North admits he ran secret Contra resupply operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North took the stand as the leadoff witness at Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter today and grudgingly admitted that he ran a secret resupply operation to the Contras.

North, testifying as a "hostile witness" for the prosecution, initially denied that he controlled the Contra resupply operation, in which retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord played a key role.

"To say that Secord worked under my direction would say a major general is working for a lieutenant colonel and I don't think that's accurate," North testified.

Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb then handed North a copy of testimony he gave at his own trial last year in which North was asked who gave Secord his orders.

"I suppose I did," North replied at the time.

Asked again by Webb whether he had run the operation, North replied:

"I gave him a lot of requests and if you want to call it direction and guidance I guess that's what we're stuck with."

Prosecutors called North to the stand to butress their contention that he worked with Poindexter to cover up the Iran-Contra affair. Poindexter is charged with conspiracy, two counts of obstructing Congress and two counts of making false statements to cover up North's military assistance and fund-raising for the Contras and U.S. knowledge of a 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles from Israel to Iran.

On Thursday, Poindexter's lawyer said the former national security adviser may be guilty of bad memory but did not deliberately lie to Congress about secret arms shipments to Iran.

In his testimony today, North disagreed with Webb when the prosecutor called the Contra resupply operation "the enterprise."

"I don't think it was ever called the enterprise," said North. "We came to call it Project Democracy."

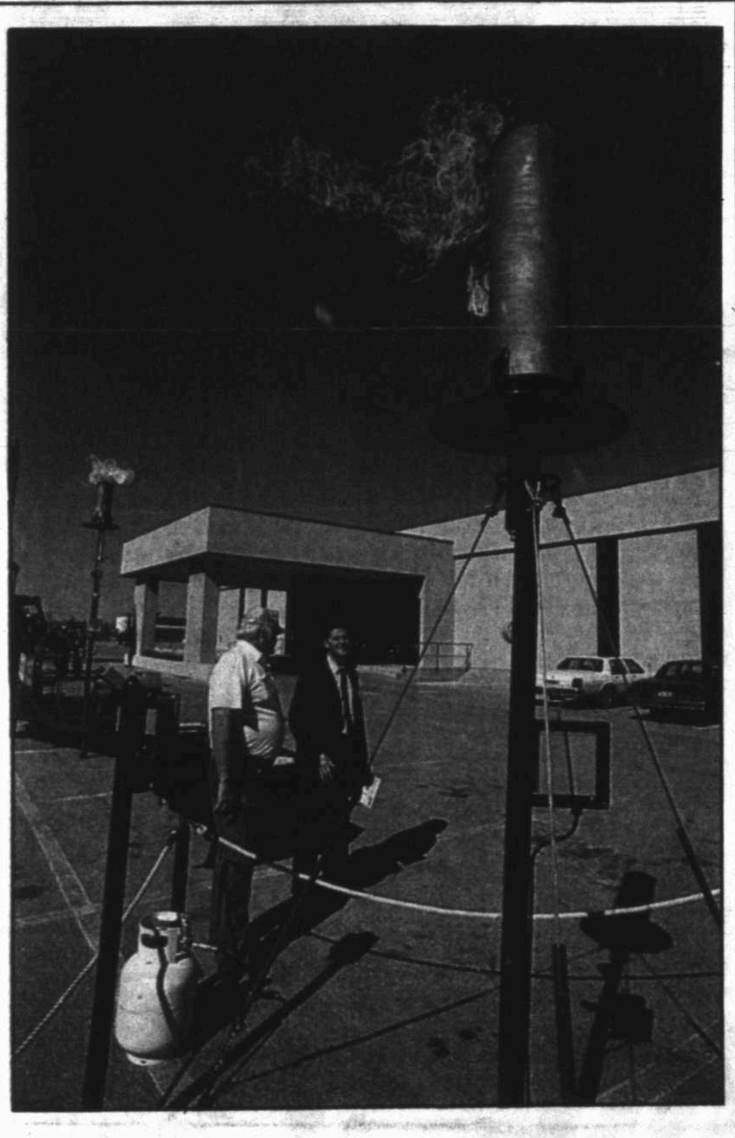

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene at one point referred to North as "a hostile witness" and gave Webb permission to ask leading questions of the former White House aide.

Quoting from North's earlier testimony at his trial, Webb asked if "the ball" had been passed to North in terms of taking care of the Contras' needs after Congress prohibited the CIA from providing it.

"I don't recall those specific words," North said, but later conceding he had said "words to that effect."

North's role as overseer of the Contras' needs beginning in late 1984 took place while Poindexter was the deputy to Robert McFarlane, who was national security adviser at the time.

Debate's main theme Richards' refusing to answer drug issue

DALLAS (AP) — The final Democratic gubernatorial debate before the March 13 primary was not the blood bath many political observers had predicted it would be.

But once again, the dominant theme for Thursday's debate was the fact that the front runner, Ann Richards, still refuses to answer "yes or no" to the question of whether she's ever used illegal drugs.

One of her chief opponents, Attorney General Jim Mattox, says Ms. Richards has already taken herself out of the race by failing to answer the question.

"I think Miss Richards has disqualified herself from consideration as the Democratic nominee," Mattox said after Thursday's debate. "Not because of what she has or has not done but because of her lack of candor on the issue.

"You see, I think the Republicans will exploit her and the Democratic Party if she were to be the Democratic nominee. But I don't think she'll be the nominee so I don't think we'll any to worry about it."

Ms. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, said Mattox and former governor Mark White have to attack her character because they can't criticize the work she's done as State Treasurer.

"I think that these guys are really stretching and reaching because they cannot fault my performance," Ms. Richards said.

"In this particular dialogue for the gubernatorial race, the question has come up about exactly what I did and when I did it and my response has been that my message to the people out there, that I want you to get help and you can put your past behind you," she said.

But Ms. Richards has not stood by idly. She recently launched a more aggressive television campaign directed at White and Mattox.

White and Mattox said they don't like the ads, which question the integrity of both politicians. In one ad, White is accused of helping his Houston law firm make money through his political connections while he was still in the governor's mansion.

"I was sickened this week by a couple of slurs that were made," White said. "But I feel we've answered them fully."

The drug issue took another turn Thursday, when all but one of the seven candidates said they would submit to a drug test before the Tuesday primary if asked.

Ms. Richards also said she would be happy to take a drug test before the primary but maintained that she is the only Democrat capable of defeating Republican front runner Clayton Williams.

"I think the important thing is the polls have consistently shown that I'm the only candidate in this primary who can defeat any of the Republicans that are running," Ms. Richards said.

But Mattox said he, too, can beat Williams. In fact, Mattox felt confi-

National media pursuing Williams' campaign trail

AUSTIN (AP) — When you're hot, you're hot.

With network television crews now following his campaign, Clayton Williams has suddenly found himself receiving national exposure and answering questions about subjects far removed from such state issues as budgets and taxes.

"This hero worship of John Wayne. Why John Wayne?" one out-of-state reporter asked Williams on Thursday.

The candidate beamed.

"Why John Wayne is John Wayne," he replied. "John Wayne was a dream of what we all wished we were rather than what any of us mortals are ... the good guy who whipped the bad guy, who was on the side of right, law and order."

With even his opponents' private polls now reportedly showing him near or above the 50 percent support needed to avoid an April runoff, the colorful Midlander is basking in his momentum as the campaign rolls toward Tuesday's primary.

"As a Republican, it would be much better for our party if I were able to make it without a runoff," Williams said.

"We are asking all our supporters to please walk that extra

Reagan calls boy who was set afire for 'saying no'

Aupont

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Reagan was one of more than 100 callers offering birthday wishes to a critically injured boy who was beaten, bound and set aflame after refusing a neighborhood bully's order to take drugs.

David Aupont spent his 12th birthday Thursday fighting for his life, with doctors giving him a 50-50 chance of survival following the vicious attack in an abandoned building.

The 13-year-old charged with Wednesday's attack was described as a foster child with learning disabilities who dropped out of the sixth grade, and whose vicious behavior grew out of his own torment

Brothers linked to millionaire parents' deaths

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — A Hollywood executive and his wife were gunned down by two sons who stood to inherit more than $10 million, police alleged in announcing one son's arrest and an international hunt for the other.

In an eerie twist, the one still at large had co-written a screenplay — which his mother helped type — about a son who kills his rich parents.

Lyle Menendez, 22, was arrested Thursday and charged with his 19-year-old brother Erik with the shotgun slaying of his father, Jose Menendez, and mother, Mary Louis "Kitty" Menendez.

The couple were slain in August while watching television in their Beverly Hills mansion.

"I've been in this business 33 years and I've heard of few killings as savage as this one," said Police Chief Marvin D. Iannone said.

Police were seeking help from the State Department and Interpol to detain Erik Menendez, believed to be in Israel playing in a tennis tournament.

Jose Menendez, a 45-year-old Cuban immigrant, was chairman of Live Entertainment Inc., a video and music distribution business affiliated with Carolco Pictures Inc., producers of the "Rambo" movies.

Investigators dismissed earlier speculation that organized crime was behind the slayings because of alleged business links to Menendez' company.

Iannone said the investigation uncovered physical evidence that linked the sons to the killings. The probe also focused on a vanished computer record concerning Menendez' will.

Menendez and his wife were killed by shotgun blasts at close range as they watched television in their library one evening. Their sons re-

Supreme Court's Phillips not taking election for granted

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of articles examining races in the March 13 primary election.

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas judicial elections are settling back into relative obscurity after a high profile in 1988, when a furor over judicial ethics and big court judgments helped elect three Republicans to the state's highest civil appeals court.

The 1988 judicial elections were marked by controversy over a "60 Minutes" program that focused on contributions to Texas judicial candidates from lawyers with cases before the courts. Tom Phillips, appointed interim chief justice, led the ticket as Republicans elected their first three justices since Reconstruction.

This year Phillips is up for re-election to a full term, along with two other seats that are open on the court. The Court of Criminal Appeals, the highest court for criminal cases, also features races for four seats.

In Supreme Court races, Phillips faces Daniel Rutherford, a little-known San Antonio lawyer, in the Republican primary.

Phillips is not taking his primary election for granted, but he knows the big fight is in November, when the Republican nominee will face Justice Oscar Mauzy, a Democrat and a former state senator from Dallas, who is unopposed in the Democratic primary.

ELECTION '90

Mauzy, who was elected to the court in 1986 and has two years left on his term, said judicial selection is the main issue in the race, since he supports election of judges from single-member districts, while Phillips has supported appointment-based systems.

Phillips said he has not settled on a judicial selection plan, but he dismissed it is a non-issue in the court race, since the Legislature and not state courts will decide how judges will be selected. Instead, he said, the fundamental issue is judicial restraint, which should prevent judges from pursuing an agenda, he said. "Judges should be judges and not legislators in robes."

Phillips was the top votegetter in the State Bar of Texas poll of lawyers' preferences in the judicial elections, as the chief justice got 11,742 votes to 478 for Rutherford. Mauzy got 4,085 votes.

For Supreme Court Place 1, Justice Franklin Spears is not seeking re-election, opening that seat to races with two Democrats and two Republicans.

In the Democratic primary, Justice Fred Biery of the 4th Court of Appeals in San Antonio faces Gene Kelly, a San Antonio lawyer with a background in military law.

Republicans will choose from District Judge John Cornyn of San Antonio and George Barbary, a Dallas lawyer who lost in a 1988 race for the court.

In the bar poll, Biery edged Cornyn, 5,373 to 4,727, with their primary opponents trailing far behind.

For Supreme Court Place 2, Justice C.L. Ray is stepping down after a public reprimand from the Commission on Judicial Conduct, which has drawn three Democrats and two Republicans seeking to replace him.

The Democrats feature 3rd Court of Appeals Justice Bob Gammage of Austin, a former state representative, state senator and congresssman who has been an appeals court judge since 1982; Scrappy Holmes, a Kilgore lawyer; and 14th Court of Ap-

Senate budget chairman proposes plan to cut $80 billion out of defense budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Slicing $15 billion out of next year's defense budget would leave a strong U.S. military capable of confronting the rapidly dwindling Soviet threat, the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee says.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., called for the reductions Thursday as part of a plan to pare Pentagon spending by $80 billion annually within five years. It was the latest Democratic assault on President Bush's proposal to spend $303 billion for defense in fiscal 1991, $7 billion more than this year.

With easing East-West tensions, military spending — about one-quarter of Bush's proposed $1.24 trillion budget — has become a focus of debate in Congress this year.

Most Democrats, and some Republicans, want to cut deeper into Pentagon spending and use the money to help reduce the deficit, fortify social programs or reduce taxes.

Sasser embraced a plan that would cut defense spending next year to $291 billion, $5 billion below this year's level. The chairman's proposal would be $15 billion below the figure needed to keep pace with inflation, which in the unusual world of budget arithmetic translates to a $15 billion cut.

Under the proposal, the current active-duty roster of 2.1 military men and women would ultimately be reduced to 1.5 million.

Sasser's embrace of the cuts ran into objections from the budget committee's ranking Republican, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico. Domenici said there is too much uncertainty over the Soviet Union's future to begin making deep defense cuts.

"I don't know what that means in reference to the 11,000 nuclear warheads aimed at the United States" by the Soviet Union, Domenici said.

Pro-investment policy hurts middle class, study shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax policy aimed at encouraging investment by rich individuals and corporations is raising the federal deficit and boosting the tax burden on lower-income Americans, says a study financed by labor and endorsed by Democratic leaders.

If pre-1978 fairness were restored to the income tax, nine of every 10 Americans would pay less and the government would collect an additional $67.5 billion a year, Citizens for Tax Justice reported Thursday. That would be enough to wipe out the budget deficit in two years or less.

"The real after-tax income of the richest 1 percent of the population (averaging $400,000 a year) jumped by a staggering 110 percent" since 1977, said the a labor-financed Washington research organization. During the same period, the after-tax earnings of a $34,000-a-year family grew by 1 percent.

"We have had a massive ripoff ... and the middle class is stuck with the bill," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., said in endorsing the findings.

"The arrows of fairness are pointed in the wrong direction," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

Nevertheless, Gephardt told reporters, Democratic leaders are not ready to endorse the study's call for tax increases on profitable corporations and high-income individuals.

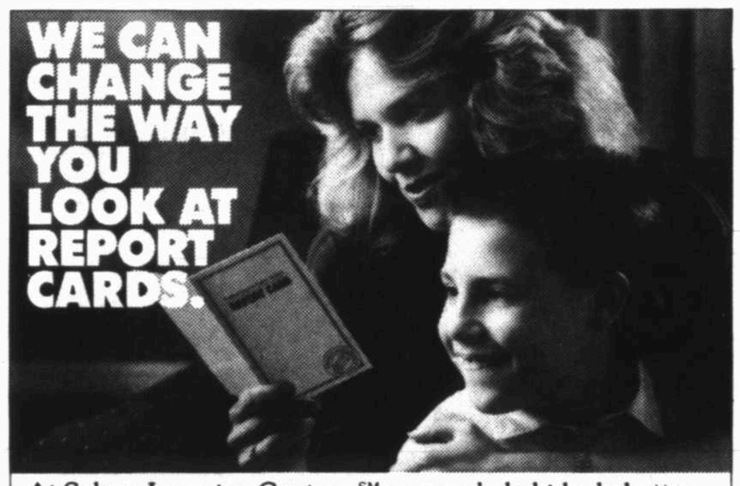

He said the party's leadership hopes to complete work soon on a tax policy, including whether Social Security taxes should be cut.

The report was the latest round in a partisan debate over whether Americans are better off than they were before Presidents Reagan and Bush took office.

Greenspan has Bush seeing red

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Bush is unlikely to reappoint Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan when his term expires in August 1991 because of Greenspan's refusal to push interest rates down further, a newspaper reported today.

Bush is "mad as hell" about Greenspan's position on interest rates and will seek a new Fed chief, the Los Angeles Times reported, quoting an unidentified longtime Bush adviser.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater acknowledged that Bush differs with Greenspan's tight monetary policy, but denied that Bush was so upset that he was determined not to reappoint Greenspan.

Republican sources told the Times that some economists see Greenspan's monetary policy as too tight considering recent weaknesses in the economy.

Greenspan told Congress two weeks ago that the threat of recession has faded and that he was unlikely to encourage rates to fall, a move that could push inflation higher.

Hearings on track

WASHINGTON (AP) — John R. Dunne, President Bush's nominee to be assistant attorney general for civil rights, appears to be on a fast track to confirmation.

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted Thursday to approve Dunne's nomination, and a staff aide said a vote by the full Senate could come as early as today.

Dunne, a former New York state legislator, has the bipartisan backing of both New York senators, the state's House delegation and Gov. Mario Cuomo. But some committee members voiced reservations about him.

Dunne, 60, of Garden City, N.Y., was nominated in January to be assistant attorney general for civil rights. The post has been vacant since December 1988 when William Bradford Reynolds resigned.

Bush's first nominee for the job, William C. Lucas, then a Michigan county executive, was rejected by the committee by a 7-7 vote last August.

PTL home destroyed

TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — Fire destroyed the former sprawling lakeside home of PTL founder Jim Bakker early today.

Fire officials searched the smoldering ruins to see if anyone was inside when the blaze broke out, but neighbors said no one had been seen near the house in the past few days, said Police Officer Russell Case.

Two vehicles were parked in the driveway.

"It's just leveled," said Patricia Slagle, who lives next door. "There's really nothing to find. If there had been anybody in the house they just wouldn't have survived."

The 4,000 square-foot house on Lake Wylie had room-sized closets and an air-conditioned dog house when Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, lived there.

Women face charges

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — Two women face first-degree murder charges in the execution-style slaying of a Marine Corps corporal who was investigating an embezzlement scheme involving the squadron that flies the president's helicopter, authorities say.

Markeithia Reeves, 24, of Suitland, Md., and Tanya Morton, 23, of Arlington, Va., were charged with killing Corporal Estella Pearson, 26, of Detroit, according to Prince William County police. The victim's body was found in her car Monday night at a shopping center.

None of the people involved in the case had "access or clearance" for sensitive information or for the helicopters serving President Bush, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Reeves, who worked with the victim at the Quantico Marine Base, was charged with first-degree murder. Morton, a civilian employee with the Navy Department, also was charged with first-degree murder.

Ohio's 'Behave!' campaign ends

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 14-month campaign to make honesty a city policy ends today, and its leader and police say they cannot tell a lie: It hasn't rid the city of liars, cheats or scoundrels.

"We haven't wiped out crime or made everybody honest, but we have made people think about it. That's what we intended to do," said Jeb Stuart Magruder, the former Watergate conspirator who led the "Take an Honest Look" campaign.

Magruder, who spent seven months in prison after he admitted destroying records and committing perjury in the Watergate scandal, said he saw the campaign as making a small inroad into the problem.

"I have learned that change can occur in little increments. And change for the better is something worth doing," he said.

Deputy Chief Robert Kern said neither he nor the street patrol officers he oversees have noticed an outbreak of honesty.

"Crime is up, that's for sure," he said. "But I haven't noticed any more people than normal being honest. A lot of people call us with information or turn people in, but they've always done that."

The idea for the campaign surfaced when the honesty — or lack of it — of Columbus residents was questioned in 1988 after the rear doors of an armored car flew open, spewing bags of cash on an interstate.

Many motorists who stopped to scoop up the flying cash never returned it, although one man who returned $57,000 became a local celebrity.

Andrew Altman, a philosophy professor at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., who specializes in law and morality, said it will take more than a campaign to persuade people that honesty is the best policy.

Rafsanjani impostor calls Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush was the victim of an elaborate hoax last month when he tried to speak by phone to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani to discuss the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon, the White House says.

An impostor, and not Rafsanjani or a representative of his government, was on the other end of the line, officials said.

"We don't really know" who was behind the prank, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "This was the first time that this has happened."

Rafsanjani said in a sermon broadcast on Tehran radio that "Iran's stature in the world is so high that the strongest power in the world, and the greatest power on Earth, is striving to find an opening with your executive leader even through telephone wires."

"Can it be that such a global power, with all its intelligence capabilities, talks to a person it cannot identify?" he asked. "This is a strange occurrence."

"This shows the United States very much needs to talk to Iran, but, with God's grace, it is deprived of this blessing," he said.

"Now we must wait for explanations and witness another Irangate in the making, God willing," Rafsanjani said, referring to the ill-fated effort by the Reagan administration to trade arms for the release of hostages.

Fitzwater and other White House officials said the bizarre chain of events began when a man identifying himself as an Iranian government official called the White House to say that Rafsanjani wanted to talk to Bush about U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

"The call came in, a number was given for us to call. We were suspicious and began checking," Fitzwater said. "But, ultimately, the president needed to make the call as part of the check. He did make the call."

The initial call came to national security adviser Brent Scowcroft, White House aides said.

The episode was first reported Thursday by CBS News.

Fitzwater said the fact that the call turned out to be a hoax is unfortunate, but that Bush — who frequently speaks to foreign leaders by telephone — remains determined to "talk to anybody, anytime, any place" to try to gain the release of the hostages.

Eight Americans, including Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and 10 other Westerners are being held hostage in Lebanon.

Most of them are believed to be held by factions loyal to Iran.

The disclosure of the hoax came amid a flurry of recent reports on hostage-related developments. However, U.S. officials have said they are unable to cite any actual movement toward freeing the hostages.

Although he was tricked once, Bush would do the same thing again if he thought it would help win the release of the hostages, his spokesman said.

"If a call came through at some future point that we believed was real, he would take it," Fitzwater said. "The president has made it known he's willing to talk to Iran at any time. And the ball is in their court. So it's up to them to signal a willingness to talk."

The Bush administration contends that Rafsanjani's government has influence with those holding the hostages.

Fitzwater said the administration has let Rafsanjani know "through diplomatic channels as well as publicly, that we're willing to talk whenever they're ready. And they have come back and said, 'we're not ready.'"

Fitzwater declined to go into details of Bush's conversation with the unknown caller.

Asked if Bush immediately realized that the voice on the other end of the line was not Rafsanjani, Fitzwater said: "I can't tell you how we determined it was a hoax."

He said he didn't want to discuss anything "that goes to the point of how we check out phone calls."

Saturday is expected to be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of mainly afternoon thunderstorms, some possibly severe. The high will be in the upper 70s and winds will be south-southwesterly winds 10-20 mph and gusty.

Thursday's high of 82 was three degrees cooler than the record high of 85 set for that date in 1955. The overnight low of 62 was 52 degrees warmer than the record low of 10 set for this date in 1948.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected tonight and Saturday across West Texas from the Panhandle to the Big Bend.

Some of the thunderstorms could become severe, forecasters say.

Elsewhere, forecasts are calling for partly cloudy skies and conditions are expected to start drying out from drenching rains earlier in the week.

Highs Saturday will be in the 70s in the Panhandle and North Texas, in the 80s in Central Texas and near 90 along the Rio Grande.

The showers and thunderstorms expected across West Texas will be triggered by a dry line that stretched early today from Dalhart to just east of Amarillo southward to Wink and Marfa.

NATION

Scattered rainshowers soaked much of the area east of the Mississippi River early today, and a weekend forecast called for spring-like weather in the East and rain in the West.

In Des Moines, Iowa, utility crews restored power to thousands of homes in the wake of this week's ice storm, but officials said some may be without power until Sunday. About 30,000 customers were still without electricity early today.

dent enough after the debate to borrow a line from one of Williams' television ads.

"I think I can beat Clayton Williams," Mattox said. "I'll stand toe to toe with him. And I'll tell you this if anybody tells you that there's going to be a Republican in the next governor's position you tell them they don't know Jim Mattox."

Although the three top three Democratic candidates fired several verbal shots at each other Thursday, all agreed after the debate to support the winner of primary.

"I think the Democrats are going to be unified in November," Ms. Richards said. "I don't think there's any question about that. We've all made a commitment and we've all signed a pledge that we will support the victor out of this primary."

The debate, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Texas and KDFW-TV, was the first to include so-called minor candidates. They are: Theresa Hearn-Haynes, 35, of Houston; Earl Holmes, 75, of Hawkins; Ray Rachal, 49, a certified public accountant from Stafford, and Stanley Edward Adams Jr., 54, of Austin.

Adams and Rachal called for decriminalization of illegal drugs. "I think the stuff should be decriminalized, it should be made available so cheap that nobody can make any money...and it should be taxed," Adams said.

Rachal said he had not used illegal drugs but that he would not be willing to take a drug test. "Too many people right now are trying to destroy this lady over something that is not much more serious than a bad traffic accident. We're overreacting."

The questions ranged from education funding to prisons to the environment.

Mattox said he supports a lottery for education funding. Ms. Hearns-Haynes, asked about her support of a lottery, said 80 percent of lottery revenues should be earmarked for education, and the money closely managed.

JUDGES

peals Judge Ross Sears of Houston.

Justice Charles Ben Howell of the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas apparently will be unopposed in the Republican primary after the Texas Supreme Court ruled District Judge Lamar McCorkle of Houston was ineligible to run because he would not have been in practice 10 years at the time of the election, as the Texas Constitution requires.

McCorkle was the choice of the Republican establishment and led the bar poll with 5,432 votes before the Supreme Court ruled him ineligible. Democrats Gammage had 2,765, Sears got 2,235 and Holmes got 2,023. Howell received 1,112 votes.

Howell was publicly reprimanded in 1977 by the Commission on Judicial Conduct, which ruled he acted in bad faith in suing a Dallas developing firm. He also ran unsuccessfully against Justice Raul Gonzalez that year.

In races for the Court of Criminal Appeals, the decision of Judge W.C. Davis to give up his seat has opened a race for Place 1 among three Democrats and two Republicans.

Democrats include Frank Maloney, a former prosecutor and criminal defense lawyer from Austin; Morris Overstreet, a county court-at-law judge from Amarillo; and Jeff Van Horn, criminal district attorney for Caldwell County.

Overstreet is one of two blacks running for statewide office, but he is little known outside the Panhandle.

Republican primary candidates include Joseph Devany, a former justice on the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas, and Allen Isbell, a Houston criminal defense lawyer and former president of the Harris County Criminal Lawyers Association.

Maloney outdistanced the field of five with 6,045 votes in the bar poll, while Overstreet got 1,215 votes and Van Horn got 1,011. On the Republican side, Isbell had 1,266 and Devany had 1,036.

For Place 2, incumbent Judge Sam Houston Clinton is unopposed in the Democratic primary, but District Judge Oliver Kitzman of Brookshire has filed in the Republican primary to oppose Clinton in the general election.

In the bar poll, Clinton got 7,013 votes to 3,655 for Kitzman.

