Greenspan to succeed...

Volcker will resign post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced today that Paul A. Volcker has decided to step down as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Reagan said he will appoint economist Alan Greenspan to succeed Volcker.

"I accept Mr. Volcker's decision with great reluctance and regret," Reagan said.

Volcker, appearing with Reagan and Greenspan at a White House briefing, said that he was relinquishing the post voluntarily. "I had no feeling I was being pushed," he said.

Greenspan was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers from 1974-1977 during the Ford administration. He is now a New York economic consultant.

Greenspan's appointment came on the eve of Reagan's departure for next week's seven-nation economic summit in Venice.

Analysts had suggested that Reagan wanted to make the announcement in advance of the summit, so that the post would not become a summit issue.

"Filling Paul Volcker's shoes will be a major challenge," said Greenspan. (1)

Council votes to oppose civil service

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Citing costs associated with the program and the problems of "singling out (a particular city department) for special treatment," the Snyder city council Monday officially took a stand against implementation of a civil service commission here.

If established by a vote of the people, the three-member commission would sit as a judicial body to decide questions related to hiring, firing and disciplinary action within local fire and police departments.

An approving vote would also place the two departments under statewide civil service laws--another negative factor pointed to by the council in its motion to oppose the plan.

At the same meeting, the council formally called for an Aug. 8 city vote to decide the issue and accepted as valid the petition which seeks the vote.

The petition was turned into city officials last week by members of the Snyder Police Association. With some 131 signatures required to call the vote, the council accepted the petition with 168 "validated" names.

The council vote to oppose the measure was in the form of a resolution which was passed unanimously.

Mayor Troy Williamson later elaborated on the perceived problems with the civil service plan. He noted his information had come from officials with the Texas Municipal League and from other city representatives who have either implemented civil service or studied it in relation to a vote in their own city.

"The biggest impact to the citizens would be dollars," he said. "And from a city management standpoint, going civil service means all your normal management skills are no longer in effect."

Regarding this, he added, "Promotions would be handled by tests and all grievances would be handled by committee rather than the supervisory personnel."

The implementation of civil service means promotions and hiring are based on "years service and test scores," a change which he said does not consider day-to-day performance "on the job."

Williamson added, "We've got a good fire and police department now. I think I can speak for the council when I say we're not opposing them. We're opposing the concept of civil service in a town like Snyder. And I think we feel like, in the long run, it would be bad for the employees in both fire and police."

Regarding costs, Williamson

Sales tax add-on for phone services okayed by council

Effective Oct. 1, certain aspects of local telephone bills will come under the 1 percent sales tax following a vote Monday of the Snyder city council.

The council approved on second reading an ordinance related to the taxation of "telecommunications services." The action came at the group's regular June meeting.

Not taxed under the measure will be the basic monthly fee charged for having telephone service. Long distance calls made out of state will also not be taxed.

Telephone services to be taxed include long distance calls made within the state and service connections to include installation and a change of address charges.

Many specialized features offered by the phone company will be taxed as well. This includes such features as a WATS line, mobile phone, touchtone service, trunks-flat rate for a PBX (private exchange) system and a multi-line (rotary) system.

Also taxed will be charges for directory assistance and the sale of directories.

Councilman Joe Fowler, who made the motion to pass the addition, commented, "I think we realize we're not taxing Ma Bell, we're taxing ourselves. But, I guess we need it."

Local officials have estimated the change will add some $18,000 annually to the sales tax return here. At the latest report, the

Clerk appointment to prompt meeting

County commissioners will delay at least until Wednesday a decision to name a new appointee to the county clerk's post.

The court faces naming a new appointee after Chief Deputy Frances Billingsley said she would step down from her appointment due to answered questions regarding the state's nepotism laws.

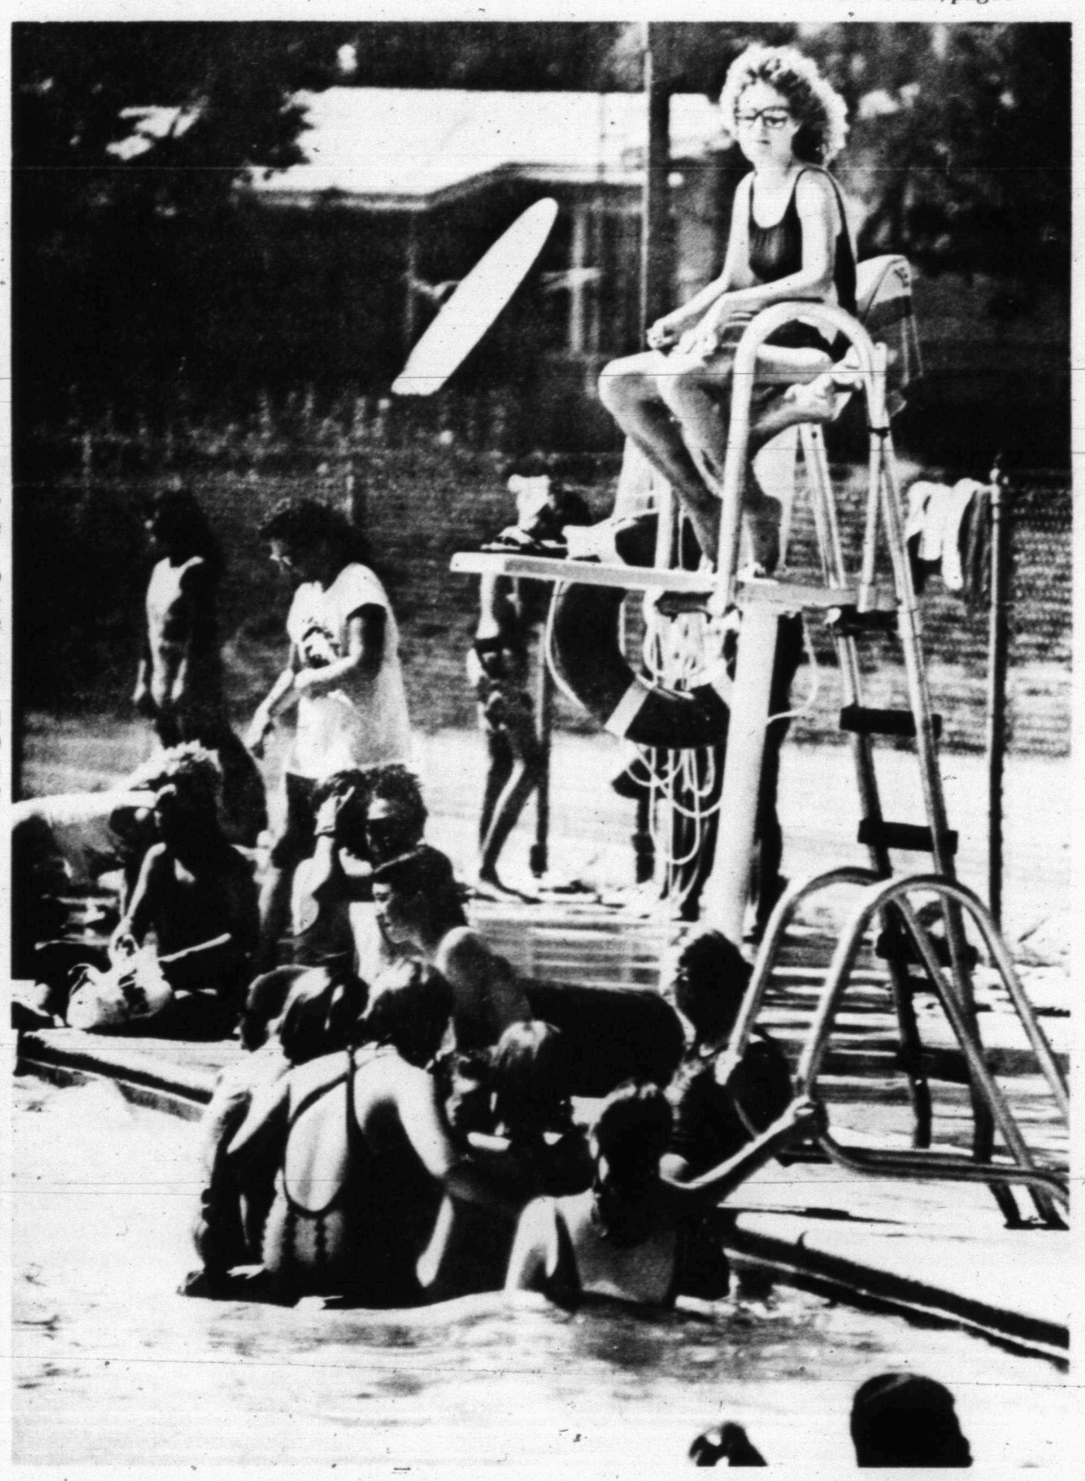

She was named acting county clerk during the May 26 regular session following the resignation a few days earlier of County Clerk Beverly Ainsworth.

