George Burns out

LAS VEGAS — George Burns canceled several shows at Caesars Palace while he recovers from a cut to his head caused by a slip in the bathtub. The 98-year-old comedian was to have appeared at the Las Vegas Strip resort from Thursday through Sunday, but a doctor advised him to take the week off, said Burns' manager, Irving Fein. "The cut required two stitches," Fein said. "George's doctor has advised him not to work for a couple of weeks. But he's fine. He's been coming to the office every day."

Monday's riskiest

DALLAS — If you thought Mondays couldn't get any worse, consider this: a researcher has determined that working people are more likely to have a heart attack on Monday morning than any other day of the week. Results of the study, led by Dr. Stefan Willich at the Free University in Berlin, were reported in the July issue of Circulation, an American Heart Association scientific journal.

Comet's 6-million-megaton blast blackens Jupiter's eye

GREENBELT, Md. (AP). — The comet train struck Jupiter Monday with an explosion several times more powerful than all of the world's nuclear weapons, leaving black scars the size of Earth.

A Shoemaker-Levy 9 comet fragment called G slammed into the gas bag-like planet and set off a fireball that was briefly brighter in some wavelengths than the whole planet. Some observing instruments watching from Earth 480 million miles away were momentarily blinded.

Fragment G was followed by an equally large fragment H, and at least two more of the 21 fragments of Shoemaker-Levy 9 are of similar size. By Monday afternoon, nine fragments had smashed into Jupiter since the bombardment started on Saturday. The last fragment, W, is expected to hit the planet Friday.

Book: Reagan's CIA chief tried to sink crude oil price

By Bill Mintz
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — At a time when many oil patch Republicans are criticizing President Clinton for ignoring the plight of domestic oil producers, a new book provides evidence that the Reagan administration actively encouraged lower oil prices during the price collapse in 1985 and 1986.

Back then, administration officials insisted that markets, not governments, should establish oil prices. Then-Vice President George Bush asserted, "It isn't the role of the United States to dictate to countries around the world what the price of oil should be."

But Peter Schweizer, author of Victory: The Reagan Administration's Secret Strategy that Hastened the Collapse of the So-

Rebels claim win; millions flee Rwanda

■ After 14 weeks of ethnic bloodshed, rebels say a truce is in place, that they hope the fighting's end will halt the desperate human flight.

Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Tutsi rebels declared an end to Rwanda's civil war Monday, said they planned to install a new government and told refugees they could stop their terrified flight out of the country.

Millions fled toward uncertain safety in neighboring nations, fearing the rebels would try to retaliate for the slaughter of about 200,000 to 500,000 people — most of them Tutsis — by Hutu militias. However, little evidence has emerged of widespread reprisals against the Hutus by the Tutsi minority.

"There is no need for anyone to flee Rwanda. We guarantee all Rwandans stability and security," Maj. Gen. Paul Kagame of the rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front said Monday.

After 14 weeks of ethnic bloodshed, the Tutsi-dominated rebels said they had swept away the last Hutu government resistance and

Psychiatrists: O.J. case officer unstable, violent — maybe liar

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's defense attorney said Monday he won't argue that racism made a police officer plant a bloody glove at his client's home, but that doesn't mean he won't try to discredit the detective anyway.

New Yorker magazine reported Sunday the defense might claim Detective Mark Fuhrman planted the bloody glove — a key piece of evidence in the case against Simpson — because he hated blacks.

Attorney Robert Shapiro told The Associated Press he might make a similar argument, but he wouldn't attribute the alleged planting of evidence to racism.

"Race is not and will not be an issue in this defense," Shapiro said. "The only thing we are looking at is credibility of witnesses."

Shapiro confirmed his team was examining a 1983 lawsuit in

Mercury to sneak near 100

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 100 and south winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low near 70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high near 100.

After an overnight low of 65, Monday's high reached 96, compared to the record high for that date of 111 set in 1989. The record low was 61 set in 1947.

STATE

Aside from a few scattered showers in southeast Texas, Monday was a typical hot, dry July day throughout Texas, according to the National Weather Service.

South Texas temperatures were mostly in the high 90s, although isolated showers stretched across southeast Texas from Beaumont to Palacios. The region's high was 102 at Cotulla, while the low was 90 at Palacios.

Today is forecast as another hot day in South Texas, with temperatures in the 90s and 100s. Isolated daytime showers or thunderstorms should again appear in southeast Texas.

North Texas had fair skies, high temperatures and light winds from the south and southeast. Paris had the region's low at 93, while the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport recorded the high at 99. Today should be partly cloudy in North Texas, but highs should be in the upper 90s.

Skies were mostly sunny in West Texas, where the high was 98 at Dalhart and the low was 91 at Childress and Wink. Today should be mostly sunny.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms hung over much of the Southeast, the Southwest and the Gulf Coast on Monday, while cooler weather moved into the northern Rockies and northern Plains.

Showers and thunderstorms developed from the central Plains through the Lower Ohio Valley into the middle Atlantic region.

In one hour Monday morning, thunderstorms produced 2 inches of rain in Clifton Heights, Pa. In the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT, more than 2¾ inches of rain fell in Philadelphia.

Morning thunderstorms also produced heavy rain across parts of the northern Plains. More than 5 inches of rain fell southwest of Fairmount, Minn., on Monday, while 3¾ inches of rain fell at White Rock Dam in Minnesota.

In South Dakota, a thunderstorm produced small hail and more than an inch of rain in just 30 minutes at Pickerel Lake.

Other storms dropped golf ball-size hail south of Miller, S.D., and near Graceville, Minn. Hail the diameter of quarters fell north of Mooreton, N.D, and dime-size hail fell northeast of Ortonville, Minn.

An upper level low pressure system brought showers and thunderstorms to much of the Southwest, and thunderstorms rumbled across the Gulf Coast states.

Falling temperatures and residual moisture from the night before also helped form fog Monday morning across much of the Ohio Valley and parts of the mid-Atlantic region.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CRUDE: Casey tried to cut price, book says

viet Union (Atlantic Monthly Press, $22), outlines an effort led by William Casey, former President Reagan's director of the Central Intelligence Agency, to encourage Saudi Arabia to produce more crude and drive down the price of oil.

Schweizer's book is based on extensive interviews with Reagan's Cabinet and top national security advisers.

Casey's goal, according to Schweizer, was to create economic turmoil in the Soviet Union by sharply reducing the Soviets' ability to earn hard currency from oil exports.

Without naming his source, Schweizer describes a private meeting between Reagan and Saudi King Fahd during the king's February 1985 trip to Washington:

"No quid pro quo was ever presented and no specific price was suggested," Schweizer writes. "But the message to Fahd was unambiguous — the president who had demonstrated his commitment to Saudi Arabia wanted oil prices down for the benefit of both countries and the injury of their common enemies."

Edwin Meese, who was a top Reagan adviser at the time, told Schweizer that the goal of the cheap oil strategy was to improve the U.S. economy. "The fact that it meant trouble for Moscow was icing on the cake."

The only administration voice sending a different signal to the Saudis came from Bush, who, during an April 1986 trip to Saudi Arabia, told Fahd that $10 oil could lead to pressure from domestic oil producers for quotas or tariffs on imported oil.

Schweizer writes that Reagan "gave Bush a real dressing-down" for stating opinions that countered the cheap-oil strategy.

Why is Schweizer's book important?

"What's new in this book is the confirmation from the highest levels of the Reagan administration of a policy actively engaged in lowering world oil prices," says Ed Rothschild, a consumer advocate who has studied oil price policy for years. He says he provided Schweizer with some of the documentation he has obtained from Freedom of Information Act requests.

Rothschild said he agrees with Meese's assessment that the goal was domestic economic recovery, not Soviet disintegration. "Like Meese said, that was 'icing on the cake.'"

PANS: Study faults Mexican-food fat, salt

the results are pretty depressing," Michael Jacobson, the organization's executive director, said at a Washington news conference. "Mexican food is not seen as health food, but I think the numbers will shock anyone who has any concern about health."

The biggest culprit is fat, a leading cause of heart disease and other health problems. Many of the Mexican food dishes sampled by the Center for Science exceeded the federal government's recommendation for daily fat intake.

Among the worst offenders were chiles rellenos, cheese-stuffed peppers that are battered and deep-fried. The center's analysis found that two chiles rellenos, combined with the usual side dishes of beans and rice, have about 96 grams of fat, compared with the government's daily recommended intake of 65 grams.

"You might as well eat a stick of butter and 1½ teaspoons of salt," said Bonnie Liebman, a nutritionist who worked on the study.

Liebman called chiles rellenos "the Mexican equivalent of fettucine Alfredo," which one of the organization's earlier reports denounced as a "heart attack on a plate."

The latest food report also panned nachos, cheese enchiladas, fried tortilla chips and beef chimichangas, which are deep-fried, beef-stuffed tortillas. Refried beans came under attack because they are typically fried in grease.

Taco salads are OK, but only if you skip the ground beef, the cheese, the guacamole, the sour cream and the fried tortilla shell.

"Of course," Liebman noted, "then you'd be left with a bowlful of lettuce."

The only dish that won honorable mention from the research organization was chicken fajitas. A fajita without beans, rice, sour cream and guacamole has about 24 grams of fat.

Not surprisingly, the restaurant industry — and Mexican restaurants in particular — took issue with the findings.

"Jeez, Louise! Why don't they lay off?" said Julie Sherrier, a spokeswoman for the Texas Restaurant Association. "People go out to eat to have fun. They go out to eat to indulge themselves."

Other Mexican food aficionados conceded that the cuisine can be greasy, but argued that it doesn't have to be that way if properly prepared.

"I had it for lunch, and I feel great," said Jody Lancarte, the reservations manager at Joe T. Garcia's, one of Fort Worth's best-known Mexican eateries. "It's wonderful. I've raised all my kids on it."

The research findings could deliver a good case of heartburn to the owners of Texas' 3,600 Mexican restaurants. The previous report on Chinese food caused businesss to fall off by as much as 50 percent at some restaurants, industry officials said.

"It scared a lot of people away," said Colin Chang of Arlington's Royal Panda restaurant. "Eventually, we earned our business back, but it took about two or three months."

The center's criticism of movie-theater popcorn in May also had major repercussions. In response, most of the major theater chains switched to low-fat cooking methods.

The nonprofit Center for Science in the Public Interest has been on a good-food crusade for more than a decade. After targeting fast-food chains in the 1980s, it has recently turned its attention to more upscale establishments.

The organization, which does not accept any money from the federal government or private industry, is primarily funded by subscriptions to its health newsletter.

Jacobson, who acknowledged that some consumers are tired of hearing bad things about their favorite foods, said he doesn't expect Mexican restaurants to substitute tofu for tortilla chips.

Instead, the center recommended that restaurants shun grease whenever possible, use low-fat cheese and sour cream, and offer whole wheat tortillas and brown rice.

"We're not telling people, 'Don't ever go to a Mexican restaurant,'" he said. "We're saying, 'If you do go and you care about health, you can choose more carefully.' It's a field of land mines. You've got to watch your step."

That message is no bulletin to veteran Mexican food eaters like Fort Worth oilman Jack Tunstill, 73, who dines at Joe T. Garcia's or its competitors two or three times a week.

"I can eat Mexican food that is swimming in grease," Tunstill said, "but if it's prepared the way it should be, there's no grease."

RWANDA: Millions more flow toward border

that a truce was in place. The rebel leader said he hoped the end of the fighting would halt the desperate human flight out of Rwanda.

Between Wednesday and Sunday, up to 1 million Hutu civilians and soldiers had already pushed into Goma, Zaire, from the northwestern Rwandan town of Gisenyi.

And refugee officials said late Monday that an estimated 1.9 million more Hutus were streaming toward the southwestern Rwandan border town of Cyangugu and had started another exodus into Bukavu, Zaire, 60 miles south of Goma.

About 100,000 people crossed at Bukavu on Sunday and Monday. If the rest of the 1.9 million on the move cross into Zaire, nearly 3.5 million Rwandans — about half of the estimated prewar population of 8 million — would be living in refugee camps in neighboring countries.

Before last week's mass flight, more than half a million made their way into the country's other neighbors: Tanzania, Burundi and Uganda. Hundreds of thousands more are displaced within Rwanda.

Leaders of the rump Hutu government had apparently encouraged the latest human flood through Rwanda's southwestern corner, where French forces have declared a humanitarian protection zone, said Fernando del Mundo, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva.

"The refugees are saying they are moving because their leaders told them they can no longer protect them," del Mundo said. "Despite the assurances from the French, they are responding to what their leaders are saying."

In the capital, Kigali, Kagame declared that the war with the Hutu government was over, but suggested the rebels still might confront French troops.

"We have captured all of Rwanda up to the French protection zone and a cease-fire is effectively in place," Kagame said.

CASE: Race won't be issue, Shapiro says

which Fuhrman requested a disability pension from the police force because his work had made him mentally unstable. A copy of the lawsuit was obtained Monday by The Associated Press.

The court documents show Fuhrman told psychiatrists his work transformed him, leading him to enjoy the thrill of violence, both on and off the job.

"He stated that he 'beat-up' on suspects and that he 'blacked-out' and became 'a wild man,'" wrote psychiatrist Ira M. Brent.

Fuhrman said his police work in predominantly black and Hispanic neighborhoods made him mentally unstable, to the point where he had to be "violent just to exist."

"I'm always going to have a gun with me. Always. If you only knew what it feels like when some guy's doin' something, acting cool, thinking no one sees him, and you come up and put a shotgun to his head," Fuhrman told Dr. Ronald Koegler. The psychiatrist noted that Fuhrman laughed at the idea.

Fuhrman's alleged instability could help Simpson's defense discredit an important witness for the prosecution. Equally damaging could be allegations by some of the psychiatrists who treated Fuhrman that he was making up his illness so he could retreat to a cabin in the woods and become a commercial artist.

"This man has become tired of police work just as he became bored with life as a Marine," Koegler wrote. "He does not want to quit and lose his benefits, so he is attempting to get pension and compensation rewards. . . . He is able to work as a police officer, but doesn't want to do so."

Superior Court Judge Leon Savitch was convinced by those psychiatrists' statements and denied the lawsuit. Fuhrman remained on the force.

Fuhrman denied planting the glove. The Police Department declined comment.

Simpson has pleaded innocent to the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and Ronald Goldman, 25, and is jailed without bail. He is scheduled for arraignment in Superior Court on Friday.

During Simpson's preliminary hearing, Fuhrman testified he jumped over the wall to Simpson's estate after seeing blood stains outside the grounds, and was alone when he allegedly found the glove.

Court documents show Fuhrman left the Marines in 1975 and joined the Los Angeles Police Department because, he said, he "got tired of having a bunch of Mexicans and niggers that should be in prison telling (him) they weren't going to do something."

BLAST: Biggest comet fragments yet strike

(From 1A)

Upcoming is a triple whammy. Beginning Wednesday, three fragments will slam into the planet's upper atmosphere at about the same spot over a 20-hour period.

"You'll have three — boom, boom, boom," Heidi Hammel of the Space Telescope Science Institute said Monday. "You are going to have one heck of a mess."

The first of the three fragments, Q, is expected to hit just before 3 a.m. CDT on Wednesday. R follows 10 hours later and S will be 10 hours after that. The Jovian rotation is 10 hours, which means the fragments will hit at nearly the same spot on the planet.

Comet fragment G, the largest in the comet train, hit the planet early Monday with the biggest explosion yet — estimated at the energy equivalent of 6 million megatons.

Later, a Hubble Space Telescope image showed that G's explosion created an almost perfect circle, centered with a dark spot and then shaded with a bruise-like edge.

"So there is now a black eye on Jupiter," Hammel said. She said the eye portion of the scar is 80 percent of the size of Earth, and the bruise area goes far beyond.

Eugene Shoemaker, a U.S. Geological Survey scientist and co-discoverer of the comet, that if fragment G had hit Earth, "the crater would pretty well have covered all of Rhode Island.

"It would also blanket the Earth with a fine layer of dust that would blacken the sun," he said.

Nonetheless, Shoemaker said the impact from a G-sized fragment would not be as damaging as the asteroid that hit the Earth 65 million years ago and killed much of the planet's life.

"It's a big event, but it's still not a dinosaur killer," he said.

Shoemaker estimated that fragment G was about two miles across and that it struck with an explosive power of 6 million megatons, a force many times larger than could be created if all of Earth's atomic weapons were shot off at once.

Pulled by Jupiter's immense gravity, the comet fragments strike the top of the planet's atmosphere traveling at about 130,000 miles an hour. The pieces, described by Shoemaker as "icy mud balls," send powerful shock waves through Jupiter's atmosphere, creating instant heat that may reach 50,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

A bubble of superheated gas then rebounds upward, creating the fireball detected by telescopes on Earth.

"The energy released is beyond any of our experiences on Earth," said Lucy McFadden, a University of Maryland astronomer.

At the peak of the nuclear weapons race, the U.S. had about 20,000 megatons of explosive power, and the Soviet Union had about three times that, according to Stan Norris, a weapons expert at the Natural Resources Defense Council in Washington.

The largest known nuclear explosion on Earth, set off by the Soviet Union in 1961, had a power of 60 megatons. The largest U.S. explosion, 15 megatons, demolished the Bikini Atoll in the Pacific Ocean in 1954. The American bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945 was 15 kilotons.

done to her specifications when she saw the maggots.

The restaurant voluntarily closed its doors that evening as health department officials conducted an investigation and reopened the next day.

The officials stated on May 31 that they could find no source of contamination, but did confirm that living maggots were found inside and outside the hamburger.

Cox stated in his letter that samples of the burger in question, along with fresh and cooked meat from the restaurant and its supplier, were tested at Professional Service Industries Laboratories in Arlington and the results revealed no evidence of contamination.

"I would like to know how insects — which according to health department authorities had to be in excess of 24 hours old — could be found on a single hamburger patty which was fully cooked and in the possession of the purchaser for no more than two hours," the letter said. "We honestly believe that if this was not a prank which escalated out of control, then it was a deliberate action to discredit our reputation and destroy out business."

"It's simply not possible to have live insect larvae on a freshly cooked hamburger patty," the letter said.

Cox also criticized media coverage of the initial incident, which he said resulted in the loss of more than 50 jobs.

U.S. has system to protect Americans on dangerous foreign soil

■ U.S. Embassy may call its 'wardens' and have them direct Americans to preset locations to be removed from country.

By Rita Beamish
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The word could come any moment for 3,500 Americans still living in Haiti. If they are threatened or an invasion begins, the State Department would activate its "warden system" to get them out.

U.S. warships stand guard off the coast of Haiti, with instructions to evacuate Americans if needed. If the order is given — and there's no indication yet on when or whether that might happen — the U.S. Embassy would call its 60 "wardens" and have them direct Americans to preset locations to be removed from the country.

The system is standard for U.S. embassies worldwide, although trouble spots such as Haiti and Rwanda require heightened precautions. Gary Scheaffer, spokesman for the State Department's Bureau of Consular Affairs, said the system was critical to getting Americans out of Rwanda after ethnic violence flared into a bloodbath in April.

In Rwanda, the embassy contacted all 258 Americans, and most traveled by convoy to neighboring Burundi.

"When you have a situation like Haiti, where there is the potential for real problems that could affect Americans, the warden system becomes more important, more refined," said Scheaffer.

Embassies designate contact individuals, each responsible for contacting a specific group of Americans. The contact could be through a "telephone tree" system or through radio contact, which may be more appropriate in rural Haiti, officials said.

Because of growing tension, Ambassador William Swing has held periodic meetings with the American wardens in Haiti, most recently on Friday.

According to embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager, Swing discussed the recent expulsion of international human rights monitors by Haiti's ruling military, and the upcoming suspension of flights by Air France, the last airline serving the impoverished nation.

Swing also urged anew that all Americans not working on essential humanitarian jobs leave.

A similar appeal was issued on June 28 following the suspension of almost all commercial flights, and officials expect to issue another formal warning when Air France quits Haiti at the end of July.

At that point, there will be no way to leave the country, since Haitian authorities have sealed the border with Dominican Republic, Schrager said.

If evacuation becomes necessary, Americans will be told to gather at the U.S. Embassy or the ambassador's house in Port-au-Prince, and at churches, schools, homes, hotels or other locations throughout the country.

After that, the travel arrangements will depend on the situation.

The U.S. government might send a plane to the airport, but landing clearance would not necessarily be assured, Schrager said. If that were a problem, the embassy could arrange transport to Coast Guard vessels for a sea evacuation, or a land convoy to the Dominican Republic, assuming the Haitian authorities did not block the border.

When the last U.S. commercial flights ended in June, about 3,000 Americans did leave in addition to non-essential embassy personnel.

Memo links Clinton, Whitewater to regulator

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton asked one of the nation's top banking regulators last New Year's weekend to "provide advice and counsel" on Whitewater issues, according to a confidential memo written by the regulator.

Eugene A. Ludwig, comptroller of the currency, said he discussed the president's request with both White House and Treasury Department officials — and then decided not to have further conversations with Clinton on the subject.

"I told them that I was not certain whether to discuss the matter with the president or the first lady," Ludwig said in the memo, which was obtained by The Associated Press. "Accordingly, we did not discuss the matter."

The memo was in response to a subpoena from Whitewater special counsel Robert B. Fiske Jr. asking about any Treasury Department documents or communications involving Whitewater, an Arkansas land deal in which Clinton was a partner.

Both the House and Senate banking committees are scheduled to open hearings next week on contacts between federal banking regulators and administration officials about Whitewater.

Ludwig's memo, dated last March 11, makes clear that Clinton himself had one of those contacts, and that Ludwig was troubled by the president's request.

White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler said Monday that Clinton was not asking Ludwig to provide his own advice but to "recommend some people to me who understand real estate transactions and could write about them for the public in a way the public could understand."

Asked how Ludwig could conclude that the president was asking him directly for advice, Cutler said in an interview, "They may not have understood one another."

Cutler said Ludwig's calls to administration officials alerted Deputy White House Counsel Joel Klein, who asked the president about the conversation.

"Joel said that since Ludwig was comptroller, he thought it was inadvisable to get that sort of information from Ludwig and he (Clinton) should get it from someone else. The president said he will get it from someone else," Cutler said.

Fiske questioned Clinton about the conversation, Cutler said. He noted that Fiske found no evidence of criminality in administration contacts with regulators.

While Ludwig said he did not get back to Clinton — who had asked about advice during the annual Renaissance Weekend conference last Dec. 30-Jan. 2 at Hilton Head Island, S.C. — the official contacted Hillary Rodham Clinton's chief of staff, Margaret Williams, on Jan. 19.

Ludwig wrote he "offered my own unsolicited view that the White House should promptly provide full public disclosure of all materials associated with Whitewater, if that had not already been done."

He also suggested to Williams that the White House should "devote one fulltime lawyer and/or other fulltime staff to the matter because of the great public visibility it was getting. Otherwise, we did not exchange any information," the memo said.

Ludwig wrote he could recollect no other discussions in which he mentioned Whitewater other than in passing."

He said that Clinton approached him during Renaissance Weekend, an annual private meeting of influential government and private people.

"The president asked me whether it would be permissible for me, as a lawyer knowledgeable about banking law, to provide advice and counsel on any of the legal-regulatory issues relative to the Whitewater matter," Ludwig wrote in the memo.

Dem governors call for guaranteed health care; GOP chiefs eye Dole

BOSTON (AP) — Democratic governors demanded Monday that Congress guarantee health coverage to all Americans, but their silence on how to pay for it undermined White House hopes for help in the reform debate.

To counter the Democrats, GOP governors inched closer to backing Senate Republican leader Bob Dole's health-care proposal, provided Dole abandons his call for caps on Medicaid and finds a new way to pay for his plan.

The developments set the stage for a showdown today between President Clinton and Dole at the closing session of the National Governors Association summer meeting.

