Immigration is the issue that can cut both ways

Republicans and Democrats stand divided, have very little control over it

By Chris Tomlinson
Associated Press

■ ANALYSIS

AUSTIN — Immigration policy, something that Texas politicians have little control over, is shaping up as one of the major issues of the 2014 election cycle in Texas.

Republican operatives say the issue is the most important to their primary voters. That's probably why Houston Sen. Dan Patrick made it the centerpiece of his first television ad in his bid for lieutenant governor. But immigration law is a complicated issue, particularly for Hispanics in Texas, and Democrats see just as much opportunity in the issue as their conservative counterparts.

The focus of Patrick's ad is a law that allows the children of immigrants who entered the United States illegally to pay in-state tuition if they otherwise qualified as a Texas resident. Patrick incorrectly claimed that he was the only candidate for lieutenant governor who opposed the measure. Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst and Land Commissioner Jerry Patterson also oppose the policy.

In a tough, four-way race such as the one for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor the candidates feel compelled to run to the right to attract the support of tea party activists, even if that means opposing a policy Gov. Rick Perry defended on the presidential campaign trail as good for the Texas economy and compassionate to children.

Coincidentally, bickering over who opposes the law came as the Republican National Committee launched a permanent Hispanic outreach team in Texas.

"We will engage with voters in their neighborhoods, towns, and cities to strengthen our ties with the Hispanic community," said Jennifer Korn, RNC deputy political director for Hispanic initiatives. "We are committed to creating a permanent year-round ground game that will allow us to compete for every vote and will outlast any one candidate or campaign."

Attorney General Greg Abbott, who does not face a rightwing challenger in his bid for governor, used the occasion to talk about Hispanics sharing conservative

Heavy rain leads to flooding, AirSho cancellation

By Tyler White
twhite@mrt.com

Sunday's heavy rains caused roadway flooding and mayhem for local motorists and cancellation of the Commemorative Air Force AirSho.

Because of the 1.42 inches of rain, several intersections were closed and a few area events were cancelled —including the second day of CAF AirSho 2013 and the Old Sorehead Trade Days in Stanton, according to event officials.

The National Weather Service in Midland reported 1.42 inches of rain as of 9:48 p.m. Sunday. The highest recorded amount of rainfall for Oct. 13 was 1.63 inches in 1974, according to NWS.

Several city streets — including the intersections at Loop 250 and Highway 191, Terrell Street between Louisiana Avenue and Mississippi Avenue, Mineola Street and Ohio Avenue, and Clay Street and Cloverdale Road — were closed because of the flooding, according to a city spokesman. The normal low-water crossings on Scharbauer Drive were closed as well as Scharbauer and Barber Street and at Scharbauer and Edwards Street, said Joe Sampson, multimedia developer for the city of Midland.

There was significant flooding on Wadley Avenue and Midkiff Road near H-E-B, with several feet of water pouring into nearby yards.

Dump trucks were staged at fire stations Nos. 1, 2 and 3 in case of high-water emergencies, Sampson said.

Between 2 p.m. and 6:20 p.m. Sunday, emergency personnel responded to

DPS: 1 dead in Andrews County crash

From staff reports

One man died Saturday and another was injured in a two-vehicle crash on South Highway 115 in Andrews County, according to a press release from the Department of Public Safety.

Augustin Jaime Torres, 48, was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash that occurred about 6:30 a.m. Saturday. He was a passenger in a pickup — driven by a 37-year-old Pharr man — that was headed east on South Highway 115. A truck towing a vehicle was northbound on Andrews Loop 1910 when the driver disregarded a stop sign and was hit by the pickup, according to the release.

The pickup driver was transported to Odessa Regional Medical Center, where he was listed in critical condition Saturday night. Torres' body was taken to McNett Funeral Home in Andrews.

The press release doesn't list place of residence for Torres, who was an oilfield worker. He and the pickup driver were wearing seat belts at the time of the crash, according to the press release.

The release also didn't provide additional information about the other driver.

Former sports ancor Tankersley enjoys recent move to news desk

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@mrt.com

You can count on one hand the number of sports reporters who have made the successful transition to a main news anchor position in Midland-Odessa during the last two-plus decades.

Trevor Tankersley, of television station KWES, feels he is up to that challenge.

Tankersley has earned his stripes in the market, anchoring the sports desk. In the news business, sports and news are like night and day. Sports is more fast-paced; in some cases, such as Friday nights during the football and basketball seasons, resembling organized chaos. However, in the hands of a talented anchor it can be scripted into all the information you need packaged in four to five minutes of television.

A typical news broadcast is hours in the making, taking stories that happened throughout the day using more resources. A lead anchor is responsible for filling additional minutes and will certainly have more eyes following every detail that can be packed into a 15- or 30-second report.

"The pre-requisite is a passion for news," KWES General Manager David Moreno said. "Trevor was a strong sports anchor and he brings that experience with him to the main anchor position. We are very pleased with his transition."

Moreno has pelts on the wall when it comes to anchoring, and even served as KWES' anchor. Tankersley, he said, will fill two voids. First, he is a known figure in the community. Second, he provides stability for KWES in a position where a TV station can't afford too much transition.

The move to co-hosting with Crystal Crews at 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. did require a commitment Tankersley was willing to fulfill. He grew up in the Dallas

The Strand in Galveston has been named one of 2013's "Great Streets" by the American Planning Association. The street was once called "the Wall Street of the Southwest."

Strolling the Strand, one of America's great streets

By John Wayne Ferguson
Galveston County Daily News

GALVESTON — The street that was once called "the Wall Street of the Southwest" is now in the company of Fifth Avenue.

The Strand has been named one of 2013's "Great Streets" by the American Planning Association. Since 2007, the group has honored streets around the country for their form, composition, character and sustainability.

The Strand, specifically the five blocks between 20th Street and 25th Street, was honored for its architectural gems and its historic resilience following the numerous disasters that have struck the city — including yellow fever, civil war, economic decline and devastating flooding.

"The Strand is a magnificent street that has seen more than its share of destructive storms and disasters, most recently Hurricane Ike in 2008," Paul Farmer, CEO of the planning association, told the Galveston County Daily News. "Yet Galveston's community leaders and residents remain steadfast in their resolve to repair and rebuild, and nothing demonstrates this better than The Strand's renewed vibrancy and prosperity."

Denny Johnson, the public affairs coordinator for the planning association, said The Strand was chosen partly because of the city's dedication to preserving the street's historic nature.

"We think the community is doing an excellent job of keeping it a unique place," Johnson said.

Many of the buildings on the street were built between 1859 and 1883 and feature cast iron facades, multicolored brick tiles and Corinthian columns.

The street has indeed had many chances to stage comebacks over the years. A center of business during the late 1800s, many of the commercial businesses abandoned the street, and the island, after the 1900 Hurricane. In 1964, the city completed a comprehensive plan for redeveloping the city's central business district.

In 1975, that effort was boosted by island-born billionaire George Mitchell, who began purchasing and restoring buildings through his company Mitchell Historic Properties. Up to his death in July, it's been estimated that Mitchell had invested $125 million is restoring the city's downtown.

Today, five years after Hurricane Ike brought more than 10 feet of flood water into The Strand, most of the storefronts are again full with businesses that cater mainly to tourists. It remains the center of activity during the city's Mardi Gras celebrations and is the home of popular annual events like Dickens on The Strand and the Lone Star Biker Rally.

In the years that have passed sinee Ike, entrepreneurs have embraced the opportunity to return to the area.

Joyce McLean, a business-owner and the president of the Historic Downtown Strand Seaport Partnership, a volunteer group that promotes business interests for the city's downtown, said she was determined to return to The Strand after Hurricane Ike.

"I could think of no place else that I'd rather be," McLean said. "To me that it's the center of commerce.

"You can just feel the history of business downtown."

McLean now owns multiple businesses downtown. She says that a new downtown development plan, completed in 2010, calls for additions to downtown, such as more green spaces, that will make the entire area seem more connected in character to The Strand.

The Strand was joined by streets in Milford, Del., Pensacola, Fla., Honolulu, Hawaii, Las Vegas, N.M., Virginia City, Nev., Corning, N.Y., Philadelphia, Jim Thorpe, Penn., and Staunton, Va. Past honorees include New York's Fifth Avenue, Hollywood's Santa Monica Boulevard, and New Orlean's St. Charles Avenue. It is the second Texas street to be honored, after South El Paso Street in El Paso.

COLORADO

Harris County reserve officer dies when motorcycle hits deer

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. — Authorities say a 61-year-old man died after his motorcycle hit a deer near Steamboat Springs.

Steamboat Today reported John G. Hill, a reserve police officer in Harris County was riding on Colorado Highway 131 between Steamboat and Oak Creek when he hit the deer at around noon Saturday.

The Colorado State Patrol said he was pinned under his motorcycle in a watery ditch on the side of the road. Passersby pulled him from the water, but Hill died at a nearby hospital.

Steamboat Springs Police Sgt. Scott Middleton said Hill was an uncle of a Steamboat police officer. He was visiting his nephew, whose wife recently had a baby.

DPD: Pregnant woman killed by robber

Police in Dallas say a pregnant woman was killed by an armed robber now on the loose.

The Dallas Morning News reported that 28-year-old Stephanie Terlisner was shot in the chest around 7 p.m. Saturday night inside a home in the Southeast Oak Cliff neighborhood.

Police have not identified a suspect or released any possible identifying details.

SMU moves toward selling beer in stadium

Southern Methodist University could start selling beer at its sports venues as early as January.

Athletic director Rick Hart told The Dallas Morning News that beer sales could begin during the upcoming basketball season at Moody Coliseum. SMU is also proposing expanding alcohol sales to all of Gerald Ford Stadium for football.

Alcohol is already permitted in football luxury suites.

The newspaper reported that SMU has already obtained state and local permits, but is waiting for signoff from the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Officials at some other universities in Texas have talked about opening alcohol sales in their football stadiums, both to draw in fans and to curb binge drinking before the games.

Officer shot outside downtown shelter

A Lubbock police officer is in stable condition after being shot outside a Salvation Army shelter downtown.

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported Sunday that police got a call about 7:45 p.m. Saturday of an agitated man outside the shelter with a weapon or a cellphone.

Police spokesman Jason Lewis said Sunday that the officer's name is not being released, nor is the name of the suspect, who's also in stable condition.

Salvation Army spokesman Justin Eatherly told the newspaper the suspect wasn't living at the shelter but had been asked to leave Saturday. He said it's Salvation Army policy for police to be contacted in such circumstances.

Eatherly declined to comment on whether the man had a history of mental illness.

AUSTIN

Heavy rain, thunderstorms cause flooding

Flash floods swept through the Austin area Sunday after up to a foot of rain fell in a 12-hour period, closing roads, sparking rescues and canceling the final day of the Austin City Limits Music Festivals. The forecast shows more wet weather in the coming days.

National Weather Service meteorologist Pat McDonald said the Barton Springs subdivision north of Austin received 12.1 inches of rain and downtown Austin received 10.6 inches.

He said there have been numerous water rescues in the area. A mobile home park in the Onion Creek subdivision south of Austin was flooded when water levels rose to more than 28 feet, McDonald said. Numerous roads have been closed in the Austin area as well as in Hays County, west of the city.

Joyce Kathryn Moore

Joyce Moore, 85, of Midland died Friday, October 11, 2013. She laid down for a night's rest in her bed at home but awoke in the loving arms of her Heavenly Father for all eternity. She was born on January 18, 1928, to Carl and Lela Clardy in Loraine, Texas.

Her goal was to lead a life fashioned around her favorite book in the Bible, Philippians, especially verses 4:6,4:7, and 4:13. Joyce led a full life, caring for others and making friends wherever she went. Always ahead of her time, at age 31 and the only female there, Joyce owned and operated an International Harvester dealership in Stanton, TX. After she sold the business, she became a successful real estate associate and broker for 25 years in Midland. After retiring from the business world, she spent many years being active with church and family. Among her many blessings, she counted her friends from Sunday School and bridge playing, and her years of service to Hospice of Midland,

She was preceded in death by her parents, her loving husband of 50 years, Jay Moore, and her daughter, Barbara Moore Wilkinson.

As an only child herself, Joyce was especially proud to be the matriarch of the following list of survivors. CHILDREN - Son, Kevin Moore and his wife, Teri, of Midland; Son, Mike Moore of Midland; Daughter, Carla Moore Russell and her husband, John, of Midland, Son-in-law, Pete Wilkinson, Greenwood, TX. GRANDCHILDREN - Shannon Moore Cochran and her husband, Matt, Austin, TX; Greg Moore and his wife, Erin, Edmond, OK; Mandy Riggan and her husband, Casey, of Midland, TX; Josh Moore, Midland, TX; Michael Moore, Lubbock, TX; Elissa Russell, Austin, TX; Pete Wilkinson, Jr. and his wife Teresa, Madison, MS; Paul Wilkinson and his wife, Samantha, Dallas, TX; Katie Wilkinson Watson and her husband, Benton, Greenwood, TX. DPS says rain may have contributed to deadly crash

Associated Press

BELLMEAD — An elderly woman and her daughter are dead after a vehicle crash in Central Texas.

The Waco Tribune-Herald said that 85-year-old Mary Jordan, of Buffalo, and 61-year-old Virginia Olivarez, of Mexia, were killed when Olivarez's Hyundai collided with an oncoming Ford Taurus. The crash occurred Saturday afternoon on U.S. Highway 84 east of Waco.

Texas Department of Public Safety trooper D.L. Wilson said the Taurus appeared to have veered into the Hyundai's path, possibly because of wet pavement. Much of Central Texas was blanketed by rain Saturday.

The driver and the passenger of the Taurus were both hospitalized.

Wilson said no charges have been filed as of late Saturday.

2 in custody for shooting of 5 at Tulsa event

TULSA — Gunfire that left five people injured at a traditional Hmong New Year's festival rattled a peaceful, tight-knit east Tulsa community, where some feared Sunday the rampage could deter others from attending upcoming cultural celebrations.

"It's really sad because a lot of people do not feel safe to go to the other New Year's celebrations. I know there are people who don't want to attend that anymore," said Joua Xiong, who attended Saturday's celebration along with hundreds of other Hmong people and heard the gunfire break out. "It's very sad because this is the only time we really get to embrace our culture and unite as one."

Hmong are an Asian ethnic group mainly from Laos and number between 3,000 and 4,000 in Tulsa. Many have traveled to Tulsa from across the country during recent years seeking jobs.

Two men have been taken into custody and face multiple charges in the shooting of five people at Saturday's festival, authorities said Sunday. Authorities were holding 21-year-old Boonmlee Lee and 19-year-old Meng Lee, both of Tulsa. Each faces five counts of shooting with intent to kill plus firearms charges.

It was not clear from jail records whether each had an attorney. An arraignment is pending.

