Midland police say crime continues to drop

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

Serious crimes in Midland dropped 5.88 percent in 2012, according to data released Friday by the Midland Police Department.

There were 3,408 Part I crimes — those that are most likely to be reported and are serious in nature and/or volume — according to MPD.

There were double-digit percentage decreases in burglary (21.82 percent) and robbery (10.34 percent).

The city's crime rate has fallen in eight of the last nine years, according to MPD. The number of reported Part I crimes has declined each year since 2004, with the exception of 2009, when 4,360 were reported.

The department has continued its burglary-reduction strategy, which was implemented in June 2009, said MPD Chief Price Robinson. There were 909 burglaries reported that year, and the new strategy has helped reduce reported burglaries by 38.5 percent since then. In 2012, 559 burglaries were reported.

Robinson said the Crime Prevention Unit is working with local retailers and merchants through robbery and burglary prevention programs and teaching employees how to pay attention to detail if they are victimized and report information back to the police.

In mid-2009, the city experienced a 19 percent increase in burglaries. Since then, the number has consistently decreased, Robinson said.

"We're just concentrating on the number of burglaries that are occurring and addressing them before they really get to be big problems," he said.

MPD attributes the decrease in crime to its partnership with the community and the continued dedication of officers and detectives. MPD also uses crime data and statistics to identify possible crime trends or spikes in crimes in a specific part of the city.

Robinson said work of the CPU and programs such as Citizens on Patrol, Crime Stoppers and the annual National Night Out block parties have led to a

Abilene group protests at Planned Parenthood in Midland

By Audrie Palmer
apalmer@mrt.com

For the third year in a row, the Abilene-based group West Texans for Life gathered in front of Midland's Planned Parenthood to protest for civil rights for the unborn.

A bus carrying 35 adults and children dropped the group off Friday at the Secor Street and Ohio Avenue intersection at 1:30 p.m. and returned an hour later to take the group to San Angelo, where they planned to gather in front of a clinic at 4 p.m.

While this week marked the 40th anniversary of the Roe v. Wade decision by the Supreme Court, Dr. Jim Suliman, West Texans for Life vice president, said that the anniversary was not the reason the group came to Midland.

Instead, they were here in honor of Martin Luther King Jr., whose birthday was celebrated Monday and who fought for civil rights for African-Americans and other minorities.

What has happened to the current movement to end abortion, Suliman said, is that many right wing and religious "fanatics" make the issue not about abortion but instead insert their own personal ideas and agenda.

But Suliman said West Texans for Life calls attention to what the abortion issue is: a civil rights issue for the unborn.

"We're emulating Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil rights crusade. Just like in the '60s when he loaded buses and headed to the South about the discriminatory practices, we're calling attention to the discrimination that is occurring today," he said.

"There is nothing religious. It's all about discrimination and equal rights for all."

West Texans for Life participants held signs displaying phrases such as "Equal rights for women, men, minorities, the disabled, and children in the womb," "social justice" and black signs with the organization's logo, "Recognize Life Crusade."

The word "Life" is in the shape of the letter E, and at first glance, passers-by may be confused as what the sign says.

"Only when you look at it more closely do you recognize 'Life,' and it's the same thing with babies," Suliman said.

The group printed 200 T-shirts with the logo on it and donated them to St. Stephen's Catholic Church in Midland to be handed out to teenagers and adults at this weekend's Youth 2000 retreat.

STATEBRIEFS

FROM WIRE REPORTS

EDINBURG

Teen could be tried as adult in agent's shooting

A South Texas judge said Friday he will take the weekend to consider whether a 17-year-old boy will stand trial as an adult for allegedly firing on a vehicle driven by a federal agent.

Hidalgo County District Judge Jesse Contreras said he was "puzzled" by the case of the boy who had no prior record and who a probation officer said was extremely compliant. At the end of arguments Friday, Contreras told attorneys he would offer his decision Tuesday.

Authorities say the boy's father, Pedro Alvarado, woke up his 18-year-old son, Arnoldo Alvarado, and his then-16-year-old son last July and told them a suspicious vehicle was parked near their home. The boy and the two men are charged with the attempted murder of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agent Kelton Harrison. The boy is charged in state court, while the men are charged in federal court.

The state asked that the 17-year-old be tried as an adult. Prosecutor Marisela Ledesma argued that the seriousness of the offense and the boy's own admission that he grabbed his .22-caliber rifle warranted that he be tried as an adult.

FORT WORTH

DA accused of sexually harassing prosecutor

A North Texas county has paid a $375,000 settlement to a female former prosecutor who accused the district attorney of sexually harassing her.

Tarrant County's payment is shown in a stack of records released by District Attorney Joe Shannon's office on Friday. Former prosecutor Sabrina Sabin alleged that the harassment went on for "a long period of time" and included graphic sexual comments. She also said she feared that she would be subjected to retaliation.

The documents were released after state Attorney General Greg Abbott ruled they were public records. The 72-year-old Shannon denied the allegations Friday and asserted that he didn't agree to the payment.

Shannon was appointed district attorney in May 2009 after the death of longtime DA Tim Curry. He won a full term in 2010.

AUSTIN

2 brothers sentenced for money laundering

Two of three brothers convicted in Austin of federal money-laundering conspiracy have received prison sentences.

Hussein Ali "Mike" Yassine was sentenced to a little more than 12½ years in federal prison, while Hadi Yassine drew a five-year prison term on Friday.

Prosecutors accused the two of using their nine downtown Austin bars to launder more than $200,000 in what they believed to be proceeds from drug trafficking.

HUNTSVILLE

Woman set to die next week loses clemency bid

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles has unanimously refused a clemency request from a Dallas County woman set to die next week for the slaying and robbery of a retired 71-year-old college psychology professor at her home.

Attorneys for Kimberly McCarthy had sought a 120-day reprieve from her scheduled Tuesday execution and that her sentence be commuted to life in prison.

The seven-member board Friday turned her down.

The 51-year-old McCarthy faces lethal injection in Huntsville for the 1997 stabbing and beating death of Dorothy Booth. Booth was a neighbor in Lancaster, about 15 miles south of Dallas. Evidence showed McCarthy called her to borrow a cup of sugar, then went to get it and attacked Booth.

BASTROP

Boy Scouts recruit help to restore burned park

The Boy Scouts of America are recruiting volunteers to help reforest a popular Central Texas campground devastated by 2011 wildfires.

The Texas A&M Forest Service says nearly half of the 5,000-acre Griffith League Scout Ranch was left charred by wildfires that destroyed a total of 32,400 acres of timber and 1,660 homes.

The Scouts and the Forest Service are working together to plant about 300,000 drought-resistant Loblolly pine seedlings over the next two years, with the first 50,000 plantings expected this year.

BROWNSVILLE

Dozens of dogs taken from home after mauling

Authorities in South Texas seized more than 25 dogs from a small home after a number of them turned on their owners while being fed.

Neighbors and others came to the aid of two women who were mauled Thursday at their Brownsville home. Sixty-three-year-old Josefina Ledezma and 51-year-old Estela Regalado suffered multiple bites and were taken to a hospital for treatment. A city ordinance prohibits residents from owning more than three dogs.

None of the animals had vaccination tags or collars. Twenty-six were taken from the home Thursday and officers returned Friday to confiscate more.

Charges dropped against woman convicted in child death

Associated Press

Prosecutors on Friday dismissed the last of the charges against a Houston day care provider who is already serving an 80-year prison sentence for the death of one of the children killed in a fire while she was out shopping.

A jury in November convicted Jessica Tata of murder in the death of 16-month-old Elias Castillo. She was indicted on nine charges, including four counts of murder, in the February 2011 fire in which four toddlers died and three others were injured. Hot oil Tata left on the stove caught fire while the children were alone when she was at a nearby Target store, authorities have said.

Any additional punishment the 24-year-old woman would face from further convictions would be served concurrently and not alter her sentence, Harris County Assistant District Attorney Steve Baldassano said. Tata is eligible for parole after 30 years, which also wouldn't change with any further convictions, he said.

A phone message left for defense attorney Mike DeGeurin at his Houston office was not immediately returned.

Baldassano said the jury considered testimony that pertained to all of the victims when it imposed its sentence.

"To give her that amount of time, they probably considered everything they heard, which included comments from all the families," he said.

Families of the children were notified of the decision to drop the remaining charges. She had also faced three counts of abandoning a child and two counts of reckless injury to a child.

"It didn't appear to me that they had any objections to it," Baldassano said.

Tata has appealed her conviction and should she win, prosecutors would re-try her for murder, he said. There's no statute of limitations on murder in Texas.

State District Judge Marc Brown approved the dismissal of the remaining charges. As a result, Tata will be transferred from the Harris County jail to state prison.

Tata operated the day care out of her home. During her trial, prosecutors painted a portrait of a young woman who had long wanted to run her own day care but who was soon in over her head, caring for too many kids and taking chances by leaving them alone to run errands.

The three other children who died in the fire were 3-year-old Shomari Leon Dickerson, 20-month-old Kendyll Stradford and 19-month-old Elizabeth Kajoh.

Tata fled to Nigeria after the fire but was captured after about a month, returned to the U.S. in March 2011 and has remained jailed since. She was born in the U.S. but has Nigerian citizenship.

College shooting prompted by 'idiocy'

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A young man accused of opening fire at a college after someone "bumped into" him was arrested Friday about 250 miles away from the Houston campus, authorities said.

Trey Foster, 22, was brought back to Houston after being arrested at around 1 a.m. in a home in the Dallas suburb of Plano, where he was apparently staying with acquaintances, Harris County Sheriff Adrian Garcia said. It's unclear how Foster got there after Tuesday's shooting that injured three men at Lone Star College, or whether his friends knew he was a fugitive, the sheriff said.

Foster

But, Garcia said, Foster "confirms that being bumped into is at the root of this incident." The sheriff blamed the incident on "idiocy and stupidity, and I think today I'll add pre-puberty behavior."

Authorities say at least 10 shots were fired during the incident, causing a campus-wide lockdown and terrifying students, some of whom immediately thought of the Connecticut elementary school shootings that killed 20 children last month.

A gun that authorities believe Foster used during the shootings was recovered during his arrest, Garcia said.

According to court documents, an argument erupted after 25-year-old Jody Neal bumped into Foster on campus. About 30 minutes later, Foster and his friend, 22-year-old Carlton Berry, spotted Neal near the doorway to the Academic Building. Foster fired at Neal, who was wounded in the abdomen and leg, the documents said. Neal ran into the campus library and collapsed.

According to the affidavit, Neal told investigators that Foster shot him. Berry, who was shot in the leg, was arrested at the scene. Bobby Cliburn, a 55-year-old maintenance worker who was standing nearby, was also shot in the leg.

Foster fled, and a manhunt ensued. But the affidavit does not say who shot Berry and Cliburn, and Garcia said officers are trying to determine whether Foster was the only one who fired a gun.

Berry and Foster are both charged with two felony counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Berry is scheduled to appear in court on Wednesday. Court documents say Foster is being held on a $50,000 bond and will appear in court Monday.

Arriving at the sheriff's office Friday morning, Foster acknowledged to reporters that he knew Berry but ignored other questions.

Witnesses reported seeing one person flee on foot after the shooting, the affidavit said.

Berry had a Lone Star College identification card, but officials are still determining whether he and Foster were enrolled at the school. Neal was pursuing his GED, and no charges are expected to be filed against him, according to the sheriff's office.

Minor earthquake shakes East Texas; no one hurt

Associated Press

TIMPSON — East Texas has had a minor earthquake.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the 4.1 magnitude quake happened at 1:01 a.m. Friday and was centered about two miles west-northwest of Timpson.

The Shelby County Sheriff's Office didn't have immediate reports of damage or injuries.

Timpson is a town of about 1,200 located 165 miles southeast of Dallas.

An earthquake earlier this week in the Dallas area had a 3.0 magnitude. Experts said Tuesday night's quake was centered about five miles north-northwest of Irving.

South Texas teacher, 60, accused of student relationship

Associated Press

PENITAS — A 60-year-old Spanish teacher in South Texas has been charged with having an improper relationship with an 18-year-old female student.

A spokeswoman for the La Joya Independent School District said Friday that Ruperto Salinas Villalon has been put on administrative leave.

Police on Jan. 8 responded to an incident at Palmview High School.

The Monitor newspaper reported Villalon on Wednesday surrendered on a charge of improper relationship between an educator and a student. School police Chief Raul Gonzalez declined to release the nature of the complaint. The charge is defined as an educator engaging in sexual conduct, sexual intercourse or deviate sexual intercourse with a student.

No publicly listed phone number could immediately be located for Villalon, who was freed Thursday after posting $5,000 bail.

Feds: $29M to protect Texas salamander habitat

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates the economic impact of protecting Central Texas habitats of four salamander species will be about $29 million over 23 years.

The federal agency that oversees care of endangered species said in a report released Thursday the costs associated with protecting about 6,000 acres in three counties are largely administrative. The service said it does not foresee impacts to water management activities, utility projects, mining or livestock grazing.

When the agency recommends listing species as endangered, it also limits activity in areas considered to be critical habitat. In this case, the service wants to protect habitat for the Austin blind salamander, the Jollyville Plateau salamander, the Georgetown salamander and the Salado salamander.