Keeping with NGA tradition, the partisan maneuvering was polite, as governors stressed they had far more bipartisan consensus on health care than members of Congress and were eager for major reform to be passed this year.

And neither side planned to propose any major changes to the NGA health-care policy adopted in February. That document endorses an array of insurance reforms and subsidies for low-income Americans but stops short of calling for universal coverage or offering any financing proposal.

Meanwhile, an ABC News poll released Monday found the public split, 48-48, over whether the U.S. health system needs a major overhaul or just a good tuneup. By a 52-43 margin, those surveyed felt holding down health costs was more important than guaranteeing insurance for all.

But while they opposed Clinton's health plan, 50-43, those surveyed also rated health care above crime as the most important issue for the president and Congress to address. The telephone survey of 1,004 adults conducted July 14-17 had a 3.5 point margin of error.

The Democratic governors' resolution was designed to give Clinton, who was giving a health care speech in Florida on Monday, a political boost, and White House aides insisted it did — by putting a majority of the nation's governors on record supporting "guaranteed health benefits that cannot be taken away."

The World in brief

■ Christopher lauds Israeli, Syrian options

JERUSALEM — In an uncharacteristic burst of optimism, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Monday that there were new opportunities for peace between Israel and Syria and declared the decades-long conflict between Israelis and Arabs nearly over.

Christopher

Christopher acknowledged that he could not report any concrete progress with Syria over the Golan Heights. And senior officials traveling with Christopher noted that Syria's President Hafez Assad, who has ruled his country since 1970, is not a leader who is susceptible to outside pressure.

In addition, the incident in Gaza on Sunday in which Israeli forces and the new Palestinian police fired on each other for the first time illustrated just how fragile peace arrangements can be.

But the upcoming summit between Jordan's King Hussein and Israel's Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin at the White House on Monday, recent progress between Arab states and Israel on such issues as water and civil aviation and assurances by Assad to President Clinton last Friday that he is serious about peace apparently have convinced Christopher that a comprehensive peace is at hand.

■ Israel seals off Gaza until 'further notice'

JERUSALEM — Israel sealed off the Gaza Strip Monday, restricting the movement of one million inhabitants there and the transport of goods to or from the area where Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat now lives.

Israeli officials would not say how long the border would remain closed, only that it would be until "further notice."

Freh Abu Medeen, who is responsible for justice affairs for the Palestinian Authority, which governs Gaza and Jericho under the peace agreement between the PLO and Israel, said he hoped the restrictions will be lifted by Wednesday.

The sealing of Gaza followed a bloody day of violence Sunday, when tensions over delays in processing Palestinians trying to enter Israel for jobs led to rioting. In the ensuing clash between Palestinian and Israeli forces at the border and the rioting, two Palestinians died and nearly 100 people were injured.The Erez Checkpoint, where the Palestinians normally gather to enter Israel to work, was heavily damaged.

■ Mitterrand has urinary tract surgery

PARIS — France's President FranCois Mitterrand, who was diagnosed to be suffering from prostate cancer two years ago, underwent surgery to remove a blockage in his urinary tract Monday. His personal physician, Dr. Claude Gubler, said the operation went "very well."

Mitterrand, who is 77 years old and is due to retire next May after 14 years in office, entered the Cochin Hospital here Sunday night and is expected to be kept under observation until the weekend. His hospitalization was only announced after the operation was completed around noon Monday.

After the President's last regular medical check-up, Dr. Gleber said June 30 there was no evidence of extension of the cancer, but he noted that Mitterrand was suffering some discomfort caused by scar tissue near the junction between the uretha and the bladder.

■ Parents abandon their children in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The skeletal baby boy lay across the lap of a woman who had found him in front of her house, left for the pigs to eat.

"The mother dropped the child in front of her home," Dr. Marie Francisque, director of Grace Children's Hospital, said Monday after she saw the woman waiting for a chest X-ray for the frail child.

"So this woman picked up the child and brought him here for help."

The infant, just under 5 pounds, struggled to survive, ribs rising and falling with each labored breath.

He is part of a rising trend of children abandoned at the hospital in the last couple months by their poverty-stricken families, Francisque said. She blamed the increase on Haiti's worsening economic situation.

Already living in the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, many Haitians were cast out of work when an international trade embargo closed assembly plants in late May.

■ 62-year-old Italian gives birth to boy

ROME — A 62-year-old Italian gave birth to a boy on Monday and named him after her dead teen-age son, her doctor announced. The Caesarean section delivery apparently made her the world's oldest woman to give birth.

Mother and child were doing well, said Dr. Severino Antinori, who delivered the baby. His Rome clinic arranged the artificial insemination of Rosanna Della Corte with her husband's sperm and a donor's egg.

Thanks to hormone treatments, Mrs. Della Corte "has the physique of a 30-to-45-old," Antinori said. "Her son won't be growing up with an old woman, but with a woman who is (like) 35."

A British woman impregnated at Antinori's clinic gave birth at age 59 to twins last Christmas. At the time she was considered the oldest woman on record to have a child.

■ Prosecutor opens AIDS scandal probe

PARIS — A French prosecutor opened an inquiry Monday into allegations a former prime minister and two other top officials were responsible for giving transfusion patients AIDS-tainted blood.

Monday's development was the biggest gain yet in the campaign by victims and their families to hold top government officials accountable for a scandal that, so far, has been blamed only on doctors.

Officials had ruled the statute of limitations prevented charging the former ministers with negligence for the infection of 1,200 hemophiliacs with the virus that causes AIDS in 1985. More than 300 have died.

But Prosecutor General Pierre Truche said he opened a judicial investigation into "the administration of substances harmful to health," a charge that could bring a 10-year prison sentence.

Israel, Jordan meet, voice optimism on peace

N.Y. Times News Service

EIN AVRONA, Israel — In an air-conditioned tent straddling their countries' desert border, peace negotiators for Israel and Jordan met publicly on Monday for the first time in their own region and spoke with new optimism about ending their technical state of war of 46 years.

Both sides said their talks had gone well, but added that they would need time to produce a peace treaty, which has eluded the two countries even though they have long cooperated to keep their frontier quiet. Difficult issues remain over a range of issues, including border lines, water rights, and the fate of hundreds of thousands of Palestinian refugees.

But no one here, in a desert valley nine miles north of the Gulf of Aqaba, had expected instant results. Symbolism was the substance on Monday, the central point being that the old enemies had begun talking to each other on their own turf after three years of inconclusive meetings in conference rooms in Washington.

For Israel, the change of venue was a triumph, signaling another step toward full acceptance by its Arab neighbors. And the meeting on Monday was only the first of several events scheduled over the next week to make a point that Israel and Jordan are on a fast track, although how fast remains to be seen.

On Wednesday, in another first, the Israeli foreign minister will openly cross the border to meet his American and Jordanian counterparts at a hotel on Jordan's side of the Dead Sea. Then next Monday, King Hussein of Jordan is scheduled to meet publicly at the White House with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel, yet another precedent.

AP Laserphoto

Israeli delegation head Elyakim Rubinstein, left, and Faiz Tarawneh, head of Jordan's delegation, reach across the negotiations table.

The king and the prime minister are known to have talked secretly in the past, part of a series of clandestine encounters that the Jordanian monarch has had with Israeli leaders for three decades.

By going public now, lured in that direction by prospects of American military aid and debt write-offs, Hussein hints at a new self-assurance. His aim, he has said in recent days, is to protect his national interests, but he also seems intent on asserting a measure of independence from powerful Syria and on outflanking the Palestinians in claims to authority over Muslim holy places in Jerusalem.

The perennial big question is whether he will be so bold as to make Jordan the second Arab country, after Egypt, to sign a peace treaty with Israel, or wait until Syria, Lebanon, and the Palestinians are also ready. For now, the official Jordanian line is that no separate treaties will be signed.

But that does not rule out important progress, and both Jordanians and Israelis tried to impart a sense of historic change to Monday's negotiating session in the tent, even if it qualified on many levels as nothing more than a photogenic extension of Washington talks carried out with slender results since 1991.

Against a backdrop of jagged mountains, Ein Avrona is a nature preserve on the Israeli side of the cease-fire line established after a war that followed Israel's founding in 1948. It is also a testament to the formal state of war that still exists.

The long white-and-yellow tent that billowed under blasts of air-conditioning was set right on the cease-fire line, Jordanian delegates sitting on their side and the Israelis on theirs. Surrounding the tent was a double row of barbed-wire fencing, and officials cautioned journalists against straying too far because of nearby mine fields. Soldiers on both sides kept the public away from the site, which was more than a mile off the main Israeli highway.

Still, despite such unwelcoming touches, the two delegations acknowledged that they had brought their talks home.

"We hope that our location, which gives testimony to the imperatives of geographic proximity and interdependence, will inspire us to arrive at tangible results," said Fayez Tarawneh, Jordan's chief delegate and its ambassador to the United States.

Elyakim Rubinstein, head of the Israeli team and a former Cabinet secretary, said: "This meeting takes place in a tent. The tent is tentative, but peace should, and will be, permanent."

For all the sense of novelty, the idea that the two sides are talking comes as no shock, certainly not in Israel.

The rightist opposition, which denounces Rabin's peace initiatives with the Arabs on virtually every other front, has welcomed recent moves with Jordan, although it also accuses the government of being too willing to make concessions.

Explosion destroys building housing Jewish groups

■ Buenos Aires blast kills at least 22, wounds 100.

Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — A seven-story building housing two Jewish groups was destroyed by an explosion Monday, killing at least 22 people and injuring 100 in what Argentina's president called an attack by "beasts and savages."

Rescue workers scrambled over mangled steel and masonry, believing that dozens more could be trapped in the rubble. An estimated 100 people worked in the building, also used by researchers studying government files on Nazi war criminals who entered Argentina after World War II.

Jewish groups reported that more than 40 people survived the 9:55 a.m. blast. At least four people, including a young boy whose cries were heard by rescuers, were pulled out alive Monday afternoon.

The cause of the explosion was not known, but authorities ruled out an accident. Buildings on the rest of the block were heavily damaged and cars parked near the building were destroyed.

Between 100 and 120 people were injured, said presidential spokesman Raul Burzaco.

Shards of metal and glass lay everywhere on the street. Alongside one burned-out car were at least two bodies, covered hastily with bedsheets and foam gym mats. One rescue worker warned people nearby, "Watch where you walk. Those are bodies." A few yards away lay a woman's black-leather shoe.

Nicolas Wohda, 56, who works in an office next door to the destroyed building, told The Associated Press that he "felt a huge bomb, and then I don't know what."

Wohda, his shirt soaked with blood, received several stitches for cuts on his face and scalp. He said a police car was parked in front of the building at the time of the blast.

Bosnian Serbs cut off debate on peace plan

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnia's Muslim-dominated parliament endorsed an international peace plan Monday, but it faced sharp opposition in the Bosnian Serb assembly, whose members broke off debate without voting.

A rejection could make the Bosnian war flare with new fury and force NATO and the United States to become more deeply involved in the region.

Bosnian Serb deputies debated for 10 hours Monday before ending their session. They said they would reconvene at 10 a.m. today (3 a.m. CDT). Deputies refused comment on the debate.

The Muslim-led Bosnian government and its Croat allies supported the plan, and only 17 of 160 deputies in the Sarajevo parliament voted against it.

The United States, Britain, France, Germany and Russia wanted a clear decision on the plan from both sides by today, when their representatives meet in Geneva.

The plan requires Bosnian Serbs to surrender about a third of the territory they have captured since the war broke out more than two years ago.

If they refuse, the United States and its allies have threatened to lift an arms embargo against the Muslims and tighten sanctions on neighboring Serbia for fomenting the war.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic urged the Bosnian Serb assembly in Pale on Monday to reject the plan despite appeals to accept it from Slobodan Milosevic, the president of neighboring Serbia.

Hand grenade kills 6 watching World Cup

DJIBOUTI (AP) — Assailants in mini-bus a hurled a hand grenade at a crowd of people watching the World Cup final, killing six and wounding at least 15, authorities said Monday.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, carried out in a poor neighborhood of the capital.

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Special ad packages ranging from 8" to 65" are available, as well as rates for ads running without a story, photo, etc.

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call

On defensive, worried incumbent senators launch early advertising

By John King
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The pointed ad shows Sen. Jim Sasser's face on Mount Rushmore, alongside busts of President Clinton, Dan Rostenkowski and Edward Kennedy. Its message: "Tax-and-spend career politicians in Washington are crippling our country."

Sasser won't know until the Tennessee primary Aug. 4 whether the man who is paying for the ad, Republican Bill Frist, will be his fall opponent. But he's not waiting to find out.

Sasser is among a handful of worried Senate Democrats getting an early start in the television ad war, a costly decision that underscores the trepidation many Democratic incumbents feel about this November.

"Any incumbent who isn't a little paranoid is crazy," said David Axelrod, a Democratic media consultant. "And that is particularly true for Democratic incumbents."

Others reaching into their campaign accounts early to fend off attacks include Democratic Sens. Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico, Kennedy of Massachusetts and Dianne Feinstein of California, whose already bruising race could prove the costliest Senate campaign in history.

These Democrats are high on the Republican target list as the GOP tries to pick up seven seats and capture control of the Senate. And all four have been facing steady criticism from their certain or likely fall opponents, leaving them little choice but to respond.

"The last time you saw incumbents up with this kind of ads so early was 1986, when it was the Republican incumbents who were worried," said Gary Koops, spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee. "And we lost most of those."

To rebut suggestions he's a big spender, Sasser's first re-election ad asserts that investigations he has led as Senate Budget Committee chairman have saved taxpayers millions. From there, the ad tries to boost Sasser's conservative credentials, promoting his support of voluntary school prayer, welfare reform and deportation of illegal aliens in U.S. jails.

"Leadership to protect our values" is the tag line of a Sasser ad clearly designed to appeal to religious conservatives in Tennessee at a time when many national Democratic officials have been harshly critical of the so-called religious right.

Like Sasser, Kennedy responded to relentless Republican criticism and polling indicating a tough race by launching his media campaign months before he has in past races, in which his trademark was to all but ignore his opponent.

At a time many incumbents are wary of bragging about clout because of anti-Congress sentiment among voters, Kennedy makes his influence the centerpiece of his first re-election ad, which also features a brief appearance by his wife, Victoria.

"There isn't a piece of legislation for jobs or economic justice that does not bear his imprint," the narrator says. Kennedy's monthlong buy is expected to cost his campaign $600,000.

While Kennedy routinely boasts of his close relationship with President Clinton, many other incumbents, including Bingaman, are trying to demonstrate their independence.

Bingaman's early ads promote his views on crime.

Food stamp errors, fraud cost a record $1.8 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Americans pocketed more than $1.8 billion in food stamp benefits they were not entitled to receive last year — a record loss that the Agriculture Department blames on mistakes and fraud.

In a recent letter to key members of Congress, the Agriculture Department said that 8.29 percent of all food stamp benefits went to people who were ineligible or collected more than they were entitled to receive.

At the same time, thousands of low-income people were denied benefits totaling $559 million because of mistakes made in running one of the federal government's largest and most expensive welfare programs.

Food stamp benefits, which totaled $22 billion in 1993, help 28 million people a year to buy groceries.

USDA's Food and Nutrition Service said fraud and mistakes by welfare recipients and state and local welfare caseworkers quickly add up to large amounts of money.

According to the department, food stamp recipients may inadvertently or deliberately provide incorrect information about their incomes or assets, while complex and inconsistent rules governing food stamps and other welfare programs may confuse some workers and lead to mistakes.

To estimate food stamp overpayment and underpayment rates, states review a sample of food stamp households to determine how accurately benefits are issued. USDA then checks a sample of those reviews and calculates a nationwide error rate.

The department said difficult economic conditions and rising caseloads in many areas have created problems for states and may account for the increase in errors from 1992, when mistakes cost the food stamp program $1.7 billion in overpayments and $500 million in underpayments.

In some states, the number of welfare caseworkers has fallen while the number of people seeking assistance has mushroomed, USDA's letter notes.

"You've got a situation where waste and abuse is up, according to their numbers, and the number of fraud investigators is down — and that is really an ominous mix," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. and the chairman of a House subcommittee on regulation.

Since the beginning of the Clinton administration, federal spending on state and local welfare fraud investigations has fallen and the number of Food and Nutrition Service investigators has also dropped, from 53 in 1992 to 47 today, according to information obtained by Wyden's office.

Threats to writer deserve shame

A 31-year-old writer named Taslima Nasrin has been given until Aug. 4 by a court in Bangladesh to come out of hiding and face arrest on charges of insulting Islam in a newspaper interview.

If she does show up, she risks being killed. A Muslim fundamentalist political leader has offered $2,500 for her death; snake charmers threaten to release 10,000 venomous cobras unless she is hanged.

Ms. Nasrin has written a best-selling novel, "Lajja" ("Shame"), that describes the fanatic bigotry directed at a Hindu family in Dhaka by fundamentalists among the majority Muslims after Hindu zealots in India tore to pieces an ancient mosque in Ayodhya in 1992.

A rattled government has banned her book, and her feminist views are assailed by Islamic radicals as impious.

The price on Ms. Nasrin's head was obviously inspired by the bounty offered by Iranian mullahs for the death of Salman Rushdie, whose novel "The Satanic Verses" was also assailed as blasphemous.

It cannot be said too often: The true blasphemy is to kill, or threaten to kill, anybody for writing a book. Religions are not threatened but protected by mutual tolerance, a lesson the West has learned at bitter cost from inquisitions and witch-burnings.

As often as not, this ultimate form of censorship springs from a political struggle. Ayatollah Khomeini exploited "The Satanic Verses" to reassert his flagging leadership of Iran's Islamic revolution. And Karim Alrawi, a human rights advocate in Cairo, says it is not only militant Islamicists who assail writers and artists in Egypt: "Members of Parliament are also having a go. They know a good headline grabber when they see it...."

So the fever spreads, turning countries like Bangladesh, whose Muslim leaders once talked of secularism and tolerance, into republics of silence.

Norway has laudably offered to mediate a safe-conduct exit for Taslima Nasrin. Meanwhile, to her persecutors, including a government that has surrendered to extremists, one word suffices: Shame.

Small businesses deserve better than Clinton plan

Many small businesses are up in arms over President Clinton's proposed health-care plan, and they have a good reason to be so — survival.

Karen Kerrigan, president of Small Business Survival Committee, has issued a battle cry to the nation over the problems a national health program will do to small businesses.

She said, "President Clinton wants to change the way America does business. He envisions a compatible alliance between government and business, but the former calling all the shots. Business should cheerfully underwrite and support the big government programs of Mr. Clinton's agenda. Under the Clinton management program, tame and regulated companies are desirable. A dynamic environment including millions of independent small businesses threatens the program."

She said the 1993 tax hike, assorted heavy-handed government regulations that have become law, and now a costly employer mandate to pay for health care reform is only phase-one of the Clinton administration's "business plan" for the nation's job-producers and risk-takers.

Kerrigan said, "Mr. Clinton says he 'feels our pain' — his real strength, however, is inflicting it." . . .

All sports people should remember 'it's just a game'

A man accidentally kicks a soccer ball into his own team's net, inadvertently scoring a goal for the opposing team. Just days later, he is shot to death by a fan in retaliation for his error.

A team enters the final game of the professional hockey association's championship round, but loses the game and, subsequently, the title. Less than four hours later, violence erupts throughout the team's home city.

It seems violence continues to go hand-in-hand with sporting events, and the tragic death of Columbian soccer player Andres Escobar, as well as the brutality of events in Vancouver after the Stanley Cup Finals, should send a wake-up call to all those who place sports on a pedestal.

From youth sports all the way up to the big leagues, players, coaches and fans need to constantly keep sports in perspective. Sports, for its dramatics, is simply entertainment, for those who watch as well as for those who play.

It's just a game.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, July 19, the 200th day of 1994. There are 165 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on July 19, 1969, Apollo 11 and its astronauts, Neil Armstrong, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin and Michael Collins, went into orbit around the moon.

On this date:

In 1848, a pioneer women's rights convention called by Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia C. Mott convened in Seneca Falls, N.Y.

In 1870, the Franco-Prussian war began.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Secular saviors persecute religious folks

Members of the "religious right" can't say the summer of '94 has been 100 percent awful; no one has yet fingered a Christian activist as the Simpson-Goldman slasher.

Murchison

That may be just around the corner. The possibilities for halfway intelligent commentary on religious conservatives seem to have collapsed. Into La-La Land we stroll, there to encounter, among others, Anthony Lewis, warning New York Times readers that "the leaders of the Christian right . . . want to substitute their vision of a religious polity" for our "secular" system. "It will be an intolerant America," Lewis admonishes, "if they have their way: something like a Christian version of the Ayatollah Khomeini's Iran."

Meanwhile, a new Interfaith Alliance, organized to combat this outbreak of bigotry, sees "religious extremism" as an attack on valued traditions like the school breakfast program. A letter writer to the Dallas Morning News reminds readers that early American leaders, whom these awful Christians venerate, "burned 'witches'" and "hanged Quakers." (Historical footnote: Salem hanged 19 "witches" and pressed Giles Corey with stones; nobody "hanged Quakers" — but, then, considering the state of modern education, it's nice to know someone has heard of the Quakers.)

What do you say to these people? No, no, no, won't suffice. For one thing, there certainly are some kooks on the "religious right," even as there are kooks on the secular left. Religion is amply qualified to understand this. The doctrine of Original Sin explains why human beings misbehave and misunderstand at the best of times.

The religious right scares the daylights out of the secular left. A newsman of my acquaintance — not a religious right type — interviewed some self-styled "moderates" at the Texas Republican convention. He found them "as paranoid as the John Birchers used to be."

Paranoid regarding what? Regarding the likelihood, as they saw it, that religious rightists would ban abortion, restore school prayer and make life, well, more religious than it is. Heavens to Betsy! Take this country lurching back to the '50s? To the dispensation we'd lived with more or less since the country got started? Oh, what a Terrible Menace!

Where do the folk biting their nails over the religious right suppose it emerged from anyway? Did the preachers, for lack of anything better to do, just decide one Sunday to take over America?

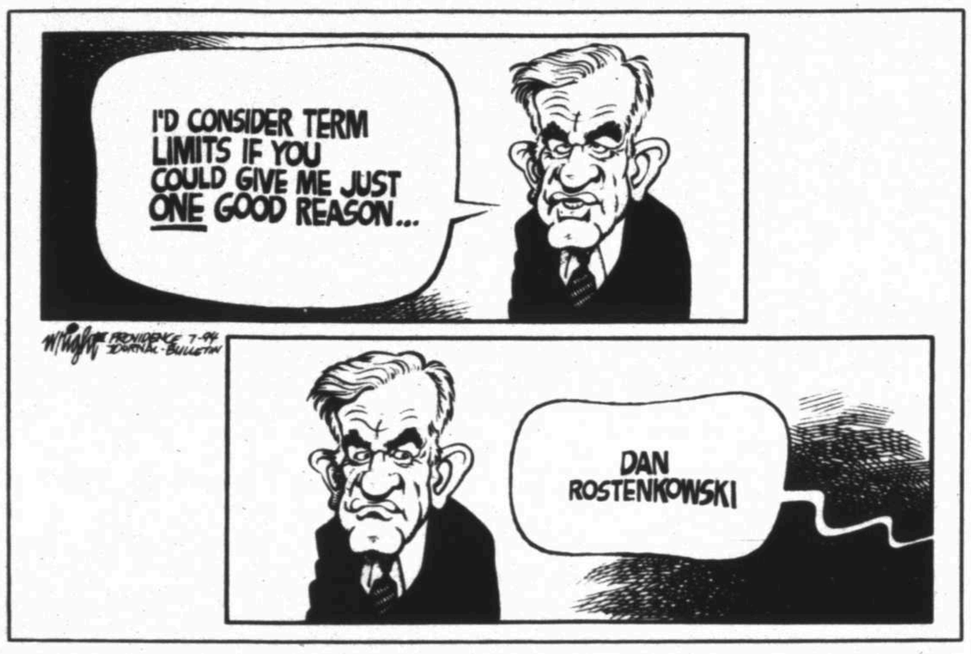

Here's what happened. The "religious right" — defined as that loose coalition of ordinary, tax-paying, law-abiding Americans concerned with the manifest social problems this country faces — said to the people they now offend so flagrantly: Whoooooa!