MIAMI

Boat capsizes; 30 people rescued

A 45-foot boat capsized Sunday in waters near Miami, tossing 30 people into the sea during one of the city's busiest boating days, authorities said. All of those on board were rescued and no one was hurt.

The catamaran began taking on water near the Miami Sea Aquarium and Good Samaritans, the Coast Guard, state wildlife officials and commercial boats helped pluck people out of the water within minutes. A dog that was on the boat was also saved.

"It was an incredible effort," Coast Guard spokesman Ryan Doss said.

Thousands of boaters were on the water for Columbus Day celebrations.

It wasn't immediately why the boat started taking on water. Doss said he didn't know how many people the boat could hold.

A preliminary investigation indicated the boat was privately owned by someone who may have been charging people to taxi them to a party on Nixon Beach, Florida Fish and Wildlife spokesman Jorge Pino said. The agency is investigating what caused the boat to capsize.

The catamaran is still partially submerged in 6 to 8 feet of water.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Ranchers reeling from cattle losses

SIOUX FALLS — Western South Dakota ranchers are reeling from the loss of tens of thousands of cattle in last weekend's blizzard, and many will dispose of carcasses in pits set to open Monday.

Rancher Heath Ferguson said the storm killed 96 percent of his herd of 100 black Angus and Limousin cattle, a hit worth about $250,000. He said total losses topped more than 1,000 head, as six other herds were roaming the family's 16,000 acres east of Sturgis.

Up to 4 feet of snow fell in the Black Hills area last weekend. Reports of 20 or more inches of snow were common, and 21½ inches in Rapid City were a record for both a 24-hour period in October and the entire month. At least two deaths were attributed to the storm, and it took a particularly heavy toll on livestock.

Ferguson said the vast majority of ranchers don't have insurance covering storm-related damage.

"It's cost-prohibitive for a producer," he said Sunday in an interview with The Associated Press. "Unless you're a really big operator, you can't afford to pay for the insurance."

Xerox: Access restored for food stamp users

People in Ohio, Michigan and 15 other states found themselves temporarily unable to use their food stamp debit-style cards on Saturday, after a routine test of backup systems by vendor Xerox Corp. resulted in a system failure. Xerox announced late in the evening that access has been restored for users in the 17 states affected by the outage, hours after the first problems were reported.

U.S. Department of Agriculture spokeswoman Courtney Rowe underscored that the outage was not related to the government shutdown.

Earlier Saturday shoppers left carts of groceries behind at a packed Market Basket grocery store in Biddeford, Maine, because they couldn't get their benefits, said shopper Barbara Colman, of Saco, Maine. The manager put up a sign saying the EBT system was not in use. Colman, who receives the benefits, called an 800 telephone line for the program and it said the system was down for maintenance, she said.

Spending is stumbling block to budget deal

By Donna Cassata
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans and Democrats hit an impasse Sunday over spending in their last-ditch struggle to avoid an economy-jarring default in just four days and end a partial government shutdown that's entering its third week.

After inconclusive talks between President Barack Obama and House Republicans, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., took charge in trying to end the crises, although a conversation Sunday afternoon failed to break the stalemate.

"I'm optimistic about the prospects for a positive conclusion to the issues before this country today," Reid said as the Senate wrapped up a rare Sunday session.

The two cagy negotiators are at loggerheads over Democratic demands to undo or change the automatic, across-the-board spending cuts to domestic and defense programs that the GOP see as crucial to reducing the nation's deficit.

McConnell insisted a solution was readily available in the proposal from a bipartisan group of 12 senators, led by Sens. Susan Collins, R-Maine, and Joe Manchin, D-W. Va., that would re-open the government and fund it at current levels for six months while raising the debt limit through Jan. 31.

"It's time for Democrat leaders to take 'yes' for an answer," McConnell said in a statement.

But six Democrats in the group and a spokesman for Collins said that while negotiations continued this weekend, there was no agreement.

The latest snag comes as 350,000 federal workers remain idle, hundreds of thousands more work without pay and an array of government services, from home loan applications to environmental inspections, were on hold on the 13th day of the shutdown.

Many parks and monuments remain closed, drawing a protest at the National World War II Memorial on Sunday that included tea party-backed lawmakers who had unsuccessfully demanded defunding of Obama's 3-year-old health care law in exchange for keeping the government open.

Unnerving to world economies is the prospect of the United States defaulting on its financial obligations on Thursday if Congress fails to raise the borrowing authority above the $16.7 trillion debt limit.

Christine Lagarde, the International Monetary Fund's managing director, spoke fearfully about the disruption and uncertainty, warning of a "risk of tipping, yet again, into recession" after the fitful recovery from 2008. The reaction of world financial markets and the Dow Jones on Monday will influence any congressional talks.

Congress is racing the clock to get a deal done, faced with time-consuming Senate procedures that could slow legislation, likely opposition from tea partyers and certain resistance in the Republican-led House before a bill gets to Obama.

Politically, Republicans are reeling, bearing a substantial amount of the blame for the government shutdown and stalemate.

"We're in a free-fall as Republicans, but Democrats are not far behind," said Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., in warning Democrats about seizing on the GOP's bruised brand as leverage to extract more concessions.

McConnell and Republicans want to continue current spending at $986.7 billion and leave untouched the new round of cuts in January, commonly known as sequester, that would reduce the amount to $967 billion. Democrats want to figure out a way to undo the reductions, plus a long-term extension of the debt limit increase and a short-term spending bill to reopen the government.

"Republicans want to do it with entitlement cuts," said Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y. "Democrats want to do it with a mix of mandatory cuts, some entitlements and revenues. And so how do you overcome that dilemma? We're not going to overcome it in the next day or two."

He suggested keeping the government running through mid-January.

Sen. Dick Durbin, of Illinois, the No. 2 Democrat in the Senate, told reporters the two sides are roughly $70 billion apart, the difference between the $1.058 trillion Senate budget amount and the $988 billion envisioned by House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis.

"We haven't picked a number, but clearly we need to negotiate between those two," Durbin said.

Republicans dismiss the latest request as Reid moving the goalposts in negotiations as they were getting closer to resolving the stalemate that has paralyzed Washington. They also argue that it is disingenuous for Democrats to resist any changes in the 3-year-old health care law while trying to undo the 2011 budget law that put the cuts on track.

"I think the Democrats are on the verge of being one tick too cute as they see the House possibly in disarray — they now are overreaching, and I think that what we've got to do is get this back in the middle of the road, act like adults," said Sen. Bob Corker, R-Tenn.

Graham and Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., said they would not support any deal that upends the spending limits imposed by the 2011 law, and predicted that their Senate GOP colleagues would oppose it, as well.

Out of play, for now, was the Republican-led House, where Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, told GOP lawmakers early Saturday that his talks with the president had ground to a halt. Obama telephoned House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi on Sunday, focusing on the need for any increase in the debt limit without concessions.

Also sidelined, at least for now, was the plan forged by Collins and a bipartisan coalition to briefly fund the government and extend the $16.7 trillion debt limit, in exchange for steps like temporarily delaying the medical device tax that helps fund the health care law.

TODAY IN MIDLAND

This date in Midland history

On Oct. 14, 1987, a 58-hour drama began in Midland as 18-month-old Jessica McClure slid 22 feet down an abandoned well at a private day care center; she was rescued on Oct. 16.

Today is Columbus Day

A U.S. national holiday since 1937, Columbus Day commemorates the arrival of Christopher Columbus in the New World on Oct. 12, 1492.

In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed Columbus Day a national holiday, largely as a result of intense lobbying by the Knights of Columbus, an influential Catholic fraternal benefits organization. Originally observed every Oct. 12, in 1971 it was fixed to the second Monday in October.

Today in history

Today is Monday, Oct. 14, the 287th day of 2013. There are 78 days left in the year. This is the Columbus Day observance in the United States, as well as Thanksgiving Day in Canada.

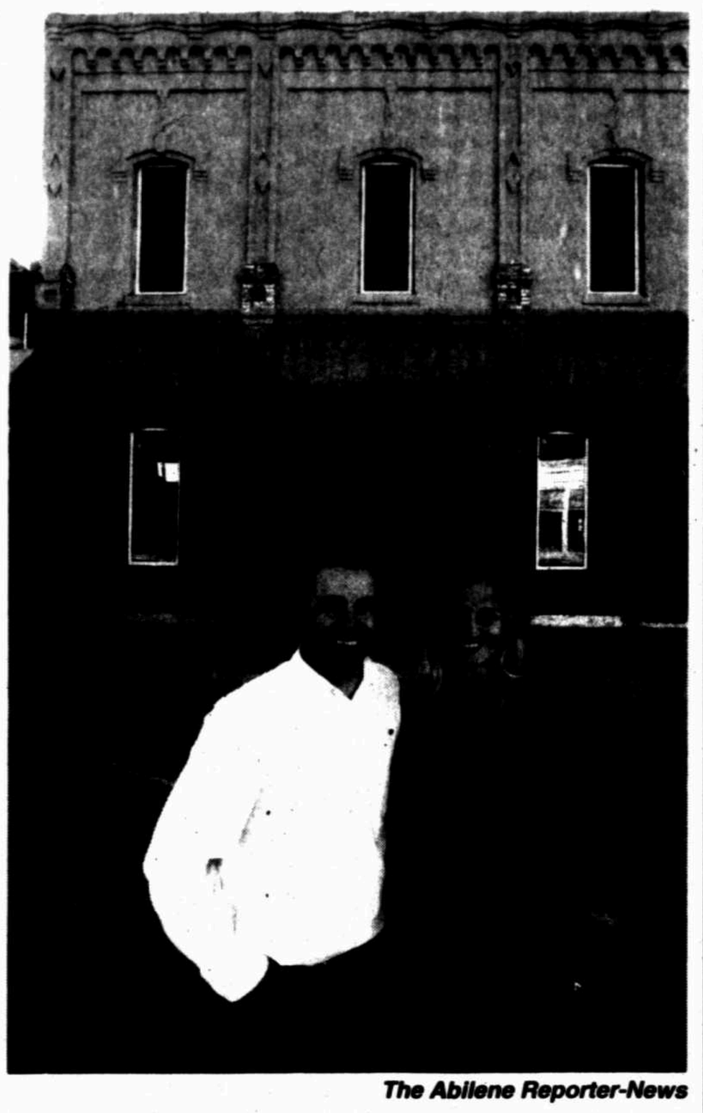

Today's highlight:

On Oct. 14, 1912, former President Theodore Roosevelt, campaigning for the White House as the Progressive candidate, was shot in in Milwaukee by John Schrank. Roosevelt went ahead with a scheduled speech, declaring, "It takes more than one bullet to kill a bull moose."

West Texas attorney, wife revive town's heritage

By Ronald W. Erdrich
Abilene Reporter-News

The Abilene Reporter-News

Ty and Amie Wood pose for a photo in front of a livery stable built by buffalo hunter J.Wright Mooar that they are restoring in Colorado City on Oct. 7.

COLORADO CITY — There are two schools of thought when it comes to guessing the original second-floor occupants of an old West Texas livery stable.

"It depends on what company you happen to be in," said Ty Wood, clearing his throat and then chuckling. "It was either a boardinghouse or a brothel."

Made of mud bricks from the Colorado River, this wasn't just any old barn. Built by buffalo hunter J. Wright Mooar in 1884, Ty and his wife Amie have owned it and a slightly newer building next door at 249 Walnut St. for about seven years. Before their purchase, the building's last incarnation was as a hardware store where Amie started her first job as a clerk when she was 15.

Sometime later, it was also where Ty proposed to her. Standing on a creaky wooden staircase, he said when he knelt down to pop the question, a flock of pigeons burst into the air.

"I told Amie, 'Well, they're not doves, but at least you know what you're getting into,'" he recalled with a laugh.

Before tackling the restoration of the old livery stable, however, they took on the newer building. Built in the early 1900s, it now hosts a home health care business and his law office.

Starting any restoration project is a challenge but the older a building, the bigger the task can be.

"This was our first project together, we spent two-and-a-half years, evenings and weekends, down here carpentering," Ty told the Abilene Reporter-News. "For better or worse, we did every bit of the carpentry work in here."

Replacing sections of the stamped tin ceiling made for delicate work but not because of the frailty of the surviving original pieces.

"The old pieces are strong. You can almost walk on them without bending them. But the new ones, you drop them and they're just ruined," Ty said, adding they were the thickness of a soda can. "Really hard to work with, we're glad we didn't have to buy too many."

The walls needed work, too. Textured with swirls and slight depressions, the original plan was to replace them with something smoother. But digging into them turned into a lesson on construction practices in the Old West.

"When we started chipping on everything, big old clumps of horse hair, tails and manes, started falling out," Ty said. "This stuff was horsehair stucco. They used that for tensile strength, like you'd use fiberglass now."

These days, the two are putting their efforts to bringing the old stable into modern use. Amie, who majored in anthropology at Texas Tech, used to hold archaeology camps when she was the director of the city's Heart of West Texas Museum. Peeling back the layers of wood, glass and stucco that covered the livery stable was a sedimentary trip through all the different styles of what people thought a building should look like during the 20th century.

A good example was the roof. As the old one was stripped away, they learned that nothing went to waste when it came to building materials, especially signs.

"One of the planks was an old billboard that said, 'Saves Lives.' We don't know what saved lives, but I ended up prying that off the roof before they put the new one on," Amie said. "So something saves lives and now we have a piece of that."

They kept a collection of whatever artifact that showed up, like horseshoes or old medicine bottles. Ty pointed out that each original plank nailed in the ceiling or a wall is held in by hand-forged nails.

"No two are alike," he said.

The couple was laughing one day looking over old deeds. In Mooar's time and for some years afterward, Colorado City was booming and land values reflected that.

"Some of those lots that were over here on this side of town would go for $10,000 a lot in 1880," he said. "Now you can buy those for like $500."

That's some serious depreciation even without taking into account inflation. But change is in the wind for Colorado City.

IMMIGRATION

values. An Abbott spokesman has tried to hedge the attorney general's position on the in-state tuition law, saying it is flawed, but won't say how or what should be changed.

"We have not seen Hispanics switching from the Republican Party to the Democratic Party," Abbott said. "This is a one-way street that we're driving on down."

A national Pew Research poll released last week, though, shows that most Hispanics disagree with the party on immigration. About 45 percent of Hispanics said illegal immigration by Hispanics living in the United States has improved the country.

More than 47 percent of people who trace their families to Mexico — who are the majority of Hispanics in Texas — said illegal immigrants have a positive impact. The community disapproves of what they consider a broken immigration system.

As Republicans watch their traditional Anglo base shrink, Republican candidates find themselves in a dilemma over whether to play the long or short game. To win in a 2014 primary, they must take a hard line on illegal immigration, yet to attract converts to their party in the long run, they must adopt a more nuanced position.

Democrats are seizing on the Republican's uncomfortable position. Almost two-thirds of Hispanic voters back Democrats and the party is committed to boosting turnout.

