BRITISH DEBTS CAN BE PAID IN RUBBER PROFITS

Secretary Hoover Points Way to Empire to Settle Its Obligations

PRICES ARE SOARING

Increased Cost of Crude Product and Its Scarcity Gives Concern

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP) Commerce department inquiries now being concluded indicate that extra profits from only one of the sources of British wealth—the rubber plantations of the East Indies—will be sufficient to cover all of that nation's future repayment of its war debt to the Unied States.

American imports of raw rubber, which cost $185,000,000 during the calendar year 1924, probably will cost $400,000,000 for 1925, and at least a part of this prospective increase is unofficially attributed to the operation of a scheme for production restriction worked out because the plantation interests through the British colonial office.

Report Is Published.

A partial report of the investigation undertaken at the direction of Secretary Hoover was made public today to meet the pressure for information from the rubber industry in view of recent sharp price increases.

Crude rubber that sold as low as 17 cents a pound in 1924, reached 46 cents last January and is now fluctuating between 60 and 75 on nervous markets, while the world's visible stocks are disappearing and exchange prices of English plantation company shares are soaring. The United States, with three great industries, petroleum, automobile and rubber goods manufacture, is particularly interested in the situation because its onsumption is 70 per cent of the world's total output.

Sees a Shortage.

Secretary Hoover, in a foreword to the partial report, expressed no opinion as to whether the government restriction on production in the English colonies was responsible for the great price advance, but warned that the falling off in new planting was likely to create a real rubber shortage by 1928 or 1930.

One of the American objectives, he indicated, should be to "find means to stimulate competitive production," in other tropical areas of the world.

"The producing industries of the world would be much better off in the long run if combinations in restraint of international trade were abandoned on all sides," he said.

On Artificial Basis.

"In general, their effect is to hoist both the producing and the consuming industries upon artificial bases, ultimately resulting in economic difficulties to producers as well as to consumers. The stifling of consumption, stimulation of rival production, the use of substitutes and the paralyzing of industry generally, are their ultimate results."

The government's special agents found that 60 per cent of the rubber plantation were in English colonies with 29 per cent in Dutch possessions, where a good deal of English capital was invested.

Smuggling Treaty Drafted in Border Meeting at El Paso

EL PASO, Texas, May 24.—The draft of a treaty between the United States and Mexico, designed to aid the authorities of both countries to control smuggling and other border crime, has been prepared by he American-Mexican conference, and its makers expect to see the treaty formally adopted and ratified by both nations within a short time.

This announcement was made tonight by General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant president of the treasury and chairman of the American delegation. General Andrews expressed himself as highly gratified with the results of the conference.

The general declined to reveal details of the proposed treaty with Mexico on the grounds that it should not be exposed to hostile attack in advance of ratification.

He stated that the treaty covered four principal matters, smuggling liquor and narcotics, immigration problems, hunting and fishing rights, and exchange of information between Mexican and American border authorities.

C. of C. Manager Will Visit Manufacturers' Meeting in Dallas.

Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce, and his family, left Sunday morning for Greenville, where Mrs. Harrison and children will visit this week. Mr. Harrison will go to Dallas to attend a meeting of the Texas Manufacturers' association to be held Monday and Tuesday. From Dallas he goes to Marlin where he will deliver an address before the Texas Commercial Secretaries, which meets in that city Thursday and Friday.

Feminine Poise and Personality Will Be Told By Beauty Expert

Marie La Salle Booth noted lecturer and beauty expert of Los Angeles, who is coming to Wichita Falls under the auspices of the Wichita Falls Record News to give a series of health and beauty lectures. Time and place of her appearance will be announced in Tuesday morning's issue of The Record News.

Marie La Salle Booth of Los Angeles Engaged By Record News for Free Lecture Series

A series of free lectures on health and beauty by Marie La Salle Booth, widely known authority, will start on Tuesday, June 2, under the auspices of The Record News. All women of Wichita Falls are invited to be guests of The Record News for every lecture, place of lecture being announced later.

Mrs. Booth, a woman of charm and personality, stresses not only beauty of the face but of the mind and body.

Her introductory lecture will be on the subject "The House Beautiful" (the body), dealing with physical needs, bodily mechanism, reaction of the mind and body, means of developing power, effect of that on mind and body.

"We are boomerangs to ourselves," explains Mrs. Booth, who is a believer in the psychology of right living as the greatest aid to beauty.

How to maintain health and preserve youthfulness and charm will be discussed by Mrs. Booth.

She is not selling cosmetics.

"Perennial Youth and How to Attain It" and "The Fine Art of Right Living" are subjects for Wednesday and Thursday morning lectures, June 3 and 4.

Manager Already Here

Mrs. Roy Baker of Houston, manager for Mrs. Booth is in Wichita Falls arranging for lectures. Mrs. Baker is at the Kemp hotel.

WINTER, LOST, WANDERS BACK INTO CHICAGO

Summertime Rally of Saturday Postponed Account Of Cold Wave

RECORDS SUFFER

And in N. Y. December's Retreating Forces Hold Sun's Onslaught

CHICAGO, May 24.—(AP)—With a minimum temperature of 37 degrees this afternoon and a maximum of 41 degrees this afternoon, Chicago this afternoon experienced its coldest May 24, in the history of the local weather bureau. Snow flurries fell for an hour and a half this morning.

"Continued cold and fair," was the forecast for tomorrow in this district.

The previous coldest May 24, was in 1901, when the mercury dropped to 41 degrees. The coldest weather for this late in the spring was recorded on May 30, and 31, 1873, when there was a minimum of 35 degrees.

The cold snap brought a return of winter apparel but a straw hat was observed here and there among those who ventured to stroll the Avenues during the afternoon.

Thermometers In New York Decline 46 Degrees in Day

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP)—After sweltering under yesterday's mid-summer temperatures, the highest for any May 23, in more than 50 years, the east shivered today as a cold rainstorm put a sudden end to the season's first heat wave and sent the temperature tumbling 46 degrees.

Games Called Off.

In the middle-west the change was even greater. Chicago experienced its coldest May 24 in the history of its weather bureau. Major league baseball games in Chicago and Cleveland were postponed because of the cold, while in the east the rain halted one game scheduled in New York and stopped the St. Louis-Brooklyn clash at the beginning of the sixth inning.

The week-end's violent extremes of heat and cold were unprecedented for this time of year, weather officials said. At the peak of yesterday's heat the temperature was 92 degrees.

Drops 46 Degrees.

In the late afternoon it began to fall and, accelerated by thunderstorms and winds last night, dropped to 46 degrees at 6:15 o'clock this morning, four degrees higher than the lowest temperature for the day recorded here.

The storm was more severe at sea and was accompanied by hail, officers of the liner Carmania reported when the ship arrived here today.

Russian Weather Turns Bolsheviki

LENINGRAD, Russia, May 24.—(AP)—A sudden wave of winter has swept the regions to the north of Leningrad, with a temperature below zero and deep snow, reaching to the shores of the White Sea. The return of winter weather at this period, is considered unprecedented in the last century.

Not to Be Outdone Wichita Is Cooler

A change of the wind from the southwest to the northeast early Sunday morning brought relief from the three days of hot weather that prevailed last week. There was a decided drop in temperature Sunday afternoon and a big cloud bank in the northwest gives promise of rain. The weather report is for showers during the week. Rain within the next week will prove beneficial to crops, although farm work will be retarded.

SANTONE SWELTERING HOT

May Record For Thirteen Years Are Broken There Sunday.

SAN ANTONIO, May 24. — San Antonio experienced the hottest May weather in the last 13 years here today, when the mercury climbed to 101 and a fraction at five p. m. On May 27, 1912, the maximum temperature here was 103. The mercury started to climb today at 1 p. m. when it was 91, sliding up ten degrees in four hours. At six p. m. it was 99, and heavy thunder clouds began to gather at 7 p. m. with the mercury dropping rapidly. There was a beautiful electrical display in the southeast heavens at about 8 p. m. but the threatened rain did not materialize, the storm passing high overhead, accompanied by a strong wind.

FISHING TRIP IS FATAL

Two Killed Near Birmingham When Automobile Overturns.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24—Dr. Charles A. Green, 34, dentist, and W. W. Winne, Jr., 35, engineer, were killed today when their automobile overturned while returning from a fishing trip. Winne is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Winne, of Dequeen, Ark.

FURTHER QUAKES REPORTED

Two Violent After Shocks Experienced In Japan City.

TOKIO, May 24. — Press reports from Toyo-Oka state that two violent after shocks occurred at 8:15 and 9:45 Sunday night but no damage resulted. They, however, added terror to the already panicky residents. Only slight shocks were registered in Osaka and Kyoto.

King of the Rails To Race Water's Fastest In Novel Test Monday

ALBANY, N. Y., May 24.—The Emperor of the Iron Rails and two princes of the billowy kingdom will match their speed on land and water next Monday, May 25, when the Twentieth Century Limited, symbol of all that's speedy on the railroads, and two of Gar Wood's celebrated motorboats dash from Albany to New York City in a novel contest. The course is 150 miles long.

Wood will use his Baby Gar IV and Gar V in the race. Baby Gar IV, which Wood will pilot himself, placed third in the international sweepstakes last year, covering the distance of 150 miles in three hours seventeen minutes and six seconds. The Twentieth Century Limited has a standing time of three hours and thirteen minutes between Albany and the Grand Central station in New York City.

Passengers on the Twentieth Century will be able to keep a close watch on the motorboats almost during the entire race, since the New York Central's rails run along the shore of the Hudson river. The train will make only one stop, that at Harmon, to change from steam to electric engine. The change requires about eight minutes.

The race will be started by Mayor William S. Hackett at 6:27 a. m. The two motorboats will start from the Albany Yacht club pier at the crack of a rifle which will sound as the Twentieth Century crosses the bridge from Albany to the east side of the Hudson to take its direct course to New York City.

THE WEATHER

Little Willie did not go near his mother at the church social yesterday. He said he was afraid she would call him "Darling" right before everybody.

Oklahoma and West Texas—Monday and Tuesday partly cloudy.

East Texas—Monday and Tuesday partly cloudy. Probably showers in east portion, colder in north portion Monday.

25 Square Miles In Region Stricken By Japanese Tremblors

OSAKA, Japan, May 24.—(AP)—The area which suffered most severely from the heavy earthquake shocks yesterday morning is estimated at 25 square miles and the total casualties at approximately 1,100. There was no damage at Osaka or Kobe.

The fires at Toyohoxa and Kinosaki has burned out and both places are in ruins.

Communications are being restored and relief is being extended to the thousands of sufferers. Refugees from Kinosaki hot springs relate pathetic experiences there, where the earthquake appears to have been the most severe.

Nearly all the hotels were levelled with the first shock, and bathers rushed out almost naked into the open. Great volumes of suffocating smoke arose, enveloping those seeking safety.

At the Kinosaki railway station many travelers perished, among them a bridal couple.

JAPAN IS RUSHING AID

Medical Help and Supplies Go To Devastated Territories.

OSAKA, May 24.—(AP)—While no official estimates of casualties have been made, numerous bodies had been recovered today from the ruins of the earthquake, which shook southwestern Japan yesterday morning, causing great damage, especially in the Tajima district, 80 miles northwest of Osaka. The town of Toyo-Oka was about two-thirds destroyed with the death toll estimated at between 100 and 200.

Medical aid, including doctors and skilled nurses was enroute to the devastated districts from all parts of Japan. Communications and railroad traffic was recovering. The Red Cross already has aided many hundreds of the injured.

OFFICERS SHOOT DALLASITE

Pursuit Ends When Fleeing Man Is Hit by Bullet.

DALLAS, May 24.—R. E. Kuykendall, 23, is in a critical condition at a local hospital as the result of gunshot wounds here Sunday when he fled from pursuing city detectives in South Dallas. Officers said they had been on trail of the wounded man for some time, and that they will hold him for questioning.

TILGHMAN CASE INVOLVING PRO AGENT CLOSING

Fate of Man Who Killed Officer to the Jury Late Monday

WEWOKA, Okla., May 24.—(AP) The fate of Wiley U. Lynn, federal prohibition agent charged with the killing of William "Bill" Tilghman, veteran peace officer, probably will be in the hands of a jury late tomorrow.

Lynn's trial, which has been in progress in state district court here since Thursday, will close with a forensic battle between the eminent array of criminal attorneys who have prosecuted and defended the federal officer.

Will Limit Debate.

Although it was not definitely stated how long the closing arguments would continue, it was believed that Judge Frank Matthews of Altus, would limit debate to four hours on the side and that the case would be given to the jury late in the afternoon.

Self defense was expected to be the argument most strongy stressed by Lynn's counsel. A number of witnesses, who testified Tilghman had said he intended to "get shut" of the ex-Chocktaw Indian officer, were summoned by the defense. Only one related that Tilghman had made a definite threat to kill Lynn.

Bars Much Testimony.

The testimony of some 18 witnesses to the effect that Tilghman had "related" vice conditions in Cromwell, where he was city marshal, rather than suppressing it, was barred from the records by Judge Matthews, who was chosen to preside over the trial when Judge George C. Crump disqualified himself. Judge Matthews held that even if these charges could be proved, it would not justify the killing of the aged officer who had a record of an enforcer of the law in frontier towns of Kansas and Oklahoma for nearly half a century. S. P. Freeling, former attorney general of Oklahoma, was expected to make the principal argument for the prosecution tomorrow.

May Ask for Death.

It was believed that he would ask the jury to inflict the extreme penalty. Edwin Dabney, assistant attorney general, delegated by Governor M. E. Trapp to assist in Lynn's prosecution, took an active part in the cross-examination of witnesses, and it was believed probable that he also would take a part in the argument.

W. W. Pryor, chief defense counsel, was expected to take the lead in the argument for Lynn.

RELIEF PARTIES FORMED

Estimates of Dead At 300 With Injured Numbering 1,000.

TOKIO, May 25.—(AP) — Relief parties from warships sent to the Tajima district northwest of Osaka, immediately following the earthquake on Saturday, in a report to the navy department, estimated that the dead will probably number 300 and the injured 1,000. The warships were dispatched to coast ports of Tajima with food, sanitary supplies and doctors for Toyo-Oka and Kinosaki which suffered most severely and where they report relief work is progressing rapidly.

MINISTERS MEET TODAY

The Wichita Falls Ministerial Alliance will hold its regular monthly meeting this morning at First Christion church at 11 o'clock, according to LeRoy Moore, educational religious director of the First Baptist church.

AMUNDSEN NOT YET REPORTED IN POLAR SOAR

Arctic Explorer Has Now Been Missing Since Last Thursday

ONLY SILENCE

Norwegian Papers Remind That Intrepid Traveler Takes His Time

BULLETIN.

LONDON, May 24.—An Oslo dispatch to the Daily Express says that the prospects of Amundsen's return are arousing the keenest excitement. The newspaper offices are surrounded by eager crowds and telephones are surfeited with feverish inquiries. The telegraph authorities are maintaining a special night staff that Oslo handle special messages from Spitzbergen.

BULLETIN

LONDON, May 24. — (AP)—A Copenhagen dispatch to the Daily Mail says it was rumored at Olso, Norway, at midnight that news had been received from Kings Bay, Spitzbergen to the effect that Captain Amundsen had returned, but nothing had been received in official quarters.

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP)—At 9 o'clock tonight the North American Newspaper Alliance was still without news from the Amundsen-Ellsworth airplanes which left King's Bay, Spitzbergen, for a flight to the north pole Thursday afternoon.

The alliance, in announcing this through "The Associated Press," said it had received only meagre messages from Spitzbergen to the effect that weather conditions were still favorable.

Patience Urged By Norwegian Paper Recalling His Type

OSTO, Norway, May 24.—(AP)—There is no word yet from the Amundsen-Ellsworth expedition to the north pole, but the intense interest in the fate of the men both here and throughout Norway is shown by the constant questioning of newspapers and those who might possibly receive information. Yet there is nothing but silence in the mysterious north into which Amundsen and his comrades disappeared several days ago.

The "Aftenposten" urges patience. It remarks that Amundsen always takes his time and recalls that when he was at the south pole with little tood, and even moments were precious he remained there three days.

No Credence Given To Alaskan Route

NOME, Alaska, May 24.—(AP)—Although Roald Amundsen has indicated that he intends to visit Alaska some time this year, it is unlikely that he will attempt to return from his north pole expedition by way of Alaska at this time, in the opinion of Sourdoughs, well acquainted with the explorer, and with ice conditions in the north.

This is the ice break-up season, it is pointed out. Therefore, Sourdoughs believes that Amundsen would not attempt to come to the Alaska coast until the sea ice is gone and the rivers clear of ice. Amundsen has not inquired about weather or ice conditions in the region this season, it is averred.

YOUTH, AGE 10, DROWNS.

Dallas Boy Could Not Swim Companions Say.

DALLAS, May 24.—Ernest C. Wilhelm 19, son of Mrs. Myrtie Wilhelm, was drowned here this afternoon just below the spillway of White Rock dam near here. Young Wilhelm's companions, with whom he went in bathing, said he could not swim.

The boys were members of a Sunday school picnic.

Quick recovery of the body was made by two young men nearby, but efforts at resuscitation failed.

"All Well" With Cal Says Radio Message

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP)—A radio message from the president's yacht Mayflower reporting "all well" today, indicated that President Coolidge had recovered from the attack of indigestion which forced him to cancel engagements yesterday.

