Gorbachev by a nose

President wins victory of sorts in voting

■ Halfhearted support for Gorbachev means it is unlikely he can squelch agitation for freedom.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev appeared to have won only a lukewarm victory in his bid to stop the world's largest nation from disintegrating, preliminary election results showed Monday.

The initial vote tallies were from Sunday's nationwide voting in the first ever referendum on whether the country should stick together. Gorbachev had warned Soviets that he needed an overwhelming victory to unify this ethnically diverse country of 15 republics and push through his political and economic reforms.

But he did not get that kind of big win, initial figures showed Monday, and his chief rival Boris Yeltsin appeared to have won political standing as a result of the voting.

Yeltsin, who is president of the Russian republic, gained on the strength of partial returns showing broad support for a proposal to create a strong presidency for the Russian federation that would be filled through a direct election.

Yeltsin was elected as president by Russia's legislature in May, but hard-line members of that body have planned a no-confidence vote on March 28. Even if Yeltsin were to lose that vote, his popularity is high enough that he would likely win the presidency if a direct election were held.

Gorbachev first proposed the nationwide referendum in December as a means of pressuring leaders of the Soviet republics into signing a new Union Treaty to preserve central control over politics and the economy.

The main referendum question did not mention the Union Treaty, however, and was so vague that even Gorbachev's allies were not sure how to translate an electoral victory into policy.

Gorbachev had hoped a resounding victory would give him the popular back-

High court to decide new school prayer case

■ Administration asks for framework of analysis that would focus on whether anyone who does not choose to participate feels coerced.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court opened the door Monday to a fresh look at the constitutional boundary between church and state by agreeing to decide whether public school graduation ceremonies can include prayers that mention God.

The case is an appeal by the Providence, R.I., school board from a ruling by two lower federal courts, which held that a rabbi's invocation and benediction at a middle school graduation two years ago amounted to an official endorsement of religion prohibited by the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment.

In reaching that conclusion, the lower courts applied a Supreme Court precedent that for the past 20 years has provided the framework for analyzing church-state questions like aid to parochial schools and Christmas displays on public property.

The Providence School Committee is directly attacking that 1971 precedent, Lemon v. Kurtzman, with the aid of the Bush administration, which filed a brief asking the court to hear the appeal.

The case will be argued next fall. The committee and the administration are asking for a framework of analysis that would focus on whether anyone who does not choose to participate in the practice at issue feels coerced.

Now, under Lemon v. Kurtzman, a government practice or policy that is challenged as an unconstitutional "establishment" of religion must survive analysis under a three-part test: it must have a secular purpose; its "principal or prima-

Reading program earns high marks

EDITOR'S NOTE: More than 30 years after Rudolf Flesch first studied "Why Johnny Can't Read," educators still debate the best methods for improving reading performance. Midland schools stand at the heart of the dispute between "whole language" and phonetic teaching approaches.

Today, in the last of a three-part series, the Reporter-Telegram takes an in-depth look at the Reading Recovery program.

HOW JOHNNY CAN READ

Tony Johnson, a first grader, reads aloud with confidence despite an audience of a dozen teachers.

He uses his finger to point to words as he reads them, oblivious to admiring murmurs from the adults.

He isn't disturbed by all the eyes following his every move, because he doesn't know the teachers are there.

The educators stand behind a two-way mirror and observe Tony and his teacher, Lisa Harrell, as part of an innovative staff development program.

The teachers are in training to learn the method that will teach other children like Tony to read. Tony was diagnosed as a child in need of some one-on-one attention — a candidate for Reading Recovery.

Reading Recovery, an intervention program that accelerates the reading process, is designed on the premise that children who do not learn to read by the end of the first grade will fail to achieve in almost all other areas of the school curriculum.

"Reading Recovery is an intervention — not a remedial — program," said Peggy Holland, reading coordinator for Midland Independent School District. "Remedial programs are

Love slaying trial

Teacher says she tried to end affair with student

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — A high school teacher testified at her murder-conspiracy trial Monday that she was trying to break off an affair with a student when the teen-ager shot her husband to death last year.

Pamela Smart said she loved her husband, but was having difficulty breaking off her affair with the student, William Flynn. She said Flynn was so distraught at the prospect of not seeing her that he threatened to kill himself.

"He started crying and he said he couldn't live without me. I felt bad. I did not want to hurt his feelings," she said.

Smart, 23, took the stand as the defense began rebutting two weeks of testimony from prosecution witnesses in Rockingham County Superior Court.

Prosecutors charge that Smart seduced Flynn, then used her emotional control over him to get him and two friends to murder her 24-year-old husband, Gregory, because she feared losing everything in a divorce.

Most local races still uncontested as deadline nears

By David Morris

Staff Writer

With the deadline to file for the May 4 elections looming, every local race except one remained uncontested Monday.

The deadline for filing in all the elections is 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Positions are up for grabs on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, the Midland County Hospital District Board of Directors, the Midland City Council and the Greenwood Independent School District Board of Trustees.

The sole contested race so far is between Jerry Weant and Gary Willis, who are vying for the District 6 spot on the MISD board.

Weant and Willis both filed last week for the seat being vacated by incumbent Larry Rusk. Rusk announced his decision not to run for re-election on Feb. 15.

Soviets cut oil

MOSCOW — Soviet oil exports have been reduced by half, cutting badly needed foreign currency earnings and imports, Tass reported Monday. The official Soviet news agency quoted President Mikhail Gorbachev saying 60 million tons of oil were set aside for sale overseas, down from 125 million tons. Gorbachev made the comments to a group of economists Saturday. The Soviet Union has been using 425 million to 475 million tons of oil domestically, according to various estimates.

Rain extended from southwestern Lower Michigan across northwestern Indiana, north-central Ohio, eastern Ohio, West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, western Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New York state, southern New England and into Vermont.

Heaviest rain during the six hours up to noon CST was 1.77 inches at Vero Beach, Fla.; 1.34 inches at Daytona Beach, Fla.; 1.22 inches at Orlando, Fla.; and 1.21 inches at Salisbury, Md.

Snow fell over northwestern Upper Michigan and central New Hampshire.

A winter storm watch was in effect for Tuesday over northern New Hampshire and the White Mountains. A winter weather advisory was in effect for Tuesday over much of Maine.

VOTING: Yeltsin appears to win political standing

ing to end independence drives in several republics — especially the Baltic states of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia.

Even before preliminary vote counts became public, tensions rose in Lithuania early Monday as Soviet commandos arrested the chief of Lithuania's nationalist militia for allegedly possessing illegal weapons. He was held for nearly 12 hours, but Soviet authorities later released him and called the arrest "accidental."

The halfhearted nationwide support for Gorbachev meant that it is unlikely the embattled Kremlin leader will be able to squelch agitation for freedom.

Early vote counts appeared to show that slightly over half the voters approved Gorbachev's referendum. However, many more than that supported additions or changes to Gorbachev's version — essentially ruining his ability to claim he has a clear mandate from the people to act to preserve the country's unity as he sees fit.

Six of the Soviet republics, those most ardent about being independent, refused to even take part in the non-binding referendum, thereby decreasing even more Gorbachev's ability to claim popular backing by the diverse Soviet citizenry. Those six are Georgia, Armenia, Moldova, Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia.

However, the biggest blow to Gorbachev was from the Russian republic, the nation's largest state which has always been considered the heart and soul of communist power. Russians, who account for half of the Soviet Union's population, more heartily endorsed the proposition supported by Yeltsin that call for popular direct election of the Russian president.

Yeltsin differs sharply with Gorbachev on how the Soviet Union should be run, and his direct election as Russian republic president by nearly half of nation could boost his political standing. Gorbachev wants to modify the communist system of government, but Yeltsin wants to destroy it.

Only a bare majority of those who voted in Moscow supported Gorbachev on the issue of whether to keep the Soviet Union together, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported. In contrast, nearly 78 percent voted for the direct popular election of the Russian president.

Tass also said 80 percent voted for direct election of the mayor of Moscow, another step to transfer power from the central government.

Likewise in Leningrad, the Soviet Union's second largest city, 50 percent of those who cast ballots said yes to keeping the Soviet Union together. But 78 percent also said yes to electing Russia's president.

Preliminary figures in the country's second most important republic, the Ukraine, also clouded Gorbachev's victory. In the Ukrainian capital Kiev, only 44 percent voted for the union while 78 percent said they were for a Ukraine with much greater freedom from Moscow than Gorbachev's union plan envisions. In the Ukrainian city of Lvov, Gorbachev took a beating with only 24 percent in favor of unity and more than 83 percent voting for full Ukrainian independence.

The republic of Kazakhstan voted heavily for the union, but only after local officials reworded the national ballot to say that Kazakhstan would have a great deal of freedom from Moscow.

Central Asian republics apparently had high voter turnouts with strong support for Gorbachev. That was expected since there has been little political pressure there to reform politically or economically.

PRAYER: High court opens door to a fresh look

ry effect must be one that neither advances nor inhibits religion," and it must not foster an "excessive entanglement" with religion.

Federal courts have used this analysis to strike down many — although by no means all — of the policies that have come before them.

In the Providence case, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld a finding that the graduation prayers were an "advancement" of religion that therefore failed the second part of the Lemon v. Kurtzman test.

The Providence School Committee had been sued by the father of a student at the Nathan Bishop Middle School. Although the family is Jewish and the prayers were offered by a rabbi, the father, Daniel Weisman, said in his brief that he was offended by the inclusion of prayer in any public school ceremony.

The rabbi, Leslie Gutterman of Temple Beth El in Providence, offered an invocation that thanked God "for the legacy of America where diversity is celebrated," and a benediction that thanked God for "having endowed us with the capacity for learning."

Under the Reagan administration, the Justice Department mounted an effort to persuade the Supreme Court to adopt an analysis under which the government could permit a greater "accommodation" of religious practices that failed to pass the Lemon v. Kurtzman test.

The effort failed, but it made inroads, with a majority of the current justices now on record as differing at least to some extent with the 1971 precedent.

For that reason, it is quite possible that the court may use the new case as a vehicle for reconsidering the precedent, although the Providence school board could also win its case on narrower ground.

READING: Teachers are in training to learn method much more difficult to undertake. Intervention gets the child at an early age, before poor reading habits are developed."

Midland public schools implemented Reading Recovery in September.

"We have already seen dramatic results," Ms. Holland said. "Out of 125 students, only four have not succeeded with the program."

Those who don't succeed are tested for reading disabilities.

Succeeding with the program means being promoted out of the program in an average of 16 weeks. "And not only are these students exited from the program reading at the average level or above for their grade, longitudal studies show that they don't regress," Ms. Holland said.

The program targets the poorest readers in first-grade classrooms. Children scoring in the lowest 20 percent for reading proficiency are taken out of their classrooms for one 30-minute period each day. During the 30-minute period they receive one-on-one instruction from a teacher who has been through the yearlong training program.

Tony recently was viewed by teachers who were training in the program. They watched him in a Reading Recovery viewing room, equipped with audio equipment, at Bowie Elementary School. The audio system allowed the teachers to hear Ms. Harrell and Tony, but prevented the student and teacher from hearing comments from the audience.

"Concerning the comments, we are not criticizing," said Janie Potter Slagle, Reading Recovery teacher leader. "This is a staff development program — a gift teachers give each other."

Ms. Holland said the teachers in training meet once a week for a year of instruction. "Then, this summer we will practice giving diagnostic surveys to children in day-care (programs) before school starts," she said.

"Even though the program is new to the district, we have been making tremendous gains with this program, which targets all problem readers," Ms. Holland said. "The strategy is to build on what the students know."

The reading coordinator said children in the program develop good reading behaviors and are encouraged to exercise reading strategies independently.

As each pupil finishes the program, the teacher takes on a new charge.

Ms. Holland noted that Tony, who has been in the program 21 weeks, has a more difficult task than his peers who have completed in the program before him.

"It's nearing the end of the school year," she said. "So, not only does Tony have to catch up with the class average, he has to catch up with students who are at a higher reading level in the harder books. But Tony is just about ready to exit."

As Tony reads aloud happily, and responds quickly and correctly to Ms. Harrell's questions, his unknown observers nod approvingly or comment on his confidence with reading.

"It's working," one teacher whispers as Tony closes one book and beams while waiting for the next.

TRIAL: Teacher testifies she tried to break off affair

(From 1A)

The defense says the three "thrill-killers" from Seabrook murdered the young insurance salesman on their own, then framed his widow to avoid life prison terms with no chance of parole.

They agreed to testify for the state in plea bargains carrying minimum prison sentences of 18 to 28 years.

Smart, behind bars since August, appeared pale and drawn, but composed during her testimony.

Smart said she was obsessed with finding the killer. After the trio were arrested, she said she tried to extract information from her intern and confidante, Cecelia Pierce, 16, by letting on she knew about the murder beforehand.

"I figured if she knew about the murder, she would tell me if I acted like I knew more about it," Smart said. "In my mind, I thought I would play a game with her and act like I knew more."

Smart also is accused of soliciting help from two fellow prison inmates after her arrest to kill Miss Pierce.

Smart's voice broke only when she described returning to her condominium after a school board meeting May 1, opening the front door and seeing her husband on the floor.

She said she screamed and ran to summon neighbors. Only later did she learn he was dead.

"Everyone was screaming, 'How come no one's doing anything?' ... And a policeman came down and said, 'Because he's dead,' " she said in a low, trembling voice.

Smart said she thought her husband died from being hit on the head with a candlestick, and didn't know he had been shot until several days later.

"One day I was driving down the road and I heard it on the radio," she said. "That's how I found out."

Smart testified that the affair began when Flynn, then 15, was in a videotaping project she ran as media coordinator at Winnacunnet High School in Hampton. When he told her he had a crush on her, she testified, she replied that she liked him but was married and wasn't interested.

A tearful Flynn testified last week that he didn't want to kill Smart's husband, but did so when she made it clear she would end their affair if he didn't. He said it was his teacher who initiated the romance and soon invited him to her condo when her husband was away.

There, he said, the two watched a sexually explicit movie and she promised to do a striptease for him, but lost her nerve. They did make love, he said, re-enacting a scene from the movie, "9½ Weeks."

Smart told the court that Flynn invited himself to the condo that day. She confirmed that they watched the movie before having sex, but denied re-enacting scenes from it.

She said Flynn pursued her from the beginning.

"I didn't set out to have an affair with him, but I did," Smart said. "I had mixed emotions about it. ... I liked Bill, but I also loved Greg."

Smart said she came to love Flynn, but never stopped loving her husband and did not want a divorce.

She said she came across Flynn in a school hallway the week after the murder. She said he offered sympathy and support, then questioned her persistently about what police were telling her about leads and evidence.

"That was the first time it ever came across my mind: 'Could he have done this?' " she said.

"He said no, that was crazy. ... He couldn't believe I was even asking him that, that I should go to a psychiatrist."

Asked why she failed to tell police she was having an affair with Flynn, especially after his arrest in July when she was asked about any motive he might have, Smart said she didn't believe he was guilty.

"My honest to God truth was that they couldn't have done it at that point ... I did not think that having an affair was a motive to murder someone."

Thousands dead in Basra, refugees say

IN SOUTHERN IRAQ (AP) — More than 5,000 bodies are strewn around the streets of Iraq's second-largest city, Basra, casualties of a bloody rebellion against Saddam Hussein, refugees fleeing into Kuwait said Monday.

They said helicopters, which rebels say are from Iran, are airlifting supplies to rebel-held areas in Basra.

Starvation was reported rampant in the south.

The claims could not be independently confirmed because foreign journalists have not been allowed in Iraq in recent weeks, except in southern areas occupied by allied forces.

A 2-month-old Iraqi baby was brought dead to the U.S. Army checkpoint here on Saturday, a victim of malnutrition, said U.S. Army Capt. Michael Ruff.

Ruff, a pediatrician, was moved to the front in anticipation of the arrival of a large number of young, ailing refugees.

Food prices have skyrocketed throughout southern Iraq. Refugees said a 110-pound bag of rice costs $180 while the same amount of flour goes for $195, huge increases over the prewar price.

"We were eating animal feed before we left," said Sahid Shaban, a car mechanic who fled Basra on Monday. "We would grind it up and eat it with sea water."

He opened a small woolen bag that contained a foul-smelling meal.

Shaban said two pounds of tea costs $22 and sugar could not be found.

Shaban walked out of Iraq, carrying his suitcase on his head. The Egyptian had lived in Iraq for nine years before he fled Basra.

"Basra is full of bodies," he said. "Dogs are eating them everywhere. There is no food, no water."

Shaban and four other Egyptians estimated the body count at 5,000.

In some places in the city, said Salem Salem Mosri, a waiter, the bodies were "stacked on top of each other, one by one."

U.S. Army Lt. Col. Patrick Ritter, a battalion commander at the front, said the number was "believable."

