Coming Sunday . . .

Singer Olivia Newton-John hasn't let success go to her head.

The gold and platinum records lining the hallway of her Malibu home are less important to her than her "family" of five horses, four dogs and three cats.

Offstage she's much the same as on—disarming, warm and just plain nice. Olivia wants to be liked, and that's not hard at all as you'll see from a profile in Family Weekly, part of Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Racquetball, some say, is becoming one of the more popular sports in the nation. Decked out in T-shirts and shorts, people of all ages are flocking to indoor and outdoor courts to play the sport.

Some observers of the athletic scene say racquetball is the ultimate activity for the nation's exercise-inclined because it is geared to Americans' fast-paced lifestyle.

In the West Texas Life section of Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, reporter George H. Johnston explores racquetball's growing popularity in Midland and around the country.

Israelis, Palestinians blast away

TEL AVIV (AP) — Palestinian and Israeli gunners exchanged rocket and artillery fire on the Lebanese border Friday, and a bomb exploded in southern Israel, slightly wounding a child, police said.

The bomb, planted by terrorists, went off in the town of Qiryat Gat, 40 miles south of Tel Aviv, a spokesman said.

Informed sources in Damascus and a pro-Syrian newspaper in Beirut reported that Syria is pressuring the Palestinians to abide by a cease-fire in southern Lebanon and not give Israel any excuse to launch more strikes across the border.

They said Syrian President Hafez Assad has strongly urged Yasir Arafat and other leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization to unilaterally defuse the southern Lebanese conflict.

In other developments:

—Prime Minister Menahem Begin issued an appeal for peace directly to the Egyptian people, and said he would welcome President Anwar Sadat to Israel to discuss Middle East peace. Sadat said Wednesday that he was prepared even to go before the Israeli parliament to negotiate peace.

—Israel granted clemency to Fatma Barnawi, one of the first Arab women imprisoned for urban terrorism after the 1967 war, and deported her to Jordan.

Earlier in the day Katyusha rockets fired from Lebanon struck near an Israeli border settlement and Israeli gunners returned the fire, the military command said.

A spokesman said there were no injuries or property damage on the Israeli side. Israeli troops along the border with Lebanon went on alert after the early morning attack.

The rockets were said to have landed near Yiron, a collective farm or kibbutz. Yiron is two miles south of the frontier and 20 miles east of the coastal town of Nahariya where three Israelis were killed in Palestinian shelling from Lebanon earlier this week.

The Israeli air force Wednesday bombed and strafed targets in southern Lebanon in what the military command said was retaliation for the Nahariya deaths.

Israel said its attacks were aimed at Palestinian guerrilla bases but officials in Lebanon said most of those killed Wednesday — more than 100 persons — were civilians, including many women and children.

On Thursday, Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin told reporters that "we regret ... very deeply" the deaths of any civilians in the attack, but added, "we do not apologize for the operation itself."

Lebanon said Israel was guilty of "overt aggression."

Natural gas use in outdoor lights to end after 1982

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate conference committee framing a compromise national energy bill voted today to ban the use of natural gas for outdoor decorative lighting after 1982.

The ban would apply to residential as well as commercial use of gas lamps. There are an estimated two million to four million such lamps in the United States, many adorning the front and back yards of homes.

The conferees agreed to prohibit all future new hookups of gas lamps and decided that existing ones must be shut off or converted to electricity by 1982.

The prohibition was contained in legislation previously passed by the House. Senate conferees agreed to the ban after House negotiators agreed to give homeowners an additional two years to replace gas lamps from the 1980 deadline originally pased by the House.

The action came as the conference committee neared completion of the second major portion of President Carter's energy program: legislation aimed at making industrial and power plants switch from oil and natural gas to coal or other fuels.

The conferees earlier reached agreement on the first administration energy bill before it, containing a wide variety of energy conservation measures.

Supporters of the gaslight ban claimed the step could save as much as 73 billion cubic feet of gas per year.

Meanwhile today, the conference chairman, Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., emerged from a White House meeting with President Carter saying he doubts Carter will veto any of the energy bills sent to him by Congress.

Early this week, Carter said in a nationally broadcast speech that he would veto any bills that did not meet his tests for fairness and energy conservation.

"I don't think there will be a veto," Staggers said.

He said the president has indicated he is ready to take a more active role in negotiating a compromise.

Hill pursues immediate probe of agency spying

By ROBERT HEARD

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General John Hill wants an immediate investigation of the admitted practice of spying on other state agencies by the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

The outgoing chairman of the board said Thursday it is "i an uncommon practice" for that agency to investigate officers in other state agencies.

State District Judge Joseph Connally of Odessa made the statement as he resigned under fire as head of the board.

In answer to a question by Attorney General John Hill, Connally said he ordered an investigation last year of a member of the Texas Industrial Accident Board.

But Connally said he did so only after making sure his agency had done that sort of thing before.

Hill cited a series of stories in the Austin American-Statesman that included an allegation that Connally sent Jim Richards, a field investigator for Connally's board, to Ruidoso, N. M., to spy on an unnamed member of the industrial accident board.

Cue Boykin, Connally's former law partner and chairman of the industrial accident board, reportedly asked Connally to make the investigation.

The newspaper quoted the person investigated as saying, "I think this was an attempt by Mr. Boykin to find some information about me that he could use to block my reappointment. I think they were just looking, looking for anything at all . . . to forward it to the governor's office."

The newspaper said the subject of the investigation did not want his name revealed but went on to say that he has since been re-appointed to the board.

The only member of the three-member board to be re-appointed since the investigation is J. J. McCuan of Pasadena.

After the meeting of the investigators' board, reporters asked Hill if he thought one state agency should be investigating another.

"I want to think about that, frankly," Hill replied. "I'm not prepared to say that in every instance it would be improper . . ."

He said Connally did not order the investigation "with malice aforethought."

Hill also said Clema Sanders, executive director of the investigators' board, should not audit expense vouchers filed by Connally.

Shades of Civil War: neighbors to battle

Next-door neighbors John Robles and Brent Bates both play football, but they don't talk about it much—they're on opposing teams.

The players live side by side in the 1100 block of Ward Street.

Robles plays fullback for the Midland High School Bulldogs, and Bates plays linebacker for the Lee High School Rebels. The teams will play each other at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium.

How did they come to be next-door neighbors? Well, Bates was already a Lee student when his family moved this summer to the Midland High neighborhood.

"We're pretty good friends, but it's been tense around the neighborhood this week," Robles said Thursday.

Their respective houses this morning were adorned with competitive-minded signs and tree-wrapppings—harbingers of coming battle.

The youths sometimes talk to each other in general terms about the past week's games, but they don't discuss their coaches, Robles said. "That's one thing we've sort of stayed away from," he said.

And the plays are "top secret," of course.

Bates said Robles has told him the Midland High football team is better than Lee's. Bates' reply to this is only a terse, "We'll see."

Much of the rivalry will dissipate, however, after tonight's game. "After this weekend, we'll probably be playing football together, tossing a football in the park," Robles said.

Bates said he, too, figures things will return to normal after tonight's game.

Church modifies divorce stand

By MARJORIE HYER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Pope Paul VI has agreed to halt retroactively the automatic excommunication of divorced and remarried Catholics in this country, it was announced Thursday.

The action was taken in response to the near unanimous request made by American Catholic bishops at their semi-annual meeting last May.

While suspension of the automatic excommunication ban for Catholic remarried after civil divorce does not change the church's traditional stand on the indissolubility of valid marriage, it does offer hope to tens of thousands of divorced Catholics for reconciliation with their church.

According to church law, divorced Catholics may retain their church standing after remarriage only if a tribunal, or church court, finds that the original marriage was not valid.

Along with the other changes which have swept the church in the last 15 years, the concept of what constitutes a valid marraige has undergone sweeping changes. Aided by psychologists and sociologists as well as theologians, the church's canon lawyers, who constitute the tribunals, today recognize a vastly wider array of circumstances as grounds for a decree of nullity, as the church divorce decree is called.

The automatic excommunication penalty was imposed in this country by the church's Plenary Council of Baltimore in 1884.

Stitch in time saves waiting for phantom election line

CRANE — Lelia Scarborough was doing some stitchery while she was waiting for Crane County folks to trickle in the courthouse in the election earlier this week.

Few, very few, of the county's 2,675 registered voters bothered to come in. So that lull gave Mrs. Scarborough and other election clerks time to doodle.

She stitched.

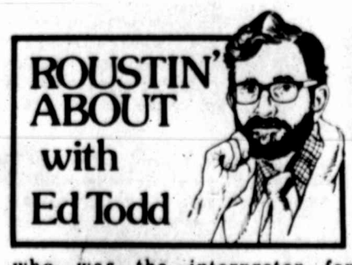
"That's crewel," she said of tediously threaded patterns of flowers and butterflies. "It's kind of cruel, really cruel," she punned.

Most of the time she was stitching, and other infrequent times she would show voters where to sign their names just before they picked up and marked their ballots.

Leona Hyche was the election clerk in charge of the voter registry.

Myrtle Brazelton was at the typewriter. She was the assistant election judge.

Also at the election was Rosa Esquivel, Odessa College student, who was the interpreter for Spanish-speaking voters.



For her, business also was slow. She was reading a copy of the "Readers Digest." The election judge Durwood Jones had not shown up. Few voters did either.

"Don't work too hard," Elmer Hughes told the election clerks as he was leaving after voting.

"We're not, Mr. Hughes. You come back to see us," replied Mrs. Scarborough.

For a brief moment, she put aside

Voice speaks loud, clear

During a recent flight from Houston to Midland, a passenger identifying himself as Midland's mayor requested a correction from the stewardess who had announced the airplane was approaching the Midland-Odessa Air Terminal.

Obligingly enough, the stewardess announced the following to the craft's passengers: "I have been told by the mayor of Midland that the correct name for the airport is Midland Regional Air Terminal."

Only one thing. Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said Thursday he wasn't on the late Wednesday night flight from Houston.

The imposter's message must have had some impact, however. A few minutes after the correction, the pilot came on with the airliner's public address system to add that, in case anyone's interested, Odessa is 11 miles to the west."

Jack Frost lights in Tall City

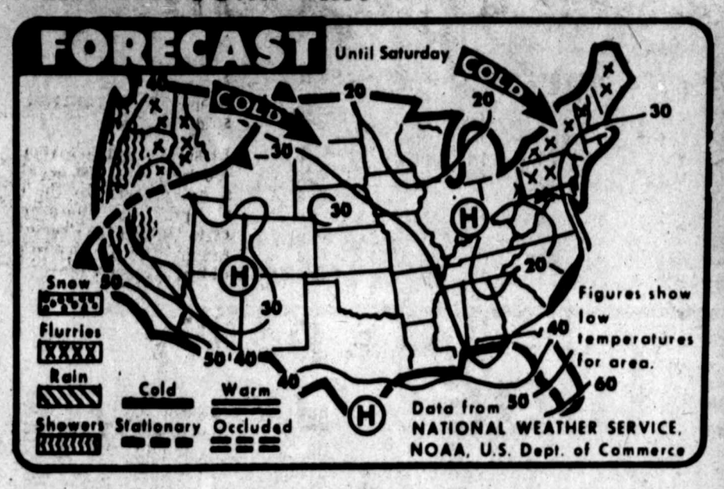
Jack Frost left his mark on car windshields and hoods this morning in Midland with the overnight low temperature dipping down to 30 degrees for the second time in a row.

Skies should be fair through Saturday with warm afternoons and cool nights, the weatherman predicted. The low temperature tonight is expected to fall to the middle 30s. Saturday's high temperature should rise to the low 70s.

Thursday's high temperature reached 64 degrees, the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

All area towns reported clear skies and cold temperatures this morning.

WEATHER SUMMARY



SNOW or snow flurries are forecast today by the National Weather Service for the Northeast. Showers are expected for the central and northern Pacific coast with snow flurries inland over the northern Rockies. Most areas will be cool. (AP Laserphoto)

'Quibbling' still delaying talks

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Thursday that the pattern of terrorist attack and Israeli retaliation is inevitable in the Middle East without a halt to "quibbling" over details for launching peace talks.

The latest action-reaction across the Israeli-Lebanese border vividly illustrates the need for "immediate convening of the Geneva conference" he told a televised news conference.

Carter called on Syria, Jordan and Lebanon to join in an end to "procedural debates and squabbles" which Egypt and Israel have indicated they are prepared to suspend in order to start the Geneva talks. It is Syria which is raising largest obstacles, diplomatic sources say.

Carter did not condemn Israel for its punitive air raid Wednesday by American-built Phantom jets on suspected Palestinian camps, which reportedly left more than 100 people dead and more wounded. The raid was retaliation for Palestinian attacks with Russian-design Katusha rockets on Israeli settlements.

"If there are continued attacks, some retaliation is required," Carter said. Asked if he thought the retaliation excessive, Carter said "perhaps yes." But he said "the over-riding consideration is not to condemn Israel at this point for retaliation, but just to say that if provocations were absent that the retaliation would have been unnecessary."

Despite Carter's renewed plea for urgent peace talks at Geneva, there is no longer a prospect for reconvening that conference this year because of Arab differences over procedure, Israeli Labor Party leader Shimon Peres said here Thursday.

Peres, after talks this week with the Carter administration's highest officials, said, "I would give it (a Geneva conference) a fair chance for the first part of 1978" at the earliest.

Administration strategists are reported privately in agreement that hopes for holding the conference in December have disappeared. Peres said his understanding is that the American official "final assessment" on that will be made after the meeting of Arab leaders set for Saturday in Tunis.

Neither President Carter, nor Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance who spoke to a Jewish audience in Dallas last night, made any reference to meeting their late-December target date for the Geneva talks.

"It would be a tragedy if remaining differences over procedures were to thwart the opportunity now presented" for Arab-Israeli negotiations, Vance said in a speech prepared for delivery to the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Fund Convention.

"Difficult problems do remain" for launching negotiations, Vance said, but much progress has been made. He said the new violance in southern Lebanon and Israel "serve urgent notice of the high human stake in the task before us."

President Carter said that the Middle East "is just sitting and teetering on another outbreak of even more major violence ..."

He said he was "pleased that the Israeli government has adopted the procedures for the Geneva conference that we have proposed" and also "pleased with the statement yesterday by President (Anwar) Sadat" of Egypt.

Sadat, Carter noted, expressed willingness "to go to Geneva or anywhere else and begin to consult directly with Israel and with the other Arab nations without quibbling anymore about the detailed wording of the procedures. That is our position," Carter said.

Carter said "I hope that Jordan and Syria and Lebanon very quickly will make a similar response to us" and "we can then convene the Geneva conference."

A State Department spokesman denied a news report from Cairo yesterday that the United States has offered a new, modified formula for initiating the conference.

The core of the procedural problem, which also extends to substance, is Syria, Peres told American newsmen. The former Israeli defense minister, who now leads the Labor Party opposition to the government of Prime Minister Menahem Begin, had meetings this week with Vance, Vice President Walter F. Mondale, presidential national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and other officials.

Rock xylophone to jazz up gem-mineral show

Among the usual rock and gem displays at the Midland Gem and Mineral Society Annual Show Saturday and Sunday will be a not so usual rock xylophone.

The society has invited Mrs. Mary Aspaas of Cornville, Ariz., to demonstrate the unusual musical instrument during the two-day affair.

Mrs. Aspaas, who is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Braggs, said her curiosity was aroused about 18 years ago when she used some of the phonolite rocks as wind chimes.

She began experimenting with the different tones the rocks produced when struck by a mallet, and three years later, she finished the instrument.

"I first put them up as windchimes, and then I became curious if I could make the xylophone," Mrs. Aspaas said Thursday.

After the tedious work of developing a musical scale on the rocks, Mrs. Aspaas then began the trial and error task of producing recognizable tunes on the instrument.

The only training that helped her task, she said, was a few piano lessons when she was eight years old, and a few years singing alto in a high school quartet.

After she finished making the xylophone, Mrs. Aspaas said she began picking out tunes with one mallet.

She was not satisfied, so she began practicing with two mallets. Over the course of 10 years, she said, she perfected her ability with the usual three mallets.

Her xylophone may just be the only one of its kind in the U.S., Mrs. Aspaas said.

"I don't know of anyone else in the country who has one," she said. However, she added, many people have started a similar project, but never finished.

"Some have tried to make one, but they never had the bulldog tenacity like I did," she said.

Mrs. Aspaas travels all over the country with the xylophone to give concerts at rock and gem shows, schools, churches and other organizations.

"I keep busy, but it's about as busy as I want to be," the musician said.

Was all the time and effort put into the project worth it?

"It's been a very painstaking job, but it has been interesting and I have enjoyed every minute of it," Mrs. Aspaas replied.

Mrs. Aspaas will be presenting concerts on the xylophone at the Midland rock and gem show both days. The show will be from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East U.S. Highway 80.

her crewel stitchery, and she picked up the finished needlepoint. It was of her "Fritz," her late, beloved 13-year-old miniature Schnauzer.

"This is needlepoint," she said. "It's boring."

"He (Fritz) had a heart attack and died. Best dog that ever lived."

Like the cruel crewel, the Fritz needlepoint was tedious. It took some time to do.

Just how long?

"All the way to Fun Valley, Colo., and back," she said.

She and her husband, Henry, went up to Colorado last July for a national square dancing session. Crane's caller Johnny Rogers was there, too. They all are part of a Castle Gap Square Dancers.

"It (Fun Valley) is just the place to go for square dancing and fishing," she said. She and her husband have been "squaring" off and on since 1954. They have been steady at it since 1970.

"It's great fun and exercise," she said.

She returned to her creweling on the flowers and butterflies.

"I don't know who came up with this crewel thing. It's just embroidery."

Waiting, the women talked about this and that. There was not much voting going on.

Mrs. Scarborough came up with the "Mr. Crane" title, bestowed on E. N. Beane, the town's 70-year-old constable. Surely he would be in to vote soon. Already more than 100 folks had.

"He is really government-minded," Mrs. Scarborough said. "He comes in all the time. It's too cold for him to play golf," she said.

Highway signals synchronized

If you watch your speed, driving along the Andrews Highway should be a lot smoother now.

That's what Public Works Director Fred Baker said Thursday following the recent hookup of all 17 traffic lights along the Andrews Highway to a new traffic synchronization system.

The new system favors inbound cars during the morning hours and outbound traffic during the afternoon, Baker said, adding that he thinks drivers who keep their speed down to about 30 mph will benefit most from the light synchronization system.

Wounded identified as terrorists

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Two men badly wounded in a shootout with a police stake-out team in suburban Amsterdam were identified today as West German terrorists sought for various crimes.

The federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden, West Germany, said police were sent to Amsterdam and used fingerprints to identify Christoph Wackernagel, 26, a former actor wanted in the kidnapping and murder of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

They named the second man as Gerd Richart Schneider, 29, sought for an Oct. 31 bombing at a courthouse in Zweibruecken. The did not say how Schneider was identified.

Dutch authorities at first believed the second man was Rolf Clemens Wagner, 33. Amsterdam Prosecutor A. N. Messchaert had said such an identification was "almost certain," but that there was some doubt because the men carried forged papers.

The alleged terrorists were arrested after a Thursday night gun and grenade battle with police.

Police said one man was hit in the chest and stomach and the other in the head. One man reportedly underwent emergency surgery. Three policemen suffered minor injuries.

West German authorities have identified Wackernagel and Wagner as members of the Red Army Faction.

The terrorist band, also known as the Baader-Meinhof gang, claimed responsibility for killing Schleyer, who headed the West German employers association. He was abducted Sept. 5 in Cologne and his body was found in the trunk of a car in Mulhouse, France, on Oct. 19, the day after West German commandos stormed a hijacked Lufthansa jetliner in Somalia, and freed 86 hostages aboard.

Despite reports that police were looking for a woman who fled the scene of Thursday's shooting, Messchaert said: "There were no indications that any more people were involved."

He said police had staked out an apartment in a residential area of western Amsterdam after they stumbled onto the building while hunting the abductors of Dutch multimillionaire Maurits Caransa.

The prosecutor did not indicate the two wounded suspects were involved in the kidnapping of Caransa, who was released Nov. 2 after payment of a $4.1 million ransom to abductors he described as apolitical. But Messchaert said the team that found the apartment had orders to look for potential terrorist hiding places.

The prosecutor said two men left the apartment Thursday night and 10 detectives followed them to a public telephone booth nearby. Police said the apartment had a telephone and they did not know why the men went outside to make a call.

The two men entered the booth, Messchaert said, and a plain clothes detective approached and asked how long they would be.

One of the men replied in German, "One moment, please," and pulled a pistol, the prosecutor said. He said the man started shooting as uniformed police approached. One of the suspects hurled a grenade, slightly wounding one officer. Police returned fire with rifles.

West German police believe Wackernagel, a theater superintendent's son, first met terrorists in Munich where he was a well-known juvenile actor on German television.

Midlander re-elected by league

Murray Fasken, chairman of The Midland National Bank Board, was re-elected to the Board of Directors of the Texas Research League at its 25th Annual Membership Meeting in Austin today.

The league is a citizen-supported, educational corporation engaged in objective research into the operations and finances of Texas government. Its purpose is to encourage more efficient and more economical state and local government in Texas.

John P. Harbin, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, Halliburton Company, Dallas, was elected chairman of the league for 1978.

Solons advised against 'disease-of-month' aid

By ROB WOOD

HOUSTON (AP)—Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was advised Thursday that when the federal government hands out funds for biomedical research the lawmakers should continue to finance a project without jumping from one disease to another.

Kennedy, in Houston to meet with medical researchers and scientists in an effort to gain more knowledge about the nation's health problems, admitted Congress has become "a disease-of-the-month club."

In a speech at the Texas Medical Center, one of the nation's largest research centers, said, "Congress must recognize that this disease-by-disease approach to federal support for biomedical research is incapable of working adequately in a period of tight budgets.

"We need standards for deciding how to allocate scarce research dollars among competing research priorities. We also need mechanisms which will keep Congress and the public currently informed about both public needs and research opportunities," he said.

The Massachusetts Democrat, chairman of the Senate Health and Scientific Research Subcommittee, and a regional health clinic, met in private with scientists from the medical center, conducted a public hearing with five top researchers, and then headed for a similiar meeting in Albuquerque, N.M.

Kennedy said his subcommittee will hold hearings on the cancer research program early next year in an effort "to assess how well our dollars have been spent. And, the public must be accepted as an active partner in the development and evaluation."

The senator had some sharp words for the biomedical researchers for failing to let Congress know where the federal funds available should be spent.

He said, "Why, when nutrition is so obviously coming to the forefront as a central cause of disease in America, does the National Institutes of Health spend only $20-$40 million a year on nutrition reseach, out of an annual budget of $2.5 billion?

"Why is so little attention paid to behavioral research in the treatment and cure of disease?

"Finally, why should Congress have to raise these questions? The research community should be coming to us. You should be telling us that there are important areas of medicine which are not now receiving the kind of support they deserve," he said.

Dr. Bert O'Malley, chairman of cell biology at the Baylor College of Medicine, told the senator, "We have a stable of champion researchers. All we need are some champions of research."

Dr. William T. Butler, dean of the Baylor College of Medicine, told The Associated Press before the hearing:

"The point we are trying to make is that unless there is an increase in research, let's say 10 years from now, there will be no bright young minds going into this area, because the money isn't there. It will be eaten-up by inflation. That is when the American public will suffer because of the lack of medical research."

Dinner slated

A dinner commemorating Veteran's Day for veterans and their families will be held at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at Tall City VFW Post 7208, 1306 E. Taylor Ave.

Rotary hosts college group

Members of the Rotaract Club at Midland College were special guests of the Downtown Rotary Club Thursday noon in the Midland Hilton. The Rotaract group is sponsored by the Downtown Rotary unit.

Randy Johnson, president of Rotaract, was in charge of the program, which featured a slide presentation showing the organizational process, purpose, objectives, membership requirements and projects of a Rotaract Club in Oslo, Norway.

Rotaract is the junior organization of Rotary International.

Johnson, after introducing his fellow members of the college group, said the club now is engaged in three special programs: International Understanding, Community Service and Vocational Service.

South African arrests aimed at 'criminals'

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Police swept through the black township of Atteridgeville-Faulsville, arresting 626 blacks in a six-hour raid which authorities called a drive to combat criminal elements.

Brig. H.L. Abbott, division commander of police for northern Transvaal province, said Thursday's raid outside Pretoria was not connected with student unrest which has erupted intermittently since June 1976.

Among those arrested were 198 schoolchildren. Police said they would determine if any of the children should be referred to institutions. South Africa operates welfare homes for homeless black children.

Abbott said 410 persons were arrested for violation of passbook laws that require blacks to carry identity books and obtain government permission to live and work in white areas. The laws are used by the white government to control the movement of blacks in urban areas.

Eight blacks were charged with possession of stolen property, five with public violence, four with possession of marijuana and one with illegal possession of gasoline.

Police surrounded the township Thursday morning and began stopping cars and buses moing in and out of the area.

The police action followed the government's massive crackdown last month on opponents of its apartheid policy of racial segregation. On Oct. 18, the government banned 18 black organizations, closed two black-oriented newspapers and detained more than 60 persons.

Also Thursday, American U.N.Ambassador Andrew Young told the governing board of the National Council of Churches in New York that South African Prime Minister John Vorster must be living a hell on earth because of apartheid.

Young said the mandatory arms embargo ordered by the U.N. Security Council after the October crackdown was "the first serious opposition to apartheid." He said he hoped that action would bring about change in South Africa.

Carter vows dam safety will not slide by again

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Carter, conceding that a national dam safety program approved by Congress five years ago had never been implemented by the executive branch, pledged Thursday that it "will not be postponed any further."

"I intend to pursue this dam safety inspection now without surcease," Carter said at a news conference five days after the collapse of a private dam near Toccoa, Ga., killed 38 persons.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Times learned that last week, three days before the Georgia disaster, a House subcommittee unanimously adopted a yet-to-be-released report declaring that the federal government's continued failure to start inspecting hazardous private dams "is the height of irresponsibility."

"There is a law against aiming a gun and pulling the trigger. There is no law against aiming a dam — but the results are the same," said the report approved by the House Government Operations Committee's Subcommittee on Environment, Energy and Natural Resources.

Responding to a news conference question, Carter said there are "about 50,000 dams in this country that need to be inspected without delay," and added that $15 million voted by Congress last summer — but still not allocated to the Corps of Engineers by the Office of Management and Budget — will be freed "to commence this examination procedure."

"The priorities for inspection of dams will be established depending upon the number of people who are endangered by these potentially unsafe dams," Carter said.

A Corps of Engineers spokesman said the agency's experts would begin the inspections "as soon as we get the go ahead from OMB." An OMB spokesman said the implementation order "will be coming out very soon."

The ill-fated Georgia dam, located on a mountain above Toccoa Falls College, apparently had never been inspected by government engineers. Corps officials said their agency had never been asked to check the dam, and Georgia — where Carter was governor from 1970 to 1974 — is one of eight states without dam safety laws or procedures. California's state dam safety program is regarded by experts as the best in the country.

A national program to inspect private dams "requires a broad range of participation," Carter said. "State governments and local governments ought to participate as well. And private owners of dams ought to reassess both the need for the reservoir to continue in existence ...or repair or examination of the dam ..."

The president said such tragedies as the Toccoa Falls dam collapse "restimulate interest (in dam safety) which has in the past died down after a few weeks."

"I don't intend to let this interest die down," he said.

The House subcommittee's report, which has not been released because it still must be approved by the full Government Operations Committee, urges Carter to "direct the executive branch to assign high priority to the national problem of unsafe dams."

Fed candidates differ in appraisal of board's policy

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two leading economists, both mentioned in speculation as possible successors to Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur F. Burns Thursday split in their appraisals of the board's current policy.

In testimony before the Senate Banking Committee, former board member Arthur F. Brimmer said that new moves to restrain the growth of the money supply, announced Wednesday by Burns, could only be considered "a further step toward monetary restraint and higher interest rates."

Brimmer, now a consultant in Washington, said that the Fed policy would reduce money available for mortgage loans, and "the (resultant) loss of momentum from housing" would have an adverse effect on the economy as a whole.

But New York banker Robert V. Roosa, a former Treasury under secretary in the Kennedy administration, disagreed. Roosa said he thought that the Fed policy "is about right." He suggested that the essential element is that the Fed maintain unchanged its target for the basic money supply, M-1 (cash and checking accounts.)

The Federal Open Market Committee, Burns also announced, had on Oct. 18 reduced by one-half point the upper and lower targets for the "M-2" definition of the money supply, which includes bank savings deposits as well as cash and checking accounts and the "M-3" category, which adds in savings at thrift institutions. But Roosa labeled these targets as merely "predictions", adding, "I don't see how they can reach it."

Roosa and Brimmer did not differ materially on their economic forecasts for 1978, both seeing the need for some stimulus to counteract weakness, particularly after midyear.

But where Brimmer focused on a more liberal monetary and fiscal approach, including a tax cut of $20 to $23 billion, Roosa stressed the need for restoration of business confidence, and "an undergirding of massive new investment," especially for energy.

