Coastal Texans tie in to storm preparation

GALVESTON (AP) — Schools closed, hospitals transferred patients and prison officials moved inmates to other facilities as thousands of Texas coastal residents braced themselves for Hurricane Gilbert.

A hurricane warning was in effect today for the southern bend of the Texas coast from Port O'Connor to Brownsville, while a hurricane watch remained in effect for the remainder of the coast from Port O'Connor north to Port Arthur.

The Mexican government issued a hurricane warning for the northeastern Mexican coast from Tampico northward.

At 8 a.m., the center of Gilbert was located near latitude 22.1 north, longitude 92.0 west, or about 430 miles southeast of Brownsville.

The storm, with maximum sustained winds estimated at 120 mph, continued moving toward the west northwest near at 15 mph, according to the National Hurricane Center. This motion was expected to continue with a gradual turn toward the northwest later today or tonight.

Although Gilbert had weakened, forecasters said the storm could strengthen as it moved over open waters.

The 450-mile wide killer storm struck with 23-foot waves as it crossed Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula and moved into the Gulf of Mexico.

Hurricane Center director Robert Sheets said the storm was expected to make landfall about mid-day Friday and that its sustained winds would today "certainly increase to 130, 140 mph." Gilbert, downgraded from a Category 5 hurricane to Category 3, had earlier packed sustained winds of more than 175 mph with gusts to around 200 mph.

Brownsville was deemed the most likely target, with a 21 percent probability of being hit.

The hurricane center said Gilbert at its greatest strength was the most intense storm on record in terms of barometric pressure, which was measured at 26.31 inches, breaking the 26.35 inches recorded for the 1935 hurricane that devastated the Florida Keys.

Grocery and hardware stores were swamped with shoppers and lumber and water supplies were reported in short supply throughout the region.

"Our business is, essentially, going off the wall right now," said Richard Cashman, president of the Houston Division of Sierra Spring Water Co., Inc.

Late Wednesday, Gov. Bill Clements issued an emergency proclamation that will allow local authorities to temporarily suspend "applicable rules, regulations and statutes to preserve the health, safety and welfare of the public," including such things as the direction of highways.

"This is an extremely dangerous storm that poses a serious threat to the Texas Coast," Clements said in issuing the proclamation, which went into effect at midnight.

NASA cited potential disruptions at the flight control center in Houston by the hurricane in delaying the announcement of a launch date for the shuttle Discovery.

Galveston County officials called for residents of the unprotected Bolivar Peninsula to leave immediately, citing poor road conditions that could hinder later escape.

Ferris Collier, police chief of Crystal Beach, a small community on the peninsula across the bay from Galveston, said most of the peninsula's estimated 3,000 residents were heeding the call.

"Some of them are being stubborn and are saying they're staying no matter what," he said. "But if it hits here, they won't be here any more."

Midlanders ready aid for hurricane victims

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Relief efforts are under way in Midland for Texas Gulf Coast residents who are expected to bear the brunt of Hurricane Gilbert when it reaches land sometime in the next 36 hours.

Blessing for Obedience, a local ministry that assist missionaries, disaster victims and the needy, began collecting boxed canned goods and clothing as well as other emergency supplies at Volunteer Park on N. Big Spring Street Wednesday.

Ministry spokesman Kelly Coleman said the group, which has monitored the storm since it first struck Jamaica, will be accepting daily donations from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the park.

Needed medical supplies such as syringes, blood plasma and typhoid vaccine is being collected for shipment at the Minor Emergency Clinic at Wadley Avenue and A Street.

Ministry officials also are looking for volunteers with trucks and planes as well as those willing to donate their time at the collection site and ham radio operators to assist in monitoring the storm's development.

City officials fear 'backlash' effect on 'serious' bond issue

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Midland voters are headed for the polls Saturday in what many city officials are calling the most "serious" bond election ever held.

This morning, Mayor Carroll Thomas said he was concerned that a "backlash" vote on issues ranging from drainage to police communications may jeopardize several projects that need immediate attention.

"I'm afraid they're (public) looking at the bottom line rather than the issue," said a somber Thomas. "What they don't realize is that this is a five-year capital improvement plan of a lasting nature."

City officials have proposed issuing bonds totaling $17.4 million in four seperate packages.

Broken down, the city would spend $5.5 million on street, intersection and signal improvements; $3.5 million on its drainage system to the northwest and east to ease flooding conditions; $5.5 million ($750,000 of which is a carryover from a previous election) on a centralized police communication system; and $4.2 million on parks.

Passage of all four issues will cost the owner of a $100,000 valuated home $3 per month or $36 per year. Individually, on the same valuated home, an owner would pay $7.20 a year for drainage; $8.90 per year on emergency communications; $11.17 per year on streets; and $8.90 cents per year on parks.

It is an expensive venture, but one that city officials say can't be put off any longer unless Midlanders are willing to sacrifice a basic infrastructure that will cost a lot more money down the road.

City officials also point out that Midland has one of the lowest ad valorem tax rates in the state for cities with a population of at least 50,000 people.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor called all four proposals "serious," noting that if residents vote against the issue, the city will have to schedule another election.

Texan recalls terror of 1900

By CINDY HORSWELL
Hearst News Service

What Jennie Graham Karboski remembers most is the water, angrily rising — and the bodies, floating everywhere.

Mrs. Karboski, now 100, was only 12 when the 1900 hurricane washed over Galveston and killed 6,000 people.

"They tried to have mass burials at sea, but the next morning many floated back in on the surf. The men had to dig trenches and burn them. My dad said they kept the work crews drunk. They had to," Mrs. Karboski said.

Surrounded by porcelain curios in her daughter's neat, white frame cottage in Houston's Heights where she now lives, Mrs. Karboski is far removed from Hurricane Gilbert — the most powerful storm ever to churn toward the Texas coast. But she is most keenly aware of the potential impact of the monstrous storm.

"I recommend everyone leave and not stay. I only go down to Galveston these days for a little enjoyment, but I would never live there now," said Mrs. Karboski.

Her daughter, Sheppard Aurich, took her mother, who gets around with a walker, to visit Galveston this past June. "But we'd never stay the night!" Mrs. Karboski said.

Afterall, Mrs. Karboski and her family were trapped in the 1900 storm because they failed to flee — failed to take the storm seriously.

"Mama didn't want to leave. She'd been through it before, and wasn't worried. It never had been that bad," Mrs. Karboski said.

Instead of bracing for the storm, she and her five sisters and brothers were playing in roadside ditches when the waters came.

Communication and transportation were crude, at best.

Mrs. Karboski's parents were confident they would be safe inside their elevated Gingerbread cottage and saw no reason for alarm. The only hint that the 1900 storm might be more than a heavy downpour, typical of any tropical storm, was a red signal flag which flew above the city not long before it hit.

"The sea wall hadn't been built then. Nothing was there but a bunch of tall cedar trees where we used to go behind to undress for a swim," she said.

Neighbors may have chased rapist away

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Two eastside residents believe a masked "peeping Tom" they chased recently from their neighborhood is the man who has raped two women and burglarized more than a dozen residences.

Meanwhile, police say they are still investigating the case intensively, and believe the rapist, who has not struck since August 10, may have been "driven underground" by publicity about his activities.

The two men, who asked not to be identified, said they spotted the man most recently last weekend, at about 9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday nights.

"He was spotting homes, and he was all dressed in black," said one resident, who lives in the 1700 block of Edwards Street near Golf Course Road.

The man was "20 or 30" feet away when he realized he had been seen, the resident said.

"He was looking through a window, between two houses on Edwards Street," the man said. "My neighbor saw him after he went outside. He saw him peeping through a window, and hollered at him."

The man ran through an alley and disappeared, the resident said.

The man was described as black, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, the residents said, which matched the general description given by police.

At least once, the man was seen with a ski mask over his head, they said.

"He is real athletic, and jumped a five-foot wooden fence," one of the men noted.

The resident said police were called and given the man's description.

A police supervisor said detectives are still checking on information that publicity has generated about the rapist, but he said officers had no new information that could be made public.

"We're not getting many new leads at all," said Deputy Chief Billy Ray, who heads the police detective division.

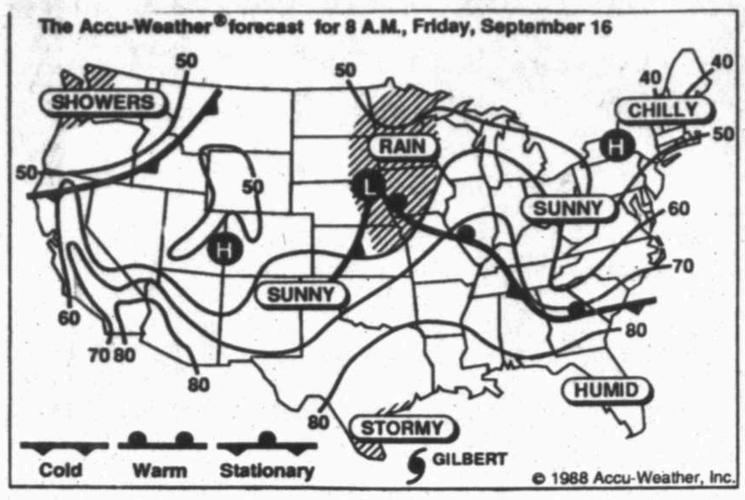
WEATHER SUMMARY



Low in middle 60s expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the middle 60s and winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph.

Friday is expected to be mostly sunny with the high near 90 and easterly winds 10-15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 91 was eight degrees cooler than the record high of 99 set for that date in 1965. The overnight low of 62 was 12 degrees warmer than the record low of 50 set for this date in 1961.

STATE

Violent weather struck Amarillo with a possible tornado, golf-ball size hail and flash flooding as residents across the state along the Gulf of Mexico kept a watchful eye on a powerful, killer hurricane that was roaring northwestward toward Texas.

At Amarillo, a possible tornado caused severe damage to several homes, golf ball-size hail pelted the area, heavy rainfall caused street and flash flooding, closing two interstate highways and causing extensive traffic problems.

Amarillo got about 3 to 5 inches of rain and water was as deep as five feet on some streets and highways. Both Interstate 40 and Interstate 27 were closed in Amarillo during the night.

Authorities are not certain whether it was a tornado at Amarillo or just high winds. No one suffered serious injuries although several people suffered minor injuries such as cuts and bruises.

The National Hurricane Center says a hurricane warning will likely be ordered for Hurricane Gilbert along a portion of the coast later today. Robert Sheets, director of the hurricane center, says Brownsville seems to be the most likely target of the most intense hurricane on record.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies with increasing cloudiness along the coast through tonight. Scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected in the Panhandle, South Plains and coastal plains through tonight. Some of the thunderstorms over the coastal plains could become severe and heavy rain is possible at times in the Panhandle.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s, ranging from the upper 50s in the Panhandle to the upper 70s in extreme South Texas.

Highs Friday will be in the 70s in South Texas and in the 80s and 90s elsewhere.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, ranging from the 60s in the Panhandle to the lower 80s along the South Texas coast. Extremes ranged from 60 at Dalhart, Amarillo and El Paso to 80 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 67 at Wichita Falls, 73 at Fort Worth, 75 at Waco, 74 at Austin, 71 at San Antonio, 73 at Houston, 75 at Brownsville, 66 at San Angelo, 63 at Lubbock and 64 at Midland.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms unrelated to Hurricane Gilbert lashed the Texas Panhandle today with strong winds and torrential rains and spawned an apparent tornado in Amarillo.

Hurricane Gilbert's outer reaches kept rain and thunderstorms over southern Florida and the Keys. The hurricane moved off Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula into the Gulf of Mexico, where its 120 mph winds were expected to strengthen, and a hurricane watch was posted for the entire Texas coast.

The Texas Panhandle storms dropped up to 5 inches of rain south of Amarillo late Wednesday and today. The rain pushed Lake Bennett over its shores and flooded roads around Amarillo with up to 5 feet of water.

The storms generated 60 mph gusts and produced golf-ball size hail. About a dozen homes were damaged in southwest Amarillo where residents reported sighting a tornado late Wednesday.

Showers and a few thunderstorms also extended across western Kansas and eastern Colorado into western Nebraska and over northeast North Carolina. A band of showers extended from western Missouri and eastern Kansas to eastern North Dakota.

Victims of Amarillo storm sought

AMARILLO (AP) — Emergency personnel searched through the wreckage of homes in southwest Amarillo early today, searching for victims of a possible tornado that roared through a neighborhood as a furious thunderstorm raced across this Texas Panhandle city.

Golf ball-size hail accompanied the storm and street flooding was widespread following the severe thunderstorm. Two Interstate highways that pass through the city were closed in places with water as deep as five feet in some areas, authorities said.

Officials said they were optimistic that no one had been killed. Amarillo authorities several people suffered apparently minor injuries, such as cuts and bruises, but no one had been treated at area hospitals.

Roofs were blown off, power lines and poles were downed, fences were uprooted and windows were smashed as the violent weather struck a neighborhood and a mobile home park.

Authorities were reluctant to officially call the destructive weather a tornado, but eyewitnesses reported seeing a twister.

Heavy rainfall flooded streets and highways in the Amarillo area. Both Interstate 40 and Interstate 27 were covered by as much as five feet of water in some areas of Amarillo, the National Weather Service reported.

About two hours earlier, the NWS reported a tornado sighting about 10 miles south of Bushland in the Panhandle. Bushland is located just west of Amarillo on Interstate 40. A tornado warning had expired at 9:50 p.m. when the Texas Department of Public Safety reported a tornado sighting in the southwest edge of Amarillo.

"I saw a funnel 200 yards from my house coming down the alley," said Van Weigle. His wife, Debbie, had looked out the back door first and called him and their friend, Mike Denham.

"We went into the hall. The pressure was heavy in my ears," said Weigle. "It tore off the roof of the house next to us."

The tornado bounced over his house, and then dumped a neighbor's shed in his yard, Weigle said.

"I've never been in one (tornado) before," he said. "It's the kind of thing you joke about until you see one in your alley. It sounded like a train."

Twelve homes were damaged in the area around Weigle's home.

"A three-to-four block area is pretty messed up," he said.

Amarillo Police Sgt. Tom Porter said the damage was confined to a 6-8 quare block area.

The storm caused a power outage to about 1,370 homes and businesses, according to James Hoard, public information supervisor for Southwestern Public Service Co.

Another 1,000 customers had been plunged into darkness when Lawrence Lake flooded during heavy rainfall and soaked SPS's underground equipment at a sub-station.

Utility company employees worked early today to restore power.

Sue Robinson of the American Red Cross said a shelter was set up at Trinity Fellowship Church, but there were no immediate reports that anyone had taken advantage of the offer of shelter.

Water was waist deep in some areas of Amarillo.

A flash flood warning was issued by the National Weather Service, but only 1.11 inches of rain was measured officially at Amarillo International Airport. Authorities said 2.76 inches fell in southwest Amarillo.

Golf ball-sized hail was reported near Boys Ranch in the Panhandle earlier Wednesday night and golf ball-size hail was reported in portions of Amarillo.

BOND

Many are hoping that's not the case. For example, city engineers already have plans on the drawing board that would alleviate flooding in a number of areas of town — areas that feel the brunt of storms everytime it rains.

Councilwoman Oralia Corrales is one those hard at work. She says many living in District 2 understand the issues at stake and appear to support the measures.

But Mayor Thomas isn't as certain. He says while the understanding may well be there, the impact of earlier tax increases and the passage of two other bond issues in one year — by the school district and county — has possibly created a negative reaction among the voting electorate.

"The fact that oil prices are down, doesn't help psychologically out there either. I'm kind of at a loss as to how we can counteract that," said a concerned Thomas.

In the meantime, proponents of the bond issue continue to make a last-minute push to rally support for the measures. Their success — or lack of it — will be known Saturday.

SURVIVOR

The 17-foot tall, 16-foot wide wall of reinforced concrete was not constructed until four years after the storm destroyed two-thirds of the island city.

Nobody knew the strength of its winds, which broke the island's wind gauge when it topped 100 mph. But the seawater that submerged the city was recorded as deep as 17 feet.

When the storm hit, Mrs. Karboski's mother was tending her six children, ages nine months to 14 years, at home alone. Her husband, a rugged English immigrant and ship's engineer, was at work at the wharves.

Rising waters soon sent the mother and children wading into the street to take refuge in their neighbor's two-story home. But, not long after, their hosts evacuated and they were left alone upstairs, Mrs. Karboski said.

Her the mother spotted a boat rowing down the street. She asked for help, but the skipper said he was headed to rescue another family.

"We informed them that there was nobody left on the whole street but us and one other stranded man. We demanded they take us with them and give us a ride for two blocks," Mrs. Karboski said.

The skipper agreed, but could only fit six of the seven on board.

"My mother found another man who agreed to carry my 7-year-old brother, her only boy, on his back," said Mrs. Karboski, who watched the pair wade off into waist-deep water until she lost track of them in the storm. "I guess that was the hardest thing my mother had to do. Let my brother go off alone."

The family's boat was abandoned after two blocks and they caught a ride on a grocery wagon, Kabroski said. The wagon hit a street car track and flipped.

"The driver and horse disappeared. Don't know what became of them. My mother yelled for us to hang onto the wagon until somebody came to help," she said.

Finally, another boat arrived with a man and woman in it. The skiff ferried the family until it, too, flipped over, dumping the family, including her 9-month old sister, in deep water.

"My mother reached down and grabbed the long coat which my baby sister was wearing and she came up with it," said Mrs. Karboski.

The family finally waded to Saint Mary's Catholic Seminary and found refuge.

"That's when we noticed the bodies. They were floating everywhere by now," she said.

At the seminary, the children were given dry clothing.

"Since only men lived there, we had to make do. Mostly, we all just worried and wondered what had happened to my brother," she said. "Everyone was just scared to death."

The next morning her mother began to search for the boy. She ran to the Rosenberg school which had been set up as a morgue, but didn't find her son. She searched among children who had been crushed by a falling door. He was not there.

As she walked back toward the seminary, she heard a tapping sound at a window, Mrs. Karboski said. The boy, Tommy, was safe inside a friend's home.

"He was wearing girl's clothes," said Mrs. Karboski, "because they didn't have any sons in that home."

Her father had weathered the storm at the wharf.

While thankful to be counted among the survivors, life was a uphill struggle after the storm, Mrs. Karboski said. Nothing remained of the family's rented home. The only belonging recovered was a tool chest. The neighbor's two-story home was badly battered.

Her family spent their first night in a cottage with a couple of rooms that also housed 40 other people.

"People were sleeping on the floor, everywhere. It was awful. There wasn't much food to speak of," she said, recalling how they were served oatmeal with worms.

The family eventually found a rent house and received food from their uncle's grocery.

"It was a nightmare," she said. "Water was contaminated. Homeless pets were sickened by it and had to be killed. Her mother kept the children indoors and away from the windows.

"She didn't talk about what she saw. She didn't want us to know any more than we had to," said Mrs. Karboski.

Today, the widow is cautioning her three children, six grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren, and 15 great great grandchildren to follow her lead.

"We get heavy rains here. I don't think we want to stay," said her daughter, Ms. Aurich.

Mrs. Karboski and her daughter are planning to pack their bags and move further inland to stay with another relative until Gilbert passes.

"All of this is urgently needed," said Coleman. "This is a priority situation...if the storm hits the Gulf Coast we'll help those people first." However, the group also is concerned with those victims in Jamaica, the Cayman Islands and Mexico.

Meanwhile, ministry members continue to monitor the storm's progress. Coleman said Wesnesday afternoon he already was in contact with a ham operator in Jamaica, who reported 16,000 are now homeless there. That report has since been updated to 500,000.

"Most of the damage was done in Kingston (the capital)," said Coleman, and along Black River and Clarendon where a number of people reportedly drowned when flood waters rose.

Wednesday night, ministry ham operators were expected to reestablish contact with other hams on Jamaica, who Coleman said were using car batteries to operate their radios because of the extensive power outage.

Doug Wight, another ministry official, said if the storm rocks Texas, which most meteorologists already are predicting, ham operators for the group will send messages from residents here who have relatives on the coastline. The ministry's number is 687-3816

This is not the first time Blessings for Obedience has assisted disaster victims. In 1985, the group helped collect supplies for those injured in the Mexico City earthquake and again in 1987, when a killer tornado swept through the tiny town of Saragosa.

Coleman said the collection sites will remain open until further notice.

STORM

Officials fear that high tides might flood Texas Highway 87, the only escape route by land.

"We felt it was better to have people make an orderly evacuation this evening rather than trying to wait until dark or trying to wait until tomorrow when it maybe too late," Crystal Beach Mayor Bill Kelsey said.

For much of Wednesday, Bolivar ferries carried peninsula residents to Galveston. The ferries are expected to remain active until the tides reach 4½ feet above normal, officials said.

Two Galveston residents were arrested Wednesday for trying to sell plywood at an inflated price just hours after the city council passed an emergency ordinance designed to stem price gouging by local merchants.

The Galveston ordinance freezes prices and rents at what they were on Wednesday until the council rescinds the measure and carries a $500 fine per violation.

School and university officials throughout the coastal areas ordered the institutions closed today and Friday.

Some coastal hospitals were preparing to evacuate all but the most seriously ill patients and the personnel required to handle those patients and possible storm victims.

Also being moved for safety reasons were 4,200 Texas prison inmates.

Aircraft moved in

MIDLAND (AP) — Midland International Airport was helping out today in anticipation of Hurricane Gilbert by storing military aircraft from the Texas coast, an official said.

The planes would be stored at the West Texas airport for the duration of the storm, said airport spokeswoman Marcy Blauvelt.

Four T-34 Navy training aircraft were flown to the airport last night, said Ms. Blauvelt.

She expected at least 15 more military aircraft today.

The planes were being flown in from air bases in Mississippi and the Corpus Christi area and other locations, according to Ms. Blauvelt.

Midland is an ideal place to store the aircraft because it's "high and dry," she said.

RAPIST

The Edwards Street residents said they were "reassured" by the officers who responded to the possible sighting of the rapist.

"They said they were going to keep an eye on the neighborhood," one of the men said. "They were real responsive. And they told us not to worry if they shine a light in the house."

Although the rapist has not struck in more than a month, east side residents are still fearful, the neighbors say.

"We look out at night. We have dogs in the backyard. And we all know each other, we grew up here and have lived here all our lives," one man said. "We are all worried about this man. If we see something we will report it.

"You used to be able to sleep with your doors and windows open, but not any more."

Specially trained officers are still patrolling east side streets and alleys between midnight and 6 a.m., the hours when the rapist is believed to be most active. Patrols in the area also have been intensified, police say.

The rapist has committed two sexual assaults since June, has attempted two others, and has committed more than a dozen burglaries, according to police.

He carries a screwdriver which he uses to break into homes and threaten his victims, according to detectives.

One intended victim fired several shots at the man after he broke into her home, and he also fled after another woman pulled a butcher knife from under her pillow, police said.

UT system regents tout record as Pan American merger vote nears

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas regents said their work at schools across the state should inspire confidence as Pan American University regents prepare to vote on a proposed merger with the UT system.

At a Wednesday meeting of UT and Pan American regents, UT board chairman Jack Blanton of Houston said the Austin-based system's records at various campuses "speak for themselves."

"I welcome the opportunity to see if we can be a part of improving the entire higher education system in the state of Texas," Blanton said, saying that is his goal as UT participates in merger discussions with Pan American.

Blanton's comments came after Pan American regent Horacio Barrera of Brownsville said fears have been expressed in the Rio Grande Valley that "once we lose local control, there is no guarantee that we can take this university in the area we want to take it."

Long-range plans developed by the Edinburg-based university include doctorates in international business and education, and programs in engineering and allied health.

"The concern people in our area have...is the level of commitment and the level of concern that the University of Texas System board would have concerning our area and the dedication of resources to that area," Barrera said.

The Pan American board is scheduled to vote on the merger Tuesday.

UT regent Sam Barshop of San Antonio said people in his city had similar concerns to those in the Valley when a UT institution began there more than a decade ago. The university has been good for San Antonio, he said.

"Why would we want to put a weak link into a strong chain? That would not make sense for us," Barshop said. "The commitment is there."

Barrera said UT institutions visited by Pan American regents are "first-class." UT has schools in several areas of the state, including Dallas, Houston and El Paso.

President of Pan American University Miguel Nevarez, center, works with Dr. Hans Mark, University of Texas System Chancellor, left, and Dr. James Duncan, a University of Texas Vice Chancellor at a meeting in Austin Wednesday.

"Down in South Texas, we've kind of been used to being treated like second-class citizens. We would like to see that change," Barrera said.

UT Chancellor Hans Mark noted a $9.7 million proposal has been submitted by UT and Pan American to the Legislative Budget Board. The budget proposal would expand existing programs and develop new ones in engineering, nursing, business and education.

If Pan American approves the merger, Mark said, he believes the UT board is committed to the proposition. The next step would be to develop a legislative proposal, and Mark said the simpler such a proposal is, the better the chance for passage.

Pan American regent Berta Perez Linton brought up the Valley university's law school, which is unaccredited. But UT regents said they could not make a commitment to the school.

Such items would be best left out of a merger proposal to the Legislature, Mark said. He said issues like the law school and future doctoral programs could be addressed in a strategic plan developed by the universities.

The Legislature last year ordered the UT and Texas A&M systems to examine South Texas higher education.

Mattox gets order to restrain sales of herbal drug

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday he has obtained temporary restraining orders preventing a Dalhart distributor and his Lubbock agent from selling a potentially dangerous herbal drug.

The drug contains lead, cadmium, steroids and tranquilizers, Mattox said.

Mattox said he obtained the orders against C.A. Wallace of Dalhart and Martha Herring of Lubbock after filing separate suits against them in district court in Lubbock.

Wallace said when contacted by telephone he had no immediate comment. There was no telephone listing for Ms. Herring in Lubbock.

In the suits, Mattox alleged Ms. Herring and Wallace sold a product called Miracle Herb — Mother Nature's Finest in West Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Mattox said in the suit the product is a misbranded and adulterated drug.

Mattox said the product does not carry warnings about use by children or by people with high blood pressure, heart conditions or kidney disorders.

The suit also said the defendants falsely represented that the product does a number of things, including relieving pain from arthritis.

Bentsen says polls turning around for Democrats

DALLAS (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said today the Democratic ticket's drop in popularity has bottomed out and is rebounding against Republican charges that he and presidential nominee Michael Dukakis are unpatriotic and weak on defense.

"We've seen in the last four or five days, as we've taken these issues on, on defense and these...outrageous charges on patriotism, that the polls have turned around," the Democratic vice presidential candidate told reporters as he announced that a Texas business council would work for the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign.

"It's obvious that we have bottomed out and we're beginning to come back up," he said. "I think we're in for a hard, close race and I have felt that from the beginning."

Republicans are trying to "impugn the loyalty and patriotism of the candidates," Bentsen said, but they have "overreached and they are getting a backlash."

Despite his optimistic talk, Bentsen has encountered some vocal skepticism as he seeks to sell defense-minded Texans on the idea that Dukakis advocates a strong military.

Bentsen was heckled constantly on Wednesday by a claque of George Bush supporters in a home-state audience of defense industry employees who heard him present the Democratic ticket's position that the Republicans put too much emphasis on space weapons and not enough on conventional forces.

Charges that Dukakis would weaken defense were "wild charges and innuendo from the vice president and his handlers," Bentsen told employees of the LTV missile division.

Convicted killer granted stay by Supreme Court

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A convicted killer was granted an execution reprieve by the U.S. Supreme Court about 90 minutes before he was scheduled to die by injection for the 1980 robbery-shooting of a Galveston convenience store clerk.

In a 6-3 vote, the court granted Warren Eugene Bridge a reprieve about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, two hours after his attorney filed an appeal with the high court, said spokesman Toni House. The court, with Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and justices Bryon R. White and Sandra Day O'Connor dissenting, granted the temporary stay pending a timely filing of a request for a full review of the case by the court, she said.

Earlier Wednesday, the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans denied a stay. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and a federal judge in Galveston also refused to grant a reprieve earlier this week.

Galveston attorney Anthony Griffin contended in his appeal that jurors in Bridge's capital murder trial were not allowed to consider mitigating circumstances during the punishment phase of Bridge's trial.

In his appeal, Griffin cited arguments used in another appeal filed on behalf of Texas death row inmate Johnny Penry, whose case the high court has agreed to hear.

Griffin said he spent most of Wednesday working on Bridge's appeal, preparing for a trial scheduled to begin in Dallas today and boarding up his Galveston office in preparation for the powerful winds of Hurricane Gilbert.

"My worst fear is going over there and 25 to 30 minutes before I'm getting executed I get a stay," Bridge said earlier. "Then I have to come back and go through all this again."

Bridge also had said he preferred dying by a firing squad instead of lethal injection.