The public can comment on the report during the next 45 days.

LORDSBURG

Feds: 6 tons of pot seized at border checkpoint

Authorities say border patrol agents in New Mexico have seized six tons of marijuana in one of the agency's largest drug bust ever.

The U.S. Customs and Border Protection agency said Friday that agents at the Lordsburg station made the discovery this week after they stopped four vehicles traveling in a caravan.

Agents said the four vehicles were spotted traveling in tandem on New Mexico County Road 1.

Authorities said agents found in the vehicle around 13,000 pounds of marijuana, with a street value of about $10.9 million.

FBI: Woman arrested in bank robbery

The FBI says a Las Cruces woman has been arrested in connection with a bank robbery in the southern New Mexico city.

The FBI said agents arrested 58-year-old Yolanda Boyle in Las Cruces with assistance from the Las Cruces Police Department.

Authorities had said the First Convenience Bank in a Pro's Ranch Market was robbed on Thursday by a woman who presented a teller with a demand note.

ALBUQUERQUE

Police: Motorist stumbled into chase

Albuquerque police say the motorist who led officers on a televised high-speed chase was not the man officers thought they were after, but a suspected car thief who found himself in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Officers said they were called to a Blake's Lotaburger on Thursday because the manager thought the man suspected of having just robbed a sister store was in his parking lot. When police arrived, the man sped off in an SUV.

Officers gave chase, but he refused to stop, leading police on what ended up being a televised pursuit wrong way down city streets and over medians. After the man surrendered, police said they discovered 31-year-old Daniel Archuleta was not their robber. But he was arrested for driving a stolen vehicle and other charges stemming from the chase.

reduction in overall crime rates.

With the population of Midland on the rise, the department released crime statistics in June. But the numbers continued to decrease even to the end of the year.

"People see an increase in traffic and everything going up, and they assume crime is going up, too," the chief said.

Robinson said the traffic unit currently is staffed at the highest level of number of officers, who constantly work traffic issues on the loop and Highway 191 to keep up with the population boom.

One category that saw an increase in 2012 was aggravated assaults. Those numbers climbed 27.38 percent, from 252 in 2011 to 321 in 2012.

"Those are always going to be difficult to prevent," Robinson said. "They can be anything from a bar fight to a family violence case, such as if there's a disagreement and a fight breaks out. It's hard to be proactive."

Forcible rapes also were up, from 20 to 23, or 15 percent.

As far as being proactive in the community, Robinson said officers will continue with programs on various topics, such as bullying and women's self-defense, and work with media to remind residents to lock up their valuables and vehicles as a method of crime prevention.

Financial aid program may get big changes

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The popular Texas Grants financial aid program needs a lot more money if the state is going to keep up with the goal of helping poor students get the degrees they'll need to work, education officials say.

Texas education officials see two trends: growing numbers of poor students who will want to go to college and increasing demand by employers that workers have some level of college education. But lawmakers for the first time cut funding for the Texas Grants program in 2011, leaving it able to cover only about 59 percent of eligible students.

The mission of the Texas Grants program "is simply not sustainable" without more money or changes in how awards are granted, Higher Education Coordinating Board Commissioner Raymund Paredes told state lawmakers this week.

Created in 1999, the Texas Grants program has spent more than $2 billion in financial aid and helped 300,000 students.

The Higher Education Coordinating Board has asked the Legislature to put $164 million back into the program over the next two years or take other steps to drop the average award almost in half and require students to enroll in a minimum of 12 hours per semester. That could allow the state to spread the money around to more students.

After a decade of soaring tuition costs in Texas, "this is a critical time for higher education to remain affordable and available," board Chairman Fred Heldenfels told lawmakers.

State figures show that about 60 percent of children enrolled in Texas public schools now qualify as economically disadvantaged. And according to a national study by Georgetown University, 65 percent of jobs in the U.S. will require some level of postsecondary education by 2020. That's compared with just 28 percent in 1973.

Compounding the problem is the soaring cost of education. Texas deregulated tuition rates in 2003, allowing campuses to set their own, and since then the average student at a state university has seen their tuition and fees jump by 55 percent.

Those factors put the state economy at risk of "decades of declining competitiveness" if lawmakers don't act, Heldenfels said.

Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, who has championed Texas Grants, was doubtful the program would get all the money officials want, but is willing to consider the proposed changes to how grants are awarded.

"In my dreams, I would fully fund Texas Grants ... but that's not likely," Zaffirini said.

If lawmakers leave the program in its current form and funding, Texas Grants would cover only about 18 percent of new eligible students. Boosting funding would help the program cover up to 71 percent.

Students can use Texas Grants to attend any public college or university in the state. The maximum award possible is $7,400 per academic year to cover a student's total school costs, which can include transportation and clothing, as well as academic cost.

The coordinating board is already encouraging schools to limit grants to academic costs such as tuition and course materials. Writing that approach into law would drop the average award from $5,000 to $3,000. The board also wants to cap awards at eight semesters.

Even without more money, those changes could help thousands more students get some share of Texas Grants, the board says.

Critics warn the proposed changes could hurt students who attend colleges in cities where the cost of living is higher, such as Austin, Houston and Dallas.

Sen. Rodney Ellis, a Houston Democrat who passed the original Texas Grants bill 14 years ago, opposes reducing the award cap, even if it helps get money to more students. The program needs more money, Ellis said.

"It's not like reducing the amount of the grant does anything to reduce the actual cost of school. Someone would have to make up the difference, either the schools or the student," Ellis said.

Capping the grant to eight semesters could hurt some students who work and may need more time to graduate, Ellis said.

Zaffirini said lawmakers have been reluctant in the past to make big changes to a program that has been a successful pathway to college for poor and lower-middle income students.

In 2011, lawmakers changed Texas Grants from a first-come, first-served basis to one that gave priority to top academic performers who qualified financially. That change, which will begin with the 2013 fall semester, came after trends showed that about half of Texas Grants students don't graduate within six years.

"Every time someone recommends a change, it's very controversial," Zaffirini said, noting she opposed the priority grants model for years until sponsoring it herself in 2011.

"We had to be realistic," Zaffirini said. "We prioritized to help the students who were most qualified to excel."

West Texans for Life President Paula Matchen reiterated that the protest Friday was not about religion but that they wanted to bring awareness that abortion is a civil rights issue.

"They're taking the rights away from the baby, and I don't think anybody stops to think about that," she said.

Matchen also said the organization, which she founded, tries to help those women seeking an abortion by providing them alternative care and resources if they choose to continue carrying the baby.

"We're not here to condemn or criticize. Today, we're here to stand up for a baby's rights," she said.

"I wish there were hundreds of us out here today."

Subway is sorry for 'Footlong' length gaffe

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Subway is apologizing that its "Footlong" sandwiches fell short of expectations.

The world's largest fast-food chain faced widespread criticism last week after a man posted a photo online showing a "Footlong" next to a tape measure that showed it to be just 11 inches. Subway said Friday that it's redoubling efforts to "ensure consistency and correct length" in all its sandwiches.

The company had already noted last week that bread length could vary when franchisees don't bake to its exact specifications and that it would reinforce policies to ensure consistency.

Gatorade to remove controversial ingredient

Associated Press

NEW YORK — PepsiCo Inc. is removing a controversial ingredient from its Gatorade sports drink in response to customer complaints.

Molly Carter, a spokeswoman for the company, said Friday that the removal of brominated vegetable oil was in the works over the past year after the company began "hearing rumblings" from consumers about the ingredient. She said it wasn't a reaction to a recent petition on Change.org by a Mississippi teenager.

The ingredient is also used in other drinks, including some flavors of Powerade made by rival Coca-Cola Co. The Atlanta-based company did not say whether it would remove the ingredient from Powerade but noted that it takes customer concerns into account when looking for ways to improve its drinks.

Ingredients in food and drinks have come under greater scrutiny in recent years, helped by the ability of consumers to mobilize online. The petition on Change.org noted that brominated vegetable oil has been patented as a flame retardant and is banned in Japan and the European Union. It had more than 200,000 supporters Friday.

For Gatorade, Carter said the ingredient is used as an "emulsifier," meaning it distributes flavoring evenly so that it doesn't collect at the surface. She said it was used only in select varieties including orange and "citrus cooler." Other drinks that use brominated vegetable oil, or BVO, include Coca-Cola's Fanta and PepsiCo's Mountain Dew.

A spokesman for competitor Dr Pepper Snapple Group said Sun Drop and Squirt are among its drinks that have BVO.

Carter noted that the ingredient is not banned by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and that PepsiCo's decision wasn't the result of any health or safety concerns. She said it was specifically a response to concerns expressed by Gatorade customers. The company's decision was first reported by the trade journal Beverage Digest.

Pulin Modi, a spokesman for Change.org, said the move reflects the "shift in power we're seeing between businesses and their customers."

Sarah Kavanagh, the 15-year-old who posted the petition in November, said she's "very, very happy" that Gatorade is making the change. Kavanagh said she used to drink Gatorade frequently before she checked the ingredients to see if it was in line with her vegan diet. When she looked up brominated vegetable oil online, she didn't like what she found.

Now that the ingredient is being removed, she said she'll likely go back to drinking Gatorade. Kavanagh also taped a segment on the topic for "The Dr. Oz Show" this week that is set to air Wednesday.

PepsiCo, based in Purchase, N.Y., is replacing the BVO in Gatorade with an ingredient called sucrose acetate isobutyrate, which Carter said will maintain the flavor and taste of the drinks.

Although Americans have been drinking less soda since 1998, sports drinks have remained a growth area for PepsiCo and Coca-Cola. Gatorade remains the dominant player with about 69 percent of the market, while Powerade has 30 percent, according to Beverage Digest.

HOUSTON

Rig count increases by four to 1,753 this week

This week, the number of rigs actively exploring for oil and natural gas in the United States increased by four to 1,753, according to oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

There were 1,313 rigs listed as exploring for oil, 434 listed as searching for natural gas and four rigs listed as miscellaneous. Of the total number of wells, 181 were listed at directional, 1,127 were horizontal and 445 were vertical.

The rig count in Texas increased by six to 819. There were 917 rigs in Texas a year ago this week.

Among the other major oil- and gas-producing states, Oklahoma increased by eight rigs, Colorado by four and Louisiana by three.

Alaska's count dropped by five rigs, West Virginia by three and North Dakota and Pennsylvania by one each.

Arkansas, California, New Mexico and Wyoming were unchanged.

There were 621 rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in Canada this week, an increase of 20.

In the Gulf of Mexico, there were 51 rigs, up three.

NEW YORK

Oil posts slight loss; gasoline up to $3.33

The price of oil fell slightly Friday as a report showing a cooling off in new home sales offset the positive influence of ebullient U.S. stock markets.

Benchmark oil fell 7 cents to close at $95.88 in trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. It ended the week with a gain of 32 cents.

Oil prices are being supported by investors' confident mood, reflected by rising indexes in global stock markets and gains by the euro against the dollar.

A weaker dollar makes crude cheaper — and a more attractive investment — for traders using other currencies. On Friday, the euro was up at $1.3458 from $1.3378 late Thursday in New York.

In the U.S., the average price for a gallon of gas rose a penny to $3.33, up 4 cents from a week ago. Although the price of oil moved little this week, it did rise more than $4 in the year's first three weeks, and that increase is starting to show up at the gas pump.

Court: EPA overestimates biofuels production

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court has ruled that the Environmental Protection Agency is overestimating the amount of fuel that can be produced from grasses, wood and other nonfood plants in an effort to promote a fledgling biofuels industry.

At issue is a 2007 renewable fuels law that requires a certain amount of those types of fuels, called cellulosic biofuels, to be mixed in with gasoline each year. Despite annual EPA projections that the industry would produce small amounts of the biofuels, none of that production materialized.

There have been high hopes in Washington that the cellulosic industry would take off as farmers, food manufacturers and others blamed the skyrocketing production of corn ethanol fuel for higher food prices. Those groups said the diversion of corn crops for fuel production raised prices for animal feed and eventually for consumers at the grocery store. Lawmakers hoped that nonfood sources like switchgrass or corn husks could be used instead, though the industry hadn't yet gotten off the ground.

The 2007 law mandated that billions of gallons of annual production of corn ethanol be mixed with gasoline, eventually transitioning those annual requirements to include more of the nonfood, cellulosic materials to produce the biofuels. As criticism of ethanol has increased, lawmakers and even Presidents George W. Bush and Barack Obama have talked of the cellulosic materials as the future of biofuels.

But the cellulosic industry stalled in the bad economy and still hasn't produced much. According to final EPA estimates, no cellulosic fuel was produced in 2010 or 2011. Last year's estimates aren't yet available.

"What you have in our industry is a technology that is ready to go but has had a hard time punching through commercially because of a very challenging global financial climate," said Brooke Coleman of the Advanced Ethanol Council, which represents companies trying to produce cellulosic fuel. Coleman said there are better hopes for 2013 as several plants are coming online.

The court faulted the EPA for setting last year's projections at 8.7 million gallons even though the two previous years had shown no production, and also for writing in the rule that "our intention is to balance such uncertainty with the objective of promoting growth in the industry."

Judge Stephen Williams on Friday threw out the too-high EPA estimates in response to a challenge filed by the American Petroleum Institute, which represents the oil industry.