Under a ruling by the state attorney general's office, Billingsley is now thought to be ineligible for appointment under this law which prohibits the appointment of relatives. Pct. 4 Commissioner Ted Billingsley is her cousin.

County Judge Bobby Goodwin indicated commissioners are studying the county's options with regard to the appointment and are awaiting an opinion from the attorney general's office before proceeding.

Goodwin indicated Tuesday the court will hold a special session Wednesday to make a decision regarding the appointment. He noted this meeting was in part contingent on receiving the attorney general's decision.

Billingsley was first named after the court received an indication that her appointment was possible since she was employed in the clerk's office prior to the election of her cousin as county commissioner.

8 suspects face indictments here

A Scurry County grand jury, meeting for its regular June session Monday, returned eight felony indictments against eight defendants.

Indicted for burglary with intent to commit sexual assault was 25-year-old Freddie Lee Harris of 3206 Ave. J.

Harris is alleged to have broken into a couple's residence at the Colonial Apartments on 25th St. last May 10 and to have attempted a sexual act with the sleeping female resident.

He remains in the Scurry County Jail in lieu of bond set at $15,000 on that charge.

Indicted for one count of aggravated sexual assault was Terry Glen Rumpff, 20, of 3003 39th St.

He is alleged to have had sexual relations with a 12-year-old boy on May 12. The offense was "aggravated" — therefore raised to a higher possible penalty level — due to the age of the alleged victim. Rumpff is currently free on bond of $15,000.

Named in an indictment issued for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle was 17-year-old Larry Michael Almanza of Snyder.

Almanza and a juvenile companion are alleged to have taken a motorcycle and motorscooter

The feller on Deep Creek says, "People become well-to-do from what they do well."

Unless the weeds take over, folks with home gardens should have a bumper crop this year. The only thing likely to be larger than Scurry County squash will be the mosquitoes.

Last Wednesday we visited with Charles Cain, who lives out on the Roby highway. Cain, a "retired" pipeline welder, looks to have one of the top gardens in the area.

He gave us a big batch of green onions. Evidence of the flavor is still in our car. In addition, Mr. Cain is one of our weather report folks. He and others call in to give us rainfall measurements across the county.

Cain believes the key to a bountiful harvest is planting on the right day. He says that unless you plant cucumbers on the 100th day of the year, you likely will have nice plants but no fruit. This year, the 100th day fell on April 10.

You may want to mark that on your calendar for next planting season.

A friend told us about an East Texas farmer who scrimped and saved to send his oldest son to college. The father naturally expected the son to study agriculture.

However, during his sophomore year, the boy told his father that he did not want to follow in his dad's footsteps, that he was interested in another area.

"Dad, I want to study medicine and then go on and specialize in gynecology."

The father, keenly disappointed because he had dreamed about having a well-educated son taking over the family farm, made one last appeal.

"You had better think about it some more," he told the boy. "What will you do if you go ahead with gynecology and about the time you get set up in business, somebody discovers a cure for it and you'll be out of business."

Ask Us

Q. — Regarding the Ask Us question about mowing yards for the elderly, would some group consider starting such a service?

A. — The youth director for Trinity United Methodist Church, John Erwin, informed the SDN that a church group, the Youth Co-op for Christ, will be doing just that this summer. The elderly who are otherwise unable to pay for this service may call the church and have their yards mowed at no charge. The church number is 573-3988.

Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams today disputed ambassador Lewis Tambs' testimony that assistance for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels was directed by a three-member government group chaired by Abrams.

Abrams, 38, heads the State Department's Latin American division.

Man charged

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A parolee charged with capital murder in the hijacking of a city bus and stabbing death of a passenger will face attempted murder charges in the wounding of the driver, police said.

Murder charges were filed Monday against Emanuel Kemp Jr., 21, of Fort Worth, who had been on parole for about two weeks.

Late Wednesday, a passenger armed with a knife forced the bus driver, David Jeanfreau, to drive to a park near downtown.

At the park the man told the bus driver to get out of the bus. He then sexually assaulted Johnnie Gray, 34, the only remaining passenger. The woman later died of stab wounds.

Kemp was in Tarrant County Jail Monday night under $750,000 bond.

Solons did pass some things

AUSTIN (AP) — While many major problems of January are still problems in June, lawmakers made progress on several important issues.

The Legislature voted to ban late-term abortions, take beer cans out of drivers' hands, partially deregulate the trucking industry, crack down on campus hazing, allow quarantining of some AIDS patients and make it tougher for government officials to do the public's business in private.

The successful bill list grew Monday when the House and Senate approved a so-called "dram-shop" measure, under which bars can be held responsible for serving drinks to an intoxicated patron who then causes a wreck.

"We've had a good session. It's been a very productive session," Speaker Gib Lewis said.

He admitted to a few major disappointments, such as the budget impasse that has forced a special session that begins June 22.

The abortion bill was a significant, if less than total, victory for the pro-life forces. The bill bars physicians from aborting a fetus that could live outside the womb, with or without life-sustaining technology.

The bill would have made it a crime to perform late-term abortions, but the negotiating process resulted in a bill that makes it an offense punishable by loss of medical license or other Board of Medical Examiners sanction.

Pro-choice forces fear the bill will lead to more stringent anti-abortion legislation in coming years.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would sign the abortion bill, which would give Texas its first abortion regulations since the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 ruling that struck down state abortion restrictions.

Also headed to Clements' desk is a bill to permit quarantining of AIDS patients who pose a public health threat, although lawmakers at the last minute stripped that bill of a requirement for a pre-marital AIDS test.

Clements already has signed the bill that bars drivers from drinking alcoholic beverages while behind the wheel. The legislative battle centered on whether Texans have a right to drink — as long as they are not drunk — while driving.

The trucking deregulation measure, which ended years of squabbling, was a compromise bill that won approval with little floor debate. The bill, which is awaiting action by Clements, provides pricing leeway for some haulers. Under the current system, the Texas Railroad Commission tightly controls those rates.

Deregulation backers have argued for years that commission regulation has been anti-competitive and prevented shippers from getting better deals.

Deregulation also was sought by AT&T on intrastate long-distance phone calls. Instead, the Legislature approved a bill to make their case to the Public Utility Commission.

The anti-hazing bill passed in the wake of the death of a University of Texas freshman who died of an alcohol overdose after consuming a fatal amount of rum during a fraternity activity. Grand jurors who reviewed the case issued a scathing report about the incident, but said no state law was broken.

The bill that is on Clements' desk makes it easier to bring criminal prosecutions for hazing offenses.

The open meetings bill that won approval is viewed as a victory for reporters. For many years, news organizations have complained that public bodies — particularly on the local level — abuse the executive session portion of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

That act requires government boards to meet in public, but grants exceptions for consideration of personnel matters, land transactions and litigation. Reporters have long suspected that some officials cannot resist the opportunity to talk about other matters behind closed doors.

