A house painter made it a practice to cheat his customers by thinning the paint with turpentine. His most recent project was a church steeple. Just as he finished the job, huge clouds gathered and a heavy downpour washed away the wet paint.

A great booming voice from above the clouds was heard to say, "Repaint and thin no more."

School bells will be ringing soon and band members and football players have already started the 1990-91 season. Most youngsters will be soon making their commitment during registration.

A few, however, have made a decision that they don't need to finish school. They never liked school and, besides, they're smart enough already. If you know someone in that category, they need to read what country-western star Waylon Jennings said on the subject in a letter to his hometown of Littlefield recently:

"To all the young people who read this, I want to say the following. As you know, I have had quite a bit of success in my life, which may have looked easy to some people. My formula has been hard work and dedication. I know that sounds pretty simple, but there's more to the story.

"I had to work double-hard to get where I am because I was always placing hurdles in front of myself that I either had to jump over, climb under or go around. The first hurdle I placed in front of myself was quitting school in the 10th grade. Somewhere between the 1st and 10th grade, I got the idea that school just wasn't my thing and that I was really very smart, but just wasn't good at school. So, as I said, in the 10th grade I outsmarted myself.

"The second hurdle was when someone offered me drugs. Right off, I knew it was the "in" thing to do. I also believed that I was the one in a million who could handle it (and as the song goes...Wrong!). I spent over 20 years on drugs and I hurt a lot of people, myself, my family and even strangers. Six years ago, I finally woke up and quit. Between drugs and smoking cigarettes (and I quit those two years ago), I almost wrecked my health. Now, I'm healthier than I've been in 20 years.

"The only thing that hounded me all my life, no matter what I did, was the feeling of being a failure for not getting my high school education. Maybe it seems I wouldn't need it in the business I'm in, but there were hundreds of times I would fill out some form and have to write down '10th-grade education.'

"Now two years of education may not seem like much until you're without it, but a high school diploma gives you a psychological advantage throughout your life. (And believe me, every little bit helps) So to wind this long letter up, I recently went back and got my GED and I feel that I've corrected a wrong.

The reason I'm telling you this is so you won't make the same mistakes as me, because most people don't get a second chance. So when it comes to education, don't drop out and when it comes to a high-school diploma, if you don't have one, go back and get it because somewhere down the road you might have to deal with me...and I got it."

We thought that was a pretty good message from the music star. I've never cared that much for Jennings, but the letter made me have a great deal more respect for the self-proclaimed "outlaw" of country music.

New leadership program developed

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN

Wanted: A few good community leaders for Hereford; apply for training at Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

Plans for "Leadership Hereford," a new program of the chamber, were outlined by chairman Donna West following a committee meeting here Tuesday. Purpose of the program is to build a network of community leaders, explained West.

"We hope to afford a selected number of citizens an educational program designed to increase their knowledge of the area's history, citizenry, social, economic and political makeup. The program intent is to provide a foundation that potential leaders can use to become involved and make our city and county a better place to live," added West.

"Leadership Hereford" will be a comprehensive program of 12 four-hour classes conducted over a period of seven months. West said committee members will develop a program of education to promote an overall awareness and knowledge of Hereford and Deaf Smith County. A committee of 15 will serve as monitors of the program, which is expected to continue over a number of years.

Topics to be included in the course will include community history, the chamber and its program of work, education, government, medical, community services, economy, cultural affairs, law and justice, and communication skills. Sessions will be conducted by seasoned community leaders, experts in their own fields.

"We will seek a commitment from employers in enrolling people for the courses," said West. "Participants will need to take a half-day off every two weeks to attend the class, and we will require participants to attend a minimum of 9 of the 12 classes.

West said the program was initiated with help from other cities that have a similar program in place. She said the courses will limit enrollment to 10 or 12 people. There will be no age limit, however, and no length-of-residency requirements.

A tuition fee, yet to be determined, will be charged for the course. Tentative plans call for the program to start Oct. 16 and classes meet every other Tuesday from 1 to 5 p.m.

More details will be announced soon. Persons who would like to be considered for the Leadership Hereford program will be able to pick up application forms at the chamber.

More rain falls in county Wednesday

Most of the Deaf Smith County area picked up more beneficial rain Wednesday, and there was a chance for more rain today and tonight. Hereford officially received .54 of an inch of rain Wednesday, according to the official observation at KPAN. There were two heavy showers Wednesday, one at mid-afternoon and another at 5 p.m., that accounted for most of the rain.

Other reports across the county included .65 of an inch at the J.E. McCabe house at Dawn, and half-inch reports at Bootleg and at Northwest Grain. At the Robert Lloyd place, 28 miles northwest of Hereford, they picked up another .40 of an inch Wednesday. Earlier, they had received 1.5 inch on Monday and .80 of an inch on Tuesday.

Bush authorizes 'minimum force'

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) - President Bush is authorizing the use of "minimum force" by naval commanders to halt shipments to and from Iraq, a source says, as the president meets with Jordan's King Hussein on the Persian Gulf crisis.

Those steps could include attempting to block the ship's passage or firing a warning shot across the bow, a senior administration source in Washington said Wednesday night. The president's message was expected to be sent today to the U.S. Navy fleet in Middle East waters.

The Jordanian monarch, whose country is keeping a supply route open for Iraq despite the United Nations economic sanctions, was flying to Maine today from Washington for talks at Bush's oceanfront summer home.

The monarch - reportedly bearing a message to Bush from Iraq's Saddam Hussein - requested the meeting.

The White House, piqued at the king's efforts to defend Saddam, downplayed any expectations of a breakthrough in the crisis ignited by Iraq's blitzkrieg Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The White House said Bush would meet later today with Saudi Arabia's foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, and the Saudi ambassador to the United States, Prince Bandar bin Sultan.

The instruction on interdiction of Iraqi ships described a step-by-step approach under which commanders should first request ships to halt and seek their cooperation before taking any more aggressive steps, the administration source said.

The instruction "will tell them to use the minimum force necessary," said the source, adding that might include steps taken to disable a ship so that it couldn't continue on its way.

Bush, on the golf course Wednesday after returning to Maine from a military briefing at the Pentagon, said, "Just wait and see what happens" when asked what he expected from the meeting with the Jordanian monarch.

Bush, addressing Pentagon employees after a briefing by his top generals, expressed his determination to enforce the U.N. embargo by land and sea.

"Together we must ensure that no goods get in, and that not one drop of oil gets out," said Bush. The president said Tuesday that could mean shutting down the Jordanian port of Aqaba if goods keep flowing into Iraq through that port on the Red Sea.