For Place 3, incumbent Judge Bill White faces a challenge in the Democratic primary from Pat Barber of Colorado City, a former prosecutor with the support of many defense lawyers.

White got 5,157 votes in the bar poll, while Barber got 1,485. Libertarians Wiley Rawlins of Dallas (1,177) and Egon Trausch of Bulverde (562) rounded out the field.

For Place 4 interim Judge David Berchelmann, appointed to the court by Clements and the only Republican on the court, has no primary opponent but two Democrats are hoping to meet him in the general election. Charles F. Baird of Houston is a veteran defense lawyer and Herb Hancock of Nacogdoches is a former prosecutor.

Berchelmann had 4,530 votes in the bar poll, while Baird had 2,983 votes and Hancock claimed 1,770.

block, please call on that extra house, please make that extra phone call. Because one vote could very well make the difference," Williams said.

Then, flashing a grin and demonstrating the self-deprecating humor that marks many of his public appearances, the oilman-rancher added, "I must be sounding like a politician. I circled that question pretty good."

Front-runner in the seven-man field for Tuesday's GOP primary, Williams apparently is so confident that he skipped a televised League of Women Voters' debate in Dallas Wednesday night.

The cowboy-hatted candidate, who says he owns no shoes — just boots — has crisscrossed the state at a furious pace in the closing days. He has spent $5.6 million of his own in an $8 million campaign, and in recent days has found himself repeatedly surrounded by fans.

In Galveston, a police officer asked him to sign a Williams' "rock buster" campaign brochure, a reference to his promise to see drug dealers "busting rocks."

At the Capitol, after kissing three small children and signing an autograph for a tourist, he explained his rising popularity by talking about his wife, Modesta.

"Take a good look at me, look at my profile. Now look at Modesta," he challenged. "You think I'm not the sellingest son-of-a-gun you've ever seen?"

In other gubernatorial developments Thursday, Republican gubernatorial hopeful Jack Rains, campaigning in Fort Worth, said Texas should set an example "for the rest of the country and the world" by showing that economic growth doesn't have to harm the environment.

He said his environmental program would encourage recycling, vigorously enforce environmental protection laws and reduce and treat waste with financial incentives for technological innovations.

ported the killings, saying they found the bodies after a night out.

Nothing appeared to be stolen from the Spanish-style, $5 million home. And nothing indicated that the killers forced their way in.

"The focus became very clear over the past few months that the sons did it," Iannone said. "We were just waiting for the glue, binding it together."

Police on Thursday served search warrants to seize the records of a psychologist who had worked with the Menendez family. Some forms of communication between psychotherapists and their clients are protected under law. It wasn't known what records were seized by police.

Authorities Thursday refused to give a possible motive in the killings.

"Who knows what really goes on in families?" Iannone said.

Under terms of the parents' 9-year-old wills, the sons share an estate worth $10 million to $17 million. A $400,000 life insurance policy also has been distributed to the sons.

In the months after the killings, Lyle Menendez traveled the country, making investments and buying stores, particularly fast-food franchises, said Iannone.

Lyle Menendez was arrested Thursday afternoon as he was preparing to drive away from the family mansion. He had been under surveillance for 36 hours, and police feared he would leave the state.

Erik and a close friend had written a screenplay about a son who murders his wealthy parents and three other people and ultimately is shot himself, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The screenplay, called "Friends," opens with the son reading the family will, which bequeaths to him $157 million, before he goes into his parents' luxury suite and kills them.

NORTH

"Was Admiral Poindexter one of your superiors?" asked Webb.

"In that general time frame he was one of the people who assigned me to" assist the Contras, replied North.

Defense attorney Richard Beckler has denied that Poindexter engaged in a criminal coverup of the Iran-Contra affair, declaring that he was acting under President Reagan's orders.

Beckler said Congress was fully informed of North's secret Contra resupply network and that Poindexter labored to provide Congress the story of the Reagan administration's Iran initiative once it became public during November 1986.

"Why would anybody have to hide and deceive?" asked Beckler. "The answer is that Poindexter didn't have to hide. The answer is there was nothing illegal."

Earlier Thursday, Webb said, "John Poindexter and Oliver North decided to rewrite the history of the Iran-Contra affair" through a conspiracy of "coverup, deception and concealment."

Poindexter and North tried to cover up the 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan rebels to "avoid tarnishment of the Reagan administration," Webb said.

But Beckler told the jury Poindexter simply forgot when he gave incorrect information to members of the House and Senate intelligence committees about his involvement in the November 1985 Hawks shipment.

The then-national security adviser told the congressional committees that he found out about the delivery in January 1986, when in fact he had known of the shipment at the time it occurred.

"After 30 years in the U.S. Navy and the White House they want to nail him on a five-week mistake" for obstruction and making false statements to Congress," Beckler told the jury, nearly shouting.

Hours after making the alleged false statements, Poindexter tore up a politically embarrassing presidential paper that depicted U.S. involvement in Iran arms sales as a straight arms-for-hostages deal. The December 1985 finding retroactively authorized the November 1985 CIA-assisted shipment of Hawks from Israel to Iran.

"Sometimes you do things to protect" the president, Beckler said. "When you work for the president of the United States, part of your job is ... to protect the president."

"What was driving this man was not a conspiracy, but ... the orders of the president of the United States," said Beckler. "He met with him sometimes seven days a week, sometimes four, five and six times a day. And he was carrying out the policies of the United States and that is what this case is about. It is not about criminality."

North met with members of Congress on Aug. 6, 1986, and denied assisting the Contras militarily. Poindexter later sent a message telling his aide, "Well done."

at the hands of older children.

The White House and Mayor David Dinkins were among those who showered the badly burned David with cards, gifts, balloons, flowers and messages, said New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center spokeswoman Diana Goldin. Three people sent teddy bears, and Brooklyn Borough President Howard Golden sent a radio.

None of the callers could speak with the boy. Reagan said he would call back when David recovers, said Goldin.

The youth, who suffered burns over 55 percent of his body, was under heavy sedation in critical but stable condition, said Dr. Cleon Goodwin, head of the hospital burn unit. He should be hospitalized for up to four months and undergo skin grafts to repair the second-degree burns over much of his body.

"He's a fighter," Goodwin said. "If you ask him if it hurts, he says, 'No,' even when we know it does. He's tough."

David was walking to school with five friends Wednesday when the assailant approached, said Detective Joseph McConville. Two of the boys fled buB the 13-year-old robbed the remaining three.

He then took David to a basement in an abandoned apartment building, doused him with gasoline and told David he would set him aflame if he did not take drugs, McConville said.

David, his hands tied behind his back, was beaten with a baseball bat and set aflame while tied to a sewer pipe. He managed to escape and ran to an auto repair shop for help. Originally, police thought the attack occurred in a garage, but later attributed that report to a bloodhound's false tracking.

Valdez' last minutes dissected in court

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Former skipper Joseph Hazelwood's defense tried to prove a helmsman's error grounded the Exxon Valdez by focusing expert testimony on the last 13 minutes of the tanker's shattered voyage.

Using computer simulation and complicated charts, two experts tracked the ship's passage, second by second, as it moved through the Valdez Narrows into Prince William Sound on March 24.

Peter Shizume and Joseph Winer showed jurors in Hazelwood's criminal trial calculations indicating the tanker would have missed Bligh Reef if the helmsman had turned the rudder right even two or three minutes before it rammed the reef and spilled nearly 11 million gallons in the nation's worst oil spill.

Winer indicated that the helmsman, for unknown reasons, turned the rudder to the right, then back to the left in the last moments before the disaster, plowing right into the reef on the ship's left side.

Shizume, an engineer from Hicksville, N.Y., who created a complex computer program to simulate ship accidents, said the helmsman could have saved the ship if he'd turned only half as far as called for by a third mate.

Winer, a marine surveyor from Boonton, N.J., who analyzed the ship's course recorder, said he believes the grounding occurred about three minutes later than assumed and that a "hitch" he observed in the recorder reflects the unexplained "counter rudder" turn left.

Shizume, who used various scenarios of what might have happened to the tanker, said it would have missed Bligh Reef by two miles if the helmsman had turned 10 degrees right 10 minutes before the ship ran aground.

Hazelwood, 43, faces up to 7¼ years in prison and $61,000 in fines if convicted on all four criminal counts against him.

Research may help Alzheimer's victims

In the days before the name of that tragically debilitating disease became commonly known, some Americans thought those referring to it were saying "Old Timer's" disease. They weren't, of course. But many of the victims were elderly and unable to care for themselves, so the mistaken name seemed to apply.

Actually those talking about the disease were saying "Alzheimer's Disease," a progressive, degenerative malady which attacks the brain and results in impaired memory, thinking and behavior.

The disease, the topic of a three-part series in February by Reporter-Telegram Staff Writer Myra Lee Salcedo, is heart-breaking in that it strikes seemingly healthy individuals in their later years, stripping them of their ability to care for themselves and rendering them weak, disoriented and confused. It affects the families of the victims, too, and in that respect, Alzheimer's is touching literally millions of American lives. What's worse, predictions are that by the year 2040 — only five decades down the road — the number of Alzheimer's patients could climb to 12 to 14 million.

If there is anything more tragic than seeing the "golden years" of an elderly person stolen by disease, it is the recognition by loved ones that options for dealing with the crisis are extremely limited — that, in fact, in some instances there is nowhere to turn for help. Yet that often is the case in communities such as Midland.

Medicare and most insurance policies do not cover the victims of Alzheimer's, and Ms. Salcedo found that, locally at least, many nursing homes are not equipped to care for these patients who may require virtually round-the-clock care. In the absence of insurance coverage for long-term care and the void of care-giving institutions, families are being swept into bankruptcy or poverty when Alzheimer's strikes. That's the second tragedy of this disease and it begs for attention by the Congress.

Research into this illness is under way, but at this time there is little hope that a cure will be forthcoming soon. Congress has already voted to increase funds for research, education and training programs by nearly 20 percent. That will help and with that commitment, and more awareness of the plight of Alzheimer's victims, perhaps medical research can one day remove this tragedy from the golden years of American society.

JACK ANDERSON

Watkins needs to come up with answers

WASHINGTON — Adm. James D. Watkins runs the Energy Department the way he ran the AIDS commission, treating the nation's energy problem as though it were a new plague.

Jack Anderson

He has roamed the country hosting town meetings to find out what the public thinks he should do about dwindling energy resources. Watkins is so enamored of getting a national consensus that he has told the energy experts on his staff that the national energy policy will include only the ideas suggested by the public and nothing else.

The admiral is taking democracy a little too far. Town meetings and a national forum are fine, but at some point, Watkins will have to stop asking questions and start providing some answers.

Soon after he joined the Bush Cabinet, Watkins hired the executive director from his old AIDS commission, Polly Gault, and made her his chief of staff at the Energy Department.

Then he ordered his policy makers to come up with a "National Energy Strategy." It could be called "AIDS: The Sequel." The nation would be canvassed, and Watkins would again be praised as a man who can reach a consensus on controversial issues. A copy of the AIDS commission report was attached to Watkins' game plan for the Energy Department to use as "a guide for preparing similar information for the National Energy Strategy."

Watkins is understandably proud of the AIDS commission. It vaulted him into the national spotlight with its bold and compassionate recommendations to President Reagan.

But someone should tell Watkins that energy is not a disease and that sewing up a neat package of recommendations about how to solve a problem is not the same as solving the problem. He is a Cabinet secretary now, not the chairman of a hit-and-run task force.

Sources told our associate Jim Lynch that the White House Council of Economic Advisers has seen a draft of Watkins' "National Energy Strategy" and panned it. The experts say it reads like the tape recording of a town meeting instead of concrete marching orders.

Some of the seasoned energy experts in the department are frustrated that their expertise has been brushed aside in favor of policy by polling. A spokesman for Watkins, David Benton, told us that the staff need not fret. "They're going to be in charge of pulling it all together," he said.

Energy staffers genuinely like Watkins, but his military demeanor makes some uneasy. Watkins may be the first person to shove aside the coveted Cabinet title of "Mr. Secretary," in favor of rank. Inside the department, Watkins is strictly referred to as "The Admiral." He signs his letters "Adm. James D. Watkins, U.S. Navy Retired." As one source observed, "People wonder why they're getting mail from the Navy Reserves on Energy Department stationery."

The military title is a constant reminder to the department that Watkins is a veteran of the Navy's nuclear priesthood. He was a strong advocate of nuclear-powered ships, and he has carried that same pro-nuclear zeal to the Energy Department.

Insiders tell us that Watkins' mantra on the national energy strategy is "Start up Seabrook, start up Shoreham," two nuclear power plants. The Seabrook plant in New Hampshire was licensed last week after 17 years in mothballs. The Shoreham plant in New York is still waiting.

Watkins may have succeeded in warming the nation's heart about the AIDS crisis using the town meeting approach. It will be a far more amazing feat to warm the nation to nuclear power using the same gimmick.

Taylor best qualified

There has been a lot of talk about who has the most experience for district judge. It seems that none of the candidates have experience as district judge! Only someone who has been a district judge can claim that "experience."

Both candidates do have experience before the courts. However, Nick Taylor has a broader range of experience in the courts from Midland courts all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court. In fact, Nick won the case in the U.S. Supreme Court against the government. Also, I would think that his education in constitutional law would better qualify him to make the kind of decisions a district judge must make.

Taylor not only wants to unclog our courts and has the ideas that would help speed the process, but his plans to require probated criminals to take regular drug tests should help stop "potential" crime since theft and burglary are most often drug related.

All in all, after examining the evidence, it seems evident that the best qualified candidate for district judge is Nick Taylor.

Hyde recommended

I am writing to recommend that you vote for John Hyde for district judge. I've watched John in the courtroom, I've tried cases against him, and I can personally attest to his competence, experience, and integrity.

A judge is often required to make quick, accurate decisions under pressure during trial. John can do that. During his 19-year career as a lawyer, John has tried hundreds of cases. He is familiar with both criminal and civil law, and was a prosecutor for five years. While Nick Taylor has virtually unlimited campaign funds, he has almost no courtroom experience.

I encourage you to vote for John Hyde in the Republican primary election for judge of Midland County's 238th Judicial District. The election date is Tuesday, March 13th. You do not need an excuse to vote absentee if you would like to cast your vote earlier.

Please join me in supporting and electing John Hyde as our next district judge for the 238th Judicial District.

Matt Blair supported

In response to a recent negative letter about Matthew Blair, I would like to share this note of support.

In 1982 Blair started a Boy Scout troop here in Midland of which I was a part. Although his law practice gave him precious little free time, he was always available to support and lead the troop at our weekly meetings and our monthly campouts. Through his example, the Scouts learned the importance of helping others, honesty, leadership and to follow the laws of decent living that are represented by the Boy Scouts of America. Blair's personal encouragement also spurred me on to achieve the rank of Eagle Scout.

Those who choose to question Blair's moral character should take these facts into consideration. I choose to support Matthew Blair as judge for Midland County Court at Law #1.

Y needs sustaining funds

The Midland YMCA is in the closing phase of a sustaining or support fund drive for the seven YMCA divisions. Many Midlanders don't understand the need for these funds because the Y gets funds from memberships as well as the United Way.

What too many don't realize is that dues paid usually only covers that particular membership activity. United Way funds, while ample and appreciated, have to be divided at least six ways.

With so many scholarships given to anyone who cannot pay (no one is turned away), membership dues and United Way funds don't cover it all. That's why we're asking for Midlanders' support.

The Y staff took a 10% pay cut last year in order to keep on keeping on. Let's all pitch in to see that doesn't happen again this year.

CHARLEY REESE

Americans can't blame others for nation's mess

I was talking to a conspiracy buff the other day. That's another way of saying I was talking to a herder of scapegoats. Conspiracy theories are always aimed at providing a scapegoat.

Charley Reese

There are so many conspiracy theories floating around some guy even published a conspiracy digest — no kidding. I saw a copy of it. Conspiracy theories always, of course, have a villain, often bankers or Jews but sometimes Masons or communists. These villains — not us — created all of our problems.

Actually, the Japanese are gaining on the Jews in the contest for chief scapegoat. This ought to produce some interesting arguments among people who cherish conspiracy theories — who really owns the world, the Jews or the Japanese?

Ordinarily, the anti-Semites blandly dismiss evidence. You point out the remarkable absence of Jews in the financial establishment and they say, oh, all those WASPs' ancestors were actually Jews but they changed their names and religions. They will have a hard time claiming that the Japanese had Jewish ancestors. I have never seen kosher tofu.

But all silliness aside, there is no scapegoat and there is only one villain, us. Of all the people alive or dead on God's beautiful planet, Americans have the least excuse for blaming anyone for anything that is happening to us.

We do it all to ourselves. We are a free people and have been for over 200 years. No military coup ever trashed our Constitution; no law or amendment to it was ever secretly adopted. No person ever held constitutional office we didn't elect or authorize. No one ever silenced us or took away our rights.

Whatever mess you see, we made ourselves. We still have our rights and our freedom and if there are any problems out there, they are there because we neglect to solve them. Did any commissar ever point a gun at an American workman and say, "Make a shoddy product?" Did any politician ever vote himself into office? Did any bank loan officer ever stand outside the bank, tackle people, drag them into the bank, and force them to borrow money?

I know that borrowing and spending is lot more fun than paying the money back, but that does not make any of us a victim of the lender. I think there are flaws in the Federal Reserve System, but the legislation was publicly introduced, publicly debated, and publicly adopted. At any time, had a sufficient number of Americans didn't like it, they could have lobbied their Congress to repeal it or amend it. That's as true today as it was in 1913.

The real problem is us. We've gotten lazy. Self-government is hard work. It requires that we educate ourselves. It requires that we spend the time on civic duties to see that they are carried out competently. Too many of us don't do that. Too many of us don't vote, don't contribute to candidates, don't attend public meetings, don't read anything tougher than a sports page or a cookbook.

Many of our personal problems have nothing to do with government, much less conspirators. The rules for good health are simple and well known. We don't follow them. The rules for financial success are likewise simple — don't spend more than you take in. Don't borrow money for a depreciating asset. We don't follow them. No one makes us do foolish things or neglect our affairs.

Our lives are our responsibility. Our families are our responsibility. Our community is our responsibility. Our country is our responsibility. But if we are going to shirk all those responsibilities, let us at least have the decency to take responsibility for our failure and not blame others — least of all those people who, when they aren't being blamed for things they didn't do, are being victimized by the blamers.

I would hate to waste my life with childish irresponsibility and then console myself toward the end with fantasies of being victimized by boogie-bears. What a bloody awful, undignified waste of a life that would d be.

MARIANNE MEANS

There's no basis for protest by not paying taxes

WASHINGTON — Now that the District of Columbia's non-voting delegate, Walter Fauntroy, is running for mayor, he has abandoned his campaign to get voters to refuse to pay federal taxes until the city is granted statehood.

Marianne Means

He did the right thing to retreat, albeit for the wrong reason.

An elected official ought to have more sense of public responsibility than to encourage mass violation of the law in pursuit of a narrow policy goal.

And there was always the unnerving, if remote, possibility that the concept might catch on.

What if all women who wanted the right to an abortion refused to pay their taxes until that right was constitutionally secure? What if all millionaires refused to pay up until President Bush had his way about reducing the capital gains tax? What if all supporters of campaign finance reform refused to fill out their Internal Revenue Service forms until Congress cleaned up its act?

The excuses for withholding taxes in protest of something or other are endless.

The jails would be jammed. The IRS would have to employ half the country as agents to pursue the other half the country. The Treasury would go bankrupt. Government would grind to a halt.

This is not a very likely scenario. But you never know what might happen once an idea is given the coloring of legitimacy by being sanctioned by a public official, even a minor one like Fauntroy.

He launched his tax-withholding campaign only three weeks ago in an effort to turn up the heat for statehood. It is a cause that has never aroused much interest beyond the capital's boundaries but has long been a favorite of local politicians likely to benefit if the city becomes a state.

Fauntroy said he'd set aside his federal taxes in a special account until Congress saw the issue his way and urged all city residents to do likewise. There was, however, no immediate rush to join him, and for good reason.

The Internal Revenue Service does not look kindly on extreme civil disobedience; anyone who followed Fauntroy's advice could go to jail as well as be forced to pay stiff fines. There is no constitutional basis for refusing to pay taxes as a form of protest against public policy.

Fauntroy had a change of heart after he suddenly jumped into a crowded mayoralty race left in turmoil by Jesse Jackson's refusal to run. It occurred to him that voters might not be willing to elect another scofflaw to city hall.

The District's residents are benumbed by the corruption of Mayor Marion Barry's administration. But that doesn't mean it's smart to campaign on a platform that advocates breaking the tax laws.

Fauntroy conceded he had made "a mistake." But he would have better served himself, his city and his country had he backed away because what he was doing was ethically, morally and legally wrong, not because he figured it might hurt his career.

ITEM: Once again, Congress has been too clever by half. Members thought they had headed off a potentially explosive controversy over flag-burning. But the issue may soon be back in their laps, just in time to become a hot campaign issue this fall.

After the Supreme Court ruled last summer that burning the American flag was a constitutionally protected form of free expression, Congress quickly passed legislation to negate the decision. The idea was to head off demands for a constitutional amendment, which many members regarded as a frivolous infringement upon the basic rights that document represents.

The measure, which made it a crime to burn the flag in political protest, has now been struck down by two federal courts as a violation of constitutional rights. Under the law's provision for expedited appeal, the question goes immediately to the Supreme Court, which seems virtually certain to reaffirm its earlier ruling.

And that means President Bush and other politicians who back a constitutional amendment to ban flag-burning will jump on the issue again.

Preserving the principle of individual free speech, no matter how offensive and tasteless, is far more important to a democracy than cosseting the flag, which in any case is constantly demeaned for selfish commercial purposes. But insufficient reverence for patriotic symbols that strike an emotional public chord has brought down many a politician. And congressional incumbents are all too aware of that.

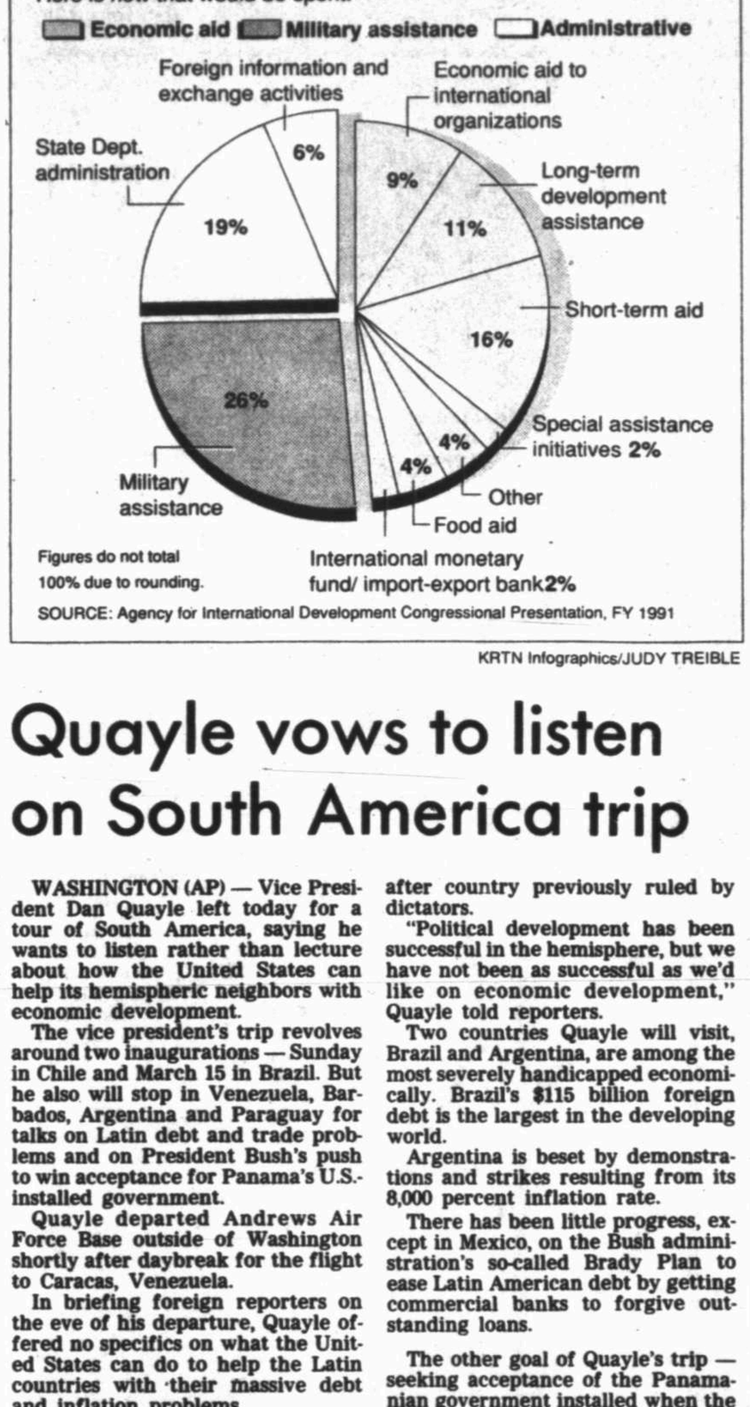

In his presidential campaign, Bush mocked his hapless Democratic rival Michael Dukakis for failing to demand that the Pledge of Allegiance be recited in classrooms every morning. As soon as the Supreme Court speaks, Republicans, eager to find another issue as effective as the Pledge, are prepared to renew their push for a constitutional amendment against burning the flag.

Democrats, while divided, are generally reluctant to tinker with the Constitution. And they note angrily that many of the same Republicans who want to put a piece of cloth in the Constitution have opposed similarly amending it to protect equal rights for women. But are they willing to take the political risk that opposition to an amendment could mean?

Virginia ready to ban smoking in public

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia, one of the biggest tobacco-producing states in the country, is poised to become one of the last states to pass a public smoking bill.

The state legislature on Thursday approved a bill restricting smoking, and Gov. L. Douglas Wilder is likely to sign it, said Wilder's chief of staff, J.T. Shropshire.

Virginia is among six states with no statewide limits on smoking in public. It is the nation's fifth largest tobacco producer.

"I think we can live with it," said Anthony F. Troy, a lobbyist for the Tobacco Institute.

"It is a major, positive step toward cleaner air in the commonwealth," said Jane F. Roberts, a spokeswoman for the Tri-Agency Council, a coalition of cancer, heart and lung associations.

But rural lawmakers called the bill another blow to the declining tobacco industry.

"We are talking about an industry that has helped build this commonwealth," said Delegate Charles R. Hawkins. "This vote will change the direction of this commonwealth forever."