Hardly any one doubts that our social dislocations are greater and more grievous than was the case 30 years ago. Murder, divorce, child abuse, AIDS, illegitimacy, illiteracy — all have increased sharply since the early '60s. They are the consequence, each and every one, not of moral tightening but of moral loosening. Live it up! we've been enjoined. If one considers the consequences of this advice, can one truthfully say to the exponents of re-tightening, "You're all a bunch of nuts!"?

The oddest thing in the world is the idea of hermetically sealing off religion from contact with the secular world. It never works.

Those who affect terror at the approaching tread of the religious right need to ask themselves what they are really afraid of. Active persecution or just the restoration of a sense, now lost, of right and wrong: on which sense civilization depends utterly and forever?

CHARLEY REESE

What can one person do about America?

What can one person do? A lady, seemingly in despair at the apparently insoluble political and social problems, asked me that question in a letter.

If the question means what can one person do that will quickly effect a large outcome, the answer is nothing. Fate puts few individuals into positions where they can effect large outcomes. Most of us are just part of the crowd. We are short-lived folks caught up in long-lived large events. Most of the problems we confront began before we were born and will be around after we are gone.

Reese

In fact, even to use the word "problem" is a mistake. A problem implies a definite solution that, once arrived at, eliminates the problem forever. What we often refer to as problems are in fact conditions or situations that are continual and evolving, not to mention intertwined with other conditions and situations.

Rather than think about environment problems, we should recognize that what we are really thinking about is the continuous situation in which human beings attempt to survive without, in the process, destroying the resources that make survival possible. It is a situation in which humans have always lived. Because of short-term successes in survival, human population has greatly increased, and this increase makes the present situation more precarious than it was in the past.

Political and social "problems" are likewise really situations and conditions that are permanent but evolving and changing on a fairly slow scale of time. What we are arguing about in politics is no different than what the ancient Greeks and Romans argued about or the Chinese or other peoples — how to live in a society, how to construct a government, what should government do and not do, where is that line between individual and group rights and interests.

The question of health is about living well, not about living forever. No matter what we do or don't do, eat or don't eat, learn or don't learn, no matter what new technology is developed, we will all die. What I'm saying is there are no final solutions to anything. Belief in final solutions — the mark of a fanatic — can create enormous harm and evil.

So does all this mean we should just give up and do nothing (fatalism) or eat, drink and make merry (hedonism)? No. It just means that first of all we should relax and put our lives in perspective. There is always plenty to do and plenty that ought to be done, and by each of us doing our share, the collective effort will make a contribution to long-term change.

All of us can, for example, follow the advice of writer Wendell Berry and put our beliefs into practice in our own lives, thus validating those beliefs and providing an example for others. To find and eliminate any spaces between our thoughts, words and deeds is task enough for any of us.

If political change is what intrigues you, then recognize first of all that politics is a group activity. A solitary person can accomplish nothing in that area. It is all about seeking out like-minded individuals, forming agreements, alliances and organizing efforts. Because the political situation is continuous, participation must be continual, and if you are to last for the long haul, you can't be easily discouraged.

The Iroquois, I've read, had a habit of thinking in terms of seven generations. In other words, when some decision had to be made, they would think of it in terms of what effects their decision might have on succeeding generations.

That's wise. First of all, because what we do does have effects on succeeding generations, and secondly, because if we think in those terms rather in short terms, we are likely to make better decisions. It also makes it easier to motivate ourselves.

Calm permits rational thought on O.J. case

Now that there is a lull in the O.J. Simpson affair, people have a chance to calmly consider what they have seen, heard and read. They can put aside bias and try to calmly and rationally look at the facts of the case without rushing to judgment.

Royko

For example, there is this suggestion that came to me from Nina Rubie of New Port Richie, Fla., who wrote:

"My husband and I watch murder mysteries on television whenever we can. In one, maybe 'Matlock' or 'Perry Mason' — I can't remember which — they had a tough crime to solve.

"They knew that there was a much loved family dog. Would the dog growl at the murderer?

"They brought the dog to court and brought him to the suspect. The dog snarled and would have attacked the suspect were he not restrained.

"Case closed, murderer caught! Perhaps the Simpson dog knows all! I wish you would suggest it."

An interesting idea, but with due respect to 'Matlock' or 'Perry Mason,' I'm not sure if there is legal precedent for using a dog's growl to determine the guilt or innocence of an accused killer. Since the trial is in California, though, anything is possible.

But what if they brought the Simpson dog into the courtroom and he growled at the judge's bailiff instead of at Simpson? Would this mean that the cringing bailiff should be hauled off to prison?

Based on my own experience, you can never be sure what a dog will do.

I once picked up a basset hound named Pierre at a shelter for abandoned animals.

During the drive home, he seemed overjoyed at having been freed from his cage. And all that evening, he wagged his tail and happily burped and snored, as bassets are inclined to do.

But the next evening, when I returned from work and came through the front door, expecting cheerful yips of canine adoration, he underwent a shocking change in personality. He flew into a rage and scuttled across the floor as if to take a chunk out of my leg.

Fortunately, basset hounds have large bodies, but tiny legs about the size of thread spools, which prevent them from running very fast.

That is one of the reasons I like bassets. They are the perfect lazy man's dog. You can flop on your couch and bounce a ball across the living room and the basset has to take a thousand tiny frantic steps to fetch it. After two or three runs, he has had his day's allotment of exercise and will collapse from fatigue.

So I was able to dash from room to room and outrun Pierre until the family subdued him. But he spent the rest of the evening growling and giving me menacing looks.

This went on for several weeks. If I tried to quietly sneak into the house, he'd come charging with teeth bared. If I walked in while clucking and whistling in a friendly way, he'd get just as outraged. After a while, I'd open the door a crack, yell, "Pierre, I'm home," and the chase would be on.

Finally I asked the veterinarian if he knew why the dog was friendly to everyone else, but hated me. It was puzzling, since dogs and little children have always liked me, probably because they can't read.

The veterinarian came up with a theory. "It is possible that in his previous home, he was abused by a man who looked like you and carried the same distinctive scent of single-malt Scotch whisky."

"But I can't change the way I look," I told him.

"True, but you might try changing the scent from single-malt Scotch to something else. Maybe gin. That's what I use, and I deal with animals all the time."

I gave it a try, and to our amazement, gin did the trick. From that day on, the dog was friendly and cheerful, and so was I.

But it shows why a dog's behavior is not a reliable gauge of guilt or innocence. Had I been unjustly accused of a foul crime in the days when I favored single-malt Scotch, that basset could have sent me to Death Row.

So what worked for Matlock or Perry Mason won't do in the Simpson case. For justice, we'll have to rely on the lawyers, the judge, TV commentators, talk-show hosts, and — who knows? — maybe even a jury.

Incidentally, when old age finally took Pierre the basset, I went and found another. But this time I took the precaution of taking him to the corner tavern and having the bartender run several brands past his nose to make sure we were compatible.

Ex-double agent goes back to scene of earlier intrigues

By Ralph Blumenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — "I still remember, I remember this town," Boris Yuzhin murmured, looking for landmarks as he piloted his Dodge van up the steep curves of the Diamond Heights section here. Recognizing a small shopping center, he veered off, parked the van outside a pizzeria and circled on foot through Christopher Park to a secluded pathway among cedars and pines. There, on his knees, he pried at the planks of a wooden staircase, searching for holes.

In the late 1970s and early '80s, Yuzhin and other officers of the KGB, the Soviet intelligence agency, scouted this "drop" and others like it in the Bay Area as places to hide microfilm for pickup by other Soviet spies. Then, as a double agent, he disclosed those locations, and much other information, to the FBI.

He was betrayed in turn by a mole inside the Central Intelligence Agency, in all likelihood the admitted Soviet spy Aldrich H. Ames. (Yuzhin says that as a result of Ames's debriefings by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he has learned that Ames was in fact the one who betrayed him, a finding that the FBI will not publicly confirm.)

Arrested in Moscow in late 1986 and somehow escaping the usual death sentence for treason, he suffered a harsh gulag imprisonment of five years before winning amnesty, along with the last group of Soviet political prisoners, from the Russian president, Boris Yeltsin. Now, having come full circle nearly two decades after his first mission against America, the hale and silver-haired Yuzhin, at 52, is back here cruising his old haunts and struggling to carve out a new career as a writer and archivist — the very covers the KGB once assigned him.

His is a tangled tale, among a swelling number of such accounts by longtime soldiers in the espionage skirmishes of the Cold War who have come forward with descriptions of hidden intrigue while hoping to cash in on marketable memoirs.

Yuzhin, a former KGB lieutenant colonel who now lives in the Marin County town of Novato with his wife, 20-year-old daughter and prize Afghan hound, acknowledges that he would not spurn a good offer for his own story, although he says his main interest is in setting the record straight. He says, for example, that he does not believe he betrayed his country in working to overturn a system that he came to view as brutal and corrupt. Even in prison, he says, he never had a moment's regret.

Among all the yarns spun by former spies, Yuzhin's account, which is confirmed by his former handlers and contacts at the FBI, stands out in several ways.

For one thing, he is one of the rare double agents uncovered by the Soviet Union who nonetheless survived; perhaps 10 American operatives were executed by the Soviets as a result of the Ames case alone, according to American intelligence officials.

Moreover, the FBI confirms, Yuzhin was an extremely valuable catch, turning over top-secret Soviet cable traffic, providing an almost daily window into KGB operations in Northern California and helping to tip the authorities to at least one major Soviet spy. Through him, on occasion, the FBI was even able to select the KGB's own drop sites.

"We looked at him as a superstar," said James Fox, retired head of the bureau's New York office, who "ran" Yuzhin in San Francisco in the late 1970s and recalls that task as the highlight of a 31-year career that included the arrest of the World Trade Center bombers.

Yuzhin first came to the United States in July 1975, as a KGB captain. He had a postgraduate degree in history, and he was planted among a group of visiting Soviet academicians and given the job of cultivating opinion-makers and rising stars at the research institutes around the University of California at Berkeley.

Instead, Yuzhin says, America bowled him over. Although indoctrinated to despise a decadent Western enemy, "within a week here I felt I could breathe openly."

In playing the role of visiting scholar, he was quizzed repeatedly by Berkeley students on the cases of imprisoned Soviet dissidents. He had to admit that he had never heard of them. "I was ashamed — and I had a Ph.D. in history," he said. "I wanted to argue with them, and I couldn't."

So he spent his days at the university library, reading Alexander Solzhenitsyn and other authors banned back home. He soon realized, he said the other day, that "I've been deceived all my life — not only I, the whole system has been deceiving itself."

Suspecting his KGB role but unaware of his growing receptivity to American life, the FBI had meanwhile embarked on a scheme to entice him with a young woman in supposed legal trouble and FBI agents masquerading as legal advisers.

Yuzhin says they need not have gone to all the trouble. "It was not a good performance," he said. For one thing, one agent let slip another's real name. For another, Yuzhin says, no real lawyers would have been so generous with their time. Still, "we each pretended we believed each other."

In any case, he had already made up his mind. Soon he was volunteering information about his associates in the KGB's local office and disclosing how Soviet officers were listening in on FBI transmissions.

His American handlers were confident that he was not feeding them disinformation. "He couldn't lie," said one of them, Bill Smits, since retired, "because he didn't know how much we knew."

Yuzhin says he was not motivated by money, and Smits says the FBI did not pay Yuzhin at the time. As for any financial arrangements later, the bureau declines as a matter of policy to discuss them, and Yuzhin is also silent.

After 10 months, Yuzhin returned home.

Whooping cough makes mysterious comeback in U.S.

N.Y. Times News Service

A sharp increase in whooping cough, which last year reached its highest level in 26 years, has health experts scrambling to learn why the disease — which once killed more American children than all other infectious diseases combined — is on the comeback trail.

Researchers in Cincinnati, where a major outbreak of whooping cough occurred last year, suggested recently that one explanation for the resurgence may be reduced effectiveness of the pertussis vaccine, which over the past 40 years all but eliminated whooping cough as a public health threat.

In Thursday's issue of The New England Journal of Medicine, doctors at the University of Cincinnati's College of Medicine reported finding, to their surprise, that in 1993 more than three-fourths of the victims — mostly children ages 2 to 12 — had been fully immunized.

"Since the 1993 pertussis epidemic in Cincinnati occurred primarily among children who had been appropriately immunized, it is clear that the pertussis vaccine failed to give full protection against the disease," said pediatrician Celia Christie, who directed the study.

Christie said there may be other explanations for "the dramatic resurgence of pertussis among older immunized children" but that her results underscore the need for a nationwide assessment of the vaccine, now administered to millions of infants and preschoolers. "The efficacy of the vaccine cannot be taken for granted," she warned.

Officials at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention say there is no hard evidence that the widely used DPT (diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus) shot is losing its punch against pertussis — and no reason for parents to stop having their children vaccinated.

Immunization guidelines call for children to receive five DPT vaccinations by the age of 6.

Over two generations, widespread public compliance with those guidelines had slashed the incidence of whooping cough by 95 percent and cut the number of deaths from more than 1,000 a year in the 1940s to 11 last year.

CDC officials also are concerned about the apparent reversal of the 40-year decline in whooping cough, named after the distinctive "whoop" produced by the coughing it causes.

The 6,503 cases reported nationally last year was the highest since 1967, and Peter Strebel, an epidemiologist with the CDC's National Immunization Program, said the number reported through July 1 of this year closely tracks last year's rate.

But Strebel said a more likely cause of the increase in the once-vanquished disease is the waning immunity among older children who have been vaccinated and the growing number of adults who have never been exposed to the disease and thus may serve as a reservoir for its spread.

Overweight
It's not your fault

Research sites chemical or metabolism disorders as the leading cause of weight problems. The fact is most overweight people eat less and more healthy than most people who are able to maintain their weight.

The abuse of fat and calories did not create the problem and restrictive calorie dieting offers only temporary success. Low calorie/fat dieting can further deteriorate our Metabolism and Sugar System, therefore we often gain back more weight than we lose.

The M Balance weight management system is a one-on-one diagnostic diet program designed to analyze the rate our body uses energies and all those things that may influence weight control.

No pills, formulas or pre-packaged foods. Losing weight is not the same as solving a weight problem.

Beach culture of Los Angeles gains new, dangerous edge

By Sara Rimer
N.Y. Times News Service

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. — A 17-year-old surfer named Brian Doorley, his peroxide-bleached blond hair glowing in the night, kissed his ponytailed summer love, 16-year-old Shauna Meneses, one more time.

It was 10 p.m. The last beachgoers were packing up their Frisbees and blankets. The lifeguards, Matt Norton and Eric Dieterman, were patrolling in their four-wheel drive, enforcing the new curfew. "Time to go home, folks," they called out over the public address system. And people did.

The scene is not always so laid-back. Norton and Dieterman had left their bulletproof vests at headquarters. The optional vests were introduced after the Los Angeles riots three years ago. Some lifeguards have taken to wearing them on Friday and Saturday nights, when the crowds can get rowdy after they are asked to leave. "It's another layer of protection," Norton said.

These days he and other lifeguards do a lot more than rescue people. In San Diego, they carry Mace and are trained in handling gangs. At the state beaches near here, the permanent lifeguards are state rangers who have been carrying guns since the 1970s.

The lifeguards at the municipal beach here are unarmed, and there have been no shootings at Huntington Beach, but a lifeguard was doused with gasoline and nearly set on fire by a vagrant two summers ago. There was a stabbing on the pier three weeks ago involving two young men from Los Angeles. There was a double homicide in April on Main Street, three blocks from the beach. The new generation of beachgoers includes urban gang members, the police say.

'There is this ground swell of trying, in the name of public safety, to restrict the right of people to get to the beach.'

— Peter Douglas, executive director of Coastal Commission

Up the coast, in Venice, a Times Square-by-the-sea to people here, the police shut down the beach at 1 p.m. one day last month because of gang violence. Seventeen people have been shot to death on the streets of that Los Angeles community since last fall.

The beach in Southern California has long been the last frontier of youth, freedom and hedonism, the land of endless summer, celebrated by the Beach Boys and movies like "Gidget" and "Beach Blanket Bingo." Summer as the season of abandon is waning everywhere, but the change seems particularly startling here, in Surf City, as this Orange County town has proclaimed itself since the 1960s.

Back in the 1950s, Steve Pezman and his surfing buddies lived in a cardboard shack on the sand at Huntington Beach. "It was wide open, free and easy," said Pezman, who is 52 now and the editor of Surfer's Journal. "There were no rules. No one was chasing us off the beach. It was away from the urban mass. There were no lights except your bonfire on the beach at night. Families would come and live on the beach for the summer. They would take tin cans and make a wall and spell out their names — the Andersons."

The beaches in Southern California are a cultural institution, and, unlike the ones back East, most are open and readily accessible to the public. Not everyone can afford to live near the beach, but anyone can take the freeway to get there. Now, the beaches are becoming more crowded and concerns for public safety are increasing; the year-old curfew at Huntington Beach is part of a growing movement to restrict access.

Some towns want to close down beach parking lots at sunset. Laguna Beach is the only town in Orange County that hasn't set a beach curfew, deciding to step up police patrols instead. Most of the curfews have been put into place by municipalities, without approval from the California Coastal Commission, which guards the right of public access to the beach.

For the first time in its 22-year history, however, the commission did approve two curfews this spring — for a one-tenth of a mile stretch of beach in Coronado, near San Diego, and for several miles in Long Beach. Safety concerns led to the actions.

Peter Douglas, the executive director of the commission, said he worries about the pressure for more curfews. Although there has been an increase in fights and gang activity at the beach, he said, some of the reports have been exaggerated. "There is this ground swell of trying, in the name of public safety, to restrict the right of people to get to the beach," Douglas said.

The beach is a complicated place these days. The commission has insured that the ocean and the wet sand will remain a curfew-free zone, where people can still swim, surf, fish, walk and run after hours — if they are already in the zone when the lifeguards and the police announce that curfew has arrived.

But a lot of people do not seem to know about such subtleties, and so, instead of making a dash for the water at 9:59 p.m., they just go home.

The other afternoon, Kevin Sutherland, a machine shop foreman from Huntington Beach, was warming up for his regular game of beach volleyball. "I have serious fun," he said.

He is 33. The game he has been playing here for 13 years is about the only thing that hasn't changed. "It's a lot more crowded," Sutherland said. "It's people from everywhere — a lot more cultures. There's a lot more rules, a lot more attitude."

He wasn't talking about urban decay. He was talking about a sandy stretch of beach. In California, where people are sealed inside cars and live in houses behind walls, the beach is common ground. There are inevitable tensions along its shifting sands.

A short walk from the volleyball nets, Nelson Sagastume, 18, and his friends from East Los Angeles, Paul Navarro and Tony Gomez, both 17, had attitude to spare. All three wore dark sunglasses and fashionably baggy jeans, pulled low so their white cotton boxer shorts showed.

They were standing around their car at the edge of the sand, blasting rap music by Warren G. Back in his neighborhood, Sagastume said, he is a member of a gang. He had left his gun at home, he said.

"I want to get away from the violence," Sagastume said. "We don't have to worry about anything here. We don't know anybody. There's no rival gangs. We don't have trouble here."

Gomez said: "We just come to look for girls." He had met a girl with long, black hair the night before. "I thought she was cute," he said. "We went for a walk. I was rejected."

Sagastume had not been lucky, either.

Today's farmers have no use for centuries-old methods

By Dirk Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

ESMOND, Ill. — The cornfields of Dale Montgomery would probably have embarrassed a proud Midwestern farmer from an earlier generation. Instead of cleanly plowed black soil, the ground between his corn rows is covered with the withering stalks of last year's crop, traditionally called trash.

"My grandfather would have snorted, 'How in the world can you grow corn like this?'" said Montgomery, 43, who raises soybeans and corn on 1,000 acres in the rich farm country of DeKalb County.

In a revolution in American farming, the centuries-old method of plowing the fields, turning the earth completely before planting, is going the way of draft horses.

"It was a radical idea 20 years ago," said Montgomery, a graduate of the University of Illinois, who stopped plowing some of his fields six years ago.

"But farmers are seeing that if you work with nature, you don't need to fight it."

The change has been speeded by a 1985 federal law, which takes effect at the end of this year, that requires farmers to take steps to stem soil erosion, which is worsened by plowing, or risk losing subsidies.

But farmers also say the new method saves time and money, as much as $15 an acre, some experts say. New herbicides have helped farmers control weeds, the principal reason for plowing.

While "no till" farming usually requires the use of a greater amount of weed killer at first, proponents of the method say that over time, less would be needed. And new mechanical devices, like the no-till drill, can plant seeds in a field covered with stubble.

Mail delivery in most cities still slower than last year

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mail delivery in most U.S. cities — even postally challenged Chicago — improved when snow and ice gave way to spring. But most mail was still moving more slowly than last year.

The goal is 95 percent on-time delivery for first-class mail, but no city in the Postal Service's survey achieved it.

In the two cities that came closest — Billings, Mont., and Wichita, Kan. — 93 percent of test letters mailed within the overnight delivery area arrived on time. Both cities bucked the national trend in scoring slightly better than they did in the same period last year.

At the bottom of the list, only 62 percent of the letters arrived overnight in New York and Washington, D.C.

That's a significant drop from the same period last year when New York scored 77 percent and Washington 73 percent.

The capital has a tradition of poor mail service, although Postmaster General Marvin Runyon has said he hopes to make it the nation's postal showplace.

'Clearly the Postal Service has lost some momentum during the past year as it has sorted out its new operating structure.'

— Sam Winters, chairman, postal board of governors

Runyon has said the general slowdown was the result of an overhaul of the agency's management and "culture." In remarks prepared for delivery in Boston on Tuesday, the chairman of the postal board of governors endorses that view.

"Clearly the Postal Service has lost some momentum during the past year as it has sorted out its new operating structure," Sam Winters says.

But, he says, "I believe the Postal Service is on track."

Delivery time varied widely from city to city in the postal quarter ended May 27, according to the survey to be released at the board meeting in Boston.

Beleaguered Chicago mailers may find comfort in the fact that eight cities and the Virgin Islands ranked below the Windy City, which hit the 75 percent mark this spring.

Chicago became known as a sort of postal purgatory last winter when thousands of pieces of mail were found burning under a viaduct, an additional 30,000 pieces were discovered stashed in a postal truck, 20,000 more turned up in the garbage and huge piles languished in back rooms of post offices.

The Postal Service sent a special task force to straighten up the city's problems. That helped bring Chicago's score up almost 10 percentage points, from just under 66 percent in the winter quarter, officials said.

But Chicago still lags behind its performance for the spring of last year — a better comparison because it takes into account seasonal changes in mail volume. That spring, 82 percent of Chicago's mail was on time.

"It's early yet to declare victory," William J. Good, vice president of operations in the Great Lakes Area, said in remarks prepared for the board meeting. "We still have a lot of work to do. But we have clearly made progress."

Nationally, 82 percent of the overnight mail was on time, down from 84 percent in the spring 1993 survey.

