Gov. Bush gets $86.2 billion budget plan

Higher spending on prisons education

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans' tax dollars would pay for more than half of $86.2 billion in state spending over the next two years under a bill sent to Gov. George W. Bush.

The 1998-99 biennial budget, which got final approval from lawmakers Thursday, includes small pay raises for state employees and higher spending on education and prisons.

It's awaiting a final test: Gov. George W. Bush's consideration.

"Governor Bush congratulates members of the Legislature for preserving $1 billion for property tax cuts for homeowners and for putting the majority of new money into our schools," said Karen Hughes, Bush's spokeswoman. "We will be reviewing the budget carefully during the next several weeks."

The budget, $47.9 billion in general state funds and $24.6 billion in federal funds, sets caps on spending. The remainder comes from dedicated and special state funds.

In recent years, agencies have spent less than allowed, sending leftover money back to state coffers.

That money, more than $1 billion from the current budget, is being used to increase Texans' homestead property tax exemptions by $10,000 a year. That amounts to a roughly $140 school property tax cut for most homeowners.

The budget awaiting Bush's signature covers spending from Sept. 1 to Aug. 31, 1998, the state's 98-99 fiscal years. It's 6.8 percent higher than the budget period ending Aug. 31.

"It is a lean budget, but is focuses on the needs of the state," said Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo and a member of a House-Senate committee that negotiated the proposal.

"It focuses on preventing problems and solving problems," she said.

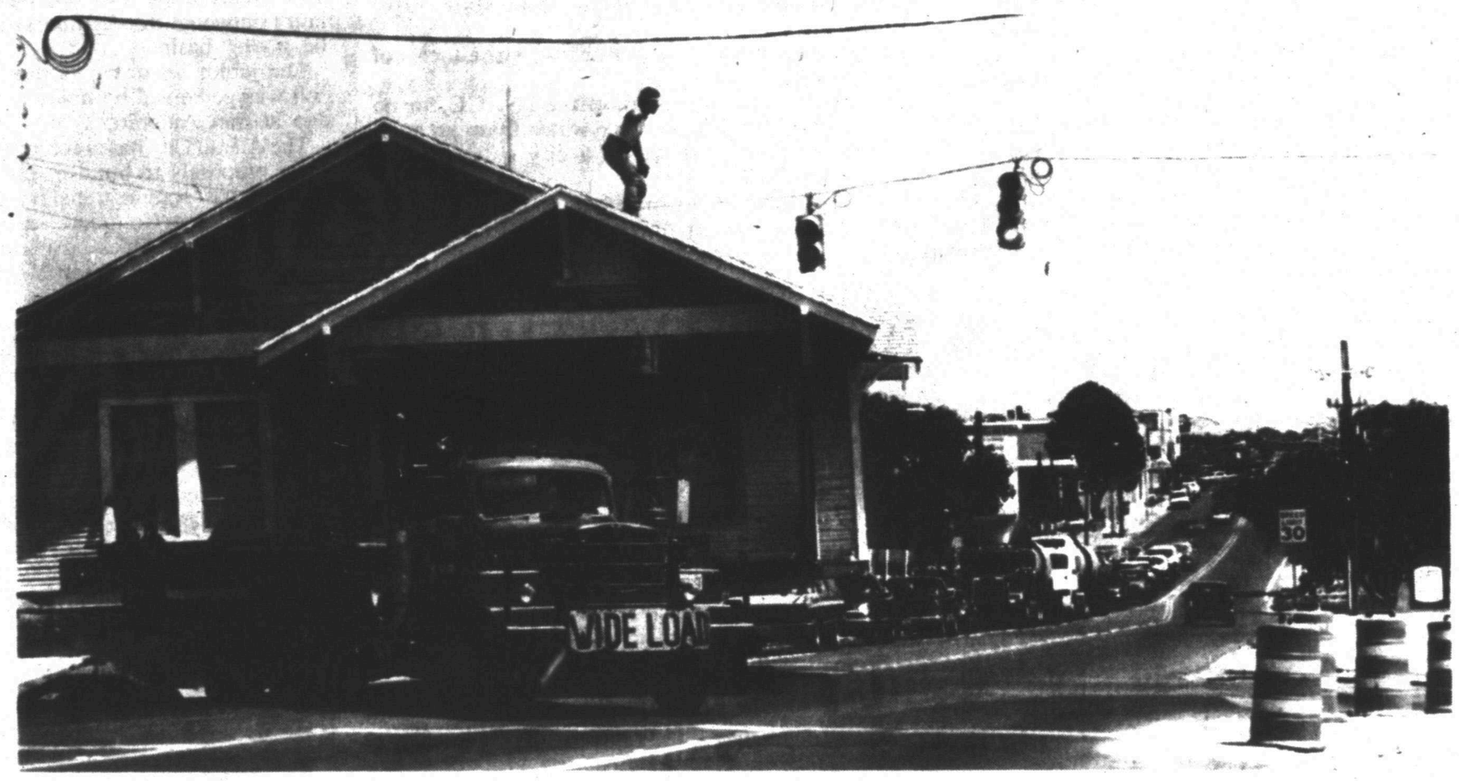

The employees' pay raise, the first in four years, would give about 222,000 workers a $100-a-month increase, starting Sept. 1.

The budget also includes — Raises of more than $1,000 a month for the governor, attorney general, land commissioner, agriculture commissioner, comptroller and the three railroad commissioners — all officials elected statewide. Bush has said he would refuse his raise.

— $32 million for the governor's proposed reading initiative for youngsters.

— A new higher-education funding formula designed in part to encourage professors to teach undergraduate courses.

SHS commencement is 8 tonight

Some 200 Snyder High School seniors are expected to graduate tonight in ceremonies at Scurry County Coliseum which are set for 8 o'clock.

The Class of 1997 selected for its motto: "Never let yesterday's disappointments overshadow tomorrow's dreams." Blue and silver are the class colors and the song is "Today."

Appropriately for the spring of '97, the class selected wildflowers as its class flower.

The valedictory address will be given by LaTrisha Lee, daughter of Lannie and Loretta Lee.

She has been in the Top 10 percent of her class for four years and a member of the National Honor Society for the past two.

She is also a National Merit Scholar finalist.

Casity Reneau, son of Walter and Kristina Reneau, will deliver the Salutatory Address.

He has been in the Top 10 percent of his class throughout high school and a member of the National Honor Society his junior and senior years. He has accepted an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy.