Prisons begin and end 1987 legislative session in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Under the threat of $24 million in monthly fines, lawmakers focused on reducing the prison population during the 1987 Legislative session.

In early March, Texas lawmakers drafted the Prison Managment Act during and the governor signed the measure the same month. Since its passage, prison officials have used the act about a dozen times.

The act allows the state to release non-violent inmates to halfway houses when the prison population reaches 95 percent of its capacity. The plan was key in helping the state win a suspension of the court fines.

"We made a long-range committment ... that if we have to parole we will parole the best of parolees as opposed to indiscriminately paroling when we're overcrowded," said Rep. Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville, House Corrections Committee chairman.

Lt. Gov Bill Hobby's "Build Texas" plan, which authorizes the sale of bonds for state projects, including prison construction, also was approved this session

"Within the bounds we're operating on, especially with the bonding program, I think the state made a good effort to give the people of the state of Texas what they expect their prisons to be ... one where dangerouss criminals are held, " Hightower said.

The State Board of Corrections expects to begin accepting bids in August from private companies wanting to build facilties that would provide up to 2,000 new prison beds. Legislation passed this year allows private sector to participate in construction of minimum- and medium-security prisons.

Lawmakers expanded the list of state convicts eligible to be transferred to halfway houses. That measure was signed into law during April.

Adjustments also were made in how the state awards good time to prisoners. Hightower said the Legislature made it more of a work-related award.

Lawmakers voted to require prisoners convicted of aggravated offenses to serve one-fourth of their sentences before they can begin accruing good time. Currently, they must serve one-third of the sentences.

But to be eligible for good time, prisoners would have to be in a work or rehabilitation program.

Inmates would only be able to earn two days good time, instead of three, for one day served in prison if the governor approves the measure.

"We have changed the prison system to a work-ethic prison system," Hightower said.

Ex-medical examiner: evidence backs Goetz

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's former chief medical examiner says X-rays he was shown on the witness stand support his testimony that the four young men Bernhard Goetz shot on a subway were standing and not trying to flee.

The testimony by Dr. Dominick DiMaio, medical examiner here for 31 years, is important because of Goetz's claim that he was surrounded by the four when he shot them Dec. 22, 1984.

The defense also says Goetz fired in rapid succession and thus the four had no time to flee before they were hit by bullets.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples showed DiMaio the X-rays at Goetz's inovluntary manslaughter trial Monday after the pathologist concluded that the young men could not have been running or seated when Goetz shot them.

Waples maintains that Goetz shot some of the young men while they were seated or trying to retreat, and therefore he did not act in self-defense.

"After looking at the X-rays is there any change in your opinion?" defense attorney Barry Slotnick asked DiMaio, whom Justice Stephen Crane declared an expert witness.

"No change," DiMaio said.

And in a reference to the most seriously wounded youths, Slotnick asked DiMaio, "Is there any doubt in your mind that Darrell Cabey was standing when shot?"

"No doubt," the pathologist answered.

At least one prosecution witness, Christopher Bouchet, has testified that he saw Cabey seated when Goetz fired a bullet into the young man's spine, leaving him paralyzed from the waist down.

Goetz, a 39-year-old self-employed electronics technician, is charged with attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and weapons violations in the shooting of Cabey, Troy Canty, James Ramseur and Barry Allen.

He has said he shot the four, who were 19 at the time, because they were trying to rob him when Canty approached and demanded $5.

A matter of common scents

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am going crazy with all the scented products on the market. I suffer from sinus trouble and have a heavy nasal drip. Toilet soaps, facial tissues, shampoos, washing powders and fabric softeners (to name a few) are the biggest offenders. I wonder how many people are itching, sneezing and scratching from these products. Whatever happened to unscented products?

DEAR READER — Beats me. Americans seem to have an uncontrollable urge to smell good, and manufacturers have obliged by adding scents to a variety of products. Some people seem to be allergic to these unnecessary additives, so there is a tradeoff. Keep looking for unscented products; if enough consumers demand them, the market for the others will evaporate — just like the scents themselves.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My doctor recently scheduled a mammogram for me. His nurse told me I should not have anything to eat after supper on the day before the test, and should not eat until the test was completed. Since this test doesn't have anything to do with my digestive tract, why can't I eat before it?

DEAR READER — I don't know why your doctor's nurse told you not to eat before your mammogram. These are very unusual instructions for X-ray tests that do not involve the intestinal tract. Perhaps she was following some antiquated instruction ritual. Call the lab, or your doctor, and ask if such an inconvenience is necessary.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am male, 50, and have felt constantly tired for the past few months. I bought a bottle of potassium gluconate, and after just three days of taking the pills, I had more energy than I've ever had. Is it common for someone my age to lack potassium?

DEAR READER — No, it isn't. Potassium deficiency is extremely uncommon in patients your age, unless they are taking certain diuretic drugs, such as hydrochlorothiazide or furosemide. Check with your doctor to find out why you apparently responded to potassium supplements.

DEAR DR. GOTT — After I used a douche and had relations with my boyfriend, he developed a rash on the inside of his legs. It cleared up, then came back as soon as we had sex again. He's now being treated with Monistate-Derm. I have no symptoms. Why does he get it and I don't?

DEAR READER — Some men (and women) are allergic to the components of douching mixtures, particularly the scented compounds. On the other hand, your boyfriend's doctor gave him Monistat, which is an anti-fungus cream. Therefore, the physician may believe that your boyfriend picked up a yeast infection from you during relations.

Yeast vaginitis sometimes produces surprisingly few symptoms in women who have it. See your gynecologist to make sure that you don't have a low-grade vaginitis for which you, too, should be treated.

Your boyfriend might also be allergic to pre-lubricated condoms or spermicidal jelly. Check out your birth-control methods with your doctor. In addition, remember that two tablespoons of white vinegar in a quart of warm water makes an inexpensive douche to which few people are allergic.

What are the benefits of VITAMIN E? Dr. Gott's new Health Report tells what's true — and what isn't. Send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Vitamin E.

State legislators pass flurry of amendments

AUSTIN (AP) — The failure of two proposed state constitution amendments attracted more attention during the 70th Legislature than the more than 20 amendments which passed.

Most of the proposals will be on the Nov. 3, 1987 ballot for voters to decide.

Easily the most talked about constitutional amendment was one that would raise $650 million in the next two years by creating a state lottery in Texas.

After long arguments about money and morals, the House defeated the lottery proposal on May 15. It would have taken 100 votes to send the measure to the Senate, where a similar idea never got out of a committee, but House sponsors found only 73 votes in favor.

The second big failure among constitutional amendments was the perennial effort to put an income tax ban in the Texas Constitution, so it could not be imposed without a vote of the people.

The ban on personal and corporate income taxes passed the House 106-35 but never emerged from a Senate committee

Successful constitutional amendments included two proposed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby in his "Build Texas" plan to improve the economic climate of the state.

"If the voters approve the necessary bonds in November, that will result in adequate prison space and the water projects necessary to assure clean water to Texas citizens," Hobby said.

One measure would authorize issuance of bonds up to $500 million for state projects — including prison construction and improvement of facilities of the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. A second would allow up to $400 million in bonds for local economic development projects.

Another proposed constitutional change would establish an economic stabilization fund — more commonly called "rainy day fund." Among other things included, if voters approve, is a provision to set aside 75 percent of any future growth in oil and gas revenues for emergencies.

Gov. Bill Clements said that if Texas had established such a fund in the past it would not haye the current $5.8 billion deficit.

Another amendment would set up a fund to provide financial support for building the superconducting "super collider" atom smasher — if Texas should win the research facility.

Booklets on AIDS are in demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are limiting members of Congress to 1,000 copies of a pamphlet on AIDS education, even though one congressman managed to get more than a quarter of a million copies for his constituents.

Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., obtained 268,000 copies of the 36-page booklet from the U.S. Public Health Service last month and sent them to every household in his district, which includes Cape Cod, Boston suburbs and parts of southeastern Massachusetts.

Studds urged his colleagues to do the same, but other lawmakers now are being told they cannot have more than 1,000 copies per office.

"If (every) congressmen wrote and requested (thousands of copies of the report each), it would be really impossible to supply them," Ellen Casselberry, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Public Health Service, said Monday. "It's just impossible to do that."

Ms. Casselberry said the policy limiting copies to 1,000 was established before Studds' request.

B&PW Club holds officer installation

The Business and Professional Women's Club met May 26 at Martha Ann Woman's Club for the monthly dinner meeting. Frances Brown, hostess, arranged the program. Her guest, Jimmie Cummings, served as installing officer.

Cummings and her husband are missionaries serving in Montana and other sparsely settled areas of the United States. They aid in building churches each summer.

Cummings used the theme, "God's Music," for the installation with the rhythm of sunrises and sunsets. Musical instruments were used as analagies of each officer's duties.

The poem, "The Touch of the Master's Hand," was used to conclude the installation.

Frances Brown presented a gift to Lee Weaver who has served two terms as president.

Weaver announced Beulah Richardson as the elected Woman of the Year and gave her a gift.

During the business session, conducted by incoming president Ruby Butts, members set a picnic in June and voted to sponsor a contestant in the July 4 queen's race.

Clemmy Andress pointed out that the dues to MAWC had been raised and that the club would remain open during the summer as usual.

ABWA studies design

The Deep Creek Chapter of American Business Women's Association met Thursday at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. Penny Cochran offered the invocation.

The featured program was given by Jeanna Duke, owner of Classic Design. She is a Snyder native and is a graduate of Texas Tech University. Duke is also an associate member of the American Society of Interior Designers.

Duke offered suggestions and ideas for home decorating, color schemes, and ways of mixing patterns, fabrics and wall coverings.

A floor plan was shown with combinations of color schemes in floor coverings, walls, curtains, drapes, furniture fabrics and accessories.

Vice-president Pam Dortch presided over the business meeting. Reports from the standing committees were given and a woman of the year was elected. A bake sale was set for June 20, a July 4 booth was discussed and Penny Cochran was elected to represent the chapter in the July 4 Queen Contest.

Boldly bid and boldly played

After South's jump to three spades, North bid four diamonds as a way of raising to four spades, at the same time announcing a maximum no-trump opening with the ace of diamonds. The fact that he also had the king and queen was frosting on the cake. South justified his reputation as an overbidder by bidding the grand slam, after first checking for aces and kings.

Playing this aggressively bid contract involves discarding two clubs on dummy's diamond winners and ruffing a couple of clubs. If the king falls, you make the grand slam. If not, maybe there is a squeeze, with the club king in the same hand as the Q-J-10 of hearts or any five hearts. Today's South found the best way. He played two rounds of spades ending in dummy. Then, putting on his most sinister countenance, he played a low club from dummy. Place yourself in the position of poor East, who thought he had a certain club trick. Naturally he played the jack. Declarer now won the ace, played out dummy's A-K-Q of diamonds, shedding his clubs, and ruffed a club. Needless to say, he noted the fall of the nine from West. He returned to dummy and led the club queen. When East played low, declarer had a simple decision to make. Had East put up the jack of clubs on the first lead of that suit with J-4-2? Or was his original holding K-J-4-2? Declarer played him for the club king and brought in his grand slam.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

KIWANIANNES — Gingah Williamson (left) and Kathy Roberts, extension agent, presented a program on communication to members at the May 12 meeting. Donations to the senior citizens food program and the junior high patio project were also discussed. (Club Photo)

"Welcome to the '80s, Harold. It's an obscene phone call — for you!"

DENNIS THE MENACE

"IF IT'S A STEAM IRON, WHERE DO YA LOAD THE COAL?"

McDowell lifts Texas Rangers past Chicago White Sox, 11-9

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - When Kansas City's Willie Wilson climbed the center field fence to rob Oddibe McDowell of a base hit in Sunday's game, the Texas Rangers outfielder said he wondered if his luck would ever change.

It did, and in a hurry.

In his first at-bat Monday night, McDowell hit a routine fly ball that Chicago outfielders Daryl Boston and Gary Redus allowed to fall between them for a two-base hit.

"I knew my luck had turned around when that fell in," said McDowell, who nine innings later hit a grand slam home run that lifted the Rangers to an 11-9 victory over the White Sox.

"If anyone was going to be the hero of the game," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine, "I was praying it would be Oddibe."

McDowell came into the game batting .180 and had been dropped out of his customary leadoff spot to seventh in the lineup.

It proved a fortuitous move when McDowell faced Chicago reliever Joel Davis with one out, the bases loaded and the Rangers trailing 9-7 in the bottom of the 12th.

Davis, 1-5, had surrendered a leadoff double to Ruben Sierra and after getting a forceout, had walked Pete O'Brien and Larry Parrish to load the bases.

"He (Davis) was struggling with his control," said McDowell. "When he threw two bad ones to me, I knew he would be trying to get something in the strike zone.

"I wasn't thinking long ball. The way I've been going, I'm just trying to make good contact, to hit the ball hard. And I did that."

His shot, his third homer of the year and first career grand slam, made a winner of reliever Dale Mohorcic, 5-2, who went from goat to hero.

Mohorcic had relieved Mitch Williams in the top of the 12th with none out and a runner on first.

Ivan Calderon, the first batter Mohorcic faced, failed on a sacrifice attempt, then hit his seventh homer of the season to give the White Sox a 9-7 lead.

"One of the guys on the bench said that Mohorcic had pitched his heart out all year, so let's go get him a win," said Valentine. "And doggone it, they did."

McDowell's home run was the eighth in the game and one of 18 extra base hits produced by both teams.

Ranger starter Bob Malloy gave up four home runs in five innings, two to Greg Walker and one each to Jerry Royster and Harold Baines.

Those homers and a couple of unearned runs staked Chicago starter Rich Dotson to a 7-1 lead going into the bottom of the eighth.

Darrell Porter's pinch-hit home run in the eighth started the Ranger comeback that continued with five in the ninth that sent the game into extra innings.

Larry Parrish hit his 12th homer of the season, a 2-run shot, as part of the ninth-inning rally that came against five Chicago pitchers.

El Paso girl signs with WTC Dusters

Coach Kelly Chadwick went west to El Paso to sign Burges High School standout Cynthia Hernandez, the city's leading scorer.

A 5-5 point guard, Hernandez averaged 17.3 points while hitting 47 percent of her shots from the field and an outstanding 93 percent from the line. She also averaged 3.6 steals and 9.3 rebounds.

"Cynthia is my kind of ballplayer," said Coach Chadwick. "She is a tough kid that will play hard and do whatever it takes to win. She has a great attitude, she's intelligent, and her work habits are good."

Hernandez was a three-year starter for Burges, earning all-city and all-district honors as the city's leading scorer.

"I think she'll be a great defensive player in time. She's very quick and she has good speed. She's lefthanded, which can sometimes be an advantage, and she's a good shooter," said the coach. "She's obviously a good rebounder for her size."

Sugar Ray aids authorities in locating kidnapped girl

WASHINGTON (AP) - World Boxing Council middleweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard came to the aid of Washington D.C. police, and helped authorities find a child they say had been kidnapped Monday afternoon.

District police said that the child - 18-month-old Alecia Washington - was reported missing just after 2 p.m. EDT.

The child's mother, Mary Battle, told police she left the girl and her 3-year-old brother Ernest on the sidewalk outside their southeast Washington apartment when she went back inside to get her keys. When she returned a moment later, she told police, the girl was missing.

Police said their investigation led them to believe that Tony Spaulding, 27, who shares the apartment with the woman, might have taken the child.

But Spaulding refused to cooperate with authorities.

