Reagan gives air controllers an ultimatum

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today gave striking air traffic controllers 48 hours to return to work or be fired.

"I must tell those who failed to report for duty this morning they are in violation of the law, and if they don't report for work within 48 hours, they have forfeited their jobs and will be terminated," Reagan told a Rose Garden briefing this morning.

Reagan's announcement came at the same time the Federal Aviation Administration grounded much of the nation's commercial air traffic as the controllers, in defiance of a federal judge, launched their first nationwide strike.

The walkout began with the day shift at 7 a.m., local time, and the FAA said early indications were that more controllers were staying off their jobs at some centers than had been ant8cipated while in other areas some controllers were defying the strike.

No figures were available.

Reagan told reporters that federal law prohibits federal employees from striking and that air controllers promised not to strike when they were hired.

"I hope you'll emphasize again the possibility of termination, because I believe that there are a great many of those people who have been swept up in this and probably have not really considered the fact that they have taken an oath, the fact that this is now in violation of the law.

"I hope they will remove themselves from the lawbreaker situation by returning to their posts."

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, who also briefed reporters, said the government will not offer the controllers any more money.

"We do not plan to increase our offer to the union," he said.

Reagan said the threat to fire the controllers was the only action open to him.

"What lesser action can there be?" he asked. "The law is very explicit. They are violating the law."

Reagan and Lewis spoke after a midmorning White House meeting also attended by Attorney General William French Smith.

Lewis said beforehand that the government would not try to put controllers in jail, but would seek civil penalties and ask to have the National Labor Relations Board remove the union as the controllers' bargaining agent.

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Joyce Green ordered the union and its leaders to tell the court by 5 p.m. why they should not be held in contempt of court for disobeying her order that made the strike illegal.

The government is asking that the union, if found in contempt of court, be fined $1 million a day.

Green, at the predawn hearing, also granted the government's request to bar the union from paying any benefits from its strike fund to the controllers.

Lewis has said no talks would be held as long as there was a strike and federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said earlier that no new negotiations were on tap.

The FAA said it told the nation's airlines to ground half their flights at 23 major airports as of 11 a.m., EDT, but left it up to the airlines to decide which flights to cancel.

"Our first concern is safety ... We're not going to jeopardize the public lives," Lewis said in a televised interview.

Getting out while they can

Don Cameron, above left, of Midland waits to puchase a ticket at the Braniff International Airlines booth at Midland Regional Airport this morning. Cameron, who was headed to Detroit for a convention, was one of the lucky ones who was able to leave before the air traffic controllers strike curtailed and delayed service for most airlines. At left, workmen service a Southwest Airlines jet, while a Braniff jet bound for Dallas taxis out for takeoff in the background.

Strike affecting Midland flights

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Some flights were canceled and others delayed by airline officials at Midland Regional Airport this morning in the wake of the first-ever nationwide walkout by members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers union.

Midland's 18 members of PATCO joined the strike, although a few of the controllers apparently worked past the 6 a.m. strike deadline.

A spokesman for Continental Airlines said he had been told that "there's one guy (air traffic controller) on, with two supervisors."

And, according to Ron Lovell, Midland airport traffic controller who worked the midnight to 8 a.m. shift, two non-union supervisors and one training officer are now working the tower.

"They worked me one hour overtime," he said. "I'm worried about this whole thing — I could lose my job, but I'm staying out as long as it takes."

Lovell added that the night went smoothly.

"The people (non-union controllers) in the tower are not vengeful or holding anything against us," he said.

Although controllers were not picketing at Midland airport this morning, Lovell was leaving for Lubbock where he said other controllers will gather to picket.

William M. Thurmon, director of customer service for Braniff International, said the overtime worked by contollers would not help the situation.

"This won't make any difference to us (Braniff)," Thurman said. "We'll be wiped out completely because of the 500-mile segments."

Federal Aviation Administration priority was being given to flights of 500 miles or more. Most of the flights in and out of Midland are in the 300-mile range.

Bill Hill, Federal Aviation Administration tower chief at the airport, was reluctant to talk about the situation.

"There's very little I can do for you (the media) at this time," Hill said. "All I can do is refer you to the Washington public affairs office."

"Right now we are trying to determine how many controllers went on strike," said Fred Farrar, spokesman for the FAA headquarters in Washington.

According to Gilbert Brassard, supervisor of airport services, American Airlines Flight 262, scheduled to leave for Dallas at 7:04 a.m., was delayed over an hour.

In fact, all American service had been put "on hold," with flights only going as far as Dallas, a spokesperson said.

Chuck Logue, Midland manager for Continental Airlines, said: "We started out on a plan of 100 percent, but received word at 7:35 a.m. that the FAA is transitioning into their Plan 50. Plan 50 is, generally speaking, 50 percent operation. In Midland, we usually have six departures. Today, we presently plan to have four."

Jim Weeks, Midland manager for Southwest Airlines, said his airline had 13 flights scheduled today. Three flights were scheduled this morning and all three had left on time.

But that situation was expected to change by this afternoon.

Weeks said of Southwest's 13 flights, probably only half will leave Midland today. But, he added, "that's a guesstimate."

A Southwest ticket agent said the airline could get passengers to Dallas, but couldn't promise anything beyond that point.

"Every reservation has been canceled until further notice," she said.

When asked how the strike would affect Midland, Weeks said: "We had

Area air travelers wait and hope

Businessmen and vacationers waited anxiously this morning at Midland Regional Airport as four commercial airlines delayed or canceled flights because of the air traffic controllers' strike...

Standing in line at the Braniff Airline ticket counter, Don Cameron of Midland worried about whether he would be able to get to Detroit. Cameron, who works for General Motors, planned to meet 15 other car salesmen in Dallas.

From there, they would fly to Detroit to meet with thousands of other General Motors employees to view the new cars. "General Motors has people converging in Detroit at three different hotels for this once-a-year show," Cameron said, but the strike may affect how many people actually attend the meeting.

IF THE STRIKE puts a halt to airline flights, Cameron predicted, "I'll probably end up taking a bus (from Detroit)." If he is in Dallas, he will get a car through General Motors and drive back.

Pat Burke and Stephanie Jumper, both of Odessa, sat quietly in the Braniff waiting area for Miss Jumper's flight. Miss Jumper was planning to travel to Dallas and then to Chicago, but Mrs. Burke said her grandaughter "probably won't go on to Chicago if the strike is still going on."

"We hope it'll be settled so she can get back home," Mrs. Burke added, but if not, the two jokingly said Miss Jumper would hitchhike back to Odessa in time for the opening of school.

Bennett Shelton of Midland thought the strike would put a crimp in his plans. "I'm transferring from Midland to Oklahoma City," he said as the Braniff flight began to board. "I'm commuting for the next couple of weeks.

"IF I GET to Oklahoma City, I'm going to have to stay," he said, adding "I'd like to get back home for the weekend if I could.

In Continental Airlines' waiting room, former Ector County Justice of the Peace Harold Sligar and his wife, Frances, had little sympathy for the air traffic controller's plight.

"I hope they (air traffic controllers) all get hungry. That's the way I feel about it," exclaimed Sligar, who was on the Ector County Commissioner's Court when the airport was first started.

He was opposed to any wage increase. "Not a dime!" he boomed, adding, "They're making enough money as it is."

The Sligars were planning to travel to Washington, D.C., to "visit our daughter in Maryland," said Mrs. Sligar. While in the nation's captial, the former judge was going to visit Congressman Richard White.

BUT THE IMMINENT strike "caused us to lose a lot of sleep last night," Mrs. Sligar related.

If the couple gets caught by the strike, Sligar deadpanned, "I'll get me a bicycle."

Another Odessan, Kay Smiley, watched as the American Airline flight that her parents had boarded to leave for a vacation to San Francisco remained motionless on the concourse. The plane, which was scheduled to leave at 7:04 a.m., had not moved for an hour and a half.

"As far as we know, all American flight plans have been canceled," she said. "American's hands are tied — there's nothing they can do."

The walk-out is "just a big inconvenience," Mrs. Smiley commented.

With the strike looming in the background, her parents "tried to get out yesterday, but everything was booked up."

IF THE STRIKE continues, Mrs. Smiley assumed her parents "will have an extended vacation, I guess."

Two Midlanders, Lin Bernardin of and Teresa Breeding, were going to attend a one-day Xerox meeting in Austin in the afternnon, but didn't know whether their Southwest flight would depart in time. "I really have my doubts we'll make it," said Mrs. Bernardin.

"It's because of traffic in Dallas," she continued. The plane, which was scheduled to leave Midland at 7:45 a.m., had not boarded by 8:30 a.m.

"I'm not so sure I want to go if I can't get back," Mrs. Bernardin noted, but Mrs. Breeding added, "If we had to get stuck, that (Austin) would be a good place to be stuck. We've got one charge card with us."

GAZING AT THE Southwest plane, Mrs. Bernardin said, "I wish they could have settled it some other way."

"I think it's (the strike) going to be a lot more serious than people thought, especially in financial damages to the airlines," stated Fred Hansen. Although he didn't have any idea when the strike would end, he guessed "it'd last quite awhile — a couple of weeks."

Hansen also was waiting for the Southwest flight to Dallas where his employer, Southern Union Co., is headquartered. Hansen commutes to and from Midland Regional Airport from his Hobbs, N.M., home via his own small plane.

Because of the strike, "we'll have to cut back on some of our travel," he noted. "We'll probably have to do a lot more business by telephone, but that might not be a bad idea."

Hansen thought the strike probably would not affect the small plane traffic. "It'll make it more difficult to get in larger airports, but otherwise, smaller airplanes who fly under visual flight rules won't have many problems" since they are not under air traffic controllers' jurisdiction unless in a control zone around an airport.

Perhaps it would have been easier for Hansen to have flown his small plane to Dallas, but the four early morning flights finally were given take-off clearance. But those planning to take later flights may not be so lucky.

Kennedy standing in way of vote on tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and his opposition to tax breaks for the oil industry stood in the path of the largest tax cut in American history today.

The Senate was scheduled to complete action today and the House Tuesday on President Reagan's tax legislation, a cornerstone of his economic plan which would reduce individual and corporate taxes by $749 billion through 1986. That would put the bill on Reagan's desk for his signature.

The final version of the bill was agreed upon Saturday morning by conferees who spent 14 hours hammering out differences between the House and Senate approaches, largely over how much of a break oil producers should get.

The compromise calls for reductions for petroleum p oducers totalling $32 billion over the next 10 years, most of it going to royalty holders. This is about halfway between the $19.9 billion the Senate wanted and the $46 billion written into the House bill by Reagan supporters in a successful move to win the votes of oil-state Democrats.

Senate Republican leaders wanted to bring the bill up for a final vote Saturday but were thwarted when the Massachusetts Democrat called from his home state and asked that it be held up until today.

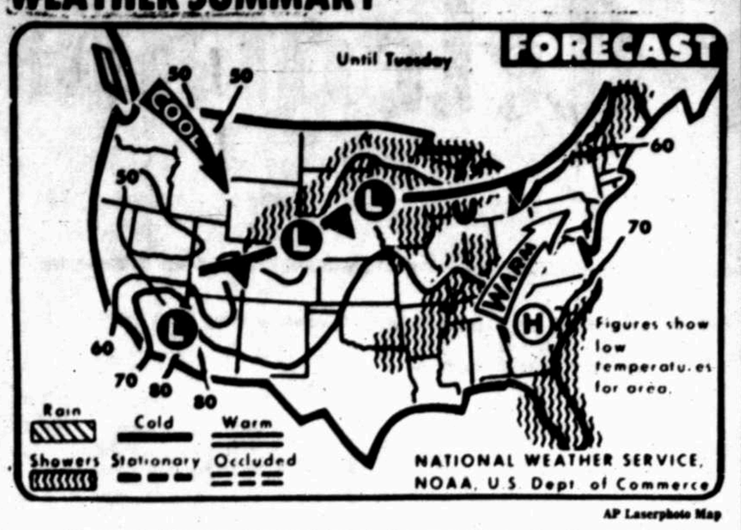

Kennedy, whose request was honored under a Senate custom allowing absent members to be present for major actions, said he would demand a vote on a motion to recommit the bill to conference with instructions to rewrite the oil provisions.

How much support he might get was uncertain. Last week, Kennedy and other liberal Democrats threatened a filibuster if the oil industry reductions proposed by the conferees were much larger than the original Senate bill.

After the compromise was reached, however, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, one of those threatening to filibuster, said he would not hold up the legislation.

Kennedy, whose proposal to give lower-income families tax credits of up to $200 this year to help pay for heating costs was rejected by the conference committee, said the reduction for the oil industry was a "giveaway."

Entertainer Kenny Rogers performed Sunday night at Ector County Coliseum in Odessa for a capacity crowd of 8,271 paying fans. He sang his old songs as well as several new selections and joked with the audience. He was backed up by singer Susan Anton and comedian Gallagher.

Coliseum crowded for Rogers' show

ODESSA — A capacity crowd of 8,271 paying fans filled Ector County Coliseum Sunday night. At $15 a seat, the squeezed-in crowd demonstrated a substantial following for one of the hottest national entertainers today — Kenny Rogers.

Sunday night's performance was to be the only West Texas concert for the 42-year-old performer who earned an estimated $20 million last year — a stark contrast to his life in 1976.

Five years ago Rogers' group, The

A Review

Third Edition, and his third marriage had just broken up. He was alone, $65,000 in debt and having trouble paying $300-a-month rent on his one room apartment.

Ector County Coliseum was the chosen site for the concert because it houses, at capacity, approximately 1,000 more than Midland's Chaparral Center.

THE CONCERT started promptly at 7 p.m. with comedian Gallagher pacing around the center stage greeting fans as they walked by on the way to their seats. When the lights went off he introduced singer Susan Anton, who backed up Rogers.

Clad in a short white peasant dress (a white Robin Hood effect) with matching leotards, gold belt and boots, Ms. Anton belted out a few songs, among them "The Rose," "Queen of Hearts," and "Heartache Tonight."

She seemed to be enjoying herself, dancing around the stage and joking with the audience. It would have been nice if they had turned the sound down while she sang because during the fast numbers it was impossible to understand what she was singing if one didn't know the words.

The crowd responded to her joke about being a "mere 5 feet 12 inches tall" and having trouble finding leotards long enough in the stride. She went on to say that the first night she had worn this outfit her waist band broke thus bringing her leotards down around her knees. But, she added, "I fixed it. You don't have to worry, my pants won't fall down tonight."

THE CROWD wasn't worried. In fact they let her know they were a little disappointed that she had solved her dilemma.

During the time between Ms. Anton's performance and Rogers', Gallagher came back and entertained the audience with his jokes, most of which were not of the nature that could be repeated here. Suffice it to say his timing was excellent and the audience seemed to love his humor and was not offended no matter how offensive he became. However, those who left with apple juice or watermelon on them might say differently.

Rogers didn't disappoint the crowd. He mounted the center stage, led through the crowd by several of his security people and allowed the crowd to gather around the stage for the first two songs. He performed for an hour, singing his well known hits as well as several off his new album, and joking with the audience.

DURING TWO songs, "Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to be Cowboys" (a Waylon and Willie recording) and "The Gambler," four movie screens descended from the overhead lights around the stage. The audience loved the effect, especially the cut from his movie, "The Gambler."

Apparently Rogers gave the audience what they wanted because, when he left the stage after his planned encore, everyone got up and left. But, perhaps the ease with which the audience left was due in part to the heat. Comments outside ranged from "It feels good out here" to "that breeze feels great."

