WHAT ONCE WAS A HOUSE IS NOW ONLY A PILE OF RUBBLE
...bulldozer begins clearing away destroyed home in Faith Village (Photo by Jim Cochran)

Steel blades erasing past

By Jim Miller
Staff Writer

As if performing radical surgery, the gaping blades of monster front-end loaders began leveling lots in Faith Village this morning, making way for new life to spring from under their tracks.

Johnny Smith of 4510 Hughes watched as the big yellow Cat lumbered heavily around the slab foundation of his home. The machine growled its determination as beneath its relentless steel tracks the shell of a refrigerator crackled like the shattering of an eggshell.

"All the plumbing is good," Smith said. "I'm going to save that. I can't see $2,000 or $3,000 to replace it."

Little else appeared salvagable although the walls of one room, a couple of closets and what appeared to have been the bathroom remained.

"I'll rebuild around it," Smith said. "Of course, all the top has to come off. The sheetrock will have to come out, too."

However, most property owners where the big Cats chewed at the debris were not present to witness the final removal of lost homes. At 4503 Hughes, the former home of Ola Coats, a few pipes and plumbing fixtures protruding from the foundation were all that remained.

All along Hughes other shattered and twisted remnants of houses awaited their reckoning before the yawning blades.

J.R. Ramon & Sons Co. of San Antonio was awarded a $588,984 contract Sunday by the Army Corps of Engineers for debris removal work in Faith Village.

Gene Dretke, emergency operations officer for the Corps, said there are some 1,370 individual lots in the cleanup area, and the contractor has 28 days to complete the chore.

The Corps has divided the damaged areas into five blocks for major debris removal. Each block will be advertised as an individual contract.

Residents in each area who have signed right-of-entry permits are encouraged to schedule removal or designate any salvagable materials before work begins on their lots.

Block 2 contract for University Park is to be awarded Wednesday with cleanup to begin Thursday. Blocks 3 and 5 contracts will be advertised within 10 days.

Block 4 contract for the area bounded by Weeks Park Municipal Golf Course and Southwest Parkway is set to be awarded Thursday.

The Corps also awarded Sunday a $24,670 contract to Anthony Contracting Inc. of Oxen Hill, Md., to clean seven drainage ditches running from Memorial Stadium to Weeks Park.

Flooding causes two deaths

By The Associated Press

Two persons, including a 4-year-old boy, drowned in Southeast Texas Sunday where swirling flood waters swamped wide areas of five counties hard hit by recent torrential rains.

Little Joel O. Cantu died Sunday afternoon at a Houston hospital after he was pulled from a rain-filled, unfinished swimming pool by his father, Fort Bend County authorities said.

Officers said the boy was peering over the edge of the pool when he slipped and fell.

A Porter man, Donald Edwin Brigham, 40, drowned Sunday when he fell out of a boat into the swirling waters of the flooding San Jacinto River. The body was recovered Sunday afternoon.

The deaths brought to seven the number of weather-related fatalities since torrential rains began four days ago in South and Southeast Texas.

Three persons drowned in San Antonio Saturday when the car they were riding in was swept into a flood-swollen river. Two youths were killed in Houston. One was struck by a car Thursday as he was directing traffic in a flooded street, and the other victim was swept over a spillway into a flooded bayou Friday.

Many Southeast Texas residents filled sand bags and manned pumps Sunday in a last-ditch effort to protect their homes from the rising water in Liberty, Jefferson and Chambers counties.

Although the crests had passed, high water still plagued residents in Fort Bend County, Montgomery County and parts of Harris County.

The Neches River, already bursting at the seams from 12 inches of rain since Wednesday, rose as much as eight feet past flood stage Sunday in areas between Beaumont and Kountze in Hardin County.

Clements loses in bid for power

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Unhappy Texas senators slapped down today Gov. Bill Clement's efforts to take over more power in spending taxpayers' money.

By a vote of 18-13, the Senate was three votes shy of approving debate on enlarging the governor's budget execution powers, one of Clements' main campaign proposals.

The vote came just after the Senate was read Clements' veto of the pawn shop regulation bill which had been approved by a large vote in the Senate.

"This is the most insidious proposal we will have before us in the form of constitutional amendments," protested Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena. He said a governor unfavorable to any particular state agency or program could destroy the legislature's efforts to finance it.

"This merely allows the governor to reduce line items in the general appropriation bill," said Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas. "He already has the power to veto such separate items."

Harris said his proposed constitutional amendment also would allow the governor to veto riders or special provisions in the state spending bill, which already are questioned by many legal sources.

"This just means the governor can take any figure in the appropriation bill and do what he wants to with it," protested Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado.

If approved by two-thirds of the legislature, the proposed constitution change by Harris would be put to voters on Nov. 4, 1980.

Jail escapee knows ins, outs

GRAHAM, Texas (Special) — James Walling apparently knows the ins and outs of the Young County Detention Center at Graham — he has escaped from the suspect facility two times in three months.

The latest disappearance occurred Sunday afternoon, jail officials theorized.

Walling, 25, was being held on a California theft charge, a Young County narcotics possession charge and, of course, escape charges.

He first escaped on Jan. 21, and was recaptured after being shot in the leg by an Archer City, Texas, police officer, police reports said.

A jailer said the shucked his jail clothing and slithered out an air conditioning vent to freedom shortly after noon Sunday. He apparently took some clothes from the jail, took off his white prison overalls and made his way out through e the air duct.

One jail employee, who asked not to be identified, blamed the rash of escapes on the federal government. He said Law Enforcement Assistance Administration specifications caused the jail to be built "more for convenience than confinement."

Police were still searching for the elusive suspect today.

Nuclear crisis reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh told Congress today that deciding against evacuating the vicinity around the Three Mile Island plant was "the toughest decison of all" during the nuclear crisis.

But Thornburgh told a Senate panel he has no regrets about the decision, even though later information showed the accident was far more serious than first believed.

"If I knew then what I know now, I still would not have ordered an evacuation," Thornburgh testified.

He was asked by members of the Senate nuclear regulation subcommittee to explain his steps in view of recently released transcripts of Nuclear Regulatory Commission meetings that showed several top NRC staff officials wanted an evacuation.

Thornburgh said these NRC officials changed their minds after getting more reliable information.

He said most of the calls for evacuation came not from the plant site but from Washington and Bethesda, Md., the NRC's headquarters. Those at the site had access to better information on the situation within the damaged reactor building, he testified.

Thornburgh defended his decision to just urge pregnant women and preschool children within five miles of the plant to leave the area instead of ordering a larger-scale evacuation.

"I had to weigh the potential risks of Three Mile Island against the proven hazards of moving people under panic conditions," Thornburgh testified.

He said he would not have hesitated to evacuate the "entire area" had it ever appeared necessary. But, he added, "I could not in good conscience have ordered such a step with the facts at my disposal."

Thornburgh was the leadoff witness as the subcommittee stepped up its investigation into the incident at Three Mile Island, the worst nuclear power plant accident in the nation's history.

Subcommittee Chairman Gary Hart, D-Colo., told Thornburgh he had made a "difficult and potentially very risky decision not to order an evacuation."

However, Hart noted that since a catastrophe had been averted, the governor's decision had turned out to be the correct one.

Both Hart and Thornburgh discussed confused and conflicting information on the accident. Thornburgh sharply criticized the handling of the crisis by the Metropolitan Edison Co., the plant operator.

"The company issued statements in the early days that proved to be something less than accurate and its credibility as a reliable source of information eroded rather quickly," the governor said.

And he said a "garble gap between Harrisburg and Washington" made true information on the extent of the damage at the crippled reactor difficult to come by.

"I had to make decisions no other governor has faced before, decisions which I pray will ever face again," Thornburgh testified. He said that in all his moves he kept in close touch with the White House and with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's troubleshooter on the scene, Harold Denton.

However, Thornburgh told senators that the first time he considered ordering a full-scale evacuation occurred soon after trouble at the power plant was first reported early on March 28 "and it never left my mind for 10 entire days."

"The toughest decision of all was the one that I had to make 24 hours a day throughout this crisis. That was, of course, the decision not to order an evacuation that would have been unprecedented in its nature — as well as in its potential for harm," he said.

In other testimony, the president of General Public Utilities Corp., the parent company of Metropolitan Edison, told the panel the accident resulted fom a series of "equipment malfunctions and human factors."

Image of aged needs changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter, the honorary chairwoman of the President's Commission on Mental Health, appealed today for society to give more attention to the problems of elderly Americans.

"We must change society's negative image of the elderly," the first lady said in addressing the opening session of the National Conference on Mental Health and the Elderly.

She received applause from the more than 200 conferees when she said that, "far from being a burden or liability, the elderly are a valuable human resource.

"... Older persons are survivors who can teach us a great deal about life in general. I firmly believe that our society would be greatly enriched by a deeper appreciation of the store of knowledge that older people possess," Mrs. Carter said.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Aging Committee and the chief mover behind the conference, cited statistics that 25 percent of all suicides in the nation are by persons over age 65.

Despite that, he said, Medicare only allows $250 a year for each patient to seek mental outpatient services.

However, the House Budget Committee and President Carter want to raise that limit to $750 a year.

In addition, Mrs. Carter said, her husband is requesting that the co-insurance rate that older people must pay for mental health care be changed from 50 percent to 20 percent — the same as the rate for physical illness.

Mental health problems of old age have many complex roots, Mrs. Carter emphasized.

"Financial worries, unhappiness over the loss of social status, grief over the death of loved ones — all can lead to depression, even suicide," she said.

"The stigma of mental illness, coupled with the stigma of old age, can have devastating results ... we must find new ways to help families take care of the elderly" she said.

And, Mrs. Carter said, "we must recognize old age for what it is — a normal stage of life."

Pepper said the two-day conference is being held to bring together congressional leaders, administration officials, and others interested in the mental health of the elderly.

Flooding causes deaths warned that additional major flooding is likely in areas not flooded since 1917.

Water levels held steady around Conroe in Montgomery County, but southeast of the Sam Houston National Forest, the San Jacinto River continued to rise between Cleveland and Liberty. The weather service predicted it would crest three to four feet above flood stage Monday and stand through Tuesday.

Burt Bratcher of Montgomery County Civil Defense placed flood damage estimates at $100 million for Harris County and $50 to $70 million for Conroe, 50 miles north of Houston.

Almost all Houston area residents who scurried from their homes earlier in the week have returned, except in the areas just north and just south of Lake Houston in northeast Harris County, said Harris County deputy G.E. Moore.

Residents of areas near Pine Island Bayou, just northwest of Beaumont, still battled rising water from several large creeks. Water levels rose at the rate of one inch per hour Sunday. Flooding during the night Saturday left an additional 25 families homeless.

If the gown fits, wear it

By JIM MILLER
Staff Writer

Somewhere in the Wichita Falls area there is a bride blushing for good reason. Her gown is missing.

Earlier this week, James Wiechman of 4671 Balboa in Wichita Falls was checking on his cattle near Byers when he saw what he thought was a plastic table cloth. However, closer inspection revealed what appeared to be a bridal gown carefully and lovingly wrapped in two plastic bags.

"The dress is in perfect condition," Wiechman's wife Janice said this morning. "It's a little dirty, but I'm sure it can be cleaned."

The would-be bride may contact the Wiechmans at their home, Mrs. Wiechman said, and if the dress fits ... well, maybe fairy tales do come true, even if it isn't exactly a glass slipper.

Wary truckers stay off job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of wary steel-hauling truckers stayed off the job today, waiting for a first-hand look at a new agreement negotiated by Teamsters union bargainers.

Even that tentative agreement did not cover the entire industry.

One result of the confusing situation: more than 5,000 steel plant workers laid off in the face of growing stockpiles jamming storage yards.

A spokeswoman for Trucking Management Inc., bargainer for about 500 trucking companies hauling a wide variety of freight, said TMI "settled by itself" Sunday with the national Teamsters union on a new supplemental contract for the steel haulers.

Spokeswoman Anne Banville added that another group, the Motor Carrier Labor Advisory Council representing 165 firms, "is going to go along with the same settlement." And then the Teamsters announced late Sunday that a third group, the Irregular Route Carriers Conference, also had come to terms.

However, the National Steel Carriers Association, a group of companies specializing in steel hauling, rejected the agreement.

Moreover, leaders of the Teamsters for a Democratic Union, organizers of the strike by dissident steel haulers, said there was some question whether the dissidents would go along with those agreements their Teamster leaders did reach.

"The union's credibility is pretty low right now," said a spokesman who asked not to be named. "We'll want to see the agreement in writing, look for loopholes."

And the lack of a settlement with National Steel Carriers Association, which "carries a lot of steel," might keep many drivers from going back to work because, he said, "We've got a strong tradition of 'if one's down, they're all down.'"

No breakdown was available on the percentage of steel carried by the association that has not settled.

Meanwhile, an unofficial straw vote of of striking members showed that "75 percent to 80 percent" oppose the contract, Gene Fleszar, a member of the steering committee of the Teamsters for a Democratic Union said in Detroit.

Votes taken by voice and mock ballot Sunday ranged from 10-1 against the contract at Local 776 in Harrisburg, Pa. in a ballot vote to a 5,000-voice standup rejection at Chicago's Local 705, Fleszar said.

Study claims TV violence high

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Children who spend more than four hours a day watching television think the world is more violent than do children who watch less TV, a new study indicates.

The study, released by the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications, also reported that violence in weekend network shows aimed at children rose to record levels on ABC and CBS and to a near-record level at NBC last fall.

"There is a consistent relationship between fear and the amount of television watched," said Nancy Signorielli, research coordinator for the project.

"They (heavy watchers) do perceive the world as much more violent and they are much more fearful," she said.

CBS officials were unavailable for comment. NBC and ABC said they would not comment until they had seen the study.

The study, part of a project that began in 1967, is funded by grants from the American Medical Association and the National Institute of Mental Health.

The researchers also found a relationship between aggressive behavior and the amount of television watched, and said children who watch a lot of TV are likely to believe that police often use force.

The researchers, who defined violence as "hurting or killing a person or the credible threat of hurting and killing," said almost 90 percent of the characters in television shows aimed at children are involved in such acts.

The average rate of violent incidents on children's programs zoomed from 15.6 per hour in the fall of 1977 to a near-record 25.0 per hour last fall, the study said.

Panel passes court-at-law bill

AUSTIN — A bill calling for a county court-at-law in Wichita County was recommended for passage Monday by the House Judicial Affairs Committee.

The measure was presented before the committee by Rep. Dave Allred, D-Wichita County, who also received the panel's permission to seek placement of the bill on the local calendar.

Placement on this calendar means quicker consideration, Allred said. He expects the bill to pass with no problem.

The committee affixed an amendment limiting the salary of the county court-at-law judge to no more than 90 percent of the salary of the state district court judge.

Rep. Ron Bird, D-San Antonio, said the committee was adding a similar amendment to all county court-at-law bills.

Because of the amendment, the bill must return to the Senate, but Allred sid there is still plenty of time for the measure to receive approval before the session closes next month.

The bill already had passed the Senate, where it was sponsored by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. In the House, the proposal is sponsored by Reps. Allred and Charles Finnell, D-Holliday.

Slain man's companion probated alien smuggler

By PHIL RINGMAN
Staff Writer

The companion of a Mexican alien shot and killed last week by a Wichita Falls police officer was convicted two years ago of smuggling illegal aliens, a Laredo, Texas, probation officer said today.

Louis G. Brewster, supervising federal probation officer for the Laredo district, said Filiberto Ramirez Delgado, 31, currently is serving a five-year probated sentence for aiding and abetting the illegal entry of three Mexican aliens in Laredo in 1977.

Delgado, foreman of a landscaping crew, and Rosendo Sosa Ortiz, 19, were stopped by police just before midnight April 15 in the downtown area for a curfew violation.

Ortiz was shot fatally by rookie officer Jay Wright after he bolted from the car and refused to halt. Police said he appeared to be reaching for a weapon.

After hearing testimony from Delgado, Wright, his partner John Bailey, and police investigating officer James Shelton, the Wichita County grand jury last week ruled that Wright had acted in the line of duty when he shot Ortiz.

Local and state Mexican-American groups have protested the shooting and criticized the grand jury.

Brewster said Delgado was sentenced July 5, 1977, to 90 days in jail, but was given a three-year probated sentence and a $250 fine.

Three weeks later, Brewster said, Delgado's 90-day sentence was revoked and he served the original sentence in Laredo's Webb County Jail. He also was sentenced to six months in jail, but that sentence was probated for five years and Delgado was ordered to pay a $500 fine, Brewster said.

Brewster said he had no details about Delgado's arrest.

One official, who asked to remain anonymous, said information regarding Delgado's arrest in Wichita Falls for the curfew violation would be forwarded to the Laredo probation office.

The official said it is a violation of the terms of a probation to associate with criminals so Delgado might be subject to having his probation revoked for being with Ortiz, an illegal alien.

'Shoe' creator gets cartoonist award

Jeff MacNelly, whose comic strip SHOE appears in the Wichita Falls Times, recently received the Reuben Award, the highest honor of the National Cartoonist Society, in ceremonies at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

The award was based on his editorial cartoon as well as the comic strip.

MacNelly won Pulitzer Prizes in 1972 and 1978 for his editorial cartoons which appear in more than 350 American newspapers. He also has been awarded the George Polk Award and the National Cartoonists Society Award for editorial cartooning.

MacNelly, 31, began the comic strip SHOE, which appears in more than 480 newspapers daily and Sunday, in 1971. The strip provides a light and deft commentary on the pratfalls of daily life, using a clutch of scruffy birds that resemble a newspaper editor, an absent-minded "perfesser," a secretary, a barmaid, an inept pilot and the "perfesser's" nephew.