King Hussein, long an ally in U.S. efforts to promote peace in the Middle East, has drawn the White House's ire by calling Saddam a "patriot" and hedging on whether Jordan would abide by the U.N. embargo. On Monday Hussein accused the Bush administration of creating an "explosive situation" with its military buildup in the gulf.

Combest hears concerns during town hall session

If you wanted to know, or get an idea, about anything from how President Bush compares to President Reagan to the possibility of war in the Persian Gulf, U.S. Rep. Larry Combest reviewed it in Hereford on Wednesday.

Combest, R-Lubbock, addressed the Hereford Lions Club at noon, then hosted mid-afternoon town hall meeting. Both events were at the Hereford Community Center.

Combest covered the Persian Gulf situation in detail during both sessions. Combest, a member of the Select Committee on Intelligence, said the United States knew many weeks ago that Saddam Hussein was up to something because of Iraqi troop movements.

"We wondered what was going on, but we can't yet read a person's mind," Combest told the Lions. "We just looked at all of the scenarios."

Although the United States could not protect Kuwait (half the size of Combest's 19th Congressional District), the U.S. military was ready to move when an attack on Saudi Arabia appeared imminent.

"The oilfields in Saudi Arabia are in the north (near the Iraq border) and the population is in the south," Combest said in explaining the US presence in the Middle East. "Saudi Arabia has a good air force, but their ground troops would not have been able to fend off an attack on the oil fields."

Combest also discussed and fielded questions about the 1991 budget, which is the focus of a "budget summit" that will begin later this month with congressional leaders.

The Congress has an Oct. 1 deadline to come up with a budget, or Gramm-Rudman restrictions will slow down many government operations.

However, the Middle East situation could have an effect on the budget and could delay implementation of the restrictions.

If there are no delays in Gramm-Rudman imposition, and if there is no budget approved by Sept. 30, money would be "sequestered."

The Congress has battled throughout the year, with itself and the Bush Administration, on the budget. "It may be easier to reach an agreement with Hussein of Iraq than in the Congress on the budget."

Foreign aid was a bone of contention tossed at Combest during the town hall meeting, with one person asking "why were we still gonna give the Panama Canal away," and another asking why spend $13 billion a year on foreign aid with problems unfixed in the United States.

Combest explained that he voted against all foreign aid bills, but said there were "some areas of the world we need to be involved in."

"The $13 billion we would save wouldn't balance the budget, but we have some things that money would be better spent on."

Combest explained that provisions in the Panama Canal Treaty would preclude turning over the canal to the Panamanians in the year 2000. "If there is not adequate assurance that Panama can control and protect the canal, we do not have to turn it over," Combest said. "we have several provisions to negate the treaty...there is some concern in Panama about the legality of the treaty."

"As it turns out, they have not invaded Saudi Arabia, and with every day that passes there is less of a chance of an invasion. I think Iraq miscalculated the base of operations we would have in Saudi Arabia."

Combest said his main concern is that as long as there are troops in the area, a mistake by either side could cause war to erupt. "Besides, the Iraqis would like to pull either the United States or Israel into a war. With that, he might be able to get other Arabs on his side. We will continue to send in troops and remain hopeful that nothing will break out."

Later, in response to a question about Americans who have not been allowed to leave Iraq, Combest said that holding the Americans hostage and executing any Americans held hostage could lead to hostilities.

"We would turn against him rapidly, and other Arab countries would, too," Combest said. "We must be very decisive. We must draw more, bigger lines in the sand."

Troop deployment sends Texas town up in arms

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - Folks in this Army town see soldiers updating wills and stockpiling desert gear and they know something is up at Fort Hood.

But the Pentagon and the post refused to say Tuesday whether any troops have been or will be deployed to the Middle East.

"I can't speculate on that. We have no comment," said Fort Hood spokesman Maj. Jesse Seigal.

Meanwhile, workers at Fort Bliss near El Paso were manning a 24-hour hotline to help families cope with the deployment of the 11th Air Defense Artillery to Saudi Arabia.

"There's a lot of fear out there. A lot of concern," said Donna Santos, director of Army Community Services at the fort near El Paso.

At Fort Bliss, dozens of military vehicles belonging to the 3rd Armored Cavalry sit atop rail cars on a railroad track adjacent to a major El Paso thoroughfare.

Gonzalez said he did not know exactly how many troops or aircraft have been deployed from Kelly to take part in Operation Desert Shield.

C-5A and C-130 aircraft have been "in and out of Kelly on an hourly basis" since the United States began its military efforts to contain Iraq's Saddam Hussein, the Democratic congressman said.

Phoebe Brown, a spokeswoman for Kelly Air Force Base, has repeatedly refused to discuss the base's involvement in the Middle East operation.

Troops from Fort Hood, the largest armored post in the U.S. and home of the 1st Cavalry and 2nd Armored divisions, will be deployed, an Army source in Washington has told The Associated Press.

The people of Killeen are sure that troops and equipment from their neighboring post will be involved somehow in the Persian Gulf.

"There's something going on. You don't see any GI's downtown. At lunch we usually have five or six, but I haven't seen a GI in 2 or 3 weeks," said Margaret Galindo, an employee at The German Restaurant in Killeen.

Almost 70,000 people live in Killeen, located at the main entrance of Fort Hood. About 45,000 of them are military, their families or military retirees.

Bell County Justice of the Peace Robert Stubblefield said his office has been inundated with calls from soldiers who want to update their wills or designate power of attorney. "Everybody kind of gets jittery and wants to get their stuff in order," Stubblefield said.

Others point to the run by soldiers on desert supplies at Army surplus stores.

The Fatigues and Things store was sold out of desert bandanas and camouflage, said assistant manager Maryann Carrillo. Canteens and desert goggles also were going fast.

Much of that equipment is issued by the Army, but Ms. Carrillo said soldiers are telling her the post is either out of the items, or they're afraid they won't get them in time.

Several soldiers in Killeen declined to be interviewed. Military officials prohibited interviews or picture-taking on the post.

Residents agreed with President Bush's decision to send American troops to Saudi Arabia, but said they hoped Iraq would back down without a fight.

"I think with the troop buildup there's not going to be a lot of fighting. Our president will not hesitate to go all the way if he has to. But he's not going to push it," said Chuck Ritz, 46, an Army veteran who served two tours in Vietnam.

First aid training held

Betty Henson, executive director of the Deaf Smith County chapter of the American Red Cross, shows how to apply compression to wounds during a training seminar held recently. The training was provided by the Red Cross and the Texas Migrant Council. About 35 persons participated in the training and received first aid kits for use in their homes.

