. Richard) Gibson and Trinka (Mrs. Nick) Taylor.

Chairman and co-chairman, respectively, were Denna (Mrs. Allen) McGuire and Pam (Mrs. Bill) Isom. Jann (Mrs. Vince) Bash is president of the Youth Centers Board.

Marilyn McKnight Harrison is social columnist for the Reporter-Telegram.

on how you do your life. A social life can be worked into it (a night worker's schedule)." The hours between early afternoon and late evening, before going to work can be an ideal social time, she said, and besides, "I don't work every single night."

Even in the 1990s, though, most nurses are women — and many of them are mothers. "I started (working nights) after my children were old enough to work with it — my youngest is 19 years old now," Ms. Diaz said. "I worked during the day when they were young."

Other nurses have made their late-night working hours an advantage for their families. "Some of the nurses with young children work at night because they can spend more time with their children (during the day) and their husbands are home at night (with the children)," Ms. Diaz said. "It's easier, as far as (finding) child care, at night."

Hospitals can be quieter at night than during the day — visitors don't come in, meal trays aren't delivered to patients, doctors don't make rounds. But it can be lonelier too, for the same reasons. For that reason, Ms. Diaz said, patients may feel worse during the night. "I think the longest, loneliest time in the hospital for a patient is at night."

At night, nurses must evaluate both the needs of the patient and the doctor before calling the doctor at home. "We do not have a physician in the hospital 24 hours a day. They (the nurses) have to think more about when to make the call to the doctor. They are human beings and need their rest too."

Although night nurses don't have any more responsibility to the health and safety of the patients than day nurses do, nurses on the late shift may have different considerations to work with. "I think nurses, during the day, are not as hesitant to call doctors at their office. In the middle of the night, they try to evaluate (the patient's condition) and see what they can do before they call the physician and wake them up."

The patients' health and comfort comes first, so if the nurses feel a doctor's care is necessary, then they call. Otherwise, the night nurses try to maintain a level of activity that does not disturb the patients' rest. "We do not wake them up to give them a sleeping pill," Ms. Diaz said.

The night nurses "are a congenial group," she said. "We have some really dedicated nurses."

TURNBOW

In fact, just becoming a fire fighter takes a special person. "To be a firefighter you have to pay to go to rookie school — which is governed by the Texas Fire Commission (classes are at Midland College) — and spend so many hours in the classroom before they turn you lose on shift," Turnbow said. "It used to be they hired you and you worked six months or more on shift before you went to rookie school.

"You have to take a written test and a physical agility test — it's 10 events. You have to prove you are physically strong and agile," he said. "It's a tough test."

Some firefighters, including Turnbow, go on to become paramedics. Being a paramedic "is voluntary right now. You have to be licensed by the state. Paramedics take one and a half years of college courses to get their license. You get tested by the state for academics and skills. You get re-tested every four years. ... You have to get so many continuing education hours before they allow you to re-test."

After earning the right to be a firefighter, the men begin the 24-hours-on, 24-hours-off work cycle. "It's hard to have a social life, working those hours, if you don't go to bars or dancing," Turnbow said. "If you are off on Sunday you can go to church."

Turnbow also attends college classes. "I'm taking fire science courses, working on my degree in fire science technology. Then there's homework to be done, and somewhere in there you've got to squeeze in eating and sleeping."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

His goal is a career in safety, working with industry. "I feel that's where the future lies — in safety and environmental issues — because the government is going to get stricter and stricter on environmental and safety codes in the work place."

Turnbow said that to a certain extent, he was one of those little boys who wanted to be a fireman when he grew up. But like everything else, times are changing in fire fighting too.

For one, "there are no more poles to slide down in Midland," he said. "Odessa still has one," but all of Midland's fire stations are one-story.

For another, "we are all going to be computer dispatched in the future."

And although Midland's fire department currently is all male, "I feel that one of these days we will have some women who will pass it (the tests). We've got three fire stations we can add on in case we hire women. We can build an extra room that would accommodate female fire fighters. Some day it's going to happen.

"Some people feel prejudiced (concerning women fire fighters), but me, I don't care — as long as they can pull their share of the work."

Fighting fires is a high-risk occupation, no matter who is fighting the fires or what time of day it is. "I've had burns, scalds and slight smoke inhalation," Turnbow said. "I fell through the roof one time, and I fell through the floor one time and dislodged my shoulder. We had another guy get hurt in basically the same manner."

But in spite of the long hours and potential danger, fire fighting can be satisfying. "It's fulfilling to know you saved somebody."

Divorced moms find everyday life difficult

TEMPE, Ariz. — "Sometimes I lie in bed in the dark in the morning and feel completely alone," she says. "Nobody else is there to get up when the baby starts coughing. Nobody else changes diapers or makes breakfast or makes sure the kids brush their teeth."

Dawn Trott, 25, is part of a growing work force of single mothers who are trying to raise children, run a household and hold a job in an era in which divorces are rocketing and the traditional family is in jeopardy.

The situation is beginning to attract the attention of social workers, bureaucrats and politicians. Among other things, they fear that mounting expenses for single mothers, combined with stress at work and at home, is changing America's lifestyle for the worse.

This statistic is underscored by studies that show that marriage is becoming a less important factor in daily living.

Consider these figures:

■ During the 1950s, the average age for Americans marrying for the first time was 20. Today, it is 23 for women and 25 for men.

■ In child-bearing age groups, the proportion of married women has steadily declined — only 68 per cent of women ages 30 to 34 are married today, compared with 88 per cent in 1960.

In short, Americans spend less time than ever being married or living in what is usually called a traditional family.

BUT THE situation is not statistical, it's personal — for each single working mother a quiet, unheralded struggle like Trott's, which usually begins before sunrise and ends long after dark when she gets the last child to sleep.

It typically includes a relatively low-paying job, day-care centers, grocery shopping, car repairs and a budget that often won't meet those needs. The situation goes largely unnoticed, save for an occasional news story about the soaring cost of child care.

Despite the struggle, Trott says single motherhood can have its little rewards. "Sometimes at night when the kids are sleeping peacefully and you look at them and see how beautiful they are ... or when one of them suddenly hugs you and says, 'Mommy, I love you,' well, then it makes it all worth it."

What happens to the young mother who now must become the breadwinner? "The newly divorced mother suddenly finds herself the sole executive of a small corporation — her household," said Dr. Donald F. Fausel, assistant professor in the School of Social Work at Arizona State University. "As such, she is subjected to a bombardment of psychological, biological and social stresses she never felt before."

Besides a predictably smaller income, single mothers must deal with a more insidious form of stress — anger. "They usually have a great deal of anger toward their ex-spouse," says Fausel. "But to cope they must learn how to forgive and let go of that anger."

Other problems arise: Fatigue. Social events. Disrupted children. "The single most commonly used phrase is, 'I'm overwhelmed,'" said Fausel, who teaches classes on how to counsel families involved in divorce and other family disruptions.

TROTT HAS three children — Sarah, 6 months, Eric, 2 and Cheyenne, 3. She is newly divorced and she moved to Arizona four years ago from Los Angeles. She has no family around her. And she barely earns enough to keep her family together.

She makes about $1,000 monthly from her full-time job as a switchboard operator. Unlike many single mothers, she gets another $500 monthly in child support from her ex-husband, who still lives in the area. The Arizona Department of Economic Security contributes $385 toward her $820 monthly child-care expense. It is the costliest item in her budget.

"My life revolves between my job and the day-care center," says Trott.

Each morning, Trott and her children undergo an emotional goodbye not unlike that performed by thousands of other single mothers daily.

"The children don't want me to leave," she explains. "And I feel awful because I don't want to leave, either. Before I can leave for work, the teachers lift the older children to the window and we blow kisses to each other until they settle down. Every time we do that I feel like crying."

Trott says she has had opportunities for better paying jobs at work but has not taken advantage of them. That decision is not uncommon among single working mothers.

"My employer is understanding, but some assignments at work require 100 percent, and I can't always give that much of myself because of my children," she said, adding that such routine chores as shopping are time-consuming.

"I try to grocery shop during my lunch hour because when I shop with the kids I need two carts — one to push and one to pull. I push the cart with the baby and the food in it and pull the other with Eric and Cheyenne in it. And I never start by going down the candy or cereal aisle. That would create havoc. We'd never finish shopping."

The sight of Trott pushing and pulling three small children and carts full of groceries more than once has caused other shoppers to comment: "You sure have your hands full." Trott subsequently bought a personalized license plate for her 13-year-old Chevrolet that tells the world, "HNDSFL."

Sibling fights may help children later

By LAWRENCE M. KUTNER
N.Y. Times News Service

An 11-year-old girl taunted her 8-year-old sister as they climbed the stairs in a bookstore. "I hate you!" she yelled. "I can't stand being with you! I just hate you!"

Dr. Wyndol Furman, a professor of psychology at the University of Denver who was in the bookstore at the time, said: "The younger girl was trying to ignore the older one. You could see the strain on her face."

There are times when the bond between siblings appears tenuous at best. Brothers and sisters who seemed to get along fine a day or even an hour earlier will suddenly act like worst enemies. They cannot play together without yelling, hitting or calling each other names.

Psychologists and others who study sibling rivalry have found several clear patterns that can help parents anticipate and handle such battles.

"We've found that the amount of conflict between children is not related to their affection for each other," said Furman, who added that name-calling alone is seldom a reason for worry. "I'd be more concerned if the children were very aggressive toward other kids outside the family, as well."

PERIODS OF apparent animosity between siblings appear to help children with their social development. Children can take more risks with a brother or sister because they will not reject them the way friends might.

"These fights are a way for children to learn and practice the conflict resolution skills that they'll need when they get older," said Dr. Frances Fuchs Schachter, the supervising pediatric psychologist at Metropolitan Hospital in New York City and an associate professor of pediatrics at New York Medical College.

The squabbles appear to serve other purposes, as well. They are a way for children to establish that they are different from their brothers and sisters, which is why the fights are most intense when siblings are the same sex and very close in age.

They are also a release for some of the anger or frustration children may be feeling toward an adult whom they would not dare treat the way they would treat another child.

"Their behavior is often triggered by displaced anger toward the parents," said Dr. William Ayres, a child psychiatrist and an associate clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of California at San Francisco. "It's a lot safer to be angry at your sibling than at your mother or father."

ANOTHER PREDICTOR of increased fighting between siblings is when one child enters a new social group that puts a premium on more adult behavior. "It's common when the older sibling enters junior high school and doesn't want to be associated with the younger sibling," Furman said.

Fighting with a brother or sister can also be a way for children to try to determine the favored child in the family. Children who feel they are treated unequally or unfairly by their parents are more likely to fight with each other, according to Furman's research.

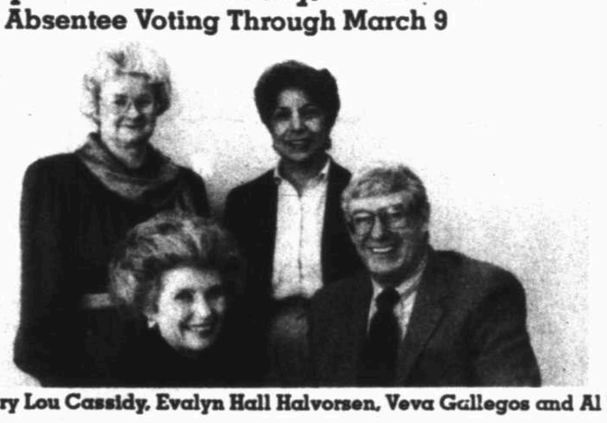

To adults, the fights can look and sound vicious and perhaps even dangerous, but appearances are almost always misleading.

"Pediatricians will tell you that there are very few injuries that occur in sibling fights," Ayres said. "They're more smoke than fire. A lot of the screaming is for the benefit of the parents and doesn't really reflect their real feelings about the sibling. When the parents are gone, the kids get along fine."

Often the intense rivalry that flourished when children were younger disappears when they reach adolescence. The change reflects their growing sophistication in two areas. Their increased ability to empathize makes them less likely to try to bully someone smaller. "They also learn the value of teaming up against their parents to get the privileges that they want," Ayres said.

North Texas twins to be Easter Seal Children

By ALDEN BROWN

ELECTRA, Texas (AP) — Introductions to this year's Easter Seal Children for the North Texas Rehabilitation Center should be made quickly. They don't have time to talk when there is only so much time to play in any given day.

The two 3-year-old blonde tornadoes keep their mother hopping like a gym instructor. Their bodies may have had a tough time of it in the first three years of life, but the minds of Rachel and Rebekah Rodgers move with an agility that can startle unsuspecting adults.

MOTHER AND FATHER are an exception, of course. The attributes of their children come as no surprise. The fact that the parents have been able to continue to work and raise two special children does surprise others, though.

Which surprises the girls' mom, Allison.

"Some people say, 'Oh, I couldn't do that,'" she said. "There was never a question of whether we could take care of them or not. God gave them to us and we just do it."

For Eddie and Allison Rodgers, apparent tragedy has grown into obvious joy.

"They have filled my life," Allison said.

In 1986, Allison went into labor two months early and gave birth to twins weighing less than six pounds combined. Rachel and Rebekah were rushed to Fort Worth Children's Hospital, and Allison had to recover from her emergency Caesarean section delivery without holding her babies or even knowing how they were doing from moment to moment, hour to hour.

AND THEN Allison, recovering at her home in Electra, received a call from Fort Worth hospital. Rebekah had suffered a brain hemorrhage and lung collapse and eventually was diagnosed with cerebral palsy.

Rachel continued to have respiratory and heart problems. Monitor wires and tubes covered the infants' bodies.

"Looking at the babies lying there in the hospital...I couldn't hold them. I couldn't help them. It was really weird.

"It was really hard," Allison said.

Rebekah recovered and came home when she was 8 weeks old, her mother said. "She was growing fine and getting fat. Then we noticed her feet starting to turn in."

Rachel came home after four months. They started therapy for the twins when they were 6 months old.

All the while, medical bills continued to roll in. Allison said, totaling more than $1 million in the first year.

Electra citizens and civil and religious organizations came to the rescue, along with medical and government agencies.

"One of the benefits of living in a small town is that the whole community knows you and knows your problems," she said. "That can be one of the disadvantages, too," she said, laughing.

THE WICHITA FALLS rehabilitation center has provided Allison and her husband with other resources to help pay for the therapy and medical expenses.

"We're very lucky to have the rehab center here," she said. "If we have a question, all we have to do is ask."

From potty training to the newest treatments for cerebral palsy, the rehab center has provided answers to the parents' day-to-day questions.

Three years after birth the two girls are blonde and beautiful. They bounce from toy to toy with an energy that only 3-year-olds possess.

The twins' relationship is especially close.

"I think (Rebekah) experiences stuff through Rachel," Allison said. When Rachel runs or jumps, Rebekah laughs and almost seems to feel the exhilaration that her sister feels, their mother said.

The two do compete for attention. Like normal sisters, they try to keep Mommy and visitors in their corner.

THEIR STRUGGLE for life has left its mark, however.

"Rachel is more conscious than most 3-year-olds," she said. When her sister needs her, when she undergoes therapy, the two have to be together.

Which may present a problem next year when Rebekah attends the rehab center's Early Childhood Intervention program.

Problems don't bother the Rodgers family too much, though. Not as long as they have each other.

AP LaserPhoto

Allison Rodgers pushes daughter Rebekah's wheelchair as Rachel runs along near their home in Electra. The 3-year-old twins are this year's Easter Seal Children for the North Texas Rehabilitation Center.

"I worried the day they told me of Rebekah's brain hemorrhage," Allison said. "I did fear for her independence.

"I think she will be able to walk, to get around and be independent in the future," Allison said.

Rebekah focuses on one thing at a time and another step in her walk to adulthood doesn't seem to concern her. What is more important at age 3 is what Rachel is doing across the room.

Smelly reasearch could raise a stink

Copley News Service

The way some people act stinks. So why not use smells to make them behave better? That's what scientists in the United States and Britain are working on now. They want to inject fragrances into ventilation ducts in subways, offices and prisons to alter human behavior.

Duke University psychologist Sue Shiffman says certain odors affect the brain and can curb hostility, aggression and tension. And International Flavors and Fragrances researcher Craig Warren says research is leaning toward finding a fragrance that will reduce stress.

Warren says the odor will alter moods much like soft music has a calming effect. But Warren and Schiffman are not divulging their smelly research for fear of raising a stink with their bosses.

Shiffman does say the Japanese already tested a fragrance on keypunch operators, which reduced their mistakes by 50 percent after they were exposed to the odor.

Anniversary

Thurmans celebrate silver anniversary

Vivian and Curtis Thurman of Midland celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Saturday with a renewal of their vows, officiated by District Elder Ira Stanton, followed by a reception at Plaza Club. Hosts were the couple's sons and friends.

Thurman and the former Vivian Louise Anders were married March 6, 1965, at Ideal Baptist Church in Midland. They have two children, Tyrone Thurman of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, and Kirk Thurman of Canyon.

The couple lived in Odessa until moving to Midland in 1969. Mrs. Thurman is a member of Lighthouse Pentecostal Church. Her husband is a member of Ideal Baptist Church.

DEAR ABBY

Actions of this rose lacking a few petals

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend, "Rose," whose hobby is corresponding with guys who are away at college or in the service. She writes duplicate love letters and encloses locks of her hair. You could make a mattress of all the locks she's mailed out. If these guys ever get together on their duplicate love letters, I smell trouble.

Rose says it "amuses" her to receive their responses filled with passion and declarations of undying love. She also has several guys on the string right here in the Bronx.

I think this is a sick way for a girl to get her jollies. Some of those guys could be taking her seriously and get hurt. She's nice-looking and popular and doesn't need to do this. Telling her to stop this childish hobby falls on deaf ears.