SHS principal Larry Scott will present the scholarship winners and more than $430,000 in scholarships will be announced.

Ag instructor David Frazier will present the graduates and the awarding of the diplomas will be by SISD board of trustee members Glenn Clarady and Mike Levens.

Funds will help WTC, but not enough

Western Texas College will receive almost $400,000 in state funding over the next two years that it wasn't expecting, thanks to budget recommendations adopted by a House and Senate conference committee.

"I think this funding, $399,518, will be tremendously important to helping WTC prepare for the future and meet the increasing demand for higher education and specialized training," said State Rep. David Counts, D-Knox City.

"We really appreciate the effort of our legislators. Certainly, they have been very supportive," said Dr. Harry Krenek, WTC president.

Unfortunately, the funds won't offset an estimated loss of $700,000 to $800,000 WTC will incur over the same two-year time period. Those funds dried up when it was announced two years ago that the Texas Department of Criminal Justice was discontinuing two of WTC's programs — academic classes at the French Robertson Unit and correctional officer in-service training.

Because funding is on a two-year basis, WTC received between $350,000 and $400,000 for last year and the present year. With the deletion of those programs, the funds will not be available for the 1997-98 school year, however.

"The thing we need to keep in perspective is that while we are very appreciative of this additional funding from the state, we can't think it is going to solve economic problems, because it's not," Krenek stressed.

Krenek added that administrators have submitted application to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to resume correctional officer in-service. Word on that is expected in two to three weeks.

DCOS to be featured on Internet

Development Corporation of Snyder is headed for the Internet.

DCOS board members on Thursday approved funds for creating a web page and space on a server after executive director John DeLille said the Texas Department of Commerce will be using that method to manage industrial prospects.

The board agreed on a proposal by Bullard's Computer Solution, Inc. There will be monthly fees of $24.95 to hook up to the server and $30 for the website, plus a one-time fee of $250 to $500 to build the website.

Financial statements, bills for payment, previous minutes and adoption of insurance plans and conditions for employment for DeLille and secretary Bonnie Nussey were the only other action items.

The insurance plans call for a premium of $202.81 for DeLille and $172.90 for Nussey.

Two items highlighted a series of brief reports presented to the board. DeLille told the board that the college and school district will be applying for a grant from the Texas Infrastructure Fund in the amount of about $500,000. The grant would be used to provide funds for distance learning facilities and equipment, using T3 or fiber-optics technology.

Also being proposed is a quarterly networking breakfast which would bring together representatives from key entities in Snyder and Scurry County. DCOS plans to host the first breakfast at 7:30 a.m. on June 17. The location has not been determined.

"It's something whereby key people in the community can get together and know what everybody else is doing. I think it will be good for the community," said DeLille.

Each entity participating would take turns hosting the breakfast. Those entities would include, but not be limited to, the DCOS, chamber, county, city, hospital, school district, college, financial institutions, appraisal district and Board of County Development.

Other reports dealt with various construction within the industrial park, a natural gas line for the park, right of way procurement and engineering fees.

In one other item, DeLille told the board that a group interested in opening the old brick plant is proceeding with pre-application for a Rural Development grant.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Even if you're on the right track, you'll get run over if you just sit there."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: Lynn Brisendine, publisher of the Brownfield News, has a son graduating this year. His from-the-heart comments are appropriate.

"It's interesting to think about the similarities and the changes these students experience compared with my graduating class of 1965.

"Today's world is so different. And it is, in many ways, vastly better. 1965 would see a huge race riot in the LA community of Watts. The racial issue was beginning to become a violent clash of flames and blood.

"Today is a little better. Racial tension continues, but for the most part, cooler heads have prevailed. More progress is needed. Perhaps a fresh crop of new brains will find that progress.

"In 1965 a place of dread was just emerging. Vietnam was becoming a place of death, a jungle of hate which would spill into U.S. streets.

"The Class of '97 doesn't face a war half a planet away, at least not at this writing.

"A child of the '60s lived under the continuous threat of nuclear annihilation. The threat may exist, but the once formidable Soviet Union has melted away. I am still amazed.

"Technology has been the explosion which has affected our nation the most over these 32 years. Trying to compare our world of gadgets then with today's high-tech society is remarkable. I remember my senior year seeing the first eight-track sound system in an automobile. It amazed me.

"We had three TV stations and people laughed when someone would predict the coming of "pay" TV. There were four lane divided highways, but not many.

"In 1965, we were thrilled with transistor radios and hand-held calculators. Today, the computer rules. Many of the '65 grads have been replaced because a computer was programmed to do the work.

"On the other hand, new ways of doing things have brought some true wonders. In every area of human endeavor, new ways are proving to be better ways.

"We see a selection of foods during every season that once were in abundance for only a few weeks a year. Now farmers are figuring out ways to produce their crops using lap-tops and satellites. The grads of '97 have a new world filled with opportunities.

"So much for the changes. A common theme continues for graduates. Some age-old truisms are still in play and hold meaning for both the 50-year-old and the 17-year-old:

"The Golden Rule is still a must...

"Hard work is its own reward. It doesn't matter if you earn a living with your hands or your mind, both take hard work.

"Moderation in all things. This little saying will help in personal and professional venues for a lifetime.

"Believing is above all. Believe in a Loving God. Believe in your family. Believe in your country. Believe in yourself. And never be afraid to act on or protect any of those beliefs.

"Congratulations to the Class of 1997."

House, Senate members agree on water bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation that would give Texas its first water conservation plan has been thrown a life preserver.

The bill, the top priority of Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock in the wake of last year's drought, appeared in jeopardy early Thursday after a conference committee of House and Senate members butted heads over a provision regulating interbasin transfers — the transfer of water from one area of the state to another.

House members of the panel had threatened to kill the bill, known as Senate Bill 1, if a proposal wasn't adopted that would greatly reduce the incentives for such transfers.

Several attempts by Senate members were made to modify the House's stance, but the House contingent, led by Rep. Ron Lewis, D-Mauriceville, repeatedly rejected those proposals after Lewis voiced an approach of, "All or nothing."

Lawmakers downplayed the stalemate after voting to approve the bill and send it to the full House and Senate for consideration.

"Nobody lost in this," said Lewis, the chairman of the five House members on the committee. "Let's don't look at it as winner or loser. It's a great bill and interbasin transfers are a small portion of the whole bill."

