Enrollment District enjoys increase

Enrollment in Hereford schools for the first week of 1998-99 classes leveled off with 4,146 students showing up for classes Friday. This compares with an enrollment of 4,268 students during the first week of the 1997-98 school year.

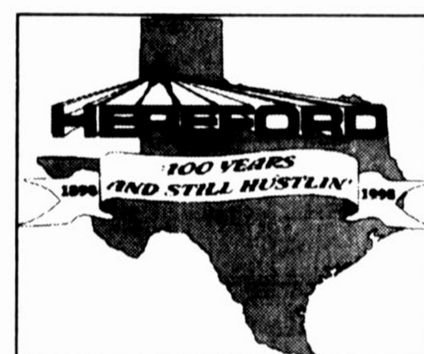

The school district experienced a steady growth in student population throughout the first week of school as many students registered late.

School officials expect the student population to continue growing as more families return from vacation or other commitments and begin enrolling their students.

The largest campus population was recorded at Hereford High School, with 1,223 students attending class. This is a jump from the same reporting period last year when 1,173 students enrolled during the first week of the 1997-98 classes.

Other campuses and their enrollments include:

- Aikman Primary, 437;
- Bluebonnet Intermediate, 350;
- Northwest Primary, 417;
- Shirley Intermediate, 274;
- Stanton Special Programs, 143;
- Tierra Blanca Primary, 326;
- West Central Intermediate, 313; and
- Hereford Junior High, 666.

The special section commemorating Hereford's centennial that was published Aug. 2 by The Hereford Brand offered a wealth of information about the city's first 100 years.

However, there were many stories not in the special section, not only because of space limitations but also because the newspaper staff just didn't have the information.

If any of our readers have a good idea for a Centennial Year story, please call The Brand at 364-2030 and let us know about it.

Just because the special section already has been printed doesn't mean we're no longer interested in stories about Hereford's past.

HRMC sees less revenue, spending

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Interim administrator George Parsley initiated some belt-tightening moves during early summer after Hereford Regional Medical Center saw a downturn in its revenue.

Although the administrators predict the hospital will finish Fiscal 1999 in the black, the budget approved last week by the Deaf Smith County Hospital District reflects the belt-tightening attitude that took hold during the summer.

The budget package submitted to the board for its approval anticipates net operating revenue of $9.73 million in the year beginning Oct. 1. That represents a decrease of about 11.5 percent in revenue from the $11 million anticipated at the start of the current fiscal year.

However, the new projection of revenue for the year ending Sept. 30 now is estimated to be about slightly more than $10.2 million, or about $888,000 less than budgeted.

In actual figures, the hospital's revenue was about $10.9 million in FY 1996 and $10.6 million in FY 1997.

The budget calls for spending $9.6 million, about 10.3 percent lower than the $10.7 projected for the current year, leaving the hospital with a $94,203 surplus on Sept. 30, 1999.

That small surplus, while meaning the administration anticipates the hospital will finish FY 1999 in the black, also represents a sharp decline from previous years.

For example, FY 1996 ended with a surplus of $1.04 million, while FY 1997 saw the hospital finish $207,566 in the black. The budget for the year ending Sept. 30 projected a $324,300 surplus; however, estimates now are predicting a $481,000 loss. That loss may be wiped out, however, if the hospital does not have to repay the Medicare/Medicaid system for possible overpayments in the home health care program. The hospital has already put nearly $400,000 in reserve for the repayment, if it is necessary.

The expenditures by department in next year are:

- $672,703, medical/surgical;
- $15,658, swing bed;

- $64,656, intensive care;
- $152,301, OB/GYN;
- $59,724, nursery;
- $133,823, operating room;
- $42,173, recovery room;
- $80,678, delivery room;
- $294,729, central supply;
- $698,039, emergency room;
- $286,395, ambulance;
- $524,780, laboratory;
- $422,623, radiology;
- $269,762, pharmacy;
- $193,740, anesthesia;
- $193,606, respiratory therapy;
- $117,166, physical therapy;
- $594,185, home care services;
- $48,406, children's trust fund;
- $39,546, infection control;
- $110,476, quality management;
- $47,684, cardiac rehabilitation;

- $180,461, dietary;
- $366,684, plant operations;
- $7,276, safety & security;
- $179,118, housekeeping;
- $63,148, laundry;
- $108,578, medical records;
- $171,176, WorkSmart;
- $45,500, marketing;
- $75,420, personnel;
- $537,317, business office;
- $292,986, women's & children's clinic;
- $26,650, crisis center;
- $502,679, administration;
- $10,000, M/E compliance;
- $1,632,294, other administrative;
- $143,353, financial services; and
- $237,206, clinical services.

Board gets 'wish list' from hospital departments

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors will be asked to approve a wish list of $943,718 for Fiscal 1999 at their next meeting.

The directors on Tuesday tabled discussion of the Hereford Regional Medical Center's capital expenditures budget.

The capital expenditures budget represents those items hospital department heads would like to purchase during the fiscal year; however, the board often decides not to buy certain pieces of equipment or defers it to another year.

The two big-ticket items in the proposed budget are $280,000 for digital radiographic/fluoroscopic

The EMS is seeking $125,000 to purchase a 1999 Type 1 modular ambulance to replace an 11-year-old unit, and $120,000 for a Type 1 ambulance to replace at 12-year-old unit.

The EMS requests also include $10,000 for a new engine/transmission in another ambulance, and $10,800 for four syringe pump boosters to replace older units.

The cardiac rehabilitation department has requested $42,000 for an enhanced telemetry system because the current system cannot be upgraded. The request also states the new equipment would allow the equipment for the diagnostic imaging department and $245,000 for two new ambulances for the Hereford Emergency Medical Services.

The digital radiographic/fluoroscopic equipment for the diagnostics imaging department is intended to replace a 14-year-old R&F room. The average life span of the equipment is eight years.

The R&F equipment purchase accounts for more than half of the department's $502,000 proposed capital expenditures. Other purchases recommended by the department head include $77,500 to replace a mammography system; $92,000 for a new ultrasound unit; $24,000 to renovate the new R&F room; and $15,000 for a new X-ray tube.

department to increase patient load without having to hire new employees.

The emergency room is requesting $16,500 for three new trauma beds to replace units which are difficult to maneuver, and $10,000 for two new monitor/defibrators to replace units described as requiring frequent maintenance.

Although not listed as a department, there is a big-ticket item called "strategic capital." This request calls for $150,000 to replace the heating and cooling system for the hospital.

Petition organizer anxious for results on latest ELC election

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Deja vu? Dennis Hicks couldn't be blamed if he thinks the expanded local calling (ELC) election is a case of same thing, second version.

The Hereford businessman who spearheaded the petition drive to have the election to give local Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. customers a chance to vote on toll-free calls to exchanges in Amarillo and Canyon said Friday ballots were received by SW Bell customers a week ago, but apparently no other ballots have been received locally, raising concerns the company is not sending out enough ballots -- the same thing that happened in April.

SW Bell had until Sept. 20 to mail out the ballots, so Hicks said the Texas Public Utilities Commission, which regulates telephone companies, told him to wait until after mail deliveries on Monday before contacting the agency again.

The PUC voided the ballots sent out by SW Bell in April after it was discovered there was a discrepancy between the number of customers who were mailed ballots and the number of access lines.

The ballots were sent out after a petition was submitted to the PUC requesting an election to decide if Hereford could expand its local calling area to the Amarillo and Canyon exchanges.

Several days after the ballots were mailed, Linda Hymans, the commission's ELC coordinator, began receiving calls from Hereford subscribers who had not received a ballot.

Subscribers were asked to send Hymans a letter stating they had not received a ballot and how they would have voted.

Seventeen letters were received by the PUC; however, when the PUC staff checked those names with the master list supplied by the telephone company, the names were not on the list of subscribers.

The master list was verified with 7,592 access lines, but only 4,620 ballots were mailed. Multiple lines were eliminated, as were SW Bell test lines, leaving about 3,000 subscribers without ballots.

The PUC ordered the telephone company to file a written report explaining the discrepancies.

In its order, the PUC voided the ballots and ordered the telephone company to "resolve discrepancies between the number of customers who were mailed ballots and the number of access lines, including any information received from subscribers who did not receive ballots" and to provide a new master list "that accurately represents each subscriber in the Hereford exchange ... and provides a detailed explanation of what actions were taken to resolve the discrepancies."

Hicks, owner/operator of Hicks Well Service, has said he doesn't believe the discrepancy was deliberate, saying he believes it was just a mistake by the telephone company.

However, Hicks said Friday he has become concerned because he's been contacted by SW Bell customers who have not yet received ballots.

Hicks contacted the PUC and was told to wait until after Monday's mail delivery to recontact the agency. He said after Monday any SW Bell customer who has not received a ballot should contact his office and provide their name, address and telephone number. Hicks' number is 364-5090.

If ELC measure is approved by 70 percent of the subscribers who return ballots, the PUC will order SW Bell to stop charging long-distance toll between Hereford and the Amarillo/Canyon exchanges.

SW Bell's customers in Hereford would see a new line-item charge on their monthly telephone bills. The company would charge up to $3.50 for residential customers and up to $7 for commercial customers for expanded calling.

The ELC was designed to enable communities, such as Hereford, with less than 10,000 telephone lines to petition the PUC for toll-free service with larger communities.

In a previous ELC election, some Hereford residents apparently were confused about the telephone exchanges involved.

Hereford Mayor Bob Josseland said the capsule, unlike those that were raised during the Centennial Celebration/Town & Country Jubilee, will be placed in a raised vault. He said the decision to place the capsule in an above-ground vault was made after the contents of the time capsules raised during the Centennial Celebration were found to have sustained extensive damage during the 25 years and 50 years they were under ground.

Josseland also said residents of Hereford are asked to provide information about what should be in the time capsule to be "buried" at 8 p.m. Sept. 1.

Josseland said anyone who has an idea about the contents of the capsule should contact City Manager Chester Nolen, City Secretary Terri Johnson or any member of the Hereford City Commission.

Rice lands ranking in college field Stands alone among Texas schools

By The Associated Press

Rice University stands alone as the only Texas school to make it into U.S. News & World Report's annual ranking of the top 50 universities in the nation.

Three schools, Harvard, Princeton and Yale, are tied for first place. Baylor, Southern Methodist, Texas A&M, Texas Christian and the University of Texas were ranked as second-tier schools, those coming in behind No. 50.

Texas Southern and Texas Tech were ranked as fourth-tier schools. The rankings are included in the magazine's annual publication, "America's Best Colleges," which goes on sale Monday.

Rice University President Malcolm Gillis said Friday that the results of this year's poll have been sitting on his desk for more than a day. He said he'll be lucky if he reads the article by the end of the weekend.

"This is like a beauty contest - the very idea of ranking schools," Gillis said. "We understand they want to sell magazines, but we don't have to take them the very seriously."

He said it's nice to receive a high ranking "but we have a pretty good about what our identity is. We don't need to find it in rankings."

The magazine used several criteria, including an institution's reputation among academics, the percentage of students that graduate, student-faculty ratio and financial resources, such as spending per student and alumni giving.

The magazine reported that Rice, with about 4,000 students, has one of the highest graduation rates among the top-ranked schools with 88 percent. Harvard leads the list with 97 percent.

School officials also said all Rice graduates who apply for graduate school are accepted, and 75 percent of those are accepted by their first choice.

"We have a lot of things to be proud of," Gillis said. But the president of the smallest private school to make the top 50 said parents should be cautious about college rankings.

"It's so simple to have rankings, and it's also quite misleading," Gillis said. "They (parents) should reflect just a little bit and think about how the school should fit the needs of their children."

Officials at Texas A&M-College Station, which was ranked No. 15 on the top public universities list, also said parents should consider more than ranking when looking for the right school for their children.

Dr. Walter Wendler, executive assistant to the president, said Texas A&M pays attention to the rankings because they act as a barometer as to how the school is doing.

"Last year we were 19th and that's an improvement of four spots for us," said Dr. Walter Wendler, executive assistant to the president. "What is important is there has been a trend over the last five years that the perception of A&M is rising."

GOP supports U.S. strikes

NEWS in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans are presenting an increasingly unified front in supporting President Clinton's missile strikes in Sudan and Afghanistan as U.S. officials suggest more strikes might come in the future.

"That's always a possibility," Defense Secretary William Cohen said Friday after he briefed members of Congress on the strikes and the aftermath.

The briefings, in which Cohen was joined by Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and CIA Director George Tenet, appeared to ease some earlier GOP concerns over Clinton's motivations and timing for the attacks.

After the briefings Friday, Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., said, "There does appear to be credible evidence to suggest that targeting an Osama bin Laden terrorist training site was necessary." He referred to the camp in Afghanistan that was attacked, and the alleged terrorist accused by the United States of involvement in the twin U.S. embassy bombings in Africa Aug. 7.

Although most GOP leaders lined up with Clinton on Thursday, Coats had been outspoken in questioning the timing in light of the Monica Lewinsky investigation.

While softening his rhetoric, Coats said in a statement, "It is unfortunate, however, that the president has put himself in a position in which questions about his timing are unavoidable. It is the president's private scandal that is leading to the public's skepticism."

Lewinsky said she didn't want to testify
WASHINGTON (AP) - Last December, Monica Lewinsky told President Clinton she didn't want to testify in a sexual harassment lawsuit against the president, say legal sources familiar with their secret grand jury testimony.

Clinton replied that a number of women were filing affidavits in the case, the sources said Friday. Witnesses often file affidavits to avoid undergoing questioning by attorneys in a deposition.

The incident highlights the difficulties both Congress and Clinton likely face in dealing with the subject of possible obstruction of justice in the Lewinsky investigation.

Ms. Lewinsky ended up filing an affidavit in the Paula Jones harassment case denying she had a sexual relationship with Clinton.

But there is no evidence the conversation she and the president had about the suggested affidavit involved any direction by him for her to lie.

Ms. Lewinsky told the grand jury that early in their relationship in late 1995 or early 1996 the two had discussed concealment, but that such conversations had ended long before the onset of their possible testimony in the Jones case.

Other details of Clinton's grand jury testimony leaked out Friday, including the disclosure that last Dec. 28, a mere 31 weeks before the uproar over the relationship began, the president gave the former White House intern up to a half-dozen small gifts. They included an Alaskan stone carving of a bear, a throw rug or blanket, a decorative pin, a box of chocolates, joke sunglasses and a bag from the Black Dog store at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., where the Clintons have vacationed for three years.

Hurricane season opens with double threat

MIAMI (AP) - The hurricane season kicked off with a double threat as the year's first full-fledged storm, Bonnie, gathered strength and threatened the Southeast, while a weaker tropical storm in the Gulf of Mexico neared the Texas coast.

Bonnie's winds crossed the threshold to hurricane strength by midnight Friday, skirting south of the Bahamas and moving west-northwest near 17 mph. Its top winds were near 75 mph.

It could reach the U.S. coast by Monday and forecasters warned homeowners to prepare.

"We have a developing storm southeast of us in the peak of the hurricane season, and we all need to pay real close attention," said hurricane specialist Max Mayfield of the National Hurricane Center.

Elaine Tondreau in West Palm Beach wasted no time getting to the grocery store. "It could change direction but in case it doesn't, I just don't want to be the one struggling ... fighting for items on the shelves." Stores saw increased business from those stocking up.

In parched Texas, the rains from Tropical Storm Charley could provide some relief. But the threat of heavy rains and a storm surge spurred the evacuation of thousands of roughnecks from oil rigs in the Gulf of Mexico. Waves reached eight to 10 feet.

"There's a lot of rigs in the Gulf, and each one has an average of 120 to 148 personnel," said Petty Officer Rusty Miller at the U.S. Coast Guard base on Galveston Island.

Woman wants for 30 years for justice

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) - For more than three decades, Ellie Dahmer waited to see justice served on the man who orchestrated the Ku Klux Klan firebombing murder of her husband.

She waited and waited - through four trials and four deadlocked juries, never doubting that Samuel S. Bowers had ordered the death of her husband, Vernon Dahmer.

Mrs. Dahmer's day finally came Friday. Bowers, a former Klan imperial wizard, was led away in handcuffs to begin serving a life sentence after a fifth jury rewrote the conclusion on another Mississippi civil rights killing.

"These tears that I am shedding, I am shedding for Vernon, because I know he is looking at us today," Mrs. Dahmer said outside the courtroom.

A racially mixed jury heard four days of testimony and deliberated just over two hours before convicting the one-time Klansman on murder and arson charges. Defense attorney Travis Buckley said he would appeal.

The total cost is estimated to be $300,000; however, the administration is spreading this proposed expenditure over the next two budget cycles, FY 2000 and FY 2001.

Wedding vows renewed, gasp

COOKEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Tommy and Linda Maxwell - gasp - had a tough time kissing - gasp - when they renewed their wedding vows this month.

After all, they were underwater. So the kiss meant taking off their oxygen regulators, kissing, then - gasp - popping the regulators back in.

"We had a rehearsal, just like at a regular church wedding," Linda Maxwell said. "It's a good thing because we had to practice that kiss."

The couple, who have been scuba diving together for more than 15 years, renewed their vows earlier this month 8 miles off the coast of Panama City Beach, Fla.

The bride wore white - a white shirt and pants, plus a veil and garter. The groom wore black with a white bow tie. The wedding party and the minister who officiated also wore scuba tanks and respirators.

The couple - celebrating their 25th anniversary of marriage - spoke through their respirators, and added hand signals to say "I do."

Heidelberg College gets new name

TIFFIN, Ohio (AP) - Visiting sports teams weren't exactly quaking when they showed up to face off against Heidelberg College.

The mascot was a guy wearing tights and the school's team nickname was the Student Princes.

So after more than 70 years, Heidelberg College has adopted a tougher, Germanic team name: The 'Berg.

The old name was derived from a 1924 operetta by Sigmund Romberg, which was inspired by Germany's city of Heidelberg and its university, founded in 1386.

The Ohio college's athletic teams had been officially known prior to that as the Bluejays and the Cardinals.

Over the years, the Student Princes grew from an unofficial nickname into the one the school used in its mailings and programs. But no more.

Rick Owens, president of the school, urged the change after students, alumni and administrators complained that the nickname was outdated, gender specific and oxymoronic - if not moronic.

After all, what should the women's basketball team be called: the Lady Student Princes? The Student Princesses?

Build a better diaper, and ...

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - Forget mousetraps. If you build a better diaper, you'll go far - very far.

Susan Schreter learned that principle when she designed a diaper that used a thin pad of compressed pulp, offering a more comfortable solution than bulkier diapers filled with fluff.

NASA said it was interested. With no bathrooms or portable potties in space, NASA has relied on Schreter's brand of cheap, compressed adult diapers to let astronauts take care of business while they work.

The diaper, which has been used on space shuttle programs for the past year, is one-eighth the size of most adult diapers on the market and successfully pulls moisture away from the skin.

"Like people with bladder-control problems, the astronauts were restricting their fluid intake. They didn't want to be moving around in a big bushy diaper," said Ms. Schreter, who also sells her invention to non-astronauts.

TEXAS 20

From spinmeister to death penalty, Texans had influence

AUSTIN (AP) - President Clinton's spin doctor, the editor of a New York City newspaper and an executed ax murderer all have something in common.

Texas Monthly magazine on Friday named them to its annual list of the 20 "most impressive, intriguing and influential Texans."

Joining them were a basketball player, a clothing designer, an IRS whistleblower, a poet, a chef and, of course, a business tycoon.

"They worked hard, overcame obstacles, bucked conventional wisdom and touched our lives," says the magazine of its fifth annual list, being published in the September issue.

Nineteen of the 20 are still living. One, confessed killer Karla Faye Tucker, was executed by lethal injection in February.

The Tucker case and her unsuccessful appeal for clemency drew national attention to the justice system, the magazine says, adding: "While you might disagree with our inclusion of Karla Faye Tucker, you can't dispute that she forced the world to debate the controversial issue of capital punishment."

The list includes the rich, the famous, the powerful, including Paul Begala, political consultant and one of President Clinton's chief defenders during the Monica Lewinsky scandal.

A former University of Texas student body president, Begala was one of the consultants who helped Clinton get elected in 1992 and was recalled to White House duty last year.

"His spirited defense of the president proves that spinning isn't everything - it's the only thing," the magazine says.

Also cited is Debby Krennek, Taylor native and Texas A&M graduate, now the editor in chief of the New York Daily News.

"A New York tabloid edited by a woman? Now that's news," Texas Monthly said.

Also on the list:

- Basketball player Dennis Rodman, who's moving to Plano.

- Actress Jennifer Love Hewitt, born in Waco and raised in Killeen.

- Theater director Robert Wilson, a Waco native.