"Texas Republicans Dan Patrick and Jerry Patterson are fighting over which one can discriminate the most against immigrant children," Texas Democratic Party Chairman Gilberto Hinojosa said. "These Republicans like to call our children 'illegals' and deny them educational opportunities, but then somehow expect we'll turn around and vote for them."

On Wednesday, Mexican American Legislative Caucus Chairman Trey Martinez Fischer tried to drive a wedge between Republicans.

"It's time for George P. Bush and would-be Hispanic leaders within the Republican Party to join Gov. Perry and denounce this extremist, anti-immigrant agenda," he said.

Such a denunciation is unlikely, but it is equally unlikely the debate among Republicans will go away anytime soon.

TANKERSLEY

From 1A

suburb of Irving and then attended Oklahoma State University. After a stint as weekend sports anchor in Laredo and then a short stint working in the front offices with the Dallas Stars hockey team, KWES provided an opportunity to make the move to Midland.

"I had gotten married four months before coming out here," Tankersley said.

But the area is one reason, Tankersley, who turns 29 this week, and his wife are making the commitment to the area. They are building a home in west Midland and see themselves in the Permian Basin for years to come.

"It is great to be in a city that is thriving," Tankersley said. "People know where Midland-Odessa us. It is an exciting place to live in right now."

Tankersley represents a new generation of reporters who have basically only known a news business where social media dominates.

"It has allowed us to get more news out there faster and more up-to- date," Tankersley said. "In the next five to 10 years it will only grow."

The dissemination of news is now a 24-hour business, Tankersley said, and the Internet and social media have provided a perfect complement to what viewers see at 5, 6 and 10 p.m. and in the mornings.

And in Midland-Odessa, television news is serious business. The battle for ratings has been competitive through the years and KOSA and KWES top the charts fighting for viewers across West Texas. Tankersley said there isn't any reason to worry about the competition.

"Not everything is built around beating another station," Tankersley said. "We want to get the facts and report the story correctly. We are not trying to just get the story out first but want to get people to trust us."

Defense attorney reveals new details in murder acquittal

By Tyler White
twhite@mrt.com

New details have been released regarding the acquittal of a Midland man who was charged with capital murder in the 2012 death of his 8-month-old son.

A 12-person jury on Wednesday found Izsel DeShawn Thomas, 20, not guilty of the first-degree felony charge.

Thomas' defense attorney, David Rogers, said his client told police and then testified during the trial that he was giving his son, Alston Thomas, a bath on June 4, 2012, when the fire alarm in his apartment was activated by smoke. A sausage that Thomas had been cooking caught a towel on fire, and he rushed into the kitchen to put out the fire, Rogers said.

When Thomas retuned to the bathroom, he found his son unresponsive in the tub. He pulled his son out of the water and attempted to perform CPR, but the child did not respond to the treatment, Rogers said.

An autopsy revealed that the child died as a result of blunt-force trauma to the base of his head and neck.

Thomas had told investigators he was the only adult with his son at the time of the incident. His brother, Daveon Thomas, and a friend arrived at the apartment and called 911, according to court documents.

A neurosurgeon testified that Alston's injuries could have been the result of a short fall, Rogers said.

The doctor said the boy did not have any other injuries to suggest a different cause.

Family members testified that Thomas was an "excellent father," Rogers said.

Social Security raise to be among lowest in years

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the second straight year, millions of Social Security recipients, disabled veterans and federal retirees can expect historically small increases in their benefits come January.

Preliminary figures suggest a benefit increase of roughly 1.5 percent, which would be among the smallest since automatic increases were adopted in 1975, according to an analysis by The Associated Press.

Next year's raise will be small because consumer prices, as measured by the government, haven't gone up much in the past year.

The exact size of the cost-of-living adjustment, or COLA, won't be known until the Labor Department releases the inflation report for September. That was supposed to happen Wednesday, but the report was delayed indefinitely because of the partial government shutdown.

The COLA is usually announced in October to give Social Security and other benefit programs time to adjust January payments. The Social Security Administration has given no indication that raises would be delayed because of the shutdown, but advocates for seniors said the uncertainty was unwelcome.

Social Security benefits have continued during the shutdown.

More than one-fifth of the country is waiting for the news.

Nearly 58 million retirees, disabled workers, spouses and children get Social Security benefits. The average monthly payment is $1,162. A 1.5 percent raise would increase the typical monthly payment by about $17.

The COLA also affects benefits for more than 3 million disabled veterans, about 2.5 million federal retirees and their survivors, and more than 8 million people who get Supplemental Security Income, the disability program for the poor.

Automatic COLAs were adopted so that benefits for people on fixed incomes would keep up with rising prices. Many seniors, however, complain that the COLA sometimes falls short.

David Waugh, of Bethesda, Md., said he can handle one small COLA, but several in a row make it hard to plan for unexpected expenses.

"I'm not one of those folks that's going to fall into poverty, but it is going to make a difference in my standard of living as time goes by," said Waugh, 83, who retired from the United Nations.

FLOODING

From 1A

30 to 40 calls of vehicles stranded in high water, according to a Midland dispatch official.

The northbound lanes of Farm-to-Market Road 1788 were closed between Business 20 and Highway 191 because of a pipeline leak, according to the Texas Department of Transportation.

The Business 20 and Highway 349 underpass, as well as Business 20 frontage road near the Midland County exhibit building, were closed because of flooding, according to TxDOT.

Gene Powell, TxDOT spokesman, said motorists should be cautious of high water at intersections. He said the mantra is to "Turn around. Don't drown."

Midland County was under a flash flood warning until 6:45 p.m. Sunday and a flash flood watch until 9 p.m. Sunday.

WASHINGTON

Cruz, Palin join crowd that pushes through barriers to WWII Memorial

A crowd converged on the World War II Memorial on the National Mall on Sunday, pushing past barriers to protest the memorial's closing under the government shutdown.

Republican Sens. Ted Cruz, of Texas and Mike Lee, of Utah, along with former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, were part of the demonstrators.

Cruz and Lee are among the tea party-backed lawmakers who refused to keep the government operating unless President Barack Obama agreed to defund the nation's health care overhaul.

"Let me ask a simple question," Cruz told the crowd of hundreds that gathered beginning at 9 a.m. "Why is the federal government spending money to erect barricades to keep veterans out of this memorial?"

Black metal barricades have lined the front of the memorial since the government closed Oct. 1. That's when more than 300 National Park Service workers who staff and maintain the National Mall were furloughed.

As the crowd entered the memorial plaza, they chanted "Tear down these walls" and "You work for us." They sang "God bless America" and other songs.

"Our vets have proven that they have not been timid, so we will not be timid in calling out any who would use our military, our vets, as pawns in a political game," Palin told the crowd.

The memorial has become a political symbol in the bitter fight between Democrats and Republicans over who is to blame for the shutdown. Earlier rallies have focused on allowing access for World War II veterans visiting from across the country.

Sunday's rally was more political. A protest by truckers converged with a rally by a group called the Million Vet March at the memorial. Participants cut the plastic links between metal barriers at the National Park Service site and pushed them aside.

Later, some protesters carried metal barricades that look like bicycle racks from the memorial to the White House and stacked them up outside the gates, confronting police in riot gear. Some protesters carried signs reading "Impeach Obama."

Police moved the protesters back to set up barricades between the crowd and the White House gate. Some protesters chanted "shame on you" at the officers.

An armored police vehicle also was sent to the World War II Memorial as people lingered there.

NEW MEXICO

Amber Alert canceled for boys from youth camp

HILLSBORO — An Amber Alert was canceled Sunday for five teenage boys who authorities reported missing from a rural New Mexico ranch for troubled youth along with others before the weekend, officials said.

The boys — ages 13-17 — all were physically accounted for Sunday, New Mexico State Police said in a release Sunday evening. Four other teenage boys who also were part of the group already were found safe, and they with their parents Saturday.

Henry Varela, a spokesman for the State Children, Youth and Families Department, said authorities couldn't consider the boys safe until they saw them.

"The key fact of it all is being able to physically confirm the whereabouts of the kids," he said Saturday.

Meanwhile, attorney Pete Domenici Jr. for the Tierra Blanca High Country Youth Program near Hillsboro maintained through the weekend that all the boys were safely with their parents. He also said authorities had blown the situation out of proportion.

State police executed a search warrant at the 30,000-acre, high-desert compound last week when they discovered the teens weren't there. Authorities are investigating claims of abuse at the ranch.

State police spokesman Sgt. Emmanuel Gutierrez said officers and agents aggressively were searching for the boys.

Domenici said the boys were away on what was supposed to be a two-week camping trip in southeastern Arizona. Each of them was picked up by family members, who were asked to let state police know they had done so, he said.

"I would respectfully disagree that they're in danger, missing or abducted," Domenici said Sunday.

Domenici said efforts by police to verify the whereabouts of the boys likely were complicated by custody proceedings filed by the state.

The search of the ranch came after the Albuquerque Journal reported that authorities were investigating claims that teenage boys were beaten and forced to wear leg shackles and handcuffs for minor violations of rules at the unlicensed program.

The operators of the ranch, Scott and Collette Chandler, deny any children have been harmed and filed a lawsuit this week accusing investigators of targeting the ranch for closure following a fatal car crash involving students.

Dying Ohio man on gurney leads daughter down aisle

A terminally ill Ohio man who arrived at his daughter's wedding by ambulance gave her away, from a hospital gurney.

Guests cried and clapped as Scott Nagy took part in daughter Sarah's wedding Saturday at First Evangelical Lutheran Church in Strongsville, The Plain Dealer of Cleveland reported.

A volunteer team of medical professionals helped Nagy escort the 24-year-old bride as groom Angelo Salvatore and the Rev. Chuck Knerem awaited their arrival.

"It was a promise I made in March, to walk her down the aisle," said the 56-year-old Brunswick man. "She's my princess. This is my definition of walking down the aisle."

Nagy was diagnosed last year with urethral cancer and has undergone chemotherapy. He has been at University Hospitals Seidman Cancer Center since August.

Why Remove Chlorine from Your Water?

According to the U.S. Council of Environmental Quality, "Cancer risk among people using chlorinated water is as much as 93% higher than among those whose water does not contain chlorine."

"Up to two-thirds of the harmful effects of chlorine are due to inhalation and skin absorption while showering." - The American Journal Of Public Health.

When chlorine is added to our water, it combines with other natural compounds to form trihalomethanes (chlorination byproducts), or THMs. These chlorine byproducts trigger the production of free radicals in the body, causing cell damage, and are highly carcinogenic. Chlorine is also suspected of contributing to hardening of the arteries, the primary cause of heart disease.

As Seen On Dr. Oz

Chlorine damages your skin and hair by killing cells and attacking the oils that retain moisture.

Chlorine-free showers and baths will leave your skin softer and more hydrated.

Your hair will be silky smooth and hair color will last longer.

Today's politicians won't deal with climate change

■ The conflict over the science really doesn't matter

MICHAEL GERSON
Washington Post Writers Group

The fifth report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) has provided undeniable proof of a remarkable phenomenon: a public debate even more bitter and polarized than the budget showdown.

The intersection of science and policy, of climate and politics, has become a bloody crossroads. Blog-based arguments over ocean temperatures and the thickness of the Greenland ice sheet are as shrill and personal as any tea-party primary challenge. And the IPCC report — designed to describe areas of scientific consensus — has become an occasion for polarization.

Environmental advocates have done their side no favors. The most eager have been caught in a sleight of hand. In the past, they have used relatively brief periods of warming and short-term weather patterns to bolster their arguments about climate disruption — a tactic that has come back to bite them in the El Nino. Recent warming has been slower than the long-term trend — what has been called a "pause" or "hiatus." Time scales that environmental advocates once touted as significant are now dismissed as irrelevant. Skeptics have cried gotcha.

In fact, the 15-year warming hiatus is both misleading and pretty much irrelevant. Short-term trends can be exaggerated by the choice of a statistical starting point. The year 1998 was particularly hot. A graph beginning in 2000, for example, would yield a different slope. And the occasional flattening of temperature rises is exactly what you'd expect in climate science, which assumes bumps upward and downward along a generally rising curve. The theory allows for natural variability in a complex system while asserting long-term, upward pressure on temperatures.

However the IPCC report is used or abused, it represents a consensus and not a conspiracy. "Each of the last three decades," it concludes, "has been successively warmer at the Earth's surface than any preceding decade since 1850." The oceans have warmed and grown more acidic. Ice sheets are losing mass. Sea ice and snow cover in the Northern Hemisphere are shrinking. Ocean levels are rising. (Compared to its report six years ago, the IPCC has raised its projection of sea-level rise during this century by about 40 percent.) All these things are plausibly related to increased atmospheric concentrations of greenhouse gases produced in vast amounts by humans. And these trends involve serious public risks.

The report is filled with admissions of uncertainty, which are sometimes seized on as vulnerabilities. Uncertainty is, in fact, essential to the scientific enterprise, which is designed for self-correction. The evidence for human-caused climate disruption is increasingly clear. The magnitude of future disruption is a matter of scientific debate. But when the stakes are high, uncertainty is not a good justification for complacency. Which explains the existence of the insurance industry.

The main problem in dealing with climate change is not scientific uncertainty. It is the inability of political systems to deal with a certain type of risk and reward.

First, in this case, the geographic distribution of risk is unequal. Southern England might eventually have the growing seasons of France. Parts of Africa might see advancing deserts and increasing drought. And while New York City and Bangladesh might both be vulnerable to rising sea levels, only one will have the resources and infrastructure to adapt to change. Urgency will vary by region.

Second, the temporal distribution of rewards is unfavorable. Resources expended today will only get limited results well into the future. Because the cumulative production of carbon is the problem, many of the changes we are seeing are essentially irrevocable. "Most aspects of climate change," says the IPCC report, "will persist for many centuries even if emissions of CO_2 are stopped."

This does not mean that restricting greenhouse gas emissions is useless, just that it is politically thankless. Inaction may have terrible results. Even vigorous action, however, would only start limiting the terrible results at some point in the middle of the century. And it would never undo them. We could leave most of the vast reserves of fossil fuels in the ground — a political and economic impossibility — and still the ice would melt and the sea would rise. It is no wonder that politicians — even politicians who believe in warming — tend to have other priorities.

This leads to a fully justified form of skepticism, not about a scientific consensus but about the ability of political institutions — incapable of dealing with current crises or predictable fiscal challenges — to respond prudently to scientific risk when there is little political reward.

EDITOR'S VIEW

Providing you with best newspaper will always be our goal

Today, I am proud to say, is the third anniversary of my appointment as editor of the Reporter-Telegram. It is an honor to work with my associates at the Reporter-Telegram. As far as the Editorial Department is concerned, our roster is as good as I have seen it in my 18 years in Midland. And it has been a pleasure to serve our readers.

We are a community newspaper. Make no mistake about it. And in my three years in charge of the Reporter-Telegram's editorial content, the primary goal has been to bring you the information you require, primarily the news taking place in Midland.

