Rowny carries arms proposal to Soviets

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States tries to break the deadlock in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks today by offering the Soviet Union a new proposal for reducing long-range nuclear arms.

Gen. Edward L. Rowny, the chief U.S. negotiator, said he would bring President Reagan's full proposal to the Soviet Mission, where he outlined its key elements during a 2½-hour private meeting with Soviet negotiator Viktor L. Karpov on Wednesday.

The meeting of the full Soviet-U.S. delegations today opens a fifth round of 15-month-old talks aimed at reducing strategic nuclear weapons. They parallel the separate Intermediate Range Nuclear Force talks on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe.

Although Rowny and Karpov met cordially Wednesday outside the ornate villa at the Soviet Mission after a two-month recess, the official Soviet news agency Tass branded Reagan's new proposals "vague, obscure and unclear."

Reagan called for a "build-down," or destruction of at least 5 percent of each side's strategic missiles a year, while offering to negotiate limits on long-range bombers and air-launched cruise missiles. The United States holds a 410 to 343 edge over the Soviet Union in bombers.

Reagan, who sought earlier to require substantial cutbacks in the

Reagan says U.S. could 'outproduce' Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the Soviets should negotiate an arms control agreement with the United States "before they find themselves out-produced and can't do anything about it."

"One way or the other, they can have peace with us," the president said. "And it's up to them."

The alternatives, the president said, are "the arms race — decide it that way — or decide it in a common sense stabilization and reduction" of the intercontinental and medium-range nuclear weapons that are the focus of current negotiations.

The president made his remarks Wednesday in an interview with the board of directors of The Associated Press.

He spoke one day after sending Edward Rowny, his chief arms negotiator, to Geneva, Switzerland, for a new round of talks with the Soviet Union on reducing long-range nuclear weapons.

Asked whether U.S. relations with the Soviet Union were at their lowest point since the Cold War of the 1950s and early 1960s, Reagan replied: "I don't think they are at all."

"I think they are more realistic than they've been in a great many years," he said, adding that the Soviets "have a greater understanding today of where we're coming from."

"They realize that they have to talk with us, they have to deal," he said. "I don't think they are there at the table for arms negotiations because of any great desire to reduce their weapons. They're there because they know that common sense dictates they'd better be there."

The president recalled an editorial cartoon featuring Leonid Brezhnev, the late Soviet president, saying to a Soviet general, "I liked the arms race better when we were the only ones in it."

"Now, I don't mean that we want to be in an arms race, but I think they know now that we are determined to provide for ourselves and the free world..." he said.

He said that the Soviets know that "if put to a real test, they could not keep pace with the Western world. So the best answer for them is to sit down with us and work out a fair and equitable arrangement before they find themselves out-produced and can't do anything about it."

In the political realm, the president was asked whether he should run for a second term, rather than whether he would run, and said, "I've never had it asked that way before." But he refused to discuss his plans, and stated "I'll make my judgment based on what the people think."

On the economy, Reagan said there's been no evidence that deficits "automatically must be followed by high interest rates."

Thus, he sided with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan in a running dispute with Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, over whether major federal budget deficits produce high interest rates that threaten the economic recovery. Feldstein says there is no connection between deficits and high interest rates.

heavy missiles that comprise two-thirds of the Soviet force, said his new plan to include the bombers "removed the dividing line" between the two U.S. proposals.

The "build-down" concept means old missiles would be destroyed faster than new ones are deployed. Senior U.S. officials say two intercontinental ballistic missiles might be scrapped for each new one, while submarine missiles would be updated on a three-for-two basis.

The Soviets have offered to limit each side to a total of 1,800 missiles and bombers and is calling for a freeze of U.S. Soviet nuclear forces. The United States has about 1,600 missiles, while the Soviet Union has 2,340.

TASS, echoing charges by Karpov that the United States was using the START talks to cover its build-up of forces, charged Reagan's proposal actually amounted to a modernization program.

Citing U.S. defense spending, Reagan's proposal to build 100 MX Missiles, the B-1 bomber and other arms, TASS concluded: "What is meant in fact is that the sides will get the right to deploy new, upgraded systems of mass annihilation as they phase out old, less effective ones."

The dispatch, implying that the Soviet Union wants peace while the United States seeks to build its strength, appeared part of the "peace initiative" aimed at swaying opinion to the Soviet side as the December deadline approaches for deploying new U.S. medium-range cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe.

In West Germany, one of the targets of the "peace initiative," millions of workers stopped work for five minutes Wednesday in a demonstration against nuclear missiles. The action was organized by the 8-million-member German Trade Union Federation, which is urging that an agreement be reached at U.S. Soviet arms talks.

Rowny and Karpov blamed each others' nations for the impasse.

"It's up to Mr. Rowny," said a smiling Karpov as he gripped Rowny's hand outside the Soviet villa and responded to reporters' questions "If he shows real flexibility, there will be results and progress."

Fair's 'Big Tex' has secret past

DALLAS (AP) — Big Tex, the 52-foot-tall fellow in the 75-gallon hat, has presided over the Texas State Fair since 1962, and most folks think that's all he's ever done.

Turns out the quintessential cowboy has secret past — he used to be Santa Claus.

Tex is a native Texan, though, originally constructed from $56 worth of oil-field pipe. He began his career in Kerens, about 100 miles southeast of Dallas, in 1949, the brainchild of Howell Brister who headed up the Kerens Chamber of Commerce.

"The reason I wanted to do this was to have something for the merchants in Kerens," Brister, 83, who moved to Dallas the same year Tex did, told the Dallas Morning News. "The merchants were complaining that the local people would buy their Christmas goods in Corsicana or Dallas instead of locally."

Brister said his brother-in-law, the town banker, was the only one who objected to the giant Santa Claus idea, so Brister plunged ahead.

"Everything was just ideal at the time," Brister said. "There was a GI welding school in Kerens that I put to work...and it didn't cost us anything."

A Baylor University art class constructed a papier-mache head for $225, and residents donated 7-foot length of unraveled rope for a beard. A garment factory donated the red Santa suit.

So far so good, until the first night of Santa's reign over Kerens, when a high wind kicked up.

"I went down there the next morning and that monkey was standing out there naked as a jaybird," Brister said. "His beard was flopped right over his face. Everybody said he had done that because he was ashamed of standing out there in the middle of the street without any clothes on."

Brister said when he saw his brother-in-law, he expected a tongue-lashing.

Instead, he said, his brother-in-law told him to "get that thing down — put another uniform on it and get it back up quicker than hell, if not quicker."

The redressed Santa became a favorite tourist attraction, towering over the Christmas in the one-story community.

"The old Cotton Belt passenger train passed next to Kerens twice a day," Brister said. "The conductor would announce that they were going to pass the biggest Santa Claus in the world, and he would stop the train so the passengers could see it."

Kerens merchants decided to put up the giant Santa again in 1950, but by then the novelty had worn off and donations were not as easy to come by, Brister said.

On Jan. 1, 1951, Brister said it occurred to him, "I wonder if the fair would buy this?"

It did, two days later, for $750. In the fall of 1951, Santa was reincarnated as clean-shaven Big Tex, dressed in size 70 boots, and size 276 jeans of 100 yards a denim donated by the H.D. Lee Co. of Shawnee Mission, Kan.

Will Nobel Prize tip Walesa's 'balance?'

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — It is ironic that Lech Walesa, the electrician who led the Solidarity trade union in a bold and defiant pursuit of freedom under a communist regime, should win the 1983 Nobel peace prize at a time he is balancing, as he told me recently, "on a greased tightrope above a prison yard."

When Walesa spoke those words three months ago, in his small apartment in Gdansk, his hour of great glory appeared to be over. The drive and the spirit I first perceived in him two years earlier had diminished under constant pressure from government antagonists.

He remained a symbol of the Polish fight for liberty and justice, but the old flame only flickered. Although — or possibly because — he had met privately with Pope John Paul II a few days earlier,

British author Golding wins literary prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — British writer William Golding, whose novels included "Lord of the Flies," won the 1983 Nobel Prize in literature today, the Swedish Nobel Committee announced.

Golding was cited "for his novels, which with the perspicuity of realistic narrative art and diversity and universality of myth, illuminate the human condition in the world today."

In "Lord of the Flies," his best-known work, he describes the nightmarish adventures of a group of English schoolboys stranded on an island and traces their degeneration from a state of innocence to one of blood lust and savagery.

His later works include "The Inheritors," "Pincher Martin," "Free-Fall," "The Spire," "The Pyramid," and "The Scorpion God."

Golding, born in Cornwall 72 years ago, had not figured in pre-award speculation here. The most recent literature prize that went to Britain was the one awarded writer Elias Canetti in 1981. There had been none before that since Winston Churchill won 30 years ago.

Graham Greene and Anthony Burgess had been considered the strongest British candidates for the 1983 prize.

Walesa would be shunted aside and the church be permitted a stronger role in Polish life.

Never did Walesa or I dream on that somber July afternoon that the world's most treasured prize would be bestowed upon him-raising him into the august company of Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, George C. Marshall, Martin Luther King, Anwar Sadat, Menachem Begin, Albert Schweitzer, Andrei Sakharov and other distinguished Nobel Peace laureates.

He did talk much about his personal outlook. But his wife, Danuta, and his spiritual adviser, Rev. Henryk Jankowski, explained to me that Walesa's mood could swing from one extreme to another. He would be euphoric and then suddenly depressed.

They said Walesa's moods were deeply affected by the government's daily barrage of personal invectives.

What is Walesa's future now? It is difficult to predict.

When I first met him in 1981 he said he wanted to meet President Reagan and talk to him man-to-man.

He said at the time, however, he felt it would be inappropriate for him to leave Poland in view of what he termed "critical" forthcoming labor negotiations with the Polish government.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 8 p.m. EDT Thursday, October 6 High Temperatures

Showers stretching from southern Arizona to Kansas, from northern Oregon to eastern Montana and across southern Florida are forecast by the National Weather Service.

Mild, cloudy weather predicted

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is once again predicting partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures through Friday.

There is a 20 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms tonight. Lows are expected to be in the mid 60s and winds from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph.

Highs on Friday should reach the low 90s, accompanied by southerly winds of 5 to 15 mph.

The record high temperature for Oct. 5 was 96 degrees, recorded in 1937. Wednesday's high was just six degrees lower. The overnight low of 68 was 27 degrees above the 41 mark set in 1932.

Wary Arizonans clean up towns

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN Associated Press Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. — The rumble of dynamite and dumptrucks echoed in storm-torn southern Arizona today, as crews cleared debris from a $300 million flood — the state's worst ever — and residents dug out mud-caked homes, wary of another wave of rain.

President Reagan declared five Arizona counties federal disaster areas Wednesday, making them eligible for federal rebuilding funds and low-interest loans. But Gov. Bruce Babbitt said all 15 of Arizona's counties should have been included.

Residents began their cleanup and assessed personal losses: missing pets, destroyed homes and in one case, a vanished 1964 Chevy.

At least 10 people died in weather-related accidents since the storm began and another five are missing and presumed dead. Thousands were left homeless, with property losses estimated at $300 million.

"This is by any measure the most destructive flood and natural disaster we've had in the modern history of this state," Babbitt said. "We're in very tough straits at the city, county and state level."

Meanwhile, the National Weather Service warned that tropical storm Priscilla could bring 2 more inches of rain to southern Arizona by Friday. It called the situation "potentially dangerous."

The emergency disaster declaration for Greenlee, Graham, Pima, Pinal and Santa Cruz counties is "a good start, and we're grateful," Babbitt said, adding that "it ought to cover all" counties and include private losses as well as governmental losses.

Other counties could be added to the list, said Bob Blair, a Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman in Washington.

Babbitt, state House Majority Leader Burton Barr and Minority Leader Art Hamilton toured flood sites around Marana and Tucson on Wednesday, and promised to draw on the state treasury if necessary.

The American Red Cross closed six of 16 emergency shelters that had accommodated up to 3,500 people, as floodwaters receded Wednesday. But Red Cross surveys showed about 3,800 houses, mobile homes, apartments and businesses had been destroyed or damaged.

In Clifton, where floods wiped out a third of the canyon town's 1,800 homes, crews worked around the clock to restore water and sewage services to the town's 4,200 residents.

While workers from a dozen agencies used cranes, dynamite, dumptrucks and hammers to clean up dried mud left by the rampaging San Francisco River, Manny Lopez crawled through mud he said was seven feet deep, probing with a steel rod.

He was searching for his customized 1964 Chevy, which he called the "pride of my life." He couldn't find it.

There was no new violence between striking and working copper workers at the Phelps Dodge Corp., where contract talks aimed at ending a three-month strike were resume today.

Natalie Carlton of Tucson volunteered to search the Pima Animal Control Center for people who lost pets in the flooding. The Humane Society of Tucson agreed to house animals for owners left homeless.

"If I see any animal remotely similar to the one they described, I'll get in touch with them," said Ms. Carlton.

Staffers from the Southern Arizona Mental Health Center planned visits to emergency shelters and urged people to contact the center with flood-related mental problems even if the symptoms are delayed.

"Basically, what we generally see in crises like this is a post-traumatic stress syndrome," said psychologist Stuart Gertner, director of the state-funded center.

Flood-battered Willcox thumbed its nose at the possibility of more rain and refused to cancel its annual "Rex Allen Days" parade Friday in honor of Hollywood's singing cowboy and Willcox native.

In the Mexican border town of Nogales, Sonora, Sgt. Luis Escalante of the Office of Highway said food shortages had eased since highways linking Nogales with the south and west were reopened after flooding.

Interstate 10, linking Tucson with Phoenix, remained closed by a wash-out, but officials opened a third alternate route on Wednesday.

Four of the seven airlines that connect the two cities reported passenger traffic had increased dramatically, in some cases tripling. The other three airlines reported "no significant impact."

The airlines — Eastern, Frontier, Republic, TWA, United, USAir and Western — operate 21 round-trip flights at a fare of $21 one way.

Watt: No-confidence vote near?

Senator from Washington again calls for Watt's resignation

By SOLVEIG TORVIK Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt is "boorishly insensitive" and ought to resign or be fired, Sen. Slade Gorton said yesterday on the floor of the Senate.

It was Gorton's second call for Watt's head. Gorton, R-Wash., said he first asked for Watt to step down when he made his "depressing" comments about female, Jewish, black and handicapped members of a commission studying the government's coal leasing policy.

"Thirteen days have come and gone, but the Secretary of Interior has not," said Gorton, a Republican.

Gorton said that Watt "is a failure on his own terms, a destructively divisive force in American society, an albatross around the neck of his own president and administrator and an individual boorishly insensitive to the most modest standards of personal discourse required by the American people of those in positions of substantial public trust."

whom he disagrees.

Gorton said he believes it is necessary to make a number of changes in the Interior Department "to reach an appropriate balance among pressures for development, for energy independence for more and better jobs in a growing economy and the urgent necessity to preserve and protect our national lands and heritage... Regrettably, I do not believe (these changes) will result from the policies of the present Secretary of Interior."

Gorton said that Watt's "consistently confrontational attitude" has prevented changes that could have been implemented had he been more "tolerant."

Gorton added that Watt "is a failure on his own terms, a destructively divisive force in American society, an albatross around the neck of his own president and administrator and an individual boorishly insensitive to the most modest standards of personal discourse required by the American people of those in positions of substantial public trust."

New rumors that Watt might be on the verge of quitting were fueled Wednesday by reports that he had lost more ground among Senate Republicans than had been previously believed by leaders of the GOP-run chamber.

Meanwhile, Reagan, in a question-and-answer session with The Associated Press board of directors, defended Watt anew, saying he "has done a fine job."

The president said Watt made "a stupid remark" two weeks ago when he referred to an advisory panel on coal leasing as "a black... a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

"I recognize that a mistake was made," the president told the AP directors. "He (Watt) recognizes that, too. What he was trying to say was not based on any malice, any prejudice of any kind... If there was any bigotry or malice in the man, preju-

Panel disallows jail variance

AUSTIN — The Texas Commission on Jail Standards has disallowed a proposed variance at the Midland County Jail involving the emergency operation of doors.

Robert Viterna, executive director of the commission, said the jail needs electro-magnetic locks that would permit "gang-release of the doors."

The jail currently has 19 doors which must be opened manually and an inspector said it took too long to open them.

Sheriff Dallas Smith said today he will seek another temporary variance based on the installation of emergency lights and an emergency smoke ejector.

"The equipment they (the commission) want would cost about $50,000," he added.

"We think we can operate safely until the new jail is built. If it isn't built, or if it's going to take 4 years to build, we would probably go ahead and install the equipment."

Smith is a member of the Jail Standards Commission.

Reasons unclear for decline in divorces

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim and Jane have been married more than a decade. They've got a lovely home, a swimming pool and a hot tub. He collects antiques.

They are unhappy married. But they have no interest in divorce.

The names are fictitious, but the case is real, and the experts say they illustrate one of several reasons why the divorce rate has fallen for the first time in two decades.

"I have no doubt in my mind that the divorce rate is down because of the economy," said Jean Aruckie, a marriage and family counselor in Arlington, Va. "They (Jim and Jane) don't want to go from a nice house to a $300 a month apartment. A husband who used to be able to afford the swinging, playboy lifestyle is now faced with cockroaches."

The government reported this week that for the first time in 20 years, the number of divorces in the United States fell last year.

What do the figures mean? That marriages are more stable? That couples can't afford to get divorced? Or is it simply that there are fewer married couples to get divorced? The experts say it was probably a little of each.

The new figures, compiled by the National Center for Health Statistics, show that 1.2 million couples ended their marriage in 1982, 3 percent fewer than in 1981.

It was the first drop in the number of divorces since 1962 — and it was nationwide. Of the 49 states that reported 1982 divorce statistics, 38 showed a drop in the divorce rate from the previous year.

"For so many states to drop is impressive to me," said Barbara Wilson, a demographer in the health center's marriage and divorce branch. "This is no fluke. The divorce rate really dropped."

Social scientists insist there is no easy answer to why the number of divorces dropped. Most say they are unsure whether it reflects a changing attitude about divorce or a statistical reflection of an aging population.

"One of the influences on the divorce rate is the size of the generation," said Richard Easterlin, a professor of economics at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. "When a generation is numerous as it was in recent years, it aggravates economic problems for young people. There's lots of competition in the labor market. We are starting to move into a period of decreasing generation size."

Other experts say the divorce rate declined because more young couples live together before making a decision about marriage and that their break-ups are not reflected in divorce statistics.

"A lot of divorces take place early on in marriages," said James McCarthy, a demographer at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health in Baltimore. "Now a lot of people are living together. It's a trial period. Maybe they get together, live together and break up in a year."

Some social scientists say the divorce rate has dropped because today's couples are older when they marry and more mature when they marry, that the Post World War II "baby boom" generation has passed the ages when divorce is most prevalent, that couples are less likely to divorce in a period of economic uncertainty.

"It's tempting to relate (the recent decline) to the recession of 1982," said James A. Weed, chief of the Census Bureau's marriage and the family branch. "During the Great Depression, divorces dropped noticeably. There may be a tendency to postpone separation or divorce because of job uncertainty and the difficulty of maintaining another residence."

Weed said one statistical reason why the number of divorces dropped is that a few years ago, there were fewer marriages. Government figures show that between 1974 and 1975, the number of marriages dropped 5 percent from 10.5 per 1,000 population to 10.0.

Walesa's honor ironic in face of official Polish stance

At another time, when he was tired and dejected because of his problems with the radicals in Solidarity, he said he hoped one day to leave the labor movement and become a sort of religious teacher. But he did not know what sort.

"I want to help people get their emotions into place," he said in an almost mystic fashion. "I have many ideas, many aims."

He added: "I will start on a small scale. I realize I cannot accomplish everything."

Today, Walesa stands as a man honored by the world and worshipped by millions of Poles—but one who is scorned and ridiculed by his government.

The moment Walesa was elected Solidarity leader, he became a symbol of opposition to the government's oppressive policies.

Since Solidarity was crushed in December, 1981, and he was released from internment, Walesa has been detained several times, harassed by police many more and has, to some degree, lived up to the government's early assessment of him as a "troublemaker" bent on ending communist rule in Poland.

The Nobel Committee's choice of Walesa for his "determination to solve the country's problems through negotiation and cooperation" was disclosed at the height of the Polish government's orchestrated campaign to discredit Walesa.

Poland's rulers have denounced Walesa for allegedly stashing $1 million of Solidarity funds in a personal account in a Vatican bank.

They have also rejected Walesa's pleas for an active role in talks that could lead to a national reconciliation by describing the former labor leader as a "nonentity," and a "has-been who has no place in Poland's political life."

But the anti-Walesa campaign appears to have failed to turn a majority of the freedom-hungry Polish people away from the doctory labor leader.

As late as last Sunday, some 40,000 Poles attending a soccer match shouted and sang his name in illegal words to the Polish national anthem once the word spread that Walesa was in the crowd.

Throughout Poland, the government each day has been dispatching teams of cleaners to wash off hundreds of "Lech lead us" legends which have been scrawled on walls, sidewalks, streets and bridges.

And though I found many Poles who, like me, were disappointed in Walesa for allowing Solidarity to be taken over by radicals, I found many others who retained blind faith in his leadership.

He complained to me about it in the interview in Gdansk, saying their aim was to wrest political power from the government and admitting that this was something, no government would permit without putting up a fight.

He said he had been asked to resign by his deputy, Andrzej Gwarda, and vowed in an interview he would stay on "as long as the possibility exists that adventurism and irresponsibility in Solidarity's rank and file might come to the fore."

Inmates cheer Autry stay of execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas Death Row inmates were delighted that one of their own was spared death, but said they are uncertain how their own cases will be affected by the legal arguments that produced a last minute execution stay for condemned murderer James David Autry.

"It's just like Russian roulette. The gun keeps spinning and spinning and if it clicks, it clicks," inmate Thomas Andy Barefoot, who came within 12 hours of execution in January, said Wednesday.

In Austin, Attorney General Jim Mattox predicted Autry's stay will keep Texas from executing its convicts for some time.

"I would say that unless the stay is overturned, there will not be an execution in Texas" this year, Mattox said.

AUTRY, A 29-year-old drifter from Amarillo who was convicted in the 1980 slaying of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk, was snatched from the brink of execution Tuesday night. He had already been strapped to a gurney and attendants had inserted into his arms the two intravenous needles that were to carry the heart-stopping chemicals into his body.

The execution was scheduled to begin at 12:01 a.m. CDT Wednesday, but U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White issued a stay half an hour before. Autry remained on the gurney for another half hour while the stay was confirmed and then was returned to a holding cell.

White's stay was based on an argument that punishment should be proportionally meted out to assure that condemned prisoners in one area of the state are getting the same sentences for the same crime as those in another area.

The state tried but failed to have the stay overturned. The high court refused to accept a verbal motion and Texas officials did not have enough time to submit written motions to each of the justices, Mattox said.

Autry was moved Wednesday morning from the Walls unit holding cell a few feet from the death chamber back to the Ellis Unit, 13 miles away.

HE DECLINED to talk to a dozen reporters on Wednesday, the only day media representatives are allowed interviews with death row inmates.

But other inmates said Death Row echoed with cheers and applause after Autry had been spared by the 11th-hour stay.