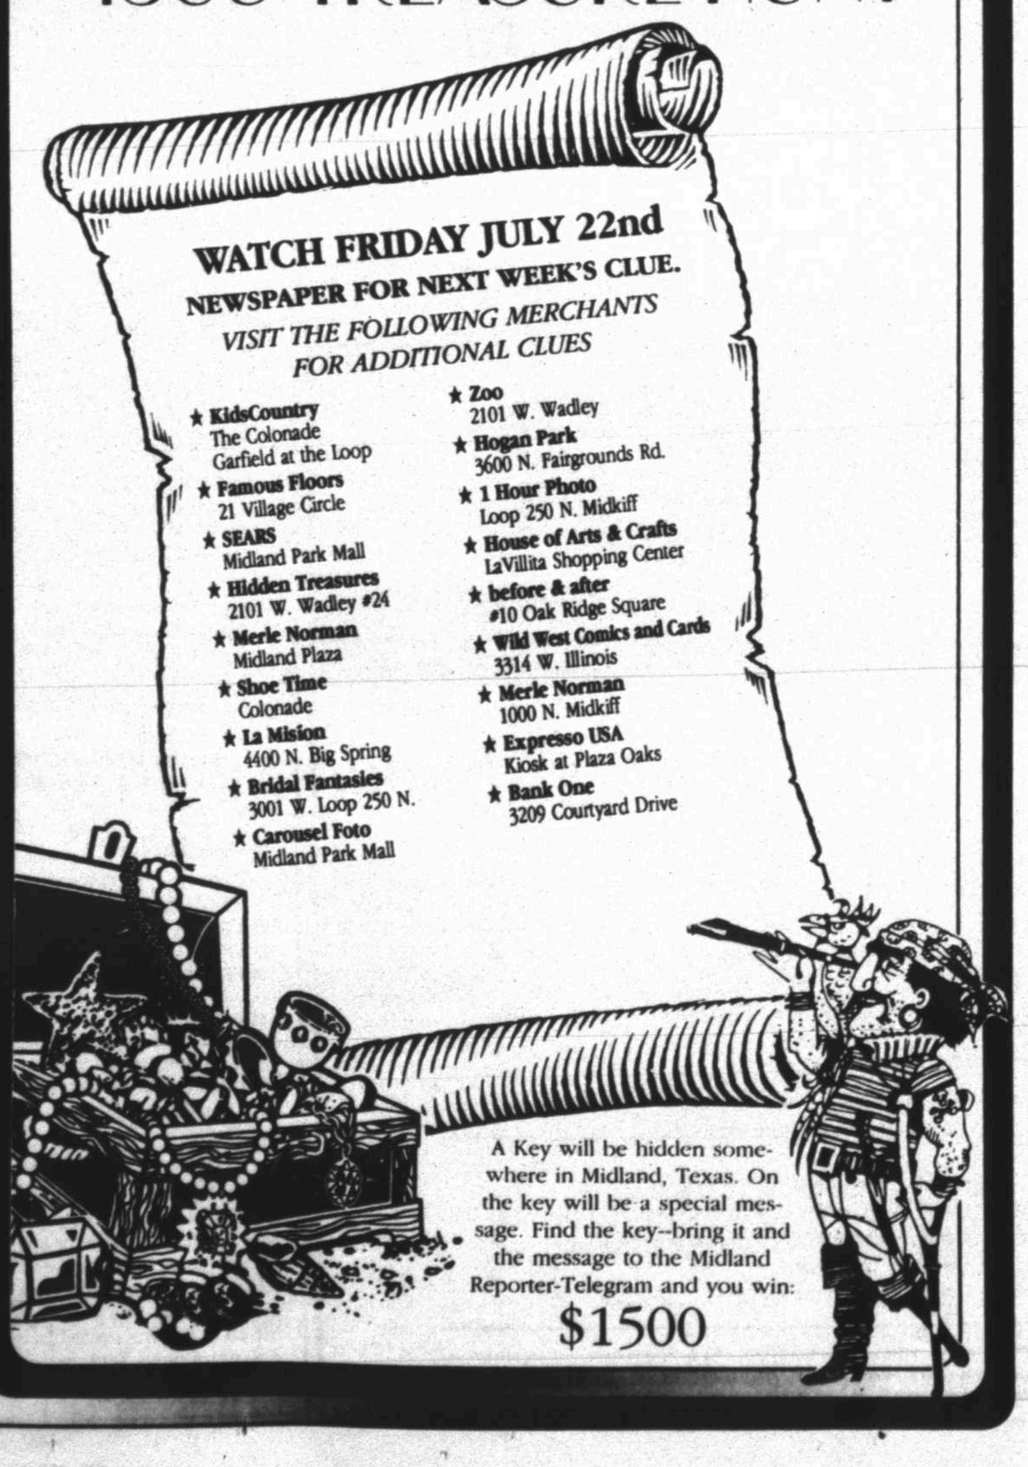

But that was an improvement from this winter, when the service said unusually harsh weather helped push on-time delivery down to 79 percent — the lowest score since the survey began in 1991.

The Postal Service commissions Price Waterhouse to conduct the study of local delivery in 96 cities.

A second survey, by Opinion Research Corp., measures customer satisfaction nationwide. In the most recent survey, 85 percent of postal customers rated the service as good or excellent, down 4 percentage points from the previous quarter.

LHS graduate wins

Lee High School graduate Anurag Agrawal was awarded a National Merit Scholarship. He was one of 1,300 scholarship winners nationwide, the National Merit Scholarship Corporation announced Monday. Agrawal was one of 14,000 Merit Scholars vying for the scholarship. His other honors include receiving the Rensselaer Math & Science Award, serving in the National Honor Society, the Adacemic Decathlon and the Texaco Academic Star Challenge. He plans to study engineering at the University of Texas at Austin.

Area stargazers

Stargazers worldwide are watching this week's activity on Jupiter as Comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 batters the largest planet in our solar system. The West Texas Astronomers Club, whose members often bring their telescopes to the Marian Blakemore Planetarium for viewing special sky events, had a previous commitment this time. The club was invited to Big Spring where members are set up for viewing at Big Spring State Park along with other area clubs. "One of the objectives is certainly Jupiter," said Mark Hartman, director of the Midland planetarium. "But they will be scanning the whole sky." Jupiter is the second brightest star-like object in the night sky. It will be west of south at 10 p.m. and will be visible in the night sky until 1:42 a.m. Wednesday, 1:38 a.m. Thursday, 1:34 a.m. Friday and 1:31 a.m. Saturday.

MISD students to sip from plastic pouches, buy lunches with pre-paid computer credit

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Milk cartons and lunch tickets are about to take their place alongside such relics as the chalkboard slate for elementary school youngsters this year.

Midland Independent School District's Food Services is stepping into the future by switching to plastic milk pouches and computerized cash registers which will call up a child's lunch money account with the touch of a button.

Along with the updated technology, the amount of fat in school cafeteria meals will decrease and lunch prices will increase.

"It's going to be a year of change," said Patricia Grillos, MISD director of food services.

The milk-in-a-pouch concept, similar to grocery store fruit drinks in pouches, was embraced by DuPont Pouch Systems which designs the pouches for Borden Dairys, including the dairy in Lubbock.

In 1993, the State of Texas passed waste reduction legislation, challenging schools to find new ways to reduce their trash weight by at least 40 percent. DuPont and Borden launched the mini-sip milk pouch in reply, according to Veronica Petta of Borden.

More than 100 school districts in West Texas and eastern New Mexico began using the packaging last year. "Space occupied by empty milk packaging has been reduced by over 70 percent. And there is less chance of milk spillage," Ms. Petta said in a news release.

"Even better, the costs were lower when the bids came in," Ms. Grillos said. "The pouches are less expensive and we've been using them successfully in the summer lunch program. We'll see how it goes this year."

Computerized lunchroom registers will come on line this year at the elementary school campuses beginning with three campuses this August.

"After that we will computerize three more cam-

The Mini-Sip milk pouch, produced by DuPont for Borden Dairies, will be introduced to Midland public school students in August. The clear plastic pouch reduces leakage and trash waste and is recyclable.

College trustees to review tight budget tonight

Staff Report

ODESSA — Odessa College trustees will meet in special session tonight to review a tentative 1994-95 spending budget that calls for about $2 million in reductions, but no salary cuts or layoffs.

The OC board will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room on the second floor of the OC Student Union Building.

The budget cannot be finalized until late July when anticipated revenue to the college will be known. The board has scheduled a public budget meeting at 7:30 p.m. July 26 to permit the public to comment on the proposed budget. The board will vote on the budget at that time.

During tonight's meeting, the board will vote on tuition increases for both credit and Continuing Education Division classes. Under the proposal — among ways the college is proposing to deal with the revenue shortfall — credit tuition for an Ector County resident would be $20 per semester. That's a $4-per-credit-hour increase from 1993-94

Interest rates cut MC scholarships

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Low interest rates are being blamed for some recent cuts in Midland College scholarships, school officials said Monday.

Those cuts are the result of decreased returns on investments of endowment funds, explained Bob Phillips, vice-president of administration services.

"Scholarship funds are generated by money placed in various securities," Phillips said. The principle amount on these investments is never touched. Only the returns are used to generate some scholarships, he said.

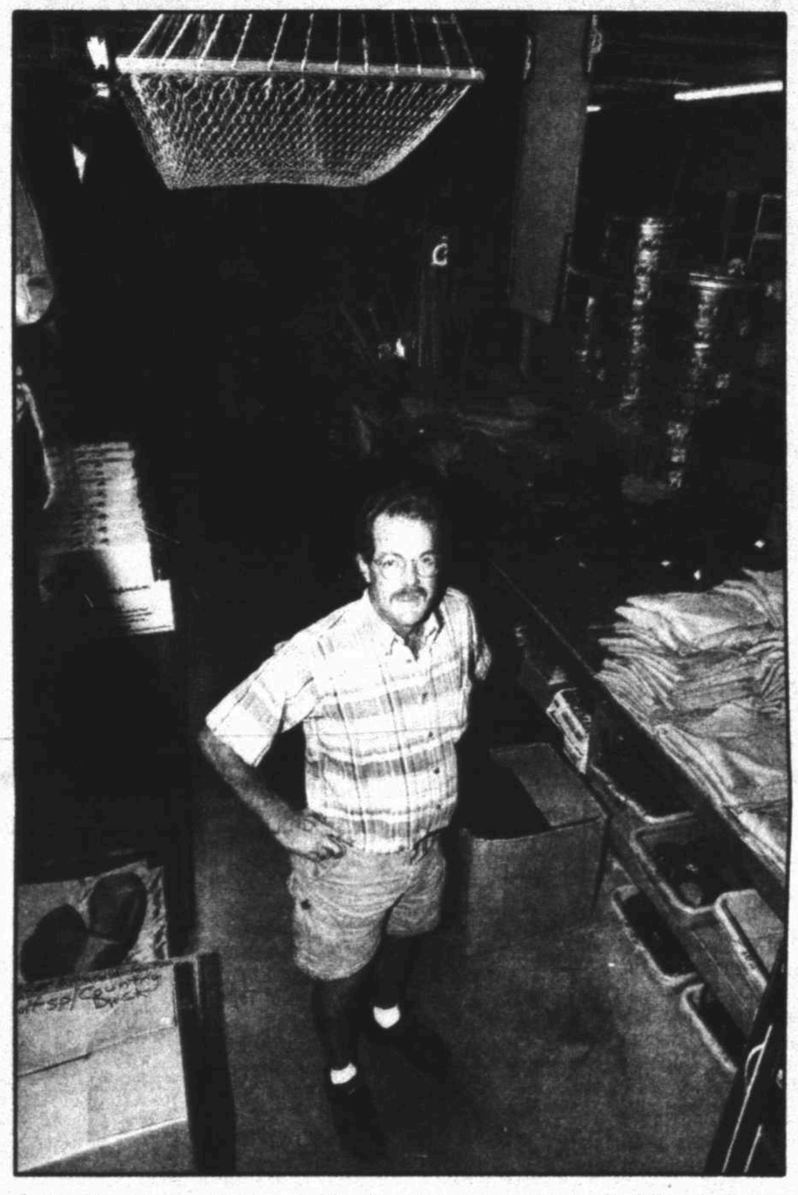

For this year, the returns simply were not as great as those of previous years, Phillips explained. "It's primarily due to interest rates . . . the returns are just not as high," he said. The principle investments, however, remain secure.

Because of this drop in returns, some scholarships at MC have been cut back to some degree for the 1994-95 school year. Other changes at MC have eliminated guaranteed student loans from the list of financial aid options.

To compensate, MC is expanding its number of Pell Grants and other fund-

INTRODUCING . . .

Scott Vaughan, owner of Nix Trading Post at 601 E. Illinois Ave., stands in his unique store that features everything from Army surplus backpacks and combat helmets to gourmet-cooking ware and furniture. Some patrons say you can spend hours in the place and never get bored.

Made-in-U.S. store carries packs to pots

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Scott Vaughan is impressed, almost mesmerized, by his workaday Americana surroundings.

"I haven't been to a lot of places," Vaughan said, "but I've never seen a place like this."

It is chock full of "old-fashioned" wares, not antiques, but modern-day merchandise associated with the sturdy craftsmanship of America's yesteryears. The wares are identified with the outdoors, with the backwoods, and with gourmet cooking: from cast-iron cooking wares and the old No. 3 galvanized bath tubs to Estwing gold-panning pans and backpacks.

"I've never used one (gold pan)," Vaughan, 36, said. "I think I might like to, though, to see what I'm selling — to know what I'm selling. They have a ridge in them to hold the dust. I don't know how they work, but we sell a number of those . . . during the backpacking and camping season."

The place is Nix Trading Post, a 50-year-old Midland general mercantile store of which Vaughan became proprietor in the mid-1980s. The business, now just east of downtown Midland, initially was established as a used-furniture store off Main Street in 1944 in the heart of downtown Midland by Thomas and Mabel Nix. Following World War II, their son, Thomas, and his wife, Nelda Joyce, took over the business, relocated it to Illinois Avenue and expanded it to its current flavor: an Army-Navy store replete with housewares, gourmet-cooking tools, camping goods, pottery, restaurant supplies, and furniture, including rocking chairs.

For Vaughan, who grew up in his father's New Mexico furniture store, learn-

Residents raise funds for community parks

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The willingness of Midlanders to pitch in to improve their neighborhoods has been demonstrated recently by an increase among residents electing to raise money for community park improvements.

For example, of the $33,000 being spent to rebuild a perimeter fence at Ida Jo Moore Park, at A Street and Nobles Avenue, neighborhood residents donated $6,000.

'It instills a pride in the neighborhood to be involved in the project.'

— Chuck Swallow

"It's easier on the city that way. You're able to spread the tax dollars," said Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca.

Last month, two neighborhood committees asked the City Council to support their raising private funds to supplement city dollars for use at Hill Park and Trinity Park for playground equipment and sidewalks.

And in the last year, residents have raised money and contributed to improvements at Cowden Park and Den-

Men start acting silly around good-looking women

■ Do you vow that in the future you will stop and help such a person?

■ Yeah, me too.

■ Will you?

■ I didn't think so.

■ From the what-it-is-worth department: I was sitting on the floor of my aunt's house in Harlem, Ga., when Neil Armstrong took that historic first step on the moon.

■ Was it really 25 years ago?

■ I've often wondered if I, while sitting on a jury, could sentence another human being to die.

DEATHS

T.C. Watkins

Services for T.C. Watkins, 78, of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at the First United Methodist Church Glass Chapel with the Rev. Mark Alexander and J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Watkins

Watkins died Sunday at his residence.

He was born Aug. 8, 1915, in Fort Worth, where he was raised and educated. He served in the U.S. Army Air Corps during World War II. He married Mary Madeline Greene on Nov. 4, 1944, in Fort Worth. He moved to Midland in 1946 and helped establish Watkins Wholesale Automotive Supply Company, which he and his brother operated for 31 years. He also maintained ranching operations in Brown, Kerr and Kimble counties. He served on the City of Midland Planning and Zoning Committee for two years and on the Midland Board of Equalization. He was past president of the Whole Automotive Wholesalers Association of Texas and also served on the association's national board.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Watkins of Midland; a daughter, Debbie Giles of Midland; a son, Tom Watkins of Midland; a sister, Hazel Easter of Midland; three brothers, Edward A. Watkins of El Paso, Claude Watkins of Breckenridge and E.H. (Buck) Watkins of Lago Vista; four grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

William Land

Services for William Lee Land of Midland will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Elder Fred Lybrand officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Land

Land died Monday at a local hospital.

He was born Jan. 10, 1927, in Throckmorton. He served from 1945-47 in the U.S. Army in Japan during World War II. In 1950, he began working for Bovaird Supply Company in Tulsa, Okla., where he worked as a field representative and in city sales until his retirement in 1982. He married Ginger Owens on Oct. 20, 1961, in Odessa. He moved to Midland in 1969.

Survivors include his wife, Ginger Land of Midland; a son, Stephen Lee Land of Midland; a daughter, Cathy Young of Midland; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Land of Vinita, Okla.; two sisters, Annie Young of Vinita, Okla., and Betty Reoska of Plainfield, Ill.; a grandson; and several nieces and nephews.

Memorials may be made to the American Diabetes Association or the American Cancer Society.

Vada Mougin

Services for former Midlander Vada Adeline Mougin will be at 9:30 a.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Mougin died Saturday in Katy.

She was born Nov. 15, 1921, in Redfork, Okla. In 1959, she moved to Midland where she began working as a bookkeeper for Frank Montgomery. She worked for several businesses in Midland as a bookkeeper, retiring from Stovall Imports in the early 1980s. She moved to Katy in 1990. She was a member of Bellview Baptist Church in Midland and was Past Noble Grand of Rebekah Lodge in Terrell.

Survivors include a daughter, Aleda Reagan of Katy; and a sister, Virginia Holmes of Terrell.

John Hosier

Services for John C. Hosier, 76, of Brownfield were held at Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland Monday. The Rev. Clifton Igo, pastor of Second Baptist Church in Lamesa, officiated. Brownfield Funeral Home handled arrangements.

Hosier died last Wednesday in a Brownfield nursing home.

He was born July 11, 1918, in McCook, Neb., and married Rosalie Bohrer on Nov. 21, 1940, in Marysville, Kan. She died on May 30 of this year. He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II.

He moved from Nebraska to Midland in 1953, to Levelland in 1987 and to Brownfield in 1990. He was a master mechanic employed by Northern Natural/Enron until his retirement.

Survivors include a son, Thomas Leigh of Midland; a daughter, Jodie Cook of Brownfield; three sisters, Virginia Coon and Irma Eckle, both of Beatrice, Neb., and Mildred Kush of Denver, Colo.; and six grandchildren.

Bennylu Humbard

Services for Bennylu Jones Humbard of Midland are set for 3:30 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Jim Burgin officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers will be Jim Henry, W.V. "Red" Roberts, Max Crunk, Pat Rasvage and Brace Wigzell.

Honorary pallbearers will be J. Blair Cherry, Jr., Paul Edwin Setzler and S. Price Smith, Jr.

Mrs. Humbard died Sunday at her home.

She was born on July 8, 1928, in Prairie Hill, and grew up in Fort Worth. In 1946, she graduated from Texas Wesleyan College in Fort Worth. After teaching for one year in Toyah, she met J.W. "Bill" Humbard, and they were married on Sept, 19, 1949, in Fort Worth.

They lived in the Texas Gulf Coast area for three years, before moving to Midland in 1952.

Mrs. Humbard has been a volunteer at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center for many years. She was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and was a former member of the Eastern Star.

Survivors include her husband; one daughter, Mrs. Brent (Claudia) Wilbourn of Midland; her mother, Willie Mae Jones of Midland; and one granddaughter.

The family requests memorials be directed to Meals of Wheels, 3301 Sinclair, Midland, 79707.

Dean Strack

Memorial services for W. Dean Strack of Midland are set for 2 p.m. today at the First Baptist Church Sanctuary with Dr. Ray Riddle, Hospice chaplain, officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Strack died Saturday at his home.

Willa Cecil

Services for Willa Mae Cecil of Midland are set for 11 a.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of the West Kentucky Street-Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers will be Gerald Reeves, Juan Carlos Mendoza, Roger Anderson, Ronnie Cecil, David Cecil and Shawn Collins.

CHANGE: Cost of school lunch increases

puses each month," Ms. Grillos said, noting letters will be sent home to parents explaining how the system works.

"Since the new lunch price is $1.40 (up 15 cents from last year), and is not an even increment, there is more of a chance lunch money could be lost," Ms. Grillos said. "This way a parent could put a check or a five-dollar bill into an account. When the child goes through the line, the cashier can punch in a code and the child's account will automatically come up on the screen."

The food service director said monitoring the account will allow parents better tracking of when their child is buying a lunch. "When they had 20-meal lunch tickets in the past, parents assumed a child was eating every day when the child might not be eating or buying lunches for other children on the ticket," she said.

However, students will still be encouraged to buy lunch tickets until all of the campuses are computerized. Meal tickets are sold in increments of 5, 10, 15 or 20 meals.

Lunch prices increased 15 cents this year after holding steady last year. "The school board did not approve a price increase last year, but utilities and other costs went up, so we ended up $150,000 in the hole," Ms. Grillos said. "The school board now gave us the amount that wasn't allowed for last year plus what was needed this year."

Even with the increase, the food services expects to end the year with about a $50,000 deficit. "We have been fortunate in the last 10 or 12 years and have had a little bit of extra money to put into reserves to draw on." she said.

Breakfast will cost 75 cents. Cost of pre-kindergarten lunch is $1.25. Elementary school students will pay $1.40 and secondary students, $1.50.

MISD meal menus are being adapted to gradually cut down on fat. "We are adapting the menus a little bit each year to more closely conform to dietary guidelines," Ms. Grillos said, noting the goal is to have no more than 30 percent of the calories come from fat in a week's worth of menus by the year 2000. The problem is children have an acquired taste for fat.

"We have to adapt menus gradually so children will accept the food," Ms. Grillos said. She said periodic "plate-waste" studies are done to find out what the students are eating.

The five most popular meat meals? They are nacho grandes, hamburger, chicken nuggets, chicken fried steak, and tacos. Two dieticians work on the meal ingredients to reduce fat, sugar and salt.

Currently MISD menus have had 35-37 percent of the calories coming from fat. "Dietary guidelines have been in place since 1990. The national average in schools is that fat has decreased about 5 to 6 percent since then," Ms. Grillos said.

While any new menus may be greeted with hesitation by youngsters, the milk pouches are sure to be a hit. "The key is to keep the pouches flat on a tray and to take that diagonally-cut straw and poke the pouch just so," Ms. Grillos said.

Leakage is reported to be minimized due to the fact that the straw stays in the pouch.

The pouches are composed of a high-grade polyolefin film which can be collected by the dairies or institutions and recycled by using them to manufacture trash liners and garbage bags.

Currently, five Borden dairies are distributing Mini-Sips in 10 states.

ing "the furniture (side of the business) was easy for me. Of course, the camping and outdoor was easy, because I liked it. The housewares and kitchen wares was difficult, but I enjoyed learning about it. I had a desire for that knowledge."

In stocking and re-stocking the store, "We buy what we can out of the U.S. of A.," he said. "There are so many imports now."

The store has examples of "just about every piece of American-made cast iron that there is available," Vaughan said. "American-made, mind you. We don't have any imported cast-iron."

It's a catch-all store in which the inventory is best known in Vaughan's organic "computer" — his brain.

"It's all in our head," Vaughan said. "This is the best computer there is. The mind is a miracle tool, I've found out.

"Stuff comes back to me. Call me on the phone, and I'll give you a price, where it's at, where I got it, how much I paid for it, how much I've got to buy to get a minimum order, just out of mind. It just clicks. It's a miracle tool."

And, like an inquiring scientist or the consummate salesman, Vaughan wants to know what goes into the products on his store's shelves, floor, ceiling and walls.

"There's so much to know about each individual item," Vaughan said. "I like to know the specifications on it. I want to know a lot about the item: The type of steel it is. How it's made. Is it pressed? Is it forged? Is it drawn? I like to know my merchandise.

"I think that's why our customers like coming back. We are knowledgable of what we've got. It is high-end stuff — quality merchandise."

And Vaughan noted that he and his help "don't say, 'I don't know' very often. If you stump me (with a question), I'm going to find out (the answer). I may not be able to right away, but I'm going to find out."