In a compromise with tobacco industry backers, the bill allows localities to regulate smoking in other public places but would limit how strict their ordinances could be. In private workplaces, localities could allow smoking to be banned if half the employees agree.

Quayle vows to listen on South America trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle left today for a tour of South America, saying he wants to listen rather than lecture about how the United States can help its hemispheric neighbors with economic development.

The vice president's trip revolves around two inaugurations — Sunday in Chile and March 15 in Brazil. But he also will stop in Venezuela, Barbados, Argentina and Paraguay for talks on Latin debt and trade problems and on President Bush's push to win acceptance for Panama's U.S.-installed government.

Quayle departed Andrews Air Force Base outside of Washington shortly after daybreak for the flight to Caracas, Venezuela.

In briefing foreign reporters on the eve of his departure, Quayle offered no specifics on what the United States can do to help the Latin countries with their massive debt and inflation problems.

He said he wanted to hear ideas on trade and economic development from those countries' heads of state.

"It's very important to solicit their ideas," Quayle said. "At times the United States gets accused, perhaps justifiably so, of lecturing. I'm not visiting Latin America to lecture. I'm visiting Latin America to listen, to get their ideas."

He said the administration is prepared to turn its attention more to economic affairs in the hemisphere, now that democratic elections have sparked political reform in country after country previously ruled by dictators.

"Political development has been successful in the hemisphere, but we have not been as successful as we'd like on economic development," Quayle told reporters.

Two countries Quayle will visit, Brazil and Argentina, are among the most severely handicapped economically. Brazil's $115 billion foreign debt is the largest in the developing world.

Argentina is beset by demonstrations and strikes resulting from its 8,000 percent inflation rate.

There has been little progress, except in Mexico, on the Bush administration's so-called Brady Plan to ease Latin American debt by getting commercial banks to forgive outstanding loans.

The other goal of Quayle's trip — seeking acceptance of the Panamanian government installed when the U.S. invasion toppled Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega — still faces resistance.

Like other Latin governments, Chile and Brazil condemned the Dec. 20 invasion as a violation of Panama's sovereignty. Many Latin governments contend Panama's President Guillermo Endara needs to gain legitimacy through a vote of Panama's citizens or its congress.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is accompanying Quayle as part of the U.S. delegation

Iditarod's leaders near halfway point

OPHIR, Alaska (AP) — Five veteran mushers vied for the lead near the midway point of the 18th annual Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

Lavon Barve of Wasilla was the first to arrive at the checkpoint here Thursday. Barve, who has finished in the top 10 each of the past four years, mushed in at 10:21 a.m. and was the first musher out six hours later.

The lead mushers were all into McGrath within an hour of each other, and were gone by 4:34 p.m. — within 20 minutes of Barve — en route for Cripple, 60 miles up the trail and the midway point in the 1,160 mile race to Nome from Anchorage, which the 70 sled teams left Saturday.

Afghanistan accuses Pakistan of having role in coup

WORLD

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghanistan today accused neighboring Pakistan of playing a major role in a thwarted coup engineered by the Afghan defense minister, who defected to a Moslem guerrilla faction.

Pakistan called the allegation absurd, saying the plot to topple Afghan President Najib only exposed the cracks in his shaky government in Kabul.

At least 56 people died and 200 others were injured in Tuesday's revolt by soldiers loyal to the renegade defense minister, Gen. Shah Nawaz Tanai. Tanai was supported by fundamentalist guerrilla leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar.

Tanai, a battle-hardened officer popular among the rank-and-file military, was dismissed as defense minister shortly after Afghan warplanes swooped down and bombed the capital of Kabul, causing extensive damage to the city of 2 million.

Najib also replaced Tanai and other key members of the policy-making Politburo, the Central Committee and the Supreme Defense Council, which maps out the government's strategy in the 12-year-old war against the Moslem guerrillas.

Among those dismissed from the Politburo were Said Mohammad Gulabzhoi, Afghanistan's ambassador to Moscow, and Gen. Abdul Qadar Aga Aka, a leader of the air force contingents that helped Mohammad Daoud overthrow the monarchy in 1973. Daoud was killed in the 1978 coup that installed the Communist government.

During a news conference Thursday in Kabul, Najib declared his government had been purged of dissidents and that his ruling People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan was now more united than ever.

"The microbes, the radicals among us, have been cleansed," a Kabul-based diplomat quoted the 43-year-old president as saying.

Radio Kabul, monitored in Islamabad, reported the government had proof that neighboring Pakistan played a key role in Tanai's attempts to bring down Najib, the former chief of the feared secret police who was installed by the Soviets in 1986.

"The government of Afghanistan has undeniable documents of Pakistan's interference and participation in the unsuccessful coup," official Kabul Radio said.

"The government demands that Pakistan hand over Shah Nawaz Tanai and others who escaped to Pakistan," said the radio.

The Soviet-backed government regularly accuses Pakistan of training the Moslem guerrillas, who are armed by the United States and Saudi Arabia.

As it has always done, Pakistan denied the charge.

"This (coup attempt) is an internal matter. It ... shows that the government's claim of popular support is just a sham," said a Foreign Ministry spokesman.

Tanai fled Afghanistan on Wednesday, and Pakistani officials and guerrilla sources said he then defected to the guerrillas, whom he fought more than a decade. Tanai returned to Afghanistan, but his exact whereabouts were not known.

Hekmatyar's Hezb-i-Islami has split from the other six groups in the Pakistan-based resistance over leadership disputes. Leaders of the guerrillas' government-in-exile say they would never accept Tanai, a hardline Communist, as an ally.

Tanai and Hekmatyar, bitter rivals during the 12-year-old war, apparently were united in their desire to see Najib ousted.

While the plot apparently failed, Western diplomats in Pakistan said, it still hurt Najib politically and militarily and bought time for the guerrillas.

South Africa warns against tribal violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police today reported 19 deaths in a black township that has been wracked by factional fighting, and the government warned it would use emergency measures to curb growing unrest in black areas.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok, who commands the police, told Parliament the government is determined to stop violence, which according to various reports has killed about 200 blacks in the past month.

The worst fighting was in Kathlehong, 12 miles east of Johannesburg, where five people were killed overnight and 14 more bodies were found today, police said.

The fighting began several days ago between rival black taxi groups over control of routes and other local problems not directly related to politics.

The dispute escalated, and groups of black youths have been waging runnning battles against each other, according to police and witnesses.

Houses have been attacked by firebombs, vehicles have been stoned and set afire, and there has been sporadic gunfire. Most of the dead were stabbed or hacked to death, police said.

In the black homeland of Bophuthatswana today, residents reported scattered clashes with security forces. Seven people were killed and up to 500 hurt in the nominally independent homeland when rioting occurred after police fired Monday on a protest march.

The violence in Bophuthatswana began after thousands of residents demanded the resignation of the nominally independent homeland's authoritarian government, and the territory's reintegration ito South Africa.

Many of South Africa's 10 black homelands have been hit by unrest as anti-apartheid groups demand their reintegration into South Africa.

The pro-apartheid opposition Conservative Party today denounced the government in Parliament for failing to suppress unrest. Party spokesman Moolman Mentz claimed the unrest was orchestrated by black nationalist groups to try to seize power in South Africa. He said reforms by President F.W. de Klerk were responsible.

"I say this country is burning literally and figuratively, and you know and you are responsible for it," Mentz told the president during the debate.

Vlok told Parliament he would not hestitate to use emergency measures to control the unrest. He said the same thing earlier during a meeting of police in Cape Town.

The authoritarian government of the southeastern homeland of Ciskei was ousted Sunday in a coup by its military. Twenty-seven people were killed and hundreds injured in riots that followed, and South Africa sent troops into Ciskei at the request of the new homeland to help restore order.

Government offices, schools, businesses and shops remained closed Thursday in the northeastern homeland of Gazankulu as part of a 3-week-old boycott led by activists demanding the ouster of Chief Minister Hudson Ntsanwisi. At least 25 people have been killed and more than 200 huts burned in the past two weeks in the homeland.

Police said today they had detained 53 blacks without charge in the central Orange Free State Province.

Also arrested today were 67 whites armed with whips and other weapons who tried to disrupt a legal march by black teachers in the central town of Welkom, authorities reported.

De Klerk said his government was concerned that violence in the homelands could hinder attempts to launch negotiations on ending white-minority rule in South Africa and sharing power with blacks.

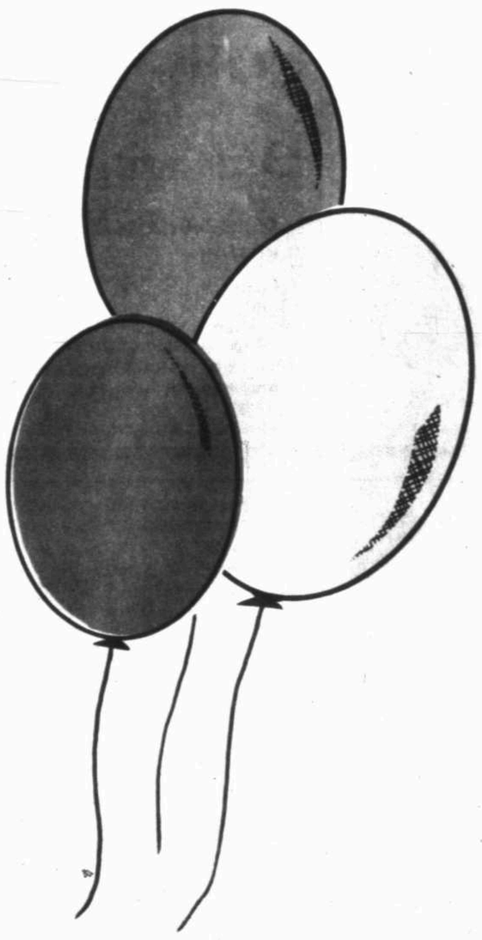

Speaking to journalists in Cape Town, de Klerk said Wednesday night that negotiations on a new constitution could not begin and a state of emergency could not be lifted if there was "anarchy" in black areas.

He accused unspecified groups of "making mischief" in the regions hit by violence.

South Africa established the homelands in the 1960s in an attempt to create separate, tribal-based states for blacks, while whites would retain control of national politics and the economy. About 14 million of the country's 28 million blacks live in the territories.

Activists in several of the homelands also are calling for the end of apartheid and white rule in South Africa. Four of the homelands are nominally independent, although no nation but South Africa recognizes them.

Also today, police hunted for two white neo-Nazis who escaped with five black prisoners from a prison van Thursday in central Johannesburg.

Major crimes up slightly in Midland

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Murders and robberies were up in Midland in 1989 but rapes and assaults were down over the previous year, the Texas Department of Public Safety reported Thursday.

Overall, major crimes in Midland showed a 3 percent increase while Odessa showed a 8.9 percent increase, with higher rates of rape and robbery, the DPS reported.

Midland police reported the number of murders increased from five in 1988 to seven in 1989, while rape was down 11.5 percent to 46 reported cases and assault was down 19.25 percent to 281 reported cases. Robbery was up 43.2 percent to 106 reported cases, and burglary was up 8.2 percent to 2,206 cases.

Thefts were up 1.4 percent to 3,162 cases, and car thefts were up 1.5 percent to 321 cases, as Midland police reported 6,129 major crimes in 1989, up 3 percent from the previous year.

Odessa police reported nine murders, the same as 1988, while rape was up 81.25 percent to 58 cases, robbery was up 26.5 percent to 124 and assault was down 7.9 percent to 267 cases.

Burglary was up 5 percent to 2,581 cases, theft was up 10.7 percent to 8,438 cases and motor vehicle thefts were down 0.5 percent to 396, as Odessa police reported 11,873 major crimes in 1989, up 8.9 percent from the previous year.

While the number of major crimes reported in Texas increased 0.1 percent over 1988, the state crime rate — the number of major crimes reported per 100,000 population — dropped 1.2 percent, from a rate of 8,019.6 in 1988 to 7,926.8 in 1989, DPS crime statistics showed.

"Considering some of the past increases in crime Texas has experienced, we are very pleased to see the crime rate has actually dropped and the number of crimes reported has grown only slightly," said Col. Joe Milner, DPS director.

The total number of major crimes in Texas, which include murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft and motor vehicle theft, was up to 1,346,846, an increase of 1,158 offenses.

Milner noted that motor vehicle theft increased by 12.4 percent, the largest gain in any of the categories.

Statewide increases also were reported in aggravated assault (up 6.5 percent), murder (up 0.4 percent) and theft (up 0.3 percent).

All other statewide categories were down, including burglary (down 5.5 percent), robbery (down 3.6 percent) and rape (down 2.1 percent).

Texas peace officers cleared 20 percent of the major crimes they investigated, the same clearance rate reported in 1988.

Total arrests increased by 5.8 percent, to 905,166 arrests in 1989. Arrests for drug-related offenses rose 13.2 percent, to 71,800.

Arrests for drunkenness increased by 4 percent, to 165,495, while DWI arrests decreased 0.5 percent, to 103,008, a difference of 474 arrests.

Milner noted that law enforcement has a price, as 17 law enforcement officers died in the line of duty, with eight officers fatally wounded in criminal actions and nine in duty-related accidents.

The number of peace officers assaulted in Texas increased by 8 percent, from 4,242 cases in 1988 to 4,580 cases in 1989.

Corine Martinez, February Elementary Teacher of the Month, takes a look at a book with second-graders at Rusk Elementary School this week.

Honored elementary teacher 'laughs, cries and learns' with second-graders

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

For Corine Martinez, relating to second-graders on their own level isn't difficult.

"I don't set myself apart from them," she said. "I consider the classroom a family. We laugh together and we cry together and we learn together."

Ms. Martinez, a Rusk Elementary School teacher and a 16-year classroom veteran, is the latest Chamber of Commerce Elementary Teacher of the Month.

She said she was pleased by the award, which now is being given to both an elementary and a secondary teacher monthly.

"I think the program of selecting a teacher ... is a very, very positive thing," she said. "I want to commend the chamber for having this program because it does highlight some of the good things we have in Midland."

Highlighting the good things her pupils do is important to Ms. Martinez, who didn't want her second-grade pupils to think they were "losers" just because none of them placed in a recent art contest.

Parent Lee Ann Schneringer said, "to make the children feel good about their efforts, Corine bought trophies and ribbons for each child in her class that entered.

"At the time of the presentation she told each child how important it was to put effort into special projects such as these and made them feel very important and special."

Ms. Martinez said she tries to make pupils feel appreciated, but she has to be careful what she says to a class of 8-year-olds because children are so impressionable.

When the United States invaded Panama last December, for example, she had to be careful to discuss the situation objectively.

"We talk about opinions a lot and we learn to appreciate each other's differences of opinions," she said. "This is a very sociable class and they're very, very interested in what's happening currently. And for a second-grade group of children, I feel that's exceptional."

Ms. Martinez said children like the ones in her class this year have made teaching a rewarding career.

"I don't get tired of being in the classroom," she said. "I do get tired of the ups and downs that come along with the extra things ... that are mandated and out of our control. It's a whole different world when you're in here in the classroom just teaching."

She said she sees her role as an important one.

LaRouche associate calls for $26 per barrel floor price

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Harley Schlanger, a Democratic candidate for U.S. Senator, Thursday called for a $26 per barrel floor price for imported oil, saying Congress' failure to act on his proposal would send the U.S. economy into a depression.

Schlanger is running for the Democratic nomination against former Fort Worth Mayor and State Sen. Hugh Parmer. The winner will go on to face incumbent Republican Sen. Phil Gramm in the November general election.

Schlanger, who was in Midland Thursday, blasted the Reagan/Bush administrations for what he called their "failure to protect American oil and gas interests."

"The domestic oil industry was crushed during the 1980s, due to the phony 'free market' ideology of Reagan/Bush, and my opponent, Sen. Gramm," he said, quoting American Petroleum Institute figures that show a 12.8 percent drop in well completions during 1989.

"Even with the recent slight price increase, there is no relief in sight," he added.

Schlanger, who has been an associate of convicted felon Lyndon LaRouche since 1973, has coordinated the activities of the LaRouche Democrats in Texas since 1980.

He ran in the Democratic primary for U.S. Senate in 1984; and received more than 26 percent of the vote in the Democratic primary race for the 8th Congressional District in 1986.

Since 1981, he has been the Houston bureau chief of the Executive Intelligence Review, a political/financial weekly magazine.

If elected, Schlanger said he would call for an oil import tariff of $26 per barrel, prohibiting oil from entering the country below that price.

He said the $26 per barrel figure represents what might be called a "parity" price — one that would cover the minimal cost of production in the short term, plus a margin to guarantee new oil exploration and well development.

"Without this measure, the U.S. oil industry is doomed," he said.

In other remarks, Schlanger labeled the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction legislation a "failure."

"There has been no recovery; the budget is far from balanced and the

Eddie Tucker sentenced to life in stabbing death

EDITOR'S NOTE: In some editions of Thursday's Reporter-Telegram a story stated that Tony Tucker Jr., of Midland, was found guilty of murder and sentenced to life in prison. The story should have read "Eddie Tucker." In addition, details in the story concerning the case itself were incorrect and pertained to a different incident from the one in which Eddie Tucker was charged and convicted. The correct story appears here.

Staff Report

Accused killer Edward Rodriguez "Eddie" Tucker was sentenced Wednesday to life in prison in connection with the stabbing death of 22-year-old Jesse Padilla of Midland.

The sentence was handed down in 142nd State District Court, ending the murder trial. Two other men are still awaiting trial in connection with that killing.

According to authorities, Padilla and two other men were at Red's Drive-In, 1807 E. Front St., during the early morning hours of Oct. 6, 1989, when Tucker and some friends entered the business and asked the men to step outside. When they did, Padilla and his companions were attacked and stabbed.

Padilla died later at Midland Memorial Hospital. He had been stabbed twice, once in the front of the neck and once in the back.

Two of Padilla's friends, Gilbert Perez of Odessa and Jesse Rodriquez of Stanton, also were stabbed during the brawl, which took place outside the business.

According to authorities, Tucker had been released 28 days earlier from the Texas Department of Corrections — where he was serving a 10-year-sentence for voluntary manslaughter with a deadly weapon — prior to the incident.

Tucker began serving that sentence on Sept. 20, 1985.

Lawman marshals humor to create disorder in the court

PECOS — Steve Balog is the law, at least a witty bit of it, west of the Pecos. It's wilderness country.

Todd

He's a marshal, a federal deputy marshal endowed with a generous portion of humor, a serious side that enables him to shackle prisoners but laugh with them over glimmers of ironies. He takes with utmost earnestness his role of protecting judges, jurors, witnesses and anybody else, including himself, from the vileness of the dark side of human nature.

And Balog and the other marshals handle a lot of high- and low-dollar lawbreakers west of the Pecos.

He's also a joke — part of a comedy routine, both plotted and extemporaneous, acted out by the big federal judge, Lucius Desha Bunton III, the real wit of the West Texas judiciary, and Gail Boggs, another deputy marshal whose humor even outwits himself.

"Most of the time, Gail and I are the straight men, generally the objects of the judge's sense of humor, which we don't mind at all," Balog reflected. "Sometimes we turn the tables on him. And he enjoys that just as much."

The judge, for example, will tell the jurors to rap sharply and loudly on their closed door. The reason: to awaken the napping marshal.

And once, Balog forgot and wore his novelty watch, which plays "The Yellow Rose of Texas," to court. It went off on the hour precisely in a pause during the judge's instructions to the jurors.

Balog, fumbling, couldn't find the button to turn off the tune.

"It was a panic situation. You could hear that watch throughout the entire courtroom. Of course, everybody looks over toward me."

The marshal looked at the judge, who can be stern if he so desires.

"I was just grinning and looking at him, and I was trying to back off," Balog said.

After the tune was over, the judge, too, grinned.

"See there," the black-robed jurist told the jurors. "Isn't that nice. Marshal Balog has got a brand-new watch that plays "The Yellow Rose of Texas," and he wanted every one of us to hear that, because that's going to be the last time he wears it in here. And he wanted you to hear it now."

Last Halloween, Balog turned clown and surprised the judge, who has a habit, a penchant, for clowning around, especially on Halloween Day, to entertain the jurors.

Judges aren't solemn all of the time.

Traditionally, Bunton puts on his "dirty old man's mask," stands at his bench and awaits arrival of the jurors and the escorting marshal.

"It's real wrinkly," Balog said, "and it's got this dirty old man's grin on it."

When the jurors, usually in domino fashion, spot the masked judge, "they just about fall out," Balog said. "He stands there, taking it all in and wishes them a happy Halloween and everything."

Last Halloween, the marshal thought he would stand out. So, he dolled up his face like a clown — big red, oversized ears, black derby too big for his head, and a mile-long polka-dot tie.

He fell in behind the jurors, who were unaware of his prank, and followed them to the jury box.

The judge, doing his dirty-old-man routine, was in place.

At first, the jurors spied the masked, black-robed judge.

"They are laughing and hollering."

Then, the judge spotted Balog, the clown.

"And, of course, he just about cracks up — can't really tell it's me." (Later, though, the judge said the costume greatly enhanced Balog's looks.)

One by one, the jurors spied the clown and "cracked up."

And the judge closed out the routine.

"I was held in contempt of Halloween," Balog said proudly.

Balog is a mess.

Behind his desk, he plays the gun-toting white-collar fellow.

Balog's desk is grossly littered, stacked, seemingly haphazardly, with stuff, not junk, all official looking.

A nearby sign explains, in a reverse sense, why: "A clean desk is a sign of a sick mind."

Across from his desk is a picture of his, and many a lawman's, hero: John Wayne.

Balog identifies with the late actor, who played a one-eyed, paunchy, "old fat man," a U.S. marshal, in the Western film "True Grit."

"I can kind of relate to Mr. John Wayne," Balog laughed.

But Balog is not exactly old — not at 53.

Still, in a couple of years, he will bail out of marshaling. Boggs is going to pull the rip cord this year. And the judge will be hard pressed to come up with another slap-stick routine.

Another deputy U.S. marshal, Carlos Trevizo, is the Boggs-Balog "straight man."

"Carlos picks up all the things we let fall through the cracks — makes sure he keeps us straight," Balog said. "Carlos is a more serious individual." So is another deputy marshal, Sandy Kelly, who works with Balog out of Pecos. "Sandy is out here to make sure that I stay straight and don't let any of these prisoners fall through the cracks," Balog quipped.

The comedy routine of the judge and the marshals is designed to bring some levity into a somber and sober courtroom atmosphere mainly for the benefit of the jurors. It relaxes them and makes their job, as serious as it is, less tedious.

During the years, old-timers Balog and Boggs have developed rapport not only with the judge, the jurors, lawyers and other courtroom folks but with the "bad guys" — those prisoners. The marshals handcuff the prisoners and shackle them with leg-irons on their trips from jail to courtroom and to the federal hotel — prison.

"We generally don't know who they are," Balog said of the prisoners. "But my philosophy is this: I find if I treat the prisoners with a little respect and the way I would want to be treated, they respond. I've found it to be very, very effective."

Most of the prisoners and pretrial detainees the West Texas marshals haul around are either illegal aliens or smugglers of contraband, including marijuana and cocaine. They are considered the nonviolent sorts.

"From the time of their arrest, this (under custody of the deputy marshals) was the first time anybody really treated them with what they felt was respect," Balog said.

"I always try to get them on the phone to call their folks: their mother, their dad, their wife, or whatever. I've found that if you treat these people with respect, try to help them out, they will show you the same respect by cooperating with you, doing what you tell them to do."

Many of the prisoners have told Boggs and Balog that they "didn't know what was going to happen to them. They were scared and frightened. They didn't know what to say, afraid to ask for anything." With the marshals, they relax and tone down.

All the while, Balog noted, "the main thing is the safety and security of the individual prisoners and, of course, yourself, and the public."

In his Pecos office is a poster, quoting George Maledon, executioner for "the hanging judge," Isaac Parker, and highlighted with this motto: "Let no guilty man escape."

That's serious business.

The clowning around, the levity, is just the sideshow to the main attraction: the heavy-duty courtroom fare.

The vast Pecos area, which Balog considers "the wilderness" of West Texas, is pretty well inundated with drug cases and takes in much of the Texas-Mexico Rio Grande border.

"Being we are in the wilderness, we don't get the news coverage like the big cities (Midland and Odessa) do," Balog said flatly.

Some months back, a fellow was arrested in the 'Pecos wilderness' for hauling 1,006 pounds of cocaine, "which is a multi-multi-million-dollar load," Balog said.

Shortly afterward, in the Midland-Odessa area, the news media covered another story about "one of the biggest drug busts" in years. It involved a relatively paltry 25 pounds of cocaine, worth a bundle but nothing like a thousands pounds of the drug.

"We (marshals) all looked at each other," Balog said. "It was kind of funny to us."

But it was nothing to clown around about.

"If we caught one (outlaw) out here with 25 pounds of cocaine," Balog reckoned and smiled, "we would either have to turn him loose or charge him with a misdemeanor."

Man shoots estranged wife, daughter

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin man shot his estranged wife and pregnant 14-year-old daughter, then killed himself — the night after he apparently saw a movie about a man who sought revenge for his wife's infidelity, police said.

Police said Bartolo Botello Jr., 33, shot himself in the head Thursday seconds after wounding his wife, Judy Botello, 31, and their daughter, Vera Botello, who police said is three months pregnant.

The shootings came a day after Judy Botello had talked to police about seeking a protective order against her husband. Police said she had made an appointment for next Tuesday with the Travis County attorney's office to discuss seeking the court action.

Mrs. Botello told officers that her estranged husband had threatened violence against the woman and her family for leaving him, according to police Sgt. Michael Huckabay.

The teen-ager was unconscious and listed in critical condition late Thursday with a gunshot wound to the back of her head at Brackenridge Hospital. Her mother was in fair condition with a wound to her left hand and left thigh.

"It was one of those domestic (cases) that culminated in somebody getting killed," said Huckabay. "He wanted her back, and she didn't want to go back."

The Botellos separated last week, and Bartolo Botello bought the .25-caliber handgun used in the shootings about 3 p.m. Wednesday at a South Austin pawnshop.

College president drew on talent to fund doctorate

By LYN BLACKMON

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Carl "Cheesie" Nelson probably threw away 1,000 cartoons before he found out he could sell them.

The Texarkana College president began "doodling" as soon as he could hold a pencil, and his school papers always had drawings in the margins.

But it wasn't until he really needed money to get his doctorate that he found out those doodles could be turned into dollars.

That was 25 years ago. Now, cartooning is a hobby and college administration is his business.

The valuable lessons he learned along the way are available to those who might want to draw cartoons.