What do you think of this "harmless" hobby? And what do you think of Rose? — EDDIE IN THE BRONX

DEAR EDDIE: Young men who are in the service or away at college are lonely and vulnerable. They are hungry for mail, but duplicate "love letters" are far from harmless — they are misleading and therefore cruel.

What do I think of Rose? I think she has a few petals missing.

DEAR ABBY: I am sure you would not have titled a recent column "Indian-giving is OK" if you knew the unfortunate history of this phrase.

In colonial times, European settlers and Native Americans had misunderstandings because of different customs and language. Sometimes a settler would think a Native American had given him something, when, in fact, it had only been loaned to him. When the owner asked for the return of the "gift," it caused resentment.

As you know, children sometimes "give away" their possessions, then change their minds. When I was young, we would angrily call a child who did this an "Indian giver." I didn't know any better then, but now I am sorry that I helped perpetuate this insulting stereotype. It is tragic that this stereotype should exist about people who generously shared their lands with others and were repaid so cruelly.

I hope you will print my letter so that other readers can learn not to make this mistake. — MOLLEEN MATSUMURA, BERKELEY, CALIF.

DEAR MOLLEEN: Whoa ... hold it! I plead "not guilty" as charged. I do not write the "heads" for my column. The editor of your newspaper deserves all the credit or blame — whichever the case may be.

Couples' offbeat interest in llamas leads to love, marriage

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Long before Robert Kinitz immigrated to the United States from South America and met his wife, Gail, an Easton native, the couple had one off-beat interest in common.

Both liked llamas.

Gail, who has worked with breeders and kennel keepers since she was 16, once had a Nubian goat and figured it was as close as she would get to a llama.

Robert, on the other hand, grew up around llamas on his family's farm in South America.

After Robert moved to the United States, he met Gail through mutual friends. They married, bought the Green Acres-Deja Vu Kennels in Bethlehem Township and, about eight years ago, Gail finally got her wish.

Today, the Kinitz clan includes three children — Ethel, 16; John, 11, and Veronica, 1½ — dozens of rabbits, chickens and dogs, two geese, a few horses and nine llamas.

Charger, the eldest of the Kinitz herd, joined the family in 1980. A descendant of one of the llamas in the Philadelphia Zoo, Charger earned his name because he likes to chase girls.

The Kinitzes hope to bring the herd up to about 50 within the next several years. Then they plan to breed them to sell. Meanwhile, they make their living grooming, breeding and boarding dogs.

Though llama raising is just starting to catch on in this part of the country, it has been a popular hobby out West for several years.

They make good pets.

"They're quiet, gentle, pleasant, easy to train and care for," says Gail. "And they don't kick ... or bark."

The couple says the most common misconception about llamas is they spit at humans.

"Llamas do spit," Gail says, "but usually not at people. If they're eating and one tries to take food away from the other, they might spit at each other, but they usually don't spit at people."

Their diet generally is grain, grass, alfalfa, corn and hay.

A domesticated species of the camel family, llamas have hooves identical to those of a goat and can be trained for packing or pulling carts. Also, Robert says, llama wool, which is collected by simply brushing, not shearing, is worth about $96 a pound, compared with $4 a pound for sheep wool.

Llamas are judged by their coat, the quality of their wool, genealogy, size, appearance and physical confirmation. People usually buy llamas for one of four reasons, Robert says: packing, breeding, wool production or for pets.

Women suppress, men vent anger

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — How people handle anger varies with gender, according to studies by a Pacific University psychology professor.

Women experience anger in response to many of the same circumstances as men and may even experience similar levels of anger, says Dr. Mary Kay Biaggio, but they are prone to suppress and internalize their anger while men tend to externalize theirs.

"The cost of this suppression may for many women be lowered self-esteem, a sense of powerlessness and fear of responding to or of even recognizing a provoking or unfair condition that causes the anger in the first place," she says.

For example, if a supervisor criticizes an employee for a trivial matter, male employees would be more likely than females to view their supervisor as unreasonable and to consider the incident their supervisor's fault. Women would be more likely to blame themselves for the criticism and to attempt to correct the problem.

Though individual men and women may respond in a variety of ways to this type of provocation, Biaggio's research suggests that there will be some differences, in general, between the sexes in how they construe such provocation.

Burns, scalds are preventable hazard to children

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burns and scalds injure as many as 1 million children every year and claim 1,300 young lives, yet many of these tragedies could be prevented by some extra adult care.

Bathtub burns and spills of hot liquids are a major, yet unnecessary, hazard, reports the National Coalition to Prevent Childhood Injury.

"Burns happen quickly and they can happen to everyone," warns Thomas Duffy of the Burn Victim Foundation.

"I've spoken with parents of children who had been seriously burned who said they only left their child alone in the bathtub for a moment, or they only turned away long enough to get a towel and the child turned on the hot water tap. It doesn't take long for a child to receive a serious burn," he said.

If a child is burned, the first thing to do is soak a clean, white cloth in cool water and apply it to the burn, being careful not to break any blisters, says Dr. Martin Eichelberger of Children's National Medical Center in Washington. Then call a doctor.

But prevention is better than treatment.

■ Never leave your child alone in the bathtub.

If it is necessary to leave the room to answer the telephone or deal with some other interruption, take the child with you. Baby sitters, relatives and other caregivers should be instructed to do this also.

■ Test the water before placing a child in the bathtub.

An adult should put his entire hand in the water and move it back-and-forth for a few seconds. If the temperature is at all uncomfortable, then it is too hot for a child.

■ Face the child away from the bathtub faucet. Children are less likely to manipulate faucets that are out of sight.

■ Do not establish the kitchen as a recreational area.

Letting the child play on the kitchen floor while you are cooking may make it easier to watch him, but it also creates the chance of tripping and spilling hot food.

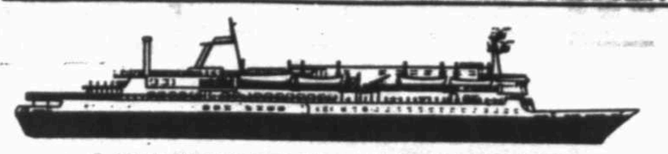

■ Do not provide any opportunity for children to reach up and pull hot items down on themselves.

That means putting pans on rear burners. Turn pot handles away from the front of the stove. Place hot dishes on the back of the counter and keep hot food away from the table edge. In addition, keep appliance cords out of reach and use table cloths only when children are not present.

■ Buy and install a smoke detector. Test the smoke detector regularly and replace the batteries annually.

■ Think about the danger of fire in advance and what you would do in the event of an alarm. Be aware of where children are so they can be assisted, and when they are old enough to understand the danger teach them what to do in the event of fire.

NICK TAYLOR AND LEADERSHIP...

LEADERSHIP IN INTEGRITY:
Nick believes the court should be fair to everyone. Maintaining the integrity of the court is important and he has refused to accept campaign contributions from any personal injury, criminal defense or other trial lawyers who will appear before the court.

LEADERSHIP IN HIS PROFESSION:
Nick is one of Midland's leading attorneys. He has practiced for 26 years. He has been a partner in one of West Texas' largest law firms where he has been head of Practice Management for many of the firms departments. This leadership prepared Nick to handle the cases that come before this court.

LEADERSHIP IN EFFICIENT USE OF THE COURTS:
Nick will unclog the backlog of pending cases. This will save time and money in the courts and cut costs for both the litigants and the taxpayer.

LEADERSHIP IN THE WAR ON DRUGS:
Nick was appointed to the Midland Crime Prevention Commission by the Midland City Council. As President of the Commission, Nick worked out the details of a plan to reduce drug related crime by testing probated criminals for illegal drug use. This gets them into treatment and/or off the streets. Under his leadership the commission conducted the first crime poll in Midland.

LEADERSHIP IN HIS COMMUNITY:
Nick has taken leadership roles in many community organizations. Nick has served as:
-Chairman of the Chaparral District (Midland), Boy Scouts of America
-Chancellor - Holy Trinity Church
-President Midland Crime Prevention Commission

JEWELS OF THE '90S

Fake jewelry is the rage for the '90s. Made from Austrian crystals and cubic zirconias and set in sterling, gold electroplated, or 14 or 18 karat gold settings, the jewelry offers an inexspensive alternative to high priced gems. The top photo shows faux emerald earrings and ring, with a jaguar pin featuring fake emerald eyes and diamond back. Sapphire replicas (bottom left) with cubic zirconia accents bedeck the copy of Princess Diana's wedding ring, a bracelet and a jaguar ring. The Austrian crystal necklace with matching earrings reflects all colors. Since Barbara Bush became the first lady, pearls have been the talk of new accessories. This three strand necklace of faux pearls (bottom center) is her favorite, shown with faux pearl and gold earrings. Pearls also make the perfect display for this Austrian crystal amethyst enhancer with matching earrings and ring (bottom right).

Usually, imposters are frowned upon. But in the world of jewels, fake gems are the rage for the '90s. These stones — usually cubic zirconia and Austrian crystal — are facet-cut and polished to look like real gems. The stones are then set in electroplated, sterling, or 14 or 18 karat gold settings, and resemble "the real thing."

Although these fake jewels have been popular since about 1987, according to Ellen West, co-owner — along with her husband, Bob — of Sonsilks, 2505 Ohio, they seem to have risen to new heights in popularity, quality and variety for the '90s.

This growing niche faux gems are creating in the accessories market may be due, at least in part, to television programs such as "Dallas" and "Dynasty" where the stars flaunted opulent jewelry in everyday settings.

THE RELATIVE low-cost of these fake items also may have a lot to do with their increasing popularity. What with the expense of clothing continually rising, faux jewelry is an inexpensive, yet elegant, way to accessorize a wardrobe. The fake jewels sell for considerably less than their authentic counterparts, yet look more realistic and are of better quality than their costume jewelry alternatives.

Next Sunday, the Reporter-Telegram will feature a Spring Fashion section, " Dressed to the '90s."

Ms. West refers to this type of jewelry as bridge jewelry, a term derived from Verve®, a manufacturer of bridge jewelry, where she orders many of her Austrian crystal pieces from. It is considered a collection of quality, with a range of styles that goes from everyday to evening.

"Bridge jewelry is a transition between the elegant and the expensive," Ms. West said. "It wears very well. We have some (Verve® bridge jewelry) coming in that even come with a lifetime guarantee. The electroplated pieces are heavily electroplated with 18 karat (or 14 karat) gold, so they wear very well."

HOWEVER, Ms. West added that the fake jewels do need to be cleaned more often than real gems to keep their realistic look.

"Women want to look glamorous. We put the dazzle on their bodies without picking their pockets, so is it any wonder that fake jewels are one of the fastest-growing segments of the fashion business," said Nancy Olsen, president and founder of Imposters Copy Jewels, a national chain that sells unreal jewelry.

The popularity of fake jewelry is attested to by the fact that over 200 million carats of fake diamonds were produced last year, compared to only 9 million carats of real diamonds.

JEWELS

many of those who have real jewels but travel a lot prefer to leave their real jewels at home in a locked box and take their fake jewelry with them.

The fake jewelry offers an inexpensive way to look fabulous without the risk of expensive jewelry items being stolen or the bother of checking jewelry in at a security box at hotels.

"People don't like to wear their real ones (jewels) when they travel," Ms. West said. However, the imitation pieces are of good quality, she added, "A lady told me that she was warned she should check her jewelry (in a security box) and when she told them it didn't matter, they weren't real, the hotel person said, 'A thief doesn't know that.'"

Others buy the fake jewelry because they simply can't afford to buy real jewels and the faux collections offer the opportunity to own look-a-likes.

In addition to "look-a-likes" for real jewels, this new rage in accessories also sports "look-a-likes" to many famous pieces of jewelry. Copies of such top names in jewelry as Chanel, Gucci, Tiffany and Cartier are available. These pieces sport fake pearls, rubies, sapphires and emeralds. "And anything Chanel is popular," Ms. West added.

The Impostors Copy Jewels collection and Sonsilks even sell exact replicas of Princess Diana's wedding ring, and its cost is under $50 for the gold electroplated versions. Instead of a star sapphire, the copy of the royal ring bears a blue Austrian crystal surrounded by cubic zirconia. In fact, the Imposters collection even includes matching earrings and pendant which Princess Di doesn't have.

There also are duplicates of designer David Webb's bracelets — which look like animals and sell for $22,000 to $25,000 — only the Imposters sell for around $200. Sonsilks carries reproductions of the leopard rings which sell for about $30.

Many museums even have gotten into the selling of reproductions of collections on exhibit, according to Accessories magazine. In fact, 20 percent to 35 percent of a museum store's business is usually from jewelry sales. So it's no wonder that reproductions are becoming a big business.

"We reproduce jewelry according to a museum's need, whatever they want. We used to go to them, but by now, the museums come to us and ask us to make this necklace or that bracelet. We incorporate real elements in the reproductions, for instance, ancient glass," explained Lars Messler of Museum Reproductions, a Boston-based manufacturer of reproductions and adaptations of museum pieces. "Hot items lately have been bolos, antique coins and charm necklaces."

The prices of reproductions range from $3.50 to $3,000, in an attempt to offer a good variety.

When bridge jewelry initially became popular, the stones bedecked mostly watches and earrings, according to Ms. West.

Big diamonds were especially popular the last few years, according to Ali Hashemian, senior vice president of Imposters Copy Jewels. "If one carat was good, five carats was better. We call it 'Texas-style jewelry' because everything is big in Texas," Hashemian said.

But now, the trend is turning more toward the traditional, conservative styles, Hashemian said, such as the company's European Collection, which includes many replicas of the British Crown Jewels as well as the Duchess of Windsor reproductions.

A change in mentality is being seen for the '90s. The wear-now, throw-away later ideas that have dominated the moderately priced accessories business of the '80s is making way for ideas of well-thought out purchases that will be worn for years to come. Vintage jewelry will be one area where reproductions will gain momentum.

So whether the fake gems are to fill out a collection of "the real thing" or simply to make a fashion statement, being a copycat will be the rage in jewels of the '90s.

Fashion Coterie trade show reveals new language

N.Y. Times News Service

At the Fashion Coterie, a trade show held last week in the Omni Park Central hotel, hundreds of owners of small specialty stores milled around six floors of hotel rooms filled with clothing and accessories. With so many boutique owners in one place, the cacophony of individual style statements was horrific.

Fashion store owners and creators also speak their own language.

"Shoulder dusters are blowing out," said Anne Gillet, the owner of Champagne Taste, a boutique in Sonoma, Calif. She was referring to earrings that dangle to the shoulders. "Blowing out," short for "blowing out the door," means to sell quickly.

"We are jacket-driven," said Nadine Marder, the owner of Ninety, a sportswear company that emphasizes the jacket. The Ninety hotel suite was decorated with votive candles, crystals, big chunks of quartz and a smoking stew of essential oils. "Aromatherapy," Ms. Marder said. "It lifts the spirits."

"The little black dress in girdle fabrics — it's everywhere," was the refrain at the Patricia Field showroom. In case you haven't noticed, nylon-spandex clothes are big on MTV. "We were one of the first to do the inner-wear as outerwear look," said a rep of Patricia Field.

"I can sell a lot of that black poodle dress," said Rachel London, a California designer. The poodle dress is a skimpy, noodle-strap number with a flower bodice and flower hem.

Glitzy faux jewelry easy on pocketbook

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Accessories, whether faux diamond shoulder dusters or a hat, headband, handbag, hosiery, belt, gloves or scarf are an easy and relatively inexpensive way to change your look and your outlook. The good news is that faux jewelry is easy on the pocketbook.

■ Hair a little mangy and no time to shampoo? Wrap a silk square around head and neck a la Grace Kelly. Add sunglasses for intrigue.

■ A $10 pair of fashion stockings can boost a woman's morale much the way a $40 tie does for a man.

■ Think how a chain-link or lizard skin belt with buckle interest can change the look of a basic dress. Or how the belt can serve you best — by neatly nipping the waist or sitting jauntily on the hips.

"Accessories have outperformed ready-to-wear ... more than doubling in the past 10 years from $7.3 billion to $17.3 billion in retail sales," says Reenie Davis, publisher of Accessories Magazine, a trade publication.

More than 25 percent of that — some $5.5 billion — is in fashion jewelry.

"Just look what happened to jewelry when women discovered there was more to life than the little gold chain," says Davis.

For spring, the jewelry focus is on earrings, the longer the better; wide, bold cuffs — one at a time, please — and necklaces, best in longer lengths and worn in multiples. Pins are good, too.

At the recent Fashion Accessories Expo in New York, where the nation's retailers view crafters' wares with an eye to buy, there was polished wood, faux ivory, lava and coral; semi-precious metals machine-stamped or hand-cast; glass cut and polished in every hue in styles from sophisticated to whimsical.

Representing both ends of the spectrum is the work of Wendy Gell, a New York designer, who does elegant and pricey baubles of Austrian crystal as well as the more affordable, and fun, cartoon characters in pave and enamel.

The cartoon line includes Mickey Mouse, Jessica Rabbit and all of the Oz gang. New for summer are Dick Tracy and Breathless Mahoney, cashing in on the June release of a movie starring Warren Beatty and Madonna.

Crushable straws seem to be the news in hats. Whittall & Shon showed planters hats in natural straw with gold braid and glitzy stone trim. David Salvatore of an upstart New York company called Head Master, likes floppy straws in bright colors decorated with gromets and studs.

Studs are Michael Morrison's medium, too. Morrison, who designed for the Royal Ballet before settling in Los Angeles, creates a filigree look with studs on everything leather from bustiers to belts.

If you don't want to be seen in one of Morrison's $2,500 creations, hide behind sunglasses by Mercura of New York. Most are adorned with paper-thin brass marching along the bridge in forms as diverse as maple leaves, ocean liners and Irish setters.