- Houston cancer researcher Jack Roth.

- Poet Naomi Shihab Nye of San Antonio.

- Sculptor and El Paso native Luis Jimenez.

- Lisa McRee, who's gone from Fort Worth to co-anchor of "Good Morning America."

- Fashion designer Tom Ford, a former Austinite.

- Dallas financier Thomas O. Hicks.

- Diana Natalicio, president of the University of Texas-El Paso.

- Carlos Acosta, a principal dancer with the Houston Ballet.

- T.D. Jakes, whose Potter's House in Dallas is one of the nation's fastest-growing churches.

- Jennifer Long, Houston, who blew the whistle on IRS abuses.

- Shawn Colvin, the Austin singer who won Grammys for song and record of the year.

- Dallas-based chef-restaurateur Stephan Pyles.

- Computer game designer John Romero.

- Dallas radio personality Tom Joyner.

Government still likely to be in black

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration reported a $24.1 billion deficit for July - 6 percent less than a year ago - leaving the government on track for the first annual budget surplus in 29 years.

The July deficit, the difference between $143.8 billion in spending and $119.7 billion in receipts, put the surplus for the first 10 months of fiscal 1998 at $43 billion, compared with a deficit of $36.7 billion for the same period of fiscal 1997.

Analysts expect an even bigger surplus by the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30. If past patterns repeat, August will produce another deficit but September, when quarterly income tax payments are due from businesses and some individuals, will bring a substantial surplus.

The administration, in May, forecast a $39.1 billion surplus for fiscal 1998. Two months later, the Congressional Budget Office said the surplus should amount to $63 billion.

It would be the first surplus since 1969. Already it has provoked a debate in Congress over whether to increase spending, reduce taxes or retain the surplus to reduce the $5.4 trillion national debt.

Just six years ago, in 1992, the deficit hit a record $290 billion. But the tax increase of 1993, strong economic growth and years of large stock market gains have caused revenue to surge. Also, last year's balanced budget agreement between President Clinton and Congress curbed spending growth.

The July deficit would have been smaller except many government checks that normally would have been written on Aug. 1 were instead sent on July 31 because Aug. 1 fell on a Saturday.

A usual, according to Friday's report, the largest spending categories for the month were: Social Security, $36.4 billion; Department of Health and Human Services programs such as Medicare and Medicaid, $32.5 billion; the military, $24.6 billion, and interest on the public debt, $20.8 billion.

Another healthy idea for Hereford.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says parents are people who train their children in the way in which they should have gone themselves.

Quit griping about your church. If it was perfect, you couldn't belong!

The biggest industry in town just cranked up again, and many of our thoughts once again turn to teachers. That's because in all that vast, humming machinery we call American Society, teachers have by far the most important job. A publisher friend, Bob Buckel of Azle, had some thoughts about teachers in his column last week. He said it so well, we'd like to quote part of his message:

"Some people are born to teach. They have a tone of voice, a glint of authority, an air that makes children want to please them. Give them a room full of kids, and in moments they are organized, doing some creative thing, behaving better than ever at home. It's something that can't be learned -- it's a gift, and thank God he gives it."

"My thoughts turn to teachers at this time of the year. Many great ones have influenced me profoundly -- from a second-grade teacher who paddled my rear end to a high school math teacher who dared me to learn. Teachers play a crucial role in determining the quality of our lives. It's exciting to see them come back to the classroom at this time of year and to prepare to accept the awesome responsibility of educating our children. Some are veterans who know what they're getting into and do it anyway. Many are beginners, with untested skills and theories they're eager to try out in the real world."

"All share a commitment that goes beyond the desire to earn a paycheck. It better. If they don't do it for love, they won't do it for long. Education is vastly more complicated than it used to be...but it is still a business whose mission has a pure, crystalline clarity. Teach the children."

"Take these young ones where they are -- they're in a thousand different places -- and help them get wherever it is they can go. They can't all be software engineers, corporate giants, doctors or lawyers or CPAs. We'd be in trouble if they all wanted to be. Some don't aspire to orbit the earth or explore the depths of the sea. Some may see the world while others are content never to cross a county line, finding all they need right here."

"But let the choices be educated ones. Show them what's there. Expose them to worlds even the best parents cannot. Inspire them to learn on their own, all their lives, to explore what interests them and dive as deeply as they wish. Give them the tools to succeed and the skills to use them..."

"Here in America, 1998, there are many things we don't do well...education is something we desperately need to be good at. If we are, there's hope. We owe an awful lot to good teachers."

We're not on the Internet as yet, but there's no shortage of stories being sent our way. Thought you might enjoy this item:

There was a little boy with a bad temper. His father gave him a bag of nails and told him to hammer one in the back fence every time he lost his temper. The first day the boy had driven 27 nails into the fence. The number gradually dwindled down, as the lad discovered it was easier to hold his temper than to drive those nails into the fence.

Finally the day came when the boy didn't lose his temper at all. He told his father about the feat, and the father suggested that the boy now pull out one nail for each day that was able to hold his temper. The days passed and the young boy was finally able to report to his dad that all the nails were gone.

The father took his son by the hand and led him to the fence. He said, "You have done well, my son, but look at the holes in the fence. It will never be the same. When you say things in anger, they leave a scar just like this one. It won't matter how many times you say you're sorry, the wound is still there. A verbal wound is as bad as a physical one."

There are more Americans in religious activities each week than in all sporting events combined. For the press to ignore what is important to them is to miss the market and often to miss the story.

POLLS CONTINUE to show President Clinton with high job approval marks, even after his admission he misled the public about his relationship with a White House intern. This cartoon, which ran in February, is being used again because it's still relevant.

Nixon-Clinton: some similarities

If it were a Broadway show, the independent counsel's investigation of President Clinton would definitely be boffo. After all, it's been running for more than four years.

Ken Starr's probe, which opened as an investigation of a 20-year-old Arkansas land deal, then segued into a probe of White House counsel Vince Foster's suicide, the firing of the White House travel office staff and the rummaging through FBI files, apparently never came up with anything to hang on Bill Clinton until the special prosecutor began prying into the presidential sex life. That's where Starr hit paydirt, uncovering not only the allegations of a tawdry liaison between Clinton and White House intern Monica Lewinsky but also a possible case of perjury and obstruction of justice.

In the aftermath of President Clinton's nationally televised admission he had an "inappropriate" relationship with a White House intern, most people -- if polls are to be believed -- seem satisfied to let the matter drop, letting Clinton serve out the remaining two years of his term before slinking back to Arkansas.

During the long, long, long investigation, and especially the Lewinsky affair erupted in January, Bill Clinton's tortured legal maneuvering has called similar to that of Richard Nixon during the Watergate investigation.

Now, thanks to an e-mail from a friend in New York, we know of even more similarities between Nixon and Clinton:

- Nixon: Watergate
- Clinton: waterbed

- Clinton: His biggest fear is a cold sore

SHOW SOME PRIDE

One thing I've heard over and over in slightly over a year since moving to Hereford is people here are proud to be in Hereford.

That may be true, but there're some Hereford residents who have a strange way of showing their pride in their community.

What kind of community spirit compels young people to break the eggs of nesting ducks and geese at the Aquatic Center park? The park's one of the nicest things about Hereford, and you'd think people who are proud of their town would do their best to make sure it looks good and the waterfowl are protected.

What kind of community spirit is behind the trash and litter tossed so casually in neighbors' yards and in vacant lots around town? In fact, so much litter is strewn around town I sometimes think some people here think a trash can is where trash is stored until it can be thrown in a neighbor's yard.

If you really care about your community, if you really have pride in your town you don't trash it.

Inside Politics

Testing Clinton World watching impact

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton's leadership on the world stage already was being tested by a series of contentious, summer foreign-policy challenges even before his confession in the Monica Lewinsky matter.

How he deals with problems overseas now will provide early insight into whether he can bounce back from the personal controversies swirling around him.

The terror bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa, renewed belligerence of Iraq's Saddam Hussein, Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic's mopping of ethnic Albanian rebels in Kosovo and the financial turbulence in Russia and Asia have crowded themselves onto the top of the nation's agenda.

"There is a country to run," Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said Tuesday as he joined other prominent Democrats in urging the nation to put behind it Clinton's grand jury testimony and his admissions of deception.

But to run the country, Clinton still must work with the GOP leaders who control Congress, and it will be even harder for him to do this when some of them are discussing impeachment prospects.

It will be difficult for him to press for priorities as Republicans seek opportunities to find advantages against what they see as a politically weakened president.

Furthermore, Clinton could find his credibility abroad eroded by his now-admitted relationship with Ms. Lewinsky, the former White House intern. His grand jury appearance Monday on the Lewinsky matter and subsequent address to the nation dominated news around the world.

It won't take long before he has to a chance to practice foreign policy.

The day after Clinton wraps up his current Martha's Vineyard vacation, he travels to Russia and Northern Ireland Aug. 31-Sept. 5.

Clinton's visit to Moscow was expected to lend support to Boris Yeltsin's government in grappling with the country's economic woes, reassuring international investors. It's not clear now how much reassurance Clinton can bring. And he may find he has as much to gain from the trip as Yeltsin as he obtains, even if briefly, a stage far from Washington.

The administration already had been having a hard time winning congressional approval of $18 billion to help the International Monetary Fund replenish accounts badly strained by loans to Russia and Asian countries, and for making nearly $1 billion in back payments to the United Nations.

These efforts, to be renewed when Congress returns in early September, are now likely to become more complicated, lawmakers in both parties say.

Education: Is that four-year degree really worth all the cost?

Education is a marvelous thing - no matter what form it takes - but sometimes I wonder if it is worth the cost.

At an early age, children learn the necessity of gentle hands as they catch a translucent, airborne bubble; or the power of a single delicate breathe as this fledgling floats away in their laughter.

Sometimes education can be physically painful, as many a child who has tried to drink his father's coffee can attest.

Often education claims a high mental price as well. Just ask the non-mathematical student who is trying to remember the Pythagorean theorem or the quadratic formula for a math test.

In today's world, education is so highly stressed that parents start teaching babies when they are only days or weeks old. Single spots in supposed quality day care and pre-k schools are as eagerly sought as are tickets to the next Super Bowl.

Parents seek to impress on their offspring all the attributes of renown colleges of the world, their own alma mater or at worst A&M or Tech (remember I'm a Tech graduate). But, in all reality what good does it really do?

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

Many students finish high school with a vocational license, which pays better than some jobs which require a four-year diploma.

Usually the jobs in medical fields, computer-related anything or engineering positions pay pretty well without having to go into advanced degrees, but other than that, numerous students and their parents are finding most four-year degrees aren't really worth the paper they're written on.

For instance, beginning teachers make between $22,500 and $28,500. On the other hand, a crew leader for cleaning teams on one of the above-mentioned schools makes roughly $25,000 a year. The only requirement is a high school diploma or a GED and two years experience/previous employment in janitorial work.

Granted, janitorial work is often dirty and nasty - often lumped together with all the disenchantment of garbage men and sewer workers - but it's honest work and the workers usually don't have a huge student loan to pay off as do so many teachers, lawyers, doctors or other professionals.

Don't get me wrong. I'm one of those parents who have stressed educational benefits since long before my kids went to school.

For as long as I can remember, someone was always telling me "get that little piece of paper." For many years, that little piece of paper was a high school diploma. Then, it was a college degree, but more and more the technical license is far more beneficial.

Licensed vocational nurses normally graduate in 18 to 24 months from an accredited nursing program and it is not uncommon for them to start at more than $12 an hour. That makes them coming straight from school to a salary of roughly $25,000.

Now, my question is this: What makes that two-year vocational certificate worth more than a four-year teaching certificate?

A friend, who happened to graduate the same time as I did with the same degree, became really frustrated when he realized that jobs in agricultural communications didn't pay as well as the local dogcatcher, never mind that there were very few jobs in that field.

Because he had a family to care for and bills to pay, he ultimately took a job which he hates, doing something far from what he is trained to do, simply because it pays roughly $38,000 a year with benefits.

His last contact with the university was an editorial cartoon which he submitted after they sent him a letter asking for donations "to help other students receive the same quality education that (he) had received".

His cartoon titled "the world's most expensive toilet paper" depicted a roll of university diplomas mounted beside a toilet. It was never printed.

I wonder how many other qualified, degreed professionals, who owe a huge student loan, feel it would be better doing yardwork than realizing that all the work and cost that went into achieving that diploma have proven as fruitless as catching that little bubble?

The lamest duck

Clinton's political dangers not erased by his nationally televised confession

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton limps away from his confession in the Monica Lewinsky affair as the lamest of lame ducks.

His hold on the White House probably is secure for the balance of his term, but his lies to the American people - and to his own aides and associates - will take a toll in credibility.

And he'll be weakened in his dealings with the Republican Congress.

Even in the televised humiliation of swallowing his denials and saying that he "did have a relationship with Miss Lewinsky that was not appropriate ... it was wrong," Clinton clung to the defense that he'd been legally accurate.

Perhaps so. But not politically. Clinton said Monday night that he'd given a false impression, misled people, even his wife, and that he deeply regretted it.

But the wiles that got him past earlier episodes, as campaigner and as president, will not erase this one.

Not with the TV tape of a finger-wagging Clinton, righteously wrathful, telling the American people seven months ago that he did not have sexual relations with "that woman."

He stuck to that denial until the former White House intern got immunity from prosecution and turned Starr's witness. Then Clinton was forced to the witness chair himself, albeit a special one at the White House, to testify by closed-circuit television on Monday.

At that point, a lie would have been perjury to a federal grand jury, changing a case of everybody-does-it deceit about an affair into a potentially impeachable crime.

So Clinton changed his denial to an admission of "inappropriate contact." His lawyer, David Kendall, said Clinton refused to answer questions about the specifics of the contact, "in order to preserve personal privacy and institutional dignity."

That also preserved his defense against perjury for his sworn testimony Jan. 17 that he'd never had an affair or sexual relations with her.

For all of that, though, Americans elected Clinton president twice after he was scarred by earlier allegations of scandal. They have been endorsing his leadership in the White House with hefty job approval margins, even while disdaining his personal conduct and doubting his honesty.

Clinton's wager now is that by conceding his own misstatements, and saying he didn't tell anyone else to lie, he can hold public support. That strategy will be tested first in the polls, then, more meaningfully, when Congress returns next month and Clinton tries to push his agenda past the Republicans.

It was uphill before, and the grade will be steeper now. Congress doesn't yield to presidents without political favors to offer or punishments to threaten, and for at least the four-month balance of this Congress, Clinton has neither.

The impact of his admission on the Nov. 3 House and Senate elections is imponderable, but probably minimal. Democrats had been taking advantage of his fund-raising abilities, but few candidates had been venturing out front as his defenders. Republicans weren't making the Lewinsky affair a campaign issue, only an inside-the-Beltway one, given the voter distaste and disinterest reflected in the polls.

WALTER R. MEARS

That's the political side of the affair. There's still a legal side to be played out, and Kenneth W. Starr isn't finished with Clinton.

The Lewinsky case was only a last installment in Starr's Whitewater investigation. It could still lead to a report to the House that there is evidence of impeachable offenses.

Clinton's lawyer and then the president himself took slaps at Starr over the four-year investigation, complaining that it had turned from its Whitewater origins to his private life.

"It is time to stop the ... prying into private lives," Clinton said.

Private perhaps, but it was at the office, in the White House, with an intern, age 21, when it began nearly three years ago. The president is 52.

A businessman in the same circumstances would be out of a job. Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 30 years.

Tripp grand jury extended

ELLCOTT CITY, Md. (AP) - The term of a Howard County grand jury considering possible wiretapping violations by Linda Tripp will be extended indefinitely, a prosecutor said Friday.

Jurors have met twice monthly since March and took up the Tripp question earlier this month. They had been scheduled to adjourn Sept. 17 after two more sessions.

Prosecutor Stephen Montanarelli's request for an extension was granted Thursday by Circuit Judge James B.

Dudley, said Howard County State's Attorney Marna McLendon.

"We're not finished," Montanarelli said. "We've got a job to do and I'm going to do it. I was handed this investigation. ... I didn't ask for it."

At issue is whether Mrs. Tripp, who lives in Howard County, broke Maryland law by secretly taping telephone conversations with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

to test Clinton's ability to hold together the international consensus backing tough economic sanctions against his regime. This time, Saddam's refusal to cooperate with U.N. weapons inspectors did not result in a massive show of U.S. force in the Persian Gulf, as had the last confrontation earlier this year.

Meanwhile, Milosevic has spent the summer ordering his Serbian troops to sweep through Kosovo while the United States and NATO continue to wrestle with contingency plans for stopping the onslaught. Before the August recess, members of Congress expressed skepticism over going along with Clinton's plan to maintain U.S. troops in Bosnia. And there seems little appetite for new U.S. commitments in Kosovo.

Even providing emergency funds to rebuild the embassies in Kenya and Tanzania shattered by the Aug. 7 bombs - which should be popular legislation - could become tied up in partisan end-of-session maneuvering.

"The last thing on anyone's mind is playing politics with this one," said a senior GOP leadership aide, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Still, Republicans are considering attaching the measure to a spending bill now before a House-Senate conference committee that also includes a House-passed provision that once prompted a presidential veto on another bill - dealing with a GOP plan dealing with how the 2000 census is conducted.

Now the issue is whether Clinton, in a politically weakened form, would risk another veto on such an otherwise popular piece of legislation.

During her visit to Africa on Tuesday, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said the emergency funds also would compensate families that "suffered irreparable harm."

She did not give a figure, but administration sources said the total for the emergency measure would range between $1 billion and $6 billion and also would include funds for improving security at other U.S. embassies viewed as vulnerable.

Guaranteed student loans do help many students realize the dream of a college education, but I think officials should be more discerning regarding the dispersal of funds.

Maybe they should look at the earning potential of graduates in different fields and adjust the loan amount accordingly. That way if a student really wanted to get a college education and pursue a low-paying career, he could foot the bill for a greater portion of the education before going into such deep debt.

Education is always going to be worthwhile, but I can't help but think it really needs to pay for itself in a timely fashion.

The consumer rules

NEW YORK (AP) - A few decades ago the word "consumption" referred to a wasting away of the body from tuberculosis. Today it generally refers to the propensity to spend.

Critics of today's consumption say it's as bad as the other kind, a waste of hard-earned dollars, a misuse of the natural resources that go into certain products, a waste of dollars that should be invested.

But, of course, modern consumption has defenders, too. They acknowledge that much spending today is frivolous, but they also observe that eager consumers keep the economy afloat amid a sea of troubles.

Whatever the view, you must concede that consumers today are about as aggressive as they can be. They're increasing spending at a rate faster than their incomes are rising. Much faster.

This trend is especially noteworthy considering that incomes have risen at a 3 percent rate over the past 12 months, a level not often achieved. But consumer spending rose 5 percent in the same period.

In years past, such a ratio would be viewed and treated as a forerunner of inflation and might be stomped out with higher interest rates. But the Federal Reserve last week decided to leave interest rates where they are.

How times have changed. For reasons not entirely understood, but having a lot to do with today's stiff global competition and heightened productivity gains, inflation has remained at bay, even as wages rise.

Prices for many consumer goods, such as cars and furniture, have been on the decline for more than three years, and prices for nondurables, such as food and clothing, have been flat or falling this year.

"In other words," says Michael Flament of Wright Investors' Service of Bridgeport, Conn., "despite the strong selling environment, it is still a buyers' market." Buyers are getting rebates. They're making deals at which they'll buy.

You can thank various developments for this consumer power. Among other things, consumers are more literate in the ways of the market. They know what's going on. They compare prices. They demand discounts.

The ascendancy of the consumer is perhaps not a permanent shift, but it is firmly in place now. And for those sellers willing and able to adjust to the reality, there are plenty of rewards - in sales.

Flament points out that spending on durable goods rose at a 13 percent annual rate during this year's first half, "the strongest six months for sales of cars, furniture and other durables in the entire expansion."

Spending on nondurables rose "only" 6.6 percent during the same period but, Flament observes, that was "the greatest increase for any six-month period since Gerald Ford was president" in the mid-1970s.

As with all economic change, it provokes questions. This time it's whether the consumer is acting foolishly in spending almost the entire paycheck or, instead, taking advantage of - even exploiting - the seller.

Don't expect quick answers; remember this is the economy and economists are best at examining the bones of events past rather than explaining current affairs, or forecasting the future.

What is known is that much of the consumer's robust behavior derives from the height of the stock market and the feeling it gives of increased wealth. But that wealth is tenuous; it could disappear in a flash.

In that sense, the consumer's behavior is very likely imprudent, and it seems more so when you consider that a 0.6 percent savings rate leaves very little for emergencies now and necessities in the future.