Williams, an appointee of President Ronald Reagan, said the law was not intended to allow the EPA "let its aspirations for a self-fulfilling prophecy divert it from a neutral methodology."

The court rejected the oil industry's arguments that the EPA also should have lowered the total production requirement for renewable fuels once the cellulosic goals were not met, saying the EPA had authority to decide to maintain those requirements.

Halliburton 4Q tops Wall Street expectations

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Halliburton's net income for the fourth quarter fell 26 percent because of a decline in North America, where drilling activity slowed and the company has been forced to charge lower prices for its services.

Still, the results beat Wall Street expectations and shares rose 5 percent.

The world's second-largest oilfield services company earned $669 million, or 72 cents per share, for the three months ending Dec. 31. That's down from $906 million, or 98 cents per share, a year ago. But excluding one-time items, earnings were 67 cents per share, 6 cents above the forecast of analysts surveyed by FactSet.

Halliburton is a major provider of the pressure-pumping technique known as hydraulic fracturing, which has enabled drilling companies to unlock vast supplies of oil and natural gas from underground shale deposits in the U.S. Natural gas production in the U.S. rose by about 20 percent between 2007 and 2011, according to the Energy Department. Halliburton's revenue rose more than 60 percent in that same period.

But now supplies of gas are plentiful and the price has dropped sharply. Natural gas futures prices averaged about $2.83 per 1,000 cubic feet in 2012, down from $4.03 in 2011. The number of rigs drilling for natural gas has fallen off, and some of Halliburton's pressure-pumping equipment is sitting idle, although a boom in oil drilling in North Dakota and Texas has offset some of the slump in the natural gas business.

Halliburton's North American operating income fell 58 percent. Schlumberger, the world's biggest oilfield services company, offset the decline in drilling on land with increased revenue in the Gulf of Mexico.

Priebus re-elected GOP chairman

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Reince Priebus has been elected to lead the Republican National Committee for another two years.

Priebus

The 40-year-old RNC chairman ran unopposed in his bid for a second term, which begins less than three months after what most Republicans consider a disastrous election cycle. The GOP in November lost a competitive presidential election and gave up seats in the House and Senate.

"The task before us is transforming the party — to be a force from coast to coast:" Priebus said Friday in his acceptance speech in Charlotte, N.C., where RNC members from across the country gathered this week for the GOP's annual winter meeting.

Maine national committeeman Mark Willis tried to challenge Priebus but could not muster the backing of three states needed to qualify for the ballot. All but two of the RNC's 168 members — both from Maine — voted to re-elect the chairman.

Despite the party's struggles last fall, Priebus was widely praised for improving the RNC's financial problems. In his acceptance speech, he called for sweeping changes in the GOP over the coming years, particularly the need to connect with the minority voters that helped propel President Barack Obama to a second term.

Court: Obama appointments violate Constitution

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama violated the Constitution when he bypassed the Senate last year to appoint three members of the National Labor Relations Board, a federal appeals court ruled Friday in a far-reaching decision that could severely limit a chief executive's powers to make recess appointments.

The court's decision marked a victory for Republicans and business groups critical of the agency. If it stands, it could invalidate hundreds of board decisions over the past year, including some that make it easier for unions to organize.

The three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit said that contrary to the administration's claim, the Senate was not in recess at the time Obama filled the vacancies on Jan. 4, 2012.

It also held that presidents have the authority to bypass the Senate in filling vacancies only when they occur during a recess, which it said occurs only between the end of the first year of a two-year Congress and when lawmakers convene for the second year.

White House press secretary Jay Carney said the administration strongly disagrees with the decision and that the NLRB would continue to conduct business as usual, despite calls by some Republicans for the board members to resign.

"The decision is novel and unprecedented," Carney said. "It contradicts 150 years of practice by Democratic and Republican administrations."

Under the court's decision, 285 recess appointments made by presidents between 1867 and 2004 would be invalid.

The Justice Department hinted that the administration would ask the Supreme Court to overturn the decision, which was rendered by three conservative judges appointed by Republican presidents. "We disagree with the court's ruling and believe that the president's recess appointments are constitutionally sound," the statement said.

The court acknowledged that the ruling conflicts with what some other federal appeals courts have held about when recess appointments are valid, which only added to the likelihood of an appeal to the high court.

The ruling also threw into question the legitimacy of Obama's recess appointment of Richard Cordray to head the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. Cordray's appointment, made on the same date, has been challenged in a separate case.

White House, senators to launch push for immigration reform

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Reviving an issue that has languished for years, President Barack Obama will launch a campaign next week aimed at overhauling the nation's immigration system and creating legal status for millions, as a bipartisan Senate group nears agreement on achieving the same goals.

The president will press his case for immigration changes during a trip to Las Vegas on Tuesday. The Senate working group is also aiming to outline its proposals next week, according to a Senate aide.

Administration officials say Obama's second-term immigration push will be a continuation of the principles he outlined during his first four years in office but failed to act on. He is expected to revive his little-noticed 2011 immigration "blueprint," which calls for a pathway to citizenship for illegal immigrants that includes paying fines and back taxes; increased border security; mandatory penalties for businesses that employ unauthorized immigrants; and improvements to the legal immigration system, including giving green cards to highly skilled workers and lifting caps on legal immigration for the immediate family members of U.S. citizens.

"What has been absent in the time since he put those principles forward has been a willingness by Republicans, generally speaking, to move forward with comprehensive immigration reform," White House press secretary Jay Carney said. "What he hopes is that that dynamic has changed."

The president met privately Friday morning with the Congressional Hispanic Caucus to discuss his next steps on immigration. Among those in the meeting was Rep. Linda Sanchez, D-Calif., who said Obama told lawmakers "immigration reform is his No. 1 legislative priority."

What's the threat? North Korean rhetoric, reality

Associated Press

TOKYO — According to its official statements, North Korea is ready to go to the brink. But how serious are Pyongyang's threats?

This week, new U.N. sanctions punishing the North's successful December rocket launch have elicited a furious response from Pyongyang: strong hints that a third nuclear test is coming, along with bigger and better long-range missiles; "all-out action" against its "sworn enemy," the United States; and on Friday, a threat of "strong physical countermeasures" against South Korea if Seoul participates in the sanctions.

"Sanctions mean war," said a statement carried by North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency.

A U.S. research institute said Friday that recent satellite photos of the site where nuclear tests were conducted in 2006 and 2009 show North Korea could almost be ready to carry out its threat.

In the face of international condemnation, North Korea can usually be counted on for such flights of rhetorical pique. In recent years it threatened to turn South Korea into a "sea of fire" and to wage a "sacred war" against its enemies.

If the past is any indication, its threats of war are overblown. But the chances it will conduct another nuclear test are high. And it is gaining ground in its missile program, experts say, though still a long way from seriously threatening the U.S. mainland.

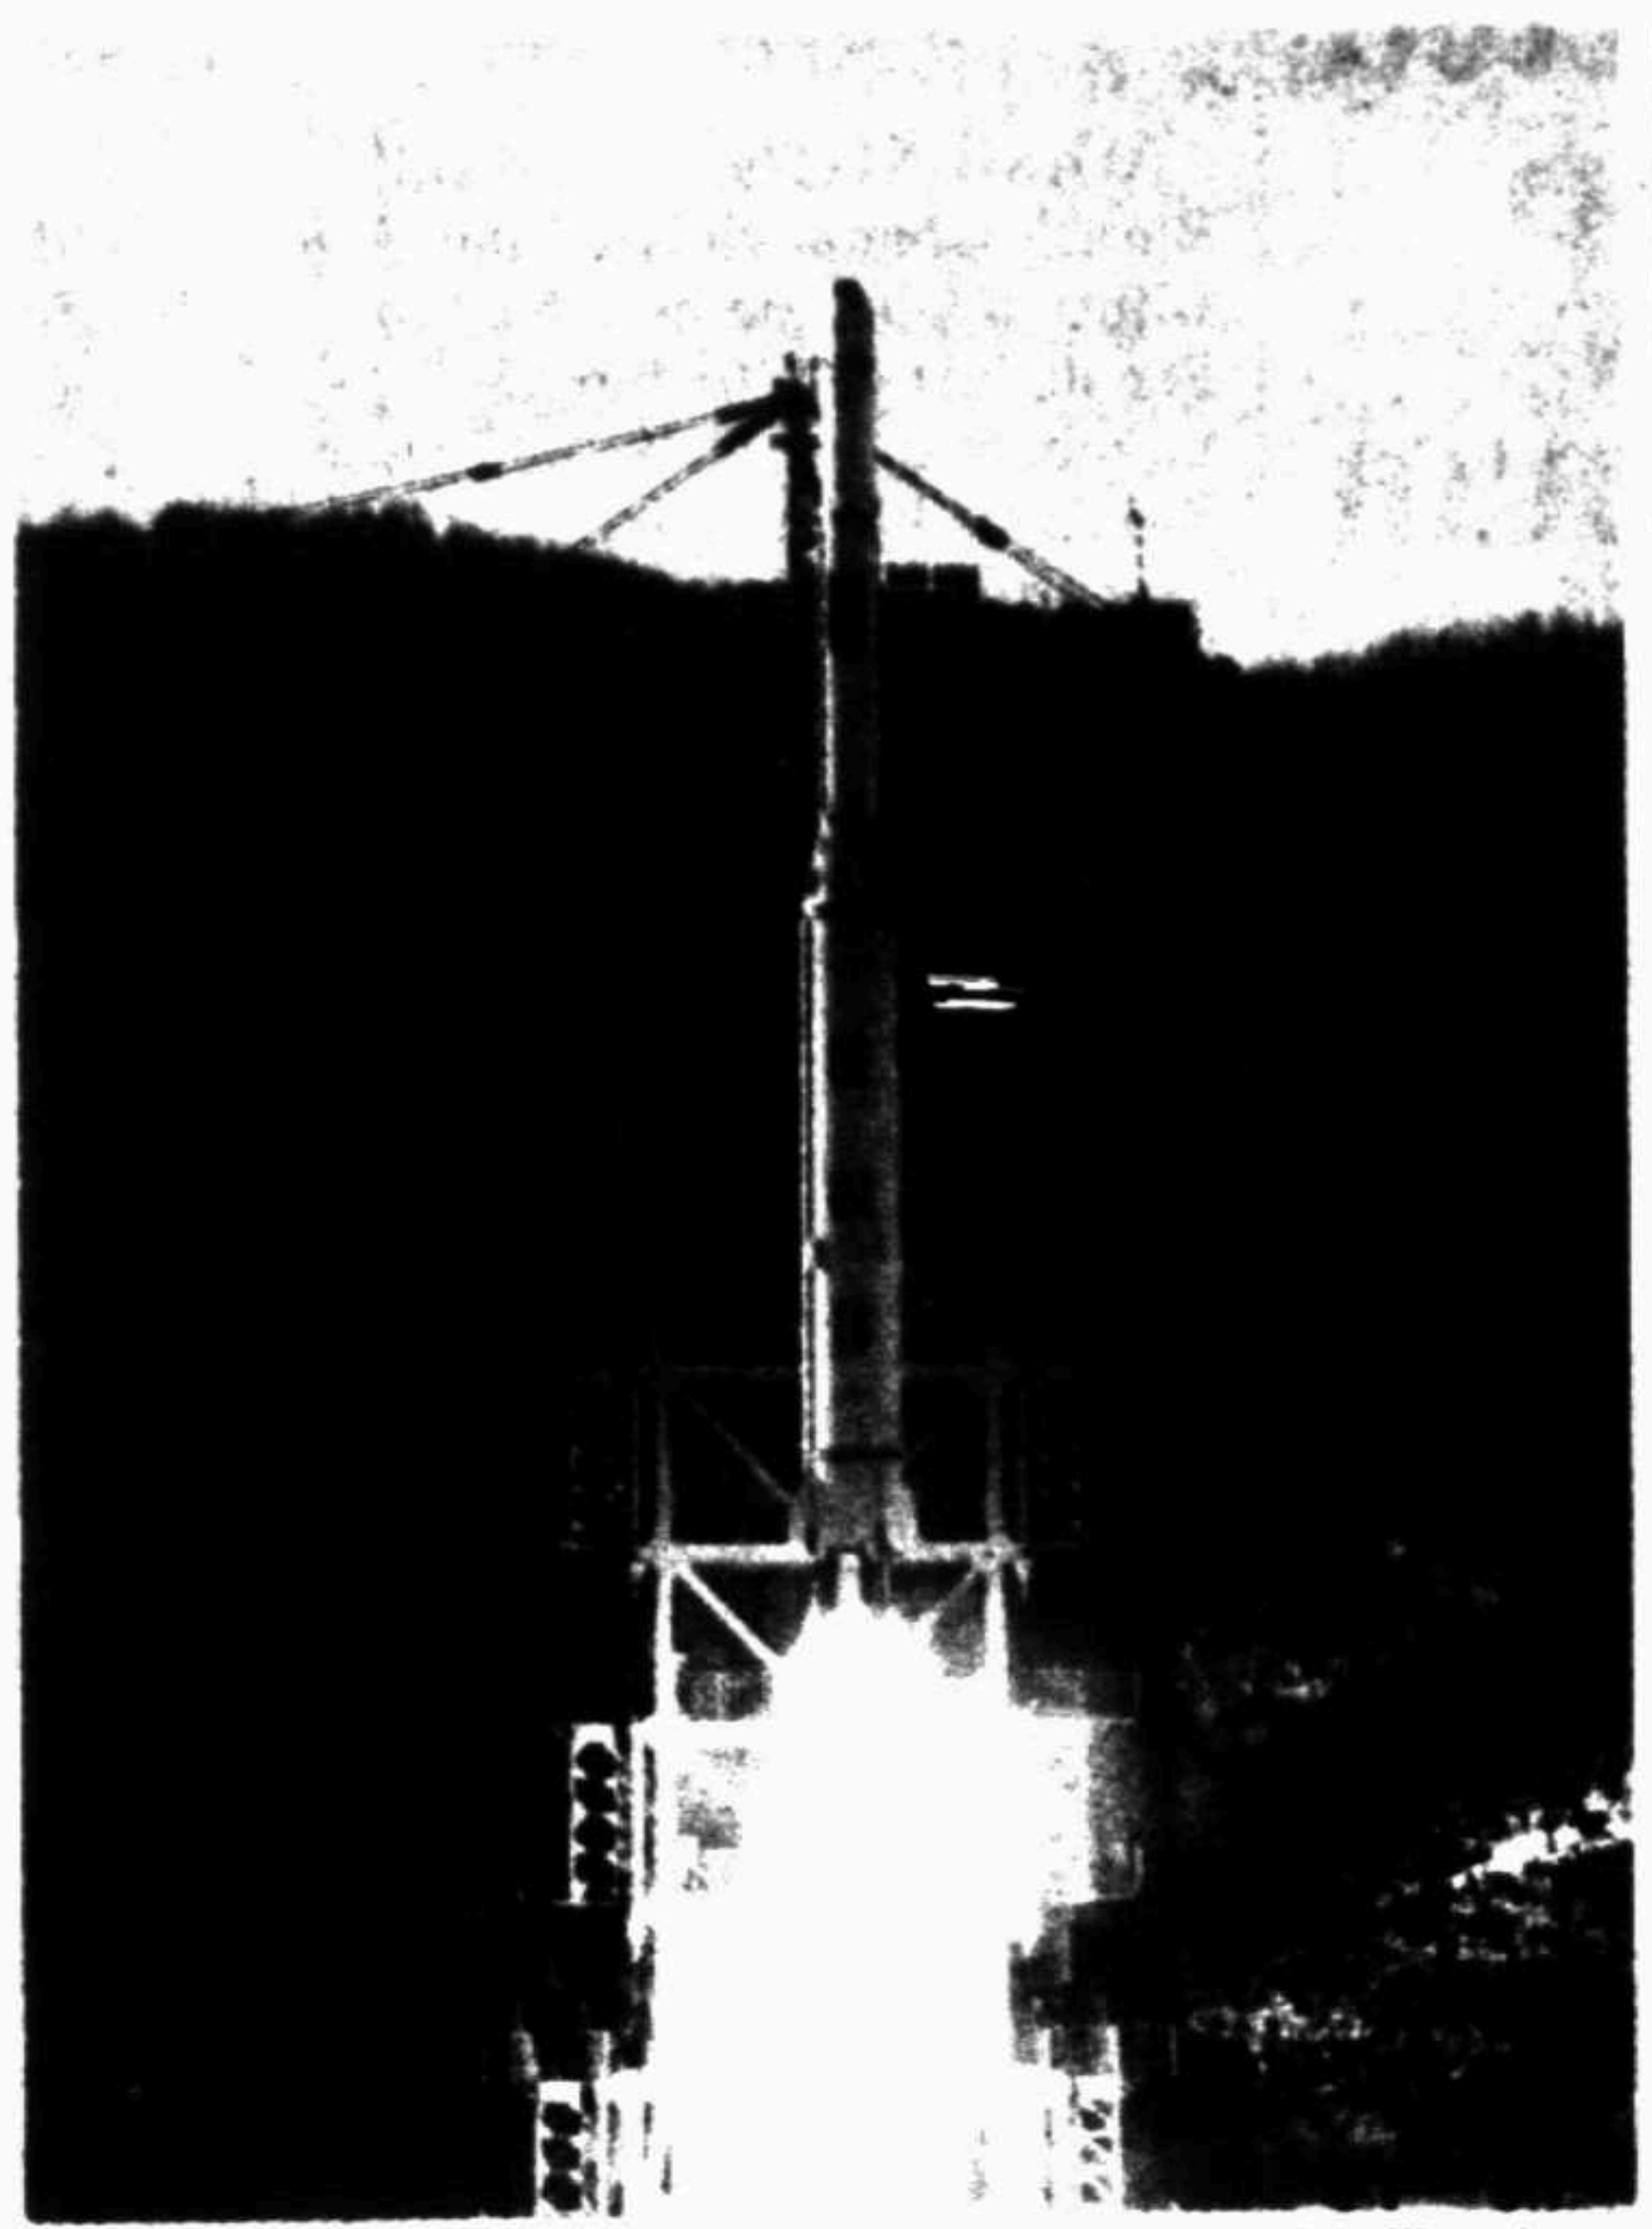
"It's not the first time they've made a similar threat of war," said Ryoo Kihl-jae, a professor at the University of North Korean Studies in Seoul. "What's more serious than the probability of an attack on South Korea is that of a nuclear test. I see very slim chances of North Korea following through with its threat of war."

