WURZBACH ELECTED, CHECK REVEALS

J. T. Harrell Elected President Of City National Bank

KEMP BECOMES CHAIRMAN OF BANK'S BOARD

Four Wichita Institutions Hold Annual Meetings Of Stockholders

GOOD BUSINESS YEAR

J. G. Hardin Vice President Of Security National; Others Re-elect

J. T. Harrell, senior active vice president of the City National bank of Wichita Falls for the last six years, was elected president of the institution and J. A. Kemp, retiring president, again became chairman of the board of directors at a meeting of the directorate held following the annual meeting of the stockholders of the bank Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Harrell first came to this city in 1920 from Clarinda, Iowa, where he had been president of the Clarinda National bank. Upon becoming connected with the City National bank, he assumed the position of junior vice president. In January, 1922, Mr. Harrell became senior active vice president at the same time that P. F. Langford became president, and Mr. Kemp was made chairman of the board. He has filled that position from that time until his election to the presidency of the bank Tuesday. He and his associates recently purchased a $225,000 block of stock in the institution.

Active in City

Aside from a marked activity in banking affairs, Mr. Harrell has entered extensively into the civic life here. He is a steward in the First Methodist church, chairman of the agricultural committee of the chamber of commerce, a director in the North Texas Building and Loan association, and has participated in numerous other enterprises for the welfare of the community since coming here eight years ago. With reference to the ensuing year, Mr. Harrell said:

"I believe that local conditions are fundamentally sound, and we have every reason to believe that the outlook is for times considerably more prosperous than those of the last year. Banks throughout the country are in very good condition, with plenty of cash for all legitimate investments, and the year should prove a satisfactory one for all branches of legitimate business enterprise."

Mr. Harrell's election to the presidency, and Mr. Kemp's assumption of the chairmanship of the board, takes effect immediately, bank officials stated.

Mr. Kemp's long connection with the City National bank as an officer began in 1888, shortly after the organization of the institution, when he became president. He continued in that office without recess until 1922, when Mr. Langford was named as president upon Mr. Kemp's retirement to become chairman of the board of directors.

In the early summer of 1927 Mr. Langford resigned as president, and Mr. Kemp was elected again to that office, which he has filled since that time.

Other Officers Named

Following the meeting Tuesday, Mr. Kemp stated that he had requested the directors to allow him to retire as president, and recommended the promotion of Mr. Harrell to the office. As chairman of the board, he expects to remain active as formerly in the bank's affairs, he stated.

Besides Mr. Harrell's election to the office of president, no changes were made in the official personnel of the City National bank, it was said. Those re-elected were W. L. Robertson, vice president; C. E. Basham, vice president; Oral Jones, vice president and cashier; W. S. Abbott, assistant cashier and trust officer; R. E. Basham, assistant cashier; J. L. Randel, assistant

Attorney Gives Details of State Land Suit in Reply to Hamilton

Oil Firms Claimed 404 Acres in Excess of Owner's Patent, and Drilled After Notice Filed, Says Smedley

Details of the state's suit to recover title to certain lands in Hutchinson county were explained by G. B. Smedley, Wichita Falls attorney, in a statement addressed to The Record News Tuesday.

The statement was issued following the report by The Record News of the speech of W. B. Hamilton, chairman of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce oil and gas bureau, at a meeting of landowners in Midland.

Atorney in Suit

Mr. Smedley was one of the attorneys in the recent suit in which the state recovered title to more than 400 acres of Hutchinson county oil lands and judgment for approximately $900.00 in payment for oil already taken from the land. Mr. Smedley represented Ed B. Trigg of Amarillo in the suit, Mr. Trigg having applied to purchase the land from the state, therefore becoming a party in the state's action to recover the title.

In replying to Mr. Hamilton's address, the statement points out that while J. A. Whittenberg held patent to 1,108 acres of land in Hutchinson county, Mr. Whittenberg and certain oil companies who held the leases on the land claimed title to 1,512 acres. The state sought recovery of the 404 acres, and was twice upheld in jury verdicts in trials at Austin. The statement also says that Mr. Whittenberg and oil companies had notice of the state's claim, and that oil wells were drilled on the land after the notice.

The statement in full follows:

To the Editor of The Record News:

In The Record News of Jan. 3 was published an address recently made in Midland by Mr. W. B. Hamilton of Wichita Falls, in which he took occasion to criticise a suit brought by the state of Texas against three oil companies and Mr. J. A. Whittenberg for the recovery of a tract of land in Hutchinson county, being a suit styled, "State of Texas vs. Phillips Petroleum Company, et al," and recently tried in the district court at Austin. Mr. Hamilton, in his public utterances, is usually accurate in

RAIL PROJECTS ON TWO LINES

Vernon - Seymour Outlet Planned by Frisco

AUSTIN, Jan. 8. (AP)—Extensive future railroad development in the northwestern section of Texas, involving 112 miles of construction on two proposed extensions and the absorption by the Frisco system of the Gulf, Texas, and Western railway, was revealed here in approval by the attorney general of amendments to the charters of the railroads affected.

The St. Louis, San Francisco and Texas railway company today had its charter amended to permit it to construct and maintain an extension 42 miles in length from Vernon in Wilbarger county, to Seymour in Baylor county, where it will connect with the Gulf, Texas and Western railway.

The Gulf, Texas and Western railway yesterday obtained approval of an amendment to its charter authorizing the construction of a 70-mile extension from Seymour, through Baylor, Knox and Foard county to Paducah in Cottle county, where it would connect with rails of the Quanah, Acme and Pacific railway, owned by the Frisco system.

W. Frank Knox Sr., of Dallas, president of the G. T. and W. announced that the Frisco had contracted to buy his railroad subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce commission.

Lawrence and Roy Wilson Waive Hearings After Filing of Charges

Charges against Lawrence and Roy Wilson, alleged to have participated in the fatal shooting of James Cary, government prohibition agent at Hot Springs, Ark., national park in 1920, were filed here Tuesday before J. A. Lants, United States commissioner.

The men were brought here from Paducah where they were arrested Monday night. Cary, who had arrested a group of purported bootleggers and was the only witness against them was killed shortly after the arrest.

The Wilson brothers are said to have admitted their identities when arrested at Paducah but that they denied knowledge of the killing.

The charges filed here before Lants are conspiring to obstruct the administration of justice by killing a government witness together with other unknown persons and in furtherance of the conspiracy to have killed the witness.

They waived hearing and all formalities in connection with removal and are being held in the county jail under $7,500 bonds each subject to orders from the federal judge.

Speaking to a joint session of the two houses, he will deliver his message, giving an account of his stewardship of the past two years and suggest legislation on several important subjects.

Governor Moody will be inaugurated for his second term next Tuesday, after another joint session has canvassed the vote for governor and lieutenant governor and declared the result.

Bitterness Gone

Whatever bitterness that might have existed as a result of the warmly contested race for speakership of the house and president pro tem of the senate, vanished almost instantly after the votes were counted.

W. S. Barron of Bryan, entering upon his third term in the legislature, was elected speaker over W. R. Montgomery of Edinburg. The vote was 87 to 59.

The vote for president pro tem of the senate was closer, Senator Walter R. Woodward of Coleman receiving 16 votes and Senator Gus Russek of Schulenburg 14.

Almost the same argument was used by backers of the leadership candidates in the two houses with different results. Friends of Mont-

JOHNSTON FOES TAKE CONTROL OF ASSEMBLY

Oklahoma Legislature Rent With Wrangling Over Demo Governor

NANCE LEADS HOUSE

'Opposition' Quick to Begin Fight Aimed Solely At Chief's Scalp

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 8. (AP)—Pent-up opposition to the administration of Gov. Henry S. Johnston, held in control for more than a year by his success in forestalling a special impeachment session, broke about his official head today in the first meeting of the regular session of the Oklahoma legislature.

Democratic defenders were helpless against a coalition of anti-administration Democrats and the solid Republican membership of the house of representatives, which lost no time in seizing control of that body in a hectic session climaxed by the resignation of the newly elected speaker, choice of the Democratic caucus.

Nance Is Speaker

James C. Nance of Cotton county, a leader of the insurgent Democrats, was elected speaker after the withdrawal of Allen Street of Oklahoma county. Street resigned when the coalition forced the adoption of rules providing for the appointment of a committee on committees, which deprived him of a power enjoyed by Oklahoma speakers in all previous sessions. Street said he felt his resignation would make for harmony, since the opposition was in control.

Leaders of the administration group pleaded in vain for party regularity. The insurgents, after fulfilling their promise to remain with the caucus in the selection of a speaker, voted consistently thereafter with the Republicans on all questions testing the power of the opposing factions.

Dissenters Control

Although two of the chief leaders of the abortive session, E. P. Hill of Pittsburg county and Tom Johnson of Pushmataha county, were defeated in the August and November elections, respectively, the forces of the opposition were augmented by the replacement of numerous Democrats and Republicans in the general election, so that the dissident group in voting today, controlled as many as 58 of the 106 votes in the lower house.

In the court at the time of the issuance of the warrant for the arrest of the actress were Rita Carewe, film actress and her husband, Leroy Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Finis Fox and Mrs. Uhl. While Mrs. Uhl filed the charges against the actress, the others were to appear as witnesses against her.

Miss Rubens is charged with holding "wild parties" and searching with a flashflight through her bungalow apartment thus disturbing neighbors.

Heretic?

The Rev. H. G. Kenney, 39, Presbyterian minister of Cameron, Texas, is defending his beliefs before the Central Texas Presbytery at Temple which convened yesterday.

'HERESY' CASE KEPT SECRET

Minister Fights Charge of Wrong Teaching

TEMPLE, Texas, Jan. 8. (UP)—Behind closed doors the Central Texas Presbytery today heard charges of heresy pressed against the Rev. H. G. Kenney, Cameron minister, modernist and follower of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Those attending are pledged to close secrecy. The minister's voice raised in self defense could be heard at times on the outside of the little gray church building as he shouted, "this is the twentieth century," and that God is not a God of hate but a God of Love, that humanity was not depraved and that it is not what men believe in the end but what they are."

He declared that he had not said science would do away with sin instead of Jesus Christ, but that he had said he recognized science as a great factor in human life in mitigating wrong doing.

"God is not a beast with a big stick," was one statement overheard in his defense speech.

Asserting that charges against him were brought by a small clique in his own church, he said that no one had asked him to amplify his meaning while it was fresh in his mind. "The first thing I knew of the accusations was that I was confronted with this vague, ill-timed, poorly written, dim and indistinct charge," he said.

The assembly will decide whether or not to appoint a board to try the Reverend Kennedy formally.

As members of the Presbytery, pledged to secrecy, began their investigation, the Cameron pastor told newspapermen that although he was a modernist he did "not believe" he was heretic. "I do not see how any thinking man today can fail to be a modernist," he added.

Guadalupe County Judge Gives Affidavit To Election Board

MAJORITY 98 VOTES

Plurality Instead of Total Used in Counting By Mistake, He Says

AUSTIN, Jan. 8. (AP)—The right of Judge Augustus McCloskey of San Antonio to a certificate of election as congressman from the 14th district was in doubt again today, when an alleged error in the Guadalupe county returns was found.

On the face of the latest corrected returns, if they are adopted, Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach of Seguin would be elected by 98 votes, it was claimed.

Affidavit Presented

Judge J. B. Williams of Guadalupe county this afternoon brought to Austin an affidavit, claiming that he made an error in certifying the returns from his county, Congressman Wurzbach's home.

He claimed that in listing Wurzbach's vote on the printed form he entered the congressman's majority instead of the total votes he received. He said that Wurzbach actually received 2,806 votes and McCloskey 725, giving Wurzbach a majority of 2,081 in that county. He had listed 2,081 as the number of votes Wurzbach received.

Attorney General Pollard indicated that in the event the board finds an error did exist they can re-open the canvass and, if the face of the returns show Congressman Wurzbach received more votes than McCloskey, issue a certificate to him. He was not prepared to say if the board could revoke McCloskey's conditional certificate, issued last week, but, in any case, both aspirants to the seat could present their respective credentials to congress and permit it to make a choice, he said.

The election board will consider the affidavit at a special meeting tomorrow.

WURZBACH GROUP HEARS REPORT

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 8. (AP)—Headquarters of Harry M. Wurzbach, Republican congressman for the 14th district, were jubilant today when information was received from Austin that the county judge of Guadalupe county had reported discovery of an error in tabulation sufficient to give re-election to Wurzbach rather than defeat by Judge Augustus J. McCloskey.

Trail Set Today

The discovery of the error came upon the eve of the opening of the criminal trial of Judge McCloskey who was indicted for altering figures in 17 Bexar county (San Antonio) precincts to show his victory in the congressional contest by 627 votes.

Congressman-elect McCloskey was given a conditional certificate of election last week by Gov. Dan Moody and Secretary of State Jane Y. McCallum. It marked a departure in such documents in that it also certified that Congressman Wurzbach had filed a contest terming fraudulent the tallying of figures which showed him defeated by McCloskey.

WURZBACH ASKS VOTE RECANVASSED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. (UP)—The contest over the 14th Texas congressional seat took a dramatic turn today when Representative Harry M. Wurzbach wired Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, secretary of state, demanding a recanvass of the official returns by that state canvassing board.

Wurzbach was prompted to take such action as the result of a wire from Judge J. B. Williams, of Guadalupe county, admitting he had made an error of 725 votes in the returns from that county.

'Best People' to Be in Throngs At Bier of Rickard in Garden Today

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (AP)—On the spot where the ring is placed when boxing contests are held at Madison Square Garden the body of Tex Rickard rested tonight, awaiting funeral services tomorrow afternoon and burial.

Before the final words are said in praise of the genius of the sports promoter who built the great arena where his body lies, thousands of men and women from every walk of life will pay their silent tribute. Tomorrow other thousands will be admitted until 1:30 o'clock, half an hour before the funeral service is read. For three hours tonight the doors of the garden were swung open to admit the public to pass the massive bronze casket holding the body of Tex.

In his rise to the front rank of promoters, Rickard was continually striving to bring the "best people" to the ringside for his shows and if not to replace the fight fans of other days, whose uniform was a cap and a sweater, at least to push them farther pack in the picture.

Today the "best people" in their high hats came with the boys nervously twitching their caps in their hands to pay tribute to a man who succeeded in making boxing respectable.

Young Texas Oil Millionaire Sets Reno to Talking With Jazz Wedding

RENO, Nev., Jan. 8. (UP)—All was quiet in Reno today—the blatant notes of saxophones were stilled and George Henshaw's "whoopee" wedding celebration was a thing of the past.

The wealthy Texas oil man and his bride, the former Caledonia Clay Pullian of San Francisco, were believed on their way to the California city in the same plane that brought them here—and with the same jazz band.

Henshaw and his bride-to-be descended from the skies here late Monday afternoon. They had flown from Oakland in a huge tri-motored plane and their journey had been enlivened by the airy notes of the five-piece band.

Here the couple obtained a license to wed and the Reverend Brewster Adam performed the marriage ceremony.

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Jan. 8. (AP)—George A. Henshaw Jr., Texas oil millionaire, is president of the Henshaw Oil corporation, which recently sold most of its holdings to the American Maracaibo company of New York for $3,000,000. The sale included three of five discovery pools.

