Collision of fronts stirs up wild weather

Midwestern tornadoes claim at least 11 lives

By The Associated Press

Ten people in Oklahoma and one in Minnesota were killed as swarms of tornadoes raced over the Midwest, ahead of a blinding storm that by today buried parts of Montana in nearly 5 feet of snow drifting 20 feet high. Hundreds of miles of highways were closed in the Plains.

More than two dozen tornadoes were confirmed in Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas and Oklahoma, created when a cold front stretching from South Dakota to Texas collided with record heat over much of the East, the National Weather Service reported.

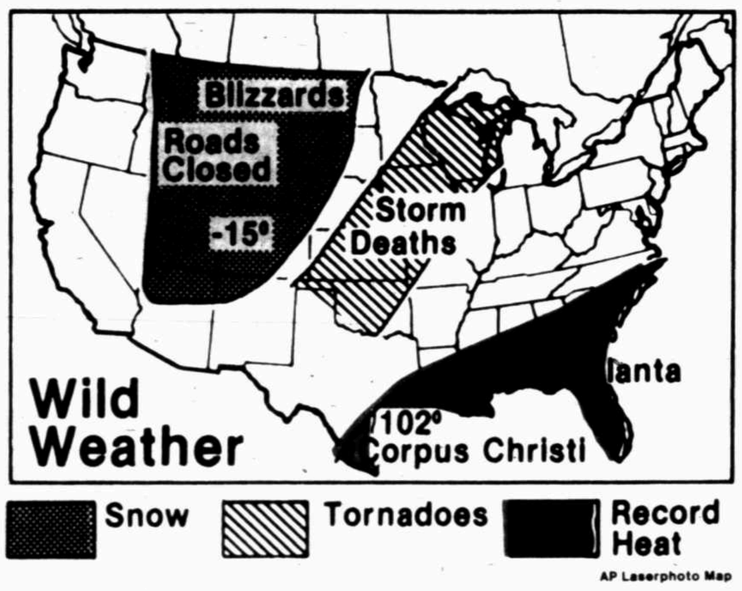

The worst tornadoes hit northeastern Oklahoma on Thursday night and early today. Civil Defense offices reported six people dead and 30 injured in Morris, a town of 1,300 people about 40 miles south of Tulsa, and one dead and 25 injured in Terlton, a town of 155 people about 30 miles west of Tulsa.

Three other tornado-related deaths were "scattered around" Okmulgee County, where Morris is located, Sheriff Gene Rice said. All survivors were evacuated from Morris, where National Guardsmen assisted local officials in rescue efforts.

"Downtown Morris was devastated," said Dennis Nickles of the Okmulgee County sheriff's department.

In Minnesota, 88-year-old Frances Schrag died of injuries after a twister hit her home and destroyed a shopping center in St. Anthony, just north of Minneapolis, Thursday night. Eighteen people were treated for injuries and five others were hospitalized.

As Thursday's tornadoes ripped through Oklahoma and Minnesota, extremes of heat and cold were reported in other parts of the nation.

Texas' cold temperatures shatter new record highs

By The Associated Press

A cold front was moving across Texas today, one day after portions of South Texas recorded record shattering high temperatures.

The front curved early today from North Central Texas into South Texas and cooler, much drier air moved into West Texas behind the front.

Texas was spared the severe weather that spawned killer tornadoes across Northeastern Oklahoma late Thursday and early today. At least seven persons were killed and about 30 were injured when tornadoes struck Morris, Terlton, Cleveland and Grove in Oklahoma.

Blowing dust was reported early today near Del Rio and fog reduced visibility to about two miles in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. It was clear over West Texas and cloudy over eastern and southern portions of the state.

Early morning temperatures were in the 70s across eastern and southern sections of the state and in the 40s and 50s through most of West Texas. Readings elsewhere were in the 60s. Extremes ranged from 41 at Amarillo to 75 at several locations in South Texas.

Record temperatures were set across many areas of the state Thursday as the mercury was pushed above the 100-degree mark at some areas in South texas. It was 107 at Alice, Kingsville and McAllen. Record highs for the date were set at Austin where it was 96, Corpus Christi had 102, Del Rio 103 and San Antonio had 93. San Angelo tied its record for the day with 96.

The reading at Austin shattered a 51-year-old record and at Corpus Christi the 102-degree reading set an all-time record.

Motel fire

Fire believed caused by a maintenance man working on the plumbing in one room of the Rodeway Inn, 3601 W. Wall, destroyed two rooms of the motel about 5 a.m. today. In addition, about 30 other rooms sustained heat and smoke damage. Nine fire department units responded to the call. Officials said the maintenance work was done late Thursday afternoon and the fire apparently smoldered in the wall for several hours before erupting into flames. Most of the damaged rooms were empty and no injuries were reported.

MMH will add interest to two-month-old bills

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite having the highest collections in the history of the hospital last month, Midland Memorial Hospital trustees and directors approved a new admissions policy in which an interest rate will be charged on accounts not paid after two months.

The almost $7 million in accounts receivable is increasing costs $3-5 per patient for each day spent in the hospital, according to MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson during a regular board meeting Thursday. If the amount could be invested as cash, "we'd earn nearly $500,000 in interest" per year, he said.

"It's not to make money that we're charging finance charges. It's just the cost of carrying accounts receivable is a real expense."

The majority of hospitals in the nation impose some sort of finance charge, Peterson said. Some have been charging interest since the mid-60s.

"If you don't receive tax money then you have to depend on collecting it operationally," he said. "This will hold down the costs to patients in the long run."

Under the policy, a person will be allowed 60 days in which to pay his or her bill. As of May 1, the monthly finance charge will become effective with discharged patients seeing the charges on their delinquent August bills.

The policy also will provide financial guidance and assistance for those who may not have the ability to foot the bill, Peterson said.

"This is broader than just imposing a finance charge."

With more emphasis placed on collecting bills at the time of admissions, the new policy still will include the pre-admission deposit. The deposit, which "has been a policy for quite some time," is for the "private-pay" portion of a bill, or that which most likely won't be covered by Medicare or other insurance.

According to Peterson, "We never can deny medical service if it's a life-threatening emergency" even if the patient cannot afford the pre-admission deposit. In elective cases, such as plastic surgery, a patient can be denied admission if he cannot pay the deposit, he said.

"This is just part of good financial management. It's just good business to receive your collectibles," Peterson said. "Our business is to provide health care, not to collect accounts receivable or act as a lending institution."

In other action, trustees and directors were given optimistic reports on the first six months of the fiscal year and a bleak prognosis from Trustee Tom Bruner, chairman of the finance committee.

March collections totaled more than $3.4 million and "are most likely the best experienced in the history of the hospital," according to a memorandum from MMH President Ray Branson.

Revenues exceeded the budget by $245,000 in March but patient days and the number of admissions were lower than expected.

'New chapter' spells U.S.-China technology pact

PEKING (AP) — President Reagan extolled the virtues of capitalism and democracy to a Chinese audience today and announced an agreement allowing sales of American nuclear technology to the world's most populous nation.

Reagan said the United States and China were writing "a new chapter" in their relationship, but Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang cautioned separately that U.S. ties with Taiwan were an obstacle to progress.

In a speech to a group of several hundred Chinese scientists, intellectuals and other officials, Reagan said, "Today, China's economy crackles with the dynamics of change ... China is beginning to reach out toward new horizons and we salute your courage."

Reagan was warmly applauded by the handpicked audience, many of whom understood English, when he said, "As China moves forward on this new path, America welcomes the opportunity to walk by your side.

"You will choose your own path to development," Reagan said. "But we are not surprised to see the fresh breezes of incentives and innovation sweeping positive changes across China."

Reagan also received standing applause at the end of the speech, delivered in the Great Hall of the People with the American and Chinese flags displayed side-by-side behind him on the podium.

Outside, several thousand people stood in Tiananmen Square behind barricades, waiting for a glimpse of the American leader.

Reagan's speech was to be broadcast later on Chinese television to an audience that White House officials estimated might number 200 million.

Reagan said the nuclear energy agreement, the product of three years of negotiations, would create broad opportunities for American firms to sell nuclear equipment to China and help build the country's nuclear power industry. He said the accord complies with U.S. nuclear nonproliferation standards.

Extolling the achievements of the capitalist economic system, Reagan said that nations which allow their people to think and work for themselves and profit from their own labor have become the nations that are "the most prosperous, progressive, dynamic and free."

Reagan visit to China making new friend of old foe

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

PEKING — China's old foe became China's new friend Thursday as President Reagan was welcomed to this capital of the world's most populous nation with colorful rites beneath bleak skies.

Although a final blast of winter weather swept through Peking and controversy erupted over the fact that he would not appear "live" on Chinese television, the president found the initial talks productive.

In conversations with China's 74-year-old president, Li Xiannian, Reagan, once a caustic critic of this nation's Communist government, promised that the United States and China will "work together as friends and neighbors."

"The differences between our two countries," he told Li, "amount to very little compared to our areas of agreement."

A short time earlier, when they met for the first time in the Great Hall of the People on historic Tiananmen Square, Li reported that he had read Reagan's recent statements. He indicated that he was especially impressed with Reagan's emphasis on the need for economic and political development of the Pacific community of nations.

"I share your views," The president of China told the president of the United States.

Texas movie dog not like Lassie

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — If Champ were human, he'd be Clint Eastwood.

If he doesn't get cut out in editing — and the editor would be wise not to make Champ mad — the pedigree Doberman pinscher will soon be featured in the new Louis Malle film shooting in Rockport, "Alamo Bay."

The movie is the story of a young woman living on the Texas coast where native fishermen and recent Vietnamese immigrants are in conflict.

Champ's "master," R.H. Peterson, owner of a kennel and co-owner of a guard dog company, is donating the $200 he earns on the film to the Gulf Coast Humane Society. He hopes the money will save an "outlaw" dog.

Peterson says he is interested in changing the image of "bad dogs," those thought to be naturally and excessively aggressive. Dobermans, German shepherds, pit bulls and Rottweilers suffer from this reputation, he says.

Peterson says biting incidents reflect man's influence, not any natural meaness on the part of the dog.

But he forgot to tell Champ.

The scene starring Champ involved a redneck, played by Peterson, sitting on the porch knocking back a few beers with Champ at his side. A Vietnamese boy was to walk by causing Champ to bare his teeth, snarl and run at the boy until his leash draws taut. Cut.

Smart Vietnamese boy. He completed his part long before Champ ever walked on the set.

The person agitating Champ off-camera during the dog's scene was a handler from Peterson's dog obedience school.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecasts rain Saturday for much of the East. Warm weather is due in the Southeast with cold weather expected on the northern Plains.

Cooler weekend, less wind forecast for Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

A slightly cooler but less windy weekend is being forecast by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Partly cloudy skies are predicted through Saturday, with lows near 50 and highs reaching the upper 70s. Winds tonight are expected to be from the south-southwest at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Saturday should have southerly 10 to 20 mph winds.

The high Thursday reached 92, just five degrees shy of the record for that date set in 1959. The overnight low of 44 was eight degrees warmer than the 36-degree mark set in 1946.

NATION

Cold weather that brought heavy snow to the northern Rockies collided with record heat in the East to produce severe thunderstorms today from Wisconsin to Missouri, while the East Coast enjoyed fair skies.

Turbulent air that spawned numerous tornadoes cleared Oklahoma by sunrise, but at least 10 people were known dead in the aftermath of twisters late Thursday and early today.

The upper Mississippi Valley, especially Illinois and Indiana, was the next likely target for high winds, thunderstorms and tornadoes as the air warmed up today, said forecaster Nolan Duke of the Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"Prime time is evening for it to re-ignite," Duke said.

Blizzard warnings over eastern Montana and northeastern Wyoming were extended to South Dakota, where the slow-moving storm was centered.

The town of Red Lodge, Mont., had 55 inches on the ground with more falling today, but at least one resident saw a bright side.

"It's a miserable storm, but it's a godsend," said Bob McCurdy, who operates a service station. "We really needed the moisture. The farmers were beginning to get worried."

Better weather was expected on both sides of the storm, with partly cloudy skies forecast for the Northeast and Southeast and sunshine for the Southwest and the Pacific Coast.

Cold weather will cling to the northern Rockies, where highs are expected to be only in the 30s today. Elsewhere, the forecast called for 50s in the northern Plains and the 60s on the West Coast. More seasonable readings in the 70s were forecast from New England and the Great Lakes into the central Plains, with 80s in the southeastern third of the nation and some 90s in southern Texas.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 11 in Yellowstone, Mont., to 78 in Key West and Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Here are some other reports from around the nation:

—East: Atlanta 64 rain; Buffalo 58 fair; Miami 72 fair; New York 48 fair; Philadelphia 46 fair; Washington 59 fair.

—Central: Chicago 65 cloudy; Dallas-Fort Worth 76 windy; Denver 24 cloudy; Des Moines 60 thunderstorms; Minneapolis-St. Paul 62 partly cloudy; New Orleans 74 cloudy; St. Louis 72 fair.

While neither Reagan nor Li mentioned the divisive issue of American arms sales to Taiwan, Li alluded to the controversy when he said, "We both hope our serious relations will continue to develop — although some obstacles exist."

While crowds were spare in this city of nine million Chinese as Reagan motorcaded to Tiananmen Square, White House spokesmen contended that the president's reception was "standard" for visiting dignitaries.

Reagan got on so well with Li, who is one year his senior, that he invited the Chinese president to visit the United States and Li accepted.

The president and his aides appeared gratified by the meeting with Li, which they described as "very good."

Li is not one of the two or three top leaders in the Beijing government, but Reagan's advysurs thought the session with Li bode well for the president's conferences wih Premier Zhao Ziyang on Friday and with Deng Xiaoping on Saturday.

In his talks with Zhao, who visited the White House earlier this year, Reagan will deal with global issues as well as bilateral matters.

The Chinese government would like to purchase arms from Washington and Reagan is interested in such a transaction.

After being welcomed by Li at the Great Hall of the People, Reagan and Mrs. Reagan were hosted by Li at a dinner.

In his toast, Reagan said: "I come to China representing the sincere desire of the American people to be good neighbors to the Chinese people."

He also declared that the future for the two nations is "bright with potential."

At the arrival ceremony, where an icy wind cut across Tiananmen Square, Reagan seemed especially impressed by a large group of Chinese youngsters who danced and waved flowers and brightly colored ornaments.

When he met with Li shortly after the ceremony ended, the president said, "one only has to look at the beautiful children we saw in the welcoming ceremenoy to know that it is our job as leaders to deliver a better world than the one we found . . . That is what we are all here for."

Li responded: "You said it very well. It is for the older generation to work for a better world."

The television dispute stemmed from the fact that Deputy White House Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver had reported in Washington recently that Reagan would communicate with the Chinese people via live television.

But, upon arriving here, American reporters learned the president will make no live television appearances. Instead, his appearances will be handled as part of the Chinese television evening news program or be taped for replay.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes contended that the controversy had been blown out of proportion and was an example of "this press corps feeding on itself." But reporters pointed out that the problem stemmed from Deaver's misleading comments.

White House plays down China's veto of live television appearance

Copley News Service

PEKING — White House officials stung by a Chinese foreign ministry veto of an expected live television appearance by President Reagan are blaming the incident on a media misunderstanding while trying to minimize its impact.

Presidential assistant Michael Deaver briefed reporters while in Washington that Reagan would be interviewed by Chinese journalists in a live show that would be seen by some 200 million Chinese viewers. But when the foreign ministry drew a firm negative line across the show, scheduled for Saturday, White House officials went into a damage control posture.

"There's never been any confusion that the thing will be run in its entirety," Deaver said Thursday. "There may have been some confusion about whether it would be fed live." Under the new arrangement, the interview will be taped Saturday morning by the Chinese television network CCTV, which will broadcast it at the conclusion of the evening news.

"The problem is there's no live television during the day. There's no live television in China," said Jim Baker, Reagan's chief of staff.

The incident was the major problem in a day of communications difficulties as Reagan began his historic visit to the Middle Kingdom. The situation might have passed as only a minor press controversy had it not indicated a tougher tone from China's foreign office leaders.

"It was the straw that broke the camel's back," said an administration official. "The Chinese had given up an awful lot. It was a last minute glitch." Because of the importance Peking places upon the Reagan trip, the Chinese had eased its bargaining on such items as the size of the American contingent and whether Mr. Reagan could use Air Force One and his armored limousine.

"I was expecting something like this. It's all part of the dealing that goes on," said a television reporter.

The incident sparked a significant confrontation between the traveling press corps and Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes only hours after the president arrived here. In a heated exchange, Speakes accused the media of feeding upon "a mistaken impression" of what Deaver actually had told a number of reporters in Washington.

Bill Plante of CBS waved an official transcript of one briefing in which Deaver plainly said the interview would be broadcast as it happens. Speakes shrugged and replied, "Well, he made a mistake."

"It didn't surprise me," Baker said. "It might have surprised Larry."

Speakes was asked if the tempest would damage the overall goals of the presidential trip. "No. Absolutely not," he shot back. "The president will have adequate opportunity to communicate with the Chinese people."

Various spokesmen said the interview, which will begin with an opening statement by Reagan, actually was now to be seen by a larger audience because of its new program position after the evening news. A Chinese broadcaster called the new slot 'golden time.' Speakes said there was no indication of Chinese unhappiness over the incident.

He repeated Baker's statement that it was customary for Chinese television not to show live programs during the day. He had no comment when a reporter noted that Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone appeared live on Chinese daytime television during a recent visit.

Hospital bills will add interest

Patient days fell 1,960 under the budget for the year-to-date and 484 under the March budget. Admissions were down 4 percent for the year-to-date.

Revenues over expenses for the six-month period totaled $227,000, according to Bruner. An increased utilization of ancillary services such as laboratory, X-ray, respiratory therapy and pharmacy, however, were responsible for expenses being higher than anticipated.

With indigent patient charges climbing $202,000 above the March budget and the arrival of "a typically low census period — the summer months," Bruner emphasized caution. "There are some items we're monitoring and will watch closely," he said, referring to the bad debt and indigent care costs.

Directors approved payments of $110,444 for indigent care costs at the hospital. Another $66,000 was paid to Fort Worth Children's Hospital as the second installment in a new agreement with MMH. Most babies with complicated conditions are referred to the Forth Worth hospital for neo-natal care.

Indigent care costs total $187,000 over the budget for the year-to-date. According to Peterson, the majority of the increase in indigent care is due to obstetric complications.

General killed

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A three-star Air Force general flying a "specially modified" secret plane was killed when the jet crashed in a rugged desert area on the Nevada Test Site, authorities said.

Lt. Gen. Robert M. Bond's plane went down about 10:45 a.m. Thursday on the sprawling super-secret nuclear testing facility, the Air Force said.

Bond, 54, was vice commander of the Air Force Systems Command, according to a statement released from the command at Andrews Air Force Base in Washington, D.C.

Air Force officials refused to say what type of plane Bond was flying.

Libyans leave London

LONDON (AP) — Libyans left their London embassy today to start their journey home, ending an 11-day siege that began when a sniper in the building sprayed gunfire at dissidents and killed a British policewoman.

"The siege is over," declared a spokesman for Scotland Yard. "All the Libyans have left the embassy."

The Libyans began emerging from the embassy at St. James's Square at midmorning in groups of five, led by an unidentified Libyan who had been acting as go-between. Thirty Libyans were escorted into waiting vans. Video pictures of the evacuation, which had not been announced in advance, were aired by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Police motorcyclists cleared the way for the convoy, which headed west across the city. A dozen white police vehicles escorted the convoy and a police helicopter circled overhead.

The Libyans were taken to a "secure government building," where they would be asked to identify themselves and "invited" to answer questions about the shooting that sparked the siege, said a Home Office spokesman who asked not to be identified. He did not specify the building's location.

From there, the Libyans were to be taken to Heathrow Airport. A Libyan plane was due at the airport at 4 p.m. (10 a.m. EST). The plane filed a flight plan to leave four hours later, airport officials said.

It was not known if the gunman who opened fire from the embassy was among the Libyans who left the embassy.

Police "satisfied themselves that the Libyans were not carrying arms or explosives," said a Scotland Yard spokesman who also spoke on the condition that he not be named. He would not say how police reached the conclusion the Libyans were not armed, leaving open the question of whether they were searched.

Policewoman Yvonne Fletcher, 25, was killed April 17 while assigned to monitor a peaceful demonstration against the regime of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy. Eleven dissidents were injured by the gunshots, which were fired from an embassy window. British police and sharpshooters immediately ringed the embassy.

Britain broke relations with Libya on Sunday and demanded the Libyans holed up in the embassy leave the country within a week. The beachfront British Embassy in Tripoli, Libya, also was to be closed.

Police sources said today officers would not enter the Libyan Embassy until midnight Sunday, when the diplomatic break becomes official. Until then, the square will remain cordoned off in case there are explosives in the building, said the sources, who declined to be identified.

In Tripoli, a spokesman for the 14 British diplomats remaining in Libya said, "It's good news to hear they are moving in London."

Home Secretary Leon Brittan was attend Miss Fletcher's funeral today at Salisbury Cathedral, along with Police Commissioner Sir Kenneth Newman and hundreds of her colleagues.

An unidentified fellow officer sprinted across St. James's Square before dawn today and retrieved her cap, which had lain in the besieged square near where she fell.

Thirty Britons from Tripoli, including Ambassador Oliver Miles' wife, daughter and three sons, emerged Thursday from a plane at Gatwick Airport south of London. Miles' sons, Hugh, Tom and Joe, waved a big Union Jack bearing the embassy crest as they left the plane.

"It's marvelous to be back," said Miles' wife, Julia.

Twisters hit Minnesota, Oklahoma

Blizzard warnings for eastern Montana and northeastern Wyoming were extended this morning to western South Dakota, where the storm was centered with winds blowing steadily at 30 to 40 mph.

Just under 60 inches of snow were on the ground by today in Red Lodge, Mont., where Police Chief Smokey Owen declared it the worst storm since 1956. Owen could not find his patrol car under the snow and said there was "no place to put the snow" that drifted 20 feet high outside some businesses.

A search for four people who had gone fishing Wednesday in Sheridan, Wyo., was abandoned Thursday when plows and even snowmobiles were stopped by 2 feet of snow on U.S. 14, said Johnson County Sheriff Bill Johnson. The wind chill dropped the temperature below zero.

Scores of state and county roads and large sections of Interestates 80 and 90 were closed in Montana, Wyoming and South Dakota. A rancher in Wright, Wyo., was host Thursday night to about 30 motorists plus highway patrol officers and sheriff's deputies.

"I think it's a mass camp-in," said Highway Patrol dispatcher Bill Keetley.

Thunderstorms, some of them severe, dominated the country from Wisconsin to Arkansas this morning as the tornado danger dipped temporarily, said forecaster Nolan Duke of the Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

However, "we're looking at some more real problems for the upper Midwest, with lots of severe weather for Illinois and Indiana and the whole upper Mississippi Valley," as the air warmed up late today and tonight, Duke warned.

Temperatures varied wildly on the two sides of the cold front. It was 20 degrees in Custer, S.D., Thursday night, while on the eastern side of the state the mercury hit the mid-70s in the afternoon.

At least eight high-temperature records fell Thursday, with the 102 degrees at Corpus Christi, Texas, setting a record for all of April. Other records included the 89 at Charleston, S.C., and 82 at Beckley, W.Va.

Attorney faces political fallout after Estes' remarks in murder trial

FRANKLIN (AP) — A district attorney who reopened a 20-year-old murder case based upon the unsubstantiated testimony of convicted conman Billie Sol Estes now faces political fallout that is providing campaign fuel for his re-election opponent.

Estes appeared before a grand jury last month and said that the late President Lyndon B. Johnson ordered the killing of a federal agriculture official because he feared the official could link him to Estes' illegal activities.

The allegations were dismissed by former Johnson aides as the rantings of a "pathological liar" whose daughter is selling a book about his life.

Now the backlash to Estes' testimony is dogging the campaign of Robertson County District Attorney John Paschall, who reopened the investigation into the killing.

His challenger in the May 5 Democratic primary, Jimmie McCullough, says the one-term incumbent hasn't been tough enough on violent criminals. But he also is quick to criticize Paschall for his handling of the Estes testimony.

Inmate takes stand in own defense

EDINBURG (AP) — Eroy Brown took the stand this morning in his own defense and told jurors he knew two prison officials were capable of carrying out their threats to murder him the day he killed them in self-defense.

Yesterday the 33-year-old former Texas Department of Corrections inmate cried out and sobbed uncontrollably, halting his murder trial temporarily, startling jurors and causing courtroom specators to weep in sympathy.

Brown's outburst came during cross-examination of the state's star witness, inmate James Solomon, who testified earlier he saw Brown drill a bullet through the head of prison farm manager Billy Max Moore at point-blank range in April 1981 while Brown was a trustee inmate at the Ellis Unit.

Defense attorney Craig Washington kept Solomon on the stand all day pointing out inconsistencies in the testimony he gave Monday and his earlier statements to law enforcement officers and investigators.

Solomon testified in the first of two trials Brown faced on charges of killing Warden Wallace Pack in the same incident.

Brown's first trial ended in a hung jury with one woman voting guilty because she said she had a dream that told her to.

