A traveling exhibit from the Institute of Texan Cultures on display at Pampa High School's library ties Texas in with the nation's bicentennial observance. Eight columns like the one pictured make up the exhibit, which is the result of almost five years of planning, research, design and fabrication. The exhibit is called "Texas and the American Revolution." The two seniors studying in the background are Karen Hampton and David Ward.

Court rules for cities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled today that a city "does not violate constitutional rights when it requires its employees to live within the city limits."

The justices upheld a Philadelphia ordinance in an appeal by a former fireman, who was fired when he moved into a New Jersey suburb.

The court also let stand an Ohio decision, which struck down a similar Youngstown law as applied to anyone but policemen. The Ohio court said the city had a "compelling" interest to require police officers to live in the city so they could quickly respond to emergencies.

In other action after returning from a two-week recess, the court turned down appeals by meat packers, restaurant groups and others challenging new federal meat grading standards.

The justices also agreed to rule in a controversial Pennsylvania case in which a federal court ordered substantial hearings and legal representation for children when their parents seek to have them committed to mental institutions.

The court actions came one day before oral arguments in controversial abortion cases from Missouri and Massachusetts. The state laws require parental or the husband's consent before a woman can undergo an abortion.

Next week, the justices hear arguments on the constitutionality of capital punishment.

The new federal meat grading standards under challenge took effect last Feb. 23. Some consumers have argued the new procedure will give them lower grade meat at a higher price.

In another action today the justices turned down an appeal demanding that the Federal Communications Commission require television stations advertising controversial products to provide time for opposing views.

Cheese thief visits police

PISA, Italy (UPI) — Franco Paron, 37, asked police during the weekend to arrest two men who cheated him out of his share of burglary loot.

Police instead arrested Paron on charges of carrying a dangerous weapon, a knife with a 3-inch blade.

The burglary was at a grocery store, police said, and Paron was angry because he didn't get his share of parmesan cheese — the only thing taken.

Eccles said, "She was brought in for questioning in the shooting and that is what she will be charged with."

Miss Longet, 35, the former wife of Andy Williams, has lived with Sabich for the past two years. Pitkin County District Attorney Frank Tucker said she reported the shooting late Sunday afternoon.

Aspen City Manager Phillip Mahoney said Miss Longet gave sheriff's deputies a statement before being taken to an undisclosed location. He said no cause for the killing was known, although early reports indicated it was an accident.

"It came down to me that it wasn't a passion thing, but that the two of them were just clowning around," Mahoney said.

Williams, who was divorced from Miss Longet last spring, flew to Aspen early today to join his three children and his former wife, according to a family friend in Los Angeles.

"I understand there is some evidence it (the shooting) could have been an accident," the family friend said. "She is not in jail."

L.A. next stop for Patty

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst, emotional and bitter over her bank robbery conviction, will go to Los Angeles this week for arraignment on kidnapping and assault charges, according to U.S. Attorney James Browning Jr.

Chief defense counsel F. Lee Bailey said the bank robbery case "definitely" will be appealed.

Browning said Sunday the 22-year-old newspaper heiress first would be interviewed by probation officers for a report to U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter on their recommendations for sentencing.

"We hope that can be accomplished early this week, and she can then be handed over to Los Angeles authorities," Browning said.

However, attorney Albert Johnson said the defense would fight the move until after Miss Hearst is sentenced April 19. She faces a term of up to 35 years for her conviction for armed bank robbery and using a firearm to commit a felony. As a minimum sentence she could be placed on probation.

The Los Angeles charges stem from May 16, 1974, a month after the bank robbery, when Miss Hearst fired two guns to cover the escape of Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris after a shoplifting incident at Mel's Sporting Goods store.

During the next 24 hours, it is charged, they stole four vehicles and kidnaped two of the owners.

Johnson said Miss Hearst was upset over the bank robbery verdict, crying and sobbing, unable to sleep the night after the verdict was returned and telling him repeatedly: "I never had a chance."

"Unless the jury had lived through it like I did, they never could have realized what it was like," Johnson quoted her as saying.

Miss Hearst was visited at San Mateo County Jail Sunday by her father, Randolph Hearst, and two of her sisters. As he left, Hearst said, "She's all right."

Several members of the jury of seven women and five men, who brought in the unexpectedly sudden verdict Saturday after deliberating for only a day and a half, said the panel decided as it did because of Miss Hearst's own actions.

They cited her refusal to talk about the "missing year" of her underground life, a jail conversation in which she expressed anger at being caught, and her actions at Mel's.

"We weren't happy to do it, but it was the only verdict we could pass," said juror Philip Crabbe, 35, a postal employee. He said the fact she took the 5th Amendment 42 times and refused to talk about her last year as a fugitive "probably was a factor" in reaching a decision against her.

Juror Norman Grim, 44, an airline employee, said that even after she broke with the Harris, she did not try to contact anyone for protection and help.

"I can't buy the fact that she was being coerced," Grim said. "We just couldn't buy Bailey's whole package — and the way it was presented, you had to buy the whole package."

Grim said the jury also did not believe her story that the Mel's shooting was a "reflex action" she did without thinking because of her training by the SLA.

"She picked up one gun and emptied it and then picked up the other one," he said. "That kinda made you believe she (had been) in the bank voluntarily."

He also said the taped jail conversation with a friend where she said she was "p—d off" at being arrested "didn't jibe" with "her story that she was under thought control when she was arrested."

Reagan Wallace try to stop Ford, Carter

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan and George Wallace started their final round of barnstorming through North Carolina today in hopes of blunting the primary victory marches of President Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Reagan, in Asheville, pledged to stay in the fight, but would not predict a North Carolina victory in Tuesday's balloting.

"Regardless of the outcome — win, lose or draw — I'm going to stay in the race," the former governor of California said as he opened a swing through Asheville.

Charlotte, Greensboro and Raleigh. He will leave for Wisconsin later today.

"I think I am the candidate best able to win in November and I expect to win at the convention," he said.

Wallace, stung by Carter in Florida and Illinois and running an uphill race against the former Georgia governor in North Carolina, predicted only that he had "a good chance."

But the Alabama governor said he "would not be panicked or dispirited" by another loss to Carter. "We're still involved, and we feel we're going to do well in North Carolina," he said.

"I'm not dispirited at all," Wallace said at a Charlotte press conference before starting a swing through several small towns in the southeast portion of the state. Wallace was to end his day with a rally in Fayetteville before returning to Alabama.

Ford, who has won the New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Florida and Illinois primaries, predicted nothing but "victories ahead" in his final visit to North Carolina Saturday. Carter, who has predicted he will win his fifth primary in six attempts, ended his campaign Friday.

"I would like to win," Reagan said in a television interview on three Asheville stations. "But a close race here would be satisfactory to me."

Cabot gets suit moved

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

An $800,000 personal injury suit originally filed in Upton County against Cabot Corporation has been transferred to the 31st District in Pampa on a plea of privilege filed by Cabot.

The suit originally was filed by Warren Burnett, Associated of Odessa, on behalf of Mike V. Madrid of Midland.

Madrid, now 27, according to allegations in the petition, seeks damages as a result of an injury sustained while working on a well site in Upton County on March 23, 1972.

He was employed by Basin Well Service. He alleges while working "on a pulling unit that was manufactured and assembled by the defendant, Cabot Corporation," the unit broke hitting Madrid "and causing him to sustain serious and grievous personal injuries."

Cabot also has filed a general denial to the allegations.

Madrid said Cabot was negligent in furnishing defective poles in failure to inspect the poles, in failure to warn those who might reasonably be expected to use the poles in question of the defective condition of the product.

In the petition, Madrid claims that Cabot "had thereby impliedly warranted the fitness of its product for such purpose as it was being used; it being specifically alleged that such product was not fit for such purpose and that the breach of such implied warranty by the defendant was and is a proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries and damages."

Madrid said he sustained injuries to the bones, muscles and soft tissues of his body as a whole, as well as injuring his right hand, right leg, right hip and his head.

He seeks $350,000 for pain and suffering and $450,000 for lost wages, past and future.

He listed no dollar amount for medical expenses but reserved the right to amend the petition prior to trial.

Cabot filed a plea of privilege on grounds that its principal office and place of business is in Pampa and Gray County.

Judge William H. Earney of the 33rd Judicial Court granted the plea and ordered the suit and a transcript of all orders be sent to the 31st District Court of Gray County.

An additional stipulation included in the transfer states that it is agreed between the parties that the Home Insurance Companies had expended $32,386.73 in workmen's compensation and medical benefits to Madrid.

"This amount is to be free and clear of attorney's fees, and without the necessity of a formal intervention being filed," according to the agreement.

Ford urges spending hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford today urged Congress to increase federal spending to $247 billion for scientific research and development in the energy, defense and space programs.

In a special message to Congress, Ford said his request for the 1977 fiscal year budget represents an 11 per cent hike over his 1976 estimates and includes $2.5 billion for basic research.

"I fully recognize that this country's future — and that of all civilization as well — depends on nurturing and drawing on the creativity of men and women in our scientific and engineering community," he said.

Ford also urged congressional conferees to act promptly on Senate and House bills establishing the Office of Science and Technology, which he requested. Ford said his budget provides for $2.6 billion for energy research and development, a 35 per cent boost over 1976.

He said that expanded efforts are planned in 1977 to assure the safety and reliability of nuclear power and to continue the development of breeder reactors "which will make our uranium sources last for centuries."

Major increases also are provided in energy conservation and also for research in fossil fuels.

He said the quality of the military research and development program and decisions on its scope and magnitude "will directly influence the balance of power in the 1980s and beyond."

Included in the research funds are increases for cruise missiles — one of the issues in the current strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union — and for defining options for a new intercontinental ballistic missile system.

Also included is research for the space shuttle which Ford said "can add immeasurably to our understanding of the universe around."

Ford said the budget request provides for continued development of the Trident submarine and missile system and the B1 bomber.

In addition, he said funds were included for a number of major programs ranging from the F16 and F18 fighter aircraft to a new attack helicopter, improved air defense systems and a new tank.

Britain watches Rhodesia moves

LONDON (UPI) — Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said today Rhodesia's white supremacy Prime Minister Ian Smith is leading the breakaway former British colony "on the path of death and destruction."