VERNON C. OF C. HOLDS MEETING

Year's Plan of Work Outlined at Banquet

(By Staff Correspondent)

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 8.—Development of dairy and poultry enterprises, support of the air mail, more highways, the annexation of West Vernon to Vernon, and better railway station accommodations are among the principal aims of the Vernon Chamber of Commerce for the year 1929, as outlined at the annual banquet held at the Wilbarger hotel Tuesday evening.

The program of activity was drawn up by a committee which reported to the 200 members and guests who assembled for the occasion. It followed a report of the achievements of the year just past, in which the Vernon chamber lent its aid to the securing of better highways, the completion of a concrete bridge across Pease river, the construction of a new court house, enforcement of sanitary measures in addition to maintaining an employment and an information bureau. The report of the work done in 1928 was presented to the group by Hub Colly, president of the chamber.

W. D. Cline and H J. Adair, of Wichita Falls, were among the principal speakers at the banquet. A. M. Bourland, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, was unable to take his place on the program on account of illness.

Mr. Cline made an appeal for complete cooperation, declaring that all cities must face problems which can only be solved through community effort. He was followed on the program by Mr. Adair, manager of the oil and gas division of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, who outlined the chamber's efforts to secure justice for the West Texas land owner. He expressed the position of the body on the stand taken by the attorney general's department against the land reclamation suits filed by West Texans.

The program Tuesday opened with songs led by R. H. Nichols and Rev. J. M. Perry. Rev. E. L. Moore offered the invocation. Miss Dorothy Greathouse, of Wichita Falls, accompanied by Miss Catherine Orr, sang three enthusiastically received selections. STATE'S LAND SUIT REVIEWED stating facts, but in this address in so far as it relates to that suit, many of the facts attempted to be stated are so entirely incorrect that they give an erroneous impression as to the purpose and nature of the suit.

Attorney Gives Details Of Hutchinson Case

I have hesitated to ask you to publish this statement because of my belief that law suits should be discussed in their proper forum where both sides can be fully presented and an impartial hearing had, but I believe that the explanation of the suit and the corrections of Mr. Hamilton's statements hereinafter made will suffice as a justification for this request.

History of Case

Before making these corrections a brief explanation of the nature of the suit will be appropriate. With Mr. A A. Lumpkin of Amarillo, I represented in the trial of this case Mr. Ed B. Trigg of Amarillo, who, believing the land in controversy to be public school land belonging to the state, filed an application in the regular way to purchase the land. The attorney general of Texas, believing the land to belonged to the state, filed suit for it in the name of the state, against Phillips Petroleum company, Gulf Production company, Marland Oil company, and Mr. J. A. Whittenberg, who claimed the land adversely to the state as a part of the Mary Whitley survey. In this suit Mr. Trigg was made a party by the state, and he was requested to assert whatever claim he had to the land. Since Mr. Trigg's interest in establishing the fact that the land belonged to the state was in that respect the same as the state's interest, Mr. Lumpkin and I, in the trial of the case assisted the attorney general to the extent of our ability.

The patent to the Mary Whitley survey granted to patentee 1108⅔ acres of land. Mr. Whittenberg had title to land under the patent and the three oil companies had leases from Mr. Whittenberg. They and other individuals and corporations claiming under this patent had, before the suit was filed, taken possession of, and claimed title to 1,512 and a fraction acres, or about 404 acres of land more than they were entitled to hold under their patent. It was their contention that the Mary Whitley survey could lawfully be extended far enough north to reach the lines of certain surveys to its north and thus include the excess land of 404 acres; and had the verdict been for those defendants they would have held against the state, and under their patent, and without paying any additional sum for the land, 404 acres more than had been patented to them. It was the state's contention that the surveyor of the Mary Whitley survey was without reasonably accurate information as to the location of the surveys to the north, and that the Mary Whitley survey could not lawfully be extended north so as to include this excess of land, and that the Mary Whitley survey should be constructed according to its true courses and distances as given in the patent and should not be extended beyond these true courses and distances so as to include this excess of land, and that this excess land was outside of the Mary Whitley survey and belonged to the public school fund. The correctness of the state's position has been proven by the verdicts of two juries.

Trigg Is Rancher

Taking up the errors in Mr. Hamilton's statement:

He says that the applicant to purchase this land was "a certain surveyor." Mr. Ed B. Trigg is not a surveyor and never has been. He is a citizen of Amarillo and has spent the best years of his life ranching in the Panhandle.

Mr. Hamilton, in his address, says that on the trial of this case two men who carried the chain when the land was surveyed by the state, testified that they helped survey the land on the ground and that in spite of this the jury who tried the case found that the survey was not in fact made on the ground and that it was an office survey. The facts are as follows: The jury did not make any finding on the question whether the survey was made on the ground. No such question was submitted to the jury. On the contrary, before the jury retired the attorneys for the three oil companies and Mr. Whittenberg dictated into the record an agreement that the Mary Whitley survey was not surveyed on the ground. One of those whose names appeared as chain carriers in the field notes did testify on the trial, but his testimony was that the surveying party did not survey on the ground any of the lines of the Mary Whitley survey, that they found a corner of a survey in another block some distance north and east of the Mary Whitley, and from that corner ran a line in a southeasterly direction, which was away from the Mary Whitley survey, and did no other surveying in that immediate vicinity.

Money to School Fund

The statement is made in Mr Hamilton's addr s that of the nine hundred thousand ($900,000.00) dollars that will be recovered from the three oil companies for the value of the oil heretofore taken from the land, to be adjudged to the state, Mr Trigg and his attorneys will get seven-eighths and the state one-eighth. As a matter of fact the trial judge in this case has already ruled upon this question that all of the $900,000.00 will go to the state and none of it to Mr. Trigg. Thus every cent of the money recovered for the oil which has been taken from the land in controversy will go into the public school fund and not one cent will go to Mr. Trigg or his attorneys. It may be interesting to add here that all of the wells on the land in controversy were drilled by the oil companies after Mr. Trigg filed his application of inquiry for the purpose of buying this land, and thus, after they knew of the contention that the land belonged to the state, and further that the $900,000.00 adjudged to the state is, except as to royalty, the net value of the oil produced after allowing credit to the oil companies, at their own figures for the cost of producing the oil.

The statement that the oil hereafter produced from this land will be divided one-eighth to the state and seven-eighths to Mr. Trigg is also incorrect. All that Mr. Trigg will get will be the right to purchase this land at the end of the litigation with the authority to make a lease on it for the state and for himself. According to a recent decision of the supreme court one-half of the royalty under such a lease would go to the state and one-half to Mr. Trigg, and any bonus which might be received for the lease would be divided equally between the state and Mr. Trigg.

If this suit is finally determined in favor of the state and against those claiming adversely to the state, the recovery by and for the state will vastly exceed in money and value the comparatively small sum that Mr. Trigg may eventually realize from his purchase of the land.

Defends Travis Juries

The statement is made in Mr Hamilton's address, or the belief expressed by him, that justice cannot be secured from Travis county juries and that they are prejudiced in favor of the state. The juries in Travis county are drawn in the regular way from citizens of the county, and the citizens of that county in honesty and fairness certainly compare favorably with those of any other county in the state. The two juries that tried this case were selected with extreme care by a large number of as able and experienced attorneys as the wealth of Mr. Whittenberg and the three oil companies could employ. Two of those attorneys are residents of Austin and are acquainted with the jurors of Travis county, and one of those attorneys has spent most of his life in Austin and enjoys a reputation which goes beyond the bounds of this state. Yet both juries, so selected, after hearing the evidence, returned verdicts for the state.

The attorney general of Texas, who is interested only in representing the interests of all of the people of the state filed this suit after several months of the most careful investigation of the facts and the law and after Mr. Whittenberg and the three oil companies had been given a full hearing before him and had presented at length the reasons for their belief that their clients should be permitted to retain this land.

It is entirely proper that any citizen make publicly whatever suggestions he may desire to make with reference to legislation or any other public matter. I admire Mr. Hamilton's character and ability and the public services he has rendered. My objection to his public statement about the Hutchinson county case is that his information about the case was so incomplete and inaccurate that he should first have made further inquiry into the facts.

Very respectfully yours,
—G. B. SMEDLEY.

Final Words For Rickard Today

ers of other days were in the throng, several white haired men who held belts before Rickard ever saw a gloved hand lead or counter, coming to pay respectful tribute to a man whose like was not seen in their day.

At 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the many doors of Madison Square Garden will be closed and only holders of cards will be admitted after that hour. Card holders will include friends of the family, men prominent in sport, especially boxing and hockey, and officials of the Madison Square Garden corporation, of which Tex Rickard was president and general manager.

The services in the garden will be conducted by the Rev. Caleb Moor pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church and it was expected that a eulogy would be pronounced by Mayor James J. Walker. The mayor as a state senator was the father of the Walker law restoring boxing to favor in New York state. He was long a friend of Tex and occupied a ringside seat at nearly every big fight in the garden.

They descended on the train at a small station, some of them tying up the station master and guards while the remainder went through the train and robbed it systematically, taking two hours.

Troops have been sent in pursuit of the bandits.

MOODY SPEECH SLATED TODAY

Senate and House Elect Their Leaders

gomery emphasized his willingness heretofore to co-operate with the administration and proponents of Senator Woodward inferred in their campaigning that their candidate was and had always been in sympathy with the legislature programs of Governor Moody.

The senate effected permanent organization with little delay, and a flood of bills, including the appropriation bills, totaling $56,000,000 inclusive of the rural aid measure and the "time honored" mileage and per diem bill calling for an appropriation of $185,000 to pay railroad fare and salaries of the legislatures, poured into the hopper.

House Works Late

The house worked until nearly supper time before it could clean the slate of nominating and seconding speeches for aspirants to minor offices.

Today's assembling of the legislature was witnessed by large crowds in the galleries of both houses. The house drew the greatest gallery, attracted by the hot fight for the speakership.

Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, secretary of state, the second woman to preside over the legislature, called the house to order and wielded the gavel until Speaker Barron succeeded her.

The attendance in both houses was unusually good, there being only four absentees in the house, with 146 members answering the roll call. Thirty of the 31 senators were present, there being but one vacant desk, the one occupied heretofore by the later Senator H. F. Triplett of Beaumont, who died recently.

Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller entered upon his third term as presiding officer.

Vote Is Secret

Charles N. Shaver of Huntsville nominated Montgomery for speaker and Fred H. Minor of Denton presented the name of Barron. Seconding speeches were made for Montgomery by Mike Hogg, Houston; Mrs. Laura Durleson Negley, San Antonio; Harry N. Graves, Georgetown, and Dewey Young, Wellington, and for Barron by Ed R. Sinks, Giddings; Coke R. Stevenson, Junction; Phil L. Sanders, Nacogdoches, and Ben J. Woodall, Marshall.

In the senate president pro tem race Senator Woodward's name was proposed by Senator Edgar E. Witt of Waco and Senator Rusek's nomination was made by Senator A. J. Wirtz of Seguin.

The vote in both houses were secret, each representative and senator writing his choice for speaker and president pro tem on a blank ballot and depositing it in a hat.

Applause burst out when the speakership result was announced. Many rushed across the hall to congratulate Barron.

Above the uproar and the sound of Mrs. McCallum's gavel rapping for order, could be heard the voice of Representative Montgomery trying to get recognition.

"I move to make Representative Barron's choice unanimous," he shouted.

There was assent and a chorus of ayes on the question.

Barron was escorted to the speaker's stand and was given the oath by Mrs. McCallum.

Plea for Harmony

In a brief speech, Speaker Barron pleaded for harmony and said he bore no malice or ill-feeling against any one who opposed his selection.

"Above all, I hope you will lend your co-operation to the governor," he said, the remark provoking a round of applause.

Gordy Brown of the University of Texas, all-Southwestern conference football tackle of 1928, was elected first assistant sergeant at arms.

TWO MEMBERS HOLD SINGLE SEAT

AUSTIN, Jan. 8. (AP)—The right of two members to sit in the house of representatives was questioned by contests filed with Speaker W. S Barron soon after the 41st legislature convened today.

E. M. Smith of McAllen has contested the seat of W. R. Montgomery of Edinburg, defeated by Barron for speaker, and Rev. H. H. Wallace of Tyler has protested the right of A. S. Johnson of Winona to represent the 32nd district.

The contests will be referred by Speaker Barron to the committee on privileges, suffrage and elections, which will conduct hearings and report its findings to the house.

In the meantime, and until final action is taken, Montgomery and Johnson will continue as members.

Stomach Antiseptic Highly Indorsed by Consulting Chemist

Accords It Definite Place As a Remedy for Stomach Ailments

C. M. GORDON
Discoverer of Gordon's

Dr. W. H. Morse, well-known consulting chemist of Hartford, Connecticut, has the following to say about Gordon's, the internal antiseptic that is bringing relief to thousands.

"It is true to its name. It is an antiseptic, and helps the abused stomach to get rid of its burden after it has fed the putrid mass of its septic character.

"It has made for itself a definite place in the treatment of stomach disturbances.

"Although prompt results follow, Gordon's is not a one-dose medicine. In all cases its use should be continued for several days, and in chronic cases the treatment should be extended over a longer period of time. The underlying object is to prevent the absorption of poisons from the food mass."

Gordon's, being an internal antiseptic combined with effective digestants, goes right to the seat of stomach troubles. It stops fermentation (souring of food matter), soothes and heals the irritated or inflamed condition and will bring quick relief in cases of gas, dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, bloating, excess acid, bad breath, constipation, sour stomach, "that tired feeling," sick headache, nervousness, when caused by faulty digestion, tone up the digestive organs and stimulate the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. The first dose will convince you.

Gordon's is made in liquid form. A large 8-ounce bottle, price $1.50 —less than three cents a dose. At druggists.

HEALTH AUTHORITIES WARN THE PUBLIC TO BEWARE OF EPIDEMIC

Reports Show That Influenza Epidemic Is Gaining Headway in Many Sections of the Country.

PREVIOUS YEARS' RECORD BROKEN IN KANSAS

Persons Weak and Run Down Are Easy Victims. Fortify Against Attacks by Taking Orgatone.

According to late press reports issued by state and city health authorities, influenza is again becoming epidemic in many sections, and much alarm is now felt that it may become general over the entire country.

The disease has made its greatest progress in Kansas and vicinity, where thousands of new cases are reported daily. Recently 2,400 students and 42 teachers were absent from school in one day at Wichita, Kan., breaking previous years' records. Reports from other sections are also alarming, and the disease is gaining headway in some sections of Texas, Colorado, the Middle West, and on the Pacific coast. It has also appeared in other communities, although it has not as yet reached the epidemic stage.

Owing to the season it is not thought possible that the disease can become the great and terrifying scourge that it was in years gone by, when it swept the entire country and claimed its victims by the hundreds of thousands. The danger is too great, however, to take any chances, and everything possible should be done to ward it off.

Medical authorities agree that people who are weak and run-down are the earliest victims of influenza. If you find yourself tired (and nervous) weak, and losing flesh, or if you are in a generally run-down condition or catch cold easily, this warning should be heeded promptly. You are really in danger if exposed to the disease because it is generally believed to be very contagious, and you are apt to fall an easy victim if you come in contact with the germ.

People who are well and strong are not likely to contract the disease because they are able to throw it off. The common-sense way to keep from taking it is to fortify the system against attack by building up the constitution; in order words, begin immediately to build up your powers of resistance.