The second jury found Brown innocent of capital murder charges in November 1982, deliberating less than three hours before reaching their decision.

Solomon admitted that he had lied under oath during the first trial. After hours of cross-examination challenging his credibility, Solomon said he would never tell a lie that would hurt a fellow convict. Brown then lept to his feet and cried, "but you hurt me. I keep having to defend myself."

"Eroy, Eroy sit down," said his attorneys, pulling him down to his chair.

State District Judge Darrell Hester called a brief recess.

During the recess, with his client weeping in the courtroom, Washington sat on the floor of the hallway outside surrounded by friends, reporters and staff and cried.

"I can't take it anymore," said Washington, who has represented Brown through all three trials.

"I've worked on this 'til two in the morning, for weeks, for years. I know everything they're going to say, every lie they're going to tell. I can't take the pressure anymore."

Walker County District Attorney Frank Blazek, whose case against Brown so far this trial has consisted of Solomon's testimony and testimony from a prison official who did not see the event, a ballistics expert and a medical examiner, said Washington "takes it all so seriously."

After the recess, Brown apologized for giving way to his frustration.

Judge Hester reminded jurors not to read the newspaper or watch the news and recessed court.

After close of court, Washington, Brown and Schaffer sat in a circle and prayed. Washington put his arm around Brown and talked to him quietly.

Brown, who was weeping, apparently said he felt all alone in an area that is largely Hispanic, with few black faces in the courtroom.

Washington looked to the observers, many of whom remained at the close of court, and said in a louder voice to Brown, "Are you alone?"

To which several of the observers replied, "No" and "Hell, no."

The observers, about a dozen men and women, said they did not know Brown, but had been following the case and came to lend moral support.

Mondale courts voters in El Paso, blasts Reagan's fiscal policies

EL PASO (AP) — Democratic presidential contender Walter Mondale, courting voters in this economically depressed border city, said the financial problems of El Paso and other border areas are a direct result of President Reagan's fiscal policies.

During a campaign swing through Texas, the former vice president told a crowd of 200 supporters Thursday the president's policies were a "dagger in the heart of El Paso."

"He (Reagan) has turned his back on this part of the state of Texas," Mondale said at a downtown rally that was cut short by winds that gusted up to 30 mph.

Mondale also visited Fort Worth, Saginaw and San Antonio Thursday. He was stumping in Lubbock today.

Throughout his Texas visits, Mondale emphasized how important Texas is to his political success, saying this year Texans may decide the Democratic candidate.

"This time, you're the boss," he said.

Elsewhere around Texas Thursday, U.S. Senate candidate and state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, decried the use of Mexican workers in the United States and told a news conference in Laredo that the practice may violate federal rules.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, speaking at rallies in Fort Worth and Houston, blasted Texas' delegate selection rules, saying they were as unfair as the voter registration system in Mississippi, where a voter must register twice.

"You've got to vote twice to make it nice," said Jackson, referring to the May 5 Democratic primary and the precinct meeting that follow later that day.

"In Texas, unlike any of the other 49 states, you've got to vote in the daytime, then come back at night to vote for me," he said. "That's designed to discourage us — to break our spirit."

At a morning rally at stockyards in Fort Worth, Mondale wooed Texas fans waving "Howdee Fritz" and "No quitting Fritz" banners.

The front-runner, campaigning in Texas two days before his chief opponent, U.S. Sen. Gary Hart, arrives in the Lone Star State for a major swing, attacked inconsistencies in Hart's campaign speeches.

He said Hart says different things to different people.

Mondale said he, on the other hand, is "the people's Democrat, and the same person in Texas and New York."

At an elementary school in Saginaw, Mondale discussed the nation's future with 35 students on topics ranging from the nuclear threat to drug abuse.

Mondale asked his "class" what worried them the most about their future, and all of them raised their hands when he asked how may feared nuclear annihilation.

Wife testifies in ultralight murder trial

SHERMAN (AP) — Shari Bower testified at her husband's capital murder trial that she could not remember where her husband was the day four men were killed in an ultralight airplane hangar.

Mrs. Bower, testifying for the defense, was the final witness Thursday before both sides rested. Final arguments were scheduled for today, after which the case goes to the jury.

If convicted, Bower could face a sentence of death by lethal injection.

Mrs. Bower testified that her husband left home early in the morning of Oct. 8 and did not return home until 6:30 p.m. when he came home for dinner.

She said when Bower returned, "he was in his normal, good spirits."

Investigators have said the four men were killed between 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

Mrs. Bower said the two could not remember where Bower was because, "it was the only Saturday in October that we really didn't do anything specific."

Bower, a chemical salesman, is charged in the slayings of Philip Good, 29, a Grayson County sheriff's deputy; Jerry Mac Brown, 52, a Sherman interior designer; Ronald Mayes, 39, a former Sherman police officer; and Bob G. Tate, 51, a Denison building contractor.

All four had been shot repeatedly with a .22-caliber weapon. Their bodies were found at Tate's B&B Ranch, northeast of Sherman.

Mrs. Bower testified that her husband at one time owned a .22-caliber Ruger pistol but lost it during a hunting trip in August or September.

Investigators said one of two ultralight aircraft was missing from the hangar when the bodies were discovered. Relatives said the men had gone to the ranch to meet a potential buyer of an ultralight.

The prosecution presented a witness who testified she had seen Bower in the company of Good in Sherman the month before the murders. Bower has said he was never in Sherman.

Nun to turn government witness

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A federal prosecutor says a Catholic nun has agreed to turn government witness under an arrangement which could free her from a charge of conspiracy to transport illegal aliens.

Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp, 36, of Fort Wayne Ind., applied for "pretrial diversion," on Thursday, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe.

Under the agreement, the nun waived her right to a speedy trial and will be on probation for one year, Wolfe said. If the probation period is completed to the government's satisfaction, the charge against Sister Dianne will be dropped, the prosecutor said.

Muhlenkamp's attorney, Robert Yzaguirre, wouldn't comment on the agreement.

"I'm just not going to do nothing," said Yzaguirre, who first denied the agreement and then confirmed it.

A defense attorney for church worker Stacey Lynn Merkt, said he had spoken with Yzaguirre who said no concrete agreement had been reached.

"Yzaguirre told me that this morning they filed the motion and the U.S. attorney asked her to tell them what she knew," said Daniel Sheehan, a Washington-based attorney.

"The government told Yzaguirre that they would decide later if they wanted to use what she knew and if they'd giver her probation in exchange.

"Yzaguirre didn't think they were too hot on using her because she agrees with Stacey on moral grounds. I guess they changed their minds," he said.

Ms. Merkt, 29, of Colorado Springs, Colo., attended her pre-trial hearing Thursday afternoon. Trial is scheduled to begin next week.

At the hearing, U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela ruled in favor of a motion asking the federal government to turn over all statistical information and internal policy statements regarding Salvadoran aliens.

Defense attorneys intend to argue the Salvadorans were bona fide refugees seeking political asylum and Ms. Merkt, therefore, was not transporting illegal aliens.

Sister Dianne, behind the wheel of a Catholic Diocese-owned car, and Ms. Merkt were stopped by Border Patrol agents before dawn Feb. 17 on a deserted South Texas highway. A Dallas Times Herald reporter and three Salvadorans were with them in the car.

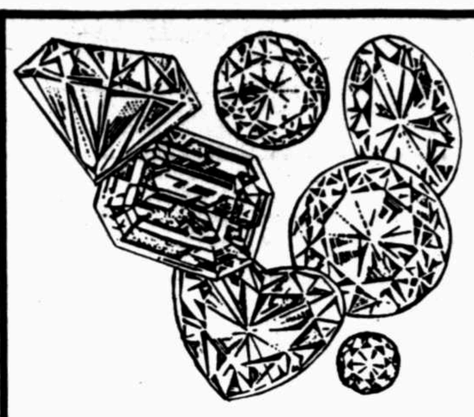

Reporter Jack Fischer has not been indicted. Federal misdemeanor charges of illegal entry filed against the two Salvadorans were dropped Thursday.

Wolfe said Yzaguirre reached the agreement with Assistant U.S. Attorney John Smith of Brownsville.

Sheehan said the nun's testimony wouldn't hurt his client's case.

He said Yzaguirre told him Sister Dianne disputes statements made by the arresting officers that her driving was erratic and gave them cause to stop the car.

Sheehan said although there is "nothing particularly damaging" in what she might say, he intends to try to block her testimony by arguing that communications between Ms. Merkt and Sister Dianne are protected by the first amendment guaranteeing religious freedom.

Teen faces life in bankers deaths

IVANHOE, Minn. (AP) — Saying the defense was "crippled" by a judge's decision not to allow key evidence, the attorney for Steven Jenkins said he will appeal the farmboy's convictions in the ambush shooting deaths of two bank officers on an abandoned farm.

Defense attorney Allan Swen Anderson originally had planned to argue that the 18-year-old Jenkins was under duress from his father, James Jenkins, when the two bankers were slain Sept. 29 on a 10-acre farm the elder Jenkins had lost to the victims' bank.

But Anderson told The Associated Press on Thursday the duress argument was abandoned after Judge Walter Mann ruled before the trial that a psychiatric report, saying that Steven Jenkins had a "psychiatrically ill" relationship with his father, could not be admitted as evidence.

"I couldn't do a thing without the psychiatrist," Anderson said in an interview. "If you don't have a psychiatrist in your duress defense, all you do is parade the relatives (of the defendant) before the jury, and they always appear to be self-serving."

A jury found Steven Jenkins guilty Thursday of first-degree murder in the death of bank president Rudy Blythe Jr., 42, and second-degree murder in the death of loan officer Deems "Toby" Thulin, 37.

Outside the courtroom, Anderson told reporters that Jenkins, who had been living at the attorney's home in Granite Falls since late December, "is like my own son... I love that boy."

A first-degree murder conviction in Minnesota carries an automatic sentence of life in prison, with a minimum 17 years being served before parole. Under the state's sentencing guidelines, a second-degree murder conviction calls for a maximum 10 years in prison. The two sentences could be served concurrently or consecutively.

The jury of seven women and five men deliberated for nearly 11 hours before reaching the verdict. Jenkins held Anderson's hand when the verdict was read and began crying as he was hugged by his mother and sister before being taken away in handcuffs.

Anderson asked Mann if Jenkins could continue living at his house until the sentencing, but Mann denied the request and ordered Jenkins turned over to the custody of the Lincoln County sheriff's department. The judge then set sentencing for May 22.

Anderson said he will appeal the verdict to the Minnesota Supreme Court after Jenkins is sentenced. The attorney also said he probably will ask that Jenkins be freed pending the appeal.

The defense contended it was James Jenkins who killed the bankers on the vacant farm two miles north of Ruthton in southwestern Minnesota. James Jenkins had owned the dairy farm but lost it to Blythe's bank after going bankrupt in 1980. Three days after the killings, James Jenkins died in Texas, an apparent suicide, and his son turned himself in to authorities.

Anderson wanted to introduce evidence that James Jenkins had made numerous threats to kill Blythe and other people, was cruel to animals and had a violent temper. But the judge ruled the evidence inadmissible.

Anderson said he will argue in his appeal that the judge's rulings "crippled my ability to show even more motive (for the father).

Hotel workers reach agreement with Hilton

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Negotiators for striking hotel workers and the city's two Hilton hotels reached agreement today on most language for a new contract except the date for pay raises, a union official said.

"We have really probably reached a settlement on the language; there are no language issues on the table," Jeff McColl, secretary-treasurer of Culinary Union Local 226, announced as an all-night meeting broke up at 4:10 a.m.

"The only issue we have is the trigger dates for wages and fringes. We hoped we would get it done tonight but everbody just dried up," he said.

The two Hilton hotels represent 10 percent of all the hotel rooms here, where 32 hotel-casinos have been struck for 26 days by four unions.

McColl said he could not reveal the total money figure of the contract. "We have a figure but the question is the effective date," he said.

Agreement with Hilton had been anticipated but a top union official warned some hotels may hold out "for a year or two" even if other hotels negotiating as the Nevada Resort Association reach agreement on a new pact.

The NRA has offered a $1.34 an hour increase over five years, but the unions are seeking a wage package similar to an agreement calling for a $1.94 an hour raise over four years that was signed with 20 independent hotels before the strike.

Set clocks forward Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daylight-saving time begins Sunday at 2 a.m. and across America people will be setting their clocks forward one hour.

The exceptions are in Arizona, Hawaii and most of Indiana, which remain on standard time.

The Census Bureau issued a report Thursday showing population levels in each of the country's time zones and not surprisingly, the Eastern time zone is way ahead.

The bureau found that 114 million people — 50.5 percent of the population — live on Eastern time. That is followed by 30.1 percent on Central time, 13.9 percent on Pacific time and 5 percent on Mountain time.

The smallest populations are on Alaskan time, 0.2 percent, and Hawaii-Aleutian time, which covers 0.4 percent, based on data from the 1980 census. That headcount put the total U.S. population at 226.5 million; it has since grown to nearly 235 million.

"When Michael comes to the courtroom, he's always prepared. He was very helpful to our Grand Jury."

Lawyer's daughter guilty of murder

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Attorney Leonard Boudin stood with the defendant before the judge, as he has with many others for many years. But this wasn't any other defendant. It was his only daughter, and she was pleading guilty to murder.

Boudin

With his wife sitting a few rows away weeping and holding pictures of her grandson, Boudin stood stiffly at the defense table as his daughter, Kathy, agreed to a plea bargain that will keep her in prison and away from her family until the year 2001.

It was perhaps the toughest courtroom moment ever for the prominent 71-year-old civil liberties lawyer, who only two days earlier had been arguing a case before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judge David Ritter, presiding Thursday as Miss Boudin pleaded guilty to murder and robbery in the 1981 Brink's holdup, looked up from his bench at one point to tell Boudin, "I am sure this is a difficult day for you, sir."

Boudin and his wife, Jean, have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars since their daughter's arrest 30 months ago. They have traveled long distances to attend court sessions and show their support.

Boudin hired a team of top lawyers who mounted a prolonged and sophisticated defense. They sought and won changes of venue. They challenged scientific evidence offered by the prosecution in preliminary hearings. They scrutinized prospective jurors.

Now it was all over. With jury selection incomplete, Miss Boudin decided to avoid a trial and plead guilty in the bungled $1.6 million holdup of a Brink's truck that left a guard and two police officers dead.

Three people, including Miss Boudin's husband David Gilbert, had already been convicted and are serving 75-years-to-life sentences. The trial of Miss Boudin's codefendant, Samuel Brown, will continue.

Outside of court, Boudin was somber and bemused as he spoke to reporters of his daughter's decision to plead guilty.

"I can't look at this thing just as a lawyer. She's not just a client. This is a daughter," he said, eyes glistening.

Mrs. Boudin, who had sat in the back of courtroom crying softly and fingering photographs of Miss Boudin's 3-year-old son, did not speak.

Boudin earlier in the week had been arguing in the Supreme Court against government restrictions on travel to Cuba. In a long career, he has defended anti-war activists like Dr. Benjamin Spock and the Berrigan brothers, and represented Paul Robeson in his battle to win a passport after the entertainer was touched by McCarthyism.

Though his daughter had been an opponent of the legal system he embraced, Boudin spoke with pride of her activities as a youth in political and social issues.

"In the very early days of high school, she worked with poor people," he said. "At Bryn Mawr, she organized a two-day conference on civil rights."

Senator sexually abused at age 5

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., who says she was sexually abused by a 60-year-old neighborhood man when she was 5, is urging parents to be explicit in warning their children about which adult behavior is wrong.

Hawkins

"It affects you for a lifetime," Mrs. Hawkins said of the molestation, which occurred when her family lived in California. Equally traumatic, she said, was her ensuing court appearance before a judge who thought she was lying about the incident.

Mrs. Hawkins, 57, made her unplanned and very difficult disclosure of the childhood episode — she had never even told her husband — at Thursday's opening session of the Third National Conference on Sexual Victimization of Children, sponsored by the Children's Hospital, National Medical Center.

She and other speakers told parents to be candid with their children about the danger of sexual abuse.

"I'm lucky, I told my mother," she said, adding that her parents believed her, supported her and helped her avoid lasting problems from the incident.

Mrs. Hawkins said the elderly neighbor who once reached inside her clothing had attracted children to his home by giving them candy and toys, and offering to baby-sit while their mothers went shopping.

She said the unidentified man involved was taken to court after her mother checked with other parents and learned that several neighborhood children had suffered similar abuse.

But when she appeared in court, Mrs. Hawkins said, "I was embarrassed and humiliated" because the judge treated her as if she were lying.

The elderly man was released and continued to abuse children, she said.

Now, she said, "when children complain, I believe them."

Mrs. Hawkins urged parents to listen to their children, and to warn them in explicit terms about wrong behavior, shunning vague talk about "improper hugs."

"The delicateness of the subject is for a bygone era, the Victorian era," she said.

Kee McFarlane, of the Child Sexual Abuse Diagnostic Center in Los Angeles said that simply warning children to say "no" isn't enough. "I know of hundreds of cases of children who said no, who begged no, and it didn't help," she said.

Supervisors indicted

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Two supervisors in the Public Works Department have become the seventh and eighth city workers indicted in the past year for alleged corruption in the city snow removal program.

John Chirchella and Mario DeQuattro were charged by a federal grand jury Thursday with one count apiece of extortion. The two allegedly joined a scheme, involving at least eight private contractors, to extort $40,000 from the city, said U.S. Attorney Lincoln C. Almond.

The indictments came on acting Mayor Joseph R. Paolino Jr.'s first day in office as successor to Vincent A. Cianci Jr., who has received a five-year suspended sentence for assault in an unrelated case.

Sentence may be light

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb. (AP) — The Rev. Everett Sileven's eight-month jail sentence for contempt of court could be mitigated if he gives assurances that all former pupils of the illegal Faith Christian School have enrolled in state-certified schools, the judge said.

Sileven told Cass County District Judge Ronald Reagan on Thursday he wanted to end the 7-year feud between the state and Faith Christian School, which state courts ruled illegal because its teachers were not certified. Supporters say the school is an extension of the church and thus not subject to state control.

Reagan said Sileven could be released temporarily from jail if he makes the $10,000 cash bond. He would have to return to court Sept. 1 for completion of his sentence.

Powers rewarded

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — If you have paranormal powers and can read minds or other such spooky stuff, a group at Marshall University will pay you $1,000.

Don Chezik, chairman of the Psychology Department and a member of the group, says he thinks the prize will never be claimed.

The group offering the prize calls itself REASON, an acronym standing for Research, Education and Science Over Nonsense.

"We really want to see people who believe they have paranormal powers," Chezik said this week. "But the fact is, nowhere is there any scientific evidence that such paranormal events exist."

The group, which held its first public meeting Tuesday, is composed largely of psychologists and psychology students.

Chezik said REASON is willing to pay the reward only if any proffered paranormal activity can hold up under scientific scrutiny.

Judge refuses to quit

DENVER (AP) — Saying his blindness was no secret when he was appointed to the bench, a judge has refused to quit a non-jury murder case in which the defense says a videotaped confession is crucial.

Juvenile Judge Dana Wakefield, who has been blind since birth, told defense lawyer Maureen Cain on Thursday that a "videotape witness is no different from a live witness." Ms. Cain had argued that her 17-year-old client's "demeanor and innuendo" on the tape would be impossible to describe to Wakefield.

Wakefield, a judge for 4½ years, said Colorado laws on the reasons for disqualifying a judge from a case did not include blindness.

Evidence not revealed

DALLAS (AP) — A defense lawyer says he doesn't see a "thimbleful" of evidence against an immigration court clerk charged with posing as a judge and conspiring with her husband to collect $2,600 from an illegal alien seeking political asylum.

Annette Stern Gersh was placed on paid leave Wednesday after her arrest. An indictment stated that she conspired with her husband, Samuel Ray Gersh, to extract the money from Mehdi Sarkhosh, an Iranian. The husband pleaded innocent Wednesday in federal court to a similar charge.

The couple's lawyer, Stanley I. Weinberg, said Mrs. Gersh would plead innocent at her arraignment May 4.

THE BETTER HALF

"I don't think of myself as 'fat.' I think of myself as being 'well-rounded'!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, April 28, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: President James Monroe, actor Lionel Barrymore, and "Charlie Chan" star Sidney Toler were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: playwright Robert Anderson, Ann-Margaret, singer Blossom Dearie and writer Harper Lee. Wonderful things are on the horizon. Surround yourself with positive people. Head off financial complications by meeting your obligations on time. Mate both inspires and motivates you. Take the advice of a Pisces who has your best interests at heart. Do not buy something on credit unless you really need it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Use the phone to save unnecessary travel and expense. Agreements negotiated today will prove highly profitable. Work on your own whenever possible. Exercise greater tact with loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An action-packed day lies ahead. Sign contracts quickly. A community meeting gives you a chance to make valuable contacts. A personal relationship requires careful handling. Try to be more patient.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make better use of your contacts. Doing a favor for a neighbor will win you a friend for life. A romance with a Capricorn should be happy. Family ties grow stronger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Weigh all your options before making a major decision. An older person may try to put in his or her two cents. Keep your emotions under control when dealing with petty people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Real estate ventures are especially lucrative today. Work moves along at a smoother pace. Cut out unnecessary expenses and calories. Exercise does wonders for your figure and self-confidence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A change in romance is possible, but only if you make the first move. Exercise caution with both your money and your energies. Family gatherings are fun if few secrets are revealed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An original idea requires a lot of work to make it profitable. A friend or relative offers valuable advice. Buy essentials only if going shopping. Keep out of a power struggle between friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An important alliance must be handled carefully if is to remain intact. An unexpected windfall lets you take off for a fun-filled weekend. Financial worries are a thing of the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not overextend yourself financially or you could end up in real pickle. Seeing an old friend triggers a wonderful money-making idea. Move on it at once. Romance is looking up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Working on weekends may improve the financial picture but cause friction with family members. Your loved ones want more of your time. Reducing expenses could be more helpful than increasing your income.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Quiet discussions with mate or relative help you get at the root of a problem. A letter from home brings cheery news. Mutual resources may cause some concern.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A last-minute development could put a damper on some social plans. Change course without grumbling and you will be much happier. The feedback you get from a youngster is very encouraging.

NBC News needs change for better

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence K. Grossman officially takes command as president of NBC News on Monday:

Dear Larry:

If the ratings for "Nightly News" and "Today" aren't better by tomorrow, you're in trouble.

Just kidding.

Actually, ratings are the tip of the iceberg. You've got worse troubles beneath the surface. David Brinkley may have said it best when he left NBC for ABC three years ago. He said NBC seemed stodgy and complacent. He said NBC didn't have the drive to be a leader.

To some, NBC News seems to have a second-class mentality ingrained from years chasing Walter Cronkite, Dan Rather and "60 Minutes." The perception is that NBC News lacks innovative ideas, unique programs or a distinctive style.

When there's an assassination or a disaster, who do viewers think of first? CBS, perhaps ABC, but not NBC. When John Chancellor was "Nightly News" anchor and President Reagan was shot, Chancellor didn't take over the anchor chair for special reports; he chose to prepare for "Nightly News."

NBC once was an innovator. "Today" was brand-new. "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" changed television. When Robert Kintner was president of NBC in the late 1950s and early '60s, he had a motto: "CBS plus 30." Translation: Whatever CBS News did, NBC News tried to do 30 minutes better.

Now, when people think of pioneering programs, there's "60 Minutes" and "Sunday Morning" on CBS, "Nightline" and "This Week with David Brinkley" on ABC. NBC's most imaginative newscast might be the one on "Saturday Night Live."

NBC did have "Overnight," but it was canceled.

Your predecessor, Reuven Frank, said "Meet the Press" wasn't broken, so he wasn't going to fix it. That says a lot. You can't have a 35-year-old program that looks its age.

One thing you should do is wake up "Meet the Press." Let that be one early symbol for the new NBC News.

The major change, though, has to be in prime time. It's embarrassing that NBC News can't make a prime-time program work, while CBS has "60 Minutes," the second-rated show this past season, and ABC has the modestly successful "20-20."

Larry, when you became president of PBS in the mid-1970s, many people still thought of it as educational TV. You changed that. You were a forceful fighter for federal funds, you took the stations off each others' necks and focused them on the business of creating and attracting memorable programming.

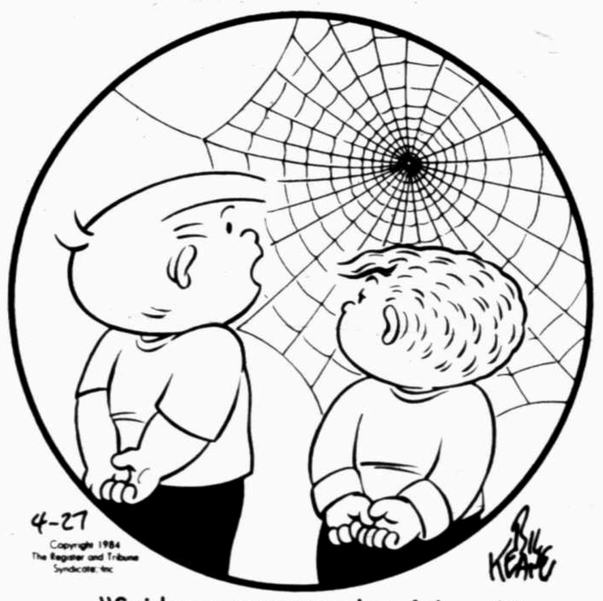

Now, NBC News needs some direction.

Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

Don't bid the same cards twice. You simply give the opponents two chances to do the right thing.

We don't like West's preempt at any vulnerability — his hand is too strong defensively. East raised in the hope of shutting out the opponents, but it didn't help. When North-South reached six hearts, East made the curious decision to sacrifice at six spades — he had no reason to think he could beat a grand slam. South's pass was forcing and North now not only decided that his side could make a grand slam, but he redoubled when West, for some reason known only to himself, chose to double.

All would have been well had West led the king of spades — that would have taken a vital entry off the board before declarer could put it to good use. Not surprisingly, however, West doubted that his side would get a spade trick — diamonds looked like a better proposition.

The hand did not take long to play. Declarer won the ace of diamonds, ran all his trumps and then took three rounds of clubs. This was the position:

NORTH

Declarer led his last club, and West was squeezed to death. In the hope that his partner had the jack of spades, West let go of a spade honor. Declarer had been watching the spade spots carefully and he realized that only the king of spades was higher than the seven. So he discarded dummy's jack of diamonds and, when he then led a spade and the king appeared, the board's seven of spades became the fulfilling trick.

Fun and games

About the time you decide there's nothing the world can throw at you that is so literally offensive it will fully repulse you, guess what? Along comes the Skull Crushers announcement.

In case you haven't heard, Skull Crushers is a brand of candy being imported by R.L. Albert & Son Inc. of Greenwich, Conn. The white chocolate candy is shaped to resemble a human skull and, what's more, is filled with strawberry cream that oozes like blood when the skull is crushed between thumb and forefinger.

The firm's president, Larry Albert, says he sees nothing wrong with the candy he's importing from Alma Confectionary Ltd. of Kirkcaldy, Scotland. Describing how European children eat the candy, he says, "They squeeze them on the sides so the blood comes squirting through the eyes."

Perhaps there is nothing wrong with a candy that transmits to impressionable youngsters the message that mashing a skull until blood flows from the eyes is "okay" and even "good." Perhaps increasing the morbidity in the everyday lives of Americans really is what we need. After all, there aren't enough senseless killings now, are there?

With the brutality and lack of respect for human life and dignity spewed at Americans daily from movies, television and, yes, real life what's wrong with adding it to the candy children eat?

Nothing, of course.

Maybe next someone will even begin importing Moammar Khadafy terrorism kits or Ayatollah Khomeini head lopping swords.

Words to remember

Among the quotable quotations of the past week were comments by the Soviet Union's Olympic chief, Marat Gramov, and a United States Senator.

The Kremlin's Olympic leader made the following comment as he reported that Moscow will decide by June whether Russian athletes will participate in the Los Angeles Olympic games:

"We will not boycott the games ... (But) we make a distinction between boycotting and not attending."

In Washington an influential Democratic Senator, Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii, agreed with President Reagan that more aid funds are needed to help the Salvadoran Army to protect the voting process in the forthcoming presidential election. Although his numbers and the president's were not the same, Sen. Inouye came out squarely on the side of defending democracy against communism in Central America. He said:

"I've tried to come up with a minimum which will keep the military in tow while some semblance of democracy is rising up there. They tell me the election was successful. Let's give that election a chance to succeed completely."

Another View:

Surprising Khadafy

Libya has professed "surprise" over Britain's severing of diplomatic relations in the aftermath of the April 17 murder of a policewoman by someone shooting from within the Libyan Embassy in London.

That response, surprisingly enough, may be genuine. It is by no means implausible that the Libyan regime, which is not always in the closest touch with reality, had convinced itself that at the end of fruitless negotiations a stymied Britain would have no choice but to adopt Libya's incredible suggestion to let bygones be bygones, so that the two countries could go swimmingly on their way as if nothing had happened. Libya has, after all, quite literally gotten away with murder before, in Britain as well as in other countries. To Col. Moammar Khadafy, one more killing might hardly have seemed the stuff from which a major diplomatic incident would be made.

This time, though, the evidence of Libya's flagrant abuse of law and departure from civilized behavior was far more than just circumstantial and presumptive. This time, in full public view, someone in the Libyan Embassy poked an automatic weapon through a window and opened fire on a crowd of anti-Khadafy demonstrators, wounding 10 and killing Constable Yvonne Fletcher. This time, there was indeed a highly visible smoking gun, with an official Libyan finger on its trigger.

The British government has acted throughout this episode with the restraint, firmness and respect for its obligations that the circumstances demanded. It did not, though some in Britain urged otherwise, respond to a violation of law by itself violating the law. It did not storm the Libyan Embassy, nor will it take any actions to infringe the diplomatic immunity of those in the building who have now been ordered to leave Britain. This behavior may impose a political penalty on Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, for public outrage is high over the virtual certainty that when the Libyans leave the country, a murderer will be among them. The government has chosen to face this storm rather than practice the same brand of outlawry that Libya has practiced. It is the right decision.

And what next? It would be a fine thing now if all decent nations could band together to impose a diplomatic and economic quarantine on Libya, as well as on all other countries that practice and encourage terrorism. Plainly, though, that is not to be. Khadafy in the end is likely to pay little in any kind of coin that counts for this latest outrage. That almost certainly makes it only a matter of time before the next outrage by him occurs.

JACK ANDERSON

Hirohito still holds world in awe

WASHINGTON — When Emperor Hirohito steps out on the balcony of his palace in downtown Tokyo this Sunday to greet thousands of adoring Japanese on his 83rd birthday, there'll be a CIA agent in the crowd — probably armed with binoculars.

Jack Anderson

It's one of the ways the CIA's Life Sciences Division can observe firsthand how the diminutive emperor looks. There have been recent hints that his health is failing.

Though he holds no direct political power, Hirohito has been a favorite subject of CIA surveillance for decades. My associate Dale Van Atta, who was recently in Tokyo, has had access to some of the secret CIA profiles of the emperor. They reveal that the CIA's remorseless analysts, like the Japanese people, hold this aged, bespectacled little man in awe.

"Despite all he has been through since he assumed the throne in 1926," notes the CIA, "Emperor Hirohito projects innocence and sincerity." The CIA describes him as "a shy, retiring man."

He and his 81-year-old empress like to watch soap operas on TV and putter in the imperial gardens. "Both the emperor and empress (enjoy pursuing) their personal interests — marine biology and botany for the emperor, art for the empress," states another profile, this one stamped "Confidential." In fact, Hirohito is the world's chief authority on jellyfish and related creatures, with 16 books to his credit.

According to the CIA, the emperor "is briefed regularly on domestic and foreign affairs." Yet he "plays no part in policy decisions." There have been proposals to make him chief of state, but "most Japanese would not like to see him take on any more than his present symbolic role."

The CIA acknowledges "a few complaints from younger Japanese" about Hirohito, but little audible grumbling about the cost of maintaining the imperial household — which now runs to more than $40 million a year.

"By and large," states the CIA, "most Japanese still view the emperor with considerable respect and affection." One reason: He "has traveled widely among the people, something a Japanese emperor had never done before."

At first, the Japanese had "grave doubts about the image the emperor would project" in the United States. But his reception during his 1975 visit to this country "greatly exceeded even the most optimistic Japanese expectations."

The CIA believes the visit contributed "significantly to popular (Japanese) support for continued cooperation with the U.S. (and) opening an era of 'good feelings' in U.S.-Japanese relations."

Characteristically, Hirohito expressed his approval of America not in words but with a gesture. For years afterward, he wore a Mickey Mouse watch that he picked up in Disneyland.

Hirohito is the 124th emperor in Japan's unbroken, 2,644-year-old imperial line. When he ascended to the throne in 1926, he was a "tenno" — the "emperor of heaven." The Japanese considered him a god.

When the Japanese warlords sought his approval for the attack on Pearl Harbor, according to one account, Hirohito voiced his apparent disapproval by reciting a 31-syllable poem composed by his grandfather, extolling universal brotherhood and asking: "Why, then, do winds and water of conflict ... Disturb peace among us?"

The warlords went ahead with their plans anyway, and older Americans will remember Hirohito as a villain in propaganda cartoons, with buck teeth and Coke-bottle eyeglasses — features that took their place with Adolf Hitler's mustache and Hermann Goering's potbelly.

The emperor was able to reverse this image after the war. When the gamble of his generals and admirals turned into humiliating defeat, he first broadcast the news of surrender to his people — the first time most of them had ever heard his voice.

Then he presented himself humbly, top hat in hand, to the new shogun of Japan, Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He told MacArthur he accepted full responsibility for the war that he had actually opposed, and said he was ready to be judged by the American general.

MacArthur was "moved to the very marrow of my bones" by the Japanese emperor's humility. "He was an emperor by birth, but in that instant I knew I faced the First Gentleman of Japan in his own right," MacArthur wrote later.

Today, Hirohito remains the only — and perhaps the unlikeliest — survivor of World War II's leaders.

CITIZENS WATCH: Letters I get from readers show me I'm not the only one who is irate about the Pentagon's wasteful ways. Here are just a few samples from my mailbag:

"In the 1983 tax form," writes a man in Hannibal, N.Y., "there is this quote: 'You can make a voluntary contribution to reduce the public debt. If you wish to do so, enclose a separate check ... and make it payable to the Bureau of the Public Debt.' Because of the scandals I've been hearing about, I would like to see many people send a washer, a cotter pin, Allen wrench, etc., taped to a check-sized piece of paper marked payable to the Bureau of the Public Debt, with instructions to forward to the Pentagon."

A man in the Midwest wrote: "Maybe you could get some of the elected officials to make it a law that all contracts for purchases have a clause in them in bold print, that any company or individual which submits a bill for payment with excessive prices would forfeit payment for such items; they would also lose status as a company to do business with in the future."

Shultz gambling U.S. diplomacy

WASHINGTON — A senior White House aide, worried that Secretary of State George Shultz has gone astray with a top-level diplomatic nomination, took his fears last week to equally worried conservative Republican senators on Capitol Hill.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The White House official had only one purpose: to protect President Reagan from getting hurt by Shultz's decision to name Michael Armacost, outgoing ambassador to the Philippines, to replace political under secretary Lawrence Eagleburger. The post is not only the department's highest for the career Foreign Service; it can also set the tone and pace of U.S. diplomacy.

That improbable grieving session between a White House insider and complaining Reaganauts about a nomination sealed weeks ago typifies what ails Ronald Reagan's Foggy Bottom — no less under stoical George Shultz than flamboyant Alexander Haig. With the departure of tough, diplomatic maestro Larry Eagleburger, a sharp chip off the Kissinger block, Shultz has turned a rare opportunity into a potential pitfall. He selected a successor he hopes, in the words of an insider, will not crowd him and Deputy Secretary Ken Dam "because Eagle had too much muscle."

Unfairly or not, watchdog Senate Republicans concerned with Reagan's ideological purity long ago marked down Armacost as a symbol of the Carter administration. With Sen. Jesse Helms in the lead, half a dozen Republicans sent a succinct, embittered letter to Shultz hinting that Armacost, during his four years in high-level Carter administration posts, favored U.S. troop withdrawals from Korea.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's hawkish national security aide, privately has offered to tell the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that in fact Armacost opposed the American troop drawdown. But that will not begin to assuage the senators. They are preparing a rough reception for Armacost's confirmation hearing. And some presidential aides are encouraging them to do their best — unless the president signals his support for Armacost in a personal message to each of them.

That is hardly Reagan's style. Indeed, insiders told us the president does not wholly share Shultz's enthusiasm for Armacost. But since he gave Shultz carte blanche on all appointments, his intrusion at this point might put unbearable strains on Shultz. At last week's Cabinet meeting, Shultz betrayed a touch of immanent strain when he asked White House aides for their support on Armacost "without condition" — a strange request for the president's first Cabinet minister to have to make.

But not even the White House can help cure more basic problems with the Armacost appointment. With only one contemporary exception, the job of political under secretary has always gone to a career Foreign Service officer. Armacost only joined the Foreign Service in 1981 and his rank of minister-counselor is junior to perhaps 100 or more career diplomats. In the ranks of the Foreign Service, whatever Armacost's inherent worth as an experienced diplomat, Shultz has hit an exposed nerve.

It is true that Shultz approached several high-ranking career officers who showed little zest for the job Eagleburger made the most powerful diplomatic perch in the Reagan administration. The apparent reason was that with less than one year to go in the first Reagan term, and with Shultz having problems keeping firm control of foreign policy, the No. 3 post in Foggy Bottom's sprawling bureaucracy might bring more brickbats than roses.

Shultz, however, always wanted Armacost but gave intimates only one reason: his success in renewing the Philippines bases deal. Armacost has no visible record of service in Europe, Africa, the Middle East or Latin America, hotbeds of some of the nastiest foreign problems Reagan is facing. On arms control, he may prove to be a fast learner, but he will have to learn it from scratch.

For Mike Armacost, that risks costly power plays against him by the department's regional baronies. For George Shultz and soft-spoken protege Ken Dam, it will mean diplomacy decentralized from the iron grip of an Eagleburger. But it poses a different threat for Shultz: removing operational control from a bureaucracy that needs it as a wheel needs a hub.

'Politics' offensive

In reference to Ed Todd's article of Wednesday, April 18, entitled "Shaner 'offended' by ruling", I, too, was offended. I was offended by Mr. Shaner's "convenient" absence from his duties whether voluntary duties or not.

I daresay that in future elections, the Republican Party should elect a party chairman that can give a bit more of his/her time and make themselves more readily available in order to spare the party any further embarrassment and suspicion.

I was offended by the fact that Mr. Shaner's inexcusable absence cost Mr. Painter over $5,000 in legal fees that had been intended for mounting a competitive campaign. I was offended by Mr. Shaner's sudden "Hey, we're on your side" attitude AFTER Mr. Painter filed his writ to get on the ballot. I trust that since Mr. Shaner and the committee has "joined Painter in his bid to get on the ballot", they have also joined Mr. Painter in paying his attorney's fee. Sure!

I am offended that Mr. Shaner continues to deny any wrongdoing by attempting to find fault with the Secretary of State's Election Division. All of this would have been very easily avoided had a certain party chairman or an appointed secretary been at the proverbial "right place at the right time" as was his duty. Save the power plays for national politics; it won't work at the local level — it insults our intelligence.

To put it quite simply, I guess I am offended by offensive politics.

'Beef' found in sheriff's office

Where's the beef? No, that's not the question anymore. Where's the sheriff's deputies? That's a good question. Most people don't realize that the majority of our deputies are in the office all day. C.I.D., the Civil Division and the jail take up our manpower while only a handful of deputies actually patrol the county in marked units.

I know for a fact that most of the midnight shifts, one and maybe two units patrol the nearly 950 square miles of Midland County. We need more men and/or women patrolling our county. The crime rate in Midland County is astronomical and that could be deterred with more units on our county roads.

I have lived in the southeast part of Midland County for 1½ years and seen a county patrol car maybe five times driving down the road.

Do you also realize that the deputies are not allowed to work traffic, tickets for speeding, etc? Seems necessary doesn't it? The police department has limited jurisdiction and the D.P.S. can only do so much.

There has been a lot of animosity between the police department and sheriff's office for years. This needs to come to an abrupt halt. These departments need to work in unison.

People, think long and hard about the upcoming primary election for sheriff and think Painter. We need his leadership and his concern. We need to make a change in our sheriff's office and that change is Painter.

Hance not just 'also running'

I read your paper and I want to compliment your writers for not referring to Congressman Ken Hance as an "also running" in the U.S. Senate race.

I'm convinced, because I know him well, that he is the Democratic candidate who can win in November and serve Texas and the nation well in the Senate.

Premier-designate begins consultation on Cabinet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister-designate Rashid Karami opened consultations with parliamentary leaders today on forming a national unity government capable of ending Lebanon's civil war.

Karami, 62, a Sunni Moslem pro-Syrian politician, met at Parliament headquarters in Villa Mansour in Beirut's embattled midsection.

Police reported calm between warring factions on all civil war fronts in Beirut and the first mountain ridge east of the Lebanese capital for a second straight day.

The only violence reported was the fatal shooting of a French Embassy guard in west Beirut on Thursday. The unidentified assailants escaped in a speeding blue car. There were no claims of responsibility.

Police attributed the decrease of battlefront hostilities to the deployment of 2,000-member buffer force of policemen, army conscripts and truce observers. The force was deployed between warring factions in and around Beirut and the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb.

The disengagement operation and the change of governments were landmarks in a fresh drive by President Amin Gemayel to resolve the nine-year Lebanese crisis with Syria's backing. The drive followed the collapse of the U.S. peacekeeping effort in February.

Gemayel named Karami as Lebanon's new prime minister Thursday to replace Shafik Wazzan, who resigned early February when anti-government Druse and Shiite Moslem militias wrested control of west Beirut from the Lebanese army.

Karami, in his 10th premiership in 29 years, is expected to form a half-Christian, half-Moslem Cabinet in accordance with an agreement Gemayel reached with Syrian President Hafez Assad last week.

Navy warships join exercises in Gulf

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two U.S. Navy warships have joined maneuvers in the Gulf of Fonseca aimed at tightening surveillance of Nicaragua's coast and deterring arms shipments to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

The Pentagon says the U.S. ships, which joined Salvadoran and Honduran boats Thursday, will steer clear of Nicaraguan waters of the gulf, which lies between El Salvador and Nicaragua.

A U.S. military source in Honduras, meanwhile, said U.S. reconnaissance plane have been flying over Nicaragua and have sometimes drawn groundfire, according to reports today in The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post.

The unidentified source said the Pentagon has denied there have been such flights but said Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government has denounced them.

According to the newspaper reports, the aircraft take off from Palmerola air base in Honduras and Howard air base in Panama. The source was quoted as saying the reconnaissance flights are likely tied to U.S. intelligence efforts to track down alleged flow of war materiel from Nicaragua to the rebels fighting the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador.

Improving the interception of any Nicaraguan shipment of arms to Salvadoran guerrillas is a key aim of the naval exercises, Pentagon officials said. The maneuvers are to last until May 7, the day after presidential runoff elections in El Salvador.

In describing the maneuvers in the Gulf of Fonseca, the Pentagon said no blockades or mining of Nicaraguan waters will be attempted.

Revelation that the CIA directed anti-Sandinista rebels to mine Nicaraguan ports triggered protests in Congress, and U.S. officials said the CIA-directed mining had been discontinued.

The destroyer USS Deyo and USS Reid, a guided missile carrier, were doing exercises with Salvadoran speedboats and boats from Honduras' Tiger Island in the gulf, official U.S. and Salvadoran statements said.

Describing the exercise, the Pentagon said: "If any activity were uncovered contrary to the best interests of Honduras or El Salvador, we can assume they would take whatever action they deem to be necessary for their national security."

In Costa Rica, security officials said raids there Thursday turned up a cache of illegal weapons in offices of the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, a Nicaraguan rebel group based in that officially neutral country.

Security raids Tuesday on the rebel group's offices yielded radio equipment, documents and military plans, said Costa Rica's vice minister of security, Johnny Campos.

"Today it has become somewhat more serious with the discovery of these arms," Campos said Thursday. He said the National Security Council would likely meet soon to discuss the situation of rebels who have political asylum in Costa Rica.

Under Costa Rican law, leaders of the rebel group, known as ARDE and composed largely of dissident Sandinistas, may engage in political activity involving their own country but not in military activity.

In a radio interview broadcast in Costa Rica, Eden Pastora, commander of ARDE forces, blamed the CIA for the raid and charged it was in retaliation for ARDE's refusal to join the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, another rebel group, based in Honduras.

The foreign ministers of Costa Rica, Honduras and El Salvador, in a communique Thursday, urged the Sandinistas to talk with the rebels.

As earlier reports predicted, Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana vetoed legislation that would have abolished use of a U.S.-funded voter registry for the May 6 runoff.

The registry was blamed for some of the confusion that kept an estimated 200,000 voters from voting in the first round of balloting, on March 25.

Magana blamed logistical problems for the disorder. Charges of fraud were widespread in Salvadoran elections before 1982.

Youths invade embassy

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Shouting anti-Soviet slogans, about 15 "skinheads" stormed into the grounds of the Soviet Embassy here, police said today.

The youths, whose nickname comes from their close-cropped hair, wrested the heavy iron gate from its hinges in the fence guarding the embassy grounds and rushed up to the building Thursday night. They shouted "Death to the Soviet Union" and "Free Hess" — a reference to Rudolf Hess, the former Nazi deputy who turned 90 on Thursday.

Hess, who was sentenced to life imprisonment by the Nuremberg war crimes tribunal, has been the only prisoner in the Berlin Spandau prison since 1966. The prison is operated by the four main allied victors over Nazi Germany — the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union — with the Soviets still blocking his parole.

The youths left the grounds before police arrived on the scene, but five were later arrested suspected of trespassing, damage and violation of foreign territory.

Guerrillas attack forces

BETONG, Thailand (AP) — Five Thai soldiers were killed and two wounded when about two dozen guerrillas of the Communist Party of Malaya attacked government forces near the Thai-Malaysian border, a field officer said today.

Col. Kitti Rattanachaya, deputy commander of the Thai-Malaysian task force, said the insurgents lobbed hand grenades Thursday before opening up with automatic rifle fire at the soldiers based at a camp recently seized from the rebels.

The fighting lasted a half how before the rebels retreated into a nearby jungle, Kitti said.

Government forces had seized the camp on Tuesday. It is about 12 miles northeast of Betong, on the southern tip of Thailand.

Thailand and Malaysian have been carrying out joint operations for years against the commuqtguerrillas, who have traditionally given authoritiesXm slip by sneaking back and forth across the border.

Troops wiped out

LONDON (AP) — A British legislator who just visited Ethiopia says Eritrean guerrillas have wiped out an entire division of Ethiopian government troops, killing 4,000 and capturing 2,500 in recent battles.

Stuart Holland, the opposition Labor Party's spokesman for overseas development and cooperation, said in a statement he telephoned Thursday from Khartoum, Sudan, that the reported secessionist victory occurred along a 62-mile front near Mersa Teklai.

He said the guerrillas captured or destroyed more than 30 government tanks and seized an arsenal of other weapons.

The rebels have been fighting for independence for Eritrea for 21 years. In past months, a largely Christian rebel group has joined fo

Farmers need help

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — Farmers need help in their fight against livestock rustlers and other predators, says an official with the Nova Scotia Federation of Agriculture.

Cattle, poultry and hog rustling is increasing, but police forces don't seem to take the complaints of farmers seriously, federation president Don Downe told the legislature's agriculture committee.

Downe also urged compensation for farmers who lost livestock and parts of their crops to deer, bear and coyotes.

Government will pay

MONTREAL (AP) — The federal government will pay the legal costs of a surburban Roxboro man who wants to fight a speeding ticket written in French only before the Supreme Court of Canada.

Duncan Macdonald is the second person to be offered financial assistance by Ottawa to defend language rights under the Constitution.

The federal government is also covering the costs of Winnipeg lawyer Roger Bilodeau, who refuses to pay a parking ticket written in English only. The Supreme Court will hear his case in June.

Macdonald said he wants the court to hear both his and Bilodeau's case at the same time.

Project costing firm

REGINA, Saskatchewan (AP) — A 14-story Saskatchewan Housing Corp. project at the downtown Cornwall Centre is practically empty, costing the corporation money and leaving officials puzzled about their next move.

Sid Dutchak, minister responsible for the corporation, calls the building a "white elephant," and corporation president Calder Hart is not about to disagree.

Hart told the public accounts committee that only three of the 154 apartments in the building have been rented since the building opened two months ago.

Mavericks celebrate victory — TWICE

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks got to celebrate their first-ever National Basketball Association playoff series victory, TWICE.

"It was the most bizarre call I've seen in my 16 years in the league," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta after the Mavs nipped Seattle 105-104 Thursday night. "It was the best doubleheader I ever had. We got to celebrate twice."

DALLAS ADVANCED to the second round against Los Angeles Saturday at 2:30 p.m CST after ousting the Sonics three games to two.

Forward Jay Vincent hit two free throws with 17 seconds to play in a wild overtime to give Dallas a 105-102 lead.

Tom Chambers of the Sonics made a basket with a second left and Vincent in-bounded the ball by hitting Chambers' chest.

Chambers caught the ball but time keeper Cary O'Bryant never started the clock.

Referee Mike Mathis signaled the game over, saying, "If the ball hits a man in bounds the clock should start."

The joyous Mavs charged to their dressing room but alternate referee Tommy Nunez pointed out a second still remained on the clock.

Mathis was overruled by Jake O'Donnell after a 10-minute conference with O'Donnell saying, "The clock should have been started but it wasn't. We have to play it.

"It was very unusual. I have never been engaged in a situation like that."

THE MAVS were called back from the dressing room where guard Brad Davis said, "We were having a good time. We tried to change our clothes as fast as we could, but that didn't work.

"It was a little scary to give them the ball back."

However, Steve Hawes' in-bounds pass was caught by Mark Aguirre and the Mavs secured the victory.

Motta said O'Brien "had no business stopping the clock. However, I never give up until the buzzer. I've seen too many crazy things happen in this league."