"I started doing sports cartoons — predictions on the winners in the Southwest (football) Conference," Nelson said. "I would draw the mascot of a team pounding or bashing the one I thought would lose. I took them to J.Q. Mahaffey, who was the editor of the Texarkana Gazette in 1965, and he liked them so much he told me he would pay top dollar."

Nelson's jubilation and visions of paying his way through the University of Arkansas doctoral program were soon dashed. Top dollar was $7.50. That was for one a week, hardly enough to support his family, much less pay for his education.

Mahaffey told Nelson, "That's more than I pay for 'Li'l Abner.' I pay $3 a week for it and get more strips along with it. The only way to make any money is to get syndicated."

So the young cartoonist took his drawings and hit the road, peddling them to every newspaper in the area. He syndicated himself and was bought by 27 papers. That netted him $125 a week, which in 1965-dollars was enough to get him into college.

But that wasn't all. At Arkansas, he was hired to do more cartoons of football players.

"I got to be the world's foremost hog-drawer, and I was able to make enough to get my doctorate," he said. "I drew predictions of Arkansas college and high school football games. Then Arkansas Alumni asked me to draw the University's Old Main building for their Christmas card. After that, I was asked to do the Student Center and eventually I did every building on campus."

Nelson's son, Clay, who is also called "Cheesie," is at Arkansas now. He sent back the class schedule booklet and on the cover was a drawing of one of the buildings signed by Carl Nelson, as Nelson signs his drawings. The 25-year-old drawing is still used by the University.

Texarkana College President Carl Nelson poses recently with some of his cartoons. About 25 years ago, when he needed money to fund his doctorate, Nelson syndicated his cartoons himself.

AP Laserphoto

After earning his doctorate, Nelson became dean of El Centro College in Dallas. There he met an idol, cartoonist Bill Maclanahan, who drew for The Dallas Morning News.

"I had collected all of his work," Nelson said. "I didn't know anything about technique when I started drawing, and I had written him a letter asking how he got his great shadings.

"I was doing pen-and-ink drawings using cross hatching. The pen made all of the lines the same thickness. He had written me a three-page, single-spaced, typed letter explaining what I needed to know. He had advised me to use a brush instead of a pen, and practice until I could vary the width of the lines effectively."

Maclanahan had written of how he used a slanted board with a roughness that, when he drew, automatically made the dappling that created shading. Nelson had learned to use a brush and, with India ink, rough paper and a chemical that worked magic on his drawings, his cartoons had become more professional looking and took less time.

The interest of the veteran cartoonist for his pupil continued, and when Maclanahan retired, Nelson was offered the job at The Dallas Morning News. He was tempted, he said, but he liked being with people, and cartooning is a lonely profession.

"I knew I could make a living at cartooning, but I wanted to be a college administrator," he said. "Now I draw for fun. Each year I make a new Christmas card and mail it to 500 people. I also do birthday cards and keep a list of people's birthdays and send them one."

Drawing for a newspaper would reach thousands more, but Nelson is happy drawing for people he knows in the town where he was born and brought up.

He became president of Texarkana College in 1975.

"I think the reason I still like to draw is that it is so different from my job. As college president, I have to wait for years to see the results of my work. It is long-term satisfaction, while spending four or five hours putting ink on paper is immediate gratification."

Hale Center man provides heart for volunteer emergency service

By NICKI B. LOGAN

HALE CENTER (AP) — Although he denies it, his fellow volunteers say Sherril Rigsby is the driving force behind their town's emergency medical service, which has two "almost paid for" ambulances.

"I was just one of the organizers," Rigsby, 49, says. "Bill Freeman really had the leading role in getting us started. And Hershel Bell, Keith Braesher, ElWanda Borchardt ... they all worked hard."

But his co-volunteers claim that Rigsby — a medical and X-ray technician at Hi-Plains Hospital and a city councilman in this town of 2,100 about 35 miles north of Lubbock — has been the driving force behind the organization since its inception in 17 years ago.

Rigsby encourages new volunteers to take required training and assists them in their work, his friends say.

They say he has been instrumental in the continuity of the program, planning schedules, keeping current on state regulations and paperwork and raising funds to provide valuable equipment.

Rigsby says the personal rewards of emergency service were brought home to him several years ago when a friend's father suffered a heart attack in the local bank.

"There were two EMS volunteers within a block of the bank when the emergency call went out that a man was down in the bank.

"I was across the street and Marty Crowder was a block away and got there about the same time I did.

"DARRELL HUNT, who was working at the bank at the time, was in the process of initiating CPR when we arrived. There were no vital signs when we began working on him," Rigsby recalled.

"He survived. At the hospital, his son came up to me, grabbed my hand, and all he could say through his tears was 'Thanks.' That was enough. That makes it all worthwhile."

Rigsby says all his fellow volunteers are the unsung heroes of the nation, providing care and services for small communities like Hale Center that otherwise would be without fire and emergency services.

"We averaged 165 calls, both emergency and non-emergency, last year. Two state-certified volunteers are always on call, with extras available if needed. All together, we have nine EMS personnel working with us now," he said.

"We cover an area almost as large as Plainview's EMS, ranging from about six miles north, seven south, and to the county lines on the east and west." Plainview is a city about 10 times the size of Hale Center, located 12 miles to the north, about halfway between Lubbock and Amarillo.

The Hale Center service was established in 1973 when the state mandated that volunteers have a stated number of EMS training hours, plus an ambulance stocked with expensive emergency equipment. Before that, ambulance service was provided as a courtesy by a local funeral home.

"The cost of supplying a paid staff around the clock would have been prohibitive, so we organized and started to raise money for a volunteer service," he said.

THE HALE CENTER service now owns two emergency vehicles, one of which is a modular ambulance unit purchased in 1985 at a cost of $47,000.

"We almost have it paid for," Rigsby points out with pride. "Every penny came from donations and funds raised by the EMS and the community."

Money has been raised in traditional small-town ways with barbecue and hamburger suppers. And a cotton trailer was parked next to the EMS building to collect aluminum cans to sell for the ambulance fund.

When they are not fund-raising, the volunteers work hard on their emergency skills. "We are recertified every three years," he said.

A member of the executive board of South Plains Emergency Medical Services, affiliated with the South Plains Association of Governments, Rigsby has taught courses and gives guest lectures on his specialty — abdominal and chest injuries.

Rigsby himself no longer makes regular emergency runs with the ambulance, but he is available if extra help is needed. "I keep my walkie-talkie (for voice communication) here on the counter at work and if they need me, I can be on my way in a few minutes."

Calls are dispatched from the hospital where he works.

"EMS owns the paging system, but the hospital provides the staffing for calls," he said.

Suspect in attempted rape sought

Staff Report

Police say they have no suspect in the attempted rape of a 21-year-old Midland woman this morning at the Santa Fe Apartments, 5009 Rio Grande.

The woman told police that she was awakened shortly after 1:30 a.m. and found the man lying on the floor beside her bed. The man grabbed her and forced her to the floor when she jumped from bed and tried to run toward the bedroom door, according to the report.

Police said the woman was able to talk the man out of committing the rape. He then told her to go into the kitchen and wait until he left the apartment.

According to the report, the man walked out of the apartment with about $10 cash.

The suspect — a black man believed to be in his mid-20s, about 5 feet, 9 inches tall with a thin build — was last seen wearing a blue muscle shirt with white horizontal stripes and blue jeans, police said.

TEACHER

"The concepts they are being taught in math now will be useful to them when they take algebra or calculus," she said. "It is the same thing with reading and with language."

If the education process is like ascending a staircase, she said, each step on the way to the top is as important as graduation.

"We are one of the lower grades and we are laying the foundation for what is coming in the future," she said.

Ms. Martinez thinks she's doing a decent job of building that foundation.

"I try to meet each child's needs and show them that every child can learn," she said. "It may not be at the same speed ... but they all can learn and they all are special."

School teaches craft of horseshoeing

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — Sparks fly while Reggie Kester hammers a length of red-hot iron just out of the forge, and gradually the metal takes the shape of a horseshoe.

Kester works in much the same way as craftsmen have for hundreds of years, using forge, anvil and hammer. His rough hands speak of the 30-odd years he has spent in the trade.

But this isn't the village smithy. Kester and his wife, Marcella, run the Oklahoma State Horseshoeing School, where they teach the craft of the farrier, not blacksmithing.

People hoping to enter what can be a lucrative trade come to the school from around the world.

"I know guys that are making $150,000 shoeing horses," Kester says. But he admits most make between $20,000 and $40,000 a year.

They've have had students from Germany, Sweden, Australia, Canada, Ireland, Israel and Switzerland. The six-week course costs $2,450 and is offered six times a year.

Kester credits trade advertising and word-of-mouth for the school's wide appeal. All kinds sign up for the Kesters' courses.

"Most of the people we have are people who have experience with horses," Kester says. But he adds: "We have people come through here who know nothing about horses except what they look like."

Kester says that after his course, they'll all be able to shoe a horse and make a horseshoe from scratch.

"Sometimes you just can't buy what you need," Kester says. "So you make it."

He says he learned the trade of a farrier as he teaches it: in school.

"I'm a journeyman, certified horseshoer" he said. "I've had a lot of experience, and I've been in the teaching business for 15, 16 years.

"I went to school for it in '66. I thought I knew something until I went to school and met people who did."

Kester says there's a lot to being a farrier, and it takes instruction and practice. He says an unskilled person who shoes a horse runs the risk of crippling the animal.

His students don't spend all their time at the anvil. He's got a textbook, a thick volume called "The Principles of Horseshoeing II," which contains information about anatomy, metallurgy and history.

As long as there are horses, there will be a need for people to shoe them, but Kester says the farrier's business requires individuals to go out and find clients.

"You don't go get a job" just out of school, he says. "You go get a clientele. It's an entrepreneurial deal."

In some ways, Kester says, he's an equine podiatrist. But he's not a blacksmith.

"I call myself a horseshoer ... and that's what I am."

Cows may be bred to give low-fat milk

Associated Press

"You're sending too much butterfat to market because that's what we're still paying you to do," Gary Hanman, CEO at Mid-American Dairymen Inc., Springfield, Mo., told a group of dairy producers recently.

"We should do a turnaround and reward dairymen for such things as protein or the entire nonfat portion of milk."

According to Successful Farming magazine, these signals keep growing stronger. Right now butter is the culprit in Commodity Credit Corp. warehouse storage. Consumers at home are eating up the earlier surplus amount of cheese, and large shipments of nonfat dry milk powder are now entering overseas markets.

"We need to implement a multiple component pricing plan," Hanman states. "Then producers would be paid less for fat and more for producing protein and other solids that are nonfat."

Hanman said a change in pricing structure with less emphasis on fat is inevitable and that dairy farmers should get ready for the change.

"When your marketer offers a pricing plan based on solids nonfat, you'll need to be ready with the feeding and breeding program geared to developing cows that produce low-fat, high-protein milk."

Now's time to prepare for flowers, vegetables

Garden check list for March:

■ Prepare beds for planting flowers and vegetables. You may want to consider renting or buying a tiller to speed up the process, but a strong back and a garden fork will still do an excellent job.

Kiker

■ For every 100 square feet of bed area, work in a several-inch layer of either compost, pine bark or sphagnum peat moss, plus five pounds of balanced fertilizer.

■ Check with your county agent for the average last killing freeze date. Killing freezes can occur after this date, but seldom do.

■ Pruning of evergreens and summer flowering trees and shrubs should be completed in early March. Prune spring flowering trees and shrubs as soon as they finish blooming.

■ Select and order caladium tubers as well as geranium and coleus plants for late April and early May planting. Do not plant caladiums until soil temperature reaches 70 degrees.

■ As camellia and azalea plants finish blooming, fertilize them with three pounds of azalea-camellia fertilizer per 100 square feet of bed area. Check mulch on azalea and camellia beds and add where needed.

■ Dig and divide summer and fall flowering perennials just before they initiate their spring growth.

Corpus Christi offers scholarships to five seniors who pass drug test

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A graduating senior from each of the five Corpus Christi high schools will receive a college scholarship if they can pass a drug test, a South Texas Education Fund official says.

The scholarship, established by the Corpus Christi Principals' and Supervisors' Association in partnership with the South Texas Education Fund, will be offered to five graduating seniors who are continuing their education at the university level, Walt Applegate, executive director of the education fund, said Thursday

Applegate said a senior from each of the five schools will receive $400 this year. He said he hopes to expand the program in coming years.

"We think people who stay off drugs should get some attention rather than all the attention going to people who are on drugs," said Applegate, a retired business and military man who serves as business administrator at First Christian Church.

"We want them to set the path for the people coming behind them ... to say, 'See all the good things that can happen to you if you stay off drugs?' " Applegate said.

Bill Hamrick, president of the Principals' and Supervisors' Association and principal at Ray High School, said Applegate approached him with the idea of the drug-free scholarships. In this first year, the school administrators' group and South Texas Education Fund each supplied $1,000 to the scholarship fund.

"We'll probably select the outstanding senior and if he's willing to submit to a drug test, he'll get the scholarship," Hamrick said. "You can't get this scholarship if you can't pass a drug test."

"Now, if every other scholarship was given with that stipulation, then I think you might have something," Hamrick added.

A staff member at the Coastal Bend Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse said tying a scholarship to a one-time drug test won't guarantee a drug-free student.

"There's a lot more to being clean than a drug test," said Carla Beck, education specialist. "Leading a life that's clean and sober is an inside job ... People who get clean and sober have to do it for themselves, not for their parents or their teachers or a scholarship."

Della Berlanga, coordinator of the Corpus Christi school district's office of counseling and guidance services, called the scholarship a positive move, but added that students' reactions to it likely would be mixed.

"You're going to have some of those who feel it's an invasion of privacy," she said. "I'm wondering myself how our students will respond to this."

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1990 Regional Spelling Bee March 31 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through March 30. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

kăb´rē-ə-lā´

cabriolet (noun) — In the 19th century, gentlemen were frequently seen driving around town in light, one-horse carriages that had two wheels, a single seat, and a small hood to protect the driver from the weather. Today the word is used to describe fast, high-powered convertible sports cars that have one or two seats. The word is derived from the French word, "cabriole," which means to leap, and an earlier Latin word meaning goat.

Dallas researchers uncover diabetes clue

DALLAS (AP) — A new clue that could lead to earlier detection and treatment of juvenile-onset diabetes has been uncovered by Dallas researchers, according to a report published Thursday.

Findings by doctors at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center and the Dallas Veterans Administration Medical Center show that a molecule on special cells in the pancreas begin development of the disease.

After three years of research, scientists reported in the New England Journal of Medicine that killer antibodies appear to interfere with the ability of insulin-producing cells to absorb glucose.

"The whole point of this study is — the hope is — there will be a predictive test," Dr. Roger Unger, director of Southwestern's Center for Diabetes Research and the journal article's co-author, said.

"In order to prevent it, you have to have good predictive tests."

Doctors estimate that juvenile-onset diabetes affects one in 10 of the country's 6.5 million diagnosed diabetics. The ailment is also called insulin-dependent diabetes since victims require daily insulin injections.

Diabetes and its complications, which include heart disease and strokes, will claim an estimated 200,000 lives in the United States this year.

By the time doctors diagnose the disease, it's usually too late because the patient's immune system already has destroyed most of the cells which produce insulin, the substance that offsets sugars or glucose the body gets from food.

With juvenile-onset diabetes, 90 percent of the beta cells, as they are called, regulating sugar metabolism have been destroyed.

"The question now is what does the immune system recognize on these cells?" said Dr. John "Wick" Johnson, assistant professor of internal medicine at Southwestern.

Research by scientists at Southwestern and the VA hospital has concerned aspects of the red flag, or antigen, on the surface of the beta cells that triggers the immune system's assault.

Paris journals carry philatelist back to Texas' past

PARIS, Texas (AP) — Dennis Schmidt didn't know when he moved to this northeast Texas city a few years ago that its history soon would figure prominently in his hobby of stamp collecting.

It began when Schmidt saw an ad in an auction catalog offering a selection of old-time Texas stamp journals. He wanted to get a little more involved in Texas postal history, so he sent in a bid.

He received some small, slightly yellowed copies of The Texas Philatelic Journal. The magazines clearly showed they had been published in Paris, and that the town supported a flourishing community of collectors and dealers.

"I realized when I got them, it's Paris, Texas," he said. "I just couldn't believe it."

The journals contain discussions of recent postal news, stamp issues, exhibitions, clubs and just about anything of interest to philatelists of the time.

They also carry advertisements for Paris stamp dealers, such as the Paul Stamp Co. or the Eureka Stamp Co., as well as national dealers in stamps and hobbyists supplies.

"People were advertising...the very same things people are advertising today," said Schmidt. "They're advertising for confederate stamps, or stamps from a time period a couple of decades past..."

Through later research, Schmidt found there were three journals published in Paris: The Texas Philatelist, first printed in November of 1886; The Texas Philatelic Journal, published first in August of 1887; and another Texas Philatelic Journal, published about the same time.

The journals had essentially the same editors, he said. The collectors who began them, young men in their late teens and early 20s, were friends and partners.

Some would later become well-known in the area, such as Edgar T. Neville, editor of the first journal. His brother was A.W. Neville, formerly of the Paris News and a chronicler of the area's history. Journals of this kind were begun all over the country in that time period — stamp collecting was a new hobby, as the first U.S. stamps had been printed about 40 years earlier — but they usually survived for only a few issues, making them collector's items.

"From what I can gather, in that part of the century...stamp journals would blossom, last for six months and die," Schmidt said.

The Paris journals are fascinating, he said, but remain secondary to his own stamp collecting specialty: stamps, envelopes or stationery from U.S. government departments, such as the Department of War, State, Navy or others.

Schmidt said there are advertisements in the journals for precisely those items he collects — at turn-of-the-century prices. He often wonders what might have happened to the "Department Sets" sold to area collectors in the late 1800s, and whether they are lying in someone's attic, waiting to be found.

But perhaps most interesting about the whole experience, said Schmidt, is a notice in one of the journals heralding the first meeting of a Paris Stamp Club, in January of 1887.

Games people play really have changed

By MARK KING

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — Whatever happened to the Wheel-O? Or pogo sticks, yo-yos, tops, marbles, Lincoln Logs, erector sets, Tinker Toys, Pick-up Sticks, Slinkies, and that old rainy day thriller Parcheesi?

Those toys belonged to a different generation from today's youngsters — a generation that probably didn't spend as much time in front of the television — or hunched over the controls of a video game.

Video games weren't around then, but doll houses, Superballs and BB guns were.

Kids today play with things like Nintendo's Game Boy (the latest rage in hand-held video games). With some slight modifications, you could probably program it for automatic pilot duty on interstellar space missions.

Nadine Cawthorn, who has been in the five-and-dime business for more than 48 years, talked about some of the toys one can't find anymore.

Mrs. Cawthorn worked 42 years with Duke and Ayers in downtown Sulphur Springs, until Perry Bros. bought them out. She then managed the Perry Bros. Sulphur Springs store for six years. Mrs. Cawthorn still occasionally works for other Perry Bros. stores and she has seen a lot of toys come and go; and a lot of kids grow up.

Several decades ago, before cars were being made of plastic, things were made differently. "Back then it was all metal toys and tractors were the big thing," Mrs. Cawthorn said. "Back in the 40s every little boy had to have a little Ford tractor.

"Now children have some of the crudest, wildest-looking toys," she said. "All of those space generator things...I'd be scared to let my children play with them."

But things are safer (?) now. Plastic toys don't come with sharp edges like the metal toys used to. And things that were really sharp, like knives, can't be found in the toy department anymore.

What you can find, though is plastic things that look sharp, like the Battle Beasts Warrior Weapons; "Battle for the fun of it." Or you can buy cute things like the Commando Forces Uzi; "First to protect." Do mercenary magazines have things like that for adults? You bet they do.

Some toys that were never sharp, but have faded away nonetheless, were things like paper doll sets, doll beds and assorted doll house accessories.

"We haven't had doll beds down at Perry Brothers in a long time," Mrs. Cawthorn said. "I still think people could sell those little wooden dressers."

Another type of wooden toy that is hard to find now is the series of musical instruments that stores once stocked.

"The last year that I worked at Perry's we were talking about how we couldn't get the little wooden guitars any more," Mrs. Cawthorn said. "They were real pretty...I think they'll come back."

Stores also stocked metal horns and drums at one time. Now all the musical toys are plastic. The little guitars sound like bags of marshmallows with rubber bands wrapped around them when you pluck the strings.

And the old thrillers Parcheesi and Chinese Checkers are virtually unknown now, Mrs. Cawthorn said. "Chinese Checkers — boy, they were a hot thing back then."

Now you can pick up a copy of the board games Solarquest: The Space-age Real Estate Game, or Trivial Pursuit: The Genius Edition.

Give me "A Million Bucks" in play money any day. You don't have to be a genius with "A Million Bucks" in your pocket. You can hire a genius who will probably tell you that investing in one of Saturn's moons is the best way to manage your money.

Some of the toys that have transcended the generation gap, and can still be found in Perry's, are things like Bang Caps, with the cowboy firing two six-shooters on the end of the box; little rubber monsters and rubber balls; the paddle ball (looking, sadly, smaller and cheaper), the Duncan Yo-Yo; slingshots (plastic and metal now); checkers; and Milton Bradley's Operation Skill Game "Where You're the Doctor."

Bubble kits, tea sets, jump ropes and packages of plastic cowboys and Indians are still there, too. The little plastic, noise-making lawn mower sits quietly on a shelf, waiting for a vigorous child to run around the house with it, driving a poor parent crazy.

"Toys are a mystery," Anita Penner, a Perry clerk, said. "You never know what kids want."

Bush wins high marks from Texas

By Hearst News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — The afterglow of Ronald Reagan's presidency and recent international events are bathing President Bush in the warm light of favorable public opinion in Texas.

But Republican Gov. Bill Clements has been left out in the cold.

The Texas Poll, conducted for Harte-Hanks Communications by the Public Policy Resources Laboratory at Texas A&M University, gives Bush a 73 percent favorable rating, a jump of 23 percent from winter. Twenty-five percent disapproved of his job in office and 3 percent were undecided.

Reagan, considered one of the best-loved chief executives, had a 65 percent favorable rating among Lone Star residents.

The telephone poll of 1,006 adult Texans, conducted between Jan. 27 and Feb. 8, showed Clements still suffering from the bad public image he has been unable to shake for the past three years.

"Bush's experience in the international arena and his knowledge of world leaders give him the tools to be ... what we need. He is simply the right man at the right time."

—Fred Meyer, Texas Republican Party Chair

Clements received a 53 percent unfavorable rating and a 36 favorable rating. Twelve percent of those quizzed were undecided.

"The governor is not, has never been and never will be the warm, cuddly type," added State Republican Chairman Fred Meyer. "He is a hard-nosed decision-maker and he calls them as he sees them."

Meyer said Bush's popularity underscores the fact that Bush is "exactly the leader we really need.

"Bush's experience in the international arena and his knowledge of world leaders give him the tools to be precisely what we need. He is simply the right man at the right time."

But Ed Martin, director of the Texas Democratic Party, had a different interpretation.

"George Bush has been the beneficiary of a whole lot of lucky breaks around the world that he really doesn't have anything to do with, like the democratization of Eastern Europe," Martin said.

"But actually, he hasn't really done anything.

Arco head sees lingering gas prices

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Growing demand will continue to make for stable and improving oil prices, but natural gas prices will continue to linger behind oil prices, predicts Arco President Jim Middleton.

Speaking to the Permian Basin Recovery Conference in Midland today, Middleton said while much of the hope for a rapid recovery of the oil industry has been placed on the promise of higher natural gas prices, gas prices probably will not reach parity with oil prices anytime soon.

"We are not going to run our business on the promise of improved natural gas prices," says Middleton, "because it looks like natural gas prices will be chasing oil prices for some time to come." He said gas prices would probably never catch up to oil prices, except during winter peaks and crises, and would never out run oil prices.

"Natural gas has never reached parity with oil prices in the entire history of the industry," noted the Arco executive, who called the high natural gas prices of the early eighties an aberration brought about by regulation.

"Currently 30 percent of the natural gas flowing is still controlled low priced gas, back in the early eighties there was a great deal more natural gas under price controls," notes Middleton.

He predicted that the only way natural gas prices could soar would be if Congress mandated the use of compressed natural gas (CNG) or methanol as a transportation fuel. But the feels that would be a mistake.

"Such a move," said Middleton, "would probably bring the nation to its knees. We are now producing 17 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. Can you imagine what it would be like to take that to 35 trillion cubic feet? Natural gas prices would go out of sight."

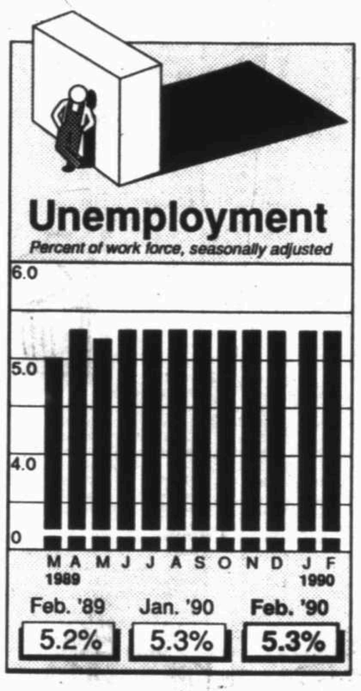

A former project manager for Arco's Prudhoe Bay facilities, Middleton said he was pleased with present

EMPLOYMENT

Jobless rate holds at 5.3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate in February held steady at 5.3 percent for the ninth consecutive month despite the biggest increase in jobs in 20 months, the government said today.

The Labor Department said a survey of employers showed a seasonally-adjusted, non-farm job gain of 372,000, the largest since June 1988. However, the department sharply revised its figure for January to a gain of 110,000, up from an earlier estimate of 275,000.

February marked the first increase in factory jobs in 11 months. Manufacturing payrolls added 90,000 workers.

The department cautioned that the job gain, as measured by its survey of employers, was heavily influenced by temporary factors and probably overstates the underlying strength of the economy.

About all of the manufacturing gain was attributed to the return of auto workers after a temporary layoff in January. Factory employment elsewhere was lackluster.

Construction payrolls swelled by 60,000 jobs, the result of unusually mild weather for most of February.

A separate survey of households showed a seasonally adjusted civilian jobless rate of 5.3 percent. The unemployment rate for auto workers, which had zoomed to 20 percent in January, fell back to 8 percent last month.

Overall, total civilian employment edged up to 118 million. The jobless numbered 6.6 million, about the same as January.

The average manufacturing work week held steady in February at 40.7 hours. Overtime fell slightly from 3.7 hours to 3.6 hours.