AT WIT'S END

Husband feeling his oats in whole new way

By ERMA BOMBECK

When our kids were small, we had a Breakfast Cereal Code. A box of cereal had to die before you could replace it with a new one.

Bombeck

All that changed recently when oats made the trip from the barns to the breakfast tables of America. But this time, it was my husband who went crazy. We have enough boxes of oat bran cereal in our house to put the entire city into a fiber coma.

As a junk food disciple, I haven't had it easy. It's been an uphill battle working my way through the shelves of oat muffins, oat pasta, oat cookies and ... it's only a suspicion ... oat laxatives.

The other day I grabbed a bun for my hot dog and paused. "What's the matter with this bun?" I asked.

"Nothing. Why?" my husband answered.

"It looks like someone dropped it on the floor."

"It's made out of oat bran," he said.

There is something incongruous about the marriage of a hot dog to an oat bran bun. It's like making a root beer float out of a diet root beer and Haagen-Dazs.

I threw open the cupboards and commanded, "Look at yourself. You're out of control. There must be a dozen boxes of oat bran cereal in here. No one has a right to be this healthy."

"Two are unopened," he challenged. "I bought them the other day to get a plastic-foam glider."

That's what too much oat bran does to people.

If you took advertising seriously, you'd think the only things we pursue in this country are cold remedies and breakfast cereals. The latter used to be something we told kids was good for you, but we never ate it ourselves. Now we're telling ourselves if we graze at the breakfast table we'll live longer.

For the past several years, I've watched and listened to my husband in his pursuit of a well-balanced fiber diet. For every tablespoon of oat bran he puts in his mouth, he chews 37 times before he swallows it. That averages out to 38 seconds (with a decibel level approaching that of a commuter train). An average bowl contains 23 spoonfuls. That's 874 seconds, or 14 minutes, 34 seconds. In that amount of time I could listen to the Minute Waltz 14 times ... talk to all three of my kids' answering machines ... answer my mail or jog half a mile.

I read the other day that the new grain of the month would most likely be rice. The only problem is that nutritionists can't find any proven health benefits to it. Maybe the offer of a plastic-foam glider with every box would do it.

Historian tries to fathom fashion trends

N.Y. Times News Service

Fashion is every bit as basic as food, according to Caroline Rennolds Milbank, a fashion historian and the author of "Couture: The Great Designers" and "New York Fashion: The Evolution of American Style."

Ms. Milbank said that Americans share a fascination with fashion, despite sharing an equally widespread fear of being overdressed. She said she has never met anyone completely indifferent to fashion.

In an interview at her waterfront apartment in Cos Cob, Ct., Ms. Milbank discussed fashion and trends. Here are some excerpts from the conversation:

Q. What can be learned from fashion history?

A. While it is unfair to expect the past to help predict the future, looking at fashion can add to an understanding of the past. It gives a good sense of how people lived and how they felt about what was going on in the world. Fashions reflect changes in women's lives. I think of it as an easy way to find out more about the past.

NEW COSTUME museums, and historical societies featuring costume collections, are opening all over America. They bring in huge numbers of people because both men and women like to look at how people dressed. It's something people can really relate to on a basic level.

Q. Does fashion flow in cycles?

A. The main reason fashions change is because women want them to. As women achieve more, their clothes become more freeing. Women adopted a look that meant they could walk in the street, take subways or cable cars, go up steps and move around. This was followed by a more restricted period, then freer again, then more restricted.

In the 80s there were many garments that were physically restrictive, like tight clothes, high heels, or that inhibited getting in and out of cars or were just uncomfortable. Clothing was also mentally restrictive, which included having to spend a lot of time dressing, shopping and maintaining them. This also includes high-maintenance grooming, cosmetics and nail care.

Q. Does fashion affect a woman's level of confidence?

A. Clothes can add to insecurity. People can feel very insecure about not being appropriately dressed. But clothes that are physically comfortable can be mentally comfortable.

Clothes have a lot to do with how you see yourself and how you want to be seen. Even the person who only wears jeans has made a decision, whether consciously or not, to be seen as someone who doesn't care about clothes. That was a very important aspect of 70s fashion when women wanted to be seen as being above clothes.

Q. Why are department stores dying?

A. Apart from the economics of being taken over and thus unable to pay expensive loans, is the fact that people have less time to shop. Shoppers don't have what it takes to go through eight floors to find what they need. It's not the way people live now.

PEOPLE ARE always complaining about bad service, finding the same things everywhere and having clothes locked away. Department stores need more personality. Maybe it takes a family to run a department store rather than a company. It's the same with suburban shopping malls.

Q. How do American designers compare to foreign designers?

A. I like American clothes. American fashion celebrates the American woman and it's uniquely suited to them. Historically they have been stronger, more interested in education and employment, and generally in making contribution to society. They're more philanthropic than European women.

Fashion is directed toward this type of woman. Their clothes have to move since women want not to think about their clothes. The suit, an all-day costume, released women from thinking about their clothes. Conversely, European designers try to make women into the style they're showing that season.

Q. Who are some great American designers?

A. Some are established and some are new. Bill Blass does a tennis sweater in sequins, a very American concept, using sportsclothes for evening. Geoffrey Beene has always done this, making gray flannel evening dresses, which grew out of the 30s when people didn't have as much heating. It's a great idea to use daytime material for evening. Marc Jacobs at Perry Ellis has little sundresses for the spring made out of Italian restaurant tablecloths and kitchen towels.

DESIGNERS LIKE Claire McCardell, who made inexpensive clothes that really fit into women's lives, now have been supplanted by companies like the Gap. They offer all-natural fabrics like year-round cotton with a high level of design.

Q. How are young designers doing?

A. Historically young designers could make five things and take them to a fashion editor or Bendel's department store in New York on Friday mornings. Then in the 80s we saw young designers burst on the fashion scene with lots of backing and then go belly up. Now it's starting to return to the older way again with young designers also attempting to keep prices down.

Q. Any fashion predictions for the 90s?

A. Everyone predicts fashion will get simpler in the 90s. I think more women will want custom-made clothes in the next decade. We'll see more personal shoppers to fill the hole left by the demise of intelligent salespeople. Even in small towns women could rely on the same salespeople for 30 years. They expected to be well treated, and trusted their advice.

In the 90s I think we'll see two trends: low-cost factory outlets with no service versus the all-service stores, the small specialty shops with little choice.

Q. What about the role of technology in fashion?

A. Even though technology has let us down since pantyhose, I can imagine a futuristic computerized system for ordering clothes without stores. Imagine a blazer that could be ordered with different widths of lapels or different colors and then altered on the computer screen to fit exactly.

American manufacturers have never felt limited by machine. Even though machines were not invented here, they were perfected here. Conversely the French were frustrated that they couldn't create couture with their machines. Adrienne Vittadini, the knitwear designer, uses printed sweaters coordinated with knitted cotton skirts. She works out her designs on a computer so the machine frees her and her design team to be more experimental.

Q. What impact is the baby boom generation having on the fashion world?

A. They have been so incredibly important starting when they were teen-agers and were the biggest section of the population, plus had money. In the 70s these women graduated, postponed marriage and entered the workplace. They wanted to look serious.

IN THE 80s they got older and wanted clothes that were more expensive and better made. Their standards went up and they demanded higher quality. They still wanted the natural materials of the 70s but finer. They went from wool to cashmere, from leather to crocodile skin, from crepe de chine silk to Jacquard and woven patterns.

Q. Is a quest for youthfulness part of this?

A. As we enter the 90s, baby boomers are starting to want to look younger. That was the whole thinking behind the short skirt, that it would make women look younger. Plastic surgery and getting into shape are part of this movement.

Looking young is very important. Models are older and curvier. Youngness will be important until the baby boomlet starts to have a real voice in about 10 years.

The dressier looks of the 80s, the short skirts, glittery suits, big shoulders, I believe, are aging. They fit women into a category of being of a certain age. There used to be very rigid categories for women's lives. First she was a girl, then a young woman, a newlywed and finally a matron, and the matron came along very quickly.

One of the most interesting things that happened in the 80s was that age feeling ceased to exist. It was very significant to see Jane Fonda in leotards.

Midland Country Club Ladies Association will meet for lunch and style show Friday. Fashions will be from Robbie Casey. Social hour will begin 11:30 a.m. For reservations call 682-4378.

Baby boomers to ban neckties?

RHINEBECK, N.Y. (AP) — If baby boomers ban neckties in board rooms and elsewhere in corporate America in the coming decade, a lot of people will be scrambling for gift ideas for Father's Day, Christmas and birthdays.

And it may well happen, according to a wide-ranging decade trend analysis by the Socio-Economic Research Institute of America.

"As the baby boom generation moves into power slots, its members are going to remove their ties and other restrictive clothing and replace them with 'smart' wear," the research group says.

"Smart" wear, the institute says, are clothes that "look great yet have a function. The baby boomers made jeans popular for school wear in the '60s and they're going to make 'smart' wear popular in the '90s."

New York City harbors romantic hideaways for lovestruck

By CHRIS BARNETT
N.Y. Times News Service

Romantic, in the traditional sense of the word, is not how one expects a casual observer to describe New York City circa 1990.

This steely, impetuous metropolis plays hard to get with new suitors, in contrast to her soft and pretty cousins like Paris, Rome and Barcelona — a saucy Katharine Hepburn to a come-hither Lana Turner.

Those who seek amorous milieus need to pierce the city's tough-cookie exterior, to call its bluff, to grab it by the elbow in that Cary Grant you're-driving-me-to-drink-young-lady fashion.

That enchanting settings are not found on every corner in New York does not make them less exhilarating when discovered.

There are two strategies to seeking romance in New York, one active, one passive.

To those who pursue the former course, romance is approached like everything else in this importunate city: you have to go for it, fast, and sometimes against daunting odds.

If dancing on the cutting edge of culture makes your pulse race, then New York is the world's biggest hypertension colony.

To others, though, romance in New York is not in the chase, but in the spectacle of those chasing.

The febrile pace of the city creates a dynamic stage that all inhabitants and visitors traverse.

WE NEED NOT be actors or directors or musicians, for just crossing that stage sends a frisson up the spine.

Strolling north on Broadway from Times Square — hardly a Rue St.-Honore — one can't help to sense that some great and perhaps historic performances are happening behind the blazing marquees.

Rambling in SoHo or along Madison Avenue, you can fantasize about the baronial homes where great paintings will reside.

And outside of ritzy restaurants, the elephant parade of limousines, their passenger windows darkened for heightened effect, always reassures us that this still is the center of glamour and power.

Propinquity is not participation of course, but it fuels dreams.

And what is romance but wistful dreaming?

In my own case, the poetry of New York is partly what it is, partly what it was.

To me, nothing surpasses the ocean as a catalyst for romance.

I still cling to the whimsical idea that New York is a great seafaring port, a maritime crossroads where the sirens from exotic ports sound off around the clock.

So what if scrap barges from Albany and Caribbean cocktail cruises are about as Conradian as it gets.

The water still surrounds us, and the moon still dances on it, and the skyscrapers seem to rise from its depths at night.

This is no San Francisco or Venice, to be sure, but one can find an increasing number of seductive vistas as the city moves to reclaim the long-lost waterfront.

THE NEW WORLD Financial Center Plaza on the Hudson River at Vesey Street, with its spectacular glass atrium, mini-marina and more than a dozen restaurants, is the most striking new example.

It is an evocative space even in midwinter and promises to be splendid in warm weather.

Then there are the usual urban crow's nests: Windows on the World and the Terrace on Morningside Heights; or at sea level, the River Cafe in Brooklyn, Water's Edge in Queens (in warm weather a boat shuttles you over) and the Water Club on a barge in the East River at 30th Street.

One of the most romantic perches in the city is the promenade in Brooklyn Heights, that cantilevered esplanade overlooking lower Manhattan and the harbor.

With a little imagination one can understand what made Walt Whitman swoon at the vista of "masth-emm'd Manhattan" more than a century ago.

For many, nostalgic New York and romance go hand in hand.

Sneaking off to revival movie theaters, preferably during work hours, can be a delectable escape to more innocent times.

FOR MUSIC AND dining, there is cavernous Greene Street in SoHo, the rococo Maxim's in midtown where string quartets and dance combos play nightly, and, of course, there is the spell-binding Rainbow Room.

In this city of cultural overkill, there is never time to keep up.

But you can pretend you can.

My wife and I once saw two Broadoff with a romantic dinner at Le Bernardin.

Another time we stayed out all night at Village music clubs, had breakfast before sunrise at Florent (a French diner in the West Side meat market), and walked home through the flower district on the Avenue of the Americas.

A florist was so surprised to see strollers at that hour he give us a tiger lily.

Southern California inn a favorite setting for honeymooners

By DOROTHY REINHOLD
N.Y. Times News Service

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Sweethearts looking for a romantic setting in Southern California need look no further than the Ingleside Inn.

The place has a rustic feel with a sophisticated polish that appeals to guests ranging from celebrities to just plain folks.

John Travolta and Marlon Brando are said to have stayed here, as are Greta Garbo, Salvador Dali and Goldie Hawn.

Singer Lily Pons lived here for more than a decade, in a pink-hued room with original Louis XIV furniture. You can rent it for $250 a night.

The 29 guest rooms range from $85 a night for a double to a $550-a-night suite with living room, two bedrooms and four bathrooms.

All prices listed are for high season (Oct. 1 to May 31). Rates for weekdays and low season (June 1 to Sept. 30) are lower.

A thoroughly charming room called a penthouse can be had for $125 a night (double occupancy). Hand-troweled plaster walls, rough-hewn, dark wooden flooring and braided oval throw rugs all combine to lend a cozy, cabinlike feeling to the room.

A wooden writing desk, side tables, an upholstered wing chair, a striped-ticking loveseat and knick-knack shelves complete the decor in the sitting room.

In other words, there are all the comforts of home.

Each room has been fitted with a personal steam bath, individual whirlpool and a mini-refrigerator stocked with complimentary sodas and juices.

Guests leave a card on the doorknob before retiring at night to indicate their breakfast selection and time preference.

At the appointed hour, a polite telephone call informs them that their continental breakfast is on the way; breakfast is a choice of freshly squeezed juices, coffee and tea, delicious muffins and rolls.

Breakfast is served to you either in your room or while you are lounging on a chaise near the pool or hot tub.

Other welcome touches — a morning paper on the doorstep, personalized matches in the room, a pamphlet full of stories about the inn spun by the man-about-town owner — all combine to give a homey feeling.

The rambling grounds have been laid out to encourage twosomes — wrought-iron patio chairs sit in pairs at various pretty spots in the garden.

A wide veranda that encircles the lobby area of the hotel is set up with backgammon games for guests, and the lobby itself is cozy with a fire in the fireplace and a calico cat regally commanding the room.

The grounds also include a cocktail lounge and a well-reviewed, dressy French restaurant, Melvyns, that draws diners from the entire desert area.

The hotel is well-located in Palm Springs — on the west edge of town, at the base of the San Jacinto foothills but within walking distance of Palm Canyon Drive and its trendy shopping.

And, of course, no trip here would be complete without a breathtaking ride on the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway. You can't beat standing on top of a mountain for romance.

Researchers measure suspiciousness

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Researchers here conducted a personality study on 500 men and women to measure suspiciousness.

When completing their first group census, the researchers found 143 of the individuals studied had died. Allowing for such factors as accidents as causes of death, they found a significant number of people who had made low suspicious scores were still alive.

A psychologist says it is possible people who are not suspicious of others have better social relationships, which act as a buffer against stress.

Midland plant shines as auto parts maker

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Ask the most valuable player of any sports championship — the Super Bowl or the World Series — the secret of his success, and he'll say it was a team effort.

Ask Ron Ashley, general manager of Texas Plastics Inc. here in Midland the secret of his plant's success and he'll say it's a team effort.

Thanks to teamwork and a devotion to quality that has led to awards and new contracts, the plant will be adding approximately 40 employees. About 20 have already been hired, and an additional 20 to 25 should be added to the workforce in the next few weeks.

TPI manufactures and ships plastic interior trim parts for the Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer, which are shipped to plants in Hermasillo, Mexico and Wayne, Michigan. The plant also manufactures "Spoonulas" kitchen utensils for Rubber Maid.

Ashley is still aglow about TPI receiving a Q1 award from Ford Motor Co. and is enthusiastic about the future in light of a new program from Ford.

Ford suppliers are given the Q1 award for excellence in quality, service and delivery. Ashley predicts that by 1992, any supplier without a Q1 designation will no longer be Ford suppliers.

Ashley got to make the trip to Detroit to receive the plaque from Ford officials, but he stresses that it was his employees — the ones who operate the tools at TPI that really won the award. "They do the work. We in management just support them."

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Steve Hedrick, left, plant manager, and Ron Ashley, general manager, show off some of the machines that form plastic interior trim parts for Ford cars.

TPI is also in the process of gearing up for a new Ford program, CT20, for 1990-1/2 Ford Escorts and 1990-1/2 Mercury Tracers.

The new program means TPI is getting 32 new tools which will manufacture 172 different parts, thus creating a need for the new workers. The program is a 10-year program, offering TPI some stability.

Texas Plastics started out approximately 20 years ago, making thread protectors for the oilpatch. It was purchased five years ago by Automotive Industries of Strasburg, Va., a primary supplier of interior trim parts to Ford.

At the time, Ford had completed a $500 million assembly plant in Hermasillo, Mexico. "They wanted Automotive Industries to find a plant in Texas to serve the Hermasillo plant, and we decided on this one," Ashley explains.

After the purchase, Ashley, who by then had four years service with AI, was dispatched to Midland as quality control manager. He instituted the statistical process control, a technique that's used to control the manufacturing process.