"I would rather be shot," he said. "I would rather die standing up — with my shoes on — than laying down. The way they do it now is a druggy way to die. I wouldn't want to be hanged or ride old Sparky (the electric chair). I'm not very fond of electricity. Just a plain bullet is cleaner somehow."

Bridge, 28, was sentenced to die for the Feb. 10, 1980, robbery-shooting of Walter Rose, 62.

Venice casino now has different class of clientele

VENICE, Italy (AP) — At first glance the stately casino overlooking the Adriatic from the Lido looks a little down at the heels. Elegant croupiers still spin wheels set in polished mahogany, but waiters seem to serve more beer than champagne.

Sunburned women wearing costume jewelry and middle-aged men dressed in knit shirts and polyester jackets crowd around the felt-topped tables that once were the playground of the rich and famous.

The clientele has completedly changed in the 50 years since the municipal casino first opened its doors on June 30, 1938, to a crowd that danced and gambled until dawn.

"At one time the casino catered to the upper class, the nobility. Now the casino is for salesmen and businessmen," said co-director Antonio Clabot without a trace of lament.

"Movie producers, great industrialists and the nobility don't come to the casino here now," he said. "If they come here they find trade unionists."

Chandeliers hang from the lofty ceiling inside the marble-lined gaming rooms. Croupiers dressed in tuxedos speak in hushed tones, deftly toss markers onto requested bets and offer a gentle "thank you" to nudge big winners who may forget to tip.

The casino is open from April to October on the Lido, Venice's beachfront, and reached by a short waterbus ride from St. Mark's Square. During the rest of the year, the casino operates from luxurious quarters on the Grand Canal.

Gamblers in Venice can take their chances at roulette, chemin de fer, thirty-forty, black jack and occasionally at craps. There are no clanking slot machines with flashing lights and ringing bells, no gaudy and beckoning neon signs.

Egypt's late King Farouk became one of the casino's most renowned gamblers after he was forced to abdicate and go abroad in 1952. He was a regular between April and September of 1953, tipping meagerly when he lost but giving croupiers chips worth a million lire ($1,600 at 953 rates) when he won.

In one night alone, the deposed king won 13 million lire ($208,000 at 1953 rates) a chemin de fer.

"We get a thousand people a day, and there can't be a thousand Farouks," said Clabot.

The minimum bet in Venice is 10,000 lire (abut $7.40) and the maximum single bet is 200,000 lire (about $150). But gamblers, in roulette for example, can make numerous 200,000 lire bets at the same time.

Clabot said he can't give an average figure for the amount the casino wins each night, but said the total from the Lido operation last year was 82 billion lire ($65.6 million).

A few years ago the huge amounts of money changing hands at Italy's four casinos began attracting underworld figures. People seeking to dispose of money obtained from kidnappings would buy chips, play roulette long enough to look respectable and then cash in the markers.

Italy's internal revenue service raided the casinos in 1983 in a crackdown on the money laundering. Officials also said the raids were launched to block Mafia efforts to get control of the casinos in Venice, San Remo, Saint Vincent in northwestern Italy and Campione d'Italia, the Italian enclave in Swiss territory.

The Venice casino is owned by the city and the profits go to the city. But strangely in a city that thrives on foreign tourism, only about 15 percent of the gamblers in Venice are foreigners.

Most of them, said Clabot, are people from central and southern Italy spending their vacations along the coast near Venice.

"They no longer come in smoking jackets, but in blue jeans," said Clabot, a no-nonsense businessman who seems to prefer working people with money to blow to such glamorous former players as film director Vittorio De Sica or producers Angelo Rizzoli, David O. Selznick or Darryl F. Zanuck.

"A famous person comes here, stays one night and has a lot of curious people hanging around. But they don't play," he said. "The curious are not players."

Pilot builds copy of Red Baron's plane

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A misty rain and low overcast allowed Capt. Manfred von Richthofen to sleep late Sunday, April 21, 1918, but when the German ace climbed into his bright red triplane to hunt for enemy aircraft along the Somme River in France, it would be his last flight.

Richthofen was shot down before noon and the question of who killed the "Red Baron" would become a timeless controversy for World War I and aviation history buffs.

Jim Butler, a veteran airman, built a duplicate of the Fokker DR-1 the German ace flew as leader of his Flying Circus Squadron and provides part of the answer.

"Richthofen was supposed to be the best. I wanted to see for myself," explained the 45-year-old Butler, owner of an aerial sign company based at North Perry Airport.

The son of a German army major, Richthofen was a cavalry officer when, at 23, a pilot friend taught him to fly. He soloed Oct. 10, 1915, but crashed making his first landing.

When he was killed 2½ years later, he had shot down 80 planes — more than any other pilot in World War I.

Butler soloed at 16 in Manchester, N.H., and moved here in 1953 when his father, an aviator, began a banner-towing service. Over the years, Butler has accumulated 17,000 hours in the air in more than 120 makes and models of small aircraft.

Like Richthofen, Butler has more interest in being in the cockpit than dealing with the mechanical side of flying.

However, Butler and aviation mechanic Ned Ames began constructing the famed triplane in 1977 from copies of plans by its Dutch designer, Anthony Fokker.

Thirteen months and almost $30,000 later, Butler flew his Fokker for the first time Aug. 28, 1978.

"The plane has no inherent stability and it is nowhere near what the Germans said it was," said Butler. "We duplicated the weight and balance, but I wouldn't put it into a spin. If I did, I think I'd have to jump out."

With its three wings, a pilot could hold the aircraft steady, said Butler, and use it as a "platform" for two Spandau machine guns mounted in front of the open cockpit.

"As long as a diligent person is at the controls, it flies well," added Butler.

As Richthofen led his squadron that fateful morning, 24-year-old Capt. Roy Brown, a Toronto, Canada, native in the Royal Air Force, took off in his Sopwith fighter from an airfield in Bertangles, France, 25 miles to the west.

Brown had learned to fly in Dayton, Ohio, and suffered from stomach ulcers. Richthofen endured recurrent headaches from a head wound.

The two squadrons met and Australian ground troops watched as a "dogfight" ensued overhead between 12 German and eight British planes.

When Brown saw a bright red "tripe," as triplanes were called, chase 2nd Lt. Wilfred May, who was on his first combat sortie, he pushed his fighter into a dive and went to his friend's aid.

The three planes, lined one behind the other, dropped to below 100 feet of the ground. Richthofen fired at the fleeing Sopwith, but was distracted when Brown shot at him from behind.

Brown got closer, opened fire again, saw bullets hit the Fokker DR-1 and watched the pilot slump forward. The aircraft continued, skimming the deck for an estimated one or two miles.

On the ground, troops saw an opportunity and opened fire at the enemy aircraft.

Sgt. C.B. Popkin and gunners R.F. Weston, W.J. Evans and R. Buie watched their bullets tear into the plane. Sgt. Alfred Franklyn of an anti-aircraft battery and dozens of riflemen nearby fired their weapons.

The plane crashed, and Germany's great hero was dead. When Allied troops examined the wreckage and learned the pilot's identify, the plane was stripped for souvenirs.

There were many individual claims for shooting down the German ace, and the controversy caused political tension between Great Britain and Australia.

Brown was given credit for his 11th and last enemy plane shot down. He died of a heart attack on a Stouffville, Ont., farm March 9, 1944.

"There is no way that plane will fly one or two miles without someone fully at the controls," emphasized Butler. "It wouldn't fly that far at 20,000 feet without spiraling."

Butler is often asked the final question: Who killed the Red Baron?

"Not Capt. Roy Brown," he replies.

Property damage expected to be high, expert says

HOUSTON (AP) — High technology weather equipment and warning systems can help keep the death toll low if Hurricane Gilbert slams ashore along the U.S. Gulf Coast, but the storm still stands to cause billions of dollars in damage, an expert says.

The National Weather Service in Mexico City reported winds gusting as high as 218 mph Wednesday with sustained winds of 179 mph when Gilbert battered the Yucatan Peninsula.

But Thursday, weather authorities reported the storm had weakened as it moved off the Yucatan Peninsula, and maximum sustained wind speeds were estimated at 120 mph.

The storm also was downgraded from Category 5 — the most dangerous category for a hurricane — to Category 3.

"The wind speeds that they are reporting are generally recorded at 500 to 1,000 feet above ground, and at ground level they would probably be lower because of the friction of the ground," said Kishor Mehta, president of the Wind Engineering Research Council and an associate at Texas Tech University's Institute for Disaster Research.

However, he said, even winds in the 125 mph range could be devastating to many structures along the coast.

"The damage would be quite extensive," Mehta said. "The houses would have very extreme damage, losing at least part of the roofs on the vast majority of them as well as collapsing of walls."

Most of the damage would be to homes and low-rise buildings, which are generally designed to withstand winds of up to 90-100 mph, Mehta said.

Damage to low-rise shopping centers and similar structures could range from loss of roofs and collapse of walls to the possibility of complete washout, he said.

But "permanent" structures cast in place, including high-rise buildings, should see considerably less damage, he said.

In 1983, Hurricane Alicia killed 21 people and injured 1,800 when it struck Galveston and Houston and caused an estimated $3 billion in damage.

"Gilbert could easily cause damage in the neighborhood of $5 billion to $7 billion if it hits the right place," Mehta said.

Willis J. Hargrave Jr., president of the National Association of Professional Insurance Agents, said residents should make sure they have current information about their property insurance.

"If the worst happens, then property owners will have the insurance information with them that can help their claims to be quickly processed," Hargrave said.

He said residents should take their insurance policies with them if they evacuate their homes.

Mehta said the majority of refineries and power plants along the coast should survive well, although there may be some damage, he said. However, transmission lines and possibly pipelines could be damaged, he added.

State emergency council prepares for the worst

Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — The State Emergency Management Council, a collection of agencies to help protect, feed and console Texans stricken by disasters such as the one threatening the Texas coast, convened Wednesday for the first time since 1983.

In Washington, meanwhile, members of Texas' congressional delegation began nudging the federal agencies equipped to aid in the aftermath of Hurricane Gilbert's landfall.

Gov. Bill Clements' Division of Emergency Management brought together the state council, which consists of representatives of 27 agencies and the American Red Cross. The group met in its council room, a blast shelter cut into limestone bedrock 26 feet under the Department of Public Safety Headquarters in Austin.

"It looks like we've got a long weekend ahead," said George Bayoud, Clements' chief of staff. We've already been in touch with Washington, both FEMA (the Federal Emergency Management Administration) and the White House, letting them know we may need their help."

If Gilbert strikes Texas, the decision will be made from the room whether to seek Clements' approval for the intervention of 27,000 Army and Air National Guard troops. Clements is commander-in-chief of the guard forces.

Numerous state agencies reported Wednesday preparations for Gilbert's arrival.

Some 852 DPS troopers have been put on alert, with 150 other officers standing by. Some state agencies have been given the green light to close their offices, state parks within 100 miles of the coast are being evacuated and highway crews have fueled their equipment and sanitized water trucks for use as carriers of potable water.

Evacuation plans are being readied for the Corpus Christi State School.

The Red Cross is fully activated, said representative Steve Crisman. Some 140 volunteers and professionals have been assigned to Texas from 17 Midwest states.

Ninety-six vehicles have been made ready; 30 are headed to San Antonio, the staging area. Crisman said San Antonio was far enough from the coast to be protected from the storm, but close enough to reach affected coastal areas.

Col. Larry Reeves, with the Adjutant General's Office, said state procedures call for the full use of city and county forces before activation of the National Guard. He said local governments report their needs for additional personnel to local DPS offices and the emergency council.

Air National Guard aircraft have been moved from Houston to Austin.

Capt. Jim Robertson, chief enforcement officer for the Gulf Coast region of the Parks & Wildlife Service, said 147 boats are being tied down and made ready.

Small boats are being taken out of the water, their trailers lashed together and staked to trees. Large boats are seeking refuge in safe waters.

Robertson said the parks department's 12 airboats should prove useful if streets become flooded.

"We've got the boats, so we do the high-water work," he said.

Robertson said state parks away from the coast are being made ready as encampments for evacuees at no charge.

Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance said personnel are being readied to help find, identify and deal with propane tanks that become "floating bombs" when they break free and float in high water.

He said every owner of an LP tank should tie it down and shut off the main service valve. No tanks, including small barbecue tanks, should be brought inside, Hance warned.

Some state representatives know their services will not be needed until after floodwaters recede.

Pat Terry, of the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said his agencies won't be needed until victims of the storm return to find their homes and possessions ruined or wiped out.

"We provide crisis counseling to those who might be affected by disaster," Terry said. Sometimes the effects don't soak in until much later.

"Another mop-up agency is the office of the Comptroller of Public Accounts, which also has a representative on the council.

"We write the checks," explained agency representative Henry Taylor.

In Washington, Texas congressional officials said a cream-of-the-crop federal response team has been enlisted for duty.

"Fortunately, if you can use fortunately in this situation, this is happening when we have had a lull in this type of activity," FEMA's Scott Martin told Rep. Mac Sweeney, R-Wharton.

Petrochemical companies watch storm, prepare to shut down plants

By RUTH PILLER
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Emergency teams will monitor Hurricane Gilbert today as petrochemical company officials decide whether to shut down operations because of the storm, spokesmen said Wednesday.

"We are battening down the hatches," said Shell Oil representative De Dee Taylor. "A decision will have to be made very soon."

Closing the Shell plant requires a minimum of 24 hours from start to finish, Taylor said.

Energy firms earlier began evacuating employees from their offshore platforms in the Gulf. The possibility of a halt in Gulf oil production and the shutdown of refining operations on the coast have contributed to a surge in oil prices in the last two days.

Operations at Texaco's Port Arthur facilities — a refinery, two chemical plants, a research lab and marine headquarters — were expected to be operating as usual this morning, spokesman Fred Palmer said.

"We're in the watch portion of our preparedness," he said, adding that the second level of preparation, should it arrive, will be an official warning stage.

Palmer said precautions against high winds have begun, including boarding up windows near computer equipment.

A decision to close was also postponed until today at Coastal Corp., which has a refinery in Corpus Christi.

"We are making all preparations to shut down, but the decision to follow through will not be made until we get a better fix on the storm," spokesman Bob Wells said.

Taylor said water damage and loss of power due to high winds could prove costly for Shell's plant, which employs 2,400 people.

"It would be hard to say if its cost is $3 million or $300,000. At this stage, it's impossible to predict what the cost would be," she said. "The important thing is protecting people and assets. You don't think about money at a time like this."

Weather-forecasting experts at Coastal, which has about 200 employees at its Corpus Christi facility, and needs about two hours to halt operations, will keep an eye on Gilbert, Wells said.

"We'd like more than one opinion," he said.

Like Shell and Coastal, Texaco will employ a skeleton crew if the plant closes. Texaco's skeleton crew would probably consist of fewer than 100 of its 3,000 employees, Palmer said. Texaco's Port Arthur refinery, its largest in the nation, is designed to put out 250,000 barrels of oil per day, he said.

160 mph winds whip beach resorts on Yucatan Peninsula

By CHRIS ANGELO

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — The most intense hurricane on record surged toward Texas today after battering the Yucatan Peninsula with 160 mph winds, leveling slums, pummeling posh resorts and forcing tens of thousands to flee.

Hurricane Gilbert, which has left nearly one in four Jamaicans homeless, slackened somewhat as it swirled over land, but the storm was expected to strengthen over open water as it moved toward the U.S. Gulf Coast with sustained winds of 120 mph.

Brownsville, Texas, was deemed the most likely target, with a 21 percent probability of being hit, though a hurricane watch was in effect along the entire Texas coast as well as the northeastern Mexican coast from Tampico.

Haiti, meanwhile, declared a state of emergency today across its southern peninsula, where at least 10 hurricane-related deaths have been reported.

The storm knocked out power, water and telephone service on the Yucatan, though damage reports were sketchy because phone lines were still out early today, civil defense officials said.

Earlier this week the storm struck the Carribean, ravaging Jamaica, the Dominican Repubic, the Cayman Islands and Haiti, killing at least 19 in Jamaica and five in the Dominican Republic.

The storm, about 450 miles wide, hit the Yucatan coast about dawn Wednesday, thrashing beaches with 23-foot waves, uprooting trees, knocking out electricity and water supplies and severing telephone lines.

Mexican officials reported at least seven injuries. There were no reports of deaths.

"There is no light, there is no radio, there is nothing. There is much damage, the whole city is flooded," said Ramon Castillo, a night watchman at a newspaper in Campeche, a city on the east side of Yucatan. "Everything is dark. There are many boats up on the street along the waterfront."

High seas battered the sea wall in Campeche and created "terrible floods" along the waterfront, said Gimenio Perez, another worker at the newspaper, Novedades.

At 9 a.m. EDT, the center of the storm was located near latitude 22.1 north and longitude 92.0 west or about 430 miles southeast of Brownsville, Texas, according to the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

The storm was moving west-northwest at 15 mph and dumping up to 10 inches of rain. It was expected to turn gradually more northwest today.

Hurricane center director Robert Sheets said the hurricane was expected to hit land midday Friday and that its sustained winds would today "certainly increase to 130, 140 miles per hour."

"It's going to have an impact over a fairly large area," Sheets said on CBS-TV's "This Morning."

"Those major destructive winds are going to be in there fairly tight close to the center. But the impacts are going to be felt over most of the Texas area."

'48 Hours' will change format, cover hurricane

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — The ferocity of Hurricane Gilbert has prompted CBS' weekly news show "48 Hours" to mobilize for a live broadcast tonight, postponing the taped report on infertility that had been planned.

The news show normally examines a news subject by editing 48 hours' worth of videotape into a kind of instant documentary. But the fast-approaching hurricane didn't give CBS much time to tape anything, so much of tonight's program will be live, said executive producer Andrew Heyward.

"What we always said is that we would respond to breaking news when we thought we could add something to it," Heyward said. "This is really a kind of hybrid between '48 Hours' and special-events coverage. We think the story is potentially so big we're doing a special edition of '48 Hours' that looks ahead to the story even though we didn't spend two days taping it.

"We'll see if it works, but the notion is that the people are hungry for information we can provide, and we will look ahead."

He said the news division originally had planned to dispatch crews to tape 48 hours of coverage when the storm hit. That would have been turned into next week's show, which would have been a quick turnaround.

"So what's really '48 hours' about it, we're doing it on less than 48 hours' notice," Heyward said Wednesday. "Soup to nuts, this is even less. In fact, we jokingly said around here today we should call it '4.8 hours.'"

Dan Rather will anchor the broadcast. Reports will come from 14 correspondents who were hurriedly dispatched to the Caribbean, where the storm has caused devastation in Jamaica; to Mexico, which was battered Wednesday; and across the Gulf Coast areas of the United States, which were bracing for the arrival of the storm.

"I don't want to sound corny, but I do think it's a genuine public service," said Heyward. "It won't be as stylish as what we normally do, nor should it be. But we're going to deliver important information."

Jamaican hurricane damage 'like Hiroshima after bomb'

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Hurricane Gilbert damaged 80 percent of Jamaica's homes, devastated crops and left eastern sections of the island looking "like Hiroshima after the atom bomb," said Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

Speaking to reporters Wednesday after a five-hour inspection flight over the island, he estimated damage at $8 billion and said one out of every five homes was destroyed.

State-run Jamaican Broadcasting Corp., operating by generator, said at least 19 people were killed when the storm whipped across the island on Monday.

The hurricane, the most intense on record, also killed five people in the Dominican Republic on its sweep westward through the Caribbean before slamming into Mexico's Yucatan peninsula Wednesday with 160 mph winds.

The Jamaican Embassy in Washington said 500,000 of Jamaica's 2.3 million people were rendered homeless, and the government estimated that about 150,000 people were in distress shelters set up around the island in sports stadiums, churches, government buildings and movie theaters.

In the Dominican Republic, officials reported widespread crop damage. The country's main electricity relay station remained out of service Wednesday, leaving half the capital of Santo Domingo without power.

Heavy crop damage also was reported in the islands of St. Lucia, Guadeloupe and St. Vincent.

Seaga told reporters the storm wiped out 100,000 of Jamaica's 500,000 homes, with another 300,000 damaged: "We saw whole villages where not a single building was left standing. It looked like Hiroshima after the atom bomb."

The storm, which dumped up to 10 inches of rain on the island, wiped out the island's banana crop and poultry industry and heavily damaged the coconut industry and garden crops, Seaga said.

Two days after the hurricane's passing, Jamaica remained without electricity. Most regions still had no water.

Seaga said damage was widespread along the southern coast west of Kingston, although not as devastating as on the eastern end.

The northern coast, where Jamaica's vital tourist industry is based, escaped the worst of the storm, and only two of the region's luxury hotels appeared to have suffered noticeable damage.

In Kingston, Jamaica's capital city of 750,000, trees, zinc roofs, telephone poles and billboards littered the streets. Military and civilian volunteers worked in virtually every street, pulling down collapsed roofs, sweeping up debris, and bringing food to the homeless.

At the National Chest Hospital, officials had to contend not only with storm damage but with looters who stole mattresses and other supplies.

Seaga said he had no doubt "that this is going to be the worst disaster that we have experienced in our modern history."

He said he would hold an emergency Cabinet meeting today to reevaluate government reconstruction priorities and projected costs, as well as Jamaica's requirements in international aid.

"Now, our first priority is to provide shelter and sustenance," the prime minister said. "It's obvious we'll have to spend much more money than we thought initially we'd have to."

The United States has sent in Navy cargo planes with plastic roof covering and collapsible water storage tanks. Offers of aid have come from Canada, Britain, France, West Germany and Israel, Seaga said.

Government officials said Kingston's Norman Manley Airport, severely damaged by Gilbert, would reopen to Air Jamaica flights today or Friday.

Part of the tarmac for smaller aircraft was littered with twisted and bent planes Wednesday. A 10-seater sat against a row of palms, its bruised nose to the ground.

The embassy in Washington said airports were open for emergency traffic only, and communications were extremely limited. It said it had no reports of American victims.

Louisiana breeders act to save herds

CAMERON, La. (AP) — Hurricane frenzy that gripped the Gulf Coast on Wednesday found Francis Bride, a Lake Charles physician, helping to shove the rump of the balky steer into the rear of an already packed trailer.

Cameron Parish, a thin layer of lush marsh just above sea level, has been a frequent front door for hurricanes over the years. It was the threshhold chosen by Audrey, which left over 400 people dead and wiped out the region's cattle industry.

The parish boasts about 5,000 head of cattle, many of them registered pure-breds, and Dr. Bride was helping a friend move his 55 head valued at $45,000.

"We've learned and now we move the registered stuff as the hurricane season starts each year, and don't bring them back until the season ends," said Jamey Guthrie, a cattleman also helping Bride and others.

Bride, who also owns cattle in Cameron, said most of the stock being moved at the last minute is "commercial stuff. "We'll be working all night to get them out.'

As they worked, a caravan of cattle trucks jammed two-lane Louisiana 27, the major highway leading out of the coastal parish. Vehicles ranged from pickups hauling two of the animals to 18-wheelers hauling double-deck trailers with 50 head.

While Hurricane Gilbert was bearing down on the Gulf, the talk was still of the 1957 hurricane which even the younger generation knows all about.

"I was less than 2 years old when Audrey hit us and, of course, that was before we knew anything about hurricane alerts and evacuation," said Guthrie.

Gurthrie said he and 147 others rode out Audrey in the top two floors of his grandfather's three-story house just blocks from the Gulf.

"I don't remember, naturally, but Grandpa said he opened all the windows and doors downstairs and the tidal surge washed through the house without hurting any of us. He said that house didn't move two inches."

At Creole, about three miles from the Gulf, Charles Styron was trying to sell all the beer he could at his grocery store before he was forced to quit.

"If that storm gets to us, we'll get the word to evacuate some time tomorrow and the sheriff's department will call and tell us all to quit selling beer," said Styron.

Two major aid plans in effect

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is dispatching active-duty military personnel and equipment from Texas to assist with evacuations as Hurricane Gilbert approaches the U.S. Gulf Coast, and private groups are joining in the relief effort.

The American Red Cross said Wednesday it had begun sending emergency supplies to four hurricane "watch" districts being established at several Texas cities.

The Red Cross said thousands of blankets, cots, comfort kits and cleanup kits were on their way to Corpus Christi, Harlingen, Houston and Beaumont, Texas. In addition, volunteers and staff members have been sent to San Antonio, Texas, and Birmingham, Ala. which have been established as staging areas for deployment after the storm hits.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said the Army was setting up a "crisis action center" in Washington to coordinate the Pentagon's effort. An undetermined number of active duty personnel and equipment, including trucks, helicopters and bulldozers, would be sent from Fort Hood in Killeen, Texas and possibly Fort Bliss in El Paso, he said.

Individuals interested in contributing to either relief effort can do so through their local Red Cross chapter or send donations to:

■ The American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013 and

■ Partners of the Americas, Hurricane Gilbert Relief Fund, 1424 K St., N.W., Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Vote for future in bond election

Midland voters will go to the polls Saturday to determine the fate of four separate bond proposals that, together, would total $17.4 million.

Business as well as municipal leaders assert that the projects are needed and will help the city overcome the damaging effects of the post-boom years. On the other side, some taxpayers have complained that they're being hit from all sides by higher taxes. Both sides have valid points, but let's look at the plan as a whole.

Over the next five years, the proposals would finance $5.4 million in street improvements, $4.3 million for public safety, $4.2 million for parks, and $3.5 million for drainage improvements. While some proposals may represent a more pressing "need" than others, in total they constitute an ambitious undertaking by the city at a time when many would counsel more conservative steps.

Yet waiting is partially the reason Midland is in need of more — and better — services today. Despite the oil price decline and the damaging effects that caused, Midland has continued to grow in population, although at a slower pace. And despite the work done in regard to public services during the boom years, Midland still has not "caught up" with the needs of its now larger populace. In those hectic times, the city often threw its resources at what was most critical and pushed some needs to the back burner. Those needs are still there and have, in fact, grown larger.

Compounding that problem is the prediction that even more growth — in terms of both births and in-migration — is on the way. Midland already is on the verge of having 100,000 residents. If the additional growth does materialize will we be ready for it or will we be caught in the crunch as we were in the early 1980s? We all say we're in favor of slow, orderly growth, but are we?

It's true that no one likes higher taxes, but it should be noted that this full package of proposals would only add 3.6 cents per $100 valuation to the city tax rate. That's an additional $18 a year in city taxes on a $50,000 home.

Up-and-coming young executives and retired people are attracted by vibrant cities — if those cities offer good services. But few want to go to communities without adequate streets, drainage facilities, police and fire protection and, just as importantly, parks for their recreational use.

Midland can either stand still while the rest of the state gets ready for the fabulous decade headed its way, or it can invest in the future. Although the bond items can be voted on separately, we encourage voters to go to the polls Saturday and vote in favor of all four proposals.

GEORGE F. WILL

Dukakis could try arguing economics

WASHINGTON — Pelting Michael Dukakis with unsolicited advice is a low-tech but high-growth industry, so here goes. He should tell the country that the Reagan-Bush administration has miraculously made Karl Marx seem correct — this at a moment when there are no longer any believing Marxists east of the Elbe River.

George F. Will

If Marx had been scribbling away in the Library of Congress (our equivalent of the British Museum, where Marx scribbled), in January, 1981, as Reaganites marched into Washington, he would have said: The class struggle is about to intensify. During the Reagan Terror, labor will lose ground to capital.

Today it can be argued that compensation of labor, including wages and salaries and fringe benefits, as a share of personal income is at the lowest level of any peak year (meaning any year at a comparable stage of an economic expansion) since 1947. The difference is not huge, but there it is. And according to a study for the Economic Policy Institute, by Lawrence Mishel and Jacqueline Simon, since 1979 income from property ownership (rents, dividends, interest) has risen three times faster than income from work.

Dukakis could say, in language adapted for mass audiences, that we are witnessing the rise of a rentier society. The political potential for Dukakis is in this fact: Most people are not rentiers. Or, more precisely, most people do not think of themselves as such. That qualification is necessary because anyone who is vested in a pension program is involved through it in the stock and bond markets and thus has a stake in interest and dividends.

Dukakis should stress that to pay the interest component of the 1988 budget will require a sum ($210 billion) equal to approximately half of all the personal income-tax receipts. This represents, as Sen. Pat Moynihan has said, a transfer of wealth from labor to capital unprecedented in American history.

Tax revenues are being collected from average Americans (the median income of a family of four is slightly under $30,000) and given to the buyers of U.S. government bonds — buyers in Beverly Hills, Lake Forest, Shaker Heights and Grosse Point, and Tokyo and Riyadh. If a Democrat can't make something of that, what are Democrats for?

But here Dukakis confronts the problem of being a "progressive" in an affluent middle-class country. Only a minority of Americans — a small and shrinking minority — think of themselves as "labor." And the vast majority of that minority is already for Dukakis.