But he said that if Smith is willing to reach an agreement with the country's overwhelming black majority population guaranteeing a handover of power to it, Britain would help in the negotiations and would give aid "on a significant scale."

In a major policy statement to Parliament, Callaghan said: "As things are, Mr. Smith is leading his country on the path of death and destruction. Even at this late stage I ask the European population of Rhodesia to believe there is an alternative path. It is still just possible for Mr. Smith to follow it."

"If not," Callaghan said, "I hope other leaders will emerge who will recognize the realities of the hour and that the time is here when the legitimate aspirations of the African people can meet and be reconciled with the desires of the European population."

Smith and African Nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo broke off negotiations on a constitutional settlement Friday. They had tried vainly for three months to work out a timetable for Rhodesia's blacks to take over from the white minority government.

Callaghan said Britain would be prepared to play "a constructive part" in any new negotiations based on four conditions:

— Acceptance by the Smith regime of the principle of black African majority rule.

— Elections for majority rule to be held within 18 months to two years.

— No independence for Rhodesia from Britain before majority rule is established.

— Negotiations must not be drawn out.

At a weekend news conference in Salisbury, Smith said: "I don't believe in black majority rule in Rhodesia, not in a thousand years. I believe in blacks and whites working together."

But Nkomo said it must come — and if not peacefully, then "the hard way."

opposed by the White House. Congressmen complain, too, that the press is prone to cover the glamorous Senate instead of the workaday House.

Perhaps in response, 17 House members are giving up their seats to seek their parties' nominations for the Senate.

"We House members write the nation's laws," says Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., deputy Democratic whip. "In conference committees, we frankly take the pants off senators, and the legislation that comes out is almost always what the House wants. But the senators take the credit."

Adds Rep. William Hungate, D-Mo.: "Part of the imbalance of power between the executive branch and the legislative is a problem of image. The executive speaks with a single voice. Everyone hears him. Congress necessarily speaks with many voices."

"The House's work is characterized by accommodation, negotiation, compromise," says Brademas. "It isn't easy to effectively report that to the American people. But if information is power — and I think it is — we get shorted."

The Democratic Steering and Policy Committee has given Brademas a Task Force on Information to try to enhance House status. He hired Burt Hoffman, former assistant managing editor of the Washington Star, to offer advice.

Hoffman, "in a bit of consciousness raising," has been mailing congressional factbooks to Democratic leaders and to newspaper editors and columnists, and has pressed the networks to put more House members on the interview shows.

Both House and Senate are flirting with televised sessions. Cameras now are banned except for presidential appearances.

But misgivings run strong. The chamber is where the House does its work. When a president goes before the cameras, it is a staged, planned event. Televising House debate would be comparable to televising a President's private conversations with advisers.

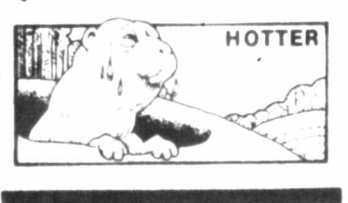

Older congressional hands, often uncomfortable before the cameras, fear television will distort debate, turn the House floor into a stage, focus on napping members or empty seats, and feature the flamboyant and dramatic members (who often are the junior-most members, and are used to using television.)

Two subcommittees are scrapping over ground rules. They differ on whether the House itself or the television networks should control the cameras. Those favoring the idea hope to bring the House into the television age by July 4.

Privately, many Democrats say Speaker Carl Albert has not been effective in this area. Albert's discomfort with the press is awkwardly evident.

Singer charged in homicide

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — Vladimir "Spider" Sabich, former world professional skiing champion, was shot to death Sunday, and a sheriff's spokesman said French-born singer-actress Claudine Longet was in custody and will be charged today with homicide in the shooting.

Sabich, 31, was shot once in the stomach at his $250,000 home in Starwood, an exclusive Aspen subdivision. An autopsy was ordered.

"Whether it was an accidental shooting or intentional, it is still classed as a homicide under the state law," Deputy Chet

Eccles said. "She was brought in for questioning in the shooting and that is what she will be charged with."

Miss Longet, 35, the former wife of Andy Williams, has lived with Sabich for the past two years. Pitkin County District Attorney Frank Tucker said she reported the shooting late Sunday afternoon.

Aspen City Manager Phillip Mahoney said Miss Longet gave sheriff's deputies a statement before being taken to an undisclosed location. He said no cause for the killing was known, although early reports indicated it was an accident.

"It came down to me that it wasn't a passion thing, but that the two of them were just clowning around," Mahoney said.

Williams, who was divorced from Miss Longet last spring, flew to Aspen early today to join his three children and his former wife, according to a family friend in Los Angeles.

"I understand there is some evidence it (the shooting) could have been an accident," the family friend said. "She is not in jail."

Sabich, a graduate of Colorado University and a member of its ski team, finished fifth at the 1968 Winter Olympics in Grenoble, won the World Pro Skiing crown in 1970, his first year on the pro tour, and the following year.

He had been semiactive since suffering a serious back injury in the final race of the 1973 season.

Miss Longet, who recently finished an album for Williams' record company, filed for divorce from the entertainer in January, 1975. Williams was often seen with Ethel Kennedy, widow of assassinated Sen. Robert Kennedy, following the couples' separation.

The Williams' youngest child was named after Kennedy.

Vigilance is still the price

Caught up in a bicentennial salute to the durability of a nation of once nearly free men and free women, there is temptation to complacency.

The United States, after all, has survived attack from abroad, wrenching divisions from within and dishonor at the highest levels of government. The system, some are fond of boasting, has prevailed.

Those first determined settlers, refugees from tyrannical governments, might have been content with the blessings of the simple freedom they pursued at great personal sacrifice. They found in their colonies at Plymouth, at Jamestown, at Providence the havens they had envisioned for the preservation and nourishment of individual rights.

They came to worship as they chose. They guarded jealously their venture into self-regulation. They concerned themselves with the virtues of justice and dignity and respect for their fellows.

But they were also wary. As the colonies grew and prospered, they began to believe that they were obliged to set down guidelines for their relationships with each other. Limited government, the prominent and vocal among them decided, was necessary, but its powers must be exerted only "with the consent of the governed."

And under the threat of renewed domination from their government (king) abroad, they drafted carefully the Declaration of Independence whose 200th anniversary is being celebrated. In simple terms, that Declaration told the king that he was no longer their ruler; that they, the colonists,

This precious freedom which our forefathers discovered and tried to preserve is a fragile commodity that we must guard with zeal if our posterity is to have anything left to celebrate 100 years from now.

Only after lengthy deliberation did they subscribe to the Constitution and Bill of Rights that have been the foundation of what we like to call "the American way."

Vigilance continues to be the price of liberty. Instant communication allows each American citizen to respond to unsettling events in Angola or Lebanon or Chile that could presage disaster from abroad. It permits us to react to events in Washington that could ruin us from within.

Those foreign payments

Several corporations, among them oil companies, have been put on the government investigative griddle lately for having allegedly made payments to various foreign governments and - or political parties, such payments, sometimes running into millions of dollars, being referred to by the inquisitors as "bribes," presumably for favored treatment received or expected.

While, as far as we know, no one has yet said so in plain words, the implications are that the corporations found guilty are in for some kind of punishment.

All of which strikes us as rather bizarre, putting it mildly. In a day and time when the government - to - government bribes known as "foreign aid" run into billions of dollars every year, and when the CIA disburses untold millions of dollars overseas for purpose at which one can only guess, for the government to be investigating and browbeating corporations for foreign payments smacks of the ridiculous, if not the indecent.

While "bribery," if that is the word, is not the proper method of doing business, and we are not about to recommend it as a business practice to the accused corporations' credit, they were trying to keep the channels of trade open and needed resources flowing to American consumers. In a world where just about every activity has been politicized, and with our own government having set the precedent with "foreign aid" and other giveaways, the alluded to payments, may have been the only alternative left to the foreign - operating U.S.

At least, in the case of the corporations, they were operating with their own funds; while, in the case of "foreign aid" and CIA foreign disbursements, both were, and are, being made with funds taken forcibly from the U.S. taxpayers.

Apparently, according to the reasoning employed by the governmental inquisitors, bribery is not bribery when it is done by the government itself and called by another name; it is bribery only when done by corporations struggling to get the job done in a politically dominated world in which the payoff, making use of taxpayer funds, has become a way of life.

Bastiat's advice to French inquisitors and regulators of his day comes to mind: "Reform yourselves: that, in itself, would be sufficient."

Who's fooling whom?

The Federal Treasury went to the financial well recently with the sale of almost $7 billion in federal bonds and notes.

But that's only a fraction of the estimated $76 billion budget deficit for the fiscal year 1976 which ends June 30 or of the total of $90 billion the government expects to borrow in calendar 1976.

Debate in Washington has kept most voters aware of the extent to which the national government is operating in red ink.

But the public generally remains in blissful ignorance of the direct cost of this extravagance.

The national debt by June 30 is expected to soar over the $600 billion mark, double what it was 15 years ago. The interest will amount to almost $38 billion next year.

Inside Washington

Kissinger law unto himself?

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, March 22 — Secretary Kissinger is almost as torridly controversial in inner White House councils as in the political arena.

Principal reason is his apparently irresistible penchant for "popping off" — as one sharply critical close adviser of the President puts it. If he and other insiders had their way, Kissinger would be muzzled.

In fact, some of them would go even further and get rid of him — as both a political liability and increasingly prickly personal headcase.

Definitely, President Ford is now Kissinger's sole mainstay within the administration. The thin-skinned Secretary of State has no friends in either the inner White House group of the cabinet. In these top quarters the disapproval ranges from personal antipathy to strong opposition to Kissinger policies and practices.

Foremost among the latter are his seemingly ingrained secretiveness and persistence in engaging in self-serving speechmaking.

Backstage complaints about Kissinger's secretiveness is an old story. During the Nixon administration cabinet members muttered angrily about not knowing what Kissinger was up to. Pentagon authorities particularly were hot under the collar about that — to no avail.

This bland ignoring of cabinet and other high-placed officials has steadily become more pronounced under President Ford.

Kissinger now talks only to the President and no one else.

This lofty exclusiveness emphatically does not endear Kissinger with either White House insiders or cabinet members. It also has not helped him in Congress — where Republicans as well as Democrats are now hostile and openly gunning for him.