"We're all happy to see him back here," inmate Billy Hughes said. "We'd like to go slap him on the back and shake his hand and ask him to talk about it. But getting him to talk is hard because he's so shy to begin with."

So they left the condemned prisoner alone in the solitude of his cell after he was returned to Death Row on Wednesday morning.

On Tuesday night, the inmates waited in their darkened cells with radios blaring.

When the stay was announced, "there was clapping and cheering just like the Dallas Cowboys were scoring a touchdown," Barefoot said.

AUTRY SAID nothing as he was returned to his cell, but he was smiling, said Hughes, who is awaiting execution for the slaying of a state trooper.

Hughes said Autry walked to his cell carrying his belongings in two sacks.

"I was very proud of him," Hughes said. "He carried himself through this ordeal with a lot of dignity even though he was lying there with that monster needle in his arm. If he comes out of this with any sanity left, it will be a miracle."

Most of the 154 inmates living on Death Row had been confident Autry's execution would be blocked. But tension mounted as the execution drew nearer.

"Our nerves were going up and up and up and the mood was going down and down and down," Hughes said. "Some of us started getting a little irritated. My stomach felt like there was a bowling ball in it."

NEWS OF THE stay surprised some inmates.

"I kept hoping and hoping and praying for a miracle," Hughes said. "But I had come to the conclusion that he was as good as dead."

"When we heard the news, there was a delayed reaction. We had to hear it again."

Ronald Clark O'Bryan, a former Deer Park, Texas optician convicted of poisoning his 8-year-old son with cyanide-spiked Halloween candy almost nine years ago, spoke briefly to Autry on Wednesday morning.

"I walked by his cell and told him I was glad to see him back," O'Bryan said. "He smiled and said, 'Me, too.'"

Man to be charged in bankers' deaths

MARSHALL, Minn. (AP) — Steven Jenkins, described by friends as quiet, hard-working and well-behaved, faces arraignment today on murder charges in the shooting deaths of two bank officers.

Jenkins, 18, and his father, James L. Jenkins, have been accused of killing Rudolph Blythe, 42, and Deems Thulin, 37, president and vice president, respectively, of the Buffalo Ridge State Bank of Ruth-ton, Minn. The bankers were killed at a farm which had been owned by the elder Jenkins.

James Jenkins' body was found on a deserted farm near Paducah, Texas, Sunday night after his son turned himself in to law enforcement officers. The father's death has been ruled a suicide.

In a copyright story in today's editions, the Minneapolis Star and Tribune quoted an attorney who formerly represented James Jenkins as saying he underwent a dramatic personality change after he suffered head injuries in an automobile accident 23 years ago.

Jenkins, once "mild-mannered," became prone to "wild fits of temper," said Clint Grose, now an attorney in Minneapolis. Grose said he sent Jenkins to a doctor, who recommended that he consult a neuro-specialist, but he never visited the recommended physician.

Lincoln County Sheriff Abe Thompson and other law enforcement officers flew back to Minnesota from Texas with Steven Jenkins on Wednesday.

Fire destroys town's oldest school

SPRINGTOWN (AP) — Faulty wiring may have triggered a fire that destroyed the oldest building in the Springtown school system, school officials said.

The blaze, which erupted Wednesday morning, forced the evacuation of 430 elementary students and left behind an estimated $1 million in damages to the building, which housed second-grade classes, officials said.

A Springtown firefighter was treated at the scene for second-degree burns, authorities said.

Principal Mike Gilley said a student reported the fire about 11:20 a.m. Gilley and a teacher entered the school's gymnasium and attempted to fight the blaze with extinguishers.

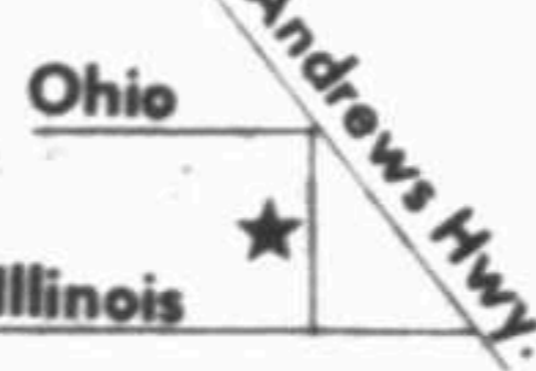

Firefighters from three counties fought the blaze, while students watched from bleachers at the athletic field.

The building, constructed in 1938 by the Works Progress Administration, served as the Joe E. Hart Middle School until four years ago when a new high school was built.

Springtown is located about 27 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

Sheriff J. Parker

Convicted sheriff's attorneys say prosecutors overzealous

HOUSTON (AP) — The attorney for a sheriff accused of arresting drivers at random and pocketing their bail money says prosecutors are harassing his client, who has already been convicted of three federal charges.

James C. "Humpy" Parker, 47, was released Wednesday on a personal recognizance bond after appearing before U.S. Magistrate Ray McQuary. He was convicted Sept. 14 of three charges alleging he gained confessions from inmates by using water torture.

Defense attorney Tom Taylor complained that the government is being overzealous in prosecuting the second case against Parker.

"I think it's uncalled for," Taylor said of the new indictment, handed down Monday and unsealed Tuesday. "The government has already tried him and gotten one conviction. I don't see that the government or citizens have anything to gain by a second trial."

Taylor said he had seen the indictment for the first time Wednesday morning and had devised no strategy for Parker's defense.

The new indictment charges Parker, 47, and his son, Gary, with conspiring to deprive citizens of civil rights and six counts of forging and falsifying arrest records and submitting them to FBI agents investigating allegations of wrongdoing by sheriff's deputies.

It also accuses bail bondsmen Herbert Atwood and James L. Browder and former deputy Robert Rice of the conspiracy charge. Those men face a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and $10,000 in fines if convicted.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Woodward said the Parkers each face 70 years in prison and fines of $16,000 if they are convicted of all the new counts.

"It was a money-making proposition," Woodward said. He said he did not know specifically how much the trap, which operated from at least 1978 until 1982, produced.

The indictment charges the men sought out cars matching a certain profile — those driven by "hippies" and blacks, for instance — stopped them without cause, then did illegal searches. The drivers were taken to jail and charged "bail" for their release, although they never appeared before a judge.

The grand jury said the defendants then divided the fees among themselves and confiscated drugs, guns and other property from the vehicles which they either kept or sold, and failed to report accurately to appropriate county authorities.

Parker had agreed to plead guilty to charges similar to those announced Tuesday, but on April 8, U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald threw out Parker's guilty plea, contending the sentence was too lenient.

Woman had trouble after taking vitamin B-6

DALLAS (AP) — A 33-year-old Dallas woman has complained that she experienced numbness in her hands and legs and had difficulty walking after she began taking vitamin B-6 in "mega-doses" to reduce water retention.

Diane Caldwell, the owner of a Dallas executive search firm, began taking vitamin B-6, she said, after she went to her family doctor in August of 1982, and he recommended she take it to help her with a water retention problem.

But he didn't specify an amount, she said Wednesday, adding, "I began taking them in mega-doses. I believed you had to use them that way — it's the in-thing for the 1980s."

When it failed to remedy her problem, she said, her doctor told her to increase the dosage.

"I didn't bother to ask him what he meant by high doses. I just started taking more," she said. She began taking between six and 12 grams of the vitamin each day.

The minimum daily requirement for the currently popular vitamin, known as pyridoxine, is about two to four milligrams. Ms. Caldwell was taking 3,000 to 4,000 times the amount needed.

By December, she had tingling in her feet. By April, she couldn't hold a fork or sign her name, she said.

"I couldn't get down the steps to my business. My feet felt like there were 50-pound weights tied to them," she said.

Doctors believe the huge doses of B-6 she consumed contributed to, and perhaps caused, her debilitating illness.

The New England Journal of Medicine recently published a study in which a group of New York doctors reported on seven patients who experienced nervous system problems after taking extremely high doses (two grams or more daily) of vitamin B-6.

The authors concluded that heavy consumption of vitamin B-6 is unsafe and recommended that its use be limited.

Ms. Caldwell said she believes excessive use of the vitamin ruined her health and cost her a second business she had opened recently.

Dr. Richard Tindall, one of the neurologists she saw, said it is not "neat and clean" that the high B-6 dosages was the sole cause of her problems. The seven patients mentioned in the New York study experienced only a loss of feeling, not motor loss, Tindall said. Further, Ms. Caldwell improved after she was given steroids.

The improvement was more dramatic when she stopped taking vitamin B-6, however, and she is now off all medication, he said.

"There is a good chance that vitamin B-6 had a causative role in her illness. We must assume that large doses of pyridoxine can injure both motor and sensory nerves," Tindall said.

Operators of health food stores say the sale of vitamin B-6 is close behind vitamins A and E in popularity. The vitamin is being touted as effective in treating everything from water retention to schizophrenia and is also billed as an aid to building muscles.

Jet inspected for fire's cause

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Authorities inspected an American Airlines jet in an effort to find out the cause of a fire in the brake area that forced the evacuation of 64 people aboard the aircraft, an airline spokesman said.

Two passengers suffered ankle injuries while sliding down evacuation chutes and American mechanic Juan Trepichio, 43, was hospitalized in stable condition with injuries he suffered from inhaling fumes from a fire extinguisher, said American spokesman Al Becker.

The Boeing 727, flight 342 from Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport to Omaha, returned to the tarmac where airport firefighters extinguished the flames, Becker said.

Former police chief sentenced

TYLER (AP) — A former East Texas police chief was sentenced to three years in a federal penitentiary Wednesday for distributing barbiturates.

Charles Ray Wisdom, 46, was police chief of the community of Lone Star, 40 miles north of Longview, until his arrest on June 9 in the Lone Star police station. He had been the town's police chief for seven months.

Department of Public Safety investigators took Wisdom into custody after he received a box of drugs from a DPS informant, according to an affidavit filed in federal court.

Convict escapes from courtroom

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities searched for a man who bolted from a courtroom and escaped while nearby sheriff's officers turned off two alarm signals from the courtroom, thinking they were false alarms.

Johnny Roland Glover, 20, had just been sentenced to 75 years in prison on a robbery conviction when he ran from a sixth-floor courtroom in the Dallas County Courthouse on Wednesday. He is still at large.

State District Judge Ron Chapman activated an alarm system, but deputies on the first floor were unable to raise the courtroom by intercom and thinking the alarms were false reset them, authorities said.

Justices to hear workers' case

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has decided to hear a San Antonio case involving city transit workers, and the high court's ruling could influence a similar case in Augusta.

In the Texas case, the justices will decide whether city governments must pay transit workers overtime wages under the Fair Labor Standards Act and whether such city-owned businesses are part of the "traditional" function of city governments.

The case parallels one involving the Augusta Transit Authority, whose workers have sought overtime pay under the federal act.

MLK holiday likely to start January 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a bitter filibuster against a Martin Luther King holiday ended, the measure is headed toward near-certain enactment, with backers predicting Senate approval later this month by a wide margin.

One supporter of the legislation, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., suggests it may take a lopsided vote to overcome what he said were bad feelings left by efforts of Sen.

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to block the bill. "Things have been said in this chamber that can only be expunged by an overwhelming vote," Moynihan said.

Senate passage of the bill to honor the slain civil rights leader's birthday with a national holiday in January is now set for Oct. 19. The House has already passed the bill and President Reagan has indicated he will sign it when it reaches his desk.

The final vote on the bill was assured on Wednesday when Helms, who angered colleagues of both parties by asserting that King espoused Marxist views, abandoned his delaying tactics.

Under an agreement reached the night before between Helms and Senate leaders, the Senate will return to the bill on Oct. 18 — when Helms will have a single chance to try to kill it — followed by a final vote at 4 p.m. the next day. That agreement was unanimously ratified by the full Senate on Wednesday.

The bill would set up a new national holiday — the 10th — to be observed on the third Monday of each January beginning in 1986. The other federal holidays are New Year's, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Teachers brace for long strike

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Teachers angered over the latest Oakland School District proposal entered the third day of a strike over pay and work rules today, prepared for a long walkout and ready to wage "full-scale war" for an acceptable agreement.

Elsewhere, one Illinois school district settled its 13-day walkout Wednesday, while teachers in Chicago, the nation's third-largest school system, held firm after three days on picket lines.

In Boston, mediation between union teachers and the School Committee broke off, as continued strikes in three Michigan districts idled 27,500 students. The bargaining team for the 3,500-member Oakland Education Association broke off negotiations with the state's fourth-largest school district Wednesday night, and association President Roger Gooden said he was unsure when they would return to the bargaining table.

Fewer than one-third of the district's 49,000 students attended class Wednesday. "The membership is out there, and they're prepared to stay out as long as it takes. If the school board wants full-scale war in the city, they're going to have it," said Gooden, who termed the latest offer "regressive and destructive."

Gooden said the teachers planned today to march on City Hall, where he was to meet with Mayor Lionel Wilson, School Board President David Tucker and School Superintendent David Bowick.

District spokeswoman Sharon Broussard said the latest proposal includes a pay increase of 8 percent the first year for all current teachers, with raises of 5 percent by Nov. 1 and 3 percent more by Feb. 1. Starting salary would go from $11,999 to $15,807 by Nov. 1 and $16,123 by Feb. 1. Salary would be negotiated again next year.

But Gooden said the teachers were "furious" over the latest proposal, which he said included takebacks on health benefits, class size and the length of the school year and day.

Ms. Broussard said the latest offer included a cap on health and welfare benefits as of July 1; less preparation time for elementary school teachers; an increase in the school year and school day; and flexible class size in secondary schools.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Teachers Union spurned an overture by school officials to re-open classes for 436,000 children while negotiations continue toward a contract agreement that would end a strike that began Monday by 27,000 union members.

"Parents are frustrated and parents are angry and very concerned that their children are not being educated," said Thomas N. Todd, acting president of the civil rights group Operation PUSH, and head of a community delegation that suggested teachers go back to work as negotiations continue.

Todd said the 11 community groups were considering filing a class action lawsuit to re-open schools if the strike is not ended this week.

Negotiators planned to meet today to try to narrow a gap of almost $78 million separating the teachers union and the Board of Education on the issue of salary.

The teachers officially are seeking a 10 percent raise, while the board is offering one-half of 1 percent. Teacher salaries range from $13,800 for a beginner with a bachelor's degree to $27,400 for a teacher with 15 years or more experience and a master's degree.

In Joliet, Ill., 475 teachers were headed back to school today for "in-service training" sessions after reaching a tentative contract settlement Wednesday night, ending a 13-day strike that gave 8,700 students and unscheduled recess.

The one-year settlement calls for a 7 percent salary increase and continuation of full board payment of family insurance premium, according to Mary Ann Stubler, president of the Joliet Elementary Teachers Union.

The Boston Teachers Union and the School Committee suspended mediation Wednesday, but union president Edward J. Doherty said, "We'll continue to look for alternatives other than striking."

States talking acid rain, economy

QUEBEC (AP) — Acid rain, one of the toughest issues dividing Canada and the United States, heads the agenda at a meeting today of officials from the eight states bordering the Great Lakes.

The Great Lakes Commission, which usually convenes in one of the eight member states, is meeting for two days in this historic capital of Canada's French-speaking province in recognition of the joint economic interests along the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes.

Frank Kudrna, chairman of the commission, was chosen to moderate the key panel with American and Canadian scientists and government officials working on plans to curtail airborne pollutants.

But Kudrna said the discussions would not necessarily lead to a resolution to act on the acid rain problem.

The controversy over acid rain concerns industrial pollutants, especially sulfur dioxide, that travel long distances before falling to earth.

Canadian officials say 75 percent of this country's acid rain problem is derived from pollutants floating across the border from the United States, killing fish and plant life in thousands of lakes and endangering the important forest industry.

Canada is calling for an agreement cutting sulfur emissions by 50 percent in each country. The Reagan administration has contended that too little is known to warrant an expensive clean-up program, although recently the Environmental Protection Agency has been working on a new acid rain proposal.

Member states of the Great Lakes Commission include New York, which is as concerned as Canada about acid rain damage, as well as Midwest states which could be hurt by an expensive acid rain control program.

Widower charged with murder

AURORA, Calif. (AP) — A 57-year-old widower has been charged with first-degree murder in the shooting of a doctor who had done exploratory brain surgery on the man's wife, police say.

Allen Payton Richardson was arrested Wednesday on a warrant issued in Fort Myers, Fla., where 37-year-old neurosurgeon Thomas R. Connelly died Tuesday of wounds sustained Sept. 30 when he was shot outside his office.

Florida police said Richardson's wife, who had a brain tumor, died a day after Connelly operated on her on April 6, 1982. Months later, police said, Connelly received a greeting card signed by Richardson and bearing the message, "Vengeance is mine, sayeth the Lord."

Ex-convict finds new occupation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Convicted murderer-rapist Archie Fain, paroled after years of public outcry that blocked his release, has obtained a roofing job but state officials are refusing to say where he will work and live.

The announcement Wednesday of Fain's new occupation drew mixed reaction in Bay Area communities. Fremont Police Chief Robert Wasserman, calling Fain's release "one of the fallacies in our system," said he would be "a little anxious" if he knew the paroled convict were living or working in his neighborhood.

Patient sues airline over joke

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — An elderly heart patient has sued an airline, claiming her angina was aggravated when a fellow passenger announced as a "practical joke" that their charter plane would have to make an emergency belly landing.

The $250,000 suit, filed Tuesday by 73-year-old Adeline Miller against Air California Inc., also alleges that the unidentified man tried to lead passengers in singing "Lord, It's Hard to Be Humble" during a Jan. 29 flight to Rochester from Las Vegas, Nev.

An airline spokesman declined comment on the suit, which also names the man and two flight attendants who allegedly let him use the public address system for about 15 minutes.

Guard testifies he delivered whiskey to Hank Williams Jr.

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — A security guard testified that he delivered a quart of whiskey to country singer Hank Williams Jr. 90 minutes before Williams was scheduled to go on stage two years ago at a Denison nightclub. Shortly after Williams' band began playing, Williams showed up stumbling and incoherent at the club's back door, Claude Barton Jr. of Whitewright told a jury Wednesday.

Ed Mears, owner of the now-closed Spurs Club in Denison, is suing Williams for $1.2 million for breach of contract for not completing a show before a packed house on June 3, 1981. Williams contended he was sick, but not intoxicated.

BALTIMORE (AP) — While former vice presidential candidate R. Sargent Shriver Jr. and his wife were inside Memorial Stadium watching a baseball playoff game, their 29-year-old son was outside scalping tickets, authorities said.

Robert Sargent Shriver III was accused Wednesday of offering a plainclothes police officer three $20 box seats to the sold out American League Championship series opener for $80, city police said.

It is illegal for individuals to resell tickets to stadium events at a profit. Convictions carry fines of $500 per ticket sold, but no jail term. Police said Shriver was one of at least seven charged Wednesday as scalpers.

The younger Shriver, of Santa Monica, Calif., is a former reporter for the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, the Annapolis (Md.) Evening Capital, and the Chicago Daily News.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope, in Oklahoma City for dedication of an eye-treatment center in his honor, said nice things have happened to him during his life "but today is at the top of the list."

The $1.5 million Bob Hope Eye Surgery Center at Presbyterian Hospital was dedicated Wednesday.

"Because I have had problems with my eyes and they have been corrected," said the 80-year-old Hope, "I can still see the brilliance of this country." And he added that Oklahoma is "the heart of this country."

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — It doesn't look as though anyone will get the $1,000 reward put up by Australia yacht syndicate head Alan Bond for the recovery of his wife's watch, police say, because apparently the $50,000, diamond-studded timepiece already has been found.

Songwriter takes history and weaves it into ballads

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Red River Dave," McEnery is a ballad-writin' man. Now nearing 60, he has composed more songs than a barrelful of Beethovens.

"I've written 12,000 songs up to date," McEnery said. "Suitcases of them reach to the ceiling. I've been writing them for half a century."

A weathered Texan who likens his appearance to Buffalo Bill, Red River Dave lives in North Hollywood and pens ballads about Tylenol, heart transplants and "The Pine Tarred Bat."

Two years ago, he spent his week-ends strumming guitar and banjo on the front porch of the Golden Trails Hotel at Knott's Berry Farm. Now he occasionally sings his Western tunes at the park, works for Gene Autry's KMPC-AM radio station and writes songs, inspired mostly by news events.

Last week, for instance, over Australian television's "Today Show," he sang his new ballad, "The Great Sailing Race: Australia II vs. Liberty."

That song begins:

"Gather round me, sailing men
"Hear my ballad once again
"About a sailing race I'll sing once more
"Tween the Aussies and the Yanks
"Right off the fishing banks
"Of America on the Great Atlantic Shore."

Red River Dave has a tune called

"The Pine Tarred Bat" (the ballad of Kansas City baseball star George Brett) and "The Ballad of Guion Bluford Jr." (America's first Black astronaut).

Everything is grist for his musical mill — the Korean Air Lines tragedy, late artificial heart recipient Barney Clark ("hero with a plastic heart"), victims of the Tylenol poisonings, Giovanni Vigliotto (who wed 105 women) and the perpetrators of the Hitler diary hoax.

"I was born in San Antonio within a rifle shot of the Alamo," he says. "I just sorta drifted into show business. I graduated from high school in San Antonio in 1931, and there weren't any jobs. I had a guitar and I could sing, so wherever anyone would listen, I would sing."

For loose change, he performed on the streets and in honky-tonks and cafes.

In 1937, he recorded his first successful news event song, "Amelia Earhart's Last Flight." Two years later, in New York, he sang western ballads at the World's Fair and appeared on television.

His own television program, "Red River Dave's Barn Dance" debuted in San Antonio a decade later.

He moved to Hollywood in 1970 after the death of his wife, Alberta, who was trapped inside their burning San Antonio home after it apparently was struck by lightning.

Can't make popped corn in new helmet

CARBONDALE, Pa. (AP) — A plant that started as a silk mill and still does weaving today is producing the helmet that will replace the Army's "steel pot" of World War II vintage.

Strange as it may seem, Gentex Corp.'s heritage as a weaving mill put it in good stead for producing a helmet capable of absorbing the impact of a shell fragment traveling at 2,000 feet per second.

Weaving strands of the ultra-tough Kevlar ballistic cloth is one of the first steps in creating a helmet that can withstand a .357-caliber Magnum slug.

The new headgear — known officially as the Personal Armor System Ground Troop helmet — has some limitations.

"You can't dig with it, you can't wash in it and you can't cook in it," said John Daugherty, chief engineer at Gentex, ticking off some of the ways G.I.'s have used the steel pot for four decades.

"But if this helmet gives you more protection so you can come back and use a regular pot or wash basin, that's a pretty small argument."

The northeastern Pennsylvania firm is one of four producers of the new Kevlar helmet. It received an Army contract to produce 126,000 by 1985 — over one-third of the total being made.

The helmet extends further down over the ears and neck than the old helmets, providing 12 percent more coverage. It weighs about three pounds, a little lighter than the steel pot, and provides twice the protection from flying fragments.

What provides the impact resistance is the 19 layers of resin-coated Kevlar, a fiber five times stronger than steel. The layers are heated and then pressed into shape. Then, as a fragment pierces the helmet's outer surface, each succeeding layer absorbs some of its energy.