We will strive to get better, but thanks to the leadership provided by Managing Editor Mary Dearen, Assistant Managing Editors Megan Buck and Trevor Hawes, Photo Editor Tim Fischer, Sports Editor Len Hayward, Online Editor James Cannon and Oil Editor Mella McEwen, the product delivered to your physical and digital doorsteps is more in tune with what you have told us you expect.

We have changed in the last three years. Anyone who has seen our new sections (West Texas Living midweek and Sunday, The Weekender, Faith & Philanthropy, Education, Names and Faces, College Football on Saturdays) knows what exactly I am talking about. And we will continue to adapt to a new time in our city's history.

Looking ahead, the Reporter-Telegram will remain true to the words of our first editor, T. Paul Barron. He said:

"Editorially, The Reporter-Telegram will stand for progress at times. It will sponsor any worthy cause in Midland and its territory and will come out in the open and champion development of resources in this section of West Texas. It will attempt to keep pace with Midland's growth and will go beyond that and attempt to be a leader for bigger and better things."

Even after 84 years, some things never change. In future editions, I will use this space to offer more comments about the Reporter-Telegram's place in Midland. For now, though, please know that I am excited about the progress happening in our community and at this newspaper. We are not down about the future of the newspaper business. In fact, the future hasn't been brighter in a long, long time.

Here's to three years as your editor and to a future of giving our readers a newspaper and online product they deserve.

Dems overpromise on immigration

■ There are minorities willing to listen to Republicans

ESTHER CEPEDA
Washington Post Writers Group

It has been only seven months since Republicans put out a manifesto calling on the party to adjust its tone with ethnic minority voters. So far, there's been little progress to show for it. But I wouldn't count the GOP out yet.

Sure, Republicans have done a poor job of keeping the loonier elements from dragging their good names through the gutter — outrageous claims about drug-smuggling DREAM Act-eligible immigrants spring to mind.

And the gulf between mainstream Republican thinking and that of Hispanics keeps getting wider on the most sensitive issue — immigration.

As the economy slowly rebounds, Hispanics, nearly a third of whom believed as recently as 2010 that illegal immigration had a negative effect on U.S. Latinos, now feel less animosity on the issue, according to the Pew Research Hispanic Trends Project. Recent figures show that 45 percent of Hispanic adults say the impact of unauthorized immigration on Hispanics already living in the U.S. is positive, up 16 percentage points from 2010.

Then there are the much-publicized numbers about Hispanics' party perceptions. The Public Religion Research Institute's 2013 Hispanic Values survey says that only 12 percent of Hispanics believe the phrase "cares about people like you" better describes the Republican Party, while 43 percent say it better describes the Democrats.

But never underestimate the power of disappointment, disillusionment and disgust.

In Chicago, the Moratorium on Deportations Campaign (MDC), a coalition of grass-roots community organizers, has turned on immigrants' de facto national representatives — the large, Democrat-backed advocacy organizations that get most of the money and all the attention in the debate — claiming they are misrepresenting the current consensus on reform measures to the very people who will be most impacted by any changes in the law.

Calling the mainstream immigration reform movement a "scam" wrapping itself in buzzwords such as "dignity," "respect" and "keeping families together," the MDC says Democrats' efforts on immigration amount to a "giant PR campaign, a way to make false promises to immigrants, while pushing legislation benefiting corporate interests that need cheap labor, disposable people and a steady supply of prisoners."

Jose Herrera, a Chicago-based organizer with the MDC, told me that people he talks to in the community are sick of being lied to by Democrats and their empty promises on immigration — a concern I've heard from other immigrant advocacy organizations across the country. He says that small activist groups have a "newly cautious and critical perspective on who our allies are and (our allegiances) will rest with those who will be willing to tell the truth."

Republicans may not be as warm and fuzzy as Democrats, but at least they aren't cynically using an issue dear to Hispanics' hearts as a battering ram to undermine their political opponents.

President Obama keeps blaming the big bad Republicans for not bringing about immigration reform. But as the symbolic 2 millionth unauthorized immigrant is deported by the Obama administration, you have to wonder whether the party that keeps overpromising and under-delivering on its No. 1 campaign pledge to Latinos is really any better than a party that is as honest about their stance on immigration as they are about their desire to court Hispanics who will actually vote.

Tally those Hispanic voters who will think twice about casting ballots for Democrats should immigration reform fail and add them to the 15 percent of Hispanic Values survey respondents who said they identify as Republican and the 24 percent who consider themselves politically independent. It starts looking like there's still fertile Hispanic ground for Republicans.

Democrats need to stop their premature dance on the GOP's grave.

On the very day that the Democratic National Committee sent out a gleeful e-blast about the supposedly "stalled" state of Republican outreach to Latinos — "Majorities of Hispanics side with Democrats on issues like government spending and healthcare, which are ranked as their most important political concerns" — the Republican National Committee was announcing Hispanic field and state directors in California, Florida, New Jersey, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Texas and Virginia.

The RNC ought to think about putting a Hispanic outreach director in President Obama's backyard — I think he or she might find many willing listeners.

Son of Sam loophole may help killer get kids' cash

By Frank Eltman
Associated Press

MINEOLA, N.Y. — It's the hallmark of New York's Son of Sam law and others like it across the nation — convicted criminals should not be able to profit from their crimes.

But legal experts said the case of a Long Island mother who drowned her three children in a bathtub and is now seeking to cash in could succeed because of a loophole. Since Leatrice Brewer was never convicted — instead found not guilty by reason of mental disease — legal experts say she could make a plausible case to receive some of her children's $350,000 estate.

"The Brewer case is a novel circumstance," said George Washington University law professor Jonathan Turley. "The facts do seem to place her outside the scope of the law, although that does not mean there could not be other barriers to her recovering from the estate of her children."

Brewer, 33, slashed her daughter's throat before drowning her and two younger brothers in 2008, believing she was saving them from the deadly effects of voodoo. Hours after the killings, she survived two suicide attempts — swallowing a concoction of home cleaning fluids and later jumping out a second-story window.

She was found not guilty because of mental disease or defect in the deaths of the children, ages 1, 5 and 6, and was committed to a state psychiatric hospital.

A hearing before Nassau County Surrogate Court Judge Edward McCarty next month will determine if Brewer is entitled to a share of the proceeds from two lawsuits the children's fathers settled with the county; they claimed social workers failed to properly monitor the woman and children.

Caseworkers visited Brewer's apartment two days before the killings and found no one home but neglected to schedule an immediate follow-up visit. Two social workers were later suspended.

"As a human being, I am utraged and disgusted by this," said attorney Thomas Foley, who represents the father of the two slain boys. "As an attorney, I have some level of understanding of why we have to go through this charade, but it is difficult to forget we are here because of the actions of a crazy person who killed her kids."

Kenneth Weinstein, a court-appointed attorney representing any possible unknown heirs who may surface, was just as blunt: "It would stand the law on its ear if she were to receive any proceeds from her own heinous, felonious conduct."

New York was the first state to enact a Son of Sam law in the 1970s following the capture of notorious serial killer David Berkowitz. Its intent was to bar Berkowitz and other criminals from profiting from their crimes through the commercial exploitation of their stories.

This combination of file photos provided by the Nassau County Police Department shows Leatrice Brewer in 2003, and two of her children, Jewell Ward, and Michael Demesyeux, right. Legal experts said the case of Brewer, who drowned her three children in a bathtub and is now seeking to cash in, could succeed because of a loophole.

The U.S. Supreme Court struck down the law in 1991 for violating the First Amendment's guarantee of free expression, ruling it would have encompassed works including Henry David Thoreau's "Civil Disobedience" and "The Autobiography of Malcolm X."

New York revised its law in 1992, and the state Senate has passed legislation seven times since 2006 — most recently in July, albeit with little fanfare — to try to address the issue of people held not responsible because of mental disease, said the bill's sponsor, Sen. John Flanagan. Companion legislation has been proposed in the state Assembly but has yet to gain any traction. Assemblyman Charles Lavine said he was optimistic the notoriety of the Brewer case could spark passage.

More than 40 states have enacted similar Son of Sam legislation, though there have been several successful court challenges on First Amendment grounds as well, said David L. Hudson, a scholar with the First Amendment Center in Nashville, Tenn.

Andy Kahan, a victim's rights advocate for the Houston Police Department and a national expert on Son of Sam and related laws, said he knows of no other efforts to close existing loopholes in other states.

"Perhaps as a result of this case, others will go back and look at and consider revising their Son of Sam laws," he said.

Although legal experts agree the case would establish a precedent if Brewer succeeds, she's not expected to see any money because of a $1.2 million lien against her for psychiatric counseling and other services she has received since her arrest. Her court-appointed attorney did not return a telephone call seeking comment.

Maebell Mickens, Brewer's grandmother, disputed that the woman's motivation is money, though she did not offer an alternative explanation.

"She ain't never wanted no money," Mickens told The Associated Press in a brief telephone interview.

Samsung's new tablet, the Galaxy Note 10.1 2014 Edition, is demonstrated, Wednesday in New York. The tablet goes on sale in the U.S. on Thursday at a starting price of $550.

PEN WINDOW

Samsung tablet offers PC-like multitasking

By Anick Jesdanun
Associated Press

■ REVIEW

NEW YORK — Remember when people used personal computers — desktops and laptops — to check email, view video and keep tabs on Facebook? Back in that far-away era, I'd have several windows open for Web browsers, a word processor, a photo editor and sometimes a reader for PDF documents.

I miss that capability on mobile devices, particularly on full-size tablets with a decent amount of display space. With iPads and Android tablets, I'm typically limited to one window displayed at a time; other apps run in the background, out of sight. With Windows 8 tablets, I can run two windows side by side, but I'm constrained in what I can do with them. It gets better with the Windows 8.1 update due out this week, but it's still not the free-for-all I had with PCs.

So I marveled at a pair of multitasking features that come with Samsung's new tablet, formally called Galaxy Note 10.1 — 2014 Edition. Sporting a 10.1-inch display, measured diagonally, the Note tablet goes on sale in the U.S. on Thursday at a starting price of $550.

The first of the multitasking features, called Multi-Window, has been available in Samsung devices for about a year, but it works with many more apps now. You can run two apps side by side, such as Facebook on one side and YouTube video on the other.

Like Windows 8 tablets, you're limited to just two apps. You can change how much of the screen each one takes, a capability coming with Windows 8.1, but you can't choose to have a window take up just the top left corner, the way you can on PCs. In addition, Multi-Window isn't a universal feature. Apps for Netflix and Hulu won't work, for instance. You currently have about 18 apps to choose from, including Facebook and a variety of Google and Samsung apps.

With that limitation, it's nice that Samsung Electronics Co. is supplementing Multi-Window with a feature called Pen Window.

With it, simply draw a box on the screen with the included stylus, and choose one of seven apps to open in a new window. Do it again and again until you open all seven apps, if you wish. That's nine in all, counting the two with Multi-Window. Each Pen Window app appears in a window that floats over your main app (or two apps if you use Multi-Window). You can move that window around on your screen and resize it, just as you can on PCs. Need a break from it? Just minimize it into a small dot and move it out of the way.

Like Multi-Window, you're restricted in what apps you can use with Pen Window, though I expect more to get added over time. For now, Pen Window on the tablet works with YouTube, the calculator, the alarm clock, your contacts list, the Web browser and two chat apps — Samsung's ChatOn and Google's Hangouts. I like the fact that you can open all of them and keep them out of the way in a minimized state. That way, it's just one click when you need the calculator and one click when you're done.

The iPad doesn't do that. Amazon's Kindle Fire doesn't do that. Other Android tablets don't do that. Windows 8.1 won't do that — at least not in the tablet-style viewing mode that Microsoft prefers you stick with. You'll have to go to the classic, desktop mode to resize windows, which defeats the purpose of having Windows 8 or 8.1. Windows 8.1 will go further than Multi-Window in letting you run up to four apps side by side, but that works only on larger screens, not portable tablets.

Beyond multitasking, the new Note tablet offers a My Magazine mode giving you personalized highlights, such as news topics of interest, content from your social media feeds and suggestions on things to do and see, based on your current location. It's a good concept, though Facebook isn't available through it yet.

The new tablet also gives you quick access to the tools you can accomplish with its stylus. Pen Window is one. Another feature lets you add notes to a screenshot of what you see. Another lets you clip a section of a Web page and store it with a Web link.

Unfortunately, not everything worked. Text recognition was poor. I'm supposed to be able to jot down an email address or a phone number with the stylus and have that handwriting converted into a contacts entry. But the device constantly confuses the letters "o" and "l" with the numerals "0" and "1."

Pen Window also is more difficult than necessary to set up. You need to take out the stylus for an Air Command tool to appear on the screen. You choose Pen Window, then draw a box on your screen with your stylus. Then you choose the app you want to open. Do all of that again to get additional apps, after figuring out how to get Air Command again with your stylus already out. It would have been simpler to have a button on the home screen that you can tap with your finger or stylus.

In addition, Samsung could have done more with the apps in minimized state. Google's chat app is reduced to a circular icon. It could have flashed or changed colors to notify me of a new chat message, rather than make me open and close it regularly to check.

The tablet's back is still made of plastic, but it feels like leather — an improvement over previous Samsung devices. The tablet does feel heavy, at 1.2 pounds, but that's still lighter than the 1.4 pounds for the full-size iPad. If you want light, wait until early November for the large-size version of Amazon's Kindle Fire HDX. It weighs just 0.83 pound.

Samsung's tablet is also pricey — the $550 starting price tops the iPad's $499 and the Fire's $379. Of course, neither the iPad nor the Fire includes a stylus.

One more complaint: Although the tablet uses the latest version of Android, 4.3, it doesn't offer that system's feature of letting multiple people share a device with separate profiles.

With the Note, it's clear some of the functionality we've long associated with PCs is coming to devices we're just getting to know. There's more to be done, including support for multiple users, but I'm glad Samsung is leading us in that direction.

Galxy Note tablet

The Galaxy Note 10.1 — 2014 Edition is the second version of Samsung's 10.1-inch stylus-based tablet. The base model with 16 gigabytes costs $550, while a 32-gigabyte version costs $600. Versions with cellular access are available only abroad. The Wi-Fi-only models in the U.S. won't work with Samsung's new Galaxy Gear computerized watch.

HOW THEY COMPARE

The Associated Press

The Galaxy Note 10.1 — 2014 Edition is the second version of Samsung's 10.1-inch stylus-based tablet. Here's how it compares with the iPad and other tablets of similar size.

SAMSUNG ELECTRONICS CO.'S GALAXY NOTE 10.1 — 2014 EDITION (SHIPPING NOV. 10, 2013):
- Price: $550 with 16 gigabytes of storage, $600 with 32 GB. Comes with pen.
- Screen size: 10.1 inches diagonally
- Screen resolution: 2560 by 1600 pixels (299 pixels per inch)
- Size: height: 9.57 inches; width: 6.75 inches; thickness: 0.31 inch (243.1 by 171.4 by 7.9 millimeters)
- Weight: 19.75 ounces, or 1.23 pounds (560 grams)
- Cameras: 8 megapixel front camera, 2 megapixel rear camera
- Battery life: Unspecified.
- Operating system: Google's Android

Pros: Comes with pen for writing notes, other tasks on the screen. Access to a variety of games, utilities and other software for Android devices, though not as extensive as apps available for iPad.