Roosa delivered an unusually sharp off-the-cuff criticism of the administration in general, and of President Carter in particular, for stirring "an air of distrust and contention" between business and government.

He made special reference to Carter's press conference comment last month about "the greatest ripoff in history" by American oil companies.

"We're creating an atomosphere of defensive suspicion (in the business world) by aggressive and at times abusive criticism by government officials," Roosa said. "There has to be an understanding of the (industrial) earnings process, not a marginal change in tax laws."

He then added that "the tax system is there to catch undue earnings" and the government is wrong to suggest "that all increased earnings are somehow a ripoff."

Roosa answered "yes," when committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., asked if his reference to "abusive criticism" was to President Carter's press conference statement on the oil companies.

New York comeback fails

The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — A plan by New York City to finally re-enter the financial marketplace more than 2 1-2 years after its fiscal crisis was abandoned Thursay after the offering received lowest marks from one of the nation's prestigious municipal credit rating agencies.

The sale of at least $200 million in revenue anticipation notes had been tentatively planned for mid-November. The offering's failure was a blow to outgoing Mayor Abraham D. Beame, who had hoped to end his career in office on a positive note. It also was a reminder to incoming Mayor Edward I. Koch that the city's fiscal crisis has not evaporated and that a long road of financial negotiations stretches ahead.

The last time the city sold its notes to the public was in March 1975.

Underwriters told city officials Thursay that the new offering was not possible after Moody's Investors Service Inc. graded the notes MIG-4, its lowest mark.

"It is outrageous that Moody's did not see fit to recognize the genuine progress that the city has made toward fiscal recovery and that this supposedly objective rating service will base its decisions on inaccurate information," Beame retorted. "This city has either repaid or provided for payment of every nickel of outstanding notes. This issue was sanctioned by the state "legislature, which established strict safeguards to guarantee repayment. We believe that the proposed note sale was a good and sound investment and should have received a rating commensurate with its worth."

Mayor-elect Koch issued a brief statement.

"I believe that the unsatisfactory rating given to New York City notes is a clear indication of the financial community's uncertainty about the future of New York," he said. "There are several key issues which must be addressed by the new administration. These include labor negotiations, new sources of borrowing and a continuation of some form of control mechanism.

"In my judgment, the cancellation of the note sale will not imperil the seasonal loan program. But it is a clear sign that the city must take the steps necessary to improve its credit rating."

"The general credit of the issuer can be assessed as adding little to the assurance of payment of these obligations," Moody's said in its rating statement Thursday. "The issuer at this time remains in default on other short-term obligations and its overall financial position is so precarious as not to preclude the possibility of bankrupcy in future years."

J-Bo's buddies grace funeral in costumes

DALLAS (AP) — J-Bo wouldn't have known "Mr. Glitter," "Mickey, the Bum," "Pointus Pig" and "Winkle" without their colorful costumes. So that's the way they came to his funeral.

The costumed members of the Rainbow Park Players were among 250 mourners to pay their last respects to 7-year-old James A. Bowling Jr., the 1976 regional poster child for the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation.

After the services, "Love Bug" and "Quintin Penguin III" joined the procession walking by J-Bo's open casket. "Mr. Glitter," one of the last to pass, kissed the boy.

The presence of the troupe of characters fulfilled one of J-Bo's final wishes. The boy, who met the players at a backyard carnival last summer, died Monday en route to Children's Medical Center.

Entering the solemn funeral home chapel in costume — with grease paint for some — posed no problem for the players, "Mr. Glitter," Dee Dewayne-Bevers said after the Wednesday funeral.

"That's the way that he knew us all, and we were asked by the family to come that way," Beavers said.

"There was a love that surrounded him that just grasped everyone who came close to him," Beavers said. "He seemed to know the situation he was in and accepted it more readily than most around him."

The Rainbow Park Players include local musicians, actors and actresses who usually perform at Llove Entertainment Center.

They saw J-Bo for the final time last Saturday at a festival where the boy was the honored guest.

Beavers said the players have planned to hold a memorial carnival each year on July 28 — J-Bo's birthday. "We've dedicated ourselves to this project."

Two men in simple blue costumes also attended the funeral. They were two Dallas police officers who had met J-Bo at the backyard carnival last summer.

The pair had volunteered to escort the funeral procession to the cemetery.

New testimony exonerates Davis

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A defense witness in the Cullen Davis murder trial testified today he saw an unidentified man enter the Davis mansion before midnight Aug. 2, 1976, and that man was not the millionaire murder defendant.

Uewayne Polk told the jury he saw the man put something on his head before he entered the mansion where two persons were shot to death and two others wounded.

The surprise defense witness, a co-owner of a Fort Worth nursery, said he went to the mansion that night to recover some plants for which he said he had not been paid.

Polk said he had tried several times to collect $677 from the defendant's estranged wife, Priscilla, but had been unsuccessful.

Polk added he visited the mansion earlier that day and unlocked a sliding glass door presumably with the intent of returning that night.

Asked by chief defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Polk said he told no one of the incident until he contacted his lawyer last month.

Asked why he waited so long, Polk said: "Out of fear."

He added, "fear of my business, fear of the man who really did it. Fear of Priscilla Davis' friends, just fear."

According to Polk's timetable, the man entered the mansion sometime between 11:31 and 11:41.

Polk said that shortly after he spotted the man, "he put something on his head I first thought it was a stocking."

Mrs. Davis testified the assailant wore a woman's black wig and that his hands and pistol were concealed in a plastic garbage bag.

Polk said the man carried a burlap sack.

He said he saw him "very clearly" and that his hair was "short and curly" and that he had a "round face" with high cheek bones.

"Was the man you saw ... Cullen Davis?" Haynes asked.

"Definitely not," Polk replied.

He said he had not seen the man since that time, but that he would recognize him if he ever saw him again.

Polk indicated he thought the man spotted him at one point and said, "I took off. I ran back toward the river."

Polk, 33, said he had never seen Davis before today.

Polk said he left his home at Eagle Mountain Lake shortly after 9 p.m. and drove to a spot perhaps two miles from the mansion. He said he rode a motorbike from there to within a short distance of the Davis estate.

He said he first saw the man after he had waded across a creek and that he thought he was a hobo.

He said he followed the man up to the mansion and saw him enter a swimming pool area, but did not actually see him enter the house.

Polk said the closest he ever got to the man was eight feet and at the time Polk said he himself was concealed in some bushes.

Ballyhoo over texts continues

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A State Board of Education member has accused a feminist leader of wanting to indoctrinate high school pupils, and she cheerfully pleaded guilty.

The exchange came as the board heard final protests Thursday against volumes recommended by the State Textbook Committee for use in the public schools. The board votes on the $30 million adoption Saturday.

Twiss Butler of Nassau Bay, representing the National Organization for Women, objected vehemently to "Clerical Office Procedures," published by South-Western Publishing Co.

Ms. Butler said the book's basic message was that "men will be bosses and women will serve them."

"This book teaches them, if not actually fear of the boss, at least a great deal of crawling subservience," she said.

Board member Jack Binion of Abilene, asserted to Ms. Butler, "You're trying to indoctrinate kids with a doctrine."

"Yes I am, one which has to do with fairness and equality of opportunity for the individual, which I think reflects the laws of our country," she replied.

South-West's representative, Henry Ransom of Cincinnati, said, "In no place in the textbook do we talk down to women or do we low-rate them. In fact, I think as you read through the text that we promote women."

Anne Droste of Fort Worth said a seventh grade Texas history and geography book, "Texas, the Land and its People," published by Hendrick-Long Publishing Co., was childish and inaccurate.

"The Anglo is painted as land hungry and as one who resorted to threats and bribes in order to maintain political control," she said, "whereas blacks, Mexican Americans and women are the oppressed minority."

Mrs. Droste said the "good guy" in the book was the federal government while "businessmen, the railroads and oil companies are painted as the bad guys with black hats."

While acknowledging the book was written at a fifth grade level for poor readers, she said it didn't have to consist of "simple, choppy statements that are reminiscent of 'See Jane run.'"

Report says Texas women susceptible to German measles

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A sample study shows that one out of five Texas women are susceptible to rubella, or German measles, says the State Health Department.

"This report is significant — and a bit frightening," Dr. Charles Webb, chief of the Bureau of Communicable Disease Services, said Thursday.

If rubella strikes a pregnant woman in the first three months of pregnancy, Webb noted in a statement, it can cripple or kill the unborn child.

He said blood samples of 1,025 women, ages 16 to 30, were sent to the department's laboratories for evaluation. A preliminary report showed that 201 of the women, or 19.7 percent, were susceptible to rubella.

Viewing executions reinforces newsman's opposition

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of three articles. The first in the series appeared in The Reporter-Telegram on Thursday, and the third will be published Saturday.)

By AMY KIDD
Austin Bureau

HUNTSVILLE — It didn't take watching 189 men die in the Texas electric chair to convince Don Reid that the death penalty is wrong.

He began questioning its effectiveness and its merit almost 40 years ago. And he continues to fight an admittedly uphill battle against the death penalty in a state where he says frontier justice remains very much a part of life.

Reid, publisher emeritus of The Huntsville Item, has covered Texas executions for The Associated Press since 1938. He believes wholeheartedly in his cause, but says he isn't kidding himself about its lack of popular support.

"The mood of America today is for the death penalty, I know that," he notes, adding that his own profession, journalism, has helped to cement public attitudes by blowing a rising crime rate out of proportion.

"It's gotten to the point that the little old lady with tennis shoes who lives out here in Hoopky's Corners where there's only about five houses suddenly has a fear that she'll be raped or robbed or murdered — in bed.

"And when you have a mood like that, the first thing is, 'Let's put everybody in the penetentiary,' or, 'Let's execute everybody. That'll stop it'."

Reid predicts glumly that it will take at least 25 years for attitudes toward capital punishment to soften; and until then, Texas can expect a "bloodbath" as executions become easier.

Reid expresses typical arguments against capital punishment, saying it personifies the "cruel and unusual" punishment prohibited by the U. S. Constitution. In addition, he claims it's applied unfairly to a single group.

"They're dropouts," he says. "Most of them are the dregs of society. They've never learned a behavioral pattern that's in keeping with our social structures."

Most Death Row inmates are paying for a life without regulation or achievement in school, work or marriage, he says.

"And most of them are poor."

The financial condition of those who end up on Death Row also concerns John Duncan, executive director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union. The TCLU and its counterpart, the American Civil Liberties Union, have argued unsuccessfully that the death penalty is unconstitutional. Furthermore, Duncan maintains, equal protection under the law doesn't exist on Death Row — and that even there, money talks.

"If you look at the statistics in terms of who is represented by paid counsel and who is represented by court appointed counsel, you find a striking difference in the number of convictions of persons represented by court-appointed counsel. There's a striking difference, too, in the number of death penalties handed down by juries where counsel is court-appointed as opposed to where counsel is retained.

"Not many millionaires get sent off to Death Row."

The death penalty has a solid future in Texas, Duncan predicts, and he estimates in two or more years, some convicts will have exhausted years of state and federal appeals.

"It'll become a routine fashion if there's not some decision by the Legislature or the courts to prohibit it," he predicts.

"You may be able to string it (appeals) out five or six years, but at some point you reach the end of your rope, so to speak."

Unlike other opponents of capital punishment, Reid says he can recommend changes in the criminal justice system to replace the death penalty: Stronger emphasis on rehabilitation, removing from juries the right to assess punishment, and reliance on a citizens' council to investigate individual cases and recommend sentences, and requiring prisoners to serve determined portions of their sentences before they are considered for parole.

Meanwhile, Reid maintains Texans are getting "nothing for their money" through the criminal justice system that risks executing innocent men and deprives society of potential contributions, even from the criminals it has sentenced to death.

"The trouble is, most people are not willing to sit on the jury that assesses the death penalty," he says.

"They're for it as long as the other fellow pulls the switch."

Sunflowers sprouting as cash crop sensation

The Los Angeles Times

Alongside the familiar fields of Midwestern wheat and corn stands an eerie sight: row upon row of ungainly sunflowers swaying in the breeze, carefully cultivated like a cash crop.

The surprising fact is that they are an increasingly important cash crop, with something over 2 million acres planted. "They could be the soybeans of the plains," says one grain executive.

Farmers have known for decades that sunflower seeds produce one of the world's best cooking oils, high in polyunsaturates and virtually smokeless at high frying temperatures.

But extensive cultivation was never pursued as prime growing lands were given over to wheat, corn and other grains. Now, growing demand for the oil coupled with depressed grain prices is prompting vast new sunflower plantings.

The nation's food companies are reacting by initiating marketing tests of sunflower cooking and salad oil. Procter and Gamble has already introduced a 75 percent sunflower oil, and Hunt-Wesson Foods began test marketing a 100 percent sunflower oil in Seattle this fall.

If consumers take to the oil, many Midwestern grain farmers will undoubtedly insert sunflowers into their regular crop rotation. To some extent, sunflowers would then insulate Midwestern farm income from the vagaries of the grain markets.

The profits to date on sunflowers have been impressive. With only average yield a farmer can expect to gross around $100 an acre at current prices with sunflowers compared to $70 for wheat. Production costs on sunflowers can be higher if insecticides are needed, but some farmers claim sunflowers costs are actually lower than wheat.

North Dakota farmers alone will gross $160 million on sunflowers this year, 10 percent of the state's total farm income, says Chuck Moses, president of Interstate Seed and Grain Co. of Fargo, N.D. Moses is also a founder of the Sunflower Association of America.

"I think $1 billion in sales is a realistic goal for U.S. sunflowers," he says.

He bases his projection on the unquestioned suitability of sunflowers for cultivation in the drylands of the Midwest and on the demand for the product already demonstrated in Europe. Almost 90 percent of U.S. sunflower seeds are exported to Europe and Japan.

"It is the Cadillac of oils," says Thomas Medd.

Arabs soar in shoring up defenses

Newsday

Alarmed by increases in Israeli military power, Arab nations are beginning a crash program to catch up, Pentagon officials say. The program will include requests for U.S. weapons.

The growing gap in military capability between Israel and the Arabs, underscored by the impunity with which the Israelis now are conducting military operations in southern Lebanon, is currently so wide, Pentagon analysts say, that it will take years for the Arab nations to catch up.

In fact, Pentagon officials say, the Arab military structure among the so-called "confrontation states" bordering Israel — Egypt, Syria and Jordan — is in disarray.

Egypt's break with the Soviet Union has meant that the Russian-equipped Egyptian military machine is falling apart for lack of spare parts. Syria's military capability was crippled by a 10-month Soviet arms embargo this year because of the Syrian role in Lebanon. Jordan's supply of Soviet arms has been nearly cut off because of Jordan's disputes with other Arab nations.

According to the Pentagon officials, the Arabs have decided to solve the problem by diversifying their sources of arms as part of a catch-up program. The Arabs hope to obtain most of their arms from the British and French but also have made quiet overtures to the United States for military equipment.

Thus far the Carter administration has approved only the sale of C-130 military transport planes to Egypt on the grounds that these are "non-lethal" weapons. The bulk of American arms sales to Arab nations goes to Saudi Arabia, which is not considered an Arab "confrontation state" by the U.S.

The Egyptians, Pentagon officials say, are beginning a two-year, $6 billion plan to overhaul their military forces by replacing aging Soviet equipment with modern European weapons.

The Egyptian plan also includes the purchase of 40 F5 fighters and 100 helicopter gunships from the U.S. However, it is doubtful that the U.S. Congress would approve such a purchase.

Even if the Egyptians get everything they want, the Pentagon officials point out, they would still be far behind the Israelis. Since the 1973 war the Israelis not only have nearly doubled their military arsenal in every key category, but also have made vast improvements technologically.

In front-line combat-fighter strength, for example, the Israelis have begun receiving American F15 and F16 fighters, far superior to the obsolete MIG21 models that form the backbone of Arab air forces, and to the new British and French fighters the Arabs will get. Moreover, the electronic weapons, missiles and "smart Bombs" the U.S. is sending Israel are far superior to anything the arabs have.

The same holds true for other weapons categories. According to the authoritative International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, the Arabs have increased their overall tank forces since 1973.

Candidate Daniel decries juvenile crime problem

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Price Daniel Jr. told the Texas Coalition for Juvenile Justice Thursday that "frankly, the public is increasingly afraid of its own youth."

The candidate for attorney general said more crime is committed by children under 15 than by adults over the age of 25. He said the number of juveniles arrested last year, almost 88,000, was 150 per cent more than the total arrested in 1960. For the same period there was only an increase of 16 per cent in the number of adults arrested.

"We should steel our determination to increase our delinquency prevention efforts and to use the most effective possible means to help those juvenile offenders who enter the juvenile justice system," the Democratic contender said.

"I do believe, however, that massive new funds must be expended on the juvenile justice system. Rather we should develop new priorities for spending the funds already allocated to juvenile justice. We should not need new dollars — just new priorities," Daniel said.

He said he felt that the "true basis for fighting deliquency must come with instilling respect for the law in out children. But respect for the law must be earned. It cannot simply be demanded....We must continually strive to improve our justice system so that it may earn the respect of our youth."

Attorney general's CIA 'connection' to swell with order

Newsday

WASHINGTON — President Carter is preparing to issue an executive order that would substantially strengthen the attorney general's power to review the legality of clandestine CIA activities, according to high-ranking administration and congressional officials.

The order is part of a major administration effort to reorganize the intelligence community and avoid the abuses of the past.

Administration officials said the order would put the attorney general in a position to block an intelligence activity he believed violated the rights of American citizens, subject only to a final decision by the president. The attorney general already has direct authority over the FBI.

The officials said that the executive order, which could be issued as early as the end of next week, would represent a further tightening of the rules and regulations issued last year by President Ford as a means of curbing CIA abuses.

"It is an evolutionary, not a revolutionary step," one official said. "But we believe it represents a significant advance over 11905 (the Ford executive order)."

Currently the attorney general is consulted on CIA intelligence activities and makes recommendations on specific projects. But one White House official said Wednesday night that under the Carter order the attorney general "will establish the framework" under which these activities can take place. "He will set the standards. It will make him a co-equal of other members of the intelligence community."

In addition to strengthening the attorney general's role, the executive order would list more specifically rules under which the intelligence community must operate, including regulations on warrantless wiretaps, searches and mail-openings. The president also is expected to submit charter guidelines for FBI intelligence activity as well as for other agencies in the intelligence community, including the National Security Administration and Defense Intelligence Agency.

A just-released General Accounting Office study criticized the lack of a charter for the FBI and recommended one to outline the agency's role in domestic intelligence-gathering.

Sen. Walter Huddleston (D-Ky.), head of the Senate Intelligence subcommittee on charters and guidelines, said he viewed increased authority of the attorney general as the key step. Huddleston noted that his panel was continuing to work on a set of guidelines in the same area.

"How much the Congress does really depends on how far we think the president is going," he said. "We believe the attorney general should have a very strong role in reviewing the legality of proposed CIA operations." If the President's proposals do not go far enough, he said, "then we will certainly go ahead with our plans."

Huddleston said that because an executive order can always be changed by the president, "we feel there is a need for rules and regulations governing the conduct of the intelligence community passed by the Congress of the United States." Huddleston noted that his panel would be ready to begin hearings on congressional proposals by the first of the year.

Salute to Veterans!

The Lone Star State and its citizens today are observing Veterans Day, as proclaimed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

The traditional Nov. 11 date, of course, stems from Armistice Day, which commemorated the signing of the armistice ending World War I on Nov. 11, 1918. It officially received its name in 1926 and became a national holiday by act of Congress in 1938.

President Eisenhower, in 1954, signed into law a bill which renamed Nov. 11 as Veterans Day, an occasion to honor the veterans of all wars in which the United States has been involved.

Then a few years ago, Veterans Day somehow got mixed up in the "long holiday weekend" legislation, which changed the date to the fourth Monday in October.

The change was not acceptable to many individuals and organizations and, as a result of the howl which went up from the public, Congress in 1975, changed Veterans Day back to the traditional Nov. 11, beginning in 1978.

The Texas Legislature, however, enacted legislation in 1975, changing the observance back to Nov. 11 immediately.

Regardless of date, however, Veterans Day stands out as one of the most patriotic, most significant and most meaningful of our state and national holidays.

Gov. Briscoe, in his proclamation, said:

"The men and women who served in the uniform of our Country have made a major contribution not only to the preservation of America's freedom but also toward the attainment and preservation of freedom throughout the world.

"The galant Americans serving in today's armed forces continue to demonstrate the unselfish willingness of our Nation to meet the challenge of those forces wishing to defeat through armed conflict the cause of individual determination.

"The nation and the free world are eternally grateful for the contributions of American veterans to the advancement of the cause of an honorable world peace."

This is putting it just about as clearly and as meaningful as anyone could, and we join with the governor in a salute to America's veterans.

There most certainly is nothing wrong in a display of patriotism at any time, but on this particular day patriotism should shine through in brilliant hues as citizens honor all those veterans of the United States of America, both living and dead, who have served courageously to win and preserve this nation's freedom.

COPE zeroes in

The AFL-CIO has announced that no longer will its Committee on Political Education support liberal candidates simply because they are liberal, but instead will support only those candidates who vote, or show sympathy, with labor. The AFL-CIO says this strategy amounts to a big change, which it is.

But, according to the San Diego, Calif., Union, more interesting, perhaps, is that the change in COPE is a response to a fundamental change in American politics. For no longer is it possible to infer with any certainty that a person is pro-labor because he is liberal.

Labels like "liberal" and "conservative" have been losing application as more and more issues have been considered and decided on ad hoc bases. The consumer and environmental movements have peeled away the labels, and so have the weakening of the Keynesian orthodoxy in economics, as the San Diego newspaper reports.

"So, for good reason, COPE is going beyond the general, beyond the label of 'liberal,' to the singular issue of a candidate's fidelity to labor," the newspaper comments.

"Whether COPE will spend its funds more successfully this way is an open question, of course. Inasmuch as it now will skip a candidate's views on taxes, welfare, and employment, however, it reasonably may be wondered whether COPE isn't really the Committee on Political Education but the Committee on Labor Pressure."

CHARLEY REESE SAYS:

Recruiting ground for terrorists told

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — One of the ironies of our time is that the evil, communism, which claims to be a movement of the workers, has always been and is still a product of the middle to upper classes.

A statistical profile of terrorists, published in the August issue of "Military Review," confirms that the majority of the minds directing the slaughter of innocent people are mostly middle to upper class, mostly university trained, and mostly Marxist-Leninists.

The profile was based on a study of the known facts about 350 terrorists from 18 different organizations. It showed, for example, that while the cadre tended to be in their early 20s, the leaders were most often in their 30s or 40s.

Most of the terrorists come from urban, middle to upper income backgrounds — 66 per cent for the group as a whole and as high as 90 per cent in Latin American terrorist organizations. The only exception was the Provisional Wing of the Irish Republican Army. The authors of the study conclude that discrimination against Catholics have kept them in the lower economic rungs.

In most instances, the terrorists are sons and daughters of establishment types — professional people, government bureaucrats, diplomats, clergymen, and military officers. However, the study revealed that while their parents were establishment types, nearly all the parents had suffered in political setbacks or personal frustatrations, were liberal in outlook, and advocated radical changes in the social structure.

Among the leadership of the terrorist organizations, most of the people are professional men. Yasir Arafat, of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, is an engineer, George Habbash, another Palestinian terrorist, is a doctor. Jan Raspe and Gudrun Ennslin, who just died in German prisons, were a sociologist and journalists respectively.

The common recruiting ground for terrorists, the study found, is the university where often professors and administrators are Marxist. The predominant political philosophy of the terrorists, including the Palestinians and the Irish both of whom are presumably nationalistic, is Marxist.

This should surprise no one. Communism in all its variations preaches that the end justifies the means and places no value whatsoever on an individual human life. Such a creed appeals to people who are not squeamish about cutting a child's throat or shooting down an unarmed person.

That's why communist countries are hell holes. The dogma attracts the worst members of any group — the envious, the stupid, and the brutish.

The West German government couldn't be more right in its call for all nations to recognize terrorism for what it is, criminal barbarism. Nothing makes me angrier than to hear some jerk speak of terrorists as patriots or liberators.

It is one thing to make war against a government you wish to overthrow; it is another to murder civilians, not by accident or by some undisciplined isolated unit as sometimes happens in a war, but by deliberate and cold-blooded policy.

The Israeli government is morally correct in refusing to talk to the PLO. A civilized person does not talk to people who blow up school children; he just shoots them whenever he gets the chance.

The American government's support of the so-called guerrillas in Rhodesia is obscene. People who decapitate a child and use her head for a soccer ball are sub-human animals who do not understand the concept of humanity much less the concept of nationhood.

How can we, who participated in the Nuremberg trials at the end of World War II, condone such inhuman behaviour? It's the worst kind of hypocrisy to issue press releases condemning terrorism while our leaders drink toasts to butchers at U.N. cocktail parties and supply aid to countries which are run by terrorists and which harbor and aid other terrorists.

To treat Marxist vermin as legitimate nationalists is a betrayal of our own ideals, yet that is the official policy of the Carter administration which is why I say his human rights policy is nothing more than a public relations stunt to hide from the American people the fact his foreign policy is exactly the same amoral, cynical and expedient foreign policy his predecessors practiced.

The American do deserve the best. It's a shame they haven't gotten it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Agency wanted to crash a 707

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON—Two years ago, we reported that the nuclear industry was hauling lethal radioactive materiels around the country in vulnerable casks. Trucks, trains and planes carried the deadly cargo into heavily populated areas.

The shipments were authorized by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission which has spent millions, meanwhile, trying to develop a safer nuclear container. Much of the effort has been devoted to a feud with the rival Energy Research and Development Administration over safety standards.

Internal documents show that the multi-million-dollar research, so far, has been a comedy of errors. For awhile, the commission toyed with the idea of crashing a Boeing 707 to test the durability of sample container. Officials even approached the Pentagon brass about procurinq two suitable planes for the test crashes.

This scheme was abandoned by less venturesome soul who felt it might become too expensive to wreck perfectly good jet airplanes. Less spectacular tests, however, were conducted.

Last April, the internal reports show that a supposedly "failsafe" cask was badly damaged during a routine test. Hasty repairs were made, but the cask also failed a second round of examinations.

The delay provoked Commissioner Richard Kennedy into writing an exasperated memo. After two years, he complained, there was still "no acceptable design package" for the nuclear casks.

Footnote: A spokesman assured us that the agency plans to have completed its final container standards by "the end of the year." Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., has led a congressional effort to improve nuclear safety standards.

CARTER vs. PRESS — Lobbyists wishing to rub elbows with White House insiders paid $250 apiece the other day to hear presidential pollster Patrick Caddell answer their questions about his eminent client, Jimmy Carter. Caddell was the featured speaker at a private fund-raising dinner for Rep. Andy IreLand, D-Fla. Over filet mignon, brandy and expensive cigars, they bombarded the pollster with questions.

Did the president, one businessman asked, look upon the press as an enemy? Caddell acknowledged that Carter has never been one of the media's "favorite people." Added the pollster: "They're tough on each other."

Caddell said that Carter is an "activist" president, who has taken unpopular but necessary stands on controversial issues. The pollster warned, for example, that the public doesn't yet comprehend the full impact of the energy crisis.

ELECTRIC CHARGE — A Texas firm has been ballyhooing government statistics in an effort to peddle its electric vans.

The company, Jet Industries, has been ballyhooing the results of tests conducted last year by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. But the figures that Jet has been promoting bear little resemblance to the NASA tests.

For example, Jet claims its electric van can travel 131 miles at 31 miles per hour without a battery recharge, while NASA found it could go only 70 miles at 20 miles per hour. And NASA never even performed some tests that Jet publicized in its promotional material.

Jet's president, William Bales, insisted he didn't know his figures were wrong. But he conceded that his promotional material included results of tests done by his company, not NASA, although this is not clearly indicated in its sales literature. Bales told our reporter Valerie Strauss: "We didn't mean to deceive or mislead anyone."

Meanwhile, an Energy Department official has been helping to promote the Jet van on the basis of the false figures. Walter Dippold wrote a letter to Jet praising its van as "superior," "impressive," and "especially remarkable." Dippoid, it should be noted, was one of the officials who helped award a governnent contract to Jet to build electric vans.

Dippold told us he didn't know the figures were wrong or that Jet would use its letter to hawk its van. But once he found out, he admitted, "I didn't tell them they couldn't use it." Industry sources, however, told us Dippold is "too friendly" with Jet.

Footnote: NASA officials confirmed to us that Jet is claiming its van can go faster and faster than NASA found it could.

SALAD DRESSING — The Food and Drug Administration has come under fire for trying to allow manufacturers to use cheaper substitutes in ice cream. But now the agency is doing the same thing for nearly 100 other foods, including yogurt, skim milk, mayonnaise, salad dressing, and mozzarella cheese.

Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., has warned FDA chief Donald Kennedy in an angry letter that he may sue FDA because "you have violated statutory limits that may be made only by Congress." FDA has failed to protect consumers from "economic adulteration, by which less expensive ingredients are substituted," Rose charges. This illegal policy is "benefiting only the food industry...not consumers."