"We've heard that from several refugees, coming out at different times," he said.

Battling smog, Mexico shuts down oil refinery

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — In a dramatic move to combat this city's deepening air pollution crisis, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari on Monday ordered the immediate closing of the city's largest government-operated oil refinery.

The decision to close the March 18 Refinery, which sprawls over 430 acres in the north of the city, will cost an estimated $500 million, and will reduce the country's crude-oil refining capacity by more than 100,000 barrels a day.

In addition, oil-industry officials said it will force Mexico to import some kinds of gasoline until new refining capacity can be built.

But the action will abruptly eliminate what environmentalists have long considered one of the worst sources of pollution in the mountain-ringed capital, which is now suffering under one of the most dangerous periods of contaminated air in its history.

Salinas declared that the giant refinery would be replaced by public parks and other green spaces to help head off a still graver environmental crisis.

"The government is prepared to impose upon itself the most severe measures to protect public health and to respond to social demands," Salinas said, announcing the decision at a ceremony marking the 53rd anniversary of the nationalization of Mexico's oil industry, "Let's plant trees where today there is nothing but pipelines."

The announcement came after weeks of growing public concern about the medical effects of recent pollution levels, which have reached nearly four times maximum limits established by the World Health Organization for key pollutants.

It reflected the intense political pressure that the government has felt as it has tried to cope with the city's visibly deteriorating air quality without bringing its vital industries to a halt.

The director of the state-run energy monopoly, Petroleos Mexicanos, said on Monday that the giant Mexico City refinery, which was first opened in 1933, had served as "backbone of production and distribution of fuels" for the capital, and that extensive studies were made in an effort to keep it open at lower levels of emissions. The refinery accounted for roughly 7 percent of overall national refining capacity, oil officials said.

But the director, Francisco Rojas, said that government officials had ultimately concluded that the refinery, which was named in honor of the date on which the oil industry was nationalized in 1938, should be shut down completely and immediately.

E. Germans protest economic hardships

LEIPZIG, Germany (AP) — More than 50,000 people gathered in east German cities Monday night in demonstrations harkening back to pro-democracy protests of 1989. But this time they were demanding an end to their economic misery.

Protests against communism helped bring freedom to East Germany, not prosperity, said those who marched in this city considered the birthplace of the East German revolution.

"Misery. Our lives are misery. We stood here in the fall of 1989 to put down a dictator and now we are in another kind of dictatorship," said Claus Paetzold, who joined more than 30,000 people rallying in Leipzig.

"We are victims so that people can live better in the West," said Paetzold, a chemical factory worker.

In July, charm helps you get your point across with great subtlety! Next September is a great time for love and friendship as long as you are careful not to let your ego interfere. You need to bring to romance the same strong sense of commitment that you give your career.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Glenn Close, author Irving Wallace, actor Bruce Willis, Marshall Wyatt Earp.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep any promises you made to a loved one. Financial matters demand prompt attention. A special need will be met in the near future. Dine out with an old and cherished friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Summon extra will power to resolve a personal dilemma. Your shining personality wins you valuable allies. Be patient with someone who appears to have an inferiority complex.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Use your intuition in business. Charm is your secret weapon when dealing with a member of the opposite sex. Focus on shared ideals and common goals. New business ventures enjoy favorable influences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business and travel can be mixed with wonderful results now. A financial investigation could be a source of apprehension. Heed your strong inner voice. Be discreet about the extent of your ambitions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Managing a business with flair is your specialty! Your resilience is an inspiration to others. Do not let a dark mood dominate your afternoon. Spending the evening at home suits you just fine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will profit from the well-written word today. Count your blessings! Monetary matters require extra caution. Take care of routine tasks. Send letters, return phone calls and finish odd jobs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Certain social or romantic plans may be ill-advised; hold fast to your common sense. You need to be more responsible. Learn from an older person's experience. Stand on your own two feet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is time to get down to details. Nothing is certain until you have written verification. Be more discriminating when choosing business allies. You will benefit when you admit to past mistakes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are lucky in what transpires between you and a new acquaintance today. Also in your favor is your association with influential people. Be willing to take small risks. Romance is sweet.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Two heads are better than one today. Past mistakes can be corrected by a new agreement. Make mutual causes a top priority. Exercise will help banish the blues.

TODAY'S CHILDREN have vivid imaginations and great artistic flair. A tendency to fabricate colorful yarns could land these youngsters in trouble now and then. Wise parents will teach them to distinguish fact from fantasy. Travel will have lifelong appeal to these curious Pisces. They will enjoy keeping a journal of their impressions and insights. The ideal career will make good use of their incredible creativity.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

Most contracts do not need brilliant technique to bring them safely to port. Sound planning and execution during the early stages of play will usually suffice.

Once North raised freely to two spades, South visualized that there were some hands (ace-king of spades, ace of clubs and a red queen) which could make a grand slam almost laydown, but that rosy view was offset by the slight chance that North was missing both top spade honors. South elected to give up on the grand slam in favor of making sure of the small. Five spades asked North to judge the quality of his trumps for slam purposes, and they could hardly be better.

West led the jack of hearts taken in dummy. If trumps were 2-2 the slam was laydown, so declarer wasted no time in drawing two rounds of trumps, East discarding a heart. South cashed the ace and king of hearts, discarding a diamond from dummy, followed by the top diamonds, and then ruffed a diamond on the board.

With no quick way back to hand, declarer led a club from dummy. East alertly let that run around to West, and that defender's trump return stranded declarer with a diamond loser. Down one.

The debacle could have been avoided with a bit of care early on. One way to keep an entry to the South hand would have been to draw only one round of trumps before starting on the red suits, but that ran a slight risk of a defensive ruff when the hand was cold because of an even trump break. Far simpler was to lead a club from dummy at the second trick. Now declarer would be free to win any return, draw two rounds of trumps and then go about ruffing diamonds as before, using a club ruff as entry to the closed hand for the second diamond ruff.

VAIL, Colo. — NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw hurt his leg skiing over the weekend and was treated at a hospital.

Brokaw

Brokaw suffered a contusion and a leg strain Sunday, said an official at Vail Valley Medical Center.

Doris Allen, the hospital's chief operations officer, said he hurt his lower right leg while skiing. The injuries were minor, she said.

LOS ANGELES — George Burns may be old, but he has a new contract in Las Vegas.

The ageless, cigar-chomping comic signed an exclusive two-year pact with the Riviera Hotel and Casino, his manager said in Los Angeles on Monday.

Burns

Neither manager Irving Fein, nor Sam Distefano, vice president of entertainment at the Riviera, would divulge the value of the contract.

The 95-year-old entertainer is scheduled to appear April 18-21 with Pia Zadora. He will return Oct. 31 for another four-show run ending Nov. 3.

Burns, who won an Academy Award for his role in "The Sunshine Boys," had a five-year contract with Caesars Palace, but it expired shortly after the comedian's 95th birthday in January.

The Riviera offered Burns a five-year contract, Distefano said, but Burns turned it down. Burns' reply, according to Distefano, was: "'If you're still around at the end of the two years, we'll talk again.'"

Burns has often said he plans to spend his 100th birthday playing the London Palladium.

"I'm booked for two weeks (at the Palladium)," he said. "If I don't like my dressing room, the deal's off."

Ray Manzarek, keyboardist for the Doors, is upset about Oliver Stone's movie, "The Doors" (in which he's played by Kyle McLachlan of "Twin Peaks").

Talking with Jeff Blazy on a KOME radio show in San Jose, Calif., his first complaints were low-key. "The movie's not happening, man," said Manzarek. "It just doesn't make it. It's a lame flick. It's over the top.

"It doesn't portray Morrison in a true light. . . . It's Oliver Stone as Jim Morrison, Oliver Stone as a rock star, you know?"

As he continued his criticism, Manzarek's comments became more pointed.

He said that the movie was "over-amped" and had "too much white powder up the nose, too much booze. It's not the '60s, man. If there's any place that understands the '60s, it's the Bay Area. For (co-producer) Bill Graham to not come out and say this movie is a piece of garbage is a real sin. . . .

"(Morrison) was sensitive, poetic, artistic. He was intellectual. He was my friend, and we had a rock and roll band together. We went to UCLA together. And I saw alcohol kill the man.

"The movie has Morrison being a jerk all the time, you know. That's the problem with it. It doesn't have the intellectual. It doesn't have the poet.

LONDON — A supermarket has begun selling lamb raised in accordance with Prince Charles' ideas of green farming.

The lamb, marketed under the prince's Duchy of Cornwall seal, will be test-marketed at two stores, priced about 15 percent higher than regular lamb, a spokeswoman for Tesco's supermarkets said Monday.

The lamb is produced under a new Duchy of Cornwall code of farming practice that demands higher standards of animal husbandry and the minimum use of fertilizers on land used for grazing.

Some, but not all, of the participating farmers are tenants on the prince's lands, according to a Duchy of Cornwall spokeswoman.

The meat, labeled "traditionally reared prime Cornish lamb," is packed in distinctive green trays carrying the Duchy of Cornwall crest.

The duchy, whose lands traditionally belong to the heir to the throne, was involved in another venture with Tesco last year, selling Highgrove Loaf bread made from organic wheat.

MELBOURNE, Australia — Rap star MC Hammer says his own childhood helps him understand the plight of Australia's street kids.

Hammer, along with the sponsors of his current tour, Pepsi-Cola, donated $7,700 Monday to Melbourne's Open Family Foundation, which has helped homeless youngsters for 13 years.

"I know how tough it is to grow up and I know how tough it is for parents," said Hammer, America's biggest selling artist last year and a three-time Grammy Award winner. "That's why I am willing to help."

Hammer, 27, said he grew up among drugs and violence in Oakland, Calif., and now tries to help America's street kids keep away from drugs.

Military medical bill says thanks

A new bill has been introduced in Congress that would close a loophole in a military medical insurance plan that cost a disabled Florida veteran his home and many family possessions.

The bill was introduced by Rep. C. W. "Bill" Young, R-Fla., and 30 co-sponsors in the House. Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, has offered a similar proposal in the Senate.

Military retirees receive medical and home health care under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS). However, a 1972 law created a loophole by allowing Medicare to replace CHAMPUS as the provider for retirees who have been 100 percent disabled for 29 months. Medicare does not offer as much coverage as CHAMPUS.

Young learned of a totally disabled veteran, Andrew Cox with 22 years of service, who was left a quadriplegic when he suffered head injuries in a fall three years ago. Cox spent a year in rehabilitation programs before his wife brought him home in semi-comatose condition. Cox is still semi-comatose. However, Medicare ruled he is not eligible for home health care benefits.

As a result, Mrs. Cox went to work and the family was forced to sell its home and most of its possessions to live and pay for private home health care coverage.

Both new bills would allow CAMPUS to serve as a secondary health carrier and offer health care not provided by Medicare. The coverage would not cost the federal government a lot of money and would be an indication of how much the American people appreciate their veterans — past and in the Persian Gulf. These bills are one small but genuine way to say thanks.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Equality wonderful, and getting better

The lady was angry. The gentleman, so called, wouldn't let her sit down.

While she stood at the back of the room, he not only occupied a chair of his own, he curled one arm around an adjacent chair.

She might have asked him to transfer the arm to his own chair; on the other hand, this was a matter of principle. You don't ask people to do the right thing. They do it automatically.

Murchison

Don't they?

Maybe so, maybe not. The lady observed later that modern men are rude. Not just the gentleman with his arm-around-the-vacant-chair, but a second member of the species who had pushed past her in line. And, well, what about all this?

We've got to be careful here. The custom of lamenting the decay of manners and mores goes back to Juvenal, the Roman satirist. Of manners in the 1920s, Frederick Lewis Allen wrote in 1931: "The old bars were down, no new ones had been built, and meanwhile the pigs were in the pasture."

Are men even ruder now than in our parents' and grandparents' day? Let me see, speaking as a modern man, if we can elevate the question a bit. My own hunch is that we're talking not about men, those strange beasts, but about the whole relationship between the sexes. That the relationship isn't what it used to be seems irrefutable.

To which, feminists say, hooray, hooray! No more condescending pats on the shoulder, no more counsel against worrying-your-pretty-little-head.

One thinks of Rock Hudson, in "Giant," Edna Ferber's put-down of Texas patriarchy, shooing off Elizabeth Taylor from a political conversation. A couple of days ago, in Dallas, men whooped it up for a female politician, Margaret Thatcher: tough as a boot and fascinating as all get out.

The relationships between the sexes are different in other ways. A woman cop will run you in for drunk driving, Mac. A handful of women soldiers, serving in support roles, died for their country in the Persian Gulf conflict.

Whether or not all this amounts to abstract equality, men and women stand more on level ground than ever before in history. But you win some, you lose some. Twenty years ago, men brought up to open doors for women, to say yessum and no'm, to hold coats and pick up the dinner check stood aghast at feminist claims to equality. By now men have assimilated the changes. Equality isn't sauce just for the goose but also for the gander.

It works pretty well for men, this equality thing. Lowers the social pressure. If you want to hang your arm over an adjacent chair, why not? It is first-come, first-served. Feminism teaches us as much. All are equal — equally deserving, that is.

No need anymore to stand back, to open doors and bow and scrape. Where does this get you? How does gallantry make a buck? Hustle on into that elevator. Beat the briefcase-carrying dame to the 23rd floor. It's a jungle in here. The generous, the respectful, the polite, the deferential and forbearing get eaten alive by those to whom they defer.

Of course this is nothing new. Men, in former times, stepped on men. If a woman is just a different kind of man, why, step on her, too.

Give and give and give is a mug's game – or a saint's. There is at the best of times a limited supply of saints ready to put others' interests above their own. Today there are not even social incentives to do the right thing. Do it, and nobody cares.

For men, the equality thing gets better and more advantageous with time. As George Gilder has pointed out, in Men and Marriage, feminism releases married men from old ties of fidelity and allegiance. The divorce rate soars as middle-aged men ditch their wives in favor of cutie-pies sans graying temples and kids.

Equality, it's wonderful! No duties, no obligations, just pleasure and assertiveness. Take what you want. Step on those who object. Grab, grab, grab. Do feminists, feasting on the fruits of victory, ever wrinkle their noses as if to say, er, this-wasn't-quite-what-we-meant? Let us do the mannerly, old-fashioned thing. Let us not press that question closely.

Diplomats' housing wastes millions

WASHINGTON — Saving money is the least of concerns when the State Department lodges its diplomats overseas. Costly housing decisions are being bungled by ambassadors and others who may be great across a negotiating table but know next to nothing about property management.

Anderson

When congressional investigators toured some overseas posts recently, they found many once-beautiful homes going to pot. The list of maintenance work needed on diplomatic residences is now approaching half a billion dollars.

Problems at the ambassador's residence in Tokyo have been ignored for so long that the General Accounting Office now estimates it needs $10 million in repairs. The laundry list of needs includes such basics as replacing windows, rewiring electrical lines, replacing plumbing and painting. Mysteriously, the investigators found that one reason for the maintenance problems was that the ambassador would not let workers near his mansion, for some unexplained reason.

In Mexico City, simply repairing the elevator in the chancery may cost more than $400,000.

In Guadalajara, Mexico, officials had noticed a fire hazard in the consulate office building in 1986, but did nothing about it. In some parts of the building, employees would be trapped with no escape route in case of a fire. They could climb out the windows, but there were no fire escapes from the upper floors. Instead of putting in fire escapes, the post spent $45,000 to cover the roof of the parking lot. No one wants to climb into a hot car under the brutal Mexican sun.

Investigators found the most common problems to be neglect, and in some cases incompetence. They also found fraud. In Santiago, Chile, about $120,000 was missing from the maintenance account. Criminal investigators in the State Department Inspector General's Office are trying to find out what happened to it. They are studying at least six cases involving misuse of post maintenance funds.

Despite the fact that the State Department has been criticized before for bungling its overseas lodging arrangements, diplomats talked the department into proposing more generous housing guidelines. That proposal nearly caused some blood vessels to pop on Capitol Hill. Some members of Congress reminded department officials of the more egregious cases, including the U.S. Embassy employee in Belgium who lived alone in a seven-bedroom house. The State Department was forced to shelve its ambitious plans for even better housing.

The department's inventory in foreign nations includes more than 2,000 buildings owned by the United States and another 5,400 leased buildings. The rent amounts to more than $200 million a year. That's an investment that shouldn't be allowed to deteriorate.

In 1988 the State Department came up with one cost-saving brainstorm. The Foreign Buildings Office hired two private engineering companies and told them to survey overseas posts and come up with a list of needed repairs. The survey alone is expected to cost $6 million and will not be finished until 1995.

One former U.S. ambassador gave our associate Jim Lynch this assessment of the Foreign Buildings Office: "It's a mess."