Belling The Cat
It is from this quarter that the latest irate demand has come that Kissinger be muzzled.

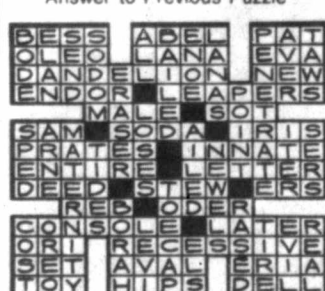

The blast came on the heels of his truculent speech in Boston last week in which he rhetorically shook his fist at presidential candidates bombarding his detente and other embattled policies.

While Kissinger righteously denied he was injecting himself in the bustling campaign, his address was political from start to finish.

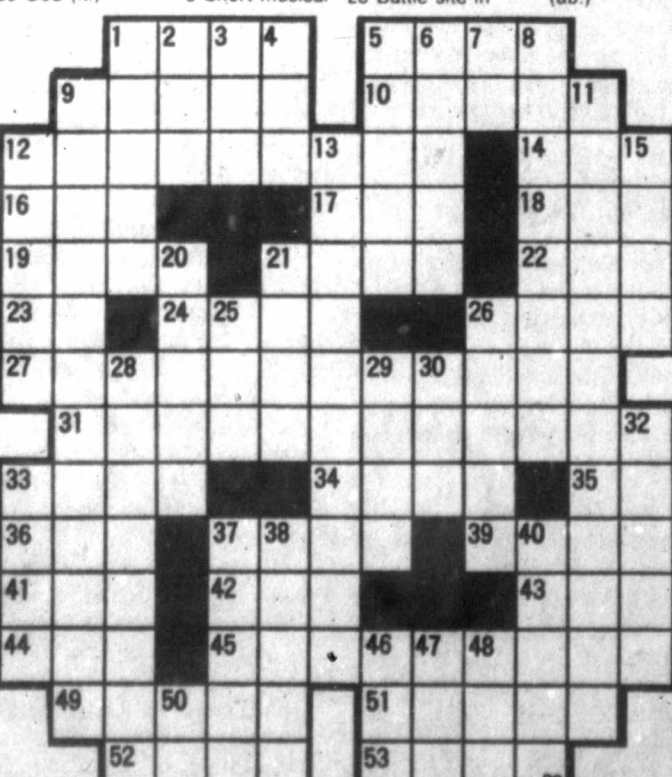

In addition, it was a clear-cut breach of his own pledge to stay out of politics.

Last Nov. 12, in an address in Pittsburgh, he unequivocally declared, "I will not participate in the political campaign in any form. Foreign policy will not be a partisan issue, even less will I get involved in any primary campaigns. I will cut down on my speaking program as soon as the political process becomes more active."

With the primaries in full blast, the "political process" couldn't be more active — and neither could Kissinger's politics-drenched haranguing. In total disregard of his solemn avowal of a few months ago, he announced in his Boston fusillade that he contemplates firing off a few more combative broadsides in defense of "President Ford's foreign policies" — (meaning of course Kissinger's).

"I am determined," he unctuously proclaimed, "to tell the American people the truth." Unless the President personally clamps down, that's apparently what Kissinger is defiantly bent on doing despite his pledge to abstain and the long tradition of Secretaries of State meticulously staying out of partisan politics.

Law of His Own
President Ford is well aware of both the tradition and Kissinger's promise; he's been pointedly reminded of them.

A top Republican legislator exploded after the Boston tirade, "This man has to be silenced. He is costing us votes on every foreign policy issue, and he is not winning any support on the hustings. What makes him think he is popular with the public? I just can't figure it."

Neither can frustrated critics in the inner councils or the cabinet. While making no bones of their feelings, they've gotten nowhere so far.

Possible reason is the following explanation from one insider: "In practical effect, for the time being Kissinger is calling the shots on foreign affairs — and well knows it. I am quite certain the President is not happy with Kissinger's blatting. But if he told him to pipe down, Kissinger would undoubtedly quit."

"His ego is now so inflated and he considers himself so momentous, that he just won't stand for squelching. He would furiously resent that as a personal and historical affront, and would haughtily resign. That is the highblown exaltation he has reached."

"So the President is playing it safe. After the uproarious cabinet shake-up last December, the last thing the President wants is another blockbuster involving Kissinger. So the President is swallowing his misgivings and biding his time. You can be positive of one thing: if there is another Ford administration, Kissinger will definitely not be in it."

Unquestionably, that is true. But on the other hand, Kissinger is privately talking that way himself.

It is very evident he has no thought of continuing as Secretary of State beyond this year.

Keeping fingers crossed to ensure against disaster, comes from the superstition that making the sign of the cross will avert bad luck.

Ray Cromley

Private industry ace up America's sleeve

By Ray Cromley

Washington—(NEA)—The problem with defense spending is not that the Soviet Union has overall better weapons today than the United States, it doesn't. Or that it is spending more. There is evidence many of the Soviet rubles earmarked for defense are wasted in inefficiencies.

The problem today is that the Soviet Union today has an imaginative, superbly designed military research program headed by first-rate scientists.

Despite wastes in the Soviet system, Russian military scientists are moving ahead at a more rapid pace than their American counterparts. This is very surprising, in view of our nation's scientific history and national pride in inventiveness.

These Russian scientific advances could mean that the U. S. may, a decade or two from now, find itself saddled with an expensive collection of second-rate weapons.

To recapitulate, we are not talking of numbers or the size of armies but excellence of weapons.

Though the Pentagon would argue the point, the problem isn't that we do not spend enough on national defense. Research, by comparison, is cheap. It is rather that we do not spend wisely.

Some Soviet advances are the bread-and-butter developments which make possible major cost reductions. They have moved ahead in casting techniques so far that their cast components are as strong as forgings in the U. S. Our scientific sources say the Russians now lead in welding technology and in titanium fabrication.

Some advanced Soviet work is in imaginative fields where breakthroughs could, cumulatively, alter the balance of power.

The USSR is moving ahead rapidly in plasma physics and in magneto-hydrodynamic power generation. It leads the U. S. in some areas of laser research and there are indications Moscow may be moving toward the development of laser weapons.

The Russians are ahead in high pressure physics, in some areas of high-frequency radio-wave propagation, in chemical warfare and in significant areas of artillery technology.

The Soviet rate of progress is exemplified by the work of Russian scientists in anti-aircraft systems. The newest Russian weapons operational in the early 1970s were a decade behind ours. But our counterpart of their newest command-guided missile system is still under development.

And the Soviet Union has made more rapid progress in achieving high-accuracy guidance technology than some of the most hawkish of American scientific observers predicted a year back.

All is not, however, in the Soviets' favor.

The U. S. leads in such dollar-saving research as the use of computers for design and simulation, in integrated-circuit fabrication, in numerically-controlled machine tools, in inertial instrumentation, in the development of composite materials and in satellite-borne sensor technology.

We are well ahead in the development of radars for surveillance, bombing and air-to-air combat, in the vitally important field of computers and computer applications, in some very important areas of high-energy laser development, in the key field of precision guidance, and we have come from behind to significantly outpace the Russians in advanced research on superior types of cruise missiles.

Most importantly, the U. S., unlike the Soviet Union, has a civilian research industry which can and does furnish a major backup for military research. In the end, this backup could be crucial.

A Golden Oldie From Abby's Mailbag

DEAR READERS: I am presently writing a book that will contain choice letters I've received in the last 20 years. In selecting the material, I came across a letter that gave me a chuckle. I hope it gives you one, too. It was published in my column in October, 1968:

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 44-year-old bachelor who digs women, but I'm not looking for any matrimonial involvements. I live alone in a modest bungalow and enjoy my privacy.

My problem is an aggressive divorcee who lives next door. She's not bad looking, but she comes on awfully strong. She's a rip-roarin' Republican and a Nixon booster from way back. If she sees a light in my place, she runs right over with a prepared meal and an armful of Nixon campaign literature. She's even offered to cook for me and do my ironing, but I'm not about to fall into that trap. When she's not trying to sell me on Nixon, she's talking about marriage.

Last week I had it, so I moved my refrigerator, stove and TV down to the basement so she won't know I'm home. So now she phones me! What should I do?

NOT INTERESTED

DEAR NOT: Tell her you're going to vote for Hubert and move back upstairs!

DEAR ABBY: PENNA. READER wrote: "I went to a nice supper club with my lady friend and another couple, when a male friend of the other couple approached me and asked if I minded if he danced with my date. I said 'Yes, I do mind,' and my date thought I was rude."

You said, "You were. You should have asked your date if SHE wanted to dance with the stranger."

Well, I think you were wrong. Why should a man who goes to a supper club (and probably left his wife or girlfriend at home) expect some other guy to provide him with a girl to dance with?

I say, nuts to him. If he likes to dance, let him bring his own date!

WYOMINGITE

DEAR WYOMINGITE: I led with my chin on that one. You're right!

DEAR ABBY: A school dance is coming up next month, and the girls are supposed to ask the boys.

I want to ask a certain boy I know, but my mom says I shouldn't ask a boy who hasn't ever asked me out, and this one hasn't.

Abby, I think it's only fair that this once I should be able to ask the boy I really want to ask. What do you think?

TO ASK OR NOT TO ASK

DEAR TO ASK: The purpose of a girl-ask-boy dance is to change the boy-ask-girl tradition with which girls have been stuck for so long. If the girls ask only boys who have asked them out, where's the breakthrough?

Policy change called for by RR candidate

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A Texas Railroad Commission candidate says the commission should change its policy on passthrough natural gas rates and says he has an ally on the three-member board who would work with him to solve the problem.

Rep. Jon Newton, D-Beeville, Sunday refused to name his ally in an interview on the television show Capital Eye.

But Newton said he did not feel he would be locked into a position of perpetual dissenter if elected to the commission.

"I think there's an ally on the commission," he said. "I think I am elected to the commission that you will definitely see an order that will be ordered soon after I take office that will have a major effect on the Lo-Vaca present temporary order, and I think you'll see that order become permanent and I think you'll see some incentives given to Lo-Vaca in the future in buying as to ensure that we do not have a 100 per cent passthrough."