The post's fare includes shovels for moving grain and dirt, hats and caps for winter and summer, coal buckets, vermin traps, post-hole diggers, cots, canteens, canes, camping gear, footwear, long johns, fishing tackle, trunks, Army-issue P38 can openers, kettles, table ware, and kitchen ware from apple corers and potato ricers to flour sifters and grain mills.

"Not only do we have the sifter to sift it," Vaughan said. "We have the mill to mill it.

"People like to cook. People like to eat. And they like to cook from scratch. They like to make pretty dishes, good dishes, and that requires decent quality tools and, then, the miracle tool in the head."

PARKS: Residents help to improve city's parks

nis the Menace Park.

The fund-raising efforts reflect a growing emphasis on community parks nationwide, Menchaca said.

"I think part of it is a trend that citizens want more quality features in community parks," he said.

In the case of Ida Jo Moore Park, neighbors wanted to see the "landmark park" restored to its original look, said resident Fred Westmoreland.

"It's kind of a unique children's park," he said. Part of the beauty of the park has been the red brick wall, which has deteriorated from flooding and vandalism.

By approaching the city, the residents could provide some impetus for the improvements and have more input on the type of fence to be constructed, he said.

"It instills a pride in the neighborhood to be involved in the project," said Chuck Swallow, assistant director of community services.

By residents raising money, improvements can be made beyond what the city may afford due to budget restraints, he said.

That doesn't mean raising money is the only way to get park improvements.

A City Council member recently pointed out that neighborhood contributions are appreciated but such donations must not affect the renovations of parks in neighborhoods unable to raise funds.

Swallow said improvements prompted by safety concerns are addressed equally at all parks; and among parks in poorer neighborhoods, the city seeks alternative additional funding such as from the federal Community Development Block Grants.

Small church gets historic designation

HOUSTON (AP) — A small church wedged between the city's downtown skyscrapers has become Texas' newest Historic Landmark.

Antioch Missionary Baptist Church of Christ celebrated the designation Sunday.

Established in 1866 on the banks of Buffalo Bayou, the church was moved in 1870 to its current site, two lots purchased for just $50.

ing sources to students.

Other scholarships not related to the endowment fund are unaffected this year, Phillips said. Some Abell-Hanger Foundation scholarships have even been increased for the upcoming year.

Financial woes at Odessa College are vastly more significant, with prior "inappropriate investments" leading to dramatic decreases in the value of securities invested in by that institution, according to OC officials.

The financial crisis at that institution has led to President Philip Speegle's retirement and subsequent leadership of the college at a reduction in his $122,458 salary.

Meanwhile, at Midland College, Rudy Gonzales, new vice-president of finance, began his orientation Monday. He will be working closely for two more weeks with Phillips.

U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison inspects a shipment of chemical resins at the Port of Houston Monday. Hutchison, a Republican, toured the port to talk about the role the facility will play in the implementation of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Texas should have 2 international highways to Mexico, Hutchison says

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Texas should have at least two interstate highways to Mexico — an updated I-35 and a new I-69 — plus more bridges at the Mexican border to handle the anticipated commerce generated by the North American Free Trade Agreement, Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison said Monday.

"To have two very strong highways out of Texas, out of Mexico, is going to be good for all of Texas," Hutchison said while taking a tour of the Port of Houston, which also expects to cash in on NAFTA.

"I don't think we have to take one or the other. I think we need to have both. I think it's important that we have them both."

A Dallas-Austin-San Antonio coalition is pushing for I-35 improvements. The highway connects those cities with Laredo on the Texas-Mexico border.

An East Texas and Houston effort would upgrade highway U.S. 59 to an interstate highway to be known as I-69, a road that would begin in Port Huron, Mich., and end at Laredo.

"I think we are going to see the need for both because the trade is going to make it necessary," Hutchison said.

"I think you have to look at this as the corridor into the United States. If we don't have good infrastrucure coming out of Mexico through Texas, that means people in Kansas, Missouri and Illinois are not going to get their goods on a timely basis."

She also said more bridges are needed along the border to eliminate more than hour-long waits for trucks to get into the United States. And she endorsed Port of Houston plans to widen and deepen the Houston Ship Channel, which makes Houston the nation's top port in foreign tonnage and the nation's second-busiest port overall. Last year, a record 137 millions tons of cargo went through the port.

The Republican senator, seeking her first full term in a November race against Democrat Richard Fisher, a Dallas businessman, visited a warehouse at the Port of Houston and climbed a two-story tower in a railroad yard to get an overhead view of the Port Terminal Railroad.

The 90-minute visit had all the markings of a campaign photo opportunity as the senator, inside a steamy warehouse, poked at sacks of chemical resins.

ATF agents sue media firms over Waco

WACO (AP) — Three federal agents filed a lawsuit Monday against the Waco Tribune-Herald, KWTX-TV and American Medical Transport, claiming they conspired to cause a shootout during a failed raid on a religious cult's armed compound.

The lawsuit filed by ATF agents Danny Jack Curtis of Collin County, Walter Glen Jordan of Arkansas and Peter B. Mastin of Louisiana claims the businesses helped cause the firefight in order to get a better story.

The men are seeking unspecified damages.

Earlier this year, federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents John T. Risenhoover, Robert Rodriguez and the families of three of the four slain agents filed suit against the Tribune-Herald and KWTX.

Two of the agents who filed suit Monday weren't injured in the botched Feb. 28, 1993 raid on the Branch Davidians' compound, but claim they suffered emotional trauma. Jordan was wounded in both legs.

Tribune-Herald Editor Bob Lott said the newspaper is not responsible for the failed raid in which four ATF agents and six Branch Davidian cult members were killed.

"While the tragedy at Mount Carmel was and is regrettable, the Tribune-Herald didn't cause it," Lott said. "We covered the news, and we did it responsibly. The tragedy happened because of actions by David Koresh and, as the U.S. Treasury pointed out after an extensive investigation, inept leadership of its own agency, the ATF."

The suit alleges that reporters and photographers from the newspaper and television station alerted cult members. It also says the Davidians were in a heightened state of anxiety by the publication of the Tribune-Herald's investigative series, "The Sinful Messiah," which told of sexual and physical abuses of children and a massive arms buildup by Koresh and his followers.

AMT representatives, who were placed on standby status for the raid by the ATF, tipped the newspaper "and-or" KWTX that the raid was planned, breaching a contract of secrecy, the suit claims.

Waco attorney Rick Bostwick, who represents KWTX, denied the allegations.

"Despite the ATF's admissions that the raid on the compound was seriously flawed from the outset, and despite the fact that the raid commanders knew the element of surprise had been lost and nonetheless proceeded with the raid, disobeying direct orders to the contrary, three more ATF agents have filed a lawsuit, but not against anyone involved in the raid and subsequent shootout," Bostwick said.

Noley Bice, a Waco attorney who represents AMT, declined comment.

Ice cream leads to 400-pound suspect

UNIVERSAL CITY (NYT) — Spotting and capturing a 400-pound teen suspected of burglarizing a home Sunday proved easy for police.

An earlier search for the same youth was somewhat stickier, with officers following a Hansel and Gretel-style trail of ice cream wrappers directly to the boy's door.

"The officers caught him fairly easy" Sunday morning, Universal City Police Lt. Charles B. Dewey said of Danny Kelley, who stands 6-foot-4-inches tall and weighs about 400 pounds.

Kelley, 17, was charged with burglary of a home and remained in the Bexar County jail in lieu of posting a $15,000 bond. Jesse M. Magana, 22, also was charged with burglary of a home and remained jailed after failing to post bond.

In Sunday's case, officers James Potter and Aaron Pendley were called to a house at about 5:30 a.m. to investigate a report of a residential burglary. A camera and jewelry had been dropped on the home's lawn and the officers captured two suspects fleeing from the scene.

Officers said Kelley had a brush with local lawmen last year, when they were called to a home to investigate reports of a break-in. Potter discovered that the refrigerator in the garage had been ransacked and the thief had left an edible evidence trail.

"The officer observed a Weight Watchers ice cream bar wrapper outside the garage door," Dewey said. "He observed another ice cream bar wrapper approximately 50 yards from that one."

Potter followed the sticky trail to the front lawn of a nearby home, where another discarded wrapper was found, along with other ice cream bars, a half-case of Miller Lite beer and eight Heineken bottles, Dewey said. The items were identified as those missing from the burgled home's refrigerator, he said.

Investigators were called to the house, where they spoke to a teen who told police he'd taken the items because "he was hungry and thirsty." Kelley was arrested and charged with burglary, but the charges were dropped after restitution was made to the homeowner, Dewey said.

Governor declares rabies healt h emergency

AUSTIN (AP) — Citing an increase in rabies in south and west central Texas, Gov. Ann Richards has declared a state health emergency.

Richards on Monday also called a meeting of state officials this week to discuss the emergency and to develop a plan of action.

"We must protect the people of Texas against rabies, and I am committed to taking whatever action is necessary to control the rabies problem," Richards said in a letter to state Health Commissioner David Smith.

According to Texas Department of Health information, there has been an increase in canine rabies in South Texas and gray fox rabies in west central Texas.

Canine rabies spreads in S. Texas, gray fox rabies in W. central.

The health department says that in the first five months of 1994, 91 people in South Texas and 126 people in other areas of the state have received post-exposure treatment for rabies.

Richards said she wants state officials to consider oral vaccination of coyotes, foxes and other animals affected by rabies; population reduction of animals likely to transmit the disease; increased rabies vaccination efforts; public education activities; and costs and funding sources for a rabies reduction program.

The session will include officials of Texas A&M University, the health department, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the Texas Department of Agriculture and the Texas Animal Damage Control Service. Richards' office said it probably would be held Thursday or Friday.

Activists: Power plants are biggest polluters

AUSTIN (AP) — Consumer activists said Monday that electric power plants are the biggest polluters when it comes to several substances linked to environmental and health problems. They urged state and industry action to cut emissions.

Public Citizen, Texas Citizen Action and the Environmental Defense Fund's call for action comes as a special committee created by the Legislature is looking at utility regulation.

The consumer and environmental groups want changes in the law they say would favor less-polluting energy sources and a 50 percent pollution cut by the companies.

Utility company representatives said they care about the environment and already meet or exceed state and federal emissions laws.

"We are continually looking for any way we can to make the air and water as clean as possible in our operations. We believe we have done that," said TU Electric Co. spokeswoman Joan Hunter.

She said TU Electric has an "outstanding" environmental record. Three of its lignite coal-fired plants rank No. 1, 2 and 4 on the emissions list because they are so large, she said. Those plants are in Titus, Rusk and Freestone counties.

TU Electric, with 2.5 million customers, was the second-largest electricity generator in the state last year and in recent years has been the biggest, she said. "We ... meet all and exceed many environmental standards," Ms. Hunter said.

Phil Roth of Amarillo-based Southwestern Public Service Co., whose Lamb County plant ranked No. 8 on the list, said, "The statements today by these special interest groups are misleading ... and their plans would needlessly drive up the cost of electricity while offering little benefit to the environment."

Roth said his company's coal-fueled power plants "are among the cleanest in the United States and operate well within state and federal air quality standards."

Cindy Conte of Houston Lighting & Power Co., whose Fort Bend County plant ranked No. 3 on the list, said the facility is one of the nation's largest and is already meeting year 2000 standards on the emission of sulfur dioxide. She said when size is taken into account, utilities' emission rates are lower than those of many other industries.

"The utility industry is very concerned about environmental issues," she said. "We certainly want to address those issues, along with reliability and cost factors, as we make future decisions, in meeting the electrical needs of the population."

Other companies in the Top 10 list were from other industries.

The list includes reported emissions of particulates, sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, nitrous oxide and volatile organic compounds. The citizen groups said those substances are variously tied to acid rain, respiratory and cardiovascular problems, and ground-level ozone.

Plants on the Top 10 list released 847,590 tons of those emissions in 1993, according to the groups' figures, which were based on reports to the state. Utility companies made up 488,656 tons of that.

The Top 100 polluters emitted 2.3 million tons of pollutants, with about 1 million coming from utilities, according to Tom Smith of Public Citizen.

Jim Marston, director of the Texas office of the Environmental Defense Fund, said the groups want the Legislature's Joint Interim Committee on Telecommunications and the Public Utility Commission to hold off on recommending less state regulation until it looks at power plants' environmental costs.

Utilities have said increased competition in the industry should mean a decrease in regulations, said Mike Thomasson of Central & South West Corp., a member of the Association of Electric Companies of Texas.

Marston said the citizen groups also want environmental costs to be fully considered.

COLLEGE: Agenda also includes reorganization rate of $16. Even with the increase, OC's tuition and fees would remain comparable to other area community colleges and half those of four-year state universities, OC officials said.

Increases in Continuing Education classes would vary, but would bring the charges for those non-credit classes in line with credit tuition.

The board tonight also is scheduled to accept the resignation of trustee Gary Sims, who previously lived at 1709 Byron Ave., but has moved out of the Place 1 district that he was elected to represent.

In other business, trustees are scheduled to:

■ Approve a college reorganization that would redistribute work loads and change some job descriptions because most employees who are retiring or have resigned will not be replaced.

■ Appoint Dr. Miles Eckert, vice president for college services, as interim president for the month of September. OC President Philip Speegle, who is retiring (but will continue to work at the college as president), cannot perform official duties for one month. He will be at the college during September, however.

■ Consider the requests from John Sliney to have access to the college's auditors and to exempt him from paying fees for documents he has requested under the Texas Open Records Act.

Tonight's agenda also includes closed executive sessions for discussion of personnel and litigation, including litigation related to ad valorem taxes.

TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Resenting the role an older person has played in your success would be silly. Acknowledge your debt, then move forward. Pay special attention to details in September. An attractive newcomer could claim your heart in December. Travel is best postponed until February of 1995. A project you recycle next spring could win you a prestigious award. Overseas investments will enhance your financial security.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tennis player Ilie Nastase, actor George Dzundza ("Law and Order"), soap actor Andy Kavovit, ballet dancer Natalya Bessmertnova, singer Vikki Carr, French painter Edgar Degas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sit tight and ignore the pie-in-the-sky suggestions from your mate or another close companion. Following the wrong advice could cause big headaches later on. Try to get some exercise every day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let others take the lead at work. Do not be afraid to venture into new territory. only the best will suit you today — the best food, clothes and friends. An offbeat romance is possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business negotiations could proceed at a dizzying pace this morning. Written suggestions for boosting efficiency or improving service merit careful consideration. Follow up on a daring idea. A financial goal is closer than you think.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Morning aerobics or a brisk walk will invigorate you. Keep your nose to the grindstone during business hours. Although progress can be made in the financial area, leave the big decisions for tomorrow. Comfort a child.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Finish pending business before leaping into a new venture. Exciting financial opportunities are on the horizon. Your private moments with someone may one day be revealed. Keep money and friendship strictly separate. Build savings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This is no time to pass judgment on your creative efforts. Use your skills as a researcher to find out more about a health problem. Romance with an older person could leave you greatly changed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Children will be the biggest beneficiaries of something that occurs today. Listen to an experienced and respected voice when it comes to investments. Look for ways to beat the competition at their own game.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make sure that service exceeds a customer's expectations and business will boom. Automated processing of a product can save you money. Better organization is the key to outstanding success at work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find out what it is like to stand on your own two feet. Independence will bring both happiness and financial success. A child has unlimited potential. Nurture a natural talent without thought of reward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take a chance on an idea proposed by your mate or partner. A solid foundation must be laid and all details carefully checked by experts. Get any financial promises in writing to prevent misunderstandings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Distance yourself from risky business moves or erratic people. A reputation for honesty is an irreplaceable asset! Welcome news arrives from afar. Two hearts beat as one in a romantic setting. Show tenderness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid taking unnecessary risks. Stick to conventional methods when dealing with conservative people. A meeting of minds could mean true love. Devote more time to artistic endeavors or physical fitness.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

If you play by rote, slavishly following all those cute little maxims you learned at your mother's knee, you will get away with it most of the time. But rules are no substitute for logic, as this deal testifies.

Even without a heart stopper, North might have done better to rebid one no trump to describe the balanced nature of the hand. With North as declarer, three no trump would have been impervious to human frailty.

West led the jack of clubs, declarer "covered an honor with an honor" by putting up dummy's queen, then ducked East's king. On the club return declarer won the ace perforce as West smartly unblocked the ten.

The contract now hinged on the diamond finesse. When that lost, East was able to cash three more club tricks for a one-trick set.

Declarer's error came at the very first trick. Obviously, if the diamond finesse was going to win, the contract was safe. How could declarer cater to East having the king of diamonds?

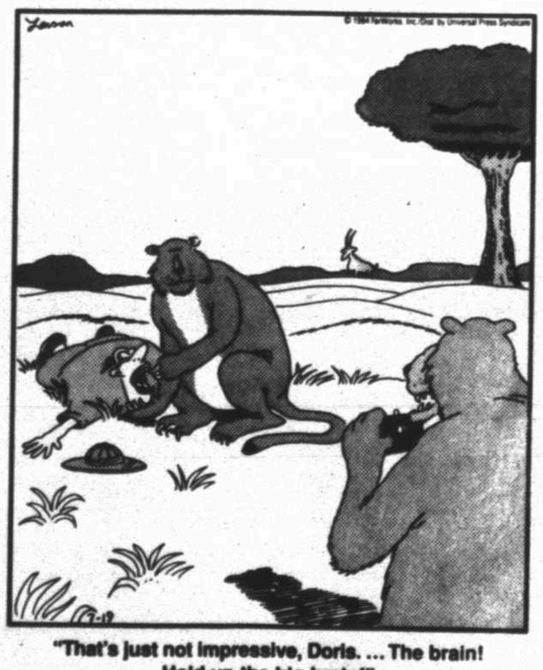

With East on lead, the club suit was safe from further attack as long as the guarded queen of clubs remained on the table. Therefore, declarer should have played low from dummy on the first trick and won with the ace in hand. Now when East wins the king of diamonds, nothing can harm declarer. If East returns anything other than a club, declarer claims nine tricks—two in each major, four diamonds and the ace of clubs. A club return yields an overtrick.

LOS ANGELES — Susan Sarandon has never taken home an Academy Award, and she isn't expecting one anytime soon.

Susan Sarandon isn't expecting an Oscar soon.

"I kind of assume that the Oscar is not going to come my way unless I live to be 120 and they honor me for surviving," Miss Sarandon said in an interview on "Entertainment Tonight." The interview will be broadcast today.

Miss Sarandon has been nominated three times for an Oscar — "Atlantic City" in 1980, "Thelma & Louise" in 1991 and "Lorenzo's Oil" in 1992.

She said her role as an out-of-her-league lawyer in "The Client," released nationwide on Wednesday, isn't Oscar material.

"I don't know if this is really the kind of movie that people will ever take seriously enough to give them an Oscar," she said.

NEW YORK — He's been a New York cop, a New York bank robber, a New York drug dealer and a New York godfather. How about Al Pacino as a New York mayor?

Al Pacino might play role of a New York mayor.

Pacino is close to signing a deal to play the mayor in a political drama called "City Hall," the Daily News reported Sunday. In the movie, the deputy mayor discovers his boss is involved in wrongdoing.

The film will be directed by Harold Becker, who last worked with Pacino in "Sea of Love," the News reported.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Joe Diffie sings about the "Third Rock From the Sun," but he'll be thinking of the moon Wednesday when he helps celebrate the 25th anniversary of the first lunar walk.

Diffie is the honorary host of the celebration at Space Center Houston, a recreation and educational complex next to NASA's Johnson Space Center.

"This is a dream come true for me. I have followed the space program since I was a kid," the 35-year-old country star said.

He will present the first pressing of his "Third Rock From the Sun" album to Space Center Houston. He also is scheduled to help unveil a postage stamp commemorating the Apollo 11 mission and Neil Armstrong's walk on the moon.

Diffie's hit records include "Prop Me Up Beside the Jukebox" and "John Deere Green."

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — "Lost in Space" actress June Lockhart got an out-of-this-world feeling talking to Columbia's astronauts Monday.

"I'm not lost in space any more. . . . I'm right here in Mission Control!" Lockhart said, squealing in delight and thrusting her arms into the air.

Shuttle commander Robert Cabana replied: "I don't think we're lost in space either. I think we know where we're going and we just have to press on and build the space station and eventually go back to the moon and beyond."

Lockhart, 69, visited Mission Control in Houston after participating in a panel discussion marking the 25th anniversary of the Apollo 11 moon landing.

In the 1960s TV series "Lost in Space," Lockhart played the mother of a space-wandering family. She also played the mother on "Lassie."

Curtis Sliwa went to Moscow last week to try to set up a branch office of his Guardian Angels. "We were invited by the mayor of Moscow, Yuri Luzhkov, to explain our volunteer patrols and to try to get young people involved in crime-fighting efforts," he told the New York Times.

Sliwa and Angels from London and Berlin spent five days meeting with officials and trying to recruit volunteers in parks and subway stations. He said he hopes to train 50 Moscow Angels within three months.

Five years after her then-husband, Jim Bakker, went to the clink, and two years after she divorced him, 52-year-old Tammy Faye Messner told Makeover magazine that she's happy as a clam with contractor Roe Messner — builder of the PTL theme park — whom she married almost a year ago.

"Jim had a problem," she told the magazine, "with my wearing so much makeup, but Roe loves it."

In fact, Mrs. Messner's granting an interview to Makeover is somewhat ironic: Her looks haven't changed at all.

"The eyelashes, the makeup, the big jewelry, the giggle — all that makes me me," she said. "A makeup artist recently told me not to change. 'Dare to be different,' he said.

Texas cities oust homeless from streets

By Harrison Newton
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Susan Weston sits on a downtown Houston sidewalk and puts on a fresh coat of bright blue and red makeup. She pastes it on like a child, unable to stay within the lines.

Her clownlike appearance causes businessmen walking by to noticeably avoid her and her bags of smelly, tattered clothing — her only tangible possessions.

"A lot of times people just pass you by," she says. "At least this way they look at me."

People like Ms. Weston are getting attention, but perhaps not the kind they want.

In the state's largest cities, the homeless are being rousted from the streets they frequent.

Until two months ago, Ms. Weston lived at the King George Hotel, a boarded-up flophouse where rooms went for $6 a night until city officials shut it as a fire trap unfit for human habitation.

The hotel was one of four recently padlocked in the city's push to maintain standards for housing, even when it concerns the homeless.

No one really knows how many people call the streets of Houston, Dallas and San Antonio home. Experts say the transitional nature of the homeless population defies an accurate census.

But new policies, the closing and condemning of old buildings and the exile of homeless people from encampments, are moving Texas' three largest cities into a new phase, Houston social worker Kathy Tabor says.

"Things are definitely changing out there. It does seem like it's becoming harder to live on the streets," she says.

Last month, Houston's city council passed an ordinance that prohibits the consumption of alcohol downtown, except in establishments and at officially sanctioned parties.

City councilman John Kelly says although certain policies may clash with the behavior of homeless people, the policies are not only aimed at the homeless.

"I just don't like to pass a bunch of drunks raising hell in the street, homeless or not, and we can't have buildings like the King George on every corner. They're not safe. That's the bottom line," Kelly says.

In both Houston and Dallas, where a similar drinking ban is in effect, some have worried the prohibition will force homeless alcoholics to migrate out of the downtown area.

Dallas social worker Amy Cerda, however, dismisses the idea.

"Where else will you find people you can panhandle? They surely aren't going to be in neighborhoods going door to door," she says.

The alcohol ban came shortly after Houston and Dallas broomed away homeless encampments under downtown freeway overpasses.

"Hell, it's not like we have rights anymore," complains Fred Joseph, who walks the streets of downtown Houston.

Houston's cleanup has included an ordinance forcing business owners to cleanse bodily waste from their property, meaning property owners have a legal way to get homeless people like Susan to move along. Many have had alleys fenced to prevent people from sleeping or taking cover near their premises.