Mr. Coolidge virtually had recovered from the indisposition yesterday before boarding the Mayflower but physicians accompanied him.

DALLAS SING-SONG ENDS.

Five Hundred Singers Conclude Semi-Annual Meet.

DALLAS, Texas, May 24.—Five hundred singers from all parts of Texas concluded here this afternoon the semi-annual sing-song of the midway sacred harp singing association, whose program was dedicated especially to confederate veterans in Dallas following the reunion of last week.

Songs were sung under leadership of visitors from each of the southern states represented.

H. D. Ratcliff of Fort Worth is president of the association; T. W. Daniels, Dallas, is vice-president, and Charles Hawkins, Fort Worth, secretary.

BIG MILITARY PARADE HERE MEMORIAL DAY

Local Military Units Are Planning a Fitting Observance

Captain W. R. Watkins, Battery D, 131st Field Artillery, National Guard of Texas will leave Monday morning for Fort Sill, Okla., where he will secure 26 rounds of salute shells to be used for Decoration Day services to be held in Wichita Falls.

As now planned by Capt. Watkins and Commander O. T. Ailes of the Pat Carrigan Post of the American Legion, Decoration Day will be observed in a greater military manner than ever before in this city.

Battery F, 12th Field Artillery, which is now on the march from Fort Sam Houston to Fort Sill, will be in Wichita Falls on May 30 and 31. The battery was in Fort Worth Saturday and a great parade was held, combined with National Guard units of that city. Battery F will be in Decatur Tuesday and Capt. Watkins will go there to confer with Captain Eagan in regard to the program to be given in this city.

As planned now there will be a parade of Battery F and Battery D, and headquarters company of the second batallion, 142nd Infantry. The three organizations will have more than 250 men in line of march, which will proceed to the cemetery for the decoration exercises. At the cemetery the national salute will be fired. Two guns will fire thirteen rounds each.

Captain Watkins and Commander Ailes, assisted by the Wichita Falls chamber of commerce, are planning for entertainment of the visiting battery. It will be a big military event in which the officers, soldiers and veterans of the world war will participate.

The parade will perhaps be the greatest military parade ever held in Wichita Falls, exceeding those when Call Field was active during the war. Many visiting veterans of all wars in which the United States has been engaged in are expected to attend.

Death to Negro Is Consequence of a Fancy for Trousers

A DESIRE to own a coat that matched his pants, though it did not belong to him, is said to have caused the death of a negro by the name of Roberts, in a house in the 800 block on Dallas street early Sunday afternoon. Levy Wilson was arrested following the shooting and charges of murder were lodged against him.

The trouble began when Wilson, according to his and two other witnesses' stories, had a few of his friends up to his house for a friendly game of dice. Wilson stated he lost all his money and pawned his coat to Roberts for two dollars. After the game he asked to redeem the coat but met with the refusal of Roberts who offered him another coat in exchange for it. An argument followed.

Three Killed When Train Jumps Track

HORNELL, N. Y., May 24.—(AP)—Three men were instantly killed and another seriously injured when a westbound Erie express number 5, jumped the track at Campville, 17 miles west of Binghamton at 2:06 this morning and crashed into a freight train on the next track.

The dead are: Engineer James Richardson, 62, Hornell; Fireman J. P. Lounsberry, 65, Waverly, N. Y., and W. H. Lovell, Hornell, mail clerk. None of the passengers was injured.

Richardson was pinned beneath the engine. Lounsberry was pinned in the cab.

COW HURLED BY VOLTS

Tension Wire Kills Man and Curious Bovine Is Shocked.

LOVELAND, Coyo, May 24—(AP)—Peter Engleheart, 72, a farmer, was instantly killed when a high tension electric wire was snapped by the wind and dropped upon him. A cow came up to sniff at Engleheart's body and touched the broken wire, and was hurled across the road.

CAN A TEACHER "MONKEY" WITH LAW, AT ISSUE

Tennessee Grand Jury to Hear of Evolution Charge Against Scopes Today

DAYTON, Tenn., May 24.—(AP) A Rhea county grand jury, meeting in special session here tomorrow will say if Dayton is to occupy the center of the stage in a discussion of evolution now rapidly becoming wide. To this grand jury will be presented an indictment charging John T. Scopes, high school science teacher, with violation of the Tennessee law against teaching evolution in the public schools. If a true bill is returned, the teacher will be placed on trial in circuit court here within the next few weeks.

Urge Special Term.

The regular term of court is not scheduled to convene until the first Monday in August, but Judge John T. Raulston, presiding judge, who called the special session of the grand jury for tomorrow, has indicated a willingness to order a special term of court if an indictment is returned. The special grand jury, tomorrow will find the case in its third stage. Mr. Scopes was charged with violation of the recently enacted Tennessee law early in May when his friend, George W. Rappleyea, a chemical engineer, who is not in sympathy with the new statute, swore to a warrant for his arrest for the purpose of making a test case. At a preliminary hearing May 9, he was held for action by the grand jury.

Only One Witness.

At the preliminary hearing, the prosecution contented itself with the hearing of only one witness and documentary evidence. The latter included a copy of the act of the legislature as approved by the governor and a text book on biology, taught in the Rhea county high school where Mr. Scopes presided over the department of science until the close of the school term, May 1.

The law Scopes is charged with violating is brief, the act containing less than 100 words. In a preamble is set forth that it is an act "prohibiting the teaching of the evolution theory in all universities, normal and other public schools, supported in whole or in part by public school funds of the state."

A Modest Defendant.

John T. Scopes, the defendant, is a modest central figure, hardly more than a youth and just a year out of college. Puzzled by the wave of interest attending the test in its early stages, he has lately become disconcerted over his fame. His most ardently expressed wish is that he shall not be considered a "publicity hound." He went on record early in the discussion as having no desire to "break into the front page," but on the other hand, was filled with an abiding desire to sell automobiles, his summer avocation. A native of Illinois, he is an adopted Kentuckian and is a graduate of the University of Kentucky.

Ship's Butcher Brings The Blood From Jack's Nose In Bout On Vessel

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP)—When the Cunarder Berengaria docked today from Southampton, it became known that Jack Dempsey had boxed three rounds during the vessel's eastward voyage, with Kent, the butcher's mate, and had the claret tapped from his new nose in the presence of fully 2,000 of the passengers and crew.

The world's champion heavyweight boxed with Kent, who formerly was amateur champion heavyweight boxer of the British army and navy, but who is now 45 years old, for three 4-minute rounds. Marquis of Queensberry rules, chaperoned by referees and timekeepers.

The sight of blood trickling down Dempsey's chin in spite of his frequent sniffing caused such great excitement among the big audience that one woman fell off a hatch and broke a leg, and another went clean through one of the canvass boat covers.

Dempsey did not try to knock his opponent out, it was said, and let him do all the fighting. When Kent hit the champion on the nose in the beginning of the second round the latter did not like it, witnesses said, as his nasal organ was still tender from the beautifying operation.

Officers of the ship said today that the match was the most exciting they had ever witnessed on the deck of a liner at sea.

Denton Confederate Vet Never Swore Allegiance To U.S. Was Never Paroled

DENTON, Texas, May 24.—Boone Daugherty, a resident of Denton county for 74 years, former soldier in the army of the Confederacy, never surrendered, never signed the oath of allegiance at the close of the conflict and was never paroled by the army of the North.

His history, as he relates it, extended over a stirring time. Born in Missouri in 1843, he came to Texas in 1850. A year later the family settled in Denton county. When Texas seceded from the union, Mr. Daugherty joined the first company raised here. Captured in Arkansas, he was sent up the Mississippi river to Camp Douglas, Chicago, as a prisoner. He was exchanged at City Point, Va., and inducted into the army of Tennessee. Wounded at Chicamauga, he recovered, joined his command in Georgia and was again captured in skirmishes around Atlanta. Sent to Camp Chase at Columbus, Ohio, he was again exchanged but peace was declared while he was on 60-day furlough and he never rejoined his company.

Land in Denton county, he said, was worth from 50 cents to $1 an acre when he was a boy. He bought 200 acres in the Plainview community in 1881 for $2 an acre. A year later he sold it for $3.50 an acre, and thought he was growing rich, he said. Now the land is worth $100 an acre, he declared, and many times it could have been sold at even a higher price.

TRUE RELIGION WILL INCREASE BELIEVES KAY

Judge Speaks Before Big Audience At Sunday Morning Class

"The acid test of a true religion is, does it increase?" explained Judge John C. Kay before 407 members of his Sunday school class yesterday morning at the Strand theatre. The speaker ventured the opinion that a religion that would not spread from one man to another and from them to still others, has something wrong with it and is not the real religion.

"One of the great men of the Bible, referring to Jesus Christ, said I must decrease but He must increase. The doctors say that some of the diseases are contagious and that some are infectious. I don't know that I know the fine distinction between the two words, but it is a principle that runs through all nature. When the rains come in the spring how old Mother Earth shakes herself and begins to leaven with plant and bud and blossom. I think it is so with religion and a religion that does not spread is not a religion. That is the reason the Bible compares it to the leaven that leavens the whole lump and many are the beautiful similes that are in the Bible about it increasing.

To Beat Gate.

"If you have a religion; I am just giving you what I think, it may or may not be true, but I think it is true; if you have a religion by which you are expecting so to live that you are just going to beat the gate and get into heaven for yourself alone, then you are suffering with something else other than religion.

"Let us consider that word apostle, sometimes it is important to know the historic meaning of a word. Now the word apostle does not mean a fellow who would selfishly save himself, it does not mean a fellow that gets by St. Peter and gets into heaven and says to himself: 'I got by and I am here and it doesn't matter what goes with the rest.' Apostleship is something different to that. An apostle is one sent out as a messenger. You want to remember that, because it is a fundamental principle in religion that it must spread or it is no religion. So an apostle is a man who tells his message to other men. He is not contented and is not willing to selfishly grasp religion for himself alone, even if that were possible, but he is like a city that is set on a hill and cannot be hidden. That kind of a man and only that kind of a man is an apostle."

Religion Different.

Going a step further with the word religion, Judge Kay stated that religion differs from other philosophy in that every man wants others to have his own particular kind of religion. He stated that this was not true in anything else. In explanation, he explained that he could go down the street and say that he wanted a tariff on wool, or criticize the government, or commend it, or advise some new doctrine in philosophy, and few will be the people who would take the trouble to differ with him. To show the difference in religion though, he continued:

"But if I go down the street and say I believe so and so in religion, a man bobs up here and another over there and says: 'You are wrong and the Bible is against what you say and this is the right thing.' Now I say that is peculiar in the religious system and peculiar to that system. It is because that man I think that objects to my view has got in him some sense of the office of an apostle. He feels that he is the propagandist for his particular view in religion.

"Now it is all right for a man to have his views in religion, but he ought to get them out and dust them off and try them out once in a while to see if they are in good working order. When the Methodists used to have class meetings, that is back in the days when they used to have—I see one of the great men of the church here, I will not say what I started to say—but back in the days when they used to stand the old Methodist up and make him tell how he was gettin galong. You know if I was to call on you to do that now we would have an adjournment here, but the old time Methodists used to have to get up and do that and I have heard them say I was converted over here in a certain brush arbor camp meeting forty-nine years ago come next planting time—nothing about the record since, nothing about his history since, nothing about whether any fruit had grown on the tree. Now there is something lacking about that kind of a statement. A religious man ought to be religious and he ought to be concious that he is a servant of the Most High every moment of his waking life and he ought to go out preaching by precept and example and by the life he lives that there is something, that there is everything in religion that he prefers.

"Now this man Saint Paul: I don't know why they are called saints, they are not so denominated in the Bible, but in the headlines that were added afterwards. Paul came back after his conversion to preach at Jerusalem and that is the lesson here. Now, what did he preach about? Not that I could run a theological seminary, God forbid that I should undertake to advise the ministry of Texas or any other place but when Paul came to Jerusalem to preach, he was fitted for a great preacher, speaking Greek; among the Latins, a Roman citizen; among the Jews, a great university man, knowing the philosophy of that day, knowing the science of that day, knowing the metaphysics of that day, knowing the politics of his day, what did he say to these men at Jerusalem? He said this man that is called Christ is the Son of God. That is what men want to know. Men don't care I thing about your views about phiosophy or astronomy or political economy, but when men are seeking the great truth in religion, the fundamental question they want to know is who is this man Jesus."

Paul Told the Truth.

In dealing with the question of truth in religion, the speaker stressed the fact that though men are hungry for truth, they sometimes react differently to the truth about Christ. Such was the case, he said, with Paul's hearers that day. They fell out with him when he made the then radical statements regarding Christ.

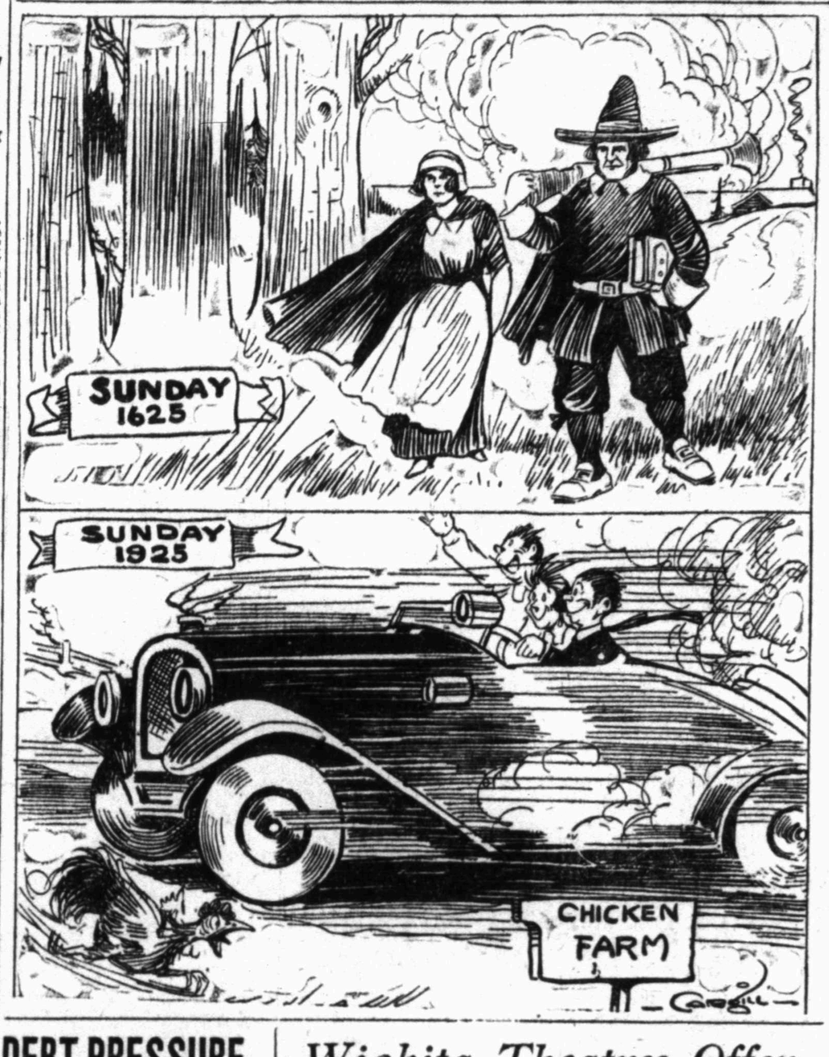

Judge Kay added that Paul's words at that time, when he knew that they would cause displeasure, should teach us all a lesson, to stand for the right whether the time for the truth is propitious or not.

"Paul was preaching that men could go direct to the Savior without the intervention of the temple and without the intervention of the priesthood, therefore they hunted him to slay him. If some brave man should come to Wichita Falls and tell you how we are living, in other words if he should project on this screen here the real story of my life and yours, would you seek him to lay hands on him. He is a bold warrior indeed who undertakes to tell the public the whole truth; so they got after Paul and he had to leave there, for what? For proclaiming the greatest truth that ever slipped down from the finer heaven to the meaner earth for the benefit of men. It is these great truths then that men must face and as Paul said that he knew that you must face that question and decide. See, see that you decide it soberly, fairly and religiously and fully.

"Now, then he touched that great doctrine, he went out to teach other men how to live, he never stopped a minute from that time on, going into the desert, going into strange cities, going among people of strange tongues, going among the Greek philosophers, shipwrecked, snake bitten, in prison, scourged he just goes on and on and on, as I think a man will go on that has got the right type of true religion.

"We started out talking about increase. If your religion doesn't increase, if it doesn't grow, if it doesn't reach from you to the other members of the family, to the neighbors up and down the street, if your religion doesn't affect other men, then it is wrong and I think you should determine that you are going to light a lamp that will not only light your pathway, but aid the feet of other men."

DEBT PRESSURE BEING PLANNED BY WASHINGTON

U. S. Considering the Proposition of More Debt Demands

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP)—The Washington administration is giving consideration to the question of exerting additional pressure on the government's foreign debtors to hasten funding negotiations.

Convinced of the solid support the American people, responsible officials feel that they are warranted in going ahead on the course charted by the first moves, made some weeks ago in advising the foreign nations that in the opinion of this government the time has come for settlement of their obligations to the United States.

Officials are highly pleased, and in some instances agreeably surprised it was declared today, at the apparent unanimity of the support accorded the administration on its initial steps to obtain commitments for payments.