Viewed differently, however, you may ask if this isn't exactly the time for consumers to be spending heavily, since they are able to demand and get better bargains which they might not obtain later.

'Posh Spice' pregnant

LONDON (AP) - Victoria Adams expects a little spice in her life next year.

The Sun tabloid reported Friday that Ms. Adams - better known as Posh Spice of the Spice Girls - is three months' pregnant.

Ms. Adams and her fiance, soccer star David Beckham, had not planned a baby and will get married after the birth, according to the London-based tabloid.

No one answered calls at the office of Spice Girls spokesman Alan Edwards.

Ms. Adams, 24, broke the news to the other three Spice Girls on their current tour of America.

The other Spice Girls were stunned, but will carry on as a group, the Sun said. Ms. Adams plans to take time off, but will not be leaving the band permanently, as the fifth Spice Girl, Ginger Spice, did earlier this year, the paper said.

DDT-contaminated dirt on way to Texas

PORT ARTHUR (AP) - After unsuccessfully bidding to recycle 3.3 million gallons of napalm, a Port Arthur plant has won a contract to incinerate an unknown quantity of DDT-contaminated soil.

Chemical Waste Management Inc. will receive the dirt from a site near Torrance, Calif., south of Los Angeles. ChemWaste site manager Jim Gary said destruction of the toxic pesticide is safe.

"We've done work for Torrance (the Superfund site in California) in the past," he said.

Earlier this summer, ChemWaste lost out to GNI Group Inc. of Deer Park for a contract to recycle the Vietnam War-era napalm into fuel. Like the dirt, the napalm also will be brought cross-country from Southern California.

And, as with the napalm, there are opponents to the DDT dirt shipments.

"Texas communities have strong objections to hazardous waste incinerators because this technology has completely failed to live up to the theory of efficient destruction," said Neil Carman, clean air director of the Sierra Club's Lone Star Chapter.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency banned DDT, once a popular crop pesticide, in the early 1970s.

Gary said his plant has a state permit to dispose of such materials and promised there will be no "fugitive emissions" resulting from the burning.

He added that the incinerator is located more than three miles from the nearest residential areas.

The pesticide was first discovered along 204th Street in Torrance five years ago. The fill material laid down in the backyards of homes built there before the 1950s was laced with it.

EPA officials said the DDT came from the nearby 13-acre Montrose Chemical Corp., which manufactured DDT from 1947 until 1982.

A California activist group earlier this summer opposed moving the dirt.

TO MY FORMER CLIENTS:

When I moved from Hereford in 1978, I left my files with Schalan Atkinson for your convenience. When she moved, I took the files and stored them in Austin. It has now been more than 20 years since the last case was closed. It has become a serious problem in keeping the files secure and available.

Therefore I propose to destroy the files after August 31, 1998. If there is any one who wishes to have their files, please contact my office at the address and telephone number above and speak to Sonia. Please let her know when I handled the matter for which you are requesting the files. I need this information because I no longer have an alphabetical index of the clients, and I can only search for the files by year.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Scientists discover new type of robin in central Africa

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) - American scientists claim they have discovered a new robin species in the Central African Republic, a find ornithologists say illustrates how little is known about birds in Africa.

Pamela Beresford announced the discovery at the 22nd International Ornithological Congress, which has brought together more than 1,000 of the world's leading birders in this eastern coast city.

A graduate student with the American Museum of Natural History in New York, Beresford first encountered the bird in November 1996, during a World Wildlife Fund-sponsored survey in the Central African Republic.

"When we first collected it we thought it was a typical forest robin, but when we tried to classify it we realized we had something new," Beresford said.

The small olive-brown bird is similar to other forest robins except that its throat and upper breast are bright yellow-red and its stomach is a shade of yellow.

Other forest robins typically have white stomachs and upper breasts. Beresford had to examine some 300 specimens from 89 different areas at seven museums before she was convinced it was a new species.

'Wrongfully Accused' filled with hits, misses

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

Sometimes studios send unmistakable messages about their new films. Take "The Avengers" (no, maybe you shouldn't). Warner Bros. scheduled no screenings for reviewers, apparently on the assumption that the notices would be bad. Indeed, most critics agreed that reviving the old British TV series was a bum idea.

Now comes "Wrongfully Accused." This time Warner Bros. did preview the comedy - on the night before the opening. The kindest thing that can be said is that it's funnier than "The Avengers."

"Wrongfully Accused" was written, directed and co-produced by Pat Proft, who helped write the "Naked Gun" and "Hot Shots" movie spoofs and who boldly admits that this directing debut is a rip-off of "The Fugitive" - plus a scattering of film classics and bits of TV series.

There's the airplane attack from "North by Northwest," Bogie's farewell scene in "Casablanca," the baseball ghosts of "Field of Dreams," a "Baywatch" sendup.

The major travesty, as you can guess from the title, derives from "The Fugitive" - the Harrison Ford movie, not the TV series. The Leslie Nielsen character is sentenced to die for a murder he knows was committed by a one-armed, one-legged, one-eyed killer. On the way to the pen, the prisoners' bus crashes off the highway and lands in the way of an oncoming train.

He escapes and he is pursued by Richard Crenna in a whacked-out version of the Tommy Lee Jones role. They even have a chase through an underground waterway, and Nielsen escapes over the falls. (Funny gag: Nielsen leaping upstream along with salmon.)

A subplot occasionally rises out of the chaos. Terrorists arrive at a Minnesota hamlet with the mission to assassinate the U.N. secretary-general. (Eerie coincidence: he's targeted because he has announced the United Nations will seek out and destroy terrorist camps.)

The jokes and sight gags come at the rate of three a minute, with a success rate of about 20 percent.

Nielsen, who has starred in such broad comedies as "Spy Hard," "Airplane!" and the "Naked Gun" movies, must rank as the gamest actor in pictures. He is subjected to indescribable indignities, yet he never loses his sang-froid. He is the best of today's farceurs. Crenna amuses as the indefatigable pursuer. Michael York and Sandra Bernhard are seen briefly.

Proft's co-producers are James G. Robinson and Bernd Eichinger. Rated PG-13 for suggestiveness. Running time: 92 minutes.

"Wrongfully Accused" is showing at Moovies Six, 400 N. 25 Mile Ave.

Hispanic pioneers get some respect

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH - No question about it, documentation of the contribution Hispanics have made to the world of pop music has been scant at best.

Go to any bookstore with a well-stocked section on pop music. Look through the numerous bios of Elvis and Jimi, the collections of essays, the handful of books devoted strictly to blues or jazz. You might not see anything about Hispanic music at all. I know I don't, and I've looked.

The new "Land of a Thousand Dances: Chicano Rock 'n' Roll From Southern California" will not single-handedly correct this oversight, but it's a very good start.

The book (178 pages; University of New Mexico Press; $18.95 paperback, $50 hardcover) is a handsome, well-researched effort. It traces the development of Hispanic R & B and rock - from Mexican-Americans falling under the spell of doo-wop in the mid-'50s to the explosion of bands in the '60s to El Chicano in the '70s to Los Lobos emerging in the '80s to rapper Kid Frost releasing "La Raza" in 1990.

This is a fascinating journey, showing America's cultural cross-fertilization at its best, and how music in one particular community has been shaped by both internal and external forces.

One telling example: Back in the mid-'60s, Cannibal and the Headhunters would, we're told, work in front of a mirror for hours, imitating the choreography of Motown's Temptations. Just a few years later, their "Land of 1000 Dances" would become a national hit for R & B star Wilson Pickett.

"It was a beautiful thing," says David Reyes, who wrote the book over the past decade with Tom Waldman. Reyes grew up in the music of East Los Angeles; he went to shows at LA clubs and union halls and, as a saxophonist, began playing with LA bands in the late '60s. "In the late '50s Watts artists knew East LA was a big market, and they went out of their way to perform there. It was unique, because the rock scene in LA had everything, R & B and pop, and we did it our own way."

In this way, the LA Hispanic rock/R & B scene was far more advanced (and got more attention) than the one in most large Texas cities. For one thing, so many record companies have offices out there; for another, LA was, and is, "such" a melting pot; there was a large, multifaceted black music scene so close by.

In Texas there certainly were cases of Tex-Mex, rock and R & B being combined. Probably the best-known are San Antonio's Sir Douglas Quintet, which had a huge hit in 1965 with "She's About a Mover," and Dallas' Sam the Sham and the Pharaohs, which had several hits in the mid-'60s with Tex-Mex-meets-rock tunes like "Woolly Bully" and "Lil' Red Riding Hood."

Reyes remembers his older brothers coming home every Saturday with a stack of singles (they were 29 cents then) and the family sitting down and listening to them. The bands were local acts like Thee Midnites, the Headhunters, Mark and the Escorts, and The Premiers.

All added their own cultural twists to the sounds coming out of England or Detroit or the Deep South, and all became superstars in their hometowns. In most cases, their fame - like that of dozens of bands who made it big in their hometown - stopped there.

Cannibal and the Headhunters opened for the Beatles in 1965, but even that couldn't break them nationally, although Pickett's version of "Dances" became, and remains, extremely popular. And The Premiers' "Farmer John" became a Top 20 hit in 1964.

Over the years, Reyes collected the singles, and the albums. He and Waldman collaborated on an article on Thee Midnites for the music magazine "Goldmine," and then decided to expand on it to write about the entire LA scene. Reyes used his contacts, calling musicians and managers he knew. They, in turn, hooked him up with other people. And now he and Waldman are planning a second volume.

"It'll cover more from the '80s on," Reyes says. "And it'll look at the lesser-known groups from the '60s, when there were so many bands. It was an incredible time. There was a lot of unity going on."

And if reading "Dances" makes you want to go back and rediscover this music, you're in luck: Rhino Records has released a three-volume set, "Brown-Eyed Soul: The Sound of East L.A.," that includes many of the groups mentioned in the book. It's great listening, just as "1000" is very good reading - and pretty essential for anyone looking for a real overview of American rock 'n' roll.

Singh has 4-point lead after 2 rounds

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) -- Vijay Singh, overcoming two tee shots into water, birdied seven holes and widened his lead Friday in the weather-interrupted second round of the Sprint International.

Singh had 27 points under the modified Stableford scoring system used in this event, giving him a 4-point lead over Steve Flesch.

For the second straight day, lightning and rain invaded Castle Pines Golf Club. After causing a 2-hour, 40-minute delay on Thursday that forced 36 players to finish their rounds early Friday, lightning struck again at 3:20 p.m. CDT with half the field still on the course.

After a delay of 2 hours, 25 minutes, play resumed, but 31 players were unable to finish by nightfall. They were to complete their rounds early Saturday, with the cut to follow and the third round to begin about an hour later than originally scheduled.

Singh, who began the day as the co-leader with Jim Carter at 15 points, added 12 points to his total -- tying the 36-hole tournament record set by defending champion Phil Mickelson last year.

Brandt Jobe finished with 22 points and Jesper Parnevik had 21. Davis Love III was at 20.

Among those not finishing, David Sutherland had 22 points through 16 holes, and Carter stood at 19 through 14 holes.

Tiger Woods, who accumulated 14 points in the opening round, struggled early in his round, surrendering 7 points when he double bogeyed his first hole and then took four straight bogeys, dropping to 7 points. But he rallied with five subsequent birdies to finish at 17.

The International's scoring format awards 5 points for an eagle, 2 for birdie, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double-bogey or worse.

Points accumulate over all four rounds. The field will be cut to the low 70 players and ties for Saturday's third round and to the low 36 and ties for Sunday's final round.

Singh, the newly crowned PGA champion, admitted to some negative thoughts at the start of his second round.

"I didn't play as good as yesterday but I hit a lot of good iron shots and made some good putts. I got some momentum going and had a good run there with birdies at 18, 1 and 2. Then when I came back from the rain delay, I made a good (birdie) putt on 5."

Singh drove into water on the par-5 17th hole but salvaged par. He also drove into water on his last hole, just after the horn sounded to suspend play because of darkness, but players were allowed to finish any hole they started. Singh scrambled to make bogey.

Trapshooter has sights set on making 2004 U.S. Olympic team

By BOB VARMETTE
Sports Writer

Hereford's Eddie Trotter doesn't even know where the 2004 Olympics are going to be taking place.

He just knows he wants to be there -- wherever there is.

The fact that he competes in a sport -- trapshooting -- that few are aware of, much less would know as an Olympic sport, doesn't bother him either.

"Shooting is my life," Trotter said.

"I really don't care what other people might think of me. That's my thing."

Nobody can take that away from me."

A defiant and self-confident mind set for the 15-year-old Hereford native -- one that could serve him well.

"If I'm not going to do it right, then I'm not going to do it," Trotter said.

"That gives me motivation when I'm shooting off for a championship event, when the adrenaline is flowing, and you know you can dominate."

Trotter has already won his fair share of American Trapshooting Association titles. That's impressive enough, but even more impressive when you consider he didn't shoot his first gun until he was 10 years old, and didn't start shooting competitively until he was 12.

CODY HODGES of Hereford darts through an opening during the Whitefaces' scrimmage Friday night with Plainview at Whiteface Stadium.

Bulldogs' intensity overpowers Herd in first scrimmage

By BOB VARMETTE
Sports Writer

Contrasting approaches produce contrasting results.

Plainview came into Whiteface Stadium Friday night knowing this was their only chance at hitting someone besides each other before they start playing for real Aug. 28.

Hereford saw it as another practice. They have another scrimmage Aug. 28 before they kick off the season Sept. 3 at Amarillo Tascosa.

Plainview scored six touchdowns in the scrimmage; Hereford scored two. And Hereford scored on both of their first two drives. After that, Plainview's emotional urgency became evident.

"Defensively, we were able to gain some momentum," Plainview coach Steve Parr said. "We played with a little enthusiasm and played a little better. And we need it. We open next week against Big Spring."

But for the first 40 plays, Hereford looked like they were ready to open the season right now.

The Whitefaces gave the sparse crowd of about 300 fans something to cheer about almost immediately. Hereford needed only eight plays to get in the end zone with junior tailback Greg Ewing the workhorse. Ewing ripped off runs of 24 and 53 yards during the drive.

But one pair of eyes wasn't completely satisfied.

"Greg is like all of us. In varsity competition, he's going to have to learn to plant and cut and get up the field," Hereford coach Craig Yenser said, "instead of stop, plant and cut."

On the second drive for Hereford's first team offense, the Whitefaces came out in the shotgun. Mixing the ground game of Mark Rodriguez and a short passing game, Hereford marched the ball down the field, scoring on the 14th play of the drive when sophomore quarterback Cody Hodges hit junior L.J. Vallejo with a 20-yard touchdown pass on fourth down and 15 yards to go.

The Bulldogs showed they could also go to the airways. Plainview needed only two plays to score the first of their touchdowns on the night -- a 60-yarder from senior quarterback Brandon Brotherton.

Plainview would also score later in the scrimmage on another long passing play, this time from junior quarterback Ryan James.

"We're not one who like to throw the football a whole lot," Parr said. "They say that any blind hog that roots long enough is going to find an acorn. Maybe we just rooted long enough. I don't know. We were pleased with it and we were pleased with the execution."

Yenser said inexperience got the better of the Whitefaces on the big plays by Plainview.

"One concern that we've had from day one is youth," he said. "Right now our perseverance level has to be very high. ... I'm not disappointed in the scrimmage. I'm disappointed that we didn't carry over after the first 40 plays, but we played a lot of youngsters."

On their second drive, Plainview started solidly out of their Wing-T offense, churning out yards up the middle against the Hereford first-team defense. But the drive bogged down and the Whitefaces stuffed the College football '98 could be unique year

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
AP Football Writer

Get ready for one quirky college football season.

When Ohio State wants to be like Michigan, Tom Osborne watches Nebraska games on TV and Florida State goes with 26-year-old Chris Weinke at quarterback, you know this fall will be filled with firsts.

Speaking of firsts, the Bowl Championship Series emerged from the bowl alliance with a guaranteed matchup fans have been screaming for -- No. 1 vs. No. 2 in the final game of the season at the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 4 in Tempe, Ariz.

Then there's the Rose Bowl, which joins the Tostitos Fiesta, FedEx Orange and Nokia Sugar in the BCS and brings the Big Ten and Pac-10 with it. Along the way, the Rose found itself with another name for the first time -- the Rose Bowl, presented by AT&T.

Changes took place on campus, too. Longtime assistant Frank Solich is in at Nebraska after Osborne ended his 25-year head coaching career in style -- his 255th victory finished off a perfect season and brought a co-national title with Michigan. "We're going to do everything we can to keep it going," Solich said. "We'll not change a lot of things, because it makes sense not to."

Solich has plenty of company as a first-year coach. Texas dumped John Mackovic and hired Mack Brown away from North Carolina, which promoted longtime assistant Carl Torbush; Southern California fired John Robinson and went for Paul Hackett; and Arkansas ousted Danny Ford and brought former Razorback Houston Nutt back home.

Also, Eddie Robinson finally retired after 55 seasons at Grambling, and former Super Bowl MVP Doug Williams returns to coach his alma mater.

For the first time in what seems like an eternity, Ron Powlus is not the quarterback at Notre Dame; Jarious Jackson is. But of greater significance, the Golden Dome was tarnished in the offseason when 66-year-old ex-assistant Joe Moore successfully sued over his 1996

Simmons says Cowboys still building despite success in '97

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

STILLWATER, Okla. -- Bob Simmons finds himself answering a question this year that he didn't think he would have to answer for some time to come: What do you do for an encore?

Simmons came to Oklahoma State in 1995 with five-year plan to turn around the football program. But it happened in only three. Last season, the Cowboys won eight games and went to a bowl game -- two things that hadn't happened since Barry Sanders' Heisman Trophy season in 1988.

Oklahoma State produced an All-America tight end in Alonzo Mayes and All-Big 12 players in cornerbacks Kevin Williams and R.W. McQuarters. All three were drafted by NFL teams -- McQuarters was a first-round pick -- and defensive tackle Jamal Williams was taken in the league's supplemental draft.

The offense came together under the direction of freshman quarterback Tony Lindsay. The Cowboys started out 6-0 and were ranked No. 12 before winding up 8-4 with a loss to Purdue in the Alamo Bowl.

So, what now?

The plan is to continue to build, continue to improve and continue setting high goals.

"Our offense and defense in 1997 complemented each other to the standpoint that we were able to win those close games," Simmons said. "The signal it sends is that if we are able to repeat that same performance in 1998, we will have the opportunity to win our share of games."

"Our next step is to continue to work toward winning championships. We were very, very close last year to winning the Big 12 South. It didn't happen. We would like to continue on that road to winning the Big 12 championship and ultimately, like any other program, winning the national championship."

The road figures to be a little more bumpy this season, primarily because of the schedule. The Cowboys got to 6-0 last year with the help of some easy nonconference games, and five of their first seven games were at home. This time, they play only one of their first six games at Lewis Field.

The early road games include Kansas and Kansas State, and Nebraska in Kansas City.

"To be the best, you've got to play the best," linebacker Kenyatta Wright said. "Those games (Kansas State and Nebraska) are two big games. If you want to be the best, you've got to play those teams."

Wright is one of 17 starters returning. The offense may be the most settled, primarily because Lindsay will be back with a year of experience. He played well enough last year to be named the league's top freshman.

BIG 12 PREVIEW OKLAHOMA ST.

Shooter

friend," said Trotter, who got his first introduction into shooting through 4-H. "I shot locally -- Lubbock, Amarillo, Stratford -- just small local shoots."

Trapshooting, for the uninitiated, is a sport where shooters attempt to hit targets launched from a machine. At a typical trapshooting range, there are five shooting stations, and depending upon the event -- open or handicap -- the shooter may have to shoot from varying distances.

In handicap events, the closest distance is the 16-yard-line. The best shooters compete from the farthest distance back -- the 27-yard-line. Trotter shoots from the 27-yard-line.

There are singles and doubles. In singles, the shooter must only hit one target. In doubles, he must hit two.

Trotter learned his craft quickly. He made it to his first state shoot in 1996 -- the Texas state tournament in Amarillo where he won the Open Sub-junior Singles championship with a 192-for-200 score.

"That was my first big win," he said.

Now, he's won so many titles it would be hard to recount them all.

In 1997, he won events in such disparate places as Phoenix, El Reno, Okla., Tampa, Fla., and Salt Lake City, as well as taking home hardware from state shoots closer to home -- Colorado, Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

This year Trotter has picked up where he left off in 1997. He's won titles at the Spring Grand American, the Midwestern Grand American, as well as returning successfully to defend titles at the Texas State Shoot and the Colorado State Shoot.

What drives Trotter is not so much an obsession with shooting, although he does enjoy hunting and other shooting sports. It's an obsession with winning.