"We want to prevent a problem as far upstream as we can," he notes.

Kahlua keeps on gaining

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — What's so special about Kahlua, that sticky sweet liqueur that is bucking the slump in consumption in the liquor industry?

While overall sales of distilled spirits dropped 22 percent over the 1980s, Kahlua managed to grow 17 percent to a total volume of more than 1.7 million cases a year in sales.

Analysts say that much of the reason lies in the marketing: Kahlua is being sold as a dessert, not as alcohol.

"No one has successfully imitated it," said Frank Walters, director of research at Impact and Market Watch, beverage industry trade publications. "In the eyes of the consumer, it's unique."

Brewed in Mexico City, with a secret recipe that the company won't reveal, the liqueur has a coffee-chocolate taste that is highly popular.

Until Jules Berman, Kahlua was a little-known cordial regulated to the back shelves of the liquor cabinet, averaging sales of about 1,000 cases a year. Berman, a Los Angeles liquor importer and real estate developer, discovered the coffee-flavored stuff on a trip to Mexico.

A couple of years later, in 1953, he bought the rights to import and bottle the brand from the Schenley Co., a Dallas-based distilled spirits distributor, for $50,000.

Then Berman started to promote it, not only as a liqueur, but also as an ingredient. He pushed the Black Russian, the combination of vodka and Kahlua that is now standard fare at bars. He pushed the notion of Kahlua on ice cream or in coffee.

By the time he sold Kahlua to Hiram Walker and Sons, the Detroit distilled spirits company, in 1965, the product was selling at the rate of 60,000 cases per year. Berman remained president under Hiram Walker until 1973.

In the early 1970s, Hiram Walker, through its Maidstone Wine and Spirits unit, based in Los Angeles' Universal City area, began to put more muscle into its marketing, hiring Los Angeles ad agency Eisaman, Johns & Laws Inc.

The agency created ads touting Kahlua and creme, Kahlua and coffee (the top two favorites among consumers) and White and Black Russians. The company even developed a Kahlua recipe book, which features such Kahlua-laced cuisine as Kahlua Cornish game hens, Kahlua chile and Kahlua banana brunch cake.

"Our notion was really to take advantage of the brand's mixability," said Dean Laws, president of Eisman, Johns & Laws. "We've always been careful to present its uses as opposed to the brand itself. We didn't want to position it as a distilled spirit."

The agency has stuck to basically the same strategy ever since.

"We stick with a strategy if it's working," Laws said. "That may not win awards but it works."

The approach proved to be a stroke of foresight when alcohol consumption came under fire because of health and safety concerns in the 1980s.

Suddenly, spirits perceived as potent brew, such as bourbon or whiskey, were out of favor and their sales started to plummet.

But Kahlua had an innocuous image and a loyal following.

"It really has maintained its popularity," said Max Kerstein, publisher of the Beverage Bulletin, a Los Angeles-based industry newsletter.

Patrick DeHart, of GTS Corporation, displays seismic information which has been reprocessed from old single fold data in his new downtown Midland office.

EXPLORATION

Technology boosts seismic reprocessing

By SUE GUTIERREZ
Business/Oil Writer

With the cost of seismic acquisition continuously on the in crease, finding new ways to squeeze more information from old data is fast-becoming a cost effective option.

Since today's seismic computer technology is far superior to that of just a few years ago it is capable of more accurately defining possible oil and gas structures. The same computer technology is also capable of transforming older, less-sophisticated seismic data that was stored away in old file rooms during boom times into something much more valuable.

For that reason, reprocessed data is quickly becoming a norm for explorationists, especially in leaner times when cost efficiency is paramount. "Seismic reprocessing lets more players into the game. It's advantageous for smaller independents who don't have a lot of exploration dollars," says Pat Rasavage, a Midland consulting geophysicist who has extensive experience in 'squeezing' valuable information from old data through reprocessing.

According to a publication of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists (AAPG) reprocessed seismic may cost $100 to $200 per line mile compared to $2000 to $3000 for new seismic acquisition, and millions of miles of seismic from every mature basin of the country is a candidate for reprocessing.

"Even data dating back to the 1940's is still useful," says Richard Shumacher, a geophysicist for Phillips Petroleum, interviewed by the AAPG Explorer.

Shumacher notes that reprocessed data is split into two groups, the very old, single fold, also known as 100 percent data acquired in the 1940s and 1950s and the newer, common depth point (CDP) data acquired in the 1960s, '70s and '80s. Both groups are valuable, but in different ways, he notes.

"The single-fold data is useful in large regional studies where shooting new surveys is absolutely cost prohibitive, " Schumacher said.

The older data helps to identify prospective rocks that are dipping against the regional dip while newer data is useful in pinpointing subtle traps such as pinchouts Schumacher says.

Midland geophysicist Rasavage points out that single fold data works well in good data areas where seismic resolution is better. "You will not get good resolution near sand dunes or in drastic elevation changes. Generally speaking, the Permian Basin platform is a good area," he says.

Hal Pardue of Dawson Geophysical explains that data acquired before 1985 could be improved and is a good candidate for reprocessing. "Multi-fold

Waco bakery 'rolls' in the bucks

WACO, Texas (AP) — The Manske Roll is: (A) A dance popularized in the 1930s. (B) An aerobatic maneuver. (C) A wild, ecstatic roll on the ground.

It is none of the above, though some would pick answer C after eating the real Manske Roll, a quarter-pound roll drenched in sugar and cinnamon.

The roll contains three to five times more sugar and cinnamon than any other cinnamon roll on the market and forms the base for a Waco firm, the Manske Baking Co.

Julie Fugitt, 42, and Pat Fugitt, 46, own and operate the Manske Baking Co. The rolls were created in 1950 by a San Marcos restaurant owner, Roland Manske. He came up with the recipe upon the request of a local women's club.

After he died in 1961, his wife sold the recipe to Gil Rainosek, owner of Gil's Broiler in San Marcos. When the Fugitts ran across the product in 1981, the roll was immensely popular with Southwest Texas State University students.

"We asked the owner if he was going to grow with the product," Julie Fugitt said. The owner didn't, and the Fuggits bought the license to produce and sell the rolls anywhere except San Marcos.

The firm started out just making Manske Rolls. Since then, the firm has added muffins, croissants, Danish pastries and brownies to its line.

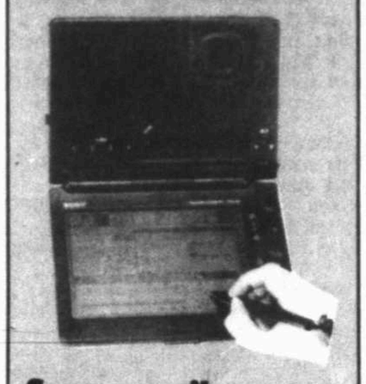

The firm has $2 million in sales annually. While Danish pastries and muffins are the biggest sellers at the moment, the Fugitts consider the Manske Roll the base of the firm. It is regionally famous in the South and sells from Arizona to Florida. Besides selling to local restaurants, the bakery has large accounts with convenience store chains, H.E.B., Appletree and distributors to smaller grocery stores.

Sony unveils new Notebook computer

TOKYO (AP) — Sony Corp. said Wednesday it soon will begin selling a computer the size of a note pad that will read words written with a pen on its screen.

"We consider this an epoch-making product, like the Walkman tape player," a Sony official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We think it's revolutionary and will create a new computer culture."

Sony officials said the 2.8-pound computer has the same screen resolution, or detail, as the McIntosh computer by Apple.

It does not have a keyboard but will come with built-in software that displays a row of easily recognizable symbols on the screen like a McIntosh, and has extensive graphic capabilities.

"This is a real computer, but unlike other computers, anyone can begin using it the minute they take it home," said another Sony official, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

Supermarket offers drive in window

PASADENA, Calif. — With the opening of a drive-in supermarket Wednesday, commuters battling the tangled freeways of Southern California became able to shop a bag of groceries without ever leaving their cars.

The first Vons Drive-Thru Express Store opened with Vons President Bill Davila's purchase of a slice of pizza, a diet soft drink, a chocolate donut and cereal, all from his splashy, 1958 Buick convertible.

At the new store, the El Monte-based chain offers a menu board so customers can order their groceries like they would a fast-food burger. Vons has targeted a three-minute delivery time.

"Time is such a precious commodity," said Vons spokeswoman Vickie Sanders. "We spend so much of it in our cars, on the freeways, rushing here and there that sometimes when you want to buy something it's almost too much to plan the drive, the parking, using the fast checkout."

Customers can order 10 non-food items such as laundry detergent and toothpaste plus unlimited food orders and medicine. Cash is preferred but checks will be accepted for high-priced pharmacy items, Ms. Sanders said.

New coke, old coke Now it's Coke II

ATLANTA (AP) — Follow this if you can: New Coke, which once took the place of old Coke, is now Coke II. If you're lost, not to worry — only the name has changed.

The Coca-Cola Co. says it will try changing the name of new Coke to Coke II in an attempt to bolster sales of the product that in 1985 replaced the world's best-selling soft drink and sparked a consumer revolt.

Randy Donaldson, spokesman for Coke, said the formula of new Coke will not be altered, and no changes are planned for Coca-Cola Classic, the name for the original formula.

"After five years, new Coke is no longer new, though it's still called new Coke," he said. "We just want to make it easier to distinguish between Coke II and Coke Classic."

If the change to Coke II is adopted will Coke Classic could be given back its old name, Coca-Cola. Don't count on it say Coke officials.

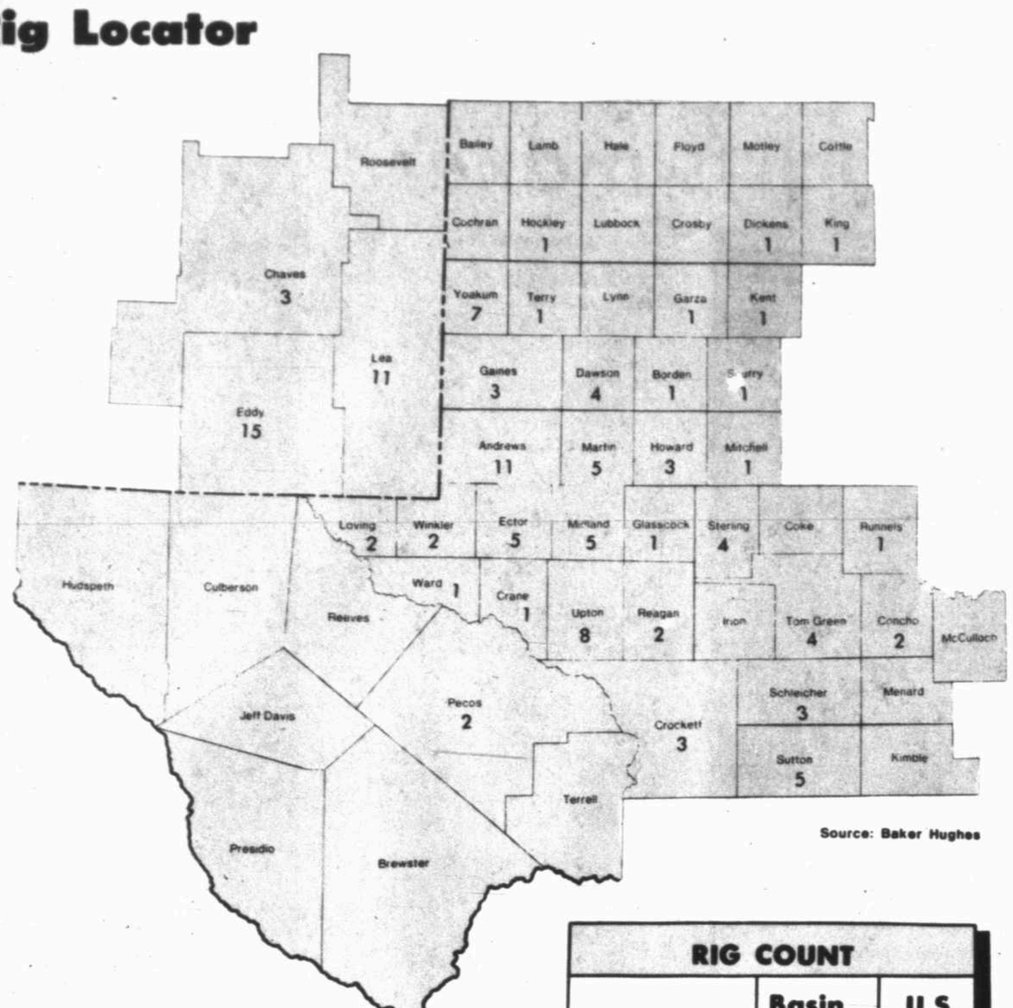

Unions may soon sing no-dues blues

BALTIMORE (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that transportation workers who join unions have the same right as non-members to refuse to pay dues that would be used to promote political or ideological causes they oppose.

The decision this week will make it easier for union members to demand rebates on their dues, said attorney Milton L. Chappell of the National Right to Work Legal Defense Fund.

Basin rig count climbs five

The company says that the U.S. tally fell three to 894, still well ahead of the 1989 total of 761 rigs.

At the same time, the Basin rig count rose five to 122 after remaining at 117 two weeks.

Eddy County, N.M. was the most active county in the Basin with 15 rigs, followed by Lea County, N.M. and Andrews County with 11 each.

Among major oil producing states, Oklahoma showed a 10-rig loss while Texas fell by eight. Kansas fell by four and Wyoming was down by one.

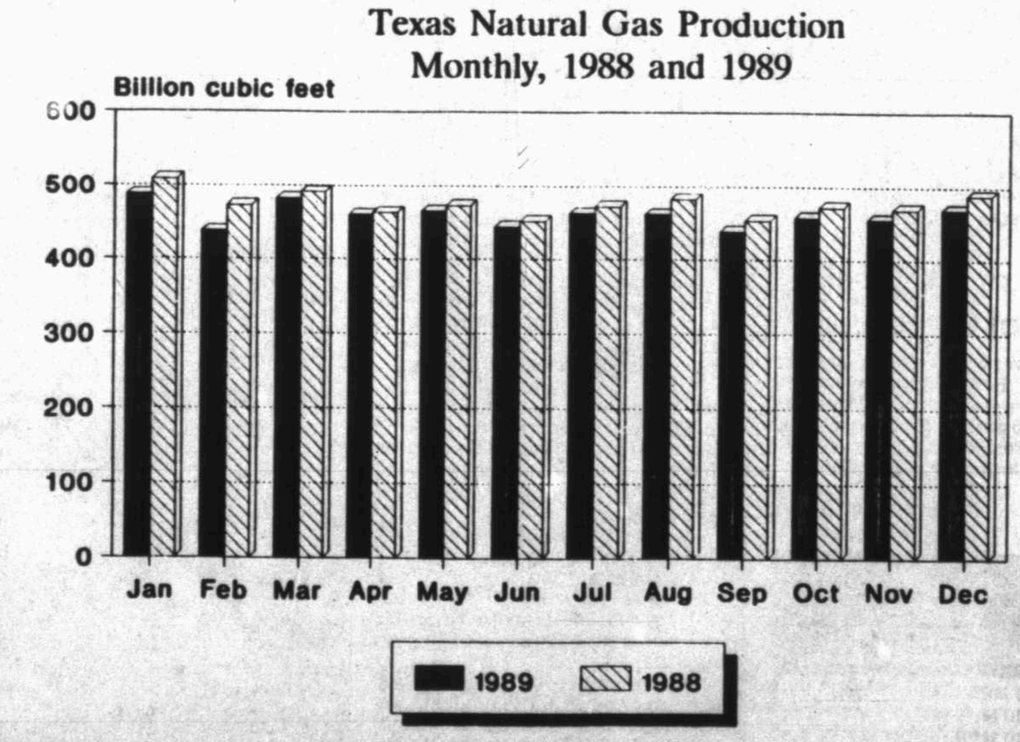

North Dakota posted a four-rig gain, while New Mexico and Pennsylvania both were up two and Colorado, Louisiana and Michigan were up one. California and Ohio were unchanged.

Crude production falls in 1989

Texas crude oil production averaged 1,675,160 barrels daily in December, according to preliminary figures released by the Texas Railroad Commission. December 1988's preliminary production was 1,837,819 barrels daily. December's figure compares with preliminary November production of 1,736,623 barrels daily. Final production reports for November indicated average production at 1,756,266 barrels daily. The preliminary Texas oil production figure for December is 51,929,949 barrels, down from 52,098,686 barrels in November. Texas crude production for 1989 totaled 650,513,557 barrels, down 6 percent from 1988's total of 698,869,689 barrels.

The Texas Railroad Commission reports that Texas oil and gas wells produced 468,180,306 Mcf in December, compared with November's production of 454,967,152 Mcf. However, December's production was down 5 percent when compared to December 1988's production of 495,043,702 Mcf. Texas gas production for 1989 totaled 5,595,189,980 Mcf, a 2 percent decrease from the 1988 total of 5,710,867,485 Mcf.

Smaller airports struggle with cost crunch

By SOUGATA MUKHERJEE

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — After nearly 60 years of existence, Beaumont Municipal Airport is struggling to survive and if help doesn't come soon, escalating maintenance and operating costs will further deteriorate conditions that may keep private airplanes from using the airport.

With a meager budget of $80,000, City of Beaumont is barely making ends meet and city officials say they are no longer interested in the airport or the aviation business.

"Maintaining the municipal airport has generated almost nothing for the city during the past few years," said Kirby Richard, director of Fleet Management, the airport's governing body. "We're currently looking for some fixed based operators to whom we can lease the space. The city does not want to be in the airline business anymore."

Several city-owned airports have leased airport space to private companies to maintain and operate their airports. Companies in return, pay a fixed percentage of their profits to the city. More than 60 aircraft are currently based at the municipal airport, consuming 5,000 gallons of gasoline every month, which airplane users buy from the city.