Just a few steps from the stacks of helmets waiting for packaging, testers blast away at selected helmets with ¼-inch fragments and .357-caliber Magnum bullets.

One helmet on a dummy's head showed frayed strands of Kevlar bushing up through the surface where a fragment entered but did not pierce through to the head. Instead, a bulge formed on the inside, yet away from the head, thanks to a webbed suspension unit that also holds the helmet in place.

"It won't stop an M16, but it will stop a .357-caliber Magnum and a 9mm pistol," said Marketing Director Don Mauro.

World War II veteran Michael Fomous, Gentex's director of manufacturing, recalled popping popcorn and boiling water in his old steel pot. But he conceded that "I'd take the new one, knowing about its ballistic protection and its weight — it's four ounces lighter. It's center of gravity is better. The old one kind of flopped around on your head."

"But back then, the steel pot was the best protection being offered. It was just an accepted thing — you didn't complain about it."

Economic peace

Former President Gerald Ford cut to the heart of the nation's major problems in his address in Midland Tuesday night: The problem is economic, plain and simple.

The nation's leaders need and want to negotiate arms reductions with the Soviets, but they're stymied because the United States can't bargain from a position of strength currently. To gain that position of strength requires the outlay of millions of taxpayer dollars, but that type of expenditure boosts the federal deficit which, in turn, undercuts the attempt to regain economic strength.

President Ford is absolutely correct. It's foolish to go into a negotiating stance if you don't have the bargaining chips. You're opponent won't be impressed and you won't be able to gain concessions conducive to peace.

Getting those bargaining chips won't be a painless process, though. It will require economic sacrifice on the part of the American public at a time when most Americans probably believe that they can't give any more.

In a nutshell, the individual problems of the nation's economy and the ability to defend our own shores while carrying out an effective foreign policy are inseparable. That recognition only adds validity to claims that the economy is the United States' number one priority.

The economic course President Ronald Reagan has set the nation on is the correct one — rebuilding the country's military machine as much as the economy will allow and cutting the rate of growth in federal spending.

Paying for mistakes

To The Editor: The following comments are submitted in an effort to rally support for resolving a long standing situation in Midland that is deplorable and uncalled for.

The high rise buildings dotting the skyline has been instrumental in originating the "Tall City" concept and give the city administrators something to crow about. However, one aspect of the tall buildings not bragged about is the lack of foresight of these same city administrators to require ample parking space to correspond with the amount of office space being created.

As a result of this failure, or oversight, the city makes a substantial amount of money writing parking tickets to the average person working in these same structures. Only recently has the situation improved and that is primarily because of money shortages which has forced postponement of more large buildings and temporary usage of the area as parking facilities.

It is ironic that the same people getting tickets pay the salary of the people responsible for protecting their interest. Granted, we can use the excuse that it happened before I took office, but that is water under the bridge.

As a solution, I recommend the city use some of their (taxpayer) land and develop more low-cost parking area for the average working person who is already strapped with high costs of everything, including the payment for other people's mistakes.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ceasefire benefiting Assad

WASHINGTON — Any politician can be a hero after a triumph, but President Reagan is projecting himself as a hero of a catastrophe.

Jack Anderson

In the midst of disheartening reverses at the negotiating table, he has lofted by statement, interview and leak the impression that the ceasefire in Lebanon was an achievement. The truth is that Syrian President Hafez Assad got the best of us.

The ceasefire needs to be put in perspective. A year ago, Syrian planes and tanks in Lebanon were smashed by the Israeli invaders. But on the very eve of victory in Lebanon, the Israelis were pressured by Reagan to halt their advance.

It would have been easy for them to break the Palestine Liberation Organization in a dozen pieces, perhaps never to rise again, to drive the Syrians back across their own borders and to stabilize Lebanon.

Instead, the United States gave the PLO fighters safe "scout out of the danger zone, dispatched the U.S. Marines to stabilize Lebanon and called upon both the Syrians and the Israelis to withdraw.

Meanwhile, Assad began orchestrating a rebellion against the U.S.-protected Lebanese government. Having supplied the guns and directed the shooting, he has now agreed to a ceasefire.

As part of the backstage bargaining, he succeeded in forcing the resignation of Lebanese Prime Minister Cheif Wazzan, a Sunni Moslem friendly to the United States and hostile to Syria. More important, the wily Assad managed to stack the conference that will decide Lebanon's future with his own allies. He is now in a position to win at the negotiating table what he lost on the battlefield. And he wants nothing less than outright control of Lebanon.

How did an once obscure dictator, whose people are impoverished and whose army has been trounced repeatedly by the Israelis, turn the tables against the United States in Lebanon? U.S. intelligence sources described his Byzantine moves to my associate Lucette Lagnado:

Several months ago, Assad decided PLO leader Yassir Arafat was a threat to Syrian interests. Arafat supported President Reagan's Middle East peace plan, which would require Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon. So Assad arranged a PLO insurrection against Arafat and built up a Syrian puppet, Abu Moussa, as his rival.

Assad did not destroy Arafat but merely weakened his authority. For Assad had used for the PLO leader. To harass the green Lebanese army, Assad sent both Arafat's and Moussa's PLO troops to seize the Shouf Mountains — the strategic high ground dominating Beirut. Thus Arafat, having escaped one of history's more humiliating ambushes, was back in Lebanon opposing the U.S. Marines who had rescued him.

Assad cozied up to the Druse — once allied with Israel — and built them into a major power in Lebanon. Though the Druse forces number only 6,000 to 7,000, they have succeeded in tying down the bulk of the Lebanese army.

The Israelis, weary of the factional fighting that had cost them hundreds of casualties, decided to accept Reagan's invitation to withdraw from the strategic highlands. Assad shrewdly saw to it that the Israelis were allowed to leave in peace, not provoked into staying. That left the Americans to do the dying in their place.

While the Lebanese army and the Marines were busy with the Druse militia in the Shouf Mountains, Assad engineered an uprising of Shiite Moslems in Beirut. This further weakened the shaky Lebanese government.

Under pressure from Assad, the Lebanese government has agreed to keep its army out of the Shiite section of Beirut. He is making a similar demand for the strategic Shouf Mountains.

What is likely to happen next? The Syrians will try to replace Lebanon's enfeebled government with one more to their liking. Then Assad will probably force the new Lebanese government to revoke the troop withdrawal agreement worked out by the United States, Israel and Lebanon.

The next step could be to have the Lebanese government ask the Marines and other international peace-keeping forces to leave Lebanon at Assad's mercy.

With an election to worry about, President Reagan might welcome a face-saving excuse to pull out the Marines and avert a Vietnam-style conflict on foreign shores. But this would continue the erosion of our national spirit and of our posture in the Middle East.

WATCH ON WATT — Just about everyone in the White House, except Ronald Reagan, wanted to dump Interior Secretary James Watt after his latest gaffe. The president is tender-hearted toward subordinates. But Nancy Reagan is not a soft touch; she's eager to get rid of anyone who embarrasses her husband.

Watt had been in office only a few weeks before the clamor began for his resignation. By the end of his first year, more than a million people had signed a petition demanding his ouster.

Inside the Interior Department, Watt is known not-so-affectionately as "Clearcut" — an apparent attempt to link his high forehead to his forest-management policies.

School for drunks

Breathalyzers in the classroom? It had to happen, we guess, given society's romance with machines and youth's predilection for aping the sins of elders. It's a sad development nonetheless.

Pupils in grades 6-12 in Loudoun County, Virginia, who are suspected of having consumed alcohol are now being administered the same kind of breath test the police use to detect drunken drivers. Beginning this school year, the Breathalyzer is standard equipment in each middle and high school.

Explaining the testing order, Robert Butt, county school superintendent, said: "We've continually had to say somebody's come to school under the influence, and in all fairness to those accused, we will now have a way to be sure."

Pupils found to have alcohol in their system will be subject to disciplinary action. And, again copying many drunken driving laws, pupils refusing to take the test will be penalized.

Butt may be told to butt out by some civil liberties suit, but until then most parents are sympathetic with his determination not to run a school for drunks.

Another View:

Ma Bell's 'wake'

The uncharted waters of competitive phone service are becoming rougher as the final breakup of Ma Bell on Jan. 1 approaches. The main challenge for Congress and federal and state regulators will be to maintain universal telephone service, policy established by Congress in 1934.

If residential phone service in rural areas is priced to reflect the high costs of providing service to relatively few customers — if residential customers must pay most of the fixed costs of having a phone system, many poor people might no longer be able to afford phone service. Thus, Congress is right to focus on ways to subsidize phone service so that people who are poor or who live in rural areas will continue to have access to the service at a reasonable price.

Such subsidies, however, don't fully answer the difficult question of how to price phones in this newly competitive market. The pricing system itself will have a significant impact on this nation's ability to preserve universal phone service.

A big — and legitimate — fear is that if long-distance calls aren't priced low enough, more of the nation's major corporations may decide to set up their own communications networks. If that happened, residential consumers could end up paying a significantly larger share of the nation's fixed phone costs — and, in turn, more residential customers would have difficulty paying their phone bills, thus also jeopardizing universal service.

The current debate within Congress and between Congress and the Federal Communications Commission centers on allocating the fixed costs. Specifically, the issue is how to reimburse local phone companies for the use of equipment needed to make long-distance calls.

Under the FCC plan, as of Jan. 1, residential customers would be charged a $2 long-distance access surcharge, which would gradually increase to $6 a month. For business customers, the charge would be $6 a month, starting Jan. 1. As an alternative, some critics of the FCC plan propose folding the access charge into long-distance rates. From a fairness standpoint, that seems sensible. Then people who make the long-distance calls would pay the access charge in proportion to the actual calls they made. Under the FCC's plan, even residential customers who never dial outside their own area codes would be stuck with the $2-going-to-$6 access charge. That seems unfair.

However, fairness isn't the only important factor to consider. The danger of driving corporate customers out of the system should be considered when deciding how much of the fixed costs to load onto long-distance rates in the form of access charges. In our view, Congress is right to search for workable alternatives to the FCC's original proposal, but the task requires careful balancing.

GEORGE F. WILL

Mixed signals from France

WASHINGTON — There are mixed signals on the symbolism front: bad news from an old battlefield; heartening news from, of all places, France.

George F. Will

At Waterloo, where 168 years ago France overflowed and regretted and regretted it, souvenir vendors say that Wellington does not sell and that the ghastly Corsican (and I am loath to soil this newspaper with Napoleon's name) sells even to British tourists. But in France, the class struggle has taken a satisfying turn with the naming of another street after Adolphe Thiers.

Consider first the 1,000 acres of farmland in Belgium where the Duke of Wellington, with a little help from some Hessian troops, and perhaps even more help from Napoleon's hemorrhoids (they were distracting him) rid Europe of a pest and ushered in several generations of conservative rule.

It is not widely appreciated, because they have been generally in the news only when being invaded, but Belgians are a turbulent people. Now comes a senator from Wallonia, in southern Belgium, where the natives speak French rather than Flemish and some senators speak in French. The senator says the battlefield is becoming too British.

The senator is exercised because recently six plaques were erected to British regiments. He also complains about what he calls the "feudal arrangement" whereby Wellington's descendants (today, the current duke) receive about $40,000 annually in rent from farmers who are (say I) privileged to till the 2,000 acres Wellington was given near the battlefield.

I have never met a feudal arrangement I didn't like, so I find the complaint unintelligible. The senator says: "The personal privileges which the duke enjoys today are not worthy of our century." I say: Repeat the century.

The reason I have only three Wellington portraits in my home is that I have not yet found a fourth worthy of inclusion with the first three. There are only three absolute truths: The one correct flavor of ice cream is vanilla. Never wear a digital wristwatch. And there can not be too much reverence for Wellington.

He was a master of concision, as at Waterloo: "Hard pounding, this, gentlemen. Let's see who will pound longest." He had sensible views on self-expression: He disapproved of soldiers cheering because it was too nearly an expression of opinion. (He said he did not know if his soldiers frightened the enemy, but they terrified him.) He had a genius for political analysis: He summed up the first Parliament elected after the 1832 reform bill (which recklessly extended the franchise a bit) by saying he had never seen so many bad hats.

Even when wrong, his judgments were magnificently a priori: Speaking in 1827 about steam locomotives, he said, "I see no reason to suppose that these machines will ever force themselves into general use." Which brings me to France and the rehabilitation of one of my pinups, the great Thiers, who died in 1877.

When he was a government minister, he crossed the Channel to examine England's railroads and then declared: "I do not think railways are suited to France." In 1871 he was in charge of crushing the Paris Commune, which was an anticipation of the 1972 Democratic convention. Some critics say he used excessive force. I say boys will be boys.

No right!

To The Editor:

Who are you, Sharon Davison, to give us your humanitarian point of view on (excuse the tired phrase) "quality of life"? Who is anyone to judge the quality of another person's life? Quality is relative and your haggard, over-used, pseudo-humane phrase has no Biblical base whatsoever. We made it up as an excuse to ease our consciences and quiet the screaming of our millions of "humane" murders. People are not sins and mistakes to be swept under rugs as if they never existed.

And, oh please, spare me the "woman's right to an abortion" bit! A woman's "right" ceases when someone has to sacrifice their life to preserve that "right," no choice given. "One man's freedom ends where another man's nose begins," isn't it!

Don't whitewash it either. The Supreme Court decision was pro-abortion, no word-games please. "Constitutional protections guaranteed all citizens," you say? How about the beating heart that lies inside another? A tiny citizen, but a citizen nonetheless, Ms. Davison.

Cleaning up

To The Editor:

On this Saturday, Oct. 8th, all eight Midland Lions Clubs will participate in a joint effort of their members to "Clean Midland."

They have included their Scout troops and others. The reason for this letter is to request help from all citizens of Midland to help in this cleanup. The landfill will be open free of charge to the public on this date, but not to commercial carriers.

This is an overall cleaning of lots, alleys, streets, etc. Any organization or individuals who would be interested, please call Nancy Sharp at 682-5326 before Friday noon. She will give you the location of areas which are most needy. Don't just wish Midland could be cleaner or more beautiful; do something about it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1848, Austria declared war on Hungary.

Ten years ago: The United States appealed to Israel and Egypt to stop fighting. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger called on the foreign ministers of both countries to call off the new conflict, but his effort proved fruitless.

Five years ago: Medical researchers in Calcutta, India, announced the birth of the world's second test-tube baby.

One year ago: Philadelphia police said there was cyanide in the "Extra-Strength Tylenol" capsules found in the apartment of a student whose death six months earlier had been ruled a suicide. But they stressed that they had found no link between that death and the seven Chicago-area Tylenol deaths.

Today's birthday: Mary Louise Smith, former Republican National Committee chairwoman, is 86.

Thought for today: "To be good is noble, but to teach others how to be good is nobler, and less trouble." — Mark Twain, American humorist (1835-1910).

NED'S IS DELIGHTFULLY DIFFERENT

For those who are looking for an unique and exciting place to eat lunch or dinner, Ned's, in downtown Midland is the place you are looking for. Ned's has been serving the Midland public with delicious deli-type sandwiches for the past 7 months. But Ned's is definitely not a new sandwich shop just trying out their recipes. Ned's of Midland is patterned after the original Ned's in Albuquerque, which has been a favorite for over 20 years. The staff at the original Ned's in Albuquerque hand-trained the staff at Midland Ned's with their years of trial and error already behind. All recipes used at Ned's were developed over the past 20 years through customer suggestions, and the trial and error process. The result is a wonderful assortment of fine deli sandwiches, suited to the taste of West Texans. Ned's also offers a peaceful, relaxing atmosphere that really adds to the enjoyment of your meal.

Specials are abundant at Ned's. For example, Sports Specials. If you visit Ned's on Monday night, you can take advantage of the Monday Night Football Special. This consists of various drink specials, hot dogs, and delicious green chili stew. And as you enjoy your meal, enjoy the football game as it is being shown on tv at Ned's. This sports special also applies for college football on Saturdays. There are a variety of other Fall soup and sandwich specials. Stop by Ned's for more information on Fall specials. Fall happy hour is from 4-7, with free appetizers.

Lunch is served at Ned's from 11-3, Monday through Saturday. There are different drink specials at lunch, and daily sandwich specials as well. Ask for the special of the day when you visit Ned's. Ned's does serve specialty drinks as well.

Ned's location may be a little bothersome to get to, but it is well worth the small trouble. They are located in the basement of the Building of the Southwest, Texas and Big Spring Streets in Midland. This was once a magnificent stateroom which was a favorite Midland watering hole. Ned's gave this stateroom a facelift and a new lease on life. You owe it to yourself to try Ned's. You won't be sorry you did.

If you have never been to Ned's, you just don't know what you are missing. So come on down to Ned's this evening, or even for lunch tomorrow. Discover the pleasant atmosphere and the magical charm at Ned's. Dine on delicious specialty sandwiches which are even better than homemade. See what years of trial and error, and recipe development can mean to you. And look for a new Ned's to open later this year in Dellwood Mall. One trip is all it takes. Visit Ned's of Midland tonight and see what they have to offer.

A wounded Roberto Amador Alvarez, a former Nicaraguan National Guard pilot, is helped by Nicaraguan militiamen outside Los Cedros, Nicaragua after his airplane was shot down Tuesday by a Sandinista anti-aircraft missile. The town lies about 80 miles northeast of Managua.

Nicaragua says soldiers expect new attacks

By The Associated Press

Nicaragua's defense minister says his soldiers are braced for a new offensive by anti-Sandinista guerrillas, and the Honduran army is on a "state of alert" in case Nicaraguan troops cross the border in pursuit of the rebels.

"The escalation of aggression has reached a high point, and even our right to self-defense is interpreted as aggression," Defense Minister Humberto Ortega Saavedra said Wednesday. "The whole region is at a critical point."

Ortega said the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, a Costa Rican-based rebel group, launched raids against Nicaragua from El Salvador airfields. He accused unnamed "Salvadoran air force contacts" of helping coordinate the attacks.

The alliance is led by former Sandinista hero Eden Pastora, also known as Commander Zero, who has taken credit for several recent attacks against various targets in leftist-ruled Nicaragua.

Ortega said 400 rebels and 33 government troops died in fighting between Aug. 15 and Tuesday. There was no way to independently verify the claim.

Honduras-based rebels of the Democratic Nicaraguan Force have received $19 million in CIA funds, according to congressional testimony, but Pastora's force is not known to have gotten CIA money.

Ortega defended Nicaragua's right to attack the rebels, but said "we will not invade any country."

Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua have exchanged barbs over the past week after Ortega's brother, junta coordinator Daniel Ortega Saavedra, who said the Sandinistas would chase the rebels into what he called "no-man's land" border areas to fight rebels based in Honduras and Costa Rica.

Honduran Defense Minister Amilcar Castillo Suazo said Wednesday the Honduran army is on "a state of alert" because of Nicaragua's threat, and President Roberto Suazo Cordova said he hoped military exercises with the United States "continue as long as I am president."

About 4,000 U.S. troops and 5,000 Honduran soldiers started maneuvers Aug. 5 at Palmerola, 48 miles of the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa. The maneuvers will continue until at least March.

In a related development, the Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said Wednesday that army patrols were hunting for two crewmen from an old U.S.-made DC-3 rebel transport plane shot down in northern Nicaragua, where troops were engaged in fierce fighting with rebels.

The ministry said the aircraft was carrying supplies to the rebels when it was shot down Monday. It claimed the plane was registered in Oklahoma and had flown from Honduras, which denied the claim.

At the United Nations, Colombian President Belisario Betancur called for the removal of all foreign troops and military advisers from Central America, Colombia, along with Venezuela, Mexico and Panama, from the Contadora group which seeking a peaceful solution to Central America's regional conflicts.

Flight 007 debris given to South Korea

TOKYO (AP) — The Foreign Ministry today turned over to South Korea debris from the Korean Air Lines jumbo jet shot down by Soviet fighters Sept. 1, a ministry official said.

Hiroshi Kawaguchi, deputy director-general of the Consular and Emigration Affairs Department, handed over 743 items to South Korea's consular general in Sapporo, Lee Won-Ho, the official said.

Sapporo is the prefectural capital of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island. The two officials met at Chitose Airport to transfer the items, which were then sent on to Seoul by a KAL plane.

The items include those collected by Hokkaido police and the Maritime Safety Agency during searches along the northern coast of Japan as well as material collected by the Soviet Union and handed over to Japanese and U.S. officials on Sept. 26.

They did not include any personal belongings of the 289 people onboard the jet when it was shot down in the Sea of Japan after straying into Soviet airspace near Sakhalin Island.

The search for the plane's wreckage and the box containing the crews' voice recordings continues, though pared down.

A Maritime Safety Agency official in Wakkanai, northern Japan, said MSA patrol boats saw three U.S. ships, one Soviet and two Japanese ships at sea near Moneron Island today, but the vessels were inactive because of windy weather conditions.

The official said the Narragansett, Concever and Callaghan were in an area northwest of Moneron with two Japanese commercial salvage ships. He said a Soviet salvage ship was spotted near the group.

Lee Rebels must shoot Eagles to rebound

Winner stays in District 4-5A grid race

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

One loss on Midland Lee's record doesn't mean the end of the season if disappointment can be put in cold storage and replaced with concentration on the task of winning Friday night at P.E. Shotwell Stadium.

The Rebels, now 1-1 in District 4-5A play (4-1 overall) after their 14-9 loss to San Angelo, can move into a tie for second place with a victory over Abilene High and continue on the trail they hope leads to a state playoff berth. Game time is set for 8 p.m.

CURRENTLY LEE is tied with Midland High, Abilene High and Abilene Cooper for third place behind unbeaten Odessa Permian and San Angelo. The Panthers and Cougars, 2-0, 5-0, also meet Friday with the loser joining the 1-1 survivors in a tie for second.

"Right now there are two undefeated teams in this district while everybody else has got some scars," said Lee head coach Spike Dykes. "We're not worried about the district or anything else right now other than Abilene High."

The Abilene High Eagles are also coming off their first loss of the district season, a 34-14 decision against Permian. However, before the Eagles fell, Dykes was impressed with their effort against Mojo.

"I think Abilene High has a good football team," said Dykes. "They played Permian well last week. It was 21-14 at the half so they've got some explosion offensively. They were never out of the ball game with Permian until late in the fourth quarter.

"Their tailback (Guy) Sims is an excellent football player," continued Dykes. "They've got a real strong fullback at about 225 pounds named (Lance) Byers and Mickey Russell, their quarterback, makes it all go. He's just a super football player."

Dykes was also impressed with Abilene High's front line which he says "averages about 6-foot-2½ and about 190 pounds so their big and strong and a good line."

ABILENE HIGH coach Don Cumpton has an equal amount of respect for Midland Lee, especially with the Rebels' quickness.

"Lee has so much team speed it's hard to do anything defensively," he said. "You may get them out of position occasionally but they are so quick they can make up for it. I'm impressed with Isaac Garnett (Lee's fullback) but you can't load up on him because they have two others with blazing speed (Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman) who can hurt you outside."

The defense San Angelo runs is the 4-3, similar to what Lee uses and to what the Rebels faced against San Angelo. "They've got good quickness and strength on defense," said Dykes. "They're playing very inspired football."