The show itself went off without much difficulty except that one screen didn't fall during the first movie until the other three went up.

The performance was slick, professional and reminiscent of a Las Vegas show. The stage was set in the center of the coliseum. His band was down inside the stage. Rogers walked around the stage throughout his performance.

The show's most distracting element was the white spotlights, set behind the audience almost in the ceiling of the coliseum, which, when on, blinded that side of the floor audience closest to Rogers.

AS FAR AS this reviewer is concerned, his show was good but not great. He didn't have the charisma nor power of Willie Nelson and his band, although equipped with Star Wars style sound effects, was not as smooth as B.J. Thomas.

Sunday night's concert marked the end of Rogers' current tour and perhaps it showed. He seemed tired. He was, for the most part, going through the motions.

Not that he cheated his audience. He didn't. He just seemed to be singing with his pocket book in mind and not his heart. It wasn't until the last two songs, "The Gambler" and "Lucille," that he really appeared to be enjoying himself onstage. Before that, he was playing the part.

And after all, touring, recording, making movies and appearing on talk shows all take their toll. It isn't easy to be on top and as Rogers well knows, fame is a briefly lit candle that may go out at any time.

As for this reviewer, who particularly enjoys some of his songs, I'd rather buy the tape.

Little activity interrupts relatively quiet weekend

Midland police officers and emergency personnel enjoyed a relatively uneventful weekend.

Mrs. Charles Hardy of 3317 W. Louisiana Ave. reported a burglary at 3319 W. Louisiana. The owner of that residence was out of town at the time, she told police.

Police, Fire Roundup

Taken in that break-in was a television valued at $400. Entry to the residence was gained through a rear window and exit was through the front door. The burglary apparently occurred between Saturday and 8:15 a.m. Sunday when the report was made.

Officer Doug Ketterman reported the theft of a .38-caliber pistol valued at more than $200. Ketterman said he became involved in a fight with a subject at Sidewinder's Lounge, 406 E. Texas Ave., and upon arriving at the police station discovered that a pistol that had been hidden in the man's boot apparently had been taken.

Jose Antonio Macias, 25, escaped serious injury late Sunday when his car skidded on Big Spring Street near its intersection with Kansas, went into the YMCA parking lot, struck a pole and overturned. Macias was treated for minor injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital and released.

Midland firemen were occupied Sunday with grass fires and fires in city trash dumpsters.

Cloudy skies, chance for storms to continue in area through Tuesday

Midlanders will continue to see partly cloudy skies through Tuesday with a slight chance of thunderstorms today.

According to the National Weather Service, the afternoons will continue to be hot and muggy with a pleasant low tonight in the lower 70s. The temperature is expected to climb near 103 degrees on Tuesday. Winds will be from the south 10-15 mph tonight, decreasing to 5-10 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 103 fell three degrees short of the record high set in 1944. This morning's low of 72 degrees was considerably warmer than the record low of 60 set in 1971.

Midland Awareness session slated

The first session of Midland Awareness will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday in the First National Room of The First National Bank of Midland.

The session will focus on government and will feature Mayor G. Thane Akins and County Judge William B. Ahders.

This is the first of seven workshops slated each month through February and sponsored by the Human Relations Council. Other topics include education, health, political action, housing, public utilities and community services.

The HRC designed the series as a means to improve communications between Midlanders and their city government, county government, school system, community college, health facilities and economy.

The sessions are free and the public is invited.

27,000 passengers last month. It's never going to be the same right now."

Braniff Airlines had four flights scheduled today, all to Dallas. Their last flight, scheduled to leave this afternoon for Dallas, had already been canceled.

Airline officials advised travelers to call the airlines for information on the status of different flights and alternate travel plans.

Meanwhile, Paul Kobel, terminal manager of Continental Trailways bus lines, said he had been extremely busy this morning, answering two or three dozen phone calls. He said people are telling the bus lines they can get to Dallas, but they are trying to make arrangements for connections.

"If this (the strike) keeps up," Kobel said, "we may have to call for extra buses from Big Spring."

Greyhound bus lines had similar comments.

"There's no increase in business, thus far, but there are a lot of inquiries on re-adusting schedules," a spokesperson for Greyhound said.

Travel agencies also were being kept busy with phone calls.

"They're driving us crazy," Dee Hamilton of Travel Agency in Midland said. "We're only taking future reservations," she added, "in fact, I haven't even had anybody try to make a reservation today."

"We're telling people it's on a day to day basis," Dawn Mohler, agent at Allega Travel, said. "But, today it's going to be from hour to hour."

Officials at the U.S. Post Office in Midland said they aren't sure what affect the strike will have on delivery of mail. But Carl Tedder, supervisor, said the post office will have first priority.

"They're running four flights, one in each location (north, south east and west) instead of the regular 15 flights a day," he said.

He added the flights are scheduled to leave in the late afternoon and early evening which enable the post office to get most of the mail out, although most mail delivery will probably be delayed.

Democrats say they'd prefer another session to remap bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Hard-core Democrats said today they would prefer another special legislative session to passing the kind of congressional redistricting bill favored by Speaker Bill Clayton, a Senate majority and Gov. Bill Clements.

The House was to take up a congressional remap for final action today.

Clayton reportedly was seeking votes for reconsideration of Wednesday's vote on preliminary approval so some changes could be made before final passage.

Rep. Bob Bush of Sherman, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said those who want a bill more favorable to Democratic congressmen would oppose reconsideration and seek to kill the bill.

He acknowledged defeating a redistricting bill would result in another special session.

"This is a 20-7 plan. If we come back again, I think we can have a better plan," Bush said shortly before the caucus met for a closed-door strategy session this morning.

He meant the plan before the House would provide 20 secure Democratic seats and give seven to the Republicans, who now have five Texas congressmen.

The plan gives Clements what he had demanded — a Dallas district where blacks would have a good chance of electing a black congressman and a neighboring Republican district where liberal U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox could not win.

Bush said hard-core Democrats have 65 firm votes — well short of a majority of 76 — and "I think the speaker goes into this battle with the edge. ... People want to go home."

Heart patient dies; Device may still help

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite the death of the world's third artificial heart transplant patient, doctors say the plastic device still offers hope to a small number of patients who cannot be saved any other way.

Willebrordus A. Meuffels, 36, died Sunday, a week after a surgical team headed by Dr. Denton A. Cooley implanted a human heart to replace the plastic pump that kept him alive the 54 hours needed to find the donor.

Odessa woman, 43, killed Sunday in motorcycle mishap near Shafter

SHAFTER — A 43-year-old Odessa woman was killed Sunday when the motorcycle she was riding north of Shafter left the roadway and overturned.

Dead is Delma Self Johnson of 3633 Melody Lane in Odessa. She was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash 2.7 miles north of Shafter on U.S. 67 by Judge Antonio Acosta of Presidio. Her body was taken to Geeslin Funeral Home in Alpine.

Injured in the accident was 42-year-old William Duane Henderson of Odessa, driver of the motorcycle. He remained in undetermined condition this morning in Big Bend Memorial Hospital in Alpine where he was being treated for head injuries, a possible fractured left arm and internal injuries.

Investigating officers said the motorcycle had just passed another vehicle on a curve when the mishap occurred. The motorcycle ran off the east side of the roadway, struck a delineator and rolled over. Both riders were thrown from the vehicle and neither was wearing a helmet, officers said.

Odessa officials name police chief

ODESSA — City officials here ended the speculation over the identity of Odessa's new police chief this morning by naming Alan R. Stewart, 35, of Plainview to that post effective Aug. 15.

Stewart, chief of the Plainview Police Department since 1977, will fill the void created in March when former Odessa Police Chief Jack Tomlin was asked to resign by City Manager Kerry Sweatt.

Sweatt said Stewart was chosen from a field of 33 applicants on the basis of his experience, background and leadership abilities. He said city officials hope the naming of a chief ends concerns about the appointment and "jockeying around" for the position.

Stewart will move to Odessa in the near future with his wife, Karen, and three children. He begins his duties with the department Aug. 17.

Policy in El Salvador

Critics of the Reagan administration's policy in El Salvador focus some of their sharpest attacks on Washington's supposed preference for a military as opposed to a political solution.

Listening to these critics, one might imagine that only the arms aid provided the Salvadoran government by the Reagan administration is preventing a political compromise that would end the fighting and yield an enlightened regime in El Salvador.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Denying military assistance to the moderate government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte would only deliver El Salvador into the hands of the self-confessed Marxist Leninists who command the Cuban-armed guerrilla groups currently battling Saladoran security forces.

Moreover, the critics choose to overlook the fact that the Reagan administration's policy places roughly equal stress on military and political responses. The administration vigorously supports the Duarte government's land reform efforts as well as the promise of internationally observed parliamentary elections next year and presidential elections in 1983.

In the context of El Salvador, land reform and the free elections promised by the Duarte government can't be viewed as anything other than a political reaction to that country's bloody internal strife.

Finally, it should be noted that nearly three-quarters of all U.S. aid to El Salvador is economic, not military.

Despite all of this, public and congressional opposition to sending additional arms to the Salvadoran government is substantial, and thus cause for legitimate worry within the administration.

One measure of just how worried the administration may be was the recent speech by Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, before the Washington World Affairs Council.

Mr. Enders pointedly called for a "political solution" in El Salvador, and then went on to say that "just as the conflict was Salvadoran in its origins, so its ultimate resolution must be Salvadoran."

Those same words, spoken by Ted Kennedy, Cora Weiss or Bella Abzug, would be taken as a thinly disguised call for denying the Salvadoran government the arms it needs to counter the weaponry provided the guerrillas by Cuba and other Soviet-bloc countries.

But, while Mr. Enders' remarks were undoubtedly intended as a rhetorical concession to administration critics, the rest of his speech reaffirmed the need to resist an armed Marxist takeover of El Salvador.

If the history of every other Marxist insurgency since World War II is any guide, political reforms are indeed necessary in El Salvador to, among other things, minimize support for the guerrillas. But that will still leave a few thousand terrorists and insurgents led by hard-core Marxists prepared to stop at nothing in their effort to transform El Salvador into another Cuba.

And no political concession short of surrender will neutralize the threat posed by those who pledge allegiance to Mao's dictum that "power grows from the barrel of a gun."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 3, the 215th day of 1980. There are 150 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 3, 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail from Spain on an expedition that resulted in the European discovery of America.

On this date:

In 1675, the French defeated Dutch and Spanish fleets in the Bay of Palermo and took the island of Sicily.

In 1780, during the American Revolution, Benedict Arnold was put in command of the fortifications at West Point, N.Y.

In 1951, it was disclosed that 90 cadets at the U.S. military academy at West Point had been dismissed for cheating.

And in 1973, the Justice Department ordered a new investigation into the deaths of four Kent State University students. The four had been gunned down by Ohio National Guardsmen during an anti-war protest three years earlier.

Ten years ago: Cuba closed its embassy in Madrid because of a deadlock in trade talks with Spain.

Five years ago: the death toll from the mysterious "Legionnaires disease" rose to 20 in Pennsylvania, as doctors intensified their search to identify the cause of the illness.

One year ago: Hurricane Allen stormed across Barbados, downing power lines, causing widespread flooding and forcing hundreds to head for shelters.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Secret report details Teamsters' pitfalls

WASHINGTON — President Reagan raised a few eyebrows by inviting Teamsters President Roy Lee Williams to the White House a few days after the union boss had been indicted by a federal grand jury. This was perceived as a gesture of appreciation for the only support Reagan got from a major labor union in the 1980 election.

Jack Anderson

But before he gets too cozy with the Teamsters brass, the president might be well advised to read a secret report on the union by the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee. He could spare his administration the kind of embarrassment the Carter White House suffered from its strange relations with the Teamsters.

The bipartisan report shows how Teamsters bosses manipulated Carter's labor secretary, Ray Marshall, and other officials to cover up evidence of either political chicanery or gross incompetence in the government's investigation of Teamsters' corruption.

My associate Clark Mollenhoff has seen a copy of the subcommittee's report, and it is devastating. It makes painfully clear that the Labor Department under Marshall destroyed the effectiveness of its own investigation into the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund.

Teamsters officials have compiled a notorious record over the years for using every deceitful means possible to thwart government investigations into their pension fund. Yet Marshall's Labor Department chose not to use its subpoena powers to obtain pertinent records on the fund's loss of millions of dollars in dubious loans.

Instead, the department brass ordered its Special Investigative Staff to ask the pension fund managers for documents under a voluntary agreement. Needless to say, the Teamsters managers were delighted to agree. The agreement left them free to engage in the obstructive, foot-dragging techniques that have become a pattern in the pension fund's dealings with government investigators.

"The major shortcoming in the system was that it was based on 100 percent willingness of the fund to cooperate with the Labor Department," the Senate report states. "But that degree of cooperation was not forthcoming."

The trustees withheld some requested records, offered documents that were not authenticated or obtained under oath, and finally "made it a formal policy not to turn over any records" at all, the subcommittee reports.

Despite the union bosses' refusal to cooperate — and the Carter administration's strange refusal to force such cooperation — the Labor Department sleuths were able to uncover widespread abuse in the management of the pension fund.

Records indicated that loans had been made to companies on the verge of bankruptcy and to borrowers who had been delinquent on earlier loans — even to borrowers who used new loans to pay interest on their outstanding debts to the fund.

There were myriad other abuses, but when the investigators sought permission for a full-scale inquiry their requests were rejected. The inquiry was narrowed to the question of whether real estate loans had proper collateral.

According to the Senate report, Labor Department officials deliberately stifled criminal investigations, threw up barriers to any cooperation with the Justice Department and illegally destroyed files when an internal investigation indicated "conflicts of interest, obstruction of justice and sexual misconduct" by high Labor Department officials.

SOFT(BALL) ON COMMUNISM: In this of all seasons, with conservative Republicans in control of Washington, a Soviet Embassy team has just won a city softball league championship, with a record that looks like a Kremlin election: 10-0.

Before you worry about the great American pastime being taken over by Russian moles, though, I should explain that the team has no Kremlin connection at all. It is made up mostly of journalists and other writers with a wry sense of humor.

"They don't look like Russians, and they don't talk like Russians," said one skeptical opponent. "They train them to talk like that," explained a knowledgeable teammate, perhaps deluded by the "embassy" team captain's exhortation: "OK, comrades. Let's take the field."

On another occasion, the "embassy" captain, novelist Bob Reiss, was called by the security officer of the opponents' firm, who explained that his company did sensitive research and development work for the U.S. government. "You know, we're not allowed to talk to communists at conventions," the security officer said. When he got to the point of saying he'd have to give his team a security briefing before the game, the "embassy" captain finally blurted out a confession. Next year, Reiss told my associate Howard Rosenberg, the team may call itself "the Iranian Students Association."

WATCH ON WASTE: It may puzzle those of you who spend hard-earned bucks to holiday in Hawaii, but the Pentagon actually foots the bill for Defense Department employees and their families to travel from their Hawaiian posts to the mainland for vacation.

The topsy-turvy travel perk began in 1954 as a way of enticing government workers to accept assignments in such "hardship" posts as Hawaii, Guam, Alaska and the Virgin Islands. The cost for the Hawaiian contingent's air fares alone totaled $608,032 over a two-year period. The Pentagon brass hats have asked Congress to bid "aloha" to this costly privilege.