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, the chairman of the five Senate members on the panel, said, "I don't view it as the House or the Senate prevailing. I view it as the people of Texas prevailing."

Bullock said, "I think this is one of the most significant pieces of legislation in the last 25 or 30 years because on six previous occasions the Legislature has failed to move forward in any respect."

Texas is one of only three of the 12 Western states without a state drought plan. New Mexico and Wyoming are the others.

Last year's drought resulted in federal disaster relief for 95 percent of the state's 254 counties and cost the Texas economy $5 billion.

Under the bill, local water districts and irrigation districts would submit to a regional planning group designated by the Texas Water Development Board. A committee representing the regional planning group would then come up with a water conservation plan for the region.

The combination of the regional plans would form a statewide plan.

The biggest sticking point in the bill was the House's demand that "junior water rights" be assigned to any water involved in an interbasin transfer.

Under current law, those with the longest-held, or senior, water rights are able to collect water from those with the shortest-held, or junior, water rights in times of drought. If someone buys senior water rights, they are entitled to the privileges of the original owner.

Under the House proposal, the right to pump water still could be sold but the purchaser wouldn't have senior status. For example, someone who has held a water right since 1910 could, in time of drought, draw water from someone who bought a water right in 1997.

Supporters of interbasin transfers said the House provision on junior water rights takes away all incentives for a transfer.

They say no one would purchase a water right and invest millions of dollars to build a pipeline to transfer the water if the water they just purchased would be the first to be taken away during a drought.

"It's an important protection for the basin of origin," Lewis said.

The Senate wanted to simply leave the fate of interbasin transfers up to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. Under the bill, the commission would do studies to make sure the benefits of the receiving basin didn't outweigh the detriments of the giving basin.

The junior water rights provision was perceived by many as a slap at San Antonio.

The Alamo City has twice voted down proposals to build a reservoir but has sought transfers of water from the Colorado River, which also provides drinking water to numerous West Texas cities and Austin.

Rep. David Counts, a member of the House-Senate water committee, represents a West Texas district that draws water from a reservoir on Lake O.H. Ivie — along the Colorado River — constructed by San Angelo, Big Spring, Midland, Snyder and Abilene.

Counts, D-Knox City, said he has no sympathy for San Antonio.

"We went for 40 years and solved our problem for water and now, they come along, johnny come lately, and want to increase the vulnerability of the people who get their water from Lake Ivie," he said.

Rep. Robert Puente, D-San Antonio, said the junior water rights provision will likely discourage San Antonio from seeking interbasin transfers.

"The most important part of the plan was interbasin transfers," Puente said. "That issue has been resolved to the detriment of cities and of high-growth areas."

Water bill highlights

AUSTIN (AP) — Highlights of the water conservation and drought management bill headed to the House and Senate for final approval:

— Designates the Texas Water Development Board as the lead agency for adopting a comprehensive state water plan every five years. Conflicts between regional plans would be resolved by the TWDB.

— The TWDB would create statewide regions overseen by regional committees. Each region would then be responsible for a water conservation and drought management plan.

— Designates the Division of Emergency Management (DEM) within the governor's office as the lead agency for coordinating the drought response component of the state water plan.

— Requires data collection to better monitor the levels of local water supplies.

— An emergency provision would allow the TNRCC, for no longer than 120 days, to transfer surface water from an agricultural or industrial permit holder to a city or utility for domestic or municipal use.

— A separate constitutional amendment would consolidate $1.2 billion in bonding authority for the TWDB to help local water districts with new projects or improvements.

Home equity issue sent to voters

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas voters will have the chance to decide whether they want the right to borrow against the equity in their homes after the Texas House voted 116-25 in favor of such a proposal.

Texas is the only state that doesn't allow general home equity lending. The state Constitution allows home equity loans only to pay for taxes or home improvements.

Opponents of expanding equity lending have argued that the limits have protected Texans from losing their homes. Despite assurances from colleagues that the measure going before voters would be one of the safest in the country, many lawmakers voiced concern.

Rep. Barry Telford, D-DeKalb, silenced the House Thursday with a heartfelt speech before the final vote.

"I want to congratulate (legislators) for trying to protect us in this bill," he said. "I just couldn't let the day pass without saying I kind of like some of the things about the old Texas. Even during the Depression, we had our homesteads protected."

Texans will vote in November whether they want to change the constitution to allow general equity lending.

Under the measure, a homeowner's total debt — including original and second mortgages — couldn't be more than 80 percent of the home's value. First mortgages could continue to be as high as lenders are willing to put up.

The measure also includes consumer protections, including a "non-recourse" provision. That means if someone defaulted on a second mortgage, only their home could be taken to cover the loan.

Borrowers would have 12 days after applying for a loan and three days after getting it to terminate the deal without penalties or charges. That "cooling-off" period also would be applied to home improvement equity loans.

The addition of a cooling off period for home improvement equity loans was one reason Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, voted for the measure after initially opposing it.

"I've been a very strong opponent," Berlanga said. "With all the protections embodied in the constitution amendment, I (now) have a tremendous amount of comfort level."

The proposal also would allow dairy farm operators to use their property in home equity loans. No other home with an agricultural tax exemption would fall under the plan.

Boycott is threatened

AUSTIN (AP) — Black lawmakers pushing for Texas colleges to apply the same admissions standards to all students — including scholarship athletes — are threatening to ask athletes to boycott state schools if all students aren't treated equally.

A proposal by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, and Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, would require Texas universities and colleges to use the same grade point average in admitting all students as they do for scholarship athletes.

For example, a school that set a 2.5 GPA for a student-athlete could not require a higher GPA for other students.

The measure would apply to any school with an athletics program that uses GPAs as an admission criterion.

"If you are currently allowing athletes in with low GPAs ... and those athletes are graduating at a significant rate, then you haven't lowered your standards," West said.

West said the bill — with the provision that it only apply to GPAs — has enough support to pass the House and Senate and become law.

Company G, 142nd Infantry
36th Infantry Division Scholarship

LaTrisha Lee is the recipient of this annual scholarship awarded to the graduate of the Class of 1997 of Snyder High School. This award is given to the student that has demonstrated outstanding patriotism, citizenship, academic achievement and concern for family values and responsibilities.

This scholarship is dedicated to all the brave and gallant men of this combat infantry company of the Texas National Guard of World War II who were mobilized in the Army of the United States on 25 November 1940 in Snyder, Scurry County, Texas and to the more than 700 of their comrades who walked with them and wore the colors of the George Company during its long period of active military service.