A major difference between Lee and Abilene High is the youth of its players, or rather, the youth of Abilene High's players. Of the 22 starting positions, the Eagles have filled in with 13 juniors (seven on offense, six on defense) compared to only two for Lee — the speedsters Jones and Thurman.

"We're pretty young and pretty green, but we're growing up in a hurry," said Cumpton.

Add to Abilene's youth is a key injury to a starter and some bumps and bruises from the Permian game.

"We're banged up a little bit," said Cumpton. "Our big linebacker, Oscar Villalobos, is one of the few players we have back from last year and he has a pretty severe sprain and we're not sure if he's ready to play."

LEE IS also missing a linebacker for Friday's game, 165-pound senior Reggie Ellis who was injured in the 4-5A opener against Odessa High.

A third factor going against Abilene High is its current schedule featuring "three of the best teams in Texas in a row. We hope to hang in there and do a good job. We're looking forward to playing them."

"This is a very big game," continued Cumpton. "Our players understand this and I'm sure Lee's players do too. Lee had some hard luck against San Angelo, turnovers killed them. We felt Lee was a better team than San Angelo but turnovers did them in."

The turnovers left the same impression on Dykes.

"We felt like it was a real tough football game to lose," said Dykes. "Certainly they're all hard to lose but it was sort of a strange football game. Any time you turn the football over six times you're not going to win the game. We had six. We fumbled it three times in the second half on drives and that didn't give us many chances with the football. You certainly have to give San Angelo credit for those fumbles. They knocked three of them loose."

"Mechanically there was nothing wrong when we fumbled so there's nothing we can work on in practice. We'll just have to do a better job of holding onto the football, protect the ball a little better."

White Sox stay 'ugly'; Fernando saves the Dodgers

Chicago can't shake tag

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Chicago White Sox can't escape their "winning ugly" stigma, even after taking a major step in quest of their first World Series appearance in 24 years. Manager Tony LaRussa bristled at the suggestion after faulty Baltimore fielding helped Chicago score a 2-1 victory in Wednesday's opening game of the American League Championship Series.

Texas Manager Doug Rader hung the "ugly" tag on the White Sox during the regular season because they sometimes won when they did not play well.

"There's no such thing as an ugly win," LaRussa insisted, even though the White Sox wasted numerous scoring and needed help from the Orioles. "I think we earned every bit of that game."

THE ORIOLES, who had never lost an opener in six previous playoffs and five World Series, saw it differently.

"We made mistakes," said catcher Rick Dempsey. "We gave them two runs. When you give a game away, that's an ugly loss."

"Certainly it's not the way the Orioles usually play," said loser Scott McGregor. "We broke tradition. We're sorry."

In true "ugly" style, the White Sox advanced 11 runners into scoring position without getting them across. Two runners were thrown out at the plate and another was forced at third on a bunt.

Chicago, which lost the season series to the Orioles 7-5, broke a scoreless tie in the third on three consecutive two-out singles by Rudy Law, Carlton Fisk and Tom Paciorek.

(Related Story on Page 3B)

The RBI hit by Paciorek went threw the legs of third baseman Todd Cruz, a converted shortstop who failed to get into position to block the ball.

In the sixth, the White Sox made it 2-0 when Paciorek walked, moved to third on a fielding error by first baseman Eddie Murray on a twisting grounder by Greg Luzinski, and scored as Ron Kittle grounded into a double play.

That was enough for LaMarr Hoyt, who won his last 13 regular-season decisions on the way to a 24-10 record. He hurled a superb five-hitter and didn't allow a run until Dan Ford doubled with two outs in the ninth and scored on a single by Cal Ripken Jr.

The stage was set for the Orioles, who scored 36 come-from-behind victories during the regular season.

But Murray, who hit 33 homers and drove in 111 runs in 1983, bounced back through the middle on the first pitch and forced Ripken to end the game.

"To see Eddie Murray standing up there was pretty frightening," said Paciorek. "Fortunately we got out of it."

"We figure LaMarr Hoyt is the best pitcher in baseball," said Paciorek. "We know if we can get him a few runs, he'll shut the other team down."

"Everybody talked about experience — about how the Orioles had it and we didn't," said Paciorek. "Now we have a game under our belts, and it's a win. I think we have a little more confidence now."

Chicago's Julio Cruz dives over Baltimore's Al Bumbry for a tough out in Game 1 of the American League Playoff Wednesday.

"I think our chances are real good now to win the whole thing," said Hoyt. "We kind of got the first one out of the way."

MANAGER JOE Altobelli of the Orioles, who rebounded from two seven-game losing streaks to win the AL East down the stretch, wasn't ready to concede.

"The first game of five is awfully important," he conceded. "But a team has come back from two losses. I think of California winning the first two last year and then losing three (to Milwaukee). History has proven it can be done."

Phillies move homeward

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some predicted that a loss by the Los Angeles Dodgers to the Philadelphia Phillies in Game 2 of the National League Championships would, in effect, mean the end of the series.

"It was a very tough game, it was very important that we win the second game here," Dodger pitcher Fernando Valenzuela said Wednesday night after notching the win as the Dodgers downed the Phillies 4-1 to square the best-of-five playoffs at one game each.

Had the Dodgers lost, they would have faced the difficult task of having to sweep the Phillies in Philadelphia this weekend.

ASKED HOW it feels to be going into the Phillies' park needing to win two of three games, Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda replied: "A heck of a lot better than if we needed to go in there and win three out of three."

Los Angeles' Bob Welch, 15-12 during the regular season, will face Philadelphia rookie Charles Hudson, 8-8, in Friday afternoon's third game.

(Related Story on Page 3B)

Although the Phillies seemed generally satisfied to get a split of the two contests at Dodger Stadium, heading home for the final three games might not necessarily mean "advantage" for them.

During the regular season, the Dodgers' 11-1 record against Philadelphia included five-of-six for Los Angeles at Veterans Stadium.

Lasorda, however, said that regular-season dominance doesn't mean much now.

"I guess when we arrive over there, thinking about that could give us a good feeling," he said. "But we still need to win two out of three in a tough park where the Phillies play well."

The Dodgers, blanked 1-0 by Steve Carlton in the series opener at Dodger Stadium, got a good pitching performance from Valenzuela, a clutch triple from Pedro Guerrero, and some solid fielding to win the second game.

Valenzuela scattered seven hits and held the Phillies to one run, Gary Matthews' second-inning homer, before he yielded to reliever Tom Niedenfuer with one on and none out in the ninth inning.

Guerrero snapped a 1-1 tie when he tripped into the rightfield corner with two away and two on in the fifth inning. The Dodgers' defensive effort included three double plays to end Philadelphia scoring threats, and Mike Marshall's sliding catch in the eighth.

THE PHILLIES had two runners on base when Marshall ran full speed toward the right field line and hauled in Joe Morgan's fly to end the inning.

Guerrero's hit fell in Joe's didn't. Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens said of the two similar fly balls: "That made the difference."

The Phillies also made some costly fielding miscues. Los Angeles scored its initial run after Dusty Baker reached first with two away when Philadelphia shortstop Ivan DeJesus couldn't handle his grounder to short. Phillies starter John Denny then hit Guerrero with a pitch, and Ken Landreaux followed with a run-producing single.

Another error, centerfielder Garry Maddox' inability to catch Valenzuela's deep fly to right-center in the fifth inning, hurt even more. Valenzuela wound up at third, then, after Steve Sax grounded out to second, was thrown out at home trying to score on Greg Brock's grounder to third — which would have been the final out if Maddox had made the catch earlier in the frame.

Denny then walked Dusty Baker and Guerrero followed with his tie-breaking triple. The Dodgers' final run came in the eighth, when Bill Russell walked, stole second and scored on Jack Fimple's single.

Denny, who led the league with a 19-6 record this season, got the loss despite allowing no earned runs on five hits during the six innings he worked.

MADDOX THOUGHT he should not have been charged with an error on Valenzuela's fly ball. He raced back and had the ball in his glove, but stumbled to the ground and dropped it.

"I had a long way to go," he said. "As soon as I started to reach for it, I knew I was going to fall. It was very muddy out there from rain Tuesday, and there was some very loose grass."

"You have to realize with a left-handed hitter, the ball is going to come back to you. I was playing in left-center and wound up in the warning track in right-center. I don't know what the official scorer was thinking."

Although Valenzuela had thrown well for the first eight innings, he appeared to be tired when Lasorda replaced him after he had given up a leadoff single to Matthews and thrown two balls to Maddox.

Bobcats solve dandruff woes

It has been a week of head scratching at Midland Lee, but the falling dandruff keeps forming a 14-9 symbol on the floor.

The only conclusion is that San Angelo's Bobcats must wash their hair with Head and Shoulders. It's true. I saw a tube in the Bobcat dressing room last Friday night. It may be a firm edict from San Angelo coach Jimmie Keeling.

The Bobcats drove away from Memorial Stadium last Friday squeaky clean, owning a nighttime robbery and leaving no clues — except 149 dandruff scattered across the city. It was robbery — wasn't it?

"We wuz robbed!" was the cry after the game by one of the Lee fans. Another said, "If we played San Angelo 10 times, we'd win nine."

IT WAS certainly a game that left a feeling of emptiness. Just look at the facts.

Lee had 310 yards rushing. San Angelo had 220. Lee had 36 yards passing. San Angelo none. Lee had 21 first downs. San Angelo 12. Lee didn't punt once. San Angelo punted three times.

Normally, those statistics would say that Lee scored about 35 points, not nine. Normally, Lee statistics like those spell domination, not a loss. It must be that new math again. It doesn't add up.

But then there is the "rest of the story." Lee had the ball eight times only to lose it six times by turnovers — four on fumbles and two on pass interceptions. That formed a 14-9 symbol on the floor.

"We're disappointed. What else can I say. We didn't like losing that way and that's not taking anything away from San Angelo," said Lee coach Spike Dykes. "What are you going to do? Bench Isaac (Garnett) for fumbling twice? Or anyone else who fumbled? I hated this loss for our kids. They played so hard and the fumbles were a result of that. They were just trying to make extra yards. That old bull (Garnett) has made so many big plays for us this year, that you hate to see something like that happen to him. It hurts."

You learn early in a football experience that you don't win close football matchups with turnovers. It's a basic fact of grid life. But to do it against San Angelo and Keeling is cutting your own throat.

KEELING IS pure and simple lucky. I really don't know how to say it in a mild form. It's fact. Keeling showed last year that you don't beat him on luck. He won five straight coin flips last year. Two to win second place and a playoff berth and three more to win the home field advantage in the playoffs. Keeling had so many offers to go to Las Vegas over the summer, he had to unplug his phone.

Find a way to stop his football team and Keeling starts flipping coins on the sideline. How are you going to beat that?

Keeling did get a 66-yard TD run to open the game and a fumble deep in Lee's territory on the ensuing kickoff. That's 14 points before the Lee offense gets on the field. A lot of points to make up against a good team.

The Lee defense settles down. San Angelo makes two first downs the entire second half. The Lee offense seems to move at will when they take the ball with them. The only real trouble is that they tried too many plays without the ball. That's part of the game too.

The "Luck of the Irish" has left South Bend and taken up residence in San Angelo. Just ask Gerry Faust.

BUT IT will remain a loss for the Rebels. The South now has to Rise Again. The feeling is that two district losses may keep you out of the playoffs this year. That would mean that the Rebels will have to beat Odessa Permian and the rest of them.

You get the feeling that Memorial Stadium is not good for the home team. Midland High had high hopes against Permian and got thumped 34-12. San Angelo then comes to town and snatches a victory from Lee.

Maybe we should schedule no home games. Dandruff is messy.

The Bobcats now take their tube of Head and Shoulders against Odessa Permian Friday night. San Angelo also has the spotlight for this one. Now here is where luck is going to get the big test. Neither team has been short in that area. Mojo Magic against Head and Shoulders. It should be a dandy cure for dandruff.

Fat men unite! Chisox are here

Comment

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fat men, unite! You no longer have to be shamed by those lean guys you see jogging through the streets at dawn, picking at cottage cheese and doing pushups at night to maintain that svelte figure.

You now have a real live, genuine hero who can make you spurn those Weightwatchers ads and flout the advice of Jane Fonda and Suzy Chafee.

His name is Dewey LaMarr Hoyt — "Call me LaMarr" — who dazzled the Baltimore Orioles' Murderers Row with a mixture of curves, sliders and fastballs to give the Chicago White Sox a 2-1 victory in Wednesday's opening game of the American League's Championship series.

It should have been a more, one-sided victory. The Sox left 10 runners on base.

THE DISTINCTIVE feature about LaMarr is that he, as do some of his other beefy teammates, bears no striking resemblance to most people's conception of an athlete.

He sports an intimidating beard and mustache, stands 6 feet, one inch tall and weighs, by his own loose estimate, 240 pounds.

"I don't get on the scales unless I'm ordered to and they don't make me weigh in unless I show some sign of slackening off," he said. "So I haven't weighed in quite a while."

It's not smart to mess with the personal appetite of a guy who led the majors this year with 24 victories and who has won a total of 43 games in two seasons, excluding Wednesday's playoff masterpiece.

"I can dominate the outside of the plate on left-handers and right-handers alike," he said. "I have a good variety and I had all my pitches working perfectly."

"I made only one bad pitch — an inside pitch to Dan Ford in the ninth. I tried to cross him up."

Hoyt said he wasn't always built like an army tank.

"When I was in the minors, I weighed 165," he said. "I decided I wanted to be bigger and stronger if I was ever going to make it in baseball."

"I figure I can gain three to five pounds a year."

HE SAID he never had dieted and had never been pressured by his bosses to trim off some of the excess suit.

"Of course, if I get so I can't run, I'd do something about it. As it is, it's an advantage. I have more strength and I don't get tired."

Greg Luzinski, the team's designated hitter, is 6-1 and weighs 240 while catcher Marc Hill is 6-3 and weighs 235. They all have beards and would form the nucleus of a crack Olympic bobsled team.

The White Sox equipment manager, Willie Thompson, is a massive man who weighs 260 while the security chief, Vince Fresso, is a chunky 235.

"Eating must be pretty good around here," a reporter suggested.

"Not really," said Thompson. "Actually these guys are light eaters — like canaries. They absorb a lot of liquids."

Hoyt quickly subscribed to that.

"Everybody keeps getting on me about my weight," the bulbous right-hander said. "When you win 43 games in two years you've got a lot of celebrating to do."

THEN OUT of the wings came a comment from an anonymous source:

"When you patronize those joints on Chicago's East Side, you gotta be big and tough."

LaMarr Hoyt is one of the game's implausible jewels. He was born in Columbia, S. C., 28 years ago. His parents divorced when he was six months old. He has seen his mother only twice since then and has had little relationship with his father, a former minor league ballplayer.

He once lost 11 straight games in the Southern League. While with Knoxville, he was converted into a reliever by his manager, Tony LaRussa, who later moved to the White Sox and brought Hoyt with him.

Hoyt won five straight in relief at the end of the 1981 season and nine as a starter in 1982 for a 14-game streak. Last year he won 19 games but didn't get a vote for the Cy Young Award.

Hoyt, Luzinski, Hill & Co. are not the only leading sports personalities who defy the merits of diet and discipline.

THE GREAT Babe Ruth was built like a beer barrel, which dispensed one of his favorite liquids. Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons, Mickey Lolich, Bobo Newsome and Wilbur Wood were pitchers whose belts fell below bulging mid-sections.

Craig Stadler, Bill Casper and Miller Barber are golfers who never exactly fit the athletic image. And few can forget popular Sonny Jorgensen who played fine quarterback for the Redskins while carrying excess baggage around.

To some of us, "Fat Is Beautiful."

Denver quarterback John Elway ...will have to find room on Bronco bench

Reeves benches Elway in favor of DeBerg

DENVER (AP) — The experiment is over. Rookie quarterbacks frequently haven't fared well in the National Football League, and John Elway, despite his buildup, is no exception.

Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves, saying his offense was "not getting the job done," benched his struggling rookie on Wednesday in favor of veteran Steve DeBerg.

For five weeks our offense has been last in the league, and I felt we had to make a change," Reeves said at his weekly press conference.

DeBerg will start Sunday in Houston against the winless Oilers. "It's Steve's job," said Reeves, "but I expect John to play some."

Elway, the first player chosen in this year's NFL draft, and DeBerg had battled on virtually even terms for the starting job in the preseason. But Reeves, with an eye on the future, awarded the job to Elway.

The highly regarded rookie, who signed a five-year, $5 million contract after a trade with Baltimore, has shown signs of brilliance, but overall his performance has been disappointing.

He has had difficulty mastering Denver's multiple offense, modeled after the sophisticated Dallas Cowboys' offense. He at times appeared confused, and was often rattled by the blitz. In an effort to speed Elway's learning process, Reeves endeavored to simplify Denver's offense, but the former Stanford star still struggled.

In five games, Elway completed 38 of 83 passes for 420 yards, with one touchdown and five interceptions. His pass efficiency rating was a meager 40.3, worst in the league.

DeBerg, by contrast, has played well in relief, rallying Denver to victories in its first two games and staging a brief second-half rally in Sunday's 31-14 loss to Chicago, which dropped Denver's record to 2-3.

"I feel we have to go back to our multiple-offense concept to move the ball, and Steve can do the things we need done," said Reeves. "John was having a hard time handling it."

NHL's sudden death just makes more work

By The Associated Press

NHL Roundup

The idea was to get rid of ties. But all the National Hockey League's new overtime rule has done so far is give the players another five minutes of work.

Two games ended in ties Wednesday night, despite the institution of a five-minute sudden death overtime period to break those deadlocks. And some of the parties involved weren't too happy about the extra session.

"The governors of the NHL said they wanted to give the fans a little more excitement, so overtime was voted in," said Winnipeg Coach Tom Watt after his Jets finished in a 6-6 dead heat with the Detroit Red Wings. "Personally, I think overtime is a terrible rule."

Nick Polano, coach of the Red Wings — who suited up 14 players who didn't begin last season in Detroit — agreed, saying his club voted against overtime when it was proposed in the summer.

In Los Angeles, the Kings and North Stars skated to a 3-3 tie through 65 minutes. Marcel Dionne scored two goals to give him 546 for his career, No. 5 on the all-time list as he passed Maurice "Rocket" Richard.

"As far as overtime, I prefer seeing a winner and a loser if I was a fan," said Coach Don Perry of the Kings.

Still, it was a pleasant night for the LA fans and Dionne.

"I idolized him because he always played hard," Dionne said of Richard. "Looking back at his career, it's not fair to compare players from his time with ours today. Wayne Gretzky will break all the records that all of us are setting."

"But I'm pleased that I'm the first French-Canadian to pass Richard. I watched him and admired him very much."

Elsewhere, it was Buffalo 5, Hartford 3; the New York Rangers 6, New Jersey 2; Chicago 4, St. Louis 3; Edmonton 5, Toronto 4, and Calgary 5, Vancouver 3.

ABC to sign Earl Weaver

BALTIMORE (AP) — Earl Weaver, one of the winningest of all-time baseball managers, will resign as special consultant to the Baltimore Orioles within the next few days and become a regular television commentator for ABC-TV.

He will be in the broadcast booth for the World Series, starting next Tuesday.

The move is significant in that it takes the former Oriole skipper, who resigned last year after 14½ seasons, definitely out of the managerial sweepstakes.

The contract already has been worked out by my agent and the network," he said from his home in Miami, Fla. "The rest is just a formality."

During the past season he has worked games with ABC largely on a trial basis. With the new contract, he said, he could no longer maintain his ties with the Orioles.

"I have to be absolutely impartial," he said. "I am very happy with my new lifestyle. I wouldn't trade it for a million dollars."

That figure has been mentioned by several clubs which have been seeking to woo him back into the dugout.

The New York Mets, on a rebuilding program, have expressed particular interest in Weaver filling their vacant post. Frank Howard was released as interim skipper, last Sunday.

Frank Cashen, general manager, has been visible here for the Baltimore-Chicago White Sox American League Championship Series.

George Steinbrenner, the New York Yankee owner, has called Weaver "the best manager in baseball" and there have been reports that he might seek him to replace the embattled Billy Martin, who would be moved upstairs to fulfill the remaining four years of his contract.

Elway, the first player chosen in this year's NFL draft, and DeBerg had battled on virtually even terms for the starting job in the preseason. But Reeves, with an eye on the future, awarded the job to Elway.

BOWLING BEAT

Higgins keeps pins falling

By RANDY ISENBERG

Randy Higgins continued his emergence as one of the area's finest bowlers with his 269-711 performance in the Major Conoco Mixed League last week.

Other bowlers who are tuning up their games are J.D. Delk, 245-887; David Wright, 266-636 and George Bogle, 266-647; Patti Graham, 222-603; Karen Jordan, 224-240-773 (four games); and Pam Baker, 256-593.

Leo Rodriguez maintained his torrid pace in the Midland bowling world with a 268-675 performance in the Civic Commercial Mens League. He's produced two big 600 series. Duane Roberson and Tim Saunders are also rolling consistent totals. Saunders rolled a 254 game for a 631 series in the Tuesday Night Mens and came back on Thursday in the Civic Commercial with a 640.

In the SWABA tournament held in Big Spring over the weekend, Pat York pocketed the $750 first place prize money on an average of 123 in her first tournament appearance. Pat is from Odessa. David Campbell finished second; Pam Brown, third; and Bill Edwards fourth.

In upcoming events, KMID-TV and Dellwood Lanes will hold the first West Texas Match Game Championship tournament with first round action Saturday at 8 a.m. This is a scratch event featuring the area's premier bowlers. A first place prize of $2,000 will be awarded. The final four matches of the tournament will be televised on Channel 2 on a taped broadcast to air Sunday at 4:30.

The Miller National Doubles Tournament in-house qualifying is underway now at area bowling centers. The qualifying rounds will be conducted through Dec. 18.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma tailback Marcus Dupree said this summer he thought a Heisman Trophy was within his grasp. Now, he says, it looks like it belongs to someone else.

"I'd give it to (Mike) Rozier," Dupree said, referring to Nebraska's superb tailback. "He's done the most to deserve it. I don't even think about it anymore, except when one of you guys asks me about it."

The 6-3, 235-pound sophomore spoke with reporters on the eve of his team's annual showdown with No. 2-ranked Texas in Dallas Saturday, a rivalry that last year marked Dupree's emergence into the world of major college football.

In that game the Philadelphia, Miss., native keyed a 28-22 Sooner victory with a 63-yard touchdown run on a fake reverse. It was the first of seven consecutive games in which he scored on runs of 30 yards or longer.

Dupree went on to gain 906 yards, the most ever by a freshman back at Oklahoma, and immediately was touted as a leading candidate for the Heisman.

But a series of bad turns — injuries, poor personal decisions and allegations of discontent at the school — have all but taken Dupree out of the chase, he says.

"It was a long summer, and this fall has been a little disappointing, too. But you have to just keep playing," he said. "You can't just stop when things get bad."

Dupree's problems started on New Year's Day, when he pulled a hamstring in Oklahoma's 32-21 Fiesta Bowl loss to Arizona State. Although he gained 239 yards, he was criticized by Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer for being out of shape, and he went on to miss the entire spring session.

During the summer he was the subject of an article in Sports Illustrated that said he "hates it at OU, and his relationship with Switzer, which was barely cordial to begin with, has deteriorated."