INSIDE REPORT:

To O'Neill's amazement, people do prefer lower tax rates

WASHINGTON — News that spread through congressional cloakrooms 24 hours before Wednesday's tax showdown not only ended Democratic hopes of finally beating Ronald Reagan on the House floor but also killed the party's stubbornly-held notion that voters hate lower taxes.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"I can't believe it," one prominent Democratic congressman told us when he heard the news Tuesday afternoon: Rep. Norman Dicks of Washington state, no "boll weevil" conservative but a regular Western Democrat, was defecting to support the Reagan tax package. That opened a hemorrhage of Democrats jumping party lines that finally reached 48 in Wednesday's historic vote.

It also signalled the folly of years of unremitting Democratic opposition to Kemp-Roth tax rate reduction, before and after the bill's embrace by President Reagan. Dicks and the other Democratic defectors were moved by an unprecedented public demand, spurred by Reagan's video virtuosity but reflecting genuine popularity for deep, continuing tax reduction.

The House tax vote capped the passage of Reagan's entire economic package in 200 days, a feat unmatched since Franklin Roosevelt's 100 days in 1933. It also was a unique personal triumph for Rep. Jack Kemp, who began his tax crusade seven years ago against bipartisan ridicule. But in addition, it revealed profound political misconceptions by the Democrats.

They had talked themselves into a series of comforting notions: that Kemp-Roth was a political albatross around Reagan's neck, sure to defeat him for the presidency; that Reagan did not really like Kemp-Roth and never would push it; that across-the-board, multiple-year tax reduction was not acceptable to scores of Republican congressmen, much less to enough Democrats to pass it in the House.

That framework of misconceptions guided Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's strategy as Ways and Means Committee chairman in drafting a Democratic alternative. While appealing to all manner of business special interest groups, he played the old Democratic game of scourging the rich by concentrating tax cuts below the $50,000 income level.

But congressional Republicans knew there was one sweetener Rostenkowski never could match: permanent tax indexing, to adjust for inflation, after three years of tax cuts (originally part of the Kemp-Roth bill but removed by cautious Reagan administration policymakers). Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on Ways and Means, turned the tide a week before the vote when he finally talked the administration into tax indexing.

That had a profound impression on scores of congressmen — including Norm Dicks, a longtime aide to liberal Sen. Warren Magnuson before his election to Congress in 1976 and certainly no conservative (rated 5 percent by the American Conservative Union last session). Over the weekend of July 24-25, he first entertained thoughts of backing the Reagan bill, thoughts enhanced by a Monday telephone call from Reagan himself.

The president's Monday night speech generated a telephone campaign impressing Dicks, among other congressmen. On Tuesday morning, he had his first personal meeting with Ronald Reagan, in the Oval Office. On Tuesday afternoon, word of Dicks' defection reached stunned Democratic leaders. They knew then that the battle was over.

Rep. Elliott Levitas of Georgia, a Southern liberal who had been a Kemp-Roth original co-sponsor but backed away from it in the face of Democratic hostility, contacted Kemp Wednesday. He and Rep. Dan Glickman of Kansas, another former Kemp-Roth Democrat, would vote for the Reagan bill if Kemp on the floor would commend their desire to combat inflation through a third-year tax cut trigger rejected by Reagan. The deal was made. When Levitas announced his support for the bill, a one-sided Reagan win was obvious.

While Dicks, Levitas and Glickman were reflecting the popular appeal of tax reduction, Rostenkowski's votes that had been rounded up through special interest favors were coming unstuck. Two Texans he had counted on because of oil tax concessions, Reps. Ralph Hall and Jack Hightower, voted with Reagan — an agitated Hightower casting his vote at the last minute after failing to get Rostenkowski's release from his commitment. The chairman's threats that hell would freeze over before he agrees to oil concessions in the Senate-House conference could not surmount Reagan's popular support in Texas.

The "$50,000 question" posed by Rostenkowski proved a poor match for Reagan's semi-permanent tax reduction. Nevertheless, in his gracious speech to the House Wednesday, Rostenkowski pledged to campaign against the rich through steeper graduation of taxes "as long as I'm chairman."

In his considerably-less-than-gracious speech closing Wednesday's debate, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill showed he had learned nothing. Beginning by calling this "a great day for aristocracy," he claimed the nation's big corporations had artificially stimulated that flow of telephone calls to congressional offices. To the very end, Tip O'Neill could not believe the people really prefer lower taxes to bigger government.

BEN WICKS

"As the days dwindle down to a precious few, I say to hell with the banks and their one oyer prime."

CHARLEY REESE

Why aren't we fighting communists?

One of the disgraces of the West is Afghanistan. There, in that country the size of Texas, our enemy the Soviet Union is making war on the Afghans. The Afghans are fighting back. The disgrace is that we apparently have not given them a single bullet.

Charley Reese

The Afghanistan Information Center at Freedom House, which is about the best source of information, reports that — despite rumors and reports to the contrary — numerous Afghan sources tell them that the resistance has received little significant arms aid from outside sources or governments. Most of its weapons are still those captured from communist forces or brought over by defecting Afghan government troops.

When the West keeps failing to take advantage of opportunities like Afghanistan, you begin to wonder if it really wants to survive. Here is a case where the Soviet Union has really put its foot in it. It has invaded a Moslem nation. It is ruthlessly making war on civilians. The civilians, who just happen to be some of the most pugnacious people in the world, are fighting back valiantly. The Soviets have tied up about 100,000 troops and the Afghans have killed about 8,700 of them. Not bad for guerrillas with very few modern weapons.

So what is the West doing? We should make the United Nations a propaganda forum for our side for a change. We should have resolutions condemning Soviet aggression going all the time, as well as human rights investigations. The United Nations, of course, is fairly well infiltrated by the KGB — a KGB man is the chief personnel officer for the world bureaucracy — so while Afghans are shot, starved and gassed, the United Nations concentrates on segregation in South Africa and Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza.

The Europeans, in their typically European fashion, offered the Soviets a deal. Please withdraw your troops and keep your puppet regime intact. The Soviets turned it down since they obviously cannot keep the puppet government in Kabul without Soviet troops. The European Plan, in addition to being dishonorable, is also stupid.

The United States is doing nothing. It did, of course, agree to sell grain to the Soviet Union. President Reagan's decision to lift the grain embargo was reported on April 25. On June 4, the Kabul regime signed a contract with the Soviet Union for the purchase of 35,000 tons of wheat. So we help the Soviet Union feed the oppressors while the Soviet army in Afghanistan attempts to starve the Afghan resistance fighters.

A United States government which had a strong sense of survival and courage would be doing a number of things. It would be hounding the Soviets at the United Nations. It would not have lifted the grain embargo, but would instead be applying new economic pressure on the Soviets. It would have the biggest transmitters it could find set up in Turkey, broadcasting a daily blow-by-blow description of Soviet atrocities in Afghanistan to the 50 or 60 million Moslems inside the Soviet Union. And it would be sending the Afghan resistance fighters enough small arms to keep the Soviet Union tied down for 100 years.

We could do to the Soviet Union in Afghanistan exactly what they did to us in Vietnam. A serious question every American ought to ask their government is, why aren't we doing it? I've been listening to President Reagan talk anti-communism for 20 years. I've heard Mr. Alexander Haig's speeches on let's get tough with the Soviets. But what actions have we taken? Well, we have lifted the grain embargo and taken away the Soviet ambassador's special parking privilege in Washington.

In Afghanistan, we have a God-sent opportunity to kick the Soviet Union where it hurts at no cost to ourselves — literally a free shot, and we haven't taken it. It makes you wonder.

Torrijos' death may launch struggle

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The funeral of strongman Omar Torrijos Tuesday is expected to launch a period of intense political maneuvering to decide the control of Panama. There was no clear indication yet of the outcome.

Torrijos, 52, and six companions were killed Friday when their small, twin-engine plane slammed into a cloud-shrouded mountain 60 miles west of Panama City. For the time being, his successor as commander of the national guard, Col. Florencio Flores, appeared to be in control.

Thousands lined up during the night to file past the bier of the cigar-smoking, pistol-packing general who had ruled Panama since a military coup in 1968 and concluded the treaty that will end U.S. control of the Panama Canal by the end of the century.

A government spokesman announced that Cuban President Fidel Castro was expected to attend the state funeral Tuesday. The United States also planned to send a delegation, but there was no indication of its makeup yet.

In a move toward limited democracy in 1978, Torrijos chose Aristides Royo, 41, as president. But it was clear, despite the general's repeated denials, that as commander of the all-powerful national guard, the nation's military and police force, he remained the kingpin and de facto prime minister.

"The government was not ready for this and neither was the opposition. The country is not ready for this," said Foreign Minister Jorge Illueca.

Key national guard and government officials met Saturday and chose Flores, Torrijos' second-in-command as chief of staff of the guard, to succeed him.

"It looks like Flores will have no trouble running the show until after they bury Torrijos, and then we might see the opposition make a real run for more say in the government," said a foreign diplomat who asked not to be identified.

Little is known of the colonel, who at 50 is the oldest active guard officer. But he is considered a moderate and concerned about politics, although a military man primarily. After being named to replace Torrijos, he told Royo: "We want you to continue serving the government and the democratic cause of the nation."

It was not clear whether Flores and Royo would compete for Torrijos' power. But it appears certain there will be competition from increasingly vocal opposition factions, which in recent months were pushing for a new constitution.

"It will be difficult for the government to find a figure who draws together all that the fallen leader represented," said the chief of the opposition Liberal Party, Arnulfo Escalona.

Torrijos was always something of an enigma both in his domestic and his foreign policies. He frequently described his leadership as "neither with the left nor the right, but with Panama." He could be friendly to the United States and to Cuba, and his government was made up of politicians from the left as well as the right.

Last year, he allowed free elections for 19 of the 56 seats on a National Legislative Council, an advisory body to the 505-seat National Assembly whose members came largely from his own party, the Revolutionary Democratic Party.

The elections produced a legal opposition that in the last year has taken advantage of a freer press to push its point of view.

Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, Panama's political leader for 13 years, perishedin a plane crash Friday in a remote jungel area 60 miles west of Panama City. Though Torrijos stepped down as Panama's president in 1978, he still retained control over the nation as commander of the national guard.

Residents back home after gas leak

AUSTIN (AP) — About 1,000 Austin residents have been allowed to return to their homes and begin airing out the highly toxic gases that had spewed from a ruptured line, officials say.

The ruptured gas line was punctured by a construction crew Saturday morning, releasing highly flammable butane and propane gases into the air, according to Austin Fire Department Lt. James Hendrix.

The escaping gases sparked the evacuation of a 3-sqare-mile area encompassing several subdivisions.

The residents were allowed to return home at 7 a.m. Sunday, Hendrix said.

"We are advising everyone to air their homes out real good," he said.

Hendrix said there still was a slight leak Sunday, but that it was not dangerous.

Hunger striker dies; Fighting continues

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Rioters and IRA guerrillas attacked security forces in Roman Catholic areas of Northern Ireland and a British soldier lost both legs in a rocket attack following the eighth death in the Irish Republican Army's hunger strike.

But the violence in response to the death of hunger striker Kieran Doherty Sunday night, like that early Saturday after the starvation death of Kevin Lynch, was markedly less intense than the riots triggered by the first deaths in the five-month-old fast.

A police spokesman said the violence was "not much worse than any Saturday night."

The lack of widespread, prolonged rioting indicated that the hunger strike to force the British government to treat imprisoned nationalist guerrillas as political prisoners has lost much of its emotional impact on the province's 500,000 Catholics.

This decrease in support follows a string of denunciations of the fast by the church hierarchy and a growing belief that the British government will make no concessions to those convicted as terrorists and criminals.

However, security forces were prepared for more violence today following Lynch's funeral at Dungiven, his hometown 45 miles northwest of Belfast.

The IRA's image was not helped by the killing of two policemen Sunday in a landmine ambush west of Belfast that wounded two other members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald in a statement expressing regret for Doherty's death denounced the outlawed guerrilla army for the "murder" of the police officers and said: "This deplorable act brings only further disgrace on the organization which carried it out."

Meanwhile, Sinn Fein, the legal political arm of the IRA, said 25-year-old Liam McCloskey would join the hunger strike today as a replacement for Lynch, and another prisoner would take Doherty's place.

Five other guerrillas are fasting. The mother of a sixth, Paddy Quinn, authorized government doctors to intervene Friday and save the life of her unconscious son. It was the first time the family of one of the fasters broke the united strike front.

Doherty, 25, died at 7:16 p.m. in the Maze Prison on the 73rd day of his fast. It was one day less than the longest Irish hunger strike on record, by Terence MacSwiney, lord mayor of Cork, who died in London's Brixton Prison on Oct. 25, 1920, after fasting 74 days.

Doherty was serving a 22-year sentence for possession of guns and explosives.

Hundreds of schools across the nation to close this fall

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Amid growing acceptance of the need to close surplus classrooms, hundreds of schools nationwide will be shut this fall due to declining enrollment and tight local finances.

But in the energy boom areas of the West and some Sunbelt states new schools will open to meet growing demand for space.

Leading the way with closings is Massachusetts, where the problem of fewer schoolchildren has been compounded by financial woes created by Proposition 2½, the tax-cutting measure passed by voters last November.

State Department of Education spokesman Terry Zoulas says about 400 Massachusetts schools will close this fall, 27 in Boston alone where enrollment has fallen sharply since court-ordered desegregation began in 1974.

"The number is significant because over the last seven years, since our peak enrollment, only 250 schools have been shut down," says Zoulas. Proposition 2½ has accelerated the process, he says.

No figures exist which would show if the number of school closings expected next year is unprecedented, but Thomas A. Shannon, executive director of the Washington-based National School Boards Association, says that's a good possibility.

The expected spate of closings in the 1981-82 school year is "a reflection and an acceptance of the demographic facts of life," says Shannon. "People are becoming inured to school closings, whereas five years ago, school boards were elected on the issue."

The brunt of school closings is expected to be felt in the Northeast and Midwest. New York City expects to close 15 schools, Detroit is to close six, Philadelphia 13, Newark, N.J. three or four, and the financially ill Chicago school system will shut 32.

"The school system has lost about 100,000 students in the past six years, and that's quite a decline in enrollment," says Rochelle Hart, a spokeswoman for the Chicago Teachers Union.

"We're just losing students right and left," says Robert G. Cowan, Fort Wayne's personnel services director, where a 10,000-pupil drop in the Indiana district over the last decade is leading to the closing of two elementary and one middle school.

Cleveland's Board of Education has closed 50 schools since 1978 because of dropping enrollment. But the board is under federal court order forbidding further closings until the city submits a report on their impact.

Declining enrollments and school closings are not limited to the Snowbelt, or to depressed inner cities.

Demographic changes over the past decade — the end of the baby boom, the population flight from city to suburb and from North to South — are now combining with a tough financial climate to create problems for schools even in prosperous cities.

Portland, Ore., for instance, will not reopen two of 13 high schools and two grade schools this fall. In recent years, Portland's school population has dropped by 20,000.

Seattle closed 14 schools in June, citing fewer children and scarcer state school funds. Phoenix, Ariz., will close 11 schools by next year, and nearby Scottsdale has closed five elementary schools.

"There are always objections from people in the neighborhood who have to send their youngsters to other schools. But it's generally accepted because we're losing children at the rate of 4 percent a year in a school population of 10,000 to 11,000," says Richard Clark, president of the Scottsdale school board.

In California, where Proposition 13 has clouded the outlook of a number of school districts, San Jose is closing eight schools.

But the picture isn't so bleak everywhere.

In a number of Western states including Nevada, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana, new schools are opening to care for the families with children who have migrated to cash in on those states' energy booms.