The 36th Infantry Division, of which G Company was a part, was the first American Division to invade Hitler's Europia at Salerno, Italy on 9 September 1943. This division made two other assault landings at Anzio and Southern France.

The 36th "Texas" Division participated in seven European campaigns: Naples-Foggia, Anzio, Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe.

The 36th Division Suffered over 27,000 casualties, third highest of any World War II Division. This proud Division and its men were one of the most highly decorated combat units in the United States Army. This was the fighting 36th.

Her dream came true

By Phillip Alder

Last November, Dimmie Fleming died at the age of 86. She was one of Britain's most well-known and liked players and administrators. She was the secretary of the English Bridge Union from 1956 to 1975. Then she became the secretary of the Laws & Ethics Committee, a post she held for about a dozen years.

At the table, Dimmie won the World Women's Team title in 1964 and four European Women's Championships.

Her unique distinction, though, is to be the only woman ever to play on the British open team in a European Championship. This occurred in 1953, when she partnered Peter Swinnerton-Dyer. (He was expected to be a regular international player, but instead pursued an academic career, for which he has been knighted by the queen.) The night before the opening match, Dimmie dreamed that they would bid a grand slam on the very first board. That deal, from the match against Norway, is in the diagram.

The bidding wouldn't follow this path today. A strong jump shift denies a biddable four-card side suit, unless it is the one partner opened in. Still, when Swinnerton-Dyer jumped to six clubs despite holding neither of the top trumps, Dimmie was happy to go seven. (One wonders how much she was also influenced by the dream.)

I do not know the exact East-West hands, so I cannot judge how awkward a trump lead would have been. But Swinnerton-Dyer won the first trick and cashed three rounds of spades, discarding a diamond from the dummy. Then he took the two top diamonds. Finally, he collected the remainder on a crossruff.

Texas churches pitching in WASHINGTON (AP) — Churches across Texas are adopting families on welfare, helping them with resumes, baby-sitting, transportation — just about anything it takes to help parents get and keep jobs.

"They do everything they can to help that family," said John Sharp, the state's comptroller.

The Texas program exemplifies a new approach states are adopting to move people from welfare to work, focusing on challenges families face that have nothing to do with learning to type or work a new machine.

Tobacco agreement questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A growing number of state attorneys general are voicing serious misgivings that they can reach an agreement with major tobacco companies to settle a spate of pending lawsuits.

The court cases are intended to help states recover Medicaid funds spent treating sick smokers.

Except in social studies...

TAAS scores improve for 3rd year

AUSTIN (AP) — Giving credit to Texas students for buckling down on the statewide academic skills test, Education Commissioner Mike Moses has announced improved scores in nearly every area for the third straight year.

"The students are the ones who take the test, and the students have applied themselves and have shown improvement, and I appreciate their efforts," Moses said Thursday

Social studies was the only area in which student performance was lower than last year, according to results of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills administered April 29-May 2 in grades three through eight. Social studies is tested in the eighth grade.

Students made strides overall on reading and math tests, given in grades three through eight; writing, given in grades four and eight; and science, which students take in the eighth grade.

In those subjects, students improved over last year's performance in every group and grade level except one. Black fourth-graders' passing rate stayed the same in writing, at 76 percent.

"Texas students still have room to grow, but ... trend lines continue to look good," Moses said.

Teachers have focused on areas in which students have been weak academically, said Moses, who also praised other school staff, administrators and parents.

"This is a partnership between the home and the school. The parent plays the most vital role in encouraging the child to do well," he said.

A total of 1.6 million students in grades three through eight were tested this year. That's 100,000 more than the 1.5 million tested in 1996. Students can be exempted from the TAAS if their English is limited or if they are enrolled in special education programs. Exemptions decreased in both areas, and fewer students were absent on TAAS testing days.

Gains by minority students exceeded those by white students in a number of areas, heartening officials who have been concerned about a performance gap between student groups.

Test scores on the TAAS are the backbone of the state's accountability system for schools, which also uses dropout and attendance rates to assess performance. School rankings will be released later this year.

Moses particularly praised this year's results in math, where students overall in the various grades have posted gains ranging from 19 to 24 percentage points since 1994. Math gains since last year range from 4 to 9 percentage points.

He said he hoped to see the same kind of improvement in reading, an area emphasized by state officials including Gov. George W. Bush.

Immigrant smuggling ring broken, agents say

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. and Mexican agents have announced that they have broken up an international ring that smuggled more than 400 illegal immigrants a month into the United States.

The U.S. Border Patrol said in Laredo that the group had as many as 40 employees in a pipeline that stretched from deep in South America to the U.S. East Coast and used South Texas cities as major staging areas for its clients.

"This was a major, major organization," said Alfonso Moreno, head of intelligence for Laredo sector for the U.S. Border Patrol.

The San Antonio Express-News reported today that the group, which agents called "the Pena Organization," was blamed for the deaths of two undocumented immigrants whose bodies were found last July behind a service station at Buda, about 10 miles south of Austin.

"These guys were the top for distributing aliens in North America," an unidentified Border Patrol agent told the newspaper.

"We saw them put 4- or 5-year-old kids in those trucks," said the agent, whom the newspaper described as an anti-smuggling specialist. "These guys are career smugglers."

The operation "had no regard whatsoever" for the lives or safety of those it charged up to $8,000 apiece to be smuggled into this country, the agent said.

The smugglers used homes, apartments and motels in Laredo, San Antonio and other Texas cities as safe houses, where undocumented immigrants were kept briefly before being scattered across the country, the agent said.

The standard fee was $6,000 for passage to New York, New Jersey or Massachusetts, although it could be as much as $8,000 in some cases.

The two who died last summer allegedly were among 40 people the smugglers had packed in a tractor-trailer on their way to other cities. Authorities said the men died inside the truck, where temperatures could have exceeded 100 degrees.

Oxygen is not used to treat cancer

DEAR DR. GOTT: My nephew is undergoing chemotherapy for a small lung cancer. If oxygen kills cancer cells, why can't he be treated with supplemental oxygen inhalation, rather than dangerous drugs?

DEAR READER: High concentrations of oxygen are, indeed, toxic for most living tissue, cancer cells included. However, the operative word here is "concentration." In order for the cells to die, they have to be bathed in practically 100 percent oxygen.