Cons: No current plans to bring cellular version to U.S., so it won't be compatible with Galaxy Gear computerized smartwatch. More expensive than iPad and many Android tablets.

APPLE INC.'S IPAD, FOURTH-GENERATION (RELEASED NOV. 2, 2012):
- Price: $499 with 16 gigabytes of storage, $599 with 32 GB, $699 with 64 GB and $799 with 128 GB. Add $130 for versions with 4G LTE cellular capability.
- Screen size: 9.7 inches diagonally
- Screen resolution: 2048 by 1536 pixels (264 pixels per inch)
- Size: height: 9.50 inches; width: 7.31 inches; thickness: 0.37 inch (241.2 by 185.7 by 9.4 millimeters)
- Weight: 1.44 pounds (652 grams) for base model, 1.46 pounds (662 grams) for cellular version
- Cameras: 5-megapixel camera on back and a low-resolution camera on front, for videoconferencing
- Battery life: 10 hours.
- Operating system: Apple's iOS

Pros: Unmatched access to third-party applications, high-quality Apple software and the iTunes store.

Cons: More expensive than many Android tablets.

- Weight: 2 pounds.
- Cameras: Front and back cameras
- Battery life: Unspecified.
- Operating system: Microsoft's Windows.

Pros: Compatibility with programs available for traditional Windows computers. Attaches to keyboard covers, which are sold separately. Comes with USB and other ports for expandability.

Cons: No built-in option for wireless broadband. Pricey.

HP's $279 Chromebook good as secondary computer

By Anick Jesdanun
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hewlett-Packard's new Chromebook 11 is a laptop at heart, but it's light and portable enough to work well in places where you'd normally prefer a tablet.

I'm thinking cramped buses and airplanes, the waiting area of a doctor's office or even the cushiony couch in your living room. The Chromebook is small enough to rest comfortably on your lap and easy to carry when you need to pick up and go.

The drawback is it relies heavily on the Internet to run various services, so you'll need to plan ahead if you're looking to write that great masterpiece without access to Wi-Fi. That's because the Chromebook doesn't run Windows or Mac OS, like the majority of laptops. Rather, it uses Google's Chrome OS system, which needs a steady Internet connection.

Although it's possible to use apps while offline, Chromebooks are really designed for online use. Many apps don't work fully — or at all — without the Internet connection, or they need to be configured while you still have the connection to work offline. It's not as simple as installing a program and expecting it to work wherever you are. In addition, Chromebooks have little storage on the devices; Google steers you toward its online storage service, Drive, for your documents, photos, music and movies.

Chromebooks aren't meant for graphic designers who use sophisticated software, such as Adobe's Photoshop, or business executives who rely on Microsoft's PowerPoint slides. These notebooks are for people who primarily use Google's online services, including search, Gmail, Google Docs, Google Maps and Google's players for music and video. That includes schoolchildren who need a computer for homework and merchants who want something small next to a cash register.

As Google reasons, if you're already using many of its services, why not use a device optimized for it? These devices can be fast because they get their sophistication from powerful servers located elsewhere. The Chromebook 11 takes just a few seconds to power up, as Chrome OS doesn't have a lot to load on the device itself.

Chrome OS notebooks are also really cheap: The Chromebook 11 costs just $279.

That price is in line with most other Chromebooks, including a $249 model from Samsung and a $199 model from Acer. But the new Chromebook has many high-end features inspired by a much pricier model, the $1,299 Chromebook Pixel designed and made by Google through contract factories in Asia.

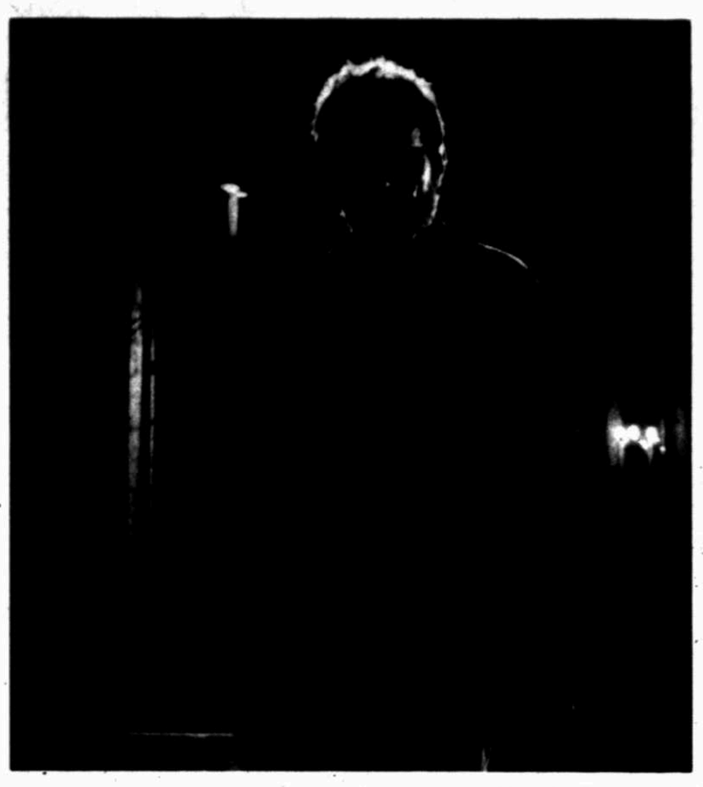

The new Chromebook's speakers are underneath the keyboard, so sound projects out at you. Its outer shell is sleek and smooth. It doesn't have the Pixel's metal exterior, but there's magnesium underneath the plastic to keep the laptop sturdy. The Chromebook 11 has no sharp edges or corners — or even screw holes. There's no fan either, which keeps the device quiet and light — at just 2.3 pounds.

In fact, the Chromebook 11 isn't much heavier than Microsoft's upcoming Surface Pro 2 tablet, which weighs 2 pounds. The Chromebook's 11.6-inch screen, measured diagonally, isn't much larger than the screen of the typical full-size tablet. The new Chromebook even uses the same Micro-USB charger that non-Apple tablets and smartphones use.

The Chromebook 11 could pass for a tablet if it weren't for the fact that it unfolds to reveal a physical keyboard. It also lacks a touch screen. You move the cursor on the screen the traditional way, using the laptop's touchpad.

There's a lot to like with the Chromebook 11.

But just like tablets, Chromebooks aren't ready to replace traditional Windows and Mac computers. Even if most of your life is online, there'll be the occasional program that will run only on a Windows or Mac machine.

How to shut out TV spoilers when you're online

I would really like to talk to you about TV spoilers today, but first I need to know: Did you see the series finale of "Breaking Bad?" Are you caught up on "Game of Thrones?" You know who died on that one amazing episode of "The Wire" toward the end of Season Three, right?

Maybe we shouldn't have that discussion. I don't want to ruin anything for you.

As television has entered into what some call a golden age of deeper dramas and more sophisticated comedies ("2 Broke Girls" notwithstanding), we seem to be taking TV much more seriously. Online, where conversations can escalate over a misplaced comma, spoiling a plot twist such as the death of a major character or what happened in the final episode of a TV series can get you yelled at.

Or typed at. Loudly. With lots of exclamation points. By people who hate spoilers.

It became clear last week that we've entered a new era of spoilerphobia with the final episode of AMC's "Breaking Bad." Viewers who weren't caught up on the show or who had to watch the Sept. 29 finale on a DVR delay had to shield their eyes at news headlines, shush coworkers and unfollow play-by-play TV commentators on Twitter.

"Breaking Bad," an unpredictable epic where almost anything could happen from week to week, turned those who were in the process of binge-watching the series on Netflix into nervous wrecks. It got to be such a problem that Netflix introduced a tool called "Spoiler Foiler," allowing fans to filter out information about the show from their Twitter feeds.

Some believe that discussion of TV online is fair game once a show has aired on the West Coast (accounting for the standard three-hour TV delay from Eastern time). Others believe you should wait at least a day to allow DVR viewers to catch up on shows before giving anything away. The most spoiler-averse believe you shouldn't reveal any major plot points of beloved series, even old ones, since some people are still catching up on "The Sopranos" or "Lost" via DVDs or video-on-demand. And then there are those who live-Tweet TV events as they happen, enraging others.

Watching TV digitally on your own terms is great, but it's also created pressure to keep up with TV plotlines in unrealistic ways. When Netflix released 15 episodes of "Arrested Development" or 13 of its new original series "Orange is the New Black" all in one bunch instead of parceling them out, who's to say when it's appropriate to reveal plot twists online? It's kind of a mess out there.

Emily Gipson and Caitlin McFarland, TV junkies and founders of the annual ATX Television Festival, said that we've gone through two big shifts in TV viewing that may be contributing to the current battleground over spoilers. When DVRs started going mainstream, many viewers stopped watching all but the most important event TV (the Super Bowl, the Oscars) live. But the rise of social media has made many embrace the communal feeling of watching TV with others.

"It's why television viewing in the last year or two has skyrocketed," McFarland said. "The TV community online, it's family, it's your people. You want to watch it live with them."

TV series are complicit in this, she said, pointing to shows like "Scandal," in which cast members Tweet as their show airs. "It's an experience," McFarland said. "It causes you to think about what shows you want to marathon, what you watch in bulk and what you want to watch live. All the control is in the hands of the viewer."

Gipson said she believes many TV geeks are increasingly aware that posting spoilers can ruin a TV show for those still catching up on a series. "I think people are being super respectful of spoilers," she said. She's only into the third season of "Breaking Bad" and has yet to have the ending ruined. "The only thing I've seen is people saying, 'Wow, that was an amazing finale.'"

If the idea of having a shocking TV death or the score from a football game you recorded exposed fills you with fear, there are ways you can stamp out spoilers from your life.

Methods of avoidance:

Method 1: Stay offline until you're caught up on a TV episode. That may seem obvious, but for those whose jobs rely on being online and up to date on what's happening (say, reporters or researchers), that's easier said than done. But for big TV events that you're missing, you can at least stay off Twitter and Facebook while the show is airing and for a few hours afterward. Stay off entertainment or sports websites that may reveal what happened in headlines. Even mainstream news sites often can't resist posting TV info such as results from competitive reality shows, especially if there's a local connection, as when Austinite Paul Qui won "Top Chef" last year.

Method 2: Use technology to fight spoilers, especially on Twitter. The aforementioned "Spoiler Foiler" is still a good tool if you're a "Breaking Bad" binge-watcher, but there are other apps and filters available to scrub information about TV shows of your choosing. "Spoiler Shield," a recently launched free app for iPhone and iPad, promises to clear Facebook and Twitter of spoilery information. Twivo, a browser plug-in, can also eliminate spoilers from Twitter feeds.

Tools including TweetDeck and Twitter apps such as Echofon and TweetCaster allow you to mute hashtags or users.

Method 3: This is the least convenient for those used to watching TV on their own DVR terms: Watch the shows you're most worried about when they air, especially shows with a high body count ("Homeland," "Walking Dead").

Even making a virtual fort for yourself online won't guarantee that spoilers won't intrude on your viewing.

Gipson said that an hour before our interview, the "Breaking Bad" finale was almost spoiled for her when coffee shop customers began discussing it nearby. She said, "I turned and told them, 'Could you not do that here?'"

"They took their conversation outside and said, 'Not everyone will be this kind; you should hurry up.'"

WHAT ARE ALL-IN-ONE COMPUTERS?

(In this space every week, we'll define a tech term, offer a timely tip or answer questions about technology from readers. Email ogallaga@statesman.com)

In the past there were two kinds of mainstream computers: boxy desktops and laptops. Things have gotten more interesting in recent years with tablets, tablet/laptop hybrids and, for desk dwellers, a category called "all-in-one desktops."

Apple's iMac and Dell's XPS 27 are two examples of all-in-ones. They are typically desktop computers that eschew a box for a less cluttered design, incorporating the guts of the computer onto the monitor itself. With the proliferation of wireless keyboards, mice and Internet connectivity, you could have a whole system with only one wire; indeed, the iMac is bundled with only a power cable.

All-in-ones can save desk space and some newer models running Windows 8, like the XPS 27, are available with touch screens. The downside is that all-in-ones often can't be significantly altered on the inside beyond a simple RAM upgrade the way many desktop can. But as processor speeds have plateaued and our needs for hard drive space have changed, that's less of a worry than it used to be.

Twitter tunes in to TV partnerships ahead of IPO

By Barbara Ortutay
Associated Press

NEW YORK — People don't just watch TV anymore; they talk about it on Twitter. From the comfort of couches, they share reactions to touchdowns and nail-biting season finales — and advertisers and networks are taking note.

Examples of Twitter's influence abound. The recent finale of "Breaking Bad" generated a record 1.24 million tweets. The conversation peaked at 22,373 tweets per minute according to analytics firm SocialGuide. People used the hashtag "GoodbyeBreakingBad" nearly 500,000 times. During this year's Super Bowl, sports fans generated 24 million tweets about the competition and nearly half of the game's nationally televised commercials contained hashtags that encouraged viewers to tweet.

Twitter, said Debra Aho Williamson, an analyst at research firm eMarketer, "creates a community, a bond between people that doesn't really exist without Twitter."

As Twitter prepares for its initial public offering, the San Francisco-based company is also working hard to insert itself into the TV advertising economy. In recent months, the social networking company has forged partnerships with television content owners such as CBS, MTV and the NFL through a program it calls Amplify. The platform lets content owners beam real-time video clips to Twitter users who may have seen — or could be interested in — their TV programming. It also allows marketers to communicate with viewers who saw their TV ads, extending commercial pitches to consumers' smartphones and tablets.

TV tie-ins allow Twitter to diversify its revenue stream beyond the relatively small niche of digital advertising campaigns, a move that should appeal to potential investors. On Thursday, Twitter unsealed documents for a Wall Street debut that could take place before Thanksgiving. While the company did not reveal how much money it makes from its TV partnerships, it touted its own "strength as a second screen for television programming."

Twitter wrote in its S-1 filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that "45% of television ads shown during the Super Bowl used a hashtag to invite viewers to engage in conversation about those television ads on Twitter."

Twitter's public nature makes it an especially attractive platform for tracking live-TV conversations. So much so that Nielsen recently began using Twitter's data to measure online social activity around TV programming, starting with this fall's TV season.

Nielsen will release its first "Nielsen Twitter TV Ratings" report today. The study measures TV-related conversations on the social network. Nielsen found that in the second quarter of this year, 19 million people wrote 263 million tweets about live TV events, up 38 percent from a year earlier.