COMBEST

Combest also said it would be "a huge mistake" if some lessons had not been learned from the savings and loan debacle that has struck heaviest in the southwestern United States, and said persons from other parts of the country that are pointing fingers at Texas for costing US taxpayers billions of dollars to clean up the mess could be in trouble themselves in the near future.

"We are not giving all of that money to savings and loans," Combest said. "Those dollars are used by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to insure, guarantee, the deposits in federally-insured savings banks. Those deposits are insured by the full faith and credit of the United States government, and if you don't believe you can deposit $100,000 and get $100,000 back, financial institutions as we know them are gone."

Combest said the thrift problems went back to the 1970s, with deregulation of financial institutions. He said it may be time to re-regulate financial institutions. "I don't believe banks want to be in the insurance and real estate business, but they had to go there to keep going. I think we need to get banks out of the insurance business and insurance out of the banking business."

Combest said he would support the appointment of a special investigator or prosecutor to make sure no one in the government "was involved in the savings and loan downfall."

Study discloses 'hardened' facts about margarine

BOSTON (AP) - Cholesterol-conscious people have long been saying, "Hold the butter." Now a study suggests they should spread the margarine sparingly too.

The study found that hardened vegetable fat, a primary ingredient of margarine and shortening, raises cholesterol in the blood. It might even be worse than saturated fat, the long-recognized demon in the war on unhealthy eating.

Experts cautioned that margarine is still a healthier choice than butter. However, the new research contradicts the widely held belief that the vegetable fats that margarine contains are harmless to the heart.

The study raises questions about trans fatty acids, which make margarine and shortening hard so they can be used for baking, frying and spreading. About a quarter of the fat in a typical stick of margarine is trans fatty acids.

While such fats can occur naturally, most are made when food companies add hydrogen to polyunsaturated and monounsaturated vegetable oils. Food labels list these as hydrogenated oils.

Because these fats make up only 2 percent to 4 percent of a typical American diet, they probably have small impact on most people's cholesterol levels.

However, Dr. Scott Grundy, a top cholesterol expert at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, said the public should insist that the food industry find a way to eliminate trans fatty acids from margarine.

"Industry will say there is not enough to hurt people, but this paper points out that this is a contributing factor," he said. "It should not be ignored."

The study found that unlike saturated fat, trans fatty acids have a double-barreled harmful effect: They increase the bloodstream's supply of low-density lipoprotein, or LDL, the "bad cholesterol" that contributes to fatty buildups in the arteries. And they lower levels of high-density lipoprotein, or HDL, the "good cholesterol" that protects the body from cholesterol's harmful effects.

Grundy called this "a combination of detrimental effects that is particularly worrisome."

Dr. Edward A. Emken of the U.S. Department of Agriculture research service in Peoria, Ill., said the study should be repeated to check the effects of lower doses of the fat. But he said the research "has implications in terms of the U.S. diet, and it certainly shouldn't be taken lightly."

In a statement, the International Food Information Council, an industry group, said, "People should refrain from making any dietary changes based on the results of this one study in which subjects consumed extremely high levels of trans fatty acids for a relatively short time."

The study was conducted in the Netherlands by Drs. Ronald P. Mensink and Martin B. Katan of the Agricultural University in Wageningen. It was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The study was conducted on 59 men and women who were randomly assigned to eat three different diets for three weeks each. In each diet, 40 percent of the total calories came from fat. But they varied in their levels of monounsaturated fats, trans fatty acids and saturated fats.

Their average cholesterol levels were 172 on the monounsaturated fat diet, 182 on the trans fatty acid diet and 193 on the saturated fat diet.

New drilling a possibility in wake of Gulf crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration wants to use the Persian Gulf crisis - and resulting gasoline price increases - to push for oil drilling in an Alaskan wildlife refuge and other environmentally sensitive areas.

"Once Congress gets back, the (Interior) Department and others will try to make a strong case for Congress to act in allowing exploration of the coastal plain" of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, said Tom DeRocco, chief of public affairs for the Minerals Management Service.

The White House also hopes the Mideast turmoil and increasing gas prices will galvanize public opinion for exploration and drilling in some offshore areas.

"Now that people are having to pay higher prices at the gas pump, there's a heightened awareness of the issue," said Steven Goldstein, chief spokesman for the Interior Department.

However, President Bush will not alter his June decision to block new drilling off most of California, Southern Florida, Washington and Oregon, officials said. That decision barred offshore oil activity in those areas for at least a decade.

Energy Secretary James Watkins said Wednesday the United States could use stepped-up oil production and conservation to replace up to 90 percent of the oil supplies lost because of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Half the saving would come if Americans accept conservation measures that, for example, would require them to keep tires properly inflated and drive within the speed limit, he said. Increased oil production could require compromises on the environment, Watkins added.

The oil industry has pushed for years to open the northeastern Alaska refuge's 1.5-million-acre coastal stretch to drilling, in hopes that it contains huge deposits of oil and gas.

Environmentalists see the refuge as a crucial test of Bush's commitment following his pledge to be an "environmental president." They say the refuge is a national treasure with a complete spectrum of arctic ecosystems, including a home for polar bears, millions of birds, and a calving area for the Porcupine Caribou herd.

Bush has long wanted oil exploration in the Alaska refuge, but Congress decreed in 1980 that it must give permission before any drilling can occur.

Ben Beach of the Wilderness

Society said the Middle East crisis likely will help the Bush administration counter public opposition to oil development.

"Politically it makes it easier for them" to push for exploration, Beach said.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan - in a meeting with White House Chief of Staff John Sununu's deputy, Andy Card - got the go-ahead to start the drumbeat toward opening the Alaska refuge, said an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The administration also is interested in moving ahead with exploration in other states that have been protected by congressional moratoriums, said Goldstein of the Interior Department.

That could include areas offshore in North Carolina, Bristol Bay, Alaska, South Carolina and other Participants earned advanced academic training credits approved by the Texas Education Agency.

Fall registration nearing for WTSU

Students standing in line on Aug. 28 and 29 for regular fall registration at West Texas State University probably won't notice anything different, but it's history in the making as WTSU enrolls its first class as part of The Texas A&M University System.

Registration for new admissions (first-time freshmen, transfer students, readmitted WTSU students) is scheduled from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 28 in Old Main, Level One.

Continuing WTSU students may register during assigned times on Wednesday, Aug. 29. The schedule, determined by last name, is as follows: 9-10 a.m. G-J, 10-11 a.m. K-M, 11 a.m.-noon N-S, noon-1 p.m. T-Z, 1-2 p.m. A-B, and 2-3 p.m. C-F.