The feeling that the collection pressure should be applied to war and post-war debts alike was made in official quarters where it was reiterated with emphasis that the administration neither by law nor policy would permit a differentiation among the various kinds of loans made. The government hopes and expects that the loans will be consolidated into one funding arrangement and the American debt commission is prepared to consider no other plans it was declared officially.

Wichita Theatres Offer Variety of Programs To Movie Goers This Week

WICHITA FALLS moving picture theatres offer a variety of programs for entertainment this week, ranging from drama and comedy drama at the Mission, Strand, and Olympic to a classic reproduction of the tragedy of Sand Cave at the Palace.

"I want my man," at the Mission, "His Supreme Moment" at the Olympic, and "One Night in Rome," at the Strand. The card is exceptional in every detail, with a picture at one of the three mentioned to suit the taste of every theatre-goer.

"I Want My Man."

Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon star in the Mission attraction, "I want my man." The story is of a blinded war hero and the nurse who loved him and married him while his affliction was still with him. Science cures the blindness, the nurse rather than face his disillusionment abandons her husband, divorces him in Paris courts. She becomes a job-hunter in America and is engaged by her husband's invalid mother as companion. The husband returns, convinced by reason of her abandonment that their relation was purely professional. He renews his engagement with the sweetheart of his childhood and is on the point of marrying her when a hot shot denouement sets matters aright and the right woman gets the right man. The picture is a good study in changed ideals wrought by the world conflict.

Italian Story.

At the Strand Laurette Taylor vivacious, beautiful, and fascinating, provides the background for a story of the Italian aristocracy, its scenes mainly in England, it is true, but Italian nevertheless. An Italian countess finds her fidelity questioned by her husband, who makes ready to commit suicide, leaving a note accusing his wife, only to have an old enemy step in and end matters for him. The count's father swears vengence and tells the accused woman that he will hound her steps and forever brand her associates as the unfaithful wife. The countess departs and takes up fortune telling in England. Her identity is discovered and vindication given her at a critical time and what might have been a tregedy ends happily. Her opposite is Tommie Meighan, but for once Tommie is lost in the glare of his leading lady, Laurette.

Olympic Different.

"His Supreme Moment," at the Olympic is different. The charm of tropical nights and the spell of sweet-sounding guitars make a splendid background for Blanche Sweet and Reginald Coleman to run a gold mine in old Mexico as it should be run, despite an enterprising walking delegate who inspires the workers to murder.

The Sand Cave tragedy is reproduced to an exactitude at the Palace. Cameras that stood watch night and day during the 18 days of the digging and recovery of the Collins body kept a faithful record of the tragedy, and the romance that prompted the whole affair is depicted in one of the most entertaining and instructive films ever shown in this city.

Seven Persons Are Held for Violation Of Narcotic Laws

With seven persons in jail, including one man known to be selling narcotics, the city police department has launched what Chief Hodgins declares to be an unremitting campaign against the use and traaffiking in drugs in Wichita Falls.

A marked increase in violations of the narcotic laws prompted the chief recently to start a drive against illicit users of the "dope." Quiet but consistent work on the part of officers rounded up a number of offenders and brought to light one man who has been identified by one of the users as the "higher up" who has been supplying much of the morphine and cocain in use here. He will be turned over to federal authorities for prosecution.

HE WAS AT APPAMATTOX.

Samuel Vaughn, of Greenville, S. C., 80-year-old veteran of the Civil war, is visiting at the home of Judge J. C. Kay for a few days, prior to returning to his home. Mr. Vaughn came to Texas last week to attend the confederate reunion at Dallas, and stopped over on the way back to see Judge Kay, whom he has known for a number of years.

Mr. Vaughn served in the war throughout the four years, according to members of the Kay family, the last year and a half of which he served under the command of Robert E. Lee, being present at the general's surrender at Appamatox in April, 1865.

EARTHQUAKE KILLS 300.

TOKIO, May 25.—(AP)—A spokesman for the home department said this morning that information reaching the government from Toyo-Oka and Kinosaki estimated that casualties in Saturday's earthquake at 300 dead and 1000 injured. Relief is progressing rapidly and efficiently and there is no want among the survivors.

FIRST BAPTIST HEARS TALK ON NEVERTHELESS

Dr. Powers Takes Text For Sermon From Corinthians

Dr. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, spoke to a large audience Sunday morning on the text, "Nevertheless," taken from the scripture found in 2 Cor. 7:5.

"It is proper that we take a word like that and analyze it and go through the Bible and study its meaning and draw lessons from it," he began, "this morning it will be profitable for us to wait as we examine this word 'Nevertheless.' God looks down on that great church at Ephesus and as He sees it in its labors and patience, and judgment, on impostors, Jesus says to that church, I take account of all these things and am not unmindful of your zeal, your patience and your love and judgment between good and evil and as I look down on you this morning I see one thing nevertheless thou hast left thy first love. In thy infancy the fire of love was burning on your altar in the heart of the preacher, the deacons, the singers, the teachers—aglow with love in God and the lost, but as Jesus looked down on that church that day it had grown in numbers, wealth and worldly influence. but He said nevertheless the fire of your first love has gone out and that is the tragedy of the church and of the home.

Tragedy In Home.

Turning to the young people in the church the pastor warned them that the fires of their first love burn with a fire that seems unquenchable, but if neglected will die down nevertheless. It is true also with everyone, he added.

It is a tragedy in the home when the husband and the wife allow, that love to die down. It is a tragedy with a church when it has grown to strength in influence when it ceases to kindle and nourish the fires of evangelism and of righteousness, loyalty, sympathy, fellowship and love for the lost world. It matters not as to its great gifts if it neglects to feed the fires of first love. It is a tragedy when it becomes ashes. So, this word, nevertheless, in connection with this church at Ephesus comes to us—one thing against three, thou hast let the fire of thy first love die down.

"Another nevertheless is the chastening rod. Child life, child joy, child artlessness. The child likes to go along without care and labor and self denial and not have to go to school or to work or to toil, but how great to think of no chastening rod. Oh, the joy of a child and yet, to all who think and have passed to manhood and womanhood, we know there could be no real happiness, no real character, no real strength, no real hope, and that there could be only sorrow to that child that does not know that chastening rod. God deals with us as with children. We would love to go in green pastures and beside the still waters without passing through the dark valley of the shadow of death, without going under the chastening rod; without knowing sorrow; without any pain, yet, God knows there can be no character and no real success and no hope—nothing but loss and pain and sorrow, for the life who does not know of real self denial, discipline—pass under the rod, my child, for in it is joy, peace and in it, "Nevertheless" of the chastening rod.

"After the supper, they had the lesson in humility when the Son of God washed the feet of Simon and Judas. What music His words were, but finally at that feast, and tell them nevertheless, it is expedient for you that I go for if I go not, the Comforter will not come. The nevertheless of separation. You remember home with father and mother and brother and sisters, one day God comes with that nevertheless of separation and the old home next is broken up—perhaps to go to school or some distant city to start life in a strange place, or some other way, but God broke up your home next. It broke mother's and father's heart then, but in the wisdom and plan of God it was best for the loved ones that we should go—if we are to grow character make life and achieve success.

Jesus Came Down.

"Then Jesus came down from that upper room and went to Gethsemane. As he prayed, looking at the cross, I hear Jesus say, 'Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me. I think of the cup of his shame of sorrow, of lonesomeness, of woe, of darkness and of the sin of the world—as he says that. In the darkness of the night, I hear him cry out: 'Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done.' O, people, this morning, the sun may be shining in your home and birds may be singing along your path, and health coursing through your veins and not a cloud of sorrow on your heart, but sooner or later, you will come to your Gethsemane. I do not know what it will be. It may be the cup of ruin and wreck in business; ruin and wreck in health, or the cup of shame of some loved one or the cup of self denial and separation, or the cup of the dividing of the way—pleasure and amusement on one side, and the cross, humility and self denial on the other, that cup if offered to all and you cry in that hour 'Father, if it be possible let this cup pass,' and yet as you understand the will of God and His plan, you look beyond the cross to the crown and you say, 'not my will but thy will be done;' then you will parallel your little will with the will of God; then you will be triumphant. Thy will. You remember when Jesus told Simon to launch out, after Simon had fished all nigh and caught nothing."

Always Comes Down.

Departing from his story for the moment, the pastor warned his congregation that Christ always comes down when needed, ready to serve and help. Continuing, he repeated the words of Christ to Simon:

"'Simon draw the boat up and let me get in,' and then He told Simon to launch out to the deep and let down his net. You have had that experience. I have been along there. You say you have been toiling, trying to land that husband, that boy, that girl, and they go further away. We have toiled all night. Fathers, mothers, men, friend, this morning, I want you to get that 'Nevertheless.' Simon said, 'Nevertheless, upon thy word we will let down the net.' That is faith in the face of failure. When Jesus comes and gives his command, we obey and I want to tell you, you remember they broke their net with the fishes. I do not know what your experience has been in the service to God but if Jesus comes and steps into your boat, your business, your home, your heart, and then launches out, you obey Him and He will send the blessing. The nevertheless of obedient faith. Then, finally, the nevertheless God. Friend, I do not know your sorrow, what it is, nor what your problem is, your task, your burden, your sin, but I know one thing, if you will open your heart and life and will let God come in, you will triumph over them all. 'Nevertheless God.' Let Him come in. Let Him come in with His power against your failing strength; with His light against your drakness; with His love, and victory will be yours. If God be for us, who can be against us? Nevertheless God. Do not forget God, man; do not forget God, woman. You come along weeping, sorrowing, trembling in failure and then one day God will come and the burden will be lifted and rolled away; for your mourning, there will come a song of joy. Don't forget God."

Sunday Work Necessary For Farmers In Wichita County To Keep Up Work

A trip through the agricultural districts of Wichita Falls Sunday afternoon found many farmers busy in the fields. Most of them were engaged in planting cotton. It is the first time in many years that farmers are so far behind with planting that Sunday work is necessary.

Wheat and oat fields are rapidly ripening and the hum of the binder will soon be heard. The crop continues to show improvement and some of the irrigated fields of wheat will produce as high as 35 bushels. While oats will not reach a great height yet the crop will be much better than expected 30 days ago.

Between Vernon and Harrold many fields of alfalfa have been cut for the first time this season. Due to excellent rains the hay crop will be exceptionally good in quality as well as yield.

Cotton in many fields is up to an excellent stand but badly in weeds Farmers will be rushed during the next 10 days in getting the crop cleaned. There is a heavy acreage of cotton this year and prospects for a good crop could not be better.

Between Iowa Park and Electra several fields of wheat are ripening and it will be necessary to begin cutting within 10 days. There are some good fields in that section of Wichita county that have not been irrigated

Methodists Invite Other Churches To Join Young People

At a mass meeting of the Methodist young people at the First Methodist church Sunday afternoon, it was decided to invite the young people's societies of the various churches of the city to co-operate in all phases of the young people's week of activity beginning tonight with a picnic at Scotland park and ending with a Bibical play, "The Rock," at the Wichita theatre on June 2nd.

Harold White, chairman of the week, anaounced to the young people that the Queen of the circus contest would end Wednesday night at 8 p. m., and that an intensified ticket selling campaign throughout the business section of the city would be conducted on Tuesday afternoon.

Reports from the various organizations of the three Methodist churches show a large amount of activity in their individual shows or stunts for the young people circus Friday and Saturday nights on the lot just south of the First Methodist church, Tenth and Lamar. A. A. Oxford, side show promoter stated at the meeting that 12 mid-way attractions had already been signed up and that more were expected to enter before Friday.

U. S. PRINTI... SHOP ATTACKED IN STATE MEET

Conditions in Washington Office Are Condemned By Texas Printers

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 24.—Conditions in the government printing office at Washington, under Public Printer Carter, was bitterly condemned in a resolution adopted by delegates to the Allied Printing Trades council state convention before adjourning their session here today.

Other resolutions pledged support of the Texas printers to the reconstruction program of the International Typographical union; endorsed the publicity campaign of the I. T. U. and favored the establishment of an apprentice school at Indianapolis, and endorsing plans for promoting use of the union label.

Co-operation of printers with employers in estimating production costs also was discussed favorably by the council.

George A. Wilson of Houston was re-elected president; John Callan, Austin, was named vice-president; Clyde V. Lancaster, San Antonio, secretary-treasurer; M. E. Shay, Galveston, chairman of the executive board; George W. Fisher, editor of The Trades Review.

No Further Danger Of Riots in Dallas Over Blacks—Belief

DALLAS, Texas, May 24.—Four days of quiet following the ill-fated mob rush on the Dallas county jail early Thursday, have led officers to believe that no further assaults on the prison of Frank and Lorenzo Noel, confessed negro slayers, are probable, peace authorities said tonight.

Forty-six picked military guardsmen called out following the jail rush shooting in which Dwight Stewart was fatally wounded, have been dismissed. Texas rangers and special deputies, however, still are patrolling the courthouse corridors.

Investigating officials say that one of the accused negroes has expressed a desire to plead guilty to one of the charges on which he is indicted.

CIRCUS REHEARSAL CALLED.

FROZEN STOCKS OFFER SERIOUS SALE PROBLEM

Retail Merchants to Deal With Question At State Meet

AUSTIN, Texas, May 24.—(AP)—"Frozen stocks" in Texas present to the retailer a serious problem for which a solution is to be sought at the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' association of Texas here May 25-27.

Upon the shelves of the stores of this state as of other states there are enormous stocks of goods which never move, declare merchants who have studied the problem.

"From 65 to 75 per cent of the goods on the shelves are what we call 'frozen stocks'," said W. H. Wray of Dallas, a former president of the association and one of its most active leaders. "A certain percentage of the goods never moves. They are dead weight.

"This percentage of dead goods can and ought to be reached. It should not be above 35 per cent. The goods can be moved by proper salesmanship, by education of clerks, and by eternally preaching service.

Public Service.

"The only excuse for a retail business is service to the public. A retailer is a public servant. If he permits goods to pile up on his shelves and rot, he is not serving the public because somewhere there is somebody who can use those goods, and it is the retailer's duty to find that person.

"We have got to preach service first, and profit will follow. We are giving 65 per cent better service now than in the days immediately following the world war. In those days a clerk did not have to be a salesman. All he needed to be was an order taker. People would buy anything and not ask the price. That is changed now. A man who is simply an order taker has no place in a store. He has got to be a salesman, and to be a salesman is to give service to the public. That is the great problem of the retailer, to educate the men and women who represent him before the public, who are the ones in direct contact with the public. The dealer must first sell his goods to his salesmen before they can be sold to the customer."

Mr. Wray will have a talk on "bootlegging" in merchandise, in which he promises to expose some of the methods of houses selling outside the legitimate channels of trade. He also will talk on credit, and on how to reduce overhead.

The conventions of the Retail Secretaries 'Association of Texas, and the Associated Retail Credit Men will be held simultaneously with the retail merchants' meeting. There also will be separate meetings of various branches of the retail business. Department stores, dry goods, ready-to-wear clothing, and shoe men will have a meeting at 2 p. m., May 26, at which J. R. Denney of Port Arthur, will be chairman. At the same hour the furniture and music dealers will hold a separate meeting, and the general stores, butchers and grocery men will gather to discuss their own problems under the chairmanship of Bailey A. Jones of Brady. Mr. Wray will be chairman of the furniture and music dealers' section. Drug stores, hardware, automobile and tire dealers also will meet separately.

Meet on Monday.

D. M. Moffatt, president of the Retail Merchants' association of Austin, will call the general convention to order Monday morning. At 10:30 a. m., T. J. Walton of Corsicana, president of the state association, will take charge of the convention.

An address by H. C. Balsiger of Kansas City, Mo., secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers, is on the program for 4:30 p. m., Tuesday.

Credit will form one of the big subjects of the convention. On the afternoon of the second day the subject will be introduced by a talk on this question: "What are the reasons for and against the accepting or declining of credit to an applicant who has personal references only?" This will be delivered by J. M. Walsh of Waco, and a general discussion is to be led by N. H. King of San Antonio.

Mr. Wray said it was possible an attempt to reduce credit business in this state may be made, as there was a belief that it was growing into too large a volume.

In an advance statement on the subject, Adolf Grasso of San Antonio, secretary of the association, said:

"Credit is not always granted on the financial ability to a person to pay. On the contrary, in the retail line, it is usually granted on the good paying record established by the party requiring credit. It is not looked upon so much as a financial obligation as it is a moral obligation, therefore the expressions of financial risk and moral risk. It is the moral risk that counts.

"Credit in the retail line is a convenience and is extended by the merchant for the convenience and benefit of the customer, however, credit many times may become a necessity for the customer. It is an obligation that is binding morally as well as legally, morally binding particularly in the case of the customer securing credit on open account, in which case his paying record is very often the only basis on which credit is extended."

DAYLIGHT CAUSES SUIT.

Painter Sues for Cost of Painting With Missing Daylight.

PARIS, May 24.—When Sao Paulo won the Grand Prix de Deauville last year, his honor Edmond Veil Picard ordered from the animal painter, de la Moriniere, a painting of the finish of the race with the horse "winning by three lengths." No price was fixed and when the painting was delivered the owner protested there was only one length of clear daylight between Sao Paulo and the second horse. He refused to accept the painting, saying that the actual distance separating the horses at the finish was three lengths exactly.

The painter's price was six thousand francs but the owner countered with a demand for a reduction because of the missing "lengths." The painter offered a 10 per cent rebate but the owner demurred and the artist went to the courts. A tribunal has just ruled that the race horse owner must pay 5,400 francs for the picture, holding that a ten per cent rebate was ample for the missing daylight between the horses.