To accomplish this it has been demonstrated that nothing on earth will strengthen you and build you up like Orgatone, the powerful reconstructive tonic which contains the very elements needed to build up the system and give you fighting strength to ward off the influenza germ.

First of all, Orgatone begins its work by creating a good, healthy appetite for wholesome, nourishing food, and assists every organ of the body to perform its natural function, thus helping to build up health and strength in the natural way.

Orgatone is also an ideal strengthening tonic for persons who are suffering from the after-effects of influenza, grippe and bronchial troubles, and thousands are using it daily with the most gratifying results. It is also important that every day rules of hygiene be observed, that is, sleep in well-ventilated rooms, get plenty of fresh air and exercise, and keep away from crowds.

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug store, 716 Indiana avenue, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone nurse, who is meeting the public daily and charges nothing to explain his theories on health and hygiene.—Adv.

Civic Department Hears Lectures On Spring Planting and Landscaping

Members of the civic department of the Woman's Forum met at the Forum clubhouse Tuesday afternoon when E. A. Bebb gave a lecture on "Spring Planting."

"Permanents are not successful here," said Mr. Bebb, "but annuals are very successful.

"In planting anything the first thing to be considered is good seed, then water it two or three times a day until the first signs of germination appear. The plant must be watered, because the hot, dry wind soon drys up the surface water and the root is not long enough to reach the natural moisture. After the plant has been carefully brought through the first stages it does not require so much attention.

"Among the annuals that are more successful here are the zennias, both the daliah and the giant types, but they should not be transplanted. The perwinkle is perhaps the most satisfactory because it lasts through the summer and stands the hot winds and stays pretty up to early fall. In planting this flower a great deal of care should be taken because the seed is very small and it is hard to get the plant started to growing. It is best to start it in a box filled with rich soil, and the seed should be broadcast on the top and pressed in with a small stick. It is well to place a newspaper over the top and let the water soak through it. It may be transplanted when it is one or two inches high.

"The red spider attacks from 80 to 90 per cent of all the summer plants and can best be handled by washing it off with strong spray of water."

"Cosmos should be planted late in the fall and the yellow klondike type is more successful here, Mr. Babb stated. It stands the hot weather and makes a lovely cut flower. The Mexican poinsettia, which produces a flower from three to four feet high has a red leaf center with the inside half red and outside half, green, and makes a very attractive plant.

"Hyacinths, daffodils, gladiolas, and tube roses are best planted in shrubs and flower gardens. Tender bedding plants are not so successful here, Mr. Bebb explained, and the plants of this variety have to be planted in a window box.

"Cut flower arrangement is very important and has much to do with the appearance of the flowers. Gladiolas and roses should be cut with long stems and the flower should stand twice the height of the vase above the top of it. Pansys, violets, and nasturiturns may be placed around the top of a flat bowl, but all other flowers should have a long stem."

Another interesting talk was that given by Norman Downing on "Landscaping." In giving the lecture Mr. Downing stressed the need for a good background and the framing of the house with trees. "They should be located at each end of the house and slightly to the back of it." Mr. Downing explained. "It is best to keep the drive way off to the side with a space of six to eight feet for planting.

"The walks are the hardest to locate without cutting up the front lawn, which should never be done. If possible, the walk should be curved or any shape just so it does not parallel the drive and should serve the most direct means of entrance.

"At the end of the house there may be a formal flower garden with a sunken pool surrounded with plain panels of grass. This garden may be planted in with a hedge five or six feet deep. Cedars are probably the best for the background but poplars and sycamores are good for a quick effect."

Following the lectures, tea was served to about 25 members and guests.

School and College News

Students of the high school and college were entertained during the bi-weekly general assembly period Tuesday morning by a series of musical selections by the high school orchestra, under the direction of Leo M. Underwood.

Reports of students from the Wichita Falls Junior college that are now attending the University of Texas were read by Dean Rider. These reports that are read from time to time always prove of much interest to the students and faculty members as it presents a distinct comparison of scholastic requirements of both institutions. Judging from reports read in the past, a student that earns a high scholastic standing in the local Junior college retains practically the same standing upon entering other schools and universities throughout the United States.

To date, no information has been obtained by students pertaining to a mysterious sign that has appeared on the south wall of the main corridor of the building throughout the past week. The placard is of a bright red and and bears the words "Watch This Space." Attempts have been made by many curious students for the solving of the mystery, but all to not avail.

Economic Independence For Women Will Change Ways of Husbands

When Women Achieve Economic Independence Husbands Will Stop Philandering, for Then They Will Be Forced to Make the Wife Job Attractive If They Want to Hold Their Helpmates.

The biggest problem that women have to solve is how to keep the middle-aged husband nailed to his own fireside. A man writing to me on this subject says: "Heretofore, in matrimony, it has always been the wife on whom the burden of making the marriage a success has rested. It was she who had to do the adjusting of one personality to another. She who had to make the most sacrifices. She who had to rub the fur the right way. She who had to shut her eyes to keep from seeing the thing that it would break her heart to see. She who was forced to bear with all sorts of idiosyncrasies in her husband if she wanted to keep her man. The younger generation of women will not suffer themselves to be placed in this humiliating position. They have already demanded a certain freedom in their love life. That will take away man's security. He will be faithful in order to hold his wife."

Perhaps my correspondent is right. He should understand the male psychology better than I do, but personally I cannot see how a husband's suspicions of his wife's fidelity is going to promote domestic peace and harmony. Somehow I cannot visualize a happy home in which there is no faith or trust or confidence, but in which a green-eyed man and woman stand perpetually upon the watch-tower, with their eyes continually peeled, on the lookout for rivals.

Possibly while a woman is young and beautiful it may stimulate her husband's interest in her to feel that he has a very precarious hold upon her and that she is likely to go off with some other man who strikes her fickle fancy if he does not show her enough attention. A woman's youth and beauty soon go, however. Other sheiks fade into the background and become a negligible danger, and what is to hold a husband then when the danger is past?

Besides, few men enjoy being kept worked up to a boiling point of jealousy. The average husband doesn't want to have to watch his wife. He wants to believe in her goodness as absolutely as he believes in the goodness of God. He wants to have a faith in her loyalty and honor that no doubt ever dims.

So, I cannot believe that it will promote fidelity in husbands for their wives to take to philandering. It is bad enough now, heaven knows, when suspicions of their husbands gnaw at the souls of so many women. It would be worse if every husband was torn with doubts of his wife. For both husbands and wives to distrust each other would not usher in the domestic millennium we all long to see. It would bring about a worse pandemonium than now exists.

I agree with my correspondent, however, that Patient Griselda has few lineal descendants among the younger generation of women and that the women of today, and especially the women of tomorrow, are not going to stand the sort of treatment from their husbands that their mothers and grandmothers stood. They are not going to suffer and be strong as grandmother did. They are going to fight back.

They are going to cast into the discard a lot of the old stock of wifely virtues. They are not going to be so meek and humble, nor have an inexhaustible stock of forgiveness on tap that they are ready to pour over husband every time he stumbles off the straight and narrow path. The young man who marries one of them is going to find out that he is tied up with a regular human being with whom he has to go fifty-fifty instead of having espoused a doormat that he can trample over and kick around.

All of this is going to raise a great rumpus. Men aren't going to like it. The divorce statistics are going to increase for a while, but in the end it is going to mean the reformation of matrimony, better husbands, fewer broken-up homes and orphaned children, and marriage placed upon a fair, equitable basis.

As I see it, the thing that will bring about this desirable result is not for wives to become rakes and keep their husbands guessing, but the economic independence of women and the certainty a husband will have that, if he doesn't make the wife-job attractive and give his wife a square deal, she will give notice and quit.

The reason that wives in the past have stood for all sorts of injustice and humiliation from their husbands; the reason that they have endured tyranny, and niggardliness, and unfaithfulness, and drunkenness, was not because they were such angels that they forgave every offense against them, or because they were so much in love with their husbands that they were like dogs that licked the hands that smote them, but because their husbands were their meal tickets.

They had no trade or profession by which they could earn a dollar. If they left their husbands they would starve, and husbands knew this and treated them accordingly. Within another generation every girl will be taught some way of making a living, just as much a matter of course as she is taught how to read. She will be just as capable of supporting herself as a man is, and when she gets married her husband will have to mind his p's and his q's if he wants to keep her.

No one treats an economically independent person in the same way that they do a dependent one, and when the time comes when men realize that the only way to keep a good wife is to treat her right, why, you are going to see husbands who are sprouting wings on their shoulder blades.

Latest Giggle in Fashion Wafts Across London as Milady Attracts Male Optics With Dress and So on of Ostrich Quills

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE

LONDON, Jan. 8. (US)—If you are a woman and you wore "undies" of ostrich feathers, wouldn't you be just tickled to death?

No, this is not the latest Hollywood wheeze. A woman walked up Regent street yesterday fully clad in ostrich plumes: hat, frock, coat and—a competent authority vouches for the last item—those things underneath. Everything but the stockings, you understand.

She was a Parisian model and she'd been sent over here to London by one of the more radical modistes of Paris to demonstrate the latest giggle in fashion. The effect in her parade up Regent street on a day of typical London drizzle was little short of devastating.

The Paris gownmaker's innovation reflects a sudden flair for ostrich plumes which has affected the revue stage in the capital of fashion all this winter. Mlle. Paulette Meszaros, a beauty from Budapest, has set the pace for other stage stars by apearing in one Parisian revue in eight different costumes, each composed exclusively of ostrich plumes. Another goes Mlle. Meszaros one better and dances with nothing much on her body, but with a carpet of ostrich feathers under foot.

The whisper from across the channel is that Parisian designers are making a concerted effort to force plumes back into fashion and so rescue the South African ostrich farmers from the slow starvation into which they were forced when fashion decreed "no more plumes" shortly after the war.

Six-Foot Waffles

And you'll never find Hills Bros. Roasting Coffee in Bulk. Instead they Roast a few Pounds at a time by a Continuous Process

MEASURING and mixing the ingredients—controlling the heat—can be done much more exactly when you make several small waffles than mammoth ones.

As you follow this principle, in cooking all food, so Hills Bros. apply a similar rule to roasting coffee. They roast their coffee a few pounds at a time by a continuous process instead of in bulk. As a result every berry is roasted evenly and the rich flavor of the rare blend is developed to the utmost.

No other coffee can taste like Hills Bros. because none is roasted the same way. Controlled Roasting is Hills Bros.' process exclusively. And the full-bodied flavor and rich aroma come to you in all their fulness because Hills Bros. Coffee is packed in vacuum.

Coffee-lovers everywhere overwhelmingly prefer Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab, Hills Bros.' famous trade-mark, on the can.

CAR INSURANCE LAW POOR ONE

Speaker Points Out Lack Of Perfection

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (US)—The National Automobile Dealers association in session here today in connection with the 29th automobile show, heard a strong address against compulsory insurance of automobiles.

Day Baker, of Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts Automobile and Garage Owners association told the dealers of the two years compulsory insurance in Massachusetts. Baker pointed out that the first failure of the law was that it did not provide for property coverage damage.

Outstanding Question

The insurance law is one of the outstanding questions that the dealers will face during the coming year as almost every state in which a legislature meets this year will have a bill presented for such a law.

Baker pointed out that as a result of the lack of property damage clause in the insurance law, almost every accident resulted in exaggerated claims of nervous shock so that the owner might recover sufficient money in this fashion to pay for damage to his car.

He said the law was so far from perfect that it failed to even accomplish one part of the ideals of its sponsors and urged that other states not attempt passage of such a measure.

Bliss in Address

The dealer meeting came at the time that C. H. Bliss, sales manager of the Nash Motors company, was addressing a select group of the dealer responsibilities of the future. He pointed out that the conditions would be met properly as the present day dealer was a splendid type of business man, soundly grounded in the principles of good business and publis service.

"They have expended large sums in building improvements," Bliss pointed out, "so that American motorists may have better service generally during the coming years."

John N. Willys tendered newspaper men his annual luncheon today. He announced that his company would build as many cars during the first six months of this year as it did during the entire year of 1928. He said that his company now has 130 acres of floor space devoted to production.

"We will be employing 28,000 men in Toledo alone before the end of the month," he said. "Our production will exceed 2,000 cars daily. In fact our program at present stands 35,000 cars in January, 40,000 cars in February and 50,000 cars in March. Besides our Canadian plants will be turning out 15,000 cars during that time."

Plant in Operation

It was also announced at the luncheon that the Los Angeles plant was now in actual operation, four cars having been produced of the new line there yesterday.

The Packard company wound up a two days sales meeting at the Roosevelt tonight. The speaker of the evening was Dr. John L. Davis. Ray Chamberlain, general sales manager and his new boss, H. W. Peters, vice president in charge of sales were introduced to the gathering.

Hale Center-Parmerton Rail Line Arguments to Be Made Jan. 25

Special to The Record News

PLAINVIEW, Texas, Jan. 8.—The oral arguments before the Interstate Commerce commission at Washington in the case whereby the Panhandle-Santa Fe Railway company would extend a line from Hale Center, in Hale county, to Parmerton in Parmer county, a distance of 66 miles, through Olton and Earth, will be given on Jan. 25.

Examiner H. E. Davis who heard the testimony at Lubbock when the application was heard has rendered an adverse report, believing that the new line will parallel the present line of the Fort Worth and Denver too closely to be necessary. The Santa Fe, and the people of Olton, Plainview, Hale Center and Parmerton are strongly supporting the application, and will be represented in Washington when the case is heard.

Olton, the county seat at Lamb county, is without rail connection. When the Fort Worth and Denver South Plains road was built, Olton was the only town in this part of the country that was not given rail service. Lamb county is highly productive and is populated by many prosperous farmers who are forced to truck their produce as far as 30 miles to a railroad. It was to remedy this situation that the Santa Fe made its application for this line early in 1928.

Simple Inaugural Hoover's Demand

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. (AP)—One phase of the speculation that has swirled about the return of Herbert Hoover was quieted today when he gave his approval to the March 4th inauguration plans—of a simple nature.

Beyond the official ceremony of oath taking at the capitol the program calls for a parade chiefly of military units. The inaugural ball of other days will be omitted.

The plans were made public by Col. U. S. Grant, chairman of the inaugural committee, and E. F. Colladay, Republican national committeeman for the District of Columbia, who conferred with Mr. Hoover and Chairman Work of the national committee.

Poultry-Rabbit Show At Electra Thursday

Special to The Record News

ELECTRA, Texas, Jan. 8.—Electra's annual Poultry and Rabbit show will begin on Thursday of this week, in the Graham-Paige showrooms on North Waggoner street, according to announcement Monday by Robert P. Hall, manager of the Electra chamber of commerce, sponsors for the exhibit. Frank E. Buck of Oklahoma City, noted authority on poultry, will act as judge, with other judges to be appointed later.

A complete premium list has been issued and is being distributed this week. Many valuable prizes are being offered in the various departments, two of which will be devoted to production and eggs, to encourage the enlargement of this important part of the industry.

Resources of Largest Bank Show Increase

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (AP)—Resources of the National City bank of New York, the largest banking institution in the country, increased $184,902,697 in 1928 to the record total of $1,847,705,548. The figures were announced by President Charles Mitchell at the annual stockholders meeting today. Stockholders of all national banks were in session today.

President Mitchell finds there is "firm ground for the belief" that business should continue in the coming months with substantial volume and reasonable profit. "The danger, if there be one," he said "must lie in the possible credit strain."