The investigation was at a standstill until Spaulding, a boxing fan, told officers that the only person he would talk to was Leonard.

Leonard, who took the title from Marvin Hagler in April, agreed to talk to Spaulding. Given a police escort from his home in nearby Potomac, Md., the boxer arrived at the apartment just after 10 p.m.

Leonard talked privately with Spaulding for several minutes, and then the pair emerged from the apartment, police said.

Police said Spaulding then led them to a wooded area in southeast Washington, where Alicia Washington was found tied to a tree - but otherwise unharmed.

The child was under observation at a local hospital.

Spaulding was scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday in District of Columbia Superior Court on kidnapping charges.

Witnesses testify "Cullen Davis did it"

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Immediately after a 1976 shooting spree in which two people were killed and two others wounded at Cullen Davis' mansion, several people were told the gunman was Davis, witnesses testified in a civil trial.

Seven plaintiff's witnesses testified Monday during the third day of testimony in a multimillion-dollar civil suit in which Davis, 53, is accused of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of the child's death in 1977. But the criminal verdict has no bearing on the current civil suits.

The defendant's ex-wife Priscilla contends in her wrongful death suit that Davis killed her daughter and then ambushed her and her live-in boyfriend, Stan Farr, in the August 1976 attack.

Farr, 30, died at the scene. Though severely wounded, Mrs. Davis ran from the mansion and sought help at the home of neighbors Clifford and Catherine Jones.

Mrs. Jones, now a widow, testified Monday she was awakened by her barking dog in the early morning hours of Aug. 3 and saw someone moving through the courtyard toward her front door.

"I'm Priscilla Davis and I live in the big house up on the hill," she quoted Mrs. Davis as saying.

After Mrs. Davis told her that "Cullen's up at the house killing everybody," Mrs. Jones said Priscilla asked her to call police and "tell them to hurry. It's bad."

The witness described Mrs. Davis as "excited ... but not hysterical."

John Smedley, 40, a former security patrolman, told the jury how Beverly Bass, then 18, whistled him down after the shootings and begged him to help her and her boyfriend, Bubba Gavrel, then 22.

"My boyfriend has been shot and I think he's dying," he quoted her as saying. There was this exchange:

"I saw him do it," said Miss Bass, who was not harmed in the shooting.

"You saw who do it?"

"Cullen. Cullen did it."

Smedley said Miss Bass told him also how she eluded the gunman in a chase across the darkened estate and how she flagged down a passing motorist who telephoned police.

Gavrel, who married Miss Bass last year, remains crippled with a bullet lodged near his spine. He settled his own personal injury suit with Davis last year for what was reported to be a million dollars in land, cash and deferred payments.

Smedley, Mrs. Jones, two police officers and three ambulance drivers were the seven witnesses permitted by the court to testify to the events immediately following the 12:40 a.m. shootings.

Fort Worth Police Lt. Gordon Box led off by recounting how he arrived at the Davis estate within minutes of the rampage and found a "very excited, possibly angry" young woman, Miss Bass.

"I asked her if she knew who had done the shooting," Box said.

"Yes, it was Cullen," he quoted her as saying.

Box said there was this exchange:

"Cullen who?"

"Cullen Davis."

"Are you sure?"

Box said Miss Bass was "very adamant that it was Cullen Davis. She said she'd known him a long time."

Box told the jury Monday he entered the mansion after talking with Miss Bass and found Gavrel critically wounded and Farr dead on the kitchen floor.

"I realized I was going to need more help," he said.

Box said he ordered the mansion surrounded and searched because "we didn't know whether or not Mr. Davis might still be on the premises."

He said blood smears on a wall and light switch led officers down a flight of stairs to the basement, where they found Andrea's lifeless body on the floor of a utility room.

The police lieutenant said he assisted in the predawn arrest of Davis, who was flushed without resistance from the home of his former mistress and taken to the courthouse.

Box said as the patrol car neared its destination, he heard Davis laughing softly at one of the officers in the back seat.

In reponse to a growing demand for insurance to cover the high costs associated with debilitating chronic health conditions, The Travelers says it has introduced a group plan with a choice of covered services that encourage home care. These services include skilled nursing care, physical and occupational therapy and personal care. The plan also covers adult day care that involves therapeutic and rehabilitative care.

Austin update

Easing no-play rule failed in Austin

AUSTIN (AP)--The 1984 education reforms emerged from this year's Legislature largely unscathed, but questions still loom about education funding.

Opponents of the landmark reforms charged into the Capitol this year ready to soften the legislation. But with the exception of a bill that would repeal teacher subject matter testing, the package withstood the "fine tuning" attempts.

"Nobody could really agree on what fine tuning was. There seemed to be a disposition on the side of a lot of House members that (the reforms were) just beginning to work," said Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, chairman of the House Higher Education Committee.

Senators tried to ease the no pass, no play rule that suspends students from extra-curricular activities for six weeks if they fail any course. Their plan would have set up a pilot program to experiment with a three-week suspension period.

But the measure never received House consideration.

Governor gets deregulation bill

AUSTIN (AP) — An AT&T bill is on its way to Gov. Bill Clements' desk, hailed by senators who had fought against long-distance phone deregulation as a model proposal that will protect Texas telephone ratepayers.

The House and Senate approved a compromise measure before adjourning on Monday night.

As the bill passed the House on May 25, AT&T would have been able to set its own rates on intrastate long-distance phone calls.

But Sen. Hugh Parmer said Monday the final bill negotiated in a conference committee "is no longer a bill to deregulate AT&T or anyone else. It provides that no one will be deregulated as a result of their political power or by legislative fiat."

Instead, Parmer said, the bill gives AT&T a chance to go before the Public Utility Commission and "argue their case that they no longer are a dominant carrier" and should be deregulated.

Now, according to Parmer, D-Fort Worth, the PUC "can find any day AT&T is non-dominant and deregulate them instantly."

"When this bill becomes law, there will be a set of criteria relating to the area of monopolistic price control and competition which will have to be looked at ... as part of the PUC's decision-making process," he said.

Lawmakers okay bill on AIDS

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to allow quarantining of AIDS patients who pose a public health threat is on its way to Gov. Bill Clements for his signature or veto.

The House and Senate approved the bill shortly before adjourning their regular session Monday. But the compromise adopted stripped the bill of an earlier proposal to require couples to take an AIDS test to get a marriage license.

The bill does require a premarital AIDS test if the statewide overall positive rate on AIDS tests hits 0.87 percent. It is now 0.01 percent.

The House, in a 108-37 vote, wrapped up legislative work on the bill less than three hours before the regular session was to adjourn at midnight. Senators approved the bill, which now goes to Gov. Bill Clements, earlier in the day.

Rep. Nancy McDonald's bill makes AIDS a communicable disease under state law. That means public health officials can ask a judge to quarantine an AIDS patient who acts irresponsibly and spreads the disease.

Lawmakers approve dram-shop bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators have voted to let courts hold bars liable for serving alcoholic drinks to intoxicated customers who become drunken drivers and cause death and damage on the highway.

The so-called "dram-shop" measure was approved by the Senate 29-2 and the House 140-1.

The bill would take immediate effect if signed into law by Gov. Bill Clements.

House-Senate conferees came up with a compromise version of the bill Monday, the last day of the regular legislative session. The conferees scrapped a section of the bill that would have allowed party hosts to be held responsible if a drunken guest became a drunken driver.

Blake is assistant presiding officer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate selected Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, as its assistant presiding officer for the interim between the end of the regular session Monday and the start of the special session June 22.

If tradition holds, Blake will be re-elected Senate pro tempore for the 30-day special session, which should give him an opportunity to serve as governor-for-a-day.

Blake, 59, was chosen Monday on the basis of seniority as a result of being elected to the Senate in 1978. He was a House member in 1973-78.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, described Blake as "one of the finest legislators we've ever had."