"That's our only source of revenue and we're just breaking even," Richard said. "So the cash inflow is nonexistent." Fleet Management does rent the 25 hangers to private operators, but all the money goes into paying for debt incurred for the construction of the hangers in 1962, Richard said.

During fiscal year 1990, the city allocated $80,350 to the airport, out of which more than $50,000 went to Edward Clark Construction Co., the general contractors responsible for maintenance of the airport. The remaining amount is allocated for daily operational procedures such as utility payments and upgrading service equipment.

"That's a real tight budget, and it's getting tighter every year," Richard said.

Industry analysts say Beaumont is not the only city-owned airport that is gripped by continuing financial stress. Since Texas canceled a modest airport program three years ago, almost a third of the 262 city-owned airports have deteriorated in services, a recent aviation report stated. This prompted Texas Department of Aviation reinstate a dormant program this year when state Legislature apportioned $1 million towards development of general aviation airports in the state. The Legislature apportioned $3 million for 1991.

Clay Wilkins, executive director for TDA in Austin, said considering the number of airports in Texas that needs restoration, the grant money is somewhat like petty cash. "We asked for $14 million and legislature gave us $1 million," Wilkins said. "Competition among cities is likely to be intense."

Beaumont Municipal alone needs nearly $3 million in improvements in the next few years, according to the Texas Aeronautical Facilities Plan, the development plan which TDA follows to award grant money. But there's a catch for cities wanting a piece of the pie. Cities asking for a grant has to match 10 percent of the applied amount. For example if Beaumont wants $1 million in state grant, it has to come up with an additional $100,000 to be eligible for consideration.

"It's impossible for small cities to come up with that kind of money especially when revenues are down to a trickle," said Michael Boyd, president of Regional Airlines Management Systems in Denver. "Texas needs some form of tax allocation to generate additional funds."

Some state officials say there's a simple solution for the struggling airports — an aviation fuel tax. The tax would generate enough funding to maintain the smaller airports properly, expand them where needed and provide additional revenue for public education. Airlines using jet fuel and private planes already pay 14 cents per gallon of federal tax.

Jefferson County Airport Manager Bob Thomas, said imposing a state fuel tax would only work if the money is kicked back into the development of the smaller airports. Industry officials estimate a 7-cent-per-gallon tax would bring in $107 million, and a 4-cent tax would raise $61 million in additional funds.

"But if the funds are used as a reserve like the federal aviation trust fund, airplane owners will just end up paying extra taxes," Thomas said. The federal aviation trust fund, which is funded through ticket taxes paid by airline passengers and private aircraft operators, is used to finance airport and air traffic control system capital projects and part of the cost of the FAA's air traffic control and safety operations. The fund, however, has built up a nearly $7 billion balance because Congress and the Reagan and Bush administrations have limited the spending to help meet the nation's deficit reduction goals.

"Texas right now can probably do with the entire allocation of the federal grant because it has so many commercial and general aviation airports that are in serious financial stress," Boyd said. "If the state doesn't come up with some money, commercial airports will lose business and general aviation airports will become unsafe."

Growing the Green

The Chamber's Midland Business Council, formerly the Small Business Council, is sponsoring a cash-growing workshop.

The seminar "Alternative Financing for Businesses and Their Customers" will be held from 7-9 p.m., Tuesday, March 20 in Midland Center's Room 2.

Doyle Kelly, president of KBK Financial of Houston and Gene Kail, manager of the Midland office of Beneficial Finance will lead the seminar.

Cost is $5.00 for Chamber members and $7.00 for non-members.

Plastic under attack from environmentalists

N.Y. Times News Service

Plastic, the heavy-duty non-recyclable, non-destructable kind that has been a fixture on supermarket shelves for years, is under attack.

Those bottles of Tide, Cheer and Downey liquid are now being made from recycled milk jugs.

Pampers and Luvs disposable diapers come in compression-packed polybags that are 80 percent smaller than the old cardboard cartons. The diapers themselves are about 50 percent less bulky than before.

Welcome to the "greening" of your grocery store. As consumers become more concerned about environment-related issues, manufacturers in the $44 billion food packaging industry are changing the way they box, wrap and bottle the 18,000 or so items stocked in the average supermarket.

Some are using cardboard instead of plastic. Many are switching to recycled plastic. Others are making packages smaller to help reduce trash volume.

"Environmental concerns are going to have a tremendous impact on packaging," said Herbert Meyers, president of the Package Design Council International and Gerstman & Meyers package design firm in New York.

"Packagers will be pressured into giving a great deal of consideration to both changing their current packaging and packaging they plan to use for future products," he said.

Ralphs Grocery Co. of El Monte, Calif., is about to announce a storewide environmental labeling program that will inform shoppers if a package or its contents are considered by the manufacturer to be "environmentally friendly."

"Our role is not to say whether you should buy a product or not," said Al Marasca, Ralphs executive vice president of marketing. "Our role is to provide customers with enough information to make the decision themselves."

There are several question marks about the move to "greener" packages.

Analysts say that what consumers say they want and what they will buy may be two different things. In the past, consumers have placed a premium on convenience and low price and have shown a preference for bright, shiny packages.

Even products packed in recycled materials may not be marked with a recycling symbol because manufacturers fear consumers will think the package or product is "grungy," said Gary Petersen, who oversees Ecolo-Haul in Los Angeles, the recycling division of Waste Management Inc. of Illinois.

"I can't say that even half of our clients are concerned about environmental packaging," said Meyers.

Environmentalists warn that what consumers aren't willing to spend at the checkout stand, they may end up paying out later through higher taxes and municipal fees to get rid of their trash, 30 percent of which comes from container and packaging waste.

Then there is the cost factor. Environment-type packaging is more expensive, and retooling an assembly line can be a multimillion-dollar proposition. The question facing companies is whether the increased environmental furor is worth the extra cost.

The changes in packaging vary according to type of product.

Peanut butter, salad dressings and other food will continue to be packaged in traditional plastic for now. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration currently does not allow recycled plastic to come in contact with food, but officials have hinted that they may relax their stance in the future.

Some manufacturers are switching to lighter plastics that cut down on the amount of material in plastic bottles without reducing size. Bottles of Crisco Oil, for example, are made with 28 percent less plastic and yet hold the same amount of oil.

Many of the environmentally sound packaging options available to shoppers are showing up in household cleaning products.

Procter & Gamble Co. is test marketing a small paper-based refill carton for its Downey fabric softener that uses 75 percent less packaging material and allows consumers to reuse the large 64-ounce plastic Downey bottle. Only the carton, which holds a triple-concentrate of the softener, has to be discarded.

By the end of the year, almost all plastic bottles will have a material code on the bottom to make it easier for consumers and recyclers to know the basic materials from which it is made.

As more environmentally safe boxes and bottles hit the shelves, other types of packages are struggling to hang on to shelf space.

Take juice boxes. The single-serving containers have proliferated since being introduced by European packaging companies in 1984, collecting a 43 percent share of the fruit drink market in 1988, according to the 1989/90 Beverage Industry/Annual Manual.

The packages are popular because they don't require refrigeration, can be stored safely without preservatives for long periods of time and take up less storage and shelf space than cans or bottles, said Roger Norton, vice president of Greenspot Packaging Co., a Claremont, Calif.-based juice box packager.

But the disposable drink containers are encountering consumer resistance because they are non-biodegradeable and can't be recycled.

Maine already has moved to ban single-serving juice boxes on grocery shelves by September.

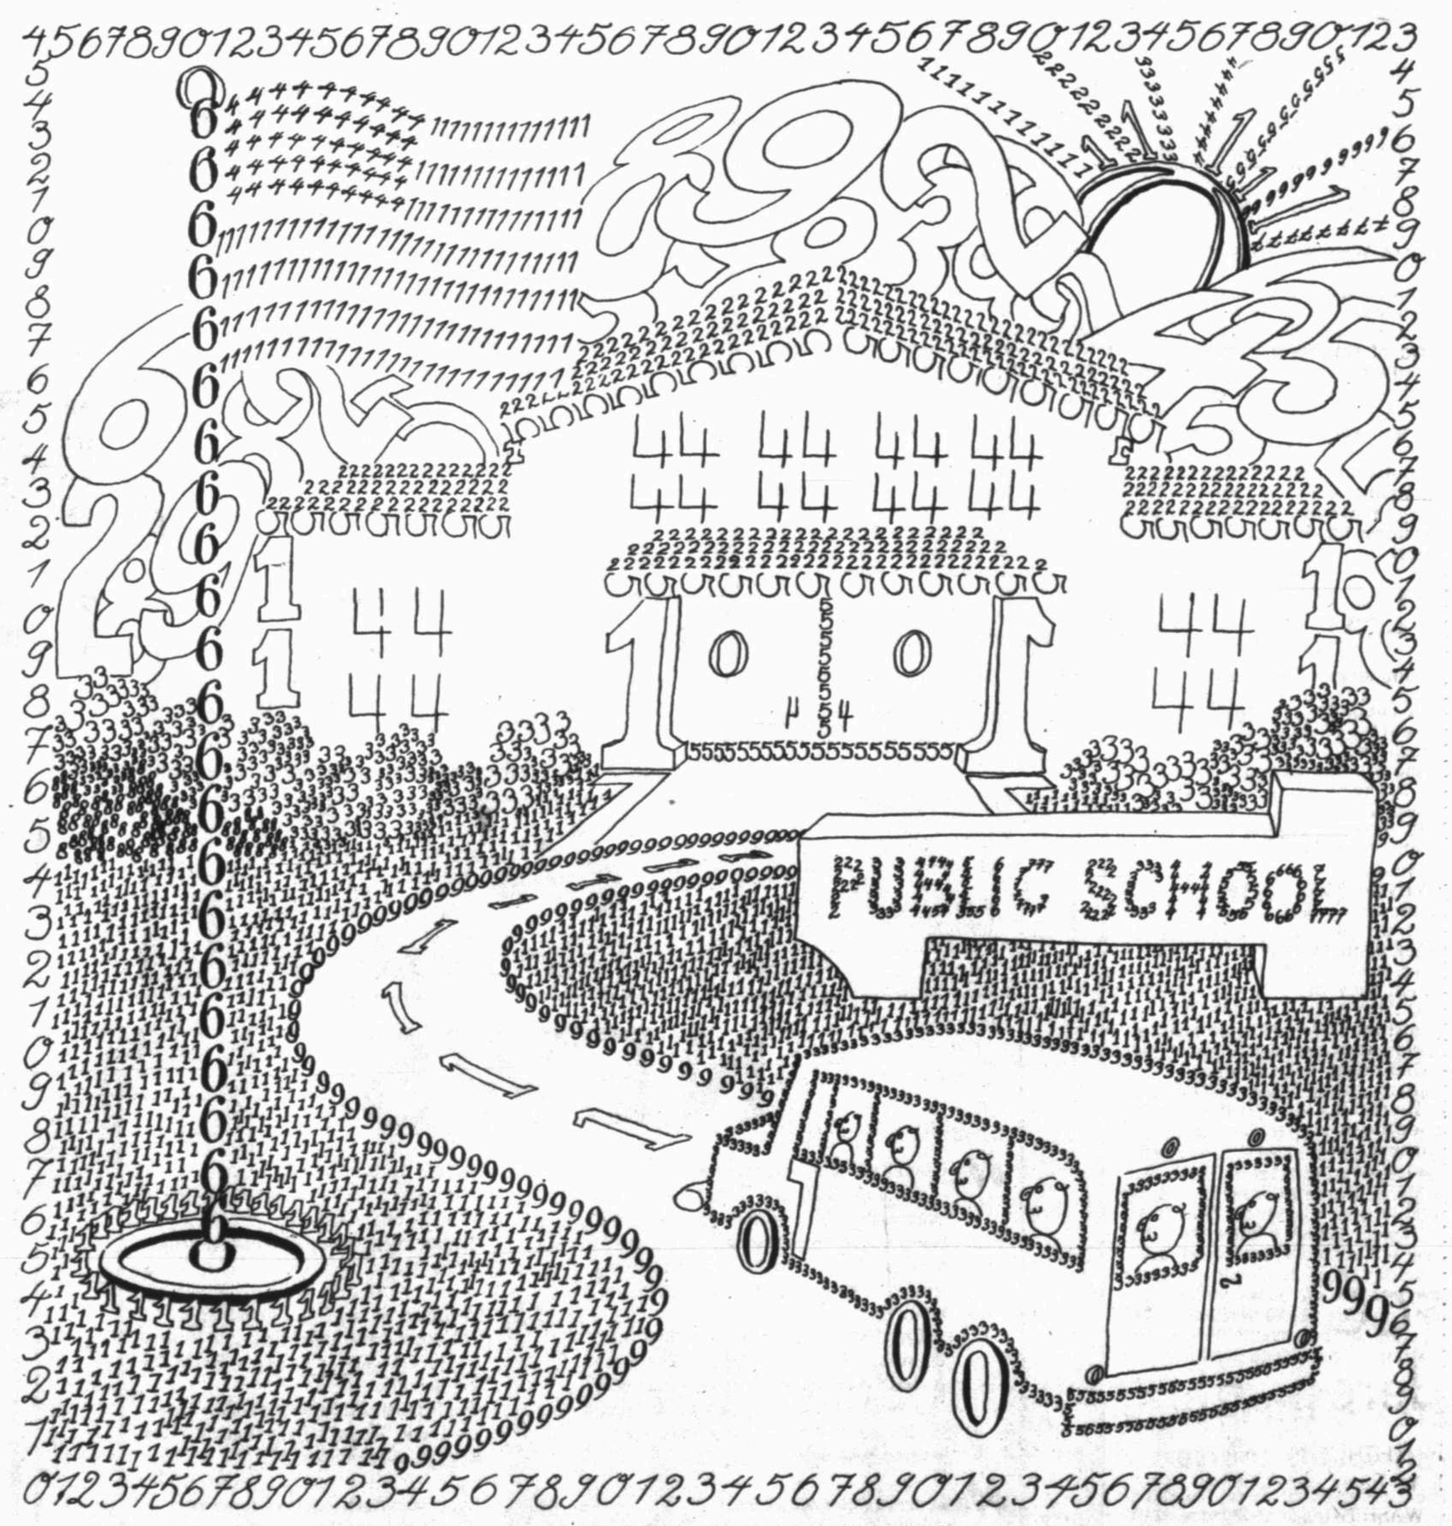

"For the last year we have been working feverishly to try to come up with ways to recycle it," said Ed Klein, vice president of environmental affairs at Tetra Pak in Washington, D.C., the U.S. subsidiary of a Swiss firm.

"Before that we never thought recycling was something that was needed because we account for such a small amount of material and we had a tiny impact on the waste stream," he said.

The quest for convenience started the modern packaging industry around World War II, said Bob Munoz, president of L.M.K. Manufacturing, based in the Los Angeles suburb of Sun Valley, and a 45-year-packaging industry veteran.

Massive S&L crime probe underway

Federal officials looking for fraud in failures

By JOHN A. BOLT

DALLAS (AP) — A report from U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins said "massive and unprecedented criminal investigations" are under way in North Texas as federal officials look for fraud in the collapse of banks and savings and loans.

"Many of those investigations will proceed for several more years before formal charges are filed and made a matter of public record," said Collins' report, which reviews the last five years of prosecutions in a 100-county area covering about a third of the state, including the Panhandle and much of West Texas.

The report includes summaries of many of the bank fraud cases, including the I-30 task force, which investigated the growth of condominium projects along Interstate 30 northeast of Dallas.

Investigators say the complicated I-30 scheme resulted in inflated land values and cost lending institutions about $500 million. Although 111 people were charged and 99 convicted, the biggest of the trials ended last year with a hung jury and mistrial.

The case pointed up the difficulties involved in prosecuting the cases, and Collins has conceded prosecutors now look more for "the shorter, more direct hit."

The report also covers activities of the Dallas Bank Fraud Task Force, a multi-agency effort to find uncover the fraud blamed for many of the record failures of Texas thrifts and banks.

Critics claim the task force has been ineffective, with few big-time violators convicted, but Collins said the report is not an attempt to justify the task force's record.

Collins

"The five-year look-back is logical because we're at a breaking point," he said in an interview. Legislation passed last year "gave us a lot of new tools and many new resources to deal with the bank fraud problems."

"It was important to have some sort of historical perspective," Collins said. "That guides us not only in seeing what we've done and accomplished but shows us what yet has to be done."

"The real measure to success is measured not only in the prosecution of the large, well-organized schemes, but also in the prosecution of the small, relatively tightknit groups which collectively add up to large losses," the report said.

"A very significant case may be brought against a heretofore unknown individual because of the significance or scope of the fraud, and a relatively small case may sometimes be brought against a very significant defendant because there is no other provable criminal conduct, and may never be, and it is unfair to allow that individual to escape all prosecution," the report said.

"Finally, relatively minor cases are occasionally brought against minor individuals who are a vital link in the ability to take the next step in investigation of a larger scheme. Those cases, which many not on the surface appear significant, are often indispensable in reaching the individual who is next higher on the ladder of culpability."

Collins said agencies still are hiring lawyers, accountants and investigators to reach the beefed up levels approved last year by Congress, and most positions should be filled by midsummer.

But Collins cautioned not to expect results for the increased staff until the spring of next year. "I don't think the new resources will truly begin to produce more actual cases in court until that time," he said.

"It is anticipated that the augmented effort under way ... will continue for at least the next three years, and possibly several years longer," the report said.

Although two grand juries are working full time on bank fraud cases, there are no prosecutions under way. Collins said the lull is a result of attention paid to ongoing investigations that have yet to produce indictments.