A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Adv.

Donley County Rancher Sells 65 Sections Land

Special to The Record News

CLARENDON, Texas, Jan. 8.—The largest land deal made here for several seasons was closed Saturday with the announcement by J. R. Porter, attorney for J. W. Owens of this city of the sale by Mr. Owens of his ranch consisting of 35,997 acres, approximately 65 sections, in Briscoe and Hall counties some 20 miles south of this place. The ranch was bought by the Slaughter company of Bob Slaughter of Dallas and R. L. Slaughter of Lubbock who have already begun the movement of cattle to this ranch.

The exact figures of the sale were not announced but it was said the deal involved over $235,000 which it is understood here was paid in cash. Mr. Owens is an extensive land owner of the Panhandle and still owns around 35 sections.

MELLON'S JOB APPEARS SAFE

Secretary and Hoover Have Lunch Together

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. (US)—The probably definite decision to retain Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon in his cabinet was reached by President-elect Herbert Hoover here today.

He had lunch with him for two hours. Afterwards it was understood that Mr. Hoover had expressed a wish to have Secretary Mellon remain in charge of the nation's fiscal affairs and that he had consented.

This was the most important event in an unusually busy day, the second since Mr. Hoover returned from his good will tour of Latin America. From early in the day until late in the evening the waiting line of politicians and office seekers formed a long queue down the corridor of the hotel where he has established headquarters.

No, No, Says Borah

His visitor was Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, a breakfast guest and sometimes mentioned as a possible secretary of state. Senator Borah denied the latter possibility with an emphatic "No, no, no, no," upon his departure, saying that he had merely discussed the legislative program.

Senator Watson, Republican, Indiana, was an early caller. It was said that he was seeking the favor of Mr. Hoover to succeed Vice President-elect Curtis as the Republican leader in the senate. Since he was leader of the anti-Hoover forces before the Kansas City convention and somewhat lukewarm there, those close to Mr. Hoover said that he was not seriously considered for this responsibility. The genial Indianian was all smiles when he left, however. His mission was "merely to pay my respects," he said.

Iowa Delegation

To an Iowa delegation headed by Representative Haughen and Dickenson, Mr. Hoover made it plain that he would make no effort to compel action on farm relief at the present session of congress. Representative Haughen said that Mr. Hoover made it emphatic that he considered the program now before congress to be in the hands of President Coolidge and that he would not interfere in any way.

He made it equally emphatic, when told it would be impossible to obtain farm legislation at this session, that he would call on extra session to deal with the subject. No definite date was set.

The Iowa delegation discussed the farm situation in detail on the assumption that it would be a matter for Mr. Hoover to deal with. They also asked that he name an Iowan as the next secretary of agriculture. They suggested the names of Dante Pierce, Iowa publisher of farm periodicals and J. R. Howard, Iowa farm leader.

Senator Hale, Republican, Maine, chairman of the senate naval affairs committee, discussed the cruiser program with the president-elect. He assured Mr. Hoover that it would be enacted at this session, despite pacifist propaganda. He said afterwards that the program had the support of Mr. Hoover, although Mr. Hoover will not interfere in the program. It was understood, however, that Senator Hale would take to his colleagues in the senate the statement that Mr Hoover was for the measure.

The day was a colorless one for Mr. Hoover. He remained in his office throught 12 hours of steady work, except for the time he was receiving callers and when he lunched with Secretary Mellon.

Simplicity of cooling system is a feature of the new Ford

A COMPLETE water plant is a part of every automobile as it is a part of every modern city.

The purpose of this water plant is to keep the engine cooled to a temperature that will make it efficient in operation. If it were not for this, the cylinder walls would overheat and the pistons would refuse to operate.

The cooling system of the new Ford is particularly interesting because it is so simple and reliable.

When the radiator is full of water, the engine of the new Ford will not overheat under the hardest driving. Yet the action of the water is so regulated that it will not impair engine operation by running too cold in winter.

The cooling surface of the Ford radiator is large and there are four rows of tubes, set in staggered position so that each receives the full benefit of the incoming air.

The fan is of the airplane-propeller type and draws air through the radiator at the rapid rate of 850 cubic feet per minute at 1000 revolutions per minute of the motor.

The hot water around the cylinder head is drawn to the radiator to be cooled by a centrifugal water pump of new design.

The entire cooling system of the new Ford is so simple in design and so carefully made that it requires very little attention.

The radiator should be kept full of water, of course, and drained once each month so that sediment will not collect and retard the free passage of water. In cold weather a reliable anti-freeze solution should be added.

As owner and manager of this important water plant, you should also see that the water pump and fan shaft are properly lubricated and the packing around the pump shaft kept in adjustment.

The hose connections may also need replacement after long, continuous service. For those little adjustments, it pays to call on the Ford dealer.

He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to do a competent job at a fair price.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON
(Copyright, 1928, by Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Probably the first bride who ever spent her honeymoon at the bottom of the sea passed through New York a short time ago. She is Lilah Williamson, wife of Jack Williamson, a pioneer submarine motion picture photographer. It was Jack Williamson who invented the diving bell contrivance by which the first pictures of the fantastically beautiful life of the sea floor of the Bahamas were obtained more than a dozen years ago.

When the Williamsons were married Jack asked his bride if she thought she would like to accompany him on an observation tour to the Bahamas, his favorite natural studio. She jumped at the chance and within a few days after the knot was tied Mrs. Williamson had her first glimpses of the weird charm of the sea floor in the tropics. With her husband she sat there comfortably protected by a flexible metal tube of his invention and able to survey the waving foliage and the darting fish through small glass windows. Through one of these windows Williamson operated his motion picture camera.

"It was just like turning your back completely on the old earth and going to an entirely new world," she says. "The bottom of the sea appeared to have no connection with this earth with which we are familiar. Light was different—a lovely pale green, like looking through pale green glass; colors were different, more vivid and changeable; proportions were different. But it was all wonderful beyond belief. Any bride who gets the chance to spend her honeymoon at the bottom of the ocean is a lucky girl. The presumption is, of course, that her husband won't keep her there too long.

"Do you know I found out that fish were very much like people. They have their likes and dislikes and queer habits. There are even eccentric individuals among them. There is, for example, a schoolmaster, a dictatorial fellow, who goes about trying to make other fish do things the way he wants them done. There are fish hermits who insist on swimming off by themselves and avoiding the society of their kind. There are huge companies that travel about under the command of a single leader and which turn about like a regiment at the obvious command of this general. The hermits like to hide among bits of carol and when other fish come along to disturb them in their little hermitages they poke their noses out and snap like snarly dogs. Size does not necessarily imply courage even on the sea floor.

"I learned in my curious experience that fish can show affection. A pair of fish swam past our observation window one day, and as they moved slowly along I saw them touch mouths from time to time. I am positive that they were newlyweds and just wrapped up in each other.

"The place where we made our observations, and which Mr. Williamson calls his studio, is the great barrier reef of Andros Island. This reef is fringed by a forest of living carol, one of the most beautiful sights this world has to offer. It is like an enchanted region. There are trees of stone and shrubbery of stone of a dozen beautiful colors—all coral of course. The coral takes many forms—beautiful—fantastic—terrible. There are castles, monsters, trees, temples and lacework. Through the formations brightly colored fish dart and flash like living jewels. One never tires of watching that lovely kaleidoscope. Yellow is a predominating shade, but there is plenty of vivid red and blue, along with many browns and roses and lavenders."

Jack Williamson, who has made such undersea explorations, does not agree with William Beebe that the shark is not dangerous. Williamson believes from his experience of them that they are all man-eaters.

"Under certain conditions," he says, "they will attack anything—living or dead. I have seen them tear each other to pieces. I know what devilish things they are and I feel inclined to warn every one not to be lulled into any feeling of security by stories that would make it appear that sharks are not man-eaters, and are not dangerous. When they are hungry they are always dangerous, and they are almost always hungry."

Mr. Williamson has spent more than 14 years in exploring tropical sea floors in the region of the Bahamas. He selected the Bahamas because of the unusual clearness of the water. For the last two years he has been making a series of observations, in company with other scientists, for the American Museum of Natural History, and tons of specimens from the sea bed have been sent to the museum here.

A Harsh Decision?

THE ACTION of a Philadelphia judge in finding a purchaser of liquor guilty of conspiracy might have far-reaching effects if generally adopted by our courts.

There are, in this country, countless "law-abiding" citizens who think nothing at all of conniving at law breaking by patronizing bootleggers. They are quite safe; if the transaction comes to light it is the bootlegger's hard luck, not theirs. They keep their respectability and go unpunished.

But if arrests, stiff fines and jail sentences were apt to follow on the purchase of a bottle of whisky these people might change their attitude.

It is hard to see why anyone should protest against the Philadelphia judge's decision. After all, it takes two men to break the liquor law—one to sell and one to buy. The buyer is doing just as much to break down the law as the seller. If he is made to pay a penalty he hasn't much kick coming.

The Country Doctor

A NEW angle of the "farm problem" which hasn't been discussed much but which will grow more and more acute with each passing year is pointed out by a writer in the current issue of the North American Review. It is the crisis in country life which is approaching as a result of the disappearance of the country doctor.

In 1906 there were in the United States 33,000 physicians in towns of 1,000 population or less. By 1924 this number had dwindled to 27,000, and it is still going down. Almost one-third of the small towns that had resident doctors in 1914 have none today.

Medical education and training grow more expensive each year. The vast majority of medical graduates, seeking to recoup their expenditures, enter urban practice as specialists in one branch or another of their profession.

Just what can be done to remedy matters is not clear; obviously, it is a problem that needs some very serious consideration.

Relief for the Aliens

THE foreign language information service points out a task with which the present congress might well busy itself—the providing of relief for the thousands of American residents of alien birth who, due to cumbersome laws, are classed as "illegal entrants."

Before our immigration restriction laws became effective in 1921, entering the country illegally was not considered a serious offense, and thousands of immigrants came in without being examined by immigration inspectors. These people, many of them thoroughly Americanized, now find they cannot become citizens because our immigration records do not list them. They cannot be deported, so they remain people without a country.

Secretary of Labor Davis has recommended that congress remedy this situation by making these aliens eligible for citizenship. It is to be hoped that congress can find the time and the inclination to do it.

Who Is Intelligent?

THE Pennsylvania Education association at a recent convention urged legislation "limiting the voting privilege to those who can exercise it intelligently."

The assembled teachers pointed out that when the functions of government were simple, little education was required to exercise the duties of citizenship. Now, however, government is complex, and only an intelligent electorate can handle it properly. Hence the need for restriction.

Unfortunately, however, there are objections to their plan. How would we put such restriction into effect? Is there any evidence that the highly educated man really votes more intelligently than the man who never finished high school? Isn't it quite certain that this scheme would prove an admirable instrument for disfranchising any discontented section of the electorate that the upper classes feared?

The Pennsylvania teachers may be given the prize for advancing the most impractical solution to our governmental problems seen in many a year.

THE SQUIRT REVOLUTION

RODS or rebukes are no longer in the vogue. If you want to be smart, spoil the child.

Little Aubrey must not be corrected; any attempt to mould the darling's character will tend to muddle his individuality.

And if Betty Ann is inclined to play with matches, smash mirrors or jam-smear the living room wall—don't interfere—she's simply expressing her personality.

So let the cute dears gouge grandmother, blurt Aunt Mary's age—howl, kick and spill ink to heart's content.

Don't cramp their style or you may maim their souls—in other words, raise orderly, respectful and proper sons and daughters.

The latest school of boshology insists that parents have no right to "impose complexes" or assert "bull-dozing authority."

"Father" and "mother" are now outlaw words; we are all on terms of equality in Nursery Hall and therefore "Bill" and "Bess" to the junior generation.

Meanwhile, the combined experience of all centuries and races declares that babies aren't born truthful, obedient or moral, and won't become so unless the fundamental ethics are persistently taught.

They inherit directly from Adam; their normal instincts are the same in a Kaffir kraal as in a Park Avenue nursery.

Until guided otherwise, it's human impulse to take the shortest cut to possession and desire.

Lying, thieving, violence are natural traits.

An infant doesn't understand traffic or danger signals—can't realize why we have decided upon certain prohibitions and repressions—which necessity has incorporated into judicial codes.

Therefore, left to indulge his own sweet will, he must fall into some repulsive habits, commit various nuisances—and inevitably become one.

Man is amenable to reason and explanation only because successive generations of experiment have taught us how to develop character.

He can be schooled in restraint and brought to appreciate the logic behind standardized "don't" and "mustn'ts."

But no youngster left to unbridled autonomy and selfishness can be expected to mature into an acceptable member of society.

Nobody gives a tinker's dam how hard the modernists ride their hobbies through painting and sculpture, but when they begin to distort the art of motherhood with abnormal notions, it's time to call a halt on the squirt revolution.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard demonstrates to some friends his invention whereby it is possible to project past events exactly as they happened. In the group are his sweetheart, Phyllis Norman; her father, mother and brother, John; John's sweetheart, Carol Gould, and Radley's Aunt Relief. While they are looking at a famous dinner given for a motion picture star who had been drowned a week before, and Radley explains the scenes he shows are released from liquid air contained in "bombs," a ragged, gaunt man staggers in the studio. He cannot remember who is, but calls Phyllis by her name. Radley names the stranger Van Winkle.

It was the following afternoon, after 24 hours more of this respite, that her mother told her Radley was coming to dinner, "and bringing Mr. Van Winkle." Mrs. Norman told her Radley had explained that he intended to treat the man as a friend, to take care of him and study his case for a time. He was friendless and without resources otherwise. And Mrs. Norman added naively that, however unfortunate he might be, Mr. Van Winkle seemed a gentleman. She used the name now quite naturally; but the mere mention of it thus brought the girl a qualm of misgiving that undercut the buoyancy of her heart. It showed her the flaws in her own jaunty reasoning which she had overlooked or perversely ignored. Van Winkle, and that scene of his resurrection on the beach, were inexplicable even if everything else she had seen in Brainard's studio were reasoned away or lost sight of. Accepted as a guest in her home! And yet, why not? An unfortunate gentleman!

But the first shock to her nerves had passed, and Phyllis Norman was no neurotic. There was a wholesome, substantial strength in her that could rise in staying powers as well as in ability to meet emergencies. As she dressed for dinner that night the agitation she had felt at thought both of meeting Radley again and at renewing contact with the problem she had to face had left her. When she met Brainard down in the library, where her father had a hearth fire going in the cool of the spring evening, she gave him her hand with readiness to go half way—and more. And he smiled at her, so much like his old self again that she became happy at once.

Van Winkle met her with an eagerness that had the quality of an affectionate dog's delight in being near a friend. He called her Phyllis without apparent consciousness that he was taking any liberty or creating any new mystery. It startled her a little; then she resented it; then she argued that if the man was what he seemed to be he was at worst a sort of harmless lunatic, to be humored for the moment. And curiosity was stronger in her now than fear.

Carol and John were there, of course. Her mother accepted Carol quite as one of the family. Besides, the girl's mother was away in the East, and Carol had a faculty for making herself at home where she chose and when. Miss Relief Brainard arrived late to complete the party, which Mrs. Norman had arranged to omit none of the studio group.