A native of Cedarhurst, N.J., who attended Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., MacNelly began his career drawing sports and editorial cartoons for his college paper, the Daily Tar Heel, at the University of North Carolina. Later, as an editorial cartoonist for the town newspaper, The Chapel Hill Weekly, MacNelly hit his stride, spoofing the local upheavals and "ridiculosities" that characterizes North Carolina politics.

His efforts earned the National Newpaper Association's 1969 award for best editorial cartooning, and the following year he became editorial cartoonist for the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, where he works today.

MacNelly and his wife, the former Rita Daniels, live in Richmond with their two sons.

MacNelly cites his father, C.L. MacNelly, a noted portrait artist who has been an advertising executive and a publisher of The Saturday Evening Post, as the single greatest influence on his career.

"Dad has painted Jimmy Durante, the late Gen. Hoyt Vandenburg, photographer Wingate Paine and former HEW head Bob Finch," MacNelly said. "When we get together, Dad tries to teach me painting techniques and I try to teach him to draw caricatures. Neither of us has been very successful, however."

MacNelly's college years spanned most of the student strikes and late 1960s' Vietnam protests. To him, it appeared that "all this activity was not only polarizing the campuses to one point of view, but was also closing the minds of most of the participants," he said.

"Most of the activists were, to me, a humorless, one-sided bunch, and this kind of thing goes against the spirit which the university is based. Certainly the system and the establishment should be challenged — and challenged constantly. But shouldn't the alternatives be subject to challenge also?"

MacNelly challenges politicians with his humor.

"I try to make my point through humor," he said. "I believe that this is the most effective way to reach my reader — while I'm entertaining him."

This approach has been popular, and even MacNelly's victims often are tickled.

MacNelly editorial cartoons and comic strips are distributed by the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate Inc.

Walk ends in death

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani, the first chief of staff of Iran's armed forces after the revolution, was assassinated today while walking in the garden of his Tehran home, the official Pars news agency reported.

Radio Tehran said nine persons, including a Moslem clergyman and members of the shah's police and military forces, were convicted by Islamic revolutionary courts of murder and torture and were executed by firing squads in two cities today. The executions brought to 158 the number known executed by the revolutionary regime.

Gharani, who was chief of staff for six weeks, was cut down by a man with a machine gun who climbed his garden wall, wounded him in the stomach and left leg, and wounded a member of his household staff in the neck, Pars said.

Meanwhile, an accomplice with a machine gun chased away a group of laborers working outside the house on Mossadegh Avenue, one of Tehran's main boulevards, the news agency reported.

Gharani was rushed to a hospital and was operated on but died several hours later.

The assassins dropped their weapons and escaped, Pars said. There identities were not known.

There was no apparent motive for the slaying, the first known assassination of an official of Iran's Islamic revolution.

Gharani, a former military intelligence chief who was jailed for opposition to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, was appointed chief of staff on Feb. 13, two days after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary forces took over the government and the army collapsed. He was replaced March 27, reportedly because of his inability to convince army deserters to return to duty.

The executions announced today were the first since last Thursday. The government radio said six of them took place in the Persian Gulf city of Bandar Abbas. The clergyman, convicted of collaborating SAVAK, the shah's secret police, and two other persons were shot in the holy city of Mashhad, in northeast Iran, the report said.

In the holy city of Qom, Khomeini's headquarters, Islamic courts sentenced five men to long prison terms for crimes committed during the shah's regime, the radio said. Six others were acquitted and 149 persons were released on bail while their records were reviewed, it added.

Radio Tehran reported an unconfirmed death toll of 100-150 in sporadic shooting in Naghadeh, 360 miles northwest of Tehran, by rival Turks and Kurds, two of Iran's rebellious minority factions. Pars, the official news agency, reported 180 unconfirmed dead and hundreds wounded.

Italian-Americans ruled not 'culturally deprived' minority

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today turned away a challenge to special admissions programs in education that do not consider "culturally deprived" Italian-Americans as minority members.

In a case with overtones of the Allan Bakke "reverse discrimination" case, the court refused to consider Philip DiLeo's challenge to the legality of a minority affirmative action plan used by the University of Colorado's law school.

In other actions today, the court:

— Left intact a ruling that a defendant whose plea-bargained sentence is overturned may be retried on all the charges originally brought against him and may be given a more severe sentence in the new trial.

— Agreed to consider whether state prison inmates may contest their transfer to mental hospitals. A court in Nebraska had ruled that prisoners facing such transfers enjoy a broad range of due-process rights.

— Agreed to consider the constitutionality of an ordinance in the Chicago suburb of Schaumburg, Ill. barring door-to-door charitable solicitations unless 75 percent of the proceeds go directly to charitable purposes. Two lower federal courts have ruled the ordinance violates free speech.

In the case challenging a college admissions program which rejected "culturally deprived" Italian-Americans as a minority group, Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Byron R. White and Thurgood Marshall voted to review DiLeo's contention, but the votes of four justices are needed for the court to hear a case.

Unusual case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today turned down the appeal of a man convicted of killing a Canton, Ohio, policeman the same day a Cleveland jail's records show he was a prisoner there.

The justices, without comment, left intact Raymond Walker's murder conviction in the July 22, 1972 shooting of Canton police detective Guy Mack during a grocery store robbery.

Records at the Cuyahoga County Jail show that Walker was being held there the day of Mack's murder some 50 miles away. The records indicate that Walker was being held in lieu of $5,000 bail on a charge of attempted burglary.

Despite those records, two accomplices in the Canton armed robbery identified Walker as the "mastermind" and the "triggerman" who killed Mack.

Walker was not arrested in connection with the shooting death until nearly four years later.

In seeking help from the nation's highest court, his lawyers argued that the case against Walker "was so devoid of evidentiary support as to render it unconstitutional" as a violation of due process safeguards.

The Golden Rule

The most heart-warming aspect of the tornado recovery is the profusion of aid and assistance that's been flowing into Wichita Falls in the past few days. From New York City to service clubs in neighboring communities has come relief in the form of clothing, bedding, furniture, dishes, food, and money.

New York Mayor Edward Koch contributed $100 to a fund launched in the city to assist survivors of the Wichita Falls tornado. Members of the executive committee of the Association for a Better New York contributed $10,000 to the fund.

The chairman of the association hopes to raise $100,000 to assist tornado survivors who lost their homes.

The love affair between Texas and the Big Apple goes back to 1976 when New York was caught in a financial bind and Texas legislators supported federal measures to assist the city in its efforts to stave off bankruptcy. It was at the Democratic national convention in New York that the Texas delegation displayed a message that "Texas loves New York."

Now New York is responding in a practical way.

New York is only one of the communities across the country offering aid. Trucks are arriving almost daily with loads of material for tornado victims; checks are arriving in the mail to Wichita Falls organizations for distribution.

The Salvation Army distribution center has aided more than 6,500 victims of the disaster, but the rush seems to be slowing down. Most churches involved in disaster relief report that they have plenty of food and clothing, especially clothing to distribute.

The manner in which people all across the United States have opened their hearts, pantries, attics and checkbooks to help the unfortunate in Wichita Falls will not be forgotten. It reminds us that in the time of need, people still abide by the Golden Rule.

Awards for service

Announcing winners of the Pulitzer Prizes each year offers journalists the opportunity to reflect on the standards of their profession. And the occasion provides a reminder that those standards are not necessarily the province of large and powerful news organizations.

Confirmation of this truth arrives this year in the award for meritorious public service that was won by the Point Reyes (Calif.) Light, a newspaper with one full-time reporter and a weekly circulation of 2,700.

The Light was given its award for about 100 news articles and editorials it carried in 1978 on Synanon, a nearby center for rehabilitating drug addicts and alcoholics.

If the Light is not a celebrated name in journalistic circles, that of Herblock — Herbert Lawrence Block of the Washington Post — most certainly is.

Readers of this page, on which Herblock's editorial cartoons are a regular feature, are familiar with his pungent wit and his bold, slashing style. At a time in the history of American editorial cartooning when more and more practitioners seem ideologically adrift, casting about for the nearest gag, Herblock remains one who possesses firm philosophical moorings, whose outrage reflects a coherent and consistent point of view.

Fifty years of cartooning have dulled neither his pen nor his sense of irony. With the 1979 award for distinguished editorial cartooning, Herblock becomes only the third three-time winner in the category. No one deserves that honor more richly.

Mrs. Jason Walker received a plaque honoring her as YWCA volunteer of the year from Mrs. Joella Terrill Butler, last year's honored volunteer. The presentation was made at a YWCA membership coffee at the Jack Grace home, 2309 Clarinda.

Acting City Manager Amon Bailey conferred with other DeMolay members who were serving as city officials today. Those participating are Ivan Allred, chief of police; Ken Mooter, fire chief; Mayor Joe Staley Jr.; Earl Singleton, city attorney; Jack Cooper, city judge, and Bill McFall, captain of detectives.

Miss Jean Ann Fulfs, senior piano student of Dr. Erno Daniel will be presented in a recital at 8:15 p.m. this evening in Midwestern University Auditorium.

50 YEARS AGO—April 23, 1929

The city government will operate during the fiscal year that started April 1 and which will end March 31, 1930, on a budget totaling $1,056,415, according to action taken last night by the council in passing the budget as prepared by George D. Fairtrace, city manager.

The days when the West was young were recalled here yesterday when a steel saddle stirrup was found upon bedrock 20 feet below the surface in the excavation for the Scott Avenue bridge. Oldtimers can only speculate as to when the stirrup was deposited there, although 40 or 50 years probably would be a conservative estimate.

70 YEARS AGO—April 23, 1909

The school board yesterday purchased from Myles O'Reilly a half block east of the Denver tracks on the corner of Third and Adams for $2,100, for erection of a school building. The school board expects to buy another site across the Wichita Valley Railroad and will then have all the ground they want for ward buildings.

Dr. Bacon Saunders of Fort Worth was here today and performed several successful operations at the Wichita Falls sanitarium.

Paying for nuclear accidents

WASHINGTON—So there was no meltdown, no explosion, no mushroom cloud and no deaths. Amid our sighs of relief, however, we ought to be aware of the heavy financial fallout that is drifting down from Three Mile Island. In a sense, we ought to be thankful for it.

I'm talking about millions of dollars in insurance claims. Since most of us understand arithmetic a lot better than we can grasp the theory of nuclear energy, what happens to the nuclear insurance system as a result of the accident may be more instructive about nuclear plant safety and public risk-taking than the reports from the industry, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission or the president's fact-finding panel.

Insurance, as we know, is a form of legalized gambling. In exchange for a certain amount of money, an insurance company will contract to protect you or your property from certain risks or peril. Naturally, the greater the risk, the greater the cost of the insurance. While a company like Lloyd's of London will insure you against some freakish event, for a freakish price, the industry as a whole is a cautious one, preferring to bet on low-risk undertakings. It has calculated the odds pretty carefully against losing money. Records of insurance industry profits bears out the success of the formula.

But not everybody knows that American insurance companies, right from the outset, have been skittish about insuring nuclear power plants. It's not the plants and the equipment per se that worries them, but the public liability in the event of an accident. So 22 years ago, the utility industry and the insurance industry persuaded Congress to pass the Price-Anderson Act, which limits the liability to $560 million for any nuclear power plant accident. The law leaves the public without full insurance coverage in the event of a nuclear catastrophe. Beyond the $560 million limit, legitimate damage claims have to be paid by the government— meaning the taxpayers—and not by the insurance companies or the utility firm involved.

There are a lot of reasons for the subsidized insurance. One is that the insurance industry, given the awesome destructive power of a major nuclear accident, was unwilling to risk going broke in the process of paying claims. Another reason was that the electric power industry lacked the capital to insure itself against the liability for a nuclear plant calamity. A third reason is that neither the insurance or utility industries felt that comfortable about nuclear power safety in 1957.

Nuclear energy production was in its infancy, scientists were arguing the merits of one type of reactor against another, and nobody had a track record to look at. The prospects looked inviting—but only on paper or in the government laboratories.

If Uncle Sam wanted the utility companies to go nuclear—and both were interested—then perhaps it was fair for the government to provide not only tax incentives and publicly financed research, but also to underwrite the bulk of the insurance coverage in case something went wrong.

While Three Mile Island was only a minor accident — not anywhere close to the magnitude envisioned by the Price-Anderson Act — the public may have to foot much of the liability if the damage claims hold up in court. In the first two weeks following the accident, insurance companies for Metropolitan Edison had paid out approximately $900,000 in living expenses for about 2,500 families who evacuated the area near Harrisburg, Pa. But that amount is peanuts compared to the damages sought in class-action suits against the utility. Four such claims already exceed the $560 million liability limit of the Price-Anderson Act, with more suits expected. Since claims for radiation damage may not be verifiable for two or three decades, the suits may drag on far into the future.

Clearly, the $560 million indemnity limit is inadequate, having not been revised to take care of inflation or the likelihood of a serious nuclear accident. But not everybody in Congress wants to further protect the nuclear power industry or the insurance companies. Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., has put forward a bill to lift the $560 million ceiling on utility liability and make them liable for damages up to the total amount of their assets. A congressional hearing is certain to ensue.

In the process we may discover a new test for an old saying: Putting your money where your mouth is.

If nuclear plants are as safe as the utility industry and the president say they are, then the insurance industry ought to willing to provide full coverage at a reasonable price, as with any other business. But if the insurance companies and the nuclear power advocates hedge, then Congress and Mr. Carter have two choices.

They can repeal Price-Anderson and, in effect, sound the death knell for nuclear plants. Or they can admit that 22 years of experience have not been sufficient to determine nuclear safety and come up with an improved federal indemnity law to underwrite the risks for the utility and the insurance industries.

That's why I said we ought to be thankful for the financial fallout from Three Mile Island. We will find out, in a dollars-and-cents way, how safe nuclear power plants really are.

People panicked by inflation

WASHINGTON — The Sunday New York Times had a big picture of two famous Californians grinning their pleasure at the outcome of the referendum. This time, it was not Howard Jarvis and Paul Gann, celebrating the victory of their famous Proposition 13. This time, it was left-wing activist Tom Hayden and his radical actress wife, Jane Fonda, cheering the victory of a rent-control referendum in Santa Monica.

To Seymour Martin Lipset, the Stanford University political scientist and student of public opinion, the quick transformation from Jarvis-Gann last June to Hayden-Fonda this April carries a message of some importance.

The message is that politicians and journalists ought to be wary of putting ideological labels on the tides of emotion sweeping throught the public these days.

"If Proposition 13 was the symptom of a great conservative grass-roots revolt," Lipset remarked at a meeting the other day, "then is the rent-control referendum a sign of a great liberal movement?"

Last summer, at a conference of "new left" leaders in St. Paul, I heard Hayden outline the strategy of turning Proposition 13 inside-out by pitting tenants against landlords. He correctly predicted that many of the apartment owners who were behind the Jarvis-Gann property tax rollback initiative would pocket their profits, rather than share them with their renters. And he correctly predicted that the renters' backlash would offer a fertile field for anti-business organizers like himself.

According to the New York Times, four other California cities have imposed rent-controls by referendum or statute since Proposition 13 passed, and four others have such rent controls pending.

Lipset told a meeting of The Business Roundtable that, "Rent-controls could sweep across the nation, just as quickly as Proposition 13 or balanced-budget resolutions have done."

What lies behind these seemingly contradictory right-wing and left-wing movements is not alternating currents of ideology, but a panic reaction by people pressed to the wall by the inexorable force of inflation.

There is a kind of quiet hysteria growing in this country, a desperation about how to make ends meet in a time of accelerating costs. In such an atmosphere, people will try anything that offers an illusion of hope — no matter how empty that hope may be.

Lipset sees Proposition 13 as a desperation bid to hold down the cost of government and taxes. He sees the Santa Monica referendum as a parallel lunge to cut down the cost of housing. He notes that while the public is supposedly fed up with big government and the reams of federal regulations, the public opinion polls show rising majority support for comprehensive wage-and-price controls. Controls are the ultimate big-government, bureaucratic nightmare, but a tempting illusion of refuge from inflation.

The easiest task in the world is to demonstrate the irrationality of wage-and-price controls, or rent controls, or Proposition 13s, or balanced-budget amendments. Controls distort the economy, choke off investment and produce worse shortages of the very items being controlled. Drastic tax and spending rollbacks cripple government's ability to help balance the overall economy or meet the needs of the worst victims of inflation, those on fixed incomes.

But it is futile to talk reason to a nation as beset by inflation as this one is. The longer it goes on, the worse will be the consequences, not only in economic terms but in political, governmental and institutional terms as well.

The people, from Barry Goldwater to Walter Mondale and from Arthur Burns to Alfred Kahn, who have been saying that curbing inflation is not only an economic imperative but the most important social policy this country can adopt, are absolutely right.

It becomes plainer every day that the only alternative to an effective anti-inflation policy is a generalized, undeclared civil war — of taxpayers against government, tenants against landlords, unions against business, farmers against consumers, investors against spenders, and, ultimately, looters against property-owners and police.

We have had a surfeit of people grinning over the "victories" they have won in this contest to exploit people's inflation-fueled fears. It is really a no-win race to social ruin.

Kids conditioned to the welfare state

Next time the small scholar at your house brings home his social studies schoolbooks, take a peek inside. You might learn a lot.

Not about social studies, necessarily, nor even history, government or economics. What you'll learn is what the schools are teaching your children about these things — and what they're NOT.

If you happen to be of the bleeding-heart persuasion, you'll love it. If you consider yourself a champion of free enterprise and individual liberty, you'll probably go right up the wall.