Through A Woman's Eyes

WHAT IS THERE TO DISTINGUISH THE SUPERIOR WOMAN?

"I should not want my future wife to continue her work after we marry, and she agrees that career and marriage won't mix," writes a young man who seems worried about the inequalities of life.

"But it doesn't seem fair that a woman with the ability to carry on in some work or profession which distinguishes her from the ordinary and the commonplace should have to submerge this and sink her individuality in the common mould of domesticity and being some mans' 'better half.'

"It is by her work, her interests in the world that a woman, like a man, takes her place. Deprive her of that and you rob her of her medium of expression: you take away her very individuality. She becomes just Mrs. Smith, in the same class with Mrs. Brown, whose husband is in the same business as Mr. Smith and has the same income. Mrs. Smith may have edited a magazine before marriage, while Mrs. Brown ate chocolates and asked her father for her spending money. But what is there to distinguish them, five years after marriage, when their interests are the same, circumscribed by the household and the children?

There is this to distinguish them, young man—themselves. You remind me of the father who said to his son when the latter was leaving college, where he had been an ackuowledged leader: "You'll have to get used to being one of the lot, my lad. Outside they won't know what you did at college, and your name won't mean any more than anyone else's." Fiddlesticks! That boy remained a leader, and his name come to mean something wherever he went.

And so the woman who has something to give will give it and will be taken at her true valuation, whether the field of her activity is circumscribed by the four walls of her home or is unlimited on the face of the earth. The wife and mother may not directly reach as many people as the lecturer or the actress, but those whom she does reach will know her, and among them she will take her proper place. Indirectly, through the babe at her breast and the child at her knee, she may reach infinitely more and make her accomplishment of immeasurably greater scope than would have been possible with her own talents.

You underestimate the despised sphere or scope of "the household and the children," young man. Try that job for a while and learn whether your interests can be promoted, your purse guarded, your honor upheld and the souls of your children moulded as well by a moron as a woman of parts. Remember that the job of wife and mother is the most exacting in the world, and one that is worthy of the best brains and the most courageous heart of the finest woman on earth. The woman senses something of its scope who is willing to give up her career for it. If her husband recognizes this, too, she rarely regrets her choice.

The way a woman handles the job of looking after husband, children and a home will give her her "place," for one thing, as definitely as will any other job.

Marriage does not necessarily chloroform her brain. So don't worry, young man, about your sweetheart's talents going to waste or her losing her individuality or claim to distinction. Character, personality and intellect are legal tender the world over, and the extent to which we possess them will make itself felt and establish our "place" in whatever field of endeavor we may find ourselves.

DEMANDS FOR FEDERAL TAX CUT LOOMING

Treasury Has Not Yet Decided Definitely On Matter

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP)—The demand for another cut in federal taxes has begun to take definite shape and advices received by the treasury today indicate that a gigantic organization is slowly forming throughout the country for the announced purpose of promoting tax reduction along definite lines.

While the treasury has made no plans and probably will take little part in proposals for tax cuts other than to show by its calculations where and how the rates may be lowered, the business, financial and professional interests now together will, it was asserted in the reports, submit a practically completed bill to carry its ideas into effect.

Treasury officials were not advised as to views held by the organization leaders.

News of the proposed move came in the midst of the calculations by the treasury of the maximum cut in total volume of taxes that may be made without damage to the nation's finances. The indications heretofore that the total cut could not exceed $200,000,000 remained unchanged although late figures on federal expenditures in the current fiscal year appeared to show that a greater reduction was possible.

Tax receipts thus far this year are running slightly ahead of treasury estimates.

Customs receipts are a few million dollars ahead of the same date last year and bid fair to continue to the proportionate increase. Miscellaneous taxes have been almost as productive.

Pro Enforcement Is Matter for Police, Avers U. S. Official

EL PASO, Texas, May 24.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, in charge of all the customs, prohibiting and narcotic forces of the United States, talked to the men's Bible class of the First Presbyterian church on prohibition enforcement today.

"Prohibition enforcement is up to policemen, the mayor and city attorney, it is too big a job for the federal government to accomplish," he said.

"It is out of the question to expect the government to police every community. If you want to sneak a quart of liquor into your home up the back stairway for a party, it is not a job for the federal officers, but for your local officers.

"Your policemen, mayor and city attorney, have sworn to enforce the law. If I come down here to look into it, I'll not go after you, but I will try to get at the source of it and see why the officers are not enforcing the law."

Legion Board Named To Direct Care Of World War Orphans

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 24.—(AP)—A board of directors of nine, to direct the American Legion's work in home care and home aid for orphaned and dependent children of the world war was appointed by James A. Drain, national commander of the legion, today. Under this board's direction the legion intends to carry on the child welfare work, which in part is to be supported from the income from the $5,000,000 endowment fund, which is now being raised.

The board, which will represent the Legion, the Legion Auxiliary and the Forty and Eight, includes George A. Withers, Clay Center, Kansas; Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, national president of the auxiliary; Mrs. Ray Callihan, Garden City, Kansas, and Mrs. S. E. Hudson, Austin, Texas.

GOLD STANDARD WAS REPLACED WITH U. S. AID

America's Part in Big Move Described By Officials

WASHINGTON, May 24.—(AP)—The part America and American financiers played in the resteration of the British gold standard and the placing of sterling exchange at virtually a gold par was described officially today as being among the outstanding economic accomplishments of modern times, if not in all history.

By co-operating with Great Britain in her efforts to get back to a gold standard the United States again supplied "a constructive factor of the greatest consequence in helping to place the economic and financial affairs of the world on a safe and sound solid basis," said Dr. A. C. Miller, federal reserve board member, and widely known economist.

Dr. Miller's views, with which Secretary Mellon is in entire accord were contained in a statement in which he depicted at length the "heroic struggle" of nations throughout the world to get away from "managed currencies" and monetary disorganization. In the case of England, he said it has has more than the mere transactional significance of the approach of the pound sterling to a gold value of $4.86.

"It is one of the most important steps achieved since the armistice toward world economic restoration," he declared. "More even than that, it is an illuminating, gratifying sign of how far toward completion the whole process of post-war readjustment has run its course."

Geneva Conference Unable to Agree On Arms Traffic Rule

GENEVA, May 24.—(AP)—After struggling for several days with the American proposal for the inclusion of a clause in the arms traffic control conference forbidding the use of poison gas, the committee dealing with the subject tonight reluctantly reported was unable to agree to the American suggestion.

CHARLEMANGE SUIT TRIED.

PARIS, May 24.—A law suit originating in the days of Charlemange is being tried in the tribune of the little republic of Andorra, now sitting at Perpigman, France. Charlemagne returning from his Spanish expedition in 790 A. D., left as rear guard protection against an incursion from the Moors into France, one thousand soldiers on the south slope of the Pyrehees. The emperor made land grants to every soldier, aggregating 150 square miles, which down to these modern days has constituted the Free Republic of Andorra, under the sovereignty of France. The dispute is over one of these land titles, and it has been the subject of litigation for longer than one thousand years. The money expended in costs through successive trials is said to amount to more than ten times the value of the land itself.

LABOR MEN TO CONSIDER FREE TEXT QUESTION

Secretary Warns Against Efforts to Destroy Free Books

AMARILLO, Texas, May 24.—(AP)—A warning to Texas organized labor to be "on guard against constantly growing efforts to destroy free text books in this state" has been sent to members of the Texas State Federation of Labor by George M. Slater of Dallas, executive secretary, who is here today preparing for the annual labor convention starting tomorrow.

Mr. Slater in his annual report, which will be considered by the convention, referred to joint resolution introduced in the last legislature proposing a constitutional amendment providing that only those willing to take a pauper's oath would be entitled to free text books.

Effort Was Failure.

"We are happy to report" said Mr. Slater, "that this effort didn't get very far, but you are reminded to be on your guard, for there is a constantly growing effort being put forth to destroy free text books in this state.

Mr. Slater was in charge of the legislative bureau of the federation at Austin during the legislature. He revealed in his report the source of some of the opposition to the proposed illiteracy commission which failed to pass the house, though the entire woman lobby backed it strongly. The opposition at times mystified the women, according to Mrs. Jane Y. McCullum of Austin, secretary of the Women lobby.

The labor bureau opposed this bill, Mr. Slater said, because it permitted the proposed corporation, under which the commission was to act, to accept donations from sources outside of Texas."

"While in general terms the bill met our approval we were compelled to take issue with that feature," he said, "believing that we would see the danger of the aforesaid corporation falling into the hands of cert in institutions whose enmity to the American wage earners represented in the American trade union movement is too well known to need discussion.

Delegates Arriving.

Delegates were arriving in the city today for the opening session tomorrow morning. Secretary Slater said he expected about 150 delegates. Special cars are coming from Houston and Fort Worth, the latter delegation going with the Dallas laborites.

Among matters which this convention expects to consider is some plan for bringing back the $600,000 vocational educational appropriation vetoed by Governor Ferguson. Mr. Slater said the federation appropriation vetoed with some regret but that it was only fair to say that the governor "was actuated by a sincere desire to keep the appropriation within the present tax return of the state, and it is this feature which must be met by the lawmakers of the state."

It is probable the convention will record itself as favoring vocational education and will urge this appropriation to be considered at a special session of the legislature.

Vocational Training.

"It should be remembered that the matter of proper and thorough vocational training is a problem of deepest concern to the trade union movement," said the secretary's report.

The delegates will be urged to get back of the Texas centennial movement. It is described as "a laudable ambition" in the report of Secretary Slater, who is a member of the centennial executive board.

A proposition to express disapproval of any attempt to raise the tuition in state college "to an unreasonable extent" is to be presented, it was said. A bill raising tuition in state institutions to $100 a year was killed by the legislature. Some specific instruction on this for the federation legislative committee is to be asked, as it is said labor believes if the tuition is raised it will exclude many sons and daughters of laboring people from the opportunities for a college education.

Church Denies It Attacked Hays For Stand on Bad Films

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 24.—(AP)—A report of the department of moral welfare of the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., making Will H. Hays, head of the motion picture producers and distributors of America, the target for an attack on questionable motion pictures, was publicly repudiated today by the church's board of christian education.

Dr. Charles Scanlon, assistant secretary of the board, in charge of moral welfare, department, planned to circulate the report in question tomorrow in pamphlet form. It became available yesterday.

Dr. Scanlon's name is not mentioned in the statement given out today, nor is any particular report. However, it was issued, it states "in view of the fact that statements have become public which might be construed representing the policy of the board of christian education with reference to motion pictures."

DAWES GIVEN TENNIS CUP

Vice-President Gives France Something Besides Reparation Plan.

PARIS, May 24. — Vice-President Dawes is known to be a man of varied interests, but it remained for a French provincipal paper to identify the general as the donor of the world famous Davis cup, for tennis. With the first round of the Davis cup matches in full swing in Vienna, Amsterdam Brussels, Warsaw and Berne, the newspaper, which has nationalistic political leanings and looks upon the Dawes reparation settlement plan rather unfavorably, has taken a hand at commenting on the tennis situation in Europe.

"General Dawes has given Europe a reparations plan which may be discussed and criticized, and in the operation of which France does not appear to receive all her due. The general, however, also has given a perfectly good cup to be disputed by the tennis world, and it is up to France to make up for some of her defeats at the hands of Americans by carrying away the general's cup."

TEXANS AND THE INCOME TAX.

A comparison of internal revenue receipts for the first nine months of the fiscal years 1924 and 1925 by states under the new income tax schedule should be interesting to Texans. From July 1, 1923, to March 31, 1924, Texans paid in income tax $21,530,238.50; in miscellaneous taxes $6,258,346.15. Total $27,788,584.73.

For the first nine months July 1, 1924, to March 31, 1925, Texans paid in income tax $21,108,285.21; in miscellaneous taxes $4,529,321.94. Total $25,637,607.15. Taxpayers all agree that war is hell.

For the first nine months of the fiscal year of 1924 manufacturers of motor vehicles including motorcycles, paid to the government $83,396,518.19. For the first nine months of 1924 and 1925 they paid $61,486,889.94. Of course the manufacturers of motor vehicles passed the tax on to the consumer who in this instance is the buyer of a motor vehicle or vehicles.

According to Dr. Atticus Webb, the drink bill of America was $2,500,000,000 the year before prohibition became effective. Now his argument is that it is better to invest the money in motor vehicles and gas then it was to invest in what he looked upon as liquid damnation. All the American world is on wheels and it is a merry old world at that.

Seven American states are taxing gasoline consumers 3 cents per gallon and this is what is going to happen in Texas in the year 1927. Those who use the roads the most should pay the most. Steam railways are compelled to pay high taxes; interurban railways are compelled to pay high taxes. Why not the owners of motor vehicles? There should be one law for all.

CHURCHES CAN BRING PEACE.

All the nations involved in the world war with the exception of Turkey were Christian nations. Rev. Dr. Raymond B. Fosdick of New York is telling the American people that the churches of the world could put over peace if they wanted to. Dr. Foswick insists that it was the Christian nations of the world that almost wrecked civilization during the world war, and that they would do it completely if the brakes were not put on.

This eminent apostle of peace is for a world court, or a league of nations or a court of international justice, and his advice to Americans is to get in and play the game with the other nations, instead of viewing with suspicion everything that is done.

Our government advanced $11,000,000,000 to the European allies when the world war was on. American men and money won that war. American bankers and their depositors have loaned $11,000,000,000 to European nations and Europeans since the signing of the armistice.

And didn't the house of Morgan of New York and the federal reserve bank establish a credit of $300,000,000 to enable the British government to get back to the gold standard. Americans appear to be playing the game all the time, and playing it with the gold of the world which is theirs.

VOICE OF A MAN FROM THE WEST.

A man from the west, a state senator, is for the sale of the penitentiary farms, the relocation of the prison plant and this without delay. J. W. Reid of Canyon is another member of the upper house who predicts that the thirty-ninth legislature will not have an extra session to its credit. That is, Governor Ferguson will never call the lawmakers together.

Senator Reid is a banker, a merchant and a farmer. For many years he was a teacher in one of the state colleges. He is a champion of prison location. He would sell all the prison farms. He would place two or three thousand convicts on the highways of the state for road building purposes. He would maintain two or three plants for the manufacture of road building materials and he would employ convicts to do the work.

Senator Reid is a holdover. He will be a member of the upper house of the fortieth legislature. He is going to push the prison relocation proposition and he is of the opinion that a majority of the lawmakers in both houses two years hence will adopt drastic legislation to rid the state and the taxpayers of the antiquated and very costly prison system of today.

FRIENDLY BUT FRANK.

In the opening of the United States-Mexican border conference there was a notable lack of high-flown declarations of ideals and altruistic sentiments. The principal representatives expressed themselves vigorously, frankly and with unmistakable friendliness, but without fawning or the use of flamboyant phrases. "I am sure," declared Lincoln C. Andrews, chairman of the American commission, "we will happily accomplish our purpose to the credit and honor of our respective nations, though each member have always in mind the interests and the honor of his own nation." To this, a suitable answer was made by Primo Villa Michael, chairman of the Mexican commission. "If each delegate," he stated, "consecrates all his energies in service for the honor and interests of his own country, we will have chosen the best road to secure the good of both countries."

Such frank assertions of patriotism leave no room for misunderstanding. Honesty always inspires confidence. There is, of course, in any international conference the implication of common aims, lacking which nations would have no reason for conferring. But to over-emphasize it is to destroy it. What one delegation wants to know is not the friendliness of another delegation, for this is taken for granted, but the exact purpose which it is trying to serve. Finding nothing covert or sinister, each party meets frankness with frankness, and progress is made toward genuine accord.

EXPORTS OF COTTON.

According to a recent government report, exports of cotton since last summer has increased 49 per cent, of copper a little more than 17 per cent, and of wheat 153 per cent. Since August 1st last, 56 per cent more cotton has been exported to Great Britian, 44 per cent more to Germany and 45 per cent more to Japan. Europe is coming back.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

We do not pay teachers of our children enough.

There is no getting away from the economic truth that we get what we pay for, and we get only that. In the long run the level of any profession is about even with its remuneration.

A recent writer says: "When we buy teaching service, to a large extent we buy our children's outlook on life."

We live for our children. The whole house is conducted for them. And no business could be more important than their proper development.

The teacher stands in the place of the parent. He should be a man trained so that under him the children can develop into a proper manhood.

For this reason he ought to be one who has read the best books and magazines and who has the widest outlook on life. Selecting an inferior quality of people to teach our children results eventually in inferior children.

A teacher should be the best sort of person in the world, so that out of his largeness the child may be fed.

No stream rises higher than its source, and no education is going to do for our children what it ought unless it comes from persons who are properly trained to give it.

Training teachers costs money. Attracting the best minds to the teaching profession costs money.

Teachers ought to lead cultured lives with plenty of leisure, and that costs money. The teacher must maintain a standard of living which permits him to live in comfortable ease, so that he can bring to the classroom the necessary vitality. And that costs money.

We have done much toward improving the quality of the teachers in the United States, but the problem is so vital and large that we have not yet scratched the surface.

The teacher should be paid enough to make him an important member of the community. He should be paid enough to insure the respect of the children.

Money does not mean everything and there are some things that cannot be bought for money, but at the same time money means something and in the long run it is the basis for those finer qualities which we desire in those who train our children.