Cocktails were brought into the library. Van Winkle looked at them quizzically. "I might think I'd stepped backward rather than forward in my life," he said, with that casual air he adopted for the most part toward his predicament—and an allusion that made it seem unreal. "Eight years!" he added, raising his glass. "What's become of the prohibition law we tried not to observe in 1927?"

"Nothing" said Radley shortly.

"Then liquor is king again?"

"He's in process of abdicating naturally now." answered Brainard. "He was before prohibition—only some of his subjects didn't fancy having the thing hurried."

"Sooner or later all liquids find their level," said Mr. Norman, "and the general equilibrium is preserved—as with 'liquid events.'"

But Mrs. Norman would not let them take up the great subject till they were at table. Then she could not prevent it.

Balboa

"Well, what's the big development, Rad?" asked John. "It's hard for me to keep away from your place for an hour at a time."

"You needn't keep away, John," replied Brainard. "What do you think we've been looking at this afternoon, Van Winkle and I?"

Phyllis' attention divided between interest in what Radley would say and his familiar address to the stranger. She turned to the Van Winkle, who had been seated next to her. He avoided her eyes and laughed uneasily.

She turned back to Radley, her thoughts fluttering, as Carol demanded his explanation.

"Hold your breath, then," said Brainard, "for I'm going to plunge you in beyond your depth! We saw—a gentleman who we think was Mr. Balboa, taking his first view of our little ocean out here—in fifteen hundred and something, wasn't it?"

His audience was indeed breathless for an instant. Then arose a chorus of ridicule. But in the midst of her laughter Phyllis saw that Van Winkle was not smiling. This intensified the joke for the moment—for Radley had drawn the long bow too far. Van Winkle's seeming mystification spiced the real belief she felt.

"But Balboa didn't look at the Pacific from Hollywood!" asserted Carol.

"I didn't say he did," returned Brainard. "Peru, wasn't it? But what's that got to do with it?"

"And you want us to think you've been to Peru over night, picking up etheric records?" asked Aunt Relie!.

"Oh, no. But think what you like. Van Winkle and I believe we were in on the discovery of the Pacific this afternoon about 4 o'clock."

It seemed peerile now. Phyllis tasted the dish before her and waited. Radley glanced at her and his face hardened as if he newly read and resented her attitude. He leaned back in his chair, laying his napkin aside.

"I don't want to spoil your dinner, Mrs. Norman," he said. "Shall we eat it first? Or shall I make you all forget your appetites?"

"Oh, eat your dinner, children!" exclaimed the anxious hostess.

"I'm not hungry!" asserted Aunt Relief, and her wholly serious 10-year-old air started the laugh once more.

Brainard took up his napkin with another glance at Phyllis. "All right," he assented. "Perhaps it will be just as well to let you get used to the ideas I've given you before I thrust any more facts upon you. Forget Balboa for a moment and think of what—"

"But I can't forget Balboa," insisted Carol. "If you saw him, there's nothing you can't see! I—Radley Brainard, I couldn't have slept since I saw that first scene in your studio if I hadn't been able to comfort myself with the assurance that you are a beautiful liar!"

"Oh, yes, you would. You'll sleep tonight after I get through with you. Remember how quick you were to demand action the other night?"

"What are you going to show us?" asked Miss Brainard. "Can you bring your pictures here?"

Possibilities

"What would you like to see?" Brainard looked around the circle and his smile vanished. "Shall I show you a little of the brutal truth about war—red hot from September, 1918? Or shall I show you a young man with a handkerchief covering his hand, about to greet William McKinley at Buffalo in September, 1901?"

Every movement at the table was arrested. The little family group sat like figures on a film that stops. Then Relief Brainard's spoon fell clattering on a plate.

"Oh, Radley, this is too bad!" cried Mrs. Norman.

"Yes," said Brainard, coolly. "And I, being used to this, can appreciate a good dinner."

Phyllis watched him for a moment, then continued her own dinner. Words! After all, just words! Unbelievable, and costing nothing. Like Carol, she envisioned flaring billboards.

"Oh, well, come on, Rad," said John, manifestly principally amused. "You may as well tell us at once where Dorothy Arnold went!"

"And Charlie Ross," supplemented Mrs. Norman.

"All in good time," Brainard answered, reaching quietly for his glass.

But the impulse to treat the thing lightly was contagious.

"I can see that nothing is going to be safe from you," said Mr. Norman, "from trade secrets to little trips to Tijuana!"

"If you can show today what happened last night," said John, "nothing will be left of the newspapers but the funny page."

"And nothing left of the movies but the vaudeville!" suggested Carol.

"And nothing left of vaudeville but the bonbon box!" said Miss Brainard.

"Why, Aunt Rel!" laughed Radley. "I never thought about destroying your pet amusement!"

"I might get to like yours, if I could get to believe in it," replied his aunt.

"There you are again," said Radley. "Motion pictures have so thoroughly prepared your minds for trickery that you can't believe the real."

"Why try to keep up the pretense, Radley?" demanded Carol. "You can't bring us back to faith after that Balboa break."

"Perhaps I'll bring Balboa back. Or suppose we take a random shot or two out of more exciting history. You still think I'm joking. Just grant for a minute that I'm not. What shall we look at? How about Charlotte Corday, in Marat's bathroom? Want to see her? Or Rizzio, on Queen Mary's back stairs!"

His tone was almost a sneer. At once Phyllis lost all inclination to laugh. She saw amusement fade from the faces of the others.

"I can show you," went on Brainard calmly, if coldly, "some of the inside truth about your public men: the guilty in crimes; the truth about your friends an neighbors; the secret of husband or wife, of intimate or enemy; what men do in their homes; what happens in private dining rooms. Or I can show you—Raphael at work in the Sistine chapel—or Peter the Hermit starting for Palestine! I can show you whatever has happened in word or deed, anywhere on this planet, at any time you like. I don't mean to claim that I have records of these events. But—I am convinced now that I can get them."

It was the matter of fact ending of his speech that came like the stinging tip of a whip lash across Phyllis' mind. She forgot doubt. She forgot her reasons for reticence.

"Radley!" she cried, "But you won't!"

"Why, Phillys," exclaimed Carol, "of course he will! Only, Rad, if you're going to expose people like this nobody will dare do anything any more!"

"Perhaps no one will want to," said Mr. Norman slowly. "We'll all be too busy prying into each other's lives."

Phyllis could not speak. But the thought flamed in her mind. "That's it! That's what people will do!"

"And we can see ourselves—at any time or place!" speculated Carol.

"As others see us! And anybody else can see you!" said John.

"I don't care—I can see them! They'll have nothing on me!"

"How far back can we go—in history, I mean?" asked Miss Brainard, her eyes gazing into great distances.

"There's no limit," Brainard told her.

"And you can separate the events that have happened in a—a single room?"

"Yes. And in double rooms, too."

"With and without baths!" put in Carol.

"But why stop with history?" asked Van Winkle quietly. "How about pre-historic times?"

"Oh," laughed Carol, "megatheosauruses and diphthorhynchuses!" She was not depressed.

"How about the dawn of creation itself?" asked Mr. Norman, with no hint of a laugh.

"Eventually, perhaps," returned Brainard, unruffled, "if men live to care. But—we are not likely to reproduce cosmic occurrences within the limits of present exhibition-halls."

"Nor within the present field of human vision!" said the man beside Phyllis.

"But history!" exclaimed John; then broke off in utter unbelief again. "Oh, Rad, what's the game? We've all of us risen to your bait. At least—unhook us!"

"It's in the secrets of the world that the real history is written," said Brainard, ignoring this last challenge. "Most men's real motives are revealed only in their closets."

"And we shall see behind the world's shut doors!" said John.

"Yes—committee rooms, star chambers, council rooms, camps throne rooms, prisons! Nurseries, asylums, cave dwellings! We shall read the real things now only recounted in unreadable hieroglyphs—and the things that are never recounted in readable print. I can give you variety at a matinee—David and Goliath, for instance, in the Vale of Elah; or Burr and Hamilton on the heights of Weehawken! Real—not pictures! Flesh and blood! Breathing—like you! Florence Nightingale serving the wounded of Balaklava, or Mollie Pitcher serving the guns of Monmouth! Alexander the ancient, winning his last battle in a conquered world, or Alexander the modern, winning his last game in baseball! Alive! Sweating! Oh, yes—we talked about secrets. Would you like to see the Venus de Milo as she originally held out her lost arms, or—the face of the Man in the Iron Mask?"

If one believed it, it was stunning. But unbelief was stubborn—a defensive armor!

"I don't want to know other people's secrets," exclaimed John. "I might hate them!"

"Or forgive them," said Mr. Norman.

Phyllis leaned her elbows carefully on the table and clasped her hands under her chin; they were trembling. Did no one else here realize the tremendous import of what was being said? But she would not yield again to her fright at the mere proportions of the thing. If these others could take it as a merely interesting matter for discussion so could she.

"I suppose we shall see the real Cleopatra, and the real Captain Kidd, and the real Lydia Pinkham, and the real Davy Jones," she suggested.

"Oh!" said Radley, looking up quickly. "Are you converted?"

"As much as any one here can be," said Phyllis. "I can't imagine anybody's taking it calmly who didn't take it with salt."

"Stick to the eternal verities," he said.

"But who's going to choose what part of my life you exhibit to my friends?" asked Aunt Relief suddenly.

"Nobody, dear," said Radley. "We'll just take bits of it at random. How's last Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock?"

"Eh?" exclaimed the lady. "Let me think!"

They shouted with laughter again.

The Shot

But the laugh was shattered like a dropped bowl of crystal. There was a sharp crash, and from the window behind Radley Brainard came a tinkle of falling particles of glass. Mrs. Norman screamed. The others sprang up. Phyllis saw on the wide pane, against the darkness outside, something that looked like a splash of glittering stuff flung upon it from without. Its center was a dark spot—a hole!

Brainard himself seemed the least perturbed. "Looks like a bullet hole," he said, and stepped quietly out of range of the window, then quickly to its side and lowered the shade. "I think you'd all better get out of line," he went on. "I guess that was meant for me—but another might find somebody else.

"There's your bullet—on the side of the chimney!" exclaimed John, pointing. Phyllis looked and saw a clean round little break in the plaster.

Servants came running in. Mr. Norman told Charles, his butler, to investigate and to summon an officer.

"No," said Brainard quickly. "Just make a commotion outside; our marksman will run. We'll arrest him later."

"Arrest him! Do you know who has tried to shoot you?" asked John.

"I can make an excellent guess," returned Radley coolly, making a point of lighting a cigaret to emphasize it. "I think it was one Jeffry Homer, who escaped from the police last night after learning that I had caused his arrest through information I got out of a—liquid event!"

They had all forgotten his warning to get out of range from the window. They seemed to have lost touch, as it were, with the usual reactions of the mind. But they heard Charles outside presently, and one of the chauffeurs, shouting and stamping in the porches.

"We're safe enough now," said Brainard, taking out his watch. "Nine-fourteen. We'll make a record and see tomorrow in the studio what happened outside here just now, and whether my guess is correct."

Mrs. Norman sank into her chair. "Radley, can you carry a joke so far?" she gasped.

"It's not going to be a joke for criminals in general, is it, Mrs. Norman?"

"Why," exclaimed Carol, "it will rid the world of crime!"

"And raise the standard of public morals," Brainard said sardonically. "I've been waiting for somebody to suggest that. You all think that I shall do only reprehensible things—at least Phyllis does."

Charles came in before Phyllis could reply. "Nobody out there now, sir," he reported to Mr. Norman.

"Tell Drake and Masters to keep a lookout," directed his employer. "Don't say anything outside the house about it. Mr. Brainard knows who is responsible—and wants it kept quiet tonight."

Charles bowed; but he stared in amazement around the group. Then he went out.

"This dinner has been pretty well spoiled in spite of me, Mrs. Norman," Brainard went on.

"Let's have coffee in the library, mother," suggested Phyllis.

"Good!" Brainard exclaimed. "I have something to show you there."

The abbreviated dinner was forgotten; they trooped toward the library, an eager group.

"But, Radley," said John, as they were about to enter the room, "if you transport these scenes around, I don't see—I've been wondering how you establish a viewpoint on them. If they are real scenes, not staged, why is there a viewpoint?"

"And," added Carol, "if you must get the whole of a scene in a given place when you start to get any of it—what about scenes that last for several days at a time? Suppose you have a three days' battle—or a man who lies ill for weeks, months, years? Or—oh, you have plenty of things still to explain!"

"Viewpoint is a matter of angle from which the vibrations are set up. Unity falls into a rhythm of its own, like everything else in the world—and so, long events are easily divisible into wieldy lengths. As a matter of fact, you will presently be complaining because the records are so short. Real events don't last long; the motion-picture people recognized that. The field included in any of my scenes is that surrounding the commanding action—and excludes the nonessential, just as a painter, following a law he feels but can't himself explain, excludes it from his picture. And that's just another phase of the unity you scoff at."

They had paused at the library door. Mr. Norman stepped in ahead of the others. Phyllis, who was last of the group, heard an exclamation from him within the room.

More of Van Winkle

"Why, somebody's been in here!" he said. "Look here, Brainard—we've been robbed!"

The others crowded in. A window was open at the far end of the room. Papers were rustling in the breeze that entered there. The screen was cut in a great jagged rent. A chair was jammed back against a bookcase, crowding the books out of line.

Brainard sprang past the others and to the side of the big table. Then he turned.

"Well," he said, "the thief, whoever he is, has the bag I brought over—and three bombs of records!"

"Stolen?" cried Carol.

"Looks like it." Brainard settled back and sat against the table's edge. "Hm!" he remarked aloud; "I wonder."

"Complete illusions!" asserted Carol confidently. "Of course they will try to steal your stuff!"

"But, Radley," mourned Mrs. Norman, "this is terrible! First some one tries to—" But she did not finish.

Brainard had turned and seized upon an object on the back of the table which Phyllis had not noticed before. It was covered with a linen contrivance apparently made to conceal or protect it.

He whipped this off and brought to view what appeared to be a large gold-fish bowl. It was covered with a glass plate, sealed in position.

He stared at it, then beckoned to the rest.

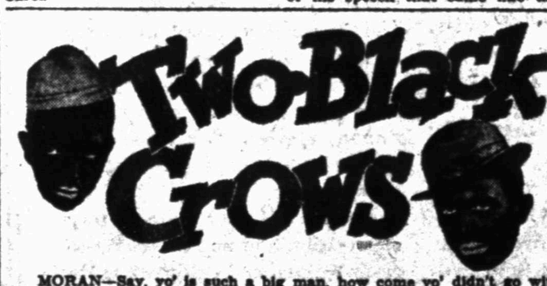

"Look!" he said.

They crowded about him. Within the bowl, as might have been revealed within a gazing crystal, lay a miniature scene—perfect in every detail, reproducing the real to the last infinitesimal degree! A railway track, its twin rails shining against cinders in light from an electric torch which moved here and there in an invisible hand. A man—dark, crumpled figure—lying on the ties, his face in white profile, the light gleaming on wet, welling blood flowing from a frightful wound above his forehead. Apparently dead or dying, under inspection by the holder of that light—who did not approach him.

Carol dropped to her knees and clasped the edge of the table, staring into the bowl.

MURDER AT SEA IS INDICATED

Bodies of Seven Sailors Found on Beach

CADIZ, Spain, Jan. 8. (INS)—Seven bodies of seamen from the Italian steamship Vallarsa were found on Puntales beach today under circumstances indicating wholesale murder for robbery.