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said he wouldn't comment on the crazy ending except to say "it was ludicrous."

Wilkens was mad at the big lead Seattle blew in the final minute.

"I thought we had it then we threw the ball away," Wilkens said. "Dallas just never gave up."

Seattle lost a six-point lead in the final 66 seconds of regulation.

The Sonics suffered three turnovers and missed a free throw in the final 36 seconds.

A jump shot by Dallas' Rolando Blackman with 15 seconds to play tied the game 95-all in regulation.

Seattle's Jack Sikma had 26 points before he fouled out with 1:29 left in the game with the Sonics leading 93-86.

"When Jack fouled out it really hurt us," said Wilkens. "He was playing well. We had it in our hands and we should have handled the ball better."

GUS WILLIAMS was high for the Sonics with 27.

Blackman scored a game-high 29 points for Dallas with Aguirre adding 25.

"I haven't been in a playoff game since Magic Johnson left Michigan State and now we're going to LA to play my old friend," Vincent said. "It's Magic here we come. I just hope we can give them a battle."

Motta said assistant Bob Weiss will stay up all night studying the Lakers.

"We will practice in the morning, then fly out, and Bob will give the scouting report on the plane on the way," Motta said. "It is a little short but every time I've gone into one like this it hasn't hurt us."

Great Gretzky! Oilers win again

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Of all Wayne Gretzky's 94 goals this season, few have caused more of a furor than his game-winning tally in the third period of Game 2 with Minnesota.

With 14 minutes to go and the scored deadlocked at 3-3 Thursday night, Gretzky skated up to Minnesota goalie Don Beaupre, let go a weak shot and nudged his own rebound back at Beaupre, who was sprawled in the net.

"I got the puck in front and lost it for a second, but I got a second crack at it, and it definitely went in by a good eight or 10 inches," said Gretzky after the Oilers won 4-3 to take a 2-0 edge in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinal showdown.

THE MINNESOTA North Stars begged to differ with the Great One.

"We feel we were cheated," said Steve Payne, who ignited Minnesota's rally by setting up all three North Star goals in the second period.

"It was shabbily called," Payne said. "The ref (Bruce Hood) waited a good five seconds to call it a goal."

Minnesota General Manager Lou Nanne complained that Hood "was right over the play and he obviously didn't think it was a goal because he blew the whistle to stop play and he didn't signal a goal right away."

Minnesota Coach Bill Mahoney said Hood's delayed call "defies logic" because the referee looked to the goal judge instead of calling what he saw.

"We feel we have been unjustly handled," Mahoney said. "It certainly will give us an added sense of revenge."

But Gretzky, whose seven playoff goals and 17 assists give him a National Hockey League-high 24 points, thinks the fuss is much ado about nothing.

"By Saturday (Game 3), no one will remember it as a controversial goal," Gretzky said. "They'll just remember it as a win."

Gretzky gave much of the credit to Oilers' backup goalie Andy Moog, who came on to preserve the victory the last 17 minutes.

Edmonton starting goalie Grant Fuhr bruised his elbow when Minnesota's Paul Holmgren bashed him into the post.

"Andy loves to play under pressure," Gretzky said. "He's like Rollie Fingers, he comes off the bench for us and plays well."

Moog said he was "a little anxious" when he replaced Fuhr 2:57 into the final period with the score tied 3-3.

"But once I got the first shot over with I was okay," Moog said. "I felt confident."

Edmonton Coach Glen Sather said he'd be surprised if Fuhr was ready for Saturday's third game in Minnesota.

PAYNE SAID Minnesota will return home for that game with a new dose of confidence.

"As a whole, we played much better (than in the 7-1 opening defeat)," Payne said. "I think we outplayed them after coming out flat in the first period."

"There's no reason why we shouldn't feel a little confident," Payne said. "We played four straight crummy periods of hockey and then we were able to turn it around."

Edmonton's Ken Linseman scored twice in the first period to give the Oilers a 2-0 lead. But the Oilers' hope for a second consecutive cakewalk lasted just 11 seconds into the second period.

Neal Broten scored quickly on a power play, and 2:26 later Willi Plett tied it 2-2.

Jari Kurri put Edmonton back on top with his playoff-leading 11th goal, but Payne hit Brian Bellows on a breakaway to tie it 3-3 and set the stage for Gretzky's game-winner.

Cubs' skid continues

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — The Midland Cubs' losing streak climbed to seven straight here Thursday night as the El Paso Diablos broke open a tight 2-2 game with two runs in the seventh inning off loser Neil Bryant.

Midland outhit the Diablos by a 7-5 margin, but Ted Higuera went the distance for his second victory in three decisions this year. El Paso won it in the seventh when Bryant walked Dave Klipstein, who stole second and scored on a single by Jim Paciorek. Paciorek scored the insurance run on a double by Steve Michael.

Midland had tied the game at 2-2 in the third when Rick Baker and Shawon Dunston singled and scored on a double by Jeff Jones. That was all the Cubs could muster against Higuera.

The Cubs have now lost all seven games of the current road trip and will face the Diablos again tonight in the third game of the five-game set.

NBA champs eliminated by Nets

Bucks, Suns, Jazz earn advancement

By The Associated Press

The New Jersey Nets' road-court advantage was too much for the defending champion Philadelphia 76ers to overcome.

The Nets capped an incredible string of road victories by beating the 76ers 101-98 Thursday night — their third straight triumph at the Philadelphia Spectrum — to win the first-round National Basketball Association series 3-2. Philadelphia, which hoped to become the first team since 1969 to repeat as champions, had won both games at New Jersey.

"I couldn't sleep at all after losing those two at home," Nets Coach Stan Albeck said. "Winning three at Philadelphia is quite an accomplishment."

It was the first time since the Nets moved into the NBA in 1976 that they won a playoff series. They were 0-6 in postseason games before this season.

"The homecourt doesn't mean as much in the playoffs, probably because we have more time to prepare for the games," Albeck said. "It's a tremendous high for us."

In tonight's only game, New York is at Detroit in the fifth game of their series. The winner will open the next round Sunday at Boston.

Dallas is at Los Angeles Saturday and Phoenix is at Utah and New Jersey at Milwaukee in other Sunday games.

New Jersey got 24 points and six assists each from guards Micheal Ray Richardson and Otis Birdsong. Birdsong had shot 6-for-21 from the field and totaled only 14 points in the Nets' two home losses.

"I wanted to get involved in the offense tonight because I had two bad games in New Jersey," Birdsong said. "Tonight, I got off to a good start and that helped us a lot."

Andrew Toney scored 22 points and Moses Malone added 19 points and 14 rebounds to lead Philadelphia, but all-star Julius Erving, often at his best in big games in the past, managed only 12 points.

"Let's credit NJ for the job they did," Erving said. "They responded to the challenge. We feel some satisfaction coming back from two down. But our objective was to win tonight and in that sense we fell short."

Jazz 127, Nuggets 111

Adrian Dantley scored 30 points, Rickey Green 29 and Darrell Griffith 24 as Utah easily beat visiting Denver.

Utah, appearing in its first playoff series of the 10-year history of the franchise, led by as many as 14 points in the first half. A run of 10 straight points rebuilt the lead to 14 in the fourth period.

Dan Issel scored 25 points and Alex English 24 for the Nuggets, but Kiki Vandeweghe, who had averaged nearly 30 points in the first four games of the series, had only 10.

Suns 117, Blazers 105

Walter Davis scored 21 of his 29 points in the second half and Kyle Macy added 17 of his 20 after intermission as the Suns won at Portland, which played without Mychal Thompson, who broke his right elbow Tuesday night.

Blazers forwards Calvin Natt and Kenny Carr also were hobbled by injuries, forcing Portland at times to go with a lineup with no player taller than 6-foot-7. Jim Paxson topped the Blazers with 24 points.

Bucks 118, Hawks 89

At Milwaukee, Marques Johnson and Junior Bridgeman sparked an 18-4 spurt at the start of the second period that carried the Bucks to victory over Atlanta.

Johnson and Bridgeman each had six points in the first six minutes of the second quarter as Milwaukee opened a 40-22 bulge from which Atlanta never recovered. The closest the Hawks got in the second half was 13 points.

Sidney Moncrief led the Bucks with 20 points, while Glenn Rivers topped Atlanta with 21.

Houston lands Steinkuhler

HOUSTON (AP) — Dean Steinkuhler, an offensive tackle from Nebraska who has reached a tentative agreement to play for the Houston Oilers next season, says he's delighted by the prospect.

"I feel great," Steinkuhler said Thursday in an interview with Houston radio station KIKK. "I couldn't be more happy. It's the place that I wanted to go to and like I said before, Houston has a good program and they've got a lot of young players."

The Oilers, who have the second choice overall in the draft, said everything was agreed upon but no papers had been signed.

"What we must now do is get the contract written and agree to the exact language," Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzeg said. "This takes time but I am confident that we will get this matter settled and have Dean in town" today.

Steinkuhler, an All-American who stands 6-3 and weighs 270 pounds, will be the third consecutive offensive lineman the Oilers have taken in the first-round of the draft. The team took guards Mike Munchak and Bruce Matthews in the last two years.

The New England Patriots, who own the No. 1 pick in Tuesday's draft, already have signed Steinkuhler's teammate, wide receiver Irving Fryar.

"I haven't signed anything yet," Steinkuhler said. "But I think everything is pretty close at this time."

Steinkuhler, 23, won the Outland Trophy and Lombardi Trophy as the nation's top college lineman in 1983.

Canadiens swing wrecker's ball

MONTREAL (AP) — The dynasty is crumbling. The foundation is cracking and the Montreal Canadiens are swinging the wrecker's ball.

The New York Islanders' drive for five successive Stanley Cups, a feat achieved only by the 1956-60 Canadiens, has stalled. Montreal has outskated and outplayed the Islanders for the first two games of the Prince of Wales Conference final, which continues Saturday night at Nassau Coliseum. Montreal's 4-2 victory Thursday night in Game 2 of the best-of-seven National Hockey League series was just as convincing as its 3-0 opening-game triumph.

"We don't feel any pressure at all," said Mats Naslund, a speedy left wing from Sweden who scored twice to lead the Canadiens — 35-40-5 during the regular season but 9-2 in the playoffs — to victory. "Maybe it will come now that we are up 2-0 and we see a chance to beat them.

"But we're not counting on anything. We know we have everything to win and nothing to lose, but we're just trying to go there and win one of two games.

"They probably have a lot more to show us. If we can get one game there, great. If not, we know we can beat them here. We proved it."

Did they ever. After the Islanders stormed goalie Steve Penney in the opening minute for four shots, they were held to 13 the rest of the way. They scored on Clark Gillies' tip-in of a Tomas Jonsson pass and Denis Potvin's power-play goal, but Naslund himself equaled that. Pierre Mondou and Steve Shutt scored the other goals.

"We knew they would come out flying," said Penney, who has allowed only 17 goals in 11 games after going 0-4 in the regular season. "We were a little mixed up early. They had good chances, but then the guys put on a good show."

The Islander forwards rarely got organized, failing to break out of their own zone with the puck and leaving much of the puck-carrying to the defensemen. Mike Bossy, New York's top goal-scorer, didn't have a shot on goal.

"They have the wind in their sails," Bossy said of the Canadiens. "We had as tough a time as I've ever seen getting the puck in their end. We had to shoot in in more than we usually do."

When they shot it in, the Canadiens invariably beat them to the puck. Or else the Islanders mishandled it, made poor passes or were knocked out of the play by the Canadiens defense.

When they did manage a decent shot, Penney stopped it.

"We came out strong, Penney made some big saves and we started to get hesitant again," said Islander Coach Al Arbour, who was incensed at referee Bryan Lewis and linesman Swede Knox. Arbour also was involved in a short scuffle with a fan at the end of the game before security guards moved him away from the stands.

"The crowd intimidated the guys wearing stripes," said Arbour.

Knox's indecision on an icing call and Potvin's reaction to it also cost the Islanders dearly. Late in the second period, the Canadiens sent the puck all the way down ice and Knox signaled icing, waved it off and then reversed himself again and re-signaled the icing.

When Potvin touched the puck in front of his own net, he nearly poked it past goalie Billy Smith.

"When I touched it, I yelled, 'What the hell are you calling?' " Potvin explained. "I just put my hands up in reaction."

When he did, his stick slipped out and hit Knox, who gave Potvin an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty. Naslund scored early in the third period on the ensuing power play by poking in his own rebound to make it 4-2.

"They're supposed to be professional," said Islanders goalie Billy Smith, who fought with Montreal's backup netminder, Richard Sevigny, at the end of the game after Canadien defenseman Rick Green claimed Smith "tried to chop me with his stick." "It makes you wonder . . ." added Smith. "It's a total disgrace to the National Hockey League."

The Islanders are down 0-2 in a playoff series for the first time since 1977, when they were beaten by Montreal in the semifinals. They haven't played so poorly over such a long stretch of games since 1979, the last year they didn't win the Cup, when the Rangers beat them in the semifinals.

"That team has been invincible for the last four years," noted Montreal center Bobby Smith.

MC needs stroke shaver

ROSWELL, N.M. — The Midland College golf team ended up Western Junior College Athletic Conference action here Thursday and also started Region V playoff action as two tournaments were combined into one.

In the conference portion of the tournament, which also consisted of the first 18 holes of Region V play, MC tied Western Texas College for second place with a 315 round while New Mexico Junior College won the event with a 312. The Chaps finished fourth overall in the conference standings.

Thirty-six holes were played in the Region V portion of the tournament Thursday with powerful McLennan taking a huge lead as expected.

McLennan, which has not lost to a junior college team this year, posted rounds of 300 and 298 for a 598 team score after two rounds of play. NMJC is a distant second at 619 while MC stands in third place with a 627. The Chaps must make up eight strokes today in the final 18-hole round against NMJC to earn a national berth in the NJCAA tournament in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The top two teams and top two individuals advance to the national tournament from this Region V meet.

Midland College's Ed Barnes is in the thick of the medalist race after rounds of 75 and 71 for a 146 total in high winds that blew from the south in the morning round and from the north in the afternoon round.

Barnes is only one stroke off the medalist pace which was set by McLennan's Ray Salazar, who posted a two-round total of 145. Barnes is tied with NMJC's Roger Martinez for second, both at 146.

Other Chaparral results Thursday were Chris Gomez, 80-78—158; Jeff Cranford, 79-82—161; Danny Kloza, 81-81—162; and Kurt Martin, 83-84—167.

Denver 'Gold' stock falls

By The Associated Press

USFL Roundup

Quarterbacks are an endangered species on the Denver Gold, and the team's latest problems couldn't have come at a worse time.

The Gold, despite one of the best records in the United States Football League at 7-2, face the powerful Birmingham Stallions Sunday with a quarterback hobbled by a brace and a substitute with little experience.

Last week against New Orleans, the Gold lost its starting quarterback to a knee injury for the second straight week when Bob Gagliano suffered torn cartilage in his knee and had to undergo surgery. Craig Penrose went down with a ligament tear in his left knee on April 14 and underwent arthroscopic surgery.

The Gold was planning to go Sunday with quarterback Fred Mortensen, who was out of football until signing with Denver after Penrose's injury. But Penrose has recuperated and will start Sunday, wearing a brace on the knee.

Four other Denver players, including punter Steve Gortz and offensive tackle Harold Norfleet, will not play, however.

In other USFL action, Pittsburgh is at Memphis, New Orleans at Philadelphia and Jacksonville at Oklahoma tonight. Saturday night's games are Washington at Tampa Bay and San Antonio at Arizona. In Sunday's other action, it's Oakland at Chicago and Michigan at New Jersey. And on Monday night, Los Angeles plays at Houston.

The Stallions boast an 8-1 record heading into Sunday's game at Denver, and Gold Coach Craig Morton seems genuinely impressed.

"Birmingham is by far our biggest test of the year so far," he said. "I think they're the elite of the league right now. This is our opportunity to knock off a giant.

"It's an exceptionally good team, and one thing that impresses me is the defenses they use. They play some defenses that I've seen only a few times in my (18-year National Football League playing) career."

Denver, the surprise team of the USFL at the halfway point of the season, bowed last week to New Orleans 20-18 to snap a five-game winning streak.

The Stallions rank fourth in the league in offense and third in defense.

Cliff Stoudt, the former Pittsburgh Steeler, has completed 52 percent of his passes for 1,386 yards and 12 touchdowns, with just three interceptions. He fired five TD passes as the Stallions beat Oklahoma 41-17 last week. Joe Cribbs, formerly of the Buffalo Bills, is the league's top rusher with 938 yards on 189 carries.

"Cribbs and Stoudt have been very instrumental in where we are," says Dotsch.

Denver's offense ranks only 15th in the 18-team league and the defense is 11th, but the Gold has usually found a way to win.

"Denver is extremely big and physical, and they make so many big plays on special teams they scare you to death," said Birmingham Coach Rollie Dotsch.

The Maulers and the Showboats, a pair of expansion teams, each has lost its last three games. Each has a 2-7 record and each has played five common opponents — Philadelphia, New Orleans, Birmingham, Denver and New Jersey — and lost to all five.

Philadelphia running back Kelvin Bryant has recovered from a knee injury and will play against the Breakers. Bryant missed three games after surgeons removed some cartilage from his knee.

Nieporte's bonus ace hits jackpot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It was just one shot, a 6-iron. But it was a hole-in-one, and it earned Tom Nieporte more money than he won in any tournament he ever played in on the regular PGA golf tour.

"Oh my word, what a great feeling," Nieporte said Thursday after winning a $25,000 bonus for the ace on the 164-yard, par-three 11th hole during the first round of the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf.

Nieporte, club professional at the Winged Foot Golf County Club in Mamaroneck, N.Y., said his shot hit the back of the green and began to roll toward the hole.

"It kind of roller-coastered back down the hill and into the cup," he said. "It's a great thrill."

The Legends tournament, played over the 6,584-yard Onion Creek Club course, is for champion golfers 50 or older.

Nieporte, 54, who played sporadically on the tour, won several titles, including the 1967 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

That was his biggest paycheck, he said, and his top prize was $17,600.

After he finished the first round of the Legends paired with George Bayer in the best-ball tournament, Nieporte immediately called his wife.

"She didn't believe it," said Nieporte, who has nine children, the oldest of whom is 28.

"She (his wife) said she had gone to church this morning and prayed that I would do well. Maybe the prayers helped," he said.

Graham, McCord solve problems in Houston Open

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — Lou Graham and Gary McCord took different routes to solving their golfing problems — McCord went home and Graham went to the practice tee.

The results were the same, for one day at least, as the PGA veterans fired identical 6-under-par 65s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $500,000 Houston Open at The Woodlands Country Club.

Graham started quickly with four birdies in the first six holes. His only bogey came on the sixth when he hit a four iron into the bunker. He recovered on No. 7 by chipping in from 35 feet for a birdie.

McCord matched Graham with an accurate putter after starting his round with a bogey.

"I've been practicing very hard and I hope it is going to pay off," said Graham, who has not won a tournament since 1979. "I haven't played very well the past four years. I've solved my problems at least a hundred times."

On Thursday, Graham noticed a problem in addressing the ball.

"Every bad shot I hit today involved addressing the ball," Graham said. "I could tell at the top of my backswing when it wasn't right. But I hit 15 greens today and I played pretty well.

"But I'm not getting excited about the tournament. But if I shoot another good round tomorrow . . ."

McCord hit back-to-back birdies of 20 and 15 feet on Nos. 4 and 5. He said resting up at home had helped his game.

"I took some time off and sat around the house and thought about what I'm going to do," McCord said. "I think I came out here a little more relaxed."

Johnson picked for star outing

From Staff and Wire Reports

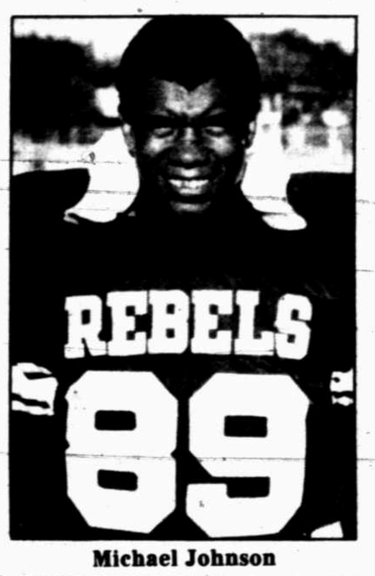

AUSTIN — Sixty-eight of the state's top schoolboy football players and 24 top basketball players were selected Thursday to participate in the Texas High School Coaches Association all-star games.

Among those chosen to participate in the annual North-South football game was Midland Lee's All-State linebacker Michael Johnson. Joining Johnson from District 4-5A are Odessa Permian fullback Britt Hager and Odessa High running back Charles Hunter. McCamey's David Stephens was another pick for the North squad. Crane's Gus Walker was picked for the North basketball team.

"I'm really looking forward to playing in the game," said Midland's Johnson. "I hear that they have a good time and the competition is good. It will help me stay in shape and could give me a head start for college."

Johnson will attend Texas Tech University next fall on a football scholarship. He will be re-joining Lee's Spike Dykes, who resigned the Lee post in December to become defensive coordinator for the Red Raiders.

The basketball game is set for Aug. 1 at the Hofheinz Pavillion in Houston. The football game is scheduled for Aug. 2 in the Astrodome.

Guerrero's lifeless bat lifts Dodgers over Padres

By The Associated Press

National League Roundup

Pedro Guerrero hasn't hit his weight for three weeks. But the 195-pound slugger knows it's a long season.

The Los Angeles third baseman, who entered Thursday's game hitting a measly .176, crushed a three-run homer in the seventh inning to help the Dodgers to a 6-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Guerrero's blow tied the game 5-5. Mike Marshall followed with a solo homer that decided the issue and cut the Padres' lead in the National League West to a half game over the Dodgers.

"Other people have probably been more worried about my slump than I have," said Guerrero. "It's not that I haven't been worried, but I just go out there and try to have fun."

GUERRERO, WHO had struck out 20 times in only 68 at-bats, pleaded guilty to swinging at a lot of bad pitches.

"I just have to be patient . . . the last three days, I've been hitting the ball better," he said.

In the only other game in the National League Thursday, Atlanta edged Cincinnati 2-1.

Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda was upset despite the victory because Marshall was almost clobbered with an object thrown from the grandstand in the bottom of the seventh.

"Marshall gave it to the umpire and said it looked like a big ball of chocolate," Lasorda said. "(San Diego's Graig) Nettles said if it was chocolate, I would have eaten it. And I said I would have, if it had been chocolate. But it was a rock."

Marshall said the ball of "clay, chocolate, mud or something . . . whizzed right by my head. Paper cups and stuff, that can't hurt you. But that was too big."

THE MARSHALL incident wasn't the only setback for Lasorda on the day.

In the bottom of the seventh, he went to the mound to make a pitching change after Carlos Diaz, 1-0, had walked Carmelo Martinez and allowed a two-out single to Kevin McReynolds. Lasorda thought he was getting his burly relief ace, Tom Niedenfuer, but instead lanky Pat Zachry arrived from the bullpen.

"I don't have any idea what happened," Lasorda said. "He (Niedenfuer) was throwing when I went out there. I told the ump I was going to make a double switch to bring in Niedenfuer.

"When I looked up, I thought that Niedenfuer had lost an awful lot of weight warming up."

Once order was restored, Niedenfuer proceeded to pitch 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief to earn his fourth save.

Dave Dravecky, 1-1, took the loss in his poorest effort of the season. The hard-throwing southpaw had allowed only three earned runs in 16⅔ innings before being roughed up for four runs in less than an inning Thursday.

"Dravecky seemed to be struggling," said Marshall. "After Pete hit the home run, he threw me a ball. I knew he wanted to come in with a strike."

Marshall, who earlier had doubled in a run and narrowly missed a home run when Tony Gwynn flagged down his long drive to right, enjoyed his second consecutive outstanding batting performance against the Padres. Last Sunday, in a 15-7 romp at Dodger Stadium, Marshall had five hits, including a pair of home runs, and drove in six runs.

"It's a matter of percentages, of getting even," said Marshall. "In the first three games last weekend, they stuck it to me. I didn't get a hit. The last two games, I was getting them."

Braves 2, Reds 1

Craig McMurtry took a shutout into the eighth inning, outdueling the Reds' Jeff Russell and pitching Atlanta to the victory. McMurtry didn't give up a run until Dan Driessen led off the eighth with his first homer of the season. Terry Forster got the last two outs of the game for his first save.

McMurtry worked out of trouble in three of the first four innings, during which he walked five batters.

One of the two runs off Russell was unearned, following an error by shortstop Dave Concepcion. The Braves scored the eventual game-winner after loading the bases in the fourth on a walk to Dale Murphy, Glenn Hubbard's single and McMurtry's bunt single. The run scored on Claudell Washington's forceout grounder.

Russell worked seven innings, giving up six hits.

The Reds stranded eight runners in the first four innings when McMurtry, 2-2, went through a wild streak, walking five and allowing three hits. But McMurtry then settled down and didn't yield a run until Driessen led off the eighth with his first homer of the season.

The Braves scored an unearned run in the first inning off Russell, 1-3, who gave up six hits in seven innings before being relieved by Tom Hume.