POST-POST COLD WAR — The Soviets are evaluating their entire military doctrine in light of the performance of their technology in the Persian Gulf War. Their equipment, in the hands of the Iraqi army, was less than impressive. Now they are questioning whether their military-industrial complex can keep up with U.S. technology. Soviet military leaders take little comfort in detente. Their planning is still based on a U.S. threat. They know that the United States has the capacity to annihilate Soviet population centers in 30 minutes. That potential will continue to dominate Soviet military strategy.

MINI-EDITORIAL — President Bush may not have intended to carve up Iraq geographically after the Persian Gulf War, but its neighbors are already carving it up politically. The Syrians are working behind the scenes to replace Saddam Hussein with someone who thinks like they do.

Credit card thiefs should respect image

Recently one of my credit cards was stolen. The problem was, I was unaware of it, and therefore the criminal had use of the card for about 30 days.

I got wind that something was wrong when the charges started to come in.

Buchwald

"Did you have a nice time in Puerto Rico?" my accountant wanted to know.

"Not really," I told him. "Mainly because I haven't been there in over 10 years."

"Well, you got a credit card bill for $3,000 for a stay there, and it looks as if you had a wonderful shopping spree. I wish you would tell your wife to buy quarts instead of gallons of Joy perfume."

"That wasn't my wife," I protested, "She hates Joy. It's obvious that someone else is using my card."

My accountant said, "There's no need to be hasty. I heard a story where a woman's credit card was stolen and her husband decided not to report it because the thief was only spending about half of what his wife usually charged."

I told him, "You're not taking this seriously. This person must be brought to justice."

"You don't have to pay the charges once you report the loss," he assured me.

"I'm not worried about that. I'm concerned that he's going to hurt my reputation as a big spender. Suppose he buys his socks at People's Drug Store? How is that going to make me look when the story gets into the newspaper?"

"You're overly concerned. These guys spend big and they spend fast before there is any chance of getting caught. I have your bill here in front of me. Your friend bought a beautiful cashmere jacket at Barney's for $1,400."

"Single or double-breasted?"

"Single."

"That's good," I said. "I hate double-breasted."

My accountant continued, "He had dinner for two at the Ugly Seaport for $129."

"That's a tourist trap," I yelled. "The man has no taste."

"Maybe his girlfriend insisted on going there."

"How do you know he had a girlfriend?" I asked.

"He ran up a tab for $250 at Victoria's Secret."

"I wonder if he took her with him to Puerto Rico?"

My accountant said, "Don't be too hard on him. The man rented a Chevy from Hertz, when he could have driven a Jaguar. He was probably trying to save you money."

"I don't want him to save me money when he's taking out a girl," I protested. "It makes me look cheap with MasterCard."

"The worst mistake someone can make is to feel sorry for the person who stole his credit card," my accountant warned.

"How long do you think this joker can keep this up?" I asked.

"Not much longer, now that we have reported him."

"Will they be rough when they arrest him?" I wanted to know.

"Beats me. Why do you care?"

"I don't want anything to happen to my cashmere jacket."

CHARLEY REESE

Persian Gulf was unjust, unnecessary war

An old mercenary told me that when people are trying to intimidate you, they inadvertently reveal what they themselves fear most by threatening you with it.

As a corollary, I've observed that when people are trying to cover up the truth, they will inadvertently reveal what they want to cover up by denying it. The Bush administration is doing this now.

Reese

The standard party line coming out of the White House in letters and in speeches by administration people is that every effort to find a peaceful solution to the Persian Gulf was made but they were all rejected by Iraq, and thus the war is entirely Iraq's fault.

This isn't true. Newsweek magazine reported that in August, Bush issued instructions to the CIA to get rid of Saddam Hussein. The New York Times has now reported that plans for an offensive operation were begun in September and that on Oct. 30, Bush okayed the timetable for an air war to begin in the middle of January and for ground operations to start in February. This was 30 days before Bush got his U.N. Security Council vote authorizing force. This was seven days before he announced he was doubling U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia. This approval of war plans for January was given at the time President Bush was telling the American people we were there to defend Saudi Arabia.

The sad truth is that what Bush feared most between August and January was that Iraq would pull out of Kuwait. People may recall that's what some White House staffers described last fall as "the nightmare scenario." Why would withdrawal from Kuwait be a nightmare? Because George Bush all along intended to go to war and destroy Saddam Hussein's government.

We saw that even after the war had begun when the Iraqis offered to withdraw and Bush refused to let them. Even after they began to withdraw under fire, we kept shooting and literally slaughtered thousands on the road from Kuwait to Iraq as they sat helpless in a traffic jam.

George Bush is no dummy and is certainly not inexperienced in foreign affairs. It was no accident that immediately after Iraq invaded Kuwait Bush began to lay down ultimatums, to publicly insult Saddam Hussein, and to reject out of hand the Iraqi offer to negotiate. Rather than trying to find a peaceful solution, the Bush administration was doing everything it could to prevent one.

The fact that our military forces executed the plan brilliantly does not change the fact that it was an unjust and unnecessary war. The fact that Saddam Hussein is a tyrant does not change the fact that it was an unjust and unnecessary war. Kuwait could have been liberated without a war.

The argument that it was war or Kuwait lost forever is one of the oldest rhetorical tricks in the book. There were in fact multiple approaches and multiple possible outcomes. It was not either-or, as it almost never is in any situation.

It's obvious that the Bush administration greatly inflated estimates of Iraqi military power. Where was all that power that allegedly threatened the future of world peace? As I write this, no chemical or biological weapons have been found in the Kuwaiti theater of operations. The Iraqi army, which had failed to defeat Iran in eight years, was totally destroyed by our high-tech weaponry in less than eight weeks.

We have slaughtered tens of thousands of Iraqis, lost some of our own, busted the budget, and for what? We have Kuwait under martial law imposed by its own native dictator. A leader of Kuwait's democratic forces was shot in his own home after the liberation — by a Kuwaiti gunman.

And where are we, faced with a government that does one thing in secret and says the opposite in public? Apparently most Americans don't care. But deception is an act of hostility, and a government hostile toward its own people is a dangerous government.

Officers relaxed after beating, police messages reveal

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Police officers who had just beaten a black motorist were relaxed and even jocular in their communications with each other and with a desk officer, according to transcripts released by the police on Monday.

In the transcripts of mobile computer communications among the squad cars moments after the beating of Rodney G. King on March 3, a supervising officer at the scene, identified by a police spokesman as Sgt. Stacey C. Koon, typed out, "You just had a big-time use of force."

The reply from the police communications desk was: "Oh well. I'm sure the lizard didn't deserve it. Ha, ha. I'll let them know, OK."

Then Koon sent a message asking for a fresh supply of darts for the Taser stun gun that was fired at King at the time of the beating.

The comments from the sergeant and other officers seem to show them treating the beating as an ordinary incident, lending support to critics who say Los Angeles police officers routinely resort to force with little provocation.

At 1:12 a.m., about 15 minutes after the beating ended, the transcripts show that a patrol officer typed out, "Oops!" and then, "I haven't beaten anyone this bad in a long time."

The Police Department spokesman, Fred Nixon, said the two officers in the car sending this transmission were Laurence M. Powell and Timothy E. Wind.

In another squad car, an officer who was appparently not at the scene typed back: "Oh not again. Why for you do that? Thought you agreed to chill out for a while. What did he do?"

A reply from the first car, according to the transcript, said: "I think he was dusted. Many broken bones later. After the pursuit."

The use of the word "dusted" appears to refer to the officer's suspicion that King had been taking the drug phencyclidin, commonly known as PCP or angel dust. Tests later found no trace of drugs in his system.

Koon, Powell and Wind, along with Officer Theodore J. Briseno, were indicted last week on charges of assault with a deadly weapon and are scheduled to enter their pleas this Friday.

The officers were using miniature computers fitted into their squad cars to communicate among themselves and a supervisor at the station. A police spokesman said the computers were used to supplement the heavily used voice communications system.

The Police Department released the transcripts Monday at the request of Mayor Tom Bradley, through his appointed Police Commission, which oversees the department.

Earlier Monday, Chief Daryl F. Gates expressed his own thoughts about the victim, King, saying he hoped he would make use of the experience to embark on a better life.

Surrounded by yellow ribbons hung on his behalf at police headquarters, Gates told a crowd of cheering supporters that he would not heed widespread calls for his resignation following the beating on March 3 of Rodney G. King.

In response to a question, he said King and his family deserve an apology for the beating, which has led to the indictments of four of the 15 officers that were present.

Then he added: "We regret what took place. I hope he gets his life straightened out. Perhaps this will be the vehicle to move him down the road to a good life instead of the life he's been involved in for such a long time."

King, 25, was unemployed and on parole at the time of the beating. He had just completed six months in prison on a sentence for an armed robbery conviction. He had previously been convicted of trying to pay for prostitution.

King was not charged in the March 3 incident, in which the police said he was stopped for speeding.

He is in a hospital recovering from surgery to repair a shattered eye socket. His doctors say he suffered multiple skull fractures, a broken leg, injuries to both knees, a concussion, nerve damage and possible brain damage.

In recent days calls for the chief's resignation have come from community leaders here and from the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del.

The chief has many supporters in the police force and the community, and the reception for him on Monday morning was loud and emotional.

"I will be here," he told reporters at his office Monday morning. "I will stay here and I will fight any attempt to get rid of me. I will fight it with all the effort I have."

At police headquarters in downtown Los Angeles on Monday, yellow ribbons were hung as symbols of support.

Gates, who is 64, has headed the Los Angeles Police Department for 13 years. As a civil service appointee, he can be removed only for cause after a lengthy proceeding conducted by the five-member Police Commission.

Administration seeks Fed loan to FDIC

■ Plan would avoid a taxpayer bailout of the dwindling FDIC fund by having banks repay the loan through insurance premiums.

'The fact that we're actually borrowing money and raising funds to pay it back at the same time is something that ought to appeal to all of those who want to protect the taxpayers.'

— FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration plans to ask Congress this week to authorize up to $25 billion in borrowing from the Federal Reserve if needed to replenish the government fund insuring bank deposits, according to a letter made available Monday.

The borrowing plan would provide even more than the $15 billion requested three weeks ago by Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman. It seeks to avoid a taxpayer bailout of the dwindling FDIC fund by having banks repay the loan through insurance premiums charged by the fund.

"They took our plan and improved it," Seidman said. "The fact that we're actually borrowing money and raising funds to pay it back at the same time is something that ought to appeal to all of those who want to protect the taxpayers."

However, if the banking industry deteriorated beyond expectations and was incapable of repaying the loan through premiums, taxpayers could bear the loss. That's because any loss suffered by the Federal Reserve would reduce the Fed's earnings, forwarded every year to the Treasury.

The FDIC would pay interest to the Fed. Bank premiums, currently at 19.5 cents per $100 of deposits, would be capped at 30 cents.

Disclosure of the administration plan came in a letter, dated Friday, from Treasury Under Secretary Robert R. Glauber to FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman.

Glauber told Seidman the borrowing plan will be included in the administration's broad plan to overhaul the banking system. Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., told members of his House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions Monday he expects the administration to forward a draft of its legislation late Tuesday.

While Congress debates the measure, Seidman has said he intended to borrow up to $10 billion under his agency's existing authority. Without the borrowing, his fund, which sank to $8.4 billion at the end of 1990, could run out of money by the end of this year, according projections of both the Office of Management and Budget and the Congressional Budget Office.

In addition to the $10 billion it can borrow, the FDIC currently has a $5 billion line of credit with the Treasury. As a backup, Seidman had requested an additional $15 billion in authority, without specifying the source. Instead, the Treasury is asking Congress for an additional $25 billion and specified the Federal Reserve as the source.

Borrowing from the Federal Reserve would not increase the official budget deficit unless the loan were not repaid.

Treasury officials have said they wanted any plan to shore up the FDIC plan to provide enough money, even if the recession turns out to be worse than expected and cause more bank failures than expected.

Joseph Coyne, a spokesman for the Federal Reserve, said central bank officials had no immediate comment on the plan. However, a senior Federal Reserve official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the central bank's board likely would reluctantly go along.

Bush signs veterans bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush signed a bill Monday expanding financial and legal protections for members of the armed forces who served in the Persian Gulf.

Among other provisions, the measure eliminates any waiting period required for reinstatement of health insurance after the completion of active duty.

It also protects families of U.S. forces from eviction in cases where the rent does not exceed $1,200 a month. Currently, the rent ceiling is $150 a month, set in 1966.

Another provision provides for a stay until after June 30 of any judicial action, other than a criminal proceeding, involving an individual on active duty outside the state where the court has jurisdiction.

INTRODUCING ...

Ex-mayor Rusty Gifford gives more than takes

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Along life's journey, Rusty Gifford happened upon a credo that suits and serves him well.

"What we have done for ourselves alone dies with us," Gifford said. "What we have done for others and the world remains and is immortal."

And Gifford, who is into his 80th year, reckons that if he can't give to others and help mankind, he might as well bow out.

He's a giver in a taking world.

"If I can't help my fellow man, I don't want to live," he says, as he remembers the "down-and-outers.

"There's a lot of people hurting out there right now," Gifford said.

In many ways that go without acclaim — for he seeks none and wishes not to be his own sounding board — Gifford has helped many people, including the down-trodden, the sick and the widowed, through his gifts and influence.

"If you can't help somebody else, you might as well call Newnie Ellis (Midland funeral director), hadn't you? I'm not going to sit here and look at the boob tube. I want to be out working, busy. I've got work to do."

Gifford, who is a former Texas highway patrolman, ex-mayor of Midland, semi-retired appraiser, master Mason, churchgoer and man of compassion, has been toiling in Midland since 1945, which, by some notions, makes him an old-timer.

And for all of his good deeds and goodwill, Gifford most recently was awarded the Golden Trowel Award by the Masonic Grand Lodge of Texas.

House speaker wants budget this session

■ Gov. Richards is calling for a special summer session to consider ways of covering a projected $4.6 billion budget deficit.

AUSTIN (AP) — House leaders are ready in this regular session to consider a two-year state budget and, if necessary, a tax increase to fund it, Speaker Gib Lewis said Monday.

Lewis said he doesn't want to wait until a summer special session, as Gov. Ann Richards has suggested.

The state faces an estimated $4.6 billion budget shortfall through fiscal years 1992-1993.

If new taxes are needed, Lewis said, he would support revamping the franchise tax for businesses, which might mean a corporate income tax.

There is support for such a change in the business community, he said.

Lewis said he also would likely favor increasing the state sales tax rate, currently 6¼ percent, to as much as 7 percent, and broadening the sales tax rate to include services. A variety of tax options would be considered, he said.

The speaker said he had not yet talked to Richards about the plan.

Richards earlier said she expected a summer special session to deal with the budget, after state agency audits are complete and a tax study committee makes recommendations by July 1.

Good grief, be brief, state bar urges lawyers

DALLAS (AP) — There's a simple way for lawyers to please the court: File briefs in plain English.

Most judges in Texas think lawyers use too much legalese, says the State Bar of Texas.

Its remedy is the "Plain-Language Committee," which will redraft state legal forms used by consumers, produce a 10-point "plain language charter," sponsor programs that teach lawyers to write better and present "legaldegook awards."

"Legalese is using unnecessary terms that are nothing more than bloated, pompous expressions with no meaning," said Bryan Garner, who heads the committee and teaches principles of legal writing at Southern Methodist University.

Garner gave an example of the mumbo-jumbo he said is widespread:

"Now comes the above named John Smith, plaintiff herein, by and through Darrow & Holmes, his attorneys of record, and shows unto this Honorable Court as follows ... "

In plainer language, he said that could be shortened to, "For his complaint, the plaintiff shows ... "

The State Bar said it recently sent surveys to 500 district and appellate judges across the state, of which more than half responded.

Given several examples of issues expressed in legalese and in "plain English," 80 percent favored the simpler version, Garner said. Half of the briefs presented to judges are poorly written, making it difficult to understand the lawyer's case, he said.

A firefighter attacks a fire that destroyed Frances and Ross Carroll's home at 6300 East Highway 80 Monday afternoon.

Fire leaves local family 'without a thing'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Frances and Ross Carroll watched 17 years of hard work and toil go up in smoke Monday afternoon as firefighters battled to contain a blaze that engulfed their house, barn and greenhouses.

The Carrolls stood by helplessly in a neatly plowed onion field next to their three-bedroom frame house located on 6300 East Highway 80, several miles east of Midland.

"Ross was in the barn welding when some sparks caught some grass and a tumbleweed,' Mrs. Carroll said. "The wind just picked it up, blew it to the house and everything was caught on fire in just five minutes."

Mrs. Carroll said she was in one of the couple's two greenhouses when the house caught fire.

"One minute I was tending tomato plants in the greenhouse and the next thing I knew there was fire. It all happened so fast," she said.