Fishermen found a rowboat with two bodies wedged in the seats. Shortly afterward breakers washed five other bodies ashore.

There were five empty whisky bottles in the boat but an autopsy showed that the victims had drunk none of the whisky.

The police identified the men as members of the crew of the Italian steamer which was anchored nearby. The captain said one of the victims had $1,300 with him, but nothing was found in the clothing.

The owner of the rowboat, named Manolito, is missing. The police are searching for him.

McNeil's Island May Be Partially Abandoned

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (UP)—Partial abandonment of McNeil's island, Washington, as a federal penal institution now is being considered by the justice department, Justice A. H. Conner, federal superintendent of prisons, told the special house investigating committee today.

Conner said efforts of government engineers to locate fresh water wells on the island had failed and the island may gradually face a drinking water famine.

INDIAN PROBE STIRS STRIFE

Two Cabinet Heads Named In Investigation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. (UP)—Two cabinet officers—Secretary of Interior West and Attorney General Sargent—are under fire in the senate investigation of Indian affairs.

Senate confirmation of West may be further delayed by members of the Indian affairs committee while they probe into details of a contract signed by West on behalf of the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, with the middle Rio Grande conservancy district. The contract, the committee was told, did not protect the rights of the Indians.

Attorney General Sargent will be called before the committee Wednesday to tell why he stopped a grand jury investigation of the Jackson Barnett case after it was underway by orders of an assistant attorney general.

Division Cancelled

Barnett, aged millionaire Indian, divided his wealth made in oil between his young white wife and the American Baptist Home Mission society. The division was approved by the interior department and later cancelled by court order

Charles B. Selby, special assistant attorney general, told the committee he intended to seek federal indictments against former Secretary of Interior Fall, Commissioner of Indian Affairs Burke, Mrs. Barnett and her attorneys but was halted by a wire from the attorney general's office ordering him not to present the case to the Okmulgee, Okla., grand jury.

Selby said he was forced to drop the case even though he was convinced by extensive investigation that Fall himself, or at least the Indian commissioner, had knowingly entered in the transaction and deliberately participated in it No explanation was ever given him by the justice department, he added.

Letter Discovered

The special assistant attorney general told of discovering a letter written to Burke by Peter Dykeman, probate attorney in Oklahoma, warning Burke of the conspiracy to obtain Barnett's wealth. Prior to the discovery of this letter, Selby said he thought Fall and the Indian commissioner were merely duped by Mrs. Barnett's attorneys.

He produced photostatic copies of letters bearing on the Barnett case, one of which purported to show a contract had been drawn between Mrs. Barnett and her attorneys providing for an equal division of her portion of the estate. Charles B. Rogers, one of the attorneys, told the committee the agreement was never signed.

Despite the warning which Burke received, the Indian commissioner permitted Mrs. Barnett to get $560,000 of her husband's fortune and allowed $580,000 additional to go to the Missionary society, Selby said. Both gifts later were set aside by the courts.

Selby answered charges made by Burke Monday in which the Indian commissioner called the investigation "a political frame up" by Senator Pine, Oklahoma Republican, to ruin Burke and the Indian bureau.

Must Prove Charge

Selby said he had not discussed the criminal aspects of the case with Pine and that the senator had nothing to do with the contemplated proceedings against Fall and Burke.

Pine asked the committee to make Burke prove or retract his charges. A resolution ordering the Indian commissioner to do this was passed by the committee upon suggestion of Senator La Follette. Burke replied he would be ready Monday to substantiate his charges and obtained permission to subpoena three or four unnamed witnesses from Oklahoma.

The committee postponed further consideration of the West phase of the inquiry until a later date. Louis Marshall, New York attorney representing the Pueblo Indians, testified that West signed the conservancy contract over his protest and without knowing all facts necessary to protect the rights of the Indians.

Wild Party Wedding Leads to Divorce

So Judge Releases Repentant Hubby

The story of another wild party which led to a more or less impromptu wedding, and a "morning after" full of consternation and surprises, was confessed to Judge P. A. Martin Tuesday by a much chastened young man seeking a divorce.

The party started on Sunday, the young husband said, and Monday morning there was the bride. A justice of the peace had performed the ceremony, he learned after a series of discreet investigations among his friends.

The groom decided to make the best of it in spite of his astonishment, he told Judge Martin, but the bride had a disconcerting habit of adding daily to her list of distressing habits. Swearing, drinking, and smoking were the mildest of her household customs, the groom declared.

"And did you give him a lecture, Judge?" the reported wanted to know.

"I gave him a divorce," was the answer. "He'd had enough punishment."

Judges Refuse to Bar Claim Against Water District in $65,000 Suit

All three district judges in Wichita county Tuesday afternoon agreed in an opinion overruling the demurrer of the defendants in the suit of Mrs. J. M. McGrath against the city and the Wichita County Water Improvement District No. 1, asking $65,000 alleged damages to farm land.

The defendants had urged that the suit was barred by the statute of limitations, and in December former Judge E. G. Thornton, sitting for Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th court, upheld the exception. His ruling was set aside by Judge Martin last week, and Judge W. W Cook and Judge Allan D. Montgomery asked to sit with him on the 89th bench to hear the arguments.

After a conference Tuesday afternoon, Judge Martin announced that the three were in complete agreement on the merits of the question. They held that, according to the pleadings, the question was a matter for the jury instead of the court to decide, and therefore overruled the original exception. A number of other legal questions have been raised which must be passed on before the case is heard on its merits on Jan. 21.

The plaintiff claims the seepage from irrigation canals has caused the water logging of her farm just west of the city.

Investigation of Robberies Continues Here

Between 50 and 60 witnesses, summoned before the 30th district grand jury, gave evidence involving 22 defendants in felony charges Tuesday, the second day of the Jantary session.

As many more have been subpoenaed for appearance Wednesday, when a number of recent holdups and hijackings in Wichita Falls and all over the county will be probed, it was understood.

The investigators so far have had open sailing and have disposed of a large number of the 100 cases to be offered them, he said.

Electra Woman Sustains Painful Burns Monday

Special to The Record News

ELECTRA, Texas, Jan. 8.—Mrs. Georgia Johnson of this city was painfully burned Monday afternoon at her home on West Roosevelt avenue, when a large tub of boiling water tipped over on a stove, completely covering her. First aid was rendered by neighbors and a physician summoned who stated that the burns, although exceedingly painful, were not necessarily fatal. Mrs. Johnson is resting as well as could be expected.

Boy Thieves Defy Police With Rifle

Gangland methods were enacted in Wichita Falls Tuesday by two small boys, one 6 years old and the other 3, when the youngsters broke into a residence here and after escaping with a number of valuable articles retreated to their home and threatened, at the point of a 22 caliber rifle, to kill any one who came to arrest them.

The lads entered the home of S. M. DeBush, 709 Fifth street, and escaped with a $45 kodak in addition to several other valuable articles.

The case was investigated by W. F. Belcher, city officer, who declared that he would turn the matter over to county juvenile officials Wednesday. Neither of the boys was arrested.

F-H-V Stages Late Rally; Indians Need Work

Texas Electric and High school fives won the opening games last night in the start of the 1929 Commercial Basket Ball league. The Kilowats defeated the Featherston-Hawkins-Vague quintet, 32 to 21 and the Coyotes outscored the Junior college Indians, 33 to 18 on the school court.

The Kilowats established an early lead to give them victory over F-H-V. Leading 16-10 at the half, the Kilowats increased their margin in the third quarter. In the last period the insurance quintet staged a belated rally that for a time threatened to enable them to overhaul their opponents. But their bid was too late and fell short.

Woolridge Is Star

Except for the last quarter the Kilowats showed an effective five-man defense. Woolridge played an excellent all-around game. Rawls and Francis distinguished themselves shooting baskets and Clary's defensive work was good.

Miller was good on defense and offense and Beck played a fine game at guard for F-H-V. Taylor and Brashear flashed some choice basket shooting late in the game.

Coyotes Lead Early

The Coyotes took an early lead and were never headed to beat the Indians. Big blonde Malone and Beaty shot a flock of baskets and Anderson and Hodgkiss worked well as guards. Coach McCallum used 12 men.

It was the first game of the season for the Indians, and they of course showed they need more actual combat before attaining the desired teamwork. Stephens was the chief scorer. Blacklock showed much promise as a basket-shooter and looked like a fine prospect as a floor player. Habern was aggressive and effective at guard.

Hub Clothiers, fifth member of the league, open their season next Tuesday night. Last night's lineup.

Jack to Handle Tex's Interests

Rickard's Florida Plans To Be Carried Out

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 8.(UP)—Jack Dempsey will take up the loose threads of "Tex" Rickard's interests here, including promotion of the Stribling-Sharkey fight scheduled for Feb. 27, it was announced today by G. H. K. Carter, associated with Rickard in the Miami Beach Kennel club where the bout will be held.

Among the projects planned by Rickard which Dempsey will push to completion are a horse racing plant and a Jai Alai fronton, Carr said.

The race track was to be built on one of the man-made islands lying in Biscayne bay off Miami Beach.

When Tex and Texas Were Young

These remarkable pictures of George L. "Tex" Rickard, who died Sunday at Miami Beach, shows the noted promoter as a young man when he was a cowboy at Henrietta, Texas, and on the trail in the Klondike, where he started his career to fame and fortune.

Obtaining of these exclusive pictures by The Record News was made possible by the kindness of W. F. Suddath of Henrietta. Mr. Suddath, one of the best known pioneers of this section, was a life long friend of Rickard. He was with Tex last summer at the national Democratic convention at Houston, when he saw him last.

Mr. Suddath said the picture of Tex as a cowboy was made when the promoter was around 21 years of age, possibly a year or so older. Tex was a cowboy in this section and later city marshal at Henrietta, leaving that job to go to the Klondike in the historic gold rush of the 90's.

Mullen made no mention of the terms he will offer either fighter.

Colorful Career of Tex Rickard Unfolded in Story of His Life

Born In House Next to Jesse James' Home, On Day Posse Sought Bandit, His History Replete With Excitement

Accompanying is the first installment of the eventful and romantic life story of Tex Rickard, noted sports promoter and one-time gambler and miner, who died Sunday morning at Miami Beach, Fla. Other installments will follow daily.

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Here is the story of a career that must be etched into history as one of the most amazing and colorful this country has ever known.

It is the story of Tex Rickard, showman, promoter, gambler, cowpuncher, miner, saloonkeeper. It is the story of a country lad who came to the city and made good.

It is the biography of a man who must be ranked as the keenest student of crowd psychology the world ever knew.

It was a trail that began in a little cabin outside of Kansas City, Mo., in 1871 and which wound all over the West, down to the equator, up to Alaska, and from there gradually eastward to New York. It was frequently a rough trail and one fraught with many perils. It took a good man to survive it.

Jesse James' mother lived next door to the little Missouri cottage in which Rickard was born. Tex once told me that on the day he was born a sheriff's posse swooped down on the James cottage, looking for Jesse and his brother Frank. There was a good deal of haphazard shooting.

"There was a good deal of excitement around that spot on the day I came into the world," said Tex. "And I've never been very far away from excitement from that day to this."

Thrived on Excitement

Excitement was the blood of Tex Rickard's life. He thrived on it. He loved the milling throngs and the roar of the crowd was music to his ears. He said, not so long ago, that he had had enough and wanted to retire to a life of peace and quiet. But those who knew him well, if anybody really did, were certain that he would never be able to tear himself away from the throbbing, tumultuous life he had created for himself.

It is hard to conceive of anything more incongruous than Tex Rickard retired to a little farm by the wayside.

"He'd fret himself to death in a pastoral environment like that," said one of his friends recently.

Rickard went to his death known to thousands all over the world, but it is doubtful if anybody ever really knew him. Everybody knew that inscrutable poker face with the half-chewed cigar stuck in the right corner of the mouth. But few knew what was behind it. Many of his closest friends have admitted that to them he was a baffling mystery.

Unemotional, cold almost to the point of austerity when he wanted to be, Tex was not one to invite intimacies. By some he was regarded as heartless and inhuman. It has been charged that he would not hesitate to brush aside a friend if doing so meant that he could achieve his end. He had many enemies who nursed great bitterness in their hearts for him. Perhaps it was because of this fact that in his later years he went about with a bodyguard.

But Rickard's friends far outnumbered his enemies and his admirers were legion. Even his enemies had to admire him.

Tex had many friends but few intimates. Those who tried to probe behind that bronzed poker face soon found that Rickard, without seeming to do so, was always holding them at arm's length.

Those who thought they knew him best will probably admit today that they never really knew him at all. Someone once alluded to Rickard as the sphynx of sport, and that is what he was.

However, the charges that he was heartless and inhuman would seem to be effectually refuted by many acts of benevolence and charity that could be cited. But Rickard always managed to throw a veil of secrecy around these charitable acts, and would sometimes go so far as to deny them if questioned on the subject. This stony-faced promoter had a sentimental side, but he seemed to have a horror of exposing it to public view.

The hundreds of kids who live and play in the neighborhood of Madison Square Garden would probably be the first to deny that George Lewis Rickard was without sentiment. They knew their Tex, and they knew that it was generally profitable to watch for him on his way home.

Strolling out through the wide lobby of the garden, Rickard would frequently stop at the window of the main box office and say to Joe Boynton:

"Joe, gimme ten dollars' worth of quarters."

All this silver would be distributed to an army of ragged urchins before he traversed three blocks on his homeward journey.

On Christmas day he probably distributed $500 in one-dollar bills in this manner.

Did Tex Rickard get a kick out of his meandering charity?

If he did, you could read no sign of it in that set and inscrutable face. He gave away those quarters and one-dollar bills with the same emotionless expression that he wore when I once saw him turn over a playing card or, which he had bet $1,000. If he had had a million bet on the same card, I am sure that his face would have reflected nothing more.

Tex Rickard's hobby and the sport dearest to his heart was boxing. Yet, in the most tense and dramatic moments of some of his most important contests I have watched Rickard's face in vain for a sign of emotion. He seemed to absorb the high pressure excitement without a sign. He re-acted to defeat and victory with the same ironic expression. It was hard to think of him as either laughing or weeping.

It has been said that Rickard had no sense of humor and seldom laughed. That isn't true, for I have seen him laugh heartily on many occasions, but it was usually about something that didn't seem at all humorous to others.

I can see him now, chuckling to himself and saying:

"Well, suh, I never seed nuthin' like it!"

Mystified, you might ask him what the joke was all about and he'd probably reply:

"Oh, nuthin'. Just somethin' I heerd of the other day."

It has been said that, for all his mighty interest in the world of sport, Tex Rickard got little fun out of life. His melancholy expression probably was responsible for this. It was so hard for him to smile. Those who have known Tex for years tell me that this melancholic attitude was a life-long characteristic. They say that even when he was a young man in the full bloom of youth he could maintain an unsmiling countenance while others were laughing uproariously over some practical joke.

Liked Amateur Boxing

I once asked Rickard if he didn't get a kick out of a good fight.

"I do," he said, "out of the amateurs."

I think that in all the diversified sports in which he was interested, Rickard's pet diversion was the amateur boxing bouts which he staged periodically in Madison Square garden.

I have known him to leave a professional show flat just before the main event went on, and I have known him to sit through an amateur program for 8:15 until 2 o'clock in the morning.