Basketball disturbs Connors

DALLAS (AP) — They were playing tennis at Reunion Arena Thursday night. The fans, though, were more interested in basketball.

It didn't go over real big with Jimmy Connors.

"If they wanted to watch basketball, they should have gone to the basketball game," the second-seeded Connors said after dispatching Tim Mayotte 4-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3 to advance to the semifinals of the $500,000 Buick WCT Finals tennis tournament. Then he softened, somewhat, and said, "I can understand the interest."

MAYOTTE, whose booming serve-and-volley game was blunted by Connors, who is ranked third in the world on the Nixdorf computer, also was upset with the noisy crowd as they cheered the Mavericks' victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

"It was just a little upsetting," Mayotte said. "I don't mind it two or three times. It's funny. But when they do it seven or eight times, it's obnoxious."

In the night's other quarterfinal battle, third-seeded Jimmy Arias swept past Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 6-4, 7-5. Arias will face Connors in Saturday's opening semifinal match in this indoor season-ending tournament. The other semifinal will be decided tonight when top-seeded John McEnroe takes on Vitas Gerulaitis and Johan Kriek, the No. 4 seed, meets Kevin Curren of South Africa.

During the Connors-Mayotte quarterfinal battle, the 15,320 fans who packed Reunion Arena, where the Mavericks normally play, burst into cheers when the NBA team tied the score in the final minute of regulation. It was the cue for Connors, a crowd favorite.

AS HE began to serve for ninth game of the opening set, Connors brought a roar from the crowd as he dribbled the tennis ball, then capped the routine with a left-handed jump shot.

After the second game of the second set, umpire Leon Lipp asked the crowd to be quiet "now that the basketball game is over." The cheering continued until Lipp, after hearing one fan with a radio, announced that the Mavericks had won 105-104 in overtime.

Mayotte, who had beaten Connors the first time the two had met, took the opening set after breaking the left-hander's service in the ninth game. But Connors evened the match at one set each but winning the second set.

"I was struggling a little bit, struggling to find my form," Connors said. "For me to win the second set, it raised my morale."

Then, assuming a mock serious pose, he intoned: "In this game, you've got to be able to weather all storms."

Arias dominated his match between two baseliners, his ferocious forehand snapping off winners repeatedly.

"I was serving well," he said after ripping off six aces in his match. "I won the big points today."

Saturday's semifinals and Sunday's final will be televised nationally by ESPN. Sunday's winner will pocket $150,000 with the runnerup collecting $50,000.

MC banquet set for Chap Center

Midland College's annual athletic banquet is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center.

Tickets for the event are on sale at $5 per person until noon Monday in the college Physical Education Building. The banquet will honor members of the 1983-84 basketball, golf and tennis teams and Chaparral cheerleaders.

Awards given at the banquet include the Fighting Chaparral awards, academic achievement as well as conference and regional honors. The Spirit award is given annually to one or more persons for exceptional support of the Midland College athletic programs.

Athletic Director Delnor Poss is in charge of the banquet. Team awards will be given by basketball coaches Jerry Stone and Reggie Franklin, golf coach Poss, tennis coach Joe Williams and cheerleader sponsor Jenny Allison.

PBPA speaker says 'good old days' are today

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

RUIDOSO, N.M. — "It is the best of times and the worst of times." That's how Gene Kinney, editor of Oil and Gas Journal, characterized the present state of the oil and gas industry in a speech before members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association at its annual meeting here Thursday.

"For those who drilled prospects that were only economical at $40 per barrel or $9 mcf (million cubic feet) gas...for those who invested in drilling equipment as if a rig count of 5,000 would go on forever...and for those bankers who threw money at every toolpusher who wanted to go in business, it is the worst of times," said Kinney.

"But those survivors who drilled on the prospects that were economical at $20 per barrel, and those who invested and loaned prudently, it is the best of times."

Kinney said despite some negative factors facing the industry it is now on a sound footing with stabilized costs and adequate incentives.

"The good old days of 1981 were not really the good old days," Kinney said. "The good old days are now."

The oil writer stated prices had not collapsed; they are about what they would have been if there had been no boom.

He said that the recession wrung the inflation out of the drilling costs of the 1979-1981 boom.

"Things are good for the operator and bad for the contractor," said Kinney.

He also stated that lease costs are also down because of reduced competition, allowing operators to be more selective in the prospects they drilled.

He cited the "gas bubble" as a negative factor facing the industry, but added that the factor is destined to disappear.

"The collapse of the gas market was the single most important factor accounting for the collapse of drilling," Kinney told the group.

He added, "Nobody wanted to drill another gas well to add to the gas bubble, and gas completions dropped sharply from 21 percent of total U.S. wells in 1982 to 20 percent in 1983 and 17.5 percent during the first quarter of this year. You can imagine what this is doing to the reserves."

Kinney noted that interstate pipelines had estimated the gas surplus at 7 trillion cubic feet but his estimates were about 3.5 trillion.

"The gas bubble will disappear within a year and a half, probably late next year," he predicted. "Then we will go back into a shortage situation and prices will begin to climb again."

The recovery is on, according to Kinney, but politics and economics will determine whether it will be good or bad. He warned that the industry must continue to fight for decontrol, even though the re-control bill will not pass out of the U.S. House this year.

The editor believes taxes may prove more of a threat to the industry than regulation.

"I'm not speaking about taxes that might be before Congress this year, but what might come up next year," he cautioned. "The four-year delay in a phase-down of the Windfall Profits Tax is bad but not as bad as it might be in 1985."

He blames national deficits as the villain in the tax dilemma.

"We (Democrats and Republicans) have a gentleman's agreement not to do anything about taxes until after the election, but then look out," he exclaimed.

He thinks the oil and gas industry will be a target for new taxes not only from the federal level but also the state.

Kinney related that a positive aspect to consider was the fact the demand for oil increased 2 percent this year and natural gas demand was up 5 percent.

He pointed to the Middle East as a factor that could affect petroleum prices.

"OPEC is a solid state. Even though they may be at war with one another, they still are in agreement about the price of oil. OPEC sets the price of oil in the Permian Basin," he said.

Socal now third largest oil firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's fifth and sixth largest oil companies will soon combine to become the third largest with the approval of the government for the largest corporate merger ever.

The Federal Trade Commission on a 4-1 vote Thursday approved No. 5 Standard Oil Co. of California's $13.2 billion "white knight" takeover of Gulf Corp. on the condition that it divest Gulf's refining, marketing and pipeline interests in areas where the two companies now compete.

Gulf reluctantly agreed to the takeover in March as the only way to prevent maverick Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. from seizing control of the company and reorganizing its assets to give stockholders a bigger share of the proceeds from the sale of its depleting oil reserves.

Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. in Amarillo, Texas, had offered $65 a share for Gulf's stock. Despite losing out to Socal, he and a small group of partners still stand to make more than a $500 million profit from the deal.

Socal, meanwhile, is getting all of Gulf's oil and gas reserves at a cost of about $4.40 per barrel. That compares with an average $9.61 per barrel Socal spent between 1978 and 1983 in finding and developing new reserves.

The San Franciso-based company said Thursday it would take steps to begin purchasing "as soon as practicable" the 165 million shares of Gulf stock for $80 per share, as permitted by the consent decree approved on a 4-1 vote by the commission Thursday.

While the stock transaction can take place immediately, the deal is still subject to revisions that might be ordered following a 60-day comment period and a "hold separate" agreement.

The agreement requires Socal to continue operating the two companies as separate entities — denying Socal control over Gulf's 2 billion barrels of oil and 5.7 trillion cubic feet of proven natural gas reserves — until a suitable buyer is found for the divested refining and marketing assets.

The consent order allows Socal six months to find a buyer or buyers for Gulf's 30 wholesale terminals and 4,000 service stations in seven southeastern states, either is Port Arthur, Tex., or Alliance, La., refinery and Gulf's interests in two oil pipeline companies.

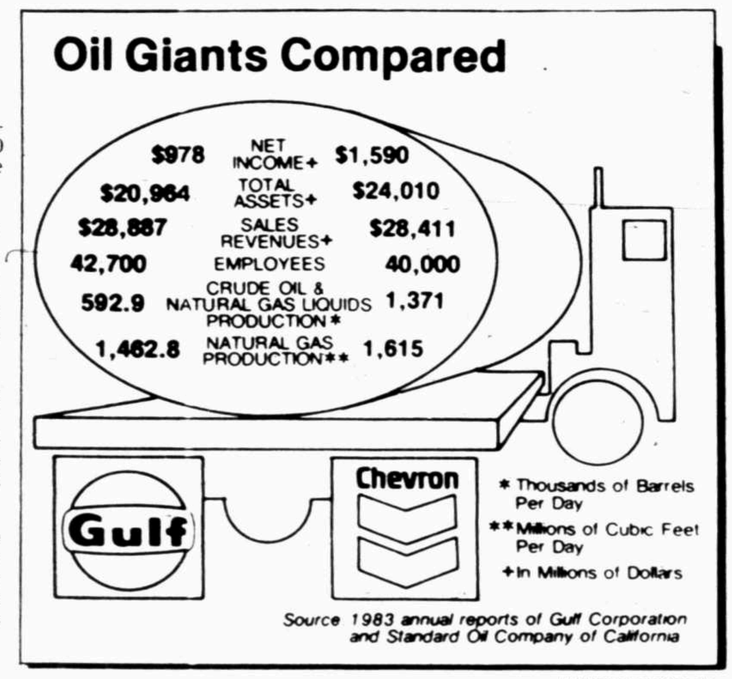

It also gives the FTC authority to make Socal sell some of Gulf's oil reserves to the buyers of the divested properties if necessary to assure the survival of the refinery and the Gulf terminals and retail outlets in Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia; and South Carolina.

Timothy Muris, head of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, said the agency would prefer that the refinery, 30 wholesale terminals and 4,000 service stations be sold in a package to a single buyer.

Guy Carruthers, communications manager for Chevron USA, said several potential buyers, among them a group of Gulf marketing and refining executives, already have expressed an interest in purchasing the spun off assets.

"It's just a question of putting them together in a viable package," he said after the FTC's action Thursday. "We're confident we can comply with the terms of the consent decree."

The merger will make Socal the nation's third largest energy company, ranking behind only industry leaders Exxon and Mobil, and give it roughly 7 percent of the nation's total oil production.

The Federal Trade Commission tentatively approved Standard Oil Co. of California's takeover of Gulf Corp. in the largest corporate takeover ever. Socal, also known as Chevron, said in early March when it first offered to buy all 165 million shares of Gulf stock that it anticipated having to sell off "a significant portion" of Gulf's retail and refining operation to win governmental approval.

Synfuels board still handing out federal money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Synthetics Fuels Corp., despite again losing its top executive to a scandal, is hanging together just enough to maintain its drive to hand out nearly $15 billion in federal energy subsidies in the next year.

Victor Thompson, under congressional fire because the bank he headed ran afoul of federal securities laws, resigned Thursday as president of the quasi-government corporation after holding the $135,000-a-year job only two months.

But Thompson refused to resign from his board seat on the corporation, as his critics demanded. With three vacancies already on the seven-seat board Thompson's resignation as a director would have denied a majority legally required to award any subsidies.

Thompson joined fellow director Victor Schroeder, his predecessor as president, and the agency's other two board members, in asking the Treasury to set aside $2.8 billion in federal loan guarantees and price supports to help synfuel projects in Louisiana and Colorado get off the ground.

Added to the more than $4.3 billion the SFC asked the Treasury to set aside three weeks ago for six other projects, the agency is almost halfway to its goal of committing $14.8 billion in federal aid to the fledgling industry by spring 1985.

House Energy Committee Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., asked President Reagan two weeks ago to fire Thompson as both president and a director of the SFC if he did not resign.

A week earlier, Dingell accused Thompson to his face during a hearing of being "imcompetent or ethically unsuited" for the SFC job because the Tulsa, Okla., bank Thompson headed had deceived the Securities and Exchange Commission about potential losses from millions of dollars in sour energy loans.

Dollar gains; Gold mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar gained against major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices were mixed.

Dealers said the dollar's strength was based on technical factors as the calender neared the end of the month.

High U.S. interest rates have not played a part in the dollar's latest surge, traders said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar gained more than one yen, finishing the week at 226.30 Japanese yen compared with 225.15 yen late Thursday. The dollar cost 224.80 yen on April 19, the last trading day before the long Easter weekend.

In London, the dollar gained fractionally against the British pound. It cost $1.4030 to buy one pound sterling, slightly cheaper than the $1.4032 price late Thursday.

Trading on European bullion markets was quiet.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was trading at a bid $378.00 at midmorning, down from $380.50 late Thursday.

Mobil, Sohio profits higher; Texaco's flat

By The Associated Press

Two more major oil companies, Mobil Corp. and Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), say their first-quarter earnings rose sharply from a year earlier.

But third-ranked Texaco Inc. said its results were flat due to year-earlier gains not being realized in the latest quarter, and its $10.1 billion acquisition of Getty Oil Co. two months ago.

Most of the large U.S. oil concerns enjoyed significant improvement in the latest quarter, in large part because of depressed results the previous year.

Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil company, said its first-quarter profit rose 52 percent to $380 million, or 93 cents a share, from $250 million, or 62 cents a share, a year earlier.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 256 taxable funds)		37	9.36	9.24

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 256 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $883.1 million to $165.9 billion for the week ended April 25, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 9.36% from 9.29%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 9.24% from 9.17%. The taxable funds' average maturity shortened one day to 37 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Asset outflows were less than half of last week's decrease. As the 7-day average yield on taxable money funds continued its upward climb for the 11th consecutive week, money fund assets should increase in the weeks ahead."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, q - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability. Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746. 617/429-5930.

Business productivity slowly rising

By The Associated Press

First-quarter earnings statements in the auto and oil industries provided fresh evidence of a surging economy, but the rise in business productivity was continuing at a slightly slower pace than last year.

The 2.6 percent annual rate gain in productivity in the first quarter was down from the advance in the fourth quarter of 1983, the Labor Department said.

Nevertheless, the figures released Thursday suggested continued improvement in the business indicator that private and government economists contend is a vital barometer of the ability of American business to cope with steadily mounting international competition.

Ford Motor Co. on Thursday announced record first-quarter earnings of $897 million in the first quarter, putting the nation's No. 2 automaker in position to break its record profit for a full year before the summer is out.

The first-quarter earnings were nearly half Ford's record annual profit of $1.87 billion earned in 1983.

General Motors Corp., the only U.S.-based automaker that has not reported its first-quarter results, also is expected to post a record quarter.

GM's figures are expected to confirm that combined 1984 earnings of U.S. automakers will shatter the industrywide record of $6.1 billion set last year. Two more major oil companies, Mobil Corp. and Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), said Thursday their first-quarter earnings rose sharply from a year earlier.

But third-ranked Texaco Inc. said its results were flat due to year-earlier gains not being realized in the latest quarter, and its $10.1 billion acquisition of Getty Oil Co. two months ago.

The 2.6 percent gain in productivity represents performance in private business excluding agriculture.

It resulted from a 9.9 percent increase in worker output and a 7.2 percent rise in hours worked, the best showing in that category since working hours rose at a 10.5 percent clip in the second quarter of 1978.

Overall business productivity, including the farming economy, improved at an annual rate of 2.9 percent, according to the report.

Productivity is a measure of the volume of goods and services the economy puts out in an hour of paid working time.

In a separate report, the labor department said new applications for unemployment insurance payments fell to roughly 345,000 in mid-April from 388,000 the previous week, reversing a short-lived trend of rising claims for benefits.

But economists in and out of government acknowledge that this weekly fixture is among the most volatile of economic indices, and thus should be watched for long-term trends rather than week-to-week variations.

The level of new claims in the week ended April 14 was down by about 143,000 from a year earlier.

In other economic developments Thursday:

—The nation's basic money supply, M1, fell $500 million to a seasonally adjusted average of $535.9 billion in the week ended April 16 from $536.4 billion the previous week, the Federal Reserve Board reported.

Congress not hearing steelmakers' pleas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. steel industry, said by a top executive to be "in its deepest crisis since the Depression," is not getting an enthusiastic response to its plea to Congress for import quotas on foreign steel.

Testifying Thursday before the House Ways and Means trade subcommittee, industry executives ran into skepticism from members and a Congressional Budget Office opinion that quotas alone won't reverse Big Steel's 10-year decline.

Subcommittee chairman Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., said that although he considers steel to be "a sick industry," he thinks legislated steel quotas would prompt other troubled industries to demand them and would set off international trade wars.

Reps. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., and Thomas Downey, D-Calif., quoted from an unpublished CBO report questioning legislation that would restrict steel imports to 15 percent of U.S. needs.

Frenzel said the report concludes that "quotas will not raise sufficient revenues to increase investment to levels the industry claims it needs to be competitive."

The report also says that "it's doubtful any sort of import restriction by itself can reverse the industry decline," according to Frenzel.

Steel company executives portrayed a troubled present and bleak future for their industry, which they said is losing U.S. customers to cheap imports unfairly subsidized by foreign governments that ignore world trade agreements.

"Steel is now in its deepest crisis since the Depression," said David Roderick, chairman of U.S. Steel Corp. and chairman of the American Iron and Steel Institute. "At stake is nothing less than our future as a major world industry and our position as the principal supplier of steel to the American economy."

Roderick urged subcommittee approval of the quota bill sponsored by more than 100 House members. The quotas would last for five years, during which time domestic steelmakers would be required to reinvest nearly all steel-related revenues in plant modernization.

Quota advocates cited a litany of statistics to support their plea.

They said imported steel captured 26.2 percent of the U.S. market in January, up from 13.4 percent in 1974; employment declined 46 percent from 1975 to 1983; the industry lost $6 billion in 1982 and 1983; and last year attracted only $1.9 billion of the $5 billion needed in new investment annually.

"To continue in this manner is tantamount to the eventual liquidation of the domestic steel industry," Roderick said. "To permit such an industry to dissolve literally before our eyes is to invite disaster."

The executives warned that a continuation of the decline would leave the United States with an increasingly smaller steelmaking capacity, leaving the nation vulnerable to higher prices and, at worst, embargoes of foreign steel.

Roderick said the industry was coming to Congress for help because it has been unable to reverse the downward spiral through previous plant modernization, cost-cutting and case-by-case, country-by-country appeals to the U.S. Trade Commission.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

1,731 drilling permits issued

DENVER — A total of 1,731 permits to drill wells for oil or gas were issued in the United States during the week ended April 13, Petroleum Information Corp. has reported.

The total is down from the 1,879 permits issued the previous week — a decrease of 7.9 percent. The number is also lower than the 1,759 permits issued during the same week a year ago. Permits to drill are a measure of the drilling intentions of the nation's oil operators.

Permits to drill new field wildcats — or purely exploratory wells — increased from the same week a year ago — to 186 from 140, an increase of 32.9 percent. Permits issued for "other exploratory" wells numbered 182 for the week. Development well permits totaled 1,363 for the week.

Regionally, the Appalachian Basin posted a decrease of 143 permits from the previous week for a total of 262. Several states showed gains over the previous week. Those included: Texas, from 612 to 628; Oklahoma, from 191 to 198; Kansas, from 134 to 166; California, from 36 to 55; and West Virginia, from 60 to 66.

Among states showing a decline in permits issued were Ohio with 121, down from 232 a week ago; and Illinois with 35, down from 60.

Oil, gas owners overpaying property tax

The State Property Tax Board indicates that oil and gas owners are overpaying local property taxes by tens of millions of dollars. A preliminary audit shows that many appraisal districts are violating the tax code's requirement that no txpayer's property to be assessed at more than ten percent of the weighted average level of appraisals of other property in the district.

While oil and gas properties are typically appraised at or near 100 percent of market value, other types of properties are oftn assessed at a much lower percentage. The Texas petrofeum industry paid $2.4 billion in local taxes in 1982.

FTC requests more information on merger

HOUSTON — The Superior Oil Co. has confirmed that it has been requested, as expected, to supply additional information to the Federal Trade Commission regarding the proposed merger between Mobil Corp. and Superior. Mobil made a similar announcement recently.

Like Mobil, Superior said it would respond promptly. After both Mobil and Superior file responses to the requests, a 20-day waiting period goes into effect.

ENSTAR pays $18.1 million to drilling firm

HOUSTON — ENSTAR Corp. has announced it has paid $18.1 million to a contract drilling firm to resolve a dispute over use of an offshore drilling rig.

The agreement with the drilling contractor, Cliffs Drilling Co., came after a ruling by an arbitration panel. The contractor had sought arbitration, charging that ENSTAR had anticipatorily breached a 36-month contract for the rig. ENSTAR had rejected the rig after extensive cracks occurred in one of its legs in November 1982 and again in March 1983.

Consultants to ENSTAR had advised that the rig was unsafe and incapable of performing under the contract. Two offshore rigs owned and operated by others, the Ocean Ranger and the Glomar Java Sea, were lost at sea in well publicized recent accidents, which claimed 165 lives.

The payment, which has been made, was charged against earnings for the first quarter of 1984, leaving the company with a one-time non-recurring quarterly loss.

Seismic land crews show decrease

TULSA — The total number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and U.S. waters during March was 471, representing a decrease of fifteen from the February total, according to the Society of Exploration Geophysicists' latest monthly report. A significant protion of the decline in the number of crews working during March was due to poor weather in several operating areas.

The March total (471) represents a decrease of three percent from last month, a five percent increase over March 1983, a 27 percent decrease from March 1982, a 23 percent decrease from March 1981, a one percent decrease from March 1980, a 29 percent increase over March 1979 and a gain of 41 percent over the same month in 1978.

Noble completes offshore discovery well

ARDMORE, OK — Noble Affiliates, Inc. has announced a natural gas and condensate discovery well offshore Louisiana on Federal lease West Delta 18. The lease contains 1,035 acres and was acquired for $6,627,000 at the May 1983 Federal lease sale.

The OCS G 5669, No. 1 was drilled to 19,800 feet, and three zones were tested. An upper zone flowed gas and condensate from perforations between 15,160 and 15,218 feet at a maximum rate of 15.2 million cubic feet of gas and 701 barrels of condensate per day through a 31/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,450 pounds per square inch. The middle zone flowed 3.5 million cubic feet of gas and 85 barrels of condensate per day through a 14/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,485 pounds per square inch through perforations between 15,349 and 15,365 feet. A lower zone flowed 10.5 million cubic feet of gas and 230 barrels of condensate per day through a 24/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,950 pounds per square inch from perforations between 15390 and 15,422 feet. Two additional pay zones were logged, but not tested in the discovery well. An offset development well is presently drilling and a production platform has been ordered.

s stormy years for petroleum refineries

[illegible]RK (AP) — The 1980s [illegible] stormy years for the [illegible] refining business, with [illegible] Co. the latest casualty.

[illegible], which believed it had a [illegible] in its refineries in Houston and the Bahamas in the days of [illegible] shortages and soaring [illegible], disclosed earlier this month [illegible] its lenders had suddenly shut [illegible] trade credit for its oil operations. Then, Charter sought court protection from creditors as it attempts to reorganize under the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

The Jacksonville, Fla., company is not alone among troubled refiners. While it has been cutting production and laying off staff in Houston, scores of other refineries have been shut down in the past two years.

Here are some questions and answers about the plight of the refining industry:

Q: What is refining?

A: Refining is the manufacturing process used to convert crude oil into petroleum products such as gasoline, kerosene and heating oil. When the price of refined products is higher than the cost of crude oil, refining operations are profitable.

Q: Has that profit picture changed?

A: Yes. For example, Charter had operating profits of $411.8 million from refineries in 1979 but operating losses of $54.8 million in 1983. In 1979, following the Iranian revolution, gas shortages emerged, long lines formed at U.S. service stations and prices of gasoline and other refined petroleum products were rising faster than world oil prices.

"Big fat profit margins opened up," says William Randol, a securities analyst who follows the oil industry for the New York investment firm of First Boston Corp. "By the end of 1981 and early 1982 things were falling apart pretty quickly."

Wyoming, seven other states challenge windfall profits tax

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The State of Wyoming has joined seven other Western states in challenging the federal government's authority to impose a windfall profits tax on those states' share of federal oil royalties.

In a court brief filed with the 10th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Denver, Wyoming Assistant Attorney General Howard Schrinar argued the Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 does not intend to increase total federal windfall profits tax revenues by taxing the states' 50 percent share of federal oil production.

The friend of the court brief was filed on behalf of Wyoming, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, California, Nevada and North Dakota, in support of New Mexico, which is involved in litigation with the federal government over the windfall tax issue.

New Mexico successfully challenged Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan in 1981, but the case is now on appeal. In the latest court brief, Schrinar urged the appeals court to uphold the decision favoring New Mexico.

Congress evaluated and reviewed the total federal revenues which would be raised under the Tax Act.

"However, the revenue projections used by Congress specifically excluded revenue from oil owned by the United States Government," it pointed out.

"If, as appellant argues, Congress intended for the states' share of federal oil royalty to be subject to the windfall profit tax, why weren't the very significant increases in federal revenues, which such an approach would realize, contained in the budget projections relied upon by Congress?

"If the windfall profit tax is not applied against the states' 50 percent fixed share of federal royalities, total federal revenues will remain constant," the document contended.