"We don't have the problem that is nationwide with diminishing school populations," says Helen Williams, information officer for the Idaho Department of Education. "In most parts of the state our school populations if anything are increasing."

In Wyoming, five or six new schools are to open this year, adding to the current 394 total.

Colorado, also benefiting from energy development projects, has no school closings slated this year. But there is discussion of some closings in Denver next year.

Likewise in the Deep South Sunbelt states where people have been streaming in from the North for at least a decade, few closings are expected. And some states, like Florida, the problem is finding money to open new schools to meet the growth in the number of schoolchildren.

Artificial heart first conceived 60 years ago by surgeon

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — H.E. Flint's name will not go down in history as one of the world's greatest heart surgeons, ranking alongside Drs. Denton A. Cooley and Michael E. DeBakey. In fact, he wasn't even a doctor.

But officials at the Texas Heart Institute say he first came up with the idea of an artificial heart. The concept was described in a science fiction story published 60 years ago.

Today, the creation of Flint's imagination has become reality, and Dr. Cooley credits it with giving a 36-year-old Dutchman "a second chance at life" in a dramatic operation 10 days ago.

A spokesman at Cooley's hospital said the artificial heart "signals an additional piece of equipment in the physician's bag" at the institute.

Other doctors agree Cooley's operation has a place in heart transplant surgery but say the big breakthrough will come only when the man-made heart can be implanted with a power source independent of machines outside the body.

"The big problem with the artificial heart that has not been solved is the power source," said Gayle McNutt, a spokesman for DeBakey, Houston's other famous transplant pioneer.

He said DeBakey no longer performs heart transplants, choosing instead to emphasize other surgical techniques and preventive medicine.

"You can devise an artificial heart that will work with external power, but as yet no artificial heart has been devised that will prevent chaining the patient to a machine," McNutt said.

Cooley has said all along the main purpose of the device developed in his Texas Heart Institute was not a "cure," but merely a means of giving an emergency heart patient a few extra days of life while a search is under way for a possible donor.

Cooley saw what he considered an ideal opportunity to use the device the afternoon of July 23. Earlier that day he had performed a triple coronary bypass operation on Willebrordus Meuffels of The Netherlands. Sections of diseased arteries were removed and replaced with vessels taken from the patient's own leg in the delicate but by now almost routine surgery.

Three hours later Dr. Cooley was told Meuffels was in trouble.

"His heart ceased to function," Cooley said. "We massaged his chest externally and then opened his chest. His heart was completely lifeless." He said he knew he had to work fast.

"We took him back to the operating room massaging his heart directly. Obviously he deserved a second chance at life," said Cooley, 60. "We had every indication to use the artificial heart.

"I explained the situation to the patient's wife. She recognized the desperateness and gave her consent," Cooley said.

Meuffels survived on the twin-chambered, plastic device — connected with vacuum tubes to the external power source — more than two days until a suitable donor, a Tennessee car accident victim, became available. The human heart then was implanted and the man-made device removed.

A plastic device to replace the entire heart has been tried only two times before — once last August in Argentina in a patient who died 15 hours later, and Cooley's first try at the procedure 12 years ago.

In that first operation, the patient, Haskell Karp, 47, of Skokie, Ill., lived 65 hours on the mechanical heart but died 36 hours after receiving a human heart.

Instead of praise, Cooley came under fire from the National Heart Institute, Karp's survivors, and his former protege, DeBakey. They complained the device had not been properly tested and said it was unethical to "experiment" on a human being.

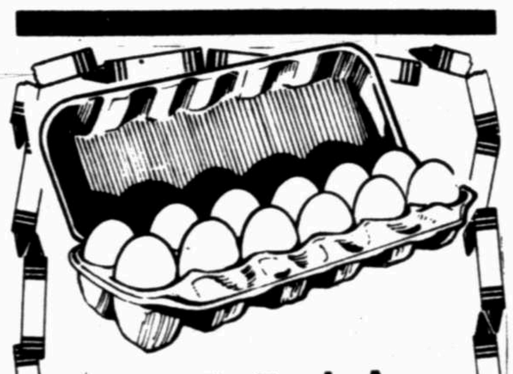

Afterward, Cooley resigned from the Baylor College of Medicine and established his privately funded Texas Heart Institute. A $4.2 million lawsuit filed by Karp's survivors was rejected, but the controversy widened the rift that had already separated Cooley and DeBakey.

Cooley conceded after the Meuffels operation that the controversy over the 1969 operation set back the artificial program and delayed the second try.

DeBakey has not commented on Cooley's latest operation, but McNutt said DeBakey has continued his own research at Baylor on a man-made heart "although not on the scale it was a few years ago."

"It is still one of his dreams, but Dr. DeBakey doesn't consider an artifical heart of really tremendous significance until you reach a stage where you have a proper power source," McNutt said. "Basically that's why research at Baylor has not gone beyond where it is now — everybody right now is somewhat stymied by the lack of that (internally contained) power source."

Reagan victory may end honeymoon with Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is giving a final, rousing endorsement this week to President Reagan's economics, but leaders say this triumph could also spell the end of his honeymoon with Congress.

Key members of both parties agree that Reagan will have a far harder time winning support for his non-economic legislation than he did for his budget and tax cuts.

Social Security financing, revisions of clean air and clean water standards, an extension of the Voting Rights Act, arms for Saudi Arabia, immigration policy — these are among the subjects that could pose problems for Reagan in Congress in the months ahead.

The 97th Congress leaves town for a five-week recess on Wednesday after it sends to the president the completed version of his three-year, 25 percent tax cut. Approval is expected in the Senate today; in the House on Tuesday.

This largest tax cut in history follows congressional approval last Friday of Reagan's companion plan for the largest-ever cut in federal spending.

Now, with the big Reagan economic bills out of the way, Congress is planning to get back to business as usual. It will turn its attention to the dozens of issues it put on the back burner for the past seven months.

"So many of these things coming down the road are of a parochial nature. Each one has to be dealt with on its own," said House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill.

Michel, whose GOP ranks are outnumbered 244-191 in the House, concedes that the bipartisan coalition Reagan called on for his tax and budget proposals can't be casually reassembled.

"These were such dominant, overriding issues that we we were able to put together what we did," Michel said.

He dismisses the notion that leadership of the House has effectively passed from House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to this coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats.

"It will only work at selective times," Michel said.

"I can't imagine that happening again," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, looking back on last week's House tax vote, won decisively by the administration after members were swamped with thousands of phone calls and telegrams inspired by Reagan's appearance on national television.

"Never in my 30 years here have I seen that kind of pressure," O'Neill said. "Are they going to be able to do that on clean air, clean water, voting rights? I doubt it."

Reagan administration plans for relaxing environmental standards have already generated deep opposition in Congress.

His newly announced legislation to tighten some immigration controls while granting one-time amnesty to 6 million other illegal immigrants has already generated considerable opposition in Congress.

And the administration's proposed cutbacks in Social Security benefits — both elimination of the $122 minimum benefit the House voted in a futile gesture Fridy to restre and earlier proposed penalties on early retirees — are causing major political headaches for Republicans.

Social Security financing will be the top item on the congressional agenda after the recess, and it's already become the No. 1 campaign issue for Democrats planning to run in 1982.

"I think inevitably the president will face more difficulties, despite the momentum that he has now built up and the successes that he has had with the budget and the tax bill," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., assistant Senate minority leader.

Cranston said that when the administration sends to Congress its expected request for selling sopisticated AWACS to Saudi Arabia, "there will be a very, very tough fight and I would not predict the outcome but it will certainly not be any sweeping victory for the president."

Other controversial social issues expected to come before the Senate now that the econmomic matters are done — anti-abortion measures, prayer in schools, anti-busing — will be "the beginning of some very, very rough battles here," Cranston said.

"The president will face the unpleasant choice of alienating his extreme right-wing supporters ... or alienating others in his party and the country," Cranston said.

Reagan also could face some big problems on extension of the Voting Rights Act, a major piece of civil rights legislation that expires next year. Reagan's failure to take a firm stand on the proposed extension has made some GOP leaders in Congress uncomfortable.

So far Reagan has not expressed a final opinion on legislation to extend the act's key enforcement section — which requires nine states and parts of 13 others covered by the act to get prior Justice Department approval, called "pre-clearance," for all local election-law changes.

Several Republicans in the House are upset over the bill that emerged last week from the House Judiciary Committee, claiming that its provision allowing covered areas to "bail out" of clearance is so stringent that no area will ever be exempted.

The vote on voting rights carries major political consequences. Southern Democrats, who Reagan must have in order to get his will through the House, can hardly afford to alienate black or Hispanic voters. Many of them have minority populations of 20 to 40 percent in their districts.

Senators unhappy with labor response

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of a Senate investigation are unhappy with the Labor Department's refusal to seek the ouster of Roy Lee Williams as president of the Teamsters union if he refuses to answer questions about alleged pension fund abuses.

Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., chairman of the permanent investigations subcommittee, and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., ranking minority member, said they disagree with Donovan's assertion that the department has no legal authority to challenge Williams' suitability to remain as head of the 2-million-member union.

They released a July 9 letter, in which Donovan said T. Timothy Ryan Jr., the department solicitor, had studied whether the Labor Department had such authority.

"The solicitor has informed me that the Department of Labor has no authority to seek the removal of Williams or to otherwise challenge his incumbency as president of the Teamsters," the labor secretary said.

Both Roth and Nunn maintained that the department already has such authority.

The Georgia senator said that "while federal law does give the Labor Department authority to initiate action to remove union officers for fiduciary breach," he has concluded it is necessary for Congress to reassert its intent.

Nunn said he was drafting legislation, which Roth will cosponsor, declaring the department has the authority and the obligation to apply to federal court "to remedy any breach of fiduciary duty by a labor union official, including the ability to seek removal of such an official from his union office."

Nearly a year ago, Williams invoked the Fifth Amendment 23 times when questioned about Teamster fund transactions by the Senate investigative panel.

Since then, the Teamster leader has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Chicago on a charge of conspiring with others to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., in connection with a trucking deregulation bill in 1979. That case is pending. No charges were brought against Cannon.

In a report May 20, five days after the Teamster executive board named Williams as interim president to succeed to late Frank E. Fitzsimmons, Senate investigators said that the department should question Williams and if his responses were inadequate, "the Labor Department should petition the federal court seeking the removal ..." of the union leader.

On June 4, the union's annual convention voted overwhelmingly to give Williams a full five-year term as president.

About a week later, Williams was among union leaders invited to the White House for a briefing by President Reagan on the administration's economic program.

Asked at the time about the presence of a man under indictment, White House labor liaison Robert Bonitati said, "I think the president has been appreciative of the Teamsters' support ... as an organization. I think he wants to communicate with the elected leaders of that organization. You work with the people who are the elected leaders."

Reagan had videotaped a message for presentation to the Teamsters convention, saying he wanted to remain "in team" with the Teamsters and that he was sorry he could not attend in person. He did not mention Williams' name.

Aside from his criminal indictment, Williams is among 17 defendants in a federal civil suit stemming from alleged abuses of Teamster pension funds. The suit was filed in Chicago in 1978 by then-Secretary Ray Marshall, and the Labor Department under Donovan filed nine additional charges in May.

In his reply to the Senate investigative interim report, Donovan said, "Please be assured that I am in full agreement with the subcommitte's concerns as expressed ... and stand willing to assist the subcommittee in any way possible concerning this question of national importance."

Donovan said " ... the Labor-Management Reporting and Dict of 1959 does not provide any procedure for removal of officers of international union by civil or dministrative proceedings which could be instituted by the Department of Labor."

The labor secretary noted that in the event Williams is convicted of the bribery conspiracy charge, pending in U.S. District Court in Chicago, he "would be automatically required to relinquish his union office" under provisions of the same law.

Nunn said, "The decision by Secretary Donovan is similar to decisions by the Labor Department going back through both Democratic and Republican administrations.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Plan back-to-school wardrobes now

DEAR PARENTS:

Yes, it really is THAT time of year again. Time to get those kiddoes ready to return to school. Some of you (and them) are more than ready, while others hate to see the summer end.

Going back to school is a fun time — the excitement of new pencils, lunch kits and crayons. How can they go through that stuff so fast, especially at today's prices?

When it comes to wardrobes, if you'll stop and plan them out, decide what your children really need and try to color coordinate as much as possible, you'll find those pennies will stretch a little further.

What kid doesn't want to dress just like the other kids? Sure makes it hard on parents trying to guess what the "in" thing is going to be this year!

Try to keep in mind these few basic and common-sense tips on buying when you're trudging all over town trying to find jeans with an extra slim cut or the right pair of overalls that look just so on Sis. (Remember when you had to wear overalls and you hated it?)

When choosing socks for boys, buy tube-type in all one color or solid white (without stripes, or, at least, with stripes all the same color). You'll get more wear from tubes because the heel is alternated when being put on. By buying all the same color, you'll always have a matched pair should one get lost or worn out.

Buy that winter coat a little larger than necessary. Your child might get two years' wear out of it (if it doesn't wind up in the Lost and Found).

If you know your child is going to need a coat this winter, now is the time to start looking while there's a good selection and size range to choose from. Put it on lay-away.

A friend of mine who has three boys said one thing that she's learned is not to dress the three alike, no matter how cute it looks. By the time the youngest boy had received the hand-me-downs of the oldest, he and his mother were sick of seeing that same shirt. Same goes with girls and their dresses. At least get different colors.

Thrift shops and garage sales are ideal places to pick up some great bargains. You'll be surprised at what good clothes are for sale at these places. Kids outgrow their clothes so fast and sometimes it's unnecessary to spend a fortune for clothes they'll romp and stomp in at the school playground.

Don't feel you have to buy five pairs of jeans — one for each day of school. If you have access to a washing machine, you can get by with two or three pairs. Some children stay clean enough so they can wear a pair two or three times before it needs washing. Then there are those whose clothes barely make it through one day...

Coordinating seems to be the name of the game, though. Mix and match so three or four garments can be made into five or six outfits. Skirts, pants, blouses and vests can be rearranged to give a completely different appearance. Check your mail-order catalogs to see what the latest styles are, then buy or sew accordingly. You can get so many ideas for accessories and trimmings by just shopping around.

Take a few minutes to plan and you'll find that back-to-school frenzy is a breeze. — Heloise

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Heloise: If you have small children or pets in your home, don't bring an unknown plant into your household without first researching its true name to see if it's toxic!

I was given a few sprigs of a plant by a friend who only knew its local name, and I was unconcerned.

Two years later that plant had grown considerably and I had a very sick cat. Not knowing the cause, I finally examined the plant and noticed the cat had been chewing on it.

After much research by myself and the local library, I was finally able to identify the plant. Sure enough, it was toxic.

My cat is better but it'll take awhile yet for him to completely recover.

I hope others can learn from my unfortunate experience. Research before you adopt a plant. — Dorothy Clothier

Seedling industry blooming

DETROIT (AP) — The bloom may be off the auto industry here these days but the area's seedling industry is enjoying record growth.

Detroit, long recognized as the motor capital of the world, also boasts the lesser-known distinction of being the largest flower-producing area in the nation.

Within a 30-mile radius of the city, more than a million bedding-plant flats are produced each year. The flats are the small baskets or boxes of young flower and vegetable seedlings that are transplanted in home gardens.

More than 70,000 green thumbers turned out for the recent 15th annual Detroit Flower Day where growers from Michigan and adjoining states displayed and sold everything from azaleas to zucchini seedlings.