Some 19 million people tweet about TV shows, a 24 percent increase from last year. The audience measurement firm also found that many people read tweets about TV shows while they watch them — even if they don't post anything themselves. As a result, Nielsen says the Twitter TV audience for an average episode is 50 times larger than the number of people who are Tweeting about a show.

Separately, Nielsen found that the "Breaking Bad" finale was by far the most tweeted-about program last week.

Recently, the NFL showed just how Twitter-enabled promotions work. Minutes after Cincinnati cornerback Adam Jones intercepted New England's Tom Brady, ending the quarterback's streak of 52 games with a touchdown pass, the NFL posted a video clip on Twitter. The clip shows Jones bobbling, and then snagging the ball before it hits the ground.

The 32-second clip was prefaced by an 8-second video ad for a Verizon Droid mobile phone. "Adam Jones ends the Pats undefeated season, Brady's TD streak AND a rainstorm. With 1 INT," the league tweeted.

By inserting itself into the online buzz, the NFL was able to remind people the game was going on live at its NFL Network channel. Meanwhile, it earned new revenue from Verizon, a longtime sponsor that wanted to showcase its NFL Mobile app.

The NFL has more than 5.1 million followers on Twitter. But its new partnership with Twitter means the tweet also went out to millions of other users who might be interested.

Hans Schroeder, the NFL's senior vice president of media strategy and development, said he expects promoted tweets will eventually reach tens of millions of fans, multiplying its reach.

"We think it'll drive tune-in to our games and drive more people into the experience through NFL Mobile," Schroeder said.

As part of the deal, Twitter shares some of the revenue from Verizon's advertising spend when the phone company pays for "promoted tweets." Previously, the money might have gone only to the league itself.

Twitter's projected 2013 revenue is about $582 million, according to research firm eMarketer. At the moment, the company generates tens of millions of dollars of revenue from all of its TV deals, including those with ESPN, Turner networks, CBS and others, according to Brian Wieser, an analyst with Pivotal Research Group.

That's not huge. However, says Wieser: "This year, it's about getting the foot in the door."

Wedbush Securities analyst Michael Pachter estimates that Twitter gets just a small fraction of its revenue from the TV deals — around 1 percent. But by next year, the deals could amount to 5 percent, and 15 percent the year after, he says.

Twitter isn't alone in its quest to befriend TV content companies. Facebook, too, is recognizing the value of live TV chatter. Because of its sheer size — nearly 1.2 billion users versus Twitter's 218 million — Facebook has more conversations than any other social network. During the "Breaking Bad" finale, more than 3 million people generated 5.5 million "interactions," that is, status updates, comments or "likes."

For now, Facebook's TV partnerships are not intended to generate revenue, the company said. Rather, they are "focused on helping people discover great content," said Justin Osofsky, Facebook's vice president of media partnerships.

Over the past few months, Facebook has rolled out more Twitter-like features as competition between the world's leading social networks heats up. There are now hashtags on Facebook, and the company is encouraging celebrities to use its site to interact with fans — just as many of them do on Twitter.

iOS 7 can make old phone seem new

By Jim Rossman
The Dallas Morning News (MCT)

Even if you did not buy one of Apple's new iPhone models last month, if you have an iPhone 4 or newer model, you can still feel like you have the newest phone by upgrading your operating system to iOS 7.

And don't forget, the iOS 7 upgrade is available if you have an iPad 2 or newer model or fifth-generation iPod Touch.

The upgrade is free, and it's pretty big. I'd suggest connecting your device to your computer and downloading the upgrade from your home network instead of over the air.

If there was one thing the iPhone had going for it, it was the consistency of the iOS experience.

Now Apple and its master of design, Jony Ive, have unleashed a pretty substantial redesign of the operating system.

The first change you'll notice is that the app icons are now flattened.

The font under the icons has also changed — it's a lighter typeface that some people (me) find harder to read.

To get back the old-style thicker font, go to Settings, then General, then Accessibility and turn on Bold Text.

CONTROL CENTER: For me, the most useful addition to iOS 7 is the Control Center, which gives you quick access to some of the most popular settings.

In iOS 6, if you wanted to turn on Bluetooth or Wi-Fi, you had to unlock the phone and go into Settings.

Now, a simple swipe up from the bottom of the screen, even from the lock screen, brings up one-touch access to settings to turn on or off airplane mode, Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, "do not disturb" mode and the orientation lock.

The Control Center also brings up the brightness slider as well as controls for any music that might be playing.

There are also quick-launch buttons for the flashlight (the LED of the camera flash), clock app, calculator and camera.

Finally, there are controls to invoke AirPlay and AirDrop.

AirDrop is a neat feature that lets you magically transfer any content on your iPhone or iPad to any other iOS 7 device. You touch your AirDrop button, and your device will search for others in range (in the same room), and you can send a photo to the other device.

NOTIFICATION CENTER: Bringing all your daily appointments into view is one feature of the Notification Center, which appears when you swipe downward from the top of the screen.

You'll be met with three tabs; the first is called Today, and it's a scrolling view of the date, current weather and the day's forecast, followed by any calendar events you have scheduled. Below that are any stocks that you follow and a preview of tomorrow's events.

Swipe to the right to see the second tab, called All, which shows the notifications for all your apps.

The third tab is for missed notifications, which doesn't ever seem to have much in it for me.

CAMERA: There are many changes to the camera app — most of them are pretty good, too.

Shooting modes for still, video, panorama and square, which is new, are now available by swiping the screen when the viewfinder is active.

On the bottom right, you'll see an icon of three circles that brings up live filters (think Instagram), which need improving.

While I like some of the filters in Instagram, the ones included in iOS 7 don't look like they do too much. They're boring. Perhaps Apple will add some that I actually want to use.

The Photos app brings up your pictures sorted by event and/or date. Each thumbnail appears in a timeline that is a bit easier to scroll through with a swipe of your finger. As you swipe, the thumbnails magnify under your finger, making it easier to find the picture you want to see.

SAFARI: Changes to the mobile version of the Safari browser include a new consolidated URL/Search bar at the top. Enter a URL or your search terms in the same place.

The URL/Search bar and the navigation bar now automatically hide themselves, which is good when you're reading, but a pain when you want to go back a page and realize you need to touch the very bottom of the screen to bring up the hidden navigation bar.

You get used to it after a while.

Tabs are now shown in a Rolodex view you can flip through. You can select a tab by touching it or close it with the small X in the corner.

ITUNES RADIO: A new feature in iTunes 11.1 on your computer and in iOS 7 is iTunes Radio, which is a lot like Pandora.

You can listen to stations created by Apple or you can create your own from songs or artists you like.

Once you've got music playing, you can tag songs to tell iTunes to play more songs like this one or to never play this song again. It's kind of like Pandora's thumbs-up or -down system, but not as advanced. These personalization choices are only available with stations you create, not with Apple's preset stations, which can't be modified.

Also, iTunes Radio plays way too many repeat songs. It's one thing to hear a song repeat once a week, but I've had the same song from the same artist play in the same 15-minute span — unacceptable.

iTunes Radio isn't an on-demand service, so if you start a Beatles channel, you'll never hear just the Beatles. You might get one or two Beatles songs per hour, or a lot of Beatles cover tunes or even more British invasion music.

You can skip up to six songs per hour per station.

I'm happy iTunes Radio is here and I hope it gets better, but for now, I'm sticking with Pandora.

Rivalry week begins for Lee, Midland High

Rebels take 'huge step' in win against Abilene High

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

The Lee football team faced two things it hadn't seen during the district season — a deficit and heavy pressure from a defense on the Rebels' offense.

But after a wild fourth quarter where Abilene High outscored Lee 19-10, the Rebels found a way to win and remain undefeated in District 2-5A play. It was the type of win the team had to have to stay in the playoff race in the district, but also was a confidence builder for a team that had struggled to close out key games late in the season in previous years.

"This was a huge step for our program," Lee coach James Morton said. "We just kept hanging in there in the second half. It's a big credit to our kids and our leadership overall."

MHS seeks better teamwork after 2 straight blowout losses

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

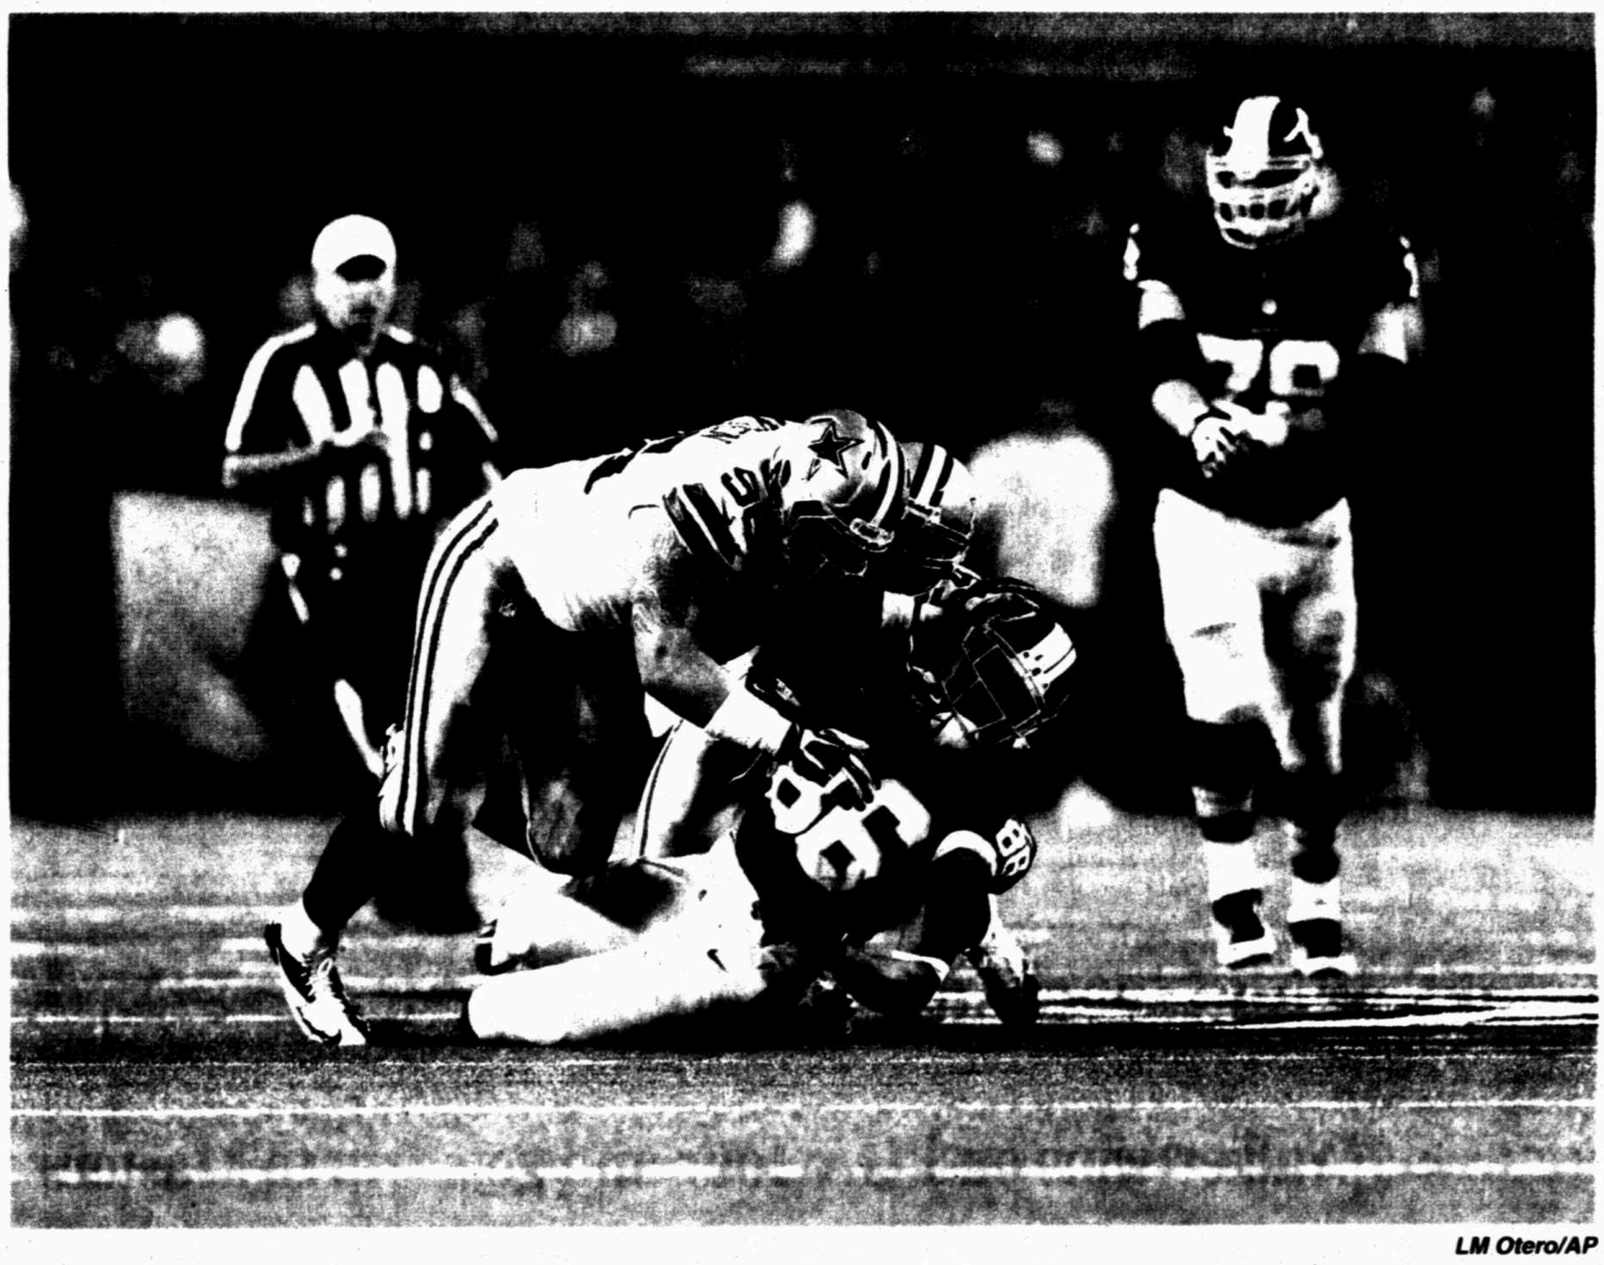

After the first two weeks of the season, it appeared the Midland High football team was headed in the right direction, particularly on offense.

The Bulldogs looked explosive at times with big plays coming in both the running and passing games. But something has happened since that time. While big plays are still occurring, it's not on a consistent basis to say the least.

After a second straight lackluster performance on offense led to a blowout 49-14 loss to Abilene Cooper on Friday, the Bulldogs (3-3, 2-2 in District 2-5A) find themselves heading into their annual matchup with crosstown rival Lee (5-1, 4-0) reeling. MHS coach Craig Yenzer wasn't quite sure what the answer was for the Bulldogs' struggles the last two weeks.