"My interest is this," he said intensely. "I feel like I have an ability and I should work hard at it to be as good as I can. What drives me to compete is the will to win. The more I win, the more I want to compete."

Trotter's drive takes him to Colorado Springs, Colo., this weekend. That's the site of the United States Olympic Committee Junior Olympic Training Center where Trotter and other Olympic hopefuls will shoot for placement on the Junior Developmental Team

-- a prelude to selection for the team to represent the United States in 2004.

Trapshooting is a sport where at the higher levels, the mediocre get weeded out fairly quickly. Participating in tournaments across the United States eats up a budget with travel, motel and restaurant costs.

And that's in addition to the money needed to participate in the tournaments. Trotter said a typical week-long shoot can cost between $800 and $1,000. Shooters are required to purchase their ammunition and the targets they shoot at.

That requires either deep pockets or sponsors. And only the most promising receive sponsorships from gun, ammunition and other shooting-related companies.

With a successful record, it wasn't hard for Trotter and several companies to hook up. His primary sponsors are Kolar -- a shotgun manufacturer -- and Federal Ammunition, as well as Ballistic Specialties.

"I wear their clothing," Trotter said. "I have enough T-shirts I could wear one every day of the week for I don't know how long. I've appeared in several ads in shooting magazines."

It would be easy for the success and the recognition to detract from his ability, go to his head so to speak. Trotter takes it in stride, though, saying that recognizing your ability is requisite for self-confidence, but that throwing your success in someone else's face is not who he is.

"Although, I may not come across that way to some people, I'm basically a modest person," he said.

The concentration that enables Trotter to succeed despite such potential distractions is evident at the shooting range. Trotter said learning to pick up a gun, aim it and shoot it is the easy part.

The tough part is mental. "You have to be able to shut your whole central nervous system down," Trotter elaborated. "You have to be totally not aware of what's going on around you."

"Learning to aim, learning to follow -- those are minor details. You have to have a good positive attitude. Negativity will cause you to miss targets. You can't miss a target and get mad. You've got to blow it off and go on to the next target."

Six years from now, Trotter wants those targets to be Olympic ones.

Lady Whitefaces win 2 at Amarillo tourney

From staff reports

AMARILLO -- The Hereford Lady Whitefaces advanced in the winners bracket of the Amarillo Invitational Volleyball Tournament at Amarillo Palo Duro Activity Center, winning two matches Friday.

Hereford cruised past El Paso Burges 15-7, 15-0 in the first round and then defeated Justin Northwest 15-12, 15-4 in the second round.

Christy Schumacher led the Lady Whitefaces in the match against Burges. The senior recorded five kills and also had six digs. Tori Walker also had five kills for Hereford.

In the Justin Northwest match, Schumacher came up with five kills, as well as three blocks and four digs. Walker added four kills, two blocks and seven digs for Hereford. Lyndi Carlile and Kristin Fangman each had three kills and Fangman added three blocks. Junior setter Audra Witkowski had 14 assists and five digs for Hereford.

The tournament was to conclude Saturday.

Year

dismissal by coach Bob Davie and an internal investigation turned up two rules violations that could bring NCAA sanctions.

"You just can't pay attention to it," Irish tackle Mike Rosenthal said. "It's never been a distraction."

Joe Paterno is looking at No. 300. If Penn State beats Southern Mississippi on Sept. 5, Paterno should become the sixth college coach to get 300 wins when the Nittany Lions play Bowling Green on Sept. 12 at State College.

"We're looking forward to the season, anxious to get it going," said Ohio State coach John Cooper, whose team opens at No. 1 for the first time in 18 years. "For the first time in history, we have a system where No. 1 and No. 2 will meet on the field in the last game, and I'm all for that."

So is Bobby Bowden, whose Seminole are ranked second.

"Our goal every year is to be No. 1 when the season ends," Bowden said. "What does that do to you? It leaves you no room for error, although maybe you get one error. The year we won, in 1993, we lost a game to Notre Dame. But if you go errorless, you got a chance to win the darned thing."

With Heisman Trophy winner Charles Woodson, quarterbacks Peyton Manning and Ryan Leaf and wide receiver Randy Moss now in the NFL, a slew of stars are ready to fill their cleats.

Start with Texas' Ricky Williams, who needs 1,928 yards to become the NCAA's all-time leading rusher. And move on to quarterbacks Cade McNown of UCLA, Tim Couch of Kentucky and Daunte Culpepper of Central Florida; and running backs J.R. Redmond of Arizona State and Amos Zereoue of West Virginia.

Breakthrough seasons can come from almost anywhere, but keep an eye on quarterbacks Michael Bishop of Kansas State and Ryan Kealy of Arizona State, as well as running backs Jamal Lewis of Tennessee and Travis Minor of Florida State. Wideouts David Boston of Ohio State, Peter Warrick of Florida State and Terry Holt of North Carolina State are primed for huge seasons.

On defense, look for all-star performances from linebackers Andy Katzenmoyer, Jevon Kearse of Florida and Dat Nguyen of Texas A&M; cornerbacks Dre' Bly of North Carolina, Antoine Winfield of Ohio State and Champ Bailey of Georgia; and defensive ends Mike Rucker of Nebraska and Robaire Smith of Michigan State.

Ohio State, which had its title chances slip away in '95 and '96 with late losses to Michigan, hopes to duplicate its Big Ten rival's championship season of a year ago. The Buckeyes, though, are 1-8-1 against the Wolverines over the last 10 years.

This could be the Buckeyes' turn. Joe Germaine no longer shares the quarterback spot and could produce a Heisman-type season, especially with Boston and Dee Miller catching his passes. Katzenmoyer leads a ferocious defense. Also, Ohio State has a favorable schedule after opening at West Virginia on Sept. 5.

"All that matters is how we finish," Katzenmoyer said. "It doesn't matter where we start."

Michigan not only has to try to replace Woodson, but Rose Bowl MVP Brian Griese is gone and either Tom Brady or Drew Henson has to step up for the Wolverines to have a chance to repeat.

Osborne, whose teams went 49-2 with three national titles in his final four seasons, may not even attend the Huskers' opener on Aug. 29 against Louisiana Tech. He was on the Nebraska coaching staff for 36 years.

Weinke, a high school All-American who left the Seminole in 1990 and spent six years playing baseball in the Toronto Blue Jays' system, returned to Florida State at the right time. Expected starter Dan Kendra injured his right knee in the spring game and is out for the season.

"I never felt so good about a sophomore quarterback," Bowden said, even though Weinke has thrown only 13 passes in eight years. "He took a couple of shots in practice and came out OK. Now, it's just a matter of gaining a little success, and he should go on from there."

Says Weinke: "They have confidence in me. All I lack is experience. I'm ready."

drive after nine plays.

The Bulldogs' first-team offense also came up empty on their third drive of the evening.

From that point on, it was evident the intensity level of both teams' changed.

None of the Hereford offensive units would find the end zone for the rest of the evening, while the Bulldogs were just starting to get the rust of their offense.

"I think a lot of that had to do with emotion, a lot had to do with embarrassment," Parr said. "We went out and we were able to gain the momentum. . . . We started playing with a little bit more confidence. I think that was the big key."

While Parr and the Bulldogs will have to get right to putting what they learned Friday night to use for their upcoming game with Big Spring, Yenzer said the Whitefaces have time work to with what they learned from the scrimmage.

"We're going to have get our draw working. I wasn't pleased with our draw out of the shotgun," Yenzer said. "We need to a little bit better job with the hot routes. We need to try them a little bit more to get a little more confidence. . . . And then the pass protection problems. But they're all solvable problems."

Yanks, Wells blank Texas

ARLINGTON (AP) -- David Wells figured he owed the Texas Rangers a beating for what they had done to him this year.

"They always give me trouble and I wanted to redeem myself," Wells said after pitching a six-hitter to lead the New York Yankees to a 5-0 win Friday night.

Tino Martinez homered twice as the Yankees snapped a rare two-game losing streak.

Wells (16-2) finally solved the Rangers, who had rallied from nine- and three-run deficits this season to hand the left-hander no-decisions. He struck out seven and walked one in his fourth shutout.

Wells, who entered with a 12.46 ERA against the Rangers this year, has won eight straight decisions.

"I was anxious to get out there against them," Wells said. "We had some great offense and great defense. We had some double plays and I settled down early and got going. I know how tough they are. If you get pitches up they crush them. You have to be smart and keep the ball down."

The Yankees, who have lost two in a row seven times this year, have lost three straight just once -- the first three games of the season.

"We couldn't touch Wells this time," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "He had great control and made some key pitches when we had runners on base."

Chuck Knoblauch and Derek Jeter also homered for New York.

Knoblauch hit the third pitch from Esteban Loaiza (1-3) into the left-field seats for his 17th homer, the most by a Yankees second baseman since Joe Gordon hit 17 in 1943.

Simmons

The Cowboys are solid at tailback, where Jamaal Fobbs and Nathan Simmons share time. The biggest void was left by Mayes, whose combination of size and great hands will be difficult to replace.

But it will be even more difficult to make up for the loss of McQuarters, who was a game-breaker as a receiver and kick returner.

Simmons will enter this season feeling like a new man, and not just because of the success his team has enjoyed. He is healthier, the result of a kidney transplant he received in March. The donor was his wife, Linda.

"I'm feeling fine," Simmons said. "My illness did not have an affect on last season as far as my overall coaching performance. It was something, right or wrong, I dealt with and put in the back of my mind and eventually knew it was something I would cross at some point."

The next threshold he wants to cross is that of a conference or division championship. While confident, Simmons isn't making any predictions as to whether this will be the season that happens.

"We have to remember how we got here," he said. "Yes, we had success, but we're still in a building mode. Does it mean we have arrived? I've coached long enough to know it's important how you handle success."

Critics claim Marlins overpriced

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI -- Forsale: One floundering Florida franchise.
Price: $165 million.

Wayne Huizenga isn't joking. Florida Marlins fans aren't laughing. Fourteen months after Huizenga put his baseball team on the market, the Marlins are in last place and in limbo. Offers by two prospective buyers came up short, and Huizenga this week said he may remain the owner next season.

Huizenga claims his Marlins lost $34 million last year despite winning the World Series. He ordered their championship roster dismantled, and the Marlins now own baseball's worst record while playing in one of baseball's worst stadiums.

No wonder Huizenga is having trouble selling the team -- especially for $165 million, a figure considered unreasonable by many of his numerous critics.

"I'm hoping someone comes forward and writes a check," Huizenga said.

That's also the preference of South Florida fans, who have come to regard Huizenga with a level of contempt they usually reserve for the New York Knicks. As long as the ownership situation remains unsettled, the Marlins' prospects for improvement are slim, and popular manager Jim Leyland and general manager Dave Dombrowski are likely to leave after this season.

Potential buyer John Henry may offer the best chance of a brighter future, but that hasn't impressed Huizenga. Neither has Henry's offer of $150 million in cash.

Henry, a millionaire commodities trader who closely monitors the stock market and major-league standings, admits that buying the Marlins wouldn't be the best business deal he ever made.

"I don't expect to make money," he said. "My interest is in having a competitive baseball team. Every dollar we make would go toward players."

Henry is willing to overpay for the privilege of owning a major league team 30 minutes from his home in Boca Raton.

A fair price for the team is $120 million to $130 million at the highest," Henry said. "The Marlins' revenues are similar to the Kansas City Royals, who are seeking $75 million."

Huizenga countered by noting that the Texas Rangers sold in June for $250 million, but he neglected to point out that the deal included a stadium lease and 270 acres of land.

Huizenga said he's not inclined to lower his asking price -- bad news for Marlins president Don Smiley, who has spent the past 14 months assembling an investment group but remains more than $50 million short of a deal. Sources close to Huizenga say they doubt the team will be sold to Smiley.

An obstacle in negotiations with Henry is a pending 27-year rights contract between the Marlins and SportsChannel Florida, a cable network that Huizenga owns and wants to sell. The long-term agreement makes SportsChannel Florida more valuable but limits the Marlins' future TV revenue.

Also unresolved is how to pay for a new domed stadium, which everyone agrees the Marlins need. Smiley wants taxpayers to foot the bill, while Henry would be willing to finance a new ballpark himself if necessary.

Huizenga, who dislikes discussing business negotiations in the media, agreed this week to interviews with two reporters -- perhaps an indication of his desperation for a deal. The public comments were his first regarding the Marlins since May.

"People who say I would have had a better chance selling the team if we had kept it together are wrong," Huizenga told The Miami Herald. "Investors were unwilling to invest in a team that was losing money. ... I had no choice but to cut payroll."

According to Huizenga, the 6-year-old franchise is more than $200 million in debt. The Marlins expect to make money this season because of the reduced skimping payroll -- it's $13 million compared to $53 million last year -- but even if they're sold for $165 million, Huizenga said, the team will have cost him $75 million.

That's not much of a sales pitch, which may be why he hasn't found a buyer.

Licensing hearing for Tyson delayed

LAS VEGAS (AP) -- Mike Tyson will have to wait even longer to find out if Nevada will let him box again.

Tyson's hearing before the Nevada Athletic Commission was moved back Friday to Sept. 19 so that it will not interfere with cancer treatments that commission chairman Dr. Elias Ghanem is undergoing.

The hearing had been set for Sept. 9, but commission executive director Marc Ratner said Friday that Ghanem asked that it be delayed while he undergoes further treatment.

"Dr. Ghanem's medical treatment would preclude him from being able to attend Sept. 9," Ratner said.

Ratner said he sent a letter to Tyson's adviser, Shelly Finkel, advising him of the delay.

The hearing will be held the morning after the Sept. 18 rematch between Oscar De La Hoya and Julio Cesar Chavez in Las Vegas. Commission members have said they expect Tyson to appear in person to plead his case.

Tyson will learn his fate on the same day as the hearing, commissioners have said, promising no delays.

Tyson was banned by the commission in July 1997 after biting Evander Holyfield's ears during their heavyweight championship fight.

He was eligible to reapply for a license in Nevada on July 9, but bypassed the state and went through the licensing process in New Jersey. On the eve of that licensing decision, he abruptly withdrew the application in New Jersey and said he would seek licensing in Nevada.

Nevada boxing regulators expected all along that Tyson would reapply for his license in Nevada after a mandatory one-year wait.

Asking New Jersey for the license was seen as a calculated gamble by Finkel. The gamble didn't appear to be paying off, as political pressure from inside and outside the state grew in the days before the licensing decision was to have been made.

Tyson's license was revoked and he was fined $3 million for biting Holyfield's ears.

Disney deal corners college football

By JOSH DUBOW
AP Sports Writer

College football is going to Disney's world.

Instead of players yelling the line after winning a national championship, it will be the mantra for teams, starting on the first day of practice.

Walt Disney Co.'s ABC, ESPN and ESPN2 networks have the rights to the top regular season schedule and 18 of 22 bowl games, including the four-game Bowl Championship Series that almost guarantees a national championship game.

Instead of profiting off families visiting its theme parks, Disney will pocket money off a sweetheart deal negotiated with the college commissioners. In an era where major sports properties are usually loss leaders for networks, ABC is almost guaranteed to make money on its $525 million, seven-year deal.

The key to the deal's profitability is that for the first time, the broadcasting network, not the bowls themselves, retains the marketing rights to the games. The deals by Tostitos, Nokia, FedEx and AT&T to be title sponsors of the Fiesta, Sugar, Orange and Rose bowls could be worth as much as $200 million to ABC, according to people who negotiated the deal.

"We recognize that the market place is changing and advertisers are getting away from scatter buys and are looking for blue-chip events," said Jon Litner, ABC Sports senior vice president of programming. "The way to do that is to corner the marketing rights to each and all of these bowls. That's what we created. We wanted to make this far more than

"Our goal is to turn these great single-day events into a four-day quartet of promotion. We want to extend the experience of college football. That's the importance of promotion."

-- Len DeLuca
ESPN vice president

a traditional media buy."

That Disney was able to secure that type of package without breaking the bank is a remarkable mix of shrewd negotiating and the competing interests of the conference commissioners.

The last attempt at a national championship game failed as the Big Ten and Pac-10 champions were still committed to the Rose Bowl, leading to the shared title between Michigan and Nebraska last season.

So while the other conferences wanted the Rose Bowl to be part of the alliance and the Big Ten and Pac-10 wanted to avoid a playoff, ABC went to work, securing the strongest bowl package in history.

In May 1996, ABC struck a deal with the Rose Bowl, ending the five-decade tie-in between the game and the Big Ten and Pac-10 champions. ABC was able to reach the deal by guaranteeing those two conferences the same bowl payout as the other major conferences and that there would be no playoff for seven years without their consent.

With the Rose Bowl contract in hand, ABC went to the other conferences and negotiated the rest of the Bowl Championship Series deal. If the commissioners wanted a true national championship game, ABC was the only network that could guarantee the involvement of the Big Ten and Pac-10.

"Everyone wanted this to happen and they needed the Rose Bowl for it to work," Litner said. "We certainly had the leverage."

That leverage eliminated potential bids from CBS, Fox and NBC, and lowered the rights fees for the premium bowl package by as much as $200 million over the seven years.

"This will probably be one of the few sports franchises that could show a profit," said Ron Frederick, a media buyer at J. Walter Thompson advertising agency. "The colleges probably left money on the table. Usually, the networks lose all the money and then the table itself."

The deal is even more valuable to ABC than the other networks because of its ability to cross-promote its games with programming on ESPN, ESPN2 and ESPN Classic Sports.

ESPN will begin each weekend with its Thursday night kickoff show and game. ESPN's "Gameday" show kicks off each Saturday -- sometimes from the site of an ABC or ESPN game -- and promotes that day's matchups on the Disney networks. Throughout each football Saturday, ABC and ESPN will point viewers from their games to others on Disney's channels.

Coupled with other programming on ESPN Classic Sports, ESPN Radio and ESPN's and ABC's Web sites, it becomes a promotional dream for Disney.

"Our goal is to turn these great single-day events into a four-day quartet of promotion," ESPN vice president Len DeLuca said. "We want to extend the experience of college football. That's the importance of promotion."

Defectors give formal notice to WAC

DENVER (AP) -- The eight schools leaving the Western Athletic Conference have given the remaining schools formal notice of their secession.

The new league is scrambling to find a name in time for televised football games in the coming weeks, an Air Force Academy official said Friday.

Letters of withdrawal signed by the presidents of the departing schools were sent to the other institutions Thursday with a copy to WAC commissioner Karl Benson, said Col. Hans Mueh, who represents Air Force on a transition team the eight schools set up to handle the split.

Under WAC bylaws, the schools had to send the letters by Sept. 1 in order to leave the conference after the upcoming academic year. June 30, 1999, will be their final day as WAC members, said Mueh, the NCAA Faculty Athletic Representative at Air Force.

Air Force, Brigham Young, Colorado State, New Mexico, San Diego State, Nevada-Las Vegas, Utah and Wyoming announced in May that they planned to leave the 16-team conference. They cited the loss of traditional rivalries, rising travel costs and insufficient revenue growth.

The departing schools have hired a Las Vegas advertising firm to help name the new league and design a logo. Mueh said the firm was planning to announce the name on Oct. 1, but many school officials want to have it in time for televised games as early as next weekend.

The letters of withdrawal went out a week after the schools that will remain in the WAC rejected a proposed separation agreement. They

MRS. IAN ALAN RILEY
...nee Lori Ann Paetzold

Vows exchanged in evening ceremony

Lori Ann Paetzold of Amarillo and Ian Alan Railey of Norfolk, Va., exchanged wedding vows in a Saturday evening ceremony in St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The bride is the daughter of Larry and Martha Paetzold of Hereford. The groom is the son of Louise Cardinal, also of Hereford.

Monsignor Orville Blum officiated at the ceremony.

Maid of honor was Jill Paetzold of Northeast, Penn., cousin of the bride. Best man was Chip Armstrong of Seminole, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Amanda Rickman of Amarillo and Brandi Armstrong, sister of the groom.

Serving as groomsmen were Heath Kirkeby and Jeff Rickenbaw, both of Hereford.

Ushers were Jeremy Paetzold, brother of the bride; Walter Paetzold and Bob Paetzold.

Flower girls were Abbie Kuhne, cousin of the bride and daughter of Gary and Kathy Kuhne of Northeast, Penn., and Alicia Duran, cousin of the bride and daughter of David and Rene Duran of Aurora, Colo.

Ring bearer was Marcus Duran, cousin of the bride and son of David and Rene Duran.

Music was provided by Cheryl Betzen, godmother of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white Italian satin accented with Alencon lace. The square neckline was outlined by wide lace shoulder straps.