Firefighters fought high gusty winds, tall flames and billowing smoke for more than hour to contain the blaze. Midland fire fighters were called to the blaze at 12:45 p.m. and were at the scene about two hours.

Four Midland units, emergency medical assist units, Northeast County and the Greenwood Volunteer fire departments were all called out to assist in containing the fire.

"This is what you call a county-wide effort," one firefighter said, while moving a hose.

Even Sheriff Gary Painter grabbed a rake and began raking through embers shortly after arriving on the scene.

Painter said the house and adjacent buildings on a quarter-acre lot were engulfed when fire fighters arrived.

"Mrs. Carroll had time to make a phone call to the fire department and evacuate the house," Painter said. "It was that quick."

By 1:15 p.m. the house was completely engulfed with a wall of flames rising from the roof.

Carroll stalked the perimeter of his property, unable to get closer than several yards from it due to a barrier of hazy, intense heat. The fire hoses' cascading water, shooting flames and strong winds combined to creative a volatile destructive force of falling, burning debris.

The county resident was visibly shaken to see his tractor quickly become a charred ruin.

His wife, still stunned by the speed of the fire,

ECISD: Alphabetic Phonics worth effort

MISD's Reading Recovery course stresses strategy

Staff Report

Reading Recovery is an intervention program that targets poor readers in the first grade. It teaches pupils to analyze unknown words by using strategies.

The strategies were developed by Marie M. Clay, a New Zealand educator and psychologist.

Educators in Columbus city schools, the Ohio State University and the Ohio Department of Education began a collaborative project to pilot the program in 1984. The project was supported by the U.S. Department of Education's National Diffusion Network.

New Zealand research showed that children who were tested three years after participating in the project maintained their gains with no additional help.

Midland Independent School District implemented the program in September 1990.

Strategies pupils are taught to analyze unknown words include:

- Work on it, don't give up, monitor and self-correct.
- Go back to the beginning of the sentence to give it another try.
- Think of what meaning of the word would make sense.
- Think of how the letters help in figuring out the word.

"Children identified with dyslexia can succeed with Alphabetic Phonics. We've seen it work. The results are phenomenal," said Susan Calvin, elementary school reading consultant for Ector County Independent School District.

In fact, ECISD administrators are so taken with the program, that they have persuaded the school board to train 11 teachers in the phonics program.

Ms. Calvin, who tutors pupils in the program herself, said that training 11 teachers is a positive investment for the school district.

"It is expensive and time consuming, though," Ms. Calvin said. "It costs about $2,000 to teach each teacher, and we aren't overlapping training. We won't start another group until this group is finished, and training takes two years."

Despite the investment of time and money, Ms. Calvin said that "the program is worth it."

"Alphabetic Phonics has proved itself," she said. "We have had the program in the district for two years now. When we were first getting started, we used video tapes of teachers teaching the program. And standardized test scores have already been significantly higher."

Ms. Calvin said that an Odessa Masonic organization gave her a scholarship to pay for her training at the Scottish Rite Learning Center of West Texas in Odessa.

The phonics program originated at the Texas Scottish Rite Hospital in award was a "most humbling experience."

"Masonry basically teaches morality, fellowship and brotherly love," said Hershel Beaty, district deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of Texas, Ancient Free & Accepted Masons (AF&AM). And Gifford has "lived up to the teachings and percepts" of Freemasonry.

Dean Porter, president of the Midland Scottish Rite Association, cited Gifford's dedication to the community, church, family and masonry.

Gifford was a 26-year-old desk sergeant for the Amarillo Police Department when he petitioned to be a Mason in 1937. Already, he was helping others by counseling runaway children.

"Every man that I admired, without exception, was a Mason," he recalled.

"You must believe that there is a Deity, a Supreme Being, or you'll never make a Mason — or else tell a lie."

The humanity of the fraternity appealed to him.

"It is a fraternity with the laborer, the roughneck, the bank president, aye, even the president of the United States. They're all the same," said Gifford. He noted that one-third of the United States presidents were Masons.

Gifford, the youngest of five children, got his upbringing in a small Kentucky town near banks of the Mississippi River. He was born in 1911.

In the early 1920s, his father, Marshall Gifford, a carpenter, sold the family house for $900 and, with $200, moved his family by train to Amarillo in the Texas Panhandle for the sake of Rusty Gifford's "beautiful" 19-year-old, freckled-face sister, Opal, who was bestowed with auburn hair and who was plagued with "consumption" — tuberculosis.

"My Daddy brought us to Texas," Gifford said, "because he heard (Amarillo) had a high, dry climate" which, the father hoped, would benefit his daughter's health.

She died the next year.

"Poor ol' Papa brought us to Texas," Gifford said. "Had a lot of nerve — 48 years old, five children, everybody sick."

Gifford, who fared well for any man, particularly for a fellow who didn't get a high-school education, got on with the Amarillo Police Department in the 1930s, became a desk sergeant and, by late 1941, earned a place on the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) as a highway patrolman.

His first duty station was Pecos "just before Pearl Harbor."

Rather than get drafted and plunge into World War II, Gifford stayed on with the DPS and was charged with chasing down draft-dodgers.

"I fought the 'battle of the Pecos and Rio Grande rivers,' looking for draft-dodgers," he said.

By 1945, Gifford was in Midland on a $181.50 monthly DPS salary which, he said in gratitude, was much better than the $35 a month he was paid briefly in 1939 when he, on a leave's of absence from police work, was a choir-education director for Calvary Baptist Church in Fort Worth. He had spent a year in a Fort Worth seminary. By then, he had a wife, Marie, who has since died, and a daughter, Phyllis, who lives in Midland.

"I just couldn't make it," he said, so he returned to police work.

In 1945, Gifford left patrol work, became manager of a Midland tire company and, at mid-century when the Spraberry Field oil boom hit Midland and "everybody was falling all over everybody" in a bustling town, Gifford became the "contact man" for drilling and trucking companies. Later, he moved over to a speciality oilfield-tool company and, when the boom was winding down to a bust in the early 1960s, he was laid off, which was just a bit unsettling for a 50-year-old man who "didn't get to finish the eighth grade."

"I don't apologize for it;" Gifford said. "Who's going to hire a man that's not a high-school graduate at 50 years of age?"

Later, he went into appraisal work, which continues to keep him busy in his semi-retirement and earns him a little "pocket change."

Back in the late 1940s, when he was Midland's mayor, Gifford earned even less "pocket change": $75 a month, "same thing they make now."

Gifford, who then was a member of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce (now the Jaycees), had campaigned on a slate with other young Midland leaders.

"We were all Jaycees. We were going to cure the ills of the world."

That was the idea.

But, Gifford said, "Oh, man, we got hold of a bear by the tail and couldn't turn loose."

He was elected mayor at age 36 in a town of about 20,000 people and served one two-year term.

"That's enough," he said. "We had our problems then just like we've got now."

Being mayor was "no honor"

"That's a lot of work," he said. Besides, "Half the people are mad at you when you go in, really."

In his years in Midland, Gifford, unheralded, has helped many folks directly and with his influence.

"It's not what you know or who you know," he says. "It's what you know about who. That's true everywhere."

From his 80-year-old vantage point, Gifford has had a "colorful" life.

"I had a prayer on my heart when I went to work, put a gun on," in 1935, he said. "I was 24 years old. They called me 'The Kid Cop.' My prayer was, and I'm humbled in this, that the Lord would look after me and protect me, and I'd never have to kill a man. And He answered both prayers."

Chile pickers testify in class-action suit

EL PASO (AP) — Two farm workers testified Monday that a contractor who hired them to pick chile at a New Mexico farm changed the wages on them hours after they arrived at the field.

The farm workers are plaintiffs in a class-action lawsuit representing 800 farm workers. The suit accuses John W. Gasper, a farm labor contractor, of violating federal farm labor and wage laws.

Mark Schneider, managing attorney for the Texas Rural Legal Aid Inc., said the suit being heard in U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's court is the first farm worker case to go to trial in El Paso in many years.

The lawsuit alleges Gasper violated the Fair Labor Standards Act by not paying workers minimum wage and the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Protection Act, which Schneider said protects them from unlicensed contractors and "various scams."

Eva Trevino and Sixta Cadena both testified that they stopped working in a Deming, N.M. field belonging to grower Darrel McCaulley because Gasper announced that the workers would be paid 30 cents per bucket of chile they picked.

The women testified, through a translator, that they had been paid 35 cents a bucket until that day, Jan. 31, 1984.

"He told us if we didn't want to work for what he was offering there was no more work," Ms. Cadena said in Spanish. "We came back (to El Paso) because he offered us one price and then he offered us another."

Gasper's attorney, Juan Garay, asked the women whether Gasper had told them they would be paid 35 cents a bucket on the day he told them he'd pay them 30. Both could not recall him specifically saying so and said that 35 cents was what he had paid them all season.

Nancy Simmons, who is representing the plaintiffs, said the incident led attorneys to look at Gasper's farm labor contract business during the entire 1983-84 chile harvest. She said they found workers were paid below minimum wage and that Gasper had failed to post farm workers' rights as required by law.

Conditions for chile pickers who harvest New Mexico fields received national publicity last year when the pickers held numerous strikes and picketed an annual chile festival in Hatch, N.M.

Chile is New Mexico's largest cash food crop. Growers often hired a contractor who daily hires workers to pick the crop.

Judge resigns under pressure

RICHMOND (AP) — Municipal Judge Lee Grayless, accused of using a racial slur to describe a black defendant in his court, resigned from the bench Monday after local black civic leaders called for his ouster.

"It is regrettable that Judge Grayless made comments in his court March 8 that were offensive to the defendant," said Richmond Mayor Hilmar Moore in a statement announcing the judge's resignation.

"I deeply regret this incident occurred and wish to publicly thank Judge Grayless for his many services to the city of Richmond and his community," Moore said.

Grayless, 83, also issued a one-page statement Monday in which he apologized to "Travis Randle if he feels that I have offended him with comments as to his race. It was not my personal intent nor the intent of the court to do so."

"It's a three-bedroom house and we have a den," she said.

"Had a den," her husband corrected.

Mrs. Carroll pointed to the one wall of the house seemingly untouched by flame. "Well, we still have a living room," she said.

In the aftermath of the fire, the exterior wall of the living room was all that remained standing.

Dale Little, Midland County Fire Marshal, summed up the field of rubble, twisted metal and flaming wood as "a total loss."

"These people lost everything they had," Little said. He said he was relieved to see the Crisis Intervention Unit coordinator helping the couple.

Mrs. Carroll said that the couple had no insurance. "You're looking at everything we had. We even lost the Rototiller and tractors," she said, gazing out into the untouched farmland. "What we have left now is not a thing."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Accident

Staff Report

A 28-year-old woman was in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital Monday night after the car she was driving went over the North Loop 250 overpass at Andrews Highway about 2:30 a.m. Monday, according to police and hospital officials.

Terri Suzanne Sparks was driving her 1990 Dodge Daytona northbound on North Loop 250, when she veered off the road into a guardrail and went airborne.

The car hit the guardrail a second time, flipped over the rail, slid on gravel, then over the overpass traveling 141 feet and falling 88 feet. The vehicle traveled another 45 feet before coming to a stop on its top in the 5500 block of Andrews Highway.

A passenger in the car, Alton Abe Baker, 24, was also transported to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released, hospital officials said.

Possession

A Midland man arrested for DWI early Monday morning was subsequently charged with possession of 13 rocks of cocaine, police said.

Officers stopped Arandal Derrick Goodly, 22, driving a 1981 Buick, in the 1800 block of E. Front Street about 2:18 a.m. and arrested him for driving while intoxicated.

After they brought Goodley to jail, he was found to be in possession of the cocaine and two marijuana cigarettes.

Goodly was released Monday on a $5,000 bond for possession of a controlled substance and $500 for DWI, jail officials said.

Attack

A man attacked and tried to rape a 26-year-old Midland woman at about 5 a.m. Monday, according to police reports.

The woman told police a man broke into her southwest Midland apartment by kicking in the front door and then attacked her. During a struggle, the woman was able to break free and fled to a neighbor's apartment, where she called police.

The assailant, described only as a black man about 5 feet 9 inches tall, left the scene in a 1978 or 1979 white Ford.

The victim was unharmed in the incident.

County commissioners tackle jail staffing problem

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners took a step toward solving the county jail's staffing problems during a special meeting on Monday.

The commissioners are trying to make sense of what County Commissioner Durward Wright calls the "verbiage" of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, which tells Texas' sheriffs and county commissioners how to operate their jails.

But manpower figures the jail commission recommended for the new Midland County Central Detention Facility would cost more money, about $500,000, than the county has to spend.

So, to resolve potential conflicts, the commissioners plan to hire a consulting firm that specializes in "manpower utilization," said County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer.

"There's a difference in the interpretation of the standards," Seltzer said Monday afternoon when the Commissioners' Court was interviewing jail consulting firms.

The new jail is operated by 67 staff members, from jailers to cooks. Original projections approved by the jail commission suggest the jail could operate continuously with about 40 people, on rotating shifts, under a modular jail setup.

Under that multi-pod system, relatively few jailers could oversee the prisoners at minimal cost to taxpayers.

"We were under the impression that all we had to have was eyeball-to-eyeball observation one time an hour," Seltzer said. "That particular standard was one of the driving forces in our staffing."

But the jail commission later said that the observation must be "primary focus," which means hands-on supervision 75 percent of the time.

"That is what has thrown us off," Seltzer said.

The direct supervision is in addition to observation from the jail's electronic central control pod.

To accomplish supervision recommended by the jail commission, Sheriff Gary Painter said he would need another 13 to 15 new jailers to man the new jail.

That would cost the county an additional $450,000 to $500,000 per year.

"We don't have it," said the judge. "And we don't know where we are going to get it."

Already, the sheriff's day-to-day operations and the cost of operating two jails is costing Midland County taxpayers more than $4.5 million in 1991, Seltzer said. This year, the county budget is pegged at its highest ever: $20 million.

The old jail atop the courthouse holds 104 bunks and the new jail off the courthouse square holds 202, for a total of 306 bunks.

"We don't need 70 or 80 (staff) people over there (at the new jail)," Seltzer said. But he admitted that if the jail was not making efficient use of its manpower, more people than the 67 already working there would be needed.

In the late 1980s, when the Commissioners' Court and a citizens group were trying to sell voters on a new jail, the Commissioners' Court called for a jail with an advanced design that would lend itself to cost-efficiency and manpower efficiency.

"If we have to hire these additional people, and we don't know where the money is coming from, then that takes out all the efficiency and the early pay-out," Seltzer said. "We may have been optimistic."

Painter said that if the study is based on manpower alone, it will be an honest study.

"But if it's based on cost, cost is always going to take precedent, because you are always wanting to save tax dollars," he said. "We have to be concerned about not only the cost but the safety of the officers, safety of the prisoners, and reducing liability to the taxpayers of this county. That's a major concern."

In the new jail, prisoner supervision can be done remotely due to the built-in design. "But that's not what the jail commission wants," the sheriff said.

John E. Dufficy, spokesman for a San Antonio consulting firm seeking to advise the Commissioners' Court on jail operations, said his firm is cost conscious, and in its Midland County study would attempt to allocate tax dollars efficiently.

"We don't know if there is a conflict between operations (the sheriff) and the funding source (the Commissioners' Court)," he said.

The commissioners will make a final decision on hiring a consulting firm during the regular Commissioners' Court meeting March 25.

PHONICS: Course 'integrates everything'

(From 1B)

Dallas.

The Dallas hospital has pioneered studies in evaluating and treating a wide variety of learning disabilities.

According to information from the hospital, no help was available for dyslexic children in Texas until it established the hospital's Child Development Division in 1965.

Ms. Calvin said the hospital offers "the strongest program of this type."

"We considered it very carefully," she said "We looked at several other multisensory programs. It really does integrate everything a child will need to learn to read, including learning words in context."

She said the program would be too stilted for the average child. "It's not very picture oriented and it's slow. A child can't use any other words until the sounds and letters of that word have been introduced."

Despite its drawbacks, Ms. Calvin said children identified as dyslexic "just love it."

"Both groups I have in the program have made phenomenal progress," she said. "It definitely is self-esteem building. Students become much more confident and more readily able to respond."

Jane Rambo, the only teacher trained in the program by Midland Independent School District, agreed.

She said the program's tactics of "sky writing" — using large motor muscles to write letters in the air, tracing letters in trays of salt and using a pencil frame to write letters using large motions all help a child to ingrain letters they can't retain as a visual image.

"Alphabetic Phonics is designed for third graders," Ms. Rambo said. "Children in first through third grades are learning how to read. By fourth grade, they are reading to learn. If they don't have the reading skills by fourth grade they are liable to begin to slip through the cracks."