The FDA says it has the legal authority to set food standards, and that it will result in lower prices with no drop in nutritional quality. Consumer groups, however, say the industry will keep the extra profits and that foods such as ice cream won't taste the same.

A CHANGING WORLD:

U.S. aid to Caribbean islands can be frustrating

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

John Pinkerman

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada — There is a desperate need for help among the lowest-level rural people of more than a dozen Caribbean islands like this smallest independent nation in the Western Hemisphere. The United States is doing considerable to meet the need.

However, there are endless problems involved if the American taxpayer's dollar is to be spent wisely — without waste — and genuine solutions to these problems still are not in sight.

Problems notwithstanding, some progress is being made in uplifting the lives of farmers and others at the poverty level, and the heartwarming result of all this is that in this mostly English-speaking area the American image is a healthy one, contrasting vividly with the "Yankee go home" problems faced by Americans in much of Spanish-speaking Latin America.

The U.S. bureau handling the most important aspects of foreign aid in this part of the Caribbean is the Agency for International Development, and the stress is on helping small farmers (those with less than 25 acres) in what loosely are called the less developed areas.

These areas include independent island nations like Grenada, former British colonies now called the Associated States of Dominica, St. Kitts-Nevis, Antigua, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, and British crown colonies like Montsarret, Anguilla, the Turks Islands, Cayman Islands and Belize. More developed areas like Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad-Tobago are not eligible for most of the AID programs in effect here, although certain marginal specific projects are exceptions.

If you happen to believe in spheres of influence, the American interest here is a necessary one. Cuba and the Soviet Union are infiltrating many of the island areas — to the point where Guyana is very Red-oriented, Jamaica is swinging leftward and other areas are near the tottering stage.

Nations like Barbados and Trinidad-Tobago lean toward the United States and constitute a restraining influence on other nearby regimes that constantly are courted by Cuban-Soviet gestures.

If there is one issue that is a "no issue" down here it is the Panama Canal. When U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young swept through nearby Barbados on his whirlwind Latin tour several weeks ago his rhetoric in favor of the controversial canal treaty fell on deaf ears and expressions of mystification. These people couldn't care less. Their problem is aid for the rural poor and greater diversification of industry plus health advances that include birth control through professional family planning projects.

That is where the AID program comes in — along with all the frustrations in administering it.

An oversimplified idea of how big the problem is may be gained from the fact that for the year just ended Sept. 30, there had been $6.5 million in loans earmarked for the island people concerned — but very little of it was actually allocated.

"The problem is," AID Affairs Officer Thomas R. Stuman said in an interview, "that there is a paucity of middle-area managers among these island people and the need for such managers is directly related to the proper and ethical use of the funds available. We are helping them, and we are making progress, but nothing is going to happen overnight."

Under the AID programs, no direct bilateral aid, i.e., United States to Anguilla, is authorized. Somehow, the bureaucrats in Washington have designed a cumbersome procedure that stymies many worthwhile projects.

Money first is allocated to the Caribbean Development Bank, which in turn makes loans to specific national agencies, which in turn (hopefully) get the assistance down to the farmer or village concerned.

Stuman and his small staff must monitor this procedure closely in order to prevent even innocent misuse of funds.

"These sub-loans just don't move fast enough," Stuman said. "The islands simply do not have the middle managers to formulate applications and handle the administration. We are trying to help them but there are delays that can be very frustrating, particularly when we know the need is there."

Despite all the problems, the U.S. investment seems to be a wise one.

The local populations see the United States in a favorable light at a time when ideological confrontations may come soon between the West and the communist colonizers.

Stuman believes there is another dividend. "There are lots of illegal immigrants getting into the United States from this area," he said, "and I believe that if we can assist the people of the Caribbean in their own countries the illegal alien problem might be reduced."

Most of all, to one traveling among these islands and observing openly friendly people — some extremely poor — the words of World Bank President Robert S. McNamara come back: "We are, and I say this particularly of Americans, we are our brother's keeper."

This kind of aid is in the American tradition and the program under way here appears to be one that does not include tossing U.S. tax money down the drain.

Top Helms prosecutor disputes badge claim

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter and his administration's top criminal prosecutor Thursday rejected the claim that former CIA director Richard M. Helms could wear his recent conviction for failing to testify fully before Congress as a "badge of honor."

Helms was fined $2,000 and given a suspended jail term last week after pleading "no contest" — technically the same as guilty — to two misdemeanor charges stemming from his failure to tell a Senate committee about covert CIA operations in Chile.

Edward Bennett Williams, Helms' lawyer, told the sentencing judge that his client would bear "the scar of conviction for the rest of his days."

But afterward both he and Helms told reporters the conviction was a "badge of honor."

Asked about this Thursday at his press conference, President Carter said, "No, it is not a badge of honor and a public official does not have a right to lie."

He added that he felt the plea bargain arrangement in the Helms case was the "right decision, the best decision ...It does not condone lying. It does uphold the law. And I think it did protect, as best we could, the security of our country."

At an earlier breakfast with reporters, Benjamin R. Civiletti, the head of the Justice Department's criminal division who negotiated the deal with Helms' attorney, said he thought the public was used to "So I don't think people are going to swallow self-interest statements," he said.

Civiletti added that he considered those post-sentencing comments "excessive." While Helms had seemed contrite before sentencing, he said, "I think some of the language by the judge stung Mr. Williams particularly. And in the flush of the proceedings he overextended himself ...and Mr. Helms picked up on the theme."

Civiletti also labeled as "nonsense" published criticism of the plea bargain as a "slap on the wrist to a big shot." He said the first prosecution of a top intelligence official proved "nobody is free from prosecution."

On another topic, Civiletti said the Justice Department has heard nothing but "noise" from the South Korean government about any agreement to allow accused secret agent Tongsun Park to be questioned by federal prosecutors.

He said the department was willing to give Park complete immunity from prosecution in return for his truthful testimony about cash payments he made to members of Congress. Park would also have to be willing to testify personally at any future trials stemming from the criminal investigation of South Korean influence buying in Congress, he added.

Civiletti attributed the Korean government's reluctance so far to cooperate to concerns about appearing to be "on bended knee to big brother (the United States)" and to fears that "if he (Park) comes back and tells the truth about his activities in the U.S. it (the scandal) will just get worse."

Juanita's hesitancies haven't been hindrance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's first woman secretary of commerce, Juanita M. Kreps, admits to moments of uncertainty.

She hesitates, for example, to be "really forceful" in expressing herself when men are present for fear of being thought too aggressive or shrill.

And she wasn't sure whether she could remove a portrait of Herbert Hoover from her office wall, even though she didn't like it.

It's still hanging there after nearly 10 months.

But such doubts have been minor stumbling blocks to the Kentucky-born Mrs. Kreps, fast becoming one of the key members of the Carter Cabinet.

Lately, she has been out in front of Carter's other economic advisers in arguing that a tax cut may be needed next year to put more money in consumers' pockets to help the economy.

Otherwise, she says, the administration may not meet its goals of reduced unemployment and increased output.

She is playing a key role in the administration's attempts to improve its standing with the nation's business leaders, especially following the resignation of Bert Lance as budget director.

It was Mrs. Kreps, among all Carter's economic advisers, who explained administration economic policy to a recent meeting of the Business Council, a prestigious all-male organization of the nation's top corporate executives.

She has proved much more active than her predecessors in influencing and shaping administration policy, especially on economic matters.

There have been suggestions that Mrs. Kreps and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal are rivals for influence in the administration and that the White House has been particularly pleased with Mrs. Kreps, while supposedly displeased with Blumenthal.

Juanita Kreps

Mrs. Kreps tends to dismiss such speculation as unfounded, but she is less than pleased at not being included in weekly breakfast meetings of the steering committee of the administration's Economic Policy Group, headed by Blumenthal.

"I think it's nice when the boys have breakfast together," she quipped.

As for getting along in the world of business and government where men predominate, Mrs. Kreps, 56, said she sometimes tends to adjust her style to what men consider acceptable.

Deadlocked 'midwife' jury given 3 days rest

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A deadlocked state district court jury has been given a three-day rest before resuming deliberations in the trial of a Brownsville male midwife accused of injuring an infant's head with forceps during delivery.

The jury deliberated unsuccessfully for more than four hours Thursday before reporting that it was deadlocked 7-5. State District Judge Darrell Hester instructed the jury to resume deliberations Monday morning.

The jury did not reveal if the 7-5 vote favored conviction or acquittal.

Prosecutors allege Miguel Orihuela, 44, caused brain damage when he "mashed" the head of Juan Martin Valenciano with a pair of forceps during delivery on June 18.

The child, the shape of whose head appears normal, was hospitalized for about three weeks and is now at home with his parents.

In final arguments Thursday, Assistant District Attorney Joe K. Hendley told the jury:

"He (Orihuela) is not an ordinary midwife. He is a man who set himself up in the community as a doctor. His attendants. . .all referred to him as doctor. He tried to act like a doctor and in doing so, he marked the child for life.

"Every mistreatment and defoulment he did to the mother and child, he did intentionally," added Hendley.

Admitting the prosecution's case was built upon circumstantial evidence, Assistant District Attorney James Mardis told the jury, "He (Orihuela) was a man who rushed mothers along, delivering babies before they were ready to be born."

But defense attorney Hector Uribe vigorously attacked the indictment, maintaining there was no proof that Orihuela "had mashed the skull of the child with an instrument."

"In fact, their own witness, Dr. Suzanne Posnette, testified the skull was not even fractured, much less mashed."

Dr. Posnette, a prosecution witness on Wednesday who attended the child at the hospital emergency room, said the infant exhibited some signs of possible brain damage, although admitting it would be hard to confirm any brain damage until the child was ready to walk and talk.

Uribe also challenged the prosecution's contention that Orihuela acted "intentionally, recklessly, knowingly with criminal negligence."

"What would be his motive to intentionally injure a child?" Uribe asked. "Does a man act recklessly when he tries to save the life of a child?"

"Are we going to tell midwives they can't use whatever knowledge they have? Are we going to tell them they have to call an ambulance while the baby is suffocating in the birth canal?" he asked.

Prosecutors have said this trial would be a test of public opinion on midwifery, an accepted practice among the predominantly Mexican-American population of South Texas.

Orihuela and his wife also face other charges stemming from their operation of a midwife clinic in Brownsville.

Jazz recording not just gimmick

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At first glance, what Paul Horn has done ought to make a good reporter squint his jaundiced eyes in rebuff and think, "Gimmick."

This Horn, see, is a jazz man who says he's long been searching for just the right environment to produce a nearly pure sound on record. So he recorded an album — get this — inside the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

"I don't do anything gimmicky," says Horn, a little irritated at the suggestion of hype. "A lot of time, if what you do happens to catch on and it sells, then people think it's a gimmick. Well, this isn't."

Funny thing is, you're inclined to believe the man. For one thing, another of his albums also was recorded in a place that's not exactly your everyday studio — the Taj Mahal — and some good jazz came out of it.

But the best witness on Horn's behalf is the work itself — "Inside the Great Pyramid," a captivating, if somewhat eerie, bit of music.

After the relative success of his Taj Mahal album, a friend of Horn's half-jokingly suggested he record an LP in the Great Pyramid. Horn knew right then he would do it.

"I figured that inside the pyramid ought to have great sound, too," he said. "The idea took seed, and after a couple of years, the opportunity came up."

Horn and his recording engineer joined an archeology expedition bound for Egypt. When he arrived, he soon learned that it's not the easiest thing to convince Egyptian officials to let an American jazz performer set up shop in one the the Seven Wonders of the World.

Horn finally convinced someone he wasn't just a crazy with a flute, and won permission to record in the Great Pyramid. But he had to do it at night, when tourists would be gone, and he had only three hours in which to do it.

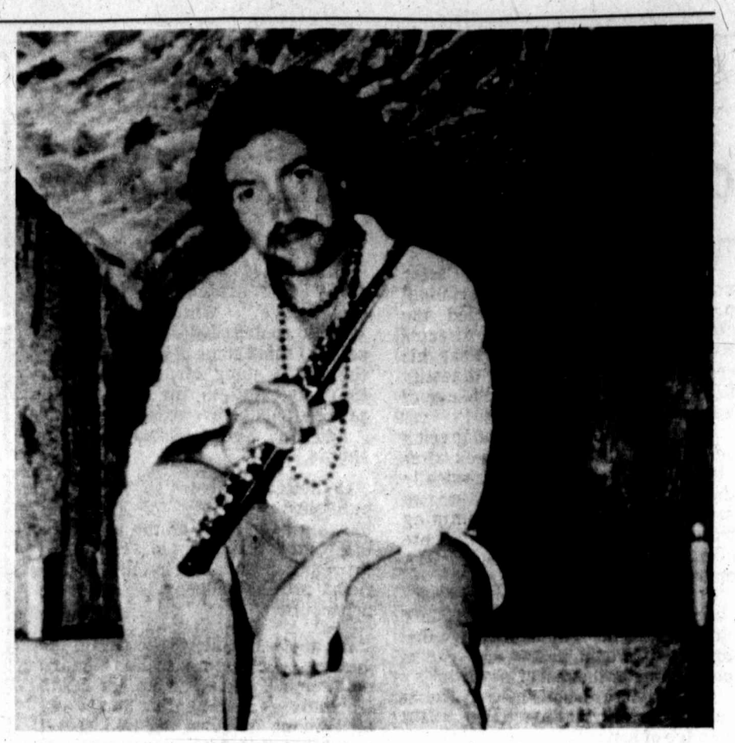
Horn chose the King's Chamber for his studio and began to improvise. He found his flute was being shadowed by an eight-second echo, but quickly picked it up and used the echo as another instrument, weaving his sound through the one that was bouncing off the king's walls.

'I got a little carried away," Horn says, remembering the excitement. "It was timeless in there. I was totally lost in the experience."

When it was over, Horn and his engineer rushed back to their hotel room to check the sound quality. It was better than they had hoped for.

"Inside the Great Pyramid" has found a receptive audience, being given a bullet (trade talk for fast-rising record) in its first week on the Cashbox magazine jazz charts.

The reception for Horn's album seems another sign of the renaissance of jazz, a return of the form to its original spirit of freedom, spontaneity and ingenuity.



Sitting atop a candle-rimmed ledge in Egypt's Great Pyramid was a music-inspiring experience, not a gimmick, for jazz flutist Paul Horn. (AP Laserphoto)

New anti-crime strategy disclosed

By RONALD J. OSTROW
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The federal government's top anti-crime expert, acknowledging past mistakes in the war against organized crime, disclosed Thursday the abandonment of the traditional strategy of attacking the underworld on a "case by case, attrition" method.

Instead, Assistant Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti said, the government is mounting a systematic, long-term effort to "drive organized crime out of legitimate business."

Civiletti, at a breakfast meeting with reporters, said there is "very little knowledge in the federal government" about the amount of organized crime's financial assets, sources of its income and how its money is distributed.

Civiletti's comments on the shortcomings of the federal effort added up to an unusually candid disclosure by the official charged with directing that effort.

Asked if he could assess organized crime's size, Civiletti replied: "I wish I knew."

"Frankly, I don't think the things I have seen provide any reasonable estimate of the dollar cost of organized crime or the number of its violations," Civiletti said.

Organized crime has been moving beyond its traditional income sources of prostitution, extortion and gambling into legitimate businesses such as financial organizations, hotel service companies and barbering supply firms, Civiletti said.

Under the new strategy, the government will concentrate on targeted enterprises in which management and labor have been taken over by organized crime, and conduct a series of prosecutions to drive the illicit interests out.

Big Spring receives good news on grants

BIG SPRING — The city of Big Spring has received favorable news on two applications for federal grants for city improvements, according to Paul Feazelle, head of community development for the city.

"We were notified by phone Wednesday that our preapplication for EDA (Economic Development Administration) funds has been approved, and to go ahead on the full application," said Feazelle.

The application is for $4,290,000 in federal funds for improvements within the city and at Webb Air Force Base properties. Feazelle said that it will take several weeks to complete the full application for the grant.

The city also received "favorable comment" at Wednesday's meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission for the full amount of another grant, said Feazelle.

The grant request calls for $104,000 to be supplied through federal funds with a matching sum of $34,915 supplied by Big Spring, Feazelle said.

The grant will be used to monitor all areas of economic development with a special emphasis on attracting new industry to the area, developing ways to aid existing businesses and industries, generating a promotional presentation of data on Big Spring and Howard County, expanding the existing economic data base and preparing special plans for various areas, such as tourism.

Credit investigation firm fights 'right to privacy' law

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — If a person enjoys an active sex life or drinks too many cola soft drinks, he may have to pay higher insurance premiums — if he gets a policy at all, say two insurance executives.

The executives testified at a hearing Thursday before Superior Court Justice Lewis Naiman. The judge is considering whether to issue a preliminary injunction blocking enforcement of a new law meant to restrict the scope of consumer credit investigations.

The law is being challenged by Equifax Services Inc., a credit investigation firm.

Equifax claims the law, which bars collection of information on a person's lifestyle, political affiliation, philosophy, race or religion and allows customers to obtain copies of files compiled about them, is vague and violates the credit firm's freedom of speech.

Among witnesses testifying for Equifax were Gaylord Paine, senior vice president of Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Ronald Marshall, a vice president of Paul Revere Life Insurance Co.

Both said that without personal information, it would be difficult to tell which customers are high risks and the cost of insurance could be forced up for all customers.

On Oct. 24, the day the law was to have taken effect, Naiman issued a temporary order blocking the attorney general's office from enforcing the law. Naiman continued the temporary restraining order late Thursday, pending completion of the hearing sometime next week.

Marshall testified that the law might restrict information his company could consider vital because the material was dated.

The attorney general's office had no witnesses, but submitted affidavits from a woman who alleged that inaccuracies in a 1975 Equifax investigation caused cancellation of her car insurance.

Assistant Attorney General Peter Bickerman later said the affidavits were submitted to show that the public would suffer more than Equifax if a preliminary injunction were granted. He said the law seeks to protect an individual's right to privacy.

Paine said that in order to set fair premiums, an underwriter must have information to estimate a customer's lifespan. He said credit reports are never used to deny coverage or to raise rates but only serve to warn a company to check further.

Torrijos subtly 'strongarms' senators with publicity

By JOHN M. GOSKHO
The Washington Post

PANAMA CITY — With Gen. Omar Torrijos as tour guide, seven U.S. senators headed by Democratic Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd (W.Va.) crisscrossed Panama by plane, helicopter, car and canoe Thursday in an attempt to learn what people here think about the canal treaties.

The other senators, all Democrats, are James R. Sasser (Tenn.), Spark M. Matsunaga (Hawaii), Walter D. Huddleston (Ky.), Donald W. Riegle Jr. (Mich.), Paul S. Sarbanes (Md.) and Howard M. Metzenbaum (Ohio).

The group is here on a four-day trip to gather informatin about the treaties, which would turn over control of the canal to Panama by the year 2000. All seven have pronounced themselves undecided about how they will vote in the impending fight to obtain the 67 votes — two-thirds of the Senate — needed for ratification of the treaties.

In their time with Torrijos, the military strongman who has controlled Panama since 1968, the senators discussed the human rights situation here, charges that Torrijos is leading the country in a leftist political direction and the possible Panamanian reaction if the Senate rejects the pacts.

These talks had to be sandwiched into the whistle-stop tour as Torrijos treated his guests to a display of how politics are practiced in Panama.

The senators got into the act, bouncing Indian youngsters on their laps for the benefit of photographers. One, Sasser, even found a constituent, a Baptist missionary nurse from Nashville, in a remote island outpost.

Mostly, though, Torrijos dominated. Dressed in the military fatigues and bush hat that are his favorite campaign attire, he evoked the political magic for which he is known among this country's 1.7 million people.

The day began as Torrijos, the senators and accompanying aides and reporters flew in small planes from this capital on the Pacific coast to the San Blas islands off Panama's Atlantic shore. The chain is inhabited by Indians whose women wear gold rings in their noses, adorn themselves with heavy gold chains

Gulf Oil succumbs to Treasury heat, pays $229,500

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Gulf Oil Corp. has quietly paid a fine of $229,500 in a new crackdown by the Treasury Department on misuse of corporate funds for political purposes, it was learned Thursday.

The civil assessment, paid by Gulf without a court proceeding and without announcement by the government, represents the largest penalty ever levied under the seven-year-old Bank Secrecy and Reporting Act.

That law, scarcely used in past years, now is being used by Treasury to investigate alleged illegal transfers of money to and from foreign countries by dozens of other companies, according to congressional and Treasury Department sources.

The Gulf fine and the crackdown by Treasury have followed prodding by the House Government Operations Subcommittee on monetary affairs, headed by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y.

In hearings last March and in staff reports, the subcommittee disclosed widespread failure to enforce the bank secrecy act against many U.S. banks and corporations. The subcommittee won promises of support from President Carter's appointees to the Treasury Department.

Chief provisions of the act require businessmen to report any currency transfers in the United States exceeding $10,000 and any movement of more than $5,000 in cash between the United States and foreign countries.

The Gulf violations grew out of the firm's past admissions that it used a front company in the Bahamas to funnel hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash to the United States for illegal campaign contributions.

In November, 1973, a federal judge fined Gulf $5,000 and Claude C. Wild Jr., a vice president, $1,000 after they pleaded guilty to using corporate funds for a $100,000 contribution to the re-election effort of former President Nixon and for other gifts to congressional candidates.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Bette B. Anderson said in a letter to Rosenthal Thursday that Gulf's civil assessment "was 90 percent of the amount of currency which apparently was transported into the United States from the Bahamas without being reported to Customs, as required under the act."

The law specifies that Treasury may assess up to 100 percent of unreported funds that a company transfers improperly.

In all, the Watergate special prosecutor's office obtained guilty or no-contest pleas from about 20 U.S. corporations to charges they had used corporate funds for political purposes.

Carter to block sales to Uganda

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is preparing to block the sale of three helicopters and a commercial jetliner to the government of Uganda's dictator, Idi Amin.

The decision represents the first clampdown on U.S. trade with Uganda, which Carter denounced last April for human rights violations that he said had "disgusted the entire civilized world."

Administration sources said Thursday the State Department recommended last week to the Commerce Department that it deny export licenses for three Bell helicopters and a Boeing 707 jet, which were to be shipped to Uganda.

Commerce Department officials were understood to have agreed with the State Department's recommendation. Sources said that after the license denials are issued, the firms have 15 days to respond but that they, too, are expected to comply without protest.

The helicopters had been ordered directly by Uganda; the used aircraft, from a Swiss firm which planned to transfer it on to Uganda, the sources said.

A State Department official declined Thursday to say why the licenses were being denied, but another source said, "Human rights obviously was a factor."

According to a new book called "A State of Blood" by Henry Kyemba, a former high official in Amin's government before defecting to Britain last May, the current regime has killed as many as 150,000 Ugandans.

The administration's action had been sought by Reps. Jim Mattox, D-Texas, and Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio.

Mattox said Thursday night, "In light of Idi Amin's record of torture and terror, this is surely the only course of action our government can take."

Pease, who had also sought a ban on all commercial trade between the United States and Uganda, said he was pleased with the proposed license denial and called it "a good first step."

Pease has protested the fact that American coffee companies have paid about $200 million in the first eight months of this year for Ugandan coffee, the commodity tht provides Amin with his main source of foreign revenue.

The congressman has called for a coffee boycott, but an administration official said Thursday night the government does not contemplate such an action because it would be counter to free trade principles and could set a precedent.

U.S. imports, overwhelmingly coffee, from Uganda last year cost $106.7 million and comprised about 30 percent of Uganda's total trade earnings of $360.6 million, according to the International Monetary Fund. The U.S. import figure is much higher this year because of the rise in coffee prices, but a State Department source said the U.S. share of Uganda's exports is about the same as it was last year.

Pease said U.S. exports to Uganda during the first seven months of this year totaled more than $11 million, compared with $6.3 million for all of last year. About 73 percent of this year's sales were in telecommunications equipment such as shortwave radios and field telephones, he said.

Company pushing new drugs

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — One of the nation's largest drug companies expects that "marketable" and life-saving applications of the new genetic engineering will be developed "in less than five years," one of the firm's top research officials told the Senate science subcommittee Thursday.

Dr. Joseph E. Grady, head of infectious disease research for the Upjohn Co., said the first commercial products of "recombinant DNA" technology — joining the genetic material of different organisms — could include artifically-made human insulin, human growth hormone and disease-fighting antibodies.

Also, he said, Upjohn hopes to identify the genes that make some soil organisms produce natural antibiotics and modify or replace those genes with others to speed up commercial antibiotic production.

The Senate subcommittee ended three days of hearings on possible ways to regulate the new biological technology, which some critics fear might spawn dangerous organisms that unexpectedly spread epidemics.

Such a speedy timetable for commercial application of the controversial DNA-joining technology is possible if work continues merely "at the present rate," Grady said. But he also pointed out that getting federal approval to market new products could add years to his estimate. The fact that some scientists and environmentalists fear the technology might add to those years.

Nonetheless, the Upjohn scientist's estimate — of when one of biology's hottest discoveries will be put into practice — is one of the earliest yet stated.

Before the same Senate science subcommittee hearing, Dr. Ronald Cape, president of the Cetus Corp. of Berkeley, estimated that insulin production by the recombinant method "is at least 10 years away. Commercial rewards are not around the corner," and will require much cost and "drudgery" by industry, he said.

But Cape, a Ph.D. in biology, also predicted that "scientific breakthroughs in this field will occur far more quickly than many people think. The pace is relentless. It will continue somewhere in the world regardless of legislation or controls. We are convinced there will be many exciting scientific developments in 1978, 1979 and throughout the 1980s."

Dr. John Adams, scientific vice president of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, called commercial applications "five to 19 years away."

But Upjohn, as Grady testified, began its recombinant DNA research at its Kalamazoo, Mich., laboratories two years ago, making it one of the pioneers in this new field.

Paris official lauds aid to Quebec fight

PARIS (AP) — By supporting the autonomy-minded people of Quebec, France is safeguarding French culture in Canada and "in a certain sense protecting ourselves," says a high official of the Paris government who helped shape its Quebec policy.

France's attitude toward its French-speaking "cousins" in North America annoys English-speaking Canadians and rankles Americans, but tickles Frenchmen and generally delights the Quebecois.

"We have just as much right to accord our support to the people of Quebec as President Carter does to worry about the human rights of Jews in the Soviet Union," the French official said.

"We are protecting French language and French civilization in North America, and by so doing we are in a certain sense protecting ourselves," he added.

Of all European countries, France is particularly watchful of its civilization. The government strives to preserve French customs through cultural subsidies and to maintain the quality of the language through such organs as the French Academy.

Despite language variations — both vocabulary and pronunciation — between Quebec and the country that colonized it in 1608, some circles here view the preservation of Quebec's cultural independence as an assertion of French national heritage.

Paris policy toward the province was reenunciated last week when President Valery Giscard d'Estaing assured visiting Quebec Premier Rene Levesque of France's "understanding, confidence and support."

Levesque's Parti Quebecois, which came to power in the 1976 elections, has promised a referendum on whether Quebec should separate itself from English-speaking Canada.

France's policy first grabbed headlines in 1967 when then-President Charles de Gaulle cried to a cheering Quebec crowd "Vive le Quebec Libre (Long Live Free Quebec)." That angered the Canadian government so much that de Gaulle cut short his trip.

Some observers have said De Gaulle was carried away by the crowd's clamor, but French officials who helped prepare the moment say his shouted slogan was the fruit of careful calculation.

'Creative cancellations' new twist among presidents

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Air Force One always ready and a whole world out there waiting, foreign travel has become a trademark — and a tool — of the jet-age White House.

The crises that have sent presidents aloft and abroad have often been political rather than diplomatic. Somehow, a picture by the Berlin Wall does more for the image than one at the Washington Monument.

Richard M. Nixon, for example, turned foreign tourist in the waning days of his truncated presidency, as if to change the subject. He couldn't.

Now President Carter has discovered a new use for presidential travel: cancellation or, perhaps, creative cancellation. The possibilities are limitless. The secret is staying home.

He has, Carter told the nation Tuesday night, postponed "a major overseas trip until after Christmas because of the paramount importance of developing an effective energy plan this year."

"I have no doubt that this is the right decision, because the other nations of the world — allies and adversaries alike — await our energy decisions with great interest and conern," Carter said.

The White House had announced that Carter would journey to nine nations in 12 days, beginning Nov. 22. Then the president said he'd call off the 25,000-mile mission unless Congress had completed action on his energy program before takeoff time.

Congress isn't going to make the timetable so Carter isn't going to make the trip.

An advance party had covered the route, to work on security, communications and the countless details that go with presidential travel. Nations Carter wasn't going to visit, like West Germany, had been placated with assurances that he'd get there later. In some of the capitals he was going to visit there are signs of annoyance at what, in diplomatic terms, was a last-minute cancellation.

So the postponement is not without cost.

But consider the benefits. Simply by staying put, Carter has focused attention on his campaign for energy legislation, now in the hands of House and Senate negotiators. He's had trouble dramatizing the issue. Now he's cast himself as a president willing to sacrifice a major journey to faraway places to stay in Washington and tend to the business of getting energy bills passed.