Because, according to a comprehensive analysis of elementary and junior high textbooks, today's kids are being conditioned to the welfare state, as well as being exposed to "misleading and inaccurate presentations" of what is supposed to be historical fact.

These are the conclusions of an Arizona-based citizen-parent group that calls itself LITE (Let's Improve Today's Education) and which is convinced that much of what we call education is plain old propaganda.

The report, which has been reprinted by The Heritage Foundation, a conservative group based in Washington, accuses social reformers of "manipulating curriculum for their own ends."

And one of these ends is to raise a generation of young people who are willing to let the government run their lives.

This, according to LITE, is what's being taught:

1. The idea of individual liberty and individual responsibility is outmoded and must be replaced by government planning and regulation.

2. The needs of the group, society and the world community are more important than the needs of the individual, the state or the nation.

3. All values, religious or political, are relative and can be changed by circumstances and group needs.

Day after day, LITE charges, teachers work from texts that hammer away the idea that economic equality is more important than freedom. And that people must be willing to give away what they have earned to others who don't earn enough to "enjoy the good life."

Have a few excerpts from various textbooks:

"Is more liberty really a desirable goal? Is it possible that, in a world of advancing technology and larger populations, it will prove necessary to place more restrictions on people's actions?".

"We may have to accept further limitations upon our freedom because of environmental dangers."

"Are Americans willing to sacrifice some of their economic freedom for the greater welfare of all?"

"Only a hundred years ago it was commonly believed that government governs best which governs least. The Industrial Revolution in the 1800s brought gradual modification of this view. Slowly, but surely, people began to feel that the government should regulate many aspects of industrial, political and social life."

LITE parents don't deny that most of these things have already come about. What enrages them is that modern education is selling future voters the idea that it's a good thing, that they must never "equate their loss of individual freedom with government tyranny." Government, our children are taught, always "has everyone's best interests at heart."

Small tots are encouraged to think of themselves, not as residents of a particular state or nation, but as human beings who are part of a global community that works together to maintain order in the world, distribute the wealth equally, and wipe out pollution, crime, hunger, discrimination and war.

Let a kid persist in being patriotic enough to brag about his country and he's considered a "roadblock in the path to One World Order."

Have a few more quotes from prominent educators:

"As long as the child breathes the poisoned air of nationalism, education in world-mindedness can produce only precarious results. It is frequently the family which inflicts the child with extreme nationalism. The school system should therefore combat family attitudes."

LITE says children are taught that "there are no right or wrong choices ... each choice is valid for the person making the decision." And along with this go what the researchers call "primers for rebellion."

First grade text: "Does your family have any rules you do not like?

Sixth-grade text: "If your community has a law which disagrees with your values, would you obey the law? When should you be prepared to rebel against your government? Think about some things that would make you unhappy enough to revolt."

This is not to lay a blanket indictment on all textbooks. There are those that present both sides to problem issues. The only trouble is, short of reading them yourself, how can you tell which kind your kids are getting?

Your Money's Worth

Guide incomplete

By SYLVIA PORTER
Field Syndicate

If you call a travel agent or airline reservation clerk to find out which airlines fly between any two cities in North America, the answer invariably will come from a single source — the "Official Airline Guide" (OAG).

But what you are told may be wrong or incomplete.

Roughly the size of a major city's "Yellow Pages," the OAG is the only publication sold in the United States that combines the passenger flights and fares for all domestic airlines in the United States, Mexico, Canada and the Caribbean. It is published by Reuben H. Donnelley Corp., a subsidiary of Dun & Bradstreet.

Subscriptions to the twice-monthly guide cost about $100 a year. The book is such a fixture in corporate travel departments and the offices of airline booking and travel agents that it's commonly known as "the Bible," reports my associate, Brooke Shearer.

But the guide's information is incomplete and biased, claims the Federal Trade Commission. In a recent, successful suit, the FTC charged OAG's publishers with illegally conspiring with the major airlines to omit and bury facts about certain flights offered by smaller air carriers.

The result: Commuter and intrastate airlines lost passengers, the major airlines gained them, and you (the public) spent more time and money flying than necessary.

Before the FTC began its probe, the Donnelley Corp. refused to print any of the connecting flights provided by small, commuter airlines. These carriers — Royale, Prinair, Metro Rocky Mountain, Pilgrim, etc. — generally specialize in transporting passengers from small communities (not serviced by the major airlines) to larger cities, which, of course, are covered by the big airlines.

Most of the more than 7 million passengers who fly on commuter carriers connect with other airlines, so the absence of any facts about commuter connections was "especially injurious," noted the judge who heard the case, James B. Timony.

Because reservation and travel agents themselves didn't know that commuter connections existed, you, the traveler, were forced to wait for flights offered by major airlines and which were listed by the OAG. This needless wait might cost you an extra business day or prompt you to rent a car to reach your final destination quickly.

Among the omissions from the guide were details on discount fares that most commuter carriers have arranged with the leading airlines. Since the OAG did not reveal such information to ticket agents, you ended up being overcharged.

In 1976, as a result of the FTC inquiry, the guide shifted policy and began printing commuter connections. Business on these airlines picked up almost at once. But the OAG continued discriminating against smaller lines in another way: It listed certain of their flights after those of the big carriers.

Silly or not, it's a well-established fact that being at or near the top of any list — political, social, airline flights — is a competitive advantage. As do many voters, reservation clerks make their selections by reading from the top down. The first convenient flight listed is the one they book — even if it's a competitor's.

To correct for this quirk of human nature, the OAG randomly listed identical flights of the major airlines. But it carried the commuter and intrastate airline flights which left at the same time and for the same destination in a separate category farther down the list.

These discriminatory editorial decisions, ruled the judge, were the product of both close financial ties between Donnelley Corp. and the big airlines — and a conspiracy.

In 1975 alone, Donnelley received roughly $3 million in subscriptions and other fees from the major carriers.

Also, in 1971, representatives of the leading airlines met with the OAG's publisher and another top manager in a downtown Washington, D.C., hotel. The chief topic was whether or not to integrate the flight listings of the minor carriers with those of the larger lines. All but American and National airlines voted "no."

The Official Airline Guide caught the message. It has maintained its discriminatory policies — at least until this recent court ruling directing the publisher to cease and desist.

Now, though, the next time you call for flight information, you may get the full story you need — accurate, complete, unbiased guidance on how to get from here to there in the fastest time you desire at the cheapest cost available.

Consumer Reports

Tuna is high in protein

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Tuna is a versatile, tasty and nutritious food that can be enjoyed unadorned or as part of a salad or casserole.

To learn more about this popular food, Consumer Reports evaluated tuna for nutrition against two other lunchtime favorites — hamburger and peanut butter.

We found that a three-ounce serving of tuna contains some 20 grams of protein — more than one-third the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) set by the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council for an adult male. It also provides close to one-half the protein RDA for a woman and more than half the allowance for a 7-to-10-year-old child.

You can get a little more protein from a three-ounce cooked hamburger — 22 grams. However, a peanut butter sandwich — made with two slices of bread and about two tablespoons of peanut butter — provides only about 11 grams.

What's more, the protein in peanut butter is of lower quality than that found in tuna and hamburger. But the two slices of bread in a sandwich and a glass of milk would upgrade the peanut butter's protein quality, and the milk would raise the protein level to about 19 grams.

Tuna also provides significant amounts of other nutrients. Overall, it's a good deal more nutritious than peanut butter and only slightly less nutritious than hamburger.

The ingredients listed on most cans of tuna we tested included salt. Most of the brands contained about two times as much salt as peanut butter and about eight times as much as cooked hamburger.

If you're on a strict low-sodium diet, which can often limit you to 500 milligrams of sodium per day, you should seek out tuna that is labeled "diet" or "dietetic." Two of the brands tested by Consumer Reports were so labeled and contained no added salt. Each was thus relatively low in sodium, the medically important component of salt.

Many cans of solid white tuna are labeled "fancy," meaning the tuna is solid-style rather than chunk or flaked. (However, use of the word "fancy" is not an indication of the quality of the tuna.)

You'll find that some labels list "sodium acid pyrophosphate." This ingredient prevents formation of struvite, a harmless substance that bears a frightening resemblance to glass fragments. (If you come across what seem to be glass fragments in a can of tuna, heat them in vinegar. Struvite will dissolve, while glass won't.)

Tuna labels that list weight don't always tell you how much tuna you're buying. That's because the weight of the packing liquid is included in the total. Even some seven-ounce cans we purchased didn't provide two three-ounce servings.

Chunk tuna — albacore or light — was most often short of the six-ounce total. Chicken of the Sea Chunk Light and Star-Kist Diet Pack Chunk White, both packed in water, were the worst offenders of the 22 brands (58 products in all) we examined. Both were labeled six-and-a-half ounces, although they only contained an average of five-and-a-quarter ounces of fish.

When we tested tuna in 1974, we found foreign matter (rodent hairs, moth scales, etc.) in the vast majority of the brands. It didn't mean the tuna was necessarily unsafe, although it was unappetizing.

Of the 695 cans examined for last January's Consumer Reports, however, less than 2 percent contained extraneous matter.

There is no mandatory inspection of seafood, although the National Marine Fisheries Service inspects tuna for a fee if the processors ask for inspection. Tuna that meets established sanitary and quality standards may carry a seal on the can that states: "Packed under Federal Inspection."

After the 1974 report, many packers volunteered to participate in the inspection program. But, when we bought the tuna for our January 1979 report, we discovered that only Ralston Purina Co. brands (Chicken of the Sea and Van Camp's) carried the inspection seal.

Consumers Union believes that seafood, like meat and poultry, should be subject to mandatory inspection.

Turbocharging in sight for standard cars?

Government-mandated fuel-economy standards are resulting in the big V-8 engine becoming an endangered species, says the Automotive Information Council.

In its place you'll be seeing more and more six-and four-cylinder engines.

While these smaller displacement engines do give better fuel economy and reduced emissions, they can't give the same quick acceleration as the V-8.

So enter the turbocharger as the answer to increasing a small engine's power. Turbocharging, sometimes called supercharging, hasn't been used much in recent years except on race cars. In the past, a supercharger was added to some high performance engines to enable them to accelerate from zero to a speeding ticket in less time than it probably took to read this sentence. A Turbocharger's basic principle still holds true for today's autos — an engine will develop more power if more air and fuel is pumped through it.

It increases the efficiency of the engine by boosting the power output of the engine on demand without increasing the amount of fuel burned during normal operation.

A turbocharger is a compressor which provides a super charge of air to be burned with the fuel. This pressurizing is above and beyond the normal compression of the air-fuel mixture when squeezed against the top of the cylinder by the piston. By increasing the amount of air-fuel in each charge in the combustion chamber, there is more power released as the mixture burns.

In the past, many compressors were driven by the engine, drawing off some of the engine's power. Today's turbocharged engines harness energy of exhaust gases, left over after combustion, to drive a turbine, which powers the compressor. The compressor forces air into the engine, making more power.

The extra power produced by a smaller turbocharged engine can give it the same get-up-and-go of a larger conventional engine, while the smaller engine uses fuel frugally during normal operation, says the Automotive Information Council.

Health tools called crocks

A couple of "good-health gimmicks" from the past are turning up these days, and the Texas Department of Health wants them out of the hands of individuals.

A radium water crock recently was located in Denton. Manufactured in the 1930s, the crock was intended to provide a healthful benefit by treating water stored in it with radiation from the radium contained in the uranium ore lining. However, says the Texas Department of Health, radium and uranium present radiological health hazards from exposure to direct gamma radiation and ingestion and inhalation of decay products. No health benefit has ever been shown by treating water in the crocks, found also in Fort Worth, Longview and Tyler.

The radium water crock — called the Revigator — had been stored in the garage of a resident of Denton for about 12 years. The owner, after learning of the potential radiation hazards through news articles, contacted Dr. Pat Windham of North Texas State University. Dr. Windham, using a radiation survey instrument, found that the crock emitted radiation and called the Texas Department of Health. Inspectors from Public Health Region 5 offices in Arlington obtained the crock and sent it to Austin for proper disposal.

Explain to husband

By Dr. KAREN BLAKER
NEA Writer

DEAR DR. BLAKER — My husband and I are enjoying our new baby, but we are used to going out a lot.

I think my husband is getting a bit stir-crazy. He wants to know when we can get away together for a weekend without the baby.

I don't know what to say. Because I am breast-feeding, I am almost certain I won't be able to leave her, even overnight, for quite awhile. My hunch is that my husband will be very angry when he hears this.

I do make sure we have at least one evening out alone during the week. But that doesn't seem to be enough. He's acting like a spoiled brat.

DEAR READER — Your husband does sound jealous and somewhat envious of the life you left behind.

But maybe it's not as bad as it seems. Perhaps he was never realistically prepared for the changes a baby brings.

Find out how he feels about the new restrictions. Let him know you have some of the same feelings. Use breast-feeding as an example; explain how confining it sometimes feels to always have to keep the baby nearby.

Even if you love every minute of breast-feeding, this "admission" may help your husband accept the situation for the time being.

By all means, don't just put him off by vaguely promising some weekend in the future. He will only feel tricked later on.

Explode the myths about sex after 60. Write for Dr. Blaker's hotline, "Sex: How Old Is Too Old?" Send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Blaker in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 475, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Thieves take Soviet crosses

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Bands of men are breaking into Soviet churches, scooping richly ornamented icons, crosses and other religious artifacts off the walls by the sackful and disappearing into the night to sell them to Soviet and foreign collectors for big sums.

The press is publicizing the thefts because the government is trying to bring religious artifacts — even those in private homes — under its control and to cut off the massive, lucrative smuggling of icons out of the country.

One major newspaper proposed Sunday that all icons be registered with the government and that churches be more securely locked.

"All historical treasures on the territory of our country fall under the protection of the state, no matter if they are held by the government, by social organizations (including churches), or by private persons," the newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya said.

The newspaper told of two groups of "collectors" who specialized in swindling country folk out of their icons and in breaking into churches.

In a few months' time, before they were rounded up and brought to trial, it said, they made more than $9,000.

From December 1977 through July 1978, the paper continued, a man named Vysotsky led a gang that hauled away canvas sackfuls of icons from 10 churches and private homes in the city of Vladimir, one of Russia's great church centers.

A man named Zuyev led another ring whose members posed as artists and bilked unsuspecting villagers out of ancient icons worth as much as $900 each. If a villager refused, Zuyev's men broke in later and stole the icon.

Similar stories were told in a series of articles last October in the cultural magazine Sovetskaya Kultura. It also called for stricter control of "national treasures" and the registration of all icons, plus a campaign to teach country people the worth of their icons so they would not be duped.

Sovetskaya Rossiya did not tell what sentences were given the icon thieves it wrote about. But it told of witnesses at the trials — artists, an engineer, a band leader and a psychiatrist who bought icons, religious books, ornate crosses and other artifacts from the thieves.

"They pronounced high-sounding phrases with a sanctimonious and blasphemous sound about their generous attempts to save antiques for posterity," the paper said.

Soviet authorities take a similar attitude toward foreigners who buy up icons, paintings and samovars and smuggle them out of the country in their luggage or in embassy diplomatic pouches.

"They have lost a tremendous amount of art in recent years," said one Western diplomat.

Museums have embarked on major projects of collecting and restoring icons.

Don't abandon red meat

It isn't necessary for those wishing to follow a low cholesterol diet to abandon wholesome, nutritious red meat.

Two 3-ounce servings of cooked lean meat, trimmed of separable fat can easily be included in the daily diet without exceeding the American Heart Association's restrictive recommendation of 300 milligrams (mg) of cholesterol per day, points out the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Three ounces of cooked, trimmed lean beef contain only 77 mg. of cholesterol and three ounces of cooked, trimmed lean pork contain 75 mg. The cholesterol level for a three-ounce serving of veal is 84 mg. and for lamb it's 85 mg.

While poultry and fish are often recommended as substitutes for red meat in low cholesterol diets, it is interesting to note that their cholesterol content is not that different from red meats. The cholesterol levels for three-ounce servings of the following are: shrimp — 128 mg.; mackerel — 86 mg.; herring — 82 mg. Poultry is similar to red meat. For example chicken (1½ ounces white, 1½ ounces dark) contains 73 mg. while turkey (1½ ounces white, 1½ ounces dark) contains 76 mg.

Good news

If you love popcorn but are on a salt-restricted diet, here's good news.

Featherweight, the nation's leading maker and marketer of foods for people on special diets, has just introduced popcorn with no salt added. It's the perfect between-meals snack, not only for special dieters but for the whole family. Look for it in the dietetic food section of your local supermarket, where you'll also find a complete selection of low sodium salt-free foods for every meal.

Dear Abby

Homing pigeons for the birds

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I married George — a sweet, generous man with five grown children, all married with families of their own. My complaint: George and I have spent only six weeks alone since our marriage!

Whenever one of George's children considers a divorce, loses a job, or wants to save for a vacation, he (or she) and their kids move in with their father and me. We have to clean up after them, watch their kids and treat them like guests. I am sick of kids living with us for weeks and sometimes months at a time!

We have a large home, but we're far from rich, and when they're here our grocery bills are sky high. They've yet to contribute one dime.

George and I get along fine until his kids move in, then we argue all the time.

I love George, but if those free-loaders don't leave us alone, I'm leaving him. Any advice? — HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: It's obvious that George is a soft touch for his kids, so don't YOU be the heavy. (Let George do it.) Tell him that you are through being a pigeon for a flock of homing pigeons. Then prepare to (a) live with the ills you know or (b) fly to others you know not of.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter from someone who said the minute he opened his newspaper his nose started to run, his eyes watered and itched, and he went into a sneezing fit. You said he was probably allergic to the ink in the newspaper. You were right.