Preventive dieting easier than taking it off

By JEAN BLEVINS
Hearst Feature Service

If you didn't butter your bread just once a day, you'd be surprised at how much weight you wouldn't put on over a year. Preventive dieting, like preventive maintenance, is easier than taking poundage off.

But even if you are over-weight, you can start right now.

A successful weight-loss plan is one you can follow throughout your life. It should help you build sound eating habits so you not only shed those extra pounds, but keep them off.

The following amounts of weight will be lost over a year if certain foods are reduced or eliminated:

— Seven pounds a year, if you skip two 35-calorie butter or margarine pats a day.

— Eight pounds a year if you reduce by one teaspoon the sugar in your three-times-a-day coffee or tea.

— 15 pounds a year if you cut out two 150-calorie cans of beer a day.

— 15 pounds a year if you skip two 145-calorie cans a day of soft drinks.

— 17 pounds a year if you eat one less 170-calorie one-ounce bag of potato chips a day.

— 24 pounds a year if you do without your daily doughnut.

Salads, while low in calories, can carry a lot of calories into your body if you cover the salad with garnish goodies.

A four-cup salad bowl, filled with lettuce, contains five to 10 calories; a cup of cauliflower, green pepper and mushrooms, 20 calories; a cup of carrots or bean sprouts, 30 calories; eight cucumber or celery slices, five calories. You could combine all these items, rich sources of vitamins A and C, and your entire dish would be well under 100 calories.

Here are some calorie counts of some other things you find on salad bars:

Macaroni, bean and potato salad: 120 to 180 calories per half-cup.

Jello fruit salads: 120 to 150 calories per half-cup.

Applesauce, canned fruit: 50 calories per half-cup.

Kidney or garbanzo beans: 120 calories per half-cup.

Cottage cheese: 120 calories per half-cup.

Swiss or cheddar cheese: 225 calories per half-cup.

Croutons: 40 to 60 calories per half-cup.

And if you should happen to put dressing on your salad, you can just forget about your diet.

DEAR ABBY

She can't cope with parents' alcoholism

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl with a problem I can't talk to anybody about, and it's getting worse. I'm the oldest of three children. We live in a nice house in a nice neighborhood. We aren't poor and we aren't rich either. Mom works part time as a nurse, and Dad works every day except weekends — and that's when the trouble starts. Dad starts drinking on Friday night and he stays drunk all weekend.

When he's drunk he gets mean to Mom, and there's so much yelling and fighting I'm afraid the neighbors will hear it.

Now Mom has started to drink with him, and she even drinks during the daytime when she's home. When Dad comes home and she's been drinking, they have a big fight. I'm afraid they are going to get a divorce. I'm ashamed to have my friends over, and I don't want to go anywhere when my parents are drinking because I worry about my brother, who's 9, and my sister, who's 6.

What can I do, Abby? Don't tell me to try to talk some sense into them. Who would listen to a 12-year-old kid? — ASHAMED IN INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR ASHAMED: You are not alone. There are more kids with your problem than you know. I recently read an excellent little book titled, "The Secret Everyone Knows." Its author, Cathleen Brooks, grew up with alcoholic parents and knows what a child must do in order to survive in that environment. She explains alcoholism for the disease it is and tells kids how to deal with drinking parents and where to get help in their own communities.

It's not only for children. A 40-year-old friend told me that her father had died 22 years ago of chronic alcoholism, and after reading this little book much of the anger, hostility and shame she had harbored over the years was greatly reduced.

It's available by writing to: Operation Cork, 8939 Villa La Jolla, San Diego, Calif. 92037. If you can send $1 to cover cost of mailing, please do, as it is a non-profit organization. If you don't have the dollar, the organization will send one free.

DEAR ABBY: A follow-up to Donna in the lost-and found department of Eastern Airlines in Seattle: It's a good idea to put I.D. tags on all your luggage, inside and out, but here's another suggestion:

Put your destination address instead of your home address in the I.D. holders. That way, should your luggage be lost, misdirected or delayed, when located it will be sent to where you are, not where you were! — REILLY, ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

DEAR REILLY: Smart move rather than depending on the luck o' the Irish.

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply, write to Abby, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Vet urges exercises for dogs

NEW YORK (AP) — Dogs need exercise as much as people do, asserts Dr. Joel Ehrenzweig, a veterinarian who believes that 75 percent of the problems he sees could be avoided with exercise and proper diet.

Ehrenzweig, who believes in fitness for himself as well as for his patients, is founder and president of the 400-member American Veterinary Runners Association. But when he is not running marathons, he keeps busy running two animal hospitals in New York.

Advocate of an exercise program for dogs, he suggests checking with your veterinarian first, then following these tips before embarking on the program:

—Make sure your dog is receiving a properly balanced diet for his stage in life.

—Set realistic goals. Don't expect your pet to go overnight from armchair lounger to potential canine champion. Build up slowly.

—Avoid extremes of temperature.

—Remember to warm up and cool down before and after each session of vigorous exercise.

—Never use food as an incentive or substitute for praise.

As fitness consultant for Cycle Dog Food, Ehrenzweig has developed a set of exercises for the company's Canine Fitness Program.

"They are all designed to get even the most sedentary pet into shape," he says. "They require no special equipment or training and most can be done in the home or back yard."

Ehrenzweig suggests these six easy exercises:

—Tug of War. One of the oldest games in the world, tug of war is a good way to get a lazy animal to limber up. Using an old towel, have the dog grasp one end in its teeth while you hold on to the other. Then pull. Like stretching in humans, this simple exercise will strengthen the neck, jaw, shoulders and legs, while creating improved muscle tone.

—Catch and Fetch. This is ideally played with a Frisbee, but any light object — a ball or a stick — will do. Toss the object as far as you can, then wait for the animal to retrieve it. This simple game burns up calories, builds up alertness, and provides a welcome opportunity for the pet to receive approval from his master every time the object is retrieved.

—Up the Down Staircase. Going up and down stairs is an ideal way to build cardiovascular strength. It's good for the leg muscles, too. Like "Catch and Fetch," this involves tossing an object which the animal then retrieves. Stand at the top of the stairs and gently toss a ball down. The dog runs to get the ball, then runs back up the stairs to return it to you. Repeat until the animal shows signs of fatigue.

—High Jump. Jumping is good for the legs and heart, and is an excellent way to build agility. Using a carton or overturned chair, encourage the dog to "jump the hurdle." As the animal grows more limber, raise the level of the obstacle and encourage the dog to reach new heights of strength and endurance.

—Jogging. Millions of Americans have taken up jogging. If you're one of them, don't run alone. Take your dog along. Dogs love to run, and jogging together is an easy, pleasant way for owner and pet to get into condition together. If you jog around the block, or anywhere outside your own backyard, use a leash. Never run with a dog in traffic. And always stop the minute you see signs of fatigue or hyperventilation.

—Long Walks. Walking is an excellent form of cardiovascular exercise. If you're not into jogging, you can still make tracks on a fitness program by substituting long, brisk walks for the usual up-to-the-corner-and-back routine. Aim for two miles a day, and use a pedometer to measure progress.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, August 4, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Academy Award-winning director John Huston ("The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," 1947) was born on this date. You may have to curtail your happy-go-lucky ways a bit if you want to get ahead in business this year. There is a greater emphasis on being practical now, and there will be little time to play. Buckle down to work, and you will be able to expand your sphere of influence. Short-term projects prove to be more successful than long-range plans. Steer clear of get-rich-quick schemes, however. They will only disappoint you! Romance is richly rewarding.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It may be difficult to be completely honest now, but it is the only way to set things straight. Avoid gambling in all areas of your life. Pressures will ease in a few days.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You should be feeling more optimistic now. Coworkers and family members will welcome the change. A financial settlement is a source of satisfaction. Romance takes over during evening hours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This is not a good day for handling legal matters. Do not mislead someone who believes in you. The emphasis is on facing reality. Indiscretion threatens romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Make allowances for other people's mistakes. An agreement may be broken, but this could work to your advantage. Thoughts of old times and missing loved ones bring on a mood of nostalgia.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Give free rein to your imagination today and then follow through on your ideas. Communicating with key people is vital to your success. The mail brings good news.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work behind the scenes and concentrate on routine matters. Sell your talents to the highest bidder. Mate or partner will be understanding. Overlook abrupt reactions from others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be wary of those individuals who like to argue, gossip or talk too much. Good work will be rewarded. Hobbies prove their worth. If traveling, double check directions, weather report.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Devote more attention to details. Show respect for other people's opinions, even if you do not agree with them. Children come up with delightful suggestions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You accomplish the most now by maintaining a low profile. Be content to let others lead the way for a while. You learn a lot from watching, listening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Things are likely to go from "good" to "very good" for you today! It is easy to form new alliances. Teamwork will increase productivity and relieve tensions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There is no need to be on the defensive. Adopt a cooperative attitude, but do not let others impose on you. Let lazy individuals know that you are not going to cover for them.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You should be in tune with others at place of employment today. Tackle those miscellaneous tasks you have been postponing. You are in a mood that inspires romance.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8 ♡AK10942 ◇A62 ♣KJ4
The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—While you have a good hand, your singleton spade is not necessarily an asset—indeed, it might be a liability, since it suggests the possibility of a misfit. Thus, we recommend that, for the moment, you proceed quietly. Bid two hearts—if partner passes, it's unlikely that you have missed game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q107 ♡A1054 ◇962 ♣873
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have a weak hand, and you should get out of the auction as quickly as possible once you have found a playable spot. Pass—North's rebid was not forcing, so there is no need to bid again. Don't give preference to two clubs — that raises the level unnecessarily.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠982 ♡KJ10 ◇K763 ♣874
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid is not forcing, but even though your hearts are much stronger than your spades, you should take a preference to two spades. As a general rule, you should presume that partner's first-bid suit is longer than his second, so you should return to his first-bid suit with equal length in his two suits, especially if you can do so without increasing the level of the contract.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A7 ♡J832 ◇AKQ1095 ♣9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Now that you have found a major-suit fit, there is no point to jump rebidding your diamond suit—that action would not be forcing and you could easily miss a superior heart contract. Jump to three hearts. While that is also not forcing, the knowledge that a good fit exists might encourage partner to stretch to game on many relatively weak hands.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1076 ♡K82 ◇J73 ♣92
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Now that partner has raised your suit, your hand revalues to 12 points, and your side's combined assets should be in the game range. To invite game by raising to three spades could place undue pressure on your partner, who might pass with many hands that would produce ten tricks. Bid four spades.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡AQ8 ◇KJ73 ♣10954
The bidding has proceeded:

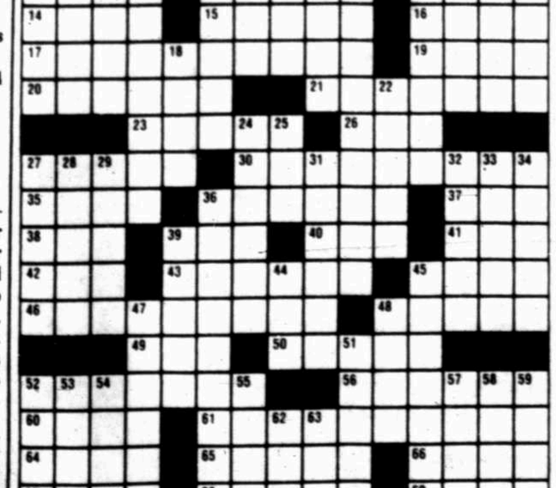

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. You started with a minimum opening bid, and nothing has happened to improve your hand. Partner's raise to two no trump shows about 11 points, so your side appears to be short of the assets required for game.

TV watchdog group announces plan to monitor topics on Donahue show

CHICAGO (AP) — A conservative TV watchdog group says it will begin monitoring the Phil Donahue show, claiming that most topics on the award-winning program viewed by millions of American housewives deal with "abnormal sex."

In announcing plans for monitoring the program, the National Federation for Decency said it would publish lists of companies that sponsor the hour-long "Donahue" shows dealing with sex and would encourage consumers to boycott products advertised on such programs.

"Never before in television's history have we had a sex activist broadcaster such as Phil Donahue," the group said in a news release issued Saturday.

Donahue and spokesmen for the popular daytime program, which is videotaped at the WGN-TV studios here and syndicated nationally by Multimedia Program Productions, Inc., could not be reached for comment.

"Approximately two out of three of his shows are sex shows, and most of those promote abnormal sex, which Mr. Donahue prefers to call 'sexual alternatives,'" the group said. "Such shows have a mind-warping effect on youth and adults."

"Donahue" has dealt with a number of topics about sexuality such as incest, birth control, abortion, rape and homosexuality in the 11 years it has been synidcated nationally.

The program — which has won a George Foster Peabody Award and nine Emmy Awards, including one this year for Outstanding Talk or Service Series — also has focused on non-sexual topics and interviews with celebrities.

Joyce Gorringe, a spokeswoman for the 4-year-old, Tupelo, Miss.-based federation, said other "pro-family" groups in the Chicago area would join the monitoring effort, which is intended to make sponsors aware of the sexual content of some of Donahue's programs.

"We find that some of the sponsors have not watched the Donahue show and are not aware of what's being put on," Mrs. Gorringe said. "What we really would like to show them is exactly what is being presented."

Asked if the advertisers were expected to exert pressure on Donahue to change his subject matter, Mrs. Gorringe said, "I think the sponsors will decide for themselves what they'll do."

The National Federation for Decency was started by the Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, who earlier this year also launched the Coalition for Better Television. The coalition has threatened a selective boycott of prime-time TV advertisers who sponsor shows with sex and violence, but so far it hasn't materialized.

Wildmon has said the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Moral Majority is a member of the coalition, the biggest of 300 affiliated groups nationwide.

Nevada rodeo truly a gay affair

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Many might consider the rodeo the last bastion of male macho.

But that wasn't true this weekend for 70 men and women, all homosexuals, who competed in the Sixth Annual Gay Rodeo in this glittering gambling town.

The rodeo included three days of bronc-riding, bulldogging and barrel racing, capped with a "Stand By Your Man" ball at the Sands Hotel Casino. Neither police nor participants reported any trouble beyond some mild harassment at the State Fairgrounds.

Randy Gray, a 28-year-old bartender in a Sacramento, Calif., gay bar, said he had been treated well at the casinos.

"They're finding out this rodeo is financially to their benefit," said Gray, who participated in the bronc-riding competition.

At least 10,000 people attended the rodeo, which ended Sunday.

No professionals competed, but some of the contestants also take part in other, "straight," amateur and semi-professional rodeos, said Phil Ragsdale, director of the sponsoring Comstock Gay Rodeo Association.

Wedding still London's prime tourist attraction

LONDON (AP) — Five days after Prince Charles married Lady Di, the royal wedding is still London's premier tourist attraction.

Tens of thousands stroll each day along the route of the wedding procession, looking at the decorations that still adorn store windows and taking pictures of each other beneath the flowers and banners still hanging from lampposts.

The strollers snarled up traffic worse than usual Sunday along Fleet Street and the Strand.

"It's absolutely miserable," said one cabbie stopped by the throng crossing in front of his taxi.

Tourists are filing through St. Paul's Cathedral, where Charles and Diana exchanged their vows on Wednesday, at the rate of 30,000 a day. They stand patiently in a line two and three across, stretching two-thirds of the way around Sir Christopher Wren's massive edifice, sometimes in pouring rain.

"We are overwhelmed," said the registrar of St. Paul's, Cmdr. Charles Shears. "It's really taken us by surprise. Between 4 p.m. on Wednesday and Saturday afternoon, we've had at least 100,000 visitors."