Tabor says the new efforts are positive steps to control those who are content to live on the street.

"There are two populations of people that are called homeless," she says. "There is a population of people who are actually interested in finding a job or a way to support themselves and get off the streets. There is also a population of people who are content and have chosen the street as a lifestyle."

The old idea that building more shelters will solve the problem has been proven wrong, Tabor says.

"Not every homeless person wants to live in a shelter," she explains. "On the street they don't have rules to follow. After a while people forget what its like to have to live under rules, or be held responsible."

A major problem in all three cities is the need for retraining homeless individuals for the workforce.

"When you live on the street, your appearance becomes so haggard and you lose so many skills that you may have had that you no longer have any chance of su ceeding in our society," Tabor says.

"There needs to be more opportunities for some of these people to be trained," agrees Jan Mitura, a Salvation Army worker in Dallas. "Give them something to do so they start to develop an ego again."

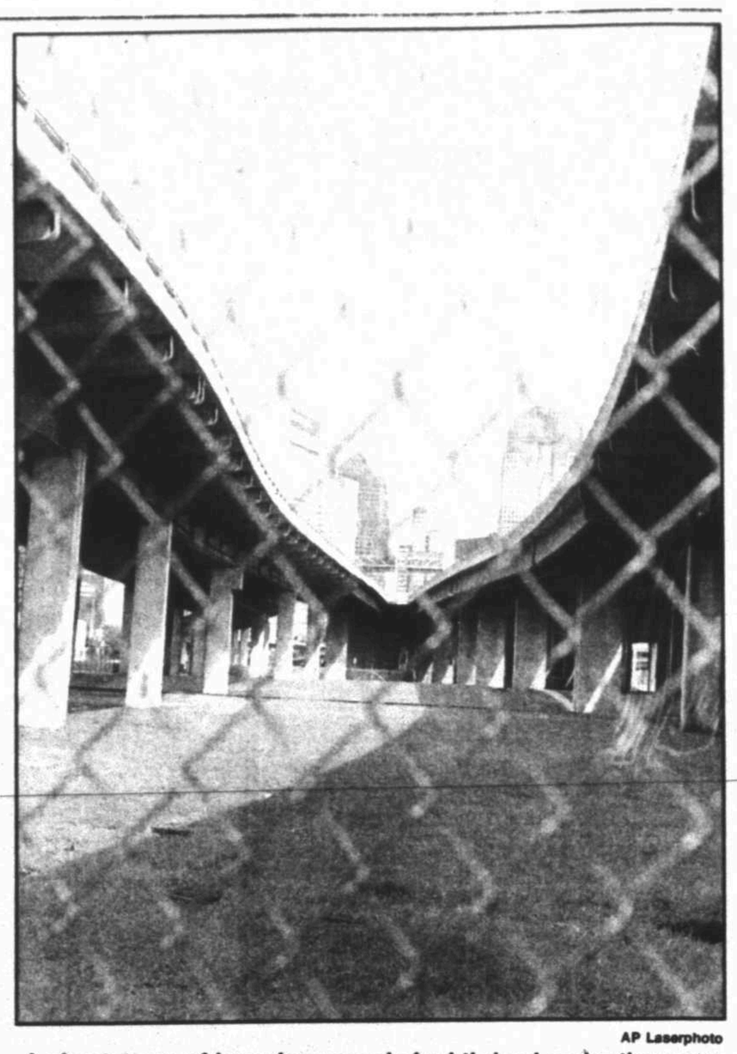

San Antonio City Councilman Bob Ross says his city has attacked the problem with temporary housing.

"The city is now involved in and is looking to increase it's involvement in increasing the amount of transitional living centers — places where people can stay and have a permanent address," he says. "They can get a job and move out. That's the solution. That's what we're interested in."

Janet Lakes, a social worker in a Presbyterian night shelter in Houston, says slum hotels that have been ordered shut have compounded the homeless problem, not helped it.

"A major problem with slum hotels is that they create a cycle for street swellers to exist in," she says. "The people peddle on the street all day, barely getting enough to afford one night in hotel. Every day turns into peddling to get enough money to pay the slum lord. Really they're throwing all the money they get into an endless pit."

Susan Weston says the hotels were not pleasant, but neither is the alley she currently resides in.

Bank finds rightful owner of Civil War document found in safe deposit box

By Michael Holmes
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Civil War enthusiasts and other collectors who may have wanted to bid on a rare military order, handwritten by Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, won't have the chance now that the letter's rightful owner has been found.

The Civil War correspondence, penned shortly after the Battle of Shiloh, had turned up among unclaimed property taken over by the state. But the rightful owner was found within minutes of unveiling the letter to a bevy of reporters Thursday. The letter had been scheduled for auction in October.

The 132-year-old document, whose owner hadn't been heard from since 1980, was discovered in a safe deposit box at a Jacksonville bank last year. According to state Treasurer Martha Whitehead, the document was found, folded in thirds and placed in an envelope, in a safe deposit box that belonged to Mary Ann Acker.

The First Interstate Bank of Jacksonville turned contents of the box over to the Treasury, but Thursday afternoon following a query, a bank official's memory was jogged about one of Mrs. Acker's relatives. A call to that relative led to a number for Mrs. Acker at the nursing home in Troop where she is employed.

"That's a long way around," the bank's customer service manager Mary Gregg told The Dallas Morning News. "But we didn't do anything wrong. We did what we were supposed to do."

That was to send her registered letters that she was delinquent on the rent for her safety deposit box.

Under state law, the contents of such boxes are turned over to the Treasury if rent has gone unpaid for five years or more. The Treasury tries to locate the owners of the property, and money received is held until the rightful owners can be found.

If the owners can't be located, the state is authorized to sell marketable items. Sale proceeds are held for the missing owner in the state's unclaimed property fund.

Mrs. Whitehead called the letter "unique and interesting."

"We have been in contact with a Grant expert who thinks it really is a priceless document ... It's worth as much as someone is willing to pay for it."

Treasury officials contacted John Y. Simon, editor of "The Papers of Ulysses S. Grant" and a professor at Southern Illinois University, who said the document is particularly unusual because it was penned by the Union general himself.

A common practice at the time was for commanders to dictate orders to subordinates, who would write out multiple copies.

The one-page order from Grant, who was elected president after the war, was dated April 18, 1862. That was 11 days after the Battle of Shiloh in Tennessee, one of the bloodiest engagements in the Civil War's western theater.

The three-paragraph order is written in black ink on faintly lined white paper.

In it, Grant directed Brig. Gen. Stephen A. Hurlbut to move his troops along the main Corinth road to take a position in front of Union General Lew Wallace, later the author of "Ben Hur."

Hurlbut was one of five generals commanding divisions under Grant. Known as both a hard drinker and hard fighter, Hurlbut was from Illinois, like Grant, and a friend of President Abraham Lincoln.

Corinth, in northern Mississippi, was a major rail station for the Confederacy. Treasury officials said their research indicates that Grant's order was written as the Union army was beginning its move south to capture the railroad lines that converged there.

The letter won't be on the auction block that will include such other items as antique jewelry, 1909 Coca Cola Bottling Co. stock and 1838 Texas currency signed by Sam Houston.

DEAR ABBY

Wife craves affection in marriage

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter in your column that hit me right between the eyes. I am referring to the letter signed "Needs Love." I have been married for nearly seven years. I am 46, and my husband is 52. This is a second marriage for both of us. There is absolutely no tenderness, no touching and no sex. It has been that way for the last six years.

Van Buren

I get three pecks on the cheek a day. One to say, "Goodbye, I'm going to work," one to say, "I'm home," and another to say, "Goodnight, I'm going to sleep."

We have sought counseling with different counselors. My husband has consulted a urologist, and we've purchased the "Making Love Work" videotapes. Nothing has helped. He's just not interested.

Abby, I feel lonely, rejected and starved for affection. I've never cheated — that's not my style — but I've thought of it often.

He's a decent, honest man. Can you help me? Maybe one of your readers can tell me how a wife copes when she's married to an "ice man." — LONELY, REJECTED AND MARRIED

DEAR LONELY: Some men — and women, too — lose interest in sex with the passing years. (When they both lose interest at the same time, there's no problem.) There's obviously a big communication gap here. Is your husband uninterested, unwilling or unable? Have you communicated what turns you on — and off?

I suggest you give therapy another chance. You can always throw in the towel if you find your love life is hopeless.

DEAR ABBY: Every year, during June, July and August, the moving and storage industry does approximately 60 percent of its annual business. Most families choose the end of the month for their moving dates, which puts an incredible strain on the movers to provide services to these people.

This could mean anything from the van not showing up, to having inexperienced "street help" handling your precious heirlooms. Many carriers charge a premium of 10 percent during these periods.

Abby, please advise your readers to try to schedule their move during another week of the month if at all possible.

They should discuss their options with their movers for the best time to move. The result is a better job done at a better price. — MOVING CONSULTANT

DEAR CONSULTANT: Thanks for the tip. Perhaps the moving companies should offer a discount as an incentive for people to move during off-peak weeks.

AT WIT'S END

Purchase of car becomes serious commitment

Advertising is supposed to sell illusion. That's what it's all about. But touting cars has become totally unrealistic. A car on TV slogs through the jungle, sinking into chuckholes big enough to lose a truck. I can't remember the last time I drove my car in a jungle.

Bombeck

There is another commercial of a car whipping around the winding roads of Italy at a dizzying speed, cutting a path through heads of sheep. If I went over 45 mph, the photo radar cop around my corner would put me away in a place where you'd need a pass and a body search to visit me.

And my personal favorite is the car that inches its way between these gargantuan balls that swing back and forth like pendulums. How many times have I encountered that on the road?

I love advertisers' infatuation with air bags. Has anyone ever seen an air bag? How do you know it's in there? It's like the oxygen mask that is supposed to drop down automatically on an airplane. We just have to take the flight attendant's word for it that it's there in the overhead compartment and will appear when we need it.

Manufacturers assume people buy cars because they're adventure seekers, or they'll sport them like trophies that scream success. The carmakers even suggest romance by draping the fenders with women with long legs.

I suspect people buy the cars their credit union says they can afford. They hope it has a motor that turns over with regularity when they turn the ignition key. If it outlasts the payments — even better.

I don't see this generation being seduced by cars like my dad used to be. My father knew the exact day when the new line was to be unveiled. Then he shopped. It took him longer to decide on a car than it took most men to choose a wife.

His grandsons could not care less about velour armrests and having one-way conversations with their brake light or seat belt. For them, buying a car is like committing to a marriage. Will they still love it when it prefers the company of a mechanic more than them? Will they want to stay married to it when the car-support payments are more than they spend for food? Can they remain faithful to it when its undercoat starts to rust and it stalls at every traffic light?

They have to ask themselves, "Do I want to buy a new car or do I want to buy Bolivia?"

Shreveport rallies to bounce M-Angels again

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

At least the horrible homestand is over. And the Midland Angels can play in a park without obscure graffiti burned into the infield grass.

Midland lost its fourth game in a row Monday, 5-4 to the Shreveport Captains to end a 10-game home stint at 3-7. The Angels lost a ninth inning lead to fall another game back of Texas League West leading El Paso.

Midland made a myriad of mistakes that cost them the game. And to show how tough things are for the club, sometime between Sunday and Monday night's game, vandals got into Christensen Stadium and marked up the infield with some type of grass killing substance.

"The only way to get out of it is to keep trying hard," said Angel starter Korey Keling. "We have the day off (today) and go to a new city and a new park tomorrow."

Ironically, that could be what the teams needs. A change of scenery.

The Angels had left 29 men on base in three loses coming into Monday's game. Some of the crucial mistakes they made Monday were:

■ Failing to excecute a pitch out in the eighth that led to a Captain run. Eric Christopherson reached out to hit the throw by Keling after shortstop Brian Grebeck had left his position to cover second. "That was 100 percent my fault," said Keling. "They called a pitchout and I knew it was a pitchout and I just threw it too close to the plate."

■ Being caught off guard by a suicide squeeze by the next batter that scored the inning's run, tieing the game at 3-3.

■ Reliver Ron Watson giving up a one-out home run in the ninth to tie the game at 4-4.

■ Inabiltiy to score in the bottom of the ninth after leading off with two singles. Chris Pritchett, who had already done all he could to help the Angels with a two-run first-inning home run and a walk and score in the fifth, hit into a double play for the first two outs of the ninth. Mike Wolff then struck out for the game's last out.

Cap, draft OK

NEW YORK — The NBA's salary cap, college draft and right of first refusal were declared legal Monday by a fed-up judge who urged the league and its players to stay out of court in the future.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy fell in line with previous rulings giving pro sports wide latitude to work out labor agreements outside of some laws limiting other businesses.

Duffy himself downplayed the legal significance, noting the issue had been in federal court at least three times before and saying he was "convinced ... neither party cares about this litigation or the result."

"Both are simply using the court as a bargaining chip in the collective bargaining process," he said.

The ruling freed teams to immediately resume signing contracts with players, a practice that had been stopped by the court pending resolution of the dispute.

Bat caper fails

CLEVELAND (AP) — All-Star Albert Belle of the Cleveland Indians was found guilty Monday of corking his bat and suspended for 10 days after a weekend investigation that included a mysterious switched bat.

It sounded like a case for Sherlock Holmes, but the American League unraveled it to its satisfaction after X-raying the bat, then sawing it in half. The league said the bat was "found to have been treated with cork."

"He appealed? I don't see how he can appeal, but that doesn't make any difference," White Sox manager Gene Lamont said.

It was the first time a player has been caught for using an illegal bat since 1987, when Houston's Billy Hatcher was suspended for 10 days for corking. Graig Nettles of the New York Yankees was ejected during a 1974 game when rubber balls were found in his bat.

Lamont voiced his suspicions about Belle's bat during Friday night's game between the White Sox and Indians.

He said the White Sox staff had noticed that Belle had been hitting a lot of long balls to right field throughout the season and Lamont said he'd "heard some things."

Each manager can ask to have one bat from the opposing team checked each game, and Lamont asked umpire crew chief Dave Phillips to do so.

Phillips seized the bat and placed it in the umpires' dressing room for safe keeping.

Or so they thought.

Later, during the game, someone worked their way above a false ceiling from the direction of the visitors' clubhouse and dropped through the ceiling into the umpires' dressing room. The thief took Belle's bat and left another player's bat in its place — the culprit still has not been identified.

By Sunday, another twist. The original bat, or what appeared to be the original bat, was returned.

"I didn't know if it was corked or not. Once it left the umpire's office you kind for took for granted it was probably corked," Lamont said.

Price best in world right now

By Ron Sirak
AP Sports Writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland — Nick Price looked at the silver claret jug given to the winner of the British Open, his eyes wide in disbelief.

"I can't believe they got my name on this so quickly," he said with a smile as he ran his fingers over the letters that spelled Nick Price beneath the other 122 winners of the world's oldest golf tournament.

"I am still a little stunned right now," he said. "It is amazing. You reach deep down inside of yourself sometimes and surprise yourself."

This should come as no surprise. Nick Price is quite simply the best golfer in the world right now.

This is a British Open championship that came from deep down within Price. It came with a gutsy birdie-eagle-par finish that ripped the championship away from Jesper Parnevik of Sweden.

It came with a 50-foot eagle putt at the 17th hole by the 37-year-old Zimbabwean.

And it came with a bogey on the 18th by Parnevik after he failed to look at the scoreboard and see that all he needed was a par on the final hole.

At one time, Price would make a mistake like that. At one time Price would

1994 WORLD CUP SOCCER

More good soccer than bad

■ OK, the final wasn't great, but the 1994 World Cup had its moments.

By Barry Wilner
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — The best team won, just as it did four years ago.

Otherwise, the 1994 World Cup was separated by light years from its 1990 predecessor.

Forget that this year's tournament was a smashing financial success and a monthlong soccer party that the United States not only was invited to, but hosted as well. And enjoyed, from Game 1 to Game 52 — and beyond, into a shootout.

Remember, instead, how good the soccer was in all nine venues. Sure, the final was something of a letdown, being decided by penalty kicks after a relatively disappointing game between two powerhouses. Still, it had its moments, and nearly every other match did, too. More good moments than bad, by far.

"We must applaud FIFA for finding ways to make the soccer more entertaining, more exciting," said Pele, the sport's goodwill ambassador and its greatest player, who watched Brazil take home the championship for the first time since he led that nation to its third title in 1970. "After Italia '90, FIFA understood changes must be made. Those changes were made, and the tournament in the U.S. was a great success."

There was more scoring, more creativity, tighter refereeing — at least through the quarterfinals — and tremendous enthusiasm from a public that rarely embraced the sport in the past.

Brazil clearly was the most skilled squad in the 24-team field. It was undefeated in seven games, showing resourcefulness, patience and a staunch defense. Plus, of course, that intricate short-passing attack that sometimes appeared like a maze. Opponents got lost in that maze, and Romario or Bebeto sneaked through for memorable goals. And equally memorable celebrations such as the "rock the cradle" number against the Netherlands.

"It was a well-earned title, as Brazil was indeed the best team in the tournament," Bebeto said. "Other teams changed when they played us. Italy is the proof of that."

Italy also was the proof of what perseverance can do for a team. Nearly eliminated in the first round, the last of 16 teams to advance, the Italians were on the verge of a second-round sendoff, too. Then their star, 1993 player of the year Roberto Baggio, awoke with two late goals against Nigeria. He got another against Spain, in the final moments. And two more against Bulgaria.

"He has been through some very difficult times," teammate Roberto Donadoni said. "Roberto has been unfairly blamed for our struggles, but he has been injured and he has been very well marked. But when we were in our moment of need, he was there to save us."

Italy was as worthy of a fourth World Cup crown as the Brazilians who won the shootout. The Italians could go home proud and respected.

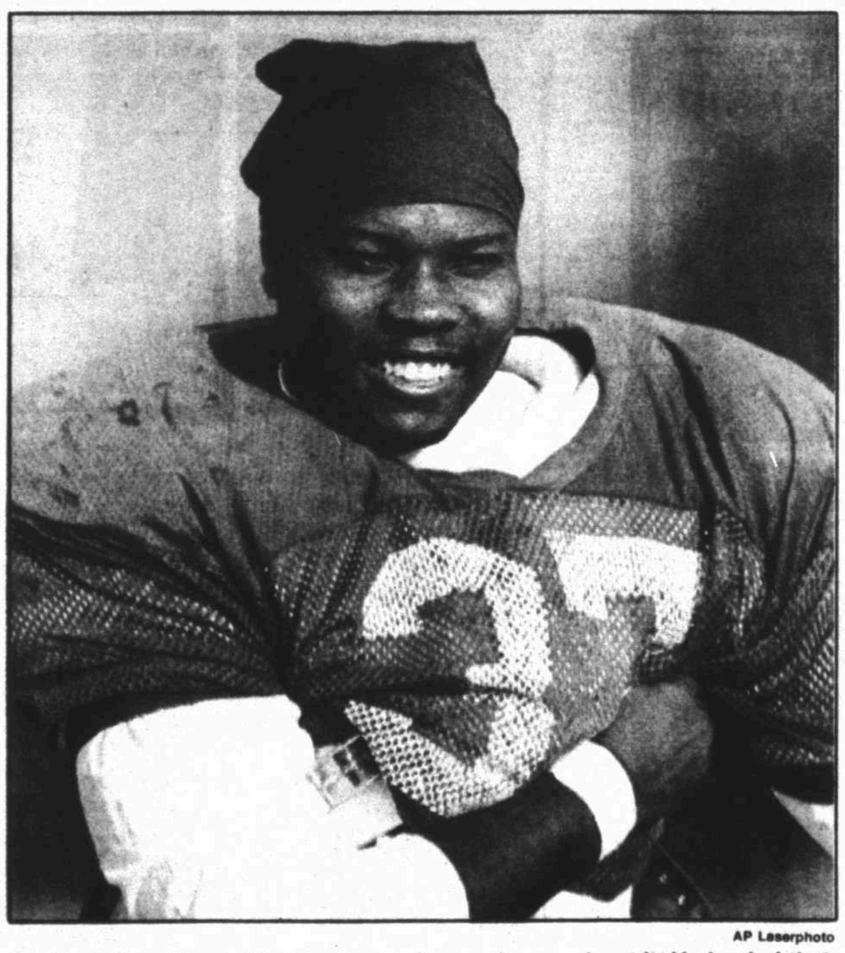

Oddly, there were other teams that could call their stays in the United States a success.

Dallas safety James Washington makes no bones about it. He is glad that Jimmy Johnson is no longer coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

Washington is happy Johnson isn't in Dallas

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — James Washington, who made the defensive plays that killed Buffalo in the Super Bowl, isn't unhappy that the Jimmy Johnson era with the Dallas Cowboys is over.

The outspoken strong safety said that while Johnson served his purpose, it's much better that he doesn't have control of the team anymore.

"He was a great coach for a young team, but we had guys leaving the team who didn't want to play for him," said Washington, second in Super Bowl MVP balloting behind Emmitt Smith.

Washington likes what he sees and hears from new coach Barry Switzer.

"Barry tells you where you stand," Washington said. "Barry knows what he can do and he doesn't have to intimidate players or belittle them for control. Jimmy had to be in control. He had to have that element of fear going."

Washington feels Johnson was always trying to get rid of him.

"We were not the best of friends. He was a good coach, but Barry can relate to the players and the players can be themselves," Washington said.

"If you win two Super Bowls in a row somebody has got to ease up. Barry has jumped on our bandwagon."

Washington wouldn't have started the Super Bowl game if the Bills hadn't been in the no-huddle, run-and-shoot offense.

Regular starting strong side safety Darren Woodson was moved to linebacker in the Cowboys nickel defense.

Washington forced a Thurman Thomas fumble that led to a field goal. Then he picked up a Thomas fumble and ran 46 yards for a touchdown to tie the game at 13. Dallas then rolled over the disheartened Bills 30-13 as Washington intercepted a pass that led to a touchdown. He also had 10 tackles.

"Maybe this year I'll at least have a shot at the Pro Bowl," Washington said. "Jimmy was trying to phase me out and I didn't start last year. I had a personality conflict with Jimmy. With him you make one bad play and you're on the bench. I think I proved in the Super Bowl what I can do.

"Now I want another Super Bowl and maybe I can win MVP this time. I'd really like to go to the Pro Bowl."

Washington will move into a safety spot vacated by Thomas Everett, who took the free agent road to Tampa Bay.

"I feel more relaxed around Barry," Washington said. "He's a great motivator. I think he'll turn things up around here."

ANGELS: Finish 3-7 homestand

(From 1C)

■ Chris Smith mishandled a ground ball in the fourth that scored a run. Smith made amends later in the frame with a run (or two) saving stab.

Keling did get his best outing in some time, allowing only two earned runs in seven innings. He has not won a game since June 21, but seemed to regain the form Monday that got him to the Double A all-star game this season.

The Captains (14-14) move to a tie for second with Arkansas in the East.

"Coming up with a couple of close ones like that really pulls us up after El Paso (losing 4-of-5 to the Diablos) when we didn't seem like we could do anything right," said Shreveport second baseman Chris Wimmer. Wimmer's squeeze play tied the score in the eighth.

"I really wasn't expecting it when I came up to bat," he said of the play that came off reliever Julian Heredia's first pitch. "When I saw the third base coach give the sign I was kind of glad ... I'm a pretty good bunter."

PRICE: Two holes play key

(From 1C)

not be able to make the big shot down the stretch.

No more.

Consider this: Price, 37, had won three times this year on the PGA Tour before winning the British Open on Sunday.

He won four tour events in 1993, including three in a row. He won two in 1992, including the PGA Championship.

That's 10 tournament victories in 2½ years, including two majors.

"It was something I really wanted to do so badly," Price said about winning the British Open.