The service sector of the economy added 221,00 jobs, including a gain of 47,000 for health services, 28,000 in government, 17,000 in retail trade and 15,000 in finance real estate and insurance.

Average hourly earnings posted a 0.6 percent rise in February to $9.87, up from $9.52 a year earlier.

Over the rest of this year, many economists forecast a rise in unemployment, but not a big one. The consensus of 51 economists surveyed by the Sedona, Ariz.-based Blue Chip Economic Indicators was for a 5.6 percent rate this year.

That's a shade less optimistic than the Bush administration, which expects a 5.4 percent rate, but in line with Federal Reserve policy-makers, who foresee a rate between 5.5 percent and 5.75 percent.

The Federal Reserve, aiming to reduce inflationary pressures, used relatively high interest rates to hold economic growth to an anemic 0.9 percent in the final three months of last year. But that hasn't been enough to drastically affect the job market.

"What's happening is the growth of the economy has been rapid enough to absorb the new labor supply, but

Texas unemployment surges to 6.4 percent

By JAY JORDEN

DALLAS (AP) — Unemployment in Texas took a big jump last month, with 6.4 percent of residents on jobless rolls, but federal officials said today the increase more accurately reflects the state's labor situation.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics said 545,000 Texans were unemployed in February, compared with 441,000 the previous month, when the rate was 5.2 percent.

The latest figures are a more realistic reflection of this year's trend, said Nic Santangelo, an economist for the labor bureau's regional office in Dallas.

"All along, our employment rate has been in the 6 to 6.5 percent range, and all we are doing is bouncing around it," he said. "Also, the rate seems to concur with manufacturing data."

In February, 7,949,000 Texans had jobs, compared with 7,999,000 in the previous month. The labor bureau said the jobless rate in February 1989 was 6.8 percent, with 569,000 people unemployed, said David Moore of the labor bureau in Washington.

"From the year-ago February figure, we registered a small drop in the number of unemployed and an increase in the number of employed

SPE forms drilling study group

Staff Report

The Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers, has formed its first Drilling Study Group.

The group's first quarterly meeting will be Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Center. The speakers will be Pete Edlund of Arco and Sam Pickett of Mobil, who will discuss horizontal drilling case histories with emphasis on Permian Basin wells.

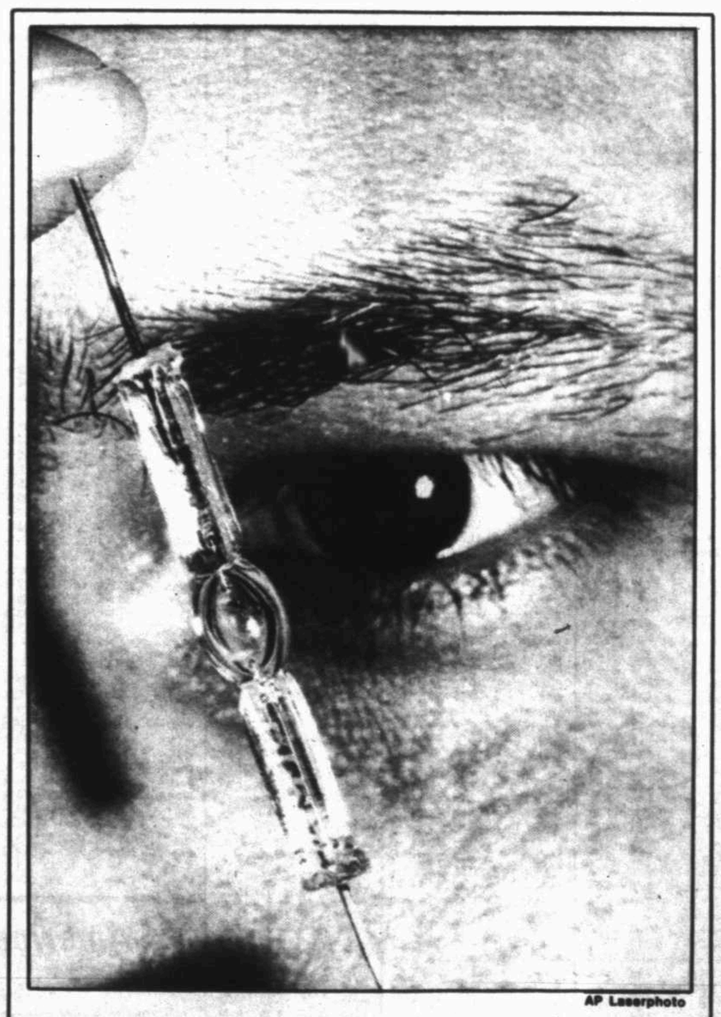

A panel discuss follows, moderated by T.B. O'Brien of O.G. Drilling. Panel members include Joe Willmon, MI Drilling Fluids; Kendall Manning, Smith International; Gene Grimes, Grace Drilling; and Les Sinclair, Meridian Oil.

The new study group was organized by a steering committe, which elected as officers Buddy Barnett, Chevron, chairman; Charlie Chadwick, Exxon, vice chairman; Greg Leyendecker, Union Oil Co. of California, secretary; Mark Rankin, Pool Co., treasurer.

Committee chairmen are Tony Farish, Horizon Mud, and James Bobo, Meridian Oil, arrangements; David Harry, Zirconium Technology Corp., publicity; and Dino Marsili, Chevron, commiteeman-at-large.

The study group's objectives are to provide a forum for the advancement of drilling technology in the Permian Basin.

Those interested in attending next week's luncheon should call 687-7826 or 7688-7889 by Monday for reservations.

Three more banks taken by FDIC

Associated Press

Regulators seized three small Texas banks Thursday, including University National Bank in College Station.

In all cases, the banks were sold and will reopen Friday as branches of the new institutions.

Federal regulators closed University National, citing liberal lending practices and ineffective management. The bank's $42.5 million in deposits will be assumed by First American Bank of Bryan, which will purchase $32.8 million of the failed bank's assets at a discount of $4.9 million.

Federal officials also seized Citizens National Bank in Denton, selling its $18.3 million in deposits to Texas Bank in Weatherford, which will pay $291,500.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. also will advance Texas Bank $10.8 million while keeping Citizens' assets valued at about $11.4 million.

Farmers State Bank in Schulenburg was purchased by First Bank, Navasota, after being shut down by Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth Littlefield.

First Bank will assume about $35.4 million and purchase $29.4 million of Farmers' assets at a discount of $95,000. The FDIC will advance First Bank $6.1 million and keep assets with a book value of $6.1 million.

The failures bring to 14 the number of failed banks in Texas so far this year. Nationally 23 have failed.

Replacement drivers complicate bus strike

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc.'s hiring of replacements for its striking bus drivers shows how management has shifted the rules of labor conflict in the nine years since President Reagan broke a strike by air traffic controllers.

Hiring replacements "is far different from the old strikes we used to have," said Mark Kahn, a labor arbitrator and professor emeritus at Wayne State University in Detroit.

In the past, he said, there has been "a clear-cut understanding that whenever the dispute is ironed out, those workers will go back to work and the company will resume its operations. That tends to create a relatively civilized atmosphere in which answers can be worked out."

The use of replacements could prolong the strike because it "makes it far more difficult for the union to agree to a settlement under which many of its members won't come back to work," Kahn said.

Greyhound said the replacements will keep their jobs regardless of how the strike is settled.

By contrast, to make room for returning union members after a 47-day walkout in 1983, Greyhound — then under a different ownership — fired the replacements it had hired during the strike.

Replacements are "indicative of some of the more bitter, confrontational disputes that we are seeing," said Mike Jadell, an arbitrator and a professor at Georgia State University in Atlanta.

"It's become an additional tool in the arsenal of those employers who feel that they are in adversarial relationships," he said.

Some labor experts trace the confrontational approach to the start of the pro-business Reagan administration and its decision in 1981 to fire striking air traffic controllers and replace them with new hires.

Greyhound's strategy is similar to that of Eastern Airlines, which sought to rebuild as a smaller carrier with lower costs by hiring new, non-union workers after its machinists, pilots and flight attendants struck a year ago.

"We don't have a lot of options," said P. Anthony Lannie, Greyhound's executive vice president and chief negotiator. "This union has us backed into a corner."

Oil futures regaining losses

Oil prices regained some of it's Thursday losses in midmorning trading, up 10 cents to $20.88. Posted price is holding steady at $20.00.

Energy market analysts said earlier weakness in Asia and Europe set a negative tone on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The contract for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the key grade of U.S. crude oil, shed 15 cents to close at $20.78 per 42-gallon barrel after losing 65 cents on Wednesday and Tuesday. Contracts for delivery during May through July finished lower by 16 cents to 18 cents.

The April contract of No. 2 home heating oil dropped 0.85 cent to 55.34 cents a gallon, adding to Wednesday's and Tuesday's losses of 1.03 cents and 0.77 cent, respectively. Contracts for delivery further in the future also declined but more moderately.

Among other refined petroleum products traded on the New York Merc, the April contract of unleaded regular gasoline fell 0.59 cent to 56.14 cents a gallon, bringing its decline over the past three sessions to 3.16 cents. Contracts for delivery during May through July also declined, with the May contract off 0.88 cent.

Randall Rothenberg, a broker at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said selling momentum overseas carried over into U.S. trading.

Dollar mixed, gold lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed in thin European trading this morning, trapped between bullish sentiment and fears of central bank intervention.

The pound fell sharply on rumors that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had resigned. Mrs. Thatcher's Downing Street office denied the rumors. A spokesman, who wasn't identified, in accordance with British practice, called them "utter rubbish."

Gold prices were lower.

Traders predicted the dollar would remain trapped in its current narrow range for the near future and said they doubted the release of U.S. employment figures later in the day would nudge it out of its current levels unless the figures are way outside expectations.

In London, the pound fell to $1.6267 dollars from $1.6427 dollars late Thursday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.32 yen to a closing 151.15 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 151.30 yen.

Bullion dealers said gold trading was thin as the market waited for the release of the U.S. employment figures and further direction from the dollar.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $400.40 a troy ounce, down from $401.95 bid late Thursday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $399.70.

Silver fell in London to a bid price of $5.11 a troy ounce, from Thursday's $5.15.

Market reaches eight-week high

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market climbed to an eight-week high Thursday, resuming its late-winter rally as Wall Street looked ahead to Friday's monthly report on the employment situation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 26.58 points to 2,696.17, its highest close since it stood at 2,760.67 on Jan. 11.

Over the last 11 sessions the average sports a gain of just under 132 points, or 5.1 percent.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by nearly 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 983 up, 507 down and 476 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 170.90 million shares, up from 163.58 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 204.35 million shares.

The Labor Department's report on employment Friday morning promises to give investors one of the first signposts of the economy's performance in February.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Retailers report strong February sales

Several big specialty retailers and department store chains reported strong February sales growth as demand heated up for spring apparel.

The results from the nation's major retailers indicated consumer interest in shopping hasn't cooled despite a lukewarm economy. Among the retailers reporting Thursday were department store groups, specialty clothing chains, discounters and mass merchandisers.

Shearson holders block American Express

NEW YORK (AP) — Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. stockholders have filed about 20 class action lawsuits seeking to block parent American Express Co. from buying all publicly held shares of the firm, alleging the price is too low.

In one lawsuit, shareholders also claim that Primerica Corp. offered to invest $900 million in exchange for a 40 percent stake in Shearson during talks that ended last week without a deal and preceded the stock buyback proposal.

American Express officials said Thursday the suits were "totally without merit." The company announced the stock buyback March 4 as part of a plan to take control of its ailing Wall Street subsidiary.

Campeau refuses to pay $5.2 million

TORONTO (AP) — Campeau Corp., the financially distressed owner of U.S. department stores operating under bankruptcy-court supervision, said it will not pay $5.2 million in interest due on loans from two major lenders.

Failure to pay the interest, due Wednesday under special arrangements made last week postponing earlier payment deadlines, meant Campeau went into default Thursday on loans from Olympia & York Developments Ltd. and Edward J. DeBartolo Corp.

Stock Market Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today in an unenthusiastic response to stronger-than-expected employment news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.53 to 2,689.64 by noontime on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 527 up, 761 down and 513 unchanged.

The Labor Department reported that the civilian unemployment rate held steady at 5.3 percent in February, while nonfarm payroll employment swelled by 372,000 on top of an upward-revised increase in January.

The pace of job growth substantially exceeded advance estimates, suggesting that the economy had regained more momentum than many analysts had thought.

That was interpreted as a plus for the outlook for corporate profits, which have been weak lately.

But brokers said it also raised new worries about upward pressure on interest rates, and seemed to dim whatever chances might have existed for any easing of the Federal Reserve's credit policy.

NCNB fell 2¼ to 41⅜. The company said it might see an increase of as much as 25 percent in its problem loans during the first quarter of the year.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines dropped ⅛ to 106⅛; American Telephone & Telegraph ⅛ to 41⅝; Philip Morris ⅝ to 37⅛, and Texaco ¼ to 59¼.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell .60 to 186.75. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .58 at 360.93.

Volume on the Big Board came to 77.10 million shares at noontime, against 72.98 million at the same point Thursday.

Ups & Downs

No securities trading below $2 or 1000 shares are included.

Net and percentage changes are the difference between the previous closing price and today's noon price.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Higher-yield funds also generate higher risks

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a 32-year-old single woman with a $34,000 annual salary. The only income tax deduction I have is approximately $5,000 of mortgage interest. I am thinking about investing in tax-free mutual funds.

Enclosed is the prospectus for one such fund with three different portfolios — money market, insured and high yield. I have read the prospectus, but I cannot decipher it into: "Is this a good deal for me?" Can you help? Please!

A. With your income and limited deductions, you are in the 28 percent federal income tax bracket. So tax-free income would serve you well.

The mutual fund whose prospectus you sent along invests in debt securities — bonds, notes and such — issued by the state in which you live and political subdivisions of that state. As a result, the interest those "municipal" securities pay is free from both federal and state income tax and so are the dividends the fund pays to you.

The three portfolios are, in effect, separate funds.

The money market portfolio holds short-term securities and uses accounting techniques that keep the value of its shares constant — at $1. That makes it virtually risk free. However, dividends are relatively low.

The insured portfolio holds municipal bonds that are insured against default of interest and/or principal. But that doesn't prevent the market values of the bonds and of the insured portfolio's shares from fluctuating. Dividends are moderately high.

The high yield portfolio holds both high-quality and low-quality municipal bonds, whose values can swing up and down. Dividends are high, reflecting that portfolio's speculative nature.

The insured portfolio seems right for you. It's about midrange in a measurement of safety to risk. Just be sure you understand the insurance is provided by private companies — not the government.

Q. I wish to purchase a $16,000 new car this spring by putting $7,000 down. What is the best way to finance the rest of the cost? Or should I just pay cash for the whole thing? I have $40,000 on deposit in my credit union at 7 percent interest.

A. Pay cash. The interest on an auto loan almost certainly would be higher than 7 percent. So you would lose out by getting a loan rather than using money you have available.

Also, the income tax deduction on auto, credit card and other "personal use" loans has been drastically reduced — to 20 percent for 1989, 10 percent for 1990 and zero in future years. That should lay to rest the canard that it's wise to stay in hock in order to get a tax deduction.

You might be offered a loan at very low interest as a special promotion. Don't take that bait. If you do, you will pay a higher price for the car. And that will more than offset the so-called "savings" in interest.

Q. I am looking for a conservative money market mutual fund from a reputable company with a proven track record. It should invest exclusively in U.S. Treasury and/or federal agency securities and have a stable per share value. It must also be no-load and have low operating expenses? Any suggestions?

A. Many money market mutual funds fit your wish list. All such funds have constant share values and do not charge commissions. Those holding only Treasury and federal agency securities are called "government only" funds.

Look them up in the thick Wiesenberger Investment Company Service you will find in the reference section of big public libraries. To learn each fund's operating expenses, check its expense ratio in the "Panorama" section of that manual.

You'll have a bunch from which to choose. The final decision will have to be yours.

Seven finance ministers plan special meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top finance officials from the world's seven largest industrial countries will discuss volatile currency markets at a special meeting next month, but private economists question how successful the session will be.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady confirmed on Thursday that finance ministers and central bank presidents from the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada would gather in Paris on April 7.

While Brady insisted there was "no special urgency" propelling the talks, they are coming at a time when the U.S. dollar has been rising in value against other currencies, in particular the West German mark and the Japanese yen.

A higher dollar threatens to enlarge an already-huge U.S. trade deficit by making foreign products cheaper for Americans while raising the cost of U.S. goods overseas.

"The dollar's strength is of great concern to the administration," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "It constitutes a recession threat because it is a further risk to an already-beleaguered industrial side of the U.S. economy."

While last year's trade deficit of $108.6 billion was 29 percent below the all-time worst deficit of $152.1 billion in 1987, progress in boosting U.S. exports has slowed in recent months because of the dollar's increases.

Brady, testifying to a House Appropriations subcommittee Thursday, said the administration hoped further gains could be made this year in reducing the trade deficit. However, he conceded that "progress isn't as fast as I would like it to be."

The dollar's advance has occurred despite coordinated intervention by the United States and other governments to sell dollars on foreign exchange markets and buy other currencies.

Some analysts suggested that since government intervention has proved largely unsuccessful, the officials of the so-called G-7 countries might discuss making coordinated moves to change interest rates.

Higher interest rates in Japan and West Germany would tend to bolster their currencies, while lower interest rates in the United States would make dollar-denominated investments less attractive.

But such action would need the approval of Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who has been resisting administration pressure to lower interest rates because of concern about inflation. Greenspan also will attend the Paris G-7 meeting.

Economists also questioned the likelihood of some bold initiative to lower the dollar's value, especially in light of Brady's general caution in interfering in private market operations.

"The G-7 process is dead in the water," said C. Fred Bergsten, head of the Institute for International Economics. "With exchange rates moving in the wrong direction, it cries out for more effective international coordination."

Brady, who visited European capitals last week, led the effort to schedule the special meeting. He sees it as an opportunity to advance economic coordination among U.S. allies, said an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

French Economics Minister Pierre Beregovoy told reporters in Paris that he had stressed to Brady the need for greater cooperation, especially in light of the economic problems that might arise with the reunification of East and West Germany.

Some private economists have expressed concern that the reunification could prove to be inflationary because of the proposal to exchange West Germany marks for East German marks on a one-to-one ratio.

However, Norbert Walker, chief economist for Deutsche Bank, the largest bank in West Germany, told reporters in Washington that he believed reunification could be accomplished without a surge in inflation or a big jump in West German interest rates.

Walker said increased consumer demand would not trigger higher inflation because much of the demand would be met by foreign goods, helping to lower West Germany's large trade surpluses, while sluggish economic growth in Europe would help hold down interest rate pressures.

Beregovoy said the G-7 officials were scheduled to be in Paris in early April anyway to wrap up details for a new Bank for European Reconstruction and Development being created to support emerging democracies.

The meeting will occur just one month before a scheduled May 7 session in Washington to coincide with the spring meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

Hunt brothers may lose control of Penrod

DALLAS (AP) — Control of Penrod Drilling Co., the company founded by H.L. Hunt, may shift from Dallas' Hunt brothers to a syndicate of banks and investors on March 31, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The newspaper quoted sources as saying that control of Penrod's valuable offshore rigs eventually could fall to Fort Worth investor Richard E. Rainwater and his partners, including Energy Service Co., an offshore drilling company.

An Ensco-Rainwater partnership has purchased 27 percent of Penrod's debt and increased its stake this week by buying Penrod debt held by Bank of America, according to a spokesman for the bank. Terms weren't disclosed.

Penrod was founded by the late billionaire H.L. Hunt and passed on through trusts to his children, William Herbert Hunt, Nelson Bunker Hunt and Lamar Hunt.

But Penrod owes a $25 million to $30 million loan payment due March 31. In exchange for forfeiting their control of Penrod, the banks may remove a lien against Placid Oil Co., the Hunts' oil exploration firm, sources said.

Sources said Penrod is having problems raising enough cash to meet its first principal payment on $525 million due a syndicate of six banks.

A Security and Exchange Commission filing says that the March installment is the first of 32 consecutive quarterly payments due. If the Hunts default on the payment, which includes $15 million in principal and about the same amount in interest, the brothers lose control of their 50 percent interest in Penrod.

The Hunt family fortune has been entangled for almost a decade in a series of lawsuits, bankruptcies and battles with the Internal Revenue Service and various federal regulators.

The 50 percent of Penrod owned by the Hunt brothers personal trusts is pledged as collateral for the drilling equipment company's borrowing.

Permanent chief S&L overseer nominated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department is asking President Bush to appoint a former senior Labor Department official with scant experience in banking as the nation's chief savings and loan regulator, an administration source says.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady is recommending that T. Timothy Ryan Jr. be named to replace M. Danny Wall as head of the department's Office of Thrift Supervision, said the source, who spoke Thursday on condition of anonymity.

Ryan, 44, is an attorney with the Washington firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay. He served as solicitor of the Labor Department from 1981 to 1983, directing a staff of about 600 lawyers.

The administration source said Brady chose Ryan because he would bring a fresh approach and strong leadership and management skills to the thrift director's job at a critical time in the industry.

"He's someone who has a high degree of professionalism as well as a real sense of what's practical," said Martin McGuinn, vice chairman and general counsel of the Pittsburgh-based Mellon Bank.

"I've seen his organizational skills at work," said McGuinn, who went to college with Ryan and hired him to do legal work for Mellon.

Brady also recommended Andrew C. Hove Jr., a small-town Nebraska banker and Republican activist, to fill a vacancy on the board of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Treasury assumed responsibility for the thrift office as part of the S&L bailout enacted in August. It at first sought an experienced regulator for the director's post but could not find an acceptable candidate willing to take the job.

William Taylor, chief of banking supervision for the Federal Reserve System, opted to stay with his higher-paying current job. Frederick Wolf, former No. 2 official at Congress' General Accouting Office, withdrew after the Treasury Department failed to forward his name to the White House.

stable oil prices, but said they were not because the quota mechanism within OPEC was working well.

Explained Middleton: "The reason is that hundreds of millions of people in the Far East had suddenly turned on to capitalism. Demand from the Pacific Rim, which is enjoying an economic boom, has constantly been underestimated."

He said an explosion of capitalism in Eastern Europe could increase demand even more, but warned that there were pitfalls in counting too much on this emerging market.

"The expectations of these people, which have been economically depressed for so long, are high. They are expecting something good to happen quickly. This could create disappointments and a period of political upheaval.

He also warned that politics and not demand alone could affect world oil prices: "There is plenty of oil in the world, but most is in the Persian Gulf. The price of oil will be ultimately determined by these Persian Gulf nations."

He said the determination would be political, and there was no way anyone in this country could include Middle East political decisions in their framework of things they could know and control. Middleton called the situation dangerous.

"We don't think like Arabs, and they will make oil price decisions on politics. How would you like to have that political decision hanging over your head?" he asked.

Middleton called the said much is being done to arrive at a formal national energy policy, but when it finally emerges it will probably be about the same as the present informal energy policy. "That policy," said Middleton, "is that energy should be plentiful, cheap and environmentally pure."

He said the only alternative that came close to that was nuclear, which had been put off limits. He also denounced the fact that most of the prime domestic targets for oil and gas exploration had been put off limits.

He called the present policy of relying on a diversity of supply a "head in the sand" policy. "We may be able to buy oil from another nation when one supplier gets mad at us, but only God knows what the price will be," warned Middleton.

JOBLESS

not so rapid as to reduce it," said economist Samuel Kahan of Fuji Securities Inc. in Chicago.

A recession this year could drive unemployment up to 6 percent, while stronger-than-expected growth could drive it below 5 percent, Kahan said. However, most analysts see the economy remaining sub-par but skirting a contraction, thus keeping unemployment stable.

While a steady unemployment level is good news for wage earners, it may prove to be bad news when the same workers try to stretch their paychecks. A low jobless rate will fuel rising wages, which in turn will make it hard for the Federal Reserve to lower the consumer inflation rate appreciably below last year's 4.6 percent.

The unemployment rates among major demographic groups last month were:

—Adult white men, 4.1 percent, up from 4 percent in January.

—Adult white women, 4.1 percent, up from 4 percent.

—White teen-agers, 13.0 percent, up from 12.7 percent.

—All blacks, 10.5 percent, down from 11.3 percent.

—Adult black men, 9.2 percent, down from 11.2 percent.

—Adult black women, 9.4 percent, up from 9.2 percent.

and increase in the labor force," said Santangelo.

Texas industries reported a gain of about 165,000 jobs in January from the year-ago period, along with progress in construction employment.

"The sum of that suggests a continued modest improvement in the state's economy, even with the large upward swing last month," Santangelo said, adding some volatility in the jobless rate resulted from statistical sampling error.

Moore said that the state's jobless figure had dropped significantly from December 1989's 6.6 percent to the first month of this year.

"We are running at an employment rate that is somewhat higher than the national figure. On average, the Texas economy is not growing as fast or staying as constant as the U.S. economy," said Santangelo.

MARGARET WILLIAMS ENDORSES NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

For over 30 years I have been involved in education in Midland.

I believe that legal scholarship is important for the position of District Judge. Nick was on the Dean's List at college. Nick won prizes for being the first in his class in Constitutional Law and for Tax Law. Beyond college and law school he spent a year of post graduate legal training at S.M.U. in Oil and Gas Law and Taxation. He also has worked in all levels of trial courts in Texas and several appeals courts.

This is the kind of academic excellence and experience that Midland needs in a judge. I believe Nick is the best qualified candidate for the office of District Judge. He will be a great asset to Midland.

I am voting for Nick Taylor in the Republican Primary and hope that you will too.

Golden Tors' quest for title stays alive

UIL Tournament

AUSTIN (AP) — Lamesa established a Class 3A scoring record with a 100-69 victory over Gonzales in a semifinal game Thursday afternoon at the 70th University Interscholastic League Boy's State Basketball Tournament.

Lamesa (30-6) will go for its fourth championship when it meets No. 1 Navasota (34-0) at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. Navasota beat Gainesville 54-35 in a battle of tournament newcomers in the other Class 3A semifinal Thursday afternoon.

Lamesa's full-court trap stifled Gonzales and the Golden Tornadoes beat the previous Class 3A tournament mark of 84 points set by Phillips in 1956.

Gonzales (32-6) led early, but trailed 45-36 at the half. But any hopes of a comeback diminished during a 19-8 run by the Golden Tornadoes in the third quarter.

Senior Dwight Mason, who was academically ineligible during the first six weeks of the season, connected on 15 of 25 shots and had 34 points, 16 above his average. Bert Butler followed with 24 and Lavert Hawkins had 20.