G. CRAIG NELSON

W.S. 'Jake' JACOBSEN

PERCY C. O'QUINN

TERRY CLAY

L. WAYNE FEELER

W. S. (Stan) HAWTHORNE

G. CRAIG NELSON has been appointed vice president of sales and marketing for Cooper Manufacturing Corp. in Tulsa, and its subsidiaries, Challenger Rig and Manufacturing and Midway Rig Corp.

Nelson, with a degree in marketing from the University of Oklahoma, has over 25 years experience in the sales and marketing of capital goods to the oil, water, construction and mining industries. Nelson held similar positions with Chicago Pneumatic and Koehring Speedstar, most recently serving as vice president and general manager of Bert Smith Machinery Co., Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

W.S. "JAKE" JACOBSEN has been named manager, oil field product sales for the Salem Tool Co. In Salem, Ohio.

Jacobsen, a native of Tulsa, began his career in the oil fields while in college at Oklahoma State University, and later served as a flight engineer in the Army Air Force curing World War II. After his discharge he was employed at Buda Engine Equipment in Odessa, and in 1948 moved to Unit Rig & Equipment Co. After four years he joined Fred E. Cooper Co. where he rose to the position of vice president. In 1977 he was appointed vice president, oil field sales for Crane Carrier Corp. where he remained until joining Skytop Brewster as Mid-Continent area manager.

Tidewater Inc.'s oil and gas subsidiary, Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc., has announced two staff promotions in its Midland office.

PERCY C. O'QUINN, formerly vice president of drilling and production, has been promoted to senior vice president. TERRY CLAY has been named vice president, manager of exploitation.

Both promotions were announced by Darol Ramey, president of Hilliard Oil & Gas, and are effective immediately.

O'Quinn, joined Hilliard in 1978 as manager of production. In accordance with his new promotion, he will remain in charge of all of Hilliard's drilling and production operations.

Clay joined Hilliard in 1980. Prior to that time, he was employed with Exxon and Superior Oil in geological and exploration assignments. In his new capacity, he will be responsible for a variety of functions associated with reservoir engineering. These include development drilling plans, workover projects and evaluating the potential reserves located in a given geological area.

At a special presentation ceremony recently, National Petroleum Refiners Association Board Chairman, Mac Jordan presented several NPRA safety awards to L. WAYNE FELLER, Director, Feedstocks, El Paso Products Co., Odessa. The Olefin Plant received the NPRA's Gold Award; the Polyethylene Plant received the NPRA's Four Years Award; and the Styrene Plant received the NPRA's Two Years Award.

Local politicians woo voters for May 5 primary

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Twelve politicians wooing the voters for support in the May 5 primary delved into statistics, qualifications, leadership and who can bring the most dignity into office Thursday night.

Nine Republican Party candidates and three Democratic Party candidates showed up at the forum sponsored by the Midland Chapter of Black Democrats.

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, a Republican, said the "many" accomplishments during his seven-year tenure as sheriff have been brought about by his leadership, the support of the Commissioners' Court and "perhaps the most important ingredient — public support. And I've certainly had a nice share of that."

The sheriff, 41, said his department is in a building process and is striving for excellence.

Gary Painter, the sheriff's opponent in the Republican primary election, has criticized Smith's operation of the Sheriff's Office.

"The turnover rate and the morale in the department is also a problem," Painter, 37, said. "If elected, that problem will take care of itself."

Painter, whose platform has included bolstering the sheriff's patrol force, said "the people in rural areas deserve the same protection just as well as anyone else."

MIDLAND POLICE Detective Sgt. Joe Carr, 44, the uncontested Democratic Party candidate for sheriff, said "I'm qualified; I'm capable" of serving Midland County.

Carr said "rural Midland County needs a little bit more work than it is presently getting."

District Attorney Vern Martin, 53, and Al Schorre, 37, his Republican challenger in the bid for district attorney, disagreed on Martin's conviction rate.

Schorre, who said he based his figures on a report by the Texas Judicial Council, said Martin's conviction rate has been 43 percent. Martin, who has been in office since 1977, said the rate is 67 percent — above the state average of 62.5 percent.

"We need to change our management," Schorre said. "If we're not winning any more than 43 percent of the cases, we need some new management..., some fresh blood, some fresh ideas and a new approach."

"I'D LIKE TO change up our District Attorney's office, change some of the emphasis," said Schorre. He proposed restricting plea bargaining and probations, making the District Attorney's office more "accessible to people," and creating a victim-witness program to notify victims and witnesses of court proceedings.

Martin, who noted in an air of humor that "my opponent says naughty things about me," said, "I don't think anyone really questions my qualifications for this job.

"My obligation as district attorney is to try to see that justice is done in this county...and to look at the complete picture in making a decision."

Martin said he'd be "delighted" to tell anyone about his office procedures and prosecution record.

Martin said he has "developed and still have some of the best young prosecutors in Texas and in this country."

"I hope we will continue to develop those kind of people who have integrity and devotion...and know what they are doing. I can assure you I'm behind the scenes or in the forefront helping them to learn what what they are supposed to be doing."

TWO OTHER Republicans, Mark Dettman, 31, and Michael L. Williams, 30, are vying for the county attorney's job on the Republican ticket.

Dettman, first assistant county attorney since 1981, said the only issues in the race are "experience and qualifications.

"What we need in the County Attorney's office is someone who has experience in criminal prosecution and who also has experience in the various civil areas, juvenile matters, child welfare matters, state court defense and federal court defense...someone who is familiar with all aspects of the office."

Williams, chief prosecutor for the 142nd State District Court, said he has had "the opportunity to try a full range of cases, ranging from shoplifting all the way up to murder."

As chief prosecutor, Williams said he has the "responsibility to advise younger assistants" in the District Attorney's office.

In 1982, when he was in private practice, Williams said he tried as many cases as did the County Attorney's office: 12. In 1983, that office outdid him by trying 20 cases.

"IN ORDER TO stop crime," he said, "you've got to get convictions." Williams said he has tried 10 cases and got 10 convictions since he returned to the District Attorney's office last year. Prior to that, Williams said that as defense counsel he tried six cases in the Midland County Court "against the present County Attorney's office" and received five not-guilty verdicts. "My record against that office was fairly good."

Williams also cited his "wide range" of exposure in civil litigation.

Three Republicans are in the race for the justice of peace nomination.

The incumbent, Charlie Sprayberry, 43, said his docket is current. "There's not a build-up or a delay in the cases." He said "twice the number of driver's license admininstrative hearings are processed through my court" and that more civil cases are filed in his court.

SPRAYBERRY, who characterized himself as "a working judge," said he is available to the public "if someone needs to talk with me."

He cited a "rash of a lot of inquests" — six — he has handled in a 24-hour period and that he recently was called out on a triple death and then on a "death (a hanging) in our jail."

Dewey Lee, 53-year-old chief investigator for District Attorney Martin, said he is "very healthy, energic...and capable" of handling the justice's job.

Welsh mercenaries strike fair blows

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Two 12th century Welsh mercenaries met in combat Thursday in Odessa, while a 10th century Kelt merchant, a 16th century Spanish crusader and a 15th century English weaponsman watched.

Lord Owain Llwyd and his shield brother, Terence ap Rhys, struck real blows, on eknocking Llwyd unceremoniously to the ground.

Observers might have rubbed their eyes and pondered the possibility of the hot West Texas sun having affected their judgment. But this was real, and the participants have temporarily taken on the identities that go with the armor.

The combatants, who as shield brothers would stand together in a melee, were warming up for this weekend's Shakespearean Renaissance Fair of the Southwest where the centuries can disappear for players and viewers alike.

Llwyd, who goes by Tom Floyd when out of armor, and Rhys, whose 20th century nomenclature is Terry Reece, are members of the local shire of the Society of Creative Anachronisms.

This group will give fair visitors a feel for the medieval lifestyles they have chosen to pursue and emulate in their spare time. Activities are scheduled for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

In addition to the combat exhibitions based on tournaments in the days of chivalry and honor, entertainment will consist of performances by the Permian Ballet Theatre, the Rainbow Traveling Circus, the Kaleidoscope Players, the Ector County Library Puppet Players, the Odessa College Brass Ensemble and the Permian Consort.

Jesters, poets, balladeers and other performers will be wandering about the Globe grounds throughout the two-day event, clad in period costumes from the Elizabethan times and other days of old.

Artisans, craftsmen and merchants will be plying wares following the theme of reviving appreciation for the various cultures and lifestyles.

"Entertainment-wise, we're going to have something going on all the time," said Globe manager David Weaver, "People can come out and get an eyeful of different things."

Planned Permian Basin art institute will be well worth 12-year wait

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It was 12 years in the making, but Odessa will get a fine arts center worth the wait.

More than a city museum, The Art Institute for the Permian Basin will combine the clout of local cultural arts groups and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin to expose residents to and educate them on the broad gamut of the fine arts.

The Board of Regents of the University of Texas agreed in a mid-April meeting to lease 2½ acres on UTPB grounds, paving the path for opening the arts center.

Board members planned for six years the opening of what was to be the Odessa Art Museum after as many years of efforts to gather funds and support.

But when it came time to name the facility, which is easily accessible to Midlanders by State Highway 191, the board decided to include the rest of the area.

Donations enabling the idea to become reality also came from outside the city. "That's when we realized we were limiting it by calling it the Odessa Art Museum," said board member Leonard Fisher.

The 12,000-square-foot building will sit on the southeast side of the UTPB grounds on University Blvd., near the college's south entrance. Among the facilities at the institute, expected to open by the fall of 1985, will be:

— An auditorium with an 84-person seating capacity.

— Two workshop rooms where artisans can give seminars and lectures.

— Two gallery areas.

— A sculpture garden.

Explaining that "the main thrust will be education," Fisher noted the institute will not be a formal education institution.

While no formal educational facilities are in the initial plans, Fisher said, he did not discount the possibility of such a future expansion.

"It depends how well it's supported by the community," he said, pointing out UTPB already offers courses in the arts.

As part of an effort to attract support for the facility, board member Doris Breaux said, "In the beginning years, we will use the idea of bringing in exhibits."

Odessa mayor unveils crime, law enforcement task force

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mayor John Minor unveiled his first task force at a Thursday press conference. The new mayor said the committee would study crime and law enforcement in what has been called the murder capital of the United States.

The Mayor's Task Force on Crime and Law Enforcement, a citizen's group he said would look at "the very serious persistent crime problem here in Odessa," has a chairman — KTPX-TV's station manager Carl Rogers — and a purpose.

"I see prostitution, dope-related crimes and violence among our youth as a cancer in our community — one that needs the special insight and perspective of our concerned citizenry," said Minor in a press release distributed after the conference.

"It's not that I feel the police department's not doing its job," said Minor. "It may be that the police are doing everything they can."

But the prepared release said, "I want them to provide the Mayor and City Council with a clear understanding of the correlation between the tremendous growth of the Police Department's budget and the City's growing crime problem and the decreasing morale among the rank and file officers of the department."

As municipal court administrator of the city for 10 years, Minor had the opportunity to observe the police department.

Police Chief Alan Stewart could not be reached for comment. Spokesman Lt. Rusty Baker declined comment on the prostitution problem, the accusations of low morale among officers and the need for the task force.

Baker quoted figures on crime rates showing the number of murders had decreased from a high of 27 in 1982 to three for the first quarter of this year.

Similarly, rapes reported decreased from highs of 47 in 1980 and 46 in 1982 to seven through March 1984.

The group will have 60 days for study, then will present their findings to City Council. Other than Rogers, Minor said members of the group would come from "a broad cross section of the public," but they haven't been selected.

"During the campaign, I talked about involving citizens," he said, "That's what we've set about doing." Minor promised other task forces would be formed within two weeks.

Law enforcement has concentrated recently on curbing prostitution in Odessa. Nine arrests were made in an organized effort involving Odessa police and Department of Public Safety investigators, three days after the April 7 election which saw Minor unseat the city's incumbent mayor.

"I think it's impossible for City Council and the mayor to study in-depth the city's spending habits," said Minor in explaining the need for task forces to report to the city government.

"My intention is to be uninvolved" in the committee, he said.

Fired TEC official takes battle to court

AUSTIN (AP) — The former admininstrator of the Texas Employment Commission, fired after a 30-year career with the agency, will start his job-hunting in the courtroom, looking to get his $52,300-a-year job back.

Ernie Tullis, the apparent loser in a power struggle with the three employment commissioners, said he was "a little surprised" when the commissioners axed him Thursday.

"I said 'a little surprised,' " Tullis, 50, told reporters. "I didn't say I was totally surprised."

The commissioners fired Tullis during an emergency meeting called after Attorney General Jim Mattox said in an opinion Wednesday that the commissioners — not the administrator — are in charge of the agency that hands out unemployment checks.

In a lawsuit filed April 17, Tullis alleged the commissioners had violated the Open Meetings Act and overstepped their authority.

The five-minute Thursday meeting ended with a 2-1 vote that ended Tullis' career, which started with a $1.10-an-hour temporary clerk job.

Diane Van Helden of Austin, Tullis' lawyer, said she will ask a state district judge to rule that the commissioners illegally fired Tullis at an improper meeting.

"I think his concern is not as much with having the pleasure of working with those people as it is for the implications for the State of Texas and its (federal) unemployment grant," she said.

The lawyer said the U.S. Department of Labor, which sends unemployment funds to the TEC, might frown upon the firing of the man with whom they deal.

She said Tullis' lawsuit also will cite the state "whistle-blowers" act which protects employees who point out wrongdoing.

The spark that ignited the Thursday firing was a Wednesday letter from Tullis to the State Purchasing and General Services Commission in which Tullis offered to sell TEC's three buildings near the Capitol. The commissioners and the adminsitrator have been squabbling over the sale for weeks.

Tullis said the 1983 Legislature authorized negotiations for the sale of the agency buildings, owned by the federal government, to the State Purchasing and General Services Commission.

TEC Chairman Ed Grisham said during the meeting that the letter was sent without commission approval.

'Working draft' to provide start for school reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says a $2.4 billion "working draft" of public school reform laid before a House committee should help gather support needed to call a special legislative session.

"This is a timely working document that adds further impetus toward our agenda for education reform and advances our search for a consensus," White said Thursday.

Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairman of the House Public Education committee, told a news conference the 76-page document would be a starting point for his committee when it begins meeting May 7.

"My staff and I have been working closely with the speaker's office, the lieutenant governor's office and the commissioner of education on the specifics of a reform package," White said. "Representative Haley's proposal parallels our ongoing discussions, and I look forward to working with him in this effort."

Haley said the draft, drawn with the help of the Texas Education Agency and the Legislative Budget Board, adopted numerous recommendations of the Select Committee on Public Education — but a number of controversial proposals were ignored.

"These were just not practical from a cost standpoint," Haley said of the overlooked SCOPE suggestions.

Among the SCOPE recommendations left out was one that would abandon the elected State Board of Education in favor of an appointed smaller board. Other spurned proposals called for a longer school day, a longer school year and full-time kindergarten for 4-year-olds.

White has said he will call a special session of the Legislature in late May or June to consider public school education and teachers pay, if there is a consensus of agreement by House and Senate leaders.

Local candidates woo voters for May 5 primary

Contrary to Sprayberry's statement that Sprayberry is the "only candidate" who has three years experience in the judicial system, Lee said he has been in the District Attorney's office seven years and "really believed that the District Attorney's office was part of the judicial system."

Lee said he has been "working, investigating, preparing and assisting" prosecutors in "all types of felony crime" cases in district courts.

The third candidate for the justice's job, Midland schoolteacher Robbie J. Rucker, 43, said that her education and experience in counseling with students and their parents and her interest in the law "qualify me to be justice of the peace.

"I WILL TO THE best of my ability be fair, impartial and professional," she said. "After all, this court is your court; more people come to this court than to any other court. So, I want to treat everyone as a human being."

Ms. Rucker said her immediate goals as a justice would be "to bring dignity, professionalism and compassion to this office."

"I'll strive for more efficiency....Judgments will be based on logic, common sense and the law," she said.

"I want to do a better job than is presently done right now," Ms. Rucker said.

Rick Kerr, the 26-year-old Democratic Party candidate for justice, was not at the forum. He is to challenge the winner of the Lee-Rucker-Sprayberry race in the Nov. 6 general election.

Midland County Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, 64, and Scott Welch, 30, are seeking the Democratic Party nomination for commissioner of Precinct 3.

"I'm concerned. I'm interested. I do have the time (to be commissioner)," said Davis, a retired schoolteacher, "and I expect to see great things for Midland County."

The commissioner said the cooperation between county government and the political subdivisions "is probably at its peak" today.

Davis said a person "can spend an awful lot of time in the role of commissioner or you can spend as little time as you choose." Davis said he has spent a "great deal of time" in that role.

His opponent said a commissioner has "to get out and meet the people and find out what their concerns are, what they want done."

"I'm concerned with the county," Welch said, "(with) the same problems you are concerned with, and they're not all problems. There are good parts, too."

Welch, an independent electrical contractor, said, "If you don't make them (the public) happy, you don't make your bosses happy, you're out of a job."

He also said he would "take advantage of 14 years of experience," in referring to his father, Charlie Welch, who served as commissioner of Precinct 2 for 14 years. However, he indicated he would not be a puppet of his father.

Planned art institute to be well worth 12-year wait

"We will bring in things the Permian Basin hasn't seen before," promised Fisher. The combined resources of the local groups and the UT system (which owns large art collections) can be expected to produce some noteworthy exhibits.

"We're looking forward to having access to what the university can get," said Fisher.

While UTPB will make it easier for the institution in its infancy, the university also figures to benefit from the presence of the independent fine arts center on its grounds. "It just expands their facilities," said Ms. Breaux.

The process leading to the Board of Regents' approval of the 99-year lease at $1 per year took three to four years, recalled Ms. Breaux, noting that this agreement provides the land needed and saves the $500,000 that had been budgeted for land purchase.

"It provided an incentive for the community to support it," she said. Revenue from Fiesta Del Arte's (an annual art show and festival) over the past 11 years garnered $230,000. This year's affair, which featured the wares of 110 artists, earned $70,000 for the cause.

Local pledges provided $260,000 of the more than $1 million collected to finance the project. Other major contributions included Houston Endowment Inc.'s $400,000 and $100,000 from an anonymous donor.

A ground-breaking ceremony is set for May 10 at 10:30 a.m. If all goes as scheduled, construction should begin by October and be completed a year later.

The addition of another art museum to the area will help Midland's Museum of the Southwest, said Fisher. "The fact there are two art museums in a metropolitan area of 200,000 people will help both draw exhibits."

Because supporters have been together for 12 years before any structure, Fisher suggested the institute had a good starting point.

"We had the backbone before we had the building," he said, "We were able to start where a museum should start."

The first arts group was started 27 years ago when seven people formed the Art Association of Odessa, recalled Fisher.

This sprouted the Fiesta Del Arte Guild, which Ms. Breaux said began because "some ladies wanted to put on a little art show" and has grown to enlist 150 volunteers. Now, years and fund-raising drives later, a fine arts center will be built.

Welsh mercenaries strike fair blows

"People enjoy going back and seeing how things were done in the past," said Weaver.

Along with the entertainment, the purpose of the fair is to educate people. "You get an appreciation for heritage passed on from the Elizabethan era, and you gain an appreciation for the changes that have been made," said Weaver.

Far from the traditional West Texas celebration, this event almost seems out of place in Odessa, and Weaver admitted this has been an obstacle in attracting locals.

"If something's in your area, people tend to take it for granted," said Weaver, but, "Once people get there, they enjoy it."

Visitors can choose from a variety of entertainment.

Jerry Lee brings the Rainbow Traveling Circus from North Carolina. Lee and his troupe will walk on stilts, juggle "devil sticks" popular in ancient China and entertain with clown acts. His showstopper is knocking sticks from the mouth of some bystander with a 16-foot bullwhip.

Elizabethan food and drink will be available. Costumes can be rented at the Globe. Traditional games of this period, such as Jacob's Ladder and King of the Log, will be played.

The entire affair is centered around a renaissance of appreciation of these cultures.

Promoting more appreciation of these times, Lord Llwyd said, "It's just a good time. There's not much (chivalry and honor) left in the world. It's a dying art.

"You can be whatever you want to be, whatever you're interested in," he said.

Midlanders report losses of more than $16,000

From Staff Reports

Losses in excess of $16,000 were reported in theft and burglary complaints — and one robbery complaint — filed with city police during the past 24 hours.

In the robbery report, a woman clerk at the Kent Service Station, 3310 W. Wall, said a black man in his mid-50s entered the establishment about 6 a.m. Thursday and demanded money.

He escaped on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash. No weapon was displayed during the robbery, according to police. The suspect was further described as weighing about 160 pounds and having gray hair.

A clerk at The Liquor Store, 308 N. Midland Drive, told officers $257 was taken from the cash register by a male customer who distracted the clerk during the purchase of some orange juice about 7:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Roy C. Gould of 4207 Nelson Road said household goods and jewelry worth a total of $13,115 were among the items taken in a burglary of his residence Thursday. Entry was gained through an unlocked door, according to police.

Two residents of an apartment complex at 4415 Northcrest Drive said their vehicles were broken into Wednesday night. Stereo and camera equipment worth a total of $2,940 were reported taken.

And Ralph Shelton, 1804 E. Texas, told police assorted clothing — including a tuxedo — and an undetermined amount of change were stolen in a break-in at his home Thursday. Entry was gained by pulling open a rear door. The house had been ransacked.

JP rules suicide in hanging death

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry has ruled suicide in the hanging death of 23-year-old Mitchell Keith Olguin at the county jail Thursday morning.

Sprayberry said he based his ruling on the results of an autopsy report that said Olguin died of asphyxiation. He was found hanging from a strip of blanket in his cell about 8:30 a.m. Thursday.

Olguin, of 3106 W. Michigan, had been sentenced Wednesday to 25 years in prison. A jury had found him guilty of supplying two grams of cocaine to a Department of Public Safety undercover narcotics officer on the parking lot of a Midland convenience store last October.

Olguin had served a two-year prison term on a 1979 robbery conviction.

Survivors include two daughters, Patsy Ruth Noel, Albuquerque, N.M., and Betty Sue Carlson, Odessa; four brothers, F.C. Wheeler of Stanton, K.C. Wheeler of El Paso, Raymond Wheeler of Odessa and Robert Wheeler of Midland; two sisters, Blanche Rahm of Odessa, and Irene Danley of Midland; five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Absentee voting for primary light, administrator says

Absentee voting in person and by mail-out ballots in the May 5 Democratic Party and Republican Party primary elections totaled 740 through Thursday, according to Janeice Builta, elections administrator.

The count includes 211 people who voted in the Democratic Party and 529 who voted in the Republican Party. Of the Republican votes, 358 were in person and 171 were by mail. The Democrats cast 152 ballots in person and 59 by mail.

"I think it's light," Ms. Builta said of the turnout. "But I think it has picked up this week, and I think it's going to be heavy next week."

Absentee voting, which started April 16, ends at 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave.

"Every day, we have a few more (voters) than what we had the day before," she said.

Absentee ballots may be cast by those who expect to be out of the county on election day; whose religious beliefs preclude them from voting on Saturday; who will be working in the elections as judges, alternate judges or clerks; who are age 65 or older; or who are physically disabled.

Woman publishes 'steamy' romance magazines

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Some like it hot.

Some like it hotter.

For the woman who wants it sizzling, there's a new magazine destined to steam up the supermarket stands and leave the ladies in a lather.

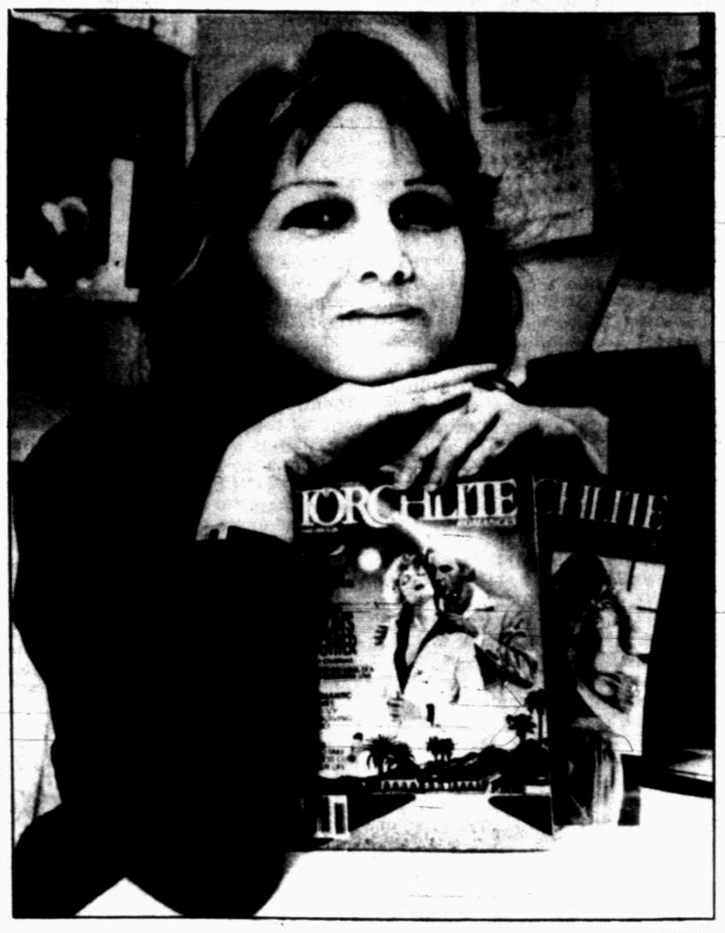

It's called Torch and it's put out by a Reston, Va., wife and mother who says there just isn't enough romance in our dreary lives. Forget Doris and Rock. Forget Rhett and Scarlett. Forget Bogie and Bergman and "we'll always have Paris."