Furthermore, Americans are pleased to think of themselves as living in a "classless" society. That implausible belief is actually the imperfect expression of two other ideas. One is that almost everyone is in the middle class. The other is that social mobility is such that with pluck and luck almost anyone can make it into the middle class. (The exception to this rule is the large semi-permanent underclass that seem impervious to social policy.)

But such sentimentalities aside, politics is about who gets what, especially as a result of government action. In the Reagan years, a particular social stratum has gotten a lot. The people who get income from property have benefited, especially from the huge deficits that have put in place a permanent high level of government borrowing that produces high interest rates.

For decades, "deficit spending" has been denounced by conservatives as a Democratic device for redistributing income to the undeserving poor. The Reagan deficits have, with fine impartiality, helped the rich.

Marxists, who believe that history has an inner logic, like to say "it is no accident" that whatever happens happens. In fact, the kindliness of Reaganomics toward the property-owning class (according to Mishel and Simon, the value of the financial assets of more than half of all families in this classless society in 1983 was zero or negative — they had more debts than assets) has been the predictable consequence of a class-based policy. The policy is trickle-down economics.

Republicans can reasonably argue that a beneficial policy for those at the bottom of the social heap is a policy that energizes those at the top — the investing, entrepreneurial class that makes the wheels turn in a free society where government does not run a command economy. However, that is a politically awkward argument to make during a political campaign, even in a democracy as committed to capitalism as this one is. Dukakis might do well by forcing Bush to make that argument.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Push on to take mystery out of lunch

There's a report out from something called the "Public Voice of Food & Health" (P.V.F.& H.) that says school lunches are too high in fat, sugar and salt.

Grizzard

The report specifically criticizes the U.S. Department of Agriculture, according to news stories I read, for the high fat surplus food it provides the public school lunch program.

"We'd like to see more schools serve healthfully modified lunches that are still attractive to school children like spaghetti with meatballs or baked potatos with chili," said Eileen Kugler, spokeslady for the P.V.F.& H.

What I want to know is where was Eileen Kugler and the public voice for whatever it is when I was in school?

Every school day for four years, I had to eat lunch in the high school cafeteria. I don't know about all that high fat and too much salt and sugar business, but I do know somebody was trying to poison me with that food and eventually would have had I not graduated.

I would have loved spaghetti and meatballs and chili with a baked potato.

Perhaps, that was part of the problem. If I could have identified what I was being served for lunch, it might have been easier to get it down.

It's tough to look at a plate of food and know only there's some brown stuff, green stuff and yellow stuff. Maybe the brown stuff was roast beef, perhaps the green was some sort of vegetable and the yellow a fruit.

Then, again, the brown could have come from a camel or a goat, the green could have been something that started out white before it began to mold, and the yellow could have been something imported to this country as a governmental effort to boost a third world economy.

Occasionally, of course, I would be able to identify something on my plate, but I don't know whether it's worse to be eating government surplus pickled okra and know it, or be eating government surplus pickled okra and think it might be something that grows only in a cave.

As far as today's school lunches are concerned we must remember the children of today are the leaders of tomorrow. Certainly they should not be served food with too much fat or salt or sugar, but they also shouldn't be forced to go through a daily visit to cafeteria-from-hell like we did.

Here is how I would run today's school lunch program:

1. Each serving should be truthfully identified. Perhaps the boys in shop could make little signs the cooks could stick in the food.

2. Faculty members, as well as lunchroom personnel, should be made to eat the same food the students are being served in full view of the students.

3. Any student requesting seconds should be sent away for psychiatric review.

I recall the immortal words of my boyhood friend and idol, Weyman C. Wannamaker Jr., a great American. He forked the mystery meat on his plate one day at lunch, held it aloft to study it and then said, "You'd have to be crazy to eat something as ugly as this."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 15, the 259th day of 1988. There are 107 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on Sept. 15, 1963, four children were killed when a bomb went off during Sunday services at a black Baptist church in Birmingham, Ala., that had been a rallying point for civil rights demonstrations.

On this date:

In 1776, British forces occupied New York City during the American Revolution.

In 1789, the U.S. Department of Foreign Affairs was renamed the Department of State.

In 1821, independence was proclaimed for Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

In 1857, William Howard Taft — who served as president of the United States and as chief justice — was born in Cincinnati, Ohio.

In 1887, the city of Philadelphia launched a three-day celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Constitution of the United States.

In 1917, Russia was proclaimed a republic by Alexander Kerensky, the head of the provisional government that came to power following the abdication of Czar Nicholas II.

In 1935, the Nuremberg Laws deprived German Jews of their citizenship and made the swastika the official symbol of Nazi Germany.

In 1940, during the Battle of Britain in World War II, the tide turned as Royal Air Force planes inflicted heavy losses against the Luftwaffe.

In 1950, during the Korean conflict, U.N. forces landed at Inchon in the south and began their drive toward Seoul.

In 1959, Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev arrived in the United States to begin a 13-day visit.

Let's live within means

A great percentage of Midlanders have experienced the financial pinch in all income levels, which is a situation we must all bear individually, of course. However, is this the time to bring forth a multi-million dollar bond issue that we could not even afford during the "boom" times? It is our considered opinion that Midland must simply live within its allocated budget the same as people on limited incomes must. We as private citizens cannot merely hold a private bond issue to supplement our budget for needed or desired items or services. We must live within our budget, or find supplementary earning sources.

Any citizen can see where money is being thrown away with our current operational methods. How many of us have passed a "road repair crew" and viewed five or six men standing around while one or two men work with a shovel or pick. Why does it take two men to read a city water meter? One to drive the truck, and the other to read the meter? Why can we not use incarcerated individuals to mow city parks and other menial chores? How overcrowded are our existing parks? Rarely have we seen more than a handful of people in 80 percent of them. So why do we need to spend millions on another when financial times are too hard on the greater percentage of Midlanders?

As we can all see, Midland homes are vacated in all neighborhoods and price ranges. Why must we encourage building beyond our current perimeters which eventually will require more monetary upkeep, maintenance, etc.

We love Midland and its people and are not against progress when rationally approached, but let's remain a caring and loving community — living within its means — and not get carried away, like a child with the "give-me's."

Whether or not you share in our opinions, please do vote as your conscience dictates, rather than complain about the outcome later.

Communications vital

As a member of the Midland Fire Department for 22 years and currently serving as the Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Chief-/Communications Supervisor, I would like to offer some of my thoughts concerning the upcoming communications bond election.

This election is an opportunity for all citizens to approve the funding that would replace a system that is outdated and unreliable.

Upon joining the fire service in 1966, my initial training involved all aspects of fire suppression and all functions of the communications system. Much of the equipment used then is still being used today. Some of this equipment is obsolete, at best, and often very expensive to repair when broken because of its age and the availability of usable parts. We currently use transmitters that are over 30 years old; they are in dire need of repairs.

On July 30th, the Fire Department, EMS, and various agencies throughout West Texas conducted a simulated disaster at Midland International Airport. The purpose of this drill was to test the capabilities of the responding agencies in a situation similar to the one that recently occurred in Dallas. Although a large majority of the drill was successful, one of the major problems found was the lack of adequate communications. The assessors who critiqued our performance (four members of the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, the Federal Aeronautics Administration, and the National Transportation Safety Board) were very complimentary to the responding agencies, but felt that our communications system was inadequate. In any emergency situation, be it one patient or 50, proper communication capabilities are mandatory.

As a Midland homeowner and taxpayer, I can relate to the opposition to higher taxes. It appears that everyone is lined up and asking for more and more each day. As a public servant for over 20 years, I believe this opportunity is very important to all citizens and should be given our support. By doing so, we can ensure that a call for help will be answered by the best trained and equipped personnel available anywhere.

Ray Sprague

Proposition 4 vital

Passage of Proposition 4 on Sept. 17 is vital for our community. We must provide our public safety officers the equipment to protect our lives and property.

Most of our current communications system was purchased in the early '70s and will not take us into the 1990s. The current system is inadequate to handle a major emergency situation. Because of its age, the existing system is very expensive to maintain and is not reliable. There are areas of the city where officers are not able to communicate with the dispatchers, and the system does not allow the police and fire departments to communicate with each other.

The criminal element in our community has more sophisticated communications equipment than our police officers. They are able to monitor all police activity and do! The proposed communications equipment should provide faster response times. It will give greater flexibility for development of information of suspicious vehicles. It will allow our undercover officers to communicate without being monitored. It will be dependable.

As an organization that is interested in getting the criminals off the streets of Midland and making our community more secure we urge support of Proposition 4.

Bonds coverage 'unfair'

Fair is fair! The Midland Reporter-Telegram has presented this community with extremely biased stories about the city's upcoming $17.4 million bond election. What the newspaper publishes in its editorials is certainly its province, but the public should have the right to learn both sides of a front-page story when it is as controversial as this bond election.

The slanted view of the newspaper is understandable, inasmuch as it plays well with advertisers who have something to sell — but the sellers are not the only people in town.

We do need for the Public Safety and Street issues to pass but the Parks issue is a beautiful, unaffordable fantasy, too absurd to believe and the Drainage issue is an attempt to cover past mistakes of the city administration and the city Planning Commission and it has not been claimed that it will eliminate the problem anyhow.

W.T. Wynn
Midland

Adequate isn't enough

I am writing in response to Belinda Gentry's letter of Sept. 4, in which she stated Public Safety Officers' communication equipment presently in use is adequate. Adequate may be fine when you are talking about soap or paper towels, but when your life is on the line, adequate is not good enough; you want state-of-the-art.

Sophisticated equipment is not a luxury, but a necessity in life and death situations. Some of the police radio equipment now in use is over 20 years old and obsolete. Not a day goes by that garbled communication doesn't interfere and create problems for officers on emergency calls.

During the recent emergency exercise at Midland Regional Airport, communications was the number one problem according to the persons who critiqued it. (Please do not bet your life on our present radio equipment because it is far from adequate.)

Vote yes for Proposition #4 on Public Safety on Sept. 17; you deserve the best trained and best equipped officers possible.

Support all four bonds

This letter is to urge all registered voters in the city of Midland to vote for approving all four bond issues on Saturday, Sept. 17th.

This bond election has separate issues for Streets, Drainage, Parks and Public Safety. The voters need to give their approval to all four. If our city is to grow and if we want to compete with other cities, both from across Texas and the nation for business relocation and expansion then Midland needs to continue to maintain and improve its streets, drainage system, parks and other facilities.

An immediate benefit to passage of the Streets issue is that work can begin next year on coordinating our traffic signals on certain main arterial streets. Anyone who regularly drives on our principle streets is knowledgeable about how our traffic signals work on a less than desirable basis.

It should be an assumption for anyone who owns a house in Midland that business growth and relocations to Midland help to maintain or improve the value of one's house. Passage of these bond issues can only be a positive thing to help our city compete for business expansion and relocations.

Please take the time Saturday to vote for all four bond issues.

Dukakis pledges weapons support

Associated Press

Michael Dukakis, sounding hawkish in tone, pledged his support for a variety of weapons systems as he wrapped up an assault on GOP attacks on him as weak on defense. George Bush declared that he is the only presidential candidate who can carry America's current peace and prosperity into the 1990s.

The Democratic nominee, completing three days of foreign policy and defense speeches, charged Wednesday that the nation's military has suffered from years of neglect under the Reagan administration.

Dukakis promised an audience in Annapolis, Md., that the nation is "going to have strong strategic forces, we're going to have strong conventional forces, and we're going to clean up the mess in the Pentagon."

Bush told a raucous rally in San Francisco's Chinatown that the November election provides the voters with a choice. "You can choose to keep going with the policies that have launched the longest period of economic growth in history or you can choose to go backward."

The vice president was campaigning again today in California, a key state with the most electoral votes — 47. He planned another attack on rival Dukakis in an economic speech to San Francisco's Commonwealth Club before ending the day in Ohio.

Dukakis was flying to Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming to view fire damage to 939,270 acres of the 2.2 million-acre facility and meet with firefighters, local residents and governors of Western states ravaged by the blaze.

Dukakis was not expected to take a position on the question of whether the Reagan administration was wrong to let the fires burn unchecked until mid-July.

"He's not going out there to criticize but to talk and listen and learn...He wants to see the fires, listen, and say that if elected president he'll look at the fire policy," Dukakis communications director Leslie Dach said.

"He'll be expressing support for people fighting the fire and be shown some of the damaged areas," said Dukakis spokesman Joe Lockhart.

Aides said he would meet with Gov. Ted Schwinden of Montana; Gov. Roy Romer of Colorado; Gov. Mike Sullivan of Wyoming, and Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho.

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, stumping for votes in Wichita, Kan., was to hold his first news conference since Sept. 1. Quayle's counterpart, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, planned campaign appearances in Dallas and Memphis, Tenn.

The two contenders got word Wednesday on their only vice presidential debate, which was set for Oct. 5 in Omaha, Neb. Bentsen said debating Quayle would give both an opportunity "to compare our records of experience and accomplishment in the U.S. Senate."

The two encountered hostile crowds on the campaign trail as the GOP senator from Indiana was jeered by Dukakis supporters chanting "Go home Quayle!" in Albuquerque, N.M., and hecklers rattled the Democratic senator in his home state of Texas.

"As you listen to this babble over here, you can't help but think of the Dukakis positions," Quayle said. "They have no positions. They're loud but they don't have any ideas.

"I understand you have a balloon festival coming up. The governor of Massachusetts has a lot of hot air, why don't you invite him?" he said.

Review: Some blood released improperly

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal review of the Red Cross's blood service regions indicates that more than 2,400 blood products were released improperly over a six-month period — 518 of them without complete testing for deadly diseases.

"The review found no indication that any Red Cross center issued blood for transfusion that had a confirmed positive test for AIDS or hepatitis B," said Dr. S. Gerald Sandler of Red Cross blood services told a news conference Wednesday.

Despite this, he noted that the 518 blood products had been issued before all record checks or testing had been completed. "That information was not known at the time of their release, and the products should not have been released," Sandler said.

Dr. Ernst R. Jaffe, chairman of the organization's Blood Service Committee, meanwhile, announced that the Red Cross, in compliance with the recommendations of its review board, signed a voluntary agreement with the Food and Drug Administration to help avoid such errors in the future.

"Less than a year ago, Red Cross discovered that the increase in the number of tests conducted and blood samples quarantined also increased the potential for human error," he said.

Following the release of improperly tested blood products at facilities in Washington, D.C., earlier this year, the Red Cross committed itself to "a national zero error goal and launched a nationwide review" to determine the extent of these mistakes and to develop ways to reduce their potential, Jaffe said.

The investigation revealed that of 6 million blood products, 576,426 were quarantined or destroyed properly, while 2,420 were released improperly, including the 518 released before all testing was completed, he said. The six-month period when this occurred was September 1987 to March 1988.

"Most mistakes involved donations that tested negative for AIDS, but for various reasons were not in compliance with Red Cross or FDA directives that require such donations to be quarantined and-or destroyed," Victor W. Schmitt, vice president of Red Cross blood services, said in a statement.

"An example given is the situation in which a donor who received previous false-positive test results gives blood again. FDA and Red Cross require that any subsequent donations be quarantined and-or destroyed, even when they test negative for AIDS and hepatitis B."

In the cases in which improperly tested blood products had been released, Sandler said the donors were contacted for retesting to assure that no tainted blood had been transmitted.

The review found that 88 percent of the mistaken releases were concentrated in four Red Cross regions: the Carolinas region based in Charlotte, N.C.; the Midwest region based in Omaha, Neb.; the Missouri-Illinois region based in St. Louis; and the Tidewater region based in Norfolk, Va.

Tougher provisions added to drug bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House anti-drug initiative is moving toward a zero tolerance policy, as lawmakers tack on amendments that stiffen penalties for recreational drug use.

The House sent its latest message to drug users Wednesday, passing an amendment that would subject anyone possessing "personal use" amounts of illegal drugs to civil penalties of $10,000 per violation.

The vote was 293-115, with 128 Democrats and 165 Republicans supporting the proposal. There were 112 Democrats and three Republicans in opposition.

As House members began wading through changes to the drug bill last week, they signaled that any drug use was intolerable. In the first test of this policy, lawmakers voted 335-67 for an amendment that would deny many federal benefits to those convicted of two drug offenses, including possession.

Still to come is a proposal that would deny states a portion of their federal highway money if they fail to take away drivers' licenses of those convicted of one drug offense. The initial conviction would bring a six-month suspension, while repeat convictions within a five-year period could bring revocation for a year.

"The theme of this year's drug bill is user accountability," Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., said in support of the civil fines amendment sponsored by Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla.

The overall anti-drug legislation would add some $2 billion to the $3.9 billion federal effort to combat illegal drugs. It includes money and programs for law enforcement, education, treatment, rehabilitation and virtually every other avenue to try to stem both the supply of drugs and demand for them.

The House likely will complete the legislation next week. The Senate has yet to begin consideration of its own major anti-drug bill.

The civil fines envisioned in the Edwards amendment would not replace current criminal penalties for possessing marijuana, cocaine or other drugs. The Justice Department would set the amounts of drugs that would trigger the civil penalty.

In the major difference between civil and criminal cases, a defendant in a civil proceeding needs only to be found guilty by "clear and convincing evidence." This is a far easier burden for the government than the "beyond a reasonable doubt" standard it must prove in a criminal case.

In assessing the penalties, the Justice Department would take into account an individual's income and net assets.

After a penalty was proposed, the defendant could ask for an administrative hearing and also could appeal to a federal court.

The Reagan administration coined the term "zero tolerance" to emphasize its policy that drug possession is as unacceptable as drug dealing.

Supporters of the civil fines said their amendment was needed to enforce such a policy, because overburdened prosecutors and overcrowded prisons cannot handle criminal cases involving "personal use" possession cases.

"Nobody thinks it's worth taking them to court," Edwards said, calling the amendment a response to "a sense of frustration in America — the inability of our criminal courts to effectively stop drug use."

Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime, opposed the amendment, saying it would either have the effect of decriminalizing drug possession or abandoning the criminal justice system.

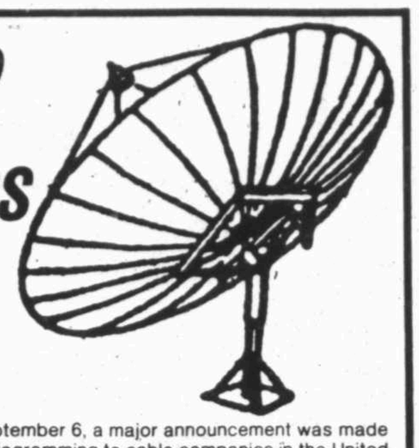
OPEN LETTER TO CABLE SUBSCRIBERS AND SATELLITE TV OWNERS!



At the Home Satellite TV Trade Show in Nashville, Tennessee on September 6, a major announcement was made concerning scrambled satellite programming. The largest supplier of programming to cable companies in the United States is now offering scrambled programming to satellite system owners at drastically reduced prices. These prices are the same and in some cases lower than the local cable companies themselves have to pay for the same programming. For example, you can buy 17 scrambled channels including two HBO channels, ESPN, CNN, CNN Headline News and others for only $16 per month. Additional premium channels like Showtime and The Movie Channel are $6 per month each.

On Satellite, of course, you get both the east and west coast feeds of each movie channel so your cost is actually $3 per movie channel feed per month. Compare that to the $10 or $11 per premium movie channel cable subscribers have to pay. We have always believed that home satellite TV viewers should have access to premium channels at wholesale prices. And now you can.

If you would like more information about this programming please contact our office. If you do not have a descrambler feel free to stop by the store and get a complete demonstration. The scrambling of satellite channels has actually created many new features.

Today's modern system is a receiver, dish mover, and descrambler all built into one attractive box. It's smaller than an average VCR. The first thing you will notice is how clean and sharp the picture is; it's almost 1/4 sharper than any cable system. These new systems put words and information on your TV screen. With the touch of a button you can get the title of a movie, what it's rated (G,PG,R,X,Etc.), how many minutes are left in the movie, and the satellite and channel you are on. Touch another button and it tells you what comes on next, what it's rated, and when it starts. All that information is in big, easy-to-read letters on your TV screen. If there are certain channels you don't want the kids to watch, you can black them out quickly and easily.

Many of the programs are in stereo for those who have a stereo TV, or even better still, a separate component stereo system. The stereo sound is clean, rich and crisp, just like sitting in a movie theater. Many programs like HBO and MTV are in digital stereo sound, sound quality as good as the new compact disc players. Speaking of movie theaters, there is a new type of programming available through your descrambler called Pay-Per-View. These movies are either still showing at the theater or just left and won't be available on VCR tape or cable for months. You can watch these movies for about $4 each and be billed at the end of the month for what you watch.

We can modernize your existing system and provide all the features we mentioned above at very reasonable prices.

If you don't have a system you can buy one during our sale for $1695.00 complete or just $43.00 per month with no money down.

With these new scrambled programming prices, and the new advanced features you can enjoy the very best of both worlds.

Sincerely,
Mike Massey

Questions to be resolved before fetal tissue used in experiments

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Medical researchers say transplanting tissue from freshly aborted human fetuses holds great promise for suffers of Parkinson's and other diseases, but they admit that ethical questions must be resolved before launching widespread experiments in the new technique.

A special National Institutes of Health advisory committee was turning to those questions today in a second day of hearings expected to focus on ways to guard against commercial trafficking in fetal tissue and to discourage the prospect of people becoming pregnant with the intention of having an abortion to provide treatment for a relative.

Meanwhile, a ban against federal financing of such research is likely to remain in effect for several months at least.

The panel of outside experts, consisting of medical, legal and religious leaders, is scheduled to make recommendations Friday, which will be passed on to a standing NIH advisory committee and, ultimately, NIH Director James B. Wyngaarden.

The three-day meeting of the special advisory panel that started Wednesday was an outgrowth of a decision by the No. 2 official at the Department of Health and Human Services, Assistant Secretary for Health Robert E. Windom, to deny permission for NIH scientists to transplant fetal tissue into Parkinson's patients pending a full airing of legal and ethical questions.

Leatrice Ducat, founder of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and now operator of a non-profit organ exchange operation headquartered in Philadelphia, told the group she favored much wider research using fetal tissue for diabetes and other diseases.

However, she said her organization does not collect and distribute fetal tissue to researchers now "because the emotional climate" which makes hospitals and other institutions where abortions are performed "reluctant to donate fetal tissue."

William F. Colliton, a retired gynecologist and obstetrician representing Right to Life of Maryland, appeared before the panel to oppose the research.

"This proposition further devalues our preborn brothers and sisters and lends an aura of respectability to the elective killing of these patients who today have no protection under the law," he said.

Dr. Myron Genel, a pediatrics professor and associate dean for government and community affairs at the Yale University School of Medicine, told the committee the Association of American Medical Colleges and the Association of American Universities favor fetal tissue transplant research with proper safeguards.

"While the decision to halt federal involvement in this research was guided by ethical concerns, equally compelling ethical concerns are raised by proposals to enjoin this research permanently and thereby to preclude the alleviation of suffering and illness in the living," Genel said.

Although not spelled out, his reference to proposals for a permanent ban apparently referred to a proposed White House executive order distributed to federal officials. The document, disclosed by news reports last week, had not been intended for public consumption.

Genel's suggestion that ethical questions also would be raised by a permanent ban echoed the sentiments expressed earlier Wednesday by a Swedish physician who is one of the few people in the world to have transplanted fetal tissue into the brains of Parkinson's patients.

Dr. Lars Olson, professor of neurobiology at Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, told the panel the technique also has been used in Mexico, China, England and Cuba.

There are no known cases of fetal tissue being transplanted as a treatment for Parkinson's disease in the United States, but several animal studies have suggested the procedure can be effective.

"The animal data...are so promising we have approached a point where I believe it is unethical not to do this in human studies," Olson told the committee.

Hurricane delays shuttle launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA says it still hopes to launch Discovery this month but is delaying setting a date because Hurricane Gilbert could disrupt operations at the flight control center in Houston.

In making the announcement Wednesday, the space agency also cited uncertainty about a small hydrogen leak detected in the space shuttle's main engine propulsion system, a problem not considered serious.

Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said Friday is the earliest a launch date would be set. He said Sept. 26 is the earliest possible target for launching Discovery and its five-man crew.

The hurricane, which churned in the Gulf of Mexico today, was on a course that could take it to the Texas coast near Houston. NASA's Johnson Space Center is located south of Houston, 30 miles inland from the gulf.

"We don't know where the hurricane is going, but we thought it best to wait a day or so, or whatever it takes to make a decision," Truly said.

"Even though Houston doesn't get hit, it is a threat to Houston, and we have people there who have to turn attention to their homes and families, just as other people along the Texas coast are doing," Truly said.

Once a shuttle is launched, the mission is controlled from the Johnson center. Earlier storms in that area have caused flooding, disrupting communications and computer operations at the center.

Truly spoke to reporters at the conclusion of a two-day flight readiness review during which more than 150 shuttle managers and engineers and outside experts evaluated the shuttle's systems and the preparedness of launch and flight control teams.

Truly said he polled the 15 key NASA and contractor managers at the conclusion of the review, "and there wasn't a dissenting vote to launch...We're in a very positive situation."

Army arrives to help battle Western wildfires

Associated Press

Firefighters mopping up a 939,270-acre blaze in Yellowstone National Park braced for warmer weather that could heat things up as Army reinforcements eager to join the battle against a giant fire arrived in Montana.

"We have been leaning forward in the saddle," Col. Beau Bergeron said as 900 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., arrived Wednesday to help fight the 247,000-acre Canyon Creek blaze in west-central Montana.

Nine hundred more soldiers were to arrive today, swelling the ranks of firefighters wrestling with the blaze in and around the Scapegoat Wilderness to 3,000.

Fires also burned in California, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

California's Gold Rush country in the Sierra Nevada enjoyed a second day of favorable weather, bringing firefighters closer to containing a 52-square-mile timber and brush fire that destroyed 97 homes and 60 other buildings.

Officials said they expected to contain the fire today, and begin sending most of the 2,778 firefighters and support workers fighting the blaze home.

Tougher controls pledged

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director William Sessions says top bureau officials will face disciplinary action if there are more abuses of the kinds that occurred in a terrorism probe of opponents of the Reagan administration's Central American policy.

Sessions disciplined six lower- and mid-level bureau personnel Wednesday. But he told the Senate Intelligence Committee that "under the procedures that were...in place at the time," higher-level officials "had no reasonable way to know" the bureau was collecting information on administration opponents whose activities had nothing to do with terrorism.

During the probe of the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, "there was no requirement that higher level officials be advised when certain investigative activities...were being used," said Sessions.

He said the activities include surveillances at public rallies and attendance at meetings.

Children's program ends

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is accusing Nicaragua's leftist government of a cynical political move by suspending a $17.7 million U.S. program to aid Nicaraguan children who have been orphaned or injured as a result of civil war.

Spokesman Charles Redman rebuked Sandinista authorities Wednesday after they served notice that the program will not be allowed to continue at a time when the Congress is considering a new aid program for the Contra rebels.

In Managua, President Daniel Ortega said it doesn't make sense to receive aid from the same body that is considering an assistance package to the very group responsible for the plight of Nicaragua's children, according to Nicaraguan Embassy spokeswoman Sarali Porta.

U.S. private groups were told the suspension would become permanent if Congress approves additional assistance to replace an aid package that expires at the end of this month.

ODESSA — A fire department dispatcher answered a 911 call at about 9 a.m. Wednesday and heard a "resident" of the area near Westmoor Road and Torrence Ave. report that H2S gas was escaping from somewhere in the Foster Field Complex area.

Fire department dispatcher immediately notified the Ector County Sheriff's Department, which notified the Texas Railroad Commission District Office in Midland. TRC officials notified oil company representatives and within 10 minutes a company supervisor arrived at the Foster Field Complex about four blocks west of FM 1936 to determine the extent of the "leak" and what equipment would be required to repair it.

Within another 10 to 15 minutes, Amoco maintenance workers and equipment were on the scene to repair the "leak" and halt the escape of the potentially deadly gas.

This whole scenario was part of an exercise staged Wednesday morning to test the effectiveness of the Foster Field Emergency Response Plan that involves 19 operating companies. This was the first of similar exercises that will be staged periodically to test the readiness of oil companies to respond to emergency situations involving facilities they operate.

The reported "leak" was actually simulated with pressurized fresh air and water. Roxanne Parks, a Sun Oil Company petroleum engineer, who chairs the ad hoc committee of the eight operating companies that planned the emergency reponse exercise, said it will be next week before a full evalutation of the exercise is completed.

A sign warns workers.

However, while she indicated it appeared response time to check out the simulated H2S leak was very good, evaluation of all reports turned in by those participating in the exercise would probably reveal some areas that may need modification since this was the first time the plan had been utilized.

Wednesday's exercise called for the evacuation of 18 homes in the neighborhood immediately adjacent to the West Odessa complex, Miss Parks said, while residents of the area were notified of the exercise about a week ago, none were actually evacuated.