Kirk Mathis paced Gonzales with 22 points. The Apaches' leading scorer, Louis Johnson, was held to eight points, 12 below his average.

Gainesville (28-7) meanwhile, trailed most of the game in its loss to Navasota, but grabbed a brief lead at halftime and at the start of the third quarter.

Navasota surged ahead for good at 26-25 with 5:01 left in the third quarter. Navosota finished the scoring with a 13-0 run during the final 2:16 of the game.

Kevin Baker had 16 points for Navasota, while Paul Oatts was the only Gainesville scorer in double figures with 12.

Neither team shot very well from the field in the low scoring affair as Navasota hit 32 percent of its shots to Gainesville's 26 percent.

In other action Thursday, Moulton defeated previously unbeaten Vega 67-43 and Santo held off a late Brookeland comeback bid, 82-80, in the Class A semifinals.

Moulton, which lost in the finals last year, will play Santo for the championship on Saturday.

Santo held a 13-point lead late in the third quarter, but Brookeland — paced by Trent Smith's 13 fourth-quarter points — to tie the score at 71.

Santo, which does not have a player over 6 feet, ran off seven unanswered points to lead 78-71. Brookeland pulled to within one point twice in the final minute, but couldn't take the lead.

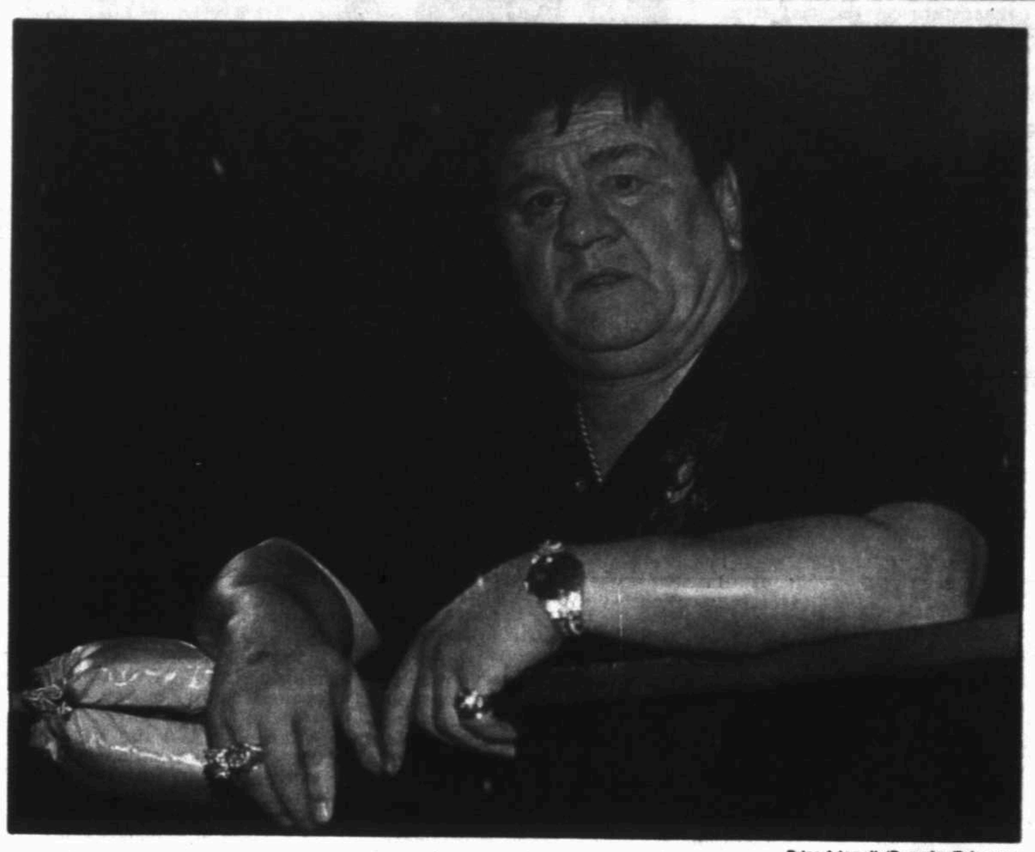

Smith fired in a game-high 34 points for Brookeland (34-3) and was aided by Josh Williams' 20 points and 13 rebounds and Ken Carter's 18 points.

Dean Edwards sparked Santo (35-2) with 28 points, while 6-0 guard Lance Hendrick poured in 27 and also ripped down 20 rebounds.

Moulton, 33-5, used its inside height advantage to beat Vega and end its perfect season at 29-1.

Patrick Henke, a 6-2 sophomore who was an all-tournament selection last year, led Moulton with 18 points and eight rebounds.

Vega was led by 6-4 senior Cody Walker with 16 points and nine boards.

Players veto Vincent plan

No end in sight for lockout

NEW YORK (AP) — The players' union, which dismissed Commissioner Fay Vincent's offer to open training camps in exchange for a no-strike pledge, and team owners appear headed in different directions with the scheduled opening day of the season just 24 days away.

Vincent announced his proposal during a news conference Thursday as negotiations remained in a stalemate over salary arbitration. The union called the commissioner's idea "silly" and "a public relations stunt."

"We are not, unless there is some miracle, going to resolve this in the next several days," Vincent said Thursday night.

"When I came here this week, I really thought it would get done," Phil Bradley of the Baltimore Orioles said. "It really looks bad now."

The union wants half the players with between two and three years of service made eligible for salary arbitration. Owners have proposed a $4 million bonus pool for those players. Neither side will consider the other's offer.

"We are dismayed with their proposal. We are dismayed at their reaction," Milwaukee owner Bud Selig, chairman of management's Player Relations Committee, said after Vincent's announcement.

"Some would say this suggests owners are still not interested in making a settlement," union chief Donald Fehr said. "That is my view."

In 1976, owners locked out players on Feb. 23, but Commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered camps open on March 17. Vincent said he is reluctant to end the lockout by using the authority to act in the "best interest of baseball."

"I do not like the idea of the commissioner of baseball opening camps," he said. "It is something that should be achieved by agreement."

The lockout is in its 23rd day — equaling the second-longest work stoppage in baseball history — and 224 of 410 exhibition games have been canceled. The sides have agreed that players must be in camp by Monday if the season is to start as scheduled on April 2.

"I guess we've been naive enough to keep thinking we're going to reach an agreement," American League president Bobby Brown said.

The sides talked into the night on Wednesday, the 31st session since negotiations began Nov. 28. The PRC met on Thursday and, according to Vincent, wasn't interested in the union's plan. Vincent then made his announcement.

"While it is my hope that the parties will be able to reach an agreement, it is now apparent that this must be accomplished in the next few days or we will have to postpone the start of the 1990 season," Vincent said.

"I am asking the clubs to open the training camps in exchange for a pledge from the players not to strike during the 1990 season. In the meantime, the parties can continue to work toward the best of all results ... a negotiated agreement," Vincent said.

Fehr, speaking during a news conference one hour later, refused to use the word "reject," but nonetheless dismissed Vincent's idea.

"He knew it wouldn't fly and any labor lawyer worth his salt on their side could've told you that," Fehr said.

"It's not a serious proposal. Essentially, this is a public relations effort. If it wasn't, there would've been a proposal," he said.

"No self-respecting union would give up its right to strike," Eugene Orza, the union's associate general counsel, said.

Vincent formally sent the proposal to the union on Thursday evening. He said he wasn't surprised by the union's reaction, and said he wanted to hear the union's objections to his proposal and then attempt to

'Rasslin' a hoot for Wahoo

By JOE WYATT
Sports Writer

Midland son Edward "Wahoo" McDaniel will tell you that professional wrestling is a young man's game. Then the former Midland High grid star will propel his 51-year old frame into the ring and referee a bout.

McDaniel did that very thing Wednesday at the Chap Center where he displayed his contingent of the infamous National Wrestling Alliance for public consumption.

And but for a detached retina suffered just a year ago, McDaniel insists he would be undertaking this season — his 30th in professional wrestling — not as an official, but as one of the main combatants.

"I'd been hit a lot harder a lot of times, but it just took one good lick for my retina to separate," McDaniel said. "The doctor said if it happened again I could have permanent eye damage so I gave it up.

"But I began my wrestling career as a main event and I ended it that way."

This is McDaniel's 18th year with the NWA, a division of World Championship Wrestling, based in Atlanta and owned by Ted Turner. While he still likes to practice the brand of showmanship he demonstrated Wednesday at the Chap, his more important roles for the company include booking upcoming events and dealing with agents — when he is not acting as one himself.

"I do the hiring and firing here," he said. "And we have to fill 25 dates a month. But it never gets old or routine. I still get excited about the whole wrestling thing. I'ts been great to me."

A successful career in football is what got McDaniel started in pro wrestling, and his exploits on the gridiron are legendary in Midland.

As a fullback for the 1955 Bulldogs, he helped snap a 14-year dry spell against arch-rival Odessa High with a 279-yard, four-touchdown performance. He surpassed the 1,000-yard rushing plateau in his final two seasons at MHS, then attended Oklahoma University where the Sooners utilized his athletic prowess at end and defensive back.

McDaniel still holds the record for the longest punt in Sooner history, a 91-yarder against Iowa State in 1958.

In 1960, after two victorious Orange Bowl campaigns in Norman, Okla., Wahoo became the property of the Dallas Cowboys where he began a nine-year career as a professional linebacker.

He moved to the Denver organization in 1961, and later became a member of the Jets for the 1964-65 seasons. He finally bowed out of the game after playing through the 1968 season in Miami.

All the while he was wrestling.

"I was working half the year in football and half the year in wrestling," McDaniel said. "Finally I just went all out with wrestling.

"Back then they weren't paying the big bucks in football these guys are making now. I was making more at wrestling back then."

The McDaniels moved to Midland in 1949, and Wahoo's parents and two sisters still reside here. Therefore, despite his hectic travelling schedule, Wahoo says he visits his old haunts at least once a year. His own present home is in Charlotte, N.C.

Before Wednesday's wrestling card actually started — before anyone named Cactus Jack or The Cuban Assassin so much as hurled a taunt at The Road Warriors — Midlanders sought out Wahoo in search of his autograph.

"I get to see my family when I come here," he said between signings. "And I still have quite a few schoolmates in the area."

Some of the fans approached McDaniel with confidence, while others ventured more timidly into his presence. None were turned away.

"I've always liked Midland. It was a great place to live."

NCAA field narrows

Associated Press

While three more unranked teams — Temple, Murray State and Arkansas-Little Rock — qualified for the NCAA tournament, seventh-ranked Michigan State was more concerned with the Big Ten race.

The Spartans (25-5, 14-3), a lock for an NCAA berth, clinched at least a tie for the Big Ten championship Thursday night by defeating Northwestern 84-68 as Steve Smith scored 23 points, including five 3-pointers. Michigan State can win the crown outright by beating Purdue on Sunday.

"We really weren't looking past Northwestern," Smith said after the Spartans' ninth straight victory. "The Big Ten championship was on the line and we know Northwestern always plays well at home."

NCAA bids were settled in the Atlantic 10 (Temple 53, Massachusetts 51), Ohio Valley (Murray 64, Eastern Kentucky 57) and Trans America Athletic Conference (Arkansas-Little Rock 105, Centenary 95).

Michigan State has set a school record for regular-season wins and is having its best season in the Big Ten since Magic Johnson's 1979 team went 15-3. The Spartans' nine-game league win streak is also its longest since 1979, when Michigan State won the NCAA tournament.

The Spartans broke the game open with a 16-4 run that provided a 28-14 lead with seven minutes remaining in the first half. Smith hit two 3-pointers and Mike Peplowski came off the bench to score five points in the run.

"I felt awfully good about our performance, under the circumstances," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said. "It's very difficult to play a team on Senior Day (the last home game). But we played with intensity."

Rex Walters scored 18 points for Northwestern (9-19, 2-16), which finished the season with its fourth loss in a row and 10th in 11 games.

"When you try to shut down one area, they combat it with another," Northwestern coach Bill Foster said. "You can't just concentrate on Smith or someone else will kill you."

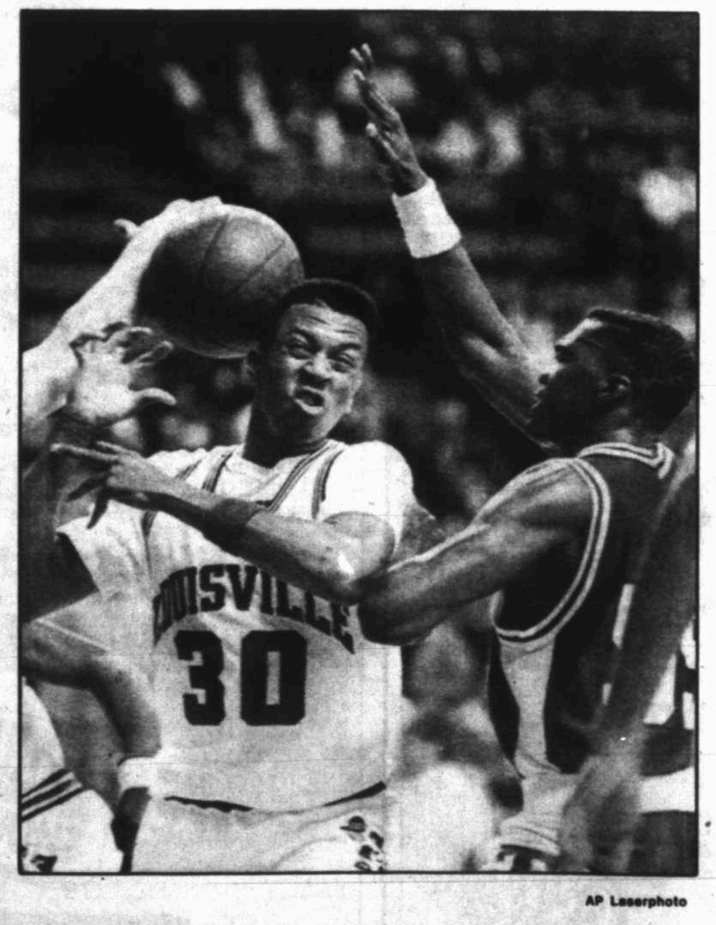

Atlantic 10 Conference

Mark Macon scored 20 points and Temple held off a furious second-half Massachusetts rally. Top-seeded Temple (20-10) snapped Massachusetts' five-game winning streak in beating the Minutemen (17-13) for the 19th straight time. The Owls won their third Atlantic 10 title in four years.

Three WJCAC teams take wins at Region V

By JIMMY PATTERSON

SNYDER — Western Junior College Athletic Conference teams made it three-of-four Thursday over North Texas JCAC teams in first-round action at the Region V Tournament in Snyder, as the top three seeds, South Plains, Howard and Odessa College, all advanced to semifinal action tonight.

New Mexico College, the sole WJCAC loser, fell to McLennan Community College, of Waco, 95-87.

Both Odessa and Howard made virtual routs of their opponents while South Plains surprisingly struggled against an upstart, fourth-ranked Grayson, 76-65.

In Friday night semifinal games, South Plains faces Odessa at 7 p.m. in a game to be carried live on KCRS (550 AM); Howard will meet McLennan at 9 p.m.

The winners of the two semis will meet for a 7 p.m. championship battle Saturday at the Scurry County Coliseum in Snyder.

The Region V tournament winner will receive an automatic bid to the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament, March 20-24 in Hutchinson, Kan.

In the ladies' championship game Thursday, South Plains slipped by Odessa College, 58-57, (See Related Story).

HOWARD 115, TSTI 86

This one was such a bust that Texas State Technical Institute head coach Carl Love was force to call his first timeout after only 58 seconds had elapsed from the clock, and Howard had jumped to a 7-0 advantage.

TSTI trailed from tipoff to buzzer with the final 29 point margin of victory just one point shy of the Hawks' biggest lead of the evening at 30.

TSTI, which was forced to shoot three-pointers early just to stay relatively close, finished the contest having connected on 8-of-18 from long range. The Tornadoes didn't score until the 3½ minute mark of the first half and failed to connect on a simple two-point shot until almost 12½ minutes were gone.

Of course, though, nothing was simple for TSTI against the Hawks.

Howard, up 33-6 at the 8:38 mark, allowed TSTI just one three-pointer and three free-throws by that time.

"We were able to build a lead and get a lot of early shots," Howard head coach Steve Green said. "I think it was all (TSTI) could do to hang in there at (a 13 point deficit)."

Howard brought down 55 rebounds as Johnny McDowell (10) and Carlos Thunm (9) waited like vultures at the low post position, almost constanly anticipating the numerous amounts of errant attempts from the field by TSTI. By comparison, TSTI was able to muster only 28

OC women fall to SPC

SNYDER — Tournament Most Valuable Player Sheryl Swoopes led the South Plains Lady Texans to a gritty, down-to-the-wire 58-57 win over Odessa College's Lady Wranglers Thursday night in the Region V womens' championship.

Swoopes, a freshman from Brownfield, had 26 to lead all scorers and added an additional game-high 14 rebounds to dominate the Lady Wranglers underneath.

Carol Bailey, another SPC freshman, had 10 of the Lady Texans' first 13 second-half points and finished with 14. Bailey was also named to the all-tournament team.

Pressure trying on Valvano

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano was doing his best to concentrate on the matter at hand: basketball.

But he continued to face a full-court press on questions about his future with the Wolfpack.

"The last couple of weeks have been so trying," said Valvano, who was encircled by reporters in the Charlotte Coliseum. "I don't think it has affected our effort, but maybe our focus."

Valvano has been under fire from some circles after allegations were aired by ABC News that four Wolfpack players were involved in point shaving during the 1987-88 season. Former N.C. State star Charles Shackleford admitted accepting $65,000 while playing on the team, but denied taking part in point shaving.

Valvano has denied any wrongdoing and has not been implicated, but calls for his resignation were widespread after the allegations were made.

"Is this your last ACC tournmanent?" someone asked.

"I don't know, I can't speculate on that," he answered.

The Wolfpack (18-11) plays Georgia Tech in the last of four first-round games today. Tipoff is set for 9 p.m.

Meanwhile, an investigation into allegations of point shaving continues. Wake County, N.C., District Attorney Colon Willoughby Jr. and North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation agents met with New Jersey authorities on Thursday, Charles Dunn, deputy director of the SBI told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

The group met with prosecutor Lee Trumbull of Morris County, N.J., where police had been investigating Robert Kramer, a businessman who has admitted giving money to Shackleford. Kramer has denied taking part in any point-shaving schemes.

Jim Valvano faces an army of reporters as his North Carolina State team readies for the ACC tourney.

Trumbull said earlier this week that his end of the investigation hadn't turned up evidence warranting prosecution.

Negotiations over Valvano's future at N.C. State remained at a standstill Thursday, with state attorneys preparing for a closed meeting today with the University of North Carolina system Board of Governors.

Howard Manning, a lawyer hired by N.C. State, and chief deputy attorney general Andy Vanore were expected to brief the board on the contract negotiations, according to John Simmons, a spokesman for the attorney general's office.

Simmons declined to elaborate on the direction the talks might take.

"At this point, they're evaluating the contract and looking at all the options," he said.

Valvano's lawyer, Art Kaminsky, said Valvano's "first choice would be to stay. He likes it there."

Kaminsky said the sides had tried to reach a settlement prior to the ACC tournament, but were unsuccessful.

The sticking point appears to be a clause in Valvano's contract that calls for him to be paid $500,000 if fired for anything less than a major NCAA violation or a felony conviction.

The lawyer reiterated the three avenues that can be taken in the situation: retain Valvano, dismiss him or reach a mutual settlement.

Agassi lashes out at Davis Cup captain

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Andre Agassi, upset with remarks made by Tom Gorman, lashed out at the U.S. Davis Cup captain Thursday, saying it would be difficult for him to play on the American team as long as Gorman is the captain.

"If he doesn't drastically change the way he runs things, I think it would only be harmful to keep him in this position," said Agassi, who the previous day had announced he would decline to play for the United States against Czechoslovakia later this month.

Gorman wanted Agassi to join Brad Gilbert as the American singles players in Prague in the second-round matches beginning March 30.

"I am terribly disappointed that Andre has chosen not to play," Gorman had said Wednesday. " ... I'm not happy with the situation at all. It's a nationalistic thing."

"What he said to me before and what he said to you all was different," Agassi told reporters Thursday. "Now I have no interest in going. As long as he's captain, it will be difficult. He's a chameleon.

"I'm not going to say I'm not going to play as long as he's captain, I'll just say it would be difficult. I don't want the country to suffer."

Agassi obviously doesn't like Gorman's approach to Davis Cup competition, saying Gorman wanted the players to spend most of their time together during the week before the tournament.

after relinquishing the lead 21-20 in the first half. With just over 90 seconds left, OC regained the lead, however briefly, 56-55.

The two teams played turnover ball until the final buzzer when, with SPC up 58-57, the Lady Texans inbounded the ball with three seconds left. The inbounds pass was picked off by OC's Patricia Rivers at the Wrangler baseline. With one tick left, Rivers turned around and shot, but the ball fell to floor with no net swish in the background. SPC had won for their first Region V crown since 1977.

"We didn't shoot well all game," OC head coach Ken Hefner said. "For some reason we didn't come out and execute. We went to our zone and just didn't cover."

Two of OC's big girls — Twanda Wilson and Woodard — got in early foul trouble, taking the Lady Wranglers out of an effective man defense; SPC took advantage of that weakness to control the game most of the way.

Patricia Rivers, also named to the all-tourney team, led the Lady Wranglers with 16; Woodard had 13.

SPC, 25-7, advances to the Ladies' national tournament, held this season in Tyler, beginning March 19.

Odessa College finishes the season at 26-7.

ODESSA COLLEGE (57) — LaQuetra Parker 0-1 0-0 0; Rene Woodard 4-9 4-4 13; Cynthia Hernandez 1-6 0-0 3; Angela Meadough 3-12 2-4 8; Patricia Rivers 6-16 4-7 16; Michele Reynolds 3-5 1-2 7; Twanda Wilson 4-11 1-2 9; Shawn Thomas 0-3 1-1 1. TOTALS: 21-63 13-20 57.

SOUTH PLAINS COLLEGE (58) — Rosa Llanas 1-3 0-0 2; Cassandra Smith 0-1 0-0 0; Sheryl Swoopes 10-26 5-5 26; Jaree Blakemore 2-8 0-0 4; Charlotte Benford 3-6 0-0 6; Deborah Williams -6 2-2 4; Jennifer Fritz 0-1 0-0 0; Deendra Brown 1-3 0-0 2; Carol Bailey 7-12 0-0 14.

Halftime Score: SPC 34, OC 32. 3-point goals: OC 2-4 (Woodard 1-1, Hernandez 1-1), SPC 1-3 (Swoopes 1-1). Rebounds: OC 35 (Wilson 13), SPC 46 Swoopes 14, Williams 12). Turnovers: OC 18, SPC 22. Personal fouls: OC 17, SPC 17.

Eastern Kentucky. King's shot tied the game 57-57 as Murray State rallied from a 49-40 deficit.

Popeye Jones, the tourney's Most Valuable Player after scoring 25 points and grabbing 10 rebounds, gave Murray State the lead for good 59-57 when he made two free throws with 48 seconds to go. He sank two more free throws 18 seconds later.

Trans America Athletic Conference

Derrick Owens hit his first 13 shots (he finished 14-for-15 from the floor but only 3-for-9 at the foul line) and scored 33 points as Arkansas-Little Rock (20-9) earned its third NCAA trip in five years by downing Centenary (22-8).

UALR led 76-69 when Owens hit a jumper and added a stuff on a breakaway for an 80-69 lead with 9:29 left. After a basket by Centenary's Marro Hawkins, Owens hit two more jumpers for a 13-point lead. His only miss occurred on a shot from the corner, but Derrick Hall put in the rebound for a 98-85 lead with 4:16 remaining.

No. 13 Michigan 94, Wisconsin 64

Terry Mills scored 18 points and pulled down 10 rebounds and Rumeal Robinson added 15 points and a season-high 12 assists to move into second place on Michigan's career assist list with 548. Loy Vaught contributed 16 points and Sean Higgins and Eric Riley each had 12.

No. 18 Louisville 79, Tulane 66

Reserve Jerome Harmon scored 16 points for the sluggish Cardinals (24-7), who committed 22 turnovers but advanced to today's semifinals against Memphis State. Tulane, which resumed basketball this season after a four-year self-imposed banishment because of a point-shaving scandal, finished 4-24 and lost its 12th straight game.

Louisville, the regular-season Metro champion, went on a 20-5 run for a 30-16 lead with 5:32 left in the half. Cornelius Holden had six of his 15 points in the run. Michael Christian led Tulane with 24.

No. 24 Xavier, Ohio 86, Butler 61

Tyrone Hill scored 21 points and Xavier (25-3) used its height and strength to win its MCC opener from Butler (6-22). The Musketeers, the regular-season champions, went on a 13-0 run to turn a 17-16 deficit into a 29-17 lead. They led 33-20 at halftime without making a shot from outside the lane.

Michael Davenport had 12 points for Xavier. Darin Archbold led Butler with 15. Xavier has won the last four MCC tournament titles and Pete Gillen is 11-0 in MCC tournament play in five years as coach.

Others

— In the Western Athletic Conference quarterfinals, Raymond Dudley scored 28 points and Chris Lowry hit nine of nine free throws in the final 3:42 as Air Force, the ninth and last seed, shocked top-seeded Colorado State 58-51. Dudley tied a WAC tournament record with six 3-pointers.

In other WAC games, Terry Houston had 17 points and 11 rebounds to lead Hawaii over Wyoming 66-63.

Tommy Connor's 3-point shot lifted Utah to a 62-61 overtime upset of Brigham Young, the regular season co-champion with Colorado State, and Texas-El Paso, the host team, beat New Mexico 78-61.

— In first-round Pac-10 games, Mike Redhair scored seven of his career-high 18 points in the final 1:35 as Arizona State eliminated Washington 57-51 and Harold Miner scored 27 points and Robert Pack had a career-high 24 as Southern Cal rallied from a 22-1 deficit to eliminate Washington State 85-68.

— Morgan Wheat made seven of Vanderbilt's 19 free throws in the final 4:21 and the Commodores beat Florida 68-58 in the opening game of the Southeastern Conference tournament, ending Don DeVoe's one-year stint as interim coach of the Gators. DeVoe bowed out with a 7-21 record, including losses in 16 of the last 17 games.

— Jason Matthews scored 32 points and Pitt beat Boston College 88-70 in the elimination game of the Big East tournament. The Panthers (12-16) meet top-seeded and fourth-ranked Syracuse (22-5) tonight.

— Freshman guard Johnny Mack scored a season-high 23 points as Montana State beat Montana 69-57 in the first round of the Big Sky Conference tournament.

negotiate.