Both player and coach denied having problems, but Dupree again was tongue-lashed by Switzer in August when he missed several scheduled interviews and failed to show up for his team's media day. Dupree said he left Mississippi later than he had originally planned and then had car trouble on the way to Norman.

Finally, the talented runner suffered a second injury — a bruised nerve in his left knee that sidelined him in the second quarter of a 24-14 loss to Ohio State Sept. 17. He sat out the next week and returned to gain 151 yards in a 29-10 victory over Kansas State last week, but favored the knee throughout the game and appeared tentative on several runs.

"I feel confident running about 10-15 yards, but I don't feel confident in the open field," said Dupree, who has 319 yards in the three games in which he has appeared. Rozier has gained 759 yards in five outings.

"I'm running about 90 percent (healthy) right now. I'm kind of disappointed, but there's nothing I can do about it."

Dupree, who was recruited heavily by Texas, disagrees with Switzer's assessment that the Longhorns, 3-0, are better this year than the 3-1, eighth-ranked Sooners.

"I think we are as good as Texas. Texas is a little bigger, but that's about it. I think we can be as good a team as we want to be," said the running back, who believes that this year's game is more important than the 1982 clash because "if we can beat Texas we can be playing Nebraska (Nov. 26) for the national championship."

Last year, the Sooners were 2-2 heading into this weekend in Dallas, but won six straight before losing to the Cornhuskers for the Big Eight title.

"I think I'm better prepared for it this year, because I've learned the excitement of the game — I'm just looking at it as another game to play," he said. "Every game we play, there's going to be a lot of pressure out there. It'll be the same in Dallas."

Paterno upset with mouths

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Penn State football players have been psyching up their opponents by "shooting their mouths off" to the press, Coach Joe Paterno says.

Paterno launched into a tirade about his players' remarks Wednesday when asked to comment on players' statements that the defending national champion Nittany Lions, 2-3, "had something to prove" in Saturday's game against third-ranked Alabama.

"I think some of my players have been shooting their mouths off too much, to be quite frank with you," Paterno said.

"That's been part of the problem with this football team right from the beginning," he said.

"We've had some people who had made some statements before we had to play a game about how good we were going to be here and how good we were going to be there."

had to play a game about how good we were going to be here and how good we were going to be there."

"You don't win football games by talking about it. You win football games by going out and playing well and playing with enthusiasm and enjoying the football game without putting the added pressure on your back," Paterno said.

Paterno said his team, which lost its first three games of the season, to Nebraska, Cincinnati and Iowa, hasn't played well, but is improving.

"We're not good enough but were very close in a lot of instances," he said.

"So we'd be better off if we just kept our mouths shut and enjoyed playing football and stopped responding to the press and media and everything else," he said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, Oct. 7, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Danish physicist Niels Bohr, poet James Whitcomb Riley and religious leader Elijah Muhammad were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actress June Allyson, Chicago White Sox outfielder Rudy Law and bandleader Vaughn Monroe. Find ways to be more efficient at home and the office and you will enjoy greater financial security. Falling in love with a business associate could cause several problems. A little effort goes a long way to improving a parent-child relationship. A quick business trip puts you in the right place at the right time. Make the most of your contacts. A family friend has great influence.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your doubts have no basis in fact. Talk openly with a child or parent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your perseverance begins to pay off. A diet makes you feel better about yourself. Your past endeavors command respect. While in the spotlight, call attention to what you will do in the future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A timely phone call opens important career doors. Those in medicine enjoy special success. If a job offer appears today, take it. Observe all safety precautions when performing manual labor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You feel more vulnerable than you need to in romance. Brains will triumph over brawn. Forget an office feud. You need all the cooperation you can muster. Use a special advantage wisely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Old school ties may be hindering the growing-up process. Let romance develop at its own pace. Mechanical problems worsen if you try to tackle them without qualified help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Shortcuts will hamper your efforts to solve a complicated financial dilemma. Exercise greater self-discipline where spending is concerned. Games of chance will only put debtors further in the hole.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Show your independence today and good things will happen. A coveted invitation is in the mail. You enjoy new peace of mind after reaching an understanding with a neighbor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Household problems could delay your arrival at work or school. A new admirer boosts your ego. You cannot afford to make any assumptions regarding a question of financial responsibility.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Show as much concern for your family as you do for acquaintances. Strong recommendations favor your getting an important job or appointment. Something that occurs this afternoon is more than a coincidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An amazing event gives you new appreciation for your loved ones. Go slow in introducing changes at work or home. Patience pays big dividends. Do not attempt to rush romantic partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A scholarship is within your grasp. Obey your conscience. Greed will bring regrets. You could get a taste of your own medicine from loved one. Give a child something to work for.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A grant helps you finish a special project. Recognize that a promise may not be kept. A new assignment requires your best efforts. A loan will not be repaid on time.

Producer makes film on holocaust

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodia's bloody history during the past decade has been unexplored by creative artists.

But British producer David Puttnam, who made the Academy Award-winning "Chariots of Fire" and "Midnight Express," hopes his next work, "The Killing Fields," will become a major artistic statement about the Cambodian holocaust.

The core of the movie is the true life tale of New York Times correspondent Sydney Schanberg and his Cambodian assistant, Dith Pran, who saved his life during the capture of Phnom Penh by the Khmer Rouge.

Several Bangkok-based journalists who had covered the Cambodian war were cast in minor parts and described some of the film's scenes as stunning.

They include the bloody accidental bombing of Neak Luong by a U.S. B-52, the final battles for Phnom Penh and, most chilling of all, the slave-labor camps, the mindless indoctrinations and mass executions — the killing fields of the title — under the Communist Khmer Rouge.

The 42-year-old producer, who exercises control over every aspect of his films, said that 90 percent of the movie has already been shot, most of it over the past 12 weeks in Thailand. Release of the $15 million film is scheduled for September 1984.

Pran's story, as Schanberg once wrote, is one "of war and friendship, of the anguish of a ruined country and of one man's will to live." The American newsmen had hired Pran as his assistant and the two developed a close relationship, based in part on shared dangers and hardships.

When the Khmer Rouge were closing in on Phnom Penh in 1975, Pran declined evacuation and was later able to save Schanberg and several other Western journalists who remained behind from almost certain execution.

Schanberg and other foreigners spent several weeks in the French Embassy in Phnom Penh before being deported. But Pran was forced, like all his countrymen, to take part in the murderous evacuation by the Khmer Rouge of the entire city.

For more than four years Schanberg, who won a Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of Phnom Penh's fall, searched for clues to Pran's fate.

The Vietnamese, who invaded Cambodia and toppled the Khmer Rouge, made Pran a local official until they found out he had once worked for the Americans. In October 1979, Pran fled his shattered homeland.

Schanberg rushed to Thailand and the two were reunited at a refugee camp along the Thai-Cambodian border. The reunion, filmed at an actual frontier camp with some refugees playing roles, is the last scene in the film.

There are hands in which you have to develop two suits to fulfill your contract. When faced with that task, the order in which you tackle those suits can be crucial.

Since he was a passed hand, South's jump to two no trump showed a hand of 11-12 points. North had ample values for his raise to game.

West led his fourth-best diamond, and declarer took time out to decide how he wanted to play the hand. If he wanted to go after hearts first, it would be right to win the first trick in his own hand. But since he needed tricks in both major suits, a better line was to tackle spades first, for the finesse would be taken into the safe hand.

Therefore, declarer went up with the queen of diamonds on the first trick. When that held, he ran the jack of spades. West won the queen, but he could make no damaging return.

He exited with a heart. A careless player might take the heart finesse, and then find that, after it loses, he cannot make the contract if West had started with both missing spade honors. The thoughtful declarer wins the king of hearts and repeats the spade finesse. After clearing spades, declarer finesses the ten of hearts. Although it loses to the queen, declarer doesn't mind — he is already assured of nine tricks: two spades, three hearts, two diamonds and a club.

Gulf Oil opens unique new home

By DAVID C. SODAMANN Business-Energy Editor

You know what they say in those luxury airline commercials? Something like, "You can't describe it, you just have to fly it." Well, that's probably the best way to begin talking about Gulf Oil's new office building in ClayDesta Plaza. It's pretty tough to describe too, you just have to see it.

And that's what a big crowd of Midlanders and other Permian Basin residents did Wednesday, when J.L. Huitt, president of Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Company, Houston, officially opened the recently completed, 270,000 square-foot building.

What they saw was extraordinary. Seen from the outside, Gulf's new office building is roughly pie-shaped, with a sloping glass roof. Inside, it's like a huge cavern filled with bright, natural light. Tunnel-like corridors lead through a maze of offices. Children could entertain themselves for weeks exploring the nooks and crannies.

There's scarcely a square corner in the place. Many rooms are shaped like an old-fashioned woodsman's lean-to tent. The building means a lot to the corporation.

"We wanted to have a fine place for our employees to work," said Larry Turner, Gulf's western division general manager here in Midland. "So whenever they have family visiting they could say 'I'm proud to work for Gulf.' We wanted an environment where they'd be pleased to work, and maybe challenged to do their best."

Gulf first came to the Permian Basin 60 years ago, back when every well was a wildcat and most of the oilmen were too. In 1923, the firm became the first oil company to open offices in the little cowtown that became the Tall City.

And it's still a leader. Gulf lifts more natural gas than any other company operating in the Basin, it's among the top four oil producers.

"Gulf has a major commitment to the Permian Basin — Midland specifically — and we want to be here another half century," Turner said.

"We're looking forward to a long future out here," said Huitt. "We think it'll be very good. We depend very heavily on this area. We produce out here about one-sixth of the oil Gulf uses on a worldwide basis, and about one-fourth the gas," Huitt added. In time Gulf's Midland office will grow in size and importance, Huitt said. New people will be added to the staff.

"This region," he remarked, "the western division — which stretches from Fort Worth to the West Coast and up into Alaska — will be the headquarters of all our frontier area in Alaska and offshore California. So, we expect this office to play a very important part in Gulf's future."

"As we move into more complicated enhanced recovery in our major fields, we're simply going to need more technical expertise than we have, and this requires more people," Turner explained.

"We expect to have a very good future out here in enhanced recovery," Huitt added. "Certainly, in the West Texas area, enhanced recovery is one of the facets we are pushing."

"Enhanced recovery just has to become important to us. Gulf has a resource base of some 9 billion barrels to go after on enhanced recovery. It's just a matter of time. What we're doing is putting in those projects that are economical. We'll continue to do that."

Turner said, "This building represents not only space for those 450 people (already in Midland)

we're moving in, but its growth for the next 10 or 15 years. We have room here for something like 735 people.

"We have designed the building for expansion. In addition to the roughly 300 vacant spaces we'll start with initially, the building's so designed that we can add a wing on each end without ruining its looks."

Gulf's Midland staff is now scattered in four downtown buildings. Most have been in the Gulf Building on Wall Street for over 20 years.

Many Midland-based oil operations lease their office space, as Gulf is now doing, but the firm owns its new home along the Tall City's second skyline. "We're here to stay," Turner said.

"We purchased a little over 13 acres from Clayton Williams for this development of ours. It's pretty hard to get 13 acres near downtown Midland."

A key reason behind Gulf's move from the downtown to the "new town" was the lack of adequate parking spaces Turner said. The company wanted a place where employees didn't have to spend a lot of money to park. Gulf employees will have more than 600 parking spaces of their own at the new building.

McClure warns of new crisis

By STEVEN EISENSTADT Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The United States must prepare for a new oil crisis because one will occur by 1993, the chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee warned Wednesday.

"I am absolutely confident there will be a disruption in the oil supply of this country sometime in the next 10 years," Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, predicted. "We have to be ready."

McClure, speaking at a news briefing marking the tenth anniversary of the 1973 Arab oil embargo, asserted a new energy crisis is inevitable because of continued volatility in the Middle East and tensions in other oil-producing parts of the world.

He said the war between Iran and Iraq and the potential of the conflict in Central America spreading to Mexico — America's number one supplier of foreign oil — may lead to the crisis.

"Reducing our vulnerability to those events is essential," the senator said.

McClure, who is considered a top candidate to succeed Howard Baker as Senate majority leader, conceded the nation is better able to cope with an energy crisis than it was in the 1970s. But he added, "I am still not comfortable with where we are."

Although U.S. dependence on OPEC oil has diminished since the last decade, the Energy Department has said the nation's reliance on that petroleum will continue for at least another 20 years.

The Reagan administration and Congress do not have "a full, cogent view of the energy situation in this country," said McClure, one of the Senate's strongest proponents of preparation for future energy crises.

Although he praised the administration for lifting oil price controls and for its commitment to pumping oil into the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, McClure said the White House isn't doing enough to encourage fuel conservation and the development of new energy technology.

The Idaho Republican agreed with White House contentions that oil decontrol, which went into effect in 1981, has resulted in lower gasoline prices and has encouraged oil companies to increase exploration.

McClure also supported the administration's goal of a 750 million barrel petroleum reserve, comparing it to an insurance policy that would be helpful in an emergency.

But he added that conservation and alternative energy programs, which have been pared by the administration's budget-cutting ax, would be integral in an energy crisis.

In addition, he disagreed with the administration's insistence that in an oil crisis, the federal government would not have to intervene with price and allocation controls.

McClure also urged Congress to pass legislation that would dismantle natural gas regulations because he is "absolutely, totally, utterly convinced" it would lower the cost of the fuel.

He complained, however, that the political climate on Capitol Hill would allow passage only of a watered down decontrol measure that would "still restrict free movement in the marketplace."

Natural gas legislation was reported out of McClure's panel earlier this year, and McClure said the House energy committee may begin work on its version of the measure in November.

McClure, an outspoken advocate of nuclear power, reaffirmed his support for that form of energy, saying the U.S. would be "foolish in foregoing the opportunity to provide such a benign, cheap type of fuel."

Metals firms told to stop violations

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Based on "two or three" complaints from Texas, state Comptroller Gerald Lewis Wednesday ordered three South Florida precious metals firms to halt alleged violations of the state Securities Act.

Lewis charged that the companies sold securities without a license and violated anti-fraud provisions by failing to warn consumers that precious metals investment is risky.

All three firms are controlled by former employees of the International Gold Bullion Exchange of Fort Lauderdale, which filed for protection from its creditors in bankruptcy court earlier this year, owing thousands of investors millions of dollars, Lewis said.

"This appears to us to look like a substantially similar program," Lewis said.

"The complaints we have had are from people who haven't gotten any gold," Lewis said.

It's tougher to reach the top ranks

By JOHN CUNIFF NEW YORK (AP) — The rules of executive success are changing, and it's going to be a lot tougher for aspirants to crack the top ranks than it was during the fast-track, upwardly mobile days of the 1960s.

The change, says Eugene Jennings, who makes that assessment, will have a profound effect on the lives and careers of those who had expected to follow the earlier patterns of quick success.

Old patterns, says the professor, are returning: Experience over youth, company over career loyalty, steadiness rather than quickness of judgment, and a view of one's job as a career rather than as a stepping stone.

Jennings, who teaches management at Michigan State University and advises corporate boards and chairmen on executive development, sums up the changes as a return to the time-tested practice of leavening.

The first time he heard the term, said Jennings, was in an interview with Charles E. Wilson, who headed General Motors Corp. from 1941 to 1953.

Then just beginning his studies of executive mobility, Jennings asked Wilson, "What's the key to making great leaders at GM?" He said Wilson replied tersely, "Leavening, young man, leavening."

Wilson explained: "You add just a little yeast to cause talent to rise slowly, but not too much to make it float up and cave in."

It was, says Jennings, a dictate of the times: "That small increments of authority, status and power would produce gradual but permanent modification of executive talent, that you could not hurry the process along, and that too much too soon would spoil the bread."

Little did Wilson foresee of what would happen — that the wild growth of the 1960s would leavening to be dismissed as archaic, and encourage young executives to stress career management, or the art of making successful moves.

Notions developed that to stay in a job "too long" was to be like a fly waiting to be swatted; that you must move and keep ahead of the mess you made so that you wouldn't be discovered; that in the first two years on a job you learned more than you could ever learn in the last two; and that in order to keep growing you should report to larger, more fertile ground every few years.

Jennings, whose books, among them "The Mobile Manager" and "Routes To The Executive Suite," were perhaps the major factor in identifying and explaining such notions, now believes they are becoming passé.

"Americans are managing companies intensively again," he said. "The extensive experience of moving around to move up won't augur well today for the aspirant to the top job."

What brought about the changes? There is a glut of middle managers, said Jennings, and right behind them are a lot of young baby boomers now about age 30 or 35. At the same time, there is a slowing of economic growth, which induces considerable "resizing."

Companies resize in different ways, but one of the most common is to cut the number of managers, dismissing those who supervise just one or two people, and increasing the number of people who manage 12 or 14 subordinates.

Intensive managing, he reasons, will make upward mobility more difficult and more time-consuming. There will be fewer positions on the way up, he predicts, "but executives will be intensively exposed to each position."

Q. It occurs to me that the tax system treats different senior citizens differently — favoring those who work and penalizing those who invest.

It is my understanding that a person 72 or older can earn any amount of money in wages, without paying income tax or being penalized in Social Security benefits. But, if a person 72 or older owns stocks and bonds and collects dividends and interest or makes profits selling those securities, he or she must pay income tax.

Isn't this unfair? A lot of research and work goes into picking the right securities. If you pick wrong, you can go broke.

A. Although there are many unfair provisions in the Internal Revenue Code, the one you mention can't be included. Your understanding is very wrong. There is no age cutoff, past which you don't have to pay federal income tax.

The source of your income makes no difference. It could be so-called "earned income," such as salary, wages, commissions, fees and tips. Or, it could be investment income, such as dividends, interest and capital gains. If it's taxable income, you have to pony up to the Internal Revenue Service — regardless of your age.

Social Security is a different story. Until this year, a person under age 72 drawing Social Security benefits lost $1 of benefits for every $2 of earned income. Beginning with 1963, that benefit reduction applies only to Social Security recipients under age 70. If you continue working at 70 or older, you can collect full Social Security benefits — no matter how large your earned income.

There is not now and never has been any reduction in Social Security benefits because of investment income. You can have unlimited investment income, without losing any Social Security benefits. That provision favors people who have investment income — not those who are still working in their senior years.

SAVE ON THE NEW MINOLTA BETA.

THE COPIER OF THE FUTURE.

You don't have to spend a lot to get a lot of copier. Not if you buy Minolta's Beta 450Z. It comes with features that are so advanced it can do some extraordinary things:

- The unique variable magnification zooming lens gives the 450Z a virtually limitless range of copy sizes. From almost a 50% enlargement to a 50% reduction.
- Auto magnification enables the 450Z to take different size originals and enlarge or reduce them to a uniform size.
- Auto paper selection enables the 450Z to copy different size originals on different size paper - selecting the correct paper size for you automatically.
- If you need to expand capacity with an automatic document feeder or sorter, the 450Z has a full system of design-integrated accessories. And because they're made only for Beta, they give you smoother, significantly more trouble-free operation.

To see the 450Z, the copier of the future, come in for a demonstration today.

- Government/services, chairman C. Wallace Craig, $31,539, 79 percent.
- Professional, chairman Tom Madonna, $55,335, 58 percent.

Unit totals for the third report reflected Special Support in the lead with $365,795, or 79 percent of its goal. Chairman is Larry Bell. Nipping at its heels, though, is Public/Professional with 74 percent of its goal and $148,166 raised. Chairman is Jane Wolf.

Next in line is the Oil Unit with chairman Larry Turner raising $350,669, or 65 percent of his goal. And following him is Industry/Commerce with chairman Bob Southerland getting $240,050, or 46 percent of the goal.

New bank called 'soundest' in U.S.

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

ODESSA — The rebirth of a local bank has become an auspicious financial event that has captured public interest. What the new owners billed "the soundest bank in the U.S. today" gained millions of dollars in new deposits on its first day in business.

John Wright

Brad Stephens

According to its new owners, small business and individual accounts have flowed in to the newly created First State Bank of Odessa N.A. (national association), making it one of this country's strongest banks because of its cash situation.

It had gained deposits of more than $5.7 million before its first business day was over at 3 p.m. Monday. At the close of its first day in business, FSBO had total deposits of $81,861,131.82.

AT THE CLOSE of business on Friday Sept. 30 National Bank of Odessa had deposits of $76,061,211.29. NBO was declared insolvent due to bad energy loans. It was closed by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency later that night, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was named receiver.

Said John Wright, at the top of the holding company buying NBO for a $1.2 million premium, "There is character, capacity, capital — and collateral, the fourth 'C' — to offset weakness in a loan. NBO was caught by the fifth 'C' conditions," failing at what he called the bottom point of the area's economic swing, now being followed by an "unspectacular" recovery.

But owners Independent Bankshares Inc. of Abilene (IBSI) are delighted. "We feel like we've made a good trade," said IBSI chairman of the board Wright, who started with the company's lead bank, First State Bank of Abilene, in 1963. "We are glad to be in Odessa. I've always wanted a bank in Odessa." Wright has helped FSBA climb from third to first, from $4 million to $550 million in deposits, and to prominence in the Abilene market by employing aggressive business tactics. He wants to help the Odessa bank grow similarly.

"WE'RE GOING TO be out there asking for business," said Wright. "People rely on advertising and good PR for business. But over 70 percent of our customers are referrals from someone else that is a satisfied client. We're aggressive."

"I don't want to sound braggadocious," Wright said, "but we believe banking is people. It's an art, not a science. You can't mix the same financial information together and come out with the same product all the time" because of varying customer needs.

"The same balance sheet — but the character of the borrower makes the difference," Wright said.

Musicians keep 'em smiling

Local jazz lovers can be found a-swing to the sounds of six four-hour jazz sessions — one a day through Sunday — during Midland's 7th annual Jazz Classic.

When trombonist Trummy Young sang, "When you're smiling, keep on smiling cause the whole world smiles with you," he summed up Wednesday night's appreciative crowd. (The words certainly pinpointed the looks on their faces — there wasn't nary a frown in the hall.) Besides, Young's singing on the opening of this number meant volumes to this jazz conscious audience. After all, he played with "Satchmo" for 11 years, beginning in 1952.

Under way at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, the classic features 20 players from the United States and two from Canada.

New, certainly not to the jazz world, but to this year's classic are Englishman (who lives in Canada) Peter Appleyard, vibes; Herb Ellis, guitar; Canadian (born in Scotland) Jim Galloway, soprano sax; Bud Shank, flute/ alto sax; Jack Sheldon, trumpet/cornet; Brian Torff, bass; and Young.

Returning players are Kenny Davern, clarinet; Carl Fontana, trombone; Scott Hamilton, tenor sax; Jake Hanna, drums; Milt Hinton, bass; Gus Johnson, drums; Jack Lesberg, bass and musical director for the classic; Flip Phillips, tenor sax; Ed Polcer, cornet; Derek Smith, piano; Ralph Sutton, piano; Warren Vache Jr., cornet/flugelhorn; Bill Watrous, trombone; Buddy Weed, piano; and Jackie Williams, drums.

For those who haven't attended, the classic is broken down into sets of 20 to 30 minutes. The music is continuous. And the groups of musicians playing together change depending upon the set and the night.

What can be said of such a prestigious billing? All are excellent musicians and know their instruments perhaps better than they know themselves.