Newton is a candidate for the commission seat being vacated by Ben Ramsey. The other two commissioners, whose jobs are not up for election, are Mack Wallace and Jim Langdon.

Newton said it is imperative the railroad commission change its present passthrough policy.

"It is not a good policy," he said. "When you allow Lo-Vaca or any gas gatherer to go out and buy gas and pass through to an ultimate consumer 100 per cent of that new gas cost... you take away the initiative for him to get the best price he can. So I think it's incumbent on the railroad commission to modify its existing temporary interim order on the Lo-Vaca docket (allowing the passthrough) which was supposed to be for one year, and, as we know, this September will have been for three years.

"It's also important to have a final order so the cities affected, the consumers affected, can appeal from it if they don't like it. At the present time there is no way that a city or a consumer can appeal that Lo-Vaca order because it's not final, it's temporary."

TOURIST SPOTS

LONDON (UPI) — Eight million overseas travelers visited England in 1975 and 6.9 million came to London, a British Authority survey said.

London's traditions, shops and theaters were the principal attractions.

Trafalgar Square, Westminster Abbey, Buckingham Palace, the Tower of London and St. Paul's Cathedral were the most popular tourist spots.

Plane makes 'solo' flight

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (UPI) — Jack Delhotal, frustrated by a balky starter on his Cessna 210, climbed out of the cockpit Sunday to start the engine by manually spinning the propeller.

The engine caught but before Delhotal, 53, could clamber back inside, the single-engine plane sped down the runway and soared into the air with passenger Joyce Arvington, 51, aboard.

Mrs. Arvington, who knew nothing about flying, stopped the engine by turning off the ignition and removing the key. The plane crashed, killing Mrs. Arvington.

"She couldn't even turn the radio on," said airport manager Ralph Disheroon. "A plane will fly by itself. It will take off if it's moving fast enough," he said.

Disheroon said the plane was airborne for 18 minutes before it crashed.

Both Delhotal and Mrs. Arvington were from Wichita, Kan.

Commission under fire

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A legislator says the Texas Railroad commission has permitted "runaway utility costs" and a special legislative session should be called to deal with the problem.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, Saturday sent Gov. Dolph Briscoe copies of complaints by the Bluebonnet Electric Cooperative Inc. and the Lower Colorado River Authority about sharp increases in fuel costs experienced by customers of Coastal States and its subsidiary, Lo-Vaca Gathering Co.

Schwartz said railroad commission rulings have allowed Coastal States Gas Producing Co. to increase prices for natural gas by $1.59 per million cubic feet in 2 1/2 years.

"Runaway utility costs are practically being condoned by the Texas Railroad Commission and have been for some time," said Schwartz.

"Surely we can provide some relief to the citizens of Texas from the extraordinary condition which they have to face up to through no fault of their own."

Henry Umscheid, general manager of the Bluebonnet Cooperative, said the rate increases were unfair.

"We are looking at over four million Texans that have been ordered to bail out an already bankrupt gas company — a company that put itself in this position by not having the necessary reserves to meet its contracts," he said.

"This is unprecedented, could not be considered fair by any known standard, and I cannot visualize responsible men allowing this condition to continue to exist in Texas," Umscheid said.

Charles Herring, LCRA general manager, said the cost of fuel needed to produce electricity has increased 900 per cent in the past 2 1/2 years for customers of Coastal States.

"I do not know how much longer the people can stand this, and we are more or less helpless," Herring said.

Coastal and Lo-Vaca supply natural gas used to fuel electricity generating plants that serve Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Corpus Christi, and much of Central and South Texas. The companies oversold their own supply and have been unable to meet supply contracts.

The railroad commission ruled on Sept. 27, 1973, that Coastal and Lo-Vaca could increase charges to their customers despite contracts requiring them to supply natural gas at rates of 21 cents per million cubic feet until 1984 in the case of LCRA.

More than 270,000 people — or 21 per cent of the entire population of Kansas City, Mo., — visited the famed Archaeological Finds of the People's Republic of China when it was displayed in that Missouri city.

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

March, 1776:

Elbridge Gerry, a Massachusetts delegate to the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, writes to James Warren, president of the Massachusetts Provincial Congress: "America has gone to such lengths she cannot recede; and I am convinced that a few weeks, or months at the farthest, will convince her of the fact; but the fruit must have time to ripen in some of the other colonies. In New England, the hot-bed of sedition (as [British Prime Minister Lord] North has imprudently called Boston), it has already come to maturity. Have [the British] not yet ascertained that we know our rights, or, at least, that we think we know them? Have they not learned that we can defend them, too?"

Civil War naval vessel 'possibly salvagable'

HOUSTON (UPI) — On Jan. 11, 1863 the heavy guns on the Confederate ship Alabama pounded the Union's ironclad Hatteras into surrender.

Two crewmen aboard the Hatteras, a converted steam ship, were killed in the battle; the rest were taken safely aboard the Alabama. But before the Confederates could remove the weapons and cash from the Hatteras, the Union ship sank in the Gulf of Mexico.

Two Rice University professors Sunday said they had discovered the wreckage of the Hatteras in 60 feet of water about 20 miles south of Galveston, Tex.

CLOCK MUSEUM ZAANDAM, The Netherlands (UPI) — Prince Claus has opened a new clock museum, showing instruments man has used to measure time for 5,000 years, in this town near Amsterdam. The collection, which includes fine specimens of centuries-old Dutch clocks, is displayed in the historic 17th-century "Wevershuis," part of an open-air museum of historic shops and period rooms.

PAINTER HONORED LONDON (UPI) — A comprehensive exhibition of the works of John Constable will be held at the Tate Gallery between February 18 and April 25 to mark the 200th anniversary of the great English landscape artist.

The village of East Bergholt, 63 miles northeast of London in the Stour Valley, where Constable painted many of his finest works, is also planning a series of events during the summer to mark the anniversary.

Dr. Frank E. Vandiver, a Rice professor and Civil War historian, said he believed the ship to be in good shape and possibly salvagable.

"The historical significance of the find is immense since the Hatteras was rapidly sinking without extensive damage and with all stores still aboard, including an arsenal of small arms, cutlasses, shot and the ship's cash box believed to contain some $3,000 in coins," he said.

Vandiver said recovery of the sunken ship's nameplate last month confirmed the find. A check of the nameplate's registration number with the Navy verified it was the Hatteras.

He said reports about the Hatteras-Alabama engagement were found in military records.

"Every living being was conveyed safely from the Hatteras to the Alabama," wrote Lt. Commander H. C. Blake, the Hatteras captain, in a letter on file with the Navy. "Two minutes after leaving the Hatteras she went down, bow first, with her pennant at the mast-head, with all her muskets and stores of every description, the enemy not being able, owing to her rapid sinking, to obtain a single weapon."

A team of divers aided by the historians started the search four years ago.

"We were able to locate the wreck with the aid of equipment designed and built especially for this project," said Dr. Paul A. Cloutier, a Rice associate professor of space physics and astronomy.

Cloutier said aviators Jeff T. Burke and Charles M. Rose, of Rio Hondo, Tex., led the search.

Two years ago, he said, he detected a large object and because of sonar first realized he had found a ship the size and shape of the Hatteras.

"I felt many times on the bottom that I was close to finding the Hatteras," he said, "but I ran out of air and time and was forced to quit. But on January 17 of this year, we were finally able to put a marker on the wreck."

Cloutier said the exact location will remain a secret at this time.

"The wreck and its contents are valuable and could be salvaged for large private profit. But we would like to see the recovery proceed in the right way. To protect the site from vandalism we have removed all surface markers that might allow others to find the vessel."

Rat poison claims two, one critical

DURANT, Okla. (UPI) — Two young children died Sunday and another was critically ill from apparently eating rat poison wafers taken from an exterminating company's truck, authorities said.

Two other children were hospitalized for observation and eight more treated and released from Bryan Memorial Hospital. Police said the 13 children, aged 2 through 6, apparently ate the poisonous wafers Saturday night thinking they were cookies.

The dead youths were identified as Joseph Whaley, 2, and Tracey Beshirs, 3, John Whaley, 4, listed in critical condition at the Durant hospital, was flown by air ambulance Sunday night to Children's Hospital in Oklahoma City.

An employee of the exterminating company identified wafers found in the housing complex at the outskirts of Durant where the children lived as the type used by his company and said they were very poisonous.

The highway patrol rushed the body of a dog, believed killed by the same poison, to an Oklahoma State University veterinary laboratory at Stillwater but attempts to analyze the poison in the animal failed.

State stops photo equipment leasing

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Senate Administration Committee has stopped year-round leasing of photographic equipment — the type of lease arrangement that led to one indictment against Senate Secretary Charles A. Schnabel.

The committee Saturday refused to renew a contract for leasing two electronic flash attachments for Senate cameras.

Claiborn Crain, director of Senate media services, said it would cost more to lease the flashes than to buy the photo equipment. But he said leases would make sure photographers would be supplied with needed equipment in event a flash broke down.

"They play out within a year," Schnabel said. "We bought them before. It has never worked."

Schnabel was indicted for official misconduct Feb. 10 in the purchase of a camera under such a lease agreement. He is also charged with forgery and theft in four other indictments.

Sen. Don Adams, D-Jasper, committee chairman, said the state can lease equipment for a short time in event repairs are needed on state-owned items.

The committee also ordered property audits of each senator's home office and rejected a proposal to tighten controls on use of state-purchased postage stamps.

The committee directed property supervisors to complete audits of each senator's home office.

Inventory supervisors also were directed to draw up complete records on all equipment rented or leased by the Senate.

Investigators said some equipment bought on lease-purchase agreements never was recorded as state property.

Adams asked for a presentation Saturday on postage meter equipment or special machinery to perforate state-purchased stamps with an identifying mark.

The proposal was rejected without a formal vote.

FBI investigates 'Bo'

DENVER (UPI) — Federal authorities have found no evidence during a two week investigation to support allegations former Army Secretary Howard "Bo" Callaway acted illegally to promote his Colorado ski resort, according to a newspaper report.

"We're chasing down rumors," one FBI investigator in the case told the Rocky Mountain News. "The more rumors that we have, the more we have to spread out and interview people."

However, he said most of the rumors have lacked substantial evidence.

The Justice Department has been coordinating the investigation, involving more than 10 FBI agents in Colorado, into whether Callaway broke federal law. A separate investigation into possible misuse of influence is also underway.