It is impossible to achieve such high levels by inhaling supplemental oxygen. Also, even if such levels could be obtained, they would kill normal tissue as well, thereby rendering the treatment more dangerous than beneficial.

You are probably aware of the enormous value of hyperbaric oxygen in treating certain medical emergencies, particularly advanced infection. During this procedure, the patient is placed in a pressure tank that forces extra oxygen into his body.

Fortunately, bacteria are more susceptible to high oxygen concentrations, so normal tissue is spared. But cancer cells are another kettle of fish, because they are fairly resistant to hyperbaric oxygen.

Therefore, while concentrated oxygen therapy has theoretical merit, the technology to use it effectively is only in the developmental stages. I'm afraid that your nephew will have to rely on the traditional methods of cancer treatment: surgery, radiation and/or chemotherapy.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Viruses and Cancer." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was recently diagnosed with "hypnagogic hallucinations." Is this serious?

DEAR READER: During the process of falling asleep, many people experience particularly vivid illusions that can cause sudden, violent muscular jerks and twitches.

These phenomena are similar to vivid dreams, but occur before the brain enters a deep sleep (REM) phase. Such hypnagogic events are entirely innocuous and normal; nonetheless, they can be quite disturbing to a sleep partner.

My father once had one and, to hear him tell about it, the episode was quite amusing. As he was falling asleep one night, he was sure that he saw a burglar bending over the bed. Realizing that surprise was a vital element in frightening the imaginary intruder, he threw off the covers and bellowed at the top of his lungs.

It was several weeks before my mother got over being awakened by a crazy man who tore the bed apart and shouted for no apparent reason.

Hypnagogic hallucinations are common and harmless; fortunately, not all have the profound effect of my father's.

Jazz face Bulls Sunday...

Rally grounds Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — The Utah Jazz showed the Houston Rockets something about comebacks.

The Rockets, accustomed to being a team that rallies to win, learned what it felt like to blow a 13-point lead with 6:46 to play as John Stockton hit a 3-pointer at the final buzzer to eliminate the Rockets from the playoffs, 103-100 Thursday night.

The Rockets went into the game with an 11-2 record under coach Rudy Tomjanovich in games in which they faced elimination, but the Jazz made them pay for a fourth-quarter swoon.

"I'm so disappointed," Rockets guard Mario Elie said. "We had our chances to win. I'd rather lose by 40 points. We had total control of the game and let it go."

The Rockets built a 90-77 lead midway through the fourth quarter before Stockton and the Jazz went to work and kept the Rockets from returning to the NBA Finals for the third time in four years.

"It's so tough to lose, especially when we played so well," Hakeem Olajuwon said. "We had to win the game and we had it in control. We just let it get away."

Stockton scored 13 of the Jazz's final 15 points and had 25 for the game. He also had two assists on 3-pointers to have a hand in Utah's final 19 points.

"I don't think we saw it quick enough," Clyde Drexler said of Stockton's game-winner. "I didn't see the release, but I saw the end of it."

The Jazz took the series 4-2 by getting the first road victory in the series.

"This series didn't come down to that one shot," Charles Barkley said. "They won 64 games for a reason. They were the best team in the West all season. I'll be a man, we lost to a better team."

The Rockets took the early lead with a 15-1 first-quarter run and led 49-43 at halftime.

The Rockets beat the Jazz in the playoffs in both of their championship years of 1994 and 1995.

"The bottom line is we didn't make the plays we made all year," Tomjanovich said. "We went to everybody, the high percentage shots that we made all year, but they made the stops.

"We either didn't get the shot off, turnover or missed the shot and they went down and scored. When you make a mistake, they make you pay."

The loss meant another year without a championship ring for Barkley, who came to the Rockets in a huge offseason trade that was supposed to return the Rockets to the finals.

But Barkley gave tribute to the Jazz as a team and to Stockton for his final decisive minutes.

"You see why John Stockton is one of the five best players I've ever played against," Barkley said. "That guy is as tough as nails. Obviously the best player was John Stockton.

"He finished it off like a star should. He made all the plays down the stretch. Karl Malone deserved to be MVP, but he wouldn't be there without John Stockton."

Utah won the first two games of the series, and the Rockets won the next two. Utah's 96-91 victory on Tuesday night put the Rockets at elimination's door.

Drexler led the Rockets with 33 points, but it wasn't enough to stave off the Jazz.

"I'm not ashamed to lose to the Utah Jazz. They deserved to win the game, they made the plays and we didn't," Tomjanovich said. "One more play and we win the game, but they made it and they won."

Rangers use bats to club Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — The days of bitter defeat for the Texas Rangers at the Kingdome could be over.

The Rangers were the ones battering the Seattle Mariners on Thursday night.

Ken Hill (4-2) didn't give up an earned run in seven innings, making manager Johnny Oates beam appreciatively. Ivan Rodriguez and Juan Gonzalez backed Hill with home runs in an 8-2 victory.

The Rangers broke the game open by sending 10 men to the plate in the seventh inning for five runs against Jamie Moyer (4-2) and Scott Sanders.

"I felt that I got too predictable during the course of the game," Moyer said.

The Rangers have been predictable in the Kingdome. By winning for only the third time in three years in Seattle, the defending AL West champs ended a six-game losing streak there.

"This just shows us that we can come in here and win," Hill said. "This was a confidence booster."

Seattle had to settle for Joey Cora's streak-salvaging infield single with two outs in the ninth. He barely beat out a slow roller to shortstop Benji Gil, extending his hitting streak to 24 games.

Along with Albert Belle's 24-game hitting streak for the Chicago White Sox, Cora has the longest hitting streak in the majors this season. He extended his league-record hitting streak for switch-hitters and his club record.

"Maybe we can rally around Joey and get a good streak going for ourselves," Alex Rodriguez said.

Hill had a determined look on his face when he went to the mound in his second start since suffering a strained right shoulder in Chicago on April 30. He gave up six hits and walked four, throwing 113 pitches.

Astros hand Padres fifth straight loss

HOUSTON (AP) - San Diego isn't panicking despite having baseball's longest current losing streak.

The Padres, who have lost five in a row and are a season-low 10 games under .500, faced Houston's Darryl Kile with their starting eight in the lineup for only the ninth time this season.

"There's still a long way to go," third baseman Ken Caminiti said after a 10-6 loss to Houston. "We're not even in June yet. Now that we're getting guys back, we can get going."