Although North Korea's leadership is undeniably concerned that it might be attacked or bullied by outside powers, the tough talk is mainly an attempt to bolster its bargaining position in diplomatic negotiations.

The impoverished North is in need of international aid and is eager to sign a treaty bringing a formal end to the Korean War, which ended nearly 60 years ago in a truce. It uses its weapons program as a wedge in the ever-repeating diplomatic dance with the U.S.-led international community, and there is no reason to believe this time is different.

"I see this as their way of testing the water," said Narushige Michishita, a North Korea expert at Tokyo's Graduate Institute of Policy Studies. "North Korea will probably never be able to defeat the United States in a war. But they are getting stronger."

In 2006 and 2009, North Korea carried out underground nuclear tests just after receiving U.N. sanctions for launching long-range rockets. The latest barrage of rhetoric comes after the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously on Tuesday to condemn the successful Dec. 12 rocket launch and further expand sanctions against Kim Jong Un's regime. Pyongyang replied with its threat of more launches and possibly another nuclear test.



In this Dec. 12, 2012, file photo released by Korean Central News Agency, North Korea's Unha-3 rocket lifts off from the Sohae launch pad in Tongchang-ri, North Korea. The U.N. Security Council on Tuesday unanimously approved a resolution condemning North Korea's rocket launch in December and imposing new sanctions on Pyongyang's space agency. North Korea responded by saying "sanctions mean war."

Improved Herrington, Vargas look to lead MC softball

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Holly Herrington and Kristine Vargas hope that going through the growing pains during their freshmen year on the Midland College softball team will make them stronger going into this season.

Like many student-athletes who make the transition from high school ball to college, there was a lot to be learned for both Herrington, an Odessa Permian grad, and Vargas, who is from Jal., N.M.

But with the loss of ace Yolanda Rios, 16th-year head coach Tommy Ramos will look to both Herrington and Vargas to not only anchor a pitching staff but young team as well.

"As sophomores they tend to do a better job of handling their time management," said Ramos, whose season begins today at Coastal Bend College. "They understand not to panic on that first moment of fear. They realize that you can bounce back after that first mistake. They realize now that if they make a mistake, shake it off and get ready for the next one. Especially Kristine has improved a lot in that area, as far as taking a leadership role. It helps the freshman class to know that they've got someone next to them who has been in that situation and will help them through it."

Herrington carried a big load during last year's 47-16 campaign, going 19-7 with a 3.81 ERA with 61 strikeouts and 29 walks in 154-plus innings. While most would say that was a pretty good freshman year, Herrington admits that she's improved a ton.

"I think I've learned a lot as a pitcher," she said. "Coming out of high school I knew basic fastball, but it's a whole new game going from high school to college. I learned a lot more spin balls, a curve ball, and change-up was definitely one that I learned when I got here. As a pitcher, I'm just smarter. I know what pitch to throw, where to throw it, where in high school you just kind of throw it."

But probably the biggest improvement for Herrington is that she is a mentally stronger pitcher than ever before.

Jubilant Lady Rebs secure playoffs

Lady Rebels	57
Lady Cougars	29

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

There was only one thing the Lee girls basketball team wanted to celebrate after Friday's win against Abilene Cooper — a playoff berth.

And the jubilation could be heard as soon as Lady Rebels coach Morgan Moylan-Fowler entered the locker room and shouted, "We're going to the playoffs!"

The Lady Rebels clinched a postseason berth for the third consecutive season with a dominant 57-29 victory against Abilene Cooper in District 2-5A play at Chaparral Center. Lee (14-11, 10-3 in 2-5A) and also guaranteed it will finish with at least a .500 record for the first time since the 2007-08 season.

"I'm very excited," Lee junior guard Shay Ray said. "We're in a much better position than we were last year. It means a lot to us."

The Lady Rebels have had their best season in five years thanks in large part to a more intense style of play under first-year coach Moylan-Fowler, who is excited to qualify for her first postseason as a head coach.

"It's exciting as a first-year head coach to be in the playoffs," Moylan-Fowler said. "I'm just so proud of these kids. They've been so resilient all year, and for them to come out tonight and pick up the win to get into the playoffs is just awesome."

Rebels come alive in 4th to beat Cooper

Rebels	48
Cougars	36

By Jordan Mason
jmason@mrt.com

After a heated exchange left Lee down five points and one player at the end of the third quarter, the Rebels finally came to life Friday, overwhelming Abilene Cooper in the fourth quarter of a 48-36 victory at Chaparral Center.

"We got fired up because of everything that happened. I guess that's what pumped us up," Lee guard Johnny Rogers said. "And after the break we just gave it to them. We gave it all we've got, we left it out on the floor."

G. Coffman

M. Coffman

Rogers came up big for the Rebels (11-17, 3-9), scoring six of his team-high 10 points in the second half while also adding an assist and two steals off the bench.

"I thought Johnny played really good in the second half," Rebels coach Mark Coffman said. "If we had a game ball, I think he'd be the one to get this one. He just really picked it up and played."

Lee seemed to be slogging along early as it went to halftime down seven points and shooting 25 percent from the field.

Cooper (10-17, 4-8) had a chance to separate at the 5:01 mark in the third when guard Dante Lowry, who had 10 in the first half, was fouled on a made shot to put Cooper up 26-18.

But Lowry missed the free throw, and junior Anthony McCoy hit a layup on the next Lee possession to pull the Rebels within six again.

Lee closed the deficit to two points, its closest since the second quarter, late in the third before Cooper's Juvon Banks was fouled on a putback attempt, resulting in a dustup between the teams.

Midland High's James excited to compete in hometown

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Anna James has been around the world and traveled the country competing in diving events, but in the time that James has been known as an up-and-comer on the diving scene around the country she hasn't competed in her hometown.

Today, though, James will finally do just that and for her high school in the District 3-5A Swimming & Diving Championships.

James won't be competing in her main event, the 10-meter platform, because high school diving in Texas only has the 1-meter springboard, but having the chance to compete at home for the first time in three years has James excited.

"I like competing here because I practice here every day," James said. "I have all my spots, and what I look at, and it's really comfortable for me."

That could mean trouble for the rest of

MHS' Bane hopes to reach Austin in 50, 100-free

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Barak Bane never thought he would be a sprinter.

His focus was on other disciplines in swimming. But last year a suggestion was made to him to try two of swimming's marquee events — the 50-yard freestyle and the 100 freestyle.

Now as a freshman at Midland High, Bane has a chance to not only make his mark this year but also do something no MHS or Lee swimmer has done in nearly two decades — qualify for the regional meet in either event.

"Honestly, I would've bet money that I was going to be a butterflier," Bane said. "Everybody was complimenting my butterfly, and I kind of showed it because I put more effort into game due to a scheduling conflict with the officials, the Lady Rebels wasted little time taking control of the game.

CLINCH

Cooper (3-26, 1-12) actually scored the first points of the night on a pair of free throws by Kianni Mitchell, who ended up leading the Lady Cougars with a game-high 14 points. Those free throws turned out to be the only baskets Cooper made in the first period.

Benavides then scored the next three buckets, putting Lee up 9-2 with 3:43 left in the opening stanza. Ray went one of two at the line and then found Stanford on the left wing for a 3-pointer, extending Lee's lead to 13-2 with 2:11 to play.

A pair of free throws by Valdez were followed with a bucket from Jaylaan Lee and the Lady Rebels finished the first period with a 17-2 advantage. They never led by less than 13 points for the remainder of the game as Cooper often had issues even getting the ball down the floor.

The Lady Cougars had 29 turnovers in the game, including 22 in the first half.

"We just did what we do best," said Ray, who finished with a team-high 13 points and eight rebounds. "We go and trap and we go after the ball and we're very aggressive."

Added Moylan-Fowler: "We're typically pretty good when we start things on defense. Turnovers lead into transition and we tend to finish pretty well."

