Plane may be in Marshall Islands

Earhart search resumed

HONOLULU (AP) — A former Air Force pilot who found a plane wreck on a Pacific atoll 25 years ago hopes to find it again and prove it is that of famed aviator Amelia Earhart, who disappeared in 1937.

Vincent Loomis of Orlando, Fla., is leading a seven-member expedition today for an atoll in the Marshall Islands where he believes Miss Earhart's plane still rests.

"We are very excited about this and are optimistic that we will find the plane and be able to identify it as that of Amelia Earhart," said Loomis, a businessman and former aerospace worker.

Loomis refused to pinpoint the exact location of the atoll.

Miss Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, disappeared July 2, 1937, on a flight from New Guinea to Howland Island, one of the last legs on an around-the-world flight.

While many authorities believe the twin-engine Lockheed Electra crashed at sea in that area, Loomis believes it landed northwest of Howland.

Miss Earhart was quoted as saying before leaving New Guinea that if she and Noonan did not locate Howland, they would fly back into the Gilbert Islands and find "a nice stretch of beach" on which to land, according to Loomis.

But flying back into the Gilberts would have been a poor judgment, Loomis argues, because the weather was bad.

The only good land was to the northwest, the Marshall Islands, he said. Navigational error and weather conditions could have put them far off course, he believes.

Loomis said he spent 14 months in the Marshall Islands with the Air Force, and, while stationed on Eniwetok in 1952, was assigned to putting navigational aid identification panels on some of the islands.

After landing on one atoll, inhabited by barefoot natives, a weather-beaten shoe was found near the shoreline and an airplane was located in the middle of the island, he said. The plane was covered by heavy jungle growth.

The discovery of the shoe and plane was discounted until 15 years later when Loomis read a book about the Earhart-Noonan disappearance. The account fit in with Loomis' discovery and he became convinced he had accidentally come up with the plane which had been the object of a widespread search by the U.S. military.

The sighting of the plane puts him a step ahead of other theorists on the disappearance, he said, "because no one else has seen an airplane."

Loomis and his wife spent much of the past 10 years researching the 1937 flight and disappearance. Early this year, they gathered five other people to help in their search, including a writer, a radio reporter and two photographers.

If the group identifies the plane as that of Miss Earhart, Loomis said they will bring in an expert to make positive identification and then remove the plane from the island.

BETTY FORD WAVES 'HELLO'
To undergo treatment

Suggestions are accepted

A list of suggestions from the 12 members of the recent Howard County Grand Jury was read aloud by Mayor Wade Choate at today's meeting of the Big Spring City Council.

The three suggestions were prefaced by a joint statement by the jury that "after meeting and listening to evidence regarding several cases, (we) have concluded and feel an obligation to recommend the following."

The first suggestion calls for repair or replacement of audio and video equipment used by the Big Spring Police Department. The visual equipment referred to is used to film all arrests and bookings inside the police department, while the audio equipment is used to record all verbal radio communications in patrol cars and at the station during an emergency.

"The video equipment has been recently repaired and works fine. The audio equipment, the dictaphone, is out of order," said Police Chief Stanley Bogard.

According to Bogard, the dictaphone has worked only sporadically since 1971, and at times is out of order for as long as a month.

"It needs to be replaced, but the money situation in the city is really bad. It would take $4,000 or $5,000 to do the job, and we have other priorities that are more important," said the chief.

The letter from the jurors also suggested that "current techniques and procedures of the Big Spring Police Department with regard to effecting arrests need close study with an eye towards possible revision."

The third suggestion called for an effort to insure that policies and procedures are coordinated within the Department so taht there can be no doubt that all officers employed with the Department will be familiar with those policies and the correct procedure in implementing those policies."

The letter was signed by each of the 12 jurors.

Mrs. Ford 'not addicted,' hospital officials says

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Betty Ford, long in fragile health, has checked herself into a hospital for treatment of what the former first lady describes as an "insidious" problem of "over-medicating myself."

The acting superintendent of the U.S. Naval Hospital where Mrs. Ford was admitted at about 11 a.m. Monday — two days after her 60th birthday — denied that she was in any way addicted to drugs.

"It's an insidious thing and I mean to rid myself of its damaging effects. There have been too many other things I've overcome to be forever burdened with this," said Mrs. Ford.

Her statement was issued shortly after she was driven from her new desert home in Palm Springs, 100 miles east of here, to the Navy hospital in this Los Angeles suburb.

Her husband, former President Gerald Ford, said later in the day that he would continue his schedule of appearances in Alabama and would not return to California before Friday.

Capt. James Zimble, acting superintendant of the five-story hospital, said Mrs. Ford was in the alcohol and drug rehabilitation center for what he described as "a problem with medication." He said she was in "fine condition."

He denied that Mrs. Ford was in any way addicted to drugs, but refused to elaborate beyond Mrs. Ford's statement. Zimble refused to say what medication was involved or how long she would be hospitalized, although sources said two or three weeks was likely.

Mrs. Ford has suffered from arthritis and a pinched nerve in her neck for several years.

The statement from Ford's office quoted the former president as saying the current hospitalization of his wife was "in no way related to the cancer which Mrs. Ford experienced nearly four years ago. The cancer has been totally arrested and her subsequent recovery complete."

School credits are deleted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee voted today to delete tuition credits for elementary and secondary school students from pending legislation.

The 20-16 vote leaves the committee still considering whether to provide for credits eventually up to $250 against the cost of college and other post-secondary education.

And that is turned down

Only one bid on T-hangar

By JAMES WERRELL

The Big Spring City Council welcomed back two re-elected members, and welcomed aboard a new member at today's regular meeting.

After canvassing the returns of the April 1 election, re-elected Councilmen Ralph McLaughlin and Mayor Wade Choate and newly elected Councilman Bill Henkel were sworn in.

Harold Hall, who stepped down today after being defeated by Henkel in the election, was given a plaque in appreciation of his six years of service to the city.

"This is just a token of our appreciation for the fine job you have done for the city. Among the many things I can point to; you have served as president of the Permian Basin Council of Governments, on the Audit Review Committee and the Webb Steering Committee. You worked many hours to help acquire a new city garage, and have served on the Accident Review Board," said Mayor Wade Choate, presenting Hall with the plaque.

Then, in its first action after the swearing in, the council re-elected Polly Mays as Mayor Pro Tem. Mrs. Mays has served in the post for the last three years.

The council received only one bid for the construction of the concrete foundation for three T-hangars at the Big Spring Industrial Park. The bid was submitted by Zack Burkett Co. for $96,000.

"This is pretty expensive. I recommend that the bid he received, but not awarded at this time. Give me a chance to negotiate the price," recommended City Manager Harry Nagel.

The council followed Nagel's advice.

The first reading of two zone changes were approved today. C.W. Peurifoy and W.A. Moore requested that a block-and-a-half bordered by 23rd, 24th, Runnels and Nolan Streets be changed from a Single Family to a Multi Family zone so that a four-plex residence can be constructed.

The other change r^^uest was submitted by Travis Br een, who wishes to construct an office building on a 1.38-acre tract at the intersection of Hearn and Highway 87. The zone change, if approved in a second reading, will be from Single Family Residential to Light Commercial.

Council members heard from the heads of each city department during discussions of budget revisions and adjustments. Each head had requests for funds above and beyond the revised budget which sent rumblings of a bond election in the near future among council members and city officials.

"There are a lot of needs among the various departments and most of them are justified. But we have to face reality; we just can't afford them the way the budget stands now. Steps toward a bond election may have to be taken soon," said Mayor Wade Choate.

"This is not unique. Requests often exceed the budget, and it takes tight chopping. I suggest that two members of the council get together with the finance director and thrash this thing out," said Nagel.

Among the requests for funds not specified in the revised were $67,150 for the Utility and Street Department, $72,500 for the Garbage Department, and several thousand dollars to over raises, equipment and travel expenses for the Police Department. Fire Chief Alvie Harrison stated merely that his men could use a raise.

Councilmen Henkel and Ralph Brooks will meet with city officials to discuss the requests.

The council approved the minutes of the March 7 meeting of the Big Spring Structural Standards Board which included 20 items on the agenda. So far this year, the board has heard 58 cases, 49 of which called for the demolition of a dilapidated structure.

In action closely related to the actions of the board, council members approved the second and final reading of an ordinance ammending the city building code. The ammendment allows the city to order demolition of a structure within 90 days even if the owner holds a demolition permit, which could allow him more time.

In other business, council members:

—Allowed placement of two mobile homes at different spots in the city.

Approved minutes for meetings of the Big Spring Steering Committee, and the Planning and Zoning Committee.

—Denied a claim for damages by Mrs. Francis Hock on the recommendation of Assistant City Manager Bill Brown.

—Appointed council members to various committees, including: Polly Mays, Audit Committee; Bill Henkel, Accident Review Board; and Ralph Brooks, Big Spring Steering Committee.

Actress is bludgeoned

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — An aspiring actress who auditioned for the lead role in a play called "Hammer" was bludgeoned to death by the playwright with a sledge hammer, according to a detective.

Three men and a woman were arrested Monday, but their names were not released pending issuance of warrants that are expected to charge them in connection with the slaying of Patricia Cowan, Detective Peter Keliher said.

Police said warrants would be sought today for the playwright, his girlfriend — who allegedly watched the attack — and two other men.

Ms. Cowan's 4-year-old son, Dequan, also was struck with the hammer, Keliher said. The child remains hospitalized with serious injures today.

Ms. Cowan, 20, was paid $100 for reading the part at the home of the playwright Sunday morning, said Brenda Murray Starr, a friend of the slain woman.

The actress was playing a scene in which a married couple are arguing, Keliher said. At the height of the argument, the playwright suddenly grabbed a five-pound, shorthandled sledge hammer and struck Ms. Cowan several times in the head from behind, Keliher said.

The attack occurred in the playwright's garage, Keliher said.

Ms. Cowan, along with her injured son, was dumped in a alley about four blocks from the garage, police said. Boys who were skateboarding nearby heard the child's screaming and discovered the mother and son in a bloody pile of garbage.

The woman's car had been set afire, police said.

Police found the hammer and some blood-stained clothing. They said the murder appeared to have been planned.

Ms. Starr, who worked with the victim in the amateur acting troupe called Detroit's Finest Love Theatrical Company, said she was initially offered the $100 for the reading, but turned it down.

Ledbetter greets voters here Thursday morning

Harry Ledbetter, seeking the nomination for State Treasurer in the Democratic primary May 6, will be in Big Spring Thursday at 11 a.m.

Ledbetter will be at the Chamber of Commerce to meet the public at that hour.

Ledbetter points out, "The State Treasurer, elected statewide for a four-year term, is responsible for the management and investment of the taxpayers' money from the time it is collected until it is spent."

The treasurer is the public's banker and all Texans are his stockholders, according to Ledbetter.

HARRY LEDBETTER

He says, in part, "I will bring a citizen's approach, not a political approach, to managing the office. I will use the same car and concern that responsible citizens use in managing their family budgets and businesses."

He said, "I will try to improve the overall financial structure of state government and will rule on the granting of bank charters only after detailed financial and economic study and not because of political considerations."

Ledbetter, born in Abilene and reared in Breckenridge, earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at Texas A&M where he quarterbacked the football team. Now a business and financial consultant, Ledbetter, 33, his wife, Linda and their two daughters reside in Austin.

Bob Moore, his local campaign chairman, says, "Come and meet this candidate for one of the most important posts in the state of Texas."

Lamesa egg hunt is abandoned

LAMESA — A community tradition cracked up this year after the annual Chamber of Commerce Easter Egg Hunt turned into an apparent pushing and shoving contest.

Parents were reported to have gotten into the act helping their children find the eggs in record time.

The chamber and supporting merchants spent $600 and it took nearly an hour to hide them. It took less than two and one half minutes for kids and parents to push and shove and pick them all up.

The Retail Merchants committee abandoned the project, saying that it was not helping the supporting merchants or apparently much of anyone else.

Arrives here

Harry Spannaus, director of Big Spring's Industrial Park, obtained an estimated $100,000 worth of ultra high frequency equipment for the Municipal Airport Monday.

Spannaus had been in contact with the Air Force and when the opportunity arose to obtain the equipment in Wichita and Emporia, Kan., Monday, he flew direct to Kansas to be first on hand for the needed equipment.

The equipment will be used in the control tower to replace equipment taken when Webb left.

Spannaus flew back with part of the equipment Monday afternoon. Bob Clark and Dick Egan were driving back with the remainder in a truck rented in Kansas.

Offbeat: Crossing the railroad

NORTH VERNON, Ind. (AP) — Someone's been working on the railroad and officials at the Madison Railway Co. aren't sure why.

Last week, Madison president Michael Klaus was caught by surprise when he came upon one of the railroad's highway crossings and found state workers removing rails and ties and repaving the roadway.

An unknown party had given the highway department permission to remove the crossing on the premise that the rail line was abandoned.

The result is that the crossing will have to be rebuilt so the 22-mile line connecting North Vernon and Madison can return to service. Only one or two freight trains use the track each week, Klaus said.

Tops on TV: Film concludes

COMMENTS OF INDICTMENTS — Former Associate FBI Director W. Mark Felt, and his wife Audrey, appear on NBC's "TODAY" television show Tuesday in Washington. Felt, who was indicted Monday on a charge of conspiring to violate the rights of citizens through unlawful break-ins, called the indictments a "tragic mistake."

To restore colors

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Gov. Meldrim Thomson, citing "complaints from all over the state," has ordered the immediate restoration of New Hampshire's traditional green and white automobile license plates.

It seems that New Hampshire residents are upset because the interim red and white plates that the Motor Vehicle Division began issuing several months ago look too much like Massachusetts tags.

The Legislature last year approved special five-year reflectorized plates which will become available later this year. The red and white plates were issued for interim registrations of new cars.

Thomson said Monday that "most of those objecting say the red and white plates look like Massachusaetts registration plates and that they don't want to be identified as Massachusetts drivers."

Pedigree pet rock

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The city of Salem soon will have its own $31,000 pet rock — or at least that's what detractors are calling a 30-foot concrete monolith rising on a city-owned island in the Willamette River.

The concrete rock is for the benefit of budding mountaineers who want to practice close to home. Oregon has plenty of real rocks, but the mountain climbers didn't want to drive the 50 miles or so up to the Cascades.

The rock, financed under the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, has caused a flap among City Council members, who didn't hear about it until after construction began.

A move to stop construction last week failed on a 4-4 vote.

Quilt comes back

VISALIA, Calif. (AP) — Three years ago, a television set, a clock and an antique handmade quilt were stolen from the Visalia home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Noice.

On Sunday, Noice found on his doorstep a cardboard box containing the remnants of the quilt, washed so many times it was falling apart.

Attached to the box was a note in which the burglar said he sold the television set to support a drug habit which he has since kicked.

"I am a Chrstian now," the note read. "I pray that the Lord will speak to your heart and you will forgive me."

The burglar, who called himself "a very unworthy person" at the end of the note, promised to repay the Noices for the television when he gets some money.

Noice said the return of the quilt, even though in threads, showed that "some man has gotten a change of heart."

Four flee jail again in Idabel

IDABEL, Okla. (AP) — Four prisoners who've previously escaped from the McCurtain County Jail escaped again this morning armed with a revolver, but 14 other prisoners refused to flee their cells, Sheriff Paul Stuart said.

Stuart said one prisoner obtained a hacksaw blade, apparently from a visitor, and used it to cut through his cell. The prisoner then freed another prisoner and the two jumped Guard Cecil Tom from behind at about 2:20 a.m. today as he was inspecting cells, taking the guard's keys, .38 caliber revolver and $10 in cash, Stuart said.

The two prisoners — who Stuart identified as Stanley J. Williams, 21, and Roy Gene Roddy, 23 — then locked Tom in a cell and unlocked two other jail cells, Stuart said.

The sheriff said two other prisoners then agreed to join Williams and Roddy in their escape.

"They asked all the others if they wanted to go, and the others said no," Stuart said.

The sheriff identified the two other escapees as Eddie Lambert and James Larry Clayborn, both 18.

Stuart said the four fled in Tom's personal car, but abandoned the vehicle about 12 blocks away.

Officials received no reports of other cars being stolen in the area.