Miss Margaret M. Alltucker in The Journal of the National Education association says that we want teachers of superior ability, trained, cultured and traveled, with a broad outlook and understanding of life, so that they may interpret life correctly for our boys and girls.

It is doubtful if we can secure such teachers on the salaries that we now pay.

Most of the vital problems in the future of the nation are to be determined in the classroom and we need the best of experts to preside there.

CHILD LABOR LAW OF TEXAS.

Now the child labor law of Texas has been given a construction by the attorney general. He holds that a county judge is not authorized at any time, under any facts, conditions or circumstances and regardless of age, to issue a permit to a child where such child is to be employed in a mine, quarry, or other places where explosives are used, or a child between the ages of 12 and 15 years when such a child is to be employed in or around any mill, factory, work shop or other places where dangerous machinery is used or in or around any place where the moral or physical condition of the child is liable to be injured. Lawmakers of the thirty-ninth legislature enacted the law which becomes effective June 18th. It will not apply away down on the farm.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Too Much to Hope For.

We are as we are, and we cannot change ourselves—much.

If we are not born geniuses, geniuses we shall never become.

It is quite possible that the son of some bricklayer may be as great as Keats, who was the son of a head groom.

But the bricklayer's son will have to be born a poet, as was Keats.

The English boy worked hard, read deeply, and practiced his work assiduously.

But it was not his work nor his reading nor his practice that made him immortal. It was something he "brought with him' something that his toil had to bring out, but which no toil could have brought out of a boy without his gift.

Mr. Longfellow, a less gifted poet than Keats, but a sincere and scholarly man who has written many fine things erred when he said:

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.
Footprints, that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
Some forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall take heart again."

We may be able to make our lives sublime, as far as the standards of good behavior and unselfishness are concerned.

But unless we bear "one of those few immortal names that were not born to die" we shall leave no footprint on the sands of time.

And why should we care. Fame is pleasant while we are here. But it is not necessary.

If we live out our appointed season, helping others a little, enjoying ourselves a little, playing fair with our friends and enemies, we shall have done enough to justify our existence.

If we can, by some deed or other, help the world a little to progress, make life a little easier for those to come, or inspire some thought that may in time grow and bear real fruit, we shall have done enough.

Holmes says that:

"A few can touch the magic string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them—
Alas for those who never sing
But die with all their music in them!"

Why "alas?" If they have music in them they can understand and appreciate the music that they hear, even if they cannot sing, and that is a great gift in itself.

No need to stand on the pinnacles of fame. Happiness is no greater there than elsewhere. Even the great are a prey to the same jealousies and worries that the lesser lights are.

Lives of great men do remind us that we can get a great deal more out of the equipment we have by industry and thought and purpose than we can be neglecting these things.

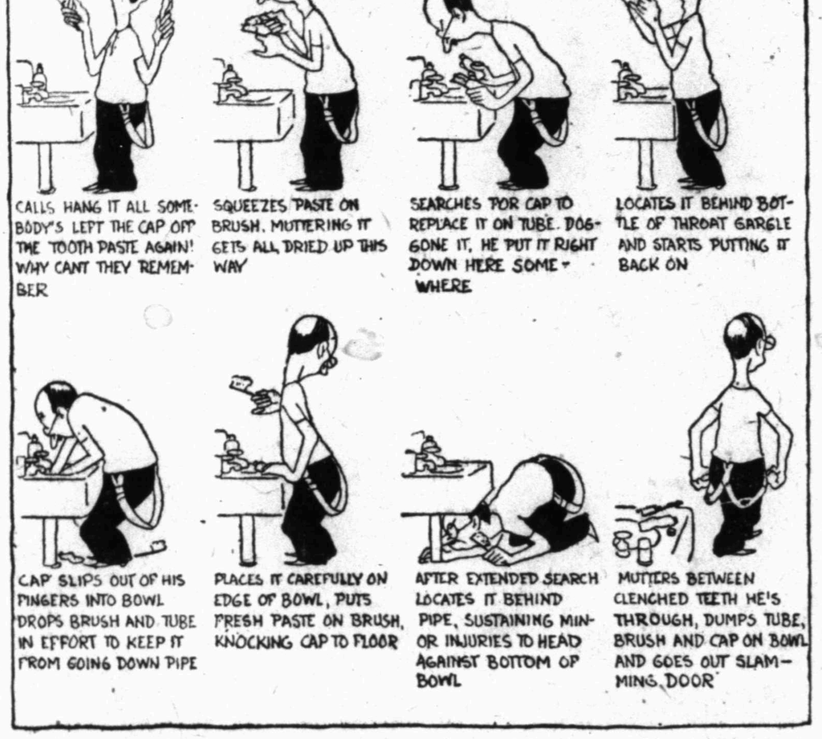

Even if we cannot write footprints on the sands of time, we can make our lives fuller and richer and better by trying to do all we can. And that is enough.

To realize our limitations in the beginning will enable us at last to extend them widely—not to the boundaries of genius, but far enough to make us happy and useful.

Irrigation

BENEFIT TAXES.

When a public improvement is made such as the building of a paved highway, a public park, or a drainage ditch it is sometimes held that the property closest to the improvement is benefitted to a greater degree than other property further away.

Naturally it would be thought that such property would become more valuable and therefore subject to a greater ad valorem tax on account of such increase in value. This is true in many cases.

However this probable rise in value of property has not always appealed to people when they came to vote bonds for some improvement and they made sure that each would pay according to the benefit received directly. This is particularly true in the case where drainage ditches are dug to dispose of surplus underground and surface water. Taxes in drainage districts are frequently on a benefit basis.

Let us suppose that a drainage ditch was dug deep enough to affect property for a half mile on either side. Obviously any property owner beyond these limits would not be benefitted by it and if he was taxed for its construction he would be paying for an improvement to his neighbor's property.

On the other hand the man whose land immediately adjoins the ditch would receive the maximum benefit. Therefore he should pay the maximum amount of taxes. This is true benefit taxation. The property owners pay according to the benefit they receive from the improvement made. It is an attempt to equalize taxation and place the burden where it belongs.

In district No. 2 it is undoubtedly true that some owners were benefitted to a greater degree by the building of the irrigation ditches than were others. Yet they all pay alike. It is not true benefit taxation.

There is nothing wrong with the system as used in the district. It is probably the only solution that could be worked out. Nothing is harder or more difficult than assessing benefit taxes. The people made their choice by vote and decreed that every one would be benefitted to the same degree or $35 per acre.

But district No. 2 taxes while they are called benefit taxes are not on a true benefit basis.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE.

Gemini.

Today's planetary aspects are, although slightly adverse in the early morning, very favorable on the whole, and denote, with the proper degree of enthusiastic effort and well-directed energy, a great measure of success for any undertaking initiated under such encouraging auspices. The indications seem to assure achievemnt especially in operations that are related to real estate or mining. Deals savoring of speculation or risk should be left severely alone, as chance cannot be depended upon to ensure results. The emotions promise to be stirred to an unusual degree and such an occasion presents an opportunity, of which full advantage should be taken, to put to the final test your fate as a lover.

Although a child born today will suffer from several ailments in its infancy, it can, with proper nutrition and careful vigilance, be safely brought to a condition of physical normalcy. Its disposition will be gentle and submissive, and while its face will be set against doing wrong, its character will not be strong; neither will it possess a dominating personality, although, with good ideals, it will not allow itself to be dominated by others. It will prove to be studious and reserved and will not show much aptitude for sports or outdoor recreations. Its nature will be very affectionate, and its temperament more emotional than practical.

You, if today is your birthday, are very painstaking and energetic, and are always a hard worker, although your imagination often plays havoc with your efforts, and your time is frequently wasted on plans that are both impractical and chimerical. You are more easily influenced by your reaction to people than to projects in hand, and are easily disposed to drop a good proposit on on grounds of personal prejudice or dislike. Much greater success would attend your efforts if you could concentrate your attention on the task in hand, and not allow yourself to be swayed or influenced by petty feelings of jealousy or animosity. So far as the everyday things of life are concerned, you must, in order to successfully capitalize your ability and energy, control your emotions and suppress your passions.

HOW IT STARTED

"Talk of the Devil, He's Sure to Appear."

"Talk of the devil, he's sure to appear!" From our school days we have all been familiar with this saying, used when a person who is being discussed, presumably in his absence, or to use the juvenile expression, "behind his back," suddenly appears.

Whence came the saying? Was it originated by some wily schoolmaster in the hope of curing his charges of the obnoxious habit of talking about others who were absent? It might well have been so used many times in the interval of several hundred years since its origin. But its source is in a poem entitled "Has Carroll" by Prior, the well known English poet of the seventeenth and early eighteenth century. The following are the lines in which it had its beginning:

"Since therefore 'tis to combat evil,
'Tis lawful to combat the Devil;
Forthwith the Devil did appear,
For name him and he is always near."

WOMEN UPLIFT EACH OTHER.

Inevitable Result of Women Together Is Uplift, Says Ambassador.

BERLIN, May 24. —"Whenever three American women meet together the inevitable result is uplift," humorously remarked Dr. Wiedfeldt, former ambassador to the United States, to a group of American correspondents in discussing his impressions of American.

"No other country," Dr. Wiedfeldt added, "has the equivalent expression for uplift. You Americans, especially your women, have a passion for improving or reforming the world.

Besides the uplift idealism and overproduction of laws made the deepest impressions on the returned ambassador.

"Before I went to America," he said, "I was told materialism was your chief characteristic. The opposite is true. Nowhere in the world will one find more of the idealism of readiness to help others in a spirit of charity than in the United States. On the other hand, no country equals yours in the passage of too many laws. You turn out laws in quantities, as you do automobiles.

More Truth Than Poetry

DREAMING DREAMS

There's a glorious thrill in propelling the pill
Till it passes almost beyond sight
As it speeds down the course with the unbroken force
Of a feather-tipped arrow in flight;
To land the ball clean on the faraway green,
While the caddy cries joyfully "one!"
Is to feel that you've passed to Nirvana at last—
Too bad that it cannot be done!

To send a long hook past the bend of the brook
With a confident, practiced control,
And to see you have got only one more short shot
Bring abundance of balm to the soul.
To know that you know where that shot's going to go,
As your feet on the fairway you plant,
Is a thing to impart pure delight to your heart,
Which makes you regret that you can't.

With an unshaken nerve an approach shot to curve
O'er the bunker's precipitous brink,
And to watch it roll up till it drops in the cup
With a grateful and comforting "clink"—
Is a species of bliss that no mortal should miss,
But let not your soul be deceived,
These visions will fade when the shot has been played—
For such magic is never achieved.

It's delightful to say at the end of the day,
"I have played as I ne'er played before,
All the afternoon through every shot has gone true,
And I've cut twenty strokes from my score.
I have used every club without foosle or flub,
And got around well under par."
But if such were your speech every man within reach
Would know what a liar you are!

NONE GROW OLD SO QUICKLY AS THOSE WHO WORK THEMSELVES TO A FRAZZLE TRYING TO KEEP YOUNG—AGE DEALS KINDLIER WITH US IF WE RECOGNIZE IT INSTEAD OF FIGHTING IT OFF

None of us wants to die. No matter how strong our religious faith, nor how lustily we sing "Heaven is my home," none of us is in a hurry to go there. We prefer to stay in a world in which we are acquainted and acclimated.

Likewise, we all dread old age. It fills us with horror to think of becoming bent and tottering old men and women, our vigor of mind and body gone, sans hair, sans teeth, sans everything.

So from time immemorial humanity has been on the still hunt for some magic that will stay the devastating hand of time and enable it to hold on to the youth it prizes so dearly. The ancients sailed the world over seeking fabled islands and miraculous fountains of perpetual youth. We moderns pin our faith to the surgeon's knife and the druggist's bottles, to monkey glands, and face liftings, and paints, and powders, and hair dyes.

All in vain. The black oxen of the years march over us, treading out our youth and beauty, our strength and high spirits, and nothing that we can do will stop them. So it seems a pity that we should waste so much thought, so much struggle, and effort, and energy, and money in essaying an impossible task. For do what we may, we cannot keep young, and when we try to camouflage age as juvenility the only people in the world that we fool are ourselves.

We can dye our hair the gold, or the black, or the jet of girlhood, but we cannot put under it the fresh face of sixteen. We can have our skin gored and tucked until all of our wrinkles are taken out, but there still remain the tired, old eyes that have seen fifty or sixty years. We can starve ourselves until we get the figures of flappers, but we are not lithe and graceful. We are living skeletons.

We can roll our stockings and borrow our granddaughter's clothes, but it doesn't make us look like debutantes. It makes us look like those afflicted with senile dementia.

The truth is, the more we fight age the harder it fights back and the sooner it conquers us. None grow old so quickly as those who work themselves into premature age trying to keep young.

Not long ago I was standing behind a jaunty little figure perched on the runningboard of a car. She wore the gayest and sportiest of sport suits. She had the thin figure of a girl of fifteen. Her bobbed henna-colored hair curled under the brim of a rakish little hat. Presently she turned around and disclosed a face that was like a mask, it was so plastered over with cosmetics. "Heavens! Did you ever see such an old hag?" exclaimed a man near me.

Now, this woman was not more than fifty years old. She was in the prime of life, at an age when many women are handsomer than they have ever been in their lives. No one would have thought of her as being old at all, if she had been willing to appear her own honest age; if she had had the pleasing plumpness that belonged to her time of life; if her soft, gray hair had waved about her face, and if she had been appropriately dressed. It was her effort to appear kiddish that called attention to what an old goat she was.

If bobbing and dyeing their hair, and dieting themselves to emaciation, and wearing knee-length skirts made elderly women look young and girlish they would not only be justified in doing so; it would be a virtue to do it, for thereby they would make themselves easy on the eyes. But just the reverse is true. Their affectation of youth only calls attention to what a long distance, they have got from youth. Old sheep never seem so old, and tough, and stringy as when it is dressed as spring lamb.

And the folly of trying to act young after you are old is just as great as that of trying to look sixteen when your are sixty. Women have been told so often that they must keep their spirits young, that they must never think old thoughts, that they must never speak of age or admit to themselves that they are getting older, that they have come to believe that, simply by forgetting their birthdays, they can maintain a perpetual girlhood.

All of us know women who begin every reminiscence by saying that they were very young at the time that it happened, and who give you to understand that their husbands were cradle snatchers, who married them when they were mere infants.

We know old women who are always teasing themselves about men, and talking about their best beaus, and pretending to have flirtations with boys young enough to be their grandsons, and repeating compliments about their eyes or their fascinations that they allege men paid them, but that even an idiot would know that they made up themselves.

How ridiculous the poor souls make themselves! How infinitely older they appear than the women who do not try to pose as vamps after they have ceased to look the part, and who regard men just as they do women, as interesting and agreable human beings.

Perhaps, after all, we make too big a bugaboo of growing old. The twilight has its charms no less than the dawn or high noon, and so the last lap of the journey of life has its compensations and its joys if we are willing to accept them.

But, anyway, the only way we can escape old age is by dying young. But if we welcome it as a friend, it deals kindlier with us than if we fight it as an enemy.

AMERICAN OPERA IN BERLIN

German Eyes Are Opened By Unusual Invasion On Stage.

BERLIN, May 24.—Berlin's concert season, which was almost completely dominated by an invasion of American talent, improved a veritable eye-opener for the Germans. With the end of the season the critics frankly admit that they did not believe the United States could produce such brilliant musicians.

Anna Case, who opened the American forces of concerts, was apostrophized as "a rare combination of unusual beauty and highest artistic achievement." Of Dusolina Giannini's singing Berlin's leading critic, Prof. Adolf Weisman, observes: "Mark this name Dusolina; it is born for fame. Even the most spoiled listener remains in his seat until the last tone of her voice is wafted through the hall."

Mlle. Giannini has been engaged by the state opera as guest star for two months, beginning in September.

Sascha Jacobson, violinist, not only was compelled to give three encores at the end of his program, but also, in violation of the usual German concert tradition, had to repeat two numbers in the middle of his performance—an experience almost unheard of.

The Fisk jubilee singers are honored with warm eulogies of the negroe's services to musical art. One critic says of them: "Their music expresses everything that pained, oppressed and comforted the soul of the negro among the Whites—the sorrows of the slavery of yesterday and the hope for final liberation tomorrow.

The way has thus been well paved for the recitals of the remaining three Americans yet to be heard—Sophie Braslau, Richard Crooks and Wilhelm Middleschulte.

The GILDED ROSE

by May Christie

Who's Who in the Story

Rosilyn Ridgeway learns on her wedding day from idle gossip that she has been married for her money. Before her enormous fortune was left her, she had been an overworked little drudge in her father's inn.

Landis Ridgeway her husband is a brilliant, fascinating man, who was forced into the marriage by his mother.

Florence Ridgeway, an aritstocratic old lady, who saw poverty staring her in the face, and chose the easiest way out. Rosilyn loving her husband, knows that he is still in love with Lydia Harbrook, a beautiful, cold society girl who is bent on marrying.

Stevie Van Vorst, a wealthy old roue, although she is really fond of Ridgeway. She is in Paris when the news reaches her of Landis' marriage, and she hastens back to the United States. With her goes Rupert Briscoe, a dissipated man of the world, who has seen Rosilyn but once, and yet is deeply interested in her. Lydia learns of this interest, and when the two reach New York, she suggests that they ask the young Ridgeways to dinner. She and Briscoe concoct a plot whereby through an apparent misunderstanding Rosilyn and Briscoe will be left alone together, while she will be with her beolved Landis.