"I hope they'll think about it sometime," Vincent said after talking by phone with the major-league owners. "I would hope that eventually it will be accepted."

Fehr said the union would not give a no-strike pledge because it would then be playing under the minimum salary and benefit plan of the 1985 agreement. He also said that management could wait until the situation reached an impasse and then impose whatever agreement it wanted.

"They started this and they can stop this any time they want," Fehr said of the lockout, baseball's third since 1973. "All Fay Vincent has to do is sign his name to a telegram and say the camps are open. I assume they'll be open the next day."

Eight players attended bargaining sessions earlier in the week but most left after Wednesday night's session, when O'Connor said their arbitration proposal had a "slim-to-none" chance of acceptance.

"We want to go back to work," Bradley said. "The fans have to understand that they are being locked out, too."

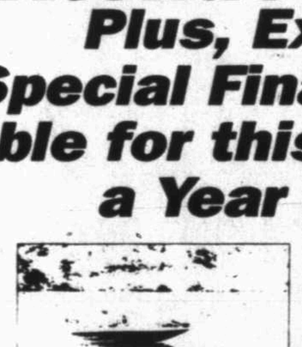

"The owners have tried to turn the tables and avoid the issues with their latest action," Orioles pitcher Jeff Ballard said. "We made a major concession and we want to make a deal."

NBA ROUNDUP

Jazz's Malone makes beautiful music in win

Associated Press

The Utah Jazz have a secret for success.

The Jazz, however, did nothing to hide it Thursday night in beating Chicago 98-94 to snap the Bulls' nine-game winning streak.

Karl Malone led the Jazz with 27 points and Thurl Bailey had 22.

"Our secret is to kick the ball inside," said Utah coach Jerry Sloan, who played 10 seasons for the Bulls. "We've got the big guys to work inside."

The loss was only the Bulls' third at home in 26 games. It was Utah's ninth victory in 10 games and improved their road reacord to 15-14. Utah (43-17) leads second-place San Antonio by four games in the Midwest Division.

Utah's starting front line of Malone, Bailey and Mark Eaton combined for 55 points, while the Bulls' front line of Scottie Pippen, Horace Grant and Will Perdue had 32.

"We wanted to get the ball inside," Malone said. "That's what we're best at. If we just keep doing what we do best, we'll keep winning."

The Jazz let Michael Jordan have his way, and he scored 43 points.

Elsewhere it was Minnesota 111, Los Angeles Clippers 94; Houston 111, Seattle 97; Golden State 145, Cleveland 105 and Sacramento 111, Charlotte 102.

The Bulls battled back from a 73-54 third-quarter deficit to 96-94 with three seconds left on two free throws by Jordan. But Malone, who hit 13 foul shots without a miss, converted two with two seconds left.

Timberwolves 111, Clippers 94

Pooh Richardson had a career-high 27 points and 14 assists as Minnesota beat the Los Angeles Clippers at the Metrodome.

Tony Campbell added 30 points, including 20 in the second half, as the Timberwolves ended a three-game losing streak and gained their ninth victory in in their last 12 home games.

Rockets 111, Sonics 97

Akeem Olajuwon scored 16 of his 30 points in the third quarter to help Houston defeat visiting Seattle. It was the Rockets' fifth straight victory.

The Rockets trail the Sonics by 1½ games for the final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Kings 111, Hornets 102

Wayman Tisdale scored 33 points, including 20 in the third quarter, as Sacramento defeated Charlotte. It was the Hornets' 11th straight road loss and 27th in 28 games away from home this season.

Rex Chapman tied his career high with 38 points for the Hornets.

Tisdale had 14 Kings points during a 20-7 run that ended with Sacramento leading 72-62 with 4:25 left in the third quarter.

Warriors 145, Cavs 105

Mitch Richmond scored 25 points to pace Golden State's rout at Oakland. It was the Cavaliers' sixth straight loss, all on the road.

Coogs hot as SWC tourney opens

DALLAS (AP) — The hottest team going in today's Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament quarterfinals wasn't defending champion and ninth-ranked Arkansas.

The Houston Cougars, who have won 11 consecutive games, were the team to watch.

"Houston is playing more together and has more heart than any team in the tournament," said Texas guard Travis Mays. "They played great when they beat us Monday night."

While Houston and Arkansas are considered already in the NCAA tournament, Texas feels it must do well in the SWC tournament to get a bid.

"I think we have to at least get into the semifinals to guarantee we'll make the NCAAs," said Mays, The Associated Press SWC Offensive Player of the Year. "We can still control our own destiny."

Of course, the winner of the tournament gets an automatic NCAA bid.

Mays' injured right hand was a concern to the Longhorns.

"It's only about 75 to 80 percent well," Mays said. "It hurts when I handle the ball, shoot, catch it or rebound. If I get my hands on the ball it hurts. I've had a lot of pain."

Texas coach Tom Penders said "If he gets it hurt again we're in trouble."

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said the Razorback fans are an intimidating force for the Razorbacks.

"I don't care if we played in China we would still have the homecourt advantage," Richardson said.

"It's no matter if we we are in Barnhill Arena in Fayetteville or on the road we're always at home," Richardson said. "Our fans aren't just the best in the Southwest Conference, they are the best in the country."

They call Reunion Arena "Barnhill South" and for good reason. All sessions are sold out for the three-day tournament and some 12,000 of the 16,000 seats will be occupied by the aggressive, ticket-buying Razorback fans.

The Razorbacks, 23-4, who won the SWC regular season championship with just two league losses, will meet eighth and last seed Southern Methodist at 7 p.m.

Arkansas won the tournament last year but has never earned the title two years in a row. Richardson has a record of only 4-3 in SWC tournament game.

Other games pit third-seeded Texas against sixth-seeded Texas A&M at noon, second-seeded Houston against seventh-seeded Rice at 2 p.m., and fourth-seeded Texas Christian against fifth-seeded Baylor at 9 p.m.

The semifinals are set for 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday with the finals and an automatic bid to the NCAA playoffs at stake on 3 p.m. Sunday.

"The fact we've never won two (SWC tournaments) in a row just shows how the mental aspect of tournament causes a lot of upsets," Riohardson said. "Well, I can tell you right now I'm worried because the team doesn't seem concerned about playing SMU.

"We beat 'em by 31 at home and 19 or 20 in their own place. Our team had better get SMU on its mind."

SMU coach John Shumate said there will probably be a lot of red-clad Arkansas fans in the stands but claimed the Mustangs won't hear or see them.

"When you have a lot of fans you have enthusiasm and electricity but it doesn't matter who they root for," Shumate said. "I'm just glad to see people in the stands. It makes me want to concentrate more and take it to 'em."

Shumate said Arkansas is a more dangerous team than last year.

"They just have so many weapons," Shumate said. "It's hard to defend against them."

Penders said he was worried about playing a team the Longhorns had beaten twice, the Texas Aggies.

"We've got a lot of respect for them," he said. "They matchup well against us and know our plays. Remember last year? We beat SMU by 40 points during the regular season and had to go into overtime to beat them in the tournament."

Houston was a big favorite over Rice. The Cougars beat the Owls twice during the regular season.

"If we keep this team together we could really be good next year," said Houston coach Pat Foster.

The late game tonight featured another battle between the Iba cousins, Gene of Baylor and Moe of Texas Christian. The two teams split during the regular season.

Oilers sign two Plan B free agents

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers on Thursday signed defensive back Leander Knight, a Plan B free agent who played last year for the New York Jets, and free agent linebacker Tim Crawford, who has played most recently with the Indianapolis Colts.

The 26-year-old Knight, who is 6 feet and 196 pounds, played 13 games for the Jets, making 28 tackles. He initially was signed by San Diego in 1987 after playing at Montclair State College in New Jersey, was released and picked up by Atlanta as a replacement player. He earlier had been drafted by the New Jersey Generals of the U.S. Football League but never played there because the league folded.

The 6-4, 250-pound Crawford, 27, played high school football in Houston and was the Jets' 1986 third-round draft choice out of Texas Tech. He played sporadically with the Colts from 1987 through 1989.

The Tornadoes connected on only 32-of-82 shots (39 percent) while Howard found net 56 percent of the time (49-of-88).

Five Hawks were in double figures, led by Terrence Lewis' 27. Johnny McDowell had 20, Carlos Thunm 14, Greg Jeffery 13, and Cecil Pittman, off the bench, had 12.

Green had the luxury of resting his front line players, many of whom sat down for the game with eight minutes remaining.

Howard's 115 point output tied Midland, which had the same amount in 1980, for the second-most points ever scored in a Region V game. The all-time single-game record is 121, by Western Texas, also in 1980.

ODESSA 81, HILL 62

Forward Rodney Dent dominated on the inside, scoring 20 points and hauling in 12 rebounds to lead the Odessa College Wranglers over Hill Junior College.

The Wranglers trailed only once — 2-0 — and then took command for the remainder of the game. OC's biggest leads of the game were a 65-46 bulge midway through the second half, and their 19 point advantage at the end.

"They've got seasoned players that play hard," Hill head coach Ray Roberts said. "What hurt was their aggressiveness on the perimeter," where the Wranglers forced several of Hill's 15 turnovers.

"(Dent) has really progressed. He's come a long way," Roberts said. "He's not the same Rodney Dent we saw in November."

Hill's Kevin McFadden led all scorers with 26 points on 10-of-20 from the field and 6-of-10 from the line. Eddie Jones had 16 for Hill to round out the Rebels' double-figure scorers.

Aside from Dent, Tony Martin (14), Calvin Sinkfield (13), Lynn Collins (12) and Patric Nash (11) all cracked the double-figure barrier.

Oakland hopes Raiders aren't playing games

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Al Davis' private guarantee — barring a public one, of course — is essential this weekend to winning approval by three local governments of a $602.5 million deal to bring the Los Angeles Raiders back to their original home.

Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson said Davis, the general managing partner of the Raiders organization, has until 5 p.m. today to say whether he will accept Oakland's proposal.

Bridge players get into the habit of ruffing losers. As a result, the benefits of ruffing a winner are sometimes overlooked.

South correctly decided to open one spade rather than a preemptive four spades. After all, as little as the ace of diamonds and queen-jack of clubs in partner's hand could have made slam a laydown. After North's pass and East's takeout double, however, South was no longer sure whose hand it was and the jump to game was a two-way action—it might make, would not prove expensive if it did not and might keep the opponents out of a makable game.

West led the ace of hearts and declarer went down to defeat quickly. The opening lead was ruffed, trumps were drawn in two rounds and a diamond went to the queen and ace. Declarer ruffed the heart return and tried leading clubs from hand twice in an effort to fetch the ace—down one, losing three clubs and the ace of diamonds.

Declarer was in so much of a hurry to draw the enemy fangs that the power of dummy's trumps was overlooked. After ruffing the ace of hearts, declarer should have ignored trumps and led a diamond to the queen and ace. Assume East returns a trump. South wins, leads the king of diamonds and ruffs his own trick in dummy—declarer desperately needs the entry to the table so he can lead a club to his king. When East turns up with the ace, the king of clubs becomes the fulfilling trick.

Forbes' employees to get extra week's pay, amnesty on loans

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Malcolm Forbes left orders to give all Forbes Inc. employees an extra week's pay, a break on personal loans and some free advice on what to do with the money: "enjoy it!"

Steve Forbes, Forbes' son and successor as editor in chief of Forbes magazine and chief executive officer of the corporation, told staffers Thursday that "in accordance with my father's wishes" the company was giving each of them an extra week's pay and forgiving all debts up to $10,000.

Forbes

"As Pop put it, 'Like a lottery, it's pure chance as to who benefits,' " his son wrote in a letter to employees, referring to the loan amnesty.

"As for the extra pay," Forbes added, "his advice should be no surprise: enjoy it!"

Don Garson, a magazine spokesman, said the bequest surprised staffers at the Forbes Building on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan.

"I didn't find out about it until you called me, and I'm the P.R. man here," he said in a telephone interview. "But it was something he (Malcolm) had made clear to the kids."

Garson said the debt amnesty was particularly generous because Forbes employees of more than a year's experience are able to borrow money from the company at relatively low interest rates. He said that many of the magazine's 750 employees had taken such loans.

Asked about those thrifty souls who had not, Garson laughed and said: "I'm sure many of us here are saying, 'Damn it, why didn't I borrow something?' "

Garson said he was told the Forbes family would have no comment on Malcolm Forbes' bequest. "The letter speaks for itself," he said.

He said the gift was in character for Forbes, who "always had the attitude that the employees were giving to him, rather than the other way around,"

Forbes was 70 when he died Feb. 24 of a heart attack at his estate in New Jersey. Estimates of his wealth ranged into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

WALLINGFORD, Conn. (AP) — Yippie-turned-yuppie Jerry Rubin has a new money-making scheme: selling an earth-colored drink packed with ingredients like kelp, ginseng and bee pollen.

The 51-year-old Rubin, an independent marketer for the Dallas-based Omnitrition International, has been recruiting salespeople for his headquarters in Wallingford. They will sell a nutritional drink called Omni IV.

Rubin

"This is the best business opportunity for the average American to make a living and break out of the corporate cocoon," Rubin said Thursday. "It's going to be in the '90s what real estate was to the '80s.

"What I think the 1990s is going to be about is nutrition and entrepreneuring."

The former Yippie was a member of the Chicago Seven, a group of radicals who were tried on charges of conspiring to disrupt the 1968 Democratic National Convention. He turned to spiritualism in the 1970s and then became a Wall Street networker.

His recruits for the new venture include old friends. One is Bobby Seale, the Black Panther founder and a Chicago Seven co-defendant.

Seale is sold. "Living in a capitalist society without capital is a contradiction," he said.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Convicted Watergate figure Charles Colson says America is losing a generation of children because they're not being taught right from wrong.

"We have come to a point where we don't believe in absolutes. Schools are not value neutral, they're value hostile. We're losing a generation because we're not teaching them right from wrong," he said.

He said it's not enough to teach children to just say no. "We need to teach them why you say no."

Colson, 58, former special counsel to President Nixon, also told the 1,200 people attending the Nebraska Leadership Prayer Breakfast on Thursday about his Prison Fellowship Ministries. It has 250 full-time employees and 33,000 volunteers.

"The love of God takes us into those dark holes, witnessing to prisoners and their families," he said.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Entertainer Helen Reddy believes the world would be a better place if more women were in charge.

Reddy

Reddy, who recorded "I Am Woman," an anthem for the feminist movement, spoke to a group of about 200 people Thursday at Marshall University in recognition of International Women's Day.

She listed war, poverty, hunger, children and elderly among female concerns.

"We need more shelters for battered women and children," she said. "We have more shelters for animals" than women and children.

Reddy encouraged feminists to take the lead in politics. "If you have the slightest interest in running for office, do it," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Bob Saget is hot, but he wants to be hotter. He wants be household-name hot.

He plays the widowed father Danny Tanner on the ABC-TV comedy "Full House" and he's hosting and co-writing the blockbuster new show ABC's "America's Funniest Home Videos."

"Kinda frightening, isn't it? I mean, people still don't know my name, but now they'll look at me in a restaurant, point and say, 'That's the guy.' I guess that's flattering, but I'm not sure," Saget said in a recent interview.

Saget has a few more opportunities to get his name out. He's a presenter on both the American Comedy Awards and People's Choice Awards telecasts, and he's writing, performing and directing a one-man "On Location" comedy special for HBO.

KINGSTON, N.Y. (AP) — Unlike other musicians, rock 'n' roll Hall of Famer Dion doesn't grumble when asked to perform his old hits.

"I love doing old songs," said the 50-year-old Dion DiMucci, who performed this week as part of the "Dave Edmunds Rock 'n' Roll Revue" at the Ulster County Playhouse.

"In fact, they have more value to me as time passes," he said. "And I see what they do to an audience. They love it. I get a big kick out of it."

"If the song is good, it's good," he said.

Rock-throwing Haitians protest death of girl at hands of soldiers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Hundreds of people, some throwing rocks, blocked streets in the capital today on the fourth day of protests triggered by the army's killing of a schoolgirl.

The normally bustling Port-au-Prince, a city of 1 million, was virtually deserted this morning, with schools and stores closed. Protesters blocked all main streets, and rocks were thrown at cars on the seafront.

On Thursday, thousands of people demonstrated in the capital and several provincial towns, setting fires and calling for the resignation of Haiti's military leader, Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril.

Three people were killed in the protests Thursday, including a soldier beaten to death by a mob, independent radio reports said. Fifteen people were injured in clashes with soldiers, according to witnesses and a doctor at the state hospital in Port-au-Prince.

The government has made no comment on the unrest, but a high-ranking government official said today that Avril has no plans to resign.

"Avril is ready to make concessions, but a hasty departure is out of the question," said the official, speaking on condition he not be further identified. He gave no indication what concessions were contemplated.

Avril indicated Wednesday he would resign if it was "the will of the people" but said that would cause "revolution and chaos."

The protests were triggered by the killing of 11-year-old Rosaline Vaval Monday in the town of Petit Goave, where 10,000 mourners attended her burial Thursday.

Radio Lumiere, a Protestant radio station, said today that a mob went on a rampage in Petit Goave, a town of 15,000, on Tuesday night, burning an army outpost, ransacking a government building and the mayor's house.

In Gonaives, a western port city of 40,000, mobs plundered the house of Mayor Alexandre Louissaint, a Baptist pastor, and ransacked his church and a government building, according to a resident who spoke anomously.

Earlier, about 3,000 people, shouting "Liberty!" and slogans against Avril, marched on the Presidential Palace in Port-au-Prince. Soldiers then fired in the air and beat demonstrators with billy clubs.

"The will of the people is for Avril to step down," said a communique released Thursday night by a coalition of 11 opposition parties that earlier had called on Haitians to rise against the military government.

The marches in the capital and at least five provincial towns are reminiscent of demonstrations in November 1985 to protest the army's killing of three high school students in Gonaives. Those protests led to the downfall of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier, who fled to exile in France in February 1986.

Avril, a former Duvalier aide who came to power in September 1988 in a coup led by rank-and-file soldiers, has been under increasing pressure from opposition groups to resign.

President Bush mentioned Haiti on Thursday while attending a ceremony in Fort Myer, Va., marking the U.S. invasion of Panama.

"The revolution continues," Bush said. "The people have spoken in Nicaragua. When they speak in Cuba and Haiti, our Western Hemisphere will be entirely within the compass of freedom."

The opposition in Nicaragua, backed by the United States, defeated President Daniel Ortega and his ruling Sandinistas in Feb. 25 elections.

After taking power, Avril promised elections and reforms but shipped seven pro-democracy leaders into exile during a crackdown in January and arrested more than 50 opposition activists, some of whom were beaten in custody.

Although Avril has promised to hold elections this year, many Haitians don't believe he can be trusted to hand over power to a civilian government.

In November 1987, the first free general elections since independence from France in 1804 were canceled after attackers protected by soldiers massacred at least 34 voters.

Students and government critics had called for a national day of mourning Thursday in sympathy for the 11-year-old girl, shot by a soldier breaking up an anti-government demonstration.

Maj. Gen. Serge Saint-Eloi, the inspector general of the army, said Thursday night the girl was shot by a soldier from a passing vehicle but said an investigation would not be conducted because her parents buried her before an autopsy could be done.

Israel attacks Palestinian base

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked a Palestinian guerrilla base near the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli today in the first raid in the region in nearly five years, the Israeli military command said.

Targets were hit that had served as "launching points" for attacks on Israel by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command headed by Ahmed Jibril, a military communique said.

The communique gave no details of damage or injuries in the raid on the Khan el-Khiyat area six miles north of Tripoli.

It said all Israeli planes returned safely.

While Israel frequently attacks guerrilla bases in south Lebanon in retaliation for attacks on or near the Israeli-Lebanese border, the raid in northern Lebanon was unusual.

The last in the area was on July 10, 1985, when Israeli jets demolished a headquarters building of the Syrian-backed Palestinian faction led by Saeed Mousa. At least five people were killed and 29 wounded in that air strike.

The last raid was Feb. 23 against a base near the south Lebanon city of Sidon. Lebanese police said it belonged to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Damascus-based Palestinian faction separate from Jibril's force.

Last year, Israeli aircraft flew 17 raids on targets in Lebanon, and Lebanese sources reported 28 people were killed in the attacks.

Jibril is a former Syrian army captain who founded the radical Popular Front in 1968. The group has hijacked several airliners. In April 1974, three of its gunmen attacked the northern Israeli town of Qiryat Shmona, killing 20 people before they were slain themselves.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Salvador rebels attack soldiers

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Rebels attacked soldiers at a power station and at least four army posts in the northern part of San Salvador, causing brief electrical outages, military sources said.

The areas also were the scene of heavy combat during a major offensive in November by the leftist Farabundo National Liberation Front.

"We do not have much information. We know they attacked guards at the Miralvalle electrical substation and army positions in Ayutuxtepeque, San Ramoon, Escandia and Plan de Pito," an army spokesman said by telephone.

The intense fire and occasional explosions Thursday night startled residents, but the armed forces press committee said no deaths or injuries were reported in the attacks in four densely populated northern sectors of the city.

Army troops moved through the area and military helicopters and planes directed lights onto suspected rebel positions.

The army spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said troops were patrolling the northern neighborhoods and other parts of the city "to avoid more terrorist harassment."

More than 71,000 people, the majority of them civilians, have been killed in the 10-year-old civil war against a succession of U.S.-backed governments.

Channel trip to be shorter

LONDON (AP) — A high-speed catamaran ferry will link Britain and France starting in June, cutting the current sailing time nearly in half, ferry operators announced.

Ferry voyages between Portsmouth, England, and Cherbourg, France now take nearly five hours.

The twin-hulled Christopher Columbus, built by International Catamarans of Tasmania, will set sail for England next month and be ready for commercial sailings in June, the ferry company, Hoverspeed, said Thursday.

It will carry up to 80 cars and 450 passengers, travel at up to 45 mph and cope with waves as high as 18 feet, the company said.

It said other routes, and the price and frequency of voyages, will be announced later.

A giant tunnel being dug under the Channel between France and England will offer 35-minute rail crossings. The $11 billion Eurotunnel, a joint project of British and French companies, is scheduled to open in mid-1993.

Vietnamese, Soviet meet

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Soviet Vice Premier Vladimir Gusev met this week with Premier Do Muoi of Vietnam and assured him of Moscow's continued strong backing for Vietnam, an official report seen on Thursday said.

In their meeting in Ho Chi Minh City on Tuesday, Gusev and Do discussed reforms in their countries and ways to make Soviet-Vietnamese cooperation more efficient, the Vietnam News Agency said.

The report, dated Wednesday, said Gusev left for home that day.

Gusev led the Soviet side at the 15th session of the Soviet-Vietnamese Intergovernmental Commission for Economic, Scientific and Technological Cooperation, held Monday and Tuesday.

The Soviet Union is Vietnam's main ally, but has decreased its aid in recent years as part of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of retrenchment in costly overseas involvement.

Card arrives 56 years late

STROUD, England (AP) — A woman has received a postcard from her father nearly 56 years after it was mailed, and more than 40 years after he died, the Post Office said Thursday.

Dorothy Horton, 73, of Stroud in western England, said she instantly recognized the writing of her father, Bill, on the early color postcard, dated June 20, 1934.

The post card was found behind old closets last week during refurbishment of the Stroud sorting office, a Post Office spokeswoman said.

Mrs. Horton was then 17-year-old Dorothy Meadows, but old-timers at the sorting office remembered the name and were able to trace her, the spokeswoman said.

JOHN M. CASTRO ENDORSES
NICK TAYLOR FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

I am area manager of a utility. I support Nick Taylor for several reasons.

Nick Taylor cares deeply about victims of crime. I have worked side-by-side with Nick with the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Another reason I support Nick is his extraordinary range of legal experience. For example, he is head of the tax, as well as other departments at his firm. He is recognized as a leading tax expert in West Texas. 25% of the pending civil cases in the Midland District Courts are tax cases. Also of great value to our community is his expertise in Business and Oil and Gas Law for 26 years. He has broad, well balanced experience.

Please join me in voting for Nick Taylor on March 13 in the Republican Primary

FAMILY MATTERS

Childhood issues may affect life

By JIM MAY, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My sister was just here for a visit and I am very worried about her. She is really my step-sister but I just about raised her. She was always "my baby." My father divorced my mother when I was 3 and she remarried when I was 10. She and my step-father had my step-sister when I was 11. Both of them worked so I took care of the baby. I didn't mind taking care of her and mostly remember that it was fine.

May

My sister is on the verge of divorcing her third husband. She says that he just doesn't give her what she needs. She says that he never talks to her and never pays her any compliments. They have a new baby and she says that he doesn't help at all. She may be right but I think that this husband is the best one of the bunch. He is very nice, has a good job, and I think takes very good care of my sister. I wish that my husband did as much for me as he does for her!

I listened patiently to my sister for three days and finally I just had it and told her that she needed to see someone. I told her that there just had to be more to this than she realizes because she has always had a hard time with relationships. She got mad at me and barely spoke for the last day before she left. I apologized to her just before she left and things got a little better. I still think that I am right, but now I don't know what to do next. I don't want to see her divorce (husband's name). What can I do to help? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Your sister may have unresolved childhood issues that are still effecting her life. She seems to want her husband to "parent" her, and doesn't think he is doing enough. The question then becomes, can anyone ever do enough? After two and possibly three divorces, your sister may find it appropriate to address some of her issues.

You can do very little until your sister wants to do something. Try reading John Bradshaw's book, "Healing the Shame That Binds You," to discover some insights into your sister's problems. The book has many references to guide you.

DEAR FAMILY: I am a 40-plus year old woman. I am a mother and grandmother. I think that I have had a blessed life. I have a good husband and marriage. We have sent all our children to college and they are doing well. I would say that we are a close family. I have many things to be thankful about. But I have one habit that I just can't seem to stop after all these years.

I am so ashamed to even discuss it so my husband said to write you. I pull the hairs out of my head in one particular place. I have done this for as long as I can remember. Some of my earliest memories are of sitting at my desk at school and being scolded by my teacher for pulling out my hair. I kept doing it but just learned to hide it better. I have tried to stop all these years but can't. I don't think that my children have ever known. My husband has been very good and never said anything about it, but as my hair is naturally thinning I am afraid that the problem is becoming more noticeable.

What causes me to do this? What can I do to stop it? I'm afraid I can't stop before it's too late. SCARED BALD

DEAR SCARED BALD: One of the most common reasons for this type of behavior is associated with childhood abuse — verbal, physical or sexual. A child often behaves this way when something is happening to her that is so bad she can't say anything. The abuser and-or the abuse has scared the child into silence, but she may demonstrate something is wrong by "self-damage."