And it was not something that came easily. Twice before he had a chance to win the British Open, finishing second to Tom Watson in 1982 and Seve Ballesteros in 1988.

"I think if I had been in this same situation when I was 25 I would not have won," Price said.

The save on 14 was simply brilliant.

Price hit his second shot over the green and was chipping from trampled-down grass to a tight pin position on a green sloping away from him.

His gorgeous bump-and-run shot gave him a gimme for a par.

"I hit a good running 7-iron," he said.

It was a shot that he would not have been able to make when he was runner-up in 1982, or even when he finished second in 1988.

"I cannot tell you how much hard work I have put in and how much I wanted this day to happen," Price said. "The golfing gods certainly shone down on me today."

Bichette tops

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Midland Angel Dante Bichette of the Colorado Rockies and Wally Joyner of the Kansas City Royals were named players of the week in their leagues on Monday.

Bichette won the NL award after he hit .632 last week with two doubles and two homers, including a grand slam.

Also nominated were Tony Gwynn and Andy Benes of San Diego, Bret Boone of Cincinnati, Jose Oliva of Atlanta, Jim Eisenreich of Philadelphia and Barry Bonds of San Francisco.

Joyner was named AL player after reaching base in 10 straight plate appearances, one short of the club record, and having his first five-hit game on Saturday.

Also considered were Carlos Baerga of Cleveland, Wade Boggs of New York, and Rafael Palmeiro and Chris Sabo of Baltimore.

Astros' comeback biggest ever in NL

Associated Press ■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros matched the biggest comeback in NL history, rallying from an 11-run deficit to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 15-12 Monday night.

Kevin Bass, Andujar Cedeno, Mike Felder and Ken Caminiti each drove in two runs during an 11-run sixth inning that put Houston ahead 15-11.

Houston trailed 11-0 after three innings. The Philadelphia Phillies overcame a 12-1 deficit to beat Chicago 18-16 on April 17, 1976, and the St. Louis Cardinals rallied from an 11-0 deficit to beat New York 14-12 on June 15, 1952.

The major league record for the biggest comeback is 12 runs, done twice in the AL. The Philadelphia Athletics rallied from 14-12 to beat Cleveland 17-15 on June 15, 1925, and Detroit came back from 13-1 to defeat Chicago 16-15 on June 18, 1911.

The Astros' rally against four St. Louis pitchers came following Friday night's loss in Pittsburgh in which they blew an 8-0 lead and lost 11-8.

Dodgers 7, Mets 6

NEW YORK — Tim Wallach drove in six runs and Eric Karros' two-out single in the 10th inning gave Los Angeles a victory over New York.

With two outs in the 10th, Mike Piazza reached on a infield single against Mauro Gozzo (2-4). Wallach, who had a three-run homer and a three-run double, was intentionally walked after the count went to 1-1.

Karros then singled to left, scoring pinch-runner Delino DeShields.

Todd Worrell (5-4), who allowed the Mets to tie the game with three runs in the ninth, got the win. Jim Gott pitched the 10th for his second save.

The Dodgers blew their 17th of 35 save opportunities when the Mets rallied in the ninth. Worrell has blown six of 14 chances.

Reds 5, Marlins 3

CINCINNATI — Kevin Mitchell and Reggie Sanders hit consecutive homers off Charlie Hough in the sixth inning, powering Cincinnati over Florida.

The solo homers broke open a tie game and sent Florida to its fourth straight loss.

Pete Schourek (5-1) got the win despite blowing a two-run lead, giving up two homers and nearly giving up a grand slam to Gary Sheffield in the fifth. The left-hander allowed five hits over seven innings, and Johnny Ruffin got the last six outs for his first save.

Braves 3, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Kent Mercker pitched a two-hitter and rookie Mike Kelly hit his first major league homer and doubled, sending Atlanta past Pittsburgh.

Mercker (8-2) shook off a two-run Pirates second inning to retire the final 18 hitters he faced for his fifth victory in his last six starts. He struck out seven and walked two.

Fred McGriff homered again in Pittsburgh, just as he did in the All-Star game, as the Braves finally figured out how to win in Pittsburgh. The Braves started the season 1-7 against the Pirates and were swept in a three-game series in Three Rivers Stadium on April 29-May 1 — the only sweep of Atlanta in nearly 13 months.

Cubs 6, Rockies 3

DENVER — Jim Bullinger pitched a five-hitter and drove in three runs, leading Chicago over Colorado.

Bullinger (4-2) doubled home two runs in the second inning and had a fourth-inning RBI single. The right-hander struck out two and walked two in snapping the Rockies' four-game winning streak. It was Bullinger's first complete game victory since a 3-1 win over San Francisco on Aug. 30, 1992.

Mike Harkey (1-6) walked four and gave up five runs and four hits in only four innings against his former teammates.

Chicago scored an unearned run in the first. Jose Hernandez singled, stole second and moved to third on catcher Danny Sheaffer's throwing error. He scored on Mark Grace's groundout to second.

The Rockies tied it in the bottom of the first when Walt Weiss singled to bring in Eric Young, who doubled.

Expos 9, Padres 2

MONTREAL — Montreal beat San Diego for the 10th straight time this season, getting 15 hits.

Marquis Grissom had two hits and scored twice for the Expos, who have beaten the Padres 11 straight times dating back to last season. The Expos have outscored the Padres 63-17 this season.

The win helped the Expos snap a four-game losing streak and ran their home winning streak to 10 straight over San Diego since July 19, 1992.

Kirk Rueter (5-2) allowed two runs and six hits in five-plus innings. The left-hander struck out one and walked one for his third win over San Diego this season. Tim Scott pitched four innings — his longest career outing — for his first save.

Tony Gwynn went 1-for-3 with a homer for the Padres.

Eleven hits, three Padres errors and a balk by Bill Krueger (1-2) enabled the Expos to take an 8-1 lead after four innings.

Giants 7, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Barry Bonds hit his fifth homer in four games and Darryl Strawberry delivered another big hit before being injured as San Francisco won its ninth in a row.

The Giants are 9-0 since Strawberry joined them. He lined a two-run single off the right-field wall in the first inning, then left the game after the top of the second with a tight left hamstring.

Strawberry is batting .367 (11-for-30) with nine RBIs since being promoted from the minors July 7. The Giants said the injury to their right fielder did not appear serious, and he was listed as day-to-day.

Canseco rallies Rangers

Associated Press ■ AL Roundup

CLEVELAND — Jose Canseco doubled home the go-ahead run with two outs in the ninth inning Monday night to lead the Texas Rangers to a 6-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians, who may soon be without Albert Belle.

The Indians, coming off a 5-5 road trip, lost for the fifth time in their last 29 home games. The loss came hours after they learned that All-Star slugger Belle had been found guilty of using a corked bat during a weekend series in Chicago.

Belle appealed the 10-day suspension and will keep playing until his case is heard by American League president Bobby Brown on July 29. He went 1-for-4 Monday and is 3-for-16 since his bat was confiscated Friday night. Belle lined a double to left in the fifth inning.

Texas blew an early 3-0 lead but came back to tie it 5-5 in the seventh on a two-run single by Ivan Rodriguez off reliever Jose Mesa (7-5).

In the ninth, Mesa yielded a one-out double by Jeff Frye before Canseco hit his two-out double off the bullpen fence in dead center.

Darren Oliver (3-0) pitched two perfect innings, striking out three. Tom Henke got the last three outs for his 11th save.

The Rangers scored three off Jason Grimsley in the second on an RBI double by Manuel Lee and David Hulse's two-run single.

The Indians scored twice in the second on a wild pitch by Tim Leary and a double by Paul Sorrento, and they tied it at 3 on Carlos Baerga's 14th home run in the third. Baerga has hit in 15 straight games.

Cleveland finished Leary in the fourth, taking a 5-3 lead on Sandy Alomar's RBI single and a run-scoring forceout by Kenny Lofton.

Royals 2, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — Jose Lind homered for the first time in three years and emergency starter Chris Haney baffled the Brewers for seven innings as Kansas City shut out Milwaukee.

The Brewers were unable to solve Haney, a left-hander called up from Triple-A Omaha for a spot start because the Royals were playing their sixth game in five nights since the All-Star break.

Haney (2-2), who had a 9.70 ERA in five starts for Kansas City before being demoted May 11, allowed five hits and struck out five. Stan Belinda pitched a perfect eighth and Jeff Montgomery got the last three outs for his 18th save.

Milwaukee starter Angel Miranda (1-2) gave up just four hits and struck out eight in seven innings, but he balked home Brian McRae in the fourth, giving Kansas City a 1-0 lead, and was relieved after surrendering a leadoff homer to Lind in the eighth.

Lind's shot bounced off the left-field foul pole for his first homer since June 16, 1991, when he homered against the Chicago Cubs while playing for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

It was just his ninth homer in 979 major league games spanning eight seasons and his first in the American League.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 4

TORONTO — Former Midland Cub Joe Carter reached 20 homers for the ninth straight season and drove in four runs, leading Toronto past Minnesota.

It was the eighth straight road loss for the Twins, who have lost 14 of their last 21 overall.

Carter hit his 20th homer of the season in the first inning, a three-run shot, and added a run-scoring single in the sixth. He has nine RBIs in his last three home games and 13 RBIs in 10 games against the Twins this year.

Al Leiter (4-5) scattered four hits over six innings for his first win since May 21st. He gave up two runs, one earned, and struck out six.

Darren Hall pitched the ninth for his 10th save.

The Blue Jays went up 4-0 in the first against Eddie Guardado (0-2). Roberto Alomar beat out an infield single, Paul Molitor walked and Carter sent a 1-2 pitch over the wall in left-center. Darnell Coles followed with a triple and scored on Ed Sprague's single.

Domingo Cedeno, Alomar and Molitor hit three consecutive singles in the fourth to extend the lead to 5-0.

Puckett scored on a passed ball in the sixth for Minnesota's first run. He led off the eighth with his 15th homer and AL-leading 86th RBI, one more than Carter's total.

Shane Mack went 4-for-4 for the Twins, who have been outscored 61-27 on their road losing streak.

Alomar went 3-for-5, including an RBI single in the sixth that made the score 6-2.

White Sox 10, Tigers 9

CHICAGO — Shortstop Alan Trammell's throwing error in the 13th inning gave Chicago a victory over Detroit.

Frank Thomas hit a grand slam, Julio Franco homered twice and Robin Ventura also connected as the White Sox overcame a 9-3 lead.

Cecil Fielder homered twice and Kirk Gibson also homered for the Tigers.

Joey Cora led off the Chicago 13th with a walk from Storm Davis (0-3). Tim Raines sacrificed and Thomas was intentionally walked.

Franco hit a hard grounder to Fielder at first base, and he threw to second for a forceout. But Trammell's return throw sailed over the head of Davis, covering first base, allowing Cora to score.

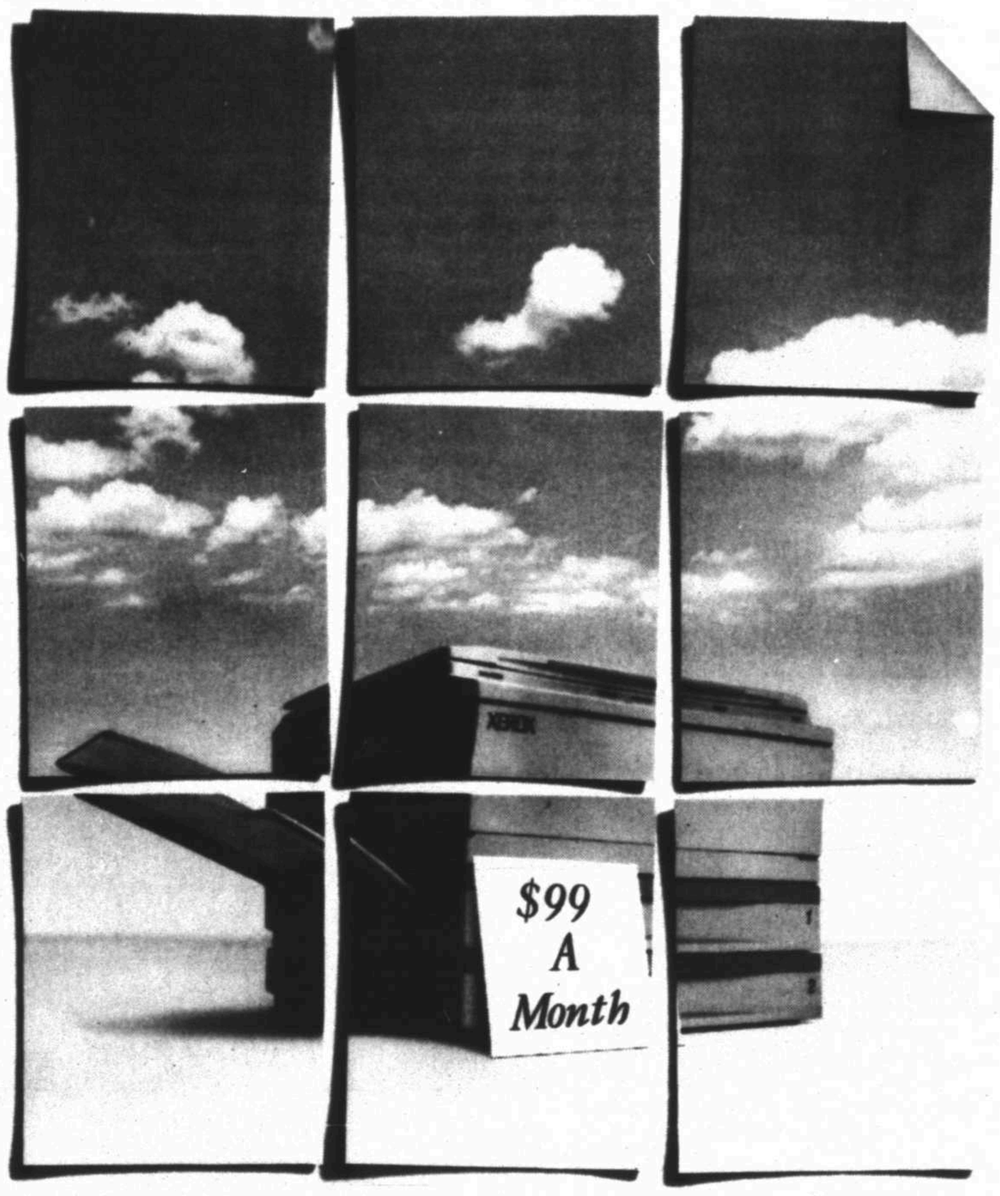

Kirk McCaskill (1-2) pitched five innings of one-hit relief for the win. It was the White Sox' 15th victory in their last 18 games, and moved them past Cleveland for the AL Central lead.

Thomas' grand slam on the first pitch from reliever Joe Boever tied the game at 9 in the seventh. Thomas' third career slam was his 34th homer of the season.

Detroit had built a 9-3 lead in the sixth behind the homers by Fielder and Gibson. Franco and Ventura hit consecutive shots in the sixth off Mike Gardiner.

CUP: Tournament has some major surprises

(From 1C)

Certainly, the Swedes and Bulgarians had to feel that way. Sweden had its best showing since losing to Brazil in the 1958 final. Bulgaria, 0-10-6 coming in, had its best World Cup ever.

Bulgaria and Romania, which fell in a quarterfinals penalty kick shootout against Sweden, stamped the Balkans as a budding power base.

The host Americans should be satisfied, too. They got the United States past the first round for the first time in 54 years. They got fans everywhere involved. Maybe they established a foothold for the sport on a professional level. Finally.

Of course, there also were the major disappointments.

Colombia, a pre-tournament favorite, went out in the first round, beaten by Romania and the United States. One of the Colombian stars, Andres Escobar, was shot to death back in Medellin, apparently for scoring an own goal against the Americans.

Argentina appeared destined for great things until superstar Diego Maradona tested positive for stimulants and was banished. His teammates quickly followed him out of the event.

Defending champion Germany, a finalist in the last three World Cups, was eliminated in the quarterfinals.

Belgium, a top seed, got to the second round and hastily disappeared. Russia got a record five goals in one game from Oleg Salenko, yet went three-and-out.

Cameroon, the darling of the 1990 tournament, was racked by dissension and dispatched in the first round.

At least the winners and losers generally were entertaining, willing to attack and anxious to present the best side of soccer. America seemed to notice.

Kidd may turn down Mavs

DALLAS (AP) — Jason Kidd, the first-round draft pick of the Dallas Mavericks, probably won't accept the team's offer to insure him for $36 million if he attends mini-camp.

"We want to run this by Jason's family, but Jason asked me what my thoughts were, and I told him I didn't think it was acceptable," said Kidd's agent, Aaron Goodwin. "It's a camp Jason truly wanted to be a part of, but I don't think he'll be there."

Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju made the offer Monday. He arrived at the $36 million insurance figure by taking the team's largest salary cap slot ($2.2 million) and extending it over eight years at the maximum increase of 30 percent.

Baseball players reject cap proposal

More Sports/8C

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball players rejected the owners' salary cap proposal Monday, moving the sides closer to a confrontation that could interrupt the season.

During a four-hour bargaining session, union head Donald Fehr asked owners to return the threshold for salary arbitration to two years instead of three and to raise the minimum salary from $109,000 to between $175,000 and $200,000.

Fehr said the union believed management's proposal would transfer at least $1.5 billion from players to owners if baseball's revenues rise at an average of 7 percent per year. He said the very concept of a cap was difficult for players to consider.

"We don't think there's any reason to go down that route," Fehr said.

While the parties intend to meet again Wednesday, the salary cap dispute is threatening to cause to sport's eighth work stoppage in 22 years. Fehr said the union's executive board will meet again by July 31, either in person or by telephone, and will again consider whether to set a strike date.

"When there are other reasonable options, that's the one you consider last," Fehr said. "But if need be, that's the one you act on."

Owners say they need a salary cap for small-market clubs to remain competitive and would guarantee players $1 billion over seven years if players agree to the cap. Management negotiator Richard Ravitch said players were completely ignoring owners' concerns.

"I was extremely disappointed that we did not receive a proposal that was responsive to the problems in the game we are trying to address," Ravitch said.

Owners have tied changing their internal revenue sharing to players agreeing to a salary cap. Fehr has called a cap un-American.

"If it's so un-American, how come football and basketball have it," Ravitch said.

Fehr criticized the NBA's salary cap and right-of-first-refusal system, saying it has destroyed free agency and led to just four teams winning the championship from 1982-93.

In the last five years, according to the baseball union, 290 NBA contracts were negotiated with right-of-first refusal players, and just two players signed with new teams. Fehr said eight saw offers matched and 280 received no offers.

As part of baseball owners' salary-cap plan, salary arbitration would be abolished and players with between four and six years of major league service would have right-of-first refusal free agency.

"Half the teams are out of the free-agent market every year because they're over the salary cap," Fehr said.

Fehr noted that 23 of 26 clubs have won division titles in the past 15 years, 19 have won pennants and 12 have won the World Series and says there are no problems.

Ravitch says the growing disparity in payrolls is hurting the game and proposed a payroll limit of 84-110 percent of the average. Fehr countered that the disparity is decreasing, going from a 37-188 percent range in 1979 to 44-149 percent this season.

"The proposal we received on June 14 ... attempts to put an arbitrary limit on player salaries, what we think will be substantially below the fair-market value of the players involved," Fehr said. "Why owners think players would be interested in that kind of system is beyond us."

Senior Leaguers Lubbock bound

Senior League District 3 champion Midland Eastern will travel to Lubbock Thursday for the opening round of the eight-team Senior League Sections Tournament, which will be played at Lowry Field.

Eastern defeated Odessa Sherwood 12-7 Saturday for the District 3 title to earn the right to advance. Eastern will play at 2:30 p.m. in Lubbock on Thursday against the District 7 champion, which has yet to be decided.

Should Eastern win Thursday, they will advance to the 5:30 p.m. winner's bracket game on Friday. The tournament concludes next Tuesday. The section winner advances to the state tournament in Waco.

Midland Eastern Team Members: Joel Bermea, John Butler, Michael Carrasco, Russell Dunlavy, Lee Dunn, Eric Eschberger, Hector Morales, Ross Nobles, Michael Otho, Jason Rogers, Joey Schlafer, Clyde Tedrick and Clay Zachery. Manager: Joe Nobles. Coach: Sam Carrasco.

Porter, 13, nails par-4 hole-in-one

Thirteen-year-old C.W. Porter may play golf for decades to come, but he will certainly never duplicate his feat at Greeen Tree Country Club Saturday. Porter, shooting from the ladies red tee, fired a hole-in-one from 277 yards out on the par-4 No. 7 North hole.

Porter made the double eagle using a driver. It was witnessed by Christopher Teer.

Smith, 13, aces

Brandon Smith, 13, who just started playing golf a couple of months ago, had a hole-in-one Monday at the 6-hole course at Western Gas Resources near Midkiff.

His ace came on the 160-yard, No. 4 hole with a 6-iron. He was playing with Cole Smith, Cade Smith, Craig Smith, Darrell Smith, Tony Salazar and Brian Cook.

Sensenbach aces

See Sensenbach shot a hole-in-one last week at the Hogan Park golf course on the No. 26, 110-yard hole. She used a 6-iron and was witnessed by Teresa Deso, Dottee Turk and Leslie Larson.

Innerarity wins Alamo doubles

SAN ANTONIO — Midland's Sarah Innerarity teamed with Austin's Jessica Heggen to win the Alamo City Open Tennis Tournament's girls 18 doubles title here Monday.

Innerarity and Heggen defeated Heather McDonald and Amy Houston of Kerrville in the finals, 6-3, 6-1.

Austin captures consolation title

Midland's Conner Austin recently played in the 1994 Austin AuqaFest Junior Open tennis tournament, winning consolation honors in the Championship 16 Singles.

Austin defeated Chris Mihm of Houston, 6-2, 6-7, 6-2, in the consolation finals.

Indurain holds Tour lead after mountain scare

CARPENTRAS, France (AP) — Miguel Indurain, on course for his fourth straight Tour de France title, had his biggest scare of the race Monday, coming dangerously close to the edge of a mountain road before recovering.

Heading down the mountain at about 68 mph, Indurain misjudged a curve and came within three feet of the edge. He had to put his foot down to gain control of his bike.

He recovered and eventually finished ninth in the 16th stage while holding the overall lead by nearly eight minutes.

Eros Poli of Italy won the stage, pulling away with 105 miles left in the course from Montpellier to Carpentras and building more than a 24-minute lead over the main pack that included Indurain.

The leaders were not concerned about Poli. He was more than 1 hour, 22 minutes behind, near the bottom of the overall standings, before the stage.

Police said a spectator waiting on Mont Ventoux for the racers to pass by was killed by lightning. He was identified as Christophe Paul.

Prices slump

Crude oil futures sank on the New York Mercantile Exchange, extending Friday's losses, on reports that a Nigerian oil workers strike is having no effect on crude exports.

West Texas Intermediate for August delivery fell 38 cents to $19.51 a barrel.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 50 cents to $18 a barrel.

August natural gas fell 0.03 cent to $1.945 per 1,000 cubic feet.

T-bills fall

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest level in three weeks.

The Treasury Department sold $12.4 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.31 percent, down from 4.50 percent last week. Another $12.4 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.71 percent, down from 4.94 percent.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 4.20 percent on June 27, and the six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 4.60 percent the same day.

Dollar lower

NEW YORK — The dollar ended slightly higher Monday against the Japanese yen but drifted lower against most other major currencies in the absense of any market-moving news.

On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $385.70 a troy ounce, down 70 cents from late Friday.

In late New York trading the dollar was quoted at 98.35 yen, up from 97.85 yen late Friday.

The dollar weakened slightly against the German mark. It closed in New York at 1.5465 marks, down from 1.5540 marks.

There was little change in trading against the British pound. Sterling fetched $1.5615 in New York, unchanged from late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Friday, included: 1.3040 Swiss francs, down from 1.3080; 5.3040 French francs, down from 5.3315; 1,550 Italian lire, unchanged; and 1.3768 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3773.