Ray was joined in double figures by Benavides, who had 11. Valdez and Stanford each added 10 points. While they forced the Lady Cougars into 29 turnovers, the Lady Rebels committed a mere 10.

It was a performance that had Moylan-Fowler fairly satisfied.

"There's absolutely really nothing (to complain about)," Moylan-Fowler said with a smile. "It's a first."

REBELS

From 1B

Banks and Lee guard Ian Johnson were both called for technical fouls, and Johnson was immediately tossed for his language, an official said after the incident.

"That was unfortunate," Mark Coffman said of the incident. "We sure don't promote that. That won't happen again."

While the elder Coffman said he felt the ejection didn't have anything to do with the change in course of the game, Rogers and Grant Coffman admitted it did for the players.

"We said we're doing this for Ian because he's part of our brotherhood,'" Grant Coffman said. "And we missed him, we really did, but we played for him."

Lee opened the fourth on a 14-0 run, taking its first lead since early in the first quarter when Coffman snagged a rebound and then hit Rogers with a long pass that led to a layup and a 32-31 lead with 5:34 to play.

"That's my seventh grade 'B' team quarterback coming out," Coffman said with a smile. "I saw it open, tried to be (Lee quarterback) Talor (Nunez) on that one and just let it go."

It was fitting that Rogers put the Rebels ahead for good as both Coffmans credited him for igniting the team in the second half.

"I saw Ant (McCoy) and Grant were tired," said Rogers, who was fighting flu-like symptoms himself, "so I just thought it was my time to step up because Ian was gone."

Lee even turned it around at the free throw line, hitting six straight to push the lead to double figures with 2:13 to play. Lee went 12 of 15 at the line in the fourth quarter after starting the game 3 for 11.

And after a close loss at the buzzer against Odessa High on Tuesday, Lee was happy to see the frustration end, even in bizarre fashion, late Friday as it prepares to hit the road for two straight.

"(We've got to take it) just one game at a time," Mark Coffman said. "We've got two road games next week, so maybe we can take care of that."

Lady Dawgs rally to beat Odessa High

From staff reports

Lady Dawgs..........30
Lady Bronchos..........25

ODESSA — It wasn't pretty Friday for the Midland High girls basketball team, but a win is a win. And any victory that gets the Lady Bulldogs into the playoffs is sweet in their minds.

The Lady Dawgs fell behind early to Odessa High, and was forced to rally in order to knock off the last place team in District 2-5A, 30-25, at Odessa High Fieldhouse.

Odessa High (3-27, 0-14 in 2-5A) jumped out to a 13-3 advantage early in the second period before Midland High (21-9, 10-3) used a 7-0 run to end the period and pull within 13-10 by halftime. The Lady Dawgs finally took the lead in the third, outscoring the Lady Bronchos 13-7.

MHS coach Ron Berry said the slow start for the Lady Dawgs had a lot to do with their late arrival to the game due to the bus that was scheduled to pick them up not arriving on time. They were forced to rush through warm ups and it took the Lady Dawgs a while to settle down.

"It got us out of sync," Berry said. "We didn't settle down until it was 13-3. And when you get down 13-3 to a team like Odessa High that holds the ball for long periods of time, that made us antsy to try and score to catch up."

Midland High led 23-20 heading into the fourth period, and Odessa High never truly threatened to overtake the Lady Dawgs in the fourth. But regardless of how ugly the win might have been, the Lady Dawgs clinched a playoff berth as a result.

"That ought to relax the girls a little bit moving forward," Berry said. "It means a lot to this young team. We only have three girls on this team who know what it's like to play in the playoffs, so I hope these young girls can get the experience of a second season and realize it's a very fun time to play. Now we just want to close district on a strong note."

Midland High hosts Abilene Cooper at 6 p.m. Friday at Chaparral Center.

From staff reports

Bronchos..........80
Bulldogs..........75 (OT)

ODESSA — The Midland High boys basketball team put up a strong fight in an attempt to earn its second District 2-5A win of the season Friday, but fell short in the end.

The Bulldogs failed to score in a second extra period as Odessa High outlasted MHS for an 80-75 double overtime victory at Odessa High Fieldhouse.

Midland High led 51-48 heading into the fourth period, but a floater by OHS senior Aaron McMaryion, who finished with an impressive 37 points, gave the Bronchos a 67-65 lead with four seconds left.

However, the Bulldogs tied it as Jacob Makowsky made a layup off an inbounds pass and sent the game into overtime. The two teams finished the first overtime tied at 75 before Odessa High outscored MHS 5-0 in the second overtime to pick up the win.

Midland High was led by Mazelle Justice's 17 points, while Shawn Rivers scored 15 and Makowsky finished with 12. Jorri Brannon had 18 to complement McMaryion for Odessa High.

The Bulldogs play host to Abilene Cooper at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Chaparral Center.

Drennan flys through preliminaries

From staff reports

ANDREWS — Greenwood sophomore Alyson Drennan won her two preliminary heats and also broke a record in one of them during the first day of the District 4-4A Swimming & Championships at the Andrews Natatorium.

Drennan will be the top seeded swimmer in today's finals for the 50-yard freestyle and the 100 freestyle. Drennan set a district record in the 100 freestyle with a time of 57.0 seconds, and then had the top time in the 50 freestyle at 26.17.

Drennan finished her heat in the 50 freestyle six-tenths of a second faster than second-seeded Andrews' Morgan Rowland, and was seven-tenths of a second ahead of Rowland in the 100 freestyle. Drennan qualified for the state meet in the 50 freestyle in 2012.

Greenwood freshman Jordan Shoults did not make the finals in the 50 freestyle or the 100 freestyle. Shoults finished 22nd in the 100 freestyle with a time of 1:26.15, and was 22nd in the 50 freestyle with a time of 37.45 seconds.

Finals are set for today in the two-day event.

JAMES

the competition.

Since competing in her first high school meet in December, James, a junior, has been dominant in the meets she's competed in. James' most recent accomplishment was setting meet and pool records at the Lubbock Invitational two weeks ago in both the 1-meter and 3-meter competitions.

And she was doing this after dislocating her right knee at the junior world championship in Australia in August, and coming off finishing eighth in the Olympic Diving Trials in June.

"I took a couple of weeks off in the summer, but I got bored and wanted to come back again," James said.

James, who has battled various injuries throughout her career, said the knee is fine and that her transition from competing in platform to springboard has had some challenges. But James has overcome those, and Midland ISD swimming and diving coach Jennifer Mangum said James has fit in well with the Midland High and Lee teams.

"I think it's helped her relax more when she competes because she worries more about her teammates than she does herself," Mangum said. "She hasn't trained springobard as much as she trains other things, but I'm really pleased with where she is at right now."

James' success has also brought about expectations of not only winning district and regional titles, but also having a chance to win a state title in the event.

But in typical James fashion, she said she is concentrating on hitting the dives today and then focusing on the regional meet in two weeks

"I do think about going to Austin, but I really focus on my dives and not on the meet itself," James said. "At any meet, I'm doing the same dives and doing them to the best of my ability."

MISD Girls swimmers to watch

Blythe Lary, Soph., MHS: Lary advanced to the regional meet in 2012 and has similar expectations again in 2012. Lary is the top-seeded swimmer in the 200-yard individual medley and the 100 backstroke.

Cassidy Hale, Fresh., MHS: Hale is the top seed in the 200 freestyle by more than eight seconds.

Jordin Newman, Jr., MHS: Newman is the top seed in the 100 butterfly and is looking for another trip to the regional meet in the event.

Keely Martin, Soph., Lee: Martin is the top seed in the 500 freestyle and the 100 breastroke and also made trips to the regional meet in both events in 2012.

BANE

From 1B

the butterfly instead of the free. But then I started training for the sprints, and I realized, 'I'm a lot better at this.' It just kind of fell on me and I'm really happy with it."

Bane is the top-seeded swimmer in the 100 freestyle, and is second in the 50 freestyle in today's District 3-5A Swimming & Diving Championships at the Mabee Aquatic Center.

Other than an injury or something else unforseen, Bane is likely to qualify for the regional meet because the top six finishers advance, but he has his sites set on also making his way to Austin.

If he does that, he will be the first boy swimmer from either school to accomplish the feat in more than a decade. But making some history isn't as important to Bane as winning both events, and Midland ISD swim coach Jennifer Mangum said Bane has begun to develop the type of aggressive attitude needed to win in the events.

"We used to say sprinters strut to the blocks, and he's developing that, but I don't think he quite has that yet," Mangum said. "He's getting there, and he's getting there with more confidence. He's getting to where he's much more positive and aggressive."

Bane admits he's had to develop the aggressiveness needed to be a successful swimmer in the events, but that's been helped by simply hating to lose.

"I hate losing more than I love winning," Bane said. "It's just that mentality that I could be best friends with the guy I'm racing against, but when I'm in the pool I don't like him one bit. I've never been this aggressive. I've learned that if I focus more on winning than hating to lose, then I will start losing more."

Bane said his best shot to qualify for the state meet is in the 100 freestyle, but even to be in this position has been a surprise to him, but he is also looking forward to what he can do over the next few weeks.

"Once we start tapering (slowing down on workouts), I'm really excited to see what I can do because I'm not even sure right now," Bane said. "But it's my training, and knowing that I put 100 percent effort into everything. It's just the effort that I put in is what makes me have the confidence."

Bryan Platte, Jr., Lee: Platte is the top seed in the 200 individual medley. Platte qualified for the regional meet in the same event in 2012.

Josh James, Fresh., MHS: James is the third seed in the 100-yard butterfly, and is part of a strong freshman and sophomore class for both schools.

Taylor McKay, Sr., MHS: McKay went to the regional meet in 1-meter diving and has a shot at winning today.

Zach Breeding, Fresh., MHS: Breeding is the second seed in the 100 breastroke.

Key losses: 3B Debra Lovell (Utah Valley State), SS Diana De La Paz (Lubbock Christian University), C Meghan Macias (Lee University), 1B Gee Estrada (Lubbock Christian University), P Yolanda Rios (Rogers State University), 2B Ashley Chavez

Key returners: OF Marlene Fields, P Holly Herrington, P Kristine Vargas, C Taylor Clancy, OF Earnysha Scroggins

Key Newcomers: OF/3B Ka'iuliani Kamal, Utility Taylor Daniels, P Shelby Weissenbach, SS Naomi Posada, OF Gaby Muniz, 1B/OF Desirae Romero, INF Pililani Smith-Keopuhiwa, INF Aukai Hauhio

Coach's quote: "We've definitely got a whole new team. We have more freshmen than we have sophomores. It is going to be different than last year. We have more speed. We're not quite there as far as power-wise. We do have some girls that can hit pretty good for us, but that will come later. Since we have a lot of freshmen they have a lot of room to grow and understand the expectations that we have here."

Notes: The Lady Chaparrals lost their top three power hitters from last year as they combined to hit 54 of the team's 83 home runs. Fields looks to lead on offense as she's coming off a season in which she hit 3.82 with two home runs and 19 RBI. ... With so many freshmen on the roster, Ramos said he is preaching to them to have the desire to achieve personal improvement in order to make the team better. ... The WJCAC will welcome a new member this year in both softball and baseball as Luna Community College in Las Vegas, N.M., begins playing a conference schedule.

SOFTBALL

"I've always had a struggle with the mental part of the game since I got here because the game is so much faster," Herrington said. "In high school it was easy to get an out every time they would hit the ball. In college, you have to think about every situation and every play and where the ball is going to go. It's definitely more mental and you have to know what your're doing, what your team is thinking and you have to be more together as a group than you were in high school."

Like Herrington, Vargas had to learn a lot coming from a small program in Jal. And probably more than Herrington, she needed a lot more grooming in her first season with the Lady Chaparrals, which was the reason she made only six appearances, posting a 2-0 record with a 2.30 ERA.

From all indications, Vargas is also looking like a much different pitcher and had some strong performances during fall ball.

"I think Kristine is a great pitcher," Herrington said. "When she came from Jal, I don't think she had any spin balls, then Coach Ramos started her right off the bat with rise balls and curve balls and stuff like that, and now she has like five or six different pitches and she throws them all really well. She learned really fast."

Added Vargas, "I've gotten a lot better. I came from a small town and I didn't have many people to help me, so when I came here I didn't really know the ball could move as good as it can. It was real hard for me, but I'm getting the hang of it. It's fun."

Vargas not only credits Harrington and Ramos for helping in her development, but also last year's group of sophomores.

"Learning from them and seeing how they lead the team and watching them grow, it helped me grow," she said. "I'm a lot more confident. You can see me more confident in the circle and I feel more of a leader than I did last year."

Vargas and Herrington now hope to lead a team, made up of seven sophomores and 13 freshmen through a competitive Western Junior College Athletic Conference and hopefully to a Region V West Tournament title, which the Lady Chaps came close to achieving last year.

"Being a better pitcher than I was as a freshman, I feel that me and Holly could take the team real far into regionals and hopefully nationals," Vargas said. "I feel we could have a good game together. When she's down, I can help her, and when I'm down, she can help me also. I know when I'm down and I can't get a pitch to go, she can help me with it."