The number is far more than the cathedral staff can handle. The whispering gallery and the crypt are closed. The stock of souvenir pamphlets is nearly depleted.

For the first three days after the wedding, the register that the royal couple signed was on display. Sightseers could look at it for five seconds for 55 cents.

It was moved to St. James's Palace, and the bride's bouquet is at Westminster Cathedral.

The particular sections of Art. 852a, involved are 2.01 through 2.09 and 11.11. The particular rules involved are 056.01.00.001 through .013. Such rules are on file with the Secretary of State, Texas Register Division, or may be seen at the Department's offices.

The applicants for charter assert that: 1) the prerequisites, where applicable, set forth in Sections 2.02 through 2.06 of the "Texas Savings and Loan Act", have been met; 2) the character, responsibility and general fitness of the persons named in the Articles of Incorporation are such as to command confidence and warrant belief that the business of the proposed association will be honestly and efficiently conducted and that the proposed association will have qualified full-time management; 3) there is a public need for the proposed association and the volume of business in the community in which the proposed association will conduct its business is such as to indicate a profitable operation; and 4) the operation of the proposed association will not unduly harm any existing association.

Anyone desiring to oppose this application may do so by appearing at the scheduled hearing; however, it is requested that if you plan to oppose the application, you so notify the Commissioner at P.O. Box 1089, Austin, Texas 78767. ISSUED in Austin, Texas the 24th day of July, 1981.

L. Alvis Vandygriff, Commissioner

Gibson, Mize elected to Hall of Fame

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — For Bob Gibson, the trip to Cooperstown was as short as possible.

For Johnny Mize, it was long and agonizing.

Gibson and Mize, along with Negro League pioneer Rube Foster, were inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame Sunday. Gibson, 45, returned to the spotlight only five years after his retirement. He is only the 11th man elected to baseball's shrine in his first year of eligibility.

MIZE, MEANWHILE, has been retired for 28 years and eligible for the Hall for 23. But he was bypassed 20 times by the Baseball Writers' Association of America and twice by the Veterans Committee before making it this year.

"I certainly am proud to be here," said Gibson, who amassed 251 wins, 56 shutouts and 3,117 strikeouts in his outstanding 17-year careef. He is the only pitcher to win the seventh game of a World Series twice and had seven consecutive Series victories in a 7-2 postseason record.

"I've devoted my life to baseball."

Never one to do things at half-speed, Gibson was the most intimidating pitcher in the game for much of the 1960s. He was so dominant in 1968 — 22-9, 13 shutouts, 268 strikeoqts and a phenomenal 1.12 earned run average — that he won the first of his two Cy Young awards and the National League's Most Valuable Player honor.

Following that season, which Gibson capped with a record 17-strikeout performance in Game 1 of the World Series against Detroit, baseball lowered the pitching mound to give batters a better chance to hit against the likes of Gibson.

"A WRITER asked me how I'd like to be remembered," said Gibson, now a coach with the New York Mets. "I think as a person who was a competitor and gave 100 percent every time I went out on the field. I might not have been so good, but I gave it my all."

Gibson nearly gave his all to another sport after starring in basketball and baseball at Creighton University.

"I was looking for a $35,000 bonus to sign," he recalled. "Bill Bergesch, who's with the (New York) Yankees now but was scouting for St. Louis, was the only one to tell me the truth. He said a lot of scouts were saying the closest I'd get to $35,000 was $3,000.

"I said I liked basketball better anyway and wouldn't play baseball.

"But that's the reason I signed with St. Louis ... honesty."

Mize would have had an honest beef with the selectors about being overlooked despite some excellent career statitics. He hit 359 homers, including a National League record for left-handed hitters of 51 in 1947 with the New York Giants. He won or tied for the NL home run title four times, captured the RBI crown three times and the batting title once.

And he's the only major leaguer to have hit three homers or more in a game twice in a season in two different years.

But Mize, 58, betrayed no bitterness at the ceremonies.

"SOMEBODY SAID to me the other day that getting in by the Veterans Committee was going in the back door," said Mize, known as "Big Cat" when he was belting the ball for the Cardinals, Giants and Yankees from 1936-53. "I said, 'no. Look at who is on the committee: managers, general managers, players. Who do you want to pick you? They're your peers.' In Hollywood, when your peers elect you, you receive an Oscar."

Mize said he learned how to hit while in high school and never forgot his lessons.

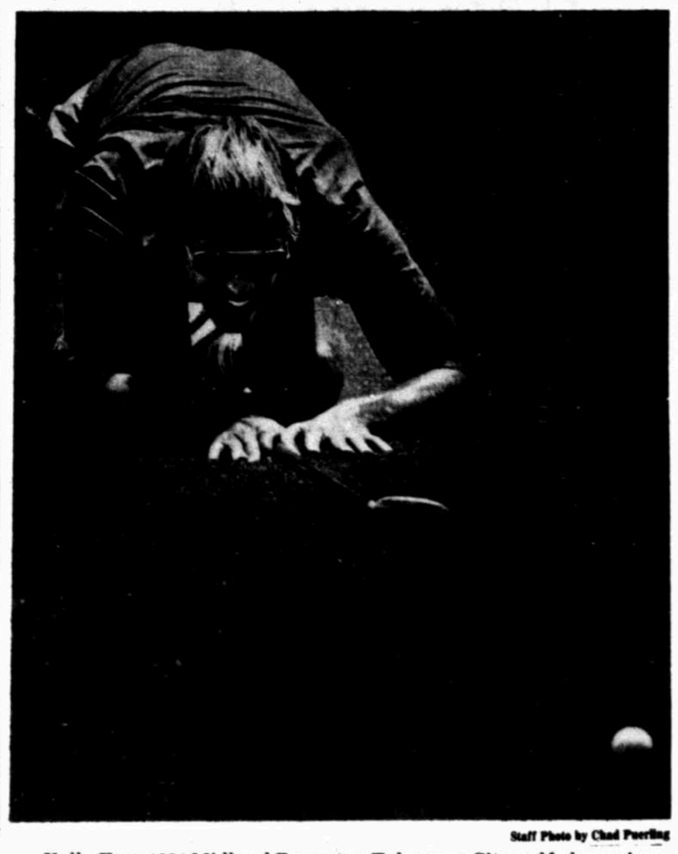

"My first game as a pro, in Greensboro, N.C., I got a hit the first time up and fell over first base because I was watching the ball," he said. "I watched it ever since.

"I'd like to thank those people who stuck with me and worked so hard to get me in," he said.

Foster, who died in 1930, was represented by his son Earl. One of the pioneers of the Negro leagues, he was a pitcher from 1897, when he toured as a 17-year-old with the Waco (Texas) Yellow Jackets, until 1915.

In 1911, Foster formed the Chicago American Giants and embarked on a career as an owner and manager. And, in 1920, he founded the Negro National League.

Also honored at the ceremonies were Ernie Harwell, who received the Ford C. Frick Award for excellence in baseball broadcasting, and sports writers Milton Richman of United Press International and Joe Reichler, formerly of The Associated Press, who received the J.G. Taylor Spink Award for their contributions as baseball reporters.

Kelly Eng, 1981 Midland Reporter-Telegram City golf champion takes a bird's eyeview of a crucial punt during Sunday's final round. Eng defeated Boogie Childers in a three-hole sudden death playoff for the crown.

Baseball schedule looks very familiar

By The Associated Press

If the American League schedule for the opening of baseball's second 1981 season looks strikingly familiar, it should. It also was the opening schedule for baseball's first 1981 season last April, when a strike seemed unthinkable.

On Monday, Aug.10, one day after major league action resumes with the All-Star Game at Cleveland, it will be Chicago at Boston, Kansas City at Baltimore, Milwaukee at Cleveland, Texas at New York, Toronto at Detroit, Oakland at Minnesota, and California at Seattle in the American League.

SEVENTEEN WEEKS ago, it was Chicago at Boston, Kansas City at Baltimore, Milwaukee at Cleveland, Texas at New York, Toronto at Detroit, Oakland at Minnesota, and California at Seattle.

The only difference between then and now is that, in that second week in April, everybody started even, with nothing but zeroes in the won-lost columns — and that may wind up being the same, too.

At the moment, New York leads Baltimore by two games in the East Division, with Milwaukee three games back, Detroit 3½ off the pace, Boston four games out and sixth-place Cleveland only five games behind.

In the AL West, it's pretty much a four-team race, with Oakland in first, Texas 1½ games back, Chicago 2½ off the pace and California six games out.

But the major league owners (particularly the AL owners) appear inclined to wipe the slates clean and start everybody off even again, creating an entirely new season for the remaining eight weeks of what was supposed to be a 26-week season.

IN A CBS telephone survey conducted Sunday, spokesmen for 16 of the 26 teams favor adopting a split season, with four clubs opposed and six undecided.

A simple majority is needed in the American League to go to the split season, while a three-quarters vote is needed in the National League. If one league favors it and the other is opposed, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn may cast the deciding vote.

In the National League, Cincinnati and Montreal were opposed to the split season, Philadelphia and St. Louis were undecided and the other eight teams were in favor. In the AL Chicago and Baltimore were opposed, Texas, Milwaukee, Detroit and Cleveland undecided and the rest in favor.

The owners are to meet Tuesday in Chicago to decide whether to approve the agreement announced last Friday. The 28 player representatives (one from each team and one representing each league) met in Chicago Saturday and voted unanimously to recommend that the 650 major leaguers give their approval. That also will be decided this week.

Baseball is facing what could be a monumental task, namely winning back its fans.

One way of winning them back would be to create pennant races that weren't there before — i.e., get rid of that 20-30 record and 12-game deficit under which the defending AL champions, the Kansas City Royals, were laboring when baseball ground to a halt June 12.

AND IF you're a member of the Toronto Blue Jays, would you rather be 16-42, 19 games out of first place and 14 behind the Indians (where they are now) or 0-0 and tied with everyone else?

In the National League, the "opening day" schedule for next Monday isn't a carbon copy of the one in April — but it's close.

The New York Mets will be visiting the Chicago Cubs, just as they did when their seasons opened April 9. For the moment, though, they're the two worst clubs in the league, the Mets at 17-34 and 15 games out of first place in the East and the Cubs at 15-37 and 17½ out.

What better present to give the new owners of the Cubs, the Chicago Tribune (assuming the sale by the Wrigley family is approved this week), than a team tied for first place in the division? That's what Chicago will be if the major league owners go for the split-season idea, with its mini-playoffs to determine the division winners.

Also in the NL next Monday night, the Pittsburgh Pirates will be in Montreal, just as they were April 9. And the Philadelphia Phillies, who opened the 1981 season with a one-game visit to Cincinnati April 8 before heading home to face St.Louis, will be home against the Cardinals in this opener. The NL's three other openers, all different from the first ones, are Cincinnati at Los Angeles, Atlanta at San Diego and Houston at San Francisco.

ASSUMING THE owners choose to start everything over, Philadelphia's 1½-game lead over the Cardinals in the East (with Montreal four back and Pittsburgh 5½ out) will be washed away, as will Los Angeles' one-half game edge over Cincinnati in the West.

The strike eventually will wipe out 712 regular-season games through next Sunday.

Cincinnati, along with a number of other teams, will be playing a few exhibition games in the days leading up to the All-Star Game at Cleveland. The Reds are scheduled to visit the California Angels Friday and Saturday. The A's have two games tentatively set up across the bay in San Francisco Thursday and Friday. Some teams are charging a few dollars for the games, others are admitting fans free of charge.

Bogey buries Boogie; Eng eeks out victory

Kelly Eng, a former Midland College All-Conference and All-Regional golfer, survived a sudden death play-off to win the Midland Reporter-Telegram Men's City Championship at Hogan Park Sunday.

Eng was two strokes behind at 75 at the end of Saturday's first round, but upped his game to shoot a 71, giving him a total score of 146 and a tie with first round leader Boogie Childers.

"I didn't play good the first day. I just didn't make the putts," Eng explained. "The second day I drove the ball better, I chipped better and made a few putts."

TO BREAK the deadlock, the two golfers went head-to head in what turned out to be a three-hole playoff.

"It was up for grabs," said the eventual champion. "On the very first hole he (Childers) almost made a birdie. He almost put an end to it at the crack of the bat."

Childers, who led Saturday's opening round with a 73 and followed it Sunday with another 73, knew the play-off against Eng would be tough. "He hits his driver so well. We started on a par 3 hole. I figured that was where I could get him."

But it was not to be. "I just lipped a putt out or I would have got him," the second place finisher remembered.

A bogey on the third hold of the play put an end to Childers' championship hopes.

Childers was not remorse at losing. "I played as good as I can. Kelly just played super."

NOTING THAT Eng was the low qualifier for the U.S. Open qualifying tournament, he added, "It was great for me just to be there. I figured it would take par to win it (the tournament)."

Eng, who picked up his first golf club when he was 14, has also won the Andrews tournament. In a couple of weeks he plans to qualify for the U.S. Amateur Tournament.

For his efforts in the Reporter Telegram, Eng won a trophy as well as a gift certificate for $80.

Third place in the championship flight went to Ken Halbert with a total score of 147. Charles Roberts took fourth place, also with 147.

IN LOW net play in the championship flight, the top finishers were David Teichmann with 142, Fred Nobles with 144 and Rocky Valdez with 151.

The first flight winner was Charles Dishman with a score of 147. Second place went to J. Madrid with 151 while Leonard Hernandez took third with 152.

J. Workman won low net honors in the flight with 141. Blackie Coffman's 141 put him in second place. Third place honors went to Rick Oglenski with 142.

L.G. Ladaga topped the second flight golfers with a total score of 151. Orlando Montanez took second with 156 while David Crow's 156 placed him in third. Carson Munzel was fourth with 157.

Unheralded Ricardos grabs state title

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

An unheralded San Angelo Ricardos completed an undefeated, Cinderella-like journey through the 43-team Texas State Class "A" Women's Slow-Pitch Tournament by defeating the defending state champion Victoria Ruff-Neks, 4-0, Sunday at Hogan Park to capture the state title.

RICARDOS AND the Ruff-Necks are eligible to play in the national slow-pitch tournament in Seattle over Labor Day weekend.

Ricardo manager Mike Groves said, "We were only a .500 team during the season but the ladies really get ready to play for tournaments."

Alcorn, who finished fourth in the national tournament last year after winning the state title, were never able to solve the pitching of Kathy Ray in the championship game. Ray held the hard-hitting Ruff-Necks to six harmless singles as she shutout the Ruff-Necks for the second time in the tournament. When the Ruff-Necks did hit the ball, the sticky-fingered Ricardo defense was there to snuff out any potential rallies.

VICTORIA MOUNTED a threat in the opening frame with two out, Teresa Burrhus and Mary Murray singled to put runners at first and second but Annis Drozd flew out to center to end the threat.

The Ruff-Necks came right back in the second with a strong bid to dent the scoreboard. With out out, Linda Schoerfeld and Madlen Chorpula had back to back singles off Ricardo hurler Kathy Ray to put runners at the corners. Ray responded by getting Rae Cohen and Lisa Anderson on short fly balls to rover.

After the first two threats, Alcorn never managed to get more than one runner on base in one inning against Ray. Three times, Ricardos' outfielders made excellent catches to turn potential hits into harmless outs to help perserve the shutout.

RICARDOS JUMPED on Victoria pitcher Cohen for a run in the bottom of the opening inning. Becky Martin singled and with two outs Patti Wood singled to drive in the run. Charlette Dehrel followed with another hit but Gail STillwell grounded out to end the inning.