Filibuster kills tort reform bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Less than 90 minutes after the end of the Legislature's regular session, Gov. Bill Clements called a special session for today to finish work on civil justice reform.

The issue died Monday night when a senator filibustered until the midnight end of the regular session.

But Clements quickly met with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis, and then announced the special session which the leaders said should last only one or two days.

"After much deliberation and with the solid recommendations of the lieutenant governor and the (House) speaker, we will meet again in the morning at 11 o'clock to consider tort reform," Clements said.

Clements also has called the House and Senate to a June 22 special session for work on the 1988-89 budget and possible taxes. He said early today that tort reform is the only issue this first special session will consider.

AIDS spreading slowly, but steadily

WASHINGTON (AP) — New research from around the world shows AIDS is spreading steadily among heterosexuals, and one study suggests that the ability of AIDS victims to infect others climbs dramatically as their disease gets worse.

Among the findings reported at the Third International Conference on AIDS was one by Belgian scientists concerning a 48-year-old engineer who gave AIDS to 10 women before dying of the disease himself in July 1986.

"The reality that heterosexual contact is an efficient mode of transmission (of AIDS) is established," said Dr. Robert Redfield of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington. "It is the major mode of transmission in the world and it will become the major mode in this country."

AIDS testing of military men and women has found, furthermore, that half of those with AIDS infections are single and half are married.

"This is no longer a disease of singles," he said. "It's a disease of the American family."

Redfield reported Monday that the ability to transmit the virus is lower in the earliest stages of the disease, but climbs sharply as the disease progresses.

Honor graduate gets suspended

HOUSTON (AP) — The valedictorian of Kingwood High School won't be addressing his classmates during commencement exercises today after he was suspended for hiring a stripper to entertain a teacher, a school spokeswoman says.

"I don't want to be represented as someone who's bitter about this," said Mike Woosley, 18. "But I think their (school officials) actions are a little bit ludicrous."

"I think it's purely political," Woosley said. "I've been a sparkplug all year. I don't fit the mold of conservative Kingwood. I think they didn't trust me to speak at the graduation."

Woosley also was stripped of his valedictorian title, Humble Independent School District spokeswoman Karen Collier said Monday.

The student was suspended for six days because he violated the rules, Ms. Collier said. He will not be able to take his final examinations as scheduled or attend commencement exercises, she said.

The high-ranking student was supposed to address his senior class of 640 during commencement exercises at 8 p.m. tonight.

Fellow students think the suspension is too harsh and have vowed to boycott the ceremonies. A petition to allow Woosley to participate in graduation ceremonies was started at a student party Saturday, said student Jill White.

A sign in a school hallway reads "We won't walk without Woosley," student Gina Parker said.

"He's got the greatest sense of humor and is an all-American kind of guy," Miss White said of Woosley. "I think it's pretty stupid for him to get suspended. Every year the seniors play a practical joke."

Miss Parker said Woosley was suspended because his name was on the money order used to pay for the stripper, "but everyone brought money to help pay for it."

Woosley was suspended last Thursday for hiring the stripper as a treat for his physics teacher.

The female stripper, dressed as a police officer, interrogated the teacher about some unpaid parking tickets before she started to take her clothes off. The stripper was stopped by a school administrator.

Ms. Collier said school principal Andrew Wells with the support of the school board suspended the student. She said school administrators do not believe the penalty was too harsh.

"The parents of this young man are backing our action," she said.

Teacher Treena Propes also agrees with the principal's actions.

"You've got to follow the rules and if you break them, you have to pay the price," she said.

Woosley and his parents could not be reached for comment by telephone late Monday.

Airplane club sets meeting

The Snyder Area Model Airplane Club will have its regular meeting Thursday evening at 7 p.m. in the TU Electric crew room at 32nd St. and Ave. M.

Election of officers for the coming year is scheduled for that meeting.

Individuals interested in radio control model airplanes are invited to attend.

Criminal mischief complaint probed

Shirley Davis of 1902 Gilmore Ave. called police at 11:46 a.m. and reported a tire on her vehicle cut.

The damage apparently occurred sometime Saturday night while the Davis vehicle was parked in the 200 Block of Chestnut St.

It is thought to be related to five other similar incidents reported Sunday by individuals who had also been at the Chestnut St. address Saturday night.

In other action Monday, city officers jailed a 25-year-old female suspect on misdemeanor theft charges at 3:11 p.m.

That arrest resulted from a call from employees of Kmart who reported having a shoplifter in custody at their store.

One local man was arrested for public intoxication late Monday night.

2 minor mishaps reported locally

Two minor traffic mishaps were reported in Snyder Monday.

Involved in the first, in the 100 Block of Chestnut St. at 4:15 p.m., was a 1984 Mercury driven by Gloria Sanchez Ramirez of 102 Chestnut.

The Ramirez vehicle reportedly struck a parked 1982 Chevrolet owned by Entertainment Rentals of Abilene.

The second mishap occurred at 6:02 p.m. on the parking lot of the Cinema theatre.

Involved in it was a 1980 Chevrolet driven by William Daniel Buchanan of 3605 Houston Ave. which struck a parked 1973 Oldsmobile owned by Natalie Curtis Clark of 112 Elm St.

No injuries resulted from either mishap.

AIDS patients in Catch-22 situation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The doctor delivers the news: the patient has tested postive for the AIDS virus. And for many of those people, trapped in an emotionally draining Catch-22, the rest is silence.

"The vast majority of patients have to face the situation in absolute solitude," Michael Pollak of the Universite Paris said in an address Monday to the International Conference on AIDS. "Anticipating adverse affects or even open discrimination in their social and work life, almost all sero-positive patients keep silent about their diagnosis."

The researcher, whose study fielded responses from 103 patients with positive diagnoses in the spring of 1986, described the phenomenon as a "double-bind situation," a classic Catch-22.

"Refusing help and support and continuing a normal life symbolizes hope. This quest of hope reinforces silence. This attitude of silence, then, hinders mobilizing support when it becomes absolutely necessary," Pollak said.

"Breaking this silence and counteracting this patient's tendency to self-isolation is very difficult, as this phenomenon is deeply rooted in general societal attitudes toward sickness," he added. "HIV patients continue to be perceived almost exclusively as a risk to others. Very seldom are they approached with comprehnsion and compassion."

In the French study, most of the patients stopped sexual activity for at least three months to nine months. One-third of them had not had sex since their diagnosis, and one-third had broken up with their lovers. Only half had told their partners about their condition, preferring separation to an open explanation, Pollak said.

"Clearly, the diagnosis is perceived as a social stigma that can be escaped only through silence and self-isolation," he said.

Prolonged hospitalization prompts some to confide in a friend or relative, but 30 percent remained silent even during those critical times, the study showed. The stress of silent suffering leads to anxiety, insomnia, depression and memory problems, but despite that, more than 80 percent refused offers of counseling.

In most cases, Pollak said, the patients were afraid of basing relationships on their illness and afraid that constant contact with other patients in support groups would continually remind them of their own mortality.

"That may be true in Paris," said George Simmons of San Francisco's Shanti Project, a support group for people with AIDS and their friends and families, "but in San Francisco, I think the majority of men and women with AIDS come and seek out organizations like Shanti because they know they will get support. If you have AIDS in the United States, or in San Francisco, anyway, you don't have to be alone. That's our message: that there are people who care."

Simmon did agree that people with AIDS experience some degree of isolation, particularly if they live outside major cities with extensive support networks.

"It's hard for people to admit to themselves they have AIDS. It's a tremendous stress on them to go tell their friends and family that there's a chance they won't be alive in two weeks," he said. "There's a tremendous stigma attached to AIDS."

Change in society's attitude toward people with AIDS must start with the government, Simmons said, a message echoed by protesters on the street outside the conference hotel. More than 100 people staged a noisy but peaceful march, many wearing T-shirts that declared SILENCEDEATH above a pink triangle, the symbol that marked homosexuals in Nazi Germany.