An alleged $135,000 bribe paid to Forest Service officials to gain approval on expansion of the Crested Butte Ski area has been the center of the investigation.

A Justice Department source close to the investigation said the FBI ran into a dead end on the bribe charge which stemmed from an anonymous phone call to a Gunnison newspaper.

The source also said the investigation has been expanded to include Callaway's use of military aircraft to visit Crested Butte and charges Callaway's brother-in-law attempted to coverup improper use of influence.

Callaway has cooperated with the investigation and has volunteered to submit documents, apparently including the financial records of the Crested Butte Development Corp., and his personal travel records.

He resigned as President Ford's campaign manager last week pending the outcome of the investigation. However, since allegations of improper use of influence may take several months to investigate, he was not expected to return to the post.

One of the ethical matters involves a trip Callaway made to Crested Butte in 1973 aboard a military plane. He met with local residents and Forest Service officials and made an impromptu speech on the volunteer Army and the environmental commitment of his resort.

Movie premiere to honor vets

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Producer Walter Mirisch has sent out a call for World War II Navy veterans of the Battle of Midway to be his guests for premieres this June of his new movie, "Midway."

"Mirisch is limiting his invitation to officers and men who served aboard the aircraft carriers Yorktown, Enterprise and Hornet."

All the vets need do is write him at Universal Studios, provide documentation of their service aboard the flat tops and await a reply.

Mirisch reckons some 22,500 Americans were involved in the pivotal naval battle that changed the tide of the Pacific war in 1942.

"All in all," he said, "there were about 17,500 men with Task Force 16 and Task Force 17, which included the three carriers, along with eight cruisers, 15 destroyers, four supply ships and several patrol boats.

"There were another 2,600 defenders on Midway Island at that time."

But the epic film of the historic battle deals mostly with the carriers and their crews.

Charles Heston, Henry Fonda, James Coburn and Glenn Ford head the cast of the movie, much of which was filmed in the Gulf of Mexico aboard the USS Lexington.

"The Lexington is the last remaining World War II carrier still in service," Mirisch explained. "It's based in Pensacola (Fla.) and is used for training missions in the gulf."

The defense department let us use the ship for three weeks.

They were tremendously cooperative all the way."

The government also provided hundreds of feet of color combat film.

Because the Japanese and American fleets never actually came in sight of one another, most of the action footage involved plane-to-plane and ship-to-plane warfare.

"Fortunately," said Mirisch, "there's a society for everything in this country. And there's a society for the collecting and restoration of old combat aircraft."

"We managed to find plenty of Navy planes of the period for our purposes. Our technical adviser, Admiral Bernard Streen, said one of the planes we used was in a lot better condition than the one he flew 35 years ago."

Mirisch said he has interlaced the gigantic battle with personal stories of individuals involved, illuminating the human elements against the huge canvas of the fight.

"We didn't ask for clearances for the historical figures portrayed in the picture," he explained. "We depict them only in historical fact."

Heston plays a fictitious air operations captain. But Fonda plays Admiral Nimitz, Coburn plays Captain Maddox, Ford is Admiral Spruance and Bob Mitchum plays Admiral Bull Halsey.

"Captain Elliot Buckmaster, who was skipper of the Yorktown, is 87 years old and retired in San Diego. He probably is the oldest living survivor of the battle."

"Our sets were visited by several of the men who were involved in the battle, including George Gay, who was a pilot at the time. He was the sole survivor of Torpedo Squadron 8. Twenty-seven men in that squadron were killed."

"Gay was shot down and spent 30 hours in the sea clinging to debris, watching the battle take place. He gave us a lot of details and helped Kevin Dobson, who portrays Gay in the film."

"Midway" is almost an historical document, yet Mirisch was surprised to discover how much interest the picture has stirred in the post war generation.

"This type of warfare will never be seen again," he said. "All the ships and planes are now obsolete, and for that reason there is nostalgia value in the film for the people who lived through it."

"But the most fascinating things to me are the small elements of the battle, the mistakes, breakdowns and luck involved that determined the outcome of the battle."

"Four Japanese carriers were lost. It changed the balance of power in the Pacific and forced the Japanese into a defensive war."

"We'd like to honor those American men who fought aboard the carriers by inviting them to our premieres. They should see the part they played in a crucial moment in our history."

Bit Parts: Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association, will be a presenter at this year's Academy Awards. James Garner will narrate "The Presidents," four hour-long TV documentaries. Robert Shaw joins Gene Kelly and Walter Matthau as an emcee for the March 29 Academy Award ceremonies.

ATTITUDE SURVEY
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Los Angeles psychiatrist in an attitude survey found that most respondents thought pretty women were smarter and more liberated than plain ones. Randomly chosen people in Dr. Merrill Sarty's survey also said they thought attractive women are more interested in men, have sex more often and enjoy it more than plainer women.

Termite habits like candidates'

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The New York Times recently published a fascinating report on termites.

Of particular interest is the way certain kinds of termites defend themselves when their colonies are approached by ants, spiders and other enemies.

Researchers have discovered that "soldier" termites, which have nozzle-shaped heads, form a circle around the intruder and spray it with an odorous, sticky chemical.

The spray "hindered movements of the victim, caused it to become encrusted with dirt, irritated its skin and blocked its air passages. The more the victim squirmed to rid itself of the spray, the more it became entangled."

Like Arctic wolves chasing caribou in a television show I saw some time ago, this somehow reminded me of this year's presidential campaign.

It was, indeed, very much like a conversation I had with Dr. Luigi V. Populi, a noted political science who has been doing some research on the behavior of candidates.

"The campaign thus far mainly has been stop action," Populi pointed out. "Nearly every primary triggers a new movement to stop one of the candidates. Gov. Brown's decision to enter the Democratic primary in California is the latest example. It is widely viewed as part of a 'Stop Carter' movement."

I said, "But I thought Carter was part of the 'Stop Wallace' movement."

"He was for awhile. What happened was a classic case of over-stop. Carter stopped Wallace so thoroughly in Florida and Illinois he touched off a 'Stop Carter' movement in California. In other words, he changed from stopper to stoppee."

Populi said he had discovered that "as a colony of candidates moves from one primary to another, it is important that they stay fairly close together."

Senate hears corn fight

By DOUG LOWENSTEIN
Pampa News
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Department of Agriculture and Cook Industries officials sharply disagreed last week over whether a Polish ship loaded by Cook in January was shot through with broken corn and foreign matter. (BCFM).

The five hour Senate Agriculture subcommittee hearing could have been called "The Battle of the Pictures," since both sides showed slides and distributed photographs to support their cases. But when the hearing finally ended, little was resolved.

Argument over the quality of the shipment has centered on two points: how much of the corn was broken or contained foreign material, such as rocks and seashells; and how much of the corn was sour, musty, or caked, all factors which would affect the grade.

Edward Cook, chairman of Cook Industries, one of the largest grain exporting firms in the world, said the ship his company loaded in New Orleans the RYSS II, fulfilled the contract for number three yellow corn signed with a Polish company.

Cook insisted that the shipment contained only 5.1 per cent BCFM, well within the 6 per cent limit set in the contract.

Cook also contended that the amount of rocks, seashells and other extraneous foreign matter in the shipment was equal to "one and a half spoonfuls of water in a 20 gallon bag — it's really insignificant when compared to the total volume of the ship but USDA is trying to make a case of rape out of it."

But David Mangum, deputy director of USDA's Grain Division said a preliminary analysis of corn samples taken after the ship docked in Poland indicate the BCFM content was far higher than Cook asserts. USDA found, said Mangum, "significant deterioration beyond what we would normally expect."

He said, it appears that about 30 per cent of the corn from the ship's center tanks — which accounted for about one-half the total cargo load of the vessel — was below grade, i.e., contained BCFM, musty, caked or sour corn.

Asked if he thought the Polish firm received what it had contracted for, Mangum replied: "In the case of the center tanks I would say it did not."

Cook confirmed that his company has not reached a final settlement with the Polish firm on the deal, but he said this had nothing to do with the quality of the shipment.

Cook said the reason for the discrepancies between his firm's samples and USDA's is that USDA took samples from portions of the ship where BCFM is usually found in greatest quantities.

"I don't believe them when they say they took representative samples," he said. "They set about their examination in a biased way and eventually abandoned their efforts to obtain samples which were representative of the cargo as a whole."

Mangum answered that USDA had taken samples from all sections of the ship and those samples taken from BCFM-prone areas were so marked.

The committee also found little answer to the question of whether the licensed USDA inspector at the loading elevator willfully misgraded the grain.

Cook defended the inspectors at the Drestreham, La. Board of Trade as "pretty good." USDA officials who boarded the RYSS in port have said there is "an appearance of willful misgrading" but their investigation is not complete.

Mangum showed a series of slides of the grain in question before it left port. He also distributed photos of the corn. Not to be outdone, Cook offered a motion picture of standard loading techniques to show how foreign matter can inadvertently lodge in a shipment. He also interrupted his testimony to show slides and distribute photos.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has always been a blood donor but he can no longer give blood. When he went to give blood for a man who needed it the test showed syphilis.

Needless to say this caused a problem with us and I was in shock because I have always trusted my husband. The doctor had me come in and they tested me and I had a negative result. They tested my husband some more and said it was a high protein count which gave the same results.

He will never be able to give blood again. This has caused some questions in my mind. Why is this so? The doctor would give me no answer on this. All he said was it happens sometimes and he has seen couples who couldn't cope with it and were divorced. Would you please explain if it is possible and give more details about it.

I do love my husband but it has caused me to doubt him and not have the complete trust that I did have in our marriage.

DEAR READER — The standard blood test for syphilis is merely a chemical reaction. When a person has had syphilis he may (but does not always have) a chemical in the blood that produces a specific reaction and results in a positive test. That's why the test is useful in detecting someone who has had syphilis.

Things don't stop there. The body is also able to produce a similar or like chemical in certain other conditions which are not associated with syphilis at all. Then when the same test is done this chemical will cause a positive test. We call these false positives. The value of a laboratory test is dependent upon its ability to detect a disease without giving false positive reactions in people who do not have it.