Students enrolling in night classes only may register from 6-7 p.m. Aug. 30, Sept. 4, Sept. 5 or Sept. 10. Registration for off-campus students will be conducted during the first class session. Late registration is scheduled from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Aug. 30-Sept. 7.

According to Registrar Linda Elliott and based on Aug. 1, 1989, and Aug. 1, 1990, statistics, preregistered students is 4,239 (as of Aug. 1, 1990) and includes an increase of 164 freshmen, 71 transfer students and 165 returning WTSU students.

"We are certainly pleased with the increase but cannot jump to the conclusion that enrollment will be significantly higher than in previous years," Elliott said. "Two additional preregistration sessions were added this summer and that may account for the increase. We will just have to wait and see and keep our fingers crossed until Sept. 17, the official reporting date."

Fall 1990 classes begin Thursday, Aug. 30.

"I watched it. It was nasty," he said.

Here's' some barbecue tips

It's summertime and everyone is cooking out of doors. But beware, food poisoning bacteria love balmy weather, too. In fact, foodborne illness rises sharply over the summer.

Here are some safe food handling guidelines based on the kind of questions that are heard on the USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline (1-800-535-4555).

Q. My family is quite large and we often barbecue outside in the summer. Foods like chicken and pork ribs take a while to grill. Can you partially boil the meat ahead to shorten the time on the grill?

A. Cooking ahead—parboiling or briefly popping something in the microwave—is only safe if you immediately finish the cooking process on the grill.

Otherwise, cook the food completely to ensure that any bacteria in the raw food are killed. Refrigerate the cooked food in small, shallow containers. Reheated on the grill later, it will taste freshly barbecued.

Remember, too, not to let food sit out over one hour on a hot day.

Q. I've recently discovered marinades for use in grilling meat and poultry. Are there any safety tips on handling these great sauces?

A. Keep these four points in mind when using sauces and marinades:

1. Marinate in a glass dish in the refrigerator, not on the counter.

2. If you want to make a dip for cooked food from your marinade, reserve a separate portion for dipping. Don't re-use any of the marinade used on the raw meat. It could contain bacteria.

3. Be careful with forks and brushes used on raw meat. Wash these utensils before using them again with cooked food so that you don't unwittingly spread bacteria through them.

4. Take a clean plate and utensils out to the grill for serving cooked food.

Q. My mother-in-law often grills shishkabob for family outings. I've heard raw meat shouldn't touch other foods, yet she puts all the ingredients on one plate for assembly. Should I be concerned?

A. You're right that raw meat juices can contaminate other food. But since the kabobs will be cooked right away, the risk is small.

The only concern here would be if hungry guests munch some of her cut-up raw vegetables that have gotten into the raw meat juice that could contain bacteria.

Therefore, generally it's better to keep raw meats separate from other foods.

Nederlander to replace Steinbrenner

CLEVELAND (AP) - The New York Yankees, long accustomed to George Steinbrenner's theatrics, should have no trouble adjusting to their new boss: Broadway producer Robert E. Nederlander.

Steinbrenner chose Nederlander on Wednesday to succeed him as managing general partner, and the Yankees' limited partners approved the appointment unanimously.

The transition must be made by Monday under Steinbrenner's July 30 agreement with baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent. Vincent ruled Steinbrenner had to step down because of his association with gambler Howard Spira.

Steinbrenner gave Spira $40,000 for information about former Yankee player Dave Winfield.

"This isn't a great letdown, though it's perceived by people to be that way," Steinbrenner said before boarding a plane at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport. "After 17 years as a general partner, as long as my family keeps control, that's the important thing. I've always said, anybody who's a CEO for a company should get out after 10 years."

Nederlander, 57, is one of the Yankees' 18 limited partners. He and brothers James and Harry own 6 percent of the team and were part of the Steinbrenner group that bought the Yankees from CBS Inc. for about $10 million in 1973. The team is thought to be worth about $250 million now.

James Nederlander also was part of a group that tried to buy the Cleveland Indians in 1981. That deal fell through.

The Nederlander Organization owns 30 theaters in the U.S. and Britain, including 11 Broadway theaters. The family is considered the second-most powerful in American theater, behind the Shuberts.

Nederlander has presented such Broadway hits as "Annie," "Nicholas Nickleby" and "La Cage aux Folles," but also lost $5.3 million on the 1989 production "Legs Diamond."

Steinbrenner was an investor in many Nederlander shows, including "Legs Diamond."

The appointment is subject to approval by three-fourths of the American League teams and a majority of the National League teams, a process that should take about a month.

"Robert is a dear friend of my family's," Steinbrenner said. "He is family, as far as I'm concerned. I'm very pleased with the action of the partnership."

Nederlander was Steinbrenner's third choice. He first offered the job to his 33-year-old son Hank, but Hank declined, preferring to remain as head of the Steinbrenners' thoroughbred farm in Florida.

Vincent vetoed the second choice, Yankees executive vice president Leonard L. Kleinman, and ordered him to appear at a hearing Sept. 6 because of possible involvement with Spira.

"It wasn't a third choice at all," Steinbrenner said. "My son was the first choice. The rest of the people who were considered were right together."

Aside from those three, one other limited partner, New York banker and lawyer Marvin Goldklang, reportedly was interested in the job. Goldklang declined comment on that possibility earlier this week.

Kleinman was he was considering legal action because of Vincent's veto of his candidacy. He said he doubted Vincent could conduct a fair hearing.

Steinbrenner, who must reduce his Yankees stock from 55 percent to less than 50 percent by next August, said it's still possible one of his sons could take over in the future.

Nederlander said he would welcome greater participation from Steinbrenner's sons, Hank and Harold, and son-in-law, Joseph A. Molloy.

Harold is an undergraduate at Williams College. Molloy is the Yankees' secretary-treasurer.

"The Nederlander family and the Steinbrenner family have been dear friends for 25 years. We continue to and will value our longstanding friendship," Nederlander said. "The New York Yankees remain one of the greatest franchises in the world of sports. I expect that position of prestige to continue."

Vincent called the selection of Nederlander a "good development," but reserved further judgment.

Willis not worried by knockout theory

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) - Rookie Ken Willis doesn't buy the knockout theory.

He's hearing over and over that to win the Dallas Cowboys' placekicking job, he'll have to do his best while veteran Luis Zendejas falls flat on his face.