"Well, John," Tex would say, "which corner do you want?"

"I'll take that one over there," Ringling would reply. "I have a hunch that it will have all the winners tonight.

"That's all right with me, John," Tex would say. "Now get your 10 cents up."

So there the two men would sit for hour after hour, betting 10 cents on each one of the long programs of three-round bouts.

And it was there that I have seen Tex Rickard give himself up to evidences of real mirth. He would chuckle in great glee over winning 10 cents from John Ringling, whereas the pocketing of a half million dollars' profit on a professional fight would leave him cold.

I have tried to paint a picture of Tex Rickard as New York came to know him during the last decade.

Tomorrow we shall go back to that little cabin on the outskirts of Kansas City, Mo., where a baby boy was born 58 years ago while a sheriff's posse was shooting up the neighborhood in search of Jesse James.

(The next installment will appear in tomorrow's Record News).

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

A NEW SIDE of Jack Dempsey, that is, a side known only to his close friends, was revealed to the world when Tex Rickard died. When the promoter took a turn for the worse a few hours before his death, it was Dempsey who demanded a conference of physicians to determine measures to combat the poison that was weakening Tex's system. Unshaven and sleepless for two days, Jack Dempsey maintained vigil in the hospital where Rickard lay.

When Rickard died, Dempsey grieved, as he would mourn for the passing of his pal. Big-hearted, tender Jack. For he IS big-hearted and tender, is this Dempsey. The love and devotion bestowed by Dempsey upon his wife, the beautiful Estelle Taylor, is well known to Jack's intimates. And that love and devotion is returned. For Dempsey, the man-killer in the ring, is the sort to command the unselfish love of the woman who is his wife.

There is no greater friend one can possess than Jack Dempsey, I know. I have seen his friendship toward others shown in various ways. I know what he has meant to me as a friend. I know what a wonderful friend and pal he is. And I know the tender heart of him. Let me relate a story. Not fiction. A true story. Another sports writer and two or three other friends know of this story. I don't know whether it ever has been printed before. Anyhow, it's true.

DEMPSEY and his party were in a depot waiting to take a train to another city. An old lady was standing by a gate, talking with the gateman. She was weeping. Finally, she stepped aside. The gateman paid no further attention to her. She walked, slowly and unsteadily, to a seat in the depot. Still weeping. We watched her.

It was too much for Dempsey. He said to one of the party, "Joe (I'll call him Joe for that wasn't his name) for Heaven's sake go see what is the matter with that old lady." Joe went over and questioned her. It seems, from her story, that her son had been killed in an accident in a town several hundred miles away. She did not have railroad fare. But her son knew a man who was a baggageman and if she could get by the gate she figured her son's friend would permit her to ride in the baggage car.

THAT WAS enough for Dempsey. Concern and sympathy came to his face. He walked over to the old lady. He took out his capacious wallet and extracted some bills. They weren't ones and fives, either. He handed them to the old lady. "Madam," Jack said. "I heard of your trouble. I am Jack Dempsey, the fighter. Here is money to help you in your trouble. If you care to, you can write me at Los Angeles." The woman looked at Jack, uncomprehendingly, at first. She seemed unable to realize that here was succor. Hesitatingly, she took the money. Tears streamed down her wrinkled face. Her lips quivered. She was giving thanks to Jack. And doubtless saying a prayer.

Dempsey turned abruptly away and walked back to his group. His eyes were moist. His friends looked at him, questioningly: "Come on, guys," Jack said. "Let's get a bite to eat and get on that train." Then he started talking volubly of other things.

That's the real Dempsey, the Dempsey that his intimate friends always have known; the Dempsey that the world is coming to know. Big-fisted, big-hearted Jack.

Damon Junior Chooses Harvard, Much to Annoyance of His Dad

Runyon Had Pictured Son Playing End for Princeton but The Lad Seems to Have Cambridge Illness

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

By DAMON RUNYON

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—For 10 years, as readers of this column well know, I have been devoting much effort to raising an end for Princeton. Not that I have anything in common with Princeton. Not that I have any great love for Princeton.

I never went there except to cover a chuchball game, and then I was never able to get enough to eat in the town. But glaring at Princeton chuckball teams year in and year out gave me the brilliant idea that Princeton could always use a good end.

So I began proselyting for Princeton almost from the day Junior first batted his eyes. When he was four weeks old I explained to him that he was going to grow up big and strong, and very crafty, to become a Princeton end, and not at that time, nor subsequently, did he ever intimate that he disapproved of the plan.

I used to sit up there in the press hive at Palmer stadium high above the jersey meadows on cold autumn afternoons and visualize junior playing a great deal of end for Princeton. More end, in fact, than any man has ever before played for Princeton, although that may not sound like an extra lot of end.

But how sharper than a serpent's bicuspid is an ungrateful child! Yes.

Junior Rebels

I was discussing various matters with Junior the other evening, such as the shake-up in the police department, and the rise and decline of American cooking, when I chanced to make some reference to the halcyon time when he would be old enough to go to Princeton and play that end.

"But I don't want to go to Princeton," said Junior, who will be 11, come next grass. "I want to go to Harvard."

"Ha-ha!" I ha-hahed. "You're getting to be quite a humorist, Junior. Maybe they'll let you write jokes for the Princeton what's-this when you're not playing all that end. Harvard! That's very funny, indeed. I'll have to send that to Mr. Bugs Baer."

"But I don't want to go to Princeton to write jokes, or play end," Junior insisted. "I want to go to Harvard."

I could see by the steely glint in his orbes that he was in earnest, but I maintained my self possession, feeling that this was a case for calm, rational discussion.

"Looky here, now, young fellow," I said, "you'll go to Princeton and play that end, or I'll—"

"But I don't want to go to Princeton," he insisted, "I want to go to Harvard."

"That's ridiculous," I said. "There ain't no sense to such an idea. Why, if you go to Harvard they would only fill your head full of different things, while if you go to Princeton you will get sound learning from Bill Roper on end play."

"I want to go to Harvard," repeated Junior.

"Why, son," I said, in a wheedling tone, "if you go to Harvard, how am I going to look my old friends Louie Lang and Large Will Edwards in the face again? Those valiant old guards of Princeton who have been almost breathlessly awaiting the day you begin playing that end, because they know how bad Princeton needs an end at times?"

"Don't look at them," suggested Junior. "I want to go to Harvard."

He Has Harvard Virus

I argued, and I threatened, and I cajoled, all to no purpose. Even when I pointed out to Junior that if he goes to Harvard he will be a Harvard man, I made no impression on him. Somewhere, somehow, he has acquired that preposterous idea, and it seems that nothing can shake him.

It is easy for me to trace the virus of his thought, at that. I mean to say, I can go back to the point of his contamination. He spent last summer on the north shore of Massachusetts, at a place called Magnolia. To reach there, it was necessary for him to pass through Boston, and in that passing he must have inhaled enough of the Harvardian atmosphere which is prevalent in Boston to give him the disease.

I have consulted one eminent specialist, a former Yalensian, and he advised a good old ellum club as a possible cure. He claims to have had several cases of youngsters inoculated with Harvardian germs who yielded to club treatment. Subsequently, he relates, they enrolled at Stanford to be good and far from Harvard.

"I have no doubt," said the specialist, "that Junior is a victim of Harvard proselyting. All the best football players Harvard ever had are fellows who should have been Yale men, and all their second best players should have been Princeton men. This may be a more serious case than you suspect. Possibly some Harvardian made his acquaintance up there on the north shore, and even taught him to sing 'Fair Harvard.' I wouldn't listen around to catch Junior singing it, however. It is apt to make you ill. I know it always made me ill."

He Won't Play End

Now of course if Junior goes to Harvard he will not play end, and that is the one thing I will most regret. He will not play end at Harvard, because no one has played end at Harvard for years and years. At least not a great deal of end. Not all that end that I planned to see Junior play at Princeton. There is a law against a Harvard man playing any too much end.

But I wish to state that I have nothing personal against Harvardians. I know quite a number of them. Heywood Broun, Eddie Mahan, Tack Hardwick, Sam Felton. They are as good as anyone else as long as they behave themselves. I have observed Mr. Broun in his vintage Harvardian racoon coat, and felt no undue animosity toward Mr. Broun, even when I once saw him stand up in the press stand at a Harvard-Yale game, remove his hat, and join the Harvard cheering section in singing "Fair Harvard." Mr. Broun sings a very loud mezzo-basso.

However, I do not wish Junior to be seen in a raccoon coat, and that is one reason why I hope and trust that he rescinds, or outgrows, his decision, before I am compelled to adopt stern measures. If necessary, I will take Junior by the hand and lead him around and show him Mr. Broun.

CYCLONE HALL TO FACE TEST

Childress and Burk Boys Box Here Tonight

Alex Ross, the sports entrepreneur, offers what he says is his "best show for months," tonight at his gymnasium at 821 Indiana avenue. The professor's show as lined up for tonight, "on paper" as the saying goes, indeed looks like one to have lots of interest for boxing and wrestling enthusiasts here.

As the first part of a double windup, Cyclone Hall, the soporific puncher of Childress, will meet Kid Snyder of Burkburnett. They are carded to step 10 rounds. Ross says Snyder, who returned home recently, has had several months successful campaigning in the Pacific coast region, and that he is the sort of hombre to give Hall a strenuous go.

Hall, well remembered here for his defeats of Country Boy Owens, is one of the best middleweights in these parts.

In the final event of the evening's milling, John Ellis of Stamford, recent conqueror of Lee Meyers, meets Chief McGuire of the navy in a finish grapple. Two falls out of three, New York commission rules. McGuire is said to have grappled a draw with Ad Santell, who generally is rated as best of the light heavies.

Preceding those two attractions are other events that should be interesting. Bulldog Joe Turner and Oral Smith will meet in a one-fall, finish mat match and Kid Lewis of Memphis and Bill Roberts of Fort Worth will box six rounds, more or less. These last-named leather punchers are lightweights.

Atlanta Wildly Greets Georgia Tech Gridsters

Exercises and Electrical Treatments for Prolapsus

Do not waste your time taking exercises while standing, as this kind of exercise has no appreciable effect on the abdominal muscles. The best exercises are those taken while lying on your back on the floor. Practice these exercises slowly at first and gradually increase the time until you are able to do them vigorously for at least 15 minutes a day.

The flatter your abdomen becomes, the greater your degree of health and strength. You will lose that feeling of heaviness and there will be an added buoyancy to your walk.

You will have the best results if your exercises for strengthening the abdominal muscles are taken while lying on your back on a slanting board, with your feet placed at the upper end of the board, which is elevated two or three feet above the floor. When you are in this position the organs sag away from the lower abdomen and, while exercising, it is often possible to break loose the adhesions which have been binding the organs down out of their normal position. It may take months of perseverence, but the good to be accomplished is well worth the effort necessary.

When the internal muscles in the walls of the intestines have become chronically weakened, it is sometimes necessary to employ a sinusoidal electrical machine for strengthening them, since these muscles are not under the control of the will and cannot be intentionally exercised and developed as can the external abdominal muscles. In my own practice, I find that the machine is most satisfactory, for this treatment gives an alternating contracting and relaxing movement to the internal muscles, in other words, puts them through a kind of gymnastic treatment. When the current is on the muscles contract, and when the current is lessened the muscles relax. Some of the slow sinusoidal machines must be operated by hand, but the more satisfactory are those which work automatically. Many doctors are using this type of machine and they will all agree with me that it is invaluable for correcting kinks in the intestines, massaging the prostate, lifting sagging organs and increasing tone throughout the entire intestinal tract.

The best results from the electrical treatments are obtained if the adhesions are first loosened and the prolapsus raised with the hand manipulations of which I spoke in my last article. Your doctor can determine the position of the prolapsus or adhesions with the X-ray and govern his treatment accordingly.

I have prepared a special series of articles with illustrated charts showing proper exercises to take for the development of the abdominal muscles. I will be very glad to mail them without charge to any one who will write to me in care of this newspaper and enclose a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Growing Age

Question—W. L. R. writes: "I am a boy of 16. Am five feet three inches tall and weigh 125. I think I am a little short, and fear that my growing age has stopped. Has it, and is there any real good way for increasing height?"

Answer—You should continue to grow for about 20 years longer, especially if you eat the right kind of food and take vigorous physical culture exercises. Spine stretching exercises will make you grow taller, and you should also take some kind of spinal treatments regularly. These treatments stimulate the circulation between the vertebrae and increase the size of the bones of the spinal column.

Acid in Prunes

Question—Mrs. H. D. asks: "Do prunes contain acid?"

Answer—Dried prunes do contain a small amount of acid, but not as much as the fresh prune plum.

Warts on Scalp

Question—C. J. C. writes: "Will you publish a way to cure warts on the scalp with acid, and what kind to use?"

Answer—Treat each wart with a drop of acetic acid, or ask your druggist for granulas or acetic acid which are the acetic acid crystals or trichloracetic acid. Place one of these small crystals on the wart and let it dissolve. This is a harmless method for removing warts, if you do not know of a good beauty specialist who can take off the warts with an electric needle.

Tuberculosis Infection

Question—Miss W. asks: "Please tell me if there is any danger in marrying a man who lost his wife of tuberculosis six months ago."

Answer—I am sure there is no need for you to worry about tuberculosis infection if your prospective husband has not been in contact with tuberculosis for six months, and does not have the disease himself.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

By LILLIAN GISH

Lillian Gish, one of the most famous of all stage and screen stars, likes the story about a flapper whose favorite indoor and outdoor sport was flirting

LILLIAN GISH

"Finally the mother decided that a lecture might do some good," Miss Gish went on, "and, accordingly, she called the daughter into her bedroom.

"'Dora,' admonished the parent, 'you must stop this abominable flirting. Remember, you'll be punished in the end!'

"'But mother,' protested the girl; 'I have heard that you flirted yourself when you were a girl—and you've never been punished.'

"Her mother frowned.

"'Child,' she said, with great solemnity, 'some day I want you to make a close study of your father!'"

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (AP)—An opening advance in the cotton market today was checked by realizing but comparatively small offerings were absorbed on moderate setbacks and the market firmed up again. The highest prices of the day were reached in the late trading on covering and trade buying accompanied by reports of rather a steadier spot basis in the Southwest. March sold up from 19.74 to 19.86 and closed at 19.85. The general market closed steady at net advances of 12 to 16 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 5 to 8 points in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables but there was not a great deal of buying and prices eased right after the call under some Southern selling and a renewal of commission house liquidation. January eased off to 19.67 and July to 19.38, or back within 2 to 3 points of yesterday's closing quotations, but this dip seemed sufficient to bring in some trade buying believed to be partly for European account. There was also covering on rebuying by recent sellers, which was probably influenced by a belief that recent liquidation had been sufficient to improve the technical position of the market.

Talk of a somewhat steadier spot basis was accompanied by complaints of a poor demand, but appeared to make some impression of sentiment and probably contributed to the afternoon advance. January sold up to 19.80 and July to 19.50, making net advances of about 13 to 16 points on the active positions. The close was within 2 or 3 points of the best.

Business was quiet during the greater part of the day, but became a little more active on the afternoon advance when there seemed to be a little more covering owing to the continued absence of selling pressure in any substantial volume. According to some local brokers the rally was promoted by an idea that the market had partly discounted a falling off in domestic consumption figures for December as compared with November and might also have discounted a belief that sales of cotton cloths last month fell below the month's production.