There isn't much he can do except keep saying that he wants his program approved. But the gesture ought to count for something. And it would, in fact, be politically embarrassing if what's left of the Carter energy program went through the final congressional shredder while the president was in Lagos.

This being his first use of the creative cancellation, Carter may not have used the tactic to its full potential.

China woos goodwill of Russia

By LINDA MATHEWS
Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG — China has begun to make diplomatic overtures toward the Soviet Union in what may be a tentative effort to mend the long-tattered relations between the two Communist giants.

The latest conciliatory gesture came this week when, for the first time in more than a decade, the Chinese foreign minister attended an annual champagne and caviar reception given by the Soviet ambassador to Peking to celebrate the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Foreign Minister Huang Hua, accompanied by China's chief delegate to the stalemated Soviet border talks, Yu Chan, dropped by the Soviet Embassy for an hour of toasts and conversation with the ambassador, Vassili Tolstikov, and a ranking Soviet delegate to the border talks, Victor Lobaniv.

Huang's presence surprised many members of Peking's diplomatic corps, according to the dispatches of foreign reporters in the Chinese capital. But his apparently unannounced visit seemed in keeping with other recent developments that have suggested that Peking may be seeking some improvement in its ties with the Kremlin.

In the past month, for example, China has posted a new ambassador to Moscow, filling a seat that had been vacant for 18 months, and has taken the lead in hammering out a final agreement with the Soviets on new rules to govern navigation on the rivers along their common border.

The river pact, though largely a technical matter unrelated to the still-unsettled issue of where the Sino-Soviet border line should be drawn, was read as a sign of emerging goodwill between the two parties.

Over the weekend, speculation about a possible Sino-Soviet thaw was renewed by a press report from Tokyo that the Chinese ambassador to Japan, Fu Hao, had recently called on his Soviet counterpart, Dmitri Polyanskii, for discussions that lasted nearly an hour.

Newly-elected mayors going right to class

NEW YORK (AP) — Eighteen newly elected mayors, including Ed Koch of New York City, have decided to go to college to learn about the problems of running a city.

They will attend a five-day session at Harvard University Nov. 17-21 to hear lectures by Harvard faculty members and urban affairs experts, the U.S. Conference of Mayors announced Wednesday.

The mayors' group, which is sponsoring the seminar, said topics will include how to form transition teams, financial management, economic development, citizen participation and labor relations.

Although other seminars have been held for mayors, this will be the first one specifically geared toward mayors-elect or recently elected mayors.

Besides Koch, those who have accepted invitations to attend are: Mayors-elect Charles Royer of Seattle; Ron Bair of Spokane; Mike Parker of Tacoma; Phillip J. Richley of Youngstown, Ohio; Doug deGood of Toledo, Ohio; Ken Harris of Charlotte, N.C.; David Rusk of Albuquerque, N.M.; Charles B. O'Reilly of Dearborn, Mich.; Theodore Dimauro, of Springfield, Mass.; William Stansbury, of Louisville, Ky.; James Amato, of Lexington, Ky.; Charles Whitlock of Lakewood, Colo.; and Mayors Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth, Texas; Carole McClellan of Austin, Texas; Thomas F.X. Smith, of Jersey City, James Conway of St. Louis, and Mayor Arnold I. Rue of Stockton, Calif.

Ohio hunting preserve offers exotic wild game

By JUDY McELHENY

ILESBORO, Ohio (AP) — You can hunt wild boar, Spanish goat or Barbado ram in a little corner of Ohio.

Keith Fox, a one-time soap salesman in Columbus, and his wife make it possible. They moved five years ago some 55 miles from Columbus to a picturesque spot in Hocking County. Since then they have made the hunting of such exotic animals possible for upwards of 200 persons.

"At first we really didn't know if we would like it, but we were willing to give it a try," said Joyce Fox.

Today, the couple — both in their mid-30s — sell the dream of bagging your own exotic wild game on their 500-acre spread, called the Hocking Valley Hunting Preserve, off Ohio Route 93, ten miles south of Logan.

"We transplanted the boars from Tennessee, Georgia and Florida," Fox said. He said hunters traveled even farther, from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Michigan. But most come from Ohio cities.

From wherever, they pay a pretty penny if they are successful.

Although he has 420 acres under fence, Fox said that didn't make hunting easy.

"The boars hide in the hollows, and they're real smart," he said. "Sometimes you'll see two in half an hour, and sometimes you won't see one for two days."

The thick, brushy terrain is an ideal habitat for boars. But the brush is a problem for summer hunters because it makes tracking and seeing the prey more difficult, Fox said.

"It's a tough business. You have to work and it's always hard work," he added.

Fox said the real challenge to hunters was getting close enough to a 200-pound boar for a shot. Nearly 95 percent of the hunters are persistent enough to bring home some wild bacon.

Hunters must supply their own rifles, hand guns or bows and arrows. Fox said high-powered equipment is a necessity.

He emphasizes safety precautions for all hunters and stresses target practice before the hunt for novices. To date, there hasn't been an accident with a weapon.

"There's a real challenge to it," Fox said of the hunt. "The boar has the advantage. It's tough, unpredictable and fantastic."

Successful hunters pay $210 for a wild boar, $225 for a Barbado ram and $180 for a Barbiroussa ram. Spanish goats from Texas cost $160.

Unsolicited calls tying up phones stir controversy

By PENNY GIRARD
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Minneapolis housewife was about to call an ambulance for her elderly mother who had just suffered a heart attack when the telephone rang and a tape recorded voice asked about her interest in a product.

Frustrated after several unsuccessful attempts to disengage the recording, she ran next door to dial for help.

The stricken woman did not die, but the recent incident so infuriated her daughter that she now plans to sue both the telephone company and the business firm that recorded the message.

The untimely call was made by an electronic or automatic machine — one of several such devices introduced in recent months—which potentially can dial up to 1,000 homes a day.

Until recently, unsolicited telephone calls were used primarily to sell such services as insurance and such products as vacuum cleaners and aluminum siding for homes.

But use of unsolicited calls has been expanding rapidly and now includes seeking customer interest in newspaper subscriptions, real estate developments, even light bulbs to aid a charity for the blind.

For whatever reason, unsolicited advertising-sales calls have touched a sensitive nerve with a growing pulic audience which equates them with junk mail.

In the past, most of the "junk" calls were made by people hired to dial the number and deliver the message, or by a semi-automatic system in which the person dials the number and then turns on a recorded message when the phone is answered. The person answering the phone can hang up on the human caller but a recorded message continues until it is finished and blocks out all other calls to or from that telephone.

While many businesses and advertising firms view this latest technological advance — a fully automatic device which both dials a number and gives a recorded message — as an unprecedented selling boon, apparently many consumers, and some lawmkers, are concerned.

They fear that unsolicited, unwanted "junk" calls will play havoc with people's privacy, disrupt family meals and sleep, tie up lines for emergency calls, and generally create an unpleasant and unnecessary annoyance.

As use of telephone solicitation increases through use of automatic dialing devices, so do the complaints about them. Philip V. Permut, acting deputy chief of the Federal Communications Commission's common carrier bureau says the complaints are "increasing substantially."

During October, the FCC bureau received 275 letters and several telephone calls daily protesting "junk" phone calls, especially those made by automatic machines. This was more than all other complaints combined.

While few of the annoyed letter writers have ever met or heard of Walter Baer, a Rand Corp. physicist in Santa Monica, Calif., it was partly a petition he filed Aug. 26 asking the FCC to set ground rules for automatic dialing machines, which helped publicize the issue, and in turn, prompted their correspondence.

In the petition to the FCC, Baer and a group of public interest lawyers for the Citizens Communication Center asked the agency to put some constraints on the use of the devices. But the key point of their request was that people be legally allowed to have their names taken off calling lists, just as they presently can refuse junk mail.

"The last thing I want is for the government to tell people what they can and cannot say over the phone," Baer said in an interview.

"But what I would like to see is the right for individuals to refuse these calls without having to buy an expensive answering service or pull the phone out of the plug," he said.

Baer decided to go to the FCC after a frustrating morning this past summer as he tried to escape his constantly ringing office phones by working at home. In the course of several hours he received unsolicited telephone calls from an encyclopedia company, an insurance firm, and two calls from the same book club.

Complaints like Baer's also are beginning to get more attention in Congress, where there are now more than 80 co-sponsors for legislation introduced in October by Sen. Wendell R. Anderson, D-Minn., and Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., to require the telephone company to poll people once a year on whether they want their names taken off calling lists. Criminal penalties would be provided for companies violating the proposed law.

"People are genuinely outraged by these calls," said Warren Nelson, an aide to Aspin. Nelson said mail is overwhelmingly in favor of increased personal protection from unsolicited calls.

Nelson said Anderson's and Aspin's files are filled with protests from constituents. He cited the case of a Mobile, Ala., man who was trying to reach his vet about a sick dog, only to have his telephone line tied up for 15 minutes by a recording.

A young couple, wondering why a salesman appeared at their home to take an order for aluminum siding, realized that their four-year-old son had responded to a recorded telephone sales pitch several days before.

On the other side of the issue, supporters of telephone solicitation say people don't fully realize its positive impact on the economy.

"Telephone solicitation is the backbone of this country," says Bill Norcutt, president of Selling Systems, Arlington, Tex., which produces a fully automatic dailing device.

According to Norcutt, there are 7 million unsolicited calls made daily by individuals hired by companies, and by automatic recording devices. From these calls, Norcutt said, 460,000 people make purchases averaging $60, for annual sales totalling more than $27 million.

"Let's knock that out of the economy and see what it's really all about," Norcutt said.

He estimated that there are 40 to 50 totally automatic systems in use in the country, but predicted there will be expanded use for bill collections, daily transactions between banks and businesses, by doctors and dentists to remind patients of appointments, and by airlines to inform passengers of flight delays. In addition, he saw increasing use of telephone solicitation by small companies seeking alternatives to mailing costs and media advertising, as well as a replacement for salesmen.

Four die in gun battles in Juarez

JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Four persons allegedly belonging to the 23rd of September Communist guerrilla group were killed by police in three separate gun battles, officers said Thursday.

A spokesman for the Juarez Police Department said the first gunfight erupted Tuesday in a residential neighborhood when three persons fired on a patrol car carrying two officers.

Police returned the fire, killing a woman, Isela Quinones Arviza, 28, officers said. They said 23rd of September literature was found on her body.

The two other persons involved in the attack fled, police said.

The second incident occurred Wednesday morning when about 30 officers, acting on a telephone tip, raided a house believed to be a guerrilla stronghold.

The officers were met with gunfire, and several persons fled as they approached, the spokesman said.

Police said Marina Alejandra Herrera Flores, about 28, and Carlos Durado Lopez, about 33, were shot to death. Police said Miss Herrera Flores was shot as she emerged from the house with a two-year-old child in her arms.

The spokesman said he didn't know whether the woman was armed when she was shot.

Police said the child was being cared for by authorities while its identity and relatives are being sought.

Police said 3,000 copies of the guerrilla group's newsletter were found in the house.

The third incident occurred late Wednesday when police raided another house.

Police said they were again met by gunfire, and that several persons managed to escape.

Juarez is across the U.S. border from El Paso, Texas.

Plan aims at cutting lease cost of state agencies

AUSTIN BUREAU

AUSTIN— Bureaucracies are like the cuckoo in the old moralist's tale—evil birds which force their smaller brethren out of their nests.

As the larger state agencies—the Comptroller, Secretary of State and Governor's Office—continue dramatic, post-'60s growth, their need for additional space has pushed most smaller agencies out of the nest of state buildings surrouding the Capitol and into the uncertainties of commercial rental arrangements.

Now, the larger agencies, too, have outgrown their annexed facilities, and joined the small licensing and regulating agencies in leasing expensive commercial space in Austin and other cities.

The Comptroller, for example, currently leases several Austin offices, including a building that costs 49.5 cents per month for each of its 69,854 square feet.

Alarmed at this trend, and the increasing amount of money it was consuming the last legislature directed the State Board of Control to design the most economical method of financing and placing state agency buildings.

While the plan is still in the formative stage, SBC director Homer Foerster says three options he's considering would be cheaper than the present short-term leasing method used most often.

The cheapest alternative would be the building of state-owned facilities through funds appropriated by the Legislature.

"If a man leases his building, he plans to make a profit. If the state plans to build it, it can cost a little more, but we like to think we get a better quality building out of this method," said Knox Davis, SBC's director of facility planning.

The next cheapest method, Foerster said, would finance building construction through state-wide bond issues; but this would require a constitutional amendment not certain to be approved.

Finally, the state could lease existing buildings on a long-term, fixed price basis with an option to buy.The board is focuising on this method as the best immediate solution.

"I could foresee our having rather large buildings which are managed by, and custodial services provided by, the Board of Control," Foerster said.

Using "economies of scale" (combining several small agencies in the one facility), rental costs could be cut to 30 to 40 cents per square foot a month, Davis said.

This method appeals especially to the licensing agencies which must pay leasing costs through fees collected from members and funneled through legislative appropriations.

During the last session, an appropriations rider combined leasing fees for five such agencies, allowing them to rent a common building in Austin.

Five additional agencies quickly joined their sister, and in October, they leased a 15,000 sq. ft. facility for less than 42 centers per foot. said Bob Jenkins, SBS's director of buildings and property services.

Some other agencies are looking to the future (and trying to escape legislative whims) by buying land and building their own facilities, financed through special assessment or licensing fees.

When agencies lease space, the legislature can require them to move again at any time, according to John Parsons, commissioner of the Credit Union Department.

"Also, the State Board of Control would put out bids and we would have to go to the lowest bidder (for lease space)," Parsons said.

So the department polled its members and in April decided to spend $200,000 constructing its own facility on Interstate 35 in Austin.

"At the end of 20 years, we'll own a building worth at least twice what it cost, (rather) than spend $20,000 to $30,000 more for renting or leasing,", parsons said.

"By building our own facility, the commision (SBC) would not control where would we locate; we could avoid undesirable neighbors or quarters," he added.

The Department of Banking may have been the first agency to realize the benefits of owning a building.

They contributed money to build the state-owned Reagan Building, but began to feel pressure from the legislature to move early in the '70s.

Rather than move into another state building (and face another move in a decade or so), the department decided to buy a former Texas Instruments facility in 1975 department attorney Archie Clayton explains.

The Board of Registration for Professional Engineers is the latest to join the trend, and director Donald Klein said the Legislature was glad to help them get out on their own.

The last session set up a $800,000 special fund to build a 5,500 square foot facility for the engineers (after lawmakers planned to move them out of the Reagan Building.) The board will reimburse the state through license renewal and application fees.

"The state needs more space. If they can get our space without appropriating general revenue funds, they'll do it," Klein said.

As the bureauracy continues to butt up against space limitations, more agencies may find buying their own house the cheapest, most secure way to go.

Cults may 'force' Jewish 'marketing'

DALLAS (AP) — Aggressive "marketing" by religious cults seeking to recruit Jews may force Jewish leaders to begin missionary-type programs aimed at their own young people, according to a Chicago rabbi-psychotherapist.

"We may have to missionarize — there's that word we hate," said Dr. Milton Kanter.

Dr. Kanter and another rabbi speaking to the Council of Jewish Federations here Thursday said breakdowns in the traditional Jewish family have left young American Jews open to the temptations of the cults.

"It does no good to speak of reason or rationality with these young people," Dr. Kanter said.

Veto didn't kill reactor, only created White House dilemma

By MYRON S. WALDMAN
Newsday

WASHINGTON — Last Saturday, President Carter vetoed a bill that would have given the go-ahead for the Clinch River breeder reactor. Yet in Oak Ridge, Tenn., the Clinch River breeder reactor lives on.

The president, in exercising the first veto of his administration, did not demolish the nuclear power plant at all. Instead, he created still another White House dilemma over how to bring the project to a halt.

For all the praise and publicity of the so-called "blocking" of the power plant's construction, the president vetoed only an authorization bill. An authorization bill doesn't provide money for a project — it only advises Congress that it can pass a second bill that does appropriate funds.

And for the Clinch River project, that is exactly what Congress is on the verge of doing. It would be simple for the president to veto a Clinch River appropriation bill, too, except for one big problem — the $80 million it contains for the Tennessee power plant is just a single item in his particular piece of catch-all appropriations legislation.

The Clinch River project is in HR 9375, Supplemental Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1978. Also in HR 9375 is money for agriculture and for labor and for education. And, most vital, a carefully stated elimination of money for the B-1 bomber.

Killing the B-1 is an enterprise as important to the White House as killing plutonium breeder reactor programs. By vetoing HR 9375, Carter would kill the Clinch River reactor and resurrect the B-1 bomber. By signing HR 9375, Carter would let the Clinch River reactor continue for at least another year and kill the B-1. Carter opposes breeder reactors because they could lead to nuclear-weapons proliferation, since they produce plutonium, which is used to build nuclear weapons.

"We are looking at the appropriations bill very carefully," said Kitty Schirmer, associate director of the president's domestic policy staff. A House-Senate conference just approved HR 9375. It is expected to be approved by Congress and will probably reach the President's desk early next month.

Besides vetoeing it, Carter does have a couple of other options. Among those being considered by the White House are:

— Sign the appropriations bill and then ask Congress for a deferral in using the $80 million for Clinch River.

To ask for a rescission, the president writes a letter to the House speaker and the Senate president stating that he doesn't want to use the funds for a project. Within 45 working days, both houses of Congress must either approve or reject the president's request.

Opponents of the Clinch River project seem to agree that this might be a dangerous course. The authorization bill for the Clinch River reactor passed the House, with two crippling amendments defeated by 84 -and 148-vote margins. In the Senate, a move to kill the reactor was defeated, 49-38. So it appears Congress would reject a White House request to cut funds for Clinch River.

It would be even more dangerous to simply ask for a deferral in using money for Clinch River. Rejection is automatic here if only one house of Congress turns such a request down.

There are more subtle options for the White House — such as doing nothing for now and trying again when the Clinch River bills come up for fiscal year 1979. But subtlety and symbols do not mix easily.

So White House officials are already cautiously calling some key House members, wondering how they would feel if the president would veto the appropriations bill. Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., who led the fight against the B-1 for the White House, would not, for one, feel very good about it.

An Addabbo aide said that when the congressman got such a call, he told the White House that if there were a veto of the appropriations bill he would not take the lead to knockout the B-1 again.

"Clearly, our preference would be authority to terminate that (Clinch River) project," said White House aide Schirmer. "That is pretty clearly his (Carter's) intent." But will Carter make the appropriations bill the second veto of his administration? "He has not made a formal decision," Schirmer said.

Man's underground home costs little to heat, cool

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The soil means more to Gary C. Davis than the place where his food grows. It's his home, too.

"Everything in this house saves energy," says Davis of his 4,068-square-foot dwelling located mostly underground near this southern Illinois community.

Davis, who owns U'Bahn Earth Homes, Inc., estimates he will spend only about $375 a year to heat and cool the house.

He says underground homes maintain a year-round temperature of about 56 degrees, "So all we have to do is make up the difference."

Davis says he uses a device called an economizer, which pulls in clean, fresh air heated by the sun in the winter daytime.

"The air will warm up the walls, the floors, everything. And when it shuts off, it recirculates the warm air. In the summer, we'll reverse it and turn on the economizer at night so the cool air can be brought in."

The desired temperature can be maintained for at least 12 hours, he says.

Davis also has a fireplace which he says can heat the whole house. Light enters the house through a large glass dome in the center, over the indoor swimming pool.

"We found out through light readings that we have 20 per cent more light in our bedrooms than did 10 other conventional homes," says Davis. "A full moon brings a lot of light in, too."

Davis estimates that a $100,000 conventional home could be built underground for about $80,000. The cost for an underground dwelling is $32 to $33 per square foot, without luxuries such as the pool.

Burglars would have a hard time with Davis' home, he says, because of its few windows and doors. The only windows to the outside are on the front of the house, but they are rounded domes of strong plexiglas.

The front door has an air lock leading to a vestibule and another door. There is a door into the garage, but a special security device is on watch there.

The third door is an exit to the roof, and cannot be opened from the outside.

Davis says he can save a lot of money on maintenance because there is no siding to paint or roof to replace.

The concrete roof is covered with two feet of soil and sod.

"All I have to do is mow the grass," he says.

Traffic deaths running high

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas traffic deaths are running 11 percent ahead of last year, the Department of Public Safety reports.

DPS statistics show there have been 2,982 deaths on highways and streets so far this year compared to 2,697 for the same period in 1976.

The DPS said there have been 2,617 accidents in which deaths occured, compared to 2,327 for last year, an increase of 12 percent.

Heyerdahl planning expedition

QURNA, Iraq (AP) — Thor Heyerdahl, the Viking who sailed the Pacific and Atlantic on primitive craft, is about to set out on a voyage to nowhere in particular on a replica of a reed boat used by the ancient Sumerians.

His objective, he says, is to determine how far the Sumerians could have gone on their boats made of marsh reeds and possibly where they did go.

Now 63, Heyerdahl says he expects this to be his last ocean expedition.

His chief navigator and radio operator, Norman Baker, a 48-year-old construction engineer from New Rochelle, N.Y., calls the venture a "voyage of destruction" because the idea is the sail the reed craft onward until it can go no farther.

The vessel, named the Tigris, is scheduled to set sail from the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers sometime this month. Tentative plans call for launching on Friday with the actual start of the voyage coming after the boat is loaded with equipment and provisions.

The boat is made of berdi reeds from the marshes of Iraq, where the Sumerians lived as long ago as 4000 B.C. The launching place here on the Tigris often is called the cradle of civilization and the site of the Biblical Garden of Eden.

Don't count crafty Burns out as money ruler yet

By ART PINE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, was at the height of his popularity last spring, the betting was he might be in office for another 4 1-2 years. Although Burns is a Republican, and 73, policy watchers were speculating that President Carter would re-appoint him when Burns' runs out in January, if only as a gesture to bolster business confidence. To many observers, it seemed that Arthur Burns could do no wrong.

Today, just a few months after the economy's heady first quarter, the odds have shifted dramatically — and not in favor of the Fed chairman's tenure. Burns and the administration are locked in a serious dispute over monetary policy, Democrats are criticizing him for intransigence, and top Carter advisers are dead set against his re-appointment. "The odds are virtually nil for Arthur's getting a third 4-year term," one bettaker here asserts.

There's no real arguing that Burns' prospects have dimmed visibly in recent months. The most telling signs may be his own behavior: Burns himself has been acting like a man who knows his days in office are numbered. Several times in the past few months, he's publicly rebuffed White House appeals to end the Fed's recnt credit-tightening. And only last week, he delivered a major attack on the administration's overall economic policy.

Yet, the question of Burns' reappointment — or who will succeed him — continues to be one of the most titillating in Washington. Businessmen regularly warn against dropping him. Economists argue over the decisions' impact on the recovery. And liberals spend their lunch hours drawing up lists of replacements. "Arthur is having almost as much impact in stirring up speculation about his reappointment as he does on the money supply," jokes one local wag. "I only hope it has a better result."

To be sure, the Burns nomination is no routine re-appointment. The decision Carter makes next January will have a major impact in determining the nation's money and credit policies — and possibly the shape of the recovery — for many years to come. "It's a lot more crucial than, let's say, who is to head the Office of Management and Budget," says Henry Kaufman, partner in Salomon Brothers, the New York investment house. "This really is a policy move."

The question of Burns' tenure isn't a new one with the administration. As the chairman's defenders point out with relish, when Carter first took office, it was virtually assumed he would replace Burns when he got the opportunity. The former Georgia governor had made the Fed chairman a frequent target during the campaign. And there was strong pressure from blacks and labor to put a moderate Democrat at the monetary helm.

But as the economy improved, Carter seemed to warm to his old economic nemesis, taking him into confidence on the administration's budding stimulus program and eventually praising him publicly. Last May, when the two received honorary doctorates from Notre Dame University, Carter conspicuously walked across the platform to congratulate Burns. And late last summer, the two began monthly luncheon dates — a virtually unprecedented move.

Moreover, Burns seemed to enjoy unchallenged prestige both in Congress and in the business community. Apart from his legendary skill as a politician, the chairman had been proved right on his newly-held theory that the economy no longer needed as rapid a rate of growth in the money supply. And conservatives saw the Fed as their champion against inflation. Says one onlooker, "The odds against his reappointment dropped from 50 to 1 to 2 to 1.

But this unlikely alliance has been ended abruptly both by the credit-tightening that the Fed began in earnest this past fall — A move that has driven interest rates up sharply, and has worried top Carter policy makers — and by the increasing reality of Burns' outspoken independence. The Fed chairman's opposition played a major role in killing the president's proposal last spring for a $50-a-person tax rebate. And Burns has opposed a key Carter move to end the tax break for capital gains.

Indeed, to many observers, Burns' own rhetoric seems to be more painful to the administration than the Fed's credit-tightening. While top White House officials refuse flatly to discuss the flap, others familiar with the dispute say policy-makers are concerned that Burns may have talked himself into a box by emphasizing money supply growth as the Fed's principal guidepost — a situation some fear constrains the administration in handling budget and tax policy.

"They're more worried about the future than they are about the present," says one knowledgeable source here. "Burns has been so rigid that the market now reacts adversely no matter what the Fed does with the money supply. If monetary growth spurts, the stock market slumps because it fears inflation will result. But if the Fed tightens any, investors get scared because interest rates are going up. You just can't win. There's no more room to move further."

Officials also reportedly are on edge over what they see as Burns' reluctance to act as a team member. One sources says that when the Fed chairman meets with top economic policy makers, he "just lectures them. There's no opportunity for give-and-take." And although Carter and Burns are said to get along well enough in personal meetings, the chairman has told friends that he still doesn't "know what the president stands for, and I don't think anybody does."

Worse, from the administration's point of view, the indomitable Burns hasn't budged an inch to accommodate the new president, either in relaxing money and credit policies or in easing up on his criticisms. "I see nothing in Arthur's behavior over the past 10 months that shows he's moved even a smidgeon in either direction," mutters one outsider close to the administration. "Why should the president put up with it?" he asks. (Burns declined a request by The Post for an on-the-record interview.)

Nor is this the first time that Democrats have been dissatisfied with Burns' policies. The Fed chairman drew fire in 1972 (unjustly, some believe) on charges of having bloated the money supply to help re-elect Richard M. Nixon — a move critics say contributed to the 1973 price spurt. And the Burns-led board generally is blamed for having overreacted in late 1975, when it reined in on money and credit policies after panicking over the impact of the Ford tax rebate. (Burns since has admitted the agency has made a "mistake.")

Critics also complain about occasional flashes of Burnsian "arrogance" — a trait that hires some junior congressmen and senators, though veterans say it is more muted now than it was five or six years ago. Still, Burns is credited with uncanny skill as a politician. Both at public hearings in Congress and in private sessions with lawmakers, he's proved adept at winning support even from his detractors.

The problem is, for all the administration's frustrations over Burns' recent performance, officials concede it won't be that easy either to get rid of him or replace him. For one thing, the silver-haired economist has become a symbol to conservatives — the lone man in the government, they say, who still cares seriously about fighting inflation. Some argue that to dump Burns now would risk heightening inflationary psychology.

For another, some strategists point out that Carter may well find it useful to have a conservative at the helm of the Fed — if only to serve as a political lightning rod. The argument is that keeping Burns in office could provide Carter with the cover he needs to pursue a less stringent fiscal policy. And, as Nixon showed when he broke the ice with China, a conservative sometimes can get away with more liberal policies than a liberal — if he's willing to do it.

(The impact of the re-appointment question on the markets was illustrated graphically earlier this fall when a news service ran reports of rumors that Burns had decided to resign. Although the reports proved erroneous — and quoted sources in Paris, not the United States — both stock prices and the value of the dollar declined. Salomon Brothers' Kaufman asserts reassuringly that the markets "would go on anyway" if the right successor were chosen. But not all conservatives seem convinced.)

The main question is, whom should Carter pick to replace Burns if he decides to dump the Fed chief? Although the president has given no hint he's even thought about the prospect, there is a standard list: At the top are Paul A. Volcker, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank (and former undersecretary of the Treasury for monetary affairs), and Robert V. Roosa, who held the same Treasury post in the Johnson administration.

Others cited routinely by analysts include Arthur M. Okun, Johnson's chief economic adviser; Andrew F. Brimmer, former Federal Reserve Board member; Gabriel Hauge, chairman of Manufacturers' Hanover Trust Co.; David L. Grove, vice president and chief economist of International Business Machines Corp.; and Bruce K. MacLaury, former president of the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, and chairman of the Brookings Institution. Hauge said last week he would not accept the post.

At present, almost all sides concede that Burns' chances for reappointment look decidedly bleak. Carter's top two economic policymakers, Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and W. Michael Blumenthal, the secretary of the Treasury, both are said to oppose his renomination, and a thrid — Stuart E. Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic adviser — has been a Burns detractor from the start.

And Democrats outside the White House are clamoring for a more liberal replaecment. Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., the liberal chairman of the House Banking Committee and a sometime defender of Burns, says a turnover is necessary. "Without any denigration of Dr. Burns, the times call for something new," he said in an interview. (Reuss proposes liberal economist James Tobin of Yale University, but insiders say that appointment is unlikely.)