Landis finding himself alone with Lydia falls under her spell once more. Some hours later that evening, Rosilyn who is bewildered to find herself spending the evening in the company of Rupert Briscoe, sees her husband dancing with Lydia—in his eyes a look of rapture. She believes he has seen her but is too rude—or ashamed — to speak. Briscoe asks her to go on to a night club, and in a mood of recklessness she consents.

In Paris meanwhile Van Vorst, realizing the reason for Lydia's sudden trip to America and hungering for her love, decides to use Marietta, a dancer and sweetheart of Briscoe's in connection with a plan. The two arrange to come to New York where Marietta is to vamp Landis away from Lydia, leaving a clear field for the elderly schemer.

Landis continues philandering with Lydia while Rosilyn to help forget the pangs of jealousy, allows Briscoe to pay her more flattering attention. The next day the latter drives her to the station where she is to meet her husband before they leave for their country home.

CHAPTER XLIII.
Husband and Wife

"It's perfectly true." She smiled ruefully, at the same time drawing away from him. "They do grow in jungly swamps, don't they? And death lurks under their beauty! Even the petals of the flower, go waxen. are—are sort of corpselike!"

The man beside her gave a hearty laugh.

"Such an imagination! Hadn't you an Irish mother?"

"Yes."

"Then that accounts for it! The bit about the 'creeping things' is good. You mean that I'm the serpent entering your Eden, don't you?"

She flushed to the roots of her hair at that. Her Eden? She had missed it, hadn't she? Landis and Lydia.

Her outward mood changed from superstition to forced gaiety and recklessness.

"Such a fuss about a flower! Of course I'll wear it." She took the orchid from his hand and pinned it coquettishly to her left shoulder, in the newest fashion. "Will I pass muster now?"

Landis was on the platform, waiting for his wife.

He raised his level brows when he saw Briscoe with her.

The latter nodded good-humoredly to the younger man.

"Grabbed a leaf out of your book, old chap! Mrs. Ridgeway took pity on my forlorn condition, and permitted me to lunch with her."

Landis shot a quick, keen glance from his wife's flushed face to the exotic bouquet she was wearing. His voice was rather stiff as he remarked:—

"I trust I haven't hurried you by arranging for such an early train?"

Dismissing her escort with a curt nod, he ushered Rosilyn into a corner chair of a Pullman, and then bought some magazines for her amusement.

"After Rupert Briscoe's brilliant conversation, you'll find me a dull dog, I fear!" He dumped the journals in her lap.

She did not answer. Without saying anything in the least definite this husband of hers was putting her in the wrong—and she resented that.

After the train had started, he said airily:

"Seems a long time since we saw each other, doesn't it? But our gallant friend is stimulating company."

Rosilyn turned her great eyes on the speaker.

"I got your message about dining at Claridge's. But Mr. Briscoe insisted that he had given his invitation for the Clarendon. We drove there. And then he called you up and said to come right on—Claridge was paged, he said—"

The handsome lips of Landis Ridgeway curved in an enigmatic smile.

"I'm sure he made Herculean efforts to find me."

"He did," said Rosilyn, distressed "He did, indeed."

Her husband shrugged his shoulders.

Despite the general mix-up, no doubt, you had a perfectly charming evening!"

Wild horses, however, couldn't force her to make the first reference to that chance encounter. It must come from him—or not at all.

Pale and silent, she sat there in the Pullman car, her great eyes, like deep and dark-fringed pools, gazing through the windows at the flying landscape.

Landis picked up a magazine, and to all intents became absorbed in it.

But he was soliloquising, and his thoughts—had Rosilyn but known them—ran somewhat in this vein:—

"Queer how quickly she's taken to Briscoe and his kind! Queer how she doesn't question me about last night—unless it be that she really wanted that tete-a-tete alone with Briscoe!"

The pair chatted banally.

They were both glad when the train drew up at the depot nearest to Royal Cliff, and the journey ended.

An auto from the local hotel was waiting, and soon they were bowling swiftly along by the edge of the sea towards their destination.

Then they turned inland. The salty tang of the breezes changed to lilac perfume and the faint, sweet scent of growing things. Swallows skimmed liw, and an early butterfly flew past the car.

She stole a glance at her husband's face. Such a handsome face it was, and full of breeding, despite its faint air of dissipation! He was looking all about him, at the meadows and the passing farms, with an air of reminiscent interest.

"Takes me back years and years," he volunteered.

"It's lovely countryside," said his companion, primly, and conscious of the banality of every comment that she made.

"Pretty quiet down her! What about giving a house-warming, once the place is all done up? How d'you like the idea, Rosilyn?"

"A party, you mean?" Her brows were faintly knitted.

"Yes—visitors staying the house. There are acres of rooms, you know. We could accommodate a whole battalion."

A nervous tremor caught her. His gay friends! And she the hostess!

"If your mother came down to help me? Otherwise it would be—a rather stiff undertaking, wouldn't it?"

"Oh, not at all. My friends amuse themselves. They're a cheery crowd. And there are several women we would ask who'd soon put you on the right lines. You're adaptable, Rosilyn."

She answered him with absolute sincerity.

"Sometimes I feel just like a fish out of water."

"Oh, nonsense! It's quite remarkable the way you're falling in with everything!"

(Did he mean—last night—and again today—with Briscoe? Was it because she hadn't deigned to question him as to his own line of action?)

Buffs Continue Winning Ways, Running Over Spuds, 7-1

BAYOU OUTFIT SLAYS TWO OF BUD'S HURLERS

Littlejohn Holds Spudders To Seven Safe Blows

HOUSTON, May 24.—By slugging the slingings of Bob Osborn, Arnold Stone and Jack Reid for 17 safeties here Sunday the Buffalos, with Carlisle Littlejohn pitching great baseball, defeated the Wichita Falls Spudders 7 to 1 in the opening game of a three-day seige. The victory marked the sixth straight for the former Austin college kid and the eleventh in a row that the Buffs have registered West End park.

The game, especially toward the latter stages, was marred by some squabbling by the Spudders. In the eighth, after the first two men had been easy outs, Littlejohn lost control for no reason at all. Passes to Distel, Fitzgerald and Bodie filled the bases, and the first three offerings to Buddy Tanner were balls. At his request another ball was substituted, and with the new, spinning agate Littlejohn retained his command as quickly as he had lost it. Three straight strikes were served to the Spudder chief. Tanner protested when Umpire Frank Coe called him out on strikes Buddy was so persistent in the decision that Coe ejected him from the park and young Dorman played third in the last frame. In the ninth Coe put Lindstrom off the bench for squabbling.

Spuds Score in Ninth.

When the ninth inning came round it appeared that Littlejohn had scored his second shut out victory of the season over the Spudders. Golvin went out to Fuller for the first out. White singled to center and went to second when Fuller fumbled Query's slow roller. Bubber Jonnard, hitting for Reid, rammed a one ply knock to right and White scored.

The Buffs counted in the first inning. With Kane out Powell singled to right. Hollohan hoisted out to Fitzgerald and Powell swiped second. Gainer bounced a hit over Osborn's dome and Ray raced across the plate.

The Buffs added another in the third. With one down Kane singled to center and went to second when Powell placed a base blow to left. Hollohan singled down the right field foul line, Kane counting.

However, before the run was made a peculiar mixup occurred on the base paths. Kane was trapped off second with Powell on first. Johnny started toward third and in the course of the chase Tanner's throw hit him and he scooted back to second. Powell had come down from first and he was also caught between bases. To draw the throw from that side show Kane again darted toward third and was trapped between the bases. It ended up with both Kane and Powell on second and Ray was tagged out.

Bob Out in Fourth.

The Buffs drove Osborn from the box in the fourth. Gainer first up walked and scored on Compton's double past Bodie. Peel went out, Distel to Golvin, Pete moving up a peg. With McCurdy up Osborn threw one into the dirt and past Query, Compton counting. When McCurdy singled to center Stone was summoned from the bull pen and Arnold proceeded to retire the side.

The Buffs had their biggest inning in the sixth. Gainer started with a single to left and after Compton had fanned Del came in on Peel's three ply punch to right. McCurdy popped out to Tanner, but Fuller doubled and Peel scored. Littlejohn shoved a single to right and Frankie scampered home.

Reid was in trouble in both of the innings he pitched, but he prevented any scoring. In the seventh Powell singled to center and went to second, when Fitzgerald let the ball get past him. Hollohan bunted down the first base line but Golvin's rifle throw to Tanner caught Ray. Gainer forced Holly at second and although Compton singled Peel ended the inning by lining out to Fitzgerald.

In the eighth Fuller beat out an infield hit and Kane singled to center, but no scoring resulted.

The Spudders threatened in the opening inning. Callaghan tripled to open the chapter but Distel fanned and after Fitzgerald had been passed Bodie hit into a double play. Tanner led off in the second with a double to right but Golvin and White flew out to Compton and after Query had been passed Osborn grounded to Littlejohn.

Same Old Texas League Battle Cry of "Stop Fort Worth!" Rings Out Over Circuit Again This Year

Jacob Atz's Cowtowners Show Fleet Flock of Hoofs to Rest of Loop, So Split Season's in Order Again

DALLAS, May 24.—(AP)—"Stop Fort Worth"—the popular but futile battle cry of seven Texas league clubs for the last five years—appears about due for its 1925 revival.

Saturday night found Jakie Atz's redoubtable Panthers in undisputed possession of first place, three and one-half games ahead of San Antonio, their chief competitor, whom they bowled over last week in a three-game series which established a probable league record for runs scored. The Panthers went through the week without a defeat until Saturday, when their mad rush was checked by Del Pratt's frisky Cubs.

With the Panther machine geared in high, and the San Antonio and Wichita Falls mechanisms sputtering and backfiring, it's beginning to look like another split season will be in order around July 1 unless the Houston Buffaloes can offer the leaders some stiff opposition. The Buffs and Panthers meet this week on the former's grounds in a series that will do much toward determining the complexion of the race a week hence. The Buffs are going strong now, and are the only team in the league Fort Worth has not beaten.

Cats Ruin Bears

The Weird Panther-Bear series was easily the outstanding event of the last week. The Panthers, who on paper are much lighter hitters than the Bears, scored 72 runs in the three games to their opponents' 29. The Bear pitchers were utterly unable to hold the Panthers and every game was a rout. Sears led the attack with 14 hits out of 18 times at bat. His drives included four home runs and in one game his bat was good for 11 runs. The three games required a total of eight hours, 23 minutes to play. The last game ended unofficially, 24 to 12, but it will not be so entered in the records as it was forfeited in the fifth inning to Fort Worth when Gonzales, Bear shortstop, refused to obey Umpire Weir's order to leave the field.

Although 101 runs were scored in this series, it did not break the season's record in this respect. In a recent four-game series between San Antonio and Waco 107 runs were piled up by the two teams. It was a week of heavy hitting all over the circuit. Friday was the only day on which one or more teams did not run up a score for two figures.

Although Fort Worth's record for the week was easily the most impressive, Houston also had another good week, meeting but two reverses, both at the hands of Shreveport. The Buffs' string of consecutive victories had reached eight when they tripped over the Sports. Saturday Goodwin's men registered their tenth straight on their home field.

Spuds About 50-50

Wichita Falls won four and lost three during the week. Dallas, after barely chinning the dot 500 mark for the first time, found the going too rough and fell back a few notches, although maintaining their position at the head of the second division. On three successive days the Steers were conquered by spitball pitching. Waco, Shreveport and Beaumont did not alter their standings during the week. The latter, after losing 17 out of 18 games, suddenly came to life and won three straight.

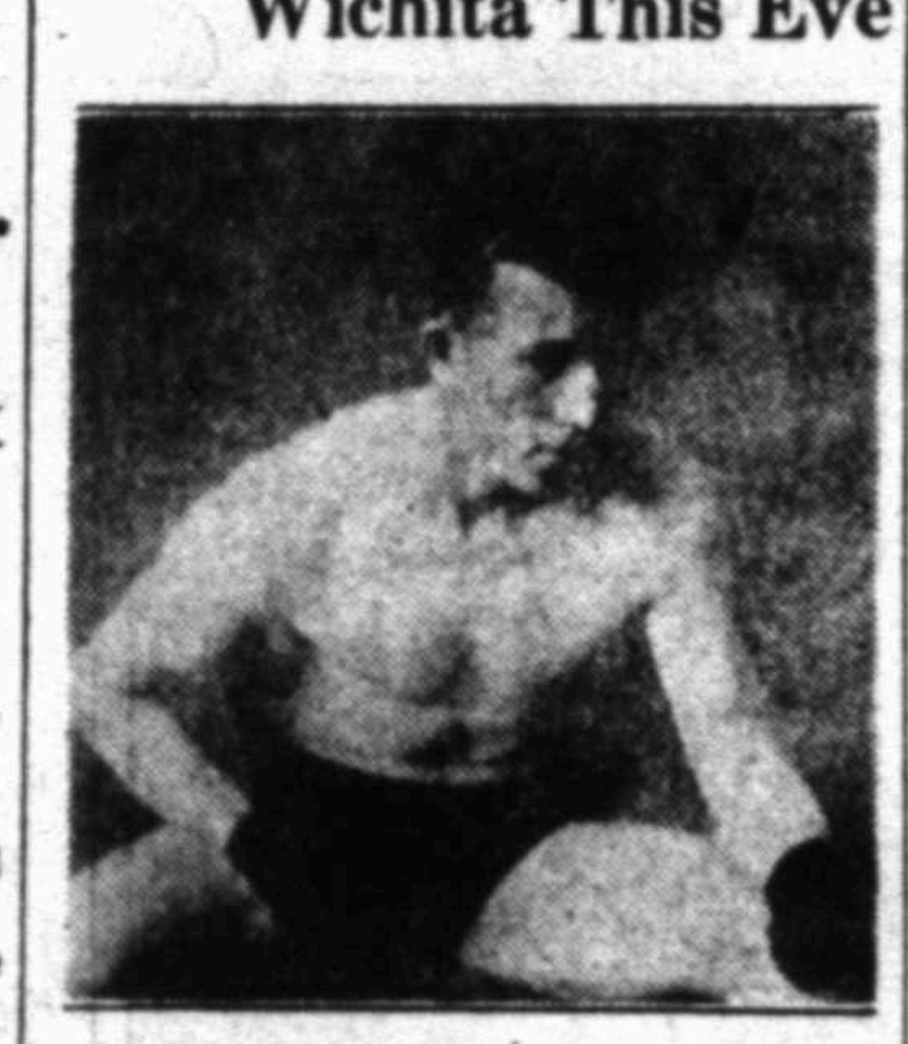

Several new players made their bow during the week. Shreveport acquired Schick, former Southern league outfielder; Beaumont added Dana Fillingim, former National league spitballer, to its staff; Waco signed Oscar Tuero, veteran Southern league hurler; and Dallas took on Ted Kearns, first baseman formerly with Beaumont and more recently with the Chicago Cubs.

Kearns succeeded Emil Huhn, who was unable to hit his stride on account of bad legs, and was given his release. As a member of the champion Mobile team three years ago Huhn was one of the best first basemen and most dangerous batters in the Southern loop. It was his big bat that wrecked Fort Worth's Dixie series hopes in 1922.

Babe Ruth to Join Yanks Last of Week

NEW YORK, May 24.—Babe Ruth's appearance in the Yankee line-up may be delayed until late this week, although the home run king had planned to leave St. Vincent's hospital tomorrow and play against Boston Tuesday. His physicians said today they had advised him not to leave the hospital before the middle of the week.

He Fights At Lake Wichita This Eve

Russ Beckwith, the tough Oklahoma middleweight pictured above, is billed to meet Batting Varner of Baird tonight over the ten-round route in the Bruce Cobb Post, American Legion, fistic program at Lake Wichita. Curtain raiser starts at 8:30, announces Promoter Sam Beatty.

Beckwith is fairly well known to Wichita county fight fans, and should draw quite a following. Varner comes with the record of not yet having met his master. He hasn't fought out of the southwest, however.

Quite an entertaining program has been lined up. There is to be a wrestling match, too, featuring Chief Wow Wow, the popular Indian grappler, but probably one of the most interesting engagements will be between Joe Ferguson of Indianapolis and Tommy Deal, Boston middleweight. Ferguson, the old timers will recall, it was who fought the very popular Carl Simmons to a draw in Simmons' first real fight staged here. Simmons, dead now, was the great favorite of Wichita fandom several years ago.

Cubs Win First But Reds Come Back, Take Final

Pitchers Take Turns In Effectiveness to Hold Clubs

CINCINNATI, May 24.—Chicago and Cincinnati divided a double header here today, the Cubs taking the first game, 5 to 1, and the Reds the second, 6 to 1. Alexander yielded five hits in the opener, but kept them scattered and held the Reds runless until the final inning. Sheehan was equally successful in the second game, when the visitors failed to score in eight of the nine innings. Score:

East Bests West In Major League Diamond Warfare

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP)—Intersectional hostilities ceased tonight on the baseball front as West and East called home their strolling baseball legions with eastern supremacy temporarily but clearly established.

Termination of the struggle today found pennant races in both major leagues definitely confined for the time being to the narrow limits of four Atlantic coast cities. Philadelphia warriors, much to the growing amazement of baseball men, had fortified themselves at the top in the American and had carried their banners into the thick of the National fight.