All police agencies in Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas were alerted to be on the lookout for the escapees.

Public hearing draws no one

The Howard County Commissioners Monday afternoon handled a routine agenda. A public hearing on the proposed amendment to the Revenue Sharing Fund budget drew no listeners. The court approved the amendments, which according to County Auditor Virginia Black involved bringing last year's funds into this year's budget. The change affects primarily equipment and maintenance funds. No salaries were affected.

In other action, the court accepted a bid for a new typewriter in the Sheriff's Department. The bid from Marlin's for $693 was accepted over a bid from IBM for $774.

The commissioners also agreed to extend the grass lease at the Howard County Airport three months and canvassed the ballots for the Howard County School Board.

Three arrests made in Lamesa thefts

LAMESA — Three men were arrested late Friday and charged with burglary in connection with the breaking in, theft of property and over $105,000 worth of vandalism and arson at the Aten Exchange of the Poka-Lambro Telephone Cooperative, Inc. last November.

The three were Charles Elvin Moore, 21; Bobby Glen Follis, 20 and Thomas Brewer, 17. All three are out on $15,000 bond each.

Dawson County Sheriff Guy Kinnison said an 11-year-old boy and his dog who were out hunting and dug up some test equipment which officials say was taken in the 1977 burglary.

The youth took the equipment to his father who called the sheriff and further investigation led to the arrest of the three men.

They had been seen in the area where the equipment was buried, according to the sheriff.

Kinnison said the test equipment and a few fire extinguishers were taken from the Aten Exchange building and then a fire was started in the battery room which in turn damaged the actual phone equipment in the next room.

Damages in the incident reached an excess of $104,000 which makes it the most expensive case of vandalism that the sheriff remembers in Dawson County.

Poka-Lambro offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those involved.

The equipment was found in Borden County, but the three men have been living in O'Donnell so the Lyn County sheriff's department became involved in the case.

The cold front which brought storms and thundershowers to Texas moved out early today, and skies were clearing over the Lone Star State.

Because of the clear sky, temperatures dropped very close to freezing this morning in West Texas. At 4 a.m., the temperature was 33 at Marfa, 34 at Amarillo and Dalhart, 35 at Midland and 36 at Lubbock and Wink.

Elsewhere across the state, under partly cloudy or cloudy skies, temperatures ranged from the 30s in the northwest to the 60s along the coast.

Light rain and showers continued over parts of South Texas and East Texas last night as the front exited. A small disturbance produced light showers over the Panhandle during the night, but early this morning all activity had ceased and skies were clearing.

The National Weather Service said it should be fair over most of the state today, although some widely scattered showers were expected again in portions of East and South Texas.

High temperatures this afternoon were expected to range from the 60s in the north to the 70s in the west and south.

Candidates list contributions

By BOB BURTON

The green fuel used to keep the campaigns burning was listed by contributor in the statements filed in the County Clerk's office Thursday. Five candidates, of the nine listing contributions, listed the names of their major contributors. The other four, by law, maintained that all their funds came in under $50 gifts, thus not requiring listing.

County Judge candidates Milton Kirby and Frankie Boyd listed their contributions. Kirby named $500 from Bob McClure, $50 from Continental Enterprises, and $150 from D.L. Dorland. Boyd listed $100 from Nell Sanders. Candidate Bill Tune, who listed $120 in contributions, named no individual contributors.

Justice of the Peace candidates Gus Ochotorena, Jerry Roach, and Lewis Heflin also listed their contributors. Ochotorena, who claimed $270 in contributions, listed $170 as from Mrs. Lupe Garcia, sponsor of a fund-raising dinner. Roach listed $65 of his $105 as from Robert Roach. Lewis Heflin listed $200 from Quality Truck Tire and $100 from Toots Mansfield. Heflin declared a total of $425 in contributions.

The other candidate in the race, Robert C. (Bob) Smith, maintains that all of the $640 listed as contributions came in amounts under $50 from separate contributors.

Other candidates listing contributions without listing individual donors are: Bill Westbrook, candidate commissioner precinct four, $40, and Terry Hanson, candidate precinct four, $100.

Candidates Bill Bennett and Lulu Adams have belatedly filed their financial statements with the County Clerk's office.

Bennett, a candidate for county commissioner precinct two, listed $646 in campaign expenditures and no contributions. He filed at noon Monday.

Adams, the incumbent candidate for Justice of the Peace, precinct two, listed $267.20 in campaign expenditures and no contributions. She filed at 10 a.m. today.

Billie Carr, candidate for county judge, and Robert McIntosh, candidate for Justice of the Peace, precinct two, have not yet filed statements.

The statements for all four candidates were due Thursday. Under state law, their names will remain on the ballot only until a qualified citizen filss suit in 118th District Court to have them removed.

Attorneys are backing me, candidate insists

By MARJ CARPENTER

Bob Dickenson, candidate for justice of the 11th Court of Civil Appeals was visiting with friends today at the Chamber of Commerce office.

"If you are in doubt as to who is the best qualified candidate for this post, ask your own family lawyer," Dickenson stated here today.

"I am backed by nearly every attorney in the 23-county district and the attorneys are the ones who really have to deal with the Court of Civil Appeals," Dickenson stated.

He is seeking the unexpired term of Esco Walters, who retired at the age of 70. His term is being filled at this time by his brother-in-law, Brian Bradberry, who is not seeking re-election.

Austin McLeod is chief justice of the court and Raleigh Brown is also a justice on the three man court.

"This court has a good record of keeping its docket clear and getting to the cases within four months. It is important that well-qualified men be kept on the court so that there is no delay in appeals," Dickenson stressed.

Dickenson was born at Santa Anna, raised in Cross Plains, Albany, Cisco and Stamford. He graduated from Texas Tech with honors in 1954 and attended law school at SMU on an academic scholarship, graduating in 1967.

He was assistant professor of law at Baylor University in 1959-60 and has been in full time general civil law practice in Abilene since that time in the firm of Wagstaff, Harrell, Pope, Alvis, Dickenson and Erwin.

Active in the Abilene Bar Association and State Bar of Texas, he is active in the Methodist Church and former president of the Abilene Zoological Society and former trustee of the Abilene Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

His local campaign manager is Bob Miller.

Kirby new president

The Big Spring Evening Lions met Monday night at Coker's Restaurant and elected their 1978-79 officers. Taking office July 1 will be: Milton Kirby, president; Al Bagwell, first vice president; Roy Rosene, second vice president; Ray Prater, third vice president; Vergil Perkins, secretary-treasurer; Gene Kimble, tail twister; Sonny Shroyer, lion tamer; Bobby Wall and Oscar Zertuche, one-year directors; W.J. Ringener, Jr., and Bill Wood, two-year directors; J.O. Hagood, greeter; Ed Shive, club camp director; and David Jansch, club reporter.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Jack White of Big Spring and Lt. Jimmy Rhoads, of the Midland DPS presented the program. White stressed the importance of obeying the 55 mph speed limit, and the statistics which prove that adherence to the limit and fewer highway fatalities.

Vanessa Cooper, chapter queen was also in attendance at the meeting.

Harris to be sworn in

The Big Spring School Board of Trustees will swear in new member Bert Harris at their meeting this afternoon. Charles Beil, who was also newly elected to the post, is in Arizona on a business trip and will be unable to attend the ceremony.

Harris and Beil will replace vice president of the board Jim Bill Little and member Don Reynolds. Both incumbents declined to run during the last election.

Election of officers will follow.

Other agenda items include one which may require an executive session.

Discussion of the HEW litigation with attorneys Guil Jones and Mike McKinney will bring Harris up to date on the legal status of the school.

Snyder plans wet-dry vote

Snyder will hold a wet-dry election May 8 to determine whether off premises sale of alcoholic beverages can be held inside the city limits.

A petition with 700 names was submitted to the commissioners court April 5 and certified as valid names.

The last wet-dry election was held in Snyder in August 1972. The election failed by a substantial vote at that time.

Volunteers for 22 years

VA's faithful workers

By CARLA WALKER

"Most people don't stick with a paying job for 22 years, but Leighton and Cloe Mundt have been coming out to the Veteran's Hospital Chapel volunteering since 1956," said local VA Chaplain Clayton Hicks.

Mrs. Mundt plays the piano for a Sunday School class on sixth floor, as well as for the Sunday services in the hospital chapel, and Mr. Mundt has helped out by taking wheel chair patients to the services, passing out bulletins, ushering in the chapel, and many other activities.

"We feel that we can do more there than we could in another place," said Mrs. Mundt. "In a large church, I wouldn't be able to use my talents, because there are many pianists. We feel needed at the VA, and that makes the volunteering even more rewarding."

"Rather than interfering with church, the VA chapel has really become our church," said Mrs. Mundt. "It usually lets out shortly after 11 a.m., and that is too late to attend another church. For awhile, that bothered us, but we have found more happiness with the Chapel as our church than we could find anywhere else. We feel that we belong there."

Mr. Mundt, himself a veteran of WWI, frequently visits buddies at the hospital.

The couple began volunteering after Mrs. Mundt was asked to substitute as pianist one Sunday in 1958. The regular Sunday pianist later quit, and Mrs. Mundt took on the job as her regular responsibility. The couple has put in about 7,000 hours each volunteering at the hospital since that first Sunday, missing only a few Sundays since 1956.

Mrs. Mundt says her interest in music consciously began at the age of four, when a family who lived near her home in Garden City had a phonograph and about six records.

"I'd listen to them, then go home and pick them out on our tin tub, asking my mother if it sounded like the tune," said Mrs. Mundt. "She sensed that I wanted to learn music, so she bought a piano for me, and I was lucky enough to study under a lot of good instructors everywhere my family moved.

"I remember one instructor — Professor Dawes — who was from England. With his help, and the help of Pearl Cole, one of his advanced students, I was able to learn a lot," said Mrs. Mundt.

She took violin and organ lessons also, and as assistant organist at the First Methodist Church in Wichita. She played on one of the first radio "Church of the Air" broadcasts, and continued playing there for some three years.

Mrs. Mundt is highly educated, lacking only a few hours having her masters degree. She obtained her bachelors from West Texas State University at Canyon, but attended three other colleges — Denton, Peabody Institute, and Columbia University. She has taught music courses locally, as well as working 19 years as a public school teacher in various Texas schools.

The former Cloe Stripling, she came to the Matador Ranch at the age of two, but her mother didn't like it, so they moved to Garden City, then to a place 10 miles south of Big Spring, and finally to Big Spring in 1905. She has since lived in a number of towns and cities including Wichita Falls.

Mr. Mundt was born in Chicago, the son of a street car conductor. The family left Chicago in a box car with one team of horses after life in Chicago became harder and harder to tolerate. They went first to Oklahoma, then came to Texas and Big Spring.

Mr. Mundt served in the Army in WWI, and volunteered for the National Guard in WWII.

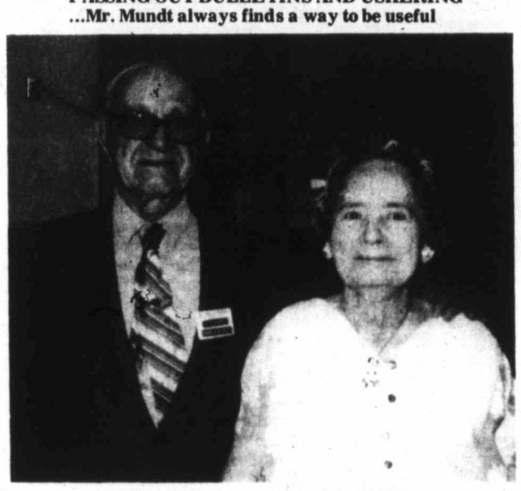

According to Mr. Mundt, "Girls have plagued me all my life." The couple has two daughters, Ruth Bumpurs, who lives in Arkansas, and Mrs. John Williams, of Georgia. Of five grandchildren, three are boys, but they are the only males in the family. "I've got five of the cutest great-grandchildren and — you can probably guess — they're all girls," he laughed.

Working at the VA Hospital has become a way for the Mundts to stay busy and be helping others at the same time.

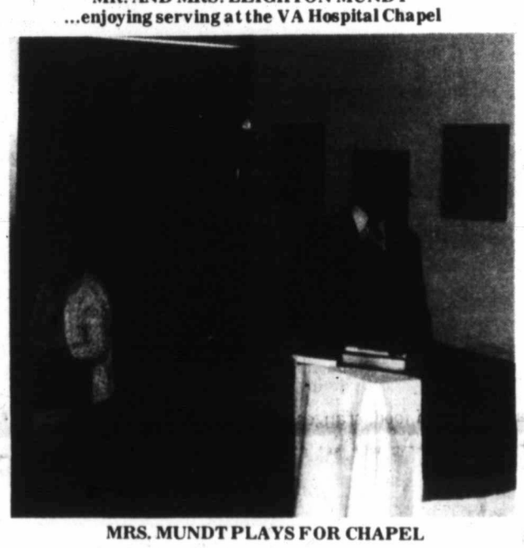

"I doubt that there is another VA chaplain who can say that he has a volunteer pianist who has stuck with the program for 22 years," said Chaplain Hicks, "and the Mundts have both fit into the Chapel services and done all they could to help the veterans staying at the hospital. We all appreciate what they have done, and we just wanted them to know that."

'Access' is a key word in probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Korea is reportedly offering House investigators access to a former ambassador accused of distributing envelopes stuffed with $100 bills to congressmen.

But the House ethics committee investigators say discussions are continuing and a knowledgeable source says "the problem comes over the word 'access.'

"They may be willing to provide access, but not in ways acceptable to the committee," the source said.

He declined to specify what kind access was reportedly offered.

South Korea's offer was delivered to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill during an hour-long meeting Monday by present Ambassador Kim Hyun Chul, who went to Seoul for consultations on the question.

The former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo, and his wife were accused at ethics committee hearings last October of trying to give the $100 bill-stuffed envelopes to at least three congressmen.

A former embassy employee testified that he saw the former ambassador put about two dozen such envelopes in his coat pockets.

Meanwhile, at a House ethics committee hearing Monday, former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., swore under oath that he never offered to make payoffs to fellow congressmen and never considered Tongsun Park a Korean agent.

Hanna pleaded guilty three weeks ago to conspiring with Park to try to influence congressional actions.

He awaits sentencing as the first past or present congressman to be convicted in connection with alleged South Korean influence-buying.

But Hanna swore he made no payoffs himself and said "at no time did I consider Tongsun Park a representative of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency or anybody else in the South Korean government."

Hanna denied under oath the testimony of former KCIA Director Kim Hyung Wook that the KCIA helped make Park Seoul's exclusive U.S. rice dealer after Hanna promised that some of the commission money would be paid to other congressmen "to help Korea's cause."

Hanna said he had urged South Korean officials, including President Park Chung Hee, to lobby Congress more effectively and among other things get campaign contributions to congressmen.

On retirement bill

Judgement is reserved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key members of congressional armed services committees are reserving judgment on a proposal to end eligibility for military retirement after 20 years service.

John Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services committee, said Monday the military retirement pay system "is urgent and demands attention."

However, he said he hasn't had a chance to review the recommendations made to President Carter and has no plans for hearings on the issue this year.

Carter said he would try to send a bill to Congress by next January to correct "serious defects" in the retirement system.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., head of the Armed Services' manpower and personnel subcommittee, said he too is reserving judgement on the proposals, made by a panel headed by former federal budget director Charles J. Zwick.

Under the current program, servicemen can retire after 20 years at half pay for life. The panel recommended that the 20 years be increased to 30.

"I think some changes will have to be made in the military retirement system," Nunn said. The proposal to increase the number of years required "needs some strong consideration," he added.

Nunn said any changes should have a "grandfather clause" so persons already in the military for, perhaps four to eight years, would not be affected.

On the House side, Rep. Bill Nichols, D-Ala., chairman of an Armed Services subcommittee on military compensation, was concerned about the effects of the proposals on military recruitment and retention.

Tom Eiland, Nichols press secretary, said Nichols feels the set of proposals "is a big package and ... he's not going to let it be railroaded.

Carter hopes concerted try to slow inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is looking to a concerted effort by the government and the private sector as one way to help solve the problem of rising inflation.