"We are finding more children all the time who have slipped through the cracks," she said. "However, the school district is working real hard to expand this program and is doing a needs-assessment study to find out how many students need the program."

MISD has implemented several Alphabetic Phonics pilot programs and several teachers have received training in the program at their own expense.

Charles B. Lambeth, an Odessa pediatrician, is organizing Alphabetic Phonics instruction courses to begin the first week of June.

Lambeth, who has worked with children with learning disabilities for 30 years, brought the course to Odessa last year.

"I initiated bringing the course to the area last year, so that teachers wouldn't have to go to Lubbock or Dallas to get instruction," he said. "We had about 19 teachers enroll in the course last year, half from Midland."

Lambeth said the course instructors were trained at the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas. They are representatives of the Southwest Multisensory Training Center in Dallas. The Odessa site of the upcoming course, which was in an Ector County school last year, has not been decided.

"Teachers who take the course will be certified in Alphabetic Phonics," he said. "It takes place over three summers, but is actually considered a two-year course."

Ms. Rambo said most children's reading problems are diagnosed outside the school district by private enterprises.

"However, we (MISD) will test any child who is two years or more behind in reading, especially if their IQ is average or better. We must catch these children and teach them that they can succeed."

Cost of the two-year Alphabetic Phonics course organized by Lambeth is $2,000. Teachers interested in participating may call Lambeth's office at (915) 333-3261.

Guerrero backs cleanup, incentive bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero called Monday for passage of legislation she said could help fight oilfield pollution and provide incentives for operators of marginal wells.

The bills meet the dual goals of environmental protection and economic development, Ms. Guerrero said.

"We need to strike a balance. Neither worthwhile goal need be sacrificed at the expense of the other," she said.

The commissioner endorsed a bill to provide financial incentives to keep marginal wells, so-called stripper wells, in production by exempting them from the state severance tax for two years.

Mid-West Door & Window can enhance your home's beauty

If home improvements are on your list of "things to do," let the experts at Mid-West Door & Window help you with quality products, installation and possibly some new ideas.

Whether it's siding, gutters, replacement or storm windows, skylights, patio and entry doors, storm doors, sunscreens or plain screens, Mid-West has a complete line of quality products to choose from to enhance the beauty of your home as well as increase its value and energy efficiency.

Although skylights and windows aren't a new concept, the advances in technology enable you, the homeowner, to add both beauty and practicality to the home. This is most important since emphasis is on light and lots of it in the 90s.

Mid-West offers replacement windows in a variety of styles and sizes from several manufacturers. Whether you want wooden or aluminum framed windows, the options are great.

Tinted and insulated glass, thermal break aluminum frames, low maintenance clad exteriors on wooden windows, grilles, and many more features are available in double or single hung, sliding, fixed picture windows, casements, awning and the ever popular bay and bow windows.

Skylights and roof windows are a relatively simple way to light up any room, especially one in the interior part of the home. They are available with clear or tinted glass or acrylic domes and some roof windows are available with electric operators.

Storm windows are another specialty at Mid-West Door & Window. These aluminum windows mount to the outside of your home's existing windows and are available in different finishes and prices to allow you to pick the one that best suits your home and your pocketbook.

Storm windows are a protective investment in regard to heating and cooling, dust, protection from hail, noise and other elements. Mid-West sells only custom fitted storm windows to assure you the best fit and the least amount of air and dust infiltration.

Today's homeowner must always look to the future when remodeling or doing home improvements. In today's resale market, a home's "curb appeal" has become most important. What better way to accomplish this than with steel siding installed by the experts at Mid-West Door & Window.

Siding, soffit, and fascia can make your home virtually maintenance free as well. Steel siding is available in a variety of beautiful colors and styles. It gives your home the appearance of real wood plus the strength and durability of steel.

A new entry door is another way to add curb appeal to your home. Mid-West offers doors of all styles from the elegance of beautiful wood with leaded glass to the Peachtree steel doors for the harshest exposures. The Peachtree steel doors can be plain and simple or by installing Visador Lites with leaded and beveled glass, they can fit into any decor.

One of the most popular home improvement projects today is the replacement of old, worn out sliding patio doors. Most of these older doors are single glazed, drafty, and extremely inefficient.

Mid-West has the aluminum sliding patio doors with insulated glass, and frames in either white or bronze, or the popular wood doors that are hinged with either one or both doors opening. these are available with a clad exterior to reduce maintenance and protect the wood.

Regardless of the style you choose, you can be assured that your door will operate properly, be airtight and beautify your home.

Mid-West can also make you aluminum screens or rescreen your existing frames — yet another way to improve your home's appearance and add to its value. Also featured are storm doors from the practical to the elegant. The "Forever Guard" security storm door is quickly becoming a favorite for its beauty and security features. Mid-West also sells and installs gutter.

Mid-West Door and Window recently completed some extensive work on the exterior of David Watson's home. Installed were storm windows, sun screens, gutters, siding and a Wenco swinging patio door.

"Mid-West did really good work," Watson reported. "I got my money's worth and more. The service by the technicians — Neal and Rocky was excellent. And Mike Smith was very helpful, making sure that the job was done to my satisfaction." Watson said he received quotes from two other companies, but Mid-West offered the lowest price.

Call 682-4632 or come by the showroom at 2400 W. Front and see all the displays and visit with Mike Smith and his staff. Mid-West Door & Window has been in business since 1976 and assures service after the sale. Free estimates are available.

Start summer early this year at TANtalizing in San Miguel Square

Visit TANtalizing soon for complete details on tanning in one of its eight private booths. Owner Mark McCraney is shown nearby one of the booths and the racks of activewear in the salon.

Get a beautiful head start on summer — gradually — with some help from TANtalizing. TANtalizing, located in the San Miguel Square Atrium at the corner of Midkiff and Wadley, has been tanning Midlanders since 1984.

Locally owned by Midlanders Mark and Becky McCraney and operated by them and their qualified staff, TANtalizing is the place to go for an easy-to-achieve year round golden look.

If you haven't tried a tanning bed before, consider this: now you don't have to depend on the weather to get a tan. You don't have to sit out in the hot sun for hours while you sweat and burn, and possibly later, peel.

And then what do you have to show for your efforts?

At TANtalizing, however, you tan under controlled conditions — gradually, just a little bit at a time. You tan in a private room, in tanning equipment which is clean and sanitized after every use. Bring your own tapes or listen to the stereo in your room while you relax and tan. Protective eyewear and clean towels are provided for your comfort and safety.

Many people have found that tanning at TANtalizing not only produces a great tan, but it serves as a form of stress therapy. Relax and get away from the phones or the kids, or even take a cat nap. At TANtalizing, you are free to get off in your own little world. And on a particularly hectic day, that could be a priceless gift to yourself!

How fast can you get a tan? As an example, if you are a person whose skin burns moderately and tans easily, the TANtalizing staff will recommend that you gradually tan with one to three 15 minute treatments, followed by four to six 20 minute treatments and then seven to ten 30 minute treatments. This schedule is based on every-day or every-other-day tanning. Different skin types will follow a different recommended schedule.

It is then recommended that you maintain your tan with one or two 30 minute treatments per week.

Clients can tan with individual sessions or one to three month memberships.

TANtalizing has recently expanded its line of skincare products and activewear. Choose from a complete line of accelerators, gels, sprays, lotions and moisturizers. Each one is specifically designed for indoor tanning and tan enhancement. Also select bath gels and hair and body shampoos.

A terrific selection of colorful activewear is in stock and more is arriving daily.

The key to the continued success of TANtalizing is a continuous commitment to industry-sponsored education and a highly trained staff. When Mark attends a Suntanning Association for Education convention, he returns to Midland with new information on state and national legislation, new scientific and medical data (the effects of ultraviolet rays, for example) the newest in tanning and skin care products and enthusiasm for his staff and customers.

TANtalizing hours are Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. and 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturdays. Charge your visits or merchandise on your Visa, MasterCard, American Express or Visa. Call the friendly staff at 699-6698 for information.

BUDGET: Tax-study committee to make recommendations July 1

with insurance officials in New York, issued a statement saying she had made a commitment "to consolidate and cut state government before we considered a budget or any tax measure."

"My instructions to the Revenue Task Force were to examine all the alternatives — including sacred cows — before we look at any tax bills. And we haven't done that yet," she said.

Lewis said, "I don't think time affords us to wait that long. If you do have to pass a tax bill, you would lose a great amount of tax if you pass a tax bill in May versus passing a tax bill in August."

"We will press forward and try to have a budget, and if we require a tax bill, we'll have a tax bill this session," he said.

Lewis estimated the state agency audits would save the state perhaps $200 million.

"That's less than half a percent of the budget. That much falls through the cracks sometimes," said Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Lewis met with Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who also supported waiting to write a budget, said Rafe Greenlee, Bullock's press secretary. The lieutenant governor wants to see the House plan in detail before commenting on it, Greenlee said.

Bullock has said he will campaign for a corporate and personal income tax to pay for needed state services.

But Lewis said most committee heads believe there are fewer than 40 votes in the 150-member House for a personal income tax.

Rep. Jim Rudd, who heads the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee, said he had wanted to wait and use the audits in writing the budget. But Rudd, D-Brownfield, said he would go along with Lewis' preference.

Chances of school-funding bill passing are 50-50, Parker says

AUSTIN (AP) — Chances are about 50-50 that lawmakers will pass a school finance reform bill as ordered by the Texas Supreme Court, a leader in the effort to forge a compromise plan said Monday.

Sen. Carl Parker, Senate Education Committee chairman, said reaction from Texans who may see higher school district property taxes and concern about the cost of reform may affect how lawmakers vote.

The Texas Supreme Court unanimously ruled unconstitutional the current $14 billion-a-year school finance system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

Differences in local property wealth now lead to disparities in education funding. Justices said if lawmakers do not devise a reform plan by April 1, they will order a stop to state funding for schools.

Parker heads a conference committee that is working to iron out differences between House and Senate school finance reform bills.

Both are so-called Robin Hood plans that would require a minimum local property tax rate, then shift hundreds of millions of dollars in local tax revenue from rich to poor school districts.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said he heard from an "outraged" taxpayer in an affluent school district who was concerned that its property tax rate may more than double.

"People are being totally selfish — many people are," Parker said. "The toughest thing about education is trying to show people why it's important to educate somebody else's child, and they're not seeing it."

Parker last week said that a compromise school finance reform plan likely would shift some local property tax revenue from wealthier to poorer school districts within 200 new taxing regions.

The minimum rate probably would be between the House's 60 cents per $100 valuation, climbing to 80 cents in four years, and the Senate's figures of 70 cents to $1, he said.

Sims debt

DETROIT (AP) — After falling more than $2 million in debt, former Detroit Lions standout Billy Sims is climbing back from bankruptcy, his lawyer says.

"It's over, basically, except for one matter that still has to be litigated with one of his creditors," David Lynn James said in Sunday's The Detroit News. He would not comment further.

Sims, the Hooks, Texas, native, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1978 while playing for the Oklahoma Sooners, filed for bankruptcy in July. He told the court he had $50 cash and $150 in his checking account.

Sims received a $2 million insurance settlement for a career-ending knee injury in 1984.

Court documents show Sims' debts included $1.5 million owed to a savings and loan for helping finance an apartment complex, The News said.

Sims holds the Lions' all-time career records for rushing yards (5,106), total touchdowns (47) and rushing touchdowns (42).

Duran loses

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A paunchy Roberto Duran, showing his age, lost to Pat Lawlor in the sixth round Monday night when he couldn't continue because of an injury to his left shoulder.

Duran was in the process of throwing a left hook when Lawlor landed a right to the Panamanian's shoulder. Duran grabbed the shoulder, bent over and grimaced in pain. The referee summoned Dr. Flip Homansky into the ring. Homansky told the referee to stop the match as Duran protested and the crowd in an outdoor arena at the Mirage booed.

The action reminded some fans of the famous "No Mas" fight in which Duran quit in the eighth round against Sugar Ray Leonard in 1980.

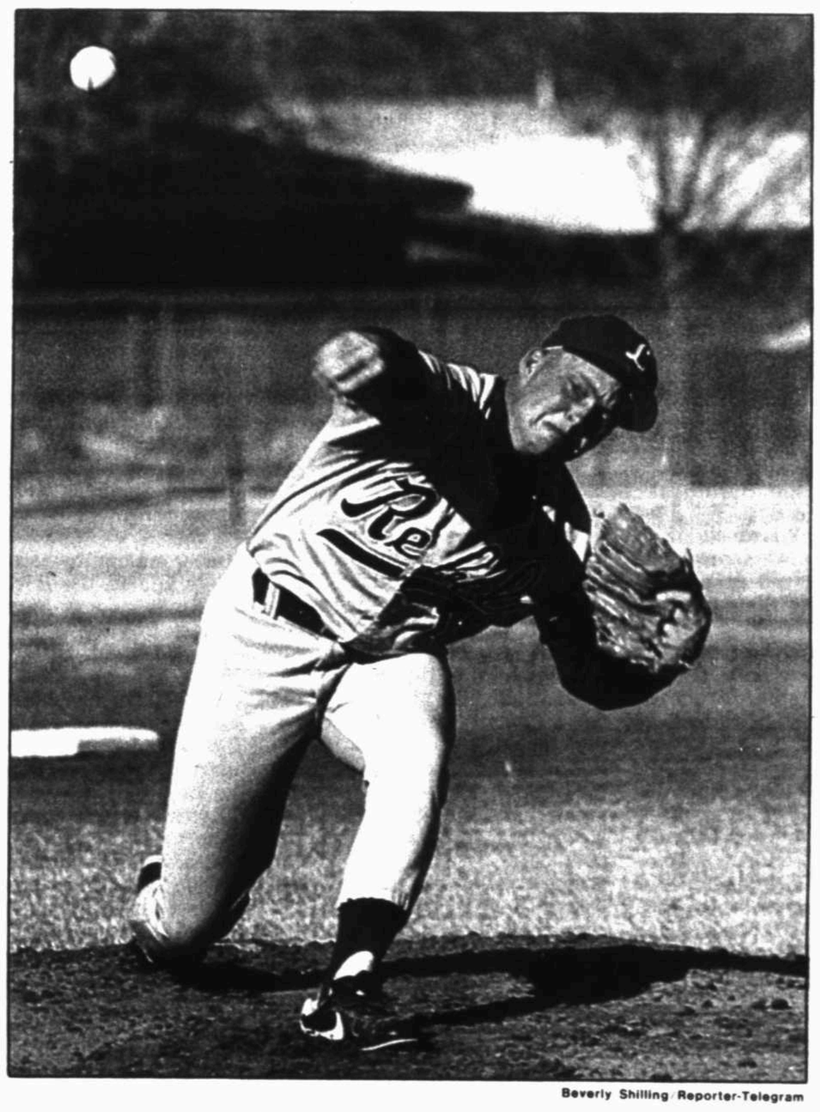
Giddy Lee takes on Mojo



Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee pitcher Brian Tomlin, who may get the call today against Odessa Permian, hurls in recent District 4-5A game at Johnson Field.

■ Midland High travels to Odessa High as local teams try to keep District 4-5A baseball wheels whirring.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

As Midland Lee tries to keep its District 4-5A baseball record perfect by hosting arch-rival Odessa Permian today, Midland High travels to Odessa High to find out if the Bronchos are for real.

For Lee, which beat then No. 4 ranked Abilene Cooper 4-1 in Abilene Saturday, Permian presents the opportunity for a first-half sweep of the three 4-5A teams that concerned head coach Jesse Benavidez the most. The 2-0 Rebels already own the win over Cooper and a 10-9 decision over MHS as the Panthers invade Johnson Field at 4 p.m. today.

Lee is 9-5 overall while Mojo is 5-5 and 0-1 in district after a 7-1 loss to OHS last Tuesday. But the Panthers got back on the winning track Friday with a 5-3 non-district win over Monahans.

"The win helped, although with high school kids it's a new game every time you walk on the field," said Permian head coach Bob Highley. "I have no doubt as to our capability, it's just whether we prepare ourselves properly to play."

The game also presents the Panthers with a chance to make up for last year, when Lee defeated Mojo twice and essentially dropped Permian from the playoffs. Stir that fact in with the rivalry, and the result should be a game with plenty of spice.

"We're looking forward to it. We knew Lee was going to be tough. Jesse has done a terrific job with a program that was already well established. I know our kids are going to be extremely competitive. We try not to say much about the rivalry because nothing really has to be said. We just try to concentrate on ourselves," Highley said.

Highley said he likely will start Brian Bavousett (2-0) on the mound, while Lee can counter with either senior Brian Tomlin (2-2) or sophomore Julian Urquidez (2-0).

Tomlin earned a no-decision in his last start a week ago against MHS, while Urquidez' last outing was a 1-0 shutout win over El Paso Canutillo March 8 in the Carlsbad, N.M., tournament.