Washington maintained a challenging position on the wake of the Athletics while the Giants were perched far from danger on the National peak with Brooklyn, in second place, eagerly grasping for a better hold to strike at the champs.

Only one wing of the West forces in the National was able to penetrate the defenses of the east, as a single unit of the west successfully stood off the invading eastern forces of the junior circuit.

The lone exceptions in each loop were Pittsburgh and the White Sox teams. Each team won a majority of games played. Cleveland in the American, Cincinnati in the National, surrendered second position in the standings, dropping back to the fourth place during the inter-sectional battles while of the Eastern cohorts, Boston outfits offered the weakest front.

RAIN BEATS CARDS

BROOKLYN, May 24.—The Cardinals had a run scored and a man on first with none out in the sixth inning today when a heavy shower caused the game to be called, the score reverting to the end of the fifth inning, giving Brooklyn an 8 to 3 victory. Score:

Beaumont Fails In Ninth Inning Rally, Cats Win

Final Score Is 6-4 In Favor Of Champ Kittens

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 24. — Paul Wachtel hurled a nice game of ball here Sunday afternoon, as Fort Worth took the Exporters' measure for a 5 to 4 count. Konetchy's home run with one man on in the sixth gave the champion Cats the necessary edge in the battle. A ninth inning rally by the Beaumont squad ended after Gus Foreman's double had scored two men, when Wachtel bore down, forcing Ormand to ground to first. Score:

BEARS OUTSLUG SPORTS

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 24.—Pinch hitter Frank Watt drove in two runs to put the Bears in front in the eighth inning, resulting in a final score of 11 to 11 in the opening game of the Shreveport series Sunday afternoon before a crowd of about 3,500 enthusiastic fans. The Bears held the lead 11 to 10 in the seventh when the Sports scored four runs during a rapid fire change in pitchers, and the Bears came back in the eighth to score four, shutting out Shreveport in the final round.

The game was replete with brilliant fielding features, in which Moke Meyers was the bright particular star, pulling down two seemingly impossible drives with one hand up against center field fence, while Everett Booe also made a spectacular catch, as did Si Rosenthal after misjudging a fly, which he took with one hand. The high clear sky made judging of fly balls difficult, and conditions were aggravated by the intense heat, as result of which Benton collapsed at second base when Malone had to be put in to run the bases for him. DALLAS JUMPS GLEASON.

DALLAS, Texas, May 24. — Although Gleason's support was errorless, loose play and bad judgment behind him helped Dallas defeat Waco, 6 to 1. Zeigler, change of pace artist, stopped the Cubs with three hits and but for an error would have had a shut out.

The Texhoma Oil and Refining company and the Wichita Electric entries of the Twilight league fattened their winning column Sunday afternoon in the first double bill of the year. The Texhoma nine battled from behind the Bankers to swamp Hugh Cotner's nine by the total tabulation of 12 to 3. The Electric company took its first win of the year by downing Len Smith's Ludlam and Riggs club by the count of 11 to 6.

Gabe Harris breezed through four innings without allowing a hit. Ward broke the spell in the fifth with a crashing double to right. After the fifth Gabe was hit hard and was forced to give in to Lee Courtney in the seventh. Courtney retired the one man left in the seventh but was wild in the eighth and three more counters were scored.

Curren Brown led the hitters with a pair of singles and a two-bagger in four times at the bat.

Lee Courtney's catch to Kizziar's long foul in the fourth was the feature of the game. Lee went far over the line and back of a row of automobiles to snare the ball.

Len Smith was hit pretty hard and this with seven errors afield led to his 11 to 6 downfall. Norwood and Blue each hit a pair of non-stoppers. Ivey, Coolidge and Kollman each collected three bingles in four times at the platter. The Electric club batted around in the first and Whatley batted the second time. This first inning put the game away safely.

BIG TURN-OUT EXPECTED FOR STECHER-STAN GO.

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—(AP)—Advance ticket sales indicate approximately 17,000 will attend the heavyweight wrestling match between Joe Stecher, Nebraskan, and Stanislaus Zbyszko, title claimant, here May 30. The bout wil be held at St. Louis university stadium, seating 7,000 in the grandstand, 8,000 in temporary circus seats and 2,000 in the field, promoters said.

Both are engaged in workouts here. Stecher has met Zbyszko, only once when the Nebraskan won the second and third falls about a year ago.

FOARD COUNTY PAY LIKELY; TEXACO SPUDS

Number of Tests Prospective For Area Around Crowell

CROMWELL, May 24.—With several drilling blocks contracted for and one well actually spudded in, Foard county has begun to attract considerable attention for big wildcat play this year.

While several tests have been punched in the county, the territory has never been given the complete and thorough test which it seems certain of in the immediate future.

With four wells contract for and work not yet begun and one well in the actual process of drilling, the county seems at least certain of a thorough test for oil.

Texas Company Spuds

The Texas Company's McCoy No. 1 spudded in at noon today before a large crowd of onlookers. The well is located in the northwest corner of section 518, block A, H&TCRRCO survey, atop a structure which has been tested at another spot, but several miles away from any former test. The well centers a block of several thousand acres of leases held in the main by Goldrick and Baker, of Tulsa, Okla. and the Texas Company. The contract under which the well is being drilled calls for a three thousand foot test.

Muchison and Fain, of Wichita Falls, have a contract on several thousand acres of leases about four miles east of Cromwell, calling for a 3,000 foot hole with drilling to begin not later than July 1st. The location as announced will be on section 332, block A, H&TCRRCO survey, owner by Ora Bell Hughston.

The Humble Oil and Refining company and the Navarro Oil company are joint owners of a contract of several thousand acres, leased from Leslie McAdams and L. K. Johnson, calling for the immediate drilling of a well approximately a mile and a half from a former location drilled by the Emerald Oil company in 1919.

Worsham-Wilson.

Worsham and Wilson, ranch owners, have a contract with a company, whose name has not yet been disclosed calling for the drilling of a test on their ranch four and one-half miles west of Crowell, drilling to start in the next 60 days.

Material is being placed on the ground for the drilling of the Burress No. 1, on section 2, GC&SFRRCO, about three miles north of Thalia, and ten miles northeast of Crowell, being drilled by George D. Fagg of Wichita Falls. This well will be the center of a block of approximately 2,500 acres, drilled under a contract calling for a 2,500 foot hole.

Oklahoma capital is engaged in blocking 3,000 acres of leases for the drilling of a deep test 12 miles southeast of Crowell.

A block of sveral thousand acres handled under a lessors co-operative plan has been blocked south of Crowell three miles, with every assurance that a contract will be let in the next 30 days for its test in several places. This block is under the management of a board of directors, headed by N. J. Roberts of Crowell.

Leases are changing hands throughout the county, the chief lessees interested being the Gulf Production company, the Texas company, the Humble Oil and Refining company and the Navarro Oil company, with a number of other companies holding small amounts of acreage, lessees of smaller tracts numbering the Roxana Oil company, the Magnolia Oil company and others.

Urania Days May Be Numbered Now

SHREVEPORT, La., May 24.—Territory southwest of the Urania "discovery" well has been apparently, condemned by the completion of a salt water well in Gould-Monroe Drilling company's No. 1, Harper, as that's a mile north was affected by the Rowe-Wallace test last week. The Gould-Monroe well is in the northwest corner of the northeast of the southwest of 23-10-1e, a few yards west of the LaSalle-Winn parish line in Winn parish, and approximately two miles southwest of the discovery test.

Hopes of those interested in the district are now directed to Ziegen et al No. 2, Urania in 19-10-2e, approximately a mile due east of the "discovery" well in whic heasing was set yesterday and is due for a test next week. Should this well also tap the ocean it will probably mean the end of the Urania district so far as immediate vicinity of the "discovery" well is concerned, as salt water has been tested north, southwest and southeast.

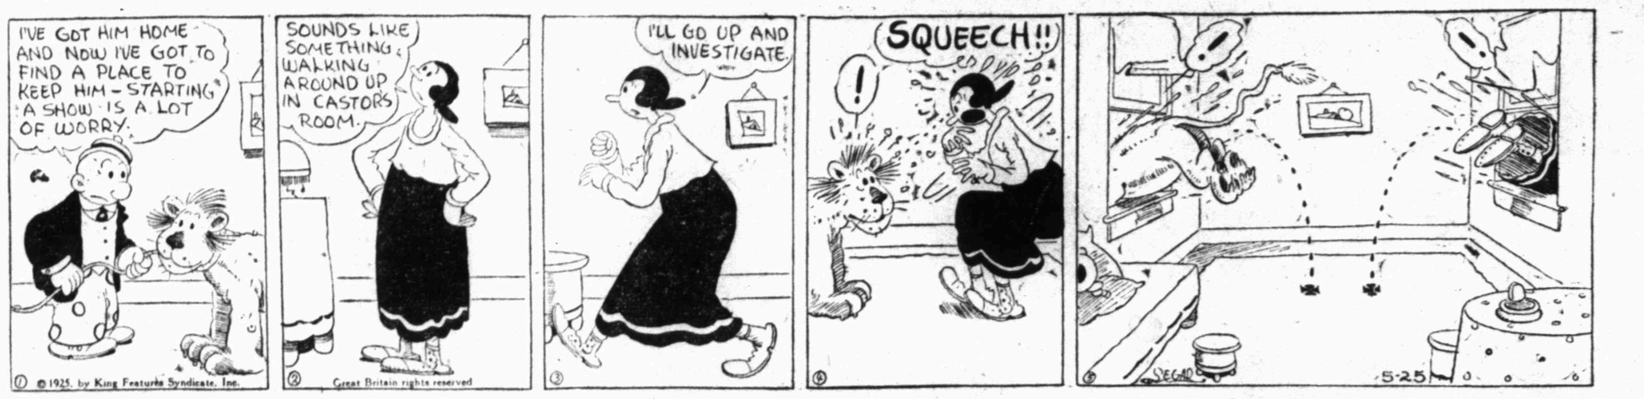

Presbyterians Will Consider Athletics In Church College

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 24.—(AP)—Two major questions confronted the committee on education of the Cumberland Presbyterian church here, without decision having been announced. They were: First, shall the committee recommend that the church give its sanction to intercollegiate match games in sports, especially football, at Bethal college, church school located at McKenzie, Tenn., with vigorous protest from certain Presbyteries describing football as "brutal and dangerous" and declaring that the "present program of athletics should not be practiced in any Christian college."

Second: What recommendations will be made relative to a change proposed in the faculty of Bethel college, at Mckenzie, Tenn., a Cumberland Presbyterian controlled school. It is understood that there are applicants for admission to the teaching force of the institution.

The committee on education of which Dr. J. J. Cobb of Chattanooga, Tenn., is chairman, is guarding closely the final report on whether football and match games of athletics shall be recommended at Bethel college and other church schools on the denomination.

SALE DANGER IN HANDLING COTTON-STERN

San Antonio Man Warns Country Merchants Against It

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 24.—Country merchants were warned against handling cotton in a message to the Retail Merchants Association of Texas from Morris Stern of San Antonio, who declared that in a majority of failures of country merchants handling cotton has been a contributing factor. The advice was given through the office of the association her as preparations were made for the annual retailers' convention in Austin opening tomorrow.

Mr. Stern spent 35 years in the wholesale grocery business in Texas.

The chief reason given by him for this attitude is "because handling cotton disorganizes the entire merchandising system of the country retailer." Merchants also get to speculating in futures, he said, adding that "for every interior merchant who has been successful in handling his cotton, I can show you 10 who sooner or later went to the wall because of it."

Risk Money.

"Why should the merchant risk the money he makes in selling goods with profit in pennies, by speculating in cotton which fluctuates in dollars?" he asked. "Why should he divert his attention from the most essential part of his business to the handling of cotton when it is not necessary?

"If the merchant had nothing else to do in the fall but watch his buying, selling and collecting, he would be far more effective as a rule than he possibly can when he takes charge of buying and selling cotton at the very time when his undivided personal attention should be given to cleaning up his books, and taking advantage of his fall trade."

A movement is now on foot in South Texas, said Mr. Stern, whereby merchants in several towns have agreed to try out the plan of discontinuing buying cotton.

"What happens when the country retailer thinks the handling of cotton is the most important part of his fall business" Mr. Stern asked. "He buys a bael not at what it is worth on the market but because a particular farmer owes him and he has to collect, he pays the farmer from one-quarter to one-half more than it is worth, fearing that if he does not do so, his competitor will. Of if the farmer does not owe him, he knows the farmer is going to buy some goods and he sacrifices a good part of his profit in the premium on the cotton. After he has done so he immediately worries about how he can get even and if he has not sold cotton ahead, taking his chance, he will hold the bale over another day hoping for an improvement i nthe market; if the improvementd oes not come, he is caught with a certain amount of cotton on hand, and continues to buy and accumulate larger and larger lots of cotton. This was bad enough in the old days when cotton fluctuated an eighth to a quarter. How much worse it is in the present day fluctuations which often reach $5 a bale or more in a single day.

Dodge Duty.

"This does not mean that the merchant should dodge the duty and responsibility of advising the farmers as to cotton values, even though as a rule the modern farmer is fairly well posted these days, both as to trading and marketing, for the merchant can still easily arrange with the farmers to advise them; and I firmly believe that the farmers will welcome the change, as it will give them more independence, and they will not feel obligated to sell their cotton to a certain merchant because they are trading there. It will put things where they belong—the cotton with the cotton buyer, and dealing in merchandise with the merchant. It will be a tremendous move toward modernizing business. It will relieve the country merchant of expense and worry, will simplify the financing of his business and will increase his efficacy and profits."

PARASOLS SIZE OF PLATE.

Paris Fashion Decrees Smallest Since Second Empire.

PARIS, May 24.—Parasols no bigger than a dinner plate, the smallest since the second empire, have made their appearance in Paris during a premature heat wave in which the city has been sweltering. One gem festooned parasol, with loops of red silk, mounted on an ivory stick and at its handle a figure in inverse ratio to the parasol itself was noticed on the boulevards the other day. The larger parasols are mostly made of cretonnes, with broken designs of vivid collors, marked with gold thread. The most popular design, however, is the familiar Japanese paper parasol with many bamboo ribs and almost flat.

First Dance To France Came From Spain, Known As the Saraban-G. Bishop

By GLORIA GOULD BISHOP

History tells us that the first dance brought to France came from Spain and was called the Saraban. It was introduced under the patronage of Catherine de Medici. This dance is similar in its movements and positions to the steps given in the preceding lesson.

Contemporary with the Saraben was the Minuet, which, as you know became the court dance of France Yesterday, when I gave my pupils these facts I am now giving you about folk dancing. I went over the steps of the Minuet already given to you in a past lesson and I would suggest that you do this also as a part of the present lesson.

Louis XIV was extremely interested in dancing as well as in all the other arts, and it was due to his encouragement that the French Ballet was originated. It must be definitely understood that the ballet technique of what was termed "the golden age of dancing" was not at all similar to the tenchnique of today. Every dancer who rose to prominence originated a new step. For example, Madame Salle introduced the famous "Entrechat." This consisted of leaping into the air, changing positions and bringing the feet together in a closed position. Madame Salle also invented the ballet skirt, because she found tha tthe long skirts were impractical in the execution of such steps as the ballet required. Other great dancers of that epoch were Madam Allred, Gavillier Dauberval, the older and younger Vestri, Camargo, Guimard. All these dancers had different methods of dancing and and teaching. Camargo, for example, had such perfection of technique that she did not attempt to appeal to the emotions of her audience, whereas, Guimard had marvellous dramatic ability as well as excellent technical skill.

All the dancing at this time was done en masque, until one man, a dancer whose name has long since been forgotten by most of the reliable authorities on the subject, revolutionized dancing by refusing to appear wearing the usual masque.

All the present dances of France are named for the part of the country in which they had their beginnings. I cite as an example the dancers of Normandy, which are entirely different from those of the Province of Basque. Miss Barker and I teach the following little dance called the "Pas de Basque."

Make a demi rend jembe to the right, step with the right foot, slide forward with the left, weight on the left foot, cut with the right foot, leaving the left free.

This step is done to waltz time and is probably the origin of the waltz of today.

It Doesn't Happen in Real Life.

When you were but a child and very dumb—you used to read books about cold silent women who infuriated men with their indifference—so much so that the thwarted hero would pursue the indifferent damsel straight through three hundred pages of fine type until he had captured her in the final installment.

Maybe, if you were very, very dumb you tried that method out, when you first began to appear at parties and dances.

And if you did, the chances are a hundred to one, you found the scheme was a tremendous wash-out.

Why should it happen to a girl in one of our best-sellers, and not to you?

Because, for one thing the men in those best-sellers were very remarkable people—exceptionally celebrated people who were so tired of being sought after by fair maidens that the spectacle of someone who was indifferent to them presented a refreshing change.

However, the boys we meet these days are not usually suffering from over attention from the ladies.

They are not of a sufficiently deep trend of mind to figure out that the girl who coldly turns her back upon them is the rarest prize to be gained.

No, the average boy nowdays just wants an attractive girl who dances well and talks well—and who has a pretty good opinion of him.

He's rather pleased with himself when she flatters him skillfully now and then and he's glad she likes him.

If on the other hand she was scornful and indifferent, he'd probably shrug his shoulders, take out the old address book, and call up the next number.

Our heroes are not so ardent or so determined in this modern world. They figure that if Sally doesn't care particularly about their company, probably Ruth will. And they don't spend their days yearning for an unattainable She who will never be theirs.