Residents were alerted to the fact that operating company personnel would be standing outside their homes Wednesday morning to simulate the evacuation of their homes. The simulated evacuation and blocking off of roads leading to the area was handled by Ector County Sheriff's Deputies who would normally be responsible for such action in actual emergency situations outside the city limits of Odessa. Firefighters and equipment from the West Odessa Volunteer fire Department also turned out and stood by during the exerise.

Miss Parks, who oversees environmental affairs for Sun Oil Co., said contingency plans had been required by the Texas Railroad Commission since 1976 but, until recently, each operating company had its own emergency plan and there was no coordination to speak of.

The Railroad Commission now requires coordinated plans and periodic simulated emergency situations to test the effectiveness of those plans.

In brief interviews following Wednesday's exercise, Miss Parks and Greg Clock, Amoco senior staff public affairs advisor, estimated that H2S gas is present in about 80 percent of the oil and gas wells in the Permian Basin.

Turner residence honored with national recognition

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland residence of the late Fred and Juliette Turner — among the last homes designed by Dallas architect Anton F. Korn — has earned a place in history.

In making room for the palatial 1934-vintage house in its directory, the National Historic Register has given Midland its second nationally recognized historic landmark.

The Brown-Dorsey house at 213 N. Weatherford, was the first Midland home to receive such a distinction.

"This gives us a little added prestige," said Jean Hagman, executive director of the Museum of the Southwest, which is permanently housed in Turner mansion — a 15-room house at 1507 W. Missouri Ave.

Two years ago, the museum's executive committee applied to the Texas Historical Commission seeking national landmark status for the house situated in the recently designated West End Heritage District.

"We're making a statement that we have history and we have things in Midland to be proud of," Ms. Hagman said.

Turner, a successful Midland oilman, built the mansion into which he moved in 1934 with his wife, Juliette, and two daughters, Dorothy Scharbauer and the late Fredda Durham.

He commissioned Korn — who designed such prestigious neighborhoods as Highland Park in Dallas — to build the house soon after winning a bitter lawsuit, which brought him widespread publicity and later millions of dollars in oil revenues.

Downstairs, the central portion of the original house was comprised of an entrance hall which led to a living room and dining room — each of which had sets of double French doors exiting to a back yard and stables, according to literature published by the museum.

A wing on the east side of the first floor included a solarium, library and guest bedroom with bath. A wing on the west included a kitchen, breakfast room and pantry.

The guest powder room with mirrored walls, floor tiles featuring Texas stars, and decorative ceramic wall tiles, was located under the main staircase west of the front entrance.

A stairway with elaborate wrought iron balustrades led to a second floor, the central portion of which included two bedrooms and baths for guests and the Turners' younger daughter, Dorothy.

A bedroom, dressing room, and bath occupied by their eldest daughter, Fredda, were located in the west wing; and the Turners' master bedroom, dressing room and bath were located in the east wing.

Outside, second floor terraces off the east and west bedrooms overlooked a covered back terrace which ran the length of the living and dining rooms. Stables, constructed in a style compatible with the house, provided space for six horses.

By designating the house as a national landmark, museum officials hope to propel the entire neighborhood into being recognized as a historical district, making it eligible for federal restoration money, Ms. Hagman said.

The Turners continued to live in the home until Mrs. Turner was found slain there on Oct. 29, 1963. Turner, who died a little more than three months after his wife, never returned to the mansion.

In 1968, Mrs. Durham and Mrs. Scharbauer gave the house to the Midland Museum Corp., which deeded the property to Midland County. The county then leased the property to the Museum of the Southwest for $1 per year for 50 years.

Energy manager hopes MISD can see the light on conservation

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Nary a light bulb or a water meter is safe any more from the energy conservation program now under way in the school district.

Curbing the costs of electricity, natural gas, water, garbage and sewer services is a task the district has yet to approach from a long-range point of view, explained Scott Layne, Midland Independent School District's new energy manager.

Annually, MISD spends about $2 million on these utilities, with half of that amount going to the electric company, Layne said Wednesday.

Under the terms of Layne's detailed 20-page energy management plan, approved Tuesday by MISD trustees, the district should save 15 percent on electricity bills and 10 percent on natural gas bills this year.

"Energy costs are a necessity and most (districts) just accept them. But there's so much that can be done to reduce costs and consumption," the energy manager maintains.

MISD gets a 10 percent discount from the city on its water, trash and sewer rates, Layne said.

The gas company doesn't charge the district a monthly service charge and gives the district lower rates the higher its consumption is.

Texas Electric offers the district two separate billing procedures based on consumption or consumption and demand. Via a computer program, the district is able to discern the cheaper of the two and pay accordingly per account, Layne explained.

Nonetheless, a 21-25 percent utility rate hike is expected at MISD. The increase is a result of anticipated rate increases and the added square footage resulting from elementary expansion plans, Layne's plan states.

Intelligence from local drug agents leads to Hays County speed lab bust

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Intelligence information from Midland narcotics agents led to Wednesday's seizure of speed-making chemicals, which officers say is the latest sign of the drug as a burgeoning problem in West Texas.

Two men and a woman were being held in the Hays County Jail in San Marcos today on charges of operating a methamphetamine lab, Sheriff Alfard Hohman said. They were arrested early Wednesday in a rural part of the county near Dripping Springs, 35 miles west of Austin, Hohman said.

Stephen Rall and Michael Fielder, both 34, of Dripping Springs, were being held on charges of possession of a chemical with intent to manufacture. Their bond was set at $20,000 each, Hohman said.

Joanne McDowell, 22, was being held on the same charge, and bond was set at $10,000, Hohman said.

The arrests were made by officers of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, Austin Drug Task Force, and Hays County Sheriff's officers after the Midland officers notified authorities of the existence of the lab.

The Dripping Springs lab was "connected" to a $625,000 lab in Travis County which Midland officers helped locate and shut down over the Labor Day Weekend, said Art Van Dorn, who commands the West Texas task force.

Police need data on shooting spree

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Gunmen who smashed at least 200 windows with high-powered pellets on a shooting spree likely will elude capture unless police receive some information from the public, a spokesman said today.

"There is no new information on the case," Cpl. Jim White said. "It is still under investigation. But what we hope, and what we need, is someone who saw something to come forward. Maybe they saw something and haven't put two and two together yet, but we hope they will."

Early Monday, the windows were smashed on neighborhood streets concentrated in west and northwest Midland. Most of the damage occurred between midnight and 6 a.m., but some sporadic shootings were reported into Monday afternoon, police said.

The only evidence left behind was the shattered glass and a report of a dark Chevrolet Camaro near the scene of one of the shootings.

Police estimated the damage, which for the most part was confined to vehicles parked on or near the street, at between $25,000 and $30,000.

The coordinator of Midland Crime Stoppers said today he may contact detectives to offer his program's assistance.

"We would sure like to do it if they think it would help out," Keith Ward said. "We'll do anything we can to help."

Just three days after the shootings, police have not yet contacted Ward. But because of the lack of clues and witnesses, Crime Stoppers may be the only way to find the vandals.

"Maybe when Crime Stoppers gets involved, we will get something on this," White said.

Old-timer flying high with tall tales from the wild blue yonder

Todd

Junior Smith, who has been around the block a time or two, has heard a lot of tales and has told a few himself.

And Smith, being a man who flies airplanes for fun and for hire and who dabbles on the rangeland cowboy-fashion, is particularly attuned to airplane tales and, of course, tails.

A while back, Smith was up at Oshkosh — the Wisconsin home of the Experimental Aircraft Association and those down-home overalls — to look over some historic airplanes. And he, enamored by airplanes made of cloth, wood, metal or whatever, was looking over the old Boeing B-29 Superfortress — the biggest and fastest four-engine bomber to come out of World War II. Recently, he did the same thing at Midland International Airport where the old warbird had spread its wings under the auspices of the Texas-based Confederate Air Force, which patriotically boasts of its wing of flying-museum airplanes.

At Oshkosh, Smith ran upon a fellow who, too, had been around the block a time or two and who apparently was not afraid to bend the truth just a bit.

Anyway, this old-timer was beholding the B-29, which the CAF nicked "FIFI" in honor of the wife of the CAF colonel who financed the restoration of the old bomber — the only currently flying B-29 of the 3,970 Superfortresses made from 1942 to 1946. The others were either shot down in bombing runs, ditched, allowed to "rot" in aircraft graveyards after they were spent following World War II and then the Korean War or were scuttled. And the aluminum that inspired aeronautical engineers and craftsmen had shaped into flying marvels was cut up and smelted down to make aluminum ingots. From those old airplanes and others came the second-hand aluminum used in making cans, chairs, small crafts, and other airplanes.

Anyway, Smith, who has flown and flies airplanes for Midland ranchers George Glass and Bobby Holt Glass, was admiring the old B-29 warbird when the seasoned fellow, who apparently had set out to impress some more naive aviation buffs, said he had flown the old airplane way back in the WWII.

" 'I flew bunches of them F-1s during World War II,' " the old fellow said, as Smith recalled.

Well, as best Smith could discern, the fellow noted the bomber's "FIFI" name painted boldly on the B-29's nose and picked up on that as F-1 — which would be a designation for a fighter or a pursuit-type airplane, such as the old P-51 Mustang, the F-86 Sabre, F4U Corsair, or the F-14 Tomcat.

"He was just bragging about it," recalled Smith. "That was probably the first time he ever saw the B-29, to be truthful about it," he surmised.

"Some people," Smith said, "have to brag on themselves to people who don't know any better."

PUBLIC NOTICE

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

GENERAL ELECTION
NOVEMBER 8, 1988

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 8 proposes a constitutional amendment providing that when the federal government reimburses the state for expenditures of state funds dedicated to acquiring rights-of-way and for constructing, maintaining, and policing public roadways, such federal funds must also be used for those purposes.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment and/or clarification providing that federal reimbursement of state highway dedicated funds are themselves dedicated for the purpose of acquiring rights-of-way and constructing, maintaining, and policing public roadways."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 2 proposes a constitutional amendment to establish an economic stabilization fund in the state treasury. The fund would consist of one half of the unencumbered balance of general revenues at the end of a biennium and three fourths of the difference between the net oil and gas production taxes received in a fiscal year and the net oil and gas production taxes received in the 1987 fiscal year. During any fiscal biennium, the amount in the economic stabilization fund could not exceed 10% of the total deposited in general revenue in the preceding biennium.

The state comptroller and the state treasurer could decide to transfer monies from the fund into the general revenue fund to alleviate a temporary cash shortage in general revenue. The legislature could make appropriations from the fund on approval by a three fifths vote of each house to make up the difference between anticipated general revenue and appropriations. On approval of two thirds of the members of each house of the legislature, the legislature could appropriate monies from the fund for any purpose.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment establishing an economic stabilization fund in the state treasury to be used to offset unforeseen shortfalls in revenue."

PROPOSITION NO. 3 ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment that establishes the Texas growth fund. All investments of the Texas growth fund must be directly related to furthering economic growth and employment opportunities in Texas. At least 50 percent of the fund must be invested in equity and/or debt security for the initial construction, expansion, or modernization of business or industrial facilities in Texas. Not more than ten percent of the fund may be invested in venture capital investments. Of the funds available for venture capital investments, not more than 25 percent may be invested unilaterally, and the remaining investments must be matched at least equally by funds from other sources. The Texas growth fund will be managed by a board of trustees consisting of four members appointed by the Governor and one member from and elected by the membership of each of the following: The Board of Regents of the University of Texas System; The Board of Regents of the Texas A&M System; The Board of Trustees of the Teacher's Retirement System of Texas; The Board of Trustees of the Employee's Retirement System of Texas; and the State Board of Education. The trustees may set the investment policy of the fund, enter into investment contracts, and take any action necessary for the creation, administration, and protection of the fund. The amendment authorizes the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System and the State Board of Education, in managing the permanent university fund and the permanent school fund, to acquire, exchange, sell, supervise, manage, or retain any kind of investment, including investments in the Texas growth fund. The fund will be phased out after the tenth anniversary of its creation, but the Legislature may create a second growth fund by a two thirds vote of each house.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to provide for the investment of the permanent university fund, the permanent school fund, and public employee retirement systems in the Texas growth fund created by the amendment, which will directly create, retain, and expand job opportunity and economic growth in Texas."

Estos son los informes explanatorios sobre las enmiendas propuestas a la constitución que aparecerán en la boleta el dia 8 de noviembre de 1988. Si usted no ha recibido una copia de los informes en español, podrá obtener una gratis por llamar al 1/800/252/8683 o por escribir al Secretario de Estado, P.O. Box 12060, Austin, Texas 78711.

He died today at a Martin County hospital.

Howard was born Nov. 26, 1901, in Tennessee and married Eva Ree Perry in 1921 in Merkel. She preceded him in death on June 30, 1986. He was a member of the Fourteenth and Main Street Church of Christ. He farmed in the Tarzan community for several years, retiring and moving to Big Spring in 1965.

Survivors include six grandchildren, Butch Howard, Mike Welch and Jerry Welch, all of Tarzan, Bill Howard of Midland, Danny Howard of Ackerly, and Johnny Howard of Stanton; two sisters, Billie Lindsey of Stanton, and Hettie Massey of Tulsa, Okla.; and a brother, Pat Howard of Georgetown.

He also was preceded in death by a son, Homer Howard Jr. in 1968, a daughter, Mary Frances Welch in 1979, and a grandson, Terry Lee Welch in 1976.

Myrtle L. Davis

Myrtle L. Davis, 79, of Midland, died Monday at a local hospital.

Graveside services were to be at 2:30 p.m. today at Rosehill Cemetery in Fort Worth, with the Rev. James Able officiating. Services were under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Davis was born July 7, 1909, in Fort Worth and was reared and attended school there. She married Van B. Davis in 1927. In 1937 the couple moved to Waco and then to Midland in 1943. They moved to San Angelo in 1949. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1971. Mrs. Davis returned to Midland in 1973 and was employed with Career Girl.

Survivors include her son, Bill Davis of Midland; a sister, Mrs. Bill Nauman of Dallas, three grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

Don Meek

Services for Don Meek were to be at 1:30 p.m. today at Midland Lutheran Church, with the Rev. Marvin Koenig officiating. Burial was to follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be Timmy Daniels, Whalen Davis, Ruben Chavez, Harold Hembree, Richard Brazil and Glen Smith.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Bill Cafe, John Schlagal, John Fuller, Phil Miller, Ernest Barber, Dr. Shelton Viney and Jack Richardson.

Petra D. Acosta

Funeral services for Petra D. Acosta of Midland were to be at 10 a.m. today at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Pallbearers were to be Ramon Acosta, Ray Acosta, Margo Hernandez, George Ramero, Ernesto Mendoza and Manuel Urquidez.

Wright presents case to ethics committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright spent 5½ hours presenting his case before the House ethics committee that is investigating allegations against him, then made a strong pitch to the panel to wrap up its work within the next month.

"It was very friendly, very frank, very candid and open," Wright, D-Texas, said of his unusual daylong, closed-door session Wednesday with the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. Wright was accompanied by his attorney, William Oldaker.

"I said, 'Let's come to a resolution of it.' After all, the facts are clear. If they discover that I have done something wrong inadvertently, they should say that." But Wright said he did not anticipate such a result.

"Nobody has suggested in this whole day's hearing that I did," he said.

Committee Chairman Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said Wright's testimony was completed, but he declined to say how far the investigation had progressed. The panel was scheduled to meet again today.

Wright declined to discuss with reporters the details of his testimony, which was given under oath, but said: "I answered every question."

In a statement issued by Wright's office, he said he had given the panel "a factual clarification of the erroneous, incomplete and misleading charges which have been made."

The committee since June has been investigating charges that Wright received unduly high royalties on a book he wrote with help from tax-paid staff and published through a longtime friend in Fort Worth who had done campaign work for the speaker.

Other allegations are that Wright improperly intervened with federal regulators on behalf of Texas businesses and that he used a Fort Worth condominium owned by a family with whom he had business ties.

"It should be abundantly clear that the charges against me hold no water whatsoever," Wright said. "I believe that is clear to the committee."

Wright also said the investigation is a reminder that "members of Congress do live in glass houses...We should be prepared to conduct our affairs with such rectitude that people can't find anything wrong."

But he said he fully expected that the investigation will be completed by the time the House adjourns in early October. "I do not want it left dangling. I want it resolved," he said.

He pronounced himself "very, very happy" to finally be called to testify. "I've looked forward to this for more than three months," he said.

The ethics committee has subpoenaed numerous witnesses in connection with the complaints filed against Wright by his chief accuser, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and already has interviewed many of them. Wednesday's session was Wright's first appearance before the panel.

Wright brought with him several dozen books, which he called "part of the documentation." One group of books was volumes he said were published under 50 percent royalty agreements by small-scale publishers. An additional 50 books on a cart wheeled into the hearing room were by members of Congress and contained acknowledgments of help from tax-paid staff members, the speaker said.

Among books on Wright's list prepared with staff help was a 1986 volume, "Strategic Defense and the Western Alliance," by Sen. Dan Quayle, the GOP vice presidential nominee. "Man of the House," a 1987 book by former House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., was written with help from 32 staff members, according to the list.

One allegation against Wright is that he made unduly high royalties on his book, "Reflections of a Public Man," which was prepared in part by workers on his congressional office payroll. Expenses of one aide, Matthew Cossolotto, to fly to Fort Worth to complete the book were paid from Wright's congressional office expense account.

Wright made more than $55,000 in royalties on the book, which was published in 1984 by a Wright friend in Fort Worth who also had handled hundreds of thousands of dollars of campaign work for the speaker. Wright's royalty was 55 percent of each copy's $5.95 selling price.

The speaker said he took the books to show the ethics committee that what he had done was "a very...customary thing."

Bar head defends warning victims of Delta 1141 crash

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of the State Bar of Texas says there was nothing improper in his and the bar's warning of lawyers about illegal or unethical soliciting of business from victims of the Delta Flight 1141 plane crash.

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that some lawyers had raised questions about bar president Jim Sales' role in the warning.

Sales denounced what he called "scurrilous charges and innuendo that (some plaintiff's lawyers are) trying to insert into the media to discredit what has been the first effective deterrence of prohibited lawyers' conduct before it happened."

Within hours of the crash that killed 13 people Aug. 31 at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport, Sales announced an aggressive bar effort to prevent improper solicitation of business from victims or their families.

But the American-Statesman reported that in the past week, some trial lawyers had called attention to the fact that Sales is chief of litigation for the law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski of Houston. The firm has among its clients U.S. Aviation Underwriters, Delta's insurance company, the newspaper reported.

Sales said the firm's connection to Delta's insurance company had nothing to do with the State Bar program. He said the attacks on him probably were motivated by the success of the effort to stop what is legally known as "barratry."

Fulbright & Jaworski, he said, doesn't represent Delta. It has represented the insurance company only in "minimal" ways in the Houston area, he said.

The trade publication Texas Lawyer reported this week that an examination of state district court dockets showed the law firm representing the insurance company in two cases in Houston, neither involving Delta.

Legislator thinks dumping of sewage can be ended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The author of legislation authorizing the United States to negotiate with Mexico over cleaning up pollution in the Rio Grande says he's optimistic Mexico will back efforts to stop the large-scale dumping of raw sewage.

Legislation permitting the bilateral negotiations cleared the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday and passage by the full Senate without amendments would send it to President Reagan's desk for his signature.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, author of the bill — which passed the House last fall — said he met with officials in Mexico a week ago and they assured him of their cooperation.

His counterparts in Mexico "expressed an interest and will be recommending positive action on an agreement to both the incoming and outgoing presidents. As soon as passage, I hope within 60 days to have ready for presentation (a cleanup proposal) to the president of Mexico. Hopefully Nuevo Laredo will be the first project," de la Garza said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said 25 million gallons of raw sewage is dumped daily into the Rio Grande at Nuevo Laredo, across the border from Laredo.

"There is no more major health hazard than polluted water coming down that river," said de la Garza, a Mission Democrat. "In the Lower Valley, 90 percent-plus drinking water comes from Rio Grande."

Under the bill, the State Department, acting through the head of the U.S. International Boundary Water Commission, would negotiate with Mexican officials to find ways to clean up the Rio Grande and make recommendations for the construction of treatment facilities.

Professor settles with Texas Tech

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Faculty Association said Wednesday a biochemistry professor at Texas Tech University Health Science Center has agreed to a settlement of grievances against the university administration.

Wendell W. Leavitt filed grievances against the administration in May 1987, the association said, and was fired this year. The association said Leavitt was reinstated and readmitted to his lab after a federal court issued a restraining order filed for by association attorneys on constitutional grounds.

The grievances alleged that the administration failed to fairly evaluate Leavitt's performance; interfered with grants between Leavitt and the National Science Foundation and National Institute of Health; denied Leavitt and his research colleagues Health Science Center equipment and facilities, as well as access to departmental funds; and failed to uphold contractual agreements between Leavitt and the university.

The association said the university administration settled with Leavitt Monday. The association said it is not at liberty to disclose details of the agreement, but Leavitt is pleased with the results.

"I am relieved that this whole episode is behind me," Leavitt said in a statement. "I owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to the Texas Faculty Association which was instrumental in achieving this settlement."

The faculty association is the higher education branch of the Texas State Teachers Association and National Education Association.

ENERGY

Conservation and consumption-watching is not the only action being taken by the district to save money.

MISD applied this month for a $15,000 federal assistance grant that — with matching funds from the school district — will aid Layne in identifying energy wastes at Midland High School, the plan states.

According to the plan, the district has contacted local utility companies to inquire about possible financial assistance.

To begin curbing utility costs, Layne will undertake several measures, he said.

The energy manager believes many district buildings have duplicate meters. Presently, 239 utility meters cost the district $25,000 a year in service charges, Layne's report says.

"In analyzing the 66 (electric) accounts, we have discovered that five accounts are actually costing us more per year in service charges than what we are actually spending for electricity," the report states.

Consolidating meter systems into "one-point service" wherever possible is a priority item on Layne's list of things to do, he said.

Layne also suggested the district eliminate utility-company-owned crossing guard lights that run about $2,500 a year. In their place, the energy manager suggests MISD-owned crossing guard lights which would save on energy costs and reduce the overall number of electric company accounts, his plan says.

Sewer bills are a function of the district's monthly water bill, the energy manager explained. Layne advocates having one water meter strictly for building water and another for irrigation water.

Sewer costs would decline because its bill would be calculated directly from only the building meter, he explained.

Natural gas is the most cost efficient of all the district's utility accounts, Layne said. He sees no immediate need to change anything.

In his report, Layne states that first-cost considerations were given higher priority than utility operating costs with schools built prior to the 1973 oil embargo.

"A great many of our schools are simple buildings with very unsophisticated heating and ventilation systems allowing little or no opportunity to change control settings to save utility costs," the report says.

To engage a district-wide change in attitudes toward energy consumption, Layne advocates the creation of a "district energy management committee" composed of district officials.

In addition, Layne believes subcommittees should be created at each school involving principals, parents, teachers, custodians and students to discuss building-specific energy problems or plans.

For example, the energy manager suggests turning off the air-conditioner 15 minutes before teachers are scheduled to leave the building and cutting down on additional weekly trash pick-ups.

Though there are state requirements addressing adequate light bulb wattage, Layne said, "I'll actually go around and measure" which light bulbs can be eliminated or changed to a lower wattage.

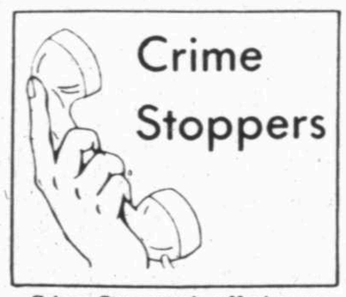
Added Layne: "I need the support of everyone in the district. I don't want to be the 'lone ranger' on this one."

Crime Stoppers seeks data about burglaries

This week Crime Stoppers is asking for information about the burglaries of the Permian Nephrology Association and Permian Basin Dialysis Center, both located at 209 Younger Rd.

On August 23, someone entered the building. Once inside, the administrators' office of Permian Nephrology was entered by knocking a hole in a wall and reaching through to unlock the door. The suspects took an Epson computer, a Mitsubishi monitor and other computer equipment.

The suspects then entered the receptionist area of Permian Basin Dialysis Center, pried open a filing cabinet and removed a black bank bag containing petty cash. The suspects also forced their way into other offices, damaging doors but stealing nothing.



Crime Stoppers is offering up to a $1,000 cash reward for any information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for these burglaries. Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, or in Odessa at 333-TIPS.

Callers can remain anonymous.

Youth still in critical condition

From Staff Reports

A 17-year-old Midland youth remained in critical condition early today, two days after he was injured in a freak accident near a local school.

The condition of Kendrick Samuel Harrison, 414 E. Maple Ave., showed no change from Wednesday, and he was listed in critical condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital, spokeswoman Sue Ristom said.

According to police reports of the accident, Harrison was injured when he fell from the trunk of a car about 4 p.m. Tuesday. He was apparently riding on the vehicle when it suddenly accelerated, throwing him into the rear bumper, reports said.

At least two other youths were riding in the car at the time of the accident, which occurred on Magnolia Street near Lee Freshman school, reports said.

LAB

Van Dorn said he sent two investigators to Hays County after midnight Wednesday, when the officers suspected they could find "meth oil" — a precursor to speed — in the lab.

"They found over eight quarts of meth oil there, which would have a street value of $675,000 to $680,000," Van Dorn said.

Enough equipment to operate two full speed-cooking labs was also found in a storage building near a residence, he noted.

The chemicals and equipment were turned over to the Austin Police Department lab, Hohman said.

Officers have discovered that at least 15 percent and as much as 25 percent of the finished speed was going to be transported to the Midland area to be sold in "user" quantities, Van Dorn said.

"We're getting calls now daily on the labs," he said. "From informants, and from members of the general public. People are concerned."

Three of his six investigators have been switched from undercover work to "open investigations," which would include work trying to locate the speed labs, Van Dorn said.

The discovery of the Hays County lab does not mean the labs do not exist in the Permian Basin, Van Dorn warned.

"There are a bunch of them out here," he said.

DRILL

However, they said, because of normal weather patterns and prevailing winds in this area, the likelihood of a full-blown disaster due to H2S gas is not great but, because of potential liability, operating companies take many precautions. If anything, Miss Parks said, are more prone to over-react to reports that residents of an area have reported the smell of "rotten eggs," the characteristic smell of hydrogen sulfide gas.

Miss Parks said the ad hoc committee, involving about 100 people from eight operating companies, had spent seven months developing plans for Wednesday's emergency response exercise.

TURNER

The house itself was extensively remodeled and the original rear porch was enclosed in 1970 to form the Thomas Gallery, named after Mrs. Alma Thomas, who helped pay for the construction.

Naomi Lancaster donated property south of the Turner mansion for museum expansion. The property is now the site of the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, which is scheduled to open its doors in November.

The original breakfast room and library were opened to the public this year and museum officials have plans to restore other parts of the home's interior, Ms. Hagman said.

In seeking national landmark status for the mansion, Ms. Hagman said the museum's executive committee has agreed to abide by the all of the strings attached. They prohibit the museum from installing elevators and making any renovations that might change the overall structure of the building.

Wreck's cargo focus of debate

By GEOFFREY HAYNES

PORT SANILAC, Mich. (AP) — Cargo removed by divers from a 75-year-old Lake Huron shipwreck is stirring an emotional debate between sport divers and historians over the ethics of the state-approved operation.

Cargo such as corked whiskey bottles, and artifacts, including the ship's bell and navigation lights, already have been removed from the vessel by commercial divers who have a state salvage permit.

The permit allows Freedom Marine Ltd. of Vancouver, British Columbia, to recover and sell cargo and artifacts from the Regina, described as a floating hardware store that sank in the Great Storm of 1913.

The debate centers on whether the cargo should be removed, documented for historical purposes and later sold, or left undisturbed for those in the state's $40 million recreational diving industry to witness in its natural state.

John Halsey, archaeologist for the Michigan Department of State, bureau of history, said part of the rationale in granting the salvage permit was that recreational divers eventually would pilfer the cargo anyway.

"We were faced with the position of trying to preserve something that was being nickeled and dimed by divers," Halsey said.

"At least we'll know what was on it, how it was packed. We don't have archaeologists to do it for us."

Halsey said the wreck is historically significant because its cargo offers a glimpse of life in the early 1900s. Most Great Lakes shipwrecks contain iron ore, stone or coal, but the Regina was a packet freighter that sold wares such as hand lotion and horseshoes in ports along the waterway.

"Not every vessel that sank in the Great Lakes is historically significant," Halsey said. "In the case of the Regina, the position we took at the time was the cargo was historically significant."

By law, recreational divers without salvage permits are prohibited from removing cargo from inside a shipwreck, but divers looking for souvenirs on the lake bottom sometimes think they are beneath the long arm of the law.