The president was unveiling his plan to fight spiraling prices in a speech an aide said had been written "to make it clear we can't deal effectively with these problems if we don't act together."

The aide, press secretary Jody Powell, called today's address to a convention of newspaper editors a "no-nonsense speech, devoid of comforting illusions."

The administration originally predicted prices would rise 6.1 percent this year. But some government economists say the increase could be closer to 7 percent.

Since returning from a trip to Africa and Latin America, the battle on inflation has been the No. 1 topic on the president's schedule.

He spent much of the weekend working on the speech after meeting earlier with congressional leaders, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and Charles Schultz, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

While White House aides said Carter wants to hold down military pay, a spokesman for the Council of Economic Advisers, Peter Gould, denied the administration was seeking wage constraints. He commented, "There will be no controls on pay. Period."

Aides said Carter is continuing to push for speedy passage of his energy program, sent to Congress nearly 12 months ago.

Carter has advocated raising federal taxes on gasoline to discourage use of the fuel, and cut to oil imports, but such a tax would also raise prices and contribute to inflation.

One White House aide said "a strong emphasis on energy" was written into today's speech because oil imports remain "the key to the problem." The United States imports approximately half of the petroleum it uses.

The role of the energy legislation in fighting inflation has been one of Carter's frequent themes, as he attempts to deal with the worst trade deficit in the nation's history and the declining value of the dollar.

Commerce Department figures indicate the United States imported $4.5 billion more in goods than it sold abroad in February, topping the $3.6 billion balance-of-payments deficit of last October and marking the 21st monthly deficit in a row.

The deficit was a blow to the administration's attempts to reduce the balance-of-payments figures below last year's $26.7 billion.

Airline rate hike sought

By the Associated Press

Southwest Airlines Co., which instituted low-cost economy air fare rates that forced other airlines to follow suit, is asking the Texas Aeronautics Commission to allow Southwest to increase its basic one-way fares by $3 and its basic round-trip fare by $5.

The company has experienced a 121 percent average increase in input costs during the 1973-1977 period — about $3 per passenger — without a corresponding increase in fares, according to Southwest Airlines' annual report.

If the commission approves, Southwest's basic pleasure-class fare would be $18 for a one-way ticket and $35 for a round-trip ticket. Its basic executive-class fare would be $28 one way and $55 round trip.

Oil spills pose problems for us all

Any number of America's coastal cities have commiserate with the people on the Brittany shore.

Brittany was preparing for another big tourist season recently when an oil spill occurred there — blackening beaches, killing wildlife, spoiling the fishing water.

Oil slicks are happening throughout the world with increasing frequency. The outcome is generally the same, they differ only in magnitude.

Like all other such disasters, the mess fouling the Brittany coast is difficult to treat. This one, no doubt, is harder to combat because of the sheer bulk of the spill and the wind shifts.

Crews cannot navigate into the slick because it has drifted into the shore. Some firms have long boasted that their chemical dispensers will neutralize just such problems but such mixtures, according to Adm. Jacques Coulondres, are more dangerous to marine life than useful. Coulondres is head of the cleanup effort, a thankless job.

Sea disasters have always been a fact of life, or since man first put out to the sea in ships. Now oil spills are something which man has grown to expect.

Mankind, however, must come up with some solution to the problem and it is a worry to which all nations should lend attention.

If man is going to feed the abundance of people he is placing upon this earth, he must turn to the sea for help. The oceans are a largely untapped resource for food, new oil reserves and other potential benefits which we can scarcely grasp.

It's one thing to squander fuel in such a way, with the commodity in such short supply. It is something else again to think what long range effect the oil spills will have on the oceans. The seven seas have already been badly polluted by unthinking man and each time an oil spill occurs that pollution grows.

The shipping industry must police itself and exact stricter regulations on the structure of oil and gas-bearing ships. Mankind can ill afford to wait.

We need the oil, as never before in history, but we must also do whatever we can to protect the environment against the inroads of 'progress.'

No plan in offing

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — A clue to where Jimmy Carter has gone wrong is found in the rejection of four-month-old advice that he would be "out on a limb" if new spending programs for the cities were proposed without the bureaucratic streamlining promised in the Carter campaign.

A Dec. 5 staff memorandum containing that warning is consigned to limbo. President Carter's urban plan unveiled March 27 contains not a word about reorganizing the inefficient, sprawling bureaucracy which sprays tax money into the cities. No such plan will be offered this year. Nor is there any firm commitment for the future.

Since the mess in urban programs generally (and in the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) specifically) is not disputed at the White House, the reason for not reorganizing it this year is wholly political. Administration officials privately admit they dare not anger big city mayors and black leaders in an election year.

THAT SHOWS Mr. Carter following the conventional wisdom in politics that he defied in his spectacular climb from nowhere. Preoccupied with global diplomacy, he now relies for domestic strategy on the judgment of conventional politicians. So the pledge to reorganize government that helped win the presidency sinks to low priority.

This was not so clear last Dec. 5 when a staffer named Lester M. Salamon drafted a seven-page memo to his boss Harrison Wellford, head of the President's Reorganization Project. He warned that the evolving urban plan "lacks a coherent focus and consists basically of proposals for expanded funding of existing programs capped by a highly dubious, free-standing development bank that will do as much to contribute to the fragmentation of federal efforts as it will to promote economic growth in the cities."

This "leaves the President out on a limb with respect to his campaign pledge to simplify and rationalize existing programs before adding new dollars or new programs to them," Salamon's memo continued. "As the institutional embodiment of those pledges, our failure to protect the President vigorously on this point could be costly."

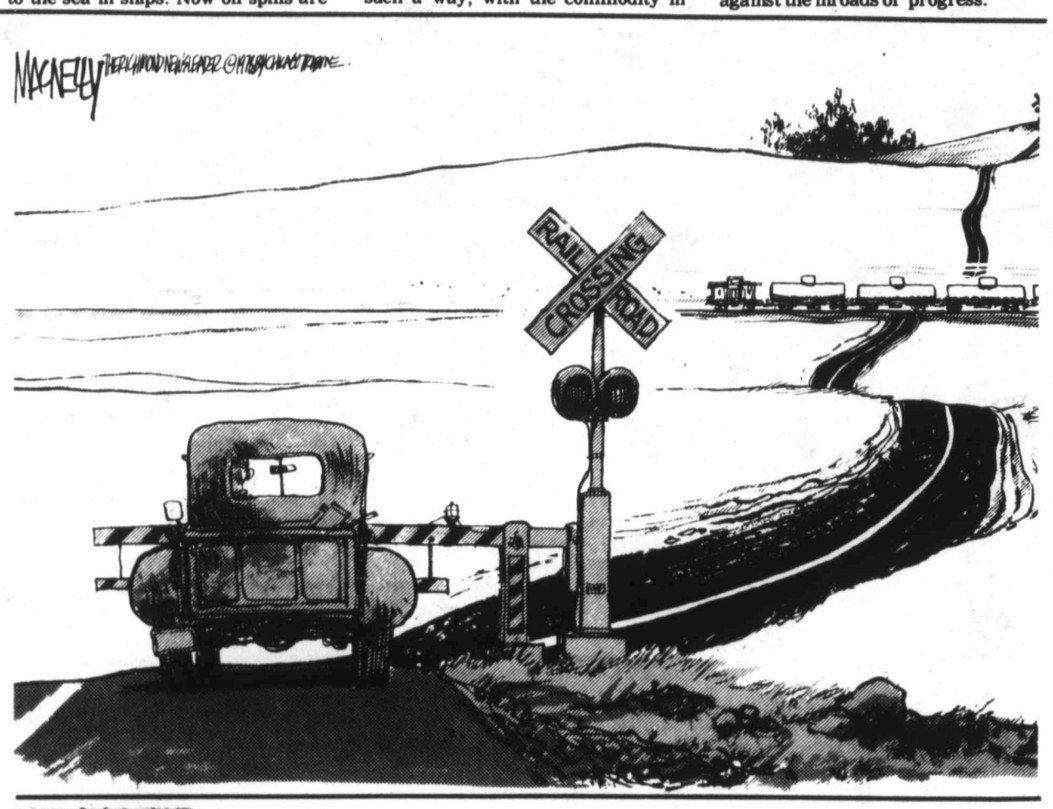

IT WAS too late, said Salamon, for reorganization schemes if the urban plan were released before Christmas. But they could be ready by March. Certainly there was no disputing the need: "All parties seem to agree that the fragmented, disjointed character of federal programs in this area is a big part of the problem."

"All parties" did not include HUD. The attitude there was epitomized by Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris on NBC's "Meet the Press" April 2 when asked why not one existing program was eliminated: "There were no programs that we felt at this moment should be eliminated because each was meeting a very real need."

HUD's resistance coincided with the program review presided over by Vice President Walter Mondale to establish priorities for 1978. Mondale, a more conventional politician than the President, was scarcely the one to place reorganization above spending. "When we talked to Mondale about reorganization," one reorganizer told us, "we heard doubts about how much political freight the President can carry."

"We lost urban reorganization in the politics of 1978," one insider told us. Voluminous option papers presented Mr. Carter for determining his urban plan did not mention reorganization. Nor did reorganizer Wellford succeed in efforts to set a date in 1979 for reorganization.

ALTHOUGH SALAMON'S memo expressed fear that issuing the urban plan "could foreclose important reorganization options," it is not too late.

Time of pain can be important

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have sciatica, but it bothers me only when I am lying down and on arising in the morning. After I hobble about for an hour it completely disappears. I am 63 and had this condition many years before menopause. Please explain how to correct this problem. — Mrs. E.C.

The fact that it affects you only when lying down could be significant to an orthopedic doctor (bone specialist), whom you should see about it. It's a matter of just how the move involved is being pressed upon to cause the pain. Apparently in your case this occurs by pressure in the lying position.

It could turn out not to be sciatica at all but a blood circulation problem that corrects itself with activity. Answers to such problems require first-hand observation and examination.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am past 70 and during a recent checkup was told I have a hiatal hernia. It was news to me because I never had any of the symptoms of it you talk about. Is it possible to have one all your life and not have symptoms? — J.U.

I wonder if your doctor did say you had a hiatal hernia or some other kind. Hiatal hernia is not detectable except through X-rays of the gullet and stomach-chest area. The hernia occurs under the breastbone (in the esophagus). Perhaps you had barium X-rays for some other problem and it was discovered accidentally, which is not uncommon. Yes, some persons may have such a hernia and never have discomfort others have. Many have the hernia with no symptoms until at some point in their lives they gain weight or otherwise place new pressures on the area. Years themselves may cause further deterioration of the hernia and produce symptoms. Hiatal hernia is discussed more fully in my booklet on the subject, for which send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald. One source I have indicates that a "sliding" hiatal hernia may be found by X-ray in about 40 per cent of the population. This is one that appears and reappears. It seldom gives any trouble, and might be what you have.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a stress test (EKG) and it was negative. The report mentioned "occasional ventricular ectopic beats." I don't understand that. I also have low blood sugar, and your booklet helped me a lot. — C.J.

These are extra beats in the ventricles, the lower chambers of the heart. They are not uncommon in normal beats, although they can be found with various disorders that affect the heart. Since you did pass the EKG test there's no need to be concerned about the fancy terminology. The extra beats may not be noted in regular tests, but pop up with stress, as from mild exercise.

You would notice them as skipped or extra beats. Ordinarily, they require no treatment unless they are frequent or prolonged. A bit too much coffee or tobacco can cause them, as can a thyroid disorder or a chemical imbalance. Your hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) might contribute to the situation.

The cardiogram should be checked again in a few months go see if there is any significant change. Reread the last section of your booklet, where emotional factors and low blood sugar are discussed in connection with this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was interested in the letter from Mrs. C. who had the problem of raw, red itchy areas in the crevices under her breasts. I had a similar problem. I discovered it was a fabric softener I had started to use on my underthings in the dryer. I stopped using it and had no more trouble. — Mrs. Z.D.A.

Soaps, detergents, and the fabric itself, should all be considered as possible culprits in such rashes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How long does it take for stitches to heal after delivery? — Mrs. W.D.

Four to six weeks.

Low blood sugar is often the cause of faintness, headaches, visual and emotional disturbances. To learn how it can be identified and brought under control, write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of "Help for Hypoglycemia," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis," write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Editor:

I feel that the citizens of Big Spring and Howard County should know what a fantastic and beautiful healing place the Detox Center is.

Because of the director, Ed Mitchell, and the assistant director, Leroy Richart, and the staff I have been given the opportunity to be a functional individual again. I came all the way from Austin to get help at the Detox Center of Big Spring and I am so grateful that there is such a place to help individuals suffering from the abuse of alcohol and alcoholism.

My wife and I want to thank you, Big Spring, for the Detox Center and a chance for me to reconstruct my life.

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: We have been studying about all the terrible things that Christians did in the past, including the Crusades and the holy wars. How do you explain such horrible things? — L. P.

DEAR L. P.: Yes, there certainly have been some cruel things done by people who claimed to be Christians. Some people look at things like this and conclude that Christianity must be a hoax. However, I don't believe that such thinking is logical.

Think of it this way. Christianity is based on Christ. Did Christ teach that people should commit the sort of evil acts you describe? If He did, then those who committed these acts would be obeying their leader, Christ. And if He did command Christians to do such things, then I could understand why people would reject Him.

But Christ did not teach such things. In fact, He taught just the opposite. Instead of killing your enemies, you should seek to win them by love: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love they neighbour, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you" (Matthew 5:43-44).

Therefore, when men do evil things in the name of Christ, they are not acting as Christians — in fact, they are doing the opposite. To be a Christian is not simply to call yourself one or to be a member of a certain group. To be a Christian we must turn in faith to Christ in repentance for our evil deeds, and we must seek to live under His direction in our lives. When we do this, we will not be guilty of doing evil deeds in the name of Christ.

Disposable lives

Around the rim

Dusty Richard

I just love this disposable society that we live in today, don't you? Not only do we have disposable paper plates and napkins and almost everything else, we are getting to the point that people and animals are disposable after we have finished with them.

Every week, Eileen and I get a picture of an animal whose owners have "disposed" of him. Puppies and kittens bought "because they look so cute" grow up and become dogs and cats. Dogs and cats who need training and discipline and feeding and all the other things that go along with being a functioning animal. But most, no, maybe not most, but a great deal anyway, of people don't want that responsibility after the dog or cat is no longer just cute. Or when the female dogs or cats that they never got around to "fixing" get pregnant and threatens their owners with a deluge of cute little puppies who no longer seem so cute in sets of eight.

SO WHAT DOES the owner do? Drowns the puppies or kittens, if they are allowed to be born, or takes the mother out on a deserted country road and abandons her. This dog or cat was raised by people and is pregnant — not a good prognosis for survival. Sometimes, more compassionate people find her and bring her home until she has the puppies or kittens, and then take her and her babies to the pound in the hope that someone will see them and take them home. At least the puppies or kittens have a chance. But who wants a full-grown dog or cat? Not many people. That would be like adopting a 16-year-old kid — it just isn't done — potential parents want babies. "Cute" ones, if possible.

My parents live on the outskirts of San Antonio, and I couldn't count all the times that dogs and cats, mostly pregnant ones, get dumped off the vicinity of their house. They have a little land that has become a haven for homeless animals. Sure, some of the cats that run around there now were ones that we ourselves got, but most are cats or the offspring of cats that were abandoned by their owners. (The only dog was dumped there.) And my parents, try as they might, cannot stand the thought that these animals might go hungry because of the selfishness and inhumanity of a irresponsible percentage of the population, so they let them join the little band of animals who run around the place killing mice for a living but mostly living off the generosity of the Poulks.

Not only animals are disposable nowadays. People are too. I was horrified by an article in the January issue of "Psychology Today." It advocated letting the elderly of America kill themselves.

The author, not wanting this to sound so bad, suggested that we call it "accomplishing" suicide rather than "committing" it as though it were a crime, so that the old folks would feel proud rather than ashamed that they were going to take their lives.

Another reason for saying "accomplishing" suicide is, "it would encourage a greater rate of success and fewer failed attempts," she says.