One of those indictments is expected to be against Donald R. Dixon, the former owner of now-defunct Vernon Savings and Loan.

William R. Ravkind, Dixon's attorney, said he has received two target letters from prosecutors outlining investigations against Dixon and he continues to expect an indictment.

Ravkind, who represents other bank fraud defendants, also disputes crime existed in the industry at the level claimed by the government.

"This massive fraud they're talking about never happened," he said. "You had a lot of wild young guys and entrepreneurs running savings and loans."

"There really aren't any instances where people were taking anything," he said. "Even the toys belonged to the corporation."

In the case of Vernon, a frequently cited example of abuse, the thrift owned expensive trinkets including crystal chandeliers, antique castle doors, a silver saddle and all manner of pricey objects d'art.

The government has auctioned most of those items, plus others gained through seizure of thrifts, to recover some of the money used to bail out the institutions.

Collins' report traces the roots of the fraud to Texas' rapid expansion in the 1970s and early 1980s.

"This growth ... created a 'hot' real estate market which was rampant with real estate speculators, adventurists and unscrupulous promoters, as well as legitimate businessmen," the report said.

"To accommodate this expanded demand for capital, numerous federally insured banks and savings and loan institutions opened their doors for the first time, or were sold and opened under new, 'aggressive' management. In other cases, real estate 'promoters' took over existing financial institutions, either formally or through gaining control of existing principals in the institutions.

Hilton Hotels plans to stay independent

By RICHARD W. STEVENSON
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Seven months after soliciting bids for all or part of the company, Hilton Hotels Corp. rejected two acquisition proposals Wednesday and said it now intended to remain independent.

Hilton did not provide any details of the offers it rejected, and Hilton executives did not return phone calls requesting comment.

But investors apparently expected the news, as Hilton's stock price fell $5.375 a share before the announcement to close at $61 on the New York Stock Exchange.

A number of potential acquirers are reported to have considered or made offers at various times since the company put itself up for sale last summer.

Prospective suitors included JMB Realty Corp. of Chicago, Miller-Klutznick-Davis-Gray Co., the real estate development company headed by the investor Marvin Davis, a group led by Alfred Checci, who led the buyout of NWA Inc., and a number of Japanese and other foreign concerns.

In a statement, Barron Hilton, the company's chairman, attributed the disappointing bids to the difficulty faced by potential acquirers in raising financing and to the clouded outlook for real estate.

"We have been considering a sale of the company, among other alternatives, since last summer," Hilton said.

"At the time we began the exploration process, the world economy, the market for acquisition financing and the investment climate for real estate and hotels were each far stronger than they are today. The significant adverse developments in each of these areas were reflected in the acquisition proposals we received."

In a separate statement, the company pointed to a number of "adverse developments" affecting potential Japanese acquirers, including increased financing costs in Japan, negative reaction in the United States to Japanese acquisition of highly visible properties and a growing reluctance to pay the premium prices seen in previous hotel deals.

Investors, betting that the company would bring a premium price, bid the stock up as high as $115 a share last fall, and some analysts predicted that Hilton could be worth as much as $130 a share.

The stock price, however, declined steadily as it became apparent that there was less interest in Hilton than investors had assumed.

Hilton, which is based in Beverly Hills, Calif., owns and operates hotels and owns casino-hotels in Nevada.

The company's earnings last year slumped by 15 percent, to $110.1 million, or $2.27 a share, from $130.9 million, or $2.72 a share.

Hilton said the company would now focus on expansion plans, including the opening of hotels in London, Hong Kong, Monte Carlo and Cancun, Mexico, and the opening of a new casino-hotel in Laughlin, Nev.

processing accounts for about 30 percent of our business. We have seen an increase in business in the last four to five months because we have a little more stable price base," he says.

While super-mini computers are allowing service companies to reprocess data easier and quicker, Pardue points out that some major oil companies have sophisticated computer equipment and the qualified personnel to do reprocessing in house.

But for the company that does not have the high powered computers or trained personnel, contract processing may be the way to go.

GTS Corporation, a full service geophysical company has recently moved to Midland and is currently the only company to specialize in reprocessing single fold data. Patrick DeHart, a sales representative for GTS says that old data can be reprocessed for about 10 percent of the cost of acquiring new seismic information.

"The response has been positive and we've already secured some contracts. We chose Midland because the oil industry is beginning to stabilize and we wanted to get involved here when business is just picking up," DeHart says.

He points out that since the earth doesn't change, all of those old files can be useful alone, if reprocessed, or combined with newer data to form a tight grid of seismic information.

Edwin Generes, president and chief executive officer of GTS, says that oil and gas companies have identified and drilled countless oil wells using reprocessed data and have been very successful. "We recommend Geofile data be used to identify possible oil and gas structures in conjunction with new seismic data."

DeHart notes that reprocessed data could be a valuable alternative for any company, large or small, wanting to increase their chances of finding oil and maybe save some dollars in the process. "In the hard economic times the oil business has been in, what industry needs is top value for the dollar," he says.

PLANT

A computer system monitors the manufacturing process from start to finish, with monitors stationed at various points throughout the plant so workers can monitor their progress. The computer will flash signals to supervisors if there are any problems at any point in the process.

Another computer system tied directly to Ford updates TPI on the automaker's plans as to how many cars are to be built in a specific week or month, allowing TPI's managers to more effectively plan how much they need to manufacture.

Quality is at the top of TPI's list of priorities. "We try to ship zero defects out of this plant," says Ashley. "That means parts with no scratches and no nicks from packing."

He recalls that when Al first took over the plant, "We had a significant turnover rate, because the workers and managers couldn't adapt to our rigorous quality demands."

Now Ashley has assembled a workforce that understands their jobs are tied to their producing a quality product. The fact that management takes the time to listen to the workers and their suggestions and problems has also created a positive atmosphere at the plant.

Though TPI is no longer tied to the fortunes of the oilpatch, it is tied to the fortunes of the auto industry, something Ashley would like to alter.

Looking into his crystal ball, Ashley says he would like to see TPI expand the products it makes for Ford to include whole door panels.

He'd also like to see contracts with other automakers such as General Motors and/or Japanese automakers. Al has programs with Nissan, Isuzu and Diamondstar, the joint venture between Chrysler and Mitsubishi.

He would also like to do more work with Rubbermaid or similar companies, and other high-tech industries such as the semi-conductor industry.

Still, without such dreams of diversification fulfilled, Ashley says, with its core business with Ford, "our future looks bright."

FCC takes step toward deregulating long distance

By KEITH BRADSHER
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In another step toward deregulating the long-distance telephone market, the Federal Communications Commission Thursday proposed giving American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a freer hand in cutting or raising rates and offering additional services for large business customers.

The proposal is expected to be approved by the agency after a period of public comment, review and revision. It was made after the agency tentatively concluded that there was now significant competition in the $55 billion market for interstate telephone services.

Under the proposal, AT&T would have to give only one day's notice in order to change some prices and services for large businesses and would no longer have to supply cost information to the FCC. Current regulations require 14 or more days' notice and AT&T must also produce varying amounts of cost data.

AT&T has protested in the past that its competitors have used the longer notice periods to file complaints blocking or delaying many price cuts and service improvements it wants to offer in the $5-billion-to-$7-billion-a-year market for WATS lines and for private long-distance lines used by the biggest customers.

Current regulations on AT&T's residential and small-business services would be retained at least until 1992 under the proposal.

The FCC also proposed giving AT&T greater freedom to negotiate contracts with specific — usually very large — companies, while reducing the amount of information it must provide, information that can bve used by its competitors.

The agency also proposed an eventual relaxation of regulation of AT&T's international and toll-free 800 services. But the agency linked deregulation of the 800 market to companies' being able to change long-distance companies without having to change their existing and many times well-known 800 numbers — something that is not technologically feasible now.

The FCC does not expect local telephone companies to have the technology to allow such changes until 1992, said Alfred C. Sikes, the FCC's chairman.

Government may allow supercomputer exports

By JOHN MARKOFF
N.Y. Times News Service

Responding to intense industry criticism, the Commerce Department is reworking proposed federal rules that would ease export restrictions on high-performance computers to Western allies, agency officials said.

The new version, they said, would for the first time take account of foreign competition.

Industry executives have challenged the proposed changes, saying they do not go far enough in addressing the realities of the rapid increase in performance in the computer industry.

At the center of the controversy is the sharp advance in computing power created by inexpensive microprocessor chips.

Industry executives point out that even desktop systems based on these chips will soon match the performance of many of today's supercomputers.

The new rules as proposed in January would have replaced controls on supercomputer exports that now restrict the export of computers capable of speeds above 150 million floating-point operations per second, or Mflops.

(A floating-point operation is a single mathematical operation like addition or subtraction.)

The proposed changes would have created a three-tier structure of restrictions ranging from 100 to 300 Mflops.

The shift would have freed a number of makers of high-performance computers from stringent controls that the government now imposes on foreign buyers.

Such controls can include post-delivery inspections, control of software and in individual cases special government-to-government agreements.

The computer industry had countered the proposed regulations by offering an indexing plan that would take into account the rapid improvement in computer speed.

But Commerce officials now say they believe an entirely new set of guidelines that take into account the fastest available machines made by foreign competitors is needed to permit United States companies to keep up.

They said the proposed guidelines would be reworked in the next several weeks.

The officials also said that while attention had been focused on Japanese computer makers in the supercomputer and high-performance markets, Western European computer makers offered a more immediate threat to U.S. vendors.

"The real issue for these companies is Western Europe and there is a tremendous competitiveness there," said Dennis Kloske the under secretary of commerce for export administration.

"An industry can be amputated at the knees by an arbitrary ruling such as this from officials in Washington."

U.S. computer industry executives said they expect new competition from European computer makers.

"We're expecting high-performance machines from both West Germany and France," said Terry L. Rock, senior vice president of the Convex Computer Corp., a maker of mini-supercomputers based in Richardson, Tex.

"Both of them want to compete in the supercomputer arena."

All of them would have been affected by the proposed export-control rules.

Commerce officials said they have learned that a number of computers are available from both Western European and Warsaw Pact computer makers that exceed the proposed limits.

For example, Meiko Scientific Ltd. of Bristol, England, a maker of a parallel supercomputer using an advanced British microprocessor known as a Transputer, is already selling a computer capable of 300 Mflops.

U.S. supercomputer experts also testified at the hearings that they had seen a parallel supercomputer manufactured in Bulgaria that was capable of speeds of up to 100 Mflops.

One danger in enforcing strict performance standards on U.S. computer makers is that they will move offshore to produce their most powerful systems to escape export controls, Kloske said.

He said Intel officials had suggested that they would manufacture a high-performance microprocessor called the i860 in Singapore and Malaysia.

But Intel officials said they had no plans to manufacture the chip overseas.

JOBLESS BENEFITS

Staff Report

The U.S. Department of Labor has begun approving petitions from oil and gas-related companies applying for expanded employment benefits under the Trade Adjustment Assistance section of the 1974 Trade Act.

Certification allows all company workers laid off due to a lack of work to apply for enhanced unemployment assistance including: weekly trade adjustment allowances, job placement; employment counseling; vocational training; and financial assistance for retraining, job search and job relocation.

According to the Texas Employment Commission, petitions have been approved for workers separated from the following companies during the specified period:

- Atlas Wireline McCullough (formerly NL Industries); petition No. 20983A; since Oct. 1, 1985.
- Atlas Wireline McCullough (formerly NL Industries); petition No. 20981; since Oct. 1, 1985.

A cold, dry West Texas wind beats back students, as they climb into the school bus. It is still dark. They have to be 350 miles down the road before noon.

"It's almost child abuse; it's certainly teacher abuse," says Horace Griffin, drama and English teacher at Lee High School. He laughs.

"Texas Education Agency has set down these guidelines about how many days you can be absent from class for competitive purposes. This means that competitions that used to take two or three days had to be cut down to one class day in order to survive.

"The trips have become very hard on students and sponsors in West Texas," Griffin says. "In Houston, you can go across town to tournaments. Our nearest tournament is in Lubbock, 110 miles away. After that it's El Paso and Amarillo, then San Antonio."

"It's not a normal weekend; it's a non-stop weekend of competition," says Bob Fennell, drama coach and teacher at Midland High School. "It's not like there's one football game at 8 o'clock. The competition runs late on Friday night and all day Saturday, late into the night."

They win. They laugh. They celebrate. They lose. They cry.

Budget cuts may be end of musical

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

The absence of time and money play in the death of a high-school tradition — the musical.

Bob Fennell, Midland High School drama teacher and drama squad coach, and Horace Griffin, drama teacher, coach for one act play and director for Lee High School productions, agree that this institution may soon become a memory, at least for district 5A schools.

"The public idea of the all-school musical in the '50s, '60s and early '70s has almost become a thing of the past due to departmental restrictions and necessities imposed by the state," Fennell says.

"There was a time when the band would help with the music, the choir would help with the voices, the shop department and art departments would help build sets and paint flats and the home ec(onomics) department would help with costuming. But now, by state requirements, teachers find themselves with little time to do combined projects."

Fennell, who has produced numerous musicals during his nine years at MHS, has talked with other 5A high school drama directors across the state and they say it's a common problem.

"The idea of the old all-school musical is on the way out because now the director, by himself, must deal with not only the acting, the blocking, the lighting, the sound and the choreography, he also has to deal with building the sets, doing the voices, doing the costumes, doing the music both vocal and instrumental."

Musicals are expensive. According to Linda Bond, marketing and public relations officer for Midland Community Theatre, an average musical costs the theater, not counting salaries or building expenses, around $30,000.

Part of that expense lies in purchasing the royalties or rights to stage the production. Royalties are based on the number of seats in the theater and how many times those seats will be filled. The royalties alone can run up to $2,000, says Fennell.

"New helmets and new uniforms and test tubes and microscopes for the science department are generally replaced at school expense, but there is no budget for school musicals or other drama productions," Fennell says.

The funds to stage any kind of production at either high school are self-generated.

"Funds to perform the high school musical are self-generated by the drama department through ticket sales at the door or hosting the high school invitational tournament," says Fennell, who has not produced a musical since "Leader of the Pack" in 1988. Since coming to MHS in 1981, Fennell has produced "Pippin," "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" and "Grease."

Both Midland high schools annually host a Texas Forensic Association Invitation Qualifying Tournament, inviting schools from across the state to compete in interpretation and debate events. Almost every year, 35 to 50 high schools from across the state come to the tournaments. The registration and entry fees go to the sponsoring school's drama and debate departments.

LHS has another way it raises funds. Jack Fryar, LHS' principal, allows students to pay $1 to see productions staged by the school's drama department. All funds raised by the productions, which are during school hours (the Texas Education Agency allows so many absences a year) go to the drama department.

The last musical at LHS was produced in the spring of 1989. Griffin "actually did it" with the help of pianist Carol Ann Hall and his wife, Ruth Ann Griffin, who is a music teacher.

"It took our two fall shows this year to actually pay off all the debt we incurred with our musical last spring," says Griffin, whose next production is "Fiffer's People," May 11-12. "If we don't make money on a show, we have to make it up the next show. That limits our choices. That's one of the reasons I'm doing comedy now."

For the drama and debate team members at both Midland and Lee high schools, the dream makes staying in school attractive.

"We are teaching the basic communication skills," says Zane Harwell, forensics coach at Lee High School. "I don't care how bright you are in science, and I don't care how bright you are in mathematics, if you cannot communicate that knowledge and that understanding to other people then whatever advantage or knowledge you have is lost.

"In our programs, we also give students, who might not fit in anyplace else, a home. I have the No. 3 and No. 5 ranked students in the graduating class, but I also have learning disabled students in this program."

Harwell calls the drama and debate programs a "perfect place" for the student who transfers into the school system.

"It's a home environment. It's a family environment because we take care of each other. We eat lunch with each other. The room I have belongs to the students. They come in before school and do homework. They tutor each other in different subjects, and it creates a sense of unity, a sense of belonging."

Although both high schools provide a student the opportunity to participate in drama and debate, the programs have a different emphasis.

At Midland High School, debate and drama are separate departments. Bob Fennell, the drama coach, teaches four drama classes and travels with the drama squad, which includes oral interpretation and one act play, to competitions and festivals throughout the year. MHS has not staged a public production this school year.

During his nine years at MHS, Fennell's drama squad has amassed 666 trophies, of which 154 are for first place.

"That 6-6-6 doesn't look too good," Fennell says when he adds up the number. He laughs and adds, "We'd better hurry up and win a trophy or get rid of one." Of the 666, 106 have been won this school year.

In addition, in October 1989, the Midland High School National Forensic League Chapter was awarded the Leading Chapter Award in the West Texas District. Out of almost 2,300 forensic league member schools nationwide, MHS is one of only 79 to receive the award this year.

As of this school year, duties in the drama department at Lee High School have been shared by Horace Griffin, who teaches two English classes, three drama classes and stages productions during the school year; and Zane Harwell, in his eigth year at LHS, who teaches four debate and public speaking classes and one oral interpretation class and travels with the forensics team — debate and oral interpretation.

LHS has sent competitors to the National Forensic League's national tournament 12 out of the last 13 years; won the forensic league district meet Sweepstakes Award last year; won the national Sweepstakes Trophy in Student Congress two years ago; and has won either Team Debate or Lincoln-Douglas Debate at the University Interscholastic League (UIL) district tournament for the past four years.

LHS's drama department will finish the year with Jules Fiffer's "Fiffer's People," on stage at LHS auditorium May 11-12. To date, LHS's drama department has staged Neil Simon's "Star Spangled Girl" and Kaufman and Hart's "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

"It's very important to me that we have students performing on our stage," says Jack Fryar, LHS principal. "My dream is for people to come to a play at Lee High School and say, 'Wow, I can't believe that's high school students.' That's the kind of reaction I want to have to our plays."