Five Rebels are batting .400 or better in district play, with shortstop Shane Greeley and Urquidez leading the way at .500. Catcher Sean Salois and first baseman Brad Sanders follow with .429 averages, while left fielder Smily Hinojos is at an even .400.

For MHS, the challenge will be to take on an OHS team that has lost just two games this season. The Bronchos are 9-2 overall, but 1-1 in district after an 8-3 loss at San Angelo Saturday. That record, however, is a dramatic turnaround from last year's 6-13, 2-10 showing for coach Milton Thompson's team.

"They have always played us tough, but apparently they're playing everybody tough this year," said Bulldog head coach Rick Wood, whose team clobbered Abilene High 11-5 Saturday to move to 5-7 and 1-1.

While some in the league have questioned the quality of the OHS' pre-district opponents, Wood still is leery about the 4 p.m. game at Fly Field.

Schrader nips Elliott in 500 duel

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Ken Schrader wasn't sure he could outrun Bill Elliott, but he knew he could outlast him.

Schrader topped off his gas tank with 65 laps — 97 miles — to go, and with Elliott closing fast, he won the rain-delayed $655,000 Motorcraft 500 Monday.

He beat Elliott by 3.02 seconds for his first Winston Cup victory since winning at Charlotte, N.C., in October 1989.

"Bill was a little faster at times," Schrader said. "But Bill and I had pitted together once and he ran out of gas."

Twice Elliott had to coast into his pit for fuel.

Schrader said he had no doubt about going the distance.

"My pit told me if we made 261 laps, we would top off the fuel and we would make it," he said.

There was no question about him second-guessing the team by watching the fuel-pressure gauge.

"You couldn't get me to look at that thing," he said. "I was going until it quit, then I was coasting in."

Schrader, who was second at Charlotte in the last Winston Cup race, won $69,250. He averaged 140.470 mph on the 1.5-mile Atlanta Motor Speedway oval.

Dale Earnhardt finished third. He had turned in the fastest qualifying speed, 175.351 mph, but had to work up through the field from the No. 21 starting spot because he didn't qualify Friday because of engine problems.

Morgan Shepherd was fourth and Michael Waltrip was fifth.

"We ran out of gas two times and that killed us," Elliott said. "Both times we ran out were on the last two pit stops. That cost us the race."

Schrader, whose last pit stop came earlier than the other leaders, put his Chevrolet into the lead on lap 286 when Sterling Marlin pitted for two tires.

Earnhardt said his car's chassis "was just a little off today. We were a little off with our springs."

"At one point, we were in good shape, then we put stickers (new tires) at the end and the chassis wasn't suited for that," he said.

The gamble by the Schrader crew paid off when there were no caution flags after the last pit stop.

He said after Elliott made a last pit stop, 4.7 seconds for gas, he had about a 16-second lead. Elliott couldn't make up that much in 72 miles.

The race was remarkably free of cautions, with the final 175 of the 328 laps run under the green flag. There were four caution flags for 32 laps, the first two because of weather.

All 16 of the lead changes occurred when a leader pitted.

Schrader, who started in the No. 5 spot Sunday after qualifying at 173.294 mph, had moved up to third when the race was suspended by rain.

He led Elliott by 10 seconds with 30 laps left.

Elliott ate into that lead as Schrader eased through the turns in the final laps to conserve fuel.

Waltrip, who started 13th, had worked into the lead when he and Earnhardt dueled after Earnhardt passed him to get back on the lead lap on the 220th lap.

The cars touched and Waltrip suffered minor damage to his left-front fender, forcing a pit stop two laps later to change tires and pull out the sheet metal.

The only accident-caused caution flags came when Davey Allison hit the wall in turn 4 on the 58th lap and Kyle Petty blew his engine and hit the wall in turn 1 on lap 176.

There were 16 lead changes among nine drivers.

Oops! It's a 4-5A tie

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The playoff picture in District 3 soccer was altered significantly Monday when a phrase in the rule book was discovered that places a greater emphasis on ties, and the new interpretation of that rule puts Midland High back in the post-season hunt.

The Midland Lee Rebels, who thought their 7-3-2 district record was good enough for entry into next week's bi-distrct action as the league runner-up, must now meet Midland High (6-2-4) in a one-game playoff to determine the District 3 runner-up because both teams finished with identical .667 win-loss percentages.

That game has been scheduled for Thursday at 4:15 p.m. A coin flip today will be used to determine which team will host the event.

Following the finish of regular-season soccer last Saturday, Midland Independent School District athletic director Jack Tayrien said that Lee would be the league runner-up despite the tie in percentages because the Rebels had a greater number of wins than MHS. Interpretation of the new information changed that.

"Jimmie Kelly (MHS principal), brought it to my attention," Tayrien said. "It was found in the district minutes — it was not in the district policy book — and it states: 'Ties will count in the district standings as one-half game won and one-half game lost.' That throws a whole different light on it," he said.

Tyson stops Ruddock admist chaos

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson, rocked in the sixth round, beat Razor Ruddock in the seventh round Monday night when referee Richard Steele stopped the fight after a flurry sent Ruddock to the ropes but did not drop him.

Ruddock turned his hands up and looked at Steele in disbelief that the fight was over, then bodyguards representing both camps piled into the ring and a melee broke out.

Chaos reigned for several seconds.

Tyson knocked Ruddock down in the second round and again in the third. Ruddock, however, came on strong in the sixth and had Tyson in trouble late in the round with several hooks and a right hand.

In the seventh, action slowed until Tyson landed a six-punch combination with both hands that sent Ruddock back to the ropes and Steele stopped it at 2:22.

When order was restored in the ring and the time was announced, there were thunderous boos from the crowd of more than 15,000 in an outdoor arena.

Several minutes after Steele's shocking action, security men were still pitching people from the ring.

The last two punches that drove Ruddock into the ropes were a right hand and a left hook. He appeared dazed but looked more shocked at Steele's decision than from Tyson's punches.

The fight was marked by thunderous punches from both men as they tried to end it from the outset. It was also marked by wildness and by a lot of clutching and grabbing.

Twelve seconds into the second round, Tyson, winning for the third time since his upset title loss to James "Buster" Douglas 13 months ago, scored a flash knockdown with a left hook to the head.

Ruddock bounced up, signaled he was not hurt and took the mandatory 8-count. Tyson dominated the remainder of the round with body shots.

Ruddock was in more serious trouble in the third when, with the round drawing to a close, he went down from a left hook. He got up at 7 and a few seconds later, the bell ended the round.

Tyson dominated the fourth round, again with body shots, as Ruddock appeared tired and befuddled. If he landed an uppercut, it seemed to do no damage. Many of his punches were blocked.

In the sixth, however, Ruddock appeared like he might change the course of the fight. With about 10 seconds left in the round, he shook Tyson with a left hook, a right, a left and another hook. Tyson punched back but Ruddock landed a couple more hooks before the bell sounded.

Ruddock said, "Tyson hits hard for his size, but I am disappointed they stopped the fight."

Murad Muhammad, Ruddock's promoter, shouted, "We get a rematch or we go to court."

The victory places Tyson in position to challenge the winner of the fight between heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield and George Foreman on April 19 at Atlantic City. Promoter Don King has said Tyson would fight Foreman should he win, but he would not fight Holyfield because Holyfield refused to make a defense against Tyson before fighting Foreman.

Money talks in boxing, however, and Tyson against the winner of that fight would be boxing's biggest money match.

"I'm looking to fight Mike Tyson," Holyfield said after Tyson's victory.

Sooners sweep away Cincinnati

NIT Roundup

NORMAN, Okla. — Terry Evans rescued Oklahoma late in regulation, then Bryan Sallier and Brent Price did the damage in overtime as the Sooners beat Cincinnati 89-81 Monday night in the second round of the NIT.

Oklahoma (18-14) struggled for most of the game before rallying from an eight-point deficit in the final two minutes of regulation. Cincinnati, which missed its first eight field goal attempts in overtime, ended its season 18-12.

Cincinnati used its deliberate style and a trapping defense to befuddle Oklahoma for most of the night. The Bearcats twice led by 12 in the second half, the final time 67-55 with 6:42 remaining after two free throws by Herbert Jones, who finished with 20 points.

The Bearcats still seemed to have things well in hand, leading 75-67 with 1:27 to play. Then Evans — who had scored just two points until then — hit a pair of 3-pointers and added three foul shots in a 9-0 run that saw the Sooners pull to 77-76 with 41 seconds left. Evans finished with 13.

Allen Jackson, who scored 18, was fouled with 24 seconds left but made just one of two free throws. Evans then missed a 3-pointer and Price's follow shot bounced off the rim, but Kermit Holmes tipped the ball in with seven seconds left.

Cincinnati called timeout with one second to play, but wasn't able to score.

Sallier opened the overtime with a basket and two free throws, and the Sooners weren't threatened after that. Price sealed things by making five of six free throws in the final minute.

Sallier scored 25 and Jeff Webster had 21 as the froncourt carried the offensive load much of the night for the Sooners. Keith Starks had 16 points and 12 rebounds for Cincinnati.

Oklahoma got just three points from its guards in the first half — a 3-pointer by Mike Harris — and trailed 41-37 at halftime after leading by nine points early.

Harris' 3-pointer helped the Sooners take a 15-6 lead in the first six minutes. But Levertis Robinson scored four points in a 6-0 run that brought Cincinnati within 15-12.

Oklahoma used a 6-0 run of its own to take a 25-19 lead with 8:19 to play. Then Jones got warmed up, scoring nine points in an 18-4 spurt that gave the Bearcats a 37-29 lead.

Colorado 83, Wyoming 75

BOULDER, Colo. — Stevie Wise scored 21 points, including three key free throws in the final minute, as Colorado defeated Wyoming.

Colorado (17-13), which lost to Wyoming at Laramie in December, led by as many as 14 points in the first half and was in front 45-37 at halftime. But the Cowboys (20-12), closed within 72-68 on a 3-pointer by Paris Bryant with 3:10 remaining.

Randy Robinson, who had all 13 of his points in the second half, hit a layup with 1:35 remaining for a 74-68 lead. After Bryant made one free throw, Wise was intentionally fouled and hit one of two foul shots.

Colorado retained possession and Robinson made two free throws to make it 77-69 with 46 seconds remaining. Wise added two more free throws to make it 79-69 and Robinson added a slam dunk and two more free throws, delighting the standing-room only record crowd of 11,291.

Shaun Vandiver scored 18 points and 8 rebounds for Colorad and Rodell Guest scored 16 for the Buffs.

Wyoming got 24 points from Reginald Slater. Bryant added 19, Maurice Alexander had 13 and Tim Breaux had 10.

Providence 85, West Virginia 79

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Marvin Saddler scored 21 points and Providence used an 18-8 surge in the second half to put away West Virginia.

The Friars (19-12) got six points apiece from Saddler and Corey Floyd in the spree that turned a 64-62 lead into an 82-70 advantage with 2:15 remaining.

West Virginia (17-14) fought back to 83-79 with 47 seconds left, but missed four straight shots in the last 15 seconds.

Providence won despite getting only 12 points from high-scoring guard Eric Murdock, who had back spasms. Chris Brooks led the Mountaineers with 24 points and Charles Becton added 20.

Stanford 80, Wisconsin 72

MADISON, Wis. — Adam Keefe scored 33 points and grabbed 14 rebounds, leading Stanford over Wisconsin.

Keefe, a 6-foot-9 junior, matched his season average with 21 first-half points as Stanford (17-13) raced to an early 21-5 lead and led 39-30 at halftime.

The Cardinal dominated the boards from the outset and Wisconsin was unable to get an offensive rebound in the first half. For the game, Stanford had a 30-20 rebounding edge, including 10-4 on the offensive boards.

Stanford opened the second half with an 8-0 run for a 47-30 lead before Wisconsin's Carleton McGee scored.

The Cardinal led 60-42 before the Badgers (15-15) began a comeback. They got within 73-65 with 1:06 to go after 3-pointers by Larry Hisle and Kass Weaver. But Stanford hit seven free throws in the final 66 seconds to maintain its lead.

Kenny Ammann added 14 points for Stanford, which beat Houston in the first round and will play a quarterfinal game on Thursday.

Arkansas St. 58, Memphis St. 57

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Bobby Gross connected on a 3-pointer to put Arkansas State ahead to stay, then hit the clinching free throw with 11 seconds left.

Gross' free throw gave the Indians (23-8) a 58-54 advantage. Memphis State's Elliot Perry, who had 24 points, hit a 3-pointer with four seconds left, but Memphis State (17-15) was out of timeouts and Arkansas State didn't have to put the ball inbounds.

Memphis State built its biggest lead of the game midway through the second half when Perry's 3-pointer made it 46-37. But the Indians, behind Gross and the inside play of reserve forward Tyrone Hall, used a 13-3 run to take a 50-49 lead on Hall's free throw with 3:01 remaining.

S.Illinois 72, SW Missouri St. 69

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Sterling Mahan scored 15 points and Rick Shipley scored 13 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as Southern Illinois beat Southwest Missouri State.

Southwest Missouri (22-12) led 58-50 with 8:10 when point guard Arnold Bernard was injured and had to leave the game. The Salukis (18-13) then went on a 22-9 run, capped by two free throws each from Kelvan Lawrence and Shipley in the final 16 seconds, for a 72-66 lead.

Darryl Reid, the Bears' leading scorer for the season, scored 19 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, but fouled out with 3:36 left.

NBA Roundup

DALLAS — The Sacramento Kings tied the NBA single-season record with their 28th consecutive road loss, falling 104-86 Monday night to the Dallas Mavericks, who got 31 points from hot-shooting Rolando Blackman.

Previous losers of 28 straight on the road in a single season were the 1974-75 New Orleans Jazz and the 1989-90 New Jersey Nets. Those losing streaks are the fourth-longest overall in NBA history.

The Kings, who lost coach Dick Motta to an ejection, go for the record Tuesday night in San Antonio. Motta was chased with 2:47 left in the second quarter by referee Joe Crawford after collecting his second technical foul.

Blackman made 11 of 15 shots to lead the Mavericks, who got 18 points from Derek Harper. James Donaldson added 17 points and 12 rebounds while Rodney McCray tied a career high with 18 boards.

Lionel Simmons had 19 points for Sacramento, 1-31 this season on the road.

After trailing by as many as 21 points late in the third quarter, the Kings made a fourth-quarter charge. But they got no closer than 86-77 with 5:07 to play on Rory Sparrow's jumper.

The Mavericks boosted a 13-point halftime lead to as much as 71-50 with 1:47 to play in the third quarter. Dallas led 71-56 entering the final period.

Sacramento made just five of 27 shots as Dallas moved to a 25-16 lead after one quarter.

The Kings converted only 11 of 45 first-half shots and trailed at the intermission 44-31.

McCray had 15 first-half rebounds to tie a club record and Blackman scored 16 first-half points.

Bulls 121, Nuggets 108

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bulls' 24th straight home victory was one of their easiest.

Michael Jordan scored 15 of his 31 points in the third quarter as the Bulls breezed past Denver. It was Chicago's eighth straight victory and improved the Bulls' record at Chicago Stadium to 29-3.

The Nuggets dropped their third in a row and 11th straight on the road, where they are 3-29.

Chicago took command by outscoring Denver 15-2 in the first 3:23 of the third quarter. Jordan's slam dunk with 8:37 left gave Chicago a 73-56 lead and the Bulls increased the margin to 20 on Bill Cartwright's dunk with 7:15 left.

The Bulls led 93-73 entering the final quarter and were in front by as many as 29 points in the final period, even though Jordan did not play in the last 12 minutes.

Scottie Pippen added 16 points for the Bulls, who got points from everyone on the roster. Orlando Woolridge led Denver with 21 points, 15 in the first half. Michael Williams had 17 and Reggie Williams added 16.

Chicago got strong play from its bench in the second quarter. Cliff Levingston and Will Perdue each scored six points, to go along with Jordan's 10, as the Bulls took a 58-54 lead at the intermission.

The Bulls scored the first four points, but Denver then went on a 14-0 run, capped by Woolridge's three-point play, for a 14-4 lead. Denver led 26-16 when the Bulls went on an 8-2 run to trim the deficit to 28-24 at the end of the quarter.

76ers 99, Magic 91

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley scored 24 points and Ron Anderson led an 18-4 surge to start the fourth period as Philadelphia beat Orlando.

Leading 69-65 after three quarters, Philadelphia made it 77-69 on two free throws by Hersey Hawkins. Then the 76ers scored 10 straight points, six by Anderson, to make it 87-69 with 4:57 remaining.

Hawkins had 21 points and Anderson 16 for Philadelphia.

Suns 111, Pacers 103

PHOENIX — Tom Chambers scored four of his 21 points during a decisive 14-2 run in the fourth quarter as Phoenix beat Indiana.