However, during the last two hours Wednesday (week night sessions begin at 8 p.m.) several players shined.

A Review

Davern's clarinet solo, which featured Johnson on drums and Sutton on piano, closed on a very high note and to standing applause. When Polcer returned to the stage, he inquired of Davern, "I don't think that note is on the horn, is it?" Davern first looked at his horn before replying, "No, it isn't."

And Appleyard's playing of "Fascinatin' Rhythm" also brought the crowd to its feet. Appleyard's style and look break with the stereotype image of a jazz musician. Appleyard really moves as he plays and his red sports jacket adds to the effect. In short, he's a showman.

Also vying for and securing a showman slot was Shank on his flute. Together and in solo, he and Appleyard, captured the audience.

Not to be overlooked was Johnson on drums (who kept the sets he played in control). Weed on piano (musical director for ABC following World War II), and Hinton on bass (over 25 years a player with the bands of Cab Calloway, Louis Armstrong and Count Basie).

Players in this year's classic represent an age span which offers the audiences an opportunity to hear the same instrument played from the perspective of vastly different generations. Take for example, the bass playing of Hinton and Torff. Both are excellent, but have totally different styles and sounds.

Another new item this year is the singing. Although some past classics have included a female vocalist, there is none this year. Instead, several of the players are doing solo singing with certain numbers and it adds to the overall effect.

The players wound up and out on the evening's last number. Galloway, Fontana, Sheldon, Hamilton, Hinton, Johnson and Weed chose a roof raising number; one which set the outwardly quiet crowd's insides a dancing — "Stompin' at the Savoy."

It seemed just right.

Davern, clarinet. The classic, which features six four-hour sets performed by 22 professional musicians, is under way through Sunday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Judge Bunton sentences ex-banker

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Wednesday sentenced an ex-banker and a former credit union president to prison for embezzling more than $110,000 in funds entrusted to them.

The judge also placed on probation a 60-year-old man convicted of threatening Internal Revenue Service agents and assaulting another and a Midland woman who embezzled $1,034 from a savings association.

Sentenced were: —Stuart Ladd, 34, who had pleaded guilty to misappropriating funds from The First National Bank of Midland in 1982 when he was a bank vice president. Bunton sentenced Ladd to five years in prison and placed him on probation for another five years. The Federal Bureau of Investigation found that Ladd had embezzled more than $50,000 by charging bank customers a 1 percent loan commitment fee and keeping the fee. The bank has no such fees on loans.

—Arthur Leroy Hix, 51, who had pleaded guilty to embezzling more than $60,000 from the Texas Highway Department's THD-6 Credit Union when he was president and treasurer-manager of the THD's employees credit union in Odessa. The judge sentenced Hix to two three-year consecutive prison sentences, though Hix promised to make restitution were the judge to grant him probation.

Placed on probation were: —Jim Winter, 60, who still maintained he was protecting his home when he assaulted IRS agents last July. The judge fined Winter $2,500 and placed him on probation for two years.

—Socorro Miller Wells, 22, who had pleaded guilty to embezzling two $517 checks from the Home Savings Association and using the funds to pay her own house payments. She said she had planned to replace the money. Mrs. Wells was placed on probation for five years, ordered to spend six months in a halfway house and to reimburse the association the $1,034 she stole.

ED TODD

Don't waste time doing something you don't enjoy

If you want to have a genuinely good time in a crowd or alone, you must first go to where "particular people" congregate.

Once there, you must be convinced that you are within your kind, your ilk, with those of similar interest. That is the common bond of particular people.

Even alone, you must be discerning. Otherwise, you are without direction and purpose.

Whether you're at an opera or a rock concert, if you feel comfortable there, you are having a good time.

Taus, the simple truth in human group pleasure is to be among your intellectual, spiritual, emotional peers — among those who share a common bond. That could be from rocks to celestial bodies, from McGuffey's Eclectic Reader and O'Henry to Plato, Aristotle, and Socrates. That's why there's diversity in life — something for everyone.

At the Peking Opera this week, there were many happy people. They were jovial. The sight and sound of the performance was exhilarating. The performers aimed for perfection, and the spectators vicariously drank of their endeavors. They were filled.

You'll find soulfully happy people at the Midland Jazz Classic. The common bond is a flair for improvisation — order within the unpredictable.

People who pursue their interests enjoy themselves and others. Of course, that's nothing new, as is witnessed by the cliché "Birds of a feather flock together." If there were no mutual attraction, there would be no flock, no group, no gathering.

If you are a rock music fan and are loathe to listen to classical or Big Band swing music, you certainly don't show up at a Beethoven or Glenn Miller concert. That would be silly. If you like baroque but shun gospel music, you wouldn't show up at church sing-along convention. That wouldn't make sense.

If you are thrilled by browsing in a library or ferreting out the strange and singular in a museum, you do those things. You don't take a stroll in a shopping mall if you would rather be hiking or camping out.

You don't go fishing if you would rather be hunting.

If your interest is physics, had you rather play a flute or watch a gyro spin and contemplate why?

You don't go out with the guys when you had rather be with your best gal.

You don't spend your precious time being uncomfortable or miserable in a situation. Or do you?

The truth (certainly, not gospel) is that many people don't know how to be particular in many areas of their lives.

They may be in a career not best suited to their talents and interests. That happens over and over.

Indeed, why should a person be discontent, uncomfortable or bored even for one moment?

He shouldn't. Man's is blessed with a creative mind to free him of boredom and to enrich his life. He is given a choice of doing something or doing nothing to make his every moment an enrichment on earth. To waste a moment's time is slothful, and no person should want to steal from himself something that is forever irreplaceable — time.

Be particular. Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Howard Norris

SAN ANGELO — Howard McCain Norris, 58, of Ruidosa, nephew of Monte C. Mooney of Midland, died Wednesday in a San Angelo hospital from an apparent heart attack.

Services are pending at Marfa.

Norris was born in Coffman County, a veteran of World War II, he had retired recently from the State of California.

Other survivors include his wife, his mother, a sister and three children.

Martha B. Sevier

TALLULAH, La. — Services for Martha B. Sevier, 79, of Tallulah, mother of Richard P. Sevier of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Trinity Episcopal Church in Tallulah with the Rev. Tom Wade officiating. Burial will follow in the Silver Cross Cemetery directed by Crothers Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday in a Jackson, Miss., hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Sevier was a lifelong resident of Madison Parish and a retired selective service administrator for Madison Parish. She was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church.

Other survivors include her husband, W.P. Sevier Jr.; two daughters, Sherrill Pironne of Lexington, Ky.; Dorothy Elliott of El Dorado, Ark.; six grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers were to be R.C. Todd, Shields Bray, Carroll Reagan, Louis Nettles, Dr. Joseph Yerger and Henry C. Sevier Jr.

L.H. Burney

L.H. Burney, 48, of Midland died Tuesday from an apparent heart attack.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Friday in Kelview Heights Baptist Church with the Rev. Bill Skaggs officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

Burney was born Dec. 5, 1934, in Scurry County. He lived in Snyder for a number of years, moving 27 years ago to Midland. Burney had been with the Midland Police Department for 26 years. He currently was a patrol sergeant and a member of a law enforcement organization.

Survivors include his wife, Estelle of Midland; three stepsons, Jeffrey Ford, Michael Ford and Michael Barton, all of Midland; a daughter, Mary Phillips of Canada; four stepdaughters, Cathy Cannon of Waco, and Julie Ford, Carol Jan Fuller and Laree Barton, all of Midland; a brother, Birdwell Burney of Snyder; two sisters, Norma Jean Cumble and Billie Sewell, both of Snyder; and three grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Les Fine, Melvin Francis, Danny Neal, Ronnie Wilson, Roy Harrison and Ray Carpenter. Honorary pallbearers are the B shift of the Midland Police Department.

D. Rowbotham

Services for Doris Rowbotham, 60, of 105 S. Glenwood, are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Rowbotham died early this morning in a Midland hospital.

She was born Dec. 24, 1922, in Abilene, where she grew up. She married John Rowbotham Aug. 11, 1948. They lived in Abilene and several other cities before moving to Midland in 1948 from Fort Worth. She was a member of St. Paul's Methodist Church and the Eastern Star.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Gloria Day of Midland; two brothers, Thomas Watts of Abilene, and Jess Watts of Littlefield; a sister, Katherine Brady of Abilene; and three grandchildren.

C.M. Sloan

Graveside services for Christopher Michael Sloan, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Lee Sloan, 3109 Marie Lane, will be at 3 p.m. Friday in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born Tuesday and died in a Lubbock hospital later that day.

Other survivors include a sister, Elizabeth Paige Sloan of Midland; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Felipe Campos of San Antonio and Mrs. Edwin Sloan of San Antonio; and an uncle.

Gale Akins

SCOTT CITY, Kan. — A memorial service for Gale Akins, 23, of Midland, will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at First United Methodist Church in Scott City, directed by Weimann-Price Funeral Home.

He died Sept. 24 in a trucking accident near Odessa.

Akins was born Oct. 27, 1959, in Denver. He married Chrystal Jones Aug. 24, 1981, in Wichita, Kan. He served in the army from 1979-81 and was a commercial truck driver. He lived in Midland since March 1982.

Other survivors include a son, Stephen Eugene Akins of Midland; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Akins of Scott City; two sisters, Wanita Lickteig of Scott City and Sonya Ullom of Garden City, Kan.; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall of Scott City.

A memorial for the family has been established through the funeral home.

Ann Perkins

Services for Ann Perkins, 95, of 2007 Stanolind, will be at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. R. Boynton Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Perkins died early Wednesday morning following a lengthy illness.

She was born May 10, 1888, in Osborn, Miss. Her early life was spent in Centerville, Miss. She attended Belmont College, where she taught after graduation. She married Col. John Perkins in Starkville, Miss., in August 1913. They moved to Alpine in 1921 and resided there until 1936, when they moved to Midland. He died in 1976. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, the Daughters of American Revolution and the Wednesday Day Club of Midland.

Survivors include a son, John Perkins III, of Boerne; a daughter, Dell Stage of Fort Worth; two grandchild-

K. Marshall

Kenneth Marshall, 59, of 606 W. Watson St., died Wednesday at his home.

Services will be at 3:30 p.m. Friday in Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Milford Thomason, pastor of the Church of God, officiating. Military rites will be conducted by the American Legion in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Marshall was born June 21, 1924, in Muskogee, Okla. He spent his early life in Tusa, Okla., and served in the U.S. Navy in World War II. Marshall was discharged in 1945 and then served in the Korean Conflict. He moved to Midland in 1975.

Survivors include his mother, Nelene Marshall of Midland; three daughters, Robin Marshall, Heidi Earis and Martha Sorber, all of Denver; and two grandchildren.

Parkview gets physical therapy director

The Physical Therapy Department at Parkview Hospital, being upgraded to ensure a superior quality of patient care, will be directed by Dennis Dean, registered physical therapist.

Dean, who is in charge of the improvement program, has 12 years of experience in physical medicine. Licensed in 12 states, his area of expertise is musculo-skeletal problems. He is an employee of Physical Therapy Association of Wharton.

The priority of Parkview's department is pain management, according to Dean. Several types of equipment and manual therapy will be used as treatment for post-surgery patients and others suffering from pain.

Manual therapy is when the physical therapist manually moves the body and extremity joints that the patient is unable to move.

Seven other types of equipment and treatments also will be used in pain management, according to Dean.

Trans-cutaneous electrical nerve stimulation (TENS) is a technique where electrodes are placed on the skin and a mild electrical current, which helps relieve pain, is applied.

Electroacupuncture, or electrically charged neuroprobe, is similar to traditional acupuncture in that it uses the same pressure areas although the skin is not punctured.

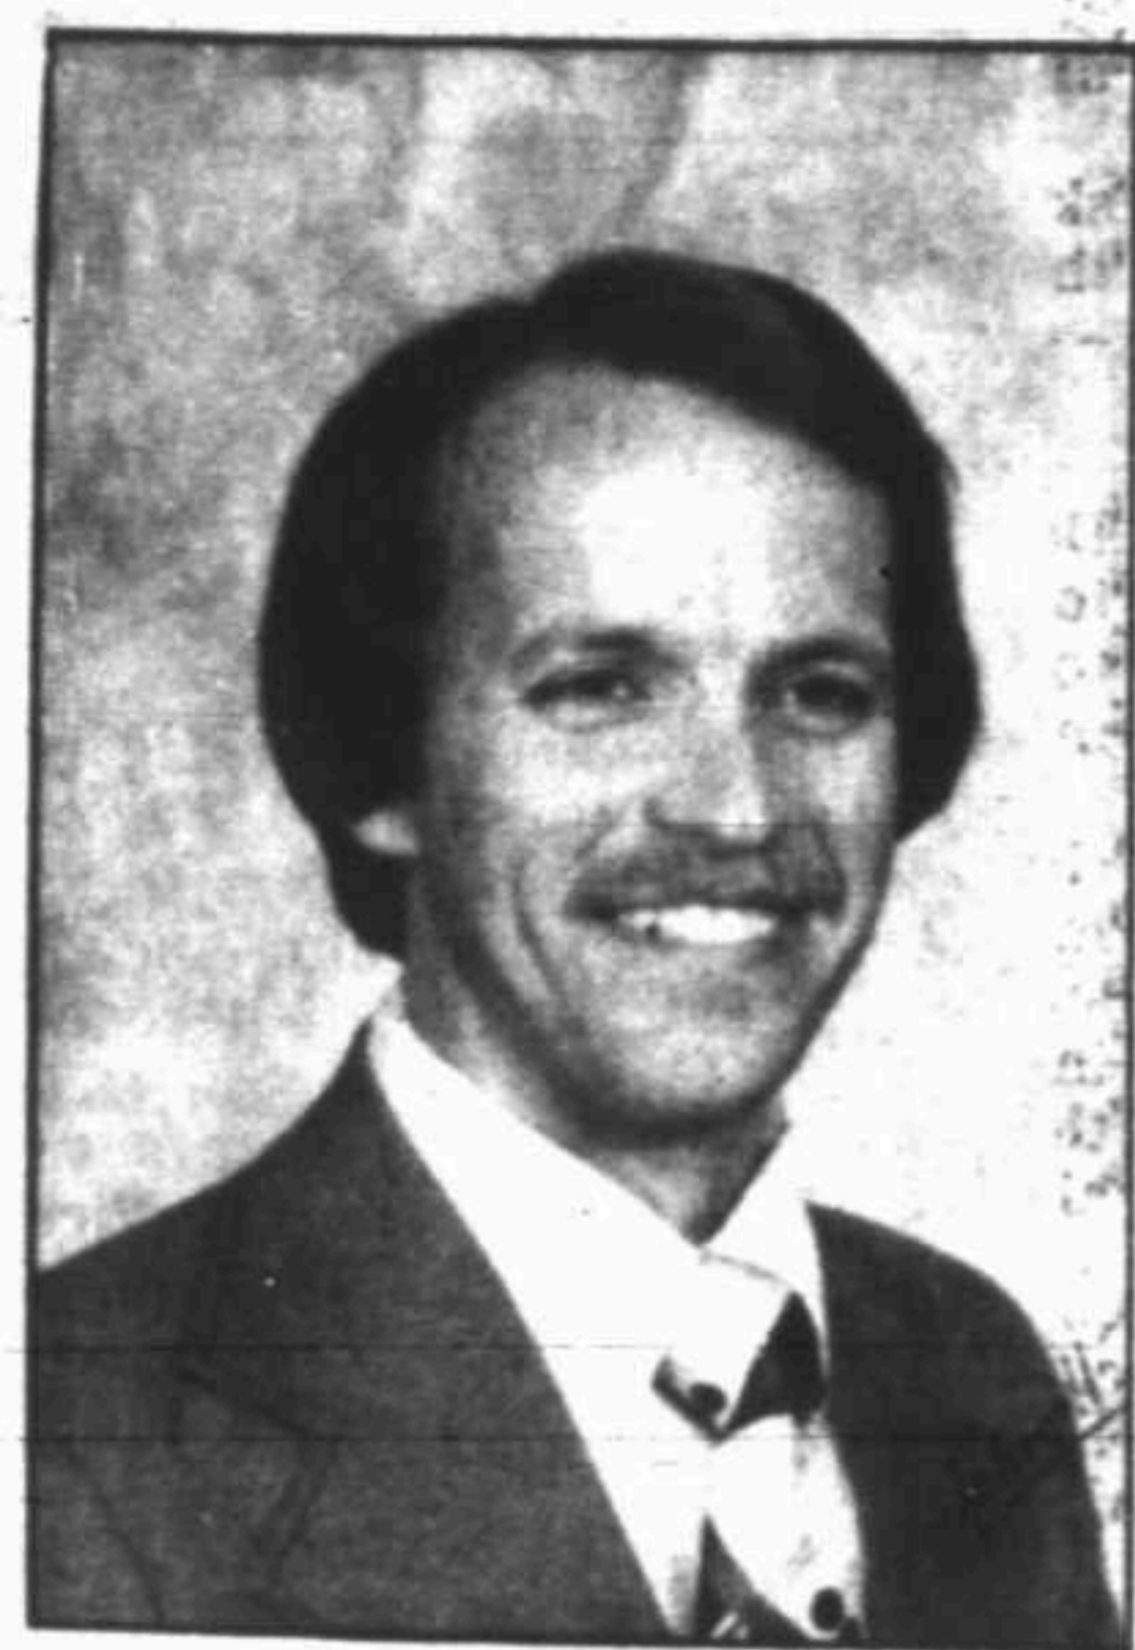

Cryotherapy, the use of cold, and heat therapy also will be available for the treatment of pain.

High voltage galvanic treatment will be used to decrease muscle spasms by flushing out lactic acid and other wastes that accumulate in muscle tissue.

The department also is fully equipped for orthopedic traction with new equipment purchased for about $2,500.

A "Russian Black Box," is used on isolated muscle-groups to increase muscle strength. A continuous passive motion machine is used for post-surgery knees and hips.

The new department also will have additional personnel, including a full-time and two part-time regis-terted physical therapists, in addition to Dean. A licensed physical therapy assistant also has been hired.

Dennis Dean

Of his banking tactics, he contended, "You might call us Barnum & Bailey bankers. We'll try anything to get new business and generate enthusiasm" including "Bonus Bucks" for employees that get business, a yearly auction and a loan officer client-calling program already started in Odessa.

Wright said his company will make FSBO an aggressive lender, customer-oriented and growth-oriented. Its parent company IBSI plans expansion because "we'd be foolish not to," but will be limited to West Texas. It will add banks in the medium $25-100 million deposit range.

"I'D MUCH RATHER come out to Odessa now than a year or two ago,"

Wright said. "Getting in at the low point, we see nothing but growth for this area. But if you get in while conditions are at their peak, you don't have much chance for growth," he said.

IBSI is a public company with $800 million in assets after its first acquisition and five others planned are fully integrated.

In the rebirth of a bank, FSBO took over the defunct NBO's assets — but did not get commercial loans or certain past-due installment loans. The commercial loans, a high percentage of them delinquent energy loans, will be reviewed over the next 30 days and FSBO can buy back any of the best ones from FDIC.

This type of loan — one made to a drilling, exploration, technical-service or other oil-related company that may have been a victim of the industry's boom-bust syndrome — has spelled trouble for area banks.

SENIOR OFFICERS at the time of failure were vice presidents, a title unusual for a bank the size of NBO, according to another official from the Abilene bank. FSBO, with all the personnel of the old bank, has an especially important decision to make in choosing a president-chief executive officer.

Brad Stephens, president of the holding company, will stay on as acting president until one is hired. "Someone with Permian Basin roots is desired," he said. "We've had applications already — but we're being very, very particular. We think the community deserves someone outstanding."

Odessa, Stephens said, is a solid economic base. "Some companies overexpanded, and even with a turnaround may not survive. There are always cases like that in a recession. But we've seen many customers this week with a solid financial base — that will take full advantage of the turnaround. I've seen credit information on people that are really deserving borrowers."

Stephens echoed Wright's belief that IBSI is better off entering this market now: "In 1980 and '81, the economy was so overheated here it was unhealthy."

IN PLEADING for mercy from the court, Ladd rhetorically asked Bunton "Why did I do what I did?" and blamed his embezzlement on "financial stress" from his first marriage and his use of alcoholic beverages, which "I just can't handle."

"My thinking was, perhaps, more clouded," he said, and noted that he has recognized that he's got a problem with alcohol and "no one is going to help me but me."

Ladd said he had been "dry" — without alcohol — for four weeks. Further, Ladd told the judge that he had cooperated with the FBI and the bank in investigations into his embezzlement and "made their job a little bit easier."

Ladd's attorney, Ruff Ahders, said Ladd today works for a new-car dealership, which employs him in a trust position and "completely recognizes his abilities in the financial range." Were he placed on probation, Ladd could make restitution, Ahders argued. He also produced several letters — in Ladd's behalf — from bankers and company presidents.

"Incarceration (of Ladd) is not going to help the bank and is not going to help society," Ahders said.

Mrs. Wells told the judge she would "like to apologize" for stealing the money and that she had "full intentions of paying back what I have taken. What I have done is against the law, and I am sorry."

Her attorney, Rendall, noted that Mrs. Wells "turned herself in" before she was accused of taking any money, which she used "to cover her house payment." Rendall suggested that "this account (from which she took the money) was so messed up" that the missing funds might have gone undetected had Mrs. Wells not confessed.

"This lady has been punished," Rendall said. "She has lost her job; she has been embarrassed" from the publicity arising from her action.

Said Bunton to Mrs. Wells: "You, like the gentleman (Ladd) who preceded you, betrayed a trust. They trusted you; you violated that trust."

IN HIS PLEA before the judge, Winter admitted "I did wrong, your honor... but I didn't really realize these were IRS agents at my door." The IRS had wanted to audit Winter's income and taxes.

His attorney, Edward Garza, said Winter's threats to the IRS and the assault was "a crime of emotion, of frustration, of impulsion... I don't believe he had any intent of carrying them (threats to shoot IRS agents) out." Garza said Winter was "protecting his home" when the assault occurred.

Garza said Winter was willing "to see the IRS to go over the deductions the way they should be gone over." He said his client had lived an "exemplary life," was 60 years old, and that he was a veteran of the 1941 Pearl Harbor attack.

The prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock, asked the court to set a sentence which would act as a deterrent "to everybody is trying to impress the court that 60 years is old," said Bunton, who noted that he had served in the military in World War II.

"If I learned anything in that war, you have to have respect for your government," said the judge. "You don't go around hitting your sergeant if you're mad at him."

"You've gone around with a chip on your shoulder, rightly or wrongly," Bunton told Winter. "Whether or not you were joking at the time you made the threats, I don't know. If it was, it was in poor taste; it was a poor joke."

Building blocks 'classic educational toys'

Copley News Service

It happens when the irresistible force of a child's imagination meets an inanimate object: creativity... action... learning. Instant growth. Give a child a toy to grow on, say the psychologists, and he'll be that much closer to achieving his potential as an adult.

Give him something you wind up and watch skitter across the floor until the battery dies or the child loses interest — whichever comes first — and you've got a removable object. Instant boredom.

"Learning starts from day one or earlier," says Dr. Marilyn Sloan, Ph.D. in psychology and director of product development for an educational toy company. "The earlier you intervene, the more the child will reach his potential."