Years ago my son was being treated by one of the most highly regarded allergists in the country. After many tests it was discovered that he was allergic to newsprint. The doctor advised him to dry out the newspaper thoroughly in a warm (200 degree) oven before reading it. My son followed the advice, and it worked! — CHEL'SFORD, MASS.

DEAR CHELMSFORD: Thanks for the tip. And if any of you readers out there try it, let this serve as a warning. DO NOT overheat the newspaper. It contains highly flammable material!

DEAR ABBY: I recently learned that my husband's grandmother was very much offended by the letter I wrote thanking her for her wedding gift. It seems that everyone in the family calls her "Nanna" but not being aware of this, I addressed her as "Mrs. Brown" in the salutation, and again in the body of the letter.

Abby, she never asked ME to call her "Nanna." In fact, I don't recall that she ever asked me to call her anything.

Quite frankly, since I have seen her her only a few times, I thought the formal "Mrs. Brown" would be more appropriate — and anything more familiar would be a bit presumptuous.

Why can't people accept a thank-you letter and appreciate its sincerity and promptness without trying to find something wrong with it? — BUGGED IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR BUGGED: Some can. But not Nanna.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MARY L. IN LA JOLLA: Anyone who maintains that he's too old for "love stuff" either is or may as well be.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. for a personal unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Where you can help!

(Editor's Note: Many individuals are concerned with what they can do to help those who have been tornado victims with specific needs, such as doing laundry, transporting people to appointments or providing hot meals and supplies. To offer information on any small, individual aid that can be given, the following column will run daily in the Wichita Falls Times and Record News family pages.)

● Neighbors may volunteer their time to take a child (without transportation because of the tornado) to a music lesson.

● Other needs will be picking up clothes from the cleaners, providing a mattress or going to the grocery store for tornado victims.

● The Rev. W. C. Harting, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran Church, where three pickup truck loads of clothing, food and supplies were received from four Lutheran congregtions in Dallas, said the clothes have been sorted to size and placed in the church basement.

"Those who suffered loss are welcome to come by between the hours of 8 a.m. noon and 1-5 p.m. at the church, 11th and Holliday.

"In addition to clothing there also are food, pots and pans, bedding and a few items of furniture," Harting said.

The church and Our Redeemer Lutheran Church of Wichita Falls, both affiliated with the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, also are administering cash assistance sent from the Dallas congregations, as well as the Synod's district, Harting said.

● Sandwiches are available at St. Mark's Methodist Church, 4319 McNiel, furnished by Floral Heights United Methodist Church, 2214 10th. Also at Floral Heights Scout Hut across from the church there is clothing, including work clothes, baby diapers and children's clothes, bedding, linens and towels.

TANZANIAN COMMANDER LEADS ATTACK

Tanzanian forces capture former Amin headquarters

JINJA, Uganda (AP) — The Tanzanian drive to secure eastern and northern Uganda for the new government in Kampala took its first objective, the town of Jinja and the Owen Falls hydroelectric dam, with almost no opposition Sunday.

Most of deposed dictator Idi Amin's troops fled after a two-week orgy of murder and looting.

There was no sign of Amin, who made his headquarters in Jinja after an invasion force of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles closed on Kampala, his capital to the west.

Provisional President Yussufu Lule's government feared that Amin's men would make a bloody last stand at Jinja. But two 30-minute artillery barrages knocked out a 106mm anti-tank gun at the Nile River bridge, and several thousand Tanzanian and anti-Amin Ugandan soldiers marched into the city in columns.

A few of Amin's soldiers still in the city were captured.

Part of the force moved out to the 100-foot-high Owen Falls dam, to the northwest of the city, which supplies all of Uganda's electricity and 15 percent of neighboring Kenya's. No resistance was reported there.

Residents of Jinja said Amin's troops shot hundreds of townspeople in the two weeks since Kampala fell to the invaders.

A doctor said one band of soldiers stopped a busload of 60 people bound for Kampala and threw them off the Owen Falls Dam in pairs.

An Anglican clergyman, the Rev. Henry Lugolobi, said soldiers at the Nile bridge killed everyone trying to cross during the last week. He said a group of soldiers bayoneted Anglican Bishop John Wasirye last Monday and threw his body off the dam.

The next objective of the Tanzanian-Ugandan force is to open the highway to Tororo and the Kenyan border 80 miles to the east. From Tororo, the force is to turn northwest and advance 100 miles to Soroti.

These troops are scheduled to link up in about a month with another column that is moving north of Kampala to secure an airfield at Nakasongola. After the linkup, the combined force is to move into northwest Uganda for an assault on Arua, the capital of Amin's native province where he was last reported seen. Since then, however, there have been unconfirmed reports that he escaped to Libya, Sudan and Iraq.

Gunboats hit Palestinian camp

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli gunboats shelled a Palestinian camp on the northern Lebanese coast after four Israelis, including a father and his two young daughters, were killed in a guerrilla raid on a resort town five miles south of the Lebanese frontier.

An Israeli civilian killed one of the four guerrillas. An army patrol killed another one and wounded and captured the other two.

The Israeli military command said the target of Sunday's naval attack was a training camp for Marxist guerrillas of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine at Nahr El-Berd, between the northern Lebanese town of Tripoli and the Syrian border. Palestinian spokesmen in Beirut claimed a refugee camp was shelled and said three persons were killed.

An Israeli spokesman said the shelling was not in retaliation for the terrorist attack early Sunday on the the northern Israeli town of Nahariya. But Interior Minister Yosef Burg told Radio Israel the government would continue hitting Palestinian bases in response to raids, and Yasser Arafat put the guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Lebanon on "maximum alert" in expectation of a retaliatory strike.

An Iraqi-backed branch of the PLO, the Palestine Liberation Front, claimed responsiblity for the attack on Nahariya. It was the seventh guerrilla strike or attempted strike across the border this year and the most costly in terms of civilian casualties in more than a year.

The four guerrillas landed in a rubber boat and stormed into a three-story, brown stucco apartment house 300 yards away, firing and throwing grenades.

The Israelis killed were Daniel Heran, 28, the manager of a textile factory; his daughters Einat, 4, and Yael, 2, and police Sgt. Eliahu Shahar, 24, who was shot and killed when he arrived on the scene. Four other Israelis were slightly wounded.

Charlie Shapira, 36, said he was awakened by pounding on his door about 2 a.m.

"First they shot through my door and then they started knocking it down," he said. "I let the first terrorist get in and then I shot him. He fell, but he still had a pistol in his hand, so I shot him in the head."

Meanwhile, two other terrorists had gotten into Heran's neighboring apartment and were dragging Heran and his older daughter out. Shapira said the father pleaded with the guerrillas to leave the child behind.

"I was scared to shoot at the terrorist holding my neighbor," said Shapira. "I thought if I killed him, the other one would kill the whole family."

An army spokesman said Heran and Einat were shot on the beach. But the terrorists encountered an army patrol there and were killed or wounded in the exchange of fire that followed.

The spokesman said the guerrillas killed Heran's younger daughter in the apartment, but neighbors said the child's mother suffocated her accidentally while trying to keep her quiet as they hid from the gunmen.

The raid caused Defense Minister Ezer Weizman to postpone a trip to Cairo Sunday to discuss Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai Desert and other aspects of the pact.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin telephoned Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to explain the delay, while Weizman visited Nahariya before briefing the Israeli Cabinet on the attack. A spokesman for Begin's office said Sadat told the prime minister he was sorry about the casualties.

Nahariya, a frequent target of guerrilla rocket fire from Lebanon, was hit from the sea once before in June 1974 when three Israelis and three Palestinians were killed.

In other developments, the Israeli Cabinet approved construction of two new Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. They were the first settlements approved since the peace treaty with Egypt was signed in Washington March 26.

The civilian outposts are to go up north of Jerusalem in an area slated for Palestinian autonomy under terms of the pact. The settlement issue is certain to be hamper the autonomy talks which open next month. Both Egypt and the United States oppose them.

In the northern Lebanese town of Jbail, a blood feud between rival Christian factions took a brutal turn when gunmen posing as guests opened fire on a wedding party, killing seven guests on the spot and kidnapping and later murdering four others. A Christian radio station reported the incident, which was confirmed by local police.

The dead, nine men and two women, were members of Pierre Gemayel's Christian Phalange Party which has been feuding with the forces of former President Suleiman Franjieh.

Kuwait cuts diplomatic relations with Egyptians

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait broke diplomatic relations with Egypt today in accordance with the Arab League boycott voted because of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, the Kuwait government announced.

Arab diplomatic sources said the government had been in contact with the 17 other Arab governments opposed to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace policy, and they agreed to sever diplomatic relations with Cairo within 24 hours.

However, four of the 18 — Syria, Algeria, Iraq, Libya and South Yemen — have had no relations with Egypt since December 1977, when Sadat broke with them because of their virulent opposition to his campaign for peace with Israel.

Foreign and economic ministers of the 18 governments agreed at an Arab League meeting in Baghdad on March 31 to impose political and economic sanctions on Egypt within one month. Sadat reportedly ordered his government to take "parallel steps" in case the Arab countries decided to sever ties with Egypt.

The governments that still had relations with Egypt withdrew their ambassadors four weeks ago to protest Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's visit to the Egyptian capital.

Dayan leaves for tour of Far East

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left today for a three-week visit to the Far East but denied that he was going to China.

Dayan is scheduled to visit Nepal, Burma, Thailand and Singapore to brief their leaders on the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty and to discuss issues of mutual interest. He will also pay an unofficial visit to Hong Kong.

There was speculation that he would make a secret stop in China to discuss the opening of diplomatic relations between the two countries, but he told a group of foreign publishers meeting in Jerusalem: "I have not been invited to go to China or to meet with Chinese leaders."

He said although it would be desirable for Israel to have diplomatic relations with China, it was not likely they would be established now.

Reporter alleges drugging, wife molestation

MOSCOW (AP) — Robin Knight, the Moscow correspondent for U.S. News and World Report, said today he was drugged and his wife sexually molested during a tourist trip to the Soviet Central Asian city of Taskkent last week. He said the Soviet assailants identified themselves as government tourist guides.

The U.S. Embassy said it would file a formal protest with the Soviet Foreign Ministry. It was the third harassment of Western reporters in two months.

Profiles...Nixon to star?

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Two independent American movie producers said today they have offered former PRESIDENT NIXON the role of a U.S. president kidnapped from a Peking toilet and replaced by a genetically engineered double.

NIXON

"We feel certain that President Nixon would be just superb in the part," said producer HARRY HOPE, a partner with OSCAR L. NICHOLS in C.I.C. Productions of Hong Kong.

Hope, who also wrote the script of the film "Falcon's Ultimatum," would not say how much money they are offering Nixon. But he said "a friend of the Nixon family" encouraged them to send the script to the ex-president.

In it, Hope said, the character called "the president," while visiting China, "is noticing that there are graffiti in Chinese bathrooms, just like in the United States, when the stall turns around and he is replaced by his genetically engineered double."

The Chinese premier has also been replaced by a genetically engineered double, he continued, and the script depicts the efforts of an American reporter, Mark Falcon, to find the real president and the real premier.

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Two men who figured prominently in the news during the Vietnam war era, one a soldier, the other a protest leader, appear in public forums Tuesday in New Hampshire, about 100 miles from each other.

WESTMORELAND

Gen. WILLIAM WESTMORELAND, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam during the mid-60s buildup, is to speak to Dartmouth College students in Hanover on "Retrospective Views and Lessons of Vietnam."

RUBIN

In Durham, political activist JERRY RUBIN will speak to University of New Hampshire students on "Twenty Years of Change."

Westmoreland was U.S. Army chief of staff from 1968 until his retirement in 1972.

Rubin was a founder of the "Yippies," the Youth International Party, and was one of the "Chicago Seven," accused of starting riots at the 1968 Democratic convention.

Westmoreland's lecture is free; Rubin's is $3.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Black activist ANGELA DAVIS says "the times they aren't a changin'," at least as far as racism is concerned.

"Racism is worse in this country now than it was 10 years ago, and we have to keep on fighting," she said at a rally here.

SEX THERAPISTS
...Masters and Johnson

She said blacks have been hurt by an assault on affirmative action programs, noting the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Bakke case.

In that case, the court ordered the University of California to admit ALLAN BAKKE to medical school. He had been denied admission under a quota system that set aside 16 places out of 100 for minority applicants.

"The assault on the affirmative action program is based on an illusion that we're free. We must de-mystify this illusion," Ms. Davis told the crowd Saturday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Drs. WILLIAM MASTERS and VIRGINIA JOHNSON say that while they have succeeded in helping guide some homosexuals to heterosexuality, their findings should not be interpreted to mean homosexuals should be "converted."

"Such an approach should always be at the request, and at the real and sincere desire, of the individual, never as the concept that one should treat homosexuality per se," Masters said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Masters, a gynecologist, and Johnson, a psychologist, said they found that "from a physiological point of view, there really isn't any difference between homosexuals and heterosexuals in their facility to respond to sexual stimulation."

The husband-and-wife research team, whose new book "Homosexuality in Perspective" will be published Monday, said that both homosexuality and heterosexuality are learned, not genetically determined.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Discussions between JOHNNY CARSON and his bosses at NBC over his desire to get out of the "Tonight" show were held over the weekend and will continue — but quietly.

NBC spokesman GENE WALSH said the discussions will be held privately.

Skylab fall keeps experts busy

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — What goes up must come down. And if it weighs 85 tons, gently, it's hoped.

Yet man launched Skylab, an 85-ton space laboratory, in 1973 and left its destiny to the sun and the winds and to scientists' brains, figuring they'd have an answer when it was time to land.

It is, and they don't.

"We're still working hot and heavy seven nights a week," reports Dr. Marshall Kaplan, a professor of aerospace engineering at Penn State University who has been hired by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to help find a quick solution.

"I've been as busy as a beaver," he said in an interview. "We're anxious. We're trying to anticipate all the situations. A lot of things can happen at the end."

The end, according to NASA, is the latter part of June when Skylab is expected to tumble out of orbit and into a blazing dive on a collision course with Earth.

"The bird is coming down relatively fast," reports Larry Edwards, manager of Skylab studies for NASA in Washington. "The only thing that can be said with any confidence right now is that it's between plus and minus 50 degrees of latitude, which extends up into Canada and down almost to the tip of South America.

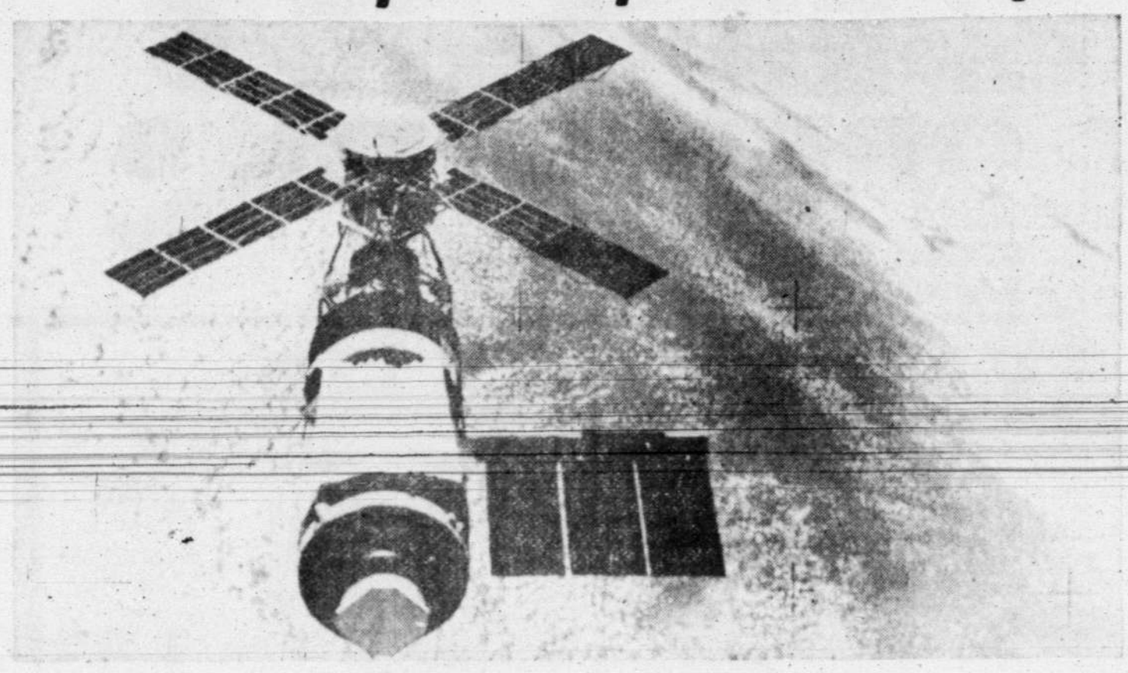
"Between those limits it can come down any place. And we can't predict where until the final day."

Actually, the $2.3 billion spacecraft will begin breaking up about 60 miles above the Earth's surface. About 500 pieces — half weighing over 10 pounds with the biggest about 5,000 pounds — will shower an area 3,000 miles to 4,000 miles long and about 50 to 100 miles wide, according to Edwards.

He said the pieces of debris are expected to land about eight to 10 miles apart, and it's hoped they'll strike water, which makes up about three quarters of the Earth's surface.

And if they don't?

"The probability of a single casualty is one in 150," figures Kaplan. "It's expected to crash somewhere between the 50th parallels where 95 percent of the world's population is located. Moscow is the only major capital in the world that's not in its path."