Added Herrington, "We learned a lot going through the regional tournament. We learned that you're going to have to throw back-to-back games and you have to build up in each game and get stronger. I think it helped us that we're going to have to be there for each other, pitching-wise. We know we can lean on each other but we also know that we have to be strong when it's our time to shine."

The Lady Chaps hope Herrington and Vargas have plenty of shining moments this season.

Parker gets cut, returns to lead Spurs

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

Spurs	113
Mavericks	107

DALLAS — Tony Parker returned from a cut above the same eye he injured in a nightclub incident last summer and scored 23 points to lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 113-107 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on Friday night.

Parker missed about a quarter in the first half when he took three stitches above his left eye after a collision with Elton Brand on a drive. He nearly lost the eye in June when shards of glass embedded in his cornea after he got caught in a bottle-throwing melee in New York.

Tim Duncan stayed home with a sore right knee, but DeJuan Blair made up for his absence by scoring a season-high 22 points.

Rodrigue Beaubois led the Mavericks with a season-high 19 points.

Dallas cut a 15-point deficit to four in the final minute with mostly reserves on the floor, but Nando De Colo hit two free throws with 2.2 seconds left to end the threat.

Parker's head collided with Brand's arm on a drive early in the first quarter, and no foul was called. Parker stayed down alone under the basket covering his left eye for about 20 seconds during a Dallas possession on the other end. Once play stopped, Parker had to be separated from the referees as he was led to the bench.

When he returned early in the second quarter, Parker hit three straight shots and finished the half with 10 points.

The Spurs took control with a 21-6 run in the third quarter, capped when a pass from driving Dallas point guard Darren Collison went through O.J. Mayo's legs. The turnover led to a San Antonio fast break that ended with Boris Diaw throwing a behind-the-back pass to Tiago Splitter for a layup and a 74-49 San Antonio lead.

Murray beats Federer, reaches Aussie final

By John Pye
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Andy Murray was sucking in deep breaths, trying to recover from his exhausting win over Roger Federer. Pain was very much on his mind.

The U.S. Open champion defeated Federer 6-4, 6-7 (5), 6-3, 6-7 (2), 6-2 in a four-hour Australian Open semifinal Friday night. It was Murray's first victory against the 17-time major winner at a Grand Slam event.

But with the clock about to strike midnight, Murray was already thinking about Sunday's final against two-time defending champion Novak Djokovic, who is on a 20-match winning streak at Melbourne Park. This will be a rematch of their U.S. Open final.

"Every time we play each other it's normally a very physical match," Murray said. "I'll need to be ready for the pain. I hope it's a painful match — that'll mean it's a good one."

Murray had a 10-9 record against Federer, but had lost his three previous Grand Slam matches to the Swiss star. One of those defeats came at Wimbledon last year. Murray says the disappointment of that loss triggered his run to the gold medal at the London Olympics, and then his drought-breaking triumph at the U.S. Open.

"You know, I've obviously lost some tough matches against him in Slams," Murray said. "So to win one, especially the way that it went tonight, yeah, was obviously nice."

Murray ended a 76-year drought for British men at the majors when he beat Djokovic in five sets in the final at Flushing Meadows.

He's hoping the step-by-step manner in which he has crossed career milestones off his to-do list will continue Sunday. He lost four major finals, including two in Australia, before winning a Grand Slam title. He lost three times to Federer in a major before beating him. Even then, he wasted a chance to serve out in the fourth set Friday night as Federer rallied.

Reader annoyed by cellpone should talk instead of walk

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: In today's world, there are people who apparently cannot exist detached from their cellphones. In case you are wondering — yes, I do have one, but I use it only for emergencies, not idle banter.

If I'm trying to hold a conversation with someone and he/she is playing with an electronic toy, I get up and walk away. It's obvious to me that my company isn't worth the person's time, so neither is theirs. If I am in a restaurant and people start texting, I get up and go and leave the person with the bill. (Of course, I make sure I have eaten first.) In other words, I show them the same amount of courtesy they have shown me, which is none.

What do you think of the statement I'm trying to make? — OVER IT IN PATERSON, N.J.

DEAR OVER IT: Has it occurred to you that the person may not realize why you walked away? You could communicate your message more effectively if you spoke up when your companion reached for the cellphone and SAID you'd prefer your visit not be interrupted because you feel it is rude.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago I caught my otherwise loving, loyal and well-providing husband checking online porn. I have trust issues that he knows about. I feel violated and hurt. He says, "Everyone does it."

I take great pain to maintain my appearance and my body. Although I'm almost 50, many consider me to be "hot." He lies about a lot of little things, but he seems to love me. My question is, is that enough? Do all men REALLY fantasize constantly?

Since I started menopause, I want him all the time. It is such a relief to know I can't get pregnant again — it is a time of renewal for me. Then I caught him online.

How would he feel if I were looking at younger men? Instead of a wonderful opportunity for us to discover our real selves again, I constantly wonder what he's "really" thinking. Should I cut my losses or focus on the positive? This has hurt me so much I can barely stand it. — BETRAYED IN FLORIDA

DEAR BETRAYED: Porn is easily available, and many men look at it without it being a danger to their marriages. And yes, they do fantasize often. If you can, it might be helpful to encourage your husband to discuss with you his reason for doing it. It may have nothing to do with you, and more to do with issues of his own.

Before you let this ruin a perfectly good marriage, it might be helpful for you to talk with a therapist about your trust issues and what they stem from. The therapist may recommend joint counseling with your spouse, and you should consider that, too.

You have a right to the kind of fulfilling marital relationship you desire, but it won't happen unless there is honest, open communication and understanding between you and your husband.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dilemma. I deliver mail to offices daily and I never know how to answer when they thank me. It seems like "You're welcome" isn't appropriate because it's my job to bring the mail.

How should I respond? Should I say "You're welcome" or just "Have a nice day" or something else? — WANTS TO BE POLITE

DEAR WANTS: I appreciate that you want to be polite, but you are overthinking this. "You're welcome" and "Have a nice day" are both appropriate responses when someone thanks you.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 26, 2013:

This year you will have many opportunities available to you. You might question which way to go. You also will be sought after for your ability to see both sides of an issue. Feelings often become intense; however, if you tap into your creativity and express your emotions, you will be OK. If you are single, you have no excuse for not going out. You have quite the selection of potential suitors. If you are attached, as a couple you will decide to take up a new, creative interest or hobby. You can count on LEO's honesty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Your actions could keep others busy looking for better solutions. Whereas you once were somewhat predictable, at this point the same is not true. If you get a strong reaction from others, ask yourself if it could have anything to do with your newfound spontaneity. Tonight: Be playful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You could be inundated by decisions you need to make. For various reasons, you might be stuck in a situation where you can't find a way out. The unexpected occurs, as you might find yourself having to juggle family, home and work all at once. Tonight: Hang close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Consider what is happening within your immediate circle. You also might be unsure of an important person who typically serves as an anchor for you. Focus on what needs to happen in a conversation. Make an effort to move forward with an improved view. Tonight: Hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You could feel rather unsure about your options for the near future. You might need to spend more than you would like to. While you juggle different interests, stop and consider your priorities. You can only go so far. Tonight: Time to treat yourself to some R and R.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ The Moon highlights you, and others seek you out. You might be able to zero in on a long-term desire, but you need to know what you want. A friend invites you to join him or her. Stay neutral; you are in the process of manifesting a life change. Tonight: Say "yes."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ A partner could encourage you to let go of a self-imposed restraint. You might not be sure as to what would be best, or in which direction you should head. Check in with an older family member. This person has some special news. Tonight: Do not overthink. Just enjoy yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Honor how much a friendship means to you. You can't avoid the absence of this person, and standing on ceremony won't help. You might feel as if you're being pulled in two different directions. Do nothing if you're unsure about which choice to make. Tonight: Where the fun is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You continue to feel pulled in different directions. You might wonder what to do in a situation that you clearly cannot control. Recognize that you probably never will be able to control anything but yourself. Tonight: Give a difficult situation some space.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Follow your knee-jerk response, though you might question whether it's the right way to go. Others clearly understand where you are coming from. Opinions will differ just the same. You could find that you have to make an uncomfortable choice. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Others become available. Have a discussion with key people, and know that it could result in a decision to let them take the lead. Give up being so serious. You might feel as if you do not have enough funds to do what you want. Let go, and just be. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb .18) ★★★★★ You offer a lot, and others are drawn to your unique ideas and fun ways. Try to defer to these individuals a bit more than usual. Someone around you has a very strong personality and is comfortable only when he or she is in control. Let it be. Tonight: You will have to choose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You need to relax more than you need to have a good time; however, you can do both. First, run errands and get some shopping done. Afterward, you can be carefree. Join friends ASAP. You don't need any complicated or fancy plans. Tonight: Avoid a difficult person.

Reader annoyed by cellpone should talk instead of walk

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: In today's world, there are people who apparently cannot exist detached from their cellphones. In case you are wondering — yes, I do have one, but I use it only for emergencies, not idle banter.

If I'm trying to hold a conversation with someone and he/she is playing with an electronic toy, I get up and walk away. It's obvious to me that my company isn't worth the person's time, so neither is theirs. If I am in a restaurant and people start texting, I get up and go and leave the person with the bill. (Of course, I make sure I have eaten first.) In other words, I show them the same amount of courtesy they have shown me, which is none.

What do you think of the statement I'm trying to make? — OVER IT IN PATERSON, N.J.

DEAR OVER IT: Has it occurred to you that the person may not realize why you walked away? You could communicate your message more effectively if you spoke up when your companion reached for the cellphone and SAID you'd prefer your visit not be interrupted because you feel it is rude.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago I caught my otherwise loving, loyal and well-providing husband checking online porn. I have trust issues that he knows about. I feel violated and hurt. He says, "Everyone does it."

I take great pain to maintain my appearance and my body. Although I'm almost 50, many consider me to be "hot." He lies about a lot of little things, but he seems to love me. My question is, is that enough? Do all men REALLY fantasize constantly?

Since I started menopause, I want him all the time. It is such a relief to know I can't get pregnant again — it is a time of renewal for me. Then I caught him online.

How would he feel if I were looking at younger men? Instead of a wonderful opportunity for us to discover our real selves again, I constantly wonder what he's "really" thinking. Should I cut my losses or focus on the positive? This has hurt me so much I can barely stand it. — BETRAYED IN FLORIDA

DEAR BETRAYED: Porn is easily available, and many men look at it without it being a danger to their marriages. And yes, they do fantasize often. If you can, it might be helpful to encourage your husband to discuss with you his reason for doing it. It may have nothing to do with you, and more to do with issues of his own.

Before you let this ruin a perfectly good marriage, it might be helpful for you to talk with a therapist about your trust issues and what they stem from. The therapist may recommend joint counseling with your spouse, and you should consider that, too.

You have a right to the kind of fulfilling marital relationship you desire, but it won't happen unless there is honest, open communication and understanding between you and your husband.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dilemma. I deliver mail to offices daily and I never know how to answer when they thank me. It seems like "You're welcome" isn't appropriate because it's my job to bring the mail.

How should I respond? Should I say "You're welcome" or just "Have a nice day" or something else? — WANTS TO BE POLITE

DEAR WANTS: I appreciate that you want to be polite, but you are overthinking this. "You're welcome" and "Have a nice day" are both appropriate responses when someone thanks you.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 26, 2013:

This year you will have many opportunities available to you. You might question which way to go. You also will be sought after for your ability to see both sides of an issue. Feelings often become intense; however, if you tap into your creativity and express your emotions, you will be OK. If you are single, you have no excuse for not going out. You have quite the selection of potential suitors. If you are attached, as a couple you will decide to take up a new, creative interest or hobby. You can count on LEO's honesty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Your actions could keep others busy looking for better solutions. Whereas you once were somewhat predictable, at this point the same is not true. If you get a strong reaction from others, ask yourself if it could have anything to do with your newfound spontaneity. Tonight: Be playful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You could be inundated by decisions you need to make. For various reasons, you might be stuck in a situation where you can't find a way out. The unexpected occurs, as you might find yourself having to juggle family, home and work all at once. Tonight: Hang close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Consider what is happening within your immediate circle. You also might be unsure of an important person who typically serves as an anchor for you. Focus on what needs to happen in a conversation. Make an effort to move forward with an improved view. Tonight: Hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You could feel rather unsure about your options for the near future. You might need to spend more than you would like to. While you juggle different interests, stop and consider your priorities. You can only go so far. Tonight: Time to treat yourself to some R and R.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ The Moon highlights you, and others seek you out. You might be able to zero in on a long-term desire, but you need to know what you want. A friend invites you to join him or her. Stay neutral; you are in the process of manifesting a life change. Tonight: Say "yes."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ A partner could encourage you to let go of a self-imposed restraint. You might not be sure as to what would be best, or in which direction you should head. Check in with an older family member. This person has some special news. Tonight: Do not overthink. Just enjoy yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Honor how much a friendship means to you. You can't avoid the absence of this person, and standing on ceremony won't help. You might feel as if you're being pulled in two different directions. Do nothing if you're unsure about which choice to make. Tonight: Where the fun is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You continue to feel pulled in different directions. You might wonder what to do in a situation that you clearly cannot control. Recognize that you probably never will be able to control anything but yourself. Tonight: Give a difficult situation some space.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Follow your knee-jerk response, though you might question whether it's the right way to go. Others clearly understand where you are coming from. Opinions will differ just the same. You could find that you have to make an uncomfortable choice. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Others become available. Have a discussion with key people, and know that it could result in a decision to let them take the lead. Give up being so serious. You might feel as if you do not have enough funds to do what you want. Let go, and just be. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb .18) ★★★★★ You offer a lot, and others are drawn to your unique ideas and fun ways. Try to defer to these individuals a bit more than usual. Someone around you has a very strong personality and is comfortable only when he or she is in control. Let it be. Tonight: You will have to choose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You need to relax more than you need to have a good time; however, you can do both. First, run errands and get some shopping done. Afterward, you can be carefree. Join friends ASAP. You don't need any complicated or fancy plans. Tonight: Avoid a difficult person.