For the next four innings, it was a pitching duel. In the fifth, Ricardos scored its second run when Debbie Young singled and Martin chased her home with an RBI double.

In the sixth inning, Ricardos added two insurance runs. With one out, Wood singled and Dehrel followed with a booming triple into right-center. Dehrel scored on Stillwell's sacrifice fly to rover.

Ricardos had advance to the championship game by nipping the Ruff-Necks, 1-0, in nine innings in the semifinals.

Victoria shook off the defeat to hammer out 21 hits in a 9-1 romp over Odessa Chickree in a loser's bracket game to move back into the title tilt.

AGAINST CHICKREE, the Ruff-Necks pushed four runs across in the first and added three more in the sixth inning as they won easily.

The third place Odessa club scored its single run in the bottom of the seventh when Susan Sorley singled and came home on a single by Desni Termin.

Rounding out the top eight teams, ones that were awarded team trophies, were in order: Bailey Bridges of Abilene, Neff Land & Cattle of Crane, Abilene Action Drilling, Black Angels of Kountze, and Johnny O's of Stephenville.

Claydesta and Ernie's Auto of Midland finished in the top 12 for the best showing of the 13 Tall City entries.

At trophy time, Ricardos continued to show their heels to the rest of the field. San Angleo's Martin, who led the tournament with 15 hits and fielded flawlessly, was chosen as the Most Valuable Player and joined teammates Patty Woods, Kim Varner and Cathy Wadley on the 12-woman all-tournament team.

THREE PLAYERS from Alcorn, Rae Cohen, Lisa Evans and Amy Alkek, made the elite squad along with Elaine West and Desni Termin of Chickree; Kay Grohman and Laurie Powders of Bailey Bridges; Vickie Caldwell of Neff Land and Cattle and Daria Smith of Action Drilling.

Oosterhuis emerges as survivor in Canada golf

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — With the other would-be challengers falling back in frustration and disarray, Peter Oosterhuis ended eight years of golfing frustration Sunday with a one-stroke victory in the 72nd Canadian Open Championship.

Oosterhuis, a transplanted Englishman who came to the American PGA Tour with gaudy international credentials, won the title when Mark Hayes took a double bogey on the 17th hole and Jack Nicklaus left critical putts short on three of the last five holes.

THE RUDDY cheeked, 6-foot-5 Oosterhuis, 33, struggled and scrambled to a one-under-par 70 and claimed his first victory since joining the American PGA Tour in 1974. He finished with a 280 total, four shots under par on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Nicklaus, who designed the course as a permanent home for this national championship, former champion Bruce Lietzke and Andy North tied for second at 281. North, a former U.S. Open champion who has finished second in two consecutive tournaments, and Lietzke each had a 70.

Hayes, who had a share of the top spot when he stood on the 17th tee, finished with a 74 and was tied at 282, two strokes back, with U.S. Open champion David Graham of Australia, who had a closing 70.

Leonard Thompson, the third-round leader, slipped to a 76 and was tied a 283 with Tom Kite and Bob Eastwood. Eastwood closed with a 67. Kite, who now has been seventh or better in 10 of his past 11 starts, carded a 74.

The victory was worth $76,500 in Canadian funds to Oosterhuis.

PLAYING SOME 20 minutes in front of the other challengers, Oosterhuis had the lead alone at five under par, but bogeyed the 16th hole, dropping back into a tie with Hayes.

And Nicklaus, playing steadily while others backed off, began to make his presence felt.

Caponi wins trouble plagued Boston Five

BOSTON (AP) — Donna Caponi, a Ladies Professional Golfers Association superstar by day and a disco queen by night, tripped the light fantastic to the bank again Sunday, but she had better watch her step.

LPGA officials are going by the rule book, playing no favorites. And that includes Caponi in her chase to become a $1 million winner on the tour in her 16th season at the age of 36.

HOWEVER, CAPONI, also bidding for LPGA "Player of the Year" honors for the first time, was virtually overshadowed by controversy in the four-day tournament, which drew a crowd of 63,090 for the tour's second stop here.

The turmoil started in the second round Friday when rookie pro Deanie Wood sank her tee shot for an ace on the 16th hole. A spectator's guide inadvertently said an ace on the hole was worth a new car. It should have been listed for the sixth hole.

The sponsoring Boston Five Cents Savings Bank admitted the error and settled for a $3,500 cash award to Wood. The Oklahoma City resident gladly accepted "my biggest check of my career." She went on to earn $322.50 with a 302 score in the tournament.

But trouble really bubbled during the final two rounds. Oregon's Kathy Young, winless in three years on the tour but tied for the halfway lead, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard after the third round Saturday. That was the same day that LPGA Hall of Famer Carol Mann was penalized two strokes for slow play.

Officials really lowered the boom Sunday. Whitworth, who became the first LPGA player to win $1 million in official prize money with a third-place finish in the U.S. Open a week ago, was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard. She signed a card that showed she had a 4 on the ninth hole when she actually shot a 5.

CAPONI LED Jan Stephenson by three strokes and JoAnne Carner by six as they teed off together for the last round. Caponi took bogeys on two of her first three holes and Stephenson pulled into a tie with a birdie on the third green.

Caponi and Stephenson got down in par on the fourth hole. Then controversy struck again. As the three players approached the next tee, PGA official Ken Sojka warned them they were playing too slowly.

"He said we were out of position and we had better hurry," Stephenson said. "I think it was very poor timing. It really upset me."

Stephenson was so upset she took a bogey 6 on the fifth hole and Caponi went in front to stay with a birdie 4. Stephenson followed with a triple bogey 6 on the hole after that.

"It's our responsibility to let a group know when they're playing too slow," Sojka said. "They were playing 21 minutes behind.

Champions record wire to wire win

The foursome of Randy Gieselman, Steve Whiteside, Steve Cromwell and Ernie Swart fired a best ball par 61 Sunday for a 184 total to win the championship flight play of the Ranchland Hills Country Club's annual Blowout golf tournament. For the winning team, it was a wire-to-wire triumph built on an opening 58 and followed up with a 65 and Sunday's finishing 61.

FINISHING SECOND, one shot back, was the team of Wayne Royce, C.E. Boyd, Craig Campbell and Jamie Winkel.

In the first flight, the team of Ken Seweel, Ted Ferguson, Dr. Dean Strack and Graham Mackey shot a final round 62 to break a three-way tie and claim the title. Two teams — Bill Hill, Jeff Hill, Kyle Rowland, Monty Watson; and Wayne Youngs, Mike Mullins, David Williams and Mike Williams ended the three-day tournament tied for second at 192. Joel Mays, Mike Mahan, Tommy Walker and Richard White settled for third with a 194 total.

Dr. Al Langford and his team of Allday, Hightower and Griffin came from four strokes behind to nab the title in the second flight. The Lanford foursome fired a final round 63 to score the win over two teams — Buck Watkins, Mark Woodfin, Ken Stockton, Mark Martin; and Webster, Webster, Poage and Hall.

IN THE third flight, the team of Haney Atyia, Freid Atyia, Rick Paterson and Bob Hellinghausen stretch a one-stroke second round lead into a final three stroke advantage over teams captained by Larry Freeman and Heith.

A solid 68 carded by Gene McDaniel, Buddy Redden, John Carey and Franklin gave the foursome a four-stroke win in the fourth flight. Beard, Michell, Wilson and Gibson finished at 204 for second while Stolz, Stoltz, Brown and Daniel shot a three-round 206 total for third.

The fifth flight title went to the team captained by Cherokee Sloan. Sloan's team fired a 69 to end the tournament with a 207 total and a three-stroke win over Toby McWilliams' foursome.

IN THE sixth flight, Frank Estep, Tom Newman, Don Pepper and John Casey recorded a 69 as they stretch their four-stroke, second-round lead into a final six stroke win over two teams.

Ralph Huggins's team broke a three-team logjam in the seventh flight with a final round 68 to take home the crown. Mike White's crew ended the three-day shootout with a 218 total, two strokes off the winning pace.

Milwaukee race washed out

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Rain fell on Milwaukee Sunday, but the talk was about fire.

A day-long rain forced postponement of the A.B. Dick Tony Bettenhausen Classic Indy car race scheduled Sunday at Wisconsin State Fairgrounds Park. The race, a 200-mile event on Milwaukee's one-mile track, was rescheduled for Saturday, Sept. 5.

It was the second straight Indy car event hampered by a rainout. The Michigan 500 was washed away on its scheduled date and run six days later.

While the raindrops fell, there was a lot of talk about that Michigan race in which a fire in the pits halted the cars for 97 minutes. While the fire raged, 14 persons suffered injuries — a variety of burns, cuts, bruises and inhalation of smoke and fire-fighting chemical.

However, thanks to a combination of preparation, an enormous display of courage on the part of firemen and pit crewmen, and a lot of luck, only one person wound up in the hospital.

Graig Nelson, a crewman for driver Herm Johnson, in whose pit the fire started, remains in the burn unit at the University of Michigan Hospital at Ann Arbor, recovering from first- and second-degree burns on the feet. His injuries are not considered serious.

The talk at Milwaukee also turned to the rash of pit fires that have hit Indy car racing this season, and what to do about them.

Each one of those fires began when fuel leaked or was splashed while a car was being refueled.

"It seems to me that we've got to improve the couplings so that the instant the hose comes out of the tank, not one drop of fuel is spilled," noted Johnny Rutherford, the defending national champion.

Rutherford, who won the pole position at Milwaukee with a track record 135.890 mph lap, said he feels officials should do a better job of inspecting fueling rigs hoses and fittings before the start of each race.

"I agree that we need better spring-loaded valves that automatically close off the fuel tanks. But we also need to set standards for officials who inspect each fueling rig, and we ought to be very strict about them."

Johnson, whose car also burst into flame during a pit stop in the June race at Milwaukee, was burned slightly both in that race incident and at Michigan.

Those experiences prompted him to design a safety valve for the refueling system of his Lightning-Cosworth car.

"I bought a brand new nozzle and built this check valve system in about a day and a half," the Eau Claire, Wis., driver explained. "If it ever sticks, it's not going to spill.

"You can shut it off before you take it out of the car. We've tested it and it's really slick. I got some help from Jeff White of Economy Oil. He helped me run down all the pieces and figure out what was the best way to do it.

"I was scared after the one (pit fire) here at Milwaukee," Johnson added. "Safety was one of our prime interests. We've never had any problems with the fuel nozzle, ever. I'm getting awful tired of fires."

Three 'cats, an outpost planned

Permian Basin area producders have announced plans to expand a gas field, and take chances on three wildcats.

HOWARD WILDCAT

Amerada Hess Corp., Tulsa, will try to catch a wildcat on the way down to Red Draw production, with the No. 1 Flanagan, 3 miles southeast of Big Spring. Red Draw Mississipian is found at 9,275, and Red Draw Fusselman at 9,525. They will wildcat above 9,000 feet.

The drillsite is 1 1/4 miles north-northeast of the dry hole, Stanolind No. 1-D TXL, which was drilled to a total depth of 10,013 feet, and plugged back to 6,620, then abandoned April 29, 1952. Tops in the hole where; Spraberry, 5,455; Mississipian, 9,355; Fusselman, 9,635; Montoya, 9,770; and Ellenburger, 9,805.

The project spots 1,980 feet from the north, and 467 feet from the east line of section 14, block 32 T&PRR survey.

GLASSCOCK VENTURE

Bandera Energy Co., Midland, will drill the No. 1-46 Jalonick as a 9,900-foot wildcat, 11 miles northeast of Garden City. They previously reported the project as a field well in the Clyde Reynolds (Wolfcamp) area.

The drillsite is 5/8 mile west-northwest of the producer, Adobe No. 1 Jalonick, drilled to 9,818 feet, and plugged back to 8,565.

LOVING OUTPOST

Mobil Producing of Texas & New Mexico, Houston, will attempt to add a hole to the three-well Slash Ranch Field, when they drill the 22,000-foot No. 2 W.D. Johnson, Sec. 40, 6 miles northeast of Mentone. Fusselman and Ellenburger gas production is the goal.

The drillsite is 2 miles west of the C&K Petroleum No. 1 Christopher, an Ellenburger Discovery well, total depth 21,650 feet, completed March 30, 1975. It's at the east end of the small Slash Ranch Field.

The location is 1,320 feet from the north and west lines of section 40, block 53, T&PRR survey.

RUNNELS EXPLORER

EDCO, Dallas, and Runnels County Drilling Program, Midland, will spud-in August 10, on the 4,850-foot wildcat No. 1 J.P. Ash, 6 miles northeast of Bronte.

The man who called this one in, says, "It's wild as hell." The oil staff can't find it on a map, so we will have to take his word for it.

The project is spotted 467 feet from the north and west lines of the J.P. Ash survey, along the Coke-Runnels county line.

Synfuel project — What seemed to be energy crisis answer scrapped

By SANDRA EVANS TEELEY
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When President Carter was searching for ways to solve America's energy problems, one project that appeared to have almost utopian potential was the Solvent Refined Coal II project, designed to turn the country's abundant sources of coal into a clean-burning liquid fuel.

After several years of preliminary work, however, the government's most ambitious synfuels project was killed earlier this month by the Reagan administration for budgetary reasons.

But Department of Energy officials as well as industry and Hill sources say the role of Gulf Oil Co., the government's private industry partner, was a contributing factor in the demise of the project — which was scrapped before ground was ever broken.

Sources involved in the project point to cost overruns, schedule delays and lax procurement practices, which they claim were abetted by indifference and a lack of planning by Gulf.

THE ENERGY DEPARTMENT, responsible for overseeing the project, also has been criticized for not preventing more of these problems.

The most recent allegation to come to light involves the questionable awarding of a major subcontract for a design review by Gulf's subsidiary, Pittsburgh & Midway Coal, to Badger Energy Inc.

Industry and government officials say the subcontract award, made in late 1979, was given to Badger despite the preference of three out of four members of a subcontract selection board for another firm.

These sources allege that one board member had a bias against a Badger competitor — Stone & Webster Inc. — that Gulf was aware of but failed to reveal in apparent conflict with federal procurement policy.

Gulf Oil has denied any wrongdoing in connection with the Badger contract. None of the company officials named in the allegations involving the Badger contract would consent to interviews with The Washington Post. Instead, Gulf issued a written statement, in which it said that "no impropriety existed" in the subcontract selection, that no conflict of interest existed among members of the selection board and that they were not aware of any allegations of such a conflict.

The estimated cost of completing the Badger subcontract has more than doubled in the 18 months since the $6.6 million award was made. Cost estimates now range between $13 million and $14 million. DOE officials said last December's deadline for design review passed with about 70 percent of the work still undone. Work is going to stop on the subcontract because the project has been killed, but DOE estimated Badger already had run up $8.5 million in charges through June.

Even that figure may be about to increase by another $1 million. Last week Badger told the Energy Department it would charge $9.5 million for the subcontract work.

THE ADDITIONAL $1 MILLION is related to another allegation about Gulf's handling of the subcontract: former contract officers who worked for Gulf and were responsible for the subcontract say it was negotiated in such a way that it was likely to result in cost overruns and delays that would cost the government millions of dollars.

The contract officers said they brought these problems to the attention of Gulf officials at the time of the negotiations, but that Gulf didn't follow their advice.

A close look at the Badger subcontract, pieced together from government documents, internal company memos and dozens of interviews, reveals a number of controversial incidents involved in the subcontract award.