Defense carries Dallas to big divisional win

ARLINGTON — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones celebrated his 71st birthday in winning fashion.

Dwayne Harris returned a punt 86 yards for a touchdown and set up another score with a 90-yard kickoff return, Tony Romo threw a touchdown pass and a rejuvenated defense paved the way for a crucial fourth-quarter TD with a strip sack of Robert Griffin III in the Cowboys' 31-16 win over the Washington Redskins on Sunday night.

In snapping a two-game skid that included last week's gut-wrenching 51-48 loss to the Denver Broncos, the Cowboys (3-3) set up a showdown with the Eagles (3-3) next weekend in Philadelphia for the NFC East lead.

The Redskins, who swept the Cowboys last season, are 1-4.

"We knew this was an important game at our place against a division rival, a dangerous team," Dallas coach Jason Garrett said. "All three phases stepped up. It's exciting when everyone is involved, but we will put this one away quickly and get ready for the Eagles."

The win represented a bounce-back game by Monte Kiffin's defense, which had surrendered a combined 81 points and more than 1,000 yards during the losing streak.

But in limiting Washington to one TD and three field goals, the Cowboys sacked Griffin three times and intercepted him in the fourth quarter when cornerback Orlando Scandrick made an uncontested grab in the end zone.

The biggest defensive play Dallas came about five minutes earlier when end Kyle Wilber took the ball away from Griffin at the Redskins' 3-yard line. Two plays later, rookie tailback Joseph Randle powered his way into the end zone to give Dallas the lead by the final score with 8:49 left.

"We put a lot of work in (last week)," Cowboys linebacker Sean Lee said. "We were disgraced with our performance (against Denver) and we went out tonight and played well.

"We have a lot of guys that have been working behind the scene trying to get better. They came in and made a ton of plays for us. It really was the difference in the game."

Bradford, Rams hand Texans 4th straight loss

HOUSTON — The St. Louis Rams had a simple chant in the locker room after Sunday's 38-13 rout of the Houston Texans.

'2-and-0, 2-and-0,' coach Jeff Fisher said his team repeated.

Sam Bradford threw three touchdown passes, St. Louis added a score on defense and special teams and the Rams stunned the mistake-prone Texans with a 38-13 win on Sunday to win their second straight after dropping their previous three games.

"I think everyone totally bought in," Bradford said of the turnaround. "I think if you look at the way we've played the past two weeks; it's been a completely different mindset, a completely different attitude."

The Rams (3-3) were up 24-6 early in the third quarter before rookie Daren Bates returned Keshawn Martin's fumble on a kickoff return for a touchdown.

Rookie first-round pick Alec Ogletree pushed the lead to 38-6 when he took an interception by T.J. Yates back 98 yards for a touchdown. Yates was in after Schaub sustained an apparent right ankle injury.

Coach Gary Kubiak didn't have many details on Schaub's injury after the game, saying only: "Matt's got a little bit of everything on that one leg."

Schaub didn't have a turnover after throwing six interceptions, three of them returned for touchdowns in the past three games.

But several other Texans had key gaffes as preseason Super Bowl hopeful Houston (2-4) lost its fourth straight game.

Ortiz, Red Sox sting Tigers, tie ALCS at 1

Series tied, 1-1

BOSTON — David Ortiz revived the Red Sox with a tying grand slam in the eighth inning, then Jarrod Saltalamacchia hit a winning single in the ninth as Boston stunned the Detroit Tigers 6-5 Sunday night to even the AL championship series at 1-all.

The Tigers were cruising to their second straight win at Fenway Park, with starter Max Scherzer taking a no-hitter and a 5-0 lead into the sixth inning.

But with one swing, Big Papi flipped everything. Ortiz hit a two-out shot that sent right fielder Torii Hunter jack-knifing into the Boston bullpen in a futile attempt to catch the ball, making it 5-up.

Saltalamacchia's single came after a series of Tigers misplays in the ninth. A wild throw, a wild pitch and a missed catch by first baseman Prince Fielder on a foul ball set up the game-ending hit.

The teams head to Detroit for Game 3 on Tuesday. Justin Verlander will face Boston's John Lackey.

Boston's big comeback followed a dramatic New England Patriots' victory right down the road in which Tom Brady threw the game-winning touchdown pass with 5 seconds left to beat New Orleans. The score was greeted with cheers by Red Sox fans waiting for the baseball game to start.

A day after Anibal Sanchez and the Detroit staff combined on a one-hitter for a 1-0 win, Scherzer excelled. He fanned 13 while allowing two hits in seven innings, and was pulled after 108 pitches.

"It's playoff baseball," Tigers manager Jim Leyland said. "Looked like

2-5A) still have four district games remaining, including a big one against rival Midland High on Friday at Grande Communications Stadium.

And last week, there was plenty of doubt about Lee heading into Friday's game undefeated in district play. But there wasn't much doubt on the Lee sidelines.

The momentum in the game began to change late in the second quarter, when Lee was looking to put a first-half nail in the coffin and decided to onside kick with less than three minutes remaining. Unfortunately, Abilene High recovered it and then marched down the field and scored, turning Lee's two score lead into a one score lead at halftime.

"You know there's a lot of things we would do different in the first half, and I made a bad call on the (onside) kick and put our defense in a short-field situation," Morton said.

Lee, though, recovered to take a 19-point lead in the third quarter, but the Eagles didn't go away. Abilene High outscored Lee 26-9 over the final 15 minutes of the game.

The Eagles found some creases in Lee's defense, but also had begun dialing up more pressure on Lee quarterback Caden Coots. After Lee scored to go up 44-25, the Rebels were held scoreless on three of its next five possessions. Compare that to the first half and early third quarter where Lee scored on five of its seven possessions.

It was the first time this season, quarterback Caden Coots had faced consistent pressure from a defense. But even in the face of that pressure, Coots completed big passes at crunch time, one was the 61-yard screen pass to Alex Bell and back-to-back passes to Kelton Washam and Kaleb Nunez on the final drive to set up the field goal.

Those two passes, and Brady Roper's field goal was enough to give Lee a victory on the standings, but also in their minds that they could win a close and big game.

"They stayed with it," Lee coach James Morton said. "They stayed with everything we talked about and they kept believing."

only to say the Bulldogs aren't acting like a team at the moment.

"I really wish I knew what the answer was, but I just don't know right now," Yenzer said. "Right now, our team needs to come together. We've got factions and different things going on and we need to come together as a team. We've kind of lost our confidence a little bit and I think that's showed."

When Friday's loss is combined with the Bulldogs' 63-21 dismantling at the hands of San Angelo Central the previous week, it's easy to point the finger at the Midland High defense. After all, the team has been outscored 112-35 in that span.

But the Midland High offense has consistently put the defense in compromising situations, thanks to 10 total turnovers in the past two games and numerous drives going three and out.

"I really think our defense has played well at the beginning of both of those games," Yenzer said. "They gave us a chance and executed our game plan at the beginning of both. But the offense isn't doing them any favors. We have a spark and do something good, and right after it we seem to do something that's not very good. There's not much consistency in what we're doing."

Now after playing the top two offenses statistically in District 2-5A, the Bulldogs meet the third-ranked offense in the district. Lee has flourished in its new spread offense, and most recently pulled out a thrilling 53-51 victory against Abilene High that came down to a game-winning FG as time expired.

But despite the back-to-back losses, the Bulldogs remain in the thick of the playoff hunt in District 2-5A, and their fortunes can turn around quickly with a win against Lee on Friday.

That only happens if the Bulldogs show up to Grande Communications Stadium as a complete team, though.

"We're just going to try to fix this thing," Yenzer said. "There's some technical things we need to better, but there's also some team cohesive things we need to take care of. We really need to come together as a team right now. I can't stress that enough."

disappointing performance last week left a bitter taste in our mouth. But everyone came to work with a chip on their shoulder and ready to perform for 60 minutes of hard work and sticking together."

Dallas overcame the losses of running back DeMarco Murray and defensive end DeMarcus Ware to injuries in the first half. Murray (sprained left knee) and Ware (right quadriceps strain) did not play in the second half and their status for Philadelphia is uncertain.

Harris' score gave Dallas a 14-3 lead with 2:26 left in the first half. It was the fifth-longest punt return in franchise history.

After the Redskins pulled within 14-9 on a Kai Forbath's 33-yard field goal, Harris came to the rescue again with his long kickoff return. Two plays later, Romo escaped a blitz to loft the ball into the end zone, where rookie Terrance Williams made an over-the-shoulder grab in the corner with 9:03 left in the third quarter.

"Dwayne did a fantastic job," Garrett said. "Talk about making difference-making plays."

Romo was 18 of 30 for 170 yards with one interception. Last week against Denver, he passed for a club-record 506 yards and four scores, but his fourth-quarter interception allowed the Broncos to kick the winning field goal as time expired.

"When you win, it feels much better," Romo said. "All that matters is the 'W.' "

Griffin finished 19 of 39 for 246 yards with one interception.

It was a far cry from his 311-yard, four-TD effort as a rookie last season in leading the Redskins to a 38-31 win on Thanksgiving Day in Arlington.

The Cowboys are 4-1 when playing on Jones' birthday.

Walker wins on PGA Tour and gets trip to Masters

Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

SAN MARTIN, Calif. — Jimmy Walker's first PGA Tour trophy came with a special gift tucked inside.

A yellow "Masters 2014" flag.

It was a not-so-subtle reminder that the Frys.com Open is no longer a Fall Series event for players to chase their tour cards at the end of the year, but the start of the PGA Tour's new 2013-14 season that comes with all the perks.

And it was a reminder to Walker that he gets to go places where he always felt he belonged.

In his eighth season and his 188th tournament — and with a little help from 23-year-old Brooks Koepka — Walker won a back-nine duel Sunday by making a 6-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole and closing with three pars for a 5-under 66. That was more than enough for the 34-year-old Texan to win by two shots.

"This was the final stepping stone," said Walker, who has played on more tours than he can remember to get to the big leagues.

It turned out to be a learning experience for Koepka, who had a four-shot lead with 11 holes remaining until he began missing short putts, all of them to the left. It started with a 3-foot par putt that he missed on the ninth hole. The most significant was a 6-foot birdie attempt on the 15th hole that would have matched birdies with Walker in the group ahead and regained a share of the lead.

Koepka bogeyed the next two holes and closed with a 72 to tie for third.

"Things just weren't going my way," Koepka said. "I just didn't make the shots I needed to win. Congrats to Jimmy on that. He played very well. But just try to learn from the whole experience. Any time you can put yourself in that kind of pressure, it's always good. It you take something from it, that's even better."

Walker finished at 17-under 267 and cracked the top 50 in the world ranking for the first time.

Vijay Singh closed with a 68 and wound up with the 27th runner-up finish of his Hall of Fame career, and his best result since he sued the PGA Tour in May over its procedure in investigating Singh's admission that he used deer antler spray.

Koepka tied for third with Kevin Na (64), Puerto Rico winner Scott Brown (64) and Hideki Matsuyama, the 21-year-old Japanese star who has joined the PGA Tour. Matsuyama, who played in the Presidents Cup last week, birdied his last three holes for a 66.

Along with the Masters, Walker also gets to go to Maui in January for the Tournament of Champions, another place he has never been, and he is assured a spot in the PGA Championship for only the fourth time in his career.

"I felt like I was good enough to be in them, play in them," Walker said. "There's always this big pressure to get into Augusta, and I would press here, press there. You want to be playing in the big stuff. That's what I'm aspiring to do — play against the world's best."

PATRIOTS 30
SAINTS 27

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Tom Brady's 17-yard touchdown pass to Kenbrell Thompkins with 5 seconds left gave the New England Patriots a wild 30-27 win and knocked the New Orleans Saints from the ranks of the unbeaten Sunday.

It capped a 70-yard drive in which the Patriots marched downfield with no timeouts after getting the ball with 1:08 to go.

The Saints (5-1) had taken a 24-23 lead with 3:29 remaining on Drew Brees' 34-yard touchdown pass to Kenny Stills, but couldn't put away New England.

The Patriots (5-1) survived an interception by Keenan Lewis on their first snap after Garrett Hartley's 39-yard field goal made it 27-23.

PACKERS 19
RAVENS 17

BALTIMORE — Aaron Rodgers threw a 64-yard touchdown pass to Jordy Nelson, Mason Crosby kicked four field goals and Green Bay held on to beat Baltimore.

Eddie Lacy rushed for 120 yards to fuel the Packers' first road win of the season. Green Bay (3-2) took a 16-3 lead into the fourth quarter and was up 19-10 with 4 minutes left, but the Ravens (3-3) kept coming back.

After Baltimore closed to 19-17 on an 18-yard touchdown pass from Joe Flacco to Dallas Clark with 2:04 remaining, Rodgers clinched the victory with a 52-yard completion to Jermichael Finley on a third-and-3.

Rodgers went 17 for 32 for 315 yards.

Despite playing without injured linebacker Clay Matthews, the Packers limited Baltimore to 47 yards rushing and registered five sacks, including three by A.J. Hawk.

BRONCOS 35
JAGUARS 19

DENVER — Peyton Manning threw for two scores and Knowshon Moreno ran for three to lead Denver to a tougher-than-expected victory over winless Jacksonville.

The Broncos (6-0) came in as 27-point favorites, and much of the pregame hype centered on whether they'd cover the spread and when Manning would come out of the game.

Neither happened.

Manning finished 28 for 42 for 295 yards, but lost two fumbles and threw a pick-6 — a 59-yard interception return by Paul Posluszny that pulled the Jaguars (0-6) within 14-12 at halftime.

It was a two-point game late in the third quarter, before Moreno scored his last touchdown, an 8-yard run, for a 28-19 lead. Moreno finished with 42 yards.

Justin Blackmon had 14 catches for 190 yards for Jacksonville.

CHIEFS 24
RAIDERS 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jamaal Charles ran for two touchdowns, the Kansas City defense harassed Oakland quarterback Terrelle Pryor into throwing three second-half interceptions and the Chiefs remained unbeaten.

After winning just twice last season, Kansas City (6-0) continued the second-best start in franchise history. The Chiefs won their first nine games during the 2003 season.

The Chiefs piled up 10 sacks while ending a three-game skid to the Raiders (2-4), and a six-game losing streak against them at Arrowhead Stadium.

Pryor threw for 216 yards and a touchdown, but his interceptions proved costly.

The first led to Charles' go-ahead touchdown run, the second led to Ryan Succop's fourth-quarter field goal, and Husain Abdullah returned the last one for a touchdown to seal the win.

STEELERS 19
JETS 6

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Ben Roethlisberger threw a 55-yard touchdown pass to Emmanuel Sanders, Shaun Suisham kicked four field goals, and Pittsburgh won its first game of the season.