The behavior may continue long after the abuse stops because the victim has become so conditoned to the role that she continues the victimization process. Often the victim carries some inwardly-directed rage at the unconscious level, and the behavior that began as a way of coping becomes a source of shame and fear. I encourage you to see a professional counselor to help you address this issue. Please get started. You have suffered long enough.

Study debunks dropout myths

NEW YORK (AP) — Teen-age mothers are no more likely to drop out of high school than their childless classmates, according to a recent study by Columbia University and Johns Hopkins University researchers.

However, dropouts who later had a child were much less likely to return to school and graduate than dropouts with no children, the national study of 5,400 women, now in their 20s, found.

The study was conducted by James McCarthy, an associate professor and director of the Center for Population and Family Health at Columbia University's School of Public Health, and Dawn M. Upchurch, an assistant professor at Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health.

The results, the researchers say, counter studies indicating that pregnancy and childbearing are directly responsible for adolescent girls' failure to graduate. They say behavior patterns such as smoking and drinking and enrolling in a non-college prep course are strong predictors of future dropouts, as are a lack of reading material in the home and a lack of education of the teens' mothers.

"Women who manage to remain in school when they become mothers," they say, "fare just as well as women who progress straight through without dropping out or having a baby.

Post-traumatic stress disorder studied

CHICAGO (AP) — A study of twins who served in the military during the Vietnam era offers new evidence that post-traumatic stress disorder is more a product of combat than of any inborn susceptibility to stress.

The findings indicate the disorder — marked by painful memories, flashbacks and nightmares — is three times more common among veterans who served in Southeast Asia than among their identical twins who served elsewhere.

The twins who saw heavy combat in Vietnam — 179 servicemen — were found to suffer nine times as often from the problem as their identical twins who served in the armed forces in other parts of the world.

"Identical twins are more similar than any two individuals," said lead researcher Jack Goldberg, an assistant professor of epidemiology at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

"And so you have two guys with 100 percent of the same genes, who grew up together, and one guy goes to war and one doesn't. And 15 years later, one has post-traumatic stress disorder and one doesn't. That sort of debunks the idea of predisposition."

A popular myth holds that "just the bad eggs were sent to Vietnam," Goldberg said in a telephone interview Thursday. "That's not the story. ... The average Joes went to Vietnam."

The study, published in Journal of the American Medical Association, was developed from a specially designed registry of 2,092 male twins in military service during the Vietnam War era, from 1965 to 1975.

The registry was established to further scientists' understanding of health problems believed to be partly due to genetic traits and partly to environment, including alcoholism, drug abuse and heart disease, he said.

When the survey was conducted in 1987, 16.8 percent of the twins who served in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam era had symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder. Just 5 percent of their identical twin brothers who didn't serve in Southeast Asia had the symptoms.

Terence M. Keane, chief of psychology at the Boston Veterans Administration Medical Center, said the study "represents a major advance in our understanding of post-traumatic stress disorder."

Panel warns infant mortality may rise in '90s

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's infant mortality rate may rise sharply if poor health trends aren't reversed, a national panel says.

"The negative maternal and child health trends of the 1980s cast a shadow on our children's future," said former Sen. Lawton Chiles, a Florida Democrat who is chairman of the bipartisan National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality.

Smoking, drinking and drug use by pregnant women caused a significant part of the infant death problem, the independent panel reported.

Lives and money could be saved if greater access to prenatal and pediatric care were provided to pregnant women and young children, the report said.

"Progress in reducing infant mortality has stalled," Chiles said. "In the 1990s, we may see more infants die per year than the 40,000 we now lose before their first birthdays."

The report said progress in reducing the infant mortality rate slowed from 4.7 percent per year in the 1970s to 2.7 percent per year in the 1980s.

It also cited:

- An increased number of high-risk pregnant women. Use of crack cocaine, women with AIDS and syphilis, and births to unmarried mothers all increased during the 1980s. A 1988 survey found 11 percent of pregnant women use illegal drugs.
- An increase in the black-white infant mortality gap. Black infant mortality has been twice the white rate for years, and recently the black rate has declined at a slower pace, resulting in a widening of the gap.
- Low birthweight infants. There was no improvement in the 1980s in the percentage of infants born under 5.5 pounds.
- Inadequate prenatal care. The number of women obtaining late or no prenatal care increased between 1980 and 1987. The increase was 17 percent for whites and 26 percent for blacks. In 1987, more than 74,000 pregnant women received no prenatal care — a 50 percent increase over the 1980 rate.

The commission cited figures showing the United States ranked 20th among developed countries in the rate of infant mortality in 1987.

DEAR ABBY

Daughter wants parents to move

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 72 and I am 71. We have yearly checkups and are both in very good health. We live comfortably in our own home, with no mortgage and no debts. Our neighbors are very friendly, and we also have relatives living in this city, where we have lived happily for more than 50 years.

Van Buren

Our daughter and her husband, who are both physicians, live in Oregon. They are worried about our advancing age and want us near them. They say the little house next to them is now for sale and they want to buy it for us, in case at some point we have an emergency and need their help.

We are very appreciative of their kindness and have told them time and again that we are happy here, but they insist that we would be better off living next door to them.

We want our daughter and her husband to fulfill their lives as we did and quit worrying about our future. It would be difficult for us to move at our ages, but they are very insistent! We respect your opinion, Abby. What should I do? — HAPPY IN FRESNO

DEAR HAPPY: Your children's concern for your welfare is admirable, but I think you'd be making a big mistake to give up your home and relocate because "at some point" you may need their help.

Older people fare best in familiar surroundings. So assure your children that you appreciate their generosity and caring, but you prefer to stay in Fresno, where you are happily and securely rooted.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I travel in a van with our two standard poodles. In mild weather they can stay in the van overnight, but when it's very hot or very cold, we cannot leave them in a closed-up van, so we put them in a kennel. This is quite expensive, and not satisfactory when we take long trips.

Can you tell us where to find a directory of overnight accommodations that allow dogs to stay in the rooms with their owners? We realize there are probably not many, because dogs can be destructive, dirty or noisy. Our vet knows of no such directory.

Thank you for any help you can give us. — WOODBURY, CONN.

DEAR WOODBURY: The American Automobile Association (AAA) has a list of hotels and motels that allow pets. Contact your local office for more information.

I am reminded of this charming message one reader saw framed and hanging near the registration desk in a small hotel:

"Dogs are welcome in this hotel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-yous, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter. It also includes how to properly address the clergy, government officials, dignitaries, widows and others. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Families can suffer estrangements

N.Y. Times News Service

"I haven't spoken to my parents in eight years," said Nancy S., who is 31 and lives with her husband and daughter in a suburb of Minneapolis. "I was very close to them when I was growing up, but they just can't accept me as an adult," said Nancy, who asked that her full name not be used.

Nancy's unwillingness to be identified reflects the expectations that people have for parent-child relationships in adulthood.

People who might speak freely and without embarrassment about their divorces, for example, worry what others will think of them if they say they are estranged from their parents or from their adult children.

It seems unnatural for a relationship that is expected to be lifelong to turn sour. It is often viewed as a failure by the people it happens to, and they wonder if they are the ones who have failed.

Nancy frequently says that she is "a good person," as if her relationship with her parents called that into question.

Mary W., also of suburban Minneapolis, and her husband have been estranged from his 20-year-old son for three and a half years.

"Other parents don't understand it at all," said Mary, who also asked that she not be fully identified. Although her stepson reluctantly agreed to accompany Mary and his father to a family therapy session, he refused to speak and sometimes threw tantrums, she said.

"Outsiders blame us," Mary said. "Even other people in our family blame us. The psychologist we've seen for the past five years says that our son needs time to grow out of this. I honestly don't think that will happen."

Dr. Bonnie J. Kin, a clinical psychologist and an associate professor of psychology at California State College in Dominguez Hills, said that "estrangements are much more common than most people realize. I've seen a lot of people who've been estranged from their parents for more than five years."

There are many reasons for severing the relationship, including physical or emotional abuse, an upsetting divorce or marriage, or a difference over fundamental values or religion. Nancy's family reflects the reason that researchers say is most common.

"This comes up when families try to shift their relationship from adult-child to adult-adult," said Dr. Jill S. Grigsby, an associate professor of sociology at Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., who studies relations between young adults and their parents in several cultures.

Nancy said she felt the first tremors of a family breakup about a decade ago when she announced her wedding plans. Her parents had trouble accepting her adult roles as wife and mother.

"They don't like my husband, and they still spend time with my old boyfriend," she said. "It's difficult for them not to think of me as a kid. When I got married, it was as if they'd lost their baby."

Both she and her husband get along well with his parents, as does their 8-year-old daughter. "She's never really known my parents," Nancy said. "She doesn't ask about them."

The barrier between grandchildren and grandparents that comes with such estrangements worries some psychologists. They say parents should pay close attention to the messages they are sending their own children.

"Grandchildren learn how to treat their parents by the ways in which they see their parents treat the grandparents," said Dr. Matti Gershenfeld, an adjunct professor of psychoeducational processes at Temple University in Philadelphia.

Nancy has resigned herself to limiting her communication with her parents to little more than an annual Christmas card.

"It's become easier as time has passed," she said. "Life's too short to be sad or angry all the time."

Family ties bind psychologically too

N.Y. Times News Service

Psychotherapists readily admit that not all estrangements between adult children and their parents can or should be patched up. But many effects of severing the relationship are not always obvious.

■ The relationship will continue in some form, even after the rift.

"You can only be physically estranged from your parents; you can't feel psychologically free from them," said Dr. Eleanor Mallach Bromberg, an associate professor in the school of social work at Hunter College in Manhattan.

"We battle with them in our minds even after they're dead," Bromberg said. "That's the paradox for these people. They spend so much of their time avoiding things that remind them of their parents that they become even more involved psychologically with their parents."

■ The split may have an effect on grandchildren.

Children who have no relationship with either set of grandparents not only may have more difficulties in later relationships with their parents, but may also lack self-esteem.

Dr. M. Duncan Stanton, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Rochester, cited a study of adolescents and drug abuse. "Those most at risk often had little sense of their family history," he said. "Even who their grandparents were."

■ If you do decide to rebuild the relationship, recognize that it will probably take a few tries.

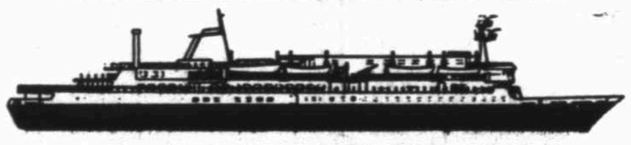

"Issues of pride are often involved," Stanton said. "Relatively minor or petty issues may have gotten out of control."

He recommended asking other family members for support in making the changes. "The more people who are involved, the better it's going to be," he said.

■ Respect each other as adults. This is especially important if adult children feel they are being treated like teen-agers. One man felt that the last straw was when his mother came to his home and rearranged the things in his refrigerator, said Dr. Matti Gershenfeld, a psychologist at Temple University and the president of the Couples Learning Center in Jenkintown, Pa., outside Philadelphia.

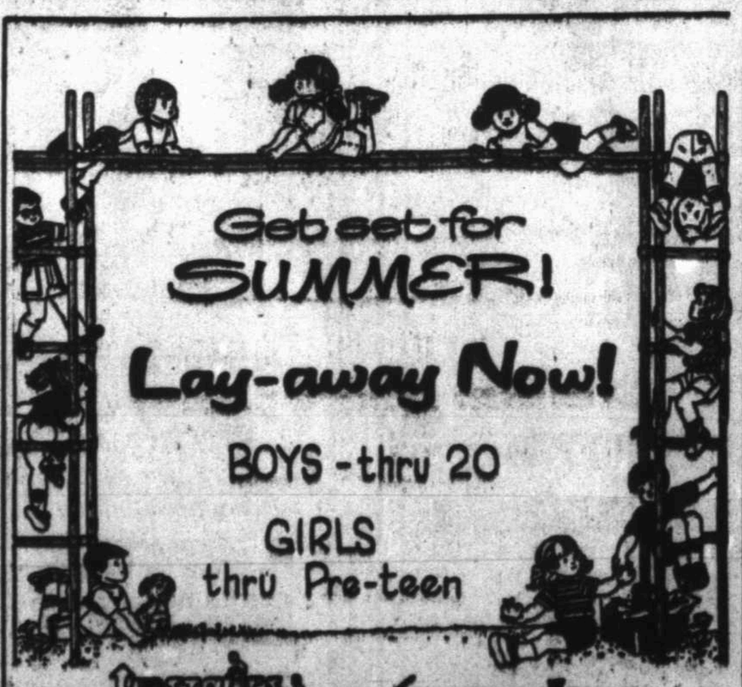

"I told the mother to treat her son as if he were her next-door neighbor's son," Gershenfeld said. "After all, you wouldn't go into that person's house and rearrange the refrigerator."

Irishman still politically active at 88

By RICK HAMPSON

NEW YORK (AP) — It used to take the old IRA man an hour to cross the room at a NORAID fund-raiser, besieged as he was by people who wanted to shake his hand, kiss his cheek or snap his picture.

This, they'd tell their children, is Michael Flannery: the teen-age soldier who fought the British in Ireland's war of independence; the young man who moved to America but never forgot Ireland; the old man who founded Irish Northern Aid to support the Irish Republican Army's battle against British rule in Northern Ireland.

But when NORAID held its annual dinner in January, for the first time in 18 years Michael Flannery stayed home.

At 88, most people are inclined to ease off, accepting easy acclaim and benign deference. Not Flannery. He has denounced the leaders of NORAID and of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political party, for placing too much faith in politics and not enough in military force.

"It grieved me to leave NORAID, because I was its founder," he says in his squeaky brogue. "But it was the only thing my conscience would allow me to do."

For three-quarters of a century, Flannery's conscience repeatedly has forced him to choose principle over expediency, and to fight other Irishmen over how to best fight the British.

On a recent morning Flannery greeted a reporter at the door of his Queens home. His step, once brisk, now inclined toward a shuffle, and his back, once ramrod stiff, was slightly hunched. He sat on a piano bench in the living room, folded his long, thin hands on his lap and talked for two hours straight.

HE BEGAN not a month, a year, or a decade ago, but on Easter 1916, when Irish nationalists rose against British rule. He was a lanky 14-year-old from Tipperary who volunteered to run messages for the rebels.

The Anglo-Irish conflict ended in 1921 with a treaty giving 26 of Ireland's 32 counties virtual independence as the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Free State, based in Dublin. But the six mostly Protestant northeastern counties remained part of the United Kingdom, and civil war ensued in the south between those for and against the partition.

Flannery joined the anti-treaty IRA faction led by Eamon de Valera, and was captured and imprisoned for two years. He saw several of his comrades executed in reprisal for IRA attacks, and he took part in a 39-day hunger strike. He left prison as bitter at Dublin as he was at London.

De Valera, however, formed a new political party in 1926 and led his supporters into the Dublin parliament. Flannery, meanwhile, had moved to America; he watched in horror as de Valera rose to power and crushed the IRA, which still fought for a unified Irish republic.

"Within four years de Valera was arresting IRA men," Flannery said. "Four years after that he was executing them."

Flannery settled in the New York City borough of Queens with his wife, got a job with an insurance company and joined Irish athletic and cultural groups. And he raised money for the IRA.

THE AMERICAN Irish lost interest in Ireland's intramural squabbles, but Flannery never gave up. He claimed to have visited every saloon in New York City, looking for donations even though he was a teetotaler — a remnant of military discipline.

When a rising tide of violence against Catholics in Northern Ireland revived the IRA in the late 1960s, Flannery was ready.

Again he faced a choice: the "official" IRA, which decided to seek power politically or the "provisional" IRA, which took up arms in the North.

Flannery threw in with the Provos. With a few other vets, he founded NORAID.

Flannery insisted that the millions NORAID collected went to the families of dead or imprisoned IRA soldiers. But in 1981 he was arrested on his way out of church and accused of banking an operation to smuggle guns to the IRA.

At the trial, Flannery delivered his own opening statement. "We are indicted here for the love of freedom," he said, "and the love of freedom alone."

Even those opposed to the IRA, whose attacks often killed or maimed civilians, were moved by such a durable passion. Although Flannery and his co-defendants essentially admitted the accusations, they were found innocent, and the next year Flannery was elected grand marshal of the New York St. Patrick's Day parade.

But America's guns, money and prayers did not resolve Northern Ireland's troubles, and in 1986 Sinn Fein declared itself willing to take seats in the Dublin parliament, a body from which militant nationalists had abstained since the island's partition. To Flannery, this was official recognition of the government that had imprisoned him, killed his comrades and sold out the North.

The IRA sided with Sinn Fein, as did most of NORAID's younger members. Flannery did not press the issue; he continued to attend some NORAID functions, and NORAID continued to use his name.

BUT LAST year a rift developed in NORAID, and Flannery joined dissidents in accusing the organization's leaders of steering it "toward politics and away from its original humanitarian objectives."

Shortly thereafter he stood before NORAID's executive committee in a wedding hall in Queens and accused Sinn Fein's leaders of being "Free Staters" whose devotion to politics would soon obscure the military battle against the British. And he decried Sinn Fein's willingness to acknowledge the Dublin parliament as long as Ireland was divided.

A group of young Irish immigrants did not like what they were hearing.

"I was shouted down," Flannery recalled. "The howling mob would not listen to me."

FLANNERY VIEWS the struggle to unify Ireland as a holy quest in which the means is as important as the end. What matters is not so much the outcome of the battle, but how it is fought: by expediency or by principle.

Services help elderly maintain nourishing diet

By STEVE EDWARDS

Elderly people, especially those who live alone, often do not prepare nourishing meals for themselves. Because good nutrition is important to good health, many food-related services have been developed to help Midland's elderly:

Edwards

■ Meals on Wheels: A Monday through Friday home-delivery of meals program for low-income elderly or disabled homebound individuals. Eligibility is determined by the Texas Department of Human Services. Meals on Wheels is a federal/state-funded program which is supplemented by county, United Way and community donations.

■ Need-A-Meal: Another Monday through Friday home-delivered program, provides meals to persons who do not qualify for the Meals on Wheels program but who do need the service because of disability, illness, frailty or isolation. Eligibility is not limited by the income level of the client, and payment is based on ability to pay. Cost differences are supplemented by funds from the Texas Department of Aging and contributions from Midland County, United Way and the community.

■ Share-A-Meal: Established in 1979 as a weekend extension of Meals on Wheels, Share-A-Meal provides Saturday and Sunday home-delivered meals to low-income individuals. The program is made possible by United Way and community donations.

■ Congregate meals: A Monday through Friday Senior Center meals program. Noon meals are served at Dellwood Mall Senior Center, Southeast Senior Center and Casa de Amigos, in order to provide older people with nutritious meals and socialization. The program is funded by the Texas Department on Aging, Midland County and participant donations. Transportation is provided if needed.

■ Grocery Express: Many elderly people can cook, but have difficulty shopping. Grocery Express is a shopping and delivery service available weekdays to homebound individuals who cannot shop for needed food or prescriptions. The shopping is done by volunteers.

Midland has many services to help older people and their families. The programs listed above are available through Community and Senior Services. For more information call 689-6693. For information on other support services, call the United Way.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Angleton amnesia victim may have lived under several different identities

ANGLETON (AP) — An Angleton man located in Kansas last month after suffering amnesia also may have lived under different identities in California and Washington, D.C., authorities say.

Melvin Wolf, an Angleton appliance repairman, had been known as John Doe since he was found Oct. 19 wandering the streets of Topeka, Kan., without identification. He told authorities he didn't know his name or what he was doing there.

His identity surfaced last month after two relatives saw a television report on his plight in Milwaukee, Wis., where he grew up. Wolf had left Angleton in August, telling relatives he was going to Washington to take care of personal business.

Authorities said since then, a television viewer reported Wolf also may be Jim King, an insurance salesman who disappeared from Burbank, Calif., in 1978. Another report said he may be a short-order cook named Robert J. Hart, who vanished from Washington at least three years ago.

"You can call it interesting. I'd call it bizarre," said Rick Selig, the Topeka clinical therapist who worked with Wolf to help him regain his memory before he returned to Angleton this week.

Selig, who has been using hypnosis to treat Wolf's amnesia, said he believes Wolf's personality could accommodate changes that would have allowed him to live under other identities.

"From what I know of Melvin, he is a man who gets fed up easily," Selig said. "When he does, he distances himself."

Authorities said Jim King left behind a wife and two children when he disappeared from Burbank in 1978 under suspicious circumstances. Burbank police investigator Kathy Speirs said King is suspected of embezzling an undetermined about of money from his employer, an insurance company.

Ms. Speirs said King has been listed as legally dead for several years, but the case was reopened after an insurance company employee identified the Topeka amnesia victim as King. Authorities now are seeking Wolf's fingerprints and personal records to prove or disprove the allegation.

Wolf arrived in Angleton from California three years ago, but relatives said he did not recognize the green van he drove here when he saw it Tuesday.

A Washington restaurant worker told Topeka police investigator Bill Huffnier he saw a similar television report and the amnesia victim was Robert J. Hart, a former short-order cook at the restaurant. But Washington police have no missing persons report filed on Hart.

Wolf's family, who are shielding him from the press while he recovers, said they doubt Wolf and King are the same person.

"When we saw the pictures, it didn't even look like him. We don't know what happened. Nobody does," said Charlie Caskey, Wolf's brother-in-law.

Selig suspects Wolf is suffering from psychogenic amnesia brought on by great pain or stress. He said he did not believe Wolf is faking the amnesia to hide his past.

"From day one, part of our task was to assess whether he was faking it," Selig said. "I don't believe he is, and my colleagues don't believe it. It would have been so easy to trip him up, especially under hypnosis."

Stormie Jones, 12, and her mother, Lois Purcell, left, speak at a news conference in Pittsburgh Thursday, as Stormie continues to recover from her second liver transplant.

12-year-old bounces back after second transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Encouraged by friends, family and a little voice inside her, the world's longest surviving heart-liver transplant patient said Thursday she's bouncing back following her second liver transplant.

"I guess it's just hope," 12-year-old Stormie Jones said during a news conference at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. "There's a thing in the back of your head that says, 'Get up.' "

Cuddling a stuffed koala bear that accompanied her to the operating room last month, Stormie said she hopes to return to her home in the Fort Worth, Texas, suburb of White Settlement within a month.

Once home, she said, she'd like to take a bath and go to bed.

Stormie, dressed in sweat pants and a Children's Hospital sweat shirt, teasingly sparred with her mother, Lois "Susie" Purcell, during the news conference. Speaking softly, she said she disliked being in the public eye and media interviews.

Although she and her mother are optimistic Stormie's body will accept the new liver, Stormie said she understood there's a remote chance of rejection within six years.

"They told me I might be having a little rejection, which made me mad," she said.

Mrs. Purcell said she credits Stormie's seemingly fast recovery to FK-506, an experimental anti-rejection drug developed in Japan. Researchers say the drug is more powerful and causes fewer side effects than cyclosporine, the anti-rejection medicine the girl had been taking since her historic heart-liver transplant on Feb. 14, 1984.

Stormie said she had hoped the first round of transplants would be her last.

"I thought I wasn't going to have any more problems again, but I guess I was wrong," said the sixth-grader.

Stormie received a second liver Feb. 20 because the first transplanted organ was damaged by hepatitis caused by an unknown virus.

"It hurts to see her go through this again," said Mrs. Purcell.

The day after her second transplant, Stormie returned to the operating room to stop internal bleeding, which occurs in about 10 percent of all patients receiving a second transplant.

"I thought, 'Now what are you taking out,' " Stormie said.

Stormie has been playing with other children at the hospital, reading books and building a wooden doll house.

She said she is trying to write a book for other children about her experiences but has so far completed only a page, partly because she doesn't like to write.

Stormie's donor heart has remained healthy, doctors said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Men slash KKK on back of worker in robbery

BEAUMONT (AP) — Police are searching for two men who slashed KKK on a man's back after robbing the flower shop where he worked.

Police believe the bandits who robbed Fresh Flowers early Thursday also robbed a second floral shop, Mike's Roses Roses, 13 minutes later.

Mohammad Sareh, 38, who was working in the 24-hour Fresh Flowers shop, told police a man was pretending to be shopping when another man stepped out from behind a cooler with a shotgun and struck him in the back of the head several times with the butt of the gun.

The men then cut Sareh's pants off him, held him down and cut the 5-inch letters KKK into his back and left other slash marks and cuts on his body and head.

The initials KKK often are used to identify the Ku Klux Klan.

The men took an undetermined amount of money from the register and from Sareh's wallet, police said.

Sareh was treated and released from Baptist Hospital.

Famous jewelry maker testifies

KERRVILLE (AP) — Likening some of his company's principles to the Ten Commandments, James Avery of James Avery Craftsman Inc. testified that he tries to adhere to corporate standards but doesn't always do so.

Avery took the witness stand in a trial resulting from a civil lawsuit against him. He testified again Thursday following questioning Wednesday about his corporate principles.

Former company president Charles Wolfmueller Jr., who was fired in November, filed the suit claiming he was wrongfully dismissed and was denied an opportunity to increase his ownership in the company.

During questioning from Wolfmueller's attorney Shelton Padgett of San Antonio, Avery was asked whether rules in the company employee handbook and other company publications apply to him.

"Quality, integrity and ethics are key words for us," the handbook states, adding that employees should "operate in a manner consistent with Judeo-Christian values."

Wolfmueller accuses Avery of letting an extramarital relationship with company personnel director Sylvia Flores shape his business decisions at the Kerrville-based corporation.

Law would assure MLK holiday

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston lawmaker said he intends to file legislation to require school districts to observe Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday as a holiday, after a school district in his city turned down such a proposal.

Ron Wilson, a Democrat, said Thursday he will present the measure as an amendment to school funding legislation. The Legislature is in special session to address a Texas Supreme Court ruling that the public school finance system is unconstitutional.

The all-white board of trustees of Spring Branch Independent School District in Houston voted 4-3 this week to reject a biracial committee's recommendation to observe King's birthday as a school holiday next year.

Wilson, who is black, said he was insulted by the decision.

Man let out of prison early; arrested in slaying of three

How prison policies slash years off criminals' terms

It started with reports on crime. And the high incidence of parolee crime in Michigan. And ended by placing the blame for much of that crime on prison officials.

Officials who, in an effort to ease prison overcrowding, were themselves breaking the law.

It aroused public outrage and forced the state to make changes in the system.

Changes that wouldn't have occurred if a few reporters at a Detroit newspaper hadn't been looking for a story.

PART-TIME JOB$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- adults who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- youths who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