ISN'T THAT GREAT? Isn't that a novel idea? Let the elderly of America kill themselves because, after all, they do get to be a burden...what with being old and infirm, forgetting things all the time, maybe even unable to do things for themselves. And starting up a program to get them all to commit suicide is ever so much more easy than starting up a program to get them to want to live — to feel as though they are worth something, even if they are a little old and forgetful and sometimes cranky. Hell yeah, let all the old folks kill themselves — what do we care? There'll be more left for us young folks if they do. (Try to forget that someday we'll be the oldsters, and there'll be a whole new crop of young people suggesting programs of "self-euthanasia.")

"It's tragic and shameful that the situation of the elderly in this country is so bad that suicide is even considered an option," said Robert Butler, head of the National Institute on Aging, after reading the article, called "A Right To Suicide," by Doris Portwood, herself 64 years old.

Its not that I don't believe that a person has a right to die with dignity and to choose not to be supported by artificial methods for such a long time that he becomes a vegetable. I even think it's okay for a person with a terminal disease, such as cancer, who knows that he will suffer pain and degradation before dying, to kill himself. But how in the world can we say that it's okay for people who "are in the way," "taking up space" and "not contributing to society" because of their age or mentality or any thing else that makes them unwanted, to "accomplish suicide".

TO PARAPHASE what one person said in a letter in the April issue of "Psychology Today," we might start out saying that dogs and cats who become problems should be killed. Maybe everyone would agree with this — I don't, because I love animals far too much to throw them away like snotty Kleenexes — then we go on to say that it's okay to kill unborn babies if the mother just really doesn't feel like having a baby this year, thank you (another thorny problem, because in some cases I feel that abortion is justified), well, after we say that old people who don't have any reason to go on living should just kill themselves, the next logical step is to get rid of mentally retarded people, because after all, we don't need them, do we? or maybe we'll get to the point that children born with birth defects are quietly "terminated" in the delivery room, or that people who are drug addicts are killed, because they really are a threat to other people's lives and possessions, and then perhaps it'll be things like deafness and blindness that will get a person killed (imperfect people need not apply) and finally, near- or farsightedness, kidney disease, problem drinkers — a multitude of sins and imperfections could be wiped out of American society with the touch of a button.

That's fine, really fine. A perfect world: "1984", "Brave New World," "Utopia," "Logan's Run" — such fine blueprints of our future.

The only thing that scares me is that maybe it's okay as long as it's them we're terminating, but what if someone decides the next to go should be me — or you?

Firing advocated

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — For the past year, we have been keeping an eye on one of those obscure but powerful bureaucrats whose every official act affects the lives and welfare of millions.

He is William Heffelfinger, currently the director of administration for the Department of Energy (DOE). Once a reputed hatchet man for the Nixon White House, he has managed to cling tenaciously to the public payroll.

We originally began investigating Heffelfinger last year after several government sources alleged he had attempted to rig a federal contract, engaged in improper hiring practices, and committeed other serious abuses. We spoke to him about the charges, which he denied.

WE THEN alerted top officials at the Department of Energy, who promised to investigate. They called us back several weeks later to announce they had not been able to substantiate the allegations against Heffelfinger. Their "investigation," it now appears, was a whitewash.

A team of investigators for the House Energy subcommittee has now substantiated the original allegations and has documented several other serious improprities against Heffelfinger.

In a sizzling, secret memo to subcommittee chairman Rep. John Dingell, D.-Mich., the investigators declared that "a number of the charges against Heffelfinger border on illegality." The $47,500-a-year bureaucrat, the investigators concluded, is "particularly unsuited to his sensitive role" at DOE and ought to be fired.

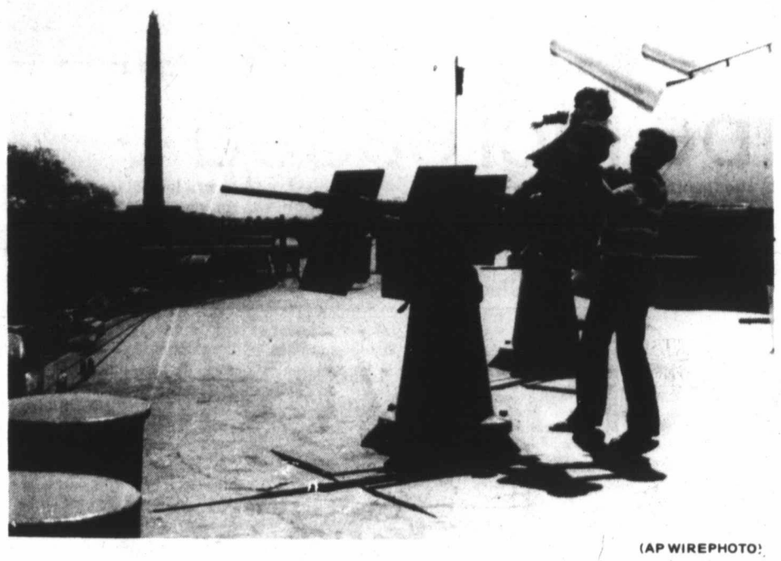

As he did with us, the pudgy Heffelfinger grimly denied virtually all of the subcommittee's charges against him. But the Dingell investigators dismissed his denials as flapdoodle. "Knowledgeable sources in each case directly contradict his testimony," they wrote. "In many cases, these charges are confirmed by several individuals."

The report raises these specific points against the 53-year-old government official:

—"Falsifying background information on his resume." Heffelfinger's resume stated that he was educated at the University of Kansas. But our own investigation showed he never attended the school. He finally admitted at a recent subcommittee hearing that the information was false. He contended the resumes were prepared by others and he did not know why the reference appeared. Heffelfinger also asserted on his personnel record that he had won an award for outstanding public service in 1960. As it turned out, he was merely nominated for the honor along with a number of other government officials.

—"Attempting to steer a contract for Coast Guard airplanes to North American Rockwell and threatening executives of competing firms." While working for the Department of Transportation, Heffelfinger was the dominant member of a review council which passed on all procurements for the department, including the Coast Guard. Heffelfinger's group reviewed one contract proposal for jet planes which required competitive bids. The group reviewed the process and attempted to give the contract to Rockwell without taking bids from competitors. An official of a competing company said Heffeflinger had angrily warned him to "get the hell off this procurement" and stop complaining to Congress. Following subsequent review, Rockwell lost the contract, Heffelfinger denied responsibiility for trying to rig the contract and said he made no threats.

—"Engaging in improper hiring practices." While a bigwig at the Transportation Department, the memo suggested, Heffelfinger tried to pack one of its agencies with former Rockwell employees.

Texas has split personality

Ship's rust hidden

By SUSAN LEVINE
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

SAN JACINTO BATTLEGROUND — The Battleship U.S.S. Texas suffers from a split personality.

Its starboard side is shined, painted, equipped and open to the public. Tourists delightedly venture down the hatches six decks deep into the ship's interior.

At first glance, the port side looks just as presentable, with repair work on its new wood top deck almost complete.

But below, closed to the public, rots six decks of rust, dampness and dark.

Here, proceeding beyond the fourth deck is dangerous, not only because the stairs and floors give way, but also because the air that far down becomes unbearable.

The ship's ticket taker, Relby Denvall, knows many areas are extremely hazardous. "A couple decks down, once you start to fall, you won't stop til you hit the bottom."

This part of the ship has been locked up, hidden away and abandoned since the ship was permanently docked at the San Jacinto Battleground in 1948.

Not until 1971, when the ship's condition so distressed a tourist that he wrote the governor, U.S. Navy and President, was an initial inspection conducted.

At that time, the Navy discovered advanced deterioration evident in structuraland deck areas.

The ship also received poor grades in safety and housekeeping. Damaged navigational instruments, hazardous electrical conditions and dirty work areas were identified in the '71 report as needing correction.

Only the exterior hull was found in satisfactory shape.

Yet the Navy refused to blame the state agency charged with the battleship for the poor conditions.

Instead, the state was called "negligent" in providing funds for the ship, while the Texas Battleship Commission was "to be commended for a job well done in the maintenance and preservation of Texas . . . The maintenance problems of the Battleship Texas are now and will always be a never ending process."

Operating expenses have worried commissioners all along. Funds come from foundation grants and souvenir and ticket receipts.

Yet the accounting procedures used for the financially essential ticket sales are incomplete.

Money is taken and tickets torn, but only handed to tourists upon request. (A ticket is not needed to board the ship.) Ensuring that a ticket is issued for each admission fee paid is not possible.

Additionally, more than $121,400 in tubing, steel materials and paint have been donated to the ship in the last five years, and federal grants of $220,000 soon may be available.

Despite the major, and escalating, repair costs, the ship has remained self-sustaining. But the condition of the port side mocks the preservation accomplishments cited throughout the rest of the ship.

"It's in bad shape. It should have been repaired when it was first honored," worker Mike Campbell said. "They just never got around to repairing it and closed it off. It was in good shape when first moored. No one's been down here in years, except for workers."

Like an intestinal parasite, rust slowly and quietly is eating away at the guts of this part of the ship. It speckles the once white cooridors and grinds at the touch of your feet.

Some doors leading to other areas of the ship are sealed, but many stand open. Musty silence greets a visitor. Thirty-year-old light bulbs remain in their sockets; sailors' old bunk springs hang from the wall.

It is as if an emergency suddenly forced the crew to bandon ship and never allowed anyone to return.

Seeing this would blow the public's image of the battleship, Campbell agrees.

Frank Schiemann, who is in charge of the current construction work, estimates $10,000 worth of copper and brass materials still sit inside the ship. He thinks the port side's second deck easily could be opened to the public, an idea Denvall has been considered bfore.

"You're not talking about that much expense, sandblasting and painting mainly," Schiemann said.

The bottom decks eventually should be filled with cement to prevent further deterioration, he believes: "You do that, and this ship will be here for eons."

Campbell is not so sure. Water constantly fills the two bottom decks, he says, and "sure, it's hurting the ship. It's going to cave in from the inside out."

Outside elements only worsen conditions a two-foot rust line, marked by the polluted waters of the muddy brown channel, encircles the ship's hull. Sandblasting continues nearly year-round, Denvall said, to prevent further deterioration.

Also corroded and disclolored by rust is the ship's high-rise tower, a nearly five-story strucutre topped by the familiar crow's nest. Navy terms define it as the ship's superstructure.

The 1977 inspection report compliments the ship's overall appearance as "very good," its routine maintenance as "excellent."

Yet to go below deck on the port side, one wonders.

Three children fire victims

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Three children died in this Southeast Texas city early Sunday in a fire that swept through a two-story duplex located near the downtown area, officials said.

Russell Baugh, 26, who was in an upstairs bedroom, was reported in stable condition at a Galveston hospital where he was being treated for burns and injuries sustained when he leaped from the burning building.

Police identified the dead children as Kenneth Turner, 2, Marcel Turner, 4, and Edgar Downey Jr., 6.

Investigators said the children's mother was not at home when the fire began but returned as firemen were battling the blaze.

A fire department spokesman quoted the fire marshal as saying the fire began near the water heater storage area.

Defecting Russian may seek asylum

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The highest-ranking Soviet employee of the United Nations, Arkady N. Shevchenko, is in hiding after apparently defecting. An application to the United States for asylum is expected.

But in Moscow, a woman who said she was his wife today accused U.S. authorities of a "crude provocation," claimed her husband "never had any intention" of staying in the United States and said the Americans must be holding him forcibly.

Shevchenko, the $76,000-a-year undersecretary-general for political and Security Council affairs, left his job six days ago because of "differences with his government," a U.N. statement said.

Associated Press reporters calling "Shevchenko" entries in the Moscow telephone directory spoke with a woman who identified herself as Leongina Shevchenko, the diplomat's wife.

She said she had returned from New York for fear the Americans would seize her and other family members as well as her husband.

"What they are saying about him is a provocation," she said. "He is a marvelous father and husband. He cannot live without his work and his family. I am 100 percent sure he will be returning. I know, and am certain. I have lived with him for 27 years . . . ."

In Washington, the State Department said it had been contacted by Ernest Gross, Shevchenko's American lawyer, who indicated that the 47-year-old Russian would not return to the Soviet Union.

State Department spokesman Tom Reston said Shevchenko had not asked for asylum. But he said Soviet officials had requested a meeting with Shevchenko and that Gross, a former assistant secretary of state and ex-delegate to the United Nations, arranged the meeting, a formality that often precedes granting of asylum.

Reston did not disclose the place or time of the meeting. Gross was reported in Washington Monday night, and there was speculation that Shevchenko was with him to meet with representatives of the Soviet

ARKADY SHECVENKO

Embassy there.

An authoritative diplomatic source at the United Nations, who asked not to be identified, said Shevchenko was in the process of seeking asylum, the first U.N. employee ever to do so anywhere.

Unconfirmed reports said Shevchenko refused an order from the Soviet government to return home and that his wife and daughter left for Moscow over the weekend after "a violent quarrel." He also has a son in the Soviet foreign service.

Associates said he left his office last Wednesday, saying he was not feeling well, and told an assistant to take charge for a few weeks. U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani told reporters Monday that Shevchenko informed Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim he was "absenting himself from the office and in this connection he mentioned differences with his government. Efforts are now being made to clarify the matter and for the time being, therefore, Mr. Shevchenko is considered to be on leave."

The New York Times said in addition to "differences with his government" as a motive for defection, "Administration officials and Western diplomats familiar with the case said there were also some personal problems involved."

"An American official mentioned a liaison Mr. Shevchenko had had with a woman in New York," the Times continued, "while Western diplomats said he had a 'health problem' and remarked that he had been known as a heavy drinker."

Neutron warhead isn't only way to stop tanks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown says the neutron warhead isn't the only way that NATO countries can stop a Soviet tank attack in Europe.

Brown said on a television interview show Sunday, "There are other ways to do the same thing. ... I would not want anyone to think it is the (only) new idea in warfare and that it would make a difference in itself." He comented on President Carter's decision Friday to delay production of the weapon

Foreign meat imports won't be increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite some pressures to the contrary, the Carter administration has no plans now to open up the door to additional foreign meat to help relieve spiraling U.S. beef and pork prices, according to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

Imports of fresh, chilled and frozen beef, veal mutton and goat meat are controlled by a 1964 law which is keyed to U.S. production to prevent dumping of foreign meat on the domestic market. Most of the meat is low-grade beef used to make hamburger and for other processing.

"The administration has no plans to eliminate the meat import quota, as matters now stand," Bergland said Monday in a taped interview released by the Agriculture Department.

"A year from now it could be a different situation, of course," Bergland said. "We'll be watching not only our own supply and demand and prices but looking at the matters worldwide."

Some farm groups have expressed alarm over what they perceive as pressures within the administration to relax the quota formula so that more beef can enter the U.S. market.

The National Farmers Organization, for example, last week labeled such talk as "economic sadism" and urged President Carter in a telegram to put a stop to it.

"The cattle industry has barely seen light at the end of a long tunnel of loss operations," NFO President Oren Lee Staley told Carter. "Long before they are out of the tunnel, your director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, Barry Bosworth, and your new Federal Reserve Chairman, G. William Miller, have both suggested lifting meat import quotas to drive livestock and meat prices back down."

Under so-called "voluntary restraint" agreement with about 15 countries, imports of quota-type meat in recent years have been kept within a maximum level which, if exceeded, would trigger quotas.

Australia and New Zealand are the major sources of quota meat but Canada, Mexico and the others also contribute to the flow. Total imports this year are estimated at less than the quota trigger level of about 1.3 billion pounds.

Imports of quota-type meat are equal to about 5 to 7 percent of the U.S. domestic supply.

The National Cattlemen's Association, a longtime foe of arbitrarily opening the import door beyond the quota levels, wants Congress to change the 1964 law in several ways to "strengthen and improve" the mechanism.

China buys U.S. grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has bought a quantity of U.S. wheat for the first time in three years, according to the Agriculture Department.

The department said Monday that 600,000 metric tons of wheat has been sold to China by private U.S. exporters for delivery during the 1978-79 marketing year beginning June 1.

China, which has bought huge quantities of foreign grain the past year, has purchased some U.S. cotton and soybean products but until now has not bought any grain since 1974-75.

Briscoe urging bill's support

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe wrote Texas congressmen Monday, asking them to vote for the farm bill pending before the House despite President Carter's threat of a veto.