Silver prices were mixed. On the New York Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $5.244 a troy ounce, down from $5.245 late Friday.

Stocks inch up

NEW YORK — The stock market drifted higher in thin volume on Monday as some wary investors looked for encouragement to lower interest rates, a steady dollar and good corporate earnings reports.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.62 points to 3,755.43.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 10 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to a light 227.46 million shares, down from 273.27 million in the previous session.

The Standard & Poors index of 500 stocks rose 1.06 to 455.22, while the NYSE's composite index rose 0.38 to 251.44. The Nasdaq index, meanwhile, rose 1.26 to 722.62 and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.04 to 432.59.

5-day mortgage cutting's in sight

By Bill Virgin
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — Home buyers accustomed to the agonizing 30- to 45-day crawl of a mortgage application are in for a shock — the five-day mortgage is coming.

It might even be cheaper than its slower-footed version.

The chairman of Washington state's biggest home lender says he wants to hit the five-day goal — from filling out the forms to closing the purchase — by next year. Kerry Killinger, chief executive of Washington Mutual Savings Bank, also says the industry needs to cut the cost of originating a mortgage by 25 percent over the next three years.

"It's a terribly inefficient system the way it's handled today," Killinger says. "It has been very paper-intensive and time-intensive."

Maybe not any more. John Fairchild, president of Phoenix Mortgage & Investment Inc., said his company is already approving files subject to credit approval in five days. For customers who come to the office, "we're experimenting with approving a loan while you wait, subject to appraisal."

Home buyers may say they hate the way mortgage applications drag on interminably. But are they really prepared for a mortgage that's ready to close in a week?

"The most important thing to the buyer is not that it's closed in five days, but that it could be, so they can sleep at night," Fairchild said.

"The reality is people will move when it's right for them to move," adds Lennox Scott, president of John L. Scott Real Estate. "What's exciting is the loan process being shortened creates great customer service. The buyer and seller know it's a done deal. And the agent doesn't have to track that loan (as long)."

"There's no reason why a mortgage has to be any more complicated than a car loan," says Robert Delf, president of Interlinq Software Corp., a Kirkland, Wash., writer of computer programs for home lenders.

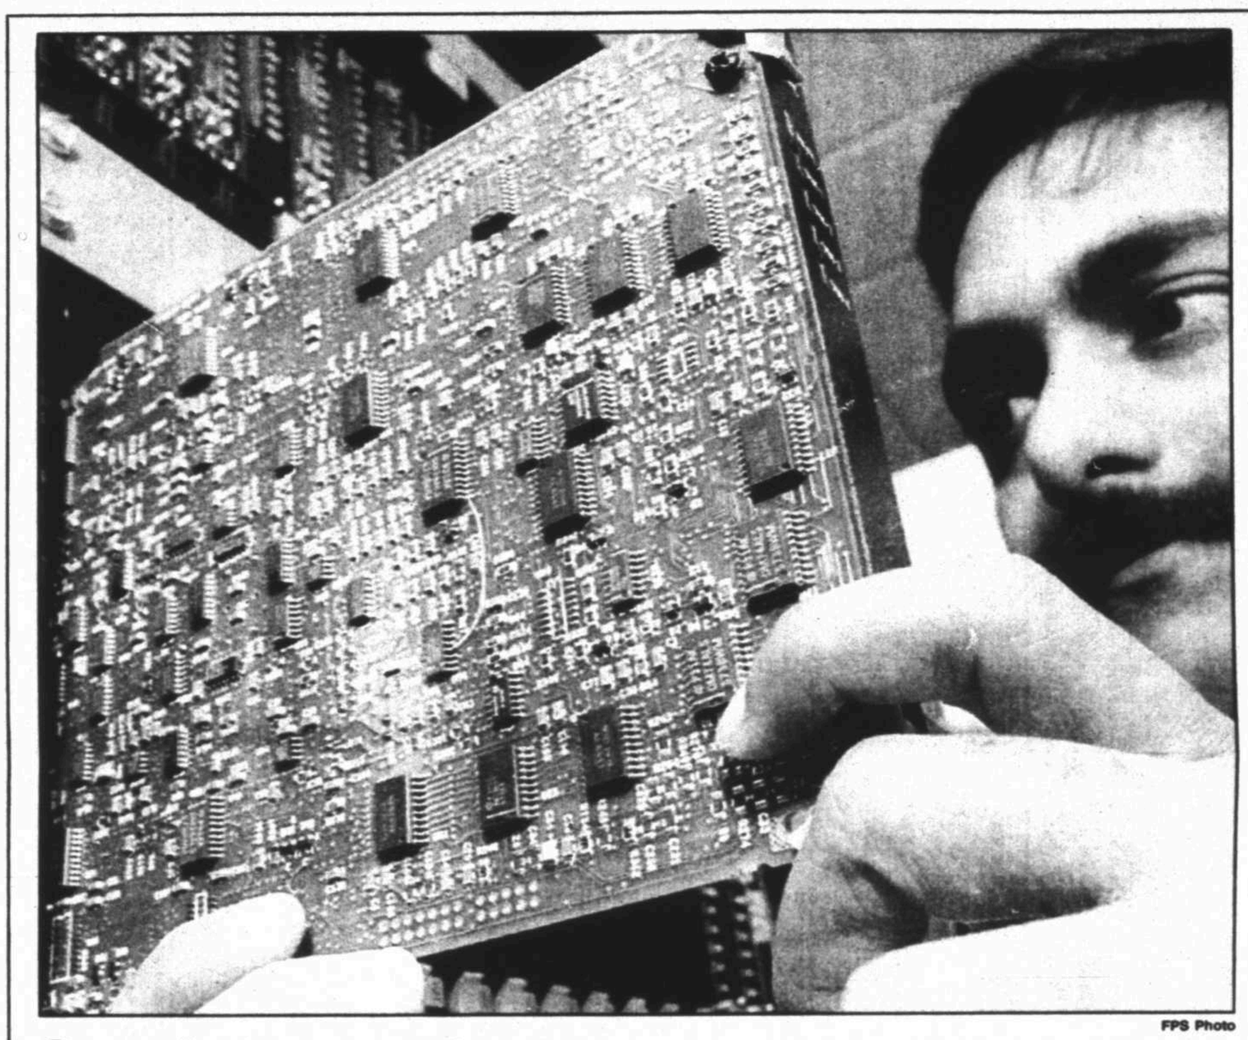

The blame for the long time mortgages take gets spread around. Some say it's because that's the way it's always been done. "There's kind of an inertia in the industry, that I have to have a big pile of paper before I can close a loan," Fairchild said.

Others blame the requirements of the secondary markets — those that buy mortgages as an investment and want those loans to conform to certain standards. And still others say the technology hasn't been available to make things go faster.

Now it is. Killinger says new software allows a loan officer to take an applicant's information and enter it into the computer, then order appraisal, title insurance and credit reports electronically. If anyone else in the bank needs to review the file, he or she can do so electronically instead of waiting for a folder stuffed with paper to be delivered. The closing documents can be sent by telephone to any office with a laser printer. Appraisers have been given laptop computers to do their reports on-site.

"It reduces the costs, the error rate and the passing of files," Killinger said.

The up-front cost and the complexity of getting a mortgage can be intimidating to would-be home buyers, says Mike Williams, senior vice president of customer application and technology integration at the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae). "Those barriers are driven by the way the process works today," he said. Fannie Mae sees the software it is offering to lenders as a way to remove those barriers.

Speeds communications

Engineer Shishir Bommireddi examines the circuit board of a V.34 compliant modem before testing at U.S. Robotics in Skokie, Ill. The new international standard, which permits dial-up communications between computers at speeds up to 28,800 bits per second, is expected to be approved within weeks.

Microsoft deal could stir new industry rivalry

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Everyone noticed when the Justice Department last wiped out a major monopoly because it changed the monthly phone bill.

The department's move this weekend to loosen Microsoft Corp.'s hold on an important part of the software industry won't affect every American the way the breakup of AT&T did a decade ago.

But the agreement could stir competition in the area of personal computer operating systems that Microsoft dominates with its MS-DOS and Windows.

That may hurt the company's profits, but won't diminish its position as standard-bearer for the world-leading U.S. software industry.

"I don't think the particular things they singled out are what has led to Microsoft's success," Esther Dyson, president of EDventure Holdings, a New York computer consulting firm, said Sunday. "And so stopping them isn't going to lead to a whole lot of difference in their success."

Faced with the prospect of government lawsuits in the United States and Europe, Microsoft agreed to change the way it sells operating systems to PC makers. An operating system is a program that controls the basic functions of a computer, like opening files.

Since 1988, Microsoft offered the best prices to PC makers who paid a royalty on every computer they made, even those using a different operating system.

The practice would be like Goodyear forcing General Motors to pay it for every vehicle produced, including those that have Michelin's tires.

The arrangement gave PC manufacturers little incentive to sell other operating systems since they had to pay both Microsoft and the other software firm.

Ann Stephens, president of PC Data in Reston, Va., said ending the practice "puts everything on an even playing field. I think Microsoft will be doing fine in that environment."

Assistant Attorney General Anne Bingaman, who leads the Justice Department's antitrust division, noted Microsoft began requiring per machine contracts after its products became the industry standard.

Pressures grow at Disney as Eisner recovers from surgery

HOLLYWOOD (NYT) — The announcement late Saturday that Michael Eisner, the chairman of Walt Disney Co., had undergone emergency quadruple heart bypass surgery stunned Hollywood and the financial community, and raised immediate questions about the management of one of the world's most successful — and, up to now, stable — entertainment companies.

Eisner, 52, underwent the three-hour surgery at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles earlier Saturday.

His surgeon, Dr. Alfredo Trento, said, "The operation was a normal bypass procedure without any complications."

Trento said he expected Eisner to leave the hospital in several days. Disney officials said Eisner was expected to return to work in several weeks.

Eisner's illness came at an especially troubled time in terms of the company's management, lawyers, financial experts and rival studio executives said Sunday morning.

The death of Frank Wells, the president of the company and Eisner's closest associate, in a helicopter crash on April 3, left a major void that has not been filled.

Studio executives said that Eisner had especially felt the loss of Wells in recent weeks as he confronted decisions alone about whether to enter negotiations to buy — or have a partnership with — CBS Inc.

Adding to the stressful mood at Disney, the company has been locked in a highly public conflict with some prominent historians over plans to develop a park, called Disney America.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

IRA interest could be seen as early withdrawal

By Bill Doyle

Q: I plan to retire on August 1 at age 56. I will take a small lump sum retirement payment, which I would like to put into a rollover individual retirement account by investing it in a U.S. Treasury note for five and a half years at 6¾ percent interest.

Doyle

However, I have been informed by the bank that the interest would not be added back to my principal. The bank people told me that I could put the interest I get into a savings account.

Does that sound OK? If so, will I have to pay income tax on that interest, since it is interest from my IRA?

A: It's a cockamamie plan, if ever I heard one.

To begin with, there is no way of accurately predicting the yield on Treasury notes due to mature in February 2000. It might be 6¾ percent. It might be higher or lower. As I pound this through the word processor, it's 7 percent.

You most certainly will have to pay tax on that interest — unless you keep it in your IRA. Otherwise, it will be counted as an IRA withdrawal, on which you will be hit with regular income tax plus a 10 percent penalty tax.

The penalty comes into play because you will be under age 59½. Remember that the R in IRA stands for "Retirement." Withdrawals before normal retirement age are penalized by the Internal Revenue Service.

Q: Although I have bought some U.S. Treasury securities (bonds, notes and bills) from my local bank and have purchased some others via the "Treasury Direct" system through the Federal Reserve, I really do not understand how it all works.

When I buy Treasury securities through my commercial bank, where is the record of my purchase kept, besides at that bank?

A: New issues of Treasury securities come only in "book-entry" form, meaning no certificates are printed; ownership is recorded on computers; interest payments are made by wire to bank accounts designated owners of the Treasury securities.

You can buy new issues of Treasury bonds, notes and/or bills through your own Treasury Direct account, which you can establish through any of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks and 25 branches around the country. Your local bank can provide the address and phone number of the nearest Fed bank or branch.

Or, you can make your purchases through your local bank or brokerage firm and buy either new Treasury issues or previously issued bonds, bills and notes.

All 12 Fed banks print literature describing book-entry Treasury securities and the Treasury Direct system. The best I have seen is titled "Buying Treasury Securities at Federal Reserve Banks." It's available at $4.50 per copy from the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Public Services Department, P.O. Box 27622, Richmond, VA 23261.

Q: Please clear up this troubling point, which is disrupting our weekly bridge games. I know, from reading your column, that most municipal bond interest is free from income tax. And you have described these "munis" as "debt obligations issued by states and their political subdivisions."

That's clear enough to me. But two women in our group claim their accountants insist that they pay state income tax on interest from municipal bonds. Is there any possibility those CPAs are correct?

A: Yes. Some states levy state income tax on interest received from municipal bonds issued in other states. Although "tax-free" has long been a handy description to hang on munis, that is not always an all-inclusive term.

The tax-free status of municipal bonds generally refers to the fact that the interest they pay is not subject to federal income tax. But even that is threatened.

Watch out! Williams' wife pregnant again

■ Oilers' Camp

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The closest thing to a controversy as the Houston Oilers opened training camp Monday was David Williams' announcement that his wife Debi is pregnant again.

Williams, the starting right tackle, skipped a game last season to be with Debi for the birth of their first child. The Oilers punished him for being absent, setting off a nationwide uproar that was just one of many distractions Houston endured last season.

There should be no Babygate this season. The Williams' second child isn't expected until February, after the season is over.

But would you do it the same way again, David, if the situation arose?

"Definitely, I wouldn't miss that for anything," Williams said.

Maternity issues aside, the Oilers opened training camp at Trinity University with an unusual calm that was a stark contrast to how last season unfolded.

They had Babygate, Buddygate, a quarterback controversy and the death of defensive lineman Jeff Alm, who committed suicide after seeing his best friend die in an auto mishap.

Buddy Ryan, now the Cardinals' head coach, slugged Gilbride during a celebrated one-punch fight during the Oilers' game against the New York Jets on Jan. 2 in the Astrodome.

"I never worried about what he (Ryan) said when he was here," Gilbride said. "I'm not concerned now."

Williams says the team will benefit from less turmoil this season.

"It's rough enough when the players are jawing back and forth but when the coaches are doing it too it's just a tough situation," he said.

Second-year linebacker Micheal Barrow, a favorite of Ryan's, says he enjoys playing for Jeff Fisher, a Ryan protege who uses slightly more mellow techniques as the new defensive coordinator.

"I wish Buddy was here, but Jeff's a nice replacement," Barrow said. "Buddy told us to go kill them (the Oilers offense). Jeff is more like, 'Be careful with the quarterback; we need him.' Buddy would be saying knock him out."

The Oilers traded Warren Moon to the Minnesota Vikings, giving patient backup Cody Carlson his chance to become the starter. Former Vikings quarterback Sean Salisbury is Carlson's backup.

Contract holdouts spiced training camp last season, but the Oilers began camp Monday with only two starters not present for the morning workout — cornerback Cris Dishman, who has agreed to terms, and guard Doug Dawson.

"The thing that's comforting is that we're all starting step one together," Gilbride said. "We make progress together and don't have to slow our progress for the late arrivals."

Gary Brown, who startled the Oilers with a 1,000-yard rushing performance in only eight starts last season, expects to continue making progress with a full season of starting assignments.

He likes the camp mood, too.

"There's no turmoil, so everything is fine," Brown said. "Everybody is working hard to get to a certain place and that's the Super Bowl. If we can keep focused we'll be fine."

Not everyone is pleased with the peaceful beginning of training camp.

Wide receiver Haywood Jeffires expects something to break out soon.

"I think controversy helps," he said. "Every successful team has controversy. I'll go crazy if someone doesn't start a fight. It wouldn't be an Oiler practice."

Jeffires wore jersey No. 80 to Monday's practice, honoring former starter Curtis Duncan, who was waived last week.

"Drew Hill is gone and now Curtis. I just wanted to show my support," Jeffires said. "I've lost all my friends on the team."

Young's Auto Glass: Focus remains on auto glass repair

Although Young's Auto Glass has expanded into a steel construction company, owner Randy Young said he and his business remain focused on the initial branch of the business: auto glass repair.

"We are a still major player in the auto glass replacement business," he said.

Young's Auto Glass has been in business since 1962. Young took over the company when his father died five years ago.

Since then, Young said, the company has "diversified into Young's Building Systems." But he and his crew of five have not "lost (the) focus on auto glass repair."

To prove this they employ "quality technicians so that we can insure our customers a professional installation and so we can know all the techniques for a proper installation," he said.

The biggest difference between Young's operation and those of his competitors is that Young's Auto Glass offers its customers a free mobile service.

In fact, Young said, "We are the ones who originated the mobile service idea for this area."

This service includes fully-equipped services with all the latest tools.

For example, if a customer calls Young about a repair, Young or one of his crew members will travel to the vehicle that needs to be repaired and do on-site installation.

Young said that two things will insure a professional glass installation: qualified technicians and fully-equipped service trucks--and Young's Auto Glass has both.

They also have a well-stocked supply of foreign and domestic windshields and tempered parts, with normal stock ranging from 2,000 to 3,000 parts.

Another way this company demonstrates its professionalism is by working closely with customers.

Young's Auto Glass in locally owned and operated.

Young said, "We're just a nice-guy operation that's been here. We're not a national chain. We buy the Basin and the money stays here in town."

"We've been here 30 years and we'll be here for another 30," he said.

Young's Auto Glass will also handle all insurance claims promptly an is set up with major networks to handle any repair occasion that arises.

Young's Auto Glass offers customers same day service in most repair cases.

The business is located near the intersection of County Road 114 and Cotton Flat Road.

For more information about either construction services or auto glass repair, please call Young's Auto Glass office at 682-5161 between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. or 520-0820 after hours, or fax inquiries to 683-5010.

The staff at Young's Auto Glass are (right) Randy Young, the owner, and Debra Masoner, the firms secretary. Young's Auto Glass specializes in professional auto glass repairs with a free mobile service. For more information call 682-5161.

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

A small deposit is required.

Take Note Of This

Summer's end is just around the corner and it's time to start making arrangements for education and care of Midland's children. To assist you with information on where education and care is available, the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing it's annual Children's Education and Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 7th.

This Directory is a vehicle used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality education and care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality education and care in our area.

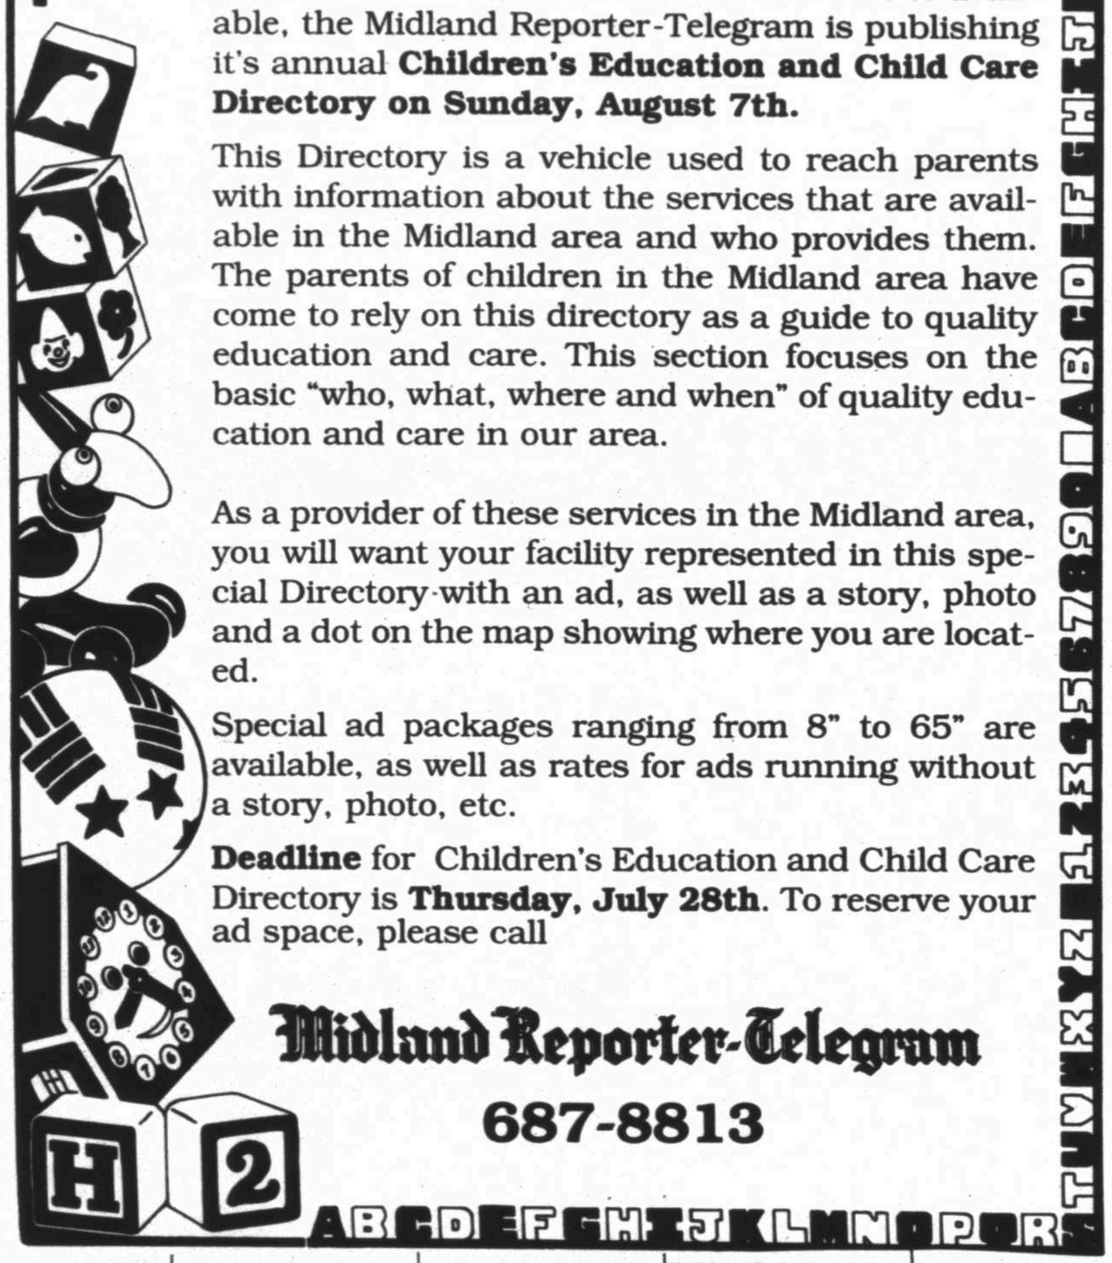

As a provider of these services in the Midland area, you will want your facility represented in this special Directory with an ad, as well as a story, photo and a dot on the map showing where you are located.

Special ad packages ranging from 8" to 65" are available, as well as rates for ads running without a story, photo, etc.

Deadline for Children's Education and Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 28th. To reserve your ad space, please call

EXCLUSIVE WARWICK RESIDENCE
FOR SALE BY OWNER

Mahogany double doors give entry to this custom built contemporary home. A wide foyer leads to gracious and "well appointed" rooms inviting guests to enjoy the exquisite craftsmanship and design of this 3 bedroom, 6 1/2 bath home. High beamed ceilings, a formal dining room, a large gourmet kitchen optimizes space. The Ultimate master suite overlooks a landscaped patio area. The suite contains his and her separate baths, dressing rooms, and room sized closets, plus sitting area and a private office. This home is very secure, "self contained" and easy to maintain. You must see it in it's entirety to fully appreciate it.