Jeff Hornacek added 20 points while Dan Majerle and Kevin Johnson each had 19 for the Suns, who are 6-0 at home against Central Division teams this season.

Indiana, which had won its last three games both overall and on the road, got 20 points each from Reggie Miller and Detlef Schrempf.

Miller, the NBA leader in free throws at 92 percent this season, missed two of his 10 attempts and had his consecutive streak stopped at 52.

Younger McEnroe betters brother, beats Becker

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Patrick McEnroe did something on Monday that his brother has done only once. He beat Boris Becker.

The younger McEnroe, enjoying the best year of his career, upset the second-ranked German 6-1, 6-4 in the third round of the International Players Championships.

Becker has a 6-1 career record against John McEnroe and he beat Patrick in four sets when they met in the semifinals of the Australian Open in January. This time, though, Becker struggled from the start.

Another former No. 1 player also lost. One day after winning for the first time in 17 months, 38-year-old Jimmy Connors was eliminated in the second round.

Cristiano Caratti of Italy, ranked No. 37, beat the eight-time Grand Slam champ 6-4, 6-3. Connors, trying to come back from wrist surgery last October, is now 1-2 in matches this year.

"It's a start," Connors said. "I've got to start someplace. But if I'm telling you five months from now, 'I've got to start someplace,' then it's time to do something else."

In women's play, top seeds Steffi Graf and Monica Seles advanced to the quarterfinals. Seles, who replaced Graf in the No. 1 ranking last week, won the final nine games to beat Florencia Labat 7-5, 6-0.

Graf, who routed Marianne Werdel 6-0, 6-1, has lost only seven games in her first three matches. The German will regain the No. 1 ranking if she wins the championship and Seles loses before the finals.

Fourth-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez and No. 5 Zina Garrison also advanced with straight-set wins.

In men's play, top-ranked Stefan Edberg beat Goran Prpic 6-4, 6-2. Fourth-seeded Guy Forget swept Jimmy Arias 6-1, 6-1, and 10th-seeded Michael Chang rallied to beat Henri Leconte, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Cowboys' coaches descend on college campuses

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys believe that strength is often found in numbers.

So to practice their theory, Jimmy Johnson and his assistants recently broke traditional scouting methods and descended in droves upon seven college campuses nationwide.

Rarely do more than two coaches from one National Football League team show up together on a scouting trip, even during the hectic days leading to the April 21-22 NFL draft.

But the Cowboys had four coaches at Michigan State, five at Nebraska, six at Tennessee and seven at Colorado.

"This is the first time I've ever seen a whole staff come in," Notre Dame defensive tackle Chris Zorich said. "This is incredible."

As a practical matter, the Cowboys have to spread their attention around. Unlike most NFL teams, Dallas can't focus on a single player they hope to draft in the first round. The Cowboys are trying to focus on three.

In addition to their first-round pick, the Cowboys own Minnesota's and New Orleans' top selections. All three are in the middle of the first round — Nos. 11, 12 and 14 — and the Cowboys have more talent to sift through.

So in a nine-day blur of darkened film rooms, indoor workout facilities, take-out pizza, hotels and pre-dawn wakeup calls, Johnson and his staff did some serious sifting.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones' Lear jet, used for the last five legs of the trip, made it possible for his coaches to blanket the eastern half of the country.

Jim Abbott triples

SCOTTSDALE, Arizona (AP) — Jim Abbott, who has overcome the handicap of one hand to pitch in the major leagues for California, hit a 400-foot triple in Monday's exhibition game against San Francisco.

Dave Gallgher's double, Abbott's triple and Luis Polonia's double made it 3-0 in the second off Giants starter Rick Reuschel.

Royals ask waivers on injured Jackson

HAINES CITY, Fla. (AP) — Bo Jackson, one of the most recognized athletes in the world, was released by the Kansas City Royals Monday after the team determined his injured hip would not allow him to play baseball this year.

The Royals will ask waivers on Jackson today and any team can claim him for $1 in the waiver period that ends 2 p.m. EST Friday.

"This action is taken with deep regret," Royals General Manager Herk Robinson said. "The entire Royals organization is deeply appreciative to Bo for his contributions to the club. We wish him and his family the very best of health and success."

Dr. Steve Joyce, the Royals' team physician, said Jackson has a fracture-dislocation of his left hip. The injury, sustained in the Los Angeles Raiders' NFL playoff game on Jan. 13, has resulted in cartilage damage in the hip socket.

Robinson said the Royals would pay one-sixth of the $2,375,000 contract Jackson agreed to in February. Jackson would have only made the full amount of his contract if he was on Kansas City's opening day roster.

"We felt this was the cleanest manner in which to handle this and was probably the most equitable to all involved," Robinson said in a news conference at the Royals' training complex.

"We got nearly $2.5 million involved in a situation like this, finances do enter into a situation like this."

The Royals notified Jackson's agent, Richard Woods, by telephone in Birmingham, Ala., of their decision. Jackson was examined by Dr. James Andrews earlier on Monday in Birmingham, Ala.

Robinson said the Royals were "not crazy" about Jackson playing football. He said if Jackson had played n winter leagues "he may have been the greatest player to wear a uniform."

Jackson completed the fourth year of a $7.4 million five-year deal with the Los Angels Raiders in 1990.

"It's tragic that this happened," Robinson said. "Bo played a vital and exciting role in the development of sports in this country."

Joyce felt very strongly that Jackson definitely should not play baseball this year. Other doctors consulted by the Royals thought there was a possibility Jackson may play again, but Joyce believes that was highly uncertain.

"We were guided very closely by our team physician, Dr. Steve Joyce. Steve feels very strongly that it is not in Bo's best interest to play baseball — at least in 1991," Robinson said.

Robinson said different doctors gave different time frames for when Jackson would be able to play again.

"Don't count me out," the 28-year-old Jackson said at a brief news conference with Andrews of the Alabama Sports Medicine and Orthopedic Center.

But if Jackson does come back in baseball, it won't be with the Royals.

"I don't want to speculate," Raiders coach Art Shell said in Hawaii at the NFL meetings. "The doctor gave me some name of the injury. It was slight dislocation and with rest he would be alright. With rest he's suppoed to be able to play."

Jackson arrived with his agent in a limousine. As he got out, he acted surprised at the gathering of reporters and cameramen.

"Where's Elvis?" he asked jokingly.

A's, Henderson closer to pact

Associated Press

The Oakland A's and Rickey Henderson may be getting close to an agreement of sorts.

Henderson says he's willing to give up the final two years of the four-year, $12 million contract he signed before last season if the team would offer him salary arbitration.

However, the outfielder said he wants to keep the no-trade clause in his present contract, which is a sticking point with the A's.

"I think there's a possibility of resolving it in a way that's acceptable to both sides," said general manager Sandy Alderson, who met with Henderson for nearly an hour at the A's Phoenix Stadium office on Monday.

Alderson indicated that something could be worked out on the no-trade situation, but stopped short of being specific.

"I wouldn't guarantee that's going to happen," he said. "We'll just have to wait and see what's going to happen the next few days."

Henderson has been upset since last year because he feels underpaid compared to many players who signed after he did, including teammate Jose Canseco.

Alderson said after the meeting that he and Henderson are on more constructive footing than in the past.

While the two sides are talking, Alderson made it clear that the A's must have some concessions from Henderson if they are to allow him salary arbitration based on his performances in 1991 and 1992.

"There has to be a financial escape for us," Alderson said. "There also has to be a safety valve in case we are presented with this situation in the future."

Henderson, who needs just three steals to become the all-time major league stolen base king, has played in just one of the A's 10 exhibition games this spring.

Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh Pirates still don't have a new contract offer for Bobby Bonilla, who's eligible for free agency at the end of the season.

"Internally we're looking at different alternatives," GM Larry Doughty said. "We're trying to construct what we think is the best possible avenue to take. We'd like to see it done as early as possible. If it has to carry into the season to get it done, so be it."

Three weeks before the start of the season, the Cleveland Indians are facing the prospect of losing four key players through the waiver and outright system.

Pitchers Sergio Valdez, Rod Nichols, Shawn Hillegas and outfielder Stan Jefferson will be lost to the Indians if they aren't on the 25-man roster when Cleveland begins its season at Kansas City on April 8.

In other developments:

—Cincinnati's Lou Piniella has received a pay raise for last year's championship season that puts him in the "higher echelon" of the best-paid big-league managers. The Daily News in New York reported Sunday that Piniella has renegotiated the final two years of his contract and had received a $300,000 raise this year to $650,000, while the New York Times reported he would get between $675,000 and $700,000 each year.

—Philadelphia center fielder Lenny Dykstra doesn't know that baseball commissioner Fay Vincent will put him on probation as reported Monday by a newspaper, but it sounded fine to him.

"No comment," was Dykstra's response to a Philadelphia Daily News report that Vincent had decided to place him on probation for one year. If Dykstra doesn't gamble during that period, the matter would be forgotten, according to the newspaper.

Dykstra met Saturday with Vincent and was told he would not be fined or suspended on the basis of his testimony last week at a federal trial.

Prices slip

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices moved lower Monday in a market that seems to have stalled while waiting to determine whether OPEC's planned production cuts will be made.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $19.76 per barrel, down 25 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Traders said there was a general lack of interest by oil buyers, which helped weaken prices.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with April delivery contracts settling at $1.386 per 1,000 cubic feet, up .1 cent.

Activity at the Mercantile Exchange was somewhat lighter than usual, as many refiners were at a convention in San Antonio, traders said.

Stocks lose

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost ground Monday in a quiet session dominated by worries about the outlook for interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 6.93 last week, dropped 18.56 to 2,929.95.

Dollar climbs

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar strengthened broadly Monday and briefly hit an eight-month high against the German mark, buoyed by postwar demand, political uncertainty in the Soviet Union and trouble in reunified Germany's economy.

Gold was mostly lower. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for currency delivery fell $1.90 a troy ounce to settle at $363.00.

Before profit-taking eroded some of the increase, the dollar was quoted at 1.6380 German marks, matching its level of July 23, 1990.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7905 from $1.8340 late Friday.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar closed at 137.65 yen, up 1.40 yen from last Friday's close.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday, included: 1.6282 German marks, up from 1.6070; 1.4065 Swiss francs, up from 1.3930; 5.5485 French francs, up from 5.4735; 1,214.75 Italian lire, up from 1,200.00; and 1.1541 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1561.

Gold was mixed abroad. The metal fell in London to a late bid price of $361.25 a troy ounce from $365.85 bid per ounce late Friday. In Zurich, the metal fell to a closing bid of $362.00 from $365.90 late Friday.

Silver fell sharply. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $3.943 a troy ounce, down 14.8 cents from late Friday.

Kuwait, Iraq oil exports months away

■ Surveys conclude will take five to seven years to return Kuwait oil production to former levels.

N.Y. Times News Service

AHMADI, Kuwait — After detailed surveys of war damage to the oilfields of Kuwait and Iraq, Arab oil industry officials say it will be many months before the two countries can export any significant quantity of oil and years before production is returned to prewar levels.

The two countries ceased to export oil in August, after the United Nations imposed an embargo on their exports to prevent Iraq from reaping any benefits of its invasion of Kuwait. Iraq and Kuwait together exported 4.5 million barrels a day before the war.

It will be summer at the earliest, and possibly the end of the year, before oil is available for export, oil executives in this oil production center and in Cyprus say.

Ahmad Murad, a senior executive of the Kuwait Oil Co., said in a briefing that "it will take five to seven years to return Kuwaiti oil production to its prewar level" of two million barrels a day.

"Maybe in one year's time we will be able to export small quantities of oil, but not before," Murad said. Kuwaiti officials say the country may be able to produce some 50,000 barrels of oil a day for domestic needs in two months, just for local power production.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, has made up a large part of the production from Kuwait and Iraq by increasing its production to 8.5 million barrels a day, from about 5.5 million before the war. It is expected to sustain a high level of output because it wants the oil revenue to help pay its expenses from the war.

Oil industry executives have just conducted the first comprehensive survey of the damage done to Kuwait's 800 oilfields — most of which are on fire. In Kuwait and Iraq, experts say the damage to terminals, pumping stations, refineries, pipelines and oilfields could cost $15 billion to $20 billion to repair.

Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil reserves rank as the world's second-and third-largest, after those of Saudi Arabia.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, the authoritative oil newsletter, Middle East Economic Survey, said in its current issue that after an extensive survey of the damage done to the Iraqi oil industry by allied bombings, which lasted for 40 days since Jan. 17, more than two-thirds of the country's oil export operations have been severely damaged.

It said the allied bombing of the pipelines that connected Iraqi oilfields to a Saudi pipeline that runs to the Red Sea port of Yanbu in Saudi Arabia had knocked it out of commission "for several months." Before the war, that pipeline carried 1.6 million barrels a day of Iraqi oil.

Simmons Lockheed bid over

■ Investor Harold Simmons will lose about $30 million upon abandoning his bid to control Lockheed Corp.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Billionaire investor Harold Simmons today abandoned his two-year fight for control of Lockheed Corp., selling most of his 19.8 percent stake for a $30 million loss.

Simmons

Simmons also withdrew his proposal to elect new directors at the aerospace company's annual meeting next month.

He sold 12 million of his 12.5 million shares in a block for $40.50 a share on the New York Stock Exchange. Lockheed officials said they understood the buyer was Salomon Brothers Inc., a large Wall Street investment firm.

Officials at Salomon Brothers did not immediately return telephone calls for comment on the sale.

Simmons, through NL Industries Inc. of Houston and other companies he controls, paid an average of $43 a share to acquire Lockheed stock in the spring and summer of 1989. A $40.50-a-share-sale would represent a loss of $30 million for him.

J. Landis Martin, president of NL, said Simmons was unable to line up the shareholder support needed for a new board of directors or an expanded board with three of his candidates.

"While there was strong backing for our resolution calling for an expanded board with three NL representatives, it would not have secured the kind of mandate we believed necessary before Lockheed's board would have acted favorably on it," Martin said in a prepared statement.

He said Simmons did not want to maintain the kind of risk associated with a nearly 20 percent stake in a company.

The sale evidently wouldn't affect Simmons' ability to vote the 19.8 percent stake at Lockheed's annual meeting April 2. The record date for shareholders to take part in the meeting was Feb. 27.

Job hunting, go West young man

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Across New England, this year's college seniors are hearing a new version of an old refrain: Go West, young person.

With the region's unemployment outpacing the nation's and companies cancelling campus recruiting visits in droves, counselors are telling students they might have to leave home to pursue their chosen professions.

"I tell students, 'Get in your car and drive West,'" said Lewis Mandell, a professor of finance at the University of Connecticut. "I say, 'Don't just sit here and wait for a job — if you want a job, go look in St. Louis.'"

It was Horace Greeley, founder of the New York Tribune, who told young men to go West in 1851, when the Northeast was emerging from a recession and jobs in New York City were scarce. The phrase, borrowed from an Indiana newspaperman, became a rallying cry for opportunities in the American West.

These days, career counselors say they aren't just talking about the West. Students should also consider the South, the Midwest — anywhere there are opportunities, they say.

"You'd be stupid not to," said Bernie Cummins, director of career services at Bentley College in Waltham, Mass., where career counselors recently held their first-ever workshop on how to conduct a long-distance job search.

"Just looking at the Massachusetts economy the way it is, you have to explore your options," he said.

Colleges and universities in New England are expected to award about 80,000 bachelor's degrees this spring, the New England Board of Higher Education says.

"Many of the students tend to be very provincial and think the world ends at the New York, Massachusetts or Rhode Island borders," said Giles Packer, director of career services at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain.

"What we're telling them is, 'No, you've got to stop thinking like that," he said.

Polyester set to make comeback

N.Y. Times News Service

Polyester. The very name stirs images of tackiness, of Saturday-night swingers in leisure suits making clumsy passes at women in hotel cocktail lounges.

Without polyester, the look that some people rudely called the "full Cleveland" would be nothing more than a white patent-leather belt with shoes to match. Polyester, in short, is a cultural smirk, a synonym for bad taste.

But now, after more than a decade of decline, the nation's polyester producers are gearing up for a comeback in the clothing market, armed with a new product, thick wallets and high hopes.

The manufacturers — Du Pont, Fiber Industries and Hoechst Celanese — are counting on an ultra-thin version of polyester called microfiber that is just beginning to make its way into suits, dresses and other garments.

For most shoppers, the first brush with the new polyester will come in a few months, when the fall clothing collections start arriving in stores. And they will find the special polyester in a range of clothes from $1,300 designer raincoats to $30 slacks.

The tiny polyester filaments, half the thickness of silk, three times finer than cotton, four times finer than wool, are woven into fabrics that are a far cry from the shiny double-knit polyesters of the 1970s. The microfiber fabrics feel soft, even silky, and they are lightweight, hanging loosely off the body.