Private cables said that Continental liquidation had been absorbed by trade calling and covering in Liverpool and that the demand for cotton cloths from India and China was broadening. Exports for the day were 22,648 making 5,060,205 so far this season. Port receipts 43,505. U. S. port stocks 2,303,654.

Last Trading Hour Sees Stocks Rise From Depths of Early Sales

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (US)—Another wave of selling in the stock market today forced prices down considerably, but a quick comeback was experienced in the last hour which closed the general list in highly irregular fashion. The money fears which have become widespread in speculative circles induced many large operators to lighten their holdings, but a few specialties were taken in hand and moved against the general trend.

Most encouraging news the street has heard in a long time came from Washington a few minutes before the close. It was to the effect that leading governmental authorities could not understand the persistent report that a general raise in federal reserve rediscount rates was imminent.

Money Rates Same

Call money, which had been expected to show firmer tendency, remained at 7 per cent. Sufficient supply to maintain the rate at this level was furnished by a leading banking interest.

General Electric provided leadership for the rally, advancing 14 points from its low for the day in almost as many minutes. It approached close to its told top.

Westinghouse was also a feature of strength. It is understood that as soon as the question of control is decided, Westinghouse will be favored with most of the Pennsylvania railroad's electrification business, just as General Electric presumably will obtain most of the New York Central orders in this connection.

Rubber stocks were perhaps the strongest group. Goodyear, Goodrich and United States Rubber all enjoyed sizeable gains. This industry is in position to show tremendous expansion in earnings for the present year. Most of the serious worries of the trade are ended. United States Rubber will probably come more directly under the management of the Du Ponts when the financing program is completed. Goodyear and Goodrich may each earn more than $15 a share for 1929.

Oil Profit Forecast

Individual who knows perhaps more than anyone else the position of Barnsdall corporation forecasts for 1929 net profits of $8 a share. Corporation is in marvellous financial shape, he says, with $10,000,000 presently out on call. By February this corporation will have only common stock outstanding, all prior obligations will be retired. Not one dollar is owed to the banks. Barnsdall has a net production of 14,700 barrels daily, which will be increased 1,000 barrels by Friday. Barnsdall is absolutely protected as to production by its enormous potential supply from its California property.

American Can, under the impetus of the persistent buying by powerful interests, attained a new record high. Tremendous blocks of this issue have been taken out of the market by financiers who are content to wait for materially higher values for the stock. Pittsburgh Coal responded to statement here that steel corporation interests are among the leading buyers of this stock. Island Creek also participated with a smaller gain. Wesson Oil jumped over 9 points on revived rumors of a possible merger with Gold Dust.

Studebaker once again proved an outstanding exception to the automobile group but it too showed reactionary tendency after advancing to a new high for the movement. The General Motors list continued under pressure. Pierce-Arrow issues of both classes were favored by heavy demand, however, principally inspired by expectation that the Studebaker management may restore its earning power. Columbia Graphaphone attained a new record price on buying based on reports the company's earnings may show large increase this year. Standard Milling was another issue which showed great strength, the common touching its high price. Commercial Investment Trust spurted to a record high on merger rumors.

Radio continued its slump, dropping an additional 10 points net for the day. Victor, however, maintained its price. Paramount-Famous-Lasky lost a small fraction, but important buying is reported in the stock.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 8. (AP)—(U.S.D.A.)—An active trade featured the fat lamb market at all points and prices were unevenly strong to as much as 50c over yesterday's levels; choice fed westerns scored $17.25 at Chicago and $16.65 at Omaha; aged stock ruled 25@50c higher with best fat ewes selling at $9@10.25; receipts were moderate with 54,250 received against 14,044 a week ago and 57,858 the same day a year ago.

Liberal supplies of hogs at most of the larger markets influenced a prevailing weaker undertone and substantial reductions in value were enforced; prices were very uneven, early trade to shippers being steady to 50c off while late sales to big packers were 15@25c lower; the day's top rested at $9.35 in St. Louis; total arrivals at the 11 markets were 127,800 as compared with 59,934 last Tuesday and 128,224 a year ago.

A limited demand for lightweight fed yearlings and heifers held prices at steady to strong levels but other classes of fed steers and yearlings met a very slow trade at weak to 25c lower levels; heavy heifers and butcher cows sold at steady to 50c lower rates; desirable yearlings reached $16.00 at Chicago and best weighty beeves went at $15.75. Demand for stockers and feeders was broad and prices firm; several loads of light stockers brought $12.25 at Kansas City and choice year calves scored $13.75; total arrivals were 43,600 against 18,700 a week ago and 44,611 a year ago.

FORT WORTH MARKET

FORT WORTH, Jan. 8. (AP)—The inactivity of buyers on the Fort Worth cattle market suggested a very narrow buying demand except for calves and bulls. These two classes sold about steady during the early session, while very little trading occurred in the other classes and values tending lower.

The slaughter steer supply was generous—around 20 loads listed for the day and ranged from good heavy cattle to light weight common cattle. Early sales consisted of one load that sold at $11.50 and a part load at $10.50.

A light supply of bulls offered and sold fully steady. One car good heavy bulls sold at $8.25; packers around that price, common light ones around $6.25.

The supply of slaughter yearlings and heifers liberal. One car cows sold at $7.25 and another at $7.75, package lot of good cows sold at $8.25. Canners and cutters $4.00 to $5.25.

The supply of calves very light and the quality rather common. Packages of the better one sold at $11.50; calves $5.50 to $8.00. Order buyer took one load of heavy calves at $11.25.

Very few stocker cattle included in the receipts.

Hogs weak to 5 cents lower; rail top $9.05; truck top $8.60 and to a packer buyers $8.50. Bulk rail hogs sold at $8.70 to $9.05; truck sales of butchers mostly at $8.20 and $8.50; packing cows $7.25 to $8.00.

Sheep steady with a light offering. A deck of fat wooled lambs sold at $14.50.

CHICAGO REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 8. (AP)—Better export demand, together with diminishing receipts both in the United States and Canada, helped bring about a material advance of wheat values today. Reports that heavy rains had broken the drought in Argentina acted as a check on upturns in the corn market.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, ⅜@1c to 1⅛c net higher, with corn unchanged to ¼c up, oats showing ⅛@¼c to ⅛@⅜c advance, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 2c.

Evidence at hand that export business in wheat from North America is of greater volume than current estimates would indicate tended from the outset today to lift wheat prices here.

European takings of North American wheat today were reported as about 700,000 bushels in addition to 1,000,000 bushels the day previous. Indications were also that domestic milling demand was of fair volume.

Corn prices had a firm undertone, despite news that rains were benefitting growth in Argentina. The cash corn trading basis here was in some cases 1 cent higher, country offerings were light, and only 191 cars of corn arrived in Chicago today against 387 cars a year back.

Provisions acted easier responsive to downturns in the value of hogs.

Oil Conservation Laws Discussed

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 8.—After a three hour discussion of the proposed conservation law the American Bar association has drafted, after being invited to consider such a matter by the federal conservation commission. The Kansas-Oklahoma executive committee of Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association today decided to call two mass meetings of bona fide oil producers to pass on the merits of the proposed legislation, which would empower a majority of operators in any pool to restrict both drilling and production.

Representatives of Gypsy Oil company opposed the proposed bills on the grounds that such a measure constituted a sign of weakness on part of oil industry, not being able to manage its own business.

James A. Veasey of Carter Oil company, and one of the committee of nine, which framed the proposed laws, spoke for the bills. J. C. Denton, president, of the division to call a mass meeting in Oklahoma in two weeks, and a mass meeting Kansas later.

DEATH CLAIMS TOBACCO KING

Benjamin N. Duke Dies At New York Mansion

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (AP)—Benjamin N. Duke, who rose from a boy peddler of tobacco to help lace his family among the pioneers of big business, died today in his Upper Fifth avenue mansion after a long illness. He was in his 74th year.

Behind him he left a fortune estimated at upward of $60,000,000, founded on the profits of a southern country tobacco shop and expended by years of effort in railroads, banking, cotton, real estate and other high scale enterprises.

Out of this fortune came huge philantropies which he never permitted to be publicly listed, but of which $1,000,000 was said to have been given to Trinity college, now Duke university at Durham, N. C., and Guilford college, from which he was graduated.

Burial will take place at Durham, where he maintained an estate. A special train leaving Pennsylvania station at 4 p. m. tomorrow will carry the body, accompanied by members of the family and friends, to Durham where it will lie in state at Duke university from the time of its arrival about 8:30 or 9 a. m. Thursday to 11:30 a. m. when the funeral will take place at Memorial chapel. Meanwhile arrangements were that the body would remain at a funeral parlor here. There will be no service in New York.

Death came to Mr. Duke at 5:45 o'clock this morning when he failed to rally after a bronchial attack last night. With him when he died were his wife, Mrs. Sarah Pearson Duke; his daughter, Mrs. V. J. Drexel-Biddle Jr., and Mr. Biddle, and his clergyman, Dr. Ralph W. Sockman.

VOODOO STORY WILL BE TOLD

Lawyer Says He'll Prove Youth's Insanity

YORK, Pa., Jan. 8. (UP)—The life story of a person born in an atmosphere of superstition, reared upon witchcraft, "powwow" and voodoo, will be unfolded in the defense of John Blymyer, accused of York's witchcraft murder, Herbert Cohen, Blymyer's attorney, promised today.

When a child raised amid such environment also suffers from a chronic mental trouble, his delusions of witchery and day dreams of black magic may easily lead to murder, Cohen argued.

So he promised a willing courtroom that he would show that to John Blymyer hobgoblins and "boogey men" were not just childhood fantasies useful to frighten the neighbors' bad boy out of the family apple tree but that even at the age of 32 Blymyer still finds them objects of an unshakeable belief.

He added that he would prove Blymyer had the mentality at 32 of a child of 8 years; and that he was, in fact, insane and had been for many years.

Acquittal Forecast

When all this evidence is in, Cohen said, the jury will be convinced that the tall, thin defendant, who later was described by a witness as having once lost "so much weight he could not buy a cap small enough to fit his head," suffered from chronic insanity which took the form of a delusion of witchcraft and would acquit him on the grounds of mental incompetency.

As Cohen related these dark things about the defendant in his opening statement to the jury, Blymyer, who is accused of murdering Nelson Rehmeyer, sat taking in every word, fumbling with a cap which, oddly enough, seemed about the right size after all—which he held on his knee. He gave every evidence of having only the interest of a student of human conduct in the whole affair.

Clayton Hess, the lad who brought Monday's session to a close with the trial's first outbreak of witchery when he testified Blymyer had confided to him, after Nelson Rehmeyer had been murdered, that in killing Rehmeyer he "got the witch," opened the day's testimony. Under cross-examination he told, with all the candor of deep belief how the object of the attack on Rehmeyer had been to get a "witch knot of hair" in order to break a spell Rehmeyer had cast over the Hess family.

Collar Presented

After that, the remainder of the state's case was less exciting. The presentation of the collar of Rehmeyer's sweater, burned from the garment to which it belonged; of clubs and of what remained of a couple of chairs, all bloodstained and some with hair still clinging to them, threatened to sicken the scene for a time.

Then policemen told how Blymyer had been arrested and of his confession. Defence Attorney Cohen fought hard to gain an admission from them that Blymyer had explained the murder by saying Rehmeyer, known as a man of magic, had cast a spell upon him, but they all denied they had heard any such statement.

On the other hand, they told how Blymyer and Wilbert Hess and John Curry, accused with him, had admitted taking an unnamed sum of money—reported to have amounted to $3—and divided it among themselves. That was the state's evidence to support its theory that robbery was the motive of the murder.

Then Blymyer's confession was introduced. It was hardly 100 wards long and contained rather perfunctory admissions that he had struck Rehmeyer over the head with a chair; that he had knocked Rehmeyer down; had helped tie him, and had poured water over the body and the floor of Rehmeyer's house, to erase finger prints. It contained no explanation whatever as to why the murder was done.

With thta the state rested its case.

Capitalization of the R-F Finance corporation will be increased from $200,000 to $500,000 as a result of the unanimous vote of stockholders in the concern at a special meeting Tuesday afternoon called to consider the recommendation of the directors in favor of the increase in capital stock.

Steady Growth

The R-F Finance corporation was organized in June, 1924, according to officers of the concern, with a capital of $100,000. Incorporators were George B. Ray, B. H. Featherston, and Solon R. Featherston.

In March, 1926, the capital was increased to $200,000, the added $100,000 of stock all being sold to local business men, it was stated. There are now 32 stockholders, all but three living in this city. Two live in Iowa Park and one in Abilene.

The chief business of the R-F Finance corporation is the financing of automobile paper for dealers in standard makes of cars operating in the Wichita Falls trade territory. Some radio paper also has been handled, it was said. Officers of the concern stated that it has at all times paid very substantial dividends, the last quarterly dividend, paid in December, figuring 4 per cent on common and 2 per cent on preferred stock.

Officers Re-elected

Assets of the corporation now approximate $750,000, it was said. Success of the business from its inception four years ago was attributed largely to an abnormally low loss ratio, which it was said has been less than one-half of one per cent on all paper purchased.

Officers are C. H. Featherston, president; Solon R. Featherston, vice president; W. L. Hawkins, vice president; W. D. Featherston, secretary; James L. Pollard, assistant treasurer; Miss Maymie Kuhfuss, assistant secretary. Directors are C. H. Featherston, W. L. Hawkins, Charles I. Francis, N. M. Clifford, W. L. Robertson, S. R. Featherston, and W. F. George.

Paducah Pair In Jail Here

transporting liquor. The killing was not discovered for several hours and the men had escaped. But every effort was made to apprehend the men and a reward of $1,000 was offered, $500 having been raised by popular subscription and $500 having been posted by Cary's widow.

The men under arrest, according to federal operatives who finally took up the investigation are said to be members of a bootleg ring. It is the officers theory that they knew of Cary's death.

Raymond Hunt, the first man taken into custody several weeks ago, faces a liquor charge and the three other men in custody here were held on liquor violations under heavy bonds. The connection with the Cary case was not revealed until the arrest of Lawrence and Roy Wilson, who had drifted into the Sevee community near Paducah, Texas, as cotton pickers. According to officers the location of the Wilson brothers took several weeks and also took officers into Oklahoma and Texas, besides other states. The Wilsons are said to have left here in March soon after the slaying of Cary and previous efforts to locate them have failed.

The others under arrest are Walter and Garland Weldon, Adabid and Mitchell Camp and Hunt. The Wilson boys have expressed themselves as ready to return to Arkansas.

Federal officers were secretive about the case tonight but admitted that the six men were held in connection with the death of Cary and that the case would be presented to the Garland county grand jury since the Wilson brothers were arrested.

Walton League Asks Reduction In Bag Limit for Ducks

A resolution to ask the Wichita area legislators to present a measure to the department of agriculture asking the reduction of the duck bag limit from 25 to 15 ducks a day was passed unanimously at the regular meeting of the Wichita Falls chapter of the Izaak Walton league Tuesday night.

The federal law as it was explained by Ben G. Oneal, president of the chapter, now has a limit of 25 ducks a day and 50 a week. Twenty-seven states already have reduced their limit and the local league will do all in its power to get the limit reduced in Texas and nationally, Mr. Oneal asserted.