Man undergoes mastectomy to remove cancerous breast

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — On a hot day last May, David Rothman noticed the stain on the left front of his T-shirt.

Because his air conditioner was broken and he had stripped down to his underclothes, he dismissed it as perspiration. But he was wrong. "It happened again," he said. "So I pressed on it. Lo and behold, a liquid was coming out."

Looking for the cause of the discharge, doctors discovered a malignant lump in his left nipple. On Sept. 21, at the National Institutes of Health, David Rothman, 30, underwent a modified radical mastectomy to remove his cancerous breast.

"My first reaction was the same as anyone has upon learning he has cancer," said rothman, a free-lance writer. "I was afraid I was going to die."

His subsequent fears were predictable for any man who is told he has a disease that primarily strikes women. "I felt it was a reflection on my masculinity," he said. "It was embarrassing.

"After a while, though, I realized my losing a breast was not as traumatic as it would be for a woman," he continued. "For men, breasts are not something sexual. Suppose the cancer had hit me in a male part of my body? Believe me, I'd rather have breast cancer than cancer of the penis any time."

Rothman's cancer had not yet spread to the lymph nodes when it was detected, so his chances for survival may be considerably brighter than that of other men with the disease.

"The outlook in general for men with breast cancer is usually a little worse than it is for women," said Dr. Mortimer Lipsett, director of the clinical center of the National Institutes of Health. "It seems to progress a little bit faster in men, maybe because it's noticed late — and invades more. Men don't routinely examine themselves, so it's often recognized late. The breast is smaller, so it spreads faster. And once into the lymph nodes, it's not good."

Breast cancer in men is unusually rare. The incidence, according to Dr. Lipsett, is about 1 in every 100 cases of the disease, or an estimated 700 cases of male breast cancer a year nationally. "We don't really know what causes it in women — so we certainly don't know what causes it in men," Lipsett said.

And Rothman's case is particularly perlexing because of his youth. "This is a most extraordinary case," said Dr. George Crile Jr., a breast cancer expert at the Cleveland Clinic. "I have never heard of a man under the age of 45 getting breast cancer — I couldn't believe it."

Rose Kushner, a Maryland woman who wrote a book about breast cancer (the paperback edition, with a new title, "Why Me?", has just been released) and who runs an ad hoc advisory service for breast cancer patients, said she has received several calls from men. Their circumstances, however, unlike rothman's, suggest a possible cause for the disease.

"Several older men who had been receiving hormones for prostate therapy called," she said. "I also heard from three transsexuals who had lumps in their breasts — they were men who had become women and who were taking estrogen."

But Rothman cannot understand his case. "I have never taken hormones for anything," he said. "I'd done nothing to deserve this. The doctors don't know why. All one can do is guess. I suspect it's probably a case of heredity aggravated by environment — but what in the environment?"

There is a history of breast cancer in Rothman's family going back on his mother's side to the early 19th Century. "There have been several women with breast cancer in the family — not my mother or sister," he said. "Believe me, though — I'm the first male."

In his childhood, following the advice of medical experts, Rothman's parents had him irradiated to treat an enlarged thymus, the gland in the neck. "It's at least slightly possible that the radiation caused my cancer," he said.

Crile said there might be a chance that the radiation treatment was related, but was doubtful. "I can't see how a thymus radiation would get down to the breast," he said 'It's incredible, but it might have had something to do with it. I think it's probably an absolutely freak thing."

Freak thing or not, it's still something Rothman has to live with — and it is not easy.

"When I broke the news to my parents, they were quite distressed," he said. "I told them I had something to tell them and their first comment was, 'you haven't been arrested, have you?' 'No,' I said. 'Now listen to me — and it's natural to cry — I've just gotten out of the hospital and it looks like I have cancer.'"

He told them the cancer was in his breast, but their reaction to its location was minimal.

"At that point, the word 'cancer' was more important than the word 'breast'" he said. "They weren't concerned where I had it — only that I had it."

Telling his friends was another task. "They are all as tasteless and flippant as I am," he said, laughing. "I saw no point in calling them and telling them I might not be around too much longer. Instead, it was more like 'would you believe I've come up with a case of male breast cancer? Really inventive, don't you think?'"

Initially, Rothman was also concerned about his physical appearance. Doctors removed the breast and nipple, as well as some of his pectoral muscles. There is a long horizontal scar, which, Rothman has been told, will fade in time.

"I was concerned about the scar's effect on others," he said. "As long as the women don't object, I won't. Some have even found it attractive."

Then he became sober. "Really, there's one point I want to make," he said. "I really feel very, very strongly that doctors should pay attention and look for tumors in the breasts of their male patients."

DEAR ABBY

Girl wants to change her motherly 'image'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: All the boys at school confide in me like I was their mother or something. They're always asking my advice on how to get dates with some of the really neat girls they have a crush on.

Is there some witty or catchy phrase I can throw out to let them know that I am available?

Also, my folks are taking me to Hawaii over the Christmas holidays, and I'd like to lose about 30 pounds in a month. I'd sure like to look cute for the trip, so please hurry your answer. Sign me. . .—PUDGY

DEAR PUDGY: One problem at a time, starting with the one that's probably responsible for the others. You can lose weight by going on a serious diet under a doctor's supervision, but don't expect to shed 30 pounds in 30 days. It took you longer than that to pile it on.

Boys treat you like their mothers because you probably remind them of THEIRS. When you look more like a girl they want to date, they'll realize that you are "available," and you won't need a catchy phrase with which to catch them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a registered nurse who has worked for a competent physician for 15 years.

Every hour at least one person calls and says, "I have a virus. Ask the doctor if I can run in on my lunch hour for a shot."

Abby, what this country needs is a sidewalk booth operated on the same principle as a cigarette machine. The patient could deposit a coin, stick his arm in a slot, select his own medication and get a shot.

People keep asking, "Whatever happened to the good old-fashioned family doctor who made house calls?"

Well, I'd like to know whatever happen to the good old-fashioned trusting patient who let the doctor diagnose the case and prescribe the treatment?—SANTA MONICA

DEAR SANTA: The old-fashioned family doctor was succeeded by a new breed who found he could practice more effectively in his office or in a hospital. And the "old-fashioned patient" has yielded to a generation mostly covered by medical insurance—with a tendency to overuse medical care.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those people who eat like a horse but never put on a pound. Most of my friends tell me I'm too thin, and someone is always giving me a remedy that will fatten me up. I have tried everything, but I can't seem to gain.

I've had people I hardly know walk up to me, stretch their fingers around my waist, and say, "Gee, you're skinny!" They'd never walk up to a fat person and say, "Gee, you're fat!"

I have been hurt so many times by these rude remarks. Will you please give me a good snappy comeback that will put them in their places?—TOO THIN

DEAR TOO THIN: Silence is often the most effective response to a rude remark. But do see a doctor, dear. He may enjoy "fattening someone up"—for a change.

WOMEN'S NEWS

Author relates history of mountain peaks

Mrs. Leona Turner Bruce of Santa Anna discussed the historic mountain peaks at Santa Anna, which she uses as the subject for her book, "Santa Anna's Peaks," when the Book Review Unit of the Midland Woman's Club met for a luncheon.

Mrs. Veda Hodge introduced the speaker, who is president of the West Texas Historical Society, Edwards Plateau Historical Association and Coleman County Historical Commission. The father of Mrs. Bruce, owner of the largest of the two peaks, was a Texas Ranger and lived on one of the peaks.

The peaks are 30 miles from the geographic center of Texas, said Mrs. Bruce, who showed slides and maps to illustrate her talk. The mountains were at one time mined for silica, used in New York to make fine glassware.

Persons now dig for gold and other treasure. The peaks are designated as High Peak and Santa Anna Peak. She traced the Spaniards, Indians, French, Germans and whites through geneological reports she had researched.

The Hal Woodward family of Midland and Fred W. Turner, father of the late Fred Turner of Midland resided at Santa Anna. The senior Turner came to Santa Anna from an Illinois law school and ranched with John and Howard Turner. Turner is called the founder of oil activity in Coleman County, Mrs. Bruce noted. His eldest son, Fred W. Turner Jr., studied business at the University of Oklahoma before entering the oil industry in Midland.

Walter Woodward aided in the settlement of Santa Anna. Halbert Woodward was a federal district judge in West Texas.

Other books on Texas history written by Mrs. Bruce include "Trickham, Texas," "Banister Was There," "They Came in Peace" and "First Lady on Home Creek."

Mrs. Martin Neill gave the invocation for the luncheon. Mrs. Stanley Erskine, president, gave a reading, "November Reflections." Music during the hospitality period and luncheon was played by Mrs. Carol Hall.

The hospitality table was decorated with a large gold cornucopia, acorns and gourds, with fruit, leaves and cornucopias on the smaller tables. The fall leaves were brought from Warm Springs, Ga., by Mrs. Ruth Cochran.

During the business session, Mrs. Jack Samples reported on the success of the Woman's Club recent Flea Market.

Next meeting of the unit will be Dec. 15. "Music Around the World" will be the program presented by Bill Carmack, co-ordinator of fine arts for the Midland Independent School District.

Two new members introduced by Mrs. C. E. Bissell, vice president, were Mrs. Lillian Smith Cornett and Mrs. Naneeta Heckathorne.

Guests were Mittie Arrington, Gretchen Estes, Fredna McHam, Dorothy Swietzer, Betty Fleming of Santa Anna, Jean House, Lorene Jones, Mary Watson, Cleva Brown, JoAnn Whisnand, Lucill Wylie, Martha McPherson, Valerie Pickett and Mrs. Hall.

SORORITY NEWS

XI EPSILON EPSILON, BSP

The Xi Epsilon Epsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met in the home of Dot King.

A program on "Education" was demonstrated with a skit presented by Tiene Richards and Kathy York, Registered Nurses, on preparations made in an hospital operating room prior to surgery.

Chapter members decided to provide Christmas "stocking stuffers" for patients at the Big Spring State Hospital.

PI BETA PHI ALUMNAE

The Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club had a luncheon in the home of Mrs. Glenn Rogers. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Pat Baskin, Mrs. George Tope, Mrs. Reynolds Foster and Mrs. Richard Saxe.

It was announced Mrs. Kent Miller, club secretary, is moving to Atlanta, Ga.

Alumnae were reminded of the Panhellenic party to be held Wednesday in the home of Mrs. William Kennedy, No. 1 Racquet Club Drive.

Mrs. Scott Hickman, president, discussed philanthropic projects of the organization, including "Arrows in the Arctic," which supports libraries in the Arctic region.

MU PHI, BSP

Mu Phi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held a kidnap breakfast in the home of Raedeen Hicks. The members were kidnaped between 4:30 and 6:30 a.m.

They also sponsored a welcome tea in the home of Raedeen Hicks for the two new members.

Members attended the city-wide council meeting. The city-wide poppy sale for the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) was discussed. Mu Phi members will sell poppies in the Midland Tower Building.

The city council's Harvest Ball will be held Saturday.

The next regular meeting will be at 7 p.m. Nov. 22 in the home of Kathy Blackman.

Volunteers get support from bake sale, letters

The Midland Volunteers to the Big Spring State Hospital met in Christ Presbyterian Church for a business session. Mrs. Illa Khory and Mrs. Ann Braselton were hostesses. Mrs. Jean Siesen was a guest.

A report was made on the success of the volunteers' recent bake sale in Dellwood Plaza Mall. It also was announced cash donations were received from Christmas appeal letters from Midland Savings and Loan Association, Mrs. Murray Fasken, George T. Abell, Wallace Irwin, Mrs. B. G. Grafa, Mrs. J. D. Dillard, Fred T. Hogan, James T. Windham, Mrs. John S. Powell and F. A. Scott.

The support makes it possible for the Midland volunteers to purchase necessary supplies used for weekly game sessions for patients and for other extra equipment and furnishings for the hospital.

The volunteers are beginning an appeal to persons to purchase canteen books for patients who do not have any family, or for families which do not have funds to aid members of their families in the hospital. Books may be purchased in any amount and will be distributed weekly or monthly, as the donor wishes.

The group will have its annual Christmas luncheon at noon Dec. 8 in the home of Mrs. B. P. Mabee, 2007 Bedford St. Mrs. Mabee is the daughter of Mrs. Nan Prothro, chairman of the volunteers. Special guests will include Mrs. Margaret Baum, coordinator of volunteers at the hospital, and other staff members.

The Christmas party for patients will be Dec. 13. Midlanders will assist in furnishing refreshments for the party to be held in Units 3 and 4 of the hospital.

Club members talk of American heritage

The Twentieth Century Study Club heard a program on American heritage when they met in the Midland Woman's Club.

Mrs. Vance Hendricks introducted the program in which each member participated by telling something of her heritage. Members showed antiques and family heirlooms as part of the program.

It was announced a luncheon will be held Nov. 17 in the Midland Woman's Club.

Hostesses were Mrs. A. C. Tanksley and Mrs. Robert Cox.

A child is dying: a time for truth

By DARLA WELLES

>
> "When he died I found that I could smile because the suffering was over.
>
> "He was very brave."

What do you tell a child who's sitting on the floor crying because he doesn't want to die?

The truth, says Pat Hipner of San Diego, Calif., whose 9-year-old son died of cystic fibrosis a little more than a year ago.

Her truth was:

"I don't want you to die, either. And I don't want to die. And I'm afraid of dying, just like you are."

Hipner knew shortly after her second son, Kenny, was born that he probably would not survive to adulthood. So she developed her own way of dealing with the fact and helped her son to deal with it as well.

"We learned to live with cystic fibrosis," she said. "That wasn't easy. But what was really hard was learning to die with it.

"There were medicines we had to give him that were unpleasant and that he didn't like to take. It seemed harsh, but I told him even when he was very young, 'You have to take this or you'll die.'

"But he still didn't know what die meant. He began to learn about that with the little pets we had. He began to learn that to die was what happened to the hampster. That it was something that happened whether you wanted it to or not when the time came for it to happen.

"I wanted to give him more than that, though. I wanted to ease the fear of the unknown by making a known of what I thought it might be like to die and go to heaven.

"I didn't want to make him think it was such a great thing that he should just jump off, die before his time.

"Kenny loved life. He would have stayed here forever if he'd had a choice.

"But he didn't have that choice. So I wanted to help him as much as possible to not be afraid.

"We talked together about death — quite rationally — from the time that he was 4. I told him that I honestly didn't know what it was like, but that from what I'd heard it was nice. I told him that I was sure he wouldn't be alone, even though he would have to leave me and his father and his brother behind.

"I told him that we didn't want him to go anymore than he wanted to go. That we loved him and that we would miss him.

"But I told him there'd be lots of other people there, including some of his friends (other cystic fibrosis children) who had died.

"Living with the expectation and acceptance of death changes how you feel about life. It makes you more aware of the need to communicate honestly, to say what you want to say to people and not put it off until it's too late and you have to live with the guilt about what you should have done and said, but didn't.

"I told Kenny and his brother that it was all right to fight and to be unhappy with each other. I wanted our lives to be normal. But I especially stressed the importance of forgiving each other and forgetting the fights, of working things out today — because who was to say that any of us would be around the next day?

"I think it worked. When it came down to the end, he could talk about it. When people came to see him when he was dying, he could say goodbye and they could say goodbye. There wasn't any evasion of the truth. There was no kidding ourselves. He knew and we knew that he was dying.

"We could spend that time reminiscing about the good times. I could say, 'I love you. I'm going to miss you very much. I'm looking forward to seeing you again sometime, somewhere.'

"It wasn't easy to watch him die. It was terrible during those last five or six days to watch him gasping for air while we stood there breathing. And we couldn't give him breath.

"It was so hard that sometimes I found myself wanting just to give him an overdose of medicine and let him die and stop suffering.

"When he died I found that I could smile because the suffering was over.

"He was very brave.

"I have no desire to die. But when I go — after what I learned with him — I won't be afraid. It's too bad we so often wait until we're on the way out to think about death and deal with the fear."

Magazine study shows quality can cost less

By RUBY SEXTON
Copley News Service

The popular concept that "you get what you pay for" may be just that — only a concept.

In a recent issue of The Journal of Consumer Affairs, a study establishes that a product which costs more isn't necessarily better.

For 51 percent of the products reviewed, the higher-priced items in a particular category were those previously judged best in independent testing by Consumer Reports and Consumer's Research magazine.

For the other 49 percent, there was either no relation between the price and quality of the items tested or there was a negative relation, with those rating lowest costing more and the highest in quality actually costing less.

The study by George B. Sproles, an assistant professor of consumer sciences at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind., covered 135 groups of products in five product categories — small appliances, large appliances, sports equipment, tools and home items.

Sproles found the highest relation between price and quality in sports equipment. There, buyers can be sure about 80 percent of the time that the higher-priced product really is better.

The lowest relation was in large appliances, where a higher price tag went along with better quality only 42 percent of the time. And it is with these items, all costing $100 or more, that the study shows the consumer can really suffer from a wrong choice.

Sproles' study did not give any brand or model names. However, the products where he found the greatest discrepancy between price and quality included rotating antennas, electric broilers, slow cookers, microwave ovens, television sets, electric ranges, ovens, water softeners, camping lanterns and heaters, staple guns, the "less safe" rotary mowers (as distinguished from those with specific safety features), electric blankets and picnic tables.

For example, a check of 13 microwave ovens ranging in price from $310 to $459 showed that the mean price of those in the top quarter, qualitywise, was $352.

For those in the bottom quarter, the mean price was $406. Other studies have shown that consumers tend to use price as a guide to quality when they are unfamiliar with a product. Persons who follow that rule would be right about half the time but also would make many bad choices, Sproles said.

Youths cruise in cars seeking fun, friends

By MIKE NEWHINNEY

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robin tugged the denim cap a little lower over his eyes and lit up a cigarette.

"On a good night, you'll find people standing on every corner," Robin said, peering through the windshield of his 1968 Cadillac at the cruising cars splashing through the puddles of Van Nuys Boulevard.

"But on a rainy night like this, most of the people who are out here are the people who just won't die."

On a warm evening, as many as 25,000 young people between the ages of 14 and 30 cruise the boulevard in search of a good time.

One Hollywood screenwriter called it "the heart of the car culture on the planet Earth."

And indeed it is.

Cars of every description and color compete for attention, as their drivers relive the 1950s favorite, "cruising the strip."

Tanned teen-agers cluster on corners to watch the passing parade, exchange gossip, share a smoke.

Others prefer to ride.

The young, freckle-faced blonde in blue jeans idly popped her Juicy Fruit as she searched for a rock station on the Cadillac's FM radio.

"I come down here because it's a lot better than staying at home," said Shawn, a 17-yearold senior at Van Nuys High School.

"It's the only place you can come totally broke and still have a good time," she added, turning up the volume.

Almost religious in their devotion to the Wednesday night ritual, they rarely miss a chance to cruise the boulevard. It's an opportunity to show off a new car, meet new friends or swap stories with old ones.

Inching along bumper to bumper in everything from battered Volkswagens to customized vans, they somehow seem to personify the California Car Culture of the '70s, where four wheels mean much more than mere transportation.

It's a way of life.

"It's a great American tradition out here Wednesday nights," said Los Angeles Police Capt. Tom Hayes, commanding officer for the Van Nuys area.

Writer takes look at final exams

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

BOSTON (AP) — Once again the groves of Academe are shaken root, branch and bud by a howling storm over examinations; whether to do away with them altogether or make them tougher.

The controversy has been recurring on campus every seven or so years, like a plague of locusts, ever since Socrates began asking irksome questions instead of just lecturing like the other tenure double domes at Acropolis.

Educators in favor of scrapping entrance exams and final tests now argue that, among other things, quizzes are unfair to disadvantaged minority students, who may lack the background in competing under pressure, and that a student's overall work and effort is a better indicator of his progress than his ability to jot down some quick, meaningful answers while sitting in alternate seats in alternate rows under a ticking clock and the suspicious gaze of a proctor.

The get-tough faction in the faculty smoking room tends to cite the number of functional illiterates occupying the desks previously reserved for the football team and argues that tomorrow's brain surgeons at least ought to be able to read and write, even if no one can read their writing on a prescription for laudanum or aspirin or whatever. Why award a diploma to some spavined weakling who never blitzed a quarterback or executed a blind-side tackle for the glory of alma matter?

But, on the other hand, why flunk out, just for sake of a few pesry questions, some amiable 37-year-old youth who has found a real home on campus, a lifestyle to his liking, now that it no longer is necessary to bug out to Canada or Sweden?

What with open dorms, food stamps, unemployment checks and government loans that rarely come to maturity when the student does, college life would be serene and carefree were it not for the specter of failure and expulsion raised by the hard-nosed padagogues in the tougher exam camp.

In the opinion of this scholastic observer, who has sat on both sides of the examination bench, the whole bruhaha is based on two questionable premises: 1. That students actually get into a cold sweat, have nervous breakdowns and jump out of lecture room windows (at Harvard exams always seemed to be held in basement rooms) during a tough quiz. 2. That professors actually read the pile of test papers they stuff under their arms as they march menacingly from the lecture hall.

When Vladimir Nabokov, the late, great author of "Lolita," was teaching literature at Cornell, he rarely read the students' answers to the questions he so laboriously contrived for their final doom or reward. His wife, Vera, marked the papers. That was the good news. The bad news was that she was an exceedingly tough marker. But it all came out even, tr better, because on final grades, the master rarely could bring himself to flunk anyone and had a special fondness for the toothless oafs who overflowed their lecture benches in sweat shirts marked "property of the Athletic Department."

Statistics will show that more teachers than students have been hauled off raving to the laughing academy at exam time, especially those reckless enough to read the answers submitted to their questions.

This typewriter tyro entered the working world, a few decades back, as a substitute teacher in the Boston Public School system. When a history teacher fell ill (pushed down the staircase during fire drill, at the William E. Russell Junior High School in the tough Roxbury section), this writer found himself conducting a quiz in the origins of our nationhood.

"When did the Mayflower reach Plymouth Rock?"

"I don't know, teach, I was absent that day," responded a lightly mustachioed adolescent who later was awarded a sixyear government scholarship for taking a tire iron to a gas station attendant.

My brother Andrew, now a school superintendent in a suburb of Buffalo, N.Y., once had the ungraciousness to pull a surprise quiz on an ancient history class at a Brooklyn High School the day before Christmas Eve, a gaucherie equivalent to Scrooge turning away the carolers at his door.

"Who were the Visigoths?" he asked. "Where did they come from and when did they attack Rome?"

One among the sullen, resentful examiness essayed a seasonal response: "I don't know who the Visgoths are or where and when they came, but whoever they are and whereverey are, I wish them all a Merry Christmas."

Repentant, reborn Scrooge coughed up with an A.

Then there was the progressive, highly demanding Yale lecturer on England's Industrial Revolution and Rising Class Struggle (3 credits) who asked only one question on the final exam: "Why?"

While others scribbled furiously, battled with the clock and their total recall of lecture notes, one self assured undergrad wrote but two words in his blue book: "Why not?"

But my favorite exam answer is the Vermont farmer who dealt a blow against bureaucracy when at the end of a long and exasperating government questionnaire on pesticide controls he came to the line: "Do Not Write In This Space."

"I'll write where I damn please," he wrote and went back to his mules.

Treasurer criticized

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Harry Ledbetter, a Democratic candidate for state treasurer, Thursday criticized Warren G. Harding for assuring treasurer employees their jobs are safe.

Harding, appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to succeed the late Jesse James, had been in office only three days when he gave the assurance, Ledbetter said on State Capitol Dateline, a radio show.

"To make such a blanket assurance without taking the time to evaluate each individual would amount to gross negligence on the part of any agency administrator.

"That's one of the major faults of all our government today. Too many agency heads are unwilling to fire the loafers and reward the hard workers.

Funds may be pooled

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton asked a House committee Thursday to consider pooling of local government funds, along with general money management by state and local governments.

The committee was drawn from members of the House Appropriations, the Financial Institutions, the Ways and Means and Intergovernmental Affairs committees.

"The study is to include a review of the management of cash balances held outside the state treasury by other state agencies and the possibility of consolidating these funds," Clayton said.

Rep. Frank Hartung, D-Houston, is chairman of the study committee and Rep. Don Cartwright, D-San Antonio, vice chairman. Other members are Reps. Bill Heatly, D-Paducah; Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, and Bob Davis, R-Dallas.

Anne's child to be commoner

Agence France-Presse

LONDON — Princess Anne's first baby, expected next week, will be a commonder, a Buckingham Palace spokesman announced.

The announcement contradicted press reports that the princess's husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, would receive a title, and the princess herself would be made a duchess, before the birth.

The child would therefore automatically have been born with a title. Even as a commoner, the child will be fifth in succession to the throne.

The spokesman also said that the child will be born not in Buckingham Palace but in a hospital.

CB tourist assistance takes hold in state

By JOHN D. McCLAIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A program set up by former President Richard M. Nixon's pilot that uses CB radio to assist tourists is taking off in West Virginia.

Called "CB Operation Latch String," the program utilizes public officials and private volunteers equipped with CBs to direct travelers to motels, camp grounds, gasoline stations, restaurants and even good fishing sites.

"We knew there were many travelers looking for places to see, to camp in," said Col. Ralph D. Albertazzie, who flew Nixon to such places as China aboard the "Spirit of '76." "I could tell this just by listening to my own CB."

Albertazzie retired from the Air Force in 1974 after Nixon's resignation and was appointed commissioner of West Virginia's Department of Commerce. He resigned that position earlier this year.

But the program he initiated is continuing and, according to Barbara Jones of the Office of Economic and Community Development in Charleston: "We hope to have a sufficient number of participants by the end of March to carry out the program."

It started, Albertazzie said in a telephone interview, when officials realized the growth of travelers' facilities in the state had not kept pace with the completion of the interstate system.

"People were having trouble finding gasoline stations, camping facilities, motels and such," he explained from his Charleston office. "So we decided to set up a program where travelers with CBs could get this information by radio."

The program already includes state policemen with CBs in their cars and CB equipped "courtesy patrols," state-owned cars cruising the highways looking for motorists needing help or information.

Eventually, Mrs. Jones said, the state hopes to equip its tourist information centers with CB radios.

Most monitoring involves Channel 19, the so-called "truckers'" or travelers' channel.

But a major part of the program will involve private volunteers who will monitor CB radios and provide travelers aid, information and emergency assistance.

"We approached REACT organizations first," Albertazzie said, "and they responded favorably."

Since then, Mrs. Jones added, ALERT teams and other CB groups across the state have been invited to participate.

"They have been very anxious to assist," she said.

Mrs. Jones and other officials meet with local CB clubs, explain the program, present slide shows about West Virginia attractions and offer other information usually sought by tourists.

Wages for food industry bite into grocery prices

By BRIAN B. KING

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary Agriculture Department statistics indicate that, for the first time, food industry wages are taking a bigger part of grocery prices for domestically produced foods than is the farmer.

It may not work out quite that way when the total food bill is considered. This is one of those odd years when foreign foods are forcing food prices up, department economists say.

But, not counting the rising prices of coffee this spring and the currently booming prices of tea, it looks like 32 cents of each 1977 food dollar will go to wages for those in the processing, transporting and retailing sides of the food chain.

About 31 cents will go to the farmer, they say. The rest is accounted for by other costs, especially packaging, fuel and profits.

For U.S. farm foods this year, consumers are spending about $180 billion, a 32 percent increase in four years' time. This year, the $7.7 billion rise from 1976 is all going to those who handle the raw foodstuffs and sell it past the farmer's gate. Returns to farmers are holding steady, at a gross of about $56 billion.

Food marketing specialists Larry Summers and Henry Badger say that nearly 90 percent of the increase in the amount spent on food since 1973 results from higher costs of marketing what farmers grow or raise. More than 40 percent of the increase is attributed to wage hikes alone.

In 1972 and 1973, higher prices for the farm crops and animals were responsible for pushing food-price inflation well above 10 percent.

Weather modification plan hearing Dec. 6

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Formal notice for a public hearing Dec. 6 on a weather modification project for Red Bluff Power Control District has been issued by the Texas Water Commission.

Hearing on the project, intended to increase rainfall in target areas in Reeves, Loving and Culerson counties, will be at 10 a.m. Dec. 6 at the Pecos Community Center in Pecos, the TWC announced.

The project involves use of ground-based silver iodide generatiors by Irving P. Krick, Inc., of Texas.

Anyone wishing to oppose the application is to file written statements with the TWC and the applicant at least five days prior to hearing, with information "based upon facts and data related directly to the effects of the proposed weather modification operation."

Anyone wishing to appear at the hearing may "make or file" statements "at the discretion of the Commission."

3rd-ranked Sooners battle Buffs on TV

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Oklahoma Sooners get a second chance to impress the armchair quarterbacks who watch their football on the tube.

Oklahoma's third-ranked Sooners take on Big Eight foe Colorado in Saturday's nationally televised college game. Earlier this season, the Sooners edged Ohio State 29-28 before television cameras. That was before they lost to top-ranked Texas 13-6, the only blemish on Oklahoma's record after nine games.

And the Sooners also remember last year.

"We need to win," Sooner linebacker Obie Moore said. "If we lose, we can still go to the Orange Bowl by beating Nebraska, but we need to win to get momentum and to avenge the loss last year.