"I support this legislation and I hope that you will cast your vote in favor of the bill, a bill which will provide reasonable aid to farmers during this growing season," he said.

He said the administration's argument the bill would be inflationary "ignores the need for more comprehensive steps which can have an anti-inflationary impact by creating additional markets for American agricultural products."

Briscoe said Texas farmers have a particularly acute need for quick action on an agriculture bill.

"Texas farmers are faced with higher than average production costs; they plant their crops earlier than most other farmers and therefore need to know now what relief they can expect so they may plan accordingly," he said.

Lots of people helping bee champion prepare

By CARLA WALKER

Julianne Raines, Howard County Spelling Bee champion, will be journeying to Lubbock Saturday for the Regional Bee, accompanied by her family, friends, and neighbors.

"It is overwhelming to think about the response Julianne has gotten since winning the County Bee," said her mother, Mary Raines.

"After working all my life, Julianne winning the Spelling Bee has brought more notoriety than anything else," laughed her father, Harold Raines. "We're all terribly proud of her."

"I have gotten so many newspaper clippings from people who sent nice notes saying I could 'send this copy to my grandmother,' but I don't have 30 grandmothers," Julianne laughed. "It's been great, though, and I really do appreciate everyone who has sent the clippings."

Julianne has been getting a lot of help from different people. Her mother gets up at 5:30 a.m. to go over the words with Julianne before it is time for her to get ready for school.

Then when Julianne gets to school, Mrs. John Talmadge — eighth grade English teacher at Runnels — spends time from 7:45 a.m. until 8:30 a.m. going over the words that are on the list for the Regional Bee.

"It wouldn't be so tough if I could find more time to work," said Julianne, "but there are so many things I have to do besides the spelling bee."

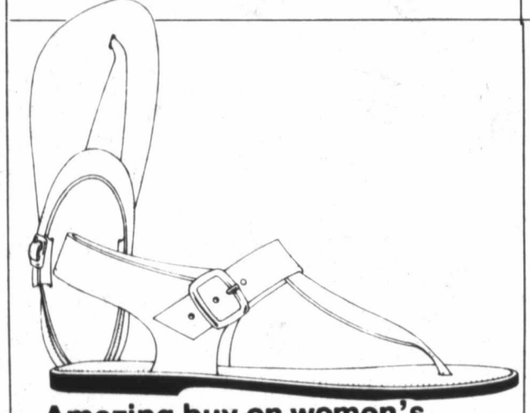

Some of her activities include playing on the Runnels tennis team, serving as piano accompanist for the Runnels choirs, and staying active in the First Baptist Church.

Julianne has been studying hard, but she is modest about her chances of winning. She was County Bee runner-up for the past two years, missing out on the chance at regional competition, so she has a lot of incentive to win this year. If she pulls it off, she gets to make a trip to Washington for the national competition.

"I won't be last," is all Julianne says, but her family has more faith than that. Even Jeffrey — little brother though he is — says confidently "She's gonna win."

Fair housing struggle far from over

FRESH FISH & SHRIMP
Wednesday Only
Big Spring Produce
N.E. 2nd & Austin

By the Associated Press

Ten years ago today, as the nation mourned the assassination of Martin Luther King, President Lyndon Johnson signed a landmark civil rights bill that he hoped would end racial discrimination in housing.

Officially called the Civil Rights Act of 1968 but better known as the Fair Housing Law, it meant that never again could a real estate broker legally slam the door in a black person's face.

Or as NAACP official Nathaniel Jones explains it: "For the first time, it placed the majesty of the law on the side of those who wish to do the right thing. And it placed the brand of illegality on those who want to discriminate."

But merely passing a law making discrimination illegal did not make the evils magically disappear. Slow progress has been made, but those who still discriminate have found ways of doing so that are more subtle than door-slamming but just as effective.

President Carter, declaring April "Fair Housing Month" to mark the act's 10th anniversary, said a week ago, "Ten years after passage of the national fair housing law, many Americans still experience discrimination when they attempt to purchase or rent or finance a home or an apartment for themselves or their family."

So, the fair housing struggle launched a decade ago continues, with pluses and minuses.

—An effort was made to move minorities from decaying cities into suburbs, but some wonder whether this was really what the urban poor wanted or needed.

—Suits were filed and won, but often the housing in question was rented or sold before the court decided. Today legislation is being considered to change this.

—Civil rights lawyers cite New Jersey, Massachusetts and Cleveland as places where minorities, business and real estate interests, and the government have joined to fight housing discrimination. In other areas, especially some northern cities, real estate brokers still steer blacks away from white areas and into black ones.

The key provisions of the Fair Housing Law banned discrimination in housing transactions, except single-family housing not sold through a broker and rental space in dwellings with four or fewer units. The Department of Housing and Urban Development was given responsibility for overseeing the law's enforcement.

From initial funding of $2 million and 100 staffers in 1969, HUD's Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity has grown to 457 staffers and a $15 million budget to handle some 3,500 discrimination complaints yearly, says Thomas Jenkins of the HUD housing office.

Civil rights activists like Tom Gale, the National Urban League's housing specialist, criticize HUD's "lack of aggressiveness" in shaping a concerted open housing policy.

But HUD has gotten agreements from housing industry groups like the National Association of Realtors and the National Association of Home Builders forbidding discrimination among its members.

And, says Jenkins, "we have an agreement that the federal government won't build facilities in communities that won't provide fair housing opportunities. That causes localities to be a bit more forward-looking."

Another weapon against discrimination resulted from a 1974 lawsuit that claimed HUD was undermining its own guidelines by placing almost all public-assisted housing in cities and hardly any in suburbs.

HUD was ordered to set up criteria that now make it harder to put public housing in cities and easier in suburbs. But this turned out to be less of a victory for minorities than it first seemed.

"In fact, the units that were built in suburbs were not in great demand by central city families because they lacked the supporting services to make families comfortable. And meanwhile, the central cities were losing needed new federal housing," says Gale.

Nonetheless, Gale and others feel that the biggest gains in open housing have been in the suburban placement of public housing. They say the private housing industry has made much slower progress in combating discrimination than have public agencies.

A spokesman for the National Association of Realtors says: "We are doing our part by spreading the word that housing discrimination is illegal. ... And the public now accepts that fair housing is the law of the land."

The spokeman noted that his group is a "self policing orgnization" and that HUD should work for "voluntary compliance within our industry."

As it now stands, HUD's work is based largely on persuasion and mediation. It can investigate discrimination complaints and take them to court — a process that can take a year or more, by which time the house or apartment is usually long since off the market. There is little HUD or anyone can do to stop a broker in the meantime from denying a home to a black, and quickly selling to a white.

Braniff seeking $199 flight to England

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International has announced approval for a reduced standby fare of $199 on its new flight to London from Dallas-Fort Worth.

Braniff officials said both the U.S. and British governments have okayed the fare, which is lowered from $250. Roundtrip standby remains at $349.

Under a new budget fare, passengers may get confirmed seat reservations at the same standby fare of $199 one-way and $349 roundtrip if they buy their tickets three weeks in advance and tell the airline which week they want to travel. Braniff then would give a week's notice on which day the flight would be taken.

Although the standby fare will remain the same year-around, the budget fare will increase to $223 one-way and $392 roundtrip during the peak travel season from June through August.

Also changed is the advance purchase excursion fare between Dallas-Fort Worth and London, from $479 to $428 roundtrip for the off season and $569 to $573 roundtrip in the peak season. Those are weekday fares; weekend flights would be higher. Under the excursion flights, tickets must be purchased 30 days in advance, with the passenger remaining abroad from 14 to 45 days.

UT team named bridge champs

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Dennis Sorenson, 31, and Charles Durrin, 26, representing the University of Texas, won the National Intercollegiate Contract Bridge Championship hee during the weekend.

They scored 275 out of a possible 468 points in the duplicate tournament held at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

The defending champion team from Swarthmore finished second.

Potting soil discussed

The Texas Star African Violet Club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. C. Y. Clinkscales, with Mrs. A. C. Moore, president, conducting the business meeting.

Mrs. Moore reported that the Howard County Fair would take place Sept. 18-23, and Mrs. Lavell Hill reported on the annual meeting of the District I Texas Garden Clubs Inc. in Lubbock Apr. 2-3.

Doris Guy reported that the Garden Club Council Flower Show will be Apr. 29 and 30, and Mrs. Hill gave a report on the Garden Club District I Annual Convention in Lubbock Apr. 1-2.

There will be a workshop at the Dora Roberts Community Center at 2 p.m. Apr. 13 for all garden club members.

Mrs. Paul Guy gave a program on understanding and use of pH in growing African violets.

She first explained how pH number was found to be a significant factor in making jelly, and said that most African violet growers would be shocked to find that the potting soil and peat moss they use is about 4.5 on the pH scale, while African violets prefer a pH of 6.0 to 6.9.

She told how to remedy the situation and how to find out what the pH number of the soil is.

The next meeting will be May 4 in the home of Mrs. Paul Guy, 1305 Tucson Rd.

MIDLER PUTS PINCH ON NICHOLSON — Singer Bette Midler, after counting her pennies and donating $3,473 to the ERA Sunday, puts the pinch on actor Jack Nicholson yelling, "Jack you're richer than all of us," during an afternoon party in support of the Equal Rights Amendment at the home of actress Joan Hackett in Beverly Hills. The gathering of Hollywood's in-crowd raised $50,000 to help ratify the ERA in three more states. Star Wars star Mark Hamill, seated on the floor, was also in attendance.

Drop addict friend before she hooks you

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Dear Doctor:

I hope you can help me. One of my best friends is on drugs. I like her a lot and I don't want to tell on her. She even takes the stuff at school and I'm afraid she will get caught.

I've talked to her about drugs but she only says it is her business and to leave her alone. We are both 14 and I want to help her but I don't know what to do.

B.K., Fort Smith, Ark.

Dear B.K.:

It might sound cruel but you have no choice but to drop your friend at this time. There is always the possibility that she will talk you into trying drugs before you can get her to break her drug habit.

There is also the chance your friend will reach a point where she will have little or no interest in anything else, and you would find she is no longer a good companion. But if she asks for your help, be there to assist her.

Humphrey won't run for Senate

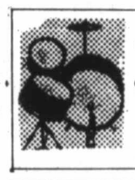

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Sen. Muriel Humphrey says she intends to become a private person after 33 years of public life, but will remain involved with the Minnesota Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party and issues that concern her.

Mrs. Humphrey, 66, told a party fund-raising dinner in St. Paul Saturday night that she would not run for the four years remaining in the Senate term of her late husband, Hubert H. Humphrey.

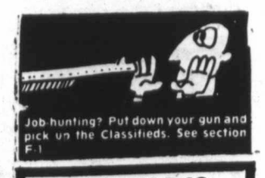

Under state law, a special election will be held in November to pick someone to occupy the seat until 1982, when Humphrey's term would have expired.

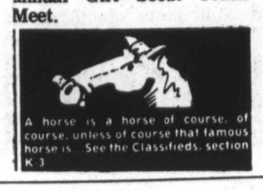

Mrs. Humphrey was appointed to the Senate Jan. 25 by Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, 12 days after Humphrey died of cancer.

Her husband had served 23 years in the Senate, had been vice president and was the Democratic nominee for president in 1968. Mrs. Humphrey campaigned with him throughout his political career.

Recent years bring outbreak of art vandalism

LONDON (AP) — Kitchen knives, hammers and saws, acid, paint and ink, coins and stones, feet and fists — all have come down in recent years upon the fragile and defenseless arts of mankind.

Attacks last week on two great European paintings are new evidence of the everyday dangers to exhibited masterpieces.

"Everything is at risk when the public is let in and only barbed wiremight keep maniacs at bay," said security officer Trevor Williams at the National Gallery in London.

The gallery has just experienced the worst attack since it was founded in 1824. Last Monday a man stepped over the knee-high rope between the public and the pictures and carved slices out of Nicolas Poussin's "The Adoration of the Golden Calf." The picture was valued at nearly a million dollars.

Two days later in the Netherlands, Vincent Van Gogh's "La Berceuse" (The Lullaby) was slashed in Amsterdam's municipal museum. That painting had been valued at around $425,000.

"I am conscious of the risk all the time but it is a risk that has to be taken for the benefit of the entire community," said Williams.

"Paintings could be better protected by glazing them, like the Victorians used to do, but then they cannot be seen so well. Vandalism is harder to guard against than theft because there is no real protection against an attack that takes only seconds."

Williams said vandals "usually turn out to be lunatics and, thank goodness, there are not too many of them wandering about who want to do this sort of thing."

There was no immediate word on the mental state of the attackers last week. An Italian is in custody for shredding the Poussin. Amsterdam police said their man is a jobless Dutchman who sliced the Van Gogh to protest denial of municipal relief.

Both paintings will be repaired. The Poussin "can never again be regarded as a complete and well-preserved example of his work at its greatest," said Phyllis Rowlands of the National Gallery.

Vandals in well-staffed galleries usually are caught. But whoever ran the edge of a coin over Rubens' "Adoration of the Magi" in 1974 in King's College Chapel at Cambridge, England, never was found.

Art vandals arrested in Britain in the last 15 years included an ink-splatterer, a book-thrower, a stone-thrower and a man who knocked over Italian antique busts in the Birmingham City Art Gallery. They either received small fines or were put under supervision by mental inspectors or probation officers.

An Iranian doctor, said to be in a psychotic state, was jailed in 1974 for 18 months for kicking and breaking a 16th-century Italian vase in the British Museum. He said he was sorry and that he did not know why he had done it.

The worst art vandalism in the Netherlands occurred in 1975 when a former schoolteacher slashed Rembrandt's largest painting, "The Night Watch," a dozen times with a bread knife in Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum. The man, Wilhelmus De Rijk, 38, said God told him to do it and committed suicide in a mental home six months later. Repair of the painting took six months.

The most notorious vandalism in recent Italian history was a hammer attack on Michelangelo's Pieta in St. Peter's Basilica in May, 1972. A bulletproof glass cage now protects the restored sculpture of the Madonna holding the dead Christ.

The assailant, a Hungarian immigrant, was placed under psychiatric care for two years and then deported to Australia, his adopted home.

Somebody sawed the head off the Little Mermaid, a famous bronze sculpture in the open air in Copenhagen, in 1964. The present head is a replica and the statue still is a frequent target for vandals with paint brushes.

After the Van Gogh slashing, Tijmen Van Grootheest, spokesman for Amsterdam's municipal museum, said it has no plan for additional security.

"Attacks such as these are a great problem, but one must not forget that they happen very rarely," he commented.

He said closed-circuit television had been considered, "but what do you do if the monitor shows someone slashing a painting? By the time you get there the damage already is done."

Charles Davis, editor of the British monthly "Security Gazette," said, "There is no answer to vandal attacks except impregnable barriers which defeat the purpose of a museum."

(AP WIREPHOTO)

VANDALIZED — Michelangelo's Pieta, left, is shown after it was attacked in St. Peter's Basilica in Rome in May, 1972, in the most notorious vandalism in recent Italian history. At right the restored sculpture is protected by bullet-proof glass. A rash of vandalism in European museums presents museums with the problem of making art available to the public but protected from lunatics.

Trust This Teen To Behave Herself

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl, and my dad and I disagree on something I hope you will be able to help us settle. He says he will abide by your decision.

My friend Sue's mother works all day and she thinks it's OK for Sue to have friends (both boys and girls) over to the house from 3:30 to 5. At Sue's, we play pool, cards and just talk. My dad has forbidden me to go to Sue's after school anymore. He says he trusts me, but doesn't think that girls my age should be in a house with boys unsupervised. I've tried to tell him that nothing goes on there (it doesn't). He thinks a boy might try to get something off me and I'm not mature enough to say no.

How do you feel about this?

FOURTEEN AND DECENT

DEAR FOURTEEN: If you have proven yourself to be a decent, honest, obedient and sensible girl, I see no reason why you shouldn't be allowed to go to Sue's after school—a few days a week. (Not every day, however. Playing pool and cards and "just talking" is fun, but it doesn't get your homework done.) I think teenagers should be allowed a reasonable amount of freedom to socialize, providing they are always where they say they will be, and always come home when they say they will.