Reader annoyed by cellpone should talk instead of walk

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: In today's world, there are people who apparently cannot exist detached from their cellphones. In case you are wondering — yes, I do have one, but I use it only for emergencies, not idle banter.

If I'm trying to hold a conversation with someone and he/she is playing with an electronic toy, I get up and walk away. It's obvious to me that my company isn't worth the person's time, so neither is theirs. If I am in a restaurant and people start texting, I get up and go and leave the person with the bill. (Of course, I make sure I have eaten first.) In other words, I show them the same amount of courtesy they have shown me, which is none.

What do you think of the statement I'm trying to make? — OVER IT IN PATERSON, N.J.

DEAR OVER IT: Has it occurred to you that the person may not realize why you walked away? You could communicate your message more effectively if you spoke up when your companion reached for the cellphone and SAID you'd prefer your visit not be interrupted because you feel it is rude.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago I caught my otherwise loving, loyal and well-providing husband checking online porn. I have trust issues that he knows about. I feel violated and hurt. He says, "Everyone does it."

I take great pain to maintain my appearance and my body. Although I'm almost 50, many consider me to be "hot." He lies about a lot of little things, but he seems to love me. My question is, is that enough? Do all men REALLY fantasize constantly?

Since I started menopause, I want him all the time. It is such a relief to know I can't get pregnant again — it is a time of renewal for me. Then I caught him online.

How would he feel if I were looking at younger men? Instead of a wonderful opportunity for us to discover our real selves again, I constantly wonder what he's "really" thinking. Should I cut my losses or focus on the positive? This has hurt me so much I can barely stand it. — BETRAYED IN FLORIDA

DEAR BETRAYED: Porn is easily available, and many men look at it without it being a danger to their marriages. And yes, they do fantasize often. If you can, it might be helpful to encourage your husband to discuss with you his reason for doing it. It may have nothing to do with you, and more to do with issues of his own.

Before you let this ruin a perfectly good marriage, it might be helpful for you to talk with a therapist about your trust issues and what they stem from. The therapist may recommend joint counseling with your spouse, and you should consider that, too.

You have a right to the kind of fulfilling marital relationship you desire, but it won't happen unless there is honest, open communication and understanding between you and your husband.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dilemma. I deliver mail to offices daily and I never know how to answer when they thank me. It seems like "You're welcome" isn't appropriate because it's my job to bring the mail.

How should I respond? Should I say "You're welcome" or just "Have a nice day" or something else? — WANTS TO BE POLITE

DEAR WANTS: I appreciate that you want to be polite, but you are overthinking this. "You're welcome" and "Have a nice day" are both appropriate responses when someone thanks you.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 26, 2013:

This year you will have many opportunities available to you. You might question which way to go. You also will be sought after for your ability to see both sides of an issue. Feelings often become intense; however, if you tap into your creativity and express your emotions, you will be OK. If you are single, you have no excuse for not going out. You have quite the selection of potential suitors. If you are attached, as a couple you will decide to take up a new, creative interest or hobby. You can count on LEO's honesty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Your actions could keep others busy looking for better solutions. Whereas you once were somewhat predictable, at this point the same is not true. If you get a strong reaction from others, ask yourself if it could have anything to do with your newfound spontaneity. Tonight: Be playful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You could be inundated by decisions you need to make. For various reasons, you might be stuck in a situation where you can't find a way out. The unexpected occurs, as you might find yourself having to juggle family, home and work all at once. Tonight: Hang close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Consider what is happening within your immediate circle. You also might be unsure of an important person who typically serves as an anchor for you. Focus on what needs to happen in a conversation. Make an effort to move forward with an improved view. Tonight: Hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You could feel rather unsure about your options for the near future. You might need to spend more than you would like to. While you juggle different interests, stop and consider your priorities. You can only go so far. Tonight: Time to treat yourself to some R and R.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ The Moon highlights you, and others seek you out. You might be able to zero in on a long-term desire, but you need to know what you want. A friend invites you to join him or her. Stay neutral; you are in the process of manifesting a life change. Tonight: Say "yes."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ A partner could encourage you to let go of a self-imposed restraint. You might not be sure as to what would be best, or in which direction you should head. Check in with an older family member. This person has some special news. Tonight: Do not overthink. Just enjoy yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Honor how much a friendship means to you. You can't avoid the absence of this person, and standing on ceremony won't help. You might feel as if you're being pulled in two different directions. Do nothing if you're unsure about which choice to make. Tonight: Where the fun is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You continue to feel pulled in different directions. You might wonder what to do in a situation that you clearly cannot control. Recognize that you probably never will be able to control anything but yourself. Tonight: Give a difficult situation some space.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Follow your knee-jerk response, though you might question whether it's the right way to go. Others clearly understand where you are coming from. Opinions will differ just the same. You could find that you have to make an uncomfortable choice. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Others become available. Have a discussion with key people, and know that it could result in a decision to let them take the lead. Give up being so serious. You might feel as if you do not have enough funds to do what you want. Let go, and just be. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb .18) ★★★★★ You offer a lot, and others are drawn to your unique ideas and fun ways. Try to defer to these individuals a bit more than usual. Someone around you has a very strong personality and is comfortable only when he or she is in control. Let it be. Tonight: You will have to choose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You need to relax more than you need to have a good time; however, you can do both. First, run errands and get some shopping done. Afterward, you can be carefree. Join friends ASAP. You don't need any complicated or fancy plans. Tonight: Avoid a difficult person.

Reader annoyed by cellpone should talk instead of walk

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: In today's world, there are people who apparently cannot exist detached from their cellphones. In case you are wondering — yes, I do have one, but I use it only for emergencies, not idle banter.

If I'm trying to hold a conversation with someone and he/she is playing with an electronic toy, I get up and walk away. It's obvious to me that my company isn't worth the person's time, so neither is theirs. If I am in a restaurant and people start texting, I get up and go and leave the person with the bill. (Of course, I make sure I have eaten first.) In other words, I show them the same amount of courtesy they have shown me, which is none.

What do you think of the statement I'm trying to make? — OVER IT IN PATERSON, N.J.

DEAR OVER IT: Has it occurred to you that the person may not realize why you walked away? You could communicate your message more effectively if you spoke up when your companion reached for the cellphone and SAID you'd prefer your visit not be interrupted because you feel it is rude.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago I caught my otherwise loving, loyal and well-providing husband checking online porn. I have trust issues that he knows about. I feel violated and hurt. He says, "Everyone does it."

I take great pain to maintain my appearance and my body. Although I'm almost 50, many consider me to be "hot." He lies about a lot of little things, but he seems to love me. My question is, is that enough? Do all men REALLY fantasize constantly?

Since I started menopause, I want him all the time. It is such a relief to know I can't get pregnant again — it is a time of renewal for me. Then I caught him online.

How would he feel if I were looking at younger men? Instead of a wonderful opportunity for us to discover our real selves again, I constantly wonder what he's "really" thinking. Should I cut my losses or focus on the positive? This has hurt me so much I can barely stand it. — BETRAYED IN FLORIDA

DEAR BETRAYED: Porn is easily available, and many men look at it without it being a danger to their marriages. And yes, they do fantasize often. If you can, it might be helpful to encourage your husband to discuss with you his reason for doing it. It may have nothing to do with you, and more to do with issues of his own.

Before you let this ruin a perfectly good marriage, it might be helpful for you to talk with a therapist about your trust issues and what they stem from. The therapist may recommend joint counseling with your spouse, and you should consider that, too.

You have a right to the kind of fulfilling marital relationship you desire, but it won't happen unless there is honest, open communication and understanding between you and your husband.

DEAR ABBY: I have a dilemma. I deliver mail to offices daily and I never know how to answer when they thank me. It seems like "You're welcome" isn't appropriate because it's my job to bring the mail.

How should I respond? Should I say "You're welcome" or just "Have a nice day" or something else? — WANTS TO BE POLITE

DEAR WANTS: I appreciate that you want to be polite, but you are overthinking this. "You're welcome" and "Have a nice day" are both appropriate responses when someone thanks you.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 26, 2013:

This year you will have many opportunities available to you. You might question which way to go. You also will be sought after for your ability to see both sides of an issue. Feelings often become intense; however, if you tap into your creativity and express your emotions, you will be OK. If you are single, you have no excuse for not going out. You have quite the selection of potential suitors. If you are attached, as a couple you will decide to take up a new, creative interest or hobby. You can count on LEO's honesty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Your actions could keep others busy looking for better solutions. Whereas you once were somewhat predictable, at this point the same is not true. If you get a strong reaction from others, ask yourself if it could have anything to do with your newfound spontaneity. Tonight: Be playful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You could be inundated by decisions you need to make. For various reasons, you might be stuck in a situation where you can't find a way out. The unexpected occurs, as you might find yourself having to juggle family, home and work all at once. Tonight: Hang close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Consider what is happening within your immediate circle. You also might be unsure of an important person who typically serves as an anchor for you. Focus on what needs to happen in a conversation. Make an effort to move forward with an improved view. Tonight: Hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You could feel rather unsure about your options for the near future. You might need to spend more than you would like to. While you juggle different interests, stop and consider your priorities. You can only go so far. Tonight: Time to treat yourself to some R and R.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ The Moon highlights you, and others seek you out. You might be able to zero in on a long-term desire, but you need to know what you want. A friend invites you to join him or her. Stay neutral; you are in the process of manifesting a life change. Tonight: Say "yes."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ A partner could encourage you to let go of a self-imposed restraint. You might not be sure as to what would be best, or in which direction you should head. Check in with an older family member. This person has some special news. Tonight: Do not overthink. Just enjoy yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Honor how much a friendship means to you. You can't avoid the absence of this person, and standing on ceremony won't help. You might feel as if you're being pulled in two different directions. Do nothing if you're unsure about which choice to make. Tonight: Where the fun is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ You continue to feel pulled in different directions. You might wonder what to do in a situation that you clearly cannot control. Recognize that you probably never will be able to control anything but yourself. Tonight: Give a difficult situation some space.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Follow your knee-jerk response, though you might question whether it's the right way to go. Others clearly understand where you are coming from. Opinions will differ just the same. You could find that you have to make an uncomfortable choice. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Others become available. Have a discussion with key people, and know that it could result in a decision to let them take the lead. Give up being so serious. You might feel as if you do not have enough funds to do what you want. Let go, and just be. Tonight: Togetherness is the theme.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb .18) ★★★★★ You offer a lot, and others are drawn to your unique ideas and fun ways. Try to defer to these individuals a bit more than usual. Someone around you has a very strong personality and is comfortable only when he or she is in control. Let it be. Tonight: You will have to choose.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You need to relax more than you need to have a good time; however, you can do both. First, run errands and get some shopping done. Afterward, you can be carefree. Join friends ASAP. You don't need any complicated or fancy plans. Tonight: Avoid a difficult person.

Harbaugh family proud, but conflicted

By Michael Lev
Orange County Register

One of the things that makes fantasy football so fun is the opportunity to beat your buddy — or even your brother.

The head-to-head meeting slated for a week from Sunday is a fantasy the Harbaugh brothers never thought possible.

This isn't Kevin and Taco vying for the Shiva on "The League." This is John and Jim Harbaugh dueling for the Lombardi Trophy — the most coveted prize in the sport they were born to coach.

"I don't know if we had a dream this big," said John Harbaugh, whose Baltimore Ravens face baby brother Jim's San Francisco 49ers in Super Bowl XLVII.

"We had a few dreams, a few fights. We had a few arguments. Just like all brothers."

You're going to hear an awful lot about the Harbaugh brothers over the next week and half, probably to the point of overkill. Before we reach that juncture (likely sooner than later), let's get one thing straight: The Harbaughs are not like all brothers. In one crucial way, they're not like any brothers.

The Harbaughs are the first set of brothers to face each other as head coaches in a postseason game in any of the four major team sports, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. That makes their parents, Jack and Jackie, the first set of parents to watch their kids duke it out. Perhaps only Richard Williams and Oracene Price, parents of Serena and Venus, truly can relate.

(I know I can't. I get stressed out when my boys fight over LEGOs, never mind Lombardis.)

One would imagine Jack and Jackie are feeling proud but conflicted. No matter what happens in New Orleans, one of their

Even after run to Super Bowl, Ravens star safety Ed Reed said this isn't his last year

By Jeff Zrebiec
The Baltimore Sun

It would seem to be the perfect way for a distinguished football career to end: Ed Reed returning to his home state of Louisiana and hoisting the Lombardi Trophy for the first time.