The standard syphilis blood test is pretty good but not perfect. There are individuals who have false positive tests. Additional tests can also be run to narrow this problem down for the individual. I presume from your remarks that your doctor is quite confident that your husband did not have syphilis and that his test reaction is caused by one of these flukes in chemical reactions. I fail to see how you can blame your husband for having a chemical reaction in his blood stream over which he had no control at all.

Your doctor has told you he doesn't have syphilis. He has also tested you as part of the total examination and determined that you don't have syphilis despite having lived in the marriage with your husband for years. What else do you need? While I can't vouch for your husband's behavior, your statements lead me to believe that he has a clean bill of health as far as any evidence of venereal disease. You're reacting to something that is not too different than if he showed up with mild jaundice because he had a chemical reaction in the blood.

You should be happy that the medical tests showed that your husband did not have venereal disease. Your concern really should be directed toward hoping that the unique chemical reaction that he had does not indicate that he has any important medical problems that will affect his health in the future.

Institute blames population

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The world's growing population is intensifying problems ranging from inflation to the erosion of individual rights, the Worldwatch Institute said Saturday.

The nonprofit, research institute said its study of 22 dimensions of the population problem showed "national and international leaders can no longer dodge the peril inherent in continuing rapid population growth."

"While slowing the growth in human numbers is not a panacea for all of humanity's problems," it said, the consequences of unchecked fertility should underline the urgent need to slow population growth.

The 80 page study said since the 18th century, when Malthus first made the connection between population and food supplies, there has been a "single-minded" focus on that aspect of the over-all problem. Worldwatch said others were at least as serious.

Among the other dimensions Worldwatch looked at were inflation, literacy, unemployment, hunger, housing, environmental illnesses and individual freedom.

In the 1970s, the study said, "a new source of long-term inflation has begun to emerge" — scarcity-induced inflation of such strategic items as petroleum, firewood, cereals and soybeans. Most of it is attributable to population growth.

"With 4 billion consumers already on the scene and 200,000 more being added each day, scarcity-induced inflationary pressures may become chronic," the study said.

"Indeed, inflation poses one of the most difficult challenges political leaders will face in the years ahead. What they must now realize is that, without a marked slowdown in population growth, inflation may simply not be manageable."

It said one of the "intractable consequences" of rising population growth may be chronic unemployment. Between 1970 and 2000, another 922 million jobs will be required in the developing countries as the working force doubles within the span of a generation.

"As more and more people require space and resources on this planet, more and more rules and regulations are required to supervise individual use of the earth's resources for the common good," the study said, warning new political strictures "may necessarily abrogate some forms of freedom."

Whalen wants change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Charles W. Whalen Jr., R-Ohio, wants to stop his House colleagues from pocketing money they get to help pay for office expenses.

The Ohio Republican said Saturday he would introduce legislation requiring members to return any money left at the end of each Congress.

Under existing House regulations, a member can take money from his so-called "stationery allowance" of $6,500 a year and use it as he wants.

While the practice is legal,

Whalen said it was an "indirect" way for members to increase their $42,500-a-year salaries.

"This is not the intent in providing a stationery allowance," he said. "The funds are provided to defray the legitimate administrative costs of operating a congressional office."

Whalen said his bill to prevent members from using the money for other than office expenses would "help to restore confidence in the Congress during a period of great public cynicism."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Normally you're pretty good at zeroing-in on specific targets, but today you could spread your forces too thin.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't delegate responsibilities today to those who can't be relied upon. It could cause you needless problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will have difficulty today in getting one who is indebted to you to ante up, especially if you try pressure tactics.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your mate and others of your family may have to be handled with extra tact today. Bend a little to keep them pleased.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't expect co-workers today to do more than you're prepared to do yourself. Set a poor example, and they'll follow it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you purchase something today from a firm you've never dealt with before, make sure you can return it if necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Make an extra effort to fulfill promises that are now due. Reneging on them could hurt your image.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't do anything today against your better judgment just to even-up an old score. It will only complicate the issue.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Greeting cards were originally born out of the need to say for people what they couldn't say for themselves.

I once gave my mother a card depicting a little girl in a hoop skirt knocking on the door of a cottage and saying, "You bask in the sunshine of sweetness and light . . . and make all my dreams come true . . . prithree reap the harvest of all my love . . . in everything you do. Happy birthday."

Mother smiled and said, "It sounds just like you."

"Prithree, mother," I said, "you've been basking in the sunshine too long. All I wanted to say was I'm not much, but I'm all you can afford."

Not so today. I've never seen so many cards for so many occasions saying greetings in so many ways in all my life.

Some of them you can even send through the mails.

If you put your foot in your mouth and are sorry, there's a card for it.

If you won a tennis tournament, a diploma in sheetmetal, a divorce, or passed your eye examination, there's a card for it.

I even saw one that said, "I love living with you because I've got a case on you." When you open it up, it threatens, "Marry me or I'm taking you to court."

There are marriage proposals, business proposals, vacation proposals and some proposals that are just plain indecent.

I was picking out a Valentine for my husband when a salesperson asked if she could help. "I'd like something a little sentimental." "Here's one," she said, handing me a card. My ears turned red. "You wanta see my I.D.?"

"That one's not so bad," she said. "We had one that was waterproof so you could read it under a cold shower. Just tell me what you want to say and how you want to say it."

"Maybe I'll just get a Mother's Day card."

"Unwed? Underage? Unwanted? Undone? Unsung? Unexpected? Underfoot?"

"Just something that will sound like me."

"Here's one that might fit you. It's a little strange. 'You bask in the sunshine of sweetness and light and make all my dreams in accord . . . prithree, mother, you know I'm not much . . . but face it, I'm all you can afford.'"

Good grief.

Green Tops Barber, field in Florida

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Hubert Green frequently is overlooked when people talk about "super stars" on the pro golf tour.

But his record speaks pretty loudly for itself.

Green, a 29-year-old Birmingham, Ala., native has been on the tour only five and a half years, but has won 10 tournaments and more than $616,000.

He picked up his second tournament victory in two weeks Sunday by beating Miller Barber by two strokes in the Greater Jacksonville Open. True, he didn't have "super star" Jack Nicklaus to contend with here — but Hubert beat the "Golden Bear" by six strokes the Sunday before in the Doral Open.

"Nicklaus wins more than anyone else percentage-wise, I guess," said Green, who raised his earnings the past two weeks to more than $89,000 to move past Nicklaus and Johnny Miller into fourth place on this year's money list.

"But, he doesn't win everything."

Green, who has yet to win a "major" championship (Nicklaus has won 15), hopes his current hot streak will carry through the Masters, three weeks from now.

"But, I won't feel good about the Masters 'til April, when I get there."

Green was eighth in last year's Masters, nine strokes behind champion Nicklaus.

His win here Sunday was his third in six months since he won the Southern Open last September for his only 1975 triumph after winning three tournaments and more than $200,000 in 1974.

Green says he's more interested in the victories than the money they bring.

"I'm out on the tour trying to win titles, not money!" he said.

Green threw away an early three-stroke lead Sunday when he took a double-bogey five at the third hole, throwing his putter on the ground in disgust when he missed the second of three putts he needed after driving into a sand trap.

"I hit a four-iron into the bunker, then lost my concentration," he explained.

Green quickly regained his composure with a birdie at the next hole and reopened a three-stroke lead at

No. 11 when he birdied and Barber bogeyed.

But the tournament wasn't over.

When Barber birdied 16 and Green bogeyed 17, Green went into the final hole protecting a one-stroke lead and promptly hit "a very stupid tee shot that ran through the trees into a bunker on the left."

Green took a nine-iron out of his bag and placed the ball just 18 inches from the cup to set up a birdie to double his lead.

That gave Green, who had shot 67s in both the second and third rounds, a 70-276 to tie the total he shot when he won this tournament two years ago.

"It was a fine round for Hubert," said Barber, who finished 71-278. "He used great shots and sure worked with the elements, especially the wind."

Ed Dougherty, an unheralded tour scion, shot a closing 67 to tie Mike Hill (71) for third place at 279. U.S. Open champ Lou Graham was fifth at 71-280 and South Africa's Gary Player, who has earned $4,000 in the five weeks he's been back in the United States, was sixth at 70-281.

Ben Crenshaw, the only other golfer besides Green to win two tournaments back-to-back this year, was seventh at 70-282 and Lee Elder, who now has only two more chances to receive another bid as the only black golfer to play in the Masters, was eighth at 71-283.

Green said he doesn't know what the back-to-back victories will do for his golf career.

For Slims laurels

Goolagong trip Navratilova

DALLAS (UPI) — Husband-coach Roger Cawley describes Evonne Goolagong's tennis as an art form — a method of expression.

In the Virginia Slims tournament Sunday, Miss Goolagong's art was worth a first place, $15,000 check. She defeated her five opponents in the tournament in straight sets and whipped Martina Navratilova in the finals, 6-1, 6-1.

"This is the best I've played for a long while," Miss Goolagong said. "Not for a long time have I gone through without losing a set."

It was the her third win on the Slims circuit this year, boosting her total earnings to $63,125. In winning second, Miss Navratilova picked up an $8,500 check and immediately announced she would take three weeks off.

Pampa boys capture Perryton net crown

PERRYTON — The Pampa boys A-team, led by singles champion Don Hughes, rolled to the team championship, the first for Pampa in history according to Coach Kent King, Saturday in the Perryton Sports Festival.

Pampa tallied 13 points in the boys "A" Division to finish ahead of Borger 10, Perryton 7, Canadian 4 and Sanford - Fritch, Hartley, Panhandle, Stratford and Dalhart, which did not score.

The Harvesters finished fifth in the girls "A" Division, which was won by Borger. Pampa won both the B-team boys and girls titles.

Hughes whipped Mark Neilson of Borger, 7-6, 7-6, for the championship in boys singles. Neilson had beaten Kenny the young Czech was hampered with tendonitis in her right wrist which she said brought pain to just about every shot she attempted.

Because of the weak wrist, Miss Navratilova was never a factor in the match. She said she rushed the net several times in hope of offsetting the handicap, but it didn't help.

"It was the only chance I had," she said. "From the baseline, I couldn't do it."

But even if her opponent had been stronger, Miss Goolagong's husband says it probably wouldn't have made much difference.