The Padres fell behind 9-1 Thursday night before scoring four times in the fifth off Houston's Darryl Kile (6-2). Previously, Kile had allowed only two runs in the entire month of May.

"We came back after a horrible inning," San Diego manager Bruce Bochy said. "We dug ourselves too big a hole.

The Padres, who fell 10 games behind division-leading San Francisco, have given up 46 runs in their last five games. The last time the Padres were further from the division lead was the final day of the 1994 season.

Four shoot 66 in 1st round

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — There was a point during the first round of the Memorial Tournament when Tiger Woods was nine strokes out of the lead.

Then, just like that, he made an eagle and a birdie, turning what could have been his worst round of the year into an even-par 72, six strokes behind Billy Andrade, Tim Herron, Jesper Parnevik and Glen Day.

If Woods proved on Thursday at Muirfield Village that he is, after all, only human, he also proved that he is, above all, capable of superhuman things on the golf course.

On a wet day when soft, receptive greens made birdies plentiful, Scott Hoch was a stroke off the lead with a 67, while Phil Blackmar, Guy Boros and Ernie Els were at 68.

Jack Nicklaus, the 57-year-old founder of the Memorial and designer of the course, shot a 69.

Rice makes first CWS appearance

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Rice coach Wayne Graham remembers the ballpark where the College World Series is played, and it's a far cry from the Rosenblatt Stadium where his Owls play tonight in the school's first CWS appearance.

"This is not the first time I've been here," Graham said at Thursday's news conference. "I played here in 1962 for Dallas-Fort Worth in the American Association against Omaha. But the only thing that looks the same in the ballpark now is the light posts. I think those are the same.

"We were playing before about 1,000 people every night in what was an ordinary Triple-A ball park. This thing is Shangri-La now. It's beautiful what Omaha has done and what it's done for college baseball."

Graham, after a successful junior college coaching career in Texas, brought the Owls to the College World Series in his sixth year at the school. Rice is the 99th school to qualify for the NCAA Division I playoffs, which have been held in Omaha since 1950.

"The people who are putting this together don't realize what it means to coach down in Houston or southwest Texas or somewhere," he said. "This is the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. We're all trying to get to Omaha."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

U.S. Army captain opens up the world for sixth-graders

DEAR ABBY: My sixth-grade students and I would like to salute Capt. Michael Casper of the U.S. Army, currently stationed in Tuzla, Bosnia, with whom we became acquainted through your Operation Dear Abby holiday letter-writing campaign. Since November of last year, when he received and replied to a letter written by one of my students, Capt. Casper has become a friend, teacher and very special person in our lives.

Through him we have come to learn more in a personal way about our world. In fact, after hearing that the children near him had no school to attend because it was bombed, we recently completed a school-wide drive for pencils and other school supplies. As I write, a package is in the mail to Bosnia, where Capt. Casper will film the distribution of the supplies at a local refugee center and send us the videotape.

Fortunately, we have been able to correspond through e-mail. In his messages he challenges my students to learn about world geography and informs them about the various places where he's been stationed. He has demonstrated in many ways that he cares about my students.

Abby, in addition to recognizing this fine serviceman, I would like to thank you for setting up the program that brought us together. Keep up the good work.

GEORGANN COON,
SIXTH-GRADE TEACHER,
E.E. KNIGHT SCHOOL,
ELSIE, MICH.

DEAR MS. COON: Thank you for an upper of a letter. I have often said that my readers are the most thoughtful and generous people in the world. One of the most powerful forces for good is generated when people reach out to help each other.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old virgin attending high school. Lately there has been lot of controversy about handing out condoms in our school. As an educated teen-ager, I would like to tell all of the adults who are trying to terminate the distribution that they need to go outside their fantasy worlds and realize that many teen-agers are having unprotected sex because of the lack of availability of contraceptives and condoms.

The risks of unprotected sex are no longer short-lived, but can have lifelong effects and, in some cases, can be terminal.

It is ignorant to believe that if we tell people not to do something they will always listen. Education is the key to awareness, but when education fails, some form of protection must be available. The comparison heard on the popular television series "Beverly Hills, 90210" is that you can build a fence around a pool and lock the gate, but if there is even a possibility that a child might get in, why not teach him to swim?

MELISSA IN NORFOLK, VA.

DEAR MELISSA: Bravo! I couldn't have said it better.

***

DEAR ABBY: I thought you might get a kick out of this:

My crossword puzzle clue read, "a famous twin." Four spaces were allotted, so I wrote in "Abby."

Wrong! The correct answer was "Esau."

MARY WOOD SEALY,
NEW IBERIA, LA.

DEAR MARY: Nice try, though!

RLDS activities set here this weekend

The local Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints (RLDS) plans several activities this weekend. The guest speakers will be Richard L. Foster, regional administrator, and Kornelis (Kees) Compier, regional bishop.

A public reception will be held at the church located on 27th St. from 9-10 a.m. Saturday. Refreshments will be available. Both men will also answer questions about the "truths and myths" of the RLDS Church.

The community is invited, especially members of the Ministerial Alliance. Private home visits will be available Saturday afternoon per request.

Beginning at 10 a.m. Sunday morning, Compier, a native of Rotterdam, The Netherlands, will give a presentation of his native country.

A worship service will follow with Foster giving the message.

The public is invited to any or all of these activities. For more information contact Jean Burns, presiding elder, at 573-7446.

Prior to accepting a full-time church appointment, Compier worked as an electrotechnical purchaser for a shipbuilding firm in Rotterdam. He speaks English and German fluently.

Prior to accepting a full-time church appointment, Foster was a teacher in the Kansas City area, working with many inner-city youth and other youth organizations.

Astro-graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Saturday, May 31, 1997

In the year ahead you will come to the realization that your past efforts were not in vain. An old expectation you spent a lot of time developing will come into fruition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Dealings you have today with people with familiar track records should work out advantageously. However, you might not be as lucky with unfamiliar associates. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You possess qualities today that your associates lack. It could mean that you'll be able to achieve objectives that are beyond their abilities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your words will have great impact today. Listeners might not agree with everything you say, but they will be in harmony with your most important points.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Conditions in general appear to be very promising for you today. Through the benevolence of a friend, you may share in something that you didn't earn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When negotiating a significant matter today, let the other party establish the terms. He or she might open with a better deal than the one you'd propose.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might discover hidden benefits of a current project. Let these discoveries motivate you to work harder at its completion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Contacts you make today through social activities could play significant roles in your future affairs. Make a good lasting impression.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might be in a serious mood today; utilize this to your advantage. Follow your inner urges that incline you to do something meaningful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you'll be quite good at sorting out difficult situations for others. Try to apply these same abilities when you manage your personal affairs.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Move slowly today in your commercial ventures. All should work out to your satisfaction, provided that you're patient, prudent and thorough.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Bonds can be strengthened today with someone you've been having trouble communicating with recently. Understanding and forgiveness will replace animosity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Conditions will brighten up for you today as a troublesome responsibility will be lifted. This will occur through an unusual chain of circumstances.