The princess style bodice plunged to a low back centered with designer rosettes. The detachable, chapel length train was also of Italian satin.

Bridal attendants wore formal length dresses of navy blue crepe with satin trim at the square neckline and bow at the back of the princess style waistline. They wore pearl necklaces and earrings, gifts from the bride. Each carried a long stemmed calla lily with baby's breath and greenery accented with a navy and gold bow.

Flower girls wore ankle length navy blue satin dresses and birthstone pendants, gifts from the bride.

A reception at the Knights of Columbus Hall followed the ceremony.

Those assisting with the reception were Whitney Stengel of Dalhart and Beckie Fry.

The bride's three-tiered Italian creme cake was frosted with white icing ruffled swags and decorated with navy satin ribbon and fresh flowers.

The groom's cake was a square chocolate cake with chocolate basket weave frosting and topped with chocolate covered strawberries.

The couple will take a wedding trip to Norfolk, Va., where they will make their new home.

Naval heroes subject of DAR essay contest

Los Ciboleros Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution is sponsoring the American History Essay Contest again this year.

The 1998-1999 topic is "A Naval Hero of the Early American Republic, 1789-1815." The essay should emphasize the historic significance of the hero's naval contributions. The essay could focus on such a person as Joshua Barney, John Barry, Stephen Decatur Jr., James Lawrence, Oliver Hazard Perry, Thomas MacDonough, Thomas Truxtun or Isaac Hull.

All fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade students in public, private, parochial schools or sanctioned home study programs are eligible to participate. This contest is conducted without regard to race, religion, sex or national origin.

Contest information has been distributed to all schools in the county. Information sheets are available at the Deaf Smith County Library for home study students.

It is essential that all students who participate adhere to the guidelines distributed by the National Society. Chairman of the chapter's American History Committee, Charlotte Clark stresses the importance of following required directions on form, number of words, title page, bibliography and the student's personal signature.

The deadline for submitting an essay to the local chapter is Dec. 1.

DAR members judge the essays on historical accuracy, adherence to topic, organization of material, interest, originality, spelling, grammar, punctuation and neatness. A non-DAR judge selects the best overall essay from the finalists.

Every student submitting an essay will receive a certificate of appreciation while first place winners in each grade level will receive a bronze medal and second place winners are given certificates of award at their closing school assemblies.

A book on American History is given to the school that the overall winner attends with a name plate honoring that student.

Los Ciboleros Chapter DAR celebrates each February as "American History Month" and winners will be announced during that month.

"Los Ciboleros Chapter has sponsored the American History Essay Contest for 27 years and we appreciate the cooperation of principals, teachers, school librarians and county librarians and participation by students over this period of time," Mrs. Clark said.

Persons interested in obtaining further contest information should contact Mrs. Clark at 276-5601 or Mrs. Ruth Newsom, Chapter Regent, at 364-0420.

Dear Son,

It's been a year ago today, that the angels came to get you. Not a day goes by that you're not in our thoughts and prayers. We love you and miss you.

The only way we can live with the loss of you is by remembering your suffering and pain while here on Earth.

We know you are in Heaven now with Jesus and saying to us here, "If only you could see me now." We will see you again someday. Until then, thanks for being a loving and wonderful son and brother. We love you very much!!

Stephenville park is site of August nuptials

Kit Jones and George Myers, both of Stephenville, were united in marriage in an evening ceremony August 9 in Century Park Gazebo in Stephenville.

The bride is the daughter of Ronnie and Wanice Jones of Hereford. She is the granddaughter of Harvey and Billie Jones of Hereford and O.J. and Betty Neeley of Littlefield.

The groom is the son of Darrell Myers of Charleston, S.C. and Paulette James of Puyallup, Wash. Jon Quick of Rodeo Ministries in Stephenville officiated at the ceremony.

The bride entered the park to a taped version of "My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys," dedicated to her father.

She wore a sleeveless, princess style gown of ivory satin with a sweetheart neckline, lace collar and lace overlay on the bodice which formed a V at the waist. The lace was embellished with seed pearls and iridescent sequins.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"You can get by on charm for about 15 minutes. After that, you had better know something." -- H.J. Brown

School is underway! Students and teachers have been busy following schedules and getting adjusted to new routines.

Many HJH students ride buses to and from school and since they are in junior high, they sometimes get careless about safety tips. Parents, please go over these tips with any child who rides a bus:

- Get to the bus stop at least five minutes before the bus is due to arrive.
- Do not run across the road to catch the bus.
- When the bus approaches, step back and stand at least three giant steps away from the curb.
- Do not board the bus until it stops and the driver signals that it is OK to board.
- Never walk behind the bus or close to the side of the bus.
- If you drop something near the bus, don't pick it up until you tell the driver.

- When you board the bus, take your seat quickly.
- When the bus is moving, always remain seated.
- When you leave the bus, use the handrail. Make sure that clothes, key chains or backpack strings are not sticking out to hang onto something.
- If, at any time, you have to cross the street in front of the bus, walk at least five giant steps in front of the bus so the driver can see you.

Those students who walk home should remember that they should not walk across the yards and property of others. They should also refrain from cutting through the cemetery. This is simply showing proper respect for others.

More than 70 students are enrolled in HJH choirs. Be prepared for some exciting activities from these three choirs that are under the direction of Jane Gulley and Margaret Williams. After only a week, they are sounding g-o-o-o-d!!!

The ID tags are being prepared for HJH students and staff and will be delivered very soon. This security measure will require cooperation on the part of all concerned, but after a while, it will become routine.

"Confidence comes not from always being right but from not fearing to be wrong." -- Peter McIntyre

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 21-year-old female with a problem I've never seen addressed in your column.

I am happy with my appearance and lifestyle, but a great many people feel they have the right to express negative views about my tattoos. It seems to me this is none of their business. I don't flash my tattoos, and I am always dressed appropriately. When I go to work, my arms are covered by long sleeves, and I wear slacks so no one sees the decorations. However, on my days off, I like to wear short sleeves and shorts. I see no reason why I shouldn't be comfortable.

Tattoos are a legitimate art form. Mine are well done and in good taste. I am a respectable member of the community. I pay taxes, go to school full time at a reputable university and have a serious boyfriend. Just because I enjoy the art of tattoo does not mean I am a lesbian, a tramp, a drug addict or a nut.

One question I get is "Are those real?" I tell them that for what I paid, they had better be. And I'm often asked, "Did it hurt?" The answer is "Of course it did." Any moron should know that when you get needles under your skin, there is going to be some pain. Not a single day goes by without someone making a snide remark or asking stupid questions, and I am sick of it. I love my art and showcase it the same as someone would display a Matisse or a Degas. You are an open-minded person, Ann, and I would like to know what you think about this. -- The Girl Next Door in Calif.

Dear Girl: I have lived in Sioux City, Iowa, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Eau Claire, Wis., and Chicago, but there was never a girl next door who had tattoos on her arms and legs.

I acknowledge the fact that it is your right to have tattoos if you wish, but you should not be surprised when it attracts a good bit of attention. After all, that is why you had it done, isn't it?

You say you have a boyfriend. Apparently, he doesn't mind your tattoos. If, however, he should have a change of heart, I suggest that you look up Dennis Rodman. You two would make a most attractive couple.

Dear Ann Landers: I don't know whether or not this qualifies for your "stupid crook" series, but I am sending it on the outside chance that you might want to print it. It appeared in a column by Tom Zucco in the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times. I am -- Your Faithful Fan Doris

Dear Doris: It does indeed qualify. And Tom Zucco is a very clever columnist. Please tell him I said so. Here's the story:

Maybe it was the drinks. Or the excitement of the TV camera and his wish for 15 minutes of fame. Whatever it was, the man forgot the First Commandment for wanted fugitives: Thou shalt not commit live television interviews.

The 22-year-old man chatted away with a TV reporter last week about the problems of underage drinking from his perch at a tavern in Rockford, Ill. And he used his real name.

Among those watching was an off-duty Rockford police detective who thought the man's name and face were those of a murder suspect wanted in Marietta, Ga. The detective gave the location to officers, who arrested the man minutes later.

P.S. This is Ann again. The moral of the story is, if you are wanted for murder, stay away from TV news cameras.

Gem of the Day (Credit Tom Hennessy): I have learned that you can get by on charm for about 15 minutes, and after that, you had better know something.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $5.15.)

— YOUR EYES —

Back-To-School Checkup

Some years ago, a study of adult illiterates found a surprising factor: more than 70 percent of them had vision problems that had never been discovered. They didn't know they weren't seeing the way they should. Little children, too, don't know whether what they see is what they should see. Parents may notice some signs of vision problems -- if a child squints while watching television, for instance, or complains that letters on the screen aren't clear. Even in a very young child, caregivers may note an inability to focus on and follow objects, excessive blinking, chronic tearing or eyes that are misaligned.

As school time approaches, we owe it to our children to equip them for success in learning. We buy them books and pencils, new sneakers for school sports. Surely we should ensure that they see well enough to use them. Be sure to schedule a back-to-school optometric examination for your child.

Kristi White and Daniel Long exchanged wedding vows in an evening ceremony on August 15 in the First Baptist Church of Tulia.

The bride is the daughter of Jody and Clifton White of Happy. Parents of the groom are Don and Ann Long of Springtown.

Reverend Charles Dayenport officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Bridesmaids were Kristie Halford and Kathy Garrison.

Serving as groomsmen were Phillip Long, brother of the groom and Raymond Woods.

Junior bridesmaid was Kayla Parker and junior groomsmen was E. J. Long, brother of the groom.

Guests were seated by Charles Lee White of Tulia, Argel Stark of Kress and Alan Whitmire of Wichita Falls, uncles of the bride.

Flower girls were Carla and Nicki Kulms of Anton.

Ring bearer was Tommy Cravens, nephew of the groom.

Candle lighters were David Bice and Carrol Littlefield.

Music was provided by Harold and Tammy Scarbrough, Karen Martin and Sue George.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of candlelight tulle with a scalloped V neckline, long sleeves and beaded motif.

The bodice had a beaded brocade of flower designs down the front with hanging pearl strands.

Matching beaded motifs on the skirt consisted of bobbinet base for a fine eyelid flower embroidery with pearl and crystalline sequin accents.

The cathedral train was decorated with small areas of bobbinet lace with fine hexagonal mesh ground.

She wore a flowing one-layer gossamer veil with satin rolled, sash edging attached to a crown of pearl beaded flowers.

She carried a bouquet of lilies surrounded by trailing carnations tied with a tulle bow.

Bridal attendants wore empire waist, tea length dresses with white alençon collars in the bride's chosen colors of hunter green, burgundy and navy.

The couple was honored with a reception in fellowship hall following the ceremony.

Those assisting were Beth Whitmire, Vicki Wilfong, Shana Bailey, Melody Jennings, Alyssa Irbeck, Kathy Grubbs, Lisa Cravens, Connie Irbeck and Joyce Burnam.

The bride's cake consisted of three separate cream colored cakes decorated with lattice work and sitting atop glass cylinder pedestals filled with water and ivy. The cake was topped with a Walt Disney wedding party snow globe.

The groom's red velvet cake was frosted with fluffy white icing and draped with fresh strawberries.

After a wedding trip, the couple will be at home in Tulia.

The bride is a graduate of Tulia High School, Amarillo College and South Plains College with an Associate of Applied Science in Health Information Systems. She is a candidate for national Accredited Records Technician license in October.

The groom graduated from Hereford High School and attended Amarillo College. He is employed at the Wal-Mart Distribution Center in Plainview.

The Successful Family

By MATILDA J. BOOZER
DAPA, LPC, NCC

Many people feel awkward at the thought of praising themselves. Often, there is confusion between self-praise and being conceited. The two are completely different. Self-praise is your own personal way of recognizing yourself for being and for doing.

Essentially, you are telling yourself that as a person you always have value. Even though you may mess up by failing a test or by hurting some else.

Being better makes others "less than." People don't like being told they are "less than you" and will resent you for it. Self-praise means your value as a person is always high -- but not in comparison to others. Allow yourself to say to yourself, "I did a good job on that." Not "I did a better job than you on that."

Self-praise is a way children can learn the habit of praising themselves and boosting up their self-image. To help a child learn self-praise, parents need to describe how good the act must have made the child feel. Imagine yourself in the child's shoes, and describe the feeling.

By promoting self-praise, children develop an internal evaluation process that is both realistic and genuine. "Tracie, you must feel good after cleaning your room!"

To encourage children to use self-praise, parents should model the behavior for them. Praise yourself in the presence of your children when ever you do something well, or whenever you feel proud of some effort. Modeling self-praise is an effective teaching procedure, because children learn best by imitations.

To praise appropriately, follow the steps listed below:

1. Focus your attention on the child and the situation -- praise deserves your undivided attention.
2. Move close to the child -- praise feels good by someone close to you.
3. Make eye contact with the child on the child's level. For instance, stoop down to make eye-contact with a 2-year-old -- this makes it all the more special.
4. Gently touch the child -- touch is a positive form of communication.
5. Look pleasant -- everyone likes to see a happy face.
6. Praise your child for being or for doing.
7. Offer a hug to "seal" the nice words.

Praise anytime -- there is no such thing as too much praise.

Praise does not spoil a child. Do not be afraid to praise yourself, your spouse, or your child.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Everyone should put their house numbers up on their buildings and houses. Fire departments say you should put your house numbers on the back of your buildings and houses in your back alleys also. Your house numbers could help save your life if the fire department is looking for you when you need help. It will save them time getting to you when you do. — William B. Rau Jr., Ret. U.S.P.S. letter carrier/volunteer firefighter since 1948, Westminster, Md.

You are absolutely right! Here in Texas, as in many other places, there are many subdivisions and apartments with back alleys. It's vital to put your address where it can be easily seen. Don't wait for an emergency. Take a look from the street. Is your address clearly visible? If not, fix it. — Heloise

BACKYARD FEEDERS

Dear Heloise: This hint is for armchair nature lovers. I enjoy watching the birds in my back yard eating from feeders I put up. However, the birds have tough competition from squirrels, which also inhabit my back yard. I have seen the squirrels eating the plastic bird feeders in order to enlarge the holes. They are quite greedy!

I took an old plastic hanging basket, put a few small holes in the bottom for drainage and filled it with food specifically for the squirrels and hung it where the bird feeders used to hang on the tree. Now the squirrels eat without bothering the birds and I, along with my cats who stay inside, get a lot of enjoyment watching the squirrels sit in the planter eating and swinging. — Ellen Kendley, Columbia, S.C.

EASY PICKUP

Dear Heloise: This hint is for anyone who has something small in a tight place that they can't reach with fingers or anything else.

In aircraft work, we found using masking tape wrap-taped to ends of fingers, or groups of fingers, or tip ends of screwdrivers was a great way to pick things up or hold small parts or screws too small to be held otherwise in position. Picking up shavings and small bits of trash in difficult places predicated this technique. — Dave Smith Sr., San Antonio, Texas

This is a good trick to remember when there are tiny pieces of glass to be cleaned up. Sticky-side out, there will be no doubt. — Heloise

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I recently was hit by an unexpected case of gout. I have very painful swelling around the big toe.

What is the latest and best treatment? I simply cannot afford to see a doctor. — T.S.

ANSWER: The daily turnover of body cells produces purine, which eventually is degraded to uric acid. As blood uric acid levels rise, the acid invades joints, causing the pain of a gout attack.

The base of the big toe is often the site of a first attack.

An anonymous writer described gout pain this way: "Screw up the vise as tight as possible, you have rheumatism. Give it another turn, you have gout."

Without a doctor's directions, a patient is on shaky grounds. A doctor needs to confirm the gout diagnosis.

Most gout medicines, such as the standby colchicine, require a prescription. Indomethacin, a nonprescription drug, can terminate a gout attack.

Allopurinol slows production of uric acid, and probenecid eliminates it via the kidney. The medicines can help prevent future gout attacks.

Years ago, diet played a major role in control. You need to emphasize diet if you cannot obtain medicines. Avoid organ meats, gravies, anchovies, herring and sardines. Steer clear of asparagus, dried peas and beans, mushrooms and spinach. Alcohol can ignite a gout attack.

Call a doctor and explain your financial bind. I'm sure a mutually satisfactory agreement can be worked out.

I'm sending you my gout report. Interested readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 13, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope (55 cents) and $3.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I follow your column, hoping to find information on a condition my husband has. He was diagnosed as having collagenous colitis.

No information seems available as to medication or diet.

This condition has gone on for many months. My husband now weighs 106 pounds. Can you help? — D.C.

ANSWER: Collagen is the body's packing and structural material. It's found throughout the body.

Collagenous colitis is an oddity. Strands of collagen infiltrate the space beneath the digestive tract's lining. The strands interfere with food absorption. Watery, non-bloody diarrhea appears, and it can develop rapidly. Crampy, abdominal pain is often a symptom.

The only way to diagnose the illness is with a biopsy of the intestinal tract. A patient's X-rays and scope examinations of the colon appear normal.

Sulfasalazine, cholestyramine or cortisone drugs can sometimes control symptoms.

Your husband's weight loss is alarming. He should see a gastroenterologist. Intravenous feedings might be necessary to preserve your husband's strength.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Could you give an explanation of "walking pneumonia"? I've heard the term but I don't understand what it is meant. — J.B.

ANSWER: There are three common kinds of pneumonia — bacterial, viral and mycoplasmal.

Bacterial pneumonia produces dramatic symptoms. Body temperature shoots up. Teeth-rattling, bone-jarring chills shake the patient, who feels so weak and sick that bed rest is mandatory.

Mycoplasmas are germs somewhere between bacteria and viruses. Mycoplasma pneumonia generally produces less-florid symptoms than bacterial pneumonia. Headache, dry cough and low-grade fever are its signs. The patient can stumble around, even work, not feeling all that great but not having to take to bed. That's why it is called "walking pneumonia."

Viral pneumonia often follows a pattern similar to mycoplasma pneumonia.

The term "walking pneumonia" has outlived its usefulness. Many mycoplasmal and viral pneumonias can make a person as sick as bacterial pneumonia.

Memorial gardens are senior citizen sanctuary

CONROE, Texas — The old adage says an apple a day keeps the doctor away.

Maybe we should change that to growing the apple keeps the doctor away. Make that a fig, or maybe a jalapeno pepper. Or how about a nice, fat cantaloupe? A fragrant bouquet of basil and zinnias?

To one group of senior citizens — although it feels strange calling them that, what with all their hoeing and tilling and bending, not to mention their joshing and ribbing and joking — gardening means more than just having fresh vegetables to chop into a salad or plop into a vat of roiling soup.

It's about community. "We swap life stories," says Barby Carroll, one in a cluster of men gathered on a recent humid August morning at the Alden Colston Memorial Friendship Gardens in Conroe.

"That's why they call it the Friendship Gardens," adds Willie Joe Castleschmidt. "It's about enjoying yourself and being with people."

For the past 25 years, people 60 years and older have mixed camaraderie with their organic fertilizer at this sanctuary, spread over two acres of vines, bushes and towering plants. Lush and green, it looks like something out of Europe, not Texas in August. Peppers gleam on the vine; watermelons nestle like oversize Easter eggs. The air is thick with the smell of earth and growing things.

Made up of 64 equal plots that measure 30-by-40 feet, the gardens were started in 1973 by Colston, a retired oil-field supply salesman. Colston died four years ago but pruned, tilled and harvested until the ripe age of 95. He was a founding volunteer of the Friendship Center, also known as the Montgomery County Committee on Aging, which offers programs that aim to enrich the lives of the elderly in the community.

Along with some other Friendship Center volunteers, Colston established 12 garden plots at the Montgomery County Airport. About 10 years ago, the county told him he had to move the plots to make way for some new approach-control lights for the planes.

So Colston — who was "kind and courteous but tenacious," says Roy Stanphill — convinced the county to clear trees from an area across the street from the airport. Today, 64 individuals and couples work their plots (there is a waiting list of one), harvesting an array of vegetables and fruits: okra, eggplant, cantaloupe, watermelon, peas, bell peppers, jalapeno peppers, peaches, figs, grapes, green beans, sweet corn, tomatoes, mustard greens, turnips, turnip greens, collard greens, kohlrabi, blackberries, strawberries, sweet potatoes, cauliflower, potatoes, broccoli and onions.

"This (gardening) has saved a lot of marriages," says Carroll, grinning. "These men are healthy and their wives just want them out of the house. They say get out, and don't come back until noon."

Every week this past year, a task force from Hereford State Bank made it a point to call on West Central Intermediate School.

Nine conscientious HSB employees made up this group and volunteered their time as mentors for the school's HOSTS (Help One Student To Succeed) program — a program designed to place caring people throughout our community in a one-on-one tutoring session with individual students each week.