"I've heard it so many times," said the 5-11, 190-pound product of Owensboro, Ky. "But you can only get the opportunities as they come up in a game. If you start thinking like that, start talking about a knockout punch, you're not thinking the right way."

"They're about even right now and for a rookie, that's good," said Cowboys kicking coach Steve Hoffman as the team continues its West Coast training camp on the campus of Cal-San Diego.

"But in this situation, Luis would have to completely fail, and Kenny would have to completely knock him out."

Zendejas missed the exhibition opener against the San Diego Chargers with a groin pull, giving Willis an opening. Willis missed an extra point due to a poor snap and converted a 27-yard field goal. Of three kickoffs, one was poor, one was average and one fell in the "good" category.

Willis offers impressive credentials. In his senior year at Kentucky, he connected on 17 of 22 field goal tries, including kicks from 50 and 48 yards.

The Cowboys weren't totally satisfied with Zendejas' production last year as he converted only five of nine field goals in his seven games with the Cowboys following his release by the Eagles.

Willis was brought in as more than camp fodder to push Zendejas. Some scouting services had Willis pegged as the second-best kicking prospect from the class of '89, behind Louisiana Tech's Matt Stover, who was drafted in the 12th round by the New York Giants.

In moves Wednesday, the Cowboys released free agent wide receiver Jarrod Delaney and Plan B defensive tackle Anthony Spears.

Raiders report in good shape for '90

LUBBOCK (AP) - A well-conditioned squad reported to Texas Tech's fall football camp and coach Spike Dykes was pleased with the way his team looked.

"If summer work habits are any indication, last year's enthusiasm is carrying over," Dykes said Wednesday.

Offensive tackle Charlie Biggurs of Houston Waltrip dropped from 300 pounds in the spring to 277. Biggurs was feeling fine after undergoing arthroscopic surgery two weeks ago to remove a sewing needle from his left knee.

"I probably did it when I was a baby and have been carrying it around all my life," Biggurs said.

Redshirt freshman quarterback Kip McFarlin of Nederland will miss the 1990 season because he will undergo surgery for a tumor on his pituitary gland.

The Red Raiders will practice in pads starting Monday to get ready for its season opener on Sept. 8 at Ohio State.

In position changes, sophomore linebacker Steve Carr of El Paso Hanks was moved to tight end and sophomore defensive lineman John Runnels of Dallas Carter will move to the offensive line.

The vets will join about 80 newcomers for fall drills.

Phils' Mullholland no-hits San Fran

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia. The home of the Liberty Bell, Rocky, cheese steaks and finally a no-hitter by the Phillies.

Not just any no-hitter, mind you. Terry Mulholland pitched the record eighth no-hitter of the season Wednesday night as Philadelphia beat San Francisco 6-0. Mulholland's gem was the first this century by a Phillies pitcher in Philadelphia, and also was the first nine-inning no-hitter in the 20-year history of Veterans Stadium.

"It was such a rush of emotion," Mulholland said. "I'm not usually an emotional guy, but I knew the significance of that."

Oilers defense preps for NY

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Last week it was Detroit and the run-and-shoot. This week, the Houston Oilers shift to the New York Giants and a different challenge altogether.

"We had a lot of pass-defense work last week," against the Lions, Oilers coach Jack Pardee said. "This week will just be the opposite. (The Giants) have a real intelligent running scheme."

Pardee said the Giants will use two tight ends and double-team the defense.

The season's eighth no-hitter surpassed the modern record of seven set in 1917 and 1908.

Mulholland was nearly perfect, too.

Rick Parker reached on third baseman Charlie Hayes' throwing error to lead off the seventh inning, but was erased on a double play.

Mulholland finished the no-hitter in the ninth by retiring pinch-hitter Bill Bathe and Jose Uribe on grounders and getting pinch-hitter Gary Carter on a line drive to Hayes in fair territory just inside the third-base line.

"I'm not making excuses but that throw was not that bad," Hayes said of his error. "I think he (first baseman John Kruk) stretched a little early. It was not right to him, but I don't think I deserve an error. What the heck, I'll take the error."

Kruk said, "I think I should have stayed on the bag, but people who saw the replay told me there was no way I could have stayed on."

Elsewhere in the National League it was Cincinnati 3, St. Louis 1 in 12 innings; Atlanta 8, Pittsburgh 1; Los Angeles 3, New York 2; Houston 8, Chicago 4 in 10 innings; and Montreal 5, San Diego 3 in 17 innings.

Mulholland (7-6) came to the Phillies last season along with Hayes and pitcher Dennis Cook from the Giants in a trade for reliever Steve Bedrosian.

The only other no-hitter in Veterans Stadium history was by Pascual Perez of Montreal on Sept. 24, 1988, a game shortened to five innings by rain.

The 1990 no-hit parade started on April 11 when California's Mark Langston and Mike Witt combined to beat Seattle. Randy Johnson then pitched the first no-hitter in Seattle history, beating Detroit on June 2.

Nolan Ryan pitched his unprecedented sixth no-hitter to beat Oakland on June 11. Oakland's Dave Stewart and Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela made baseball history on June 29 by pitching no-hitters on the same day in each league.

Less than two days later, Andy Hawkins of the New York Yankees pitched a no-hitter against the Chicago White Sox on July 1 but lost 4-0 at Comiskey Park.

On July 12, Melido Perez of the Chicago White Sox, the brother of Pascual, pitched the record-tying seventh no-hitter of the season, a rain-shortened six-inning victory at Yankee Stadium.

Mulholland's was the first no-hitter by a Phillie since Rick Wise beat the Reds at Cincinnati 4-0 on June 23, 1971.

Reds 3, Cardinals 1
Herm Winningham's third triple of the game broke a 12th-inning tie as Cincinnati defeated St. Louis.

Winningham also doubled, scored twice and went 4-for-6.

Braves 8, Pirates 1

Rookie Dave Justice hit his ninth homer in 10 games and Tony Castillo allowed one hit over five innings in his second major league start.

Francisco Cabrera homered and Lonnie Smith had a pair of run-scoring singles.

Dodgers 3, Mets 2

Kal Daniels hit a three-run homer and Mike Morgan won for the second time in six starts.

Daniels' 18th home run in the fourth inning followed a double by Stan Javier and an infield single by Mike Sharperson off Sid Fernandez (8-9).

Morgan (10-11) pitched seven innings, yielding six hits.

Expos 5, Padres 3

Catcher Benito Santiago's errant pickoff throw in the 17th inning allowed Andres Galarraga to score the tie-breaking run with two outs.