"Pilfering used to be the thing to do. It was considered finders, keepers. People wanted something to bring back," said Mike Kohut, publisher of Diving Times and owner of Recreational Diving in Royal Oak and Blue Chip Travel, which books diving trips around the world.

"Now the majority are saying it's more fun to dive on wrecks that have everything there."

Kohut, who said he represents recreational divers, agreed with plans to salvage the Regina.

"The loose artifacts are very tempting for someone to take, so I really don't have a big problem with them removing those artifacts," Kohut said. "I'd like to see them on display."

But David Trotter, who hunts shipwrecks with sophisticated electronic equipment as a sideline, says the story a shipwreck tells is destroyed when it is stripped of its cargo and artifacts.

"The history is really what happened and where it happened. When you strip a wreck, it becomes a barren hull — and a barren hull is no fun to a recreational diver," Trotter said.

Trotter, who said he has found about 24 wrecks using a side screen scanner worth about $50,000, said finders of wrecks may be less willing to tell the state of their discoveries if they suspect the site may be salvaged.

But the finder of the Regina, Wayne Brusate of Marysville, is working with Freedom Marine to recover items on the ship he discovered in July 1986 about three miles offshore from Port Sanilac.

Divers last fall removed cargo and artifacts, such as the ship's bell, and returned July 18 to search for the ship's safe, which they believed contained gold.

They have given up their search for the gold, but are continuing to remove cargo from the vessel, said Sylvan Humphrey, president of the publicly held Freedom Marine.

The state, which has first rights to anything found on the wreck, already has taken the bell, navigational lights and items that are representative of the ship's cargo, he said.

Willem Dafoe poses following an interview last month at New York's Performing Garage, home of the Wooster Group, an experimental theater company of which he is a member. Dafoe, who plays the title role in the controversial film, "The Last Temptation of Christ," says he was a little surprised by the fierce protests the movie has drawn.

Dafoe eager for role in 'Last Temptation'

ENTERTAINMENT

By HILLEL ITALIE

NEW YORK (AP) — Willem Dafoe is a modest man, but he couldn't help thinking the time was right to play the title role in "The Last Temptation of Christ."

"It made all the sense in the world," he said. "I thought, 'Yes, of course. Perfect. It's a good role. I feel right for it right now.' I'm just at the point in my life where I'm concerned with some of the things he's speaking about. The struggle between the body and the spirit is something I'm interested in."

Few films have generated as much controversy as Martin Scorsese's "The Last Temptation of Christ." Based on the novel by Nikos Kazantzakis, it depicts an angst-ridden Jesus, torn between desires of the mind and body. In a dream sequence, he is spared the cross, sleeps with Mary Magdalene and has children. The movie has drawn fierce protests from some religious groups.

"I was a little surprised," Dafoe said. "I knew there was some resistance...I never thought it would be to this extent and take this kind of shape."

However, the publicity generated from the protests has helped the movie at the box office.

"It's always a terrific thing for a publicity campaign," Dafoe said. "But it colors everything in a negative light. Maybe that's a trade-off to the publicity."

Dafoe was eager to work with Scorsese, the director of "Mean Streets," "Taxi Driver" and "Raging Bull."

"He just gave me a certain kind of confidence and authority. He kept me on the track. He makes you feel comfortable; he gives you that room. You feel totally unencumbered, free, yet you feel a guiding hand."

Dafoe also enjoyed working with the cast, which included Barbara Hershey as Mary Magdalene and David Bowie as Pontius Pilate.

"There was a real sense of purpose," he said. "Marty commands a lot of respect. There was very little money, and the actors were doing it for scale. Everyone wanted to be there. A real ensemble feel."

Although Dafoe had seen other biblical movies, he had no interest in repeating others' performances.

"I really didn't concern myself with what kind of Jesus I was going to be — the responsibility of playing that role, all the associations, all the information. I thought I would find a place to scrub myself clean of all that and really start out from a wonderfully innocent place."

Dafoe's confidence was helped by his faith in Scorsese: "I would not be cowed by the role. It was a very risky thing. If you're going to be in a situation like that, you might as well be with Martin Scorsese."

The intensity of his performance in "Last Temptation" can be measured by his eyes, which rarely blink on camera.

"No matter what you do, it has mythic proportions," he said. "When you're speaking, no matter the context, there is some kind of concentration that's not of this world.

"The general tendency is to look as deeply as you can into the back of someone's brain and deeply understand with every cell in your body what you're saying."

The 33-year-old actor talked about his career at the Performing Garage, home of the Wooster Group, an experimental theater company. Dafoe is a member and does business there.

He was born July 22, 1955, in Appleton, Wis., and was early attracted to the stage. "Simply moronic reasons," he said, smiling. "It's fun, it's enjoyable. I like pretending."

As he grew older, his feelings for acting deepened.

"In the end, it's for its own sake — for beauty's sake."

Martin Mull makes play for 'whites of viewers' eyes'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Martin Mull is delighted. He has found a parking place right in front of the Beverly Hills restaurant. But, of course — his car is white.

Blond-haired, blue-eyed Mull has become a white person by profession since 1985, due to the success of an innocuous notion he and fellow white writer Allen Rucker had one day — "The History of White People in America."

"Based on my experiences in Ohio and his in Oklahoma, we figured we had the Grain Belt pretty well in hand," Mull said over lunch, a salad with a lot of white stuff in it.

"We started describing what makes a person white by our standards. And in this case, the standards were liberal enough they could include black people; there are certain Caucasians who do not qualify, as well."

A friend at a movie studio told the two they should send the idea to the cable television people, Mull recalled.

"We said, send what? We don't have anything other than the title. He said, that doesn't matter."

Mull and Rucker produced a two-part Cinemax special, "Martin Mull Presents the History of White People in America," instructing viewers on the identification of the white person: habitat, the Midwest; its clothing, polyester; its food, tuna noodle casseroles and Cheezits. We were informed the specials were sponsored by the Institute for White Studies in Zanesville, Ohio, and funded through a grant from Tastee-Freeze.

"We started describing what makes a person white by our standards. And in this case, the standards were liberal enough they could include black people; there are certain Caucasians who do not qualify, as well."
— Martin Mull

The specials were among the most successful Cinemax had aired, and they spawned two best-selling books. In 1986, Mull and Rucker followed up with a four-part series on white religion, crime, stress and politics.

The series has since been packaged for home video.

Mull, the on-camera host of the series, took viewers right into the lair of the white people, Hawkins Falls, Ohio, and introduced them to quintessential white couple Hal and Joyce (Fred Willard and Mary Kay Place) and their offspring, Debbie and Tommy, students at Dinah Shore High School.

Now Cinemax presents White People: The Movie. "Martin Mull in Portrait of a White Marriage" premiered on the cable channel last week and is being played tonight and on Sept. 17, 20, 23 and 28. The two-hour movie takes characters from the instructional series and sets them up for a psycho-cultural crisis — even as the day of the Hawkins Falls Founder's Day parade approaches.

"White People" was often viciously satiric. In "White Marriage," Mull and Rucker have softened up. The laughs are more mainstream, and the movie is a virtual homage to old-fashioned values in the face of Hollywood starshine.

For his part, Mull is now the proud father of a 3-year-old daughter. His wife, Wendy, a composer, wrote the score for "White Marriage" and has a bit part — as an ex-con trying to start a diaper service.

In the movie, Mull plays the slick host of "Ask Martin," a "Donahue"-like talk show. When he can't fill a studio in Pittsburgh, he goes to Hawkins Falls in a pathetic effort to keep the show afloat, intending to lure starstruck housewives into a gymnasium to talk about such subjects as "women who have lost parts of their bodies through household accidents."

He enlists Joyce as his unpaid assistant and falls in love with her. It seems the big Hollywood star actually longs for the comforts of a Midwestern home. Meanwhile, Hal becomes jealous and embarks on an affair with the minister's wife (Julie Payne).

Michael McKean plays the minister. Harry Shearer, who directed the movie, plays Mull's producer. Robin Williams makes a cameo appearance as Bill Loman, a salesman who is rooming at the same motel as Mull.

Since completing the movie, Mull has moved on from "White People" to black comedy. He's written a feature film, scheduled to go before the cameras this fall, about two homeless men in New York, Eddie Wood and and Mr. Nickles, called "Wood 'n' Nickles."

A new movie for Cinemax, "Change of Heart," will mark his directing debut. "I think the word 'terror' is overused, but apt," he said.

"Change of Heart" is a "somber comedy," Mull said, about a heart transplant that raises the philosophical questions implied by the figurative meanings of the word "heart."

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Family relationships improve dramatically. Your new, more relaxed approach at work makes you easier to be around. Productivity rises. Travel will make business especially interesting. Those looking for romance will find it. You need to make a major decision about your lifestyle. It may be time to sever certain ties. You feel more positive about your home or business by December. Search for knowledge.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tennis' Rosemary Casals, actress Lauren Bacall, actors Peter Falk and Ed Begley Jr., guitarist B.B. King, outfielder Tim Raines.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not let the weather affect your vacation fun. Plan alternative ways to go if you hit a roadblock in your search for funding. A small business deal is more important than you know.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could find a company or individual with deep pockets and an interest in your pet project. Put your ideas to work in a practical way. Look for ways to make a relationship happier.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your mission is not to change the whole world; just your corner of it. Improve your methods. Do not bite off more than you can chew. Strike a better balance between work and play.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are too intense about everything. You will have a brighter future if you do not try to go too far too fast. A relationship begins to provide the support you deserve.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get away for the weekend if you can. Escaping the maddening office power plays and political ploys is a wonderful tonic. Romance looks lively. Know your own heart. Avoid making rash promises.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Career progress will continue through the rest of the month. Tie up loose financial ends before the weekend. Our faults lie not in the stars but in our human weaknesses. Stay positive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be on a collision course with a colleague. Be sure you have invested in the right facts and figures. Travel for business, not pleasure. Work and romance do not mix now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Excitement grows when you think about a new adventure just ahead. Be sure you are getting the right vibrations from a relationship. Eat lightly when traveling. Rich foods are best avoided.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Super ideas are worth whatever time and money you must invest to make them work. Be diligent about your duties. A completely honest discussion is necessary to set a relationship right. Show affection.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): From the moment you get out of bed this morning, good things should happen. You have every right to demand and receive loyalty from those who work for you. Try to hire team players.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your plans may not go according to schedule. Be versatile. Your imagination leads you to explore the unknown. You make a beautiful discovery. Talking with good friends reduces tension.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Give the most help to those who will really appreciate it. A financial situation can be brought under control if the whole family cooperates. Travel in the interest of solidifying a new relationship.

CAN DO!

North-South vulnerable. West deals.

	NORTH ♠ A 4 ♡ A 10 5 ◇ A 10 8 4 ♣ J 10 6 5
WEST ♠ K J 8 7 5 ♡ K 2 ◇ K Q 7 5 3 ♣ 9		EAST ♠ Q 3 2 ♡ J 9 7 ◇ J 9 2 ♣ K 8 7 4
	SOUTH ♠ 10 9 6 ♡ Q 8 6 4 3 ◇ 6 ♣ A Q 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	3 ♠
3 ◇	4 ♣	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♠

Remember the motto of the Seabees: "The impossible we do immediately. Miracles take a bit longer." If you look at this deal from the recent Spingold Team Championship, you would think that ten tricks at hearts are beyond reach. But watch what actually happened at the table.

South was perhaps a trifle aggressive in introducing his club suit at the three-level. As a result, the double fit propelled North-South to the heart game, a contract that would normally have caused South considerable pain.

East won the first trick with the queen of spades as declarer, Bart Bramley of Atlanta, followed low from dummy. East's diamond shift went to the queen and ace, and a low trump to the queen lost to the king.

West's diamond return was ruffed, and declarer tried the ace of hearts in an attempt to drop the jack. When that hope went aglimmering, declarer ran the jack of clubs. The ten was covered by the king and taken with the ace, but revealed to declarer the bad news that the club suit was not going to run.

Undeterred, declarer crossed to the ace of spades and ruffed a diamond. A spade ruff was the entry to lead another diamond from the table. East was helpless. To ruff with his winning trump would not help, so he discarded. But now declarer was able to score his last trump en passant, and his queen of clubs was the game-going trick.

Yoko Ono says new Lennon biography 'totally fiction'

NEW YORK (AP) — A biography that portrays John Lennon as a drug-addled, anorexic bisexual who raged his way from Liverpool to New York City is "totally fiction," Yoko Ono said in a national radio broadcast.

Ono

"It's amazing that somebody took such a poetic license. I don't see John in there...It's a very dramatically described something, but it's not about John," Ono said Wednesday night in her first broadcast comments on the book by Albert Goldman.

The usually reclusive Ono agreed to the interview to counter Goldman's "The Lives of John Lennon," which presents the ex-Beatle as a violent, drug-addicted drunk who wanted to dump his wife.

As for Ono, Goldman shows her as a gold-digger who snorted heroin up to the time of Lennon's death. Goldman also charges she was responsible for Paul McCartney's 1980 marijuana bust in Japan, had affairs while they were married and was just as intent on a divorce as Lennon.

Ono refuted virtually all of these charges, and countered through taped interviews with Lennon friends and employees that Goldman's book was based on unreliable sources and misquotes.

"It's totally fiction," Yoko said during the hour-long program, which opened with Lennon's song, "Gimme Some Truth," and coincided with the book's national release Wednesday.

"These people in this book are not us. It's not John and me," Ono continued. "It's unfair he's been assaulted and can't hit back...For some reason this book is attempting to rob both John and I of the basic human dignity that we're entitled to."

NEW YORK (AP) — Mick Jagger had a "Peter Pan complex" and broke from the Rolling Stones to compete with younger musicians, but now he's getting no satisfaction from his solo career, says fellow Stone Keith Richards.

"Now he wants to put the Stones back together — because there's nowhere else to go," said Richards, who's about to release his own solo effort, "Talk is Cheap."

Richards, in an interview in the Oct. 6 Rolling Stone magazine, said he never wanted to record without the Stones. But Jagger thought he had outgrown the group when he turned solo in 1986.

"Mick kind of lost touch with the fact of how important the Stones were for him," he said. "He thought he could just hire another Rolling Stones...And you can't. You can't hire that kind of thing."

Jagger, he said, had a "Peter Pan complex" and was determined to compete with younger musicians for space on the top 10.

"He's not living a happy life," said Richards. "To me, that's unacceptable. I've got to make him happy! To me, I've failed if I can't eventually get my mate to feel good about himself."

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Cabot Cove, Maine, the fictional location of television's "Murder, She Wrote," may be getting a visit from the real-life governor of the state, John R. McKernan.

McKernan is planning a trip to California this fall to hobnob with producers in hopes of luring more film industry business to the state. But McKernan also has an ulterior motive: trying to land a cameo role on the CBS mystery show.

McKernan's possible road to stardom started when a loyal watcher of the weekly mystery show spotted a photo of former Democratic Gov. Joseph E. Brennan while visiting the Hollywood set recently, and called the governor's office.

McKernan's spokesman, Willis Lyford, said an autographed photo of the governor was promptly dispatched to actress Angela Lansbury, who plays mystery writer and detective Jessica Fletcher on the show.

McKernan must first pass a photo test, however, so a few shots of him riding a school bus with children and visiting fairs are being sent to Hollywood for approval.

It's "a portfolio...to determine if he's suitable," said Lyford.

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — An autopsy shows that a seven-time Texas state champion fiddler who died in the Farmington, N.M., home of former New Mexico governor Tom Bolack drowned.

Terry Joe Morris, 32, a Durango resident and fiddle player with the Bar D Wranglers, died Sept. 7 in an indoor swimming pool at Bolack's ranch home.

"We feel that no foul play was involved," Lt. Ralph Trotter, an investigator with the San Juan County, N.M., Sheriff's Department, said Wednesday.

Trotter said the investigation was continuing to touch all the bases but that he expected no different conclusions.

He would not release the blood-alcohol level in the autopsy report, which was conducted by the state medical examiner's office.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis. (AP) — David Letterman likes his new boots, and Victor Mason says he had fun delivering them on national television.

Letterman

"It didn't bother me a bit," the Mason Shoe Co. president said after presenting a pair of size 10½ dress boots, style No. 1197, before a nationwide TV audience Tuesday on "Late Night with David Letterman."

"I was amazed," Mason added. "It was just like I was sitting in my own living room. I'm a very quiet person, so I thought I might be getting the jitters."

Letterman ordered the boots last month from Edd Hall, a visuals coordinator for the show who became a Mason salesman through a mail advertisement.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actress Ali MacGraw and other residents of this celebrity enclave want a memorial to honor the memory of a not-so-famous inhabitant — a hermit known for three decades as Malibu Joe.

The money is pouring in as the community mourns the Labor Day weekend beating death of the 96-year-old Joe, who chose to live in the bushes behind a Texaco gas station.

Flowers and cards have been placed around the tiny shrub-surrounded area Joe called home, and Miss MacGraw has joined others in a drive to build a modest memorial to the man who traded hellos with one and all but never took handouts. More than $1,400 has been raised toward installation of a bench and permanent plaque in his honor.

U.S. archaeologists working to preserve Midas' tomb

YASSIHOYUK, Turkey (AP) — In the middle of this sun-baked Anatolian plateau in western Turkey, U.S. archaeologists are working to preserve the tomb of King Midas, around whom grew the myth of the golden touch.

Archaeologists believe the 2,600-year-old tomb is the oldest standing wooden structure in the world.

About 90 pyramid-shaped mounds of earth rise on the land where the Phrygians had their ancient capital of Gordion.

The largest and highest of the burial mounds is believed to be the tomb of King Midas, believed to have lived from 725 B.C. to 675 B.C.

The tomb chamber, within a mound about 150 feet high and 900 feet in diameter, has started to show signs of deterioration, mostly because of lack of air circulation and the high rate of humidity inside the grave.

"There are cracks in the north wall and the wall is slightly bulging out," explained Professor Kenneth Sams of the University of North Carolina, who has undertaken the preservation work in the name of the University of Pennsylvania Museum.

"There is no imminent danger of collapse but we want to keep this unique monument as it is for the coming generations," he said.

The tomb was excavated in 1957 under the direction of the late Rodney S. Young of the University of Pennsylvania.

According to historians, it was the Phrygians who first introduced the tumulus, or mound, burial style in Anatolia. This small central Anatolian village is 60 miles southwest of the Turkish capital city of Ankara.

Thirty grave chambers have been excavated, 25 by the U.S. excavators over the past few decades and the rest by the Germans in 1900.

The Midas chamber was made of squared logs and an outer casing of round logs of juniper and pine to take the pressure of the rubble from a wall covering the tomb. Phyrgians built a roof and a waterproof stone covering on top of the tomb and then covered it with tons of earth.

The body and funeral gifts were placed inside the rectangular chamber, which measures about 320 square feet.

Large white fungi today cover the upper sections of the wooden chamber.

Sams said the archaeologists are in the preliminary stage of the conservation work. First, they are trying to find the reason for the fluctuations in the humidity, which ranges from a low of 35 percent to a high of 85 percent, while temperatures remain steady throughout the year at about 60 degrees.

The Phrygians moved into Anatolia from Thrace and the Balkan peninsula in 10th century B.C. and became the major power in Asia Minor in the 9th century B.C., inheriting the remains of the Hittite civilization. They served as a cultural bridge from the Hittites to the Anatolian civilizations of the Lydians and the Greeks.

They bequeathed to Greek mythology and Roman religion their mother-goddess Cybele.

Professor Ekrem Akurgal, one of Turkey's most prominent archaeologists, said many Phyrgian kings were named Midas, but the one whose tomb is being preserved is the great monarch who established Phrygian hegemony in Asia Minor and is mentioned in Assyrian tablets of the period.

Akurgal said this Midas is the one on whom the legend of the golden touch is based.

According to the legend, Midas, son of King Gordius, was a spendthrift who begged the gods for the power to turn anything he touched to gold. His wish was granted but Midas nearly starved because even the food he tried to eat turned to gold.

The curse was lifted when he cleansed himself by bathing in the river Pactolus, known today as Sart Cayi, famous for its golden sands.

The burial mounds are on a site on which, according to Greek legend, Gordius tied his cart to a pole with an intricate knot — the Gordian knot. Oracles said that whoever untied the knot would rule Asia. Alexander the Great cut the knot with a stroke of his sword, according to the story.

Archaeologists today are particularly interested in the woodwork of the Phrygians.

In the Midas burial chamber, excavators found remains of tables, inlaid wooden screens, bronze and leather belts, bronze cauldrons and other items lying beside the skeleton of the king.

A team of U.S. art conservators and archaeologists led by Elizabeth Simpson of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York are restoring these artifacts.

"This extraordinary furniture from Gordion occupies a special place in the history of woodworking and of ancient art in general," she said. "The inlay work is ingenious, the geometric decoration bold and elegant."

The Phrygians used wood of contrasting colors and displayed a unique sense of design in symmetry and patterns, she said. The findings from the tombs are alsoimportant because very little ancient wooden furniture has survived.

The team members have so far restored two inlaid screens and a wooden table that are on display in Ankara's Anatolian Civilizations Museum.

Their restoration work, sponsored by the U.S. Kress Foundation of New York City continues at the laboratory of the Ankara museum.

"There is no imminent danger of collapse (of the tomb) but we want to keep this unique monument as it is for the coming generations."

Woman wants Bible taken by British troops

FAIRHAVEN, Mass. (AP) — A 63-year-old woman is waging a single-handed campaign to retrieve a Bible signed by George Washington that was seized by the British during the Revolutionary War.

"They stole it," said Alice West Clark of Fairhaven. "This Bible belongs in this country and it belongs to my family."

The Washington Masonic Bible was seized by the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry during the raid on Old Dartmouth village. It now is a prized possession of the Light Infantry museum in England.

Clark said that when the British were marching through what is now Acushnet and North Fairhaven on Sept. 6, 1778, they set fire to the home of Bartholomew West, an 80-year-old invalid. West was saved by neighbors and the Redcoats moved on after taking the family Bible.

Clark, who is uncertain whether she is related to the original Wests but whose lineage stretches back to that era, told the Standard-Times of New Bedford that the Bible was printed in 1712, is covered with Masonic symbols and contains records of the West family.

Israel, Hungary agree to restore relations

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel and Hungary agreed Wednesday to gradually restore diplomatic ties that were severed 21 years ago by the Eastern European nation, Israeli media reported.

The agreement came after a meeting between Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Hungarian Prime Minister Karoly Grosz in Budapest, Israel radio and television said.

Shamir spokesman Yossi Ahimeir, reached at his Tel Aviv home, refused comment on the reports. Shamir arrived in Budapest Wednesday.

Israel television said Shamir and Grosz agreed in principle to the gradual restoration of ties, but did not set a timetable for upgrading diplomatic representation.

Hungary, along with all other Soviet bloc countries except Romania, severed ties with Israel after the 1967 Middle East war in which Israel captured lands of the bloc's Arab allies.

Rebels seek higher gear on El Paso trip

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

EL PASO — The Midland Lee Rebels will be missing some of the grind associated with a long road trip when they hit the airways to face El Paso Andress Friday at 7:30 p.m. (MST), but coach Earl Miller is more concerned that his team get in high gear of the upcoming District 4-5A football season.

Lee is scheduled to fly to El Paso at 12:30 p.m. Friday, spend the night after the game and return home Saturday morning on another flight.

"That certainly beats 14 hours on the bus," said Miller. "We've got a big week ahead of us since district play starts and this should help eliminate some of the fatigue factor.

"But regardless whether you fly or bus, you've got to take care of business and we have a way to go before we are a good football team. Anytime you go to El Paso, you don't expect to get any breaks and they say the same thing when they come out here to play. I just know that we've had a difficult time beating anyone by a big margin in El Paso."

Andress coach Alan Sepkowitz will have buses waiting for the Lee team when they arrive, but he isn't sure that is a good idea.

"This way I know they are going to find the way to our stadium. I was half hoping they would get lost," said Sepkowitz. "We probably shouldn't be playing a team like Lee at this stage of the season. Everyone says they are down this year, but I can't see it after watching flim on them."

Andress is unbeaten after two games and was the pre-season pick as the best team in El Paso. However, the Eagles have scored just 29 points in two games and have given up 21 in a 19-14 win over Carlsbad, N.M., and a 10-7 victory last week against El Paso Bel Air.

"We were picked high early because we have some great skill people back. James O'Gwin, for instance, had over 1,200 yards rushing for us last year, but we lost heavily in the offensive line and that is a real problem for us. We still feel like we will be a pretty good team by the end of the season, but we are not the best team in El Paso right now." said Sepkowitz.

Miller doesn't appear to be overly concerned with what the Eagles possess. He just wants his team to play better each week.

"We went into non-conference play without worrying about the win-loss record. We need to improve and I think we have a schedule that will help us get ready for district play. After all, it's in district play where it all counts," said Miller.

"Little mental errors are still killing us and we need to correct that. We looked like a million dollars for a quarter-and-a-half against Del Rio and we were worth about 50 cents the rest of the game," Miller added. "It seems like 10 people will do things right and one will miss an assignment on just about every play. For instance, we don't know if we can throw the football or not. There always seems to be someone in our quarterback's face every time we try to throw."

Sepkowitz, too, says his team has been in a self-destructive mode early in the season.

"Penalties have ruined us. We've been our own worst enemy. The only reason we are 2-0 is because someone on our coaching staff must be living right," Sepkowitz quips.

With no break, Mustangs go on

Area Football

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

W.T. Stapler wishes there was a way to perform magic on the 1988 football schedule. But there's not, so his Andrews Mustangs have to make do the best they can despite injuries that have cut into already low numbers.

The Mustangs have an open date next week, but it's not soon enough for Stapler. The veteran coach says his group is plenty banged up going into Friday's non-district finale at Lamesa.

"We need an open date this week, but we have to play what's on the schedule," Stapler said.

No Mustangs were seriously hurt in last Friday's 35-0 loss to Midland High but the Andrews defense missed noseguard Bruce Ray, who broke his leg in the season opener at Wolfforth Frenship.

Ray will miss most, if not all, of the 1988 season. And, the Mustangs are limited in other ways by even minor injuries.

For example, quarterback Robert Morris hasn't been able to run option plays in Stapler's wishbone formation because of a bruised shoulder.

"We take care of it during the week, and it gets banged up during the games," Stapler said. Morris and backup Elias Balderas combined for only 30 yards passing against Midland High. Balderas did run for 26 yards on five carries, however.

Both players will see action against Lamesa, as will halfbacks Michael Hernandez, Matt Carroll, Joe Don Finley and Tony Barrera; and fullbacks Kelly Cornejo and Amos Rosas.

"All four of our halfbacks play defense, so we switch them in and out on offense," Stapler said.

The veteran coach doesn't believe the Lamesa game will be a cakewalk, despite the Golden Tornadoes' penchant for losing football games in recent years.

"They still have some good players," the Mustang mentor said. "We'll match up better with them than we did with Midland High.

"Their backs are all large and they have good wide receivers."

Lamesa scored its first win of the season in a 39-6 blowout of the New Mexico Military Institute last Saturday. Tailback James Williams and fullback Tim Hogg, a pair of 185-pounders, have been leading the Tor ground attack — while Brock Cartwright, Paul Lopez and Michael Stansbury have been splitting time at quarterback.

Tor coach Clyde Noonkester downplayed the importance of the NMMI game as far as developing momentum for the Andrews game and next week's District 3-3A opener at Brownfield.

"I think our kids expected to win that one," he said. "I don't think it helps us that much, just as I don't think Andrews' loss to Midland High hurts them that much.

Defensively, ends Jason Jones and Jarrett Anderson, linebackers Hogg, Williams and Steve Scott, and safety Lopez helped the Tors keep NMMI to 130 yards total offense.

AROUND THE AREA: Don't tell Greenwood and Stanton fans that non-district games don't mean a thing. The Rangers will invade Stanton on Friday for the umpteenth re-enactment of one of the area's hottest rivalries.

Greenwood coach Bob Purser doesn't have any illusions about what it will be like Friday.

"If Greenwood has a rival, it's probably Stanton," Purser said. "It's a big game for both schools."

In other area action Friday, Big Spring travels to Plainview; Crane hosts Seminole; McCamey entertains Alpine; Iraan hosts Ozona; and Rankin invites Grandfalls. Reagan County has an open date this week.

Stanton, Reagan County and Rankin are the only undefeated, untied teams in the MRT area after only two weeks. Lamesa is unbeaten, but the Tors did tie Levelland in the season's first game.

THINK IT GETS any easier for Big Spring, now that Lubbock Estacado (ranked 10th in Class 4A this week) is out of the way. Wrong?

Plainview (the Steers' Friday opponent) knocked off Midland Lee in a pre-season scrimmage, Monahans (Sept. 29) has a good chance of sweeping Class 5A competition in non-district play, and Sweetwater...