These HSB volunteers included; Reni Mason, Charlene Sanders, Brenda Milam, Debbie Gonzalez, Martina Rojas, Debbie HolPmes, Carol Jowell, Steve Gilbert and Wynona Blair. And as a result of their efforts this year, Hereford State Bank received the West Central HOSTS Angel Award.

These volunteers would readily tell you they have won a great deal more from the experience — helping a student realize his/her potential — than an award could ever measure.

We're proud to have these and the many other employees of our bank who work extra hard to make our community better.

They remind us all that some of our very best investments in this community have nothing to do with money.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

I Dare You to Get Motivated

It was one of those exciting, life-changing seminars. The speaker was fluent, vibrant and alive. I hung onto every word. The speaker defined motivation as a "motive for action." He stressed that no person can motivate another toward success. "Only you can motivate yourself," he said. As he spoke those words, he looked right at me.

As I left the auditorium that night, I felt my life would never be the same. The speaker had given me a motive for action. Though I had no clear picture of success, that night I saw myself on that platform. I envisioned the crowd applauding me. I chose to become a professional speaker.

The perfect ending to this story would be that I immediately went out and started a speaking career and become wildly successful. However, we don't live in a perfect world. It actually took me more than 20 years to turn my dream into reality.

Here is a synopsis of what I learned about self-motivation. I hope it challenges you.

What I learned

• The Power of Self-Discipline. Discipline is to your mind and soul, what exercise is to your physical body. Discipline is training that helps you develop self-control, character and orderly conduct in your life.

Many people view discipline in a negative sense. To them discipline mean punishment. Self-discipline is positive control. It is not self-punishment.

Discipline lets you overcome apathy and laziness by keeping you focused on what you want to achieve. Recently, I visited with a nationally known business author who told me he had given up television to devote time to writing. His self-discipline allowed him to produce two new books in three years.

• The Power of Action. If you are patiently waiting for success, you're in for a long wait. Success won't come to you. You must go get it.

It is important to view success from the right perspective. Success is not a reward you get or a destination at which you arrive one day. It is who you are and what you do every day. Success begins with taking the steps that will carry you toward your dreams.

John Locke said, "The actions of men are the best interpreters of their thoughts." Over the years I've visited with folks who excelled in talking about what they were going to do. The problem is, they "talk" but never "do." They hadn't learned that no action means no reward.

• The Power of Rewards. When you've done your best, you receive the most satisfying reward: a deep sense of accomplishment. Calvin Coolidge said, "No person was ever honored for what he received. Honor has been the reward for what he gave." Part of the reward for giving your best is knowing you did well.

Another value of rewards is in using them as personal motivators. In early 1997, as I was battling cancer, I promised myself two rewards if I survived. The first was to take my wife to Hawaii. The second was to buy a Corvette I've always wanted. By God's grace I survived, took the trip and bought the car. The rewards were important because they allowed me to focus on the future and endure the chemotherapy treatments.

• The Power of Enthusiasm. Enthusiasm has a switch and I'd like to make a little pitch. When you find your motivation gone, turn your enthusiasm on.

You must act with enthusiasm if you wish to be filled with enthusiasm. If you want to increase your income, build your business and enjoy life to the fullest, develop enthusiasm.

We live in a great country with wonderful opportunities for growth, happiness and success. I dare you to get motivated.

I would like to take the opportunity to share with you one of the programs and services the Deaf Smith County Library offers. The Memorial Program offers the means by which one can share their memories in a longer lasting tribute.

Instead of giving flowers, one can make a donation to the library and have a book placed on the shelf in memory of their loved one. A special memorial plate is placed inside the book giving the name of the one being remembered and the person giving the gift.

The person making the donation may recommend specific titles or subject areas they feel would best represent the person being remembered. The family may also make suggestions for the materials they feel would best represent their loved ones.

In the past, couples or other groups have gone together to purchase materials that may cost more or have multi-volumes. Most of the materials in our Genealogy collection, are memorials given by individuals, couples and the genealogy society.

Other memorials have been given to help the library with the cost of maintaining other programs or services. Donations have solely supported the volunteer adult literacy program. The donations given to this program are used to cover the cost of tutor training and educational materials. Part of the filmstrip and video collection for our children's programming has come through memorial donations.

Honorariums are another part of this program. Some local civic clubs give the library donations in honor of their guest speakers. These donations may be used to purchase materials dealing with the speaker's subject area or for material on public speaking.

This program offers a way to honor those special people in your life. It is almost like choosing the good neighbor of the day, but it lasts much longer and many others get to share the gift.

The Memorial/Honorarium program is a vital part of the Deaf Smith County Library. It is our hope that you continue to use this as a means to recognize the special people that have touched your life.

The new book list this week begins with Coast Road by Barbara Delinsky. With the talent of creating stories of extraordinary emotional power and depth, Barbara takes the reader into life and what matters most.

Rachel Keats and Jack McGill were deeply in love when they married. Then as they grew in their careers and the rush of life began, that love seemed to get lost. After 10 years of marriage and two children, Jack and Rachel divorce and go their separate ways.

Six years following their divorce Jack receives a call in the middle of the night demanding he rush to his ex-wife's hospital bed. Jack puts aside his busy career to go.

While Rachel lies lifeless Jack maintains a bedside vigil and begins to form a new relationship with his daughters. Through the girls, Rachel's art and friends, Jack becomes reacquainted with Rachel.

The girls help him to see their marriage through new and different eyes. Jack discovers the ties that will bind his life to Rachel and his daughters until the end of time.

The Pied Piper by Ridley Pearson is another heart pounding thriller. The press started calling him the Pied Piper because infants have disappeared and a penny flute left in the crib in their place.

The Pied Piper has worked his evil from San Diego to Seattle. All signs point to a black market adoption agency and Detective Lou Boldt and forensic pathologist Daphne Matthews have vowed to find the persons responsible.

The news hungry press and nervous politicians present a few of the obstacles that must be worked around and through. The more deeply Boldt and Matthews probe, the more elusive the truth becomes.

As soon as they discover one piece of evidence another one is misplaced or destroyed. Witnesses are overlooked or missing. Whoever is behind the Pied Piper is very powerful, crafty and seems to know the next move before Boldt and Matthews.

Angle of Impact by Bonnie MacDougal starts fast and keeps moving. Dana Svenssen is a brilliant overworked Philadelphia lawyer. On her way to a routine business meeting Dana finds her well-ordered life exploding.

The helicopter transporting her client collides with an airplane directly over the city park where her children are spending the day on a class trip. Fiery debris rains down on screaming families and school children.

Dana desperately races to the scene to find her daughters and assure herself of their safety. As Dana assembles a top team of forensic aviation experts to reconstruct the disaster, she suspects the crash was no accident.

Determining the probable cause of the collision is nearly impossible. Dana's marriage threatens to fall apart until a kidnapping throws Dana and her husband into an all-consuming conspiracy. This book will keep you turning the pages until the very last.

Soybean growers seek new markets, new ideas, new varieties

Farmers responsible for investing the soybean checkoff funds have decided that developing a new, better soybean is a top priority for its upcoming fiscal year.

Farmer-leaders of the United Soybean Board (USB) approved that action and a noteworthy list of other plans for 1999 during its recent board of directors meeting in St. Louis.

Number of farmers in the High Plains area continue to grow as more producers see soybeans as a profitable alternative crop.

"Today, farmers in this area are very interested in soybeans," said Texas Agricultural Extension Service agronomist, Dr. Brent Bean.

USB chairman Byron Lemoine said, "Our customers, both here in the United States and throughout the world, are demanding a better soybean. We're going to lead that charge in order to keep U.S. soybean farmers on top as the world's preferred supplier of quality soybeans."

In response to this charge TAES has scheduled a soybean field day for Sept. 15 at the Bushland Conservation Production Research Laboratory.

"Our scientists will address everything from soybean growth and development to planting dates, water needs and harvesting considerations," said Bean. "It should be very beneficial to anyone who is currently producing or considering growing soybeans."

Specialists will present the latest information on soybean inoculation and fertility needs of the crop.

Two USB's program committees approved new action and budget plans that are designed, in part, to gradually change the major composition of soybeans grown in the U.S.

For instance, foreign buyers want higher levels of protein and improved digestibility in soybeans to feed to livestock and poultry; while, the major U.S. food processors want less saturated fat in soybean oil and improvements in the amino acid profile of soy protein for foods.

The board's Domestic Marketing and Production Committees will share responsibility for developing the "better bean" plan, with more than $1.5 million going into research.

"This investment level demonstrates the tremendous commitment U.S. soybean farmers have toward meeting soybean demand around the world," said Lemoine. "About one out of every two rows of U.S. soybeans get exported. Maintaining and increasing our share of the world export pie is vitally important, especially during times of challenging profit opportunities."

Ragweed harvesters draw good pay

AFTON, Iowa (AP) - It was, they admit, a crazy-sounding idea: Someone wanted to pay them for picking the flowers off a weed.

"People will stop by and look and wonder about it. They're curious," Doug Jones said.

"But we've tried to keep it kind of quiet because we didn't want everybody doing it," his mom, Lucille Jones, adds.

For a second straight summer, the Jones family in Afton will spend about three weeks out in pastures, fields and empty corrals around their southern Iowa community, picking the flowers off ragweed plants.

They are after the ragweed pollen, an irritating substance that can bring on sneezing fits, coughing, itching and watery eyes for allergy sufferers.

Allergon AB, an affiliated company in Sweden.

Allergon AB breaks the pieces down even further into nearly pure pollen. That, in turn, is sold to pharmaceutical companies and made into allergy testing products or shots used to treat allergies.

The Joneses lucked into their work last year when the local director of a rural development program found out that Allergon needed help collecting ragweed pollen to meet its quotas.

Paul Kelley of Afton, president of the local Resource, Conservation and Development district, invited Allergon officials to the area to give an instructional workshop about pollen collection.

"There are a lot of stranger things out in the country that, if we could figure out how to market them, then we could make some money for people and teach them about the outdoors," Kelley said. "We're always looking for alternative means of keeping people on the farm."

With some scrap lumber, old computer boxes, pieces of old Ping-Pong tables, a salvaged furnace blower and a used dehumidifier, the Joneses have made their own dryer, which they use to turn fresh ragweed flowers into fluffy, dried material that is shipped to Allergon.

Allergon pays them $2.50 per pound of freshly picked ragweed flowers. In three weeks of picking on weekends and in the evening after their daytime jobs, they made about $2,600 last year and plan to pick even more this year.

Karen Jones, Doug's wife, works at a large insurance and financial services company in Des Moines and said some of her co-workers have teased her, calling her a "weed collector." But she considers it a way of "getting paid to exercise."

FSA offers timely reminders

Deaf Smith County Farm Service Agency staff realize how busy area producers are this time of the year, but they have a few reminders of important dates and connections that producers need to keep in mind.

To begin with FSA has been authorized to issue 100 percent of the 1999 PFC payments as early as October 1998, or in January of 1999, depending on when producers requested payment be made.

Therefore, producers should start finalizing '99 operating plans immediately if they intend to request October payment.

Producers need to note that Sept. 1, 1998, will be the final date to file a prevented planting claim on forage crops planted for hay.

The extreme drought conditions have prevented many producers from planting forage and hay crops.

The county committee has established Aug. 15 as the absolute last date that forage crops could be planted and reasonably expect to produce a crop.

FSA now offers a way to match farmers and ranchers having hay surplus with those suffering from shortages.

Hay Net is a nationwide computer database and clearinghouse for sharing information about hay availability.

Producers are encouraged to sign up at local FSA offices. Their information is entered into a database and participants are provided with a list of the closest producers who can meet their needs. Participants then make their own arrangements.

Unfulfilled farmer debt load indicates serious problems

FARGO, N.D. (AP) - More than half the farmers enrolled in a North Dakota State University survey group were unable to meet their debt obligations last year. The finding is another sign of the serious financial pinch many growers are in, a university researcher says.

"We knew the problem was severe, but what really highlights the extent of it is the number of farmers who couldn't keep up with their payment requirements," says Andy Swenson, a farm management specialist.

Of the 560 farms enrolled in the North Dakota Farm Business Management program, 57 percent could not keep current on debt repayments in 1997. More than half were behind by at least $9,000 for the year, and one-quarter were at least $33,000 delinquent for the year, the survey found.

"It's no surprise that net farm income has been coming up short in recent years because of a combination of problems," Swenson said. "And what it's led to is guys who aren't able to make enough to even cover their family living expenses. The offshoot is they ... fall behind in repaying their debts."

The Farm Business Management program is essentially a survey group of farms across North Dakota. Researchers track the financial situation of each farm over time, keeping tabs on revenue, debts and overall economic strength.

The survey for 1997 found median farm income dropped dramatically from 1996, while the amount of debt that farmers carry increased. Three of every 10 farms actually had a negative net income, Swenson said.

Officials were not surprised that financial conditions were poor in 1997 because of the year's disappointing crops and weak commodity prices, Swenson said, but the extent of the drop was unexpected.

He said 1997 "was really an extreme year. I think that's why you really see the inability for farmers to make their debt payments."

Matter of Fact

Texas Agriculture Commissioner

Good help is hard to find. That general rule has always been true in business — and now it's especially true in our industry of agriculture.

A shrinking workforce with hands-on ag knowledge, relatively low unemployment and competition from urban areas are all factors working against us as we look to hire the help needed to run our farms and ranches on a day-to-day basis.

No, most of us can't match all the perks a Fortune 500 company might offer. However, there are plenty of folks who find what agriculture has to offer — working with the land, a different challenge for each day, continuing demand for your products — as a welcome alternative to the daily grind at an office.

To compete with business for good workers, agriculture must copy a page from Madison Avenue in promoting what makes our industry so special. What other industry can offer its workers the chance to produce commodities that truly add value to our lives, a long history of environmental stewardship and the entrepreneurial opportunities that come when playing a key role in the decision-making process on the farm or ranch.

Good help will always be hard to find. But if the agriculture industry is to continue growing, we must all be willing to get and keep that help around.

High grain yields lead to more bins

MITCHELL, S.D. (AP) - A bin buster of a corn and soybean harvest means a boom in the construction of grain bins.

"We maybe put up 100,000 bushels of storage in a normal year, and we're probably at about a million this year so far, and I think it's just started," said Larry Titze, an owner of Palace Builders in Mitchell.

The requests have poured in over the last two weeks.

With record harvests predicted this year and prices at their lowest in a decade, many farmers are considering storing their grain.

In the current market, grain is worth more tomorrow than it is today, said Mark Grove, general manager of the Mitchell Farmers Co-op Elevator.

"That makes it a lot tougher for us to offer an attractive delayed pricing program. That, along with the idea that space will be very tight to start with, will increase the rates relative to delayed pricing programs," Grove said.

In a conventional storage program, the producer pays the elevator for storage. In delayed pricing, the title of the grain is turned over to the elevator.

But market conditions will not make the delayed pricing very attractive, Grove said. The elevator will have to ship the grain. There is a way for elevators to protect themselves on a portion of the price, but the risk involved means the company will probably have to increase the monthly service charge or possibly even use minimum charges.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

-Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

-Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

-Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Clark's fried pies worth the trip, price

GAINESVILLE, Texas — Want to make a good fried pie? Well, just look it up in a cookbook. Go ahead. See if you can find one. Chances are, you won't. That's probably why people come from miles around to buy fried pies from Jo Clark, who's been making them for nearly 16 years.

And for as long as she's been cooking them, Allen Goldsmith and Frank Peterson have been coming to the Fried Pie Co. & Restaurant in this North Texas community to eat them—sometimes twice a day.

"We're here when they open, when they close, and sometimes in between," Peterson says. He prefers Dutch apple. Goldsmith is partial to apricot. They eat what they can on the premises and take the rest home. Goldsmith says Ms. Clark's fried pies remind him of his mother's. Ms. Clark learned how to make them from her mother, who learned it from her mother. Over the years, she refined her mom's recipe for pie crust.

"I made up the recipe after going through trying different dough," she says. "My grandmother always cooked fried pies, but she cooked hers in a skillet. I wanted something I could fry. I tried, I know, for two weeks. At first, it was too flaky, so I kept adjusting and adjusting. Finally, I came up with what I wanted."

But don't think you're going to pry that information out of her. Not as hard as she had to work to get it the way she wanted. Just ask her husband, Bobby. At one point, he put his foot down: Either he or the fried pies had to go.

"She was frying those things up day and night," he says. "The house always smelled like fried food. I work nights, and I'd come home in the morning and there she'd be, frying pies. I'd wake up and she was still cooking."

At first, Ms. Clark sold the pies to small convenience stores in Gainesville, about 50 miles north of Dallas. But demand quickly exceeded supply.

After her husband's ultimatum, she started looking for a building. She found the one that now houses the Fried Pie Co. & Restaurant.

Frank Peterson remembers when the building at Main and Commerce used to be a Cadillac showroom. "Then it was a Montgomery Ward's tire place, then Jo turned it into a cafe," he says, barely looking up from his Saturday morning breakfast of eggs and sausage.

The restaurant is open Monday through Friday, from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m., and from 7 to 3 on Saturday. Don't come Sunday; it's closed. Any other time, though, you can have a fried pie made from apple, apricot, cherry, coconut custard, chocolate creme, pineapple or Dutch apple with a glaze on top. She uses to make peach and blueberry but stopped because there wasn't enough demand. Which is not to say she won't make them if you order them.

She makes 200 pies every day—in addition to special orders—and Kim Parkhill fries them. Bobby Clark is on hand for quality control. Frying starts around 6 a.m. and takes place in a kitchen not much larger than a breakfast nook. Ms. Clark has no idea how many fried pies she has made since she opened in November 1983. Some would say the pies are a bargain at $17.31 a dozen, including tax.

"People see where we work and they can't believe it," Ms. Clark says. "There's barely enough room for four people to move around in."

But more than enough room to create a product that has people from as far away as Phoenix taking the pies home.

Shoppers bound for the outlet mall in Gainesville or the town's many antique stores stop for a fix.

A regular customer from Levelland, Texas, buys eight dozen at a time and freezes them when he gets home, she says. A customer from Dallas takes "an order in the neighborhood, then brings them back home and delivers them to the people who bought them." A Denton couple bought eight dozen for a special dinner.

And Mike and Patricia Hicks savored fried pies as part of their wedding breakfast recently. They had come from Ardmore, Okla., to be married at the courthouse across the street. The eight members of the wedding party joined them at a long table with a white box filled with fried chocolate and apple pies.

Mrs. Hick's friend, Ann Selvidge, proclaimed the pies better than the ones she'd had in Ardmore, "and, they're pretty darned good," she says. "This crust is lighter; it just crumbles."

Does Ms. Clark share her recipe, she wondered?
"I don't," she came the reply.
"Maybe when I retire, I'll sell it."

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Facts You Should Know About Hurricanes

(NAPS)—With hurricane season beginning June 1 and extending through November 30 the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is conducting extensive outreach to warn the public about this dangerous weather condition. The damage from hurricanes can affect a large geographical area along the East and Gulf shores, impacting the lives of millions of Americans. Hurricanes can also have a devastating impact on communities far from the shore. Below is information from FEMA to educate the public and to help them prepare for this force of nature:

FACT: Most hurricanes—despite their classification for intensity—cause severe damage: for example, in 1996 Hurricane Fran was designated a Category 3 hurricane (out of a possible 5), but ultimately became the third most costly hurricane in history. The flood damage extended from North Carolina all the way to the Great Lakes.

FACT: Living inland is no protection from floods that can result from hurricanes. Torrential rain released by a waning hurricane can cause severe flooding hundreds of miles from the coast.

FACT: In most years the U.S. experiences several hurricanes, with hurricane season extending over a 6-month period.

FACT: Flood damage is not covered by homeowners policies. Homes, businesses and belongings can be protected with national flood insurance sold by insurance agents and companies.

FACT: There is a 30-day waiting period before flood insurance coverage goes into effect. Planning ahead ensures the best protection from the devastation of floods that can result from a hurricane.

FACT: Federal disaster assistance is not the answer for recovery from floods. Federal disaster assistance is only available if the President issues a major disaster declaration and most flooding events in the United States are not Presidentially declared.

FACT: A new FEMA initiative, Project Impact, is a pilot program designed to help communities become more disaster-resistant.

For more information about flood insurance call 1-800-427-9662. For more information about hurricane season, flooding and steps you can take to make your community disaster-resistant, visit FEMA's World Wide Web site at <http://www.fema.gov>.

IRA men and families are put Before Your Eyes

By Cynthia Werthamer
©TVData Features Syndicate

Before Your Eyes: Don't Take My Daddy, the fifth in the series of award-winning Before Your Eyes CBS news specials, presents the stories of three American women who face the difficult choice of raising their children alone in America or leaving their homes and relatives to be with their husbands. The special airs Monday, Aug. 24.