Sloan, employed by Long Beachbased Toys To Grow On, suggests exposing children to toys at 3 months. She's talking about classic, creative toys such as blocks and dollhouses; she's not just talking about toys made by her company — but of the potential of many toys aid objects to become aids to children's growth.

"At 3 months," she says, "a child can look at colored blocks and imagine. By 18 months he can stack them. By 24 months, he may be building a house or pushing the blocks around like a train."

Building blocks — developed in the 1800s when educators realized that toys that stimulated learning represented a child's version of work — were the first educational toys, notes Sloan.

"They're still the classic educational toy, and my favorite. If you ask what to give a child from 2 to 6, I would give a set of blocks. When a child has his hands on something, he doesn't have to sit down and watch. He's involved. He's discovering."

"There is a trend in the toy industry back to the classics, to traditional toys, since video games took away the focus. There's nothing inherently wrong with video games or TV, but a steady diet of both is no good. They have a hypnotizing effect — the child doesn't want to do anything else."

The best toys, she says, are those that stimulate a child's mind, physical development and social interaction.

"Pac-Man," she says, "does involve the child physically to an extent. One thing it doesn't do is let the child decide. It programs him. Whereas with a construction toy, the child decides everything."

Building blocks are among the best toys for children, giving them an outlet for their imaginations and creativity to develop, say some psychologists.

Indians continue acorn ritual

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. (AP) — The small group had traveled hundreds of miles to keep a centuries-old ritual alive. The Apache Indians were here again, gathering acorns.

Most Arizonans view the oak tree as a source of shade from the hot sun; the acorns that fall from it are raked up and thrown away. But to the Apache Indians the acorns are a food.

"My great-grandma taught me how to gather acorns when I was about 4," Sally Antonio said. "We used to ride on horseback to get them."

in their family lives.

"There aren't many nuts this year," Mrs. Antonio said. "Two years ago my husband and I filled two gunnysacks a day." Each gunnysack holds about 150 pounds of nuts. This year they gathered about 250 pounds after two days of work.

The group carefully raked a small area of ground and then sat down to sort the good nuts from the bad, and from dirt, stones and other materials. The family spoke to each other in English and Apache as they worked. Dorothy, 3, and Talia, 4, the Robertsons' daughters, also speak Hopi, their father's language.

Mrs. Robertson pointed out that only the nuts that have already fallen could be gathered. "The nuts that are on the trees are still too green to use," she said. "We have to wait until they fall by themselves and then they have to be picked up soon after they fall from the trees."

New machine scans body magnetically

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Something was terribly wrong with Florence Garner, but physicians poring over X-rays of her brain weren't sure what the problem was. The 70-year-old woman's behavior had changed, and it was not the sort of problem that cajoling or therapy could cure.

The Garner family — not their real name — agreed to let her physician try an experimental scanner being explored by University of California-San Francisco scientists in a warehouse-turned-laboratory near here. Garner spent 30 minutes in the cramped barrel of a magnetic resonance imager, enabling her physician to see clearly what had been nearly invisible in the X-ray: a pool of blood had collected around her brain. Once identified, the problem was treated.

WITHIN THE next few months, stories like Garner's will be routine. The biggest technological revolution in medicine since the X-ray CT scanner may be about to happen, bringing ever better diagnoses at ever higher prices. The device comes with a $1.5 million price tag and substantial installation costs.

For the past two years, researchers at UCSF have been studying cases like Garner's to learn how to interpret the wealth of information the new scanner produces. This week, UCSF's program will begin to move out of the warehouse, where there are two of the machines, and into the campus' new Joseph M. Long hospital. UCSF's third magnetic imaging machine is part of the new facility.

TESTS ON the imagers are considered experimental until the Food and Drug Administration gives final approval to the machine, which was jointly designed by Diasonics Inc. and UCSF radiologists. Final government approval is expected within the next two months, and, despite the cost, industry observers expect 60 hospitals to have machines of their own within a year.

MAGNETIC imaging and X-ray CT (computer tomography) scans both produce pictures of the human body in cross-section.

DEAR ABBY

Third time no charm for fiance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last December I married a man who told me that he had been married once before. (It was my second marriage.) We had a small wedding with only family members from both sides.

While he was courting me, several of my friends told me that he was still married, and when I asked him about it, he denied it emphatically.

Three weeks ago, I learned quite by accident that my husband had been married THREE times before he married me — also that his divorce from his third wife was not final until two months after he married me! When I confronted him with the evidence, he admitted it, and said he didn't realize that his divorce was not final until after he received his divorce papers in the mail. When I asked him why he didn't tell me as soon as he found out, he said he had been waiting for the right moment. (This was months ago, and he had never found the "right moment.") I have caught him in several other lies, but none was as important as this one.

Now he wants to marry me again to make it legal. Should I marry him again? I don't think I can trust him. How does one go about rebuilding trust? — HAVING MY DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Don't marry him until you are sure beyond a shadow of a doubt that you can trust him. It is HIS job to prove by his actions that he is trustworthy.

I know "One swallow does not a summer make," but two undisclosed marriages are a lot for you to swallow.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are expecting our first child in three months, and my problem is that we have both kept our own last names (which are rather lengthy) and now we don't know which surname to give our child. Both my husband and my in-laws think he should have his father's name, but that doesn't seem quite right. Nor does it seem fair to give our child my surname. (I have had amniocentesis, so we know the child is male.)

We've considered combining our names, but that would make for a 20-letter last name!

If you have advised others in this predicament, how did you handle it? — DUE IN THREE MONTHS

DEAR DUE: Since it is customary in this country for a legitimate child to take his father's surname, I would recommend that the mother utilize her surname as her child's first or middle name. Example:
Mother: Janet Bronstein
Father: Peter Clarkson
Child: Bronstein Clarkson or John Bronstein Clarkson.

AT WIT'S END

New underwear often necessary

By ERMA BOMBECK

There are several occasions in a person's life where new underwear is an absolute must.

And if you have to ask what they are, don't you even dare call yourself a mother.

Anything that has a new beginning is given status by new underwear. For instance, I have never known anyone personally who would consider marriage without buying new undergarments for each day of the honeymoon.

And who among us would have the courage to climb into a car on the first day of a family vacation unless everyone was wearing new? Even if you have the safest driver in the world, you're asking for it.

Probably the one clean underwear rule that baffles mothers everywhere is why do children have to have new underwear on the first day of school?

If you want to be simplistic about it, you can figure your mother dressed you in new underwear on the first day of school and you turned out to be a wonderful person, so why should you deprive your child of all the benefits?

But there is a deeper meaning. New underwear is cheap insurance against anything that can possibly go wrong on the first day of school.

Have you ever seen kids in brand new underwear who hang from their feet on the gym set? Of course not! The only ones who go public with their panties are little girls wearing raggy, dingy briefs with a pin holding the waistband together.

And what about the shy schoolgirl who stuffs her entire dress into her mouth? Ever see her underwear? I wouldn't dust the andirons with them.

And we all know who has an accident in which the final score is bladder: 2; restroom: 0. It's the boy who grabbed his father's boxer shorts and has a belt around them to hold them up.

You show me a kid in new underwear and I'll show you a kid with his knees together and his feet on the floor.

A child learns faster in new underwear, sits up straighter, has fewer cavities, eats a more nutritious lunch, is more courteous, can jump higher, is more aware of world peace and is usually more successful in life.

The status of what new underwear can do for them carries over into adulthood. Why, don't tell me that the astronauts don't still have the labels in their undergarments, or Olympians don't break the seal on their Fruit of the Looms, or Tom Jones doesn't wear new for protection against splitting pants.

I'm such a believer in the new underwear theory that on the first day of school for my kids, I even wore new underwear.

Old ship home to elderly women

LaBELLE, Fla. (AP) — A shuttle vessel built to take J.P. Morgan Jr. to his Wall Street offices early this century, now moored along an isolated stretch of the Caloosahatchee River, has been home to two sisters for more than 40 years.

Most townspeople in this Southwest Florida farming area are unaware of the 114-foot, 75-ton motor vessel Navette, or of Marjorie and Dorothy Warren, who have rarely lived ashore during their lifetimes.

Hidden behind the high ground where the women's 78-year-old brother, George, owns a trailer park, the once-elegant ship is almost obscured by the river bank thick with palmetto and bamboo.

Its paint gone, the luster of teak decks and brass fittings dulled by years of neglect, the Navette still sits straight in the water and is linked to shore by a rickety wooden gangplank.

The sisters live in the aft, in what originally was a large, open lounge area. It's enclosed now with a makeshift wooden roof, and entrance to their living quarters is made through a narrow opening on each side of the ship.

With only a 14-foot beam, the vessel has little room to move about. This is compounded by the clutter of books, papers, pictures and dusty memorabilia the sisters have collected over the years.

Just forward of the living quarters are a dining saloon, small galley, bathroom, staterooms for the captain and chief engineer, and sleeping quarters for the other eight crew members who manned the ship when Morgan had it built in 1917 to shuttle him from his Long Island mansion to lower Manhattan.

Visitors aren't invited up forward because that part of the ship is no longer in use. Not only that, "it's filled with things," Marjorie admits.

"Everyone asks us why we don't leave the Navette and move ashore," says Marjorie, relaxing on her bunk. "Why should we leave? This is our home."

The women enjoy telling visitors about their lives spent aboard ships in the 100-150 foot range with their engineer, scientist, master mariner father, Edward C. Warren, who invented a rotary steam engine in 1904.

"We owned and lived on large ships because that was how the skipper (their father) developed and demonstrated his engines. They were his laboratories," recalls Marjorie. His work took the family to numerous ports on both coasts of the United States and Canada, where sometimes they would live for years.

"When we were small we sometimes lived in big houses and had governesses and private teachers," says Dorothy, 73.

Neither woman ever married. Marjorie, who prefers not to disclose her age, says with a smile, "I've always been too busy, but I came close a few times."

Slender and frail in appearance, the two are self-sufficient. Marjorie makes whatever repairs are needed to keep Navette afloat.

The Navette was in dry dock when the Warrens purchased it in 1938. Warren readied it for sea and the family headed south.

"We hadn't planned to come to Florida, just somewhere south," recalls Marjorie. It took several years to reach the Sunshine State as the family spent time in various Atlantic ports. They reached Fort Myers in 1949 and moved the Navette to its present mooring in 1954.

Marjorie began writing poetry in 1960, the year their father died aboard the Navette. Their mother had died two years before. Brother George married in the meantime and built the trailer court on property they own here.

"In 1963, I sent for a printing press and began publishing my books," says Dorothy. She has finished seven, including a science fiction one she wrote with her nephew, David Warren.

Job tardiness symptom of problems with workplace, psychologist says

Hearst Feature Service

Various psychologists suggest that lateness on a job that requires timeliness often represents a resistance to management or a clue that there are more serious problems — such as substance abuse, depression, or both — that need to be addressed.

But, says psychologist

Richard Barthol, an associate professor at the University of California-Los Angeles, "Tardiness is not something to be looked at only as a psychological problem for the individual employee. When it is pervasive, you can expect there to be real reasons in the workplace."

Barthol, who was called in as a consultant to General Telephone several years ago to help the company deal with absenteeism and tardiness, adds, "It can be a strong sign that there is a need for change." Recounting his experience there, Barthol recalls, "It didn't take a psychologist to see why the operators were unhappy. They were being demeaned by their superiors."

Among the "demeaning" practices that contributed to bad morale, Barthol says, was the "policing" of operators by their superiors, who would walk up and down behind the row of women workers and point to unanswered lights. There also were complaints about the random assignment of holiday work. "We solved that by allowing the staff to sign up to work holidays and it worked like a charm," Barthol says.

Video game scholarship offered

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — "Johnny, come inside this minute. It's time to practice your Demon Attack!"

This may sound like something from a kid's daydream, but parents all across the country soon may be urging their kids to spend more time practicing their video skills.

The reason: a big pay-off in some young joystick jockey's future — a four-year, all-expense-paid college scholarship.

The prize for video virtuosity is the brain child of William von Meister, founder and president of CVC, a video company that recently introduced GameLine, a subscription service that allows owners of Atari VCS and other compatible units (and there are some 12-15 million such units in the U.S.) access to a central computer library of hundreds of video games on a pay-per-play basis.

Von Meister's contest, with its extraordinary grand prize begins today, (Saturday, Oct. 1). Game-

Line's 3,000 subscribers nationwide have been polishing their skills since the system was first introduced last June. There will be three regional playoffs each year, with winners competing in the World Video Game Championship. And, no matter how young the winner, his or her scholarship is guaranteed.

In a world seemingly glutted with more and more video games and computer gimmicks CVC's system stands out for two reasons: the first, quite obviously, is the promise of the major prize. The second is von Meister's uniquely designed Master Module, the "black box" that not only makes the whole system work but, he argues, makes it work better than all the others.

Several flaws mar symphony's opening concert

ENTERTAINMENT

Given the perspective time allows, it is difficult to imagine why the London Times referred to Polish-born composer Frederic Chopin's "total output" as "excruciating cacophony."

This comment was one among many enlightening ones made Tuesday night by pianist Robert Guralnik in his "Chopin Lives" presentation during the Midland-Odesa Symphony's opening concert of the 1983-84 season.

Guralnik combines concert and theater in a scripted recital-mono-drama which carries audience members back to the 19th century and places them in a recital performed by Chopin.

Playing the role of Chopin, Guralnik talks about his nervousness performing before a large audience, his rivals, especially Franz Liszt, and his love of his homeland. It is in this discussion that his fear of having failed Poland comes through.

"I never considered myself the John Baptist of Polish music," says Guralnik in his role as Chopin.

He also answers the London Times quote by telling how Chopin feels about critics and composers. "The relationship of a critic to a composer is exactly that of a pigeon to a statue."

However, what is not clear during his discussion is who is the woman in Chopin's life he (Guralnik) talks about. She "more than any other woman knew how to listen to my music," perhaps "because she was Polish," and was "the only one I (Chopin) considered having children with." The affair lasted three years.

The woman he's referring to wasn't George Sand (pen name of French novelist Amantine Lucile Aurore Dupin). The two had a well-known love affair; one which spanned 10 years and ended with a quarrel in 1847.

In fact, Guralnik makes no mention of this famous love affair.

It may have been in the sections cut to accommodate the works he played with the symphony — "Grand Polonaise Brilliant," Opus 22, the second movement of Concerto in F minor and the third movement of Concerto in E minor.

Although Chopin wrote several pieces for piano and orchestra, his fame rests almost entirely on his more than 200 compositions for solo piano. It is around this body of work that Guralnik, and his director, Harold Guskin, designed "Chopin Lives." In his usual presentation, Guralnik comes onstage dressed as Chopin and recreates in dialogue and performance the ambience of a 19th century soiree. No orchestra is involved.

Guralnik says in his role as Chopin, "As a composer, I have never fooled myself; Bach and Mozart ruled over all musical creation, but I have only the keyboard in my head. I think it best to do just a little, but to do that the best possible."

Tuesday's concert had several flaws. Perhaps the altered script was one of them. It might have been more dynamic had Guralnik performed alone. He then could have played more of the solo piano pieces, the work Chopin felt he was a master at composing.

However, the symphony's philosophy is that it presents, in its subscription series, symphonic or choral works and not recital programs.

Since that is the case, perhaps the orchestral works could have been played at the beginning, in the middle and at the end instead of beginning and end. By the time the orchestra played the two works at the concert's close, several players seemed to be snoozing.

But, the major difficulty was the length of the performance.

The symphony, directed by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt (the symphony's musical director and conductor), opened with "Scheherazade," Opus 35, by Rimsky-Korsakoff. This full scale work was beautifully executed by the symphony, but it upstaged the guest artist.

This is no reflection on the solos which were competently played. (Soloists were Eugene Purdue, Jeffrey Levenson, Julie Paarmann Stolt, John Fairlie, Jessica Lancaster, Marjory Jennings, Gregory Phillips, Thomas Fairlie, David Scianella and Carol Short.)

It was the programming which left much to be desired. When the symphony performs with a guest artist, the concert needs to be designed around the artist, and not the other way around.

Intermission came around 8:45 p.m. and the second half didn't begin until 9:10 p.m. (to allow time to bring the Steinway grand on stage). By the time Guralnik finished at a little after 10 p.m., the audience was ready to leave.

His low-keyed presentation was informative and he clearly demonstrated his expertise at performing Chopin while pretending to be the composer. At times, he talked confidentially to the audience while playing and never missed a beat.

But the "Scheherazade" plus nine selections (some were fragments) by Chopin were too much for one sitting.

New movies reveal actress' broad range

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — In the late 1960s, Actress Mary Steenburgen was, in her own words, "one of the first hippies in Arkansas." By the mid-1970s, she was a struggling actress in New York, waiting on tables to pay the rent.

Now, in the early 1980s, she has an Oscar (for "Melvin and Howard"), a husband (actor Malcolm McDowell), two young children (Charlie, 9 months, and Lily, two), and starring roles in two major fall movies ("Cross Creek" and "Romantic Comedy").

The unveiling of these two films at virtually the same time underscores Miss Steenburgen's impressive range. She has already been compared to such actresses as Jean Arthur, Judy Holliday, and Jennifer Jones. She wryly observes: "Every time I do a film, they compare me to somebody else."

Directed by Martin Ritt, "Cross Creek" brings to the screen the true-life story of Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings. The author left a comfortable life with her husband in the late 1920s and moved alone to a backwoods area of Florida in order to pursue her dream of writing. Miss Steenburgen stars as Rawlings — whom she describes as "tough and vulnerable at the same time" — while McDowell appears briefly as literary editor Maxwell Perkins.

The screenplay appealed to Miss Steenburgen partly because of her great respect for the feisty Rawlings. "She was amazingly determined to be the best writer she could be. For her, it took a lot of blood and guts to get her writing out. I think she was selfish in a way, and I don't think that's necessarily a bad thing."

While "Cross Creek" showcases Miss Steenburgen's gifts in a serious dramatic role, her comedic talents will soon be on display in "Romantic Comedy." She and Dudley Moore portray playwrights who work as collaborators but are "victims of unsynchronized passion." Whenever he's married, she's single, and vice versa.

Miss Steenburgen speaks fondly of growing up in North Little Rock, Arkansas. She was an avid reader while young, but also a tomboy who spent hours climbing trees. The actress loved being young in the 1960s, which she remembers as "a great time to be a teenager."

'Shrew' on stage at Theatre Two

William Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" is on stage in Theatre Two at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Borrowing heavily from the Italian "commedia dell'arte," Shakespeare fills "The Taming of the Shrew" with funny stock characters, such as the ancient, lecherous wooer, the inept pantaloon, the domineering but ineffectual father and several wily, crafty servants.

Midland Community Theatre's production is being presented in the "commedia" style, complete with acrobats, jugglers, clowns and a singing dog. The cast of 17 features newcomer Tony Condit as Petruchio, and Marguerite Keane, last seen in "The Good Doctor," as Kate.

Darrell Ward, John Phillips, Jess Kozman, Carl Howell and Jerry Green, all MCT veterans, appear as fathers, lechers and servants. David Hiding, Dianne Brown, Toni Botary, Clint Galloway and Scott Inness play pantaloons, lovers and clowns. Newcomers Ben Fly, Stan Williams, Andy Prokopeak, Neal Allen and Josh Jones portray suitors, retainers, pedants and jesters.

The production is directed by Ted Strickland, assistant director at MCT. Set design is by Brett Batterson. Stage managers are Marilyn Allen and Sally Mogford.

Production closes Oct. 15. Reservations may be made by calling Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

Woman's Club to hold exhibit for local artist

The Woman's Club of Midland is having an art exhibit this month featuring the works of local artist Dolye Neal Ballenger.

The show includes over 30 impressionist works. Ms. Ballenger has had over 30 one-man shows throughout Texas and New Mexico.

The show may be viewed Monday-Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Woman's Club is located on the Hogan Park road.

Melvin's attorney says drug charges 'untrue'

MAYS LANDING, N.J. (AP) — An attorney for soul singer Harold Melvin says the drug charges against him are "absolutely untrue" and he will plead innocent at his arraignment.

The 44-year-old Melvin and three members of his Blue Notes entourage were among 10 people indicted on drug charges after a police raid Aug. 7 at two Atlantic City hotel suites, officials said Wednesday.

Are drive-ins cruising to oblivion?

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer

When Preston Henn closed his Airport 9 Drive-In in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., last year, he went out with a program that included "The Last Picture Show," "Gone With The Wind" and "Things Are Tough All Over."

Henn said he sold the 30-acre property, which boasted nine screens along busy U.S. 1, for $4.6 million to Broward County, which will use the land to expand the nearby Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport.

The end of Airport 9 is not unique. America's 50-year love affair with back-seat "movie-watching" is on the wane, battered by cable television, bad weather, video arcades and increasingly sophisticated movie audiences that want the Dolby stereo and 70mm screens offered only in indoor theaters.

"The drive-in is the buggy whip of the motion picture industry and ultimately headed for extinction," said Sumner Redstone, president of Boston-based National Amusements Inc., which operates 55 outdoor screens.

Redstone, whose company has been converting its drive-ins to multi-screen walk-in theaters, said, "There is not a single drive-in we would like to preserve, notwithstanding our emotional attachment to the drive-in business."

Drive-ins began in June 1933 when Richard Hollingshead opened the first outdoor theater in Camden, N.J., to appease smokers and others who wanted to be able to eat and talk during a movie.

The business grew slowly, with outdoor screens numbering just 10 nationwide by 1939. But post-World War II demand swelled the total to 3,775 by 1954 as returning veterans and well-wheeled teen-agers discovered that the local drive-in was a cheap place to avoid parental scrutiny.

Drive-ins peaked at 4,063 in 1958 before the decline began, according to the National Association of Theater Owners. As of June, 2,935 drive-ins remain, primarily in the South and Southwest where weather allows nearly year-round seasons.