DEAR ABBY: NOT MEDDLING was upset with her daughter-in-law for failing to acknowledge her wedding gifts three months past the wedding. This brings up an important issue: Why wasn't the mother-in-law equally upset with her son? Half the gifts were probably from his friends and relatives, Why didn't he write?

My husband and I both wrote our thank-you notes—he to those he knew, and I to those I knew.

As long as women accept the full burden for these time-consuming tasks, they will be made to feel guilty if the tasks aren't performed.

LUCKY AND KNOWS IT

DEAR LUCKY: You're on target. A surprising number of readers wrote to express the same sensible view.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are getting along in years. He made out a will, but I have none.

My husband tells me that if he dies first, everything will go to me.

But what if I die first? Everything I own will go to him, and there are a few personal things I would like members of my family to have. My husband is not the kind of person who would carry out my wishes, even knowing what they were.

I don't want to cause a row, but I would feel better knowing that if I went first, my few personal things would go to those I want to have them. How can this be arranged? I'll be watching for your answer.

OVER 70 IN MISSOURI

DEAR OVER: It's as easy for you to draw up a will as it was for your husband. See your lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently died. I think it would have been nice if the doctor who had taken care of him during his illness had sent some kind of condolence message, don't you. Or don't doctors believe in that?

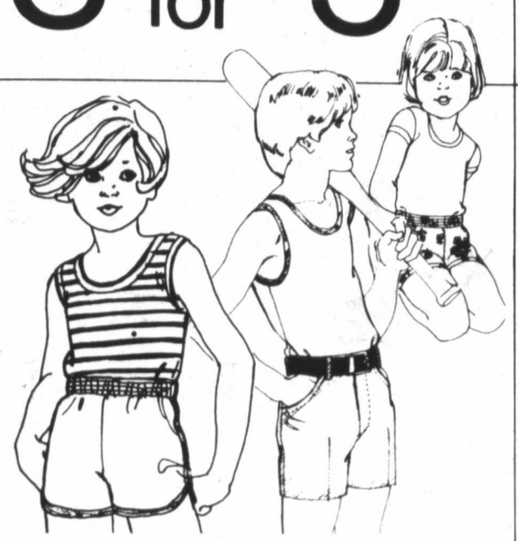

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If the patient was only a patient, all the doctor sends is his bill. If the patient has been a personal friend, the doctor would send his condolences and a bill.

Schmidt blamed for U.S. chill

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's conservative opponents blame him and by implication President Carter for a "dramatic worsening" in relations between West Germany and the United States.

U.S. and German officials concede that relations between the two most powerful members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are strained over the neutron bomb, U.S. opposition to West Germany's nuclear deal with Brazil, the dollar and what West Germany should do to improve the international economic climate.

But a NATO diplomat with close ties to both countries says the strains are natural. Bonn and Washington are "among the closest" capitals in the world, and "when a relationship is as close as this, there are bound to be these hiccups."

"The dramatic worsening of relations between the U.S. and West Germany and the resulting danger to our security has become especially clear in the chancellor's handling of the neutron-weapon issue," said the opposition Christian Democratic Union in a statement Monday.

The implication was that Schmidt should have prevailed on Carter to go ahead with production of the neutron bomb, which both the Socialist chancellor and the conservatives want. But the Christian Democrats hedged by saying Schmidt was only partly responsible for the difficulties between Bonn and Washington. They did not say who else might be to blame, but the implication was clear.

Bonn-Washington relations were not improved by a report in the news magazine Der Spiegel that Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, on his return from his trip to Washington to urge production of the new weapon, told the chancellor Carter "is destroying every rational calculation of the alliance, and his decisions are no longer fathomable."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said State Secretary Guenther van Well met with U.S. Ambassador Walter Stoessel to deny the Spiegel report. American diplomats refused to comment but they seemed irritated.

Schmidt's relationship with Carter is said to have begun on the wrong foot when the chancellor endorsed former President Ford, whom he regarded as a friend, during the 1976 campaign.

Last year Carter stepped up Ford's opposition to the sale of West German nuclear-power equipment to Brazil because it would enable the Brazilians to make plutonium that could be used in nuclear weapons. The Germans considered that a threat to a promising export industry and are going ahead with the deal.

Schmidt and his advisers also have been angered by U.S. pressure to expand the German economy so as to increase West Germany's imports from its allies and thus give their economies a boost. The Germans are holding back, contending that too rapid "reflation" could rekindle inflation.

Repairs will be bid anew

The Howard County Commissioners Court considered a routine agenda today. In its morning session, the court had a conference with county engineer Bill Mims, agreed to rebid the repairs for the county fairbarns, and opened bids on a typewriter for the Sheriff's department.

A public hearing on a proposed amendment to revenue sharing funds was scheduled for 11 a.m.

Other items up for discussion include, adoption of an employee's handbook, discussion of the grass lease on the county airport, a report on the water softener, and a discussion over a V.O.E. student for the Howard County Agent's office.

Two liners, or more

with Marj Carpenter

There's just a whole bunch of subjects about which I want to write about two lines. I don't know enough on any of these subjects to comment further, for which everyone will probably be eternally grateful.

For instance, the Davis Mountain fire. It's hard to believe that the beautiful Limpia Canyon and the area near the McDonald Observatory are burned. It's such a waste to lose beautiful woodland area like that — some of the prettiest in all of West Texas. Everybody be careful nowadays, and consider the possibility of grass fires. It's that time of year. The volunteer firemen will appreciate it.

I also wanted to comment on UIL competition at three of the area schools. We're proud of Donny Knight and Hardy Wilkerson who have advanced to regional competition in the toughest district in the state in debate. Hang in there, boys.

Also, congratulations to the four Forsan debaters...Don Roberson and Carie Poynot who won first and Ron Roberson and Steve Cawley who won second in district. These two teams placed in that order last year in district. Ron and Steve ended up winning state. They are four top-notch debaters. The Coahoma debaters, Mike Henry and Tim Ballard also qualified for regional with a third. Get after it.

Also Jan Whittington of Big Spring, first in prose; Karen Kelley of Big Spring, first in typing; and Glenn Margolis, Big Spring, eternally first in spelling need mentioning.

Other first places in literary events of kids in this area include Marka Highley, Dayton Robertson, Julie Underwood, Lucy Thixton, Jami Grantham, Ernie Morgan, Steve Cowley and Beth Boeker, out at Forsan; Brenda McDonald, Coahoma; Mark Tate, Grady; and Lonie Johnson and Leloni Kay Frerich of Garden City. Often overlooked is the tremendous amount of work it takes to win these awards. And that doesn't even include all the second and thirds.

Speaking of this and that, when we reported the domestic fracas at the police station between a policeman and his wife, we did not mention the name of the officer any more than we do in all the other domestic disagreements that turn up on the police blodder every week.

But anyway, we did mention that Jerry Pruitt was rushing back to the station, since a couple officers were called in to help out if necessary. The reason we mentioned him is because several people had called in the question — asking if he was really rushing anywhere when involved in an accident on Gregg Street.

He was rushing to the station on call. He was not involved in the domestic at the station — nor was his wife, who was at home watching television or sleeping and not fussing at anybody.

Well I wanted to comment on that, and I also wanted to commend the Howard College Rodeo team for a wonderful show over the weekend. And we're talking about the accident on FM 700 which was unfortunate.

We're talking about the rodeo itself. That bunch of college rodeo team kids are a great bunch. I'm telling all you folks that stayed home watching television reruns during the rodeo, you missed some good rodeo. Jess Knight and Margo Powell were the top cowboy and cowgirl, Mack Altizer is president of the local rodeo club — and there's a bunch of great performers at Howard College.

Other things that need congratulating around here are the bunch that put on a successful Industrial Barbecue; the new industry for Cosden at Howard County Airport — congrats to all, especially Granville Hahn and Perry Daniel.

Also need to note that good events coming up include Steve Ritchie, Vietnam ace, who will speak at Howard College graduation — he is a great speaker.

Also, Jan Morgan, who is putting together the Heritage Museum barbecue this year, says members may bring guests to the event this year. It will feature a Dixieland band out of Dallas and is scheduled for May 4.

Mack Underwood tells me that at the Cannibal Draw Dinner, Tommy Hart was the guest of honor and that he didn't even mention it when he wrote up the occasion. Now Tommy was the guest of honor because he used to live on the other side of Cannibal Draw and those guys never would let him cross the line when a boy. But now that Tommy's grown, they decided they like him. They may even let him draw the line.

I guess that's all I had to comment on today, and if you've been bored, tune in tomorrow for a more interesting story on an early West Texas judge — out where I ride fence.

Four Coahomans gain regional

Coahoma High School advances to regional competition in University Interscholastic League events in four different events after placing high in district.

Brenda McDonald placed first in headline writing and Terry Sharp got second in feature writing. Donna Witte placed second in shorthand.

Mike Henry and Tim Ballard placed third in debate and will also advance to regional. All three high schools in the county will be in regional competition in debate this year.

Baron Bracht dies at 63

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Baron Charles-Victor Bracht, 63, head of a multinational business empire of tropical plantations, real estate, insurance and hotel companies, was found dead Monday in Oelegem.

Bracht, a Belgian multimillionaire who was abducted here March 7, apparently died a month ago of injuries suffered while trying to resist the kidnapping, authorities said.

Offers thanks for assistance

Mack Underwood, who got together the Cannibal Draw Reunion dinner, expressed appreciation to several persons this week.

He thanked Dr. Virgil Sanders, secretary; Joe Pickle, and the Big Spring Herald, as well as the three local radio stations for helping make the event a success.

1st GRADERS' CONCEPTIONS — When local first graders were asked recently to draw their versions of a "clone" and "neutron bomb", the following drawings resulted, clockwise, starting with the upper left hand corner: a bomb used "for blowing up apple trees," in clone that "lives in a bottle", a bomb "that ladies throw up in the air," and a clone as a green plant.

To local first graders

'Clone' subject no bother

By DANNY REAGAN

Do you lie awake at night losing sleep because somehow, you just know there is a "clone" of you out there somewhere sulking about, taking credit and-or blame for the doings of your true self?

Has the logic of the neutron bomb totally escaped you . . . so much so that you don't know whether to increase the insurance on yourself, or your house?

If the answers to these questions are "yes," then you must certainly be older than six or seven, because a recent study of a class of Big Spring first graders indicates that those two very newsworthy items really aren't that complicated at all.

Searching the memory banks, you will remember that a "clone" is an exact reproduction of a living organism, created from a mere one cell of the original existing organism. A recent news story suggested that human "cloning" has been successfully conducted.

Even though the "cloning" of frogs is commonplace now, human "cloning" reports are so far unsubstantiated. Many scientists refuse to believe (perhaps out of dread) that a persistent colleague could reproduce them by merely thieving a skin cell on a handshake.

Newly-recognized film creator Woody Allen first discovered the humorous possibilities of "cloning" in his movie "Sleeper." His bumbling attempts to "clone" a futuristic dictator from just a nose (all that was left of said dictator after an assassination attempt) ended when the proboscis was smashed flatter than a pizza by a steam roller.

A neutron bomb, you recall, is merely a device that will kill people, but will leave buildings unmolested. Sort of like deadly X rays from space or something equally unconfirmed to the senses.

Since everyone will be dead if the neutron bomb falls, the sci-fact boys haven't said just for whom the standing buildings are meant. No doubt the cockroaches.

Such non-essential matters failed to bother the local first graders, however, when asked to give their description of the neutron bomb.

"It's a bomb inside a horse," explained Orlando Soza. "And when somebody sits on it . . . PHEW! . . . it blows up." Horses, one could deal with. Deadly X rays from space, forget it.

Adela Ramirez unhesitantly suggested: "It's a black bomb that blows up apple trees." Probably leaves the worms unharmed, though.

"I think it's a bomb that Chad put in my backyard," said a suspicious Adam Morales.

"Unh-uh," recanted classmate Chad Chester, "someone threw it from a plane."

Patrick George said it was simply a "new" bomb. Javier Velasquez suggested that it was a bomb used "for exploding houses", (he had it backwards). Scott Gerritzen thought it was something to use on teachers and Michelle Harris just knew that when anyone lit one," it blasted off into outer space."

Kids are fairly knowledgable when it comes to bombs, just ask any first grade teacher. It was evident, however, that "clone" had not entered into their realm of being as yet.

"A clone is a bottle that's got stuff in it, probably dirt," said Melissa Martinez. Other individual attempts at a definition were equally off base. " A farm house?" queried Beau Broker. " A green plant," Tanya Rock said with equal conviction.

As a single governing body, however, the local class of first graders discovered that a clone was something that they could sink their imaginative teeth into.

After 30 minutes of group consultation, the consensus of opinion was this: "A clone is a person in a bottle who is kept there because he or she is little until he or she comes out of the bottle (the time of emergence was left obscure.)

"The bottled 'clone' was put there by a magic stranger who keeps the bottle in a box, the box in a cabinet, the cabinet inside his house, and the house inside a cave in the woods or in the bushes. (As one, the first graders agreed that the only magical places are caves).

"The 'clone' is used by the magic stranger for money, and a means by which he gets rich." By means of further clarification, the small 'clone' resides on a boat in the bottle, and the boat floats upon "some sea-blue stuff, probably cold green water, that smells like perfume and what you can also put around your face."

Admittedly, the local kids have a lot to learn about "clones" and "neutron bombs". That's the way it should be. After all, with the advent of warm "playground weather" and the development of new crayon colors, there's so many more important facts of life upon which to concentrate.

These monthly seminars are made possible through the Big Spring State Hospital and are held in conjunction with the Big Spring Veterans' Administration Hospital and Howard College. Homecoming is set April 23

The 15th annual homecoming of the former Moore Community has been scheduled this year on April 23 from 3-5 p.m.

Use of U.S. ships urged

HOUSTON (AP) — The Department of Transportation has asked a firm importing West German buses through the Port of Houston to ship "as many as possible" on U.S. flag carriers. The buses will be used in federal transit programs.

But James Currie, vice president of AM General, which is outfitting the special buses in its Marshall, Texas plant, said there is no indication the DOT is willing to pay the difference it would cost to change from the Soviet line now carrying the buses.

The Soviet bid to transport the buses was $4,500, $2,200 lower than the lowest bid from an American carrier.

The National Maritime Union protested the shipment last month of 25 of the buses aboard a Soviet vessel.

Currie said the company had received a letter Monday from Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams requesting the use of U.S. carriers.

Meanwhile, more testimony was scheduled in a federal court in Houston from the National Labor Relations Board which is seeking an injunction against the NMU and future picketing.

NMU officials claim the pickets they set up around the Skulptor Golubkina last month were informational.

The buses are part of an order of 400 built in West Germany for a transportation consortium of 11 U.S. cities using DOT funds for 80 percent of the cost.

Currie said 20 more buses are scheduled to arrive in Houston on a Soviet carrier later this month. He said AM General had no commitments to the Soviet line beyond that number.

After 2,000-mile journey

Hijacker is captured

LEBANON, Mo. (AP) — A bizarre chain of events that allegedly involved a threat on the life of President Carter and a 2,000-mile journey ended Monday with an FBI agent overpowering a suspected tow-truck hijacker.

The 37-year-old, Humble, Texas man arrested was identified as the same man the Secret Service earlier had said was suspected of threatening the life of the president because of the Panama Canal treaties.

The man remained in the Greene County Jail at Springfield, Mo., today while authorities determined whether state or federal charges would be filed against him.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said the car driven by the suspect had been stolen Thursday in Pecos, Texas. One of the hitchhikers had been picked up in Flagstaff, Ariz., and the other two in Albuquerque, N.M. They were dropped off at Henryetta, Okla.

The journey from Pecos northwest into Flagstaff and northeast to Lebanon, Mo., took the stolen vehicle more than 2,000 miles.

The drama began early Monday when three hitchhikers told Oklahoma authorities of riding with a man who had a gun and said he was on his way to Washington to kill the president.

While the Secret Service was issuing a nationwide alert for the man, authorities said, he was experiencing car trouble in Springfield, Mo. Officials said he called a tow truck driver and, after the car was hooked up to the truck, pulled a gun — later found to be a .22-caliber blank pistol. They said he showed them a note that said he was insane and was going to Washington to discuss the Panama Canal treaties with Carter.