The women are married to Catholics from Northern Ireland — one a convicted murderer — whom the American government is trying to deport for their Irish Republican Army activities. The contrast between the lives of the men on the two continents is striking and immediate.

The three women "would not live happily ever after," says narrator Roma Downey (Touched by an Angel).

Little Matt Morrison, a 9-year-old picture of all-American boyhood, looks at the camera and explains solemnly that his father, also named Matt, "tried to shoot a Brit, but he missed."

The elder Matt Morrison spent 10 years in Irish prisons after being arrested for attempted murder. He now lives in St. Louis with his wife, Francie, and two children.

His compatriots are Noel Gaynor, who spent 14 years in prison for killing a British police officer in an IRA ambush, and Gabe Megahey, who was caught trying to ship weapons to Northern Ireland from New York. He spent four years in a U.S. federal prison.

Each family tells its story, mostly through the eyes of the wives, of the pain and frustration they feel at what they see as the government's betrayal.

Each wife believes her husband has paid his debt to society and deserves to live a full life with his family. The men believe they did nothing wrong in lashing out in a society they considered to be at war. The Royal British Constabulary in Northern Ireland was a legitimate enemy in their eyes.

"If someone wants to treat you as a second-class citizen, you have the right to resist," Megahey says with conviction. But the camera also zooms in on the faces of the widow of the policeman Gaynor's group killed, and the immigration official who is convinced the deportation law against terrorists is valid and must be upheld.

Nothing the wives do changes the men's fate; that's up to Gerry Adams, the leader of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing.

Adams negotiated a political deal for a peace agreement that included no deportations; however, the fate of the three families is left hanging.

Although the camera records the joy and disbelief they experience when the historic Irish peace accord is signed, elation turns to confusion as the families learn they remain in "legal limbo." They are allowed to stay in the United States for now, but their "files remain open," according to the immigration official.

"Given how the story changed over time and the geopolitical cast it gained at the end, I couldn't speculate what happens next," says Mary Murphy, executive producer of the program.

"Our goal was to tell a really good story, and a story about how you define justice," Murphy says. "The goal of Before Your Eyes has always been to take deeply felt personal chronicles and show how they interact with larger issues."

Roma Downey (Touched by an Angel), who grew up in the war-torn Northern Ireland province of Londonderry, narrates Before Your Eyes: Don't Take My Daddy, about the lives of three men who are living in the United States with new families and facing deportation for their IRA activities. The program airs Monday on CBS.

Fox hopes viewers catch Holding the Baby after football

By Suzanne Gill
cTVData Features Syndicate

The first new Fox show of the fall TV season is a groundbreaking one for the network.

As Fox Entertainment Group President Peter Roth puts it, Holding the Baby, premiering Sunday, Aug. 23, "introduces a single dad into the Fox mix."

That's right: family values and diaper jokes. Could the network of the Gen-X male be ready to settle down?

Jon Patrick Walker stars as Gordon Stiles, a young advertising exec whose wife leaves him, uh, holding the baby. Up to his neck at home and work, he hires a beautiful graduate student (Jennifer Westfieldt) as part-time nanny.

Series creator Howard J. Morris (Home Improvement) says his latest effort is about taking responsibility and growing up. "I tend to write about guys who need to be redeemed," he explains.

Responsibility and redemption have not been hallmarks of the network that gave the world Al Bundy, Martin Payne and Homey the Clown. As for any hopes of a steamy relationship between the newly jilted husband and the nanny,

"What we really want them to be is great friends," Morris says. After a long afternoon of football, is that what Fox's viewers want to see?

There is also the downer of a premise: a mother abandoning her 6-month-old. Gordon will deal with his emotional trauma in the third episode, Morris says. But after that, "the show is about the people left behind."

That would include Gordon's bachelor brother Jimmy (Eddie McClintock), who provides the show with a study point of view. Other regulars are Emmy winner Ron Leibman as Gordon's workaholic boss and Sherri Shepherd as a brassy secretary; they can (and do) run rings around colorless schlep Gordon.

As Kelly the nanny, Westfieldt, who glowed last spring as girlfriend Melissa in Two Guys, a Girl and a Pizza Place, hasn't burned any bridges. "I'm not sure if I'll go back there (to Two Guys) or not," the actress demurs.

Asked if the show will change its name if it lasts a few years and the baby grows up, Morris says he thinks not. Surely he knows the title is the least of his problems.

IN FOCUS

Kurt Russell, Val Kilmer, Jason Priestley, Billy Zane and Billy Bob Thornton take to the streets in Tombstone, a 1993 retelling of the O.K. Corral tale airing Wednesday, Aug. 26, on Fox.

Wyatt Earp and Doc Holliday (Russell, Kilmer) fight an endless series of gun battles with a murderous gang called The Cowboys, which includes the Earp-hating Clantons.

A corseted Dana Delany plays Josephine Marcus, Wyatt's main squeeze.

The Portuguese sailing ship Credula is featured in Into the Rising Sun, a four-part documentary premiering Wednesday, Aug. 26, on PBS (check local listings).

Marking the 500th anniversary of Vasco da Gama's successful voyage to India, the series combines adventure, stunningly beautiful land- and water-scapes, and the lure of travel as it follows the course of 15th-century Portuguese navigators, retracing the routes of these pioneers for a fresh look at the Age of Exploration.

TV PIPELINE

Q: Our entire family loves Everybody Loves Raymond, especially Patricia Heaton. What can you tell me about her? Are she and the show nominated for Emmys? —Sherry S., Troy, Ala.

A: No, they're not, which is one of the scandals of this year's Emmy nominations. CBS Entertainment President Leslie Moonves singled out the Raymond oversight as his single biggest disappointment among this year's nominations.

My mail indicates that viewers everywhere are finally catching on to this smart, funny show in general and to the delightful Heaton in particular. Born in Bay Village, Ohio, the 39-year-old actress made her Broadway debut in the gospel musical Don't Get God Started. While in Los Angeles with another production, she attracted attention from casting directors and began getting TV and film work.

Raymond is Heaton's fourth series role. Previously she starred with Linda Lavin in the ABC sitcom Room for Two (1992-93); played Gaby Hoffmann's mom in the 1994 NBC flop Someone Like Me; and portrayed brittle Natalie Hollingsworth in Delta Burke's 1995 bomb Women of the House. CBS also reports that she had a recurring role in thirtysomething.

Q: Whatever happened to Lee Horsley of Matt Houston? Is he married, and when is his birthday? —S. Bresky, Bridgeport, Conn.

A: Horsley was born May 15, 1955, in scenic Muleshoe, Texas. He is married and the father of four. This fall, he co-stars with Bo Derek in NBC's Saturday night Hawaiian drama Wind on Water.

Q: Will The Magnificent Seven be back on CBS this fall? —Barb Sealander, Shawano, Wis.

Patricia Heaton

A: No, but it will be back as a CBS midseason replacement.

Q: On the season finale of Millennium, did Catherine really die? —G. Ron Krapf, Waukegan, Ill.

A: Yes. Next season, Frank Black and his daughter (Lance Henriksen, Brittany Tiplady) will relocate to Washington, D.C., where he becomes an FBI consultant. Megan Gallagher (Catherine) will not return. Klea Scott (Brooklyn South) joins the cast as an FBI agent.

Q: What can you tell me about a '50s TV show titled West Point? —Mary Walsh, Carbondale, Pa.

A: Donald May, in the persona of Cadet Charles C. Thompson, was the host of this show when it premiered on CBS in October 1956 (he later was dropped).

The series, which was produced with the cooperation of a number of government military groups, took actual incidents from West Point files and dramatized them.

Cooper ready for battle royal on Y&R

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

She killed her ex-husband, escaped kidnappers and ruined her archenemy's life.

Since joining The Young and the Restless in 1973, Jeanne Cooper has done it all as Katherine Chancellor Sterling.

There even have been times through the years when the show's scripts mirrored Cooper's real life, including her bout with alcoholism.

In 1984, when Cooper decided to get a face lift, her character did as well. The Y&R cameras filmed the actual procedure. Two days later when the bandages were removed, the viewers saw the results of the surgery at the same time Cooper did. Nothing like it had ever been done on daytime television.

"Katherine is at a time right now where she is trying to sum up her life," Cooper says. "She wants a challenge, but she isn't certain what that is. She doesn't want anyone destroying her memories, and she'll do what it takes to protect them. Eventually, she'll take a big breath and move on like we all do."

Katherine and Jill (Jess Walton) have been fighting for more than 20 years. Recently, Jill discovered some papers belonging to Katherine's deceased former husband, which named Jill as a beneficiary of his estate. Now she plans to take everything away from Katherine.

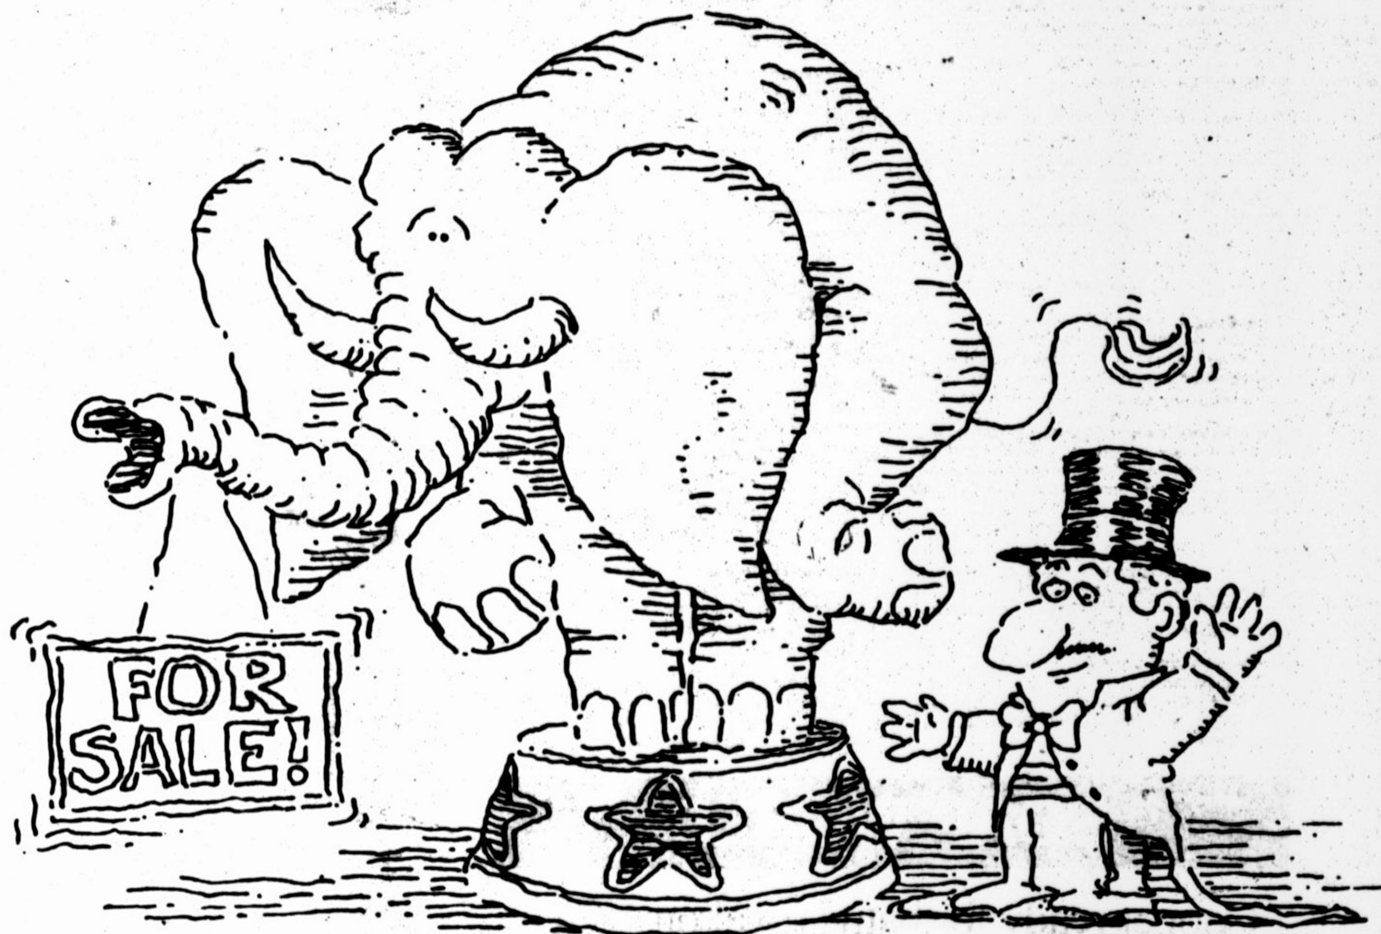

Fans have been clamoring for a major confrontation between the two women. Later this year, their wish will be granted.

"It's hot and heavy, and it's going to go on through the year," Cooper says. "After being on the show for 24 1/2 years, I had forgotten what it was like to really buckle down and work on something like this."

As tough as her new schedule may be, Cooper is happy the writers are giving fans what they want.

"The audience truly loves for them (Jill and Katherine) to be at odds," she says. "Everyone likes to predict who is going to come out the winner."

And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message.

People believe it when they read it in the paper.

Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Supplement to The Hereford Brand

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

Time is passing fast. Here it is almost September with another fiscal year gone. We will be having election of officers, with three members going off the board and three taking their places.

Sept. 30 is the end of the budget year and we are running very low on funds. Donations are down and the federal and state funds we receive are the same as 15 years ago. The cost of everything has escalated. In comparison, minimum wage rose from $3.25 to $5.15 per hour, food is up by at least a third and utilities have gone up tremendously. If you can and are willing to help, please make a donation to the Center. We would really appreciate it.

Dues are due July 1 and about half of our members have paid. There are different categories of membership. This is part of our operating funds.

We still have openings on the Christmas Tour and we need your reservations and deposits soon. The schedule is listed in this paper. This is a wonderful tour, with a lot of beautiful lights. With Hereford Travel Center booking for us, we get 5 percent of the total paid in. I have always booked our tours until this last year, and that gets so involved and the risk is great. We have, at times, made good money for the Center from our tours and some we have just broken even. We have never gone in the red but there have been times I have really been anxious about it. On one tour, if I had not taken my pocket calculator and figured all hotel costs, we would have gone in the red. I found almost $1,000 in mistakes in their calculations.

The Thrift Store is a very important fundraiser. We want to thank all persons who donate items and the volunteers who work so hard to operate the store. Last year our gross income was $40,000, but after sales tax, utilities and upkeep, we cleared about $30,000. We would like and desperately need to double this income. If we had more help we could be open more days per week.

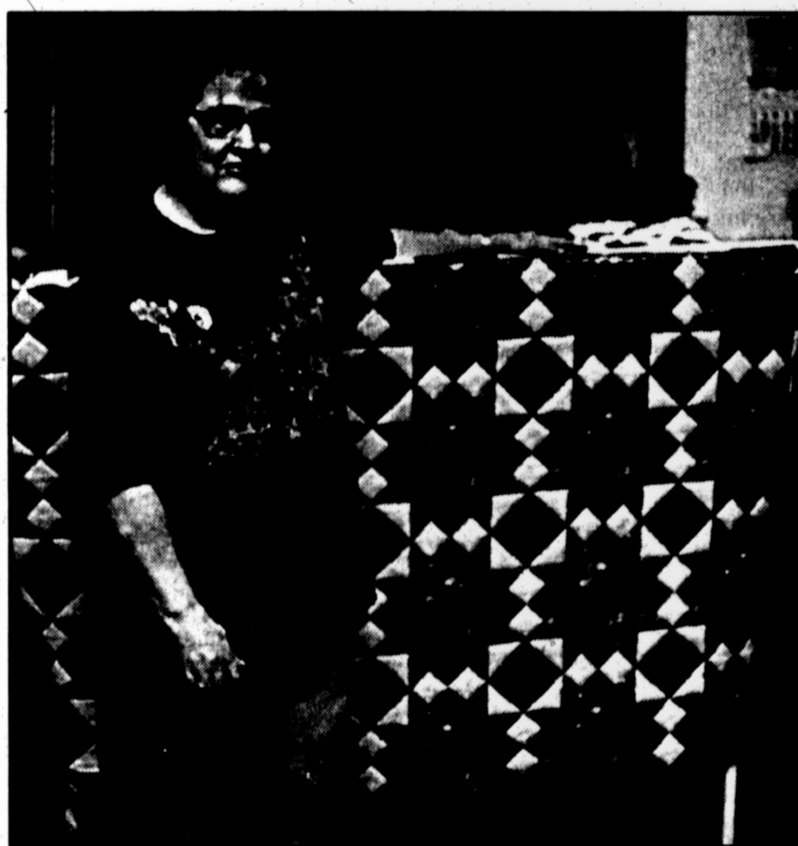

The Festival of Trees is a very important project that helps with our funding. There are a lot of categories for participation. We have some different projects planned for this year. We need craft items for the Bazaar and its about time to start thinking about what we can bake for the Bake Sale. The Volunteers have been working hard and furious on the baskets. They are more beautiful than ever. We will be having a Silent Auction and need some neat items for that event.

Congratulations and many thanks to our Community for the wonderful Centennial Celebration. It was wonderful and exciting. Thanks to all who helped with and participated in the Quilt Show. I want you to know we will be back at the Community Center next year.

See you at the Center.

Annual quilt show winners named

Wilma Clark is pictured with the quilt she won in a drawing held during the annual Quilt Show at Hereford Senior Citizens Center in conjunction with the Town and Country Centennial Celebration. The quilt was created by the Sugar Ants Quilters of the Senior Center.

The annual Quilt Show held at Hereford Senior Citizens Center on August 8 during the Town and Country Centennial Celebration yielded winners from various categories.

Handmade quilts comprised the most entries. Betty Kriegshauser won the Most Handwork division while Mr. J.E. Warrick was cited for showing the Oldest Quilt. The quilt recognized for Most Unique Design was provided by Carolyn Christie, who displayed her "Twelve Days of Christmas" creation. Judges' Choice was given to Ola Stone of Clarendon for her "Jacob's Ladder" entry.

Eight entries comprised the Machine-stitched division. Joyce Schlabs' quilt was recognized as Judges' Choice.

Judges' Choice for a Crocheted Item went to Billie Watts. Carolyn Hutcheson captured the Judges' Choice award for entry in the Wall Hanging division.

A drawing was held for one quilt, which was created by the Sugar Ants Quilters of Hereford Senior Citizens Center. Lucky winner was Wilma Clark.

"The quilt show was quite a success," Margie Daniels, HSC Center director, said. "We want to thank everyone who provided quilts for display and all who volunteered their time to help with the event. We also appreciated the anonymous people who served as judges."

BISHOP, Texas - She teaches in a school that bears her name. Three generations of students claim she converted their uneven scrawl into tidy penmanship. Unassuming but possessed of iron resolve, Lillian Luehrs is an institution in this small farming town just north of Kingsville.

The simple act of going to school every day has defined Mrs. Luehrs' life, forged her identity and made her an unlikely giant.

It is a well-known fact here that from the time she started first grade in 1925, through college and a 60-year teaching career, Luehrs has not missed a single day of school.

"It's really quite astonishing.... She has not missed a day," said Pamela Charles-Ham, who had Mrs. Luehrs for English in 1959 and now

But Mrs. Luehrs, who turned 80 last week, said the secret of her longevity is simple.

"One day at a time. Every morning, I just get up and go to school," she explained in a gentle, graveled drawl.

Tough like the cotton country from which she hails, Mrs. Luehrs has no intention of quitting her job as an eighth-grade language arts teacher anytime soon.

"I have too much energy to just sit down and not do anything.... I still get a lot of satisfaction from teaching," she said.

In 1987, Mrs. Luehrs' 50th year on the job, school officials renamed Bishop Junior High School in her honor. Colleagues still arrive at work each day greeted by the same sight: Mrs. Luehrs' red Buick Century parked in the first space of the faculty lot. As a rule, she gets to work by 7 a.m.

She remains, fellow teachers said, a force to be reckoned with.

"Nothing really surprises her.... She's seen everything," said Amrica Lopez, a seventh-grade language arts teacher.

When Mrs. Luehrs began teaching in 1937, schools in Bishop were segregated, a high percentage of students dropped out to work on their family farms, and supply-wise, teachers were given a single ream of paper to last the whole year. Her

Today, Hispanics, Anglos and the occasional black student share classrooms in the town's five schools. The local economy depends as much on the output of a plastics and pharmaceuticals plant as on agriculture. And Mrs. Luehrs, who wears her thick auburn hair drawn up neatly in a bun, now teaches in a world of computers, copy machines and all kinds of gadgets.