Galarraga walked with two outs and Larry Walker followed with a single off John Davis (0-1). Santiago tried to pick Walker off at first base, but the ball got away allowing Galarraga to score. Mike Fitzgerald then singled to score Walker from second.

Astros 8, Cubs 4

Craig Biggio tripled and scored the tying run in the ninth inning, then drove in the tie-breaker with a single in the 10th.

Rafael Ramirez added a three-run double in the Astros' four-run 10th.

Langston stops Yankees, 8-1

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The last time Mark Langston won at Anaheim Stadium, the California Angels still were in the American League West race and they still seemed pretty smart for signing him.

Of course, that was a long time ago - April 11, to be exact. That night, Langston won his Angels' debut, combining with Mike Witt on a no-hitter and generally pitching like someone with a $16 million contract is supposed to pitch.

But who would've suspected what would happen next? Since then, there have been seven more no-hitters. Langston has tied for the major league lead in losses and the Angels have free-fallen 17 games behind first-place Oakland.

On Wednesday night, Langston again showed the home folks why the Angels were so anxious to get him, albeit four months later. He pitched a four-hitter, struck out 11 and led the Angels over the New York Yankees 8-1.

"This is a really big boost, coming after such a messed-up season," Langston said. "I hope I can turn this into a stepping stone."

Langston (6-15) had lost nine straight at Anaheim Stadium and 10 of 11 decisions overall.

Hot-hitting Brian Downing went 4-for-4 with a three-run homer and Dave Winfield drove in three runs against his former team as the Angels completed a three-game sweep.

In other games, Oakland beat Boston 6-2 in 10 innings, Chicago topped Toronto 4-3, Cleveland defeated Minnesota 5-4, Milwaukee downed Detroit 7-3, Texas trimmed Kansas City 2-1 and Seattle stopped Baltimore 2-0.

Langston did not give up a hit until Roberto Kelly doubled with two outs in the fifth. The lone run he allowed came in the fourth on four walks, his only walks of the game.

Downing has 14 hits in his last 19 at-bats. He already had a double and two singles when he hit his 12th home run in the sixth inning for an 8-1 lead.

Dave LaPoint (6-9) was the loser. Rangers 2, Royals 1

Bobby Witt won his team-record ninth straight decision.

Witt (12-8) struck out 11 and walked three. He took a three-hit shutout into the ninth, but gave up a run on a two-out double by Gerald Perry and singles by Jim Eisenreich and Mike MacFarlane.

Geno Petralli led off the seventh with a single and scored on two-out singles by Gary Green and Pettis off Storm Davis (6-8).

Athletics 6, Red Sox 2

Mark McGwire hit his fourth career slam, connecting in the bottom of the 10th inning and leading Dave Stewart and Oakland over Boston.

Pinch hitter Rickey Henderson drew a leadoff walk and then left for a pinch runner because of a hamstring strain. An error and a walk by Daryl Irvine (1-1) loaded the bases and Rob Murphy relieved with a 1-0 count. McGwire, who already had struck out three times, homered on the next pitch.

Stewart (17-8) pitched all 10 innings, giving up eight hits.

White Sox 4, Blue Jays 3

Jack McDowell gave up five hits in eight innings and Bobby Thigpen got his major league-leading 38th save in 44 opportunities.

McDowell (9-6) struck out five and walked one.

John Candelaria (7-5) lost.

Ivan Calderon drove in one run and doubled and scored another, and Sammy Sosa homered.

Mariners 2, Orioles 0

Randy Johnson pitched a four-hitter and Alvin Davis homered and drove in both runs.

The Mariners won despite leaving a team-record 16 runners on base.

Johnson (11-7) struck out nine and walked two in his second shutout of the season. Pete Harnisch (9-7) was the loser.

Indians 5, Twins 4

Mitch Webster homered for the fourth time in six games and Chris James capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning with an RBI single.

The Indians loaded the bases against Tim Lincecum (1-4) and Carlos Baerga was hit by a pitch from Terry Leach. Candy Maldonado and James followed with run-scoring singles for a 5-4 lead.

Jesse Orosco (4-4) got the victory and Doug Jones pitched two innings for his 32nd save.

Brewers 7, Tigers 3

Rob Deer homered for the second straight game and drove in four runs.

Paul Mirabella (4-2) went 2-3 in innings for the victory and Dan Plesac got his 18th save. Steve Searcy (1-5) took the loss.

A good night's sleep.

Now AmWest has "DreamSaver"—a savings program designed to bring peace of mind to all those who worry about saving money.

Here's how it works: You tell AmWest how much you want to save every month, (as little as $25 if you like) and they'll deduct it automatically from a free checking account (that's right, free checking) and put it into a CD account. Keep your money there for a full 12 months and it will earn a high-interest CD rate. Take it out early, and you'll get a penalty — three months interest or $50.

So "DreamSaver" not only helps you save money on a regular monthly basis — it helps you keep your hands off it too. And with a little money in savings — a good night's sleep will come a whole lot easier.

Put Your Money on Texas.

Substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Interest paid quarterly. Rates subject to change without notice.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Another letter about affairs, but if this one can help just one person it will be worth my writing.

I'm a dentist in the Midwest. I had a beautiful wife, two wonderful children, a great home and a fine practice. Two years ago I hired an attractive young assistant. I'll call her Sherrie. She was 15 years younger than I. My wife sensed from the beginning that this might lead to trouble. All I could see was that Sherrie was pretty, upbeat, energetic, and my work days would be a lot more enjoyable.

I admit that I did flirt with her a little and before I knew it, we were having an affair. My wife suspected what I was up to and asked me to fire Sherrie. I denied that I had any interest in the woman and continued to see her after hours. I felt like a teen-ager again and it was exciting. Then I began to realize that my home life was falling apart. The guilt was getting to me.

I tried to break off with Sherrie but she threatened to go to my wife. She insisted that I increase her salary and I did, twice, and then I couldn't afford her any longer. Finally I told her to leave.

I wish this was the end of the story but it isn't. Sherrie sued me for sexual harassment and won. The newspaper ate it up. I lost my wife, my children, my home and my self-respect.

Please, if any of you out there have a co-worker you're starting to get chummy with, put an end to it immediately. It will save you a million heartaches. I know. I'm there right now. -- Hurting in the Midwest

DEAR MIDWEST: I can add nothing to your story. You've said it all, and I thank you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you stand one more letter about military kids and moving? For 17 of my 24 years, I was an "Army brat." My family moved every two or three years starting when I was 6 weeks old. I've probably had more close friends than most people have mere acquaintances.