The big companies, supported by a small but growing chorus of fashion de-

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Tips on reading a confirmation statement

By Bill Doyle

Q. I'm enclosing a copy of the statement I received for some U.S. Treasury notes I bought. Although the banker tried to explain about the interest and total price I paid, I still can't understand it. Can you shed some light on this?

Doyle

A. The confirmation statement you sent with your letter shows you purchased $30,000 face amount of Treasury notes this past January 17. They are three-year notes, issued on Nov. 15, 1990, are due to mature Nov. 15, 1993, and pay 7.75 percent annual interest.

You purchased the notes from the bank for $30,318.75 — just about 1 percent over face value — and paid for $404.63 accrued interest. That made your total cost $30,723.38. Let's take the premium price and the interest separately.

At the time of your purchase, those notes were trading in the marketplace at a bit higher than face value. The bank evidently added just a small markup, making your purchase price $318.75 more than the notes' face value. You got a good deal. On a percentage basis, markups on previously issued Treasury notes and bonds often are heftier, especially when you buy in amounts lower than $1 million.

The $404.75 interest added in your total purchase price represented the interest that had built up from the notes' Nov. 15, 1990, issue date until you bought the notes on Jan. 17, 1991. You'll get that money back as part of the first interest payment you receive.

All Treasury notes and bonds pay interest semiannually. Your $1,162.50 interest payments — one-half of 7.75 percent on $30,000 — will be made every May 15 and November 15 until those notes mature, at which time the $30,000 face amount will be paid off. The interest payments and the face amount will be credited to your account at the bank, which is holding the notes for you.

Q. I purchased Treasury notes through my bank and intend to buy some more in July. Should I buy the same thing or some other type? Should I continue to buy through the bank or do it someplace else?

A. It would be downright foolish to discourage the purchase of U.S. Treasury securities — notes, bonds and bills — for the obvious reason they are counted as the highest grade securities available and pay reasonably good interest. Treasury notes, which come with maturities of from two to 10 years, suit most people.

Buying through your local bank is the easy way and sensible — if the bank does not lay on fat markups and/or service changes. However, you can avoid all such expenses by opening a "Treasury Direct" account at the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your part of the country and purchasing new issues of Treasury securities.

Q. Can you print the addresses of the Federal Reserve Banks and branches, so that I, my children and adult grandchildren, who live in a number of different states, will know where to establish Treasury Direct accounts for the purchase of U.S. Treasury securities?

A. Sorry, there just isn't enough space in this column to list all that information. There are 12 Federal Reserve Banks and 25 branches spread across this nation.

But anyone can get the needed address by asking where he or she banks. Every bank and savings and loan association deals with the district Fed bank or branch.

If you run into a banker who is reluctant to provide that information, write to Director, Division of Consumer Affairs, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, DC 20551.

Bill Doyle is a syndicated columnist for King Features. He welcomes written questions, but is able to provide answers only through the column.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today in selling attributed partly to rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 6.93 points last week, dropped 38.37 to 2,909.90 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 589 up, 915 down and 468 unchanged.

A survey by researchers at the University of Michigan turned up preliminary evidence of a sharp increase in consumer confidence early this month, following the end of the Gulf War. News of that sort had been widely rumored in the markets late last week.

Volume on the Big Board came to 119.68 million shares with two hours to go.

WEST: Jobs head west

(From 5C)

Steven Thayer is beginning to get the message. He hasn't been able to find a job in his field since graduating from the University of Connecticut in December with an economics degree, and he's delivering pizzas at night to support himself.

A lifelong resident of South Windsor, he's not enthusiastic about leaving New England, but knows it may come to that: "I was going to call a friend of mine in Chicago and have him send me the want ads," he said.

New England's unemployment rate climbed to 5.7 percent in 1990, the first time the region's jobless rate exceeded the national level since 1977. In fact, unemployment isn't much lower elsewhere. The Midwest and South each posted unemployment rates of 5.6 percent, while the West had a rate of 5.4 percent.

But some economists say the recession in New England is likely to be deeper and last longer than in other regions, because it was brought on by structural problems like high production costs, and not just the normal cyclical dip in consumer demand.

Career counselors see evidence of an ailing economy in the sharp drop in companies sending recruiters to campus in search of prospective employees.

Students preparing for careers in banking, insurance and real estate face the bleakest prospects, counselors say. Incipient accountants or nurses get more encouragement because those professions seem to be holding their own.

Some students don't seem fazed by the prospect of leaving New England.

"I go into classrooms and ask them how many are going to look for a job in Massachusetts and there aren't many hands that go up," said Doreen Hodgkin, director of senior and alumni placement at Northeastern University in Boston.

Other students betray their anxiety with dog-eat-dog tactics they aren't supposed to encounter until they actually land jobs in the corporate world.

At UConn, officials were stunned when twice during the last few weeks a student showed up for his on-campus corporate interview only to find that his appointment had been canceled by a classmate.

"I am assuming in both cases that he was simply trying to cancel out the competition," Daring said.

Some New England college counselors are not eager to turn their students into job-seeking nomads.

"It doesn't work," said John McGrath, director of career placement services at Providence College. "Where are they going to go? California? The recession is just starting there."

And Victor R. Lindquist, director of placement at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., warned that moving to escape a bad economy could backfire.

POLY: Ready for return

signers and retailers, insist microfiber is not a marketing gimmick, as the cotton industry dismisses it, but a genuine innovation. They speak of the "rebirth of polyester" and the "joys of polyester." Most of all, they speak of a wholesale market that could reach $1 billion by the mid-1990s.

"We expect microfiber to change the way people see polyester and to develop into a very big market," said William Tuohey, marketing manager for the new polyester at E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., the nation's leading producer of synthetic fibers. "And that prospect has a lot of people worried."

Cotton producers apparently have the most to lose. The 1970s heyday of polyester apparel was also the low point for cotton. In 1975, the polyester share of the retail apparel and home textile market was 32 percent, compared with 34 percent for cotton.

But the penchant in the 1980s for all things natural buoyed cotton and battered polyester. By 1990, cotton's share of the market had climbed to 53 percent, while polyester had slipped to 22 percent, according to Kurt Salmon Associates, a market research firm in New York.

DEAR ABBY

Early detection can bring diabetes under control

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: An estimated 14 million Americans have diabetes, which causes 150,000 deaths a year. Even more shocking is the fact that about half the people who have diabetes don't even know they have it. These people are at great risk of heart disease, kidney failure, blindness and amputation. Until last March, I was one of them!

Van Buren

Fortunately, a simple quiz published in my local newspaper alerted me to the symptoms of diabetes, and I was lucky to discover it in its early stages. The quiz, produced by the American Diabetes Association (ADA) for its annual American Diabetes Alert, virtually saved my life. My score indicated that I was at high risk for diabetes, so I went to my doctor for a painless test.

The bad news was that my test confirmed that I have diabetes. The good news was that as long as I carefully manage my program of diet, exercise and medication, I can keep my blood-glucose level under control and enjoy the same activities as my non-diabetic friends.

Since March, my blood levels have remained within normal ranges, and I am once again leading a healthy life. Abby, would you please print the ADA Alert Quiz in your column to accompany the March 19 American Diabetes Alert? You could be helping millions of people lead healthier, longer lives. — JOE CAMPO, JACKSON, MISS.

DEAR JOE AND DEAR READERS: This test is not meant to diagnose — only a medical doctor can establish whether these symptoms mean you have diabetes. Here's the test. Each "yes" answer is worth the number of points indicated.

1. I have been experiencing one or more of the following symptoms on a regular basis: excessive thirst (3 points); frequent urination (3 points); extreme fatigue (1 point); unexplained weight loss (3 points); blurry vision from time to time (1 point).
2. I am over 40 years of age (1 point).
3. I am at least 20 percent over my ideal weight (2 points).
4. I am a woman who has had more than one baby weighing more than 9 pounds at birth (2 points).
5. I am of Native American Indian descent (1 point).
6. I am of Hispanic or black descent (1 point).
7. I have a parent with diabetes (1 point).
8. I have a brother or sister with diabetes (2 points).

Now, add up your score. If you scored three to five points, you probably are at low risk for diabetes.

If you scored over five points, you may be at high risk for diabetes. You may even have diabetes, so see your doctor and don't delay. For more information on diabetes, contact your local American Diabetes Association or ADA's Diabetes Information Service Center, 1660 Duke St., Alexandria, Va. 22314. The toll-free number is (800) 232-3472.

AT WIT'S END

To understand today's family one must know a lot of math

By Erma Bombeck

There are 14 million women in this country who unwillingly share the same husband, same kids, same friends, same paycheck and mutual stress. They are women who have married previously divorced men.

Bombeck

Author Ann Cryster has given them a name: wife-in-law. "In-law" may sound like a stretch, but the dictionary defines it simply as "related by marriage." It doesn't say whose.

Given the statistics, I am surprised there aren't more books like Ms. Cryster's "The Wife-in-Law Trap." One out of every two marriages in this country ends in divorce. Out of this number, 64 percent of the women remarry. Seventy percent of these marriages also end in divorce.

I queried some of my divorced friends about possible solutions on how to raise the odds of a second marriage. "If you could have sent a note to your former husband's new wife, what advice would you have given her?" I asked.

One woman thought a moment and said, "Just three words, 'Don't grow old.'"

Another one said with tongue in cheek, "I'd probably offer to pay her child support. She just took a 43-year-old teen-ager off my hands."

Along with the anger, the bitterness of rejection and the depression at failing at something that was important, multi-marriages have spawned another dimension: equation families. A whole brother and two half-sisters divided by two mothers (one step) equals a whole father plus a weekend dad divided by seven grandparents (subtract two who have died), including two others who have married and multiplied.

Equation families are probably the biggest boosters of home computers to be found. If the rate of multiple partners continues, it's only a matter of time before we need a computer bank to sort out who is related to whom.

A few years ago my kids were in a class where the teacher commented on two students having the same last name. "Are you twins?" she asked.

"No, we were born three months apart."

"Then you are half-brothers?"

One said, "I'm not sure. We have the same father, but I live with the second mother and he lives with the third mother."

The other one said, "It was easier when we were cousins."

Holy month Ramadan now a sad, bitter time for most Kuwaitis

By Youssef M. Ibrahim
N.Y. Times News Service

KUWAIT CITY — On the first day of Ramadan, the Muslim holy month of daylight fasting and prayer, Kuwaitis were busy on Sunday standing in half-mile-long lines, waiting for bread, rice, sugar, and oil.

The more fortunate among them with connections to government officials got permission to leave the country and drive down to Saudi Arabia, where they could properly observe this most important of Muslim holidays. Some came back loaded with enough sweets, meat, and fish to cook a decent meal.

"This year, there is not a house in Kuwait that is without sadness," Wafaa Fahd, an art student, said on Monday. "We try as much as we can to relive the nice days, but last night was rather sad. There was little food on the table and many bitter memories."

Ramadan marks the month in which the Koran was revealed to the prophet Mohammed.

Because it is observed during the ninth month of the lunar calendar, it falls at different times in the Gregorian year.

It is a time of repentance, impassioned prayer, and charity during which Muslims are required to abstain from food, drink, and other pleasures from dawn until sunset.

After dusk, the fast is broken, normally with a feast similar to a Thanksgiving meal, which is repeated every night of the month.

But for Kuwaitis today, Ramadan is a devout period of thankfulness, thankfulness for the recovery of their freedom, even though it is a freedom mixed with deprivation and painful realities left by the Iraqi army after eight months of occupation. They have to contend with shortages of electricity, food, and water, and live with memories of relatives lost — shot to death, imprisoned, tortured, or taken to Iraq as hostages.

Sunday night was the first night of Ramadan here, and to hear people speak of it, the occasion was almost a traumatic experience.

Past Ramadans in Kuwait have been celebrations both of Islam and of good fortune, as they have been in other oil-producing Persian Gulf states. Now people here speak of earlier celebrations in terms of the "old days" as if they were years ago.

Kuwaitis say that this time last year, life really began at night.

The streets of Kuwait came alive with shops open till the wee hours of the morning, and friends would drive their Mercedes Benzes and BMWs to one another's homes, where they would visit all night until the call to prayer echoed just before dawn, signaling the beginning of another day of fasting.

"The mosques would be filled with people as much as the streets were filled with shoppers," said Nadia Qinaii, a teacher at the Higher Institute of Theatrical Arts, which has been closed since the Aug. 2 occupation by Iraq.

"This year, the streets are dark and empty and your heart almost hurts at the sight of the desolation the Iraqis left behind. I have never seen Kuwait like this. Ever since I was born, this was a place of plenty and of happiness."

For many people here, the desolation of the country has translated itself into a deeper introspection, and a stronger adherence to Islam's more austere values.

"A crisis like this makes a Muslim search within himself for values to counter the bestiality of man," said Usama Abdelrazak, an official of the port administration. "We look around at what they have done, and the only thing you can say is: Thank God, who is, in a situation like this, the only refuge for those who cannot understand why man would do this to his fellow man."

Kuwaiti television, which during Ramadan normally broadcasts until 4 a.m., is shut down because, without electricity, hardly anyone can see the meager programming being emitted for only a few hours every night.

"We thank God we are safe now. Thank God they have gone. Thank God some of us were left to see a new dawn," Abdelrazak said.

Others cannot, however, repress a widespread anger at their government, most of whose officials were in exile during the long months of occupation.

"I cannot accept that the government, which knew which conditions we were living under, has arrived here with nothing," said Ahmad Bedah, a university student. "They made so many promises from exile about bringing food, generators, water, and essential goods, and here we are, almost three weeks after liberation, without electricity, living like beasts."

On the whole, Ramadan is being overwhelmed here by the daily trials of living. With 400,000 Kuwaiti citizens outside the country, only about 300,000 still live here, and many of them are trying to leave, at least for this holy period.

"I'm going to Cairo," a woman said. "I'm sending the children to their uncle in Saudi Arabia. Eight months of hell is enough. We cannot spend Ramadan like this."

U.S. warns Iraq its helicopter gunships may be attacked

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States has told Iraq that the use of helicopter gunships against Iraqi insurgents represents a "threat to coalition forces" that could draw American military action against the helicopters, a senior Pentagon official said on Monday.

The warning implied that allied warplanes, which dominate the skies over Iraq 24 hours a day, would begin shooting down armed Iraqi helicopter gunships that bring their weapons to bear on insurgents seeking to overthrow the government of Saddam Hussein.

Defining the use of the helicopters as a threat to coalition forces gives allied pilots the right to shoot them down, according to the current rules of engagement governing allied forces in Iraq.

The warning, conveyed to Iraq on Sunday, was one of a series of steps the Bush administration has taken in the last week to press Iraq not to use military action against insurgent forces.

The administration has explicitly barred Baghdad from moving its fixed-wing aircraft around Iraq.

Bush, continuing his hard line, said during a White House ceremony on Monday: "Iraq must pay reparations or pay damages and the more one looks at the environmental terrorism that they embraced, that they brought about, the more the world understands that they have to do something about that." Bush suggested that Iraq could pay because "they are a potentially wealthy country."

Bush also said he would "like to reduce the flow of weapons" into the Middle East.

His remarks came as the State Department announced that the president would seek congressional approval to finance up to $1 billion in arms sales by American military contractors through the Export-Import Bank to unspecified foreign countries.

The White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said the sales did not conflict with the president's stated goal.

"We're not talking about cutting off all arms sales," he said. "We're talking about a balance and a stability in the region. Sometimes you've got to make reductions, sometimes you have to build up. It goes both ways."

In the first major allied redeployment of ground forces in the Persian Gulf, Pentagon officials said on Monday that the Army was planning to begin withdrawing the XVIII Airborne Corps, about 100,000 troops and support personnel, from southern Iraq this week for transport back to the United States over the next several weeks.

The sizable reduction of United States forces occupying Iraq appeared intended to show progress in bringing American troops home, an important political goal for Bush, while, at the same time, leaving a still large and formidable U.S. military presence in Iraq for a period of time yet to be determined while insurrection and instability continue.

Pending a formal cease-fire with Iraq, which could come this week at the United Nations, the withdrawal will leave behind the U.S. Army's VII Corps, which also has about 100,000 heavily-armed troops and support personnel and is holding positions across 15 to 20 percent of Iraqi territory south of the Euphrates River.

The warning against armed helicopter flights was delivered on Sunday by the chief of staff of the U.S. Central Command, Maj. Gen. Robert Johnston, who met with a senior Iraqi commander, the Pentagon official said.

The official described Johnston's meeting as an effort to reassert to the Iraqis the reality that "we won," and to emphasize that, as the victors, the United States and its allies intended to enforce their right to "control Iraqi air space."

310 General Help Wanted

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributor's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