The outer trappings of the profession have changed immensely, she said, but the foundations of teaching remain the same.

"It all boils down to the fact that, if you don't have a dedicated teacher in there, these inventions wouldn't get the job done themselves," she said.

Determined to stay on the cutting edge of her craft, Mrs. Luehrs attends professional development workshops across the state. A seminar on pre-advanced placement courses brought the educator to Edinburg in late July.

"As a teacher, I have to keep learning all the time," Mrs. Luehrs said.

Fellow teachers marvel at her dedication and energy, and tap the veteran educator for advice as they tackle their own classroom challenges.

"It's just amazing to see every day, the enthusiasm and the love she has for the children. That gives me the motivation as a teacher. I guess she's my mentor," Ms. Lopez said.

Mrs. Luehrs has taught as many as four generations of some families. School board President Fran Murr, Mrs. Luehrs' student in 1965, described her instructor as a living link to the past.

"She's still a reminder of the way things were, and in a lot of ways, still are," she said.

Mrs. Murr recalled her former teacher as a stickler for good handwriting and a fierce diagrammer of sentences. Her reputation as a no-nonsense educator - "who saw everything" - remains intact.

"My son will have her this year.

He said he's dreading it," Mrs. Murr said.

But Mrs. Luehrs, chairwoman of the school's language arts department, is not immune to the wisecracks, mischief and other hazards of the eighth grade. Some colleagues worry the vast resources she brings to the classroom are at times lost on today's youngsters.

"This is the '90s. Unfortunately, the new generation is always in a hurry," Ms. Lopez said. "Sometimes, she does have a little bit of a trouble connecting with them because ... their life skills differ very much from hers."

Mrs. Luehrs acknowledges she is a tough teacher in an increasingly difficult profession. But she remains passionate about her job.

"I'm a hard teacher. I expect them to do the work," she said. "They don't mind as long as I'm fair and I let them know I care. When I can get their confidence, I don't have any problems."

A widow with no children of her own, Mrs. Luehrs sums up her devotion to her work in three words.

"I love teaching," she said.

The fact that Mrs. Luehrs has not missed a single day of school amazes even those who know her best. The dimensions of her career defy easy description. Struggling to come up an apt metaphor, Lopez - who describes Mrs. Luehrs as her best friend - finally compares the longtime educator to another familiar giant in the region.

"(She's) just like the King Ranch here in Kingsville. It's here and we're here," Ms. Lopez said.

When she began school as a little girl, Mrs. Luehrs did not intend to set any attendance records. Only after she received a certificate for perfect attendance at the end of first grade did she attach some significance to the feat.

"I really didn't think about it," she said. "I just wanted to go to school every day."

But, as she got older and her streak swelled, Mrs. Luehrs strove to maintain perfect attendance. That has not always been easy, she said, recalling a particularly close call.

"One time, when I was in fifth or sixth grade, it was raining," she remembered. "We lived on a muddy street. My daddy was going to take me in the car, but we got stuck in the mud. I was having a fit," she said, laughing.

"A man in the lumber yard had a truck. My daddy said he'd give him a dollar if he took me to school. ... I got there."

Over the years, Mrs. Luehrs has faced other instances of car trouble and days when she awoke feeling sick. But she never failed to make it to class.

"I always felt better when I got to school," she said.

In 1941, Robert Ripley, of "Ripley's Believe It or Not," profiled the young teacher for her attendance record.

To encourage others to follow her example, Mrs. Luehrs has established a scholarship for students who make it through school without missing a day of class.

"It's a little carrot out there," she said of the fund, which provides $1,000 a year for four years of college for Bishop students with perfect attendance.

Two students have accomplished the feat since the fund was established in the mid-1980s.

Despite the rigors of teaching, Mrs. Luehrs said she enters each year with renewed optimism.

"Even though there are difficulties, I still get a lot of pleasure out of teaching," she said. "At the beginning of each year, I say, 'This is going to be the best year.'"

Nutrition Update

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD

Most Americans have grown accustomed to seeing a little chart on boxes or cans of processed foods: this is the "Nutrition Facts" label that lists such things as calories and fat. Yet you may not have seen a label for fresh fruit or vegetable. These are sold in bulk, so a label is not required. However, nutrition information is usually available in the produce department -- you just need to ask.

Checking on the nutrition content of any food -- including fruits and vegetables -- is a good thing to do. But the "Nutrition Facts" for your favorite fruit or vegetable may not be complete; not all of the beneficial nutrients have to be listed there. With fruits and vegetable, it's actually important to look beyond what the label says.

What the labels don't tell you

You may already know that fruits and vegetable contain vitamins, minerals, and fiber. Some of these you will see on the "Nutrition Facts" labels, but others aren't listed. Required information includes calories, fat, cholesterol, sodium, carbohydrates, protein, Vitamin A, Vitamin C, calcium and iron. Example of important nutrients not required on the label are potassium and folate.

Beyond vitamins and minerals

Fruits and vegetables contain other substances called phytochemicals that my protect the body against chronic diseases such as cancer and heart disease. Many phytochemicals have antioxidant properties which stop damage to our cells from everyday wear and tear, as well as prevent cancer growth. You won't find phytochemical listed on the "Nutrition Facts" label, but they are plentiful in most plant foods.

Fresh grapes, for example, contain a phytochemical called resveratrol that may prevent cancer. Grapes are also packed with phytochemicals called flavonoids, which appear to prevent heart disease by preventing the formation of blood clots.

Take advantage of these hidden benefits

There are thousands of phytochemicals in plant foods. While nearly all fruits and vegetables contain phytochemical, they won't all contain the same kind or have the same amounts.

To improve your chances of reaping the benefits:

*Eat a variety of fruits and vegetables; not all plants have the same nutrients.

*Eat foods with rich and diverse colors; certain phytochemicals are responsible for giving color to the fruit and vegetable. Their health benefits are a bonus!

Diversify your experience

Try using fruits and vegetables in ways you haven't tried before:

*Fruit getting a bit too ripe? Blend a mix of different fruits with a bit of yogurt to make a delicious smoothie.

*Stuff tortillas with potatoes, tomatoes and beans for a filling vegetarian meal.

*Blend cooked cauliflower with garlic and capers and stir into pasta for a savory, healthy dish.

Social Security

By JIM MCDANIEL
Manager in Amarillo

A number of people have expressed fear that their Social Security checks may be affected by a computer glitch that prevents data processing systems from recognizing the year 2000. They are reading horror stories which predict a computer meltdown or at least countless errors from computers that fail to recognize the year change.

Fortunately, I can assure you that for Social Security, such fears are groundless. We are on top of the problem and expect the turn of the century to be business as usual -- payments delivered on time and in the right amount.

With over 44 million people depending on Social Security for a monthly benefit payment, we recognized early that we needed to take the lead in addressing the problem. We have been working on the problem before most other organizations even heard of it.

According to Kathy Adams, Social Security's Assistant Deputy Commissioner for Systems, over 90 percent of Social Security's 33 million lines of proprietary software is ready for the year 2000 now. For the rest of the year, the Social Security Administration (SSA) will be testing how its various software systems work together.

SSA is working closely with other agencies involved in the check delivery process. These include:

*The Department of the Treasury that prepares SSA's payments either in the form of direct deposit transactions or checks.

*The Federal Reserve System that delivers Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) direct deposit transactions to beneficiaries' financial institutions through the national Automated Clearing House (ACH) system.

*The U.S. Postal Service that delivers Social Security and SSI checks.

SSA expects to test the ability of the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve System and the Postal System to prepare and deliver year 2000-compliant Social Security and SSI benefit payments before the end of 1998.

"It's not enough for us to be ready. Everyone in the chain must be ready, too," Ms. Adams said.

College entrance essay memorializes grandfather

The "ART" of Life

The minute we received this assignment, I knew exactly what I would write about -- my grandfather. Arthur Monroe Stoy. "Art" to his friends, "Pop" to his children, and "Granddaddy" to me. As I recall the time that I spend with him, I realize his example helped shape by personal growth and my relationships with others.

In the summer of 1987 when I was 7, my grandfather was placed in ICU. The doctors' prognosis for his survival was grim. After a couple of weeks, however, Granddaddy proved them wrong and left intensive care. I was an extremely confused little girl. I did not understand what was happening to one of the people I loved most. My parents tried to explain his condition -- emphysema. At the time, it just seemed like a really big word.

I later learned that this really big word was a lung disease that impaired Granddaddy's breathing. For the next seven years, his health remained stable. As I entered high school three years ago, I noticed that his health began to deteriorate. My grandparent's house now resembled a maze containing breathing equipment for him. Care was taken with every step in an effort to prevent unplugging the cords and severing his precious air.

Though he could hardly breathe, I never once heard him complain. He maintained a positive attitude and continued to sustain a genuine concern for less fortunate individuals. Granddaddy made an effort several times to attend my cross country meets even though he arrived in his wheel chair pushed by my grandmother. He stayed active in Kiwanis and his church until the doctors and his failing health prevented him from leaving the house anymore.

My idea of a "true Christian" may not be the same as anyone else's, but I feel that my grandfather was an exemplary model. Any person can profess to be a Christian, but few demonstrate it -- my grandfather did both. His faith was visible to the eye and was apparent through his demeanor.

My grandfather defied the doctors' predictions more than once. Art's unwavering determination to survive and remain with his family amazed everyone. He refused to miss the birth of his youngest grandchild or the marriage of the oldest one. At my cousin's wedding, I danced with my grandfather even though he was bound to his wheelchair. The happiness in his smile that night will stay with me forever.

Easter Sunday, 1997, Arthur Stoy went in peace after a long and difficult fight. The sadness we felt was replaced by relief and joy in knowing that the suffering had ceased. I knew the influence he had on my life was profound, and at his funeral services I found out it was evident in other people as well.

Granddaddy was a pioneer in the grass seed business and shared his knowledge with anyone curious enough or willing to learn. No one was a stranger to my grandfather; he was always meeting someone new, and my social life seems to be a replica of his. He constantly tried to make a new friend or be a friend to someone else.

Granddaddy stayed in St. Anthony's Hospice the last days of his life. He never lost sight of what was important to him -- his family and friends. Though he was only half-conscious, he knew all of us and remembered that my cousins had flown in from college to be with him and that I was supposed to be at the One Act Play in Canyon. He whispered to me, "I wish I could see your play." Those words reflected the deep feelings shown toward his loved ones.

Memories of Granddaddy are endless; however, a few special ones stand out. When we were able to visit my grandparents, my cousins and I would pile into bed with him and listen to story after story. They were consistently humorous and original, even if he made it up as he went. His favorite tale was about the little girl who wandered off from her mother in K-Mart. Each story had a lesson that we were supposed to catch if we were not laughing too hard.

By the time I was old enough to hold a handful of cards, he was teaching me to play gin. I tested his patience because I was a beginner not yet ready for Las Vegas. Although I was a wretched player he invariably let me win which boosted my confidence considerably.

When no one else trusted me in their precious vehicle, Granddaddy took me out at the age of twelve to drive around on the back roads. One time I nearly hurled us into the ditch; his reaction was to calmly correct me without ever raising his voice.

Granddaddy left me with a legacy of his courage and strength. His open-mindedness toward the opinions of others was instilled in my father and hopefully is still growing in me. I never witnessed a conversation in which he judged others but instead praised their individuality. He showed me patience and how to be calm and collected. I know that I will probably never to the person he was, but I hope that in my life I will touch at least one person the way he touched dozens.

I am sure that my pen and I have not given him the credit he deserves, but his most important gift to me was to learn that it is "O.K." to have values and morals in a world that encourages "anything goes."

Political influence of retirees is far-reaching

By MATT KELLEY

Associated Press Writer

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) - Mary Charlesworth leads one of the most politically powerful groups in Arizona, and she knows it.

"We can throw the election, and everybody is aware of it," says Charlesworth, 61, president of the Sun City Taxpayers Association.

Like nearly everyone else in this retirement community of golf carts and palm trees, the 20,000 members of the Sun City Taxpayers Association can be counted on to vote and to have long memories of politicians who cross them by raising taxes.

Sun City and its sister communities of Sun City West and Sun City Grand are a major reason why Republicans rule the state despite having only a slight edge in voter registrations.

Experts say that retiree influence is likely to be felt again this year, with few emerging hot-button issues to bring younger or less reliable voters to the polls come November.

"Here, we'll get anything from 78 percent or more (of voters) who will vote in the (September) primary," says Charlesworth, who is on a first-name basis with most top state leaders. "We can rule the election, and we know that."

Sun City voters, for example, are credited with swinging the close 1994 governor's race to former Republican Gov. Fife Symington, said pollster and GOP consultant Bruce Merrill.

"The older population has disproportionate influence because they vote, and we are getting more and more retirement people as we build these retirement communities," Merrill said. "And that's going to help the Republicans."

That influence helps to nudge top Republican leaders to the right, especially on financial issues, while the state electorate as a whole is more moderate on issues ranging from abortion to education to taxes, Merrill says.

Taxes are foremost in the minds of many Sun City voters. A major selling point for the communities is low property taxes; Sun City and Sun City West are unincorporated and most areas pulled out of local school districts years ago.

"You're taxed on everything," says Carol DeMasi, 76, of Sun City West. "Everything has a tax on it, and you wonder why they just keep asking for more."

This antipathy toward taxes in general and property taxes in particular was keenly felt in the legislative debate this year over school construction funding, where the mere mention of opposition by the Sun City Taxpayers Association could seemingly doom any proposal.

The solution approved by the legislature this summer would restrict districts' ability to levy property taxes even further and shift responsibility for nearly all school construction projects to the state. Charlesworth called the plan "as near as they can get to a good solution."

"We do not want to go through one more battle on the school tax thing," Charlesworth said. "It's getting tiresome. It's getting old."

The overwhelming Republican majority in Sun City can make Democrats like John Salas feel pretty lonely. Salas, 70, says he's joked with a neighbor that if they get into a car wreck, there won't be any more Democrats in Sun City.

"I really feel that Arizona is just too much one-party politics," Salas said. "The tendency is to ignore social issues and to ignore the people, and it's too focused on the needs of business."

Salas, a native of Guam, said living through the Japanese occupation of his native island during World War II helped make him a believer in the positive force of government.

"I am never unhappy to pay taxes," Salas said. "I'm glad I can pay taxes and afford it. Under Japanese rule, it was slave labor."

FOT committee meeting set

Time is drawing closer to the Nov. 18-22 Festival of Trees fund-raiser to be held at Hereford Senior Citizens.

Monday, Sept. 21 is the date set for another planning meeting of the Festival of Trees committee. It will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Hereford Senior Citizens Center.

Anyone who has ideas or suggestions is invited to attend the monthly planning meetings of the Festival of Trees committee.

Grandma Moses began painting at age 76, when arthritis made it difficult for her to hold embroidery needles. Before that she embroidered colorful scenes of rural life.

We Can Explain Why You Need An IRA In Two Words:

Social Security.

If you're going up the hump, not over the hill, then you've probably realized by now that Social Security isn't going to be quite as secure as you once believed.

An Individual Retirement Account at Hereford State Bank is a very smart investment toward your future because it's a personal savings plan that provides a substantial retirement fund, and also allows you to defer taxes on the principal as well as the accrued interest each year.

Because your earnings on an IRA investment are tax-deferred, they build much faster than many comparable investments.

Of course, the sooner you start the better off you'll be. After all, you're getting close enough to see the top of the hill. Which leads us to our final two words.

Don't delay.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DOHOHUE: What do you think of using a weighted bat to increase the power of my swing? Some people tell me it can throw off my timing and tell me not use one. Others tell me it's a good way to develop a more powerful swing. Can you settle this for me? — J.F.

ANSWER: If a person lifts weights, muscles will grow and become stronger. However, to increase strength of a particular sport motion, such as swinging a bat, a person has to practice "sport-specific training."

Sport-specific training incorporates weight training using the exact movement used in a particular sport — swinging a bat, for example.

The ordinary bat weighs 30 ounces. Swinging a 34-ounce bat adds the resistance needed to make a swing quicker and more powerful.

Have a friend pitch to you. Swing the heavier bat for six consecutive pitches. Take a minute or two to rest. Then repeat the exercise. Work at this slowly until five repetitions of six consecutive swings can be done comfortably.

Such exercise accelerates the swing of a standard bat, giving a player more time to assess each pitch. It also increases the power generated when bat meets ball — your goal.

DEAR DR. DOHOHUE: I am a 70-year-old man in good physical condition. Three months ago, while jogging on a treadmill, I switched from landing on my heels to landing on my toes. At the end of the run, I discovered a blood blister at the base of the large toenail. Within a few weeks, the nail came off. Will the nail grow back? What is the proper way to land on your feet when running? — G.W.

ANSWER: Blood pooled under the toenail because the toe jammed against the shoe front with each pace. Fast action on your part could have saved the nail.

For others who might experience the same injury, evacuate the blood under the nail promptly: Uncoil a paper clip. With a match, sterilize one end of the clip. Holding the unheated end of the paper clip, apply firm pressure with the heated end to the nail part overlying the collection of blood. The heated paper clip end drills a passage through the nail to the blood. The blood gushes out and the nail is saved.

In all probability your nail will grow back. Be patient. Toenails take up to a year to grow from the nail base to the tip of the toe.

Proper foot landing is a matter of contention. Some advise a long-distance runner to land on the ball of the foot and almost simultaneously strike the ground with the heel. Others state that landing on the heel is a better way to protect the feet.

Older women staying independent longer

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The share of elderly Americans, especially women, continuing to live independently after losing their spouse has increased sharply.

Some 70 percent of elderly widows lived by themselves in 1997, up from 56 percent in 1970, the Census Bureau reported today.

During the same period, the share of widowers living by themselves increased from 53 percent to 60 percent, Census statistician Terry Lugaia said.

Overall, 46.3 percent of American women over age 65 were widows, down from 54.4 percent in 1970. That change occurred as men began living longer and as more couples divorced, Lugaia noted.

In 1970, just 2.3 percent of elderly women were divorced; that figure now is 7.4 percent. The share of elderly women still living with their husbands has risen from 34 percent to 40 percent.

The changes were disclosed in the Census Bureau's annual update of Americans' "Marital Status and Living Arrangements."

The analysis also found that, for the first time, the number of unmarried couples in America has topped 4 million. The bureau estimated there were 4,130,000 unwed couples as of March 1997, up from 3,958,000 a year earlier.

As young people choose to delay marriage, or to try life as a couple before making the formal commitment, this group has been growing steadily in recent years.

In 1960, there were fewer than a half-million such couples. The total topped 1 million in 1978, passed 2 million in 1986 and reached 3 million in 1991.

Of the unwed couples, 1,470,000, or about 36 percent, had a child under age 15.

As people delay marriage, the average age when they finally decide to tie the knot is increasing.

As of last year, it reached 25 years for women marrying for the first time, up from 24.8 a year earlier. Women's age at first marriage had averaged 24.5 for several years.

For men, the average age at first marriage was 26.8, down from 27.1 a year earlier. That figure also has been rising gradually in recent years.

On the other hand, about 109.2 million adults (55.9 percent of all people age 18 and over) were married and living with their spouse in 1997.

Also for the first time, the report found more than 3 million children under age 18 living with their fathers.

About 85 percent of children with a single parent lived with their mother - 16,740,000 in 1997, down from 16,993,000 the year before. The total living with their father climbed from 2,750,000 to 3,059,000.

Of those living with their mothers, 40 percent resided with mothers who had never married, 35 percent with divorced moms, 22 percent with separated mothers and the rest with widowed mothers.

Single fathers caring for children were more likely to be divorced, 45 percent; followed by never married, 31 percent; separated, 19 percent; and widowed, 4 percent.

The Census study also found:

- There were 1,264,000 interracial married couples in the country. Of the total, 311,000 were black-white couples. The majority, 896,000, were whites married to someone of a race other than blacks, such as American Indians or Asians. There were 57,000 black-other couples.

- Approximately 19.3 million adults, about 10 percent of the adult population, were divorced.

- Nearly 14 million people (34.5 percent) between 25 and 34 years old had never been married. More than half (54.2 percent) of the blacks in this age group had never married.

Birthday party

Members of the Pilot Club of Hereford held a birthday party recently at Hereford Care Center in honor of those residents celebrating a birthday in August. Guests were served a variety of homemade cake and punch.

Vichyssoise, cold potato-and-leek soup, owes its existence to a French king who feared being poisoned. Henry XV had his food tasted by his servants to make sure it wasn't poisoned, which is why his potato soup was cold when it finally reached him. It turned out he preferred it that way.