Welcome to throbbing, smoldering, quivering Torch, and its sister publication Torchlite (buyers of romance publications like to buy more than one). For $1.25, you get a full-length romance novel with heroines running the gamut of emotional passion from aflame to afire.

There's a "major sex scene" by the third chapter, features on romantic hairstyles (10-gallon curls of the Dolly Parton persuasion), romantic food ("Wild Parfait"), romance novelist news ("Kristin James aka Lisa Gregory, a former lawyer, is married to a former priest and they have a lovely little girl"), romance travel articles ("The gondolier is a jaunty fellow") and romance horoscopes ("When you're hot, you're hot and this month you're all ablaze!")

The only thing missing is a scratch 'n' sniff fire extinguisher.

HIS MOUTH left hers and brushed her face with a warm rain of kisses. ... Then his hands and mouth began again the rapid whipping of desire through her, sending her deliriously to the glorious, exalted precipice of want and need, to a place she had never known before, a place where only he could take her.

An air-conditioned room, one hopes.

Not a reader of romance? Never mind. Leave one of these babies on the kitchen counter and fry an egg on it. Use it as a heating pad. Or instead of charcoal briquettes in the hibachi.

"The actual love act is done very poetically. And in pretty language," says Elizabeth Brandon-Brown, a 35-year-old blond with pencil thin eyebrows and a breathy enthusiasm who published her first issues of Torch and Torchlite in July.

Her inspiration, says the University of Florida journalism graduate, was similar romance magazines she noticed on a trip to England four years ago.

Since then, the romance novel in America has become a palpitating publishing phenomenon. According to Kathryn Falk, publisher of Romantic Times magazine, 35 to 40 percent of all paperbacks sold today are romances, with an estimated 22 million readers.

MS. BRANDON-BROWN says she got "hooked" on the books, quit her editorial job at the Business Review of Washington, did market studies, formed her own company (Quest Publications) and rented an office near her home.

When her husband, Frank, was RIFfed from his government job (GS-14 economist with the Energy Department), he joined his wife as associate publisher.

Printing full-length books in magazine form is not a novel idea. Nor has it been successful, despite the fact that the magazine generally costs less than a paperback. Barbara Cartland's World of Romance (published by Dolnatch Publications) folded several years ago for lack of money. So did another novel-in-magazine concept, Mag-A-Book.

But Kathryn Falk says she thinks Torch — the only magazine of its kind in the country — will make it. "All the research has shown there's a market for this.

"I like it very much," she adds, "although I do wish the covers could be a little different."

"You're not only getting romance in fiction," gushes the Torch publisher-editor, "but you're putting it into your life."

Ms. Brandon-Brown is betting heavily on it. She is currently printing 150,000 copies of Torch and Torchlite each month, only half of which are actually sold, she says. The magazine also is being peddled internationally and is especially popular, she says, in Japan. "The Japanese are crazy about romance novels!"

SHE RECEIVES more than 20 manuscripts a week from known and unknown writers, and the prose is rated on the publisher's personal Torch-O-Meter. Only one in 30 makes it, she says, and the authors are paid a royalty of five cents for each book sold. The majority of Torch readers, she says, are working, married women.

"We've just bought over 4,000 (supermarket) checkout pockets in the South, from West Viriginia down to Georgia and some in Florida, too. Which means triple sales."

Scorching its way across the heartland, cutting a swath through Self and Savvy and Seventeen magagzines.

"Impulse buying," she nods. "And the fact that being a digest size magazine, we get lost on a mainline rack."

She says there are three categories of romance novels: sweet, spicy and sensual. Sweet, she says wrinkling her nose, is the old-fashioned kind where the heroine gets kissed on the last page of the book. Spicy, she says, "may have only one sex scene."

Torch, she says, falls under the sensual. "That's the hottest selling category. The couple has normal, healthy physical relations throughout the book."

WHICH MEANS mucho sex.

"Absolutely," she says, eyes widening. "Not just physical love. They're making emotional love, and that's one great difference why romance is romance instead of a mainstream love story book or even soft porn. In the romance the emphasis is on the emotional buildup within that physical relationship. Without that, it's not there."

There are things you won't find in her magazines. Violence for one. Adultery for another.

"And it always ends in a permanent relationship."

Although her books fit the traditional formula, Ms. Brandon-Brown says romances have changed. The heroines are older ("between 24 and 32"), have careers and an independent life. The men are no longer bodice rippers. They are Tender. And Caring.

"The novels have really changed to reflect the societal role of women today."

According to the tip sheet Ms. Brandon-Brown gives to would-be Torch writers, "The heroine is a mature, capable woman who has a strong sense of personal identity. She is probably not a virgin and certainly not a naive young girl ... she is a spirited and sensitive woman looking for someone to share all the joys and exuberance that she demands of life; and is therefore vulnerable.

"The hero is a thoroughly modern man that any woman could easily imagine falling in love with. He should be strong, sexy, warm, caring and even humorous. He should be no more than six to eight years older than the heroine."

Just like real life.

"They're beginning to be more believable. I say believable, NOT realistic," she says. "Because the romance is basically an entertainment medium. It is a fantasy. It is purely for escape."

Seminars focus on romantic love

Hearst Feature Service

The men and women in the Los Angeles Hilton conference room were behaving in an exceedingly odd manner. Face to face, eyes closed, swaying to the cliche-ridden beat of Ravel's "Bolero," the couples were performing a sort of blind ballet, painting invisible loop-the loops in the air with their joined fingertips.

Nathaniel Branden nodded approvingly.

"Good. Feel the music," he urged in a soothing, hypnotic voice. "Don't think. Don't plan. Let the music move you."

A woman giggled. Another gasped.

"What are you learning about your partner?" the hypnotic voice continued. "What are you learning about the issues of leading and following? What are you learning about yourself?"

With the same intensity that marked the search for "inner self" a decade ago, Southern Californians now are desperately trying to fathom romantic love. Self-help paperbacks fill the bookracks. Colleges offer courses on the psychology of love. Talk-show callers don't want to talk about sex anymore — they want to talk about romance.

ALL OF which may explain why 70 men and women, with varying degrees of hope, resignation or foreboding, invested $300 each for a recent weekend with Nathaniel Branden, Ph.D.

Author of six books, including the best-selling "Psychology of Romantic Love," and founder of the Beverly Hills-based Biocentric Institute, the 43-year-old Branden is an admirer of individualist philosopher Ayn Rand. He scorns Freud, dismisses many psychological conventions and praises the liberating value of capitalism. A skeptic about most human institutions, he is an ardent advocate of romantic love, courtship and marriage. For the walking wounded of the sexual revolution, he is the guru of last resort.

Students at the weekend seminar — it's called an "intensive" — have come from six states. They include lawyers, engineers, a couple of school teachers, a karate instructor and at least one psychotherapist. Most are in their mid-30s.

Rapid fire, the students repeated the phrase, one by one, adding their own spontaneous endings:

" — he could leave me."
" — tying myself down."
" — being rejected."

As the exercise was repeated again and again, the responses became more revealing. Several faces are beet-red. One man was sweating profusely.

" — I might not really love him."
" — mother might not approve."
" — she would own me."

The students sat down, sobered and a little surprised by their blurted answers. Branden was pleased.

"Love is frightening, in case you haven't noticed," he said. "We don't see many cases of happy, romantic love sustained over time. We see relationships — even those we thought were perfect ones — breaking up. It's frightening, even when it's going well. We think, 'It can't last.'

"Serious romantic love has little to do with violins, fine restuarants and greeting cards," Branden told the students. "Romantic love is a passionate, physical, emotional and sexual attraction that reflects, above all, a high regard for the other person."

BRANDEN PAUSED to let the definition sink in. Several dozen pens scratched urgently across notepads.

For romantic love to succeed, Branden maintains, both man and woman must feel "a high degree of self-esteem" — a theme that pervades his work. Branden's popular 1969 book, "The Psychology of Self-Esteem," with its emphasis on what he calls "enlightened selfishness," helped to set the tone for the "Me Decade" of the '70s.

Some psychologists point to the recent interest in romantic love as evidence that people are ready to reject self-centered life-styles. But Branden, whose landmark book is now in its 17th printing, sticks to his philosophical guns. Rather than a rejection of self-interest, he argues, a search for romantic love is the logical extension of self-esteem.

In a way, it was a philosophical love affair. Branden first encountered Rand at the age of 14 when he read "The Fountainhead." At 20, he was introduced to the author-philosopher, and after graduation from University of California-Los Angeles, joined Rand in co-founding The Objectivist, a magazine dedicated to her philosophy.

Six years later, publicly and spectacularly, Branden was expelled from the Rand temple and scathingly denounced in The Objectivist by Rand herself. Exactly what happened between them, Branden has never revealed. But Rand disliked psychology in general and disapproved of Branden's experiments.

Dual careers affect relationships

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The emergence of dual career couples has caused some dramatic changes in American marriages. Today's husbands and wives must be attuned to their spouse's career as well as their own, says a woman who counsels couples about the hazards — and rewards — of such a relationship.

Denise Dwight Gingrich, director of Bucknell University's Career Development Center, says many couples have to depend on more than one income and often the tension this creates is destructive.

"We believe in a proactive approach to dealing with these issues rather than an reactive approach," says Ms. Gingrich, who had developed workshops in which couples are tested individually to measure their willingness to work together in establishing a relationship which allows room for more than one career.

An integral part of the workshop is this quiz she has devised for couples to individually gauge their sensitivity to the problems inherent in dual career marriages:

— It's better to marry someone in your field.

A. False. Often competition becomes the biggest issue.

— Even though you love your spouse, love cannot be counted on to solve a career conflict.

A. True. Love is an important bond, but one's career is more tangible and couples must work hard to solve problems to avoid marital disaster.

— In an equal relationship, neither person will need to compromise careers.

A. False. Compromises must be agreed upon at various stages by both individuals to meet changing needs.

— A dual career couple has extra money and is usually financially secure.

A. False. As income increases, it's inevitable that materialistic needs will also rise.

— It makes no difference if the man or woman earns more money.

A. False. Recent studies of couples with the woman out-earning the man prove there is no set pattern; some men adapt easily to this unconventional arrangement, others do not.

— Plan ahead. Waiting for one partner to get settled first can backfire.

A. True. Though compromises must be made, a partner who sits and waits may soon build resentment.

— The prospect of children should be discussed along with careers.

A. True. Many couples reach the "age-30 panic" when, in the midst of their respective careers, a child is wanted. Unless the change is carefully planned, neither partner will want to temporarily give up a career. Alternative methods are encouraged, including shared responsibilities and a leave of absence.

— Living together before marriage will tell if you are compatible with each other.

A. False. There are no guarantees. Honest communication is the key to a successful relationship.

— Divorce or separation is the answer to a career conflict.

A. False. Pain and hurt can almost be expected somewhere along the line. A dual career couple should understand each other's needs and act accordingly to establish a deeper, more satisfying relationship.

— Twenty-four hours in each day is enough for two careers, a home, friendships, individual activities and a healthy relationship.

A. True. Time management is essential. Make an effort to establish priorities and time will be more plentiful.

— The dual career couple has more difficulty in the job market and in a relationship than the traditional "housewife and breadwinner."

A. False. Soon the two career family will be the norm.

Foods once believed to be 'aphrodisiacs'

Copley News Service

"It flatters you for a while, it warms you for an instant, then all of a sudden it kindles a mortal fever in you," reported Madame de Sevigne of France, one of chocolate's biggest fans.

Fragrant, dark, beguilingly sweet and velvety smooth, chocolate has long been considered an aphrodisiac. Though it's doubtful that the 50 cups of cacaolatl (cocoa water) that Montezuma gulped before entering his harem for an amorous interlude had much effect on his sexual abilities, that legend may have some basis in fact.

Chocolate is, indeed, a stimulant, containing small amounts of the alkaloid theobromen, a substance similar to caffeine, which chocolate also contains in small amounts. Thus, chocolate "highs" are not just a product of its delicious nature.

Science, however, probably never will be able to document the ability of the Hershey Kiss to do anything but satisfy a chocoholic's sweet tooth.

Another supposed aphrodisiac of renown, the truffle, has a long and illustrious history of "takers." This intensely fragrant, purple-black member of the mushroom family grows deep in the soil at the base of certain trees.

Some folks insist that Henry IV (he of 300 oysters fame) owed his great sexual prowess to truffles. But, in fact, most accounts say that all he really needed was the presence of a besutiful woman.

New romance novel style stresses religious themes

Copley News Service

Fifty pages into Patricia Dunaway's new novel, "Irish Lace," it's evident that this is no typical paperback romance.

There's no X-rated imagery or steamy sex or characters hopping into beds — they barely get as far as kissing and holding hands. In fact, the heroine of "Lace," Brenna Larkin, is a rather Plain Jane who blushes upon hearing a mild expletive.

"I am a Christian," she heatedly declares to someone who has taken God's name in vain. "And when I say His name, I use it more carefully."

Later on, our heroine — a Texas-born lass who has been transplanted to the home of relatives in the Irish countryside — has her first encounter with the hero of the story. Does the scene culminate in torrid, passionate love? No, the pair sits down to a cup of coffee.

"They realized that they were tampering with temptations beyond their strength," Dunaway writes.

Unlike the highly sexed sagas of Judith Krantz and Johanna Lindsey — queens of the romance novel genre — authors such as Dunaway employ more conservative devices to advance the standard plot: girl meets boy, girl has misunderstanding with boy, girl gets boy.

And that's exactly what their editors want.

IN CHRISTIAN romance novels, the accent is on wholesomeness.

"We're targeting an audience — from older teens to senior citizens — that understands that there can't be romance with promiscuity, that there can't be romance with premarital sex," said Sarah Fortenberry, a spokeswoman for Thomas Nelson Publishers in Nashville, Tenn.

The largest Bible publisher in the world, Nelson is about to release a line of Christian romance paperbacks — under the "Cherish" imprint — that it hopes will capture a substantial share of the $200 million-plus romance novel market now dominated by Silhouette and Harlequin books.

Nelson is following in the footsteps of Silhouette, which in February issued the first four titles from its "Inspiration" series of Christian romances.

"Many, many readers were sending us letters indicating that they wanted stories with messages that emphasized personal values and religious beliefs, and less-sensuous situations," said Joan Schulhafer, a Silhouette spokeswoman. "So we introduced the Inspiration books. It's still too early to tell how they're faring on the market, but we fully expect them to sell well — to mainstream romance readers, too."

LIKE SILHOUETTE, Nelson doesn't expect its wares to be confined to Christian bookstores and Christian mail-order catalogs. The publisher promises an aggressive marketing campaign, going head to head in mainstream bookstores against its spicier counterparts.

"Our marketing surveys show that a good number of women readers of romance novels are tired of the constant emphasis on sex," said Etta Wilson, editor of the Cherish series.

"Many of these readers want stories in which the images of women more closely fit biblical guidelines and that emphasize strength of character. There is certainly a physical attraction that takes place between men and women in our stories, but it is also taken for granted that sex is something to be saved until marriage," she said.

Not only will the prose of the Cherish books be sexually tame. Covers will feature fully clothed couples holding hands and staring into the eyes of each other.

This approach is in stark contrast, for example, to the suggestive cover of a recent best-selling Lindsey title that pictures a nude male kneeling behind a woman clad only in her underwear.

"We want to portray on our covers a feeling of contentment between the couple, not one of lust," said Thomas Nelson art director Jim Bricker. "There won't be a bit of suggestiveness."

HE IS CONFIDENT that the typical romance novel enthusiast, encountering the Christian brand side by side in bookstores with the sexually explicit variety, will opt for the former.

"There's definitely a big market for this," he said.

However, Bricker's optimism and that of fellow editors at the house is not shared by most publishing industry analysts.

"If there's no cleavage on the cover and no indication that there's a rapturous romance taking place inside, forget it," said an editor at Publisher's Weekly, the book industry's foremost trade journal. "Readers of these books want sweet, savage love — not lily-white affairs."

The editor — who asked not to be identified because she hadn't yet examined the books in the Cherish series — said that the huge success in the last decade of romance stories has been solely due to their sexual explicitness.

"If you take that away, you haven't got much," she said. "That's why I don't view these books as competition for the Silhouettes and the Harlequins of the industry."

Thomas Nelson is nevertheless charging ahead with plans to release four books by August and a dozen by Christmas. A national advertising campaign, with a budget in the low five figures, will bring the word on radio and in women's magazines to potential readers. And there will be in-store merchandising and give-away contests to generate interest.

WILSON HAS for the past year been working with a stable of about a dozen veteran romance writers, who have been churning out stories with such innocuous titles as "The Challenged Heart," "Heart of Love," "Choices of the Heart," "The Heart of the Storm," "Change of Heart" and "Love Takes Flight."

The author of the latter work, Jane Peart, is a former Delta airline stewardess who has written a dozen or so romance novels for the mainstream market in the last three years.

Not surprisingly, "Love Takes Flight" concerns a stewardess, who falls in love with an airline pilot against the romantic backdrop of Bermuda.

"The Christian element in this story doesn't only concern a physical attraction between characters, but emphasizes their getting to know the facets of each other's personalities," Peart said. "I try to create romantic auras between two young attractive people, in which sex isn't explicit."

Her heroine is an appealing, modern girl, "not someone from a sheltered, rigid background," she said. "She knows that there is a moral choice to be made in a relationship with a man, and she makes that choice with conviction."

PEART SAID THE treatment of love scenes in her works could be compared to love stories filmed in the 1940s and 1950s.

"Take the final scene in 'Casablanca,' for instance. (Humphrey) Bogart and (Ingrid) Bergman never touch, yet that sequence to me is one of the most memorable romantic scenes ever filmed," said the writer from her home in Eureka, Calif. "That's how I handle romantic encounters."

Brand-name romance dates to the early '70s, when Canadian-based Harlequin Enterprises Ltd. introduced its first dozen titles of R-rated formula love stories. The 60,000-word books — packaged and promoted like any supermarket commodity, and targeted to an audience of older teens and housewives — were immediately successful.

BY 1979, Harlequin was selling 25 million novels a year and piquing the interest of other publishers.

Simon and Schuster jumped into the "love wars" in 1980 with its Silhouette line and was followed right away by eight other publishing houses, including Dell ("Candlelight Ecstasy" series) and Jove ("Second Chance at Love" series).

"We've been bombarded with short romances for women with little attention spans; long reads; stories for the sophisticated, educated reader; even a line featuring older characters geared toward senior citizens (New American Library's 'September Romances')," said the manager of a bookshop. "Now it's the born-again's turn."

He acknowledged that the market for steamy romances — which comprises up to 40 percent of all paperbacks sold in the United States and $200 million in sales — seems limitless.

But he wondered whether Thomas Nelson Publishers — with a much tamer product to peddle — will experience the commercial success enjoyed by rival publishers.

"I'll gauge their potential by my wife's reading habits. I consider her an average female reader, and she has a voracious appetite for the R-rated romances, much to my displeasure," he said. "To tell you the truth, I don't think she'd look twice at this Christian stuff. It'd bore her to tears."

Smells linked to romance

CHICAGO (AP) — For centuries, people have been wooed and wowed with the aid of myriad potions and fragrances, says Dr. John Amoore, an Oxford-educated biochemist and fragrance expert.

"No other substance has awakened the senses, triggered the imagination, inflamed hidden passions and captured the beauty, mystery and volatility of romance through the ages like perfume," he says.

Amoore, who holds both a master's and a doctoral degree in biochemistry, conceived his own theory of the human sense of smell while still an undergraduate and published it in 1952 under the title, "The Steriochemical Theory of Olfaction."

A former research chemist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, since 1978 he has been research associate in the Department of Otolaryngology at the University of California Medical Center, San Francisco.

Amoore, who serves as a consultant to Jovan Inc., a major American fragrance house, has done extensive research on the role that scents play in the attraction between men and women. Among the whimsical facts that have come to his attention are these:

— Homer offered his dinner companions perfume baths.

— Alexander the Great ordered the marble floors of his apartments to be bathed in perfume and his tunics to be soaked in fragrances.

— In Roman times, perfume vendors sold their flacons of fragrance along an entire boulevard in the ancient city of Capua.

— A perfume called "Guillotine" was worn by Parisians on the cutting-edge of fashion in 1789.

— Napoleon was a fragrance connoisseur, carrying almost a hundred potions including perfumes, scented pomades, shaving soaps and incense lozenges, packed in green Moroccan leather cases, on his treks across Europe.

— By the time of the Civil War, perfume sales in America had climbed to the million-dollar mark.

— In Victorian times, when fainting spells were de rigueur, dainty ladies' brows were soothed with lace handkerchiefs dipped in eau de Cologne.

— After World War I, the "dough boys" returned with French fragrances packed in their kit bags, and America's penchant for perfumes skyrocketed.

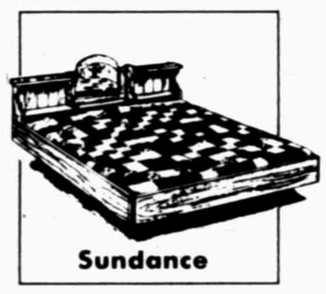

— During the "Roaring '20s," flappers rolled down their silk stockings and dabbed cologne behind their knees before doing the Charleston.

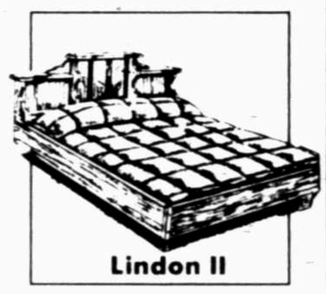

— In the late 1940s and 1950s, the pent-up demand for postwar luxury, coupled with more spendable income, spurred the development of hundreds of new fragrance products for both men and women.

— Ecologically-minded men went back to nature in the 1960s and reveled in citrus-based aftershaves. Many women thought these products transformed their spouses into walking lemons and oranges.

— During the 1970s, musk mania struck. Friday night predators splashed on confidence before stalking prey in singles' bars.

AT WORK

Politics often intrudes in workplace

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D

Act III, Scene II
Time: 5:00 Friday afternoon
Place: General Manager's office
General Manager: This is it. You're fired. Get out quickly. I don't want you here on Monday.

Operations Officer: Are you kidding? Last month you gave me a merit raise!

General Manager: I don't want to hurt you. I want you to succeed and I promise to write you a good letter of recommendation based on your technical skills. I will also give you a three-month leave of absence. But don't come back. The team can't take it.

This scenario is not made up. It happened, in fact, last week to Larry, the operations manager. He sat in my office perplexed, not understanding what really happened. His fate, however, was certainly sealed with that organization. The pertinent question was what to do now, and how to explain the sudden rift to prospective employers.

Reeling in disbelief, Larry cleaned out his desk and went home in shock, grief and outrage. Even weeks later Larry still couldn't believe what had happened.

The staff all knew that the city manager had a capricious, nearly crazy personality; certainly others had been fired, just as quickly without warning, without defense, without probation. His boss unfortunately could not deal with conflict and had no ability to work things out. A bad negotiator, he must have been crossed and then wrote Larry off. Firing people is like erasing them — the quicker, the cleaner, the easier for him. But not, of course, for an employee who is victim of his boss's immaturity.

Three issues now arose for Larry: (1) What should he do next: stay in his field or choose another? (2) Does his being summarily fired hurt him forever? (3) What can he tell a prospective employer?

To tackle the first, we considered several other related fields, to match his interest and skills. He had already contacted significant friends; after all he was respected in his own field. Despite the few offers made to switch to consulting or banking or corporate management, it was obvious that he belonged in city management.

Secondly, what does he say to justify himself to other city managers? He could simply tell the truth: so disarming, so puzzling; for the truth as he knows it is his best defense. His record is otherwise excellent. His boss's only indictment was that he was not "good for the team." Larry knows how to translate that. "Team" means his taking exception to his boss's last decision and thereby pushing him to his limit.

Would Larry behave differently another time, and not disagree, to save his job? Larry is not a rash, impulsive person; on the contrary, he is thoughtful, quiet, cautious, both task and team-oriented. In a career that is essentially political, Larry does have a lesson to learn — how to be more political, how to demonstrate support for his boss when they do agree so that when there is a disagreement, "concerns" can be more acceptable.

Are there any guarantees that it would work with such a boss? No. But there aren't any guarantees anyplace, anytime.

Larry's story is a sad one in many respects. Sad because Larry lost a job he enjoyed so much. Sad because he was badly hurt. Sad because he must relocate and uproot his family. Is anyone the better for it? It all depends on the way one approaches life. Events like this show that everything is essentially a risk.