Gaylord vows to keep Rangers in D-FW

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma publisher Edward L. Gaylord says one of the major factors in his decision to exercise his option to purchase the Texas Rangers was his desire to keep the team in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Gaylord announced Wednesday that he has decided to purchase Eddie Chiles' 58 percent interest in the Rangers. The price tag for the Rangers and Arlington Stadium is an estimated $80 million.

He said in a statement issued from his Oklahoma City office that he was reluctant to sell his company's interest in the Rangers to "another party whose allegiance may be stronger to cities in another state than to the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex."

Gaylord's Dallas-based Gaylord Broadcasting Co. already owns about a third of the American League baseball club and he said the company "could be" interested in eventually obtaining the outstanding 8 percent of the team owned by a few limited partners.

Gaylord, who has the first option on any sale by Chiles, said he's committed to improvements that will bring a winner to Texas and the Southwest.

"But we have to wait to get approval first and I don't know how long that that will take, whether it will be weeks or months," Gaylord said. "There definitely could be improvements in the marketing, but that takes time and there's no point in talking about that until, and if, we get it."

Gaylord had tried to purchase the club from Chiles two years ago but his bid was rejected 12-1 by the owners of the other American League clubs.

The owners then said they denied Gaylord ownership because they were concerned that his ownership of television station KTVT might result in the team's games being carried nationwide, hurting gates at other American League cities.

Gaylord said he thinks "from what I've read" that the purchase will be approved this time.

Gaylord is president and publisher of The Oklahoma Publishing Co., which is the parent company for Dallas-based Gaylord Broadcasting.

A group headed by Tampa, Fla., automobile dealer Frank Morsani had agreed in principle to buy the team from Chiles, who later expressed regret that he hadn't gotten them to agree to not move the team from Texas.

"We knew going in (Gaylord) had that option," Morsani said.

C. Lewis prepares for 2nd Olympics

Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Dapper but temperamental, a team leader living apart from the team, Carl Lewis blew into town in a white silk suit and rode off into seclusion after vowing to reclaim the title of fastest man alive.

Lewis headed the first wave of American track and field athletes to the Games as politics began to take a back seat to sports Thursday, despite the curious absence of the Libyan team after it was prevented from leaving Tripoli.

Death threats were reported against the Japanese team and the wife of Swedish tennis player Mats Wilander if they came. Wilander pulled out several days ago, claiming a leg injury.

Anchorage and cities in Norway, Sweden and Bulgaria awaited the outcome of voting by the International Olympic Committee on the site of the 1994 Winter Games.

The man who would be king of these Games, though, is Lewis, who is seeking to match the four golds he won in 1984 in the 100, 200, 400 relay and long jump.

"The gold medal for the 100-meter race is mine," Lewis declared cockily, dismissing the thought of losing again to Canadian Ben Johnson. "I will never again lose to Johnson."

Johnson, the world record holder at 9.83 seconds, has beaten Lewis in six of their last eight races outdoors.

Oncoming winds force Oilers to depart early

HOUSTON (AP) — Approaching Hurricane Gilbert is forcing the Houston Oilers to leave town early for Sunday's NFL game against the New York Jets.

The Oilers planned to fly to Memphis, Tenn., after today's workout in Houston and hold drills Friday and Saturday in Memphis.

The hurricane threat also forced Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville to suggest Oiler family members get away from the storm ` y going to Dallas.

"It's one of the few times we recommended someone go to Dallas," Glanville said of the home of the in-state rival Dallas Cowboys. "We just told them don't buy any hats or banners."

Hurricane Gilbert, the most powerful storm on record, was headed into the Gulf of Mexico packing winds of up to 175 mph. All of the Texas coast was put on alert as forecasters had not determined where the killer hurricane would make landfall.

'Bama, Aggies ponder escape from hurricane

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Officials of the University of Alabama and Texas A&M are considering postponing Saturday's football game at College Station because of uncertainty over the direction of Hurricane Gilbert.

The National Weather Service predicted that Gilbert had an 11 percent chance of hitting the coast at Galveston, about 150 miles south of A&M's stadium. Winds of 70 mph were predicted for Saturday at College Station.

"In a 70 mph wind you couldn't even set the ball down, and if you kicked it into the wind, the ball would sail back over your head," Alabama athletic director Steve Sloan said Wednesday. "Nobody would be at the game because they'd all be in shelters."

Sloan said the schools were considering postponing the game, possibly until Dec. 3, when both teams are idle.

Texas A&M associate athletic director John David Crow said a decision could come today on whether to play the game. But Aggies coach Jackie Sherrill said the decision might not come until Friday.

While Sloan discussed the possibility of postponing the game until December, Sherrill put forth another plan.

Yanks visit Bosox for crucial four

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press

Bring on the Yankees! Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox are anxious to play and rest of the American League East is eager to watch.

Tonight at Fenway Park, New York and the division-leading Red Sox begin the biggest four-game series in baseball this year. Clemens will oppose Rick Rhoden in a rivalry that is hot even when the standings mean nothing.

Boston starts with a 4½-game lead after both contenders won Wednesday night. Milwaukee, which won, and Detroit, which lost, are 5½ games behind.

"It's been tough to keep our concentration the way everybody has been talking about the Yankees and the big series," said Mike Greenwell, who hit for the cycle as Boston beat Baltimore 4-3 and completed a three-game sweep at Fenway.

The Red Sox have won eight of 10 while New York made it six of seven with a 7-5 victory in Cleveland. Boston is 4-2 against the Yankees this season.

"We've had intensity and the guys are playing hard," New York manager Lou Piniella said. "This is going to be a fun series."

Greenwell became the 17th Boston player to hit for the cycle and the first since Sept. 18, 1985. Greenwell went 4-for-4 and scored three times, including the tiebreaking run in the sixth inning on Ellis Burks' sacrifice fly.

American

"This is something you dream about and to do it to help a win in a pennant race is a great feeling," Greenwell said. "We had to beat the Orioles and we did. Now we've got the Yankees, so let's go beat the Yankees."

Greenwell hit his 21st homer in the second, lined a double to right and scored in the fourth, had a wind-blown triple in the sixth and singled in the eighth.

Yankees 7, Indians 5

Dave Winfield hit a three-run homer in the first inning, leading New York to victory in Cleveland. The Yankees won for the sixth time in seven games.

Rich Dotson, 10-9, ended his five-game losing streak. Dale Mohorcic pitched 3 2-3 innings for his sixth save.

Winfield hit his 25th homer of the season and 203rd for the Yankees, tying him with Roger Maris for seventh place on the team's all-time list. New York went on to a 6-1 lead against Rich Yett, 8-6.

Jay Bell hit a solo home run and Mel Hall had a two-run double for the visiting Indians.

Blue Jays 3, Tigers 2

George Bell's tiebreaking single in the eighth inning helped Toronto continue Detroit's slump. The Tigers led the AL East by four games before sliding.

The score was tied at 1-1 when the host Blue Jays loaded the bases in the eighth against Walt Terrell, 7-14. Bell met Mike Henneman with a single and another run scored on a wild pitch.

Fred Lynn led off the Tigers' ninth with his 22nd home run, but Duane Ward, 9-2, finished for the victory.

Brewers 4, White Sox 2

Rob Deer and Robin Yount drove in two runs each as Milwaukee kept its hopes alive by winning in Chicago.

Rangers 9, Athletics 1

Texas' rookie battery of pitcher Kevin Brown and catcher Chad Kreuter was too much for Oakland.

Kreuter, in his first major league game, hit a leadoff single and three-run homer during a nine-run fifth inning.

Brown pitched a six-hitter in his first big league appearance since 1986.

Mariners 2, Twins 0

Mark Langston pitched three-hit ball for eight innings and Steve Balboni homered as Seattle defeated visiting Minnesota.

Royals 4, Angels 2

Floyd Bannister checked California on three hits over seven innings and Pat Tabler drove in two runs as Kansas City won in California.

Hershiser, Dodgers continue to roll

Associated Press

Orel Hershiser has pitched three straight shutouts and hasn't been scored on for 31 consecutive innings, yet he's only halfway to Don Drysdale's record of 58 2-3 innings.

Hershiser doesn't think he'll reach that record.

"What Don's done is one of the most unbelievable feats in baseball history and it's one of those records that'll never be broken," Hershiser said Wednesday night after pitching a six-hitter to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 1-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves. "I don't even think about it."

Hershiser, 21-8, has thrown six consecutive complete games, giving him 13. He has six shutouts, tying teammate Tim Leary and Cincinnati's Danny Jackson for the league lead. He's not thinking about trying to beat out Jackson as the best pitcher in the National League.

National

"I have three starts to go and a playoff game to worry about," Hershiser said. "I'm not thinking about Danny Jackson and the Cy Young."

Hershiser, who has more shutouts than the Baltimore Orioles, the New York Yankees or the Atlanta Braves, didn't think he had his good stuff.

Astros 7, Reds 1

Nolan Ryan pitched a four-hitter, struck out a season-high 13 and stretched his streak without a walk to 20 consecutive innings.

"I threw the fastball about 75 percent of the time," Ryan said. "This is the most consistent I've been all year. I've had command of my pitches."

Mets 3, Cubs 1

Sid Fernandez and Roger McDowell combined on a four-hitter and New York won for the sixth time in seven games, lowering its magic number to nine in the National League East.

Pirates 4, Expos 1

Bobby Bonilla hit a three-run homer in the 12th inning, his first home run since Aug. 14.

Jose Lind hit a two-out double off Tim Burke, 3-4, and Andy Van Slyke was intentionally walked before Bonilla hit his 21st homer.

Brian Fisher, 8-10, allowed one hit in two innings.

Phillies 9, Cardinals 2

Bob Sebra won for the first time since July 12, 1987 and Lance Parrish hit a two-run homer.

Jackie Gutierrez hit a two-run single in a four-run third inning as the Cardinals lost their third straight. St. Louis was outscored 30-5 in those three losses.

Giants 6, Padres 5

Don Robinson gave up eight hits in seven innings and San Francisco tied a National League record with four sacrifice flies as the Giants completed a three-game sweep.

Robinson, 7-4, struck out one and walked none.

Cowboys' Tuinei tires of constant switching

IRVING (AP) — For six years Mark Tuinei has labored on the lines of the Dallas Cowboys, seemingly never to find a position to call his own.

"It's been frustrating," Tuinei said Wednesday from the team's Valley Ranch headquarters. "Sometimes I wish they (the Cowboys) would make up their minds where they want to play me."

Tuinei is a journeyman in the truest sense of the word.

In college, all his efforts were concentrated on learning the trade tricks of a defensive lineman. He was a starter at defensive tackle his sophomore year at UCLA before transferring to the University of Hawaii where he was raised.

Nagging injuries hampered him throughout his senior year and he was bypassed by all 28 teams in the NFL draft.

However, the Cowboys signed him to a free agent contract in 1983. He made the team that year as a defensive tackle. Two years later, Tuinei made the first of many back-and-forth moves to the offensive line, this time to backup center Tom Rafferty.

During training camp for the '86 season, Tuinei was used at all three positions on the offensive line except tight end. "That was pretty bizarre," Tuinei said. "I couldn't zone in on any one position. I was very glad when they finally let me play just one position."

Just when Tuinei began to get comfortable at offensive tackle, injuries to defensive linemen Kevin Brooks and Don Smerek forced him to split time in practice every week between the two lines.

"It got to the point where it was just a challenge every day to go to practice and see where I was going to play," Tuinei said. "I wasn't sure what was up in their minds, but I was happy to be on the team so I didn't complain."

Tuinei finally secured the starting left offensive tackle in the sixth week of the season, just one week after he had led the defensive linemen in tackles (six) against the Denver Broncos.

Now, Tuinei starts at left tackle and doubles as the back up to Rafferty at center. And, even though he has found a home at tackle, he would much prefer to be elsewhere.

"Defense is my first love," Tuinei said. "If I had my choice that's where I would play. But, I know that isn't going to happen so I've resigned myself to that fact. I do wish they would say I'm the center of the future or something like that. I really don't know what they are thinking, they haven't told me anything except they want me to back up Rafferty for now and to be ready if he goes down."

Tuinei said he makes the switch between positions a little easier now than two years ago.

Walker leaves mark on expected also-rans

IRVING (AP) — "America's Team" has become the "The Herschel Walker Cowboys."

It became clear Monday night that the 1988 NFL fate of the Dallas Cowboys rests soley on the performance of Walker.

Walker carried nine times on the winning 81-yard touchdown drive as the Cowboys defeated the Phoenix Cardinals 17-14. Dallas ran 24 plays in the fourth period and Walker touched the ball on 17 of those plays, accounting for 88 of the club's 122 yards.

"That's what I envisioned when I decided to put Tony Dorsett on the bench," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "Herschel can just dominate a game. You can be in perfect position and he will still break a tackle and make a big play."

The loudly objecting 33-year-old Dorsett was traded to Denver so the 26-year-old Walker could become the Cowboys' prime offensive weapon.

"I like to carry the ball a lot," Walker said. "I get into the flow of the game that way."

Walker ran 29 times for 149 yards against the Cardinals.

"Ideally, we like to get the ball into his hands 30 to 35 times a game," Landry said. "Phoenix did a good job of double-teaming Herschel on pass coverage, so we just pitched it to him. He's powerful and always seems to be stronger in the fourth quarter than he is in the first quarter."

Landry did admit he may have stretched Walker to his limit on the 81-yard drive.

"That's the hardest workout he's had since summer camp," Landry said. "I was wondering if he had any spring left in his legs down there."

Walker said he enjoys getting the ball and ducking behind Dallas' 300-pound offensive linemen.

MC golfers visit Snyder

From Staff Reports

Midland College golfers jump into conference action Saturday, playing their first tournament at Snyder.

Western Texas College is hosting the initial Western Junior College Athletic Conference tourney on its home course. The five conference schools competing for the WJCAC golf title each host a one-day tournament.

The 27-hole events are tests not only of golf, but stamina. Players must carry their own clubs. Teams may enter six players, with the best five scores counted for the initial 18 holes and then the best five for the last 9 holes.

"This has to be one of the most competitive conferences in the country," declared Delnor Poss, MC golf coach. "New Mexico Junior College won the conference title, but Odessa College won the regional tourney with NMJC second and Midland College just a stroke behind for third. All three of the teams went to the NJCAA national tournament in Scottsdale, Arizona, with NMJC finishing in a tie for third, OC fifth, and Midland 13th."

Poss is taking Andrew John Coltart, Sean Duffy, Gordon McGarva, Brad Wells, Mike Johnson, and Mark Kochan to the WTC event. McGarva is the only letterman of the group. Johnson is participating in his first collegiate action after a sparkling career at Midland High School.

The other conference tournament this fall include New Mexico Military Institute, Roswell, Oct. 22 and Odessa College on Nov. 11. The remaining two tourneys will be played during the spring term.

Poss is hoping to stay in the hunt this fall, since he gets Marty Scoles back in January. Scoles, the conference medalist and regional runner-up, is academically ineligible this fall. Scoles announced last spring he planned to turn professional during the summer, but changed his mind after the NJCAA tournament.

Larouche calls it a career

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers center Pierre Larouche, who spent most of last season on the sidelines because of an injured back, has announced his retirement from hockey.

"Last year, being hurt, kind of prepared me for this," the 32-year-old Larouche said Wednesday. "I am very proud of the career that I had. I would love to continue playing, but my back just won't respond to any of the treatments."

Larouche, only player in NHL history to score 50 or more goals for two different teams, had three goals and nine assists in 10 games last season before he was sidelined by the injury.

"If surgery is possible, it's going to be done," Larouche said. "I can't continue to live in pain like this."

JIMMY PATTERSON

This year's Orioles won't be quite as bad as '62 Mets

How bad were the 1962 New York Mets? To fully understand, consider a few things. First, that the Baltimore Orioles opened this season with 21 straight losses.

People began making comparisons early to the Mets, saying how easily the Orioles could finish with a worse record than the New York team's 40-120 mark.

The tide has turned, though. The Orioles are now in a position of where they could actually lose the remainder of their games this year — and still be 11 games better off than were the Mets in '62.

Speaking of changing luck, the San Diego Padres, who started off as a fairly pitiful team in April are now 51-39 since the firing of Larry Bowa and the hiring of Jack McKeon.

■ Watching only the final set of the Ivan Lendl-Mats Wilander final at the U.S. Open Sunday would make even the harshest critics appreciate the game of tennis.

Having switched channels after the Oiler game, the announcers noted the two had been going at it for four hours and still had another set to play.

For two people to go one-on-one for 4 hours, 48 minutes is simply amazing. Lendl and Wilander are so well conditioned, they looked as if they could have gone another three or four hours if necessary. Next to basketball players and boxers, tennis players are some of the best athletes around.

Case in point ... have you ever heard of a tennis player named "Fridge?"

■ Forget the Olympians, forget Doug Williams in the Super Bowl or Magic Johnson or Jose Canseco, vote for Best Athlete 1988: Steffi Graf. Almost by leaps and bounds, even.

■ Another vote, this one for Dumbest Musburger-ism of the young football season: After the NFL's Week One and a win by the Philadelphia Eagles, Brent told his viewers that "Philadelphia fans are dreaming of a Super Bowl." (Cleveland, New England and Detroit also won their first games, but I doubt they've been having many dreams. You don't dream of going to the Super Bowl if you're in the NFC East, unless you're Washington or New York.)

Dumbest Musburger-ism, Part II: After same Week One and after a loss by the Atlanta Falcons, we heard "It's going to be a long season in Atlanta." (Maybe you've heard the old cliche, 'One loss does not a season make,' Brent.)

■ This is not a commercial, but "The Blackie Sherrod Collection" is a memorable compilation of some of the Dallas sportswriter's best columns. At $14.95, one could consider it a sportswriter's bible. May be hard to find, but it can be — and should be — ordered by any sports fan.

■ Just a thought: Would Andre Agassi be as popular if he didn't have all that hair?

■ This is not a commercial, part two: Best way to watch a Cowboy game? Turn down the television guys and listen to Brad Sham and Dale Hansen on the local outlet for the Cowboy network, KCRS (550 AM). Fantastic combination. Every team of announcers should work so well together.

REBELS

Miller was pleased with his team's defensive play last week, saying, "We felt like Del Rio had an excellent passing attack and we handled it pretty good. We need to get pressure on the quarterback because Andress quarterback (Manny) Avila can really throw and throw long. We're going to work James Brown more at saftey this week. We feel he has the speed to help us in the secondary."

Lee halfback Ferris Strambler rambled into the sunlight last week with 180 yards on just seven carries and appears to have the tools to be one of the best backs Lee has ever had, and that is saying a lot after five consecutive trips to the state playoffs.

Vince Henderson will again be at quarterback since Ty Chambers is still injured, but tight end Quincy White, who played with a hurt ankle last week, appears to be near top form again.

"Really, we're in pretty good shape physically," said Miller, "but we are to the point where we have to come together as a team. Games from here on out, you can't offer any excuses. You have to be ready to play."

This will be the first home game for Andress and Sepkowitz says, "I would like to think the home crowd would help us, but when you play a team like Lee, you just hope you can keep the crowd with you."

So the glitter of air travel awaits the Rebs this week, which is only the prelude to the rocking that will be going on one week from now at Midland's Memorial Stadium.

AREA

Well, the Mustangs kicked, stomped and spit out Abilene High 34-7 last week and Kenneth Norman and Co. is ranked No. 1 in the state among Class 4A schools.

Big Spring doesn't catch them until Oct. 6, however, giving them plenty of time to develop. Hm.

RANKIN RANKED?: Not this week, folks, but Troy Kennedy's bunch may be knocking on the door of statewide acclaim, barring a slip-up in coming weeks. Few Class A teams appear to match up with the speedy Red Devil backfield.

Lewis said he wouldn't allow further interviews before his competition and huffed he will go home if reporters bothered him. Unlike most of the other 12,000 athletes already in Seoul, Lewis has two houses he can stay in outside the Olympic Village.

He is also the only athlete with his own glossy guide listing his achievements.

Other glamour athletes, though, were quite a bit more accessible.

Jackie Joyner-Kersee, a favorite in the heptathlon and women's long jump, was available for autographs and chats over breakfast at a downtown hotel.

David Berkoff, world record holder in the 100-meter backstroke, is attracting crowds because of his unusual submarine style start, which usually puts him ahead of all his madly thrashing rivals about one third the way through the race.

OILERS

Glanville said running back Mike Rozier, who missed last week's game with an ankle injury, did not work out Wednesday and possibly will miss Sunday's game.

The Oilers will take a 2-0 record into the weekend game. Houston hasn't won its first two regular season games since 1981 when they finished 7-9.

AGGIES

"We have a contingency plan to change it to Sunday night if the hurricane interferes," Sherrill said. "We won't know for another day or two. We could play it Sunday night or go ahead and play it Saturday or Saturday night. We really don't know."

Alabama coach Bill Curry, however, said the Tide will not play on Sunday.

"I'm not playing Sunday night," he said. "Right now, we're counting on lining up at 3:07 p.m. on Saturday and playing. Other than that, I don't know anything else unless it will go to December."

Norwegian city earns nod for '94

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Lillehammer, Norway, on Thursday won the right to hold the 1994 Winter Olympics, beating out bids from the East, the West and a Scandinavian neighbor. Anchorage, Alaska, was among the losers.

The announcement by International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch in the gardens at the Hotel Shilla triggered a dance for joy by members of the Norwegian delegation, one of whom waved his nation's flag.

Besides Anchorage, the losers were Sofia, Bulgaria and Ostersund, Sweden.

Lillehammer's presentation was made by Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland, who called on the IOC to return to "the cradle of winter sports."

The Winter Games have been held in Scandinavia only once, in Oslo in 1952.

Winter Games

When the IOC voted in 1986 to stagger the Winter and Summer Games, it put a heavy burden on any city contemplating a bid.

The schedule left just two years instead of the usual four until the Winter Olympics would be awarded, meaning a city either would have to have a bidding organization already in place or get up to speed very quickly.

That is why the choices had very familar names. Anchorage, Sofia and Lillehammer all were losers for the '92 Winter Olympic.

The fourth bidder, Ostersund, was a rookie carrying on a long tradition. Sweden has submitted a bid the last four times the IOC chose a winter site and Swedish cities have tried 12 times in all to be a Winter Olympics host.

None of the previous 11 succeeded, and Ostersund officials said it was time to end that losing streak.

All four cities made hour-long presentations to the IOC's 94th Session on Wednesday.

Ostersund's delegation was star-studded, led by King Carl XVI Gustaf and Tomas Gustafsson, a double gold medalist in speed skating at the Calgary Olympics last February.

Korean, Swedish men elected to IOC board

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A South Korean diplomat and a retired Swedish business executive were elected Thursday to the executive board of the International Olympic Committee, which dealt another blow to chances of women's softball being added to the Summer Games.

Kim Un-young, who worked in Korean embassies in the United States, Britain and at the United Nations and helped organize the Seoul Olympics, and Gunnar Ericsson, a former president of the International Council of Swedish Industry, were chosen from a six-member field.

Ericsson, 69, has been a member of the IOC since 1965, but the 57-year-old Kim's rise to the top level of the committee was much quicker. He joined the IOC less than two years ago.

They succeed Keba Mbaye of Senegal, who was elected vice president in Wednesday, and Silvio Magalhaes Padilha of Brazil, whose term on the board expired.

Defeated in the balloting at the IOC's 94th Session were Flora Isava-

IOC Meeting

Fonseca of Venezuela, a former Olympic equestrian rider and one of the first woman members of the IOC; German Rieckehoff of Puerto Rico; Virgilio de Leon of Panama; and Rene Essomba of Cameroun.

The IOC also agreed to add a fourth vice president, beginning next year.

As it wound up its session, the IOC decided to put off any action on women's softball until its next annual meeting, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, in November 1989.

It was the second session in a row in which a decision on adding women's softball to the program was postponed, and the continued lack of action upset the sport's international chief.

Libyan Olympians missing from Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Libya's Olympic team was told it cannot go to the Games in Seoul and is being held in Tripoli, sources said Thursday.

The team was gathered at its hotel the night before its scheduled departure to Seoul on Sunday when it was informed of the decision, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of confidentiality.

Seoul Olympic officials confirmed that none of the 12-member team had checked into the Olympic Village by Thursday, four days after the squad was due to arrive.

It was not known what role Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi had in the action, or if he was even aware that the team had failed to depart, the sources said.

"They were ready, with their Olympic uniforms and at the hotel," one of the sources said. "Now, the athletes have been prevented from leaving the country. We do not know why. But they were told they cannot go."

The team was supposed to check into the Olympic Village on Monday.

Only one member of the team, an unidentified official, was allowed to leave, the sources said. He was granted permission because of an award he was due to receive from the International Olympic Committee this week, they added.

Yow sisters handle American women's basketball chores

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — When Kay Yow turns to her assistant for advice during the Olympics, she'll consult someone who is much more than a colleague.

Yow is head coach of the U.S. women's basketball team that is favored to win the gold medal. At her side will be her sister, Susan, once her star player, now her confidant.

Although there is a 13-year age difference, basketball and their deep religious beliefs created a bond that transcends that gap.

"We're biological sisters, we're sisters in the Lord, we're professional friends," Kay said. "That's quite a bond."

Kay, 46, is entering her 14th season as the head coach at North Carolina State. Susan, 33, head coach at Drake, played for her sister for one year at NC State and for three years at Elon College, where Kay spent five seasons as coach.

Kay also coached her sister for one year at Gibsonville, N.C., High School and Susan was her assistant for two years at North Carolina State.

"We were always extremely close, always," Susan said. "When she took her first high school job, I was in fifth grade. I remember in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade, I probably went to all of her Saturday-morning practice sessions.

Basketball

"She made a point of driving 45 minutes to our mom and dad's house on Friday night so she could take me back for Saturday morning practice. Every clinic she ever worked, she took me with her. Every camp she worked, she took me with her. Everywhere she went, I went, too. It was a package deal.

"I think she's gone from being the older sister I looked up to to being probably my best friend." Susan said.

It also became a package deal when Susan chose a college. Kay was at Elon so there was no question where Susan was going.

"Wherever she was, that's where I was going to play," Susan said.

Susan was a three-year starter for Kay at Elon, playing guard and forward and earning Kodak All-America honors. When Kay took the North Carolina State job, Susan had only one year of college remaining. Without a moment's hesitation, she followed her sister.

"I knew I was going with her," Susan said. "I didn't have to think about it at all."

Koreans enjoy pre-Games parade

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A royal Yi Dynasty parade was recreated Thursday on the streets of Seoul, with pick-up trucks carrying drums, the Olympic tiger mascot jogging alongside, and security men with walkie-talkies concealed in newspapers.

Thousands of South Koreans lined the streets, sat on curbs, stood on rooftops and hung out open windows to watch the two-hour parade.

Nearly 1,500 men in the colorful tunics of ancient royal officials, palace guards, troops and warriors marched in formation, many carrying swords, banners and flags.

Beauty contestants, acting as royal princesses, sat atop motorized carts disguised as sedan chairs. There were warriors on horseback, pick-up trucks decorated in royal bunting and musicians blowing conch shells.

At city hall, bushels of confetti rained down as Mayor Kim Yong-nae welcomed the procession.

Children clapped and squealed with delight, especially at the figures of Hodori, the cub tiger mascot, or figures dressed as animals following the royal procession in a parade of flowered floats.

"The people enjoy themselves on the inside," Kims said when asked why the crowd seemed hushed. "Traditionally, when Korean people have joy or delight, they regard it as impolite to express themselves wildly."

The parade started at Chongmyo, ancestral shrine of the royal Yi dynasty which ruled Korea from 1392 to 1910, and wound through the city center, ending at Yoido, an island in the Han River.

Security was low-key, but evident. City police were stationed every 50 feet along the parade route. Security police, many with earphones and walkie-talkies wrapped in newspapers walked alongside.

U.S. backstroker expects to benefit from unusual start

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — One-third of the way into the Olympic 100-meter backstroke, after the rest of the field has been thrashing away for 20 seconds, David Berkoff will pop out of the water like a fresh piece of toast.

And if all goes according to plan, he'll be in the lead 35 meters into the race without even taking a single stroke.

"I'm not the only one who does this, but I guess you could say I get the most attention for it," Berkoff, 21, of Willow Grove, Pa., said Thursday. "Perhaps I've made people believe it works."

Berkoff, a student at Harvard, took the underwater start for the backstroke several steps beyond what others had done before him.

At the U.S. trials Aug. 12, he set a world record twice in the same day, lowering the standard of 55.0 seconds by the Soviet Union's Igor Poliansky to 54.95 in the prelims and then to 54.91 in the final.

"There are always people who moan and groan about things and are skeptical about anything new," Berkoff said. "I think it's time swimming had something revolutionary."

Berkoff has been using an underwater start in competition for four years and he's been world-ranked since 1985, but only his recent success has attracted much attention.

Swimming

"A lot of my success this year is because of my start, but even if I was a conventional backstroker, I might have had the same success because I've never trained as hard as I have this year," he said.