Jurors indict eight Monday from the yard at Key Brothers Lawn and Leisure this past Saturday.

Both were arrested in Fisher County and released to the custody of their parents. Bond for Almanza was set Monday at $5,000.

Indicted for burglary of a vehicle was Ruben Castenada, 17, of 708 36th St.

Castenada is alleged to have burglarized a vehicle owned by Nancy Wilson of Snyder on May 6.

He remains in the Scurry County Jail in lieu of bond set at $5,000 on that charge.

A 32-year-old Lubbock man was named in an indictment for possession of a controlled substance.

Tommy Roy Wade is currently free after posting a $5,000 on that charge. He is alleged to have been in possession of the drug methamphetamine on April 14.

Three of the indictments issued Monday were for felony driving while intoxicated.

Indicted on that charge were Israel Thomas Torres, 32, of Rt. 2, Snyder; Brent Allen Hinshaw, 28, of 4100 Brick Plant Road; and Ruben G. Cabrera, 24, of 2311 Beaumont Ave.

Hinshaw and Torres are currently free on bonds of $2,000 each while Cabrera remains in the Scurry County Jail in lieu of bond set in the same amount.

Council opposes civil service plan cited statewide civil service requirements which would see employees in the two departments immediately granted three days additional sick leave and additional vacation days.

If these additions were granted to only police and fire personnel, the added cost to the city would be some $22,500 a year.

"And if we treat all the departments fairly, that cost runs to more than $52,000 a year," Williamson said.

Another requirement under civil service is that any employee who leaves city employment can be paid for up to 90 days accrued sick leave.

If this benefit was spread to all departments, Williamson pointed to a "contingent liability for the city of $162,000."

He noted this was a "worst case" assumption which figures a 90-day sick leave payment to all city staffers.

The resolution passed by the council also takes the stand that "benefits (to city staffers) should be determined by (local elected officials) rather than by legislators sitting in Austin."

Williamson noted that once civil service is approved, the city would be bound to follow any future benefits added to the plan by the state legislature.

"That essentially puts your city at the mercy of lobby groups in Austin," he noted.

Other costs to be expected under civil service would be the projected addition of a fulltime staffer to handle all of the paperwork and testing procedures associated with promotion and employment.

Williamson expressed also doubts that the civil service system could ever be eliminated once approved by a vote. "The only way to throw it out is if 50 percent of the registered voters say they don't want it. How many elections have we had where 50 percent of the registered voters even turned out."

"Once it's in, it's just in," he said.

Jury selection now underway

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Attorneys have begun the tedious task of questioning potential jurors in the high-profile murder trial of a policeman accused of killing a fellow officer suspected of vigilante activities.

Sixty people were summoned for jury duty on Monday and almost all said they had heard about patrolman Farrell Tucker killing fellow officer Stephen R. Smith last Aug. 18.

Smith, 31, was suspected of vigilante activities and allegedly planned to kill three top law enforcement officials he blamed for ruining his career.

Tucker, 36, maintains he shot Smith in self-defense.

Defense attorneys and prosecutors will interview the potential jurors individually and hope to assemble a 12-member panel to begin hearing the case Thursday.

Phone tax add-on approved Monday

Snyder sales tax return--a major income producer for the city--was running some 25 percent behind last year's total.

All council members attended Monday's meeting to include Mayor Troy Williamson, Fowler, John Johnson, Mike Post, Ralph Williamson, Fred Castillo and Paul Zeck.

In other business, the council voted to:

—Deny a special use permit submitted by Yvonne Hargrove, who sought it to allow her to sell ceramics out of a residence located at 808 27th St. In denying the request, the council followed a recommendation from its planning and zoning commission. They noted two letters of opposition to the plan from adjoining property owners and the fact that the property in question was not owned by the applicant.

—Approve on second reading an ordinance regarding flood damage prevention. The ordinance brings the city under compliance with updated regulations mandated by the Federal Emergency Management Administration. This compliance allows local property owners with buildings located within the flood plain to obtain flood insurance for this property.

—Approve a final plat of the Howard Subdivision which entails two lots located between 33rd and 34th Sts. and facing Ave. J. The final plat includes a provision for dedicating an alley on the property. The replat request was sumbitted by Howard Smith.

—Approve a final plat of the Smith Subdivision entailing a portion of one lot located at the corner of 32nd St. and Ave. K. The final plat includes a provision for dedicating an alley on the property. The replat request was sumbitted by Howard Smith.

Dear Abby

Woman Finds Her 'Single' Lover Leads a Double Life

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old woman who recently fell in love with a 25-year-old guy. We met at work and discovered a strong mutual attraction on both our parts. Abby, I was never so happy in my life when he told me he loved me and wanted me to be his wife. After spending almost every night together for three months, I get a phone call from his wife who is pregnant and has a 3-year-old daughter by this man.

I don't have to tell you that I was in shock. Now the question, Abby: How does a single girl know for sure if a man is lying or telling the truth when he says he is not married?

USED IN AUSTIN

DEAR USED: A single man will introduce you to some of his friends and relatives. A married man will not. A single man will probably invite you to see his house or apartment. A married man will not. A single man will give you his home telephone number and address. A married man will not.

There's a lesson to be learned here: Don't be so quick to give your love to a stranger. Too fast doesn't last.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I bought my mother a beautiful jewelry box. Yesterday I visited my niece to see her new bedroom set when lo and behold, what do you think I saw on her dressing table? My jewelry box! I asked "Betsy," where she got it and she said it was a birthday present from Grandma (my mother)! When I asked Mother where the jewelry box I had given her was, she lied and said it was in her closet. I asked her how it could be in her closet when I saw it on Betsy's dresser. Then she admitted that Betsy had admired it, so she gave it to her.

When Mother saw how hurt I was, all she said was, "I'm sorry. I didn't think you'd mind."

I haven't spoken to my mother since. I'm through giving her gifts; she'll be lucky to get a card from me in the future.

Am I wrong to feel this way?

HURTING IN BROOKLYN

DEAR HURTING: I can understand your feelings, but please let go of your resentment. Once a gift is given, it's the property of the recipient to do with what he/she pleases. No gift is worth a family rift. Forgive — and try to forget.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter you printed from "Desperate in Maryland." Like him, I had a well-paying job, a secure future as an inventory control specialist for a major utility, and no previous history of drug abuse. And, like him, I developed a love/hate affair with cocaine. My $32,000-a-year job wasn't sufficient to pay for my escalating habit (in 1978, when I was all of 22). I turned to dealing, and still couldn't keep up with the ever increasing amount of cocaine I was using.

I knew I had a problem, but, like "Desperate in Maryland," I didn't know how to deal with it. A year in prison didn't help me. A broken marriage didn't help me. Finally, a heart attack at the ripe old age of 24 made me realize that if I didn't stop, I was going to die.

An understanding doctor put me in touch with Cocaine Anonymous and helped me get into a treatment program. That was seven years ago, Abby, and I'm now leading a normal, happy life. To "Desperate in Maryland": If you really want out of the trap you're in, help is as close as your nearest phone book. You can call either the Cocaine Hotline, or the nearest group of Cocaine Anonymous or Alcoholics Anonymous (many AA members are also Cocaine Anonymous members). Hang in there, "Desperate," help is out there, if you want it.

GRATEFUL AND STRAIGHT

Inner-city kids feel pressure

EDITOR'S NOTE — Stress and strain aren't strangers to South Boston High School, where a decade ago integration came hard. Now the pressures on students are less likely to be racial animosities than teen-age pregnancy, alcoholic parents or just making enough money in out-of-school hours to get by. This is the second of a four-part series on Being 17.

By GEORGE ESPER

AP Special Correspondent

BOSTON (AP) — For Donna King, a 17-year-old junior at South Boston High School, there are no proms, no balloons, no ballads at graduation time.