NASA GIVES UP ON SAVING SKYLAB

Edwards, too, says it's possible the predicted re-entry will be across a densely-populated area, perhaps Europe. He concedes there are recognized hazards. But he says NASA doesn't think they're very great.

According to both men, scientists originally expected the spacecraft to remain aloft into the 1980s. By that time, scientists figured, refinements in the space shuttle program would make it possible to boost it up to a higher orbit where it could enjoy extended life.

Instead, according to Edwards, "solar activity, known as sun spots, was more active than expected, causing the atmosphere to rise up further. This in turn made more drag, speeding up Skylab's decay."

Kaplan, a private pilot, spends his nights with three assistants trying to better understand the spacecraft's behavior as it orbits the earth 190 statute miles away — it's lifespan on each trip being shortened by the ever-increasing atmospheric drag.

Most of the time, he says, is spent modeling the dynamics and motion of Skylab through computer simulations. He's also working on a computer-generated animation of its motion — "like a Walt Disney cartoon to demonstrate what we think is happening up there."

Some 1,000 miles away, scientists at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., also are studying the spacecraft as it logs the final laps of its fatal journey.

"We're still in the midst of developing the whole scheme of things," reports Herman Thomason, director of the center's systems analysis and integration laboratory. "We have quite a ways to go yet."

Each week, the North American Air Defense Command provides NASA with the latest Skylab fixes and with updated predictions on when it will come down.

TRUTH IS CONSISTENT

Perhaps one of the reasons that false teachers flee instead of trying to defend their doctrine (Prov.28:1) when a teacher of truth tries to engage them in a public discussion of their differences, is that truth is consistent. One in error can be asked some questions and soon be put to shame because of his error. For example, there are many today who teach we are to go by the Old Testament. When they are asked why they don't have ANIMAL SACRIFICES (Lev.16) like those did years ago who were under it, they are put to shame and shown to be inconsistent. When some are asked why they have mechanical or instrumental music in worship today they often say that David in the O.T. had it-1Chr.23:5. When asked why they don't have eighteen wives like David had (2Sam.5;13;15:16), since they don't believe in polygamy today, they are shown to be inconsistent. When some today teach you have to OBEY Jesus to be saved and are asked WHY then doesn't one have to BE BAPTIZED since Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved . . ." (Mk.16:16), they are shown to be inconsistent. TRUTH IS CONSISTENT with itself. If something is not consistent, it is not truth. Neighbor, to teach any part of the O.T. as binding on man today because the people back then were under it, you need to teach all of it is binding today. If we do have to follow the N.T., then we must find out what it teaches and follow all of it-2Tim.3:16f. We must respect God and obey Him-1Jn.2:3-4. David Bonner, preacher, church of Christ, 1814 Buchanan (One block off Kemp)

NRC orders nuclear plants to lower pressure settings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered operators of nuclear power plants like the one at Three Mile Island to lower the pressure settings by which the plants shut down automatically in the face of a malfunction.

The order Saturday also told utilities with those types of reactors to better train operators to respond to certain types of emergency situations. The NRC said the requirements are intended "to help assure that an accident similar to the one March 28 at the Three Mile Island facility does not happen at their facilities."

By The Associated Press

More rain, tornadoes and high tides have assaulted the flood-weary South, and the spreading Red River is still rising in the Upper Midwest.

But the National Weather Service says water will begin receding around some Mississippi towns that have borne the worst flooding.

The Pearl River at Jackson, Miss., will "continue to fall" unless there is more rain than anticipated, and at Monticello, Miss., the Pearl will "continue to fall slowly," National Weather Service forecaster Toby Landers said Sunday. He said that at Columbia the Pearl has just about crested and will probably begin receding in the next day or so.

An estimated 23,000 persons living along the Pearl have been forced to flee their homes.

And at least four tornadoes touched down in Louisiana Sunday. One demolished the midway of the Crawfish Festival in Chalmette, a New Orleans suburb, and injured two persons slightly.

A 6-year-old boy drowned over the weekend in Louisiana when he fell into a rain-swollen Baton Rouge bayou.

The toll in property damage from the flooding continues to rise.

Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch estimated damage at between $900 million and $1 billion in his state.

At Columbia, Miss., where about half the 8,000 residents have already abandoned their homes, Mayor Robert Bourne has ordered schools closed, told merchants to keep only minimum numbers of clerks in their stores and asked residents to stay home.

Other Mississippians also battled floodwaters Sunday, as high tides pounded the Gulf Coast. Harrison County civil defense director Wade Guice said winds gusted to 50 mph Sunday, piling up tides in the back bay of Biloxi on the coast.

Elsewhere, Natchez police dispatcher David Robinson said 6.9 inches of rain fell by 5:30 p.m. Sunday in the Mississippi River city.

In the Upper Midwest, the Air Force flew 450,000 sandbags Sunday to East Grand Forks, Minn., where volunteers were fighting to hold back the Red River, and another 460,000 bags were on their way from Offut Air Force Base in Nebraska.

The river at East Grand Forks is expected to crest Tuesday at 48.99 feet, the National Weather Service said.

New Hampshire hit by minor earth temblor

CANDIA, N.H. (AP) — The second minor earth tremor in less than a week shook parts of southern New Hampshire, but little, if any, damage occurred, officials said.

The tremor Sunday night registered 2.9 on the Richter scale and was centered just northeast of Manchester, according to Dr. Edward Chiburis, assistant director of Boston's Weston Observatory.

He said that "2.9 is what we term very small, nothing serious at all."

Chiburis said shock waves were recorded on his equipment about 7:06 p.m.

"People said it sounded like a loud explosion," Chiburis said. "There are some unconfirmed reports that some pictures rattled and perhaps fell off the wall."

Residents of Candia, Raymond and Hooksett felt the tremor and began calling police and the news media.

"We got about 30 or 35 calls," said Donna St. Onge, wife of Candia's police chief, who answered the calls. "They were coming in as fast as I could write."

Mrs. St. Onge said most of the callers reported hearing loud explosions and feeling the ground shake.

Officials said Sunday's quake was not related to a tremor which shook a wide area of Maine and New Hampshire last Tuesday.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area.

Junk food impresses British actress

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — Miss Delia Lindsay from England who messes up marriages in the Broadway show "Bedroom Farce," would like it known that she considers American restaurant prices very fair and not at all outrageous.

"In London," she says, "a meal with wine costs $35."

Delia, a very healthy-looking girl of 33, says American prices haven't scared her. "From eating your delicious junk food, I have gained half a stone." (About seven pounds.) "How can anyone not eat your delicious French fries?

"You serve such enormous helpings and have these superb doggy bags. Your meals are really too much to eat so you have to take some home. And then you have these wonderful diners, your delis, with gorgeous sandwiches."

Delia, who plays an "emotional disaster area" in the Alan Ayckbourn comedy, has found something she can't like — joggers.

"Hundreds of them running around the reservoir!" she said.

"Contorted faces, mixed-up personalities. People blindly following it like a religion. It's become their god. On Sundays you see the American family out with their shorts on, jogging. Sundays for me are for lying in bed.

ROBIN (MORK) WILLIAMS hefted a bottle of soda at the Copa and told the crowd, "I always order Perrier when I want to blow a dollar on water."

SHOW BIZ QUIZ: In what film was Erich Weiss played by Bernard Schwartz? Ans. to Friday's: The first Oscars for acting went to Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A sensible woman tells how she chooses her show biz jobs: "I call my bank. If the money is low, I go to work. If not, I go dancing."

An economist, says the cynic, is a man who claims to know more about money than people who have some. That's earl, brother.

Refugees bound for United States

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Seventy-six refugees from the freighter Hai Hong left for the United States today, leaving only a 12-year-old boy of the more than 2,450 Vietnamese who arrived off the west coast of Malaysia last Nov. 14.

The boy will be sent to Hong Kong to join his mother there.

The United States has taken 896 of the Hai Hong people. The rest went to West Germany, France, Canada, Switzerland and other countries.

Nuke plant regulation hearings set

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — State Rep. Charles Morgan said Sunday a House committee he heads up will begin investigating possible regulation of nuclear facilities in the wake of a nuclear mishap in Pennsylvania.

Morgan, a Democrat from Prague, said hearings before the House Natural Resources Committee will begin this summer.

He said the recent mishap at the Three-Mile Island reactor caused him to rethink the nuclear issue in Oklahoma. He said he understands federal officials expect states to take an active part in regulating nuclear power, but "we don't have the facilities or expertise at the this point to do any effective regulation ourselves."

Oklahoma

Morgan said the probe will not be "a witch-hunt" and he does not at this point want to stop the proposed Black Fox now being constructed near Inola.

He also said a select group of legislators will probably take a trip to the site of the Pennslyvania mishap to study that situation.

Bellmon renews no-run pledge

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Retiring U.S. Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., has reaffirmed his promise not to run for reelection Sunday and said he doubts U.S. Rep. Mickey Edwards will succeed him in the Senate office.

Bellmon discounted chances of a successful bid by Edwards, considered by many to be the most likely Republican candidate for the 1980 election.

Earlier, Edwards, from Oklahoma City, said he was "99 percent sure" he would run for the office. Later rumors among Republican leaders indicated Edwards had decided against the race, but the Congressman denied he had made up his mind.

Bellmon gave no reason for believing Edwards would not seek the office and would not comment about his choice of a successor

Fact-finding necessary for illegal alien talks

MIAMI (AP) — Several months of fact-finding will be necessary before a presidential commission can conclude talks with Mexico about the wave of Mexican immigrants illegally entering the United States, says the chairman, former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew.

"Almost everybody agrees there is a lack of reliable information about how many people are crossing the border and how long they stay," Askew said Sunday after returning from Mexico City.

Askew met last week with President Jose Lopez Portillo and other high Mexican officials, with whom he said he "opened channels of communication" in preparation for talks later this year. He called the meeting "very useful."

Hunt for crewman discontinued

Tanker blast probe resumes

NEDERLAND, Texas (AP) — A safety inspection team resumed its investigation today into Thursday night's explosion that blew open the midsection of a Liberian tanker in the Neches River, killing two men.

The Coast Guard discontinued its search for a crewman who was seen moments after the flast, dangling from a rope over the side of the blazing ship. Other crewmen said the man couldn't swim.

The body of another crewman was recovered Friday morning on the deck of the splintered ship.

The 700-foot tanker Seatiger apparently was struck by lightning as it unloaded crude oil at a Sun Oil Co. dock.

"It's still under investigation," said Coast Guard duty officer Marvin Pontiff, "but lightning is as good a guess of what happened as any."

Besides the two killed, 32 persons were treated at area hospitals, 15 of them injured seriously enough to require hospitalization.

The explosion peeled back metal and caused a small portion of the 24,500 gallons on board to leak into the Neches River. The ship now is resting in about 40 feet of water, although Coast Guard Lt. Kim Zigler said the top still is visible.

Sun Oil Co. vice president John Shaw said the Seatiger was manned by an Italian crew and leased to Gulf Oil Co.

Cuevas trial defense rests

HOUSTON (AP) — The defense rested its case today in the capital murder trial of Ignacio Cuevas after reporting three former Texas prison inmates sought as witnesses could not be located or had refused to testify.

Will Gray, chief defense lawyer, told

Texas

State District Judge Miron Love two of the former inmates could not be located and the third refused to appear as a witness. All three were among the hostages taken when three convicts began an 11-day siege at the Huntsville unit of the Texas Department of Corrections in 1974.

On Thursday, Gray had asked Love to recess the trial until today so investigators could try to locate the three former inmates.

"This will be the only delay, I expect you to have your witnesses here by then (Monday)," Love told Gray.

Gray replied "We have private investigators looking for them and we are sure we can have them here by Monday."

Copter crash cause may be found soon

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The cause of a crack in the tail rotor blade of the helicopter that crashed and killed three passengers last week may be discovered in two to six weeks, says the chief investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board.

Initial lab reports show the blade broke off because of metal fatigue, a weakness that causes metal to snap at a point of stress, according to the board. Vibrations from the crippled helicopter also caused the rear gearbox to break off just before the crash.

"It's clear now that one of the tail rotor blades broke," said Leslie Kampfchror, chief investigator for the NTSB. "What we're trying to deal with now is why it broke. They're designed not to break, but something caused it to break. Finding that is going to be more difficult."

Wednesday's crash of the Sikorsky S61, just after takeoff from Newark International Airport, killed three passengers and injured 12. It also prompted the Federal Aviation Administration to order inspections of a dozen such models throughout the nation.

The helicopter's four tail rotor blades that did not break and the tail rotor gearbox have been sent to the NTSB's labs in Washington.

Kampfchror said the cockpit voice recorder has produced little new information.

"We did discover that the crew knew about nine seconds before impact that they were missing their tail rotor assembly," Kampfchror said. "Other than that, the tape only corroborated what we'd already pieced together."

Of those injured, only one, Richard Glover of Sherman Oaks, Calif., remained in critical condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Elizabeth Sunday night.

The pilot, Lee Richman, and co-pilot Les Carter were in "stable but guarded condition" at College Hospital.

Gas well blaze goes out by itself

INTERCOASTAL CITY, La. (AP) — A natural gas well in the Gulf of Mexico that burned for 18 hours before extinguishing itself caused no injuries and produced no pollution, said a spokesman for McMoRan Offshore Exploration Co.

The searing flames melted the derrick, officials said.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said gas stopped spewing from the well about 10:30 p.m. Saturday and that the fire soon afterward went out. The blowout occured about 4:30 a.m. Saturday on a well being drilled at a depth of 13,785 feet from a rig located in 25 feet of water about 5½ miles offshore. About three dozen workers were on the rig, but all escaped before the fire ignited, the spokesman said.

Russian poet recites at Kennedy Center

MOSCOW (AP) — Poet Andrei Voznesensky says he will leave Moscow Tuesday to give a poetry reading at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

Officials of the Moscow Writers Union at first turned down Voznesensky's application to visit the United States, but the decision was reversed last week.

Voznesensky was one of several writers who received a government warning after trying to publish an unofficial journal called the Metropol. Since the warning, he has not been allowed to publish.

Top hunters given awards at Mangum

MANGUM, Okla. (Special) — The biggest snake caught here in the 14th annual Mangum Rattlesnake Derby sponsored by the Mangum Chamber of Commerce was caught by Bob Long of Roosevelt, Okla.

Long's largest snake measured 74¾ inches and he received a cash prize of $75 and a trophy. Trophies and prize money were awarded in most events to the top three winners.

Long also caught the snakes that claimed the second- and third-place prizes in the "largest snake" category.

In the "most pounds" category, Raymond Whitehurst of Mangum won first place with 132 pounds of snakes. He also won first place in the "most snakes" competition capturing 108 of the reptiles.

Whitehurst won $100 for turning in the heaviest sack of rattlesnakes. Only trophies were awarded in the "most snakes" category.

John Townsend of Muldrow, Okla., won second in the "most pounds" category with 125¾ pounds of snakes. He won $60.

The shortest snake was caught by Jerry Struck of Mangum. His shortest snake was 15¼ inches and he won $15 and a trophy.

There were 278 registered hunters in the three-day event, and the number of snakes caught was lower than usual. About 600 snakes were caught. In previous hunts, as many as 1,500 snakes have been taken from the countryside around Mangum.

From 10,000 to 15,000 spectators showed up to watch the hunt, the largest crowd ever.

More than 300 dealers and merchants set up booths in the downtown area around the square creating a giant flea-market atmosphere.

The snake pit was located in downtown Mangum, and one restaurant specialized in snake steaks during the hunt.

Ascension Pineda was crowned Miss Rattlesnake Derby Queen. She is 17 and a senior at Mangum High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otilio Pineda of Mangum.

Lulu Roman of the "Hee Haw" television show cast was the featured entertainer at a concert Saturday evening in First Baptist Church.

A country and western dance was held in the old high school gymnasium after the concert.

Sunday church services were held Sunday morning on the Greer County courthouse lawn in the town square where the prizes and awards were presented to the winners later in the day.

Public's support needed, says publishers' head

NEW YORK (AP) — The 93rd annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association opens today with its chairman saying public support must be mustered to reaffirm free press rights guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Allen H. Neuharth, chairman and president of the ANPA, said in a statement issued during the weekend that the U.S. Supreme Court, in a recent decision, was "setting itself above the Constitution by its lack of sensitivity to a free society's need for a full and robust discussion of public issues."

Neuharth's statement was prompted by the Supreme Court's ruling last Wednesday that litigants in libel suits can force journalists to answer questions about their thoughts in making editorial decisions.

"While the impact of this latest Supreme Court decision may not be great, it is one more piece of the pattern of restraint which the current court is imposing upon the people's right to know," Neuharth said.

He said a Louis Harris public opinion poll to be released today would show strong support for the press on confidentiality and other news coverage issues.

"Many, especially in the courts as well as in the press, may be surprised by the degree of public approval the press has on controversial issues and that is the reason this ANPA convention will be dedicated to developing greater public understanding on the stakes involved," he said.

World's Homeless: Part 2

The Year of the Child

REFUGEE CHILDREN PEER FROM MAKESHIFT QUARTERS IN SALISBURY, RHODESIA
...where 2,500 have fled their homes because of fighting in their country (AP photo)

HOMELESS HMONGS — A grandmother holds the hand of her grandchild (top photo) in a northern Thailand refugee camp, where 11,000 people are lodged, 90 percent of them Hmong tribes people who have fled Laos. Kia Vue, a four-year-old Hmong child, (bottom photo)reached a Thailand refugee camp by swimming the Mekong River with her parents. She suffers from parasitic infection and malnutrition. (AP photos)

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Special Correspondents Peter Arnett and Eddie Adams, a prize-winning reporter-photographer team, traveled 45,000 miles over four continents to document the plight of the world's 10.5 million refugees. This series of stories tells of the despairing people of the Fourth World, unwelcome where they are, unwanted where they want to go.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

MENDOZA, Argentina (AP) — They live with their parents on four continents where their world is usually ringed by barbed wire and ruled by poverty.