Berkoff said he started using the long underwater start "as a way to break the monotony of practice."

He said he could be just as fast if he used a conventional start, but because he is only 5-foot-10, the underwater method helps him compete against competitors six of seven inches taller.

Berkoff and U.S. swim team coach Richard Quick said they would love to see other swimmers try to duplicate Berkoff's start to keep up with him in the first half of the Olympic race, which will be held Sept. 24.

"Because I have a fast 50, I think people will try to swim my race, and that's good for me," Berkoff said.

Posted prices raised; Futures sag

Hurricane, OPEC remarks spur runup

From Staff and Wire Reports

The rally that pushed oil futures prices up 84 cents Wednesday faltered this morning, with prices losing 35 cents by midmorning to stand at $15.05.

Buoyed by the rally that began late Monday and pushed futures prices up about $1.65 a barrel since briefly nearing a two-year low, a handful of Permian Basin crude oil buyers boosted their posted price 50 cents per barrel to $14.50 effective Wednesday.

Buyers raising their prices included Koch Oil Co., Marathon Oil Co., Permian Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., Pride Pipeline Co. and Sun Marketing & Refining Co.

Speculation that Hurricane Gilbert would temporarily disrupt gasoline supplies along the Gulf of Mexico coast had fueled a surge in energy prices since Monday.

But early indications today suggested the hurricane might not disrupt oil and gasoline supplies to the extent previously thought.

"People are afraid the hurricane is not going to slam into the refineries afterall," said Peter Beutel, an analyst with Elders Futures Inc.

But the overriding element driving the market upward involved OPEC-related developments, including an announced meeting of the cartel's price monitoring committee later this month that signaled a possible cutback in world oil production.

However, statements that Iraq would not lower its oil output and instead might raise production also dampened prices today, analysts said.

The October contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, was lower, trading between $15.03 and 15.18 a gallon today. On Wednesday, it soared 84 cents a barrel to close at $15.40 and trading volume was 160,363 contracts, the highest since a record 175,383 contracts were traded last Dec. 17.

On Monday, crude prices had plunged briefly to $13.75, nearly a two-year low, before rebounding and have generally moved higher since then.

The overriding element in the market Wednesday involved OPEC-related developments, including an announcement that the cartel's price monitoring committee would meet later this month, which signaled a possible cutback in OPEC production.

Expert advice helpful in enacting drug policy

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Putting together a corporate drug control and testing policy is a complicated undertaking, but doing it "by the book," has definite advantages, says one personnel expert who knows.

Searching out qualified experts in the field and following their advice has paid off for El Paso Natural Gas Co., according to Nancy E. Brown, administrator of staffing systems.

In the 22 months since the anti-drug policy — including searches and drug screening — was implemented, none of the company's 3,400-plus employees have challenged its validity, Brown told a Texas Association of Business seminar audience Wednesday.

Among the pieces of advice El Paso took to heart was sufficient advance notice of employees to give them time to "clean up their own act," before testing was begun.

While industrial safety and drug consultant Charles Pendleton generally recommends 45 to 90 days notice, El Paso gave eight full months warning to encourage workers to take advantage of the employees' assistance program (EAP) which was already in place.

As a result, only 2.6 percent of the company's 3,400 workers tested positive for drugs — half for prescriptive drugs and half for illegal drugs.

That user level is roughly one-eighth the generally accepted estimate of society-wide work force use, Brown said.

She added that participation in the EAP for substance abuse problems during the eight-month notification period "jumped tremendously."

Pendleton noted that General Motors attributes a 40 percent reduction in lost time accidents, a 50 percent decline in on-the-job-accidents and a 60 percent reduction in sick leave and medical benefit payouts to the success of its EAP, which includes personal and financial counseling as well as substance abuse treatment.

Connecting an EAP to the drug testing program serves two purposes, Brown said. "It shows our philosophy of helping, not punishing, our valued employees, and willingness to help workers with positive tests reflects better on the company in the event there is a challenge to the overall program."

Other features built in to El Paso's program include pre-employment testing, elaborate confidentiality safeguards, collection methods that are "as inoffensive as possible" and periodic unannounced tests.

Pre-employment rejection rates, which run as high as half of all applicants in industries such as construction, are coming down at El Paso.

"Initially, we were having as many as 25 percent positive pre-employment tests. That figure is down to 15 percent company-wide and is as little as 1 to 2 percent in some areas," Brown said.

"Word gets around once you start testing."

Too many people in the company with access to test results can be "the kiss of death from a slander viewpoint." To avoid that pitfall, workers' test results are reported only to the company doctor — a contract, not payroll, employee — who makes referrals to the EAP — also a contract organization — if needed.

The only time the company is informed of a worker's positive test is in the event of non-cooperation with an EAP program, Brown said.

Learning to identify drug paraphenalia and the signs of drug use are an important part of awareness training, explained safety consultant Charles Pendleton, at podium. Forensic pathologist Dr. Gary Wimbish, center, and personnel expert Nancy Brown also addressed the Texas Association of Business Wednesday.

August retail sales decline 0.2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales, dragged down by the sharpest drop in auto sales in 10 months, declined 0.2 percent in August, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said that sales dropped $330 million to a seasonally, but not inflation, adjusted $133.5 billion.

Most economists had been both expecting and hoping for the slight decline, taking it as evidence that growth in consumer demand has slowed, thus easing inflationary pressures in the economy.

It was the first overall decline in sales since April's 0.4 percent drop and followed a revised 0.1 percent gain in July, which had originally been estimated at a stronger 0.5 percent.

Auto sales down from 1987 levels

By PHILIP E. ROSS
New York Times News Service

DETROIT — Early September sales of new American-made cars and light trucks were off 9 percent from the comparable period a year ago, when buyer incentives were far stronger.

The seven domestic manufacturers reported Wednesday that car sales dropped 12.6 percent, to 155,131, and light-truck sales dropped 1.6 percent, to 87,237. There were nine selling days in the Sept. 1-10 period this year and last year.

Seasonally adjusted annual sales came to 7.3 million for cars, down from the 7.6 million average in the first eight months of the year but ahead of the actual 7.1 million sales in 1987. Annualized rates were calculated from a formula devised by the Department of Commerce.

Despite the sales decline, Scott Merlis, an auto analyst for Morgan Stanley, in New York, said. "I think sales are still moving in the healthy zone, despite the increase in prices and the rise in interest rates."

Merlis said the decline reflected last year's one-time sales jump, occasioned by buyer incentive programs that had featured car loans at annual interest rates as low as 1.9 percent and that had been introduced to clear excess inventories of unsold vehicles. That problem never materialized this year, when, for the first time since the fall of 1983, no special incentives had to be offered.

'Detroit is sitting pretty on inventory, and there are no fire sales or Draconian rebate programs on the horizon," Merlis said.

"I still see 15.5 million sales this year, but 1988 is going to be a hard act to follow. Even in that slightly slower sales environment, it's going to be a much more competitive market, and sales incentives could come back." he said.

Last year, 15.2 million cars and trucks, domestic and foreign, were purchased in this country, second only to the 16.3 million of 1986.

Detroit had a 59-day supply of cars going into September, only slightly higher than the 57 days of a year ago. Because this was accomplished without an artificially stimulated sales surge at the last minute, the market is far less saturated than last year and therefore it is likely to be more receptive to the 1989 models, which are being introduced this month.

The Chrysler Corp. and the Ford Motor Co. took 16.3 percent and 31.9 percent, respectively, of the domestic market for light vehicles. That represented an increase of 0.9 of a percentage point for each.

The General Motors Corp. dropped 4 points to take a 44.2 percent share, partly because it did so well last year, when it had the largest inventory and made the greatest efforts to clear it. But this fall it may have kept its inventories so tight that it sacrificed some sales.

"Last year, we had a tremendous hangover" of 1986 model cars, Robert C. Stempel, president of the GM, said Wednesday. "Right now, I'm short of some cars."

He added that he expected GM to recover about one percentage point of share in the 1989 model year.

Oil show gearing up for pre-registration

From Staff Reports

This year's Permian Basin Oil Show is expected to draw in excess of 200,000 visitors — both in and out of the petroleum industry.

The first two days of the show are limited to industry personnel only. To help enforce this restriction, visitors must wear registration badges

Cecil Smith and Mike Thompson, co-chairmen of the Registration Committee, have enlisted the help of Desk and Derrick Clubs and employees of some companies where registration centers are located to help prepare name tags and pre-register visitors.

Registration begins two days before the show — Oct. 17 and 18 — with 10 pre-registration centers opening in various Permian Basin cities. A company can provide a typed list of employees who will attend the oil show, and name badges can be picked up no later than 4 p.m. Oct. 18.

The 10 locations are:

- Entrance to the Permian Basin Oil Show, 42nd and Andrews Highway, Odessa;
- Midland Center, 105 N. Main, Midland;
- Arco Oil & Gas Co., Northwest Butane Route, Andrews;
- Thrasher Trucking Co., South Stockton Highway, Monahans;
- Arco Oil & Gas Co., 606 SE County Road, Crane;
- Arco Oil & Gas Co., 4 miles north on Highway 214, Denver City;
- Arco Oil & Gas Co., 103-A South First, Coahoma;
- Petroleum Information Center, 1 Energy Square, Abilene;
- Stringer Oil & Gas, 2402 College Hills Blvd. Building 2, San Angelo;
- Hobbs Chamber of Commerce, 400 W. Marland, Hobbs, N.M.

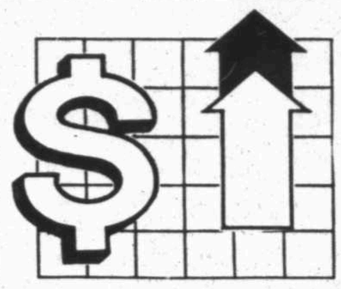
MARKETS

Dollar retains trade news gains

LONDON (AP) — The dollar traded steadily in thin European trading today and dealers expected it would retain the gains from the previous day's smaller-than-expected trade deficit.

Gold prices were mixed.

Foreign exchange dealers predicted the dollar would remain well-supported by gains won Wednesday after the U.S. government announced a July trade deficit of $9.53 billion, down from $13.22 billion in June. The dollar rose sharply after the unexpectedly large narrowing of the deficit was announced.



Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

—1.8749 West German marks, down from 1.8783

—1.5810 Swiss francs, down from 1.5835

—6.3760 French francs, down from 6.3915

—2.1144 Dutch guilders, down from 2.1155

—1,399.75 Italian lire, up from 1,399.50

—1.2240 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2223

In London, one British pound cost $1.6785, more expensive for buyers that late Wednesday's $1.6750.

In Tokyo, financial markets were closed for Respect for the Aged Day, a national holiday. In London, the dollar was quoted at 133.95 yen, down from late Wednesday's 134.55.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $421.40 a troy ounce, and at midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $421.50. Both bid prices were down from the $421.75 bid late Wednesday.

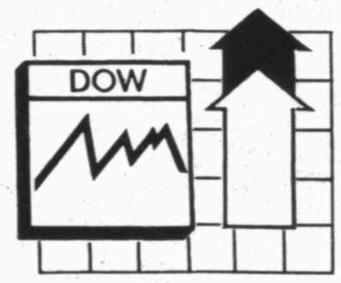
In Zurich, the bid price was $421.75, up slightly from $421.50 bid late Wednesday

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold remained unchanged today to close at a bid $423.45.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.50 a troy ounce, up from Wednesday's $6.53.

Market climbs to five-week peak

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market overcame some early hesitancy to reach a five-week high Wednesday, responding to better-than-expected news on international trade.



The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 17.60 to 2,100.64, closing above 2,100 for the first time since it stood at 2,107.40 on Aug. 8.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by nearly 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 979 up, 502 down and 489 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 177.22 million shares, up from 162.49 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 205.70 million shares.

Oil issues were broadly higher as prices of energy futures jumped on fears of supply disruptions that might be caused by Hurricane Gilbert.

Exxon gained ⅜ to 45¼; Chevron 1 to 44¾; Mobil 1 to 43⅞; Atlantic Richfield 1⅛ to 81⅝; Amoco 1⅜ to 74⅝, and Phillips Petroleum ½ to 18⅛.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $15.42 billion, or 0.58 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .98 to 152.13.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 2.44 to 309.39, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 1.88 at 269.31.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.48 to 383.86. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 298.35, up 1.56.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Senate confirms Brady for Treasury post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted overwhelmingly to confirm investment banker and former Sen. Nicholas F. Brady as Treasury secretary in time for a major international meeting next week in West Berlin.

Brady, 58, who was confirmed Wednesday by a 92-2 vote, will be attending his first meeting of the Group of Seven, composed of finance ministers from the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada.

Senators from both parties wanted a strong show of confidence to strengthen their Republican former colleague's hand at the gathering.

Greenspan: Bank merger ban not needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan has told Congress he sees no need for a blanket ban on mergers of the biggest banks and securities firms, but is going along with such a ban in order to win passage of legislation permitting banks to underwrite securities.

Greenspan said Wednesday that he and fellow Fed governors "see no threat to the system if those (merger) activities were to take place."

But he said they did not believe it was wise to press the issue for fear of hurting chances for repealing the Glass-Steagall Act, which separated commercial from investment banking in 1933.

House OKs stiffer insider trading penalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has moved toward tougher treatment for Wall Street insider traders, passing legislation that would dramatically increase their fines and prison terms and penalize investment firms where the practice takes place.

The measure was passed Wednesday. Its fate is unclear in the Senate, where the legislation may not advance unless the House approves a Senate-passed banking bill.

Harvard research raises ethical question

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University says it is raising $30 million to start companies to commercialize medical research, a move academics believe creates potential conflicts between the pursuits of knowledge and profit.

Wednesday's decision comes eight years after Harvard scrapped a plan amid controversy to invest in a professor's genetic engineering work after the university's involvement in business was deemed unethical.

Administrators said the new scheme would raise money needed to supplement Harvard Medical School's $350 million research budget.

GM workers present 5,000 letters to DOT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the General Motors assembly plant in Arlington, Texas presented the Department of Transportation with 5,000 letters Wednesday urging the agency to ease fuel economy standards for 1989 and 1990 model cars, claiming a failure to act could jeopardize thousands of Texas jobs.

"The employees there orchestrated the letters. They were concerned," said GM spokesman John Hartnett.

He said General Motors would have to cut production of its large model cars to meet the targeted fuel economy standard of 27.5 miles per gallon for the 1989 and 1990 model years. The company would like to see the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration set the fuel economy standard at 26.5 mpg.

Both GM and Ford told a hearing of the NHTSA on Wednesday that they could not produce a mix of cars that would have a corporate average fuel economy, or CAFE, at the 27.5 mpg level.

To meet the standards, Hartnett said, "GM may have to eliminate 200,000 large and higher performance cars in 1989 and 330,000 in 1990."

Exxon completes 366 barrel stepout

From Staff Reports

Definition of the new Zebulon field of Howard County continues as EXXON CORP., Midland, completes a southeastern stepout to the field.

Exxon potentialed the No. 1 John Guitar to flow 366.1 barrels of 47.3 gravity crude, 13.3 Mcfd and no water on an 8.5/64 inch choke from perforations 10,303 to 10,374 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 550 psi, and no treatment was recorded. Gas-oil ratio is 36.3:1.

Permitted as an 11,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,499 ft. A 4 1/2 inch liner was hung from 7,482 to 10,499 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,523.3 ft., include the Seven Rivers at 1,936 ft., San Andres at 3,060, Spraberry at 6,414, Wolfcamp at 7,954, Strawn at 9,541, and Silurian at 10,276 ft. Pay was topped at 10,303 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 1,140 ft. from east lines of Section 16, Block A, PSL survey, nine miles northwest of Big Spring.

★Howard stepout

Exxon Corp. has completed a new 366 barrel producer in the recently discovered Zebulon field of Howard County.

Operator continues developing Sugg field

IP PETROLEUM CO., INC., Midland, continues development drilling in the Sugg Ranch (Canyon) field, adding four new wells in the Sterling, Irion and Tom Green County portions of the field.

In Sterling County, IP tested the No. 1702 Sugg "A" to flow 87 barrels of 42 gravity crude, 580 Mcfd and 8 barrels of water on a 12/64 inch choke from perforations 7,769 to 7,949 ft.

The No. 2 Ferguson Brothers "34" was completed to flow 134 barrels of 42 gravity crude, 580 Mcfd and no water on a 10/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 850 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,465 to 7,656 ft.

In Irion County, the No. 19-2 Pfluger "C" was potentialed to flow 137 barrels of 39.7 gravity crude and no water on a 13/64 inch choke from perforations 7,534 to 7,660 ft.

In the Tom Green County portion of the field, IP tested the No. 24-1 Pfluger "D" to flow 66 barrels of 40.8 gravity crude and no water on a 16/64 inch choke. Production was from perforations 7,915 to 8,169 ft.

Undesignated strike recorded in Crockett

An undesignated discovery has been recorded in Crockett County, on the edge of the Tippett field.

BASS ENTERPRISES PRODUCTION CO., Midland, finaled the No. 1 Ann T. Mann to flow 280 barrels of 37.4 gravity crude and no water on a 22/64 inch choke from perforations 6,256 to 6,268 ft. The interval was sand fractured with 225 sacks. Gas-oil ratio is 693:1.

Permitted as an 8,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,123 ft. and plugged back to 6,493 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,577 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,314 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 1,646 ft., Glorieta at 2,266, Clearfork at 4,510, Upper Wolfcamp at 5,172, and Devonian at 6,590 ft. Pay ws topped at 6,228 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 4,400 ft. from west lines of Section 2, Block JH, Scrap File 5582, 11 miles southeast of McCamey.

Lea field producer flows 592 barrels oil

The Northeast Lovington field of Lea County gained a very strong Strawn producer as AMERIND OIL CO. completed activity in the area.

On potential test, the No. 1 Wiser "C" flowed 592 barrels of 41.9 gravity crude, 561 Mcfd and 254 barrels of water on a 32/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 240 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,114 to 11,130 ft., which were acidized with 500 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 947:1.

Drilled to 11,280 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 11,229 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,802 ft., include the Anhydrite at 2,100 ft., Salt at 2,145, Base Salt at 2,200, Yates at 3,103, San Andres at 4,850, Glorieta at 6,090, Paddock at 6,243, Blinebry at 6,968, Tubb at 7,637, Drinkard at 7,747, Wolfcamp at 9,562, Pennsylvanian at 10,378, Canyon at 10,795, Strawn at 11,064, and Atoka at 11,279 ft. Pay was topped at 11,114 ft.

Location is 510 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Sectin 32, T16s, R37e.

U.S. oil production still declining

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. oil production declined again in August and imports remained strong as uncertainty over prices left little incentive for boosting domestic output, the American Petroleum Institute said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, deliveries of refined petroleum products rose 2.2 percent from a year earlier, the largest yearly increase since the first three months of the year, the trade group said. Refineries reached 88 percent of capacity, the highest monthly utilization rate in nearly 10 years.

Some analysts said the surprising number in the trade group's monthly report was the healthy 11.7 percent increase in deliveries of distillate fuel oil, which includes home heating oil and diesel fuel, despite the severe summer drought in the nation's midsection. Analysts said much of the demand was channeled into inventories and not consumed.

Deliveries of gasoline rose 1.3 percent and of kerosine jet fuel 0.8 percent last month, while residual fuel oil deliveries fell 2.6 percent, the report said.

Crude oil production averaged 8.1 million barrels a day, 0.8 percent less than the 8.2 million barrels produced daily in August 1987.

Alaskan daily production remained near the 2 million barrel level it has held since late last year, but production in the lower 48 states declined about 175,000 barrels a day from a year ago and more than 1.1 million from early 1986, the report said.

"The lower crude oil prices and increased price uncertainty of the past several months have no doubt reduced the amount of well servicing that is economic to undertake," the trade group said.

The partial recovery in well servicing that began last year appears to be eroding, the report said, with only about half of the wells restored following the 1986 oil price crash.

"When you're getting $16 to $18 for oil, you can't put as much enhanced recovery investment into servicing," said Bob Baker, an analyst with Prudential Bache Securities Inc.

Although imports declined between 3 percent and 5 percent in the last two months, lower production and higher consumption have pushed imports up more than 500,000 barrels a day over the last eight months as a whole.

The trade group said total inventories, which include crude oil and its refined products, were up 0.2 percent in August from July and up 1.6 percent from a year earlier.

Airline reservation systems criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's largest airlines have an unfair competitive advantage because they own the computer reservation systems that travel agents use to book passengers, a congressional report says.

The General Accouting Office study, released Wednesday, concluded that the Department of Transportation should try to correct the "anti-competitive features" of the reservation systems. The GAO is Congress' investigative agency.

Chairman Norman Mineta, D-Calif., whose House aviation subcommittee held a hearing on the report, criticized the Transportation Department for not acting sooner.

"The department appears to be unwilling to take any action" on computer reservation systems "without substantial prodding and adverse publicity," he said.

The computer systems which the nation's travel agents use to reserve seats on flights — as well as rental cars and lodging — are owned by some of the nation's largest airlines. Each system's owner earns money by collecting a fee from the airline on which a seat is selected, and by charging travel agents an annual subscription fee for use of the computer.

OPEC Secretary-General Subroto announced the cartel's price monitoring committee would meet Sept. 25-26.

Although members of the committee — Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Algeria, Indonesia and Nigeria — cannot take pricing or production action, they can call a meeting of the entire 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The prospect of such a meeting was enough to move the market, although most traders remained cautious.

"It indicates that OPEC is going to take some action," Lebow said.

Reports Wednesday also indicated some members of OPEC had reduced their output. The market turned bearish last week on reports that OPEC was producing 20 million barrels of oil a day, or more than 1 million barrels above the level the market could absorb. Wednesday's reports indicated OPEC production was down to about 18.5 million barrels, said Peter Beutel, assistant director of Elders Futures Inc.

The price boosts stemmed partly from speculation that Hurricane Gilbert, which is approaching the Gulf coast, would disrupt gasoline output at refineries along the Texas-Louisiana border as well as offshore oil production. Analysts said although the storm had not damaged the Gulf oil fields, up to 1 million gallons a day of gasoline could be lost if production was halted to wait out the storm.

The approaching hurricane increased demand for gasoline at both the wholesale and retail levels and caused long lines at gas pumps in Texas. But analysts said they did not anticipate any immediate increase in retail prices.

"If the hurricane comes in and does damage it will have an effect on retail prices," said Andrew Lebow, senior broker and analyst with E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc. "But right now the impact is localized and there is no impact at the pump."

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery was trading about 1.57 cents lower at around 45.45 cents a gallon shortly after the market opened. Gasoline had soared 3.21 cents a gallon on Wednesday to settle at 47.02 cents on top of a 1.19 cents rise in Tuesday's session.

The October wholesale heating oil contract was down about 1.22 cents at 42.85 cents a gallon after rising 2.24 cents a gallon to settle at 44.07 cents Wednesday.

DRUGS

Because many of the recent successful challenges to tests have attacked the sample collection process as "demeaning and dehumanizing," El Paso was particularly careful in establishing their procedure to avoid controversy. Witnesses used indirect line of sight and the company even constructed an opaque screen to help employees feel more comfortable while preserving the integrity of the tests.

Pendleton noted that he has changed his opinion on direct witnessing of samples in the last couple of years and now feels that controlling the testing environment can be as effective.

A very small percentage may still beat the system, but by safeguarding as many variables in the sampling room as possible — turning off water, sealing toilet tanks, making employees remove coats and so forth will eliminate almost all of the problems. "Plus if anything suspicious takes places, you can always reject the sample and request another under direct witness," Pendleton said.

Another key consideration is the accuracy and speed of test results.

Dr. Gary Wimbish of the American Institute for Drug Detection told the seminar attendees that two days — one day for screening and one for confirmation of any positive screen results by another method — is a reasonable time to expect from a lab.

Wimbish detailed several methodologies used by labs in testing for various "drugs of interest" in employment-related testing. The five primary drug groups which must be tested for in a pre-employment screen are marijuana, opiates, cocaine, amphetamines and PCP, he said.

RETAIL

Auto sales fell 1.8 percent in August to a seasonally adjusted $29.1 billion. It was the sharpest decline in this volatile category since October.

Excluding autos, sales last month rose a modest 0.2 percent following a slight 0.1 percent gain in July.

Sales at department and other general merchandise stores were also weak, falling 0.4 percent in August to $15.1 billion, following a 0.1 percent drop a month earlier.

Analysts say hotter than usual weather in August along with consumer indifference to new fashions in women's clothing held back department store sales.

Sales of durable goods, "big ticket" items expected to last three or more years, were down 1.0 percent last month.

Furniture sales had fallen 2.1 percent in July. Rising mortgage interest rates have cut into home buying and when home sales drop, analysts say fewer home furnishings are sold.

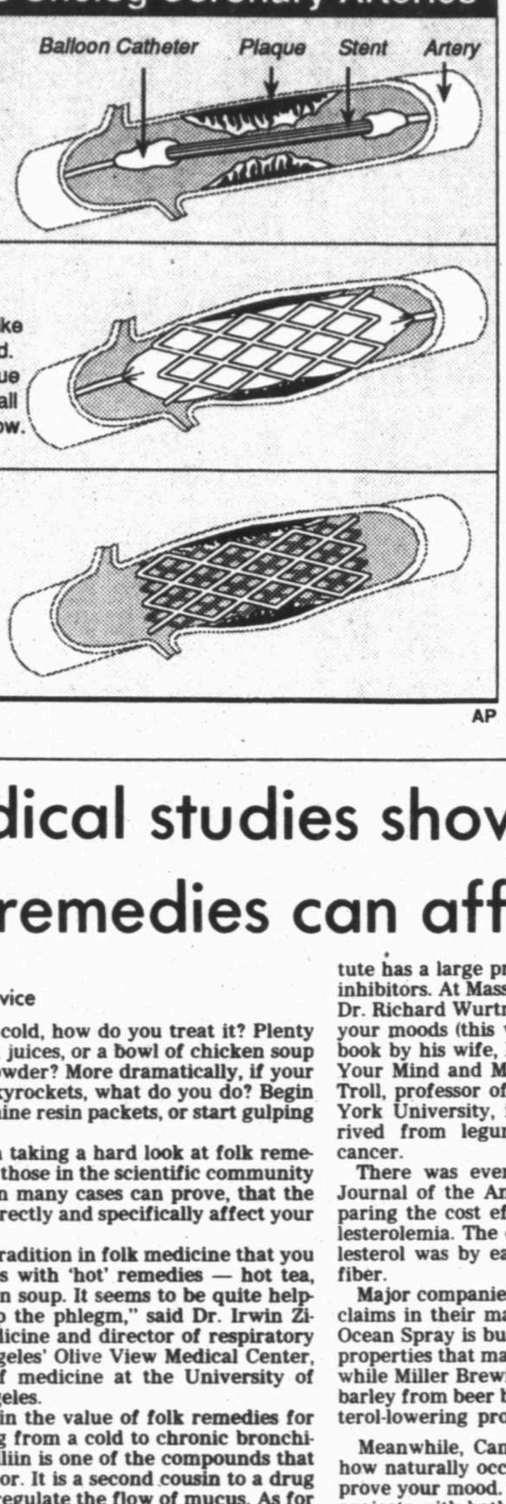
How Stents Unclog Coronary Arteries



AP

New artery device can reduce surgery

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A device to shore up weakened coronary arteries could save thousands of people a year from unnecessary and costly bypass surgery and repeat use of balloons to ease arterial blockages, researchers say.

The mesh-like stainless steel device, a Palmaz stent, is inserted with a catheter and expanded into place with a balloon, preventing the collapses that are "the Achilles heel of angioplasty," said Dr. Richard A. Schatz.

The Food and Drug Administration in January approved the elective use of the Palmaz stent in coronary arteries. Schatz, 35, has implanted 20 in 13 patients, and says none of the patients have suffered collapses.

The stent invented by Dr. Julio Palmaz, a San Antonio, Texas, radiologist, is a tube with 90 percent of the metal removed "so that it looks like fishnet stocking," Schatz said. It is etched into staggered rows of rectangles, which become rigid diamonds when expanded. The tiny device — three-thousandths of an inch thick collapsed and about a tenth of an inch expanded — anchors to the artery wall and a layer of tissue grows over it.

About 200,000 angioplasties are done each year in this country. In 2 percent to 5 percent of cases, the artery collapses immediately — requiring immediate surgery — and in about 30 percent it recurs in three to six months.

Artery collapse usually comes from a combination of a blood clot and smooth muscle growth in the artery, Schatz said. If the rate can be cut to 5 percent or 10 percent, "that's a pretty significant number of patients that we've saved a separate procedure."

Nine investigators, at institutions including the University of Michigan, Harvard and Yale, have been or will be trained by Schatz.

"I think it's gone quite well," said Dr. William Grossman, a Harvard Medical School professor and cardiology chief at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital. Doctors there have implanted Palmaz stents in five patients, and have had no clots or collapses in any, "and I don't think Schatz has either."