"We were going — no doubt about it," said the truck driver, Bruce Fetters. "We tried to talk him into taking a plane into St. Louis, but he didn't want no damn plane; he wanted to go in the wrecker."

The Missouri Highway Patrol and FBI learned of the hostage situation after a motorist heard the gunman trying to raise an FBI agent on the truck driver's CB radio and notified the patrol.

Up to 30 police cars followed the tow truck before Fetters, who said he faked sympathy for the man's anti-treaty stand, was traded for an FBI agent by persuading the man that if released he would get on the 6 o'clock news and denounce the Panama Canal treaties.

Moments after the switch, FBI agent Paul Van Someren overpowered the suspect.

Neither the suspect, Fetters, nor Van Someren was injured in the hostage incident.

Bail out men!

Atlanta Braves Jerry Royster "ducks" to elude a wild pitch by San Diego Padres pitcher Dave Freisleben at the top of the third during National League action in Atlanta on Monday night. The Braves won 8-7.

Rangers' $ risk (Zisk et al) pays off

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — He wears "0" on his back because he feels he is starting his major league career from scratch.

He hits, he runs the basepaths like a whippet, and he catches the ball in left field like nobody the Texas Rangers have ever had before.

"This is a player's dream," Al Oliver said Monday night after the Rangers had sent the New York Yankees packing with a 5-2 victory on a nationally-televised "Beat The Yankee Hankee Night."

Oliver spent 10 years with Pittsburgh in the National League but never felt appreciated.

"Did you hear that ovation I got that catch I made?" asked Oliver. "This is such a great atmosphere here — to be appreciated like that. My season is complete now even if I don't get another hit all season."

Oliver collected two hits off Yankee starter and loser Dick Tidrow, 0-1, who lost the first game of his career to the Rangers after seven victories.

But it was Oliver's tremendous catch of a long drive by Mickey Rivers that brought the biggest accolades of the night from the shivering 14,299 fans, many of whom were waving "Beat the Yankee" hankies handed out as they entered the ballpark. Although Bucky Dent scored on the sacrifice fly, it kept the Yanks away from a big inning.

"He's an All-Star outfielder besides being a bonafide .300 hitter," Ranger Manager Bill Hunter said of the hustling Oliver.

Richie Zisk, another of Ranger owner Brad Corbett's million-dollar off-season acquisitions, drilled a two-run homer to follow Oliver's double in the sixth inning and chase Tidrow.

"It's a great RBI position batting fourth behind a guy like Oliver," Zisk said. "You have a .300 hitter in Mike Hargrove leading off; then you have Bert Campaneris, who leads the major leagues in sacrifice bunts."

Dock Ellis, 1-0, bedazzled the hard-hitting Yanks on one hit over the first five innings and yielded only an unearned run before his shoulder tightened.

"It should be okay," Ellis said later in the dressing room. "It has been bothering me some since spring training."

Roger Moret, who threatened last week to jump the team after an argument with a teammate, went the final four innings to gain the save, permitting one run on five hits.

"I have got to stay here now. I'm happy now," Moret said after the Rangers had taken two games in the three-game series from the World Champions.

Some of the Yankees thought Ellis was serving up spitballs.

"I think he (Ellis) probably hurt his arm throwing a spitter," said Graig Nettles. "He was going to his mouth a lot. Not just the time they called it."

Nettles was awarded first base on a walk when Ellis stepped on the mound, then went to his mouth on a full count.

"He (Ellis) mixed in a few that looked a little funny. I don't blame him. I'd throw a spitter every pitch if I was a pitcher," added Nettles. "The umpires don't call it."

Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg defended his batterymate, saying, "Dock doesn't have a spitter. I won't mention any names, but I have caught some other guys who threw the spitter. My glove showed it last year."

Sundberg put his mitt on display Monday night and said, "There's nothing in there. . .before, it's been know to have bug spots in it."

Detroit comes to town tonight with Doc Medich of Texas facing the Tigers' Dave Rozema.

BIG SPRING, TEXAS, APRIL 11, 1978

SECTION B SECTION B

Rau opens Astro's can of worms

HOUSTON (AP) — Los Angeles pitcher Doug Rau hasn't worried about having a poor spring training since 1972 when he narrowly missed a trip to the palm trees as a AAA pitcher under Tom Lasorda.

Rau's talent for overcoming poor spring trainings emerged once again Monday night before a national television audience when he beat Houston 5-2 in the Astrodome for the seventh time in his past nine appearances against the Astros.

Rau had a shaky spring training with a 5.19 overall earned run average and a 10-1 loss to California in his final appearance of the spring. But he was steady in a strong seven-inning appearance against the Astros.

"I gave up something like 13 runs in a spring training game back in 1972, and the team was about ready to take me to the palm trees (apparently to vent their frustrations with their fists)," Rau recalled.

"Tom came out to the mound and asked me what was wrong," Rau said. "I told him 'Tom, I need to go home and do some fishing.'"

Lasorda laughed when reminded of the incident. "Yeah, I told him to get the hell out of there," Lasorda said. "He was gone for about a week and came back and had a hell of a season."

Rau got relief help from Terry Forster in the seventh inning and hitting help from Ron Cey as the Dodgers won for the fourth straight time and the Astros lost their fifth game of the season.

Cey belted his first homer of the season over the 390-foot mark in leftfield to open the second inning against Houston starter Floyd Bannister, who also had a slow spring due to a bout with tonsilitis.

Houston catcher Joe Ferguson got the Astros back in it in the fifth inning with a leadoff home run, his third of the season, but the Dodgers touched Bannister for the go-ahead run in the sixth when Steve Garvey tripled and scored on a fielder's choice by Steve Yeager.

Los Angeles got three straight hits off Bannister in the seventh, including Cey's run-scoring single and that was the end for Bannister.

Dusty Baker's two-run single, following a single by Davey Lopes and wallk by Reggie Smith, came off reliever Ken Forsch.

Rau finished last season with a 14-8 record but was hobbled throughout the season by an ankle injury.

"I'd just like to forget about last year and keep on top of my pitches this year," Rau said.

The Astros, off to their worst start in history, will try to regroup tonight against the Dodgers with J.R. Richard going against former University of Texas star Burt Hooten.

Astros Manager Bill Virdon isn't ready to throw in the towel yet.

"The last time I was with a team that started like this was my last year as a player with Pittsburgh," Virdon said. "We started out 4-22 but we finished third in a 10-team league. It's too early to hang our heads yet."

Sports in brief

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — Milwaukee's Larry Hisle, who blasted two home runs and drove in seven runs last week, was named the American League's Player of the Week. Hisle had a .385 batting average in helping Milwaukee sweep a three-game series with the Baltimore Orioles.

Pitcher Larry Christensen of the Philadelphia Pillies, who shut out St. Louis 7-0 last week and drove in four runs with a homer and a single in the process, received the honor in the National League.

HOCKEY

TORONTO — Three non-playing executives have been elected — one posthumously — to the Hockey Hall of Fame's builder category, raising the total number of builders in the Hall to 59. The inductees are the late J.P. Bickell, founding president of Maple Leaf Gardens; Sam Pollock, vice president and general manager of the Montreal Canadiens, and W. Thayer Tutt, president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States.

Bickell, who along with Conn Smythe was instrumental in organizing the Toronto Maple Leafs, died Aug. 22, 1951. Under Pollock's 13 years of managing, the Canadiens have won eight Stanley Cups. Tutt became the second president of the AHA in 1974.

GENERAL

MEXICO CITY — Los Angeles city officials and International Olympic Committee President Lord Killanin met secretly to try settle a growing dispute over the organization of the 1984 Summer Olympics.

However, IOC officials and other sources were pessimistic — at least for the time being — that the differences will be settled. Los Angeles is the only bidder to host the games, and the IOC must decide to accept or reject the offer at its next meeting in Athens, Greece, May 17-18.

However, knowledgeable sources said Mexico City, Munich and Montreal are willing to step in with bids if the Los Angeles deal falls through. The three cities have ready-made facilities and wide experience in hosting international sports meets.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Buerkle, who set a world indoor record for the mile at 3:54.9 last January, is the first runner to enter the New York City Marathon, Fred Lebow, president of the New York Roadrunners and director of the marathon, has announced.

The event will be held Sunday, Oct. 22.

Buerkle, who is recovering from a stress fracture of his foot which limited his indoor season, said he will compete in Europe this summer. He has a July 11 date in Dublin to compete in a race against champion milers Eammon Coghlan, John Walker, Niall O'Shaughnessy, Thomas Wessinhage and Stephen Ovett.

Buerkle said he would take the month of August off and then begin preparations for the marathon Sept. 1.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ilie Nastase, the colorful and controversial Romanian, has been named player-coach of the Los Angeles Strings.

The appointment was announced Monday by Bart Christensen, general manager for the World Team Tennis club.

Nastase, 31, has played two years in the WTT, with the Hawaii Leis in 1976, then with the Strings in the second half of 1977.

"I have played Davis Cup for years, so I understand the team concept very well," said Nastase, who has played in more than 120 Davis Cup matches.

"It is very important that the players play for everyone on the team and not just for themselves. My main concern is to make sure everyone is happy."

The 1978 Strings roster includes Nastase, Chris Evert, Vijay and Ashok Amritraj, Ann Kiyomura and Stephanie Tolleson. Los Angeles opens WTT competition April 26.

HORSE RACING

BALTIMORE — Turn the Guns, $8, posted a half length victory over Gray Frost in the $14,000 Alma North Purse at Pimlico Race Course.

CHICAGO — We Gotcha, $54.40, registered a half-length victory over Artic Pleasure in the $9,900 Mike's Red Handicap at Sportsman's Park.

CORNWELL HEIGHTS, Pa. — Quicker Exit, $7.60, scored a 1½-length victory over Tree Top Billie in the feature at Keystone Race Track.

HALLANDALE, Fla. — Baffin Lil, $32.20, edged out Negotiator by ¾-lengths to win the ninth race at Gulfstream Park.

Paxton paces Cleveland

By the Associated Press

Mike Paxton quickly learned what he already knew about the Boston Red Sox ... and then he taught them a little something about Mike Paxton.

If any of the Red Sox care to peruse the team's media guide or listen to Manager Don Zimmer, they will learn that the descriptions for Paxton include "aggressiveness" and "competitor."

But for a while Monday it appeared as though the word for the 24-year-old right-hander would be "showers." Paxton, one of four players sent from Boston to Cleveland late last month in the Dennis Eckersley deal, inherited a 4-3 lead in the sixth inning of a game the Indians went on to win 5-4 on Ron Pruitt's ninth-inning single.

Paxton immediately surrendered a game-tying home run to Boston catcher Carlton Fisk, his former batterymate, and then watched his outfielders flag down shots off the bats of Fred Lynn and George Scott.

But from that point on he yielded only a fluke single before giving way to Jim Kern in the ninth.

In other American League action, the Kansas City Royals extended the Baltimore Orioles' winless streak to four games with a 4-2 victory, the Texas Rangers downed the New York Yankees 5-2, the Oakland A's nipped the Seattle Mariners 1-0 and the California Angels blanked the Minnesota Twins 3-0.

A's 1, Mariners 0

Rookie John Johnson and reliever Dave Heaverlo combined on a three-hitter in the A's home opener that drew an unexpectedly good turnout of 17,283. The A's, who seemed destined for a move to Denver until a week ago, were cheered enthusiastically by the crowd, which was 5,000 more than last year's home opener.

Gary Alexander drove in the run with a first-inning single off Glenn Abbott after Miguel Dilone doubled and moved to third on a groundout.

Royals 4, Orioles 2

Al Cowens drove in three runs with a pair of triples and Paul Splittorff checked Baltimore on seven hits through 81-3 innings. Cowens tagged Nelson Briles for a two-run triple in the third inning and tripled again in the eighth.

Angels 3, Twins 0

Don Baylor's two-run homer in the seventh inning following Joe Rudi's double broke up a scoreless duel between Ken Brett and Dave Goltz. Brett scattered five hits, walked two and struck out the same number.

Reds, Dodgers recognize win import

By the Associated Press

Both the Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers know the value of a hot start in a pennant race and are making the most of their early games in the 1978 baseball season.

They're also making a shambles of the Houston Astros.

The Reds started off the season in high style by beating Houston four straight games. Then on Monday night, the Dodgers also pumped up their record to 4-0 by whipping the beleagured Astros 5-2.

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals walloped the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-2, the Atlanta Braves edged the San Diego Padres 8-7 and the New York Mets blanked the Chicago Cubs 6-0.

Ron Cey tagged a solo home run and run-scoring single to highlight the Dodger victory. Cey led off the second inning with his first homer of the season to stake Rau to an early 1-0 lead and later belted a runscoring single in the seventh to put the Dodgers in control at 3-1.

Cardinals 11, Pirates 2

Mike Tyson drove in four runs, three with a home run that capped a six-run burst in the first inning, to help St. Louis whip Pittsburgh in a rain-delayed Cardinals' home opener.

Keith Hernandez stroked four hits for the Cardinals and drove in two runs. His RBI were matched by Gerry Morales and Ted Simmons in a 14-hit St. Louis attack.

Braves 8, Padres 7

Darrel Chaney's two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning gave Atlanta a comeback victory over San Diego. The victory was Atlanta's first of the season and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Chaney's homer off reliever Bob Shirley followed Barry Bonnell's two-out single to center field.

Nader wants no blackouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ralph Nader-affiliated sports consumer group has called on Congress to enact legislation as soon as possible to make permanent the lifting of television blackouts on sold-out home National Football League games.

Peter Gruenstein, executive director of Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports (FANS), called on Congress to end what he described as "one of the longest running legislative experiments in U.S. history by passing permanent antiblackout legislation and dispensing with the problem once and for all."

Gruenstein made his comments in a letter Monday to Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee and its communications subcommittee which would handle the legislation.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle informed Hollings and Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., chairman of the House communications subcommittee, last week that the league would continue voluntarily for the next two years its policy of lifting TV blackouts on games that are sold out 72 hours in advance of kickoff.

Westside Center wins tournament

The Westside Community Center took championship honors in the Big Spring Men's Slow Pitch seeding tournament held this weekend.

WCC, who won six out of seven games, beat the Big Spring Merchants, 7-5, in the finals. Billy Diaz was the winning pitcher, and Mike Sanchez garnered a triple play for the victors.

Ernie Garcia and Richard Staggers led the winners with two doubles and two singles, respectively.

Twenty-two teams make up the league this year. Regular season action begins April 18.

Bonds resigns Lamesa post

LAMESA — Head Football Coach at Lamesa High School, David Bonds, has submitted his resignation effective April 17.

Bonds has reportedly accepted the position as athletic director and head football coach at the Lockhart Independent School District south of Austin.

A 12-AAA school, Lockhart competes with Belton, Georgetown, Taylor, Round Rock, Del Valle, Westlake and Lampassas.

Lamesa Superintendent of Schools Neal Chastain, indicated that a search for replacement for Bonds would begin immediately.

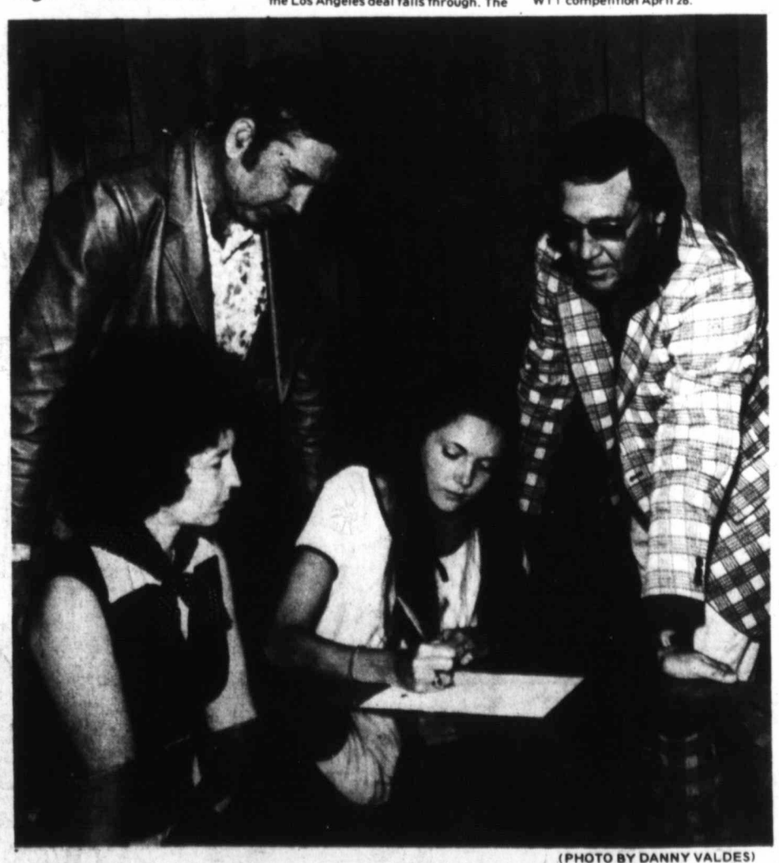

Steers end first half of play today

The Big Spring Steer baseball team is in San Angelo this afternoon (4 p.m.) in hopes of popping a Bobcat pipe-dream of at least a share of the first half District 5-4A crown.