Hope given Reagan '97 Freedom Award

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — U.S. presidents, admirals and generals saluted Bob Hope during a birthday celebration at which Nancy Reagan presented him with the 1997 Ronald Reagan Freedom Award.

The comedian, who turned 94 Thursday, was hailed as "a true American patriot" during the ceremony. Then Mrs. Reagan went to Hope's chair in the middle of the Beverly Hilton ballroom and hung the medal around his neck.

White-haired and frail, Hope accepted the award without comment.

The evening was a love feast by Republicans and others, and a celebration of Hope's more than 50 years of entertaining American troops.

Film clips of his many camp appearances were shown on the ballroom screens and narrated by Ronald Reagan before he fell ill with Alzheimer's disease.

"He is America's most honored citizen and our favorite clown," Reagan said.

Frances Langford, the singer who accompanied Hope on many of his overseas trips, reminisced about their adventures in North Africa and the South Pacific.

Secretary of Defense William Cohen delivered an erudite speech quoting Euripides, Alexander Pope and others, concluding: "Thanks for lighting the corners of our minds with laughter and hope."

Three other former presidents appeared via videotape. Gerald Ford recalled when Hope visited the area where the future president was serving in the Navy. Jimmy Carter was especially funny in his reminiscence of when Hope spent his 75th birthday at the White House.

"Instead of the Lincoln Bedroom, I offered him a night in Amy's treehouse," Carter joked.

George Bush recalled when Hope called him with the offer to entertain the troops in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War.

Bill Clinton advised his fellow golfer: "If you ever visit Greg Norman's house, be sure to take the elevator" — a reference to his own fall at the golf champion's residence.

The Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation presented the freedom award in recognition of "the courage of an individual who has promoted freedom around the world."

Hope was cited for his "tireless efforts on the frontlines of liberty."

The award has been presented to only four others: Mikhail Gorbachev, Yitzhak Rabin, King Hussein of Jordan, and retired Gen. Colin Powell.

Home-schooler wins national spelling bee

WASHINGTON (AP) — For a 13-year-old New York City girl who has been schooled at home, the tedium of spelling finally paid off. "Yeah," Rebecca Sealfon screamed, pumping her arms and leaping around the stage when she won this year's national spelling bee.

Since last summer, she tirelessly studied spelling word lists for up to three hours a day.

"You know, spelling is the most boring thing in the world," she told reporters Thursday at the close of the two-day Scripps Howard National Spelling Bee.

But her passion for winning was apparent. So nervous during the competition, she asked to wait her turn off stage. Rumors circulated that she was sick, but Rebecca said the event was just nerve-wracking.

"I couldn't stand it," she explained after winning the spelling marathon.

Nervous or not, Rebecca, who is home-schooled by her mother and placed eighth in last year's competition, mastered words, including "vernissage," "vaporetto" and "bourgade" to defeat Prem Murthy Trivedi, 11, of Howell, N.J.

"This was incredible luck," said Rebecca, sponsored by the New York Daily News. "There were words I did not know in every round."

In addition to winning $5,000, which she plans to save for college, she took home books and other prizes, including a laptop computer. Prem earned $4,000 for his second-place finish. Sudheer Potru, 13, of Beverly Hills, Mich., won the $2,500 third-place prize.

Some of the 245 contestants spelled words by syllables. But Rebecca spelled letter-by-letter, often stopping after each one to cup her hands over her mouth. "I was thinking what letter was next and I was whispering the letter to myself," she explained.

After each success, she raised her arms in the air and bounded off the stage.

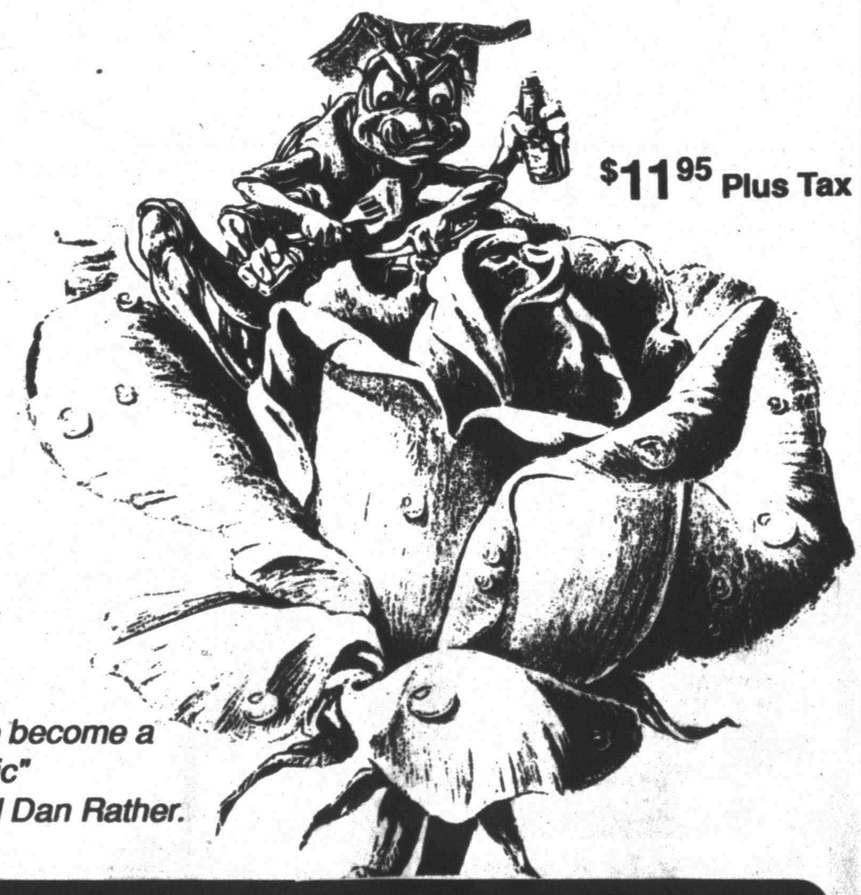

For the last nine rounds, she battled only Prem, who was competing in the national spelling bee for the third time. Prem lost after he added an extra "l" to the word "cortile," a courtyard.