The device has technical limitations, but "the concept clearly works," Grossman said, explaining that the major problem is its rigidity; it can only be used in very straight segments of the primary arteries nearest the aorta.

"If you have to get to a blockage that was down around a curve or a bend you can't get there with this device because it's rigid," he said. A version still being tested in animals is made of more flexible material.

"I think the thing is definitely going to find a place," Grossman said. "It will be useful in settings that the current angioplasty technique is just not adequate in, especially these blockages that tend to...renarrow."

Doctors will have to follow up to 2,000 cases, but if stents prevent abrupt closure, angioplasty might be possible for the 5 percent to 10 percent of heart patients for whom it is avoided because failure is deadly, Schatz said. "If it collapses, the patient usually dies instantaneously. You don't have time to get him to the operating room, so it's much too treacherous."

Angioplasties normally are done in a hospital catheterization lab instead of an operating room. Bypass surgery costs about $30,000; angioplasty, $10,000.

Grossman agreed that stents could become a means to avoid bypass surgery. "Once there's broader experience with it that will be the case."

Doctors at Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta have been approved for more than a year to use a stent like a tiny coiled spring in the coronary arteries in emergency situations and when abrupt closure of the artery is likely. "In other words, if the angioplasty goes perfectly well, we cannot use it," said Dr. Spencer King, an Emory cardiologist. Coil stents have been used six times, and all six patients went on to bypass surgery, King said.

"What people obviously expect is a reduction in restenosis rate, but we have no way of knowing at this point whether that's been achieved or not achieved," said Lynne Reamer, FDA's head of diagnostic, surgical and therapeutic devices.

All the investigators, Reamer said, are seeking "a procedure that would necessitate that the patient not come back as often as he might have to."

Medical studies show foods, folk remedies can affect health

By JIM BURNS
Hearst News Service

When you get a cold, how do you treat it? Plenty of rest, aspirin and juices, or a bowl of chicken soup laced with chile powder? More dramatically, if your cholesterol level skyrockets, what do you do? Begin taking cholestyramine resin packets, or start gulping bran muffins?

Science has been taking a hard look at folk remedies, and there are those in the scientific community who believe, and in many cases can prove, that the food you eat can directly and specifically affect your health.

"It's certainly a tradition in folk medicine that you treat 'cold' diseases with 'hot' remedies — hot tea, hot rum, or chicken soup. It seems to be quite helpful in loosening up the phlegm," said Dr. Irwin Ziment, chief of medicine and director of respiratory therapy at Los Angeles' Olive View Medical Center, and a professor of medicine at the University of California-Los Angeles.

Ziment believes in the value of folk remedies for treating everything from a cold to chronic bronchitis. For instance, alliin is one of the compounds that gives garlic its flavor. It is a second cousin to a drug used in Europe to regulate the flow of mucus. As for chilies and bronchitis treatment, Ziment says capsaicin, the stuff that puts the heat in chile peppers, is related to the expectorant guaifenesin that some drug companies use in their cough medicines.

"Nobody has ever proved that cough medicines work," Ziment said. "The FDA has never required that it be proved that these things work. Yet, we know from experience that hot food makes your nose run. It has a potent effect.

"Should you eat more of certain things if you have a problem? What I say is that you should eat more hot foods all the time. If you don't want to think of it as a food, think of it as a drug."

The medical establishment's second look at how food may keep or make you well is thoroughly and convincingly presented in the new book, "The Food Pharmacy: Dramatic New Evidence That Food Is Your Best Medicine" (Bantam, $18.95) by medical and nutrition writer Jean Carper.

"Researchers take the whole thing very seriously," Carper said. For instance, the National Cancer Institute has a large program to screen foods for cancer inhibitors. At Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dr. Richard Wurtmann is studying how food affects your moods (this was also the subject of last year's book by his wife, Dr. Judith Wurtmann, "Managing Your Mind and Moods Through Food"). Dr. Walter Troll, professor of environmental medicine at New York University, is putting protease inhibitors derived from legumes into milk to help prevent cancer.

There was even an article in the conservative Journal of the American Medical Association comparing the cost effectiveness of treating hypercholesterolemia. The cheapest way to reduce high cholesterol was by eating oat bran or another soluble fiber.

Major companies are anxious to use these medical claims in their marketing campaigns. For instance, Ocean Spray is busily testing its cranberry juice for properties that may help prevent bladder infections, while Miller Brewing Co. would love to use left-over barley from beer brewing if it proves to have cholesterol-lowering properties.

Meanwhile, Campbell's Soup Co. is investigating how naturally occurring chemicals in food may improve your mood. The company may begin research projects with both Tufts University School of Nutrition and Rodale Press, a nutrition-oriented magazine publisher.

"We feel mood is going to be really big in the 1990s and that positioning foods as enhancing a person's sense of well-being could be a gold mine," Tony Adams Campbell's marketing research chief, told the Wall Street Journal.

Robert G. McVicker, a corporate vice president for Kraft, Inc., described "medical food" as a food product that is not a drug, and you do not buy it over the counter or with a prescription, nor is it necessarily targeted at a particular disease.

"But it is a food product, one not really different from what you see on the table right now, except that it is designed to provide some specific health-related benefit to the consumer, such as nutritionally preventing muscle deterioration," said McVicker.

McVicker believes that the food industry can either compete or cooperate with the pharmaceutical industry as medical foods come of age.

Doctors calling circumcision desirable

Associated Press

Between 1975 and 1986, the proportion of newborn boys circumcised in the United States dropped from 90 percent to 60 percent, as many groups and individuals questioned the medical validity of this most frequently performed of surgical procedures.

The latest medical thinking, however, deems circumcision desirable, according to a specialist at New York University Medical Center.

"A few years ago, I was among those who raised questions about the need for circumcision," said Dr. Moneer K. Hanna, clinical professor of urology at the center and chief of pediatric urology at University Hospital. "But the present weight of evidence is in support of the procedure."

An article in an upcoming issue of the center's Health Letter explains that circumcision involves removing all or part of the prepuce or foreskin, the free fold of skin that covers the glans, or head, of the penis. A custom that dates from antiquity, it is practiced by various tribes throughout the world, and is mandated for observant Jews and Muslims.

Hanna said circumcision has been shown to be beneficial in three ways. "The major one is urinary tract infections. Recent studies reveal uncircumcised infants are 10 to 20 times more likely to develop such infections," the physician said.

The procedure also appears to be associated with a decreased risk of penile cancer, a rare malignancy which causes about 200 deaths annually.

Third, venereal warts are far more common among uncircumcised men, although Hanna noted that "venereal warts are generally preventable by standard hygienic measures." Evidence suggests the virus causing the warts is associated with cervical cancer, the incidence of which appears to be higher among women whose sex partners are uncircumcised.

40 percent of population expected to lose hearing

By KYUNG M. SONG
Hearst News Service

Leon Curtis remembers flunking his spelling test in the second grade. His spelling was fine, but he spelled all the wrong words. Curtis couldn't hear what his teacher was saying.

Kathleen Johnston dreaded roll calls in her classes at a teacher's college.

"Every time someone's name was called that sounded like mine, I would answer, 'present,' " Johnston recalled. "I think I helped a lot of people who weren't present," she added with a chuckle.

Although the 73-year-old Johnston laughs about those embarrassing episodes of more than 50 years ago, she and Curtis share a handicap one person called "the most devastating disability there is" — impaired hearing.

Nearly 22 million Americans are hearing-impaired — almost 10 percent of the nation's population. Of those 22 million, less than 2 percent are profoundly deaf. The other 98 percent range from those who fail to hear an occasional comment to those who cannot understand speech without a hearing aid.

And the problem is getting worse. Forty percent of all Americans will eventually lose some of their hearing, with noise exposure the leading cause of hearing loss.

And the world is becoming noisier. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration reports that prolonged exposure to noise at 90 decibels — the noise level in an average factory — can lead to loss of hearing.

Caught between the hearing and the deaf worlds, the hard of hearing cope with a handicap that allows them to function in the hearing world while preventing them from being full participants.

Michael Baird lost his hearing in his early 30s, a decade after doctors used radiation to treat a tumor in his brain. Although a hearing aid in each ear enables the 42-year-old to hold down a job as a credit analyst, Baird says the hearing loss affected his life profoundly.

"I used to be extremely gregarious, always chatting with everyone. I can't do that anymore," he said. "I can't go to cocktail parties — they're too noisy. At best, it's tolerable. You hope you can leave without embarrassing yourself.

"Emotionally, everything you like to do is taken away from you. It inhibits me, because I have to choose between what I can and cannot do. It's the most devastating disability I know of."

In spite of the numerous frustrations and embarrassments the hard of hearing face, few get help for their problem. Although more than 95 percent of those who have a hearing problem can be helped by a hearing aid, only about 4 million have them.

One reason is that since most hearing losses are very gradual, many who are losing their hearing don't realize it for several years. People are more apt to blame a hearing-impaired person's lack of response on rudeness or, in the case of the elderly, senility, than on loss of hearing.

Another reason is the stigma attached to hearing aids.

"There hasn't been a way to glamorize hearing aids," noted Mary Ann Millican, director of development at the Hearing, Speech and Deafness Center in Seattle. "Glasses are kind of fashion statements, but hearing aids are just hearing aids."

President Reagan is probably the most famous hearing aid wearer in America. But he is joined by a relatively small handful of celebrities who have gone public with their hearing loss, including actors Richard Thomas and Florence Henderson. But their numbers may be rising.

"Society is coming around. Everyone knows someone who has a hearing problem," said Dr. Thomas Rees, an assistant professor of otolaryngology at the University of Washington and an audiologist at Harborview Medical Center.

Modern Plastic Surgery

by Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., ASPRS

THE CHEMICAL PEEL

Chemical peel is a surgical procedure which can erase superficial acne scarring, irregularly pigmented skin, and fine wrinkles. As the name implies, a peel involves the controlled peeling away of skin. The process begins with the surgeon carefully coating the skin with a chemical solution, which later blisters and peels away. Emerging from beneath the peeled layer is a new, healthy skin layer without the topical abnormalities of the old skin. However, patients should not confuse the chemical peel with other surgical procedures which are required to remove sagging or deeply-folded skin. Chemical peels also produce skin that is very susceptible to sun damage. It requires a degree of post-peel protection.

Dermabrasion is another method that can improve the surface of your skin. A skin planing tool is used to sand off wrinkled areas or remove deep imperfections such as pockmarks. Consult a board-certified member of the ASPRS to find out if chemical peel or dermabrasion can help the appearance of your skin. Contact PERMIAN PLASTIC SURGICAL CENTER at 848 Central in Odessa for further consultation on facial chemical peel, dermabrasion, or other cosmetic surgical procedures. Office hours: M-F 8-5. Tel. 335-8711 or 563-3110. Member ASPRS.

HINT:
A chemical peel may be effective in combatting such pre-cancerous conditions as keratosis.

Taste-testers approve of package

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

My children, I have noticed, are always thirsty. Whenever they've been outside for any length of time (read 5 minutes), they come rushing back in the house (one at a time, of course, so the door can stay open longer and more insects can come in) to plead for something — anything — to drink. (You know: "Oh, ple-a-s-e, I'm so-o-o thirsty! I n-e-e-e-d something to drink!" It's a chant we all learn by age 3.)

Of course, the fact that they always want something when I am up to my ears in laundry or talking on the telephone or trying to get the modeling clay out of the carpet only makes my desire to jump up and pour them a glass of milk practically non-existant. So when food manufacturers introduce kid-oriented drinks in packages designed to make my life easier, I can't help but notice.

Something called Yoo-Hoo chocolate drink (no, I'm not kidding, and I didn't make that up, either) was introduced in new packaging into Texas supermarkets this past summer. The manufacturer, Yoo-Hoo chocolate Beverage Corp. (how would you like that on your resume?), already markets the product in bottles and cans, but this year they put their drink in "the aseptic TETRA BRIK carton," company information states. That means the drink is now marketed in those little boxes with the straws that the kids love so much.

The small taste-testers, who are big fans of chocolate, enjoyed checking out this drink for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Each single-serving box contains 8 ounces of "chocolate flavored drink" that is advertised on its label as containing "5 vitamins, 3 minerals" and being "99 percent caffeine free." The label goes on: "Shake — It's great!"

Price for a three-box package of Yoo-Hoo is 99 cents. (Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.)

Well, anyway, the nutrition label listed each 8-ounce serving as containing 130 calories. It's "5 vitamins and 3 minerals" were listed to be protein (6 percent of the amount suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance), vitamin A (10 percent RDA), vitamin C (10 percent), thiamine (2 percent), riboflavin (10 percent), niacin (10 percent), calcium (10 percent), iron (2 percent), vitamin D (10 percent) and phosphorus (10 percent). I suppose it isn't false advertising to say the product contains these vitamins and minerals, but 10 percent of the RDA of these nutrients isn't much, and 2 percent — well, it hardly seems worth listing.

The taste of Yoo-Hoo, according to the young experts, was "like watery chocolate milk." And while they liked it OK, it took them two trips to the refrigerator to finish their boxes, instead of the single trip they take for a box of fruit-drink-in-a-box.

The children are fond of those cute little single serving boxes, but all in all, I think, they'd rather have chocolate milk.

BETTER BUSINESS

Not all charities are worthy causes

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

Whether at a shopping center, or walking down the street or even at their own front doors, more and more consumers are finding themselves targets for sales pitches by children, who want them to buy candy to support "youth opportunites"or some other charitable-sounding cause.

Many people find their usual good judgement becomes impaired because the cost is modest and the "cause" sounds good. What consumers don't realize is that the candy sale operation probably is a for-profit business guided by a promoter who buys the candy wholesale, then recruits youngsters — usually from low income, minority neighborhoods — to sell it.

The children memorize a pitch about how the buyer can help disadvantaged or seriously ill children by purchasing the candy. These children are taken to affluent neighborhoods to peddle the candy for three or four times its actual value.

The promoter gives the youngsters a token percentage of each sale they make. While it is true that only a few dollars are involved in each sale, the volume of sales involved makes a generous profit for the promoter of this racket.

Consumers fight labeling changes

By DON KENDALL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A consumer group says it will fight to retain federal rules requiring food processors to acknowledge when finely ground bone is used in hot dogs, sausage and other meat products.

Rodney E. Leonard, executive director of Community Nutrition Institute, decried an Agriculture Department proposal isued Monday that would require that such ingredients as ground bone be included on package labeling only when the material exceeds 10 percent of the meat portion of the finished product.

Under current regulations, so-called mechanically separated meat or MSM can comprise up to 20 percent of the meat portion of certain products, which include hot dogs, luncheon meats, sausage, scrapple, canned spaghetti with meat sauce and other items. But labels must state that the product contains MSM.

The department said that if the new proposal is adopted, MSM used in meat and poultry products "would not have to be listed in the ingredients statement on the label as long as it does not exceed 10 percent of the meat and poultry portion of the finished product."

MSM is produced by putting the bones and attached meat remnants of a slaughtered animal through a grinder and forcing the mixture through sieves. Although most of the bone is strained out, some small particles — about the size of black pepper flakes — wind up with the salvaged meat in the final mixture.

Mechanically deboned meat has been approved for use in certain foods since 1978. However, the industry complained that the stricter initial regulations called too much attention to the finely ground bone, and the product failed to gain widespread use.

Leonard said the proposed rule change was "politically motivated" by the outgoing Reagan administration.

The proposed change in regulations will be open for public comment until Nov. 8. Those can be sent to: Policy Office, Attn: Linda Carey, Hearing Clerk, Food Safety and Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Room 3171-S, Washington, D.C. 20250. Persons wishing to make oral comments should call (202) 447-6042.

Newer blow dryers safer, harder to find

New York Times News Service

Shopping for a safer blow-dryer, one that meets the Underwriters Laboratories standards that went into effect last Oct. 1, may be frustrating.

Only Sunbeam promotes this improvement on its packaging, but its Safe Idea dryer is no longer being produced, so remaining models may be difficult to find.

The boxes for Conair's new models carry three lines of tiny print. Other manufacturers give no clues on their packaging about whether the dryer is a new or older model, and you can't tell by looking whether electrical parts have been waterproofed.

The UL logo on the package won't help shoppers distinguish between models, either. Manufacturers are allowed to sell the blow-dryers they produced before the standard went into effect, and they too carry the UL logo.

DEAR ABBY

Self-invited girlfriend tests family's hospitality

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For the last year, a young woman has been pursuing our son. Our home has always been open to our children's friends, so it was only natural for us to make "Agnes" welcome.

However, it seems that Agnes wants to see "John" every night, and since she lives some distance away, she brings a change of clothes and comes to our house straight from work. Of course, she then has dinner with us, or if we dine out, she goes with us.

I have talked to John about this, and he says he doesn't invite her. I believe this because I have heard his end of telephone conversations, and this aggressive girl will not take "no" for an answer. Agnes is neither homeless nor friendless — she just wants to get her hooks into our son.

We hate to be rude, but either she doesn't seem to realize that she is imposing or she doesn't care. Please help me. It's getting to the point where neither my husband nor I wants to face what we know will be waiting for us when we get home from work. — JOHN'S LONG-SUFFERING MOM

DEAR MOM: How old is John? If he is an adult, ask him to tell Agnes to please discontinue the practice of coming to your home directly from work. If John is not an adult, then ORDER him to tell her. And if he doesn't do it, either you must tell her politely but emphatically — or tolerate the imposition.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for five years. We are childless by choice, because we enjoy our carefree lifestyle.

My sister has four children and my brother two. I am beginning to feel more and more pressure to invite these spoiled, self-indulgent nieces and nephews to our home.

Since we live near a nice lake with swimming privileges, my sister and brother think that this would be an ideal vacation spot for their children.

Abby, I love my nieces and nephews, despite their shortcomings, but I am reluctant to invite them to sleep over. If I invite one, I will be expected to invite all the others, and then I'll be trapped forever. I really don't want the responsibility of looking after children.

I see them in their own homes occasionally, and always remember their birthdays and Christmas.

I am beginning to feel guilty each time my sister or brother brings the subject up, and I am running out of excuses. As an aunt, would it be shameful of me never to have them in my home to spend the night? What do you think? — NO CHILDREN, PLEASE

DEAR NO CHILDREN: I think you are missing an opportunity to give your nieces and nephews a chance to know and love you. You say you "love" them; why not give them a "trial" run? You can't lose more than a few days out of the year — and you may be pleasantly rewarded with some new loving relationships.

Everything you need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada), to Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Accidents in workplace avoidable

Copley News Service

Each year an estimated 11,000 people die and about 2 million are injured or become ill as a result of accidents or exposure to hazardous materials in the workplace.

According to Trial magazine, a significant number of these deaths, injuries, and illnesses are preventable if four essential conditions can be met:

- Workers are fully warned about hazards and understand the warnings and the consequences of ignoring them.
- Workers receive adequate information about how to work safely within inherently hazardous work environments.
- Workers use state-of-the-art protective devices.
- Employers help shape workers' work habits and attitudes to produce safe working habits.

Poultry products nutritious, delicious

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Chicken and other poultry are nutritious, yet low in calories, fat and saturated fat when compared to other meats.

Poultry fits well into today's dietary needs, where the emphasis is on healthy and nutritious eating. With its high protein level and low caloric content, poultry is an excellent choice as nutrient dense food.

The 1987 data from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Information Service showed that poultry provides a more desirable ratio of nutrients to fats than other meat.

Each day the average person consumes 3,560 calories, with about 36 percent of these calories from meat products. Poultry provides only 3.5 percent of these calories. Red meat provides 15.5 percent; milk and milk products, 10 percent; egg, 1.6 percent; and fish and shellfish, 0.9 percent.

At the same time, animal products provide almost 57 percent of the total fat in daily diets. Poultry products account for only 5 percent of this total, with red meat accounting for 32.8 percent; milk and milk products, 20.5 percent; eggs, 2 percent; and fish and shellfish, 0.5 percent.

More than 75 percent of all saturated fatty acids consumed daily come from animal products. Poultry products contribute only 4 percent of this total, while red meat accounts for about 33 percent; milk and milk products, 20.5 percent; eggs, 2 percent; and fish and shellfish, .5 percent.

According to the USDA data, poultry provided more than 11 percent of the 68.5 percent protein supplied by animal products in daily diets, with red meat providing 27.6 percent; milk and milk products, 20.9 percent; eggs, 4 percent; and fish and shellfish, 4.6 percent.

Poultry accounts for about 25 percent of the total meat protein consumed per capita daily while providing only 17 percent of the calories, 14 percent of the fat and 11 percent of the saturated fat in animal products.

Not only are poultry products nutritious, but they are versatile, inexpensive and tasty.

Vegetables, fruits may be tainted

Copley News Service

Eating fruits and vegetables isn't as healthful as you think.

According to the book "Pesticide Alert" nearly 50 percent of fruits and vegetables are tainted with pesticides. And, in some cases, these pesticides cause cancer and birth defects.

Some of the culprits include imported bell peppers, cantaloupes, celery, cherries, cucumbers and strawberries.

Authors Lawrie Mott and Karen Snyder recommended these five safeguards:

Wash all your produce; peel it when appropriate; grow your own food; buy organically grown produce and stay away from "perfect" looking produce.

Tips offered for safe home canning

Associated Press

Before you start canning the season's abundant supply of fruits and vegetables, look over these points provided by Better Homes and Gardens magazine and check your equipment to make sure it is in top-notch shape.

For boiling water bath canning, any metal cooking utensil that is deep enough to hold pint or quart canning jars set on a rack, plus one to two inches of boiling water above the jar tops, will work. The container should have a close-fitting lid. Kettles specifically designed for processing are available.

Should you choose steam pressure canning, the pressure canner is a heavy, seamless kettle with a rack and locking lid with seal, pressure lock and safety valve. Check dial-type pressure gauges yearly for accuracy. County extension agents often have free testing clinics.

Or, check the gauge with a special maximum temperature thermometer made by Taylor Instrument Co. Weighted or rocker-type pressure regulators are not adjustable and usually remain accurate.

Make sure all vents and openings in the lid are clean. Clean them with a string or a fine wire before each use.

Use standard canning jars exclusively. Make sure they are free of hairline cracks or small nicks in the rim. After 10 to 13 years of use, consider replacing jars. One-use jars, such as mayonnaise jars, may break during processing. Do not use them in a pressure canner.

You will need large kettles, a jar lifter, knives, cutting board and possibly a sieve, food processor or blender.

Four killed as police end Lesotho hijacking

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — South African police Wednesday attacked hijackers holding a busload of pilgrims going to see Pope John Paul II and said three hijackers and a young woman hostage were killed during the rescue.

Eleven passengers were wounded, the remainder were freed and a fourth hijacker was arrested, South African police headquarters said.

Lesotho government officials said 71 hostages were in the bus.

The military government of Lesotho, a black kingdom that lies inside South Africa's borders, requested South African help in handling the hijacking.

There was no immediate government statement on the shootout.

Police said the shootout took place when the hijackers tried to drive the bus through the closed gates of the British High Commission, or embassy, in Maseru.

Reporters were barred from the area at the time of the shootout, but later they saw the bus, its windows shot out, lying wrecked in the high commission courtyard just inside the gate.

South African police said officers returned fire after the hijackers began shooting.

Police said the hostage casualties were "apparently caused by the wild firing of the hijackers." They said no policemen were injured.

The shooting broke out about 20 minutes after the pope arrived in Maseru, eight hours behind schedule. The hijackers earlier demanded to meet with the pope and Lesotho's king, Moshoeshoe II, a government official said.

After nightfall, gunfire and explosions were heard at the site where the bus was parked, and flares lit up the sky.

Reporters were blocked from getting close enough to the scene to see the shootout, but they saw ambulances taking casualties to a hospital.

Police ordered journalists at the scene to disperse and then chased them away with whips.

The pope arrived in this mountain kingdom after an overland journey from Johannesburg, where bad weather forced his plane to make an unscheduled landing. John Paul met Foreign Minister Pik Botha at the airport and was briefed about the hijacking before leaving for Lesotho.

State-run Lesotho Radio said there were about 70 hostages, including eight nuns, 36 children, 16 women and 10 men.

Burmese leaders urge peaceful demonstrations

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Responding to increasingly militant demonstrations, Burma's three main opposition leaders today urged student activists to use peaceful means in efforts to bring down the authoritarian governnment.

Sources said one student group went to the U.S. Embassy on Wednesday asking for weapons, and another group said it had 5,000 people ready to take up arms. An embassy official told the group the United States could offer only moral support, said the sources, who demanded anonymity.

Some students have called for volunteers to undergo training in military tactics.

"We realize the growing sentiment of the people, especially that of the students who had taken the front line in demonstrations," said a joint statement issued today by the three main opposition leaders — former Brigadier General Aung Gyi, former Defense Minister Tin Oo, and Aung San Suu Kyi, daughter of independence leader Aung San.

"The people including the students should continue peaceful demonstrations and general strikes steadfastly using the weapon of moral courage, as was the original intention," it said. "Violence arising out of impatience and overzealousness and further bloodshed should be avoided."

Student-led street protests have forced one concession after another from President Maung Maung's one-party government in recent weeks, but the opposition has persisted in demands an interim government be immediately formed to supervise a general election.

Maung Maung's government announced last weekend it would end the Burma Socialist Program Party's 26-year monopoly on power and hold the first multiparty elections since 1960. The polling could be as early as late October.

But the three opposition leaders told the state-appointed election commission Tuesday they would not accept any polling organized by the current government. They said they would not support or participate in such elections, and repeated their demand for an interim government.

Several thousand people demonstrated in the capital today, most of them high school students. More than 90 people, including students and workers, sat on bamboo mats outside City Hall and began a 72-hour hunger strike at the spot where where the military shot to death several demonstrators Aug. 8.

A one-legged man on a crutch led a group of about 50 ill-clad, apparently homeless men carrying a banner that said: "Pavement Dwellers, Suicide Squad."

"We are prepared to die for democracy. We have nothing to lose," the middle-aged man told a reporter.

Street demonstrations have become increasingly militant in recent days.

"You run or we will kill you!"

Walesa to meet with communist officials

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa faced talks with senior communist officials today after he took a tough line on legalizing Solidarity and the government cautioned against an "all or nothing" approach.

"There is no freedom without Solidarity," Walesa told reporters waiting at a church complex where he spent Wednesday night. "We will know more tomorrow."

The banned labor movement's leader traveled from his home in Gdansk to Warsaw late Wednesday for today's talks, but refused even to discuss a government report that he would be meeting with officials led by Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak.

The ruling Politburo, in a statement issued by the state-run news agency PAP Wednesday, saying, "A desire to narrow down the talks to bargaining in line with the unfortunate principle of 'everything or nothing' is a great misunderstanding."

Earlier, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Walesa would be meeting with a group similar to the one of Aug. 31, when he gathered with Kiszczak, Alternate Politburo member Stanislaw Ciosek, and Roman Catholic Bishop Jerzy Dabrowski.

That session came during Poland's most serious strike wave since the government crushed Solidarity with a 1981 military crackdown and brought Walesa together with government officials for the first time in six years.

Group claims escaped American was CIA agent

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A little-known group claimed Wednesday that an American who escaped abduction in east Lebanon this week was a CIA agent and that he was freed intentionally.

Lebanon radio and U.S. officials have said Kenneth P. Wells, 25, was an American engineer who overpowered his captors after he was kidnapped on Sunday. He reportely works in Saudi Arabia for Litton Industries and holds a black belt in karate.

The group, calling itself the National Progressive Alliance, claimed it captured Wells because he was on an espionage mission and then released him. The claims were in a note delivered to the west Beirut office of the Italian ANSA news agency and were accompanied by photos of Wells' U.S. driver's license and his Saudi Arabian work permit.

It was the first known statement from the previously unheard of group. An ANSA employee said the note was found in a white envelope left at the doorstep of the agency office after someone rang the doorbell and left.

Wells was abducted briefly with his new Shiite Moslem bride, Nadia Haydar Sharafeddine, shortly after the couple wed Sunday in east Lebanon's ancient city of Baalbek.

But reports varied as to how the couple gained freedom.

Lebanese press reports Monday said Wells used karate to disarm his captives and escape.

Syrian government sources said the Syrian troops who control east Lebanon's Bekaa valley rescued the couple after a nightlong search and took them to the Syrian capital of Damascus, where they were turned over to the U.S. Embassy.

INTRODUCING THE NEW BMW 325 SERIES AUTOMOBILES

GOOD THINGS HAPPEN IN THREES

About 20 years ago, BMW gave the world a new motoring concept. That first sports sedan offered a unique combination of automobile personalities. It had the practical seating and cargo advantages of a sedan, but it also had the performance, handling, and spirit of a sports car. BMW has remained true to this concept. Nowhere is this demonstrated better than in the 3-Series for 1989. You are cordially invited to see and test drive the new BMW — good things happen in threes.