Reed, however, has never been conventional on or off the field.

"I'll be playing next year if that's what you are all asking, so next question," Reed said.

As his longtime teammate Ray Lewis prepares for his final game on Feb. 3 in Super Bowl XLVII against the San Francisco 49ers at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome in New Orleans, Reed announced his intention Thursday to play beyond this season. Until Thursday, the veteran safety had been noncommittal about his future, saying that he'll make a decision following the season.

Apparently, Reed's mind is already made up. Asked if this is his "last ride," the words Lewis used when he announced his retirement Jan. 2, Reed said that it wasn't, joking that he bought a new bike not too long ago.

Reed, 34, is a free agent after the season and negotiations with the Ravens about a potential contract extension haven't been held since last year. Even with Lewis' retirement, the Ravens won't have a lot of salary cap space and Reed currently doesn't have an agent, both factors complicating matters.

However, those are worries for another day, for both Reed and the Ravens. No Raven appears to be enjoying this

DeBartolo thrilled 49ers back to winning ways

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Eddie DeBartolo Jr. rises at 4 a.m. on his 3,000-acre ranch in Montana and takes his three dogs for a walk in the frigid winter air.

No matter it was minus-3 the other morning. Off he went.

The former football owner who guided the San Francisco 49ers to greatness — and five Super Bowl titles — in the 1980s and 90s now raises Clydesdale horses while operating his Florida commercial development and management business from thousands of miles away near the mountain resort town of Whitefish, Mont. It's a long way from the football world that long ruled his life.

Now, DeBartolo offers guidance from a distance, mentoring nephew and 49ers CEO Jed York whenever asked or needed.

"More than anything, I watched how my uncle built a team that consistently won with class," York said. "I try to be my own man, but it's hard not to take pointers from one of the best owners in the history of pro sports."

It was DeBartolo who presented the George Halas NFC championship trophy to his sister, Denise DeBartolo York, last weekend at Atlanta. He was asked to be an honorary captain by Jed York before the NFC title game, DeBartolo's first live appearance all year.

These days, the 66-year-old DeBartolo takes great pride in seeing the 49ers back among the NFL's elite, with York successfully running the operation that DeBartolo once did with every bit of his heart and soul. He is content cheering for San Francisco from afar, still getting a thrill when York names him an honorary captain, or regularly seeks his input and advice.

"He was the most dominant NFL owner ever only 1 w/5 rings," former 49ers offensive lineman Randy Cross said earlier this month on Twitter.

DeBartolo is among 15 finalists for the Pro Football Hall of Fame, with between four and seven new members to be announced Feb. 2, the day before the 49ers and play the Baltimore Ravens in the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

"I'm so honored just to be where I am and among the final 15," he said. "That in itself is a tremendous honor, just to be with the people and the men that are there right now. Most of them are really dear friends of mine, like Bill Parcells, Charles and a lot of the players. I know it's a long shot, but anything can happen."

DeBartolo spends about five months of the year in Montana, but typically during the summer season.

The airport, where he has a private plane, is close by and Glacier National Park is 10 minutes away. He is 40 miles from the Canadian border. Many of his former stars, like Joe Montana, Jerry Rice, Ronnie Lott and Roger Craig, have all been to visit. He hosts a party on July 4.

"A lot of them have spent time here with me," he said.

And DeBartolo sure sounds content at this stage of his life, not yearning for a high-profile return to the pressure-packed world of pro sports ownership. He has been approached and has had some chances, he said, "but as the old saying goes, 'been there and done that.'"

"I'm just enjoying being with my family," DeBartolo said. "I traveled, commuted from Ohio to San Francisco for decades. It's just nice being able to be with my three girls and my grandchildren and my wife. It's just nice, it's just enjoyable."

During DeBartolo's tenure, the team became the first franchise to win five championships. The Niners captured 13 divisional titles, reached the playoffs 16 times and made 10 conference championship games.

He's the one Rice asked to present him at the Hall of Fame in August 2010.

In his best move, DeBartolo hired the late Hall of Fame coach Bill Walsh, then went about building a team for him. DeBartolo finds plenty of parallels between his teams and the one his nephew now operates.

In September 2009, DeBartolo was the inaugural inductee into the 49ers' Eddie DeBartolo Sr. Hall of Fame.

"My uncle has been someone that helped me weather the storm," Jed York said. "He taught me to stick with my intuition and ignore the critics. It sounds like simple advice, but he is always there to support me when there are tough decisions.

FAMILY

sons will win — and the other will lose. Postgame hugs are the appropriate response in either case.

The postgame embrace between John and Jim — assuming the ultra-competitive Jim doesn't do John like he did Jim Schwartz — will be the most-watched moment in the most-watched television event of the year (and possibly of all time). Their contact to date has been limited to text messages. They're kind of busy with other matters.

Those duties include addressing the media, and Jim said something really interesting in response to the first Harbaugh-vs.-Harbaugh question sent his way. He described the situation as "a blessing and a curse," but not in the way you'd assume.

The blessing, according to Jim, is twofold: (1) His older brother made the Super Bowl; Jim seems happier for him than for himself. And (2) Jim played one season for the Ravens, in 1998, and still has fond feelings for the organization.

The curse? The simple fact that everyone is talking about the coaches instead of the players.

"I just feel like the fighters are first," Jim Harbaugh said. "The ones that are playing in the game, the players, they're the ones that have the most to do with it. And they're the ones we should be talking about."

REED

opportunity more than the mercurial Reed, who will be playing in his first Super Bowl and he gets the bonus of doing it close to his hometown. Reed grew up in St. Rose, La., about 30 minutes outside New Orleans.

"I'm speechless when it comes to talking about going home for this Super Bowl," Reed said. "It's amazing to me. I just give everything to God on that one. This is just amazing. For me to be in my 11th year, like Joe (Flacco) said, everybody doesn't get this chance to even play in the Super Bowl, win the Super Bowl. It's just amazing to me. I'm soaking it up, just really enjoying every minute, every second being around my teammates.

"It's just so much joy for all of us as an organization to get to this point, for what we've been battling for years, but really since Coach (John) Harbaugh got here. From what he implemented as a scheme, what he wanted to do as a coach, what he wanted this organization to be — there were some bumps and bruises in there. There was some adversity that we went through in all of these seasons past, and even this season, to get here. You say we're making plays at the right time, but we've earned it."

Reed has been named to nine Pro Bowl teams and was selected as the NFL Defensive Player of the Year in 2004. However, he called making the Super Bowl, a trip the Ravens secured with a 28-13 victory over the New England Patriots in the AFC championship game, the "ultimate" accomplishment.

The 34-year-old, who will likely follow Lewis into the Hall of Fame, is finishing his 11th NFL season. Dogged in past years by shoulder, hip and back injuries, Reed is one of two Ravens defensive starters to play in all 18 games this season.

It's been a relatively quiet year for Reed, who has four interceptions and 68 tackles. Known for his big-play ability, Reed has gone seven games without an interception and he has 10 tackles and two passes defended in the three playoff games.

However, his teammates still speak reverently about his ability to diagnose plays and be in the right place at the right time.

"That's a guy (who) could play literally as long as he wants," Ravens reserve safety James Ihedigbo said. "He has the ability to play at a high level and to continue to excel and continue to make plays. He's a phenomenal player."

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I've been looking at homes recently, but found it confusing when it comes to determining their actual size. Regardless of where I turn, I can't seem to get a straight answer. Whether I look at a for-sale-by-owner ad or a property listed by an agent, the square footage of the house is calculated differently. Some owners add the area of their garage and basement. Others include only the basement. A few even included their deck off the back of the house. This makes it very difficult to compare houses. In the end, I feel like I'm wasting my time since many of the houses are actually smaller than I expect them to be. It's very frustrating. Isn't there a standard anyone can follow to calculate this information? I mean calculating square footage is basic 5th grade math.

Cash: I think the TV show "Are You Smarter Than A 5th Grader?" proved there's nothing basic about 5th grade. And as you've encountered, calculating the square footage of a home is not as straightforward as it seems either.

Carry: The problem you are experiencing is actually a common dilemma in the housing market. Square footage calculations can vary by region or by the individuals who compute them.

Cash: Although there are some who knowingly miscalculate the area of a home to make it appear larger than it actually is, most people are simply misinformed on how to calculate the correct dimensions.

Carry: There is a standard in the industry for single-family homes. It's created by the American National Standards Institute, a nonprofit organization comprised of government agencies, trade groups, businesses and academic institutions.

Cash: However, the use of the standard is not mandatory or well known. In many cases owners and realtors calculate square footage based on their own knowledge or the information that was given to them. As you've experienced, some will include the garage, attic, storage areas, porches or decks in their calculation. Others just copy the numbers found on the town or city records.

Carry: Square footage should be measured from the outside of the house including the thickness of the walls. Then any areas that are not heated living space, such as an unfinished basement or garage, should be subtracted.

Cash: Since you're finding the process frustrating, your best bet is to use their square footage as a guideline. Then acquire a list of room dimensions before venturing out to visit a property.

Carry: That way with a little 5th grade math, you can determine the actual living area yourself.

Fast Facts

Stretched Out

No matter how large your home is, it never seems big enough. However, Americans top the charts on the amount of space they use to live. A survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Energy determined that the average American has 721 square feet of living space per person. Even lower income Americans have an average of 439 square feet per person. According to the survey, these amounts of space are 50% to 100% more square footage than housing in other nations.

Study Up

By the 5th grade, most kids learn the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic. Yet not all of us remember them as we grow up. That's what makes the game show, "Are You Smarter Than A 5th Grader?", a hit in so many countries. Audiences enjoy watching educated adults get tested with grade school questions. Sadly, most adults don't know the answers. The reasons? Experts suggest that information not pertinent to daily life is often forgotten as we get older. The real question is: Did we know the answers in grade school?

Moving On Up

Although my college roommate and I moved to different areas of the country after graduating, we try to keep in touch. We both landed jobs that we liked with just enough income to make ends meet.

Recently I heard that he moved back to the city, so I called him up to find out about his new place.

"I bought a house on the outskirts," he was very happy to tell me.

"That's great," I encouraged. "How far out of the city are you?"

"It's pretty close to the city," he laughed, "It's more on the outskirts of my income!"

Situated on 10 acres of land, this home features wide open spaces, a gorgeous view of the sunset, impressive architectural touches and more! 6814 W. County Rd. 50. built in 2000 is located in Sunridge Ranch Estates and features 5,635 square feet (MCAD) of living space. Within this two-story home are four bedrooms, four full baths, one half bath, four living areas, two dining areas, three car garage, stable and workshop. Schools for this area include Scharbauer Elementary, Goddard Jr. High and Midland High School.

As you enter the circular driveway of the white Austin Stone/brick home, you will appreciate the fountain and curving flowerbeds full of beautiful roses and shrubs. Doors open to decorative curved iron accentuating the entry door as well as some of the windows, beautiful hardwood flooring, cathedral ceilings, built-ins, oversized crown moulding, faux painting and windows so you can enjoy the surrounding view.

Your new formal living room is perfect for entertaining! To the right of this area is a hallway leading to an office/study which has built-in bookshelves, drawers and a desk. The large sequestered master is also on this hallway! You will do more than sleep in this room! Lounge in the seating area, enjoy a fire in the corner stone fireplace or exit the door leading outside to the covered porch and pool. Faux painting and oversized crown moulding make this room special and inviting. You will love the jetted tub in the master bath as well as his and hers dressing areas and sinks and two walk-in closets. More faux painting on the drawers makes it very unique.

To the left of the formal dining area, a hallway leads to another sequestered bedroom, full bathroom and walk-in closet. This room looks to the front and through a side window, occupants can enjoy a bricked in patio where there is a beautiful flowing fountain. A window seat in addition to a built-in desk make this room complete. Down the hallway to the left, you will find a spacious laundry room, as well as a built-in organization center with cubbies, cabinets and drawers.

Continue to the gourmet kitchen! If you love granite, this is your kitchen! Countertops and the backsplashes are made from this beautiful stone. Black appliances and faux painted cabinets add an extraordinary feel to this workspace! A center island has storage as well as seating room. A large pantry and an enclosed cabinet open to another granite countertop and a place for a coffee center or an area for hiding small appliances. One special feature is the view out the wall of windows!

The kitchen is open to the den and informal dining area. The focal point is the Austin Stone fireplace that rises to the cathedral ceiling. A built-in entertainment center lines one wall and out the windows, you can see the pool complete with a Jacuzzi and fountain. It is surrounded by a metal fence to keep kids and pets safe. Nearby, is a pool house with a full bathroom! If the kids are tired of swimming, they can play in the huge sandbox or grassy area. There are two patios where you can enjoy the West Texas weather.

From the den, a stairway takes you up to a game room beyond your imagination! This ultimate play area has a built-in "kitchen" with a small refrigerator, sink and cabinets, and a large storage closet for games and toys. The paintings on the walls are priceless and add to the fun vibe of the room. Doors open to a large deck and stairway leading down to the yard and pool.

The game room is connected to two bedrooms with a Jack and Jill bathroom. Two oversized walk-in closets and the built-ins provide bonus storage! Each bedroom is unique, one with a small balcony overlooking the fountain and patio by the kitchen and the other with a built in desk and display cabinet.