Along the steep path of a camp in northern Thailand, a group astride a rickety three-wheeled cart bears down noisily on a pair of visitors. Two others run by, giggling, a live chicken in their capture.

A tousled trio in flowing Moslem robes chants loudly from the Koran as elders walk past their crude slum home in Djibouti. They, too, break into giggles when a stranger nears.

In the northern African mountains where the sun beats down harshly on their rocky abodes, two curly haired charmers in gaily printed dresses need no encouragement to smile.

Their smiles light a sad world. Half of the globe's 10.5 million homeless — refugees from wars and persecution — are children. They face a bleak future, unless their parents can find a place to settle.

Fittingly, the United Nations has declared 1979 the International Year of the Child as the organization steps up its program for refugee relief.

"Children feel the refugee condition more sharply, they are less able than adults to bear hunger, unhygenic conditions, ailments, cold or heat and the lack of shelter or medicine," reads a U.N. pamphlet.

That means, simply, they get sick and die.

This was all too evident in Bangladesh, where 200,000 Moslems had fled last Spring to escape alleged religious persecution in Burma. By year's end, according to U.N. officials, malnutrition, congested living quarters and disease had taken the lives of 6,739 children.

A country away, in northern Thailand, 4-year-old Kia Vue was found sitting awkwardly on a grass mat covering a wooden hospital cot. Her stomach was distended grotesquely, a result of parasitic infection and malnutrition.

Thirteen children had died at the small Nongkhai clinic in the past three weeks. Doctors feared little Kia Vue would be the next.

The little girl, her eyes big and shining, had hardly murmured in the three weeks since they had crossed the Mekong River from Laos, her mother said.

"Many arrive here after 20 days on the trail, and the children seem to stay alive until they reach here," said Larry Persons, a field representative for the Christian and Missionary Alliance. "Then they die."

But the needs of homeless children go beyond food and medicine.

Here in Mendoza, Argentina, Maria Nela Munoz, who is 5, peered solemnly through the torn mosquito netting hanging over a window of her shabby little house.

"I want to go to school," she said in Spanish, "but the other children don't want me."

Maria was born in exile in Argentina. Her parents had fled Chile several years ago after the left-wing Allende government was overthrown. Still she is a stranger to her schoolmates.

Just down the road, Anna Morales, 13, posed unsmilingly for a portrait.

"They hate us here," she said. "We do so much want to leave Argentina."

The Morales family has been unable to obtain local residency papers since arriving from Chile four years ago. No other country has offered them admittance either.

"My 15-year-old Rosa is getting psychiatric care because she is several classes behind her real age level at school," said her mother. Rosa blinked sadly through her thick glasses.

In Cypress, the Ioannou family, which was among 200,000 Greek Cypriots displaced in the 1974 war, also knows frustration.

"We discovered that our daughter was spending a lot of time at a vantage point overlooking Famagusta where she could see our old home," said Floria Ioannou. "She was so morose, we had to send her away from here to the capital at Nicosia."

But now the family has found that their youngest daughter, Elena, 13, is similarly haunted by their lost home.

"She writes school essays about what life used to be like before," Mrs. Ioannou said. "We can't get her on any other subject."

Many refugee children don't have time to fret. They inherit a legacy of hard work from an early age.

Ibrahim Hassan's eight children worked with him tending his flock of sheep in the hills of Somalia before the family fled across the border to Djibouti in 1977 and life in the Al Sabieh refugee camp.

Hassin Hassan, 11, said he had never been to school.

"I don't have time to play because I have to help my Dad here," he said. His father has rented a camel to haul loads of wood and water, wandering back and forth over the camp's rocky paths.

Work is also the lifestyle of the Yao and Hmong children in a camp in Nan, Thailand.

Moua Zang, 9, wearing a cap with red pompoms and the gaily decorated vest of the Yao people, used to help his mother harvest the opium poppies in Laos. But his father was killed in the war and the family fled. Now he helps his mother weave scarves and bags for the tourist trade in far away Bangkok.

Do refugee children have any fun?

Few camps visited by The Associated Press in four continents had even radios, not to mention television. Many of the children in Africa and Asia had never been to a movie.

Toys were rarely seen. Two Chinese children at Nongkhai, Thailand, who owned dolls, clutched them possessively. One had never removed the plastic wrapper for fear her treasure might become soiled.

Confined inside their camps, with only infrequent opportunities for schools and few organized games, the refugee children rely on their own imagination. They squat in the dust, scribbling with hard sticks, using small stones as playthings. They chase each other through the alleyways and twisted paths of their small worlds.

The saddest of all are the orphans, those who became separated from their parents in the panicked flight from war, or who survived attacks on the long treks to safety while their parents perished.

An American diplomat, interviewing applicants for U.S. immigration papers in a packed refugee camp on Bidong Island off the coast of Malaysia, met with an 11-year-old candidate.

"She was wringing her hands while I talked with her," the official said. "She said she was the eldest of seven children and that her family could afford to send only her from Vietnam.

"So there she was, the hope for the future of her family, a slim 11-year-old with a big burden on her back."

TOMORROW: Go Away, Stranger

Soviets, Cubans said aiding Vietnamese

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thai military officials say Soviet and Cuban officers are advising the Vietnamese and pro-Hanoi Cambodian government troops that apparently have ousted Premier Pol Pot's army on the run.

Nearly 50,000 Cambodians crossed a 6-mile-long stretch of border into Thailand in a mass weekend exodus. Among them were thousands of Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge troops and more thousands of civilians, including hundreds of women and children.

Thai border officials said the Cambodians headed south along the frontier inside Thailand, apparently planning to seek refuge in the rugged mountains of southwestern Cambodia.

The exodus indicated Vietnamese troops and soldiers of President Heng Samrin's pro-Vietnamese government in Phnon Penh were inflicting a heavy blow to the remnants of the pro-Chinese Pol Pot forces in western Cambodia along the Thai border. Vietnam, eager to end the costly conflict it initiated with a Christmas Day invasion of Cambodia, began a major offensive last month to wipe out the guerrillas in western Cambodia before the rainy season starts.

"The remarkable thing is that the hard core of the Pol Pot people have held together," one European diplomat here said. "But they are alienated from the masses in Cambodia, and when one of them gets killed there won't be others to replace him."

Senior Thai officers in Bangkok and at the border said both Soviet and Cuban military experts were advising the Vietnamese and Camodian government forces. A Western analyst said there was "extensive circumstantial evidence" of the Soviet presence and possibly of Cuban involvement, too.

The Voice of Democratic Kampuchea, Pol Pot's radio station in China, has frequently claimed that Khmer Rouge troops were killing Soviet and Cuban soldiers in various parts of Cambodia. Some analysts were skeptical of these claims, contending there was no proof and that the Vietnamese army, after its long and successful war against the United States, did not need foreign troops.

Volkswagen job doesn't bug her

Sandy Bushfield, 22, spends a lot of time looking at cars and dealing with car owners. She is service adviser (a kind of liaison between mechanics and customers) at Volkswagen where she says, "I try to diagnose problems, advise people what work they should have done, and then I call them and give them estimates. I give state inspections and test drive cars. I really like the job — it's challenging."

Small and pretty with a smattering of freckles across her nose, Mrs. Bushfield wears blue jeans and a white "uniform" jacket as she works. "I guess what got me started was my grandpa used to own a garage in Iowa Park. I always loved to work on cars and get dirty and all that stuff," she laughs. "I like this job because I don't have to look at four walls all day. I'm not penned in. Someday, I'd like to go to school and learn more about Volkswagen, and work my way up to a shop foreman instead of just an adviser."

Men she works with are friendly and don't mind the fact that she's the only woman in the shop. "They give me a hard time," she smiles, "but they handle it real good." Customers, on the other hand, often don't trust the young, female voice who asks if she can help them. "When I answer their question, it kind of shocks them," she says.

When the white jacket comes off at the end of the day, Mrs. Bushfield, a native Wichitan (with a definite Texas accent), becomes a housewife, mother of 3½-year-old Cooper, cook and plaster hobbiest. She and Cooper also enjoy fishing on their in-laws' farm. "Cooper is the only 3-year-old I know who will sit there with his pole whether they're biting or not," she laughs. The Bushfields live at 705 Polk.

Blind musician has confidence in ability

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Princeton University senior Peter Altschul marches to the beat of his own drum.

He goes where the beat takes him — whether it's on the football field during half-time, on a stage with the university band or accompanying Princeton's glee club.

It's not an easy task. Peter Altschul has been blind since birth.

"One of the myths people have about blind people is that they're good at music because they have good ears," he says. "But I don't think being blind has helped me. Music is a talent that has to be worked on and developed."

And, adds Altschul, "Music is where my talent lies."

The percussionist marches with Princeton's band in between the halves of football games. One of the band's managers, who is responsible for equipment, guides him by the elbow to keep him in formation.

"On the whole, it's very easy," he says. "It's a very loosely knit organization. We form things like blobs, very simple things, on the field."

Altschul also plays the organ, piano, tympani and the snare drum, but he considers himself more than just another percussionist.

After he completes graduate school — which he plans to attend after his Princeton graduation — he says he would like to teach music, compose or, perhaps, do arrangements for a rock 'n' roll band.

The Pleasantville, N.Y., native says he expects to encounter some prejudice in the professional world, as he says he has encountered some bias in academia.

"I've always been told that for a blind person to get what he wants he has to be better than 90 percent of all sighted people," he says. "I think I have a reasonably good shot at doing these things."

He adds, "There are some good blind musicians."

Altschul says he came to Princeton because he "wanted a relatively small college with a good liberal arts department and what I thought was a good music department."

Princeton, he says, is "probably one of the better places for the handicapped. It's not that big a campus, there's less ground to learn and many buildings have elevators and wheelchair ramps."

He says the administration at the Ivy League campus has been "very good" in helping him to pick courses and obtain texts on reel-to-reel tape.

Copelin's Corner

Disaster brings out special side in people

By CARROLL COPELIN
Staff Writer

I don't know about you, but I'm proud to be a Wichitan.

Everywhere you go these days, you pick up countless stories of courage, selflessness and just plain neighborliness. Take the case of two of the city's largest department stores, Perkins and McClurkens. For the rest of the week following the Tuesday tornado, not a delivery was made. Store owners assigned their fleets of delivery trucks to employees whose homes had been damaged, and the trucks were used to haul belongings to safety.

It was probably the hardest some of those delivery drivers had worked in their entire careers, but they got the job done.

By contrast, the Corner heard of one store whose employees were told to consider the time off they were having to take as their vacation. It just goes to show that while most Wichitans are great folks, we still have a few not so desirables. Incidently, the store owner who issued that order does not live here.

Still on the subject of storm stories, there's the case of a rather prominent gentleman here whose apartment was badly damaged by the tornado but whose beer bar escaped harm.

It was housed in his garage, and the day following the storm provided the only safe drinking liquid in his block. By actual count, 125 draw beers were pulled from his beer keg that day. There were times when his garage looked like a Salvation Army disaster canteen because of the traffic.

Mike Marks of Popular Furniture suspended all his firm's deliveries and sent his trucks out into the stricken area to help victims of the twister.

This is the stuff of which Wichitans are made. When someone needs help, there's always someone else who is ready to offer aid.

One of the beautiful sights around town these days is seeing successful business and professional people driving cars that looked like they finished second in a demolition derby. No one seems to mind, and it's even become something of a status symbol. A kind of "I was in it, where were you?" type thing.

Scratching in public is now not only acceptable but another "in" thing. This indicates to others that you have insulation embedded in your clothing, and the only way this could have happened was for your clothes to have been in the tornado. Another little symbol of saying, "I was there."

But back to the subject of helping.

Farm Editor Joe Brown got a call the other day from a secretary at the 4-H complex thanking him for calling out there the day of the tornado and telling her she had better go home.

She took his warning to heart and went home — only to find herself a short time later directly in the path of the twister. Brown asked her if everything was all right, and she replied, "Well, I guess so. I got blowed away, but at least I was at home. If I had stayed at work, it would have missed me."

Now Brown is pondering whether he should continue to try to be a good Samaritan, or just give up and mind his own business. Knowing Brown, it's difficult to imagine his doing the latter.

In fact, our farm editor is just like most Wichitans. If he sees someone who needs help, he'll drop everything and offer his assistance. It's not the weather or the scenery that makes Wichita Falls a great place to live — it's the people, and don't you ever forget it.

Motherly women get You Woo's goat

REDMOND, Wash. (AP) — You Woo is a 72-year-old stump farmer who is content with his goats, geese, board-and-can furniture and outdoor refrigerator.

He says he has only one great worry in life: that some kind-hearted woman will try to improve his lot by moving in.

Woo lives in a cramped and creaky homemade house on Union Hill near Redmond. About a year ago a story was published nationwide about his circumstances — how in the 1930s he came to the United States from China, built a home out of scrounged lumber, saved enough money to bring his young bride over, sent her the money, and never got a reply. She didn't even acknowledge the money order.

But that tale brought bundles of mail, including letters from women who either thought he had a big farm or who seemed to want to mother Woo.

Except for his animals, Woo lives alone and doesn't want anyone coming in to clean his house. He knows where everything is and can find it — in due time.

Rangers

Even Lyle couldn't avert loss

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a scene the New York fans had been anticipating. Sparky Lyle with his poison pen and wicked slider facing the good guys in the pinstripes, especially Reggie Jackson and Graig Nettles.

The roar began as Lyle climbed into the bullpen car beyond the center field fence in the seventh inning. It grew as he stepped out onto the grass behind shortstop and the Bronx cheers reached a peak when his name was announced as the fourth pitcher ... for the Texas Rangers.

Box in scoreboard

The Yankee Stadium organist often played "Pomp and Circumstance" when Sparky Lyle, king of baseball's relief pitchers with 194 saves, strode to the mound during his seven seasons in a New York uniform. Rarely did he hear anything but cheers.

This was different. The boos outweighed the applause thanks to Lyle's best-selling book "The Bronx Zoo," a so-called "astonishing inside look" at the Yankees' incredible 1978 season. And Lyle had returned to try, as he promised, and break owner George Steinbrenner's heart "like he broke mine."

Unfortunately, the game was not a heart-breaker. The Yankees led 4-1 on Bucky Dent's two-run single in the second inning and Graig Nettles' two-run homer in the third en route to a 5-1 victory. Ron Guidry rarely blows that kind of a lead.

The Yankees all heard the Bronx cheers for Lyle.

"It was very low of the people in New York," said Guidry, who fashioned a six-hit, four-strikeout effort.

Thurman Munson, who doubled, was on second base as Lyle faced Jackson, whose fabled ego took a pounding in the book. Jackson looked at a third strike and gave umpire Dick Nelson's call a lousy review.

Next came Nettles, one of the book's main men for allegedly committing a deliberate error in an exhibition game against the New York Mets last season.

Nettles swung half-heartedly and missed two sliders, took one for a ball and then lined a run-scoring single to center, his first four-hit game since Sept. 29, 1976.

Astros

Houston off to best start ever

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston pitcher Joe Niekro isn't surprised the Astros are off to their best start in the club's 18-year history.

"I think we believed in ourselves when we left spring training," said Niekro, who combined with Joaquin Andujar and Joe Sambito on a four-hitter in the Astros' 3-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday.

"We knew we had a pretty good club. We just had to go out there and prove it."

Tim Foli's eighth-inning error allowed Craig Reynolds to score from second base, snapping a 2-2 tie and sending Houston to its seventh victory in its last eight games.

The fielding miscue marked the third straight game the Pirates had lost as a result of a late-inning mistake.

"When you're playing well and you've got a good team, it's easier to take advantage of those mistakes," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon, whose club has won 12 of its first 16 games.

"I've seen teams go on longer streaks than this, but this is the first time something like this has happened in the 3½ years I've been here," Virdon said.

Reynolds collected his second double of the game with one out in the eighth off losing pitcher John Candelaria, 0-1. After Cesar Cedeno was intentionally walked, Bob Watson grounded to Foli, who let the ball roll up his arm into shallow left field.

Cedeno's first-inning sacrifice fly and Watson's run-scoring double in the sixth accounted for Houston's other two runs as the Pirates dropped their sixth straight game.

Box in scoreboard

Andujar, who came on in relief of Niekro in the eighth, pickd up his third victory of the season without a loss. Sambito retired the last two pirates in the ninth to collect his second save of the season.

Pittsburgh's first run came off Niekro in the fourth. Phil Garner led off the inning with a double, moved to second on Willie Stargell's grounder and scored on a passed ball charged to Houston catcher Bruce Bochy.

Spurs sit in the driver's seat, but Moe wary of an accident

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Doug Moe isn't taking anything for granted.

"Yeah, we're in the driver's seat," said Moe, coach of the San Antonio Spurs, "but we can still have an accident."

Or to put it another way, a 3-1 lead in a best-of-seven playoff series — even with the home-court advantage for two of the three possible remaining games — is no guarantee of victory.

"The biggest thing we have to guard against is overconfidence. We can't afford that," warned Moe, whose Spurs took command of their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference semifinal series by edging the Philadelphia 76ers 115-112 Sunday. The Spurs will try to wrap it up at home Thursday night.

Moe's words also apply to the two Washingtons, city and state, whose teams also lead their respective series 3-1.