Before the subcontract was let out for competitive bid, sources said, Gulf executive S.A. Zagnoli, who as contract selection officer would choose the subcontractor with the advice of the selection board, had indicated a preference for Badger. Sources said Zagnoli sought a "sole-source" contract for Badger, but DOE officials turned down the request and insisted on competitive bidding.

A SUBCONTRACT SELECTION board comprising four Gulf executives was formed to make a recommendation to Zagnoli on which of four bidders to choose. While the board was deliberating, however, the participation of one of the four selection board members was questioned by an executive with one of the bidding firms.

That board member, Gulf executive Richard A. Flinn, previously had been assigned to a joint project between Gulf and one of the bidders, Stone& Webster, and S&W feared the experience had prejudiced Flinn against that company, according to both Gulf and S&W executives.

Stone & Webster Vice President A.T. Cerniglia confirmed in an interview that he called Gulf Vice President Don Lessig, one of the board members, to complain of Flinn's participation on the board. Cerniglia said S&W believed there was a conflict of interest because, on the previous project, S&W executives had refused to deal with Flinn because they didn't agree with the job he was doing.

Cerniglia says Lessig "assured me that (the alleged conflict) would not interfere with sound business judgments."

Gulf has denied that contract selection officer Zagnoli or any of the board members was aware of any allegations of Flinn's possible bias.

But one of the four board members says he and the others were aware of the allegations. Richard L. Yale, then the company's director of contracts and a member of the selection board, says Lessig called him about the problem after Cerniglia's call.

Contract director Yale and George Paulson, the contract lawyer on the project, say they told Gulf executive Zagnoli and other selection board members that, in their view, it would be a violation of federal procurement policy to award the subcontract when there was an allegation of conflict on the part of a board member. They said their advice was not followed.

Federal energy and procurement officials agree that awarding a competitive subcontract when an official influencing the award has an undisclosed conflict of interest — one that may prevent an impartial judgment — is contrary to federal procurement policy and normal procurement practice. These officials believe that Gulf's alleged conduct is contrary to such policy and practice but is not illegal.

INDUSTRY AND DOE officials say the usual procedure would be for the contractor to report to DOE a conflict-of-interest allegation, even if the alleged conflict does not involve a financial stake in the contract award. The Energy Department then would resolve any conflict it found — by disqualifying the individual with the conflict, invalidating the bidding altogether or making an exception.

Gulf denies the existence of a conflict in its written response to The Post: "We unequivocally deny that there was a conflict of interest ... . Dr. Flinn was not prejudiced toward or against Stone & Webster when he served on the selection board."

In any event, when a vote on the bidders was taken by the selection board, three of the four chose S&W; only Flinn favored Badger, according to contract officers Yale and Paulson.

Conoco bidding enters crucial week

By JAMES PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As three bidders entered what could be the last lap in the multibillion-dollar race for the ninth-largest U.S. oil company, Seagram Co. Ltd. said Sunday it has received tenders for about 18 percent of Conoco Inc. shares.

Seagram, Du Pont Co. and Mobil Corp. all are vying for control of Conoco, with Du Pont, the nation's largest chemical company, appearing to hold the advantage.

Du Pont has been tendered more than 50 percent of Conoco's shares. Conoco's board favors the merger, and Du Pont received a major boost Friday when the Justice Department granted it tentative antitrust clearance.

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney General William French Smith defended the department's policy on mergers.

Some observers attribute the current merger activity in part to Smith's comment earlier this year that "bigness doesn't necessarily mean badness," and to indications that the Reagan Administration was taking a more lenient stand on possible antitrust violations by merging companies.

Appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" Sunday, Smith said, "In those areas that go to the heart of antitrust activities, mainly price-fixing or market division or bid-rigging, this administration is going to be very vigorous in enforcing the law in those areas."

But he also said mergers should not be viewed as bad in themselves. "Mergers are an important part of a healthy economic system," he said.

Seagram, the giant Canadian distiller, which is making its bid through its Joseph E. Seagram & Sons Inc. unit, said Sunday that it had received irrevocable tenders for slightly more than 15.5 million Conoco shares, or about 18 percent of Conoco's stock, as of midnight EDT Saturday. It said that it was buying the tendered stock on a first-come, first-serve basis, and that its offer ends at midnight EDT Wednesday unless extended.

Mobil, the nation's second-largest oil concern, had about 2 percent of the stock at its last report.

The three bids for Conoco, based in Stamford, Conn., include:

—Du Pont, offering $95 a share in cash for 45 percent of the shares and 1.7 Du Pont shares — now worth about $76 — for each of the remaining shares, for a total value of about $7.3 billion.

—Seagram, $92 a share in cash for 51 percent of the shares, or a total of $4.1 billion.

—Mobil, $105 a share in cash for 51 percent of the stock and securities worth $85 each for the remaining shares, or a total of $8.2 billion.

Du Pont had reserved the right not to buy shares unless 51 percent were offered, but said Friday that its board would consider cutting that figure to 41 percent. If it does start buying shares on Wednesday, it could hold a controlling interest by the end of the week.

Seagram had planned to start buying Conoco shares tendered to it at midnight EDT Friday. But it had to postpone the effort for 13 hours, until it was able to overturn a temporary restraining order in North Carolina.

The order, one of several sought by Conoco to bar Seagram from buying its shares, was initially issued on grounds that the merger might violate state liquor laws because some North Carolina Conoco dealers sell alcohol.

In a statement issued Sunday, Seagram called Conoco's court actions a "flagrant violation of all standards of fair play and respect for the legal process. ... specifically designed to frustrate Conoco shareholders in their efforts to make a reasoned choice ..."

Seagram also said it was advised that Conoco would seek a similar restraining order in Alabama on Monday.

Conoco officials could not be reached Sunday for comment.

Mobil, meanwhile, said its board would consider "further action" this week after it was dealt a blow by the Justice Department, which said it still had questions about the "competitive implications" of Mobil's offer.

Watt attends Republican fund raiser in Virginia's booming coal country

By GLENN FRANKEL
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

GRUNDY, Va. — The three helicopters touched down one at a time at the private heliport, depositing their passengers — including Interior Secretary James G. Watt, Gov. John N. Dalton and the man who hopes to succeed him, J. Marshall Coleman — for a fund-raiser in this town of 2,500 in Virginia's booming coal country.

Over cocktails and seafood hors d'oeuvres, about 90 coal company officials and their wives listened to Watt, the Reagan administration's controversial point man in its effort to relax strip mining and mine safety regulations, extol "the new federalism" and promise a close "working relationship" withColeman. The guests then pledged more than $100,000 to the Republican gubernatorial candidate, according to campaign aides.

It was Coleman's latest raid on the coffers of Virginia's coal barons, and once again was orchestrated by Dalton, his closest political ally, and featured a Reagan Cabinet officer. A similar gathering at the governor's mansion in February, with Energy Secretary James B. Edwards as the guest attraction, reportedly netted Coleman nearly $300,000.

Coleman's Democratic opponent, Lt. Gov. Charles S. Robb of McLean, Va., has also been working the coal fields, preaching the same conservative gospel of less government regulation, more strip mining and solemn allegiance to the state's Right to Work law. Robb's campaign claims he raised about $250,000 in a sojourn here last winter.

Neither candidate's contributions must be disclosed publicly until October, a month before the state's elections. But already it is clear that both have far exceeded the amounts raised four years ago when coal interests first surfaced as major Virginia campaign contributors, giving Dalton $109,000 and his Democratic opponent Henry E. Howell $103,000. It is also clear that again this year the miners are following their practice of giving to both sides.

"Robb's less blatant about it, but he's not turning their money away," said Frank Kilgore of Citizens for Better Reclamation, a surface-mining organization based in nearby St. Paul. "Whoever wins, the coal industry wins."

Reporters were banned from Friday night's party, but Coleman press aide David Blee said afterward that Watt, Dalton and Coleman madeappeals similar to the speeches they gave earlier Friday night at a public rally in a half-filled auditorium in nearby Richlands.

"We didn't promise anything specific other than they'll have our ear just like other Virginians," said Blee. "They weren't sitting around tables tossing around $100,000 bills."

Still, the message was one the mine owners clearly liked. Watt had told the rally, "We've got to create jobs and improve our quality of life." In an interview, Watt boasted of plans to cut back the Interior Department's Office of Surface Mining by reducing its local offices from 42 to 22 and its employees from 1,000 to 600. The responsibility for regulating strip mining and mine safety, he said, would be largely turned back to the states, an action Dalton and many miners here have long championed.

And Coleman, who led an unsuccessful legal challenge to the 1977 federal strip mining law, made clear how Virginia would respond if he were elected. "We've just about handcuffed our coal miners, and I mean to change that," he told a news conference. "The miners tell me that when federal inspectors come in they're very arrogant and dictatorial, and that's just counterproductive."

Watt arrived with Dalton at the Richlands airstrip sporting a blue "I Want to Live" lapel button, which he said referred to President Reagan's televised explanation of his tax-cut program. But the button could just as easily have referred to Watt himself, who has been under constant fire from environmentalists because of his hard-line pro-development views.

Coleman said he thought Watt's support would help his campaign — "He certainly hasn't hurt President Reagan's popularity," Coleman said — but others disagreed. Some conservationist groups, which so far have stayed out of the governor's race, say they plan to reconsider because of Watt's appearance.

"Robb's views on strip mining are just as bad, but Coleman will get some backlash," predicted Edward Grandis of the Environmental Policy Institute in Washington, who said state conservationist groups plan to meet soon to organize a campaign contributions committee. "Tying oneself to Reagan is one thing, to Watt another."

But Dalton, who arranged Watt's appearance, called him "an asset. He's talking about a balanced approach to the future of America and in this state, his philosophy of government is popular."

Campaign aides had hoped for a turnout of at least 400 for the Richlands rally, but only about 200 persons showed up, many of them carrying signs denouncing Dalton for a recent state decision allowing a private company to merge the town's two hospitals.

Insurance should begin where Medicare ends

By LOUISE COOK

Senior citizens spend millions of dollars each year on private insurance to close the gap between health bills and Medicare payments, but buyers may not always get the protection they want.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has some advice for prospective policyholders in a new pamphlet called "Guide to Health Insurance for People with Medicare." The guide was prepared by the department's Health Care Financing Administration and the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. It's available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 632J, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

A 1978 report from the staff of the House Committee on Aging said more than $1 billion of the $4 billion paid annually by the elderly for health insurance premiums goes for coverage that is unnecessary or does not provide the expected benefits.

Before you buy anything, make sure you understand what Medicare itself does and does not cover. Medicare is the federal health insurance program for people over 65. It should not be confused with Medicaid programs, which are operated by individual states and help pay medical bills for low-income people of all ages.

Senior citizens who are covered by Medicare may be entitled to Medicaid protection as well. And the Department of Health and Human Services says individuals with both types of coverage probably do not need any more, private insurance.

Medicare does not pay all health care expenses. In many cases, however, the services that are excluded from Medicare coverage also are excluded from most private insurance policies. Nursing home care, for example, generally is not covered by either Medicare or private insurance. Medicare does not pay for any treatment not considered medically necessary; neither do private policies.

The government does not sell or service supplemental coverage. State insurance departments approve policies sold by insurance companies, but approval means only that the company and the policy meet requirements of state law.

If anyone tries to sell you a supplemental policy and tells you it is part of a government-sponsored program, report him or her to the state insurance department. It is illegal for insurance companies or agents to suggest they represent the government. It also is illegal for a company or agent to knowingly sell you a policy that duplicates Medicare coverage but will not pay duplicate benefits.

The Medicare program has two parts — A and B. Part A covers hospital costs; there is no charge for this part of the protection policy. Part B helps pay for doctors' bills and other medical services; there is a charge of $11 per month. When you sign up for Medicare, you will automatically be enrolled in Part B as well as Part A, unless you specifically say you do not want the extra coverage.

Both Part A and Part B of the Medicare program pay only part of the medical bills. In both cases, there is a deductible amount — like the deductible on an auto insurance policy — which you have to pay. Individuals also must pay a percentage of any amount beyond the deductible for certain services under Part B of Medicare. Benefits cover only 80 percent of the approved amount for doctors' services, for example. You — or your supplemental insurance — must take care of the remaining 20 percent.

The phrase "approved amount" is an important one. Under the Medicare program, a "reasonable charge" is set for each medical service.

Grocery prices show another price increase

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Grocery bills took a bigger bite out of the family budget last month, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey that showed prices rising a little less than half a percent.

The increase was the third monthly rise this year and the second in a row. But the July climb was less than one-third as steep as the June one.

The AP survey is based on a randomly selected list of 14 commonly purchased food and non-food items. Prices were checked at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and were rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in six cities during July, rising an average of 2.8 percent. The marketbasket bill declined in six cities, down an average of 2 percent, and was unchanged in the 13th city.

Overall, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store went up four-tenths of one percent last month. That compared with a 1.3 percent rise in June. There were almost as many price rises in July as there were in June, according to the AP survey, but the size of the increases was smaller, keeping the marketbasket totals from going up faster than they did.

The only other monthly increase this year was in January, when the AP survey showed an increase of two-tenths of a percent in the marketbasket bill. Grocery prices declined in February, March, April and May.

Comparing today's prices with those of last Aug. 1, the AP found the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores rose a relatively modest 1.9 percent over the 12-month period.

Government and private economists had been predicting steep increases at the supermarket because of last summer's drought and hot weather. The increases failed to materialize, however, until June. Meat prices in particular remained low, partly because ranchers sold off cattle rather than pay high feed bills, keeping the supply high, and partly because demand remained weak.

The food items on the AP list, rather than the non-food items, were responsible for most of the July increases. Foods represented 77 percent of the items surveyed and accounted for 88 percent of the July increases.

Butter went up for the second month in a row, rising at the checklist store in six of the cities surveyed. Eggs, which had remained low in price during much of 1981, went up at the checklist store in nine cities.

The meat picture was mixed. Chopped chuck went up at the checklist store in five cities and decreased in three; pork chops went up in seven cities and down in three; frankfurters increased in four and decreased in five.

Coffee drinkers, however, got some good news in July. The price of a pound of coffee dropped at the checklist store in seven of the cities surveyed and rose in only one.

A look at the overall number of items in the AP survey showed more decreases during July than during June. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	June	July
Up	29.1	27.5
Down	19.2	22.0
Unchanged	47.3	44.5
Unavailable	4.4	6.0

The AP did not try to weight the survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were used for the survey. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the overall total.

The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that eggs cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. A 15th item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list after the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Milwaukee's famous brewery to shut down

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The bottles and cans brimming with "the beer that made Milwaukee famous" no longer will whir through the automated lines that slink through the 101-year-old Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co. main plant.

For 132 years, Schlitz has made its beer here. With such competitors as Pabst, Miller and Blatz, Schlitz earned Milwaukee the reputation as the beer capital of the world.

But that title will slip a bit when the aging plant is officially shut down Sept. 30.

Mayor Henry W. Maier sadly termed it "the end of this Milwaukee tradition," while striking Schlitz workers attacked and mourned the company's decision.

A week ago, Schlitz announced plans to merge with the G. Heileman Brewing Co. of La Crosse, Wis., maker of Old Style, Carling Black Label and Special Export. But Heileman officials said they were not involved in the decision to close the Schlitz plant.

The closing will leave Milwaukee with two major breweries, Pabst and Miller. Schlitz will keep its headquarters here and a canning operation in suburban Oak Creek.

Schlitz announced the closing Friday, shaking the city as well as 720 brewery workers who have been on strike since June 1.