I've been in every state except Hawaii, and I've lived overseas twice. I've had friends from all social and economic backgrounds, cultures, races and religions. I've seen mountains, prairies, oceans and deserts. I've visited every one of the famous national parks and monuments.

I'd like to impress on military kids how much flexibility their lifestyle can give them and how much richer life will be if they look at moving to new places as a terrific positive experience.

I can pick up and relocate on a moment's notice and it doesn't faze me. I'm not afraid of getting lost in new surroundings. If I do get lost, that means I get to see more stuff. I can get along with just about anybody. I have no prejudice whatsoever. I have friends everywhere and I often run into people I knew in other parts of the world.

Please print this letter, Ann. I'd like to let my dad know how grateful I am for all the terrific experiences I've had, thanks to his career. I loved every bit of the traveling and I wouldn't have had it any other way. My only problem is when someone asks me, "Where are you from?" I just tell them --I'm From Everywhere, Man!

DEAR MAN FROM EVERYWHERE: What a great letter! I know you're going to make a lot of Army brats feel good today and your dad will love it. Thanks for writing.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tammy Bakker's church can hold services at its warehouse ministry here Sunday after winning a zoning dispute.

The Orange County Commission on Monday overruled 4-1 the county zoning board and said the site of Mrs. Bakker's New Covenant Ministries would not be unsafe for church services and a radio-TV broadcast studio.

Mrs. Bakker began holding services earlier this year at the site but was ordered to stop because her permit called only for operation of the studio.

Mrs. Bakker said she was "delighted and very grateful" about Monday's ruling. She said her husband, Jim Bakker, will be happy as well.

Bakker is serving a 45-year prison term for bilking $3.7 million from followers of his PTL ministry. The Bakkers moved to Florida and established the Orlando ministry shortly before his conviction last year.

Scientists say don't bug some insects

If, while sitting in the living room, you spy a couple of flies, a roach and a few crickets with you, the kid and your dog, that's about normal.

Among all the animals in the world, about seven out of 10 are insects.

Most humans who find they share space with bugs, however, are moved to go on a killing rampage -- swatting, dousing and flushing the strange invaders.

Perish the thought, not the bug, Dr. Horace Burke would say.

"I don't kill them," said Burke, a long-time insect researcher at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. "Well, maybe if it's a flea, I would. Even for an entomologist there are certain insects we would rather not be associated with."

Except for the flea, Burke looks for the good in bugs -- and finds a lot of it. In fact, he would argue that humans could not exist without insects pollinating food crops, eating pesky bugs, feeding larger animals or devouring carrion.

"It's a possibility," Burke said to humankind's ultimate need for insects. "When you take one group of organisms out, it changes another. Either we couldn't live without them or if we did, it would be a different world."

With some 750,000 known species of insects in the world -- and some think perhaps another 10 million yet to be identified -- biodiversity is exemplified in this class of animals.

"Regardless of whether they bite, transmit diseases, look pretty or suck the blood of your dog, there is great diversity in the group," said Burke, who is a taxonomist at Texas A&M University's one million-specimen insect collection. "We always hear about the bad insects; the boll weevils, screwworms and mosquitos. We never hear the other side."

Most importantly, he said, insects pollinate billions of dollars worth of crops every year in the United States.

"Bees and other insects are valued at $19 billion a year for their pollinating activities," he said. "I don't think anyone doubts the value of them."

Many non-crop plants also depend heavily on pollinating insects. The yucca, for example, depends entirely on the yucca moth to reproduce, he said.

No dollar value has been determined for the predator and parasite insects, but such insects act as a natural control for more damaging insects, Burke said. Many species of flies and wasps grow up feeding on caterpillar bodies, for example. Complete control of the citrus blackfly and the sugarcane borer, both devastating pests in South Texas, was accomplished by parasitic insects.

Researchers now are looking for an effective parasite for wheat aphids and the boll weevil, he added.

"For some larger animals, insects are a very large percent of their food," Burke added.

Toads are worth about 25 cents apiece in home gardens for the number of insects they eat, according to Dr. Jim Dixon, wildlife researcher.

Insects also serve as scavengers, Burke pointed out.

"They are disposal units," he said. "They reduce carrion and garbage. They break down wood, too, and are decomposers of animal bodies. In this way, they serve humans."

Several types of beetles crave decaying animal or vegetative matter, Burke noted. People have used dung beetles because they bury cattle manure, which reduces fly problems.

Some insects are simply pretty, Burke said. A new trend in home landscapes is to establish butterfly gardens in which certain plants are used to attract colorful butterflies. Commercial butterfly houses, similar to zoos, have been established in several U.S. cities.

"Insects are wonderfully complex regardless of what they do," Burke said. "A little gnat or fly has such a complex life. It's fascinating that they can be very small but unbelievably complicated."

Burke suggested that before automatically killing insects, proper identification should be made.

"Don't kill you friends," he said. "Determine what it is first. What does it do? What does it feed on? Is it injurious? You might find out it's not something you should be concerned about controlling."

Amarillo Tri State Fair set Sept. 17-22

The 1990 Amarillo Tri State Fair, scheduled for Sept. 17-22, will offer a new concept in Coliseum show entertainment. All shows will be free of charge with regular gate admission to the fair and no tickets will be required for the shows. Fair officials state that the purpose of this departure from "big name" paid talent is to offer lesser known, but good quality entertainment that may be viewed by the fair-goers at no extra cost and at their convenience while on the fairgrounds. "Because of the skyrocketing entertainer costs and the difficulty in obtaining the big names, many fairs are following a similar format now," says fair manager Lynn Griffin.

Gate admission to the fair will be the same as last year -- $4 for twelve years and over, $1 for ages 6-11 years, and free for under six years of age.

Appearing in the Coliseum during the first three nights of the fair will be Ken Whitener, hypnotist and the Singletree Band. Ken Whitener, a master hypnotist and entertainer will conduct shows at 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Sept. 17-18-19. Whitener is sponsored by Pizza Hut and KLS radio. The Singletree Band, a talented group from Oklahoma, will appear nightly after Whitener from 9 p.m. - 11 p.m. The Singletree group has appeared on stage with such country artists as Gary Morris, Moe Bandy, Eddie Rabbitt and others. They have four front vocalists and are versatile in playing music from country to Top 40 to rock and roll.

For additional information about these acts or any other aspects of the fair, contact the fair office at 806-376-7767 or write Tri State Fair, P.O. Box 31087-1087, Amarillo, Texas 79120.

Colorado ready to repeat in Big Eight

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

For the longest time, the Big Eight Conference was jokingly called the Big Two because of the dominance of Nebraska and Oklahoma. Now it's being called the Big Three, and it's no joke.