At such a young age, Donna, like many of her classmates, has already tasted life's bittersweetness.

"There are a lot of pressures out there," she said, echoing the sentiments of classmates as the school year drew to an end. "It's difficult to be 17 and growing up."

Donna turned down her boyfriend's invitation to the junior-senior prom because she couldn't afford a new gown and shoes. The financial problems go back to when she was 7 and her parents were divorced. She and her brother, two years younger, stayed with their mother.

"My father and I never kept in contact because he was an alcoholic. When I was about 15, he started visiting us."

At the beginning of her sophomore year, she and her brother moved in with their father because her mother, a hairdresser, was having financial problems. Her father, a carpenter, had stopped drinking and remarried. But he's been out of work in recent months with a back injury.

Donna has other types of pressures, from her classmates.

At parties, they ask her: "Do you want drugs?" "How about a drink?"

"College is the biggest thing on my mind right now," said Donna, the No. 2 ranked student in the 207-member junior class with a 3.61 grade-point average. "I take college level classes."

The 950 students at South Boston, which was the scene of violence during court-ordered integration in the mid-1970s, come from the poorest areas of the city. The enrollment is about 40 percent black, 35 percent white, 15 percent Hispanic and 9 percent Asian.

Teen-age pregnancies at South Boston number 30 to 40 a year. Pressures confronting students include alcoholism, drug abuse and other family problems.

The school has eight part-time counselors who see about 150 students a year.

One student grateful to his counselor is Lance Adamson, a 17-year-old sophomore. The counselor got him a much needed job as a clubhouse attendant at Fenway Park, where the Boston Red Sox play baseball.

Lance needs the money to support his 8-month-old daughter, help his younger brother and go to college.

His father left when Lance was 2 years old and hasn't lived with the family since then, although Lance still sees him.

"Seeing my father does create pressure," he said. "I'll never forgive him for leaving us. Where was he when we needed him?"

The pressures squeeze all at South Boston, regardless of ethnic background. Donna King is white, Lance Adamson is black and Nancy Prieto, the 17-year-old senior valedictorian, is of Puerto Rican ancestry.

Nancy has a four-year scholarship to Boston University where she will study computer science. She hopes to develop a software program that will help illiterates read.

"Everybody wants you to be your best. I really have to keep up my grades. That puts a lot of pressure on you," she said.

She works 4½ hours a day after school as a file clerk but says her mother wants her to spend more time with the family and to help more with housework.

Suicide once crossed her mind but not seriously, she said.

"That came into my mind once because I was under a lot of stress a couple of years ago from school and my house," she explained. "I didn't think it was a good solution. I knew I had a lot to look forward to. I didn't want to throw my life away. I think it comes to a person because of the pressures of problems they can't resolve. They need help and there's nobody there to help them."

The National Institute for Mental Health reports that half a million teen-agers attempt suicide in the United States every year and about 5,000 die, the second leading cause of death in that age group.

Anita Jamieson, assisant headmaster at South Boston, sees a sense of hopelessness reflected in those numbers. At least a dozen students at South Boston have talked seriously about suicide, she said. "They thought they had nothing worth living for. One of the biggest problems is low self-esteem."

That is not the case with Donna King.

"I feel very confident that I will do well," she said. "There's always tomorrow for something to come up. You may feel depressed on Monday then Tuesday you'll feel better. In life you have ups and downs. You can't be happy seven days a week."

Outlook hinges on family position

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Rizza Herman hugged her attorney father at her high school graduation and promised, "I'm going to be a good lawyer." In a crowded, rundown neighborhood, Teresita Reposo, daughter of a fishmonger, worries about finding a job at all.

The dreams, goals and prospects of these two 17-year-old Filipinos are vastly different, reflecting the reality of life in this country, where success is often an accident of birth.

This is a fact of Filipino life that has not changed despite the overthrow last year of the authoritarian rule of Ferdinand E. Marcos and the promise of a "new dawn" by his successor, President Corazon Aquino.

Wealthy families can afford expensive private high schools or university educations and then establish their children in family businesses. The poor are relegated to public schools where students often share textbooks, if they get books at all.

The poor must then compete for jobs in an economy that grew barely at all in 1986 — .013 percent — after years of decline. The Labor Department estimates that with the population growing at 2.44 percent, the economy must generate 700,000 new jobs a year simply to maintain the current unemployment rate of 12 percent.

Some guidance counselors say the change in government has done little to affect the outlook of young Filipinos, coming of age after the ouster of the only ruler they had known.

If anything, counselors say Filipino youths are less keen to blame the government for the nation's problems and more willing to accept their place in society.

Gone, for the time being, is the frustration, the hatred of authority, that marked Filipino youth in the last years of the Marcos administration.

Janet Pascua, project supervisor of the Bureau of Juvenile Authority, said that unlike their counterparts in "high pressure" societies such as Japan or the United States, Filipino youths rarely consider suicide.

"It's not the government's fault," Arnel Sanchez, 17, son of a low-paid public schoolteacher, said of his grim employment prospects. "It's been since Marcos. I'm not sure if I can get a job. I'm a bit scared. I'll just have to wait for my break."

Like many upper-class youths, Rizza, who graduated last month from a prestigious Roman Catholic high school, sees a bright future for herself.

"I'll try my best to have good grades, enjoy college life and eventually settle down," said Rizza, who plans to enter the University of the Philippines.

But Teresita, who lives in the crowded Sampaloc working-class district, has set her sights considerably lower. She had to quit school for two years because her family could not afford the cost of books and other fees charged even by public high schools.

Farm Bureau wins backing for farm credit system plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four major grower and livestock groups have joined with the American Farm Bureau Federation in seeking government aid for the financially ailing Farm Credit System.

The farm groups are hoping to have legislation in the hopper by the end of the week to rescue the $70 billion network of cooperatives that together make up the nation's largest farm lender, officials said Monday.

The legislation is expected to follow the 21-point outline unveiled April 21 by the Farm Bureau, proposing that the Farm Credit System be given a cash infusion of $3 billion to $5 billion.

Groups joining in support of the plan are the National Cattlemen's Association, the American Soybean Association, the National Corn Growers Association and the National Pork Producers Council, according to Farm Bureau spokesman Joe Fields.

The Farm Credit System itself has called for a $6 billion cash infusion to stave off its burgeoning financial problems.

The Reagan administration several weeks ago circulated an outline it termed acceptable. The blueprint contains a line of credit to the Farm Credit System but the money would be considered a loan rather than a cash infusion.

Administration officials told lawmakers that they did not want to become involved in the bill drafting process at the moment but would merely present an outline of what was acceptable.

"Probably that is a strategy based on their not being able to get a reading on which way people are going to go up here," said Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., top GOP member of the Agriculture Committee. "And so they don't want to become deeply involved until they have a better feeling for what is going to evolve."

The Farm Credit System reported a first-quarter loss of $155 million, compared to a loss of $267 million in the same period a year earlier. Farm Credit lost $2.7 billion in 1985 and $1.91 billion last year

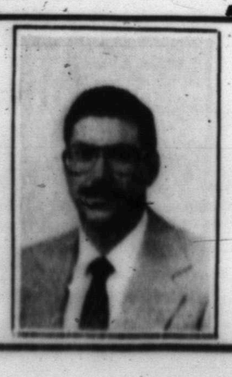

The Farm Credit Administration, the regulatory agency for Farm Credit, has been forecasting serious problems in obtaining capital for some components of the system unless adjustments are made.

Aviation fuel stored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aviation fuel stored at airports could be the answer for farmers who need leaded gasoline to protect the engines of their old equipment, an authority says.

"I don't think there's an airport that wouldn't have a bulk storage tank to supply farmers within a hundred-mile radius," said Walter R. Haessner, executive director of the International Society for Vehicle Preservation.

He spoke at a hearing Monday by the Environmental Protection Agency and Agriculture Department on the effects on farm equipment of EPA-ordered lead reductions.