But what Larry must do in his next job is to make himself more visible, more valuable. He must crack the barrier of quiet service and write about his successful projects, share his ideas in national city management associations, and build a more powerful reputation for himself. Why? Not only because he is good, but also because he must come to grips with reputation and power. He will have to use those strengths well. We'd all benefit.

DEAR ABBY

Pantyhose not normal pantry item

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have a friend who cooks catfish to perfection. We have always enjoyed it until he recently remarked that he prefers to strain the grease (to be reused) through a large pantyhose given to him by a heavyset lady-friend.

This offhand remark has disturbed me to the point of being unable to enjoy catfish prepared by my friend. Is his method of straining in any way dangerous? Even if the pantyhose were well-laundered, is there a possibility of germ infiltration, with the danger of hepatitis or some other disease?

Please contact your experts and let me know if I have reason to worry, or is it just a silly hang-up I should overcome?

It seems to me that catfish strained through my laundered shorts wouldn't be any different than catfish strained through pantyhose. — LOVES CATFISH IN MISSISSIPPI

DEAR LOVES: In all probability, you are needlessly worried because the high temperature of hot grease should eliminate the danger of germ infiltration. However, I can understand how the psychological aspect of the whole thing could conceivably spoil your appetite.

Buy your friend a pair of Fat Fanny Panty Hose (yes, there are such things) and ask him to replace the original panty hose "strainer" with a brand-new one.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old male college student with a serious problem: infidelity.

In the last six years, I've had four serious love relationships (one at a time) with four of the most terrific girls a guy could ever ask for, and they've all ended for the same stupid reason. I was caught cheating with another girl. Not one of these sexual encounters meant a thing to me. They were all one-night stands with girls I hardly knew.

Why do I keep ruining meaningful relationships with decent women I really love and care about? What is my problem? — HEARTBREAKER

DEAR HEARTBREAKER: Perhaps you unconsciously set yourself up to get "caught" because you don't really want a serious commitment. It's also possible that you feel you don't deserve a meaningful relationship with a decent woman.

Find a therapist who can get to the bottom of this destructive behavior, or the heart you will ultimately break will be your own.

DEAR ABBY: This is for all the lazy people in the world who don't want to accept any responsibility:

Once upon a time, there were four people named Everybody, Somebody, Nobody and Anybody. When there was an important job to be done, Everybody was sure that Somebody would do it. Anybody could have done it, but Nobody did it.

When Nobody did it, Everybody got angry because it was Everybody's job. Everybody thought that Somebody would do it, but Nobody realized that Nobody would do it.

So it ended up that Everybody blamed Somebody when Nobody did what Anybody could have done in the first place. — THERESA G. IN MILWAUKEE

Physical symptoms frequently accompany anxiety, depression

MIAMI, Fla. — Sleep disturbances and weight problems, agitation and pressure complaints — all are symptoms common to both anxiety and depression. Overlapping symptoms are what makes determining diagnosis and treatment of anxiety difficult, Robert F. Avant M.D., Mayo Medical School associate professor of medicine, said recently to doctors attending a symposium.

Approximately 80 percent of depressed patients present some symptoms of anxiety, he said, and 40 percent of patients referred for treatment of symptoms of depression/anxiety have been found to have medical illnesses causing their symptoms.

Dr. Avant gave several suggestions:

— Taking a thorough medical history and giving the patient a thorough physical examination first to rule out organic illness or drug toxicity. "Drugs taken for concurrent illnesses may cause secondary depression," he said, and so can alcohol, caffeine and recreational drugs.

— When diagnosis is not sufficiently clear or there is danger of severe underlying psychopathology, consultation or referral to a psychiatrist should be considered. The family physician should also determine if counseling and/or "ventilation" are sufficient to help the patient over some acute anxiety, or if some ongoing psychotherapeutic modalities are necessary.

— In determining which drugs to prescribe for the patient with mixed anxiety and depression, doctors should keep in mind whether the individual will require short-term treatment or has an underlying depression and/or the problem appears to be a long-standing one.

People to wear signs at games

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — "We thought it would be less likely for a person to be stolen than a sign," said Maury Blitz, 29, the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee's signage manager, in explaining one reason that old-fashioned sandwich boards will be in considerable evidence when the Olympic Games open on July 28.

To add zest to the strolling signs, the committee looking for dancers and mimes to get between the boards.

Even though the boards will be moving, Olympic officials are counting on the human-powered signs sticking around longer than signs that will be bolted to posts. There won't be many spare sandwich boards, but the expectation of wily souvenir hunters has led to plans for making three replacement road signs for every one that the committee will have posted.

At last summer's pre-Olympic gymnastic competition, Blitz decked out three volunteers in sandwich boards that directed fans to entrances, ticket sales booths and information counters.

The novel signs with talking signposts were so successful that they will be used at about three-quarters of the competition sites at the upcoming Games.

At pre-Olympic events, high school and college students carried three 28-inch-wide, 3-foot-high boards. "The only qualification for getting the job was willingness to do it," Blitz said. "Of course, we didn't accept anybody under 3 feet tall."

Radials popular tires

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y. (AP) — In 1970, three out of every 100 new tires sold in the United States were radials. Today nearly 80 percent of all car tires are radials, according to Michelin.

The firm, which introduced radials in this country in 1948, says it now has a radial tire designed for U.S. military and commercial aircraft which could begin appearing on planes in the Unites States by 1985.

AT WIT'S END

Husband prefers being unfashionably late

By ERMA BOMBECK

There's an old homily that says, "The early bird catches the worm as a rule, but he who comes along later may be having lobster and crepe suzettes."

I have no idea what that means. I only know my husband subscribes to it.

His reputation for being late is legend. He has never heard "The Star-Spangled Banner" played at the ballgame, never seen a curtain open or listened to an overture, and never heard the words, "The meeting will now come to order."

By the time we get to an event, the only parking places left are in a towaway zone or on a lawn. We have crouched our way into darkened rooms so often that people think we're three feet tall.

I, on the other hand, am a woman who is early for a root canal. I always assume that I will have a flat tire on the way to the airport, so I allow time for it. I wear two watches, ask the time from two people, and divide by four.

The fact we have managed to remain married for all these years is nothing short of a miracle.

The other night, a rare thing occurred. We were early.

We found a place to park the car near the door. There were no crowds around the bar. There were seats to sit down on and relax before the dinner.

"It's all your fault," he grumbled as he sipped his drink. "If you had forgotten the tickets, we would have been in a wild frenzy about now."

"What's so great about frenzy?" I asked.

"It's exciting. It's challenging. This is boring. How did it happen?"

"We made that light at the intersection . . . the one that has two left lane turn signals and two for oncoming lanes."

"I never make that light," he said. "Why tonight?"

"Your luck ran out, I guess. Let's go to dinner."

"What's this on the table?" he asked.

"It's a salad. When you're on time you get to eat it and then they take away the empty plate."

You could tell he was off-balance the entire meal, like a man out of his element. He excused himself to go to the restroom. Sometime later, as I sat in the darkness watching a slide presentation, a figure cast a shadow on the large screen. It was my husband crawling back to his seat. "Did I miss anything?" he whispered.

"Only the entire program."

Somehow, his entire body metabolism had corrected itself.

President's speech longest

Copley News Service

The president who gave the longest inaugural speech was William Henry Harrison on March 4, 1841.

It contained 8,578 words and took one hour and 45 minutes to deliver.

He wore no hat or coat, and later attended three balls that chilly day, caught cold and died one month later.

Shirley Jones, Marty Ingels celebrate settlement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Enquirer's decision to settle out of court a $20 million libel suit filed by singer-actress Shirley Jones and Marty Ingels could auger well for other celebrities with actions pending against the popular tabloid, Ingels says.

"I have a personal feeling that the Enquirer has made a decision to settle all their pending cases," Ingels said Thursday in announcing the end of the 4½-year legal fight.

"I feel that they don't wish to go to court with any of it," Ingels added. "I think they just want to get out of court as best they can, and hopefully that means a more responsible journalistic policy for them."

Ingels, 48, and his wife, Miss Jones, 50, sued the Enquirer, editor Iain Calder, writer John South and the newspaper's California distributor over an Oct. 9, 1979, article by South that said Ingels' "bizarre behavior" had driven Miss Jones to drink.

As part of the settlement, reached March 30, the Enquirer has already paid the couple an undisclosed sum of money, Ingels said. The Lantana, Fla.-based weekly has also agreed to print a strongly-worded retraction in its April 30 edition, and the Ingels can have the retraction reprinted as advertisements in any publications they choose, Ingels said.

AP Laserphoto

The retraction, as released by Ingels, says the article "contained unfortunate inaccuracies which were based on imperfect sources and faulty information that the Enquirer believed to be reliable at the time.

"Therefore, we deeply regret any embarrassment or discomfort caused and apologize to the Ingels, to their family and friends, and to their many fans across the country."

Ingels said the retraction was unprecedented because it also included a reference to the financial settlement, with the Enquirer saying an "appropriate" payment had been made "to compensate for any injury and to avoid the expense of further litigation...."

Ingels said the retraction will appear in the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, the Washington Post, the Chicago Tribune and the entertainment industry trade papers Daily Variety and the Hollywood Reporter.

Calder, reached by telephone in Florida, referred queries about the settlement to Washington, D.C., attorney Paul Wolff, who confirmed an agreement had been reached but would not comment on its provisions.

"With regard to his (Ingels') statement as to what he describes the agreement as containing, I would simply suggest that you wait to see if those events transpire," Wolff added.

ENTERTAINMENT

Actress Carol Burnett in 1981 won a $1.6 million damage award against the newspaper from a jury. But it was reduced by the trial judge to $800,000 and then by a state appeals court to $200,000: $150,000 in punitive damages and $50,000 in compensatory damages.

'Play Memory' not compelling

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Critic

NEW YORK — "Play Memory" is exactly what its title suggests, but the souvenirs savored on stage at the Longacre Theater are not enough to create a compelling domestic drama.

In her look at the past, which opened Thursday on Broadway, playwright Joanna M. Glass examines the family life of Canadian tobacco salesman Cam MacMillan, his wife Ruth and their daughter Jean over a 30-year period.

Cam is a dour Scotsman, enamored with his work and the camaraderie of his fellow salesmen who travel the Canadian prairie. He calls them "his boys," explaining to his wife, "I feel connected to them."

Despite enthusiasm for his trade, Cam is no Willy Loman or even the cutthroat opportunists who inhabit the world of "Glengarry Glen Ross." And that may be the play's major problem.

When Cam is fired during World War II for finagling gasoline coupons, he folds, gives up and simply stays at home, especially after his supposedly loyal friends desert him. The play folds with him.

That Donald Moffat is able to make Cam a believable character is a testament to his skill as an actor. It's an unsympathetic role sympathetically played.

Jo Henderson exerts more interest as Ruth, the sensible, long-suffering wife, who's not above a scrap or two with her husband if she gets angry enough. She's the survivor in the family, compelled to get a job after her husband's collapse. Ms. Henderson has several fine moments in the play, including a touching recollection of her own childhood as the daughter of pioneers.

Valerie Mahaffey is left with a difficult assignment. She's forced to play Jean as a child and into adulthood. It's a characterization that's not always successful, especially during the brief moments she's supposed to be a 4-year-old.

But Tom Brennan, as a Ukrainian bootlegger who keeps buying objects from the MacMillan household, and James Greene, Edwin J. McDonough and Jerry Mayer, as Cam's trio of friends, offer nice cameos.

Set designer Clarke Dunham has provided bold, painted backdrops of the Saskatchewan prairie that frame the rustic MacMillan home, warmly lighted by Ken Billington.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Obesity can result in infertility in men, women

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have known two very heavy women and they both had trouble becoming pregnant. Is this just a coincidence, or does being overweight have something to do with it? — Annie Lee, Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Annie Lee: Dr. G. William Bates, of the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson, says that obesity can result in infertility in both men and women. In one study, 13 obese, infertile women lost more than 15 percent of their body weight, and 10 of the 13 conceived.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I believe you once wrote that a child who is sensitive to milk will usually outgrow it. My question is: How is a a parent supposed to know when that time comes? — Mrs. V.W., Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Mrs. W.: Hypersensitivity to milk in children usually disappears within one to two years of avoidance according to Dr. S.L. Bahna, Louisiana State University. You may determine when it is safe to serve milk again by reintroducing it very carefully every six months in order to guage the child's reaction to it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard stories about old-time ballplayers who would have a few hot dogs and some beers and then go out and play a game. I suppose it's possible to eat like that and still play ball if you're a superstar, but how should an ordinary athlete eat before a game? And when should this meal be eaten? — Irving, Waynesboro, Va.

Dear Irving: A meal should be eaten between two to three hours before a person engages in strenuous physical activity. It should be composed of about 7 percent carbohydrates and have a low fat content and low bulk.

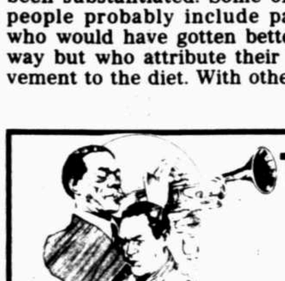

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine has told me that people with arthritis shouldn't eat peppers or tomatoes. Is this true? — Edna, Newport, R.I.

Dear Edna: Some people with arthritis have reported that they feel better when they eliminate peppers and tomatoes from their diet. According to the Arthritis Foundation, however, these claims have not been substantiated. Some of these people probably include patients who would have gotten better anyway but who attribute their improvement to the diet. With others, the diet may have a placebo effect; that is, a person will feel better if he or she believes that a particular course of action will have a desired effect.

Except for gout, there is no evidence that diet plays a role in controlling the symptoms of arthritis. Neither are vitamin or mineral supplements helpful.

This does not mean that nutrition is unimportant. I find that my patients respond best to a well-balanced diet that provides them with the nutrients they need. For those who are overweight I prescribe a reduced-calorie diet since excessive weight places too much stress on the affected joints.

Demerol, cocaine implicated in death of David Kennedy

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — As the Kennedy family prepared again to bury one of its own, authorities announced that cocaine and a pain killer were detected in the body of 28-year-old David Kennedy, whose death was being treated as a "a drug-related incident."

A private mass for the drug- and alcohol-troubled member of one of America's foremost families was planned today at his mother's mansion, Hickory Hill, in McLean, Va.

Later, the son of Ethel and the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was to be laid to rest in the family's plot in Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline, Mass., where his grandfather Joseph P. Kennedy is buried.

The traces of cocaine and the pain killer Demerol found in Kennedy's body indicate that his death was a "drug-related incident," but further tests will be needed to establish the cause of death, Jay Pintacuda, chief chemist for the Palm Beach County sheriff's crime laboratory, said Thursday.

"I don't want to jump the gun," he said. "...We have found significant things, we feel that we're on the right track."

Tests also showed that a small quantity of white powder found in the hotel room where David Kennedy was found dead Wednesday was 1.3 grams of "high purity" cocaine, Pintacuda said.

The cocaine and Demerol, but no alcohol, showed up in tests performed Thursday, Pintacuda said. "The combination of the two drugs has more effect on the body than a single drug."

Kennedy, who spent Easter weekend at the hotel several miles from the family's seaside winter mansion, was found dead Wednesday morning, lying on the floor between two beds in a multiroom suite.

A Harvard University dropout who had ambitions for a career in journalism, Kennedy had a history of problems with drugs and alcohol. Some friends and biographers said the young man had been particularly close to his father and never recovered from the senator's assassination in 1968.

The body, in a casket packed in a cardboard shipping box, was sent aboard a commercial jet for the two-hour flight to Washington on Thursday.

Mrs. Kennedy and several family members and friends knelt at the grave of Robert Kennedy in Arlington National Cemetery before the body was returned.

When the coffin arrived at Hickory Hill mansion, it was carried inside by a group of Kennedy brothers and cousins. Later, members of the family and close friends gathered outside in the bright sunshine.

"It had the pastoral feeling of an outdoor wake on a beautiful day," said one man present, quoted anonymously in today's edition of The New York Times. "There were babies crawling on the lawn, dozens of dogs running around and through everything. There was something timeless about the day, something both tragic and exquisite."

In Florida, Chief Medical Examiner James Benz said it would take at least four to eight days to complete tests on body samples.

Ethel Kennedy, surrounded by family and friends, kneels at the grave of her late husband, Robert Kennedy, in Arlington National Cemetery. Their son David, 27, will be buried today at McLean, Va.

A bottle half-filled with amber-colored prescription drugs was found in Suite 107 at the Brazilian Court Hotel, said Palm Beach paramedic Lt. Ronald Perron. However, neither police spokesmen nor the detectives in charge of the investigation would comment about the information.

During his Palm Beach vacation, Kennedy paid daily visits to his 93-year-old grandmother Rose Kennedy at the family's sprawling white mansion overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. The frail matriarch of the Kennedy family was being sheltered from news of the tragedy, said the Rev. Donald O'Brien, the priest who gave David Kennedy the last rites of the Catholic church.

Hotel owners Dennis and Elizabeth Heffernan issue strong denials of reports that Kennedy drank heavily during his stay.

Heffernan said Kennedy had ordred vodka-and-grapefruit juice cocktails from the hotel's lounge during his stay, but didn't drink excessively.

The St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press, quoting unidentified sources, reported that Kennedy had been released April 19 from St. Mary's Rehabilitation Center in Minneapolis after a month of treatment for chemical dependency.

Jay Hauge, director of the chemical dependency program at St. Mary's, refused to comment on the report.

Kennedy family attends private mass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Kennedy family and their friends were in seclusion today at Hickory Hill, the home of Ethel Kennedy, to attend a mass for her son David, who died earlier this week in a Florida hotel room.

"The services will be private and for the family only," said Robert Shrum, press secretary to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., David Kennedy's uncle. Burial will be at Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline, Mass.

Kennedy's body, escorted by his older brother Joseph Kennedy III and cousins Caroline Kennedy and Sydney Lawford, was flown back to Washington Thursday and driven by hearse from National Airport to the Kennedy home in McLean, Va., a Washington suburb.

Earlier, Ethel Kennedy and several other family members visited Arlington National Cemetery to place flowers at the graves of her brother-in-law, President John F. Kennedy, and her husband Robert F. Kennedy.

A private wake was held at Hickory Hill late Thursday afternoon.

Young Kennedy, who had bouts with drug addiction, was found dead in a Palm Beach, Fla., hotel room Wednesday. Results of an autopsy are expected in several days.

Basie's music still swings

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — The jazzman's tour is over, but his music's still on the road.

Count Basie's band has no plans to cancel a tour scheduled to begin Wednesday, even though the band leader died quietly Thursday of cancer.

Doctors had feared the disease would gnaw away at his spirit as much as his body, so his family had decided not to tell him he had contracted it.

Woodward

"Had he known or been aware that he had cancer...he would have given up hope of living," said Aaron Woodward, Basie's adopted son.

Woodward, manager of Count Basie Enterprises, confirmed that the tour would proceed as planned.

Basie hadn't publicly performed with his group since March 19, when his appearance at the Hollywood Palladium in California brought out 2,200 fans and scores of friends rallying him on.

The Count, 79, had battled arthritis in his later years. But physicians at Doctors' Hospital in this oceanside community realized the latest fight was more serious a few days after Basie checked into the private facility Feb. 4.

Dr. Leo Schildhaus diagnosed pancreatic cancer, but he and the family agreed not to tell the patient.

After a 10-day stay, Basie was released, but returned for hospitalization March 27.

He died in his sleep around 4 a.m. EST Thursday with family by his side in the VIP wing of the 124-bed hospital, Woodward said.

Basie's body was to be flown back to New York Sunday for services Monday.

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A six-year legal battle over who would run the Howard Hughes Medical Institute and effectively control Hughes Aircraft Corp. ended Thursday with the appointment of eight trustees for the institute.

"Both sides have agreed upon the names and there will be no need for an appeal. The case is closed," said state Attorney General Charles Oberly III.

Eccentric billionaire Howard Hughes founded the institute for medical research in 1953 and funded it with a gift of what is now the giant Hughes Aircraft, based in El Segundo, Calif.

Since Hughes' death in 1976, the institute has been run by its executive committee. But in 1978, then-Delaware Attorney General Richard Weir filed suit in Chancery Court, maintaining the committee did not have the power to take control under Hughes' will. Hughes was the sole trustee of the institute and its bylaws did not specify a successor, according to the state.

The eight trustees, who will appoint a ninth and elect a chairman, are:

George W. Thorn, president of the institute; Frank W. Gay, appointed to the institute's executive committee in 1971 and former chief executive of the Hughes-owned Summa Corp.; Donald S. Fredrickson, former director of the National Institutes of Health; Irving Shapiro, former chief executive officer of the Du Pont Co.

Also Hanna H. Gray, president of the University of Chicago; Helen Copley, chairman of the Copley newspapers; James Gilliam Jr., senior vice president of the Beneficial Corp.; and William R. Lummis, Hughes' nephew, administrator of Hughes' estate and chairman of the board of Summa.

Douglas

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor Kirk Douglas, star of "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" and "The Indian Fighter," has been elected to the Cowboy Hall of Fame.

Douglas, 65, who has appeared in 74 films during his career, will be inducted in special ceremonies in Oklahoma City on Saturday night, said Dean Krakel, executive vice president of the Oklahoma City-based historical western institution.

Film clips from several of Douglas' westerns will be shown — including his just completed film, "Draw!," Home Box Office's first western feature film.

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Mike McCartney, brother of former Beatle Paul McCartney, unveiled a life-size bronze statue honoring Liverpool's rock'n'roll four, but disappointed fans groaned that they couldn't tell the singers apart.

None of the surviving three ex-Beatles attended ceremonies Thursday at the new $12.6-million Beatles Complex on Mathew Street, the alley where The Cavern, a basement music hall, once stood. The Beatles were discovered at The Cavern in January 1961.

Mike McCartney said he couldn't recognize his own brother in the bronze mass that included George Harrison, Ringo Starr and the late John Lennon.

Sculptor John Doubleday countered that he "particularly did not want a clone likeness."

The sculpture sought "to capture the energy and the dynamism of the group as they were in Liverpool, before the period of the tidied-up Beatles image and mop hairstyles," he said.

The $56,000 project was financed by Royal Life, a large British insurance company.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Model-actress Brooke Shields poked fun at her celebrity status as she made her Princeton University theatrical debut in the Princeton Triangle Club's "Revel Without a Pause" before a sold-out house at McCarter Theatre.

Miss Shields, an 18-year-old freshman, made light of her fame by acting out a skit Thursday depicting the attention she stirred up when she arrived on campus last fall. She also sang and danced in three other numbers. About 60 students participated in the comedy revue, which consisted of 23 vignettes.

"She's basically playing herself and poking fun at the Brooke Shields image," said Louis Bayard, vice president of the Triangle Club.

Rogers

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio (AP) — Roy Rogers and Dale Evans won't be there but their fans will have a field day with vintage movies and displays of cowboy memorabilia at this weekend's First Annual Roy Rogers and Dale Evans Collectors' Convention and Western Film Festival in his old hometown.

The convention honors the former resident who left Portsmouth as Leonard Franklin Sly but made his way to fame as Roy Rogers, king of the cowboys.

"Roy's 72 now and even though he's done everything and been everywhere, Portsmouth's still his home," said his sister, Cleda Willoughby.

NEW YORK (AP) — George Ablah could be considered an extravagant man — his $10 million Gulfstream jet is cluttered with sculpture, including a Rodin, a Jean Arp, two Henry Moores, a Brancusi, even a Giacometti in the bathroom.

He will also be considered an exceedingly generous man next month when he lends 25 Henry Moore sculptures worth $15 million to New York City, and pays for their installation in city parks.

PUBLIC HEARING

Re: Increases in Fare Rates for Midtran services consideration or possible cut back in current customer route service
Notice is hereby given that a Public Hearing will be held by the City of Midland in the Council Chamber on the first floor of City Hall at 11:00 a.m. May 8, 1984, for the purpose of discussing an increase in fare, in addition consideration will be given by the City Council of possible cut back of Midtran current level of service in the following time frame:
A. Current time 7:00 a.m to 8:00 a.m. decrease to 8:00 a.m.
B. Current time 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. decrease to 5:00 p.m.
At the hearing the City of Midland will give consideration to a cut of service to an 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. level.
Consideration of the following fare increase:
A. Current monthly fee $35.00 increase to $75.00 (two-way)
B. Current fare $2.00 door-to-door increase to $2.50
C. Current fare 50¢ handicap increase to 74¢
D. Current rate charter service $35.00/hr. increase to $45.00/hr.
At the hearing, the City of Midland will afford an opportunity for interested persons or agencies to be heard with respect to these changes; interested persons may submit orally or in handwriting evidence and recommendations with respect to said changes May 8, 1984.
The purpose of this Public Hearing is to consider decreasing the service level in a manner that would substantially eliminate commuter service currently provided by Midtran. In addition, the Council will consider possible fare increases for commuters in order to enhance the economic position of the Midtran operation. This hearing is published and intended for input from all individuals, however, the main focus of the hearing will be to receive input on possible increases in fares or decrease in commuter service. Particular emphasis is placed on input from commuter citizens that utilize Midtran.
The above Public Hearing will not have an effect on the present level of Service provided for the Handicap, Senior Citizens or the Social Services.
The effective date of these proposed changes is proposed for June 1, 1984.