The Steers, now 1-5 in league play after snapping a 10-game losing streak Saturday against Odessa, continue a busy week of action by traveling to Ranger Junior College Thursday before returning home Saturday to host Abilene in first game of second half action.

Abilene, Permian and Midland Lee are all 4-2 in first half action, and San Angelo is half a step behind at 3-2-1. If the cross-town shootouts fall right for the Bobcats today, including a SA win over Big Spring, Central could have a chance at the title.

The locals will be trying to throttle the Bobcat excitement and keep to the winning ways in preparation for second half play. Tony Jacobo is expected to start from the hill today for the Steers.

INITIAL SIGNEE — As her parents and future coach watch, Ackerly's Susan Martin signs a letter of intent to play for the Howard College Hawk Queens next season. Susan was a pivotal member in the Sands' potent offense this season, and HC Coach Don Stevens, right, is confident that the 5-10 star can make the adjustment to defense easily. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Martin of Ackerly are her parents.

THE GREATEST AND THE LATEST — Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali (left) and the young ex-Marine Leon Spinks, who took Ali's title, flew to New Orleans Monday, where they are scheduled to sign a contract today for a rematch Sept. 15. Spinks said of Ali: "He is the greatest; I'm just the latest."

NBA playoffs begin tonight

By the Associated Press

Two rookies who helped turn their teams from also-rans to playoff contenders will be matched head-to-head tonight when the National Basketball Association playoffs get underway with the Milwaukee Bucks at Phoenix to play the Suns.

Walter Davis, 6 feet 6, of Phoenix, and Marques Johnson, 6-7, of Milwaukee, will meet in a matchup which could hold the key to the best-of-three firstround series.

"It will be Marques' strength against Walter's quickness — although Marques is pretty quick, too," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson. "Davis' transition game is as good as anyone's in the league."

Good enough to help him score 24.2 points per game, the top average among rookies in the league and the ninth-best mark overall. Johnson scored at a 19.5 clip, but led his team with 10.6 rebounds per game.

The other three first-round series begin Wednesday, with the New York Knicks at the Cleveland Cavaliers, Atlanta Hawks at the Washington Bullets and the Los Angeles Lakers at the Seattle SuperSonics.

The second game in each series will be played Friday night.

In Cleveland, Coach Bill Fitch is happy to have the home-court advantage for his team's series against New York.

"In close series like these, it's nice to have that little extra from the hometown fans," he said.

The Knicks aren't worried, since they won their last four road games of the regular season. And they're happy not to be facing former teammate Walt Frazier, who is still out of the Cleveland lineup because of a bruised toe.

"I'd give anything to play now, especially against the Knicks," said Frazier, who came to the Cavs before the start of this season after leading the Knicks to NBA titles in 1970 and 1973. "It's very frustrating. But the problem is I just can't run on the foot."

Reds, media sparky

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sparks are flying between Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson and the news media over a rule he invoked barring reporters from the clubhouse 35 minutes before games.

"The players need time to get themselves mentally ready and prepared for the game instead of giving writers a story," Anderson explained.

"I'm sick and tired of coming in and finding people in my office. Sometimes writers were in my office up to the national anthem. I couldn't even say something to my players about the game. It's like a social hour in there," said Anderson, one of the most colorful and quotable managers in the game.

The Reds thus join the New York Yankees, and others, who have placed player quarters off-limits before games. The Yankees' rule, however, is limited to 20 minutes before game time.

The development brought a quick and angry reaction from writers assigned to daily coverage of the Reds.

"The pressures of command seem finally to be weighing too heavily on him," wrote Bob Hertzel, baseball writer for the Cincinnati Enquirer, in a Sunday column.

"A year ago, with a magnificent flair, it was Anderson who shouldered the blame for the defeat of his Big Red Machine, absolving his players.

"But now the truth can be told. It was neither the captain nor the crew who were responsible for losing the pennant to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It was the fault of the press," wrote Hertzel.

"Funny thing though, this very same press was allowed in the locker room at all times in 1976 and 1975 and 1972 and 1970, years when the men must have had greater character, for they survived this menace and won the pennant, twice winning the World Series."

The latest and greatest ink to meet again

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — This time it was heavyweight champion Leon Spinks who rattled verse. Former champion Muhammad Ali — cast now as a challenger — played it straight.

"He's still the greatest; I'm just the latest," said Spinks, following his couplet with a head-back, wide-mouthed infectious guffaw that was a pure expression of youthful exhuberance.

Ali, by contrast, was sober and serious for the most part during an airport press conference held some six hours before Spinks' arrival here Monday night. The fighters were to sign a rematch contract today.

When Ali did get a bit playful toward the end of his 10-minute press conference Monday, it was a smooth routine that showed years of practice.

"I am not just the greatest, but the greatest of all times," he said. But he couldn't keep a straight face while doing his ritual brag.

A 4-week-old group of local businessmen and politicians put up a gate guarantee of $3 million to land the fight Sept. 15 in New Orleans. Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc., the New York-based promotions firm that holds the rights to the rematch, said it is the biggest guarantee ever posted.

Although the Superdome has seated better than 100,000 for two religious events, the local group says it plans to sell 85,000 seats for the fight. It expects a gate of about $5 million.

Arum said earlier that he's asking $7 million for television rights.

Ali said he lost his championship because he underestimated Spinks.

Spinks said he doesn't believe that's exactly the way it went.

"As hard as that man fought, he knows he didn't give me nothing," Spinks said. "All I know is from the first 'ding' I was fighting, and when that bell went 'ding' the last time, I was still fighting."

The sun heats and cools this home.
Texas Electric does the rest.

This solar house at the University of Texas at Arlington is an experiment. It's one of many research projects Texas Electric is participating in to search for future energy sources.

These solar panels, powered by the sun, produce no electricity. But they do provide the heating and cooling for this home. The electricity for lighting, appliances and the backup heating and cooling system comes from generating plants fueled by natural gas and lignite coal.

Research offers us hope for new energy sources that will be dependable and economical. Until then, Texas Electric must continue to build lignite coal- and nuclear-fueled generating plants to supply you and our solar home customers the electricity needed now — and in the future.

Directory changes likely

By the Associated Press

Telephone company officials are considering changes in future directories to separate residential and business listings and to provide a new "blue pages" for governmental and school offices to make them easier to find.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has been experimenting for more than a year with a new directory, which could be put into effect in the near future.

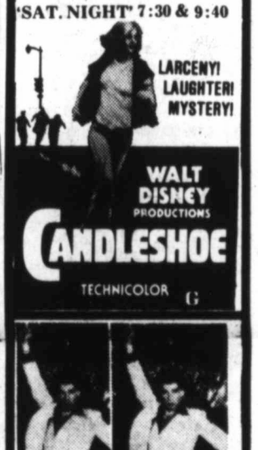

In the past, telephone directories have been separated into the traditional "white" pages and "yellow" pages.

Joplin, Mo., in 1977 was the first testing ground for the new directory, and Little Rock, Ark., recently became the second guinea pig.

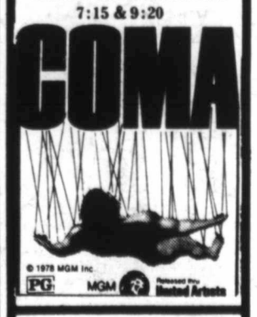

Government, school listings and some street references form the basis for a new blue pages section, making it easier to locate city, county, state or federal offices in the experimental book.

The traditional white pages are divided into two sections in the newest directories — residential numbers and business numbers — with the new blue pages separating the two sections.

Company officials said the skyrocketing cost of paper is one of the reasons the change is being pursued. Surname suppression, they said, allows the company to print more names on a page without sacrificing convenience and legibility.

'I have no choice in the matter whatsoever'

Social Security 'stinks'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent panel starting a major review of Social Security got an earful of complaints when it asked for public comments about the system.

"I think it stinks. I have no choice in the matter whatsoever. I gotta pay you all my working life — then I gotta take what you say I can have for what few years, if any, that I live after I'm no longer able to work," wrote one man.

"Given the choice, as most people would, I'd choose a commercial retirement fund and to hell with you people in the government jobs."

Photostats of the man's letter were included in a packet of materials given members of the Advisory Council on Social Security, which is beginning an 18-month study.

The law requires a non-government panel to review the system at least every four years. Most major alterations in Social Security have followed past councils' recommendations, Lawrence H. Thompson, the executive director, told the panel.

The chairman, tax lawyer Stanford G. Ross, said, "We all read the papers and take account of the fact that the Social Security program in particular has been the target of criticism, consternation and widespread concern."

He said it was "a historic moment to examine the program ... a time when its roots in the public understanding need to be renewed."

Another letter writer complained that Social Security treats women unfairly. That is one of the topics Ross has said his panel will address in its October 1979 report.

A wife is entitled to half her retired husband's benefit, whether she worked or not. But a couple can get only 150 percent of one spouse's benefit even if both worked all their lives.

One writer, a working woman, wrote, "I strongly believe working wives should receive their own (Social Security) pension in addition to that allowed wives who have never worked ... I resent the fact that wives who have never contributed are entitled to a pension that may equal mine. I, somehow, feel that I have been forced to donate my money."

Neutron warhead arouses both critics, supporters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The neutron warhead is designed to stop onrushing Soviet tanks by sickening and killing their crews with shafts of intense radiation.

The warhead would differ from older tactical nuclear weapons by limiting the area in which human life and buildings would be incinerated and shattered by blast and heat from the nuclear explosion.

President Carter announced Friday he will delay production of neutron warheads and watch for the Soviets to show restraint in both conventional and nuclear arms.

The nuclear scientists who conceived the "enhanced radiation" neutron warhead intended it to serve as a weapon that would equalize the disparity between NATO armor and anti-tank fire power and the heavy forces of Soviet tanks.

Current NATO estimates place the Soviet tank numerical advantage over the western allies at about 3-1.

The feature of the neutron warhead that appealed to many U.S. planners was its limited killing range which, they felt, would spare civilian lives and towns on the perifery of the immediate battlefield in Europe while achieving the military purpose of destroying the attacking tank force.

But it was this very limitation of what is called "collateral damage" that aroused some of the strongest opposition. Critics argued that the less widespread damage caused by the neutron warhead would make it easier for nuclear powers to use the weapon without worrying about catastrophic civilan casualties.

Thus, the critics said, such a weapon would make nuclear war in the European battlfield more "thinkable."

This view is disputed by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Gen. Alexander Haig, NATO commander in Europe and others who insisted that the weapon would not "lower the nuclear war threshhold."

On the contrary, Haig contended that the neutron warhead would make the Russians pause before attacking, and that this would make nuclear war less likely.

Carter's decision to set aside the neutron warhead leaves NATO forces with older and clumsier tactical nuclear weapons which would spread destruction in a wider radius than the neutron warhead.

Grace not yet back on stream

Officials at W.R. Grace have given no indication as to when they will put the local plant back in full production, according to Harry Schaedel, manager.

Currently, there is a small group maintaining the storage tanks but the plant has not gone back on full stream.

The original announcement in the fall had indicated that they might return to full production after the first quarter.

Low morale is cited

HOUSTON (AP) — The head of the Houston Police Officers Association says his job of selling the department to the city of Houston has gotten to the point where "I don't know what to say."

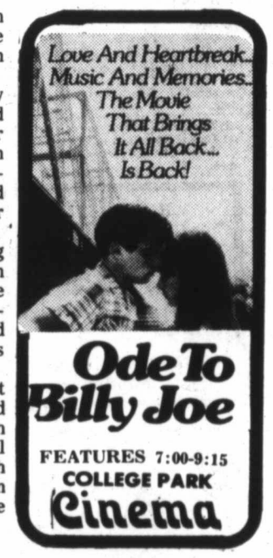

David Sheetz said Monday many officers called him within an hour after hearing of the arrest of assistant police chief Carrol Lynn on federal charges of obstructing justice.

"When is it all going to stop?" Sheetz asked. "It's like a big storm, and everything is coming to a head."

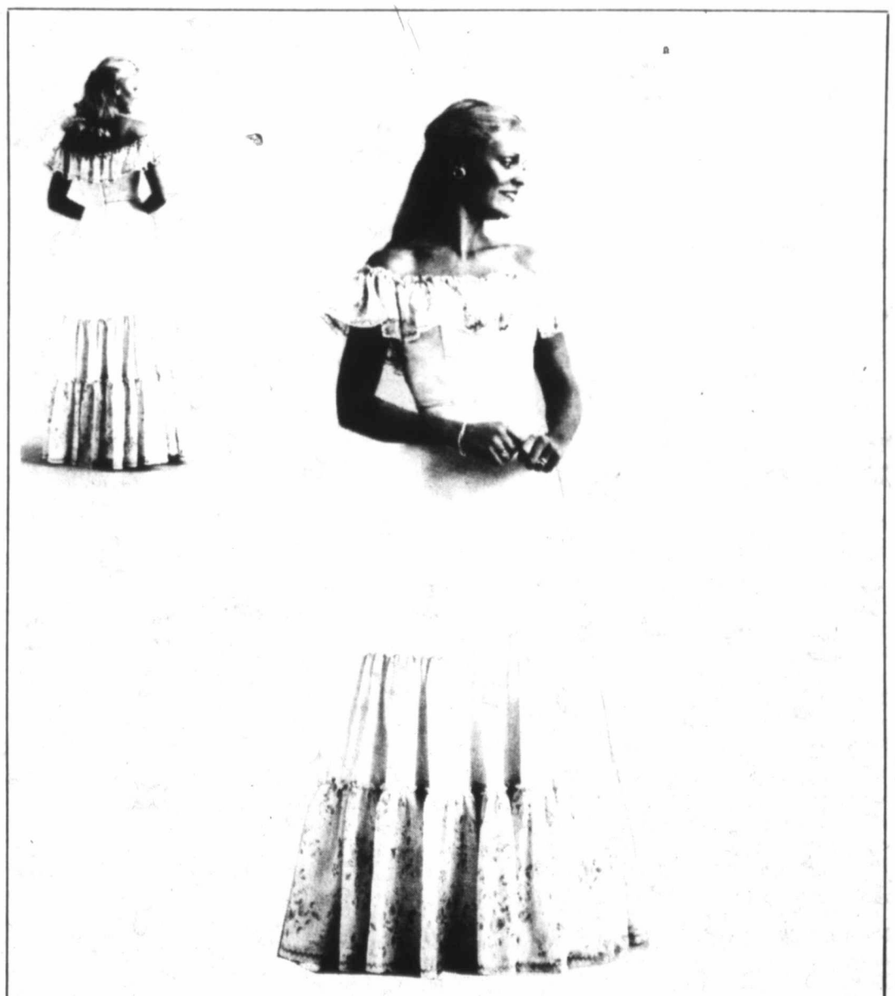

Sheetz said the department's morale was already low because of adverse publicity caused by the recent conviction of three former police officers in connection with the death of a prisoner and two investigations into separate shooting deaths of two teenagers.

Reaction at central police headquarters on the edge of downtown Houston was one of dismay on hearing of Lynn's arrest. Many officers shook their heads and simply asked, "What's next?"

Lynn was arraigned before a U.S. magistrate on charges of using force and influence in the distribution of justice.