Currently the department is working on a cutting from Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" for the UIL competition, hosted this time by Midland High School on Saturday, March 24. The event, which begins at 10 a.m., is open to the public. MHS will be presenting a cutting from Dale Wasserman's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

"I am very proud of Midland High's history of wins in one act plays," Fennell says. "We have always been a formidable one act play competitor."

MHS has won the district 4-5 A One Act Play title 11 out of the past 15 years.

"The only Permian Basin record that I know matches it, is the also formidable Permian High football team," Fennell says, noting that Permian High has won the district title 11 times in the past 15 years.

Fennell, Griffin and Harwell agree that current budget cuts due to Texas' economic climate have a greater adverse impact on West Texas schools than on those close to major metropolitan areas.

Harwell, whose team has been to nine tournaments this year, six of which were in El Paso, says, San Antonio competitors can "go to 16 tournaments and never leave the city limits and sleep in their beds every night."

In addition to geographic isolation, West Texas coaches and teams are facing unfamiliar judges at the state level. In the past, West Texas coaches were able to take their own judging pool to competitive events. Now they can't because of financial constraints.

West Texas encompasses from Austin to El Paso and includes Midland, Odessa, Amarillo, Abilene, Lubbock, Colorado City, San Angelo and Sonora.

The first weekend in March, both Midland high schools had teams competing at the Texas Forensic Association (TFA) State meet in San Antonio.

"We had 24 qualifications for the state meet," Fennell says of MHS. Of those, he "felt very strongly about a couple of entries."

LHS had qualified 21 students in 27 events for the TFA state meet, Harwell says.

"We were 11th in the state in terms of total qualification for that meet out of all high schools — 5 A, 4 A, 3 A, 2 A."

"It's a very political tournament because it's always in East Texas, and the students" from East Texas "are being judged by people who have judged them all year as opposed to rotating it from East Texas to West Texas. I feel this time it was particularly unbalanced in terms of judges," Harwell says.

Harwell and Fennell cite as an example that out of all the West Texas schools one El Paso school placed one individual in the finals.

"That's all that West Texas did," Harwell says. "Our speech programs out here are not that weak. It's simply that we did not have a chance in terms of balanced judging. And it's not so much a political problem as it is a philosophical problem. The styles of coaching are so totally different.

"In team and Lincoln-Douglas debate, we focus on (being) slower and more persuasive, whereas in East Texas, the total number of arguments they can get out is what counts."

Harwell compares their debate style to "the Federal Express commercial where the guy talks so fast you can't understand him."

"Almost everything in dramatic interpretation I took was a monologue, and many areas of the state still don't appreciate the dramatic monologue," Fennell says. "Most lay judges are impressed by development of two or three characters when they don't realize that to sustain one character for 10 minutes is far more difficult.

"After all, when you go to L.A. (Los Angeles) or New York for an audition, you're asked to perform a monologue, not a three character piece. In most plays or movies you're playing one character."

The various preliminary competitions are vital to the strength of the drama programs at both high schools.

"We don't start football season with a district game," Harwell says. "We have at least three pre-district games before we travel around the state. We even start the year before with off-season training. This is what this travel is for us. We have four major tournaments at the end of the year."

Harwell perhaps best sums up how he and Griffin and Fennell feel when he says, "When people are pointing at program to cut, it's easier to point at drama. It's even easier to point at competitive speech, and say 'what does that give back to the school' because we're not a big money maker like athletics.

"Our value and worth comes in what we do with the students and for the students and that's something that doesn't come out in terms of a pocketbook, in terms of a financial statement. Many of the administrators ask 'what do we get for $16,700?'

"You get students that aren't going to drop out of school. You get students that a majority of them are going to go on to college, and not only go on to college, but be successful in college. You get students that have been properly socialized and have learned to look out for others and not just themselves. And you're looking at a group of kids that are more responsible and more mature as a group."

MISD drama students learn to do with less

By GEORGIA TODD TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Midland High School drama coach Bob Fennell, who remembers when MHS was in the top five per capita schools in the state, says, "School year '88-89 was the first time due to financial cutbacks that MHS students ever, ever had to pay for their own food (on trips). This current school year, students actually had to help pay for hotel accommodations.

"As a coach, I am certainly thankful to be employed with a school system that does give funding because there are so many systems that don't."

Fennell cites Lubbock as an example of a public school system in West Texas which has a "zero budget." In addition, the Houston public school system doesn't fund, Fennell says, adding that the students there have 10 to 12 tournaments a year they can compete in without traveling.

Harwell's forensic team has competed in nine tournaments this year, six of which were in El Paso. By the time school is out, the team will have made one more trip to El Paso.

"Every time I get on a bus, it costs me $819 to go to and from El Paso," says Harwell. "That comes out of my budget. I have $16,700 this year, and I have spent $819 times six on buses."

Cost of the buses for all seven trips to El Paso will be $5,733.

The travel fund budget is administered by the respective school's principal. The principals "administer the policies and procedures as established by the central office and the school board," according to Jack Fryar, Lee principal.

Travel funds allocated to the high schools for the 1989-90 school year were based on $35 per student, says Jack Fryar, principal at LHS. The anticipated enrollment at LHS for 1989-90 was 1853, thus the travel fund budget was set at $64,855. The projected enrollment at MHS for 1989-90 was 1558, thus the travel fund budget was $54,530.

"The reason Lee has a few more dollars is because of the difference in enrollment," Fryar says. "Student travel includes all of the student travel programs with the exception of athletics, which is just everything else — cheerleaders to drill team to band to choir to drama. My problem as principal — that's not enough money."

Fryar's projected budget, based upon the travel needs of the previous year, was $91,000. His solution was to determine what percentage of $91,000 each department had requested and then give that department that percentage of the decreased budget.

For example, Fryar says, "The band turns in what their needs are. I take the $91,000 and say, 'If they got all they wanted it would be 39 percent of the budget.' Then I take the $65,000 and decide what 39 percent is."

Jimmie Kelly, principal at MHS, says, "We support all of our students groups and want to try to be equal as best we can in our allocations. If any group earns the right through competition to advance to post-district level, then we provide additional funding for those trips."

To date, Kelly says, he has allocated to the debate department for student travel $3,836 and for entry fees $1,213, for a total of $5,049. He has allocated to date for the drama department $4,919 for travel expenses and $735 for entry fees for a total of $5,654.

Total travel and entry fees spent to date this school year at MHS for drama and debate are $10,703.

The total allocated to drama and debate for travel and entry fees by Fryar at the first of the 1989-90 school year is $18,340.

Griffin's travel budget for one act plays for 1989-90 is $1,640, much lower than Harwell's because the competitive events, which require the most traveling, fall into Harwell's arena. Harwell's budget for 1989-90 is broken down into two parts. The travel budget is $13,553 and the dues and fees budget is $2,200. To date, Harwell has spent about $13,000 of his budget.

"That's the only trip we've taken all year," Griffin says. He used about $610 for the bus and $375 for rooms.

"The school paid for the entry fee, one night's lodging and the bus," Griffin says. "We were there two nights and three days." They were able to make the trip by "sack lunching" and "doing all kinds of things" including "asking kids to bring some money." Griffin found the festival, which was not a competition, a "very valuable experience." In addition to seeing 24 shows, each presenter received a private critique. Their own presentation of "The Crucible" received a standing ovation.

Because the Midland Independent School District school board "cut travel budget so much," Griffin's 1989-90 budget is between a third to a half less than 1988-89, he says.

Fennell remembers when his was more than $20,000 not so many years ago. As recent as 1984, he says, the combined drama and debate budget at MHS was over $25,000.

Fennell says, "$12,790 has been our yearly average expenditure" for the drama department "for student travel, fees and dues."

Official student enrollment in drama classes at both schools are inaccurate in assessing how many students are actively participating in the programs. For example, some required high school courses are half-year subjects. Thus, Fennell has students traveling on the drama squad who are not enrolled in drama at the current time.

Also, Griffin has an after school production class whose size varies according to what production is being staged. In addition, Griffin says, some students are enrolled who cannot accept credit because the grade would adversely affect their class ranking.

Griffin currently has 65 officially enrolled in drama classes. Harwell has 18 in the interpretation class and 37 in the debate class that compete. Fennell has 58 in drama.

"I feel like we're expected to win as much with less money," Fennell says. "And even though we've won more trophies this year than any previous school year, the frustrations are there that the new members on the squad are not getting the traveling, training, performing and competing they need. As the more experienced squad members graduate, will these students be equipped to take the place of those who've had the competitive experience?"

Fate leads Ron Silver to acting, 'Enemies, a Love Story'

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If fate had taken a different turn, Ron Silver would now be teaching school or working for the State Department instead of starring in a leading contender for Academy Awards.

In the much-acclaimed "Enemies, a Love Story," the New York actor plays Herman Broder, a concentration camp refugee who finds himself with three wives: Margaret Sophie Stein, the peasant who saved him from the Nazis; Lena Olin, his tempestuous lover; and Anjelica Huston, who had been presumed killed in the war.

Paul Mazursky based his film on the Isaac Bashevis Singer novel, and it's being treated gently by 20th Century Fox. The release pattern has been slow, the studio hoping that critical raves and favorable word-of-mouth will attract audiences to such a special kind of movie.

Whether "Enemies" wins Oscars and box-office returns, Silver believes the film is a victory for all concerned, proving a quality film with literary elements can get made in Hollywood.

Silver's roots are as deeply Jewish as Herman Broder's. His maternal grandparents came from Poland to New York's Lower East Side, where Silver grew up. Fascinated with foreign cultures, he gained a bachelor's degree in Chinese and Spanish at the State University of New York at Buffalo, and a master's at St. John's University in New York and at the Taiwan College of Culture.

"I dwindled into acting," he remarked.

First came high school teaching: "I thought I was a good teacher. I cared about what I was teaching. I wanted to reach the kids, and I wanted to make it entertaining. I wanted them to see what they were learning had application to their lives. I'm disappointed that when I left the school, they all didn't stand on their desks and say, 'O, Captain, my Captain' (as in 'Dead Poets Society')."

Violinist to play with quintet

Hank Dutt, violinist of the renowned Kronos Quartet of San Francisco, will perform the Brahms G Major Viola Quintet, Opus 111, with the Thouvenel String Quartet this month.

The Midland performanace will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium at Midland College. The Odessa concert will be held at 3 p.m. March 18 at the University of Texas of the Permian basin's Founder's Building.

Dutt received a bachelor and master of music degree from Indiana University where he was a student of David Dawson, Georges Janzer, Henryk Kowalski and Abraham Skernick. He joined the Kronos Quartet following graduate school.

As a member of the Kronos, Dutt performs more than 100 concerts annually, including concert series in San Francisco, Los Angeles and at Alice Tully Hall in New York City, as well as in Europe and Japan. Receiving numerous nominations and awards from the Grammy Association including an award in 1990, the Kronos' recordings of 20th Century works have been nationally acclaimed.

The Randall Thompson String Quartet No. 1 in d minor, which the Thouvenel is to record in April, will complete the program.

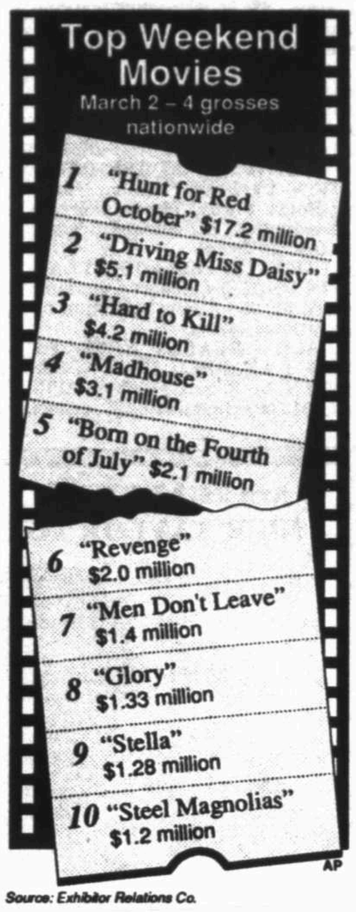

Tickets, priced at $7.50 general admission and $5 students and senior citizens, are available at Team Bank, Midland, or Bank One, Odessa, and at the door.

'Road to Mecca' canceled

ODESSA — Production of "The Road to Mecca," scheduled to be Odessa College theater's final show of the 1989-90 season, has been canceled.

The announcement was made by Paula Thompson, OC's theater director.

Ms. Thompson has announced her resignation as chairman of OC's speech and theater department and has been named chairman of the theater arts and speech communication department of Ashland University in Ashland, Ohio. She will oversee the theater arts, radio and television, speech, journalism and forensics programs for the university.

Source: Exhibitor Relations Co.

In announcing the show's cancellation, Ms. Thompson said her departmental responsibilities such as working on Southern Association Accreditation requirements and budget planning did not leave time for another spring production.

Ms. Thompson, who will leave OC at the end of May, has produced and directed 26 shows during her six years at OC and completed work for her doctorate in theater history and theory at Louisiana State University in 1988.

In looking back on her work at OC, Ms. Thompson said, " 'Man of La Mancha' was a favorite because the theater was able to bring in John Raitt to star in the show, and 'Terra Nova' was particularly enjoyable because of the quality of the show and the strong ensembles of actors who worked on it."

Ballet program planned

Ballet Midland is holding its spring performance March 23 a 24 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Co. a-do Ave.

The venue includes three world premieres. Those premieres are:

- "A Night in the Tropics," music of Louis Moreau Gottschalk and choreography by Patrick Garza, who will be visiting from Los Angeles;
- "Melodia Capoeira," music by Heitor Villa Lobhos with guest guitarist Kent Smith from Odessa, choreography by Jef Gurley, dance education director at Midland College and Midland Community Theatre; and
- "Celebration," music by Jon Lord with guest percussionist Keith Guinn and choreography by Keith J. MArtin, director of Ballet Midland.

Performance times are 8 p.m. March 23 and 2:30 and 8 p.m. March 24. For moreinformation or to reserve tickets call, 682-6011.

Festival artists sought

Los Manos is currently seeking artists for Septemberfest 1990.

Deadline for applications is April 15.

The festival will be held September 7, 8, and 9, and is open to individual artists and craftspersons representing their own original work.

Categories for the juried show include ceramics, fiber, leather, jewelry, oil, photography and pottery. Also included are sculpture, stained glass, watercolor and woodwork; however artists are not limited to these categories.

Artists interested in receiving an application or more information should write to: Los Manos Septemberfest, P.O. Box 50668, Midland 79710; or call the Artist Chairman at 694-5531.

Ex-Midlander at Carnegie

Maestro Hugh Wolff will conduct with the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra. The program includes Des Knabenwunderhorn, "A Cycle of 12 Songs from German Folk Poetry" by Mahler.

Miss Graham, a 1978 graduate of Lee High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Graham. Miss Graham, a mezzo-soprano, just finished a concert at Richmond, Va. She will be performing with the Santa Fe Opera this summer.

"In Focus: A Photographic Society" is exhibiting at the McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building, Midland College.

The opening reception is set for 2 to 4 p.m. March 25 at the McCormick gallery. The public is invited to attend.

The group's most recent show was at the Photographic Center in Dallas.

Puccini opera will air

Giacomo Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera house at 12:30 p.m., Central Time, Saturday over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera radio Network. It will be heard locally over radio station KWMJ, 103 F.M.

Mirella Freni is heard in the title role, Peter Dvorsky as the Chevalier Des Grieux, Brian Scheznayder as Lescaut and Italo Tajo as Geronte. Nello Santi will conduct.

Circa Woodwind Quintet to play at art institute

ODESSA — The Circa Woodwind Quintet performs at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin at 3 p.m. today.

The program will include works by Franz Joseph Haydn, Franz Danzi, Jacques Ibert and Anton Reicha.

The Circa Woodwind Quintet has been in residence at Midland College since 1980.

"Its members have profound interest in the broad spectrum of music education through concert performances," says a release from the Art Institute.

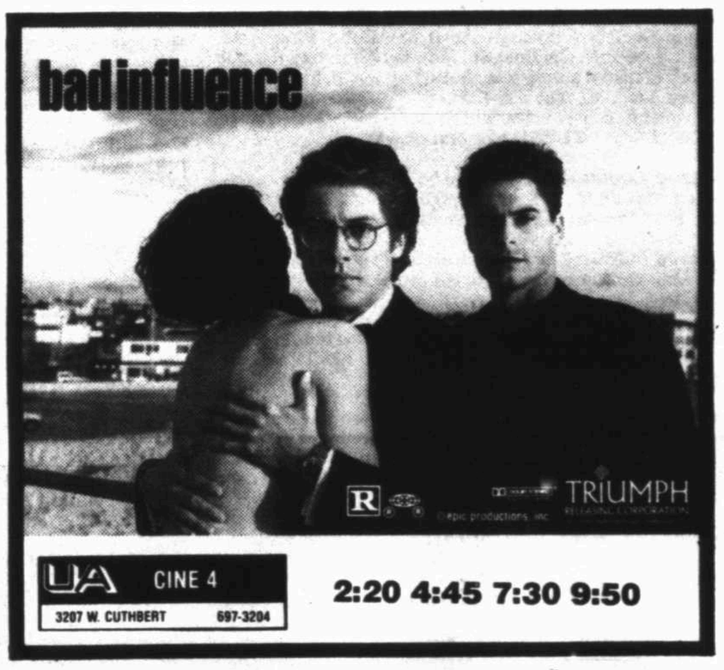

Members are Marjory K. Jennings, flute; Ann Fullinwider, oboe; Donald R. Grant, clarinet; Charles Hazlewood, bassoon; and Carol Deats, horn.

"Each instrumentalist brings to the quintet broad backgrounds of educational and professional experiences, which have resluted in their concerts being heard by varied audiences," the release says.