"I don't think she knows she's going to win when she walks onto the court," Cawley said before the finals match. "But she does know when she's playing well. And I think she knows if she's playing well no one can beat her."

Cawley said Miss Goolagong's mental game had proved as important to her this year as her play on the court.

"Just about every player on the circuit has the same degree of skill," he said. "The difference is in how Evonne thinks."

In the boys doubles finals, Borger's Puckett Shipman and Tommy Faulkner downed Curtis Henry and Kent Jones of Pampa, 6-1, 6-1, in the finals.

Shipman and Faulkner whipped John Grady and Wayne Williams of Pampa, 6-0, 6-3, in the semifinals.

In the girls doubles finals, Borger's Laura Jack and Kay Clark topped Anne Henderson and Stacy Douglass, 6-3, 6-1.

The term "Big Two, Little Eight" no longer is the exclusive property of the Big Ten in the description of its football fortunes.

The calling card can also be attached to the Big Ten's basketball efforts, now that surprising Michigan has joined not so surprising Indiana in the final four of the NCAA tournament.

And you can bet the roundball "Big Two" will carry the conference's pride a bit farther than the other "Big Two" did in postseason football adventures.

Michigan, runnerup to undefeated Indiana during the Big Ten's regular season despite winning 14-of-18 games, topped Big Eight champion Missouri, 95-88, Saturday to win the Midwest regional. Indiana, the No. 1 ranked team all season, methodically moved down No. 2 ranked Marquette 65-56 to win the Midwest regional.

The other two NCAA semifinal berths went to defending champion UCLA, an 82-66 victor over Arizona in the West regional, and third-ranked Rutgers, a 91-75 winner over VMI in the East regional.

The four survivors will gather this weekend in Philadelphia, with the two semifinal games Saturday and the championship game Monday night.

Michigan could not match Missouri guard Willie Smith but the Tigers did not possess the overall bench to match the Wolverines. And one man does not a team, nor champion, make.

Smith scored 43 points but was neutralized late in the game by reserve guard Dave Baxter, a defensive move by Coach Johnny Orr which enabled and Locke Carter of Pampa whipped Canadian's Johnson and Crissman, 8-2.

In "B" semifinals, Joe Adcock of Pampa defeated Bob Lemon of Booker, 9-8.

"When our boys won the team title, I did some checking back and I think it's the first championship Pampa has ever won. I'm really tickled with the way they played. I expected Don Hughes to win, but when guys like Kenny Barrett, John Grady and Wayne Williams — our second teamers — made the semifinals, it really made the tournament," King said.

Pampa hosts Perryton Thursday in a dual match, then travels to the Borger Invitational Tournament, set for Friday and Saturday.

Michigan to gain the final four for the first time since 1965 when the Cazzie Russell-led Wolverines fell to UCLA in the title game, 91-90.

Baxter held Smith to one basket in the final five minutes and finished with 18 points of his own.

"I'm just not used to losing; never have been," said Smith. "We could have gone either way, but I can't take anything away from them, they're a great team."

Rickey Green led Michigan with 23 points, while Johnny Robinson added 21 points and freshman center Phil Hubbard contributed 20.

Indiana's victory may have cost the NCAA one of its most colorful characters — Marquette Coach Al McGuire — who was called for two technical fouls in the game and afterwards claimed he was through forever with tournament play.

"I won't come to any more tournaments," said McGuire in an emotional press conference after the loss. "I personally feel I'm affecting my team's play in tournaments."

"If we make a tournament while I'm still around I will let my assistants handle it. I didn't tell the team this. They will

Royals name first pitchers

FORT MYERS, Fla. (UPI) — The Kansas City Royals have named four players to share pitching duties in the season's opening exhibition game this week against Texas.

Paul Spittorf, Marty Pattin, Steve Mingori and newcomer Ray Sadecki will pitch in Wednesday's game against the Rangers.

For the first time since spring training started, the full Royals squad worked out Sunday, with first baseman John Mayberry and outfielder Al Cowens joining their 32 teammates.

Coach Charley Lau also came to camp to take charge of batting practice. Lau's appearance, however, was preceded by a 17-hour sailing adventure in the Florida Keys last week.

Lau, who lives in Key Marathon, Fla., went fishing about 1 p.m. Wednesday in his 18-foot skiff and returned to land almost a day later after being rescued by the Coast Guard.

"I wasn't having much success and instead of turning right and heading back home, I made a left turn to get some bait and continue," he said. "I got into deeper water and into trouble. When I didn't get home by 7 p.m. my wife wisely alerted the Coast Guard. I had broken a piston and with my radio battery dead, I really was in trouble."

ladies who had a real good game on their averages. Ann Newsome had a 201 on a 138 average and Becky McElliot had a 200 on a 101 average. She missed her century patch by 1 pin. Better luck next year, girls.

Kentucky snares NIT championship

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kentucky, which has won four national championships, calmly added a second National Invitation Tournament title to its glorious basketball history.

The 71-67 victory Sunday over UNC-Charlotte touched off no wild celebrations or emotional displays on the part of the Wildcats.

But it was a special moment for senior guard Reggie Warford.

Warford scored 14 points for the Wildcats and played a vital role in their victory over UNC-Charlotte.

Only two weeks ago, Warford started the first game of his Kentucky career in the Wildcats' upset of Alabama, a victory celebrated with more exuberance than the NIT title.

A rib cage muscle tear threatened to keep Warford on the bench against UNC-Charlotte, but he talked coach Joe Hall into letting him start his last game and the low-scoring guard came through with 14 crucial points.

With Mike Phillips and Jack Givens on the bench for 10 minutes of the second half with four fouls each, it was left for Warford, who had only a 6.6 average, and backcourt mate Larry Johnson to do the scoring. Johnson finished with 16, which tied Phillips for Kentucky's high-scoring honors.

Kentucky coach asked Warford before the game if he was able to play and the 6-foot guard replied, "What difference does it make? I don't have to worry about it later."

After the game, Warford told reporters: "If I had missed my first shot, I would have asked coach to take me out of the game. I'd rather sit on the bench and watch the team win than hurt it by playing."

"I'm just going back to the playgrounds. It's the same, only there aren't 13,000 people watching. You just turn around and give each skin on a good shot. I'll shoot a lot."

North Carolina State won the NIT's third-place trophy with a 74-69 victory over Providence as Kenny Carr scored 15 points and Phil Spence 14 to lead the Wolfpack.

Ladies' tourney in full swing

By GIL WUEST
Mgr., Harvester Lanes
The Women's City Tournament is in full swing and we want to congratulate the women on the fine turnout of participants.

For a lot of you, this is your first tourney while some are using this as a warmup for the Nationals at Denver and State at Longview. We want to extend to you all the luck in the world and have fun too!

Men, attention! The ladies leader in the tournament rolled a magnificent score in her doubles competition to win. Paulette Gilbert started out with a 204 and then a 247 and could up with a 247! This came to a 692 scratch score. We want to acknowledge that this is the highest ladies scratch series rolled at Harvester Lanes. Paulette is a Pampa girl that has bowled here all her life.

After one week of competition this is how the standings look.

Editor leaves unique legacy

HONOLULU (UPI) — Gene Hunter, 50, a hard-hitting associate editor for the Honolulu Advertiser, wrote in his own obituary that upon his death he didn't want a funeral but he wanted to pay for a party for his friends.

Hunter, known for his incisive enterprise stories, died Friday after suffering a heart attack while waiting to see a heart specialist at a hospital.

His wishes were granted. His ashes will be scattered over the Pacific without ceremony, and $200 from his estate will be set aside for the party.

Hunter, known for his many news sources, wrote many stories on underworld operations in Hawaii. He once was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize.

He completed his last assignment for the Advertiser on Wednesday, and his last byline appeared in the paper the day before his death.

Hunter is survived by his widow, Artie, his son, Steven, and his daughter, Leilani.

Candidates form own parties

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
From the right and from the left, there is continuing talk of third party movements this election year.

George Wallace insists he will not lead such an effort again, despite his struggle in the early primaries. But in New York State, the rumor insists he already is working to set up the machinery to get on the ballot as a third party candidate.

And the rumor comes from elsewhere, too, that Wallace might be the candidate of the American Independence Party — a splinter group of the American Party.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire, a conservative who backed Ronald Reagan in the nation's first primary, is being talked of as the American Party candidate. Thomson will hold talks soon with American Party chairman Tom Anderson in Pigeon Forge, Tenn.

Reagan also has disavowed any third party effort, should his challenge to Ford continue to fail in the Republican primaries.

Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy already has announced his independent candidacy for the presidency — but according to financial statements filed with the Federal Election Commission, his campaign is at a standstill.

If Sen. Henry M. Jackson wakes up Jan. 21, 1977, as President, he's going to have to make up his mind.

"The first order of business for the next administration must be to turn the nation's economy around, to bring unemployment down and to stop inflation dead in its tracks," Jackson said Nov. 23, 1975 at a candidate's forum in Louisville.

"I intend to make health care

... the No. 1 program of my administration as President," Jackson said Jan. 23, 1976 in Washington.

In Rochester, N.Y., on March 15, Jackson said the first act he would take as President would be to have "the federal government assume full responsibility of the cost of welfare."

"Housing will be our No. 1 priority," Jackson said in Harlem March 18.

On May 11, voters in Nebraska will have a chance to vote for Richard M. Nixon.

Peteris Taurins of Lincoln, Neb., has won a place on the state primary ballot as a Republican delegate pledged to the former president. Taurins said he filed to give Nebraska "a chance to protest President Richard M. Nixon's martyrdom by media."

For lack of 35 signatures out of 5,000 needed, Rep. Morris Udall may not be on the Indiana primary ballot May 4.

IRS after extortionist before time runs out

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — "D.B. Cooper," wherever you are? You're in trouble with the tax people.

The Internal Revenue Service disclosed that the parachuting skydiver who disappeared between Reno, Nev., and Seattle in 1971 owes the government $235,906 in taxes and penalties because of the $200,000 he extorted from Northwest Orient Airlines.

But "D.B. Cooper" can take some comfort in knowing that the statute of limitation for his Thanksgiving eve caper runs out in November.

The IRS computed the amount owed the government on the presumption he was single and had no other income during the period.