Prem, who likes to study archaeology, swim and play chess and basketball, remained poised throughout the contest, calmly enunciating each letter into the microphone.

McVeigh jury begins deliberations

DENVER (AP) — More than two years after a truck bomb tore through the Oklahoma City federal building and killed 168 people, a jury of seven men and five women began deliberating today whether Army veteran Timothy McVeigh is to blame.

"Members of the jury, you will at this time retire and begin your deliberations," U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch said after an hour of legal instructions.

Matsch urged the sequestered panel to set aside sympathy, prejudice and public opinion as they deliberate the case of the worst act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

"You must completely disregard anything you have read, seen or heard outside the courtroom related to this trial," Matsch said. "You must not allow public opinion to play any role in your deliberations."

Matsch then read from the 11-count indictment that charges McVeigh with conspiracy and murder in the April 19, 1995, federal building blast. And he told them to set aside McVeigh's possible punishments if convicted, which include the death penalty.

"Under your oath as jurors, you cannot allow a consideration of the punishment .. to influence your verdict or even enter into your deliberations," Matsch said.

When the judge asked if the sequestered jurors felt well enough to deliberate, the all nodded. One, a man, turned to the juror next to him and grinned sheepishly.

After the jury retired for deliberations, McVeigh was smiling as he stood and shook hands with lawyer Rob Nigh. Another lawyer, Jeralyn Merritt, patted him on the back.

Marshals then escorted the 29-year-old Gulf War veteran through a door to his cell. He walked out with his hands buried in the pockets of his khaki pants.

In closing arguments Thursday, McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones also pleaded with jurors to rely on reason, not compassion. He urged them not to let sympathy rule this case like race ruled the O.J. Simpson murder trial.

"All of us understand the victims' plight. They are not the property of any side to this lawsuit. Their collective loss belongs to the country," Jones said.

Prosecutor Scott Mendeloff followed Jones' summation with the government's rebuttal, the final argument jurors heard.

"That fresh-faced young man over there is a mass murderer," Mendeloff said, pointing across the courtroom at McVeigh.

Earlier, Assistant U.S. Attorney Larry Mackey described how McVeigh set the fuse on the truck bomb within sight of the federal building's day-care center, with only a "wall of windows" to protect the children from the blast.

Tornado victims return to homes - or what's left

JARRELL (AP) — Residents of the area wiped out by a wicked tornado were allowed back onto the remains of their property Thursday, somewhat relieved after learning the death toll was capped at 27.

Figures initially released by authorities indicated as many as 50 people may have been killed by Tuesday's twister, which churned at more than 260 mph and ate up about 50 houses in its 5-mile-long, half-mile-wide wake. It was the state's worst tornado in a decade.

Officials said Wednesday they had 27 bodies and were still trying to locate 23 people, dead or alive. By Thursday morning, 28 were presumed dead, but that figure was lowered when somebody turned up safe, said Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Laureen Chernow.

The confusion was caused because authorities had a list of names of missing people and a morgue with 27 bodies. As the names were matched to the bodies, officials realized that many people had been counted twice.

Case workers from several crisis centers around the state continued their work with victims. Counselors accompanied homeowners as they toured their property for the first time.

"We've seen a wide range of emotions thus far," said Angie McCown of the Austin police victims' services division. "We have a lot of people still in shock. I'm not certain people know how to feel at this point. There's still a lot of sadness and anger.

"But I think the community has done an excellent job supporting one another. I think that is pretty much the beginning of the healing process here."

Relief crews say they have more than enough food, clothing and necessities thanks to the rapid response of area residents and local businesses. But money is still needed.

In a touching scene, a young boy arrived at the shelter and offered $300 — the money his family was going to spend on a vacation in San Antonio until they saw the Jarrell exit on Interstate 35 and decided to change their plans.

Local's nephew killed by twister

A family of five, victims of Tuesday's tornado in Jarrell, are relatives of Charles and Glenna Jones of Snyder.

Larry Paul Igo, 46, was the nephew of Glenna Jones. Mr. Igo, along with his wife and three children, died Tuesday when a killer tornado struck their home in Jarrell, north of Austin.

Friends of the Igos said Mr. Igo closed his auto parts store early because of the threatening clouds and went home. His wife, Joan Igo, 47 and an elementary school teacher, also went home early. Their home in the Double Creek subdivision was demolished, also killing their twin sons, John Martin Igo and Paul Wesley Igo, 15. Also killed was a daughter, Audrey Frances Igo, 17.

The family were active members of the Jarrell First Baptist church and were described as "musically talented."

Service for the family is set for 1 p.m. Saturday in the Georgetown First Baptist Church. Burial will follow in the Burial Land Cemetery in Jarrell with the Gabriel Funeral Chapel in charge of arrangements.

McKinley pleads guilty to charges

Former Snyder resident Tommy Brian McKinley pleaded guilty to federal charges of possession of stolen firearms in Lubbock's United States District Court this morning.

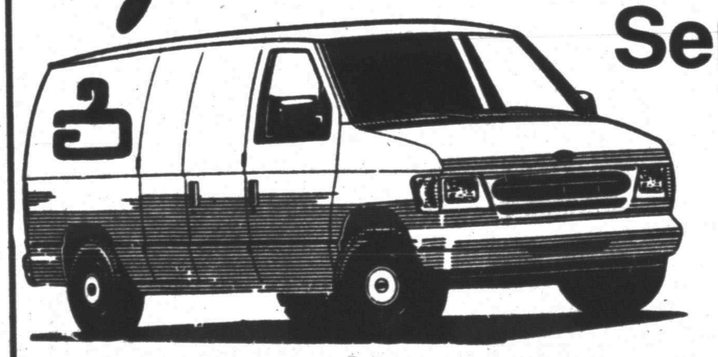

He is expected to be sentenced in July, according to assistant United States Attorney Tanya K. Pierce.

McKinley will await his sentencing in the Lubbock County Jail because his $5,000 bond was revoked on May 15 following an altercation in Lubbock.

McKinley, 48, was indicted on the federal charges on March 12 and pleaded not guilty.