"They scored 42 points against us last year and we still remember it."

Colorado Coach Bill Mallory would like a repeat of last year's 42-31 victory but is talking realistically.

"What can you say?" Mallory asked. "They have a great collection of athletes and it's a tremendous football team with more speed than anybody we have played.

"Their backfield speed is tremendous and all of them are talented kids. (Quarterback Thomas) Lott makes them go, but they seem to run well with reserve Dean Blevins, too. You cannot make mistakes on defense or they break one on you fast."

And it's on defense where the Buffaloes are hurting. Linebacker Brian Cabral has recovered from injuries but Colorado's other starting linebacker, Tom Perry, is out for the season after suffering a serious head injury against Nebraska two weeks ago.

"We're battered up, but not in spirit," Mallory said.

Texas takes on Texas Christian in an attempt to increase its record to 9-0 while Miami of Florida is at No. 2 Alabama, which already has clinched the Southeastern Conference berth in the Sugar Bowl.

In other games, Indiana is at No. 4 Ohio State, No. 5 Notre Dame is at No. 15 Clemson, No. 6 Michigan travels to Purdue, No. 7 Kentucky is at Florida, No. 8 Arkansas is at No. 11 Texas A&M, Temple is at No. 9 Penn State and No. 10 Pitt meets Army at East Rutherford, N.J.

Kansas travels to No. 12 Nebraska, No. 14 Southern Cal is at Washington, No. 18 Texas Texas Tech is at Southern Methodist, No. 19 North Carolina plays at Virginia and Northeastern is at No. 20 Colgate.

Saturday night, No. 13 Brigham Young takes on No. 17 Arizona State and Memphis State is at No. 16 Florida.

Staubach nearing Meredith's record

Roger Staubach

DALLAS — Having shaken off a hamstring injury that caused him to miss two pre-season games and a bruised hip that slowed his movement last Sunday in the 24-10 victory over New York's Giants, Roger Staubach — without much fanfare — is having the greatest all-around season of his career through eight games, all Dallas triumphs.

Since throwing a third quarter interception against Tampa Bay in the regular seasons thrid game, Staubach has hurled 136 consecutive passes without one being picked off by enemy defenders. That leaves him 30 attempts shy of Don Meredith's club record of 166 consecutive passes without an interception. Meredith turned the trick beginning Dec. 5, 1965 against Philadelphia and ending Oct. 16, 1966 against St. Louis.

Staubach can also eclipse a couple of his own team standards with performances over the next six games that are consistent with what he's done thus far in 1977. The ex-Middie, now 35, needs 154 passing attempts to break his club record of 369 attempts (set last year) for a season. He has thrown 25 passes in each of the last three games and would need to average 25.5 passes per game the rest of the season to set a new mark.

He also is 79 completions short of his team record 208 completions, also set a year ago. He would need to average 13.2 completions per game over the remaining six contests to break that record. He's averaged slightly more than 16 completions per game so far in '77.

Staubach's 1,218 yards passing so far and nine touchdown passes probably will not enable him to challenge (although he'll likely come close) the team records of 2,805 yards passing and 24 touchdown passes in a season, both marks set by Meredith in 1966.

Roger also trails slightly his best passing percentage year (62.6 in 1973) with a completion percentage of 59.7, tops in the NFL this year. He is averaging 7.35 yards per attempt and his best-ever effort in that category was 8.9 in 1971.

Staubach's best quarterback proficiency rating (and fifth-best in the history of the NFL) was 104.7 in '71.

Midland College seeks 3rd straight cage win

If you're not ready for winter weather, when it comes to sitting outside, the Midland College Chaparrals offer an alternative tonight when they play Wayland Baptist College JV at 7:30 in the MC gym.

The Chaps are 2-0 after a couple of early-week romps and as they point for next week's Odessa College Tournament.

MC rolled over McMurry JV, 104-74, Monday and then laced Laredo JC Tuesday, 106-81, to get Coach Jerry Stone off to a flying start in his first season as Chaparrals head coach.

THE GAMES gave Stone an opportunity to experiment with various combinations as all of the players logged a lot of playing time.

Veterans Ricky Hudgins, Ron Jones and Alvin Mayes were in double figures for both games with Jones hitting 19 Monday and 15 Tuesday.

Freshmen Cullen Mayfield, Luis Alvarado and Henry White also were in double figures both nights with Mayfield hitting 10 the first night and then splurging for 20 against Laredo.

"All of our players have been adjusting well and I'm delighted we have been able to give all of them a chance to play a lot during the first two games," Stone Said.

Lone exception is Clifford Taylor, the 6-7 sophomore postman, held out of the Wayland game because of a knee injury and in action only briefly against Laredo.

AFTER TONIGHT'S game, the Chaps are on the road for two weeks, playing at Cisco Tuesday, at Odessa next Thursday, Friday and Saturday and then Henderson JC in Athems and Tyler JC Nov. 22-23.

NFL official not against Joe Greene

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ed Marion, the National Football League official whose calls sparked an angry tirade by Pittsburgh Steeler tackle Joe Greene, says he has nothing against "Mean Joe."

"There's no animosity. I've been around 18 years and Joe Greene's a good player and a good guy," Marion told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

"He's a very jovial guy. A big loveable guy. Anybody who smiles that much can't be mean," Marion added by phone from his home in Portland, Maine.

Marion was the head linesman who called three offsides penalties against Greene in a game two weeks ago in Baltimore.

That triggered the comments by Greene, whom NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle fined $1,000 for the remarks.

Among Greene's comments about refs: "If they get in my way, I'll just cleat 'em in the spine."

After the fine, Greene issued a printed statment saying he made the threats only "for effect."

"I've known him (Greene) for a long time," Marion said. "If they all were like him, there wouldn't be any problem. Every once in a while, he gets hot, but that's it."

Doc Medich

Medich signs with Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Free-spending Texas Rangers owner Brad Corbett, who had already shelled out $2.7 million for Richie Zisk this week, has coughed up an estimated $1 million to sign much-traveled free agent pitcher Doc Medich.

Medich, a budding surgeon and a veteran right-hander who registered a 12-6 record while pitching for three teams last year, signed a four-year contract with the Rangers, Corbett said Thursday.

Sources close to the Rangers said the contract was in the neighborhood of $1 million.

Corbett spent $2 million in last year's free agent marketplace to sign Doyle Alexander and Bert Campaneris and forked over an additional $1 million to land several other players in trades.

Last season, Medich, 29, a first-year surgery resident in Pittsburgh, won 10 games for Oakland, two for Seattle and pitched briefly with the New York Mets. His earned run average was an inflated 4.55.

"We know Doc can pitch. Our scouts say he's got the stuff to be a starter on a pennant winner," said Corbett. "Winning 12 games with Oakland and Seattle tells you something about him, and the scouts tell us not to worry about his ERA.

American steals thunder in Aussie golf

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Australian Mike Ferguson took a one-stroke lead but it was American Mark Lye who grabbed the headlines Friday in the second round of the Asutralian PGA championship.

Lye threatened to fly back to the United States and miss the Australian Open by storming off the Yarra Yarra course and disqualifying himself.

Handicapped by a buttock injury which needed several stitches before the tournament, Lye was battling in rugged weather conditions to improve on his first round 73 when his temperament got the better of him.

According to his Australian partners, Jack Newton and Trevor McDonald, the 24-year-old American "lost his cool" midway through the round.

As they finished the 18th, Lye yelled "no return, no return" to Newton and stormed off the course without signing his card.

Lye, winner of Melbourne's Colgate Champion of Champions tournament last year, which put him at the top of Australia's Order of Merit and qualified him for a place in the World Series of Golf, agreed to discuss his walk off with local PGA officials Saturday.

"I just wasn't enjoying myself out there today," he said "I was expecting a little better treatment since coming to Australia.

"I wasn't expecting a bed of roses and I don't want to sound like a cry baby, but I have been shoved around since I've been here and I've had it."

Lye finished with a 78 Friday, which would have still avoided the cut.

Ferguson improved on his first-round 71 with a superb 67 to head the field by one stroke. Another Australian, Mike Cahill, was second, followed by two more Australians, David Good and Peter Headland at 140.

Ink Stapleton

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Stingers have signed Pat Stapleton — former defenseman of the year in the World Hockey Association — to a one-year contract.

Stapleton shares the NHL record of six assists for one game by a defenseman.

Ben Martin to retire Saturday

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Ben Martin, whose Air Force Academy teams battled on even terms with college football powerhouses for 20 years, will be stalking the sidelines of Falcon Stadium for the final time Saturday.

Martin, 56, announced his retirement from coaching Thursday, ending the longest tenure of any head coach at a service academy.

"I've always said that 30 years would be my maximum, and I've been coaching 31 years so I feel they owe me one," said Martin, who was an assistant at Navy and head coach at Virginia before becoming only the second varsity football coach the Air Force has known.

His 95-102-9 record at the academy includes an unbeaten season in 1958, his first year here, and three bowl games. But the Falcon football program has been in decline in recent years. After six straight winning seasons, the Falcons were 2-9 in 1974, 2-8-1 the following year and 4-7 a year ago.

This season, crippled by injuries, Air Force has lost six straight games and is 1-7-1. If the Falcons lose to Vanderbilt Saturday and at Notre Dame next week, they'll finish with the worst record in school history.

Martin, who has one year remaining on a three-year contract, said he decided last August that this would be his final year of coaching. "Even if we had had a winning season this year, I don't think I would have stayed on," he said at a press conference.

He said he intended to pursue a number of job possibilities, including commentary on televised college football games.

His resignation is effective Feb. 1, but Col. John Clune, the academy's athletic director, asked Martin to stay on as a consultant until June 30 to ease the transition for a new coach. The search for a coach will begin immediately, Clune said.

Martin said that, as a consultant, he would be involved in choosing his successor, and suggested that his replacement "would be well advised to add a few of the current staff members to his staff."

Cowboys 10-point pick over St. Louis Cards

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It is, let us say, an act of charity, performed with a hand covering the mouth to keep the smirk from escalating to giggles and thence to guffaws.

Here we stand, in the ninth week of Tampa Bay's second season, the 23rd game in all. And still the Buccaneers are, to use a horse racing expression, maidens, without a victory— without so much as a tie—to look back upon.

Looking ahead they see, in the final five weeks of the season, Detroit, Atlanta, Chicago, New Orleans and St. Louis—all of them reasonably formidable foes, none of them likely to collapse ...except perhaps in laughter.

Thus, if the Bucs are to avoid a second season of absolute humiliation, a victory must be achieved this Sunday against one of the few National Football League teams with an ineptitude in Tampa Bay's range.

Welcome, New York Giants.

It is, to be sure, an Upset Special of mammoth proportions, considering the Bucs have scored touchdowns in only three games this season and have been blanked in three others. And coming on the heels of last week's horrendous 7-7 mark that put the season record at 77-35 for a .688 percentage, it is a selection to be regarded only lightly at best.

Nevertheless, with no telethons conducted for the Bucs, with no volunteers standing on street corners collecting coins in tin cans for Tampa Bay, our heart goes out to this underprivileged band of urchins. And so, in our little way, we offer a gift of compassion. Were it within our power to put points on their scoreboard (clearly it isn't within theirs), we would do so.

Bucs 16, Giants 14

For New York, it is a trip from the sublime to the ridiculous. Having lost to Dallas, and having an offense resembling Abbott & Costello Meet The Keystone Kops, the Giants loom as the team most likely to be remembered as the one that helped Tampa Bay break its maiden.

Cowboys 31, Cardinals 21

It appears Dallas has an excellent chance to enter the playoffs with a perfect record. St. Louis won't mar that mark this week, even though it will liven up Monday night with some electrifying moments.

Raiders 24, Oilers 13

Oakland and Houston have beaten each other by one-point margins the past two seasons. It won't be that close this time. The Raiders are first in offense in the American Conference. The Oilers are last.

Colts 28, Bills 14

Buffalo would love to see Roland get his Hooks into Baltimore the way he did to the Patriots last week. But the Colts' defense will get its hooks into almost everything the Bills try.

Steelers 24, Browns 17

Cleveland never has won in Three Rivers Stadium. And the Browns are showing signs of fading. The Steelers certainly haven't been world-beaters the past two weeks. They've been self-beaters. That's about to change.

Jets 30, Seahawks 17

Seeing Seattle's defense (of which there is none) will do wonders for the confidence of Marty Domres, New York's temporary starting quarterback.

Broncos 20, Chargers 9

San Diego went without a point in its two games against Denver a year ago. Not this time—but the outcome will be the same.

Dolphins 23, Patriots 20

It's tough to figure New England. The Pats can look so good one week, so bad the next. We'll stick with Miami's consistency.

Bears 24, Chiefs 16

Neither team can stop the other, but at least Chicago has more to stop. It's back to reality for Kansas City's Tom Bettis.

Lions 14, Falcons 7

Detroit literally gets its show on the road. We've given up on Atlanta's offense—if it ever really had one.

Vikings 20, Bengals 17

Minnesota's main goal will be to wipe away the memory of last week's shellacking by St. Louis.

Eagles 20, Redskins 17

Washington's down after after being so up and coming so close in Baltimore.

Rams 34, Packers 13

Los Angeles is shifting into playoff gear ...

49ers 21, Saints 10

...and New Orleans is stuck in reverse.

Lou Holtz high on Texas Aggies

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

While curiosity abounds in Austin over whether yet another quarterback can lead the No. 1 ranked Texas Longhorns to victory over Texas Christian, the crucial matchup on the Southwest Conference agenda is Arkansas' first trip to Texas A&M with new Coach Lou Holtz at the helm.

The eighth-ranked Razorbacks only have a 13-9 blemish inflicted by the Longhorns and have improved steadily under quarterback Ron Calcagni.

The 11th-ranked Texas Aggies, who have fallen only to Michigan, were idle last week. "They are only one half of football from being the No. 1 team in the nation, perhaps," says Holtz, who was speaking of the ill-fated second half against Michigan in which the Wolverines piled it on for a 41-3 victory.

"Offensively, they have such great speed and the wishbone is difficult to stop to begin with. David Walker can throw the daylights out of it. They have a great kicker."

"Defensively, they're extremely agressive. They play very good coverage which is very tough to throw against. They make you worry about your ability to protect the passer. They're a complete football team. And, we're playing them down there."

"Down there" is Kyle Field were the Aggies are particularly tough — so much so that Arkansas is only a one-point favorite.

Texas A&M Coach Emory Bellard returned the praise, saying "They have a great defense and a solid offense."

Arkansas is leading the nation in scoring defense, permitting just 6.8 points per game.

Representatives from eight bowls will be on hand, including the Orange and Sugar Bowls.

Arkansas is 4-1 i the SWC race and Texas A&M is 4-0. Texas is atop the ladder at 5-0.

Asked if talk about a possible Texas-Notre Dame match in the Cotton Bowl bothered him, Bellard said "I don't think we're out of the Southwest Conference race yet."

The Aggies are still in it even if they lose to Arkansas. Texas and Texas A&M clash Nov. 26 in Kyle Field. Should there be a tie involving A&M with either Arkansas or Texas, the Aggies would go to the Cotton Bowl under the "last appearance rule." A&M hasn't been since 1967.

Freshman Sam Ansley wil be the starting quarterback in place of Randy McEachern.

United States wins Wightman Cup title

OAKLAND (AP) — A newcomer, JoAnne Russell, had the honor of hitting the shot that clinched another Wightman Cup tennis title for the United States.

"But I was nervous playing in the Wightman Cup for the first time," the 22-year-old Floridian said in recalling the start of Thursday night's doubles match. "Then I had to serve first. Did you notice I didn't get a first serve in for a while?"

Russell and her partner, Billie Jean King, who has been on nine Wightman Cup teams, went to deuce in that first game against Great Britain's Sue Mappin and Lesley Charles before winning it and rolling to a 6-1, 6-0 victory.

In the final game, Russell went to the net and put away a forehand shot to end it, one of just three games which went to deuce.

That made the score 4-0 in the best-of-seven match series, coming after Rosie Casals had beaten 19-year-old Michele Tyler 6-2, 3-6, 6-4. So the U.S. team now has the $33,333 winners share to divide.

In Saturday night's windup at the Oakland Coliseum Arena, Chris Evert will face Sue Barker, King will play Virginia Wade and there will be one doubles match. The U.S. team, with a 40-9 advantage over the British over the years, is aiming for the first shutout since 1954.

"We've just got more depth," said King, who is 19-5 in Wightman Cup competition over the years. "For one thing, I don't think Chris and I have ever played on a Wightman Cup team together before. It's much nicer than in the so-called good old days. There's no more politics. Players are picked strictly on merit now."

Team captain Vicki Berner, director of women's tennis for the U.S. Tennis Association, said, "The five members of our team are in the top 12 of the world rankings. I just went down the rankings in picking the team."

Casals broke Tyler's serve three times in the first four games of their match, but then things got tougher and, as the 29-year-old American said, "I had to do more than just get it back. She started finding the range."

Tyler, who like America's Russell was playing her first Wightman Cup match, said it took her time to settle down and she was always "fighting for every point."

She said, "After winning the second set, I was a lot more confident, but then she played a very good game to open the last set and it was like starting all over again."

Casals went ahead 4-1, Tyler fought back to 4-4 but Casals won by holding her serve and then breaking the English player's serve for the seventh time.

Crockett captures 9th grade grid title

Odessa Crockett ripped Edison Gold, 46-0, Thursday to nail down the 9th grade football championship with a perfect 9-0 record.

In other finales, Austin White whipped Odessa Bowie, 22-0; Edison Purple blasted Odessa Ector, 31-3; Odessa Nimitz posted a 12-6 victory over Austin Orange and Odessa Bonham defeated Odessa Hood, 25-7.

Bonham wound up 7-1-1 to wind up second behind Crockett while Nimitz was 5-2-1 for third place.

U.S. to compete in volleyball play

TOKYO (AP) — The United States will compete in place of Yugoslavia in the third men's World Cup volleyball championship in Japan starting Nov. 17, the world Cup organizing committee announced Friday.

Yutaka Maeda, chairman of the organizing committee, said in Yokohama Thursday the Yugoslavian team had informed the committee it could not take part in the 12-nation competition because of "unavailability of a plane."

The Americans will play in Group A against Japan and Brazil in the preliminary round in Fukuoka City. In the first game, the United States plays Brazil Nov. 17.

Besides the United States, the cup title will be contsted by 11 nations - Brazil, Canada, China, South Korea, the Soviet Union, Cuba, Bulgaria, Poland, Mexico, Egypt and host Japan.

U.S. golfers take 2-stroke lead in Japanese golf tournament

TOKYO (AP) — The United States team took a two-stroke lead Friday in the seventh U.S. Japan professional golf tournament at the Harima Country Club while Japanese veteran Isao Aoki assumed the individual lead.

The seven best scores of eight American and nine Japanese players on each side in the second round counted. The Americans shot a 501, three-under-par, to 497 for the Japanese in the team competition.

Starting with the second round, scores of the seven best players were being counted daily at the request of the Americans because of the absence of Lanny Wadkins, who withdrew before the opening round due to illness.

Aoki, a former Japanese World Cup player, fired a three-under-par 69 for a twostroke lead in the individual bid for the $24,000 top prize. The team prize is $18,000 for the winners and $7,200 for the losers.

The 35-year-old Aoki rolled three birdies against no bogeys on the 7,140-yard par-72 course.

Two strokes behind Aoki was Dick Stockton, who shot two straight 69s for a six-under-par 138. In third place with four-under-par 140 were Tom Weiskopf and Toru Nakamura.

Tied for fifth place at 142 were J.C. Snead and Jerry McGee. Snead shot a second round two-over-par 74 and McGee had an even-par 72.

Sabres upset Flyers in NHL action, 3-2

By The Associated Press

Things were so different at this time in 1970. Marcel Pronovost was coaching the Tulsa Oilers of the Central Hockey League, where Fred Shero was guiding the Omaha Knights to a first-place finish and a league championship. Left wing Terry Martin had just celebrated his 15th birthday.

Now Martin plays for the Buffalo Sabres team that Pronovost coaches in the National Hockey League. Thursday night, he scored the goal that gave the Sabres their first victory in Philadelphia — against Shero's Flyers — since Buffalo entered the league in 1970.

While Pronovost and Shero were coaching in the Central League, Philadelphia was beginning a home domination of Buffalo that lasted 17 games — 15 victories and two ties — and seven years.

"I can remember coming in here so many times when we would get a couple of goals, they would get a couple of quick ones back and I would say to myself, 'Here we go again,'" recalls Sabres defenseman Jim Schoenfeld.

It was on their minds enough. Defenseman Jerry Korab said, "We just talked among ourselves and said, 'Bull. Let's go it over with.'"

And they did. Craig Ramsay made it 1-0 after 10:51 of the first period and Fred Stanfield made it 2-1 after Mel Bridgman tipped in a Bobby Clarke shot for a brief 1-1 tie.

Orest Kindrachuk made it 2-2 at 13:53 of the middle period, just 31 seconds after Stanfield scored, but Martin settled matters at 5:56 of the third.

Bruins 5, Kings 2

Boston's Terry O'Reilly, returning from a three-game suspension for bumping a referee, scored three goals and added an assist to carry the Bruins past Los Angeles.

Kings goaltender Rogie Vachon was the victim of O'Reilly's outburst. "I skated in front of the net late in the game and I heard Vachon say, 'Where did you get those moves?'" O'Reilly recalled.

Canadiens 6, Islanders 3

The Montreal line of Steve Shutt, Jacques Lemaire and Guy Lafleur accounted for three goals and five assists as the Canadiens downed the Islanders for only their second victory in seven games.

That took some of the pressure off Montreal, where, says goalie Ken Dryden, "People are approaching you and they're not saying hello; they're saying 'Minnesota 5, Montreal 3.'"

That was the score of the Canadiens' third home loss of the season Monday night.

Payton leading NFL in rushing by 180 yards

By The Associated Press

Walter Payton, 180 yards ahead of his nearest challenger (Oakland's Mark van Eeghen) for the National Football League's rushing title, stands just 63 yards from a feat never achieved by a Chicago Bears player.

In the club's storied 58 years, not even five Hall of Fame running backs ever have gained 1,000 yards in successive seasons for Chicago. It seems almost certain that Sunday, before a sellout crowd at "Payton Place," Chicago's Soldier Field, the young heir-apparent to O.J. Simpson's title as the NFL's premier runner will do something not even the great Gale Sayers could accomplish.

But to do so, he will have to do it with a team rattled by a 47-0 drubbing in Houston a week ago—and against a firedup collection of Kansas City Chiefs, riding the emotional high of a 20-10 victory over Green Bay in Tom Bettis' midseason head coaching debut.

In Sunday's other NFL games, it will be Baltimore at Buffalo, New England at Miami, Cleveland at Pittsburgh, Detroit at Atlanta, the New York Giants at Tampa Bay, Seattle at the New York Jets, Washington at Philadelphia, San Francisco at New Orleans, Los Angeles against Green Bay at Milwaukee, Denver at San Diego, Houston at Oakland and Cincinnati at Minnesota. Monday night's game is St. Louis at Dallas.

Payton has 3,006 yards in his 2½ years in the NFL, 1,390 of them last year when he finished second to Simpson in the ground gaining race, and 937 this year.

Far more important than his individual record, though, is the Bears' record, 3-5 in the National Conference Central Division, one game behind Detroit and two back of Minnesota, next week's opponent.

Bettis has more than a passing interest in beating the Bears. He grew up in Chicago and was a member of Chicago's 1963 championship team.

One of his goals, of course, is to improve on the 5-9 records the Chiefs posted the past two seasons—but for now he has set his sights a bit lower. "I'm not worried about the six remaining games. I'm only worried about Chicago. We'll take the Chicago game first and then worry about the others," he said.

Buffalo, which shocked New England a week ago with the help of Roland Hooks' 155 yards rushing, hopes to spring another surprise against the Colts, who had to struggle to beat Washington last Monday night. Meanwhile, the Patriots need a victory to pull even with Miami in the runnerup spot behind Baltimore in the American Conference East.

Denver charges into San Diego to face the Chargers, who went scoreless in two games against the Broncos a year ago. Oakland, tied with Denver at 7-1 atop the AFC West, opposes Houston, which got a pair of Dan Pastorini-toKen Burrough scoring bombs in the romp over the Bears.

Drew, Johnson spark Atlanta to NBA win

By The Associated Press

Atlanta's John Drew has been resting his injured leg and it really hurt the Houston Rockets.

"Drew had a legitimate injury," Atlanta Hawks Coach Hubie Brown said. "He hasn't been practicing much to let let his leg heal."

So Drew and Ollie Johnson scored 22 points each to pace Atlanta to a 132-101 National Basketball Association rout of Houston Thursday night and give the Hawks a sparkling 8-1 record, best in the NBA.

Drew showed no signs of his injury when he popped in four baskets early in the third period to widen Atlanta's lead after Houston had pulled to within four points at 55-51 late in the second quarter.

"That just goes to show you how much his performance meant to us tonight," Brown said.

In other NBA games Thursday, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the Washington Bullets 106-103 and the Phoenix Suns crushed the New Orleans Jazz 127-111.

"So far everything has fallen into place for us," Brown said of Atlanta's quick start, which has been matched only by the defending NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers. "We have had no adversity yet."

Houston jumped out front 4-0 before Atlanta ripped off 26 of the game's next 30 points, grabbing a 26-8 margin. It was the Hawks' seventh straight victory, matching its longest streak since November 1969.

Moses Malone paced Houston with 27 points.

"I am happy with our early start," Brown said. "Any time you win eight out of nine games in the NBA you've accomplished something."

Bucks 106, Bullets 103

A free throw by Dave Meyers with five seconds left in the game snapped a tie and Junior Bridgeman added two more free throws at the final buzzer as Milwaukee nipped Washington.

The Bullets had two chances to win in the final seconds but Elvin Hayes fouled Meyers twice, the second time costing Wasington possession of the ball. Meyers finished with 24 points, as did Brian Winters, to pace the gbucks. Bob Dandridge led the Bullets with 25 points.

Suns 127, Jazz 111

Alvan Adams scored a season-high 35 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to pace Phoenix' victory over New Orleans. The Jazz' Pete Maravich led all scorers with 39 points.

New Orleans narrowed the Suns' lead to 99-90 early in the fourth period, but Phoenix went on an 18-point spree to put the game out of reach.

Heinsohn is fed up with play of team

BOSTON (AP) — Fed up with his team's losing ways, Celtics' Coach Tom Heinsohn has replaced team captain John Havlicek with rookie forward Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell in the starting lineup for tonight's game against the Buffalo Braves at the Boston Garden.

A team spokesman said the benched Havlicek, sometimes known as "Mr. Basketball," in Boston, will probably be the team's sixth man. Maxwell is a 1977 first-round draft pick from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Havlicek was benched and high scorer Jo Jo White skipped practice Thursday following the team's 129-114 loss to the San Antonio Spurs.

"We were absolutely lousy," complained Celtics Coach Tom Heinsohn after the San Antonio game which left the team's record at one victory and eight defeats.

White, a guard who has been the Celtics' leading scorer with more than 17 points a game this season, was one of several Celtics to receive an angry tongue-lashing by club President Red Auerbach after the loss.

Auerbach stormed into the Celts' dressing room and shouted, among other things, "If any of you guys don't feel like playing, you can pack your bags and get the hell out of here."

A team spokesman said it was not known where White was when he failed to show up at Thursday's workouts.

"Has he quit? See if he shows up tomorrow night," the spokesman said Thursday.

The benched Havlicek, 37, after 15 years as a star, is Boston's steadiest soldier. He needs only 13 points to become the NBA's third highest career scorer, eclipsing Jerry West.

Last season, when star center Dave Cowens walked away from the team and Charlie Scott was out with an injury, Havlicek responded with more than 17 points a game. This year, he is averaging 11.9 per contest.

Cowens, angry with Wednesday's loss, said "We've got to get mad. We've got to get fed up with the way we've been playing."

Kansas State football coach resigns position

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State football Coach Ellis Rainsberger, who declared two weeks ago, "I'll never resign," resigned Thursday night in the face of a player eligibility scandal which overshadowed even his team's 19-game Big Eight losing streak.

Glen Stone, sports information director, confirmed an attempt had been made to hide the identity of two players, Steve Parish and Louis Brown, in a junior varsity game Monday. Rainsberger had planned to hold the two out of competition this year to get them a "redshirt" ruling and an extra year of eligibility.

"The players were recognized during the junior varsity contest, as it turned out, by working members of the press box," Stone said in a prepared statement. "...and they were recorded on the statistics accordingly.

"Afterward, as requested, we misrepresented the game and some of its players to the media by switching names, Ken Lovely for Brown and Brooks Burton for Parish. I am, of course, embarrassed. It won't happen again."

A university spokesman, asked who had requested the players be misrepresented, answered, "Coach Rainsberger."

Burton and Lovely are members of the K-State varsity.

Rainsberger's resignation becomes effective Nov. 19, following the Wildcats' final game of the year, at Colorado. This Saturday Kansas State, 1-8 this season and 5-26 in Rainsberger's three-year reign, hosts Iowa State. The Wildcats have not won a Big Eight game since beating Colorado in the final contest of the 1974 season, just before Rainsberger was hired.