The agency said he would be taxed $53,090 on the first $100,000 and $70,000 on the rest of the money. Civil fraud penalties for failure to file would be $0 per cent of the tax due, or $61,545. Interest at seven per cent per year on the amount due would be about $34,000, bringing the total to $128,635.

This would not include, however, a possible late filing penalty of $70,771, a late payment penalty of $7,300. This would bring his bill to $295,906.

School To Tax Cars, Trucks, Boats

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

In order to help finance the increasing price of Pampa's public education system, the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees voted Thursday night to tax cars, trucks, boats, mobile homes, boats, recreational vehicles, and the like.

The 15-item agenda of the board meeting included a vote on the tax.

Buzzards snub Hinckley crowd

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

The buzzards had come back to Whippie Ledges, and it was time for the all-day pancake and sausage breakfast to commemorate the event.

Sunday, about 30,000 persons — some from as far away as Texas and Massachusetts — participated in the annual Hinckley Buzzard Day. Five buzzards watched them from the ledges of Hinckley Lake Park.

Legend has it the buzzards were attracted to this northeastern Ohio area by a big hunt in 1818 and came to feast on the carcasses.

They have returned every year since on March 15, and this year was no exception. Buzzard Day is observed the first Sunday after March 15. It has been an annual event since 1957.

This year, the buzzards spent some time in the roost area at Whippie Ledges in the park, then later flew into the wooded area behind the ledges.

For Buzzard Day, the Hinckley Chamber of Commerce hosted a daylong pancake and sausage breakfast and nature clubs conducted tours of the area.

The buzzards stay in Hinckley through the spring. In the fall they go southeast off the coast of Florida and down to South America.

Although only five buzzards have arrived to date, about 60 to 70 can be expected this year, officials said.

One park ranger called the buzzards "nature's garbage can" because they feast on road kills while they are here.

Many early arrivals were young persons who "came to look at the birds and eat breakfast." Families arrived later, many with picnic lunches.

One buzzard, "Isis," spent the day in a glass cage so visitors could get a close look at her.

Broken windows prompt action on pellet guns

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills instructed officers today to bring in to the police station anyone found out with a BB or pellet gun.

"Parents are reminded that it is illegal for kids to be shooting them anyway," he said.

Chief Mills' instructions follow a recent rash of broken windows and other damage caused by pellet guns, resulting in hundreds of dollars property damage.

He added that within the past week at least 15 such incidents have been reported.

"A lot of the damage has been done by older children," he said. "I can hear fathers scream now, the first time their 16-year-old gets drug down. But I can see little excuse for a child to be out at 11 o'clock at night with a pellet gun."

In reports last weekend, Don Wayne Case of 1921 Evergreen said someone broke a window at his business, 2115 N. Hobart. Police investigation showed it had been done with a pellet gun.

Gary Don Baker reported

someone broke the front door of his home with a pellet gun. Gary E. Morrison of 1421 Williston reported that someone shot through a pickup windshield and two windows of his residence with a BB gun.

Other reports today included burglary and vandalism.

Timothy Michael Powers of the Brotherhood Hall at Weidman College reported that he left his car on 22nd Street, and when he returned he found that someone had thrown a rock through the front windshield.

A large rock was found at the scene, according to the report.

A juvenile was bitten on the shoulder by a German Shepherd dog owned by M.A. Sharp.

Victor Don Carter of 617 N. Cuyler said during the past two days someone pried open a window, crawled through and took a five-piece stereo component system.

Jerry Donaldson of 1119 S. Christy advised that a rock was thrown through the glass at the south end of his garage.

Velda Williams of 2116 N. Christy said she was visiting on Beech Street when someone entered her unlocked car and took her purse and ripped a CB radio from the vehicle.

Clyde Durham of 1189 Prairie said his vehicle was entered. A CB radio and 12 tapes were taken.

U.S. pullout underway

By ALAN DAWSON
BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI)

— The United States has begun its final military withdrawal from Thailand less than 24 hours after the government ordered an end to the U.S. presence. Pro-American youths angry at the government decision attacked leftist demonstrators with guns and a grenade.

Three persons were killed and several dozen wounded in the clashes Sunday.

Two C-130 flights carrying 118 soldiers who manned an electronic monitoring station north of Bangkok left Thailand late Sunday night, U.S. military sources said.

All operations at three electronic monitoring bases north of Bangkok and at U Tapao airbase ceased at one minute past midnight Sunday, the sources said.

They said the withdrawal of more than 3,500 U.S. servicemen from Thailand will be completed as quickly as possible, probably well before the July 20 deadline set by the government.

"We don't stay where we're not wanted," said U.S. Ambassador Charles Whitehouse.

An estimated 3,000 leftist demonstrators marched through the streets of the capital to the U.S. Embassy Sunday to cheer the government's decision. They were met by about 1,000 right-wing youths who fired guns and tossed a hand grenade at them.

Three persons were reported killed in the clashes and 66 were wounded, 15 seriously, police said. No Americans were involved and riot police kept the 3,000 leftist marchers out of the U.S. Embassy grounds.

Thai Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj called an emergency cabinet meeting but decided against declaring martial law since the demonstration had ended peacefully. But all troops and police in the capital were placed on full alert.

By Monday morning, the gates to the sprawling Embassy grounds were open as usual and all employees were back at work after the weekend holiday.

American sources said helicopters were being used to dismantle the huge antennae at the electronic surveillance base at Ramasun, 465 miles north of Bangkok.

Talks to keep about 3,000 non-combat U.S. personnel here indefinitely collapsed Friday.

Exempted from the withdrawal order were 270 advisers, who oversee U.S. military aid to Thailand, expected to be $25 million in the coming year.

Star caught with pot

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — British rock star David Bowie

was arrested Sunday on a charge of felony possession of marijuana.

Bowie, who was booked as David Robert Jones of London, and three companions were arrested on fifth-degree marijuana possession in a three-room suite at the Americana Rochester Hotel by vice squad members and a state police investigator. About eight ounces of marijuana were seized, authorities said. The Class C felony charge carries a 15-year maximum sentence.

They were later released on $2,000 bond each and ordered to return to court today.

However, Thomas Presutti, Bowie's attorney, says his client left the city Sunday for a concert in Massachusetts.

Presutti said he will "request the court's indulgence" today, since there are heavy penalties for breaking concert engagements.

Bowie was expected back in Rochester on Wednesday, Presutti added.

Also arrested with Bowie were a Rochester woman, Chiwah Soo, 20, and two members of Bowie's entourage, James Osterberg Jr., 28, of Ypsilanti, Mich., and Dwain Vaughns, 22, of New York.

Bowie appeared at downtown concert earlier in the evening.

Foreign news commentary

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — Brazil is the latest power to contend for influence in Africa. The Portuguese-speaking South American power has established a foothold in Africa through ties with new nations that were once, like itself, colonies of Portugal.

Early this year, Brazil announced it was establishing full diplomatic relations with Angola, Mozambique, Sao Tome and Principe, Equatorial Guinea, Upper Volta and Lesotho.

The Angola case brought criticism at home from conservatives in the strongly anti-Communist leadership. Brazil claims to be the first country to recognize the Soviet-backed MPLA government — even before the civil war that resulted in an MPLA victory.

New Pitch in Drug Campaign
BOGOTA, Colombia, (UPI) — American officials are trying a new pitch to get maximum cooperation from Colombia in the campaign to halt the flow of illicit drugs, especially cocaine, from South America to the United States.

The Americans have organized top-level seminars and carried out surveys to impress upon the Colombians that they have a drug abuse problem, too, although incipient, and it is in their own interest to cooperate with U.S. prevention programs.

The campaign is designed to dispel the idea that the drug traffic is exclusively a North American problem.

Political Repercussions
SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — The worst business recession in Puerto Rico in 25 years threatens to topple the ruling popular Democratic Party, which has dominated political life on the island since World War II.

The second largest party on the island, the pro-statehood New Progressive Party, has launched a militant campaign for the governorship and legislature in the November elections. Political observers say it has at least an even chance.

The Puerto Rican Independence Party, which got 5 percent of the vote in 1974 elections, expects a stronger showing this time although it has no chance to win the governorship.

Paying Plenty for Plates
SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — March is the month for Chilean motorists to renew their auto license plates — at staggering rates.

Chile lays on heavy fees on a sliding scale based on car value. The owner of a 1975 Buick Riviera will pay $600 for his new plates. The top rate is $1,200 for a 1975 Mercedes-Benz 450-SLC. The owner of a 1950 Studebaker pays $4.

The Coup Game
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Rumors of a military coup to overthrow President Isabel Peron have circulated so often in the Argentine capital in recent months that predicting the date has almost reached the status of a parlor game.

People who claim to have surefire inside sources even carry around slips of paper on which they have jotted down the names of military officers who will supposedly take charge of government departments when the coup comes.

A recent upswing on Buenos Aires' normally anemic stock market is being referred to as a "coup boom" — the expectation a military takeover will be good for business.

UPI's Martin McReynolds reports the military men have been reluctant to step in despite the disastrous economic situation, scrambled politics and continuing guerrilla violence. They know anyone who takes power will have to carry out harsh and unpopular measures to clean up the mess.

Venezuela Not Ripe
CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Interior Minister Octavio Lepage says he does not believe Venezuela is ripe for another guerrilla outbreak despite the emergence of an extremist "Group of Revolutionary Commands" which made its debut by kidnapping American industrialist William Niehaus. Lepage said the kidnapping was executed by an ultraleftist group dedicated to maintaining a superficial climate of unrest. He noted that lack of popular support helped condemn to failure Venezuela's strong guerrilla movements of the 1960s.

Street Peddlers Unwelcome
LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Authorities have begun another battle against the army of street peddlers so numerous they block sidewalks and overflow into the streets, causing monumental traffic jams.

There are about 20,000 street peddlers in Lima and they have survived former attempts to ban them because they seem to satisfy a need. On a casual walk, a shopper can pick up a family wardrobe, hot and cold snacks, kitchen implements, pottery tickets and numerous other products from the sidewalk stands.

SPECIAL EVENT
NEW ORLEANS, La. (UPI) — The second annual France-Louisiana Festival has been scheduled in New Orleans from July 4-14. The festival will be part of the special Bicentennial celebrations here and will be kicked off with daylong events on the Fourth of July and end with Bastille Day festivities on July 14.