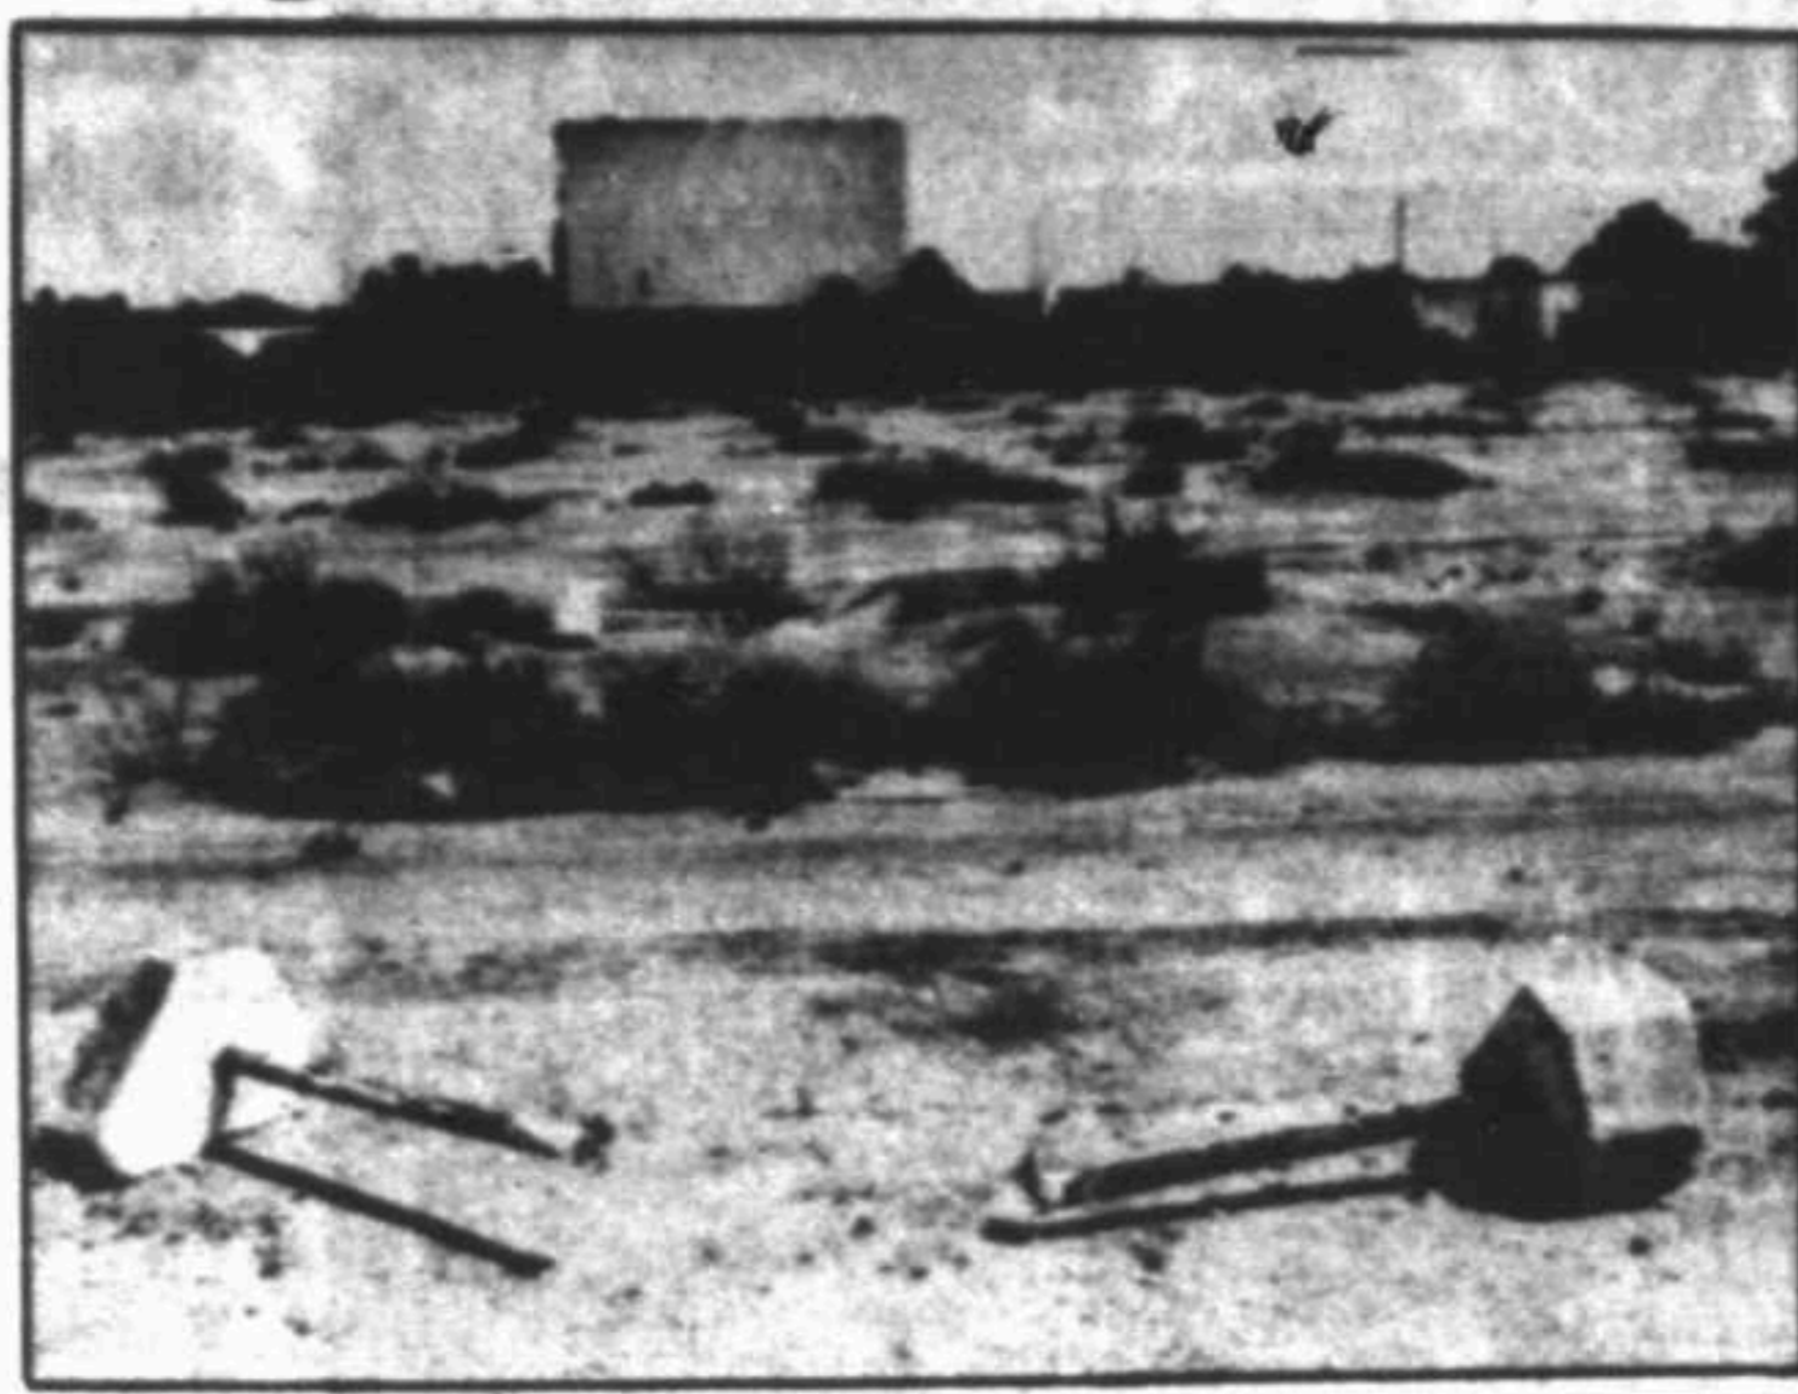

"The novelty of the drive-in has long since worn off," said A. Alan Friedberg, former National Association chairman and head of Sack Theaters in Boston.

"With an audience that is increasingly sophisticated, you will find that every audience wants the proper presentation for a film and no longer looks to the drive-in as it used to be a cheap motel," Friedberg said, noting that drive-ins once were "a locus for, shall we say, amorous activity."

"With a much more permissive society that has developed over the past number of years, the significance of the drive-in in that area has diminished," Friedberg said.

Friedberg said that even such drive-in staples as exploitation and R-rated sex films are becoming increasingly less popular.

"The focus of the industry, more and more, has turned away from sex, away even from violence and more to the special effects film," said Friedberg, adding that drive-ins can't compete technologically with indoor theaters.

Speaker poles litter the ground and grass grows high at this vacant drive-in movie theater in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

"We haven't thought of the drive-in market for years," said film producer Brandon Chase, who made millions on the drive-in circuit with such movies as "The Giant Spider Invasion."

Universal Pictures Vice President and Sales Manager Bill Soady said drive-ins accounted for 21 percent of Universal's business in 1971. In 1982 that percentage was 4.4 percent, he said.

But at least one theater chain is bucking the trend. Los Angeles-based Pacific Theaters, which operates both indoor and outdoor theaters, has more than 120 drive-in screens in California, Washington, Oregon, Arizona and Hawaii. Pacific, which claims to be the world's largest drive-in theater operator, enjoyed its best year ever in 1982, Pacific Vice President Robert Selig said.

"We are not only thriving at the box office, but we also are in the throes of a rather spectacular technological upgrading," Selig said. Pacific plans to install "treadmills" to carry customers to and from snack bars, as well as new containment screens that will be much brighter and will keep drive-in neighbors from getting free, or in the case of R-rated films, unwanted peeks at the screen.

For several years, Pacific has offered high-fidelity audio feeds at its drive-ins capable of delivering stereophonic movie soundtracks to car stereo systems.

'Sexist' robot removed from hall

PORT COSTA, Calif. (AP) — A leggy robot described as a "silent coffeepot with very large breasts" has been yanked from a display at a gala commemorating the 15th anniversary of the university's Lawrence Hall of Science.

Sweetheart the robot stands 5 feet tall and wears a tutu around the giant coffee urn that serves as her body. She makes a great cup of coffee, according to her creator, sculptor Clayton Bailey.

"This is my idea of what a pretty female robot should look like," Bailey said of Sweetheart, one of three robots he displayed last week at a gala commemorating the 15th anniversary of the university's Lawrence Hall of Science.

But three days later, the perky percolator was removed for the start of the public celebration.

"I was told that that the robot was deemed inappropriate, grotesque and sexist," Bailey said. "I heard that some sort of feminist-radical group had signed petitions demanding that it not be shown."

After he complained, Bailey said, Sweetheart was put back on display but was removed again within an hour because of "public reaction."

"The decision was mine alone," said Robert Knox, deputy director of Lawrence Hall. "Some people were personally offended to think someone would degrade womanhood by showing a silent coffeepot with very large breasts."

Knox noted that thousands of children visit the science hall, adding, "The potential for offense, coupled with the fact that it did not significantly contribute to the mission of the hall, made me act in a fail-safe manner."

But Bailey, an art professor at Cal State-Hayward who has long specialized in comic art and took up creative robotics about four years ago, believes the hall is being unfair. "I feel that these people have censored this, and this is not what a scientific teaching institution should be allowing to happen," he said.

Iowa farmers reap harvest of prehistoric Indian artifacts

WAPELLO, Iowa (AP) — Farmers have pulled Indian artifacts from the plowed soil near here for decades, but archeologists are just now beginning to scratch below the surface for signs of people who inhabited this rich Mississippi River area 2,500 years ago.

The farmers in this Louisa County flood plain will probably always have the better of the two collections of artifacts, the archeologists concede. But it is the archeologists who will meticulously dig beneath the level of dirt turned by years of plowing to the undisturbed soil below and who will know what it all means, said Jim Charlier, assistant director of project planning for the Iowa Department of Transportation.

"You can find arrowheads all over Louisa County and when we're done here, we won't have as good a collection as some of the farmers around here. But what we're interested in is context. That's the only way we're ever going to start learning more about these (prehistoric) people," he said.

Charlier, whose background is in management, became involved in archeology when the federal government approved funds to finish construction of the Great River Road, a recreational road that skirts the Mississippi River from Louisiana to Minnesota.

The way the Great River Road project is written, Iowa officials were compelled to assess the historical value of the area surrounding the river before receiving 75 percent federal funding to relocate a one-mile stretch of the roadway through central Louisa County.

The findings in the four sites examined so far have been "significant but not flashy," said Mike Finn, field director of the project.

For example, digging down just 40 inches in one site in the river's flood plain has yielded "a fair amount of tools — scrapers, knives, drills, arrowheads, this kind of thing," Finn said.

The shape and size of the tools has led Finn to believe that the makers were Indians of the late Woodland period — meaning that Louisa County was populated by at least 500 B.C.

Pottery corresponding to similar ceramics pulled from Illinois sites and dated to between 1000 and 500 B.C. also has been unearthed, Finn said.

Also pulled from the flood plain site were deer bones and clamshells, giving the archeologists further clues to the late Woodland culture.

"Small groups of people were definitely here in the summer or spring. The clamshells tell us that — they certainly weren't digging them out of frozen water," Finn said.

But the flood plain sites have been disappointing in many ways, he said. The archeologists have evidence that a nearby creek flooded many times during the past several thousand years, disturbing the layers of ground that hold the artifacts.

The sites on higher ground also have been trying, Finn said. The acid soil of one site has destroyed all organic matter that might have been dated and a second, potentially rich site has been disturbed by a farmer's plow.

Janitor substitutes for teacher

DETROIT (AP) — Andrew Ransom showed up at Redford High School ready to heft a broom and get to work as a substitute janitor. Instead, school officials sent him to substitute for a social studies teacher — which he did for an entire day without anyone noticing the error.

"It really happened," said Joseph Madej, an economics teacher, referring to the Sept. 27 incident at the school in suburban Detroit. "The department head couldn't figure out why he asked her, 'Do you need anything cleaned?' She just sent him to class. At the end of the day, we heard he wanted to come back again."

"It was a one-in-a-million incident," principal Walter Adams said earlier this week. "It has never happened before in my 30 years with the school board."

Ransom reported to the main office instead of to the head custodian, Adams said. Ransom told Adams' secretary, Joyce Sutherland, that he was a substitute, and she sent him to Viola Chambers, head of the department of interdisciplinary studies.

Ms. Chambers gave Ransom a lesson plan and sent him to a pair of social studies classes and two study halls, Adams said.

When the school day was over, Ransom told Mrs. Sutherland that he was really a janitor, the principal said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Rheumatoid arthritis symptoms listed

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that every ache and pain doesn't mean that a person has rheumatoid arthritis, but people with rheumatoid arthritis do have aches and pains. How can a person tell if he has it? — Dave, Albany, N.Y.

Dear Dave: Dr. Bevra H. Hahn, of Washington University School of Medicine, lists six criteria for rheumatoid arthritis. They include pain, often severe and accompanied by swelling of one or more joints that lasts for more than six weeks; morning stiffness that lasts for an hour or more; symptoms such as weight loss and fatigue; the involvement of similar joints on both sides of the body; lumps beneath the skin, often near or just below the elbow; and joint deformity.

A person who has any three of these signs and symptoms should see a physician, Dr. Hahn says. They do not necessarily mean that the person has rheumatoid arthritis, but they do indicate a need for a complete evaluation.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My nine-year-old son started wetting the bed again shortly after my husband was transferred to a new job and we had to move to another state. Can the two things be connected? — Mrs. F.G., East Orange, N.J.

Dear Mrs. G.: A variety of stresses can cause enuresis (bed wetting), in a child, and the move to a new state, and the need to adjust to a new school and to make new friends are among them. I suggest you advise your pediatrician of the situation. The condition may resolve spontaneously or your physician might suggest pharmacologic treatment or, possibly, a psychiatric referral, assuming that organic causes are ruled out.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When could a woman say that she has had her menopause? — Mrs. M.T., Toledo, Ohio

Dear Mrs. T.: Dr. Irving C. Bernstein, of the University of Minnesota Medical School in Minneapolis, points out that the term "menopause" is described retrospectively; that is, it is described after the fact. A woman may say that the menopause has occurred after she has gone a year without menstruating.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that cancer can spread inside the body. But does it ever spread from inside the body to the skin? — Mr. J.J.K., Flint, Mich.

Dear Mr. K.: It is possible for cancer to metastasize from an internal malignancy to the skin, especially if the skin has been damaged by some trauma, including radiation. Occasionally the presence of an internal malignancy first becomes known when the patient seeks medical treatment for a skin cancer.

If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Florida city has distinctive aroma

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Image problems for cities come in all shapes and kinds — from crime rates to smog. But in Jacksonville the complaint is that, well, the city stinks.

"Jacksonville is not alone when it comes to odors, but it is probably the city in the state with the most types of smells," said Steve Smallwood, chief of air quality management for the state Department of Environmental Regulation.

Last year, the city received 622 air-pollution complaints and 418 were related to odors, said Wayne Tutt, an engineer.

What's making the stink? The local paper industry and spinoff firms release a variety of sulfurous smells, Tutt said. There's also a large organic chemical plant.

Police attack anti-government protestors

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Riot police using tear gas, plastic bullets, clubs and water cannon attacked thousands of young people when they left an anti-government rally and marched toward President Augusto Pinochet's office.

At least 5,000 university students and other young activists crowded into a two-block area Wednesday night for three hours of folk music and speeches demanding replacement of Pinochet's military regime by a provisional government that would call elections within 18 months.

The rally, organized by Christian Democratic, Socialist and Communist youth groups, was permitted under a month-old political liberalization program started by Pinochet after a series of protests over high unemployment and a lack of political freedoms.

It was the second police attack this week against demonstrators demanding an end to Pinochet's 10-year rule.

Among those speaking from a flatbed truck was Eduardo Valencia, a young Communist wanted by the government for leading an illegal land takeover last month by thousands of slum dwellers needing housing.

Afterward, bodyguards whisked Valencia to seclusion, creating a minor disturbance because many in the crowd thought he was being arrested by government agents.

The event was generally festive and orderly until the end, when police with helmets and plastic shields attacked both sides of the main column moving toward Pinochet's office, five blocks away. Some youths were chanting "He's going to fall," but it was not clear what prompted the police to act.

As gunfire and gas canisters popped, demonstrators ran in all directions, some shouting "assassins" at small bands of pursuing policemen. A few youths threw rocks during the half-hour melee while rally organizers appealed for calm over a loudspeaker system.

Two people were seen bleeding from pellet wounds and several others from beatings. An undetermined number of people were arrested. Police said a traffic policeman was cut on the head by a thrown rock.

On Tuesday night, police arrested 40 members of the Copper Workers Confederation and beat scores of others when they arrived in Santiago for a march the government had authorized for Wednesday. The march was later banned.

After threatening to defy the ban, leaders of the 22,000-member union backed away from a new confrontation with police. Instead, about 150 union activists arrived in taxis to take part in Wednesday night's rally.

The miners were among 521 fired for an illegal two-day strike against the state copper company in June to protest the arrest of union president Rodolfo Seguel, a key figure in a five-month protest movement against Pinochet.

Prospect of default recedes

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — An appeals court has stripped a local judge of jurisdiction in a case involving Argentina's huge foreign debt and the judge freed the government's top banker from jail, easing fears the nation would soon default.

The Federal Appeals Court in Comodoro Rivadavia, 1,100 miles south of here, agreed Wednesday to consider the government's appeal of Judge Federico Pinto Kramer's order to suspend negotiations on part of Argentina's $40 billion foreign debt.

Enrique Billote, president of the appeals court, told the official Argentine news agency Telam the appeal by the executive branch was "well-founded" and that Pinto Kramer's order was "an offense" to the executive.

but held up by the judge's action.

The army — the power behind the 7-year-old military regime — then delivered an indirect but scathing attack on the "irresponsible actions" of Pinto Kramer and repeated a promise by Argentina's president that the nation would fulfill its financial commitments and that general elections would be held on schedule Oct. 30.

"This action with the intent to undermine (the transition to civilian rule) has brought the country to one of the most critical economic situations in its history with regard to the international community," an army communique said.

The newspaper Clarin said President Reynaldo Bignone had told the military regime he would quit before the elections if Pinto Kramer successfully blocked the debt renegotiations.

Youths arrested at academy

PEKING (AP) — More than 100 young workers have been arrested at the Academy of Sciences for operating a pornography network, selling obscene videotapes and having nude dancing parties, Chinese sources report.

Those arrested reportedly included young workers in factories and laboratories at the academy and youths whose parents are staffers or leaders at the academy, in a suburban district of Peking.

The mass arrests in a mid-September raid were part of a nationwide crackdown on crime of all kinds and the first known major case of arrests on pornography charges.

The spokesman for the academy could not be reached for comment because he was in a meeting, a secretary said. Police referred questions to the Foreign Ministry, where a spokesman noted a reporter's question but had no immediate response.

Black leaders criticize plan

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Six leaders of black homelands have criticized the white-minority government's plan for a new constitution that denies blacks the vote but gives limited political power to Asians and people of mixed race.

They issued a statement Wednesday saying approval of the new constitution in a Nov. 2 referendum will guarantee white supremacy, polarize the nation and wreck chances to negotiate an end to the official policy of racial segregation.

Endorsing the statement were ministers from Lebowa, Gazankulu, Qwa Qwa, KwaZulu, KwaNdebele and Transkei.

Blacks are not considered citizens of South Africa and can not vote in the referendum.

The government aims to make South Africa's 20 million blacks citizens of 10 independent rural homelands. The homelands so far declared independent have failed to win international recognition and homeland leaders are widely considered subservient to the governing National Party.

Death toll increases to four

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The government says the death toll from an earthquake Tuesday has risen to four, all miners working in underground mines that collapsed in northern Chile.

The Interior Ministry said Wednesday night that three workers died in two mines near Antofagasta. Another death had been reported earlier in a mine near Chanara, the city shaken most severely by the quake.

The quake was centered 200 miles out in the Pacific Ocean, the University of Chile Seismological Center reported.

The University of California at Berkeley said the quake measured 7 on the Richter scale, a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake. A reading of 7 reading indicates the potential for widespread, heavy damage.

Government to dismantle traps

BERLIN (AP) — East German Communist Party chief Erich Honecker says his government will dismantle all the shrapnel-firing booby-trap guns emplaced along its border with West Germany.

Honecker gave the first official East German confirmation of the removal of the weapons in an interview with Austrian TV reporters Wednesday. An Austrian news agency report of the interview was published by the official East German news agency, apparently because East Germany has never officially admitted it has such weapons along the border.

The dismantling appears to be a response to a loan of about a billion marks ($363 million) made by West German banks to the East German government earlier this year. But West German officials have noted that the frontier will remain virtually sealed without the shrapnel guns.

Militia commander assassinated

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An Israeli-backed militia commander in southern Lebanon was assassinated today, police reported.

The victim was identified as Hussein Wahbe, a Shiite Moslem who headed a local militia backed by the Israeli army in the Adloun district south of Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon.

Police said Wahbe was killed at 8:15 a.m. local time as he was traveling in his Mercedes Benz on the coastal highway linking Sidon with Lebanon's southernmost port of Tyre. Reports conflicted on how he was killed.

One report received by police headquarters in Sidon said Wahbe died in a hail of machine gun fire as his car left Adloun. Another report, also received by the Sidon police station, said an explosive charge was set off by remote control as Wahbe's car drove past, burning him to death and seriously injuring his wife.

Wage law to be reconsidered

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Joao Figueiredo says he will reconsider a law that keeps salary increases well below the inflation rate, even though the law is a key component of a government austerity program.

The House of Representatives was expected to veto the law in an upcoming vote. But Figueiredo, in a televised speech Wednesday night, said he was willing to compromise with congress.

The law, already in effect but still vulnerable to veto, cut raises to 80 percent — instead of the previous 100 percent — of the cost of living index. Brazil's annual inflation rate is 153 percent.

The law is a crucial part of an austerity program Brazil enacted to curb inflation and balance the budget — which the International Monetary Fund has required before it will reactivate a $4.9 billion bail-out loan.

A GOOD USED CAR... MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY.

Year in and year out, cars depreciate in value. You've heard it. But it's not true. Cars only depreciate each year in price, not in value. Because the next year's models have arrived. There's a difference between price and value. Today's late model used cars, especially those that received good care, actually can give you as much value as a new one. When you can buy a good used car for thousands of dollars less than a new one, that's real value. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance. Buying your used car.