Rainsberger had come under increasing fire this year as problems continued to mount for the Wildcat program on and off the field. Two former players and two current members of the team have been named in charges involving the alleged rape of a K-State coed in the athletic dormitory. And two weeks ago a group of freshmen boycotted practice and threatened to leave the team.

Wilson High scores 63 points twice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wilson High, which held a 63-0 lead over Lincoln last Friday before the latter refused to play the second half, ran up points again Thursday night, this time in a full football game.

Wilson spotted Belmont a 3-0 lead before getting in gear to post a 63-3 victory. Belmont kicked a field goal, then Wilson scored 14 points in each of the first two quarters for a 28-3 halftime lead. Second-string quarterback Steve Clarkson, playing the final quarter, passed for two touchdowns and ran for one as Wilson won its 34th straight game.

Surgery set

CLEVELAND (APz — Cleveland Indians outfielder Paul Dade is scheduled to undergo surgery next Thursday in a Seattle hospital for removal of a calcium deposit on his left foot.

The American League baseball team said Dade, 25, played most of his first full major league season with the calcium deposit.

Dade came to Cleveland a year ago as a free agent and batted .291 in 1977.

Sidelined

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — Highscoring freshman Earl Belcher, a forward on the St. Bonaventure basketball team, has been sidelined three to five weeks because of the flareup of an old injury.

Belcher, from Syracuse, has a bone chip in an ankle as a result of a broken ankle that he suffered during his junior year in high school.

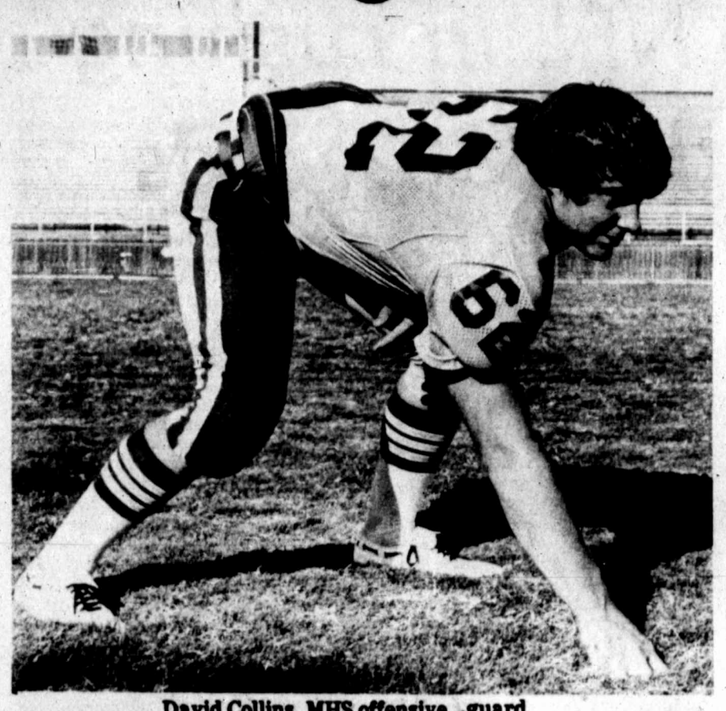
Bulldogs face Rebels in season finale



David Collins, MHS offensive guard

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

The 1977 football season comes mercifully to an end tonight for Midland and Lee high schools, as the two cross-town rivals tangle for the city's bragging rights in Memorial Stadium.

Two and a half months ago, both teams had hoped there would be a little more on the line when they met than bragging rights, but setbacks of one kind of another have dictated otherwise. Lee needs a victory tonight to finish at 5-5, while the Bulldogs chance for a .500 season went out the window in last week's loss to Abilene Cooper. Midland is 3-5-1.

There will be no cries of "encore" tonight, and perhaps now, with the curtain about to come down, would be an appropriate time to quickly look back and see what has happened to both the Rebels and the Pack.

Anyone who doesn't know by now what happened to Lee in late August has either been on a very extensive trip abroad the past few months, or on a very long bender. They were the defending district champions, but never got a chance to do any defending because the district executive committee disqualified them for using contact equipment during the first four days of pre-season drills, which is against University Interscholastic League rules.

Whether that early disappointmer had any bearing on the team's pe formance once the season began is a question for debate. But the truth is they Rebs lost quite a few top players from their '76 title team, and inexperience — and the mistakes that come with it — were more to blame for their five losses than anything else.

They went through the non-district season winning two of three; their only loss coming at the hands of underdog Plainview. Then came the 5-4A opener against Odessa.

In that one, the Bronchos burned Lee with a 90-yard scoring pass in the closing seconds to win the game, 13-7. Lack of motivation? No. Inexperience? Yes.

A week later, it was San Angelo who beat the Rebels, as Lee's last chance for a win in that one — a 95-yard interception run for a touchdown by John White — was nullified because of a clipping call.

The then beat Abilene Cooper and Big Spring in succession, but have been beaten by Permian, 10-0, and Abilene, 24-6, the last two Fridays to lead us back to the present.

What happened to Midland was not a result of any disciplinary action or inexperience. In fact, no one is quite sure just what has happened to the Bulldogs. They seem to have plenty of talent, and they have given evidence of it on occasion. But that's the problem. They've only done it on occasion.

The non-district season was a disaster. During the week, they were mad dogs unchained. But by game time they played like they were tranquilized. They lost to Amarillo Tascosa and Lubbock Monterey, and could manage just a tie against El Paso Eastwood.

Admittedly, the district schedule is not kind to Midland. Every year they must open with Permian, which can be compared to a driver's ed student being asked to take their test on the LA freeway.

The 'Dogs gave Permian a game for three quarters, but their offense just couldn't move, and Mojo eventually won, 24-6. After successive wins against Big Spring and Abilene, it looked as if they had finally jelled, but an injury to star running back Walter Bryson coupled with some other bad breaks resulted in a 24-0 defeat in San Angelo a week later.

They bounced back to mutilate Odessa 27-7, and again, it looked as if the pieces had finally fallen together. But then came the 34-8 embarrassment to Cooper last Friday.

So, we're back to bragging rights, which isn't such a bad thing to play for after all.

For Lee coach Jim Acree, tonight may be his last game at the helm of the Rebel football program. Only time and the Midland school board will tell. The board will meet sometime later this month or early next month to decide his future.

The Rebels will come at Midland with a potent rushing attack which is led by junior fullback Jeff McCowan, who has carried 134 times this season for 728 yards and a 5.4 yard average. However, the 205-pound bull has yet to score a touchdown in district play.

Complimenting McCowen will be running backs Marvin Iglehart and John Marks, both of whom are averaging more than six yards a carry.

The Pack also has a capable power runner in Brentley Jackson, who is averaging 4.7 yards a lug and has found the endzone on five occasions. With Bryson out, senior Gerald Dedrick and sophomore Billy Applin will alternate at halfback, and an exceptional performance by one or both of them could tip the scales in favor of MHS tonight.

While the outcome of tonight's game may be a toss-up, one thing is for sure. Tonight's game will be quick. Both teams pass no more than seven times a game, so most of the action will probably be on the ground, unless Lee or Midland decides to break form.

Bullpups topple Brigade, 14-13

Lee's two-point conversion try with just 27 seconds left in the game failed and the Midland High junior varsity hung on for an exciting 14-13 win in Memorial Stadium Thursday night.

It was the Bullpups third victory in as many games against the Stonewall Brigade this season, and lifted them to a final 7-3 mark. Lee finished up at 2-8.

The contest appeared safely in hand for Coach Stan Moore's Bullpups, when they took possession of the ball on the Lee 35 with just 1:36 remaining in the game and holding a 14-7 lead. But then things began to happen.

On the very first play, Midland's fine sophomore running back Jeff Robinett burst up the middle for a 20 yard gain. But he fumbled the ball on the 15 and Lee's Steve Waldron fell on it with still over a minute to play.

It was the one flaw in an otherwise perfect performance for Robinett, who gained 149 yards on an unbelievable 39 carries and scored both of the Bullpups' TDs.

With time running out and Lee still 85 yards away from paydirt, Midland naturally was looking for the pass. But on second down, quarterback Bill McPherson went with a draw play to halfback Wade Cartwright and the speedster rambled 65 yards down to the Midland 20. Only a desperation tackle by Pat Hickey saved the touchdown.

A McPherson to Waldron pass picked up six yards to the 14, then Waldron ran for three more, and then Craig Ellis picked another yard and the important first down at the 10 with just 37 seconds left.

On second down, McPherson lobbed a picture-perfect pass to Waldron for the score, which made it 14-13.

Coach Ernie Johnson went for all the marbles after that and by-passed the chance to tie the game with a kick, but McPherson's attempted pass to a diving Joe Windsor in the end zone was incomplete and Midland just had to get the kick and hang on to the ball.

The Brigade actually jumped out in front in the game, when Waldron romped 54 yards for a score on only the second play of the game.

But the Bullpups answered on the second possession, driving 53 yards on 12 plays with Robinett bulling over from the one-yard line.

That's the way the score stood as both team's turned the ball over several times, until Robinett capped off a 67 yard drive with 5:32 left in the game, by busting through for a 10 yard touchdown. John Swartz' point after made it 14-7 and it stayed that way until Lee mounted their final charge.

American netter holds workouts

TOKYO (AP) — American tennis players went through their first workout in Japan in preparation for the second annual U.S.-Japan collegiate tennis meet Nov. 12-14. The Americans arrived in Japan Thursday night.

The six men and two women from the NCAA practiced two hours under the guidance of Coach Dick Gould of Stanford University.

The three-day event includes 14 singles and eight doubles in the men's division and six singles and two doubles in the women's section.

"The artificial surface center court is good but slow," said Tony Graham, a senior at the UCLA. "The facilities around the court are nice."

All the players agreed that the Japanese courts of artificial surface are slow. The Americans prefer faster courts because they are used to playing on cement in the U.S. during the winter.

"I've heard from players of the first meet last year that the Japanese are all-around players and quick," Gould said. "We expect strong competition from them."

Harriers competing in Angelo

The Midland and Lee cross-country teams will travel to San Angelo Saturday morning to participate in the San Angelo Invitational meet which will be held at the Santa Fe Golf Course.

Coach Ed Nixon's Bulldogs will be going after their sixth meet victory in a row in the Concho City. A week ago, they notched number five when they walked away with the team title in the Amarillo Invitational.

Jeff Adkins will lead the Pack harriers, and joining him will be Bart Wolfe, Pat and Paul Darden, Chuck Stump, Gene Tuttle, and Tom Hunter.

Coach Sam Volpe's Lee team placed third last weekend in the Big Spring Invitational, and will be looking to match or better that Saturday. They will go with Steve Hooper, Ricky Parsons, Robert Samuels, Pat Moore, David Harwell, Tim Moore and Allen Jones.

Lee will also compete in the girls' competition in San Angelo. Running will be Holly Franz, Geri Moore, and Tanya Phiffer.

Midland will not field a girls team, but will participate in the junior varsity meet. Making the trip will be James Simmonds, Rex Allen, Paul Brown and Bob Glenn.

Whitworth takes Far East golf lead

SINGAPORE (AP) — Kathy Whitworth of the United States played brilliant golf on the back nine to take a one stroke lead with a three-under-par 69 on the first day of the Colgate Far East Open women's international golf tournament Friday.

Whitworth, struggling to overcome the heat, had two bogeys and a birdie on the front nine but overcame pressure to register four birdies on the back nine for a 69.

"I have been playing cautious golf. I had a poor round on the front nine but my putting was a savior on the back," Whitworth said.

"Like most of the golfers, I can stand the heat because I had played in hotter weather.

Goalie is named coach

OAKLAND (AP) — Former all-star goalkeeper Mirko Stojanovic has been named as coach of the new Oakland Stompers team in the North American Soccer League.

Stojanovic, 38, holds NASL records for fewest career goalsagainst and for single season goals-against average. He played for the Dallas Tornado, Oakland Clippers and San Jose Earthquakesm

Prior to his appointment Thursday, Stojanovic had been involved with a local electronics firm since his retirement in 1975.

Also Thursday, Stompers' owner Milan Mandaric signed a 10-year lease for the Stompers to play home games in Okland.

Granite monument to be unveiled

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A small granite monument rededicating the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium to the memory of all American war veterans will be unveiled Saturday at the Texas-Texas Christian University football game.

The stadium, built in 1924, originally was dedicated to Texans who served in World War I.

Midland Wildcat Committee hosts officials of Mesa Petroleum Co.

Mesa Petroleum Co. officials were guests of honor Thursday at a reception in the Petroleum Club of Midland.

The host was the Midland Wildcat Committee headed by Robert L. Wood, chairman of the executive committee.

Mesa, an independent exploration and production firm that has enjoyed phenomenal success in the last 13 years, is headed by T. B. Pickens Jr. of Amarillo, chairman of the board and president.

The company operates from Amarillo headquarters. Division offices are located in Midland, Houston, Denver, Colo.; Calgary, Canada, Aberdeen, Scotland, and London.

Other officials from Amarillo who were in Midland for the reception are Jack K. Larsen, group vice president; John F. Boros, vice president and secretary-treasurer; Frank R. Davis, vice president-Operations; Gaines L. Godfrey, vice president-Finance; James O. Upchurch, vice president-Engineering; Wales H. Madden Jr., director; Don D. Dent, general attorney; Barrett Pierce, assistant to the president, and James Farrell, operations manager.

Robert L. Stillwell of Houston, director, also attended the reception as did Marion E. Causey, Midland exploration manager, and Robert H. Northington, Midland land manager.

Mesa has 450 employes companywide, with 25 operating from the Midland Division headquarters.

Larsen, group vice president, said Mesa daily produces 12,000 barrels of liquids and 280,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

Chairman Pickens said Mesa's oil and gas revenues this year will be about $140,000,000.

"We are engaged only in the exploration for and the productiom of oil and gas," Pickens said. "We are not in the refining, transporting or retail sales end of the oil industry."

Mesa became the corporate name of the company in 1964 after operating under another name since 1957. When the company became Mesa, the capital market value of the company was "about $2,000,000," Pickens said.

Mesa's market value today is about $650,000,000.

Wales H. Madden Jr., director, pointed out that if a person purchased $10,000 worth of Mesa stock in 1964 it now would be valued at $107,000.

Pickens said the company is very excited over a discovery it made in the North Sea off the coast of Scotland — the Beatrice field.

"We have confirmed the are with three appraisal wells, and the oil in place in the area has been estimated at from 150 million to 200 million barrels.

Larsen said a large part of Mesa's exploration and production effort is in the Gulf of Mexico where the company has 26 per cent interest in 85 5,000-acre tracts.

"We have been participating in the Gulf since 1970 as an operator and interest operator," Larsen said.

"We have 11 platforms on production, eight under development and eight more waiting approval," Larsen added.

Pickens said Mesa is involved in about 35 projects going the year round. "We keep three rigs going in the Permian Basin and usually have interests in three or four other operations."

Committee acting like no oil emergency exists

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sen. Russell Long, D-La., would like a Coke — so he goes to get one. Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., slips out into the corridor to greet some constituents. Rep. William A. Steiger, R-Wis., wants to make a serious motion, but the chairman chooses not to recognize him — on purpose, Steiger reckons, because he doesn't want to vote on the issue.

the moral equivalen tof war? It doesn't look that way in the cavernous hearing room of the Committee on Ways and Means. In that self-consciously ornate hall, senators and House members have been meeting this week to search for compromises on the key elements of President Carter's proposed energy program. So far they haven't found any.

Nor have they found a sense of urgency. Thursday afternoon, they adjourned for the weekend.

Conference committees have only been meeting in public since last year, but already everyone involved seems to take the openness in stride. Lobbyists and $80-an-hour lawyers lounge in the spectator seats, many reading newspapers. Members come and go. Reporters try to enliven the proceedings with wisecracks whispered along the press tables.

The congressmen involved are strewn about the room, many so far from each other that they can only communicate through the public address system. The people who do most of the talking are not congressmen. Oen is Bernard (Bob) Shapiro, chief of staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation, who explains to the congressmen the differences between the past legislative deeds of House and Senate. Another is Laurence Woodworth, assistant secretary of the Treasury for Taxation, who until January held Shapiro's job. He offers the Carter administration's views on the matters under discussion.

The man at the center of attention is Russell Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and still a genuine whale in a Congress that now contains very few of them.

The reporters keep their eyes on Long. The members do, too. The room fills with laughter when he cracks a joke — which he does often — whether or not it is really very funny. Before the conference resumed business after lunch Thursday afternoon, Long regaled his senior House colleague, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., with a series of jokes and pokes in the stomach. Ullman, chairman of Ways and Means, laughed and laughed as though he loved it.

As one administration lobbyist noted, Long has an enormous advantage in a situation like this simply because of his reputation. He is supposed to be an ingenious, brilliant, wily old fox — so everyone waits to be outfoxed. The lobbyist suggested what goes through the minds of other congressmen in the conference: "This is Russell Long, so I know he's going to trick me out of my socks."

So far he hasn't visibly tried. For two days the conference has discussed the differences between the House and Senate energy program, but there has been no serious outward attempt yet to resolve them. And the differences are enormous. The bill Long produced involves giving away hundreds of millions of dollars to reduce energy consumption and promote new energy development. The House bill seeks the same goals through new taxes.

Clear Fork producer completes in Hockley

A wildcat has beem completed in Hockley County, a field extender has shown for production in Martin County, and a new project has been staked in the Providence field of Cottle County.

HOCKLEY STRIKE

Texas American Oil Corp. of Midland No. 1 Davis, wildcat five miles west of Snyer in Hockley County, completed for 60 barrels of oil and 60 barrels of water per day, through perforations from 6,110 to 6,169 feet opposite the Clear Fork.

The project was drilled to 6,830 feet.

Gravity of the oil is 28 degrees and the gas-oil ratio during the potential test was 120-1.

MARTIN TEST

Hanley Co. of Midland No. 1-7-26 University, ¾-mile north of the LeCaff (Dean) field in Martin County, is flowing to test.

Operator perforated opposite the Dean from 9,585 to 9,589 feet and acidized with 10,000 gallons. After cleaning up, the project flowed 276 barrels of oil, no water, in 19¼ hours.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 26, block 7, University Lands survey and 13 miles northwest of Tarzan.

Gus Edwards of Abilene No. 4 Naida Gibson is to be drilled as a 6,500-foot operation in the Providence (Atoka) field of Cottle County.

Drillsite is four miles east of Chalk and 670 feet from south and 360 feet from west lines of F. P. Knott survey No. 17.

SUTTON TESTS

HNG Oil Co. of Midland spotted a pair of projects in the Sawyer (Canyon) area of Sutton County.

No. 2-52 Fields is 933 feet from north and east lines of section 52, block B, HE&WT survey.

No. 3-53 Fields is 1,233 feet from north and 933 feet from east lines of section 53, block B, HE&WT survey.

Each of the projects will be drilled to 6,200 feet. The sites are one mile south of Sonora.

CROCKETT PROJECTS

Delta-Suburban of Odessa will dig a pair of 7,200-foot operations in the Ozona (Canyon sand gas) field of Crockett County.

No. 3-32 Roy Henderson is 980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 32, block M, and No. 4-32 Roy Henderson is 1,320 feet from south amd west lines of section 32, block M, GC&SF survey.

Crystal City residents hope for warm trend

CRYSTAL CITY, Texas (AP) — Residents of this South Texas town, who have been without natural gas for seven weeks now, hoped for warmer weather today in the wake of a cold front that brought the season's first freezing temperatures.

Thursday morning's low of 30 degrees sent many of the town's 8,104 inhabitants scurrying for extra blankets for their beds.

And, some children at two schools kept their heavy coats and sweaters on in unheated, chilly classrooms.

"I didn't want to get out of my bed this morning, it was so cold. I kept the covers pulled over my face, but Mom said I had to go to chool," said a first grade pupil at one unheated school.

Police Chief Ramon Garza found frost on the ground and ice crystals on windows when he awoke. After a "very cold shower," Garza warmed up with hot coffee at a cafe heated by butane fuel.

He said there were no unusual incidents reported to police in connection with the cold night.

City Manager Raul Flores said the city is erecting a large propane storage facility to supply the town's residents with an alternative fuel. But it won't be ready for a few weeks, he said.

Flores said a shipment was expected today of 400 residential-size propane tanks which the town is buying for poor people with part of a $310,000 grant from the federal Community Services Administration.

More than 800 households in the city have applied for the relief.

"The people are just doing whatever they can to protect themselves from the cold," Flores said Thursday. "The feeling that is in the people of Crystal City is not a very good one."

He said "red tape" in the federal and state bureaucratic processes has slowed the town's response to the fuel crisis which began on Sept. 23 When Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. cut off its gas supply to the town.

The company said Crystal City owed $800,000 in back charges for the fuel but city officials said the town's mostly poor, Mexican-American residents just couldn't pay the tab.

The city will sell its propane fuel. when it gets a supplier, to all residents. But federal money will help lower the cost to the poor.

The propane tanks will remain government property.

Most residents who formerly heated with natural gas had purchased small electric space heaters and electric hotplates for cooking. Some have discovered they aren't too efficient.

"It just doesn't help much at all," said Ramona Sotos, 69, pointing at the little electric heater near her bed. By midmorning, she found it was warmer outside than inside her little frame house.

School district officials are preparing to install butane heating equipment for the unheated schools, but it may not be ready for several weeks.

"We have to stand in line just like everyone else," said Felipe Flores, school district business manager.

"Hopefully, the weather will be warm a while longer."

Exxon asks for pool unit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Exxon Corp. asked the railroad commission Thursday to approve the unitization of the Conroe and Conroe (Upper Coc-field) fields in Montgomery County — two of Texas' most prolific producing areas.

Exxon says unitization will prevent the loss of 3.5 million barrels of crude oil a year.

A number of working and royalty interests who disagree with Exxon's proposed participation formula are opposing Exxon's application.

Exxon's unit participation proposal would be based 67.4 percent on the percent of oil and gas reserves under each tract; 16.3 percent of acreage feet containing oil or gas; and 16.3 percent on revenues from 1975 oil and gas production.

Charles Ehrhardt of Exxon told commission hearing examiners that signatures approving unitization have been received from 97 percent of the working interests, 75.52 percent of the royalty interests; and 93.1 percent of the total ownership. Exxon is the largest operator in the fields.

Opposing the Exxon formula — but not the unitization program — are Dr. Hopper Oil and Royalty Co.; H.L. Brown Estate; W. Ridley Wheeler Estate; W.H. (Dick) Schaefer; Estate of Hattie Hooper; W.T. Hooper; Ruby Laura Hooper Martin; H. Bruce Moore; Florence Forbush and Detroit Bank and Trust Co.

Dual well completes

Stoltz, Wagner & Brown of Midland No. 1-6-A Miller-Hoover Unit has been completed as a dual well in Crockett County, seven miles south of Ozona.

The well finaled as a Canyon gas producer to extend the pay in the Ozona multipay field ⅝ mile southeast.

It finaled from that zone for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 800,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Production is from the section at 6,084-6,525 feet, after 2,250 gallons of acid and 36,000 gallons of fracture solution.

It early was completed from the Strawn as a Thomason field producer. From that zone it completed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 7,900,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 9,382 to 9,594 feet.

Location is 760 feet from north and 1,780 feet from east lines of section 6, block o, TCRR survey.

WT areas get tests

Borden and Terry counties have gained location sites.

Coquina Oil Corp., of Midland, has mad plans to re-enter and plug back to approximately 8,600 feet at No. 2-B Doyce Waddell. It is in the Dunigan (Strawn) field in Borden County.

Located 11 miles north of Gail, it spots 660 feet from south and 1,998 feet from east lines of section 20, block 30, T-6-N, T&P survey.

Original total depth was 8,753 feet.

The six-well Wellman, Southwest (San Andres) field of Terry County gained a new site, with the staking of NRM Petroleum Corp. NO. 1 U. D. Lewis.

Located 2,173 feet from south and 467 feet from west lines of section 62, block DD, John H. Gibson survey, three miles south of Wellman, it is one location east of production in the Wellman, Southwest field.

Venture announced

CORPUS CHRISTI — Tejas Gas Corp. has announced it has signed a joint venture agreement with Coronado Transmission Co. of Corpus Christi covering 44 miles of natural gas pipeline and two amine plants for the removal of carbon dioxide from natural gas in Zapata County.

Under the agreement, the joint venture will construct a 22-mile, 8-inch pipeline addition to the existing line and an additional amine plant with a capacity of 15 million cubic feet of natural gas a day.

In addition, the agreement calls for Tejas to purchase half interest in the existing pipeline and treatment plant.

Three WT counties get wildcat projects

Wildcat operations have been scheduled in Coke, Irion and Nolan counties, with Coke drawing three projects.

Kendrick & Mulligan Oil & Gas Inc. of Abilene staked locations for two 6,000-foot Ellenburger wildcats in Coke County. They are surrounded by failures and are seven miles southeast of the depleted Tennyson (Ellenburger) field.

No. 1 Ione Coghill is 1,128 feet from south and 1,692 feet from west lines of Green DeWitt survey No. 11. Ground elevation is 1,922.2 feet.

No. 2 Ione Coghill is 1,268 feet to the southeast and 467 feet from south and 2,787 feet from west lines of Green DeWitt survey No. 11.

THIRD TEST

WES-TEX Drilling Co. of Abilene will drill its No. 1 Lois M. Smith as a 6,000-foot wildcat six miles southeast of Robert Lee in Coke County.

Location is 467 feet from northeast and 467 feet from east lines of I. N. Moreland survey No. 17. Ground elevation is 1,882.2 feet.

The site is 1½ miles northeast of the depleted Weaver (Strawn) field.

IRION TEST

Union Texas Petroleum Corp. will re-enter and try to recomplete its No. 1-52 Farmer as a Strawn gas discovery.

The well originally was completed to open the Flint Hill (Canyon oil) field, 10 miles west of Mertzon in Irion County.

The project is 2,343 feet from south and 1,867 feet from west lines of section 52, block 1, H&TC survey.

Hole is bottomed at 8,390 feet. Tests will be made from 8,188 to 8,253 feet.

NOLAN WILDCAT

Fisher-Webb, Inc., of Abilene spotted location for a 6,900-foot wildcat in Nolan County, nine miles southwest of Maryneal.

It is No. 1-14 Arledge, 1,740 feet from north and 800 feet from east lines of section 14, block 1-A, H&TC survey.

Site is ½ mile north of the Yellow Wolf (Odom lime) field.

North Sea well flows

AMARILLO — Mesa Petroleum Co. announced today the successful test of well No. 5, a flank appraisal well in the Beatrice field on Block 11/30 of the North Sea.

A production test from a middle Jurassic sand flowed at an average daily rate of 5,200 barrels of 39-gravity oil. The rig is being moved to drill an exploratory well near the southwest corner of the block.

Mesa owns 25 per cent interest in the well.

Yates sets Eddy tester

Yates Petroleum Corp., operating out of Artesia, has staked No. 4-AB Federal, one mile northeast of production in the Penasco (Morrow) area of Eddy County, N.M.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 30-18s-25e, 12 miles southwest of Artesia, 8,850.

More teen-agers leaving home to live on their own

By BETH ANN KRIER
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Nina, a 16-year-old, relinquished the comforts of her parents' home early last summer — after they disconnected her private telephone and pulled her bedroom door off its hinges. Child-girl, girl-woman, she took it in stride, knowing her mother and father forfeited any real control of her years ago.

As she recalls, sitting barefooted in the tiny guest house she shares with her 22-year-old fiance, "I was pretty wild by the time I was 14. My parents were scared of me. There was a lot of turmoil in my house. My mother was reaching menopause and having a nervous breakdown. My brother was freaking out on drugs and my dad was ignoring the whole thing. Before I met Don, I'd do whatever I wanted to; they didn't have any say in what I did."

Don, who has set the ground rules for Nina's interview and appears to regulate nearly everything else in her life, is lying on the bed, sipping tea and puffing marijuana when he's not watching the Bogart film on television or complaining about being out of champagne ("All my money goes on champagne"). He insists on two things: no last names mentioned and part of their story off the record. After all, he wants to marry this girl and would prefer to get along with his future in-laws.

There is still plenty to tell, for while Nina is hardly typical of teenagers today, she is representative of a small but growing adolescent trend. She is a high school student who has elected to live outside her parents' or a relative's home.

While no one seems to know how pervasive the phenomenon may be, observers report it is increasing. According to Robert Grymes of the U.S. Census Bureau's Marriage and Family Statistics division, the number of "primary individuals" (heads of households) 14 through 18 nearly doubled from 1970 to 1976. In 1970, the bureau counted 119,000 such independents in the United States; in 1976, it recorded 233,000. In 1970, females far outnumbered males who set up housekeeping outside their familial homes (75,000 to 44,000). By 1976, males slightly outnumbered females (129,000 to 104,000). And those statistics don't pick up the Ninas of the world, who defer to an older roommate.

As the Census Bureau's senior demographer Paul Glick interprets the numbers, the pattern is clear. "It seems that young adults tend to live away from home as soon as they can become self-maintaining," he says. "The age at which this happens is younger and younger.