No admission is charged to the chamber concert.

MAA presents awards

Categories for the show included oil/acrylic, watercolor, photography, three-dimensional and graphics, including original prints, drawings and pastels.

Receiving Best of Show was Dolores Petersen of Odessa for her oil "Through the Valley..."

Winners in the oil/acrylic division were Francis Fitzgerald, Midland, first; Jim Flippo, Seagraves, second; J. Armstrong Johnson, Odessa, third; and Doris Spires and Charles Pruitt, both of Midland, honorable mentions.

Winners in the watercolor division were Cynthia Wolfe, Midland, first; Mary Rasmussen, Midland, second; Herb Cooper, Midlnad, third; and Paula faskin, Cooper and Marvin Stephenson, honorable mentions.

Winners in the graphics division were Candace Faber, Lubbock, first; and Midlander Patricia Netherland, honorable mention.

Winners in the photography division were Gretchen Van Cleace, Midland, first; Jack Stanley, Midland, second; Cia Hager, Midland, third; and Ms. Van Cleave and JoAnna King, honorable mentions.

Winners in the three dimensional division were Kathy P. Ward, Odessa, first; Dan Haller, Midland, second; and K. Rochelle Wimmaims, McCamey, third.

Juror Ann Templeton said, "There is evidence of a consistency in creativity, unusual handling of mundane subjects and strong personal statements. A fine show, comprised of moving, emotional and untrite work, with a touch of humor as well."

Petroleum Museum to host lectures from Smithsonian

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is hosting a lecture series presented by the Smithsonian Institution Saturday and March 18.

The series begins with "Computers and Aerospace," presented by Paul Ceruzzi of the National Air and Space Museum, at 2 p.m. Saturday. Ceruzzi looks at Link trainers, space shuttle simulators, digital monitering and computer-aided design in a lecture that sheds new light on computers' role in the space age.

Next up is a 7 p.m. lecture "A Closeup Look at Mars," by Jim Zimbelman of the National Air and Space Museum. In this lecture, the audience will discover what scientists now know about Mars as Zimbelman surveys its surface.

"Learn how scientists have observed and mapped the martian landscape, what kinds of surface professes have been observed and what new discoveries might be made on future Mars missions," says a release from the Smithsonian.

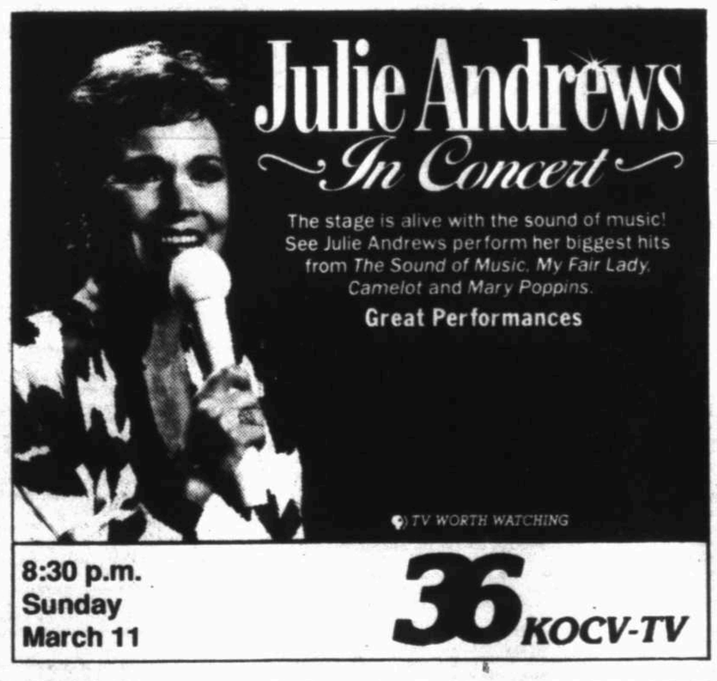

Then, at 1:30 p.m. March 18, Douglas Owsley of the National Museum of Natural History, will speak on "Face to Face with Our Ancestors: Historic Cemeteries Recall the Past." From Antietam battlefield to the lost Confederate cemetary of Port Hudson, La., Civil War burials tell an important story of America's past. Owsley will describe recent archaeological testing of historic cemeteries that reveals fascinating information about past health problems, nutrition and stress.

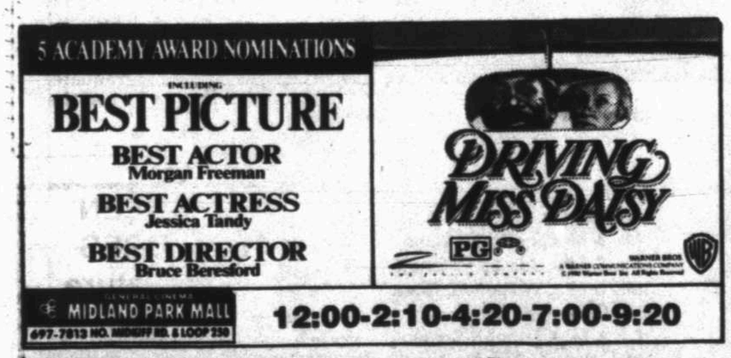

The series closes with a 4 to 5:30 p.m. lecture March 18 presented by Owsley called "Secrets of the Human Skeleton."

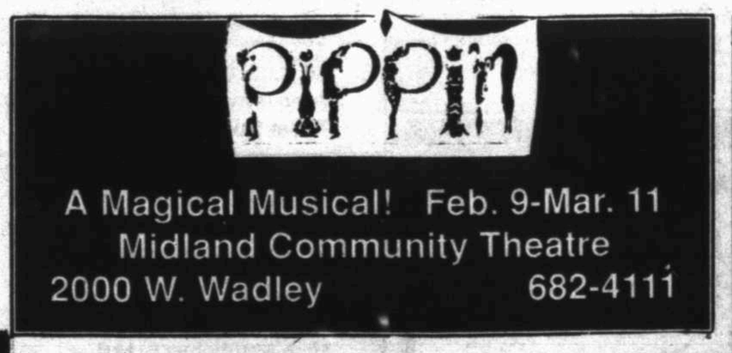

"Discover how skeletons can reveal exciting secrets during this special hands-on program designed for parents and children ages 8 to 14," the release says.

In this presentation, Owsley will show how bones reveal a person's age, sex, race and other clues that can be important in archaeological research and in tracking down modern criminals. Throughout the session, participants will have the chance to view skeletal materials from the Smithsonian's study collection. Space is limited for this presentation.

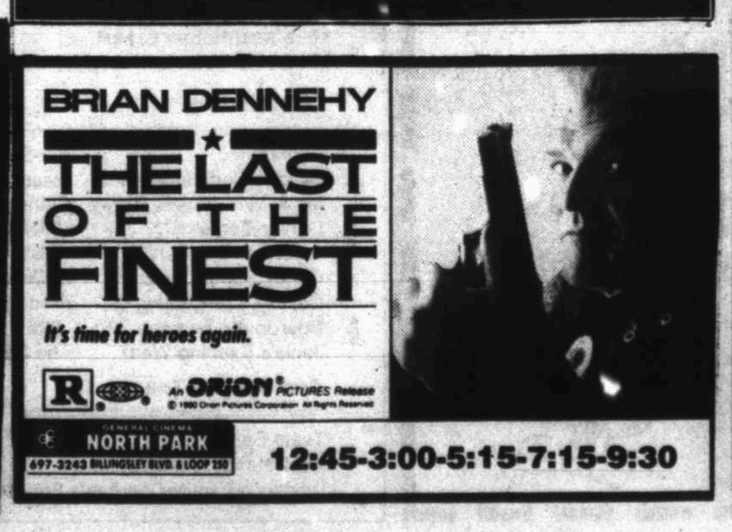

Admission for each lecture is $4. For more information or to make reservations call the Petroleum Museum, Interstate 20 West.

MARGARET WILLIAMS ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

For over 30 years I have been involved in education in Midland.

I believe that legal scholarship is important for the position of District Judge. Nick was on the Dean's List at college. Nick won prizes for being the first in his class in Constitutional Law and for Tax Law. Beyond college and law school he spent a year of post graduate legal training at S.M.U. in Oil and Gas Law and Taxation. He also has worked in all levels of trial courts in Texas and several appeals courts.

This is the kind of academic excellence and experience that Midland needs in a judge. I believe Nick is the best qualified candidate for the office of District Judge. He will be a great asset to Midland.

I am voting for Nick Taylor in the Republican Primary and hope that you will too.

SILVER

Silver quit to continue his travels abroad for his advanced degree. In 1968-69 he studied in Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, Taiwan, India and Hong Kong. He was caught in the middle of the China-Soviet border conflict, crossed the Soviet Union on the trans-Siberian railroad, and was arrested in Leningrad.

"When I got back, I decided not to complete my Ph.D. and not to go into the government, which I was supposed to do," he said. "I drifted for a while, took acting classes, was a social worker. I enjoyed the acting classes, and I received a lot of encouragement from my early teachers. I was involved in academia for the longest time, and this was kind of fun — to go home with a blonde and rehearse a scene.

"I got lucky right away, found an agent and started getting jobs. I don't know how tenacious I would have been if I had to stick it through. (Acting) was not a life-long passion with me."

Silver has led a busy career in films ("Garbo Talks," "Silkwood"), theater ("Hurlyburly," "Speed the Plow") and television ("The Billionaire Boys Club," "Wise Guy"). He admits he was not Mazursky's first choice for "Enemies, a Love Story."

"Nor was I the second choice," he said with a laugh. "It makes sense, artistically and businesswise to go with somebody who has a name. I don't know who was approached, but I can guess: Dustin Hoffman and Richard Dreyfuss. For one reason or another, it didn't work out."

He responded immediately to Mazursky's proposal, not only because he believed in the material.

"Also it was a challenge for me," he said, "because it was different from roles I had been doing, which were fairly exuberant, aggressive, articulate, expressive people. This guy was just the opposite."

Silver sees one element favoring the movie's Oscar chances: "It always seems to happen with pictures that take a long time to get made, where there is little compromising with the integrity of the picture. 'Rain Man' had a tough time being made (also 'Platoon' and 'Ghandi'). It was a real labor of love for the director, and a lot of studios turned it down."

THE FIRST PART OF THE BODY THAT MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY AFFECTS.

It's hard to smile when you lose the ability to walk. To play. To draw pictures. To climb a tree.

But that's what happens when a child has muscular dystrophy.

"Muscular dystrophy" is the name for a group of diseases that weaken and destroy the muscles. The disorders are progressive, so things get worse over time. The muscle loss can't be stopped. And it can't be reversed.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association is striving to cure muscular dystrophy. And on Christmas Eve of 1987, MDA researchers announced a landmark advance: discovery of the cause of the most terrible form of muscular dystrophy, Duchenne.

Now a giant step toward curing these dread diseases has been taken. And MDA researchers are forging ahead, racing to save the children stricken today.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Make good use of your organizational powers in the months ahead and you will find great success! Focus on practical matters in April.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A piece of a puzzle is still missing. Check your date book and you may find a clue. Someone close to you continues to cause difficulties. Your sense of humor helps save the day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take advantage of a golden opportunity to form a new partnership or expand your present operation. Valuable seed money is available. Someone massages your ego. Take any flattery with a grain of salt.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can accomplish almost anything you set out to do today. A partnership or other close relationship becomes more upbeat. Issues you have not had the courage to address can be discussed with ease.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fresh beginning can be positive and lucky. Go after the new contracts or clients you need. Long hours begin to pay off. A new relationship awakens strong romantic feelings. Slow down!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Seek the advice of a financial counselor if trying to unravel complicated monetary transactions. A loved one has a lot to discuss with you. Find a tactful way to lend your support.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Welcome a resurgence of energy. A feeling of well-being prevails. Focus your attention on a cherished goal — no obstacle can stop you now! Ulterior motives may be behind an offer of help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Show your willingness to expand your horizons. A financial offer could be better than it sounds. Postpone making a final decision until more figures are available. Resist unreasonable demands.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A romantic triumph has you walking on air. Those in authority will quickly bring you down to earth if you do not complete work assignments on time. Fulfill your obligations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put a job hunt on hold. A loan will help you deal with a temporary financial bind. Make a business compromise; seek experts' help. Do not get overly anxious — things will fall into place.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An assertive approach will help you open doors faster. Be strict with yourself. Staying on schedule will allow you to achieve the results you seek. A romantic situation remains uncertain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take stock of your assets and consult financial experts when planning for the future. Avoid making tricky arrangements. Devote more time to self-analysis. Seek peaceful surroundings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Curb a tendency to find fault. Keep your eyes open for fresh opportunities and ideas. A personal crusade could be highlighted this afternoon. A new relationship makes you rethink a romantic commitment.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

On today's hand declarer was the victim of an acute case of "flying fingers." He played to the first trick without pausing to plan his campaign and paid the appropriate penalty.

The auction was straightforward. Note that, with his dearth of aces and multitude of slow tricks, South had no interest in three no trump. He realized that, by the time he had developed enough tricks at no trump, the enemy would have established and cashed more than enough tricks to defeat the game.

West led the jack of clubs and declarer routinely covered with the queen—"West might have been leading from K J 10, partner!" he explained later. East's king fell to the ace, declarer drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy and led a diamond to his king. West took the ace, led a low club to East's nine and East's spade return netted the defenders two tricks in that suit. Tough luck.

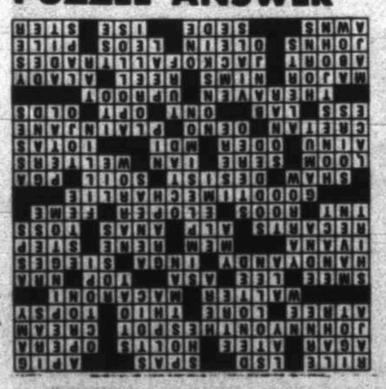

Not really. Had declarer paused to plan the play before committing himself to the first trick he might have survived. Given time, declarer can discard one of dummy's spades on a long diamond. To buy that time, East must be kept off lead.

Suppose South played low from the table at trick one and, when East follows low, allowed West to win the first trick. Declarer can win the club continuation, draw trumps and then force out the ace of diamonds.

When West has to win the diamond trick the contract is safe. There is no way for West to reach East to have a spade led through the king. Whether or not West takes the ace of spades, one trick in that suit is all the defenders can collect.

Paintings exhibited at OC gallery

ODESSA — Paintings by George Moseley, Larry Rose and Josephine Jones are on exhibit in Odessa College's Instructional Building Gallery through March 30.

Moseley, who is a graduate of OC and received his master's of fine arts degree from North Texas State University, said the significance of his work "lies in capturing the essence of man's concerns — space, the conquest of space and technology."

Rose, who received a bachelor's in painting and drawing from North texas state University, is exhibiting his "Parrot and Fish Series."

Ms. Jones said her work aims "to bring attention to those events which are often unpleasnat but are real to eveyr man." Ms. Jones has a master's of arts degree in art history, sculpting and painting from Texas Women's University.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Arts, crafts expo to close

The first annual Midland Arts and Crafts Expo closes today at Midland Center, corner of Main Street and Wall Avenue.

The event, sponsored by a group of artists and art patrons, features more than 100 exhibitors, including artists and craftspersons from throughout the state and the Southwest.

Hours for Expo are 1 to 6 p.m. No admission is charged.

Mel Prather, organizer of the Midland Expo, said he expected the newly created show to become an integral part of a list of permanent exhibits to be held in West Texas.

"There are a lot of talented artists and craftspeople in West Texas with only a limited number of outlets for their works," he says. "By providing more quality arts and crafts shows, we hope to provide additional opportunities for these gifted individuals."

The lack of shows in West Texas recently was addressed by Rita Simmons of Albuquerque, N.M., in the February 1990 issue of Sunshine Artists. she referred to the area as "a veritable wastland with few shows."

Items to be found in the Midland Arts and Crafts Expo include original paintins as well as limited edition prints; heirloom quilts with matching pillows and quilted wall hangings; pottery; painted china; ceramics' toys ranging from porcelain dolls and soft sculptured animals to wood replicas of race cars and planes; jewelry; and wood items.

Prather is the founder of the Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival.

Guild to sponsor handbell festival

McKechnie

A Festival Concert, open to the public, closes the event at 3 p.m. A highlight of the festival will be ther premiere of a new handbell composition by the Houston composer, D. Linda McKechnie. Mrs. McKechnie will be in Midland to conduct the new work. She also is conductor of the festival. The handbell composition was commissioned by the members of First United Methodist Church in honor of the church's new fellowship hall. It will be presented by the ringers along with members of the Lone Star brass Quintet.

Mrs. McKechnie was the first composer to incorporate brass choir, organ and tympani with handbells and has numerous publications including a method book for handbells. She has served Presbyterian churches in New York, Oklahoma and Texas as organist and director of adult and children singing and ringing choirs.

She has served the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers as the 14th president.

Those participating in the day long festival, which includes 150 ringers ringing more than 1,000 handbells, features handbell choirs from Midland, Odessa, Stanton, Big Spring, Denver City, Lamesa and Tahoka.

For more information call the church.

JOHN M. CASTRO ENDORSES
NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

I am area manager of a utility. I support Nick Taylor for several reasons.

Nick Taylor cares deeply about victims of crime. I have worked side-by-side with Nick with the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Another reason I support Nick is his extraordinary range of legal experience. For example, he is head of the tax, as well as other departments at his firm. He is recognized as a leading tax expert in West Texas. 25% of the pending civil cases in the Midland District Courts are tax cases. Also of great value to our community is his expertise in Business and Oil and Gas Law for 26 years. He has broad, well balanced experience.

Please join me in voting for Nick Taylor on March 13 in the Republican Primary