Colorado, which had been making a move in recent years, won the Big Eight title last season with a 7-0 record. The Buffaloes were unbeaten after the regular season, but lost their chance for a national title when Notre Dame beat them 21-6 in the Orange Bowl.

Colorado has 13 starters back from that 11-1 team, including the league's top offensive and defensive players, quarterback Darian Hagan and linebacker Alfred Williams.

The Buffaloes, it seems, are in the picture for good.

"They've obviously established a very solid foundation," Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs said. "When you go back to the '85, '86, '87 years and see how competitive they were in our games and the kind of talent they've acquired since then..."

"You look at Colorado's team last year and their team for this upcoming year and you see truly some of the outstanding players in the country."

You can start with Hagan. As a sophomore last season, he became only the sixth player to run and throw for more than 1,000 yards in a season.

"They've been good," Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones said. "You throw in one exceptional skill player - Hagan - and I think that's a great example of what one real good one can do for you."

Williams teams with Kanavis McGhee to give Colorado two of the best outside linebackers in the country. Both were all-conference choices last year.

Last year's success hasn't changed Coach Bill McCartney's cautious way of looking at things.

McCartney is concerned about the schedule - the Buffaloes have non-conference games against Tennessee, Illinois and Texas and must play Nebraska in Lincoln - and is worried about a potential lack of depth.

"We have 89 players on scholarship now," he said. "We don't get enough walk-ons; we're not rock solid in that area. We can ill afford to get these guys hurt."

Oklahoma's Gibbs found out about depth problems and injuries last season. When the Sooners went to Nebraska for their season finale, they weren't even able to reach the NCAA limit of 60 travel squad players.

The Sooners, 7-4 in Gibbs' first year, played without first-string quarterback Steve Collins for several games. Tailback Mike Gaddis, regarded by the coaches as a franchise player, hurt his knee and isn't going to be available this year. Several other players spent time on the sidelines.

"It was tough to watch those people get hurt and tough to watch your football team go out there knowing their teammates - the best players who had played beside them the week before - weren't on the field," Gibbs said.

Oklahoma, which is in the second year of a three-year probation, started last season with only 74 scholarship players. This year, the number figures to be between 80 and 85.

"We've improved to some degree, but we're still a long way from being out of the numbers problem," Gibbs said. "There's really not one position where I can say we can afford to have anyone hurt."

Nebraska always has great numbers, and this season Coach Tom Osborne will use them to rebuild. The Cornhuskers, 10-2 last season, have just two starters back on offense and must replace their entire backfield.

But experience won't be a problem on defense, where seven starters return.

"Defense is very important in winning championships and having great football teams," Osborne said.

Iowa State, at 6-5, was the only other team in the Big Eight that had a winning record last season. The Cyclones again figure to tangle with Oklahoma State, Missouri and Kansas for an upper-division finish in the conference.

The region's top independent, Tulsa, is coming off its first bowl game in 13 years - an Independence Bowl loss to Oregon. The Golden Hurricane returned quarterback T.J. Rubley, who threw 22 touchdown passes last season, and 1,000-yard rusher Brett Adams.

But the team will have to replace second-team All-America receiver Dan Bitson, who was severely injured in an automobile accident last December. Bitson caught 73 passes for 1,425 yards and 16 touchdowns last year.

"We don't have a proven game-breaker," Coach David Rader said. "Hopefully, somebody in there will put a lot of pressure on the defense somewhere."

Puerto Rico edges U.S. in World Championships

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - The loss didn't hurt the U.S. basketball team and its standing at the World Championships. You couldn't tell that from the faces in the locker room.

Puerto Rico beat the United States 81-79 on Wednesday in the quarterfinal round-robin game that only decided semifinal opponents.

Both teams had already clinched berths in the tournament's final four by winning their first two games in the quarterfinals. They were the only undefeated teams in the tournament after five games.

In Wednesday's other games, Yugoslavia beat Greece 77-67, Australia defeated Argentina 95-91 and the Soviet Union downed Brazil 110-100.

The United States will play Yugoslavia in one semifinal on Friday and the Soviets and Puerto Rico will meet in the other.

"Before we played the game we knew we were in the semifinals," said Kenny Anderson, who led the United States with 20 points. "But we played for pride and we played a tough team and we'll be up for Friday. If we're not, we'll be out."

The game with Yugoslavia will be a rematch of the championship game of the Goodwill Games, won by Yugoslavia 85-79. The Soviet Union-Puerto Rico game also will be a replay of a meeting in Seattle, won by Puerto Rico 99-84.

Puerto Rico dominated the United States inside, especially on the offensive end early, with a frontline composed of former U.S. collegiate players.

Jose Ortiz, who played at Oregon State and for the Utah Jazz, had 22 points and 10 rebounds, while Jerome Mincy, who played at Alabama-Birmingham, had 17 points and 11 rebounds and Ramon Rivas, who played at Temple and with the Boston Celtics, had 12 points and 10 rebounds.

The United States beat Puerto Rico 100-94 in the opening game of the Goodwill Games, but this was different throughout.

"We played harder and more physical than we did in Seattle," said guard Raymond Gausse, who had 13 points for Puerto Rico. "They didn't call when you went over the back and pushed today and we didn't get away with that in Seattle. They didn't call it here and the U.S. was looking for it all game."

Puerto Rico did make some additions to its roster from Seattle, guards Federico Lopez and George Torres. Lopez handled the ball throughout the game against some tough U.S. defense and Torres came off the bench to score 10 points, including the 3-pointer with 1:05 left that gave Puerto Rico the lead for good.

"Lopez and Torres can both bring the ball down the court and George is a great shooter and a great backup for Raymond Gausse," Rivas said.

The United States took its last lead at 77-76 with 1:24 to play on two free throws by Chris Gatling. Torres hit his crushing 3-pointer 19 seconds later and the United States missed a chance to cut the lead when Billy Owens missed two free throws with 43 seconds to play.

Ortiz scored on a dunk with 25 seconds left and Gatling's short jumper with 11 to play ended the scoring.

The U.S. scoring drought lasted almost six minutes as Puerto Rico turned a 73-68 deficit into a three-point lead with 2:26 to play.

"They played well and we just didn't execute and finish our plays," said Anderson, who missed the last 11 minutes of Tuesday's come-from-behind victory over Australia after taking an elbow in the head going for a rebound.

Owens, who he had back spasms in the opening minute against Australia and didn't return, scored 10 points against Puerto Rico. He scored six points in the first six minutes and was saddled with foul trouble throughout.