"Times have changed. There are intergenerational changes. Parents don't always see eye to eye with their children. It's just a little bit easier in life not to have too much contact under these circumstances."

Brown University sociologist Frances Kobrin is studying the factors that determine the age children leave home and she is somewhat alarmed at the pattern she, too, is finding.

"In places like Australia, people leave home at the last minute, usually when they get married," she says. "Here we tend to leave home at the first minute, and we're leaving earlier and earlier. It means a shorter time for parents to be parents and children to be children. We spend much less time in families, at many points in our lives. I'm really concerned. We find it harder and harder to live with anybody for any period of time. We're fond of privacy but we're purchasing it at a very high price."

But for young people like Don and Nina, such an expense is almost negligible in the current cost-benefit analysis of their relationship. As Don describes their living arrangement, it is the best thing that ever happened to their relationship and the relationship is the best thing that ever happened to either of their lives.

They are both attractive, dark-haired, lean-bodied California sunshine kids. She likes having an older boyfriend; he enjoys having a younger girlfriend, somebody "who hasn't been brainwashed yet."

Last year, while Nina was a sophomore, they attempted to abide by the 1 a.m. curfew her parents established. But Don particularly found the restriction "a bit much — we'd fall asleep and stuff. It got too heavy having to bring her home at 1 o'clock. Her parents were furious one night because she slept out with me. Nina wouldn't go home. I went over there and talked to her father before she would go back. Then they caught me sleeping over at her house and yanked her phone and took off her bedroom door."

The guest house is essentially one small room (outfitted with a bed, desk, TV and stereo) with a bathroom, kitchenette and patio. For two people, it provides virtually no privacy.

"It's really hard to live with someone, especially in this place," Nina points out. "If I want to yell I have to go outside or in the bathroom. At home I used to yell a lot and break dishes when I got mad. My mother and I both like to yell and enjoy a good fight."

"There are brief times when you want to be alone, like taking a shower. I wouldn't mind taking one by myself," Don hints to Nina. "I'm with this girl 24 hours a day, except when she's at school (which for Nina is out at 12:30 P.M.). I've never been happier in my life. Neither has she. When she was living at home, she was failing and ditching school all the time. She ditched 30 times last semester. Now she's getting great grades and she doesn't miss a day of school or I'll kill her."

Nina says that skipping school is easy if you understand the system. As one who always had been enrolled in classes for precocious students, she says she simply used to tell her dean she couldn't handle going to school every day.

"I used to take about two days a week off. Now I'm into learning, though a lot of it is boring and bull. I want to take the high school proficiency exam and then go to college."

And if her relationship with Don collapses? What would she do if something happens to him, her total support system?

"We don't know how long this is going to last," he answers for her. "It's unrealistic to figure things won't change. It's all about steps and elevations."

Says Nina, "People don't give kids much respect today. Kids have an awful lot to offer society, but it's wasted because they're alienated. There hasn't been one day I wished I was back home. I guess sometimes I do want a little time to myself, but it all works out. If I broke up with Don I know I wouldn't go back home. I know I'll never live in peace with my parents. Right now this is just easier. The pressure is off. I miss the kitty cat, that's all."

If anything, Nina contends her relationship with her parents has improved since she moved out. Now she and Don visit them at their home once a week for dinner. "I've started trying to get along with them. When I lived at home, even when I tried to, it seemed like I could never do right by them," she says, "but it doesn't hurt you to have it hard. All those things at home. I learned from them."

David Duke, of the Unified School District said, "These kids (teenagers living on their own) often just melt right in with the other students and nobody makes a big deal about it. I think most school districts are aware of the situation. Runaways are different. But the kids who are supporting themselves and living separately from a parent or guardian are not enrolled any differently or treated differently because the courts haven't ruled on them yet — it's still a gray area legally. The key to the whole thing is if a kid is resourceful and can support himself and stay out of trouble, he won't be picked up for this."

In many cases, high school students don't even have to worry about supporting themselves or maintaining a separate residence — they simply exchange families or become functioning members of a friend's family without offering their own family in a swap.

Five years ago, when Judy Binder was in high school, she moved into a neighbor's home six blocks away and the neighbor's daughter moved in with the Binders.

"When a kid lives in their own home, they control the parents. Parents only have financial control" insists Judy's mother, Sara, who believes the trade may have proved beneficial for everyone concerned.

"She wasn't getting along at home. Those years were very different. They were the drug years, there were racial problems and hippies in the schools. In those days, we were very frightened. Our kids were smoking dope and we were afraid they'd be shooting heroin. In those days I always thought the worst.

"I remember going over to see Judy one day at the neighbor's and the kids were in the backyard naked doing body painting. I said, 'My God, how could you?' They were very relaxed and nonchalant but it was very upsetting to me. I also couldn't understand about them sleeping 10 boys and 10 girls in the same room. But when I asked my daughter about it, she said, 'It's not what you think, Mom. Sex is still one on one.' I see now that the mixups were in my sexual hangups. The kids wanted to try everything but they weren't mixed up."

Mrs. Binder notices that now many of the teenagers are returning to live with their families, having tried independence and found it wanting.

"Half of them can't get jobs or won't work for less than $7 an hour so they're going home," she says. "They couldn't make it financially. They were too used to the cars, the housekeepers, all the comforts of upper-middle-class living."

Energy conservation aim of Iowa project

By WILLIAM L. EBERLINE

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Some 800 Iowa cities will have their pictures taken from the air this winter to determine which homeowners are trying to heat the whole outdoors.

The project, dubbed "Operation Sky Scan," is being sponsored by the state's investorowned electric and gas utilities as part of an energy conservation campaign.

"This is the first program of its kind ever undertaken on a statewide basis," said John M. Lewis, president of the Iowa Utility Association.

"We hope to get started within a matter of weeks."

The utility firms have contracted with Texas Instruments, Inc., of Dallas to shoot infrared aerial pictures of communities they serve.

Where an ordinary camera produces pictures of light reflecting from the surface of the photo subject, an infrared camera reacts to heat radiation.

When infrared photos of a city are taken from the air at night, buildings show up in varying shades of gray — pale gray if the building is giving off a lot of heat, darker gray if less heat is being lost.

Lewis said that makes infrared photography of cities one of the best and lowest cost ways of spotting insufficiently insulated buildings.

Many private consultants around the country are using the technique, called thermography, to help consumers and business executives learn where tneir insulation is insufficient. The cost ranges from $)5 to $100, depending on the extent of the inspection and report.

In addition, individual utilities in other states are running thermography programs.

Lewis estimates that the program will cost the Iowa utilities about $460,000 to scan 800 Iowa communities.

"The photos will become the property of the the utility serving each community," Lewis said. "Each utility company will arrange for any interested homeowner to see how much heat is being lost from his home.

"The home owner may want to put in more insulation to cut down on heat loss and reduce his utility bills.

"There's nothing compulsory about it, but we think enough homeowners will want to do something about it to achieve a significant saving in energy. The saving is year round, of course, because better insulation means less energy is needed to cool the house in the summer as well as heat it in winter."

The weatherman has to cooperate before a sky scan can be done, Lewis said. The temperature has to be under 35 degrees, the sky clear and roofs free of snow for the scanner to work.

South ruffed the third heart and led out all of his trumps, discarding two clubs from dummy. He planned to take the top clubs and then give East a heart trick. East would be forced to lead diamonds up to dummy's ace-queen.

East could see what was coming and could tell that it would work. His best chance was to make South fear a danger that wasn't there. So East discarded the nine and then the jack of diamonds.

Sure enough, South feared that East had blanked his king of diamonds. If so, the end play wouldn't work.

Talking himself into believing his fear, South led out dummy's ace of diamonds. The king didn't drop, and South was down one.

TWO FLAWS

There were two flaws in South's reasoning: East might not hace the right cards to escape the end play, and secondly even if East had the right cards he still had to nerve himself to blank the king of diamonds.

Don't assume your opponent is a cross between Machiavelli and Houdini. The odds are that he is only trying to look tough.

West Germany weathering worst

By MICHAEL GETLER
The Washington Post

BONN — West Germany has successfully weathered a national ordeal that its President Walter Scheel called "the worst" crisis of the postwar Federal Republic. But its consequences have stirred deep anxieties among the West Germans and fears of possible future trouble.

Three weeks after a bewildering series of events — including terrorist murders, an airline hijacking, a daring rescue of the hijacked hostages by elite West German commandos and three bizarre prison suicides — many things, at least outwardly, seem to be getting back to normal here.

Most West Germans, despite the highs and lows of anger and price that swept through this country as events unfolded, have taken things in stride. Above all, Bonn's political leadership has shown remarkable stability and even unity throughout the ordeal.

Yet underneath this, the German angst, that stomach-churning mixture of fear and anxiety, still stirs.

The immediate "anxiety and fear among many of us," says West Berlin legislator Peter Glotz, "is when and where the next terrorist event will be. Maybe not tomorrow but in three or four weeks it will come."

But there are longer-range concerns about the stability of West German democracy and the possibility of a McCarthy-type witchhunts against liberal political figures such as Willy Brandt who could be perceived as having been "too soft" on terrorism.

Simultaneously, there are concerns about a segment of West Germany's university students who are becoming increasingly radicalized and isolated and perhaps driven further into isolation by recent events.

Despite the biggest manhunt in postwar West Garman history for the 16 most-wanted terrorists, the killers of chief federal prosecutor Siegfried Buback in April, banker Juergen Ponto in July and industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer in October are still at large.

In Bonn, a worried travel agent watches as many people cancel hotel bookings in France and Italy. They are afraid to drive cars with West German license plates into neighboring countries where terrorist sympathizers of the German Red Army Faction have threatened thousands of reprisals for the death in prison last month of three former leaders of the Baader-Meinhof gang, the forerunner of the Red Army group.

People who had switched to air travel are now also switching their Lufthansa tickets to other airlines because they also are taking seriously new terrorist threats to blow up three Lufthansa jets in the air after Nov. 15 in reprisal for those prison deaths.

The terrorists and their radical student supporters call those deaths "assassinations" by the state. But an internationally supervised autopsy has officially confirmed them as suicides — presumably made to look like murder — carried out just hours after the successful West German commando raid on the hijacked jetliner in Somalia foiled a bid to blackmail Bonn into release of the jailed terrorists.

Glotz, who oversees some 72,000 high school and university students in West Berlin and is a respected voice on education affairs nationally, sees a potentially dangerous subculture developing among perhaps 15 to 20 per cent of West Germany's nearly 1 million university students.

"That's nearly 200,000 people," Glotz said in an interview, "who are very critical of the state, who are willing to believe that Germany is developing as a fascist state. Though they are not terrorists, they don't believe the government explanations. They think it was murder in the Stammheim prison. Many of them don't read the newspapers. They don't have much connection to society. They only talk among themselves and get their information through this subculture.

"Many people don't think it is serious, but it is. German politicians need to go into these universities and talk to these students, but they don't do it," he says.

In effect what Glotz is saying is that while West German society today still does not really feel threatened by a small, though deadly band of extreme left-wing anarchists, the problem could be much worse years from now.

Beyond these concerns lie still other puzzling questions. Why does this prosperous and democratic country produce such a brutal and clever breed of terrorist? How, over the long run, will West Germany respond without endangering its democratic system?

Revulsion against the murderous acts of the Red Army Faction is virtually total throughout West German society. Whatever ideological underpinnings the Baader-Meinhof gang might once have had during the Vietnam War, have long since disappeared into what most observers equate as clear anarchism aimed at overthrowing West Germany's political system without any idea of what is to replace it.

Unlike some other revolutionary movements, there is no worker support at all. "They are just bums, spoiled little rich kids that went to university and learned nothing. They ought to be shot," said one auto mechanic near Wiesbaden.

The Red Army tactics have been deplored by former student radical leaders of a decade ago such as Rudi Dutschke and Daniel Cohn-Bendit, by liberal authors such as Nobel Prize winner Heinrich Boell, and by all of West Germany's small but still radical Communist parties, completing what seems to be total ideological isolation of the terrorists.

Moreover, the skillful handling of the Schleyer kidnapping and hijacking episode by the left-center coalition government of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has strengthened the middle ground of German poiltics.

Nevertheless, the aftermath of those episodes has also tilted German public opinion more toward the conservative side on certain issues as evidenced by the popular support for adoption of the death penalty here, which the government opposes.

It has also brought demands from conservative politicians for even stronger new laws, such as one for monitoring conversations between jailed terrorists and their lawyers, also opposed by the government.

Most importantly, however, rightist poilticians here, supported by elements of the conservative press, have also been pointing their finger at Boell and other intellectuals and even at ex-Chancellor Brandt as examples of persons whose alleged naive acceptance of radicalism in universities and soft stance against terrorist sympathizers has led to West Germany's present troubles.

This has produced concerns of a "witch hunt" that could go beyond the issue of terrorism into a wider anti-intellectual attitude and repression, and a labeling of those who criticize the materialistic aspect of West German society as sympathizers and subversives.

Both Schmidt and especially Scheel have repeatedly and forcefully spoken out against this, warning that criticism was vital to democracy and to the preservation of civil liberties. And, there is no real evidence at this point that a witch-hunt will materialize and gain popular support.

Ironcially, the right-wing assault might have been stronger and more successful except for the fact that the supposedly maximum security jail where the prisoners died — and into which guns, explosives and several other items were smuggled — is in a state under the control of the conservative opposition Christian Democrats.

Prof. Karl-Dietrich Bracher of Bonn University says he sees no real movement away from the broad consensus of West Germany's recent politics.

College texts may aid sleep

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Dear Doctor: I am a junior in college and it is important that I get proper sleep but I don't sleep well. I think the reason is that when I do go to sleep I have bad dreams. Is there a reason that my dreams, for the most part, are bad? — Chuck, Tampa, Fla.

Dear Chuck: Dreams are the unconscious talking to you. Problems that you are facing in school are surfacing when you sleep. Men usually have more bad dreams than women because they have been "taught" by our society to keep their emotions hidden. Good sleep inducers include a warm shower or bath and a glass of warm milk before retiring.

Reading, especially if the book is boring, also works. Since you're in college, I'm sure you won't have any problems finding one.

Dear Doctor: Please, I need advice and I need it soon. My father was an alcoholic and because of this, my mother started having an affair with another man. Mom said she needed company. Two months ago mom left home, and after she did, dad stopped drinking and started becoming a good father. Everything was good at home and we didn't miss mother one bit. Recently, dad has started to drink again. I called mom, who is living with another man, and she said to come live with her. I don't want to go because I love my dad more. Please tell me what to do. I'm 12 years old. — Christina, Rock Island, Ill.

Dear Christina: Go with your mother. Maybe the shock of your absence will sober up your father.

When you find him in a sober condition, call him and tell him you love him but that under the circumstances you cannot live with him. Hopefully, he will take responsibility for his life.

Dear Doctor: My brother was the captain of his basketball team, is good looking and gets good grades in school. He appears to be the "all-American" type except for one major problem. He has recently taken up drinking. I know he rips off daddy's liquor, and he even drinks by himself in his bedroom.

I will never tell my parents what's happening, so please don't suggest that. I want to help my brother but first I would like to know why teens feel a need to drink. — Belle, San Mateo, Calif.

Dear Belle: As you know, it is sometimes difficult to be a teen.

Coping with these difficulties drives some teens to alcohol. Those who drink are trying to escape the realities of life, mainly to forget loneliness or depression, the feeling of not being part of the group or of being inadequate. Other teens drink to prove to their peers that they are adults.

Your brother needs guidance, soon!

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Stronger cigarette warnings proposed

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do you think the warning on packs of cigarettes is strong enough? I don't find it is enough to stop anyone in my family from smoking and if cigarettes are really dangerous, I think that should be made clear.—Eleanor T.

Dear Eleanor: I agree with you, and as a matter of fact, the Federal Trade Commission has proposed putting a stronger warning on cigarettes. The FTC wants Congress to consider two possible statements. One would be, "Warning: Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous To Health And May Cause Death From Cancer, Bronchitis, Pulmonary Emphysema, And Other Diseases." As an alternative, the FTC suggests, "Warning: Cigaretter Smoking Is A Major Health Hazard And May Result In Your Death."

These warnings simply state plain medical facts. Either would certainly be an improvement upon the present, much vaguer statement.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been going back and forth to the hospital every day for the past few weeks because a relative of mine has been quite ill. I have found myself thinking a great deal about what can be done to help cheer patients up—and speed up recovery in the bargain. Wouldn't music make a big difference? I don't mean the canned stuff you get forced on you in elevators. I mean really good music. I brought in a little transistor radio for my aunt, but she was too weak to fool around with the dials to get a decent station or turn it off when the commercials came on. I do think she would have enjoyed and been buoyed up by something pleasant, though.—Yolanda B.

Dear Yolanda: You might be interested to know that music is being tried out as a regular therapeutic tool for teen-age patients at Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo. Dr. H. James Allace, who is head of the Cancer Control's Adolescent Program, says that music therapy has been used successfully to ease emotional problems and aid recovery. It is really a pilot project of the American Cancer Society's National Rehabilitation Committee, and if it works well at Roswell Park it could become standard practive for cancer patients in hospitals elsewhere in the United States.

Music therapy started off right after World War II, when veterans with emotional problems were entertained by musician at Veterans' Administration Hospitals. It was found that music—a non-verbal form of communication—soothed the patient and relaxed tensions and anxieties.

Mrs. Kay Johnson, a former mastectomy patient, is running the pilot project. She overcame her post-operation depression by listening to folk music records and accompanying the singers on her guitar. She says it is a very good way of restoring self-confidence.

Suit cites discharge

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal court suit filed by the Environmental Protection Agency against Velsicol Chemical Corp. alleges the firm was violating an order to eliminate discharge of a nerve-attacking pesticide in storm water runoff.

Velsicol's Bayport plant manufactured Phosvel, which federal officials say may have caused nerve damage to at least 10 plant workers, before production was halted early in 1976.

Begin welcomes Sadat's offer to visit Israel

The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin Thursday took Egypt's President Anwar Sadat up on his offer to come to Jerusalem.

Begin asked a delegation of visiting U.S. congressmen to take a message to Cairo saying that if Sadat indeed decided to come to Israel he would personally meet him at the airport.

"We shall receive him with all honor due a president," Begin said.

Sadat announced on Wednesday his readiness to come to Jerusalem to address the Knesset, Israel's parliament, on the issues of Middle East peace.

Begin's reply — not without its humorous references — was passed on to a delegation of the House Armed Forces Committee, which he met at his office here Thursday. The 17 members, headed by committee Chairman Melvin Price, D-Ill., are to leave for Cairo Friday as part of a Middle East-Africa tour.

"I welcome his statement," Begin said of Sadat's offer. "If he decides to come to Jerusalem — and I would like to have some notice in advance on the date — we shall receive him with all honor due a President.

"I will go out myself to the airport to see him and shall bring him to Jerusalem, and I shall be very happy and we will be happy to start talks on bringing peace to the Middle East." Earlier, Begin had reiterated his previous statements that he was also willing to go to Cairo in the interests of peace.

"I only hope," Begin told the congressmen, "if I come to Cairo he would receive me hospitably. If he gives me a chance to have a glimpse of the pyramids — which our forefathers helped to construct and for which we don't ask any compensation — I shall be very grateful. And let us start talking peace. That is my message."

Begin categorically rejected the demand that Sadat said he would make at any Geneva peace conference — Israeli withdrawal to the 1967 borders and establishment of a Palestinian state.

But Israeli officials noted that the main trust of Sadat's latest pronouncements on peace was a "go-anywhere" willingness to get Geneva started. Israelis viewed this as a bright side to the speech and said it might signal an Egyptian move to convince other Arab countries to give up bickering over procedural matters.

Sadat told his parliament Wednesday in Cairo that "procedural questions do not interest me at all. I am going to Geneva."

The United States and Israel agreed last month on a working paper establishing the procedures for getting a Geneva conference under way. The Arab nations have not agreed on a common plan for procedures, but most have found fault with the U.S.-Israeli working paper.

Both Sadat and Begin agreed that matters such as the Sadat demands could be discussed after — and not before — Geneva convened. Sadat said: "Once I am there, there is no power on earth that can stop me from demanding total Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands and recovery of Palestinian rights, including their right to set up an independent state."

Begin, declaring that these terms "would constitute a danger to the very existence of the state of Israel," added: "However, President Sadat could put forward this position at the Geneva conference, just as we shall put forward our own stand at the conference. Let no party turn its own stand into a prior condition for participating in a peace conference."

Sadat hinted that Israel would have to negotiate with "the legitimate representatives" of the Palestinians, and, if this means the Palestinian Liberation Organization, Israel would flatly refuse, an official here said.

Border quiets; tensions still exist

By JOE ALEX MORRIS JR.
The Los Angeles Times

BEIRUT — For the first time in three days, Lebanon's border region with Israel was reported quiet Thursday as the Jewish state apparently responded to American pressure not to further destabilize the situation there.

The biggest Israeli air raids in two years wiped out a Lebanese refugee village and damaged two Palestinian refugee camps Wednesday, killing perhaps 60 people, said mainly to be civilians. The Israelis said the raids were in retaliation for rocket attacks on the coastal town of Nahariya in recent days in which three Israelis were killed.

Israel claimed its aircraft hit only Palestinian guerrilla bases but hardest hit was a shack village called Azziyah built by Lebanese farmers who had fled the constant shelling and military action farther South.

Palestinians claimed that upwards of 50 of the villages 400 inhabitants had been killed, but there was no independent confirmation of this. The Israeli aircraft were apparently trying to hit a nearby Palestinian guerrilla camp.

The Lebanese government sought to play down the Israeli raid, in the hopes that it could prevent a resurgence of communal passions here which are only thinly buried under a military occupation by the predominantly Syrian peace-keeping force. But it did not work.

Militant Christian leaders, whose forces in the south have been openly supported by Israel, blamed the Palestinians for the Israeli raid, saying it would not have happened had the Palestinians withdrawn their forces in the south as they agreed to do last August. "They deliberately tried to provoke an Israeli attack," charged Sheik Pierre Gemayel, head of the Christian Falange.

Former President Camille Chamoun warned there would be "greater tragedies ahead" if the Palestinians did not pull out.

Implementation of the pullout has been stalled by frequent clashes between Christian and Palestinian forces, with Israeli artillery supporting the Christians. Now the Palestinians have reneged on the agreement and say they will pull out only when Christian forces evacuate the area.

The key to the whole operation, which would have created a buffer zone along the border between Palestinian guerrillas and Israel, was the re-entry into the region of the rejuvenated Lebanese army. But the flareups of action have delayed this and now chances of it happening appear slimmer than ever.

Significantly, a pro-Syrian newspaper sharply attacked the Palestinian forces in the south for provoking the Israeli action. "The one who fired from the south knew in advance that he was firing so that the fire would be returned," the newspaper Al Shark said.

This was a reference to the Palestinians who fired rockets at the Israeli village.

The hostile reaction here put the Palestinians on the defensive. Abu Iyyad, the No. 2 man in Fatah, the biggest guerrilla organization, agreed with Chamoun that more trouble lies ahead.

"But a reply to a rocket cannot justify the massacre," he added.

Palestinian casualties were variously given as two, three or six dead fighters.

Israeli justifications for the raid were received with a certain wry bitterness here, particularly remarks by Israeli Chief of Staff Gen. Mordechai Gur who claimed the Syrians should have prevented the rocket attacks on the Israeli town.

Water law changes deflate some

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists say new changes in federal clean water laws will slow the pace of cleaning up the nation's waterways.

Larry Silverman of the Clean Water Action project said the revisions, approved Thursday by a House-Senate conference committee, mark a step backward in pollution control.

A spokesman for another environmental group called the proposals "a disappointment."

But industry spokesmen said the committee's agreement represented "a reasonable compromise" between environmental and economic concerns.

The changes are included in a bill authorizing the expenditure of $24.5 billion through 1982, mostly on federal grants for local sewage treatment plants.

In its compromise, the committee agreed to extend by a year deadlines the industry must meet to install improved water pollution equipment and said less efficient equipment would be acceptable.

The conferees also eased requirements designed to preserve the nation's environmentally delicate wetlands.

Their agreements still must be accepted by Congress.

Environmentalists, industry lobbyists and federal officials agreed that about 85 percent of industrial pollutants have been removed from rivers, lakes and streams since passage of the 1972 Clean Water Act.

But the remaining pollutants are the roughest and most expensive to eliminate, and it has taken Congress two years to agree how to complete the job.

The conferees decided to give industrial polluters until July 1, 1984, to install the necessary anti-pollution gear. The previous deadline was July 1, 1983.

In addition, the conference committee said the Environmental Protection Agency may permit some polluters to use less efficient and less expensive anti-pollution gear if the cost of the best gear outweighs the benefits to be gained.

Industrial lobbyists had said the present law, requiring purchase of the best equipment available, would be needlessly expensive. But environmentalists complain the new provision will allow some industries to avoid cleanup measures.

Another critical issue which kept the conference committee meeting for almost two months is the protection of wetlands, which provide spawning grounds for dozens of species of fish and other wildlife.

The conference committee lifted a requirement that the Army Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation meet stringent requirements before beginning to dredge or fill wetlands.

The conferees replaced that with a requirement that environmental impact statements be prepared for each project before congressional approval is given.

In another revision, the conferees extended from 12 miles to 200 miles offshore the area in which the government can recover costs of spills by oil tankers. Each tanker would be liable for up to $500,000 in damages.

Amtrack may reduce its service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Financially troubled Amtrak says it might have to shut down its entire system next summer unless it can cancel train services costing more than $60 million to operate.

In a letter sent to all senators and representatives Thursday, Amtrak listed several trains being considered for cancellation. The routes extend into every geographical region of the nation and many congressmen are expected to protest the projected loss of services in their areas.

An Amtrak spokesman denied the letter was intended as an attempt to squeeze more money out of Congress. He said House and Senate conferees last week had written the bottom line on how much money the corporation will receive in fiscal year 1978.

The national rail passenger corporation said that as a starter it is recommending that its board of directors discontinue the Floridian between Chicago and Florida.

The corporation earlier had asked Congress for $56.5 million in supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year. While awaiting congressional action, Amtrak announced plans to cancel several trains, including 22 of the 120 operated daily in the busy northeast corridor serving Washington, Philadelphia, New York and Boston.

The conferees agreed on giving Amtrak only an extra $8 million and instructed the corporation to call off the planned cancellations, most of which were to have gone into effect last Sunday. They also directed Amtrak to operate within its new total budget of $496.5 million.

Amtrak said in its letter that its alternative was to speed up a process already underway of identifying entire routes to be abandoned or restructured.

To accelerate the process, estimated to take about six months, Amtrak said the examinations would be done without public hearings.

Andrews Junior Chamber of Commerce a reality

ANDREWS — After several weeks of organizational efforts the Andrews Junior Chamber of Commerce has become a reality.

The group was organized with the assistance of the Midland Jaycees under an extension program.

Man says $900 ring stolen

A $900 ring belonging to Roy Fields of the 3800 block of West Storey Avenue was taken from the Colonial Food Store at 2110 W. Front Ave. about 9:30 p.m. Thursday, it was reported to police.

Fields, an employee of the store, told police he took the ring off in the bathroom to wash his hands, then went back to wait on some customers.

Fields later remembered he left the ring in the bathroom, he told police. He returned to the bathroom to find the ring gone, police were told.

Carter makes rabbit meat No. 2

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says a government rabbit meat inspection program he vetoed would have served only a small number of Americans.

But the rabbit meat industry takes the matter more seriously, saying consumers will be harmed in the end.

Carter, in a 400-word veto message Thursday, called the measure "a special interest bill." He said its passage could even strain U.S. relations with China since the Chinese export rabbit meat to the United States.

The industry already has available a voluntary inspection program for which it must pay, and Carter indicated the taxpayer should not be required to assume the bill — $52,000 the first year, increasing eventually to $400,000.

The rabbit meat industry reports sales of more than $10 million a year, and producers say demand is growing.

One producer feels that rabbit meat might one day be as popular as chicken, saying the industry is at the same stage of progress as the poultry industry was 70 years ago.

"This was a consumer's piece of legislation, and they're the ones who will suffer," said Paul Dubbell, president of Pel-Freeze Inc. of Rogers, Ark. The company processes about one-third of the 6 million pounds of rabbit meat produced each year in the country.

But Carter, who last week cast his first veto in rejecting an $80 million authorization bill for the Clinch River nuclear breeder reactor in Tennessee, noted that rabbit meat is still a speciality item sought by only a small percentage of Americans.

The legislation, he said, "is a prime example of ... a special interest bill which, if signed, would open the way for more mandatory regulations and increased costs."

Moreover, he said neither the Agriculture Department nor the Food and Drug Administration "has been able to substantiate a significant health problem with rabbit meat in this country."

Carter's predecessor, Gerald R. Ford, also vetoed the inspection program.

NEW YORK has nothing on the fashion world, at least as far as Chicago is concerned. In Thursday's Chicago opening of a seven-city United States tour, this member of the Incredible Dancing Bears troupe of the Moscow Circus, treated the audience to a fashion show. The style here is the inverted "V" look. (AP Laserphoto)