So if you want to make a hit with a special boy—don't try the freeze-out. He probably won't even know you're being indifferent.

He may just get the idea that your disposition is rather poor — and he won't be likely to give you a rush on that score.

If a strange boy comes to town—somebody who will be rather a conquest for the girl who attracts him—don't think that by showing your indifference to him you'll attract his attention and make him want to know you.

He'll probably pick out a nice attractive girl who knows how to dress well, and who is extremely amiable to him.

The nicer she is to him, the better he'll like her.

As for you, with your studied attitude of indifference and cold hostility; Hear him mentioning you to one of the boys: "Who's the crab over there? She certainly has the perpetual grouch all the time."

That's the way it happens in real life.

Hays Is Accused Of Defending Producers Who Make Bad Films

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 24.—(AP)—Will H. Hays, head of the Motion Picture producers and distributors of America, and an elder of the Presbyterian church, is asked to explain why he "condones and defends" producers who turn out "bad" pictures, in a report of the department of moral welfare of the church, made public today.

Mr. Hays, who is chairman of the church's committee of laymen seeking to raise $15,000,000 to the denomination's new pension plan into effect, appeared before the Presbyterian general assembly today, presenting the committee's report. He left at noon for New York.

The welfare department's report, which contains a history of the church's effort in the last ten years for regulation of the movies will be circulated among assembly commissioners Monday in pamphlet form by Dr. Charles Scanlon, assistant secretary of the Presbyterian board of Christian education, in charge of the moral welfare department. Dr. Scanlon also plans to bring the report formally before the assembly for action.

Fire Expert to Talk At Paducah CC Meet Yanks Last of Week

PADUCAH, May 24.—John E. Robertson, chief of the fire prevention department of the state fire insurance commission, will attend the district convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce, at Paducah, the 18th of June, and deliver an address to the convention on the subject nearest his heart, "The Prevention of Fires."

MARKETS

Financial

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP)—Easing credit conditions, sterling's return to virtual parity, rising stock and bond prices and a series of favorable dividend announcements laid the basis for distinct improvement in business sentiment last week. Additional support for the more cheerful feeling was supplied by tangible gains in various industries—larger buying orders, firmer prices and expanding operations.

Since a large portion of the world's trade is conducted on a sterling basis the significance of the rise in the British currency to within a narrow fraction of par—$4.86⅝—did not escape notice in the financial and business quarters. With the rate considerably above the figure at which gold exports would be practicable, adequate protection for the exchange seemed to be assured and everywhere the great importance of Great Britian's gold resumption policy was conceded.

Although there have been no striking changes in the general run of commercial activities, it has become increasingly apparent that a tremendous volume of business has been and is being transacted. On the surface, the pace of operations has been more deliberate, with the actual volume of trade covered up by the efficiency in the production and movement of goods. Manufacturin gactivities have been sufficiently short of capacity to ensure ready filling of orders and the railroads so far have encountered no congestion of traffic to delay deliveries. Both factors have accounted for the deliberation of retailers in placing forward business and at the same time have regulated the buying for current needs on a generally higher level than the average.

Growing importance has been attached to the progressive movement in freight traffic. Since the first week in January car loadings have consistently averaged more than 900,000 cars a week and for the last month have been nearer the million car level. Disappointment over the lack of a bulge in spring business has been off-set by the realization that the better regulation of business is likely to prevent the normal summer slump in traffic. Maintenance of the freight movement at its present high rate, it is recognized, will have a vital influence on railway earnings, which in previous years have been impaired by summer degressions.

Leaders in the steel industry, attending the annual meeting of the American Iron & Steel Institute last week, did not hesitate to express the belief that their business had already passed the low point of demand and that trade from now on should gradually pick up speed.

One of the constructive factors in the oil industry which has hitherto escaped notice, has been the increased demand for American Petroleum products from European countries. Exports of gasoline in March (totaling more than 123,000,000 gallons were about 40,000,000 gallons greater than in the same month last year.

Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, May 24.—The past week in cotton has developed more active trading than for some time. After reaching low points on the recent decline last week, the drop appeared to discount expectations of a high condition available by the government in its forthcoming report. Elimination of practically all of the stale long interest and creation of considerable short interest strengthened the position of the market. This, and the discovery that the spot situation had become very strong as a result of the rapid shrinkage in supplies remaining the South caused old crop months to stiffen materially, with realization of the fact that the certificated stock here and in New York was being drawn upon by the trade and shipped out because of scarcity of desirable grades in southern markets.

Near month shorts sought to cover and the price which on Saturday of the preceding week closed at 22.33 advanced to 23.60 Thursday, a gain of 127 points. The strength of the near months carried new crop conditions upward, although October did not advance as did July, owing to active buying of the near month against sales of October. The premium of July over October which on the Saturday preceding had been 70 points, widened by Thursday to 124 points.

While some disposition developed to ease off from high points during Friday's market, the market experienced a good bulge again on Saturday owing to the strength of spots, the bullish character of the weekly statistics, an improvement in the goods trade and increasing seriousness of the drouth in Central and South Texas. The week closed with prices near the high points reached Thursday.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, May 24.—(AP)—The pronounced ease of credit conditions attested to by the rise in the New York federal reserve ratio to the highest point of the year, laid the basis for last week's unbroken advance in bond prices to the best levels in several years.

With new evidence accumulating as to the country's tremendous resources of money and credit, investment funds continued to seek employment in the market, lifting United States and foreign government obligations and various high grade rail bonds to new peak. Speculative activity at the same time found a satisfactory outlet in the "merger" and "receivership" rails, convertible issues of all classes, particularly public utilities and oil company liens.

The strength of the stock market and the return of sterling exchange to virtual parity, only a small fraction below $4.86⅝, unquestionably contributed to the cheerful tone of bond trading. Coincident with the rise in the British currency, United Kingdom bonds established new high records. Several liberty bonds also sold at the best prices of the year, and while there was little incentive for buyers to take large blocks of investment issues at the current high levels, there was no hesitation id so placing surplus funds.

A counter attraction to stock exchange trading was provided by an interesting assortment of new bond offerings, which exceeded $32,000,000 as compared with $67,000,000 in the preceding week. The limited supply of tax exempt issues brought a large number of municipal loans to the market, all of which were readily subscribed. Investment funds also were attracted to a $26,500,000 issue of federal land bank bonds.

In connection with the award of a $10,500,000 New York Central equipment bond issue to J. P. Morgan and company, the old agitation for competitive bidding on railroad security offerings was renewed. Defending their position, investment bankers replied that they stood ready to aid their railroad clients at all times, and in return for giving financial assistance during periods of depression expect to receive their business in times of prosperity.

Reports of prospective new financing aroused unusual interest. Cable dispatches announced that Argentina had accepted the offer of a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan and company, to float a $45,000,000 refunding loan.

BORDER COMMITTEE REPORT.

Agreements At El Paso Conference Deed Monday.

EL PASO, May 24.—Reports of its four committees were taken up by the United States-Mexico border committees will be completed tomorrow.

The first committee considered all phases of smuggling; the second, migration from both the United States and Mexico and deportation; the third hunting and fishing, and health problems, and the fourth, extradition and international procedure.

General Lincoln C. Andrews conferred with customs, immigration, prohibition, narcotics and consular officials from border ports extending from San Diego to Brownsville this morning.

SHERIFF'S SALE.
THE STATE OF TEXAS.
COUNTY OF WICHITA.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a certain order of sale issued out of the honorable 89th district court of Wichita county, on the 9th day of May, 1925 by A. F. Kerr, clerk of said district court for the sum of Ten Hundred Twenty-five and 25-100 ($1025.25) Dollars, and costs of suit, under a certain judgment, in favor of the Continental Supply company in a certain cause in said court, No. 16720-C and styled The Continental Supply company vs. Louellen Oil company et al., and placed in my hands for service, I, Fred K. Smith, a sheriff of Wichita county, Texas, did, on the 9th day of May, 1925, levy on certain real estate, situated in Wichita county, Texas, described as follows, to-wit:

The oil and gas leasehold estate covering lots 6, 15 and 16, Burton's subdivision of blocks 45 and 82, J. A. Kemp Wichita valley farm lands Wichita county, Texas, the oil and gas wells situated thereon, the pipe lines, fixtures and improvements situated thereon and the machinery, tools and supplies used in connection therewith: and levied upon as the property of the Louellen Oil company, a joint stock association, A. V. Rutledge, T. B. Nelson, C. T. McGregor, R. O. Simonson, I. Lindsey, W. J. Noonan, J. L. Short, B. W. Baldwin, H. H. Mills, C. W. Wright and L. G. Atkin, defendants, and that on the first Tuesday in June, 1925, the same being the 2nd day of said month, at the court house door of Wichita county, in the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., by virtue of said levy and said order of sale, I will sell said above described real estate at public vendue, for cash, to the highest bidder, as the property of said above named defendants.

And in compliance with law, I give this notice by publication, in the English language, once a week for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding said day of sale, in the Wichita Falls Record News, a newspaper published in Wichita county.

Witness my hand, this 9th day of May, 1925.

FRED K. SMITH,
Sheriff Wichita County, Texas.
By W. F. JOURDAN, Deputy.

The Day's News in Pictures

Pretty College Girls Study On Own for Degree of P. M.

EUREKA, Ill., May 24.—Three of the prettiest girls in Eureka college, Frances Robeson, Eureka; Blanche Rude, Rantoul, Ill., and Maurine Fisher, Girard, Ill., decided that there should be more to college life than mere mental development, so they decided upon the practical study of household work, with the planning of meals, buying, cooking and serving, cleaning and laundry work, in a laboratory apartment.

Periodically a series of formal and informal repasts are served with five guests and a critic present, the girls taking turns as cook, assistant cook and maid. Each girl serves as manager for two weeks.

But with all this experience in homemaking gained, the girls realized they were still lacking the proper accomplishments for the degree of P. M.—practical mother. This problem was solved when they "adopted" a baby.

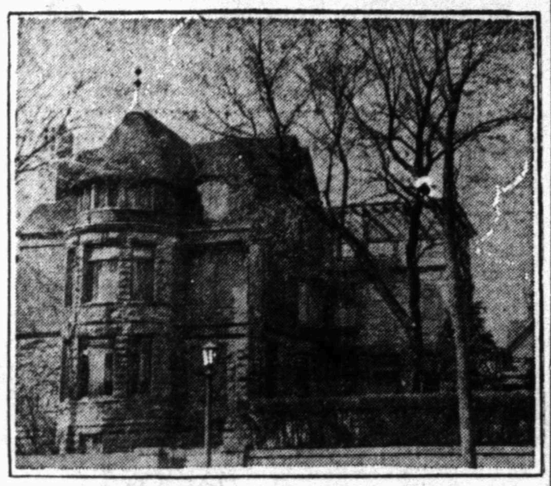

An obliging mother of the neighborhood allows the trio to take charge of her youngster certain hours of each days.

Hits the Reserve

Exponents of the federal reserve system may have to fight for its existence in the next congress. Powerful opposition is rising against it. L. T. McFadden, chairman of the house committee on banking, has let it be known he favors demobilization of the banks by repealing certain war-time measures which give them extraordinary powers to control credits.

When Coolidge Goes to Minnesota

The twin cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis are making elaborate preparations to have the president of the United States as their guest, in June. The occasion is the Norse-American Centiennial in Minneapolis. The family home of Frank B. Kellogg, secretary of state, in St. Paul, will house the Coolidges during their stay.

Communists Stir Up Strife in Germany

Communists, stirred up by the inauguration of Paul Von Hindenburg as president of Germany, are causingmuch trouble in Berlin and other large cities. Armored cars are seen patrolling one of the principal streets ofthe capital to prevent blood from flowing at a "red" demonstration.

Police are seeking the authors of threatening letters sent to Fred Adsett, Minerva, Ohio, jeweler before a bomb exploded in his store, wrecking it and scattering gems and silverplate worth thousands of dollars in every direction. Adsett was absent at the time. Nearby stores were damaged. The photo shows the effect of the blast on the Adsett shop.

In Hall of Fame

These are the latest busts for America's Hall of Fame, at New York university. General William Tecumseh Sherman won fame in the Civil war. Charlotte Cushman was an actress, the first to be elected to the Hall of Fame. John Marshall is one of the two or three most notable chief justices in American history. Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Asa Gray was a botanist, one of the notable pioneers in this science in the United States.

Red Haired Best

Dr. W. H. Sheldon, University of Chicago psychologist, has undertaken to prove his theory that long-legged men, particularly red-haired ones, have more mental power than others, by measuring 400 men at the university for an "anthropological index." They will be graded for mental ability, and the physical and mental indexes compared.

Only a Necklace

Pearls, hundreds of them real, thousands of them artificial, make up the "necklace dress" with which Nella Regina, comic opera prima donna, is creating a sensation in Milan. She is considered Italy's most prominent revue star.

Milady Closes Season in Blaze of Glory

By MME. LISBETH.

The social season may be waning but the clothes milady may choose for its final scenes continue to be gems of the sartorial art. Smart coats, usually fur trimmed, cover the most charming of frocks which they very often match in some particular. Hats grow broader of brim as the season advances and also match the frock or coat or both. Daytime and evening dresses alike are evolved from the most exquisite of gabrics and in the most alluring colors.

The cost pictured on the left of this picture is a sand colored bengaline. It emphasizes the straight, boyish contour. The cuffs and collar are of luxurious Russian sable and are very deep. The hat worn with it is a milan matching the coat in color.

In the center is a fairy-like evening frock of sea green chiffon and silver threads. The plain little bodice achieves an almost normal waistline with a row of shirring set off with a double row of beads. The very full skirt is caught up on the side with a fringe of ostrich fronts, and the matching scarf is edged with the feathers. The slippers worn with this frock are richly embroidered in silver. A cool, bewitching color scheme, by the way, to be worn on a summer evening.

Flounces of gold lace on the full gathered skirt of the third model (right) and a close fitting basque give a Spanish note to this quaint dance frock. It is made of gold colored chiffon tafeta. Crimson roses and green ribbons from the corsage.

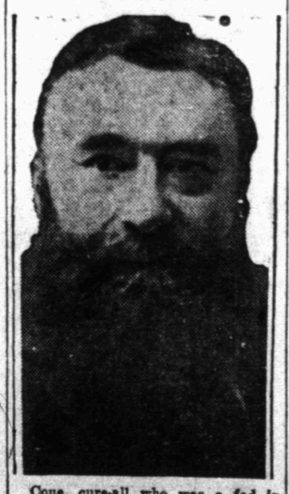

In the recent fashion shows it is pleasing to note the tendency toward a higher plane, a better standard in all things that have to do with woman's dress. There is a harmony between art and commerce, beauty and style—an underlying of the practical and ideal. The artist who designs and the men who weave, dye and market have drawn closer together. This makes for an appreciation of quality and a feeling for color.

European Meet to Tell Suzanne If She Is Fit

The form she displays in the international clay court tennis championship tourney at St. Loud, France, beginning May 27 will decide for Miss Susanne Lenglen, (upper photo) French tennis star, whether she will defend her world title later in the year. Her chief rival in the St. Cloud tourney will be Mlle Vlasto (below).

Coue's Rival

Coue, cure-all who was a fad in the U. S. until mah jongg appeared, is being superseded in France, too. So popular is his rival, Jean Beziat (above), a cattle raiser, that a hotel is being erected on his farm to house pilgrims seeking a cure. His method is to breathe on the afflicted spot.

Wisconsin U Picks Editor President

Glenn Frank (above), editor of the Century Magazine, is expected to accept the presidency of University of Wisconsin, offered to him by the board of regents. Roscoe Pound, dean of Harvard law school, first chosen for the position, declined.

Win Medals

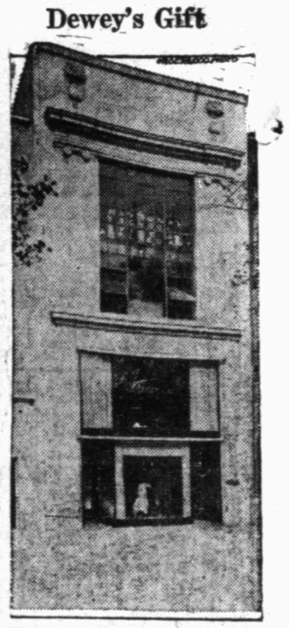

All of the winners for 1925 of the National Institute of Social Science's annual medals, are New Yorkers. Mrs. Edward H. Harriman (at top) receives a medal as one of the foremost women chairty workers; Elihu Root (center) is honored for his services to the law; and W. H. Park, president of the American Health association, to medicine.

Prettiest Legs

Who owns the most beautiful pair of legs in Paris? Every so often there is a contest, intended to settle the argument, and almost without exception, from each fray there emerges a "new" set of limbs and, naturally, a new owner. Judges have just decided the honor belongs to Mlle. Marcelle Lucas.

Dewey's Gift

The 27th anniversary of the opening scenes of the Spanish-American war finds the Dewey house in Washington, presented to the admiral by a grateful nation converted into a fashionable shop. The mansion has disappeared behind an ornate storefront, shown here.

Coolidge's Dad Active on Farm Despite Stories of His Illness

John C. Coolidge, father of the president, continues to be active on his farm at Plymouth Notch, Vt., despite stories of his illness, which appear to have exaggerated his condition. This new photo of him shows him greeting little Everette Blanchard, 9, a neighbor.