The Washington Bullets, who snapped Atlanta's home-court winning streak at 17 games Friday night, did it to the Hawks at home again Sunday, beating them 120-118 in overtime. They'll try to close out the series at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., Tuesday night.

"This loss might deflate a normal team, but the Hawks aren't a normal team," said Washington forward Bobby Dandridge, who scored 31 points Sunday. "You don't know what to expect from them. They are the kind of team that you just can't relax on."

Seattle took a 3-1 lead over the Los Angeles Lakers with a 117-115 decision Sunday at the Forum in Los Angeles behind 53 points from guards Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson, who have plagued the Lakers all series.

With the Kingdome committed to a baseball game, the Sonics will try to end the series Wednesday night at the smaller Seattle Center Coliseum. That was their home court prior to this season, and because of its low roof and high noise factor, it was always a tough place for visiting teams to win.

The home team has won every game so far in the other Western Conference semifinal, with the Phoenix Suns grabbing a 2-1 lead with a 108-93 rout of the Kansas City Kings on Sunday. That series resumes Wednesday in Kansas City.

George Gervin, the two-time NBA scoring champion, netted 32 points to lead San Antonio past Philadelphia. At the other end of the floor, the Spurs' Larry Kenon limited Julius Erving, who had scored 39 points in the Sixers' only series victory Friday night, to just 15 points on 6-for-17 shooting.

In fact, Kenon took Erving right out of the game. Dr. J played just 31 minutes, and Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham explained, "I didn't use Julius more because he couldn't get going."

Sports

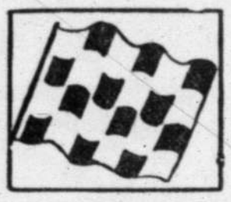
Mike Green's jumper snapped a 90-90 tie with 7:13 remaining and the Spurs led the rest of the way. Gervin had 12 points in the final period, including a pair of free throws at the buzzer after Philadelphia had closed to within one.

Rookie guard Maurice Cheeks topped the Sixers with a career-high 33 points.

Dandridge was the hero of the Bullets' victory, scoring 15 of his points in the final period including a running one-hander that tied the game at 107-107 with seven seconds to play.

Atlanta guard Eddie Johnson was the goat, twice. He wasted too much time dribbling the ball and the Hawks were unable to get off a shot before the buzzer ending regulation play, then he missed a shot that would have tied the game at the end of the overtime after Kevin Grevey had helped the Bullets to the lead with a pair of 25-footers.

CART wants to know why USAC rejected six teams



INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Championship Auto Racing Teams gave Speedway president Joe Cloutier until 5 p.m. tonight to reply to a telegram asking clarification of the U.S. Auto Club's rejection of Indianapolis 500 entries by six CART teams.

If Cloutier does not reply, or if his answer does not satisfy the leaders of the breakaway racing organization, "...we will be compelled to resort to our available remedies," said CART president Pat Patrick.

He did not say what those remedies might be.

Patrick, whose own racing team was one of the six singled out by USAC on Friday, said he wants to know who runs the Indy 500—USAC or the Speedway.

"We've got to find out who we're fighting before we start shooting."

It is USAC's contention, however, that it has the authority to accept or reject entries based on its position as sanctioning body for the Indianapolis race.

Cloutier was unavailable for comment on the telegram, sent Saturday night from Atlanta, where the CART owners and drivers were preparing for Sunday's Twin Dixie race won by Johnny Rutherford.

The telegram to Cloutier read:

"First, we must know whether USAC is acting in behalf of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with regard to the above referenced entries for the 500-mile International Sweepstakes.

"If USAC is acting in your behalf with regard to these entries, we must assume until notified otherwise that the entry blanks as submitted are still pending with the Speedway, since it is our understanding that the right to refuse any entry is reserved to the Speedway.

"If USAC is acting in your behalf with regard to those entries, we must request immediate clarification of the grounds of the rejection for the entries. Since some 25 CART entries have apparently been accepted and a select few refused, none of which are USAC members, we must immediately know the basis of this distinction."

The six CART teams, representing 19 entries, were turned down on Friday after USAC ruled they were the "nucleus of a concerted effort to be harmful to auto racing."

The Speedway still has 84 entries for the May 27 race, more than enough to fill the 33-car starting field. USAC said its argument was not with the drivers, including former Indy champions Al and Bobby Unser, Gordon Johncock and Rutherford, but with the six car owners, all of whom are on the CART board of directors.

They are Patrick, Roger Penske, Dan Gurney, Jim Hall, Tyler Alexander and Bob Fletcher.

Bud denies he is leaving Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A published report that he will step down soon as coach of the St. Louis Cardinals has been denied by Bud Wilkinson, who assumed the National Football League team's reins less than 14 months ago.

Globe-Democrat columnist Rich Koster wrote over the weekend that Wilkinson, 63, could be expected to quit because of chronic policy disputes with owner Bill Bidwill.

"I signed a contract, and I intend to live by it," Wilkinson said Sunday, however. "When I cae here, there wasn't any question but what there were problems. But I didn't have my eyes closed."

Koster described the position of Wilkinson, who has a four-year St. Louis contract, as being between a "rock and a hard place" in his dealings with Bidwill. His source, he wrote, was a Cardinals player he did not identify.

Bidwill denied in Koster's column, however, any rift of consequence. Wilkmson returned to the city only Sunday from a visit to Miami.

Wilkinson jolted the sports world in March, 1978 when he came out of retirement to take the Cardinals' helm as successor to Don Coryell, who was fired by Bidwill.

A day in the life of a reliever

Texas Ranger reliever Jim Kern, known as one of baseball's funny men, related this incident about one of his relief stints several years ago:

"The manager walked out to the mound, and I really didn't want to come out.

'I'm not tired,' I told him.

'No,' he said, 'but our outfielders sure are.'"

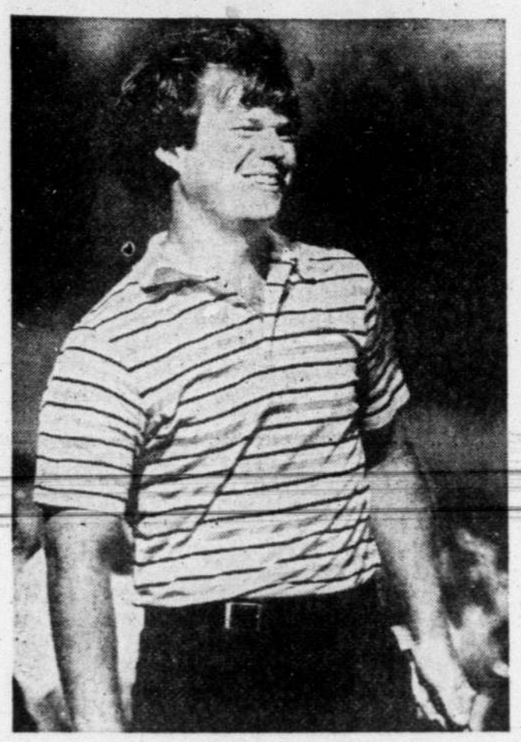
Watson becoming golf's best player



IS TOM WATSON GOLF'S NEW CHAMPION?
...the records say yes (AP Photo)

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — His current credentials are in order, but Tom Watson is not yet ready to claim the No. 1 spot in world golf.

"Jack (Nicklaus) is still the man to beat," Watson said after scoring an impressive, front-running, 6-shot victory Sunday in the prestigious Tournament of Champions, an elite event that brings together the winners of PGA Tour titles from the past 12 months.

"He's the greatest player," Watson said. "He's not playing very well right now and I know he must be burning inside. But he'll be back. He's too great a player not to."

Watson, a dedicated student of the game, mentioned some the greats of the past: Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and the more current stars, including Gary Player.

But he came back to Nicklaus.

"Jack's record is fantastic," Watson said.

Since the start of the 1977 season, however, Watson's has been better.

In that period, Nicklaus has won six American tournaments and the 1978 British Open. Watson has 11 American tournaments, including the Masters, and the 1977 British Open. For the period, Nicklaus has won $573,740, Watson $903,048. And Watson won the coveted Vardon Trophy, Player of the Year honors and the money-winning title in each of the last two seasons, the only man to win all three in consecutive seasons.

But the 29-year-old Watson is adamant. "I have a while to go before I can consider myself a great player," he said, then grinned and added: "But it's sure sweet right now. It's an honor to be called the No. 1 player. At times, I feel capable of playing and beating everybody. At times I don't.

"I haven't been here long enough to be called a great player. The test of great golf is over a number of years. It's a man's record over 10 years or 15 that makes him a great player. I haven't done that yet."

But he was easily the outstanding man the last two years and now has solid claim to that position this season. He reeled off a decisive string of 3 consecutive birdies on the back side at the La Costa Country Club that spiced a final round of 70. He scored his second wire-to-wire victory of the year with a 275 total, 13 under par.

Scores in scoreboard

Bruce Lietzke, who has played in this event twice and been runner-up both times, got a share of second with a 12-foot birdie putt on the final hole. That tied him with Jerry Pate at 281. Each shot 73 Sunday.

Gary Player of South Africa was next at 68-282 and was followed by Lee Trevino and Larry Nelson, each with 72-284. Fuzzy Zoeller, who beat Watson in a playoff for the Masters crown last week, never got into contention. He shot 76-299. Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this title, was 73-294.

Watson won $54,000 to push his earnings for the year to $229,966. Now he's in a position to break the single-season money-winning record of $362,429 he set last year.

He joined Zoeller and Lanny Wadkins as the only double winners of the year. The win put him in the World Series of Golf and marked the sixth time this year and fourth in a row in which he has finished first or second.

U.S. players will look up to youngest squad member

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ralph Sampson is the youngest member of the U.S. basketball team that will compete in the Pan American Games in July, but he will be the one player everyone looks up to, all 7 feet, 4 inches of him.

Sampson, a high school senior from Harrisonburg, Va., and 11 college players were named Sunday night to the U.S. squad following five days of tryouts at Indiana University.

"We have an excellent group of athletes and young men, and I'm looking forward to working with them," said Indiana coach Bobby Knight, who will guide the U.S. team in the Pan Am Games at San Juan, Puerto Rico July 1-15.

Chosen along with Sampson from the group of nearly 70 players at the tryouts were 6-7 Michael Brooks of LaSalle; 6-6 Sam Clancy, Pittsburgh; 6-3 John Duren, Georgetown; 6-11 Mike Gminski, Duke; 6-2 Ronnie Lester, Iowa; 6-10 Kevin McHale, Minnesota; 6-3 Kyle Macy, Kentucky; 6-7 Mike O'Koren, North Carolina; 6-2 Darnell Valentine, Kansas; 6-7 Danny Vranes, Utah, and 6-5 Mike Woodson, Indiana.

Sampsoh was one of just two high school players invited to the tryouts. The other was Indiana-bound Isiah Thomas of Chicago. Sampson has not declared his college choice, but he reportedly is leaning toward Virginia, Virginia Tech, Kentucky or North Carolina.

"All the players gave tremendous efforts and their overall play was very impressive from the standpoint of U.S. participation in international competition for the next few years," Knight said. "I never saw a group of players work harder than they did toward a goal."

North Carolina coach Dean Smith, chairman of the Pan Am selection committee, said he was "pleased greatly by the response, effort and play of all the players invited to the trials. It is reassuring for the future of U.S. participation in international competition."

The 12-member American team will return here about June 5 for training, then will play in several exhibition games in the United States before leaving for San Juan.

Franklin stuns WBC champ Johnson

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Challenger Matthew Franklin had concern over local officials working his lightheavyweight title fight with Marvin Johnson in the champion's hometown, but it was Johnson who was upset with the officials after he lost his World Boxing Council crown

"I think I was treated very unjustly" said Johnson after referee George DeFabis of Indianapolis declared Franklin the champion by stopping the fight at 1:44 of the eighth round.

"This was my hometown. I promised to bring my first defense here. I felt I'd be treated very, very fair. But, I got the bad break," said Johnson.

"He was completely dazed and out of it," said DeFabis. "Blood was just squirting from his eye. He was up at nine...but his eyes were very glassy. He couldn't get his hands up to defend himself.

"I didn't think there was any reason for him to take another punch."

Tribe's back to the wall

By DOUG BROWN
Staff Sports Writer

Two weeks ago Midwestern State's baseball team had its back to the wall. One week ago a bit of fate took the wall away. Sunday afternoon at Sheppard Air Force Base, the wall returned.

Texas Wesleyan took a four-game weekend series from the Indians with a 6-4, 5-2 double-header sweep from Midwestern Sunday after knocking off the Indians 9-3, 5-0 Friday night.

Two weeks ago the Indians playoff hopes looked dismal, but the news that Texas Wesleyan would have to forfeit most of its conference wins because of two ineligible players propelled the MSU playoff hopes into a better status.

However, after Texas Wesleyan's sweep and Dallas Baptist's split with Lubbock Christian in other TAC weekend action, the Indians chances of finishing second and having a possible playoff spot will be an uphill battle. The TAC slate shows Lubbock Christian at 12-4, Dallas Baptist at 11-9, Midwestern at 7-9 and Texas Wesleyan at 6-14.

The Indians, who now face the unenviable task of needing to take three of four games at Dallas Baptist next week, had a few bright moments on an otherwise dismal day.

In the opener, TWC jumped on MSU hurler Daryl Frazier for two unearned runs in the first inning but Midwestern tallied an unearned run in the bottom of the inning and then took a 3-2 lead in the third on a 350-foot, two-run blast by Rick Loesch to left field.

After Midwestern added another unearned run in the fifth, Texas Wesleyan jumped on Frazier for four runs and five hits in the seventh inning to take a 6-4 win.

In the nightcap, two Rider High School products dueled from the mound as Mark Ball — also a former MSU hurler — and Ricky Teakell held the opposition to limited success. Unfortunately for the Indians, Ball's TWC teammates were more successful in tallying the runs.

Former Indian pitcher affected by storm, too

There is little doubt that many of the Midwestern State baseball players have had a hard time keeping their mind on the diamond game after Black Tuesday, but Sunday afternoon at Sheppard Air Force Base, they were not alone.

A team from Fort Worth — Texas Wesleyan — was providing the opposition, but it was a hometown pitcher that Midwestern faced in the second game of the Texas Athletic Conference double-header.

Mark Ball, a Rider High School product and former MSU pitcher, returned to the pitching mound for the first time since learning his family's house was one of the many destroyed in the tornado and his brother was seriously injured in the storm.

"I was a little worried about how I would do out there (the mound). It was the first time I've had my head back in the game since the tornado," Ball said.

It was not his best outing of the year, but it could well be his most satisfying. Ball did not look overly impressive, but he did get the job done as he held the Indians to two runs in the nightcap and the Rams swept a double-header from Midwestern 6-4, 5-2.

Sutton puts name in record book, again

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Don Sutton leads the Los Angeles Dodgers in career wins, losses, games started, innings pitched, hits and walks and is tied for the lead in shutouts. He travels in some distinguished company, with names like Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale.

On Sunday, Sutton passed Koufax on the Dodgers' career strikeout list, fanning 12 Giants in a 9-2 victory over San Francisco. Sutton, half of whose strikeouts Sunday came on called third strikes, now has a career total of 2,402, 17th on the major league's all-time list. Koufax has 2,396.

Drysdale is the only Dodger with more career strikeouts, 2,486, and he is tied with Sutton in career shutouts, 49.

"Those two men are special to me because when I joined the club, they were the two big stars but were not too busy to help out a 20-year-old kid," the 34-year-old right-hander said.

Sutton came to the Dodgers in 1966 from Albuquerque, the year that Drysdale lost twice and Koufax once in Baltimore's 4-0 World Series sweep of the Dodgers. Sutton did not play in that series.

Sutton and Koufax were reunited in spring training this season when the Dodgers Hall of Famer came out of retirement to become a pitching instructor for his former team. Sutton's admiration for Koufax and Drysdale was very apparent.

"To share any records with them gives me great satisfication," Sutton said.

In other National League games, the New York Mets downed Philadelphia 4-2, Houston edged Pittsburgh 3-2, the Chicago Cubs whipped Montreal 4-1, Atlanta beat San Diego 8-7, and St. Louis got by Cincinnati 4-3.

Sutton, 2-2, scattered six hits, did not walk a batter and was working on his 50th shutout until the sixth inning when the Giants scored an unearned run on a fielding error by Joe Ferguson in right. Sutton also yielded a solo homer to Jack Clark in the seventh.

However, as Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda pointed out, "We finally were able to give Sutton a cushion to work with."

In Sutton's last start April 16 at home against Houston, the Dodgers were shut out by Ken Forsch, who had recorded the season's only no-hitter nine days earlier.

But on Sunday, Los Angeles wasted no time getting untracked. The Dodgers scored seven runs in the fourth inning to lead 9-0. Steve Yeager had a two-run homer and Von Joshua a three-run shot in the inning. Steve Garvey and Derrel Thomas — with his second hit of the inning — drove in the other runs.

Yeager's homer came off Giants starter Ed Halicki, 1-1, and Joshua connected off reliever John Curtis.

With his 207th career victory, Sutton gave the Dodgers a 2-1 advantage in the first three-game set this season between the teams. The final game of the series drew 51,711, fifth largest crowd ever to watch a Giants game at Candlestick Park.

Mets 4, Phillies 2

New York ended a string of 26 scoreless innings when Joel Youngblood led off the eighth with a solo homer, and newcomer Frank Taveras drove in the winning run with a single that snapped a six-game Mets losing streak.

Youngblood's homer came off lefty Steve Carlton, who had given up only two previous hits in the game, and it ignited a four-run eighth-inning rally.