The Steelers (1-4) were off to their worst start since 1968, when they lost their first six games during a season in which they finished 2-11-1. Sunday's victory was also the 600th in franchise history, including the postseason, as Pittsburgh became only the fourth team to reach the milestone.

Pittsburgh was coming off a bye-week break and appeared quite a bit sharper than New York (3-3), which had a short week to prepare after a 30-28 win at Atlanta last Monday night.

Geno Smith was intercepted twice by a Steelers defense that entered the game as the only team in the league without a takeaway.

PANTHERS 35
VIKINGS 10

MINNEAPOLIS — Cam Newton threw three touchdown passes and ran for another score, and Carolina romped past Adrian Peterson and Minnesota.

Peterson finished with 62 yards on 10 carries and 21 yards on three receptions, but the Vikings (1-4) trailed the whole game and didn't have much use after halftime for Peterson. The NFL MVP learned Friday that a 2-year-old son of his died in South Dakota of injuries from alleged abuse.

49ERS 32
CARDINALS 20

SAN FRANCISCO — Vernon Davis caught touchdown passes of 61 and 35 yards and finished with a career-best 180 yards receiving, leading San Francisco to its third straight victory.

Colin Kaepernick threw for 252 yards and Frank Gore ran for 101 yards on 25 carries.

SEAHAWKS 20
TITANS 13

SEATTLE — Marshawn Lynch ran for two touchdowns and had 155 all-purpose yards, Richard Sherman came up with his third interception of the season, and Seattle finally shook Tennessee in the fourth quarter.

Seattle (5-1) won its 11th straight at home despite a long list of mistakes that allowed the Titans (3-3) to hang around into the fourth. There was a careless turnover, missed defensive assignments and a comical muffed field goal attempt that led to the Titans' only touchdown on the final play of the first half.

BENGALS 27
BILLS 24 OT

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Mike Nugent hit a 43-yard field goal with 6:44 left in overtime.

Brandon Tate's 29-yard punt return to the Bills 33 set up the decisive score. Andy Dalton went 26 of 40 for 337 yards, with three touchdowns and an interception. He bounced back after a two-game touchdown drought and led the Bengals (4-2) to their first road win of the season.

LIONS 31
BROWNS 17

CLEVELAND — Matthew Stafford threw three of his four touchdown passes in the second half, rallying Detroit.

The Lions (4-2) outscored the Browns 24-0 in the second half, sealing their win when Stafford hooked up with tight end Joseph Fauria with 2:01 left. Fauria caught three TD passes for the Lions, who played like a completely different team in the second half after being dominated up front and trailing 17-7 at the half.

EAGLES 31
BUCCANEERS 20

TAMPA, Fla. — Nick Foles threw three touchdown passes and ran for a fourth, leading Philadelphia over winless Tampa Bay.

Foles finished a long first-quarter scoring drive with a 4-yard run and threw TD passes of 12 and 36 yards to DeSean Jackson.

ALCS

we had one in hand and we let one get away, there's no question about that. But there have been two great games."

Miguel Cabrera and Alex Avila homered off Clay Buchholz in Detroit's four-run sixth inning.

Boston scored once in the bottom of the sixth and then loaded the bases against three relievers in the eighth before closer Joaquin Benoit came in to face Ortiz.

On his first pitch, Ortiz hit a line drive into the glove of the Red Sox bullpen catcher, with Hunter flopping headfirst over the chest-high wall in pursuit.

The fans waited until the trainers verified that Hunter was OK to start chanting, "Papi!" and call the Red Sox slugger out of the dugout for a curtain call.

Matt Slocum/AP

Detroit's Max Scherzer throws in the first inning during Game 2 of the ALCS against Boston on Sunday in Boston.

It was the first career-postseason grand slam for Ortiz, a star of the 2004 playoff run that ended in Boston's first World Series title in 86 years.

"When you consider down four runs, not a very likely scenario that you come back from that many runs that late in the game," Red Sox manager John Farrell said.

Koji Uehara pitched a perfect ninth for the win. Rick Porcello took the loss.

Jonny Gomes led off the bottom half against Porcello with groundball to the left of shortstop Jose Iglesias, a defensive replacement. The former Red Sox prospect fielded it but rushed the throw and it bounced past Fielder and into the Boston dugout as Gomes slid headfirst into the bag with an infield hit.

With Gomes on second because of the error, Saltalamacchia hit a high popup near the rolled-up tarp that bounced off Fielder's glove.

A fan reached up trying to catch the foul. Fielder looked as if he wanted an interference call — replays showed he simply let the ball glance off his glove.

Vettel wins Japanese GP, not F1 title yet

Jim Armstrong
Associated Press

SUZUKA, Japan — Red Bull driver Sebastian Vettel won the Japanese Grand Prix on Sunday but will have to wait to seal a fourth-straight Formula One title as nearest rival Fernando Alonso finished fourth.

Vettel surged into the lead on the 41st lap and led a Red Bull one-two ahead of teammate Mark Webber by 7.1 seconds. Webber, who started from pole position, passed Lotus' Romain Grosjean on the penultimate lap. Grosjean led much of the race but could not take his maiden F1 victory and finished third.

It was Vettel's fourth win in the past five races at Suzuka and his ninth win of the season.

"We had a great car and were fast again this year," Vettel said. "Being able to finish on the podium and to win four times here is incredible. The fans here are incredible, they really respect us."

– POWER POINT OFICIAL RULES –

1. Object of the game is to amass as many of the 136 weekly points as you can. Simply review the week's schedule of games, listed on entry form, and decide which game you are SUREST of picking a winner in. Write the name of your projected winner on the 16-point line, and so on down to the 1-point line, which game you figure to be a tossup. Next, fill in Tiebreaker 1, the total points scored by both teams in the week's designated game. If this step fails to produce a winner, the judges will apply Tiebreaker 2, total offensive yardage from scrimmage in this game. If a winner still doesn't emerge, a drawing will be held among those contestants still tied. Decisions of the judges are final. The weekly contestant from among all participating newspapers who tallies the most of the 136 points will win $1000. Local prizes to be decided by newspapers.

2. Any entry form that does not contain a legible name, address, etc., will be disqualified.

3. Entries that fail to forecast a winner from each and every game will be disqualified, as will entries that fail to distinguish between the Jets and Giants of New York and other similar-sounding team names.

4. No points are awarded on tie games or in case any game is not played for any reason during its scheduled week.

5. Entering POWER POINTS constitutes permission by contestant for his or her name and photograph to be used for news and reasonable promotional purposes at no charge.

6. Employees of this newspaper and their immediate families are ineligible to participate.

7. Any inquiry about or protest of weekly results must be made by noon on the Friday following the announcement of winners.

8. No purchase necessary. Facsimile game entry forms will be accepted. Enter contest by dropping entry form into POWER POINTS container at participating co-sponsors.

9. Weekly deadline for entry will be 2 p.m. Thursdays except when noted otherwise on weekly entry form.

10. Neither this newspaper nor any co-sponsor will be responsible for illegible entry forms or those lost, stolen or damaged in any way or entries mis-directed or arriving postage due or for any claim or injury by contestants made in connection to any activity involved in entering contest. Entrants assume all liabilities.

11. Limit: one entry per person per week. Each entry must represent the original work of one entrant, "group" entries, "systems" or other attempt to enter multiple entries will be disqualified. Filling out extra forms and putting your friends' and relatives' names on them violates this rule. Any such entries are destroyed prior to grading.

12. Contestants must have reached the age of eight (8) years by the Sunday of any week's play.

Firm limits on cellphone use should curb girl's compulsion

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I am upset with myself for getting my granddaughter the cellphone she begged me for. I wish the phone companies would put restrictions on them. I wondered why she was feeling tired in the mornings until I caught her on the phone at 4 a.m. She can't get dressed in the morning because she's texting every two minutes.

When her friend, who she was always very active with, came over, the girl wound up watching a movie with me because my granddaughter would not stop texting in her bedroom. She wasn't like this until she got this new boyfriend, and he must have no life at all. Should I talk to his parents? It is consuming her life, morning, noon and night. I have told her she can't have the phone until her homework is done. — FRUSTRATED GRANDMA IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR GRANDMA: You shouldn't expect the phone company to decide what is acceptable in your home. As the adult in your household, it's up to you to assert control. If your granddaughter lives with you, by all means talk to the boyfriend's parents about this.

But equally important, enforce cellphone limits. If you think she can't be trusted not to use it after lights-out, see that she gives you her phone at bedtime. In the morning, return it to her once she's dressed and ready for school. And when she invites friends over, make sure she understands it is HER responsibility — not yours — to entertain them, because what she did was rude.

DEAR ABBY: I have met a darling man I'm compatible with in every way.

We have similar tastes in just about everything from decorating and landscaping to entertainment.

My problem is his past. From what he says, he has never had a monogamous relationship, even during his marriage. After the divorce he pursued anything female.

When we are out at a club or a concert, I constantly encounter women he has been with. He tells me he is happy for the first time in his life and he would never cheat on me.

I have never been the jealous type, and I'm really not now. I just don't want to be the woman everyone is laughing at because they know his history. As I said, we are content and happy, but I need to move past this or move on, I guess. — THE CURRENT WOMAN

DEAR CURRENT WOMAN: You say this "darling" man has never had a monogamous relationship — before, during or after his marriage.

Therefore, the odds aren't great that he'll have one with you.

It's time to ask yourself (not me) if you would be willing to tolerate his fooling around if you were his wife. Some women — the wives of attractive or powerful men — are open-minded about it if their husbands are discreet. The real question is, are you?

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you three years ago about throwing parties on unique days, such as 7-7-07, 9-9-09, etc., and you printed my letter.

Well, I'm still at it, even though the special numbers have run out. I planned a brunch on 11-11-11. Everyone who attended chipped in $11 apiece. The money that was left over I donated to a hunger program.

Twelve of us met for lunch at noon on 12-12-12, and this time each person paid — guess how much — $12.

This year, we'll be having brunch at 10:00 on 11-12-13, and I'm already planning ahead for next year's celebration, which will be on 12-13-14 at1500 hours. Any suggestions? — CLAIRE (AGAIN) IN BETHLEHEM, PA.

DEAR CLAIRE: You appear to be a fun, clever woman with a zest for life.

And yes, I do have a suggestion. How about making next year's celebration a tea with a holiday theme? After all, "'tis the season," and any leftover money could be donated to a children's charity.

Bidding Quiz

Q 1 — Not vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ A K J 10 8 5 3 ♡ J 4 ◇ 7 ♣ A J 9
Right-hand opponent opens one heart. What action would you take?
A — We would open the bidding with one spade, if we could. As an overcaller, a jump to four spades has much to recommend it. This shuts the left-hand opponent out from cheaply showing a fit and the opponents may not be able to judge the right level at which to compete. Bid four spades.

Q 2 — Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ J 9 8 6 4 ♡ 9 ◇ 7 5 ♣ A Q 10 8 7
Partner opens one no-trump and right-hand opponent passes. What is your plan?
A — With exciting distribution and a partner who is likely to have a decent fit for at least one of your suits, be aggressive with this hand and force to game. If transfers are played, bid two hearts, forcing two spades from partner and then introduce the club suit. Without transfers, make a forcing jump to three spades. After either sequence, pass three no-trump by partner and hope the clubs will produce tricks for him.

Q 3 — Vulnerable vs. not vulnerable, as South, you hold:
♠ K 10 ♡ 9 8 3 ◇ 10 9 8 7 5 ♣ A J 3
Partner opens one spade, you bid one no-trump and partner jumps to three spades. Are you a man or a mouse?
A — Aces are always good and this king is precious. We would bid four spades even without the jack of clubs.

Q 4 — Neither vulnerable, as North, you hold:
♠ A 9 5 4 ♡ A K 9 6 5 ◇ K Q 5 ♣ 4
The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♡	2♣	2♡	Pass

What action would you take?
A — You are certainly too good to pass. Your choices are a "need help" game try of two spades and a bold leap to four hearts. All the values in this hand seem to be working. If partner has wasted cards in clubs, you won't do well, but your left-hand opponent has advertised those cards so be aggressive. Bid four hearts.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Oct. 14, 2013:

This year your imagination goes wild playing out solutions, ideas and emotional situations. Romance will emerge because of your ability to fantasize and create wonderful scenarios. A boss or an associate loves your ideas. You will excel at work, but be cautious around an older woman or man, as this person does not have your best interests in mind. Make sure you give everything 110 percent. If you are single, make sure that the feelings between you and a potential sweetie are mutual before you unleash your romantic being. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy a period of unusual closeness. Your day-to-day life improves because of your ability to see different paths. PISCES encourages you to live your dreams.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You have the ability to stay calm, cool and collected, even in difficult situations. Whether you yell at someone or scream within, your ire will bubble up to the forefront. Use your strong feelings to deal with a key situation. Tonight: Schedule some downtime.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ You tend to meet others' demands in a matter-of-fact way. This attitude might be great for many people, including a boss, but it does take a toll. Today you become overwhelmed by what you must do, and you might lose your cool. Tonight: Have a long-overdue discussion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ While others seem to be hotbeds of emotion, you detach, look at the bigger picture and ask yourself what is going on. Once you gain a more workable perspective, you can bypass emotions and a difficult situation. Others ask a lot from you. Tonight: Up late.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ A partner plays a strategic role in your financial well-being. You might wonder if there is a better way. Independence in this area could be beneficial in creating greater peace. Check in with someone who has a greater understanding of the problem. Tonight: Allow your mind to wander.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Someone's assertiveness will make a difference. A strong reaction might not be surprising to you, but you'll discover that this attitude is best in the long run, as it takes some of the responsibility off your shoulders. Tonight: Visit with one of the special people in your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ You might not realize how much anger could be driving you, especially as you have a tendency to suppress that emotion. Getting a grasp on someone else's suggestion might involve asking some questions. Tonight: Do some shopping on the way home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Meetings in the morning hold a special significance. You could be tired of someone who continues to talk and steal the stage. If ever there was a time to say something, it would be today. Tonight: Work till the wee hours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Getting going could take a major effort this morning, but once the afternoon sets in, you will like where you are, what you are doing and the people who are around you. Anger still might bubble up when dealing with a boss or a higher-up. Tonight: Tap into your creativity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You tend to come off as being quite self-assured, though you might not feel that way. You easily could hear news that forces you to regroup. If you feel pressured, you might want to rethink your reaction to this news. Tonight: Mosey on home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You could be taken aback by a trusted person's reaction. You need to detach, sit back and observe. You will gain more insight into what is ailing him or her. Afternoon talks will tend to bring resolutions more easily. Tonight: Get feedback from a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You inadvertently could trigger someone way beyond his or her tolerance level. Ask fewer questions, and be more forthright in what you decide to do. Your finances will determine your choices more than you might realize. Tonight: Do something just for you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You understand much more of what is going on behind the scenes. By the afternoon, you might feel the need to take an active stand. Follow your instincts. Later in the day, your sense of humor will come out. Tonight: Dream on.