Taveras, traded to the Mets last week by Pittsburgh for shortstop Tim Foli, also aided the Mets in the sixth with a clutch play at short on a hard grounder by Jose Cardenal into the hole. With two out and two on, Taveras' throw to first just beat Cardenal.

The former Pirates speedster said he was surprised by the trade. "It's a mistake they (the Pirates) made, but I am happy. I feel at home," Taveras said.

Astros 3, Pirates 2

While Taveras was a hero of the Mets game, shortstop Foli was the goat of the Pirates' game. Foli let Bob Watson's grounder get by him into left field for an error, and Craig Reynolds scored from second with the winning run in the eighth inning.

Reynolds had doubled, and losing pitcher John Candelaria, 0-1, walked Cesar Cedeno intentionally before Watson came to the plate. Joaquin Andujar, 3-0, picked up his second victory in two nights in relief for Houston, which swept the three-game series with Pittsburgh.

Cubs 4, Expos 1

Dave Kingman smacked his fifth home run of the year — a tremendous two-run shot that carried all the way across Waveland Avenue adjacent to Wrigley Field — and led Chicago to its fourth straight win and a sweep of the three-game series with Montreal. Barry Foote also homered for the Cubs, and Rick Reuschel, 1-2, tossed a six-hitter.

Braves 8, Padres 7

Barry Bonnell lashed a two-run single in the eighth inning to rally the Braves and snap a four-game Atlanta losing streak. Dale Murphy smacked a three-run homer for Atlanta, giving him a league-leading seven.

The Braves built a 6-0 lead before San Diego went ahead 7-6 in the top of the eighth on Jerry Turner's RBI single.

Cards 4, Reds 3

St. Louis struck for two runs in the eighth inning on RBI singles by Ted Simmons and Ken Reitz, and the Cards snapped a three-game losing streak.

Ray Knight drove in all three of Cincinnati's runs with a pair of singles.

Buddy Schultz, 1-1, was the winner in relief of John Denny, who worked the first seven innings and drove in a run with a sacrifice fly.

THAT KIND OF DAY -- San Francisco Giant first baseman Mike Ivie makes a diving attempt to catch a pop foul off the bat of Los Angeles Dodger Dave Lopes in the fourth inning of their game Sunday in San Francisco. Ivie failed to catch the ball, and his Giants were routed 9-2. (AP Photo)

A's decide to just have fun

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Pity the Oakland A's.

"We don't get the free agents and don't get the big salaries," says catcher Jim Essian. "We're hassled by the fans and there are not that many of them that show up at Oakland. And ... we usually don't get the calls from the umpires."

So the A's had a team meeting and decided that the only they could do this season was "go out and have some fun," says Essian.

Sunday they had some at the expense of the California Angels.

"We really wanted this one badly," said Essian after leading the A's to a 7-6 victory that snapped the Angels' 10-game winning streak. "California had beaten us so badly in the first five games this year."

The Angels routed the A's 13-1 Saturday night and had outscored Oakland 47-10 in five meetings before Sunday.

"The game was quite a battle," said Essian, who doubled home Dwayne Murphy with the winning run in the eighth inning. "The lead kept changing hands and we were scuffling.

"We're just trying to make a living — we don't have the best team in the league."

In other American League games, the Baltimore Orioles swept a doubleheader from the Milwaukee Brewers, 6-2 and 7-3; the Boston Red Sox blanked the Kansas City Royals 6-0; the New York Yankees turned back the Texas Rangers 5-1; the Cleveland Indians beat the Chicago White Sox 8-5; the Minnesota Twins whipped the Seattle Mariners 3-1 and the Detroit Tigers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1.

Murphy drew a walk from loser Dave LaRoche and stole second base to set up Essian's game-winning hit for the A's. Dave Heaverlo, the third Oakland pitcher, gained the victory. The A's had tied the game 6-6 in the seventh inning on Dave Revering's two-run double.

Orioles 6-7, Brewers 2-3

Doug DeCinces and John Lowenstein hit solo home runs and Ken Singleton contributed a two-run single as Baltimore defeated Milwaukee in the first game of their doubleheader.

Moos Haas yielded the homers in the second inning and Singleton connected in the third following a single by Dave Skaggs and a double by Al Bumbry.

The Orioles won the second game as DeCinces and Singleton smashed bases-empty homers and Eddie Murray knocked in four runs.

BOSTON'S GEORGE SCOTT
...has big day at plate

The Orioles took four straight games in the series in Baltimore after earlier losing three in a row at Milwaukee.

Red Sox 6, Royals 0

George Scott drove in four runs with two singles and Mike Torrez hurled a four-hitter to lead Boston over Kansas City. Fred Lynn had a double and a pair of singles in extending his hitting streak to 11 games and Rick Burleson belted a homer for the Red Sox.

"After I had that early streak of wildness, I got everything working," said Torrez, who walked five of the first nine batters he faced but was helped by three double plays. "It was just a matter of time. I was just hoping that I'd be in there long enough to work on something. I was having trouble throwing strikes, no question. I had the ball up, and I kept trying to get it down. I really needed the double play. It was good to get it."

Yankees 5, Rangers 1

New York beat Texas as Graig Nettles belted a homer and three singles and drove in three runs, and as Ron Guidry pitched a six-hitter. After Bucky Dent brought the Yankees from behind with a two-run single in the second inning, Nettles slammed a two-run homer off Dock Ellis, in the third and added a run-scoring single off ex-teammate Sparky Lyle in the seventh.

"I had good stuff all around," said Guidry, last year's Cy Young winner in the AL. "I started out throwing mostly fastballs. In the middle innings, I changed to sliders and later in the game I switched back to fastballs. These guys are disciplined hitters and you have to make good pitches all the time."

Indians 8, White Sox 5

Andre Thornton slammed a three-run homer and Bobby Bonds and Gary Alexander hit solo shots to lead Cleveland over Chicago. The Indians broke out of a prolonged batting slump, pounding 10 hits. The three homers, equalling their season total prior to the game, came off Francisco Barrios.

"I've been saying all along that the middle of our batting order hits," said Bonds, whose homer was his first of the year. "Andy, Alex and I hit the ball hard today and that's going to happen some more."

Twins 3, Mariners 1

Dave Goltz pitched a five-hitter to lead Minnesota over Seattle and extend the Mariners' losing streak to eight games. Goltz had a no-hitter through five innings, but was hit hard in the sixth, when Seattle laced three singles and scored its only run.

"He's still got his April stuff," said Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch about Goltz, "but he did a lot of pitching with it."

Asked what Mauch meant by "April stuff," Goltz responded: "That means less than I have in May and June and July."

Tigers 4, Blue Jays 1

Dave Rozema pitched no-hit ball for five innings and wound up with a three-hitter as Detroit defeated Toronto. Lance Parrish's solo homer in the second and Lynn Jones' RBI single in the fourth provided Rozema with all the runs he needed.

Fidrych to pitch tonight during exhibition contest

DETROIT (AP) — If Mark Fidrych gets off the disabled list and back in the pitching groove for the Detroit Tigers, "it'll be frosting on the cake," says Manager Les Moss.

Fidrych is still on the 21-day disabled list. And he was hit hard in his exhibition outing Wednesday night at Cincinnati.

But Moss said "The Bird" has felt no pain in his oft-ailing pitching arm and is ready to start tonight's rematch against the Reds in Detroit in a sandlot benefit game.

Administration, companies double-team rubber workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United Rubber Workers union, defiant of President Carter's anti-inflation program, is resuming contract talks with the tire industry as the administration turns up the heat on bargainers to keep its stretched wage guidelines alive.

Federal mediators planned to call bargainers from the Akron, Ohio-based URW to Washington today to help negotiate new three-year contracts covering 55,000 workers at the "Big Four" tire makers — Uniroyal, Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said the talks, which would take place a few blocks from a watchful White House, initially may involve just the URW and Uniroyal, the union's apparent target company.

A target is singled out for reaching a settlement that sets a pattern for other companies.

URW President Peter Bommarito, who had hinted at a possible strike against Uniroyal when the old contract expired Friday, called off a walkout just hours before the midnight deadline and said talks would resume today "on a day-to-day basis." No new strike deadline was set.

The resumption of talks follows an eleventh-hour intervention in the bargaining by the White House Friday to head off a reportedly lucrative settlement that the administration feared would destroy its voluntary 7 percent annual ceiling on wage and fringe benefit boosts.

Carter's inflation advisers hastily summoned Bommarito and company officials to separate meetings Friday amid reports that Bommarito was on the verge of a three-year settlement boosting wages and benefits more than 40 percent — about 13 percent a year.

The tire executives came, but Bommarito boycotted the White House meeting, saying he didn't need another lecture on the wage guidelines.

Bommarito, who has vowed to break the guidelines, announced Thursday that he had reach tentative agreement on major economic terms with Uniroyal, Goodrich and Firestone. The companies issued denials.

Bommarito later charged that he had an agreement, but it fell through because a Uniroyal executive reneged on the settlement.

A government source confirmed Bommarito's account. Another administration source, who also asked not to be named, said Bommarito and Uniroyal simply misunderstood each other.

Carter's embattled guidelines were stretched earlier this month to accommodate the giant Teamsters union, which won a new contract settlement boosting wages and benefits by at least 9 percent a year. The settlement was judged to be within the guidelines, however, thanks to last-minute concessions allowed by the government.

The Teamsters settlement undermined some of the program's credibility, and other unions — including the powerful United Auto Workers — have indicated they expect to win similar government concessions.

In the face of such eroding support for the guidelines, administration officials say it was essential to take a firm stand against the URW.

Pickets protest settlement terms in lengthy mine strike

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Three mines were closed today in eastern Kentucky by pickets apparently protesting the tentative settlement of one of the longest strikes in the history of the United Mine Workers Union.

The strikers were angered by reports that men who had been crossing the picket line would be allowed to vote in a new election at the Jusstus mine of Stearns Mining Co., where a walkout had begun nearly three years ago.

A spokesman for Beth-Elkhorn Coal Co. said three of its mines were closed after pickets showed up.

The Associated Press learned Sunday night that a tentative settlement had been reached between Stearns and the union and that a new representation election would be held in less than two weeks.

Emil Farkas, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board in Cincinnati, which has been mediating the dispute that began in July 1976, confirmed that "an all-party tentative settlement has been reached, including plans for a new representation election."

Sources among the striking UMW members at Stearns, who were informed of the settlement earlier Sunday and who asked not to be named, said they were told the election will be held May 3. But they said they were told that only 50 of the 120 striking miners will be allowed to vote, while 70 Stearns employees who have been crossing the picket line will join them in the voting.

"It's a farce," said UMW member Darrell Vanover, "because they (the mine owners) know there's no way we can win an election like this."

Some Stearns strikers headed Sunday night for UMW mines across Kentucky and in Illinois and Pennsylvania to urge fellow union members to stage a general walkout in sympathy for the long and sometimes violent labor battle, said Vanover.

They planned to greet miners at shift changes today, urging a the sympathy walkout.

Vanover said picket lines also would be up this morning at UMW headquarters in Washington, D.C., "to let them know what we think about this so-called settlement."

Farkas declined to specify how many striking UMW members or non-striking employees would be allowed to vote. "The agreement has not yet been finalized, and I think it would be inappropriate at this point to talk numerically," he said in a telephone interview.

But Vanover said, "from what we hear from the national union, it's already laid out," he said.

As of last week, the UMW was still paying $100-a-week strike benefits to 123 union members at Stearns. Non-striking miners began crossing UMW picket lines in October 1977, and the work force now reportedly totals about 100 men.

Stearns Mining Co. is a subsidiary of Blue Diamond Coal Co. of Knoxville, Tenn., which also owns the Scotia Coal Co. mine in Letcher County, Ky., where 26 men died in methane gas explosions in March 1976.

The strike at Stearns, which UMW President Arnold Miller once called the union's top organizing priority, began when the company refused to agree to union demands for safety provisions, including a union inspection team that could order miners out if conditions were deemed unsafe.

UMW members at Stearns say such provisions are essential if accidents such as occurred at the Scotia mine are to be prevented.

Carter plans North Ireland peace initiative

LONDON (AP) — Speculation that President Carter plans a peace initiative in Northern Ireland mounted today after Vice President Walter Mondale disclosed concern "at the highest levels of government" about the decade-old sectarian conflict.

Britons, angry over criticism by House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill of their handling of the bloodshed, got madder when New York Gov. Hugh Carey proposed on Sunday that trade sanctions be ordered against Britain if it does not pull its troops from he embattled province.

Mondale, speaking during a stopover Sunday at Ireland's Shannon airport en route home from a European tour, said the government's "genuine concern" was why O'Neill criticized Britain's failure to end the bloodshed.

O'Neill's remarks brought an avalanche of criticism from British government and opposition leaders who said he was ill-informed and should mind his own business.

O'Neill, Carter's key adviser on Irish affairs, charged in Dublin that the British have used the Ulster problem as a "political football" and must do more to end the feuding that has claimed nearly 2,000 lives.

Britain is midway through a general election campaign in which the major parties are avoiding the sensitive Ulster issue.

White House officials deny O'Neill's visit was a probe for a Carter initiative.

Carey, another prominent Irish-American politician, called for economic sanctions against Britain if it does not withdraw its troops from Ulster and branded the situation "a moral affront to the entire world community."

He urged a compromise between the million-strong Protestant majority's wish to remain part of Britain and the desire of Ulster's 500,000 Catholics for unification with the Irish Republic.

Rhodesian vote counting begins

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — With foreign observers and journalists watching over their shoulders, about 80 election officials today began counting nearly 2 million votes cast last week in Rhodesia's first black-majority election.

Military commanders said they were preparing for an increase in attacks by the black nationalist guerrillas who failed to fulfill their vow to wreck the elections.

First results from the five-day election, the first in which the nation's black majority voted, were expected Tuesday, with the winning party to be known by Wednesday.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa's party, the United African National Council, was expected to win most of the 72 National Assembly seats reserved for blacks. That would make the bespectacled Methodist leader the country's first black prime minister, and the first prime minister of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, as the nation will be called.

Muzorewa has vowed to persuade the guerrillas who have fought a six-year bush war against white rule to lay down their arms and return home once a black-controlled Parliament has taken office. But military officials who mobilized a force of 90,000 army regulars and reserves to protect the elections said they were preparing for an increase in guerrilla attacks.

"They laid low because we were too heavy on the ground," said one officer. "Now we can expect them to let loose."

Demobilization of the reserves was postponed because of the military threat.

Has your Home been Damaged or Destroyed! We suggest the following steps:

1. Do Not pay off your mortgage with the Insurance Fund.
2. Escrow the Insurance Money with Mortgage Company.
3. If your home is only partially damaged have an Architect or engineer check it. It will be money well spent.
4. GET SEVERAL BIDS. Beware of the unscrupulous firms. Ask for a detailed list of work to be done.
5. Check with SBA for reconstruction or repair loans.
6. Don't Panic — Go slow.

We would like an opportunity to help you solve your rebuilding or reconstruction problems; large or small. We can help you arrange financing, and we will give you a competitive bid. In business since 1963

Keeshan, Salant win honors

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Bob Keeshan, television's Captain Kangaroo, and Richard S. Salant, former president of CBS News, are individual winners of the George Foster Peabody Broadcasting Award.

"Holocaust," the top-rated TV drama about the Nazi treatment of Jews during World War II, also captured one of the 28 annual awards announced Sunday by the University of Georgia School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Titus Productions Inc. and NBC received the award for "Holocaust," which the judges said, "has won international acclaim despite the controversial nature of its subject in some countries of the world."

Keeshan won for providing "superior entertainment for children and ...(promoting) quality television in all forms."

Salant was cited for "his staunch defense of the First Amendment guarantee of a free press, especially in the field of electronic journalism."

A total of 724 radio and television programs were entered in this year's competition. The winners will receive medallions and certificates during a May luncheon in New York.

Winners are selected by a 15-member advisory board of broadcasters, educators, entertainers and citizens. The awards may be given to programs, stations, networks or individuals.

Radio winners for 1978 are CBS News for "World News Roundup," a program of top news stories; the National Radio Theatre of Chicago for imaginative radio drama; WMUK, Kalamazoo, Mich., for live radio dramas presented as part of the city's Super Summer Arts Festival; WABE-FM, Atlanta, for "The Eyewitness Who Wasn't," a documentary about a Georgia murder case; National Public Radio, Washington, for "Dialogues on a Tightrope: an Italian Mosaic," which gave listeners a look at Italy after Premier Aldo Moro's murder.

Also, NBC radio for the series "Second Sunday," a program on current topics of national interest; WOCB, West Yarmouth, Mass., for "The Last Voyage of the Cap'n Bill," a stor of the last days of a famous fishing vessel; and Jewish Theological Seminary of America for "The Eternal Light," a religious broadcast for 35 years on the NBC Radio Network.

Television winners include "Barney Miller," a television comedy about a police precinct produced by Four D Productions-Trisene Corp. of Hollywood and ABC; "Lou Grant," a television series about a big-city newspaper produced by M.T.M. Productions of Hollywood and CBS; "The Muppets," created by Jim Henson; "A River to the Sea," the story of English history produced by the Baptist Radio and TV Commission, Fort Worth, Texas,; "Your Health and Your Wallet," a mini-series about rising medical costs produced by WDVM-TV, Washington; "Arts in New Hampshire," produced by WENH-TV, Durham, N.H.; "The Battle for South Africa," anchored by Bill Moyers and produced by CBS News.

Also, "The Body Human: The Vital Connection," an examination of the workings of the human brain, produced by Tomorrow Entertainment-Medcome Co. for CBS; "Mysterious Castles of Clay," an exploration of the function of termite societies, produced by Survival Anglia Ltd.-World Wildlife Fund for NBC;
